(By The Associated Press)

LONDON, Jan. 27 (Wednesday)—The British submarine M-2 dived yesterday off Portland, failed to come up afterward and hours later was believed to have been located at the bottom of the English channel.

Salvage craft and divers were sent to the spot from nearby Portsmouth, chief English naval base. Fears were expressed for the safety of the crew, normally six officers and 48 men, although officials said the submarine could remain under water 48 hours.

Search Is Started

The M-2 dived at 10:30 a. m. yesterday five miles west of Portland in 18 fathoms of water. When she failed to return on schedule, four destroyers and two submarines went out to search for her. Two lighters joined the flotilla later to attempt to raise the submarine in event she was found on the bottom.

An object supposed to be the M-2 was located during the night in 17 fathoms of water on the sandy bottom of the channel three miles west of Portland bill, a rocky promontory off the Dorset coast.

Unable To Wait To Find What Future Holds, Young Collegian Tries Death

Alabama Student Is Near Death After Suicide Attempt

(By The Associated Press)

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Jan. 26.—After writing a friend he "could wait no longer to find out what the future holds," Charles E. Butts, 25, Gouverneur, N. Y., University of Alabama freshman, was found in his room early today critically wounded.

A pistol bullet entered his chest just above the heart and physicians said his recovery was doubtful.

Discussed Hereafter

"Dear old pal," the note began, "you know we have discussed the hereafter and many other things; also you know we have made a pact that the first to go would come back and talk to the other, if possible.

"Now I am going to hold you to this promise. I will be dead long before you see this letter. I am not crazy, as everyone will say, but I am discouraged as life does not hold very much for me since I came back Christmas.

Had Wonderful Life

"I didn't want to come back, but the folks wanted me to. I can't kick though, because I have had 23 years of wonderful living. I had been, as you know, very interested in the future and just what it holds for me. I will be branded as every other suicide—'crazy'—not so. I can wait no longer to find out.

"My examinations were hard and I have not done so well. Only thing that kept me in check was feeling for my folks. They have done everything for me. We will meet again in the fourth millennium."

Butts was enrolled in the school of engineering and fellow students said he had been in excellent humor recently.

"Brown Derby" Goes To Charity

It must have caused former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York quite a pang when he parted with the famous Brown Derby, the hat that is familiar in every State of the Union as Al's campaign standard. The former Governor is shown as he made the presentation of the historic chapeau, among other clothing, to Clarence H. Low, chairman of a New York relief committee, for distribution to the needy. Al urged that all who are able should help clothe those who are unable to help themselves.

Four Americans Are Indicted For Second Degree Murder In Honolulu; Reprimand Is Seen

Heavy Casualties Seen In Uprising

The Honduras dispatches said fighting was going on in the vicinity of San Salvador, the captol, and that the government had captured hundreds of prisoners. Direct communication with Salvador was interrupted for several hours.

Society Matron And Trio Of Navy Men To Face Trial For Slaying Hawaiian; Had Been Accused Of Attack

(By The Associated Press)

HONOLULU, Jan. 26. — Prodded into action by a judge's reference to anarchy, the Honolulu grand jury today indicted Mrs. Granville Fortescue, society matron, and three navy men for second degree murder in the lynching of Joseph Kahahawai, alleged woman attacker.

The inquisitorial body, which apparently had attempted last week to return a negative report in the case, submitted the indictment after Circuit Judge A. M. Cristy had raised a question of anarchy and told its individual members they should retire from the jury if they could not reconcile their convictions with the testimony and the law.

Lured From Building

Kahahawai was lured from the judiciary building January 8, abducted and slain. The lynching provided an amazing climax to a succession of crimes which had stirred the community.

Those indicted with Mrs. Fortescue are Lieutenant Thomas H. Massie, U. S. N., and E. J. Lord and Albert O. Jones, enlisted navy men. Kahahawai was one of the five men awaiting retrial on charges of attacking Mrs. Massie, wife of the lieutenant and daughter of Mrs. Fortescue.

Fortune Of $150,000,000 Is Built Up By Man Whose Interests In World Of Finance Were Many And Varied

(By The Associated Press)

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 26.—A failing heart aggravated by acute indigestion stopped its life work early today and drew into death the career of William Wrigley, jr., who sold the world on chewing gum and created out of his enterprise monuments in the worlds of sport and recreation.

Five physicians and six nurses, working in relays at the bedside of the 70-year old business and baseball magnate since his illness became critical January 18, were unable to arouse him from a last wave of unconsciousness. He died at 2:15 a. m.

Traced To Heart Attack

His personal physician, Dr. George Goodrich, traced the illness back to a heart attack suffered about a year ago, but his condition did not reach a serious stage until a week ago Monday, when he fell victim to a heart attack and stroke of apoplexy.

Although in moderately good health prior to the heart disturbance, Dr. Goodrich said Wrigley had not felt fit for about three weeks.

Three At Bedside

His widow, the former Ada Foote of New York, and his son and daughter, Phillip K. Wrigley, head of his father's chewing gum business, and Mrs. James R. Offield, were at the bedside but not until his death did it become known generally that he had been near the end for several days.

Private funeral services probably will be held Thursday or Friday, at Pasadena, Cal., where Wrigley built his first winter home on the famous orange grove drive, and interment will be in a mausoleum to be erected at the foot of his estate, Mount Ada, named for his widow, on Santa Catalina island.

TRIPOLI, Libya, Africa, Jan. 26. (AP)—Over the dead forms of 2,000 rebel tribesmen and after twenty years of incessant warfare, Italy's banners float triumphantly across that "spadeful of sand" in North Africa known as the colonies of Tripoli and Cirenaica.

Marshall Badoglio, military governor of Libya, formally reported to the government today that the provinces had been thoroughly pacified and occupied for the first time since Italian troops landed in 1912, when Turkey renounced her rights.

"This will point the departure for a more vigorous impulse toward civil progress in the two colonies," he wrote.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26. (AP)—A two-year-old baby was near death in Brooklyn tonight, the innocent victim of a pistol battle between police and gangsters.

Pyre Is Erected

Then, he and the third robber took W. W. Weaver's automobile Wednesday night, and early Friday made a gasoline-soaked pyre of it on a highway near here, according to the alleged statement.

SRINIGAR, India, Jan. 26. (AP)—The maharajah of Kashmir, once known as the mysterious "Mr. A." of blackmail fame, was again threatened tonight with the loss of his throne.

ANOTHER ATTACK

DALLAS, Jan. 26. (AP) — Another attack on the constitutionality of the state truck law was started through the federal courts today when Judge William H. Atwell granted a petition of the Bilbo Transportation company. Judge Atwell ordered state officers to show cause at a hearing tomorrow why a temporary restraining order should not be issued against them.

Murray Again Named Cotton Co-Op Leader

Former Lubbock Man Will Head Organization Another Year; Plans For 1932 Are Made At Directors' Meeting

(Special To The Avalanche)

DALLAS, Jan. 26. — R. J. (Bob) Murray, formerly of Lubbock, unanimously was re-elected general manager of the Texas Cotton Cooperative association for 1932 by the board of directors here today.

Mr. Murray became general manager following the annual meeting last spring. Murray's record was lauded by the directors. The cooperative, one of the largest business concerns in the state, this year is handling in excess of 500,000 bales, it was said.

Precedent Is Set

Other officers and directors of the organization will be elected at the next annual meeting to be held here in May. The general manager's election at this time sets a precedent, but directors declared that in view of the necessity of fully completing plans for next season's crop it was advisable to name Murray now.

Plans to handle a minimum of one million bales of cotton this season are being formed, the 20 directors, from as many sections of the state, reported.

The association authorized Murray to cast its vote for B. A. Stuffelbeme of Dallas, general manager of the Texas Certified Cotton Seed Breeders association, T. S. Henderson of Cameron and C. A. Barron of Lamesa as members of the cotton advisory board of the federal farm board at New Orleans in February.

The drive was launched last Wednesday to secure this year's quota of 250 members in the regional organization.

"You Want To Hang Me," Cries Defendant As She Launches A Word Attack Against Sheriff

Accused Woman Is Described As A Jealous Killer When Parade Of Witnesses Take Stand In Court

Insanity Is Told

"Mother Hallucinations" Are Claimed; Jealousies, Suspicions And Deceptions Are Described To Jury

(By The Associated Press)

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 26.—Winnie Ruth Judd, on trial for murder, was described today by witnesses as of dual personality — a mental incompetent, sufferer from hallucinations, incapable of realizing murder's gravity "if she did it," and as a jealous killer.

Her 66-year-old mother, eyes tear-dimmed, did all that she may, that her daughter might be sent to an asylum, as a lesser evil than the gallows, for the slaying of Agnes Anne LeRoi.

