Two split jackpot

AUSTIN (AP) — For Yee Mui Perkins, the birthdays of herself, her husband and their 14-month-old daughter paid off big. On Thursday, she claimed half of the $18.6 million Lotto Texas jackpot after correctly picking the six winning numbers — 1, 8, 10, 11, 13 and 23. Mrs. Perkins, 38, said she has been playing regularly for more than a year. As she always does, she bought $3 worth of tickets. Two were randomly selected sets of numbers and the third was the birthday group. The second winning ticket was sold in Brownsville. Lottery officials said that as of Thursday afternoon, no one had claimed that half of the prize.

FedEx plane attack

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — A man armed with a hammer and spear gun attacked the flight crew of a Federal Express cargo plane on Thursday before the crew wrestled him to the floor and the captain safely landed the plane. Three people aboard the DC-10 were critically hurt and a fourth suffered less serious injuries, said Rick Roberts of the Regional Medical Center at Memphis. The suspected attacker was among the most seriously hurt, said FBI agent Dick Marquise. Airport Authority President Larry Cox said the crew members suffered head and body injuries./7A

U.S. puts Baltics plan on fast track

■ Administration calls for quick dispatch of U.N. peacekeepers to Serb-encircled Gorazde.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is calling for the quick dispatch of hundreds of U.N. peacekeepers to Serb-encircled Gorazde in eastern Bosnia and vowing to have NATO air power defend them if they are attacked.

Deploying the peacekeepers "could be a basis for possible air strikes," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Thursday night.

"Once we have United Nations troops there in Gorazde then we do have a military option, because NATO has a right to go to their protection if they ask for help," he said on MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour on PBS.

"We have an obligation and a right to go in and help those troops," Christopher said.

In a policy speech, Anthony Lake, the national security adviser, said Thursday "a contingent of Midland police Det. Kay Therwhanger discusses items that were recovered in connection with a rash of burglaries that occurred in Midland last month and May through August of last year.

Police display '1/10th' of suspects' 'loot'

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Midland police displayed what they called "about 1/10" of the items recovered from the apartment of a San Antonio couple suspected of being involved in burglaries in Midland and other cities around the state.

Four tables covered with hundreds of items — including silver sets, compact discs, cellular telephones and autographed baseballs — that police say were stolen by Andrew Bonnette and his wife Sybil were set up at the department during a news conference on Thursday.

"This is about 1/10 of the stuff that was in the Bonnettes' residence in San Antonio," said Det. Kay Therwhanger, who worked with Det. Manny Beltran on the case. "We can't even begin to guess how much all this is worth. The San Antonio Police Department has five pages of items taken from the apartment. They just cleaned out the apartment."

Ms. Therwhanger and Beltran went to San Antonio Tuesday and brought back items taken during burglaries that occurred in Midland and Odessa, she said.

"What you see on the table are items recovered from Bonnette's car after he was caught and from San Antonio," she said.

Police will try to match the items with burglary reports and will conduct a public viewing, when residents who were burglarized can identify items that are theirs, Ms. Therwhanger said.

"We have had a lot of calls from people," she said. "We ask that they be patient and wait until we put these things up for viewing. If they have serial numbers, identification

OPEC observer discusses cartel strategy, moves

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Oil prices should average close to $16.75 for 1994 because Saudi Arabia will not make the production cuts necessary to bring prices up, Kent Hance, a former member of the Texas Railroad Commission, told a gathering of oil-industry executives on Thursday.

Kent Hance predicts 1994 oil prices close to $16.75.

While $12 oil prices are low, he said they might have gone as low as $9 if OPEC had not taken any action at the emergency meeting. He said inaction at an emergency meeting would have sent prices into a free fall.

"If you're going to do nothing, it's best to wait and do it a regularly scheduled meeting."

Speaking at a breakfast sponsored by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Hance, who attended OPEC's recent meetings, said Saudi Arabia has three priorities — national security, market share and price.

"Right now they are more concerned about national security and market share than price."

Hance said the Saudis already had announced 20 percent cuts in budgets in order to ride out a season of lower oil prices.

The former candidate for governor hinted that the Clinton administration may have a hand in the low oil prices.

Hance said there was a theory that

Silver-spoon issue dominates Democrats' U.S. Senate runoff

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Jim Mattox grew up tough and gained a reputation as a political brawler for the underdog in over two decades of public office.

Businessman Richard Fisher has said that one of his earliest memories is of being wrapped in a fur coat and riding in the back of a Rolls Royce. The Dallas millionaire has never held an elected office.

The two are fighting for the U.S. Senate Democratic Party nomination in Tuesday's runoff.

The winner faces Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, whose political strength has increased since her acquittal on ethics charges in February.

Grand jury indicts 2 in Zachery, Mireles murder cases

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A Midland grand jury handed down two murder indictments this week — one against Duann Dewayne Stewart for the beating death of James Zachery and one against Rogelio Mireles for the shooting death of his estranged wife.

Both men are awaiting trial.

Stewart, 17, was charged with the Jan. 25 beating death of Zachery, a Midland Community Theatre performer and former professional football player.

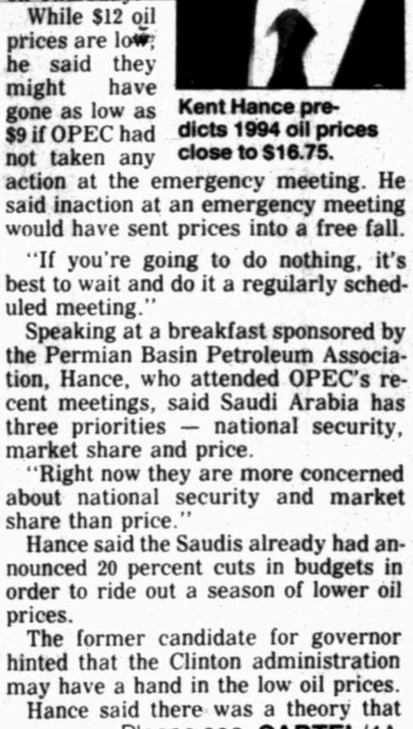

Stewart was arrested Jan. 26 for the crime. Police said Zachery was apparently chased down and attacked at about 1 a.m. on Jan. 25 in the 1300 block of East Industrial Road.

Autopsy results indicate that Zachery died of blunt trauma to the head. The autopsy also uncovered traces of cocaine in his blood and urine at the time of his death.

Stewart remains in the Midland County Detention Center in lieu of a $50,000 bond. Another man arrested in the case, Terry Earl Stewart, 25 — no relation to the indicted Stewart — has not been indicted.

According to a spokesman for the Midland County District Attorney's office, the grand jury "passed" on Terry Stewart, which means it will reconsider at another meeting whether to indict or no bill him. Terry Stewart also remains

Prime minister finds talk after hours isn't private

TOKYO (AP) — In Japanese politics, loose talk at late-night drinking sessions used to be sacrosanct, never repeated outside the walls of the posh establishments where the words were uttered.

No more.

Earlier this week, two politicians who dined with Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa told reporters the beleaguered prime minister said he felt like quitting. The word spread so fast that Hosokawa was forced to hold a news conference late the same night to say he didn't plan to step down.

While speculation about a possible resignation has died down, the episode is being portrayed as symptomatic of the malaise of Hosokawa's once-energetic administration.

The prime minister is trying to win approval of an already overdue budget for the fiscal year that started a week ago, but questions about his personal finances have paralyzed parliamentary business.

The growing scandal has been especially damaging to a prime minister who has made the fight against political corruption a centerpiece of his 8-month-old coalition government.

Even Hosokawa's wife, Kayoko, acknowledges he's feeling the heat these days.

"My husband says, 'I'm like a chicken in the broiler,'" she told the respected Bungei Shunju magazine in its edition to be on newsstands Sunday.

Hosokawa might have planned to relax at his get-together Tuesday night with a couple of splinter-party politicians, but the evening turned out to be another headache.

Both his dinner companions insisted the prime minister talked about quitting, although one said he thought Hosokawa was joking. The other said he thought Hosokawa was serious.

Hosokawa himself initially insisted he never said anything about quitting, but later told Japanese reporters he didn't recall his precise words.

Political opponents gleefully seized on the opportunity to criticize him. Hosokawa's own chief spokesman said it showed the importance of choosing words carefully.

After the first flurry of excitement, newspapers tended to view the incident as a tempest in a sake cup, pointing out that the reported remark was made over drinks.

But the confusion over the comment was cited in editorials criticizing the prime minister for failing to account for a large 1982 loan from a trucking executive.

"Our trust in his words declined further," said the Nihon Keizai Shimbun, Japan's leading financial daily.

Hosokawa's popularity has slipped in recent months amid struggles over political reform, taxes and revamping his Cabinet. But although it has fallen by about 20 percentage points, public opinion polls put his approval rating at around 50 percent, much higher than that of previous governments.

The national newspaper Asahi, offering political counsel, took an almost motherly tack with the prime minister.

"Although we are at the peak of spring, we can imagine how depressed you are," the newspaper said Thursday.

Archives: Soviet comrades popped pills to the end

By Bernard D. Kaplan

PARIS — Leonid Brezhnev and other members of the Soviet Union's geriatric leadership, many of whom were ailing, regularly took a secret "rejuvenating" pill in the 1970s and '80s that was not only supposed to keep them going but make them more youthful.

Official archives just published by the newspaper Moscow News reveal that the masters of the Kremlin during the final decades of the Soviet empire lived in a byzantine atmosphere in which medical quackery and superstition were the order of the day.

Historian Peter Bogdanov, a specialist in Soviet history at Paris University, said the documents make clear that this obsession with miraculous cures contributed to the political paralysis and economic stagnation that were soon to destroy the communist system.

By the time that the comparatively young Mikhail Gorbachev took power in 1985 at age 54, it was already too late to stop the decline, according to Bogdanov. He noted that Gorbachev, although highly critical of Brezhnev's disastrous record during his 18 years as Soviet leader, never disclosed the whole truth, apparently fearing that the regime would become a laughing stock at home and abroad.

"The stark truth is that a system ostensibly based on immutable scientific theories of economics and sociology was being run by credulous ignoramuses willing to believe in any old wives' tale to prolong their own lives," Bogdanov said.

By 1980, about 1,000 top party and government officials were taking the capsule that was said to have rejuvenating power, according to the documents.

They suggest that the steadily deteriorating Brezhnev, suffering from hardening of the arteries and possibly Alzheimer's disease, was unfit to govern as early as the mid-1970s.

"The determination to keep him alive and conceal his infirmities became the chief concern of other Kremlin politicians, practically to the exclusion of everything else including running the country," Bogdanov said. "They didn't want him to die until they could be assured that they and not their rivals would succeed him. As a result, anyone who claimed to have found the secret of rejuvenation and long life exercised a great influence within the Kremlin."

The one with the greatest influence apparently was Djuna Davitachvili, who, although holding no medical degree, was healer-in-chief to Brezhnev and other elderly members of the leadership for more than 10 years. She kept her job even though her patients kept dying.

Africa drought threatens lives of 20 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lives of more than 20 million persons in 10 East African countries are at risk because of civil strife and drought, government relief officials said Thursday.

The country most affected, according to the officials, is Sudan, where the lives of about 5 million are threatened.

The other countries with large numbers of people who could face severe malnutrition or perhaps starvation are Ethiopia, Somalia, Eritrea, Rwanda, Burundi, Uganda, Tanzania, Djibouti and Kenya.

> 'We need to step in again as we did in 1992 and through a joint internationally coordinated response try to prevent famine occurring on a massive scale due to drought.'
> —Lois Richards
> Agency for International Development

Lois Richards, a senior official of the Agency for International Development, said 11 million people in the 10-country region are affected by the drought, 7 million more are internally displaced and about 2.75 million have fled to neighboring countries.

Once donor countries are alerted to drought conditions in a given area, she said, it normally takes three months to arrange for delivery.

"That's why it's important that we get these warnings as early as we can before there is mass famine," Richards told a news briefing.

She said the United States had authorized $275 million in emergency food aid to African countries in need, of which $170 million was for the horn of Africa. Because of the dire conditions, that figure has been increased by $44 million recently, she said.

She added that a strong response by donor countries helped avert starvation in 1992 in southern Africa, where drought affected an estimated 18 million persons.

"We need to step in again as we did in 1992 and through a joint internationally coordinated response try to prevent famine occurring on a massive scale due to drought," she said.

But she noted that humanitarian crises elsewhere, including the former Yugoslavia, northern Iraq and other regions in Africa, have made it increasingly difficult for donor countries to meet the requirements.

Rwanda capital reports soldiers, premier deaths

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Rampaging troops reportedly killed Rwanda's acting premier and three U.N. soldiers Thursday during fighting touched off by the deaths of the presidents of Rwanda and Burundi in a suspicious plane crash.

Reports from Rwanda's capital, Kigali, were sketchy and it was not clear who was involved in the fighting. The capital in neighboring Burundi was reported quiet.

The violence in Rwanda broke out after President Juvenal Habyarimana of Rwanda and President Cyprian Ntaryamira of Burundi died late Wednesday when their plane crashed while landing at Kigali's airport. The Rwandan government said the plane was shot down, but U.N. monitors said they could not confirm that.

A missionary reached by telephone in Burundi's capital, Bujumbura, said that city was quiet and that the president's death was being reported as an accident. There has been widespread ethnic fighting in Burundi since the nation's first Hutu president was killed during a failed coup last fall.

Bitter rivalries between the majority Hutu and minority Tutsi groups have made both central African nations into ethnic battlegrounds for decades. Rwanda also has been torn by divisions among Hutus over a peace accord that Habyarimana's goverment signed with Tutsi rebels last year.

In Washington, President Clinton said Rwanda's acting prime minister, Agathe Uwilingiyamana, "was sought out and murdered" by Rwandan security forces.

U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said in New York that three Belgian U.N. soldiers were reported slain in Kigali. They were apparently abducted by members of Rwanda's presidential guard along with three Cabinet ministers. There were unconfirmed reports of other U.N. personnel missing, Sills said.

The whereabouts of the ministers remained unknown. But Radio France Internationale, citing undentified diplomats, said Labor and Social Affairs Minister Landouald Ndasingwa had been killed.

The two presidents, both Hutus, were on their way home from a summit in Tanzania that was aimed at finding a regional solution to the ethnic hostilities in their nations when their plane crashed.

Rwanda's government said the plane "was shot down" while landing "by unidentified elements in circumstances which are still unclear."

Sills said U.N. officers, who are part of a 2,500-soldier peacekeeping force brought in to monitor the Hutu-Tutsi peace accord, were denied access to the wreckage and could not confirm whether the plane was shot down.

Witnesses reported hearing heavy-weapons fire moments before the presidential plane crashed, the French Embassy in Kigali said.

It was not clear who, if anyone, was in control of Kigali.

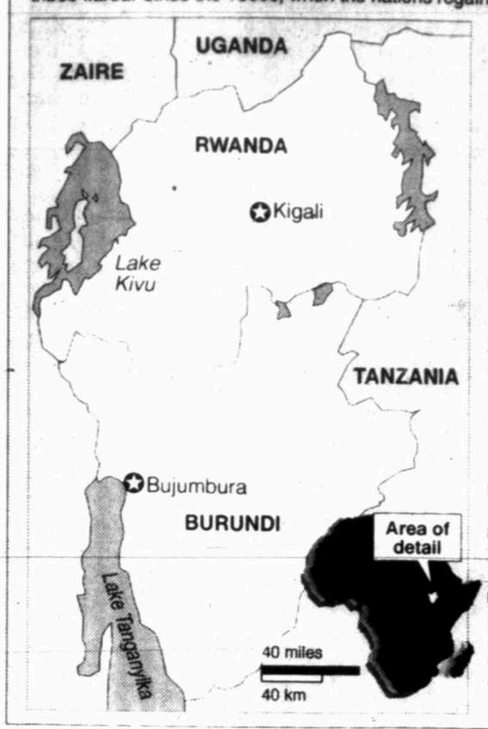

Intense gunfire and explosions echoed across the city, U.N. spokesman Moctar Gueye reported by telephone early in the day. He said that there were reports of house-to-house killings and that the city's streets were empty except for small, quick-moving groups of youths armed with machetes and clubs.

"So far as we can see, it seems that there are a lot of guns in a lot of hands and we don't really know who is giving orders to shoot at who and for what reason," Gueye said.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali expressed his "horror and profound personal grief."

Strife in the heart of Africa

Born as kingdoms, Burundi and Rwanda were both influenced by Germany in the late 1800s—Burundi as an occupied territory and Rwanda as a German protectorate. Ethnic strife between the ruling Tutsis and majority Hutus (two native peoples) transcends geographic borders. The groups existed peacefully until the end of World War I, when a League of Nations mandate united the countries under Belgian rule. The ruling elite's power diminished, and tensions between the tribes flared. Since the 1960s, when the nations regained independence, coup attempts and massacres have devastated the political landscape.

Murder theories grow, trust declines

MEXICO CITY (AP) — In Mexico, political cynicism is a habit. The murder of presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio has only deepened suspicions on the street that unseen hands are manipulating politics, the police and the lives of human beings.

Mexico's ruling party, the PRI, has held power for 65 years through a blend of patronage, populism, and vote-rigging. Mexicans are quick to believe in political conspiracies.

Rightly or wrongly, many Mexicans believe that President Carlos Salinas de Gortari actually lost the 1988 presidential election. He was declared the winner — after a computer breakdown — with a bare majority.

Mexicans are also quick to take any sign of official corruption or unexplained deaths as confirmation that the political system itself is untrustworthy.

Salinas has tried to shore up Mexico's sagging self-image by firing corrupt or fraudulently elected governors, by ending an economic crisis and by bringing joining the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Old-style politicians are being replaced at top levels by young, well-educated technocrats although the old guard remain a political force.

But those accomplishments haven't allayed cynicism about Colosio's death.

Police have named seven individuals in Colosio's murder — including a factory worker, a one-time nightclub security guard and three former police officers. They say more people were involved.

Many Mexicans suspect established political groups, including the government itself, were behind those arrested.

"I think it was the government," said Pedro Chavez, owner of a downtown newsstand. "There's something very big behind this."

"There are a lot of powerful political interests, and Colosio was talking too much about democratic reforms," Chavez said. "That didn't suit them."

The seven men named by authorities "are just scapegoats," he said. "It's much bigger than that."

REASONS TO RE-ELECT JUSTICE RAUL GONZALEZ

What is the real story behind the high-dollar, negative campaign against Texas Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez?

Justice Gonzalez's opponent, Rene Haas, is a personal injury lawyer from Corpus Christi. Her law partner/husband is David Perry, a former president of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association and one of the wealthiest personal injury lawyers in the nation. According to campaign reports filed with the Texas Ethic commission, a small number of personal injury lawyers have funded the Haas campaign with well over $1 million in an effort to get their hand picked candidate elected. One might wonder why.

Just think, if Hass wins the April 12 run-off, she, her husband and their trial lawyer buddies stand to make millions from her decisions on the court. That's why they are willing to invest so much cash in character assassination, innuendo, and misleading TV ads.

Let's send a message to the trial lawyers on April 12. Our Supreme Court is not their money-making machine. Support Justice Raul Gonzalez and ruin a trial lawyers day.

Let's Keep An Honest Judge on the Bench!

WEATHER WATCH

Some clouds, low 80s on tap

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the lower 80s and south winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy wtih a low near 50, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be partly cloudy with a high in the lower 80s.

After an overnight low of 36, Thursday's high reached 80, compared to the record high for that date of 93 set in 1989. The record low was 28 set in 1938.

STATE

It's spring in West Texas, and along with that comes occasional dust storms.

Strong southerly winds of 20 to 30 mph with higher gusts were reported from as far south as San Angelo all the way to the Oklahoma Panhandle on Thursday.

Skies across the region were mostly sunny, with a few patches of thin high clouds.

Winds of 20 to 30 mph were reported in North Texas, as well, particularly in western portions. Winds were less at 10 to 15 mph in East Texas and 15 to 25 mph in the central portions of North Texas.

Temperatures across the north half of the state at 3 p.m. ranged from 60 at Paris to 74 at Abilene. In South Texas and along the Texas coast, temperatures ranged from the mid-60s to near 80. The mercury rose to 80 at McAllen and 82 at Wink at 4 p.m.

Prospects for today are partly cloudy skies with a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Highs in the 70s are expected.

NATION

What happened to spring? Snow made its way through western New York, New England and the Rockies on Thursday, and strong winds blew through the Plains.

In western New York, where there was up to a foot of snow, five people died in accidents on storm-slickened roads. By the time the storm passed, 11 inches of snow had fallen on Youngstown, near Niagara Falls. Ten inches fell at Ellenburg in the Adirondack Mountains.

In northern New England, 6 inches fell in Burlington, Vt. Buffalo, N.Y., and Erie, Pa., received 2 inches of snow. Some light freezing rain also developed across sections of northern Maine.

It also rained heavily in parts of New York state and Vermont, with 1.32 inches recorded at Island Pond, Vt., and 1.29 inches in Chelsea, N.Y. Strong but scattered thunderstorms also struck parts of Florida.

Low pressure combined with a cold front to bring snow to the central and northern Rockies. Four inches of snow fell at Old Faithful in Yellowstone National Park and 3 inches fell at Telluride, Colo., and Afton, Wyo.

In Kansas, winds gusted to 58 mph at Hill City and 47 mph at Dodge City.

Surface high pressure helped clear skies and allow temperatures to drop from the southern Plains into the Mississippi Valley on Thursday morning.

Several record lows for the date were posted in Arkansas: 30 degrees in El Dorado, breaking the 1971 record of 31; 28 in Hot Springs, breaking the 1990 record of 29; 28 in Jonesboro, breaking the 1939 record of 29; and 26 in Mena, breaking the 28-degree record of 1990.

Temperatures dropped into the 20s and 30s across much of the country Thursday morning, from the Northeast into the Ohio Valley, and from the Plains as far south as Texas.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

PLAN: U.S. calls for dispatch of peacekeepers

(From 1A)

U.N. forces should soon be on its way to Gorazde. It is important that this happen as soon as possible."

Other administration officials said the plan was being put on a fast track and that it would involve hundreds of Ukrainians and also British and French troops already on peacekeeeping duty elsewhere in the Balkans.

If the Serbs attacked the peacekeepers they would risk a NATO air strike, the officials said.

"Let me be clear," Lake said at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. "Neither the president nor any of his senior advisers rules out the use of NATO power to help stop attacks such as those against Gorazde."

The carefully drawn statement was designed to alert the Serbs and the rest of the world that Defense Secretary William Perry and Gen. John Shalikashvili subscribed to the ultimatum.

Earlier this week, Perry and Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, ruled out any military action at this stage to try to lift the siege of Gorazde and its predominantly Muslim population of 65,000.

Pentagon spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski said Thursday "there's no daylight" between the Defense Department and the State Department on using force in Bosnia.

"Both departments are in complete agreement that you should look at all your options at all times in Bosnia. . . . We're not ruling out the use of force as a way to stop bloodshed or promote the peace process. Those are the objectives in Bosnia. And no one has said anything to the contrary as a general concept," she said.

The United States stands ready to transport the Ukrainians, most of whom would come from Kiev, to a staging area, deLaski and other officials said.

The officials cautioned, however, that it was not clear whether the Serbs would try to block the peacekeeping mission. Approval by the United Nations was considered a virtual certainty.

The officials said there are now 15 peacekeepers on the ground in Gorazde.

The president of the Security Council, Colin Keating of New Zealand, said earlier in the week the United Nations planned to send about 1,000 Ukrainian soldiers to Gorazde to protect civilians.

The size of the ultimate force has not been determined. Ukraine offered about 800 of its soldiers. There may be more, including British and French units, the officials said.

Gorazde was under a 10th day of Serb attack Thursday as the U.N. commander, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, shuttled between the Serb and government commanders trying to arrange a cease-fire

Gorazde was declared a "safe area" by the U.N. Security Council last year and NATO committed itself to using its air power to stop attacks on the town.

"We stand by that commitment," Lake said.

"We must make clear to the Serbs and to the Serbs of Bosnia that the costs of continued intransigence are high," he added.

Lake said the Serbs and their rivals were trying to bolster their military positions as a new round of peace talks approached. But in pursuing marginal advantage, they threaten "to plunge all of Bosnia back into bloodshed," Lake said.

His criticism appeared aimed also at the Muslim-led government, although he directed most of his rhetoric specifically at the Serbs for their continued attack on Muslim enclaves.

Rep. Frank McCloskey, D-Ind., who has accused the administration of permitting genocide in Bosnia with its cautious approach, said Lake's statement "flies in the face" of the Perry and Shalikashvili statements.

"It is time for someone to end the confusion, take charge and rule in — not out — the use of air power," McCloskey said in a statement.

ISSUE: Opposites meet in Dems' runoff

much on issues such as health care and welfare reform.

Mattox, 50, accuses his opponent of living like a rich Republican. Fisher, 45, calls himself a "New Democrat," then scolds Mattox for indulging in divisive politics.

Lately, the two have argued about how much each is worth.

Fisher, whose personal fortune is estimated at $9.5 million, owns an investment firm that manages more than $300 million in assets.

"I have done well in the business sector. I am proud of my accomplishments. I don't think I should be penalized for my success," Fisher said.

Mattox lists $3.1 million in business and real estate assets, including a 10-story building in Austin and car washes in Dallas. But he says his holdings are highly mortgaged and modest compared to Fisher's.

"I am by any stretch of the imagination not a wealthy man," he said. "I'm just a working guy who tried to invest wisely in a few things. I've made some decent investments, and if the notes all get paid off, then my brother and sister and me might be able to have a little net income."

Mattox, a former state attorney general, congressman and state legislator, is trying for a comeback after a bruising gubernatorial runoff defeat to Gov. Ann Richards in 1990.

