Talks may free up industrial building

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

Negotiations are now underway to settle the contract dispute between the Scurry County Industrial Foundation and its former tenant King's Highway Mobile Industries.

And the upshot of these talks — still underway as of Friday — could be to free for new industrial prospects the foundation building now standing vacant.

Last April 25, a reorganized five-member Industrial Foundation Board placed King's Highway officials on notice that the lease agreement between the two was considered to be in default.

Locks were changed on the building the following day and the Dallas-based parent company for King's Highway — First Tarent — was notified that the local foundation had laid claim to all "fixtures and equipment" in the building.

That action was prompted by First Tarent's failure to make $4,300 monthly lease payments to the foundation dating back some three months.

At the time of the April 25 notice, these unpaid bills totaled some $12,900. Since that time, the figure owed has increased to some $35,000 with the industrial foundation holding the option to charge an additional 15 percent per annum in penalty charges.

First Tarent purchased the recreational vehicle-manufacturing company effective Feb. 9, 1984 from its then parent company Michigan General of Dallas, now of New Jersey.

Friday, Chamber of Commerce Manager Mort Ewing, who serves as one of the five members comprising the Industrial Foundation Board, reported that officials with Michigan General have been in

MacLeod change will likely cause expensive defense

As attorneys for Arthur Lee MacLeod attempt to have their client's trial moved from Lubbock, local district court officials note Scurry County taxpayers may have ducked a sizeable indigent defense cost which might result from the murder trial.

MacLeod is accused of murdering his wife and former Snyder resident Evelyne Feather MacLeod. And due to the publicity surrounding the case, his court-appointed attorney is now seeking to have the trial moved from Lubbock County.

Hearings for this change of venue request concluded Friday in Lubbock under the direction of 140th District Judge William R. Shaver.

Shaver has indicated he will not make a decision in the case for a few days. But if such a motion is ultimately granted, Lubbock County will be held responsible for costs incurred by the trial.

In published accounts of the hearing, a Lubbock County district attorney's spokesman was quoted as saying its cost would be a minimum of $10,000.

Friday, District Attorney Ernie Armstrong "speculated" these costs could go past the $100,000 mark.

After Mrs. MacLeod's headless and handless body was discovered north of Fluvanna May 21, charges of murder were

Voting challenge petitions served

One week after the filing was announced, both the City of Snyder and Snyder ISD officials were officially served Friday with legal papers challenging both's at-large method of electing board members.

The lawsuits were filed Oct. 18 in U.S. District Court in Lubbock by representatives of the San Antonio-based Southwest Voter Registration Education Project.

Plaintiffs for the action are eight locals characterized in the legal petition as representatives of minority groups in Snyder.

These plantiffs are Evelyn J. Malone, Martin Pena Jr., Mrs. Vernest Tippins, Salome G. Barrera, Sedalia Malone, Abel Garza, Mary Braziel and Henry Ramos.

The legal petition was delivered by registered mail Friday. It states that the at-large voting method now used to elect city council and school board members "violates the plaintiff's civil rights" by "diluting the voting strength of Mexican Americans and blacks."

The document calls for a permanent injunction against such elections in Snyder and the formation of single member districts here.

No damages are sought in the case other than "court costs and attorney's fees."

Both the city and school now have 20 days to acknowledge they have received the legal petitions.

Proposal targets veteran's housing

(Editor's Note: The SDN continues its countdown review of the 14 constitutional amendments which will be decided by Texas Voters Nov. 5. This issue features Propositions 8. The following information has been provided through the League of Women Voters.)

PROPOSITION 8

If passed, this proposal would provide for an additional $500 million in bonding authority for the Veteran's Housing Assistance Program. It would also allow the legislature to define which eligible veterans could participate in the program.

The Veterans Land Program was created by a 1946 constitutional amendment with an initial bond authorization of $25 million. Since that time Texas voters have approved seven amendments adding to the fund a total of $1.2 billion.

An additional $500 million in bonds for the program, approved by amendment in 1983, created the housing assistance program. It now provides loans of not more than $20,000 at an interest rate of less than 10 percent annually.

Eligibility for the land and housing programs is presently defined in the constitution. A bill passed by the 69th Legislature reauthorizes the Veterans Land Board and adopts the definition of "veteran" contained in the constitution, with the addition of former members of the U.S. Public Health Service. The definition in the bill will become effective only if this amendment is approved.

SCAT awaits WFAA plans

Local SCAT officials were awaiting arrival of a proposed contract from West Texas Microwave Co. before beginning deliberations concerning the feasibility of keeping WFFA on the local system.

It was revealed last week that the microwave company had offered a verbal proposal that called for a fee of $3000 per month per system to keep the popular Dallas-based Channel 8.

The proposal was for WFAA only and is reportedly contingent upon four cable systems accepting the offer. In addition to Snyder's SCAT, the cable companies are in Big Spring, Colorado City and Sweetwater.

Mel Gilbert, general manager of SCAT, said Friday there had been "no new developments" and

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Middle age is when your classmates are getting so old they have trouble recognizing you."

There is a new face in Snyder.

It's Kenneth Wood, Exxon employee and longtime Snyder volunteer fireman. If you don't personally know Kenneth, then surely you have seen him.

For almost seven years, Kenneth has sported a gray and white beard. His beard has made him a natural Santa at Christmas time, and Kenneth has gained quite a reputation for playing Santa at area Christmas parties.

In fact, Kenneth already had some Santa engagements booked this holiday season, but thanks to the Texas Railroad Commission, Santa will be clean shaven this December.

Wood is one of many West Texas oilfield workers who had to shed facial hair in order to comply with new RRC rulings dealing with deadly hydrogen sulfide gas. (H2S)

Regulations that went into effect Sept. 1 say that facial hair interfers with the proper fitting of a gas mask necessary for worker safety. Anybody that works in the oilpatch must now be "gas sniffer" certified.

With the holiday season approaching, Wood's company tried to get a waiver, but was unsuccessful.

As a result, Kenneth took his six-year-old grandson, William, to the barbershop with him to get the growth shaved off. When finished the youngster, who had never seen his gramps without a beard said, "Grandpa, you sure do look funny.

Kenneth said most folks don't recognize him at first, and wife Trudie, manager of Scurry County Abstract, agrees "it's different."

Kenneth, pointing in the future to retirement, looks forward to the day when he can again be a real Santa with real whiskers.

Sometimes regulations can be real losers. Did you hear the one about the born loser?

He was standing on the edge of Echo Cliff and yelled, "Hello, I'm Milfred Merriweather."

The echo of the cliff came back: "J-U-M-P."

Wreck causes blackout here

A traffic accident caused some Snyder and rural residents to be without electricity for approximately two hours Friday night.

Areas affected included the Eastridge addition, just south of town on the Colorado City Highway and the Townhouse Apartments on east 37th St.

The lights went out following a traffic accident at the Southwestern Brick Plant south of the city.

According to Department of Public Safety accident reports, a 1978 Kenworth tractor-trailer rig — owned by Southwestern Brick and driven by Clovis Brian Head of Rt. 2, Snyder — struck a Texas Electric Service Co. pole on the plant yard around 8:40 p.m.

A TESCO spokesman said crews worked for about two hours Friday night.

International law excluded

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that international law may not be cited as a defense during the alien-smuggling trial of 11 sanctuary movement members, but he says a U.S. statute on asylum for refugees can be mentioned.

U.S. District Court Judge Earl H. Carroll almost completed selecting prospective jurors Friday, the fourth day of the trial for two Roman Catholic priests, a Catholic nun, a Presbyterian minister and seven church workers.

The judge told 31 prospective jurors to return Wednesday for the final selection of the 12-member panel plus alternates. Seven others were asked to return Tuesday for individual questioning.

Carroll granted a prosecution motion Friday to disallow the use of international law as a defense, but said the 1980 Refugee Act could be introduced to determine whether aliens transported or harbored by the defendants had been admitted to the United States legally.

The act outlines the asylum process for legally admitting refugees into the country.

Carroll also said he would rule Monday or Tuesday on a defense request to allow it to argue for acquittal on the basis that the defendants had acted in "good faith," believing that they were not in violation of the law.

Until that is decided, the defense was unsure how Friday's decision will affect their case, said Philip Willis-Conger, one of the defendants.

"It's like a murder mystery and we've gotten one of the chapters but we won't know the full story until the last chapter comes down next week," he said.

All of the defendants are charged with conspiracy. Some also are charged with smuggling, transporting and harboring illegal aliens.

Sanctuary movement members contend they are compelled by religious beliefs to assist Guatemalans and Salvadorans fleeing oppression in their homelands.

Psychiatrist warns of potential for Mexico City riots

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Riots could erupt in Mexico City if the government doesn't deliver economic aid promised to those rendered homeless by the recent earthquake, a leading Mexican psychiatrist said.

"If they can find any route to express the violence of their anger, they will take it," said Dr. Eduardo de la Vega said Friday at the annual meeting here of the American Academy of Child Psychiatry. "If we don't see solutions in the next few months, we're going to see violence."

De la Vega, president of the Mexican Association of Child Psychiatry, said that middle- and working-class families are a "focus of concern" because of their anger, intelligence and sophistication. He specifically mentioned residents of huge working-class Tlatelolco housing complex.

"These people are very angry because they were never able to get in touch with their own depression," he said.

De la Vega, who helped organize psychiatrists and other mental health workers to respond to the psychological problems of earthquake survivors, tempered his warning by saying the government seems to be moving to head off growing discontent.

The government had promised new homes at no cost to government workers whose homes were among the 25,000 buildings destroyed by the quakes, he said. Other people were promised reduced interest rates, discounted construction costs and no down payments for new homes.

De la Vega said most Mexico City residents appear to have returned to their normal routines. In the areas most seriously damaged by the quake, he said, children seem to be leading their teachers in efforts to return to normal life.

Cosmetology interviews set

Persons interested in enrolling in the cosmetology class set to begin Dec. 2 at Western Texas College will have pre-entrance interviews on Nov. 4, Judy Border, cosmetology instructor, has announced.

Cosmetology students complete their 1,580 hours of instruction in a 12-month period and are then eligible to take examinations administered by the state Cosmetology Board.

Plea bargain is expected in the Walker family spy trial

BALTIMORE (AP) — John A. Walker Jr., accused of masterminding a family espionage ring, is expected to plead guilty and testify against an alleged co-conspirator in exchange for a shorter sentence for his son, according to a government source and published reports.

Walker, 48, and his seaman son, Michael, 22, are scheduled to appear in federal court Monday, when jury selection was to have begun in the elder Walker's trial, the government source said Friday in Washington.

An official announcement Friday by the court merely said that Walker's trial had been delayed for some unspecified "proceedings" involving father and son.

Walker agreed to plead guilty in exchange for a shorter sentence for his son, according to reports in today's editions of the New York Times, Los Angeles Times and Washington Post.

Michael Walker, allegedly recruited by his father into a family spy ring, was scheduled for trial after completion of his father's case. John Walker's brother, Arthur J. Walker, has been convicted of espionage.

The newspapers, quoting unidentified government sources, said in today's editions that Michael Walker would also plead guilty Monday.

The elder Walker's cooperation could include testifying against his longtime friend from the Navy, Jerry A. Whitworth, who is charged on the West Coast with supplying Walker with sensitive communications and code secrets for sale to the Soviet Union, the government source said.

The law clerk for U.S. District Judge Alexander Harvey II said Walker and his son will be in court Monday. He said the nature of those proceedings "has not been finalized."

Harvey would not comment further. Prospective jurors were told Friday that the case had been continued.

Whitworth's attorney, Tony Tamburello, denied reports that he had said he understood John Walker was going to testify against his client.

"I have heard nothing from what I consider a reliable source," Tamburello said in San Francisco. "There are rumors. Nothing is confirmed."

40 percent watch evangelists

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — A nationwide survey, which found that the audience for religious programming is much larger than previously expected, showed that 40 percent of U.S. households with television sets watched TV evangelists at least once a month.

The A.C. Nielsen Co. report, commissioned by the Christian Broadcasting Network and released in Savannah on Friday, indicates that TV evangelists have not exaggerated the size of their audiences as much as had been believed, said Jeffery K. Hadden, a University of Virginia professor and president of the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion.

According to the study, more than 33 million households, 40.2 percent of all homes in the United States, watched at least one of 10 television preachers for at least six minutes once a month.

Nielsen spokesman William Behanna said that by comparison, most top-rated network prime time shows also reach about 40 percent of U.S. viewers.

Law seeks escaped felons

RIO GRANDE--The three men were strangers, just a trio of jail inmates who happened to be doing time together.

One was about to be transported to Huntsville to begin serving a three-year prison sentence for burglary.

Another was in jail on a separate burglary charge.

The third was serving a sentence on DWI conviction.

But circumstances have now bonded these three strangers together.

Around 10 p.m. on August 26, four inmates at the Starr County jail overpowered the jail guard and obtained his keys, which they used to make their escape.

There were about 20 prisoners in the jail at the time of the escape and all of them could have fled. But 16 decided to stay.

One of the escaped prisoners was quickly captured.

However three remain at large.

They are Alejandro Castillo, 30, of Houston who was serving time for DWI; Richard Gonzalez, 24, who had been in jail since March on a charge of burglary of a habitation; and Roberto Trevino, 22, who was about to be transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections in Hunstville to begin serving a three-year prison sentence for burglary of a habitation.

Now all three must face additional felony escape charges.

But first they must be captured.

Rewards of up to $1,000 each are being offered for information leading to the capture of the three escapees.

Castillo is 5-8, 190 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. He has a dark complexion and has tatoos on both arms and a surgical scar just below the navel.

Gonzalez is 5-7, 114 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. He has the tatoo of a spider web on his right shoulder.

Starr County law enforcement officials say Gonzalez and Trevino should be considered dangerous.