Ranks Are Split

The ranks of former acquaintances and associates of the accused were split in twain as the time arrived for defense counsel to prove Mrs. Judd "was so insane that she, if she did this act, could not have known the quality of it."

Some, co-workers at the clinic where Mrs. Judd and Mrs. LeRoi were employed, laid the foundation for the testimony of Mrs. H. J. McKinnell, the mother, that her daughter from childhood had displayed "mother hallucinations", although she never had a child, that a second cousin of the defendant died in an insane asylum at Peoria, Ill., and another's mentality "seemed to collapse." Two others, one a surprise state witness, testified Mrs. Judd talked of "boy friends," jealousies, suspicions and deceptions.

Sheriff Attacked

Mrs. Judd, under indictment also for slaying last October of Hedvig Samuelson, tubercular convalescent friend of herself and Mrs. LeRoi, strode imperiously from the courtroom during a recess, a matron in tow, to hurl bitter recriminations at Sheriff J. R. McFadden, her legal custodian.

"You want to hang me!" she cried, her voice rising, "you've been telling witnesses what they should say!"

Mrs. Judd, the mother said, as she sat calm an dry-eyed, had from the age of seven years displayed a moth-

Man Becomes Insane, Shoots Up Bank And Then Turns Pistol Upon Himself

(By The Associated Press)

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 26. — Becoming suddenly insane, a man described by acquaintances as usually "quiet, courteous and intelligent," shot up the Capital National bank this afternoon, wounding five persons, and as a crowd in the bank rushed for the exits, calmly reloaded his pistol, placed it in his mouth and ended his life.

The man, D. J. Mead, 52, bachelor and member of a one-time wealthy Lansing family, had been in the bank about 10 minutes before he took out a pistol and began firing. "This town has given me a dirty deal," he shouted. "Where's the 'big shot'?"

Of the injured, two are in serious condition. They are B. W. Nichols, a depositor, shot through the neck, and Albert Elsesser, executive vice president of the bank, shot through the right shoulder and right side.

The others injured were David Timmons, a bank guard, John Lillie and Miss Lucille Duncan, depositors. Timmons was hit in the hand and a bullet grazed his ribs. Lillie was shot in the neck, but his condition was reported as not critical.

Baker Opposes League Planks For Democrats

Former Secretary Of War Says United States Eventually Is To Participate But Opposes Partisan Issue

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 26. — Opposition to a League of Nations plank in the 1932 Democratic platform came from Newton D. Baker today in a statement which also voiced his belief in eventual participation in the league by the United States.

The declaration of Baker, secretary of war in the cabinet of Woodrow Wilson, staunch league advocate, and a presidential possibility himself, was the focal point in a day crowded with political developments.

Daniels For Roosevelt

While Mr. Baker was preparing his statement and sailing away with his wife for a brief vacation in Mexico City, friends of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, another limb on the presidential timber tree, were hearing with gratification of a statement by Josephus Daniels, who was Mr. Wilson's secretary of the navy.

Mr. Daniels told the Atlanta (Ga.) Journal that "the progressives throughout the country, regardless of political affiliation, will vote the Democratic ticket if the party nominates a man whose progressive tendencies are shown by his political record."

"Franklin Roosevelt," Mr. Daniels declared, "is such a man."

The Woman's Angle

BY BLANCHE E. BEAN
Avalanche Woman's Editor

JUST one good depression, it seems, is about all that is necessary to start everyone out digging for gold and entering into other romantic and allegedly lucrative pursuits. There is another one on over in New Mexico, we hear, where two men are searching for $7,000,000 in gold bars said to have been found last fall in a cache in the Caballo mountains near Hot Springs. The treasure is believed to be that buried in the mountains many years ago by Pedro Navarro, a reputed bandit king. Since then the search has been on and several lives have been lost by those who have entered in the search.

Of course, people don't have a lot of time in booming eras to get out and hunt for buried treasure. But when nothing is coming in anyway, the time might just as well be spent digging around for something that a bandit king or pirate left hidden a century or so ago. And it is a romantic pursuit.

Just as all these people are going to fall heir to a part of the Buchanan estate. The thing is elusive enough to be romantic and has the possibilities to keep one searching ever beyond the horizon.

WANT SOME MONEY?

OH WELL, things may be tight, but here's how you can make a lot of money without half trying. One trip through a newspaper and a magazine elicited all this information. Money making is an easy matter and here are the ways:

Sell 20 packets of garden seed, win a violin and take correspondence lessons that will make you a Kreisler or a Spaulding in no time at all. Sell this particular magazine and then stay home of evenings to count up your growing bank account. Sell tailored-to-measure suits and overcoats and, in addition to the money, there will be the suits to wear. Invest in a particular building and loan and retire on the interest. Take out insurance at 3 cents per day and then get sick or injured. Buy a typewriter and make money writing "in your spare time." Acquire a government position or a banjo and save on the money that is sure to be coming in. Color photographs at home. Get the right information before applying for that invention patent. Sell electrical clocks or double sight glasses. Conquer yourself and then hypnotize the boss into giving you a raise. Make 450 miles on a gallon of gasoline and pay off the mortgage with what you save. Use a new kind of complexion salve and acquire so much beauty and charm that you marry the boss instead of his under-secretary.

But, of course, if you don't want to get all this wealthy, you can struggle along with the present salary.

FOR SOME reason, a lot of people believe that antiquity makes anything right. If a law was made several years ago, they believe that all the troubles of the world will be settled if this particular law is enforced. If a thing was once considered bad, they believe that it is still wrong and that abolishing this one thing will right the world.

Unhappily, the thing isn't as simple as all that. A dress that was worn 10 years ago is not necessarily more modest and decent than the thing that is worn today and, applying the same rule, the dress of a century or so ago isn't that much more decorous than the thing that is being worn today.

Up in Chester, Penn., the new mayor has resurrected an old curfew ordinance and is having it enforced to tuck 17-year-old boys and girls in bed by 9 o'clock each night. Using the same principle, a man in Chicago asked the help of the courts in taking the custody of his two children from his former wife on the grounds that she plays cards and therefore neglects them. There may have been a day when either of these instances were usual enough and worthy of support. But times have changed now and each one becomes ridiculous.

There is a new school of thought today and men and women who study the problem are of the opinion that the 17-year-old isn't going to become good simply because their absence from home will give any sort of excursion the flavor of law-breaking. As to bridge-playing making a mother incompetent, one will have a hard time proving this because it so-happens that the best cared for children often have mothers who do quite a lot of card-playing. The cards have little to do with the woman's competence as a mother.

Payment Of Taxes On Increase Here

Payment of poll taxes in Lubbock county already has passed the 3,500 mark, said Hurley Carpenter, deputy tax collector. A sub-office to aid persons living in Slaton and near that city also is receiving tax payments.

More than 3,000 automobiles had been registered for 1932 at close of business yesterday, it was said.

Carpenter urged payment of poll taxes by midnight Saturday, as that is January 30 and the 31st—the last day—is Sunday. A check placed in the mails Sunday, however will be accepted as payment. The poll tax is $1.75. It is required with payment of property assessments but may be paid without the latter tax. The county collector's office will be open until midnight Saturday.

The City of Lubbock tax collector's office will be open until 10 o'clock or later and the Lubbock independent school district collector's office until midnight Saturday, R. A. Holland and A. C. Jackson, respective collectors, said. Collections to last Saturday night were about half of one per cent less than last year, Holland said.

The tax collector's office for 13 other independent school districts of Lubbock county, in the district civil courtroom in the courthouse will be open until late Saturday night, P. F. Brown, collector, said.

Army Flier Will Leave Here Today

Lieut. J. A. Mollison, provost marshall at Randolph Field, San Antonio, spent Tuesday night in Lubbock after taking Private Greer to Plainview to attend Greer's mother, who is ill there.

Randolph Field, known as the West Point of the air, now has its first class of student officers and cadets. The training course is completed in one year and is reputed to be the most rigid ever offered student pilots. Of the 220 starting last year, 64 have been "washed" out already, Lieutenant Mollison said. Eight months of primary and basic training are given at Randolph and four months of advanced training at Kelly Field, also at San Antonio.

Lieutenant Mollison, who is flying a BT2B Douglas, a basic training ship, plans to hop off from Lubbock field at 8:30 this morning for San Antonio. He flew to Plainview in four hours and 20 minutes, against a 25-mile head wind. The Douglas has a top speed of 140 miles and a cruising speed of about 115, he said.