In 1992, Fisher was an adviser to independent presidential candidate Ross Perot.

He finished fifth out of 24 candidates in the 1993 special election required when then-Sen. Lloyd Bentsen was appointed President Clinton's Treasury secretary.

Fisher spent about $2.1 million of his own money in that campaign, which Mrs. Hutchison won.

Since Jan. 1, Fisher has reported pumping $1.4 million of his own money into the campaign.

During that period, Fisher has outspent Mattox more than 2-to-1 — $1.6 million to $714,627.

Mattox has hounded Fisher for donating money to Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., and to the Bush-Quayle campaign.

Fisher says he gave the money to Lugar because he's a family friend; he says his wife was the one who supported the Bush-Quayle ticket.

Mattox also has taken aim at Fisher's membership in an all-white country club. Fisher says it would be hypocritical to quit and labels the attacks as vintage Mattox.

"It's vicious politics. It's the past. It's outmoded. The voters aren't going to buy it," he said.

Mattox earned his reputation as a reformer in two terms in the Texas Legislature from 1973-76.

He was elected to the U.S. House in 1976, but his aggressive style soon got him in trouble with congressional party leaders.

Mattox returned to Texas in 1982 and won consecutive four-year terms as attorney general.

In 1990, Richards defeated Mattox in a nasty runoff campaign.

Fisher, who worked on Wall Street before starting his own investment firm, has never held elective office.

He was an executive assistant to the Treasury secretary during President Carter's administration.

In the early 1980s, he joined then-Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and others in forming the centrist Democratic Leadership Council.

numbers or papers on any of the items, it would be helpful if they brought them."

Items whose ownership cannot be determined through police matching or the viewing will be brought before a judge, who will determine ownership of the items.

Ms. Therwhanger said the department is in contact with officials in Dallas, Laredo, Edinburg and several other cities concerning burglaries that may have been committed by the Bonnettes in those areas.

Bonnette was arrested March 31 after leading Midland police on a high-speed chase that began in north Midland and ended near the Odessa Country Club on Highway 80. Mrs. Bonnette was arrested later that day at an Odessa motel.

The couple is still in jail with bond set at $300,000 each. Bonnette and his wife are each charged with one count of burglary of habitation in Midland and one count of burglary of habitation in Odessa.

However, police are investigating the two in connection with a string of about 16 burglaries that occurred in north and east Midland during March and about 20 burglaries that occurred last year between May and August.

Ms. Therwhanger said some of the items recovered were from a burglary that occurred in May 1993.

The two also are suspects in three other burglaries that occurred in Odessa.

Bonnette was caught after detectives set up surveillance in areas where the burglaries had occurred. His vehicle was spotted at 4543 Sinclair Ave. and when Bonnette left, the detectives followed him in an unmarked car. Bonnette attempted to flee police after a marked police unit tried to stop him.

Mrs. Bonnette was located by Odessa police at a motel in Odessa after her husband was caught.

Bonnette was on parole from the Texas Department of Corrections for burglary and other offenses when he was arrested.

CARTEL: Hance discusses OPEC strategy

(From 1A)

Ron Brown, Commerce Department secretary, went to Saudia Arabia to let it be known that Clinton wanted lower oil prices to bolster the economy.

"Don't expect any help for the oil industry to come from Washington D.C.," he said.

He said that when Kuwait honored former President Bush last year, the Saudis did not even acknowledge that the former president — who defended Kuwait against Iraq — was in the area.

"National security is very important to the Saudis. They liked Bush and trusted him, but they are nervous about the election of Clinton."

Hance said Iraq was still a critical element in oil prices.

OPEC "is not willing to make cuts now because they know they will have to make cuts again when Iraq comes back into the market. They don't want to make production cuts twice."

The threat of future cuts on behalf of Iraq also may be one reason Iran is producing all-out, Hance said.

He said Iran was desperate for cash to fund its social programs and to avoid unrest. He said an OPEC agreement last year to keep the price at $18-$20 might have worked if Iran had not cheated on its quotas.

Despite fear of and disgust toward Iran among nations in the region, Hance said OPEC members don't have any love for Kuwait, which is notorious for cheating on quotas.

"If Saddam Hussein had invaded Kuwait, stayed for a week and pulled out, he would probably be setting oil prices today."

Recalling how Saudi Oil Minister Shiek Yammani once was able to move OPEC to a consensus, Hance said OPEC now lacked leadership, because there are too many chiefs. Leadership could be restored if Eliro Parra, oil minister of Venzuela, is elected to head the cartel, he said.

On an optimistic note, Hance said Third World countries' demand for automobiles would have a positive effect on oil prices in the future.

He said OPEC members could not tolerate a $10 oil price for very long, because it would affect national economies and cause social unrest.

FILES: Mayor calls allegations 'ludicrous' is listed in the masthead of the NIMBY News Permian Basin as the editor-publisher — is one of the defendants in the case.

(From 1A)

Trombley covered Odessa as a reporter for the Reporter-Telegram from Feb. 25, 1985, to March 4, 1989. His byline appears on the articles in question.

One article makes allegations that Ms. Perryman exerted influence in keeping stories from being broadcast on local news stations and had certain city employees fired because of their investigations.

Several articles in the publication accuse the mayor of misusing her office for personal gain.

Trombley's name also appears on a story about Ms. Perryman's 40th birthday party. In the article he said the party was extravagant and "would have warmed the cockles of the heart of the Roman Emperor Caligula, who may have been history's most renowned and depraved hedonist."

A source quoted said the mayor's party cost $500,000 and "gives new meaning" to the phrase "vulgar excess."

"Whoever thought feudalism was dead hasn't troubled to look at the Ector County section of the Permian Basin. Given her apparent lavish vantage point it's no wonder our illustrious mayor can look down and tell the masses 'everything is wonderful.'

"In this particular section of the Permian Basin, feudalism is obviously alive and well and the barons and baronesses are prospering," Trombley's story states.

"This is a malicious attack on me and my husband," Mrs. Perryman said at a press conference Thursday.

She said she had identified 40 "outright lies" in the paper, "as well as countless outrageous conclusions."

She said that because of the articles she has suffered "irreparable damage" to her professional and private reputations.

Mrs. Perryman said it is her opinion that the articles were meant to "impugn my reputation."

A woman who answered the door at Trombley's Odessa apartment on Thursday said he did not want to comment at this time.

Although former Channel 9 news anchor Richard Relyea was not named in the lawsuit, an article appeared in the NIMBY News Permian Basin that detailed an investigation he allegedly made regarding "questionable" actions on the mayor's behalf.

Relyea is running against Ms. Perryman in the mayoral race.

"I had nothing to do with this. If you will notice on the publication it says permission from earlier reprint of NIMBY . . . although I am quite pleased that it is out," Relyea said.

"The truth hurts," Relyea said.

More than 27,000 copies of the newspaper reportedly were mailed out this week in Odessa.

Staff writer Michael Kashgarian also contributed to this report.

Also indicted was Mireles, 20, who is charged with the Dec. 13 slaying of 18-year-old Catalina Chavez Mireles.

Mireles and the victim had separated a week before the shooting. According to police, the woman and her 2-year-old daughter were staying with her parents at 1801 Maple St.

Police said Mireles showed up at the parents' home and was talking to his wife when family members heard shots fired. Mireles already had fled the scene when the parents went into the room.

Mireles turned himself in three days after the shooting. He remains free on a $50,000 bond.

Serbs attack Muslim enclave; U.N. struggles to arrange truce

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serb troops kept pressure on the embattled Muslim enclave of Gorazde while the U.N. commander struggled Thursday to persuade generals from both sides to accept a general cease-fire.

Truce talks scheduled for Sarajevo airport did not take place. Instead, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, who leads U.N. peacekeepers in Bosnia, shuttled between the commanders of Serb forces and the Muslim-led government's army.

There were hints of progress. U.N. spokesman Maj. William Levack said Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic told U.N. officials he would agree to a 24-hour cease-fire throughout the former Yugoslav republic.

The Bosnian news agency B-H Press said the Bosnian government commander ordered his forces to stop shooting at 6 p.m. local time (noon EDT).

There was no word that the Serbs had agreed to the cease-fire. But Levack said the Serb commander told Rose that his forces would hold fire if government forces did. It was not immediately known whether fighting had stopped.

Rose was pushing both sides to agree to a proposed cease-fire for all of Bosnia, U.N. officials said.

"We're fairly close to some kind of peace plan," Rose said earlier in the day, but he declined to give details or discuss stumbling blocks. "Both sides need time for reflection . . . and we hope to continue the talks tomorrow with a view to signing a peace plan in the very near future."

Charles Redman, the special U.S. envoy to the region, meanwhile arrived in Croatia on Thursday, with visits also planned for Sarajevo, the Bosnian Serb headquarters in Pale and Belgrade, capital of Yugoslavia. He said he was going to talk with leaders in those areas about a general cease-fire.

Some fighting has been silenced in Bosnia. A cease-fire between the government and Serbs has held since Feb. 10 in Sarajevo. Croats and Muslims have observed a truce since Feb. 25 in central and southwestern Bosnia as part of their U.S.-brokered agreement to stop fighting and form a federation.

There was no word that the Serbs had agreed to the cease-fire. But Levack said the Serb commander told Rose that his forces would hold fire if government forces did.

But the fierce fighting in Gorazde has complicated efforts to sew the patchwork truces into an overall peace for Bosnia, where more than 200,000 people are dead or missing after two years of war.

The United States and its NATO allies on Thursday urged the United Nations to dispatch hundreds of Ukrainian and other peacekeepers to Gorazde, Clinton administration officials said Thursday.

British and French peacekeepers may be redeployed to join the Ukrainians in trying to protect the town's 65,000 civilians. The United States was ready to transport the Ukrainians, said the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Serb militiamen besieging the area around Gorazde had appeared to ease their attack Wednesday night, but U.N. aid workers in the town reported more shelling Thursday.

"Four shells landed in the very center of the city, less than a kilometer (a half-mile) from the UNHCR office," said Peter Kessler, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Zagreb, Croatia.

He said U.N. aid workers in Gorazde, 35 miles southeast of Sarajevo, reported "regular shelling along the northern confrontation line, approximately every three minutes."

Kessler said 67 people had been killed and 325 wounded in 10 days of Serb attacks.

Reports from aid workers and U.N. military observers in Gorazde this week have consistently painted a more serious picture of the situation than U.N. statements from New York.

Reports from U.N. military observers in the enclave criticized unidentified U.N. commanders for suggesting the Serb offensive was an attack on just one corner of the enclave, which shelters 65,000 people.

"Saying it is a minor attack into a limited area is a bad assessment, incorrect and shows absolutely no understanding of what is going on," said a report dated Tuesday. Other reports, dated Tuesday and Wednesday, said the Serbs were advancing on several fronts.

The reports were made available by U.N. sources who insisted on anonymity.

1 A Palestinian opened fire with a submachine gun at a bus stop near the port city of Ashdod today, killing one Israeli and wounding four others before being shot to death by bystanders. The Islamic Jihad claimed responsibility for the attack.

2 The Islamic fundamentalist Hamas group claimed responsibility for a car bombing in Afula Wednesday and said both attacks were timed to Israel's upcoming celebration of Independence Day on April 14.

3 Lt. Gen. Ehud Barak, the armed forces chief of staff, told reporters the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip where 1.8 million Palestinians live would be closed "at least for several days" to prevent further attacks.

Army bars Arabs from Israel to combat attacks

AFULA, Israel (AP) — The army barred 1.8 million Palestinians from Israel for a week to combat a wave of attacks that claimed another Israeli life Thursday, while an angry crowd buried victims of a car bomb attack.

The order, one of the strictest ever imposed on the Palestinians, came a day after a Muslim fundamentalist seeking revenge for a Jewish settler's Feb. 25 massacre in a mosque set off a car bomb that killed eight in this northern town.

In new attacks Thursday, an Israeli was killed and four were wounded when a Palestinian opened fire at a bus stop in southern Israel. Two Israelis were also stabbed and slightly wounded by Arabs at entrances to the Gaza Strip.

"We plan for Israel to be empty of Arabs from the territories until Independence Day," Police Commissioner Rafi Peled announced on Israel radio. "I hope it will calm the situation and contribute to the security."

Israeli Independence Day is April 14.

The attacks, which undermined support for Israel-PLO peacemaking, spurred calls for a suspension of negotiations with the PLO on the withdrawal of Israeli troops from the Gaza Strip and West Bank town of Jericho.

The measures to bar Palestinians from Israel were the strictest since March 1993, when 15 Israelis were killed in a series of stabbings. They effectively tighten travel restrictions imposed after the Feb. 25 Hebron mosque massacre.

Peled said all permits for workers had been canceled and no cars would be allowed in from the territories. The army barred a Palestinian conference at a Jerusalem hotel where Jesse Jackson was to speak. The conference would have brought in hundreds of Palestinian academics from the occupied lands.

The violence came as Israelis observed Holocaust Day in memory of the 6 million Jews slaughtered by the Nazis during World War II.

In Afula, police fought running battles with about 300 Israeli youths who burned tires after the funerals for the victims of the suicide car-bombing. The bus stop where the attack occurred was covered in wreaths.

The Islamic fundamentalist group Hamas claimed responsibility for the car bombing, saying it sought revenge for the mosque massacre that killed Palestinians in the West Bank city of Hebron. Its military wing promised more attacks.

Settlers passed out literature condemning the peace talks. Banners attacked Israel's peacemaking with the PLO.

"I would be happy to do my military reserve duty in Gaza or Hebron. You don't even have to pay me. Just let me at them," said Beni Baridi, a 22-year-old who just left the army.

Much of the town was closed in mourning.

Dear Midland Citizens:

For 24 years I have been your County Commissioner and have fought to keep our county government responsive to the needs of the citizens of Midland County by keeping taxes low and services high. We are approaching a critical crossroads in county government, where we will operate efficiently or regress into a tax-and-spend bureaucratic operation. I cannot stay silent any longer and watch my friends and fellow taxpayers being misled and lied to by Jeff Norwood's well financed, slick, and deceptive advertising campaign which is orchestrated by an Austin based political consultant.

Jeff Norwood was recruited to return to Midland to run for County Judge. He has lived in Midland less than one year. He is 29 years old, has no experience, has never paid ad-valorem taxes in Midland, has never been responsible for a mortgage, yet he wants the taxpayers of Midland to vote for him to be the chief fiscal officer of Midland County, who will be in charge of a $20 million a year budget.

For over 30 years our County Judges have been attorneys and have carried a heavy judicial load in addition to their administrative duties. Jeff Norwood, after on the job training, would only be able to do 30% of the work that has been done in the past. You and I as taxpayers will have to raise additional taxes to create a new County Court-at-Law with the additional expense of $180,000 to $200,000 a year, just to take up the slack of a non-attorney County Judge.

In addition I presume Jeff Norwood has adopted new beliefs in order to be accepted and supported by the good people of Midland. It strongly appears that he is using the good people of Midland as a stepping stone for his political ambitions. He has been advised to become active with the "Right-to-Life and Traditional Values groups" regardless of his true beliefs. My fellow friends and taxpayers we are being deceived and misled by Jeff Norwood.

I strongly urge you to support and vote for Teresa Clingman for County Judge and keep efficient, responsible, and conservative county government.

Sincerely,

Win Brown

Research: Protein offers clue to early onset of Alzheimer's

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists have long suspected brain lesions cause the memory loss that characterizes Alzheimer's disease. Now research suggests brain cells are sabotaged much earlier by the same tell-tale protein responsible for the lesions.

The finding is important because hopes of a cure for Alzheimer's lie in catching the killer immediately after it appears.

"If we can understand what is happening in the cellular process early enough ... we may move closer to learning how to intervene and halt the deadly progression," said Dr. Patricia Grady of the National Institutes of Health, where colleagues performed the research. "This study points us in that direction."

More than 4 million Americans are believed to have Alzheimer's, which gradually wipes out the memory until its victims are unable to perform even the simplest task. It kills 100,000 people a year, mainly the elderly.

Only one drug provides any relief — and only temporarily. There is no test to definitively diagnose Alzheimer's; doctors rule out all other possibilities and confirm a diagnosis when they spot the hallmark brain plaque during autopsy.

Scientists have speculated that those brain lesions kill memory cells by weakening their protective membranes and letting in toxic levels of calcium. But they were puzzled because some Alzheimer's patients don't have enough lesions to correspond to the severity of their memory loss.

A new NIH study, published in today's journal Science, shows the protein, called beta amyloid, that eventually congeals into those lesions may cause memory loss very early in the disease. It is the same protein that produces the fatty deposits of plaque that can clog arteries.

The study also suggests calcium isn't as big a culprit in Alzheimer's as was thought.

Adding just a tiny amount of beta amyloid to normal skin cells wiped out the pathways that regulate how much potassium enters cells, said study coauthor Dr. Daniel Alkon.

Alkon's lab discovered last year that the skin of Alzheimer's patients is missing those microscopic tunnels, called potassium channels, and he is working on a skin test that uses their absence as a marker for the disease.

"Now we have shown ... that we can change normal cells to look like Alzheimer's cells," he said.

All cells have these channels. But they're vital in nerve and brain cells, where the electrically charged potassium triggers the signals responsible for memory, said Alkon, a medical director at NIH's National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke.

"They tap out the Morse code of the nervous system," Alkon explained. "What we have are billions of cells and trillions of messages going back and forth."

Because other research shows the channels functions the same in all cells, Alkon expects beta amyloid would be just as deadly to the tunnels in brain cells as it is in skin cells. He's working to prove that now.

If so, the calcium damage that occurs when high levels of beta amyloid congeals into lesions would be less important to the disease.

Many urge Clinton to make court more like America

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Harry A. Blackmun's retirement will give America the youngest Supreme Court in a half-century, and some court-watchers are urging President Clinton to aim for one that will more closely reflect the country's diverse population.

"I wish he'd pick a black man or a black woman" to provide a more liberal counterpart to conservative Justice Clarence Thomas, said American University law professor Herman Schwartz.

Clinton should choose a Hispanic to reflect that group's growing share of the U.S. population, Rep. Jose Serrano, D-N.Y., chairman of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, wrote in a letter to the president.

Others are more interested in ideology than demographics.

Clarke Forsythe of Americans United for Life said Clinton should choose someone who does not seek to legislate from the bench as a replacement for the retiring Blackmun, the court's most liberal member.

The National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League's James Wagoner would like to see a second black, a third woman or the first Hispanic as long as that person has a "deep-seated commitment to individual privacy and protecting a woman's right to choose."

But Rex Lee, a former U.S. solicitor general, argued against trying to fill any particular demographic slot. The Supreme Court is a non-political branch of government and has no obligation to reflect the population, he said.

"What it should look like is the very best talent that is available in the legal community," said Lee, who served in the Reagan administration and now is president of Brigham Young University.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, is high on Clinton's list of possible nominees. He's 60. Another possible nominee, U.S. District Judge Jose Cabranes, 53, of Connecticut, would be the court's first Hispanic.

President rallies teamsters strikers

WOBURN, Mass. (AP) — Doubts have been raised about the strength of his once-powerful union. On Thursday, Teamsters President Ron Carey delivered the kind of spirited message striking teamsters wanted to hear.

"This is not just a Teamster fight. This is a fight about working people in this country," Carey told several hundred people at the Consolidated Freightways terminal in Woburn.

The issue, this time, are plans by trucking companies to hire more lower-wage part-timers and use trains more often to haul trailers.

"All over the country, craft unions, working people are rooting for us," Carey said. "I assure you, what we went out to fight for, we are going to win."

Bobbi Jo St. John-Maynard, a Teamster driver, looked forward to Carey's speech and wasn't disappointed.

"He's beautiful. I can stay on strike, for eight months, nine months, 10 months, as long as it takes," she said.

Her husband, Luke Maynard, also a union trucker, is just as committed but said the strike that began Tuesday will be hard.

"I hope they come to an agreement because we can't afford it. It's going to be a tough fight for everybody," Maynard said.

No negotiations with the trucking industry have been scheduled. Carey was scheduled to meet Friday with union negotiators.

Carey was elected as a reformer in 1991 and isn't universally popular in the 1.4 million member union, but he was received warmly in Woburn.

Shouts of "We're with you, Ronnie" and "You've got it" greeted his arrival at the terminal where several Teamsters, including Local 25 President George Cashman, had been arrested a day earlier for disorderly conduct on the picket line.

Up to 75,000 drivers, dock workers and mechanics are on strike against 22 companies.

There were scattered reports of harassment and disorderly conduct on picket lines around the nation, but no serious incidents Thursday.

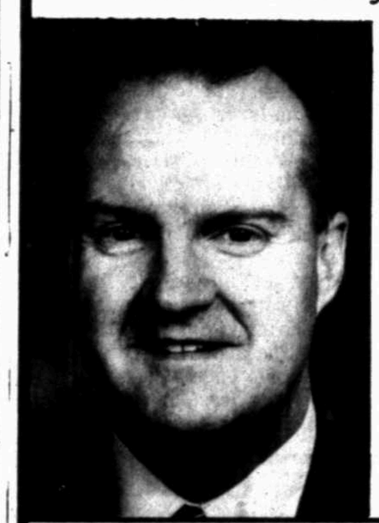

"I have seen solidarity over the last day and a half like I've never seen before," Cashman said.

Cashman and other union members said part-timers would lose out, too, under the companies' proposal because they would be left without pensions, health insurance or money to buy a home and raise a family.

Trucking companies, pinched by the economy and deregulation, say they need the concessions to stay in business.

Study: Young Americans are slow to leave home

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new analysis details something a lot of parents already knew: Young Americans are hanging around home longer and are more likely to move back once they finally do leave.

Delayed departure from the parental hearth reverses a trend of younger and younger independence that had been under way since the 1920s, according to the report by the independent Population Reference Bureau, which uses data from several earlier studies.

The 1990 census, for example, found that 21 percent of all 25-year-olds living in households were living with their parents, up from 15 percent in 1970.

"Leaving home has always been considered a transition to adulthood, but both the ages and reasons young people move out are changing," report sociologists Frances and Calvin Goldschneider of Brown University.

Traditionally, young people leave home "to get married, to get a job, to go to college or join the military," they said.

But today's young adults "came of age during recessions, tight job market, slow wage growth and soaring housing costs ... and amid the confusion of roles and behavior created by the gender revolution."

In short, today's twentysomethings "have been having a difficult time with their transitions to adulthood," and they find no "calling" to leave home.

At the same time, young people benefit from a stronger safety net from parents with jobs and steady incomes.

However, parents who left home at a younger age may be less understanding of young adults' continued need to be dependent, they note.

Their study: "Leaving and Returning Home in 20th Century America," focused on people aged 18 to 30. The Goldschneiders analyzed the 1990 census, studies of 60,000 people who graduated from high school in 1980 and 1982, and a variety of historical information.

They found that during this century each generation has tended to leave home at slightly younger age than their parents did, until the mid-1970s.

And each generation has been more likely to return than those that preceded them.

Sons are more likely to return home than daughters, they found, with men coming home, at least for a while, after military or college.

In the early years of the century only one in 10 who left to marry returned home, compared to one in four among young people who left the nest in the 1960s. During the same time the share of marriages ending in divorce rose from 20 percent to 36 percent. And that climbed to nearly 50 percent in the 1980s.

Historically marriage was the primary reason women left the parental home, reaching 68 percent for women turning 18 in the 1930s. But that share fell to 49 percent in the 1960s and 33 percent between 1980 and 1987.

At the same time the share of women turning 18 who left home for school rose from 10 percent in the 1930s to 28 percent in the 1980s and those leaving for other reasons — jobs and independence for example — climbed from 22 percent to 39 percent.

Scientists find 1st proof AIDS causes cancer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Researchers have found that the AIDS virus directly causes cancer, and the discovery offers a possibility of better treatment for both diseases. It also raises doubts about the safety of some new forms of gene therapy.

The results, being announced today, could lead to safer ways to treat certain forms of cancer in AIDS victims, said the study's authors, University of California at San Francisco Drs. Michael McGrath and Bruce Shiramizu.

"This is the first direct evidence that we have a human virus causing cancer through some mechanism — not just indirectly by immunosuppression," McGrath said.

Cancers, including lymphoma and kaposi's sarcoma, have long been associated with AIDS. But most researchers have thought the cancers were opportunistic, taking advantage of AIDS' weakening of the immune system rather than being caused by the virus itself.

The study, however, found that when the AIDS virus inserted its genetic material into a cell's DNA it apparently switched on a nearby cancer-causing gene, starting up a less common variety of lymphoma called non-B-cell lymphoma.

The scientists spent two years reviewing 30 lymphoma cases, and found four in which the AIDS virus inserted itself into the same spot in a cell's DNA. McGrath said the researchers now have additional examples, and estimated that up to a third of non-B-cell lymphomas in AIDS patients show similar results.

The study is to be published April 15 in Cancer Research, the journal of the American Association for Cancer Research.

Dr. William A. Blattner, chief of the viral epidemiology branch of the National Cancer Institute, hailed the finding as an important step in understanding how a retrovirus, the class of virus that includes the AIDS virus, can cause cancer.

"This has been seen in animal retrovirus, but it's the first example of an insertional retroviral situation in man," he said.

Dr. Dawn Willis, a virologist and scientific program director for the American Cancer Society, called the study "a very exciting finding."

She said the link between AIDS and cancer was always considered indirect because no one had ever found HIV, the AIDS virus, in a cancer cell before. The discovery could suggest research in tracing the role of viruses in other cancers.

Shiramizu agreed.

"It definitely leads us in some directions," he said. "Lymphomas, Hodgkin's disease — right now we don't know what's causing them." Now that researchers know where to look for viruses, further discoveries are possible, he said.

