July 4th Queen balloting to aid cost of fireworks

Voting is now underway for a July 4th Queen--one of six girls sponsored by Snyder clubs and organizations.

Photos of the six are now on display at Kmart and money donations made toward each queen will be tallied on Independence Day to determine the winner.

The contest is being used as a fund raiser to help offset expenses related to the annual fireworks display in Towle Park. The fireworks are offered annually at no charge to July 4th celebrants.

On July 4th, the display board with the queen's pictures will be moved to the National Guard Armory and voting may take place there.

The queen will be crowned at 8 p.m. prior to the annual fireworks display.

The contestants will be featured also in the annual July 4th parade. It will kickoff the day's activities at 9 a.m. in Towle Park.

Queen candidates and their sponsors are:

—Yolanda Chaidez, 25, sponsored by SCOOP.

—Sarah Pierce, 7, sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Club.

—Lexi Lynn Lambert, 5, sponsored by the chamber's Gold Coats.

—Penny Cochran, 26, sponsored by the Deep Creek Chapter of the American Business Women's Association (ABWA).

—Robin Rodgers, 15, sponsored by the Scurry County Chapter of ABWA.

—Anita A. Fuentez, 23, sponsored by the Snyder Jaycees.

Reagan optimistic about arms pact

VENICE, Italy (AP) — President Reagan said today he sees an "increased opportunity" for a nuclear arms agreement this year as well as a third meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Reagan's opening statement embraced the economic discussions of the three-day summit, but his answer to one of the few questions on the subject had to be clarified immediately by a top aide.

Answering a question, Reagan said most of his summit partners believe that the value of the American dollar should remain stable.

"Well," Reagan said, "frankly most of us believe the dollar should remain stable. It could be, within reason, some lowering of the dollar."

Less than 15 minutes after Reagan ended his news conference, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan had not meant to suggest that he wanted a further decline in the dollar. "he wants stability in the dollar," the spokesman said.

When asked what the president had been speaking about, Fitzwater said, "he was referring to other forces" and did not elaborate.

The news conference was dominated by political issues — the Iran-Contra affiar, arms talks with the Soviets and developments in the Persian Gulf among them.

District schedules tax value hearings

The three-member review board for the Scurry County Appraisal District will be in session from July 13-16 to hear questions raised about appraisal values placed on both oil and real estate property in the county.

Chief Appraiser Ray Peveler said Thursday he encourages those with questions to bring these to district staffers "as soon as possible" prior to the review board hearings.

"If you feel like we've placed the wrong value on your property, we'd rather work it out now without the necessity of going to the board of review."

The annual review session will allow individuals who feel their property has been valued incorrectly to appeal these figures to the review board.

Adjustments in property values can be changed at that time. Peveler noted now is the time to bring these questions, since changes in values cannot be affected when tax notices come due beginning in October.

Hearings related to oil values will be heard beginning on Monday, July 13. Representatives from the valuation firm of Thomas Y. Pickett and

Felony assault filed following altercation

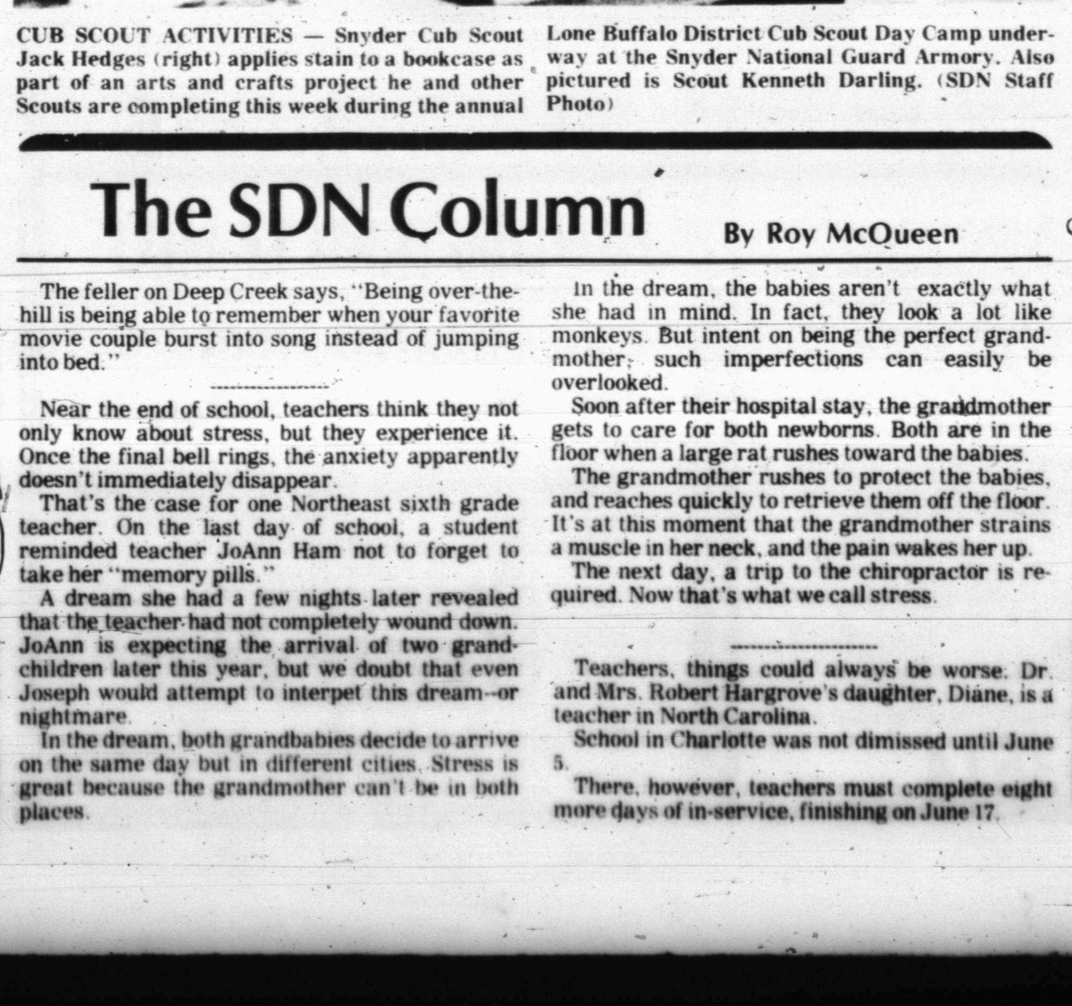

A 29-year-old Snyder man was being held in the Scurry County Jail Thursday morning in lieu of bond set at $10,000 on a charge of aggravated assault.

Police jailed Earnest Ray Brandon of 3007 Ave. I just after 5 a.m.

Brandon is alleged to have beaten his roommate — David Eugene Jackson — with a jack handle during a disturbance reported to police just after 3 a.m.

Jackson reportedly sustained cuts and brusies from the beating and was admitted to Cogdell Memorial Hospital for treatment of those injuries.

A hospital spokesman said Thursday that Jackson was in good condition and was expected to be released from the hospital before the weekend.

Restaurant offers Cajun food menu

The Snyder area will gain a Cajun-style seafood restaurant Friday with the official opening of the Cajun Lady.

Cajun Lady is owned and operated by Snyder residents Will and Gwen Evans and Friday's opening is set for 3 p.m.

After Friday, plans call for the restaurant to be open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily except Sunday.

It is located in the former location of Lou's Kiddie Cottage at Ave. O and 37th St.

The Evans are natives of Southern Louisiana and have lived in Snyder for seven years.

Prior to moving here, they had been involved in the restaurant business in Louisiana and Will was a shrimp boat operator.

The restaurant will offer a menu featuring primarily what Evans called "old family recipes."

He said he will be bringing shrimp, crab, crawfish and oysters by truck from Louisiana on a regular basis. These will be purchased directly from a number of fishing boats and an oyster house in Houma, La. run by his uncles and cousins.

"We are doing this so that we can assure that the product is handled properly in transit to Snyder," he said.

Due to the time of year, he noted the opening menu will feature primarily Brazilian shrimp and Grande Isle oysters.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Being over-the-hill is being able to remember when your favorite movie couple burst into song instead of jumping into bed."

Near the end of school, teachers think they not only know about stress, but they experience it. Once the final bell rings, the anxiety apparently doesn't immediately disappear.

That's the case for one Northeast sixth grade teacher. On the last day of school, a student reminded teacher JoAnn Ham not to forget to take her "memory pills."

A dream she had a few nights later revealed that the teacher had not completely wound down. JoAnn is expecting the arrival of two grandchildren later this year, but we doubt that even Joseph would attempt to interpet this dream--or nightmare.

In the dream, both grandbabies decide to arrive on the same day but in different cities. Stress is great because the grandmother can't be in both places.

