Not backing rollback

Registering her feelings about Saturday's rollback election in Odessa is Ruth McQuitty, a teacher in the Ector County Independent School District, who stands with her sign at Burnett Elementary. Voter turnout was light as 12,291 persons — or 24 percent of the registered voters — appeared at the polls to approve by a 65 percent margin tax rollbacks for the county and school district.

ODESSA — Ector County taxpayers got their message across Saturday by approving rollback of the tax rates of the county and school district.

In landslide fashion, nearly 65 percent of the 12,291 voters cast their ballots for the rollbacks. Only two of 31 polling places voted for the county and school district, with one splitting the vote exactly in half.

A small turn-out, less than 24 percent of the 51,946 residents registered, chose to vote on the issue which forces both governments to cut their tax rates back to the 8-percent limit dictated by the property tax code.

The county, which recently cut $1.86 million from this year's budget to protect against deficit spending and build up cash reserves, must cut another $880,000 from its budget. The ECISD must cut about $2.2 million from its budget for the next fiscal year.

Ironically, fewer people voted in the election than signed the petitions which forced the county and school district to call for the vote. More than 13,000 signed the county petitions and more than 12,000 signed the school and city petitions. The city was protected from the rollback because its tax increase did not exceed 8 percent.

Bill Norton, the key man who organized the movement, was happy about the results — but admitted mixed emotions. While he sympathized with any employees who may lose their jobs or students who may get less teacher attention, Norton pointed out that both entities still are increasing their tax revenues 8 percent.

"We can't cut them back on that," he said. "In any other kind of a business, you wouldn't have to cut back if you got that kind of an increase."

But school and county officials were planning to make cuts. County Judge Jan Fisher said budget hearings likely would resume next week, less than two months after commissioners settled on cuts that dropped 46 positions from the county work force.

"It doesn't surprise me at all," said Fisher, suggesting that the county had been aware of the taxpayers' sentiments for the past year, but was forced to raise the tax rate to make up for past years of mismanagement.

The judge said she did not anticipate exceeding the 8-percent mark next year. "I don't think it will be necessary," she said.

ECISD Superintendent Bill Holm was "surprised and disappointed" at the turn-out and result. "I thought we had a chance to win it," he said, based on the 2,600 employees and 25,300 students from which he expected to see the school district's support.

To Merrill family, backyard well means 'nightmare'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Tom and Essie Merrill barely blew death out of their faces in Denver City and flew to Midland to escape memories of that ghostly night in 1975. They'd tired of living in a neighborhood of pipelines and oil-wells and poisonous gas.

The Merrills thought they had found the perfect haven of safety at Greenwood. Until they came home one day in May 1982. It was then they found the staked off area that soon became the site for a drilling rig. Thus began another nightmare.

Like the residents in 349 Ranch Estates in north Midland, the Merrills found out the hard way just what it means to buy property in an oil-rich county. The fine print states it in legalese on the contracts. But no one comprehends what it can mean when someone owns the surface rights and someone else the mineral rights. The constitutional right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness on one's property takes second place to drilling for oil.

In the state of Texas, "the owner of the mineral estate enjoys the dominant estate and the surface owner hold the subservient estate," according to the State Bar Report on Oil, Gas and Mineral Law Section.

ALTHOUGH THE city of Midland holds no jurisdiction over Greenwood and other rural land, the Merrills have watched with interest the arguments between city residents and an independent oil company over the issue of drilling in a north Midland neighborhood.

Ironically, despite their bad experiences, the Merrills have nothing against the oil industry for it provides their livelihood. Tom works in the petroleum industry, and his wife realizes the black gold's single-handed influence on Midland's economy. What they oppose is the unruly, overbearing manner some companies display when they decide to drill a well on someone's land.

"We would like to see the law changed so the landowner has some rights," said Essie.

The presence of poisonous hydrogen sulfide gas in formations surrounding Midland has worried some council members. The Merrills have smelled that danger.

It was a silent killer that struck down their neighbors on the foggy, drizzly night of Feb. 2, 1975. The headlines told of the horrors: "Gas Kills Nine at Denver City."

Living three miles north of Denver City, Essie awoke in the predawn chill and smelled something unusual. She and Tom looked out the window and saw a strange cloud around surrounding the propane tank at her neighbor's house. She called the J.C. Pattons and the wife, Glenda, answered. That family and friends died while trying to escape the stranglehold of the swift killer.

In election year, Congress will take up leftovers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ending a nine-week recess, Congress is returning for a presidential election-year session expected to be long on politics and short on substance.

The U.S. role in Lebanon and soaring federal deficits top a congressional agenda full of foreign and domestic issues, most of them left over from last year, as the 98th Congress reconvenes for its second session.

Despite the long list of pending legislation, leaders of both parties predict slim accomplishments in what is expected to be an abbreviated session dominated by presidential and congressional election posturing.

"It should be a very quiet year around here," said Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

President Reagan will outline his goals for 1984 when he delivers his State of the Union address on Wednesday and sends his budget for fiscal year 1985 to Capitol Hill on Feb. 1.

He may give Republican leaders an advance look at his proposals on Tuesday when he goes to the Capitol for a GOP leadership luncheon.

And Treasury Secretary Donald Regan will talk about the state of the nation's economy at a Thursday hearing before the House-Senate Economic Committee.

Congress decided last September to allow U.S. Marines to stay in Beirut through mid-April 1985, but a re-evaluation of this decision seems likely as more and more members — Republicans as well as Democrats — express new concerns about the U.S. role there.

A House Foreign Affairs subcommittee will look into the subject on Thursday.

Leaders of both parties have expressed concern that the nation's growing deficits, headed toward the $200 billion-a-year mark, could thwart the economic recovery. But few hold out much real hope of trimming them this election year, either by spending cuts or tax increases.

"It's iffy," said Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, senior Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee. "Election years are always difficult and this one has a lot of players. It may be more of a caretaker year."

"We had politics in '83 but we're sure going to get a bigger dose in '84," predicted House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

Lawsuit stems from UFO sighting

By SUSAN HUMPHREY
Associated Press Writer

DAYTON, Texas — Vicki Landrum still cries when she describes an experience she had three years ago that resembled something out of a science fiction novel.

"When I get to talking about it, it all comes back," the 60-year-old Mrs. Landrum said.

Mrs. Landrum, her 10-year-old grandson, Colby, and Betty Cash, 54, last week filed a federal lawsuit against the U.S. government, seeking $20 million in damages for injuries they claim resulted from a sighting of an unidentified flying object three years ago.

Mrs. Landrum said they saw a large diamond-shaped glowing object hovering 60 to 80 feet above the road.

"It hung over our heads and we stopped," she recalled. "Colby and I got out and then got back in real quick. Betty got out and stood by the car and looked. I kept telling her to get back in the car or she'd get burned up.

"The whole woods looked like they was on fire," she said. "It was a bright red. It was so bright we couldn't see it (the object) good. It looked like a flat tin."

Mrs. Landrum said the car was scorching. She put her hand on the dashboard and, when she removed it, left a permanent imprint. Mrs. Cash tried to get back into the car, but the handle was so hot she couldn't open the door.

"I said, 'Betty, I guess this is it.' We were just looking to die," she says.

The object lifted away and they could see it was surrounded by helicopters. Mrs. Landrum said they drove farther down the road, stopped at a small cemetery and counted 23 choppers. Some of the helicopters had double rotaries.

She said a friend of hers, a Dayton police officer walking with his wife, also witnessed the chopper fleet.

Knowing people were unlikely to believe the incident, she warned her grandson not to tell anyone about it.

But later that night it became apparent that they wouldn't be able to keep their experience a secret. Mrs. Landrum found Colby in the bathroom sick with nausea and diarrhea. Both had developed red skin blotches. While trying to help him, she too, became ill.

Islanders vote on gambling in referendum

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Residents went to the polls in a nonbinding referendum Saturday to decide whether gambling casinos should be allowed to operate in this island resort community.

The issue has triggered heated debate and created conflicting visions of what the future holds for Texas' oldest beachfront city.

The Greater Galveston Beach Association claimed rolling dice and whirling roulette wheels would inject billions of dollars into the local economy, creating a glittering return to the "good old days" of prosperous sin and fun and rescuing the city from a permanent, irreversible decline.

But a group of investors, church leaders and young professionals

state

argued that casinos would turn Galveston into a city blighted by crime and controlled by gangsters. They also saed Galveston is prospering now and doesn't need gambling to succeed.

City Secretary Patsy Poole predicted that a third of the island's 30,000 voters would go to the polls. She said about 1,000 absentee ballots were cast.

Whatever the outcome, there will be no immediate effect. The vote merely is an expression of opinion. State legislation, and perhaps even a state constitutional amendment, would be required before gambling is legal here or anywhere else in Texas.

But a group called the Galvestonians Against Casino Gambling believed the vote would be crucial to defending the city against the evils of gaming.

"I think you'd have a lot of people (in the state) say let Galveston have it," said Jim Mahan, a Galveston attorney who leads the GACG. "There are state legislators who wouldn't vote to have gambling in their district, but would put it in Galveston. It's sort of like you isolating a red light district."

State. Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, has said he will sponsor a local-option gambling bill in the Texas Legislature if 60 percent or more of Galveston voters agree.

Night club owner and band leader Bubby Kirk led the pro-gambling Greater Galveston Beach Association and viewed casinos as an industry that could save his town.

'Women voting different than men'

AUSTIN (AP) — The chair of the Texas Women's Political Caucus said Friday women "are, for the first time, voting measurably different than men."

Meg Wilson said through voter registration drives, campaign training sessions, endorsements and political action projects "we are ensuring that the so-called 'gender gap' will widen even further.

"We alert those who continue to oppose women's reproductive freedom and sanction sex discrimination that women, too, can be very discriminating in the ballot booth."

state in brief

Hearing set for Bell proposal

AUSTIN (AP) — Examiner Shelia Bailey of the Public Utility Commission has set a May 14 hearing on Southwestern Bell's proposal to give customers a choice of paying for local calls on a per-call basis or a flat monthly rate.

Under "local measured service," customers would be billed for locals calls based on time of day of the call, distance and duration — similar to the way a long-distance call is calculated.

In 1981 the PUC turned down a Bell request to offer the per-call service, and instructed Bell not to seek such an option until it had studied customer reaction to the plan.

Bell said in October a $130,000 survey had shown that Texans are interested in local measured service.

Counties named disaster areas

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White said Friday the U.S. Department of Agriculture has designated seven counties as disaster areas as a result of severe weather conditions that destroyed crops and livestock.

Childress, Collingsworth, Lynn and Val Verde counties were named disaster areas based on losses caused by drought. Bailey and Brown counties were designated disaster areas because of losses caused by drought and hail. Hale County's designation was based on losses caused by freezing temperatures.

Under the declarations, eligible farmers and ranchers may receive emergency loans from the Farmers Home Administration.

Poultry flocks free of influenza

AUSTIN (AP) — Dr. John Holcombe, executive director of the Texas Animal Health Commission, said Friday that Texas poultry flocks are still free of avian or poultry influenza, despite a serious outbreak in the Northeast.

"There are no signs of it in Texas," said Holcombe, whose department has been watching reports of the disease closely.

"There have been many flocks depopulated in Pennsylvania," Holcombe said, "and it has been found in one flock in New Jersey. There also are some suspect flocks in Virginia, but none in Texas."

Holcome said he understood a few cents of the increased price in eggs is due to the disease although most of the current increase is due to the seasonal increase every winter in the price of eggs.

Mattox may sue to stop sale

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said Friday he may sue to stop the sale of food containing ethylene dibromide — EDB — if the federal Environmental Protection Agency does not act quickly to protect consumers from the chemical fumigant.

Mattox said he had authority to sue under a state law that prohibits "misrepresentation of the characteristics or ingredients of goods sold and failure to disclose known risks."

The attorney general said in a letter to EPA director William Ruckelhaus that EPA scientists had concluded that EDB "poses increased risk of cancer."

Hance to fight for tax credit

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — U.S. Senate candidate Kent Hance told a legislative committee Friday he will fight for a bill in Congress to persuade industry to stop burlood-prone areas.

Rep. Hance, D-Texas, proposed a tax credit as an economic incentive for oil and chemical companies to find other means of waste disposal.

The credit would be $60 per dry ton for those companies now using landfills in flood-prone areas and $40 per dry ton for those using landfills in other areas.

"I grew up in perhaps the most arid part of the state and have always had a deep appreciation for the quantity and the quality of our water for consumers, agriculture and industry," the Lubbock lawmaker said.

'Special' checks mailed

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 560 special unemployment checks have been mailed to people who lost their jobs because of the December freeze in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

David Laurel, director of special programs for the Texas Employment Commission, said Friday the checks were sent out less than 10 days after the first applications for Disaster Unemployment Assistance were received.

People are eligibile if they became unemployed or if their work was interrupted by the freeze and they do not qualify for regular unemployment insurance.

Laurel said as of Thursday the employment commission had received 5,500 applications for assistance checks. He said the commission would take initial applications through Feb. 8.

LOSE WEIGHT EVEN AS YOU SLEEP

THE 24 HOUR DIET PLAN PACK

Losing weight has never been easier, faster, more healthful, or more certain.

The GNC Research Staff had a difficult assignment...to develop a weight loss program that puts its demands on science rather than human will power. They screened all the most effective plans and aids now known, and combined the best of the best. Although nobody expected a miracle, a lot of people are describing this three-part program as just that.

1. Glucomannan helps you shed an average one-half to one pound a day. Two Glucomannan capsules taken ½ hour before meals with an 8 oz. glass of water form a natural high fiber gel that reduces amounts of food you need to feel full, and also provides the bulk your system needs for passing more calories undigested out of the body.

2. Amino FB burns away fat while you sleep. These amino acid tablets taken before bedtime have been known to stimulate the production of growth hormones which direct your system to burn fat for energy instead of protein or carbohydrates—a reversal of the usual process. This action is continuously effective, even during sleep.

3. Preventron assures healthful nutritional balance. This high potency vitamin and mineral supplement delivers the all important nutritional requirements your body needs to look your best, feel your best and work your best.

Absolute Guarantee We unconditionally guarantee that the 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack will help you lose 5 pounds in ten days or your full purchase price will be refunded.

The 24 Hour Diet Plan Pack contains directions and a 2 week supply of products that together make weight control a physical science, not a challenge for your willpower.

TO OUR VALUED CUSTOMERS:

Many of you will remember when S & Q Clothiers first arrived in Midland with a small store on Main Street in 1946. As Midland grew, so did S & Q. The Main Street store was expanded and remodeled twice before moving to larger quarters in our present location on Colorado Street. This store also went through two expansions and remodelings as we grew with downtown Midland.

In 1955, we went suburban by adding a store in the Village on Dodson Street. This store was also expanded before we purchased our larger present location on Andrews Highway.

We know how much Midland has changed over the years, and we have enjoyed growing and changing with you.

After 38 years in downtown, we have been unable to renew our lease and must vacate our premises. When we do, we will expand our merchandise and our personnel in our suburban store to serve you even better.

We do not want to move a thing from our downtown store, so we invite you to our GOING OUT OF BUSINESS SALE IN THE DOWNTOWN STORE. Everything must go!!! Seasonable fashion merchandise! Furniture! Fixtures! Decorations! Hangers! Mirrors!

EVERYTHING IS FOR SALE!

Come take part in these bargains. Then help us celebrate our expanded suburban store.

We are in Midland to stay. We own our suburban property, and we intend to serve you there for many years to come.

Expert affirms suicide note

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A handwriting expert says a suicide note signed by a man believed to have killed a bank president appears to be authentic, but a sheriff says he thinks the note was planted after the man's death.

The note was found Jan. 6 on the Paducah, Texas, farm where James L. Jenkins apparently shot himself to death last Oct. 2. It was found by Louis Taveirne, who lives with Jenkins' ex-wife, Darlene, in the presence of Cottle County (Texas) Sheriff Frank Taylor.

Jenkins and his son Steven, 18, were seen fleeing after the Sept. 29 ambush slayings of Rudy Blythe, 42, president of the Buffalo Ridge State Bank of Ruthton in southwestern Minnesota, and loan officer Deems Thulin, 37. Blythe and Thulin were found shot to death on a farm once owned by Jenkins.

Steven surrendered to Texas authorities the night of his father's death. He has pleaded not guilty to charges of first-degree murder in Blythe's death and second-degree murder in Thulin's death.

Steven Jenkins' attorney, Swen Anderson of Granite Falls, has an unlisted telephone number and could not be reached for comment Saturday.

Ann Hooten, a handwriting analyst hired by Anderson, said Friday, "There is absolutely nothing that appears on the note that would lead anyone to believe it is not authentic. There is nothing to indicate a forgery."

The note was printed in capital letters in pencil on the back of a receipt and had the elder Jenkins' signature.

The note, on eight lines, reads:

BLYTHE
STEVE LEAVING
ANYMORE
BE DEAD."

General insured for $750,000

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Reserve Maj. Gen. Robert Ownby, who was found hanged at his Fort Sam Houston headquarters, had insured his life for $750,000 with policies that prohibit payment in the case of suicide, the San Antonio Light reported Saturday.

However, the suicide clause in one of the two policies would have expired less than two months after Ownby killed himself.

The insurance was carried in policies taken out by two businesses — Delaware Punch and the Bristow Co. — with which Ownby had been intimately involved, officials with the companies told the Light.

In both cases, death benefits would have been paid if authorities had believed Ownby was murdered by terrorists, as was suggested in a typewritten note found pinned to the general's sweater Jan. 11.

The note said Ownby had been convicted, sentenced and executed for "crimes by the U.S. Army against the people of the world."

But Bexar County Medical Examiner Dr. Vincent DiMaio ruled Thursday the note was an elaborate ruse concocted by Ownby to cover his suicide.

The FBI found that Ownby committed suicide because of "serious financial problems," DiMaio said.

The Delaware Punch policy, which carried a two-year suicide clause that expired March, would have paid his family $250,000, Air Force Maj. Gen. James Isaacks, chairman of the board and owner of the soft-drink firm, said Saturday.

Proceeds from the so-called "key-man" policy at Bristow, which makes metal doors, would have gone to the company — and relieved the general's survivors of any business debts threatening the family assets, said a company official, who asked to remain anonymous.

The Delaware Punch policy's suicide clause would have expired March 8, less than two months from the date Ownby bound and hanged himself inside the 90th Army Reserve Command headquarters at Fort Sam Houston, Isaacks said.

The proceeds would have gone to Ownby's family because he had taken over payments of the policy premiums after leaving the company as an officer in July 1982, Isaacks said.

Police meet

MONROE, La. (AP) — Police from 19 states who gathered for three days to share information on unsolved murders believe there are more than 30 suspects who drift around the nation, killing as they go.

The law enforcement authorities met to compare notes on suspected slayings involving drifters Henry Lee Lucas and Ottis Elwood Toole, who once traveled together and claim to have killed more than 150 people.

By the end of the three-day conference last week, the visiting officers had confirmed 81 of the slayings, said Monroe Police Lt. Joe Cummings.

Midland gets respite from winter

Midlanders will have a day-time respite from winter's bite today.

But tonight should still be down near the freezing mark of 32 degrees.

For today, the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport has predicted cloudy skies and somewhat warmer temperatures — high readings near 50. Winds are to be southerly at 15 to 20 mph. For tonight, the weatherman has called for a low in the mid-30s. The high Monday is to be in the low 50s.

The high temperature Saturday was 41 degrees, and the record high for a Jan. 21 is 84 degrees in 1974. The overnight low was 23, and the record low for a Jan. 22 is 2 degrees in 1966.

For the month and year to day, the precipitation total stands at 0.41 of an inch.

Midland statistics

FORECAST

Mostly cloudy and a little warmer today with a high near 50. Winds southerly at 15-20 mph. Partly cloudy tonight and Monday with a low tonight in the mid-30s and a high Monday in the low 50s.

Extended forecasts

Tuesday Through Thursday

West Texas: Partly cloudy north Tuesday otherwise generally fair with a warming trend. Highs Tuesday 50s north and 60s extreme south warming Thursday to 60s north and 70s extreme south. Lows Tuesday 20s north and 30s south warming Thursday to mostly 30s north and 40s south.

North Texas: Slightly cooler southeast Tuesday followed by a warming trend across the entire area Wednesday and Thursday. Little or no precipitation through the period with partly cloudy skies. Lows upper 20s and 30s Tuesday warming to mid-30 to lower 40 range Wednesday and Thursday. Highs 50s Tuesday rising into 60s by Thursday.

Fair skies cover most of state

By The Associated Press

Fair skies and warming temperatures were reported across Texas Saturday. The only cloudiness was over the southern tip of the state, along the Rio Grande.

As a high-pressure ridge continued to weaken and move east, winds returned to southerly across most of Texas. Winds remained from the east and northeast in East Texas along the Louisiana border.

Dale won't be city

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — There will be no Dale, at least for now.

The election in a horse trailer Saturday west of Midland on Andrews Highway might as well not have occurred. As far as Ector County records will indicate, it didn't.

Election judge Dwayne Hamilton failed to bring the ballots to County Clerk Lucille Wolz. Because the courthouse will be closed Sunday and the ballots needed to be delivered to her within 24 hours to adhere to election law, the election won't be validated by the county.

Unofficially, the election was not successful. Word from the rural area straddling Ector and Midland County had incorporation failing handily, 45 to 9. Only nine voted for incorporation, but 20 signed the petition which called for the election.

To be named in memory of a 13-year-old boy who died at the county line, the city which no one knew of before the election to make it a municipality will remain unincorporated.

Supporters of the election said they wanted to protect the rural flavor. But voters apparently decided they wanted things to stay as they are.

The petition was invalid the first time signatures were sought. This petition was valid, but the election defeated the incorporation. Supporters would need to start over with another petition if they decide to give it a third try.

Rollback approved

Final tallies showed only 389 more persons favored the county rollback than the school's. School officials have suggested the staffing area would see the most cuts.

Holm said special programs would suffer. "Extra things," such as after-school activities, programs for the talented and gifted and diagnostic services used in placing students, would be likely targets, he said.

Referring to the vote, Holm said, "From that aspect, we certainly got the message." The school board will work to keep tax increases below the rollback mark in the future, he said.

While the school will be cutting programs and teachers, the county faces a more serious dilemma. County Auditor Dan Ramirez said November cuts left the county with few options should the rollback succeed.

This means some people who breathed a sigh of relief in November when their jobs with the county were saved will likely be getting some bad news after commissioners decide where to make the reductions.

U.S. officer killed

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — A U.S. armed forces officer and an undetermined number of Guatemalans were killed Saturday in a crash of a Guatemala air force plane just north of the capital, well placed sources said in Guatemala City.

Michael Hahn, spokesman for the U.S. embassy here, confirmed that there was a plane crash and that an American was killed. But he said he could not reveal the name of the American because relatives in the United States had not yet been notified.

However, he said the American worked in the office of the military attache of the embassy.

Sources insisting on anonymity said the American was an officer in the U.S. armed forces but did not say to which branch of the military the victim belonged.

An Israeli-made plane belonging to the Guatemalan air force crashed about 10 minutes after taking off from the military airstrip at La Aurora international airport here, sources said.

The sources said an unknown number of Guatemalans died in the crash.

The plane was about 15 miles north of the capital when it crashed, the sources said.

This pumpjack near houses in 349 Ranch Estates is one of the reasons why the Midland City Council is studying proposals for regulating drilling within city limits. The Tom Merrill family in Greenwood has some more reasons.

Merrill family relives 'nightmare' as oil well drilled in back yard

SUSPECTING SOMETHING besides propane gas, Tom called Atlantic Richfield, whose pipeline ran near the two houses. He watched as the Arco employee, Eugene Sparger, drove his pickup into the cloud and then off the road.

"That's when we decided we had to get out," said Tom.

They put their two boys in the International Travelall, and the rest is still hazy. As Tom was pulling out of the driveway he remarked about not being able to see. He passed out; then Essie's head fell onto his foot, pressing it down on the accelerator.

"I can remember her laying in the floor with her head on my foot and thinking it was strange," said Tom. The vehicle ran wild, crossing the road from borrow ditch to borrow ditch. They finally ran into fresh air and regained consciousness.

It wasn't until after he had made some calls to the fire department, sheriff's office and Shell and dropped off the family at the hospital that he realized what had happened to the vehicle. "It was destroyed."

Although they almost didn't make it out alive, Tom and Essie called the collision with the hydrogen sulfide leak in the wellhead 200 yards away a freak accident, a strange fusion of fog and humid conditions that turned the small leak into a deadly cloud.

"That leak was no bigger than the lead in this pencil," said Tom, holding up a No. 2 pencil.

Soon after, the Merrills moved to Midland. Their Denver City house was devalued 25 cents on the dollar.

They searched the area for a site devoid of the oil industry. "What happened at Denver City gave us a good reason for not wanting a well close to our house." Five acres in Greenwood with a restricted deed looked like the answer. They combed the area for pipelines and, satisfied the land was safe, started over with a second chance at living.

IN MAY 1982 they came home from work and found stakes at the back of their five-acre lot, which had been readied for planting.

The Merrills had their land appraised and offered to sell the drilling company the tract at the going price of $15,000 an acre. The company offered $10,000 — $7,000 for all the land and $3,000 if the Merrills would furnish water for their drilling operations. "Our land is restricted; you can't sell the water," said Tom.

The company, which the Merrills declined to name, dredged out a road, which turned into a mud river when the rain came, said the couple.

After consulting an attorney, the Merrills discovered the company had a legal right to walk in and drill without telling the landowner. The Merrills began capturing the "magic moments" of each step of the well in photos. That angered one of the workers who threatened Tom. He in turn filed a complaint with the Sheriff's Department and the man, after also threatening a law officer, was placed in jail.

—THE COMPANY brought in the floor works and tore down the Merrills' wooden fence.

—They tied up traffic along Cloverdale Road bringing the equipment in and out.

—Open pits filled with mud and water were left standing, one until recently. They became a trash dump for the workers.

—Paper and plastic bags, milk cartons, candy wrappers, hamburger sacks and beer cans decorated the drill site, as did human waste once the portable john was removed.

But one pit was used as a dumping site for more than a year by the drilling firm, trucking in wastes from other wells and dumping them out at night, said Tom.

Of their five acres, two were taken for the well. "That land is useless now for 20 years," said Essie.

PEACE AND QUIET didn't come when the well was completed. The firm then began bringing in prospective investors to look at the site.

"We had all kinds of sightseers on our land," said Essie. "It has not been a pleasant experience."

But not all companies operate the same, she stressed. Another firm drilled a well one-eighth of a mile away, and no one knew it was going on until the rig was up. The site was kept clean and the noise level down.

If the Midland City Council doesn't adopt an ordinance regulating drilling, the Merrills are afraid what happened to them could happen to someone in the city. And they would like to see the State Legislature regulate drilling in the counties. "A lot more people live in rural areas now," she said.

Although oil companies contend there is no hydrogen sulfide gas in the Sprayberry field, the Merrills aren't accepting that theory.

"Maybe there's none now...," said Essie. "That leak is our reason for saying there should be some control around houses."

State law favors mineral rights

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

It's in the fine print when someone buys a house. They own the surface rights; mineral rights belong to someone else.

What many homeowners don't understand is that mineral rights take priority over the pursuit of peace and happiness.

That's the final word in decision after decision issued in state courts and compiled in the State Bar of Texas Section Report: Oil, Gas and Mineral Law Section.

"The surface estate is servient to the mineral estate," the report notes. "The Texas courts have traditionally justified the dominance of the mineral estate by relying on the theory that the mineral interest would otherwise be worthless if the mineral owner could not enter upon the land for exploration and extraction of the minerals owned."

The Tom Merrill family at Greenwood discovered how few rights a landowner has when they went home one afternoon to find a company had decided to drill a well in their back yard. No notice was given; no request for permission, they said. After checking with an attorney, they found the law was not on their side.

The State Bar report also points out:

—The lessee has the right to select the surface location at which the well is to be located.

—Commencement of drilling operations upon an agricultural tenant's mature cotton patch did not per se constitute an excessive use of the surface.

—The lessee possesses an express or implied right to install and use pipelines to transport hydrocarbons, as well as waste products, to points within or off the leased premises. The lessee is not liable for damages.

—The mineral owner normally is under no duty to fence off the area in which the operations are being conducted and therefore is not liable for injuries to animals coming within the area of mining operations.

And trying to keep the companies off the land may turn out to be an expensive venture. In the 1980 case of Ball vs. Dillard, the Texas Supreme Court upheld that the mineral lessee has the dominant estate, and the surface lessee had no legal right to deny the mineral lessee access to the land for mineral development purposes.

'Frozen' boy now on road to recovery

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — Jimmy Tontlewicz had been submerged in Lake Michigan for 20 minutes and was limp as a doll when he was pulled from the ice-cold water last week. He had no heartbeat.

But instead of trying to bring the 4-year-old boy around, doctors plunged him into a drug-induced coma.

And instead of warming him up, they literally put him on ice.

Now, a week after he crashed through the ice during a sledding outing with his father, Terrence, there are signs the treatment is working.

Jimmy opened his eyes for the first time Friday and moved his arms and legs, although he was still unconscious. He continued to move on Saturday.

His thumb moved when his mother squeezed his hand. The monitor measuring his brain waves beeped when she whispered in his ear. Preliminary results of a brain scan showed its function to be normal.

"I think he's doing remarkably," said his father.

Doctors at Children's Memorial Hospital say the child, still in a coma to control pressure inside his skull, may be on the road to a complete recovery.

Tontlewicz and his wife, Kathy, have kept an around-the-clock vigil with their son's E.T. doll at his bedside. "He's been taught not to be afraid of anything...to be a tough guy," Tontlewicz said.

Since the accident, Jimmy's parents have been flooded with cards, gifts and flowers.

Texas woman seeks monetary damages in UFO sighting

"I got so sick that I had to crawl back to bed and get my husband to get Colby up off the floor," she said.

Mrs. Cash said she was even sicker. Her eyes swelled shut, she became delerious, and large egg-size blisters appeared on her face and head. And all her hair fell out. She was hospitalized for one week and again for two more weeks.

Mrs. Cash had operated a diner, where Mrs. Landrum worked part-time, but her illness forced her to give it up. She eventually moved to Alabama, where family would care for her.

Mrs. Landrum said she had to leave her other job at a grocery store because her vision was too poor and her sores too unsightly.

"I had a woman in church ask me why I came to church in that kind of shape," she says. "When you're really hurting and need someone to understand, you can count all your friends on one finger."

Her son and daughter-in-law and three children moved into the tiny metal-frame home in which she and her husband live to help care for her and share expenses.

She said Colby had nightmares until one month ago and still panics when he sees helicopters on television.

Some nights, Mrs. Landrum would show her grandson the stars."I tried to show him nothing out there was there to hurt him."

She said her lifestyle has changed since the incident.

"It upsets me a lot, but I've learned to cope with it," she says. "I stay away from town and stay away from people because I hate talking about it all the time."

She said that she, her grandson and her friend were chronically ill the year following the sighting and still become ill from time to time.

"I can tell when I'm fixing to be sick because the blisters start coming up," she says.

The three went to Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin hoping to get help with their medical problems, but their efforts proved fruitless. They twice filed administrative claims for medical treatment and were refused both times.

"Those doctors up there — they had the facilities and they could have doctored us if they wanted to," she says. "I kept telling them all we wanted was medical help for me and the little boy."

Peter Gerston, a New York lawyer handling the UFO lawsuit, said the government has denied responsibility for the incident. He quoted an Air Force statement that reads, "Our investigation has revealed no evidence of involvement by any military personnel, equipment or aircraft in this alleged case."

But Gerston contended Air Force investigators found no evidence only because they didn't have access to highly classified information.

"They are not willing to come forward and reveal the type of object to help three people," he said.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Parties shift into high gear for political season

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — While the heads of Texas' two largest political parties may not agree on some matters, they are in agreement on some concerning the current campaign season.

One is that the U.S. Senate contest should bring large numbers of voters to the polls for the May 5 primary.

Another is that registering voters, and turning them out, will be crucial in determining what the outcome of key races will be. And both expect record turnouts.

None of those items appears particularly startling, nor does the fact that the parties are starting to shift into higher gears as the political season advances.

Sherman attorney Bob Slagle, chairman of the Texas Democratic Party, reports that "everything is proceeding according to form" as far as his party's efforts are concerned.

The Democrats will launch their big voter resistration effort in March, aiming at bringing half a million more voters into the party's ranks.

Slagle says the Democrats will be concentrating on "precincts with Democratic tendencies, whereever they are in the state."

Others are aiming at particular groups, including efforts to register minorities and labor union members.

Texas AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard says labor's voter registration effort is "ahead of schedule,"with computer matching of union members and voter registration lists.

AFL-CIO plans to have those matches made by Feb. 15, and then to be "in the field" until April 5 "in a concentrated effort to register our membership," Hubbard reports. That effort is expected to increase participation by labor union families by 15 percent, he says.

Hubbard notes the AFL-CIO has 320,000 union members, "so we figure we'll touch upwards of a million people with our effort."

"We're very optimistic about what we'll be able to do," he says, "more so than in 1982," which turned out to be "one of our best years" for Texas races.

Slagle says that the Democratic effort also is on schedule from a financial aspect, with about one-third of the planned expenditure made, and paid for, with funds for the other two-thirds committed.

Funds for party efforts, he adds, are "always tight...even for the Republicans that's true."

State Republican Party Chairman George Strake says he's both happy and relieved to report that for the GOP funds have been less of a problem in recent months.

Stake reports the party has retired its $477,000 which existed when he took over, and now has "a substantial amount of money in the till."

The Republicans have been installing a new computer system, which Strake says will improve operations, and have added staff for the party headquarters.

"Generally," Strake says, "our people are upbeat. I'm pleased with the way we've calmed down our differences." He reports the Texas party is working with the Republican National Committee on voter registration, as well as other programs. Republicans, he says, have always stressed voter registration, and that work is continuing through various county chairmen.

The GOP is aiming first at the 47 largest counties, with RNC assistance, with the state party working alone on other smaller counties. The GOP also is encouraging all those on its mailing lists to register family, friends and relatives, he says.

While it's not clear who's signing them up, registered voters in Texas continue to increase.

Figures from the Secretary of State's office show that in mid-January, 6,675,561 were on the voter registration rolls, compared to 6,475,176 in January, 1983, and 6,093,632 in January, 1982.

Of course, judging by past elections, if half of those who are registered actually take the time to vote it will be a major surprise.

Slagle says 1.5 million, "maybe more," will take part in the Democratic primary; the GOP won't speculate on numbers but hopes for a record turnout.

Slagle feels the Democrats are on their way to victory in the Senate and presidential races; Strake is "getting cautiously optimistic" that the Republicans can hold on to the seat being vacated by John Tower.

In addition to re-electing Ronald Reagan, Strake says, "our focus is on the Senate race, and holding that seat."

FBI hunting for robbers

DALLAS (AP) — Police and the FBI are searching for three "professional" and "businesslike" men who held a bank president's family hostage and forced him to get an undisclosed amount of money from his bank.

Robert Bigham, president of the Promenade National Bank in Richardson, said he and his daughter were wired with what the gunmen said were bombs that could be detonated by remote control.

Investigators would not say if the devices were real. They "very much appeared" to Bigham's family to be bombs and seemed to Bigham to be radio-controlled, said Dallas police spokesman Ed Spencer.

Bigham, 45, told police the men, wearing fatigues and ski masks, were waiting at the back door of his home when he let his dog out about 7 a.m. Friday.

The men woke his daughter Jene, 18, and his wife Barbara, 40, tied them to chairs and ordered Bigham to go to his bank to withdraw money, Bigham said.

Gas rates approved

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission on Friday approved a $1.6 million decrease in contract gas rates between Exxon Gas System Inc. and Houston Lighting & Power Co., effective this past Jan. 1.

The change will lower the cost of gas sold through the contract from $4.246 per MMbtu — million British thermal units — to $3.823 per MMbtu.

Houston Lighting & Power uses the gas as fuel for electrical power generation in the Houston area.

Jesse Jackson loses battle to change rules

Copley News Service

Jesse Jackson

WASHINGTON — The Rev. Jesse Jackson Friday promised to fight all the way to the floor of the Democratic National Convention after he lost his bid to get party officials to change the rules that might improve the chances for him and other longshot Democratic presidential candidates.

Accusing the party's leadership of ignoring a "fundamental injustice" that aided front-running candidates and limited participation by the poor and minorities within the party, Jackson said he would not give up his fight.

However, DNC chairman Charles Manatt said later it was too late to change the rules.

"I think enough is enough now on the party rules — enough is enough about trying to have anyone push around the Democratic Party," Manatt said.

Jackson's long-awaited confrontation with the Democratic National Committee's executive committee failed to materialize when he boycotted the session after determining his efforts to win an agreement before speaking to the group were doomed.

Even with the backing of former Vice President Walter Mondale's presidential campaign manager, Jackson could not convince Manatt and the rest of the executive committee to support reducing the percentage of votes a candidate must get in a congressional district before winning any convention delegates from 20 percent to 10 percent.

SEVERAL HOURS OF closed-door negotiations involving Jackson, Manatt, Mondale campaign manager Robert Beckel, Georgia Democratic Party chairman Bert Lance and others went unrewarded when the executive committee unanimously pledged to support the rules as written.

Jackson's efforts were aimed at altering the party rules drafted two years ago by a commission headed by North Carolina Gov. James Hunt. Those rules were written with strong backing from supporters of Mondale and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., then both considered the strongest contenders for the nomination.

It was just last November, after he officially declared his candidacy that Jackson announced he would challenge the rules which he felt benefited the stronger candidates at the expense of the party's poor and minorities, including small interest groups which are not large enough to get 20 percent of the vote in a congressional district for their candidate.

Jackson, who had wanted a one-person, one-vote distribution, said he was prepared to accept the 10 percent threshold and would go along with allowing the states to voluntarily decide on whether or not to cut the current requirement in half.

Jackson said the threshold is so critical to the race that without the change the bottom four or five candidates could be forced out of the contest by March.

FACED WITH CERTAIN defeat, Jackson decided to speak to the press instead of the executive committee.

"I cannot conceal my disappointment over the failure of our leadership to address a very fundamental injustice within the party," Jackson said.

But, he added, he would not be diverted from his mission or the Democratic Party.

"We hope this matter can be resolved before the convention in San Francisco, but let the record show that we will not lose sight of our collective need to remove the repressive Reagan regime in 1984," Jackson said.

"We're not going to back away from the party, we're not going another way," Jackson said. "We're going to fight within the party, we're going to appeal to the (DNC) judicial council, we're going to consult with our own legal counsel."

Gary, Ind. Mayor Ricard Hatcher, who is Jackson's campaign chairman and a vice chairmain of the DNC, said Jackson decided not to address the executive committee because "the deck was stacked against us from the start."

"I AM DISAPPOINTED in my party," Hatcher said. "We are attempting to create a party that includes people, that does not exclude people."

"Rev. Jackson has made every effort to seek agreement in spite of the fact he was told even before we came to Washington that the deck, in effect, had been stacked, the deal had already been cut, that there was no chance that the executive committee would be responsive to those very legitimate concerns that he had," Hatcher said.

Beckel said the Mondale campaign — leading in every major poll — was prepared to support the change if it could be negotiated.

Jackson also reportedly had the support — some admittedly lukewarm — of several southern Democratic state chairmen who he met with before the executive committee went into session.

Both Hatcher and Jackson insisted a potential agreement on reducing the threshold to 10 percent was within reach before Manatt left the private meetings and went to the executive committee for a final time.

However, Manatt insisted there was no such agreement.

MANATT SAID HE told Jackson three different times during a meeting last month that the party could not change the presidential selection rules but he also agreed to let Jackson address the winter meeting of the DNC which was scheduled to accomodate him Friday.

Manatt said the only agreement he might have been able to agree to was one that would look at the "sense of the executive committee directing the (DNC) compliance review committee that if a state so chose to lower the 20 percent to 10 percent that that per se would not rule them out of compliance."

"It didn't seem like there was much support for that," he said.

While Manatt said he carried the proposal to other committee members, there were indications he himself was one of the biggest opponents of any change.

He said if the issue had been raised months ago it probably would have had sufficient support and time to make that change.

Residents of Tampico, Ill., are upset that President Reagan's trip to dedicate his boyhood home in Dixon, Ill., in February doesn't include a visit to their town. Paul Nicely is particularly irked. He owns the above building on Tampico's Main Street where, in an upstairs apartment, Nelle Wilson Reagan gave birth to Ronald Reagan.

Reagan insults residents of his birthplace

TAMPICO, Ill. (AP) — President Reagan will celebrate his birthday next month in the Illinois town where he grew up, but residents of his birthplace in Tampico — just 25 miles away — are hurt and insulted that he isn't coming here.

At stake, local folks say, is Tampico's place in history. Some also say a visit from Reagan — pronounced "Reegun" in these parts — could rejuvenate their dying agricultural town. And some are forgiving about the whole thing.

"How many parents are there whose children have done them wrong, who come right back loving the kids?" said Dean Verdick, 59, a farmer who has lived in the area all his life. "That's how it is with Tampico and Reagan."

The president is to travel about 700 miles from Washington on Feb. 6 to celebrate his 73rd birthday in Dixon. He is not scheduled to travel the 25 additional miles to his birthplace.

"I just can't understand why his helicopter can't fly from Dixon and land on the football field. All he has to do is wave and let us sing 'Happy Birthday,'" said Howard Batten, mayor to the 947 people of Tampico.

The town still plans a birthday bash for Reagan at the high school, and Batten doesn't think many townspeople will accept a White House invitation to join the festivities in Dixon.

Peter Roussel, a White House deputy press secretary, said Saturday the president wasn't aware of the Tampico party.

"We weren't aware of this, but the president is looking forward to his visit and to people from the area participating in the occasion at Dixon)," Roussel said.

Reagan is to begin his trip by dedicating the two-story house his family rented for four years in Dixon after moving from Tampico in 1920. He left Dixon in 1932 after graduating from Eureka College — which he also plans to visit — and went on to a radio job in Iowa and a movie career in Hollywood before entering politics.

The Dixon festivities irk Paul Nicely, who owns the brick building on Tampico's Main Street where, in an upstairs apartment, Nelle Wilson Reagan gave birth Feb. 6, 1911, to 10-pound Ronald Wilson Reagan.

Nicely said "Dixon's being choreographed" by leaders of the larger and more affluent town who want the lion's share of whatever reflected glory is available.

Tampico residents say their town is dying and some are convinced a visit by Reagan could help stall — if not reverse — the process. The town reached its peak around the turn of the century, when it was the flourishing headquarters for construction of a now-defunct canal.

"I don't think we're dead yet because Reagan is alive. A visit by him would give us credibility. It would be like a shot of insulin for a diabetic that lasts years," said Nicely.

Reagan's birthplace is historically more significant than his boyhood home in Dixon, Nicely said.

"But Tampico is not a period of time he (Reagan) can remember fondly; he was too young," he conceded. "His memories are of high school and after."

He fears history may relegate Tampico to a footnote, if that.

Still, few in Tampico hold the president solely responsible for the perceived slight.

"I don't know as we can blame it all on him. There are a lot of people running his schedule," said Nicely's wife, Helen.

Reagan visited Tampico during his losing bid for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination. He also was grand marshall of the 1950 cheese festival, which was replaced by the high school homecoming festivities after the town's creamery folded.

Most recently, in the 1980 campaign, Reagan came as close as the Rock Falls airport 10 miles northeast. Many Tampico residents saw him then.

Virgil McKenna, 61, who remembers Reagan as a lifeguard on the Rock River, recently reminded friends at the Good Times Tap across the street from Reagan's old home: "He said in '76 he'll be back. He'll be back."