But the study also casts a cloud over the goal of creating an AIDS vaccine from a form of the live HIV virus. The study authors and other scientists fear such a vaccine could trigger cancer genes while halting AIDS.

More broadly, the study raises questions about the use of any retrovirus in a vaccine, as well as their increasing role in the new field of gene therapy. Retroviruses can be used to carry a gene into an organ to correct its functioning.

"This causes a lot of concern over the use of retroviruses for anything — for vaccines or even gene therapy," McGrath said. "Hooking up a gene to a retrovirus and then infecting human cells might risk cancer."

Shiramizu emphasized that the study doesn't show the AIDS virus' exact role in causing cancer. Until that is determined, he said, long-range questions are still speculative.

Humorist: America doesn't know how to throw scandal

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — America just doesn't know how to have a good scandal, says humorist Garrison Keillor. He recommends the British style.

"It's been a quiet week in Whitewater," Keillor told the National Press Club on Thursday.

So quiet, in fact, that the American people seem to have become fascinated by the fact that they are still standing around listening to a story whose main point seems to be pointlessness, he said.

It's like a circus with the people sitting on bleachers waiting for the elephant to come out, he said, and all they can see are people standing around selling cotton candy.

"Those guys are you," he told a room packed with reporters.

"This is a lousy way to run a scandal," said Keillor, host of "A Prairie Home Companion" on public radio.

In England, Keillor said, the newspapers know that a scandal should be quick, it should involve sex if possible, it should be on the front pages for three days, and then it should be over.

"When you open a British newspaper you know there will be a prize in it for you," Keillor went on.

A recent story involved a member of Parliament, found dead wearing women's stockings and a garter belt. He was a man who promoted family values, but who obviously also had a rich fantasy life, Keillor observed.

"This story entertained millions of people for days at no public expense whatsoever," Keillor noted. There were no hearings. There was no special prosecutor.

Another British story involved a 60-year-old defense official whose young former lover sold the man's love letters to a tabloid newspaper.

The public got a look at the literary style of a man who had served most of his life in the military, and Keillor rated that style highly.

"This was the kind of scandal people can enjoy," he said, highlighting the woman's statement that she didn't do it for the money, but to put it all behind her and get on with her life.

Keillor chided the press for trying to keep from the American people the "terrible truth ... that the country is actual going along pretty well."

"I like this president and I think most people in this country do," the Minnesota writer said of President Clinton: "He is a soulful man and he enjoys his work."

"He can face any audience without a script and speak in sentences. ... He's a man who can walk out and talk, and that's a good thing in a democracy," Keillor said.

However, in general, he added, "government is a profession that tends to attract people who have a lot of time to kill."

McDougal puts steep price tag on documents

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — He began by selling dirt from the Whitewater land venture. Now President and Mrs. Clinton's former business partner has a new idea for making money — selling Whitewater documents he just got from the White House. Price tag: $4,000.

The Clintons this week sent James McDougal about 2,000 pages of corporate tax returns, bank records on Whitewater loans and records on the sale of Whitewater lots, says a letter from the Clintons' lawyer, David Kendall.

McDougal's lawyer, Sam Heuer of Little Rock, said Thursday that anyone who wants copies of the documents can buy the package next Tuesday for $2 a page.

Heuer said McDougal needs the money for his legal defense.

"He's going to run into some pretty good-size expenses, especially when the congressional hearings begin," Heuer said.

Much of the money would go to pay Heuer, who says he has represented McDougal since last fall without pay.

McDougal, when asked about the price tag, took a slap at news organizations that have been covering Whitewater: "These capitalists in the East have made money off of us. I think it's only fair we turn it around."

Man attacks flight crew, injures four

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A Federal Express DC-10 was forced to land at Memphis on Thursday after an employee attacked the flight crew with a hammer, knife and spear gun, an airport official said. Four people were injured.

Although wounded, the three members of the flight crew managed to wrestle their attacker to the floor and land the plane, said Jerry McMichael, vice president of the Memphis Shelby County Airport Authority.

"The three crew members did one heck of a job landing the aircraft. It was a miracle they were able to land," McMichael said.

Three people taken to the Regional Medical Center were listed in critical condition and a fourth was in non-critical condition, said Rick Roberts, the hospital's public relations manager.

Names of the injured were not immediately released.

McMichael said he was uncertain what time the attack occurred or where the flight originated. Airport officials became aware of the incident at about 3:45 p.m.

Federal Express is an air freight company based in Memphis.

McMichael said officials are uncertain what the attacker was doing on the plane.

Health care: Clinton calls for less rhetoric, more action

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — President Clinton pushed his health-care reform plan in the Midwest Thursday and called on all sides to "cut down on the rhetoric, turn up the action."

Clinton opened a two-day Midwestern swing before an enthusiastic crowd of Kansans crammed into a Topeka airport hangar by denouncing a Washington culture where "every debate took on more rhetoric than reality and shed more heat than light."

With a giant flag fluttering behind him, Clinton insisted the United States "can do better" than its current health-care system, which leaves 58 million uninsured and millions more under-insured or afraid to change jobs.

"Instead of paralyzing extremism, what this country needs is moderate, aggressive, progressivism by people who are dedicated to getting together and getting things done," he said. "Cut down on the rhetoric, turn up the action, put people first and move the country forward."

Applying that reasoning directly to health care, he declared: "If we cool the rhetoric and talk about the facts and have practical and compassionate approaches to this, we will solve this problem."

The president is traveling this week to try to generate grassroots support for his health-care reform plan while members of Congress are at home on spring break. He is hoping for a shift in focus after weeks in which questions about the Whitewater affair claimed the spotlight.

Even in Topeka, however, Whitewater was not completely gone. A lone protester at the airport held up a sign that said: "Slick Willie: Whitewater President."

Later Thursday, Clinton met with small-business owners at a foundry to hear their concerns about health reform, and Thursday evening he was holding a televised "town hall" in Kansas City, Mo., hoping to demonstrate that Americans are more interested in domestic policy needs than Whitewater.

It was a measure of the challenge before him that Clinton was introduced at the Topeka airport by Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., whom the White House lists as a swing voter on health-care reform.

'Instead of paralyzing extremism, what this country needs is moderate, aggressive, progressivism by people who are dedicated to getting together and getting things done.'

—President Clinton

Slattery pledged that "while we may not all agree on the details of the solutions that we debate" he was committed to seeking a workable solution.

Clinton's two-day swing through the heartland also was taking him to Minneapolis. White House aide Bob Boorstin said that even in Minnesota, one of the leaders in health reform among the states, "there are people who need to be committed" to the Clinton plan.

Clinton scheduled three regional TV "town hall" meetings this week as he sought to build momentum for health-care reform. He got a surprise at the first such forum, when Americans in Charlotte, N.C., hit him with a string of skeptical and even hostile questions Tuesday on everything from Whitewater to North Korea.

Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Clinton was undisturbed by the rough treatment, believing it helps him when he is able to answer Americans' questions directly.

Clinton's efforts to revive interest in health-care reform come as polls show Americans divided on where the president's attention should be, and tired of hearing about Whitewater.

A Times Mirror poll taken last month found that many Americans thought Clinton's top priority should be elsewhere, with 26 percent saying employment should be the president's first concern, 23 percent citing crime, 20 percent singling out the deficit and 16 percent selecting health care.

Polls also show Americans growing tired of news coverage of Whitewater and continuing to be concerned about their own health coverage.

Nearly half those surveyed in the Times Mirror poll said problems in the health care system come up frequently in conversations with family and friends; one in 10 had been dropped from an insurance plan or refused coverage in the last year, and one in five had stayed at a job they didn't like in order to keep insurance coverage.

U.S. proposes changes to ease benefit process

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Deluged with new applications, Social Security officials Thursday proposed sweeping changes in the process for deciding who gets disability benefits. But advocates for the disabled said the changes would leave hundreds of thousands of disabled people ineligible for benefits.

The officials said the changes would speed up decisions, reducing the time for initial action on an application to an average of 40 days, from the current 155. The officials said that people unable to work could still qualify for benefits.

Social Security Commissioner Shirley S. Chater issued a report saying that the agency needed "a radical redesign of disability program policies and procedures."

"Because of unprecedented growth in the number of applications for disability benefits," she said, "we have difficulty providing a satisfactory level of service" under the current system. "The disability process has not changed in any important way since the beginning of the program in the 1950s, and we believe the process is now broken."

Much of the program's recent growth is attributable to people with mental disabilities, and some of them have problems with drugs or alcohol.

Advocates for the disabled criticized some of the proposals. Matthew Diller, a professor at Fordham University School of Law, said:

"The proposal for streamlining the bureaucracy is well thought through and encouraging. But other parts of the proposal would have quite a significant impact on who is found disabled and who is not. Fewer people would qualify for disability benefits."

Thomas D. Sutton, a lawyer at Community Legal Services of Philadelphia, said, "Hundreds of thousands of people found disabled under current law would be denied benefits under this proposal."

He said the proposal would affect many people in their 50s and early 60s who, under the new standards, might be expected to work even if they had medical problems like arthritis or heart disease.

Sutton and other critics say these standards are more stringent than current rules. Social Security officials defend them as merely different, not necessarily stricter.

The Social Security disability program pays monthly cash benefits to 5.2 million people and costs $36 billion a year. It has provided a lifeline for people who are totally disabled and cannot work, but has caused huge problems, both fiscal and political, for presidents, Congress and courts over the last 15 years.

Mrs. Chater invited people to comment on the proposals over the next 60 days. She said she would consider such comments before the government issues new rules with the force of law.

Philip A. Gambino, a spokesman for the Social Security Administration, said Mrs. Chater endorsed the objectives of the proposals, but was not wedded to all the details.

Gambino said the purpose of the proposals was not to save money, but to make decisions in a fairer, more efficient way.

The government is receiving record numbers of applications and approving them at higher rates than in the past. New beneficiaries come on the rolls at younger ages and stay longer than in the past. People with mental impairments now account for one-fourth of all awards.

The General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, says that 250,000 drug addicts and alcoholics are getting benefits, at a cost of $1.4 billion a year, but that few of them are required to obtain treatment for their conditions.

Complaints triple at long-term care facilities in Texas

SAN ANTONIO (NYT) — Nursing home complaints in Texas have almost tripled in recent years, and calls now flood an abuse hotline at a record-setting pace, state officials say.

The rise in complaints represents the "nursing home nightmare," said Katherine Bates, founder of United People For Better Nursing Home Care.

"RNs (registered nurses) look down on LVNs (licensed vocational nurses) who look down on nurse's aides, and everyone is passing the buck," said Bates, whose advocacy group is based in Arlington.

State investigators and nursing home officials agree that because of inadequate background checks, people with criminal records have been able to get jobs caring for elderly and chronically ill residents.

It is common for aides accused of abuse, neglect or theft to jump from one nursing home to another virtually undetected because of bureaucratic red tape, they say.

"We've had a steady increase in the number of complaints in nursing homes," said David Doherty, who investigates long-term care facilities at the Department of Human Services in Austin.

In 1988, 3,650 complaints were filed, contrasted with 10,205 received in 1993, Doherty added.

While insufficient staffing ranks as the No. 1 complaint, physical abuse ranks No. 4 among the top 10 gripes.

"We're getting quite a few sexual abuse cases — aides to residents and residents to residents," Doherty admitted.

"If we get a complaint of physical abuse and it's continuing, we'll investigate within 24 hours," he said.

Meanwhile, even though Texas is one of just six states — Oklahoma, Washington, Nevada, Virginia and Rhode Island are the others — that regularly perform criminal background checks on aides, state officials acknowledge that people with criminal histories of assaults and thefts can slip into the system.

"A worst-case scenario would be an accused murderer from another state coming to Texas to work as an aide and not being in the Department of Public Safety's files," said Jerry Walker, who oversees criminal checks and the nurses' aides registry for the Department of Human Services in Austin. The checking system does not include administrators or nurses.

"Only 108 people have been barred from working in nursing homes because of criminal convictions," said Walker, referring to the first six months of fiscal 1994.

But the figures nationwide are frightening, with at least 20,000 to 30,000 of the 613,000 aides working in America's 20,000 nursing homes having histories of serious criminal offenses, according to one survey.

In Texas, the nurses' aides registry, which is required of all states by federal law, lists aides who have successfully completed at least 75 hours of training and testing in the state or aides with similar credentials from other states, Walker said.

"I'd estimate there are 114,000 aides on the registry, and 20,000 are added annually," Walker said.

Richards wants volunteers to police nursing homes

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards has called on state agencies to develop a system in which volunteers would help Texas regulators police the industry.

The announcement Friday followed a newspaper report that the Texas Department of Human Services is backlogged with more than 900 complaints about health and safety problems at Texas nursing homes.

Richards stated: "We must assure nursing home residents and their families that all complaints about the quality of their lives will be acted upon in a speedy, efficient manner.

"A system of well-trained volunteer monitors, who visit the nursing homes on a regular basis, will help in this effort."

Richards directed Human Services and the Department of Aging to use local staff and volunteers to handle less serious complaints from nursing home residents and their families.

This would allow DHS investigators to focus on more severe problems, she said.

Richards said increased fines against nursing homes show stronger enforcement efforts. She added, "But more work needs to be done."

Earlier this week, the Austin American-Statesman reported a backlog of 933 nursing home complaints at DHS. The agency had attributed the backlog to staff shortages.

Russia to publish new maps free of Soviet-era distortions

Soviet map makers distorted roads, kept some cities secret.

MOSCOW (AP) — A new map of Russia will be published this year without the deliberate distortions Soviet authorities once used to foil Western intelligence services, a newspaper recently reported.

The map, together with a new atlas, will reflect the political changes that have taken place since the Soviet breakup in 1991, the newspaper Segodnya said.

There will be no distortions or omissions, in contrast to the last edition, issued in 1983, when Soviet authorities required geographers to alter certain features on maps published for the general public.

Important roads were given a distorted shape, and cities and towns built around strategic defense facilities never appeared on the maps at all.

The Kartografiya company also plans to publish some recently declassified large-scale maps of Russia. The work is complicated because borders between former Soviet republics, which had purely administrative significance in the past, now have to be clearly marked.

Geographers are working on the task together with the defense and foreign ministries, the newspaper said.

Detective searches for 'walking dead' in Haiti

By Nancy Nusser
Cox News Service

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Private detective Dan Brownlee's job is to find Haiti's walking dead.

Not the country's mythical walking dead, known as Zombies, but moneymaking walking dead — Haitians who fake their own deaths to collect on U.S. life insurance policies.

Brownlee, a chubby American with a quick laugh and no fulltime home, tromps around Haiti looking for corpses in a scam that goes like this:

A Haitian in the United States takes out a life insurance policy, then travels to Haiti, where he or she abruptly and supposedly dies. Then a relative files the claim and collects the money, usually $100,000 for an adult, to split with the alleged dead person.

Brownlee said one Haitian family provided a video tape of a funeral to prove that the dead person really died. "We're examining the funeral and the corpse is sweating," Brownlee said. "It's not that hot in Haiti."

He said the video is an "office classic" at his firm, First Services, a New York-based insurance investigating company.

Haitians are masters at the life insurance scam because they can get a death certificate simply by having two people declare a person dead. No corpse is required as evidence.

"You and I could go tomorrow and swear he's dead and get a death certificate," Brownlee said. "There's the idea that no one would come to Haiti and investigate. That's the funny part."

In one case, a Haitian man took out three life insurance policies worth $50,000 on his child, then reported that the baby died in a car accident in Jacmel, a Haitian coastal city, Brownlee said.

But the father only supplied photocopies of the baby's two passports. In a version of the dog ate my homework, the man said, "The baby destroyed the first passport with crayons," Brownlee recounted.

So Brownlee went to Jacmel. "We found the grandmother of the alleged baby," he said. "She said, 'No, there's no baby.' The judge says he knows about the accident, but he's completely senile."

What clinched the fraud were the passports, Brownlee said. An official at the U.S. consulate in Port-au-Prince said they were never issued, Brownlee said. The stamp on one passport came from an immigration stamp that had been retired before the baby supposedly went to United States.

"Basically what happened is that the baby didn't exist," Brownlee said. "That's the big increase (in fraud in Haiti). Non-existent minors."

Brownlee investigates most of the questionable death claims in Haiti — about 40 in the last 18 months, including three alleged boat drownings. He said of the 40, about half were "outright fraud" and fewer than 10 were "genuine" deaths.

John Vick, of John Vick Investigations in Orlando, Fla., last summer investigated one case in which a Haitian man supposedly was killed by police in Port-au-Prince. The man was found alive in Ft. Lauderdale, said Vick, who says he will never work again in Haiti, which often has no electricity, gas or running water.

"There's too many other ways to make money besides going to Haiti," he said.

America becomes convenience store for world's gun runners

By Charles J. Hanley
AP special correspondent

WASHINGTON — The finely crafted 9 millimeter, in menacing black steel, was fit for a king.

Serial No. U369694, a Sig-Sauer Model 226, the pistol began its journey in 1989, handed across the countertop at a Florida gun dealership. It ended it last December on a red-tile rooftop in Medellin, Colombia, clutched in the hand of a fatally wounded Pablo Escobar.

The king of cocaine is now dead. But the story of his gun and tens of thousands like it goes on.

For Colombian drug lords and Irish gunrunners, for the bosses of Japanese crime and the embargo-busters of Croatia, the United States, home to 280,000 licensed gun dealers, has become a convenience store of pistols, assault rifles and other tools of their deadly trades.

Like Escobar's Model 226, untold numbers of weapons are smuggled out of the United States every day, to countries with tougher gun control. Just this week, one was used to assassinate Mexico's leading presidential candidate.

Sometimes dealers join in the schemes.

But the deception can reach beyond common smuggling and into the computers of regulators here in Washington.

The Associated Press has learned, for example, that a half-million firearms were licensed by the federal government recently for supposed export to Argentina, a country with little use for them. Authorities are investigating whether traders diverted the guns elsewhere.

Congressional auditors, meanwhile, report finding continuing lapses in the way arms exports are licensed.

The American connection is just part of a global picture that has emerged from an in-depth AP look at the international arms bazaar, a secretive commerce that fuels dozens of small wars in the post-Cold War era and equips a criminal underworld.

The AP inquiry found that controls at all levels are often ineffective — from monitoring of local gun dealers, to national governments' export licensing, to the weakness of U.N. embargoes on arms shipments.

The bazaar may finally be driving the world to action. The United Nations, for the first time, takes up the issue of arms trafficking when its Disarmament Commission meets April 18.

Those who advocate reining in the small-arms trade point out that almost all of the 15 million or more people killed in war since 1945 were victims of machine guns, mines, mortars — not of warplanes or nuclear arms.

"I think we're past due right now on some sort of action," said Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., a longtime critic of the U.S. licensing system. "And the United States should be a leader in that action."

But others dismiss the notion of tougher international controls on small arms.

"To dream about that is fine," Mikhail T. Kalashnikov, Russia's pre-eminent gun designer, told the AP. "But it isn't practical. It isn't going to happen."

Here in Washington, the focus falls on Defense Trade Controls, a State Department office that licenses U.S. companies' munitions exports, from F-16 fighters down to 9 mm ammunition.

Beginning in the late 1980s, Pryor and others hammered away at what they regarded as the understaffed office's failure to keep close tabs on exporters and foreign purchasers.

Defense Trade Controls was not consulting other government departments' blacklists for questionable operators, they complained. It was not asking U.S. embassies to check out foreign buyers. In short, it was a rubber stamp.

Since then, the licensing office has more than doubled its staff, to more than 60, and computerized its operation. "Bad guy" lists are being checked. In 1993, it says, embassies were asked to conduct 600 checks on "end users."

But General Accounting Office auditors, currently reviewing the operation, report still finding lapses in verification, a congressional source told the AP. One example cited: The State Department blacklist does not incorporate the Justice Department's list of people prosecuted for violating export controls.

The Rexon Technology case may typify a chronic problem.

The New Jersey company was indicted in December for allegedly conspiring to ship fuses for 155 mm artillery shells to Iraq by fraudulently obtaining a State Department license to export to neighboring Jordan.

On a classified list of Jordan licenses, obtained by the AP, the $3.7 million worth of fuses stands out starkly among licenses for $5,000 worth of cartridges and $2,500 worth of handguns. Any analysis by a licensing officer should have raised questions, since the fuses were for 300,000 shells, and Jordan's army had a mere 180 pieces of 155 mm artillery.

State Department officials and prosecutors, citing the pending trial, declined to discuss whether an end-user check was done on the Rexon application.

The "Argentina" exports raise further questions.

A federal law enforcement source disclosed that agents spot-checking U.S. firearms exports discovered that approximately 500,000 guns were licensed in 1991-92 for export to Argentina.

Recent murders stun Tijuana residents

By R.A. Dyer
N.Y. Times News Service

TIJUANA, Mexico — In recent years, residents of this burgeoning border town have had reason for optimism. Wages are high. Jobs are relatively plentiful. And business, it seems, is booming.

"Look at all this," said Tijuana taxi driver Feliciano Gonzalez, pointing to rows of factories set on a hill. "These are new businesses. There is much prosperity here."

But then he smiled weakly and shook his head. "But there are so many problems," he said, "so much crime."

Despite its seeming good fortune, all is not well in this border town of 1.5 million. In less than a month, Tijuana has been rocked by two high-profile acts of violence.

Last week, the country's leading presidential contender, Luis Donaldo Colosio, was assassinated before hundreds of horrified onlookers. Weeks before, a shootout between state and federal police left four people dead.

And then there is the street violence, Gonzalez said, and the petty theft. The vague malaise expressed by the taxi driver is on the lips of many residents. Some have said their confidence has been shaken, that the city's future is dark.

Others compare Tijuana to Dallas of 1963 after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Like Dallas, there is a sadness here — and a sense of shame.

Alfredo Payan Burgos, president of the Tijuana Chamber of Commerce, fears the violence may have another undesired effect. It may scare off tourists and investors.

Payan said Tijuana has grown fantastically during the past few decades with a combination of tourism and industry bringing millions of dollars annually.

According to Payan, foreign-owner border factories, or "maquiladoras," are the primary source of foreign capital. Although roundly criticized by labor and environmental groups, the plants have created tens of thousands of jobs.

Because of those new jobs — and the proximity to the U.S. border — hundreds of people settle here each day, Payan said. In 1950, Tijuana's population stood at 70,000. Ten years later, it was 700,000. The city is still growing.

"It's possible that these killings could create problems," Payan said. "It could scare investors. And we believe it could affect tourism. But the problem is not unique to Tijuana. There is violence everywhere."

Although the city has suffered a decline in revenues over the past four years — largely because of the U.S. recession — Payan said he expects economic growth to resume within 18 months. He said passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement between the United States, Mexico and Canada should also improve business — at least over the short- and mid-term.

But the killing of Colosio may delay needed improvements, he said. Tijuana leaders had planned a referendum last week on a tax-supported plan to build new boulevards, parks and sewers but postponed the vote because of the assassination. The federal government estimates that about a third of all Tijuana residents lack sewer and water service.

One grim-faced resident said gunplay between several police officers earlier this month has also shaken residents' confidence and "brought us shame."

The shootout led to the escape of an accused drug trafficker and the arrests of several people. Federal Attorney General Diego Valades said corrupt state police agents protecting a member of a drug cartel started the shootout with federal judicial police, who are responsible for investigating drug crimes in Mexico.

A 54-year-old Tijuana restaurant owner said the recent killings have left many with a deep sense of despair. Because Colosio had been so visible in the media, many residents reacted as if a personal acquaintance had been murdered, he said.

"It was barbaric what happened, and the people are very sad," he said. "Really, it makes one pessimistic about what is happening in Tijuana."

Anthropologist finds evidence of sexually egalitarian society

By John Noble Wilford
N.Y. Times News Service

Anthropologists have long been attracted to South Pacific islands for more than the warm breezes and sparkling lagoons.

They go to such places seeking in the simpler societies the rudiments of human community, sometimes glimpsing a rough-hewn harmony beyond the experience of more complex societies.

So it was for Dr. Maria Lepowsky, who in 1978 became the first and only anthropologist to live with the people of Sudest Island — or to use the local name, Vanatinai, meaning motherland.

This is a sparsely populated island in the Louisiade Archipelago of Papua New Guinea, which extends southeast of New Guinea and separates the Solomon and the Coral seas. The people there are an anthropologist's dream because they have had only minimal contact with Western colonialism and missionaries.

The longer Dr. Lepowsky observed the people, sharing their daily lives for two years and learning their rituals and ideologies, the more she realized that life on Vanatinai was different from other societies in one fundamental respect.

Men and women were living and working as virtual equals. This was, she concluded, a striking example of what anthropologists call a gender-egalitarian culture, and perhaps the first one to be studied in detail by any anthropologist.

"It is not a place where men and women live in perfect harmony and where the privileges and burdens of both sexes are exactly equal," Dr. Lepowsky said, "but it comes close."

Close enough, she said, to challenge the position of some theorists in anthropology that male dominance is universal or somehow inherent in human cultures and that only its forms and intensity vary.

The new findings suggest instead that the island's culture could serve as a model of what a sex-egalitarian society would be like and a countermodel to relations between the sexes and ideologies in nearly all other cultures.

Dr. Lepowsky began the research while a doctoral student at the University of California at Berkeley and has elaborated on the findings in a book, "Fruit of the Motherland: Gender in an Egalitarian Society," published last month by the Columbia University Press. She is an associate professor of anthropology at the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Other anthropologists said the Vanatinai study was certain to draw new attention to the role of a person's sex in the complex interrelations of individuals and society.

It could influence scholars to search for other cultures, mainly small-scale groups in the South Pacific and Southeast Asia, that may also be verging on sex egalitarianism.

Dr. Sherry Ortner, an anthropologist at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, said such findings might have provoked stormy ideological debate two decades ago, when the supposed universality of male dominance and female oppression was politically charged dogma to many anthropologists.