In the dream, the babies aren't exactly what she had in mind. In fact, they look a lot like monkeys. But intent on being the perfect grandmother, such imperfections can easily be overlooked.

Soon after their hospital stay, the grandmother gets to care for both newborns. Both are in the floor when a large rat rushes toward the babies.

The grandmother rushes to protect the babies, and reaches quickly to retrieve them off the floor. It's at this moment that the grandmother strains a muscle in her neck, and the pain wakes her up.

The next day, a trip to the chiropractor is required. Now that's what we call stress.

Teachers, things could always be worse. Dr. and Mrs. Robert Hargrove's daughter, Diane, is a teacher in North Carolina.

School in Charlotte was not dimissed until June 5.

There, however, teachers must complete eight more days of in-service, finishing on June 17.

Ask Us

Q. — Since high school students get free student work ads in the SDN, why can't college kids?

A. — We've considered it, but opening it to "college students" provides a problem of identification and the potential for misuse since college students come in all ages. The free classified ads for high school students offering work services are designed to help out youngsters age 18 and under.

In Brief

Deal is off

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House, in the face of strong congressional opposition, has dropped plans to sell Maverick missiles to Saudi Arabia, administration sources said today.

"The administration has decided to admit the obvious, that Congress doesn't want the deal," explained one source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Third test set

DALLAS (AP) — A minister whose wife remains in a coma after being choked nearly to death in April went to Salt Lake City to take a third polygraph test about his knowledge of the case, friends of the couple say.

The Rev. Walker Railey has been treated at a private psychiatric facility here after taking an overdose of tranquilizers May 1 just before police planned to question him about the attack on his wife.

Margaret Railey was attacked in the couple's home April 21 after the minister reported he had received threatening letters.

Flag ceremony

The dedication ceremony for the newly erected flag pole at the Senior Citizens Center is planned at 11 a.m. Friday at the northeast corner of the center.

The public is invited to the event. Securing the flag pole was a project of the Golden K Kiwanis Club.

Members of the Vietnam Veterans will serve as color guard for the flag raising, using a flag donated by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Glaze slated for Texas prison

DALLAS (AP) — A drifter wanted for questioning in at least three slayings is expected to be taken to the Texas Department of Corrections within a week to begin serving a sentence for a 1974 rape conviction, officials say.

Dallas County Sheriff's spokesman Jim Ewell said Wednesday Billy Richard Glaze, 43, a native of Jonesboro, Ga., was arrested in Albuquerque, N.M., last month on a drunken driving charge and transferred to Dallas for violating a 10-year probation on the rape conviction.

When authorities searched Glaze's truck in Albuquerque, they found a blood-stained shirt, a bloody nightstick and a crowbar, and hair samples from the crowbar.

Lawmen in Minnesota and several Northwestern states say they want to question Glaze about a string of slayings in which female victims were found to have been sexually mutilated with a stick or similar object.

No charges have been filed in any of the the killings.

The man, also known as Jesse Coulter and Jesse Sitting Crow, gave a television interview Tuesday in which he denied killing three Indian women in Minneapolis, where authorities said Glaze lived from July until April.

"The reason he's here in Dallas is that the only hard or heavy charge against him is the 1974 rape conviction," Ewell said.

The drifter was sentenced in 1974 under the name of Jesse Sitting Crow on a conviction of raping a woman while he was living with her and her husband in Dallas, Ewell said. He violated his probation by leaving the city the following year.

Glaze allowed an interview Tuesday, but he declined Wednesday to speak with The Associated Press and other news organizations.

"I don't want to have nothing to do with them (news media) no more," Glaze said.

Investigator Gary Lachman of the Dallas County Sheriff's office said Glaze apparently was in Washington, Oregon and Montana around the times of some 50 murders in those states, in which there was a similarity in how the victims were mutilated and killed.

"We can put him in a location where a bunch of murders had taken place, in a time frame within weeks or months of that crime," Lachman said Tuesday.

Dick Larson, a King County police spokesman in Washington state, said Wednesday there are no plans for Green River Task Force officials to interview Glaze.

"There's been nothing to indicate that this fellow is connected to our case," Larson said. "The task force is interested any time a name comes forward, but it does not appear likely that he is our suspect."

Authorities blame the Green River serial killer for the deaths of as many as 46 women, many of them prostitutes, between 1982 and early 1984. Two victims were found in Oregon, but the killer has operated primarily in the Puget Sound area.

Larson cited "the lack of similarities in Minneapolis' crimes and our crimes," and said Glaze doesn't fit a psychological profile of the Green River killer.

"I did not murder anybody," Glaze said Tuesday. "I couldn't murder nobody. I don't have it in my heart to. I've beat women up before, hit them in the mouth or something (while) drinking."

Glaze said he had never been drunk enough that he could have killed someone and not remember it later. Ewell said Glaze complained that police killed the women and were trying to frame him.

Strong earthquake rattles 16 states

By Pete Brown
Associated Press Writer

An earthquake shook residents of 16 states from Kansas to South Carolina and parts of Canada, breaking windows, tumbling chimneys and forcing hundreds to flee swaying buildings up to 700 miles away.

The temblor, registering 5.0 on the Richter scale, triggered an alarm at a Minnesota nuclear plant and cut telephone service in three Illinois counties, but only minor damage and one minor injury were reported.

"It felt like somebody with big shoes was walking overhead, but nobody lives overhead — we're on the fourth floor," said Richard Horwitz of Chicago. "Our parakeet was chattering away, and it just stopped."

The quake, at 6:49 p.m. CDT Wednesday, was centered near Lawrenceville, Ill., 55 miles north of Evansville, Ind., the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said. Shaking was felt from 10 seconds to nearly a minute.

Hundreds of students ran screaming from a building at a vocational college in Indianapolis, and about 70 people were evacuated from a swaying, 12-story apartment house in Columbia, S.C., 700 miles from the quake center.

John Larson, a Lawrence County, Ill., sheriff's dispatcher, said there were several reports of broken windows and other minor damage. An 18-month-old girl received stitches after the quake forced a bunk bed to fall on her head.

Police dispatcher David Hoffee in Olney, Ill., said there were reports of broken windows, fallen chimneys and a roof collapse at a funeral home.

At the Prairie Island nuclear plant near Red Wing, Minn., the quake triggered a seismic alarm, but no damage was immediately detected, according to Sam Macalus, spokesman for Northern States Power Co.

The quake was felt in Kansas, Missouri, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Kentucky, Tennessee, West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, the Carolinas, and several cities in Ontario.

Bus Driver's Religious Views Crash Head-On With Rider's

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I was riding the local transit bus today when the bus driver (a woman) struck up a conversation with me. I was sitting near her and there was nobody else on the bus. I don't know why, but she asked me what church I went to. I told her that I was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which is also known as the Mormon Church.

She then said that she was a Christian! I replied, "Well, so am I." Then she told me that I was not a Christian because my religion teaches that Jesus was not the son of God. I tried to keep my cool and tried to explain that I was as Christian as she was, but she insisted that I was not.

Abby, I have learned to accept this kind of ridicule from people I go to high school with, but I didn't expect this kind of talk from an adult. When I got off the bus, I was sorry I didn't just tell her I was a Catholic or something.

If that bus driver was right, I must have missed something in my own religious training. Please let me know.

L.D.S. IN ASHLAND, ORE.

DEAR L.D.S.: You are correct. When that issue was raised years ago, the Prophet Joseph Smith, founder of the Mormon Church, responded: "We believe in God the eternal father, and in his son, Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost." That should settle it.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, my husband removed his wedding ring from his finger, saying it could be a hazard on his job. (He works in the construction field.) Finally he stopped wearing it altogether.

Last Christmas, he came home from the company Christmas party wearing a very expensive gold initial ring, which he said was a gift from "Lyn," a young woman who works for the company. That ring has not been off his finger since the day he got it.

Yes, I asked him how come this ring isn't hazardous on his job. He said in case he ran into Lyn, he didn't want to offend her by not wearing her gift. How does this strike you, Abby?

FUMING IN FLUSHING

DEAR FUMING: The same way it strikes you. Your husband's wedding ring may have been hazardous on his job, but this new "replacement" is definitely hazardous to his marriage. It's time for you and your construction man to assess your marriage. Methinks the foundation is crumbling.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I think you were in error when you stated that when introducing a stepmother, one should say, "This is my dad's wife." To me, that seems cold and distant.

For 10 years my stepson introduced me as "my dad's wife." I felt like an outsider and not a part of the family. About a year ago he apologized, and started referring to me as his stepmother. I was elated and felt he had finally accepted me. Then out comes your column with that statement, and now he's back to calling me his dad's wife. Sign me ...

