Ask Us

Q—What are the salaries of our county commissioners?

A—Commissioners receive $26,152.21 plus longevity. Longevity is $60 a year per year following the first year.

In Brief

2 of 3 dropped

DALLAS (AP) — Two misdemeanor charges against Dallas County commissioner John Wiley Price have been dropped because the plaintiffs said they no longer are interested in prosecuting him.

The district attorney's office said Dallas television station WFAA-TV and California movie producer Richard Wright signed affidavits of non-prosecution, asking that the cases not be tried.

Price was accused of criminal trespass and misdemeanor assault in connection with unrelated incidents in August of last year.

WFAA said Price was unjustified in entering its studios during a protest of hiring practices on Aug. 1, 1991, but said it and its parent company, A.H. Belo Corp., "are of the view that the trespass prosecution of John Wiley Price would not serve the best interests of the citizens of Dallas."

Wright was involved in a scuffle outside the commissioner's office on Aug. 2, 1991.

Dr. W. Michael Cox will speak at 10:45 a.m. Thursday in WTC's Fine Arts Theatre. The forum is sponsored jointly by WTC and the Snyder Rotary Club. The public is invited and admission is free.

The economic forum will follow a "Meet the Candidates" forum which starts at 9:30 a.m. Sponsors of Dr. Cox's appearance stress that his presentation will be non-political and will focus on the national deficit and the role of the Federal Reserve System.

Dr. Cox is to arrive this afternoon and will be given a tour the Ralph Miller Ranch and he will then tour several Scurry County oilfield facilities. He will be guest at a private dinner this evening, and Thursday morning will have breakfast with officers, directors and employees of Snyder financial institutions at Willow Park Inn.

Advisory council appointees are okayed by hospital board

Cogdell Memorial Hospital board of managers this morning approved appointments to the Foundation Advisory Committee and okayed purchases of equipment and carpet.

Board members approved Jack Smartt for a three-year term on the Foundation Advisory Committee. Smartt replaces Billy Ray Browning, who decided not to serve another term.

The board also approved the reappointment of committee member Jack Denman to a full, three-year term.

In other action, board members authorized $2,078 for carpet in the Family Planning Clinic and some $1,300 for the purchase of a hyfrecator and a liquid nitrogyn tank.

Board member Sue Mize, liaison to the Foundation Advisory Committee, reported that the committee has commitments to renovate 22 patient rooms. Remodeling of one room is expected to be completed soon and will be open for public view during the hospital's Nov. 7 health fair.

After adjourning to a Foundation meeting, board members approved two purchases. The board okayed $700 for some 8,500 memorial contribution envelopes which will be placed into monthly bank statements of Snyder National Bank and West Texas State Bank customers.

Also approved was $2,000 in contributed funds for traction equipment for the physical therapy department.

Board members also heard a positive financial report for September. The hospital had a net income

Freedom for a fee probe is launched

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal investigation has been launched into allegations that former Parole Board Chairman James Granberry took hundreds of dollars from the families of Texas prison inmates by promising freedom for a fee, a Houston newspaper reported today.

The Houston Chronicle quoted prison board sources as saying Tuesday that the investigation involves allegations of influence peddling and corruption by the 59-year-old former Lubbock mayor and 1974 gubernatorial candidate.

Granberry is blamed, in part, for the early release of killer Kenneth McDuff.

Sources said the investigation is being conducted by the U.S. Attorney's office in Waco and that

Local candidates to address public

The public is invited to meet local Democratic and Republican candidates during a forum Thursday morning on the Western Texas College campus.

The event is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. in the Fine Arts Theatre and is sponsored by the WTC Political Science Department.

A question and answer format will be used. Questions will center on duties and responsibilities of the office the candidates seek, individual goals and local government leadership.

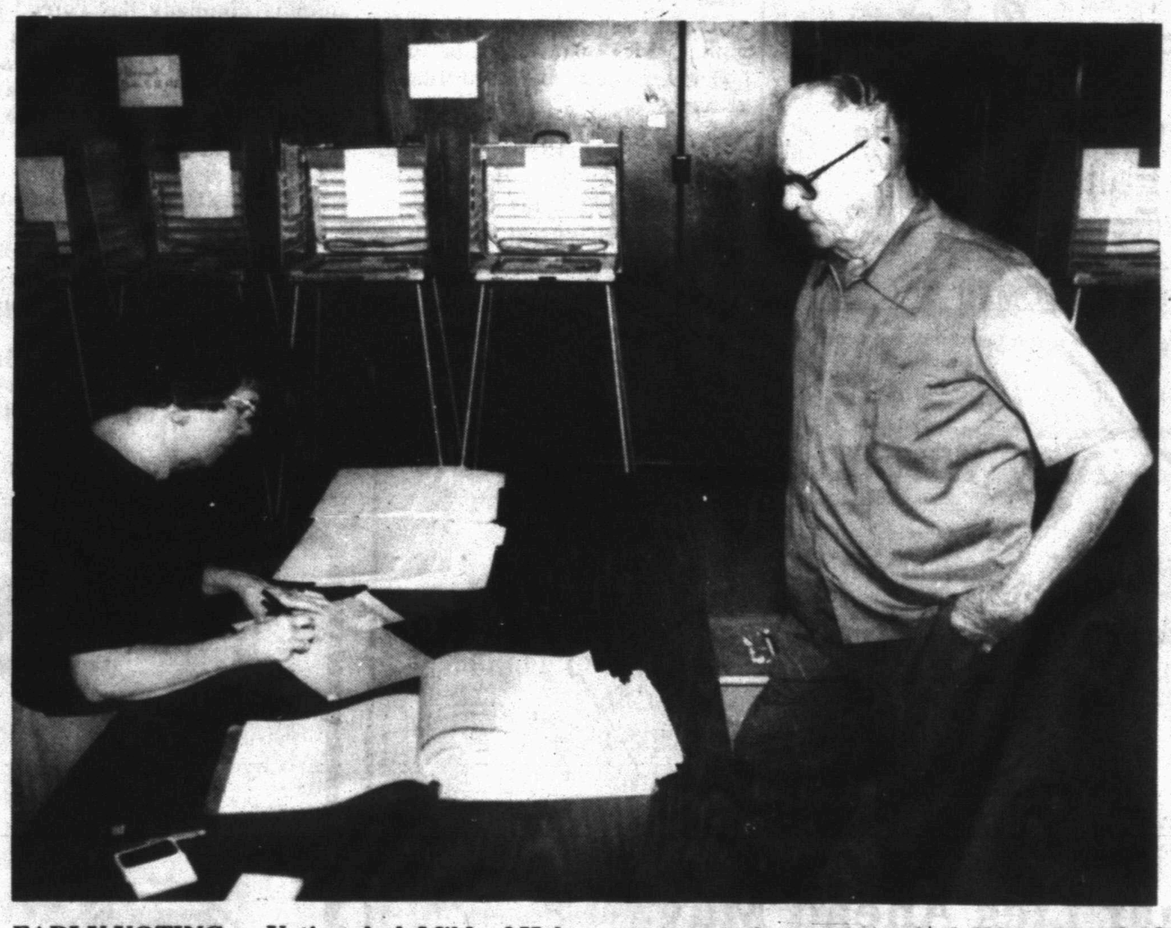

Local races in the November election include that of 132nd District Judge, where Republican incumbent Gene L. Dulaney is being challenged by Democrat Marvin Sentell.

Democratic County Commissioner of Pct. 3, C.D. Gray Jr., is challenged by Republican Eddie Don Floyd, while appointed commissioner Jerry Morgan, a Republican representing Pct. 1, is challenged by Democrat Ralph W. Trevey.

There are two other locally contested races. Democratic incumbent Rona Sikes is facing Republican challenger Modean Riley Konvicka for county tax assessor. Bobby Goodwin, Democrat, and Republican Scott Crenwelge are running to fill a vacancy in the Pct. 1 constable's post.

Local office holders unopposed for re-election include District Attorney Ernie Armstrong, County Attorney Pete Greene and Sheriff Keith Collier.

