Hasenfus to testify in Nicaraguan court

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — U.S. mercenary Eugene Hasenfus gets a chance today to tell his side of the story to a revolutionary tribunal trying him for terrorism and conspiracy for his role in aiding Contra rebels.

The 45-year-old former Marine from Marinette, Wisconsin appears before the People's Tribunal, composed of a lawyer, truck driver and laborer, to respond to the leftist Sandinista government's charges and to examine the evidence against him.

It is his first appearance at the tribunal offices, a half mile from the U.S. Embassy, since he was arraigned on Oct. 20. He is being held in a prison outside Managua.

Hasenfus was a crewman on a rebel supply flight shot down Oct. 5 over southern Nicaragua by Sandinista forces. He was captured the next day and faces 30 years in prison if convicted. The other three crew members — two of them Americans — died when the C-123 cargo plane crashed.

The tribunal's decision to have Hasenfus appear was announced Thursday afternoon, after Attorney General Rodrigo Reyes asked that he brought to the court.

The tribunal said it would hear Saturday from Jose Fernando Canales, the Sandinista soldier who shot down the aircraft with a shoulder-held surface-to-air missile, making him an instant national hero.

Next week, the tribunal is to hear from various Sandinista military and Interior Ministry officials and will view a videotape of the CBS program "60 Minutes" in which Hasenfus was interviewed by Mike Wallace.

President Daniel Ortega, in separate appearances before three labor groups Thursday night, made no mention of Hasenfus, limiting his remarks to domestic matters. However, at the close of the third rally, Ortega led a crowd of hundreds in a popular chant that has become the Sandinista battlecry, "Here, there, the Yankees will die." The chant rhymes in Spanish.

Over the weekend, the president hinted at the possibility that Hasenfus, whose conviction is considered extremely likely, might eventually be pardoned by the Sandinista government.

The tribunal has been studying about 130 pieces of evidence submitted by the prosecution on Wednesday, and awaited more documents and statements from witnesses.

Reyes said he asked Reynaldo Monterrey, tribunal president, to call Hasenfus, to be accompanied in court by his Nicaraguan lawyer, Enrique Sotelo Borgen.

The court has eight days, counting from Wednesday, to receive evidence from the prosecution and defense. It may extend the period by four days.

Reyes said he is waiting for the court to act on his Wednesday request to name experts to help in determining the authenticity of the identification cards, flight maintenance log and other papers found in the wreckage of the C-123 or carried by Hasenfus and the two American pilots.

Hasenfus has said he took part in 10 CIA-coordinated arms drops to Contra rebels from Ilopango military base in El Salvador and the U.S.-built Aguacate base in Honduras. Tons of arms were stored at Ilopango for shipment to the rebels, he has said.

One piece of evidence submitted was a card bearing the Salvadoran air force emblem, Hasenfus' name and "Group: USA" and "Specialty: Adviser." On the reverse, under "Restricted areas," was a list of numbers.

Acting Saudi oil minister calls for OPEC session

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia's acting oil minister has called for an emergency session of OPEC's pricing committee, and the head of the panel reportedly was trying today to set a date for such a meeting.

The Saudi minister, Hisham Nazer, said Thursday he wanted the committee to begin the process of raising oil prices.

The official Saudi news agency quoted Nazer as saying the committee members — Kuwait, Libya and Ecuador — "all welcomed the request."

Kuwait's state-run news agency today quoted unidentified oil officials as saying the head of the committee, Kuwaiti Oil Minister Sheik Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, was contacting OPEC oil ministers to prepare for the meeting.

The report, monitored in Kuwait, said the committee was likely to meet during the first 10 days of November.

The agency quoted the oil officials as saying the committee was not likely to meet before the conclusion of a four-day conference of the Gulf Cooperation Council in Abu Dhabi. The conference ends Wednesday.

Nazer said Thursday the committee should meet as soon as possible "to start immediately in the process of fixing prices in accordance with the proposals presented by the kingdom of Saudi Arabia."

He said he was referring an Oct. 17 statement in which the Saudi leadership called for fixing oil prices at a minimum of $18 a barrel.

Saudi Arabia, the world's third largest oil producer, on Thursday fired Ahmed Zaki Yamani as oil minister and named Nazer to replace him.

On world markets Thursday, crude oil prices surged in reaction to Yamani's abrupt dismissal. At the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for December delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. grade of crude oil, jumped $1.31 a barrel to close at $15.04.

Oil fell from $30 a barrel in December to less than $10 a barrel by late spring because of overproduction. It since has crept up to between $14 and $17 per barrel.

Yamani last was seen at a Cabinet meeting Monday, summing up OPEC's Oct. 6-22 meeting in Geneva, where the cartel agreed to extend interim production curbs through Dec. 31.

The oil cartel has scheduled a meeting Dec. 11 to try to line up a new production-sharing agreement, or quotas for members.

In recent statements Saudi Arabia has made it clear it will demand an increase in its own production quota of 4.35 million barrels a day, about a quarter of the cartel's current output.

Nazer, considered a key minister in this kingdom of 11 million people, is thought to have close ties to the royal family. He was the first Saudi representative on OPEC's board of governors in 1961, and was deputy oil minister under Yamani for several years in the 1960s.

There had been rumors the 56-year-old Yamani — a commoner who uses the honorific title sheik — was ill and at odds with the royal family, and that King Fahd has been making key oil policy decisions.

At recent OPEC meetings, announcements on oil strategy were issued by the royal court in Riyadh, apparently without consulting Yamani, who had been responsible for Saudi oil policy since 1962.

He was the longest-serving and most widely known oil minister in the cartel, which Saudi Arabia helped create in 1960.

Seance flight among year's tricks and treat

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — In the spirit of Halloween, two magicians say they'll hold an airborne seance to see if they can spark some sky-high sleight-of-hand from the late Harry Houdini.

"It's mostly in fun," said Jack Koopmans, 22, of Denison. "We'd like to keep an open mind, just to see if something weird happens."

Koopmans and Patrick Casey say they plan to rent a small plane and try for an out-of-this-world encounter today, the 60th anniversary of Houdini's death. The escape artist and magician had reportedly told his wife, Bess, he would try to contact her after his death. Since he died, fans have made both fanciful and serious attempts to intercept the magician's message.

"We're not sorcerers; this isn't a ritual. We just want to try something that's never been done before," said Casey, 39, of Wyoming.

Koopman said they decided to use an airborne approach because Houdini was an amateur aviator.

Casey, who has a pilot's license, says he will stay aloft for about 30 minutes. Then he plan to concentrate on Houdini, whisper his name and gaze into Casey's crystal ball.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A Halloween "witches walk" planned by the Oklahoma City Red Cross is getting some "boos" from unhappy residents complaining that participants in witches' costumes will inspire Satanism. "These are circumstances I was not aware of," Red Cross chapter manager Jim Sartorius said. "It's not a season for jest for some people. I don't think the majority of people think that way."

The program, scheduled today at about 20 schools, gives children a chance to walk through hallways or rooms with witches or monsters who give away candy and information about the Red Cross, Sartorius said.

It is meant to inspire volunteerism, and has never been criticized in the several years it's been in practice, he said this week.

HALLOWEEN
October 31

The present-day celebration of Halloween began as the pre-Christian Celtic Festival of Samhain, more than 2,000 years ago. The Celts, who lived in what is now Great Britain, Ireland, and northern France, celebrated on the eve of their new year, which began on November 1. The celebration included sacrifices to Samhain, the Celtic Lord of Death. Today's Halloween costume-wearing comes from the Celtic tradition of wearing costumes to herald the New Year.

Mistrial declared in murder case

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A mistrial was declared Thursday in the murder trial of a Midland man after the judge in the case received a note from the jury claiming it was "hopelessly deadlocked" after nearly seven hours of deliberations.

State District Judge Pat Baskin declared the mistrial at 5 p.m., after receiving the second note from the seven-man, five woman jury saying it could not reach a verdict in the trial of 32-year-old Jackie Dorn, accused of the 1982 murder of Wylie Randolph Wilson, 45.

The mistrial means Dorn, who did not take the stand in the case, will be re-tried. He is the fourth man implicated in the case and the only one not serving time in state prison.

Three men are serving long prison terms for the robbery and brutal beating death of Wilson, whose body was found June 10, 1982 in a pasture in southeast Midland County.

After closing arguments Thursday morning by Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre and defense attorney Allen McFall, the jury began deliberations in the case at 10:15 a.m. in 142nd State District Court.

The inability of the jury to reach a verdict in the case apparently hinged on the testimony of 26-year-old Leroy McKee, who pleaded guilty to the robbery and is currently serving a 20-year sentence.

Arson hearing is postponed

ODESSA — A U.S. district court evidentiary hearing scheduled to be held in Midland today to determine if alleged prosecutorial misconduct prevented a fair trial for an Ector County commissioner accused of arson conspiracy has been postponed.

Willie Hammond Jr. and former Odessa City Councilman Keith Weddel were found guilty of arson conspiracy late last year.

Both were sentenced to five-year probated prison terms on the arson charges. Hammond also received a six-month jail term for perjury and was assessed a $10,000 fine. Weddel was fined $20,000. The convictions were appealed.

Campaign strategists building bad images for opponents

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Top operatives in the Mark White and Bill Clements campaigns Thursday offered some refreshingly candid insight into the images they have tried to create for the voting public.

Since the May primaries, the two candidates for governor have spent nearly $13 million — more than half of that on television advertising designed to paint a good-guy, bad-guy picture that will win them votes on Election Day.

"In the final analysis, what we're trying to do is suggest Governor White is compassionate and cares about the future and that Bill Clements is a cold, heartless SOB," Mark McKinnon, White's campaign press secretary, told a small audience at an International Association of Business Communicators luncheon.

Karl Rove, Clements' top strategist and media coordinator, said the Republicans started by reminding voters of "a generalized good feeling about the four years while Bill Clements was in office," moved on to tell them about White's "reputation of vacillation" and closed by "fleshing out the specifics of Bill Clements' generalized good impressions."

Rove said Democratic incumbent White is "running a dirty, nasty, vicious, malevolent campaign" with his extensive negative advertising. He said Clements should have been more aggressive in trying to expose that as an attempt by White to "hide from his record."

McKinnon said White had to attack Clements to overcome the $9 million worth of anti-White advertising from both Democratic and Republican candidates during the spring party primaries. "We had a lot of soft, warm-fuzzy advertising while we were taking a lot of negative heat," McKinnon said.

Taking the offensive against Clements, he said, countered "the image of a benevolent businessman who served during Camelot days."

The most difficult point for Clements to explain, Rove said, concerned the former governor's so-called secret plan to deal with the state's budget problems. Rove blamed the Capitol press corps for not accepting Clements' broad outline for addressing the deficit and insisting that he had no secret plan because he didn't produce "a six-inch document" filled with detailed budget cuts.

"You all in the pencil press did not believe us," Rove said. Clements came up with his six-point plan to create jobs in Texas "in part as a response" to the controversy over the secret plan.

McKinnon labeled White's ability to "exploit Bill Clements' lack of a plan" as the campaign's most effective advertising tool. The toughest issue for White to deflect, he said, was Clements' claim that he left office in January 1983 with a $1 billion surplus in the state treasury.

"It's very difficult to explain," he said. "It's about a one-hour argument. It doesn't fit into 30-second (advertising) spots."

In the closing days of the campaign, each candidate has turned to painting a positive image for the voters, each trying to create the impression that he can turn the state's economy around.

Reclusive man's suicide linked to his long-dead mother?

HOUSTON (AP) — A reclusive man who kept his dead mother propped in a rocking chair for more than a year probably killed himself after he was forced to realize she was dead, the man's brother said.

The Harris County Medical Examiner's Office ruled Thursday the death of John Parks, 67, a suicide, spokesman J.F. Ebdon said.

Authorities found Parks Wednesday in a bedroom with a gun in his hand after they obtained a court order to check on his mother.

Ann Morgan, his mother, was found in a rocking chair in the front room, wearing a night gown and rubber boots, investigators said. Air fresheners surrounded the body, officials said.

A preliminary medical report on Thursday indicated she had been dead for more than a year, said Daniel W. Turner, police spokesman. An autopsy was pending Thursday, he said.

"She looked just like a mummy," Turner said. "She was nothing but a skeleton."

Officials said Parks shot himself about two or three days before he and his 89-year-old mother were found in their apartment near Rice University.

"It is rather bizarre," police spokesman J.C. Mosier said.

The bachelor, a retired pipe fitter, was very close to his mother, said Parks' brother who lives in North Carolina and asked not to be identified.

Parks and Ms. Morgan had lived together in Houston for more than 40 years, the brother said.

Parks had refused to allow social workers in the home and apparently killed himself after they threatened to get the court order to check on his mother, said Turner.

Neighbors told authorities they had not seen Ms. Morgan for two years, prompting state workers to investigate.

"They were inside people," the brother said.

Trucker Darren Hightower, 20, and Mark Robison, 18, wait for their victims in the old Woodman Home. But it's not all fun and screams.

"We scare ourselves," said Hightower. "We keep turning the flashlight on, just to see if anything else is in here with us. This is a spooky old place."

To pass the time, they occasionally sneak up on each other, or try to spook the Gypsy Woman, who works just down the hall in the charity-sponsored house.

"The only thing that makes me mad is when some guy walks through and I yell at him and he yells back at me," said Robison. "Then we'll get in a screaming contest with the guy. But in a screaming contest, we usually win."

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — A doughnut shop is offering kosher Halloween treats, but at least one Orthodox Jewish rabbi says the offer's a trick.

Margaret Glynn, owner of the Dawn Donut shop in Southfield, the suburban Detroit city's only kosher doughnut shop, is offering kosher candy and cookies to ghosts and goblins for Halloween.

Glynn's shop meets strict Jewish dietary laws, said Rabbi Jack Goldman, who operates an kosher certification service in West Bloomfield. In February, he used boiling water and a blowtorch to sterilize Glynn's shop.

At least one other rabbi isn't so fond of the kosher candy idea.

"We don't observe Halloween because it has pagan roots," said Rabbi Elimeliech Silberberg of the Orthodox Bais Chabad synagogue in West Bloomfield.

But Goldman said some Conservative Jews, who are less strict about such things, may like the service.

"I want Jewish kids to celebrate our own holidays, but we want non-Jewish customers to feel welcome in this kosher shop," Goldman said. "And if there are Jewish kids celebrating Halloween, at least I want them to have kosher candy and cookies."

He said he doesn't plan to stop with Halloween: "Come December, I'll certify their Christmas cookies."

ANOKA, Minn. (AP) — The self-proclaimed "Halloween Capital of the World" was wrapping up a week of merrymaking in a 66-year-old tradition that features a parade, dances and a foot race in costume.

Anoka, a city of about 15,000 people 20 miles north of Minneapolis, planned to conclude the festivities today.

About 25 stores have been painted with Halloween scenes, one end of the high school football stadium bears a Halloween mural and frayed orange banners depicting a jack-o'-lantern with a top hat dangle from street lamps.

The celebration began in 1920 when civic leaders tired of youths' Halloween pranks, according to Mayor Lorraine Hostetler.

NEW YORK (AP) — Witch prediction should you heed? How about the one about Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger "showing surprising agility" and taking first prize in a charity tap-dancing contest.

Or the coming James Bond film with three new villains — played by Dr. Ruth Westheimer, Walter Cronkite and Henry Kissinger.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Police made no bones about arresting a city shopkeeper for displaying a nattily-dressed human skeleton in his window.

David B. Ornstein used the tuxedo-clad skeleton as a Halloween attraction at his downtown antique store, said Detective Lt. Ted Flint, who called it "humorous, but a violation of the law."

"Human remains are to be cremated, or buried, or otherwise disposed of," Flint said.

Ornstein, 39, predicted that Thursday's charge won't get very far. He said the skeleton had been in his shop window for three years without complaint.

He was released on his own recognizance.

The skeleton spent the night at the Albany Medical Center morgue. Flint said it was probably used originally by medical students.

MAHNOMEN, Minn. (AP) — Trick or treaters will be out on the streets tonight across the nation — but not here.

Halloween was officially held Thursday night — a day early — in this northwest Minnesota town of about 1,300 people because its high school football team plays a championship game in Breckenridge tonight.

A women's group asked Mayor John Mersy to move Halloween a day back when it realized its annual party for children was at risk.

"With football being such an important sport in Mahnomen, we have to schedule around things," said Women of Today President Sheila Erickson.

Texans among hero honorees

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Nineteen men and women from 12 states and one Canadian province were honored as heroes Thursday by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

Four Texans were honored by the commission.

James T. Hays, 77, of Hemphill, Texas, and his son, Benjamin Hays, 47, of Austin, were honored for saving a truck driver whose gasoline tanker overturned and caught fire in Santo, Texas, on Nov. 11, 1984.

Abel O. Garcia, 26, of Corpus Christi and John Ray Wilson, 27, of Lufkin were honored for helping to save two boys from drowning at Freeport, Texas, on June 4, 1984. Wilson died in his attempt.

Three other heroes died in the performance of their acts, according to the commission.

The 19 heroes or their survivors each receive a $2,500 cash award and a medal with the recognition.

The new heroes bring to 7,045 the number of people in the United States and Canada honored by the commission since industrialist Andrew Carnegie established the fund in 1904.

Among other recipients are:

— Daniel Farling St. John, 20, of Prineville, Ore., who died trying to save a man from a burning house on Aug. 4, 1985.

— Raymond Leonard Mills, 15, of Syracuse, Utah, who died helping to save his 12-year-old brother from drowning in a public pool in Plymouth, Utah, on July 2, 1985.

— Charles J. Messa, 41, of Evergreen, Colo., who died after helping in the rescue of a boy and a girl drowning in Bear Creek Lake, Colo., on May 27, 1985. The girl also drowned.

— Michael R. Howell, 38, of Vancouver, Wash., who saved a woman from drowning in the Spokane River in Spokane, Wash., on March 19, 1984.

— Darryl Lindsay Curran, 33, of San Diego, Calif., who saved two boys from their burning car in Escondido, Calif., on Oct. 2, 1985.

— Michael L. Foreman, 31, of Baltimore, Md., who saved an infant boy from a knife assault from a man in Pittsburgh on Jan. 1.

— William D. Shoemaker, 12, of Elkland, Mo., who saved a 12-year-old boy from drowning in a farm pond on July 2, 1985.

— Gregory Ysais Jr., 36, of Mission Viejo, Calif., who saved a 5-year-old girl from a mountain lion at San Juan Capistrano, Calif., on March 23.

Hammond and Weddel were indicted on arson conspiracy charges in connection with the Nov. 25, 1981 fire that heavily damaged the former O'Michael Building at the intersection of East 3rd Street and Jackson in Odessa.

The building was owned by Weddel, former Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant and Odessa attorney Ray Stoker Jr.

The perjury charges against Hammond stem from depositions he gave in connection with a lawsuit filed to collect insurance on the building.

On Oct. 1, the U.S. 5th Circuit Court in New Orleans upheld Weddel's conviction but ordered a hearing to determine if Hammond had been denied a fair trial because of prosecutorial misconduct.

Hammond's appeal brief, filed by Odessa attorney Warren Burnett, contended FBI agents took Hammond's wife into custody during the course of the September 1985 trial in El Paso and prevented her from testifying on her husband's behalf.

The appeals court, in its Oct. 1 opinion, criticized the government's action in the case, saying, "We agree that the government's actions in this case were highly irresponsible and share in the district court's vigorous condemnation of it."

During the course of an earlier trial in Midland that ended in a mistrial and the subsequent El Paso trial, U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton several times took federal prosecutors to task in open court, criticizing their handling of the case against Hammond and Weddel. At one point, the judge accused government prosecutors of using "star chamber Hitlerian tactics."

Shortly after noon Thursday, Bunton agreed to delay the hearing after U.S. Assistant Attorney Sidney Powell asked the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans to stay the hearing because Bunton did not have jurisdiction to hold the hearing.

At about 4:30 p.m., Bunton's office and Burnett were notified the New Orleans appellate court had declared the governments motion for a stay moot because Bunton had agreed to postpone the hearing.

Contacted earlier Thursday in San Antonio, Ms. Powell said, in seeking delay of the hearing, the government contended Bunton lacked jurisdiction because under federal appellate court rules the New Orleans court retained jurisdiction in the case until a final mandate was issued.

As explained by Ms. Powell, the Oct. 1 opinion by the appeals court, which remanded the case to Bunton's court for a hearing to determine if Hammond had been denied a fair trial because of prosecutorial misconduct, would have resulted in a appellate mandate in 21 days if no petitions for rehearing were filed in the case. Both government and defense attorneys filed such petitions.

Burnett disagreed, saying it was his understanding the appellate court did not intend to issue its mandate until after the hearing in Bunton's court.

Ms. Powell disagreed with Burnett, saying the appeals court could not transfer jurisdiction until after all rehearing petitions filed after the Oct. 1 opinion were considered during a seven-day period and a mandate was issued.

Burnett termed the government's action "just another delaying tactic" and questioned a statement by government prosecutors that they had only received notice of today's scheduled hearing Tuesday.

The Odessa attorney said he had been notified of the hearing by Bunton's office "about 10 days ago."

Bunton's docket clerk, Bobbie Pieper, contacted late Thursday afternoon contacted asked when the judge first scheduled the hearing for today said as she recalled it was "within the last two weeks, maybe 10 days" and that involved parties had been notified by telephone.

A secretary in U.S. Assistant Attorney Jim Blankinship's Midland office late Thursday afternoon said that office did not receive notification of today's hearing until Tuesday.

The murder charge against him was dropped.

Elroy McKee, Leroy's brother, and James Chambers were both tried and convicted of the murder. McKee was sentenced to life in prison and Chambers received 50 years. Neither testified in the case.

Leroy McKee testified for the prosecution as an eyewitness, and told the jury that Dorn suggested robbing Wilson, and was the man who actually killed him by striking him in the head three times with a tire tool.

But when he was questioned by McFall, McKee admitted on the stand that he had said several times that the "Jackie" involved in the murder was not the defendant.

At 3:15 p.m., Baskin granted a request by the jury to hear again testimony from McKee that the "Jackie" involved in the murder was "taller and thinner" than the defendant. Court reporter Jerry Shortes read back several lines of his testimony, and the jury resumed deliberations.

Just after 3:30 p.m., Baskin received a note saying the jury was deadlocked. Schorre requested Baskin give the jury a "dynamite charge," an instruction by the judge that urges the jury to reconcile their differences and reach a verdict.

McFall objected to any instruction to the jury, claiming it would be an "imposition" on the jury to ask for a quick verdict in the case.

Schorre withdrew his request, but the jury returned at 3:45 and was told by Baskin to return to the jury room to try and reach a verdict.

Just over an hour later, the second note was sent out, the mistrial declared and the jury sent home.

Two hurt in explosion at Orange paper mill

ORANGE, Texas (AP) — Two people were injured today in a midmorning explosion at the Inland-Orange liner board and paper mill about five miles north of Orange.

"We're trying to piece all of the info together," said Gerald Obenhaus, human relations manager at the plant. "It was an explosion. It was in the power house area. The precipitator was where it was at."

Obenhaus said the explosion occurred about 10 a.m.

"All we can get so far is there were contractural employees welding in the area, and there was an explosion and both of them were injured," Obenhaus said.

Juarez city fireman walk around the ruins of the Mercado Cuahtemoc, which was gutted in a Thursday morning fire.

Fire in Juarez' city-owned market investigated

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Authorities are investigating a fire that destroyed a city-owned market, leaving smoldering ruins of a structure that had servedd as a central place to sell goods for almost a century.

Fire broke out early Thursday in the 81-year-old Mercado Cuauhtemoc, causing an estimated $125,000 in damage, Fire Chief Manuel Calderon Sanchez

It was the second fire in the market's 81-year history.

The fire broke about shortly before 7 a.m. (6 a.m. El Paso time), Calderon Sanchez said. No injuries were reported in the blaze, which was put out in two hours by about 30 firefighters.

Calderon Sanchez estimated at ..ut 100 million pesos ($125,000) in structural damage to the building, which sustained major damage on the roof and all three floors.

Bystanders looked on as a wrecking crew brought down what remained of the brick and cinder block walls.

Twisted, blackened metal girders criss-crossed the sky above what used to be the front entrance, the market's distinctive mural of the fierce Aztec ruler Cuauhtemoc was obliterated.

Caged chickens, turkeys and parrots rescued from the fire squawked outside.

Inside, water dripped in steady sheets from the roof, forming puddles on the lower level around the legs of lunch counter stools.

A firefighter sloshed through the water in knee-high boots, biting into an apple he had taken from one of the stalls.

"We haven't had breakfast," he said. Soaked fruits and vegetables and other goods crammed tables everywhere.

Marta Elena Ramirez de Gonzalez said she was in the building when the fire broke out. She said she heard a popping sound and saw flames on the top floor. She and two others ran out and called for help.

She was one of about 75 merchants who gathered in a meeting hall nearby to discuss their future. Ramirez de Gonzalez said she had been assured by Juarez Mayor Jaime Bermudez Cuaron that the market would be rebuilt within six months.

In the meantime, merchants will be allowed to set up a temporary marketplace across the street from the ruins.

Addressing the others, she said, "It was a short circuit on the floor where the pinatas were."

Moslem militiamen attack refugee camp

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem militiamen hammered a Palestinian refugee camp with heavy artillery and tank cannons today, and the fighting closed Beirut's airport highway, police reported.

Police had no casualty report on the shelling. But they reported earlier that six people were killed and 35 wounded in overnight mortar duels.

The midmorning bombardment shattered a daybreak lull in fighting at the Bourj el-Barajneh camp on Beirut's southern flank.

Police said Shiite gunners unleashed a sustained barrage from Soviet-made T-54 tanks and heavy artillery ringing the beleaguered camp in an attempt to silence guerrilla snipers in high-rise apartment buildings at the camp's edge.

Shell blasts echoed across the city's southern outskirts, where police said most of the population spent the night in basements and bomb shelters.

The overnight casualties raised to 8 killed and 45 wounded the toll from fighting that broke out before dusk Wednesday at Bourj El-Barajneh. The teeming camp is home to about 50,000 people.

Police said Syrian officers were trying to mediate a cease-fire to prevent the camp hostilities from igniting a new round of all-out war between the Palestine Liberation Organization and Justice Minister Nabih Berri's mainstream Shiite Amal militia.

Amal has been trying to prevent the PLO from regaining the Lebanon power base it lost in Israel's 1982 invasion.

The airport highway, where motorists screeched to a halt and passengers ducked behind pine trees when sniping broke out Thursday, was deserted this morning. Travelers used side streets along the Mediterranean coast to reach the airport.

Amal and Yasser Arafat's PLO guerrillas have been battling intermittently for control of Beirut's refugee camps of Sabra, Chatilla and Bourj El-Barajneh since May 1985. More than 850 people have been killed and 2,300 wounded in fighting over the camps, according to the police count.

Calm reportedly prevailed today in south Lebanon, where Sunni Moslem militiamen, acting as peacekeepers, completed their move into eight buffer zones in hills east and southeast of Sidon to separate Amal and PLO fighters.

Jet's plunge linked to arms-runners

TOKYO (AP) — Suspected smugglers told police that arms-runners frequently hide weapons in trash cans in the toilets of Thai jetliners like the one that plunged five miles after a mysterious explosion, a newspaper reported today.

Thai Airways International Flight 620, an A-300 Airbus, was going from Bangkok to Osaka, via Manila, Sunday with 247 people aboard when a blast ripped through the plane's rear, causing the near disaster. Sixty-two people were injured in the violent descent.

The Mainichi Shimbun newspaper reported today that two men arrested for allegedly smuggling marijuana and pistols into Japan on an Oct. 17 flight from Manila told police that arms-runners frequently used a small trash can in a rear toilet to hide their contraband.

Tokyo metropolitan police officials refused to comment on the reported comments, saying only that an investigation was underway.