Cotton Cotton Misses Definite Trend Livestock Value Of Steers Steady Tuesday Grain All Grains Are Forced Downward

Cotton

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 26. (AP)—Cotton was moderately active with price fluctuations narrow and developing no definite trend. After advancing 4 to 8 points in early trading on trade buying and price fixing prices gradually eased off, reaching the lows near the end 5 to 7 points down from early highs and closing easier with the general market net unchanged to 3 points down for the day.

Liverpool is due tomorrow on New Orleans 1 to 2 penny points down.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 26. (AP)—After holding steady during the greater part of the day, cotton turned easier in late trading under increased southern offerings and scattering liquidation.

May declined from 6.89@6.91 and closed at that figure, with the general market closing barely steady at net losses of 3 to 8 points. According to the New York cotton exchange service, world's consumption of American lint cotton in December was 1,007,000 bales against 890,000 in the same month last year, making total consumption for the five months of this season 4,934,000 bales against 4,445,000 last year.

Made Baby Clothes

"I found Ruth making little clothes—baby clothes," she said. "That was when she was 16."

Mother and daughter sat in the crowded court, less than a dozen feet apart. Mrs. McKinnell kept her eyes ahead, striving to meet the requirements of the embattled lawyers.

Mrs. McKinnell testified Mrs. Judd had never had a child nor adopted a child.

The aged woman, voice trembling and eyes welling with tears as she was led into details apparently close to her heart, gave her testimony to corroborate the defense contention Mrs. Judd's conversations regarding "my baby" and "my little boy" were hallucinations on her part.

"In your knowledge," she was asked, "has your daughter ever had a child or adopted a child?"

"No, I don't know of any such thing."

Lost Submarine

"somethnig had happened" to the submarine, movie theaters interrupted their programs while orders were read to sailors in the house calling on them to rejoin their ships.

Wives, mothers and sweethearts of the submarine crew, the majority of whom come from Portsmouth or Portland, hoped the vessel might be repairing a mechanical defect and would emerge unscathed. But the strain began to show on their faces as the hours went by and some of them broke down in tears.

The M-2 is equipped with the latest life-saving devices.

Condition Of Man Prevents Appearance During Inquiry

The condition of Guy Herring, injured when an explosion wrecked his home, prevented his appearing Tuesday afternoon before a court of inquiry in connection with the blast and fire, Wiley Metcalfe, city fire marshal, said. Metcalfe had conferred with Herring's physician.

Metcalfe indicated Herring possibly would be able to appear, either to formally decline to answer questions or to answer and possibly throw added light on the explosion, within several days. The blast occurred late Saturday night. Herring's residence is at 2202 Seventeenth street.

Stocks Hold Firm In Quiet Trading And Leading Issues Close With Gain

BY JOHN I. COOLEY
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 26. (AP)—Stocks held firm in quiet trading today, closing with small net gains for most leading issues.

Operations were dominated by the imminence of the U. S. Steel directors' meeting, results of which, as usual, became public property after the close. Sentiment was helped somewhat by the firm tone in the bond market, especially in U. S. governments.

The poor fourth quarter earnings statement issued by the steel corporation confirmed evidence previously offered by the low and unprofitable operating ratio of the company's subsidiaries during the three months.

Routine transactions in stocks were enlivened a bit by a mark-up in the Cotton Belt railroad issues. The preferred shares of that road soared more than a dozen points and the common at its best sold more than 2 higher, reflecting, of course, the Southern Pacific decision. Also, Woolworth closed with a gain of 2 1-8.

the presidency, but to a direct question as to whether he was a candidate, he said:

"No."

Just before the reporters finished their cross-fire of questions, one of them shot out:

"Do you think prohibition is the big issue, this year?"

"Positively not," said Mr. Baker.

"I would not take the United States into the league if I had the power to do so until there is an informed and convinced majority sentiment in favor of that action in the United States," said his statement on the league.

"I am not in favor of a plank in the Democratic national platform urging our joining the league. I think it would be a great mistake to make a partisan issue of the matter.

"I think we will go into the league some day, and I think we ought to. But I don't think that we should take that action until the people of the United States have had a chance to see the league in action and to study its action enough to be fully satisfied as to the wisdom of such a course."

Two Are Arrested In Police Probes

Arrest of two suspects in a drug store holdup Monday night, one of whom was released, and setting of an examining trial for a youth charged with robbery with firearms were Tuesday's results in a probe of a series of robberies here.

Richard Wallace, charged in connection with the hijacking of Fletcher's grocery store here, will be given an examining trial in Justice H. K. Porter's court this morning, it was said last night.

The suspect held for the holdup of Pinson's drug store at Sixteenth and Avenue Q Monday night has not been identified by Bert Pinson, drug store owner who has faced the guns of two holdup artists in three weeks, Chief John Lemond said last night.

No charges had been filed last night against two youths held for investigation in connection with the robbery of the Palace theater safe Sunday night. More than $1,169 was taken from the theater safe, the safe being locked after the burglary.

MIDWESTERN LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 26. (AP)—Under comparatively limited receipts at most markets values on steers and yearlings were considered as steady to 25 higher with most of the advance coming on better grades.

The bulk of offerings were of quality to sell at 4.50@7.00 with a few loads of good kinds at 7.50@8.75. Several loads of yearlings and medium weight steers grading strictly good or better sold at 9.00@9.50. Most replacement steers sold at 4.00@5.50 with a shipment of around 600 lb yearling Texas stockers at Kansas City at 5.90. Arrivals at eleven markets totaled 25,600 as compared with 36,620 last Tuesday and 33,982 the same day a year ago.

Man Remains Very Weak From Loss Of Blood On Tuesday

S. L. Barwick, 33, of Houston, who fainted in a cafe at Avenue H and Main street Tuesday morning, remained very weak from loss of blood due to hemorrhages from a peptic ulcer, it was said last night at Lubbock sanitarium, to which Barwick was carried in the Rix ambulance.

The attending physician said last night that if Barwick suffers other hemorrhages from the ulcer, in his stomach, a blood transfusion probably would be necessary.

Mrs. J. T. Easley of Lovington, N. M., came to Lubbock sanitarium Monday for removal of part of a needle which she stepped on about 30 days ago. It was removed. A five-year-old boy, Grover Watkins, jr., underwent a bronchoscopic operation for removal of a particle of sweet potato from his lung Monday afternoon at the sanitarium.

Revolutionary Strikes Are Quieter; Three Are Killed

MADRID, Jan. 26. (AP) — Spain's revolutionary strikes apparently dwindled today, but disorders continued with three persons reported killed in a battle between guards and strikers at Sollano, dispatches said, after extremists had proclaimed the town under communistic control and raised the red flag.

A new element entered into the situation when Ramon Franco, noted Spanish aviator of stormy political career, announced he and five other members of the national assembly had formed a new party whose aim was "to establish a left-wing republic, which the people wish."

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 26. (AP) —Gov. William A. Murray will attend a home-coming welcome at Collinsville, Tex., if the celebration is set between Feb. 14 and Feb. 19, he said today.

"Those people don't know much about publicity," he commended. "They wanted to get out a special edition of the Collinsville Times. A man from Collinsville was at the house yesterday and said the town planned to arrange a parade for me all the way from Dursant to Collinsville. That's unique. I said it would be worth more than the special edition."

Quick Senate Confirmation Of Three Names Is Expected

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26. (AP)—The reconstruction finance corporation tonight had the thing most necessary for its existence—money—and expected to have the men who will lend the funds to business in a day or two.

The senate is expected to supply that lack, just as today it receded from a minor amendment to give the corporation its initial working capital of $500,000,000.

The names of Charles Gates Dawes, corporation president, and Jesse H. Jones of Texas and Harvey C. Couch of Arkansas, directors, are before it, and quick confirmation is expected.

Baseball Loses A Great Leader

CHICAGO, Jan. 26. (AP)—Baseball has lost not only one of its greatest leaders but one of its greatest spenders in the death of William Wrigley, jr., at Phoenix, Ariz., today.

Taking up the national pastime as a hobby, Wrigley spent millions to give Chicago a pennant winning team and always insisted he never realized one cent from his interests in the club, one of the best money earners in all baseball history.

"I bought the Cubs not only because I love baseball but because I once was joshed about a large city like Chicago having such poor ball clubs," he once said in telling of his interest in the game. "When I was on the road selling soap years ago, the other salesmen used to kid me about Chicago's weak clubs and I resolved to buy the Cubs.

"Altogether I think I have spent $6,000,000 or more in building up my team but I never have taken a nickel of the profits. It is purely a hobby for me and as long as I can afford such an expensive hobby and give the fans a thrill, why I'm happy. I'd rather watch a good ball game than to attend a stockholders' meeting and listen to bumper reports and I guess I play hookey regularly to go out to Wrigley field."