Marshall Bryant Jr. is a Democratic write-in candidate for Pct. 2 constable, a post which has been vacant since 1977.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Advice is like cooking. The cook needs to try it before feeding it to someone else."

At a recent gathering of preachers, the discussion turned to the best position for prayer. Nearby was a telephone company repairman.

"Kneeling is definitely the best," claimed one minister.

"No," another contended. "I get the best results standing with my hands outstretched toward Heaven."

"You're both wrong," the third preacher insisted. "The most effective prayer position is lying prostrate, face down on the floor."

The repairman could contain himself no longer. "Hey, fellas," he interrupted. "The best prayin' I ever did was hangin' upside down from a telephone pole."

Local sports announcers get pretty excited about the home team, especially when things are going well.

It could have happened to a guy like Joe Fowler or Dr. Charles Church.

We heard about an announcer who got very excited while doing a live broadcast. During a close football game, he had worked himself into a near frenzy, gabbling hysterically into his microphone. It was the second quarter and a play had just ended.

"Uh-oh," said the play-by-play man, "it looks like a penalty. Yes, yes it is. The referee has picked up the ball and he's walking off the distance.

"Five yards, 10 yards, 20, 25 yards. Fans, this is the longest penalty I've ever seen. I can't imagine what the infraction was."

Then were was a moment of silence. Then the embarrassed announcer cleared his throat and continued, "As the first half ends..."

Valuations fall under last year

City building valuations came up a little more than $100,000 short of a year ago as officials closed out the fiscal year last month.

Valuations reflected some $1,018,100 in construction for the year, which runs from October through September. Valuations were $1,125,849 for fiscal 1990-91, or $107,749 more.

Building permits issued during September reflected $5,390 in construction. They included an addition at 321 29th St., owned by Ramon Yanez, a carport at 500 34th St., owned by A.L. Galindo, and a storage area at 1204 29th St., owned by Howard Jones.

Stress may worsen fibromyalgia

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you define fibromyalgia and its prognosis?

DEAR READER: Fibromyalgia, a poorly understood disorder of unknown cause, is characterized by muscular pain, stiffness and tenderness. The condition frequently affects anxious, tense and depressed young women. It may be related to stress and physical strain.

The diagnosis is made by excluding other, similar diseases, such as rheumatoid arthritis.

Fibromyalgia may suddenly disappear without treatment. Or it may become chronic, requiring long-term use of anti-inflammatory drugs, such as Motrin. Nonetheless, the prognosis is favorable because fibromyalgia does not affect vital organs and is not a hazard to health.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I hear different medical views on the role of vitamins in combating or shoring up the body's defenses against chronic illness such as hepatitis. Should a person's diet be augmented by a particular vitamin if she has suffered from past hepatitis infections and if she continues to manifest elevated liver enzyme counts? If so, what particular vitamins would be effective?

DEAR READER: Supplemental or 'megadose' vitamins are not necessary to shore up the body's defenses. Ordinarily, a diet that contains the recommended daily allowances of all the vitamins should suffice. (Studies of vitamins C, E and others are ongoing because these vitamins may have specific roles in treating certain conditions, such as premature arteriosclerosis.)

I'm concerned about two observations in your question.

First, elevated liver enzymes after hepatitis indicate that the liver remains inflamed. This suggests one of the dreaded complications of liver infection: chronic hepatitis, which can lead to cirrhosis and liver failure.

In my opinion, any patient with persisting, elevated liver enzymes should be examined by a gastroenterologist for the purpose of a possible liver biopsy. This test will indicate the severity of the disorder and may provide clues about appropriate treatment.

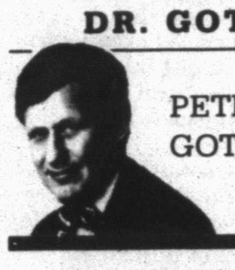

Second, if the person in your question has been self-administering large doses of vitamins, her elevated liver enzymes may be a direct consequence of this impropriety. Excess quantities of vitamin A, niacin and B6 can cause severe liver damage.

In summary, the person with the liver problem should check with a specialist and follow his advice about diet and vitamin supplements.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Fads I — Vitamins and Minerals." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Bentsen pushes for concrete wall to stop erosion

FREEPORT, Texas (AP) — Unless an 8-mile concrete retaining wall is built at Sargent, waters from the Gulf of Mexico can break into the Intracoastal Waterway, spelling economic disaster for Freeport and Texas, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said.

"What we see is a serious vulnerability to transportation," Bentsen said. "If there's a breakthrough on the Intracoastal, you'd have about 20 percent of the traffic of freight in Texas affected.

"You'd have a loss of income of about $20 million a day. So it's absolutely critical. If you had a break in a major storm, there's no way the highway and railway system would be able to supplant what's being taken care of by barge now."

Bentsen toured the Matagorda County coastline by helicopter Tuesday, emphasizing the need for the $67.6 million U.S. Army Corps of Engineers anti-erosion project.

"We're off to a fast start in our efforts to prevent a breach of the barrier but we still have our work cut out in the years ahead," Bentsen said.

Erosion is threatening to wipe away the thin sliver of land that separates the gulf from the waterway.

Encroachment of the waterway would sever barge and ship traffic on the waterway, which handles hundreds of millions dollars worth of cargo in Texas from Brownsville to Beaumont.

"Without the waterway, the Freeport area as we know it would cease to exist," Bentsen said.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is proposing to build the 8-mile-long concrete block retaining wall to halt the erosion.

Over the years, hundreds of yards of beach have fallen victim to the incessant Gulf of Mexico waves, wiping out dozens of barrier island homes and leaving just 200 yards separating the waterway from the gulf at the narrowest point at Sargent, about 30 miles southwest of Freeport.

Officials have estimated erosion takes as much as 70 feet of land a year.

Breaching of the 18-foot-deep waterway would fill it with silt. The canal, which extends all the way east to Florida, also makes it possible for craft to navigate the choppy gulf waters.

The project, recently approved by Congress, still awaits President Bush's signature, although Bentsen said it likely would be signed.

Bentsen cited a Texas A&M University-based Texas Transportation Institute study that estimated as many as 2,700 people would lose their jobs in Freeport and economic losses would reach $900 million annually.

Congress has appropriated the first $1 million of the wall project for preconstruction engineering and design.

Continued erosion could wipe out the barrier island by the turn of the century. Army Corps of Engineers officials say their project could be in place by 1998.

"Based on erosion rates, that's when we feel we must have it in place," said Mike Kieslich, chief of the project management branch of the Corps of Engineers in Galveston.

Funds earmarked for transition if Bush loses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just in case the public opinion polls are right about President Bush's reelection chances, the government already has $5 million waiting to help his successor take over.

Bush himself signed the bill containing the money for his own replacement on Oct. 6.

In providing the money, Bush wasn't betting against his own reelection. He was simply carrying out the terms of a 1964 law that requires the government to provide funds for an orderly presidential transition.

Of the total, $3.5 million is to pay the salaries of the new chief executive's transition team, rent and furnish an office and pay for travel, mail and other related costs.

Richards' ethics adviser aims criticism at Lena Guerrero

AUSTIN (AP) — If Democratic candidate Lena Guerrero wins election to the Texas Railroad Commission, she should step down, Gov. Ann Richards top ethics adviser says.

Barbara Jordan, a former congresswoman, said Ms. Guerrero has failed to adhere to ethical standards that public officials should maintain "and that is a very sad situation."

Ms. Guerrero resigned from the commission after it was revealed that for 12 years she claimed to have a college degree when she never received.

But she has stayed in the race against Republican Barry Williamson, asking voters to forgive her.

Ms. Guerrero was appointed to the post last year by the Democratic governor. Richards also named Ms. Jordan her special ethics adviser.

The governor, in comments during an appearance Tuesday night in Corpus Christi, said the voters will make their feelings known.

"The ultimate arbiters are the voters of Texas. They will decide that, and that's how it should be. I feel so strongly that the place we must turn to is the highest authority, the electorate. And I feel that that's what she (Guerrero) has done," Richards said.

The governor said she talked to Ms. Jordan several weeks ago, after it was reported that Ms. Guerrero didn't have the college credentials that she claimed on her resume and campaign literature.