However, they confirmed that Mamoru Matsuyama, 37, a game machine dealer in Osaka, and Hiroyuki Kamikura, 26, a tourist guide residing in the Philippines, had been arrested on the reported charges.

On Thursay, Japanese newspapers reported that police believed an alleged Japanese gangster may have caused Sunday's accident by accidentally setting off a grenade in the toilet during turbulence.

The reports said investigators had determined that the blast was caused by a U.S.-made grenade and that doctors removed several pieces of grenade shrapnel from the unidentified man, who was found severely burned in the toilet.

Police refused to comment on the reports.

However, Tokuo Nakajima of the Transport Ministry confirmed that traces of powder smoke were found in the plane's toilet.

The 43-year-old suspect, a member of the 10,400-strong Kobe-based Yamaguchi-gumi, had drunkenly boasted to other passengers that he had about $1 million in insurance, according to press reports.

Found headfirst in the toilet, the alleged gangster was the most seriously injured of the passengers, reports said Thursday. The mass-circulation Daily Yomiuri quoted investigators as saying he was burned by hydraulic fluid.

The suspect told police that he went to the rear toilet, but "doesn't remember anything else," according to the reports.

Japanese press reports said the man accidentally detonated the grenade during turbulence and that it exploded in a trash can in the toilet.

Plant explosion kills six persons

GUANAJUATO, Mexico (AP) — An explosion at a chemical plant killed at least six people and injured 30, Guanajuato state officials said Thursday.

State government spokesman Ricardo Baeza said the accident Wednesday was in the Tranquimica industrial plant near Salamanca, 205 miles northwest of Mexico City.

A high-pressure reactor blew up, according to Salamanca's fire cief, Filiberto Procel Rivas. The plant manufactured herbicides and fungicides.

Sigfrido Castillo Guarneros, its director, estimated damages at $2.5 million.

Fire fighters and rescuers worked at the site for six hours after the explosion. About 60 workers were on duty at the time of the accident, and officials were concerned the death toll still could rise.

Police break up student protest in South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Police supported by helicopters firing tear gas broke up a four-day student occupation of Konkuk University early Friday and news reports said they seized almost 1,200 of the students.

Initial reports said 50 students and police were injured in the two-hour sweep that saw police take control of five university buildings the students held in a protest against the government and the United States.

There was no official word on the number of arrests or casualties, but the Yonhap News Agency and the state-run Korean Broadcasting System both reported 1,447 students had been taken into custody. They said this included 1,185 seized Friday and 262 who had surrendered or were apprehended earlier.

Yonhap also reported the initial casualty count of 50, and said many of them had suffered burns. Witnesses said earlier they saw at least four students being carried from the scene.

An estimated 8,000 police were reported to have been mobilized for the assault on the demonstrators.

Anti-drug law criticized

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican newspapers Thursday staunchly backed the government in protesting the United States' new anti-drug law, charging that the singling out of Mexico revealed U.S. ignorance or even a plan to undermine the government.

The new law, signed this week by President Reagan, "implies improper interference in our affairs and shares in absolutely false and slanderous assumptions," the government newspaper El Nacional said in its editorial.

Excelsior, a respected Mexico City daily, said sections of the law that mention Mexico "smack of hiding other aims, namely that of taking advantage of the drug-trafficking problem...to make the country more penetrable by foreign interests."

A State Department report issued last week said Mexico in 1985 was "once again the largest single-country source of heroin and marijuana imported into the United States" as well as a growing conduit for South American cocaine.

Mexico's Foreign Ministry on Wednesday sent the State Department a protest note over parts of the new law containing "threats" against Mexico.

Japan cuts discount rate

TOKYO (AP) — The Bank of Japan announced today that it is cutting its official discount rate by 0.5 percentage points to a postwar low of 3.0 percent, effective Saturday.

The discount rate, the interest rate the central bank charges on its loans to commercial banks, has a strong impact on other interest rates.

In announcing the reduction, Bank of Japan Governor Satoshi Sumita said in a statement that the central bank "expects that this action will contribute to sustained economic growth and strongly wishes, to this end, that the stability of foreign exchange rates will be achieved."

Japan's discount rate is now the lowest among the world's major industrial countries. The rate is 3.5 percent in West Germany, 5.5 percent in the United States and 7.0 percent in France.

It was the fourth time this year that the central bank has reduced its discount rate, each time by 0.5 percentage points. The previous cuts this year in the discount rate were in January, March and April.

Britain, Syria break ties

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Departing British Ambassador Roger Tomkys said today that British-Syrian relations, broken over Damascus' alleged sponsorship of terrorism, may not be restored for "quite a long time."

Tomkys left the Syrian capital today, a week after Britain charged Syria with masterminding an attempt to bomb an Israeli airliner in London.

Asked when he thought relations might be restored, Tomkys said, "I've been too busy tidying up in the last week to be in the forecasting business. It may be quite a long time."

He added: "The Syrians have been helpful in working out technical things to carry on arrangements, setting up an interest section and so on. I'd be very happy to come back, but we haven't been talking politics."

Tomkys, his wife Margaret and 20 diplomats and dependants were in the last British Embassy group to leave Damascus. British Counsellor Rob Young, who left with Tomkys, hauled down the Union Jack from the roof of the four-story embassy in the capital's Malki district Thursday night for the last time.

The departing British had to fly to Amsterdam for a connecting flight because air links between Damascus and London have been severed.

Enrile cuts appearances

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, whose outspoken criticism of President Corazon Aquino's policies has raised fears of a government crisis, said today he was cutting back on speaking engagements to avoid stirring controversy.

"We shouldn't fight the president because she is our president," Enrile said in a speech to a civic club.

He expressed objections to an anti-nuclear provision in the draft constitution, saying it could endanger national security and render American military bases in the Philippines obsolete.

Waldheim denies he fought Yuoslavians, Soviet threat

Associated Press

President Kurt Waldheim denied fresh allegations that he fought Yugoslav partisans during a Nazi military operation and that Soviet intelligence tried to blackmail him into becoming an agent by threatening to charge him with war crimes, according to his spokesman.

Gerold Christian, the spokesman, made the comments after The Washington Post reported Thursday that Waldheim acknowledged after months of denial that he did serve in Kozara, the site of a brutal Nazi "pacification" operation.

Thousands of Yugoslavs died there during the operation in the spring and summer of 1942. The Post said Waldheim was recommended for a German army medal for his role.

It said that, in a 13-page memo sent to the Post in April, the former U.N. secretary-general denied he was involved in the operation to remove 80,000 residents, including 3,500 armed partisans, from Kozara, in the western part of Bosnia province.

Christian, who said Waldheim was in the Kozara area for a short period, quoted the president as saying he was not directly involved in fighting and did not witness mass killings.

Waldheim "never was present during combat action," Christian said. "He was unfit for the front and never had a rifle to shoot with. ...

"Waldheim never took part in any way in actions against partisans or Jews," Christian said. The spokesman said Waldheim "never got into physical contact with partisans, because he performed a subordinated activity" as a supply officer.

Christian told The Associated Press on Thursday that earlier statements by Waldheim that he was not involved in the Kozara operation "were not incorrect."

"The war record was, however, supplemented after files and documents were found" and the information was made available to U.S. authorities in August, Christian said.

The accusations that Waldheim was in Kozara were first made by the World Jewish Congress on April 1, when it released documents purportedly showing that Waldheim was a senior intelligence officer in the operation.

In Washington, Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten said the department had known earlier about Waldheim's presence in the Kozara region, and that Waldheim had confirmed it.

"We had known it for quite a long time going back earlier this year. In August, we received some material from Mr. Waldheim through his lawyers here in Washington that indicated that he conceded that he was present at that time in that unit and that simply confirmed what we had already known," Korten said.

However, an Israel television report showed Thursday what it said was a photocopy of a 1947 Yugoslav report accusing Waldheim of war crimes. It said the documents were provided to the Israeli consulate in Los Angeles by a representative of the Simon Wiesenthal Center, which is named for the noted Nazi hunter.

According to the TV report, the Yugoslav report holds Waldheim directly responsible for formulating policies that led to the deaths of hundreds of people and the burning of dozens of villages in Yugoslavia.

The television quoted former German soldier Johan Mayer as saying in testimony: "Waldheim would decide the measure of revenge and present his conclusions to his superiors."

Waldheim's recent campaign for the presidency became a forum for allegations that he was involved in wartime atrocities in Yugoslavia and Greece.

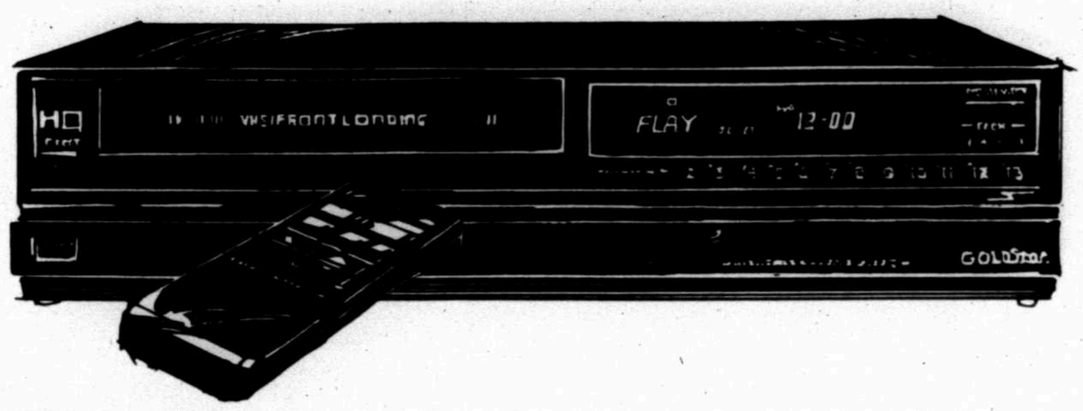

In his 1977 autobiography, Waldheim had said his war service ended in 1941. He said he did not think his service in the Balkans was worth mentioning.

Documents: Pilot apparently had no warning, no time to react

By H. JOSEF HEBERT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The pilot of an Aeromexico jetliner apparently had no warning and no time to avoid a collision with a private plane last August over Cerritos, Calif., according to documents released by the National Transportation Safety Board.

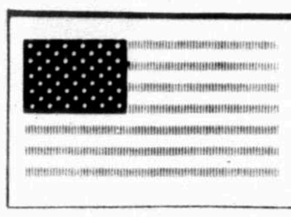

Co-pilot Hector Valencia was at the controls of Flight 498 at 6,568 feet, and Capt. Arturo Valdes Prom, who was handling the radio aboard the DC-9, had just completed a routine exchange with air traffic contol when tragedy struck that Sunday morning during an approach into Los Angeles.

"Oh (expletive deleted) this can't be!" Valdes, 46, said in Spanish. Investigators are uncertain whether he was talking about the impact or possible loss of the controls, but they are convinced by then the two aircraft had collided. Eighty-two people died when the jetliner crashed into a residential neighborhood.

The transcript of cockpit conversations was made public Thursday by the NTSB. Large segments of the tape were inaudible, however, because of poor quality and background noises.

There was virtually no actual conversation between Valdes and Valencia, the 26-year-old co-pilot at the controls, that could be heard clearly on the tape, officials said.

Partly because of the tape's poor quality, sources close to the investigation also indicated there was no way to discern how actively the pilots were searching the skies for other traffic in the crowded air space near Los Angeles International Airport.

NATION

Less than two minutes before the collision, the Los Angeles tower controller advised Flight 498 of another plane at "10 o'clock, one mile northbound, altitude unknown." But the tapes indicated nothing to show whether the crew sighted the aircraft or was even looking. Investigators have determined the third plane flew away from the area safely.

Ironically, as the NTSB documents were released, news surfaced of another air incident involving a jetliner approaching the Los Angeles airport. The pilot of a United Airlines Boeing 727 with 94 people aboard said he came within 100 feet of colliding with a helicopter 10 miles east of the airport at 2,000 feet Wednesday.

United spokesman Joe Hopkins said the pilot took evasive action to avoid the helicopter, and no one was injured.

The incident was under investigation.

According to the documents released Thursday by the NTSB on the Aeromexico collision, the final 11 minutes of Flight 498 seemed uneventful as the twin-engine jet with 64 people aboard made its way north to Los Angeles and prepared for a routine landing on Aug. 31.

As late as 11:51:30 a.m. all appeared well aboard the jetliner, according to the transcript, which was released in English with translations of internal cockpit conversations provided by the NTSB.

"Thank you," the captain remarked, but the context could not be established because of the poor quality of the recording.

A few seconds later, the Los Angeles air traffic controller told the aircraft to maintain its speed.

"All right, we'll maintain one nine nine zero," Valdes responded in English at 11:52 a.m.

Ten seconds later, the transcript showed the first and only indication Flight 498 was in trouble.

"Oh (expletive deleted), this can't be," the DC-9 captain said in Spanish. It was the last entry on the transcript and interpreted by investigators to be the point where the Piper A-28 apparently slammed into the tail section of the jetliner. The collision tore lose the critical part of the tail that gives the jet its balance and stablility.

Street gang indicted for Libyan ties

Jeff Fort

CHICAGO (AP) — Four men accused of offering to work as terrorists for Libya are members of El Rukn, "a well-organized street gang that authorities say espouses Islam while dealing in narcotics and violence.

"They are what you'd call non-traditional organized crime," FBI spokesman Bob Long said Thursday night after the gang members' alleged terrorist-for-hire plot was disclosed.

"You've got people who are organized and they commit crimes, but they're not what you'd consider a traditional organized crime group like La Cosa Nostra," Long said.

El Rukn's imprisoned leader, Jeff Fort, and three other gang members were indicted Thursday on charges they contacted Libyan officials and offered to launch terrorist attacks inside the United States for money. Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi is fervent in his Islamic beliefs.

"It appears the El Rukns were interested in building a war chest. They offered to do whatever the bidding of Libya might be, though nothing actually came of the plot," Long said.

Federal and state authorities say the scheme exemplifies the El Rukn's evolution from a small gang of black toughs, who banded together on Chicago's gritty South Side 20 years ago, into an organized force of 200 to 300 members.

In the past, gang members have been convicted of drug trafficking, and earlier this year three reputed leaders were convicted of murder in the slaying of rival gang members and a drug dealer.

Several members were arrested in June on charges they ran a security company that used armed gang members as unlicensed guards.

"They're still one of the major forces in narcotics trafficking on the South Side of Chicago," said Ernie DiBenedetto, supervisor of the gang prosecution unit in the Cook County state's attorney's office.

"This is a tough group to penetrate because they have the South Side so intimidated. They threaten witnesses, and they've had almost free reign," DiBenedetto said.

Fort, 39, is in the federal prison at Bastrop, Texas, on a drug conviction. The U.S. District Court indictment alleges that Fort was involved in the terrorist conspiracy with Melvin Mayes, 29, Alan Knox, 35, and Trammel Davis, 34, all of Chicago.

The four are charged with conspiracy, possession of weapons and use of interstate facilities to commit crimes.

Knox and Davis had been arrested in an August raid and had been ordered held without bond. Mayes remained at large today.

Also Thursday, Charles Lee Knox, 42, was arrested on a charge of making false statements to government officials by portraying himself as a lawyer so he could visit Fort in prison.

Long said members initiated the contact with Libyan officials in March, about when President Reagan accused Libya of backing a worldwide terrorist campaign.

Long declined comment on whether the Libyans agreed to the El Rukn proposal.

A receptionist at Libya's mission at the United Nations who declined to identify herself said Ambassador Ali Treiki would not be available Thursday for comment.

Long said undercover FBI agents posing as black-market arms suppliers developed information about the plot when they sold several gang members a light anti-tank weapon that didn't work.

The weapon was recovered in a raid Aug. 5 on the gang's South Side headquarters that yielded more than 30 weapons, including three submachine guns, rifles, shotguns and pistols.

Long said the gang was stockpiling weapons for use in terrorist attacks.

The gang, which has several hundred members, traces its origin to the Blackstone Rangers of the 1960s. The Rangers originally were a small gang of young blacks involved in selling drugs and intimidating people, DiBenedetto said.

In the late '60s, he said, the group recruited other South Side street gangs into a loose confederation called the Black P Stone Nation, with Fort as president. That group had a governing council called "Main 21," comprised of leaders from 21 different gangs, DiBenedetto said.

"They got a lot of notoriety in the racial troubles in Chicago in the late 1960s," he said.

White peasant farmers threaten Brazilian Indians' way of life

AP Laserphoto

Tribesmen of the Gaviaos Brazil Indians practice with bows and arrows at their northern Brazil village in Sao Joao do Araguaia, in the wilderness state of Para in September.

EDITOR'S NOTE — An estimated 5 million Indians inhabited Brazil when it was discovered by the Portuguese nearly 500 years ago. But today only 220,000 remain and they are threatened by invasions of their lands by outsiders. An Associated Press correspondent visited a tribe in the wilderness of northern Brazil and found deep-seated fears there.

By SUSANA HAYWARD

SAO JOAO DO ARAGUAIA, Brazil (AP) — Chief Khrokren is worried that white peasant farmers squatting on his reservation will wean his tribe away from its ancient traditions and eventually destroy its Indian purity and culture.

He is so concerned, he says, that if the government doesn't move the 200 or so squatters off the land, the tribe will block a new railroad that carries an annual $500,000 worth of iron ore through the reservation to the Atlantic coast for export, mostly to Japan.

Already, the chief says, Indian children watch too much television, don't show up at traditional ceremonies, and play soccer with greater zeal than they do folkloric games on the Mae Maria (Mother Mary) Indian reservation.

Recently, the angered Khrokren rendered a concrete soccer field unplayable by smashing holes in it with a hammer.

INDIANS

Khrokren leads the 178 Gaviaos, once a nomadic tribe that settled in the late 1920s in Sao Joao do Araguaia, in the wilderness of Para state, 1,900 miles north of Rio de Janeiro.

The chief says he can live, albeit grudgingly, with the railroad and with power lines that cut across Mae Maria, because his tribe has been compensated for them.

But he said in an interview he wants the squatters out.

"The white man has no respect for the Indian or our rights. We've lost our patience, and they've lost our trust," said the chief, who wears a cap with a big "K" emblazoned on it. "We don't want to block the railroad, but if we have to we will."

THE SQUATTERS are mostly whites with some people of mixed race; Indians generally use the term "white" to mean anyone who is non-Indian. Brazil is a multiracial country also made up of whites, blacks, Orientals and people of mixed race.

When the Portuguese discovered Brazil in 1500, the Indian population was an estimated 5 million. It now is down to 220,000 scattered in 430 tribes; many died of disease after Portuguese colonization and others inter-married with other races.

Most of the surviving Indians live in the Amazon jungle in northern Brazil, until recently the least accessible part of the country.

They are threatened with being overwhelmed in this huge, fast-developing nation of 138 million people.

Romero Juco Filho, the president of the government's Indian agency known by its Portuguese initials FUNAI, said about 30 other tribes are affected by direct invasion or trespassing by non-Indian Brazilians.

The more contact Indians have with whites, Juco said, the more precarious their survival.

"Land invaders are a serious problem for Indians, and the white race always seems to have the advantage," Juca said in his office in Brasilia, the capital. "Without land, the Indians' survival isn't guaranteed. Land is the root of Indian culture. It's everything for them."

Sydney Possuelo, a FUNAI official who has spent 20 of his 42 years searching the Amazon for unknown tribes, estimates that about 1,800 Indians, or about 45 tribal groups, still have never had any contact with modern civilization.

"OUR JOB is to see if they need any help, if the whites are any threat to them," said Possuelo. "Some want our help, such as medicine. But some are doing just fine without whites."

The $1.4 billion iron-ore railroad cutting through the Gaviaos' reservation runs 560 miles from the Para jungles to the northern Atlantic coast near Sao Luis. The government inaugurated it with great fanfare in 1985.

"Up to now the Indians have only threatened to block the railroad, but the situation is a constant worry for us," said Katia Araujo Serejo Genes, an official with the Vale do Rio Doce government mining company, which runs the railway.

Red tape, tangled by staff dismissals and resignations in various government agencies that deal with Indians and land reform, have stalled progress. But the Gaviaos' threat to block the railroad is stirring some action.

At a meeting earlier this year with railroad and government officials, the Gaviaos won a promise that the squatters would be resettled. Sixteen squatters were removed in early October.

In 1980, FUNAI declared 154,375 acres of the Gaviaos' habitat an indigenous area, off-limits to non-Indians.

But also in 1980, land reform officials in Para state settled about 50 squatter families on the southern tip of the Gaviaos' reservation and the number has grown since to about 200.

"I don't know why they put squatters and Indians at the same time in the same place," said Ronaldo Barata, the new head of the agrarian reform agency for the region.

BARATA SAID he will be able to resettle the rest of the squatters this year. But he admits the problem will probably not go away, because the railroad and the region's rich soil attract poor migrants from across Brazil.

"Nothing is going to be done," claimed Jose Ferreira Campos Jr., the head of FUNAI in the Gaviao zone. "If I were the Indians, I would have blocked the railroad a long time ago."

Ferreira added that he is angry at his own agency, the police, the land reform ministry and the various Roman Catholic church groups that support squatters.

"The minute you work with Indians you annoy everybody else," said Ferreira, a burly man who hunts with the Gaviaos and sits around campfires listening to their stories.

Ferreira said it took him four years to gain the Indians' trust but government inaction is now "making me look like a fool with the Indians."

He added that last year, with support from police, he tried to evict the squatters by force, entering their tiny huts and at gunpoint telling them to move off of the reservation.

"I used to be able to do that, and the police would help. That way I could at least control the number of squatters and keep them at relatively low numbers," Ferreira said. "But no more. The police no longer help me because of bad press, and the church jumped on my back about human rights violations."

Church groups have expressed anger at Ferreira's tactics.

"Ferreira is a menace," said Paulo Tarso, a lawyer who works in the region with the Pastoral Land Commission, a church-backed nationwide organization that protects squatters and rural workers' rights.

TARSO AND Emmanuel Wambergue, a religious worker who is the head in this area of the Pastoral Land Commission, maintain that the Indians and the squatters could resolve the conflict themselves without FUNAI or the government help.

"That's bull," Ferreira countered. "The Indians never talk to squatters. The Indians have shot arrows at the squatters, and the squatters have shot at the Indians. There have been at least 10 deaths in the past year on both sides."

Reports of deaths could be not independently confirmed; the local police station has no records, although police officials say they have investigated a series of "incidents."

But Tarso and Wambergue said the Gaviaos and the squatters do have contact and even do business with each other, such as trading Brazil nuts for other goods.

"There is no doubt the land belongs to the Indians, and the squatters have to be resettled," said Wambergue. "The peasants want the situation resolved too. It's not just the Indians who want to live in peace."

"Land invaders are a serious problem for Indians, and the white race always seems to have the advantage. Without land, the Indians' survival isn't guaranteed. Land is the root of Indian culture. It's everything for them."

— Romero Juco Filho, president of Brazil's Indian agency

Gunman demands to see ex-wife, takes a hostage

GREENVILLE (AP) — A gunman demanding to see his ex-wife took an elderly man hostage, and police late Thursday were trying to negotiate an end to the drama, authorities said.

Police said the man was holed up in the home of 84-year-old Leroy Creekmore. Creekmore is the grandfather of the man's ex-wife, police said.

Authorities declined to identify the suspect, who was believed to have a handgun. They said he was demanding to see his ex-wife, who was in Colorado.

Modern machinery used to restore ancient acropolis

By KERIN HOPE

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Above the battered marble columns of the Parthenon a crane swings out, maneuvering a 10-ton block of masonry off the ancient temple for repair.

Greek conservation experts are partially dismantling the 2,300-year-old building on the Acropolis hill in central Athens to consolidate the city's best known ancient monument.

The folding, French-made crane installed inside the Parthenon earlier this year is a key piece of equipment in an ambitious 10-year restoration program mostly funded by the government.

"It speeds up the process of shifting the stones and it's very precise in replacing them," Manolis Korres, the architect in charge of the Acropolis restoration program, said in an interview.

"When it's not in use, it folds up behind the columns so the Parthenon outline isn't spoiled for photographers."

Korres, who carried out architectural studies of the Parthenon for several years before starting to restore it in 1983, believes the ancient Greek temple-builders also used a crane, made of wood.

"We know such machinery existed," he said. "Socrates the philosopher compared his nagging wife's voice to the creaking sound of a crane."

The Parthenon, completed around 433 B.C. after 10 years of work, dominated the other temples on the flat-topped hill. It was dedicated to Athena, the Greek goddess of wisdom and patron of ancient Athens.

Pheidias designed its superb sculptures and a 39-foot ivory and gold statue of Athena that gleamed in the dim interior.

Two fires in antiquity, looting by Goths and Vandals, centuries of use as a cathedral and a mosque and a 17th-century explosion left the building a scarred shell.

In recent years, careless restoration, earthquakes and atmospheric pollution have caused more damage.

The $90,000 crane will lift down several hundred chunks of masonry so that restorers can fill in cracks and substitute non-corrosive titanium for rusting iron clamps inserted in the 1920s.

The iron rusted and expanded over the years, causing the marble to crack. Sulphurous rain seeped into cracks, dissolving the stone into soft plaster.

"The ancient masons knew better," said Nikos Toganides, the architect overseeing the crane operation. "They sheathed the iron clamps in lead to prevent rusting. Tight fitting of the original blocks also helped stop weathering."

Most of Pheidias' sculptures were taken off the Parthenon by the British diplomat Lord Elgin in the early 1800s when Athens was under Ottoman Turkish rule. They are now in the British Museum in London.

Conservators have removed the remainder, except for a section of blackened frieze high up on the western side of the temple showing young Athenians on horseback in a religious procession.

"We still have to decide whether the frieze can be safely removed without endangering the Parthenon's stability, or should be encased in a nitrogen-filled atmosphere to halt pollution damage," Toganides said.

Later this year, the 17-member conservation team will move a 34-foot column shifted by an earthquake a few inches back into place, he said.

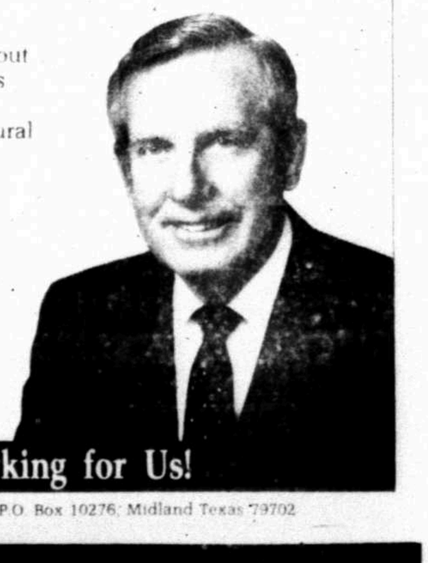

The restorers also have identified and collected about 1,600 pieces of Parthenon marble that lay scattered around the Acropolis.

Many were fragments of blocks blown off the temple during a 1687 siege of Athens by Venetians. A shell landed right inside the building, exploding an ammunition dump used by the Ottoman defenders.

Eventually the restorers will replace about 2,000 pieces of masonry on the building, using new blocks cut near the ancient quarries on Mount Penteli outside Athens to fill in gaps.

"Deciding how much restoration to do raises philosophical and aesthetic problems," Korres said. "We have the information to accurately reconstruct the whole temple, but that would be creating a new Parthenon."

Polygraph tests show convicted Soviet spy not telling whole truth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department intends to honor its plea bargain with convicted Soviet spies John and Michael Walker although some officials believe polygraph tests show John Walker has not told the whole truth about his 17-year-long spy ring in the Navy.

Two government sources, who declined to be identified by name, said Thursday that top Justice officials have decided the Walkers should be sentenced as planned on Nov. 6 under an agreement calling for John Walker to receive a life prison term and his son, former Navy Yeoman Michael Walker, to get 25 years in prison.