"It's not so radical now to say that some societies may approach egalitarianism," she said. "Most debate now would be over different definitions of equality."

Dr. Christopher Boehm, director of the Jane Goodall Research Center at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, who has studied egalitarian behavior, said the quest for a truly equal society had often run into problems of definition.

"It's very difficult to know if women and men in another society have equal power and wealth," he said, "since our definitions of power and wealth are themselves culturally biased."

In praising the work of Dr. Lepowsky, Dr. Roy Wagner, an anthropologist at the University of Virginia at Charlottesville who is a specialist in cultures of the New Guinea area, said she had wisely confined the book mostly to description of the flow of life in the Vanatinai villages, including evidence for sexual equality in decision-making, ritual practices and property holdings, and refrained from drawing large theoretical conclusions.

> 'It is not a place where men and women live in perfect harmony and where the privileges and burdens of both sexes are exactly equal, but it comes close.'
> — Dr. Maria Lepowsky, anthropologist

Dr. Lepowsky acknowledged that the island's small population of 2,300 and remoteness favored the development and preservation of such a society. On Vanatinai, everyone participates in community decisions, meeting face to face, instead of delegating power to a few leaders, who might tend to be men. Vanatinai has no chief.

Another factor, she said, is that the culture is matrilineal, with kinship traced through the mother's clan and women inheriting and owning land and other property.

Other matrilineal societies do not approach equality of the sexes. But on Vanatinai, the central position of women in island life is said to be taubwaragha, which means both "ancient" and "the way of the ancestors."

Dr. Lepowsky found evidence of the equality on every hand. Unlike other Pacific cultures, Vanatinai has no special men's meeting houses or male cult activities. The language is gender-neutral, with no pronouns like he or she.

Boys as well as girls care for younger siblings, and men are expected to share in child care as fathers. In many other New Guinea societies, which consider women inferior to men, menstruation is thought of as a form of pollution and menstruating women must go into seclusion, but not on Vanatinai. Women there also have as much sexual freedom as men.

Young people on the island are considered to be adults once they have entered into a stable marriage. They frequently marry several times before they settle into a lasting relationship.

The new husband is expected to spend several months to a year in "bride service," living with and working for the wife's parents and presumably earning their approval. Later on, the couple normally alternates living with the wife's kin and the husband's.

Although their god of creation is a male named Rodyo, the mythology includes powerful female spirits and the theme of the "wise woman." Both men and women have access to supernatural power through communication with ancestors and other spirits.

Women as well as men can possess special knowledge of magical spells and ritual techniques, sources of power in the community. Either a man or woman can preside over the crucial public ritual at the time of planting yams, one of the island's main crops.

A significant contradiction in sex-related ideologies of Vanatinai, Dr. Lepowsky found, "is between the often stated ideal of woman as life-giver and the belief that women kill through witchcraft and, more rarely and in male dress, as sorcerers."

In earlier times, warfare was the one important activity reserved exclusively for men. Like other islanders, Vanatinai warriors would occasionally set out in sailing canoes to raid an island nearby, plundering gardens, stealing pigs and sometimes seizing women for marriage. But women participated in all decisions on when to fight and when to make peace.

This one example of asymmetry in male and female roles, Dr. Lepowsky said, ended several generations ago when British and Australian colonial authorities put a stop to such raiding. The memory, though, still affects some thinking about roles of men and women.

"One of the only times I saw a little girl treated differently on the basis of her sex," Dr. Lepowsky wrote, "was when a 6-year-old girl joined her brother and several older boys in throwing mock spears. Her mother finally noticed and came out of the house. She stood close to her daughter and said, irritably, 'Are you a man that you throw spears?' The girl burst into tears and ran into the house."

But women on Vanatinai have equal access to the culture's most significant form of authority and influence. Through hard work, ritual generosity and acquisition of supernatural knowledge, anyone may achieve the gender-blind title of gia, or giver. It is a version of the "big man" on other islands, who gains prestige by accumulating goods and then giving them away at ritual feasts.

On Vanatinai, Dr. Lepowsky reported, women figure prominently in the acquisition of ceremonial valuables like shell necklaces and greenstone ax blades.

They may lead their own expeditions to other islands to trade for these goods. It is a "dramatic indicator of the sexually egalitarian nature of the culture," she said.

In some ways, though, it is not perfectly egalitarian. Dr. Lepowsky observed that younger women were likely to spend more time caring for children and gardening and less on building reputations as a giver.

"The average woman spends more of her time sweeping up the pig excrement that dots the hamlet," she wrote. "The average man spends more time hunting wild boar in the rain forest with his spear. His hunting is more highly valued and accorded more prestige by both sexes than her daily maintenance of hamlet cleanliness and household order."

Nonetheless, Dr. Lepowsky concluded, "The example of Vanatinai shows that the subjugation of women by men is not a human universal, and it is not inevitable."

Exhibition claims heroic history of Switzerland is nothing more than folklore

By Henry Kamm
N.Y. Times News Service

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — The Alps will not crumble; the watches will continue to tell time. There will be numbered bank accounts, and cows will still graze on mountain slopes and donate milk for cheese and chocolate.

But an exhibition in the Historical Museum of this city on Lake Geneva casts scorn on many other fundamentals, shared by most Swiss, that give this prosperous nation a sense of righteous self-assurance.

The theme of the exhibition is that the heroic history of the founding of Switzerland, whose 700th anniversary was celebrated with pomp throughout 1991, has almost no foundation in truth. Switzerland is not the world's oldest democracy, it contends, and it was not founded by Alpine peasants who gathered on a meadow in 1291 to defy the mighty Hapsburgs.

In perhaps the unkindest cut of all, the exhibition relegates William Tell, the national hero, to the realm of folklore.

"They invented all the great events and then put the invented figure of Tell into this landscape," Professor Werner Meyer, who holds the chair of medieval history at Basel University, said in an interview in his cluttered office.

Meyer, aided by his assistants and students, is the creator of the exhibition. His role as chief proponent of the debunking school has earned him a loose-leaf binder full of angry letters, including a death threat, and abusive phone calls. Similar reactions were reported by Olivier Pavillon, curator of the Lausanne museum.

Meyer, 56, could easily play the protagonist in the many Tell folk dramas that enliven the tourist season. Burly and bearded, he wore a sleeveless, sheepskin-lined leather jacket and a silver bull's head on a chain around his tieless neck. His firm hands might easily have held the crossbow with which the hero of legend was forced to shoot the apple from his son's head after refusing to kowtow to an Austrian official.

Meyer and Pavillon see the Swiss who blocked this country's joining the process of European integration in a 1992 referendum as heirs of those who perpetuated the legend of Switzerland, officially known as the Helvetic Confederation, as a porcupine, suspicious of and armed against its neighbors.

At the entrance to the exposition, visitors are greeted by a plywood caricature of Tell, offering a basket of real apples, and a statement by Pavillon noting that the opponents of European integration had used "the most worn-out cliches on the founding of the Confederation and the porcupine spirit, as if historical research had produced nothing new."

The exhibit's life-sized mannekins in period dress, mockups of houses and facsimiles of documents provoked keen attention and appreciative giggles from a class of high-school students.

Sandra Crottaz and Julie Wicky, two of the students, said that teachers had always presented the classical version of Switzerland's story but had suggested that some of it might be legend. "This makes it clear," Miss Crottaz said.

The standard version of history, as summarized by Meyer, is that, incensed over brutal repression by the Hapsburg emperor's envoys, the peasants of three cantons in central Switzerland stormed and destroyed the mighty castles of the Hapsburg satraps, and, on Aug. 1, 1291, gathered on Ruetli Meadow in Uri Canton and took a solemn oath to unite against foreign oppression and form a free and democratic, egalitarian and independent state.

"That is false," Meyer said. "It is not a question of interpretation but demonstrably false." He said that few historians would dispute the mythical character of the founding history. But he said there was "a certain lag" in transmitting the results of historical research to school administrators, textbooks, and above all politicians, who dispense "edifying speeches" on patriotic occasions.

In the version accepted by most historians, no Hapsburg oppressors lived in central Switzerland in the 13th century, nor was there an uprising. What patriotic writers described as foreigners' castles were manor houses owned by Swiss. They were not attacked but gradually abandoned for the same reason that made the Hapsburgs attach little importance to their Swiss holdings — the poverty and unproductivity of central Switzerland.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

At the end of January a team of European experts led by Leandro Burgay of Italy played a challenge match against a team of American internationalists to decide whose methods over an opening bid of one no trump were superior. The match proved little about the respective systems, but it did lead Eric Rodwell to the conclusion that most experts interefered with an enemy no trump more often than was wise and a computer simulation supported this observation. Here's a case in point.

West's two club overcall showed at least 10 cards in any two suits. North's three-club cue-bid probed for a 4-4 major fit. After South's denial of a four-card major, three no trump became the final contract.

Declarer allowed the queen of spades to hold the first trick, then won the continuation. A diamond to the queen won and West captured the continuation of the jack with the ace. Declarer's last spade stopper was now forced out. Next came the crucial play—declarer cashed the king of diamonds and East's discard of a heart made the hand an open book.

East was marked with the club length, so declarer led a club to the ace and continued with the jack, covered by the queen and taken by the king. The winning club was cashed and East was thrown in with the remaining club. Declarer ran the forced heart return to the queen and nine tricks rolled home.

Left alone, declarer would surely have gone wrong. To start with the technically correct play in clubs is to cash the king and then finesse, to protect against four cards in the suit with West.

Actress Shannen Doherty files to end stormy 6-month marriage

LOS ANGELES — Actress Shannen Doherty filed for divorce Thursday, citing irreconcilable differences as the reason for ending her stormy 6-month marriage to Ashley Hamilton.

Actress Shannen Doherty cites irreconcilable differences.

The star of "Beverly Hills, 90210" married the son of actor George Hamilton on Sept 24, 1993, weeks after they met. Doherty, 22, and Hamilton, 19, separated on Feb. 23, according to the divorce petition Doherty filed in Superior Court.

The actress, who plays bratty Brenda Walsh on the popular Fox TV series, has also been well known for her problems off the set, including disputes with her show's producers and a nightclub fight with another woman.

Hamilton said last month the two were having problems.

"It's very hard for us to try and communicate right now because there's a lot of feelings and anger there," he told the syndicated television show "ENQ: Secrets of the National Enquirer."

"But I do love her. The bottom line is I really do love her and I'll always love her. I wouldn't marry anyone else," he said.

NEW YORK — The daughter Loretta Young insists she adopted reignites some old gossip in a new book, claiming her mother is her biological mother and her father is Clark Gable.

It was 1935. Starlet and star met during the making of "Call of the Wild" and had a short-lived affair, Judy Lewis said in the book coming out next week.

Gable was married. Miss Young was Roman Catholic. She found out she was pregnant soon after the movie was finished, said Lewis, a therapist and family counselor in Los Angeles.

"The situation in which they found themselves in 1935 would not have posed such a problem in the Hollywood of today," she wrote in "Uncommon Knowledge."

"But their story was played out in a far more moralistic time and they dealt with what happened in the only way that they felt was open to them. Unfortunately, their decision was not without cost to their child."

Gable, who died in 1960, was married to Ria Langham in 1935. He started seeing Carole Lombard in mid-1936 and the two later married. Miss Young, 81, was single in 1935 and married costume designer Jean Louis last year.

Miss Young's spokesman, Joel Brokaw, said Thursday she continues to treat as a rumor claims that the 58-year-old Lewis was her biological child from a liaison with Gable.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Gospel music's Dove Awards will be a little bit country this year.

Wynonna, who dropped her last name, Judd, is scheduled to perform April 28 on the awards show. The reason, said the Gospel Music Association, is that country music is gaining popularity in the Christian music community.

Amy Grant, Michael W. Smith, Steven Curtis Chapman, DC TALK, Twila Paris and 4HIM are among the gospel artists to perform on the annual program from the Grand Ole Opry House.

The show will be televised live on cable TV's The Family Channel.

MELBOURNE, Australia — Evander Holyfield, John McEnroe and Carl Lewis are promoting a popular Down Under sport: Australian Rules football.

The three, with basketball's Hakeem Olajuwon and others, are featured in new television spots screened Wednesday in Australia.

The commercials highlight the athletic skills of Australian Rules players and the spectacle of the ultra-physical game that requires an amalgam of soccer, rugby and Gaelic football skills.

The stars express amazement at the feats of the Australian footballers with the line: "I'd like to see that."

McEnroe, known for his fiery outbursts, says: "These guys spit . . . (at) the umpire and get away with it. I'd like to see that."

The sport is televised around the world but played only in Australia, where games draw crowds of up to 100,000.

NEW YORK — It was rumored, whispered and now confirmed. The Piano Man and the Rocket Man will tour together.

Billy Joel and Elton John announced plans Wednesday for the "Face to Face" tour that will kick off July 8 in Philadelphia.

"I've wanted to work with Elton for a long time and now it has finally come together for us," Joel said in a statement. "It should be a fantastic show for the audience and great fun for both of us."

John's pretty worked up about it as well.

"I'm looking forward to playing, singing and having a blast!" he said.

They plan to open each show together, performing acoustically. Then each will do a set with their respective bands. The finale will feature both artists and their bands performing together.

Amendment would fight alien crime

As the discussion in the U.S. House centers on ways to crack down on the epidemic of crime now plaguing the nation, an area that should not be overlooked are the crimes being committed by illegal aliens. That category of crimes is serious and growing.

In fact, Congressman Lamar Smith, who represents Midland, recently cited statistics showing that nationwide about one out of every four federal prisoners is a foreigner. And in Texas, 42 percent of federal prisoners are foreigners! To make matters worse the number of such prisoners has more than doubled since 1988 and continues to rise.

That adds up to one big headache for the United States — from the standpoint of overcrowded prisons, to the concern over controlling the domestic crime problem, to the demands it places on our criminal justice system, etc.

The crimes being committed by illegal aliens are not white-collar crimes or "victimless" crimes. Primarily they are serious offenses such as dealing in illegal drugs. A study from Los Angeles County recently noted that once the criminals are released from jail, more than 40 percent were re-arrested within a year.

To attack the problem of illegal alien criminals, Smith, who serves on the committees on Crime and Immigration of the House Judiciary Committee, has offered an amendment to the crime bill that would:

- Expedite the process of deporting criminal aliens who are not permanent residents or green card holders. It would also increase the penalties for deportees who fail to leave or who re-enter the country after expulsion.
- Expand the definition of "aggravated felony" to include murder, drug trafficking, money-laundering, kidnaping for ransom, child pornography and commercial alien smuggling. For those offenses, aliens could be deported.
- Grant wiretap authority to the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) to combat alien smuggling.
- Stipulate that no federal, state or local government agency that receives funding under the crime bill be allowed to withhold information from the INS.

Ironically, Democrats in the House have already tried to block Smith's common sense bill in the House Rules Committee, which decides what legislation is allowed on the floor. Smith's proposals are reasonable and critical if the crime bill is truly to address the crime wave the nation is experiencing.

The Democratic leadership in the House should embrace the Smith amendment to the crime bill. It provides necessary changes for law enforcement needed to combat the rising tide of crime being committed by illegal aliens in this country.

JACK ANDERSON

Senator is no help to NASA whistleblower

WASHINGTON — Margaret Barnes has never met Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, but a recent experience with his office left her wondering if the former Apollo astronaut really does have the right stuff.

Anderson

Barnes thought Glenn would be the perfect person to contact with allegations against her boss, NASA Inspector Gen. Bill Colvin. As chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, Glenn has carved out an impeccable reputation of protecting whistleblowers like Barnes, who risk their jobs to reveal government malfeasance.

In a Sept. 2, 1993, confidential letter to Glenn, Barnes alleged, among other things, that women in NASA's inspectors general office are treated like "second-class citizens." Barnes isn't the first woman to make such a complaint. Currently, the office has 11 outstanding sexual discrimination or harassment complaints, including three by Barnes, NASA sources have told us.

Three weeks after sending her confidential letter to Glenn, Barnes was shocked to find a copy of it sitting on Colvin's conference table when she and her supervisor, Diane Hordan, were called into his office. For the next two and a half hours, Colvin proceeded to "berate" Barnes regarding the contents of her letter, according to Hordan.

"Colvin was just ranting and raving at her the whole time," says Hordan. "He was trying to intimidate her into recanting her allegations." The other two people in the room, Colvin and one of his deputies, refused to comment on the meeting.

While the experience was certainly unsettling for Barnes, it also raises questions about Glenn's office, which Barnes believes is responsible for leaking the letter to Colvin. Since Glenn's office was the only one to receive a copy of the letter, she sees no other way it could have gotten back to Colvin.

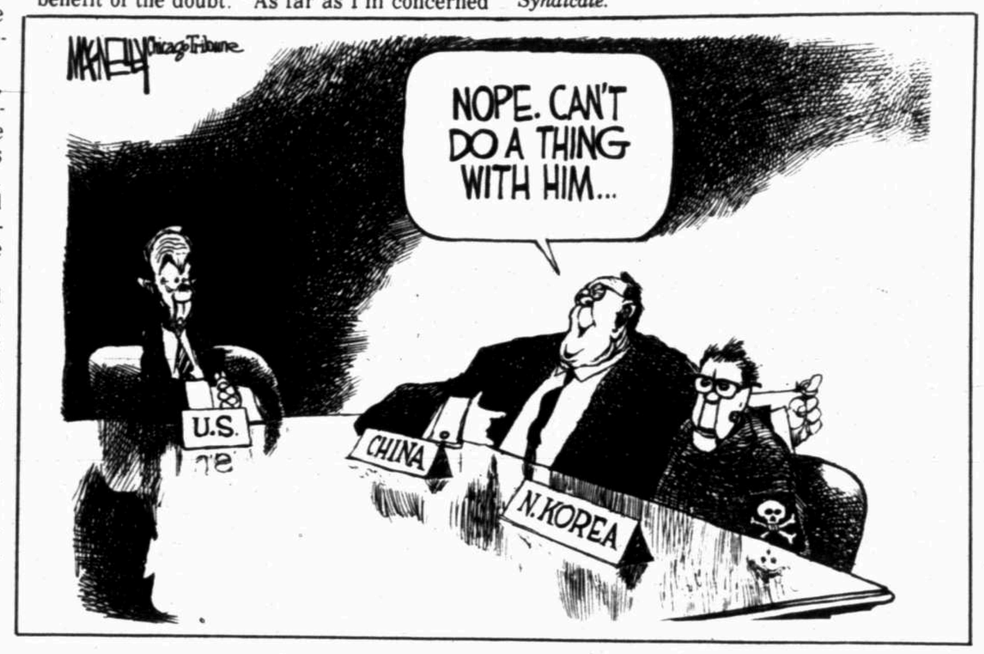

Glenn is taking the issue seriously, and says his staff is conducting an internal investigation into the source of the leak.

"Whether there was a breach of confidentiality over here is something I'm very concerned about," Glenn told our associate Ed Henry. "We're just trying to find out whether it was leaked out of here... whether her confidentiality was broken over here."

So far, however, Glenn is giving his staff the benefit of the doubt. "As far as I'm concerned it was not leaked from here," Glenn said. "Betty Ann (Soifer, his staff counsel) tells me she didn't do it, and Colvin says he got it from someone within NASA. I just have to take that at face value and that's that.... I have to take Colvin on his word on that and I assume that that's correct."

Glenn did leave himself some wiggle room when asked why his staff was still investigating the matter. "I wanted to find out if there was a leak here, either intentionally or in an inadvertent manner," Glenn said. "Maybe it was left around here and someone picked it up and faxed it over to NASA."

Voting rights to be trouble for South Africa

I quit writing about South Africa some years ago because it is of marginal interest to Americans, but you ought to know that after the "first democratic" election there will more trouble, not less, in that unhappy country.

Reese

Apartheid, or racial segregation, while it gave Americans a chance to be self-righteous on the cheap, never was the main problem South Africans face. Martha Washington wasn't allowed to vote even for her husband, George, but she had a pretty good life anyway.

Too many quacks equate voting with a free society and create the false impression that merely holding an election will solve all the problems of a country. But voting is just a way to pick politicians. It's a sort of negative good. It's bad if you aren't allowed to vote, but once you can vote, it may not make all that much difference in your life.

The major problems facing South Africa have nothing to do with apartheid and voting or not voting. Abolishing apartheid and holding an all-race election will not solve them. Those major problems are way too many people for far too few resources, massive illiteracy, poor or nonexistent education for the majority and bitter tribal differences. The day after the election, the unemployed will still be unemployed; the landless, still landless; the hungry, still hungry; the ignorant, still ignorant.

My guess is that South Africa will have a one-man one-vote election one time, suffer an economic collapse, get saddled with a dictatorship and fight a civil war. Self-righteous Americans who enjoyed commiserating with South Africans because they couldn't vote can soon commiserate with them for being killed in droves.

The African National Congress, the likely election winner, is not a hotbed of libertarians. In fact, for years it was dominated by and is still heavily infested with members of the South African Communist Party. As you know, communists share a funny quirk. Out of power, they're for democracy; in power, they think it stinks.

Nor did Nelson Mandela become famous for writing Jeffersonian tracts on the rights of man. He became famous as the leader of the terrorist arm of the ANC. I think that once Mandela is elected president, his interest in elections will drop to zero. And since Mandela and most of the ANC leadership are of the Xhosa tribe, the Zulu tribe will probably oppose their rule.

It's a sad scenario and I take no pleasure in it. Nor do I offer it as a backhanded defense of apartheid, which is indefensible and should never have been instituted in the first place.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

City Council acts for welfare of community

I continue to read with a great deal of interest about the negative reaction of some folks to the Erskines' situation, and how misguided and calloused the council was in handling the entire matter. Could it be that emotion is getting the upper hand here? I for one believe the council was doing their job and doing it correctly. They should be commended for standing to fundamental principles that are in short supply these days.

Let's examine some facts of this case. Number one, the area around the Erskines' place is zoned for residential habitation — not for a sanctuary or a rehab center for wildlife. Second, an association derived from outside the city shouldn't be used to influence the operation of such a facility.

Let's further examine what might prevail if the council had acquiesced and yielded to continued use of the area for a wildlife habitat. Such action would surely set a precedent for any future deviation from established ordinances.

The Erskines are to be commended for their dedication of time and service for the preservation of wildlife within the current environment of surviving with man where natural habitats continue to shrink.

On the other hand the council should be commended too for acting in a responsible manner to sustain the established ordinances for which they were obligated to do. Obviously this decision was made taking into consideration the general welfare of the entire community.

Privatization of Postal Service is impractical

Once again there is a proposed postal rate increase (from .29 to .32) and once again the cry is heard to "privatize" the U.S. Postal Service.

Privatization or the dissolution of the first class monopoly is not only impractical but would probably bring chaos to our society.

Let's think this through.

Unlike the situation with the old "Ma Bell" and the airline industry, there is no other company that would be willing to invest the needed capital or have the expertise to compete with the Postal Service and offer comparable service.

The U.S. Postal Service, which is self-sustaining (no tax subsidies), has over 40,000 offices in various locations nationwide with 686,000 employees.

Collecting, processing (with sophisticated sortation equipment) and delivering about 550 million pieces of mail each day, the Postal Service reaches 120 million household and business addresses.

The Postal Inspection Service, the oldest law enforcement agency in the country, not only works to keep your mail secure, but works to protect you from mail fraud and theft.

True, it is not perfect, no organization is, but a reformation is taking place and if it is allowed to continue the Postal Service could become a lean, efficient service organization.

For .32 a stamp, it would still be the lowest priced stamp in the industrialized world.

Cost of U.S. postage remains top bargain

Much has been written lately about the Postal Service's pending request for a postage rate increase. Although price increases are never well received, I would like to share with your readers three reasons why the increase scheduled for 1995 will be easier to accept than most.

First of all, if new rates take effect in 1995, it will mark the longest period of time between rate increases in Postal Service history. Higher rates last went into effect in April 1991. At that time, Operation Desert Storm was winding down, Johnny Carson was doing "The Tonight Show," and Michael Jordan had yet to win an NBA Championship ring. The point is, while everything else has changed, postal employees have done an excellent job of keeping rates stable.

Customers tell us they don't like to see price increases, but if rates must go up, they must be kept reasonable. That's what we intend to do.

Finally, the United States Postal Service has worked hard to meet the future needs of our customers. During the past three years we have improved and updated our mail processing operations, slimmed-down our workforce and introduced more products and services than ever before. Record mail volume, despite E-mail and fax machines, has shown we can do more for our customers with less.

We're proud of the fact that the cost of American postage remains a world-class bargain and we'll continue to work hard to keep our prices one of the lowest in the industrialized world.

Schindler wasn't only one to rescue Jews from death camps

By John Curran
Associated Press

BOSTON — Sempo Sugihara looked out his window one morning in July 1940 and saw hordes of desperate Jews pressing up against the gate of the Japanese consulate he ran in Kaunus, Lithuania.

An unassuming diplomat, Sugihara defied orders and issued transit visas that saved about 6,000 Jews from Nazi death camps during World War II.

Then there was a Dutch resistance fighter whose underground railroad saved about 1,000 Jews; a Swedish diplomat who helped tens of thousands of Hungarian Jews; and a Danish underground that allowed about 7,000 Jews to escape Nazis.

Oskar Schindler, who is depicted in Steven Spielberg's film "Schindler's List," has gotten most of the attention recently as a savior of 1,100 Polish Jews.

Nonetheless, other heroes also are being recognized as Jews worldwide prepare for Yom Hashoa on Wednesday, the international day of remembrance for the Holocaust.

"There's no question that Steven Spielberg put the whole concept of rescue in the forefront," said Deanne Stone, a consultant organizing an exhibit honoring former Dutch Army Capt. John Henry Weidner at tiny Atlantic Union College in Lancaster.

