CRMWA water project progressing

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

Construction crews were busy lining up pipe and reviewing surveys across the Hayhook Ranch in preparation for the first phases of a Canadian River Municipal Water Authority's plan to add more ground water to Lake Meredith water for the 11 communities, including Pampa, to whom they provide drinking water.

When the $81 million project is completed, water from beneath Roberts County will be pumped through a 36 mile long aqueduct to about five miles south of Fritch where it will tie into the main pipeline carrying water from Pampa to Lubbock.

"The whole thing costs about $81 million including the water rights, current construction, all of the wells and pipelines and roads," said John Williams, CRMWA director.

Craig Robinson, project engineer, said they have been on site since January. Preparations have moved rapidly, he said, because of good weather.

Williams said they expect to start laying pipe in early March. The projected completion date for the project is May 1, 2001.

"The whole thing costs about $81 million including the water rights, current construction, all of the wells and pipelines and roads," said John Williams, CRMWA director.

While the pipe for the line is being brought in and the enormous trenching machine is being assembled in preparation for the digging and laying of the line, other crews are working on pumping facilities. Each of those two contracts is valued at about $12 million.

"They're building some large tanks, a pump station building and quite a few facilities there," Williams said of the activities north of Pampa.

They will be building another pump station southwest of Borger that will take the underground water to where it will meet with the pipeline carrying water from Lake Meredith.

Ray Gonzales with Oscar Renda Contractors checks rebar as they prepare to pour concrete at the new pumping station being built about 15 miles north of Pampa on the Hayhook Ranch for the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority. The pumping station is part of a 36-mile pipeline designed to transport underground water pumped from a well field in Roberts County to mix with water from Lake Meredith.

Aid no barrier to census jobs

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

Pampa residents and other Texans who receive public assistance can work for the U. S. Census Bureau on a temporary status without jeopardizing their eligibility status, Secretary of State Elton Bomer said Friday.

He said policy changes by the Texas Department of Human Services, as authorized by federal agencies, have cleared the way for food stamp, TANF and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families and Medicaid recipients to consider employment with Census 2000.

"Persons receiving subsidized housing, food stamps, TANF, and TANF-related Medicaid benefits can accept temporary jobs with the U.S. Census knowing that earnings will not affect their benefits," said Secretary Bomer.

"Persons receiving subsidized housing, food stamps, TANF, and TANF-related Medicaid benefits can accept temporary jobs with the U.S. Census knowing that earnings will not affect their benefits," said Secretary Bomer.

Texans living in housing subsidized by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development also are able to take temporary work for Census 2000 without impacting their eligibility, according to both state and federal officials.

Officials said any public assistance recipients should notify their caseworkers even though the extra income will not count against eligibility requirements.

Can you find Blarney?

CofC has St. Patrick's promotion

The Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring "Find Blarney the Leprechaun" for a St. Patrick's Day promotion from March 6-15. A leprechaun figurine named "Blarney" will be hidden in the area and clues will be given daily to help local it.

The lucky person who finds it will receive $100 in Pampa Bucks and an invitation to ride in the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Shamrock with the Top O' Texans (Gold Coats).

The clues will be placed in selected stores in Pampa and you can only get the clues by going to that store. The kind of store will be listed each day in The Pampa News and on radio. The name of the store will be listed the next day along with the kind of store for the current day's clues. The clues can only be found at the stores; merchants won't give telephone information.

The Monday clue can be found at a computer store.

Remembering the Alamo ...

DALLAS (AP) — Remembering the Alamo took on a new urgency this weekend.

Members of the Alamo Society want the March 6, 1836 fall of the shrine of Texas liberty never to be forgotten. They're gathering in San Antonio from across the world.

At dawn Monday, society members will gather on the plaza of the old mission in downtown San Antonio roughly at the time of the fighting on that chilly morning 164 years ago.

Society founder William R. Chemerka, like many of the enthusiasts who have "crossed the line" and joined the group, was hooked on the Alamo by a television series in 1954-55. Will he ever forget?

"Never," Chemerka, a 54-year-old high school history teacher from East Hanover, N.J., told The Dallas Morning News. "Because the Alamo is a story that still contains some unfinished chapters which inspire debate, discussion and investigation."

Names in the news ...

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The mystery has been solved: Turns out it was toupee tape that held that eye-popping Grammy dress on Jennifer Lopez.

"It wasn't going to move," the singer and actress told TV's syndicated "Entertainment Tonight" in an interview for broadcast Monday.

How Lopez kept the dress in place was a mystery the day after the show. Her publicist said the topic was too intimate to talk about, though fashion experts said it could have been two-sided tape, tape attached to Velcro or a perfect fit.

Toupee tape is clear, sticky on both sides and extra sensitive for toupees, mustaches and beards.

No matter how she kept it on, the Versace dress, which opened in a deep-V to Lopez's navel and seemed to defy gravity, was the talk of a lot of towns.

"It didn't seem that out there to me," Lopez said. "It was a good-looking dress. It wasn't as open as it looked on TV.

"I had no idea it was going to be such a big deal."

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — Stereotyping and prejudice remain a factor in American life, says actress Elaine Miles, who played serene and inscrutable Marilyn Whirlwind on TV's "Northern Exposure."

"You'd think it would be gone by now — this stereotyping — but I don't think it ever will be," said Miles, an Oregon resident of Cayuse and Nez Perce descent who grew up in Seattle

She spoke to more than 300 people Thursday night at the fourth annual potlatch sponsored by the Lower Elwha Klallam tribe and the Port Angeles School District.

Miles, whose film credits include a role in Sherman Alexie's "Smoke Signals," said even now she is sometimes asked if she lives in a teepee, adding that some people still believe all American Indians are uneducated and poor.

"I don't understand why it still has to be this way," she said.

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — What impact do the movies have on the people who watch them?

"The short answer is that I don't know," Motion Picture Association of America chief Jack Valenti said. "But I have the right to make any movie I choose, and I also have the right not to go see it."

Valenti was among entertainment industry representatives who took part in a panel discussion on substance abuse Thursday at the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library.

The panel agreed that portrayals of substance abuse are common in the media, but they were split over its influence and whether anything should be done.

"Directors say that (getting rid of cigarette or drug use) would disrupt the dramatic narrative they have going," Valenti said.

The panel also included film critic Michael Medved, Hilary Rosen of the Recording Industry Association of America, Dolores Tucker of the National Political Congress of Black Women and actor Malcolm-Jamal Warner.

"I don't believe there's one young person who has watched a show, seen a film or listened to a song and they picked up a cigarette," Warner said. "The effect, I think, is with people who are already using and it's seen as 'this is cool.'"

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indian director Shekhar Kapur is releasing his Oscar-winning film "Elizabeth" in his home country, saddened by a two-year delay because of quibbling with government censors.

"Water from the well field will be mixed at that point with water from the lake," Williams said.

A huge trenching machine has been brought in by one of the contractors, John P. Stephens, and is being assembled on site.

"They're not laying pipe yet," Williams said, "but they are delivering pipe. They have done quite a bit of preparation along the right-of-way."

Williams said they are also beginning to work in the well field, building roads.

"After the roads are built, they'll start on the collections pipes and wells and other facilities in the well field itself," Williams said.

He said they expect to start laying pipe around March 8.

"They'll be doing some compaction tests," Williams said. "They'll put some pipe in the ground and compact the material under it and around it. Then, they'll remove the pipe to evaluate the effectiveness of their compaction."

As soon as that's done, Williams said, they will start laying pipe.

"They will lay probably a couple or three miles a week," Williams said.

ALAMO

Alamo afficionados will use the anniversary as an opportunity to compare notes on the battle for Texas independence from Mexico and the lore that surrounds it.

Some at the Alamo City for weekend events are history teachers, business leaders, authors, artists or even descendants of those who fought in the 13-day Mexican siege at the mission-turned-fortress that left more than 190 defenders of Texas liberty dead.

Besides re-enacting parts of the battle, members will debate the authenticity of the Mexican soldiers' uniforms used in John Wayne's classic movie "The Alamo." They'll also toast with Lone Star beers at the historic Menger Hotel bar next to the mission on Monday, which is also the 15th anniversary of the society.

Some — sporting coonskin caps — are fans of Fess Parker, who starred in Walt Disney's "King of The Wild Frontier," an account of the life of Alamo hero Davy Crockett.

The latest myths and controversies surrounding the event, especially whether Crockett died swinging his trusty rifle or surrendered to Gen. Santa Anna and his Mexican army, will be discussion topics.

Chemerka, also editor of the quarterly publication Alamo Journal, said it's part of the mission.

The society includes "serious students of Alamo history" as well as fans of "the Alamo of popular culture," he said.

"The inspiration of the Alamo for many members is that Walt Disney series, but the interest has developed and matured to a more sophisticated study of the Alamo and the Texas Revolution for others," said Chemerka.

Bob Jones University drops interracial dating ban

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Bob Jones University dropped its ban on interracial dating Friday, a month after Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush's visit to the school drew widespread criticism.

"As of today, we've dropped the rule," Bob Jones III said on CNN's "Larry King Live" Friday night.

During Bush's appearance at the fundamentalist Christian school last month, the Texas governor told his audience that he shared their conservative views. Bush later apologized for failing to criticize the school's anti-Catholic views and racial policies.

"I'm pleased that they've changed the policy," Bush said Friday while campaigning in New York. "Right after my speech, I spoke out against the policy. The university has made the right decision."

The Greenville school banned interracial dating, although it started admitting black students after it lost its tax exemption in 1983 after a 13-year battle with the Internal Revenue Service that cited the school's discrimination.

The school had defended the policy based on a biblical interpretation that God created people differently for a reason. The policy arose in the 1950s when an Asian family threatened to sue after their son, a student, almost married a white girl, a school spokesman has said.

"We don't have to have that rule," Jones said. "This thing is of such insignificance to us. It's so significant to the world at large, the media in particular, why should we have this thing here as an obstacle?"

Jones said the school had a greater concern for its graduates than for keeping the rule. While extolling the virtues of the school's graduates he said, "But now we're being defined as a racist school, that's all the media talk about."

Jones said he met with the school's administrators Friday afternoon to discuss the rule change before flying to Washington for the TV interview.

Earlier Friday, the university used full-page newspaper advertisements in USA Today and South Carolina's largest newspapers to answer some of the national criticism directed at it. Democrats in Congress this week introduced a resolution seeking to condemn the university.

Bob Jones University is a popular stop for many Republican candidates seeking conservative support.

Bush appeared at the school shortly after he lost to Sen. John McCain in the New Hampshire primary. The South Carolina primary was looming at the time, and he went on to win in the conservative state.

After losing South Carolina, McCain's campaign made "Catholic Voter Alert" calls in the next states, Michigan and Washington, to tell them of Bush's visit to Bob Jones.

GOP candidate Alan Keyes, who recently spoke at Bob Jones University, said Friday night he thought lifting the ban was "a good step forward."

"As you know I'm married to an Indian American, so our marriage would have violated their own guidelines," he told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

"I think this will help, so that the world will understand the real heart of Bob Jones University, and the people I met there and the people I know there. I think that's the shining truth that will come through."

Democratic presidential candidate Bill Bradley said through a spokesman: "It's about time."

The university, in the Appalachian foothills city of Greenville, has 3,500 students. It has long established itself as a bastion of fundamentalism.

Jones III, president since 1971, and his father, Bob Jones Jr., who died in 1997, have been sharp-tongued about those they believe have abandoned the strict teachings of the Bible, including Billy Graham and the pope. Graham should not have reached out across denominations for his crusades, Jones III says. And rather than meet Pope John Paul II when he visited Columbia in 1987, Bob Jones Jr. said he would rather "speak to the devil himself."

His grandfather, an evangelist and son of an Alabama sharecropper, was a product of the Bible-thumping, Jim Crow-era South. Bob Jones founded the school in 1927 in College Point, Fla. He later moved it to Cleveland, Tenn., then brought it to Greenville when the Chamber of Commerce offered to buy 170 acres of land for the school.

Today, Bob Jones University offers more than 100 undergraduate majors, from electrical engineering and aviation management to Bible teaching, and 55 graduate degrees, most of those religious or musically oriented.

Pampa High DECA chapter creates project for Lamar fifth graders

The Pampa Chapter of DECA created a Free Enterprise project for the fifth grader classes at Lamar Elementary. The project consisted of teaching the young students about the five characteristics of the Free Enterprise System. The chapter members spent three days at Lamar presenting the information.

To help demonstrate the characteristics, the chapter designed hands-on activities. These activities included a model home, creating a product, comparing advertisements, choosing colored pencils and an auction. To conclude the project, the students illustrated on a sheet of construction paper what they had learned from the project. The DECA members then created a paper quilt from the construction paper that will be given to the Lamar fifth grade class.

The DECA members involved in teaching the students were Jill Forman, Desarae Hilton, Angela Bowman, April Rodgers, Raul Balero, Bill Campbell, LaShaunda Holmes and Starla Honeycutt.

