Russia Claims U.S. Hampering Trade

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Alexei N. Kosygin accused the United States Wednesday of hampering U.S.-Soviet economic cooperation by unwillingness to establish normal trade relations. He spoke at the opening of the regular summer session of the Supreme Soviet, Russia's parliament.

Listening intently in the ornate Kremlin meeting hall was President Leonid I. Brezhnev, 70, looking tanned and rested. There have been reports that he is in poor health. Brezhnev likely will not address the meeting, which is expected to last two or three days.

Podgorny Isolated

Also present was Nikolai V. Podgorny, 75, ousted as president at last year's summer meeting. This year the bald, pink-faced official sat in an island of empty chairs, virtually isolated among the 1,500 delegates. Nobody sat within three seats of him, although the other seats around him were full.

Kosygin, 74, said Moscow trades with 118 countries, but U.S.-Soviet trade amounts to only 2 percent of Russia's foreign business.

U.S. "Unwilling"

"This indicates that economic cooperation (with the United States) is, in effect, still at the outset," Kosygin said. The reason, he said, was "the unwillingness of the United States to establish normal conditions for trade."

It was an indirect reference to the 1972 U.S.-Soviet trade agreement never implemented because of an attempt by the U.S. Congress to link it with Jewish emigration.

Some Jews in the Soviet Union claim they are discriminated against and are not permitted to emigrate. More than 130,000 Soviet Jews have gone to Israel, but Jews in the Soviet Union and abroad say many more who want to go are kept from doing so.

Terms Of Pact

The pact called for increased economic cooperation between the two countries and for granting the Soviets "most favored nation" trading status with the United States, which would assure the Soviets tariff advantages as good as those of any other American trading partner.

When the pact passed Congress two years later it contained the Jackson-Vanik Amendment, linking U.S.-Soviet trade to increased Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union.

Outraged, the Soviets refused to implement the agreement and U.S.-Soviet trade slumped as the Kremlin turned to West Germany, Japan and other countries. The issue remains a sore point.

Kosygin, in his speech, said his country has been expanding economic cooperation with socialist and capitalist countries.

The United States sells more than it buys in dealings with the Soviet Union.

U.S.-Soviet trade figures show the United States exporting goods worth $1.62 billion to the Soviets in 1977, down 30 percent from 1976.

The United States bought $234.3 million worth of Soviet goods in 1977, a 6.2 percent increase over 1976.

Statistics for the first three months of this year show the United States selling the Soviets $593.6 million in goods, down $5.5 million from the same period in 1977. Soviet exports to the United States during that time were $114.8 million against $59.3 million for the previous year, a figure analysts say is deceptive because of a 1978 change in accounting methods.

Kosygin said the Soviet economy "is developing at a higher rate than production in the capitalist countries."

He claimed that the average annual rates of growth in industrial output were twice as high as the United States, three times that of the Common Market countries of Western Europe and 1.7 times greater than Japan.

But statistics published in January showed that an economic slump that became evident in 1976 continued in 1977 and the Soviet economy fell short of key goals. Western analysts of the Soviet economy said Kosygin's figures were "inflated."

The analysts said Soviet officials have lowered their targets for the 10th five-year plan now in effect — an indication that the Soviet economy is slowing down more than Kosygin admits.

Also, the analysts say, Kosygin failed to mention agriculture, which has been doing poorly.

Minnesota-Dakota Area Twister Toll Hits Eight

By The Associated Press

TORNADOES that struck suddenly at small farm towns in Minnesota and North Dakota left eight dead and turned homes and other buildings into piles of twisted rubble on Wednesday. More than 60 persons were injured.

"All of a sudden the house was gone," said James Hanson, of Elgin, N.D., a ranching and farming town of 1,000 about 75 miles southwest of Bismarck. Hanson, the administrator of the community health care unit at the Jacobson Memorial Hospital, was huddled with his wife and three sons in a corner of their home when the twister struck Tuesday night, touching down about 50 feet south of the hospital.

The storm ripped through 17 blocks of a residential area, leaving five dead. Grant County Coroner Arnold Meyer said J.J. and Martha Nicklaus, 72, and Odell and Martha Hauck, 68, died Tuesday night. He said the Haucks lived in a senior citizens housing project which was destroyed by the tornado.

The Nicklauses were killed when the twister blew apart their pickup truck. A spokesman at St. Alexius Hospital in Bismarck identified the fifth fatality as Henry Neher, 77, who had previously been listed in critical condition. Thirty-five to 40 persons suffered minor injuries as a result of the storm.

Officials reported a sixth victim of the storm, an unidentified man, died Wednesday morning at the Elgin hospital, but later said the death was not a result of the weather.

"This is going to be a real serious thing for us," said Elgin's fire chief, Clarence Werner. The town was left without water or power and Werner said authorities were trying to hook up an emergency generator to pump water out of its well field and into water lines.