Of Electrical
Development---

Looking backward to 1882, when the first central generating station was placed in operation, the industry has some measure of pride in its accomplishments during these comparatively few years. The cost of the finest artificial lighting the world has ever seen is the most unimportant item in the household budget. Drudgery is no longer necessary in the home. The workers in our great industries are no longer manual laborers: they are directors of power. The railroads, the street railways, the telephone, the telegraph, the radio—all acknowledge their debt to electricity.

These have been years of constant striving to improve and extend the service and at the same time lower the cost to the consumer.

Not a little of the success which has crowned these efforts has been due to the splendid cooperation of the American public.

Selection Of Jesse Jones

NOMINATION of Jesse H. Jones, Texas baron of big business, to serve as a director of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, lends credence to advance reports that the RFC will be as nearly non-political and as nearly efficient as it is possible to have it.

Houston's Mr. Jones is one of those rare individuals who can make a success of all kinds of ventures—whose business acumen is unquestioned in his home state and throughout the realms of commerce and trade in the heavily populated sections of the North and East. He is a banker and a builder, a publisher and a trader; his interests spread over a half-dozen states and he has his connections in the great business of oil.

All in all, it would be hard to improve upon his selection, even among the bigger names of Chicago and New York finance. And, to top it all, he is one of the most important, if not one of the most highly publicized chieftains of the Democratic party.

It will be men like Jesse Jones who will make the RFC a success—who will make it do what it's supposed to do, if such is humanly possible. The fact that he has received this latest honor to his record and ability is cheering, indeed, to Texans everywhere.

Mr. Jones is accustomed to doing big things in a big way.

That type of man is needed as the nation attempts to right itself and the balance of the tipsy world in times like these.

Men like Jones, the Democrat, and Dawes, the Republican, can do a lot toward improving conditions if they are only given the chance.

And it is comforting to note that they are being sought out to work on a tremendous public task, such as the RFC.

A DAY AT THE CAVERNS

Genial, capable Col. Tom Boles, superintendent of Carlsbad caverns, was in Lubbock yesterday, his ready smile beaming.

"I'm coming back to Lubbock soon to see Dean Gordon," the Colonel declared. "I'd like to have another Texas Tech-Lubbock day at the caverns this year."

Colonel Boles won't have much trouble arranging the special day in honor of the college and the city which have supported the caverns more actively than any others. Reduced rates for a tour of "the eighth wonder of the world," together with other features of the special day, will offer Lubbock and college people a wonderful opportunity to enjoy themselves and at the same time, to improve their minds.

A Tech-Lubbock day at the caves, we think, should be an annual affair. It can and should be made into one of the greatest educational features of each year.

THANKS TO LOUISIANA

Texas and Oklahoma owe a debt of gratitude to Louisiana for stealing the political show with its Long and Anti-Long comedy drama. The situation at New Orleans, Baton Rouge and environs is making the rest of the nation forget our petty political fusses of the past and Oklahoma's imposing record of executive impeachments.

Whatever Huey Long may or may not be, he's got something—and that something is the support of the Louisiana electorate.

And while he waltzes off to Washington, leaving Messrs. King and Cyr squabbling over who's governor and why, the rest of us can take time off to giggle—and to see ourselves as others have seen us in the past.

Practical Health Problems

INFLAMMATION OF JOINTS

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, And of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

IN a survey of the significance of chronic inflammation of the joints as an economic problem, Dr. Robert B. Osgood points out that in a state of four and a half million people there are approximately 10,000 cases of cancer; 25,000 cases of active tuberculosis; 80,000 cases of diseases of the heart and blood vessels, and 150,000 cases of so-called rheumatism.

Patients with any of the first three types of diseases either recover or die fairly quickly. Persons with chronic rheumatism, however, neither recover quickly nor die quickly. This condition has affected animals and man for at least a million years. "The fossil remains of the oldest known dinosaur," said Dr. Osgood, "make it certain that he suffered from cricks in his back before he became a fossil."

Rheumatic diseases are responsible for a terrific loss of time and thereby money. In England they caused one and a half million weeks of idleness in one year and cost the relief agency $10,000,000. Far too often chronic inflammation of the joints is looked upon as an incurable condition and one which is impossible to control. There seems to be reason for believing, however, that attention given early and adequately to this condition will bring about success in its treatment. In order that treatment may be given adequately, it is necessary that it be recognized in its earliest stages. The physician who makes his diagnosis does so on the basis of definite changes that take place in the tissues, including particularly the surface of what are called the synovial membranes and of the bones involved in the joints. The synovial membranes are the tissues which enable the joints to move freely and which act as lubricating surfaces.

In the national hospital for arthritis in Sweden it is found that approximately 60 per cent of the patients properly treated early have either permanently recovered or after three years become enabled to take care of themselves.

The whole purpose of this discussion of the subject is to urge people who have pains in the joints, who suffer with inflammation of the joints, or who have the slightest notion that they suffer with such infections, to get prompt and complete medical attention before the condition produces permanent damage and crippling.

Department Embarrassed

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

Capitol

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26. — The state department has been placed into an embarrassing position by recent testimony of witnesses before the senate finance committee, indicating the department's approval of vast issues of South American public bonds, which now are in default and worth little or nothing.

Just what the department's approval was intended to signify is, to be sure, a disputed question.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, a former secretary of the treasury, contends that it makes the United States government "morally responsible" to the present holders of the bonds in this country for any loss they may suffer. The department insists that it never had the slightest idea of guaranteeing the securities, but merely told the bankers through whom they were marketed that it had no political objection to their sale here.

IT IS a fact, at least as long ago as the state department incumbency of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, the department's custom of passing on foreign loans was adversely criticized in the senate. The department replied then, as now, that it was not indorsing any bonds as investments. Critics rejoined, then, that was how the departmental policy was certain to be interpreted and that it would cause trouble if defaults ever ensued.

Nevertheless, the state department persisted — through the regimes of Secretary Hughes and Secretary Frank B. Kellogg, and on into the regime of Secretary Henry L. Stimson.

And defaults HAVE ensued—to the extent, in round figures, of $850,000,000.

THE PREDICTION of trouble is verified also.

The trouble does not involve the state department alone, either.

Indeed, between the state and commerce departments it involves actual friction.

Commerce departmental representatives in the defaulting republics do not relish the implication that they neglected to warn the home folks that loans in their various fields were being overdone. Consequently, these representatives have submitted records to show that they did send repeated warnings, which the state department "hush, hushed," lest relations be strained between Washington and Latin American capitals.

SOME of the banker witnesses at the senate inquiry into the foreign loan situation likewise have testified to what they say seemed to them to be more than mere passive acquiescence by the state department in Latin American financial advances.

Notably in the case of last June's semi-final $4,000,000 payment on the since defaulted $20,000,000 loan which New York interests were then making in instalments to Colombia, hints of departmental persuasion of the bankers to remit the money, despite the Colombian administration's failure to balance its budget, which the lenders wanted done first, became so strong that the department felt called on to offer an explanation to the investigating committee.

The state department, said this explanation, "would have been derelict in its duty if it did not advise American interests that it had been informed that their attitude was the subject of misunderstanding by a foreign government."

WHETHER or not this suggestion, which the state department admits having made to the bankers, was calculated to influence them is a matter of opinion.

Anyway, they sent the money.

Presumably it was only a coincidence that, a few days later, a large petroleum concession, in which the Gulf Oil corporation had a 75 per cent interest, and which the Colombian government had canceled a short time previously, was reinstated.

It was as a sequel to this testimony that a representative of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon appeared before the congressional investigators to deny control of the Gulf Oil corporation by the secretary.

THE CELEBRATED $100,000,000 loan to Peru during President Leguia's administration, since overthrown by revolution, did not get so clean a bill of health; it unmistakably was tainted by a $415,000 "commission" to the ex-dictator's son, Juan—not to mention various other "pickings."

There was, however, no "political" objection to it, which is how it happened to pass the state department's scrutiny.

The bonds sold at about 90 per cent of par, and optimists prophesy that Peru will yet redeem them at 10 or 15 cents on the dollar, but at present they are quoted only around 7.

GLEANING FOR GOLD

It is supposed by some economists that shortage of gold and the consequent rise in its value has the inevitable effect of lowering prices and wages. And this, in turn, makes profitable the search for gold and the discovery of new stores of the precious metal.

There are known deposits of gold which have lain untouched during the period of prosperity because they could not be profitably worked. The California state bureau of mines estimates, for example, that there is $600,000,000 worth of gold within the state boundaries, which might be recovered by placer mining, and about $900,000,000 worth in hard rock veins. And the effect of high gold prices and low wage scales is that many prospectors and placer miners are seeking a living in the creek bottoms and canyons of California. They do not expect to find a fortune, but they can earn fair wages by their gleanings in the old gold fields.