"I wanted her to be aware of what had just happened," Ms. Richards said.

Asked if she had discussed the Guerrero campaign with Ms. Jordan, the governor said: "I didn't think it was appropriate to influence her thoughts. I thought Barbara should be aware of what had happened."

Asked if she still supports Ms. Guerrero, whom she accompanied around the state in campaign tours before the controversy, Ms. Richards said she voted early.

"I looked down the list and didn't find any attractive alternatives," she said.

Ms. Jordan raised her doubts about Ms. Guerrero during a news conference.

"In my opinion if Lena Guerrero is elected Railroad Commissioner, the high ethical ground position would be for Lena Guerrero to resign that seat and allow the governor to have a new appointment," Ms. Jordan said Tuesday.

In response, Ms. Guerrero said that she respected Ms. Jordan, but believed that she acted properly by resigning her post and seeking election.

"I have placed this matter before the people of Texas," she said.

Her campaign spokesman Chuck McDonald said he was "flabbergasted" by Ms. Jordan's remarks.

On April 21, 1836, an army of Texans led by Sam Houston defeated the Mexicans at San Jacinto, capturing the Mexican leader, Gen. Santa Ana, and assuring the independence of Texas.

Bungee company to abandon project

HOUSTON (AP) — A bungee-jumping company has agreed to abandon a controversial tower it erected near a Houston highway, but it wants the city or complaining neighbors to help pay $50,000 in business losses.

Officials from Air Boingo told city officials Tuesday they had decided to move their business to Phoenix, Ariz. The decision came on the eve of a city council vote on whether to ban bungee-jumping within the city limits.

City Attorney Benjamin Hall said it was unclear whether Air Boingo would be accountable under the new regulation.

City officials had approved a building permit for Air Boingo, which constructed a 67-foot launching tower along a feeder road to the West 610 Loop in southwest Houston. The attraction was scheduled to open Oct. 17.

But area residents complained that the tower would be a distraction to drivers and cause accidents.

Air Boingo is the city's first bungee-jumping facility.

John McLean Jr., site engineer for Air Boingo, said the structure met all building codes and would not present a hazard to drivers. He noted Astroworld also is adjacent to a portion of the 610 Loop.

Canadian bank gets two chicken chains

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Canadian bank that helped Popeyes owner Al Copeland acquire Church's in a $389 million takeover was awarded ownership of both fried chicken chains Tuesday by a federal bankruptcy judge in Austin, Texas.

The ruling by Judge Frank Monroe ended a quest for more than a year by Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce to recoup its $277 million loan to Copeland by reorganizing his fried chicken empire.

Popeyes Famous Fried Chicken and Church's Fried Chicken, which have about 1,900 stores in 35 states, rank together as the No. 2 fast food chicken chain in the United States. KFC, previously known as Kentucky Fried Chicken, is No. 1.

The bankruptcy hearing was in Austin because Al Copeland Enterprises Inc., the parent company of both Popeyes Famous Fried Chicken and Church's Fried Chicken, is headquartered in Texas.

"It's very disappointing, the outcome today. What this means to me is, that after 20 years, I'm out of Popeyes," Copeland said after Tuesday's hearing. "A Canadian bank and people on Wall Street own it now.

"I'm going to develop another concept and go about my business," said Copeland, a high-school dropout with a zeal for speedboat racing.

Monroe turned over Al Copeland Enterprises to its chief creditor, the CIBC. The Canadian bank will continue to operate Popeyes and Church's under the bank's reorganization plan, which is expected to become effective Nov. 4.

CIBC and Merrill Lynch & Co. together loaned Copeland $398 million to buy Church's in March 1989, saddling Copeland with well over $400 million in debt.

The Popeyes-Church's merger bombed, however, when Copeland wasn't able to sell enough restaurants to pay off the debt, and Merrill Lynch failed to place a key $110 million junk bond offering.

The lenders forced Copeland into Chapter 11 bankruptcy in April 1991. Three months later, the banks and Copeland had agreed on a reorganization plan: Copeland would leave the company, but he would get $31 million, at least five restaurants, a company jet and a release for debts he owed to Popeyes.

That deal collapsed in early 1992 when Merrill Lynch decided the company would have still been too burdened with debt to be viable.

Both sides again put forward competing plans. Copeland's would have left him in control.

But Canadian Imperial and Merrill — who had squabbled between themselves — banded together they got the crucial support of Copeland's unsecured creditors committee.

Merrill Lynch had a claim of about $150 million against Copeland. A loan syndicate led by CIBC has a $277 million claim. The difference is that CIBC's loan was backed by collateral, while Merrill Lynch's wasn't.

Under Tuesday's ruling, CIBC will give up $50 million of the $279 million it's still owed, in return for 82 percent of the company's equity; Merrill Lynch will forfeit its entire $150 million debt in return for 18 percent of the equity.

Under the plan, the other unsecured creditors — everyone from napkin suppliers to chicken farms — will get back 85 cents for every dollar the company owes them.

Fast-food consultant Frank Belatti, who will replace Copeland as the company's chief executive officer, said he will decide soon whether to keep its headquarters in New Orleans, where it employs 190 people.

Some observers expect him to move it to his hometown of Atlanta, where he headed up Arby's Inc., until it moved last year to Miami.

"The bank's inention is to stay in the background and let Mr. Belatti run the show," said R. Bruce Layman, CIBC's assistant general manager.

Belatti said little about his plans, except that, "We're going to sell a lot of chicken."

Copeland will continue to receive [illegible] million a year in royalties for his secret recipes, and he has a contract — through another company of his — to supply spices and seasonings to the chain through 2004.

The trifle was expensive

By Phillip Alder

We have all heard about the person who, according to the Bard, would "throw away the dearest thing he owned, as 'twere a careless trifle." Well, on today's deal the critical card isn't the most powerful in declarer's hand, but not playing it at the right moment cost him dear. Which card is it?

Since his partner had passed, South was confident they didn't have a slam available. So he wisely pre-empted to the maximum with four spades. As the vulnerability was unfavorable and his partner had not bid, West chose to pass. However, note that East-West, with a good guess in diamonds, can make five hearts.

West attacked with his two top hearts. South ruffed the second high, drew trumps, played a club to dummy's ace and led another club. However, East won with the club queen and switched to the diamond queen, netting two diamond tricks for the defense and four in all.

That diamond suit should have sounded alarm bells in declarer's head. He should have strained to keep East off the lead.

The key play is to throw away a club at trick two. Suppose West switches to his trump. Declarer wins in hand with an honor, plays a club to dummy's ace and ruffs a club high in hand. He returns to dummy by overtaking the spade five with dummy's seven, and ruffs another club high. When clubs split 3-3, declarer re-enters dummy by overtaking his spade six, and throws his two low diamonds on the established five and six of clubs.

Only a bad club break would force declarer, as a last resort, to play East for the diamond ace.

Prosecutor scolds jury after man is acquitted

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Jurors who found a Seguin man innocent of capital murder but convicted him on a charge of driving the victim's car without her permission have been scolded by an angry prosecutor.

Assistant District Attorney James Kopp criticized jurors Tuesday during final arguments before they voted to place Gregory Watson, 20, on probation for 10 years for driving the car owned by Cheryl Ann Phinney, 17, of Converse.

Watson had been tried on a charge of capital murder in Phinney's Sept. 24, 1991, slaying.

Kopp said the acquittal left him "disappointed and mad."

"That proves to me I still care what happens to people in the community," Kopp said. "I have a clear conscience. When you people leave the courtroom today, I hope you can say the same."

Jurors deliberated about four hours Monday before acquitting Watson of capital murder and such lesser offenses as aggravated sexual assault, robbery and kidnapping. They did find Watson guilty of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, a third-degree felony that carries a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison.

Phinney, a Judson High School senior, was shot nine times at an isolated spot between Converse and Universal City after Gregory Watson and Lenox Boone Watson, 17, also of Seguin, hitchhiked a ride with her at a convenience store.

The girl's body, nude from the waist down, was found near a railroad underpass in Bexar County.