The DECA members submitted the Free Enterprise Project at the Texas DECA District 8 Career Development Conference. The project was awarded first place and will advance on to the state competition in Corpus Christi March 1-5.

Antiques roadshow special star of local PBS station KACV-TV pledge drive

New musical entertainment specials include "The Three Tenors Live in Concert," the Native American musical "Spirit: A Journey in Cance, Drum and Song," plus new programs by Pavarotti and friends, The Irish Tenors, Garth Brooks, The Four Tops, Andre Rieu, Paul Anka and the Dixie Chicks.

AMARILLO — Now in its fourth season, Antiques Roadshow will be taking center stage during KACV-TV's March Pledge Drive, Festival 2000. The two-hour "Antiques Roadshow Special Edition" airs at 7 p.m. Monday, March 6, and will repeat at 1 p.m. the following Saturday. The program will treat viewers to highlights and never-before seen excerpts form the series including fabulous finds and family "treasures."

"Our Panhandle viewers love this series," said KACV Membership Coordinator Joanna Latham. "So we wanted to make the most of this special edition of the program. We'll be offering the "Antiques Roadshow Printer," a new book about the program, which has been very well received, the "Antiques Roadshow Magazine" and will be having drawings for rare and unique items for people who join the station at certain levels. It should be a lot of fun!"

Other highlights of the March 2-12 membership drive include a marathon airing of recently-produced local history programs at 3 p.m. Saturday, March 11 beginning including: "The Cowboy Mystique: A Tribute to Buck Ramsey," "Rout 66: A Panhandle Perspective" and "From the Group Up: Oil and gas in the Panhandle with videos of the programs offered as gifts to members who donate at specified levels.

New musical entertainment specials include "The Three Tenors Live in Concert," the Native American musical "Spirit: A Journey in Cance, Drum and Song," plus new programs by Pavarotti and friends, The Irish Tenors, Garth Brooks, The Four Tops, Andre Rieu, Paul Anka and the Dixie Chicks. Encore specials by Michael Crawford, Andrea Bocelli and others will also be broadcast.

This year's festival has a special treats in store for fans of British comedy: "Keeping Up Appearances: The Memoirs of Hyacinth Bucket." one of the most popular series ever aired on the station. "Red Green's We Can't Help It, We're Men" will round out the comedic offerings during the drive. In addition, a day-long salute to children's programming, a Super-Handyman Weekend Marathon and special interest programs on cooking and offsetting the affects of aging will also be aired.

"We wanted to make sure that we had a little something for everyone in this year's Festival," said Latham. "After all, as the only true local viewing alternative in the Panhandle, it's important that we showcase as many of the program types we offer almost exclusively."

KACV-TV is broadcast on Channel 2 and Amarillo Cable 3. Viewers outside Amarillo should check their local listings for cable channel allocations.

For more information regarding the membership drive, contact Latham at (806) 371-5477 or 1-800-999-9243, or visit the web site at www.kacvtv.org.

Shooting continues to haunt me

Kate B. Dickson
associate publisher/editor

I'm still haunted like many of you by last week's shooting death of a 6-year-old girl killed by a 6-year-old boy who brought a loaded .32-caliber pistol to their Michigan school.

Of course, the little girl is the ultimate victim but not too far behind in the victim category is the classmate who shot her with the gun he'd picked up in a bedroom of the ramshackle house where he lived.

It was a home where he was surrounded by strangers, crime and drugs. His father was in jail and his mother lived elsewhere. The stolen gun had either been sold or traded for drugs.

When police served a search warrant at the house, they found a stolen shotgun and more drugs. Authorities are pursuing criminal charges against those in the house for leaving the semiautomatic weapon where the child could get it.

As I said, I'm haunted by what happened but I'm also haunted by the whys of it. I'm haunted by the conservative movement that has steered our country toward its lock 'em up-and-throw-away-the-key attitudes that have funneled billions of dollars into prison systems.

So much of this money has been spent at the expense of preventative programs — programs that may have helped the boy's parents when they were children. Social programs that may have kept the boy's father out of jail. School and other programs that may have provided birth control for the young father and mother.

There are those who say the government/schools shouldn't become involved in sex education and in providing birth control; that it is a parent's place to oversee this part of their child's lives. That's great if the child has responsible parents but we all know crack heads and the like aren't responsible. And their numbers are legion.

Can't we help these children suffer just a little bit less? Can't we help us suffer a little less in the long-run by helping to keep these little ones from become the pariahs they otherwise are destined to be.

I closed my eyes and tried to imagine what it must be like for a child to grow up in such a situation but I can't stay there. You try it.

It's little wonder the boy had been in trouble at school previously for acting out in anger — for fighting and for stabbing a classmate with a pencil. You and I would be angry, too, if we had to live as he did. If we were abandoned by our parents as he was.

Had this tragedy not have happened, this little boy would have met up with the justice system at some point. If somewhere along the line he didn't get killed by another thug, this could be his story:

He'd end up in a youth lock-up facility and likely would not get the drug/emotional counseling help he needed. He'd get out, progress in his crimes, probably become violent and get locked up in an adult prison somewhere. An adult prison where he would not get an education, not get drug and anger counseling, not learn a trade, not learn how to cope peacefully in society.

Of course, that's fine with many people. I can hear Bubba now.

"By Gawd, let's lock 'em all up and don't give them no TV either."

But what Bubba might not be thinking about is that most people who go to prison are eventually released. Released with no education, no real counseling, no marketable skills. But most likely he has learned some tricks of the trades from real pros.

So, Bubba? What do you figure these folks are gonna do once their back on free soil?

Duh.....

Texans proud of state heritage, history

March 2 is a special day for Texans. It is a day that fills our hearts with pride, and it is a day for remembering what we owe to those who went before us.

On that day, 162 years ago, a solemn convention of 54 men met in the small settlement of Washington-on-the-Brazos to sign the Texas Declaration of Independence.

The declaration stated:

"We, therefore ... do hereby resolve and declare ... that the people of Texas do now constitute a free, sovereign and independent republic..."

At the time, Texas was a remote territory of Mexico, hospitable only to the bravest and most determined of settlers. After declaring our independence, the founding delegates quickly wrote a constitution for the newborn republic and organized an interim government.

My great-great grandfather, Charles S. Taylor, was one of the signers of the Texas Declaration of Independence.

As was the case when the American Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776, our declaration only pointed the way toward a goal, the price of which was enormous effort and great sacrifice.

While the convention sat in Washington-on-the-Brazos, 6,000 Mexican troops were marching on the Alamo to challenge the newly created republic. Several days earlier, from the Alamo, Colonel William Travis sent his immortal letter to the people of Texas — and to all Americans. He knew the Mexican Army was approaching. and he knew that he had only a very few men at arms to help defend the San Antonio fortress.

Colonel Travis wrote:

"Fellow citizens and compatriots: I am besieged by a thousand or more of the Mexicans under Santa Anna — I have sustained a continual bombardment and cannonade for 24 hours and have not lost a man — the enemy has demanded a surrender at discretion, otherwise, the garrison are to be put to the sword, if the fort is taken — I have answered the demands with a cannon shot, and our flag still waves proudly from the wall — I shall never surrender or retreat. Then, I call on you in the name of liberty, of patriotism and of everything dear to the American character, to come to our aid, with all dispatch. The enemy is receiving reinforcements daily and will no doubt increase to three or four thousand in four or five days. If this call is neglected, I am determined to sustain myself as long as possible and die like a solder who never forgets what is due to his own honor and that of his country — Victory or Death. William Barret Travis, Lt. Col, Commander."

What American, Texan or otherwise, can fail to be stirred by Col. Travis' resolve?

In the battle that followed, 184 brave men died in a heroic but vain attempt to fend off Santa Anna's overwhelming army. But the Alamo was crucial. Because those heroes at the Alamo held out for so long, Santa Anna's forces were battered and diminished. Gen. Sam Houston gained the time he needed to muster his forces and devise a strategy to defeat Santa Anna at the Battle of San Jacinto, April 21, 1836.

The Lone Star was visible on the horizon at last.

We Texans continue to commemorate the heroic times during which we won our independence, existed as a republic and finally joined the Union.

Each year on March 2, I read Colonel Travis' letter to my colleagues in the Senate to remind them — and all of us — of the pride Texans share in their history, and in being the only state that came into the Union as a republic.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, March 5, the 65th day of 2000. There are 301 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 5, 1770, the Boston Massacre took place as British soldiers, taunted by a crowd of colonists, opened fire, killing five people.

On this date:

In 1849, Zachary Taylor took the oath of office at his presidential inauguration.

In 1867, an abortive Fenian uprising against English rule took place in Ireland.

In 1868, the Senate was organized into a Court of Impeachment to decide charges against President Andrew Johnson.

Campaign finance reform: Wrong target

Walter Williams
Syndicated columnist

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., makes a lot of political hay portraying himself as the presidential candidate for campaign finance reform and against influence-peddling. He's for restrictions on the "soft money" millions that flow into the campaign coffers of the Republican and Democratic parties from corporations, labor unions and private individuals. Before becoming bamboozled by McCain's message, we might stop to ask: Are political contributions really the problem?

Why do corporations, unions and other interest groups fork over millions of dollars to political campaigns? If you think it's because these groups are simply extraordinarily civic-minded Americans who just love participation in the political process, you probably also believe that storks deliver babies, and there really is an Easter Bunny and Santa Claus.

A better explanation is that congressmen are in the favor-granting business. The greater the growth of government control over businesses, property and employment, the greater is the value of being able to influence Congress. Two distinguished George Mason University economists, Professors James Buchanan and Gordon Tullock, who've done pioneering work in political economy, use the unlikely term "rent-seeking" to describe what goes on in Washington.

Rent-seeking refers to the use of government as a means to acquire greater wealth by gaining monopoly power or income transfers. Rent-seeking abounds. U.S. automakers and their unions get Congress to enact quotas and tariffs on foreign imports. Dairymen and sugar producers seek import restrictions on dairy products and sugar. Labor unions seek minimum-wage laws and other legislation that eliminates competition. When Congress grants these favors, the recipients see increased profits and wages that come at the expense of other Americans.

Using Congress is one way to restrict competition. Using mob violence a la Al Capone is another. But why use violence and risk imprisonment or death when the same result can be obtained with campaign contributions? For example, if Archer Daniels Midland's CEO Dwayne Andreas used goons and violence to stop people from buying sugar from Caribbean producers so he could sell more corn syrup, he'd wind up in jail. If he makes big campaign contributions, he gets the same result, without risking imprisonment. Congress just enacts quotas and tariffs.

Rent-seeking is inefficient. Import restraints on Japanese cars during the 1980s cost American car buyers about $4.3 billion. That's about $160,000 per year for each job saved in Detroit. It would have been cheaper to allow the imports and have Congress give each laid-off auto worker $60,000 a year so they could buy a vacation residence in Florida. But to have such an open and above-board wealth transfer would have been politically impossible.

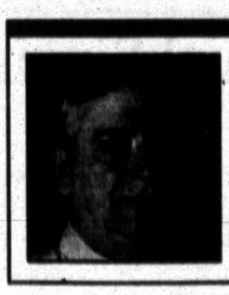
Some campaign contributions represent extortion. It's the bad cop-good cop sham. One congressman tells a CEO that another congressman has a bill pending that's going to be very costly to his company. It might be environmental or worker safety regulations, import restrictions, etc. The congressman tells the CEO that a fat campaign contribution will help defeat the bill. That's what Buchanan and Tullock might call "rent avoidance."

You say, "OK, Williams, what can be done?"

I say: Forget about campaign finance reform. If Congress did only what it's constitutionally authorized to do, influence-peddling would be a non-issue because Congress wouldn't have the power to grant favors. It might also help if we had a law that read: Whatever Congress does for one American it must do for all Americans. If Congress pays one American not to raise pigs, every American not raising pigs should also receive payments.

I fear that neither measure would get American support, so we deserve the rotten government we're getting.

Electing a president is serious business



Charley Reese
Syndicated columnist

Most Americans, including me, know nothing about Vladimir Putin, the new Russian president. Therefore, speculation about what he will do is pointless. But I do know that Russia is continuing to modernize its nuclear strategic forces.

It is easy to get the impression from news reports that Russia is falling apart, and in some of its civilian sectors that is true. But the Russians long ago embarked on a nuclear modernization program, and they are currently deploying a new intercontinental ballistic missile that is both rail and road mobile. Russia has also embarked upon building new ballistic-missile submarines.

Furthermore, the Russians are modernizing and improving their blast-proof command-and-control centers connected by a deep underground railroad that can evacuate the government leadership in time of war. In addition, they are building a gigantic underground facility several hundred miles from Moscow at Yamantau Mountain. Some 20,000 to 30,000 workers are employed on this project, which U.S. intelligence estimates is the size of metropolitan Washington. U.S. intelligence, however, does not know the purpose of the facility. Western observers are not allowed in the area.

