Slaying victim linked to police drug case

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

Big Spring police were attempting to make a narcotics purchase in April from Noe Perez — the man whose body was found Saturday in Martin County, a police official said today.

The failed drug deal was to take place at approximately the same time Perez disappeared last spring, officials have disclosed.

Police had arranged for a narcotics "buy/bust" between Noe Perez — believed to be distributing drugs in Big Spring — and a police informant, Captain Lonnie Smith said.

But the deal never occurred.

Perez was expected to sell the informant marijuana, Smith said, but declined to comment on the amount, or location where the "buy/bust" was to occur.

Smith said the department was later notified that Perez' car had been found in Glasscock county.

The remains of a body exhumed from a shallow grave in northeast Martin County Saturday have been identified through medical analysis as that of Noe Perez, 39, Grand Prairie.

Tentative identification and the cause of death of two men whose bodies were found in the debris of an Oct. 10 fire near Luther also have been determined, Dr. Robert Rember said today.

Rember, Scenic Mountain Medieal Center staff member, and Dr. Clyde Snow, forensic anthropologist from Norman, Okla., studied the remains of the three bodies.

Eight Howard County residents are being held on capital murder charges in connection with the deaths.

Two of those charged in connection with the death of Perez were questioned in April, Captain Smith said today.

Although police suspected the two were involved with Perez' disappearance, substantial evidence was not available.

"We felt like sooner or later there'd be a break," he said of the recent discovery of Perez' body.

The remains of the man, believed to have been dead since April, consisted of "very few badly-charred bones," Rember said.

Identification was achieved through chest x-rays obtained from the Dallas-Fort Worth area, Rember said.

Cause of death is unknown, he said.

The man allegedly was slain in a Big Spring motel room and his body was taken to Martin County where it was burned and buried, according to law enforcement investigations.

Five Big Spring residents have been charged with capital murder in connection with the death.

They are Jeannie Hernandez Fonseca, 29, Frankie Salazar Hernandez, 27, Joe Hernandez, 20, all of 606 11th Place; Pete Salazar Jr., 23, 411 N.W. 10th St., and Arthur Islas Jr., 20, 1306 Mesa Ave.

The District Attorney's office is considering filing additional charges against Fonseca in connection with the Luther deaths, 118th District Attorney Rick Hamby said today.

"Nothing has been filed yet," Hamby said this morning, but added that he expected to complete paperwork for the action today.

The office is considering information from both the Big Spring Police Department and the sheriff's office, Hamby said.

"The sheriff's office is handling the thrust of the investigation in all

Healing help

Local woman finds VA has her cure

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Norma Jo Bate plans to go dancing soon.

That may not seem unusual. Given the circumstances of the past three years, however, it will signify a victory over a mysterious injury that nearly left her permanently bed-ridden.

That victory is due in no small part to the efforts of her "man of my life" — Dr. A.G. Gopal, of the Big Spring VA Medical Center.

Bate's strange odyssey began in 1984, when she was a printer working for the Portland, Maine Press-Herald. Coming home from work one night, she caught her heel on carpeting and fell down a flight of stairs.

An examination by her doctor revealed nothing serious, and she returned to work soon after. Three months later, however, she began to have difficulty raising her feet, she said.

Things gradually worsened for Bate. One year after her accident, she was having trouble with her equilibrium.

"I started falling down," she said. "I had trouble standing. And, all this time, the doctor still couldn't find anything wrong."

"It got to where I couldn't walk to the bedroom. Things finally got so bad, I was put in a wheelchair."

She had lost her job with the newspaper because of her injuries. She still could do part of her job, but union rules specified that she had to do all her responsibilities, so she was released, Bate noted.

By this time, she had become reclusive, dependent on her children to buy groceries and pay bills. Bate also was concerned over her mental state.

"I knew I was losing my mind," she said. "I had a lot of problems remembering things. I would ask my daughter the same question five or six times."

In November 1986, she visited her sister, Jean Wolch, in Odessa. She had lost her home, "and besides, I had always liked to travel."

Pain also was an almost-constant companion, Bate said.

"Every time I tried to stand," she noted, "It felt like someone was putting a blow-torch to my back."

After a few months with her sister, Bate was convinced to check into the Big Spring VA Medical Center. She is eligible for care there because she is a veteran, having served in the Army as an interpreter, she said.

At the VA, she met Dr. Gopal, the man who would ultimately find the cause of her illness.

Bate was tentatively diagnosed as having multiple schrelosis. Her two years of unwanted idleness had caused other problems, also. She had gained 110 pounds and — as a result — her blood pressure had reached dangerous levels, she noted.

The weight problem was the easiest to solve. An examination found that her thyroid gland was not functioning properly. Medication for that dysfunction resulted in the loss of 78 pounds, she said.

Gopal, meanwhile, was working long hours in an attempt to find the cause for her major problems, Bate added.

A call to the Dallas VA hospital finally led to a solution of her crisis, she said.

One day in May, a spinal tap was adminstered to Bate. The next day, Gopal appeared in her room and asked her to stand. To Bate's

911 rate 49 cents monthly

By BILL FOSTER
Staff Writer

If Howard County residents approve the 911 emergency number service when voting Nov. 3, residential telephone customers will pay an additional 49 cents each month, it was determined Thursday.

The figures were provided to board members by representatives of Southwestern Bell Company and Wes-Tex Telephone Cooperative during a 911 board meeting Tuesday night.

Under a 911 system, a citizen can dial that number during an emergency. The dispatcher then notifies the proper authority — ambulance, fire department, police or sheriff's office, and help is on the way.

The 49-cent charge represents six percent of a basic $8.15 monthly residential telephone rate in Big Spring, according to John C. Steele, Southwestern Bell Engineering Services supervisor. The fee is based solely on the basic telephone rate.

Small businesses and firms with trunk telephone lines would pay more for 911 service, according to Steele.

A business which pays a basic monthly rate of $19.60 for one telephone line would pay an additional six percent of that figure, or an extra $1.18 each month, Steele said.

Firms with multiple trunk lines are now assessed a basic rate of $31 per line. That rate would increase — if the 911 system is approved — by $1.86 each month, per line, he said.

Additional information about how 911 system charges would affect monthly business phone rates in Big Spring can be obtained by calling Southwestern Commerical Department representative Neva Curly, Steele said. The telephone number is 806-741-5522.

Wes-Tex Manager, C.E. Butler, whose company provides telephone service to Coahoma and Lomax, also told emergency board members the exact cost of the proposed 911 system for residential customers in those two cities.

Coahoma telephone users would pay an additional 35 cents each month, based on a basic monthly rate of $5.90, according to Butler.

Lomax home phone customers, which now pay $10.65 each month for basic service, would pay an added 64 cents each month, upon voter approval.

Butler did not say how Coahoma and Lomax business phone rates would be affected by assessment of the 911 charge.

Cost figures for addition of the 911 monthly fee in Forsan were unavailable. A spokesman for General Telephone Company, which serves Forsan, was not present at Thursday night's meeting. Attempts to contact a represen-

Oil well named for Jessica

OKLAHOMA CITY — The world watched and waited last week while rescue workers in Midland, Texas, tried desperately to get 18-month-old Jessica McClure out of a dry well.

Now there's another well in her future after a Texas company said Thursday that it plans to drill the Jessica McClure No. 1 in Oklahoma's Seminole County.

United Petroleum Resources Inc. of Dallas said it also plans to give the girl a 1-percent interest in the well that bears her name.

Sheryl Pratt, president of the oil company, said the gesture "is my gift to them." She said the family will be able to use the money "any way they see fit."

Ms. Pratt said she could not say how much money will go to Jessica. The amount depends, Ms. Pratt said, "strictly and solely on the amount of oil and gas that will come out of the ground."

Fall Back

It's standard time again. Remember to set your clock back one hour at 2:00 a.m. this Sunday, October 25th.

You can sleep an extra hour this Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans will get an extra hour this weekend for sleeping, carousing, toiling or just idling, as the clocks shift back to standard time.

The official moment comes at 2 a.m. Sunday, when clocks should be turned back an hour.

Daylight time lasted a few weeks longer than usual this year, having gotten underway on the first Sunday in April instead of waiting until the end of that month.

It is concluding at the normal time, though — the last Sunday in October.

Nonetheless, the federal official in charge of time zones and changes, Joanne Petrie, reports that she is receiving considerable mail and calls asking about the change.

Because the starting date for daylight time was changed last spring, people are unsure about the ending date, she said, and they contact her for clarification.

A lawyer with the Department of Transportation, Ms. Petrie says she also gets a steady stream of letters arguing the merits of the semi-annual time changes.

Daylight time is more popular in urban areas and in the eastern portions of time zones, she commented. Rural residents and people near the western edge of time zones often complain about the darkness in the morning, she explained.

In addition, she gets letters contending that the nation should be only in one time zone, suggesting a variety of new time schemes including some half-hour shifts in various zones and contending that the government shouldn't be involved in regulating time at all.

"We have a lot of creative people in this country, and a lot of them have written to me," she concluded.

The Transportation Department regulates time zones and the switches between daylight and standard time, because that system was developed in the late 19th century to help simplify confusing railroad scheduling.

Before then, each community in the nation set its own time.

Daylight time will return April 3, 1988, renewing the tradition that began in Germany.

Build Texas may mean 'major change'

AUSTIN (AP) — Bond proposals that would put Texas $1.9 billion in debt have caused some officials to question whether the state is straying from the constitutional principle of "pay-as-you-go."

Eight of the 25 proposed constitutional amendments Texans will decide Nov. 3 are part of the so-called "Build Texas" bond issue project.

"If the people of Texas want to head down this path, then clearly they've got a right to do so, but they need to look very carefully at what they're doing," said Attorney General Jim Mattox.

"I operate from the perspective of having seen the U.S. Congress repeatedly have no connection between what they spend vs. what tax revenues are, and simply go to deficits that are far beyond our capacity to ever repay," said Mattox, a former U.S. representative.

A driving force behind Build Texas, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, said the package is "a major change in direction for the state, but it is one that has been thought through carefully."

"For three or four decades, the state was very flush, and at that time, this (type of bond financing) didn't make any sense," he said.

But in a depressed economy, Hobby said, it makes sense for Texas to go into debt to make the state "a better competitor" in the

OSHA report makes city confident

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A lawyer representing victims of the L'Ambiance Plaza collapse says Bridgeport officials are "dreaming" if they believe a federal report cleared the city of responsibility for the April 23 collapse.

Bridgeport City Attorney Lawrence J. Merly asserted that the Occupational Safety and Health Administration report issued Thursday "fully exonerates the city and its employees" and placed the blame on private contractors.

"He's dreaming if he thinks the report exonerated him," said Attorney Garrett Moore of Waterbury, one of 20 attorneys representing 43 plaintiffs in the collapse. "The report didn't even touch the issues we will be suing the city on."

Moore said the plaintiffs will file suit against Bridgeport within the next two weeks, charging that the city shouldn't have issued building permits for the ill-fated project and failed to conduct adequate inspections during construction.

Moore said the fact that Bridgeport wasn't singled out in the OSHA report didn't mean the city was cleared of responsibility.

"They did not address the Bridgeport situation because it doesn't fall within their realm," Moore said. "It wasn't within the scope of OSHA."