Lenox Watson's mother, Carolyn Watson, testified she turned him in to police after she heard him say he and Gregory Watson, who are not related, killed the girl.

Lenox Watson pleaded guilty to capital murder and received a life prison sentence. Under a law that went into effect a year ago, he must serve 35 years before being eligible for parole.

Lenox Watson testified both he and Gregory killed and robbed the girl, with Gregory Watson firing the first shots.

Gregory Watson testified he didn't know Lenox planned to kill the girl and didn't take part in the slaying.

Kopp told jurors they apparently ignored testimony of several state's witnesses that linked Gregory Watson to Phinney's murder.

"You just chose to believe the defendant's story. That's your decision. Lenox came in and said, 'I did it. I plead guilty.'" Kopp said. "Well, the joke's on Lenox because he's doing 35 years for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle."

Court-appointed defense lawyer Paul Goeke asked the jury to grant probation to Gregory Watson. He said Judge Susan Reed would make sure Watson was closely supervised.

Coaches tab Iglehart as week's top honoree

When Snyder head football coach David Baugh was announcing this week's award winners for their efforts in Friday night's 24-6 win over Lubbock Estacado, one name kept popping up.

It was the name of senior defensive tackle Todd Iglehart, who won awards for two sacks and two hurries of EHS quarterback Zebbie Lethridge and for two tackles behind the line of scrimmage.

Iglehart was also named the recipient of the week's Big Hit Award for his play on the defensive line.

Awards, helmet decals, were handed out at Tuesday's team meeting at the SHS fieldhouse.

Other awardees instrumental in limiting the potent Matador offense to just 161 total yards were leading tackler Charles Richardson, who posted six-and-a-half tackles, as well as taking honors for a hurry, Wayland Harrison, who notched a sack and a tackle behind the line, Lionel Aviles, who registered a QB trap and a tackle for a loss, and Jeff Armstrong, who hurried Lethridge from his DL spot.

In addition, Snyder's defense, on pace to break the school interception record, stole two Estacado passes.

Senior corner Barretta Collins snagged a steal, as did Harrison from his linebacker position.

Collins also caused a fumble that was recovered by SHS sophomore John Clinkinbeard. Matt Cave had a fumble recovery for the Tigers, as well.

Clinkinbeard and Michael Humphrey were also cited for knocking down EHS pass attempts.

Offensive awards centered around the line, which allowed the Tigers to rush for 197 yards.

Center Brian Lickey and Richardson, a guard, had 13 knockdowns apiece to share the team lead that category. Each also had a pair of pins.

Tackle Jimmy Henry was credited with 11 knockdowns, five drives, that is pushing an opposing tackler five yards off the line of scrimmage, and three pins. Brad Hart, playing guard, managed 10 knockdowns and two pins.

Other awardees from the offensive line included tight ends Robert McDorman and Chris Stansell, who had 11 and 10 knockdowns, respectively.

Senior tailback Ben Wilson, who went over the 500-yard mark in rushing for the season Friday, added nine knockdowns blocking from the backfield.

As a team, the Tigers posted 107 knockdowns for the game, five drives and a dozen pins.

Hart, Lickey, Krenek and Wilson shared the Earhole Award, given for standout blocking on kick returns. The quartet was also recognized by the SHS coaching staff for outstanding kick coverage.

The entire Tiger kick-off team won awards for trapping an Estacado returner inside the 20-yard line, and for executing an onside kick that led to Snyder's first TD of the game.

Kicker J. Parker, holder Jim Pat Griffin and long snapper Lickey captured awards for three consecutive point-after kicks and a 37-yard field goal. Parker was also a winner for averaging 35 yards a punt on four kicks.

District 2-4A volleyball...

Lady Tigers trim Levelland

LEVELLAND — Snyder's Lady Tigers did what they set out to do Tuesday. They not only claimed a District 2-4A volleyball win over Levelland, they were able to do it in two games, making it their first sweep of a loop squad this year.

"We had been letting up a little in second games," said SHS coach Patty Grimmett. "Our goal was to win and win in two games.

"It was good for the girls to keep that momentum going from the first game.

"The girls really played well," Grimmett continued. "They played good rally ball. We had some really long rallies, especially in the first game.

"We stayed under total control, we talked and communicated on the court, and we only missed three serves the whole match.

"Our blocking was good," the coach added, "and we played great defensively.

"Levelland played a good match," she said. "They picked up everything we sent over. They've improved a lot."

After cruising through Game 1, The Lady Tigers fell behind in the second game, 5-1. Tenacious defense and accurate serving put them in a position to win at the end of the game.

Joellen King and Lynette Sears aced the final two points for Snyder.

In all, Snyder ripped eight aces on the night, three by Sears, who finished with five points, two by King, who served seven points, and one each from Melanie Duncan, who led Snyder servers with nine from the line, Stephanie Fambro, who had a total of five, and Melody Sargent, who scored two.

Karri Blackledge rounded out the offensive effort with one service point.

The Lady Tigers are now 13-13 overall and 3-1, just one game off the pace of Lamesa, in the district race. Levelland slips to 13-13 in all games and 1-3 in loop outings.

In other action Tuesday, Lamesa needed three games to down Estacado, 15-2, 3-15, 15-5. The league-leading Lady Tors are 17-6 for the campaign and 4-0 in 2-4A matches. Estacado is 2-14 and 0-4.

Snyder returns to the floor Saturday when the Lady Tigers host Estacado in JV and varsity matches, beginning at 2 p.m.

The final match of the regular season matches up the SHS spikers against two-time loop champ Lamesa on Thursday, Oct. 29, there.

WTC golfers to play in Denton tournament

Coach Milton Ham's young WTC Westerner golf team will return to the links with an appearance at the Herb Farrell Invitational Golf Tournament Thursday and Friday.

The 36-hole tourney will be played at the North Texas University course in Denton.

The Westerners slipped in their last outing, the Odessa Wrangler Invitational, finishing 16th in a field of 17, Oct. 5 and 6, after claiming second at the season-opening Texas A&M Invitational, and sixth place at the Midland-Odessa Invitational in Ruidoso, N.M.

Ham's squad shot a team total 972 at Mission Dorado Golf Club in Odessa, led by freshman Chris Rogers' 81-78-78--237. Mike Torres had the Westerners' top individual score at Odessa with his first-round 76. The WTC sophomore added a 77 in the second round and then an 87 to wind up at 240 for the event.

Rogers and Torres, both from Sweetwater, lead the list of qualifiers for WTC at the Denton tourney. Also making the trip for Ham are sophomores Corey Adams of San Angelo, and Carrollton's Brent Tignor and freshman Neal Ray Davis from Wheeler.

Still to go on the Westerners' fall slate are tournaments in Texarkana, Ark. and Dennis.

UIL council approves girls on football teams

AUSTIN (AP) — Thirteen-year-old Adrian Evans doesn't know if she wants to play high school football, but she believes that she and other girls should have the chance to try out.

Adrian, an eighth grade tackle on the Lamar middle school team in Austin, said Tuesday she is happy that state officials recommended allowing girls to play high school football.

The proposal was adopted 16-4 by the University Interscholastic League Legislative Council. The State Board of Education will probably consider it early next year.

If approved by the board, girls could try out for their high school squads Aug. 1, 1993.

Monte Hasie of Lubbock, an Education Board member who serves as liaison to the UIL, said he believes the proposal will pass.

"I have heard that other states have approved this and it has not created any problems, and there has been no particular impact on the sport itself," he said.

The thought of a girl playing high school football, however, does bother Hasie, he said. "For my daughter, I wouldn't want that, but apparently some parents do."

Girls were banned from playing high school football by the UIL in 1949 after one girl played in a boys' varsity football game in the Texas Panhandle community of Stinnett.

Now, many school officials and coaches say changing the rule would not make that much of a difference and to deny girls the right to try out would invite costly legal battles.

Adrian Evans' coach, Ray Torres, says several girls have played on his teams since the UIL allowed girls to play on junior high squads in the 1984-85 season.

"If they can cut it, they'll play," Torres said. Generally, when girls first show up for practice, the boys don't want to hit them, but that changes when the girls work aggressively in drills, he said.