Baby seats given to motorists

LANCASTER, Calif. (AP) — Using $3,500 in federal and local funds, Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies and California Highway Patrol officers in this high-desert community have started handing out baby seats to motorists to protect toddlers.

Under the state's new Child Restraint Law, motorists can get a $59 ticket if infant passengers don't have proper safeguards.

Lancaster's program, which began Friday and is the first of its kind in the state, gives offending motorists 30 days to either buy the baby seat loaned to them by the officers or acquire one of their own to get the citation dismissed.

Lancaster, about 50 miles north of downtown Los Angeles, has a population of just over 52,000.

Women discharged from army

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — Four enlisted women accused of homosexuality have been recommended for honorable discharges by their commanding officers, an Army spokeswoman said.

The recommendations were made Friday after the women waived a formal hearing on the homosexuality allegations last week, said Fort Leavenworth spokeswoman Janet Wray.

Four other enlisted women are accused of homosexuality, Ms. Wray said. One of those four has waived her right to a hearing, but the other three cases will be heard by a military board, she said.

Founder warns against groups

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — In a tape-recorded New Year's Eve message to his disciples, Church of Scientology founder L. Ron Hubbard purportedly warned against "greedy" break-away groups seeking to exploit the church for personal gain.

Church spokeswoman Shirley Young said Friday that the tape didn't disclose the 72-year-old Hubbard's whereabouts, but said he was doing "research and writing."

Hubbard's son, Ronald DeWolf, 49, of Nevada, contended in a Riverside Superior Court probate suit last year that his father — who had not been seen publicly since 1980 — was either dead or incompetent to handle his affairs.

A judge dismissed the case after reading a statement with Hubbard's signature that said he was "in seclusion of my own choosing."

'Alert condition' goes into effect

ZION, Ill. (AP) — An "alert condition" went into effect at Commonwealth Edison's nuclear power station here after an instrument pipe broke in Unit I of the facility's twin reactors.

The accident occurred around 4 p.m. Friday when a work crew was attempting to repair a leak in the pipe as the unit was being returned to power.

James G. Toscas, spokesman for Commonwealth Edison, said no one was injured and the mishap presented no danger to the public and did not release radioactivity from the plant.

Hospital probe leads to arrests

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — An undercover investigation at Patton State Hospital led to 20 arrests and the seizure of $25,000 in narcotics inside and outside the institution, officials say.

Don Z. Miller, the hospital's executive director who called in police investigators, said five employees — a cook a psychiatric technician and three food services workers — were arrested Friday at the hospital while another 15 people were arrested outside the hospital.

Bivalves go back 600 million years

Brachiopods, which vaguely resemble clams except that they have two shells of uneven size, are the only animals that have been around for more than 600 million years.

Once thought nearly extinct, these bivalves have been found in large numbers off the New Zealand and Australian coasts. They're distinguished from other bivalves by a stalk or pedicle that can be moved in and out of a protrusion called a beak at the creature's tapering end.

Student's papers may be Carter's

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The FBI said Saturday it will study a 4-inch-thick sheaf of papers taken to school by an eighth-grader to determine if they are briefing papers from Jimmy Carter's 1980 presidential campaign.

The documents, taken to a social studies class for a project by 13-year-old Kristin Preble, were sent to Washington on Friday by FBI agents.

James DeLisio, Miss Preble's teacher, said Saturday that dates on the documents — some apparently intended for Carter, others for Press Secretary Jody Powell — coincided with the time of a debate between Carter and Ronald Reagan, who defeated him in the 1980 election.

Last summer, White House Chief of Staff James M. Baker III confirmed reports that the Reagan campaign had obtained copies of a briefing book prepared to help Carter in a debate a week before the 1980 election.

Baker has said he received copies of the briefing papers from the campaign director, William Casey. Casey, now CIA director, has said he does not recall seeing the briefing papers during the campaign.

Rep. Donald J. Albosta, D-Mich., chairman of a House subcommittee investigating how the Reagan camp obtained the papers, indefinitely postponed public hearings on the matter last Wednesday. But he said he would continue taking sworn statements from unidentified individuals to try to clear up conflicts between testimony given to the House and the FBI, which conducted its own probe.

The student said her father had found the papers in a hotel room last July at a convention in another, unspecified city, according to DeLisio.

Syrian-backed insurgents shell Gemayel's palace

No casualties were reported at the palace, where the 41-year-old president was meeting with university alumni, but state radio said two army corporals were killed and another soldier wounded elsewhere during the barrages.

Radio stations blared warnings to residents to remain indoors and to motorists to stay off highways when the shelling of population centers began at mid-morning Saturday for a second consecutive day.

Hundreds of families huddled in basements and bomb shelters, and streets were deserted in east Beirut and suburban Baabda, Hadath, Fayadieh and Jamhour.

The shelling subsided in the afternoon, then was renewed in the evening in Lebanon's central mountains, where army positions came under artillery fire.

No civilian casualties were reported. On Friday, 11 civilians were killed in Christian neighborhoods of Beirut and in Druse areas of the mountains.

A four-shell salvo crashed into Gemayel's two-story hilltop villa while he was inside giving an audience to alumni of the Lebanese University's school of journalism, a spokesman said.

Most of the palace staff rushed for shelter in the basement of the building, located in the pine woods of suburban Baabda five miles east of Beirut.

But the president was unruffled and continued his audience in a central first-floor conference hall, said the spokesman who, in keeping with government practice, declined to be identified.

Leftist guerrillas black out eastern half of El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas blasted a power station with bazookas and automatic rifle fire, blacking out the eastern half of El Salvador before government forces drove them off Saturday.

Four national guardsmen were killed and two wounded in the attack at San Rafael Cedros, 24 miles east of San Salvador, a Defense Ministry spokesman said. There were no reports of rebel casualties.

The raid and another on the town of Santo Domingo, three miles farther east, appeared aimed at diverting public attention and military resources from a major army counterinsurgency drive that began Friday in the eastern province of Usulutan.

One civil defense man was killed in Santo Domingo, in San Vicente province, which was held by the rebels for four hours before they retreated, said a local military commander who asked not to be identified.

At least 100 guerrillas attacked the electrical station late Friday night, another local commander said. Army troops, backed by air force jets and helicopters armed with machine guns, drove back the guerrillas by dawn, he said.

Military sources said the substation was not heavily damaged but residents reported electricity was cut off to six provinces: Cuscatlan, San Vicente, La Union, Usulutan, San Miguel and Morazan.

Army sources in Usulutan City reported heavy fighting in San Agustin, near the Lempa River 55 miles east of San Salvador, as the army began an operation to clear the province of guerrillas and begin resettlement and development projects.

The sources, who also asked anonymity, said by telephone that the fighting occurred before dawn near the rebel stronghold in a rich cotton-producing area of the mainly agricultural province.

Fighting also was reported around San Jorge, 15 miles east of San Agustin.

There were no reports of casualties, but people who live near the military hospital in San Salvador said ambulances were arriving early Saturday.

Meanwhile, President Alvaro Magana was inaugurating two new U.S.-made temporary bridges Saturday across the Lempa River near the remains of the Cuscatlan bridge, blown up by guerrillas on New Year's Day.

Russians mark death of Lenin

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union on Saturday marked the 60th anniversary of the death of its first leader, Vladimir Ilyich Lenin, with an outpouring of adoration for the man Pravda said is "always with us — in our hearts and in our actions."

Lenin, who led the Soviet Union from 1917 until his death in 1924, is revered with a zeal approaching religious fervor. Every Soviet citizen learns Lenin's life story in early youth and every good Communist Party member must be completely familiar with his copious writings.

Both his birthday in April and the January anniversary of his death are celebrated with official ceremonies.

Hundreds of thousands of statues of Lenin adorn sidewalks and squares across the country and demand for them is so great that Moscow sculptors have called Lenin "the breadwinner," knowing they can sell any statue of him they make.

The authorities encourage newly married couples to leave bouquets at his Red Square mausoleum and they spare no opportunity to praise him.

The extent of feeling for Lenin was evident in memorial articles on the front pages of most national newspapers Saturday — the 60th anniversary of his death.

"Victorious banner of our epoch," said the military paper Red Star, which printed a large front-page photograph dated October 1922 next to its article.

In Lenin, Radio Moscow said that in Lenin, "a great mind and vast erudition were combined with an unquenchable desire for justice."

"Lenin is always with us — in our hearts and in our actions," the Communist Party daily Pravda said in a front-page editorial.

Quoting a famous line from the Communist poet Vladimir V. Mayakovsky, Pravda headlined its story, "Our knowledge, strength and weapon."

Television and radio stations scheduled somber programs of classical music and showed some of the dozens of films that have been made about Lenin's life.

For most of the country, however, it was a normal Saturday — time to work, shop, go to an ice hockey match — and Muscovites went about their business much as usual.

In 1974, on the 50th anniversary of Lenin's death, party leaders went to Red Square and laid a wreath at the red and black granite mausoleum housing his body.

U.S. diplomat talks to Angolans about Namibia, sources say

CIDADE DA PRAIA, Cape Verde (AP) — A U.S. diplomat met secretly with Angolan officials Saturday for talks that could be aimed at U.S. recognition of Angola as part of a plan to bring independence to South-West Africa, diplomatic sources said.

The sources, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition they remain anonymous, said the U.S. deputy assistant secretary of state for southern African affairs, Frank Wisner, headed the U.S. delegation to the meetings in this West African island nation.

South African officials also were present at the talks, the sources said, and possibly were drawing up a calendar for future talks with Angola aimed at solving the conflict over South-West Africa, which also is called Namibia.

Cape Verde state radio on Saturday afternoon reported that secret talks were taking place on the islands. But the radio said it could not "break the seal of secrecy that is so important to the success of such negotiations."

The broadcast was the first official confirmation that talks were being held here, but did not say which nations were involved, or what they were discussing.

South Africa's white minority government administers the territory of South-West Africa. It recently ended a six-week invasion that struck as far as 120 miles into Angola to attack pro-independence Namibian guerrillas based there.

Wisner on Friday started talks with an Angolan delegation led by the interior minister, Lt. Col. Manuel Alexandre Rodrigues, the sources said.

Calls to the U.S. Embassy in Cape Verde went unanswered Saturday. But in Lisbon, the Portuguese Foreign Ministry said Wisner was expected there in the next few days.

Both the Angolan and South African governments have declined to comment on the reports of secret talks in Cape Verde, whose government hosted two rounds of direct negotiations between Angola and South Africa a year ago.

The United States is the only Western power that has not yet recognized the Marxist government of Angola, which took power following victory in a civil war that broke out after independence from Portugal in 1975.

Talks aimed at establishing diplomatic relations between Angola and the United States have taken place sporadically since mid-1981 and several major U.S. corporations have interests in Angola.

The Angolan government of President Jose Eduardo dos Santos has maintained that the United States cannot be a legitimate mediator in southern Africa until it establishes full diplomatic relations with Angola.

world in brief

Norwegian official arrested, accused of being Soviet spy

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Arne Treholt, a recently appointed Foreign Ministry official, has been arrested as a suspected spy for the Soviet Union, authorities said Saturday.

The 41-year-old assistant press secretary was arrested Friday night at Oslo's Fornebu Airport, the director of public prosecutions, Magnar Fiorheim, said in a statement.

Norwegian state radio said Treholt would be arraigned Monday.

The radio said Treholt has admitted that he has met with agents of the KGB, the Soviet security police, on several occasions and gave them classified documents.

Tokyo again covered with snow

TOKYO (AP) — Tokyo, digging out from its heaviest snowfall in 15 years, was blanketed by snow again Saturday. The Fire Defense Agency said more than 1,000 people fell and were injured on icy city sidewalks, railway station platforms and stairways during the past three days.

It also said there were 93 weather-related traffic accidents that resulted in hospitalization of 91 more people.

The Japanese capital got 8.7 inches of snow on Thursday — the most since 1969. Weathermen said Saturday's snowfall would total two to four inches.

Airport explosion kills one

SINGAPORE (AP) — An explosion Saturday at an exhibit of aerospace technology and military hardware killed one person and injured eight at Changi Airport, a police spokesman said.

One of the eight people hurt was admitted to a hospital, and the seven others were treated and released, the spokesman said.

He said he had no details on the cause of the blast, which was under investigation, but the state-owned Singapore Broadcasting Corp. quoted police sources as saying a grenade launcher attached to an assault rifle triggered accidentally.

The Asia Aerospace Exhibition, in an area away from the main terminal, included civil and military hardware including aircraft, communications equipment, and missiles.

Libyan diplomat attacked

ROME (AP) — Two gunmen shot and critically wounded Libya's top-ranking diplomat in Italy on Saturday outside his home, police said.

The two young, well-dressed men walked up to Ammar D. el Taggazy in broad daylight and fired several pistol shots at him before escaping on foot, according to Italian news reports.

El Taggazy is the head of the Popular Committee, which represents the regime of Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy in the Italian capital. The committee was formed in September 1979 and functions as a substitute for the post of ambassador.

Italy's Socialist president, Sandro Pertini, expressed "profound indignation" over the attack, his office said.

The Italian news agency ANSA quoted police as saying the gunmen were "elegantly dressed" and used a silencer-equipped pistol. It was not known if a second gun was used.

The men intercepted el Taggazy as he walked to his car, which was parked in a garage beneath his apartment on the narrow, winding Via Mogadiscio, in a residential district of northern Rome, ANSA said.

The gunmen dragged him to a corner of the building's driveway and fired shots from a pistol hidden inside a plastic bag, the report said.

Officials at Rome's Umberto I Hospital said the 43-year-old diplomat was in critical condition. He reportedly was wounded in the head, the abdomen and in one shoulder. The officials said el Taggazy was undergoing surgery Saturday night.

Police combed the area in search of the two men, but reported no leads on the attack.

Midland going with Raiders by 2-1 count

From Staff Reports

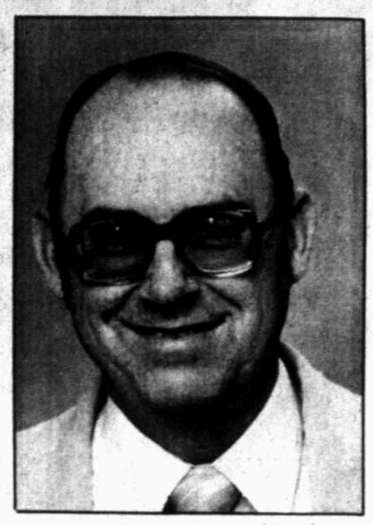
Super Bowl XVIII, the conclusion of the 1983 football season. Who will be the winner to go on and rule supreme for the next year? Will it be the defending champion Washington Redskins or the Raiders of Los Angeles-Oakland?

In a recent poll, conducted by the sports staff of the Reporter-Telegram, Los Angeles was the favorite team by more than a 2-1 margin.

However, because of comments by certain individuals against the Redskins, they being rivals of Midland's beloved Dallas Cowboys, one has to wonder about the accuracy of this poll.

With all that aside, here is what they — the famous, the unheralded and those just standing on the street corner when we walked by — had to say about the game.

Lee Coach Jack Tayrien...
..Likes 'Skins and special teams



Mayor Thane Akins...
...Still rooting for Dallas

Sheriff Dallas Smith...
...Raiders win coin flip

Judge Bill Ahders...
...Rules in favor of Raiders

Never let it be said that coaches and athletic directors are in complete agreement about the game of football:

Pat Culpepper, former Midland High football coach: "I talked with Joe Washington's dad recently at the NCAA convention and he said that Joe and the Redskins were worried about the Raiders. Joe thinks that Los Angeles is tough and smart. Joe's dad said that he had never heard his son talk like that about another team.

"Still, I think the scrambling ability of quarterback Joe Theismann could be the difference. I'm sticking with Washington by a 20-17 margin."

Midland Athletic Director Gil Bartosh: "I'm going to pick the Raiders. They've got playoff experience and have a better team. The Raiders know how to close it out and win the big one. Los Angeles will be able to stop Riggins because they have better all-around personel. The first time the two teams played the Raiders had about five starters out of the game. The score may be something like 30-24.

Jack Tayrien, Midland Lee head football coach: "I believe the Redskins will win. They are on a pretty good roll and I don't think LA can establish enough of a running game against the Washington defense and the Raiders can't live with the pass alone. I do think the game will be decided by the special teams. A big play by the special teams somewhere in the game will be the difference. Washington to win 27-14."

Assistant Athletic Director Ed Nixon: "I'm going with the Oakland Raiders. They will always be Oakland to me. They seem to be getting better and Washington seems to have peaked out already. The Redskins didn't look too good in their last game. The score will be 21-20."

Al Davis may have moved his Raiders to Los Angeles, but most soothsayers interviewed refused to recognize the fact. Los Angeles is still Oakland, either out of habit or defiance of Al.

Wesley Graham, pharmacist: "The Redskins will win because they have been so dominating all year."

H.A. Tuck, Midland College information office: "The Raiders — mainly because I'm rooting for anyone who can beat Washington."

John Lowe, Chaparral basketball loyalist: "I really don't care. America's Team is not in it. But if pressured, I can't go with the AFC. I've got to stick with the NFC."

Bill Schammel, Midland Cubs GM: "There's no doubt in my mind. It's going to be worse than anybody thinks. Oakland will beat Washington by 12 to 14 points."

Bill Malone, who lives in Midland between WAC officiating assignments in Hawaii, San Diego, Las Vegas...: "Oakland. The Raiders were beaten by them once and it has been a long time, but they've been there before and they're ready to go."

Mark Thomas, renowned jogger and former Midland Cubs pitcher: "Washington. Why? I just think they are the best team. Besides, they are hot. They embarrassed the Los Angeles Rams. I think the close call against San Francisco just woke them up."

Andrew Jordan: "I don't know who's going to win. I hope the Redskins do, I don't know why. I guess because they beat Dallas."

Super Bowl finesse jumps to back alley

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — There has been very little talk of finesse in this Super Bowl. The Los Angeles Raiders and the Washington Redskins don't think in those terms.

They are playing today's game in Tampa Stadium. They could just as easily decide matters in some alley.

The more-than-72,000 fans attending — many of whom have paid several times the $60 face-value ticket price to be there — and millions of television viewers are expecting an exercise in unbridled violence.

These are more than two football teams. They comprise a social statement — a statement which begins, "See this fist?"

LYLE ALZADO of the Raiders, a defensive end with the habit of saying and doing exactly what is on his mind, doesn't talk about stopping John Riggins, the Redskins' crushing fullback.

Alzado talks about killing him, and grins.

The way two pit bulls might grin — with that low, throaty growl seeping between clenched teeth — before hurling themselves toward the other's jugular.

The buzzword of this game, of the Raiders' whole season, has been "intimidation." Not that anyone on any pro football team — much less a champion — can really be bothered by a lot of talk and a little mayhem.

Certainly not Riggins and the rest of the Redskins. They thrive on it.

Last Oct. 2 in Washington, the Raiders tried some rough stuff. By the time they cooled off, there were enough flags lying about to stock a small parade. But the 'Skins never backed off.

And after the Raiders rallied from a 20-7 deficit to take a 35-20 lead with 7½ minutes remaining, Washington staged its own comeback and won 37-35.

Neither team is calling that a preview of this National Football League championship game. Ancient history, they say. The oddsmakers, too, have written off that final score. Those experts have established Washington as a 3½-point favorite.

The game is the culmination of a season which began with the bitter taste of 1982's costly and divisive strike, which encountered dramatic drops in attendance and TV ratings at the start, which experienced several blemishes of negative publicity connecting league figures to drugs and gambling, and which followed a challenge to the NFL's surpremacy by the infant United States Football League.

It is interesting that this Super Bowl is being played in the home of the NFL's worst team of 1983, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers — and the USFL's most successful franchise, the Tampa Bay Bandits. Were it not for the fact that it brings together the NFL's two best and most colorful teams, this game might have been written off as the final letdown in an often-disappointing season.

WASHINGTON AND Los Angeles each will be seeking to match a feat achieved by the unquestioned dynasty of the 1970s, the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Redskins are attempting to become the first team since the Steelers to win successive Super Bowls (Pittsburgh did it twice). Washington defeated Miami 27-17 last year when Riggins set records with 166 yards on 38 rushes. It evened their Super Bowl record at 1-1.

The Raiders, appearing in their fourth Super Bowl, are attempting to become the second team to win more than two of them (Pittsburgh won four). When they called Oakland their home, they defeated Philadelphia 27-10 three years ago and Minnesota 32-14 four years before that.

If Riggins is the heart of the Redskins' offense, then Joe Theismann is its soul.

He is a free-spirited conglomerate who somehow found time in 1983 to tear himself away from his dozens of other interests and be one of the league's best quarterbacks, the NFL's Most Valuable Player and Offensive Player of the Year.

He delights in throwing touchdown passes. He also delights in throwing blocks. He will go out of his way to try and flatten someone who outweighs him by 100 pounds. He runs with abandon, occasionally disdaining the safety of the hook slide or the sideline and choosing instead to try and elude or vault over the behemoths of the trenches.

The Raiders have promised to do more than merely muss Theismann's carefully coiffed hair.

"I would expect it to be very physical. If I'm disappointed, I will be very happy," Theismann said. "I know if I go out on the field expecting a stroll through the park I'm going to get my head handed to me.

"Like I've said before, I'm going to talk to some of the local folks here and find out if there's a tough street, an alley where I can get beat up once or twice, and that'll get me ready for Sunday.

Theismann's counterpart is Jim Plunkett, who has grasped a couple of remarkably good breaks — bad breaks for two other quarterbacks — and parlayed them into a pair of extraordinary seasons.

In 1980, when he was languishing on the Raiders' bench, seemingly playing out the final weekends of a career that crashed years before, Dan Pastorini suffered a broken leg. Plunkett was thrust into the starting role.

He and the Raiders responded phenomenally, climaxing that season by becoming the first wild-card winner of a Super Bowl. Plunkett threw three touchdown passes against the Eagles, one of them covering a record 80 yards, and was named the game's Most Valuable Player.

Midway in 1983, though, the Raiders were ready to write "finis" to his career. They signed their No. 2 quarterback, Marc Wilson, to a five-year, $4 million contract to keep him away from the USFL, and gave him the starting job.

In that first start, he threw three TD as the Raiders defeated Dallas. Two weeks later he sustained a shoulder separation and Plunkett was back. He rallied the Raiders to victory in that game. They won five of the remaining six games and routed Pittsburgh and Seattle in the playoffs.

Unlike the Redskins, who send Riggins crashing into the middle of the line on so many first downs, "we throw before we run," says Plunkett, an intensely private person who shuns the spotlight as much as Theismann seeks it out.

"Every time I drop back, I'm looking for that deep ball," Plunkett says. "If I don't get it, then I'll dump it off. Although our coaches have changed over the years, the type of football the Raiders play hasn't — stretch the defense out, throw it long. Sometimes your percentage won't be as high, but you'll have a lot of long gainers during the course of a game."

It's a Super Bowl gang war

Two years ago when San Francisco and Cincinnati met in the Super Bowl, you didn't know who to root against.

This year, a similar dilemma still exists, only it's a case of who do you root for?

Still, this is one many are looking forward to with relish. Some because it could be the best in the history of the game, which isn't necessarily saying all that much, since the Super Bowl has been blessed with some real bricks.

Others figure it will be the biggest gang fight in the annals of sport.

PUTTING IT in boxing terms, this is Fritzie Zivic against Tony Galento. Fritzie was an all-thumbs welterweight and Galento was a heavyweight who always finished his beer before he broke off the bottle and used it on his opponent. Because of the weight differential the two never met, but some with vivid imaginations picture the Redskins-Raiders meeting as what it would have been like.

Washington and Oakland, as apparently Midland fans will always remember them, are both physical teams and even without the extracurriculars, it would be a rough match.

Any team that beats Washington is going have to exercise a certain amount of violence to stop the thundering hoofbeats of John Riggins, who could be the key.

Riggins gives the Redskins the weapon to put the ball in the end zone from inside the 10 without having to pass or settle for a field goal. In the Redskins case, that's the last thing they want to be forced to settle for, right Mark Moseley?

Marcus Allen, for all his talents, isn't that type bludgeon. He has got to find a crevice someplace. He lacks the size to make his own.

Stopping Riggins is not the question. It can be done. But how many people isn't it going to take to do it. Tony Dorsett can embarrass an opponent when everything is going right by blowing a game to kingdom-come with his quick acceleration and swiftness, but he isn't going to be beat you by himself. Riggins is that type of back. It's not the statistics a Riggins, Harris, Csonka, Campbell compile, it's what they can do to you in close.

The more troops it takes to stop Riggins, the more fun quarterback Joe Theismann is going to have playing catching with Charley Brown.

THE KEY for the Raiders is the defensive secondary. How many turnovers can they manage, which again could be determined on how well the defensive line contains Riggins without rushing reinforcements into the breach.

Theismann has been a model of consistency this year. Jim Plunkett had to be replaced in mid season by Marc Wilson. He has come back to perform brilliantly in the last half of the season.

One thing about Plunkett, this is a guy who has been there before, Rose Bowl to Super Bowl with a trip or two to the Scrap Bowl in between. He may collapse under the Redskins pass rush, but he isn't going to fold under pressure.

The Redskins are a three-point pick. Since the feeling is that it is going to be close, the temptation is to go with Oakland and the points. Still, the inclination is even stronger to stay with the tandem of Riggins and Theismann, which means Washington by four.

And if you are still mourning the fact that the Cowboys aren't in the Super Bowl and feel it will rob the day of some of its luster, look at it this way, at least the Minnesota Vikings, who have participated in some of the Super Bowls worst games, aren't in it.

Arkansas spills Tech's Raiders

By The Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Center Joe Kleine scored 27 points as the University of Arkansas overcame a four-point Texas Tech halftime lead and went on to defeat the Red Raiders 67-57 in a Southwest Conference game Saturday night.

Kleine hit eight of 11 field goals and 11 of 14 free throws for the Razorbacks, now 15-2 on the season and tied with Houston for the lead in the Southwest Conference at 6-0. Tech dropped to 9-7 and 3-2.

The Razorbacks trailed the Red Raiders for almost 12 minutes before rallying and pulling out to as much as 15-point lead in the second half.

Tech jumped out front for the first time at 18-17 with 6:48 left in the first half. The Red Raiders led 31-27 at the half. Arkansas took over with 15:06 left in the second half at 37-35.

Texas A&M 68, TCU 62

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — Kenny Brown and Todd Holloway each scored 16 second half points as Texas A&M erased an 11-point deficit and went on to whip Texas Christian 68-62 in Southwest Conference basketball Saturday.

It was a game of two distinctly different halves. TCU took the first one 33-22 and A&M won the second, 46-29. TCU outshot A&M 44.8—25.9 in the first half, but in the second 20 minutes, A&M shot 66.7 and TCU hit only 32.2.

The Aggies increased their season record to 10-7 and their SWC record to 3-3. TCU fell to 8-9 overall and 1-5 in league play.

Brown and Holloway shot over TCU's zone defense with a second half barrage that brought the Aggies back. A&M caught the Horned Frogs at 42-42 with 11:12 mark in the second half and went ahead to stay seconds later at 43-42.

The Aggies did not score a field goal in the last six minutes of play, but made 15 of 18 free throws as the Frogs were forced into fouling situations. TCU's Tracy Mitchell was the game's high scorer with 24 while Carvin Holcombe had 15 and Dennis Nutt 12 for the Frogs.

Holloway led A&M with 22, Brown had 16 and Jimmie Gilbert 14.

TCU led in rebounds, 39-36, as Holcombe pulled down nine. Gilbert had 11 and Brown 9 for the Aggies.

Texas 67, Baylor 47

AUSTIN, Texas — David Seitz scored 20 points in the second half to lift Texas to a 67-47 victory over Baylor in a Southwest Conference basketball game between cellar-dwellers that was televised regionally Saturday night.

The victory ended Texas' losing streak in conference games, dating back to January 1983, at 16 games.

"I couldn't care less who we played," said second-year coach Bob Weltlich. "It could have been the Sisters of the Poor. I'm just happy we won."

While Seitz, who finished with 26 points and nine rebounds, was heating up in the second half, Baylor's shooters were turning ice cold. The Bears hit just 5 of 33 shots in the last 20 minutes.

Texas rebounders gathered in the misses, snagging 26 rebounds just in the second half alone. For the game, the Longhorns controlled the boards, 45-32, and outshot the Bears, 50 to 32 percent.

"We must have missed eight shots within two feet of the basket," said Baylor Coach Jim Haller. "How can a defense have anything to do with you missing a two-foot shot?"

Texas now is 1-4 in conference play while the Bears remain winless at 0-5.

Marcus Bolden added 13 points and Carlton Cooper grabbed 12 rebounds for Texas.

Blackman paces Mav win

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rolando Blackman scored 32 points and Mark Aguirre added 31 Saturday night as the Dallas Mavericks, scoring the first eight points of the final period, beat the Indiana Pacers 118-111 in the National Basketball Association.

The loss was Indiana's eighth in a row, while Dallas snapped a three-game slide.

The Pacers tied it at 95-95, but a basket by Aguirre and two more by Blackman put the Mavericks ahead to stay midway through the final period.

Midlanders favor LA's Raiders

Mike Stevens, manager of Chaparral Center: "I'm taking Oakland because I think the running game of Marcus Allen will aid the Raiders' passing attack. The Raiders will be able to shut down Riggins. It's still going to be a high scoring game, something like 38-31.

Russell Livington, Midland insurance man: "Oakland. I hate Washington."

For a long time, football was a man's game — to watch, to play — but more and more women are getting hooked on the gridiron activities:

Wilma Guthrie: "I enjoy watching, but I get too involved. It's like I'm there running down the field. I haven't thought about who will win. I'll have to watch the first few plays before I can decide who I think is going to win."

Josie Birdwell: "I don't care. I really hope somebody beats Washington. I'll watch it unless I have something better to do."

Cheryl Marsh: "I don't know anything about football. I'm just starting to watch it and just now beginning to understand it. I know when they score a touchdown that's good."

Laurie Johnson: "The Raiders are going to pull the game out in the last few minutes. It's fate, the Raiders are going to win."

The Midland legal system rallied to the defense of the Raiders, but it was a close, if not sentimental, decision:

Judge Barbara Culver: "It looks like it's going to be a close game and probably a high scoring game. I believe the Raiders are going to win. I think it will be an exciting game. Probably more exciting than past Super Bowl games I've seen."

County Judge Bill Ahders: "Los Angeles. My son went to Stanford and Plunkett is a graduate of Stanford. He's such an exceptionally fine man. His parents are blind and he's been ta

Amarillo captures swim title

Dogs win events, but place third

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Ultimately, the way the Midland High Swim Invitational was set up became a factor in the Bulldgos' finishing third overall.

Midland High doesn't have the kind of depth some of its opponents had in the meet held at the City of Midland Swim Team pool. Schools like overall champion Amarillo High or second place finisher San Angelo had the sheer numbers, and that's what prevented MHS from overall victory.

Bulldog coach Jesse Marsh couldn't fault his swimmers. In the boys competition, MHS entries won eight of 11 events. Marsh wasn't thrilled that those victories only added up to a third place net. "We ended up as well as we could have," said Marsh. "It's kind of disappointing to win eight of 11 and still place third in the boys' competition, but they really swam great."

THAT THEY did, as MHS went on to post a record time by David Hartman in the 100 breast stroke and lightning-fast Andrew Jordan in the 50 and 100 freestyle, all first place finishers. Hartman added another first in the 200 individual medley, and Mike Seay claimed victories in the 200 and 500 freestyle. Doc White outpointed his nearest competitor, teammate Brian Ameel, for an easy victory for MHS in the diving competition. As a team, the MHS boys won the 200 medley relay.

Midland's girls found the going similar in their competition, finishing third overall behind (surprise), Amarillo and San Angelo.

Karen Bates won the diving competition for MHS, and Robin Black took third in diving. The girls didn't place in the top three in any other championship finals event, but accumulated enough points for the third place finish.

And although the third places didn't fully satisfy the team or Marsh, the Invitational served its purpose: to give MHS' swimmers a good tune-up before the district meet Feb. 17-18. The site is undetermined but it is likely to be at Odessa Permian.

"Andrew had another super day," Marsh said, recapping the Invitational from an MHS viewpoint. "It was his fastest 50 ever."

DEPTH WAS a worry for Marsh entering the meet, and his fears were well-founded. Amarillo and Angelo's big squads outnumbered MHS, but Marsh developed his team's depth at the meet. A lack of depth in the future "won't hurt us. We'll be in the thick of it because they can only score the top six in an event. We lost 100 points on relays. If you knock those out, we'd have won by 20 points."

And that isn't sour grapes. Amarillo entered three different relay teams in the 400 free and 200 medley. Angelo entered four teams in the 400, and another pair in the 200 medley.

Now, Marsh will rest his team for the district meet. "Some of these other schools will go off to other tourneys now but we're not. We can't afford to lose anybody, so we're gping to try to avoid getting anyone hurt or sick."

By then, MHS may have developed more fully, and if so the Invitational will have played its part. "We saw some young swimmers do very good. It helps to see the light at the end of the tunnel. They are starting to adapt to the overload."

Only Allen knows his goals

By Bill Center
Copley News Service

TAMPA, Fla. — Goals. Marcus Allen has always had them. He sets goals and stores them away in his mind. He doesn't share them with other people. They are his and his alone.

There was a goal earlier this year that Allen wasn't meeting. He won't discuss what it was. He has sworn himself to secrecy.

But it was there, unfilled and chewing at him. For the first time as a football player, Marcus Allen found frustration was a part of his game.

IN WHAT has become a "bigger-than-life" incident, Allen went to Los Angeles Raiders owner Al Davis and coach Tom Flores and asked for the ball more.

"It seemed reasonable at the time," Allen said Friday of his query. He doesn't call it a demand. "I wasn't going to retire if I didn't get the ball more," he explains. "I just felt I wasn't doing my part. I was getting stopped. I was going through something I had never experienced before."

So he asked for more work.

"Al said, 'More work? Run some laps after practice.' That's about as far as it went. The whole thing got blown far out of proportion."

Allen's complaint, however, refuses to go away. It has become the topic of every interview session Allen has participated in this week no matter how many times he says, "It was no big thing."

"If anything, my comments were not a complaint but an act of impatience," Allen said Thursday morning. "I was frustrated. I have not been a running back that long. I expected each game and each season to be better than the previous one. I wasn't living up to my standards; that's about all there was to it."

Chalk it up to inexperience.

Truth is, Marcus Allen, winner of the Heisman Trophy and the NFL's Rookie of the Year in the strike-shortened 1982 season, has been a running back for little more than four years of his career.

He started his career as a high school linebacker and defensive back and at first resisted his switch to quarterback as a junior. "I loved defense," said Allen, who was also a guard in basketball and played five positions on the high school baseball team.

OKLAHOMA RECRUITED Allen as a quarterback, but he decided on USC because the Trojans were seeking him as a safety. "I thought I could play pro football as a safety. I still think I could have made it as a defensive player."

But less than a week into his freshman season at USC, then-Trojan head coach John Robinson shifted Allen from the secondary to tailback. At first it was an insurance policy. The Trojans had found it difficult to recruit a backup for eventual Heisman Trophy winner Charles White.

Allen won rave reviews in late-game cameos that season. Impressed by Marcus' toughness and natural football ability, Robinson next season shifted Allen to fullback to block for White in USC's famed I-formation.

It wasn't until his junior year at USC that Allen was a full-time ball carrier. By the time Allen was finished, he held 12 NCAA records, including most yards rushing in a season (2,342) and most yards per game rushing (212.9). He gained more than 100 yards in 20 of his 21 games as a tailback and totaled 3,905 yards in two years. He also caught 79 passes.

He scored 46 touchdowns, won the Heisman and was a Rose Bowl hero.

"It is funny how things work. Where would I be if I had stayed a safety? The two safeties on that USC team, Ron Lott and Dennis Smith, became All-Americans and are now starting pros. Could I have made it?"

A LOT of people who are paid to know questioned Allen's potential as a running back. When the NFL drafted in 1982, nine teams passed on Allen before the Raiders, who were new to Los Angeles, selected the neighborhood standout. Other Pac-10 backs Darrin Nelson and Gerald Riggs had gone before Allen in the draft.

"I was too slow," said Allen. "I heard that's what some of the scouts said. It was the line, the USC system. It was...."

Two standout years have done little to quiet the critics.

In his Rookie of the Year season, Allen also was the first non-kicker in seven years to lead the league in scoring and he paced the NFL in combined-yards rushing and pass receiving with 1,098. But 1982 was the season of the strike, and anything short of the Washington Redskins was discounted.

So this year he rushed for 1,014 yards, was the top pass-catching back in the NFL and had 12 touchdowns on 1,604 yards net.

At the same time Allen is desirous of more work, his detractors are again lining up to make as much as possible out of his 15 fumbles (11 of which were lost to the other teams) and his 3.8-yard rushing average, with no run longer than 19 yards.

"I'm disappointed by some of the things that have been said," said Allen. "In retrospect, though, it's worked out fine because if there hadn't been so many doubters I probably wouldn't be with the Raiders today."

Now if he could only get the ball more.

"I, myself, really don't know what to make of my feelings," Allen explains.

"It's the goals. They're realistic, but they are also self-imposed pressure — pressure that I need and that feels good inside me.

"Maybe I felt carrying the ball more would do it for me, so I forced the issue a little."

Rod Higgins gets to go home

NEW YORK (AP) — Rod Higgins of the Chicago Bulls, who sustained a concussion last week in a game against the New York Knicks, will be discharged from Lenox Hill Hospital on Monday, Knicks Dr. Norman Scott said.

Higgins, a 6-foot-7 forward, was injured when he crashed to the floor after a collision with the Knicks' Marvin Webster with just 3:04 left in the National Basketball Association game. Wallace Bryant, a 7-foot, 250-pounder Chicago center, then came down on top of Higgins.

After Higgins' accident, he suffered body seizures for several minutes before being taken to the hospital.

"Rod spent a very restful night at Lenox Hill Hospital last night," Scott said Saturday. "We will be removing the intravenous today."

Higgins underwent a series of tests Friday, including a brain scan. Hospital spokeswoman Caroline Cassidy said the brain scan proved normal.

"All test results have been negative," Scott said Saturday.

"I anticipate that Rod will be discharged on Monday morning, Jan. 23," he said.

Your best choice may be a minor emergency clinic . . .

This recent news article points out the advantages of minor emergency clinics, advantages which are available to you at Midland Minor Emergency Center and Westwood Medical Clinic.

Midland Minor Emergency Center
2310 W. Ohio
9 AM-10 PM Everyday

Westwood Medical Clinic
4334 W. Illinois
9 AM-6 PM Mon.-Fri.

Freestanding emergency centers: Usually located in shopping malls or other busy commercial areas and open for long hours, weekends and holidays — times when most private doctors are not available — these walk-in/walk-out facilities are a combination hospital emergency room and private doctor's office.

Of the 900 centers now open around the country, all treat cuts, sprains, fractures, burns and other minor emergencies. Some also treat flu and childhood diseases and give checkups for school and college. All centers have diagnostic equipment right on the premises.

You don't have to make an appointment at one of these centers, and usually you don't have to wait long.

Costs are comparable to those for an office visit in the communities in which they're located, but they're substantially less than the costs for hospital emergency-room visits (see box).

Midland Cubs' George Enright

Count Enright present for Midland banquet

George Enright is so anxious to come back to Midland that he'll be here for the sixth annual Midland Sports Banquet at Green Tree Country Club Feb. 7. That's well before the start of the Texas League season in April.

The 29-year-old from Lake Worth, Fla., played in Midland in 1980 and then took over from Roy Hartsfield as manager of the Chicago Cubs' Texas League farm in June 1, 1981, late in the first half of the pennant race.

Midland finished the first half 10-10 and then compiled a 36-31 record in the second half under Enright. A lot of fans expected Enright back in 1982, but he managed the next two seasons at the A level in the Chicago Cubs' farm system and now, as an experienced veteran, he is coming back.

Enright spent most of his playing days after graduating from Hialeah, the high school not the track, in 1972, in the Chicago White Sox farm system as a catcher. His stops included Sarasota (Gulf Coast), Appleton (Midwest), Iowa (American Association), Knoxville (Southern), the White Sox, Jacksonville (Southern), Omaha and Wichita (both American Association).

Enright's forte as a manager was his rapport with the players. Sometimes promoting a player to manage over what had been teammates results in resentment. But in Enright's case, the players responded in a positive manner to his leadership.

Featured guest speaker on the star-studded program will be Ben Davidson, the one time defensive end of the Oakland Raiders who has gained even more notoriety on those Lite beer ads.

Former New York Yankee pitcher Vernon "Lefty" Gomez, a big hit the last time he made the banquet, will be here while Tex Moritz will serve as master-of-ceremonies.

Tickets for the night are $35, same as they have been for all previous banquets. The social hour will begin at 6:30 p.m. and dinner is at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale at the Midland Cubs baseball offices at Cubs Stadium in Hogan Park.

BMX gears for April run

The West Side Optimist Club Chaparral BMX track in Ulmer Park will begin its racing program in April each Sunday at 3 p.m. Sunday racing will continue thereafter with an extra day of racing added each week.

This season the BAA and Chaparral tracks will offer a beginner's course for youngsters interested in bicycle motocross with video and personal instruction being used to help in the instruction.

An introductory meeting is scheduled for 1 p.m. March 10 at the track. Registration will follow. For information, contact Tom Smith (697 1724) or Dick Galloway (367 0785.

Spurs obtain guard Ron Brewer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs sent a 1985 second-round draft choice and an undisclosed amount of cash to the Golden State Warriors Saturday for guard Ron Brewer, the Spurs announced.

Brewer has averaged 13.5 points a game in the NBA.

Rangers win two

FORSAN — Greenwood's girls basketball team raised its season's record to 17-3 with a 70-32 win over Forsan Friday night in a non-district play.

Dione Dean scored 16 points and Belinda Duke 14 to pace the Rangerettes. Also in double figures were Marla Margarette and Kay Wallace with 10 each.

Greenwood's boys also won emphatically, 55-32, over Forsan with John Gillam, 19 points, and Troy Wallace, 18, leading the way.

Now Cougs can talk Kentucky

HOUSTON (AP) — At last, the Houston Cougars can openly talk about "the Kentucky game."

Although queried constantly throughout the week about Sunday's nationally televised matchup in Kentucky with the third-ranked Wildcats, Houston Coach Guy Lewis and the No. 4 Cougars avoided the subject until several seconds following Friday's 72-42 blowout victory over the Rice Owls.

"We talked about it even though we tried to put it out of our minds," 7-foot center Akeem Olajuwon said following his 10-point, 21-rebound performance Friday. "We have to play hard all time and go for every rebound. You can't play lazy and expect to beat Kentucky. They'll let us play a little more physical than the officials in the SWC."

The Cougars, 16-2 for the season and early season victors over Louisville, will face an even bigger challenge against the Wildcats' Sam Bowie and Melvin Turpin.

"Bowie and Turpin are really a challenge because it's the first time I've ever faced two 7-footers in a game," Olajuwon said.

The Wildcats are into what Coach Joe B. Hall labels a January jinx that cost them back to back losses but it's not fooling Lewis.

"Ten days ago Kentucky was hailed as the greatest college team assembled," Lewis said. "I just can't believe they've deteriorated that much after two losses."

Houston freshman starter Rickie Winslow says Olajuwon will need help in rebounding.

"The other forwards and I have to help Akeem out a lot more on the boards," Winslow said. "We definitely need to play tougher defense."

Winslow played with Kentucky's Winston Bennett and James Blackmon in a schoolboy all-star game last year and Olajuwon met Turpin and Bowie during a magazine's all-American promotion in New Orleans last year.

"When I was in New Orleans, I met Turpin and Bowie and we did everything together so it will seem funny to be against them," Olajuwon said.

Houston captain Michael Young, the Southwest Conference's leading scorer, said Houston would have to show it can't be intimidated.