Moore said the lawsuit will likely be filed in Superior Court in Waterbury, where 12 of the dead construction workers lived. Additional defendants will be added to the lawsuit later, Moore said.

The 43 plaintiffs include the estates of the 28 workers killed in the collapse along with 15 workers injured in the collapse.

"City personnel did not conduct frequent enough inspections and the inspections they did conduct were not thorough," Moore said. "Had they done those inspections, it would have been very obvious that there were slipshod construction practices and there were flaws in engineering."

Moore also charged that Bridgeport building officials should have been able to tell from plans submitted for the building permit that the project's design was flawed.

"They never should have issued a permit for L'Ambiance Plaza to begin with," Moore said. "This whole thing could have been prevented by the city acting properly in the first place."

Federal investigators concluded that the partially completed apartment complex collapsed as a hydraulic jacking system failed while workers were lifting three concrete concrete slabs into place on the ninth, 10th and 11th floors of the building's west tower.

Chickens used to have teeth, evidently. They still have the genes for growing teeth. And such teeth start, then stop. Those genes, transplanted from chicken embryos to mice embryos, do grow teeth. The chicken cells provide the enamel layer.

tative of the company this morning were unsuccessful.

The variance in 911 fee charges in Howard County communities is due to a State Attorney General's ruling which prohibits the district from assessing varying fees to telephone customers to cover the expense of the system, Emergency Board Chairman Tim Yeats said.

"The attorney general ruling states that the six percent charge must be applied across the board ... regardless of the monthly telephone rates in the different cities," Yeats said.

The six percent fee would yield an estimated $100,170 per year from Big Spring and $10,800 from the Coahoma area, according to information provided by Steele and Butler. Estimated revenues from Forsan were not available.

Installation of the 911 system would cost an estimated $136,220.

Yeats noted that Howard County telephone users might be assessed the 911 fee, even if the measure is rejected by voters.

If the proposal is rejected, telephone customers might be charged a monthly fee later if the city council in their respective communities, or the Howard County Commissioners voted to make the county part of a larger regional emergency 911 system, Yeats said.

Emergency board member Bonnie Miller told board members that she observed a 911 system in operation during a recent visit to Houston.

"They were convinced that the system was the greatest thing ever," Milier said.

Dispatchers operating the Houston system required no special training, beyond what to say when answering emergency calls, according to Miller.

After taking basic information, the dispatchers then transferred the caller to the fire department, or other appropriate authority, Miller said.

Howard County voters will decide if they want to implement the 911 emergency telephone system when they cast ballots in the Nov. 3 election.

The 911 question will be the only local option on the ballot. Voters will also consider 25 constitutional amendments and two statewide referendums.

struggle to stimulate business.

Gov. Bill Clements, who with Hobby is on a committee that oversees state bonds, also supports the bond package, as does a coalition of black Texas leaders.

Supporters say the package would increase statewide income by $6 billion and create 60,000 new jobs in construction and related fields.

But Comptroller Bob Bullock has cautioned that "such borrowing could contradict the spirit of pay-as-you-go government." With Mattox, he warned that projects paid for through bonds cost more because of interest payments.

The Libertarian Party also has launched an effort against most of the amendments.

The Build Texas proposals on the ballot include:

— Amendment 4, allowing lawmakers to create programs and loan or grant public money for economic development and diversification.

— Amendment 5, authorizing joint projects by the Texas Turnpike Authority and State Department of Highways and Public Transportation and allowing the state to contribute money for turnpikes, toll roads and toll bridges.

The amendment would allow local governments in counties of more than 400,000, and in adjoining counties, to levy a voter-approved property tax for turnpike and toll road projects.

— Amendment 6, authorizing up to $125 million in general obligation bonds to provide financing for small businesses, new products, and agricultural production, processing and marketing.

— Amendment 7, authorizing up to $400 million in general obligation bonds for loans to local governments for public facilities such as jails, libraries and convention centers.

the cases, but the Big Spring Police Department is very actively involved in helping to tie this case together," Hamby said.

Sheriff's deputies obtained information about Perez' disappearance and were led to his body by a suspect in the Howard County fire deaths, Sheriff A.N. Standard said.

Three men currently face capital murder charges in connection with the deaths of two Mexican nationals whose bodies were found in the debris of an Oct. 10 fire near Luther — about 15 miles northeast of Big Spring.

The two died of gun shot wounds to the head, Rember said.

The three charged in connection with the deaths are Antonio (Tony) Aguilar, 21, 1321 Utah St., Enrique (Ricky) Sabedra, 17, and Orlando Aguirre, 19, both of Knott.

The house fire is believed to have been arson, Standard said.

Rember said he concurs with the sheriff's office on the identities of the two men — tentatively identified as Miguel Villarreal Calixto, 24, and Norberto Gurrola Hernandez, 22, both Mexican nationals.

Rember said he is awaiting a report from the forensic anthropoligist, Dr. Snow, and fingerprint and dental records, which must be sent from out of state before positive identification is determined.

"The sheriff, Dr. Snow and myself feel very satisfied" that the men have been correctly identified, Rember said.

Standard said today charges and bonds were unlikely to be changed until the grand jury considers evidence in the cases.

The grand jury is tentatively scheduled to convene in November.

The sheriff had said Thursday that charges and bonds might be reduced against several of the arrestees depending on their level of involvement in the crimes.

amazement, she could "for the first time in almost two years."

Gopal had discovered that her fall in 1984 had caused a tear in her brain — which resulted in a gradual loss of spinal fluid. Finally, the cause of her problems had been found, she said.

She was transported to the Dallas VA for surgery to implant a tube from her head to her bladder. This, it was hoped, would relieve the pressure to her skull and allow her to resume normal activities.

The surgery was a rousing success, she said. Two days after the operation, she began walking again "like I'd never missed a step," Bate added.

Her recovery — rapid as it has been — continues, she said.

Psychological problems developed soon after the operation. Depression set in after she found out it still would be several months before she could return to work. Counseling by Dr. P.J. Hooverstall, chief, psychiatry service, has been effective, she noted.

Although she has one more surgery scheduled — for her gall bladder — Bate is confident her problems are at last being put behind her.

"I feel terrific. I'm pain-free now, and the psychological therapy has done wonders. Everybody here has been so supportive," she said.

"If anyone has any doubts about the care they will receive at a VA hospital, they shouldn't," Bate says. "Because everyone here cares."

INS makes fraud arrests of three Texas growers

DALLAS — Fraud charges were being prepared Thursday against three South Texas growers who allegedly imported illegal immigrants, provided them with phony work documents and told them to apply for legal status under the new immigration reform act, immigration officials said.

The scheme surfaced Monday at the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's amnesty center and district office in Harlingen. After intense questioning, 19 Mexican aliens applying for amnesty admitted they paid three growers between $150 and $300 each for packets of false papers, INS officials said.

The immigrants were arrested and deportation proceedings were begun. All but two, the sole women arrested, were being held as material witnesses in an INS facility in Bayview.

Officials at Catholic Charities in San Juan, however, questioned the accusation against one of the women whose amnesty case they had helped process. The immigrant told them she had been blamed wrongly by the INS for presenting phony papers, and that the employment history she provided when applying was accurate.

Immigration and Catholic officials declined to name the woman or growers to be charged in the case. The U.S. Attorney's office in McAllen is expected to seek arrest warrants Friday or early next week in the case, officials said.

Banks show worst profits

Dallas Times Herald Bureau

DALLAS — Texas banks reported the third worst profit drains of all 50 states during the first half of the year, according to a report Thursday by Sheshunoff & Co., an Austin-based bank information and consulting firm.

The nation's 13,888 banks reported a total loss of $5.4 billion during a six-month period ending June 30, down from $9.0 billion in earnings reported in the same period a year ago. Texas banks lost $783 million, placing the state behind California, with a $1.4 billion loss, and New Mexico, with a $7.1 billion loss.

Sheshunoff reported more than half of the losses came from the nation's 16 largest banks as a result of increases in loan-loss reserves to cover debts owed by Third World countries.

Savings and loans reported losses of $1.1 billion during the period, compared with earnings of $2.2 billion during the first six months of 1986. Of the nation's 3,204 thrifts, more than two-thirds — 2,347 in all — were profitable, earning $3.9 billion.

But the 857 unprofitable thrifts piled up $5.0 billion in losses, more than half of which came from thrifts in Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma, according to the report.

Alex Sheshunoff, the company's president, said bad real estate loans were responsible for most of the losses in Southwest area thrifts.

Sheshunoff reported there were more banks in the black during the period, with 11,626 profitable banks and 2,262 reporting losses.

Incest suspect arrested

Dallas Times Herald Bureau

DALLAS — An Oak Cliff man who police suspect fathered 11 children by his three daughters was arrested Thursday after a Dallas County grand jury indicted him on three counts of incest.

The 52-year-old man, a Baptist minister who told police he also works as a construction contractor, remained in Lew Sterrett Justice Center late Thursday with bail set at $150,000.

He was arrested after he appeared before state District Judge Hal Gaither for a review of blood tests ordered earlier to help determine if he had fathered his daughters' children. The test results were not available for the hearing.

The judge issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting the man from contacting any member of his family.

Social workers, police and attorneys representing the 11 children said he controlled his family life through violence and used "the Bible as a weapon," say affidavits filed with the court. He never allowed the daughters to date, but they often were pregnant after reaching puberty, say the affidavits.

"It's going to be harder for him to control them from the jail," said John Read, the lawyer representing the man's eight children, including the three daughters, now ages 26, 27 and 28.

Fake I.D. leads to arrest

DALLAS — A Dallas man trying to avoid being jailed for an unpaid traffic ticket gave a false name to police and spent two days in the brig because U.S. Navy officials believed he was a deserter, authorities said Thursday.

Marcus Jackson was freed after he convinced military authorities he had never been in the Navy and was not the man they had been seeking since 1982 on felony desertion charges.

"They told me they were sorry and bought me an airplane ticket and sent me back to Dallas," said Jackson, 27, a photographer who works in a Carroll Avenue nightclub.

Jackson, of the 9700 block of Audelia Road, said his odyssey started about 4 a.m. Monday when police were called to a motel on East R.L. Thornton Freeway where he and his girlfriend were arguing.

"I gave them a false name because I have a traffic ticket I haven't paid in Irving," Jackson said. "I gave them the name of my cousin, Larry Keatric Jackson, because I had been arrested under this name before and I didn't think he was wanted."

After he was booked into Lew Sterrett Justice Center, jailers told Jackson they had found a Navy arrest warrant for Andrew Lee Jackson, who has the same birth date as his cousin, he said. About 9 a.m., Navy police showed up, handcuffed him and took him for a 10-hour ride to Corpus Christi Naval Air Station.

Jackson said he gave authorities his real name, his social security number, his birthplace, his mother's name and the name of his high school. He also told them he had been in the Army in 1977.

Soviet dancer Andrei Ustinov, left, shows off a T-shirt to Cindy Parrish in Dallas Thursday morning after the two met for the first time after Ustinov was granted asylum in the United States. Miss Parrish arranged for FBI agents to pick Ustinov up last week after he approached her in a supermarket and asked for help.

Russian dancer meets woman who helped him

DALLAS (AP) — A Soviet dancer says he knew he'd found someone to help him defect when he looked into Cindy Parrish's eyes.

But luck played a part, too — by chance, Andrei Ustinov had found a woman who had seen a Moscow Ballet performance a week before and knew immediately what was happening when the frantic dancer approached her.