However, he said, the middle school policy is to allow anyone who tries out to play on the team. In high school, he said, that will not be be the case.

Terrence Todd, a former national weightlifting and powerlifting champion who teaches at the University of Texas-Austin, said he feels some girls could play high school football, but not many.

More than most sports, football demands physical qualities suited to men, such as explosive power and vertical leaping ability, he said.

But, he added, that conventional theories 50 years ago against women participating in sports have been proven "hogwash."

He said that girls probably would get the most out of football if they were playing against other girls.

Snyder frosh top Levelland

LEVELLAND — Snyder's freshmen hammered out a 15-6, 9-15, 15-10 volleyball victory Tuesday over the Levelland Loboettes.

"I was really proud of the girls," said SHS coach Robin Turner. "They played well. They've come a long way since the beginning of the season.

"We played through a lot of rallies in the first game," Turner reported. "We set up and hit really well. We had a little trouble receiving the serve in the second game, but we got after it and won the third."

Lindsey Griffin led the Lady Tigers' charge with 10 points served, including five aces. Jodi White was at the line for nine, including an ace, Trisha McGrew added eight and a pair of aces, Sterling Cave aced two serves and finished with five points, Kelly Kallemeyn had an ace and six points and Kelly Clay wound up with one point on an ace.

The SHS frosh will entertain Abilene Cooper Monday at 5:30 p.m.

JV spikers get by LHS

LEVELLAND — Snyder's JV escaped Levelland Tuesday, with a harder-than-expected 9-15, 15-9, 15-11 junior varsity volleyball win.

"It was nice to be able to have an off game and still get out with a win," said SHS JV coach Matt Garrett.

Brandy Robertson scored 17 service points for Snyder and Angela Cox added 10.

The Lady Tigers, now 21-5 on the year and 4-0 against district opponents, will play their final home match of the season Saturday against Estacado.

Included in their thousands of victories, the New York Yankees also won four games by forfeit.

3-2 win gives Jays Series lead

Maldonado gets clutch ninth-inning single for Toronto

TORONTO (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays lost their reputation for blowing big games. Jeff Reardon found it.

A topsy-turvy World Series took another crazy turn Tuesday night when baseball's all-time saves leader allowed his second straight game-losing hit to a team known for prime-time problems.

Reardon hung a two-strike breaking ball and Candy Maldonado drove a bases-loaded liner in the bottom of the ninth. It sailed over center fielder Otis Nixon's head, and Reardon hung his as Toronto beat the Atlanta Braves 3-2 for a 2-1 Series lead.

"I'm doing the best I can," Reardon said. "It's just not working out."

Jimmy Key gets his first start of this postseason in Game 4 tonight against Tom Glavine, who pitched a four-hitter in Atlanta's 3-1 opening win.

"We're all pulling together because we want to win this thing," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said. "We make some mistakes, but everybody does."

Like Reardon.

"It's come at a bad time and it's not easy to live with," he said.

Reardon set the saves record with Boston in June. But he became inconsistent and the Red Sox traded him on Aug. 30.

The Blue Jays won Game 2 5-4 when Ed Sprague cracked a two-run pinch homer off Reardon in the top of the ninth.

On Tuesday night, the Blue Jays set a record of homering in nine straight postseason games when Joe Carter gave them a 1-0 lead with a solo shot in the fourth. But they fell behind 2-1 before rallying for runs in the last two innings.

"We've been known as the comeback Jays," Kelly Gruber said. "That's an attitude we're pretty proud of."

Atlanta tied the score with Da-

Gruber's then tied the game 2-2 with a solo homer in the eighth.

Roberto Alomar led off with a ninth-inning single against Steve vid Justice's run-scoring single in the sixth. Lonnie Smith had a run-scoring single in the eighth.

Avery. Mark Wohlers came in to pitch.

"I put Jeff in a bad spot and I guess it was a little too tough to come out of," said Avery, who struck out nine and allowed just five hits and one walk but took the loss.

With the count 2-0 on Carter, Alomar stole second, a gamble that changed the entire inning. It forced Wohlers to walk Carter intentionally and set up a sacrifice situation with Dave Winfield, known more for his power than his bunting ability.

"I'm not going to bunt for hits," he said, "but we're trying to win this game."

He laid down a perfect bunt, only the 19th in his 19 big-league seasons. Lefty Mike Stanton replaced Wohlers and Sprague, hitting for lefty John Olerud, was walked intentionally..

In came righty Reardon to pitch to righty Maldonado.

"I told Candy way before they started walking people (and) bringing in pitchers he was going to be the man," Gaston said. "You could just see it developing."

Maldonado drove the ball over the drawn-in outfield.

The Braves blew numerous scoring opportunities, including one that nearly ended in a triple play.

In the fourth, they had runners at first and second with no outs on singles by Deion Sanders and Terry Pendleton. Justice hit a blast to center that Devon White hauled in with a leap at the wall.

Pendleton was called out for passing Sanders on the basepaths. Gruber ran Sanders back to second and appeared to tag him on the heel for the second triple play in Series history.

But umpire Bob Davidson called Sanders safe.

"That was the play that turned the game around," Braves manager Bobby Cox said.

In the eighth, Justice was on first when Smith singled home Nixon. Justice tried to reach third, but Maldonado threw him out by several feet. The Braves still led 2-1, but they needed more after Gruber homered.

In the ninth, Sid Bream singled and Brian Hunter ran for him. Pat Borders threw him out trying to steal on a pitch on which the umpires ruled Jeff Blauser had gone around for a third strike. Cox threw a helmet onto the field and was ejected.

AI data highlights abuse of children

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International today condemned governments all over the world for killing and torturing children, and sharply criticized American states for executing people for crimes they committed as juveniles.

An Amnesty report released today, "Innocence Betrayed: Human Rights Violations against Children and Young People," describes the arrest of a six-year-old in India, and vigilante squads murdering Brazilian street kids.

It also recounts the tale of a 16-year-old Kurdish girl who died in Turkish police custody, half her head shot away.

"Some children are deliberately targeted for human rights abuses because they are seen as social or political threats, others have been detained or tortured in order to force surrender or confession from their parents," the report says.

The London-based human rights group, which condemns capital punishment in all circumstances, said: "A handful of governments continue to impose the ultimate form of cruel and inhuman punishment (capital punishment) on children."

It said that over the past 10 years, five people were executed in the United States for crimes they committed as children, more than in any other country.

Amnesty cited the February execution by the state of Texas of Johnny Frank Garrett, who was 28 when he was killed.

Death penalty opponents, including Pope John Paul II, had pleaded for mercy for Garrett, convicted of raping and murdering a nun when he was 17. Lawyers had argued that Garrett was driven insane by sexual and physical abuse he endured as a child.

The Amnesty report says that in some countries, extreme poverty forces children onto city streets to fend for themselves.

"Street children are automatically regarded as criminal suspects by many law enforcement officers and are often subjected to harassment, threats or violent attacks .... Children in India ... as young as six have been arrested and tortured," it says.

It says that in June 1989, 11 young children and teenagers from slums in New Delhi were detained on suspicion of theft.

"Munni, a 13-year-old girl, was stripped naked and beaten and one 12-year-old boy was given electric shocks and beaten with a leather belt. Another boy was stripped, hung upside down from the ceiling and beaten until he fell unconscious," Amnesty said.

The youngest children, including a six-year-old boy, were released the next morning, the report says.

The report says police denied responsibility for the children's injuries, saying the children were roughed up by a family whose goods were stolen.

U.N. nuclear inspector: U.S. technology used to help Iraq build atomic weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former head of United Nations nuclear inspections in Iraq is disputing President Bush's statement that no U.S. technology was used in that country's atomic weapons development program.

"There was U.S. equipment there and certainly U.S. technology," David A. Kay said today on the NBC's "Today."

"There is no disputing that there was technology and equipment from other countries as well, far more than from the United States," added Kay. "All industrial countries supplied equipment to Saddam's program."

Kay led three nuclear inspections in Iraq after the Persian Gulf War.