"Rebounding will be the key to the game," Young said. "Akeem must play tougher. He must be fired up because they'll be fired up. I don't find the game intimidating at all, I like to play in a game of this magnitude.

"We'll learn something even if we loose. It's an important NCAA type practice game.

Lewis figures the Cougars will be at a disadvantage on the court and in the stands.

"Going against Kentucky we're not the biggest team, so we have to make up for lack of size with intensity," he said.

Asked what he feared most about the mid season matchup, Lewis said "All those high school All-Americans sitting on the bench and 24,000 screaming fans against 60 of ours."

Rookie 'Pavin' the way for a Phoenix title

PHOENIX (AP) — Rookie Corey Pavin rolled in a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole and took a one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,-000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament.

The 24-year-old Pavin, one of 21 players who was stranded by darkness on the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course Friday night, finished off a second round of 67 with three pars, took a little break then shot a third-round 68, three under par.

That gave him a 54-hole total of 201, 12 shots under par.

Larry Mize, who scored his first Tour victory in Memphis last year, rallied from a 15th-hole double bogey with a birdie-birdie-birdie finish and was second alone at 202. He had a 67 in the mild, overcast weather.

The group at 203, two off the pace going into the final 18 holes of the chase for a $72,000 first prize, included hometown boy Tom Purtzer, veteran J.C. Snead and Curtis Strange. Purtzer also had to battle back from a double bogey to score a 67. Snead had an erratic 68 that included six birdies and three bogeys. Strange shot 69.

Tied at 204 and very much in the title hunt were two-time U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin, Lon Hinkle, Johnny Miller and veteran Al Geiberger. Irwin had the best round of the day, a 7-under-par 64. Hinkle shot a 65, Miller 66 and Geiberger, a former PGA champ now in his 25th year of Tour activity, had a 68.

Pavin, who took the lead with his day-late finish to the second round, was in and out of the top spot most of the day.

He drove into the fringe on the 320 yard, par-4 fifth hole and 2-putted for a birdie, then holed from about eight feet on the next hole.

On the ninth, however, he drove into the trees and made bogey, dropping out of the lead.

He regained a share with a flip sand wedge shot to 15 feet on the 12th, then surrendered the top spot again when he missed the green and bogeyed the next hole.

"It was getting to be a long day," he said.

"It was one of those days when I felt I had to work hard for everything I got. I felt like I was playing well and just not getting anything in the hole.

"I was getting a little tired coming in, just trying to hold things together."

He accomplished more than that.

He saved par with a 12-footer on the 16th, then made his closing move.

A 5-iron shot to four feet on the 17th set up a birdie that put him back in a tie for the top spot and he took sole possession of the lead with the 10-footer on the 18th.

"Certainly a pleasing way to finish," he said.

The 24-year-old rookie was among 21 players who were halted by darkness Friday night and had to return to the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course early Friday to complete play.

His three pars, posted in chilly temperatures under a weak morning sun, gave him a 36-hole total of 133, nine shots under par and one in front of Curtis Strange.

Pavin, who had birdied five holes in a row Friday, was nine under par for the tournament when darkness fell Friday night. He led on the leader board, but Strange — who completed play at eight-under-par Friday — was the official, 36-hole, overnight leader.

Pavin and 20 others stranded by darkness marked their positions and had all night to think of the problems facing them in completing the round.

Pavin, however, finished the last three holes without incident and assumed the lead.

Taylor, Brown move into Hall

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Charley Taylor, pro football's all-time leading receiver for the Washington Redskins, and Willie Brown, a record-breaking cornerback for the Oakland Raiders, were selected Saturday to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The two assistant coaches for Sunday's Super Bowl teams were chosen along with Mike McCormack, former offensive tackle with the Cleveland Browns and now president of the Seattle Seahawks, and Arnie Weinmeister, former defensive tackle for the New York Giants.

The voting Saturday was done by the Hall of Fame's 29-member board of selectors made up of sports writers from each National Football League city. The four newest members, who increase the Hall of Fame membership to 123, will be formally enshrined July 28 at Canton, Ohio, in ceremonies preceding the Hall of Fame Game, the 1984 NFL exhibition opener between the Seahawks and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Taylor, 42, Washington's receivers coach the past three seasons, began his pro football career as the Redskins' No. 1 draft choice in 1964 out of Arizona State, where he had been a star running back.

He also was a running back for his first 2½ seasons with the 'Skins before being switched to split end. He was the first NFL rookie in 20 years to finish in the top 10 in both rushing and receiving, with his 53 receptions a record for a running back at that time.

In his 13 seasons, all with Washington, Taylor caught a record 649 passes for 9,140 yards and 79 touchdowns. He also rushed for 1,488 yards and 11 touchdowns. He was an eight-time selection to the Pro Bowl game. He retired following the 1977 season, became a Redskins' scout and joined the coaching staff when Joe Gibbs became head coach. Talyor was selected to the Hall of Fame in his second year of eligibility.

Brown, 43, was elected in his first eligible year following the mandatory five-year waiting period.

WHY TAKE BACK A MORTGAGE?

You are not alone if you are a homeseller who must take back mortgage to make a sale possible. Taking back a mortgage is now the most common method of financing the purchase of an existing home. In fact 70% of all existing homes sold now are seller-financed. Why are so many homesellers doing this? There are three good reasons.

It makes a home sale possible. Under current financial conditions, the seller-financed home loan is about the only kind many buyers can afford or get. Sellers who agree to take back mortgages get the fastest results.

Interest rates on seller-held financing are substantial. By providing financing, the seller can be earning a return that compares favorably to that of money market funds or CDs.

You may get a higher price. In return for providing financing, you can ask a higher price than before. You can also insist on a higher down payment.

Local teams take victories

Midland Christian and St. Ann's were the winners this weekend in the 11th annual Midland Christian Pee-Wee basketball tournament for boys and girls.

The MC boys won the title by posting a narrow 36-35 victory over St. Mary's in the championship game while Odessa Christian beat out Trinity, 25-22, for third place.

St. Ann's was a 26-14 winner over Trinity for the girls' title while St. Mary's downed Midland Christian, 21-6, to finish third.

Cards sign Neil Allen

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Right-hander Neil Allen, a midseason 1983 acquisition, has agreed to a four-year contract with the St. Louis Cardinals worth an estimated $3.56 million, a published report says.

Along with Allen, the Cardinals are believed to be close to signing first baseman George Hendrick to a five-year contract worth about $1 million a year and outfielder Lonnie Smith to a one-year contract in the range of $725,000, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch reported in its Sunday editions.

On the Road Again with Allen and Jackie Cason

Everyone should drive defensively ..., RV'ers have the additional responsibility to leave themselves plenty of room for an escape route to reduce their risks of the road. Leave plenty of space for stopping (the 2 sec. rule may apply for reaction time) BUT your rig may not stop in the same distance as the car in front of you. This can be critical under hazards such as wet roads, or even wind conditions which will affect your ability to control. By not driving next to another vehicle on multi-lane roads you can leave both left and right escape rutes for an emergency.
Don't miss the Dept. of Public Safety display at the 4th Annual Family Recreational Vehicle Show, Feb. 17-19th, INSIDE Ector Co. Coliseum. Billy Sims Trailer Town also invites you to come by their display at the R.V. show. In the meantime, shop our complete line of travel trailers and foldouts Mon.-Sat.
Be courteous use turnouts when slowly ascending hills or in conditions where you may be slower than the general traffic. Letting the faster traffic go on reduces your risk.

Tar Heels win again

By The Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Freshman Kenny Smith scored all 10 of his points in the last 3½ minutes to rally top-ranked and unbeaten North Carolina to a 78-73 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Duke Saturday night.

Michael Jordan led North Carolina with 18 points, while Sam Perkins had 16 and reserve Steve Hale added 13.

David Henderson led all scorers with 20 points as Duke dropped to 14-4 and 1-3. Johnny Dawkins had 18, Mark Alarie chipped in 16 and Danny Meagher had 10 for Duke.

Georgetown 83, St. John's 61

NEW YORK — All-American Patrick Ewing scored 18 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and blocked six shots to lead the No. 6 Georgetown Hoyas to an 83-61 Big East Conference basketball victory over No. 14 St. John's at Madison Square Garden.

Ewing, a junior center, had nine points and just two rebounds at halftime when the Hoyas, 15-2 and 4-1 in the conference, held a slim 35-31 advantage. That changed in the second half as Georgetown exploded to leads of as many as 24 over the Redmen, 11-4 and 2-2 in conference, who suffered their third straight loss.

Maryland 69, Old Dominion 58

NORFOLK, Va. — Len Bias scored 24 points and Herman Veal added 15 along with 10 rebounds to power Maryland's seventh-ranked Terrapins to a 69-58 college basketball victory over Old Dominion's cold-shooting Monarchs.

Maryland improved its record to 13-2 while Old Dominion dropped to 10-6.

Ben Coleman and Jeff Adkins added 10 points each for the Terps while Clarence Hanley paced the Monarchs with 13 points, Kenny Gattison had 12 and Charlie Smith and Keith Thomas had 10 each.

UNLV 64, Fresno State 62

LAS VEGAS — Po James sank a pair of freethrows with six seconds left as eighth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, after losing a 15-point second-half lead, downed 17th-ranked Fresno State 64-62 in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association game.

The victory kept Las Vegas, defending PCAA champions, atop the conference with a 7-0 record. Fresno State fell to 11-5 and 2-3 in the PCAA, losing their third consecutive game for the first time since 1977.

N. Carolina St. 80, Wake Forest 69

RALEIGH, N.C. — Former Midland College star Spud Webb matched a career high 18 points and forward Lorenzo Charles scored 23 points as North Carolina State snapped a five-game Atlantic Coast Conference losing streak, upsetting 12th-ranked Wake Forest 80-69.

Webb matched a career high 18 points for the Wolfpack. His 12 first-half points helped bring the Wolfpack back from a seven-point deficit.

Tulsa 80, Bradley 66

PEORIA, Ill. — Tulsa guards Steve Harris and Ricky Ross pumped in 25 and 21 points, respectively, to boost the 13th-ranked Golden Hurricane to an 80-66 Missouri Valley Conference college basketball victory over Bradley.

Tulsa, now 16-1 overall and 5-1 in the conference, also got 18 points from former Midland High star Herbert Johnson.

Louisiana St. 85, Alabama 84

BATON ROUGE, La. — Jerry Reynolds and Don Redden combined for 42 points and Derrick Taylor cashed two free throws with seven seconds to play to give 15th-ranked Louisiana State an 85-84 basketball victory over Alabama in a regionally televised Southeastern Conference basketball game.

LSU, 11-3, took the lead for keeps with 58 seconds to play when Reynolds hit a short bank shot. Alabama came back to climb within one at 12 seconds, then Taylor hit his two free throws.

Syracuse 75, Boston College 73

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dwayne Washington sank a 46-foot shot at the buzzer to give the Syracuse Orangemen a 75-73 Big East Conference basketball triumph over 16th-ranked Boston College.

Washington's shot capped a 20-point night for the freshman guard and kept Syracuse, 12-3, unbeaten in league play at 6-0. Boston College dropped to 12-4 overall and 3-2 in the Big East.

Oklahoma 83, Kansas St. 80

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Wayman Tisdale pumped in 30 points to lead No. 20 Oklahoma to an 83-80 victory over the upset-minded Kansas State Wildcats in Big Eight Conference basketball.

Illinois 76, Purdue 52

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Quinn Richardson scored a career-high 14 points to lead a quintet of Illinois players in double figures as No. 10 Illinois beat No. 19 Purdue 76-52 in a Big Ten battle for the conference lead.

What everyone in business should know about changes in telephone service.

Now that the Bell System has split up and Southwestern Bell Telephone is an independent company, there will be changes in the way we do business together. Here's a quick look at some of those changes.

TELEPHONE EQUIPMENT
The telephone equipment you once leased from Southwestern Bell Telephone has become the property of AT&T. You can continue to lease this equipment but your lease will now be through AT&T.
Of course, you still have the option of purchasing new equipment from a variety of suppliers.
In fact, Southwestern Bell Corporation has formed a new subsidiary—Southwestern Bell Telecom—to market telecommunications equipment.

REPAIR SERVICE
If you need to have your telecommunications equipment repaired, you should contact the source who provided it.
Call AT&T for repairs of equipment you lease through them or purchased from a Bell company prior to 1984. If your purchased equipment is out of warranty, you will incur a charge for repairs.
Southwestern Bell Telecom provides repair service for the equipment you obtain from them.
Southwestern Bell Telephone will continue to repair your telephone line at no charge.

LONG DISTANCE
Southwestern Bell Telephone will provide long distance service within your surrounding area. (We call it Local Access and Transport Area, or LATA.) But long distance service outside this area will be provided by the long distance company of your choice.

BILLING
In most cases you will still receive one monthly bill from Southwestern Bell Telephone for services previously provided by the Bell System. But, charges will be listed separately. Equipment charges will be on one page, long distance calls placed through Southwestern Bell Telephone on another and long distance provided by other companies on yet another.*

YELLOW PAGES
Yellow Pages advertising is now handled by Southwestern Bell Publications. Your business will continue to be listed by us in the White Pages. A Southwestern Bell Publications representative will contact you regarding your listings and advertising in the Yellow Pages.

LOCAL SERVICE
Southwestern Bell Telephone is still your company for local service, so please continue to call us first when you want to establish service. We're also your company for local services like Touch-Tone, Custom Calling Services, local data networks, ESSX-30 and Centrex.
Southwestern Bell Telephone also will continue to offer the mobile phone service we offer today. In addition, Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems will offer new cellular mobile phone service.
We want you to know about these and other changes in your telephone service. That's why we're offering a special booklet called "Keeping in touch with change. A guide to business telephone service." Just clip the coupon below and send in for your free copy today.

*If you have long distance or other services from companies other than AT&T or Southwestern Bell Telephone, you will receive a separate bill from them.

Large salaries throw scare into NFL

By Jerry Magee
Copley News Service

TAMPA, Fla. — Commissioner Pete Rozelle acknowledged Friday that some National Football League owners are concerned by player salaries sent spiraling upward because of competition from the U.S. Football League.

In his annual press conference at the site of the Super Bowl, Rozelle stopped short of saying NFL teams feel threatened by the USFL, but he admitted the USFL is "the major concern" of professional football's establishment.

Rozelle said some USFL owners also are expressing alarm over the escalation of player salaries.

"I know that, privately and publicly, some of them (USFL owners) are concerned about the level of compensation for players, and about how some of these new contracts will bear on their ability to operate successfully in the future," Rozelle said. "Fortunately, the NFL, through gate and television revenues, will be in a better position to cope with that."

Rozelle also said the NFL considers itself powerless to prevent a possible sale of the Baltimore Colts to interests that would locate the club in Arizona. "The result of the L.A. case, as it stands now, has created franchise free agency," Rozelle said.

Acting without the NFL's approval, managing general partner Al Davis succeeded in shifting the Raiders from Oakland to Los Angeles. The league has appeals pending in relation to an anti-trust suit in which Davis and the Los Angeles Coliseum contend the league acted illegally when it sought to block the Raiders' move.

In other matters, Rozelle:

— Dismissed any likelihood that the NFL and the USFL could operate under a single umbrella, with the NFL presenting its schedule in the fall and the USFL playing in the spring. "There are a lot of reasons," Rozelle said. "Sharing TV revenues would be one. There would be 46 teams in that sort of an arrangement. I don't think it would be feasible."

— Indicated NFL owners have shown little support for moving the league's college draft from May 1 to Feb. 1 as a means of limiting additional signings by USFL teams.

— Said he does not cringe at the prospect of presenting the Super Bowl trophy to Davis, his longtime antagonist, should the Raiders defeat Washington in Sunday's game. "The Raiders have contributed to a tremendous Super Bowl. I have respect for what they have accomplished," Rozelle said. "Tom Flores, their coach, probably has not received the recognition due him. I would have no trouble presenting the trophy to Al and respecting what the Raiders have done on the field."

— Acknowledged that there is too much football on TV around the holiday season, when the NFL playoffs and college bowl games are presented. Rozelle described CBS as "quite pleased" with the ratings for its NFL programming, NBC "somewhat disappointed" and ABC "concerned by a 17 percent drop."

"I think there are some things we can do and the networks can do to improve next season," Rozelle said. He did not detail these actions.

— Said the league is unaware of any scalping of Super Bowl tickets by competing clubs.

— Viewed a complaint by Washington's Joe Gibbs that the season is too long as the reaction of a coach spent by four preseason games, 16 during the regular season, and two in the playoffs. "I know it's a long season for coaches and players," Rozelle said.

Weissmuller dead at 79

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Olympic swimming champion Johnny Weissmuller, who went on to fame as Tarzan in 18 movies, died Friday night, a funeral home spokesman said today. He was 79.

Weissmuller, who suffered a series of strokes in 1977, died at his home, said Luis Flores of the Gomez Funeral Home.

Flores said Weissmuller's wife had not completed funeral arrangements but that Weissmuller probably would be buried Sunday at an Acapulco cemetery.

U.S. hockey team rips Canada

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Pat LaFontaine scored two goals and assisted on another, including a goal and assist during a 6-0 explosion in the first period, to lead the U.S. Olympic Hockey Team to an easy 8-2 victory Saturday over Canada's Olympic squad.

The Americans finished their three-month tour with a 37-18-8 record, including a 5-4-3 mark against the Canadians.

LaFontaine, who scored 55 goals in the 63-game exhibition series, gave the Americans a 3-0 lead at 8:33 of the period when he slapped the puck between two defenders at the right of the net.

Lee banquet changed

New Midland Lee head football coach Jack Tayrien said that the annual football banquet for Lee High has been switched from next Wednesday to Wednesday, Feb. 15.

"The banquet will still be held at the Civic Center. We haven't sold any tickets to the general public and will announce when tickets will go on sale after we find out how many people we already have on the list. We can only seat 900 people," said Tayrien.

"The new date will also give us a chance to get a good speaker. We already know that Spike Dykes will be back in town for the banquet."

The Lee Rebels ended the 1983 campaign with a 13-3 record, the best in the school's history, earning its first berth in the state finals.

Disciplinary action

School discipline has been getting more and more attention in recent months with most people apparently in agreement that a problem does exist and that educational quality will suffer unless the situation is improved.

We're in agreement because of the following points:

— Teachers aren't supposed to be "babysitters" who merely entertain our children while we're at work. They're educators and must be given the ability to control their students or their difficult task is rendered next to impossible.

— Today's demands on a parent's time are so great that their contribution to the educational process is necessarily restricted. So the educational process should extend beyond "book learning" to rules of basic social conduct — how one behaves at various functions, respect for the rights of others, teamwork and dependence on those around us. Those are lessons of life which, if not learned at home or at school, will create difficulty for young people entering the marketplace.

In saying this we in no way mean to imply that primary responsibility for acceptable behavior of the young does not rest with parents.

— If teachers don't have the ability to maintain control in the classroom, the resulting discipline problem will lead to frustration and higher teacher turnover. That likely will translate into a loss of talent and more problems, not less, for the schools.

Some innovative attempts are being introduced around the nation to improve student discipline. One of the new approaches initiated in Midland elementary schools a couple of years back is called "assertive discipline" and stresses awarding the positive instead of recognizing the negative. It hasn't always found favor among Midland parents, but principals have indicated it has seemed to improve discipline to a degree. Other more severe measures are still being taken when the new approach fails and in higher grade levels, say school officials.

From time to time parents have to be involved in the discipline process. That's as it should be, and parents should support that involvement. Parents should back school officials and personnel in disciplinary matters because that immediately instills in children a realization that they cannot behave at home and misbehave at school. Sending their children to school doesn't relieve parents of their responsibilities to set proper examples.

A new approach to school discipline certainly was in order. The new direction being attempted here may prove beneficial to the educational process.

Achievement to note

Recognition for outstanding achievement comes too seldom in life to a great many individuals. Two Midland men were cited late this week by the Midland Jaycees organization for achievements that certainly fall in that category.

Grant Billingsley, executive vice president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and one of the youngest such executives in the nation, was awarded the Jaycees' Distinguished Service Award for this year.

Billingsley has been with the chamber since 1975 and was cited for adding stability to goals and direction for that important organization. The value of leadership in Billingsley's position cannot be overemphasized because the individual who holds that post can and in Midland's case must strive for creation of a stable business climate. Billingsley is to be highly commended for his efforts in that regard.

Lynn Hunt, president of Hufo Oil, was presented the organization's Boss of the Year award. That is fine recognition for anyone involved in the business of business.

Congratulations to both men.

Deductible patriotism

Would you make a modest contribution to help fix up the crumbling and corroded Statue of Liberty in time for its centennial celebration in 1986? Few would refuse to make such a gesture, and certainly not those who also stand to reap an incalculable amount of good will and a not-inconsiderable tax deduction. The Reagan administration saw in the project — about $30 million to refurbish Liberty Island and nearby Ellis Island and to construct an immigration museum on the latter — a perfect way to show how the private sector can do these things better than the government, and without getting the taxpayers to foot the bill.

Well, not quite. American Express offers a case in point. In a three-month program that ended Dec. 31, the company contributed a penny to the non-profit foundation set up to run the rehabilitation project every time anyone used the Amex card or cashed a travelers' check. Every new account opened brought a further $1 gift from American Express to the fund. Exact figures aren't in yet, but the company says it spent about $4 million in promoting its grand gesture. That, along with the estimated $1 million in contributions, will result in a $2.5 million tax saving for the corporation. No free seats at the privately organized centennial ceremony for guessing who'll make up the difference.

The point is not that private organizations and individuals shouldn't do their voluntary part in supporting projects that benefit the entire nation. It is, rather, that the simpleminded notion that such private-sector generosity carries no public price tag is wrong; the taxpayer will end up footing a large part of the bill, anyway.

The Statue of Liberty, notwithstanding the mockery that's occasionally been directed at it during troubled times in our history, still stands as a dignified symbol of this country's highest aspirations, if not always their achievement. We're all the proprietors of this splendid gift from the people of France and we should be allowed to pay for its renovation directly without the tax-deductible huckstering that seems to make the statue more a vehicle for corporate promotion than what it was meant to be.

Diamonds aren't girl's best friend!

Well, it appears that diamonds are no longer a girl's best friend.

The resignation of Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul Thayer, caused by SEC allegations that he provided "insider" information to friends when he served on corporate boards in private life, has repercussions far beyond the business world.

Art Buchwald

The SEC has charged that Mr. Thayer, while not profiting personally from the tips, helped several friends become rich, one a beautiful Texas divorcee with whom he had a "very close personal relationship."

If the charges are true, or even if they aren't, it's going to change the financial arrangements between men of substance and the "other woman."

"Hello, Sweetie Pie. I had a terrible day. Give your Big Daddy a nice warm kiss, and a nice cold, dry martini."

"It's been so long, Big Daddy, I thought I'd die."

"I had a board meeting in San Francisco, and then I had to fly to New York and meet with my investment bankers. But I brought you a little surprise from Tiffany's. It's a diamond necklace."

"I don't want to know from diamonds. What's the latest poop on the Archer takeover of Magnum Electronics?"

"Now, Honey Bun. You know I can't talk about what goes on in the Archer boardroom."

"Then make your own dry martini."

"If you promise not to tell anyone, we're going to announce our takeover intentions tomorrow afternoon."

"So what do I do, Big Daddy?"

"Archer's will probably go down and Magnum's is certain to go up. Sit down on the couch and rub my neck."

"What happened in New York?"

"Nothing happened in New York."

"I thought you told me Snow White Petroleum was going to acquire Stonebridge Communications, which had just merged with Fungus Chemicals."

"The deal fell through because Snow White has secretly made a deal with Calypso Avionics."

"But I bought 40,000 shares of Stonebridge at 57 on your say-so. It's now at 45. Why didn't you let me know?"

"I heard about it when I was in the hotel room with my wife. How could I call you?"

"So your wife is still more important to you than my stock portfolio?"

"I didn't say that, Barbie Doll. I'll make it up to you. I just came from a board meeting of Turtle Express. They're going to report a 50 percent earnings profit for their first quarter. The stock should go up four points after the announcement."

"Oh, Big Daddy, what a wonderful tip. Let me take your tie and shoes off."

"That's more like it, my Sugar Candy. Do you love me?"

"Of course I love you. What gives with Rupert Murdoch?"

"What do you mean what gives with Rupert Murdoch?"

"Do you have any inside information on whether he'll get control of Warner's or not?"

"I don't know, baby, and I don't want to talk about Rupert Murdoch now. I've got a lot of loving to catch up on. Then you can cook me a nice big steak dinner."

"Are you sure you aren't holding anything back on me, Big Daddy?"

"What would I hold back?"

"Should I still stay long in soybean futures?"

"Damn it, I'll tell you when to sell your soybeans. Now are we going to have any fun or aren't we?"

"Of course we're going to have fun, Big Daddy. But first I have to slip into something more comfortable so I can call my broker."

Grenada planned suppression

WASHINGTON — U.S. troops overthrew the communist government of Grenada apparently just in time to prevent a crackdown on Christian churches. Captured documents indicate that organized religion was soon to be a major target of the revolution.

Jack Anderson

The case against the churches was prepared by Maj. Keith Roberts, who headed the KGB-style "Special Branch." His report, dated July 12, 1983, and stamped "Top Secret," was presented to the late Prime Minister Maurice Bishop.

So far as can be determined, Bishop never implemented the plan to suppress religion on the island. But intelligence analysts believe he was ousted and killed by hard-line associates precisely because of his reluctance to stamp out opposition with true Marxist zeal. The willingness of his successors to murder Bishop — and perhaps 100 others who stood in their way — indicates how they might have dealt with troublesome church leaders.

Roberts identified the Roman Catholic Church as "the No. 1 antagonist of the revolution." He listed the Anglican Church as "a major threat to the revolution," the Seventh Day Adventists as "hostile" and the Methodist Church as a "challenge."

"Most reactionary of the lesser churches," the report declared, were the Jehovah's Witnesses, Baptists and Church of the Open Bible. Roberts viewed as seditious an "upsurge in open-air crusades, house-to-house (proselytizing) and tract-giving by the non-traditional religions." These sects, he wrote, were in "a frenzied drive" to win new members.

The regime's goal, he wrote, was "to control all churches, their leadership, membership and their activities." He suggested removing "all deeply religious head teachers" from the schools "by whatever means most suitable." He called for "the systematic monitoring of all religious manifestations in the state." He also wanted to cut back "religious programs on Radio Free Grenada" and open "Marx-Lenin bookshops in different parishes."

But perhaps the most startling recommendation was to use Catholic priests to subvert their own religion and advance the cause of Marxism in Grenada. Roberts apparently had in mind those priests in Central America who have developed a schoolboy crush on Marxist revolutionaries.

"Promote contacts," he urged, "among clergymen and members of laity from Nicaragua and other Latin American countries linked to the theology of liberation and, in general, to the idea of a church committed to revolutionary positions."

In fact, Roberts wanted the government to establish a "progressive church" on the island. How could the communists create a church in their own image? He suggested that they consult their comrades in Cuba and Nicaragua for guidance.

Roberts discussed the manipulation of religion in candid language that obviously was never intended to be read outside the ruling Marxist clique. The document was among thousands that were captured last October by the invading Americans and shipped to a Defense Intelligence Agency location in Virginia. My associates Dale Van Atta and Jon Lee Anderson have obtained a copy.

Roberts saw the Catholic Church as a threat to the revolution because its 70,000 members have "a very deep trust in the church," which surpassed their loyalty to the ruling New Jewel Movement. "Taking into account the weakness in all our mass organizations and, therefore, our influence over the masses," he wrote, "we see this development as a very dangerous one."

He went on: "We think that in the medium term, if serious measures are not taken, we can find ourselves faced with a Poland situation. In this light, we see the church in the immediate period as being the most dangerous sector for the development of internal counterrevolution."

It would be difficult to silence the Catholic Church, he suggested, noting that it has been on Grenada since "the coming of Columbus to the island" in 1498.

Roberts recalled that when Bishop seized power in 1979, all the churches on Grenada had adopted a "wait-and-see" attitude. But it had become clear, he wrote, that leaders of the churches "are to different degrees hostile to the revolution."

Most vocal of all, apparently, was Catholic Bishop Sydney Charles. Roberts noted that in November 1982, Charles began "to push the line that the church will face its biggest 'challenge' in 1983." Roberts predicted that the bishop would become "bolder in his attacks against the Revolution."

The memo described Bishop Charles as "very popular among the church goers" and accused him of delivering intelligence "on the Grenada situation" to a meeting of bishops on a neighboring Caribbean island in February 1983.

Six of the island's 18 Catholic priests were named in the memo as "the most dangerous" to the revolution. Concluded Roberts: "It is abundantly clear that the Roman Catholic Church is gearing up for confrontation with government."

Copyright loss lets groupies grin

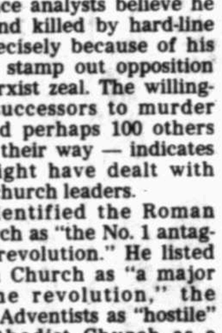
WASHINGTON — When the Supreme Court ruled that America is still the land of the free for those who tape television programs on their videotape recorders (VTRs), a seller of those devices pronounced himself "jubilated." The word was evidence of the disorienting passion it denoted. The 5-4 ruling was a reminder that fitting the law to a technologically dynamic society often is like fitting trousers to a 10-year-old: Adjustments are constantly needed.



George F. Will

The question of the legality of home taping of copyrighted television shows has been the subject of much merriment about midnight knocks on the door — the VTR police in black-leather trench coats. What the Court has done is properly defer to Congress as policymaker. But Congress may not show proper interest in the new problems of copyright protection.

Several Hollywood studios sued Sony, a manufacturer of VTRs, seeking money damages and an injunction against sales. The studios charged that Sony was responsible for copyright infringements. A lower court held that there was no infringement in recording material broadcast over public airwaves. An appeals court reversed, holding Sony liable for "contributory infringement." The Supreme Court has reversed that, saying that Sony is not liable because Congress has not spoken clearly about this practice.

Had one Justice in the majority voted the other way, Congress would have rushed to protect VTR owners from any new cost. But it is unlikely that Congress will act on the more interesting but politically less satisfying problem of giving equitable protection to the value of the property of copyright holders. Many of these holders are movie studios and rock stars, and the public thinks they have more money than is good for them.

The primary purpose of copyright law is not to reward the owner but to produce a public benefit. However, a secondary but serious consideration is fairness to the owner. The Court majority rightly says the studios were overreaching when they argued that Sony was liable because it supplied the means of a copyright infringement. But the Court minority rightly argues that a copyright holder's right to control the performance and reproduction of his work should not be extinguished by his decision to make the work available over the airwaves. Use of VTRs clearly degrades the studio's copyrights by reducing the studios' ability to market movies in second-run theaters and through the sale and rental of cassettes.

Copyright law, although extensively revised in 1976, makes no mention of VTRs. In 1979, when this case came to trial, there were just 400,000 VCRs in America. Today, there are 9.4 million in the 83 million households. By 1990, there will be upwards of 50 million.

To the extent that VTRs are used just for "time-shifting" — recording for viewing at a more convenient time — the audience is enlarged and the practice does not offend many copyright holders. But many VTR users are building libraries of movies. (As a result, studios may delay selling movies to television until cassettes have been in the sales and rental market.) And most VTR users push the fast-forward button to avoid watching commercials. Because of that (and because of remote-control television sets which enable viewers to change channels during commercials without leaving the sofa) advertisers may demand lower rates.

This would reduce revenues for copyright holders. Perhaps — it is hard to argue and impossible to demonstrate — this would mean not just less revenue for creative people but less creativity. Creativity is not like cantaloupes, the supply increasing directly as money demand increases.

As excuses for avoiding the copyright issue raised by VTRs, Congress can cite two facts: It is difficult to measure the damage done to a particular copyright holder by taping. And it would be difficult to levy and allocate compensation. But a modest royalty fee could be levied on sales of VTRs and high-quality video and audio tapes, and rough justice could be done in allocating the money raised. Big sums are at stake, and not just from videotaping.

Geoffrey, my son the modern 10-year-old, is ripping off someone called Billy Joel by taping off the radio Joel's masterworks, such as "Uptown Girl." Joel can not garnishee Geoffrey's allowance. And such taping costs the record industry $1 billion a year in lost sales.

There is one note of serenity in this arena of strife. Fred Rogers, who owns the copyright to "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood," the most widely distributed show on public television, says (naturally: he is so nice) he has no objection to people taping his show. That sets at ease the conscience of Victoria Will, 3, a Mr. Rogers groupie.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 22, 1973, the 36th president of the United States, Lyndon Johnson, died of a heart attack at his Texas ranch at the age of 64, four years after leaving office.

On this date:

In 1888, an Egyptian obelisk built in the 16th century B.C. was erected in New York's Central Park; it is known as "Cleopatra's Needle."

Great historical events sometimes may go unnoticed

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

EDITOR'S REPORT

Hearst

NEW YORK — The Rev. James Fisher, CSP, who baptized our infant granddaughter Adelaide, born last July Fourth, sent me a remarkable letter and article which I would like to share with you. Father Fisher wrote a truly learned and well-documented piece for his hometown paper in Selinsgrove, Pa., under a pseudonym earlier this year. But I don't think he will mind if I identify him with full credit because the article concerns all Americans and critics abroad in today's often lopsided world. The article by Father Fisher, whose findings and research amazed people in our offices who didn't realize many of the historical facts he presented, follows:

"SOME OF THE greatest events in history go unnoticed by those who should be aware. Augustus took no notice of the birth of Jesus, and Tiberius was ignorant of His death. On the day the Bastille fell, Louis XVI wrote one word in his diary: "Rien" ("Nothing"). So far as I can tell, Americans are overlooking something very remarkable about themselves and their country. Pennsylvanians ought to be especially concerned.

"In 1984, we Americans — God willing — will hold our 50th presidential election. Think of it! We have already had 49 elections since the first one in January, 1789. Not a single one of those elections has ever been postponed by as much as ONE day, not even in the midst of the two bloodiest wars in our history. As a result of those elections there have been thirty changes in the occupants of the presidency and nineteen changes of the party holding the presidency. Yet, only once was an election result ever resisted by violence. That once was in 1860 and the resistance was unsuccessful.

"THIS IS A record of stability and peaceful change unmatched on so large a scale in the history of the world. True, the British Parliament has changed peacefully over a longer period, but at least twice, they went beyond the law to prolong the life of Parliament during wartime. We have never allowed a war to interrupt our quadrennial elections, even though three of our elections (1812, 1864 and 1944) occurred during declared wars and five of them (1800, 1952, 1964, 1968 and 1972) during undeclared wars. (Some historians may quibble about the Civil War being a declared war, but the formal proclamation of a blockade gave it such a status in international law.)

"Only seven of the United States have participated in all 49 elections. Among those that have, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is the largest. Furthermore, from the very first election, Pennsylvania was one of the very few states that allowed the selection of presidential electors by popular vote — a practice that didn't reach a majority of the states until 1824 and all of them until 1880. As popular election of the president spread in the middle of the last century, the percentage of turnout (of eligible voters) was incredibly high. In 1860, the high point was reached. Eighty-one percent of the eligible voters actually turned out to vote. We got our greatest president, Abe Lincoln, as a consequence.

"WITH SUCH a record behind us, why hasn't anybody planned or said anything to prepare for the 50th presidential election? I suggest to anybody who's reading or listening:

"1. The observance of November 6, 1984, as a "National Festival of the Free Ballot" with the polls open for twenty-four hours.

"2. A local, state and national effort to register all citizens 18 and over for voting and a coordinated drive to get them to the polls.

"The goal should be to get at least 100,000,000 Americans to vote, but to try to do even better and beat the 81 percent of 1860. Let Selinsgrove start the ball rolling!"

In an accompanying letter, Father Fisher explained to me that he was teaching a weekly class about each of our presidential elections, including this year's commemorating the 50th. From the very beginning of the United States as a nation, he pointed out, seven states allowed its voters to choose presidential electors, instead of having state legislatures make the selection.

"I have no ulterior motives in this project, just a deep love for the United States and her remarkable institutions," wrote Father Fisher. "Looking ahead and in closing, let me also note that 1986 will witness the election of our 100th Congress."

THIS IS A record in which every American can point to with pride. It's right there on the statute books, accomplished with honor and frequently against the odds of external interference and our own War Between the States whose grievous wounds required long patience to heal.

We also contributed mightily to assist foreign friends and former foes to nourish their war-stricken populations which we helped rescue from alien tyrannies. In two world wars, for instance, we asked for nothing but offered instead blood and treasure from the world Father Fisher so eloquently depicts.

Thank you, Father Fisher, for all the interesting, little-known and fascinating facts you have presented in this column this week. I have a hunch this will draw more response than most of my efforts.

SPEAKING OUT

Has totalitarian rule of '1984' arrived?

By REBECCA PFIESTER

Rebecca Kauffman Pfiester has lived in Midland nearly six years. She came to the Tall City from Jackson, Miss., but is a native Texan who received her bachelor's degree in English and speech from the University of Texas at Austin. She received her M.A. from the University of West Florida.

With the calendar date 1984 upon us, is the novelistic state of "Nineteen Eighty Four" so far behind? Is there a confluence of 1984 and "Nineteen Eighty Four?" Has the technological totalitarianism of Orwell's state come true in the modern technology and politics of this date 1984?

We should consider carefully Walter Cronkite's thoughts on the title question: "Nineteen Eighty Four" is an anguished lament and a warning that we may not be strong enough nor wise enough nor moral enough to cope with the kind of power we have learned to amass."

In case you have not read the novel in some time, let me reaquaint you with the plot. Part one of Orwell's book sets the scene with Winston Smith (an English "Churchillian" version of our American John Doe) as a minor bureaucrat in Minitrue, the Ministry of Truth. Winston's world is one dominated by Big Brother posters, the Inner Party doublethink, Newspeak and 24-hour telescreens. In part two Smith falls in love (a thoughtcrime) with Julia. Eventually they contact O'Brien, whom they mistake for a fellow rebel, and pledge themselves to overthrow "The Party." Part three contains the capture, torture, breakdown and re-education of Winston.

The lowest point of the book, from which humanity cannot again rise, is Winston's betrayal of Julia. If you, like me, have trouble equating one's humanity with one's ability to endure unendurable pain, then this last plot development is disturbing. But, if indeed Winston's humanity is legitimately lost, then of all the frights of Orwell's political warning therein lies the greatest — that no inner "heart of hearts" is sacrosanct.

In comparing the Orwellian state to the American state at the time (1949), a Harvard sociology professor questioned "Is the creation of a central intelligence agency in the U.S. — voted recently by Congress — with the power to plant agents in every voluntary association in the country another step toward that end (the vision of "Nineteen Eighty Four"). Is not this an irreversible step, and hence, the danger that we are warned against?"

That Orwell had struck a sensitive chord in the totalitarian governments seems evident by this Soviet reaction at the time of "Nineteen Eighty Four's" release. In Pravda a Russian critic denounced "Nineteen Eighty Four" as a "filthy book" in the spirit of "American propaganda." He further stated (one must use "doublethink" here) that "led by the Soviet Union the forces of peace are mighty and indominatable. They will assure mankind happiness and prosperity despite the monstrous intrigues of the imperialists, the instigators of war." It should be interesting to watch this year for Russia's reaction to the renewed interest in Orwell's now topical "Nineteen Eighty Four." In anticipation of the calendar, a new collection of critical reviews has just been published:

"1984 Revisited." It has been nearly 40 years: What do the critics say now? Upon its initial release "Nineteen Eighty Four" caused shock. My shock is the rereading was of a different nature — an experience shared with a reviewer in "1984 Revisited:" While re-reading "Nineteen Eighty Four" I had the sensation that it all seems not so unfamiliar — and this familiarity caused shock. The very idea of a totally controlled society in which a self-perpetuating elite rules through terror and ideology no longer strikes us as either a dim horror or the projection of the paranoid mind. In the few decades since Orwell wrote we have gone a long way toward domesticating the idea of the total state. In other words, it is shocking that it is no longer shocking. With each generation do we become inured to the power of technology and to expect less "ownlife"?

Orwell was not a technologist predicting exactly what mechanical snooping would be possible in 1984. As he himself said in 1948 (it has been suggested that the numbers were switched to create the title) "I do not believe that the kind of society I describe necessarily will arrive, but I believe something resembling it could arrive." It is being ushered in in 1984 by satellites capable of omnipotent snooping; by computers capable of indescribable fact assimilation and storage; by our acceptance of everyday "Newspeak" jargon ("live on tape," "negative growth"); by the addiction of this generation to television and video games; by the computer record-keeping of our every purchase; by the capacity of science to locate and affect our "heart of hearts" — those centers in the brain which control our aggression, our depression, our sense of pleasure, our sense of reason...our very selves?

I now turn it over to you, the most valid critics of all, the Winston Smiths of Jan. 22, 1984 — has the Orwellian state of "Nineteen Eighty Four" arrived? The question is rhetorical, it is for you to answer; for you to prevent.

Perhaps — if "Newspeak" has not obliterated our language and if "Big Brother" has not become too big —we will be around to "Speak Out" in 2001 on our "Space Odysseys."

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

New Year recipe

To the Editor:
Here is a recipe for a happy New Year.

Take twelve fine, bright new months: See that they are thoroughly free from all old memories of bitterness, hate and jealousy.

Cleanse them completely from every clinging spite. Pick off all specks of pettiness and littleness. In short, see that these months are free from all the past. Have them as fresh and clean as when they first came from God's great storehouse of time.

Cut these months into 30 or 31 equal parts (or 28 for February). Do not attempt to make up the whole batch at one time, (so many people spoil the entire lot this way). But prepare one day at a time as follows.

Into each day put equal parts of faith, patience, courage, work and hope, (some folks omit this ingredient and so spoil the flavor of the rest). Add kindness and prayer, (leaving out this ingredient is like leaving the oil out of the salad — don't do it.) Also add meditation and one selected resolution — put in about a teaspoonful of good spirits, a dash of fun, a pinch of folly, a sprinkling of play and a heaping cupful of good humor.

Pour love into the whole mixture and blend with gladness — garnish with a few smiles and a sprig of joy: Then serve with quietness, unselfishness and cheerfulness. And there you have a perfect recipe for a Happy New Year.

Borrowed items

To the Editor:
As vice-president of the Parents Association for Cerebral Palsy Children, I would like to take this time to make this plea.

It has been brought to the association's attention that parents of children that have attended and are still attending the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center at 802 Ventura have borrowed items from the center and have not returned them. These items include books and equipment such as wheelchairs, walkers, crutches, etc. Some of these items are the personal property of the therapists and other CP Center employees.

I would like to encourage anyone who still has any of these items, to please return them to the CP Center as soon as possible. There are so many others who could now benefit from the use of these things. If anyone is still in possession of any of these things and cannot get them back to the center, please call 682-7649 and we will be happy to make arrangements to pick it up.

Your cooperation in this matter will be greatly appreciated.

Public outcry

To the Editor:
As an out-of-town subscriber to your paper, and as a former resident of Midland whose mother was killed by drunk driver, I was very pleased to read Department of Public Safety Lt. Jimmie Rhoades' article entitled "Outcry Against DWI Has Grown Considerable."

As founder and three-term president of San Antonio's Mothers Against Drunk Drivers chapter (MADD), I spent five months in Austin lobbying for the new laws. It is our belief that these laws will serve as a deterrent to many of those persons who choose to drive drunk, that they will seek other means of transportation when intoxicated, and will, therefore, not only save their lives but the lives of many innocent victims as well.

I urge all the citizens of Midland County to join and/or lend your support to your local MADD chapter in their endeavor to make your streets and highways safer for everyone.

Sunshine's case

To the Editor:
As an Animal Control Officer, I was called on Dec. 5 to pick up a dog that had been purposely abandoned in an alley. Her condition of malnutrition and neglect could break your heart.