OUTSIDE LOOKING IN

DEAR OUTSIDE: Thanks to the Cinderella fairy tale, "stepmother" has taken on a less-than-lovely connotation. You are entitled to your opinion, but I personally think "my dad's wife" would be preferred by most over "stepmother."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Please settle an argument: What is the fairest way for our inheritance to be divided? We have two sons. Son No. 1 has two children, and Son No. 2 has three children.

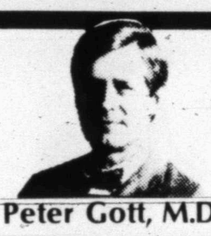

J., HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR J.: Leave the same amount to each of your children. And the same amount to each of your grandchildren.

Wood smoke causes trouble

DEAR DR. GOTT — My son actually enjoys the odor of a wood stove. His wife constantly suffers from lung congestion, and all three of their sons have colds and sore throats all winter. I feel that the wood stove in their home is a hazard, but my son won't listen to me. Can you help?

DEAR READER — The smell of burning wood in a fireplace or stove is pleasurable to many people. I remember the smell of burning autumn leaves; it's a nostalgic and comforting flashback. However, smoke from any source is an air pollutant, and wood stoves are no exception. The combination of dry winter air and wood smoke will cause some people to have repeated sore throats and respiratory infections.

Short of abandoning wood heat altogether, your son may be able to solve the problem by venting the stove more efficiently and using one or more of the new soundless, ultrasonic humidifiers in the house. The addition of humidity to the room air often will protect sensitive breathing passageways and throats, and it certainly will help prevent the furniture from becoming unglued. Perhaps if you show your son my answer to your question, he will make the necessary adjustments to promote his family's good health. Let me know what he says.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 23, with a history of bladder and kidney infections. I still wet the bed without warning. My 8-year-old daughter is going through the same thing, so I could really use your suggestions. I have gone to several physicians, who give me medication to clear up my infections but don't tell me why I keep getting them.

DEAR READER — Bedwetting (enuresis) in children often is due to stress and emotional tension. However, in adults, the condition is more likely to be related to an abnormality in the urinary system, such as chronic infection or blockage in the tract. You need a thorough examination by a urologist, who probably will check you for infection, obtain an intravenous pyelogram (kidney and bladder X-ray) and perform a cystoscopic exam, during which the lower urinary tract is examined through a lighted tube.

Congenital abnormalities may lead to enuresis, and it is possible that you and your daughter have inherited a defect that may need repair.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am a typist, so I use my hands quite a bit. I get transparent cysts on my fingers. They get very sore, drain and then fill up again. The doctors have given up. How can I deal with this condition?

DEAR READER — No one knows the cause of the condition you describe: recurring cysts that are filled with gelatinous material. Such cysts are common and harmless; they usually do not require treatment unless they become very swollen and painful. I am not aware of any method to prevent them.

Dr. Gott's new Health Report, ABOUT GOUT, explains the cause and treatment of this disease. For your copy, Send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

State Bar meeting gets underway

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The largest State Bar of Texas convention in 15 years gets under way today, with a hotly contested appearance by retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord scheduled for Friday.

More than 2,000 attorneys are expected for the 105th annual convention that will span three days and include speeches from Secord, a primary player in the Iran-Contra affair, and Nicaraguan Supreme Court Justice Mariano Barahona.

Several attorneys protested Secord's scheduled appearance this week with picket lines and press conferences, saying his involvement in the arms scandal makes him the wrong kind of person to address the convention.

Convention officials, however, said Secord's appearance would give delegates a chance to hear "from the horse's mouth" about what is going on in Washington.

Texas Supreme Court Justice William Kilgarlin is also scheduled to speak after the day-long Criminal Law Institute opens Thursday morning in Bayfront Plaza Convention Center.

He and another justice were publicly censured Tuesday for what the Texas Commission on Judicial Conduct called improper conduct, and Gov. Bill Clements has called for the two men two step down from their posts.

Kilgarlin and Justice C.L. Ray, however, say the charges against them are unfounded.

The lawyers' convention includes a fishing tournament and seminars that encompass topics ranging from consumer and military law to concerns of the Spanish-speaking community.

A dangerous underbid

By James Jacoby

It was timid of North to raise to only two hearts. In my book he has plenty to jump to three. Fortunately South saved him. Liking his five-card suit and his two aces, South invited game and North was delighted to accept. This interesting deal is complicated somewhat by the 4-0 trump split but it still winds up playing itself.

Declarer wins the opening club lead with his ace and plays a heart to dummy's king. East should discard the deuce of spades to prevent West from making a losing play away from any spade strength. Declarer now plays dummy's club 10 to West's queen. Warned by that telltale low spade discard, West now leads a diamond to dummy's king and East's ace. East now returns a spade, but declarer knows better than to duck that card. He goes up with his ace and tries to cash his club jack to shed the spade queen from dummy. When West ruffs the club jack, dummy overruffs. Now the play of the diamond queen and a diamond ruff drop West's jack — a pleasant surprise. Next, declarer finesses against the queen of hearts and cashes the other high heart in dummy. The diamond 10 and eight are both winners, and declarer makes 11 tricks.

What's important here is that North really should have bid three hearts after South's response. His hand is worth 17 support points — too strong for a mere raise to two. Many players with the South cards would pass two hearts and miss a good play for game.

You can stir-fry foods like an expert Chinese chef if you remember two things. Have the wok or skillet hot so the food cooks quickly on the oiled surface, rather than simmering in its juices over low heat. Keep the food moving by stirring and turning constantly.

CHICKEN WITH WALNUTS

2 whole medium chicken breasts, skinned, boned and halved lengthwise
3 tablespoons soy sauce
2 teaspoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons dry sherry
1 teaspoon grated fresh gingerroot
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon crushed red pepper
2 tablespoons cooking oil
2 medium green peppers, cut into ¾-inch pieces
4 green onions, bias-sliced into 1-inch lengths
1 cup walnut halves
Hot cooked rice

Cut chicken into 1-inch pieces; set aside. In a small bowl stir together soy sauce and cornstarch; stir in sherry, gingerroot, sugar, salt and red pepper. Set aside.

Preheat a wok or large skillet over high heat; add cooking oil. Stir-fry green peppers and green onions in hot oil 2 minutes or until crisp-tender. Remove from wok or skillet. Add walnuts; stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes or until just golden. Remove from wok or skillet. (Add more oil, if necessary.) Stir-fry the chicken, half at a time, for 2 minutes. Return all chicken to wok. Stir soy mixture; stir into chicken. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Stir in vegetables and walnuts; cover and cook 1 minute more. Serve at once with hot cooked rice. Makes 6 servings.

'72 class hosts Saturday dance

The class of 1972 is hosting a dance at the Snyder Country Club Saturday from 7:30-12:30 p.m. for its 15 year reunion.

Black Floyd, a rock group from Austin, will perform. The public is invited to attend after 9 p.m. at $15 per couple.

Local photographer Ted Bigham will take a class picture at 8 p.m. and will take orders from those wishing to purchase a copy.

An ice cream supper is scheduled at 6 p.m. across from the pavilion in Towle Park. All classmates and their families are urged to attend.

As of June 8, 70 class members were registered to attend the reunion. Class officers are Mark Brock, president; Mark Bostick, vice-president; Barbara Knovicak, reporter and Jo Ann (Line) Cotton, secretary.

LAFF-A-DAY

"Why, of course I didn't date men at your age, Melanie — my husband would've killed me!"

WTC's Hudson just wants to do his best...

Roper doesn't feel pressure

Paradise cowboy Keith Hudson says he doesn't feel pressure to repeat as the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association calf roping champion. He just wants to do his best.

"I guess the pressure might bother some but there are over 500 (collegiate) ropers in the nation and against those odds, you don't really expect to win. You do your best everytime and maybe that's how it works out. It's not like anybody is going to laugh at me if I don't," he said.

Hudson will be joining five other members of the Western Texas College men's rodeo team, and women's performer Jessie Colburn, as Coach Bob Doty leads the squad to the College National Finals Rodeo in Bozeman, Mont., which begins Monday. Western is the defending CNFR champion, and Hudson is the defending national champion calf roper.

Hudson also already equalled his effort of being the Southwest Region champion, and he'll definitely continue rodeoing, despite the outcome at the national finals.

"I think I'll probably take awhile off (from college) after I graduate from Western Texas," he said. "I'll probably rodeo professionally for awhile."

He's been roping since he was five years old, and knows the ins and outs like a veteran.