Sheriff's deputies say Castillo and Gonzalez were seen together in Mexico about a week after their escape. However, they believe the pair spilt up and have returned to the United States.

Anyone with information about the locations of any of the three fugitives is asked to call the Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council toll free at 1-800-252-8477 or their local Crime Stoppers program. In all cases, callers do not have to reveal their identities. Cash rewards are also offered for information leading to the capture of wanted felons.

Texas Most Wanted is a cooperative program between the Department of Public Safety and Texas Crime Stoppers.

No injuries reported...

Fire in engine aborts flight

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — A fire in the engine of a Lockheed L-1011 jumbo jet that aborted a takeoff came only hours after federal investigators recommended immediate inspections of all L-1011s.

The Delta Air Lines jet with 226 people aboard aborted its takeoff from the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport Friday night after fuel caught fire in an engine at 7:41 p.m. CDT.

No injuries were reported on the three-engine Lockheed L-1011 Tristar, which was to fly to San Francisco as Flight 43, Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Gerrie Cook said.

About 15 of the 213 passengers fled down an emergency slide, and the remaining passengers and crew of 13 safely evacuated the plane minutes after the fire, Ms. Cook said.

The incident followed federal officials' recommendation of immediate inspections of all Lockheed L-1011 aircraft because of an electrical fire on a Royal Jordanian Airlines jet earlier this month.

The National Transportation Safety Board made that recommendation Friday after investigators found that a generator cable too close to a hot air duct appears to have started the Oct. 18 fire.

After automatic fire extinguishers doused the flame, the plane landed normally in Singapore.

In Friday's incident, the jumbo jet experienced what Delta spokesman Jim Ewing called "a stack fire," when the pilot accelerated and ignited "a pool of unused fuel in the tailpipe of engine No. 2."

"Normally, when a pilot advances power in a case like this, the lit fuel is blown out of the engine" without incident, Ewing said.

The pilot activated an internal extinguisher in the engine and prevented an engine fire.

Shultz to attend pre-summit meeting with Gorbachev

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, described as "extremely pleased" with growing allied solidarity, is sending Secretary of State George Shultz to meet with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in an attempt to narrow superpower differences prior to the Geneva summit.

Shultz, following a two-hour meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze in New York on Friday, virtually ruled out the possibility that Reagan and Gorbachev would conclude an arms control agreement at their Nov. 19-20 summit meeting.

But he said a major summit objective would be to "set out an agenda for the future, to have a sense of direction of where we think and they think this relationship should go."

With Reagan's encouragement, Shultz said he accepted a Soviet invitation to meet with Gorbachev in Moscow on Nov. 4-5 in keeping with a joint pledge by Shultz and Shevardnadze to lay the groundwork for well-prepared and productive summit talks.

"I would have to say there are major differences that need to be resolved, and we hope that some of them may get resolved before the meeting in Geneva," Shultz told reporters outside the U.S. mission to the United Nations following his breakfast meeting with Shevardnadze.

The Soviet foreign minister told reporters that "great hopes are pinned to that summit meeting by literally all peoples in the world," and that both sides were dedicated to seeking a successful outcome.

Shultz and other U.S. officials denied that Reagan had decided to make a counteroffer to Gorbachev's recent proposal for a 50 percent reduction in nuclear missiles and warheads.

But these officials left open the possibility that Reagan might decide on a U.S. response in time for Shultz to take it to Moscow. Robert C. McFarlane, the president's national security adviser, called it a "timely response" to Gorbachev's proposal.

Also Friday, NBC News reported Reagan and Gorbachev have scheduled four private meetings at the Geneva summit.

The network also said Gorbachev plans to invite Reagan to Moscow in 1986 "if there are visible results at the summit — meaning some kind of agreement on arms control principles." NBC also said Reagan is prepared to invite Gorbachev to visit the United States.

White House spokesman Mark Weinberg declined comment on the report.

Recent dollar decline should boost farm exports in 1986

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recent drop in the value of the dollar in relation to foreign currency "will begin to improve our competiveness in world markets," Agriculture Department economists say.

The high value of the dollar in comparision to other currencies has been cited as one of the big reasons for U.S. farm exports slumping from their record high levels of a few years ago. It means foreign customers get less for their money than before.

"Since responses in imports and exports lag behind exchange rates, the major effect of the September dollar declines will begin to show up in mid-1986," says a new outlook report by the department's Economic Research Service.

"A continued slow decline in the value of the dollar is expected through 1986, and, as a result, the net export position of the United States could increase slightly."

But good news for farmers is still hard to come by, although there are some brighter signals in the economy.

For example, the report said real growth in the general economy during the second half of 1985 is likely to be greater than in the first half.

Swap between parties seen as face saving agreement

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte's daughter was home after 44 days in the hands of kidnappers, and dozens of wounded and jailed rebels were back in the hills or in other countries in a deal that allowed both sides to claim victory Friday.

The reunion of Ines Guadalupe Duarte Duran, 35, with her parents Thursday ended an episode that was paralyzing the government while giving the guerrillas a major public relations headache.

Duarte's government handed over 21 political prisoners and a Costa Rican pilot held on smuggling charges, and let 96 wounded rebels be flown out of the country. Three other jailed rebels had been freed earlier.

Three of the political prisoners and the wounded arrived in Cuba Friday. The other 18 prisoners were delivered to rebels in the mountain village of Tenancingo, 25 miles northeast of San Salvador.

Mrs. Duarte Duran and a friend kidnapped with her, Ana Cecilia Villeda Sosa, 23, were freed by the rebels along with at least 23 small-town mayors and municipal officials.

Duarte appeared at a warehouse dedication only three hours after his daughter was returned and went to the National Assembly on Friday.

Just before he was to leave for the Assembly, there was gunfire involving guards outside his offices. Two people were killed and at least 10 were wounded, a press spokesman said. Duarte was not injured.

The spokesman said an attack was made on the two main entrances of the office building, but witnesses said confusion arose when detectives fired at suspected thieves.

They said the presidential guards, believing they were under attack, fired at a bus from which they thought the shots had come, wounding seven passengers.

It was carrying children from a school for deaf mutes, and other passengers said they had to push the childen to the floor because they did not hear the shots.

According to reports from the scene, one of the presumed thieves was killed and one badly wounded, two detectives were wounded and a woman was killed in her house by a stray shot.

The government said the evacuation of the 96 wounded guerrillas was a "humanitarian" gesture and the freedom of the mayors showed that Duarte did not free leftists just to get his daughter back.

American pilot escapes from rebels

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A kidnapped American missionary pilot made a daring escape from his rebel captors, flying out of the jungle on a foggy, moonless night in a plane carrying an unknown amount of fuel, a spokesman for the missionary group said.

The pilot, Paul Dye, of Saginaw, Mich., had been captured with his co-pilot and two other American missionaries when they flew from a village in remote southeastern Colombia to Morichal Viejo on Oct. 5. Leftist guerrillas seized the single-engine Cessna 185 and the four people aboard, and the plane flew off.

Mel Wyma, spokesman for the New Tribes Mission of Sanford, Fla., said he believes the airplane was the rebels' main target.

Wyma said that on the night of Oct. 10, Dye slipped out of the hut where he was being held, moved the hijacked Cessna to a narrow jungle clearing, and flew to safety. Dye had kept a spare ignition key in his shoe, Wyma said.

"It was pitch black," Wyma said Friday in a telephone interview. "There was no moon. It all makes your hair stand on end to think about him taking off in fog in the dark and not even knowing how much fuel he had left.

"Paul went until his fuel ran out, and he managed to just clear some tree tops and set down in a field," Wyma continued. "The next morning he radioed some friends who flew in some more gas, and he was able to take off and get back."

Wyma identified the Americans still being held as co-pilot Stephen Estelle, of Douglas, Ariz., and Timothy Paul Cain, 35, and his wife Bonnie, 33, of Alexandria, Va.

Wyma said the guerrillas had demanded a $130,000 ransom. He did not explain why Dye's escape had not been announced earlier.

In Washington, State Department deputy spokesman Charles Redman said the U.S. Embassy in Bogota has been in contact with the Colombian government in an attempt to secure the release of the three remaining captives.

Wyma, who did not disclose how the mission and the kidnappers made contact, said the guerrillas claimed they were members of the Ricardo Franco Brigade.

"They said they wanted to negotiate the ransom and release right away for Bonnie Cain because of her delicate health," Wyma said. "She has had hypoglycemia for some time."

Hypoglycemia, the abnormal decrease of sugar levels in the blood, can have symptoms ranging from weakness and fatigue to mental disturbances, anxiety and coma.

Wyma said, "We told them that we just do not pay any ransom and naturally if we did, every missionary in the world (would be) a possible hostage."

Mayor says he won't run again

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Beaumont Mayor Bill Neild says he will not run for a third term in April, even if voters decide in a Nov. 5 recall election that he may finish his current term.

"I've always seen this as a four-year job," Neild said Friday, adding that he decided a year ago not to seek re-election.

Neild was first elected mayor in 1982 and won again by a large margin in 1984.

A group called Citizens for Responsible Government circulated petitions seeking the recall of Neild and City Councilman Wayne Turner, claiming the two have not been responsive to voters.

A local union also is calling for Neild's recall because he refused to intervene in a recent nursing home employee strike.

"I think it's time to yield to the young leaders coming up in our community," Neild said.

He said he considered resigning after the city lost $20 million with a Florida-based ESM Government Securities, which failed earlier this year.

Mistakes cost home team...

Pecos controls Tigers, 18-0

By BILL McCLELLAN
SDN Sports Editor

Pecos' Eagles used good field position to deny Snyder a fifth victory here Friday night at Tiger Stadium.

In what amounted to a defensive battle, the Eagles capitalized on four second-half turnovers which, depending on the situation, either kept the Tigers bottled up or set up a Pecos score. The result was an 18-0 win over the home team.

Now 4-3 on the season and 2-2 in District 2-5A play, Snyder will have to wait for next Friday to try to reach the .500 mark again. The Tigers go to San Angelo to play a tough Lake View squad.

Pecos, 5-2 and also 2-2, will be at Fort Stockton.

"Our inability to move the football kept our defense on the field and gave their offense too many opportunities," said a dejected Coach Dennis Tomlin after the game. "It was one of those nights where everything we did went wrong. We couldn't take advantage of what few breaks we did have. We had the fan support but we couldn't get anything big enough to get the momentum on our side."

Pecos took a 3-0 lead into intermission on Joe Mendoza's first-quarter, 31-yard field goal. Despite trailing, the situation looked promising for the Tigers, who had moved the football near the end of the half.

Snyder started the third quarter well, by forcing Pecos to punt away its first possession. The Tigers took over at their own 18-yard line.

It appeared as if the Tigers might get something going when quarterback Mike McWilliams tossed a shovel pass to Michael Long, who got a first down at the 29. Running back Justin Webb then picked up gains of 9 and 2 to the 38. The drive abruptly ended, however, when Jesse Abila picked off a McWilliams third-down pass at the Snyder 39.

Pecos immediately took advantage. Jamie Matta rushed for 9 and 3 yards to the 27. The Eagles bogged down on the next play but Snyder was flagged for a 5-yard penalty to help the visitors along.

A bootleg by Gary Beadle completely fooled the Tigers on the next try and the quarterback ran to the 1-yard line before being pushed out of bounds. Jamie Estrella took the payload in from there, scoring with 6:10 left in the quarter. Mendoza kicked the PAT and the Eagles led by a 10-0 count.

Snyder started its next two possessions at its own 7 and 6-yard line. Both ended in tragedy for the Tigers.

On the first try, the hosts' second possession of the half, Snyder lost McWilliams to injury.

The mishap occurred on a punting situation. The snap went high and the Snyder quarterback fought to gain control of the ball. He took extra steps - making him free game for Pecos rushers - and was hit in the right arm as he got the punt off.

The signal-caller was injured just above the elbow. Coaches did not know how extensive the injury was after the game, but McWilliams was expected to have x-rays taken.

Snyder's next possession ended in an interception when Fillimon Talamantez picked off backup quarterback Brad Gartman's toss at the Tiger 44.

Snyder got the ball back when Patrick Malone recovered an Estrella fumble at the 43-yard line. The Eagles took it away again, however, as Snyder coughed it up on first down from there.

Poised at the 42 now, Pecos took the ball the distance - but not without help.

It came in the form of a 15-yard face mask penalty after Snyder had stopped the Eagles on a fourth-and-6 situation from the Snyder 26. The result was new life for Pecos at the 16-yard line and the Eagles took advantage.

Beadle got the necessary yardage on the first down play - a pass intended for tight end Javier Solis. Solis couldn't make the catch, but he did tip the ball in the air. Teammate Contreras was in the right place to make the grab and he did, scoring with 7:18 to go in the game.

The point-after try failed but Pecos got the two points with 14 seconds left to play when Pete Rayos sacked Gartman in the Snyder end zone for a safety.

Officials called the game with 12 ticks left when tempers flared at several spots on the field.

"Pecos did a good job, you can't take anything away from them," said Tomlin. "But a lot of their advantages came from our mistakes."

Snyder fumbles once, threw three interceptions and had 54 yards in penalties.

The hosts had their best best success moving the football late in the first half. Pecos had driven to the Snyder 21, but quarterback sacks by Trey Tippens and Chris Garrett ended the threat. The Eagles gave the ball up on downs at the 32-yard line.

Snyder took over from there and marched all the way to the Pecos 14. A third-and-3 play resulted in a three-yard loss, however, when Larry Avila hit Webb behind the line.

Snyder managed 91 yards rushing and 33 passing. Webb led the Tigers with 47 yards on 18 carries.

Pecos, which had 14 first downs, rushed for 170 yards and passed for another 109. Matta had 53 yards on 13 carries; Estrella 44 yards on 13 carries.