It is likely that necessity will have similar effects in other occupations. Opportunities which offered little attraction in easy times are already absorbing a proportion of the unemployed. This indicates that there is an element of truth in the opinion that a sincere intention to work is still able to discover something to do.

This sort of determination and enterprise will have much to do with our economic recovery, just as the reopening of the gold fields will have its good effects, not only on those who find work there but also on the gold values which seem to have such mysterious importance in our economic system.

Many a man has picked another for an easy mark and developed a case of mistaken judgment.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

STOLEN HOUSES:

An amazing story of how modern "pirates" stole six two-story houses and gutted eight others, came to light in December, 1931, in Washington, when the razing company sent the District of Columbia a bill for stolen property.

The piracy took place at First and L streets, where fourteen houses had been purchased on a site to be made into a play-ground. The police of the precinct were the first to discover the "theft" when it was noticed that the wreckers were leaving the demolished houses in a dangerous condition. Complaint was registered with the contractors, but it developed that they had not at all started operations. The house-thieves were then arrested and held for investigation.

MAD MARRIAGE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GYPSY McBRIDE, 19-year-old typist in a New York office, meets JIM WALLACE at the home of her wealthy cousin, ANNE TROWBRIDGE. Gypsy is miserable because she has learned ALAN CROSBY, back from a year and a half in Paris studying art, no longer cares for her. Crosby is infatuated with a wealthy divorcee. Wallace tells Gypsy that he has been jilted by his fiancee. To spite the girl he cares for he asks Gypsy to marry him. She first refuses but later accepts. They are married next morning and depart for Forest City, his home town.

At Jim's home they are greeted by his aunt, MISS HELEN WALLACE, who immediately becomes hostile to the girl. MARK HARRISON, senior member of Jim's law firm, is friendly to Gypsy. After a few days Miss Wallace moves to a cottage down the street. She arranges a family dinner party at which Gypsy is to meet the other relatives.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXI

Lucia Wallace did not come forward. Her shoulders straightened and Gypsy could feel the scrutiny of those cool dark eyes. Lucia was wearing an emerald gown with flowing draperies. The shade was vivid and unbecoming to Lucia's sallow coloring. It had been chosen as the likeliest hue to dye the original lemon yellow of the dress. Lucia stared at Gypsy with the venom of a woman in a made-over gown confronting a younger, prettier rival in new finery.

Her husband, Ben, who was across the room turned. "Hello, Jim", he called heartily. "How are you?" He came toward them smiling. "So this is the young lady I've been hearing about. Introduce me, won't you?"

Aunt Ellen interrupted. There was danger of the solemn formality of her party being jarred.

"Come," she said, placing a hand on Gypsy's arm. "I want you to meet the other members of the family. "This is Mrs. Benjamin Wallace."

Lucia inclined her head slightly. "How do you do?" she said primly.

"And this is Benjamin. He and Jim are cousins."

Ben Wallace was a little man, slightly rotund. He was the least prosperous of the relatives and the jolliest. He shook Gypsy's hand warmly. "I'm glad to know you," he said. "Glad to see you here. Old Jim's to be congratulated, all right. Yes, sir, Jim, you certainly are!"

"It's nice of you to say that," Gypsy told him, smiling.

Jim had crossed the room and was talking to Mrs. Nicholson. Aunt Ellen drew Gypsy toward them.

"Sister Sophronia," Miss Wallace said, "this is Jim's wife, Gypsy, my sister, Mrs. Nicholson."

Sophronia Nicholson permitted the girl to touch her fingers. "How do you do?" she said with dignity. Mrs. Nicholson's gown was a stiff black satin. She wore a huge old-fashioned cameo fastening the collar and in her lap was the inevitable knitting.

"Gypsy can cook," Jim put in grinning. "Takes good care of me, Aunt Sophronia."

"Well! I'm glad to hear it." Mrs. Nicholson raised the spectacles which hung on a chain about her neck and adjusted them to her eyes. She studied the girl's face.

The temperature of the room seemed to have dropped. "You're a stranger in Forest City, I understand?" Mrs. Nicholson said.

"I—well, I was. I'm beginning to feel acquainted now."

The older woman's brows rose. She was about to speak when someone touched Gypsy's arm. "I'm Abbie Manley," said the newcomer. "One of the new cousins. Charles and I have been trying to get over to see you ever since we heard you'd arrived but I've had a touch of the grippe. We're going to come soon, though."

"We'd love to have you," Gypsy answered. "Come any time."

Abbie Manley's brown hair was beginning to show touches of gray. She was slightly taller than Gypsy and heavier. Her plain face was frank and friendly.

She had taken the girl's hand and was still holding it. "You're a pretty girl," Abbie went on. "I hope you're going to be happy here, Jim (turning to the young man) "let me congratulate you."

"Thanks, Abbie. Isn't Charles here?"

"I think he's telephoning." As she spoke a slim, middle-aged man in gray appeared in the doorway. "Oh, there you are!" Abbie exclaimed. "Come meet the bride, Charles."

Manley exchanged greetings with the others and shook hands with Gypsy. Aunt Ellen again took command of the group and was bustling about for chairs when a shrill voice from a corner piped up:

"Mother—aren't we going to be introduced too?"

Gypsy turned. She had not noticed the two children on the sofa against the wall. There was a boy who looked about 12. He wore horn-rimmed glasses and his shoulders

Struggle In Home Life Is Presented In "The House Beautiful" On Monday

Channing Pollock's widely discussed play of American home life, "The Home Beautiful," will be presented under the banner of Crosby Gaige at the Senior High school auditorium on next Monday evening.

The cast will be headed by Ethel Intropidi and John Griggs and will include Homer Barton, Jack C. King, Alma Brock, Henry Richards, George Oliver Taylor, Mary Alice Collins, Philip Van Zant, Marjorie Jarecki, Betty Oakwood and Archie Maddox.

The play concerns a struggle between the idealist and the practical mind—the conflict between the one to whom a home is much more than a piece of property and the other faction that looks to homemaking for profit only.

Covering a period of thirty years, "The House Beautiful" shows the evolution of the suburb of West Hills, New Jersey, and its effects on the Davis family who were among the early settlers. The scene is a conflict of the garden against the pavement, the tree against the billboard. These elements are interchangeable in the play, with simple homely virtues against cynical sophistication.

Channing Pollock is well remembered in the theater as author of "The Fool," "The Enemy," "The Sign on the Door," "Roads of Destiny," "The Crowded Hour," "Such a Little Queen," "Little Grey Lady," the books of two Ziegfeld Follies and innumerable musical comedies.

"The House Beautiful" was staged under the direction of Worthington Miner and the scenery and costumes were designed by Jo Mielziner.

Southwest Conference Cage Teams Rest

Baylor Leads Field With 3 Wins To None

Mid-Term Examinations Halt Hectic Race This Week But Teams Start In Strong On Monday Night Next Week

BY BILL PARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, Jan. 26.—Examinations this week darkened all but one Southwest Conference basketball court. Baylor basketeers escaped the mid-term examinations long enough to defeat Rice Monday night, 41 to 21. It was Baylor's third consecutive conference victory against no defeats.

The temporary basketball lull will not be for long. The conference swings into five championship games next week starting with the Texas A. & M. and Baylor setto Monday night at Waco. It will be the second meeting between the Bears and Aggies. Last week at College Station, Baylor stopped the Aggies, 29 to 23.

Porkers Come South

The real trouble will come Friday and Saturday nights when Baylor takes on the University of Arkansas Razorbacks. These two games will be played at Waco. Arkansas won five consecutive conference championships before Texas Christian stopped them last season. Arkansas is in second place with three wins and one defeat. The Razorbacks proved they are ready for their crucial series with Baylor by taking two games from Southern Methodist 46 to 20, and 29 to 20.

Other Saturday night games will see the Texas Christian Frogs, 1931 champions, battling the University of Texas at Fort Worth; and Texas A. & M. at Dallas playing the Southern Methodist Loopers.

Although defeated Monday night by Baylor, the Rice Owls scored enough points to become the leading offensive team with 132 points. However, the opposition has scored 158 points against the Owls.

Car Is Driven 164 Miles Per

Wizard Smith Scats Over Ten Mile Course At New Speed Believed To Be Best; Will Challenge Malcolm Campbell

AUCKLAND, N. Z., Jan. 26. (AP)—Norman (Wizard) Smith, automobile racer, drove his car at an average of 164.084 miles an hour over a 10-mile course on Ninety Mile beach near here today for what was claimed to be a new world record for the distance. In two dashes his average time was 3 minutes 39.4017 seconds.