Unfortunately, the Clinton administration has the same attitude toward American security as it does toward Clinton's personal misadventures: Whatever they say is, is. And they are telling the American people, despite evidence to the contrary, that the Russian government is just bending over backward to cooperate in disarmament projects. In fact, the General Accounting Office has reported that Russian scientists being paid by the American taxpayers to work on non-weapons projects are still working on weapons of mass destruction. The Russians have not ratified the START II agreement.

Furthermore, the Russians and Chinese have entered into several strategic agreements. Because the Russians are sharing missile technology and because Clinton has authorized the sale of advanced computers and allowed U.S. firms to sell the Russians other technology related to missile development, it is unlikely that the government's case against a Chinese-American is anything but scapegoating. The U.S. government has not charged the gentleman with espionage, only with violating security rules by taking classified documents home to work on them. This is a quite common practice. The Clinton administration has always taken a cavalier attitude toward security.

Clinton likes to say that Americans are no longer targeted by nuclear missiles. This is, first of all, a lie because the CIA reports that the Chinese ICBMs are aimed at American targets. In the second place, so-called de-targeting is just public-relations nonsense. It is unverifiable, and, even if the Russians are telling the truth, retargeting the United States would take less than 15 minutes, and that, too, is something unknowable to American intelligence.

I'm not trying to be an alarmist. I just want to point out to you that the fact that the American press has been so negligent in its reporting on national-security matters does not alter the fact that the Clinton administration has harmed American national security. People, on their own, ought to realize that the chief role of a president is to make sure the nation is secure and safe from foreign attack. If the American people continue to elect left-wing (expletive deleted), they may wake up one morning to find their cities burning. There is no love lost between either the Russians and the Americans or the Chinese and the Americans.

Electing a president is a damned serious business, and Americans had better stop casting their votes on the basis of which candidate is the cutest or promises them the most freebies.

Letterman, 'Good Morning America' set ratings milestones

By DAVID BAUDER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The return of convalescing heart patient David Letterman and an appearance by the reluctant bride of a multimillionaire steered two perennial second-place TV shows to ratings milestones last week.

Letterman's CBS "Late Show" had its best ratings in five years and its largest margin of victory over Jay Leno's "Tonight Show" on NBC since the week of July 7, 1995, Nielsen Media Research said Thursday.

Meanwhile, ABC's "Good Morning America" had its highest ratings since 1997 last week, a surge almost solely attributable to its coup in booking "Who Wants to Marry a Multimillionaire" bride Darva Conger.

Letterman made his first appearance on "Late Show" since his January heart surgery on Monday, Feb. 21. The show drew an estimated 12 million viewers. He appeared again on Wednesday and Friday.

The homecoming enabled Letterman to average 7.13 million viewers last week, compared to Leno's 5.86 million, Nielsen said. It was Letterman's most-watched week since January 1995.

The true test is whether Letterman can carry over the audience's warm feelings. In weeks without special events, Leno consistently beats him.

Letterman is working three days again next week, with Janeane Garafalo filling in on Tuesday and Dana Carvey subbing on Thursday.

"Good Morning America" averaged just over 5 million viewers last week, still behind NBC's first-place "Today" show, which had 6.1 million. But it was the closest those two shows have been in the ratings since December 1996, and "GMA's" most-watched week since the week after Princess Diana died.

The ABC morning show beat its rival with Conger's heavily-promoted first interview after her honeymoon on Feb. 23. That show drew an average audience of 6.1 million people, Nielsen said.

Conger didn't appear on the "Today" show until the next day.

More important for ABC, it kept some of that audience the next two days, averaging 5 million viewers on Thursday, when Conger's husband, Rick Rockwell, appeared, and 5 million on Friday.

Group helps lonely farmers find companions

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — As if a faltering farm economy weren't enough of a burden to bear, many in agriculture face another problem — loneliness.

Single farmers and ranchers have a tough time meeting other people with similar interests, say those who would know best.

"The thing about agriculture, it's usually in an area where you don't have many neighbors," said Kay Remus, 63, who lived on a ranch outside North Platte until her husband retired. He died shortly afterward in 1991.

Widowed and alone with her children grown up and leading their own lives, Remus became more isolated in the three years following her husband's death. Then she spotted a newspaper ad for a gathering of people like herself.

Six years later, Remus chaired the 14th annual national convention of Singles in Agriculture, held in Lincoln over the weekend. The itinerary was packed with social events including dances, group meals and tours of local sites, the Quilt Research Institute and the nation's only tractor-testing laboratory among them.

Singles in Agriculture got its start in 1984, after one farmer complained in a letter to Farm Journal that it was hard for him to meet women interested in rural life.

That year, the trade magazine offered to accept names, addresses and short biographies from single people in the farm industry and put them in touch with each other.

It received 2,700 responses, more than the journal could handle.

In June 1986, 23 people gathered in Peoria, Ill., for Singles in Agriculture's first meeting.

The group now has a dozen state and regional chapters with about 1,150 members nationwide, including 55 in Nebraska.

"We have people from their mid-20s on up," Remus said. "And they come from all over the country — even in places where there isn't a chapter."

The group's national chairman, Morris Bilskie of Chicago, spent much of his life working for ConAgra, which transferred him around the country 11 times.

The mobile lifestyle left him little time to date, much less marry.

"I met and dated some great gals along the way, but ultimately we ended up going our own ways," Bilskie said.

Although about 50 of the group's members have met and married each other, the organization is not a dating service, members insist. Rather, it's a support group that gives isolated members events to attend year-round and "long-distance" neighbors they can depend on.

"Members can really count on each other in good times and in bad — especially in times of tragedy," Bilskie said. "It's like a chain reaction. The information gets out pretty quick."

One of the oldest members at 74, Mary Ellen Maschmeier of Turpin, Okla., has taken a lead in the organization, serving twice as the Oklahoma chapter president in her seven years as a member. She serves on the group's national board.

"You'll will notice if you look around that everybody is so happy to see each other," she said, sweeping the Lincoln hotel lobby with an outstretched arm.

"Farm life is a lonely life if you don't have people you can count on."

HIV-AIDS activist works for tolerance in small town

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich. (AP) — Philip Gardiepy-Hefner stood alone in the church basement, glancing nervously at his watch. It was time for the HIV-AIDS support group's organizational meeting. People had promised to attend. Where were they?

"Finally I walked out front, and there were people standing on the street corners, driving by ... obviously watching to see who would come in," Gardiepy-Hefner recalls. "I thought, 'Oh, my God.'"

It had been a couple of months since he'd moved from Los Angeles to Iron Mountain, a former mining town of 8,500 in Michigan's Upper Peninsula. He knew things would be different here, especially for an openly gay man who intended to remain active in the struggle against AIDS and HIV.

But only now was it sinking in just how different — and difficult — his efforts would be.

"I was used to L.A.," recalls Gardiepy-Hefner, 37. "They had AIDS support groups for everybody — Latinos, bisexuals, transgenders, whatever. Here, you had a lot of people who didn't even want to admit there were gays living among them."

Nearly eight years later, Gardiepy-Hefner believes most people in his adopted hometown have come to accept his HIV-AIDS crusade, although some hostility remains.

He runs the support group, a telephone hotline and a fund to help financially struggling patients and their families. He makes speeches, visits schools and keeps two large plastic bags filled with condoms in his home office — free for the asking. He is negotiating to bring the AIDS memorial quilt to the area later this year.

"I really look up to him," says Jill Nocerini, public health nursing coordinator for Dickinson County. "He stands behind his cause; he's very caring and dedicated. If we didn't have Phil, a lot of things that we really need in this community just wouldn't get done."

Gardiepy-Hefner's passion is fired by rage and sorrow. He's angry about homophobia, ignorance, squeamishness with frank sexual talk, careless behavior. He mourns those who have died of AIDS, including about 200 of his friends and acquaintances.

He speaks of an infected friend whose mother made him live in the garage, bringing his meals on paper plates. Of scrambling to raise money for a penniless victim's funeral, begging people for the coins in their car ashtrays.

Of sitting beside dying friends, holding their hands, reassuring them as the end draws near: It's OK to let yourself go. You don't have to suffer any more.

"What I've seen them go through, no one should have to go through," Gardiepy-Hefner says, clenching his fists. "It's to their memory that I do all this."

Philip Hefner — he added the surname of his partner, Kevyn Gardiepy, during a commitment ceremony two years ago — grew up in Mascoutah, Ill., the oldest of three children. His father is a factory worker, his mother a nurse.

A Catholic who attended church schools, he struggled to overcome his homosexuality as an adolescent. "That's the last thing I wanted to be, after growing up having it drummed into me that I'd go to hell."

He studied interior design at Washington University in St. Louis and eventually moved to Los Angeles, where he became immersed in gay culture. Had boyfriends. Wore multicolored hair, body rings, white makeup, black lipstick.

As AIDS began killing one after another of his friends, Gardiepy-Hefner joined support groups and campaigned for safe sex, distributing condoms in bars.

In mid-1992, he visited a childhood pal who had settled in Iron Mountain. Enchanted by the Upper Peninsula's forests, sparkling lakes and clear sky, he decided to move there.

"All my friends thought it wouldn't be for long," he says. For a while, he feared they might be right.

Told the county had no support services for AIDS and HIV patients, he decided to start a program himself. But two banks refused to open an account for a victims' fund. It took four years to find a doctor who would serve as primary caregiver. There were obscene calls, indignant denials that the Iron Mountain area had gays, much less anyone with AIDS.

The support group now has about 15 members. Some have full-blown AIDS; others are infected with HIV or are related to those with the disease. Members share highs and lows, including the death last year of one of their own — a 25-year-old activist mother with a young son.

The hotline gets about 25 calls a month. Teen-agers reluctant to discuss sex with their parents are among the most frequent callers.

Gardiepy-Hefner funds the programs largely with his own money, earned from jobs as a hairdresser, a music store employee and a residential care specialist for the handicapped.

A fund-raiser, at which Gardiepy-Hefner auctioned off opportunities to shave his then-shoulder-length hair, generated more than $600 to start the victims' fund.

Community attitudes have warmed, he says. A local Realtor group recently made a donation. He's invited to speak at schools and civic clubs. Feedback was overwhelmingly positive after the daily newspaper in Iron Mountain ran a story about him. But when it printed his letter about World AIDS Day, a flurry of abusive calls followed.

"There are times when I'm ready to pack it up and quit," he admits. "But then I'll get a phone call from a young girl whose boyfriend wants her to go all the way. Or a guy who wants to know how condoms work.

"And I think about ... all my friends who have passed on, and I know that what I'm doing is worthwhile."

Study: Vitamin C pills linked to artery clogging

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Vitamin C pills may speed up hardening of the arteries, researchers suggest in a new study they called a disturbing surprise.

The researchers cautioned that more experiments are needed to know for sure whether megadoses of the vitamin actually are harmful.

Still, they said the finding supports the recommendations of health organizations, which generally urge people to avoid high doses of supplements and to get their nutrients from food instead.

Many people load up on vitamin C and other nutrients on the assumption that these supplements are good for their health, even though there is little scientific evidence this is true.

"When you extract one component of food and give it at very high levels, you just don't know what you are doing to the system, and it may be adverse," said Dr. James Dwyer, an epidemiologist who directed the study. Clogged arteries — what doctors call atherosclerosis — are the major underlying cause of heart attacks and strokes.

In the latest study, doctors looked for early signs of this process by twice performing ultrasound scans on volunteers' carotid arteries, once at the study's start and again 18 months later.

Dwyer and colleagues from the University of Southern California studied 573 outwardly healthy middle-aged men and women who work for an electric utility in Los Angeles. About 30 percent of them regularly took various vitamins.

The study found no clear-cut sign that getting lots of vitamin C from food or a daily multivitamin does any harm. But those taking vitamin C pills had accelerated thickening of the walls of the big arteries in their necks. In fact, the more they took, the faster the buildup.

People taking 500 milligrams of vitamin C daily for at least a year had a 2 1/2 times greater rate of thickening than did those who avoided supplements. Among smokers, the rate was five times greater.

AA to help its employees buy computers

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — American Airlines says it will spend at least $15 million to help employees buy computers and other gear to get on the Internet.

The company, owned by AMR Corp. of Fort Worth, said Wednesday it will provide top-of-the-line equipment at no more than $12 a month for employees.

The deal will also cover employees of American Eagle, the company's commuter carrier.

American said it will provide a home computer, printer and access to the Internet and the airline's Intranet site. It said it will offer laptops as an upgrade.

American said it should have the computer and Internet service providers selected by the end of March.

120 jobs lost in Greenville

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — About 120 jobs have been cut at the Raytheon aircraft plant in Greenville due to the Navy's decision to reduce a key government contract, and more jobs could be lost later this year.

Raytheon officials said most of the affected workers have found new jobs with the company.

The plant is the largest employer in the Greenville area, with 4,000 workers.