"One of the key things for us now, for us to achieve the playoffs, is to win our next three games," Tomlin said. "We still have a good football team. We've got to get our heads up and come out and play next week the way we're capable of playing."

Bulldogs shell Grady, 84-38; take over lead in South Zone

GRADY – Jay Clark passed for six touchdowns and Steve Denson ran for five more here Friday as the Ira Bulldogs demolished Grady, 84-38, in a District 4-1A South Zone ballgame.

"This was our best offensive showing by far of the year," understated Coach Mitch Lee, whose Bulldogs moved into the forefront of the South Zone with a 3-0 record. "We couldn't do anything wrong on offense. Our backs ran well, we blocked well and we threw the ball well."

Ira passed for 283 yards and ran for another 388 in the ballgame.

"Jay Clark probably played the best six-man game I've seen a quarterback play in years," said Lee. "He completed his first six passes and his last six and he only threw three in between those."

Clark got the Bulldogs going with a 21-yard pass to Stacy Forbes. He also hit Brent Bearden on TD tosses of 21 and 35 yards as the visitors took a 20-6 advantage in the first quarter.

"One of the keys was Stacy Forbes' blocked punt with 14 seconds left in the first quarter. The next play we put it in the end zone. That sort of established us, offensively," said the coach.

Clark found Donnie Davis on a 17-yard scoring strike in the second quarter, then Ira went to the ground game to build a 46-12 halftime advantage.

Mike Martini tallied on a 39-yard run for the 'Dogs. Denson followed with scoring jaunts of 16 and 57 yards.

Denson also got Ira's first TD of the second half on a 1-yard run. He hooked up with Clark on a 39-yard pass to end the third quarter.

The visitors tallied three times in the final period as well, scoring on runs of 13 and 1 yards from Denson and on a 34-yard pass from Clark to Davis.

Reyez Juarez booted six 2-point conversions.

Grady managed only 45 yards rushing but got 301 passing. Luis Gonzales did the arm-work. He hit Terry Dethrage on TD passes of 33 and 54 yards. Gonzales also teamed with Arnold Velasco on touchdown strikes of 62 and 3 yards and Joe Valle on a 47 yard toss.

"We felt like our secondary really played good football despite giving up 301 yards," said Lee. "We only blew coverage on one pass all night. They just made some great catches. Two of their touchdowns were on tipped passes.

"Mark Camire and Brent Bearden put pressure on their quarterback and that helped," the coach added.

Now 4-4 on the season and undefeated in loop play, Ira will try to wrap up the South Zone title when the 'Dogs host McCaulley next Friday.

McCaulley hangs 50-0 loss on Hermleigh JV

HERMLEIGH – McCaulley blitzed Hermleigh in a six-man junior varsity game here Friday night, 50-0.

"We really got in there and stuck them on a few plays but we they just had too much speed," said Hermleigh Coach Roy Grant, whose Cardinals are 1-1-1 in junior varsity action this season. "We were looking at their backside most of the time. They ran the spread offense and it kind of confused us. McCaulley, every kid they brought in was as good as the one they took out, just about."

McCaulley limited the Cards to just one first down, minus 19 yards rushing and 41 yards passing.

McCaulley had 17 first downs, 177 yards rushing and 160 passing. The Eagles never punted but forced Hermleigh to boot the ball nine times for a 29-yard average.

Hermleigh lost three fumbles and McCaulley two. The Cards were penalized four times for 24 yards. McCaulley was flagged three times for 35.

The game ended via the 45-point rule with 2:17 in the third quarter.

Hermleigh will play Borden County in Gail for its next outing, 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Highland muzzles Borden's Coyotes

HIGHLAND – Highland's Hornets scored four unanswered touchdowns in the second half here Friday to muzzle the Coyotes of Borden County, 56-34, in a District 4-1A South Zone ballgame.

Gary Light scored on runs of 4, 7, 45 and 3 yards and kicked four 2-point conversions to key the victory for the Hornets. Teammate Todd Thomas also scored on runs of 1, 9, 1 and 36 yards.

Borden County trailed 28-20 at intermission but tied the game early in the third quarter when Chris Cooley hit Brice Key on a 30-yard pass play. Randall Hollis' kick-after made the score 28-28.

Highland then reeled off four straight touchdowns and Borden didn't score again until Doyce Taylor found Cooley open on a 23-yard pass in the fourth period.

Borden County's first-quarter score was a 14-yard toss from Cooley to Key. Cooley ran for touchdown scampers of 61 and 16 yards in the second quarter.

Hollis had two conversion kicks for the Coyotes.

"We had a blocked punt and a pass interception which both cost us," said BC's Duke Frisbie. "They fumbled on the 1-yard line early in the game but we couldn't come up with the football. It just didn't seem like the breaks were going our way.

"We thought we got a good effort out of our kids. We just couldn't contain Highland," he added.

Borden falls to 1-7 on the season and 0-3 in South Zone play. Highland is 3-4 and 1-1.

Western enters rodeo finals in good shape

LUBBOCK – Western Texas College found itself in good shape heading to Saturday's short-go of the Texas Tech University Rodeo here.

A report which said the rodeo was to continue through Sunday was in error. The three-day event was scheduled to conclude Saturday.

Two-time all-around winner Bliss Mayhan reached the finals in three events. The Kim, Colo., cowboy was second in the saddle bronc with a score of 69, third in the bull riding with a 77 and fifth in the bareback with a 69.

First through fourth place finishers in the long-go, short-go (finals) and average receive points.

Teammate Tony Hecksher was tied for second in the bareback event with a score of 72. Also second was Keith Hudson, who clocked a 9.6 in the calf roping.

The only other WTC men's team competitor in the finals was Adam Brewster, whose 71 was tied for sixth in the bull riding along with Tobin Tate.

Tate, not on the designated six-man team, was also third in the calf roping with a 9.9.

"We're sitting in good position to have a good point rodeo. We've got as many total people coming back in the short round as we have all year," said Coach Bob Doty. "Unfortunately in the girls events, the two girls that are doing the best aren't on the team."

The only women's competitor on the WTC team in the finals was Niki Moist, whose 10.3 in the goat tying was in eighth place.

A complete list of WTC competitors in the finals, including WTC students but not members of the designated six-man or three-woman teams, is listed at left.

Series continues Saturday night

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Even after the World Series hopes of the Kansas City Royals appeared to have turned to ashes, Charlie Leibrandt believed they'd be back here tonight.

"I'm not surprised one bit," said Leibrandt, a left-hander who starts for the Royals against St. Louis and Danny Cox in Game 6 of this best-of-seven Series, trying to keep it going and hand the ball to Bret Saberhagen Sunday night.

Leibrandt had the Cardinals shut out through 8 2-3 innings last Sunday night before they struck for four runs, three on Terry Pendleton's double, beat the Royals 4-2 and headed home with two victories and what seemed like a lock on the Series.

Pendleton said the Cards were disappointed that they couldn't end the Series Thursday night, "but it's something you have to set aside. We really wanted to win it at home. We're not too happy about having to come back here."

But the Cards are not apprehensive, he added.

"Our mood doesn't change whether we're up or down," he said. "It's just a matter of coming back here and playing good baseball."

Cox, a right-hander, originally was expected to pitch Thursday night, but Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog, mindful of a sore elbow that has bothered Cox off and on since midseason, chose to give him an extra day of rest.

"His arm is fine; it's 100 percent or he wouldn't be pitching tomorrow," Kip Ingle, the Cardinals' assistant public relations director, said Friday.

In Cox's place Thursday night, Herzog started Bob Forsch, the loser in the Royals' 6-1 victory that sent the Series back to Kansas City.

If the Royals win again Saturday, Saberhagen will go against the Cardinals' John Tudor in a matchup of aces in Game 7. Then, for the first time in this Series, the pressure could be at least in part on the Royals, just as they sensed it in Game 7 of the American League playoffs against Toronto.

"I think the pressure would be evenly spaced," Leibrandt said. "We felt no pressure until the seventh game against the Blue Jays. Then you could see everyone get kind of excited. I don't know if we gave ourselves much of a chance until we got to that game."

Business Sense

WITH CHEAP COTTONSEED PRICES THIS YEAR, THE FARMER'S BEST BET MAY BE TO DELINT A GOOD AMOUNT OF PLANTING SEED FOR NEXT YEAR.

CUSTOM AG IS READY TO HELP THE FARMER ACCOMPLISH THIS OR PROVIDE ANY CERTIFIED PLANTING SEED VARIETY REQUESTED.

SEED TESTING (BOTH GERMINATION AND FREE FATTY ACID) IS PROVIDED WITHOUT CHARGE.

SEED TRAILERS ARE AVAILABLE UPON REQUEST.

DUE TO THE INCREASED DEMAND OF FUNGICIDE AND INSECTICIDE TREATMENTS ON PLANTING SEED TO CONTROL SEEDLING DISEASE, APHID, FLEAHOPPER, GRASSHOPPER AND OTHER INSECT DAMAGE, WE HAVE REDUCED THESE PRICES.

CUSTOM AG APPRECIATES YOUR BUSINESS AND WANTS TO SERVE YOU IN ANY POSSIBLE WAY.

Indictments cause arrest

Scurry County sheriff's deputies traveled to Arkansas Friday to take into custody a 24-year-old suspect indicted by the October grand jury.

Bryan Whitney Palmer, who listed his last address as the Tropicano Motel in Snyder, was arrested Thursday in the town of Ozark, Arkansas on warrants for felony theft and forgery.

Allegations against him include one count of forgery for passing an unauthorized check on his parent's bank account and one count of felony theft for the theft of five firearms owned by his father.

Both of those offenses allegedly occurred in August of 1985.

The defendant is on parole from the Texas Department of Corrections and is now being held without bond on a TDC warrant for revocation of parole in addition to the warrants issued here.

According to deputies, a routine computer records check on a vehicle driven by Palmer led to the Arkansas arrest.

contact with the board regarding the contract.

He noted Michigan General remains the "guarantor" for the agreement since the original King's Highway contract was negotiated and signed by them.

The original contract was signed in May of 1983 for a five-year period. It still has some three years to run.

Items to be considered in the contractural negotiations include the back payment of rent owed, monies to cover some minor damage noted to the building and the remaining three years left on the contract, Ewing said.

When King's Highway relocated in Snyder from California, it was speculated as many as 400 workers might be employed at the plant. The operation never progressed past a maximum of 40 employees with some 30 King's Highway coaches completed locally, however.

cable officials are awaiting arrival of the proposed contacts.

It was reported that the proposal calls for a five-year contract. SCAT officials said they were eager to look at the proposal and talk with area cable opeators to see if the proposal is feasible.

West Texas Microwave had earlier notified area cable companies that WFAA would be removed from the system on Nov. 15 and that the decision was final.

After the announcement, Mrs. W. B. Shaw spearheaded a petition drive that collected 6,115 signatures that have been mailed to West Texas Microwave.

Proposition 8 analysis given

to make another 25,000 loans and thus stimulate the housing industry and generate property tax revenue for local governments. Without these loans many veterans would not be able to afford a home.

—Allowing the legislature to define what makes a veteran eligible for these programs is preferable to freezing the definition in the constitution. It will permit the legislature to respond more promptly with a new definition when necessary to comply with changes in federal requirements.

—By providing an attractive source of home mortgage money for veterans, the housing assistance program reduces the competition among potential homeowners for other sources of home funding.

Arguments Against

—A disproportionate amount of the state's credit is now being used for assistance to veterans. The state's credit should be used to meet public needs rather than to assist in the purchase of homes and land by individual citizens.

—Mortgage loan assistance for veterans is already available through the federal Veterans Administration. In addition, veterans receive many other state and federal benefits, such as college tuition, medical care and hiring preferences for civil service jobs.

—As a result of the reduction in size of federal military forces, the number of Texans performing military service will probably decline in the next several years. The state cannot at this time afford such an expensive program for a declining and hence a smaller segment of the population.

In 1630, anti-gambling legislation was enacted in Boston, ordering that "all persons whatsoever that have cards, dice or tables in their houses ... make away with them ... under pain of punishment."

Monsanto okays restructuring plan

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Monsanto Co. has announced a corporate restructuring that will initially cost it upwards of a half billion dollars and result in the layoffs of thousands of its employees.

The diversified chemical company said Friday that it planned to eliminate several product lines and streamline its headquarters operations here. An estimated 1,300 to 1,500 workers are to be cut from the 8,800-member work force in the St. Louis area alone.

Monsanto said it also intended to sell a manufacturing plant in Texas City, Texas, that employs 1,400 people. The plant will remain in operation until a sale is consummated, the company said.

filed against her husband in both Scurry and Lubbock Counties.

Jurisdiction in the case ultimately went to Lubbock following an agreement reached last June by Armstrong and Lubbock DA Jim Bob Darnell.

Regarding the change of venue, Armstrong speculted also that if it is granted, it is very unlikely that Snyder's 132nd District Court would be considered for the trial.

During the two-day change of venue hearing in Lubbock, more than 20 witnesses were called by MacLeod's court-appointed attorney Quinn Brackett.

He was quoted as saying, "We've brought in persons from all walks of life, ethnic backgrounds and sections of the county. They all vividly recollect the facts. This case is indelible in the public's mind."

MacLeod's defense is being provided by the county since he has testified he is unable to afford counsel.

Theft, damage noted to police

Police are investigating a misdemeaor theft and a criminal mischief incident reported Friday.

Roland Bruns of 3007 23rd St. filed the criminal mischief report at 5:09 p.m.

He told police that someone had damaged his daughter's car on two different occasions while the vehicle was parked at the residence.

Joel Loper of 213 35th St. filed the theft report at 7:40 p.m.

He told officers that a small hand winch had been stolen from his residence sometime during the day.

No value was estimated for the missing tool.

In other action, police jailed two men for public intoxication and disorderly conduct following a disturbance call to a residence in the 2400 Block of 26th St. around 4:30 p.m.