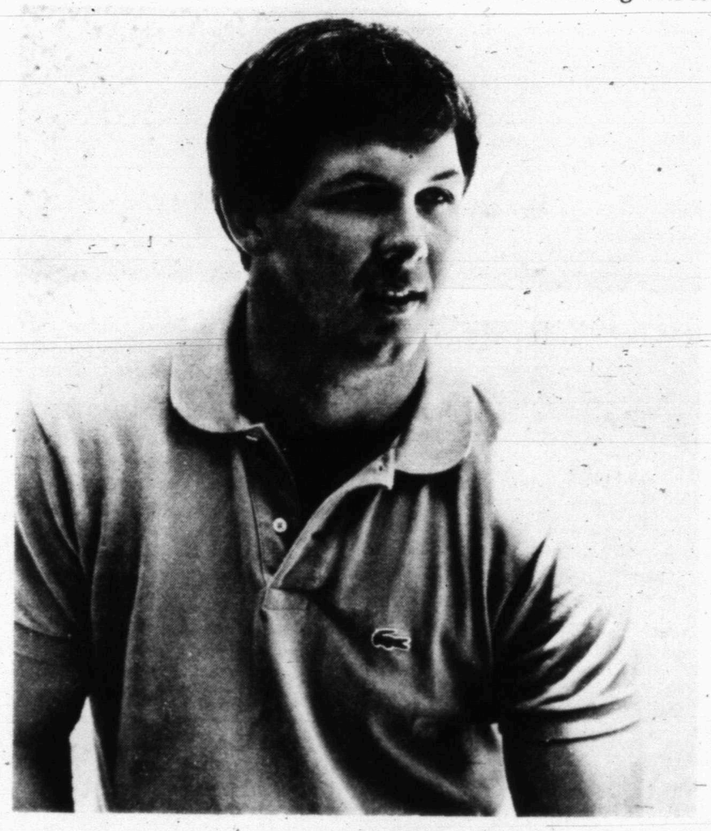

"You have to have a good horse, and you need a good draw, of course. That's something you really don't have any control over but it's been pretty even this season," he said. "At nationals, the calves are usually a little bigger, so I feel like it's a little advantate to me over some guys."

Hudson stands about 6-1, and has a solid, though trim frame.

He believes his experience, particularly competing in the CNFR last year, will be a major asset.

"I feel a lot better going to Bozeman than I did last year," said Hudson. "I have another year's experience and I think that will help. Plus, my luck is going pretty well right now."

Hudson placed in seven of 10 Southwest Region rodeos this past season - eight of 10 if you count steer wrestling.

Fishin' report

Several whoppers, including yellow catfish and striped bass, showed up in the weekly report of fishing at Lake E.V. Spence.

The biggest striped bass, one weighing 25 pounds, was reported by Dennis Eimers of Midland. The largest yellowcat was a 38-pounder caught by Dick Bohannon of Robert Lee, but Ron Dennis of Midland was not far off with one at 31 pounds, 8-ounces.

Among the reports from various concessionaires were:

Wildcat Fish-A-Rama: Bill and June Emerson, Big Spring, five striped bass up to 9-0; F.L. Stanford, Odessa, 10 catfish, the largest 15-0; Rock Hutson, Odessa, seven blue catfish up to 6-0; Johnetta and Evalene Lawrence, Odessa, a 23-0 yellow catfish; and Gary Gillihan, Big Spring, 10 catfish, the largest 4-0.

Hilside Grocery: Dick Bohannon, Robert Lee, in seven days of fishing took four yellow catfish ranging from 22 to 38 pounds, seven blue catfish from 8 to 18-0, and 140 channel catfish.

Paint Creek Marina: Nolan Stanley, Big Spring, 14-12 striper and a 33-12 yellowcat; Gale Martin, Odessa, 20 catfish up to 3-0; John Williamson, Odessa, a 21-8 yellowcat; and Heath Moody, Odessa, a 3-12 black bass.

At mid-week, Lake Spence was at a record elevation 1886.77, three-fourths of a foot higher than the previous peak, despite the discharge of about 1,500 ac. ft. per day for quality control.

WEST

ARROWHEAD: Water murky, 73 degrees, spillway level; black bass slow; striper fair; crappie slow; white bass slow; catfish fair on shrimp and worms in 6 feet of water; rain all day Tuesday, and all last week.

BAYLOR: Water clear, 70 degrees, normal level; black bass excellent to 7 pounds, 14 ounces, good numbers of 2s and 3s caught on Rip Shad in 5 feet of water, white spinners with trailers, firetail worms, shad colored Rat-L-Trap, spot Rat-L-Traps; crappie good to 25 fish per string on minnows; catfish slow. Raining midweek.

FORT PHANTOM HILL: Water slightly murky, water 1 foot over spillway; black bass slow; hybrid striper fairly good to 14 pounds on Bombers, minnows, jigs, slabs; crappie good but small on minnows; white bass excellent to 20 fish per string on slabs, jigs, minnows; catfish good to 50 pounds on trotline with live bait. Raining midweek with 100 percent chances of continued rain. Walleye good to 4¼ pounds, average to 3 pounds, with strings to 5 fish per night mixed with white bass. Best baits are minnows and jigs.

GRANBURY: Water murky, 71 degrees, lake full; black bass good to 3½ pounds on grubs and black worms with chartreuse tails; striper good to 10 pounds on live perch; crappie slow; white bass good to 1¼ with strings to 15 fish early off points; catfish slow. Raining midweek.

HUBBARD CREEK: Lake clear, creeks muddy, 72 degrees, lake full; black bass good 4½ pounds on topwater buzz baits; hybrid striper good in 4-6 pound range on silver slabs; crappie good in deep water with limits of 25 fish on minnows; white bass slow; catfish excellent to 60 pounds on trotline with live bait. Raining midweek.

POSSUM KINGDOM: Water murky to muddy, 71 degrees, 13 feet low; black bass good until rains came, beginning to improve on cranks and worms, topwaters improving; striper fairly slow; crappie good to 25 fish per string on minnows; white bass good during runs on slabs and spoons; catfish good to 32 pounds on trotline with live baits. Rains all week, more coming.

PROCTOR: Water murky, 74 degrees, 12 feet above normal; black bass fair to 4 pounds on white spinners and black jigs; striper fair trolling white or yellow jigs around island; crappie fair on minnows in the willows, small numbers; catfish good on trotline to 6 pounds on minnows and shad. Raining midweek.

TWIN BUTTES: Water clear, 69 degrees, about five feet low, lake level up three feet this month; black bass slow to 5 pounds due to rains and runoff; hybrid striper fair to 6 pounds trolling slabs; crappie slowing also, strings to 10 fish on minnows; white bass slowing; catfish slow.

WHITE RIVER: Water clear, 71 degrees, lake full; black bass good to 7 pounds, 10 ounces on artificials; crappie good and fair sized on minnows; catfish good to about three pounds; walleye good to about 3 pounds average on worms and minnows. Rain early Tuesday, clear afterwards.

Rangers rally behind Porter

SEATTLE (AP) - Darrell Porter was expecting an intentional walk when he stepped to the plate to pinch hit in the eighth inning of a game against the Seattle Mariners, but then the Mariners decided to pitch, and they paid a price.

The 35-year-old catcher hit a three-run homer into the right field upper deck to cap a five-run inning as the Texas Rangers came from behind to win 9-5 Wednesday night.

Pinch-hit homers are nothing new to Porter, who set a Ranger record with his third of the year, but he entered the game hitting just .178 on the year in 45 at bats.

Mariners Manager "Dick Williams probably looked at my stats," Porter said of the decision to pitch to him. "In that situation I thought they were going to put me on because I have some power."

Mariners reliever Steve Shields, who entered the game in place of Bill Wilkenson, 0-2, threw the first pitch outside to Porter.

"I thought they were going to put me on after that," Porter said. "But I was still prepared up there and he threw a pitch I liked."

It was only the second upper-deck homer of the year in the Kingdome.

"It seemed like every pitch I threw tonight was a ball or over the plate," Shields said.

Porter, who has played with the World Series teams while with the Kansas City Royals and St. Louis Cardinals, has had to adjust to a limited role since joining the Rangers last season.

"It's tough to get your stroke zeroed in when you don't play too much," he said. "But I came into the season trying to improve on my pinch hitting."

The Rangers trailed 5-2 entering the eighth inning as the Mariners took advantage of Texas starter Charlie Hough's wildness.

Hough walked five batters, hit two and balked three times in six innings, while catcher Mike Stanley allowed two passed balls.

The Mariners scored twice in the second, once in the third and twice in the fourth.

The Rangers tagged Mariner starter Lee Guetterman for nine hits in 6 1-3 innings, but managed just two runs, one on Larry Parrish's 14th home run in the fourth inning.

But with one out in the eighth, the Rangers put together three consecutive singles to load the bases.

Wilkenson got ahead of Oddibe McDowell, 0-2, but the Rangers centerfielder hit Wilkenson's next pitch to the gap in right-center field to bring the Rangers within one run at 5-4.

"It opened up the doors for Darrell," said McDowell, who hit safely in his eighth straight game. "Darrell just hit the ball out of sight."