Weidner was in Paris in 1940 when the Nazis invaded Holland. He tried fleeing to England but was detained in Lyons, France.

With about 300 friends and supporters, he developed an underground network for saving Jews and other refugees. The network ran from Holland through Belgium, France and Andorra to Spain, and through France to Switzerland.

The "Dutch-Paris Line" saved an estimated 1,000 Jews and others in 1943. Weidner was captured twice and tortured, but escaped both times.

He was decorated by President Truman and honored at the opening last year of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C. Weidner, now 82, lives in Monterey Park, Calif.

"He was a genuine spiritual human being who saw something and couldn't stand by. To the people he rescued, it was every bit as dramatic as the Schindler's stuff," Stone said.

The most well-known of the saviors probably was Raoul Wallenberg, the Swedish diplomat. He was dispatched to Budapest, where he issued Swedish passports to thousands of Hungarian Jews. The passports gave them protection from the Nazis.

In the final days before the liberation of Budapest, Wallenberg also persuaded Nazis to cancel plans to kill 70,000 Jews still living in the city's ghetto. Wallenberg was arrested by the Soviets on spy charges in 1945 and was never seen again.

In Lithuania, Sugihara issued visas to doomed Jews right up to the moment he was shipped by train to Berlin in August 1940 by the Soviets, who annexed Lithuania.

"He saw little children wallowing in mud," said Jewish historian Hillel Levine of Boston University, who is writing a book about him.

"He looked into his own living room at his own wife and children, and instead of doing what you or I would do, which is to worry about them first, he said to himself, 'I can't let those children be killed,' " Levine said.

The visas issued by Sugihara allowed the Jews to travel through the Soviet Union en route to the Far East.

Public Notice

On February 22, 1994, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company ("Southwestern Bell" or "Company") filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("Commission") to restructure the Company's Local Transport and Directory Transport categories of its Switched Access Service. This matter has been assigned to Docket No. 12784. The tariff sheets in Southwestern Bell's application, if approved, will bring the Company's intrastate Access Service Tariff into structural parity with the Company's interstate Tariff No. 73 for Local Transport. Southwestern Bell's companion interstate tariff became effective on January 1, 1994.

The transport rate elements provide for the transmission facilities between the cutomer's premises and the end office switch(es) where the customer's traffic is switched to originate or terminate the customer's communications.

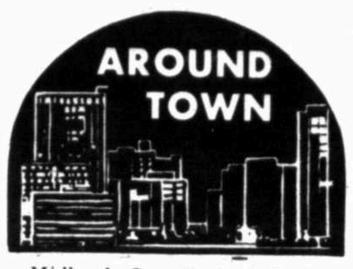

Southwestern Bell proposes to implement the revised tariffs on a revenue neutral basis. Although the proposed tariff changes will affect all customers subscribing to Switched Access Service, the Local Transport and Directory Transport categories of Southwestern Bell's Switched Access Service is primarily for interexchange carriers. If approved, this application will result in an increase in Southwestern Bell's revenues of approximately $1682.00 during the first year. Southwestern Bell proposes that the changes be effective on December 1, 1994.

Persons who wish to intervene in or comment upon these proceedings should notify the commission as soon as possible, as an intervention deadline will be imposed. A request to intervene or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission's Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 for text telephone. The deadline for intervention in the proceeding is May 6, 1994.

FAMILY MATTERS

Adult children still feel effect of parents' divorce

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I am writing you on behalf of my husband. Ours is a second marriage for both of us. The problem is that he has two grown (or almost grown) children, a son, 26, and a daughter, 22. The daughter is still in college. She has more fun than anything and is on her fourth or fifth major. I don't think she has any intention of graduating as long as her father will pay for her to go to school. The only time that she calls him is when she needs more money or is in trouble at school She doesn't have a job, she's just a "full-time student" and he pays for everything.

May

My husband has tried to get her to come and visit us but she says she will, and then doesn't show up. She doesn't call or anything, she just doesn't come. The only time that she has come to our house was last summer when she wanted a new car and came and begged him for one. He bought her a nice used car that didn't make her very happy, but she "accepted" it. We haven't seen her since.

My husband's son makes no effort to visit us or invite us to visit him. He is married, and a family friend told my husband that they are expecting their first child sometime this year. My husband calls him on his birthday and special occasions, but the conversations are always very short. He never calls his father on his birthday or any holiday. My husband paid all of his college expenses plus bought him a new car when he graduated. After all of that, he still won't have anything to do with him.

I think that both of his children are acting like spoiled brats, but it still hurts my husband's feelings. He is very upset that they don't or won't call him. I tell him that he should just stop trying to contact them. I think they have made it very clear that they don't want to have anything to do with him. I'm writing you because he still wants to "have a family." He thinks they haven't forgiven him for divorcing their mother over 12 years ago. From what I understand, she really fought the divorce and I think that she poisoned the kids against him. In any event, what can or should he do about this? It breaks my heart to see him so upset on every holiday or special family time.
TIRED OF IT ALL

DEAR TIRED: Unfortunately, it takes "two to tango." Seems to have been a lot of hurt on both sides of the fence. I encourage your husband to accept the fact that, if he wants to see his adult children, he is going to have to continue to court them. In reality, they have something that he wants, but he apparently has little that they want.

He may want to develop a specific strategy for each of his children. In his daughter's case, he may wish to first insist that she meet with him to discuss her education, establishing both grade performance guidelines and time limits on his continuing support. He can contact her via telephone or in writing on a scheduled basis as well as for all special occasion — her birthday, holidays, etc.

Your husband may wish to establish a similar pattern for his son — initiating contact with him on a scheduled basis. The principle is the same — provide personal contact but no money. Keep gifts simple but selected for them specifically, like a special book. Given the anticipated birth of his grandchild, I encourage your husband to call and congratulate his son and his wife. He may want to offer to help when the baby is born or when he or she comes home.

This is a process of trying to overcome yet another effect of destructive divorces. Dealing with the pain is a process, not a single event. I encourage your husband to continue trying to maintain a relationship with his children — it usually does work eventually.

THE FOLLOWING SUGGESTIONS FOR "THINGS THAT PARENTS CAN DO INSTEAD OF HITTING THEIR CHILDREN" ARE OFFERED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

- Take time to ask yourself what you want and/or need.
- Rip up old newspapers or magazines and throw them about. Keep a supply handy for this purpose.
- Stomp out of the house and walk briskly until your anger dissipates. Only do this if someone else is in the house so your babies are not left alone.
- Punch a bean bag chair.
- Say "I'm going to scream for X number of minutes." Then do it. Make angry sounds but eliminate words that might hurt others.
- Open the linen closet door, whip the towels out and throw them across the room. Don't throw them at anybody.
- Do the same with dirty laundry.

Dying of AIDS, man finds what makes life good

By Mary Rogers
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Jeffrey Sansaver says he's ready.

Everything is in order. All his legal papers are in a plastic bag in the freezer, along with a note inviting the finder to have a Popsicle. His tombstone will be delivered any day now. He says he'll use it as a coffee table on the patio. Friends have only to fill in the date of his death.

If Sansaver seems cavalier about his mortality, he's had plenty of time to think about it. Once successful in business and an active volunteer, he is now often too sick to get out of the big four-poster bed that he moved into the living room next to the fireplace. He spends hours alone in a tiny duplex on Fort Worth's west side, preparing for the inevitable.

He knows what he wants: to die at home — alone.

Sansaver, 41, is one of a reported 1,483 people in Tarrant County dying of AIDS, according to figures provided by the Fort Worth/Tarrant County Health Departments. Almost 15,000 county residents are estimated by that office to be infected with HIV, the virus that leads to AIDS.

"I used to stay with people who were dying. I'd hold their hands and sometimes walk with them right into the light," Sansaver said. "But I don't do that any more. I'm traveling that road myself now."

HE WAS quick to say the journey has been full of surprises.

"I've grown up. I've learned to love myself," he said. "And now I can accept that other people love me too. Before AIDS, I couldn't do that."

It is this startling power of love that has been his biggest revelation.

"I didn't know that love would be the hook that makes me want to stay in this world," he said. "That's a surprise. I never thought I'd be the one to miss these people — these people that I love."

It is a new perspective. Once Sansaver was all too eager to leave this life.

He hit rock bottom in 1988. A lengthy battle with depression and nagging illnesses left him unable to work. He lost his home to foreclosure. And on the day sheriff's deputies pitched his belongings onto the street, he learned he had full-blown AIDS.

It was too much.

Sansaver bought a revolver, checked into a motel and lay through the night with the gun barrel to his head. But daylight brought a new resolve. He kept the gun, but set aside his determination to end his life.

He looked for help, first from a friend who let him move into a spare room, and then from the AIDS Outreach Center. He got counseling for the depression, and then he threw himself into volunteer work at the center.

He ran errands, took out the trash, emptied ashtrays ... anything to keep active and out of bed. He joined a support group and talked openly about having AIDS to anyone who'd listen.

BUT IT WAS not easy to go to the county hospital for help. Once successful in the interior design industry, Sansaver now lives on Social Security. He lost his insurance along with his job and home, and was forced to learn to work the system.

"I'd always had plenty of money," he said. "Suddenly, I didn't have anything. It was humiliating to go sit in that hallway with all those indigent people and wait for help."

But he did go, fighting his prejudices and swallowing his pride with each visit.

"I'd look at all those barflies, queens and drug addicts and I'd think, 'I don't fit here.' I had to work through those feelings. It was hard, but I started talking to those people and realized we had the same problems. I had to realize that I was being snobbish," he said.

With each passing month; Sansaver grew stronger emotionally. One day the leader of a support group he attended asked him to help with the care of a man dying of AIDS.

It was a task that he would repeat again and again.

"A lot of people have died more peacefully because Jeffrey was there," said Rob Van Heyningen, who lost his lover to AIDS a few years ago.

Sansaver was there; he bathed the dying man's fevered face, whispered words of encouragement, and calmed the survivors, Van Heyningen said.

An articulate man with thinning red hair and gaunt face, Sansaver sometimes struggled for words and took deep breaths to calm his voice as he recalled those vigils. He often shifted his thin, 6-foot, 2-inch frame on the squeaking porch glider in his sitting room.

"SOME PEOPLE don't need for you to go very far," he said. "Others want you to walk them right into the light."

He ran a long finger over a framed snapshot. It is one of many such pictures displayed about the stylish duplex apartment. He named each man pictured and told short stories about each one. He talked about their mothers and their sisters, their lovers and their houses.

He remembered the days they died, the last words, the last looks, the rituals followed by those left behind: salt sprinkled in the corners of the room, the lighting of incense, a beautiful cashmere throw placed over the body.

Sansaver said he was trying to learn how best to die himself.

"You know, I didn't think that was what I was doing at all. But I really was trying to find the best way to die," he said.

What he said he found was love.

Bitterness had long simmered in Sansaver's large family.

"I always felt like I'd been dropped down the wrong chimney. We were always banging our heads against each other's walls," he said of a childhood spent in Montana with a mother who married and divorced several times.

Once she left Sansaver and one of his brothers at an orphanage for more than a year while she had another child and struggled to make ends meet.

As a small boy, Sansaver turned to the Mormon church for help.

"I was just a little kid, but I decided I was going to raise myself a Mormon," he said.

'I've grown up. I've learned to love myself. And now I can accept that other people love me too. Before AIDS, I couldn't do that. I didn't know that love would be the hook that makes me want to stay in this world. That's a surprise. I never thought I'd be the one to miss these people — these people that I love.'

— Jeffrey Sansaver
AIDS victim

While a student at Brigham Young University, he tried to deny his homosexuality, went to therapy and even flirted with the notion of marrying. But by the end of his junior year, he admitted that he was gay.

AND BECAUSE he is gay, no one was surprised when AIDS was diagnosed. But the family was stunned when his younger brother, Ricky, a heterosexual with two small children, was stricken by the disease.

Sansaver went home to help care for Ricky, and connected with his family in a powerful way.

"I never knew there was this well of family love and devotion waiting for me," he said. "Now I want to talk to my sister Shelley all the time. She's my best friend. It hurts to be this far away."

Ricky died last year, and Sansaver was devastated. Theatrical by nature, he draped the front of his house with bolts of black satin. He made a black wreath and decorated it with black roses.

"It looked like Abraham Lincoln had died here," said Sansaver, smiling at the memory. "It was excessive. But I needed to grieve and I needed to mourn and I needed to have some sort of spectacle. I wanted people to know I was in pain and that I'd lost someone I really loved."

Neighbors offered their condolences. One brought a loaf of home-baked bread. Some stayed to talk. Sansaver felt a part of the neighborhood.

More comfortable and at peace than perhaps at any time in his life, Sansaver doesn't want to die now. But he's ready.

"I think that death is a kind of process," he said. "We all can go across, but some people have a thick veil. It's like velvet. They don't know they see the other side. My veil is gossamer. I can see the other side and I can smell the other side and I can feel the other side."

He just hasn't found the best way to step across, he said.

DEAR ABBY

Husband wants to rev up wife's sex drive

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I went together throughout college. We have been married 12 years and have three children, ages 5, 7 and 9. Now that we are older (we are both in our 30s), my sex drive seems to be increasing, and my wife's sex drive is definitely decreasing. We are both in good health and hold down full-time jobs, but on a scale of 1 to 10, our sex life would probably be a 2 (for twice a month).

Van Buren

We discussed the problem and ended up going to a marriage counselor. The counselor suggested that I look for other things in my life for satisfaction. I took his advice, found a new hobby, took up a sport and spent more time with the children. This was very rewarding, but I would still like a more romantic relationship with my wife.

Please don't suggest flowers, candy, etc., because I have tried these things with little success. (I also had an affair, and although the immediate gratification was exciting, the guilt that followed was terrible.)

Any positive suggestions you can offer would be welcome. Right now I am ... FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Perhaps holding down a full-time job and mothering three pre-teen children has left your wife with little energy for anything else. Have you considered giving her a day off now and then, and helping with the housework and the children? It's also possible that some short vacations without the children could rekindle your sex life.

Another thought: Make an appointment for the two of you to see a licensed sex therapist. You both have too much invested in this marriage to let it wither.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Longtime Reader" who was upset by bragging newsletters tucked inside Christmas cards.

She should send her own letter in return. There's an easy solution, and here is an example, guaranteed to stop 99 percent of the braggers:

"We have had a busy year. My husband had to work so many hours overtime that he fell asleep at the wheel and totaled our car. Our 12-year-old son wrecked his bicycle and broke his leg. Our 15-year-old daughter may or may not be pregnant; we are waiting for the test results.

"My mother had cancer surgery on Thanksgiving, so we didn't have time for a turkey dinner. My dad died last June and we are still paying for his funeral. Last month, we had a tornado and our washing machine and garage were blown into the next county. Our dog was killed.

"Otherwise, we are well and glad to hear all your happy news."

Abby, I've sent a few similar notes, and have not received a bragging newsletter since. — CINDERELLA

DEAR ABBY: What I am about to ask has probably been asked before, but I haven't read about it in a long while.

When a husband and wife get a divorce, what do family members of the husband call the ex-wife? Or vice versa? For instance, I'm divorced and my sister still calls my ex-husband her brother-in-law. My husband had a stepson from a previous marriage; is this stepson still a stepson after a divorce? — JUST WONDERING, SYCAMORE, OHIO

DEAR JUST WONDERING: After a marriage is dissolved, one calls the in-laws "my former brother-in-law, sister-in-law, mother-in-law," etc.

In the case of stepchildren, although it may sound as though one is deliberately expelling him or her from the family, they are properly referred to as "my former stepson" or "my former stepdaughter."

DEAR READERS: Your chuckle for today: A psychiatrist recommended that his patient take a vacation. Heeding his advice, she went on a trip and sent him a postcard that said: "Having a wonderful time. Wish you were here to tell me why."

What teens need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with peers and parents is in "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. Father's support increases child's academic success

By Bill Hendrick
N.Y. Times News Service

It's still mothers who do most of the reading to kids at night and who prod them to do their homework, but adolescents' success in school may depend more on how well they get along with their fathers, a University of Georgia study says.

The research, published in the March issue of the Journal of Family Psychology, found that mothers still do a disproportionate share of child care. But surprisingly, it also found that children who gain the "acceptance" of their fathers make better grades than those not close to their dads, said study author Rex Forehand.

"Our findings suggest that regardless of their degree of involvement, fathers' acceptance of and their closeness to their adolescents is a critical aspect of parenting, but one which has received little attention until now."

Children need the approval, support and encouragement of both parents, he said. But the study indicated that kids who feel their fathers, as well as their mothers, are their friends and allies do better in school than children whose dads don't find time for them.

Forehand and fellow researcher Sarah Nousianen studied 70 adolescents, their parents and teachers. All of the kids lived in two-parent families and were ages 11-17. The researchers asked questions about parenting styles of mothers and fathers, and asked teens how they viewed their parents. They also studied how well-adjusted teens were deemed by teachers and parents.

Teens who were well-adjusted had mothers who accepted them, but who also established a few well-defined rules they insisted kids follow, Forehand said. But the strong link between paternal acceptance and how well adolescents functioned in school demonstrates that fathers play a bigger role than previously thought.

It used to be that fathers would never leave work to go to a PTA meeting or have lunch with kids at school, or even go to ballgames, Forehand said, but kids of dads who do such things are the ones who do best in school.

"Acceptance means giving quality time, not being too critical, being supportive rather than laying down dictums," he said. "It's not acceptance of unacceptable behavior. It's letting them see that you're putting forth more effort. That's the key in these findings."

Although the latest research focused on teens in two-parent households, earlier work showed that even in divorced families, the father's acceptance was critical to a child's feelings of self-worth.

Sexual harassment: Topic causes anxiety

By Patricia Rodriguez
N.Y. Times News Service

Traveling the country to promote her new book on sexual harassment, Celia Morris has not been surprised by the reception she's gotten from some.

Maybe she's been disappointed, but not surprised.

Take the Phoenix woman who called a radio talk show to berate Morris for recounting the stories of female harassment victims. The woman proclaimed derisively that sexual harassment shouldn't be a problem for women: after all, she personally had never faced any workplace harassment that she couldn't handle.

To that, Morris has one rejoinder.

"Why should you HAVE to handle it?" said Morris, author of "Bearing Witness: Sexual Harassment and Beyond — Everywoman's Story" (Little, Brown, $21.95).

No one should, said Morris, answering her own question. But that some people are still willing to downplay the issue of harassment underscores for her the depths of the issue.

"That's when you really understand you're dealing with an area that makes people very anxious," Morris said. "The relationships between men and women are being renegotiated. That scares the men, who are losing power, but it also scares women, who have made their peace with the power arrangement."

A native Texan, Morris also wrote "Storming the Statehouse: Running for Governor with Ann Richards and Dianne Feinstein." She began her latest project inspired by Anita Hill, the University of Oklahoma law professor who came forward with charges of sexual harassment against Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas in 1991.

Hill's charges were eventually discounted by a committee of U.S. legislators, and Thomas was confirmed. However, the episode opened a national dialogue on the subject of workplace harassment, with men and women discussing the issue everywhere from talk shows to the water cooler.

Morris, for instance, had no trouble finding women willing to discuss their stories, although many requested pseudonyms to protect their privacy and prevent retaliation. In all, she interviewed some 150 women; nearly 50 of their stories appear in the book.

The stories run the gamut. Tammy, a blue-collar worker, faced a hostile environment, once being tackled and bitten so hard on her buttocks that she bled; she became so despondent that she eventually attempted suicide.

Nissia was propositioned by the leaders of the nonprofit agency where she worked; when she turned them away, one refused to hand over her paycheck.

Dr. Fran Conley drew national headlines when she resigned from the faculty of Stanford Medical School in protest of the promotion of a colleague who had regularly harassed her and other women.

Some women lost their jobs or left beloved careers because of harassment; others plugged away and outlasted the intimidation. Some filed lawsuits or directly confronted their harassers; others simply accepted the abuse.

But Morris said that the women tended to share two characteristics.

"One, they were startled that men felt entitled to do this to them, and two, they had a sense that it wasn't right," she said.

That sense of fair play, so endemic to Americans, may be the best hope of eliminating harassment; Morris said. She recently spent some time in England, where she heard similar stories from British women. But those women, unlike American women, didn't feel they had a right to justice.

That key difference, plus that so many victims are now gaining their voices, makes Morris cautiously optimistic.

"We're talking about something here that affects everybody. We just have to keep saying, 'Look, we're talking about making things better for men as well as women,'" Morris said. "We just have to keep talking patiently about how much better it will be for men and women when they treat each other more fairly."

Aging not like its image

By Clara G. Herrera
N.Y. Times News Service

They dance. They date. They have sex. They parasail. They're worth billions of dollars, and advertisers are beginning to greet them with open arms because there are more of them every year.

Eager for a chunk of the disposable income in the pockets of the more than 32 million Americans 65 and older, advertisers are finally asking them what they want and how they want it.

Marketers are slowly changing the way they present products to the older crowd by ripping away stereotypes that have long been associated with aging, and are going more for the reality of being senior citizens.

Just last fall, a mail-order catalog especially for older Americans, called Renaissance, debuted, as well as Creative Retirement, a magazine for the active seniors. A year and a half ago, Friends, a magazine published by the National Association of Senior Friends, became available.

"The business community has started to recognize that there's gold in them gray hills," said Thomas Fairchild, associate professor in the Center for Studies in Aging at the University of North Texas in Denton. "Because of the sheer growth of the number of elderly, and that often is defined from a business perspective as 50-plus, they recognize that they have the vast amount of disposable income. Business has gradually had to wake up to the fact that they need to begin to respond to that growing market."

VIRGINIA NEWMAN, a former marketing director for a British toy company, reacted in September. The 32-year-old Connecticut resident released the first issue of her creation, Renaissance: The Catalog for a Lifetime, targeting what she refers to as OPALS, or Older People with Active Life Styles.

"Most of the catalogs out there have that stigma of old age," Newman said. "I wanted to put out a catalog that was hip and contemporary."

As a result, it included one of the catalog's bestsellers, "Sex After Sixty: A Guide for Men and Women for Their Later Years."

Newman's brainchild also includes automatic jar and bottle openers for arthritis sufferers, toys for grandchildren, and a slew of products ranging from gardening tools to hand weights for water exercises. So far, Newman has about 100,000 subscribers.

"This isn't a wheelchair and walker catalog," she said. "It's for staying active, both mentally and physically."

Another reason advertisers are changing their attitudes toward the mature market is their realization that baby boomers soon will be joining the older generation, said Treesa Drury, the advertising standards director for Modern Maturity magazine.

In less than 40 years, people older than 65 will make up about 20 percent of the total population and include the bulk of the baby boomer generation.

"Things are going to have to change when the baby boomers come on board," Drury said. "As the baby boomers get into these different ages, they have changed everything, and they're not going to sit still for being portrayed as sedentary and totally out of it when they've reached their 50s."

MODERN MATURITY, a publication of the American Association of Retired Persons, in 1980 was one of the first magazines to crack old-age stereotypes. When the magazine began accepting advertising, it would not take ads that portrayed aging negatively.

"We didn't take products like laxatives, adult diapers, wheelchairs, canes," Drury said. "Slowly but surely, that began to attract a different class of advertising."

So now, a typical ad for McDonald's in Modern Maturity shows four adults eating breakfast at a table with a caption that reads, "Grandchildren not required." An ad for Cheerios shows an older man water-skiing with a caption that says, "Kids Like This Eat Cheerios."

Slowly, other advertisers began to catch on to what Modern Maturity expected of them and began honing their ads to suit the magazine.

"When we began going back to taking some of those products, we didn't let them emphasize pain," Drury said. "We wanted to see the 'after' pictures, that they (consumers) were happy now that they had taken or used the product."

Instead of showing an older woman with a worried look on her face because of a bladder-control problem, advertisements show a man and a woman on the beach with their arms around one another with the caption, "I'm not afraid to be close anymore."

ONE PROBLEM is that advertisers have their own concept of what being 50-plus is. Just last year, one organization, the Primelife Advisory Network began coaching advertisers in the difference between how they perceive seniors and how they really are, said Frank Conaway, the network's president.

The network, based in Orange, Calif., was created last year as an advocacy group for senior citizens. Members offer advice to advertisers on what may be offensive in their marketing approach.

"A lot of advertisers have misperceptions of the mature market," Conaway said. "For example, one of the myths that we encounter all of the time is they think most people in the mature market are in poor health, so they're all sitting in rocking chairs or in nursing homes."

But only 5 percent of the population 65 and older lives in nursing homes. Since most advertisers are young, they don't understand how to market to someone who isn't close to their age bracket, Conaway said.

"It's like marketing to your grandmother," Conaway said. "You say, 'Well, you know my grandmother's 78. I've got my own perception of what she is and what she does and that's not very young, active or involved.'"

But how advertisers have seen older consumers and how the consumers see themselves are different. Active people 65 and older generally don't think of themselves as old.

"When you ask people in their 70s and 80s what is 'old,' it always is anywhere from 10 to 15 years beyond where they currently are," said Drury, 56.

MARKETING TOWARD senior citizens comes in all forms, and the proof is in a book tentatively called "Smokey Acres." The plot revolves around romance in a retirement community, according to authors Fred and Alice Lee.

The Lees, who live in the Dallas suburb of Richardson and are in their early 70s, wrote "A Field Guide to Retirement" about two years ago and have a book due out in August called "The 50 Best Retirement Communities in America." With the subject of their next book, they're tackling new territory.

They decided to write a romance novel after talking to people who live in retirement communities in 31 states. They pieced together different romantic realities they had heard of and threw in a bit of imagination.

"It ends up with a love-at-any-age kind of thing," Fred Lee said.