A third subject was jailed Friday night for driving with a suspended license.

Wreck occurs on parking lot

A single minor traffic accident was reported in Snyder Friday.

Involved in the 7:58 p.m. mishap on the Furr's Supermarket parking lot were a 1982 Ford driven by Jose Zalaya of 1917 Coleman Ave. and a 1982 Chevrolet driven by Edward Titus of Rt. 1, Snyder.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

Now in his 39th work year, Ed Gill has been employed by Scurry County longer than any other employee in any county department.

"I worked a few months in 1943," Ed explained. "Then I started steady in the fall in 1944." Except for a two-year stint with Dewey Everett, his years with Pct. 3 run concurrently.

Born in Bell County in 1926, Ed moved to West Texas with his family. After several years pulling cotton, he applied with the county because he "wanted out of the cotton patch."

"He's our main maintainer operator. He does all the finishing work (on precinct roads). He's one of the best," remarked co-worker B.J. "Goat" Hataway, a 22-year veteran. "He can skin a rattlesnake with the blade; that's how good he is."

Ed spends 95 percent of his time on the huge Caterpillar maintainer — a familiar site in the precinct that covers the area around Ira, east to Round Top Road, out West 37th Street to the Union-Ira Road and west to Lake J.B. Thomas.

If not perched in the cab, he can be found weeding ditches or "pulling shoulders" — cleaning weeds away from shoulder pavement.

A quiet, reserved man, Ed shys from publicity. Although he has worked under every Pct. 3 commissioner since 1943, he remarked only that "they've all been fine men." He added that commissioners have a "big job issuing orders (to precinct workers) and checking county roads." But he added, "I don't think I want their job."

What does he think of his current boss, C.D. Gray Jr.? Ed noted, "C.D. seems like a dandy fella."

He recalled that county equipment was scarce in 1943. "We had an old flat bed dump truck to haul materials." Laughing, he added, "We didn't have any loaders either, except those with handles (shovels)."

Precinct employees used three barrels on the back of a truck to water roads. Ed remembers there were "mighty few paved roads in the county then. Might not ought to call them roads, they were more like trails."

Ed married the former Dorothy Green in Colorado City on Aug. 20, 1949. The couple has four children.

He anticipates retirement in about three years. When asked what he plans to do with his time, he simply smiled and said, "It's too far down the road to even think about."

APPLE DUMPLINGS

Pastry for a 9-inch, 2-crust pie
6 small Golden Delicious apples (generous 1½ pounds)
Apricot preserves

Roll out pastry to an 18-by 12-inch rectangle; cut into six 6-inch squares with a pastry wheel. Core apples from stem ends, but not all the way through; remove blossom ends. Place an apple in the center of each pastry square. Fill core cavities with preserves. Moisten edges of squares with water. Bring each side of squares up over each apple; overlap edges and seal well but not to the top; turn back corners so core cavities show. Prick pastry well. Bake dumplings well apart in a buttered shallow pan in a preheated 375-degree oven until apples are tender — 35 to 40 minutes. Spoon more preserves into cavities and over exposed tops of apples and serve with vanilla ice cream. Makes 6 servings.

In single ring ceremony...

McCauley, Snowden united

Shellie Diann McCauley of Snyder became the bride of Charles Allen Snowden of Mexia at 7 p.m. on Oct. 4 in the Union Community Center. Chris McCauley of Guthrie, cousin of the bride, officiated the single ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCauley of Snyder. The groom is the son of James Snowden of Snyder and Sandra Robinson of Mexia.

The couple exchanged vows before a seventeen-branch, heart-shaped candelabrum entwined with pink silk carnations and greenery. Lana Lindsey of Ira, the bride's cousin, and Sharon Lee of Union lit candles.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional white wedding gown. The fitted bodice of knit chiffon featured Venice and Bourdon lace applied vertically and a high neckline with a Bourdon lace ruffled collar. Sheer bishop sleeves were caught in deep Bourdon lace cuffs. A set-in belt outlined in Venice lace accented the waistline. Accented in Venice and Bourdon lace applied vertically and finished at the hem in Bourdon lace, the softly gathered, A-line skirt swept into a chapel train.

A three-quarter length veil edged with Venice lace and a blusher were attached to a Venice lace headpiece highlighted with satin ribbon streamers.

The bride carried a nosegay bouquet of white silk rosebuds and long white satin streamers.

In keeping with tradition, she borrowed a petticoat from her grandmother to serve as something old and borrowed. Her gown served as something new and she wore a blue garter. Pennies minted in the couple's birth years were placed in her shoe.

Tammy Owen of Snyder was matron of honor with Cris Jones of Hermleigh, cousin of the bride, as bridesmaid. The women wore floor-length pink gowns and carried two pink silk carnations tied with pink streamers.

Flower girl Sabrina McCauley of Snyder, sister of the bride, wore a long, pink taffeta dress.

Michael Snowden of Snyder served his brother as best man. Allen Jone of Hermleigh, the bride's cousin, was groomsman with Shannon Jones of Hermleigh, also the bride's cousin, as ring bearer.

For the wedding, the groom chose a navy blue blazer and slacks, a white shirt, navy tie and a white silk rosebud boutonniere. His attendents wore navy blue slacks, white shirts, navy ties and small, pink silk boutonnieres.

The ring bearer carried a double heart-shaped pillow made of white bridal satin trimmed with lace. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jones of Hermleigh, aunt and uncle of the bride, designed and made the pillow.

The bride's mother chose a street-length beige dress and matching jacket while the groom's stepmother wore a street-length floral print dress. Both women wore small, pink silk carnation corsages.

A pink cloth overlayed with a lace cloth belonging to the bride's grandmother covered the bride's table. Lisa Lindsey and Josie Ramirez served the six-tiered, pink and white wedding cake. The bridal bouquet and a glass punch bowl setting completed the table.

A pink candle highlighted the groom's table which was covered by a pink cloth and lace overlay belonging to the bride's aunt. The chocolate groom's cake, made by the bride's grandmother, featured the couple's names in pink. Lometta McCauley of Dickens, the bride's great aunt, served coffee. Charlott McCauley of Guthrie, cousin of the bride, served the cake.

The couple will reside in Union.

Little boy lost

By James Jacoby

"Don't send a boy to do a man's job" is a well-known bridge expression. It usually refers to getting overruffed, but it also applies to using certain bridge conventions — particularly weak pre-emptive overcalls with two-suited hands. Watch how interpreting a distributional bid helped John Potter bring home a tricky grand slam.

The two-club cue-bid by East showed 10 cards in the major suits and a weak hand. When the bidding got up to seven diamonds, West thought it would make and hence took the non-vulnerable save at seven hearts. When this was passed around to Potter (South), he decided that partner was willing for him to go to seven no-trump, and that's what he bid.

Potter took an unusual play, based upon the information given by the two-club weak distributional cue-bid. He reasoned that East held only three minor suit cards. If East had only one club, diamonds would be 2-2. But if East held two clubs, then West would almost surely hold three diamonds to the queen. If East did hold two clubs, it was likely that West held the jack.

What was his play? He won the heart ace, played the ace of diamonds, then a club to the queen and a club back to dummy's 10. When East showed out, the contract was home when West's doubleton diamond queen fell.

If East, non-vulnerable, had simply risked a light one-heart overcall, East-West might still have saved at seven hearts. But now I defy a South declarer to take the club finesse in seven no-trump.

Lang provides answers to household repair questions

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have used white glue and found it excellent for all purposes. However, I recently used some of it to fix one of my children's toys. The toy was dropped into a pail of water. When it was taken out of the water, the parts I had glued came apart. This puzzles me, because the glue container says it is water resistant. How do you explain this?

A. — Regular white glue is usually polyvinyl acetate. Regardless of what it says on the container, polyvinyl acetate is soluble in water and therefore should not be used if it is to be exposed to water. I have just checked two containers of white glue and found neither of them says anything about being water resistant. It is an excellent glue for most household repairs, but not when the bonded object is left in water.

Q. — My dining room was wallpapered years ago. In some places the paper is now slightly detached from the wall. None of it is torn and I would hate to do over the entire wall. A friend says I can reglue the detached pieces to the wall with a mixture of flour and water. Is this true?

A. — Probably. That was often used years ago for wallpapering. But you can get exactly what you need by buying and using wallpaper paste.

Halloween can be a fun time for the entire family, but the real trick is to get everyone involved. Visiting in homes, hospitals and community centers can be arranged for a worthwhile family Halloween. This can be a real joy to shut-ins and senior citizens if it is properly planned in advance.

For a community or neighborhood activity, try a progressive party. The children can have a special trick-or-treat at each home along the way. Each stop should be different. The final stop could be "special treats" with several neighbors working together to provide the refreshments.

A ghost-story time can take place almost anywhere — in a large room, a grove of trees or in a yard. People attending this activity should come prepared to tell stories, and a prize should be given for the best Halloween tale.

A costume party is another favorite way to celebrate Halloween. Each person comes to the event in a special costume and is allowed time to parade in front of the group. Prizes can be awarded in different categories such as most original costume, scariest costume or funniest costume.

When planning your Halloween celebration, remember to make sure it is appropriate for the age group in attendance. Just because something is fun for adults doesn't mean it will be for children.

If parents and other adults take the responsibility for planning and supervising Halloween activities, the occasion should turn out to be safe and happy for the entire family.

Planned grazing systems offer ranchers multi-purpose benefits over year-long continuous grazing. These systems help maintain or speed up improvements in plant cover while properly using the forage on all pasture units. They improve efficiency of grazing by uniformly using all parts of each pasture unit and insuring a supply of forage throughout the grazing season.

The ability to manufacture food and sustain a grass plant is directly related to the amount of leaf surface the plant has to intercept sunlight. With rains, healthy plants are able to increase leaf surface rather quickly. This is why deferrments or rest periods are so important during good growing periods.

Deferrments can also be used to develop forage reserves to initiate grazing systems to allow several pastures periodic deferrment throughout the year. The types of grazing systems that are being successfully used in West Texas are as varied as our weather. They range from two pasture switchbacks, where one pasture is being deferred while another is grazed and then vice-versa, to the more intensified wagon-wheel type grazing system which allows livestock to be rotated every few days. Ranchers who came out of their grazing system during the dry summer should be thinking about going back into the system as soon as their forage is adequate. If you have not been in a grazing system, it is likely that you could start on two or more pastures using existing fences and water sources.

The type of system that fits your livestock program and your operation is, of course, the one that needs to be used on your ranch. However, one fact applies to all operations, deferrment will make for better forage through the long summer or drought and can reduce that feed bill next winter.

The Soil Conservation Service offers assistance in planning or beginning a grazing system. If you would like more information, call us at 573-1268 or come by our office at 3423 Avenue T.

BEAUTY BRIEFS

Deep breathing

Oxygen is important to healthy skin.

Here's a daily breathing exercise for the skin:

Standing straight, expel all air from lungs through the mouth. Bend from waist, placing palms on front thighs. Then breath in deeply, "pulling" abdomen up toward chest. Hold breath for slow count of three, straighten and expel air again. Repeat up to five times.

Do these in the morning and several times during the day.

When exercising, coordinate breathing to the exercise rhythm. Don't just pant irregularly.

Exercise risks

Exercise is no quick fix.

No exercise is a substitute for reducing your weight, eliminating bad eating habits or smoking. These factors must be corrected separately.

Cardiologists and other medical experts differ over the possible risks of such exercises as jogging, running, or using weight machines.

Capitol Hill mobilizes for trade war actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Boeki-senso! Boeki-senso!"

And with that declaration of a trade war in Japanese by Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., the battle lines were set between a president committed to free trade and a Congress ever aware that the jobs of their constituents were being lost to foreign imports.

First, the furor was over Japanese automobiles. Then, attention turned to steel and textiles. Now, whatever the product — be it roses, grapefruit, copper, pork, wool, steel, shoes, even water beds — there's someone in Congress who wants to protect it from foreign imports.

President Reagan calls it "a mindless stampede toward protectionism."

"I will continue to resist protectionist measures that would only raise prices, lock out trade and destroy the jobs and prosperity trade brings to all," he declared last month.

But at the same time, he added, "I will not stand by and watch American businesses fail because of unfair trading practices abroad. I will not stand by and watch American workers lose their jobs because other nations do not play by the rules."

But that was not enough to halt the cry of protectionism on Capitol Hill, where measures to roll back imports of textiles, clothing, shoes and luggage are moving closer to Reagan's desk in defiance of threats of a presidential veto.

The Democrats see the White House response as a campaign issue, one that can be used as they try to wrestle the Senate from Republican hands in 1986. But support for protectionist legislation crosses party lines.

Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., for example, is a co-sponsor of a bill to impose tough shoe quotas. And he also has proposed a measure that would require Reagan to impose quotas on autos from Japan unless that nation dropped trade barriers.

Why the stampede toward protectionism?

The U.S. manufacturing trade balance — the difference between what Americans pay for imports and receive for exports — ran $123.3 billion into the red in 1984. The trade deficit this year could reach $150 billion.

Some lawmakers are painting a nightmare scenario of $1 trillion in foreign debt by 1990, driving many Americans into poverty.

Meanwhile, the AFL-CIO estimates 3 million layoffs in U.S. industry due to import competition since 1980 and the Commerce Department says 340,000 manufacturing jobs have been lost nationwide this year.

Textile forces say they have lost 300,000 jobs in five years as imports have doubled.

There is no firm agreement on what caused the trade mess, but many economists point to the "bloated" dollar.

The shrinking dollar of the inflation-ridden 1970s has been restored in the 1980s to its status as the almighty buck.

The strength of the dollar is a result of strong economic performance in this country, the reputation of the United States as a "safe haven" for foreign investments and continued high interest rates — the result of federal budget deficits which have grown to more than $200 billion annually.