The roughness of the beach made the going hazardous, Smith said.

Smith shipped his automobile from Sydney, Australia, to Ninety Mile beach, northern New Zealand, six weeks ago in preparation for the attacks upon world records.

Besides the ten-mile record, he planned to better the mark of 14.65 seconds for a flying one mile made by Sir Malcolm Campbell of England, at Daytona Beach, Fla., February 5, 1931, while traveling 245.733 miles an hour.

Smith's car is set very low, equipped with stabilizing fins behind each rear wheel. Before making his tests, Smith said he believed the 12-cylinder racing airplane engine would develop speed of 300 miles an hour.

Battalino Not To Count Self Out By Weight

Freddie Miller To Meet "Bat" In Chicago; N. B. A. Would Declare Throne Vacant If Weight Limit Not Reached

CINCINNATI, Jan. 26. (AP)—Bat Battalino, featherweight king, scheduled for ten rounds here tomorrow night with Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, today said he had no intention of losing his national boxing association title on the scales. If he is dethroned it will be in the ring.

The New York State Athletic commission recently stripped Battalino of his crown for failure to make the weight limit in a title argument with Lew Feldman.

Battalino was reported to weigh 136 pounds when he came here a week ago from his Hartford, Conn. home. His traner, Leonard Murullo, said Bat weighed 128 this morning.

The fight tomorrow is billed as a title affair. The N. B. A. required both men to post $1,000 forfeits that they would weigh 126 pounds, the class limit. Battalino was given permission to box in case he did not tip scales any higher than 131 pounds.

If Battalino is over 131 the N. B. A. said it would declare the title vacant.

Wilmer Allison, Netter, To Play In Texas Open Tourney

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 26. (AP)—Wilmer Allison, international tennis star of Austin, will be in a new role January 28. He has entered the Texas Open golf tournament, playing in the pro-amateur event. Tinsley Penick, pro at the Austin club, has officially entered Allison's name.

Two Texas pros who have shown to advantage in West Coast tourneys also have definitely entered the Texas Open. They are Dick Metz of San Angelo and Tony Butler of Corpus Christi.

BROWNS SIGNS GRAY

UVALDE, Jan. 26. (AP)—Sam Gray, pitcher for the St. Louis Browns, said today he had signed a 1932 contract calling for a salary of $7,500. Gray has been wintering at Rock Springs, near here.

Texas Golfers Hope To Keep Open Title At Home; Score Of Best In State Is Ready

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 26. (AP)—A score of Texans made up the vanguard of high powered golfers that will move upon San Antonio in the next 28-hours for the four-day open tournament program that begins Thursday.

They came from all points of the compass, ready to besiege the Texas Open layout in quest of a title that for 11 years has gone to golfers outside the confines of the Lone Star state.

Chief among those answering present today were Tony Butler and Dick Metz, who followed the golden trail down the West Coast, and Joe Ezar, formerly of Waco, and now of St. Louis.

Texas-Arizona League May Be Composed Of Six Teams In 1932; Directors Meet

GLOBE, Ariz., Jan. 26. (AP)—Directors of the Arizona-Texas baseball league will meet in Tucson February 7 to decide whether the circuit shall consist of four, five or six clubs this season.

In calling the meeting today, President F. A. Nathan said it is certain there will be four clubs but expressed doubt of there being more.

Tucson, Phoenix, El Paso and Nogales," he said, "are sure to enter, and there is a chance Marty Fielder will operate a club out of Albuquerque and that Bisbee, with $6,000 aid from a Pacific Coast League club, will be able to enter."

Nogales and Tucson, he said, will receive aid from coast clubs.

Large Crowds Seeing Cage Games; Fan Spirit Returns

AUSTIN, Jan. 26. (AP)—Return of the old time basketball spirit at the University of Texas is seen by observers. Large crowds have witnessed the two home stands made by the Longhorns in Southwest conference competition.

An estimated 4,500 persons cheered themselves hoarse while Texas trimmed Southern Methodist University in the opening home game.

It was estimated that a crowd of 5,000 was in Gregory gymnasium when Texas played Texas Christian University. The 5,000, however, left the gymnasium with their throats in much better condition than in the Southern Methodist game because of the one-sided score by which the champion Frogs defeated the Steers.

Cameron Aggie Team Trounces Tech Matadors

Luckless Techsters Put Up Hard Battle But Lose By Score Of 34-28; To Play Second Game Tonight

LAWTON, Okla., Jan. 26. (Spcl.) The Texas Tech Matadors of Lubbock fought the Cameron Aggies desperately here tonight but were unable to turn the first win of their ten-day road trip when the Aggies staged a late rally to win by a 34 to 28 count.

Hodges, Tadlock and Fisher were outstanding for the Matadors, Fisher pacing the Tech scoring with 15 points. Howell, Cameron forward, made six field goals.

The same teams meet again Wednesday night in the second and final game of the series, and on Thursday the Matadors journey to Ada to meet the fast stepping East Central State Teachers Tigers, leaders in the Oklahoma Collegiate Conference race. A rest is in store for the traveling Texans Friday night, after which on Saturday night they meet the Southeastern State Teachers college Savages at Durant.

The Matadors return home Sunday, grateful for another non-playing night on which they can rest preceding the opening of a two game series here Monday night against the University of New Mexico Loboes. Considered one of the best clubs of the Border States Conference, of which Texas Tech will become a member next fall, the University of New Mexico cagers are playing a return series with the Matadors.

Last year the basketball teams of Tech and the New Mexico school opened athletic relationships between the schools with a series at Albuquerque. The Loboes won the first game and Coach "Crip" Golightly's Matadors took the second

Nor shall we run screaming in glee down the Strand at tidings that Lou Brouillard is to defend his welterweight championship against Jackie Fields, former titleholder, in Chicago, Jan. 28. The welterweight doings of the last few years have been something to sniff at.

HERE GOES, PHAR!

The record of Phar Lap, showing 50 starts in which the Australian horse has won 36 races, placed in three and showed in two, suggests that he is going to kick an awful lot of dust into the faces of our local equines. But it is very hard for us to work up a resounding shout about Phar Lap, because we still remember very vividly a man named Tom Heeney.

HELLO, PHILLY!

Those Athletics may win the American League pennant this year the fourth time in a row, but if anything happens to Grove, Earnshaw, Simmons or Cochrane, they will not. Nothing may happen to any of those people, then again something may. Something happened to Cochrane, for instance, during the last world series, and look how things turned out!

HERE YOU ARE, STANLEY

The knockout of Stanley Poreda suffered at the hands of Salvatore Ruggirello put something of a crimp in Stanley's immediate aspirations, but it relieved this observer of a great load of worry. The worry was generated the first time we ever saw Poreda fight. Poreda has a terrific right uppercut that is, or used to be, very, very wild. Our constant dread that Mr. Poreda eventually would knock himself out has now been alleviated.

AH! ENLIGHTENMENT!

It is now revealed that Jack Sharkey promised his managers, in his last bout with Max Schmeling, that he would not "cut loose with everything he had" before the sixth round. Aside from the consternation this disclosure arouses upon this most appropriate occasion, it gives us cause to wonder, too, how many kinds of foul blows Mr. Sharkey knows how to administer when he really decides to cut loose?

THE SOLID MEN

The reinstatement of Max Schmeling by the New York Boxing Commission puts the commission in an even stranger light than that in which it is accustomed to basking. The commission, you may remember, declared Sharkey champion when Schmeling kept putting off the commission's demand for a return bout. But the reinstatement of the German means that he becomes champion again in the eyes of the commission. It's probably a sleight-of-hand job.

West Coast Artist Crowds Into World Billiard Joust

CHICAGO, Jan. 26. (AP)—Young Jake Schaefer, the San Francisco balkline artist, today crowded himself into the running for the world three-cushion billiards title with the most brilliant performance of the tournament.

Schaefer had trouble getting started, but in his last two games, has played masterfully. Today he scored his third triumph of the tournament, requiring only 31 innings to defeat Bud Westhus, St. Louis, 50 to 23. It was the fastest game of the tournament.

Government Motion Frees Man In Mail Fraud Trial

FORT WORTH, Jan. 26. (AP)—A government motion for an instructed verdict of not guilty freed J. D. Stephens, oil promoter, of a charge of mail fraud in federal court here today.

The government admitted inability to connect Stephens with misuse of the mails in connection with a promotion enterprise carried on by the Coronada Oil and Gas company in 1927.

Stephens admitted from the stand that during the summer of 1927 he received $45,000 from the promotion.