He was quoted by the Center for Security Policy, a conservative research group, as saying Tuesday that "U.S.-manufactured equipment and nuclear technology were found as components of Iraq's nuclear program."

Kay cited as examples electron-beam welding machines made in the United States that U.N. inspectors discovered at Iraqi nuclear development sites, the research group said in a news release.

Bush made the statement in Monday night's presidential debate in response to charges by Bill Clinton and Ross Perot that his administration had coddled Iraqi President Saddam Hussein before the Gulf War.

"The nuclear capability has been searched by the United Nations, and there hasn't been one single scintilla of evidence that there's any U.S. technology involved in it," the president said.

"And what you're seeing on all this 'Iraqgate' is a bunch of people who were wrong on the war trying to cover their necks and try to do a little revisionism. And I cannot let that stand, because it isn't true," Bush said.

Democrats in Congress have blasted the administration for months for what they say was a dangerous policy of supporting Saddam before the Gulf War.

The U.S. aid to Iraq included sales of advanced technology. Under Presidents Reagan and Bush, the Commerce Department gave U.S. companies permission to sell Iraq some $1.5 billion in technology with potential military uses from 1985 until Iraq invaded Kuwait in August 1990.

Guard found unconscious at nuclear plant

GLEN ROSE, Texas (AP) — A security guard was found unconscious and without her gun early today at the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant, an official said.

"The plant is secure at this point," said Texas Utilities Electric Co. spokesman Mark Manroe. Her weapon has since been recovered, Manroe said.

An "unusual event," the lowest of four categories of nuclear plant emergencies, was declared at 4:51 a.m. because of the security incident, Manroe said. The plant was back operating under normal conditions by 8:47 a.m., he said.

The Somervell County sheriff's department has been called in to help investigate. Employees at the plant were being interviewed by authorities, said Jerry Lee, TU spokesman.

Manroe said the guard was found in the Unit 1 turbine building, a non-nuclear area.

The guard regained consciousness and was taken to Glen Rose Harris-Methodist Hospital, where she was being treated for emotional shock, Lee said. No other details on her condition were available.

Manroe declined to release her name.

He didn't have further details on the incident, including whether there was an intruder. A woman answering the telephone at the sheriff's department confirmed the department had been contacted but declined to give details or to identify herself.

A planned shutdown at Unit 1 for routine maintenance and refueling was scheduled for Thursday. Manroe said it would go on as scheduled.

Unit 2 remains under construction.

Trial of alleged serial killer expected to last 6-8 weeks

DALLAS (AP) — The trial of a 35-year-old convicted rapist charged with capital murder in the deaths of six girls and women whose bodies were found in shallow desert graves five years ago near El Paso began today.

Prosecuting attorney Karen Shook told jurors that evidence showed that David Leonard Wood was actually acquainted with some of his victims, all between the ages of 14 and 24.

Shook said Wood used a red motorcycle and a beige pickup truck to transport his victims to the shallow grave site.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys took five weeks to pare 170 prospective jurors to the final panel of six men, six women and two alternates for the Wood's trial.

Defense attorney Dolph Quijano Jr., told the jury that a "media blitz" put pressure on El Paso law enforcement officials to quickly identify a suspect once the women's bodies began disappearing.

He said law enforcement officials ignored evidence that appeared to clear Wood, opting instead to "get somebody and stick these cases on."

"At the end of this, you're not going to know who killed those women, but you will know that David Wood didn't," Quijano said.

Prosecuting attorneys began calling witnesses this morning and were expected to continue through the afternoon.

The trial was moved to Dallas because of extensive news coverage the border city.

Wood is charged with killing Ivy Susanna Williams, 23; Desiree Wheatley, 15; Karen Baker, 20; Angelica Frausto, 17; Rosa Maria Casio, 24; and Dawn Marie Smith, 14.

Officials described most of the victims as either runaways or young women with troubled lives.

Wood, who had been raised in El Paso, has been in and out of prison several times on sex-related times.

Countdown for shuttle launch on Thursday reported going well

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown for Thursday's launch of space shuttle Columbia moved into the final hours, and everything, even the weather, seemed to be going NASA's way.

"It's been a very clean countdown," shuttle test director Mike Leinbach said today.

During the 10-day mission, Columbia's six astronauts will release into orbit the Laser Geodynamics Satellite, which is covered with 426 prisms that will reflect laser beams fired at it from Earth.

By measuring the round-trip travel time of the light pulses, geologists hope to chart the slow, inches-a-year movement of the continents. Such movement contributes to earthquakes and the formation of mountains.

Forecasters today put the chances of good weather for the 11:16 a.m. EDT liftoff at 70 percent. The only concern was high wind.

The crew will also test a Canadian robotic vision system that uses TV cameras and computers to give astronauts better control of the shuttle arm.

The Italian Space Agency built the 900-pound satellite using blueprints provided by NASA. Italy also made the satellite's booster.

Today's launch preparations were to include the loading of 12 rats, protein crystals and cells. Six of the rats were injected with an experimental osteoporosis drug; the others will be untreated so researchers can compare bone loss in space.

Probe

prison system internal affairs investigators are assisting in the probe.

Bill Johnston, the U.S. attorney in Waco, told the newspaper he could neither confirm nor deny the existence of an investigation.

Granberry, who resigned from the parole board in May 1991 and immediately went into the parole consulting business, reportedly got parole staff members to provide him with lists of prisoners being considered for parole.

The former officials would then contact the prisoners' families, promising them he could assure the inmates' release if they hired him as a consultant, the sources said.

One source said the investigation showed Granberry had bilked parents of prisoners out of fees ranging from $500 to $2,000 in cases where the prisoners were almost assured of being paroled anyway.

It is unclear whether there is evidence of other prisoners being released who might not have been freed without Granberry's help or whether some inmates were denied parole because they couldn't afford the consulting fee.

Sources also said another aspect being investigated is whether parole staff members provided the confidential list of proposed parolees, knowing Granberry's alleged intentions.

In some instances, sources said, Granberry's promises of freedom for a price may have been made while he was still chairman of the 18-member parole board, composed of political appointees. Granberry was appointed to the board in May 1989 by Gov. Bill Clements and became chairman the following January.

Granberry could not be located for comment, and his Austin attorney, Herman Gotcher, did not return the newspaper's telephone calls.

Dukakis, Mondale know how Bush and Quayle are feeling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Far behind and running out of time. Michael Dukakis and Walter Mondale remember the feeling well — and the decisions it brings.

"You have a chance to show the American people your better side, your most responsible side," says Mondale, the 1984 Democratic presidential nominee who lost 49 states. "And win or lose, that's what the American people will remember about you."

Dukakis, buried in President Bush's 1988 landslide, recalls that the polls and impending defeat can seem distant when you're the candidate. "You just get out there and you dig hard," says the man who sat for satellite television interviews on election night, trying to win a few more votes. "You know in a couple of weeks it's going to be over and you can rest then."

It's been nearly three decades, dating to Barry Goldwater's campaign in 1964, since Republicans faced the predicament now confronting Bush. He is down by 15 points in most polls, the nationally televised debates are over, and only two weeks remain until Election Day.

So there's not exactly a GOP play book at the ready for losing strategies, even if Bush wanted to turn to it.

He doesn't, of course. Like Mondale, Dukakis and underdogs everywhere, he and his aides insist the race is tightening, that an upset is in the making.

"Forget all these polls, forget people telling you how you think," Bush urged a crowd on Tuesday in Norcross, Ga. "I am confident, in my heart of hearts," he said later.

It may be tightening at this late date, but history suggests otherwise.

And the Democrats who have had practice at this sort of thing in the past say there are some decisions to be made:

— The man at the top of the ticket has to be concerned about those seeking lesser offices.

— He must balance his determination to fight hard to the end against the judgment of history if the race appears unwinnable.

— Work to the end, and never, ever, admit defeat.

"We're rocking and rolling, he's slipping and sliding," Dukakis said in the final days of his campaign. Neither was true, but it steadied the faithful.

"You have to be concerned with the campaign epitaph," says Leslie Dach, who was Dukakis' communications director. "In both 1984 and 1988 the campaign epitaph says the candidates found their voices, and they were positive voices."