Raytheon confirmed reports by announcing the Navy has planned to reduce a program of modifying P-3 aircraft.

THIS PROSECUTOR IS NO ROOKIE!

On August 13, 1997 my life was turned upside down when my car was wrecked by a drunk driver. I recovered from my injuries after months of hospitalization but my lovely daughter, Cami, was killed. Her life was taken from us, so quickly, so finally. Her hopes and dreams stopped in an instant, she was never to wear the school clothes we bought that day, all because of one drunk driver.

I relied on District Attorney John Mann to prosecute the case. Not only did he prosecute and win a conviction, the drunk driver got the maximum penalty. Throughout the difficult trial, John and his staff were there beside me every step of the way with support, encouragement and answers to my questions about this complex legal system.

My beautiful daughter can never be returned to me. This leaves me with a sadness beyond words but I'm glad the District Attorney is John Mann. He fought hard and made sure one more drunk driver is off the road. He is a tough courtroom veteran. When the Criminal's rights are so highly protected, it is good we have John Mann fighting to protect the rights of the victim.

Descendants L.H. and Lula Greene still own land in area

Museum Mementos

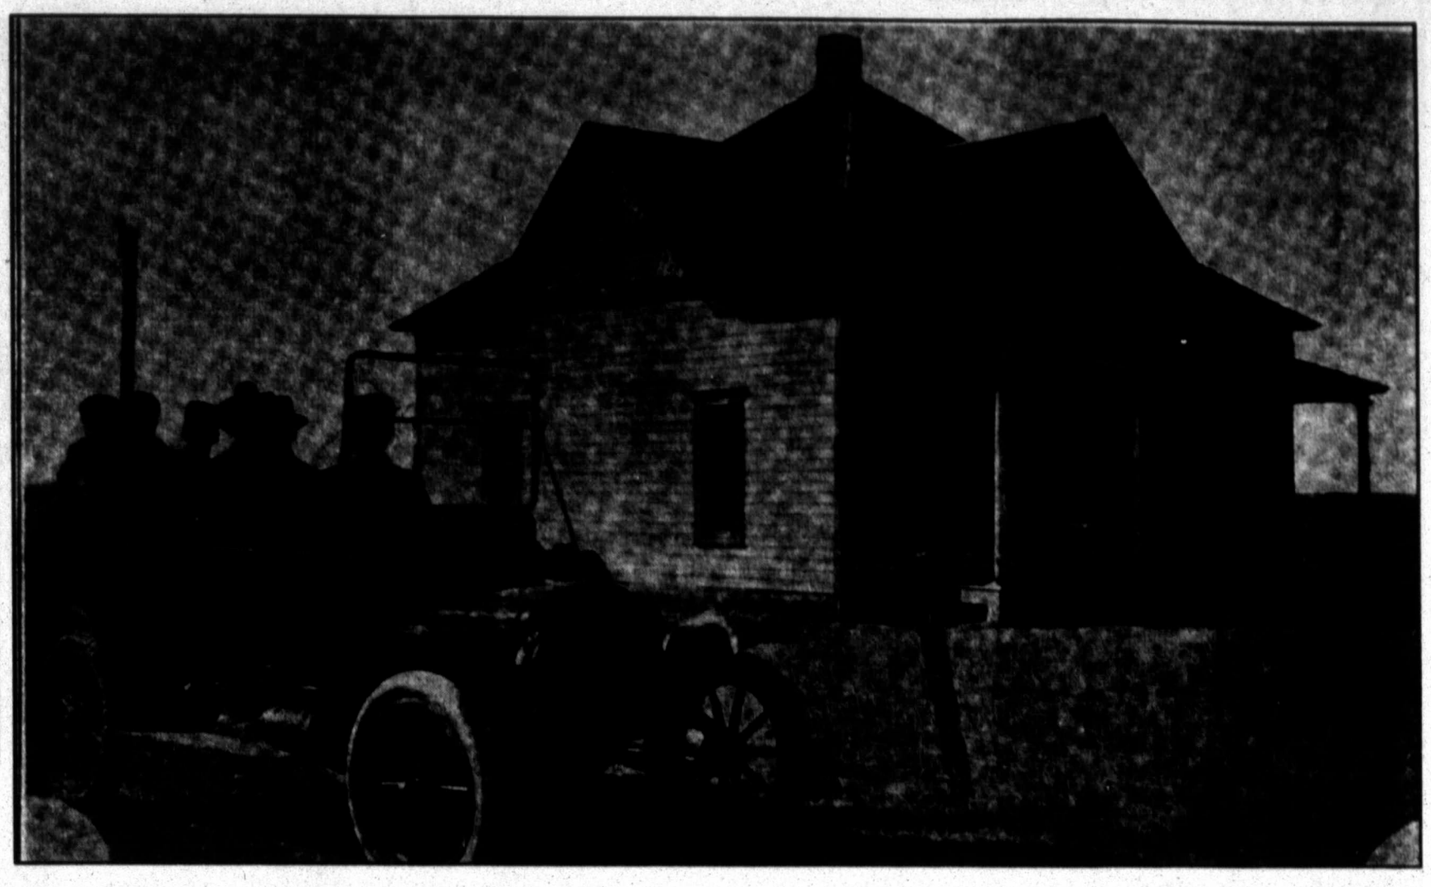
White Deer Land Museum



(Special photo)

Lemuel Henry Greene, son of Augustine Greene and Amelia Roberts Smith, was born Sept. 16, 1879, at Garland, Dallas County, Texas. He was an industrious young farmer in the area when he married Lula Yeager on Nov. 27, 1902, at Lebanon, Texas. Lula, born April 8, 1883, in Collin County, Texas, was the daughter of Robert Walter Yeager and Mary Elizabeth Reasor.

Because of Lula's ill health, Lem was in search of new land near Roswell, N.M., when he came through Pampa on the train. He stopped at Pampa to visit his cousin, V.S. (Scott) Keahey. He liked what he saw, decided to stay and moved his wife and small son, Robert Henry, to Pampa in 1906.

For a time, Lem's family lived in town where Lem and his cousin, Scott "Jack" Keahey, operated a dray business. In April 1906, when L.L. Ladd decided to move his newspaper, "The Crony," from Miami to Pampa, Lem and Jack went to Miami and transported the old George Washington hand press to its new location in Pampa at 123 S. Ballard. L.H. Greene was the first of the 250 subscribers who paid $1 each for a year's subscription to the "Pampa Crony" which was renamed "The Pampa News" in 1907.

L.H. Greene

A stagecoach route (begun about 1878) from Mobeetie to Tascosa stopped regularly at a spring on the land bought by Lem and Lula. The area around the spring became known as "Greene's Pasture" ...

Leaving the dray business, Scott became a pharmacist and was listed as pharmacist at City Drug Store, Inc., 300 W. Foster in the 1929 Pampa City Directory. Lem bought farm land 2 1/2 miles southwest of Pampa. The L.H. Greene farm residence at that location is pictured in the 1910 booklet advertising White Deer Lands.

Augustine "Guss" Vaden and William "Bill" Alston were born while Lem's family lived southwest of Pampa. Lem and Lula would have been charter members of the First Baptist Church (organized April 6, 1907) except that Lula was pregnant with Guss, and it was the custom at that time for women to stay at home during a pregnancy.

About 1910, Lem and Lula purchased a farm 4 1/2 miles northeast of Pampa where some of their descendants are still living in 2000. A map (ca 1928) shows L. H. Greene on Sections 70 and 71, Block 9, I. & G.N. Survey.

A stagecoach route (begun about 1878) from Mobeetie to Tascosa stopped regularly at a spring on the land bought by Lem and Lula. The area around the spring became known as "Greene's Pasture" and was a favorite picnic spot for members of the First Baptist Church and many others as well, Jim and Kathleen Greene now own "Greene's Pasture."

Lem died in July 1921 after an operation for appendicitis at St. Anthony's sanitarium in Amarillo. His obituary states that he had a host of friends and was a successful farmer and stock raiser who had unlimited confidence in the country and in his fellow man. He was a 32nd degree Mason and a member of the First Baptist Church, the school board and the First National Bank Board.

After Lem's death, Lula, with Guss and Bill, lived on the farm until 1928 when she moved into Pampa at 510 N. Somerville. She traded about 100 acres of land to W.R. "Bob" Campbell for this house where she kept boarders — many of them were teachers including Violet Durrett, Florence Jones and Frances McCue. Bob Campbell continued to live in the house as a boarder until 1929 when he married Jenkie Collins, former seventh grade teacher at the red brick school (309 N. Cuyler).

Lula died May 28, 1973, at St. Anthony's Rest Home in Panhandle.

Robert Henry Greene, son of L.H. and Lula Greene, was born near Garland, Texas, Oct. 16, 1903. He married Mamie Elizabeth Mitchell on Dec. 23, 1923. Their children are Louise Greene Spilker, Doris Greene Dowdy and Joy Greene Holt. The Robert Greene family lived at Gruver.

Stories of other descendants and relatives of L.H. and Lula Yeager Greene will follow later.

Lone Star Ballet named to Texas Commission of the Arts Touring Roster

AMARILLO — The Lone Star Ballet is touring Texas. The tour is the result of several bookings that came about due to the Lone Star Ballet's listing on the Texas Commission on the Arts Touring Roster. The list names various art entities in each field that TCA has determined to be of the highest caliber. TCA then offers financial assistance to rural communities for performances that will expose their residents to these outstanding Texas-based companies. Only six ballet companies in the entire state are named to the Roster.

"This is a tremendous honor for the Lone Star Ballet. The listing commends our talented dancers for their hard work. This tour provides them additional opportunities to perform while learning how a tour works, and it gives them a sample of life on the road," says Artistic Director Neil Hess.

The touring show titled "Premiers" is as diverse as the state of Texas. The original works highlight the Lone Star Ballet's diverse style of dance. Classical Ballet, Tap, Texas-Swing, traditional Riverdance and a tribute to "The King, Elvis" provide a friendly approach to introducing the art of dance to those who might not have experienced such a performance.

In addition to "Premiers," the company is also touring "Dancin' People" a student-oriented dance show performed in school gyms that introduces children to various dance styles.

"The cities we visit in Central Texas will see that the Texas Panhandle can not only support a quality ballet company, but it can be the home of one of the best in the state," said Reyne C. Telles, general manager.

The tour will include Pittsburg, Marshall and Corsicana.

Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers to hold 'School for Successful Ranching' in Pampa

FORT WORTH — Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association has announced one of five upcoming "Schools for Successful Ranching" will be held June 29 at M.K. Brown Center in Pampa. The schools are being sponsored by Pfizer Animal Health and the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo. Federal Land Bank Association is also a sponsor of the schools in Texas.

According to TSCRA President J. Mark McLaughlin, "Course content will be tailored to each region, with topics ranging from animal health to wildlife to brush control. CEUs will be offered at each school."

"The schools are designed to make it easier on the rancher's schedule and budget by reducing travel and concentrating a lot of information into one day," McLaughlin said. "More than 600 ranchers took advantage of these close-to-home educational opportunities last year; we're hoping for even more this year."

The following courses are scheduled:

—March 30, Southwestern Oklahoma State University, Weatherford, Okla.;

—May 11, Stephen F. Austin State University, Nacogdoches;

—June 20, YO Hotel, Kerrville;

—June 27, Expo Center, Fairgrounds, Abilene;

—June 29, M.K. Brown Center, Pampa.

International Toy Collectors Association to host toy show

AMARILLO — International Toy Collectors Association will bring their Toy Roadshow next week to the Ramada Inn East, 2501 Interstate 40 East in Amarillo. Admission is free.

Scheduled from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., March 6, 7 and 8, the roadshow will provide Texas Panhandle residents the opportunity to bring in their old toys for evaluation.

Jeff Parsons, president of the association, said no one at the show will appraise old toys, but there will be people there who can provide an evaluation and who can make cash offers.

Jeff Parsons, president of the association, said no one at the show will appraise old toys, but there will be people there who can provide an evaluation and who can make cash offers.

"An appraisal suggests a certificate for insurance purposes," Parsons said.

He said the majority of antique and collectible toys were made before 1965.

Among items that are popular among collectors, Parsons said, are robots, space toys, tin wind ups, Barbie Dolls and accessories, cast iron toys, pedal cars, battery operated toys, race cars, Tonka trucks, Smith Miller toys, Hop-A-Long Cassidy memorabilia, mechanical banks and vintage musical instruments.

"We advise not to attempt to clean toys that have been stored for long periods of time," Parsons said. "That may destroy the originality of the finish and decrease the value."

He said the association is also interested in broken toys that can be used for parts.

Texas AG office updates consumer web page

AUSTIN — Texas Attorney General John Cornyn recently announced the AG office's Consumer Protection page on the Internet has been updated to expedite the complaints process for consumers. Consumers may now file consumer complaints on-line. The update was conducted in conjunction with National Consumer Protection Week.