"Sunshine's" case became well known on local T.V. due to the efforts of Becky Neighbors and Conrad Coleman.

Tragically, it was too late for "Sunshine," we could not save her. She died Jan. 3. But she left behind her a rescue fund to help other animals in her situation.

I wish to thank all who donated to the fund in her honor. Also Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid who found "Sunshine" and alerted Animal Control, and Dr. Susie Chandler who was there when I needed her.

I especially appreciate those of you who offered support and encouragement when I needed it most.

Back to slavery?

To the Editor:
A Scottish historian and critic, Alexander Tytler (1747-1813), wrote concerning the progression of a republic:

"From bondage to spiritual faith; from spiritual faith to great courage; from courage to liberty; from liberty to abundance; from abundance to selfishness; from selfishness to complacency; from complacency to apathy; from apathy to dependence; from dependency back again into bondage."

If we as a people do not use our liberty to become responsible, politically active individuals the government for the "common good" will be compelled to control our lives for us.

Let us not let Tytler's prophecy come true concerning this republic. Learn the issues of our day and let our voice be heard in the voting booths.

Letters Policy

■ Readers are invited to submit letters to be considered for publication. They may be on any subject, but should not be slanderous or defamatory. They must be signed by the writer and must include the writer's correct mailing address and a telephone number at which the writer may be contacted during the day, either home or office.

No letter will be published anonymously and names will appear. Addresses and phone numbers are for verification only and will not be published.

Writers should be as concise as possible and the right to condense letters is reserved. They will be published as soon as possible after being received.

They should be addressed to: Letters to the Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702 or brought to the newspaper's editorial department.

Anti-freeze

To the Editor:
Evans and Novak (Midland Reporter-Telegram, Jan. 9,) reported that "39 percent of the Democrats likely to attend (Iowa) state caucuses Feb. 20 favor a U.S. nuclear weapons freeze even if the Soviets do not join."

Toys for Tots

To the Editor:

The 1983 Toys for Tots campaign was a very successful program in the Midland/Odessa area again this Christmas.

It is estimated that some 3,000 new and used toys were collected and donated to the Midland Salvation Army for distribution while the Odessa Salvation Army also received 3,000 toys.

On behalf of the Permian Detachment of the Marine Corps League and the U.S. Marine Corps recruiters, I wish to thank all those generous people and organizations who donated toys so that many of the underprivileged children in the Midland/Odessa area might enjoy a very Merry Christmas.

Honest employee

To the Editor:
I would like to take this opportunity to commend one of Gibson's employees for honesty.

Miss Lettie Lee, age 82, shops once a week at Gibson. Last Thursday while calling Midtran, she laid her coin purse down and left, leaving what money she had to live on for the month. It so happens my name was in it with Midtran's number.

The employee who found the purse, Janie Garza, called our office. It is so rewarding to know of such an honest person.

Miss Lee lives on a fixed income. The loss of this money would have been a great setback for her.

BILL MODISETT

Some people wouldn't be caught dead napping

Bill Modisett

There are two kinds of people in the world.

Politicians would agree. There are Democrats, they would say, and then there are Republicans.

So would sociologists. They would note there are liberals and, of course, conservatives.

Editorial page columnists would say there are people who are "right," or those who agree with the views the columnist is espousing, and then those who are "wrong" or who disagree.

I have another distinction: There are people who take naps and people who don't.

Oh, it's no laughing matter. It could be the crux of America's deepest problems today. Let me explain.

The "nappers" of the world undoubtedly would lead a certain lifestyle if modern-day society allowed. It doesn't, of course. There are too many pressures to prevent it: Job, social requirements, family demands.

But most "nappers" still find the time to get in a little shut-eye after work, on weekends and holidays, and when dodging home chores.

Interestingly, the "nappers" I have known tend to be more relaxed individuals. They don't let the pressures of the world grow disproportionately; they literally wink at problems. They're the kind of people you meet who seem to lead structured, orderly lives.

"Non-nappers," on the other hand, rarely — if ever — lie down during the day. They are a bit more "high strung" and appear to succumb to pressure more easily.

In baseball, pitchers are "non-nappers;" the "nappers" hide in the outfield, catching fly balls and a few winks. I have a sneaking suspicion that Ronald Reagan is a "napper." Yuri Andropov, on the other hand, is an obvious "non-napper" who simply doesn't like to be in the spotlight. In fact, I imagine most of the members of the Soviet Politburo are "non-nappers;" after all, we have our share of "nappers" in Congress.

Whether an individual takes naps really has nothing to do with his or her ability and God-given talent, of course. It merely is an indication of priorities: Some people apparently feel that the world will continue to exist without them for 30 minutes or an hour a day; others are convinced that not only can it not, but that, additionally, some of society's "brightness" will fade if they're not awake to keep it lustrous.

Another sneaking suspicion I have is that "nappers" probably are, as individuals, healthier than "non-nappers." They shed the pressures of the day for awhile and give their bodies a chance to cleanse themselves of stress and all its disastrous side-effects. In the long run, they may even be more productive workers than "non-nappers."

I've never been too big on napping, but maybe "nappers" have a point. When I study a problem overnight, it certainly looks differently in the morning.

MCT preparing for 'Annie'

Midland Community Theatre's box office opens Wednesday for telephone reservations to "Annie." The production will be onstage in Theatre One Feb. 10 through March 24.

Based on the comic strip "Little Orphan Annie," the musical traces the exploits of the carrot-topped heroine and her trusty dog, Sandy, from their lives in Miss Hannigan's Orphanage to Christmas in the loving arms of Daddy Warbucks.

Along the way the irrepressible waif brings joy and happiness into the lives of countless people including the president and his cabinet and through them the entire country.

The production is directed by Don Bachmann, executive director at MCT. Music director is Tom Roberts, minister of music at First Presbyterian Church. The dance numbers have been choreographed by guest choreographer Ed Brassos. Set design is by Brett Batterson with John Michael Warburton serving as technical director.

'Streetcar' auditions to be held

Auditions for Midland Community Theatre's production of Tennessee Williams' classic drama "A Streetcar Named Desire" will be held Feb. 12 and 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the Redferm Room at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

"Streetcar" is scheduled to open in Theatre Two March 23 and continue for nine performances closing April 7. Roles are available for six women and six men.

Principal roles are Blanche, Stella, Stanley, Mitch and Eunice. In addition there are seven roles available for the other people who inhabit the neighborhood including Stanley's poker buddies from work and the New Orleans street vendors.

Perusal copies of the script are available in the business office at MCT. The production is being directed by Ted Strickland, MCT's assistant director. For more information call MCT's business office, 682-2544.

Pickwick Players to hold tryouts

Auditions for Midland Community Theatre's Pickwick Players will be held Thursday at 4:30 p.m. in the Blakemore classroom at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The Pickwick Players is MCT's youth performing group. Students interested in joining the Pickwicks need to prepare a one-minute memorized piece from a play, poem or story for presentation to the Pickwick Board and the director, Michael Spicer. They also will be expected to participate in a sing-a-long and a movement improvisation.

The Pickwicks produce four to five plays yearly for the Midland Independent School District and for touring to various theater conventions and schools throughout the country. For more information call Spicer, 682-2544.

Art instructors' works on display

ODESSA — The work of three Odessa College art instructors is on display through Feb. 3 in the exhibit "Old Drawings" in the Instructional Building at Odessa College.

The public may view the work from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Barry Phillips, Del Hickmott and John Hillier have on exhibit about 60 early drawings. The works were created by the artists when they were in public school and art school. They represent a broad range of drawing media, technique, subject content and expressive form.

For more information contact Phillips at OC.

MC sets spring auditions

Auditions for the spring Midland College play production will be held Monday and Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

At this time the exact script is still under consideration. Some of the titles being read are "Educating Rita," "The Woolgatherer," "The Two of Us Ashes" and "Who's On First." All of these are comedy dramas requiring at least two men and two women.

For more information call 682-2544 and ask for Michael Spicer, education director at MC and Midland Community Theatre.

Texas Tech Jazz Ensemble to perform at Lee High School

The Texas Tech Jazz Ensemble, directed by Don Turner, will perform at Lee High School Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Program for the 17-piece group will be drawn from Paul Baker's "Clouds in My Eyes," "Come Rain or Come Shine" arranged by Bill Stapleton, "Snow Wisp" by Jim Linahon, David Metzger's "Midnight Dance," Henry Wolking's "Another Blues" and his arrangement of "Donna Lee," Rob McConnell's arrangement of "Just Friends," Dave Leech's "Nancy Ann," "Filthy McNasty" arranged by John La Barbera.

Also, Lamont Cranston's arrangement of "In the Wee Small Hours," Sammy Nestico's "Flight to Nassau," "We'll Be Together Again" arranged by Gary Anderson, Phil Kelly's "Zip City," Don Menza's "Groove Blues," Mike Heathman's "Falling in Love with Love," "What Have They Done to My Song, Ma?" arranged by Les Hopper and "Overture to the Royal Mongolian Suma Foosball Festival" arranged by Lyle Mays.

Director of jazz studies at Tech, Turner is also associate professor of saxophone. His degrees are from North Texas State University.

Turner has played in professional jazz, dance and show bands throughout the United States for the past 25 years. He joined the Tech faculty in 1971 and has since added a third jazz band to the two existing bands, as well as implementing combos and classes in improvisation, jazz literature and jazz methods.

Biography discloses actor's fight against terminal cancer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The final, losing fight of Steve McQueen's tumultuous life — his struggle against cancer — has been disclosed for the first time in a new biography, "McQueen," by William F. Nolan.

Nolan first became acquainted with the star when he was a script writer for the television series "Wanted — Dead or Alive." After a 1970 article about McQueen's motorcycle racing, the pair became good friends. During the last 10 years of his career, McQueen granted no interviews — except to Nolan, with whom he planned to record his life story.

McQueen was born in Indianapolis March 24, 1930, the son of a barnstorming stunt pilot who disappeared six months later. The boy's California childhood was marked by stolen-car arrests and beatings by his stepfather.

At 14, McQueen was placed in the California Junior Boys Republic, an institution for troubled boys. After years as a seaman, logger and Marine, he drifted to New York and tried his hand at acting.

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Roomful of Blues

The Paragon Atrium will be a Roomful of Blues this Valentine Day.

Since the group's first performance here several years ago when two people showed up, Roomful of Blues has developed a Midland following. The group's last two Midland gigs, one at the Yucca Theatre and the other at the American Legion Hall, brought in over 300 fans.

Nominated for a 1983 Grammy Award in the classical rhythm and blues category for its album (Muse label) with Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson, Roomful has once again been nominated in that Grammy category for its summer release with Big Joe Turner. Others nominated in the classical rhythm and blues category include Stevie Ray Vaughn, B.B. King, Albert King and "Gatemouth" Brown. The Grammy Awards will be televised Feb. 28.

Roomful has maintained a rigorous schedule for the last six years, criss-crossing the country playing mostly one night stands in major metropolitan areas and West Texas.

"We never stop," said Preston Hubbard, Roomful's bass fiddle and bass guitar player.

"When we're home we'll get usually three nights off a week. When we're on the road, it's usually nonstop. It's all one city to the next."

Based in Providence, R.I., Roomful is not a new group. Founded in 1968 by Al Copley and Duke Robillard, the horns were added in 1970 when Greg Piccolo, Rich Lataille and Doug James joined the others. Another member who was with the group during its early years and has remained is John Rossi. Robillard left the group in 1979.

Initially with the group in the late '70s, Hubbard rejoined on the eve of Roomful's third national tour. He has worked with Scott Hamilton, Roy Eldridge and the Memphis Rockabilly Band.

"The band, originally formed as a Chicago blues band, went through different changes. We went to three horns for a while, and then we had four horns for a while. We've had various personnel changes over the years, but the core of the band has remained the same," said Hubbard.

"Now, we have a five-piece horn section. The present band has been in this particular state for four and a half years."

Members of Roomful include Piccolo, vocals and tenor sax; Copley, piano; James, baritone sax; Lataille, alto and tenor sax; Rossi, drums; and newer members Bob Enos, trumpet; Ronnie Earl, guitar; and Porky Cohen, trombone.

Cohen, who used to play with Glenn Miller, is almost twice the age of the other members. After spending the years from the mid-fifties on in Providence raising a family and working in a record store by day and performing at night with the Jewels of Dixie, Cohen was persuaded by Piccolo to return to music fulltime.

"For a long time we were just regional," Hubbard said. "We would go out on the road for short jumps. We've been going to Texas now for 6½ years. We've been playing the East Coast for quite a while, but we didn't really go national until two or three years ago."

Since then, the group has cut several albums including last summer's release with Big Joe Turner (nominated for the Grammy). The group is finishing a new album it hopes will find distribution with CBS Records.

"We take a lot of obscure tunes from the late '40s, early '50s and we've had some originals, too," Hubbard said. "But, basically it's a jump R&B (rhythm & blues) band."

Roomful's repertoire includes works by B.B. King, Johnny "Guitar" Watson, Gatemouth Brown, T-Bone Walker, Albert Collins and Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson.

No maturity required to catch 'D.C. Cab'

A Review

First things first. Last night when I was trying to get in to see "D.C. Cab," there were two youngsters waiting in line for "Hotdog," an R-rated movie now playing at Midland Park Mall Cinema. They offered up their tickets to the ticket-taker and when he asked for I.D., the young boy made a feeble protest but produced one. His young female companion demurely said she hadn't brought hers.

Too bad, because there was no way, as the uncorruptable ticket-taker assured them, that they would get to see an R-rated movie without her I.D. But what about their money? They had already paid!

No problem there. They could just get a refund, he politely suggested.

As I was going on through (disappointed that he didn't check my I.D.), I overheard the young girl ask when the next showing of "Yentl" was.

Moral of the story? Kids will be kids but wily ol' ticket-takers know it.

Now, to follow the logical extension of this case for ratings, it would seem that a certain maturity is required in the viewing of "R" material; however, "D.C. Cab" begs the point.

A collection of misfits, headed by Max Gail as Harold, an ex-Vietnam veteran (who lights his fireplace with a war souvenir flamethrower), cruise our nation's capital in beat-up old yellow cabs searching for fares. They are crazy, undisciplined, perverted and self-involved. But scratch the surface and even the most hardened cabbie, Tyrone (Charlie Barnett), comes through for his friends.

It is a zany movie with messages about loyalty, commitment and integrity, which are leveled with sledgehammer force — about as subtle as Mr. T., one of the stars. But it never pretends to be anything greater and delivers on that level alone.

The humor gets low, especially in Gary Busey's ("The Buddy Holly Story," and "Barbarosa") character, Dell, a Southern farm boy moved to the big city. But Busey is a stand-out in this minor part and is joined by other notables: Gail, Barnett, Adam Baldwin as Albert, a would-be cabbie, and Bill Maher as frustrated musician, Baba.

Even with some fine performances, parts of "D.C. Cab" are mindless, like when Mr. T. makes a rousing speech about ideals in front of the Lincoln Monument and then turns to deliver a hand salute to our 16th president. But "D.C. Cab" should, nevertheless, get a hand for enthusiasm alone. It is obvious everyone is having a ball and that feeling is contagious.

Helping to keep up the lively high-stepping pace is the electronic music by Giorgio Moroder ("Flashdance"), the perfect musical glue for this playfully loose Joel Schumacher writer-director effort (with executive producers Peter Gruber and Jon Peters).

Rated R (if you have a exceptionally youthful face, or are just a youth, take an I.D.), "D.C. Cab" doesn't require maturity for the plot, but it certainly does for the profanity and nudity.

Actor finds 'Right Stuff'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred Ward, after years as an itinerant actor, is suddenly sought after by filmmakers for such movies as "The Right Stuff," "Uncommon Valor" and "Silkwood."

In March he joins Goldie Hawn and Kurt Russell in "Swing Shift." He will play the proprietor of a dance studio just before and during World War II.

The 40-year-old Ward, who once quit acting to work in Alaska, didn't get much recognition until director Philip Kaufman cast him as astronaut Gus Grissom in "The Right Stuff."

POSITIVE THINKING

Two difficulties better to handle than just one

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

One effective way to handle difficulties is to take on somebody else's problems. Actually you can handle two difficulties — your own and somebody else's — better than you can handle your own alone. If you have a tough difficulty, tell you what you do: look around until you find somebody who has a worse difficulty than yours, then start helping that individual. You will find in so doing that your own problem will be much easier to handle.

A story by Arthur Gordon about the editor of a small town weekly newspaper, a man who was having some real difficulties illustrates the point. One day the editor's neighbor, a man named Bill, took his wife and little son out on the river in a canoe. The water was rough and the canoe capsized. The parents were good swimmers and they tried desperately to save their boy, but he was swept away and drowned. The father was inconsolable. "Why did I do this?" "Why didn't I do that?" So he argued with himself in futility and desperation. He walked the streets. People would see him on country roads, walking, walking, always walking.

One night Jack, the newspaper editor, was working late in his office. He was also struggling with his own problems. About midnight came a rap on his door and there stood his neighbor, Bill. "You're out late tonight, Bill. What are you doing?"

"Jack, I'm walking, just walking. You see, I can't forget. Why did that have to happen? Why did I take the boy out in the canoe? Why couldn't I rescue him? I can't understand it, Jack."

"Come in, Bill, Sit down and let's talk." Bill slumped in the chair. "I can't talk. I just don't feel like talking."

"Okay," the editor said, "that's all right. Just sit here with me and I'll go on with my work. Whenever you feel like talking, let me know." After a while he asked, "Bill, would you like a cup of coffee? It'll warm you up."

"Yes, thanks," said Bill. But still he wasn't ready to talk. It got to be on toward two o'clock in the morning.

Then Bill said, "I'm ready to talk now, Jack." For an hour he reasoned it all out, lived it all over again. Jack listened. One of the best things a person can do in helping another individual is simply to learn to listen and let that individual know that you care. Finally, Bill ran down. "Guess that's all I've got to say tonight, Jack." He got up to go.

Jack put his hand on the broken man's shoulder. "We all love you," he said kindly. "I wish I could help."

"But," said Bill, "you have helped — more than I can ever tell you. You've helped me because you listened. I know that you're my friend. Good night, Jack." He walked out into the night.

Jack sat lost in thought. Of a sudden his mind went to his own problems. To his astonishment, that which had been unclear was now clear; that which he couldn't see his way through he now saw objectively; that which seemed to overwhelm him before now seemed easier to cope with. He had more power to handle his own difficulty.

When you detach from your problems and help someone cope with their's, you will be better able to handle your own much more effectively.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Testing can separate patients

Dear Dr. Solomon: I remember when people used to be kept in bed a long time after an operation, and then doctors learned that it was better for them to be up and around as soon as possible. Wouldn't the same kind of reasoning hold true for a person who has had a heart attack? I think a lot of people who have had heart attacks could probably go back to work a lot earlier than they do now. — Earl, Montgomery, Ala.

Dear Earl: Dr. Robert DeBusk, director of the cardiac rehabilitation program at Stanford University, believes that a number of patients who have had myocardial infarctions could probably return to work a lot earlier than they do now. However, it is necessary to separate these low-risk patients from high-risk patients who must be treated more conservatively.

Exercise testing three weeks after the attack can help separate these two groups of patients. This would permit more successful medical management of those at high risk, while low-risk patients could be helped to become independent more quickly.

Dear Dr. Solomon: How can I ever thank you? You have given me my life back. I have smoked 35 years. When I quit and I was smoking two and a half packs a day, I tried everything.

I detested the smell of smoke in my home, clothes, car and it was everywhere. My husband would tell me, "you're looking for a miracle, there is no such thing. Just throw the damn things out." I really was looking for a miracle. I didn't have the willpower and I wanted something or someone else to do it for me. Miracles are hard to find. But I found mine: you, Dr. Solomon.

How this works, I'll never know. When I walked out of your clinic, the urge for a cigarette drifted away with the breeze. It faded away, nothing would have made me believe it. My family and friends are amazed. I would break out in a cold sweat trying to quit smoking. I prayed, I cried. I don't understand how the cure happened, but I could care less for a cigarette or if I ever smoke again. I never will. I couldn't go through it (smoking) again. Besides, I don't know if your system would work on me again. I'll never take that chance.

May God continue to give you strength and good health and happiness always.

Will Caroline Kennedy wed New York designer?

Kennedy

NEW YORK (AP) — Wedding bells may soon be ringing for Caroline Kennedy and New York design consultant Ed Schlossberg, according to a published report.

Miss Kennedy, 26, will announce her engagement after her mother, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, returns from a trip to India, the New York Post reported Saturday.

Quoting unidentified sources, the Post said Miss Kennedy, an employee of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and Schlossberg, 36, a friend for two years, visited the Kennedy family in Hyannisport, Mass., over Thanksgiving.

Reporters' telephone calls to Mrs. Onassis' spokeswoman, Nancy Tuckerman, were not answered and Melody Miller, an aide to Miss Kennedy's uncle, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said by telephone from McLean, Va., that she knew nothing about the report.

Getty

LOS ANGELES (AP) — J. Ronald Getty, the oldest living heir of late oil tycoon J. Paul Getty, has tried in court to increase his $3,000 annual allotment from the billion-dollar Getty trust — but a judge said no.

The trust, which could pay Getty's brothers up to $160 million a year after the proposed purchase of Getty Oil by Texaco Inc., pays Getty only $3,000 annually based on provisions included in 1934.

"Even though I am sympathetic, I cannot change the facts and I cannot change the law," Superior Court Judge Julius M. Title said Friday in denying Getty's challenge of the trust provisions.

Title ruled that no agreement was made to "equalize" Getty's trust shares with his brothers, either by his grandmother, Sarah C. Getty, for whom the trust is named, or by J. Paul Getty.

Getty's attorney, Ira D. Riskin, said he plans to review Title's ruling for a possible appeal.

Mrs. Getty awarded J. Ronald Getty, now 53, the flat $3,000 annual fee and set escalating payments for his brothers because J. Ronald was expected to inherit wealth from his maternal grandfather, Otto Helmle, a German electricity company executive.

But Mrs. Getty did not change the provisions of the trust even after Helmle was jailed by the Nazis and lost his fortune.

Kazan

NEW YORK (AP) — Film and stage director Elia Kazan says the famed Actor's Studio was an "artistic effort," not a school, and studio founder Lee Strasberg was a "moderator" rather than a teacher, in testimony in a suit brought by Strasberg's widow.

Whether the studio was a school or not is the central issue in a dispute over the ownership of about 1,000 tapes made during sessions at the studio between 1949 and 1982.

Strasberg's widow Anna is seeking ownership of the tapes, which she contends are like a professor's notes and therefore his personal property. The Actor's Studio management wants to retain the tapes for its archives.

Kazan, who directed the stage and film versions of "A Streetcar Named Desire" and was one of the founders of the studio, testified Friday in Surrogate's court.

"I take exception to the word 'school,'" he testified. "We were a different species of artistic effort. It was always a non-profit studio, without tuition..."

School nurses seem to stay busy

MISD joining day of honor

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Last Wednesday was an ordinary day for Ruth Mitchell.

A crying student who had confessed to her teacher that she had been abused by her stepfather the night before was coming in.

Already, Mrs. Mitchell had seen another teacher who had slipped on the icy sidewalk, banging her head on the cement.

Two parents had visited her separately to discuss financing dental and hearing treatment for their children, the dental clinic called to report one of the students hadn't shown up for her appointment, and the principal came in to advise her a child with a reported dog bite needed to be checked.

It was 10 a.m. and another typical day for a school nurse.

With eight nurses serving the Midland Independent School District's 21 elementary, three junior high, two freshman and two high schools, they stay busy.

The duties are not limited to checking the temperatures of students trying to get an excused day of hookey, as many think when reflecting on their school days. It entails much more and, as a result, Wednesday has been designated National School Nurse Day.

Mrs. Mitchell, chairman of the MISD nurses, said she was head nurse in labor and delivery at Midland Memorial Hospital before coming to the school district 19 years ago.

"I really liked that, it was my specialty for many years. School is really different, but a whole new challenge."

She also worked with a general practitioner for several years, where she gained experience in childhood injuries and sickness. "That helped me because you have to be able to decide if a child is bad enough to go to the doctor or not."

"You have to like children, enjoy being around them and working with them."

State laws dealing with immunization take up much of the time, she explained. Records of each child must be kept, vision and hearing tests made, health-related problems screened, first-aid provided and communicable diseases and child abuse reported.

For families who cannot afford proper dental, medical and hearing care, referrals are made to community clinics, which can provide treatments at low costs.

"All of the clinics have had a heavier group than ever before," she said, citing the economy as the main factor. Proposals of opening up a night clinic are being made because of the overflow.

The school nurses also are available as resources in the classroom during health-related studies.

In addition, the nurses encourage teachers to participate in inservices such as CPR, which was used to save the life of a junior high school teacher who suffered a heart attack at one of the schools last year.

"We counsel a lot of the staff on health," she said. "I don't think it's in our procedures, but I know I do a lot of checking teachers' blood pressure."

Nonetheless, there are the typical playground injuries, chicken pox epidemics and "especially at the junior high level on up, the ones who come in at the same time every day, trying to get out of a specific class.

"But if the nurse is there, we usually take their temperatures and send them back."

Daily duties

Ruth Mitchell checks a student's hearing, one of a myriad of duties she performs as a school nurse. In recognition of school nurses and their work, Wednesday is being observed as National School Nurse Day.

Continuous, consistent discipline stressed

Santa Rita practicing Positive Action Plan

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Traditionally, discipline in school has varied from teacher to teacher much as discipline in the home varies from parent to parent. Midland Independent School District has tried to encourage continuity and consistency in elementary schools through assertive discipline.

The principle behind assertive discipline is to reward positive behavior and set specific consequences for misbehavior. The principal behind the Positive Action Plan at Santa Rita is Royce Austin.

A few basic rules, such as respect for personal space of others, are posted in each classroom, he explained. A student who breaks a rule has his name written on the board as a warning.

"If that's the last thing he does that day, the name's erased and it starts over," Austin said. If not, the student is denied a privilege.

If he misbehaves a third time, the teacher calls his parents. A fourth time he is sent to the principal's office, and a fifth time the principal calls his parents.

But rather than point out misconduct, teachers are encouraged to praise good behavior. Often within the classrooms of Santa Rita, educators will be heard to comment, "Lisa, I really like the way you sit quietly at your desk and work."

The theory is that this will encourage good conduct in other students, and those who typically misbehave to get attention will realize they need to act positively to be noticed.

Students who break rules outside of class are issued pink slips. The child then becomes ineligible to be a Superkid. If he gets a second ticket within two weeks his parents are called, and a third he is sent to the principal, who calls his parents. With a fourth a conference is called, and a fifth usually results in corporal punishment.

At the end of each six weeks, those students who have been deemed Superkids two of the three two-week periods are awarded ribbons and allowed to attend a special assembly.

"About 75 percent of our kids get to go to the assembly," Austin estimated. "The only negative part is some kids are so good and have such a good concept of themselves that when they get a pink slip it absolutely wipes them out.

"The ultimate is for the kid to become a Self Manager," Austin continued. Students who are consistently good can apply to be a Self Manager, and are given special duties and privileges.

Another method of reward is Santa Rita Gold. A teacher who notices a praiseworthy act will give the student a gold slip. These students have their names entered in a drawing for a small prize.

For most students, a system of rewards is sufficient to encourage good behavior, Austin said. For some, it simply doesn't work, and then more severe measures are taken.

But uniform discipline does have its faults, according to parent and former teacher Lorene Teed.

"I'm not real thrilled with it," she said. "From a former teacher's standpoint, it's a lot of Mickey-Mouse work. They're so busy monitoring the child's behavior they can't teach. And having only one type of discipline really limits what they're able to do. It locks them into a system which may not work with all children.

"I think you should reward positive behavior. I think they've got it a little twisted though. The idea (behind assertive discipline) is to give them warnings. But with some children you need to start at the other end of the spectrum. You need to have a show of force first and then ease up on them if their behavior improves."

She said from a parent's point of view, she resents being called for minor misbehavior such as talking out of turn or running in the halls.

"It puts a lot of responsibility on a person who is removed from the situation. It gives the parents the impression that this teacher doesn't know how to discipline. I have told teachers, 'Don't bother me with it.' Discipline ought to be swift and immediate and consistent. To have that, it needs to be handled right there at the school.

"I don't want my children to go undisciplined," she continued. "There's no excuse for misbehavior in the classroom. I want it handled right there and I will support whatever they do."

A student at Lee High's on-campus suspension center studies quietly at his carrel. Not allowed to talk or leave their desks, students spend the entire day working on assignments.

Lee's suspension center helps students adjust

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

In the on-campus suspension center at Lee High School four students were bent over their books. Each sat at a carrel — a desk with boxed-in sides.

The only sounds were the turning of pages, the scratching of pens and an occasional comment by director Rick Etheredge to a student with questions on a particular assignment. The few windows in the room were covered with black paper. From the hallway came the muted sounds of other students laughing.

The center is an alternative to at-home suspension. Its purpose, according to Etheredge, is to give a student an opportunity to work out behavorial problems while remaining in school, at the same time removing him from a problem situation while helping him learn to deal with it.

Thus, students are able to keep up with schoolwork instead of receiving zeros for the days they are gone. Since about half the students sent to the center are being punished for truancy, it seems a more logical solution than keeping them out of school even longer, according to school trustee Joyce Sherrod.

About 150 students a year have been sent to the Lee High on-campus suspension center. A small percentage have returned once, and none has come back after that, according to Etheredge.

"I BELIEVE in the program," he said. "I like it and I believe there's a necessity for it."

Etheredge, a certified counselor, has been supervising the center since its establishment four years ago. Cost of the two high school centers, which serve seventh- through 12th-graders, is about $90,000 a year including salaries, according to Special Programs Director Leslie Hinds.

Students suspended for fighting, truancy, vandalism, using drugs or alcohol, are sent there for five days. Whether they remain longer is up to the individual, Etheredge said.

"I have rigid rules: No talking, no gum chewing, no sleeping, no wasting time, no slumping in the chairs, limited bathroom breaks, a 15-minute lunch break and a limited number of times they can leave their desk. From 8 in the morning until 2:30 in the afternoon they sit all day long doing schoolwork. For many of them, that's quite a punishment."

STUDENTS AREN'T allowed to mingle with peers during school hours. They must be at their desks working at 8 a.m. and leave the campus before other students are dismissed. Because their hours are different, transportation is not provided.

They are not allowed to leave the room during the day, except for two brief periods to use the restroom and water fountain. They must bring a lunch and have 15 minutes to eat it at their desks. There is no free time.

They cannot attend school functions and activities during the time of suspension. Teachers assign homework which must be completed with a passing grade.

Tardiness, unexcused absences or breaking any of the rules results in a longer suspension period.

Etheredge said he makes the student understand that the action that got him suspended, and any action that extends his suspension, is entirely his own decision. He knows the consequences and makes a choice.

"A lot of times in the classroom you don't know what you can get away with. There's no question here. I put the consequences right back on them."

THERE IS NO standard criteria for sending students to the on-campus suspension center. For the same offense, depending on the circumstances, one student might be suspended at home, another at school, another expelled, and yet another may receive a milder punishment.

"It's at the principal's discretion," Etheredge said. "It may be based on the seriousness of the offense or on our ability to help (the student). This is not a dumping ground. We're not a babysitting service to get them out of (educators') hair for awhile."

Punishment should always fit the principle

Appearing on this page are a couple of stories dealing with school discpline.

That's a good, meaty subject, the kind any topnotch reporter would love to write about. It's a topic that affects many people, particularly teachers, students and parents. But even those of us who don't fall within one of those categories have had past experiences with the issue.

Beginning in the first grade, we did our stints of standing in the corner, usually for being obnoxious and talking out of turn. Unfortunately, that only led to a great deal of giggling and finger-pointing, a terribly disruptive force for the rest of the class, so the teacher would often resort to the next best thing — moving the student's entire body and desk into the hallway where he suffered a not-so-severe punishment of solitary confinement.

If that failed, it was off to the principal's office and a painful date with the paddle. There was no diplomacy involved. The kid was merely whipped and sent back to the classroom where he was expected to behave in a respectable manner.

Sometimes it worked, but more often than not it was a short-term deterrent. Classroom antics resumed quickly.

As we grew older, the reasons for receiving "licks" (as they were affectionately called) were expanded. Justifiable cause included fighting, running in the hallways, flooding the restrooms by stopping up commodes, throwing food, placing thumbtacks in chairs and smoking cigarettes on campus.

Get caught doing any of the above and you could be assured of receiving at least three licks.

Still, for people, especially males, in my age group (early 30s) the No. 1 disciplinary problem from our high school days focused on the length we chose to wear our hair. Many a war was fought on the subject...first between student and parent and later (after the parents threw up their arms in disgust) between student and administrator.

Judging from the photograph that accompanies this column, you might get the impression that I'm not a great lover of burr haircuts.

You would be correct. Nor did I appreciate the "skinned look" 15 years ago when the "great haircut battle" was being waged.

The result?

I spent an inordinate amount of my time in the principal's office, staring at a man who, unfortunately, was still sporting the Butch look. There, we would lock horns, each explaining in great detail why the other was unworthy of rendering a decision on such a delicate subject as my personal appearance.

We would rant and rave and, in the end, I would make a quick trip to the barber shop where I would get just enough trimmed off the sides to satisfy his demands.

Three days later, the excruciating ordeal would be repeated.

Now, you're probably thinking that I lost the war. After all, Butch remained the final authority.

But that's not necessarily true. On a recent visit home, I happened to cross paths with my old adversary and, lo and behold, his hair was touching his ears, a crime that 15 years ago would have netted him a trip to the barber shop and a threatened three-day suspension.

My, the times they are a-changin.

Annual livestock auction draws sales record

The auction of 120 premium calves, hogs and lambs in the 35th annual Midland County Livestock Association Show grossed a record $96,680.15.

Rusty Jones, association president, termed the show a dual success. Of the 324 animals in the show, 120 premium head of livestock exhibited by 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America (FFA) members were in the sale in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

The aim of the show is to help 4-H Club and FFA youngsters grow and develop in management, maturity, leadership, character and economic realities associated with agriculture, he said. About 200 boys and girls exhibited animals in the show.

The record sale reflected "tremendous community support" of the three-day show, which climaxed in the Tuesday night auction.

"The sale committee did a whale of a job this year," said Jones. That 19-member committee, which attracted new buyers and encouraged "old" livestock show supporters to return to the auction, was headed by Karl Armstead. Midland individuals, businesses and banking institutions "came to the forefront" in support the sale.

Jones cited Midland County Judge Bill Ahders and the county commissioners who "went out of their way to support us and always have. We appreciate that. This (the annual show) is a county function."

The auction's $96,680.15, which goes to the exhibitors, was 25 percent higher than last year's sale of $72,000 and surpassed the 1982 sale of $94,000.

In the sale were 21 steers, 49 hogs and 50 lambs. The calves brought an average of $1.44 per pound; the lambs, $5.12, and the hogs, $3.06.

Leslie E. Floyd Showmanship Awards for boys went to Scott Driver, sheep; Andy VanVeen, swine, and Robby McBryde, steer. Honorable mention awards were given to Johnie Casbeer, sheep; Jeff Patterson, swine, and Lonnie Williamson, steer.

Roy G. Neely Sr. Memorial Showmanship Awards for girls were presented to Jill Henson, sheep; Teresa Glover, swine, and Tracey Logan, steer. Honorable mention awards were presented to Michelle Driver and Trisha Patton, sheep; Karen Copeland, swine, and Wendy Smith, steer.

Alternative to suspension offered

Discipline policies for the Midland Independent School District are detailed in handbooks. Although there is room for discretion, basic guidelines and avenues of appeal are specified.

An eighth-grader in the suspension center for truancy thought the district's policies are clear and fair. And he felt the center is a good deterrent — he didn't plan to be back.

DALE BIGGS, physics teacher at Lee High and president of the Midland Educators Association, also feels MISD has an adequate discipline policy. "I think the policy is very well done. It's left up to the principal. It's versatile, it's not dogmatic."

The problem with discipline in schools, he said, is not the way the policy is written, but how it is implemented.

"We have schools in this system that have excellent discipline. And then we have schools where the principals aren't quite so strong and who don't back up their teachers, and then you have discipline that's a little lax. The secret to good discipline is having the principal spell it out to teachers so they know where they stand."

He also puts responsibility on the parent. "If a parent sends his children to school well disciplined and ready to learn, school systems everywhere wouldn't be under the attack they are today. Parents don't want to discipline their kids and are critical of the teacher because he doesn't discipline the kids.

"This system believes parents ought to be involved quite extensively, and most teachers agree. I think they need to be informed. I have had to call very few parents in the time I have been here (18 years), but if I have a problem I can't solve I won't hesitate to do it. It's a team effort."

Midland family reading up on — and for — MS

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

"I knew there was an MS READaTHON, but I never knew what it was," Tara McKnight, 13, said.

"I never even knew what MS was," agreed Doug, her father, sitting in his wheelchair.

Two years ago, McKnight, who admitted he was not a physically active person, resolved to lose weight in the new year. He joined a health spa and began working out.

Within a month, he was experiencing numbness in his hands and feet.

"He told me that I'd better go see a neurologist," McKnight remembered. "He said, 'I'm sure it's not MS, but that's how the symptoms start.'

"I knew he'd said something familiar, but I thought he'd said muscular dystrophy or something." When he returned home, he looked MD up in the encyclopedia. The symptoms mentioned didn't match his.

He made an appointment with the neurologist for the next day.

MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS, a disabling disease of the central nervous system, usually strikes in the prime of life without warning.

Doug McKnight was 32.

Now, at 34, partially confined to a wheelchair and unable to work, his life has changed. And the role of his family — in and out of the house — also has changed.

Shannon was the top money winner in the MS READaTHON this year. Bringing in more than $500 one would think she has done her part. But last year, between the two of them, another $500 was raised. And their giving hasn't stopped, according to their father.

The two Goddard eighth-graders help out with household chores. Tara enjoys babysitting to earn money, while Shannon would rather do the ironing after her dad finishes doing the family laundry. Both girls are active in speech and drama and Tara is still involved in Girl Scouts.

The two also clip and file coupons for the grocery shopping they do with their mother, Pam. Money saved with the coupons is divided among the girls and their parents.

Because of Tara's involvement with babysitting, she didn't read as many books in the MS READaTHON this year. Shannon admitted she isn't crazy about reading.

But they do these things for their dad, and others who suffer like him.

"SOME OF THE KIDS at school make fun of the people in the READaTHON," Tara said. "But a lot of people say they should've gotten in it."

Many of their friends and teachers sponsored them in the contest, they said. And others participated themselves.

After he was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis in March 1982, McKnight returned to work as vice president of accounting at MidAmerica Petroleum, Inc. At first he was able to walk and the fatigue associated with the disease was his main obstacle. But as the disease set in, he began to stumble into walls, his balance thrown off.

After making another trip to the hospital, he returned to work parttime, quitting for good in August 1982.

He knows he's lucky.

Multiple sclerosis causes the sheath surrounding nerve fibers in the brain and spinal cord to disintegrate. Depending on where the disease strikes, a victim can become completely paralyzed or have brain damage.

McKnight's disability is confined below his chest. Although he has no feeling in his feet or right hand, he still has enough in his left hand to drive the family car, now equipped with hand controls.

Most MS victims fall into two categories: those whose symptoms steadily worsen and stabilize, and those whose symptoms flip back and forth between attacks, called exacerbations, and periods of recovery, or remissions.

"THAT ONE IS very unpredictable," McKnight said. "But I'm in that other group that apparently is going to be stable so I don't have to worry about next week."

Handlebars line the walls of the hall in their home for physical therapy purposes, McKnight said. He rides his wheelchair around the house, but uses an extra-tall walker and extra-long "Canadian cane," with the clasps below the elbow, to accommodate his 6-foot, 2½-inch frame for short walks.

When McKnight became ill, his wife began working for Transart Industries, Inc., where she now is a design director. She has attended physical therapy classes with him and now helps him exercise most mornings. In addition, he has physical and occupational therapy at the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center in Odessa every Thursday. Transportation is provided by the Permian Basin MS Society.

THAT ISN'T ALL the society has furnished for McKnight and other MS victims.

After he was diagnosed, McKnight looked up the MS organization in the phone book. That afternoon, a volunteer brought literature and pamphlets on the disease to his house. Besides furnishing a monthly newsletter, the weekly trips to Odessa and loaning equipment such as wheelchairs, the local chapter provides group meetings, with, among the varying programs, physicians lecturing on different aspects of the disease.

The chapter also provides moral support.

A woman who was diagnosed with MS last fall provided something else: her husband, a parapelegic since a car accident eight years ago, taught McKnight how to drive a car with hand controls on the Lee High School parking lot.

But the involvement has spread outside the victims and their families. At the church the McKnights attend, their faith strengthened from their ordeal, members of the congregation also have become involved as volunteers in the Permian Basin MS Society.

McKnight loaned her a second-hand wheelchair he had bought in case his motor-driven one broke down.

MS readers raise $29,000

From Staff Reports

Six hundred thirty-three Permian Basin first-through eighth-graders raised $29,000 for multiple sclerosis in this year's MS READaTHON. The students received pledges and read 8,380 books to raise the money.

Top money-raiser in the Permian Basin was Shannon McKnight of Midland. The Goddard Junior High eighth-grader, whose father is a victim of MS, raised $502.85. She read 23 books in the six-week READaTHON. Shannon will receive a $75 gift certificate and a $100 certificate from Midland Park Mall.

Just behind her was Milam second-grader Tony Centeno. He raised $501 and read 60 books. He won a bicycle, watch and $50 gift certificate from the mall.

The mall also donated $25 certificates for the student who read the most books in each participating elementary or junior high school.

For the second year, Hillander was the school which raised the most money and read the most books. With a 283 student population, nearly $5,500 was pledged and 1,696 books read. The school's library will receive a $50 check. Hillander raised more money than the runner-ups, Fannin Elementary and Goddard Junior High, combined.

The Permian Basin student reading the most books was also a Midlaner — Phillip Dunford Jr. at Hillander. He read 153 books.

The National Multiple Sclerosis Society originated the READaTHON in 1974. A portion of the pledges are sent to national headquarters for research, while the rest remains in the Permian Basin to fund patient services. Youngsters enrolled in the program last year read an estimated $11 million books.

education in brief

Texts may be examined

Textbooks being considered for adoption in Midland schools will be available for inspection in the cafeteria of Sam Houston Elementary, 2000 W. Louisiana, Monday through Friday.

The display will be open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. MISD staff members, parents and others are invited to examine the selections. Comments or questions should be made in writing to Leslie Hinds, director of special programs, Midland Independent School District, 702 N. N St., Midland 79701.

Lee High annuals for sale

Lee High students will have a final opportunity to purchase 1984 yearbooks, The Rebelee, Thursday and Friday during lunch period at the northwest door of F section.

Price is $20, and sales will cease at 12:55 each day. Checks should be made out to Rebelee. The yearbooks will be distributed in late August.

Music scholarships available

Country music scholarships to South Plains College in Levelland are being offered to 25 students. They are worth up to $250 a semester.

Students wishing to apply should submit a cassette audition tape with four songs — vocal, instrumental or both — of country or bluegrass material. Deadline is May 15.

For more information contact John Hartin, instructional coordinator, country/bluegrass music, South Plains College, 1401 College Avenue, Levelland 79336, or call 806-894-9611, extension 268.

Air Force may pay tuition

The Air Force is offering more than 200 medical school scholarships. The four-year Armed Forces Health Professions Scholarships pay full tuition, books, fees, laboratory expenses and $550 a month living expenses.

Participation is based on competitive selection, and students have a service obligation for the same number of months they participate.

Two indicted on SS charges

From Staff Reports

A Midland woman and an Andrews man have been indicted by a federal grand jury in Midland for making false statements to the U.S. Social Security Administration in order to continue receiving benefits.