Ustinov smiled broadly Thursday and embraced Miss Parrish in the first meeting he has had with her since she helped him defect last week in the most American of settings — a supermarket.

Miss Parrish, a 25-year-old saleswoman for an air conditioner manufacturer, was at the grocery store trying to get some firewood off an upper shelf. From behind her, someone lent a helping hand.

"I turned around to thank him, and it was him," Miss Parrish said Thursday, pointing to 32-year-old Ustinov, who left behind his country, his family and the Moscow Ballet.

"He was very scared, panicked, and was saying, 'Help me, help me. USSR. Plane leave tonight. KGB be looking for me,'" she told reporters at a news conference.

She said she knew what was happening because she had been to the first of three performances in Dallas last week by the Moscow Ballet, which is on a 21-city U.S. tour. Ustinov was a lead dancer with the troupe.

Ustinov requested political asylum, and on Saturday, two days after his hasty exit from the Dallas hotel where the troupe was staying, government officials granted his request.

At a news conference Wednesday, Ustinov told reporters of a "lovely girl" he knew only as Cindy who helped him when he ran from the hotel to a nearby shopping area. Officials then arranged a Thursday reunion.

"I watch American people ... I watch American girls, and I think, yes," he said, explaining how he had sought out Miss Parrish.

He said he felt after looking into her eyes she could help him.

"I have the gift of mercy," Miss Parrish said. "Bums have always been kind of attracted to me."

In fact, she at first thought Ustinov was a "cute" panhandler when he sought her aid at 6 p.m. Oct. 15.

"I speak, Cindy, bravo!" Ustinov said happily as Miss Parrish tugged the Spuds McKenzie "Party Animal" T-shirt he also had worn the night of his escape. Ustinov expanded his American wardrobe later Thursday on a free shopping spree donated by a Highland Park men's clothing store.

PHARMACIST ROBERT HELDFOND, is being thanked by his wife for helping keep her younger-looking with his wrinkle cream discovery. EB5.

WRINKLE CREAM HELPS WIFE LOOK YOUNG AFTER 50 YEARS MARRIED

Pharmacist Heldfond dreamed since pharmacy school of creating a beauty cream which would help skin look younger ... and his bride shared his dreams ... and shared his cream that he developed ... his wrinkle cream, EB5.

This exciting cream is now being sold in over 2,000 department stores in the United States and Canada, and customers are praising how wonderfully EB5 works.

Enjoying the success more than anyone is Mrs. Heldfond. She feels that the compliments she receives on her youthful looking skin (even after 50 years of marriage) are because she has used EB5 for many years.

"What I especially like about EB5," she says, "is that there is only one jar on my dresser for all purposes. EB5 is a wrinkle cream, a moisturizer, a night cream, a day cream, and a makeup base ... all in one jar! EB5 leaves my skin feeling soft and velvety and younger-looking."

But the proof is really in seeing Mrs. Heldfond isn't it? ... at nearly 70 years old and looking so young!

Note: EB5 Cream is available at most large JCPenney stores.

INS regulations get fine-tuning

The following is a tale of two undocumented aliens. The first returns to his native Ireland because of a family emergency and gets a visitor's visa to re-enter the United States. His Mexican neighbor visits Mexico briefly, but sneaks back into this country illegally.

Until now, if both applied to become legal U.S. residents under the amnesty provisions of the immigration reform law, only one would have qualified — the one who furtively crossed the U.S.-Mexico border without getting any visa.

Does this make sense? We don't think so. The amnesty regulations were written hurriedly, under deadline, and this one backfired.

INS officials say they held up amnesty applications of undocumented aliens who left America, then re-entered with a tourist or student visa because they committed fraud. But for an alien to hire a coyote to smuggle him across the border in the dead of the night isn't legal either.

In practice, the visa ban slammed the legalization door on people whom Congress probably intended to qualify. And it prompted a lawsuit from the National Center for Immigrants' Rights.

It is difficult for officials to admit a regulation was wrongly written. That is why we commend the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service for liberalizing this overly restrictive rule. Undocumented people who left the country and came back on a visa will have the same opportunity to legalize as those who didn't get visas.

The change is expected to make thousands — perhaps hundreds of thousands — of undocumented workers eligible for amnesty. But it does so in a way that leaves the basic legalization rules intact.

All amnesty applicants must still prove they have been in this country since Jan. 1, 1982, and they can't have been out of the United States for a single absence of more than 45 days or a cumulative total of more than 180 days.

This kind of regulatory fine-tuning is desirable in these early stages of implementing the new immigration rules. Unfortunately, impatient INS officials seem to have unrealistic, short-term expectations.

Two months ago, the INS declared that the new law wasn't working because record numbers of undocumented workers were crossing the border. Now, the INS is proclaiming triumph because apprehensions of aliens apprehended at the U.S.-Mexico border were down 30 percent during the fiscal year ended Sept. 30.

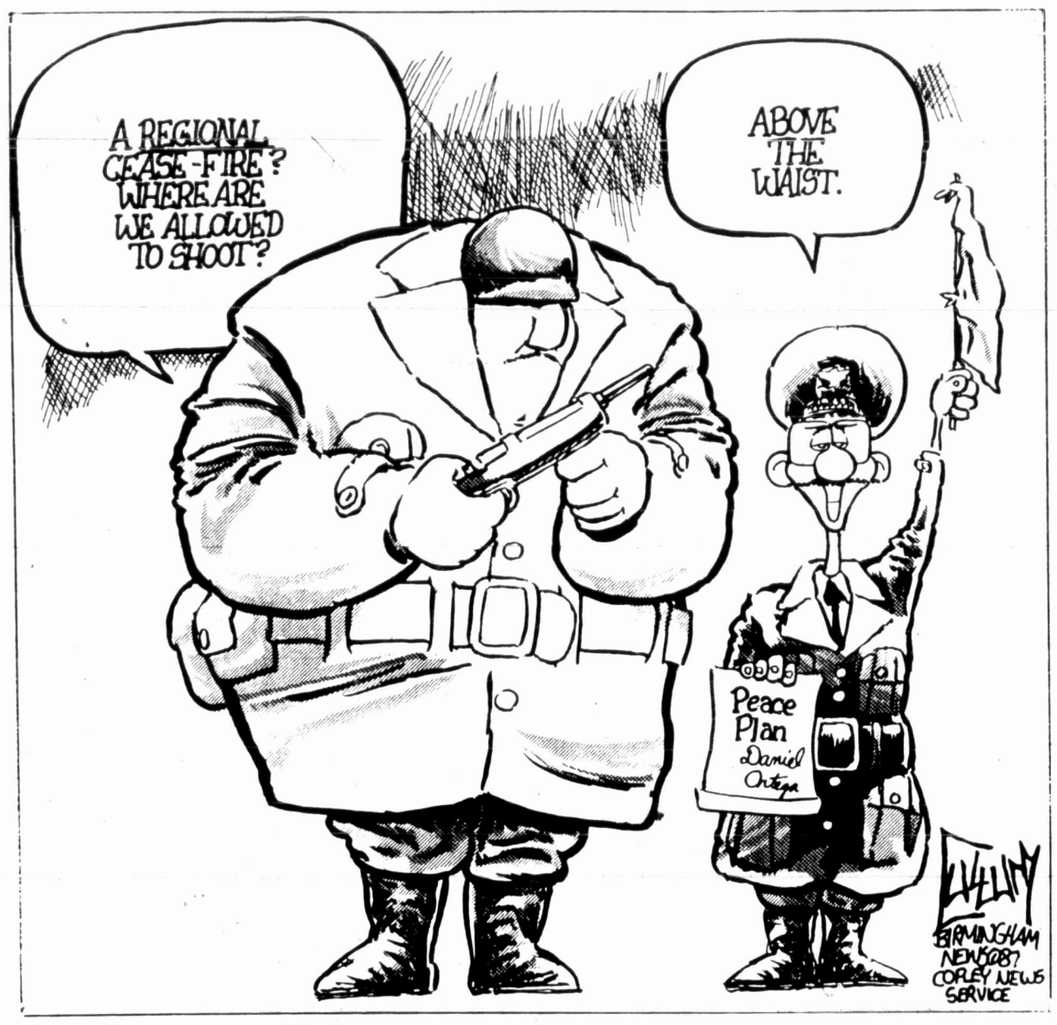

In reality, it's premature to make these judgments based on a single year's statistics.

True immigration reform is not going to happen overnight. It's going to require a long-term commitment. The INS must continue its fine efforts in making the amnesty program work.

It speaks well for immigration officials that more than 800,000 aliens have come forward so far to apply for amnesty.

The INS should increase efforts to provide work papers for eligible farm workers, as well as enforce employer sanctions against businesses that keep using undocumented labor.

That's not necessarily sensational stuff that is going to grab headlines for the INS. But ultimately, it could spell the difference between success and failure of immigration reform.

Student criticizes Steer coverage

To the editor:

I am a student of Big Spring High School, and I am appalled at the way that the Steers are being badmouthed in the sports section of the Herald.

During the football season, the paper includes advertisements with phrases such as "Backing The Steers", and "Support the Big Spring Steers."

Headlines on the sports front page such as "Tors nearly wreck Steers," and "Steers in Christmas Spirit" hardly support this image. Degrading headlines such as these are in very bad taste and should never be directed toward one of our own local teams.

If the Steers did not play as well as they should have, then they are fully aware of it. They do not need to be reminded of their loss by tacky remarks from Herald sportswriters.

If the sarcasm must be present, it should be saved for college or pro teams, members of which do not read the Herald and will not be discouraged by thoughtless comments in it.

No, as a matter of fact, our guys have not started off this season with a great record. However, they are just that, they are our guys. They are the Big Spring Steers, and they deserve more credit than the Herald is giving them. If Big Spring does not support the Steers, then who will?

Mobile meals needs volunteers

To the editor:

Once again we must appeal to some real good folks of Big Spring. We must find some more volunteers to deliver the mobile meals to deserving Big Spring citizens.

We may have to curtail some of the services of the council on aging, mainly the delivery of these meals. The funding for this program is no problem, the preparation of these meals is no problem. The problem is delivery.

If you can spare about one hour, one day per week, you are needed. This is one of the most rewarding public services that you can participate in. We surely do not wish to miss anybody deserving this one meal per day.

It takes volunteers to deliver this meal. One hour per day, one day per week, that's all it takes. If you volunteer, please call one of these two numbers. 263-4016 or 263-2043. Thank you.

CIA believes Mexico's next president may be socialist

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — The "president-designate" of Mexico, budget boss Carlos Salinas de Gortari, will be as reasonable in his dealings with the United States as his mentor, President Miguel de la Madrid, has been, according to our sources in Mexico.

But the Central Intelligence Agency isn't so sure about Salinas. The agency is afraid the future president is a leftist, who will not only promote socialist economic policies but who will prove to be an obstreperous and troublesome opponent of Washington's foreign policy objectives, particularly in Central America.

Jack Anderson

Salinas' selection as the candidate of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, known as the PRI, which hasn't lost a national election in 58 years, followed the outward pattern of such designations — but with a significant difference. In the past, the imperial Mexican presidents have chosen their successors in strict secrecy, and without consulting party leaders.