The high value of the dollar, however, means imports cost relatively less in the United States while American goods cost comparatively more.

Adding to the trade imbalance are wages in East Asia that are sweatshop-low by U.S. standards. A Chinese textile mill hand can make as little as 16 cents an hour. That means low import prices.

The wage factor has also sent some American corporations packing off to the Pacific Basin to cash in on the cheap labor.

Electronics executives blame "dumping" — export prices cut below those in the home market — for U.S. trade woes. The practice is banned by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, but it happens.

Silicon Valley, the high-tech mecca outside San Francisco, was hit by heavy layoffs this year after a wave of Japanese imports.

Then came a "smoking gun" in the trade war — newspapers obtained a memo from Tokyo ordering Japanese semiconductor salesmen to slash prices and keep slashing them, at any cost, until American rivals were beaten.

The semiconductor industry is now seeking relief from the U.S. International Trade Commission.

Another factor often cited in the trade deficit is the quality of American goods.

Halloween the way it used to be.

We wouldn't swear it was more fun, but it was definitely different.

Now, of course, we have grim little reminders called Halloween safety rules pertaining to poisoned candy or hidden straight pins in apples.

And well-meaning family members have taken all of the unknown elements out of the holiday. This by limiting trick or treating to a two-block radius from home or, if adventure is allowed at all, only to the best-lit neighborhoods.

The latter case following the assumption that someone who can afford a $100,000 home is least likely to attempt some small scale genocide on the city's young.

So the world has turned to a safer Halloween — again not necessarily a less-enjoyable Halloween. Just safer.

But October evenings can stir up some deep memories. And briefly last week we were reminded of the hot, cutthroat emotion Halloween used to produce descending into the twilight gloom of an All Hallow's Eve.

Keep in mind also that we are discussing children. And the wise world locks up adults who have never lost the worst traits of childhood.

On a Halloween night 30-some years ago, if we were to use one word to describe the driving pulse that moved us, it would have to be "plunder."

Like pirates, we felt the whole ripe world was suddenly opened up — a feeling that produced a mix of moral terror and undenied excitement.

Again remember we're talking about small town country kids. Mostly too shy to call an adult anything other than Mister.

But on Halloween night, any man's home was fair game. Its door could be beat upon, the people living inside it could be disrupted and demands could be made of them.

Children could wind like an October wind through the neighborhoods of the town. Fearless in their number and free from the bonds normally placed upon them by parents.

And the darker areas of town only added to the tingle.

We remember approaching one woodframe house lit by only a light bulb in an uncovered porch light. The blend of cool autumn air and Halloween freedom had made us bold, so we rapped loudly on the screen door.

In the backlit doorway appeared a man. He was wearing a T-shirt, his belt was unbuckled and he was shoeless. And if we were drunk with the night air, his spirits had been lifted by an alternate source.

Our attitude of bold swagger began melting like hot candle wax.

"Trick or treat," we squeaked.

He paused a moment, then answered, "Kid, all I got is beer. Now git."

Suffice to say we took aim at the brightest street light we could pick out, and headed straight for it.

We'd had enough moral terror and excitement for one Halloween night.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Country women are the only people in the world who eagerly look forward to winter (except for downhill skiers and ice fishermen). This is because winter is the only time they get to see their husbands without having to crawl under a tractor or over a cow to do it.

Winter is the only time country folks eat supper before ten. It's the only time they sit down together and watch TV. It's the only time...well, let me put it this way: country babies all have birthdays sometime in September or October. Count backwards and you'll figure it out.

The best part about winter for country families is being snowed in. It's the only time the women get to spend a whole day with their husbands without listening to them moan and cry about all the things they should be doing.

If a country wife lives very far from her family, the only time her husband will travel with her for a visit is in the dead of winter. There are a lot of country kids who truly believe that Santa does not know where they live, and so must deliver toys to Grandma's house.

Of course, country husbands hate winter because that's when they have to haul hay and chop ice from water troughs and unfreeze frozen water pipes. While they are outside cussing and fussing, however, their wives are putting another log on the fire, making popcorn and hot chocolate, getting out a few extra quilts, putting the kids to bed early...and humming.

Country wives only hate winter when they have to get the tractor to pull their husband's pickups out of the snow, because the husband in question couldn't stand being cooped up all day in the house with the kids and had to get out to "look at the fields."

What's to see? I ask you.

The fact that country women love winter is a very well-kept secret that has only been revealed here, in this column. When confronted with the newspaper, most country wives will deny it.

Wait awhile and ask them again in November, during stripping season. Or better yet, next July.

While the no-pass, no-play rule is now affecting from 25 to 30 percent of high school and junior high students across Texas, Scurry County's two rural school have emerged from the first six-weeks period only slightly dented, it was reported Tuesday.

At Hermleigh High School, with 60 students enrolled in grades 6-12, the number affected by no-pass, no-play is approximately 3 percent.

At Ira, two students are affected by no-pass, no-play, 2.3 percent of those enrolled in grades 6-12.

No action followed a 1 hour and 15 minute meeting Tuesday by city council members called to discuss the pending litigation against the city challenging its at-large voting system.

Due to the nature of the discussions, the meeting was a closed session.

Involved parties say they are expecting "any time now" a state hearing examiner's recommendation regarding a Waco-based freight hauling firm's attempt to begin serving routes which include Scurry County, it was reported Thursday.

Central Freight Line of Waco has made application through the Texas Railroad Commission (RRC) to purchase local operating rights. This is opposed by two freight line companies currently operating in territory which would overlap.

Members of the board of managers for Cogdell Memorial Hosptial discussed the possibility of purchasing "tail-end" liability insurance Thursday, but tabled any action on the matter pending further study.

FRIDAY

If attorneys for Arthur Lee MacLeod are successful in having their client's trial moved from Lubbock, it is "highly unlikely" the court action might be moved back to Snyder, local court officials said Friday.

MacLeod is accused of murdering his wife and former Snyder resident Evelyne Feather MacLeod. Hearings for a change of venue request in the case began Thursday in Lubbock.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

Special credit should be given to Eddie Thane and Don Crowden, members of the Highway Department, for their kindness and dedication to their work.

On the morning of Sept. 21, the fog made vision almost impossible to see. We, two women — both senior citizens, were traveling from Abilene to Lubbock when we had a flat a few miles from Snyder. Neither of us had ever changed a tire, but we did know to put up a white flag. Cars sped by without looking back.

Suddenly we saw two men emerge through the heavy fog. To us, they seemed like angels as they approached. They not only changed the tire, but led us to a garage and stayed until they saw that we could travel, thanks to their efficiency and dedication to their job.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Jack Fine and Mrs. Bill Reidy

Abilene, TX

(P.S. We arrived in Lubbock in time to see the Tech football game, thanks to them.)

Legend realtor won't retire

SANIBEL, Fla. (AP) — At 81, Gladys Steele Curtright has no intention of retiring or even slowing up. She says she'll continue selling real estate "because I like helping people."

Almost a legend on this resort and retirement island off the Gulf Coast near Fort Myers, Mrs. Curtright is easily recognized by her ever-present bouffant-style white wig.

"I can see the funny side of things," is her prescription for maintaining a cheerful disposition and enjoying life. She refrains only from discussing the loss of her husband, who died in January after 61 years of marriage.

"What keeps me interested in real estate is that I can do so much for people," says Mrs. Curtright who, in 1965, was the first woman president of the Beloit, Wis., Board of Realtors. She has been with Bluebill Properties Inc. for several years here and has been in real estate for 30 years.

Most of her clients are affluent. "If they don't like the rates or loan institutions, they offer to pay cash. I've had them write out a check for $425,000," she adds with a chuckle.

Born in Evansville, Wis., in 1904, she married Walter L. Curtright in 1933. The couple moved to Cincinnati, where she became a cosmetologist and operated her own beauty shop.

Five years later, they transferred to Janesville, Wis., and then Beloit around 1940. A few years later, she became a real estate agent and broker.

"Salesmanship hasn't changed for me over the years," she explains. "I never use pressure. I let the customer buy.

Gann's Bar-b-que

Any business can claim to serve the best barbecue around, but experience is what puts Gann's Bar-B-Q ahead of the rest. And along with George's barbecue comes George's service, which is catering to any event that you might have in mind. George has been in the food business for 50 years, with the last 18 years being associated with Greyhound Food Service at Angelo State University and Western Texas College.

Since Gann's Barbeque and Sandwich Shop opened, George's cooking has drawn quite a following. He cooks brisket, pork ribs, chicken and sausage over a mesquite fire for that special flavor. But don't think barbecue is all that he has. He also serves hamburgers, bacon burgers, grilled cheese and ham and cheese sandwiches for folks who prefer something else.

A winter-time favorite at Gann's is the homemade beef stew and chili. Served with delicious cornbread either dish makes a fine meal.

Don't forget to stop by Gann's Bar-B-Q and Sandwich Shop open from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

New equipment causes salvage work boom

READING, Pa. (AP) — With recent breakthroughs in underwater sighting equipment, the business of salvaging sunken ships seems to be at high tide.

And although the name De Braak may not excite the general public's imagination, the treasure being taken from the 18th-century British ship wrecked off the coast of Lewes, Del., in 1798 is the stuff that dreams are made of.

Some of that treasure was on display recently in a Reading auditorium, where J.P. Cullen, a member of the salvage team, gave several lectures on the salvage operation.

Cullen said that although the wreck was in relatively shallow water 80 feet deep and only a few hundred yards from the coast, several problems had frustrated divers for 200 years.

"It's in the mouth of the bay in a river, so the currents are tricky," he said. "The current on the floor isn't so bad — maybe one-half to 1 knot. On the way up, though, if a diver's tired, he can be caught up in a 6-knot current. That's pretty tough.

"A lot of people looked for the De Braak and never found it. We found it right away, using site-scan sonar. It's hard to say why — maybe it was under silt and sand, and a storm uncovered it before we got there."

He said the U.S. Navy and Coast Guard had been watching the dive because "it's kind of experimental."

"This is the first time a dive like this has been done 24 hours a day," he said. "This year, we'll be doing two dives at a time. We'll have more divers and fewer support personnel."

Cullen works for Sub Sal Inc., owned by his stepfather, Harvey Harrington. The financing for the expedition comes from private investors.

"It's costing a couple of million, anyway, depending on how far it goes," he said. "Most investors we run into are looking for some sort of adventure. This is their way of doing it, I guess."

An agreement had to be worked out with the state of Delaware, which gets 25 percent of the take. By making the agreement, the salvagers hope to avoid lawsuits that plague the salvage business.

"You always have problems with state governments, so we went to them, told them what we wanted to do, and worked it out," he said. "When the dive is done, we'll sit down and divvy it up. A lot of people are watching to see how it works out.

"The state always has somebody on site to monitor what we're doing. They look at an artifact and inventory it, then appraise it. We won't sell anything till the project's done, though. That will probably be another two, three years."

The state's interest in the treasure is the reason none of the gold from the ship was in the Boscov's show: Delaware would not allow the gold to cross state lines.

Still, there was no shortage of fascinating artifacts in the auditorium. Cullen pointed out his favorite: a small etched glass ketchup bottle, possibly from the captain's table.

Much weightier was the ship's bronze bell, made in France in 1781.

There also were pieces of china, water jugs and cannonballs. He said divers had found many bones but had left them all on the ocean floor.

George Harrington, brother of Sub Sal's owner, talked about the security involved in the De Braak dive.

"The whole thing is coordinated with the Delaware State Police, the Lewes, Del., police, the Coast Guard Marine Police and a private firm, Confidential Services Inc.," he said.

Harrington said the value of the treasure was difficult to estimate.

"Almost anything 200 years old is valuable, but if it comes from a treasure ship, it becomes two or three times more valuable," he said. "I've heard figures like $400 million to $500 million mentioned."

So, even though it's a dangerous and expensive proposition, the rewards make it certain that salvage dives will continue to be made.

"There's a lot of wrecks like this, sure, especially off the coast of Florida," Harrington said.

Officials search for bearded man

HOWE, Texas (AP) — Authorities were searching for a man who wore a fake beard and told the bank president to "smile" as he robbed the Howe State Bank in North Central Texas.

The man, described as in his 50s, was wearing blue striped overalls and carried a .25-caliber pistol and feld in a car owned by the bank, officials said.

No one was injured in the 9:30 a.m. Friday robbery, officials said.

Retired cowboy is illegal alien

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Retired rodeo cowboy George Kalin is an illegal alien and must return to Canada despite having lived nine years in San Antonio, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Friday.

Kalin and his wife, Gail, testified that they settled in San Antonio with their three children in 1976, after he left the rodeo circuit. However, he also testified that he did not establish official residence there until 1981, a three-judge panel of the court said in an unsigned opinion.

Hand-pulled ferry common river crossing

LOS EBANOS, Texas (AP) — The river bends sharply here and narrows to no more than 40 yards bank to bank. On each bank is a small building, on each building a flag.

There is no town here, just a spot on the Rio Grande named in the long ago for the rare old ebony trees whose tiny leaves and shaggy gray bark stand out on the riverbank among the mesquite brush and prickly pear cactus.

Rustlers once knew it as a place to ford stolen beef unseen. It remains today remote, miles from any place of excitement or commerce. The only natural sounds here are cicadas humming in the heat and the ripple of the jade green river.

It is, for certain, a most unlikely place for an official flagflying, document-checking international port of entry between La Republica de Mexico and the United States of America.

Yet that is what it is. And the fact that it is here, a familiar crossing place as old as the ebony trees, demonstrates yet another frustration facing an overworked Border Patrol and a Congress trying to enact an immigration law to deal with a flood tide of illegal aliens — the simple reality of history.

"I cross here all the time," said a young man waiting in the shade of an ebony tree. His car had Texas plates. "I buy whiskey in Mexico. Cheaper. Much, much cheaper, and they don't bother about tax stamps at this crossing."