"I am confident that the Attorney General's website, and in particular, the Consumer Protection page is one of the best in the nation. We have recently made many changes to make it easier for consumers to get the information they need. Consumers can now file a complaint on-line, read brochures about consumer issues and e-mail my office with questions. I am very proud of the work of my staff in updating this website," Cornyn said.

The Consumer Protection page offers:

—Advice for consumers in addressing concerns. When a consumer discovers a product or service does not measure up to promises or expectations, they have a legal right to expect the problem will be resolved or their money will be returned. The website provides advice on how to contact the business to resolve the complaint, how to file a complaint with the AG's office and how the AG's office will work to resolve the complaint.

—Sixteen consumer protection brochures on the Internet. Sixteen new brochures have been created and posted on the Internet covering such issues as "Buying a Used Car," "Home Improvement" and "Telemarketing Fraud."

—Fifteen links to Consumer Protection agencies. The list includes a number of links including the Office of Consumer Credit Commissioner which regulates certain consumer credit lenders and practices in Texas; Phone Busters which provides tips on avoiding telemarketing scams; and Texas Lemon Law Information which is provided by the Texas Department of Transportation.

In addition, through the Deceptive Trade Practices Act and referrals from state agencies, the Consumer Protection Division takes action and files lawsuits to protect consumers from unscrupulous businesses which break the law and take advantage of consumers. The text of the DTPA is also available on the AG's website.

The Consumer Protection Division has recently compiled the 1999 Top 10 Consumer Complaints. These are the types of businesses that have generated the largest number of consumer complaints in 1999. The list, in order, includes: 1) Telephone communication services; 2) debt collection; 3) direct mail advertising services; 4) used motor vehicle dealers; 5) credit card companies; 6) automotive repair shops; 7) mortgage companies; 8) finance and personal credit companies; 9) new motor vehicle dealers; 10) landlord/tenant disputes.

In addition, the AG's office is continually speaking before organizations and schools, staffing display booths at community events and providing brochures and other written material to consumers.

Consumers with questions may contact the Consumer Protection Division of the AG's office toll-free at 1-800-621-0508 or by e-mail, fightback@oag.state.tx.us. To file an on-line consumer complaint, consumers should access the AG's website at www.oag.state.tx.us and see its Consumer Protection page.

Rail fans bask in cold and cinders to capture steam train on film

By DAVID DISHNEAU
Associated Press Writer

The group included world travelers like Mike Eagleson, an amateur photographer with a half-dozen railroading magazine covers to his credit.

There were casual hobbyists like George Sekerak, an Ohio policeman with a Leica who takes at least one train trip a year with his wife, Barbara.

And there were novices like Bob Wilcox, a cleaning-products salesman from Howard County, Md., with a point-and-shoot Vivitar who had taken his first steam train ride just two months earlier.

Each had paid $85 and all were after the same thing: dramatic pictures of the 94-year-old Baldwin locomotive pouring out steam and smoke as it pulled nine vintage freight cars across the mountainous western Maryland landscape.

Eagleson, an insurance salesman from Glen Ridge, N.J., said the Western Maryland is one of fewer than a dozen U.S. scenic railroads that run freight trains for photo groups, and one of a very few that offer such trips in the winter.

Carl Franz organized the first winter trip on the Western Maryland last year after chartering the railroad for fall color trips since 1997. An imaging researcher by trade, the Rockville, Md., resident was a drill sergeant on the trip, hurrying people on and off the train at 16 stops along the 32-mile, round-trip route.

"The whole idea is to get as many prize-winning photos as you can," Franz said. "The number of stops is limited by the slowest guy on the train."

That might have been the white-haired man who needed help climbing over a guard rail along an icy highway. Or it might have been one of several shooters toting folding step stools along with their photographic gear, to improve their perspective.

Franz cleared brush from the trackside, advised the shooters on where to stand, and told the train crew when to start, when to stop and when to back up for another run-by.

When a cloud blocked the sun at a critical moment, Franz made the train wait for clear skies before making a picture-perfect run.

"Outstanding calendar-quality photographs don't just happen. You make them. You create them," he said.

Eagleson, who has been chasing steam trains for 45 of his 56 years in a relentless quest for authentic-looking photos, explained, "It's an ego thing."

It's not a lucrative hobby. New Jersey-based Railfan & Railroad Magazine pays just $50 for a cover photo, according to Managing Editor Steve Barry.

For the Western Maryland's picture-taking trip in January, the weather was perfect. Temperatures in the teens caused the steam to condense in billowing clouds from the smokestack and white blasts from the cylinder cocks.

Everyone got a taste of it when Franz herded the photographers 85 feet into the mouth of Brush Tunnel, confiding, "This is my signature event." The train nosed in at 3 mph, stopped 45 feet from the crowd and blew a blast of steam that gradually obscured even the locomotive's headlight.

Then the train backed up for a harrowing high-speed run through the 914-foot passage while the photographers backed up against the tunnel wall, shooting through smoke and a shower of cinders.

"You talk about a real blast," Wilcox said. "You can feel the power. It's awesome."

Those not sated by the Saturday trip had two other chances during the weekend to take pictures under less comfortable conditions. Purists object to the presence of passenger cars — the photographer cars — on what is intended to represent a 1950s freight train. So on Friday and Sunday, Franz offered $145 trips for up to 35 people willing to jam into the caboose. There was no shortage of takers.

And on Monday, a deep-pocketed group of 17, including a number from Franz' trip, chartered the train for yet another photo trip at $4,000 for the day.

Victor Hand, a rail transportation planner from the District of Columbia, has used his bulky 1962 Speed Graphic press camera to shoot topnotch train photos in 54 countries.

"Some guys like golf," he said. "I like steam locomotives."

Pampa native AIMD administrative assistant

SAN DIEGO — Among other things, Navy pilots safeguard peace and enforce international law. Countries that would otherwise violate peace must face the sobering reality of Navy aircraft carriers and their wings of fighter jets, strike aircraft and reconnaissance planes.

Before a Navy pilot can take to the air, however, Misty R. Lowder must make sure the plane and its equipment are ready. Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Lowder does this task at an aircraft intermediate maintenance department on a Navy base near San Diego.

Lowder, the 21-year-old daughter of Leslie and Carolyn West of Pampa, is an AIMD administrative assistant at the North Island Naval Air Station. Lowder checks logs on aircraft maintenance, stores and issues technical publications and works with repair technicians.

A factor that Lowder must always be conscious of is safety. Pilots and flight deck crews on warships trust their lives to the technicians and mechanics who service planes. Any repair, no matter how minor, must be done strictly by the book.

The responsibility put upon Lowder brings with it reward and achievement. Along with learning a technical skill, Lowder has traveled and met people from around the world.

Lowder, a 1997 graduate of Pampa High School, works in a diverse and enriching environment.

"I get to work with fun people and meet different people every day," said Lowder.

The technicians at AIMD can fix and service many of the aircraft that deploy aboard warships, including the jet-powered S-3 Viking, propeller-driven E-2 Hawkeye and numerous helicopters, including the H-60 and H-46. AIMD sometimes sends its technicians and helicopters with warships on deployment.

BASKETBALL

ABILENE — Hale Center defeated Canadian 44-37 Friday night in a Region 1-2A boys' tournament semifinal game.

Jared Horsford had 16 points to lead Hale Center in scoring.

Josh Ellison led Canadian with 13 points. Derek Maupin and Eric Hall each added eight points.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal had 31 points and 15 rebounds Friday night as the Los Angeles Lakers didn't let Indiana snap their long winning streak again, beating the Pacers 107-92 for their 14th straight win.

The Lakers jumped out to a 30-16 advantage at the end of the first quarter, and the Pacers got no closer than nine the rest of the way.

When Indiana threatened, moving within 82-73 early in the fourth period, O'Neal took charge, scoring Los Angeles' first nine points of the quarter to help them pull away again.

Kobe Bryant added 22 points and had seven assists for Los Angeles, and reserve Robert Horry added 14 points.

Reggie Miller didn't get his first basket until 3:05 before halftime, but finished with 22 points for the Pacers. Austin Croshere added 15 points.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — John Stockton scored eight of his team-high 22 points in the final 4:40 as the Utah Jazz held off the struggling Charlotte Hornets 89-87 on Friday night.

Karl Malone broke an 82-all tie with a pair of free throws with 1:22 left and Jeff Hornacek hit a 3-pointer with 49.4 seconds remaining to put the Jazz ahead 87-82.

Eddie Jones, who led all scorers with 31 points, hit a 3-pointer with 33.2 seconds remaining, and the Hornets got the ball back with 7.7 seconds left. But Jones was called for an offensive foul on the inbound play, and Charlotte lost its final chance to tie.

Stockton, who also recorded seven assists, sank a pair of free throws to seal the win. Malone added 19 points and 13 rebounds, and Hornacek and Bryon Russell had 13 points apiece for the Jazz, who have won three straight.

BASEBALL

DALLAS (AP) — With the Texas Rangers' lease for training camp up next year, the team is considering a number of options that have turned one executive into a jet-setter.

John McMichael, the Rangers' vice president of business operations, visited Phoenix recently on a fact-finding mission. He arrived at the Rangers' spring training home at Port Charlotte, Fla., on Thursday for a brief visit that included a reception with Charlotte County officials.

McMichael took a break to watch the Rangers' spring home opener on Saturday.

"First, we need to determine all our options, then we need to make decisions," McMichael told The Dallas Morning News. "Then, I think we need to look at making a decision by the early part of summer. But I still think we're in the exploration stage right now."

He also hopes to meet with representatives from Las Vegas, which is trying to convince a group of four to six teams to move there, sometime this spring.

A meeting originally scheduled for Monday was postponed indefinitely by Las Vegas officials.

Optimist Club plans organizational meeting

PAMPA — An organizational meeting for managers, coaches and parents interested in the Optimist Beginner League and Optimist Rookie League will be held Monday at 7 p.m. at the Optimist Building, Commissioner Richard Stowers announced.

"The Beginner League is a T-Ball Program for boys and girls five and six years of age," Stowers explained. "The Rookie League is for players seven and eight years of age. This program features pitching by a pitching machine."

Stowers said the two leagues are pure family entertainment.

"We do not even keep score in the Beginner League. We try to emphasize having the kids learn to work together while having fun," he said.

Stowers is in his second year as the Commissioner of the two leagues. Winston Holt, the Manager of Bank of America, is the Assistant Commissioner of the leagues. He served in the same capacity for the 9-10 year-old Optimist Baseball League last year. Ken Rheams of Rheams Jewelry is the Secretary for the second year. Jane Skinner returns for her second year as the Head Scorekeeper for the Rookie League.

"We want to get our managers and coaches set so that we will be ready for sign-ups April 4, 5, 6," Stowers concluded.

• • • • •

Dr. Mark W. Ford Jr. will present a program to Optimist coaches Monday at 6:30 p.m. on "How To Prevent Injuries in Youth Baseball-Softball Programs."

"Warming up properly is a very important part of youth sports," said Dr. Ford.

"I plan to demonstrate stretching exercises and show methods of warming up which can be used in baseball and softball as well as other sports."

Dr. Ford is an honor graduate of the U.S. Air Force School of Aerospace Medicine-Physiological Training Specialist Course. He obtained a Bachelor of Science Degree from the University of the State of New York. He received his Doctor of Chiropractic summa cum laude from Palmer College of Chiropractic. He has completed diplomate programs in chiropractic orthopedics and chiropractic neurology. He is a past chairman for the Chiropractic Peer Review Committee. He has practiced in Pampa since 1988.

"I heard Dr. Ford speak on a similar subject last year," said John Warner, an Optimist baseball coach for 26 years. "I changed the structure of my practice because of what I learned. I look forward to hearing from him again. I think anybody who coaches any youth sports of any kind should hear Dr. Ford speak Monday night."

Hartman, Young make all-district

PAMPA — Pampa's Emily Hartman and Joy Young have been named to All-District 3-4A Girls' Basketball Team.

Hartman, a junior, was a first-team pick. She averaged 15 points per game to lead the team in scoring.

Young, a senior, was named to the second team. She was a four-year starter.

Lacie Long claimed first place in the 11-12 year-old All-Around, Level 6.

Stars pad lead in Pacific Division

PHOENIX (AP) — Once the Dallas Stars started scoring, they couldn't be stopped.

Aaron Gavey and Jamie Langenbrunner each had a goal and an assist as Dallas scored four times in a 10-minute span of the third period Friday night to beat the short-handed Phoenix Coyotes 4-1.

"We got that first goal and then we got on a roll," said Grant Marshall, whose first goal of the season started the spurt. "We looked like the Dallas team we should be."

With the come-from-behind victory, the Stars increased their Pacific Division lead to seven points over the second-place Coyotes, who were without four of their top players, including leading scorer Jeremy Roenick.

"We were hunkered down so hard defensively that we weren't creating any offense," Dallas coach Ken Hitchcock said. "Once we started to create, we started to have fun with the game again."