De la Madrid confided in a private interview earlier this year with Dale Van Atta that he would make his decision on a successor only after extensive consultation with PRI leaders. He went further than that, in fact: He promised that the list of possible candidates "will be published when the time comes" — which was done in August.

"I think it is an oversimplification to say that the president of Mexico names his successor," de la Madrid said. "(It is) a much more complex process within the party, where the president is a participant, but where there are other participants, too. ... I am very respectful of the party's mechanisms."

De la Madrid declined to say which of the six possible candidates he was leaning toward, and his choice surprised many Mexican political observers.

But we had received strong hints from various sources that he would settle on the uncharismatic, Harvard-trained economist, and his decision makes a lot of sense.

Salinas was the gray eminence of de la Madrid's Cabinet, the behind-the-scenes strategist who devised and implemented much of the president's economic reform program.

Choosing Salinas as his successor was proof that de la Madrid understands the seriousness of Mexico's precarious economic situation, and intends to make sure that the reforms will continue after he leaves office next year.

Sources in Mexico City tell us that Salinas was the chief architect of what might be called Mexico's attempt at a Regan-Thatcher type of "privatization" — selling off money-losing public corporations and buoying up the private sector.

Part of the policy is to eliminate protectionist policies that Salinas believes are counterproductive and inflationary.

Our evaluation of Salinas, based on conversations with him and sources in Mexico, is that he is a capitalist in a thin socialist disguise.

The CIA disagrees. A secret profile we obtained has this to say:

"Salinas is an ambitious technocrat and an expert economist. He has been a protege of de la Madrid's since the mid-1970s. ... He has good family connections, he became active in the PRI early on, and he has excellent academic credentials.

"In early 1983 he drafted the National Development Plan to reflect the country's need for belt tightening and austerity. The international business community seems to trust his understanding of international trade and economics.

"When he first emerged as a force to be reckoned with in early 1984, most local observers saw him as favoring business and free enterprise, but more recent reporting from reliable sources indicates that he belongs to the left wing of the PRI, and he may favor greater state domination of corporations that are now owned mostly by U.S and multinational firms."

PLUGGING THE LEAKS — Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi has tried high technology and decided that it can't be trusted. When President Reagan justified the U.S. bombing of Libya in April 1986, he offered irrefutable evidence that the Libyans had planned and perpetrated the bombing of a West Berlin discotheque that killed an American serviceman and a Turkish woman that shed American blood. The evidence included verbatim transcripts of radio messages between Tripoli and Libyan missions abroad.

As he thought things over in the rubble of his bombed headquarters, Gadhafi decided he'd never send important instructions through the airwaves again. Since then, he has relied on couriers to carry his top-secret messages — and it has worked. U.S. intelligence has been effectively cut out of Gadhafi's innermost plans and operations.

OIL BREAK — After years of drilling dry hole after dry hole, Israel has struck oil in commercially feasible quantities in its southern desert. The Israelis are keeping it quiet, and it's not known yet whether the find will prove big enough to meet the financially strapped nation's domestic needs. The ultimate goal, of course, is to produce enough oil for export.

Time comes to change column title

By ALISHA GOLDMAN
Copy editor

"The time has come," the Walrus said, "to talk of many things. Of ships and shoes and sealing wax, of cabbages and kings."
— The Walrus and the Carpenter, by Lewis Carroll

Members of the Herald editorial staff who are regularly writing editorial columns decided recently to give each column its own name.

These columns have been called "Around the Rim" for some time, referring to the "rim" around the copy editor's desk.

Of cabbages and kings

Ironically, as the editorial page originates at my desk, I am the last to drop the former title and adopt my own.

I have always personally associated myself with the poems of Lewis Carroll since I realized that my name was a Spanish version of the English name Alice.

I always dreamed to be like Alice one day and have adventures of my own in some wonderland.

I finally did, in a sense, when I volunteered for a two-year tour overseas through a para-church organization. At the time, I was anxious to travel, "see the world," learn Spanish, in addition to contributing to religious efforts in Chile, South America.

As a pilgrim in a new culture, I often felt that I had fallen down a hole. Much as Alice learned (and more recently Jessica McClure), falling down holes is not a pleasant experience.

But I survived, just as they did. And I did have many adventures, which I now frequently share through this column.

In Latin America I often was called "Alice in Wonderland" — being similar to the blonde and blue-eyed Alice pictured by Walt Disney.

They seemed delighted to imagine their country and culture as my wonderland. It helped me keep my perspective when I truly felt I was in a hole.

And Chile was a wonderful place. Not in the sense that all was perfect, but rather that it inspired wonder.

President Augusto Pinochet of Chile at times seemed like the queen in Alice's adventures, shouting, "Off with her head," at the drop of a hat.

At times I was as confused as Alice, hearing conversations at "onces," or tea, that made as much sense as the Mad Hatter's.

Sometimes I seemed to be small, lost in a sea of millions of people in the capital city of Santiago. At other times I felt huge, coming from a land of wealth and education, compared to the poverty and ignorance I witnessed.

When I finally had to leave, exactly five years ago Halloween, my heart felt torn in two. I left behind people who had adopted me, and the ties seemed stronger than blood.

This column has provided me the opportunity to share many of those experiences that heretofore were unknown to anyone but myself.

That is how I came to choose a phrase from the writings of Lewis Carroll to refer to my own writings.

I will share my wonderland with you when appropriate, to help put West Texas life into a different perspective — but mostly to show that we are all very much alike, even if customs and cultures differ.

Confessions help his conscience

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

There used to be the belief in this country that "every little boy has a chance to grow up to be president."

What we really meant back then was every child had a chance to grow up to be president, but back then how were we to know little girls would someday care about anything but a degree in Home Ec and a husband with a hairy chest?

We also didn't know that presidential politics would become a steady exercise in muckraking, and when a little boy or little girl grew up and tried to be president, somebody would dig each and every wart out of their past.

We know what happened to Gary Hart and Joe Biden and their presidential bids. We found out Hart fooled around with the ladies and Biden fooled around with the truth.

Now, we come to Republican candidate Pat Robertson, the evangelist. Turns out, according to the Wall Street Journal, the Rev. Robertson gambled, drank, and caroused his way through college and when he married his wife, she was already seven months pregnant.

I gave up on the hope of this little boy ever growing up to be president a long time ago. Actually, I don't want to be president.

Lewis Grizzard

Regardless of that, however, I feel the compelling need to go ahead and reveal the sordid shortcomings of my past before somebody else, for whatever reasons, might start digging through it.

Who knows? I might replace Pat Sajak on "Wheel on Fortune" one day. I might even become a television evangelist myself. It's inside work with no heavy lifting, and the pay is great.

I simply want to get the past off my chest before the leeches have a chance to latch hold of me.

Let's start at the beginning:

- When I was 6, my mother served liver one night, and I got rid of mine by feeding it to the dog under the table.

"Did you eat your liver or did you give it to the dog?" my mother asked.

I lied, and said I ate it. Worse, my dog was sick for weeks from the liver and died.

- When I was 11, I bought some dirty pictures from a friend at school. Every guy did that I suppose, but I still have mine.
- When I was 14, I tried to put my hand inside Kathy Sue Loudermilk's sweater.
- When I was 17, I cheated on a history exam. I couldn't remember Millard Fillmore's first name.
- When I was 27, I folded, mutilated and spindled a computer card.
- When I was 35, I said to somebody, "It takes one to know one." I stole that from Alvin Bates, who used to say the same thing back in high school.
- Last year, when I was 40, I said, "What this country needs on the Supreme Court is a jurist like Robert Bork."

There it is, and I feel a lot better now that it's all out in the open.

Meanwhile, did you hear one of the presidential candidates is gay?

Teen-ager testifies

NEW YORK — A white teen-ager who took the stand against four buddies charged in the death of a black man in the city's Howard Beach section says he was testifying partly to atone for his role in the racially-charged melee.

Robert Riley, 18, testified Thursday that he was part of a white gang that confronted three blacks outside a pizza parlor, taunted them with racial slurs and chased one of them to his death in front of a passing car Dec. 20.

"When I saw how serious it was, I had to do something to make up for it, to make up for the wrong that I did," Riley, the prosecution's star witness, said when a defense lawyer questioned him about his motive for testifying.

Longest trial ends

BELLEVILLE, Ill. — After 3½ years, one of the longest trials in history ended with a jury ordering Monsanto Co. to pay $16.2 million for failing to warn a Missouri town of the risks of a dioxin-tainted chemical spill.

"Hopefully, this jury has passed a message to the chemical companies: 'Don't contaminate the only world we've got,'" said Rex Carr, attorney for residents of Sturgeon, Mo., after Thursday's verdict.

The panel deliberated eight weeks before awarding the more than $16 million in punitive damages to 65 plaintiffs who claimed they were sickened by the spill, which contained less than a teaspoonful of dioxin.

Tears jeopardize trial

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — A woman accused of driving her teen-age daughter to suicide by forcing her to dance nude rushed out of a courtroom in tears after glimpsing photographs of the body, raising the possibility of a mistrial.

The outburst by Theresa Jackson, 40, came during a recess Thursday afternoon in Broward Circuit Court.

The 2-week-old trial was jeopardized because the jury, which had been in the judge's chambers at the time, may have seen Mrs. Jackson weeping in the hallway, said Assistant State Attorney Kathleen Kearney.

High tech plot foiled

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Federal agents say they've smashed a plot involving the Soviet Union's top space official to sell Moscow stolen U.S. supercomputer technology that would have enabled the Soviets to destroy incoming missiles.

A Frenchman, a California software designer and a third man were arrested Thursday after agents recovered plans for a supercomputer developed by Saxpy Computer Corp. of Sunnyvale and capable of 1 billion computations a second, officials said.

Little Rock Nine reunite at school

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Thirty years after armed federal troops escorted them into all-white Central High School, nine blacks came back for a reunion at the school, now largely black and known for academic excellence.

The reunion is "a celebration of progress, of togetherness, and of love," said Melba Pattillo Beals of San Francisco, one of the blacks who integrated Central High.

"But most of all," she said, "it is a celebration of the triumph of the human spirit, no matter what its color."

Gov. Bill Clinton was scheduled to lead the tour today of Central High. One of his predecessors, Orval E. Faubus, called out the National Guard to block the students' entry to the school in 1957, prompting the federal intervention.

Also joining the Little Rock Nine on the tour will be members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's national board, which was responsible for bringing the group together in Little Rock for the first time in nearly 30 years.

The board is holding its annual meeting in the city to commemorate the 30th anniversary of the 1957 landmark school desegregation battle.

"Thirty years ago, the NAACP was involved in a life-and-death struggle. Either we won there, or the whole struggle would have been lost," Benjamin Hooks, the NAACP's executive director, said in an interview Thursday before an emotional reunion of the Little Rock Nine at the governor's mansion. "We're here to look back at the past, assess the future and move on into the future."

The tour of Central High, now 57 percent black, will show how Little Rock has changed, Hooks said.

Clinton, who was 11 years old at the time of the crisis, said during the reception that he was particularly pleased to honor the group at "what was the command center for the effort to thwart integration" at Central High.

Also honored at the reception was longtime civil rights activist Daisy Bates, who was instrumental in the 1957 desegregation effort. Ernest Green, a member of the NAACP board and the first black graduate of Central High, said of Mrs. Bates, "She was the glue that kept us all together."