Three persons — an infant, a teen-ager and an elderly man — were reported killed in Gary, Minn., about 350 miles from Elgin.

Authorities said 25 persons were injured in Gary and five persons were injured in nearby Fosston. Gov. Rudy Perpich ordered out a 30-man unit of the Minnesota National Guard to help search for missing persons.

The tornado struck Gary, a community of 265 persons about 260 miles northwest of Minneapolis, at about 3 a.m. Wednesday.

Police chief Myron Adkins, 45, was sitting in his squad car and tried to sound the alarm but was carried aloft by the powerful winds.

"I was trying to get to the fire hall to trip the alarm," Adkins said. "I never made it ... I didn't see it (the tornado) coming. It started shaking my car and picked it up. It went maybe half a block before everything went black."

When Adkins came to, he was lying on the floor of his car, with pieces of building flying by. He escaped injury.

Adkins' wife, Ruth, a volunteer at the town's emergency center, said the tornado hit without warning, badly damaging homes and trailers. "I would say it took probably a third of the town," said Mrs. Adkins.

Deputy Sheriff Ed Retzer of Fosston, about 30 miles northwest, was in his patrol car and had just learned of the trouble in Gary when the tornado hit him. "It was dark and raining ... It just hit like that," he said. "It tried to suck me up. I felt I was going to take off any minute. It felt like at times I was completely off the ground."

New Mexico Area Dodges Tornadoes

A-J News Services

UP TO 14 reported tornadoes, some of them traveling in pairs, danced ominously around Portales, N.M., Wednesday evening to a thunderous symphony of pounding hail, crackling lightning and torrential rain.

No tornado or hail damage was reported, but up to 2.5 inches of rain lashed the eastern New Mexico city for about 30 minutes, causing minor flooding of homes and stalling many cars. Police Chief David Brown told The Avalanche-Journal.

Amarillo Has Downpour

Severe storms that were part of the line extending into Texas from the Portales area also unleashed .73 of an inch of rain on Amarillo in less than an hour. Pea-sized hail, propelled by wind gusting up to 45 mph, also pummeled the city. However, no wind or hail damage was reported.

Although storms brewed over portions of the South Plains Wednesday night, little or no rain fell on most area towns.

The National Weather Service, however, predicts turbulent weather will continue to threaten the region today and Friday as a trough of low pressure remains stationary over the area.

A 20 percent chance of rain is forecast for Lubbock today with winds southwesterly at 10-15 mph today, increasing to 20 mph Friday.

Boundary Shift By School Axed

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

SCHOOL OFFICIALS now have discarded the idea of trying to redraw attendance boundaries by August to bolster the projected fall enrollment of Lubbock High.

"In my opinion, it would be impossible to effect any changes in attendance zones before the start of the 1978-79 school year," Charles Waters, president of the Lubbock Independent School District board of trustees, said.

"Moving attendance lines is not something we should do hastily. This will require in-depth study. It probably will be well into the fall before we address the Lubbock High issue," Waters said.

Last month, Lubbock High parents asked the board to enlarge their school's attendance area, thus increasing its enrollment, so that Lubbock High could expand course offerings and better compete in academics and athletics with larger Class AAAA schools.

Members Receptive

School board members seemed receptive to the proposal. Some of them, including Waters, suggested that attendance boundaries be shifted before the coming school term.

But on Wednesday, Waters said such a possibility has been ruled out.

For one thing, he said, school trustees don't yet have the data with which to make decisions about attendance zone changes.

Superintendent Ed Irons and his staff are preparing a board-requested "dot study" — a detailed map showing the residence of every high school student in the city. Administrators have indicated it "may be a while" before that study is completed, Waters said.

Time Too Short

Even if school trustees had the study in hand late this month or early in August, there "just wouldn't be time to act on it by the start of school," Waters said.

"Once we get the dot study, we need to take a long, hard look at what we want to accomplish — not only at Lubbock High, but also at other high schools" in terms of enrollment, he said.

"This will require in-depth discussion, involving the entire direction of the school district," Waters said.

Also, discussion of Lubbock High attendance changes must include input from parents and students in other school areas affected by such proposals, he said.

The Coronado and Monterey zones, for instance, should be asked for comment since they probably would have to yield the students needed to bolster Lubbock High's enrollment.

Moreover, any attendance line changes approved by the school board would have to be ratified by U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward pursuant to Lubbock's

Judge's Decision Awaited On Electric Power Source

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

FOLLOWING oral arguments in 140th District Court Wednesday, the question of whether South Plains Electric Co-op or Lubbock Power and Light would serve residents in a portion of Southwest Lubbock remained undecided.

The co-op had asked District Judge William Shaver to permanently enjoin LP&L from expanding service into an area annexed by the city last fall.