In other games, it was Detroit 2, Washington 2; the New York Rangers 4, Florida 2; Chicago 5, Tampa Bay 1; and Calgary 4, Anaheim 1.

In the five games the Stars and Coyotes have played this season, the home team has never won. Phoenix won twice in Dallas, and the Stars have won three times at America West Arena.

"It's been like that for a while," said Mike Modano, who saw more time on the ice in the third period and had two assists as the Stars went to a double-shift. "I think the last couple of years we've had success in each other's building. Our third period here was good and their third period in Dallas was good."

Bad third periods are becoming a habit for the Coyotes, who are 1-4-1 in their last six. Seven times this season, Phoenix has held a lead going into the third period and has either lost or tied.

Within the last four games, the Coyotes blew a 3-1 lead at Calgary for a 3-3 tie, then allowed four goals in the third in Wednesday night's 7-5 victory over Carolina, followed by Friday night's fold.

In the last 10 games, 18 of the 33 goals Phoenix has allowed were scored in the third period. Dallas outshot Phoenix 19-10 in the third.

"At the first sign of adversity, we get away from our structure," coach Bob Francis said, "both with and without the puck. Maybe it's a confidence thing."

Roenick was out with the flu, Teppo Numminen had a hip flexor and goalie Sean Burke was sidelined with a groin pull. Until Friday, Numminen had the longest current streak of consecutive regular-season games in the NHL at 360. He hadn't missed one since Dec. 15, 1995, when the franchise was in Winnipeg.

Red Wings 2, Capitals 2

Detroit came away with a tie even though the Red Wings fired 54 shots — the most by a team this season — at Olaf Kolzig.

Kolzig's 52 saves were the most by a goalie this season.

Visiting Detroit trailed 2-0 after the first period, but rallied with a second-period score and Steve Yzerman's power-play goal with 5:02 left in regulation.

Rangers 4, Panthers 2

Mike York had a goal and an assist as the Rangers moved into seventh place in the Eastern Conference playoff race with 67 points, one ahead of idle Pittsburgh.

Adam Graves, Alexandre Daigle and John MacLean also scored for the Rangers. Ray Whitney and Mark Parrish scored for the visiting Panthers, who are only one point ahead of second-place Washington in the Southeast Division.

Blackhawks 5, Lightning 1

At Chicago, Tony Amonte had two goals and an assist in a game that featured a second-period fight between opposing goalies.

Jean-Yves Leroux, Bryan McCabe and Steve Sullivan also scored for the Blackhawks, who have won three of their last four.

Chicago's Steve Passmore and Tampa Bay's Dan Cloutier tangled at the Chicago blue line late in the second. The goalies exchanged a series of punches, and the end result saw Cloutier ejected with a game misconduct and Passmore allowed to stay after receiving a fighting major.

Flames 4, Mighty Ducks 1

At Calgary, Alberta, Jarome Iginla extended his point-scoring streak to 15 games with two goals. He has 12 goals and 13 assists during the streak, which ties him with four others for the longest streak in the NHL this season.

Iginla opened the scoring 6:04 into the game and made it 4-0 just 42 seconds into the third period with his 23rd goal of the season. Valeri Bure added his 34th goal.

It's a record day at Doral-Ryder Open

MIAMI (AP) — Of the four records either broken or tied in the second round of the Doral-Ryder Open, Franklin Langham's might have been the most meaningful.

His 36-hole score of 129 not only was the lowest in the 39-year history of the tournament, it gave him a three-stroke lead going into today's third round — and a chance to win for the first time on the PGA Tour.

"You have to play good golf and put yourself in position to win," he said Friday. "That's what I'm trying to do."

Good golf comes and goes. Good scores — make that great scores — were in abundance on a Blue Monster course that has been left defenseless after two days of virtually no wind in south Florida.

Langham made eight birdies in a 10-hole stretch for a 9-under 63, only the third best score on a day in which 103 players broke par. Still, it gave him a cushion over Stephen Ames, Shigeki Maruyama, Jim Furyk and Vijay Singh.

Ames, who almost withdrew when his 3-year-old son was hospitalized with pneumonia on Wednesday, broke the Blue Monster record with a bogey-free 61.

"I didn't think 59," he said. "I was thinking 62, because I knew in the back of my mind that 62 was the course record."

Edward Fryatt had no clue what the PGA Tour record was for consecutive birdies, or who held it. But his name goes in the books with three others after he made eight straight during his round of 10-under 62, which still left him eight strokes back.

"It was really eerie out there," said Fryatt, who joins Dewey Arnett (1987), Fuzzy Zoeller (1976) and Bob Goalby (1961) as the only other players to make eight straight birdies.

"I felt like a guy tossing a no-hitter. Nobody was talking to me."

The cut was at 3-under 141, the lowest ever at Doral. Among those hanging around for the weekend is Erik Compton, the 20-year-old redshirt freshman at Georgia and the first heart-transplant recipient to compete on tour.

All of them will have to catch Langham, whose 129 shattered the previous 36-hole mark at Doral of 133 set in 1993 by Paul Azinger and Greg Norman. It also was the lowest halfway score on tour since a 126 by David Frost in the St. Jude Classic last year.

Langham, 31, who was born in Augusta, Ga., and used to work the scoreboard on the 16th hole during the Masters, has never won on tour, or even led after 36 holes. He's pointed in the right direction, however, considering he was tied for the first-round lead at Doral a year ago and shot a 76 in the second round.

He was 13 strokes better this year, which he attributes to pristine conditions and more confidence.

"I know I can play out here now," Langham said, "I'm like everyone else. I want to win a golf tournament."

There is still much work left.

Lurking at 135 is David Duval, who gained more momentum with his putter in a round of 64, and Ernie Els, who had a 68 despite a bogey on the 18th.

"So many people can win," Langham said. "I'm just happy I have a chance."

Only three weeks ago, Maruyama was tied for the lead after two rounds in the Buick Invitational, where Tiger Woods was going for his seventh straight PGA Tour victory. Asked if he could be the one to end the streak, the Japanese star replied, "No chance."

Friday was another matter.

"Tiger is not here, so there is a possibility," he said through his interpreter.

He proved to be a pacesetter for Ames, who spent the entire round trying to catch Maruyama and finally did with birdies on the last two holes. When Ames added it all up, he signed for a 61 to break the Blue Monster record.

The previous mark was 62 — twice by Greg Norman (1990 and '93) and last done by Furyk in the second round of 1998.

"Imagine shooting 67 here and feeling like you got left behind," Ames said.

West Texas A&M and Midwestern State are in conference finals

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (AP) — Jerome Jackson scored 17 points Friday night as Midwestern State beat East Central University 76-70 in the semifinals of the Lone Star Conference tournament.

Terrence Thomas had 12 points and Edgar Arteaga scored 11 for Midwestern (25-6).

East Central (19-10) had five players in double figures, led by Kenyea Beach with 18 and Ryan Eaves with 14.

Midwestern's opponent in the championship game will be West Texas A&M, which beat Northeastern State 60-49. Esaw Scruggs scored 17 and Rich Forrest had 14 for West Texas (21-6).

Randy Keyes had 13 points and 10 rebounds for the Redmen (23-5), who shot just 36 percent compared with 54 percent for West Texas.

Horned Frogs roll past Rice

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Marquise Gainous scored 28 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to lead TCU to a 85-62 victory Friday night over Rice.

TCU (16-13, 7-6 WAC) led 38-34 at halftime and then pulled away in the second half, outscoring Rice 47-28.

TCU outshot Rice, making 77 percent (13-of-17) of its free-throws, compared to 64 percent (16-of-25) for Rice (5-21, 1-13). TCU also made 50 percent (10-of-20) of its 3-point shots, compared to 15 percent (2-of-13) for Rice.

Ryan Carroll added 22 points for TCU while Estell Laster scored 13.

Mike Wilks was Rice's top scorer with 25 points.

The Optimist Club has named Jeff Skinner as the baseball and softball coordinator for 2000. Jeff's children are (from left) Hayden 9, Halei 11 and Heath 9. Sign-ups for baseball and softball will be held April 4-6 at Optimist Park.

Griffey Jr. makes Reds' debut

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Ken Griffey Jr. keeps insisting he merely wants to blend in with the Cincinnati Reds.

He did exactly that in his debut Friday. He barely caused a ripple, on the field or in the stands.

A crowd of 3,439, less than half the capacity at 7,500-seat Ed Smith Stadium, saw Junior strike out twice and single in his first game for his hometown team.

"It was fine," Griffey said. "Get my two or three at-bats like everyone else.

"It shouldn't be that big of a deal," he said, his cap backward and arms folded across his chest. "I don't want to sit there under a microscope every day. I just want to play ball and be part of this team, that's it."

Griffey left after five innings in a 5-3 loss to Minnesota in a split-squad exhibition. The other Reds, including his father, bench coach Ken Sr., took a four-hour bus trip to Fort Lauderdale to play Baltimore.

Still, it was as if the fans hardly noticed they had a superstar in their midst. Griffey likes it that way.

"Why can't I just be a baseball player?" he said. "That's all I want."

The only real excitement involving Junior came right off the bat. He caught Torii Hunter's easy fly to center field opening the game, then Cristian Guzman followed with a wind-blown ball to shallow left-center.

Barry Larkin broke back and Griffey called off the All-Star shortstop. Griffey made a nifty sidestep to avoid colliding with left fielder Alex Ochoa, reaching out at the last second to make a waist-high catch.

"He's smooth," Reds manager Jack McKeon said.

Simply seeing Griffey in a bright red jersey and pinstriped pants was plenty for McKeon. Even Griffey's diamond earring — the Reds decided to allow them this season, no surprise — seemed in fashion.

"He fit right in," McKeon said.

Griffey, acquired Feb. 10 in a trade that sent four players to Seattle, is considered a threat to break Hank Aaron's career home run record of 755. At 30, Junior already has 398 and has a $116.5 million, nine-year contract with the Reds.

In the first inning, Larkin drew a walk to bring up Griffey. He lofted a long-but-obviously foul fly to right that cleared the single-deck ballpark.

Griffey struck out swinging on the next pitch, chasing a low-and-away slider from 20-year-old rookie Johan Santana.

"It was good for me," said Santana, who has never pitched above Class A. "I was excited to face him, but I focused on my spots."

Griffey singled in the third, hitting a soft line drive to right off Dan Perkins. In the fifth, he struck out swinging against rookie Mike Kusiewicz.

"Just getting my work in," Griffey said. "Trying not to be a distraction around here."

Griffey exited after that, jogging through an opening in the right-field wall and leaving without signing autographs. Many fans wore No. 30 jerseys, including Dave and Julie Crace from suburban Cincinnati.

"It's the first time we've come to spring training," he said. "Just to see Junior."

"It'd be lying to say any different," added his wife, holding their 5-month-old daughter, Taylor.

In fact, the $20 Griffey shirts were the best-selling item at the concession stand. Business before the game was brisk.

"I'd say it's double what we had last year," said Frank Pilarowski, 65. "About 50 percent of the people come up to the counter and want Griffey items. It's Griffey, Griffey, Griffey."

No telling, however, why the attendance was so small. The Reds averaged 4,034 at home last spring training, and this crowd was less than that.

"It's still exciting to have him," said 87-year-old Ed Smith, the community booster for whom the stadium is named.

Griffey will be in town a bunch, too. He might make some of the spring trips to nearby Bradenton and Tampa, but won't spend much time on a bus. He is not playing Saturday against Texas in Port Charlotte, about 45 miles south.

Of course, the real excitement will come April 3, when the Reds start the regular season at home against Milwaukee. Longtime Reds announcer Marty Brennaman, who broadcast this exhibition, is sure of that.

"I think some people came today from a historical perspective, to be able to say they saw his first game," Brennaman said. "You want to see something, you come to opening day."

Mansfield advances to 5A finals

AUSTIN (AP) — Kaira White scored the go-ahead layup with 1:02 to play and an insurance free throw with 23 seconds left to send Class 5A defending champion Mansfield past Alief Hastings 47-46 Friday in the girls basketball state semifinals.

Ugo Oha's layup for Alief Hastings tied the game at 44 before White picked up a loose ball and drove to the basket.

Oha later fouled White, who made the front end of a 1-and-1 to give Mansfield a 47-44 lead.

Sandy Hogan pulled Alief Hastings within one with 14 seconds left. Mansfield's Erin Grant then got to the foul with a chance to put the game away but missed the 1-and-1.

Alief Hastings pulled down the rebound but turned the ball over without getting off a shot when Latasha Mathiew was called for travelling near the lane with one second left.

White led Mansfield (35-2) with 20 points. Oha scored 22 and grabbed 11 rebounds for Alief Hastings (37-2).

Mansfield advances to Saturday's final against Plano (34-3), which overcame an eight-point deficit to beat Corpus Christi Carroll 55-51 in overtime in Friday's other 5A semifinals.