Memorial service

Friends of Beth L. Goldberg weep during a memorial service Thursday in Christ Church Cathedral in downtown Indianapolis following Tuesday's Air Force jet crash when she and eight other employees of the Ramada Inn died. Miss Goldberg's boyfriend, Glenn Kuhn (left) and his mother, Helen Kuhn, with friends Letitia Miele and Paul Gatsos (right) cry when Rabbi Jonathan Stein read, "So may it be God's will that somehow, in some way, these families may find peace."

Soviet generals killed

MOSCOW — Five top Soviet army generals were killed in an apparent helicopter crash, it was reported today.

Red Star, the Defense Ministry newspaper, said the five officers and two helicopter crewmen died in an air crash Monday.

The report did not say where the crash occurred, but a Western diplomatic source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he had information about the incident that "ruled out Afghanistan," where the Soviet military has been fighting Afghan guerrillas for nearly eight years. The newspaper gave no further details, such as the type of aircraft or whether it was shot down.

Soviet arms talks open

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev today opened a new round of arms control talks with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, predicting they will be able to arrange a superpower summit in the United States.

"I think this is going to happen," Gorbachev said.

Shultz, referring to hurdles still in the way of a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles, joined the optimistic forecast.

"We have done good work, but we aren't satisfied. We'll get there," he said, as he posed for pictures with Gorbachev, the Soviet Communist Party general secretary, in Catherine's Hall in the grand Kremlin palace.

Kuwait sets rockets

KUWAIT — Kuwait has deployed rockets north of its main oil terminals to guard against missile attacks by Iran, officials said today, and the United States has deployed dolphins to hunt for mines in the Persian Gulf.

An official of the state-owned Kuwait Oil Tanker Co., who spoke on condition of anonymity, said U.S.-made Hawk surface-to-air missiles were deployed on Faylakah Island beginning Thursday. He also said the Silkworm missile that struck Kuwait's offshore supertanker oil terminal Thursday caused only slight damage.

President Saddam Hussein of Iraq today telephoned Kuwait's Emir and "assured him of Iraq's firm solidarity with Kuwait," the official Iraqi News Agency reported.

Visitor program cut

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The government suspended a program allowing its citizens to visit relatives in Costa Rica each weekend, citing decisions by hundreds of Nicaraguans to remain in the neighboring country.

Federico Lopez Arguello, the president's representative in southeastern Nicaragua, announced the move late Thursday, accusing Costa Rican officials of trying to convince Nicaraguans to seek refugee status there.

Religion roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — An interreligious consultation on the AIDS crisis has called for establishment of a nationwide interfaith network to help religious institutions deal with the disease, its victims, families and fears of it.

Protestant, Jewish and Roman Catholic participants agreed the network should collect information about effective AIDS ministries, educational and preventive measures and develop a nationwide information-dissemination system.

The Rev. James Gardner of St. Joseph's Church in Greenwich Village said religious institutions must "help us all realize we are not essentially dealing with a disease — that's a very antiseptic view — but with people."

The Rev. Theodore H. Erickson, head of the United Church Board for Homeland Ministries, said AIDS "presents a particular challenge to our religious institutions."

The consultation was cosponsored by the American Jewish Committee, the National Council of Churches and the Graymoor Ecumenical Institute, among others.

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal appeals court has upheld Southern Baptist officials in a case in which they were accused of improperly blocking a challenge to a fundamentalist-backed slate of officers at a 1986 convention.

The court, in upholding a lower court decision, declined to discuss the merits of the suit, but ruled that civil courts could not interfere in internal religious affairs.

The suit was brought by Robert S. and Juilia Crowder of Birmingham, Ala.; Henry Cooper of Windsor, Mo., and H. Allen McCartney of Vero Beach, Fla.

WE SHOULD NEVER LEAVE FAITH OUT OF OUR BUSY SCHEDULE

Like many of us, you have the problem of too little time and too much to do. In addition to earning a living, you have the responsibility of a home and everyone in it. Then on top of all that, you yearn to be a good citizen and get involved in some worthy cause, to help the poor or whatever. Suddenly, you are awash in a sea of promises you will never be able to keep. It's time to rearrange your priorities, and to confine them to the ones you can reasonably handle. However, you should also take the time to attend your House of Worship, to recharge your batteries and be able to confront your obligations with a renewed vigor and the ability to accomplish more than you would have thought possible. Remember that the Lord is never too busy to help you, so be sure to ask for His help. If He approves of what you are doing, you'll get it.

Church hosts Friendship Sunday

First Church of the Nazarene, 1400 Lancaster St., will celebrate "Friendship Sunday," at 10 a.m. Sunday.

Singers include the Assembly Trio, Margaret Christopher, Cooper Sister trio, all of Big Spring; special saxaphone/trumpet duet, other special singing, and dinner on the grounds after the service.

The 6 p.m. evening service will feature Rev. and Mrs. Warren Rogers, who have dynamically and effectively communicated the gospel in sermon and song for over 40 years, according to a news release. Their solos, duets, and instrumentals feature guitar, banjo, ukelele, piano, trombone and handsaw.

REV. AND MRS. WARREN ROGERS

The last film of the cult series titled, "The Fakers," will be shown Wednesday at 7 p.m.. This film shows how we, as Christians, should respond to claims of psychic or supernatural powers, according to the release.

Hillcrest sponsors Fall Roundup

Youth Department at Hillcrest Baptist Church, will sponsor its annual Youth Fall Roundup Saturday from 4 to 8 p.m.

This event will be a family affair with emphasis on having a good time.

Activities include a sand dig, sucker board for the little ones, a ring toss, putt-putt golf, darts and balloons, tic-tac-toe board, a spin wheel, fishing hole, duck pond, dunking booth, pony rides, a jail, sweet shop, snack bar, hair and face painting, puppet show, cake walk, and a toy walk.

An auction will begin at 8 p.m., and a drawing for a Sherry Moates original painting will be conducted.

Bring the entire family for an evening of fun and fellowship. Proceeds will go to help sponsor fall and winter activities. For more information, please call Gary Phillips at 267-1639 or Paula Baker at 267-8449.

Mays presents plaque to church

The congregation of St. Thomas Church, 605 N. Main St., was presented a Howard County Historical Commission plaque by Polly Mays, commission chairman, Tuesday night as parishoners celebrated 100 years in Big Spring.

Bishop Pfeifer, San Angelo blessed plaque during the ceremony.

The plaque will be placed in the vestibule at the church.

After several months of research, Mays sent the information to the Texas Historical Commission in Austin.

The Commission members will review the information and then decide if the church qualifies to be a historical landmark, said Mays.

Lonnie Gary, architect, Lubbock, formerly of Big Spring designed the plaque, said Mays.

Mays also presented a plaque to the Tubbs Pocket Park and will present other plaques to downtown areas that quality for historical landmarks.

POLLY MAYS

Church hosts annual Day Musical

The public is invited to hear a festival of gospel music Sunday at Mt. Bethel Baptist Church, 630 Sgt. Paradez St., formerly N.W. Fourth Street.

The church sanctuary choir will sing at its annual Day Musical at 3 p.m.

Ladies Day scheduled at church

Saturday is Ladies Day at Coahoma Church of Christ, Second and Central Streets, featuring the program "Bloom Where You're Planted."

Activities include two speakers from Midland, singing, and a salad luncheon.

Babysitter will be provided.

All area women are invited to attend.

Bible says God created man and woman

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: We've just started the school year, and my high school teacher scoffs at the idea man was created by God. He says the only conclusion you can reach scientifically is that man is an accident that evolved from lower life forms (such as some type of ape). I've tried arguing with him, but it doesn't seem to get me anywhere, and I'm getting confused. — J.P.

DEAR J.P.: You need to know that there are many outstanding scientists today who are also sincere and committed believers in God. They are thoroughly familiar with the "evidence" that's presented claiming that the human race only owes its origin to natural processes and was therefore not created by God. And yet these scientists fully accept what the Bible says about God's creation of man: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. ... So God created man in his own image, in the image of God he created him; male and female he created them" (Genesis 1:1-27).

Don't get confused, therefore, by those who claim that the scientific evidence "proves" man is just an accident on this earth. The Bible teaches otherwise, and (as these believing scientists have discovered) there are very good reasons to accept its account. While the Bible does not go into detail about the methods God might have used to create man, it underlines the fact that God created us. No, you may not persuade your teacher (and I wouldn't recommend you spend your time arguing with him). The important thing is to be assured in your own heart that God is in control. Your Christian bookstore can suggest some books that deal with science and the Bible.

But God did not just create the human race — He created you also. Have you ever given your life to Him, by committing yourself to Jesus Christ? God loves you, and has a purpose for your life. Make it your goal to follow Christ.

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Why do you think mothers have such a hard time getting along with their daughters? Or at least it seems that way. My daughter (who's in her early twenties) and I seem to fight all the time — often over minor things, and I have lots of friends who face the same problem. I know it shouldn't be this way, but is this kind of conflict inevitable? — Mrs. A.T.

DEAR MRS. A.T.: I'm sure you could talk to many fathers who'd ask the same question about the tensions they experience with their sons; mothers and daughters don't have a monopoly on conflict!

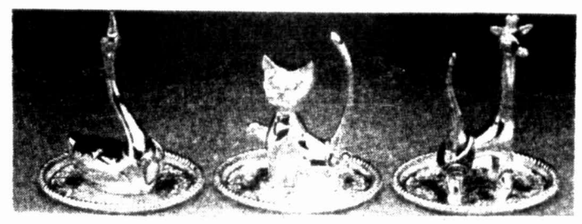

Parents sometimes forget their own experiences during their years of growing up — and yet I suspect you had your share of disagreements with your own parents. As children grow older they begin to seek their own identity and want more independence, and that's not wrong in itself; in fact, it's a necessary step in becoming a responsible and mature adult. But two problems frequently appear.

First, parents are often unwilling to grant their children enough freedom to grow, demanding that they continue to do things exactly as they're told instead of allowing young people to make some decisions on their own — and learn from their mistakes. Secondly, a young person may not realize how dangerous independence can be, demanding freedom to do things the parents know will only bring harm. Parents, therefore, need great wisdom in knowing when to give a certain amount of new freedom to their children, and when to deny their requests because of possible harm.

Let your daughter know that you love her deeply and want her to learn to make the right decisions. But above all, let her know God loves her and that your greatest desire is for her to come to know Christ and follow His will.

Princess says she doesn't need media

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana has snubbed newspaper photographers, saying she doesn't need them.

She said Tuesday she saw no reason to cooperate with the news media, which is speculating that her marriage to Prince Charles is in trouble.

"I don't see why I should help the press out," the princess said. "They don't do anything for me."

The tabloid press has been suggesting for months that Diana, 26, and Charles, 38, are having marital problems. Buckingham Palace refused to comment on the latest rumors published last weekend.

The couple, who were married in 1981 and have two young sons, have not been seen together in public for a month.

Diana made the remark during a visit to a children's day-care center in Hillingdon, near London, then turned away to talk with a group of youngsters.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fawn Hall, the former secretary to Lt. Col. Oliver North who faced congressional investigators, faced up to a transit authority officer who told her to stop eating a banana.

Miss Hall was issued a ticket Tuesday when she refused to stop eating the banana after being requested to do so by a transit officer, said authority spokesman Al Long.

Miss Hall says the authorities will have to prove their case in court.