The land in question is about 960 acres bounded by 82nd and 98th streets and by Quaker and Frankford Avenues.

Testimony Wednesday indicated the land could be the site of up to 8,000 residences, if fully developed.

"The real issue" in Wednesday's hearing, co-op attorney Dale Johnson said, was "whether the city can serve this disputed area certificated to South Plains Electric Co-op without obtaining a certificate of necessity and service from the Public Utilities Commission."

However, City Attorney Fred Senter contended the Texas Public Utility Regulatory Act does not provide a way for a municipally-owned utility such as LP&L to apply for such certification.

Johnson said the co-op gained sole authority to serve the area in question two years ago when it entered an agreement with Southwestern Public Service and LP&L over service boundaries.

The attorney said the utility act stipulates a utility "can't extend service to an area already served by another utility without first obtaining certification of service from the PUC.

"Until they (LP&L) get a certificate, they should be enjoined from serving the area," he argued.

He also contended the co-op would suffer "irreparable damage" if the injunction was not granted.

Senter countered by saying the act refers only once to city-owned utilities, and said the remainder would not apply to LP&L, as a result.

"I don't know of any way to get before the PUC under the law," Senter said.

The city attorney then announced he had asked that a case before the PUC involving the same issue of service to the

Bonds Totaling $350,000 Faced By Rape Suspect

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

JUSTICE OF the Peace Charles Smith Wednesday set bonds totaling $350,000 on a suspect accused of terrorizing, sexually abusing or raping four young women in separate incidents here during the past year.

Suspect Dennis Keith Jackson was charged Wednesday with both aggravated rape and with sexual abuse in connection with two recently reported attacks on females.

In addition, Jackson, 19, of 2002 5th St., No. 13, has two indictments currently pending against him. Records show he was indicted Aug. 3, 1977, for burglary of a habitation. An attempted rape indictment was returned against him Sept. 8, 1977.

Also Wednesday, Asst. Dist. Atty. Bob Jones filed a motion to deny Jackson bond. That motion will be heard later by a district court judge.

Smith ordered a $100,000 bond for Jackson in connection with the alleged aggravated rape. He then ordered a $250,000 bond on the sexual abuse charge, which was filed later Wednesday.

The alleged aggravated rape reportedly occurred about 3:30 p.m. Saturday. Jackson was arrested about 5:30 p.m. at his apartment, reportedly after the complainant found a billfold with his name and address in it lying by a couch in her living room.

The 28-year-old woman told police that she had just finished taking a shower and was drying her hair and putting on some makeup when she noticed, out of the corner of her eye, someone standing in the doorway of her bedroom.

She said the assailant had a pair of black panty hose over his head. The woman said she recognized the garment as hers, since she had recently hung it out to dry.

Threatened With Knife

According to the woman, the assailant put a knife to her throat, forced her onto a living room couch and raped her.

The man, she said, then ordered her into a bedroom closet and pushed a bed against the closet door.

The woman said she later found the panty hose, the wallet and a comb in the living room of her apartment.

Attempts To Open Door

A 22-year-old school teacher, also an apartment resident, said she was taking a bath when she saw, through the partially opened bathroom door, someone attempting to open the screen portion of a sliding door.

Reports indicate the screen was locked, but that the door itself was not locked.

The woman said she jumped out of the

Showdown Imminent On Endangered Species Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — A showdown is nearing in Congress over legislation that made the tiny snail darter a household name.

Ironically, the outcome may not have a direct impact on the celebrated fish, or even on the controversial $120 million Tellico dam and reservoir project it helped block.

But what Congress decides when it debates the Endangered Species Act this summer is likely to make a big difference on any future Tellico-like controversies that arise.

Both houses of Congress are expected to vote in coming weeks to extend the life of the act, which expires later this year.

Changes in the law have been proposed in both houses, and even the measure's strongest supporters concede some change appears inevitable, largely because of the snail darter case.

It appears almost certain, for example, that the Senate will approve a change establishing a new government panel that could allow a project to continue if its benefits "clearly outweigh" the value of the threatened species.

"We have enough votes to carry that," said one aide, who asked not to be identified. Some environmental groups say they won't oppose it, although they would prefer to see it defeated.

The Endangered Species Act, passed in 1973, prohibits completion of any federal project that threatens an endangered animal or plant species or its critical habitat.

While hundreds of projects have been built since then with disputes over the law settled through negotiations, the most celebrated case involved one that wasn't completed — the Tennessee Valley Authority's Tellico Project on the Little Tennessee River. The Supreme Court ruled that the dam's floodgates can't be closed because to do so would wipe out the snail darter's habitat and violate the law.

TVA and the Interior Department are studying alternatives. The General Accounting Office has been asked to conduct a similar study. And, TVA Chairman S. David Freeman has said that, environmental concerns aside, it may be more economical to redesign the project.