Oasea Jones Williams, 37, of Midland was charged with two counts of making false statements to conceal her earnings and to continue receiving benefits on behalf of her daughter.

Demetrio E. Alaniz, 53, of Andrews was charged with making a false statement to continue receiving disability benefits while he was working full-time.

The indictments are formal charges and are not evidence of guilt.

If convicted, either defendant could be sentenced up to five years in prison and fined $10,000.

Drilling ordinance debated

From Staff Reports

Midland City Council may see an ordinance regulating drilling oil and gas wells within the city limits come to completion Tuesday as the panel is expected to approve a revised-revised proposal.

The council is scheduled to consider the ordinance during a regular meeting that starts at 10 a.m. in City Hall Council Chambers.

On Friday, the council drilled inch by inch through a proposed revision that had been prepared for the Jan. 10 meeting. That ordinance had been changed from the original regulations. The major change came on the distance from the drill site to an occupied structure.

The council also will discuss at 3 p.m. the Neighborhood Watch Program headed by Neal Meares.

Almost two years since voters approved a bond issue for constructing two fire substations, the council will consider awarding a bid on that construction. These will be located north of Loop 250.

An offer to furnish the Federal Aviation Administration with a flight service station will be discussed. And National Display Systems will request permission to install a sign at Midland Center.

Resolutions denying claims from Richard Allen Grimes, Charles D. Preston and Tina Fambrough will be reviewed.

Eastside Cab Company is seeking a taxicab franchise to Morris Mayberry and also a permit to the same person to operate at Midland Regional Airport.

At 11 a.m., the council will hold a public hearing on certain structures considered to be dangerous and public nuisances and order their removal.

A hearing is slated for 1:35 p.m. when the council will hear on appeal a request from Concept Construction Company for a zone change from IF-2, single family district, to 2F, two family dwelling. The request is for portions of Magnolia, Hickory and Scarbauer Drive between Tyler Road and Butternut Street.

At 2:40 p.m., the council will hold a public hearing on a request by Casbeer and Associates for a zone change from C-3, commercial district, to PD, planned district on tracts located along Fort Worth Street between Ohio and Texas.

The last public hearing will be at 2 p.m. on a proposed amendment to the Zoning Code. This would amend the procedure for establishing zoning on newly-annexed territory.

The council will look at a proposed change in zoning on land located on the north side of Wadley Avenue 1,600 feet east of Midland Drive.

Also to be considered are an alternate sidewalk plan at ClayDesta Plaza and a preliminary plat for Freeland Addition.

School zone speed limits will be established on A Street abutting Oaklawn Park Baptist School and on Mineola north of Kansas Street.

County Commissioners

Midland County commissioners are to consider a contract estimate for installing a water line to the proposed jail site east of Midland in their 9 a.m. Monday meeting in the Midland County Courthouse.

The commissioners are considering building a $6 million jail near the Midland County Exhibit Building. The current jail is on the fifth floor of the 1920-30 vintage courthouse.

In other action, the commissioners are to:

—Hear a presentation from Cherry & Ellis Telephone Service.

—Consider nominating three new Midland County Public Library advisery board members and issuing news bids for library materials security system.

—Consider setting 1983 audit fees.

MISD Board of Trustees

Midland school trustees Tuesday will approve budget guidelines and estimated costs for the 1984-85 school year.

The board also will discuss the implications of House Bill 246, which guarantees the issuance of school revenue bonds with the permanent school fund; discuss upcoming municipal elections, in which a vacant seat and that of trustee Ann Page will be filled; accept a $10,000 matching gift from the Fasken Foundation for the district's computer program; and honor retiring police officer O.W. "Preacher" Roberts, who has served three generations of Midland High School students.

The meeting will begin at 1:30 p.m. in the board room, 702 N. N St.

GISD Board of Trustees

Greenwood school trustees will meet in the board room at 7 p.m. Tuesday. They will discuss upcoming elections for the positions of James Brooks, Charles Gardner and Ted Benton. Superintendent James Warlick will suggest that a teacher in-service day Feb. 20 be used as a make-up class day for Wednesday, when school was canceled due to bad weather.

Indoor tennis lesson to begin in February

From Staff Reports

Midland Parks and Recreation Department and The Midlander health club will co-sponsor a session of indoor tennis lessons on the climate-controlled indoor tennis courts at the health facility.

The classes will start Feb. 2 and continue through March 8 on Thursdays from 8 to 9 p.m. Fee for the six lessons is $12. Class will be limited to 10 people. The fee is payable in advance at the Parks and Recreation Office, 300 Baldwin. Registrations are now being taken. Further information may be obtained from Em Carnett, 683-4281, extension 316.

They will be mixed for men and women 14 years and up. Persons registering for the class must be at the advanced beginner level or above and have some basic knowledge of scorekeeping and strokes. Proper tennis attire is required. Shoes with black soles won't be allowed because of their damage to the court surface. Students must bring their own tennis racquets. Balls will be furnished.

Instructor will be the club's tennis pro, Gary Pierce. He has spent several years as a professional organizing, teaching and participating in tennis activities. He is a longtime member of the U.S. Professional Tennis Association with professional standing. He is listed in the National Tennis Registry. Pierce has coached several national and state-ranked players along with such celebrities as Debbie Reynolds and son, Kirk Douglas and son, and Jean Simmons and son.

He has worked as sports director and head tennis pro in California, Minnesota, Florida and Washington.

YMCA offers weight training

Classes will meet from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays for six weeks.

For more information on the class, which will be instructed by Chris Biodrowski, contact the Alamo Y at 694-2528.

Reporting on religion discussed

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The lofty role religion plays in the everyday lives of many Americans should not be overlooked by the news media, believes author and lecturer Dr. James W. Carty of Bethany College, W.Va.

Carty, the first man ordained as a minister of journalism at the University of Chicago, lectured on the significance of religious journalism last week at Odessa College.

"I think that too many newspapers relegate religion to the Saturday church page and I do think that religion stands on its own feet," said the professor of communications at Bethany. "Some of it deserves to be on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Sunday, as well as Saturday."

Numerous surveys conducted by the Associated Press and United Press International, said the former religion editor of a Nashville, Tenn. daily newspaper, indicate "readers hunger for more news about religion, more about education, more about science." He added that media in the Southeast and Southwest seem more aware of the religion beat's importance than those elsewhere in the nation.

Carty, who traveled as far as the Vatican and Switzerland in his duties as a religion editor, believes the same standards should apply to religious journalists as to any other reporter.

"He or she should be objective; he or she should be fair in her or his treatment of other groups," he said. "Journalists should be ethical and moral in whatever type of story they're handling.... If it's doctrinal writing, then it might have a backfire. But a reporter is a reporter — if the reporter has a good sense of news. I think maybe there's a close borderline between being objective and being cynical, because a person should be skeptical and always try to find out if something is genuine and has meaning."

The greatest problem, he said, lies in neglecting the important angles of religion.

"I'd like to see more feature stories, more interpretative things on trends," noted the author of several books on secular and religious journalism.

Carty said he is convinced most newspaper editors and publishers are receptive to more coverage of religion, if a qualified reporter is available.

For those church members charged with disseminating congregational news to the media, Carty suggested guidelines.

"I think that sometimes persons don't understand that what is of interest to their own congregation is not really newsworthy, and that they should look for things within their congregations that are of interest to everybody. I think that's the big problem throughout any community in the United States — for a congregation to look beyond itself and say, 'what do I have that 80 percent of the readers of the daily would be interested in?'"

Carty yearly conducts numerous conferences on both secular and religious journalism throughout the United States and other countries and specializes in giving guidelines to Hispanic journalists.

Honor Roll Report

MIDLAND IS NOW 99 YEARS OLD. Historians tell us that a few years prior to 1880, Lum Medlin, a lone hunter, made what was later to become Midland his home. Researchers studying this area tell us that Lum was one of the first white men to settle in this area. Early in 1880, R. N. Garrett arrived here with a flock of sheep being driven to market. Like many of those who followed, Garrett took an immediate liking to the surroundings and settled here permanently. Shortly thereafter, his California family joined him.

In those early days the railroad people dropped off a box car to service the growing community as depot, post office and general store. On February 2, 1885 Midland County was established; 26 days later Midland was designated a city.

The old, middle-aged and young enterprises of Midland have contributed immeasurably to the progress, pride and prosperity of our city. You will be interested in reading this list of leading firms and organizations whose names have been arranged by the number of years they have served Midlanders and other West Texas residents.

"COMPROMISE HAS NEVER BEEN MY STYLE..."

"...So when I moved to Midland, Oakridge Apartments was the only logical choice. As far as I'm concerned, there's not a better community around. Oakridge is brand-new. It's in an ideal location. It's very well-managed. Plus, it has the extras other communities don't. I love the indoor spa and sauna, and the community clubhouse and pool. And the custom kitchens with built-in microwaves, woodburning fireplaces and great storage are features I simply don't want to be without. The quality, of course, is uncompromising. Like me!"

1- and 2- bedroom and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

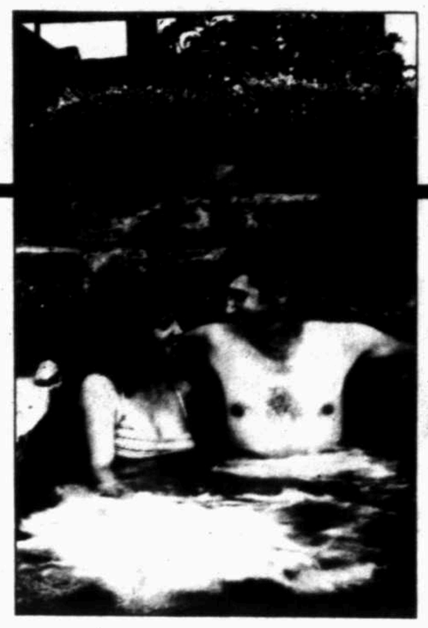
"The quality of the apartment is much better than any others I've seen in Midland."



Mary and Perry Nelson talk about The Clusters:

"The extras included seem like a real bonus. We're former homeowners, so it takes a really nice apartment complex to satisfy us."

"I have a lot more kitchen appliances than I ever did in my own home. Dishwasher, trash compactor, garbage disposal, side-by-side refrigerator, built-in microwave, washer and dryer."

But that's not all. You also get French doors to patios/balconies, mini-blinds, ceiling fans and your choice of wall coverings.

Plus unmatched amenities such as luxurious clubhouse, two pools with Jacuzzis, lighted tennis courts, 4-station jogging trail, aerobics classes and exercise room.

Come and visit and you'll see why the Nelsons' say, "There have been many days we've come home and said, 'They've really done it again, they've gone first class.'"

The age of assertiveness appears to have hit a roadblock. Just when they had learned to "say no" to everything, the me-first generation is now hearing that "I-would-be-happy-to," may sometimes be better.

Cathy Anwyl, who has studied the art of etiquette, says basic Ps and Qs are important.

She believes the corporate era has produced a generation of graduates who have high hopes of hopping from the ivy tower to the executive suite — leaping over the "ladder-climb" established in earlier corporate structures.

She perceives the traits of the new "corporate generation," — a lack of loyalty, correct grammar, common sense and finesse — as an obstacle in their hop-hope.

"In the '60s and '70s everything was 'do my own thing.' It was very casual."

Changing times, however, have created a competitive society. She sees personal "polishing" as being an edge in the marketplace.

Socialness has become serious. The art of remembering one's name when introduced is like a bell. It's music to his ears and you have him playing into your hands, ringing with the compliment you casually bestowed upon him.

She calls it "the little things."

Miss Anwyl, Sakowitz personnel manager, is a member of a team which presents Sakowitz courtesy programs on topics such as telephone etiquette, investment dressing, time management and organization.

Their program includes scheduling presentations to local groups interested in polishing techniques from corporations such as Exxon, Ortloff and Texas American Bank to the Newcomer's club, women's organizations and private homes.

The programs were originally created to meet a need for women suddenly entering the job market — now they are designed for whatever the groups request and are no longer for women only. Still, in Midland, "most of the men don't think they need the seminar," said Miss Anwyl.

Nationally, etiquette consulting has become the boom — with budgets shifting from allocations for management consulting to etiquette consulting.

Miss Anwyl is surprised with what she sees in the recent crop of high school and college graduates. She meets people daily who seem more eager to take a job than to prove to her they are worthy of one.

Her hat is off to the one who takes the initiative to prove to her they want a job.

"If two people are qualified for a job — one has on blue jeans and the other is wearing a suit, I'm going to pick the one in the suit, even if he's less qualified because he has expressed to me he is serious about projecting a professional image."

Simply being able to do the job doesn't determine getting the job, she said.

"So much business is transacted over the phone that today, even first impressions are transmitted over a phone."

"This generation is so quick to move — they haven't seen that in order to get the position, a lot of steps have to be taken. Companies are just as guilty," said Miss Anwyl, who earned a degree in economics and retail management at Russell Sage College in New York.

Miss Anwyl moved to Texas after accepting a job with Sakowitz in Houston, where she had committed herself for at least one year. "You don't even know a company until you've worked with them for at least that long." She later moved to Midland to open the new store. After four years with Sakowitz, she said she is still learning about the company.

"In this day and age, with competition the way it is, foreign or domestic, you need all the extras.

"As Robert T. Sakowitz says, 'None of us are gold. We're all made of brass — constantly in need of polishing and little things.'

"There are just too many smart ones out there climbing the ladder and who know the ropes to get to the top, people who polish themselves."

'No respect' resented

Copley News Service

Lack of respect.

That's what it all boils down to, said Karen Nussbaum, co-founder of 9 to 5, National Association of Working Women.

Nussbaum, who also founded 925, a union for office workers, listed some of the manifestations of this lack of respect during an interview:

— Lack of respect is seen day to day when women are asked to do personal errands for bosses.

— Lack of respect shows up in paychecks — consistently smaller for female white-collar workers than for men in blue-collar jobs that often require less training.

— Lack of respect results in situations such as a female secretary being asked to train a man to become her boss.

For Nussbaum, the final example was having a young male come in the office where she was a clerk-typist and having him stand in front of her and say, "Isn't anyone here?"

For her partner, Ellen Cassady, it was having a boss place a note on her desk saying, "Please remove calendar from my wall." She went to his office, unstuck two pieces of masking tape and placed the calendar on his desk, wondering why he ordered her to do something he could have done himself in seconds.

Nussbaum and Cassedy were both working in clerical jobs at Harvard University 10 years ago when they and eight other women founded the organization.

The association has grown to 12,000 members, a number of whom are at large, affiliated with chapters in 25 cities, and is now run by a staff of 50 paid people.

Nussbaum said it grew with relatively little publicity — but when it was mentioned at various times in the press, letters and telephone calls poured in from women who had been searching for someone who understood their problems.

Nussbaum said that while women are forging their way in professions and into ever-higher management positions in the business world, the fact is that office workers still make up the largest part of the female work force.

Thus, the purpose of the organization is to help women improve the jobs they will most likely be holding by educating them through seminars, meetings, newsletters and special reports. Subjects cover everything from information on health hazards in the office to ways to ask for raises and promotions as well as how to effectively and tactfully refuse chores not part of the job.

Nine to 5 staffers and volunteers also help guide women through the intricacies of bureaucracies and the legal system to obtain their legal rights and to redress wrongs.

Nussbaum said women often end up without belonging to any pension plan, since most plans require 10 or more years of service for the individual to be able to be included — i.e., vested. Since women work in low-paying jobs and often need to keep changing jobs to get any kind of better pay or promotion, they frequently lose out on vesting.

Nussbaum said that women in offices are often subject to health hazards that are not caused by illegal practices, or practices subject to OSHA Occupational Safety and Health Administration regulations.

"There are very few standards for the office environment, but there are hazards, such as copy machines, which emit ozone. So it's important that workers not be sitting too near them. If they spend time using them in an enclosed area, it can be dangerous."

Nussbaum said other possible office health hazards include some kinds of correcting fluid that contain small amounts of trinitroflouornan, and typewriter ribbons and carbonless typing pads, some of which contain carcinogens.

Symptoms such as dizziness, nausea, headache or fatigue all indicate the possibility of too many of these chemicals, she said.

Confusion lurks in 'lost code' zone

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

It was late night and the conventioneer was startled awake in her hotel room. Her roommate had just returned from an evening of socializing with a newfound boyfriend in tow and they were headed straight for the bed next to hers.

She quickly decided to object. In response, the roommate and friend moved to the bathroom instead.

She was right; they were wrong, according to etiquette writer George Mazzei who experienced old-fashioned shock when he heard the story.

"It's ridiculous. People think they don't have to control any of their impulses anymore," said Mazzei, who included the incident in his book, "The New Office Etiquette: A Guide to Getting Along in the Corporate Age."

Rudeness is rampant in America from short-tempered salesclerks and snippy customers to best friends who deliver insults in the name of "honesty," according to the nation's top etiquette writers and consultants who are suddenly finding themselves in demand.

Their readers and customers are mostly people under 35 who are fed up with the lingering casualness and me-first attitudes of the 1960s.

"People like me have been frantically writing the change of rules since 1978," says Letitia Baldridge, author of the revised "Amy Vanderbilt Complete Book of Etiquette."

People are "desperate," says Judith Martin, author of the syndicated column "Miss Manners," which appears in 140 newspapers, and the book "Miss Manners' Guide to Excruciatingly Correct Behavior."

Whatever the motives, people suddenly do not want to be embarrassed in any situation, Baldridge said. Not only do they want to know where to place the salad fork or how to tell someone he has spinach on his teeth, but they also want to know how to handle situations posed by the upward mobility and social revolutions of the last decades.

Not surprisingly, etiquette advice is often conflicting. Merser says that the man should call a day or two after a sleep-over date. Martin warns women not to expect flowers. "The reason they call it a one-night stand is because there are no obligations."

Perhaps the biggest niche in the modern manners market has been carved by corporate manners consultants. An entire generation of people who did not learn manners at home is now entering the work force.

At Lyons' suggestion, the company has hired the Los Angeles-based company to teach "executive etiquette" to its rising employees.

It was around 1978, she said, "The kids cut their hair and put on three-piece suits and tried to get jobs. The period of rebellion called the '60s was too unstructured and inefficient to make people comfortable for long," she believes.

Ironically, the current interest in good manners was spawned by '60s concepts that sounded virtuous at the time but somehow went awry, said Martin, 45. For example, the idea that people should be honest in a literal way all the time translated to the complete freedom to insult people if the feeling arises, she said.

Martin's column brings in 200 letters a week, most from young people. "When it reached the point when they wanted a good job, or fell in love, when they wanted to impress somebody, they found out that people make severe judgments on behavior and there is a code no one told them about," said Martin.

The etiquette writers get their ideas from past rules, questionnaires, and observing themselves and others.

"My answers come from folk customs," Martin said. "Sometimes I go back to manners that worked perfectly well and were abandoned. I just dust them off.

"Ordinary life is unbearable anymore. People are so rude to one another that rudeness is escalating.

"When someone is rude, people want to know how to be ruder back. I keep saying I'm not in the rudeness business."

AT WIT'S END

'Breakthroughs' cause breakdowns

By ERMA BOMBECK

Every time a manufacturer of appliances comes out with a new feature on their product, they call it a "scientific breakthrough."

We have seen the coming of the see-through oven, the talking refrigerator, the thinking-woman's computerized stove top, and the sweeper that does everything but dance backwards.

One more scientific breakthrough and I'm going to have a scientific breakdown.

Who wants to see their oven under glass? Why would a manufacturer consider corrosion a turn-on? It was always enough for me to open the door, grope through the darkness and be cheered when I still had room for a small casserole.

The "breakthroughs" never give you a break. The newest accessory for refrigerators is a signal light that lets you know when it needs vacuuming underneath.

I don't know how it works but I can only suspect instead of the dust growing up through the refrigerator until it reaches the top under the phone book, it reaches a level and shorts a light which goes on, signaling it is ready to be hauled away.

Let us be practical. If God had meant for us to clean under refrigerators, he would have given us yardstick hands.

I do not know anyone personally who does it, nor do I want to establish a relationship. They're probably people who wash their hands after they play with the dog and change the baking soda every year or so.

Frankly, I clean under my refrigerator every time we move and I've never found anything under there worth getting a hernia over. The last time we moved from the farm to the West, I uncovered a pencil stub, an iced teaspoon, two marbles, a cold tablet, a cluster of black globs that had been grapes in another life, two nails, a coat hanger, a skeleton (possibly mammal) and a note reminding me of an appointment with my obstetrician. The kid was 14 years old.

I suspect there are talking stoves in our future, mixers that whimper, "Clean me," and washers that will flash OVERLOAD and give us a lecture.

I don't know about you, but if I wanted guilt, I'd call my mother.

Junior Leagues report busy year

NEW YORK (AP) — The Association of Junior Leagues sponsored 2,123 projects in 1982-83, an increase of 22 percent from the previous year, association president Anne Hoover has announced.

In the same period, AJL member Leagues spent a total of $9,462,079 on their community projects, which amounts to an increase of $2.5 million over last year.

It is estimated that 8.4 million hours were volunteered by provisionals and active members last year, with sustaining members adding considerably to that total.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Once again Midlanders will have the privilege and pleasure of working together for a community-wide effort. (Who can forget the community spirit and the good times generated by Midland's Bicentennial Celebration?) The first annual "Celebration of the Arts," under the auspices of the Midland Arts Assembly, is scheduled for May 11-19. Hopefully it will involve hundreds of Midlanders in many different capacities.

"Celebration" chairman Dick Dunbar gave an update on plans for the event at a recent wine and cheese party held in Ann and Bascom Mitchell's elegant Georgian-style home. In his remarks to the assemblage, Dick stated that Midland has often been called a cultural oasis, maintaining a quality of arts second to none. He emphasized that the Arts Assembly wants to see art "out of black tie and into blue jeans," with all aspects of the city involved in appreciating and being a part of the arts.

The Celebration will recognize the talents of local performing and visual artists. Various activities will be scheduled at different times and locations throughout the city during the week-long event. The festival will culminate on Saturday, May 19, with an all-day celebration.

Dick announced that performing artists now have until February 10 to submit their applications. The call is out for acts of all kinds suitable for family entertainment, including singers, dancers, actors, bands and magicians.

The visual arts judges, who have selected the local artists to exhibit at the Celebration, were special guests at the party. They are Jerry Porter, director of Midland's Museum of the Southwest; Ted Hutcheson, a gallery owner from Scottsdale, Arizona, and Santa Fe, New Mexico, and William Earle, an artist and teacher from Wilton, Connecticut. Mr. Earle also was in town at the invitation of the Midland Arts Association to conduct a workshop.

INVITING FRIENDS to a "Better Luck Next Year" Party, Liz and Bill Adam honored their alma maters, the University of Michigan and the University of Illinois (his and hers, respectively) last Sunday afternoon. To signify recent Bowl game losses, the Illinois table was decorated with a bouquet of dead roses, and Michigan's was graced with an upturned sugar bowl. Urbana Champagne and Wolverwienees were the featured refreshments.

Linda George was all smiles after learning during the party that her daughter Laurie had just pledged Pi Phi at Baylor. Carol Brown, wife of City Manager Jim Brown, and Pat (Mrs. Bob) Paxton were busy comparing notes upon discovering they are both from Enid, Oklahoma, and once lived on the same street. Ava Jane Warren remarked that she and her husband Joe, who has just retired from the practice of dentistry, are looking forward to spending more time at their ranch in Coke County.

A few of the other guests were Beverly and Forrest Muire, Judge Barbara Culver, Penny and Ernest Angelo, Cathy and Dick Stump, Mary Frances and Jim Beverley and Doris and Van Howbert.

MARGARET KEPPLE recently returned from a memorable trip to South Africa and Zimbabwe, where she visited longtime friends Gayla and Charles Corley, formerly of Abilene.

The Corleys, who are now medical missionaries in Zimbabwe's capital city of Harare, met Margaret and her traveling companion Nell Corley of Abilene, in Johannesbury. After a sightseeing tour, which included Capetown, Kruger National Park, Harare and Victoria Falls, the West Texans returned to Harare for a longer stay in the Corley home before returning stateside.

JEAN AND PAT THOMAS enjoyed a week's visit to British Columbia recently. As district sales manager of this area for Ralston Purina Company, Pat qualified for the General Sales Managers Advisory Board, which met in Vancouver.

Besides enjoying that city's many attractions, the Thomases also took a side trip by ferry to the capital city of Victoria, where they toured the famous Butchart Gardens and were impressed by the abundance of beautiful flowers everywhere. Fascinated with the British atmosphere, the Midlanders particularly enjoyed shopping for English goods.

LYNDA PEMBERTON, bride-elect of Bill Bingham of Edgin, Illinois, has been honored at two recent parties here.

A miscellaneous display shower was held in the home of Mary (Mrs. John) Stringer, with Bea (Mrs. Ed) Thomas, Ramona Schall, Virginia (Mrs. Bob) Elliott and Martha (Mrs. Pat) McNair as co-hostesses. Among the 50 guests were Edith (Mrs. Bob) Garst, Angie (Mrs. Carroll) Grafa, Vera (Mrs. Paul) Wecker, Phyllis (Mrs. Bob) Stine, Alice (Mrs. Victor) Brown and Lola (Mrs. Truman) McAden.

A shower also was given by Lynda's co-workers at Turpin Smith Dyer & Saxe in the home of Susie Luker. Co-hostesses were Pat (Mrs. Bud) Richardson and Heather Ford.

Lynda, daughter of Joyce and Dan Pemberton, and her fiance are planning a February 18 wedding in Hoffman Estates, Illinois. They will make their home in the Chicago area. Bill recently graduated from Northern Illinois University with a degree in computer science.

Inexpensive wines available

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Everyone wants a bargain, and as we start a new year and begin worrying not about gifts but taxes some people think they have to go back to jug wines again. Not necessarily, as the following list of good values shows.

1983 Buehler White Zinfandel ($5) — Not so much white as pink, fresh raspberryish aroma, 1.5 percent residual sugar balanced by good acid. A superb quaff.

1983 McDowell Valley White Zinfandel ($5) — Addition of Riesling makes the aroma of this wine most intriguing. Rather dry pinkish wine.

AT WORK

Women working change child rearing

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

Work and family used to be different. Couples used to start thinking about having babies as soon as they were married. Or maybe they'd wait a year or two, start a savings program, and put a down payment on a small house. They'd dream about building the husband's career, while acknowledging the wife's supportive role.

But those days are mostly history. Women working changes the whole issue of children, at least child rearing as an occupation in itself.

So now with two-career couples, it's not only a question of "when" or "how" but sometimes even "if." Babies seem to be a career jam to the ambitious wife.

Many young women have invested a college degree or two and are involved intensely in their careers. To drop out for a few years to have one child, let alone more, creates a career gap that can be too large to close. To work while raising small children requires herculean strength. What do women do who want both — a career and a family?

Rose, at 28, is a CPA married to a 33-year-old engineer. They've dedicated themselves to their careers and now wonder about building a family. Rose tells me that they see several choices: (1) she can leave her firm and stay home to raise the baby; (2) she can, after the baby, start her own solo part-time practice; (3) she can take a regular maternity leave and go back to work within six months, hiring a housekeeper or babysitter.

Rose's five close friends have made their choices. Two girlfriends with advanced degrees hit the job market during the recent recession and, unaccustomed to fighting, were glad to quit; their choice to start a family came with a saving grace. Another friend decided to do both — be mother and part-time saleswoman for a few years and then go back to work full-time.

A fourth friend couldn't bear losing her position and decided against children. A fifth, a management consultant, has been able to find household help but arranged her schedule so she could come home at least once during the day during the first year.

In this country we have traditionally taken pride in doing everything ourselves, the old bootstraps mentality. But for centuries, women, even those of moderate means, have depended on others to help raise their children at home and in boarding schools. The idea of a family who does things together as a unit is relatively new. It makes sense to look back to history for models of getting more of what we all want.

Let's look at Rose's choices in that light. To pick No. 1, quitting her job to take care of her child, puts her at risk — the risk of total sacrifice of her working self. She is completely dependent on her husband's career and must, after a taste of living in the world of business, surrender her outside goals. That is something she'd never consider asking her husband to do though she expects him, as does he, to participate in the family even more than either of their fathers did.

Decision No. 2, to quit and start a private practice, calls for entrepreneurial skills that she may not have. And working free-lance does not necessarily mean short work days. In fact, CPAs on their own confess to working many more hours than they had anticipated. Nevertheless, starting her own business is possible, especially if she can develop one or two major clients.

Decision No. 3, getting child help while going back full-time, can certainly be an excellent choice if she does some research first. By talking to other working professional mothers, she can profit from their experiences. Trying to do all her jobs perfectly — accounting, housewifing, mothering — is too much to expect.

Job workshop planned

Family Services of Midland will offer a free, four-session support and consultation group for discouraged job seekers from 10 a.m. — 11:30 a.m. Wednesday mornings beginning this week.

The first session, "Self Talk," will look at how communication with oneself can help in searching for a job. The second session, "You're Not Alone," will explore how a support group can help in dealing with the frustrations of unemployment. The third session, "Getting In," will offer suggestions for becoming a successful job applicant. Session four, "I Can Make It," will explore alternatives for surviving financially on a reduced income.

According to Jan Robson, leader of the group, "By working together in a small group, the participants will first become actively involved in sharing their experiences and concerns with being unemployed. Next they will learn why some of their efforts at dealing with their unemployment have been ineffective. Finally, they will develop and share more effective ways of dealing with and overcoming unemployment, discussing and learning from their failures and successes."

Robson, a staff counselor at Family Services of Midland, has a master's degree in social work from Barry College in Florida.

Although the group is free, preregistration in required. Call Family Services, a United Way member agency, 683-4241.

Lifestyle policies

The following are policies for publication of stories and announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the story is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

Attractive company found with bird seed

Hearst Feature Service

There's a simple, enjoyable way to have attractive company during the long, cold winter. Invite a bird to lunch.

A wide variety of bird species will frequent your backyard if you supply the right foods, some cover and a source of water, says Libby Rozell, a naturalist at Michigan's Chippewa Nature Center. And, according to Rozell, "It's not too late to start feeding birds this winter. The important thing is that once you start feeding, don't stop until the winter is over. The birds become very dependent on your feeding."

You'll have an easier time attracting birds, Rozell says, if someone else in your neighborhood is already feeding them. But even if you are the only one on your block feeding birds, you'll likely find lots of takers, provided the birds find what they need in your backyard.

Basically, the winter needs of birds are simple: food, water and cover. But if one of the three is missing, the turnout for your "bird banquet" may be slim.

If your yard has plenty of trees and shrubs, providing cover won't be a problem. Water, too, is critical. If a stream or creek flows near your home, you're all set. More likely, you'll have to provide the water yourself. You can make or buy a device to keep water warm enough to prevent freezing, or you can simply replace frozen water with fresh.

Birds will eat a wide variety of food, from stale bread to fancy seed mixes. But different species prefer different foods, so to draw the birds people prefer most, you'll want to shop carefully for food.

A few years ago, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service issued a report on what wild birds like to eat. It said there can be a big difference between those preferred foods and the ingredients of many commercially-available food mixes.

"White proso millet and black oil-type sunflower seeds are eagerly taken. Yet such common ingredients of commercial mixes as flax, canary and rape (a type of mustard) seed are rarely eaten by birds. Milo or sorghum, wheat, oats, cracked corn and rice are common ingredients in commercial mixes, but are rarely attractive to birds if sunflower seeds or white proso millet are also present in the feeder."

Commercially-available feeders make offering birds food easy, but the job can be done more cheaply by using your imagination.

According to the center's bird-feeding pamphlet, an easy way to offer birds suet is to place it in an onion or orange bag, then hang it from a branch.

For seeds, try a one-gallon glass jar. Place a five- or six-inch board, a little longer than the jar, along the bottom. Wrap wire around the jar and board, place seed in the jar, and hang it from a limb.

A coffee also makes a good feeder. You'll need two cans, since your feeder will require a plastic lid on each end of a can. Cut along the inside of the lids, two-thirds of the way down. Then poke holes in each end near the bottom and place through them a dowel rod long enough to provide a perch. String can be run through the can to hang it.

Scientists studying effect of current on sea birds

The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

FARALLON ISLANDS, Calif. — El Nino's devastating effect this year on Pacific Coast sea birds is being scientifically documented on this chain of a dozen islands 30 miles west of San Francisco.

Only an estimated 10 percent of the 300,000 birds that nested here last year successfully hatched eggs in 1983, and researchers blame it on the lack of nutrients in the unusually warm sea — the El Nino phenomenon.

The islands are an ideal setting for studying the effects of the warm water phenomenon on sea birds, for the islands boast the largest sea bird rookery in the contiguous United States. Two-thirds of California's sea birds nest here.

SCHOLARS ALREADY were available for the study. Ornithologists and birders of the Point Reyes Bird Observatory in Northern California have been caretakers of this wildlife laboratory in the sea for 15 years.

Resident biologists, ornithologists and volunteers since 1968 have conducted dawn-to-dusk, seven-day-a-week observations on bird and marine mammal populations on Southeast Farallon, a 1-2 by 3-4-mile outcropping of granite that is the largest island in the chain.

"We've had grandstand seats for the dramatic effect the collapse of the food supply had on sea birds that fly into the Farallons to nest," reports Burr Heneman, 42, executive director of the 2,500-member Point Reyes Bird Observatory, oldest and largest bird observatory in the United States.

"Unable to find sufficient food, the sea bird populations have been decimated. There has been significant die-off of birds as well as a lack of chick production because of El Nino.

"THOUSANDS OF cormorants, pigeon guillemots, tufted puffins and rhinoceros auklets flew in and failed to breed. Brandt's cormorants tried to nest but gave up. Common murres, Cassin's auklets and Western sea gulls had marginal success.

"Now the question is what will the lasting effect of El Nino be on the sea bird populations? Will this be a temporary setback? Will the ocean cool off and the birds return next year in fewer numbers to breed and nest in normal fashion?"

Point Reyes Bird Observatory scientists and birders will be here to learn the answers.

Through a cooperative agreement with U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Point Reyes Bird Observatory acts as caretaker of the Farallon National Wildlife Refuge. The island chain is a bird and marine mammal sanctuary, closed to the public.

MAN'S PRESENCE on the barren islands has limited wildlife populations ever since the Farallons became a Russian outpost in 1806 — the Russians' deepest penetration into the Americas.

Russian sealers slaughtered thousands of sea otters, sea lions and elephant seals during the early 1800s for the valuable pelts.

From 1850 to 1900 San Francisco egg companies harvested an estimated 100 million dozen wild bird eggs and then sold them, principally to bakeries and restaurants. Gun battles erupted on the islands among competing egg companies, and at least two deaths were recorded.

LIGHTHOUSE KEEPERS and their families lived on Southeast Farallon from 1855 to the late 1960s. During both World War I and World War II troops were stationed on the island.

"Human disturbance played havoc with bird and marine mammal populations," Heneman said. He cited "concrete proof of proper protection provided by the bird observatory the past 15 years:

"When we came out in 1968 we counted 6,000 common murres that first year. Last year there were 90,000. Rhinoceros auklets disappeared from the island in the 1860s. In 1974, the first pair of breeding rhinoceros auklets were observed. Now there are several hundred.

"Elephant seals disappeared with the slaughter by the Russians. The first elephant seal pup born on the islands in more than 150 years was born here in 1974.

Books cover childhood

By LAURA P. NEWTON
Hearst Feature Service

The wise parent knows that the so-called difficult ages — the "terrible 2s," for example — are really exciting steps the child takes toward becoming an independent person.

Charlotte Zolotow captures the start of the mastery of speech in the warm and loving "But Not Billy," which will enthrall 2-5 year olds and their parents. A baby's growth, from birth to the first "m m m m ma ma," is depicted in soft illustrations by Kay Chorago. The mother's fond and apt nicknames for the child at each stage become his real right name when he calls her "ma ma." As always, the poetic prose of Zolotow is perfect, and will bring back memories you didn't know you had. This minor classic was first published in 1947, and Chorago's pictures enhance this welcome new edition.

"Rip-Roaring Russell" is 4 (going on 5) and is off to nursery school. This lively account of his adventures by Joanna Hurwitz will delight a 3-6 audience. Russell's trials and triumphs, from losing things and missing a parade to finding a friend and organizing a parade, are familiar to us all, and young children will rejoice in the recognition of these experiences. Most of all, they will have vividly depicted Russell's struggle for control of his temper and the irresistible yearning to be a baby again as he moves toward independence.

The thrill of being up, out and off on a secret adventure all by yourself is expressed in "Katie in the Morning." Wandering through mist and roses, honeysuckle and pine, Katie makes her private way, master of all she surveys. She rejoices in the time that is hers alone, savoring every small detail, and returns just as happily with the Sunday paper for her loving, sleepy family. This is a winner for 4-8 year olds who look forward to enjoying their independence.

Dan Lunn only dreams of such happy family scenes, and his independence is thrust upon him. Boys and girls 10 and up will be moved by John Rowe Townsend's "Dan Alone." The 11-year-old hero is faced with an orphanage when his grandfather dies and his mother runs off with her Thursday man. He flees to the poorest part of the city and is hard-pressed to stay alive. Dan is befriended by Olive, a tough survivor of the streets, and he finds a "family" in a good-natured couple who run a band of thieves. Singing and begging outside pubs to earn his keep, Dan despairs of ever having a real family, but fate intervenes when the thieves are disbanded. He is reunited with his long-lost father.

Winter jogging possible

Hearst Feature Service

Sure, it's cold out there, and the landscape is as white as a hospital sheet, but that's no excuse. If you take a few precautions, you can be jogging outdoors as if that were green grass and not icy streets under your Nikes, according Kathleen E. Tetlow.

"There's no reason not to stay fit in winter," says Tetlow, a 24-year-old health and fitness specialist who recently runner, taught a course on Cold Weather at the State University of New York-Albany. Staying fit in winter, she says, can include running in the snow and chill winds of January, February and March.

An exercise enthusiast who jogs 30 miles a week in the spring and fall, Tetlow cuts back to 20 miles a week in the winter months. "I tend to lay back in the winter. The spring and fall are more intensive training periods for me," she says.

Still, in winter, she logs three to five miles a day, four or five days a week, come snow, sleet or freezing temperatures. The secret, she says, is to dress properly and avoid heavy-traffic roadways.

Generally, there is little danger from running outdoors when the temperature — taking the wind-chill factor into account — dips as low as -20 F, Tetlow says. Danger increases at temperatures of -30 to -70 F. Beyond that point, runners are in great danger of hypothermia and frostbite.

"As long as you wear appropriate clothing and your feet, hands and head are protected, you'll be fine because you are increasing your body heat as you exercise," she says. Nonetheless, common sense is advised. In the bitter cold, even Tetlow stays indoors.

If you are going for a winter jog, Tetlow advises wearing multiple layers of clothing. Warm air is trapped between the layers, conserving body heat.

"It's important to dress in layers because you can peel the layers off. Sometimes, people tend to overdress and they really get very warm," Tetlow explains.

The best undergarment to wear is made of a material called polypropylene, Tetlow says. The fabric was developed for the U.S. Ski Team, which needed a garment resistant to wind and also able to handle moisture. The long underwear "wicks" sweat from the surface of the skin through the material so the body stays dry, Tetlow says.

Over the polypropylene undergarment, Tetlow suggests wearing a long-sleeved cotton T-shirt to absorb moisture, and over that a sweatshirt fitted snugly around the wrists, neck and waist.

Sweatpants with shorts over them also should be worn. When it is very cold or windy, Tetlow wears a nylon jacket and pants over the sweats. On your feet, she recommends cotton and/or wool socks. "I wear two pairs of socks to keep my toes warm," she says.

A wool cap or face mask and a pair of mittens are needed to keep head and hands warm. No special running shoes are necessary for winter, she says.

Ok, so you're all suited up and ready to brave the cold. Be careful out there. Icy patches are particulary dangerous when they're covered with snow, Tetlow says. And she advises winter runners to stay out of traffic, wherever possible.

People who live near parks should run in them in winter, she recommends. Winter joggers should also be careful to have adequate warmup and cool-down periods before and after their runs. Slow jogs or walks and five minutes of stretching exercises should precede any vigourous running.

Metric conversion slow

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Metric Board, established in 1975 to help convert consumers to the metric system, was downgraded in 1983 and renamed the Office of Metric Programs in response to consumer resistance.

From an operating budget of $2.7 million in 1982, it now gets only $300,000 a year.

The new philosophy, says the head of the agency, is that when the country is ready for a conversion to the metric system, it will convert. In the meantime, the Office of Metric Programs will help private industry convert so it can compete in the international market.

BETTY MARTIN

When the pressure foot of your sewing machine is not properly adjusted for the fabric you are stitching, there is a tendency for the feed to carry the under-layer of cloth along faster than the presser foot carries the upper layer. As a result you may wind up with an extra length of top-layer fabric at the end of the seam. Long seams on thick woolens are particularly vulnerable. Some of the newer sewing machines have built-in devices that will feed the fabric evenly into the machine whatever the thickness of the material. If your sewing machine does not have this feature, consider the purchase of an even-feed attachment. It is a small, inexpensive and easy-to-use mechanism.

Perhaps you have already been considering buying a new sewing machine. LEGGETTS FABRICS carries the complete line of Bernina machines. Our staff at 1541 Parkway, Odessa, 362-8255 and NO. 9 Plaza Shopping Center, Garfield at Wadley in Midland, 683-3101 will be happy to assist in the selection of the machine best suited to your needs. Come in and ask for a demonstration. Visa and Master Card. Hours: Mon.-Sat. 10-6. "Quality, Your only Real Bargain."

HINT:

Lacking an even-feed, regulate the pressure by adjusting the presser bar according to the thickness of the fabric.

Zoom lens can be good buy for beginning photographer

By HOLT CONFER
Copley News Service

As soon as anyone learns I write a photography column, I begin to get asked for advice. Now I don't really mind giving advice; in fact I'm rather flattered that anyone would take the time to ask my opinion on anything. And that word "opinion" is very important.

Any advice I give is strictly my opinion based on personal experience and seasoned with my own brand of practical thinking.

For example, the other day I stopped in a store and one of the folks working there began to question me about buying a new camera. The first question he asked was whether he should buy it at a local camera store or whether he should patronize one of the many "discount" operations that advertise on the back pages of some of the better circulated photography publications.

I tried to give him both sides of that frequently asked question. From a neophyte's point of view, the local camera store is probably the best place to go. Anyone just buying his first 35mm camera should be looking at as many of the name brands as possible — they will all look and feel different, but somewhere along the line one of the models will suddenly make more sense because of the way it handles and because of its simplicity. You can't do that by phone.

Additionally, if you're new at the picture-taking business, chances are there will be some questions that need answering after you make your purchase. A local dealer should be able to handle those inquiries. The mail-order people are not usually amenable to answering your "how-to" questions.

Now when you get to the point that you're reasonably knowledgeable about camera equipment and know precisely what you need and want, then dealing with a mail-order firm might be a consideration. The publications carrying those mail-order ads have insisted recently that all those advertisers clean up their selling practice. Some of the mail-order people were just a bit deceptive in their descriptions at times, but as far as I can tell, those that didn't want to deal legitimately have been dropped from the advertising pages.

But no matter where you get your first camera, it's my opinion (notice the word "opinion") that you should not get the standard 50mm lens that normally comes with the camera. If you have a dealer who refuses to sell just the body, I'd recommend trying another dealer.

As for lenses, I would strongly recommend your first lens be something close to 35 mm to 70mm zoom. You'll discover, I suspect, that about 80 to 90 percent of all the pictures you ever take will fall somewhere in this range of focal lengths. And that makes this type of lens a very smart buy — a little more expensive by $50 to $75, but well worth the extra cost.