What's your name?

He laughed. "Juan."

Your last name?

"Whatever you like. Perez. Juan Perez."

Along the border, some, for their own reasons, prefer anonymity. A recent newspaper report of a stabbing on the border south of here, for example, contained this sentence:

"Police said Martinez, who died from the wound, was using an alias he always used while in the United States." No further amplification, except that his real name was Alvarado and his residence was Monterrey, Mexico. He was 22.

There is no bridge at this official international crossing but there is a ferry.

It is a flat barge that holds three cars bumper to bumper. A cable stretched between two ebony trees on either bank holds it to the river and four sweating men pull it across, back and forth, with a rope.

The ferry is privately owned. To ride it costs one American dollar per car and 25 cents per person. The four rope pullers earn 1,000 pesos a day. In American money that amounts today to about $2.70.

One of the four, Carlos Flores, has been pulling the rope since 1954. He remembers that his wage then was the equivalent in pesos of $1.10 a day. He has seen it go as high as $3.50 a day. The capricious value of the peso drives businessmen on both sides of the border crazy.

Carlos Flores doesn't try to keep up with the fluctuations. He just pulls the rope. In Diaz Ordaz 1,000 pesos will barely provide a day's groceries.

Diaz Ordaz is the nearest village on the Mexican side of the ferry. You reach it by risking your axles for two miles down a rutted dirt road lined with spindly sunflowers powdered with road dust, a village of, oh, 1,700.

On the main street, paved, carts pulled by burros park next to John Deere tractors and dirty pickups outside an obvious place of midday recreation, a cantina named El Torito.

The estimate of Diaz Ordaz's population (it varies with the season) is that of El Torito's bartender, Francisco Javier Melendez Lerma.

He presides over a fan-cooled room with sawdust on the cement floor, low ceiling, linoleum bar, loud music, four stools, no cash register. The pictures over the bar, clipped from Ring Magazine, are of Mexican prizefighters. A picture of Our Lady of Guadalupe is there, too.

A hand-lettered sign out front reads, in translation, "No minors, no women, no drunks, no guns." The first prohibition apparently excludes the bartender, Francisco, the son of the owner, who is not yet 15.

He has a bright, startled expression with ink black eyes and pearl white teeth. He speaks no English but is trying to learn.

If the pattern holds true, someday soon Franscisco will pay two bits to take the Los Ebanos ferry to the other side and, perhaps, stay.

On the other side are somewhere from 3 to 12 million "undocumented aliens."

The range is that wide because they are a clandestine population. One expert's guess at how many there are is as good as another's. The Immigration and Naturalization Service picks an arbitrary figure vaguely in the middle, 6.5 million, as a working number, but admits that nobody really knows.

Argument over the size of the problem and, therefore, the cost of the solution is the main reason Congress has not been able to agree on an immigration bill for four years.

At Los Ebanos, debates in Washington, or Mexico City for that matter, are far removed from the urgencies of daily life.

The most recent of those, according to Albert Simo, who collects ferry tolls on the north bank, occurred when a car plunged down the south bank, smashed into the barge and ended up nose first in the river.

There is no dock, you see. Chains thrown around tree stumps snug the barge up to the dirt bank and two steel planks, just the right distance apart, flop down for the cars to roll aboard — gently. The driver of the car that missed explained that he was on his way to get the brakes fixed.

The uniformed immigration inspector at Los Ebanos is Tina Salinas. She checks to see that those who cross from Mexico have "papers," usually at this crossing a 72-hour pass — to shop, visit relatives, see a dentist, get the brakes fixed.

"It doesn't take long before you get to know the local people," she said. "Most are regulars."

Does anyone ever cross over on a pass and not come back?

"All the time."

Officer Salinas also explained how whiskey gets through untaxed.

Some months ago an American drug enforcement agent was killed in Mexico, resulting in tension along the border. U.S. Customs pulled its inspector out of Los Ebanos, explaining that it was so isolated as to be unsafe, and has not sent him back. Tina Salinas says she, however, does not feel threatened.

On the American side, the counterpart of the village of Diaz Ordaz is not a village at all, just a small community, a neighborhood, of tidy brick homes along paved streets with Mexican names. The contrast in the standard of living is striking; the language, the culture, are the same.

The residents on both sides of the river here have been crossing back and forth routinely for generations, from the time both sides were a part of Mexico, not particularly concerned about choosing a political allegiance, more often just to find a better job, maybe temporarily, maybe not.

The ferry itself is an international enterprise. It was started in 1950 by two friends, both of Mexican parentage, one named Garza, one named Reyna, the one an American citizen, the other a Mexican citizen.

At 4 p.m. every day Immigration Officer Salinas lowers the flag and goes home to McAllen, Tex., a 40-minute drive. The four rope pullers chain the ferry to a stump and go home to Diaz Ordaz. The official port of entry at Los Ebanos is officially closed.

No hay problema.

A rowboat sits in plain view on the riverbank — or, like those cattle rustlers of old, you could wade.

The Rio Grande, at least at this tranquil spot along the 1,933-mile Mexican border, is less an international boundary than a local inconvenience.

Musical hobby makes Peavey millionaire

MERIDIAN, Miss. (AP) — Hartley Peavey wears jeans, counts among his heroes rock singers Bo Didley and Conway Twitty and directs a worldwide business empire from an office cluttered with such offbeat knicknacks as an epoxy-coated cow chip.

"I'm probably unemployable," said Peavey, a 43-yearold self-made millionaire whose plants produce guitars, amplifiers and other musical equipment recognized worldwide for quality.

"I'm a very informal type of person and I'm a little bit different than most people in the business world. You see, I'm not doing this just for the money, I'm doing this because I enjoy it."

Peavey makes light of formality, but he's an ardent champion of free enterprise and quick to take the federal government to task for not making it easier for American companies to get a fair shake in international trade.

Peavey began his business solo in the mid-1960s while a student at Mississippi State University, building amplifiers one at a time for local rock 'n' roll bands.

Today, his company has 1,200 employees, operates seven factories in Meridian, a sister company in Decatur and has wholly owned subsidiaries in four foreign countries.

The company was awarded the prestigious E-Star Award earlier this year, one of only 18 firms from a field of 300,000 nationwide to be honored by the president for excellence in exporting goods overseas.

"That was quite a trick at the time because the dollar was the highest it has ever been," he said.

While Peavey said he recognized his responsibilities as a business executive, he was careful not to take success too seriously.

"I paid my dues and I pay my bills," he said. "While I realize that it's my job to make this thing fly, I don't think I'm anything special. I'm the same person I've always been."

Music has always been Peavey's first love, a fact he credits to being born and raised in a state rich in musical heritage and to a father who owned a music store in this town of 50,000.

He noted that Meridian was the hometown of the "Singing Brakeman," Jimmie Rodgers, remembered as the father of country music. And the state is the birthplace of the late Elvis Presley, celebrated king of rock 'n' roll, and such famous blues singers as B.B. King.

"I grew up in the real happy days of rock and I loved rhythm and blues when it wasn't cool," he said. "I remember going to a Bo Didley concert in Laurel and that really set me on fire.

"Dad played the saxophone and thought rock 'n' roll was a passing fad," he said. "But I had to be a musician, so he gave me an old junker guitar."

Peavey said that during the same period he had decided to enroll in a vocational school, spending his free time from the sixth grade attending courses on subjects ranging from machine shop to radio.

"By the time I graduated from high school, I had taken almost every course the vo-tech school offered," he said.

"And I believe we are all born with a talent, whether it be in athletics, speaking or whatever. As for me, I'm a damn good carpenter."

He always wanted to be a professional musician but lacked the talent, so he used his training and ability to work with his hands to build musical products.

Peavey's distaste for the formal came to a head after graduation from college as he dressed for his first job interview.

"I remember standing in front of a mirror putting on a tie," he said. "I remember thinking, 'this is crazy, you don't want to do this the rest of your life.' The answer was simple — I didn't go for that job, I went for a dream.

"That dream has now become a reality. I think that just proves that it can be done and is still being done right here in America."

Policeman on bike

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Columbus Police Department has its fleet of cruisers, motorcycles and mounted patrol officers.

Then there's Officer Thomas R. Stroud, the only one on the force assigned to cover his beat on a bicycle.

"He's done two-wheel patrol around his district for three years.

"I can go places that if I was walking I couldn't cover and a cruiser couldn't cover," he said. "You can go through alleys and parking lots taking shortcuts. You can do things on a bike that you couldn't do on another vehicle."

Stroud, 49, took up the bike literally by accident. His doctor suggested bike riding as therapy after Stroud tore a ligament in his knee.

His supervisors thought the idea had merit, so Stroud appropriated a bike from the unclaimed property room and has been biking since.

He's on his third bike, an 18-speed touring model. Stroud rides about 20 miles a day, covering a 12-block area.

Seat belts now used for dogs

By JILL CALLISON
Worthington Daily Globe

BREWSTER, Minn. (AP) — Puppy love prompted Nancy Smith to develop a modified auto seat belt for dogs.

Not only do her five dogs benefit from the invention, but she hopes to save the lives of others' pets as well.

"If I can just prevent even one child from losing a pet dog ..." Ms. Smith said. "There's nothing worse than an animal or child in pain with needless suffering."

Ms. Smith, 33, lives on 12 acres of land near Brewster. They boast an old barn and a corn crib converted into a kennel and are known as Crossroads North Kennels and Stables. Those buildings shelter three horses, five dogs, six cats and four kittens, along with the dogs she boards for others.

Wholeheartedly in love with her pets, Ms. Smith refers to them frequently as her family. Tag-Along, the rat terrierpoodle cross she adopted six years ago as a graduate student, lent her name to Ms. Smith's invention. Tag-Along went everywhere with Ms. Smith, hence her name. She was smuggled into the campus library and went on jogging runs as a puppy, peeking over the edge of Ms. Smith's backpack.

As others joined the family, they came along for the ride too. And that created problems.

Pets, with their heads stuck out of car windows to enjoy the breeze, can tumble out of cars when sharp turns are made. Small dogs can wriggle under drivers' feet. Large dogs can leap into the front seat and onto the driver's lap.

All spell potential tragedy, both for the driver and the pet, Ms. Smith points out.

"Tag is a good dog but she has a tendency to sit on my lap," Ms. Smith said. "That made it difficult when I slowed down or turned corners or shifted gears. And one time she saw a squirrel and she was all over the car!"

Ms. Smith first tried to solve the problem with a dog harness and a double lead, a leash with two collars. The lead was strung under a fastened car seat belt.

Success of the first improvisation was moderate. It was hard to remove the dog in a hurry because the lock was awkward and in the winter Ms. Smith couldn't operate it without first taking off her gloves.

Then one day inspiration struck. Ms. Smith went to a fabric store and got strips of cotton webbing and Velcro. She used rivets to attached the strips to each other and after a little experimentation, TagAlong had her own seat belt.

One end of Tag-Along's seat belt folds over the car's seat belt strap to keep the dog in place. The one-piece harness goes across the dog's chest, well below her neck, and down her back and sides.

Ms. Smith is now working with nylon webbing, and stitching has replaced the rivets to make the harness sturdier and keep the cost down.

Ms. Smith said she never thought about marketing the invention until a veterinarian suggested that the seat belt be patented.

Both the patent and trademark rights are pending, Ms. Smith said.

There are other car restraints for dogs on the market, she said. But she sees flaws in them. One involves a sack that fits over the dog's body and ties under its neck.

Kennels are available for those who travel frequently with their dogs, Ms. Smith added. But they are expensive and take up a lot of room.

Horse latest to get mail from fans

By Nancy Shullins
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The fan mail pours in from young girls everywhere, from Emilys and Heathers and Laurens and Tiffanies.

Some send hugs and kisses, to be delivered by proxy, along with promises of undying love. Others send drawings. One sent $5, to be spent on "carrots and things."

This latest adolescent heartthrob doesn't live in Hollywood, and he isn't a rock star.

He lives in Jackson, Ohio, and he is a horse.

His name is Sam I Am, he's a 3-year-old registered paint horse, and at last count, he was up to 522 owners.

Yes, just like Seattle Slew, Northern Dancer, and many another high-priced thoroughbred, Sam I Am, valued at about $2,000, is the property of a syndicate.

He's owned by a growing gaggle of horse-crazy girls who have paid $23.95 per share for a scale model of Sam, a shareholder's certificate, and the right to visit, brush, photograph, and sit upon Sam.

The syndication of Sam was the brainstorm of Beverley Henderson, whose husband Jerry, a breeder of standardbreds, acquired Sam in exchange for a saddle. The little paint horse didn't fit into the farm's breeding program, but Beverley couldn't bring herself to part with him.

"This is a working farm, not a gentleman's farm, and everything we have must be of use," she explains. Remembering her own horseless childhood, she decided to fulfill the dream of "ownership" for other children. With the help of a lawyer, she formed Sam and Co. Inc. and issued shares now being sold through a handful of retail stores and magazine ads.

Since the shares became available last October, more than 500 have been sold, all of which shows that in this era of video games and space toys, visions of Black Beauty live on in the hearts and minds of American kids.

The dream of horse ownership is shared by adults as well, and statistics kept by the American Horse Council in Washington, D.C., indicate that, rising land prices and dwindling frontier aside, the number of horses and horse owners is on the rise.

America's horse population has more than doubled in the past 25 years, according to the council, which places the current population at 8.5 million. This year, 3.5 million owners will spend over $9 billion on their horses' upkeep alone.

Another 27 million will ride someone else's horse at least once this year. Many more will attend one of the roughly 7,400 nationally sanctioned — or 29,000 locally sanctioned — horse shows that will be held coast to coast.