As a result, environmentalists and congressional aides say Tellico's future may not be decided in Congress.

Meanwhile, environmental groups and the Carter administration publicly oppose any change in the act.

"We don't feel ... that any need for an amendment has been demonstrated," said Michael Bean of the Environmental Defense Fund.

The change most likely to pass is sponsored by Sens. John Culver, D-Iowa, and Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn. It calls for a seven-member federal commission with authority to grant exemptions from the law.

Five of the seven members would have to approve an exemption, and such a vote could be taken only if the conflict could not otherwise be resolved and if the value of the project "clearly outweighs" the benefits of conserving the species. Several officials believe the Tellico project could not be completed under those standards.

"I do not anticipate a floor fight in the Senate floor. I would urge against a floor fight because we'd lose," said John Burdick, a spokesman for the Citizens Committee on Natural Resources.

But Burdick and other environmental spokesmen say they will fight proposals they believe would weaken the bill further. That includes a proposal by Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., that would allow any project to be completed as long as it was "under way" when the original law was passed in 1973. Regardless of when the project was started, if any part of it were 50 percent completed, it too could be finished.

Opponents say Stennis wants to make sure the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway project, a $1.8 billion, 253-mile barge canal linking the Tennessee River system with the Gulf of Mexico, is safe from attack. Part of the project is in Mississippi.

While there are no known endangered species threatened by the project, there are species in its path that are under consideration for listing as endangered.

Several amendments are expected to be offered in the House, where environmentalists say they may try to get a simple extension of the act approved.

Rep. John Duncan, R-Tenn., is backing a proposal exempting the Tellico project from the act.

"I would anticipate very, very heavy floor action," Burdick said.

Sources say the National Wildlife Federation conducted a preliminary survey among House members, finding that 90 congressmen believe the act needs no changes, about 130 say it does and another 130 are undecided.

First Baptist Sets Seminar On Retirement

First Baptist Church's family ministry department is sponsoring a "Living Creatively in Retirement" seminar, Friday and Saturday at the church, Broadway and Avenue V.

The seminar is designed for all adults, with sessions for adults who already are in the retirement years and those who wish to make preparations for retirement.

Persons partici ting in the seminar will be featured uest Horace Kerr, a consultant for th family ministry department of the Baptist Sunday school board; Mrs. W dring Edwards, who teaches a class n aging in the Texas Tech University department of family relations; Lee Pennington, a certified financial planner; Gary Ward, a local attorney; Dr. Stanley Fowler of the Texas Tech department of family relations; Bill Beisiegal, physical director of the Lubbock YMCA; Mrs. Evelyn Cooper, a staff member of First Baptist Church; and Mike Horton, minister of family life at the church.

A registration fee will be charged for the seminar. Additional information may be obtained by calling the family ministry office at 747-0281.

Corpus Christi Cuts Property Valuations

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The Corpus Christi City Council gave homeowners and senior citizens a tax break Wednesday, voting to cut valuations by 16.6 percent and increasing the homestead exemptions.

The council also instructed City Manager Marvin Townsend to hold budget increases to 10.3 percent for the coming year.

In a 6-1 vote, the members adopted a resolution that lowered the percentage at which property is assessed on city taxrolls from its present 60 percent to 50 percent of market value. They also increased the homestead exemption for persons over age 65 from the present $6,000 to $8,200.

The council instructed Townsend to produce a city budget for 1978-79 which is only 10.3 percent more than the current budget.

The valuation rollback and exemption increase are effective immediately.

Last week the Nueces County commissioners court voted to freeze property taxes at the 1977 level for the coming year and increased the homestead exemption.

Mayor Pro Tem Bob Gulley said the assessment cut will mean about $2.2 million less in tax revenues. He said the limit on the increased budget will allow 3.3 percent for city growth after the inflation allowance.

Townsend said that besides the general fund which has yet to be considered, departmental budgets presented thus far to council call for $5.4 million increases.

The council did not discuss any possible cuts in city services because of the rollback in tax revenue.

Soviet Nuclear Blast Set Off In Siberia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seismic signals, presumed to be from a Soviet underground nuclear explosion, were recorded Tuesday night by the U.S. atomic energy detection system.

The signals were recorded at 10:47 p.m. EDT, and originated from the the Semipalatinsk nuclear test site in central Siberia, department spokesman Jim Cannon said.

Cannon said the blast was the fifth recorded this year. The last was on June 12.

U.S. and Soviet officials signed a five-year agreement in May 1976 to limit the size of underground nuclear tests and are engaged in negotiations that could lead to an outright ban of all underground atomic blasts.

Teachers Claim 'Basics' Never Left Behind

DALLAS (AP) — Many teachers say there's no need for a "back to basics" movement in education because the three R's have never left the classroom, according to an informal survey of participants at the National Education Association Convention.