To obtain these sentences, the Walkers pleaded guilty and promised to tell all they knew about the spy ring that allowed the Soviets to read 1 million classified Navy cables.

Nevertheless, the sources said polygraph tests of John Walker and his brother, former Navy Lt. Cmdr. Arthur Walker, also convicted in the case, have produced suspicions about when the spy ring began, who started it and whether others were involved besides the four already known.

Justice Department spokesman John Russell refused to comment on the case, but the sources said the department would let today's deadline for any motion to back out of the deal pass without action.

The bargain was attacked publicly by Navy Secretary John Lehman as too lenient, because John Walker could be considered for parole in 10 years. It is considered virtually inconceivable that he would be granted a release then, however. Michael could be considered for parole in eight years and four months.

New polygraph tests were completed Wednesday and Thursday at the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., where John Walker is being held. "He's not changed his story," his attorney Fred Warren Bennett of Baltimore said Thursday.

"For myself and my client we're elated and very pleased if it's true" that the government will not challenge the plea bargain, Bennett said. He added that he expected to get an official notice by the close of business today.

One government source said the benefit of the doubt has to be given to the plea agreement unless the evidence is sufficient to outweigh it.

Government investigators still have suspicions about John Walker's candor, but they are not substantial enough to outweigh other considerations, this source said.

Among other considerations are:

— Bennett has said there is no justification for overturning the agreement and that he would force the government to prove John Walker was lying. This would be difficult because the government could not use the polygraph tests as evidence in federal court, government sources have said.

— Even if the government could overturn the plea bargain, it would then have to pay the costs of a trial with little likelihood that the result would be any additional prison time for John Walker. Government sources have said early parole for John Walker is unlikely.

— Public questioning of John Walker's credibility might cause difficulties over the conviction of his accomplice, Jerry Whitworth, who has been sentenced to 365 years in prison for giving the Soviets Navy code information. John Walker was a key witness against Whitworth.

Breckenridge Willcox, U.S. attorney for Maryland, said Wednesday night that he believed both Walkers would be sentenced as agreed.

On Thursday, he said his office would file a court memorandum before sentencing documenting "the level of his (John Walker's) cooperation."

As a result of polygraph tests, the government believes John Walker, a former Navy communications specialist, might have lied about when the spy ring started and who started it. He has said he began spying in 1968 after approaching an official of the Soviet Embassy in Washington while he was having some financial difficulties.

Honduras may buy U.S. jets toward rebel aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Honduran government, which has been edging toward a larger role in supporting the Nicaraguan rebels, is weighing an American offer to buy modern jet fighters, a U.S. official says.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Thursday the United States has offered Honduras a chance to buy either the American-built F-5E fighter or the Israeli-built Kfir fighter for the Central American nation's aging air force.

If the deal is made, the new plane would replace the Hondurans' 12 French Super Mystere B-2 fighters, which are from the 1950s. American and Honduran leaders feel there is a need to improve Honduras' air defenses, the official said.

The F-5E and the Kfir can be used to attack ground troops and defend against invading aircraft.

With the $100 million in new American aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, there is an increasing chance of a confrontation between Honduras and Nicaragua. Some of the Contras have been operating from Honduras' southern provinces.

According to today's editions of The New York Times, a senior official of the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry said the U.S. offer to Honduras is "a direct slap in the face to the Contadora peace process, which has as one of its basic principles a prohibition on new offensive weapons systems."

The U.S. official said completion of the deal depends on financing, availability of the fighter planes and training of Honduran pilots. The total cost of the deal would be more than $100 million for each plane. But the official said Honduras was still being briefed on the planes and had yet to decide which to choose.

Honduras cannot match the Nicaraguan Sandinista forces on the ground, the official said. The Hondurans have a 17,500-man army, while the Nicaraguans have 70,000 regular troops and 60,000 reserves.

Permafrost in artic warming, may be greenhousing in action

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Measurements showing the frozen ground beneath Alaska's North Slope has warmed 4 degrees to 7 degrees over the last 100 years may be more evidence that pollution is heating the Earth's climate, scientists say.

"The temperature has been changing like mad in permafrost over the last century in this area" of the Arctic, said Arthur H. Lachenbruch, a U.S. Geological Survey geophysicist whose study was published today in the Nov. 7 issue of the journal Science.

"The amount of warming is consistent with the idea that it might be the greenhouse effect in action," said J. Murray Mitchell, senior research climatologist at the National Oceanic and Atmopsheric Administration.

"It is another bit of evidence that the climate has been changing in a way that points the finger of suspicion at the greenhouse effect."

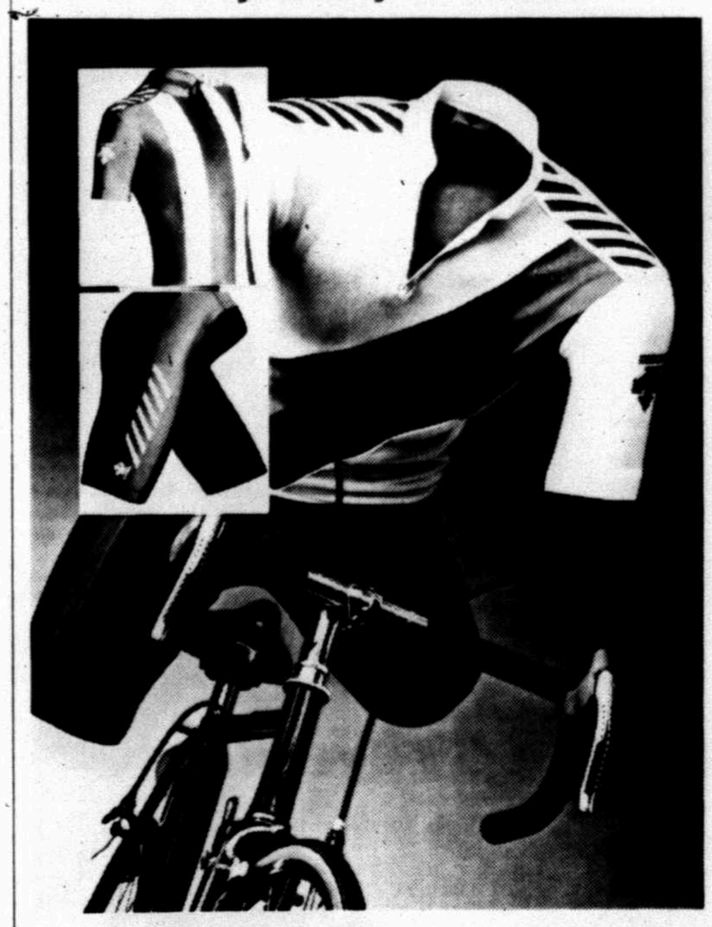

The term "greenhouse effect" refers to the trapping of heat in the Earth's atmosphere by gases such as carbon dioxide produced by the burning of fossil fuels by industrialized society. Glass panes trap heat in greenhouses in much the same way.

But Mitchell said the increased permafrost temperatures and the warming of Earth's climate as seen in historical air temperature records could be caused by other factors, including fluctuations in solar activity, in dust emitted by volcanic eruptions or in the heat exchange between the oceans and the atmosphere.

So the USGS study amounts to "circumstantial evidence only" for the greenhouse effect, Mitchell said in a telephone interview Thursday from Silver Spring, Md.

Scientists have said such global warming could alter weather patterns to disrupt agriculture by making deserts wetter and leaving wet, fertile areas drier. Possible long-term effects include melting of the polar ice caps and a rise in sea level.

A new era starts

Now that the Midland City Council has decided who to appoint as the city's new police chief, it's time to put the past behind and to look to an exciting new era of law enforcement.

The new chief, appointed in Tuesday's council meeting, is Richard Czech, a 24-year veteran of the Tucson, Ariz., Police Department. He will fill the vacancy left when former Police Chief Wayne Gideon resigned at the end of June, following release of a management study that was sharply critical of the department's operations.

Czech, of course, is aware of the report's critical nature and of recommendations it makes for changes. He's approaching the matter in the correct way by being diplomatically quiet and uncommitting at this point. It's obvious that neither he nor any other new police chief would want to walk in and immediately begin making changes without having conducted a full personal assessment of the department's strengths and weaknesses. That will come with time and when it does the changes necessary will become obvious.

During the four months the city was without a chief, the department appeared to operate free of discord and conflict, and the city's residents remained largely safe from crime. That is a tribute to assistant chief, Maj. Sid Corley, and the other fine men and women in the department who perform their duties professionally and capably day after day. They are deserving of the community's thanks and admiration.

In coming months the department likely will undergo changes. It should be remembered that the point of any change will be to make law enforcement better and more equitable, and to make the citizens of Midland safer. All the community's residents should join the new police chief in seeking that goal.

We join all Midlanders in welcoming Police Chief Czech and his family to Midland. We hope they will recognize it as a good place to call home.

Have safe Halloween

Remember when Halloween was a good time to be a kid? You went from door-to-door in neighborhoods largely unfamiliar and the only really "mean" thing that might happen was being hit by a water balloon or two.

Those days are gone, sad to say, but the occasion of Halloween is still celebrated yearly. All the little "ghosts" and "goblins" and "monsters" will be out on the streets of Midland tonight, collecting their treats as payment for not "tricking" those staying indoors.

In the darker side of Halloween, violence has increased in the past several years, but it can still be a fun family evening — with the proper precautions:

— Motorists should drive slowly and watchfully, realizing that youngsters may dash across streets or from in between parked vehicles.

— Parents should mark children's costumes with reflective tape or similar substances to make youngsters easier for motorists to see.

— Parents should restrict their children to trick-or-treating within known neighborhoods and should inspect all goodies for razor blades, pins or other foreign matter before letting kids eat it.

Follow these and other commonly recognized safety rules and make this Halloween a good memory for years to come.

Syria as outlaw

Even people aware of its record of brutality find it hard to believe that Syria could coldly conspire to plant a bomb on an Israeli airliner carrying nearly 400 people.

It is not so much that the act charged was heinous — that might not stop Hafez Assad from doing what he thought was necessary — but that this calculating man assumed the considerable risk of Israel's retaliation.

Yet a British court has tried a man accused of being a Syrian agent and found him guilty of just such a plot, which the Israelis aborted; the British government reports "conclusive evidence" linking the convicted terrorist to the Syrians.

British justice and the British word are not lightly dismissed. Damascus, of course, denies everything.

The British at once broke relations, which brands Syria for a terrible crime and deprives it of the diplomatic facilities and privileges that make state-sponsored terrorism the menace it is.

Damascus ousted Britain's embassy and withdrew its overflight rights, and British diplomacy in the Middle East now loses its Syrian dimension. But Britain could not have done less for this outrage.

In each of these episodes, friendly states are called on to show solidarity and to advance their own self-interest in fighting terrorism. But they also are pulled to protect other national interests, sometimes selfish ones.

In this instance, the United States repaid in part Britain's favor in lending its bases to Washington for the strike against Libya: President Reagan recalled the American ambassador in Damascus — a gesture that will not of itself cramp the style of a state that has shown itself ready to abuse its diplomatic privileges.

It is a minimal response, rendered so presumably by the American desire to stay in touch with an offending but still important Middle East government, and to secure its co-operation in freeing American hostages and in pacifying Lebanon. Syria is an outlaw, but a weighty actor, too.

The French response, consisting of a statement of support, is still more minimal. The reason seems to be that the French already have a full plate.

Paris has had to swallow its promise of "terrorizing terrorists," and to seek the co-operation of Syria (and of Iran, a greater patron of international terrorism) in order to reclaim its own hostages, and to combat the street bombings in France proper and the attacks against French peace-keeping forces in Lebanon.

Some critics believe France is sheltering commercial and arms deals with Syria and-or Iran. It would be painful if this were true.

The business of vigilance is the vital but easy part of fighting terrorism. Giving the demands of normal life their due, but no more, is the vital and hard part.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Oct. 31, the 304th day of 1986. There are 61 days left in the year. This is Halloween.

Today's highlight in history:

Sixty years ago, magician Harry Houdini died at Grace Hospital in Detroit of gangrene and peritonitis that resulted from a ruptured appendix. He was 52. (Since then, Houdini admirers have held yearly seances in an attempt to contact the escape artist. So far, he hasn't responded.)

On this date:

In 1517, Martin Luther posted the 95 Theses on the door of the Wittenberg Palace church, marking the start of the Protestant Reformation in Germany.

Turkey wants French photo of terrorist

WASHINGTON — France's appeasement of terrorists has taken another ugly turn. The French refuse to let Turkish counterterrorist investigators see secret French photographs of the man who has directed the slaughter of Turkish diplomats and their families.

Jack Anderson

For more than three years, Turkish intelligence officials have been pleading with the French to give them just one picture of the No. 1 Armenian terrorist, who uses the nom de guerre "Hagop Hagopian."

Since 1975, Armenian terrorists have assassinated 70 Turkish diplomats, members of their families and others who got in the line of fire; more than 300 were wounded in these attacks. Of all the world's terror groups, the Armenians are "probably the most impressive in terms of effectiveness," according to a former chief of the CIA's counterterrorism unit.

The deadliest of the Armenian organizations is ASALA, the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia. Its goal is to force the Turkish government to acknowledge what they claim was the 1915 genocide of 1.5 million Armenians by the Ottoman Turks, and to establish an independent Armenian state in eastern Turkey.

Another terrorism expert calls ASALA "the most dangerous terrorist organization in the world" because of its kill ratio. Someone has died in 87 percent of ASALA's attacks, compared to a 14 percent fatality rate for all other terrorist groups.

ASALA was founded in Beirut in 1975 by the shadowy Hagopian, a Syrian-Armenian with Marxist inclinations. His shooting and bombing targets were Turkish diplomats in Western Europe, Canada and the United States. But his policy of indiscriminate butchery, in which innocent bystanders were also victims, led at least one group to break away from ASALA.

Following the Israeli invasion of Lebanon in 1982, Hagopian fled and set up new bases in Damascus and Athens. He also broke with the Palestine Liberation Organization, which had given ASALA training and support. Hagopian linked up with Abu Nidal, the anti-PLO leader responsible for much of the anti-American terrorism in the past year or so.

Hagopian has never given a face-to-face interview, and descriptions of him vary. A photo of him would be of enormous value to the Turks, who have been trying to track him down.

The French secret services have obtained photographs of Hagopian. Intelligence sources tell us that a top PLO leader, Salah Khalaf, slipped the French some pictures of Hagopian and other Armenian terrorists in December 1982, following the ASALA-PLO break.

Using these pictures, the French were able to identify Hagopian when he visited Paris in April 1983. They didn't arrest him, but followed him to all his secret meetings and compiled an extensive file on ASALA.

As we reported, the French cut a deal with ASALA in January 1982, releasing an Armenian leader in return for an end to a series of deadly bombings. The truce was broken in July 1983, by the premature detonation at Orly Airport of a bomb terrorists say was intended to go off aboard a Turkish airliner.

Using the information from their surveillance of Hagopian, the French quickly rounded up 51 people linked to ASALA. One of them, Varadjian Garbidjian, was sentenced to life for murder; he is one of three terrorists whose release has been demanded by those responsible for the recent wave of bombings in Paris.

One astonishing theory for the French refusal to give Hagopian's picture to the Turks is that Garbidjian, the Armenian terrorist now in a French prison, may be the elusive Hagopian. A photo of Hagopian would enable the Turks to prove this by comparing it to pictures taken of Garbidjian at his public trial.

The Hagopian/Garbidjian theory would explain the wave of Paris bombings. ASALA (with a little help from Abu Nidal) wants its founder released; with the previous deal as precedent, the Armenian terrorists figure they can win Hagopian/Garbidjian's freedom with a series of bombings.

They could be right. The French may selfishly decide to free Hagopian/Garbidjian and save France from Armenian terrorism — at incalculable cost to Turkey.

STOP SKULKING: Treasury officials have been complaining for years about the poor quality of economic intelligence the CIA produces, and say that's why, for example, the United States was blind-sided by the sudden emergence of the Latin American debt crisis. One former high Treasury official attributed the CIA's economic weaknesses to the spooks' predilection for cloak-and-dagger intrigue as opposed to more humdrum research. "I said (to CIA Director William Casey), 'I bet you can tell me how many jeeps there are in the Mexican army.' I went there and argued with Casey about the economic stuff," he recalled. He said he implored Casey to upgrade economic intelligence.

Time to smooth differences left at Iceland

GENEVA, Switzerland — The experts — some Americans, allies and most probably Russians too — are beginning to reap the wages of cynicism. For almost as long as there have been nuclear arsenals, various leaders have toyed with a hopeful public, offering to wipe out weapons and remove threats.

Flora Lewis

But the fact is that while they argued, the notions were not taken seriously in the back rooms where planning is done.

That is why there is such a backlash now against the outcome of Reykjavik. President Reagan and General Secretary Gorbachev came near to agreeing on some of the major principles that have been mouthed for so long. Suddenly the planners were faced with the prospect that their assumptions might have to be scrapped and a whole new set of calculations begun almost from scratch.

It isn't true that the ideas hadn't been discussed. There were endless sessions within the U.S. administration and endless consultations with allies about the zero option, big cuts in big weapons and so on. But as the bureaucrats put it, they were taken as long-range objectives to be set aside for some fine day, or to put it bluntly, as propaganda blasts to appease a worried world.

Reagan's letter to Gorbachev on July 25, which talked of eliminating ballistic missiles in 10 years, was cleared by the Defense Department, with opportunity for analysis by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Apparently they didn't focus on the time frame, only on the first steps. Now they realize that 10 years is a very short time in terms of military hardware, and they want to impose more conditions.

President Mitterrand of France was also given the substance of the letter for his comment. He objected to a part that said that of course French, British and Chinese weapons would have to be taken into account when the time came to get rid of all missiles. That passage was removed at his request. He did not object to the other proposals that are provoking French complaints now, though not from Mitterrand himself.

For a long time there has been a noticeable contrast between the warm endorsements European leaders give American defense policy at NATO meetings and top-level talks, and the fears and grievances about the policy pouring out of their capitals.

The explanation seems to be that the people at the summits felt it more important to make a show of friendship with Reagan and of alliance unity, and left it to underlings to voice their governments' concerns.

Something similar was happening within the U.S. government. Nobody wanted to make a flat challenge to the president, but many relied on the fine print to divert the implications of the rhetoric. It may be that Reagan did not realize that. Now he is going to have to make hard choices between the positions he has taken and his advisers' qualms.

A compromise put forward in Reykjavik was to separate the 10-year missile abolition pledge and the 10-year promise not to withdraw from the ABM treaty into linked five-year segments. Only if commitments for the first five years were carried out adequately would both promises for the next five years be obligatory.

According to sources here, this and other American positions developed at Reykjavik have all been formally put on the arms control negotiating table. There are contradictory reports from Washington that suggest that attempts continue to cut back on Reagan's summit proposals rather than just add details and more precise definitions.

So far, the Russians have not put down their specific Reykjavik position in Geneva, though they have repeated that Moscow stands by Gorbachev's offers. Some contradictory statements from the Russians in the last week indicate that Moscow too is having trouble pulling together what it really means in clear terms.

The next step should be for the negotiators to draw up an agreed list of what both sides accepted in Geneva, and a list of what they thought was agreed but now interpret differently, possibly as a result of language ambiguities.

Then they can turn to the remaining acknowledged differences, which are important but not so big as to make a settlement impossible if both sides really want one. That will confound the cynics, but no compromise gets applause from those who oppose all compromise.

There are certainly risks in halving, and more in eliminating, nuclear missiles. But they are not as great as keeping what exists and adding to them. Now is the time to make words of hope mean what they say.

Sanctions against South Africa revealing

The sanctions Congress voted against the Republic of South Africa tell us something about ourselves that is just about as unpleasant as apartheid.

When you wage economic warfare against a friendly government, as opposed to a self-declared enemy, you are saying that there is no rational basis on which another nation may determine its relationship with you.

Charley Reese

To vote sanctions against a staunchly anti-communist, pro-capitalist nation — while providing credits and trade concessions to communist, anti-U.S. countries such as China and the Soviet Union — borders on insanity.

The claim that the sanctions move was expression of concern for human rights is as phony as the claim that the Holocaust never happened. According to Uganda's current president, 750,000 people have perished in Uganda at the hands of black tyrants — including Idi Amin — in a period of 20 years. Why is Congress not outraged over that? Or over the human repression in Mozambique, Angola, Zimbabwe and several other black African nations, not to mention the long list of other barbarous nations with which we do business.

No, the South African sanctions vote was simply domestic, racial politics. Otherwise there is no explaining conducting foreign relations on a pragmatic basis in most cases and on a human rights basis in a few isolated cases involving small countries like South Africa.

The attitude exhibited by Congress toward the African Continent is that it is OK if blacks abuse blacks but whites must not. If that isn't racism, grits aren't made out of corn. That's the same kind of paternalistic racism you use to hear in Southern courts when a black who committed a crime against a black received a more lenient sentence. The unstated assumption in both instances is: Well, what can you expect of blacks?

Well, unless you secretly believe that blacks are inferior human beings, you can expect of them the same thing you expect of whites. A crime committed against black human beings by a black tyrant is no different than a crime committed against black human beings by a white tyrant. The racist assumptions of apartheid are no better or no worse than the racist assumptions of one-tribe dictatorships in other African countries. You don't hand out free passes on human rights abuses to people with black skin if you are sincerely concerned about human rights.

On the other hand, if you are interested in racial domestic politics, that's exactly what you do.

I'm not really concerned about South Africa one way or another. Apartheid is doomed — President P.W. Botha himself has said that. It will either be dismantled completely by the government which has already gone a long way toward that goal or it will be destroyed by revolution, but it's going. Not even the most determined Afrikaner can defeat birth rates.

What concerns me is the United States. I'm concerned that a Congress that can act so foolishly, cynically and hypocritically on this issue is very apt to act the same way on matters that affect our national survival. I'm concerned that people willing to sacrifice the interests of South Africans to political expediency will sacrifice our interests to political expediency. I'm concerned that politicians too cowardly to stand on principles — the principles that relationships between nations are based on reciprocity and that one nation has no right to interfere in the internal affairs of another — will not have the courage to make tough decisions on issues of defense and fiscal affairs.

Character, like pregnancy, is an all or nothing affair. You are either honest or dishonest, brave or cowardly, principled or unprincipled. People who do the right thing only when it is convenient or profitable are not moral people.

Edward Gibbon believed the rise and fall of nations depended a great deal on the quality of their leaders. He was right. We're in trouble.

Officials vow to destroy tons of plantation-grown marijuana

By MIKE ROBINSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department officials, backed by tough new law enforcement powers, are vowing to wipe out thousands of tons of marijuana grown on clandestine plantations deep in the national forests.

A 500-member unit will investigate marijuana growers representing a "highly organized criminal element" and guarding their forest enclaves with snipers, attack dogs and lethal traps, officials said Thursday.

Agriculture Department agents will be equipped with see-in-the-dark spy scopes and other high-tech devices in the war on growers who produce $1 billion worth of marijuana in the national forests annually, amounting to 20 percent of the U.S. crop, the officials said.

They said the danger to tourists and forest rangers from the growers has become so great that 940,000 of the national forest system's 191 million acres are now under "constrained management," meaning federal workers try to avoid them and warn tourists they are too dangerous to enter.

"I consider this to be an intolerable situation," Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng told a news conference that included a videotape of agents in camouflage combat fatigues launching a military-style assault on a hut surrounded by forest.

It also depicted agents ripping out cannibis plants and feeding them into a fire that produced clouds of smoke. It showed another group tacking up a "potbuster" poster showing a green marijuana leaf with a red line through it and warning that growing it was illegal.

"Our goal is a very simple one — we hope to make the national forests free of marijuana," Lyng said.

The National Forest Service, an agency of the Agriculture Department, made public a map showing heavy marijuana growing activity in Northern California, Southern Illinois and the Ozarks, among other places.

George Dunlop, the assistant secretary of agriculture for natural resources and environment, told the news conference that the growers were part of "a highly organized criminal element."

"These aren't just casual counter-culture-type folk who are back in the woods," said Dunlop, a former Marine and one-time aide to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Dunlop will spearhead the drive, which was authorized at a level of $20 million by the newly minted anti-drug law.

He called the marijuana being grown in the national forests "an extremely potent, mind-altering drug" and added: "We are just being overwhelmed by the amount of marijuana that is being grown."

He said increased penalties in the new law for marijuana growers who use devices to maim and kill to guard their crops represent "an obvious effort to give them a market incentive not to use booby traps."

On hand to demonstrate booby traps that have been removed from the national forests was Special Agent Ed Few, who worked in California until recently.

One trap shown at the news conference consisted of a wooden 2-by-4 with a rat trap attached. When a trip wire springs the trap shut, a nail is driven into a connected pipe containing a shotgun shell, which then fires at anyone in its path.

Max Peterson, chief of the forest service, said a ranger recently accompanied a women's club excursion hunting for wildflowers in the Klamath National Forest in Northern California and found a number of live grenades dancing on the end of a trip wire.

Doberman pinschers and pit bulldogs, trained to attack interlopers, also have been used to guard marijuana plantations, according to Dunlop. He added that the paths leading to the cannibis patches have at times been booby trapped with fishhooks hanging by almost invisible line and designed "to pull your eyes out."

NATION in brief

ACLU protests directive aimed at rights of military

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union is calling on Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger to rescind a directive aimed at discouraging members of the service from joining hate groups like the Ku Klux Klan.

The ACLU's protest, spelled out in a letter dated Oct. 23 and released this week, calls Weinberger's directive a violation of the constitutional rights of freedom of expression and assembly for military personnel.

The directive, signed by Weinberger on Sept. 8, did not flatly prohibit membership in groups like the KKK. However, it did conclude that participation was incompatible with military service.

The directive called on commanders to use their authority "to ensure that all personnel fully appreciate their responsibility to their comrades and to the nation to uphold and advance the principle of individual equality."

Soldiers leave for Sinai

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soldiers from the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., will leave next week for peace-keeping duties in the Sinai Desert, the Pentagon says.

Approximately 800 soldiers will begin departing Fort Campbell on Nov. 4 to replace soldiers from the 82nd Airborne for six months of peace-keeping duties with the Multinational Force and Observers, the Pentagon said Thursday.

The upcoming tour by the 101st will be the first since the Dec. 12 disaster in which 248 members of the division died in an airplane crash. Eight crew members also were killed when the chartered commercial airliner ferrying them home for Christmas crashed in Gander, Newfoundland.

The tour will mark the 11th rotation of American soldiers to the Sinai Desert since the MFO was established in 1981 to guarantee the security provisions of the 1979 peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

'Star Wars' ineffective?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A majority of the National Academy of Science believes the "Star Wars" program will be ineffective against Soviet nuclear attack, according to a survey.

The survey of NAS members in scientific fields relevant to Star Wars, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, was released Thursday. The survey was conducted by the Cornell Institute for Social and Economic Research, a private organization affiliated with Cornell University.

Of those responding, 78 percent said prospects are either "extremely poor" or "poor" that a survivable and cost-effective Star Wars system can be built within the next 25 years. Only 4 percent said the odds of success are better than even.

The survey also found that 60 percent said the annual Star Wars budget should be $1.5 billion or less, while 7 percent thought it should be greater than the $3.5 billion approved by Congress this year.

Bias in public TV probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Corporation for Public Broadcasting is asking for proposals for an evaluation to determine whether there is bias in programs on public television.

The study may also evaluate the attitudes and observe the working practices of journalists who produce the shows as one measure of objectivity, the corporation said in its request form.

In asking for proposals, CPB said it recognized that "concepts such as 'objectivity,' 'balance,' 'accuracy' 'fairness' — even 'controversial issues' command no widely shared meanings."