Romance after 50 is a hot topic. Studies show that healthy adults can maintain an active sex life well into their 90s.

According to a brochure put out by AARP called "How to Advertise to Maturity," one of the key lessons that advertisers must learn is not to take the "romance out of life."

With the kids grown, the pressures from a job gone and more free time, there's "never been more time for romance," reads the brochure.

The question of dating and meeting new people is a big issue for older adults, said Anita Greenwood, publisher of Friends, a magazine put out by the National Association of Senior Friends.

"They want information on grief, dating and relationships. That comes up over and over again," Greenwood said.

FRIENDS, BASED in Louisville, Ky., puts together agendas on volunteer services, meeting friends, getting discounts, consumer information and health care, according to the regions where their members live, Greenwood said.

"Our goal is to help people over the age of 50 to lead the happiest and healthiest life possible," she said. "Seniors are very demanding, they're very quality-driven and they're very value-driven."

Many senior citizens are taking advantage of the surge of different programs, discounts and products that have become available to them in recent years.

Hidden loot at library stunt elicits reaction

By Linda Leavell
Associated Press

DALLAS — More funding, not gimmicks, is what libraries desperately need, officials said Thursday in the wake of a stunt that sent money-hungry radio station listeners rampaging through a Fort Worth facility.

"Funding is a lot more important than patronage," said Michael Clark, a spokesman for the Texas State Library. "Libraries are not going begging for people."

Officials of radio station KYNG, which calls itself "Young Country," have apologized for the promotional stunt and promised to cover damages. Hundreds of people stormed the downtown library late Tuesday, tossing more than 3,000 books to the floor after a disc jockey told listeners that the station had planted money there.

The disc jockey later said he thought the promotion would be a good way to get people to visit the library.

Circulation of library materials and circulation of materials per capita — which are two ways to measure library usage — have increased between 1989 and 1992, according to recently released figures from the Texas State Library.

Per capita local government spending has grown from a little over $6 in 1982 to a little over $10 in 1992.

Keith Swigger, dean of the School of Library and Information Studies at Texas Woman's University, said although per capita funding has increased, the cost of materials has skyrocketed.

"So that's the funding crisis," he said.

Local officials often propose cutting library, parks and other services they consider "non-essential" during tight fiscal times, experts said. And that's when the facilities are needed most.

"Nationwide, when times are bad more and more people turn to the public library for job information, for family entertainment, and all the other things that go along with a poor economic climate," said Pat Woodrum, president of the Public Library Association.

Libraries that get the majority of their funding from local governments are facing budget cuts, particularly in the metropolitan areas and on the east and west coasts, Ms. Woodrum said.

California is a prime example, she said. According to the California State Librarian's report for fall 1993, public libraries have reduced public service hours by 14 percent, closed 25 facilities and cut library staff by 11 percent.

Ms. Woodrum, who is executive director of the Tulsa City-County Library System, said 95 percent of her Oklahoma library system's funding comes from property taxes, which tends to be "one of the most stable ways of financing public libraries that I have seen."

In Texas, 7 percent of the money spent on public libraries comes from federal and state sources, or $13 million.

Perot wants letters from sick Gulf War veterans

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas billionaire Ross Perot wants sick Gulf War veterans to write him so he can set up a directory and appeal to the nation's doctors to treat them at little or no cost, an employee said.

Perot worker Mark Blahnik said Wednesday that Perot has directed him to set up a database at his Dallas office that eventually will include names, addresses and telephone numbers of soldiers who have been suffering from mysterious ailments.

"The wheels have just now been set in motion," Blahnik, who has been working on the project, told The Dallas Morning News. "I don't know what he ultimately has planned, but he is very serious about helping these people."

Perot's track record in helping military personnel makes him a natural for this project, Blahnik said.

Perot once led his own investigation into the whereabouts of U.S. soldiers declared missing after the Vietnam War.

Earlier, Perot pledged money for treatment and research to help thousands of ill Gulf War veterans. He made the promise during a speech to the American College of Cardiologists in Atlanta and during an appearance on the "Larry King Live" television show.

Many Gulf War veterans have complained of unexplained health problems, including memory loss, fatigue, headaches, skin rashes and aching joints.

The military and Department of Veterans Affairs say they aren't sure what is causing the ailments.

Some veterans, including several from Texas, say their maladies resulted from chemical attacks during the war. Some of these veterans have reported that family members are showing similar symptoms, and that children born since the war had birth defects.

Betty Zuspann, national director of the Desert Storm Veterans Coalition, which represents ailing Gulf War veterans, said she is "thrilled" that Perot has offered aid to a cause she undertook three years ago after her husband, Gary, returned from the war with mysterious illnesses.

Firms sell fake auto insurance to Dallas, San Antonio drivers

DALLAS (AP) — About 3,000 drivers in Dallas and San Antonio have been defrauded of at least $130,000 from companies that sold bogus insurance policies, state Insurance Commissioner Robert Hunter said.

Hunter said Wednesday that agents for Southwestern County Mutual Insurance Co. and SCM Insurance Co. sold the fake insurance policies. Neither company is licensed to do business in Texas.

The policies were sold through the Dallas and San Antonio offices of Able Insurance Agency, which was licensed by the state. The agency's owner, Massoud Monshizadeh, surrendered his license this week after the Texas Department of Insurance said it would seek its revocation, insurance officials said.

Monshizadeh could not be reached at his home or office Thursday by The Associated Press.

A consumer complaint about poor service on a claim prompted the insurance department's fraud unit to begin investigating the insurance companies.

The fraud unit found that the companies gave the appearance of legitimacy by using an Austin mail drop and a toll-free telephone number.

"Consumers who bought these fake policies should act immediately to protect themselves," Hunter said. "Don't pay any premiums that are due, stop payment on any check you've sent in and seek new auto insurance coverage."

Hunter also said his office is asking bank and loan companies holding notes on any affected motor vehicles to work with people who bought the fake policies.

Bulldogs shoot for state glory

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

PFLUGERVILLE, Tex. — Texas high school soccer coaches have yet to develop a network comparable to the state's football or basketball mentors. So sometimes even just days before an important playoff game a coach may not know any more than the won-loss record of an opponent.

But two things coach Tom Esikhati and the Midland High Bulldogs know about their state semifinal foe Tyler Lee: The Red Raiders play well in shootouts and they beat one of the Dallas-Fort Worth area's most impressive teams to get to the state tournament.

The Bulldogs (21-1) go toe-to-toe with Tyler Lee (18-2-2) today at Pflugerville's high school stadium at 5:30 p.m.. The winner gets the right to play for the title of best Texas prep soccer team Saturday.

Lee defeated Duncanville and Tyler John Tyler in shootouts in the Region II tournament.

"Duncanville may be the best high school team I've seen," said Lee coach Rich Brands, in his eighth year with the Red Raiders. "They won the game on paper if you compare the teams."

Lee stresses defense. It held Duncanville to a goal and blanked John Tyler.

"The key to our region wins was we played great defense," Brands said. "We got a couple of good breaks. But I told my kids, if you play good defense and the ball bounces right, that's what happens."

The Red Raiders finished as runner-ups to John Tyler in District 25. They beat John Tyler for the first time in three tries in the region final.

"We have a young team," Brand said. "Seven starters are sophomores or juniors and the entire defense is underclassmen."

But Lee relies a great deal on seniors for their scoring. Senior center forward Shawn Tatham has 24 goals, one more than Bulldog senior Ross Hunter. Senior forward Sloan Teegarden has scored 12 goals and senior center midfielder Lee Whiten 15. Whiten missed the region tournament and Brand says he is questionable versus MHS.

Jordan at .400

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan's performance was mixed in an exhibition 4-4 tie between the Chicago White Sox and Chicago Cubs Thursday at Wrigley Field. He showed his remarkable athletic ability at times and also his inexperience. He went 2-for-5 with a game-tying double and an RBI single. He also had an error, a weak strikeout and a base-running miscue that cost his team a run.

"It was a great feeling just to come out and do well. After the error you kind of second guess yourself. You are just trying to do what you want to do to fulfill your dreams. I was able to bounce back, I'm very proud of myself for just staying in there," Jordan said.

"Once you get an error, it's good to redeem yourself and get your confidence back. I was real nervous."

Jordan, bound for the Class AA Birmingham Barons on Friday where he hopes to play well enough to come back to the White Sox in September, was the main reason 37,825 ventured to a chilly game that ended in a 4-4 tie.

'Mendoza Line' arrives

■ New Angels manager Mario Mendoza will hit over .200 in Midland.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Here's the new "Mendoza Line": Midland is gonna like Mario Mendoza.

Most baseball fans know the former big-league shortstop as a light hitter whose average stayed around .200 in nine big-league seasons. Hence the coining of the "The Mendoza Line" to refer to the .200 mark.

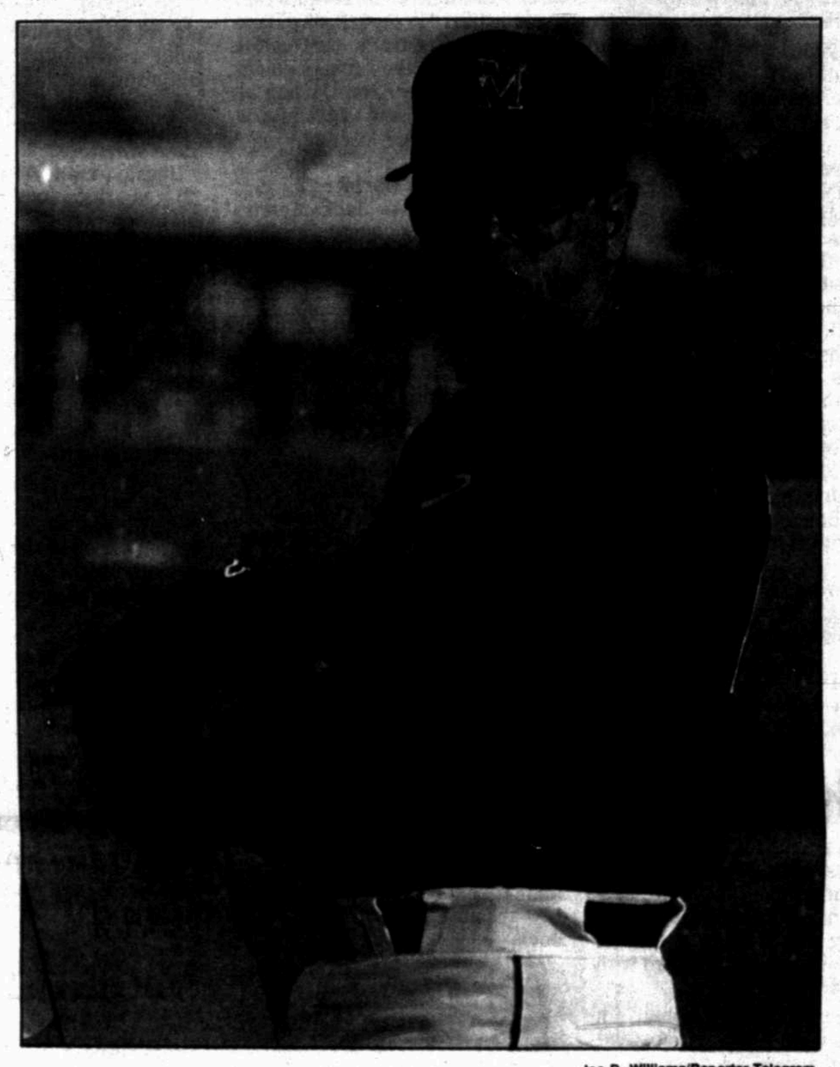

But Mendoza, who takes over as the Midland Angels new manager when the team opens its 1994 season at home tonight, insists he wasn't a bad hitter. And his easy-going manner is sure to win over many a West Texan.

"I've heard a lot of good things about Midland and the Midland fans, so I'm glad to be here," said Mendoza as club memebers met with the press Thursday. "It's nice to be back (in Texas.)"

Mendoza played for the Texas Rangers in 1981 and '82 for his last two seasons in the majors. In 1980 he played in 114 games for the Seattle Mariners and hit a career-best .245. He had a .231 average his first season at Texas.

"The two years I played regularly, my last two years, is when I hit well," Mendoza said. "When I started playing everyday, I started getting my batting average higher and my lifetime is .215. The year before I went up to the big leagues I hit .268 and had eight home runs, so to Surprise! Angels have some pitching

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

The 1994 Midland Angels have expanded its vocabulary to include one key word that has been forgotten in years past, pitching.

The Angels were at the bottom of the Texas League pitching statistics last season, allowing almost five runs per game. Despite having one of the top hitting offenses in the league, Midland finished third in both the first and second halves of the season behind to Wichita and El Paso.

A combination of young, up-and-coming arms, and a Triple-A team loaded with pitching has put Midland in the enviable spot of having the best of the both worlds, youth and veteran pitching to open the 1994 season today against Wichita at 7 p.m.

"We saw Wichita and El Paso in spring training and we did well against them, but it was only spring training. Hopefully, we can keep it going against them," said first-year manager Mario Mendoza.

"I think we have got an exciting team, a good team all around. We've got good pitching, our defense is pretty good and hitting is good."

The starting rotation for the Angels went 6-1 during the spring training and all five — Shad Williams, Pete Janicki, Korey Keling, Keith Morrison and Mark Ratekin had earned run averages of 3.00 or lower in the Cactus League.

Lady 'Cats sting Rebs

By Amy Wolfenbarger

After recovering from the first round when San Angelo Central surged ahead for a nine-stroke lead, the Midland Lee girls felt they had a good chance of taking the lead in Thursday's third round of the District 4-5A girls golf tournament at Green Tree Country Club.

■ District 4-5A Girls Golf

The Lady Rebels had pulled to within three strokes in the second round by beating Central 338-344 at its home course, Bentwood Country Club, last week. What Lee coach Phyllis Sutton didn't count on was Central's ability to handle the vicious winds which blistered the Green Tree course Thursday.

Central's golfers handled the wind well and boosted their lead back to 21 strokes by finishing with a 335 for a three-round total of 1,008. None of the Lady Bobcats' top four golfers finished with a score higher than 85. Lee's golfers, who hoped to take advantage of playing at home, didn't do as well in the wind and finished with a 353 for a total of 1,029 for second place.

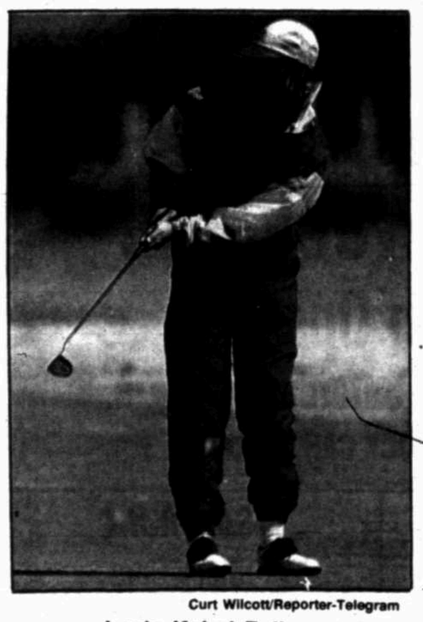

Lee coach Phyllis Sutton said that while all the teams had the disadvantage of playing against the wind, her team did not handle it as well as San Angelo did.

"We didn't play well and that's about all you can say," Sutton said. "At this given time, San Angelo just played a better round of golf than we did."

San Angelo coach Rick Harvey said he was proud of the maturity his golfers showed playing in the wind and in only their second tournament on the Green Tree course.

THE MASTERS

Mize loves the lead

By Ron Sirak
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Larry Mize and Greg Norman have been down this road together before. Mize's one Masters championship is just one of Norman's many disappointments.

Mize grabbed the lead Thursday after the first round at Augusta National with a 4-under-par 68. Norman was only two strokes back.

You have to wonder if both men were thinking at all about 1987.

That year they finished 72 holes tied for the lead. Mize then stunned Norman and stole the title on the second playoff hole when he chipped in from 140 feet for the winning birdie.

It made Mize's career — his only major tournament victory — and added another page in Norman's collection of near-misses.

"I'm still reaping the benefits from what happened here in 1987," Mize said. "It's fun to be leading." Mize shot his 68 just four weeks after surgery on his right knee.

Norman is trying his best not to remember any of his disappointments.

"I don't care about the past," he said.

On a day in which tricky winds and prickly pin positions confused the world's best players, Mize, a native of Augusta, rebounded from a bogey at No. 15, where he was one of a slew of players hitting into the

NEW YORK — Mike Gallego homered twice. Danny Tartabull drove in four runs and Bernie Williams hit a three-run homer Thursday as New York scored its most runs at Yankee Stadium in 39 years and routed the Texas Rangers 18-6.

■ American League

New York, which had 19 hits — including six doubles — hadn't scored as many runs at home since a 19-1 victory against the Washington Senators on April 13, 1955. The last time the Yankees scored this many runs anywhere was a 18-5 victory at Minnesota on April 18, 1988.

Terry Mulholland, acquired from Philadelphia in the offseason, won in his Yankees' debut, allowing six runs and seven hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Five Texas pitchers walked nine and hit a batter. Kenny Rogers, the Rangers' leader in wins last year with 16, was chased after three-plus innings. He allowed eight earned runs and nine hits.

Wade Boggs had four hits for the second straight game: a double and three singles.

Will Clark's first-inning sacrifice fly put Texas ahead, but New York scored the next 12 runs.

Tartabull doubled home a run in the first and Mike Stanley hit an RBI groundout. Gallego opened the second with his first homer and Williams homered in the third to make it 6-1.

Twins 7, Angels 4

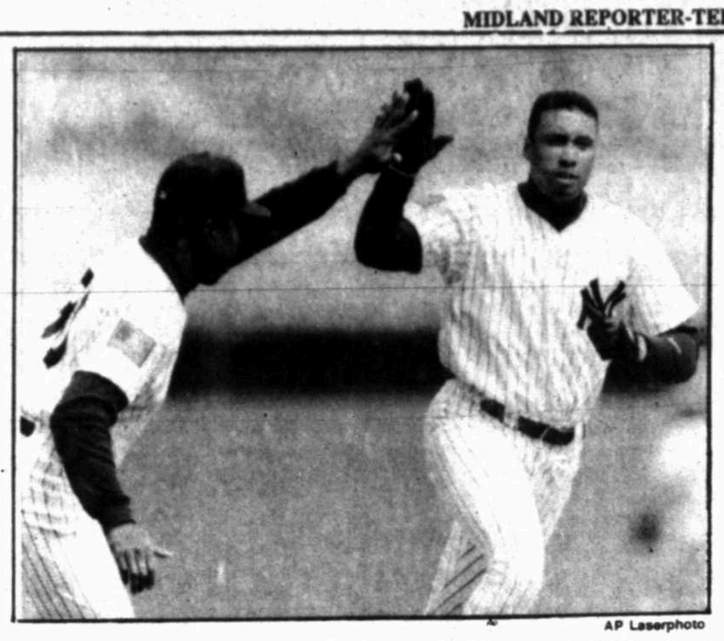

MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Erickson, one of baseball's worst pitchers last year, gave up 11 hits but still helped Minnesota to its first victory of this season.

Dave Winfield drove in three runs and Kirby Puckett two for the Twins, who lost their first two games to California by a combined 12-3 score.

Erickson, who won 20 games in the Twins' World Series championship season of 1991, was 8-19 with a 5.19 ERA last year. He led the majors in losses, hits allowed and runs allowed, and opponents hit .305 against him.

The right-hander was far from perfect in earning his 50th career victory. California had 14 runners in Erickson's 6 1-3 innings, but he escaped trouble until allowing two runs in the seventh.

Mark Guthrie relieved and allowed Chili Davis' two-run homer. Rick Aguilera pitched two innings of one-hit relief for the save.

BOSTON — Boston is punishing the Fenway Park walls with extra-base hits — when they're not knocking the ball over them.

They had seven more extra-base hits, including homers by Mike Greenwell, Andre Dawson and Tim Naehring, as they beat Detroit for a sweep of their season-opening, three-game series.

Of Boston's 30 hits this season, 16 have been for extra bases.

Detroit also had three homers — two-run drives by Cecil Fielder and Dan Bautista, and a solo shot by Lou Whitaker.

Brewers 12, Athletics 2

MILWAUKEE — Bill Wegman won his first game since last May 30, and John Jaha and Kevin Seitzer both hit two-run homers as Milwaukee beat Oakland.

Wegman, who lost his last seven decisions in 1993 and went 4-14, allowed only an unearned run and and five hits in seven innings as Milwaukee got 14 hits and beat Oakland for the 11th consecutive time at home. He struck out five and walked one.

Turner Ward capped the Brewers' barrage with a two-out, three-run single in the seventh that made it 12-1. Three walks by Dave Righetti forced in a run before Ward's hit with the runners going.

Oakland starter Ron Darling allowed five runs and eight hits in four-plus innings.

Indians 6, Mariners 2

CLEVELAND — Jack Morris, coming off his worst season, pitched five scoreless innings before faltering in the sixth and led Cleveland past Seattle.

The game was the first at night under the vertical, toothbrush-shaped lights at new Jacobs Field. The Indians improved to 2-0, their best start since they won their first three games in 1984.

Eddie Murray hit the Indians' first home run of the season, driving it over the 19-foot-high wall in left leading off the seventh against John Cummings. Murray has 442 career home runs, tied with Dave Kingman for 20th on the career list.

With some of his pitches clocked in the low 90s, the 38-year-old Morris won for the first time since Aug. 17, when he beat Cleveland.

Justice saves Braves

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — David Justice drove in the go-ahead run with an 11th-inning single Thursday, leading the Atlanta Braves to a 10-8 victory over the San Diego Padres and a four-game sweep.

San Diego rallied from a 4-0 deficit, then blew a 7-4 lead. The Braves scored two unearned runs in the eighth, then tied it in the ninth on Gene Harris' wild pitch with rookie Ryan Klesko on third.

With the score 8-8 in the 11th, Mike Kelly doubled off rookie A.J. Sager, Fred McGriff was intentionally walked and Justice singled up the middle. Following Terry Pendleton's intentional walk, rookie Javier Lopez hit a sacrifice fly.

Greg McMichael pitched two innings for the win, allowing an RBI single in the 10th to Keith Lockhart, the rookie's first big-league hit. Atlanta had gone ahead in the top half on a bloop RBI double by pinch-hitter Bill Pecota.

Braves starter Steve Avery was roughed up for six runs — five earned — on four hits in 4 1-3 innings. San Diego had been blanked by Braves starters for 25 innings.

Braves rookie Ryan Klesko was 2-for-5 with two singles.

Phillies 13, Rockies 8

DENVER — Mariano Duncan hit a go-ahead, three-run homer in a five-run seventh inning as the Philadelphia Phillies routed Colorado's bullpen for the third straight game, beating the Rockies 13-8 Thursday.

Colorado erased a 4-0 deficit and scored five runs in the sixth for an 8-6 lead.

In the seventh, pinch-hitter Tony Longmire reached on an error, Lenny Dykstra singled off starter Greg Harris and Steve Reed (0-1) promptly gave up Duncan's homer. Ricky Jordan tripled and scored on Dave Hollins' sacrifice fly. Kevin Stocker added an RBI single.

Marlins 1, Dodgers 0

LOS ANGELES — Chris Hammond and Bryan Harvey combined on a four-hitter and Jeff Conine singled in the only run as Florida beat Los Angeles for its first victory of the season.

Hammond (1-0) outdueled Ramon Martinez (0-1) through 7 2-3 innings, allowing four hits with six strikeouts and two walks.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets set a franchise record for 3-point shooting, and Hakeem Olajuwon got his eighth career triple double in a 134-102 victory Thursday night over the Golden State Warriors.

Houston made 75 percent (12 of 17) of its long-range shots. Olajuwon had 26 points, 13 rebounds and 10 assists.

Houston scored a season high in points, and its 12 3-point baskets equaled the team record set in April 1991 against Denver. The Rockets, whose previous high in points this season came in a 128-112 victory over Washington on March 21, extended their Central Division lead to one game over San Antonio.

The victory was Houston's 11th in 14 games and completed a 4-0 season sweep of the Warriors. The Rockets were perfect from the free-throw line, making 16 foul shots.

Jazz 99, Mavericks 82

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 25 points, and Felton Spencer 17 with 14 rebounds as Utah finished with a perfect record this season against poor-shooting Dallas.

Utah, winning for just the third time in 12 games, held Dallas to 38 percent (29-of-77) from the floor. The Jazz wound up 5-0 against the Mavericks.

■ NBA Roundup

Dallas, led by Jamal Mashburn and Sean Rooks with 14 points apiece, lost for the 10th time in 11 games.

Utah, which led 28-26 at the end of the first quarter, outscored the Mavericks 14-4 in the first 8:07 of the second period to lead 42-30. Tom Chambers and David Benoit had four points apiece in the surge.

Knicks 97, Cavaliers 94

NEW YORK — Derek Harper hit his second 3-pointer of overtime with 6.7 seconds left, giving New York a victory over Cleveland and their first season sweep of the Cavaliers since 1981-82.

Harper finished with 22 points and Charles Oakley scored a season-high 24 points and grabbed 15 rebounds for the Knicks, who won their ninth straight at home and 16th in 17 games overall.

Harper dribbled down most of the 24-second clock before swishing his game-winner, which gave Pat Riley his 696th victory as an NBA coach, tying him for 10th with former Knicks coach Red Holzman. New York has won seven consecutive games against the Cavaliers since losing to them six straight times.

Cleveland, with Mark Price sidelined by the flu and Brad Daugherty with a herniated disc, lost forward Tyrone Hill with a bruised right knee.

Nuggets 104, SuperSonics 90

DENVER — Dikembe Mutombo had 11 blocked shots for the second straight game and also had 13 points and 13 rebounds as Denver broke Seattle's nine-game winning streak and improved its playoff chances.