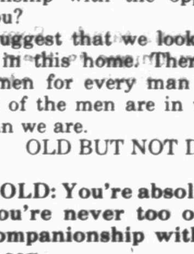
Most of those shows will feature quarter horses, by far the most common breed. The American Quarter Horse Association expects to register 170,000 animals this year. During the first seven months of 1985, the AQHA logged nearly 50,000 new owners, up 5 percent from the same period last year.

Don Treadway, director of public relations, says the popularity of the quarter horse — "the cowboy's horse" — has been boosted by TV ad campaigns in which horses are helping to sell everything from bubble gum to beer. Conversely, Treadway says, bubble gum and beer are helping to sell horses.

While record-price thoroughbreds have grabbed most of the headlines in recent years, the second-leading quarter horse sire, Dash for Cash, was syndicated for $30 million, and Special Effort, the 1981 world champion quarter horse, was syndicated for half that amount.

Top prices also have been paid in recent years for Arabian horses, the world's oldest pure breed but a relative newcomer to the United States. Last year, the first million-dollar Arabian yearling was sold at auction in Arizona. Other popular American pleasure horses include the Morgan, the Anglo and half Arab, and the Tennessee Walker, as well as two color breeds: the Appaloosa, noted for its spotted coat as well as its speed, stamina and docile temperament; and the Pinto, or paint horse, a good all-around riding horse.

Dear Abby



Mr. Right Doesn't Measure Up To Woman's Height Standards

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have never written to you before, but I have a problem I haven't discussed with anyone because I know I will get a lot of flak.

I've been dating a wonderful man whose company I really enjoy. He's intelligent, sensitive, caring and kind, has a great sense of humor, and a bright professional future. We're both in our 30s and have a lot in common. My problem is that I am 5 foot 8 and he is 5 foot 6 1/2. I feel very comfortable with him—except when we walk together in a shopping mall, movie, restaurant or anywhere that requires us to stand next to each other.

In my heart I know what a good person he is, but in my mind I can't forget that I am taller. I suppose I am nuts to let this bother me, but it does. Please don't tell me to see someone about this because I am too embarrassed. I can't even tell my best friend or anyone in the family how I feel. Please help.

TIRED OF FLATS

DEAR TIRED: You are not nuts, and I won't tell you to see someone. The problem is your value system. The sum total of all his attributes is not as important to you as how you think other people perceive you as a couple. (As though they give a hoot or even notice that you are 1 1/2 inches taller than he.)

Retire your flats, put on your heels and start looking for a taller man. This "wonderful, intelligent, sensitive, caring and kind" man deserves a woman who will love him just the way he is.

DEAR ABBY: How does a mother get her able-bodied 28-year-old son to go out and get a job and start living his own life? I am getting too old and tired to support him. He has not worked steady since he graduated from high school 10 years ago. He hasn't worked a day in the last three years! He doesn't even try to find a job. He eats and sleeps and watches TV. I've tried to talk to him, but he just goes into his room and slams the door.

My daughter, who lives in another state, says, "Throw the bum out!" How do I go about doing that? He's too big!

Could you ask your readers who may have had some experience with this kind of problem how to handle it? I'm not financially able to support him forever.

DESPERATE WIDOW

DEAR DESPERATE: You don't have to physically throw him out. Give him a time limit to move his belongings, and if he isn't out by then, lock him out. And be sure to change the locks on your doors.

DEAR ABBY: We live in an old-folks home in Oregon. Our ages range from 55 to 99 years old. We would like to know how women like us can find men to socialize with. Men are scarce here, and we can't get out to meet any. When we mention it to anyone on the staff, we're told we are too old to think about things like that. I don't think people ever get too old to desire companionship with the opposite sex, do you?

Don't suggest that we look over the men in this home. There are three women for every man here, and most of the men are in worse shape than we are.

OLD BUT NOT DEAD

DEAR OLD: You're absolutely right. You're never too old to desire companionship with the opposite sex.

You don't say where in Oregon you are, but I'll bet some public-spirited local service club would be willing to arrange transportation from the home to a senior citizens' mixer for a little recreational "fishing" expedition.

DEAR ABBY: What did Lord Chesterfield say on the subject of sex that has been quoted ad nauseum?

NIGEL IN TORONTO, CANADA

DEAR NIGEL: The only quote I can find by Lord Chesterfield on sex is: "The price is exorbitant, the pleasure transitory, and the position is ridiculous."

Woman traveling by cycle

NEW YORK (AP) — When Lynne Bell says "Hiho, Silver," she's not talking to a horse. She's talking to Silver Bell II, her motorcycle, on which she has just ridden across the country from Los Angeles to New York.

"Silver and I talk to each other a lot. We have a good line of communication," she said of the impressive-looking 500cc Honda Silver Wing, which had taken her more than 3,000 miles over treacherous mountain roads, through flat stretches of plains, over busy interstates and quiet back roads and into city traffic. "And he lets me know when it's time to stop."

She traveled an average of 450 miles a day over nine days, spending nights in motels or with family members along a route mapped out for her by the Rider Motorcycle Touring Club.

"But it kept changing," she said in an interview here. "Each day I'd talk to someone who would suggest a different route. I'd usually run into truckers, and truckers know the roads."

She found the citizens band radio she had equipped her bike with valuable, especially in the Rockies, where she maintained contact with truckers whose advice brought her safely through twisting, narrow roads with frightening drops.

She packed lightly, stashing her gear in two saddle bags, a backpack and two pieces of soft luggage. For the first days of the trip she ate trail mix and fruit, then stopped for meals along the way, attracting a lot of curiosity and attention.

She ran into her first problem outside of Denver when her motorcycle leaned too far and fell over as she took an off ramp in order to get gas.

"There was no way I could lift 800 pounds of bike back up," recalls Bell, who weighs 124 pounds. "So I got on the radio and asked for help. Two sheriffs came to rescue me and led me to the gas station."

Aside from that, her only accident on the cross-country trip took place, not on the highway but in her motel room in Rock Falls, Ill., when she knocked her saddle bag off the bed and it fell on her foot. She had to stay over an extra day because the foot was swollen and sore.

"I got emergency treatment at the hospital," she said. "They X-rayed it and said it wasn't broken, but that I should wait a week and a half before traveling. I stayed in bed and kept it elevated and the next day I said — I talk to my foot as well as my bike — 'Look, we are leaving town. I shift gears with my left foot. You have to do a lot of work so get that foot in that boot and get going.'

"There have been so many negative happenings lately," she said of her decision to make the trip. "What we really need is more love and communication. Those are the two most powerful remedies for any problems that exist in the world. I wanted to share my love and communication by taking side roads and meeting people."

Although her friends and family tried to talk her out of going alone, "I was going solo, but I'm never alone," she said with conviction. "There's a spirit that rides with me, an inner force that's within us all — call it God or whatever."

Slim and stylish in her navy blue leather pants and navy and gray leather jacket, her nails a carefully polished bright red, she was wearing three silver Zuni rings, a turquoise necklace and silver earrings. Bell, whose great-great-grandmother was a Cherokee, says she has always been interested in Indian culture and rituals.

She refuses to tell her age, but "I have a son who's 18, so I'm not 20," she says with a laugh.

Bell, who is divorced, is an actress who has appeared in off-Broadway and off-off-Broadway shows. She bought her first motorcycle only two years ago when she moved from New York City to Los Angeles to get involved in film and TV, meanwhile supporting her motorcycle and acting career by work as a legal secretary.

"I said when I was a little girl that I wanted a bicycle, a motorcycle and a car," she recalled. "First I got the bicycle and then I wanted to move a little faster, needed a little more power, so I got the motorcycle. I'm not ready for the car."

She went to the Motorcycle Training Center in Los Angeles, starting with a group course and then taking private lessons. When she got her own bike it was twice the size of the one she had learned on, so she went back for more training. "When I do something I like to learn to do it well," she explains.

That was Silver Bell I, and Silver Bell II came about because she crashed the first one on the way to San Francisco when she hit some gravel. Six months later she had Silver Bell II — "they had only one silver bike left and I called from the hospital and asked them to hold it" — and went back to school "to learn what to do when you hit gravel."

"I've learned so much about the geography of the the United States on the trip," says Bell, whose northern route took her through 13 states. "The country is absolutely beautiful. Each state is different."

After a visit with her family here, where she grew up, it's "Hiho, Silver," again — back to Los Angeles on her trusty steed, via a southern route this time.

Geisha research leads to book

KYOTO, Japan (AP) — When Stanford University student Lisa Crihfield posed as a geisha in Japan to research her anthropology dissertation, she hardly expected that her book, "Geisha," would sell over 20,000 copies, or that CBS would woo her for the film rights.

Now, 10 years later, she's back in Kyoto, not to pour sake and smile for the Japanese elite, but to serve as a consultant on the television movie being made about her romance behind the paper screens.

The 26-year-old Crihfield, now Dalby, is convinced that geisha offer a glimpse into the true spirit of this country that rose from postwar poverty to economic supremacy.

"To understand geisha, you've got to understand Japanese attitudes on male-female relations, hierarchy, sense of humor, and respect for tradition," she said in an interview on the set at Toei Studios, as a kimono-clad actress whizzed by on a pink motorbike.

"Some people say geisha are an anachronistic relic of a feudal past, but if so, they wouldn't have sprung up again after vanishing in World War II."

Nobody is certain how many geisha still exist in Japan. Police license figures show that from a peak of 80,000 in the 1920s, the number dropped to nil in 1944 and rebounded to 2,478 by 1947.

Dalby's research indicates 17,000 were working in the late 1970s. The kemban, local boards that now license geisha, have no overall figures but some say they "sense" a moderate revival in the affluent 1980s.

"The geisha population tends to rise when Japan's economy gets better," explained Dalby. "It's kind of like the hemline theory."

Though a quintessential symbol of Japan, geisha suffer from a false image abroad and at home. Many Westerners assume they're simpering slaves — "which tells more about Western men's fantasies than about geisha," says Dalby — and even many Japanese think they're prostitutes.

In Dalby's eyes, geisha are Japan's unsung liberated women: They may fan egos at parties to earn their keep, but what truly supports them is music, dance, and their view of themselves as artists.

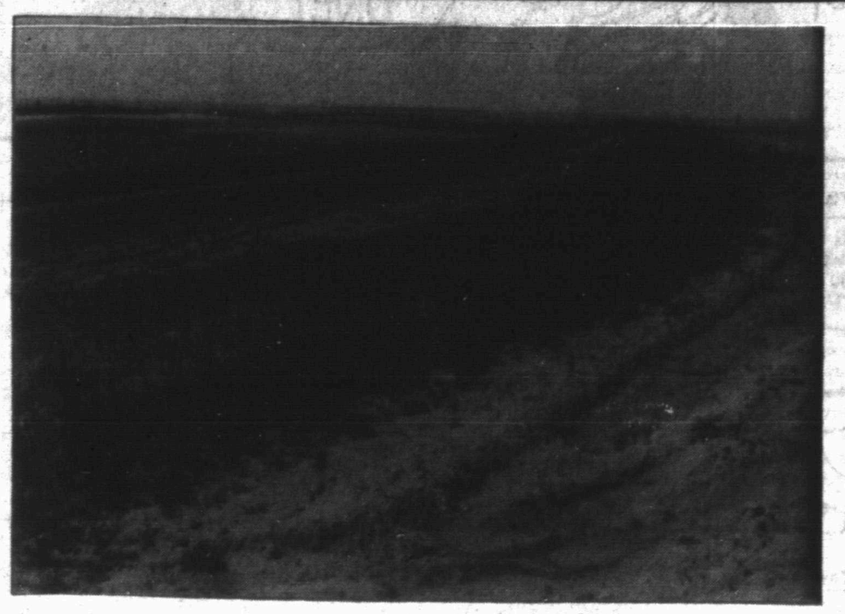
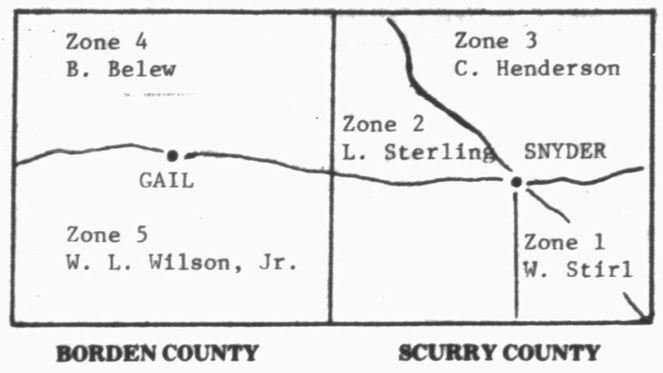
UPPER COLORADO SOIL AND WATER CONSERVATION DISTRICT 1985 ANNUAL REPORT



Wind strip cropping is one of the best moves you can make to reduce wind and water erosion. Wind strips take less than 1.5% of a field area, so yields will only have to be increased 1% to offset the acreage lost. These wind strips of small grain or other annuals will make for a significant yield increase and will also be a low cost soil saver.

Report Sponsored by the Directors of the Upper Colorado SWCD



Regular monthly meetings are held on the third Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Soil Conservation Office at 3423 Ave. T. Phone: 573-1288.

An old method of controlling brush has returned to Scurry and Borden counties. It is called chaining and involves two dozers pulling a naval anchor chain to uproot mesquite and cedar. Normal lengths of chain are 2-3 hundred feet with each link weighing 35-50 pounds. This method works best on trees the size shown and larger. Approximately 1,000 acres were chained in the District this year.