"Oddibe's hit was just as big as Porter's," Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine said.

The Rangers added two insurance runs in the ninth, one on Pete Incaviglia's 13th home run of the year.

Mitch Williams picked up his fourth win of the year against three losses, pitching one scoreless inning in relief of Hough, while Dale Mahorcic picked up his sixth save of the year going the final two innings.

Rozelle says NFL will begin viewing cities for expansion

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) - Commissioner Pete Rozelle says the National Football League will begin screening cities for expansion next year and eventually would like to award two new franchises for the 1990 season.

Rozelle told a group of journalists attending The Associated Press Sports Editors Convention Wednesday that the league will appoint an expansion committee in March 1988. The target date for selecting cities will be some time in early 1989.

"I think the whole country wants it," Rozelle said, adding that the climate for adding teams has improved since the NFL emerged from lengthy and complicated litigation with the defunct United States Football League, the Los Angeles Raiders and Los Angeles Coliseum.

"It's not a political move," he said, listing a number of cities, including Phoenix, Jacksonville, Baltimore and Oakland, as potential candidates. "Anywhere we go, we're going to insult some politicians," seeking a franchise for their area.

Rozelle said the criteria used to evaluate cities for expansion would include stadium, population, football interest, weather and the availability of a domed stadium, plus geography if the NFL decides to realign its divisions.

The commissioner also spoke of the need for solid ownership and said he wishes Chicago Bears star Walter Payton the best in his effort to become an NFL owner.

Payton, the NFL's all-time leading rusher, reportedly will meet soon with officials in Oakland who are interested in pursuing a franchise to replace the Raiders, who moved to Los Angeles five years ago.

"Walter's chances are as good as anybody else, maybe better because he's a player," Rozelle said.

Another topic of discussion during a luncheon speech was the recruitment of blacks for coaching and front-office jobs in the NFL.

"We have a long way to go on minority hiring," Rozelle said, adding he feels a recent decision to start a minority intern program for assistant coaches from major colleges is a step in the right direction.

"I'm certain we'll have a black head coach when an owner thinks that coach will help him win," Rozelle said. "Until that, there's nothing I can do about it.

"While we can't make black coaches," the commissioner added, "we can provide the opportunity for them to rise up through the organizations."

Jackson, owners meet; cited 'very productive'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Job opportunities in major-league front offices for minorities and women emerged from a "very productive" meeting between team owners and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

"It was a small step for me and a giant step for baseball that a little oxygen got into that room today," Jackson said Wednesday after meeting with owners from the National and American Leagues.

"Every team in major-league baseball will have a strong and positive affirmative action program in place within the next 30 days," baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said at a news conference with Jackson.

Last month, Jackson gave baseball until June 29 to devise an affirmative action plan to get minorities into front-office positions or potentially face boycotts or other economic measures by civil-rights activists.

Jackson said Wednesday the situation would be reviewed June 29 before a next step is considered. He played down prospects of a boycott.

"Owners are making up for lost time," Jackson said. "The movement that has begun to take place is impressive."

Jackson's performance also impressed at least one owner - the New York Yankees' George Steinbrenner.

"He was constructive in his approach to the situation," said Steinbrenner, who added if Jackson keeps trying to work with the owners, "it's going to reap some rewards."

"Nobody's going to tell me I got to hire a guy because of the color of his skin or because of where he goes to church," Steinbrenner said. "But nobody better tell me there are no capable blacks or Hispanics or women, either.

"I just believe that a man should stand on his ability."

Jackson credited the commitment for affirmative action plans, the hiring of a consultant to monitor implementation of the plans and timetables for implementation as "steps in the right direction."

The issue has received attention since former Los Angeles Dodgers vice president Al Campanis said in April that blacks lack the "necessities" for management. Campanis resigned under pressure shortly afterward.

"Some adjustments have been made in the last two months, since Mr. Al Campanis, the fall guy, pulled the scab off the cancer," said Jackson. "My impression is the owners are motivated to move."

Sports briefs

GENERAL

LANSING, Mich. (AP) - Michigan would become the first state in the nation to require every professional sports contract to be filed with the state and open to public scrutiny, under a four-bill package approved by the state House.

The legislation, which calls for criminal penalties ranging from $50,000 in fines to a year in prison for unscrupulous agents, is aimed at preventing the exploitation of college athletes.

BASKETBALL

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) - General Manager Jack McCloskey will remain with the Detroit Pistons rather than accept a five-year, $2 million contract reportedly offered by the New York Knicks, a Pistons spokesman said.

Celtics must make history to win NBA championship

BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Celtics must do what's never been done if they are to keep their NBA title. And they must do it against the league's best team.

No club has overcome a 3-1 deficit in the championship series. The Los Angeles Lakers hold that advantage over the Celtics and would claim the crown by winning tonight's fifth game of the best-of-seven series.

"There's no question it's hard as the devil," Boston guard Dennis Johnson said. "Seeing as how we're playing L.A., it's probably three or four times as hard."

The Celtics must beat Los Angeles three straight times, twice on the Lakers' home floor at the Inglewood Forum, to become the first repeat champion since Boston in 1968-69.

The Lakers never lost three straight games in compiling a 65-17 record this season or two in a row at home. They are 46-4 there, including a 9-0 playoff mark, and romped over the Celtics in the first two playoff games at the Forum. Boston is 4-16 in its last 20 road games.

"Sure, it could be done," Los Angeles forward James Worthy said about Boston winning three consecutive games, "but I think we'll have a lot to do with that."

"I think it's possible," Lakers forward Mychal Thompson said, "if we get above ourselves and think we're better than we are and think we have it all wrapped up."

How can they avoid that trap?

"We just have to think how sweet it's going to be" to win their second championship in three years, Thompson said.

Boston knows the feeling, having won a league-high 16 titles. But things turned sour for the Celtics Tuesday night when they blew an eight-point lead in the final 3:20 and lost 107-106 on Magic Johnson's hook shot with two seconds left.

One thing Boston seems to have on its side tonight is the homecourt advantage. It's 103-6 at Boston Garden since the 1985 playoffs began.

Lightning launches 4 NASA rockets; knocks out link

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is investigating a freak accident in which three small scientific rockets, on a pad and primed for liftoff, were launched accidentally by a lightning strike.

Ironically, the rockets were part of a lightning study.

The same storm knocked the nation's prime weather satellites out of service for several hours, depriving Americans of satellite images from space normally seen on television news.

All launch personnel had been ordered into the blockhouse minutes before the involuntary rocket launching Tuesday night at Wallops Island, Va., and no one was hurt. The total value of rockets and equipment destroyed was less than $50,000, NASA said.

"We have launched more than 13,000 rockets and this is the first occurrence we have had of this type," said John L. Parks Jr., range safety officer of NASA's Wallops Flight Facility, who is heading the investigation.

Experts say such an accident is unlikely in larger rockets, which have more extensive safe-and-arm devices, or in ballistic missiles, which are stored underground.

The accident differed from the one on March 26 when a lightning flash found its way to the computer aboard a huge Atlas-Centaur rocket being launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla. An accident board determined that the jolt caused the computer to send the rocket off course and it had to be destroyed at a loss of $161 million for launcher and cargo.

The three vehicles Tuesday were a 16-foot-long Orion and two 4-foot-long rockets used to test radar and data acquisition before launches such as the Orion's. The Orion was poised to study nighttime thunderstorm effects in the ionosphere.

"When the lightning hit, it ignited both test rockets and the Orion vehicle," Parks said. A fourth rocket, which had not been fitted with ignition devices, was unaffected.

"The Orion essentially destroyed itself," Parks said. The rocket's position on the pad was nearly horizontal. It shot forward and landed in the ocean about 300 feet distant.

The test rockets, set at a 75 degree angle, apparently followed their normal trajectory — rising to 15,000 feet, then hitting the ocean 2½ miles away, Parks said. There is no tracking for those rockets.

The Orion and the test rockets were on pads separated by 150 feet.

"We do not have a complete understanding of the mechanism which caused lightning to set them off," Parks said. He said the pads have a ground system that connect all launchers and that may have been the path.

The motors on small rockets use a direct electrical igniter, while larger rockets like ballistic missiles or the space shuttle booster incorporate a safe-and-arm device that mechanically and electronically blocks the flow of ignition.

Tactical missiles — air-to-air, air-to-surface or surface-to-surface — all have safe-and-arm devices of some kind.

The lightning was part of a severe storm in the Virginia and Maryland coastal areas. It made a direct hit on one of the antennas and also hit the power lines which feed all the station ground systems.

Police issue national alert for accused leader of ring

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A woman accused of being a major operative in a gang of women who stole watches and wallets from businessmen they picked up and then drugged has been arrested, police here say.