Rozanne Weissman, CPB vice president for corporate communications, said Thursday the requests for proposal sent out Oct. 24 called for "a study of objectivity and balance in CPB-funded television shows."

Landing gear of plane fails

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The landing gear of a commuter plane collapsed on touchdown, injuring one passenger seriously enough to be hospitalized while several others were treated for cuts and bruises, officials said.

The twin-engine, turbo-propeller Wings West plane was landing Thursday evening at Santa Barbara Municipal Airport when the gear collapsed, said Robert Duhl, a spokesman for the Santa Barbara County Fire Department. Twelve passengers were on the plane, he said.

Lewis Sweeney, 43, of Mesa, Ariz., suffered leg fractures and was taken to Goleta Valley Community Hospital.

Cloudy skies anticipated

Cloudy skies will blanket the Midland area through Saturday, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The high on Saturday is expected to be in the lower 70s.

Tonight, with winds out of the south at 10-15 mph, the low should be in the middle 50s. Winds will continue out of the south at 10-15 mph through Saturday.

Thursday's high of 74 was 14 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1947. Today's low of 52 was 20 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1949.

STATE

Pleasant weather was in store for most of Texas for at least part of the weekend, forecasters said.

There was a chance of showers over West Texas by Saturday, spreading eastward into North Texas by late Saturday afternoon or Saturday night.

Forecasts called for clear to partly cloudy skies and mild to warm temperatures through Saturday.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 50s, ranging from the 30s and 40s in the upper levels in Southwest Texas to the 60s in extreme South Texas and along the gulf coast.

Highs Saturday will be mostly in the 70s and 80s although temperatures will begin falling in the afternoon from the west.

High pressure kept skies clear early today except for a few scattered clouds in East Texas and along the coastal plains. Some fog was also reported at dawn in Southeast Texas and East Texas.

NATION

Rain and snow fell in the West today as winds gusting up to 68 mph howled over parts of the region and the Great Lakes and cold air pushed temperatures below freezing in Montana and the Northeast.

Light snow dusted the northern Rockies and parts of eastern Montana, while scattered rain fell in Washington and Oregon.

A travelers' advisory was posted for the northwest Montana mountains, where snow, wind and low temperatures made roads slippery and visibility poor. A travelers' advisory for snow remained in effect in the Oregon Cascades.

A band of rain and snow extended from northeast Utah to southern Wyoming and northwest Colorado, and rain extended from northwest Nebraska into central South Dakota. Widely scattered rainshowers fell over north Florida.

Strong winds blew along Colorado's Front Range, including a gust of 68 mph near Fort Collins.

United Way's 'star story' heads small business group

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of three features on the United Way. This installment features Gregg Holmes, who has been one of the most successful fund-raisers in this year's campaign.

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Throughout the United Way campaign, attention is focused on the numbers or the agencies, while the most integral part of the endeavor sometimes goes unnoticed, save for a short mention at a report luncheon.

There would be no campaign and no money if it were not for the volunteer.

The man whom Campaign Chairman Tom Wageman has referred to as "the star story of this year's campaign" has gone where some thought no man could go in 1986 — above and beyond the amount his division raised last year.

"Gregg has been absolutely spectacular.

"He's been able to transfer his enthusiasm and commitment to a group of young volunteers who are really making a difference. They're going to make a difference this year, and next year and the next years after that," Wageman said.

Gregg Holmes is chairman of the small business division, which includes businesses who employ a small amount of people and are often located in strip centers or malls, he said.

Last year, the small business division raised about $14,500, Holmes said.

Figures released at Thursday's report luncheon show Holmes' team has already put $17,959 in the UW coffers — a mere 124 percent of what the division raised last year.

"We felt that the needs were greater this year, so we set a goal of raising $1,000 more than we had last year. We also set a stretch goal of $2,000 more so we'd really have something to shoot for," Holmes said.

Gregg Holmes

Holmes, who's lived in Midland since 1984, has been involved with the United Way since 1976 when he lived in Corpus Christi, he said.

This Texas Tech graduate said he feels UW is such a worthy cause because it touches so many people.

"It's important to me to participate and put something back into the community...it's important to be a part of it instead of just sitting there 'existing'," Holmes said.

"United Way has so many services, it really helps keep a community well. If I can play a role, I have every obligation and desire to," he added.

Holmes, who is vice president of the southwestern region of Times Mirror Cable Television, doesn't just go home after a day at the office and a few UW phone calls and plop down on the couch, either.

In addition to his UW duties, he is an officer of Leadership Midland, on the boards of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and Casa de Amigos, an executive board member of the Small Business Council, on the Chamber's M-Squad and chairman of the board of the Council Against Substance Abuse.

Holmes' success this year stems from what he said is recruiting the right stuff.

"This is not just an 8 to 5 job. The people we recruited understood (the needs of this year's campaign) and looked at it as more than just a professional or token duty.

"Your section chairman help a lot; without them it would have been a miserable campaign.

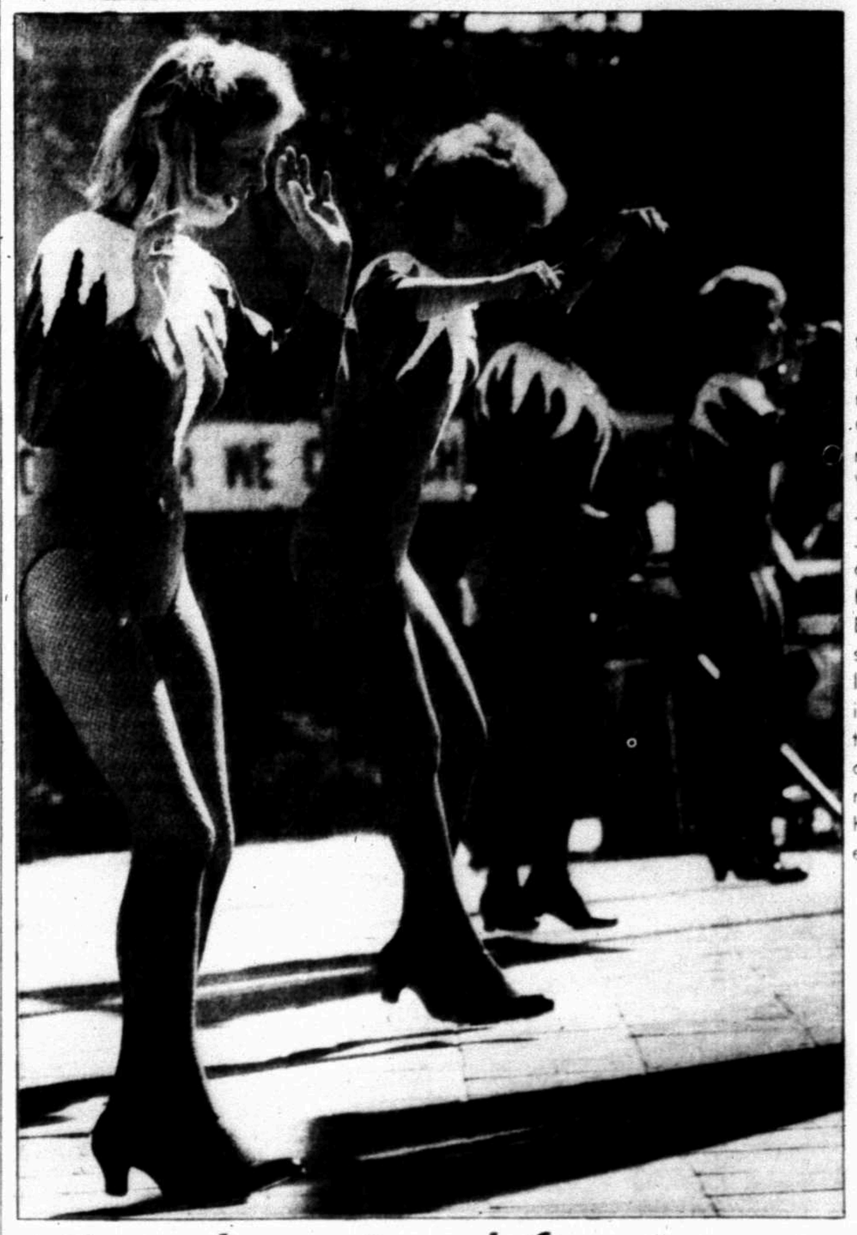

"We had to be prepared. We got out there and knocked on doors and told them about the benefits of giving," Holmes said.

"His success is just a reflection of the kind of person he is. He's well-organized and when he says he going to do something, he does it. He's enthusiastic and a leader," Wageman said.

Holmes said he's looking to raise $20,000 for his division this year and that he feels it's a "do-able" goal. Last year, the overall campaign raised $2,120,036, but this year organizers have said no goal has been set because of the economic situation in Midland.

Among the new donors he added to the small business division list, which has more than 300 accounts, none of them oil-related, are the Midland Softball Association, the Midland Soccer Association and the Midland Apartment Association.

"The spirit of volunteerism is incredible in the city. I've got a super wife and a healthy daughter. I'm fortunate and excited to help others any way I can."

Funds raised for campaign 'absolutely spectacular'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The $1.503 million so far raised in the United Way of Midland's 1986 campaign is "absolutely spectacular," Tom Wageman, campaign chairman, said Thursday in the agency's rally in Midland Centennial Plaza.

"Midland responds when times are tough," he said in noting today's economic slump. Midland's oil revenues are down by 40 to 60 percent, he said, and revenues of the support industry are down "even more."

Wageman, president of RepublicBank First National Midland, said people are "reaching deeper to help" the less fortunate in the community.

"We're gift-givers," he said. And people who heed United Way volunteers' pleas to give funds to the agency are rewarded with that "feeling-good" sense. "Be a 'yes' person," he said. "Bring a difference in somebody's life."

In referring to the enthusiasm of United Way volunteers, Wageman said that "our spirit is not like ice; it's like fire."

"We are in love with helping our fellow citizens in Midland," he said. The United Way funds 16 agencies in helping "boys and girls, moms and dads, and teenagers who are in need of help," Wageman said.

In noting the hearty enthusiasm of United Way volunteers, Wageman cited the excitement for United Way at Exxon USA in Midland. Exxon employees here contributed $100,250 to United Way at the encouragement of volunteers Beth Bianchi and Dan Whiteman.

"It was a thrill for me to be at Exxon's rally," Wageman said.

Last year, United Way raised $2.12 million.

"Our goal (in 1986) is to raise every dollar that we can," said Candy Stoltz, United Way campaign director.

The United Way's campaign finale will be Nov. 13 when the agency will announce the amount of funds it raised this year.

Ms. Stoltz credited the $1.503 million raised so far in part to first-time United Way givers and to people responding to needs of their fellow Midlanders.

"The needs are greater," she said, "and people see that. In down times, I think people respond more than ever. A lot of people are just digging a little deeper."

In Odessa, the United Way there has raised about 66 percent of its $820,000 goal, Nancy Miertschin, Odessa United Way executive director, said after the rally. She said that the goal is 13.5 percent above that of 1985 and that the giving reflects the "enthusiastic volunteers" there. "We've got a lot of companies and individuals giving."

Prior to Wageman's spirited talk and prior to announcements of United Way funds raised in 1986, four Groovy Grannies from Bingham Dance Center performed several dance routines to nickelodeon music, Big Band songs, show tunes, theme songs, and danced to a jazzed-up version of "When the Saints Go Marching In." Dancers were Jackie Comola, Mary Lou King, Laura Williams and Joyce Swift.

"They (the Groovy Grannies) are enjoying it as much, if not more so, than the audience," said Steve Hardin, manager of the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Economic Development.

Ed Clements, KCRS radio news director who emceed the rally, sported a black warlock's hat on the eve of Halloween. He shot a mild barb at the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

"Somebody asked me where I got this hat," he said and jested. "The head of FDIC had it in his office and brought it over."

Several United Way agencies serve both Odessa and Midland

EDITOR's NOTE: Many questions are often asked about the United Way, which is entering its fifth week of its local campaign. Following are some of the more common inquiries, according to United Way officials.

Q. Many of us live in Odessa and work in Midland. Are we expected to support United Way of Midland?

A. Several United Way agencies in Midland serve both Odessa and Midland. United Way of Midland will honor notation of pledge cards to designate an Odessa agency. The agencies are: American Red Cross, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Permian Basin Girl Scout Council and the Boy Scouts of America, Buffalo Trail Council.

Q. What is the 1986 United Way goal?

A. The United Way does not have a goal this year. They are trying to raise as much as they can. During tough times, the demand for services from the agencies has been increasing. They need our help more than ever.

Q. Does my money go as handouts to people who refuse to help themselves?

A. No. One of the advantages of giving to the UnitedWay is the assurances to you, the giver, that campaign dollars are allocated to agencies in accordance with community needs. Volunteers not only raise money; they help decide how the dollars should be allocated to help the right people.

Q. Are United Way agencies just for the poor?

A. Dollars contributed to United Way are allocated where they will do the most good for the entire community. Member agencies' services are aimed at helping all people, no matter what their income level. Perhaps you, a member of your family, or one of your neighbors or co-workers has benefited from services provided with United Way funding.

Q. Why have a United Way campaign?

A. The annual fund-raising drive which helps to provide a multitude of services is the most efficient, economical method yet devised. It works so well because volunteers can combine their resources for one appeal instead of many individual drives. Contributors too, have the opportunity to see their human service dollars go the farthest to do the most good, helping to support many agencies through one gift.

About 1,000 people apply for 120 jobs at wholesale warehouse

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

About 1,000 people have applied for 120 jobs at a new wholesale warehouse that will open in early December, said Joe Hatcher, area manager with the Texas Employment Commission.

"We had lines all the way around the building," said Hatcher about applicants to Sam's Wholesale Club earlier this week.

Some TEC employees said the applicants formed the longest line they have seen in 10 years.

The employment office is screening applicants for the warehouse.

"It means a lot of people are looking for work, but we've known that for a number of months now," Hatcher said.

But Midland — with an 12.3 percent unemployment rate — has not recently had a large company come in offering this many jobs, he said.

"We haven't had a company that would hire a hundred people. We just haven't had that kind of order," Hatcher said.

Employers who screen prospective employees through TEC usually have one or two openings and at the most 20 openings, he said.

Hatcher said a lot of the applicants were not registered with the TEC and they are not receiving unemployment checks.

Some applicants were employed and saw an opportunity to work for a new company, he said.

But Hatcher said he didn't know how many of the 1,000 applicants were employed.

"As far as we're concerned, if they come in here looking for a job they're unemployed," Hatcher said.

Hatcher said TEC has sent 80 applicants to interview with warehouse officials and about 22 were hired for other jobs.

GOP's Barrera Jr. cites 'years of disgrace' with Mattox

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Barrera Jr.

Republican attorney general hopeful Roy Barrera Jr. spoke here Thursday, saying "Nov. 4 is a day when we will demonstrate to the state of Texas that Jim Mattox is not entitled to a new contract."

Barrera said that despite statewide polls, which show him trailing Mattox by as much as 20 percentage points, "the only poll that counts is the one taken on Nov. 4."

Barrera noted that he has received endorsements from 16 publications including the Dallas Morning News, the Houston Post and newspapers in San Antonio and El Paso.

The support, he said, shows that "Mattox has four years of disgrace that cannot be covered up with makeup or 30-second television spots."

Barrera said he has received $281,000 in campaign contributions to Mattox's $230,000 in the past four weeks, indicating his camp has the momentum going in to Tuesday's General Election.

Barrera launched his quest for attorney general in January and has spent the past 10 months traveling across the state, promising to "return honesty, integrity and professionalism to the state's highest law enforcement position."

After 10 years of public service, Barrera says he has gained the reputation as "the straight arrow" because of his tough law and order stance on crime.

In his six years on the bench, the 34-year-old Bexar County district judge said he has handled more than 3,500 criminal cases including more than 300 felony jury trials and four death penalty cases.

Barrera also claimed that in 1985 alone, he imposed over 11,000 years of imprisonment and has collected over $1 million in fines, fees and victim compensation.

Barrera said Texas has fallen into a state of disrepair in the area of law enforcement under Mattox's reign.

He noted that more than 38,000 persons are incarcerated in the Texas Department of Corrections and over 40,000 are on parole, with the rate of repeat arrests exceeding 60 percent.

If elected, Barrera said he would work for stiffer penalties and sentences for repeat and habitual offenders.

He said Mattox has touted his Child Support Program as his star achievement and yet drained the fund to promote his administrative programs.

Inspector charged with stealing sheep

From Staff Reports

A Texas Railroad Commission employee was arrested and charged with stealing livestock off an Upton County ranch, the Upton County Sheriff's office reported.

Everado Torres of San Angelo was arrested around 5:30 p.m. Tuesday after an Upton County Sheriff officer found one live sheep in the back of his state Texas Railroad Commission car.

The 29-year-old engineering technician was charged with felony theft of livestock and released on a $1,500 bond Wednesday.

If convicted of the third-degree felony theft, Torres could face 2 to 10 years in jail and up to a $5,000 fine.

Torres was arrested as he left the Ballenger Ranch on King Mountain in Upton County, said Sheriff Glenn Willeford.

The engineering technician was on the ranch inspecting wells when a ranch worker reported the stolen sheep, Willeford said.

Indigent cases hurting MMH, Branson says

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Indigent health care is becoming more and more of a fly in Midland Memorial Hospital's financial ointment, hospital district directors indicated at Thurday's board meetings.

"There is a significant number of indigent cases showing up on the bad debt side of the register. These bad debts show up in higher hospital prices," Ray Branson, MMH president told Midland County Hospital District directors.

"We must be careful to be competitive in our rate structure," Branson said.

Figures released by Anthony Little, MMH comptroller, show the MCHD general fund owes MMH $245,934.83 as of Sept. 30, 1986, but because of insufficient cash, can't pay it at this point.

The total breaks down into $220,903.39 for indigent care, $12,157.26 in midwife salaries, $2,182.18 in pharmacy outpatient charges, $1,542 in travel expenses and $9,150 in obstetrician fees.

So far this year, the hospital district has spent $2,714,170 on indigent care, reports show.

Group tells illegal aliens to avoid authorities

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national Hispanic group is warning illegal aliens who plan to apply for amnesty to keep away from immigration authorities for now, because "you may be subject to deportation."

Undocumented aliens also were told to start collecting documents that could prove they came to the United States before 1982 and have lived here continuously ever since — the basic requirement for amnesty.

The "Action Alert" was sent by the National Council of La Raza, a Washington-based Hispanic organization that has 80 affiliates across the country.

The affiliates reach into communities of undocumented immigrants daily through their health centers, farm worker organizations, educational programs, and social service and housing agencies.

The immigration bill is waiting for the promised signature of President Reagan. It would couple amnesty for illegal aliens with fines and prison terms for employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers.

Both the legalization and employer sanction programs will have a six-month phase-in period once the bill becomes law. Information will be distributed during that time, but no employers will be punished and legalization applications likely will not be accepted.

"Don't go to the INS to apply for legalization," La Raza advises. "If you do go now and attempt to apply, you may be subject to deportation."

Charles Kamasaki, director of policy analysis for the group, said his organization also is warning of "unscrupulous individuals trying to make a fast buck," by advertising their help with the legalization process.

"Don't pay money to anyone who purports to be able to help you apply for legalization," the alert says. "Community-based organizations will be responsible for counseling and otherwise helping applicants for legalization. Wait until the final regulations have been developed."

In collecting documentation, La Raza suggested, aliens should look for "rent receipts, utility payment receipts, W-2 or other employer and tax-related forms."

"If you cannot establish continuous residence in this way, contact a parish priest or someone else who may be able to sign an affidavit indicating that this person knows you to have been in this country continuously since before the cutoff date.

"Final decisions have not yet been made on what constitutes adequate documentation; the more the better."

The organization is reminding employers that sanctions only apply to new hires, not existing workers.

"Remember," the alert tells employers, "that you could be subject to employment discrimination charges if you refuse to hire applicants or fire current employees who are citizens or legal residents.

"The safest course for employers during the next six months, while waiting for regulations on how to implement the sanctions requirements, is to continue current hiring practices, being sure not to discriminate against individuals on the basis of national origin."

Any legal resident who believes he was a victim of discrimination because he was mistaken for an undocumented immigrant should file a complaint with the state or local human rights agency, La Raza advises.

Victims would include those fired or those suspecting they were turned down for a job because of their national origin.

Legal aliens also are advised to collect documents that prove their status, such as a passport, citizenship certificate, naturalization document, and birth certificate.

Meanwhile, the Immigration and Naturalization Service said the coming legalization program has had no effect on its enforcement operations.

"It's just business as usual right now," said Henry McGehee, deputy district director of the INS in the El Paso, Texas, region. "We haven't received any instructions."

Verne Jervis, the INS spokesman in Washington, said the agency is not ready to announce what changes will take place in enforcement once Reagan signs the bill. But in the meantime, Jervis said, "We are enforcing the law as it currently exists."

Apprehensions of illegal aliens are running at a record 1.8 million this year, according to the INS. For each person captured, two or three others get through — some of whom have crossed the border several times. Estimates of illegal aliens in the country number in the millions, but nobody really knows the accurate figure.

After the six-month phase-in period for the amnesty program, applications for temporary residency would be accepted. After 18 months as a temporary resident, these aliens would have a year to apply and win approval for permanent residency. They also could work toward citizenship.

Those going through the process would be ineligible for federal welfare benefits for five years, but could receive state and local assistance.

'Outstanding young lady' rates royal treatment

The Bright Side

EL PASO (AP) — Except for a special bus and use of the school elevator, wheelchair-bound Gloria Fernandez gets no special treatment at El Paso Hanks High School.

But she'll get the royal treatment Saturday when she joins the homecoming court as the sophomore princess.

Ms. Fernandez, 15, who has used a wheelchair since a car accident disabled her two years ago, beat the odds and 20 other sophomore girls for a place on the court.

"I was happy, excited, nervous, but it felt good," she said. "It's my way of being a part of the school."

"She's just an incredibly outstanding young lady," Sally Jameson of the district's Special Education Department said. "She's adapted extremely well to her disability."

Ms. Fernandez' dream of being a professional dancer was wiped out when a drunken driver hit a car she and other teen-agers were riding in. Before the accident, she had danced with El Paso's Grupo Folklorico Jalisco, a Mexican dance troupe.

"It was a hard blow to all of us. She was among the best of dancers," said Robert Parra, group director.

But her fellow dancers helped spur her slow recovery.

"They stuck with me while I was in the hospital and during physical therapy," Ms. Fernandez said.

Ms. Fernandez is still involved with the dance troupe, attending practices and performances. She also helps with modern dance choreography at Hanks.

At her 15th birthday party, Ms. Fernandez tried a wheelchair waltz and demonstrated her own version of the jarabe tapatio.

She aspires to be a dance choreographer, plans to pursue art and hopes to inspire other disabled people to overcome their physical limitations.

Since MMH doesn't have a total neo-natal intensive care unit, very sick babies are often transferred to Fort Worth Children's Hospital, Lubbock General Hospital, Odessa Medical Center or Odessa Women's and Children's Hospital.

One financial report documents the case of a baby girl who was transferred to another hospital for care from Sept. 25, 1985 to Jan. 17, 1986 in the amount of $179,034.60. Medicaid paid $48,608.25 and the balance due on her stay is $130,426.35.

Dr. William Parks, board of directors chairman, said that when MCHD directors maintained last year's tax rate this year "we knew we were heading for problems."

"We were depending on the hospital to maintain its efficiency," Parks said, but added it was hard for it to do so when money for bad debts resulting from indigent cases had to be found elsewhere.

Child support offices should be based in individual counties, not in Austin, Barrera said.

"Mothers should not have to go to Austin to see an attorney general who is too busy politicking to get litigation in a court of law."

However, Midland county has a child support office with Roy Scott working as an assistant attorney general on child support cases.

Barrera said he has run his campaign on the basis of experience, while his opponent served only two years with the Dallas County District Attorney's Office, tried five jury cases and four divorces.

"Mattox hasn't tried one single case as the Attorney General of Texas," Barrera added. "The only time Mattox was in court was as a defendant being tried for bribery."

Mattox was acquitted on the bribery charge.

Willeford said livestock theft is not unusual, but most people don't report it.

"There's probably a lot of it that goes on that never gets reported," Willeford said.

Torres's supervisor in San Angelo, J. Randall Ross, would not comment on whether Torres has been suspended or not.

Torres, reached at his San Angelo home, also had no comment.

Police probe several burglaries

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

Midland police are investigating several burglaries, including that of construction equipment valued at nearly $6,000 from a local apartment complex.

According to reports, two airless sprayers valued at $5,900 were reported stolen from the Hawthorne House Apts., 2811 W. Loop 250. The equipment was owned by Condominium Associates of Plano, and was being used by a contractor working on the site. Reports said the items were taken sometime between Wednesday 6 p.m. and 10 a.m. Thursday.

Police are also investigating the burglary of a local residence. According to the victim, Olivia Delva, a yellow gold man's wedding band valued at $400, a cable box valued at $250, two gold necklaces valued at $90, and two earrings valued at $80 were stolen from a residence in the 1300 block of E. # Judge declares mistrial in DWI case

FORT WORTH (AP) A Fort Worth judge has declared a mistrial in a driving while intoxicated trial because he said the jurors might be publicly ridiculed if they didn't return a guilty verdict and tough sentence.

County Criminal Court Judge Frank Coffey declared the mistrial after a day and a half of testimony because he said he thought stories published in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Thursday prejudiced the jury against acquittal or a light sentence for David Earl Lipe of White Settlement.

The stories, chiefly based on court records, said judges in Tarrant County appeared to be cracking down on DWI cases and were sending more defendants to jail or prison than in 1985.

Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry was quoted in the news stories as saying he believes misdemeanor juries seem reluctant to return harsh sentences for people convicted of DWI.

"It put this jury on the spot or in the spotlight or under a microscope because of the direction of the articles," Judge Coffey said. The jurors might be criticized for a light sentence.

All six jurors said later they had not read or heard about the stories, prosecutor Sylvia Mandel said. Jurors said they were split, 4-2, in favor of acquittal when the judge stopped the trial.

Two men die in head-on collision

From Staff Reports

GARDEN CITY — Two men were killed in a two-vehicle head-on collision Thursday in Glasscock County, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

According to the DPS, Antonio Garza, 21, of Sonora, and James Edward Gray, 39, of Austin were pronounced dead at 7:14 p.m. at the scene of the accident, 11 miles east of Garden City on Highway 158.

Reports said the truck driven by Garza was traveling westbound on Highway 158 when it crossed into the eastbound lane, and struck head-on the vehicle traveling eastbound driven by Gray.

Both bodies were taken to Johnson Funeral Home in San Angelo.

Two men remain jailed in third-largest coke bust

From Staff Reports

A Waco man and an Oklahoma City man remained in Ector County Jail today on drug possession charges, as Texas Department of Public Safety officials upgraded what was believed to be the fifth-largest cocaine seizure in Texas history to the third-largest.

S.E. Chastain, 63, of Waco, and 55-year-old Edmond Wilson Legler of Oklahoma City were arrested Oct. 24 after a state trooper seized the cocaine from the pickup they were driving, DPS officials said.

Ector County peace justice Virgil Lumpee set bond for the two men, charged with possession of cocaine, at $100,000 each.

According to reports, the cocaine originally was believed to have weighed 663 pounds and was worth $26.5 million.

However, officials later upgraded the amount to 706 pounds, worth about $67.7 million.

A DPS spokesman said officials received a tip that some drugs might be moved through the area and six miles west of Odessa on Interstate 20, state trooper Dennis Riley spotted a 1983 Chevrolet pickup which matched the description of the suspect vehicle.

He stopped the truck and cited the driver for speeding and not wearing a seatbelt. Riley got the driver's written consent to search the truck, and he found the cocaine beneath a plastic sheet in the truck's bed, the spokesman said.