"It is insane. It's crazy," she said. "I didn't refuse to stop eating."

Ms. Hall said she was standing by a trash can and was holding a newspaper and the banana in one hand and breaking off pieces to eat with the other hand.

PRINCESS DIANA

FAWN HALL

"I had broken off a piece of about two inches," she said. "I had bitten into it when he called, 'Miss. Do you realize it unlawful to eat in Metro station?'"

The banana immediately went into the trash, she said, but she finished eating the small bite already to her lips. That was enough to get the ticket.

She said the officer also embarassed her by taking her driver's license, walking to the middle of the Metro Central station and announcing that it was unlawful to eat in the transit cars or stations.

"He knew who I was," said Ms. Hall in a telephone interview. "He caused a scene by going to the middle of the station."

The police, she said, have not heard the last of the banana caper. "I think I'm going to fight it," she said. "I was given a hard time."

It is illegal to eat in rail stations or on vehicles operated by the authority. The violation carries a $10 fine, which can be paid within 15 days, Long said. The maximum penalty for eating in rail stations is $300 or 10 days in jail.

North, the former White House aide who was an architect of the plan to buy weapons for the Nicaraguan Contras with proceeds from arms sales to Iran, testified during lengthy congressional hearings into the affair. Ms. Hall also testified.

NEW YORK (AP) — Luciano Pavarotti, meeting reporters on Carnegie Hall's stage to talk about his first recital there in 12 years, proudly replied to the first question: "How much and how did you do it?"

"Eighty-five pounds," the tenor replied Tuesday. "And it was not so hard as you think. I almost enjoy. I had kind of a love affair with the scale."

Asked what compelled him to lose weight, Pavarotti replied, while flapping his arms, "I can move better. I was no more able to play tennis. I was no more able to go on the horse. The horse was complaining drastically."

Pavarotti said his recital Nov. 1 will be recorded by London Records and is a benefit for Carnegie Hall, with $1,000 tickets including a dinner afterward.

On Nov. 8, he'll sing for a Music for Life concert to raise money for Gay Men's Health Crisis, which gives care to AIDS patients.

LONDON (AP) — Charlton Heston received mixed reviews in his role as the 16th-century saint Sir Thomas More in "A Man For All Seasons."

"He brings a simple dignity ... even if this Sir Thomas is more like Sir Jason Colby," Maureen Paton wrote in The Daily Express of the 63-year-old actor, the star of the recently cancelled TV series "The Colbys."

Michael Coveney in The Financial Times devoted an entire paragraph to Heston's hair, calling it "the only moving quality in the performance."

The Times of London's Irving Wardle was kindest to the actor following Monday's stage opening.

Man shouldn't be compared to animals

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to get this off my chest. It's about time humans stopped referring to acts that people perpetrate as people "acting like animals."

I refer generally to those who describe murders, riots, panics and other catastrophes in which people lose control and are said to be "acting like animals."

I refer specifically to comments regarding a recent ship hijacking when it was said that the terrorists acted like "cowardly animals."

These terrorists and guerrilla acts are not animal in nature. They are human in nature. As one who sees the balance, beauty and meaning of the world in which animals must face life-or-death situations every day just to survive and perpetuate the species, I grossly resent and take offense at these statements.

When was the last time we saw a gorilla hijack a plane? When was the last time we saw a pod of whales hijack an ocean liner? When was the last time we saw a group of animals walk down the street and terrorize the neighborhood? People, in fact, are the terrorists and guerrillas when they go into the animals' ement to slaughter them for fur coats, hunting trophies, plumage and all the other atrocious reasons society gives for the gross neglect of respect for life and murder of our fellow creatures inhabiting this world.

If the day ever comes when man comes off his ego trip, maybe he will see just how insignificant he is to the total scheme of things on this tremendous planet in which all creatures share. Maybe then, finally, the saying will be turned around to, "They behaved like people."

DEAR ABBY: I am 35 and in love with a man who is 17 years older than I am. (I'll call him Dale.) We have been living together for four years and have a beautiful son who is 7 years old. Dale and I are considering marriage. The problem is that his children (all adults) can't seem to accept me. They are constantly inviting him over for dinner parties (with their mom there), but I am not invited.

Dale feels that he has to accept every invitation because they are his children. I feel that he is wrong. Abby, I would not accept any invitation if Dale wasn't invited.

I am upset about this and need your advice. I can't go on living like this. Is Dale right to accept invitations from his children without including me? Sign me...

DEAR OUTSIDER: You have chosen an appropriate signature as Dale and his family are concerned. The fact that Dale is permitting his children to snub you should tell you something. They are No. 1 in his life, and probably always will be.

DEAR ABBY: I was amazed to learn that you had a collection of snappy comebacks for the question: "How come you never married?"

Please add my favorite from a dear old Quaker lady to her inquisitive neighbor, George.

Club discusses Constitution

Modern Woman's Forum met at the home of Ruth Sweatt, with Irene Smith, president, presiding.

Marie Affleck presented a program on "The Making of the United States Constitution."

She said that many people contend that 1987 is really the bicentennial of our nation.

Despite the strike for freedom of 1776 with the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and the end of the war in 1781, when the 13 states ratified the Articles of Confederation. These were nothing more than a treaty of amity and alliance between independent and soverign states.

Pecos (1-5-1, 1-3-1) at Big Spring (3-3, 2-2)

The million dollar questions are — Will the Steers be able to hang onto the football? Will the Eagles be able to put the ball into the end zone once they're inside the Big Spring 30-yard line?

Both teams need this win badly. A Steers win would keep faint hopes for state playoffs alive; for the Eagles, a victory offers a chance to salvage something from an otherwise very dismal season.

The Steers' defense didn't play very well against Fort Stockton last week, though it did spend most of its time on the field. This week the "D" will bounce back with a fine game. Robert Perez and Co. will contain slippery quarterback Bobby Smith.

Yes, the Steers' offense will fumble a few times, but not nearly as much as in the past. Steven Gill will win in his starting debut as quarterback.

It won't be the most impressive win in the world, but it's a win.

BIG SPRING 20, PECOS 7

Forsan (5-2, 1-1) at Stanton (3-4, 1-1)

In this Buffalo battle, Stanton should have running back Robert Jones healthy again. They will need him against Forsan defenders who won't be in a very good mood.

Still smoldering from last week's whipping from Reagan County, coach Jan East's Forsan crew will take no prisoners.

FORSAN 28, STANTON 6

Clyde (3-4, 1-3) at Colorado City (5-2, 3-1)

The Colorado City Wolves have been the surprise team in District 5-3A. The Red and Black is currently locked in a three-way tie with Merkel and Ballinger.

The Wolves are thinking playoffs and they know the only way to ensure a berth is by winning their remaining three games. It's C-City's last home game of the season and they face a Clyde team which is much better than its record indicates.

The Wolves will struggle, but Beau Rees and Pat Tillis will run their team to victory.

COLORADO CITY 14, CLYDE 8

Water Valley (2-4, 0-4) at Garden City (2-5, 1-4)

The "Tough Luck Award" this season has to go to the Garden City Bearkats. With a few breaks they could easily be 5-2 or 4-3 and battling for a playoff spot.

The Bearkats' defense has played well this season, but their offense has been up-and-down. Last week G-City put its offense together, balancing air and ground attacks out for almost 350 total yards. Their performace will continue this week.

GARDEN CITY 21, WATER VALLEY 12

Wellman (5-2, 2-1) at Grady (2-5, 1-2)

In this Wildcat battle, Wellman has the upper hand in talent and experience. But Grady is at home which could mean a close contest.

Wellman is fighting for a playoff spot and coming off a heart-stopping 26-24 win over Loop. Grady lost its heartbreaker last week, bowing 40-36 to Borden County.

Grady will come to play this week. Wellman will be a little flat after last week's tough game.

Wellman by a nose.

WELLMAN 44, GRADY 36

Klondike (3-4, 1-2) at Loop (4-2-1, 3-1)

The Klondike Cougars are another team whose record doesn't indicate how good they are. Loop is battling for a playoff spot.

Both teams are coming off losses in key zone games last week. Loop barely lost to Wellman while Sands overwhelmed Klondike.

The Cougars have something to prove this week. Prove it they will, in front of the Loop home crowd.

Cards deck Twins 4-2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Time is no longer running out on the St. Louis Cardinals because they are running on the Minnesota Twins.

And with the help of a lucky bounce, the Cardinals bounced back. Now the teams return to Minnesota with St. Louis needing just one more victory to win the World Series.

Trailing 2-0 after the first two games in Minnesota, the Cardinals swept three at home from the worst road team ever to win a pennant in either league.

They completed the sweep with a 4-2 victory in Game 5 Thursday night behind the pitching of Danny Cox and with the help of five stolen bases, the most in a World Series game in 80 years. Vince Coleman got a bad-hop, bunt single to ignite a three-run sixth inning against Bert Blyleven, and Curt Ford drove in two runs with a single.

The Twins outscored St. Louis 18-5 with 21 hits, including four homers, in the first two games at the dome, where they had baseball's best home record of 56-25. But Minnesota's 29-52 road record was evident at Busch Stadium.

In three games of playing without the designated hitter in the National League park, the Twins scored just four runs on 18 hits and one homer. Obviously, the Twins are happy to be headed north.

Coleman had a hit — a bunt that skidded off the seam between the artificial turf and the dirt in front of first base — and a walk. He stole two bases and scored both times. Ozzie Smith also had two stolen bases, one of them leading to a run on the back end of a double steal with Coleman, and pinch runner Lance Johnson stole a base.

The five steals were the most in a game by any World Series team since the Chicago Cubs stole that many against the Detroit Tigers on Oct. 9, 1907.

Cox, the loser against Blyleven in Game 2, pitched 7 1-3 innings. He had the Twins shut out on three hits until the eighth, when Minnesota scored both of its runs on Gary Gaetti's triple to center field. It was a ball that would have been out of the Metrodome.

The outing renewed Cox's reputation as St. Louis' big-game pitcher. Cox pitched the Cardinals' division clincher against Montreal on Oct. 1, and he won Game 7 of the National League playoffs against San Francisco, 6-0, with an eight-hitter.

The Cardinals will send left-hander John Tudor against rookie Les Straker in a rematch of Game 3 when the Series resumes Saturday. Tudor allowed just one run on four hits through seven innings to beat Straker 3-1 Tuesday night.

The Cardinals had blown big scoring opportunities in the third and fifth innings — the victim both times being Jose Oquendo — before finally coming through in the sixth.

In the third inning, the Cardinals had runners at second and third with one out when Oquendo was thrown out at home trying to score on a grounder to shortstop Greg Gagne. In the fifth, St. Louis had runners at first and third with one out. Cox missed a third-strike squeeze bunt after Twins Manager Tom Kelly called for a pitchout, and Oquendo was caught off third base for an inning-ending double play.

Coleman led off the sixth with a bunt that took two big hops before hitting the edge of the seam in front of dirt at first base. Twins first baseman Kent Hrbek lunged for the ball but couldn't come up with it cleanly. His relay to Blyleven, covering first, was late.

Had he fielded the ball cleanly, Hrbek probably could have beat Coleman to the bag. Instead, Coleman got the Cards going, and the Twins were literally coming apart at the seams.