And a nationwide alert and arrest warrants have been issued for the man accused of leading the gang, which might have raked in up to $10,000 a day, police Capt. Al Ortenzo said Wednesday.

Leigh Miller, 19, was arrested Tuesday in a Fort Lauderdale hotel room on charges of armed robbery, auto theft and kidnapping. She was one of at least three women who lured men into hotel rooms or their homes, drugged them and stole their Rolex watches, diamond rings, cars and cash, police said.

Victims of such robberies number in the hundreds across the country, Ortenzo said. But, he said, "we're not necessarily attributing everything that happened to this group."

Ms. Miller, who was being held Wednesday night at the Broward County Jail, was charged with the May robbery of an unnamed Fort Lauderdale boat captain. She allegedly stole a $10,000 Rolex and $800 in cash from his yacht, as well as his car, which was later abandoned, said police spokesman Ott Cefkin.

Wednesday, police issued a warrant for a 29-year-old Dallas man known as Michael or Melvin McFare, Cefkin said. At least three people have implicated McFare as the leader, Ortenzo said.

Police are unsure how many women in addition to those already identified may have participated in the robbery ring, Ortenzo said.

The ring has been known to operate in North Miami Beach — where about 30 such robberies have been reported — and in Miami, West Palm Beach, Orlando, Atlantic City, N.J., Dallas and Los Angeles, Ortenzo said.

At least 100 men have been victimized by the ring over the last 18 months, authorities said.

The victims usually were middle-aged men on business trips sporting gold watches and diamond rings, according to robbery detective Roger Miller. He described them as "high rollers, a guy not afraid to spend a little money.

"The women come on like a secretary," Miller said. "They do not come on like hookers."

Accompanying men to their hotel rooms or homes, the women distract their victims and slip drugs in their drinks, Miller said. The drugs, described as depressants, leave the men unconscious for hours while the women make off with their valuables.

"Up until this point it's been very difficult, because we know all the victims haven't come forward," Ortenzo said.

The break in the Fort Lauderdale investigation came after a 24-year-old woman told police she had been kidnapped from her Dallas home, trained to participate in the ring and beaten when she failed to steal from her first potential victim, police said.

Jane Henderson told police Sunday of her recruitment into the gang.

Police in Louisville, Ky., last month dubbed a group of women who stole $130,000 from men in town for the Kentucky Derby the "Rolex Girls."

Similar thefts were also reported at other major sports events including the NBA All-Star game in Seattle and the Marvin Hagler-Sugar Ray Leonard fight in Las Vegas, Nev.

Bakkers return to Carolina home

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department, the Internal Revenue Service and the Postal Service have launched criminal investigations of the PTL television ministry, the Rev. Jerry Falwell says.

Investigators are looking at actions taken before the Rev. Jim Bakker resigned as leader of PTL and turned control over to Falwell in March, Falwell said Wednesday night after a church service and a closed-door meeting of the PTL board.

"They have all advised us it was prior to our arrival, thank God," Falwell told reporters.

Meanwhile, Bakker, and his wife, Tammy Faye, returned to the Carolinas Wednesday night to claim belongings from the Tega Cay, S.C., mansion they left in January, saying they hope to return to television ministry soon.

"Our goal is to be on the air in 30 days," Bakker told The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer at Dallas-Fort Worth airport while awaiting a connecting flight to Charlotte with his wife and their son, Jamie.

Bakker, who has been living in Palm Springs, Calif., since resigning amid revelations he had a sexual encounter with a secretary, refused to be specific.

It was not clear whether his intentions were related to or independent of PTL, which Bakker has said he wants back. Falwell has said the Bakkers will never be permitted to return to PTL, which Bakker founded.

"I assume he is talking about somewhere else, not on PTL," Falwell spokesman Mark DeMoss said when told of Bakker's comments.

Letters to the editor

To the editor,

I wish to express my appreciation to the following individuals for assisting the Kiwanis Golden K in the erection of a flag pole at the Scurry County Senior Citizens Center.

BHP Petroleum, operators of the Diamond M Gasoline Plant, donated the pole and Jimmy Wilson, gang pusher at the plant, transported it to his Dad's welding yard in Snyder. Jim Wilson, retired welder, did the welding on the pole.

Texas Utilities drilled the hole for the base, set the base, and after Concrete, Inc. poured the concrete in and around the base, TU transported the pole from the welding yard to the installation site and set it in place. We flanged it to the base with bolts provided by Oil Well Supply and BHP Petroleum. Snyder Lumber Company donated the paint mitt and paint.

Flags have been donated by the VFW, Ina Bowlin and Joyce McCoy in memory of their husbands. A flag raising ceremony will be held at the Senior Center Friday at 11 a.m. The Vietnam Veterans will present the color guard.

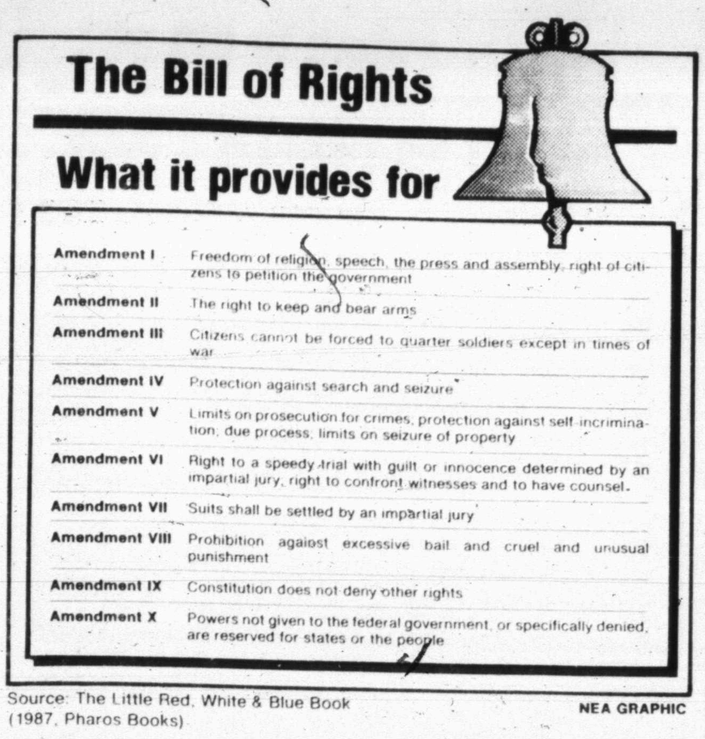

All citizens of Scurry County are encouraged to join us on Friday as we pay tribute to the flag.

Key witness testifies in Davis trial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The key alibi witness in a multimillion-dollar wrongful death trial returned to the stand today to explain why she never told a grand jury in 1976 that Cullen Davis was in bed with her the night a killer gunned down four people at the defendant's hilltop mansion.

Karen Master Davis, 38, once the defendant's mistress and now his wife, testified Wednesday she awakened at 12:40 that August night 11 years ago and Davis was in bed beside her at her suburban Fort Worth home.

She told the same story to an Amarillo jury in 1977 that acquitted Davis of killing his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

Then as now, the compelling question concerning her testimony was why she neglected to mention the critical awakening to a Fort Worth grand jury nine days after the shootings.

She said under oath then that she took two or three sleeping pills at 9 or 9:30 p.m. and did not awaken until Davis' brother Ken telephoned at 4 a.m. to say police were looking for Cullen in connection with the shootings.

Prosecutors at the Amarillo criminal trial had tried to convince jurors that Karen, after her grand jury appearance, concocted the 12:40 scenario to help Davis avoid conviction and a possible death penalty.

Mrs. Davis had also insisted before the 1976 grand jury that Davis told her on Aug. 4 he returned home the night of the shootings shortly before 11 p.m. That scenario conflicts with Davis' contention now that he returned home around midnight after going to dinner and a movie alone.

Under abbreviated cross-examination Wednesday, Karen said she "obviously" was mistaken about what Davis told her. She returned to the stand today for more questioning.

The current civil case is a consolidation of wrongful death suits filed against Davis by his ex-wife Priscilla, 45, and her second husband, Jack Wilborn, 66.

Their daughter, Andrea, was the killer's first target. She was shot in a utility room and left to bleed to death on the basement floor of the $6 million mansion.

The gunman, dressed in black and wearing a woman's black wig, critically wounded Priscilla and a young mansion visitor, Gus "Bubba" Gavrel, and killed Priscilla's live-in boyfriend, Stan Farr, 30.

Gavrel's date that night, Beverly Bass, then 18, escaped unharmed.

The three survivors testified previously that Davis was the man in black.

Karen Davis, the 13th defense witness, told the jury she awakened for no apparent reason that fateful night and noticed the time on a lighted digital clock.

At 12:40 a.m., two lay dead and two lay wounded at the mansion and the killer was chasing Beverly Bass across the darkened grounds.