The teachers said criticism of today's educators for failing to instruct students in the essentials of reading, writing and arithmetic results from an ignorance of how education has changed.

"I don't think we ever left the basics," said Jacque D. Angle, a suburban Philadelphia teacher. "But what are the basics? People are saying we should return to the three R's, which we never left, but remember this is 1978 and we can't go back to 1955."

Students use calculators in math classes now because that's a skill they need to have, he said. But the use of modern techniques doesn't mean the youngsters can't do simple calculations themselves, he added.

Eddie L. Robinson, a suburban Baltimore teacher, agreed that education in the 1970s doesn't always look the same as it did 20 years ago.

"When I was in the fifth grade, we had to recite the multiplication tables in front of the teachers to pass," he said. "They don't have to do that any more. And that's where the confusion comes in."

Parents who ask children to recite the times tables — and receive blank stares in return — are likely to think that something's wrong in the classroom, Robinson said.

"But rote memory is not the only way to teach any more," he said. "The basics are still being taught, they always have been and always will be."

Meanwhile, NEA reported Wednesday that nine percent of the teachers it surveyed last year would not choose the same career if they could start over again.

For the fifth straight year, the number of teaching graduates declined in 1977, the study showed. The major reasons cited for a growing dissatisfaction with the profession included poor salaries, overcrowded classes, uninterested and unruly students and inadequate teaching materials.

Despite those problems, fewer than half of the teaching graduates who wanted jobs in public schools this year were able to find them, NEA said.

However, the nation's largest teachers' organization said a third of a million more teachers are needed to raise schools to minimum quality levels. The association said teacher shortages are most critical in the areas of mathematics, science, vocational-technical subjects and agriculture.

"There is no shortage of teachers," said John Ryor, president of the 1.8 million-member organization. "There is a shortage of the proper standards, atmosphere and working conditions in which teachers must do an effective job of instruction."

New President Named

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Edmund D. Pellegrino was named president of Catholic University, Wednesday, replacing Dr. Clarence Walton, who is retiring after nine years in the post.

Pellegrino's appointment was announced at a news conference by Archbishop Philip Hannan of New Orleans, chairman of the university's board of trustees.

Agreement In Time For Summit Unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert Strauss, President Carter's right-hand man on trade and inflation issues, said Wednesday it is unlikely a new world trade agreement can be reached in time for the economic summit conference Carter will attend in Bonn July 16-17.

Negotiators previously had set a deadline of July 15 for a tentative accord on an agreement to regulate world trade during the 1980s, but Strauss said refusal by other nations to accept increased imports of some U.S. farm goods has forced a delay.

And he said there won't be any agreement at all if the U.S. "bottom-line" demands for agricultural trade aren't met. He said Japan especially, but also the European Common Market and Canada, haven't made sufficient concesssions.

"We are going fully halfway to meet our trading partners. ... We are not going any further. ... I think we have been fair," Strauss told reporters at a White House breakfast.

He indicated there is a new deadline of September for reaching a tentative trade agreement to replace the one that currently is in force, but which is no longer considered adequate.

He said he hopes a complete agreement will be ready in January for submission to Congress, which must approve the pact.

Strauss said U.S. demands in agriculture include lowering trade barriers to U.S. exports of such goods as rice, beef, poultry, tobacco, citrus and specialty foods. In the case of Japan, he said increased imports of U.S. farm goods would be a way to help correct the huge surplus Japan now enjoys in its U.S. trade.

The trade negotiations involve nearly 100 nations and have been under way in Geneva for about four years.

In addition to agriculture, Strauss said the United States also is dissatisfied with progress in drawing up rules for subsidies governments provide their domestic industries to protect them from trade competition. The United States wants a considerable easing of such subsidies.

Strauss said he thinks the trade agreement will be only about three-quarters complete by the time of the Bonn summit, and he indicated he hopes the leaders of the summit nations may be able to make a breakthrough toward a final agreement on their own.

Besides Carter, those at the summit will be the leaders of Germany, Japan, France, Great Britain, Italy and Canada.

Strauss said it seems that some of the negotiators in Geneva, including the Common Market representative, lack the authority from their governments to make the concessions on agriculture that the United States is demanding.

"It's a tough nut to crack, agriculture, but we are going to stay with it, or there won't be an agreement," he said.

Strauss also ruled out separate negotiations for steel and textile trade, despite pressures from some members of Congress and from special interest groups to have these treated separately.

He said among the trade questions that have been resolved is the issue of tariff reductions. The negotiators have approved overall cuts in tariffs of about 40 percent, although the reductions may vary on individual goods.

Jody Powell Gets Wrong Information

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House spokesman Jody Powell blew his lines, Wednesday, as he attempted to deny something that already had been officially confirmed elsewhere in the administration.