Smith followed with another bunt, this one toward third base. Blyleven tried to barehand the ball but dropped it, and Smith was on with a single as Coleman went to second. Tommy Herr failed on two bunt attempts before flying out to

Second time around different for Cox

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals played the first two games of the World Series in the Metrodome like they were in a chamber of horrors. This weekend, it could be a funhouse.

In Game 2 at Minneapolis, Danny Cox lasted only 3 2-3 innings, allowing six hits and seven runs. But he came back to win Game 5 at Busch Stadium on Thursday night as St. Louis beat Minnesota 4-2 to take a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Series.

Cox allowed two runs and five hits in 7 1-3 innings, using a hard curveball to stop the Twins' right-handed power.

The Twins won the first two games at home 10-1 and 8-4, scoring a total of 13 runs in the fourth inning.

But the Cardinals ran circles around the Twins at Busch Stadium and Minnesota had trouble reaching the warning track.

"I'm sure they wanted to come here and take at least one and maybe two to wrap it up," Cox said. "I'm looking forward to going up there again because I think it will be a different story. I think we would be down if we lost a game here because we would have to go up there and sweep and I don't think a lot of teams have done that."

Not too many teams have beaten John Tudor this year either, and that's what the Twins will have to do if there's going to be a seventh game.

"I feel better now than if we were down three-two," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said. "It's a tough place to play up there. We're gonna have to pitch well and try and keep the ball in the park."

Herzog also needed Cox to pitch well in Game 5, because Bert Blyleven shut down the Cardinals for five innings.

Danny Cox, starting pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals throws during first innng action Thursday night in game five of the World Series.

Vince Coleman started a three-run sixth with a grounder that hit a seam in the turf and got away from first baseman Kent Hrbek. Blyleven then unraveled and allowed a two-run single to Curt Ford and another run scored on shortstop Greg Gagne's error.

Cox made it stand up.

"In Game 2, I didn't have command of my pitches and my location was pretty bad," Cox said. "They were swinging a hot stick. Tonight, I think I had better location and I was putting the ball where I wanted to. You have to give credit to their team, they go up there and swing the stick in the Metrodome."

If the Twins force a seventh game, Cox may come back on two days rest.

"I've never pitched in a game with two days rest," he said. "That's up to Whitey. If he says in Game 7 'Danny, the ball's yours,' I'll go out and do my best. But right now we're looking at Game 6. John (Tudor) is going out there for us and we're all going to be behind him."

Cox has already won two clinchers for the Cardinals this season.

He beat Montreal on Oct. 1 to clinch the National League East title and pitched an eight-hit shutout in Game 7 of the playoffs to beat San Francisco, 6-0.

Cox may have to do it one more time.

"My stomach is in knots when I go out there," Cox said. "It's a situation that I've been very fortunate to be able to participate. I just happen to fall on the days when we happen to have the big games."

Cowboys get break — Pozderac retires

IRVING (AP) — Citing disillusionment with professional football during the strike, the NFL's tallest player has retired.

Phil Pozderac, 6-9 and 282 pounds, said Thursday he was retiring to pursue business opportunities. "I just decided it was time to go into private business," he said.

Pozderac fell into disfavor with Cowboys fans last season because of the frequent announcement from game officials: "Holding, Offense, No. 75."

"Poz was probably the best-known offensive lineman in the country for all the wrong reasons," Cowboys offensive line coach Jim Erkenbeck said. "I admired him for not giving up when everybody and his brother were taking shots at him."

Head coach Tom Landry said Kevin Gogan, a rookie from the University of Washington, will take Pozderac's spot in the starting lineup.

Pozderac, 27, was in his sixth season in the league. The Cowboys drafted him in the fifth round of the 1982 draft after Pozderac was named the most valuable player of the 1981 Notre Dame season. He was a high school basketball and football star at Garfield Heights, Ohio.

PHIL POZDERAC
...no more holding calls

Pozderac started 10 games in 1986 and was awarded the game ball after the Cowboys' 31-28 upset over the New York Giants in the nationally televised Monday night season opener.

But he was plagued by holding calls the second half of the season and was the goat in the second meeting of the Cowboys and Giants.

In a game that was won by the Giants, 17-14, Pozderac was called for holding twice in the waning moments, including once on a Tony Dorsett to the 10 that would have set up at least a probable tying field goal.

The Cowboys, who had a 6-2 record going into the game, were to win only one more game the rest of the season and missed the playoffs.

Pozderac was an on-and-off starter the rest of the season, with coaches leaving him on the bench on occasions to spare him from the crowd's wrath. He continued to be the target of officials' flags until season's end.

"I think he really overcame that from last year," Landry said. "He worked very hard in training camp, made the starting lineup and played well the first two games.

"That's why it's really tough on us right now to lose him. He was a proven player we could count on."

Landry said Pozderac came into his office Thursday morning to tell him of his decision.

"He just said he felt it was time to retire from pro football. He had some business opportunities. And that was about it. ... Sure, I was surprised. You always are, anytime a guy has paid the price he's paid since last spring, and then to quit in the middle of the season.

Erkenbeck said he was "the most surprised guy on the lot" about Pozderac's decision.

"Poz had corrected his holding problems and was making great progress. He performed very well for us in the Giants game, (which the Cowboys won 16-14 in the last game before the strike). In fact, it was the best game he ever played," Erkenbeck said.

Goliad gridders stay perfect

GOLIAD — In junior high football Thursday, Goliad's A-team defeated Snyder 14-6. The Mavericks' B-team also won over Snyder, 16-0.

For the A-team, Rodney Price scored on a six-yard run and Alonzo Lucas snagged a 50-yard pass for the second touchdown. A point after try failed following the score, prompting a two-point pass to Alonzo Lucas after the second touchdown. The successful attempt topped off Goliad's scoring.

The 7-0 squad had fine performances from Steven Robles, James Statham, Danny Joslyn, T.L. Rodgers, Richard Hain, Salvador Trevino, Klay Klatt and Pat Martinez.

The Goliad B-squad skunked Snyder 16-0 in Thursday's game.

Tim Pearson scored on a 40-yard pass and Robert Olivio ran 25 yards for another Mavericks TD.

Cody Simmons snagged an interception. Robert Lopez, Mickey Garcia, Oscar Valencia, Dennis Poulette, Jeremy Peakock and Kyle Plumlee also turned in good performances as the Goliad squad lengthened its winning streak to seven games.

Both Goliad teams are undefeated.

Frosh Steers lose second straight

PECOS — The Big Spring freshmen Steer gridders dropped their second consecutive game of the season, losing to Pecos 31-30 in Thursday night action.

The Steers jumped out tpo a 22-9 halftime lead, but Pecos rallied for the win. Big Spring suffered four fumbles in the game, one at the Pecos one-foot line.

Running back Neal Mayfield led ig Spring with 235 yards in 14 carries. He scored on runs of 51 and 25 yards. Jermaine Miller added 85 yards in nine carries. Miller scored on a three-yard dive.

The other Big Spring score was a four-yard run by Phillip Saize.

Freshman coach Tom Posey credited linebacker Mike West and tackle Romon Ortega with playing good defensive games.

After last week's 66-28 loss to Fort Stockton, Big Spring falls to 5-2.

In other action Thursday night, the junior varsity Steers dropped a 36-6 decision to Midland High.

Coahoma (2-5, 0-4) at

Brady (4-3, 1-3)

The Coahoma Bulldogs are in the wrong place at the right time. After the way they played last week, the Bulldogs could have beaten a slumping Brady squad two weeks ago.

But last week Brady got back to its early season form, snapping a three-game losing streak by soundly whipping Clyde 33-0. This week Brady will continue to play well, but so will Coahoma.

Brady will get the best of it in this battle of the Bulldogs.

BRADY 21, COAHOMA 14

Midland Christian (7-0) at

Sands (6-1, 4-0)

Although this is a non-district tilt, it's definitely the Game of the Week in the Crossroads area.

The Sands Mustangs will put their six-game winning streak on the line against a salty Midland Christian squad.

This game will pit two of the state's best six-man running backs against each other, Jay Fryar of Sands and Tony Corona of Midland Christian. Both are college football prospects.

Sands has the home field advantage and Fryar can throw the ball. In a barn-burner, the Mustangs by a nail.

SANDS 42, MIDLAND CHRISTIAN 40

Borden County (2-5, 1-3) at

Dawson (1-5, 0-3)

Last week the Borden County Coyotes proved thay could win without all-purpose running back Shannon Bond. This week their confidence will carry over against the Dawson Dragons.

Will Phinzy and the defense will play tough, and Chris Kilmer, Patrick Herridge and Brian Bond will carry the offensive load.

The Coyotes will win their second straight.

Soviets, Romanians leading gymnastic championships

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Co-world champions Elena Shoushounova and Oksana Omeliantchik spearhead the Soviet Union and European champion Daniela Silivas leads the Romanians in the team event at the World Gymnastics Championships.

The deciding optional events today were expected to be much closer than the men's, where the Soviet Union dominated from start to finish and occupied the top four individual places to win the first gold medals at the week-long championships.

Dmitri Bilozerchev led the way with 118.450 points out of 120 and finished .400 ahead of the injured Valeri Liukine.

The women's event after Wednesday's compulsory exercises had the Soviets in the lead with 197.500 points out of 200, barely ahead of the Romanians by .125 points. East Germany is far off the pace with 194.500 points in third place.

But just as the countries, their top stars are locked closely together. Silivas, 17, delighted the crowd at the 6,000-seat Ahoy sports center with the first perfect exercises during the week. Her performance on the balance beam and the floor both got a perfect 10s and set her on her way to a score of 39.950 out of 40.

But 1985 co-champion Shoushounova was not to be outdone. She hit back with 10s on the floor and vault.

But an uncharacteristically modest performance on the balance beam kept her in second place alongside Omeliantchik, who was more thorough than spectacular.

The first eight places are taken by four Soviets and four Romanians, illustrating their domination of women's gymnastics.

The first 12 of 31 nations qualify for the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea, and the U.S. team, currently lying sixth, is in a good position to clinch a place, despite a dismal performance by Kristie Phillips.

She had major mistakes on vault, beam and uneven bars and is currently 86th, well out of contention for any individual top performance. Her role was taken over by Melissa Marlowe, currently in 20th place with 38.650 points.

One U.S. gymnast who is also out of the running is Olympic gold medalist Tim Daggett, who broke his left leg Thursday.

The 25-year-old veteran snapped both bones in his lower leg while attempting one of his favorite vaults. The accident cast serious doubts whether he will be able to continue his international career.

Another gymnast who might see his chances obliterated because of an injury is Liukine. He reinjured his right foot on the vault and had to be carried off by coach Leonid Arkaev after a hard dismount.

It might leave open the way for defending champion Yuri Korolev to clinch a spot in the individual finals.

Darkness halts golf play

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Mike Reid is not overly concerned with his unusual position on the PGA Tour: He's collected more than $1 million in career earnings without winning a tournament.

"It seems like that's all anybody wants to ask me about," Reid said Thursday after an 8-under-par 64 had provided him with the lead in the uncompleted first round of the $600,000 Tucson Open Golf Tournament.

Ten players were stranded by darkness on the new TPC course at Star Pass and were unable to complete their rounds. They were scheduled to return at daylight today to finish first-round play.

Reid held a two-shot lead over Dan Forsman, Blaine McCallister and John McComish, all tied at 66.