5 Ways To Save Money In Heating

--- as told to us by a thrifty housewife

The amount of your gas bill is largely in your hands. During winter months, with house heating needs causing a constant demand for gas, you may make a real saving in your gas bill by following the suggestions given below. Help us to help you SAVE MONEY ON YOUR GAS BILL.

1. Don't turn gas up to a point where the flame goes over the top in open top heaters. This wastes gas.
2. Don't try to heat the breakfast room, or adjoining rooms with the range oven. A small gas heater will do the work better and cheaper.
3. If you keep a fire burning in the bath room, see that it is turned low after the room has become comfortably warm.
4. When shopping, or going out for the evening, close the windows, turning out all gas heaters. The house will retain most of its warmth.
5. Don't open doors or windows to cool the room—turn down the gas instead. A wall thermometer will assist you to keep rooms at a uniform temperature.

41 Miles without Water...

. . . . Conoco Germ Processed Oil Saves Motor

When Walter H. Freed reached Pueblo, Colorado, after a 41-mile drive from Colorado Springs, his car was so hot it had to be put into gear before it would stop!

He had plenty of Conoco Germ Processed Oil in the car. No steam was coming from the radiator, so he did not suspect the cooling system.

But a garage man found not a drop of water in the radiator! The 41 miles had been driven without water in the radiator—only the oil to keep the motor from burning up.

Conoco Germ Processed Oil withstood this ordeal! Inspection of the motor revealed no damage done.

Convincing evidence of Germ Processed Oil's stability, of its sure protection under the most trying conditions! Proof that Conoco Germ Processed Oil offers you the safest lubrication for your car.

The oil that protects motors through such ordeals will lubricate your car better in every-day driving. For peace of mind, for economy and long motor life, change now to Conoco Germ Processed Oil at the sign of the Conoco Red Triangle.

* * * * *

We neither encourage "dry radiator" experiments nor guarantee success under all conditions. But unsolicited letters from motorists, now in our files, testify to this and hundreds of other unusual tests of Conoco Germ Processed Oil—runs of ten to over fifty miles with the crankcase empty.

MAD MARRIAGE

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "HEART HUNGRY," etc.

were bent over a book. Beside him sat a girl probably two years older. It was the girl who had spoken.

"Come here, children," said Lucia Wallace. The pair stood up, the boy still clinging to his book.

The children came forward dutifully. The girl had light hair hanging in too-tight ringlets. She looked like her mother but instead of being slender she was squarely built and chubby. Her name was Lucia Elizabeth.

"I'm pleased to meet you," simpered the child in a manner that had evidently been rehearsed. Junior, the boy, put forward one hand and mumbled something inaudible.

"What have you been reading?" Gypsy asked.

"Kidnaped!" Junior answered. Without another word he faced about and returned to the sofa.

Gypsy smiled down at the little girl. She was wondering how to begin a conversation when Lucia Elizabeth solved the problem.

"You're our aunt what?" she asked.

"Aunt what?"

"Well—this is Aunt Ellen and that's Aunt Abbie. You're our aunt what?"

"Oh, I see!" Gypsy spoke, enlightened. "My name is Gypsy. Aunt Gypsy I guess."

Lucia Elizabeth stared at her, then began to laugh. "What a funny name," she exclaimed. "Aunt Gypsy—isn't that funny?"

"Lucia Elizabeth!" her mother said severely. "Where are your manners? It's not a funny name. It only seems so!"

"But it is funny!" the child protested loudly. "It isn't a name at all. Why, gypsies are funny old dirty people. I saw some last summer. They tell fortunes and steal babies—"

"That will do!" Lucia Wallace's voice was stern. Her daughter looked down sullenly, then sank to the edge of a chair.

By this time Gypsy's cheeks were flushing. Charles Manley spoke to her and she turned toward him with evident relief. He placed a chair for her and she sat down. Gypsy felt she should address her hostess.

"The house looks lovely," she said to Miss Wallace. "I don't see how you managed to get everything settled so quickly."

Aunt Ellen was sitting erect in her favorite high-backed chair. "I shall be comfortable here," she said. "Of course, after being accustomed to a big house it's quite a change." She interjected a sigh. "But I'll get used to it."

"Aren't you going to show us the place?" Jim asked.

"I'll show you," Abbie Manley volunteered. "I've just been through it myself. You and Gypsy come with me—"

Aunt Ellen held up one hand. "I think a little later, Abbie," she said but Mrs. Manley was on her feet.

"Well have time," Abbie insisted. "Come on, Gypsy. There's a lovely view from the bedroom window and the kitchen is wonderful."

Jim leaned back. "You two go along," he said. "Ben's telling me how to get rich quick."

Gypsy and Mrs. Manley stepped into the hall. There were six rooms in the cottage but they were large. The central hallway, (counted as a room) divided the living room from the dining room. Back of the living room was Miss Wallace's bedroom and at the back of the house was a room for the maid. The pantry and kitchen were on the other side. Abbie led the way, pointing out the attractive features. They came to the kitchen last.

Abbie drew back the door and they were greeted by the inviting odors of cooking food.

"Hello, Harriet," called Gypsy from the doorway.

The cook turned and her face lighted. "Howdo, Mis' Wallace," she answered. She put down the potato masher which she had been wielding vigorously. "It's good to see you here."

"My—what a fine kitchen you have," Gypsy said smiling. "Everything's so fresh and white I guess it's a pleasure to work in such a place. We miss you, Harriet. Say, something certainly does smell good!"

"There isn't a better cook in Forest City than Harriet," Abbie Manley put in.

Harriet' face showed that she was pleased. She began beating the potatoes again. Gypsy glanced over her shoulder. Miss Wallace had come up behind them.

"Well, really—!" Ellen Wallace's tone was exasperated, "if there's to be any dinner in this house tonight I'm afraid Harriet will have to be allowed to get it on the table. It's nearly seven o'clock Abbie. Don't you think you two had better go back to the living room?"

Miss Wallace soared into the kitchen. Gypsy and her companion fled. "Never mind Aunt Ellen," Abbie whispered into the girl's ear. She's on her high horse tonight. It doesn't mean a thing."

Fifteen minutes later they were ushered into the dining room. Gypsy and Jim were given places of honor at Aunt Ellen's right. Ben Wallace sat next to Gypsy and directly opposite was Lucia, his wife. Mrs. Nicholson sat in state at the foot of the table.

Harriet served the soup. It was an elaborate five-course dinner and the food was delicious but Gypsy had no appetite. Whenever she looked up Lucia Wallace's small dark eyes were watching her belligerently. Jim made several attempts at general conversation but gave up the effort. Junior squirmed in his chair and was scolded for refusing to eat his spinach. Sophronia Nicholson made use of the opportunity to deliver a lecture on how grateful small boys should be for a good home and plenty of nourishing food. There were other little boys in the world, she assured Junior, who would be glad to eat spinach. Spinach would make him a strong, big man. Somehow (as Jim had predicted) this led to launching forth on the hardships Uncle Ezra endured at Andersonville.

"Your great Uncle Ezra was a great man," she concluded, eyeing Junior. By some chance her glance fell upon Gypsy. "Did your ancestors take part in the war?" she asked. "I mean of course the Civil War?"

"I don't think my relatives were in this country then," Gypsy told her.

All other conversation suddenly died. Out of the silence Mrs. Nicholson spoke again. "And from what country, may I ask, did they come?" The woman leaned forward waiting for Gypsy's answer.

"From Ireland."

"Ireland!" It was Lucia who spoke with a slightly rising inflection.

"My grandfather sailed from Belfast when he was 12 years old," the girl replied steadily. "Father used to write to his cousins there. Some of them are still living in Belfast."

Lucia's fluttering "Oh!" was a gasp. Out of the deadening stillness Jim came to his wife's defense.

"The Irish make good fighters, Aunt Sophronia," he said. "You'll have to admit that. There were probably a lot of them at Andersonville along with Uncle Ezra."

Lucia Wallace exchanged glances with Mrs. Nicholson. "Of course Forest City is a quiet place," she spoke in her most elegant, aristocratic voice. "Our life is very simple here but if you'd like we might make up a foursome for golf some afternoon. I play at the Glendale club."

"I'm sorry," Gypsy answered. "I don't play golf."

"Really?"

"Well, we'll teach you," Ben Wallace said heartily. "Can't hit a ball myself but I'm a great teacher. Jim here knows that—"

"But perhaps—er—Gypsy may prefer some other sport," his wife suggested.

Gypsy shook her head. "I'm not good at any sports," she said. "I've always been too busy."

Sophronia Nicholson cleared her voice. "You—had other interests?" she asked.