The outcome gave the Nuggets a three-game lead over the Los Angeles Lakers for the eighth and final Western Conference playoff spot.

Nets 93, Hawks 87

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Derrick Coleman had 24 points and 13 rebounds, moving New Jersey closer to a playoff berth with a victory over Atlanta.

The Nets, who tied Indiana for the seventh playoff spot in the Eastern Conference, reduced their magic number to five. Any combination of five Net wins or Charlotte losses will allow New Jersey, to clinch its third straight postseason berth.

Midland Christian sweeps

Staff Report

Midland Christian picked up a pair of wins Thursday its softball and baseball teams won in contrasting fashion.

The MCHS softball team dominated Marathon, crushing the other Lady Mustangs 27-0 at the Bill Williams Complex while the boys team rallied to defeat Coahoma 3-2 at Simon Field.

April Sheppard was the winning pitcher for the MCHS Lady Mustangs and upped her record to 3-3 with the shutout. The Midland Christian offense plastered the Marathon pitchers by getting 31 hits in 43 at bats.

Robin Hill led the way at the plate for Midland Christian with two doubles while teammates Laura Bullard and Chrystal Smith had a triple and a double respectively.

The Lady Mustangs, who improved to 4-6, will host Big Spring Monday at 7 p.m. at the Bill Williams Complex.

In baseball action, Midland Christian rallied with a run in the bottom of the seventh to beat Coahoma.

SEMIS: Tyler Lee first obstacle

(From 1C)

"If we can control (Tatham) and play like we've been playing we'll be fine," Esikhati said.

One of the Bulldogs' strengths is speed. Whether Lee's defense is strong enough to counteract that could decide the outcome.

Midland High nipped Arlington Martin in their region final 1-0. Some of the Bulldogs said they had an off game in that contest.

"The last game we didn't play like we were supposed to play," Esikhati said. "I think it was another wake up call for us."

Lee has been in the playoffs every year under Brand. The Raider coach took his team to the state final in 1990.

Midland's play in the state tournament marks the first time Region I has not been represented by an El Paso or Dallas-Fort Worth team. But Brand isn't overlooking the new kids from West Texas.

"There's no taking anybody lightly or assuming (anything about) what's out in West Texas," Brand said.

Bulldog Toby Walker thinks the tournament will come down to desire.

"It's not whose the best team it's who wants it more," Walker said. "Of all the four teams everybody wants to win. It's just who's going to take the extra effort."

TOURNAMENT: Region champion Klein has been in the state tournament six of the last eight years. Its coach, Alan Baker, has 230 wins in his 12 season's at the school ... Midland High has scored 48 goals this season and allowed only 11 in 22 games ... Pflugerville is about 20 miles north of Austin on Interstate Highway 35.

Cowboys ink Johnston

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys signed fullback Daryl Johnston to a three-year, $4.2 million contract Thursday and announced that Pro Bowl guard Nate Newton has agreed to a contract.

That meant the Cowboys, by day's end, would have seven of their eight offensive Pro Bowl players from last season under contract — all except center Mark Stepnoski.

Johnston, who received a $1.8 million signing bonus, becomes the highest-paid fullback in NFL history, the Cowboys said.

No details were announced on Newton's deal.

Johnston has been with the Cowboys since 1989 and has not missed a game during that five-year span, encompassing 86 straight games.

His popularity became evident last season, as fans yelled his nickname, "Moose," in unison every time he carried the ball.

Last season was one of his finest. He finished third on the team with a career-high 50 receptions and was fifth in the NFC in receptions among running backs.

Rest assured, it will wake you up.

ANGELS: Club has balanced look

(From 1C)

"I think we've got 11 quality arms," said pitching coach Kernan Ronan. "We have Ratekin and Shad (Williams) back from last year starting. Pete Janicki was a top round draft pick.

"In the bullpen, John Pricher put together 49 saves over the past two seasons. David Holdridge, who started for us last year, has been moved to the bullpen and Ron Watson is back. We definitely feel that we have the people who can get the job done. As long as we can stay close, playing here (at Angels Stadium), we will be in every game."

Williams will get the call tonight. He compiled a 7-10 record last season for Midland with a 4.73 ERA in 175 innings pitched.

He started four games in the Cactus League this spring and pitched 21 innings, twice as much as any other player on the Angels' opening day roster.

"I'm pretty excited (about starting opening day)," said Williams. "I struggled at the beginning of last year. This year, I would really like to keep my momentum from the end of last year. I worked on my mechanics during the offseason and my curveball has come along. I had a pretty good spring training and I hope to carry that over."

Also back from last year is first baseman Chris Pritchett. Pritchett was scheduled to be in Vancouver, but the California Angels sent first baseman J.T. Snow to Triple-A last week, and Pritchett changed his destination to Midland.

Pritchett, selected to the Texas League All-Star game last season, batted .308 with 66 RBI and finished in the top fourth in the league in batting average.

"This is a weird situation for me, because every year until now it was the first year for me at that level," said Pritchett, who is expected to be called up to Vancouver once Snow is traded. "I don't know how long I will be here, but I put a deposit down, so I plan on staying here for a while. It could be a week, a month or a season. I think as far as knowing where to eat and stuff like that, I can help people.

"I was very happy here last year and I look forward to being here this year. I like this team. I only played with them a couple of days, but I think we are going to do real well. I'm real impressed with our pitching staff. A lot of older guys who could have easily played in Triple-A but they put them down here. I played with Pete Janicki in college and he is an outstanding pitcher. John Pricher looked real good in the last spring game, so I'm real excited about our pitching staff."

Rounding out the infield will be J.D. Ramirez and Brian Grebeck at second base. Grebeck returns after hitting .294 last season for Midland. He hit .204 early in the season, but batted .347 over the last three months on the season to finish 10th in the Texas League in hitting. Ramirez played for Sioux City in 1993 where he finished second in the Northern League with a .338 average.

Former University of Texas standout Tim Harkrider will play shortstop. Harkrider, who played high school baseball at Carthage, was an eighth round selection by the Angels in the 1993 draft.

"It's good to be back in the lone star state," said Harkrider. "I've been looking forward to today since the second week of spring training. Its started getting old out there.

"Our defense looks really solid. The infield played really well together in spring training. We turned several double plays and we got a good feeling for each other. The outfield can cover some ground. A couple of them have great speed and they can go get the ball. Offensively, we're going to be steady from one through nine. We don't have a lot of power hitters, but we have a lot of line drive, gap-type hitters. I think we are going to be an exciting team to watch."

Chris Smith, who is listed No. 7 of the California Angels top 10 minor league prospects, will be at third.

Catcher Fausto Tejero will be starting his third season with Midland. He has spent portions of the past two years in Midland, last year playing backup to catcher Jorge Fabregas.

In the outfield, Luis Raven, Emmitt Cohick and Ty Boykin return. Marquis Riley, who stole 69 bases last season at Palm Springs, will play centerfield. Boykin and Riley will likely leadoff for the Angels. They combined for 138 stolen bases last season. Cohick hit 11 home runs with 53 RBIs while Raven batted .257 with 30 RBI before being sent to Palm Springs prior to the All-Star break last season.

ANGEL NOTES: the Midland Angels have added a reserve seats section behind home plate this season. "It's nothing more than a chair back, but it does reserve people a seat for the big nights," said Angels' general manager Monty Hoppell. The Angels will open the season with a 10-game homestand with Wichita and El Paso. Midland will play 15 of its first 20 games at home.

GOLF: Lee falls back

what we've been stressing all year long," Harvey said.

The battle will come down to Wednesday's final round at Odessa Country Club and it will be between Central and Lee, both more than 60 strokes ahead of the rest of the field.

The wind also hampered the rest of the teams as Abilene Cooper shot a 370 for a total of 1,093 and is probably out of the team race. Odessa Permian is still in fourth with a 378 for 1,124 while Midland High distanced itself from sixth-place Abilene High with a score of 405 and 1,167. AHS had a 421 for a total of 1,203.

Cooper's April DeVries ignored the wind and continued to blister the field with a 77 for a three-round total of 230 — seven strokes better than Permian's Kristin Kight (79—237).

Midland coach Bernie Hagins said he felt his team could have played better.

"I was somewhat disappointed in some of the scores because this is a course we play at all the time," Hagins said. "I think we'll have a hard time catching Permian because we'll be playing on their home course next week."

Sutton, while not admitting defeat with one round still to play, was somewhat resigned to the fact that Central may have an insurmountable upper hand.

"Central hasn't won district in a while and they are ready to play well," Sutton said. "But when we get to regional, it starts all over again. We'll be even and maybe we can put together some good rounds."

Third round results from the District 4-5A girls golf tournament held at Green Tree Country Club:

MASTERS: Allem, Kite just one stroke back water, to birdie 18 and finish at 4 under par.

Player after player complained about the pin positions, but not Mize.

"Maybe I'm dumb, but I just didn't think the pins were that tough," Mize said. "You expect them to be tough here."

That was easy for Mize to say. He needed only 25 putts.

"It was close today," Norman said. "There were some pin positions that were very marginal." He said there were six or seven pin positions he had never seen here. Norman had four more putts than Mize.

Tom Kite and South African Fulton Allem were a stroke behind Mize at 69.

Norman, who has averaged 73.5 in the first round of his 13 previous Masters, struggled mightily against his first-round jinx. He had six birdies, six bogeys and an eagle for a 2-under-par 70. He hasn't broken 70 in his first round here since his first Masters in 1981.

He made only two pars on the back nine — 11 and 15 — and finished bogey, birdie, bogey, hitting the sand at 16 and 18.

"Sometimes you play good and sometimes you have to scramble," Norman said. "It's something you have to do in the major championships when things are not in synch. It's probably my worst first round in this tournament and yet I walk off with a 70."

Norman's six bogeys were five more than he made in 72 holes at The Players Championship two weeks ago when he shot 24 under par.

Tom Watson, the 44-year-old two-time Masters champion, was in the lead at 4-under-par until he made a triple bogey 8 after finding the water at 15. He bounced back with a birdie on 18 to finish at 2-under-par 70.

Watson, Mize, Norman, Payne Stewart and Nolan Henke were among the players who hit the drink at 15. Henke made 10 on the hole.

Norman slapped his second shot into the water on the par-5 hole, but rolled in a 15-foot putt to save par. You would have thought it was Sunday and he had just won his first Masters. He tossed the ball into the crowd and smiled from ear to ear as he walked off the green.

Joining Watson and Norman at 70 were Tom Lehman, 51-year-old Raymond Floyd, Seve Ballesteros and Vijay Singh.

Australian Ian Baker-Finch, Corey Pavin, Russ Cochran, Brad Faxon, Chip Beck, Hajime Meshiai of Japan and 58-year-old South African Gary Player, a three-time Masters champion, all were at 1 under par.

Jay Haas, Jim McGovern, Bill Glasson, John Huston and U.S. amateur champion John Harris finished at even par.

Defending champion Bernhard Langer of Germany was at 2-over-par 74, as was Nick Price of Zimbabwe. Nick Faldo, John Daly and Ian Woosnam all struggled to 76.

"It was a four-club wind," said Baker-Finch, who had to hit a drive and a 3 iron into the 400-yard first hole, where he would normally have a 7-iron second shot.

"This course plays the hardest when the wind is in your face on No. 1," Pavin said. "That's the way it was today."

Allem got some sage advice and savvy inspiration from his practice round with Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer.

"I learned from playing with them yesterday, you don't attack Augusta National," Allem said. "You play it conservative. And I learned that you have to hit your iron shots high. I was pumped today after playing with them. It was an inspiration."

Nicklaus and Palmer both shot 78.

The greens, always a factor at Augusta, were complicated by some tough pin placements even by Masters' standards.

"They had the pin at No. 4 in a place where I had never seen it before," Pavin said.

"I don't think it ever plays easy," Baker-Finch said of the course. "You are always working for those 4- and 5- and 6-footers because of where the pins are. But it was even harder today because of the pin placements."

Norman got an indication early that this might be his year. He pushed his tee shot on No. 1, rattling it off an oak tree. The ball dropped directly behind a tree, leaving him no shot at the green.

The 39-year-old Australian followed with a birdie on the par-5 second hole and was on his way to his up-and-down round.

MENDOZA: New manager ready

go up I had to hit (well)."

Mendoza enters his third season as a minor league coach with the California Angels organization. He managed the Class A Palm Springs (Calif.) Angels the last two years. The Palm Springs club was 133-138 with Mendoza at the helm. But with the constant moving around of players, minor league managers can hardly be judged on their records alone. The '92 Palm Springs club won the first half of the California season with four stars coming to Midland at midseason.

As with most minor league coaches, he aspires to coach or manage in the big leagues, but his approach to that goal is not overbearing.

"To be realistic, it's very tough to be a manager in the big leagues," Mendoza said. "I have in mind to go back to the big leagues as a coach. (But) if I don't make it, I'll be glad. I love baseball and I love what I'm doing now."

Which includes bringing his experience as a major leaguer to minor league managing and helping teach his players.

"(It) helps you to be able to help the guys know how to handle things on the field and off the field," the 42-year-old said.

The new Angel boss can concentrate on helping the Midland infielders. But that's not where his coaching will stop.

"When you play the game so many years, you bring a lot of skills that you can help anywhere — the infield and sometimes the outfield or sometimes with the pitching mechanics," Mendoza said, "but mainly I help with the infield because that's where I played."

Angel pitching coach Kernan Ronan, who has been with the Midland club since 1991, thinks Mendoza brings a variety of traits to the clubhouse.

"I think he'll bring good baseball knowledge, good managing skills and I think he'll bring a sense of humor," Ronan said. "(He) makes sure everybody's loose. He's very easy going and very open to suggestions."

Mendoza spent a couple of days in Midland in January and returned here Tuesday. So he's seen enough of Midland to know it isn't Palm Springs. But that doesn't bother him.

"I don't mind (the change)," he said. "This is peaceful and relaxing. Palm Springs is a beautiful city, but in the summer it's dead."

Comparing Midland favorably to Palm Springs?

Yep. Midland is gonna like Mario Medoza.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Oil prices finished lower on Thursday as news of more OPEC cheating and talk of increased shipments from Great Britain and Africa weighed on the market.

May delivery of light sweet crude oil settled at $15.58 per barrel, down 19 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $14 a barrel.

An Associated Press-Dow Jones survey put March production by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries about 55,000 barrels per day above the group's ceiling. Iran increased output to 100,000 barrels more than its quota, according to the survey, based on data from analysts and OPEC delegates.

Also, higher prices in the United States raised expectations that more British and West African crude would be sent here.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in May settling at $2.085 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.2 cents.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar finished narrowly mixed against other foreign currencies on Thursday, as traders continued to warily watch U.S. financial markets for signs of renewed turbulence.

Gold prices fell. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $383.90 a troy ounce, down $1 from Wednesday.

In New York, the dollar finished at 104.85 yen, up from 104.50 yen late Wednesday.

Other dollar rates in New York compared with late Wednesday: 1.7165 German marks, unchanged; 1.4465 Swiss francs, down from 1.4500; 5.8768 French francs, up from 5.8635; 1,637 Italian lire, down from 1,653; and 1.3828 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3863.

In New York, the pound closed at $1.4740, more expensive than $1.4680 Wednesday.

On the New York Comex, silver for current delivery closed at $5.446 a troy ounce, off 5.2 cents.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK — Stocks gained for the third day in a row Thursday as share prices continued their glue-like attachment to bonds.

The rise came despite another round of statistics showing strong economic growth. Such numbers have, in recent weeks, spurred fears in the stock and bond markets of higher interest rates and inflation.

These fears have been at the heart of the recent selloff in both markets, so the lack of a decline Thursday led analysts to express hope that the worst may be over.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 13.53 points to 3,693.26.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 9-to-5 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,370 up, 761 down and 651 unchanged.

Businesses plan investment push

■ Latest figure is sharply higher than estimated 5.4 percent rise projected just three months ago.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Encouraged by the expanding economy, American businesses are planning a big increase in investments for new buildings and equipment.

The Commerce Department said Thursday businesses plan an 8 percent increase in 1994, which would be the biggest jump in capital investment since an 11.4 percent jump in 1989.

The latest figure is sharply higher than the estimated 5.4 percent rise that businesses had projected just three months ago. Last year's increase was 7.1 percent.

"It's consistent with the recent stronger-than-expected growth in the economy," said economist Priscilla Trumbull of the WEFA Group, a Bala Cynwyd, Pa., forecasting firm.

She said she was not surprised that the government attributed a big part of the projected rise to the automobile industry. "Car sales have really been much stronger than three to six months ago," she said.

In other reports Thursday:

■ The nation's largest retailers reported better-than-expected sales for March. Consumers, more confident about their financial security, apparently went shopping enthusiastically before Easter.

■ The number of Americans filing first-time claims for jobless benefits rose by 6,000 last week, the Labor Department said.

■ Thirty-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 8.47 percent this week, up from 8.04 percent last week and the highest in nearly two years, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

Commerce Secretary Ron Brown said of the rising investment-spending plans, "The increase demonstrates that investment is not being choked off by the recent run-up in long-term (interest) rates." He said improving profits and cash flow and strong demand also are spurring more investment.

Marilyn Schaja of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. in New York, said of the jobs report, "The data fit with the impression of a gradually improving labor market, not one that is roaring ahead."

The reports did not appear to have a dramatic impact on the stock market, which was mixed after a recovery earlier this week.

After two moves since February by the Federal Reserve to nudge interest rates higher, stock prices had lost about 9 percent of their value.

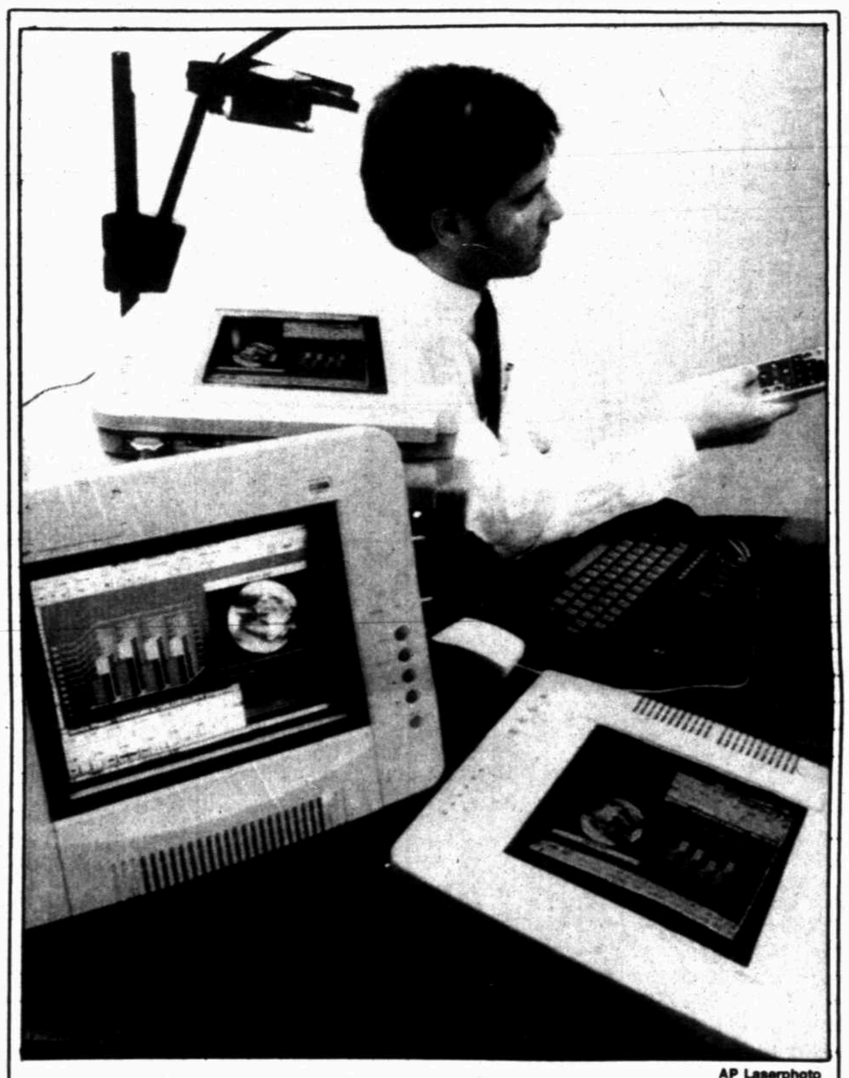

Economic strength has triggered fears of rising inflation and interest rates, and business investment has played a key role in the overall growth.

Several thousand businesses surveyed by the Commerce Department during the first quarter of 1994 said they would spend $633 billion this year — up from $586 billion last year — on constructing and modernizing buildings, installing new computers and upgrading other equipment and machinery.

Spending rose 3.4 percent in 1992 after a rare 0.8 percent decline in 1991.

When adjusted for inflation, the projected investment increase is 9.8 percent this year, after 8.6 percent in 1993. The current figure, if realized, would be the biggest inflation-adjusted rise since a 15.8 percent jump in 1984.

Companies have been buying computers and other high-tech equipment to streamline their operations. Until recently, payroll expansion has not kept pace. But last week, the Labor Department reported that 456,000 Americans were added to payrolls in March, the biggest increase in more than six years.

Boeing places multibillion dollar bet on new airplane

By George Tibbits
Associated Press

EVERETT, Wash. — They built it on a computer. They're not 100 percent sure it will fly. It's powered by two engines instead of four, still a no-no for long-haul trips.

But Boeing Co. engineers have placed a multibillion dollar bet that the aerospace leader's newest widebody jet, the 777, will succeed.

The first 777 will be unveiled Saturday at an invitation-only shindig at a Boeing factory complex, offering customers, suppliers and many workers their first intimate view of the plane that will take Boeing into the 21st century.

The 777 comes at a time when commercial airlines have been reeling from years of punishing losses. Boeing has slashed production and cut thousands of jobs.

Nonetheless, Boeing's long-term strategists estimate the world's airlines will need 12,000 new planes worth $815 billion by 2010, with jets like the 777 accounting for nearly 40 percent of sales.

Boeing says the 777, which is only slightly smaller than Boeing's jumbo 747-400, has fundamentally changed the way it does business.

Customers such as British Airways and United Airlines say they're so pleased with the openness Boeing has shown they now demand similar treatment from competitors.

"It's been a revolution from one end to the other," said Paul Nisbet, an aerospace industry analyst with JSA Research in Newport, R.I.

Sixteen customers have ordered 147 777s and signed options to buy another 108. Each costs $116 million to $146 million, depending on interior configuration.

Boeing won't say how much the plane cost to design and build, but outside experts estimate at least $4 billion.

One of the biggest risks is whether government regulators will permit the twin-engine plane to fly long, over-ocean routes. It must prove reliability for at least two years before such permission can be granted.

But the twin-engine power also is one of the plane's most alluring qualities for buyers. It is expected to be far more efficient than four-engine models and less costly to maintain.

To overcome the government-regulation obstacle, Boeing plans the most extensive test program ever conducted for a new commercial jet.

Ron Robinson, 777 chief engineer for test integration, said nine airplanes will make a total of 4,820 test flights. The first flight is this June.

Nation's largest cable company takes step toward 500 channels

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest cable TV company stepped into the digital revolution on Thursday, unveiling new programs that will take up less space on cable systems and could increase the number of available channels tenfold.

It is the first crucial step toward the much ballyhooed "500 channel" future, when cable systems will be able to substantially increase capacity and possibly their revenues.

Tele-Communications Inc. opened a $100 million facility in a Denver suburb where movies and other programs will be converted from analog into a compacted digital format. These programs will then be delivered via satellite and fiber optic cables to TCI cable systems and other cable systems opting to buy the service.

More channels will become available based on demand, he said. TCI initially is using technology that will compress six digital signals into the space that one analog channel uses. But it has the ability to eventually put 10 digital signals in the space of one analog channel.

Eventually, when cable companies rebuild their systems to be more sophisticated, customers will be able to order and retrieve programs, sports scores and other information from their TV sets when they want.

Retailers report strong March sales

Associated Press

Consumers feeling more secure about the economy and their own finances spent freely for the Easter holiday, giving the nation's largest retailers robust sales gains in March.

Even hard-hit clothing merchants reported brisk business.

March results had been expected to improve after consumers showed signs in February that they were willing to shop seriously for the first time in months. But some retailers were pleasantly surprised by how well they did.

The sales figures partly reflect the fact that Easter arrived earlier this year than in 1993.

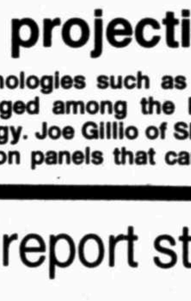

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Distribution reduces fund's net asset value

By Bill Doyle

Q: The per-share net asset value of my mutual fund dropped on Dec. 31, 1993, because of "asset distribution." The NAVs of other mutual funds that distributed assets at the same time did not fall.

Why?

Doyle

A: You had better recheck your fund's NAV and the NAVs of those other funds on that date. It's most unlikely things happened as you say they did. That could have occurred only in the following scenario:

On Dec. 31, the market prices of the securities all those other funds hold in their investment portfolios rose and the prices of the securities in your fund's portfolio either fell or remained unchanged.

When a mutual fund distributes part of its assets to its shareholders — as a dividend or a capital gains distribution — the total amount involved is deducted from the fund's assets. And the per-share amount is deducted from NAV per share. It is somewhat similar to the ex-dividend procedure for stocks listed on stock exchanges.

The NAV adjustment takes place automatically on the ex-dividend or ex-distribution date. So, if a fund "went ex," as they say around Wall Street, on Dec. 31, everything that fund owns would have to shoot up by an amount equal to the total distribution for the NAV to show no change that day.