Powell told reporters at a regular briefing that the United States had not decided whether to allow Israel to sell Kfir jet fighters to Taiwan, a sale which would require U.S. approval because the engines are made by the General Electric Co.

Later, another White House press officer sought out reporters to tell them that Powell had made a mistake.

"He came in late," said the official, who asked not to be named. "Somebody gave him wrong information."

In reality, the decision not only had been made, but had been relayed to Israel by Vice President Walter F. Mondale. Mondale's message was reported by the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal and CBS News.

Those accounts were confirmed, Wednesday morning, by two different White House officials, who asked not to be named. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter made it official at a noon briefing, saying, "We did tell Israel that the U.S. would look with favor on such a sale."

However, at a midafternoon briefing at the White House, Powell said in response to a question:

"No final decision has been made on that. It's been under consideration for some time."

"Are the reports untrue?" a reporter asked.

Powell said the Taiwanese didn't want the Israeli jets anyway.

Shifting Taxes, And Blame?

TEXAS LEGISLATORS will go into special session Monday with an opportunity to signal that they'll use a scalpel on state spending next year and thus avoid a California-type meat ax approach.

If they flub this chance, the tax revolt may have gotten out of hand by the time they return to Austin for the regular session next January.

The temptation will be great for the lawmakers, many of them with one eye on their own political ambitions, to take a cosmetic approach or—worse still—take a precipitous course on tax "reform" that would lead to a state income tax down the road.

IN CALLING the special session on "tax reduction and limitation," Gov. Dolph Briscoe left open the number and diversity of actions he will permit the Legislature to consider.

The only item he specifically included initially was a Constitutional amendment, to be submitted to voters in November, requiring a two-thirds vote of the Legislature to pass any new taxes.

Other items he may put on the agenda include repeal of the 4 percent state sales tax on residential utility bills, increase of the state inheritance tax exemptions, repeal of the 10-cent state ad valorem tax and a constitutional amendment raising and making mandatory a homestead exemption for persons over age 65.

Altogether, these tax relief measures would add up to about $650 million next year. The bulk of the revenue reduction, however, would be borne by local governments unless the state funneled replacement revenues into local treasuries.

A state surplus of $750 million is expected to grow by $2 billion for disbursement during the next biennium.

THE TROUBLE with these tax "reforms" is that they'd do very little, really, for the typical middle-income taxpayer who led the California Proposition 13 tax revolt.

Property tax relief for homeowners over age 65 does nothing for the young man raising a family. Relieving the sales tax on utilities runs counter to efforts to encourage fuel conservation. Inheritance tax relief would help only a few people each year.

Tax relief for farmers and ranchers by assessing land on its productive value—another widely publicized possibility—actually would have the effect of increasing taxes on city folk.

SHIFTING A greater portion of the tax load to oil and gas produced in Texas for consumption outside the state has popular appeal but legal question marks.

Eliminating the 10-cent college building tax without providing a dedicated alternative funding source will set Texas colleges and universities back 30 years. A better approach might be to give them greater flexibility to spend the money for repairs and rehabilitation instead of solely on new construction.

The bottom line is that state and local governments need to find ways to hold down spending across the board rather than merely shift from one revenue source to another and ultimately either have to cut spending to the bone or slap a new tax, such as a state income tax, on the people.

JAY HARRIS:

The Cons And Libs

ALMOST FROM the moment we became interested in politics, we have been intrigued, confused and often nonplussed by various definitions of Conservative and Liberal.

There are, it seems, Conservative Democrats, Conservative Republicans, Liberal Democrats and Liberal You-Know-Whats, although not too many of the latter admit it.

Then there are Ultra Conservative Demos, who are either first cousins to Just Plain GOPs, and Ultra Conservative GOPs, who don't claim kin to anyone unless they have ranch or oil property.

And, of course, there are Ultra Liberal GOPs, who are Consevative Demos with money, and Ultra Liberal Demos, who wish they had it and figure the government owes them some of it.

ALL OF THIS admittedly is confusing. But, the other day while perusing The St. Pete, Fla., Times magazine section, we ran across "The Simple Man's Guide to Politics." It says it all...

Compiled by the afternoon St. Pete Independent's staff cartoonist, one Don Addis, the Guide is something everyone needs to keep up with what's going on these days...

Addis says no one can oversimplify or generalize better than an editorial cartoonist. So if you take his "short course in comparative politics, you'll learn enough about the difference between Conservatives and Liberals to get you through most cocktail parties, which is the only reason for following politics, anyhow."

Here it is, and if you get a wrong score, don't worry about it, Addis says, All wrong answers will be counted as New Political Theory...

LIBERALS beat their swords into plowshares. Conservatives beat you out of your plow and your share.

CONSERVATIVES already have theirs. Liberals have somebody else's.