The shootings occurred at the height of a bitter divorce suit between Cullen and Priscilla in which Priscilla allegedly was demanding a $50 million settlement. She, later received $3,475,000.

With Priscilla looking on, Karen portrayed Cullen as a born-again, Bible-reading Christian who is a devoted husband and a "compassionate, tolerant and loving" father to her two sons by a previous marriage.

"Have you ever seen Cullen violent?" her attorney asked.

"Never," she replied.

"Have you ever seen him lose his temper?"

"Never."

Texas World War I veterans to attend French ceremony

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — At the age of 96, Harry Cramer plans to perform his repertoire of French drinking songs in Paris next week while attending ceremonies commemorating the anniversary of the U.S. troops' entry in to World War I.

Cramer and Elvin Sprague, 89, both of Fort Worth, are among 19 veterans who were invited to attend ceremonies honoring World War I veterans. Sprague also plans to attend.

It was on June 17, 1917, that Gen. John Pershing and the first of the American Expeditionary Force landed in France. To the tune of "Over There," 2 million more American soldiers soon followed.

"We got a wonderful reception — men and women crying, hugging and kissing us," Cramer said, recalling what it was like to arrive in Paris 70 years ago.

The ex-doughboys and their wives arrive Saturday in Paris for a wreath-laying ceremony at the French tomb of the unknown soldier at the Arch of Triumph. Additional ceremonies and tours are planned Sunday and Monday, including a visit to the Belleau Wood Battlefield with French World War I veterans.

U.S. Veterans Administration officials called two weeks ago to offer the five-day, expense-paid trip, said Cramer's wife, Bertha.

"They called us and said, 'Would you like to go?' Well, actually, they first said, 'Are you physically able to go?'" Mrs. Cramer said.

Sprague and Cramer were chosen for the commemorative trip through their activity in the Veterans of World War I of the U.S.A., a national veterans service organization. Sprague is a past national commander. Cramer is currently national junior vice commander.

He is also national soloist for the veterans group, and said he expects to be called upon to sing "Madeline," a selection from his repertoire of French drinking songs learned 70 years ago.

He said he doesn't understand all the words, but said he has been assured by those who know the language that it is entirely wholesome.

Cramer was a 27-year-old civil engineer working for the Pennsylvania Railroad in Pittsburgh when he volunteered in 1917. He spent the war rebuilding rail lines in France.

"I haven't seen a fighting German yet," he said.

Sprague said he actually spent all his World War I service in Texas, and he's wondering now why he agreed to go overseas at this late date. "I've just decided I'm crazy. My wife thinks so, too."

Sprague joined the Army in his hometown of Grand Rapids, Mich., in 1917 and was shipped to San Antonio. At 137 pounds, he was considered too thin for infantry duty, so he was assigned to the fledgling air corps as an aerial gunner. He spent the war flying all over Texas in JN-4 "Jenny" biplanes, training other gunners.

Cramer wouldn't admit to much excitement over the trip.

"No, not particularly. I know what I'm going to see — same thing I saw last time I was there," he said.

Cramer's wife chided him. "Oh, tell the truth, you're excited," she said.

"Well, OK, if you want me to be excited for a few minutes, I'll be excited," he said.

Canada and the United States signed a treaty in 1932 laying the groundwork for what eventually became the St. Lawrence Seaway.

U.S. welcomes allied support

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says it is happy with allied support of its Persian Gulf policies, but the Senate's Republican leader says Western Europe and Japan should do more to protect oil shipments in the volatile region.

The dispute centers around U.S. plans to begin escorting Kuwaiti oil tankers, a move which has raised fears the United States may become embroiled in the Iran-Iraq war. Kuwait is an ally of Iraq.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger told a House committee Wednesday that even if its allies won't help, the United States can't back down.

The "fundamental issue is leadership, the leadership of the free world to resist the forces of anarchy and tyranny," Weinberger told the Foreign Affairs Committee.

But Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., was critical of the position taken in Venice, Italy, at the summit of leaders of the seven industrialized nations.

The leaders issued a communique Tuesday pledging diplomatic support for U.S. actions, but no military help.

That was fine with President Reagan, who pronounced himself "delighted" with the communique. He neither sought, nor was offered, military help.

But Dole disagreed. "It's good rhetoric," he said in a speech on the Senate floor. But "it looks like we're going to get no real commitment from our allies to meet their responsibility ... to defend their own interests."

"The talk from our allies is 'let's be calm,'" Dole said. "But I must say, it's easy to be calm in the cozy capitals of Europe and Japan when Uncle Sam has his ships and planes patrolling the gulf, and his red-white-and-blue flag protecting the tankers bringing the oil that London and Paris and Tokyo desperately need."

Dole said the American people wonder why the allies aren't helping and can rightly ask, "What about our allies? ... Why aren't they there, standing beside us? Why aren't they sharing the burden, sharing the risks?"

Capitol Hill fears about deepening U.S. involvement in the gulf have risen in the wake of last month's Iraqi attack on the Navy frigate USS Stark in which 37 U.S. seamen were killed.

The United States receives only about 6 percent of its oil from the Persian Gulf, Weinberger noted, while Japan gets 70 percent of its fuel from the region and U.S. allies in western Europe get about 30 percent.

But those figures are misleading, Weinberger argued, because they "ignore the fact that the world oil market is one market, and should Persian Gulf oil supplies be disrupted, oil prices will rise for everyone."

Besides, he added, the basic issue is leadership.

"If we, who so strongly advocate free access to ideas and markets, abrogate the responsibilities of leadership, who will take our place in the Persian Gulf and elsewhere around the world?" he asked.

'Add' campaigns

Ideas for new amendments abound

By Robert Wagman

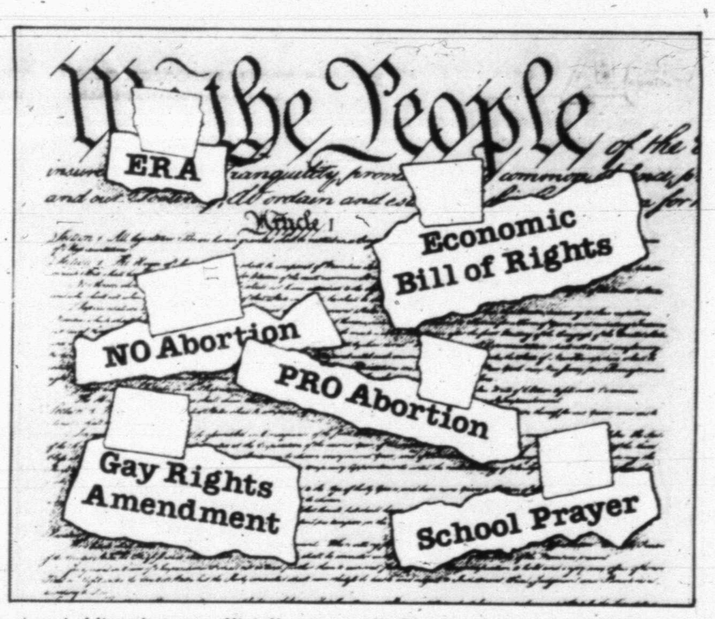

WASHINGTON (NEA) — In the Constitution's 200th year, more groups are proposing amendments to the document than at any time since the early days of the republic.

Here are some of the changes being proposed:

• An amendment requiring a balanced annual federal budget.

Conservatives believe that without a constitutional ban against deficits Congress will never balance the budget. Several attempts to get the measure through Congress have failed. Thirty-two states have called for a convention to propose such an amendment. Proponents, however, have failed since 1983 to add the two additional states necessary to force a constitutional convention.

Some conservatives do not believe a balanced-budget amendment is enough. They are proposing a package of amendments that economist Martin Anderson calls an "Economic Bill of Rights." It would include the balanced-budget amendment, a limit on federal spending, a presidential line-item budget veto, a return to the gold standard and a ban on wage and price controls.

We the People
The Living Constitution

• An amendment to overturn the Supreme Court's decision in Roe vs. Wade, which legalized abortions.

For 14 years, anti-abortion groups have been pressing for an amendment to prohibit abortions outright or make the issue one for individual states to decide.

• An amendment to "guarantee reproductive rights" — to make the right to an abortion constitutionally guaranteed.

• An amendment allowing prayer in the public schools.

Such an amendment would overcome a string of Supreme Court decisions holding that any officially sanctioned prayer in public schools violates the constitutionally mandated separation of church and state.

• An amendment banning discrimination based on gender, commonly called the Equal Rights Amendment.

Previously passed by Congress, the amendment failed because it was not ratified by the requisite 38 states. It was reintroduced into the 99th Congress, but failed to pass the GOP-controlled Senate. It has been reintroduced in the current Congress.