Baylor trims A&M

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Baylor starter Chad Hawkins pitched a complete game, striking out nine and allowing no earned runs to lead the No. 5 Baylor Bears to a 3-2 victory over the Texas A&M Aggies in front of 7,871 fans at Olsen Field.

Meanwhile, Aggie starter Grant Gregg struck out a season-high eight in 5 2/3 innings.

Baylor scored single runs in the first, third and fourth innings for a 3-0 lead. Hawkins' only mistake was a 2-1 pitch to Carlos Sepulveda that was lifted over the right field wall for a 2-run homer.

Both of the runs were unearned as Jeff Freeman, who reached on an error, also scored.

Baylor improved to 13-3 overall and 3-1 in Big 12 play.

You will pay $21,000 a year more for a new District Attorney!

John Mann has three opponents for the office of District Attorney. All three have announced that they will be "full time," which will mean an automatic increase of $21,000.00 by state law, over the current salary for John Mann. The office of District Attorney prosecutes only felony cases, not all criminal cases. "I never thought the number of felony cases in our communities justified my asking for the full-time salary."

John has been the District Attorney for eight years. He has served in this office, as all others before him, on a part-time basis with an assistant, although he is on call 24 hours-a-day. "It keeps me busy, but I've always been able to balance the D.A.'s office and private practice without accepting the additional $21,000.00."

His opponents say they will make up the additional funds by not having an assistant. The holders of this office have always had an assistant. It is impossible to cover the 4500 square miles, and the six District Courts without an assistant. "With any of my opponents as the new DA, we will end up with his automatic $21,000.00 increase in salary for being full time plus an assistant's salary! Part-time or full-time, you can't be in two places at once."

In the birthday spotlight:

Camryn Manheim won an Emmy for her role in "The Practice" and was cast as Snow White for NBC's "The 10th Kingdom," a 10-hour miniseries. Manheim, who was born on March 8, 1961, says she still can't command immediate acceptance by the movie world. "I thought it would be easier, but it's not; I am fighting for every little thing," the plus-size actress said. "I still have to audition for parts that have two scenes, six lines in each scene. I have decided to produce my own movie so I can prove I can play a leading role. I have to take the risk because people aren't taking risks on me."

When he was 13, James Van Der Beek of the WB's "Dawson's Creek" landed a lead role in a local production of "Grease." He continued to do children's theater in his hometown of Cheshire, Conn. After deciding to pursue acting professionally, he was cast in the off-Broadway play "Finding the Sun," written and directed by Edward Albee. His first film performance came in 1995, with a starring role in "Angus." Now his career is on a roll. Van Der Beek, who was born on March 8, 1977, stars with Rachael Leigh Cook in the upcoming film "Texas Rangers."

He caught Hollywood's eye with the teen hit "She's All That." Now Freddie Prinze Jr. stars in the new movie "Down to You" with Julia Stiles. "I make movies for the same reason I think people go to see movies. To escape reality for a while," he said. "It's the only place where I can fly the spaceship, pitch the winning game, and get the girl and live happily ever after."

Laid-back style of 'Austin City Limits' still creating music magic after 25 years

AUSTIN (AP) — Since Willie Nelson took the stage for the very first show, stage manager Ray Lucero has helped capture 25 years of music magic on "Austin City Limits."

He's catered to stars before they were stars.

Lucero remembers a large-haired Lyle Lovett shopping demo tapes in between gigs at local lounges and a young Garth Brooks about 100 million albums ago.

And he's made sure legends delivered legendary performances, like the time Lucero comforted a grieving Jerry Lee Lewis, who was performing soon after his wife's death.

But he insists most of his duties are not glamorous.

"I'm not just the floor manager," he says. "I'm also the glorified parking attendant, the laundry guy, the ironing man."

Lucero is just one of many faces behind the laid-back show that has kept music from this laid-back city in the spotlight since "Austin City Limits" made its debut in 1974.

Quietly, it has become television's longest-running music series.

To music lovers, "Austin City Limits" is the show with the Capitol skyline backdrop (it's really cardboard and Christmas lights), down-home feel (free beer is served before each taping) and a reputation for showcasing fresh talent (pre-superstar Dixie Chicks, Lovett and Brooks, to name a few).

"It's like serendipity. It is," says Lucero.

"So many people have performed here. It's been tremendous; just tremendous," he marvels over the licks of a rehearsing Lovett.

"What's great about the show also is seeing all the classic, classic people like Fats Domino and Jerry Lee Lewis, B.B. King, Stevie Ray Vaughan."

Before Lucero can continue his list, a co-worker rushes in from the studio across the hall, yelling, "Ray, Lyle needs you!"

Lovett wants help finding an ice chest.

"Lyle's performance is extra special tonight," Lucero explains. He's sharing the stage with songwriters and close friends who have helped him graduate from a backup singer to a Grammy-winning country crooner.

"Things like that always happen," Lucero says.

It's that extra effort from Lucero and the other 50 full- and part-time staff — many of whom have worked unpaid for years — that keeps "Austin City Limits" center stage. Some of the country's most popular musicians continue to do the show for minimum union scale, about $500.

"We make sure everybody's happy," said Steve Maedl, a production worker who's served the show for 13 years. "We aren't in it for the money."

"The folks here at 'Austin City Limits' make you feel as comfortable as you can," Lovett said. "I mean you see those big cameras pointed at you so it's not quite like doing a live show. You're naturally more self-conscious."

Terry Likona, the show's producer for 22 years, says creating a comfortable environment has always been the key to making the show work.

"There always seems to be a lot of tension in the air, and pressure, and so we just try to take a lot of that out of the picture and make it as relaxed and comfortable as possible, which is easy to do here in Austin. That's the whole style of Austin to begin with, which is another reason why it works so well here," Lickona said.

John T. Davis, a music critic who for 20 years has covered the show for the Austin American-Statesman, says it's the focus on the music that has made the show stand out.

"I think because there's no disturbance between the viewing audience and the music — you watch a lot of music on TV and they will edit it for commercials...they will give the audience a tiny little time slot to try to communicate what they do and with 'Austin City Limits' the emphasis is all on the music and the musicians, and that's extremely rare," Davis said. He is the author of "25 years of American Music: Austin City Limits," a book released to commemorate the anniversary.

Ray Benson, leader of the Grammy-winning band Asleep at the Wheel and a KLRU board member, agrees.

"It's a pretty simple deal. It's a show that's all about the music, to present the artists' music the way they do on a daily basis," said Benson, who credits the show for much of his band's success.

"Austin City Limits" allowed musicians to perform for TV unscripted and unrehearsed long before unplugged became an MTV-generation buzz word, Davis says.

Founder Bill Arhos wanted a national showcase for up-and-coming Texas talent. He pitched the pilot, starring Willie Nelson, to public television.

The show has gone through growing pains over the years. There was competition from MTV, VH1 and other cable shows with more money. There were federal budget cuts and other changes at PBS, and the never-ending quest to raise the minimum $800,000 it takes to produce the show every year.

"It's always been hard to sell. Every year it's hard to sell," said Arhos, who retired this year from daily operations of the show and its home station, Austin's KLRU-TV.

Mary Beth Rogers, the station's president, says declining funding for the show has brought some changes. National underwriters have signed on for the next three years and there's talk of taping 26 instead of 13 shows per season, if funding increases. There also are plans to expand the show's presence on the Web, a possible "Austin City Limits" national tour and distribution of some of the show's archives via compact disc, DVD, video and television syndication.

"It was a matter of matching up corporate interests and reaching markets that 'Austin City Limits' had (lost in the PBS shakeup) and we were very successful," she said. "The series is in good shape for the future."

In the next five years, the historic set will be rebuilt as the station converts to high-definition television. The "Austin City Limits" sign that has shone over acts for 25 years will be retired to the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame in Cleveland.

Likona says the show faces competition for bookings with shows that have more money, and for music audiences who have a lot of options.

"I think that given the name, the reputation and the history that the show has, there will still be a place for us somewhere," Lickona said.

Lucero, who says he'll soon retire, believes it's the old formula that will keep faithful fans tuned in.

"Austin City Limits" is for "someone who really appreciates it, who comes and gets something out of it," he says. "The fact that you come here free, get free beer and see a great show, see some of your idols. That, I think, that's a lot."

Some Women Easily Conned By Men Trying to Duck Jail

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR ABBY: I am a concerned parent. My daughter's best friend here in California has been writing and receiving mail from a prisoner in San Quentin. She is 14, and the young man she's corresponding with is 17. Worse yet, she wants to marry him. She had him living with her for two weeks last November when he got out of prison.

My husband learned the young man was breaking probation, and he was sent back to prison. How do you deal with teen-aged girls writing and visiting men in prison?

CONCERNED PARENT IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR CONCERNED: Were I the girl's parent, I would have notified the warden at San Quentin that one of his "guests" was corresponding with an underage girl and I wanted it stopped! Frankly, I am shocked that the parents of your daughter's friend would allow such a living arrangement. A 14-year-old girl is too easily manipulated. Read on for a letter from a woman who was older — and should have been wiser:

DEAR ABBY: Not long ago I began seeing a man who seemed to be the most caring, generous person. The relationship moved quickly, and we began to discuss moving in together. Friends expressed concern about the speed of events, but I felt it was love at first sight. This in itself was exciting, as I have always been a bit overweight and this nice-looking man was showing a great deal of interest in me.

A few things kept this from being absolutely perfect: He owned few possessions other than clothes, he was living with a relative at no cost, he didn't own a vehicle, he was having to spend quite a bit of time in court, and he drank a bit more than I normally felt comfortable with. He attributed all of this to his ex-fiance, who, he explained, had set him up on false charges. (I had offered to accompany him to court for moral support, but he didn't want me exposed to this "vicious woman.")

I believed him because what would this sweet man possibly have done to deserve any of what he had gone through? It also would have meant that I wasn't as desirable as I had been feeling lately.

Had someone told me what I heard for myself, I would never have believed him capable of such ruthlessness. One evening, I overheard him tell a "bar buddy" that he was looking at some serious jail time, and he needed someone to make deposits into his jail account and to visit him. He also commented that he didn't have a lot of time and he couldn't be as selective as he would like. I was devastated — for what did that say about me?

I have been blessed with some very understanding friends and a great counselor. Let me share with you what I have found:

1. It says nothing about me. It says he was a creep, the kind few of us can relate to or comprehend.

2. Quick involvement is a red flag for potential problems — possibly even abuse.

3. Anyone can file a complaint against someone, but the police have to have a good reason to arrest someone on that complaint. With the person's name and birthdate, you can get information concerning that person's arrest record and, in most non-felony cases, you may even be able to get a police report. (I discovered that two of the incidents occurred while we were seeing each other, and one he even admitted to the police.)

This man chose me because of my lack of self-esteem. The most important thing people — especially women — need to work toward is knowing what we are worth and not accepting less. It will make us far less vulnerable to con men such as the one with whom I was involved.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ New beginnings are about to happen. You have been doing a lot of hard thinking and evaluating. Test out an idea on a friend before making an announcement to the world. Take some time for yourself. You need the break! Tonight: Put your feet up.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ You know what you want, and the timing is finally right. Make an additional effort. Listen to a friend. You can turn a situation around quickly. Success is yours. Just formulate plans and go for it. Network; reach out for others. You work best with groups. Tonight: Celebrate life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Embrace the limelight and take your bows. A boss salutes you for a job well-done. Now is the moment to ask for that pay raise or promotion. Others naturally listen to and follow your advice. Take charge. Pioneer new paths to what you want. Tonight: Make a must appearance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Share your ideas, listen to feedback and brainstorm. Touch base with others. Willingly try another approach. You aren't a sign that's known for rigidity, but be more mentally flexible today. Act on ideas. Start taking action on vacation plans. Tonight: Don't postpone a call any longer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ A money decision goes far. Evaluate, and listen carefully to an associate with a lot of financial savvy. A partner reaches out and is finally ready to work with you. Together, you make a stronger team. Deal with each person individually. Tonight: Do something special for a friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Defer to others, listen to feedback and make an important decision. A new beginning is possible in a key relationship. If single, someone you meet now or in the near future could be very important to you. Work more as a team. Tonight: Accept an invitation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Work remains a high priority. Listen to those around you before approaching a new project. Clean off your desk. Prepare to enter a new phase. Don't worry about a diet or exercise plan — just do it! Don't put off the decision any longer. Tonight: Work late.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Tap your creativity to come up with answers. Caring comes through, allowing a greater sense of freedom and play. Others respond to your charisma and sense of well-being. If single, you could draw in a very interesting personality. Tonight: So what if it's Monday?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Be more realistic about a domestic matter. You really might need to clean house and revamp. A fresh start is possible, but only if you are willing to clear the decks. Check out a piece of property carefully. It might be just what you want! Tonight: Talk about possibilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Launch plans you've been considering to make your daily life even better. Price different options carefully. Make calls and speak to others who have more expertise than you. You get good advice; listen. Tonight: Relax over a meal at a local eatery.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Make important financial resolutions. You might want to get a head start on your taxes or formulate a budget in the near future. Follow through on what you know to be right for you. No one can make your decisions for you. Assume responsibilities. Tonight: Pay bills.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Beam in what you want, but be clear about what you need. Your personality alone convinces others to go along with you. If you are in sync with your long-term goals, you can seize the moment and go for what you want. Tonight: You are like a magnet!