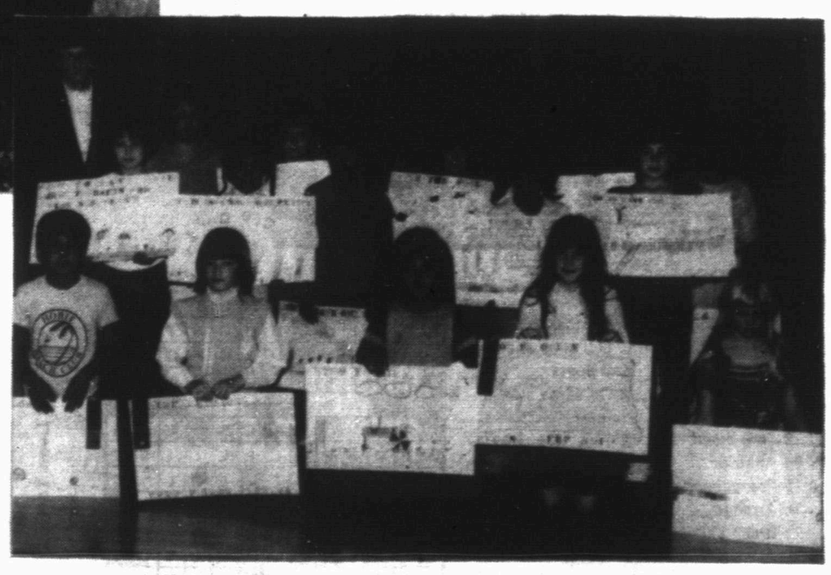
Prescribed burning of native rangeland prior to spring greenup produces a three-fold benefit for ranchers. Most brush species will be top-killed and some root-killed, total ground area made of prickly pear and cholla will be reduced, mature rank grasses sych as tobosa will be more palatable when growth begins. Burning is more economical, at 2-5 dollars/acre than aerial spraying or mechanical treatment. Our burning season begins in mid-January and ends in March.

Charlie Henderson, District Chairman, is shown in a field of sideoats grama with family and friends. This pasture was fertilized and sprayed for weeds and insects in 1985. The results show the benefits of proper grazing use and deferred grazing during and after the drought we have experienced the past two years. Also shown: Bob Turner, Turner Seed Co., Charlie and Will Henderson, Gary and Shana Stipe, Ann and Tommy Henderson and Terry Hefner, SCS Soil Conservationist.

By the way, do you know what the state grass of Texas is? Sideoats grama.

The main priority for justifying the cash outlay to construct a pond is the increased utilization of grasses and distribution of livestock grazing you receive. Livestock has a tendency to concentrate around water sources causing overuse of plants in the vicinity and underuse in the remainder of the pasture. Strategically located water sources help distribute animals to equally graze all range sites in a pasture. Ponds also offer recreational and esthetic values to the landowner and increase the value of the property. Ponds were constructed by the following persons: Wicker Ranch, Jack Wolf, Bill Phinizy, Gene Best (in photo), Fuller Ranch, J.N. Eicke, Lawrence Barnes, Weldon Loyd and the Shannon Ranch.

Proper grazing use and deferred grazing are management tools a rancher must use to remain in business. Managing your grazing so as to "Take Half and Leave Half" of the range plants annual production ensures strong healthy plants. Deferred grazing, where one or more pastures are rested for 90 days, one year out of three, encourages sustained range production such as this King Ranch bluestem planted in 1965 by Renal Rosson.



These third grade students (1984-85) from Northeast Elementary show the conservation posters they entered in the District's Annual Poster Contest. The district provides resource material for teachers to use in teaching soil and water conservation and promoting the wise use of our natural resources. Students from Snyder, Ira, Hermleigh and Gail Elementary Schools entered 249 posters in this years contest. Sue Gressett, shown here and Jane Ramey, Hermleigh Elementary, were selected as Conservation Teachers of the Year by the Upper Colorado SWCD.

This year's fish stocking program in March was such a success the district sponsored a second sale in May. 91 pond owners purchased 25,822 fish for distribution in ponds in Scurry, Borden, Mitchell, Garza, Howard and Fisher counties. This program is held annually with delivery of the fish in early spring.

Terraces are constructed for multi-purpose use. Terraces hold water on the land helping control water erosion. Increased crop production is a major benefit for farmers who install terraces. Persons constructing terraces this year include: H.H. Cary, G.L. Wall, Kinny Hart, Tiner Estate, Paul Turner, 3-Way Farms, Jimmie Sorrels, Charlie Henderson, Neil Reinhart, Bobby Stansel, Ricky Sorrels, David Shiflett, Jack Nachlinger, M.L. Duke, Charles Hardy, Ricky Evans, Marge Toombs, C.C. Nunnally, Joe Belew, Collier Estate, Burl Belew, Bill Buchanan, Bill Elland and James Blankenship.

Discuss symptoms with doctor

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had my uterus, but not my ovaries, removed three years ago. I've been too embarrassed to mention to my doctor about my not having any sexual urges and that I haven't enjoyed sexual relations with my husband. This, of course, has put a strain on our relationship. I've also started growing hair under my jawline, and sweat more than I used to. Could any of this have to do with my hormone level? What can be done to help my problems?

DEAR READER — As a general rule, hysterectomies bear no relation to sexual desire. You are probably experiencing a natural menopause, but I suspect that your loss of sexual urge is a separate issue. Your sense of well-being (and your facial hair) may be helped by hormone replacement. I think you owe it to yourself and your marriage to initiate a frank discussion with your gynecologist. In my opinion, a doctor who knows you well is the ideal person with whom to share your concerns about sexual functioning. There may be a simple and easily correctable cause for your problem.

To give you further information on this general subject, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report on Menopause. Other readers who would like a copy should send 75 cents plus a long self-addressed, stamped envelope to: P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Menopause.

DEAR DR. GOTT — It has been over a year since I broke my left elbow just above the joint. The incision to make repair has healed properly, but the bone has not. I'm a 75-year-old woman. Do you think it will heal eventually, or, if not, will the bone deteriorate?

DEAR READER — If your upper arm has not healed in a year, it is unlikely to do so in the future. Depending on how much discomfort you are experiencing, you may need to see an orthopedic surgeon who may consider putting a steel pin in the bone to stabilize it. This procedure is quite commonplace and may literally make your arm as good as new. As an adjunct to therapy, the surgeon will probably suggest you take calcium, vitamin D and fluoride supplements to strengthen your bones. Once pinned, the bone may heal quite satisfactorily and at a later date, the pin can be removed. This program is immeasurably superior to the handicap of an unhealed painful extremity.

DEAR DR. GOTT — The doctor says I have osteoarthritis in my knees and feet. I am 79 years old and gaining weight. Is there a diet that will help my arthritis? Are there foods I should avoid?

DEAR READER — Osteoarthritis is practically universal among people in their 70s. It is a consequence of aging. However, the progression of arthritis in your weight-bearing joints (hips, knees and ankles) can be slowed if you lose weight. I do not know of a diet that is specifically directed toward patients with osteoarthritis; to my knowledge, there are no foods that someone with arthritis should avoid. Cut back on calories, stay as active as you can, use hot packs for pain and consider taking anti-arthritis medicine to keep you as limber as possible.

Nostalgia for oldtime doctors

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

I'm a victim of my memories. Not the great ones, you understand, but a dribble of inconsequential mind pictures that are as much a part of me as blue eyes and graying hair.

Remember World War II? I recall our Victory Garden. How proud we were to have eked out half a meal of corn and carrots to Save Our Boys. I wasn't sure what we were saving them from; perhaps from our corn-on-the-cob, which was scraggly and boasted an in-house supply of fat green worms.

Whatever happened to sweater stretchers? Those smoothly sanded plywood forms with moveable arms were demons over which my mother — with what seemed to me infinite strength and patience — hauled, using fingernails and the entire weight of her body, dripping, newly washed woolen sweaters. One of her sweaters was light blue, and I remember a time she forgot to stretch it; when it dried, it was just big enough for me to wear.

How about wartime margarine? It came in a clear plastic sack and looked (and felt) like lard. On the inner lining of the container there was a reddish color button. It was my job every week to pop the button, release the coloring and then, through a prolonged and tiring ritual, knead the bag of fat until the entire contents were, more or less, homogeneously yellow. Heaven knows what we were eating then — probably supersaturated fat and Yellow Dye 79 — but it tasted good on a baked potato and, we were told, the fighting men needed the real butter for munitions. We were conscientiously patriotic in 1943, to the point where we uncomplainingly did without. There was a war on.

I'd never do without my radio serials, though. Every weekday afternoon at 5 I would give myself over — body and soul — to Jack Armstrong, Superman, the Green Hornet, Tennessee Jed — and then, on Sundays — The Shadow, Bulldog Drummond and Jack Benny. I chose to spend my evenings in another, more managable fantasy of crooks and heroes, rather than the real world of what we talked about all day: Tojo, Hitler and Mussolini.

Later, when my classmates began to drive automobiles, only a few students enjoyed the heady privilege of owning one. However, those who did invariably had Bermuda bells and that raciest of gadgets, the necker's knob. This was a movable plastic ball attached to the steering wheel which would allow the driver perfect steering control with one hand, while the other — naturally — was befriending the girl in the passenger seat. Handicapped persons now use these devices, but I'm curious as to why necker's knobs are no longer standard equipment for teenagers' hot-rods.

There are other golden memories of my (occasionally) misspent youth. A slick Chris-Craft motorboat — all mahogany and chrome with a gurgling inboard engine, a cut above the almost-made-it Gar Wood; galoshes — no one wears them anymore unless he or she works full-time in a fish cannery. Black-and-white saddle shoes — no one cares about 'em anymore; a stripped-down, thin-tire, gearless Schwinn bike with coaster brakes. I used to pretend that if I could navigate the endless hill to my girlfriend's house without getting off the bicycle, she would give me a kiss. Sometimes I did, sometimes I didn't. Same with her.

It's funny how things change — and not always for the better, either. What happened to doctors who made house-calls? What has become of the physician whose most natural gesture was putting his arm around you or holding your hand if you were troubled or sick? Where is the healer who was always available when needed? Where is the doctor who could balance scientific medicine with equally important medical art? Has the traditional physician, flawed but compassionate, gone the way of Jack Armstrong, Vic Hardy, Billy and Betty? Can he come back, or is he as much a trivial memory as Victory Gardens and necker's knobs? What a pity.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Tammy Voss sells lamb

BORDEN COUNTY–Twelve-year-old Tammy Voss sold her $900 champion crossbred lamb to Tom Thumb Supermarkets. She had won at the state fair in Dallas.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Voss.

People once used a pegged sheepskin to extract gold particles from rivers in northern Georgia, a Soviet Republic. According to National Geographic, the practice, which was described as early as the first century B.C. by a Greek geographer, may have been the basis of the myth of Jason's quest for the Golden Fleece.

Increase in flower imports worrisome

GIBSONIA, Pa. (AP) — Imported or grown domestically, a rose is a rose and smells as sweet. And that's the thorn pricking the domestic flower industry, which claims blooming imports are undercutting their billion-dollar business.

"There are greenhouse companies that are going broke around the country, one by one, because of imports," says rose grower Steve Slatton. "It's one of our major concerns."

Slatton manages Pittsburgh Cut Flowers, one of the country's largest rose growers, producing about 5½ million rose blossoms a year from 250,000 bushes. The buds flourish under greenhouses terracing rolling hills about 20 miles north of Pittsburgh.

For most of its 120-plus years, the business "has been very stable," Slatton says. "And it still is yet. It's just that there are ominous clouds hanging around."

Aggressive competition from cheaper, foreign imports — once confined to products like steel, shoes and electronics — is forcing growers to trim their budgets and scrutinize future plans.

"It's funny to think flowers can be brought over here from another country and still be affordable," says Patti Schuldenfrei, managing editor of Florists' Review.

But flowers can be delivered to the United States from most parts of the world less than 24 hours after they're picked and at lower costs than those produced here, she said.

Imports of cut flowers are now at a record high level, representing more than 30 percent of all cut flowers and topping $214 million in value in 1984, says Stephen Burket, industry analyst for the International Trade Commission.

Domestic growers have asked for protection from flower dumping by countries that subsidize their industries, but the ITC has ruled imports are not yet harming U.S. growers.

Colombia is the top-ranking petal pusher among the foreign competitors, supplying 58 percent of all cut flowers imported domestically in 1984, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Mexico and Guatemala last year supplied 19 percent and 6 percent, respectively.

Domestic growers claim those countries have a natural advantage because they don't have to pay high heating bills and standard U.S. labor costs.

Holland has none of the South American advantages. But advanced technology, aggressive marketing and a cooperative system among growers helped the Netherlands control 11 percent of the market for all imported cut flowers last year and practically corner the market in bulb flowers like tulips, freesia, iris and lilies, according to the USDA.

The imports have affected not just a few varieties of flowers, but an entire bouquet.

Pittsburgh Cut Flowers, which now grows mostly roses, had to phase out its production of chrysanthemums and carnations in the early 60s "when imports became too many," Slatton said.

Now, about 70 percent of all standard carnations and 68 percent of all pompon mums purchased in the United States are imported, according to the USDA.

Roses, once considered too delicate to transport long distances, are being imported in amazing numbers, thanks to new technology that enables roses to withstand being out of water.

Taking risks may lead way to better life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lotteries and bingo are in. Still, many people today are reluctant to take risks that could make their lives happier, says the Rev. Richard DeLillio, supervisor at The Catholic University of America's Pastoral Center here.

"Risk introduces the possibility of failing or succeeding in life," he explains. "Because people do not like to fail, they play it safe and avoid taking chances. What they have is safer than what they don't have."

Risk taking, however, can be liberating and can provide new opportunities for fulfillment and happiness, and that is why it is important to try to break out of an unhappy situation, he points out.

"Taking the first risky step requires a person to articulate dreams or goals," DeLillio says. "Then one should try to understand if the dream is realizable at the present time. Sticking with a dream that never pays off is the same as not risking. Claiming that one could have been this or that, 'but society was against me,' is merely another way of blaming others for one's lack of potential."

DeLillio notes that there are several varieties of non-risktakers:

"Rather than taking risks to prove oneself, the 'lost-soul' plays the victim.