Did anyone in the inner circle ever tell Dukakis or Mondale they were going to lose?

"You're not sitting around being introspective," says Dukakis. "That's not your job and the job of the people around you."

Recalls Mondale, "They didn't need to. You could see it in their eyes."

He added in a recent telephone interview, "I knew and they knew. It's up to you to keep the energy level and issues before the public so there's not a collapse. It's not just you, it's all the other candidates around the country."

Bob Beckel, a top aide to Mondale and now a political consultant [illegible], says that can produce awkward moments.

"Near the end, we were not going out after the undecided voters," he said, recalling a tacit acknowledgement of defeat. "We were going after our base," the customary Democratic voters whose support other candidates needed to win their own races.

Like Bush these days, Mondale had to be sympathetic if other members of his own party wanted to keep their distance. "If guys want to disengage from you, you don't give them a hard time about it," Beckel said. "They've got to worry about their own races."

In the final days of his race, Dukakis, too, stressed his commitment to traditional Democratic issues of economic security for blue collar workers and the party's liberal tradition. "We probably saved some House and Senate seats," recalls John Sasso, a top aide to Dukakis.

Beckel said Mondale pursued a similar strategy. "He preached Democratic theme music," the veteran strategist recalled. He said Mondale picked up five percentage points in the final days of the campaign, and without it, "we would have taken a lot of guys (to defeat) with us."

Legal profession targeted by judge

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Too many people try to interpret the Constitution to mean whatever they want it to mean, Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia says.

Speaking at an informal student workshop at Lamar University, Scalia defined himself Tuesday as a "textualist" rather than a strict constructionalist.

"The Constitution isn't something we take a vote on," he said.

Scalia, 56, appointed to the nation's high court in 1986 by President Reagan, told the students his job as a Supreme Court justice is not to decide which laws should be on the books, but to interpret the Constitution and laws written by Congress.

"I don't care what the framers (of the constitution) intent was, just as I do not care what Congress meant when it passed a statute. I care about what the statute says.

"Jurists are not supposed to have policy views. When you take the oath you become a policy eunuch," he said.

Rain needed for wheat and variety of small grain crops

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Dry fall weather that has cheated wheat and small grain crops out of much-needed moisture shows few signs of letting up this week, according to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Upper-level high pressure has been more dominant this fall than usual," said Dr. Mickey Flynn, meteorologist at the Southwest Agricultural Weather Service in College Station.

Flynn said high pressure will bring fair weather and above-normal temperatures for most of the state this week.

"A weak upper-level disturbance will be triggering showers over West Texas and the Rolling Plains," Flynn said.

However, he said, any rainfall the regions may see will be minimal.

Flynn said temperatures should be four to eight degrees above normal, with a high near 80 degrees for the Panhandle and in the mid- to upper 80s for the Valley.

A forecast for warm weather is good news for Rolling Plains cotton producers who are still hoping to have a good cotton crop.

"Several more warm days are needed to provide the heat units necessary for development of bolls set during the last week of August and early September," said Robert Lemon, Extension agronomist in Vernon.

"Considering the mid- to late-June planting date across the region, the cotton crop is in surprisingly good condition with a potential average yield of 300 pounds. Harvest aid chemicals are being applied to both irrigated and dryland fields, and yields appear very good."

However, Lemon said, no rain for small grains producers was reported in the Rolling Plains, although another cool front passed through the region last week.

Meteorologist Flynn said the rain associated with last week's front was limited to the eastern third of the state, leaving the rest of Texas dry.

Southwest Texas producers who have needed rain for forage production report they've run out of time.

"Only about 40 days remain before the average first killing frost," said Jose Pena, Extension economist in Uvalde. "That's not enough time to produce sufficient forage, even if it rains now."

Pena said cool weather and a forecast for an early cold winter are causing concerns about the availability of sufficient overwintering forage.

"Only about half of the oats and a fifth of the wheat have been planted because of dry weather," he said. "Even though some subsoil moisture is available, there is not sufficient surface moisture to germinate the seed."

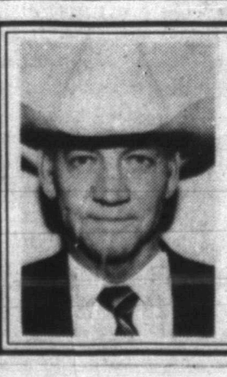

However, what may be bad for one crop may be good for another, and that's certainly the case with cotton production in the Panhandle.

"Cotton is looking better every day," said Tim Trimble, Donley County Extension agent. "We've got a lot of bolls opening up, and it has the potential of being a high-quality crop."

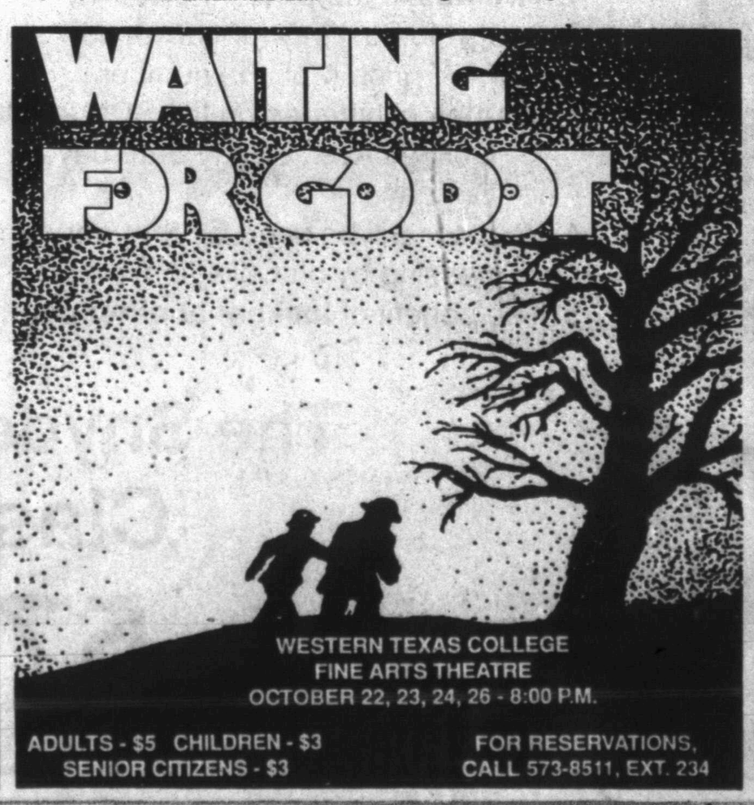

Although cotton producers may be looking forward to the approaching harvest, Trimble said, weather conditions have not been ideal for some peanut producers. Forty to sixty mile-per-hour winds last week blew away part of the peanut crop, and dry soil conditions make it difficult to dig the dryland peanuts.

"We'll probably see some aflatoxin because it's been so dry," Trimble said.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1992 Universal Press Syndicate

Stepmother Is Frosted By Son's Cold Shoulder

DEAR ABBY: "Gary" and I have been married for six years. This is my first marriage and his second. Gary has three children from his first marriage. They live with their mother in another state, but come to visit their father and me during summer vacations.

"Todd," the eldest, has never accepted me because he had always hoped that his parents would get back together. (I had nothing to do with the breakup.) When his father married me, Todd's hopes were shattered.

He is now 17, and when he visits, he never even says hello to me. When I mentioned this to Gary, he said, "The divorce really affected Todd."

Abby, I've bent over backward trying to get Todd to like me, but it's hopeless. I get along very well with his siblings. The problem: Todd wants to go to college here, and Gary wants him to live with us while he's attending college. I am so depressed at the thought of having Todd here for the next four years, I can't handle it.

I told Gary how I feel, but he says he can't turn his back on his son, and he can't afford to put him up on campus. Please tell me what to do.

CAN'T COPE ANYMORE

DEAR CAN'T COPE: This is an assignment for your husband. He must tell Todd that if he is to stay with you, he'd better start behaving like a man.

He doesn't have to like you, but he should treat you with respect, which includes saying "hello." And since Todd will be living with you for four years, there should be a clear understanding about the house rules.