CONSERVATIVES think any issue can be simplified into a bumper sticker. Liberals think the simplest idea can be expanded into a two-volume set.

CONSERVATIVES believe prosperity trickles down from the top. Liberals believe something else trickles down from the top.

As kids, both Conservatives and Liberals played cops and robbers. Conservatives played cops. Liberals played the robbers' lawyers.

LIBERALS will fight to abolish the death penalty. Conservatives will fight over who gets to throw the switch.

A Conservative liberal is one who can say "William F. Buckley" without gagging. A Liberal conservative is one who actually has seen a food stamp up close.

LIBERALS see the environment issue as a survival problem. Conservatives see it as a public relations problem.

LIBERALS want change for its own sake. Conservatives won't accept change but will take a check.

LIBERALS get their philosophy from obscure 18th-century French malcontents. Conservatives get their philosophy from greeting cards.

CONSERVATIVES see only the surface of an issue and consider anyone who delves deeper a "fuzzy thinker." Liberals dive straight to the bottom of an issue and wonder why it's so dark.

There is a dispute over which is smaller, the number of social improvements advanced by Conservatives or the number of worthy traditions saved by Liberals.

Some Liberals start out as Conservatives, then get a conscience. Some Conservatives start out as Liberals, then get lazy.

Finally, there are such things as poor Conservatives and rich Liberals, and both feel bad about it.

THAT'S IT, and we would like to doff the sombrero to Mr. Addis for a clever piece of analysis,

Somewhere back there in the heat of battle and emotions with which Americans seem to ladle up their political philosophy and candidates, we lost the ability to 1. Laugh at ourselves, 2. See Politics as The Game it is, and as The Means to An End...

The British, perhaps as much as anyone, have perfected the Art of Politics to its highest form. Parliament, at least in the past, has been as much a theater of drama and humor as some of London's best stages.

Somewhere, we've lost the touch. It's too bad. While there are those with acid wit, sharp tongues, eloquent elocution and down-home wisdom in the Halls of Congress and some Statehouses today, most of what goes on isn't very funny...In more ways than one.

AN EDITORIAL:

Dirty Words Take A Bleeping

IT'S UNLIKELY the world will suffer any great loss from the Supreme Court's decision that the Federal Communications Commission has the power to punish the use of "dirty words" over the airwaves.

In a 5-4 ruling, the Supreme Court said the FCC can't censor broadcasts in advance but that it can impose penalties for the use of "offensive" words.

The case arose from a recorded monologue by comedian George Carlin, who used seven gutter words to describe sexual and excretory functions.

THE FCC, AFTER getting a complaint from a man who said his young son heard the broadcast over their car radio, ruled the words were indecent and banned their use on the air at times when children might be listening.

"It is true that the commission's order may lead some broadcasters to censor themselves," the Supreme Court said. "At most, however, the commission's definition of indecency will deter only the broadcasting of patently offensive references to excretory and sexual organs and activities."

Thus, the tribunal agrees with the majority of Americans who believes that a code of decency can be observed without denying anyone's right of free speech.

Gutter language is unnecessary for expression of views and ideas. Despite the women's liberation movement and the emphasis on giving a child free rein to explore "the real world," it would be refreshing if—on the airwaves, at least—we could get back to the point where certain words are not used in mixed company.

There still are a lot of us, including the father who took the issue to the Supreme Court, who have a right to be spared the embarrassment we feel when such filth is aired in the presence of our children, wives and mothers.

ART BUCHWALD:

Bribes Are But Cement In Foundation Of Life

WASHINGTON—The headline read "U.S. Law Barring Bribes Blamed for Millions in Lost Sales in Asia." This should not come as a big surprise to anybody.

Even a Harvard Business School professor will tell you that payoffs for large contracts are the milk of commerce in 99.6 percent of all the countries in the world.

An ambassador from one of the Third World powers stationed in Washington told me over lunch the other day:

"The trouble with your law is that you consider it a bribe when a payment is made to someone in order to get a contract.

"IN OUR COUNTRY it is a gift of friendship that cements the ties between the company in question and our leaders."

"Our SEC always sees the dark side of every issue," I told him.

"It isn't as if this gift is going to the president of our country, who is considered a most honorable man. It goes to his wife for her charitable foundation."

"What does the foundation do?"

"It gives out contracts for schools and hospitals and orphanages."

"Who builds them?" I wanted to know.

"The president's brother-in-law. He is the largest contractor in our country."

"There doesn't seem to be anything wrong with that," I told him.

"DOES THE charitable foundation do anything else?"

"The profits from these enterprises are then distributed to the wives of cabinet members and high-ranking military officers who have their own charitable foundations."

"Then as I see it, the bribes—I mean gifts—that an American company is expected to donate to your officials are just part of your method of raising money to provide for the poor people of your country."