'Sharing is Caring' theme for MS stay-at-home party

From Staff Reports

"Sharing is Caring" is the theme for the 1986 annual Multiple Sclerosis Stay-at-Home Party. Baskets filled with wine, cheese and nuts will be delivered by volunteers to area donors on November 18, 19 and 20.

Participants are asked to "Stay-at-Home for the evening and donate the cost of an evening out to the West Texas Chapter." Donations should be in the MS office by December 4.

Janie Dar, executive director, said "make this Thanksgiving special for your family and those less fortunate by participating in this worthwhile campaign." Proceeds from the campaign go to patient services, such as medical equipment and patient support groups and for the continued research to find a cause and cure for MS.

Multiple Sclerosis is a neurological disease of the central nervous system (the spinal cord and the brain). There are 500,000 persons afflicted with MS in the United States. An estimated two million family members are affected by its heavy social and economic burdens. The disease usually strikes persons between 20 and 40 — "just when they're starting to live." The disease is characterized by alternating periods of worsening (exacerbations) and of stability ir even improvement (remissions).

Anyone interested in being a volunteer or participating in the "Stay-at-Home" party campaign can contact the MS office at 687-3355.

Plan now to collect soil samples from fields to be spring crops

Make plans now to collect soil samples from those fields which will be planted to spring crops. Early assessment of fertilizer needs will help crop producers take advantage of purchasing fertilizers in the fall or winter when prices are generally lower than during the high-demand period in early spring. Also, soil samples can be collected after warm-season crops have been harvested, and problem areas in the fields can be identified more easily for specific sampling.

Traditionally, soil testing laboratories have a lighter load during the fall and early winter so that samples can be processed and results reported more quickly to the sender.

If a soil test indicates that fertilizer is needed to attain a desired yield goal, we strongly recommend its use. Not to fertilize may result in only average yields which don't generate enough income to cover basic production costs. However, fertilizing at recommended rates will often increase yields enoughh to more than pay for the fertilizer and also provide some profit margin.

To help crop producers monitor the carryover or residual nitrogen levels in their soil, the Extension Service soil testing laboratories at College Station and Lubbock routinely analyze soils for nitrate nitrogen. This analysis determines the amount of available nitrogen present in the soil and is subtracted from the amount of nitrogen reqiuired to reach a desired yield goal. The reduced nitrogen recommendation results in a direct savings to the producer without sacrificing yield.

There is no substitute for knowing what your soil's nutrient balance is as you start planning next year's cropping program. Soil testing can provide an economical means of determining you soil's nutrient status and can help you make those major economic decisions with greater confidence.

The Fourth Annual Permian Basin Pecan Seminar and Trade Show is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 1, in Meeting Room 142 at the University of Texas-Permian Basin. Theme for the seminar is Maximizing Pecan Irrigation Resources Through Management.

Speakers will address pond construction feasibility for overcoming irrigation deficits eliminating water robbing weeds, New Mexico and Arizona irrigation practices and water well and irrigation system construction efficiency. A side light on pecan diversification through catfish farming is also on the schedule.

Exhibitors will have the latest in pecan management equipment and irrigation system technology on display. A tour of John and Nadine Sims' pecan orchard in Gardendale that afternoon will top off the program.

Registration will be from 8:00 until 9:00 a.m. in Room 142, at UTPB. The registration fee is $15.00, which includes lunch, exhibit entrance and bus fare to the Sims orchard. The meeting will adjourn at 4:30 p.m.

Continued rains hurting crops

AGRICULTURE

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas farmers with crops to harvest are finding the going tough because of continued rainy weather.

Cotton farmers in central and northern counties have had a hard time wrapping up harvesting operations while cotton and grain farmers in western areas and the plains are struggling to start harvesting their crops.

The rainy weather, combined with the frost and freeze that hit much of the plains more than a week ago, has hurt crops severely, particularly cotton and sorghum that were planted late, said Dr. Zerd Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of the Texas A&M System.

Wet fields are continuing to delay harvesting of some mature crops in the Panhandle and South Plains, such as corn, sorghum, soybeans, peanuts and sugar beets. But pumpkin harvesting is active to meet the seasonal market demand.

Peanut harvesting also has been hampered in west central, central and coastal areas due to the rainy weather, Carpenter noted. And the same holds true for peanut and soybean harvesting in coastal regions.

While the rains have boosted early planting of small grains (wheat and oats) so that they are starting to provide good grazing for livestock, farmers who didn't plant early are now having to wait for fields to dry. A lot of small grain acreage remains to be planted across the Rolling Plains and in a few other locations.

Agricultural activity in the Rio Grande Valley and Winter Garden also has been slowed some by scattered rains, Carpenter said. But farmers are continuing to plant winter vegetables as conditions permit, including onions and spinach in the Winter Garden.

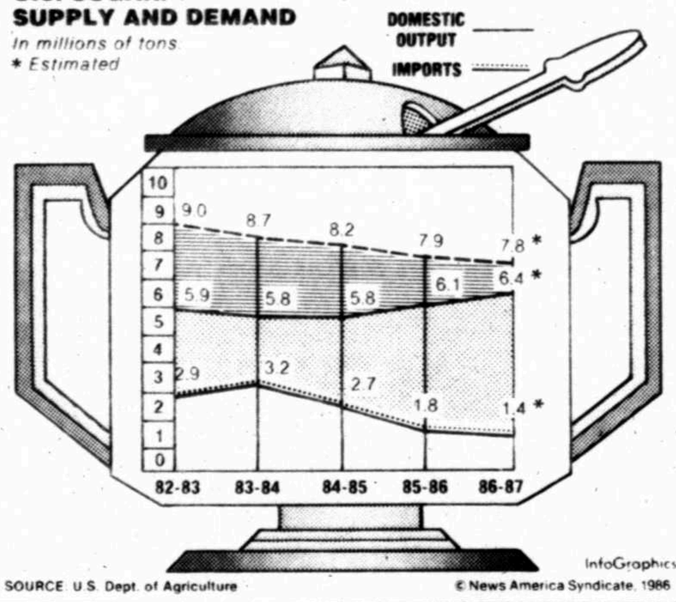

Early oranges are being harvested in the Valley, and farmers are gearing up to start sugarcane harvesting. Harvesting of pickling cucumbers continues in both regions. Fall onion planting is about complete in Far West Texas.

Most livestock over the state is in good shape due to excellent fall grazing conditions brought on by late summer and early fall rains, noted Carpenter. A lot of heavy calves are moving to market and are bringing good prices. Also, deer are in excellent shape as hunting season approaches.

FAR WEST: Cotton maturity problems continue due to cool, wet conditions. Some chile and bell peppers are being harvested; fall onion planting is about complete. Pecan harvesting has started; crop quality is excellent but yields are off.

U.S. sugar quotas

Analysts predict 1986-87 sugar imports will hit a five-year low, following stricter U.S. quotas. American farmers are expecting a sugar yield of 6.4 million tons in 1986-87 -- 200,000 tons more than the previous year. Consumer demand for sugar in recent years has fallen, but cheaper sugar producers in the Caribbean and El Salvador are losing ground in the American market because of favorable set prices for American producers.

Export hype aimed at sweet tooths

WASHINGTON (AP) — An export promotion campaign financed by the Agriculture Department is aimed at the foreign sweet tooth in hopes that consumers in Japan, South Korea, Taiwan and the European Community will want more American chocolate.

Undersecretary Daniel G. Amstutz, who announced the $2.5 million program Wednesday, said the U.S. chocolate industry is a significant consumer of sugar, dairy products, almonds and peanuts.

"Our goal is to help the U.S. chocolate industry counter or offset a number of import barriers that limit access to very significant markets," he said. For example, Amstutz said U.S. confectionery sales to Japan average $12 million a year and could be much larger.

"Total Japanese consumption of these products is estimated at $2 billion, and we project U.S. exports to that country could grow substantially," he said. "We also see excellent growth potential for South Korea, Taiwan and the EC."

The program will be carried out cooperatively with the Chocolate Manufacturers Association. Congress authorized export promotion programs in the Food Security Act of 1985.

Two types of encephalitis virus causing human illness in state

After several quiescent summers, both western equine encephalitis (WEE) virus and St. Louis encephalitis (SLE) virus have caused cases of human illness in Texas. Humans and horses are accidental hosts for these viruses. They are not part of the cycle of infection and cannot transmit the infection. Rather, human or equine cases are evidence that portions of the mosquito population in certain areas are infected with the responsible virus.

Although WEE has been isolated from mosquitoes in Brazoria, Chambers, Lubbock, Midland, Nolan, and Tarrant counties, human and equine cases have been reported only from the Panhandle and High Plains areas of Texas. The first reported human case was a 16 year-old female from rural Hale County who had onset of illness Aug. 3, 1986. She was in Sepula, Okla., from July 25 to 28; however no WEE activity has been reported from that area. The second and third cases were infants who resided in Hereford in Deaf Smith County. All of the human cases resided in rural areas with large mosquito populations. Equine cases have been reported from the Midland area.

The severity of illness associated with WEE virus infection decreases with increasing age. Infants frequently present with high fever and unremitting seizures and the incidence of long-term neurologic sequalae and learning and behavioral disorders is significant.

SLE virus activity is centered in Dallas and Harris counties. Although there have been isolations from mosquitoes and serologic evidence in birds, as yet there has been no confirmed human case in Dallas. On the Gulf Coast, SLE virus has been isolated from mosquitoes and antibodies demonstrated in juvenile birds in Harris County. Six human SLE cases have been confirmed in Baytown. Five patients are adults; one is a child. Dates of onset ranged from Aug. 2 to Aug. 20. Two presumptive case, also in adults, have been reported from the same area. These two individuals have SLE antibody titers, but further work is required to confirm the association with the current illness. Serologic studies are pending on several other suspected cases from the same area. It is important to note that the two presumptive cases are over 60 years of age, and their illnesses were first diagnosed as cerebrovascular accidents. In contrast to WEE, the severity of SLE virus infection increases with increasing age.

Both viruses produce a range of symptoms from none to febrile headache, aseptic meningitis, and severe encephalitis. Fever and headache are frequently the first and most persistent symptoms. Symptoms of encephalitis in adults involve lethargy, confusion, alterations in consciousness, and coma. Infants may present with increased irritability and sleepiness; seizures are common with WEE infections.

The diagnosis of both infections is confirmed by a four-fold rise in antibody titer between serum samples. It is, therefore, important to collect the first sample early in the course of illness. Testing is available at the Houston City Health Department Laboratory, 1115 N. MacGregor, Houston, Texas, 77030 and the Bureau of Laboratories, Texas Department of Health, 1100 West 49th Street, Austin, Texas, 78756.

Public health measures to limit the spread of the infection should be initiated as soon as the illness is suspected. This is accomplished by notifying the local health or mosquito control department.

White writes letter asking for oil tariff

LONE STAR (AP) — Gov. Mark White has written another letter to ask President Reagan to impose a tariff on imported oil, saying the evidence "is clearly overwhelming" that nothing else will resuscitate the U.S. oil industry.

"I realize this is not a politically expedient choice to make, but our nation's security hangs in the balance," said the letter White wrote Thursday.

White announced he was sending the letter after a tour of the Lone Star Steel mill, which has been hardhit by loss of oilfield pipe business.

White's effort drew ridicule from U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm today. The Texas Republican said Reagan "probably got 50,000 letters that were mailed yesterday, and I'm certain one of them will go into the trash can. That's the one from Mark White."

The letter is another indication why Texas would be better served by having Bill Clements as governor instead of White, Gramm said.

"The president works with Democratic senators, Democratic representatives, and Democratic governors, but he never, ever works with Mark White, because Mark White has no credibility. Every issue with Mark White is a political issue."

Gramm said the last time a president imposed an oil import fee, it was during the Ford administration, at the recommendation of the National Security Council, of which Clements as deputy defense secretary, was a member.

On a day in which former GOP Gov. Clements began airing a new television endorsement from Reagan, White spent much of his time chastizing the two Republicans. He slammed Reagan for failing to impose the tariff and Clements for failing to change Reagan's mind.

White also predicted there would be a tariff imposed after Tuesday's elections, suggesting the Republicans think cheap oil will help their chances in other states.

"I think the Republican administration in Washington is holding Texas hostage on its refusal to put an import fee on oil," White said.

Whether his letter has any influence remains to be seen.

Clements vows not to cut education funds

McALLEN (AP) — GOP gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements, wooing the Hispanic vote in South Texas, reiterated his pledge not to cut education as Gov. Mark White has charged.

"I have said it time and time again that under no circumstances would I cut education, and you can count on that," Clements said Thursday.

Clements also said South Texas schools were not being treated fairly.

"We need a thorough investigation, a detailed look into per capita allocation of our educational dollars as it relates to South Texas. Yo''re not getting your fair share," Clements told a crowd of about 1,500 that included some educators.

Clements was joined at a barbecue dinner by Democrat Roy Barrera Sr. whose son, Roy Barrera Jr., is running for attorney general on the Republican ticket.

"Clements tried his Spanish on the crowd. "Clements y Barrera, si" he said to applause. The elder Barrera urged the crowd to vote for Clements.

"From top to bottom...Bill Clements is a man who is certainly meriting of your effort and of your vote," the elder Barrera said.

Clements told the crowd that his business background would help attract new industry to the border where unemployment is higher than the state average.

"As a businessperson, I know what I can do. Mark White has no business experience whatsoever," Clements said. "All he has on his mind is that starry-eyed look he gets (when he thinks about) what job he's going to run for next."

Earlier in Harlingen, Clements said he would do well in the Valley, a Democratic stronghold.

In Ingleside, Clements toured a proposed site for a navy fleet and said the homeport would flourish under his administration.

Clements, who faces Democratic Gov. Mark White on Tuesday, said his experience as a deputy secretary of defense would be an asset in getting the homeport to Texas.

"This is not just good for those locales...but it's good for the state of Texas, and we're talking about pumping in billions of dollars and thousands of jobs, literally. That affects everybody in Texas," Clements said aboard Capt. Clark's Flagship, which toured the proposed homeport site.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, who helped attract the Navy to South Texas and who toured the site with Clements, said once built the homeport would pump 250 million a year into the economy.

"Bill Clements can do more to help me make home port a reality and make it grow once it is a reality than Mark White," Gramm said.

"When Mark White knocks on Ronald Reagan's door, nobody answers. Mark White has no credibility in working with the Reagan administration."

'Mickey Finn' strikes again

DALLAS (AP) — The president of a New York City apparel firm says he was robbed of $13,000 in cash and jewelry by two women who apparently drugged a beer he was drinking.

It was the 36th time in the last 18 months that the so-called "Mickey Finn" robbers have struck in the Dallas area, police said Thursday.

Stanley Kostner, 60, president of John Meyers clothing manufacturers, said he met the women at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday in the hallway of the Marriott Hotel as he was returning to his room.

Kostner told police he and the women went to his room and found there were no drinks available. One of the women went down stairs, brought back several beers and offered one to Kostner, he told police.

"I took a sip and within 15 or 20 minutes I was out," Kostner told police.

Poor education rating doesn't surprise Texans

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas education leaders say they are not surprised that a national survey shows the state has one of the poorest showings in the nation in support of higher education.

The Chronicle of Higher Education, put out by the Illinois State University Center for Higher Education, said Wednesday that Texas was one of only five states that cut higher education appropriations for this school year.

The annual survey said Texas ranks next-to-last in how well it treated colleges and universities compared with two years ago.

"I don't think there is any question that Texas is at the bottom in terms of support for higher education," Kenneth Ashworth, Texas commissioner of higher education, said.

"Unfortunately, (the survey) is accurate on that," he added. "But there is a dispute over the magnitude of the problem."

University of Texas President William Cunningham said he had expected the survey to show Texas at the bottom in the amount of support relative to two years ago and said that "makes it much harder for us to recruit the outstanding faculty."

"This is the second year in a row that we've been listed as either 49th or 50th in increased support for higher education," Cunningham said. "We cannot build a world-class university with this pattern of funding."

Texas appropriations for the 1986-87 school year are listed in the survey as $2.14 billion, the third-highest dollar amount of state appropriations.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Job loss used as opportunity for new career

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR COPING: You have asked people to tell you about good experiences too, so I thought I would write and tell your readers what has happened to us. I recently found a new job after about six months. It is in another city and we are moving.

This experience has not been as shattering for me as it seems some. I decided to use the loss of my job as an opportunity to do something different with my life and to look for fresh challenges. I took advantage of the help my former employer offered and began retraining myself for a new career. This experience turned out to be very good for my children as they saw the value of education and that adults never finish learning.

As a result of this experience I am very confident that should this situation occur again, I'll know what to do, and do it successfully. KR, San Francisco

DEAR KR: Thank you for your heartwarming letter. It is often in crises we grow as individuals and as families. A sense of mastery grows out of effort and sacrifice.

DEAR COPING: My husband was lucky enough to find another job but in another state. Since we could not afford two house payments, we decided he would go on to Florida and I would stay here with the children so they could stay in school until we sold the house. Well, it is October and there is no buyer in sight. I have not seen my husband since July. He says we can't afford for him to fly home to see us. I am getting really lonely and worried. Am I being a baby about this? SCARED

DEAR SCARED: Four months is a long time to be separated but sometimes we have no choice. I suggest you prearrange a time to call your husband and discuss your feelings with him. Many people experience loneliess and confuse that feeling with other more common feelings like fear and anger. My guess is that both of you are experiencing loneliness which can arise from many sources in addition to the fact you are physically separated; for example, boredom, restlessness, unhappiness and a dissatisfaction with social relationships. Research indicates feelings of loneliness are reduced by having people to eat with, planned activities on weekends and talking with close friends. It would seem the two of you might find church or YMCA programs helpful.

It is important the two of you discuss your feelings. It may turn out the price of an airplane ticket, or even two house payments, may be cheap by comparison.

DEAR COPING: I recently heard you speak at a PTA meeting. Thank you for your presentation. It led me to think, what effect would having a parent without a job have upon the children. Is there anything as a teacher I should watch for? NB

DEAR NB: Yes. Any sudden change in a child's behavior should be considered. The loss of a job by a parent often creates a sense of guilt and a loss of self-esteem in that parent. Literature shows one parent's loss of self-esteem is often passed to the other spouse, and subsequently to children.

Unfortunately, there is little research since the Great Depression concerning the children's feelings. In the more exaggerated instances we find mental and physical child abuse. One could hypothesize that some older children would respond to the stress just as some adults respond and turn to alcohol and drugs to block their pain.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: Yes, there are clinics that specialize in sexual dysfunction. While they do not focus on dysfunction specifically related to job loss, there are treatments they have found to be highly effective. Lack of insurance will be a problem, but not insurmountable. If you write me again and give me your address, I will send you the names of some appropriate clinics.

DEAR ABBY

Helping neighbor sends warning

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I felt sorry for my neighbor, so I let her use my telephone when hers was "out of order." She would come over here as early as 7 a.m. and as late as 11:30 p.m. and talk sometimes for an hour or more.

She had no consideration for my rest and privacy. I have a 3-year-old child and am expecting again in two months.

I finally got fed up with her coming over here at all hours to talk on my phone, so I made excuses, lied and finally refused to let her in my house. I thought my troubles were over. I was wrong.

I just got my phone bill and found out that the telephone calls she made on my phone were all LONG DISTANCE. Her phone wasn't out of order; the telephone company disconnected it because she failed to pay her bill.

Now I am stuck for over $200 — an expensive lesson for a woman in my circumstances. Although I could take legal action against her, she's living on welfare and has nothing.

Please warn your readers, Abby. I wish somebody had warned me. — SOFT TOUCH

DEAR SOFT: Thanks for the message. Readers, if your neighbor wants to reach out and touch someone, make sure it isn't you.

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion for people who loan money to others and never get it back. Send them this poem:

I think that I shall never see
The dollar that I loaned to thee;
A dollar that I could have spent
On many forms of merriment
The one I loaned to you so gladly
Is now the one I need so badly.
For whose return I had great hope
Just like an optimistic dope.
For dollars loaned to folks like thee
Are not returned to fools like me.

— HAROLD MCKNIGHT, NOVA SCOTIA, CANADA

DEAR HAROLD: Thanks for the witty ditty. I'll bet a lot of folks who have been clipped will be clipping this one.

DEAR ABBY: A number of years ago Life magazine had a story about a decapitated rooster (chicken) that lived a number of days after being decapitated, delaying a Sunday dinner that had been planned by the person who decapitated it. To everyone's amazement, the rooster lived for two days with its head chopped off.

I read this in a doctor's waiting room in the early '50s. I have repeated this story to several people, and the way they looked at each other, I am sure they thought I was nuts or the world's biggest storyteller.

How can I get a copy of this magazine, or some information in support of this story, which I am absolutely sure I read in Life magazine? Please help. My reputation is riding on this. Maybe one of your readers remembers it, and can back me up. — NEEDS PROOF IN JACKSON, MICH.

DEAR NEEDS: Life magazine ceased publication in 1972, but if anyone out there can provide me with any information on the decapitated rooster, it will be something to crow about.

CONFIDENTIAL TO D.G.K.: When a man says he doesn't want to get married, believe him. If you should finally "win" him in the end, what will you have? A man who didn't want to get married in the first place. So don't be surprised if he's slightly selfish, headstrong, and not as committed to marriage as you are.

(For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

ASK DR. RUTH

Heart patients should be advised

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Q. My first husband died several years ago of a heart attack. Prior to that he had two heart attacks and bypass surgery. None of the surgeons or cardiologists ever discussed any sexual guidelines, never brought up the subject, and as a consequence my husband never had sex for his last five years. The side effects of medication were no doubt partly to blame, but so was his fear of sexual exertions.

Now I read that heart patients need not be totally deprived in this manner. Please tell your readers not to be afraid to ask what sexual activities are permissible. If the doctor won't talk, phone the local medical society and find a physician who will. There should be more support groups for families of heart patients, and people like you can steer them to ask the right questions.

A. Thank you very much for your letter; a real contribution to the field of sex education, to have a letter from a bereaved person with your sad experience. You are absolutely right. Physicians have not been trained to talk about sex in general. After any surgical procedure the physician should sit down with husband and wife and explain what is permissible and what should be avoided. This information should be given clearly to both, because after surgery the woman may feel guilty about wanting sexual intimacy when her man may be endangered by it.

The man with coronary problems must know what is advisable and what isn't, for his sake and his partner's. In your case it could have cheered his last years and sweetened your memory of them. Let me say that not all doctors are so remiss.

I know a young cardiologist who routinely informs the patient of the sexual possibilities and dangers. It happens that reasonable sex is often not only possible but, as a help to morale, excellent. This doctor does not wait to be asked because he knows that most patients and their wives are shy about asking about sex. He introduces the subject exactly as he does things like driving, stair-climbing, bowel movements and so on. But if your doctor doesn't do that, insist on getting the needed information. You will be helping yourself and many other people who follow you.

Q. I am a 65-year-old man and I think I have a query you have never had before. Is it normal to have erections while sleeping? I have known for a long time that this occurs, but why? What causes it? Is it normal?

A. You may be right — I can't remember getting just this question before, though I have often told people about sleeping erections and early-morning erections because they are very reassuring and show that, physically, the man is able. Anxiety may be spoiling his sexual performance, but the equipment is in working order.

We don't really know, for certain, why it happens. It may be caused by a rising level of testosterone in the resting body. Observations of male subjects in sleep laboratories show that about every 90 minutes there is some kind of erectile activity. Some observers dispute the 90-minute intervals, but not the fact that erectile activity happens repeatedly. It is during the period of rapid eye-movement (REM) sleep, when dreams occur. Researchers also report that women, during this period, can become aroused and lubricate and actually have orgasms during sleep.

A man who is having anxiety about sexual performance can go to a sleep lab, get wired up and go perfectly safely to sleep. In the morning he will be given a printout of his erectile activity while slumbering, showing there is nothing wrong physically, nothing that sex therapy can't help. This is reassuring to both the sex therapist and the client.

There is also a little gadget that a urologist can give a man to take home, and attach himself to on retiring, that records erectile events during sleep. This lets him sleep at home instead of at the lab. The results may be encouraging to a worried man.

Origin of Halloween curious mixture

Associated Press

Like many of our most cherished holidays, the origins of Halloween are a curious mixture of religious history and popular folklore. The result, observes Country Home magazine, is a day that marks the calendar in respect to piety and yet is celebrated in the best traditions of pagan superstition.

In the eighth century the festival of All Saints' Day, or All Hallows, was universally observed by the Catholic Church. In the Middle Ages, however, the eve of All Saints' Day, or All Hallows' E'en, was believed to be the time of the year when witches and goblins were at their most active.

All Hallows' E'en came to be marked by superstition, even in Christian households. In Ireland a special Hallows supper, colcannon, consisted of potatoes, parsnips and onions. Before baking, a ring, a coin and a thimble were added to the ingredients. The person whose portion contained the ring would supposedly be married within the year, the finder of the coin would receive great wealth, and the one who found the thimble would never marry.

In the 1840s, thousands of Irish citizens sought relief from a terrible potato famine by coming to the New World. They brought with them their All Hallows' E'en customs.

All Hallows' E'en, or Hallowe'en was widely seized upon by Americans as an opportunity for fun and frolic, and many beliefs from the Irish and Scottish All Hallows' E'en became important American Halloween images: black cats and jack-o'-lanterns.

The custom of small children venturing into the night to beg for candy can be traced to the 17th century. Back then, it was customary for Irish peasants to wander the streets of All Hallows' E'en, begging for money.

Fish sales climb to $6 billion

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fish sales in the United States — including frozen, fresh and canned — will climb from the current annual $6 billion level to $7 billion by 1990, a recent study by Packaged Facts, a New York-based marketing company, projected.

Forecasting an overall annual growth rate of only 1.6 percent until the end of the decade, the company said the biggest gainers in the industry would be frozen seafood entrees and fresh fish, at annual growth rates of 15 percent and 7 percent, respectively.

The company said it based its optimistic projections on the fact that the products of these two market segments mesh with the two hottest trends in the food industry today — health and gourmet.

But how well individual markets will succeed will depend on their ability to link their products with the American public's eye for gourmet tastes and health concerns, said spokesman David A. Weiss.

Push of button replaces mom

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

My name is Mom and I'm a casualty in the war of automation.

There was a time when there weren't enough hours in the day to fulfill all the skills of my job description. I was chauffeur, cook, nurse, decorator, financier, psychologist and social director. All the slick magazines said so.

I have been replaced by beeps, switches, flashing lights, electronic devices and monotone voices.

In the beginning, I taught my children how to tie their shoes and button and zip their clothing. They don't do that anymore. They have Velcro tabs on their shoes and Velcro where buttons and zippers used to be.

I used to tell them how to place an emergency call on the telephone or how to call Grandma if they needed her. Now it's a matter of pushing a button on a memory phone and it's done.

There was a period when I sat at the kitchen table and taught them how to tell time and warned them against winding their watches too tight. They don't have to do that anymore. They just push a little button and their watch lights up with the correct time. And the watches wind themselves.

I used to enlighten them about the stove. I showed them how to turn it on and off so that you wouldn't get burnt. They don't have stoves anymore. They have microwave ovens that have little buttons to push and are cool to the touch.

At one time I pulled them on my lap, and together we traced our fingers across the printed page as I read to them. I don't read anymore. All they have to do is insert a book cassette into their stereo and hear it read by professionals.

Sometimes, when they were hurt, I would pull the adhesive bandage off and kiss the spot where it stung. There are ouchless adhesive bandages now, so there is no need to soothe them.

Sometimes after dinner, I would give them spelling words so they could get good grades. I would praise them when they did well and warn them when they made a mistake.

There's a typewriter now that corrects their spelling and a computer to tell them when they get the answer right and when they get it wrong and have to try again.

True, they still haven't come up with anything that can listen to your day or run alongside when you learn how to ride a two-wheel bicycle, but other than that, I feel like an old gag that was in New York Magazine years ago.