Now when you get to the point where you want to add other lenses, unless you have very special applications in mind — such as sports or wildlife photography, or perhaps architecture — don't be in a hurry to add lenses at the extreme focal lengths.

Fisheye lenses and 1000mm lenses seem to have a certain charm about them, but after the conversation dies down, you're going to discover very few places where you can actually put them to practical use.

Having had all these various lenses to experiment with at some time or other (that's one of the perks of being a photo columnist), when I had a fisheye lens and a 10000mm lens, I actually had to go out of my way to "invent" pictures to take.

Houses need storage space

By The Associated Press

A house is a place where there never is enough storage space. It is also a place where the lack of sufficient storage space has, in many cases, pushed the automobile out of its assigned area in the garage.

In most garages, especially in the suburbs, the studs on the inside are open and begging to be used as supports for shelves. Attach the shelves to the studs any way you wish, the easiest being to place them on small wooden cleats on the sides of the studs. To keep things from sliding off, if that appears to be a problem, nail small strips of wood to the outer edges of the shelves.

In addition to shelves, small cabinets also can be placed between the studs. Just be sure that the few extra inches will not interfere with the movement of your car and the opening of the car doors. When the shelves and cabinets are to hold something heavy, use metal brackets screwed into the outer edges of the studs.

When the studs are not visible, the most usual material covering them is gypsum board. In that event, it is easy to cut into the board and uncover the space you will need. Where there is enough room, you don't even have to cut into the gypsum board. Build the shelves and cabinets outside the board and attach them through the board into the studs.

A great place for hanging tools and garden equipment is on perforated hardboard, screwed or hammered into the studding. Some space is required behind the perforations so the necessary metal clips can be attached to them. The space is already there if the board is to be hung on open studding. If not, put a few horizontal strips on the wall, then attach the perforated board to them. This will create the needed space for the hanging of the clips.

Baby mortality down, life expectancy up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government says the national infant mortality rate is down, life expectancy is up and that the key to continued improvement lies with a change in unhealthy lifestyles.

The findings are part of the government's annual assessment of health, a 394-page report entitled "Health United States," being released today by Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler.

Americans in four out of five of the major stages of life are meeting the Surgeon General's goals for improved health status, the report concluded.

Infant mortality fell from 14.1 deaths per 1,000 live births in 1977 to 11.2 per 1,000 in 1982. The death rate for children ages 1 to 14 dropped from 43 per 100,000 in 1977 to 36 per 100,000 in 1982. The death rate for adolescents and young adults 15 to 24 years of age declined from 117 per 100,000 to 105 per 100,000. The death rate for those 25 to 64 fell from 540 per 100,000 to 463 per 100,000.

The only area in which there has not been progress was for the elderly, who experienced 36.5 restricted-activity days a year in 1977 and 39.9 days in 1981. The report said the lack of progress there may mean that the wrong type of statistics was chosen for measuring progress.

There was a temporary decline in life expectancy in 1980 because of an influenza epidemic. But now, life expectancy has returned to an upward course and reached a high of 74.5 years in 1982, the report said. Life expectancy for women, 78.2 years, exceeded that for men, 70.8 years.

"Many major health problems confronting Americans today also are rooted in lifestyle or environmental factors that are themselves amenable to change," the study said. "Health promotion and disease prevention therefore, appear to hold the key to further improvements in the health status of the American people."

Other points in the study:

—Provisional data for 1981 and 1982 show that the fertility rate may be stabilizing after showing a slight, previous increase. Women 30 to 34 years of age had experienced the largest increase.

—The supply of health practitioners has increased greatly in recent years in absolute numbers and in relation to the population. The largest increase was in the number of registered nurses, 1.3 million in 1980 compared to 335,000 in 1950.

—Health care expenditures in the U.S. totaled $33.4 billion in 1982 or an average of $1,365 per person. Health spending accounted for 10.5 percent of the gross national product.

Wodaabes have unusual male customs

The strength of a Wodaabe man's eyes, coupled with an ability to roll one eye in and out, can be important in attracting women of the tribe, which lives in Niger.

During daylight hours, a Wodaabe tribesman cannot hold his wife's hand in public, call her by name, or speak to her in a personal way.

Author takes satirical look at 'class,' status system

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — It's noon, and author Paul Fussell would like a beer. Not just any beer, like a Bud or a Schlitz. Fussell likes his strong and European.

"I don't like American beer, as I indicated abundantly in the book," sniffs Fussell. "It's too fizzy and so bitter. The taste has been ironed out of it."

Fussell is very fussy about details, not just about beer, but style of dress, living room decor, the type of pet one keeps, the kinds of flowers one grows, the car one drives, the language one uses — all the outward manifestations of class. Or more commonly, in Fussell's view, the profound lack of it.

IN HIS NEW book, "Class," Fussell has written a satirical guide through the American status system in which he wittily scrutinizes the class emblems purchased, worn, driven and eaten by a status-panicked America.

Fussell, 59, teaches English literature and writes books about 18th-century and modern British culture — his best known being "The Great War and Modern Memory." He recently rose several notches in academic status by moving from Rutgers, which is a state university in New Jersey, to the University of Pennsylvania, which is Ivy League (although he's currently spending the year on a fellowship at Princeton).

BORN IN PASADENA, Calif., the son of a wealthy corporation lawyer, Fussell went to Pomona College, a place for the sheltered children of the upper-middle class. He dresses adult preppie, vacations in the Caribbean, and speaks in the arched, cultivated tones of William F. Buckley. All of this places him somewhere in the upper-middle class.

Yet his book, he admits, "will offend everyone." For while he raises his brow contemptuously at the lower classes, he has something nasty to say about every class. Nothing escapes his biting mockery: everything from the tacky Dacron-fur toilet-seat covers of the "prole" (proletarian) bathroom, to the upper class's "imperviousness to ideas."

FUSSELL MAKES CLEAR it isn't money alone that defines class. "Style and taste and awareness are as important as money," he writes. Yet a precise definition by Fussell of "class" is not easy to come by.

"Class is what everybody wants, and that means the upper-middle-class style, for most Americans, is the definition of class. That's one way of approaching it," he offers.

Yet the best definition, Fussell suggests, "is the most evanescent. It's the one I use in the book where I talk about Jack Kennedy watching Richard Nixon on television, and turning to his friends and saying, 'The guy has no class.' That says it all. It's a matter of awkward elbows, not wearing the right clothes, having shifty eyes, being apologetic, not being at home in the world — all those things are not class, and what Kennedy had was."

Fussell writes: "The wearing of clothes either excessively new or excessively neat and clean suggests that your social circumstances are not entirely secure. The upper and upper-middle classes like to appear in old clothes, as if to advertise how much of conventional dignity they can afford to throw away, as the men of these classes do when they abjure socks while wearing loafers."

Place of residence is also important. Grosse Point, Mich.; Newport, R.I.; Bar Harbor, Maine; Haddam, Conn. — these all have class. Billings, Mont.; Owensboro, Ky.; Del Rio, Texas; Garden Grove, Calif. — these cities do not.

CARS ARE crucially important. To be the upper class, Fussell writes, the automobile you drive must be the "most common, to indicate that you're not taking seriously so easily purchasable and thus vulgar a class totem." Thus, a Chevy, Ford, Plymouth or Dodge, in the least interesting style and color, is best. By the same token, to drive a Rolls, a Cadillac or a Mercedes is a sign of high vulgarity: Only "the worst kind of upper-middle-class types own Mercedes."

Living-room decor is important. Hardwood floors — preferably parquet — covered, but not entirely, with almost threadbare (indicating inherited) Oriental rugs are class. Allusions to European architectural decor — black and white marble entryways, balustrades and railings, brocaded wall coverings — these are class. A prominently displayed television set, a Naugahyde Barcalounger, a plastic Tiffany reproduction lamp — these are not class.

WHILE THESE ARE the more obvious symbols of wealth and class, language, Fussell writes, can be a more subtle but very revealing indicator of class. The lower and middle classes use the word "lavatory" or "rest room" — "euphemism as well as elegance" being the hallmarks of the middle class. The upper class feels no shame in calling a toilet a toilet.

"It's called a 'car' — as in, 'We'll need the car about 11, please, Parker.' "

WHILE THE NUMBER of classes in this country is generally thought to be five, Fussell has identified nine: top out-of-sight (Rockefellers, du Ponts, Mellons, Fords, Vanderbilts), upper, upper middle, middle, high proletarian, mid-proletarian, low proletarian, destitute and bottom out-of-sight. Almost all feel status-insecure, Fussell notes. "If you find an American who feels entirely class secure, stuff and exhibit him. He's a rare specimen."

Fussell himself claims to be class secure. "It's never caused me any anxiety at all, because I've always regarded the whole thing as a con," he says. "Having been born in Pasadena and having been quite a bright kid, I perceived instantly how little impressive people in the upper and upper-middle class really are — they're just as ignorant and vain and stupid as anybody else."

SINCE THE BOOK'S release, Fussell has been accused of being a terrific snob for writing what many interpret to be mean-spirited attacks on the lower classes — indeed, for his very use of the word "prole." But the proletarian class, he insists, is his favorite class, because its members are so far behind everyone else, they lack the "status panic" which so loathsomely afflicts the middle class.

"These are people who aren't getting anywhere," says Fussell. "They never put on an act. They never pretend to be something they're not. They're happy with their work and their work is honorable. They're good electricians, good plumbers, good cabinet makers. And if they want to drink beer and sit there in their T-shirts and watch football, that's what they do, and they don't apologize for that."

IT'S IN THE great expanse of middle-class America, Fussell says, where pretense and social climbing are rampant. "Middle-class people would be tempted not to answer accurately if you asked them what they watch on television. They'd tell you they watch public television, they watch Shakespeare. As you move up and down from the middle class, people become much more honest and less scared about being what they really are."

BUT FUSSELL doesn't mind a little controversy — he's too far removed from the middle class to worry about offending anyone. "There's no reason whatever I should be pleasant," he says, bristling. "I should be interesting. I mean, if somebody said, 'You are dull,' then I'd be bothered. But if they say, 'You are offensive,' it doesn't harm me in the least."

The book, he insists, was never intended to be a scholarly work. "Anybody who looks in it for scholarship is mistaking the genre. It's supposed to be a funny book."

DEAR ABBY

Church members too picky

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem, but fortunately it's a minor one. I need an article from your column of several years ago.

It recounted a meeting of church board members who, in sorting out the applications from the many preachers who had applied to fill their vacant pulpit, found fault with every one. — JOHN W. IN ALBANY, ORE.

DEAR JOHN: Found! It was submitted by the Rev. C.W. Kirkpatrick, Union Church of Christ, Ludlow, Mass.:

DEAR ABBY: One of the toughest tasks a church faces is choosing a good minister. A member of an offical board undergoing this painful process finally lost patience. He'd watched the Pastoral Relations Committee reject applicant after applicant for some fault, alleged or otherwise.

It was time for a bit of soul-searching on the part of the committee. So he stood up and read a letter purporting to be from another applicant.

"Gentlemen: Understanding your pulpit is vacant, I should like to apply for the position. I have many qualifications ... I've been a preacher with much success and also had some success as a writer.

"Some say I'm a good organizer. I've been a leader most places I've been.

"I'm over 50 years of age. I have never preached in one place for more than three years. In some places I have left town after my work has caused riots and disturbances.

"I must admit I have been in jail three or four times, but not because of any real wrongdoing. My health is not good, though I still get a great deal done. The churches I have preached in have been small, though located in several large cities.

"I've not got along well with religious leaders in towns where I have preached. In fact, some have threatened me and even attacked me physically. I am not too good at keeping records. I have been known to forget whom I have baptized.

"However, if you can use me, I shall do my best for you."

The board member looked over the committee. "Well, what do you think? Shall we call him?"

The good church folks were aghast. Call an unhealthy, trouble-making, absent-minded ex-jailbird? Was the board member crazy? Who signed the application? Who had such colossal nerve?

The board member eyed them all keenly before he answered. "It's signed, 'The Apostle Paul.'"

DEAR ABBY: For all those bewildered parents who don't know how to introduce their son's or daughter's live-in partner, why not do as Lord and Lady Greystone would have done, to wit:

"This is my son, Tarzan, and his mate, Jane." — AN ABBY FAN

DEAR ABBY: I would like to add to your answer to "Worried Sick," the woman whose sister didn't tell her kids to use seat belts because whatever happens is "God's will":

God indeed watches over our little ones; however, he gives us intelligence and expects us to use it.

With this in mind, it will be that mother's unpleasant misfortune to have to answer to God for her direct, willful negligence and irresponsibility to those precious children God placed in her care.

God performs the impossible; the possible we are required and obligated to do ourselves. — TINA B. IN FULLERTON, CALIF.

Author: men pressured to have sex

Hearst Feature Service

The sexual revolution may not be over, but here and there a few white flags are popping up from the trenches.

One of the flags is waved by Aaron Hass, a Los Angeles clinical psychologist who believes men should quit feeling pressured to have sex all the time if they don't really feel like it. The author of "Love, Sex and the Single Man," Hass supervises the Human Sexuality Clinic for the University of California at Los Angeles School of Medicine.

Hass believes that the sexual freedom of the past decade has created a "tyranny of sex" for men culturally raised to be "performance- and success-oriented." But many of the performances turn out to be unsuccessful.

"All men, at some time or another, have episodes where they don't function as they'd like," says the psychologist. And even a single sexual failure can build into a serious emotional problem, he notes, "because most single men are walking around thinking that all other single men are having a good time."

Hass' research shows that myth is not true: Many single men are walking around worrying about how their sex lives measure up to those of their peers, feeling awkward and trapped when they believe a date's expectations demand they go to bed whether they're turned on or not, and wondering why they never seem to be able to find a lasting relationship with a woman.

"It's rare when you get two people interested simply in sex, except in the soap operas. One or the other wants more," he says.

For men to get the "more," he says they should consciously try to suppress the Playboy magazine type of message that values physical over intellectual, learn to be "vulnerable" in relationships so they can communicate feelings, and work toward a relationship that is mutually satisfying on all planes.

"There are a lot of men who know the correct things to say about 'communication' and 'feelings.' They know all the buzzwords, but they haven't really changed their basic attitudes.

"It's the same for women. A lot of them believe in feminism and equality, but when faced with a man who is willing to be equal, they say, 'But I don't want a wimp.' Women have to get their act together. They can't have both 'strong' and 'vulnerable.'"

It's clear that Hass, 35 and a handsome, never-married bachelor, feels he has his own act together.

"I believe only in egalitarian relationships," he says. "I have no desire to make all the decisions about where we go to dinner, where we vacation. I like gentle women who also are competent, and I think that women pick up on the signals about what you like. If you expect her to be competent, she will be, but if she thinks she can get away with a timid, submissive role, she'll try that."

The author says he "tends to be very upfront" about his expectations and that he feels "really comfortable about a woman calling me up and asking for a date.

"I don't respect a woman who refuses to take some of the initiative," he says. If that turns some women off, he says, "I just think I've saved myself a lot of time. There's no point in perpetuating a facade for three months."

His favorite method of meeting women is the blind date, "set up by a friend whom I respect." He prefers lunch dates "because you don't hurt anybody's feelings; there's none of the sexual pressure you feel on an evening date."

He finds women "generally are more comfortable" in situations where they don't have to make decisions about sex, so that it's easier to explore emotional and intellectual areas.

"Men, too, will find it more rewarding if there's a delay, if they decide ahead of time that they don't want sex at first."

Cookbook for children available free

And it could be something you make yourself with the help of this pamphlet — Kitchen Know How For Kids.

First, you get the basics:

Ask permission to cook and check with an adult for help.

Clean your hands and your work area.

Get out all the food and equipment you'll need.

Then, take over the kitchen for a meal or for the whole day — maybe some Saturday or Sunday — and make breakfast, lunch or dinner for your family.

All the directions are right on the pages to help you make a Sausage Cheese Biscuit breakfast. Serve Pita Bread Sandwiches for lunch stuffed with tuna and some secret ingredients (You'll have to read them on your own), and a granola Power Bar that you bake yourself. Jack Jackson tells students at the Young People's University '84, "the reason they have you here today is because they think you're worth it."

High finance, teeth, television, computers, the heart, sign language and the universe were some of the topics tackled by someMidlandjuniorhigh school students on two consecutive Saturdays recently.

The Young People's University '84, sponsored by the Junior League of Midland, marks the second year for the program which offers classes to seventh- and eighth-grade students in local "gifted and talented programs."

Junior League funded the program except for 50 percent of one speaker's fee, which was paid by the Midland Independent School District, according to Mrs. David T. Leonard, the league's Young People's University chairman.

Although the program was launched just last year, the planning began several years ago, Mrs. Leonard said, before MISD had special offerings for gifted and talented students. Now, Young People's University is intended to supplement existing school programs.

About 300 students from Midland, Trinity and Greenwood schools attended the diverse classes on two successive Saturday mornings.

Hank O'Neill, an account executive of Merrill-Lynch, presented the class "How to Make a Million," in which he tried to give his students an understanding of how the stock market functions and how stockbrokers need to win their clients' confidence.

Almost all the hands in the room were raised.

"Who trusts me with their money?" he asked.

Some hands dropped back down and several others wavered indecisively.

"How many people here are greedy?" he asked.

Almost all the hands were once again high in the air.

"We all are," O'Neill said.

He explained to the class what a stock was, how stock investments differed from savings accounts, how to read the stock listings in the newspaper and the risks involved in stocks.

At the same time, in another classroom, Jan Watson, a sign language instructor and teacher of deaf children, showed her group of students how to sign along with the lyrics to Barry Manilow's "I Write the Songs."

Following her lead, more than two dozen students moved their fingers in rough synchronization to the song played on a portable cassette recorder.

Sue Ashwood, instruction consultant for Region 18, said chisanbop is an oriental method of rapid math calculations using the fingers.

"There was a lot of interest stimulated" during the class, said Mrs. Ashwood, but "chisanbop is a lot like learning to play the piano. You can't learn it in one easy lesson."

He gave his students a brief history of the computer from before the Industrial Revolution to the present.

"Don't think when you guys graduate from high school that you'll be able to get a job on an assembly line," he said. "There may not be an assembly line."

Rowland Wong, an exercise physiologist, taught the effects of exercise and nutrition on the human body.

"I try to give them an idea of what a healthy body is" in the "Body Beautiful" class, Wong said.

"The problems start as early as eight months old," he said. "It's not too early to start preventive health."

Another medical field was introduced by Dr. Bob Henry, an orthodontist, in a denistry class.

He told the class about how dentists were trained, what qualities a good dentist has and what different types of dentists do.

He had an assortment of dental appliances, X-rays and a film about orthodontics.

Neil Tyson, a doctoral candidate in astronomy — his business cards identify him as an "astronomer at large" — from the University of Texas at Austin presented an astronomy film.

Tyson said his goal was to give the students "an understanding of the scale of the universe."

One example he used to give a sense of scale was that the 45 billion hamburgers McDonald's claims to have sold would be enough to go around the earth and moon 13 times.

That type of down-to-earth standard of comparison can make out-of-this-world numbers, such as billions, easier to visualize, Tyson said.

"We've seen one person say he (the driver) was weaving and stinking of alcohol and we've seen whiskey bottles laying around," he said at the conclusion of the exercise. "We don't even need a trial, do we? We've already convicted him."

He told the class why television reporters need to watch their facts carefully.

"A scorpion could have crawled up his leg. Wouldn't you weave too if you had a scorpion crawling up your leg?"

The bottles may have been explained if the driver was a caterer on his way to a party, he said, and alcohol from the broken bottles could have made him smell like a distillery.

Marion also explained television terminlogy and some of the techniques used to hold the viewers' interest.

Other classes included "How to Raise Your Parents," taught by Kevin and Theresa Moore, counselors at the John De Foore Center, and "Faraway Lands," taught by Leila Seale, Midland travel agent.

Mary Kallus, a seventh-grade student, said "How to Raise Your Parents" was her favorite class. Overall, she said, the Young People's University program was "excellent."

Doss Ward, another seventh-grader, said he also enjoyed the program. "I think I liked probably the astronomy the best," he said. "It was pretty interesting."

"All the feedback we've gotten from the kids has been positive," said Mrs. Leonard. "I was just shocked at their participation.

"I don't think the majority of them would have come back the second Saturday if they hadn't enjoyed it," she said.

Agency keeps children information

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — The anguish of having missing children tears at hundreds of thousands of American families each year. Some children are found within hours, but others are gone forever.

A Fresno businessman thinks he has an idea that could help: a non-profit corporation called National Child Identification Center to keep updated information on children as they grow.

Wallace Scheuerman, an investment counselor, was concerned that parents of missing children are too distraught to give authorities quick, reliable, descriptions and that photographs tend to be old or of poor quality.

"There is no agency in the whole United States that deals with children before the fact, except for fingerprints," said spokesman Roy Mitchell. "What are fingerprints good for? Identifying a body."

The center provides parents with a $5 kit that includes a form to list a child's description, medical history, likes and dislikes, just in case the information is needed.

"We didn't put it together to be a clearinghouse," Mitchell said. "We deal with children prior to a crisis. What we're trying to do is get parents to put together accurate, up-to-date information prior to anything happening."

The center, which opened in September at a small Fresno office, will store data sheets and fingerprints for a $10 annual fee or the data, fingerprints and photographs for $15. Quarterly reminders will be mailed to obtain new pictures.

Mitchell explained that a large number of parents want the center to store information on microfilm as a safeguard to be relayed to law enforcement agencies and news media in an emergency.

The center estimates 1 million American youngsters, including runaways, disappear each year, and 100,000 of them are never found.

"Where do these children end up? In child prostitution, pornography, things they're forced into by criminals," Mitchell said.

"People really are tuned into this," he added. "We'd like to reach every kid in the United States."

Mitchell had a troubling experience with a lost child when his preschool daughter, Shannon, wandered off with playmates to find a park and was missing briefly.

He encountered a problem that he believes is common with many police agencies. Missing children are assigned a low priority until they are missing 24 hours or authorities have evidence of foul play.

"It was just a frantic experience," Mitchell recalled. "I was totally helpless. The police wouldn't do anything." They told him, "If she's still missing in the morning call us."

Allergy remedy theory under fire

Hearst Feature Service

Is cytotoxic nutrition the end of allergy sufferers' woes, or is it just another quick-fix diet that doesn't work?

"The Food Sensitivity Diet" by Doug A. Kaufmann is the latest salvo to be fired in the debate. The author, a proponent of cytotoxic nutrition, is the president of Physicians Laboratories Inc. of California, which he founded in 1979 as the first major facility to offer cytotoxic food sensitivity testing and research to the medical community.

While not a doctor himself, Kaufmann studied with William Bryan, M.D., and Marian Bryan, the originators of the cytotoxic test, at the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis.

Cytotoxic testing is a simple blood test which proponents claim identifies those foods which attack the body's immune system and cause a variety of ailments. From the identification of those foods, proponents say, it is simply a matter of eliminating those foods from the diet in order to regain one's health.

But to allergists, it is another story.

"Basically, it is a controversial technique," said Dr. Jay Grossman, an Albany allergist. "Everybody looks for new techniques, but skin testing remains probably the most reliable."

Tasty dips for Sunday sports-watching

Dips are to get-togethers as cakes are to birthday parties. The event can take place without them but it really wouldn't be the same. Dips seem to have been invented for entertaining, as it is the guest — not the hostess — who does the serving.

Dips for winter should be hearty, with help-yourself eye appeal. Tijuana Taco Dip is practically a meal in itself, wonderful for a winter sports watching party.

Another approach to dips is Jazzy Beer Cheese, a piquant mixture of three cheeses, seasoned with beer and hot pepper sauce. Lager beer is a must as ingredient because a reduced calorie "light beer" won't stand up to the strong flavors in the dip, while a dark one will stain it.

TIJUANA TACO DIP

1 can (16 oz.) refried beans
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce, divided
1-1/4 teaspoons hot pepper sauce, divided
1 cup chopped, fresh tomatoes
3/4 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese
3/4 pound lean ground beef
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 cup sliced, pitted, ripe olives
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
1 cup sour cream
Chopped scallions, olives and tomatoes for garnish
Tortilla chips

In medium bowl stir together refried beans, three tablespoons tomato sauce and 1/2 teaspoon hot pepper sauce. Spread evenly in 1-1/2-quart baking dish. Top with chopped tomatoes and shredded Jack cheese. In skillet cook beef and chili powder, stirring to break up until meat has lost its pink color. Remove from heat, drain off fat. Stir in remaining tomato sauce, olives, remaining 3/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce and salt. Spread evenly over casserole. Sprinkle with Cheddar cheese. Bake in 350-F. oven 15 to 20 minutes until cheeses melt and beans are hot. Remove from oven. Spread sour cream over top; garnish with scallions, olives and tomatoes. Serve warm with taco or tortilla chips.

JAZZY BEER CHEESE

1/3 cup beer
4 ounces cream cheese, softened at room temperature
3 ounces Roquefort cheese
1/4 cup Dijon-style mustard
1/4 cup grated onion
1 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
1 small clove garlic, minced
12 ounces sharp Cheddar cheese, shredded (3 cups)

Heat beer until almost boiling; remove from heat and cool to room temperature. In bowl of electric mixer beat cream cheese and Roquefort until smooth; beat in mustard, onion, pepper sauce and garlic. Add Cheddar cheese; beat until smooth. Gradually beat in beer, a little at a time, mixing completely after each addition. Cover. Chill at least 24 hours to develop flavors. Allow cheese to stand one hour at room temperature before serving. May be served in crock along with crackers or vegetable dippers.

Whole, part fresh chicken sells evenly

According to a survey conducted by the famous Gallup pollsters for the National Broiler Council, 49 percent purchase fresh chicken whole.

That figure includes some 30 percent who buy it uncut and 20 percent cut up.

Among the 47 percent of those surveyed who purchase chicken parts, 36 percent buy all of one kind.

However, 12 percent prefer mixed parts.

Versatile omelets fit any taste, lifestyle

By OLIVIA and PAUL BENSEN
Copley News Service

Omelets are one of the most versatile dishes imaginable. They can be a down-to-earth mixture of cheese and eggs served at a truck stop on the interstate, or a lighter-than-air confection that marks the end of a wonderful French dinner.

Most of us, though, think of omelets as a special breakfast treat, most likely whipped together on a lazy weekend morning when we have time to prepare and enjoy a leisurely morning meal.

There is a saying among French chefs that no one can call himself expert in the preparation of omelets until he has made them every day for three years. This seems rather extreme to us, and we believe that even a beginning omelet chef can get good results from the start.

Most cooks are in agreement about some basic aspects of creating a good omelet. A heavy pan with gently sloping sides, high heat, fresh eggs and butter are, along with experience, the main requisites. An omelet pan, most authorities feel, should be used only for omelets. It should never be washed with soap and water, but simply wiped with a paper towel after use, in order to preserve its oily surface.

The pan and butter in which omelets are cooked must be hot enough to quickly form an envelope to bind the layers of egg together, but not so hot that the upper layers of egg toughen before those closest to the pan harden.

One major help in preparing omelets is to allow the eggs to reach room temperature (70-F) before they are cooked. Too-cold eggs are probably the most common cause of failed omelets. Salt tends to toughen the structure of uncooked eggs, and should therefore be added to the other ingredients of the omelet before cooking, rather than being sprinkled over the eggs.

For the thrifty cook, omelets can be the court of last resort for an almost endless variety of leftovers. Ingredients may either be added to the beaten eggs before cooking or folded into the omelet after the eggs have set. Vegetables, seafood, chili and smoked meats, for example, are good candidates for the first method. Combinations of potatoes, ham, peppers, onions, tomatoes and bacon, among other accompaniments, are good omelet fillings when added during the cooking process.

Cheese is a good choice for almost any omelet, so in the suggestions for fillings that follow, we have not listed cheese with each group of ingredients, but keep in mind that some of your favorite cheese will almost certainly enhance the resulting omelet. Almost any kind of cheese can be used — hard, soft and curd cheeses all blend wonderfully with eggs. It is a good idea to put the cheese into the omelet before the other fillings, so that it will have a chance to melt.

If you are making an omelet with leftovers that have been in the refrigerator, it is important to heat them ahead, so that they will be warm when the omelet is served.

The first recipe is for a standard, plain omelet. The filling suggestions are some of our favorites, which you can easily adapt to suit your fancy and your leftovers.

BASIC OMELET

2 to 3 large eggs
1½ tsps. butter

Mix the eggs lightly with a fork. If desired, the whites may be beaten separately, until they begin to froth, and then mixed with the yolks. This will produce a fluffier, plumper omelet.

Heat a 7- to 8-inch omelet pan over high heat, and melt the butter in it. The pan should be hot enough to make the butter sizzle at once, but do not allow the butter to brown.

As soon as the butter has melted, pour in the eggs and stir briskly with a fork, constantly shaking the pan. When you can see the track of the fork through the eggs, they have set. This will take less than a minute. Remove from heat.

At this point, place any filling to be used in the center of the eggs. Raise the handle of the pan and gently slide the omelet toward the opposite side of the pan. With a fork, fold the edge of the omelet closest to the handle over the center. Fold the other side of the omelet over the center.

Transfer the omelet to a heated serving dish by turning the pan upside down over the dish.

If you are making more than one omelet, the first ones may be kept warm in a 200-F oven until the last one is done.

OMELET FILLLNGS: — 1 cup diced cooked potato (leftover baked or boiled ones are fine), sauteed with 2 tablespoons chopped onion in 1 to 2 tablespoons of butter until crisp and brown. Add salt and pepper to taste.

— 1 medium tomato, finely chopped, sauteed with 2 tablespoons sliced scallions in 1 tablespoon butter until thickened. While cooking, add 1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley and a pinch each of basil, thyme, oregano and dill.

— 1 cup fresh mushrooms, sliced, sauteed with 2 sliced scallions in 1 tablespoon butter until liquid has evaporated and mushrooms are soft. Add salt and pepper to taste and stir in a heaping tablespoon sour cream and 1 teaspoon sherry.

— ½ cup each of chopped green pepper and onion, sauteed until soft in 1 tablespoon butter. Add salt and pepper to taste and a pinch or two (to taste) of curry powder.

— ½ to 1 cup cooked shrimp, scallops or crabmeat (or a combination), cut into bits, sauteed in 1 to 2 tablespoons butter. Top this omelet with freshly made hollandaise sauce.

Giant cookie for giant appetites

GIANT SNACK COOKIES

Heat oven to 375-F. Prepare two packages chocolate chip cookie mix as directed on package for six dozen cookies except — stir in one cup raisins. Divide dough into 24 equal parts (about two tablespoons each). Shape each part into ball.

Place three inches apart on ungreased cookie sheet. Flatten cookies to about 1/4-inch thickness with bottom of glass dipped in sugar. Bake until light brown, eight to 10 minutes. Cool one minute before removing from cookie sheet; cool completely.

Put cookies together in pairs with about two tablespoons peanut butter between each. Wrap each sandwich cookie with plastic wrap. Makes 12 cookies.

Parent Education Program to be given by Lamar PTA

From Staff Reports

Lamar Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association will have a six-hour Parent Education Program from 7 p.m. — 9 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Jan. 30 in the Lamar cafeteria, 3200 Kessler.

"How to Cope with the Stress Involved in Disciplining Your Child" will be taught by Theresa "Sam" Guyton on Monday. Ms. Guyton was a counselor for the Permian Basin Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation for 12 years before entering private practice in 1982. She holds a B.S. in nursing and an M.A. in behavioral science.

"Parents It's Time to Talk — Parents Can Help," will be held on Tuesday. This program, instructed by Gerri Ann Green and Nancy Shaw, deals with the sexuality in the pre-adolescent and adolescent child, ages 11-14. Both women attended an all-day seminar on this program through the State PTA and are active in local PTA.

"How to Develop and Maintain a Positive Attitude" will be offered by Dr. Vernon Stokes on Jan. 30. Dr. Stokes has been involved in personnel training as a consultant and in education. He holds a M.Ed. in administration and Ed.D. from Texas Tech University.

The public is welcome to attend.

Course offered for parents of teenagers

From Staff Reports

Family Services of Midland will offer a course on "Parenting Teenagers — Effectively," from 7 p.m. — 9 p.m. on five Wednesdays beginning this week. The course will be available to single parents as well as couples.

According to John Young, executive director of Family Services of Midland and leader of the group, "We will be looking at why teenagers misbehave and how parents can deal with this misbehavior — effectively. The emphasis will be on ways to encourage self-discipline, self-motivation, self-reliance and self-assurance in teens."

The course will cover encouragements, active listening, I-messages, problem ownership, the exploration of alternatives, anger control, natural and logical consequences and family meetings. The course will include mini-lectures, discussions, role-playing exercises and homework assignments to help parents master, stick with and put basic skills into daily practice.

Young, who has taught previous classes on effective parenting, stepfamily survival and divorce adjustment in Midland and Odessa, received his master's degree in psychology from the University of Texas at Austin and his master's degree in social work from the University of Michigan. He is a Clinical Member of the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy, is a Certified Social Worker (Texas) and a Licensed Professional Counselor (Texas).

A charge of $30 for couples and $20 for single parents taking the course will include a parent guidebook. Pre-registration is required. Call Family Services of Midland, a United Way member agency, 683-4241.

Story Hour presented for young children

Each Tuesday from 10 — 11 a.m. through May the Junior Woman's Club sponsors Story Hour at Midland County Public Library, 301 W. Missouri Ave.

Children ages 3-5 can come to the library's Children's Department to hear a story. Mothers are invited to come to the audio room for coffee and a movie during that hour.

Groups of seven or more need to make reservations by calling 683-2708.

Following are a list of Story Hour topics through May.

January 24
Fun With Music (Don't stick your hand in holes animals live in)

January 31
What's Happening on the Farm (Don't play with strange animals)

February 7
Dental Health (Don't use your teeth to open bottles or packages)

February 14
Valentine's Day (When baking Valentine cookies, be careful of hot oven racks and doors)

February 21
My Country (Never play with firecrackers)

February 28
Colors in My World (Don't put paints or colors in your mouth)

March 5
Circus (Try out your circus tricks when grown-ups are present)

March 12
St. Patrick's Day (Don't eat four-leaf clovers — keep them for luck)

March 19

March 26
Springtime (Don't eat berries or flowers from shrubs)

April 3
Texas and Cowboys (Don't play outside when it's lightning)

April 10
Doctor (Never eat vitamins or medicine unless your parents give them to you)

April 17

May 1
Growing (Let your fruits and vegetables finish growing before you pick them)

May 8
Mother's Day (Always tell your mother where you are going)

May 15
Feelings (Don't be mean to animals)

May 22
Vacation and Summer Fun (Wear a life jacket on boats)

Tycoon heirs' suit seeks to halt takeover

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The guardian for three heirs of late oil tycoon J. Paul Getty has filed suit in an attempt to halt the $9.9 billion sale of Getty Oil Co. to Texaco Inc.

The petition was filed Wednesday in Superior Court on behalf of the three young daughters of Jean Ronald Getty, J. Paul Getty's oldest surviving son, who was virtually cut out of his father's will and receives $3,000 a year.

The suit claims Texaco's takeover — the largest in history if it is consummated — violates the trust set up to preserve the family fortune.

Meanwhile, Pennzoil Co., which was spurned in an earlier tender offer for Getty shares, said Wednesday that under certain conditions it would offer to buy 23.4 million, or about 30 percent, of the shares at $125 per share in cash.

That is the same price Texaco is offering for all of the company's shares and $12.50 per share higher than Pennzoil's previous offer.

After hearing more than an hour of arguments Wednesday, Judge Richard P. Byrne ordered Gordon P. Getty, the youngest surviving son of J. Paul Getty and sole trustee of the family trust, not to consummate or in any way alter the deal with Texaco before the end of a hearing scheduled for Monday.

Four weeks ago, Houston-based Pennzoil was offering to buy 20 percent of the shares for $110 each and, two weeks after the company reached a tentative agreement, it offered to buy 43 percent of Getty Oil for about $112.50 a share.

Pennzoil also revised an earlier report filed with government regulators, asking permission to acquire up to 50 percent of Getty Oil's 79.1 million shares outstanding.

According to documents filed Wednesday in Los Angeles Superior Court, Pennzoil decided to reopen its tender offer after attorneys for the three heirs approached the company last week.

The suit on behalf of Stefanie Marie, Cecile Karen Margarita and Christina Terese Getty claims that the aborted Pennzoil agreement must be completed to fulfill the requirements of the family trust that owns 40.2 percent of Getty Oil's shares and to protect the three minor heirs.

Mojave's mountains mysterious

By EARL GUSTKEY
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

KELSO, Calif. — The mountain ranges of the vast Mojave Desert seem somehow not of this time, more like moonscapes than 20th century California.

They are mountains of mystery, seemingly nameless ranges on a seemingly lifeless landscape of dry lakes, lava flows and vast flatlands. Neither assessment is true. They do have names, and there is life aplenty.

Southern Californians are familiar with the close-in San Bernardino and San Gabriel mountains, but most have never heard of the Providences, the New Yorks, the Ivanpahs, the Bristols, the Shadows, the Sheepholes, the Old Womans, the Marbles and a dozen or so other formidable-looking ranges, several of which rise to more than 6,000 feet.

The peaks of many desert mountains have timber, water and winter snow. Frozen spring water is a common sight for winter visitors on mountain roads.

Some consider these ranges to be masterworks of nature, sculpted islands in a sea of desolation. A group is lobbying to have 1.5 million acres designated as Mojave National Park.

Recently, a reporter took a close look at one the desert ranges, the Providences, with a Department of Fish and Game biologist, Dick Weaver. He's spent much of the last 35 years in the mountains of the Mojave, looking after, among other creatures, bighorn sheep.

He's a walking Mojave history book, a man who seemingly knows the human story behind every abandoned mine, windmill, spring and trail.

WATER AND DEER. At Pettit Well there are two windmills, still operating, and a couple of old, leaky water tanks.

"Pettit Well historically is the most reliable water source in the Providences," Weaver said. "Even in drought years, when most of the other springs and wells dry up, Pettit has water. For the people who had to haul water all over the mountains, this is where they came in dry periods."

The juniper-bitterbrush-sage lands around and above Pettit Well are prime deer country. The DFG introduced 40 Rocky Mountain mule deer in 1948 and their descendants are the animals hunted today in October and November.

Weaver pointed to a ledge on a bluff and said:

"A hunter shot an interesting deer there in 1960, one that taught us a lot about Rocky Mountain mule deer. It was huge, 13 years old, a member of that original 1948 release. It still had a red ear tag. It had the most incredible rack I ever saw — it looked like a cholla cactus. That deer weighed 195 pounds, dressed out.

"Deer didn't evolve in the Providences, as far as we know. The desert burro mule deer of the Colorado Desert (Southeastern California) is a different critter. They need ironwood trees. When you have no ironwoods, you don't have burro mulies. This is yucca-Joshua-juniper country.

"There are probably several hundred Rocky Mountain mule deer in the Providences now, and they do well. I've seen them in the flats eating the fruit off the yuccas. This is good habitat. In fact, over the years they've extended their range into the New York Mountains (the adjacent range to the north) and the McCulloughs.

"The deer here are worked pretty hard in the hunting seasons. But there are some big ol' bucks with racks as big as anything that comes out of Utah.

"There are probably a few mountain lions, too. Biologists learned something about lions in the Providences about 40 years ago. A trapper caught a bobcat in one of his traps but when he found it, a mountain lion had eaten it. That was years before the deer release. A lot of biologists believed then that lions were totally dependent on deer. No deer, no lions, so to speak. But that taught them it isn't necessarily true."

EAGLES AND LAMBS. Foshay Pass is a gap in the range and from it a dirt road winds up a hill to the abandoned Vulcan iron mine. The hillside is scarred and studded with rusted hunks of machinery. The last operator, Kaiser Steel, closed the mine shortly after World War II.

At the bottom of a 200-by-200-foot pit, 75 feet deep, is about 10 feet of greenish rainwater.

(Weaver never says: "There are bighorn sheep in this area." He says: "This area is sheepy.")

"This part of the Providences has seven springs and one of them is reliable in dry years. And this big mining hole, while it isn't sightly, usually has water in it in the summer."

Weaver told another yarn of predation in the wild:

"See that canyon up there? The subject of eagle predation on bighorn sheep lambs has always been argued.

"My old friend Bert Craig told me the story. He and a friend were working a gold mine up there during the Depression. His friend went hunting one morning and Bert heard him fire a shot.

"What he'd done was fire a shot to scare off a golden eagle he'd seen kill a bighorn lamb by knocking it off a ledge. Over the years, I've heard other stories like that, about eagles knocking lambs off ledges or ridges, then feeding on them. I've heard stories of them actually carrying them off, but I'm not sure I believe that. A newborn bighorn goes about eight pounds."

BERT CRAIG, MEMORIES OF. "I can't look at an abandoned mine out here without remembering Bert Craig," said Weaver, passing a long-abandoned gold mine. "Bert used to work for me, helping me build quail guzzlers. But he was a miner most of his life, worked all over the world, in China and the Philippines. But he loved the desert, and lived alone in a shack.

"Bert had a sixth-grade education, but I'd have matched his geology against that of anyone with a mining-engineering degree. He could look at a core sample and read it like a book. He had bad lungs from inhaling mine dust most of his life. He caught pneumonia in 1963, was sick for a week and died.

"He used to prospect at night with an ultraviolet light, looking for tungsten. You can see it (it glows) with 'black light,' as miners call it. He also made whisky, in Hollerman Canyon.

"The history of the Mojave is full of people like Bert Craig, going back to the 1860s. The mining activity here was predominantly for silver until the price collapsed in 1896.

"There were so many silver miners that there was a post office at the Providence Mine from 1882 to 1892. When the silver price collapsed it sent all the miners scrambling over the desert looking for gold."

KELSO. It's one of the Mojave's strangest sights: in the middle of the desert, a large, Spanish-style hotel built decades ago by the Santa Fe railroad. Once open to anyone, it's now reserved for railroad employees.

Weaver said of a windmill-powered well near the tracks: "It's a thousand feet deep and it brings up the most delicious water in the desert."

The well was dug in the 1930s and for 50 years or so before that the railroad got water from a pipe to Comstock Spring up there against the Providences.

HOLE-IN-THE-WALL. This is a huge mass of reddish-brown rock tattooed with thousands of wind-carved caves, pockets, holes and basins. A Bureau of Land Management campground fronts the mass. Rock climbers practice their art on the precipitous walls, which offer infinite hand- and toe-holds.

"Turn-of-the-century cattle operations used to keep their cows close to Hole-in-the-Wall in drought periods, because there's so much catchment water around here," Weaver said.

"This is a good bird-watching spot, for raptors. If you hang around long enough, you can photograph prairie falcons, golden eagles, red-tailed hawks and owls. And you can find chuckawalla lizards, which go about 10 inches long. They were once a food source for Indians."

DUTCH OVEN MINE STORY. "See that range over there? That's the Clipper Mountains. Ever hear the Dutch Oven Mine story?

"It involves an old desert gold miner named Tom Schofield. He was hired by the Santa Fe railroad to prospect for water around their depots out here. He lived in Danby. Seems he found a little gold out here somewhere and got drunk in a Riverside saloon one night around 1900.

"He was buying drinks with gold dust and everyone in the place wanted to know where he'd got it. So he made up a story about wandering around the Clippers and stumbling upon a big steel kettle in a cave, filled with gold dust.

"He probably pretended he was drunker than he really was. Anyhow, he started a stampede in the Clippers. Seems half of Riverside was all over the Clippers the next day, looking for the gold dust."

QE2: Multi-million dollar improvements unveiled

NEW YORK (AP) — If Great Britain is ever forced to press the newly renovated Queen Elizabeth 2 ocean liner into military service again, its sailors can bunk in a pair of luxury suites with gold-fixtured bathrooms.