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Another shocker from Madonna: It turns out the material girl is an old-fashioned mom.

"You cannot be an anarchist when you have children," she says in Good Housekeeping magazine's April issue, out next week. "I mean, you can still be rebellious, but you always have to pause first."

She insists her 3-year-old daughter, Lourdes (nicknamed Lola), be well-mannered.

"We do insist on having good manners. The last thing I want is to raise a brat," Madonna said. "I don't want Lola to have everything she wants. I want her to appreciate things, and not be presumptuous. I want her to have manners and social graces."

She's also pleased that her daughter "does not look at a television set longingly, and I'm very happy about that."

"I'd rather have her develop her imagination and her language skills now."

Madonna said she also wants another child so Lourdes will have a brother or sister, but she remained mum about a possible pregnancy.

And though Lourdes has changed her life in some ways, she hasn't changed completely: "While I do feel spiritually enlightened, and while my daughter has completely changed my life, I haven't become a saint! I'm the same person, only better, I hope."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A driver hurt in a hit-and-run crash in which Halle Berry was also injured says she cannot confirm that the actress was behind the wheel of the other car.

Heta Raythatha, 27, discussed the Feb. 23 accident Thursday at her attorney's office.

"She couldn't identify the other driver" because the other car sped off, said her lawyer, Richard Sherman.

"My car just spun around. ... I saw that my wrist was broken. I couldn't move," Raythatha said, her right arm in a sling. Her car was totaled.

According to authorities, Berry was behind the wheel of a rented Chevrolet Blazer that ran a red light and hit Raythatha's car at a Sunset Strip intersection in West Hollywood.

The driver fled, but a turn signal casing and a piece of the front bumper molding were traced to the Blazer, which was impounded.

Berry, who sought her own medical treatment, needed 22 stitches to close a cut on her forehead.

The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department has asked the district attorney's office to file criminal charges against Berry, but no decision has been made. She could face a felony hit-and-run charge.

"Halle would like nothing better than to speak out publicly and clear up the many misunderstandings currently circulating about this accident. However, prudence dictates that she allow the legal process to run its course," said a statement issued by publicist Allan Mayer.

He did deny reports that Berry was investigated in connection with an accident three years ago in which she was not charged.

Berry, 31, won a Golden Globe for best actress in January for her role in the TV miniseries "Introducing Dorothy Dandridge."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Vince Gill and gospel-pop star Amy Grant are engaged.

"I can confirm that they are getting married," said Erin Morris, Gill's spokeswoman. "Other than that, they'd like to protect their privacy."

The 39-year-old Grant, perhaps the biggest name in the contemporary Christian music industry whose pop hits include "Baby Baby" and "That's What Love is For," was divorced from Christian singer Gary Chapman in June.

Gill, 42, is among the biggest stars in country music, with hits including "Go Rest High on That Mountain" and "I Still Believe in You." He was divorced from singer Janis Gill in 1997.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Director Billy Wilder will be presented with one of Germany's top honors — the Knight Commander's Cross of the Order of Merit — for his contributions to film.

German President Johannes Rau is bestowing the honor on the director of such classics as "The Lost Weekend," "Double Indemnity," "Sunset Boulevard," "Sabrina" and "The Apartment."

The Knight Commander's Cross is Germany's highest civilian honor. Filmmaker Steven Spielberg won it last year.

German Ambassador Juergen Chrobog will present the award during a reception March 10 in Beverly Hills.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jack Klugman's ex-girlfriend was ordered to pay $250,000 to the lawyer who represented her in a failed palimony case she brought against the actor.

Barbara Neugass was ordered Thursday to pay attorney Sam Perlmutter. She had contended that Perlmutter, who sued her, had agreed to take the Klugman case on a contingency basis and never billed her.

Neugass, who represented herself, said she cannot afford to pay the judgment and plans to file for bankruptcy.

"This has been a nightmare," said the Palm Springs resident. "I've got to go bankrupt. I'm going to lose my home. I've had no income. Between Klugman and Perlmutter, I've been through the wringer in the courts."

Neugass said she had evidence that Perlmutter took her case on a contingency basis. Brad Brook, Perlmutter's lawyer, disagreed.

"As a matter of law, there was no dispute," Brook said. "She never opposed the evidence that we presented to the court."

Neugass sued Klugman in February 1997, claiming the 77-year-old star of the TV shows "Quincy" and "The Odd Couple" had promised to support her. She claimed Klugman owed her at least $900,000 for a relationship that lasted nearly 20 years before ending in 1992.

A jury ruled Dec. 1 that the couple had neither an oral agreement nor a written contract.

DUARTE, Calif. (AP) — Sports Illustrated swimsuit model Kathy Ireland, an avid golfer, now has her own golf tournament.

The Kathy Ireland LPGA Classic will be played June 1-4 at Wachesaw East Golf Club in Murrells Inlet, S.C., and televised by ESPN.

The $750,000 tournament previously was known as the City of Hope Myrtle Beach Classic. Australian Rachel Hetherington is the defending champion.

"I am looking forward to the tournament and to having the opportunity to celebrate the achievements of the great athletes of the LPGA and to benefit the outstanding work of City of Hope," Ireland said Wednesday.

Ireland also designs her own line of clothing, accessories and furniture.

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Sela Ward wants society to accept aging women as they are.

That's the goal of her upcoming documentary, "The Changing Face of Beauty," scheduled to air March 19 on Lifetime Television.

"We need to embrace whatever age we are and own it," Ward told USA Today. "We live inauthentically and do violence to ourselves when we lie about how old we are."

But the 43-year-old actress, who plays a divorced mother on ABC's "Once and Again," says she hasn't ruled out having cosmetic surgery to look younger.

"I don't know that I have the courage not to have plastic surgery," she said. "The thing for me is not deciding to have it or not. It's about how we feel inside — that strong center of knowing that I'm OK no matter how old or thin I am."

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Former British royal Sarah Ferguson charmed a department store crowd while making a pitch for Wedgwood china.

"She's so down to earth, like someone you could have lunch with," Shehi said.

LONDON (AP) — Disgraced politician and best-selling novelist Jeffrey Archer has carved out a new career for himself as an actor.

His play "The Accused" is to debut in October. Archer will star as a doctor charged with poisoning his wife, he told broadcaster ITV in an interview that was to air Thursday.

The final scenes involve having the audience vote on his character's guilt or innocence.

Archer was forced to drop out of the London mayor's race in November and was expelled from the Conservative Party for five years. He admitted he'd asked a friend to lie for him when Archer was embroiled in a libel suit against a newspaper that had accused him of hiring a prostitute.

In his first full-length TV interview since November, Archer said he was angry with himself for how he handled the case.

"What a silly mistake I made," Archer said. "What a fool I am to have done that."

Report: Hospital infections drop

ATLANTA (AP) — Fewer hospitalized people appear to be contracting bloodstream infections as efforts to prevent common infections start yielding results, according to a government report.

According to data on hospital-acquired infections over the last decade, there was a drop of more than 30 percent, with the biggest reduction — a 44 percent decline — occurring in bloodstream infections in nonsurgical intensive care units.

Coronary ICUs had a 43 percent decline, pediatric ICUs had a 32 percent decrease and surgical ICUs had a 31 percent decrease, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Thursday.

Similar reductions were found for urinary tract and ventilator associated pneumonia infections, the CDC said. Each year, about 2 million Americans contract infections while in a hospital.

The results far surpassed the CDC's goal of reducing such infections by 10 percent during the 1990s.

"These decreases really are dramatic," said Dr. Julie Gerberding, head of the CDC's Hospital Infections Program.

She attributed the decline to hospitals better identifying problem areas, then evaluating the infections closely to figure out how to prevent them. The process undergoes constant review and adjustment.

"It is a classic quality-improvement model that works in industry and other settings, and now we're seeing it in the health-care setting," Gerberding said.

The report was based on data obtained between 1990-1999 from 300 hospitals in 42 states, the CDC said. Similar results were observed in urinary tract infections associated with catheters and pneumonia contracted after being on a ventilator.

Most hospital-acquired infections develop in surgical incisions, the urinary tract and the bloodstream. They are more common among the elderly, malnourished and severely weak patients. Burn victims, premature infants and smokers also are at high risk of infection.

The infections typically are caused by catheters, intravenous lines and breathing tubes common to most hospital stays. Such devices allow bacteria easy entry into the body.

Dr. Rekha Murthy, an epidemiologist at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles, said the decreases show that health workers are being more vigilant observing the basic precepts of preventing hospital-acquired infections: using catheters only when necessary, making workers wash their hands more, changing IV tubing more frequently, prescribing fewer antibiotics and wearing gowns and masks more often.

Although the number of participating hospitals was small, the CDC said evidence suggests that such infections are dropping nationwide because many medical centers use the same monitoring system but do not report their findings.

Article addresses 'lettuce spray' aspect of school prayer

To the editor,

Funny what you can find in a box in a closet. Just today, thinking I would locate a broken instrument that needed repair, I found instead a newsletter written in 1965 from the graduate school I was attending at that time. That school was Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, located in Louisville, Ky.

An article entitled "Lettuce Spray," written by the student editor, caught my eye. The editor, Richard Taylor, was someone I knew slightly ... or rather, I knew his father. His father was Noel Taylor, then the executive director of the Illinois (Southern) Baptist State Association, and someone who had visited my home church on numerous occasions.

Here is an excerpt of what Richard Taylor's article said. I think it speaks to the recent issue of "prayer at football games."

"I (recently) discovered that the usual rendering of 'let us pray' had become 'lettuce spray,' and the theological implications were staggering. Now, a spray of lettuce is a primarily decorative part of a salad. It serves little useful purpose beyond that of forming a base on which to place the jello, fruit, or whatever. Only when the lettuce is mixed in with the salad does it become an important ingredient.

"What kind of theology of prayer had brought about this state of affairs? Perhaps a few relevant points can be discovered.

"We Baptists — along with many others — seem to feel that in order to make an event 'religious' we must begin it with public prayer. Our attempt to make Christianity permeate every area of life has resulted in a growing number of occasions for (an) invocation; many of which may, at times, be appropriate: football games, partisan political rallies, some classes. (NOTE: This newsletter was directed to students and staff at a religious school, so prayer was often said before class sessions began.) Prayer should arise out of the already-present religious nature of the event. It should not be used to consecrate a secular activity which remains secular.

"In our worship services and even at meal-times, we have used prayer as a means of keeping everything flowing smoothly. This (results in) 'lettuce spray,' for who of us has not learned that when in doubt, the easiest and most 'religious' thing to do is bow for prayer, intoning rapidly, 'Let us pray.'

"What solution may be proposed? In the first place, let us recognize that prayer is not necessary in every event. Consequently, let us not feel guilty if football games, political rallies, or even classes (at seminaries) do not ... have to begin with prayer. Secondly, if we must have a liturgy, let us have a good one. If spontaneity is desired, let there be true spontaneity, not the reformulation of worn-out phrases and hypocritical expressions of thanks. Finally, let us remove from prayer the 'mortar complex,' the belief that prayers are the things which cement our programs together.

"If 'let us pray' is an integral and meaningful part of our ... activities, then let us retain it. But if 'lettuce spray' is merely a decorative fringe, a way to stick our programs together, or a relic of a poor theology of prayer, then let us dispense with it and get down to the business at hand."

Pampa needs to be kinder to truckers

To the editor,'

I am writing this in regards to the letter Dana Newsome wrote to the editor as to how Pampa responds to truckers.

They treat their customers like the truckers.

Dean's Pharmacy is the only business I have been in since moving to Pampa that says thank you and come back. The others just take for granted you are supposed to buy here.

I worked for K-Mart for several years and if we failed to thank our customers when they came through our check outs, we got a pink slip from our manager. Pat Balten that manages the Pam Apartments thanks each and every one of us for the things we do. Pampa should be proud of the Pam Apartments and the new Clarendon College.

Pampa has so many things they should be proud of. We have a good hospital and some of the best doctors any where. We have doctors who are skilled and could go to the big cities, but they choose to be here.

I for one am on the truckers side. They work hard to keep our country supplied with the things we need. If you never helped unload an 18-wheeler, it's a great job and a hard one. We employees had to help unload the trucks when they backed up to a K-Mart store. I have a friend whose son is a trucker and he drives long hours to get the vegetables and fruit to the stores while it is fresh. The reason we have fresh fruit and vegetables on our tables is the truckers gets them to us in a hurry. Hail, to the truckers and hope Pampa can be kinder to them.