Fuzzy Zoeller holed out from the fairway for an eagle-2 on his final hole and led the group at 67 that also included Masters champion Larry Mize, Calvin Peete, George Burns, Mark Calcavecchia and David Hobby.

shallow left, and the runners had to hold their ground — but not for long.

With the count 1-0 on Dan Driessen, Coleman said he stole a signal from Twins catcher Tim Laudner. He knew a curveball was coming, and he took off for third. He made it easily, and Smith cruised into second to complete the double steal.

Dreissen was walked intentionally to load the bases, and Blyleven looked like he might be out of it when he got Willie McGee looking at a called third strike.

Ford then lined a single up the middle, scoring Coleman and Smith as Driessen went to third. Ford continued to second on the play when center fielder Kirby Puckett's throw went through to third base, too late to get Driessen. The third run of the inning scored when shortstop Greg Gagne dropped Oquendo's bouncer.

That inning marked the end for Blyleven, who gave up three runs, two earned, on seven hits. In Game 2, Blyleven went seven innings and gave up two runs on six hits, but the Twins scored eight runs for him that time.

In this game, the Twins were unable to produce offensively, and it extended a longstanding franchise tradition. It was the 11th road loss in a row in the World Series, going back 62 years. The last time this franchise, then known as the Washington Senators, won a World Series game on the road was when Walter Johnson beat Pittsburgh 4-1 in 1925.

Coleman walked with one out in the seventh against Keith Atherton. Atherton balked Coleman to second when he failed to stop in his delivery. Coleman stole third and scored when Smith's hard-hit grounder tipped off the glove of second baseman Steve Lombardozzi, who was playing in.

Dan Gladden singled to lead off the Minnesota eighth, and Gagne bunted for a hit. One out later, lefthander Ken Dayley came in to face the left-handed hitting Hrbek, who flied out. Todd Worrell replaced Dayley, and Gaetti hit a line drive to the wall in center field, 414 feet from homeplate. McGee beat the ball to the wall, but it fell out of his glove as two runs scored. Gaetti wound up with a triple, but he stayed at third when Tom Brunansky flied out.

"I don't know if I lost it against the wall or what," McGee said. "It was one of those days.

"But now we've got one more game to win. It'll be tough, but if we keep playing the way we've been playing, we've got a great chance to win."

Texas hoop power being investigated

FORT WORTH (AP) — Bewildered, betrayed, angry, frustrated and confused.

Fort Worth Dunbar students expressed all of the above after revelations about the Wildcats' basketball program being investigated.

The District 6-5A executive committee, made up of principals of the various schools, voted to hand the case on to the University Interscholastic League, which governs extracurricular activities statewide.

The league's executive commitrtee will look into the case in the next 30 days, UIL athletic director Bill Farney said.

Dunbar is rated No. 1 in Texas in a preseason coaches poll and No. 11 nationally by a national sports magazine. Penalties assessed against Dunbar could range from a private reprimand to banning a school from district championship and post-season competition. The committee also could terminate a school's program.

According to two sources in the administration, head coach and athletic coordinator Lewis Hayes turned in the basketball program to the executive committee, alleging a violation involving a practice run too early under Texas high school rules.

The sources said Hayes alleged that Dunbar basketball coach Robert Hughes supervised an early morning practice by the Wildcats on Oct. 15. If true, that would be a violation of UIL rules, as the next Monday was the first day that high school basketball teams officially could start practicing.

Hayes has declined comment, as did other athletic staff members.

News of the investigation was rampant throughout the community, senior basketball player Truce Williams said.

"I think it all goes back to when Coach Hayes first came here. I think the reason he did it is because he has been trying to get some of the basketball players to try out for football and they wouldn't do it. So that was one of the ways he could get back at them. But I don't understand how he could do that to his own school," Williams said.

"Everybody at school has been upset about what Coach Hayes did. I don't understand how he would turn against us. He should have been the last somebody to do something like that. It's not just about the basketball program, it is all about a big power play between Hayes and Coach Hughes."

Hayes, 40, is in his first season at Dunbar after serving as an assistant coach at Terrell and had a 1-5 record through the first six games. Hughes, 59, has taken his basketball teams to district championships in 11 of the past 12 seasons, and he has compiled a 799-132 record — 97 victories short of the stare record for career victories held by Charles Womack of Hawley.

Hughes has denied violating UIL rules.

"I don't have to hold illegal workouts," he said. "The gym is always open and available. They come here because they consider it safe. There are no guns, knives, alcohol or drugs. The people who come in here range from 14 to 40 years old. We've even had girls here."

Senior basketball player Shon Lewis said, "I have been hearing about it for the last couple of days. I don't like it, and I think Coach Hayes should leave well enough alone. What goes on in the gym is Coach Hughes' business. This has a lot of people upset and wondering about a guy who would turn against his own people."

After the district executive meeting, Ronny White, the athletic director for Fort Worth public schools, told Dunbar boosters that nobody is out to get Dunbar.

"If they haven't done anything wrong, there's no problem. But if they've done something wrong, there are going to be serious problems."

Hughes said the decision by district principals to forward the complaint to the state doesn't worry him.

Defending SB champs facing rocky pathway

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It was one, two, three strike games and you're out for the old Super Bowl champs.

At least if history has anything to say about it.

Next to Gene Upshaw and the NFL Players Association, the New York Giants were probably the biggest losers in the 24-day strike. They walked out 0-2 and came back 0-5.

Where does that leave the Giants' chances of defending their Super Bowl title?

No team has ever come back from an 0-5 start to make the playoffs, let alone win the title.

"We're not in a big hole," said linebacker Harry Carson. "We're in a big canyon. You're either going to see a very good team go down the drain or you are going to see one of the greatest comebacks of all time."

If Giants Coach Bill Parcells has his way, the drain won't be an option.

"Somebody has to get a hold of this thing and get it going, and I'm going to be that guy," said a suddenly no-nonsense Parcells. "When you're 0-5 and looking down this type of barrel, things don't stay the same. The pressure is on."

"No funny stuff," said center Bart Oates. "Just winning."

Winning is something this Giants team has proven it can do. They won 17 of 19 games last year, including their final 12, capping it with a 39-20 Super Bowl victory over the Denver Broncos.

The same team did not show up for the two pre-strike games this year, losing to Chicago and then handing a game to Dallas.

"The group of guys we have around here are not quitters," said wide receiver Phil McConkey. "I said it last year, these are character people. Being 0-5 is like being 5-0. You're still getting ready for that next game."

That one-at-a-time philosophy has been the Giants' trademark since Parcells took over as coach, and it seems to be the players are keeping to it again.

One thing that can be said for the post-strike Giants is that they appear unified. Only linebacker Lawrence Taylor, rookie safety Adrian White and quarterbacks Jeff Rutledge and Jeff Hostetler crossed the picket line during the walkout, and they did it only for the final replacement game.

No player has criticized the union since returning, and none seems annoyed that the Giants fielded a mediocre replacement team that was competitive for only one of its three games, a 6-3 loss to Buffalo last Sunday.

General Manager George Young admits the Giants replacements were weak.

"The issue was not win or lose, but whether we wanted a long strike or a short strike," he said. "We probably could have had a better team. We originally called 150 to 200 guys, but while many were called, few came in."

If there is anything in the Giants favor, it might be their schedule the remainder of the season. Seven of their remaining 10 games involve teams that did not make the playoffs in 1986, while the others are against New England, the New York Jets and Washington — a team they beat three times last year.

Orangemen having fun while going undefeated

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — It's easy to laugh and joke when your team is undefeated and nationally-ranked and Syracuse Coach Dick MacPherson is having a delightful time guiding the Orangemen to their best season since winning the national title 28 years ago.

If the 1987 season continues progressing as it has for the ninth-ranked Orangemen, college football fans will be seeing more and more of the jocular Syracuse coach — and getting a first-hand taste of his mirthful manner.

"I certainly don't have a gag writer, at least I've never been accused of having one," said MacPherson, who both bewilders and amuses his media questioners with peppery, occasionally off-beat, responses. "I guess they come off the top of my head. I'm not even sure I'm doing it."

"He does deliver some gems," observed Larry Kimball, the university's sports information director.

For instance, talking about how Colgate Coach Fred Dunlap has still managed to keep his team scoring points despite an inconsistent offense further unsettled by rotating quarterbacks: "Fred, now he's one of the great farmers of Chittenango County. He milks the offense for all its worth."

Always colorful, MacPherson has outdone even himself as the Orangemen revive memories of the Ernie Davis-led team that capped a perfect season with a 24-13 win over Texas in the 1960 Cotton Bowl.

"It's just like a date with Liz Taylor and Marilyn Monroe. How can you lose?" the coach said once when asked about having to find playing time for two quality tailbacks, junior Robert Drummond and sophomore Michael Owens.

"Will he go to the briar patch to pick it up or will he hear a cat sipping milk 100 yards away?" MacPherson said earlier this year during a discussion about the potential of redshirt freshman receiver Rob Moore.

For the uninitiated, MacPherson was wondering whether Moore would go after passes thrown over the middle into traffic or whether he would hear footsteps.

"I'm from Maine and you can't go to the well too often, and remember it's the middle of October," MacPherson replied last week before Syracuse's 48-21 thrashing of Penn State when asked whether the Orangemen would throw long against the Nittany Lions.

Incidentally, the Orangemen go long on Penn State with quarterback Don McPherson teaming with Moore on a touchdown pass play on the first play of the game.

Syracuse is unbeaten and appears headed toward its first major bowl since going to the Sugar Bowl in 1964; it ended a 16-year losing skid against the Penn State handing the Nittany Lions one of their worst defeats in years.

Additionally, the Orangemen have escaped serious injury and several players could attract post season honors, including quarterback Don McPherson, a long-shot Heisman Trophy possibility; noseguard Ted Gregory, a candidate for the Outland-Lombardi Trophy; and safety Markus Paul, a contender for the Jim Thorpe Award, which goes to the nation's top defensive back.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

From the Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This morning is an excellent time for dealing with repairs and other problems which can't be done during the week. Social affairs this evening can bring you many benefits if you are alert.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If a newcomer comes into your life, be prepared to listen to new ideas, but reject those which you don't feel are plausible or desirable.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) See some old friends today during your spare time, but don't neglect your urgent duties. Try to be more efficient in your routines.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be helpful and affectionate to your mate, and watch your budget carefully. Take it easy and get plenty of rest tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Handle all of your practical affairs during the day, but reserve the evening for your loved one. Be sure to drive carefully.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Handle civic matters this morning, and the evening will be fine for more intimate matters. Watch your financial situation carefully.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) See an important person who can give you the assistance you need — both monetary and moral — to get a new project in motion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try to be pleasing to your mate this morning. Contact an old friend you haven't seen for some time this evening. Drive carefully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A usually stubborn associate will see things your way for a change. Tonight is a perfect time for romance with your mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) This morning is a fine time for running errands and handling correspondence. Spend the evening socializing with friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can get much accomplished with an associate for the coming week. Plan a recreation for your close friends and yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Work on getting your home in order this morning. Tonight talk over future plans with your family and entertain some guests.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You can communicate well with others this morning and will have an easy time getting your desk cleared. Be cautious in making investments.

If Your Child Is Born Today

He or she will have a very practical nature, but will be inclined to deliberate entirely too long before reaching any decisions. Your progeny will not be very active physically as a child, but as an adult will be quite lively and will accomplish a great deal.