A woman in jewels and furs was pushing her teen-age son in a wheelchair. "Can't he walk?" asked someone. "Of course he can walk," she sniffed. "But thank God he doesn't have to!"

Men catching up

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1979, women outlived men by 7.8 years, but in 1985, the female edge gradually narrowed to 7.0 years, according to AIM-plus magazine. It says more women are now smoking, and men are taking better care of themselves.

However, researchers claim women will probably always outlive men because they have more biological immunity to infections than men do.

Third World may benefit from ancient agricultural techniques

By ROBERT P. STUDER
Copley News Service

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — For years now, they have been regarded by agricultural experts as backward and uninformed, because they excluded the use of animal fertilizers and chemicals. But the world, says Dr. Katherine Truman, director of an upcoming conference at the University of California at Riverside, should be taking another look at farming techniques used by Indians in Mexico before the arrival of Columbus.

"They would be used to feed hungary millions in Third World nations," she said.

She has in mind such practices as crop mixing techniques involving beans, a nitrogen-fixing plant; maize, which demands a high nitrogen diet; and squash, which with its broad leafy vines provides a living 'mulch,' thus keeping water requirements and soil temperatures down. Planted together," she pointed out, "each crop compliments the others."

Similarly, she said, more recent research indicates that contrary to a contemporary agricultural mentality which basically recognizes two kinds of plants, crops and weeds — crops are planted, weeds are eradicated — the Indians' practices recognize a long list of plants which were not weeds, but were not planted, either.

"These were naturally occurring plants. They couldn't be considered crops, because they weren't planted in a systematic fashion, yet they were not pulled or hoed-down. The Indian farmers were criticized for 'sloppy agricultural practices,' but it turns out that the 'weeds' were being maintained for many 'non-production' purposes including medicine, or insect control. Even flowers for rituals were grown in this fashion."

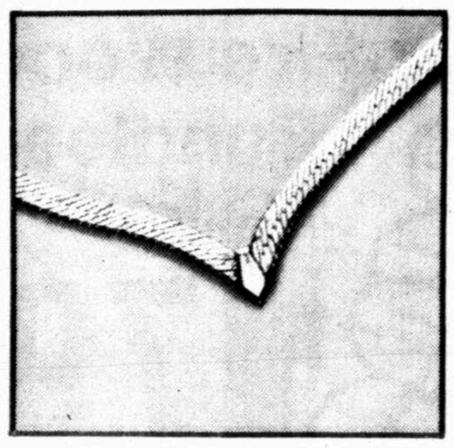

Much of the ancient agricultural lore had been lost and only now is being rediscovered, Truman said. And the "old ways" are being recognized by scientists for the boon they could become as interdisciplinary studies bringing together important bits of information like so many pieces to a gigantic jigsaw puzzle.

Many of those pieces, Truman said, will be put in place at a binational conference, "Mexican Agriculture: Ancient and Modern Contributions in Biotechnology," Nov. 7 at the UC Riverside campus. The conference will draw leading U.S. and Mexican scientists, she said, in botany, agronomy, agroecology, archaeology, anthropology, history and linguistics to this first of its kind interdisciplinary conference.

Applications of the old techniques makes sense in Third World countries, Truman said, because capital and other resources may be limited. As it turns out, these indigenous agricultural systems achieved extremely high production, relative to land and capital. They supported complex societies and dense populations of pre-Hispanic Mexico. Certainly, identification factors which enabled this production would have real value for us today."

'Dogs, Bronchos fight to escape 4-5A cellar

Teams fightin' for spot in playoff picture

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The hopes and dreams of the 1986 football season are gone for the Midland High Bulldogs. All that's left is pride. There isn't much more left at Odessa High.

After jumping out to a 3-0 start, the Bulldogs fell on hard times and lost the next four games. Last week they had an open date and spent the time licking their wounds and preparing for Odessa High.

The Bronchos, who went 2-1 in pre-district, have lost five straight District 4-5A games and end their season tonight at 8 p.m. at Memorial Stadium. Like several other league teams, Odessa High couldn't fill its open date.

"Among other things, this game is to see who gets out of the cellar," said Odessa High first-year coach Jerry Taylor. "We need a good game to end the season with. We're open next week and a win will give us a shot in the arm for the winter."

It's the same thing Midland head coach Doug McCutchen was thinking.

"I'm sure they're going to come over here ready to go," said McCutchen. "It's the last ball game of the year for them and you always want to win the last one to give you a good feeling."

STATISTICALLY, MIDLAND High has the edge on both sides of the ball. The Bulldog offense has picked up 1,727 total yards while holding teams to 1,808.

The Bronchos, last in both categories, have only managed 1,329 yards and their defense has given up 2,526.

Each team runs a fairly balanced attack. The Bulldogs have rushed for 1,000 yards this year and thrown for another 727 while the Bronchos have 655 on the ground and 674 through the air.

Halfback Anthony Adkison is the top Bulldog rusher with 436 yards for fifth place in the district race for second place. Permian's Shawn Crow is 538 yards ahead of his nearest competitor, San Angelo's Bronza Moore, 1,243-705 and can pocket the title.

Bulldog Tyrone Oliver is ranked 13th in district at 276 while Tracey Blaylock for Odessa High is the top rusher with 181 yards but is no longer playing.

Despite Odessa's seeming ineptness, McCutchen is still worried about the Broncho defense. After all, this is the team that held Odessa Permian to a 6-6 tie early in the third quarter before wearing out and losing.

"Lee is the only team to really beat up on them," said McCutchen. "They've played excellent defense. They've been in most of their games until the second half when they were simply outnumbered.

"Offensively, they've had some problems because there have been so many changes in and out of the lineup. They've changed their quarterback several times and have had several different running backs."

And Odessa's liking of the long bomb is another cause for concern.

Thomas tired of waiting

Star Piston ready to catch Bucks

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

The Detroit Pistons, tired of chasing Milwaukee in the NBA Central Division, have some new weapons that could help them catch the Bucks this season.

"This two-year, three-year, four-year plan, this wait and see until tomorrow outlook — I'm not interested in that," Pistons guard Isiah Thomas said. "That's the way it was when I got here, and six years have gone by waiting on that plan."

The Bucks, winners of six straight division titles, open the NBA season tonight at the Pontiac Silverdome against the Pistons, who have two new forwards in Adrian Dantley and Sidney Green.

"Dantley is going to make it easier for me," Thomas said of the former NBA scoring champ who the Pistons acquired from Utah in exchange for Kelly Tripucka. "I'd be a fool not to welcome him here. Teams are going to emphasize stopping him, not Isiah Thomas. He should create a lot of open opportunities for me that I didn't have before."

Milwaukee, however, also has a new look with seven-time All-Star Jack Sikma, acquired from Seattle, at center.

"What Jack brings us offensively is the ability to make other players better, and that is the measure of a true star," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said. "His efforts on and off the court are great. He just gives more character to a team I think is already loaded with character."

OTHER OPENERS tonight have New York at New Jersey, Indiana at Philadelphia, Washington at Boston, Utah at Dallas, San Antonio at Denver, Golden State at Phoenix, the Los Angeles Clippers at Sacramento and Seattle at Portland.

On Saturday, the Los Angeles Lakers are at Houston for a nationally televised game. That night, Chicago is at New York, New Jersey at Atlanta, Detroit at Indiana, Washington at Cleveland, Dallas at San Antonio, Boston at Milwaukee, Portland at Utah, Phoenix at the Clippers, Sacramento at Seattle, and Denver at Golden State.

With Dantley and Green in the fold, and rookies John Salley and Dennis Rodman hoping to contribute, Detroit Coach Chuck Daly believes he has enough depth so that everyone will have clearly defined roles.

"This should be exciting simply from the standpoint of being something new," Daly said. "Again though, for the Pistons, the key will

Rockets starting without Sampson

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets and Los Angeles Lakers open their NBA seasons in The Summit Saturday but it won't be just another opener.

"There will be a little adenalin flowing from that series (Western Conference finals last year)," Lakers forward James Worthy said. "It's the first game of the season. It's a big game for them, it's a big game for us.

"We lost to them in the series last year and that may give us a little more incentive. In fact, I'm sure it will. We didn't like losing and they feel they have to gain respect right away."

The Rockets, who lost to the Boston Celtics 4-2 in the NBA finals, will start the season with 7-foot-4 forward Ralph Sampson on the injured list and guard Robert Reid slowed by a knee injury.

Jim Petersen, who missed part of the Rockets' training camp as a contract holdout, will staft for Sampson.

Allen Leavell started most of Houston's exhibition games and Coach Bill Fitch also could use rookie Conner Henry at Reid's point guard position.

The Rockets placed Sampson on the team's injury list Thursday with a sprained ankle. He'll be sidelined for five games and can't return until Nov. 12 against the Dallas Mavericks.

The Rockets also cut veteran guard Craig Ehlo, a third round draft pick from Washington State in 1983, to get down to the NBA 12-player limit.

The Rockets will open the season with four new players. They are first round draft choice Buck Johnson of Alabama, second round pick Dave Feitl of Texas-El Paso, fourth-round pick Henry of California Santa Barbara and free-agent Richard Anderson.

Joe Louis Manley knocks out defending IBF junior welterweight champion Gary Hinton in the 10th round Thursday.

Manley drops Hinton in 10th

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Joe Louis Manley knocked out defending champion Gary Hinton at 2:14 of the 10th round Thursday night to win the International Boxing Federation junior welterweight title.

The knockdown was the second of the fight for Manley, who also dropped Hinton at 1:15 of the second round. Manley, 138¼, from Atlantic City, N.J., is now 26-2-1.

Manley's one draw came on Aug. 23, 1985, against Hinton when he was the United States Boxing Association champ. Hinton, 139, of Philadelphia, is now 25-4-1.

Hinton got up from the second-round knockdown and appeared to have Manley in trouble when he nailed the new champion with a couple of right hands with 30 seconds left.

Buffs, Owls battle for 6-2A playoff berths

From Staff Reports

Stanton will be abuzz with playoff fever once again tonight as the Buffaloes host Reagan County in a District 6-2A game with certain post-season significance.

The Owls, 2-0-1, 6-0-1, have the inside track in the playoff race with the Buffs, 2-1, 6-2, but tonight's 8 p.m. game should decide at least one of two berths. Forsan, 2-0-1, but with a victory over Stanton, is a strong contender for the top spot in the district.

In other area games, Greenwood, 1-2, 2-6, hosts Kermit, 3-0, 5-3, at 7:30 p.m.; McCamey, 2-0, 6-1, can clinch a playoff berth when they host Van Horn, 1-0-1, 4-2-1; Ozona, 0-3, 2-6, is at Rankin, 0-3, 4-4; Crane, 3-0, 5-3, is at Alpine, 0-3, 2-5; Pecos, 3-3, 5-3, is at Lamesa, 1-4, 2-5; Monahans, 4-1, 6-1, is at Big Spring, 5-0, 6-1; Andrews, 2-5, 2-3, is at Lake View, 1-5, 3-5.

The Buffs, who have been hampered by injury problems in recent weeks, are looking at tonight's game with Reagan County as a "second chance" at a playoff spot after Forsan whipped them 32-7 last week.

Fullback Derek Sorley is expected to return after missing the last three games with a knee injury and back up Eddie Jordan is a likely returner after a bout with strep throat.

In Big Lake, the Owls are healthy and expect to be armed and ready with their big three offensive performers tailback James West, quarterback Scott Lipsey and fullback Junior Romero.

Stanton will conclude district play against Ozona next week while Reagan County will play Eldorado.

Let's drop coin flip format

A column back in August promised an exciting final three weeks in the District 4-5A football race, but not even the writer could imagine the wild finish about to take place in real life.

Midland High would probably like to kill the schedule makers, but as far as script writers go, Lee-Permian, Lee-San Angelo and San Angelo-Permian in the final three weeks is news that gains attention around the state and gives heart attacks to the cities involved.

One of these teams will be sitting home come playoff time and it seems a shame since all three are ranked in the Associated Press' Top 10 this week.

If Lee defeats San Angelo tonight, Lee will own a playoff berth and at least a share of the district title. The Rebs will also own the top playoff seed from the district. That would leave Permian and San Angelo to decide the other playoff representative next week with the winner advancing and the loser packing gear for the season.

But another scenario could unfold that might not be too pleasing to Lee fans. If Lee loses to San Angelo and Permian defeats San Angelo next week, the league would end up in a three-way tie. A coin flip would determine the top two teams and the Rebels could be left out in the cold.

Somehow, coin flips don't sit well with me. Maybe it's because both Midland High and Lee got shutout of the playoffs the last time that format was used in 1982. That was the year San Angelo, Odessa High, Lee and MHS all finished in a four-way tie for second place. San Angelo won the coin flip. Lee and MHS stayed home.

I much prefer the tie-breaking formula being employed this year by District 2-4A, which is using a plus and minus system with points scored against the teams involved in ties.

With that system, Lee would be a plus-10 going into tonight's game with San Angelo by virtue of a 10-point win over Permian. Permian would be a minus-10 and San Angelo at plus-0 since the Bobcats haven't played either team.

In 2-4A, there is a hedge against the encouragement of running up a score against an opponent by limiting the margin in any one game to a plus-21. At least, this way you decide champions on the field instead of in a sweat-filled office where Lady Luck does the interjects her opinion.

More and more districts are going to this playoff deciding format and we suggest it be adopted by District 4-5A.

With a 37-5 picking record with 4-5A teams, here's how Week No. 9 will come out:

Midland High 28, Odessa High 14: This will get the Bulldogs out of the 4-5A basement and move them into position to finish the year with a winning season.

Midland Lee 34, San Angelo 21: It's been a decade since the Rebels won a 4-5A title, but the drought is over. It also deletes the possibility of the hated coin flip.

Abilene High 19, Abilene Cooper 10: Funny thing, but the Eagles keep saying they are in this race. If Lee loses to San Angelo and Abilene High and San Angelo beats Permian, we have a three-way tie for second place and we're back in the coin flip mode.

Big Spring 26, Monahans 18: What a difference the neighborhood makes for the Steers. And here's one who's tickled pink for Steer boss Quinn Eudy, who is a class act at the bottom or top.

be Isiah Thomas. He is our floor leader and catalyst, so the adjustment of our new players will be much easier with Isiah's presence."

"Outside of Chuck (Daly), when it comes right down to it, I'm the one that has to make everything work," Thomas said. "I'm the one that goes on the court and has to make it come together.

"And if it doesn't come together this season, it's my fault."

Thomas, an all-NBA selection at guard, said this year's roster clearly looks stronger than last year's, but still says Milwaukee is the favorite in the division again.

"In terms of talent, we've got more talent this season," Thomas said. "But that doesn't necessarily mean you'll win. ... We can be an extremely good team or an extremely bad team. Time will tell."

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bob Wade has produced star players for 10 years at Baltimore's Dunbar High School. Now, he faces much different tasks as the successor to Lefty Driesell as basketball coach at the University of Maryland.

Wade, a basketball and football coach as well as athletic director at Dunbar, was named Driesell's replacement Thursday by university Chancellor John B. Slaughter.

One day earlier, Driesell resigned to become an assistant athletic director at the College Park campus, ending 17 years as Terrapin coach. Criticism about his program, the athletic department and the university fell on Driesell's shoulders after All-American Len Bias died of cocaine intoxication June 19.

"He can handle it," Wade's wife, Carolyn, said in an interview. "He's a very strong person and he's going to give it his best shot."

Accompanied by his wife and one of his two sons, Wade said the elevation to the college level represents "something we looked forward to all of our lives."

"I hope this will be a tremendous marriage between Bob Wade and the University of Maryland," Wade, who told reporters he would answer questions about his plans at a news conference in two weeks, said.

"Since June 19 until yesterday, we've had few things about which we can celebrate," Slaughter told reporters. "Today represents a major change in our fortunes."

Slaughter already has begun implementing several suggestions by a university task force to shift athletic priorities to academics from sports after revelations about the poor academic performances of top athletes.

"His character, coaching abilities and emphasis on school academic achievement were the three factors that convinced us," Slaughter said of Wade.

THE SELECTION drew praise from other college coaches. Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said he has a great deal of respect for Wade.

"He's had some incredible teams at Dunbar High. Those teams were always well-coached and had a great deal of discipline. It's good to see Bob get an opportunity like this."

Georgetown Coach John Thompson called Wade "an outstanding coach with a good basketball program," and said he didn't see Wade's lack of collegiate experience as an obstacle.

Pete Pompey, a high school colleague, said Wade "made a committment a long time ago that his kids were going to get an education." Although Wade "feels Len Bias was an adult and he made a decision to (take cocaine)," Pompey said Wade is committed to being tough on drug use.

"He's disagreed with some of the things that he (Driesell) did," Pompey, coach at Edmondson High School in Baltimore where Wade once coached, said.

The state prosecutor investigating Bias' death charged that Driesell did too little to discourage drug use and gave insufficient attention to the academic needs of his players.

Wade will attend the Terrapins' first basketball practice Saturday and will work at Dunbar until Nov. 14.

A graduate of Morgan State University in Baltimore, Wade has posted a 341-25 record during his career Dunbar, with the Poets being voted the top high school team in the country in 1982, 1983 and 1985 by USA Today.

THIRTY-SIX Dunbar graduates have gone on to play college basketball after playing under Wade. More than 90 percent of his players have graduated and gone on to college.

Wade, 41, has had a running feud with Driesell, stemming from an incident in 1977 when Terrapin player and former Dunbar standout Ernie Graham said Driesell, whose teams won 524 games, was lax with his players. Driesell shot back that Graham had been trouble since coming from Dunbar. That started a rift between the two coaches.

Graham was the last Terrapin to come from Dunbar, a school that has since produced players such as Georgetown's David Wingate.

Wade claimed Driesell would not recruit in Baltimore, while Driesell complained that Wade directed his best players to Georgetown.

Wade agreed to a five-year contract with a salary "comparable to other first year ACC Division I coaches," school officials said. A first-year salary in the Atlantic Coast Conference can be as high as $50,000, but endorsements, television contracts, summer camps and other perks often boost a coach's salary to more than $200,000.

Wade was drafted by the Baltimore Colts of the NFL, but was released. He later played for Pittsburgh, Washington and Denver.

ROCKETS—

The Rockets earlier traded Granville Waiters and cut Hank McDowell, both members of last year's title team.

The Rockets defeated the Lakers 4-1 in last season's playoffs to capture the conference title. They have hopes of a repeat.

"We can win it," Rockets center Akeem Olajuwon said. "But we still have to go out and do it."

With Sampson and Reid injured, the Rockets already have fallen short of forward Rodney McCray's criterion for a successful season.

"If we stay healthy, this team is capable of winning 60 games," McCray said. "We're deeper this year and we're determined. It's not enought to just get there. We want to get there and win it all."

The Lakers will return the same lineup that won the NBA title two years ago, led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Magic Johnson.

Lakers backup center Petur Gudmundsson, who has been plagued by back spasms throughout preseason, will travel with the team but it is doubtful he will play.

Forward A.C. Green, who tore a tendon in his finger in the Lakers' final preseason game, had his cast removed Thursday and will be fitted with a protective device. He will accompany the team to Houston, but it is doubtful he will be able to play.

Spurs' new boss makes debut against Nuggets

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — San Antonio's Bob Weiss makes his NBA head coaching debut against the Denver Nuggets tonight, hoping to improve the Spurs' sixth-place finish last year in the Midwest Division.

Weiss, who was an assistant under Dick Motta at Dallas, plans to inject a passing game offense into the Spurs a la Motta.

"We have not announced any goals because that could be a bit dangerous," Weiss said. "I don't like goals that are too low because they might create a low self-image by the team, and goals that are too high sometimes can destroy a team's confidence."

Weiss adds, "The Spurs are coming off perhaps one of their lowest points in club history."

There will be some new faces on the roster.

The Spurs, who were demolished in three straight games by the Los Angeles Lakers in last year's playoffs, obtained veteran forward Mychal Thompson from Portland for Steve Johnson.

In the process, the Spurs obtained the rights to 6-10, 245-pound rookie Larry Krystkowiak, who was drafted in the second round by Chicago.

These two players give the Spurs some more inside bulk to go with holdovers Artis Gilmore and David Greenwood. The other forward job goes to leading scorer Mike Mitchell.

If guard Johnny Moore can bounce back from his bout with a rare desert fever, the Spurs will have a dynamic backcourt duo because Alvin Robertson was a starter in the All-Star game.

Robertson was named the NBA's Defensive Player of the Year.

Rookie guard Johnny Dawkins of Duke is expected to create some exciting moments for Spurs' fans.

It's a tough opener for the Spurs. The Denver Nuggets were second to the Houston Rockets in the NBA Midwest last season.

Tarpley gives Mavericks high hopes for high finish

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks open the 1986 NBA season at home against the Utah Jazz tonight with high hopes for a higher finish in the Midwest Division because of rookie Roy Tarpley of Michigan.

Tarpley, a first-round draft choice, was impressive during the preseason at power forward.

Mavericks' Coach Dick Motta says "I may have to change my policy about rookies."

Historically, Motta has been slow to work rookies into his lineup and doesn't depend on them a lot.

However, the 7-foot Tarpley gives the Mavericks much-needed bulk under the basket, and he has displayed an excellent shooting touch.

"We have some interesting possibilities with him in the lineup," said Motta, who could field a front line of Tarpley, 7-2 James Donaldson and 6-9 Sam Perkins.

Another rookie who could help is fourth-round draft pick Myron Jackson, a 6-3 guard from Arkansas-Little Rock, who had a good training camp.

Guard Al Wood, obtained in an off-season trade, is expected to give the Mavs, the second-highest scoring team in the NBA, even more offensive punch.

Mark Aguirre, who averaged 22 points per game, and All-NBA Rolando Blackman, who averaged 21 points, return for the Mavs, who finished third in the Midwest with a 44-38 record.

The Mavs are a fast-breaking team.

"Winning now is related to how many easy baskets you get," Motta says, "so we'll continue to work on pushing the ball up without throwing it away. With Donaldson's improved outlet passing and Harper's improved judgment on the break, we can score."

Motta says "This year we will also place more emphasis on defense."

The Mavs also need to play better at home. They were only 26-15 last year despite averaging 16,904 fans in Reunion Arena.

Suzuki keeps individual lead; U.S. team on top

KAWANISHI, Japan (AP) — Japan's Koichi Suzuki shot a 6-under par 66 for a 131 total to maintain the individual lead Friday, while the U.S. team kept its three-shot lead over Japan in the team competition on the second day of the $406,250 ABC Cup Japan-U.S. Golf Match.

Suzuki carded a 34 on the front nine and a 32 on the back nine at the Sports Shinko Country Club course, a 6,822-yard, par-72 layout in western Japan.

Curtis Strange, last season's leading money-winner on the U.S. PGA Tour, remained in second place with a 68 for a two-round score of 135. American Chip Beck was alone in third place at 136 after shooting a 66.

From Wire Reports

AUSTIN — A 14-year-old girl who will be the first girl in Texas to receive a football letter apparently has decided to give up the sport.

Tina Trejo, an eighth grader at Bedichek Junior High School, played in four games this season after her father, with the support of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, filed suit challenging a UIL rule banning girls from playing football.

The Legislative Council of the UIL later voted to change the rule, which had been in effect for 38 years. The proposed change, which still must be approved by the State Board of Education, does not apply to high school girls.

Bedichek's football season ended Tuesday, and Tina's father, David Trejo, said, "I don't anticipate that Tina will play next year. She wants to play basketball and learn to play golf..."

ATLANTA — Atlanta Falcons guard Bill Fralic, an outspoken opponent of steroids and other drugs in the NFL, says he once tried steroids while playing at the University of Pittsburgh.

"I experimented with them because I thought I wanted to be bigger and stronger," said Fralic. "I got caught up in the mentality of football in the weight room. All my friends were taking them, or quite a few of them."

He said his use lasted only a month, and he stopped voluntarily.

"I didn't feel comfortable doing it...I got to worrying about what it could do to my body."

Fralic, a second-year lineman, said he decided to disclose his use of steroids because "I didn't want my past use of steroids to become an issue when the drug itself should be the focus of everybody's concern."...

NEW YORK — Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams, who leads the NFL in rushing, and Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, reverting to the form of his first two seasons, have been named the NFC's offensive and defensive players of the month for October...

BALTIMORE — The Baltimore Orioles landed catcher Terry Kennedy in a trade Thursday, almost a year after they first tried to obtain the San Diego catcher.

While giving up Storm Davis to fill a gaping hole in their lineup, the Orioles also acquired minor league pitcher Mark Williamson in the three-player swap...

LOS ANGELES — Stan Wasiak, the winningest manager in minor league history and also holder of the record for the most consecutive years as a minor league manager, has announced his retirement, the Los Angeles Dodgers said Thursday.

Wasniak, 66, was a minor league manager for 37 straight years starting in 1950. He managed in 17 cities and guided his teams to 21 division championships, nine league pennants and 2,570 victories.

Wasiak's first managerial job was as the player-manager at Valdosta, Ga., in 1950. His final job was as manager of the Vero Beach Dodgers of the Florida State League.

The 1985 season marked Wasiak's 36th consecutive season as a minor league manager, breaking the record of 35 set by Bob Coleman. Wasiak became the winningest minor league manager ever last Aug. 15 when Vero Beach beat West Palm Beach 11-2 to give him 2,497 wins, surpassing Coleman's record of 2,496.

Broten family feels 'Thrill of victory...'

Associated Press

In one night, the Broten family could rejoice and agonize.

While Aaron Broten was celebrating scoring the tying and winning goals in New Jersey's 7-6 overtime victory over the New York Islanders Thursday night, older brother Neal was suffering a dislocated shoulder in Minnesota's 3-1 loss to Detroit.

Aaron Broten, who scored with 74 seconds left in the third period to force the game to overtime, then won it with only 38 seconds to go in the extra period. Broten broke into the Islanders' zone on a 2-on-1 break with Pat Verbeek and banked his game-winning shot off the leg of sliding Islanders defenseman Denis Potvin.

Broten's other goal came off a rebound of a Kirk Muller shot, when he sent a 10-foot backhander under Islanders goalie Kelly Hrudey.

"We went into overtime feeling like we had the momentum," Broten said. "We didn't want to make any mistakes defensively because we have been giving up too many goals. The thing about us is we keep getting better every game, every year."

They certainly are improved on the power play — New Jersey has hit on nine of its last 15 manpower advantages in the last two nights.

"We were 4-for-8, so we are pleased," Coach Doug Carpenter said of the power play. "Anytime when you score nine in two nights, you have to be happy. It won the hockey game for us again, just like last night (in Pittsburgh)."

Red Wings 3, North Stars 1

Greg Stefan stopped 35 shots, including all 21 in the third period, while Doug Shedden and Petr Klima scored power-play goals and Shawn Burr also connected for the suddenly hot Wings. Detroit improved to 5-

NHL Roundup

4-1, marking the first time the Wings have been above .500 at this stage of a season in three years. Detroit has won three straight games for the first time since 1984 and three consecutive road games for the first time since 1979.

Flyers 6, Nordiques 3

Brian Propp had a goal and three assists for Philadelphia, which jumped ahead 3-0 and coasted past Quebec. Pelle Eklund and Tim Kerr each added a goal and an assist for Philadelphia, which has the NHL's best record at 8-2.

"We've been playing well all season," Propp said. "We're 8-2, so we must be doing somehting right. When you lose a game or two, it gets you frustrated, so it was nice to get a win at home."

Maple Leafs 6, Whalers 2

The 'Hound Line' of Russ Courtnall, Gary Leeman and Wendel Clarke did most of the offensive damage for Toronto, which was outshot 42-27 but received superb goaltending from Ken Wregget.

Leeman scored two goals and assisted on another, Courtnall had a goal and three assists, and Clark chipped in with one goal and two assists.