Keep in mind that a mutual fund's NAV is arrived at by dividing its net assets by the number of shares "outstanding" — owned by investors.

Q: I know that stocks listed on stock exchanges go ex-dividend at the opening of trading the fourth business day before the "record date" for the dividend. Does the same thing apply to mutual funds?

A: Not necessarily. Fund managements have leeway in that regard. Depending on how the particular fund handles it, the ex-dividend date and record date might be the same day or as much as four days apart.

Q: I always thought that by buying into a mutual fund, my money would be in all the stocks the fund holds. But a friend says they put my money into one certain stock.

Please explain.

A: You and your friend are either talking at cross-purposes or not expressing your thoughts to each other — or to me.

When you invest in a mutual fund, you purchase shares of the fund. That makes you an indirect owner of all the stocks and other securities the fund holds.

The fund doesn't use your money to make additional purchases of all the securities it already owns. That would create an accounting nightmare. Your money and other cash the fund has on hand is used to buy stocks or other securities when the fund's management decides to do so.

After that happens, you and the other fund shareholders are indirect owners of the newly purchased securities as well as the securities the fund already held as investments.

Q: What advice can you offer about the best investment I can make for the education of my 13-month-old daughter?

A: As has been stressed in this space time after time, it is impossible to predict what will be "the best" investment for any purpose over any length of time. Only charlatans claim to have that ability.

That said, my recommendation for building an education fund remains what it has been for many years: a steady investment in a growth mutual fund — one holding stocks with a record or potential of increasing in value.

Although there is risk involved, most growth funds have turned in excellent investment performance over the years.

Buckeyes offered Pigskin slot

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State, co-champions of the Big Ten last season but with 13 holes to fill in the starting lineup this year, has been offered a spot opposite Fresno State in the preseason Disneyland Pigskin Classic Aug. 29 in Anaheim, Calif.

Whether Ohio State accepts is up to coach John Cooper and the team, athletics director Jim Jones said Thursday.

But Jones said earlier if the coaches and players want to play in the game, he did not anticipate any opposition from Ohio State administrators.

"It's not during the school year, so I can't imagine anybody would have any major objections," Jones said.

Don Anderson, executive director of the Orange County Sports Authority which stages the game, said Ohio State would make the perfect opponent for Fresno State.

"We would be very happy to have Ohio State," he said by telephone. "If they tell us they want to come, then we will give them a formal invitation. ... We've never had a Big Ten team and we would very much like to have one."

Last year, North Carolina beat Southern Cal 31-9 in the fourth annual classic. In 1990, Tennessee and eventual co-national champion Colorado played to a 31-31 tie. Florida State beat Brigham Young 44-28 in 1991 and Texas A&M edged Stanford 10-7 in Bill Walsh's first game back with the Cardinal in 1992.

Pigskin Classic teams are guaranteed $550,000 for playing, but last year Southern Cal and North Carolina each received $720,000.

Fresno State, a five-hour drive from Anaheim, brought more than 26,000 when it played in the postseason Freedom Bowl two years ago. The Freedom Bowl is also played at Anaheim Stadium. Anderson said he anticipated a similar turnout at the Pigskin Classic, which would raise gate revenues and provide a bigger payout to each team.

Ohio State would give this year's game national recognition and would all but guarantee a large television audience.

SAN ANTONIO — The Texas director of the League of United Latin American Citizens says she will run for national president of the organization now that LULAC President Jose Velez has been indicted.

"I have been getting a lot of calls saying I should go for the presidency, Rosa Rosales said.

Velez and three Taiwanese were indicted Tuesday in Las Vegas on federal charges of conspiring to create and supply false documents so thousands of illegal immigrants could remain in the United States.

The indictment said immigrants were charged as much as $45,000 for fraudulent documents provided by the alleged Taiwanese conspirators, Bill Tzeng, Simon Chang and Al Feng.

Velez is accused of carrying out his part of the alleged conspiracy through his Las Vegas immigration consulting firm, Velez & Sons Inc.

LULAC, a leading Hispanic civil rights organization, was not accused of any wrongdoing.

Kidnapping charge

ROUND ROCK — A 47-year-old woman suffered minor injuries when she jumped from a moving car after a 16-year-old neighbor allegedly broke into her house and kidnapped her at gunpoint, Round Rock police said.

The teen-ager was charged with aggravated kidnapping. He was being held Thursday at a juvenile detention center in Georgetown.

Capt. Chris Bratton said Vicki Bailey suffered a mild concussion and abrasions in the Wednesday abduction.

Ms. Bailey said the youth asked her for help on a school project Tuesday night, but she told him to come back another time because it was too late.

"Somehow he got back in the house. He was standing in the kitchen doorway, which is next to my bedroom. He pointed the gun to my head," Bailey said.

Police said the youth forced Ms. Bailey into her car and was driving to her bank to get money from an automated teller machine.

On the way to the bank, the woman saw a police officer and jumped out of her car.

"I thought he was going to shoot me," she said.

Living mourn millions who perished

Dr. Frank Kasman, middle, reads the names of Jews killed in the Holocaust. Also participating in the ceremony on Thursday at Midland County Courthouse were David Mandel, left, and Harry Leventhal.

■ Courthouse ceremony honors Hungarian-born freedom fighter, victims of Nazi extermination campaign.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

David Mandel remembers. It is a part of his heritage — the slaughter of the Jews in World War II.

For almost 15 minutes the Midland man read the names of his family members killed in the Holocaust.

Mandel's reading was just part of a two-hour ceremony entitled "Unto Every Person There is a Name" held Thursday afternoon on the steps of the Midland County Courthouse.

The ceremony was organized to honor a Hungarian-born freedom fighter, Hannah Szenes — who was executed for treason in November 1944 at the age of 23 — as well as all 6 million Jews killed in the Holocaust.

About two-dozen people from both the Jewish and Christian communities in Midland and Odessa participated in the event.

David Rosen, coordinator of the Midland ceremony, opened by recounting the efforts of Ms. Szenes that led to her execution.

She was a member of the Hagana, the Jewish underground in Palestine. She parachuted into Nazi-occupied Europe in 1944 in an effort to organize Jewish resistance. She was arrested when she tried to enter Hungary in June 1944.

Also honored at the ceremony were the 564,500 other Hungarian Jews who lost their lives in World War II. More than 434,000 of them were transferred to the Auschwitz concentration camp in 1944.

Rosen said that in March 1944, Hungary was the only European country left in which the Jews were not being destroyed. But that changed on March 14, 1944, when the Nazis occupied the country.

He said the plight of the Jews "ended somewhat by the heroism of many," including Ms. Szenes.

Dentist solves mystery behind photos

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Frank Kasman is several generations away from the mass extermination of Jews during World War II, yet he shares a special bond with a Lithuanian community that was swept away by Nazi Germany.

The Midland dentist has spent a great deal of his life learning about the community of Radin, Lithuania, which was a thriving agricultural community and major center of learning for Orthodox Jews before World War II.

His research was based on photographs in the possession of a family member that were given to him to touch up and re-shoot.

"My former father-in-law had some pictures that were messed up by rain," Kasman told a group gathered at Temple Beth El in Odessa on Thursday.

"Being a fairly good photographer, he asked me if I could fix them. After I finished those pictures, he said an aunt had some old photos that I might take a look at and see if I could re-shoot them."

Those photographs — which Kasman showed slides of during his presentation — turned out to be pictures of Radin.

Kasman said he had no idea what the pictures were of until he took them to a Yiddish professor at the University of Texas to translate some of the writing on the pictures. The professor told Kasman it was a little village in Lithuania, but could tell no more than that from the pictures.

State leaders sign Compact for Safe Schools

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards and state education leaders on Thursday signed a "Compact for Safe Schools" that calls for improving safety for students and teachers.

Ms. Richards, a former teacher, signed the pact at a State Board of Education meeting. She was joined by board members, Texas Juvenile Probation Commission officials and representatives of 14 education groups that included school boards, administrators, teachers, parents and business leaders.

Ms. Richards said it was an "historic event" when the various professional groups could get together and agree on an issue.

Education board chairwoman Carolyn Crawford said the agreement was "significant" and could lead to some "grass roots efforts for people to come together and talk about it."

The education groups developed the compact, which says schools will not tolerate weapons, drugs or violence on campuses.

It calls for revision of education laws to give schools more flexibility in improving safety and for sharing information on local programs that work.

It also asks students to behave properly, adhere to the Student Code of Conduct and treat others with respect and dignity, and for removing violent students and placing them in alternative learning institutions where possible.

Educators said the state should provide any additonal money that might be needed for the program, but John Cole, of the Texas Federation of Teachers, said "90 percent of what we're talking about can be done with what we have, if we just have the backbone to stand up and do it."

John Stevens, of the Texas Business and Educat on Coalition, said schools must establish clear standards of what is acceptable and what is not acceptable in schools, and then make it clear to students what will happen to them for violating rules.

Council cites worker with fortitude

Staff Report

The Permian Basin Private Industry Council (PIC) has named John Infante as a "distinguished participant" in the Midland Job Training Partnership Act program.

Infante was introduced at Thursday's Rotary Club luncheon.

Linda Bashman, PIC vice-chairwoman and manager of external affairs for Southwester Bell in Midland, said Infante represents hundreds of people who have succeeded through the efforts of PIC in the Permian Basin.

Ms. Basham referred to the JTPA program as "a partnership between the private and public sectors to provide education and training opportunties for our future workers."

Infante, a Vietnam veteran who had previously worked in the criminal justice field, went to the JTPA program seeking help to find work after experiencing a health problem that put his family in serious financial distress.

His case manager worked with him to develop vocational goals that met his dream to become certified as an alcohol and drug abuse counselor. He was able to transfer college credits and graduated from Midland College in 15 months.

Postal workers brace for last-minute tax return filers

Staff Report

With the deadline for filing income tax returns rapidly approaching, the U.S. Postal Service is bracing itself for the annual onslaught of last-minute tax filers.

"April 15 falls on a Friday this year," said Postmaster Stan Sartain. "Since Fridays are always busy around here, we expect things to get interesting around the middle of the afternoon. That's when you can count on all roads leading to the post office.

"Since we're predicting heavy tax-related traffic in the vicinity of the main post office again this year, we've taken an extra step or two to alleviate some of the congestion," he said.

Postal customers can easily avoid a trip to the main post office by mailing their returns or extension requests early in the day at any of the post offices, stations, branches or collection boxes throughout the Midland area.

He said that tax filers should double-check the pick-up schedule if they elect to use a street-side collection box to ensure their tax documents will be collected and postmarked before the deadline.

Customers can avoid trip to main post office by mailing returns or extension requests early in the day at any of the post offices, stations, branches or collection boxes throughout Midland area.

Special collection points have been established for tax filers who cannot meet ordinary cutoff times at postal facilities in the community.

Last-minute returns and extension requests may by deposited until the time indicated at the following locations:

- Graves Station, 3304 W. Wadley, 5 p.m.
- ClayDesta Station, 612 Air Park Road, 5 p.m.
- Village Station, 2315 W. Louisiana Ave., 5 p.m.
- General Mail Facility, 10000 Sloan Field Blvd., midnight.
- Downtown Station, 100 E. Wall Ave., midnight.

"This certainly can be a hectic time," Sartain said, "and in the hustle and bustle of completing and signing forms, it's easy to overlook the simple things. Try to mail as early in the day as possible.

"Be certain to weigh your returns or extensions on a postal scale and calculate the proper amount of postage, especially if you are filing extra forms or schedules this year."

Tax agencies will not pay postage due, so short-paid tax filings will be returned to the sender for additional postage.

"In addition, we see lots of envelopes without a return address and no postage, and these are sent to the dead-letter office since we have no way of returning them," Sartain said.

"Ordinarily, that means you'll miss the deadline."

Sartain noted that Midland post offices expect to receive more than 7,000 additional pieces of mail on "tax night" this year.

Every return or extension request will receive an official April 15 postmark if it is properly prepared for mailing and deposited by the designated cutoff time, he said.

PEEK: Megasavant displays talent

dinary talents and to stress the need for those with disabilities to be included in society.

A public meeting with Peek is scheduled for 7 p.m. today at Alamo Junior High School. As with the luncheon, Peek will interact with and invite questions from the audience.

Unlike his Hollywood counterpart, Peek is a very warm person and enjoys interacting with other people, said Ray Unterbrink, director of the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens (MARC).

Peek is on a tour of various cities around the country that have association chapters.

Peek, 43, suffered brain damage at birth and lived an isolated life in his family home. As he grew, however, his family noticed astounding feats of memory that he was able to perform.

"He has absolutely total recall," Unterbrink said. The term for people with disabilities who exhibit great abilities in other areas is "savantism," Unterbrink said.

Peek is further classified as a "megasavant" because of his extraordinary powers, Unterbrink said.

At the luncheon, Peek invited questions about classical music, small towns and other topics. Peek was able to name highways intersecting small cities in Texas and Louisiana, even though he is a native of Utah.

Peek's father facilitates communication between his son and the audience. Peek often makes leaping associations that his father clarifies. As an example, when asked of Mozart's Mass, Peek began singing the "Lacrimosa" from that work.

When asked about the night "Rainman" received its Oscar awards, Peek said "double overtime." His father clarified that by saying Peek was relating Utah Jazz basketball scores during the Oscars.

Peak was able to name all four acts of Richard Wagner's "The Ring of the Nibelung," eliciting laughter from the audience by turning to Midland Mayor J.D. Faircloth and asking, "Did you know that?"

His father related a time when Peek was asked the name of the mother of an obscure British monarch, to which Peek replied, "You've got her anchored off Long Beach."

Peek told members of the audience on what day of the week they were born and performed other mental feats.

At the end of the event, Faircloth presented Peek with a document, proclaiming Friday as "Kim Peek Day."

RADIN: Nazis take Lithuanian village

(From 1D)

The photographs were later printed in a Jewish magazine by a publisher Kasman met in New York. After the pictures were published, Kasman received a letter from a woman stating that her grandfather used to live in the village.

He then placed advertisements in major Jewish magazines asking for help in identifying the people and places in the pictures. He ended up with 57 sources that helped him put together the pieces of the puzzle of Radin.

"There were about 1,500-2,000 occupants in Radin," Kasman said. "About 1,000 were Jews. The others were mainly Polish and Lithuanian."

Radin was an agricultural community and was the home of the Chofetz Hayyim Yeshiva — a major center of higher learning for Orthodox Jews. More than 300 students attended the school from around Europe and the United States.

The yeshiva claimed Rabbi Yisroel Meir Kagan as one of its teachers. Kasman said that Kagan was a respected and highly revered teacher in the Jewish community.

"He was a giant among the Jews," Kasman said. "He was very sincere with his students about Judaism."

Kagan was the first to feel that things were going to go badly in Europe, Kasman said. Before his death in 1933, he advised many Jews in the community to move and requested that the yeshiva be relocated. The institution was eventually moved to Israel, where it remains today. A branch of the school is located in New York.

Pictures of schoolchildren, an open-air market, finely dressed men and women, thriving businesses and other aspects of Radin community life could not foretell the bitter end for the town.

In May 1942, Radin was combined wtih another neighboring community to form the Radin ghetto. Between May 7-10 of that year, Jews were killed and placed in a large grave outside of the town, which was destroyed by Nazis.

UNITY: FAMA rallies for park

the "FUTURE PARK SITE." The overgrowth remains.

But a year after construction of Unity Park was originally slated to begin, a new generation of organizers have not forgotten the planned park. In fact, the lot is expected to be cleared by April 15 in preparation for construction.

"It's going to happen," Joe A. Perales said. "We're on it 100 percent."

Perales is the recently elected president of the First Association of Mexican Americans (FAMA), the umbrella organization that initiated the project.

The original plan was to develop the park completely from donations.

That's still the plan, although the bulk of the approximately $172,000 has not been raised, Perales said.

"We've got some fund-raisers coming up and some (requests for) grants sent out," he said.

The resurgence of interest began around the beginning of the year, organizers said.

The project slowed down considerably due to changes in the leadership of FAMA and member groups, said Charlene Wurtz, executive director of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Perales said organizers hope to revive community interest, especially among residents of the east and southeast sides of town.

Perales said he anticipates the park to be completed by the end of the year.

Organizations, in addition to the Hispanic chamber, that make up FAMA include: Eastside Lions Club, Knights of Columbus, Permian Basin LULAC, Midland LULAC, Midland Association of Bilingual Education, Ballet Folklorico, M-Class and the Hispanic Honor Society.

PIC vice-chairman Kevin Skipper recognized several Midland employers who have provided job opportunities for PIC's trainees.

He said "the program can't work without private sector employers."

The Permian Basin Private Industry Council serves a 17-county area of West Texas with programs for job seekers who need to improve their work skills in order to become self-sufficient.

PIC also operates programs to retrain dislocated workers. PIC's summer youth employment and training program focuses on academic enrichment and work-site career exploration.

Bentsen finally gets his name on face of American dollars

By Maria Recio
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — It was a long time coming. Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen finally got his name on the U.S. currency Thursday — by his count, 442 days after taking office.

"It's about time," he said.

At a ceremony in the Fort Worth plant of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the former Texas senator thanked a group of 250 dignitaries, supporters and former staffers and showed off the new "Bentsen bills."

Looking out over the crowd, filled with many longtime backers, Bentsen choked up a little and said, "So many names. So many memories. So many campaign trails. And all of you are a part of it."

It was the first time such a ceremony was held outside Washington — the only other place where U.S. currency is printed — and the group roared with approval when Bentsen said he insisted it be held in Fort Worth "because I'm from Texas."

Bentsen's wife, B.A., told a reporter that she thought of her husband's parents Thursday morning, and "it brought tears to my eyes."

"They would be so proud," she said.

With a hearty "Welcome home, Mr. Secretary," former Fort Worth Mayor Bob Bolen stood in for ailing Mayor Kay Granger to greet the crowd, which included the Bentsens' three children and three of six grandchildren.

Standing with Bentsen on the dais were Rep. Pete Geren, D-Fort Worth; Geren's predecessor, former House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth; Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas; and Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis.

In what is considered the ultimate perk of the job, the Treasury secretary's signature is on all U.S. currency, along with that of the U.S. treasurer. However, the Clinton administration's delay in selecting a treasurer meant Bentsen had to bide his time as bills — an estimated $11 billion worth — rolled off the presses for more than a year bearing the name of his Republican predecessor, Nicholas Brady.

Bentsen's name now appears on the bottom right-hand side of the $1 bill. The name of Treasurer Mary Ellen Withrow is on the left. Withrow also attended Thursday's ceremony.

The Bentsen bills were put in circulation Thursday through the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas.

"The public will start seeing them very soon," said plant director Peter Daley.

The Fort Worth plant will soon start printing $20 Bentsen bills, as well, and over the next few months all currency in all denominations will bear Bentsen's and Withrow's signatures.

So far, 2.7 million Bentsen notes have been printed at the Fort Worth and Washington facilities.

Health-care debate puts 2 Texas firms at odds

By Susan Hightower
AP business writer

DALLAS — As the nation and state grapple with attempts to reform the health care-system, two of Texas' big employers Thursday took opposite sides on a critical issue: mandatory employer payments for health insurance.

The Alliance for Health Reform and the Kaiser Family Foundation sponsored a meeting for members of the Dallas Business Group on Health about how proposed national reform programs would affect Texans.

The health-care reform plan backed by President Clinton — one of numerous proposals now being considered in Washington — would mandate universal coverage and require employers to pay most of the premiums for their workers.

Fort Worth-based American Airlines has not endorsed any of the plans and would rather see health-care reform driven by the private sector, said Mary Jordan, the airline's vice president of personnel resources.

However, American supports employer mandates because they would spread health-care costs more evenly among all companies, she said.

American, which provides insurance coverage for nearly 250,000 people, spends an estimated $40 million annually on family members employed by other companies. Those costs contributed to American's need to eliminate more than 2,000 jobs in 1993, Ms. Jordan said.

"We simply can no longer afford to subsidize the health-care costs of other companies," she said.

American's parent, AMR Corp., is one of the state's leading employers and has more than 100,000 employees in all.

Taking the other side was David Scherb, vice president of compensation for PepsiCo Inc. Plano-based Frito-Lay Inc., a PepsiCo subsidiary, also employs thousands of Texans.

Scherb said employer mandates would not level the playing field and would cost too much for most companies.

Pepsico appears to be in the majority. Robert Howden, Texas director of the National Federation of Independent Business, and Dane Harris, president of the Texas Association of Business, said their members oppose the idea.

"A large segment of the employer population in Texas simply cannot afford to provide health coverage for all their employees," Harris said.

U.S. Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, also opposed employer mandates, saying incremental health reform is all that's needed now. He said his ideas are less costly, don't radically change the system and don't require universal participation.

"If you want to cause a problem, tell a Texan he has to do something," he said. "In Texas, we're going to have 10 percent just out of orneriness that don't want to participate."

Texas Health and Human Services Commissioner Richard Ladd advocated the Clinton proposal as the best way to meet Texas' needs.

for their actions and there should be "zero tolerance" for inappropriate behavior, Stevens said.

"Not so many years ago, chewing gum and throwing spit wads were the most common disciplinary challenges facing Texas teachers," said Carolyn Bell, vice president of the Fort Worth Independent School District board of trustees and spokeswoman for the education groups.

Now, Ms. Bell said, "students come to school not in fear of their next pop quiz but in fear of their property and their lives."

"Students cannot learn if they do not feel safe," she said. "And teachers cannot teach if they fear for their well being."

MEMORIAL: People gather to remember Holocaust

(From 1D)

"Today we pause to remember each life lost not to return," Rosen said. "These lives have not been forgotten and their names and the horrors endured will always be remembered."

Rosen attempted to light six memorial candles — one for each million killed — but the wind blew them out.

According to one of the Jewish members present, it is a Jewish custom to light a candle on the anniversary of a loved one's death.

A memorial prayer was read in Hebrew by Rosen and Harry Leventhal. Leventhal's wife, Judy, also read a memorial prayer, in English, in memory of the 6 million Jews who were slaughtered.

Jews of all ages — from infants to the elderly — and entire families were destroyed. Nationality didn't matter, either. The death camps operated for years and the death and destruction was enormous.

Just the list read by Mandel of family members he lost was lengthy. More than 12,000 names were prepared to be read and the ceremony lasted for more than two hours.

One Jewish man would bow his head during the ceremony when the reader would say a name that was similar to his last name.

Recognition and remembrance were the goals for the ceremony, Rosen said.

New York Voices to join symphony for performances

Staff Report

The group New York Voices is to be the guest artist with the Midlnad-Odessa Symphony & Chorale today at Odessa's International Ballroom and Saturday at Midland's Holiday Inn Country Villa.

As of late Thursday, only general admission tickets are available for Saturday's concert. General admission and reserved seating are available for today's performance, said a representative at the symphony office. Both shows are at 8 p.m.

The Pops Concerts mark the quartet's debut performance with a symphony orchestra.

"We're really excited about getting to hear this music performed by such a large ensemble," said Darmon Meader, the 32-year-old leader of New York Voices. He said the group usually performs with piano, bass and drums.

Meader said the group is "a very high energy band, and we consider ourselves on one level a jazz group. However, the styles of music that we incorporate are very diverse.

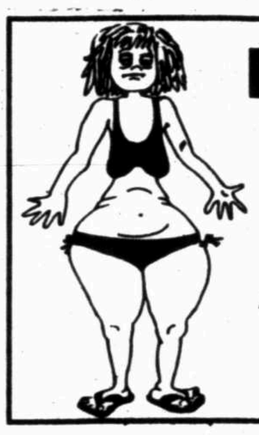

"One minute we will be performing a song from say Duke Ellington . . . and then the next minute, we will be doing a song by Stevie Wonder."

A dance, featuring The Shades, will follow the concert and a catered breakfast will be served at midnight. Cost of the breakfast is $5. Tickets for the concert or the breakfast may be purchased through the symphony office by calling 563-0921, or at Mainstream Music, Midland and Odessa.

CENTRAL AIR CONDITIONING
WAREHOUSE SALE
Dear Friend,
Yes, it is absolutely true, you can actually replace your old (and probably inefficient) heater and air conditioner for at least $1,000.00 less than you would have to pay at any other time.
Let me explain...
We have had two mild seasons in a row and the months of Feb. thru April have "killed" my business each of these seasons. I lost of ton of money during those "killer" months and it took me the remaining 9 months each year to make up for them. Even with the past cold wave. I'm looking for the same thing to happen this year.
My Problem Is Your Opportunity
I have decided to give up trying to make a profit during the "killer" months. If I can only minimize any losses during Feb. thru April. I will come out ahead the other nine months.
I Have 25 Air Conditioner Systems
They are brand new units. They are not seconds, or blems or standard builders models. They are factory fresh premium air conditioners and heaters, and have a full factory warranty.
The Concept Is Simple
By letting you win big now, I will win at the end of the year. I am betting that if I make you an offer that is "irresistible" (at least it should be if your heater or air conditioner is over 10 years old) and I barely mark it up above the price I paid, I will accomplish two things:
1. I will cover my rent, utilities, insurance and taxes in the "killer" months.
2. I can pay my professional staff of technicians to work instead of paying them to sit at home.
If I can accomplish these two objectives. I will minimize my losses and the rest of the year can be a winner.
YOU CAN BUY WITH NO CASH DOWN
Consider this, if you decide to make monthly investments instead of paying cash, the entire amount of your payments can be offset by the savings on your utility bills. It's like having your cake and eating it too.
IRONCLAD GUARANTEE
I am so confident that you will save at least 25% on your cooling and heating bills (I'm projecting more like 30% to 50%).
WHY THIS OFFER CAN'T LAST
When all of the air conditioners are sold in a particular size, that's it. There are no more at this price. So don't delay.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though; particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.