• An amendment banning discrimination based on sexual orientation, known as the Gay Rights Amendment.

Several attempts to launch this in Congress have failed.

• An amendment forbidding Congress to raise its own salary.

This is actually the continued attempt to ratify the very first amendment submitted in 1789. By a quirk in the law, this one ratification process has no time limit. It has now been ratified by 21 of the required 38 states. The recent congressional salary increase fiasco revived interest in the measure.

• Several amendments that would make the American system of government more closely resemble the British parliamentary system.

This would involve several constitutional changes, including allowing sitting members of Congress to serve in the Cabinet, extending House terms to four years to coincide with presidential elections, extending Senate terms to eight years with half the Senate elected every four years (thus doing away with off-year elections) and mandating federal financing of congressional elections.

• An amendment to forbid federal taxation of state-issued obligations.

This amendment would restore the rights of states and municipalities to issue tax-exempt revenue bonds, a right eliminated by of last year's tax bill.

How the Constitution can be changed

The founding fathers deliberately made it difficult to amend the Constitution. Article V specifies two different ways it can be done.

The process can start in Congress with a proposed amendment being approved by both the Senate and House by at least a two-thirds margin. The proposed amendment is then sent to the states, where it must be approved within seven years by simple majorities of three-quarters of the state legislatures.

With 50 states, this means that approval of 38 is required.

The second way — which has never happened — is for two-thirds of the states to petition Congress to hold a convention to amend the Constitution.

The convention call would have to come from 34 states.

A simple majority of those attending the convention — on a one-vote-per-state basis — would propose an amendment, which would then have to be submitted to the states — just like a congressionally proposed amendment — for ratification by three-quarters of the states within seven years.

While a constitutional convention has never been called, on 449 occasions one state or another has issued a convention call.

In 1911 only one additional state was required to call a convention to amend the Constitution to allow senators to be directly elected. (They were previously chosen by state legislatures.) Faced with the prospect, Congress rushed through the 17th Amendment, which was ratified in 1913.

Convention calls from states are usually framed in terms of a convention leading to a specific amendment — such as the current call for a balanced-budget amendment.

Constitutional scholars, however, are divided over whether a convention, once begun, would have to limit itself to that issue or could adopt an amendment on any matter by a majority vote and subject it to the ratification of three-fourths of the states.

It is also unclear whether all 34 convention calls have to be framed in identical language.

In the case of the balanced-budget amendment, some states have worded the amendment they want differently from other states. Some of these convention calls are conditional on Congress' non-action on the proposed amendment while others are unconditional. Certain experts argue that the convention calls are sufficiently different so that they can't be counted together.

Winning essay writer meets Sen. Bentsen

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 12-year-old Alpine boy who authored a prize-winning essay about the travails of some peace-loving Texas Mennonites has met with another champion of the religious group — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

A crewcut, bashful David Hilton stood in Bentsen's office Wednesday talking to the senator about how important it had been to the Mennonites that he had gone to bat for them in the Senate in 1979.

David was in Washington as a competitor in National History Day 1987. His essay on the difficulties encountered by a group of 653 Mennonites in the remote stretches of West Texas won him first place in the state competition in Austin.

"This was my first time to write something like this," he said, tugging at his buttoned-up collar. "It took me two or three months to research."

David's essay described how in 1977, the Mennonites were tricked into coming to Seminole, Texas, from Mexico by being told they would become legal residents if they bought land there.

"After their visas ran out, the immigration service was going to deport them, although most of them had no money and no homes to return to in Mexico," wrote David, who cited the U.S. Congressional Record as his source.

Value hearings slated in July

Associates of Dallas will be on hand to assist the review board for these hearings.

Assuming the oil value questions have been completed, the board is to conduct hearings on real estate property values beginning on Thursday, July 16.

During June, reappraisal notices have been mailed to more than 7,000 property owners. Changes in oil valuations accounted for 2,489 of the total and new values placed on real estate and personal property accounted for 4,606.

Taxpayers must be notified when their property value is increased by $1,000 or more or when the property is rendered or declared by the property owner.

Members of the district's review board include Harold Lacik, Walter Stirl and Ross Carroll.

Motorcyclist hurt in wreck

A 25-year-old Snyder man was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital for treatment of minor injuries following a car-motorcycle accident Wednesday evening.

Joseph Sheldon Hood of 3708 Ave. U reportedly sustained minor injuries when the 1982 Kawasaki he was driving was in collision with a 1977 Ford driven by Nuncana Rnaa Hernandez of Colorado City.

The mishap occurred at 6:02 p.m. in the 300 Block of the East Highway.

Hood was taken from the scene to the local hospital by private vehicle.

Also, one minor traffic accident was reported in Snyder Wednesday.

Involved in the 10:34 p.m. mishap on the parking lot of the Taylor Petroleum convenience store on College Ave. were a 1978 Ford driven by Wanda Cline Morales of Snyder and a 1978 Chevrolet driven by James Curtis Barber of Midland.

No injuries resulted from that mishap.

Warrants lead to two arrests

A female subject was jailed on a warrant for misdemeanor assault and another woman was arrested on a warrant for failure to appear in court here Wednesday, part of five misdemeanor arrests logged by police.

Also, one man was arrested on several justice court warrants for issuance of bad checks and two individuals were jailed for public intoxication.

The PI suspects were also charged with misdemeanor counts of evading arrest.

Parents request transcripts

AUSTIN (AP) — A Dallas couple have asked a state district judge to release sealed transcripts of grand jury testimony that would help them answer a string of agonizing questions about the alcohol-poisoning death of their son.

Mark Seeberger, an 18-year-old pledge of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity at the University of Texas at Austin, was found dead in his dormitory room Sept. 18 after swallowing from 16 to 20 ounces of rum during a fraternity outing.

"We'd really like to find out what happened that day, that night and afterwards," the youth's father, Jeff Seeberger, told state District Judge Bob Perkins in a hearing Wednesday. "Just for peace of mind."

A grand jury empaneled by Perkins reviewed Mark Seeberger's death and found that even though he was handcuffed during the fraternity-sponsored ride, he was not coerced into drinking the rum.

The pledge's parents are seeking to obtain the sealed transcripts of the grand jury investigation in which approximately 20 were questioned before the grand jury. Jeff Seeberger's testimony came during a hearing requesting those records. Perkins postponed a decision until June 25.

Prosecutors in the Travis County District Attorney's Office oppose releasing the transcripts.

Although the grand jury declined to return indictments in the case, it issued a report that was critical of fraternity leaders who "engaged in an effort to suppress cooperation by witnesses to the incident toward investigative authorities."

Because no charges were filed in the case and because grand jury proceedings are secret, there has been no public testimony about the pledge's death.

During the hearing, Seeberger testified that although prosecutors allowed him and his wife to read the transcripts and take notes from them after the investigation was over, questions still remain. He testified that of the transcripts he and his wife had time to read, he was particularly alarmed by the "Watergate approach" that some of the people involved took in trying to thwart the investigation into his son's death. He said he would like more time to examine those records.

Jeff Seeberger said he and his wife wanted the transcripts because none of the people with their son the night he died would tell them what had happened. He said attorneys hired by the family to look into the possibility of filing a civil suit against some of those involved also want the records.

Jim Connolly, chief of the trial division of the district attorney's office, testified that he and other prosecutors kept the Seebergers' apprised of what was happening in the investigation "primarily out of compassion to those people because of what they were going through."

Connolly said that release of the transcripts would erode the grand jury process that is based on secrecy.

"If our act of compassion for the Seebergers of trying to describe the events that led up to their son's death, if that has any sort of eroding effect on the grand jury system, then that was a mistake," Connolly said. "If that proves to be a mistake, then we won't do it again."

Officer sues to get his badge returned

DALLAS (AP) — A police officer fired after killing a 70-year-old woman has filed suit, demanding reinstatement and contending that officials violated city rules in dismissing him.

Mark Kraus, 34, was fired March 4, one day after grand jurors cleared him of any criminal wrongdoing in the shooting of Etta Collins. Then-acting Police Chief Harold Warren said Kraus was fired for exercising poor judgment in the shooting last October.

In the lawsuit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court, Kraus says city and police officials violated their own policies by failing to give him written notice prior to his firing and for not affording him a civil service trial.

Kraus, who had been with the department more than 15 months the day he was fired, contends that city policy does not allow probationary periods of more than a year.

"By Dallas' own city charter and personnel rules, he would have been off probation (at the time he was fired). He is entitled to a complaint and a pre-termination hearing and a post-termination hearing to get his job back," said his attorney, Bob Gorsky.

"They said he used bad judgment. But what that was specifically, I'm not sure," he added.

Police officials, however, said Kraus was three weeks shy of completing his probationary status at the time of his firing. A state district judge in March upheld the firing.