Who will clean Todd's room? Who will do his laundry? Is there a curfew?

A suggestion: To assure no misunderstandings, everything should be in writing.

DEAR ABBY: This is for people who have a hard time sleeping with their mates. I was one.

"Harold" and I slept spoon fashion with his head between my shoulder blades. He snored like a lion, and his legs jerked involuntarily all night. (I was often kicked.) He also kept moving to my side of the bed until his head was on the middle of my pillow, his body was stretched across the bed, and his feet were in the bottom corner of my side. This left me a tiny triangular space to sleep in. I often found myself hanging onto the edge of the mattress to keep from falling off the bed.

Any mention of getting twin beds was a blow to Harold's pride. ("What would people think?" he asked in all seriousness.)

After he fell asleep, I tried going into another room, but he'd wake up and come looking for me — angry, too, for "leaving" him. Then we'd argue until dawn.

Finally, desperate, and thinking he needed more room than we had in a double bed, I bought twin beds and pushed them together. This home-style version of a queen- or king-sized bed solved part of the problem.

There was a crack between the two mattresses, and when Harold inched over to my side in his sleep, he'd feel the crack, fear he was about to fall off the bed, then he'd move back to his side. After that, I got the sleep I needed (though he still snored). Our fights decreased, and we had many happy years before the good Lord called him home.

DEAR WIDOW: Thanks for a lovely bedtime story.

DEAR READERS: Who said: "A successful man is one who makes more money than his wife can spend, and a successful woman is one who can find such a man"? Helen Gurley Brown? Zsa Zsa Gabor? Joan Rivers?

The answer: None of the above. Credit Lana Turner.

Kasten compares himself to Clinton

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Republican Sen. Robert Kasten Jr. is comparing himself to Democrat Bill Clinton while hammering his opponent on crime and taxes — a strategy that has pulled Kasten from a distant second to a virtual tie in his Senate re-election bid.

That strategy also has included a Kasten campaign survey on crime that mentions serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer alongside Kasten's opponent, state Sen. Russell Feingold.

"On taxes, I am closer to Clinton than Feingold is," Kasten said during a debate last week with Feingold, the underdog who won the Democratic primary by a landslide.

With President Bush trailing in the polls with less than two weeks left until the election, Kasten is not the only GOP candidate trying to grab Democratic coattails. Last weekend, another vulnerable GOP senator, Alfonse D'Amato of New York, said he was closer to Clinton on some issues than his opponent, Robert Abrams.

Kasten, a two-term conservative Republican, has tried to tie himself to other prominent Senate Democrats, including New York's Daniel P. Moynihan, Texas' Lloyd Bentsen and Wisconsin's Herb Kohl.

Kasten says he and Kohl have worked together on various issues. Maybe so, but Kohl has endorsed Feingold.

While earlier polls showed Feingold with a hefty lead of 20 points or more, the latest survey in The Milwaukee Journal showed the Democrat leading by just 3 points, well within the poll's margin of error of 5 percentage points.

Dahmer, the convicted serial killer from Milwaukee, came up in telephone surveys done for Kasten's campaign.

One question asked voters: "Would you be more or less likely to vote for a candidate if you knew that he voted against preventing convicted murderers like Jeffrey Dahmer from being eligible for parole after only 13 years and 4 months?"

Respondents were told that Feingold voted against a 1988 bill that allowed judges to impose a life sentence without parole. The Democrat voted for a different version of the bill, which urged the state Sentencing Commission to set guidelines for life-without-parole sentences.

Kasten said he ordered his political consultant to drop references to Dahmer in the telephone survey after Feingold said last week that he was appalled by the question.

As crackdown begins, legend grows

CHICAGO (AP) — Cabrini-Green is 70 acres of some of the most dangerous turf in the nation — a housing project so violent that the new horror movie "Candyman" blames its evils on a supernatural killer buried on its grounds.

On Monday, police began closing four of its high-rise buildings and tightening security after the sniper slaying of a 7-year-old. But the chairman of the Chicago Housing Authority said tearing them down makes more sense.

Vincent Lane said the real problem at Chicago's second-largest housing project is the high-rise design that packs nearly 7,000 people in 33 buildings.

"We have got to change the fundamental flaw that stacks poor people on top of poor people," Lane said Tuesday. He said he favors razing the four buildings and "selective demolition" at other high-rise projects.

In high-rise housing complexes, "you're concentrating poverty and misery, drugs, alcoholism, people with mental disabilities and people unemployable," said Ed Marciniak, president of Loyola University's Institute of Urban Life in Chicago. "It leads to hopeless and hapless people who can be very easily victimized."

Mayor Richard M. Daley ordered the crackdown after Dantrell Davis was slain last week by a sniper as his mother walked him to school at Cabrini-Green. A man who police said was aiming at teen-agers has been charged in the slaying.

In addition to sealing the four nearly empty buildings, including the one from which the shot was fired, police plan to sweep all the Cabrini-Green high-rises for drugs and weapons. They also will require ID cards for entry, post guards and metal detectors at the doors and clear out tenants on the ground floors.

The same measures eventually will be applied to all 160 public-housing high-rises in Chicago. About 100 of them already have guarded entrances built in the past year and a half.

On the issues

The issue: constitutional ban on abortion

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Associated Press asks the Bush and Clinton campaigns for their stands on an issue each weekday and assembles their responses. Ross Perot's views are adapted from his public statements and campaign book, "United We Stand."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The views of the presidential candidates on the question: Should the Constitution be amended to ban abortion?

Bush: "I believe every life is a precious human gift, each human being has intrinsic dignity and worth, and the lives of both mother and child should be cherished and protected. I support a Human Life Amendment with exceptions when the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term, or in cases of rape or incest."

Clinton: "No. I firmly believe th[illegible]vernment has no right to interfere with decisions that must b[illegible]ade by women in consultation with their partners, doctors, friends and clergy. I support the Roe vs. Wade decision and will support the Freedom of Choice Act."

Perot: "I support a woman's right to have an abortion. It is the woman's choice."

Delegation returns with 'important' details on MIAs

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials returned from Vietnam with "very important documentation," including photographs, they said could help determine the fates of many Americans missing from the war in Southeast Asia.

The officials arrived back from the weekend trip Tuesday evening amid reports they had gained access to a cache of secret information, including thousands of photographs, that government sources said hold clues to what became of many of the 2,266 American servicemen unaccounted for from the Vietnam War.

"I believe we have brought home very important documentation which will go a long way in resolving many cases that are still listed as missing in action," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a member of the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs.

McCain, a former Vietnam prisoner of war, and retired Gen. John Vessey Jr., Bush's special emissary for POW-MIA affairs, each made brief statements upon their arrival at Andrews Air Force Base, Md. They said they would brief President Bush on their findings Thursday.

They declined to take any questions, but as they walked to their cars, McCain was asked if they had brought any of the documentation back with them. He replied, "Some." Asked if they had photographs, he said, "Yes."

One source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the photographs were all of dead servicemen.

On Monday, the official Vietnamese News Agency said Vietnam would expand its help in determining the fate of Americans missing from the Vietnam War by letting U.S. experts study military archives.

In a joint communique, Vessey and Vietnamese officials said accelerated cooperation on resolving the cases of the missing will bring more rapid movement by the United States toward normalization of relations with Vietnam.

McCain said the agreement "will allow us to have an orderly examination of the archives and records of the Vietnamese government and hopefully help make significant progress toward resolution of this terrible nightmare that has afflicted so many American families for now over 20 years."

A Senate source, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said between 4,000 and 5,000 photos were in the newly uncovered archives, but many were duplicates or different shots of the same individuals.

A Pentagon source said that with the new information, "There's a good chance we'll get a lot of cases solved — dozens, hundreds maybe."

Another official said the information "may be a whole new vein" of evidence about those listed as prisoners of war or missing in action during the war.

"We know it's good, but we won't know how good until we can check it against what we already know," the official said.

The city of San Francisco was incorporated in 1850.

We would like to commend Sergeant Fritz and the Snyder Police Department on the very fast and efficient recovery of our vehicle.

Thank You,