The new suites were among a number of features unveiled recently aboard the luxury cruise ship, which underwent a multimillion-dollar renovation to prepare for its first full year of operation since the Falkland Islands war.

"Of course, we have the ocean liner, and it's quite a ship," said Ralph Bahna, president of Cunard Lines. "But we want to give something more — something you wouldn't expect on a ship."

The new features on the 13-story, 67,000-ton trans-Atlantic vessel include a $1 million retractable glass roof over a sunken pool, permitting passengers to swim and sunbathe in any weather; a computer room with six IBM machines; and the two refurbished luxury suites, which will cost $256,000 per person on the QE 2's 89-day world cruise.

"We're trying to attract that person that has always dreamed of going on a cruise, but worried there wouldn't be enough stimulation, enough to do on board," said Bahna.

In addition to the pool, the Magrodome features a stage and sound system for shows; a "Saturday Night Fever" dance floor complete with flashing lights and disco ball; and a full bar.

China trips need visas

By 'GENE BURKE
Copley News Service

TRAVEL ADVISORY: CHINA — The State Department advises U.S. citizens planning to travel to China that all American citizens are required to have a valid Chinese visa when they arrive in or transit China by land, sea or air. The Chinese authorities will levy a 2,000 yuan (about $1,000 U.S.) fine on any U.S. passport holder who arrives in China for any reason without a visa.

Americans transiting China by airplane must possess valid transit visas even if they do not intend to leave the aircraft.

The consulate general at Shanghai has advised that several American citizens who arrived in port on merchant vessels and cruise ships have encountered difficulties because they had not obtained Chinese visas prior to arrival in Shanghai.

Q: My minor child is now with his father, and I am quite sure he has acquired a passport for our child. I object to this as I have custody. Can you cancel this passport so it cannot be used?

A: Parental objections, court orders or decrees concerning custody do not provide a basis under passport regulations for the revocation of passports. However, the regulations do not prevent the objecting parent or guardian from attempting to recover possession of a minor's passport, either directly or through order of a court.

If you wish personalized information about passport requirements, send your questions to 'Gene Burke, Passport Agency, 11000 Wilshire Blvd., Federal Building, Suite 13100, West Los Angeles, Calif. 90024.

Four Corners: American heritage

By DIANE BUCKLES
Copley News Service

When you plan a trip to places rich in American history, you probably think of New England, right? Most of us have learned to date America's beginnings with the coming of the Mayflower to Plymouth Rock.

Of course we know there were Indians on the continent before the Pilgrims arrived, but their civilization has been largely covered over by the sprawling cities of the white man. Where can you go to see America's oldest roots, to view Indian cultures which are still flourishing today in a land of few cities and much natural beauty? To the Four Corners region of America's old Southwest.

The Four Corners, so called because the boundaries of four states (Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado) meet here, has its own unique history. The area offers a fascinating blend of natural and cultural wonders to all who visit.

The Grand Canyon is here, attracting geologists and tourists alike to marvel at its awesome beauty. Cut deep into the earth by the winding Colorado River, its vistas reveal the "rock of ages" in progressively older stone layers descending to the canyon floor.

Here, too, are the abandoned cliff dwellings of the ancient Anasazi Indians, ancestors of the Hopi. Anasazi ruins are scattered over the Four Corners region, the most impressive of them located atop Colorado's Mesa Verde.

THE NAVAJO AND Hopi Indian reservations also are here, where visitors may witness the continuing cultures of these Native Americans, so different from the modern technological one we tend to think of as "American."

Archaeologists estimate that there were more people living in the Four Corners area in 1200 than are living there today. An arid land of unique and sometimes startling natural beauty, this region atop the Colorado Plateau contains large tracts of wilderness barely touched by modern civilization.

If you've only driven through the Southwest on freeways, you've missed a great deal. I recently was a member of a Lindblad "Special Expeditions" group which toured, via four-wheel-drive vehicles and small planes, many of the points of interest the Four Corners has to offer. Led by a guide who is an expert on both natural and cultural aspects of the region, this is a wonderful way to get to know firsthand a different and still-continuing American history.

A "Special Expeditions" tour is not your usual tourist experience. If you dream of spending your vacation time in fancy hotels or on a crowded beach improving your tan, this is definitely not for you. But if the idea of flying an eight-seater plane through the Grand Canyon, exploring the centuries-old cliff dwellings of Anasazi Indians, river rafting with skilled boatmen down the swift currents of the San Juan, visiting a Navajo woman in her hogan situated in the massive beauty of Monument Valley, four-wheel-driving amid the multicolored spires of Canyonlands National Park — if all this intrigues you, then read on.

THE LINDBLAD 13-day excursion through the deserts, mountains and canyons in the land of the Hopi and Navajo gives all who experience it lasting memories of the different kind of beauty to be found in America's high Southwest.

Our journey began in Flagstaff, where we toured the Museum of Northern Arizona and learned something of the geology, biology, archaeology and anthropology of the area we would be covering. We then boarded a specially designed four-wheel-drive van and moved on to our spacious hotel overlooking the Grand Canyon.

The canyon is as long as the distance from Paris to London, as wide as eight Golden Gate Bridges at its widest point and 10 times as deep as the Washington Monument is tall. Our guide escorted us to a number of scenic views along the rim of the canyon, where we stopped for pictures as he described its geological origins and evolution.

The canyon is between 6 million and 12 million years old, and at its deepest point descends almost one vertical mile into the earth. The many colorful bands, or strata, of rock which line its walls tell a geological story which began long before the arrival of man. The youngest layers of rock, only a couple million years old, are found at the top, while the bottom of the canyon is made of Precambrian rock, the oldest in the world.

The next day we viewed the canyon from another, less-conventional perspective. Boarding a Cessna 207, we flew for almost an hour into the very heart of the canyon. Here, dappled sunlight played on jagged brick-red buttes and glinted off the green waters of the Colorado River, far below us.

LEAVING THE CANYON early the next morning, we set out toward the Navajo Reservation. After a short stop at historic Desert View Tower we lunched at the Cameron Trading Post on the edge of the Painted Desert. This establishment, although it does cater to tourists, is a real trading post, where Indians come to sell their handiwork and pick up supplies.

As we entered the Navajo Reservation, the pastel sands of the Painted Desert kept our cameras clicking. Soon we began to see hogans, the six-sided homes of the Navajo, scattered over the barren landscape. Our destination was the Hopi Reservation, surrounded on all sides by Navajo land. The borders between the two reservations are in some dispute, and one isn't exactly sure when one is leaving Navajo and entering Hopi country.

The Hopi villages are located atop three high mesas, overlooking the dry Arizona plains. One of these villages, Old Oraibi, contains some of the oldest continuously lived-in structures in North America. Visitors are no longer allowed to enter this village, and we continued on to Second Mesa, where the Hopi Cultural Center and Motel are located.

This complex, built by the Hopi, contains a fine museum and an artists' cooperative guild — boasting an impressive display of kachina dolls. These beautifully crafted dolls represent the sacred kachina spirits, whom the Hopi believe to reside in the San Francisco Peaks, 100 miles distant.

CNS Photos

Also for sale at the guild are natural wicker and coiled baskets, intricately decorated pottery and silver overlay jewelry. The architecture here is designed to resemble a Hopi village, and the center's restaurant, the Duf'kik Nova (literally "evening meal") offers a variety of traditional Hopi foods, as well as more standard fare.

AFTER A PEACEFUL night in the motel (my room was blissfully sans TV and telephone) we headed out for First Mesa and the small village of Walpi. This village, built in the 1200s, is without running water and electricity. Automobiles and photographs are prohibited. We parked outside and walked into the village feeling as if we were walking into another, much simpler, century. Several of the people invited us into their homes, where we were shown lovingly handmade (and surprisingly inexpensive) kachinas and pottery, laid out on a kitchen table or hanging from wooden hooks on the ancient walls.

Moving back into Navajo country later that afternoon we stopped at Hubbell's Trading Post, the longest-operating trading post in this part of the country.

Our next major surprise came when we arrived at Canyon de Chelly (pronounced "shay"). A winding chasm of sheer stone cliffs, smaller and much different in appearance from the Grand Canyon, its fertile floor is dotted with rounded hogans and scattered herds of sheep graze on the Indian farmlands.

We were led from our lodge by a Navajo guide deep into the canyon where we viewed Antelope House Ruin, a structure whose beginnings date back to A.D. 700 and which once housed as many as 40 Anasazi. The larger White House Ruin, farther up the canyon, is nestled under the protective overhang of its steep walls.

EIGHT HUNDRED years ago the Anasazi made pottery here, wove cloth, kept pet dogs and domesticated turkeys. Fields of corn, squash, beans and cotton surrounded this prehistoric village, but within 200 years this site, and all other Anasazi pueblos in Canyon de Chelly were abandoned. Perhaps drought or overpopulation drove them out, but the reason for their exodus remains a mystery which archaeologists still are trying to solve.

Tropical island provides quiet life

CHUB CAY, Bahamas (AP) — It doesn't show on many maps and it probably won't ring a bell with most travel agents, but here — 125 miles east of Miami — is a tropical vacation island without a city, traffic lights, souvenir shops or crowds.

"It's the isolation," say Charles and Barbara Vose of Oklahoma City, explaining the attraction many find for this semiprivate paradise in the Berry Island chain of the Bahamas.

Others come for what anglers say is one of the best fishing "holes" in the hemisphere. Only 600 yards from shore are the big ones — blue and white marlin, sailfish and tuna.

At one end of the 7-mile by ½-mile island is the "Tongue of the Ocean" — a dogleg of blue water where big game fish feed. The flats on the north side are abundant with lobster and Chub Cay's pristine beaches are littered with an assortment of shells. Offshore coral reefs are home for a wide variety of marine life that divers and snorkelers rarely see.

There's little history to Chub. Most of the island remains untouched and undeveloped except for a half dozen scattered homes outside the bounds of Chub Cay Club, the island's only center of activity.

Bahamians never lived here before Lou Doherty and a few affluent friends purchased the island in the late 1950s to build a private marina and fishing resort. Now, about 40-50 natives from other islands are employed here.

Doherty, a professional horseman living in Miami, supervised construction of the harbor, marina and club which was called Crown Colony Club until it was sold about five years ago.

"There wasn't even a palmetto shack in those days," recalls Doherty, who describes bonefishing around the island as "the best I've seen."

The island is owned by a group of nine headed by James Greer of Houston. He owns a chain of hotels and a large Texas construction company.

The club-marina covers 940 acres and membership numbers about 200. Initiation is $500 and annual fees are $1,500.

For members, 20 motel rooms are available for $90 per night or they may rent one of nine individually owned villas ranging from $225 a day for a two-bedroom beach home to the Voses' four-bedroom, four-bath picturebook retreat for $3,500 per week.

Near the 75-slip marina are two restaurant-bars — Harbour House for members and The Flying Bridge Restaurant and Bar for non-members. These are the only eating places on the island.

Free London stopover included in package

From Staff Reports

South African Airways and American Airlines have teamed up on a special airfare package that enables travelers from the United States, especially the West and Southwest regions, to enjoy a free stopover in London when they fly SAA to South Africa.

The free London stopover is available when you book American Airlines out of its Dallas-Fort Worth gateway and fly to London. SAA will fly you from Britain to Johannesburg and back to either of its U.S. gateways, New York or Houston. At least one trans-Atlantic leg of the journey must be on SAA.

The off-season APEX price for the nearly 16,000-mile journey is $1,534 for the journey from Dallas, to London, Johannesburg and back home again. The trip also can be flown in reverse, beginning with SAA out of New York or Houston, flying to Johannesburg, London and home.

The high-season APEX fare, including the London stopover, is $1,753. The low-season rate is in effect for the months of April, May, June and November.

For more information contact your travel agent or South African Airways, 605 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Unique award to Permian Basin engineers

The Permian Basin Section of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers wil honor two electrical engineers as recipients of the IEEE Centinnial Medal Thursday.

Being honored are H. Mark Foerster and Ike W. Hynd. Foerster is being recognized for his contributions to the section, community, and engineering profession. Hynd is to be given the medal for his pioneering work in electrification of the oil fields and for his innovations in drilling and production technology.

The awards will be presented during a ceremony at the Holiday Inn Holidome, Parkway adn Highway 80, Odessa. It will be preceded by a social hour at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 7:15 p.m.

During 1984 the IEEE will recognize 100 years of electrical progress in its Centennial celebrations. The IEEE is the largest professional engineering association in the world with over 230,000 members distributed over all continents. 1984 medals will be awarded world-wide to exceptional members of the electrical engineering profession.

Foerster has been a member of IEEE since 1956. Foerster was a charter member of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers, Permian Basin Section, serving in all offices and was chairman in 1965.

He is currently serving as state president elect of the TSPE and will take office as president in June 1984. He is vice president of Ortloff Corp., an engineering and construction firm providing services for the oil and gas, refining, and petrochemical industries. He attended public schools in Navasota and graduated from Texas A&M University with a B.S. degree in electrical engineering in 1952.

Following two years of military service in the U.S. and Korea, he returned to Phillips Chemical Company in Pasadena, Texas for two years. Following employment with Phillips, he was employed by Dow Chemical Co. in Freeport for two years, and El Paso Products Co. in Odessa for six years before joining Ortloff in 1964.

He is a registered professional engineer in Arkansas, Kansas, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Texas. Within TSPE, he has been Permian Basin Chapter director, State Ethical Practices Committee chairman, and has served on the State Evaluation and Planning Committee. He served as TSPE vice president, Region 1, from 1972 to 1974 and TSPE national director from 1975 to 1978. While serving as regional vice president he was also a trustee of PACE and the Texas Engineering Foundation. He was chairman of the TSPE Professional Engineers in Construction practice division in 1979 and served on the National PEC board of governors that same year.

He has also served on the State Employment Practice, Membership, and Nominating Committees and was chairman of the State Nominating Committee for 1980.

He was president of the Permian Basin Chapter of TSPE in 1967 and 1982, and was named "Engineer of the Year" of the Permian Basin Chapter in 1970. He has also been chairman of the Instrument Society of America, Permian Basin Section. He is vice chairman of the Advisory Council, College of Science & Engineering of the University of Texas, Permian Basin, Foerster resides in Odessa with his wife, Betty.

Hynd will be honored for his outstanding contributions to the electrification of oil and gas fields. Hynd's innovations in the electrification of the oil fields from the 1930s through the 1980s include the following:

In the late 30s, Hynd designed a temporary pad for a pumping unit, which was the forerunner of the portable concrete pads now used with all pumping units.

During the 1940s, he designed the self-protected transformer for lease distribution — a self-contained unit with breaker trip and lightening protection built in.

His development of the motor-switched capacitor grew out of a problem on a lease near Wichita Falls, on a power plant which was having problems with voltage inconsistencies from the line. The capacitor was on the power plant to help correct power factor, but Hynd devised a way of putting the capacitors on the individual motors so they could correct power factor coming into the motors on the pumping units.

Hynds pumpoff device for automatically controlling pumping cycles was patented in 1976. He developed the percentage timer for programming oil well pumping. He has a number of patents, most of which comprise all the major components of the rod pumping system in use today.

The ultra-high slip motor is his most noted accomplishment. It is now marketed as Sargent Industries Ultra-high Slip Econopak in nations all over the world. It was developed to compensate for the elasticity of sucker rods. The motor is a limited torque machine which slows as the load increases and speeds up as the load decreases to compensate for changes in the sucker rods under tension and compression. Although the idea was germinated in 1930s, development of the motor did not occur until 1964.

Religious coalition to use its stocks to fight nukes

WILLIAM K. RASHBAUM
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — The television commercial opens with the sun rising over purple mountains, and continues with images of highways, farms, industry, children jumping rope and birds flying past the setting sun.

Although the song in the background is "Tomorrow," from the Broadway show "Annie," the advertisement was not produced to promote the musical. Its aim is to impart factual information about America's energy needs through paid advertising, according to the sponsor, the U.S. Committee for Energy Awareness (USCEA).

However, a major religious coalition that calls the advertising "one-sided and misleading" recently announced that it would use church stock holdings to influence utilities to stop supporting the nuclear industry's $25 million promotional effort.

The Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility (ICCR), a coalition of 17 Protestant denominations and over 200 Roman Catholic orders and dioceses, said it would use church-owned stock in electric utilities as a means of exerting pressure. The center is an independent group associated with the National Council of Churches.

The 60-second commercial, which outlines the potential for solar energy in the future and contends that conservation, coal and nuclear energy are the answers to America's current energy needs, is just a part of the Washington-based USCEA's advertising campaign.

THE USCEA HAS three print ads, which appeared in journalism publications, entitled "Nuclear Waste: The Facts," "Nuclear Waste Disposal: Progress Report" and "Radiation: Facing Fears with Facts." Four colorful ads that address issues of nuclear energy and electricity appeared in consumer magazines such as Time and Newsweek. Timothy Smith, executive director of ICCR, said the nationwide print and TV campaign leaves the American public with a "distorted and inaccurate view of the safety and long-term feasability of nuclear power."

In response to Smith's charges, USCEA President Harold B. Finger said: "What he wants us to do is write ads that express the concerns he has, We're not doing that." Describing the promotional effort as "an informational program with significant print discussion and material on areas we think the public is not very informed on," Finger said the committee's annual budget was $25 million, of which $11 million was for advertising.

Dr. Irvin C. Bupp Jr., who specializes in management issues having to do with electric utilities and nuclear power, said the situation was more complicated than the ads could lead one to believe. Bupp teaches a course on managing energy resources in the MBA curriculum at the Harvard Business School.

Noting that he had seen most of the committee's magazine advertisements, Bupp said that he would "generally agree" with the ICCR contention that the ads leave the public with "a distorted and inaccurate view of the safety and long-term feasability of nuclear power. At the very least, they (the advertisements) are an incomplete version of a very complex situation."

Speaking of the role and the need for nuclear power as presented in the advertisements, Bupp said it was "a lot more limited. The nuclear industry is correct; technology has a role to play in the foreseeable future of electricity supply. But I think that they have always greatly overstated both the necessity for it and the benefits of it — it's a much closer call.

"It is arguably a safe, potentially cheap and reliable source of a fraction of our electricity," he said. "You can argue about what that fraction is, but it certainly couldn't be more than 50 percent, because you can't run the plants all the time.

BUPP NOTED THAT although he felt that the nuclear power industry regarded him as anti-nuclear, he sees himself as more pro-nuclear.

"I think the developed economies of the world would be better off if they could count on that (nuclear) technology to supply a quarter of their electric power in the foreseeable future," he said.

Professor Miro Todorovich, chairman of the Department of Physics at the City University of New York and executive director of Scientists and Engineers for Secure Energy, said that he did not judge the ads to be misleading.

"Looking at what has been mentioned about nuclear power, we do not find anything that would warrant the characterization by the interfaith center of the ads presenting an inaccurate picture of the safety and long-term feasability of nuclear energy," he said.

He added that the group of scientists and engineers was "somewhat surprised at the conclusions that the interfaith center had arrived at," and were meeting to discuss the possibility of writing a letter to the ICCR to point out that the "basis for their allegations scientifically and technically does not hold water."

FINGER OF THE USCEA said that he had corresponded with ICCR and that they had talked about meeting. But he noted that their differences were great.

Kemp to address IPAA here

Republican Congressman Jack Kemp of New York will be the keynote speaker at an IPAA membership meeting in Midland February 14. IPAA vice president Kingdon Hughes of Midland said, Kemp will speak at a 10:30 a.m. meeting sponsored by the IPAA on politics and the oil industry in 1984.

Hughes also said that IPAA chairman Jon Rex Jones of Houston will speak at the meeting along with IPAA executive vice president Lloyd N. Unsell.

"This meeting is open to everyone. And I hope that producers as well as those associated with the industry will take the time to attend this important meeting and hear from both Jon Rex Jones and congressman Kemp on the ciritical issues facing our industry in the coming months," Hughes said.

The meeting will be at the Midland Civic Center, 10:30 a.m. and will conclude at noon with a buffet luncheon.

Major setback for exploration; Sohio abandoning dry Mukluk

CLEVELAND (AP) — In a major setback for frontier oil exploration, Standard Oil Co. (Ohio) announced Friday it is abandoning a nearly billion-dollar exploration well off the north coast of Alaska in an area experts had called the brightest prospect in North America.

Sohio, which operated the well with a 31.4 percent financial interest, said it would take a $163 million after-tax writeoff of its investment in the well. The writeoff — or cut in profits — will reduce its per-share earnings in the final quarter of 1983 by 66 cents.

In a formal statement from its Cleveland headquarters, Sohio said it had not yet decided whether to go ahead with other exploration wells in the immediate area.

The company stressed, however, that it was committed to exploring for oil elsewhere in the Beaufort Sea off the north coast of Alaska and in the lower 48 states.

The dry hole reported by Sohio was in what industry analysts called the "sweet spot" of a geological formation called Mukluk. (The word is Eskimo for seal-skin boot.) The formation is situated 65 miles from the Prudhoe Bay oil field that was discovered in 1968 and ranks as the largest oil find in U.S. history.

Some industry experts had estimated the Mukluk geological structure — essentially a huge underground container — would hold up to 5 billion barrels of oil. That compares with the 9.6-billion-barrel Prudhoe Bay field that today accounts for 17 percent of U.S. oil output.

It was partly because of Mukluk's proximity to Prudhoe Bay that oil companies paid $696 million for four leases on which the first Mukluk well was drilled. They paid an additional $100 million to build a gravel island in the Harrison Bay section of the Beaufort Sea, and $40 million to sink the well.

"They took a shot and they lost a lot of money," said Warren Shimmerlik, who follows the domestic oil industry for the investment firm of Merrill Lynch & Co.

Shimmerlik and others said they believed the Mukluk failure could dampen enthusiasm at future federal lease sales for exploration in the harsh environs of Alaska.

"This has already resulted in rethinking of further drilling in the immediate area," said Eugene Nowak, an oil analyst at the investment firm of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "Even so, this by no means should be seen as a death blow."

Sohio had reported last December that preliminary data indicated the Mukluk well was a dry hole. But it continued testing to be certain that its huge investment was not abandoned needlessly. Drilling of the well began last November.

Sohio, which relies on Prudhoe Bay for well over half its oil production, staked much of its future on Mukluk. Prudhoe Bay's production is expected to declie by 1987.

"The whole industry goes into the exploration business knowing more wells will fail than will be successful," said Richard Nash, Sohio's director of investor relations. "This was a big investment and we're very disappointed, but it's not going to effect the programs we have going. We will continue exploration."

Sohio shared the project with 10 corporate partners. The other companies and their share of the costs are: Mobil Corp., 15.75 percent; Shell Oil Co., 14.0 percent; Texaco Inc., 10.7 percent; Diamond Shamrock, 10.4 percent; British Petroleum Ltd. PLC, 7.04 percent; Placid Oil, 4.23 percent; Amerada Hess Corp., 2.82 percent; Gulf Corp., 1.79 percent; Koch Industries Inc., 1.5 percent, and Elf Aquitaine, 0.32 percent.

British Petroleum said it was taking an $84 million after-tax writeoff for its interest, plus a $56 million after-tax writeoff for its share of Sohio's loss, since British Petroleum owns 53 percent of Sohio's stock. The other companies in the project did not say what their after-tax writeoffs would be.

MGF International announces receipt of old debenture tenders

MGF International Finance N.V. (MGF International) announced that with respect to its pending offer to exchange class A and class B non-interest bearing convertible senior subordinated guaranteed debentures due 1989 (the new debentures) for any and all of its $34,815,000 principal amount 8 1/4 percent convertible subordinated guaranteed debentures due 1995 (the old debentures), it has received tenders of old debentures amounting to $27,739,000 (79.7 percent). Of that amount, (i) $17,600,000 (50.6 percent) have been accepted by MGF International, (ii) $7,344,000 (21.1 percent) have been accepted by MGF International subject, however, to the execution by tendering holders of certain additional documents, and (iii) $2,795,000 (8 percent), which were tendered after Dec. 29, 1983, have not yet been accepted by MGF International pending the consummation of the exchange offer and, in certain situations, the execution of additional documents.

For tenders of old debentures already accepted by MGF International, the conversion price of the class A new debentures to be issued will be $.46 per share. The new debentures will be issued as soon as practicable. For tenders of old debentures made after Dec. 29, 1983, the per share conversion price of the class A new debentures to be issued will be the greater of $.46 or 105 percent of the most recent closing bid price of MGF common stock on or prior to the exchange date, as defined in the exchange offer offering circular. The new debentures for this group of tenders will be issued as soon as practicable after consummation of the exchange offer. In addition, MGF International announced an extension of the exchange offer to midnight, Luxembourg time (6 p.m., New York time) on Jan. 25, 1984, unless further extended by MGF International.

All tenders not accepted by MGF International prior to midnight, Luxembourg time on Jan. 30, 1984 may thereafter be withdrawn.

Ocean drilling program to begin

A major international ocean drilling program will be started in October to explore the ocean basins and to study how the earth, the oceans and their resources were formed and how they evolved, the National Science Foundation (NSF) said.

The NSF has awarded a five-year, $141 million contract to Joint Oceanographic Institutions Inc. (JOI) to manage and operate the program, called the Ocean Drilling Program (ODP). The new program will follow NSF's highly successful Deep Sea Drilling Project (DSDP), which during the past 15 years used the leased 400-foot research ship Glomar Challenger to compile a number of significant scientific findings, including must of the evidence used to develop the theory of plate tectonics.

The ODP also will explore the continental margins, the region of the earth's crust between the continental shelf and the deep ocean abyss and one of the earth's last scientifically unexplored frontiers. The new program is expected to last for at least 10 years and the new contract with JOI includes renewal options.

JOI is comprised of 10 major oceanographic institutions. Founded in 1976 to manage scientific services and planning functions for the DSDP, JOI will subcontract with some of its member institutions to conduct the new program.

Texas A&M University will be the science operator, responsible for the lease and conversion of a drillship yet to be selected and the provision of logistical support and scientific services on the ship and ashore. Improved technology and instrumentation and the new drillship will enable ODP scientists to reach targets and obtain results that were beyond the capabilities of the DSDP.

The Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory of Columbia University will coordinate the logging services for the program. "Logging refers to the electronic measurements made in the drill hole which are of great importance to researchers in interpreting drilling results.

Countries which participated in the DSDP — the Federal Republic of Germany, France, Japan and the United Kingdom — are expected to continue in the new program. In addition, Canada and a consortium represented by the European Science Foundation are "candidate members", and will participate in planning activities during 1984. Several other countries are considering membership. The partner countries contribute about a third of the scientific personnel and financial support needed to carry out the drilling program.

Scientific planning for ocean drilling is carried out by an international organization called JOIDES — the Joint Oceanographic Institutions for Deep Earth Sampling. JOIDES performed a similar function for the DSDP.

A schedule for the first year of the new program already has been established. Plans call for drilling to start in the Gulf of Mexico and the Blake/Bahamas area in the Atlantic, Follwed by work on the mid-Atlantic Ridge and in the Labrador Sea. After operations in the North Atlantic the ship will enter the Mediterranean to end the first year's schedule.

Safety standards proposed

The Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has proposed a standard to minimize the safety hazards unique to oil and gas well drilling and servicing, one of the nation's most dangerous industries.

"The proposed standard, developed with the cooperation of labor, management and various interested groups, will address specific hazards involved in drilling and servicing operations which currently are covered by the overall provisions of our general industry standards," Assistant Secretary of Labor Thorne G. Autcher, head of OSHA said.

"We expect that compliance with the provisions being proposed will significantly reduce the alarmingly high number of fatalities and injuries among our oil and gas field workers."

Investigations of accidents by federal OSHA from 1977 through 1981 shows 459 fatalities. From FY 1980 through FY 1983, there were 285 fatalities in the 5-state Southwest Region (Ark., La., NM, OK, TX). More than 1,000 fatalities were recorded for the period when the fatalities in states having their own job safety and health programs were included, according to surveys by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Moreover, BLS surveys show that the lost workday injury and illness rate for the "extraction" sector of the industry was 6.6 cases per 100 fulltime workers in 1981, nearly double the 3.8 rate fo private industry as a whole, while the servicing sector rate was 9.3, almost triple the overall average.

The proposed standard would cover about 5,400 rigs employing roughly 95,000 workers nationwide. This rig count includes 1503 rigs in the southwest Region. The proposed standard would include all drilling, servicing and special services performed on wells but would not extend to offshore areas as defined by the Outer Continental Shelf Act, where the U.S. Cost Guard has primary responsibility.

The problems, needs and operations being addressed by the proposal include:

Raising or lowering derrick or mast and rig-up operations: emergency escape fire prevention and protection; handling and racking pipe, drill collars and tubular goods; riding hoisting equipment; hydrogen sulficide procedures, and entry into confined spaces.

Kelly bushing and rotary tables guarding; blowout prevention equipment; weight indicators; traveling blocks, crown blocks, hooks and elevators, catheads, lines, ropes and chains; drill pipe, casing and tubing lips and tongs; draw works; foundations and anchors; derrick or mast ladders; and derricks, masts and guying.

Well servicing; cementing; wireline services; stripping and snubbing; drill stem testing; acidizing fracturing and hot oil operations; freezing, valve drilling and pipe tapping operations; fishing; and gas, air or mist drilling.

Employee training and education: emergency planning; medical and first aid; over-water operations; housekeeping, and illumination.

The proposed standard is meant to supplement OSHA's general industry standards which cover hazards common to most industries such as falls from elevated platforms; and slipping and tripping.

To allow the greater amount of flexibility, the provisions are largely performance oriented. To help the smaller firms and others who may not have the expertise to develop specific compliance measures to meet the standard, non-mandatory appendices with examples of "how to meet the standard" have been added.

The construction standards which cover operations such as size preparation and road construction remain unchanged. The proposed standard does not cover cable tool drilling, drilling for seismic tests and subsoil structural investiagation; drilling for minerals such as sulfur; and drilling for water and brine wells for purposes other than in support of oil and gas recovery.

Comment also is being sought on the problems of noise exposure and earing conservation unique to the industry and on hearing conservation requirements for the industry.

An OSHA field survey and expert judgment indicate that at least 45 percent of the industry already is in compliance with all the proposed provisions of the standard, and cost of compliance was determined as not "major" as defined by Executive Order 12291.

Written comment and submission should be sent in quadruplicate to: OSHA Docket Officer, Docket S-360, Room S-6212, 200 Constitution Avenue, N.W.,Washington, D.C. 20210.

Objections and requests for a public hearing may be filed as well at the above address. Objections and hearing requests should include the name and address of the objector, specify the provisions to the proposed rule objected to and grounds for the action, list and numbers each objection separately, and give a detailed summary of the evidence proposed to be introduced at the hearing.

New CO2 pipeline plans announced

HOUSTON — Plans for construction of Bravo Pipeline System, a 210-mile, 20-inch-diameter carbon dioxide ($CO_2$) pipeline from northeastern New Mexico to the Permian Basin area of West Texas were announced recently.

The new Bravo Pipeline System will be built in 1984 as an undivided-interest, joint-venture, common carrier pipeline, according to Howard A. Parker, president of Amoco Pipeline Co., the Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) subsidiary that will construct and operate the completed system. Partners in the line that will transport $CO_2$ for tertiary oil recovery projects are a subsidiary of Amoco, Sun Gas Transmission Co. Inc., and an affiliate of the Markland Corp. of Dallas. Exact ownership of each participant has not yet been resolved although Amoco is expected to be the majority owner.

Parker said that right-of-way acquisition for the project is underway and pipe has been ordered. The pipeline is scheduled for completion late this year.

Standard's exploration and production subsidiary, Ahmoco Production Co said two months ago that it had identified project areas in ewhich it will begin a major $CO_2$ tertiary oil recovery program sometime in 1985. The Amoco project areas are in the Slaughter Field in Hockley and Terry Counties, near Sundown, and the Wasson Field in Yoakum County, near Denver City.

DOE environmental rules published

The Department of Energy has published an update of the DOE Environmental Regulation Handbook for Enhanced Oil Recovery, and single copies are available free from the DOE Bartlesille Project Office.

The handbook, DOE Report No. BC-10355-1, was prepared by Spears and Associates of Tulsa, Okla., and is intended to serve as a guidebook.

Environmental laws and regulations of the federal government and 16 major oil-producing states that have significance for EOR processes are escribed. Processes include oil recovery by thermal methods (steamflooding and in-situ-combustion), miscible gas flooding, and chemical flooding. Emphasis is given to laws and regulations for the control or prevention of pollution, and the handbook covers air pollution control, water pollution control, protection of underground water, and solid waste management. Rules applying to site locations and mode of operations are also covered.

Since 1970, Congress has enacted a series of pollution control laws that set goals and standards applicable to oil-producing operations. Although the federal laws dominate the field of environmental regulation, Congress has favored state administration of the programs. Furthermore, many states have assumed the responsibility for one or more of the Federal programs and have changed their state laws and regulations to conform with the Federal requirements.

However, in other states, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency administers certain programs, and the state may operate a different program under state law. The handbook covers the comples Federal-state relationships.

Tom Wilson and John Scott of Spears and Associates were principal investigators for the study. Ronald F. Kendall was the DOE technical project officer.

Parallel reports offering closed

Parallel Petroleum Corp. has reported that on Jan. 4, 1984, it closed a private offering of restricted stock, achieving the maximum offered amount of $500,000.

Frank S. Delay, president and CEO, stated that proceeds of the offering, complimented with present operating cash flow, would be used for expanded leasehold acquisitions and the company's share of increased development and exploratory drilling on existing internally generated oil prospects.

Delay also noted that no part of the equity funding would be used to cover overhead costs or for debt service because existing cash flow is sufficient to pay overhead expenses and the company is debt free.

Based in Midland, Parallel Petroleum Corp. is a publicly owned oil and gas exploration and production company. The company has 4,834,754 common shares and 300,000 warrants outstanding which are traded on the over-the-counter market.For further information, contact: Frank S. Delay, president, Parallel Petroleum Corp., (915) 684—3727.

PBGC offering three courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer three courses in the Permian Basin Graduate Center, 105 W. Illinois, Midland.

"Major Developments in Oil and Gas Taxation," January 31, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. This new course will cover the changes made during the year and enable accountants to take advantage of information in completing 1983 returns. John M. Malloy, professor of accounting and head of the taxation program, Texas Tech University, will instruct the course. Fee is $130.

"Evaluation of Oil and Gas Properties," Wednesday and Thursday, February 1-2, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The objective of this course is to present an overview of the techniques used in preparing oil and gas property evaluations. Bill and Richard Hise, The Hise Company, Lafayette, La. will instruct. Fee is $260.

"Oil and Gas Taxation — Level I," has been rescheduled for Wednesday and Thursday, February 1-2. from 8:30 a.m. tp 4:30 p.m. John M. Malloy will instruct. Fee is $260.

Building planned, equipment coming for PETEX training site

Equipment is being transported and construction plans are underway for the opening of the University of Texas at Austin's Petroleum Extension Service (PETEX) training facility on the campus of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Curtis Kruse, director of PETEX, which is headquartered at UT Austin's Balcones Research Center, said recent donations from business and industry brought together the equipment needed to open a PETEX-operated skills training center on the UTPB campus. Bids on a new instructional building will be let in late January, with construction planned to begin in late February. Kruse said the new facility should be ready for classes by mid May.

New construction will include a 5,000-square-foot building on a UTPB campus tract along Loop 338. The University of Texas Board of Regents approved a plan to locate the PETEX facility on the UTPB campus in October of 1981.

"This will be part of a 20-acre campus development which will offer technical-vocational support for the petroleum industry in three areas — production, drilling and well servicing and workovers," Kruse said.

Paul Hudson, coordinator of Odess'a PETEX operation, said local offices will be located in the UTPB Founders Building. He said the Odessa operation, which has been housed at Odessa College since 1955, will move into UTPB's office space by May 1.

Kruse noted the training center will teach persons already working in the oil industry. "Students will average anywhere from six months to two years of previous employment. The school will last about five days and will be taught with actual equipment used to process oil and gas on various leases. We want students to get hands-on experience rather than working with models," he added.

Kruse explained that PETEX programs have been available on the Odessa College campus since 1955. These programs differ from the petroleum technology program offered at OC.

"PETEX provides short courses and seminars based on the demands of the petroleum industry, and most of the students are sent by company management. We don't offer night courses, and our students are not working toward a degree. Generally, our students are already working in the field and take short courses at the expense of the company for which they work," he said.

PETEX is prt of the UT Austin Division of Continuing Education. Established in 1944, it has full-service training capabilities, conducts technology schools and in-house training programs, and distributes training manuals, slides, tapes and films. The home office is at UT Austin's Balcones Research Center, with training centers located in Odessa, Houston and Kilgore.

Most equipment needs for the new Odessa site were secured at a meeting of oil company representatives at UTPB on Jan. 11 1984. On hand for the meeting were Kruse and Hudson, John Josefe, Texaco USA; Rodney Maxxon, Sun Expl. and Prod. Co.; Jim York, Amoco Prod. and Expl. Co.; Dick Donelly, Balcones Research Center; Larry Hall, Getty Oil Co.; O.D. Bretches, Arco Oil and Gas Co.; Ned Daniels, Marathon Oil Co.; Marvin Lorenz, Conoco Inc. and Rex Cabaniss, Shell Oil Co.

AAPG convention here

The 26th Annual Southwest Section AAPG Convention will be held in Midland, Feb. 5, 6, and 7, 1984. The West Texas Geological Society will host the meeting with an Icebreaker on Sunday night and a Texas Bar-B-Q and dance on Monday night. The theme for the convention is Oil and Gas Fields - Search for More in '84. Nineteen papers will be presented on fields in the Permian and Anadarko Basins. Emphasis will be on the exploration thinking which led to the discovery and development of these fields. A short course entitled Seismic Exploration Modeling — Geological Prediction and Pitfalls will be presented on Sunday, February 5, by Fred Hilterman, Geophysical Development Corp., Houston. The Honorable Tom Loeffler, U.S. Congressman, 21st District, will give the keynote address.

Advance registrations are now being accepted. Contact Southwest Section, AAPG, One Petroleum Ceter, Building Six, Suite 201, 3301 North 'A' Street, Midland, Texas 79705 or contact Sue Timms, WTGS, P.O. Box 1595, Midland, Texas 79705, phone 683-1573.

TIPRO meeting plans announced

AUSTIN — Jared Hazelton, executive director of the Texas Research League, will discuss the future of the Texas economy Thursday in a luncheon speech before members of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

The annual Mid-Winter TIPRO committee meetings will begin at 8 a.m. in the Austin Hyatt-Regency Hotel.

TIPRO president Bruce Anderson of Houston said the committees will discuss several issues, including natural gas decontrol legislation and the possibility of additional federal and state taxation.

"The Texas oil and gas industry is on the verge of a comeback, and that can only mean an improving economy for the state as a whole," Anderson said.

"Additional taxation of the industry and other factors could impede — or even prevent — that comeback; therefore, we believe it is important to discuss those potential problems and reach a concensus on our response to them."

The TIPRO membership committee, chaired by Tom Merritt of Kilgore, will convene at 8 a.m. for a breakfast meeting. Rex Fuller of Lubbock will chair a meeting of the National Energy Policy committee, beginning at 9 a.m.

The State Policy Issues committee, which is chaired by Hans Hansen of Midland, will begin its discussions at 10:30 a.m.

Following the noon luncheon, Anderson will convene the TIPRO executive committee at 2 p.m. That session should conclude by 4 p.m.

SEG seismic crew count increases

According to the Society of Exploration Gleophysicist's latest report, the number of seismic land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. during December was 496, compared with 495 in November. The December gain resusited from an increase of two vessels and a decrease of one land crew.

The December total (496) represents an increase of less than 1 percent over last month, a 4 per cent increase over December, 1982, a 29 percent decrease from December, 1981, a 14 percent decrease from December, 1980, a 10 per cent increase over December, 1979, a 39 percent increase over December, 1978, and a gain of 51 per cent over the same month in 1977.

During December, six contractors were operating twelve of the 408 land crews and two of the forty-four vessels on a speculative basis.

Pipelines Ok'd

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission chairman Mack Wallace has announced that 25 permits to operate new pipelines in Texas were granted by the RRC in December. In 1983, the commission approved 220 permits, while 177 were granted in 1982.

Sixteen of the new permits were for gathering pipelines, four were for trunk transmission lines, and five were for other types of lines. Gathering lines bring oil and gas production leases, while a trunk transmission line is a larger diameter line into which smaller lines connect.

Twenty-four of the newly-permitted lines will transport gas, and one will carry crude oil.

In December, six permits were granted to operate pipelines in Southeast Texas (District 3); five in West Central Texas (District 7B); three in East Texas (District 6); two each in North Texas (District 9) and the Midland area (District 8); and one each in deep South Texas (District 4) and the San Angelo (District 7C) and Refugio (District 2) areas. There were also four offshore lines.

Why An Independent Deserves An Independent Bank

QUICK RESPONSE

A hundred years ago you had to wait weeks to get something from Dallas or Houston- if you got it at all.

More often than not, that is still the case when it comes to banking.

But when you talk to your ClayDesta National banker, you get answers from Midland.

So our customers measure response time in days, not months. We know when you're ready to make a move, you need an answer now. And we're ready to give you one.

That's one reason why independents are saying they feel like winners just walking in our bank. If you've made it as an independent, you are a winner.

Talk to your friends about ClayDesta National. Ask other independents who've done business with us.

They'll tell you there isn't a bank in America that is more positive about the great energy industry. Or more positive about the independents who made it great.

Come see us. You'll love doing business with a bank that believes in you.

ASK THE FDIC

FDIC checking books for 'sweetheart' deals

By THOMAS R. PROCOPIO

Is there any evidence to indicate that the First National Bank made "sweetheart" loans to favored friends and customers? And if so, what are the consequences of such actions now that the bank has failed?

I referred your question to Kenneth J. Marino, one of our FDIC attorneys, and his reply was "We are still in the process of conducting an initial review of the FNB loan portfolio. Specific instances of so called 'insider' loans to selected friends and customers of the bank have not yet been discovered. If, upon the completion of our investigations, the FDIC concludes that parties breached fiduciary duties owed by officers and directors to the bank, the FDIC will take the steps necessary to recover any losses suffered by the bank due to 'sweetheart' deals."

• • •

Last week your column contained much information about employment opportunities with the FDIC. This week it had many carefully worded suggestions of liability directed toward a group of 20 men who probably lost more collectively than all the other stockholders put together. My questions are: Who is paying for this "public service" space? And why not require verified signatures for credibility so your readers may consider the source?

This "public service" space as you refer to it is not an advertisement. The newspaper has decided this column is of interest to the public and is therefore considered to be a news story. It is my understanding that newspapers do not charge for this kind of space. However, any advertisements that we do have in the newspaper for employment opportunities will be paid for by this liquidation unit.

If the newspaper had not decided the column was newsworthy, then we would probably have paid for it ourselves. We and the newspaper think that what we're doing in this column is beneficial to Midland in the long run and in our operations here.

In answer to your second question, I thought it interesting your questions were unsigned. Many of the questions coming in are signed, however, those individuals have not given us permission to use their names in print so we haven't. If an individual wants his or her name published we certainly will do it. In the future, individuals should indicate they want their name published.

In addition, the newspaper believes that had we requested signatures, some readers with legitimate questions would have been intimidated and the column wouldn't therefore have been of interest and benefit that it is now.

Do the same regulations, set up by the banking division of the U.S. Treasury Department, as to the classification of loans apply EQUALLY to those made for developing domestic energy supplies and those made to "developing" countries?

Many large banks have made huge loans (billions of dollars) to foreign countries. These are commonly known as uncollectible, however, these lenders are able to carry these "loans" (losses?) on their balance sheets as "performing loans." Energy loans have a much greater potential for payment.