The air seemed charged. Gypsy had endured suggestions of superiority as long as she could. Reaction was inevitable and it came with a flash. "Yes," she said bitterly, "I had other interests—pounding a typewriter eight hours a day to earn a living. Trying to pay for board and room on $30 a week. That's how I've spent my time!"

Ellen Wallace dropped a fork. "Do you mean to say—!" she began but Jim Wallace interrupted. He was on his feet. "I've had about enough of this," he said.

Youth Tortured By Beer Runners

McHENRY, Ills., Jan. 26. (AP) — Nineteen-year-old Alvin Bauer, son of an ice dealer, was kidnaped by five beer runners last night and tortured over a bonfire while his abductors demanded to know where the local speakeasies bought their bootleg liquor.

Taken down from his perch above the fire to be given a last chance to talk, the lad broke from his captors and escaped in the darkness.

When he reached home, his sweater had been burned away.

The five kidnapers came on Bauer on the outskirts of McHenry last evening, forced him into their sedan and drove to a secluded spot. They built a bonfire and suspended the boy over it.

Frightened and tortured as the flames all but smothered him, he swore he knew nothing of the speakeasies and their sources of beer. He was taken down and told he would have one more chance to tell. Then he made his break.

Winter Pays Another Visit To Oklahoma; Snow Reported

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 26. (AP) Winter paid another visit to Oklahoma today.

Wet snow clung to 18 northwestern counties and other sections reported sleet and cold rains. Alva had the most snow, about four inches. At Forgan, in the Panhandle, the temperature dropped to the ten-degree mark.

Precipitation in central Oklahoma threatened to break a 40-year record for any winter month, nearly five inches having fallen in January.

Credit Man On Lions Program

Frank T. Caldwell Says That Credit Curtailment Needed With Competition; Inspects Retail Bureau Here

"Volume pressure, and a certain amount of increased volume is necessary for business progress, has tended to break down the sense of credit responsibility of the customer," Frank T. Caldwell, field secretary of the National Retail Credit association, told members of the Lubbock Retail Merchants association and the Lions club Tuesday at Hotel Hilton. Paul Sherrod, local association president was in charge.

"We're not concerned with making any prognostications on the causes or predictions on the outcome of the situation," Mr. Caldwell said in speaking of the past period of deflation, "but we are concerned in the truth or falsity of the statement that 'the nation has been living beyond its means,' that there has been too much credit."

He then explained that the basis of every credit account should be considered on the three "C's", character, capital and capacity, whether the customer was of good moral responsibility, whether he had a sufficient amount of income to meet his responsibility and the capacity of his credit.

Volume Request Blamed

"It is true," Mr. Caldwell continued, "that a greater percentage of the people have to some extent, lived beyond their means, it is true that merchants have caused their credit accounts to become liabilities instead of assets but it has been due only through the fault of the merchants themselves. They have wanted volume and this volume request on the part of sales managers has tended to break down the control of the credit man so that the customer has been able, in many instances to come into a store and name his own credit terms. And then retailing entered into the business of credit competition instead of sales competition on real merchandising values."

"The merchants are more to blame than the customers," he said

Must Curtail Competition

"We believe the time has come when retail credit men will have to take action in curtailing credit competition and get business back on a sound merchandising and sales basis again so that they can say to the customer, 'don't buy beyond your ability to pay and don't buy things for which you have no use'."

"Business has shown great strides in progress along many lines but many merchants are still following the old credit policies pursued 30 and 40 years ago. Why today, a merchant doesn't put a small notice in the paper to the effect that he has goods to sell but instead he sets aside a budget for advertising in the newspaper of the community, the only feasible and practical place for the retailer to put his business before his customers, and he not only tells what he has to sell but he tells the price and he gives a picture of it in his ad. Credit should be brought up to the same standard."

"There's just as great a future for the credit unit of a store as any other department but the retail merchant has got to profit by the experience of his fellow merchants in the community."

He lauded the work of the Lubbock Retail Merchants association under the leadership of Garnet Reeves and declared every merchant should take advantage of the information offered within its files.

W. A. A. HOLDS FUN NIGHT

Featuring girl entertainers from the student body, the Women's Athletic association presented a varied program to a large number of women students Monday night. This was the first of a series of fun nights which the organization has planned.

The program opened with songs by the audience which were followed by a short skit, "And the Lamp Went Out." The cast was composed of Doris Mullins, Helen Elland, Louise Jacques, Mary Self and Opal McMahon. Musical numbers included songs by the Jeffreys twins, Estelyne and Evelyne accompanied by Moody Hale on the banjo, and three blues songs by Thelma Moss.

Martha Reba Hubbard, accompanied by Maurine Davenport, gave a tap dance, and Mary Louise Baskin presented a tight-rope walking stunt. Jo Cowsert and Bobby Roberts billed as Joe and George, gave a tumbling exhibition, and Zona May concluded the special numbers with a Russian dance. The program ended with relay races in which the audience took part, the remainder of the time being given for dancing.

The girls' band, directed by Harry LeMaire, played several numbers during the evening, and the girls orchestra played for the dance.

The entertainment committee which arranged this program was composed of Elizabeth Conner, chairman, Mary Louise Baskin and Mary Jean Magee.

ENGINEERS ELECT DRAKE

Robert E. Drake of Kress was chosen vice-president of the Engineers' society at a meeting held Monday night, and Prof. H. F. Godeke, head of the mechanical engineering department, was elected toastmaster for the annual banquet.

Because of a conflict between the banquet date and one set by the freshman class for their dance, the time for the engineers' affair was changed from March 5 to March 1.

TO VISIT SISTER

Katherine Gautier, who was enrolled here last term and was also an assistant in the office of Dr. Mansell, left Tuesday for Seymour where she will visit her sister, for a month. She plans to go from there to Galveston, where she will enter school.

COMMITTEE TO MEET

Preston Conner, chairman of the student members League for Industrial Democracy, has announced a meeting for 5 o'clock this afternoon in the YMCA office for a study of "Human Relations in Industry."

SOPHS PLAN DANCE

In an effort to have as many freshmen as possible attend the annual sophomore hodge-podge, several changes have been made in the usual arrangements for the dance, Bill Stubbs, president of the sophs, said Monday. A committee from the second-year class was recently appointed to decide upon the most satisfactory rules for the affair.

All freshmen will be invited, as is traditional, but this year they will be asked to call for bids. There will be a limit of 40 stags in the fish bids; others will be requested to bring girls from their own class unless they wish to have a date from an upper class and pay the regular admission.

"We have made these restrictions in the hope that they will please the majority of the freshmen, whom we cordially invite to be our guests." Other announcements will be made as soon as plans are complete, Stubbs said.

The dance will be held February 26 in the Dance palace.

HOLD INQUEST TONIGHT

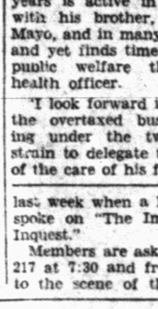

"Who killed G. S.?" is the question Pre-Law club members will attempt to solve at their meeting tonight. This problem is the second in a series of programs planned for the club, the first of which was given last week when a Lubbock attorney spoke on "The Importance of the Inquest."

Members are asked to be in room 217 at 7:30 and from there will go to the scene of the murder.

Health Future Now Forecast

Dr. Charles Mayo States That Family Physician Will Play Prominent Part In Family Life Of Future

ROCHESTER, Minn., Jan. 26. (AP) A surgeon as well known as the local center bearing his family name today forecast an American health future with the family physician prominent in the foreground.

Dr. C. H. Mayo

The hustle and bustle of modern living, in the opinion of Dr Charles H. Mayo will bring this development and he believes it may be a factor in increasing the span of human life materially.

Preventive medicine is the key said Dr. Mayo, who despite his 66 years is active in the local clinic with his brother, Dr. William J. Mayo, and in many research groups and yet finds time to work out his public welfare theories as city health officer.

"I look forward in a few years to the overtaxed businessman working under the twentieth century strain to delegate the responsibility of the care of his family's health to a physician," said Dr. Mayo.

"He is too busy and his wife is too busy properly to do the work. I look forward to the time when the family physician again will be very much in the foreground."

Health mindedness he deems important. He added "we owe the world something for the privilege of living, although a great many people think and feel just the opposite. That is, they feel the world owes it to them to look after them, once they have been born."

Science has made great forward steps but much remains to be done in promoting health. As an example of work ahead, Dr. Mayo said "we are just beginning to appreciate bacteria."

Dr. Mayo pointed out that nine years has been added to the average human life since 1900, bringing it to 58.

Morse pled with 10 U. S. congresses before getting telegraph recognition.