Canadiens 3, Bruins 3

Ray Bourque's 60-foot slapshot on a power play in the second period tied the game and it stayed that way for the final period and the overtime.

Reed Larson and Greg Johnston scored 56 seconds apart for Boston, while Mike McPhee had two goals 26 seconds apart in the second period

Tucson Match Play

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Bob Tway advanced easily, but Tom Watson was an upset victim Thursday in the first round of the Seiko Tucson Match Play Championship.

Tway, already assured of PGA Player of the Year honors, moved closer to the money-winning title with his 68-75 victory over Brett Upper in the final official event on the 10-month PGA Tour.

Watson, who disqualified himself for an inadvertent breach of the rules last week in San Antonio, Texas, was ousted by David Edwards 66-72.

Tway now needs only a win over Steve Pate in Friday's second round to clinch the money-winning title.

Tway, who won the PGA national championship and three other titles this season, needs $5,517 to surpass Greg Norman's leading $635,296. A second-round victory will assure Tway of a minimum $12,500. Norman is not competing in this event.

"It would mean a lot to me to go past Greg," Tway said. "But if I don't, it won't be the end of the world. I'll get over it.

"The system is kind of strange and it makes you feel kind of strange out there playing. You know you can play a good round, a 68, and still lose by five shots," Tway said of the medal-match format in which each player must complete each hole and the winner of a match is determined by an 18-hole medal score.

Cochran's 66 good for stroke lead

Tallahassee Open

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Russ Cochran birdied the final hole to cap a first round 6-under-par 66 Thursday and take a one-shot lead in the $200,000 Tallahassee Open golf tournament.

Cochran sank a 5-foot putt on No. 18 to put him one stroke ahead of Bob E. Smith and Danny Briggs.

Scott Verplank, a first-year pro who won the 1985 Western Open as an amateur, heads a pack of eight golfers at 68. The others at 4-under are Steve Jones, Pat Lindsey, Doug Johnson, Dennis Trixler, Andrew Magee, Tom Sieckmann and Mark Hayes.

Another nine players are bunched at 69 as a total of 50 golfers matched or bettered par of 72.

Fresno survives Fullerton, 30-20

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Tailback James Williams rushed for 119 yards and scored the go-ahead touchdown on a 1-yard run with 3:51 remaining as Fresno State outlasted upset-minded Fullerton State, 30-20, in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association football game Thursday night.

Despite a sub-par performance, Fresno senior quarterback Kevin Sweeney became the third player in NCAA Division I-A history to pass for more than 10,000 total yards. Sweeney completed 13 of 20 passes for 189 yards and remained third on the career passing list with 10,116 yards, 463 yards behind Doug Flutie and 164 behind Brian McClure with three games remaining.

Williams' touchdown capped an 11-play drive that took 4½ minutes and was entirely on the ground.

Junior Barry Belli later kicked his third field goal of the game, a 32-yarder, to clinch the victory for Fresno State, 7-1 overall and 4-1 in the conference.

Fullerton State, 2-8 and 1-4, came from behind twice in the second half to tie the error-plagued Bulldogs.

After trailing 13-3 at halftime, the Titans scored 10 points in the third quarter on a 1-yard sneak by quarterback Ronnie Barber and a 42-yard field goal by Len Strandley.

Fullback Anthony Mosley gave Fresno the lead again less than two minutes later on a 1-yard run for his second score. Then Fullerton tied the game at 20-20 on Barber's 18-yard TD pass to fullback Mark Hood.

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 4 ♠ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Opening lead: Three of ◇

There are some deceptive plays that are impossible to read. But there are others which there is no need to have to read — there is no excuse for falling for them.

South's four-spade opening bid conforms to the Rule of Two and Three. You must consider the four-card side suit to be worth one playing trick, so the hand rates to produce seven tricks with spades as trumps, thus justifying an opening bid of four spades.

West led the three of diamonds and declarer saw an unfortunate dummy — the ace and king of clubs were wasted values. There were three fast losers: two diamonds and the ace of trumps. And one or other of the defenders could score a diamond ruff to set the contract.

Obviously, declarer's best chance was to convince the defenders that it was he, not one of them, who might have a singleton diamond. Therefore, he played the ten from dummy and, when East produced the king, declarer contributed the two from hand. That convinced East that his partner's lead was from jack-fourth, so at trick two he shifted to a trump. Declarer needed no more.

To call the defense careless would be putting it mildly. East could expect declarer to make six trump tricks, and he had been looking at four more tricks on the table. If declarer had indeed started with a singleton diamond, there was no way on earth that his four-spade game could have been defeated.

Therefore, East should not even have wasted time looking to see what card declarer played to the first trick. Setting up the queen of diamonds was not going to have any bearing on the outcome of the hand. East should simply have continued with the ace of diamonds, and the rest of the defense would have been obvious.

Halloween movie treats ready to scare 'popcorn' out of audiences

Dracula's fangs are unsheathed and audiences love it to the very depths of their screaming souls.

While other movies may bomb at the box office, the horror film has been grossing its way to success ever since Frankenstein's monster was first jolted to life by Thomas A. Edison in 1903.

This season is no exception, with such Halloween treats as "Deadly Friend," "Chopping Mall" and "Dead of Winter" ready to scare the popcorn out of audiences from Amityville to Elm Street.

Warner Bros. got a jump on the Halloween market with the Oct. 10 release of "Deadly Friend," directed by Wes Craven ("Nightmare on Elm Street"). In its first weekend, the thriller sold an impressive $3.8 million worth of tickets.

What is the horror film's deep, dark secret? They're cheap to make and require no stars or lavish production, only clever direction and photography to create the illusion of menace.

But most of all, they have to be scary, said Steve White, president of production for New World Pictures, a major producer of terror. "Sometimes you can add a little humor, but the important thing is the chill factor. The audience must see something on the screen they would never want to meet in real life."

Among New World's current offerings are: "Hell Raiser," about a science fiction writer who encounters an evil presence in a London house; "Creepshow II," more chilling tales from George Romero and Stephen King; "Return to Horror High," some nasty happenings at a high school; and "Flowers in the Attic," about three children locked in an attic by their widowed mother.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Ryan O'Neal, defending himself against a $3 million lawsuit, denied he threw a soft-drink bottle that a former police officer says injured his eye after it shattered.

"I dropped it," O'Neal testified Thursday.

His testimony was supported by actress Farrah Fawcett, his longtime companion. O'Neal, Miss Fawcett and a friend were trying to escape a mob of photographers outside the Pierre Hotel on Aug. 23, 1980, when the incident occurred.

Ryan O'Neal

The lawsuit was filed by former police officer Brendan Campbell, who was working off-duty as a security guard at the hotel. Campbell charges O'Neal threw the bottle and that it smashed against a camera, causing a glass splinter to scratch his eye.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I. Koch, still relishing the New York Mets' World Series victory, chided White House spokesman Larry Speakes and Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn for baseball-related slights.

Koch sent a telegram Thursday to President Reagan complaining that Speakes "speaketh with a forked tongue" when he expressed fear the Mets might roughhouse a bit while visiting the president.

Speakes later said he was just kidding.

Koch also said he was "distressed" to learn that Flynn was returning a specially designed New York victory flag instead of flying it outside Boston's City Hall to pay off his bet with Koch.

Flynn said the bet called for a city flag, not a special baseball banner. Koch responded that he would send the city's biggest official flag, 5 by 8 feet, to Beantown.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor George Takei, who took the starship Enterprise into warp drive as helmsman Mr. Sulu in the "Star Trek" television series and movies, got a star of his own on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

Among the "Trekkies" on hand Thursday to congratulate Takei were series creator Gene Roddenberry and actor-director Leonard Nimoy, who played the half-human, half-alien Mr. Spock.

Takei's star on Hollywood Boulevard is just one away from Nimoy's.

HOUSTON (AP) — A prosecutor says he hopes jurors don't find two New York Mets players innocent of felony charges alleging they assaulted two off-duty police officers at a tavern just because they won the World Series.

"I'm looking for a conviction for what they did," Mike Anderson said Thursday after State District Judge Joe Kegans set a Jan. 26 trial date for pitcher Ron Darling and second baseman Tim Teufel.

Defense attorney Dick DeGuerin said a dismissal of charges and perhaps even an apology from the officers involved in the scuffle would be more in order.

"They're not guilty," DeGuerin said. "I'm confident Harris County jurors will be fair."

Darling, 25, and Teufel, 28, were arrested July 19 outside Cooter's nightclub with Mets pitchers Bob Ojeda, 28, and Rick Aguilera, 24.

Ojeda and Aguilera were charged with hindering arrest, a misdemeanor. Their hearing has been rescheduled for Jan. 26 to coincide with that of the other players.

Actress Shelly Long and actor Ted Danson, who portray an intellectual waitress and a jock bartender in the NBC-TV comedy "Cheers," will get hitched in the last episode of the season, says series star Ted Danson.

MHS——

"They like to throw deep and any time a team throws deep they have a chance to put some points on the board."

For Taylor, even though it's his first year at the OHS helm, he is familiar with the Bulldogs. In fact, "I know to much," he said. "They're a pretty good football team.

"We feel like we have to play as well as we can, take care of our job and then we'll possibly make a game of it. We have to improve our running game."

The biggest advantage Midland High has, in Taylor's opinion, is "their speed at the halfback positions. It will create a lot of problems for our defense. Certainly, their quarterback running the veer is to be considered and his passing ability is a big plus for them."

And, when Odessa High has the ball?

"I think they play good, sound defense," said Taylor. "Of course, our offense has also been very suspect. It could become a defensive game. Our defense has played well at times but our offense is going to have to be much improved if we're going to stay in the game."

If not, then Odessa High will bow out of the 1985 season with a 0-6 4-5A record, 2-7 overall. It's the Bronchos' last chance and they'd like to end it in style.

TALL CITY BOWLING

What a way for a slump to end

By TOMMY GAMMAGE

Odessa's Neva Doan has been bowling in handicap tournaments for as long as I can remember, which is quite some time (no reflection on age intended, Neva).

The 161 average bowler just likes tournament competition and bowls in as many as she can find. And, if she can't participate for one reason or another, she will sometimes back a bowler just so she can keep her hand in the competition from a spectator's standpoint.

Neva has been a frequent casher and even made the top five a few times, but, never to win. She always seemed to fall one or two match games short. Here lately, she has really been in a bowling slump, hardly even cashing.

But, never one to give up, she kept plugging away and, suddenly found herself third seeded in the finals and needing only to win three matches for the Tall City Lanes tournament title.

Now, I'm sure she thought, "Oh well, here I am again. It looks like another almost finish." This time, however, almost wasn't good enough. Neva won her matches and captured the $325 first place check.

Neva, me thinks your slump is over.

Mike White finished in second place for $175; Bob Wooten in third, $125; Bill Theobald fourth, $95 and Tommy Clifton, Jr., fifth, $75.

The next TCL tournament will be Nov. 7-8. Remember bowlers, the singles tournaments have been revised from $40 entry fees to $25 and doubles is $40 per team.

OKAY BOWLERS, here it is? Joyce (Gretchen) White bowled a 216 game in the Thursday Nite Keglers League a couple of weeks ago and the score somehow slipped by unnoticed. I paid the price.

As I walked into TCL last Thursday for my own evening of bowling, I was descended upon by the entire White clan and, believe me, there are enough of them to fill their own football roster, ranging in ages from 4 to 64. My humble apologies Gretchen.

Special accomplishments this week go to Carol White (of above mentioned clan) for successfully converting the 4-7-9-6-10 split, otherwise known as the "Greek Church." Also to L.B. Starritt for a triplicate 165.

A special congratulations from TCL to Leo Rodriguez for his first-ever 300 game at Dellwood Lanes Oct. 16. After all, it was boss' day.

Bowlers of the Week

High game men: rusty Beville, 256; High series men: Don Hopper, 653; High game women: Donna Leigh, 224; High series women: Doris McCabe, 575.

Tip of the Week

Personal ball vs. house ball.

When you get your own custom-fitted bowling ball, it will fit differently than a house ball. Most of the time, house balls, even though they may feel as if they fit, will actually have holes that are too big. Because of this, you will get used to bending your thumb to hand on the ball.

When you get your own ball, you will have the proper span, hole sizes, pitches and weight, so you won't have to squeeze to hang on. Relax your hand and trust that it will stay on during your swing and come off properly at release.

Excessive squeezing of the ball can hurt the development of your game. It will make the ball feel heavier, cause you to use too much muscle and make you roll the ball too slowly. That's why it is important to get a good ball fit. Having your own ball should also improve your average about five to 15 pins.

Ask the better bowlers in your center where they get their equipment drilled. They usually know the best in the business.

Rotkis guest for MRT/YMCA half marathon, relay

From Staff Reports

The Midland Reporter-Telegram/YMCA half marathon and relay gets underway at 9 a.m. Saturday in the courtyard at Midland Park and winds 13.2 miles through northwest Midland before finishing where it starts.

Last year Phil Stenforth came in from Austin, lectured the participants at a Friday night spaghetti dinner and then went out and gave a practical demonstration the next morning with a winning one hour, 13-minute, 53-second effort.

This year, Tom Rotkis, a veteran of 25 years' distance running, will be guest speaker at Friday's spaghetti dinner and the favorite in the second running of the half marathon.

For Rotkis, this looms as a a relative sprint. Six times he has competed in the Western States 100-mile run, his best finish a 10th place in 1982. In 25 marathons, Rotkis, a graduate of Stanford University in chemistry and USC medical school, has run about 25 marathons with a best time of 2:24.33 and has won numerous 10ks, his best a 30.33.

Rotkis currently is a member of Group Health Medical Associates specializing in diseases of the chest, sports medicine and internal medicine. He has also been Medical director of the Cardiac Rehabilitation Program and Adult Fitness programs.

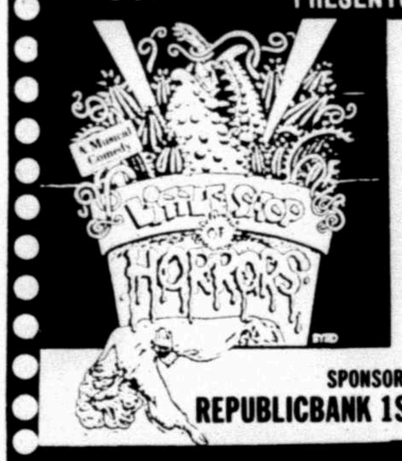

The marathon makes the MRT/Y run unique in that four-runners contribute 3.3 mile legs and competition will be on a combined age basis, men 120 and under, 120 and over; women 120 and over and 120 and under and mixed divisions of 120 and over and 120 and under. A corporate division will have no age limitation.

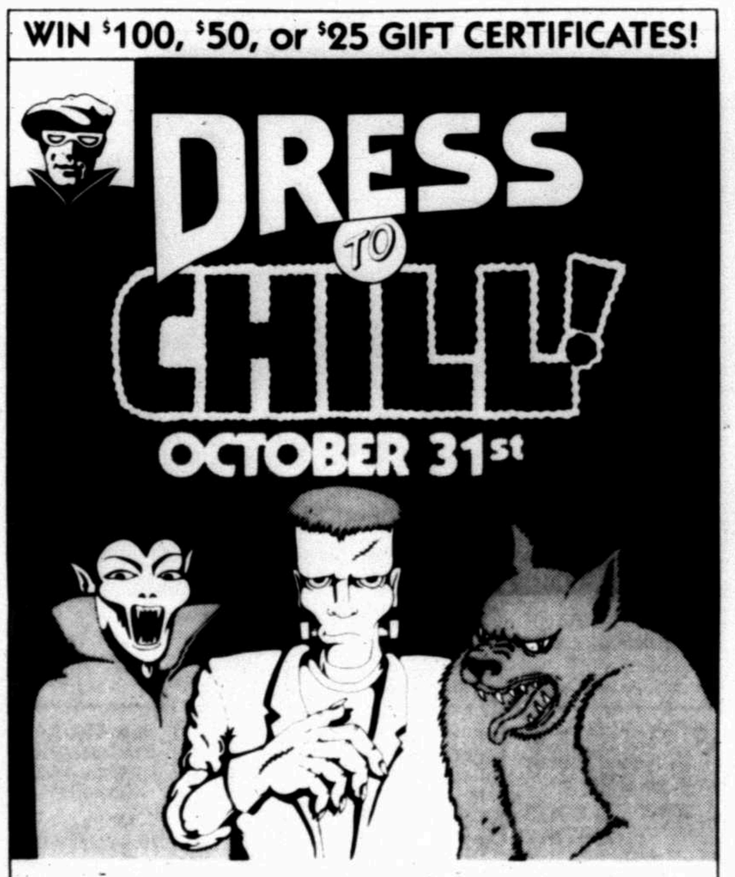

The half marathon itself will be for 19-under, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, 50-59, and 60-and-over for men and women.

Stenforth last year was followed across the finish line by Dave Moore in 1:15.03 and iron man Doug Gross, 1:19.13.

Donna Raker won the women's division in 1:35.50 with Mary Laird second and Donna Thomas third.

Connors, Gomez gain Hong Kong quarters

HONG KONG (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors of the United States and defending champion Andres Gomez of Ecuador, the second seed, advanced to the quarterfinals of the $200,000 Seiko Super Tennis Tournament Thursday.

The 34-year-old Connors, ranked No. 8 in the world, defeated fellow American Bud Schultz 6-4, 6-7 (5-7), 6-1, and Gomez, aiming to win the Hong Kong title for the third time in a row, beat American Gary Donnelly 7-6 (7-3), 4-6, 6-3.

Connors started badly when he lost his opening serve but then rallied to break Schultz in the sixth and 10th games to win the first set.

In the next set, Schultz fought back to break Connors in the third game but then lost his own serve in the 10th game forcing the set into a tiebreaker, which Connors lost 5-7.

The deciding set was a one-sided affair as Connors found his form and romped to a 6-1 victory.

Australian Pat Cash upset fourth-seeded David Pate of the United States 7-5, 6-4 and American Scott Davis surprised eight-seeded countryman Paul Annacone 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

Both Cash and Pate held service until the 12th game when the 21-year-old Cash, who is making a comeback after a long layoff due to back problems, broke the American to win the first set.

The 24-year-old Pate, who is ranked 23rd in the world, bounced back in the next set when he broke the Australian Davis Cup player in the third game but then dropped the sixth and 10th games, enabling Cash to win the set and match.

Other players to advance to the quarterfinals were seventh-seed Ramesh Krishnan of India, who beat Australian Mark Kratzmann 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, and sixth-seeded Jonathan Canter, who ousted Jaime Yzaga of Peru 6-3, 6-4.

Becker, McEnroe advance in Paris

PARIS (AP) - Top-seeded Boris Becker of West Germany and fifth-seeded John McEnroe scored second-round victories in the $625,000 Paris Open tennis tournament Thursday night.

Becker, the two-time Wimbledon champion, beat Kevin Curren of the United States 6-2, 6-4, while McEnroe, the three-time Wimbledon champion, defeated Ronald Agenor of Haiti 7-6 (7-0), 6-3.

Becker will meet Swede Jonas Svensson, while McEnroe takes on Sergio Casal of Spain in the quarterfinals Friday.

Becker's match with Curren wasn't as dramatic as previous encounters. Becker broke Curren in the fourth and eighth games to win the first set. Both players held serve for nine games before Becker finished it in by breaking Curren in the 10th game.

"I feel a lot better than yesterday," said Becker, who arrived from Tokyo on Tuesday. "I had to play well to win."

Becker had defeated Curren in the 1985 Wimbledon final and earlier this year at Stratton Mountain (Vt.) when Curren had match points in the third set.

Becker currently is No.2 on the latest ATP list, while Curren is No. 19.

McEnroe has won three tournaments in a row on the comeback trail after nearly a seven-month hiatus from tennis.

McEnroe and Agenor held serve for the first 12 games of the match, forcing a tiebreak. McEnroe, who was able to win just four points in six games on Agenor's serve previously, shut out the Haitian 7-0, winning three points on Agenor's serve there.

"I felt I played a lot better as the match went on," McEnroe said. "I was fortunate to play well in the tiebreaker. His game has a little bit of a margin for error.

"In the second set he had one loose game and that was the match."

McEnroe broke Agenor's serve in the sixth game to make the score 4-2 and served out the match.

In other second-round matches, Mikale Pernfors of Sweden, this year's French Open runner-up, beat Paul McNamee of Australia 6-3, 7-6 (7-4) and third-seeded Henri Leconte of France defeated Paolo Cane of Italy 7-5, 6-4. LeConte and Pernfors meet in the quarterfinals.

Also, Jonas Svensson of Sweden beat Guy Forget of France 6-2, 6-1.

The tournament winds up Sunday, with the winner pocketing $100,000. The runner-up will earn $50,000.

Rinaldi's rally gives U.S.A. 1-0 Wightman Cup lead

LONDON (AP) — Kathy Rinaldi rallied to defeat Britain's Sara Gomer 6-3, 7-6 and give the United States a 1-0 lead in the 58th Wightman Cup tennis competition Thursday night.

Stephanie Rehe of the United States played Annabel Croft of Britain in the second match of the night in the gilt and velvet of Royal Albert Hall.

The United States vs. Britain competition, with four singles and three doubles matches scheduled, runs through Saturday, and the team that wins four matches takes the cup. The United States leads the series 47-10 and has won the last eight in a row.

Gomer, a 22-year-old left-hander, opened strongly in front of her home crowd, breaking Rinaldi in the fourth game for a 3-1 lead. But Gomer's game proved as fragile as the china and crystal from which the patrons in the boxes of the converted symphony hall dined on champagne and smoked salmon during the match.

Rinaldi broke back for 2-3 and swept five games in a row to take the first set, then allowed Gomer to moved to within one point of a 5-1 lead in the second.

"After I won the first set, I took a deep breath," Rinaldi, 19, from Stuart, Fla., said. "I shouldn't have done that."

With the crowd cheering on her British foe, Rinaldi broke Gomer's service to close to 2-4. She broke again to tie the second set at 5-5 and won the tiebreaker 8-6, staving off a set point with a forehand down the line and moving to match point on a stinging forehand crosscourt volley.

If you see a Texas bald eagle, call...

From Staff Reports

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's bald eagle marking and tagging program has received reports of sightings of Texas-born eagles as far away as Ontario.

In addition to being seen in the Hudson Bay area, the marked eagles have been sighted at Earthquake Lake, Mont.; Pine Bluff, Ark.; Central Nebraska and even one in Texas a year after it was banded.

"We are depending on sightings by conservation agencies, bird watching groups and the public to gain data on eagle movements," said Dave Mabie of the TPWD.

"Nesting eagles and their young will be returning to Texas over the next few months, and any sighting reports will be appreciated," Mabie said. Contact Mabie, 715 S. Bronte, Rockport, 78382....

Volunteers have conducted 83 six-hour workshops in Texas. For information contact Ilo Hiller, TPWD 4200 Smith School Road, Austin 78744....

THE TPWD will hold public hunts for javelina and chachalaca on several Wildlife Management areas. The chachalaca hunt will be held within the Las Palomas WMA Dec. 6-7, Jan. 10-11 with 150 permits to be issued and a bag limit of five a day. Deadline for applications is Nov. 3. A $20 fee will be charged for each permit for both the javelina and chachalaca hunts.

Javelina hunters have until 5 p.m. Dec. 1 to submit applications for the five WMAs holding hunts. Forms may be obtained by writing the TPWD at 4200 Smith School Road, Austin....

OPERATION GAME thief, the TPWD's program for public reporting of game law violators, paid $44,700 in rewards during its first five years and caused 937 violators to pay almost $18,000 in fines.

The program is funded entirely through tax-deductible donations from individuals and sportsmen's organizations across the state. The OGT committee serves without pay and meets twice yearly to review poaching cases and disburse rewards.

The committee last week awarded $3,200 to 18 persons whose calls to the OGT (1 800 792 GAME) resulted in convictions of game law violators in the last six months.

One of the most unusual cases involved four persons caught illegally snagging fish on a freshwater lake. Two of the four already had been arrested for the same offense on another lake as a result of a previous OGT call.

TP&WD develop technique to reverse sex of hatchery bass

By BOB HOOD
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

INGRAM (AP) — Texas Parks and Wildlife Department fish researchers say they have developed a technique that allows them to reverse the sex of bass produced in hatcheries.

Officials say the technique of producing all-male or all-female bass is one of the biggest breakthroughs in bass genetics.

And there could be more to come.

"The bass sex reversal thing is part of a three-step experiment," said Dick Luebke, lab director for the Heart of the Hills Research Station at Ingram.

"We also are trying to produce triploid bass — sterile fish that will grow much faster and larger than your regular largemouth bass. And once that is accomplished, we should be able to clone the fish; that is, produce bass identical to the adult female," Luebke said.

The program is headed by Dr. Gary Garrett, who is working with bass from Florida, California and Cuba to see which strain produces the largest fish in Texas waters.

Cup defenders confident of keeping trophy

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — To hear the Australian defenders talk, the 12 foreign challengers haven't a chance of taking home the America's Cup.

"I feel it is secure," said John Fitzhardinge, a spokesman for the Royal Perth Yacht Club, where the Cup has resided since Australia II won it in 1983.

Fitzhardinge said that the Australian syndicates, though rivals in chasing the honor of defending the Cup, were cooperating and would band together behind the winning defender.

John Savage, skipper of South Australia, said "The Cup is safe."

John Longley, a crew member on Australia IV and a spokesman for the Alan Bond Syndicate, said the defenders tr ls were "the best racing I have had in my 12-meter career."

Longley, who served on Australia II when it lifted the Cup from the New York Yacht Club in 1983, said confidently that "the challengers will be quaking in their boots."

Dollar climbs

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against all key currencies except the British pound in early European trading today. Gold prices fell sharply in active European trading.

Foreign exchange dealers said the end-of-month trading was quiet ahead of the release later today of the U.S. composite index of leading indicators, which is expected to be higher than traders' earlier forecasts.

The Bank of Japan's decision to cut its 3.5 percent discount rate to 3.0 percent, effective Saturday, did not affect the market, dealers said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a 161.45 Japanese yen from 159.90 yen at Thursday's close. Later, in London, it firmed to 162.95 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Thursday:

—2.0655 West German marks, up from 2.0455

—1.7135 Swiss francs, up from 1.6930

—6.7430 French francs, up from 6.6750

—2.3315 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3095

—1,427.25 Italian lire, up from 1,413.50

—1.3884 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3874

In London, the British pound rose to $1.3995 from $1.3980 late Thursday.

Gold bullion fell as the dollar's continued strength sparked heavy selling.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $405.95 a troy ounce, up from $405 bid late Thursday. But at midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $401.50.

In Zurich, the bid price was $401.60, down from $406 bid late Thursday.

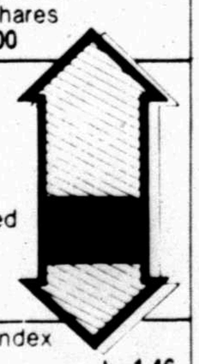

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold had risen to $3.65 to close at a bid $405.47.

Silver fell in London to a bid price of $5.62 a troy ounce, down from $5.64 bid late Thursday.

Area firms show wares at TradeShow Midland

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

Permian Basin businesses seized an excellent opportunity to display their products and tout their services Thursday at TradeShow Midland '86.

More than 40 firms set up exhibits and booths at Midland Center for the show sponsored by the Small Business Council of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

In an effort to gain a competitive edge, exhibitors displayed the latest innovations in their respective businesses to an estimated 500 attendees. New businesses in the community — such as Mail Boxes, Etc., which is scheduled to open next week — were joined by firms that have been doing business in the Permian Basin for many years. Other well-established companies used the show as an avenue to promote new products and additions to their services.

Gregg Holmes, chairman of this year's trade show and a member of the executive committee of the Chamber's Small Business Council says the group "accomplished its mission — to help the exhibitors merchandise their product or service to people who might be interested."