I really can't answer your question about classification of loans because the Comptroller of the Currency does most of the classification for these developing foregin country loans. But my understanding, what little knowledge I have of it, is that they are not classified under the same parameters as a domestic loan is,for obvious reasons. You don't get a financial statement on a country as you do with a domestic oil company or supplier. There are many intangible reasons for loaning money to foreign countries — the preservation of democracy around the world all enters into the decisions, I'm sure.

The commercial banks in this country do this country a great service even though they know they are taking great risks by loaning to these developing countries.

However, it is not equal application of regulations and I just don't think the two can be compared. In my estimation, and I don't speak for the Comptroller, it's like comparing apples and oranges.

It just makes sense to me that loaning to a country where we would like to see freedom and democracy preserved, is a little different than loaning to domestic companies.

• • •

In August of 1982, an employee was told they could get only 10 percent of the stock they requested. This was when First National issued $30 million of more stock. The employee was told they would have to submit a check for 100 percent of the stock requested at $60 per share. The employee submited a check for 100 percent at $60 and was promptly told they had bought 100 pecent of the request. Since all of our savings was involved, do we have any recourse?

Your question was partially answered by our FDIC attorney Kenneth Marino last week when he stated that there would not be any refunds, of any kind, by the FDIC to any shareholders unless there were funds remaining after the FDIC and other creditors are paid in full. If you believe you were deceived when you bought the stock, there are remedies.

While I am not exactly sure, I believe action can be taken through the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). Stockholders can file class action suits against banks, open and/or closed. It's something very hard to prove though. It's unfortunate that your life savings was involved but the only recourse you have is to file action against the people you believed deceived you into buying the stock.

• • •

The following quote came from the Dallas Morning News, Jan. 18: "'It's tough when the biggest company in town goes broke,' says Paul Cash." Mr. Cash was referring to the "collapse" of the First National Bank last October.

The question is: Since national banks operate under almost total control by regulations of the banking division of the U.S. Treasury Department, why weren't these "regulations" varied to allow the "biggest company in town" to have time to weather the "drouth" of the energy slump?

The administration in power (of which the U.S. Treasury is a department) has, for years, seen to easing of regulations when there was drouth in the farming regions and for the threatening defaults on the billions of foreign loans that have been made by U.S. banks. Why was FNB made a victim through the strict application of regulations by the banking division when a "drouth" fell on the Permian Basin?

I can't speak for the Comptroller of the Currency who made the decision to close First National or for the board of directors of the FDIC on why some banks get assistance and why some don't. I can only speculate that everything possible was done to save First National. The decision was made not to cause depositors any additional threat of loss by closing it when they did.

As far as treating defaults on farm loans and foreign loans the same as a bank's, again, it's apples and oranges we are comparing.

Banks are businesses. When people invest in them, they take the same risks that any other stockholder does who invests in any other company. Why should the federal government, and indirectly the taxpayers, guarantee a stockholder that he is going to have a good investment. That's not what the free enterprise system is all about.

The government easing up on loans to farmers or foreign countries is different. The service that the farmer is providing, in my estimation, is to feed the country. And the situation that a drouth brings on, through no fault of his own, is something that the government should be responsible for.

Contrastingly, stockholders do have access to financial information about the bank. They can make a judgment, a business decision, to stay with the bank as stockholders, sell their stock or invest in more. There's no decision to make as a stockholder or investor, there's no gamble or risk at all, if you know the federal government is going to save every bank you invest in. That's not free enterprise and that's not what we want, I hope.

In addition, I don't think your point about strict application of regulations is correct. All the regulators knew the bank was in trouble a number of months before it closed. Mr. Isaac, chairman of the FDIC in Washington D.C., made the statement that he suspected the bank was going to close one year before it did. And if they were going to be strict about it, they could have closed it a lot earlier. They tried everything they could to let the directors and the community keep the bank alive. I'm sure there were probably some in the regulatory system who thought it probably should have been closed earlier.

As I've said, I think a bank is the same as any other business. If we do it for banks to protect the stockholders then we should do it for the stockholders of every other company. If the public wants that then they should write their legislators but they should be mindful of where we are headed if we do something like that.

Cartons revolutionize packaging

By STEPHEN FRANK
Hearst Feature Service

Paper cartons capable of storing fresh whole milk for months on the pantry shelf are revolutionizing the way liquid foods are packaged in the United States.

The cartons, sometimes called paper bottles, are already being used for fruit juice, and will appear on grocery shelves as containers for soups and puddings by year's end, according to food industry and packaging experts.

Food in paper bottles is packaged "aseptically," meaning the bacteria which cause food to spoil are eliminated. This allows it to keep for periods up to a year without need of refrigeration.

"I would characterize it as the most important packaging development in the last generation," said Ronald S. Schotland, president of Schotland Business Research Inc., a management consulting firm based in Princeton, N.J. "It has created an entirely new package that doesn't require refrigeration through the distribution cycle and on the housewife's shelf," said Schotland, whose firm last year published a study of aseptic packaging. "The advantage is that so-called paper bottles provide better taste and quality than you otherwise get from a metal canned product."

Food products in metal cans are heated in the can to kill bacteria, he explained. With aseptic packaging, the carton and food product are sterilized separately and brought together in a sterile environment.

"To ensure complete sterilization in a can, you have to overcompensate; in doing so you overheat the food product and destroy vitamins and taste. It's just not as good," Schotland said.

More than 750 million paper-bottle containers were sold in North America last year, Schotland said. "We project the total North American market will reach at least four billion units by 1987, and we think that's a conservative number," he said.

While milk in paper bottles is available in parts of the Southeast and as far north as Philadelphia, the widest use of aseptic packages is for fruit juices. Fruit juice products account for 90-95 percent of the aseptic packaging market now, according to Schotland.

"It has created a new market that didn't exist before, the so-called youth market, where a mother will pack these paper bottles in a kid's lunch box. It's a lot more convenient than giving them a metal can," the business consultant said. He added that 29 percent of the single serving juices sold in the country were packaged in paper bottles.

"Aseptic packaging is going to be a very large part of the food products packaged in the United States because of potentially higher food quality, lower cost packaging and potential energy savings," said Contintental Can Co.'s Frank J. Mechura. "By the middle of this year, you're going to see a lot of pudding in aseptic plastic packages," he said.

While food and packaging experts predict a proliferation of paper bottles, some are skeptical that much milk will be packaged this way.

"The milk has only a small share of the market. I suppose one of these years it's going to go," said Spencer Johnson, a spokesman for the Paperboard Packaging Council in Washington.

Johnson said aseptic technology had two drawbacks as far as milk was concerned. When milk is pasteurized, it's normally heated to 160 degrees F. for 20 minutes to destroy the most dangerous bacteria. Aseptically packaged milk is flash heated to 280 degrees F. for three seconds to destroy all bacteria. The heating process, Johnson said, produces "a burned or scorched taste" in the aseptically packaged milk. "That's why you see a lot of the milk flavored, to mask the taste," he said.

Another constraint on aseptic milk packages is the size of the containers. So far, the paper bottles come in sizes no bigger than a liter. And the containers, which must be refrigerated after opening, are not reclosable.

"That severely limits its market as far as home consumption," Johnson said, noting most milk sold in the United States was in half-gallon and gallon sizes.

Loan markets like '30s

Many of the recent changes in bank loan markets represent a return to the conditions and practices that characterized these markets before 1930, says economist John H. Wood in the November issue of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas' Economic Review. These changes include strong tendencies toward shorter loan maturities and more volatile loan rates — volatile even in comparison with other short-term interest rates.

Wood's research examined three periods in United States banking: before 1930, the mid-1930s to the mid-1960s, and the late 1960s to the present.

Republic First names new officers

RepublicBank First National Midland's board of directors has elected six new officers.

Bill J. Hill, David D. Kling, Richard D. Michaels, Marvin G. Schiebout and Mark H. Wright were elevated to the position of executive vice president. In addition, the board also elected James W. Foster vice president and controller.

Thomas J. Wageman, RepublicBank president, said he was "delighted to announce our new organization."

"They are all seasoned bankers who are committed to the growth and development of our bank through service to our clients and the community," he added.

Hill, who was formerly senior vice president with FNB, was elected executive vice president, trust department. He will have responsibilities for trust administration, investments, operations and property management. He is a member of the Texas State Bar Association, Midland County Bar Association, Midland Business & Estate Council and a member of the advisory board of the Midland Chapter of the Salvation Army.

As executive vice president, personal banking and operations department, Kling will be in charge of retail, liability, information and building services, personal banking and security. Kling was also a senior vice president with FNB before being elected an officer of RepublicBank. He is a member of the American Bankers Association, Texas Bankers Association and the Midland Kiwanis Club.

Also a former senior vice president with FNB, Michaels was elected executive vice president, commercial banking department. His responsibilities include commercial and real estate lending, cash management, executive & professional banking, private banking, credit administration and the agri-business division. Before coming to Midland, Michaels was vice president and division head for the commercial and private banking departments at LaSalle National Bank in Chicago.

Wright, elected executive vice president, treasury and administration department, will have the responsibility for funds management, correspondent banking, audit, financial planning & control and the administration division. Wright, who was also a senior vice president with FNB, is a member of the board of directors of the Permian Basin Graduate Center.

Schiebout, who recently joined RepublicBank, was senior vice president, division manager of the energy banking department of RepublicBank in Houston. In his new capacity of executive vice president, energy banking department, he will be responsible for energy lending and the engineering division. Schiebout is a member of the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) and the American Petroleum Institute (API).

Foster, who was elected vice president and controller, comes to Midland from RepublicBank Corp. in Dallas where he was manager of corporate accounting.

Wageman said he was very satisfied with RepublicBank's first 90 days.

"We've made a lot of significant accomplishments. We've got our organization in place, our head count down in a very fortitutiously in a way that didn't break our backs," he said.

Court supports producers' argument

By C. VANCE KIMBRO.

The Supreme Court recently held that percentage depletion is allowable on advance royalty and lease bonus income for independent oil and gas producers. This decision supports the argument that production is not the prerequisite to the depletion deduction.

The Internal Revenue Code allows taxpayers who hold an economic interest in oil and gas properties to deduct from their taxable income the larger of two depletion allowances: cost or percentage. Under cost depletion, taxpayers amortize the cost of their properties over the properties productive lives. Under percentage depletion, with several limitations, taxpayers can deduct a percentage of gross income generated from the property. These depletion provisions were allowed to permit taxpayers to recover their investment in mineral deposits and to generate additional capital for further exploration, development and production of mineral deposits.

Before 1975, it was well established that both lease bonuses and advanced royalties constituted "gross income from the property" and accordingly subject to percentage depletion. Even under pre-1975 law, however, depletion deductions had to be attributable to actual production. Lessors receiving bonus or advance royalty income without oil or gas being produced during the life of the property were required to restore the percentage depletion claimed in prior years. Therefore, taxpayers were entitled to a percentage depletion deduction for all income from the property, including lease bonus and advance royalty income, so long as oil and gas was eventually extracted from the property.

In the 1970's, escalating energy prices and the Arab oil embargo enlightened the public to the United States growing dependence on foreign energy. Also of extreme concern was the allegation that the major integrated oil companies were reaping excess profits at the public's expense. Congress responded by the enactment of the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 (75 Act) which repealed the percentage depletion allowance for major integrated oil companies. This statute provides that percentage depletion, subject to various restrictions, could continue to be claimed by independent producers and royalty owners. These qualified taxpayers are allowed percentage depletion with respect to a stipulated average daily production. This reference to average daily production constitutes a limitation on the amount of percentage depletion taxpyer may claim.

The change in the law led to controversy over whether percentage depletion is allowable on lease bonus and advance royalty income, since the provision in the 75 Act is subject to varying interpretations. The average daily production quantity specified may be viewed as a prerequisite to claiming percentage depletion. This interpretation links the depletion deduction directly to income derived from, or connected with, actual extraction during the period. In folloswing this rational, no depletion deduction would be allowed on lease bonuses and advance royalties since they are not tied to actual physical extractions. For tax years beginning in 1975, most taxpayers followed this interpretation and excluded lease bonuses and advance royalties from depletable income.

Another view is that average daily production is a limitation and not a prerequisite to the percentage deduction. This interpretation contends that the percentage depletion allowance is available regardless of whether physical extraction occurred during the year the income is received. Since lease bonus and advance royalties are income arising from the property, taxpayers would be eligible for percentage depletion so long as they did not exceed the limitation and production eventually occurs on the property. This reasoning was used prior to 1975 and was upheld in the recent Supreme Court case.

The Supreme Court held that the 75 Act did not repeal any of the provisions that previously entitled taxpayers to an allowance for percentage depletion on lease bonus or advace royaltty income arising from an oil and gas mineral interest. In the Court's view, the 1975 amendments responded to the public's concern over the country's growing dependence on foreign energy and to the alleged excess profits that major integrated oil companies were earning. Congress wanted to encourage domestic production and to subsidize the combined efforts of small producers and royalty owners in the exploration and developemt of the nation's oil and gas resources. Therefore, the Supreme Court held that nothing in the statute bars percentage depletion on lease bonus or advance royalty income received prior to actual production. The Court, however, left open the question of when the depletion deduction should be claimed.

In view of this Court decision, taxpayers should consider any possible percentage depletion allowable on lease bonus or advance royalty income received in prior years.

Elcor Corp. confirms 2nd quarter loss

Roy E. Campbell, president, Elcor Corporation, confirmed a loss for the second quarter ending December 31, 1983. He had previously said that a loss for this seasonally slow quarter was likely.

For the second quarter, the loss before extraordinary item was $1,289,000 or $.36 per share and the net loss was $1.718,000 or $.49 per share (including a $429,000 or $.13 per share reversal of a tax benefit carry forward extraordinary item). In last year's second quarter, income before extraordinary item was $242,000 or $.07 per share and net income was $501,000 or $.14 per share (including a $259,000 or $.07 per share tax benefit carryforward extraordinary item). Sales of $55,145,000 were 7 per cent higher than $51,461,000 last year.

For the first half ended December 31, 1983, income before extraordinary item was $658,000 or $.19 per share and net income was $1,280,000 or $.36 per share (including a $622,000 or $.17 per share tax benefit carryforward extraordinary item). In the prior year's first half, income before extraordinary item was $1,714,000 or $.49 per share and net income was $3,211,000 or $.92 per share (including a $1,497,000 or $.43 per share tax benefit carryforward extraordinary item). Sales of $116,992,000 were 5 percent higher than $110,920,000 last year.

Campbell said, "Operating profits for our Roofing Products group were lower than last year primarily due to lower prices resulting from intense competition caused by excess manufacturing capacity. Average prices realized in the second quarter were lower than the first quarter and were over 5 percent lower than the same quarter last year.

"We believe there will be continuing pressure on prices until manufacturers decide to remove economically obsolete manufacturing capacity from production. Towards this end, in early January, we have taken out of production the organic felt mills and asphalt roll mill at our Stephens, Arkansas, plant.

"Second quarter losses were larger than originally anticipated primarily as a result of providing appropriate reserves in connection with the shutdown of these mills and the effects of severe winter weather conditions during the latter part of December. The record breaking cold weather and ice storms temporarily postponed demand for roofing products through much of our market area and reduced production for the month.

"Based on current conditions, we believe second half earnings should benefit from improved demand for industrial products, roofing products and engineering and we look for a strong fourth quarter performance."

FDIC energy department extends MAP Inc.'s line

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. recently announced its energy department had extended the terms of a $4.6 million line of credit to Mid-America Petroleum Inc. of Dallas and Midland.

Bruce Brown, with the FDIC in Midland, said the extension was granted to give the company additional time to "re-establish a new banking relationship which was interrupted by the closing of First National Bank of Midland" Oct. 14.

Brown also said, "The terms of the extension have significantly improved the company's working capital ratios to the extent of ensuring its ability to continue full operations during the anticipated transition period."

Mike Stillwell, senior vice president for Mid-America in Dallas, said, the company's management was "extremely pleased and gratified" with the FDIC's action.

"The FDIC has been most cooperative and helpful to our company and we have not found them, in fact, to be the bad guys that I think they're generally perceived to be. We found them to be entirely realistic, helpful and cooperative with borrowers, such as Mid-America, who are in good standing and who are essentially on sound footing, which Mid-America is."

Stillwell also said Mid-America had an advantage going into its meeting with the FDIC because the company "was and always had been," current with its loan payments.

Mid-America's corporate headquarters are in Dallas. Its exploration offices and most of its employees, about 50, are in Midland.

Community National adds three directors to board

Gerald Nobles, Courtney (Holt) Cowden Jr. and Al Garcia were recently elected to Community National Bank's Board of Directors. The announcement was made by Ken Peeler, chairman of the board.

A Midland native, Nobles is a stockbroker with E. F. Hutton. He was formerly with the Midland office of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., and previously, he managed his family's Midland area ranch, and private rural properties for former Dallas Mayor Bob Folsom.

Nobles is a graduate of Midland High School and Texas Tech University where he obtained a B.S. degree in AgriBusiness.

Nobles is chairman of the board of the High Sky Girls Ranch, Director of the Alamo Y.M.C.A., Director of the Midland County Livestock Association, Director of the Sand Hills Hereford & Quarter Horse Show, on the advisory board of Leadership Midland, member of the Midland Committee, deacon of First Christian Church, and an active participant in the United Way Drive. He is married with two children.

Nobles said he is proud to be a part of Community National Bank because he has "a real strong heritage in Midland". He said, "I believe that there is a sincere need for agriculture and oil field service companies to have access to relationship with an independent, home-owned bank that is familiar with, and can fulfill their needs."

Cowden, a native Midlander, is a rancher also involved with oil, gas and other private investments. A graduate of Midland High School, and Texas Christian University's Ranch Management program, Cowden taught an agriculture course at Midland College in 1977-78.

Cowden is on the board of the High Sky Girls Ranch, and is on the Witness Committee of the First Presbyterian Church. He is married with two children.

Cowden said, "I don't have any business concerns on Midland's South side where the bank is located. It doesn't matter to me where the bank is. I think it will be good for the entire community of Midland. That's why I wanted to become involved."

Garcia is the owner of Al's Groceries Inc., a company with two grocery stores on Midland's north side. A native of Beaville, Garcia was a farmer in Seminole for many years.

Garcia is a member of the Lady of Guadalupe Church. He is married with four children. He said, "I want to help the bank become a success because I think it will better my bsisness and the whole community. I also think it will be a good thing for my family."

Community National Bank opened its doors to the public on Tuesday, January 3, 1984 in its temporary facility at 601 Florida at Terrell. To date, it has 400 accounts with $4 1/2 million in deposits and $6 1/2 million in total assets.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 253 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 increased by $93 million to $160.9 billion for the week ended January 18, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 8.78% from 8.81%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 8.81% from 8.78%. The taxable funds' average maturity increased two days to 38 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Money funds assets rose slightly this week, following last week's $1.9 billion increase. Yields hovered at last weeks levels reflecting overall rate stability in the short-term money market during the past month. The funds' average maturity lenghtened two days to 38 days, moving up from 36 days two weeks ago.

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. # Social Security base higher in '84

The annual earnings base-the maximum amount of annual earnings that counts for Social Security-will increase to $37,800 for 1984, up from $35,700, the 1983 base, a Social Security spokesperson said recently.

The increase is based on the change in average earnings levels from 1982 to 1983.

The effective Social Security tax rate for employees will be the same in 1984 as it was for 1983, 6.7 percent. This is true although the tax rate for employers will be 7.0 percent. The reason is that 1983 legislation which raised the tax rates gave employees a .3 percent credit, given when the tax is deducted from earnings.

The end result is that a person who has the same earnings in 1984 as in 1983 will pay the same Social Security tax. Other Social Security figures will increase in 1984 also. The annual exempt amount used in the annual earnings test will increase to $6,960 for people 65-70 and to $5,160 for people under 65 all of 1984. The 1983 figures are $6,600 and $4,920.

The earnings test is the measure used by Social Security to determine whether a person will receive benefits during the year. A person whose annual earnings do not exceed the annual exempt amount will receive all benefits for the year.

A person whose earnings exceed the annual exempt amount will have $1 in benefits withheld for each $2 of earnings over the exempt amount.

Financial committee plans meetings for public testimony

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House Financial Institutions Committee is planning meetings Feb. 8-9 to allow its four subcommittes charged with interim studies to take public testimony.

Those subcommittees are: Financial Services Conglomerates (Rep. Gordon Arnold, D-Terrell, chairman); Electronic Funds Transfer Systems Law and Implementaion (Ralph Wallace, D-Houston, charman); Operations of Financial Institution Subsidiary Corporations (Sam Russell, D-Mount Pleasant, chairman); and Feasibility of State Investments in Commercial Paper (Buzz Robnett, R-Lubbock, chairman).

The meeting will be held in Austin.

Committee counsel Nicolai Von Kreisler says he is particularly interested in obtaining testimony regarding operation of financial services conglomerates, noting the growth of such entries is "right on the forefront" of the financial industry.

"We're seeing a lot of changes in industry," he comments.

Many of those conglomerates, Von Kreisler says, offer virtually the same services as do banks and other traditional institutions, but are not subject to the same regulatory restraints.

State Board of Insurance has taken under advisement staff and Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office recommendations on commercial auto rate changes, and several rules proposals.

Staff recommendations are for increases of 30.9 per cent in liability and 19.0 per cent for physical damage, for a statewide combined increase averaging 22.3 per cent.

TAISO recommended an increase of 41.5 per cent for liability and 15.7 per cent for physical damage, for an average statewide of 32.2 per cent.

Both the staff and industry representatives cited increased cost of claims, and increased frequency of claims, in making their recommendations.

Professional Insurance Agents of Texas has filed a complaint with the State Board of Insurance against Minyard Grocery Store, alleging the Dallas-Fort Worth area stores are violating Insurance Code provisions against rebating.

PIAT head Steve Hacker says the stores have been advertising on radio that customers bringing in personal lines policies for review will receive a certificate good for $5 work of groceries.

Hacker says that appears to be a "very clear inducement to do business," in violation of Insurance Code provisions.

PIAT has asked SBI to investigate and "take appropriate action," he reports.

"If local recording agents engaged in that sort of activity," Hacker contends, " they would find themselves before the commissioner very quickly."

Hacker says the stores have an agent on premises 12 hours a day to provide the insurance services.

In notifying members of PIAT's action, the group stated it is "not opposed to new forms of competition" but is determined to" make certain that no form of competition is allowed a competitive edge that is unavailable to independent insurance agents."

PIAT also comments that the practice points to the danger of "allowing non-insurance based competitors to engage in the business of insurance."

"If the temptation to furnish customers with free groceries has proven to be so irresistable to grocer-agents," PIAT asks, "what might we see occur if banks nd bank holding companies are allowed in?"

Insustrial Accident Board Executive Director William Treacy says work is proceeding to implement use of arbitration panels to review disputed worker's compensation treatment charges.

Those panels are intended to speed processing of claims, and prevent disputes from going to court.

By laws for operation of the panels, to be established in the state's various urban centers, are ready for submission to the Industrial Accident Bard for approval, Treacy says.

"We have a good working arrangement with health-car provider groups" such as the Texas Hospital Association, and various medical, chiropractic and osteopathic associations, he says.

IAB also is completing work on new regulations dealing with prompt setlement of worker's compensation claims, as mandated by the Legislature, Treacy says.

"We're optimistic that these changes will result in better operation of the system overall," he comments.

SBA, UTPB offering business help

LUBBOCK — The U.S. Small Business Administration announced today that the Small Business Institute (SBI) will be in operation at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin this Spring and is now selecting client business for the program. Odessa area businsses wishing to participate in the program should contact Dr. Thomas E. Schaefer, SBI Coordinator at UTPB, (915) 367-2156 or call the SBA Office in Lubbock at (806) 743-7481.

The Small Business Institute, which is sponsored by the SBA, assigns teams of senior or graduate students to provide research, case analysis, counseling and consulting services to businsses, without charge to the business. In addition to being helpful to approximately 25 Odessa area Businesses each year, the UTPB SBI program provides graduating students with a practical "real world" experience and an ideal opportunity to apply the skills they have been learning in the classroom to a live business environment.

In past years, UTPB student teams have performed such efforts as market research projects, advertising studies, recordkeeping and paperwork analyses, examined business costs compared to industry ratios, and many other similar projects.

In that businesses are chosen on a "first-come, first-served" basis, interested business owners are aasked to contact SBA or Dr. Thomas Schaefer as soon as possible.

TI's choice worries software king

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Charles La Fara bubbles with enthusiasm when he talks about computers, software and his business empire, but he also expresses the worries of a man who has been left out on a limb by a decision made by a Texas firm.

La Fara, a bear of a man with a full beard, is president of the International 99-4 Users Group — an organization comprised of owners of Texas Instruments computers.

From his west Oklahoma City office, decorated with paintings of strange creatures, football players and scores of computers, La Fara and his 20 employees run a network of services for the owners of TI computers.

With the decision by Texas Instruments last October to get out of the home computer business, La Fara isn't too sure how long his business hitched to that star will last.

"What other product can you think of that became totally obsolete in one day?" he asks when discussing TI's decision.

But he figures his TI business can last another 18 to 36 months.

"When the software dries up, I'm dead," he said. Software is a program which tells a computer what to do.

La Fara has made contacts with TI to handle software and hardware for the firm and pay it royalty from his sales, but he's awaiting an answer on his proposals.

Until TI decides how it will get out of the home computer business, millions of TI owners and the future of his operation are up in the air.

La Fara figures that with some 2.2 million TI home computers in place, there has to be a market for software and hardware. His organization has more than 100,000 members.

About a fourth of the TI owners bought their computers after the company announcement dropped prices as low a $47.50.

La Fara said TI owners are angry and confused about the TI action.

"They feel they've been let down." It's like buying a new Corvette and then Chevrolet deciding not to build it anymore," he said.

"Right now they (TI officials) are trying to decide what legal and moral obligation they have to consumers," he said.

La Fara got into the computer business through the back door in 1979 when he purchased a TI 99-4 home computer and monitor for $1,050 for use by his Southwest Meat Packing Co. business.

"I started looking for software and there wasn't any," he said.

Pennyrich offers lift, support and comfort

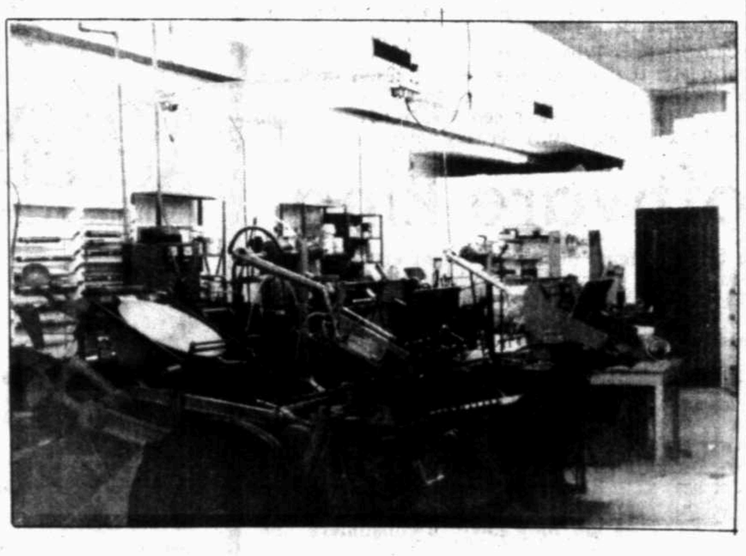
Women, do you need a bra that offers you comfort, lift and adequate support? Of course you do! But just because you want such a bra what guarantees that you get these when you buy a bra.

The best assurance is to buy a PENNYRICH BRA at Pennyrich Bra and Lingerie Shop. The Pennyrich bra, which was designed 33 years ago, is different from other brassieres. It supports and lift with the patented Pennylift, based on the same engineering principles as the Golden Gate Bridge, thereby eliminating strap strain. With this fabulous bra, the weight of the bust is supported equally around the body. The Pennylift acts as a "shelf" to support the bust. You will look as you should look- beautifully lifted with the PENNYRICH BRA!

Besides the Pennyrich bras, the shop also offers Jezebel. Jezebel fufills the sensual fantasy with drifts and spins of lace and satin tricot. With 64 years of experience Jezebel romances with sensual exposure, maximum uplift, comfortable support and full projection.

The Pennyrich Shop also features many styles and sizes in strapless bras.

So next time you need a bra or a sensuous little something, stop in and see Jo Smith, the owner, at 311 Dodson. If you have any questions or need an after hours appointment call Jo at 683-1045.



Starline Printing, at 504 East Nobles, is waiting to help you with your printing needs. Stop by or give them a call at 682-3747 or 563-2431.

Jo Smith, owner of Pennyrich Bra and Lingerie Shop, is waiting to help you at 311 Dodson. Stop in and see her or give her a call at 683-1045. The store hours are from 10 am to 6 pm Monday through Saturday.

Service printing available at Starline

In today's society where lower quality and self-service seems to be the norm, Starline Printing stands out as a company that is unique.

Starline Printing handles the commercial printing needs of the Permian Basin. They can print brochures or any material that you may need .

Starline has many specialties such ns four color processing, foil, dye cutting and blind embossing. Once the items are printed they can be bound in the complete bindery department.

Service is another strong point. Imagine being able to call and request that a sales representative come and speak to you at your place of business instead of having to take the time to make the trip to the printers yourself. Starline has five sales representatives waiting to help you. They also offer free pick up and delivery.

For those of you who have great ideas but your art ability is limited to stick people, Starline is the only printer in the Permian Basin that has a complete art department to create the design you have in mind. Also the composition of your printing needs is all computerized for reliability and accuracy.

Besides brochures and fliers, Starline can handle financial reports such as proxy reports and statements, stockholders reports and annual reports.

Quality is maintained by the 35 employees who process your material. Many of the key employees have been with Starline for 20-25 years. So it is obvious that this is a well established company.

An unusual item offered by Starline is their "Motto Cards". They have a whimsical statement designed to lift your spirits. If you would like to be placed on the mailing list to receive these free just contact the office.

If you have any questions concerning your printing needs or the "Motto Cards" stop by and see them at 504 East Nobles or give them a call at 682-3747 or 563-2431.

Being in charge of personnel for a company is a tough job and it takes a tremendous amount of knowledge. If you think you are a good personnel manager read the following questions and answer them in your mind. Check your's with the answers written below each question.

Q.1. What is the fastest way to send your secretary, who has been out sick, into a relapse?

A.1. Let her work pile up while she is out so that she has to work to the point of exhaustion just trying to catch up.

Q.2. What is the best way to lose a highly qualified and efficient tax person this tax season?

A.2. Overwork your tax person by being under staffed by keeping your accounting clerks and typists to a minimum.

Now that you have read the questions and answers and they hit home because you have either done or considered doing these things yourself, what is the solution? Being the intelligent personnel manager that you are you immediately realize that the solution is temporary help.

Just deciding on temporary help is not enough though. Next you must find a reliable temporary employment agency. That is the easy part! Temp Time is waiting to help you by supplying qualified temporary help.

One of the great features of Temp Time is that all you have to do to get temporary help is to pick up the phone, dial 687-1545 and give them as complete a job discription as possible. To give a complete job discription you should tell them the hours; the skills needed such as shorthand and typing and the required speed of each; the specific types of machines this person will be working with (examples- word processor, typewriter or phone system); who this person will need to report to; all major responsibilities and the dress code.

Beth Slaton of Temp Time says the more information you, as a prospective employer, can supply the better the service that you will receive.

At Temp Time all applicants are thoroughly sreened and tested to assure quality help to the employer and a challenging job to the employee that best utilizes their skills.

Temp Time, although they have a very impressive list of qualified employees, is always looking for new applicants. If you are interested, Beth Slaton invites you to come in and register. Once you register by filling out an application you will be tested to find out in which areas your skills will best be utilized.

So, remember, whether you are an employer in search of temporary help or if you are a qualified person looking for temporary work, Temp Time is the answer!

Stop in and see Beth Slaton at 2500 N. Big Spring, or give her a call at 687-1545 because Temp Time is your employment solution.

Dorm offers comfort at unbelieveable price

The weather has finally turned colder, and the prospects of warmer weather making many more appearances this year are fast becoming nil. The colder weather brings with it many things, one of which is more expenditures on necessities such as warmer clothing or coats. But in today's economy, many singles find it harder and harder with each passing day just to make ends meet. Necessities such as food and clothing take an unbelieveable percentage of the paychecks of many singles. Sometimes, this leaves little or nothing for living accomodations. Where is a single to turn? For those singles who would like to live comfortably without spending an unreasonable amount of money, now there is hope. Midland Dorm, at 2305 S. Belmont, offers comfortable rooms at prices which you can easily afford.

What does Midland Dorm offer singles that other places don't? The main advantage of staying at Midlnd Dorm is the price. After all, with the state of the economy, that has to be one of the major considerations when looking for a place to stay, be it a night, or a year. Midland Dorm is just the place you have been looking for. Midland Dorm is very comfortable, clean, convenient, and new, with plenty of extras to keep you busy in your spare time. Yet, Midland Dorm offers these rooms at prices you wouldn't believe! Their summer special is being carried over: You can stay at Midland Dorm if you are a single for only $7.50 per night!

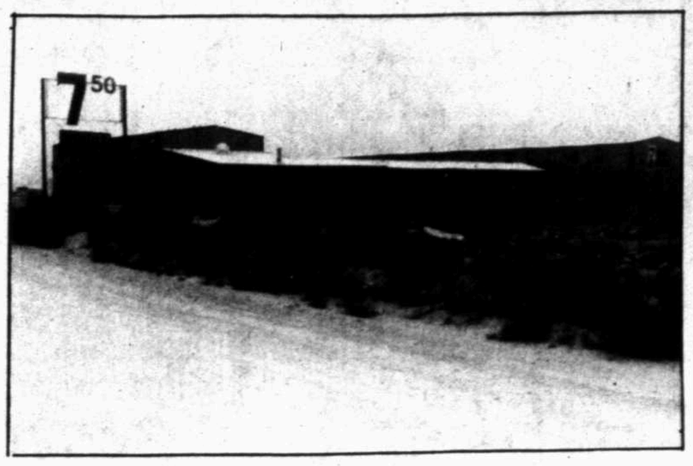
Does Midland Dorm offer you comfort? You bet! Each and every guest at Midland Dorm is given a private room which includes a long boy bed with storage underneath, a small desk, and a closet. In addition, each room has a seperate air conditioner, a heater. flourescent lighting, and a smoke detector for extra safety. In fact, Midland Dorm has been constucted to very strict specifications making it one of the safest places not only in Midland, but in the entire West Texas area!

And though you may be single, you never have to worry about your safety. Men and women are given seperate accomodations at Midland Dorm. Each building includes well maintained restrooms and shower area, coke machines, and inside pay telephones. Each is carpeted throughout, well-lit inside as well as out, and has more than adequate parking for each and every guest. The grounds are patrolled on a regular basis for your safety.

Common grounds for men and women include a laundry area, game room with a pool table and video games, an outside picnic area with built in bar-b-que grills for the few days of warm weather left, and storage buildings which are available to the general public as well as each guest at the Dorm.

Midland Dorm also has a manager on the premises 24 hours/day for the safety and protection of the guests. Any questions regarding the comfort or condition of a room may be directed at any time to Mr. Grady Toney, the Dorm's manager. Each guest is given fresh towels and sheets when checking into the Dorm, and these may be exchanged for new ones at any time. We want your stay at the Dorm to be as pleasant as possible. After all, we are here to serve you.

Remember, you can stay at Midland Dorm for the low, low rate of $7.50 per night! You can't beat that price anywhere. Come by Midland Dorm tonight. The Dorm is located at 2305 Belmont, one block North of I-20 and one block East of Rankin Highway. For more information, call Grady Toney at 687-0439 or 687-0430.



Midland Dorm, located one block North of I-20 and one block East of Rankin Highway, offers you comfortable rooms at unbelievable prices! If you are single and need a room, you can stay at the Dorm for only $7.50 per night. Go by today for your private room.

Leasing offers you numerous advantages

Just what is leasing? Leasing can offer many advantages to almost everyone, though most don't realize it. Many people simply don't understand what leasing is. You don't have to own a business to be able to lease things. Estimates are that over half of the automoblies driven in some states, California and Illinois for example, are not owned, but leased. Leasing normally requires no down payment, usually just the first month plus tax, title and license. Payments on a lease are often even lower than you would pay if you were buying. Even most people who say they own their homes are in reality borrowing money from the bank on a lease concept. When you pay a monthly rental on your telephone, it is simply being leased from the telephone company.

But sometimes it is hard to fully comprehend, or believe, that leasing is so simple for the ordinary citizen. We're here to help you understand leasing and all of the many advantages it has in store for you. We are Big Wheel Leasing, Inc., a full service leasing firm dedicated to serving West Texans. We are definitely not limited to simply automobile leasing, we can lease you anything from a typewriter to an oil rig or a lear jet. We can lease heavy equipment, phone systems, computers, airplanes, farming equipment, automobiles... the list goes on and on. Leasing rates on automobiles start at only $127/ month!

But just what are some of the advantages of leasing? First, leasing does not tie up your line of credit at the bank. It does not restrict your cash flow, requires less cash outlay as there is usually no down payment, and business leases may be 100% tax deductible. Payments are usually less than if you were buying. We would like to send you a free brochure if you can't make it in to visit with us. Just call us at 689-0738 or 1-800-592-4773. We will give you the straight facts on leasing.

If you are interested in leasing a full-size car, now is the time to do it. Most of the full-size cars will be down-sized the first of 1984. This could be your last chance for a larger car. Also, since the 1984 models have recently come out, rates are lower. Before you buy, check with us and see what leasing can offer you. We can custom-fit a leasing package to your needs. Come by Big Wheel Leasing today, or give us a call.

If you need heavy equipment, a phone system, a computer, or almost anything, check with Big Wheel Leasing before you buy. We can lease you any type auto, from Chevettes, Corvettes, Cadillacs, Mercedes, Rolls Royce, BMW, etc. We offer good terms, and we can work with you to tailor a package to fit your needs. Come by Big Wheel Leasing, Imc. today at 1017 N. Midkiff, Suite A, across from Town & Country Shopping Center. For a free brochure or more information, call us at 689-0738 or 1-800-592-4773. See the advantages leasing has to offer you.

Introduction to the page

The Business/Industry page is published by the Midland Reporter-Telegram as a service to the businesses of the Permian Basin.

Three pages are devoted each week to the Business/Industry pages (B/I): a double page spread on Sunday and one page on Tuesday.

The advertisements seen on these pages are directly related to the stories and photographs. Through a six month (26 weeks) contract, businesses are given constant exposure to the literate public.

The stories and photos compliment the advertisments, giving the reader an in-depth view of the business. The reader is exposed to specific details and pertinent information not otherwise found on a small advertisement.

Midland houses between 3,500 and 4,000 businesses, reports the Midland Chamber of Commerce. With this amount of competition, constant exposure each week, for 26 consecutive weeks, can only promote interest to help the prospective business.

The businesses of the Permian Basin are as fascinating as they are numberous. Currently, the B/I pages are graced with a wide variety of businesses that can provide many of the essential tasks that you desire.

Any and all businesses are encouragedto join the Midland Reporter-Telegram's Business/Industry pages, regardless of the nature of the business. All businesses, corperate or independent, are invited to consider this opportunity

For further information, contact the Advertising Department of the Repoerter-Telegram at (915) 682-5311. The staff will be happy to quote prices and discuss potential story material. Call 682-5311 and let the Business/Industry pages work for you.

Casbeer's CitiNorth Plaza

Casbeer announces projects, relocation of headquarters

Casbeer and Associates, a Midland-based developer of commercial-investment real estate in Texas annouced plans for 1984 including several new projects located across the state.

Foremost among the projects unveiled is CitiNorth Plaza, a 30-acre, multi-use complex, in far northwest Austin. CitiNorth Plaza will combine approximately 150,000 square feet of retail space and 275,000 square feet of office space in eight buildings surrounding an oak and pecan-shaded pedestrian courtyard. Two covered parking garages are included in the development.

"CitiNorth's location near the intersection of U.S. 183 and F.M. 620," said Dwayne Casbeer, owner of Casbeer and Associates, "is at the hub of Austin's future commercial, retail and residential developments. The area shows every promise of becoming a major new city-within-a-city, as Austin continues its explosive growth to the northwest. That's why we selected the name CitiNorth. Other investors share our enthusiasm for the area. CitiNorth's 30 acres are immediately adjacent to a proposed one-million-plus square foot regional mall."

The CitiNorth Plaza project was designed to offer tenants panoramic views over the surrounding Hill Country by Ron D. Beard of Austin, the architect for all of Casbeer's past and current statewide developments.

Other 1984 projects announced include three new neighborhood retail service centers in Fort Worth, Arlington, and Lubbock. Lone Star Plaza in Fort Worth is a 71,000-square foot development including an 11,500-square foot center with a 4,100-square foot pad building. And Abbeville Square in Lubbock is a small 15,400-square foot project.

In Midland, Casbeer and Associates is best known for having developed the Mesa Verde Retail Center, the Liberty Square Office Complex, and the Lone Star Plaza Retail Center, as well as for its leadership role in renovating the eastern part of the downtown area with the Union Plaza Office Complex. The Union Plaza complex includes office buildings at 312 E. Illinois, 401 E. Illinois, and the new six-story glass Union Tower currently under construction.

With demand for commercial real estate development shifting to the central axis of the state, Casbeer and Associates also announced 1984 plans to relocated company headquarters to Austin. This move will position company operations, including investments and developments, construction and leasing, in much closer proximity to the state's projected growth corridors for the 1980's.

Now time to post injury-illness lists

Employers with 11 or more employees are reminded by the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) to post from February 1 to March 1 the total number of job-related injuries and illnesses that occurred during 1983.

To fulfill the requirement, employers need to post the last page or right-hand portion of the OSHA Form 200, Log and Summary of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses. The form must be posted in areas where notices to employees are customarily posted.

The OSHA Form 200 includes the information on the type of injury or illness, its extent, and outcome. This information serves several functions in carrying out the OSH Act: (1) aids compliance safety and health officers in conducting inspections and investigations; (2) provides a basis for a statistical program which produces reliable injury and illness incidence rates; and (3) aids employers and employees in identifying factors that cause injuries and illnesses in the workplace.

Establishments naving no injuries and illnesses during 1983 should enter zeros on the total line and post the form. The person responsible for preparing the annual summary must certify that the totals are correct and sign the form.

TAB/Midland re-elects directors

Robert D. Southerland, President, Texas American Bank/Midland announced the re-election of the bank's board of directors at the annual stockholders and directors meeting held January 17.

Rankin joined the bank in August 1969 and has held various positions including teller and motor bank supervisor.

In 1980, Mrs. Rankin was honored by fellow TAB/Midland employees as the Employee of the Year. She is a member of the American Institute of Banking.

Texas American Bank/Midland is the third largest bank in Midland and is a member of Texas American Bancshares Inc. (NYSE symbol: TXA) with total assets of $5.4 billion and 27 member banks across the state and five other acquisitions pending. As of December 31, 1983, Texas American Bank/Midland recorded total assets of $172 million and record high deposits of $160 million.

Procrastination CAN Lead to Performance!

How?

By deferring income taxes on a portion of your income until retirement — with an Individual Retirement Account at Petroplex Savings. You can begin your IRA at Petroplex with as little as $100 and deposit at least $100 as often as you like up to a maximum of $2000 per year for each eligible person.

That could mean as much as $4000.00 each year — tax deductible — you file a joint return! Even better, the daily compounded interest your IRA earns at Petroplex also accumulates tax-free until you retire.

You can open an IRA at Petroplex at any time. We can even lend you the money to start your account. But, to claim the deduction on your 1983 tax return, the IRS gives you until April 15th.

THIS WEEK'S RATE:
RATE: 10.50
YIELD: 11.23