Holmes was pleased with what he termed "a very good cross-section of the small businesses in the Permian Basin.

He notes: "We had new businesses which were able to gain much needed exposure in the community as well as existing businesses that have new product lines to offer."

Holmes says the show's benefits were two-fold. "Not only did small businesses get exposure, but it allowed an opportunity for non-chamber members to get a feel for the role the chamber plays in the business community."

The scaled-down version of the trade show this year has been beneficial according to the organizers. "Previous shows were two-day affairs but this year's one-day three-hour show encouraged displays by businesspeople who could not afford to spend an extended period of time away from their businesses, and allowed us to bring the cost for exhibit space down considerably," adds Holmes.

Holmes says the local chamber has a strong commitment to helping the growth of small businesses. "They are the future of the Permian Basin."

Economic indicators rise 0.4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic activity rose 0.4 percent in September as various business barometers continued to signal steady, if unspectacular, economic growth.

The rise in the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators followed a 0.1 percent August decline and a 1 percent July increase.

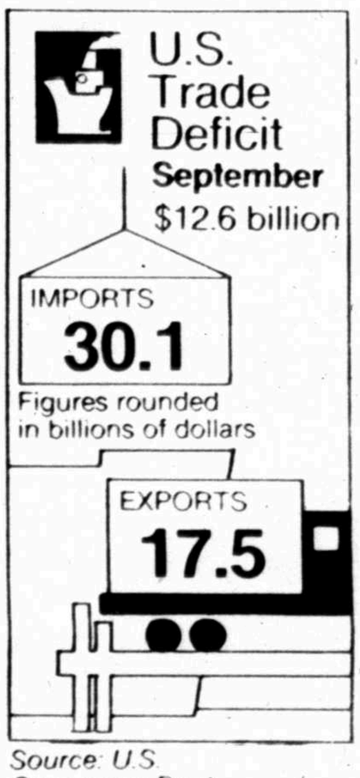

The economy, as measured by the gross national product, has grown at an annual rate of around 2.5 percent for the last two years as a huge trade deficit has weakened demand for domestic products.

On Thursday, the government reported that the trade deficit dipped to $12.6 billion in September, its best showing in five months. The decline was cited by the Reagan administration and many private economists as evidence of a turning point for one of the nation's top economic problems.

Many analysts believe economic growth will remain below 3 percent through 1987, even if the trade deficit, which hit a five-month low in September, improves further. They contend that this improvement would be offset by slower growth in consumer demand.

Today's report on the leading index is the last major economic statistic to be released before the Nov. 4 congressional election, a campaign in which both Republicans and Democrats have tried to make the economy an issue.

President Reagan, campaigning to keep Republican control of the Senate, has maintained that the country is enjoying unprecedented prosperity as the recovery nears its fifth year.

But Democrats complain that not all of the country is reaping the benefits of the recovery, charging that farmers, factory workers and oil-field workers are suffering through depression conditions.

The increase in the index was in line with what many economists had been expecting, a gain but not so strong a one as to signal that the economy is about to enter a period of rapid growth.

In the last five months, the index has fallen three times. It has risen just 5.6 percent in the last year. By comparsion, when the recovery was beginning in 1983, the index climbed 16.4 percent.

From July through September, the economy, as measured by the GNP, grew at an annual rate of 2.4 percent, far below the 4 percent growth rate being forecast by the administration.

The largest positive contributor was a rise in manufacturers' orders for consumer goods, gains in business formations, an increase in orders for business plant and equipment, a rise in the money supply, an advance in business and consumer credit, a drop in unemployment claims and a change in the time it takes businesses to fill orders.

Three of the components held the index back. The biggest negative factor was the sharp decline in stock market prices that occured in September.

Wagner & Brown offer $1.5 billion for company

New York Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Capping weeks of speculation that fueled a sharp rise in stock prices, a partnership formed by AFG Industries and Wagner & Brown said Thursday night that it had offered to buy Lear Siegler Inc. for $85 a share in cash, or $1.51 billion.

The partnership said, moreover, that it was prepared to raise its offer for Lear Siegler — a diversified aerospace, automotive and industrial firm — if the company "can demonstrate additional value to the partnership."

A spokesman at Lear Siegler's headquarters in Santa Monica, Calif., confirmed that the offer had been received but declined to comment further.

AFG, based in Irvine, Calif., is a large glass products concern whose chairman and chief executive, Randall D. Hubbard, once headed Lear Siegler's auto glass division. Wagner & Brown of Midland, Texas, is a closely held oil and gas partership formed by Cyril Wagner Jr. and Jack E. Brown. It has previously participated in unsolicited bids for Unocal, Midcon and Panhandle Eastern.

The new partnership, called AFG Partners, said in a statement that it had committed to invest $250 million in equity in the proposed transaction, and was confident that it could arrange the remainder of the financing promptly after consulting with a major commercial bank. A spokesman declined to elaborate on its reasons for the bid.

AFG Partners said it owns more than 5 percent of Lear Siegler's common stock, which closed Thursday at $81 a share, down $1.50. The bid was announced after the market closed.

Lear Siegler's stock price has risen sharply over the last few weeks amid rumors of a possible hostile offer, and Lear Siegler announced Oct. 23 that it had retained Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. to advise it on a possible corporate restructuring. At the time, however, it said it knew of no direct threat to the company.

Many analysts who follow Lear Siegler and AFG said they doubted that the partnership wanted to acquire all of the company. They speculated that the partners could be interested in selling the shares back at a premium or in acquiring Lear Siegler's auto glass division.

Houston firm wants to map bottom of Delaware Bay

SALEM, N.J. (AP) — A Houston geophysical firm wants to conduct seismic studies of the Delaware Bay's geology in hopes of finding oil or gas deposits.

Spectrum Resources has obtained a permit from Delaware officials to map the bottom of the bay using a method that would not injure marine life.

Spectrum President Richard R. Gray said New Jersey does not require a permit for the method of research the company uses. Most of the research will take place in Delaware Bay, although Gray did not rule out moving northward into parts of the Delaware River.

Nancy Freiberg, a spokeswoman with the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection, said, "If there's any physical disturbance to land, air or water, they would need a permit. If it's nothing that disturbs marine life, they would probably not need anything."

Spectrum's research equipment is on a 185-foot boat, Gray said. Beneath the boat, a cable is balanced at a constant depth under the water, he said.

The instruments include sophisticated listening tools, such as an air gun that forces sharp pulses into the water, recording the sounds bouncing off the geological formations.

Certain reflections provide an accurate indication of oil or gas formations, or reveal geological characteristics that could lead to oil and gas deposits in other areas.

The use of the air gun, rather than explosives, protects marine life, Gray said Thursday from his Houston office.

The research will begin in November, said Gray, adding that he does not know how long it will continue.

Kenneth Woodruff, associate director of the Delaware Geological Survey, a consulting agency to the state's Division of Water Resources, said, "We're excited about this because it gets at this large body of data about the river's geology that we have never had the resources to go after."

Woodruff said, "We've never been in a position to drill deep holes out there. The deeper the holes are, the more valuable the data."

Fannie Mae has new financing program

Federal National Mortgage Association, Fannie Mae, has announced a new financing program to assist buyers of the corporation's foreclosed homes in Midland and Odessa.

Effective immediately, qualified owner-occupants who buy Fannie Mae foreclosed properties through local Realtors are eligible for:

- Three percent downpayments on homes with a purchase price of up to $50,000, or 3 percent of the first $25,000 and 5 percent of the remaining amount;
- Closing costs paid by Fannie Mae; and
- One-time assumability of the mortgage if the home is sold to an owner-occupant, subject to approval by Fannie Mae. No assumption will be permitted during the first 12 months, and any assumption must take place within 48 months of the mortgage origination date.

"This financing program, available only when purchasing a Fannie Mae foreclosed home, makes an excellent value for home buyers even better," said Deane W. Hall, senior vice president of Fannie Mae's southwestern regional office in Dallas. "Combined with today's low mortgage interest rates and the attractive prices on these homes, the new features place home ownership within reach of more families."

Carolyn Nickell, president of the Midland Board of Realtors, said "I think it's an excellent financing program. It should help a lot of home buyers." She added that the only local lender involved in the program is Investors Residential Mortgage Co.

Hall stated that the new financing program applies only to Fannie Mae foreclosed properties sold in Midland and Odessa through local real estate agents to persons who will own and occupy the homes. This program is not available in all markets or on homes purchased at Fannie Mae's public real estate auctions. However, investors in Fannie Mae foreclosed properties in Midland and Odessa, who must make at least a 15 percent downpayment, are eligible for the one-time assumability feature only.

Some restrictions apply to the new financing program. These include:

- The borrower's monthly housing expenses cannot exceed 25 percent of gross monthly income, and housing expenses plus monthly installment debt cannot exceed 33 percent.
- Fannie Mae's contribution for closing costs cannot be used for any other purpse.

Hall noted that purchasers of Fannie Mae-owned properties usually are able to close on their mortgage loan and occupy the home within 45 days of purchase.

"Because Fannie Mae maintains current appraisals on all of its foreclosed homes, processing time for loans is greatly reduced, which benefits the home buyer," Hall said.

Home buyers and investors can obtain a listing of Fannie Mae properties for sale in Midland and Odessa — or any area of the country — by calling the toll-free telephone number 1-800-553-4636 Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. EST. Or anyone interested can write to Fannie Mae Properties, P.O. Box 13165, Baltimore, MD 21203.

Information on the properties for sale will include the asking price, number of bedrooms, location — county, city and ZIP code — and the name, address and telephone number of the local real estate agent selling the property.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

SEC won't discuss accounting procedure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission has refused to reopen an old debate on a controversial accounting procedure used primarily by independent oil and gas producers.

The commissioners on Thursday voted 4-1 against issuing a release asking for comment on elimination of the full-cost accounting method, which essentially permits producers to take a gradual writeoff of the costs of unsuccessful exploratory drilling as well as the costs of successful wells.

Sales of new homes rise after five month fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Low mortgage rates and strong demand in the Northeast helped sales of new homes break a string of five straight monthly declines.

The elimination of the long loan-processing delays also encouraged buyers to enter the market again, analysts said.

The Commerce Department said Thursday new single-family homes sales rose 10.6 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 890,000 units in September.

Transworld Corp. target of takeover attempt

NEW YORK (AP) — As expected, Transworld Corp. has become the target of a takeover attempt by a group of companies controlled by Ronald O. Perelman, the chairman of Revlon Group Inc.

The Perelman group, in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, said Thursday it already owned 6.7 million, or 14.8 percent, of Transworld's 46.6 million common shares outstanding and would attempt to acquire the rest. No terms were proposed, however.

Transworld's stock, which had soared recently amid speculation that Perelman would mount a bid, edged up another 12½ cents a share to $41.50 in New York Stock Exchange composite trading.

Investor withdraws offer to buy Lucky Stores

DUBLIN, Calif. (AP) — Investor Asher B. Edelman, who has withdrawn his $37-a-share offer to buy Lucky Stores, says he is not to blame for the company's sale of the 80-store Gemco chain or the layoff of 14,000 employees.

The sale of the Gemco chain was one of the moves made by Lucky in an apparent effort to thwart Edelman's bid. Other actions include a plan to repurchase outstanding shares and a proposed sale of Lucky specialty divisions.

"It's really a case of the pot calling the kettle black," Edelman said Thursday from his New York office. "The sale was planned eight months ago ... I think it's disgusting. Those jobs could have been supported by the buyer."

Edelman, who reportedly has acquired about 3 percent of Lucky's stock, would not comment on his next move.

GM scales back plans for Saturn car plant

TROY, Mich. (AP) — General Motors Corp.'s Saturn car plant will employ about half as many people and make about half the cars originally estimated when it starts production in 1990, the division's president says.

The plant will be designed and built so that expansions can be added later, Saturn Corp. President Richard LeFauve said Thursday.

The car itself is also going to be larger than first envisioned, but it still will be aimed at pushing back the growing market share held by imports, LeFauve said.

Last year, Roger Smith, chairman of the No. 1 automaker, said the Spring Hill, Tenn., plant would employ 6,000 workers and produce 500,000 cars in its first year of production.

Shamrock adopts anti-takeover plan

DALLAS (AP) — The board of directors for Diamond Shamrock Corp. adopted a plan designed to thwart unwanted takeover tactics.

The board said its new plan entitles stockholders to buy one newly-issued share of the company's common stock at an exercise price of $35.

The shareholder rights plan would take effect 20 days after a person or group acquires more than 25 percent of the company's stock or announces a tender offer for 30 percent or more.

Diamond Shamrock can redeem the rights at $.05 per share under certain circumstances.

U.S. Gov't 'Oil Lotteries' Offered For December

WASHINGTON (Exclusive) — Oil and Gas Lease Rights will be awarded to hundreds of average citizens by the Bureau of Land Management in America's only "national lottery".

Winners will hope to realize a fortune by selling their rights to oil companies while retaining lifelong royalties on all future oil and gas production.

Incredibly, most will risk little more than $1 per acre to enter the little-known gov't program that affords private individuals the chance to compete equally with giant oil companies for mineral rights on selected Federal lands.

Information and entry details may be obtained from Hartman Leasing Services (U.S. Lands Div.), P.O. Box 1926, Carson City, NV 89702. Enclose $1 to cover postage and handling.

Official entry information will be rushed to meet the closing deadline for the next available drawing.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

With dollar averaging you buy less when price more

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have invested in a mutual fund through a stock broker. I now have more money to put into mutual funds and have spoken to my broker, another broker and two financial planners. The planners tell me it is advisable to invest in mutual funds at this time. The brokers tell me just the opposite. They say, because of the volatile stock market, to wait about three months.

I am confused as to when is a good time to invest. Can you tell me?

A. Neither I nor anyone else can tell you the "right" time to invest — so that you would be certain of making money, or, at least, not losing.

Doyle

The market prices of stocks, bonds and shares of mutual funds holding those securities move up and down so frequently that no one on this earth has the ability to pick the absolutely right time to buy and sell.

However, any time can be a "good" time to invest if you follow a sensible and conservative investment program called "dollar averaging."

That's the simple method of investing the same amount of money in the same security at fixed intervals, such as $100 a month.

With dollar averaging, you buy fewer shares when prices are high, more shares when prices are low and don't end up with ulcers trying to outguess the market. As long as the security in which you invest doesn't head down, down, down in price and never recover, you come out a winner.

Mutual funds are good choices for dollar averaging, because the money you invest buys full and fractional shares — usually to the third decimal place.

Also, the values of investments in most mutual funds have increased over the years. While you can't be sure the per share value of any mutual fund you pick will rise in the future, dollar averaging will reduce your risk.

Q. I am a widow, 70, living alone. I have $150,000 in certificates of deposit and another $20,000 in a money market deposit account for quick draw in case of emergencies. I receive $800 a month from Social Security. That's it.

A financial planner has been telephoning me to invest in a government securities mutual fund, which pays more than new CDs. I could use more income, but I can't take any risks. What do you advise?

A. Stay with CDs at federally insured banks or savings and loan associations, where your money will be rock-solid safe.

A government securities mutual fund holds U.S. Treasury bonds, notes and bills and/or federal agency securities. There's no worry about interest being paid on those securities and, after the fund deducts its operating expenses, that money being passed along to fund shareholders. Nor is there any worry about the securities the fund holds being redeemed at face value when they mature.

But the market values of those securities rise and fall in the marketplace before they reach maturity. As a result, the fund's share value fluctuates. If interest rates go up, the fund's share value will fall. In that situation, you would lose money if you cash in shares.

That's a risk you and many other people simply can't afford to take.

Q. I know that brokers collect commissions when I buy or sell stocks, bonds or mutual funds I buy through them. How about financial planners? Do they get commissions on my purchases?

A. Most do.

Some work on a "fee only" basis by setting up a financial plan for you. Then, you do your buying and selling elsewhere. But the majority are little more than salespeople and collect commissions on the things they recommend you purchase. Some get both fees and commissions.

Enter guilty plea or say 'I do'?

DALLAS (AP) — A criminal court judge, pressed into service to wed a couple who had 90 minutes to say "I do," said he almost asked them out of habit if they wanted to enter a guilty plea.

Judge Ed Kinkeade postponed his lunch hour Friday to wed Bill Dawkins and Donna Bradshaw of Lithonia, Ga., in the hall outside the sheriff's office in the Dallas County Courthouse.

And except for his forgetting a few of the matrimonial words, everything went smoothly.

"The judge asked him, 'Do you promise to take care of her and not leave her?' then asked her the same thing, and that was it," said Jenni Brodnax, a jail information officer.

The couple, both 36, flew to Dallas on the spur of the moment so they could get married with Texas relatives in attendance. They had an hour and a half between flights.

Houston 'ready' for Democratic convention

AP Laserphoto

Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire, center, and Houston host committee chairman Joe Russo, right, listen attentively to Democratic National Committee Chairman Paul Kirk. The trio were among many of the city's democratic leadership who turned out for a Democratic fund-raiser in hopes of luring the 1988 Democratic Convention to Houston.

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Gov. Mark White and Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire insist the nation's fourth-largest city is prepared to host the 1988 Democratic National Convention.

"We plan to convince the Site Selection Committee there can be no other choice," Mrs. Whitmire said Thursday night at a $1,000-a-plate fund-raiser kicking off four days of briefings and wining and dining for 56 delegates from around the country who will decide on a site for the convention.

"We have full buildings and not so full buildings," White said. "We're ready for you. You are in the city of the future.

"We also have the spirit that we will translate victory in that convention to victory in November (1988)," he said.

"It's not just the civic leadership of Houston, but the eyes of Houston are upon you," added U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. "No state in the union will extend more hospitality. Even though times are a bit tough, Houston has its head up and colors flying."

Democratic National Committee Chairman Paul Kirk said White's re-election to a second term next week, while a factor in the decision, would not be the major item in the process.

"It helps," he said of White's bid for a second term. "But I think it will be a moot point," he added, predicting a White victory over Republican challenger Bill Clements.

"Every city has its pros and cons," he said. "We'll weigh all the factors and take an accounting. Until that time the process is wide open."

Kirk, however, criticized Republicans for what he called a limp-wristed policy on trade, callous policy on agriculture and no policy on energy.

He said Clements was "looking at the future through a rearview mirror."

"I'd like to think Mark White is making some tough choices today to invest in the future," Kirk said.

The Site Selection Committee and its entourage, which with party officials and guests swells to about 120 people, already has visited Atlanta and Kansas City. Other inspection tours are slated for New Orleans, Washington and New York.

A site decision is expected early next year. Selection of Houston would pump about $67 million into the ailing oil-dependent Houston economy, local officials said.

City officials, meanwhile, are hoping to lure the Democrats in 1988 with hard cash and free services.

The money started flowing Thursday night with more than $200,000 raised for the Democrats at the dinner. A theater school group provided after-dinner entertainment, concentrating on Texas songs.

Other events for the committee members include receptions at the city's top hotels, the Museum of Fine Arts and the Alley Theater, a tour of the Johnson Space Center, a reception and luau in Galveston and breakfast Sunday aboard the restored tall ship Elissa at the Port of Galveston.

Five people charged in cable-kickback scheme

DALLAS (AP) — A Mesquite contracting company and five individuals, including four former employees of Warner Amex's cable television system, have been charged in connection with alleged kickbacks and rigging bids for cable construction.

After a lengthy Internal Revenue Service investigation, felony conspiracy charges were filed Thursday against Global Contracting Co. Inc. through its president, Don Laney; Stephen W. Magnuson, a cost-analysis manager in Warner Amex's construction department, and Nicholas A. Shammas, described by federal prosecutors as a "middle man" who formed a dummy corporation to launder kickbacks from Global, which is no longer in business, officials said.

Willie H. Walls, Julian N. Kelly and Carl N. Underwood, all former cable construction inspectors for Warner Amex in Dallas, were charged with misdemeanor blackmail charges for allegedly demanding money from Laney for not informing on him, Assistant U.S. Attorney David B. Lewis said.

According to the charges, Magnuson, Laney, Walls and Kelly began meeting in March 1983 to establish secret interests in a cable construction company.

Two months later, Laney, who was not charged personally, began making kickback payments through Global to Warner Amex employees and NAS Corp. — a dummy firm that Shammas set up to launder the kickbacks, which were disguised as consulting or administrative fees, according to the charges.

Magnuson is accused of using his position to rig the competitive bidding process to ensure that Global and selected contractors were chosen.

Officials said Global was awarded more than $4 million in cable construction contracts, but declined to disclose the amount of alleged kickbacks involved in the case.

Warner Amex, which sold its cable television interests in the Dallas area to Heritage Cablevision about a year ago, was unaware of the alleged criminal activities and later cooperated with investigators, said Wayne Hill.

Magnuson and Shammas face maximum penalties of five years' imprisonment and $250,000 in fines on the conspiracy charges.

Global could be fined $500,000 and Underwood, Walls and Kelly each face maximum penalties of one year imprisonment and $2,000 in fines.

Magnuson also was charged with an additional felony count of filing a false income-tax return for 1984, which carries a penalty of up to three years' imprisonment and a $100,000 fine.

Teacher gets life for abuse of children

AMARILLO (AP) — A second El Paso YMCA preschool teacher has been sentenced to life in prison for sexually abusing students.

Gayle Stickler Dove, 42, was sentenced to life and three 20-year sentences after being convicted of sexually abusing four of her pupils.

The seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated four hours Thursday in assessing Mrs. Dove's punishment. State District Judge Sam Callan said the 20-year terms will be served concurrently.

The trial was moved from El Paso, where authorities are investigating the sexual abuse of 16 children at the YMCA.

An El Paso jury in March sentenced another YMCA teacher, Michelle Noble, to life imprisonment and 311 years.

Defense attorney John Langford said he will file an appeal in Mrs. Dove's case.

Mrs. Dove, who was calm and composed during the 1½-week trial, hung her head and cried quietly during the punishment phase.

She wept as her husband and sister told jurors they would help Mrs. Dove comply with any court stipulations if she were granted probation.

Joe Dove told the jury he would do "anything, absolutely anything" to help his wife.

Langford told jurors he was disappointed in their verdict. He insisted Mrs. Dove was innocent in asking jurors to grant her 10-years' probation on all six counts.

He tried to blame the crime on Mrs. Dove's fellow teacher, Ms. Noble. "Perhaps she's guilty of bad judgment," Langford said. "Perhaps she's guilty of her friendship with Mickey Noble."

Assistant District Attorney Debra Kanof accused Langford of trying to make jurors feel guilty because of their verdict.

Congressmen cut through Medicare red tape to reunite elderly couple

LEWISVILLE (AP) — An elderly couple has been reunited after two congressmen intervened to unravel a case of Medicare red tape.

Alton Marlowe, 77, flew Thursday from Colorado to Texas to reunite with his wife, whom he left two months ago after welfare officials ruled his Social Security check was too high to qualify for reimbursement of nursing home costs.

American Airlines provided the free flight.

Two Texas congressmen intervened to clarify federal regulations, however, and Marlowe was told earlier this week he could move back into the Twin Pines Nursing Home at Lewisville, 20 miles northwest of Dallas.

At least two other elderly couples in Texas are affected by an amendment to Social Security law that was passed by both the U.S. House and Senate last weekend and which President Reagan has promised to sign, an aide to Rep. Dick Armey, R-Texas, of Denton said Thursday.

The change will allow state agencies to calculate the income of couples together, rather than separately, to determine if they qualify for Medicaid reimbursement of nursing home costs.

Marlowe and his wife, Irene, 75, had lived in the nursing home for two years when the Texas Department of Human Resources informed him that his monthly Social Security check was $78.70 too high for him to qualify for $265 in Medicaid reimbursement.

As a result, Marlowe moved out of the nursing home two months ago and went to Colorado to live with a son. When he left, his wife's health began to decline, nursing home officials said. Her spirits soared when she learned her husband would be moving back, the officials said.

Armey and Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, a Democrat from Austin, co-authored the amendment that will enable the Marlowes to again qualify for Medicaid reimbursement, Armey aide Ed Gillespie said Thursday.

Gillespie said he did not know the two other couples in Texas affected by the change in interpretation of the regulations.

Industry, government must unite to clean up waste sites, Hightower says

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Saying hazardous waste landfills create "hundreds of caldrons of poison in the Texas underground," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower Thursday said industry and government must cooperate to foster alternative — though more expensive — disposal methods.

Pointing out that the state's 200 hazardous waste landfills leave "a toxic legacy that threatens our underground water and the health of our people," Hightower released a 60-page report that proposes a comprehensive technological and educational battle against land disposal.

"The goal should be to eliminate all — not part, not most, but all — land disposal of wastes that could contaminate our environment," Hightower said. The report shows the landfills are concentrated near Beaumont, Houston, Corpus Christi, Odessa and El Paso, including one in Midland County.

"Toxic disposal tends to be out in the rural areas," he said when asked why the Department of Agriculture is studying the problem when other state agencies regulate hazardous wastes. "An overlooked constituency within the Department of Agriculture is the land and groundwater that we rely on to produce three squares a day."

Senate Natural Resources Committee Chairman Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, said his panel will convene a hearing on the topic in Lake Jackson on Nov. 18.

"Our problem is to see that that which is good on the merits is also politically sound," Santiesteban said. "I will see to it that your recommendations are considered."

Cooperation between environmental groups and the chemical industry, which produces most of the state's 38 million tons of hazardous waste each year, led the Legislature to pass the Solid Waste Disposal Act of 1985. That bill lists land disposal as the least desirable of six alternatives.

Hightower said the state must move toward the preferred methods of reducing the amount of waste generated, recycling that waste and treating it too make it less harmful. "Our job is to convince those persons manufacturing, shipping and disposing of the hazardous waste materials it's in their best interests to work with government in leading the way to these alternatives," he said.

Jon Fisher, a lobbyist for the Texas Chemical Council, said he had seen a draft of the report. "As long as everybody is willing to consider the economic impact of changes, cooperation will continue," he said.

Fisher said increasing energy costs, higher taxes, "an increasingly hostile regulatory environment" and stiff world-wide competition have placed the Texas chemical industry in an economic bind. "Just how much can you take before you fold the tent and go somewhere else?" he asked.

Ken Kramer, lobbyist for the Lone Star chapter of the Sierra Club, said he is "very supportive of the conclusions" in Hightower's report.

STATE IN BRIEF

McFadden's lawyer says client didn't murder teen

GILMER (AP) — An attorney for Jerry Walter McFadden says his client did not kill a Hawkins teen-ager and the state will have a tough time proving the accusations.

McFadden, nicknamed "Animal," is charged with capital murder in the strangulation death of 18-year-old Suzanne Harrison. She and two friends disappeared during an outing to Lake Hawkins in May.

The trial was to have started Monday in Bell County in Central Texas. But State District Judge Virgil Mulanex granted a motion by defense attorney Vernard Solomon Thursday to delay the start of the trial until early next year. He said he would consider a prosecution request to start the trial Feb. 2.

McFadden led police on a two-day manhunt in East Texas in July after he escaped from the Upshur County jail with a deputy as hostage.

Solomon told the Longview News-Journal on Thursday that his client has been wrongly charged with the murder and he contends somone else killed Miss Harrison in May after she and the other two vanished.

Leasing judgment signed

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said Thursday that a Dallas court agreement could save Texans up to $1.5 million in auto and truck leasing contracts.

Mattox said the agreement was accepted by the General Motors Acceptance Corp. and General Leasing Corp.

He told a news conference the court action followed complaints to his office about consumers being billed for 1984 and 1985 property taxes on their GMAC leased vehicles although the contracts did not disclose they were liable for the taxes.

Mattox said that under terms of the agreement, about 850 consumers will receive refund checks from GMAC for property taxes already paid, totaling about $250,000.

He said about 11,658 consumers who have been billed for 1986 taxes will be notified they do not have to pay the taxes.

Mattox said most of those involved were businesses who lease vehicles used to conduct business.