"That is what we've been trying to explain to your Commerce Department, but to no avail. Let me give you an example.

"SUPPOSE OUR country wants to order 1,000 bulldozers at a cost of $50,000 each. We have our choice of buying French bulldozers, British bulldozers, Italian bulldozers or American bulldozers.

"As you know, there is no difference in bulldozers. If you've seen one, you've seen them all.

"The French will offer to see them to us and set aside $5,000 per bulldozer for our president's children's education. The British might sell them to us and donate $7,000 per bulldozer to the president's sister, who lives in Switzerland.

"The Italians will say they'll give us the bulldozers and allot $10,000 on each one to build a summer palace for our president in Liechtenstein.

"But the Americans will tell us that they don't want to give us anything but the bulldozers. What kind of way of doing business is that?"

"It's a stupid way," I said.

"OF COURSE, we'd rather have the American bulldozers, but if we bought them under those conditions our president could become the laughingstock of Asia, and his wife would be ridiculed by everyone in our country because her charitable foundation had no funds."

"What is the solution?"

"Your Congress must amend its ridiculous law and exempt American companies from your law barring cash gifts for charity to foreign cabinet ministers, military officials, blood relatives of heads of state, designated agents of ruling political parties, and first ladies whose husbands are presently in power."

"THAT DOESN'T seem unreasonable when you're talking megabucks."

"We have a saying in our country: 'Nrum epherm ladai rahahm.'"

"Which translates?"

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

'Carter Lied To Us'

NOVAK

HOUSTON—President Carter did not really mend long-neglected Texas fences, thanks to shortcomings in both style and substance when he addressed some 1,200 black-tie $500-a-plate diners in the grand ballroom of the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

"I can't believe it," wailed a Southwestern politician-businessman who had spent $5,000 in after-tax dollars for a whole table.

His disbelief: in the absence of a head table, the President was nowhere to be seen and was actually back in his hotel suite eating a solitary dinner.

"Don't worry," a Washington-based lobbyist replied. "He'll be walking through shaking hands while we eat." The lobbyist was wrong. While Texas arrangers of the dinner requested a walk-through, the White House vetoed it.

Most diners saw him only when he marched to the microphone bathed in a spotlight, delivered his speech and marched out again.

HAVING PASSED UP chances to mend those fences through increased personal contact, the President had to rely on one of his shortest suits: oratory.

His style was snappier than usual and suitably conservative for this audience, but unfortunately built to an anti-climax on energy. While the audience was led to believe he would give them something new, Carter ended with an exhortation for his old energy program (opposed by most of his listeners).

"I think he made a dent in his problem," one Democratic insider told us, "but man, he's got a long way to go." The consensus remains that Carter would not carry this vital state today against Gerald Ford or Ronald Reagan.

The problem is not personal animosity but conflict on such key issues as oil and beef, aggravated by 1 1/2 years of neglected politics.

THE TURNOUT FOR the Houston fund-raiser, grossing over $600,000 for the Democratic National Committee, resulted not only from appeals by two popular Texans—national chairman John White and Ambassador Robert S. Strauss—but also respect for the Democratic President.

Moreover, Texas Democrats are anxious for Carter to succeed so he will be less of a drag on this year's state ticket.

Fear of the Carter drag was expressed by the absence of Rep. Robert Krueger (candidate for the U.S. Senate) and Atty. Gen. John Hill (candidate for governor) at the President's Fort Worth and Houston airport arrivals.

Krueger, making a strong race against three-term Republican Sen. John Tower, campaigns as an "independent Democrat" to stress his un-Carterite posture.

AS THE PRESIDENT arrived in Texas, Krueger attacked the Carter energy policy before an elite Houston businessmen's group.

Nevertheless, Krueger that night was struck by the magnetism of the presidency itself and was having second thoughts about campaign appearances with Carter.

But when Krueger went to Austin the next morning to address the Independent Cattlemen's Assn., he closely followed Tower's attack on Carter's boost in beef imports.

"For God's sake, Bob," a friendly cattleman advised him, "don't get yourself tied up with Carter." Heeding that advice Krueger uttered not on encouraging word about his President during a well-received assault on imported beef.

It is too late for Carter to reverse himself on beef or energy. But his tone in Texas was markedly conservative—praising free enterprise, excoriating inflation, travelling the hard road against Moscow.

How much this rhetoric helps is debatable. Although the President's cry that "we are not going to let the Soviet Union push us around" drew cheers from a Fort Worth luncheon, Democratic politicians doubt it narrows the Carter confidence gap in Texas.

THE PROBLEM IS deeper than issues or ideology, as one prominent, plain-talking Texas liberal (a $5,000 table buyer at Houston) told us after the speech:

"Jimmy Carter has lied to everybody in Texas from the blacks and the Mexicans to the oil boys. He has to start over from scratch."

His trip was a modest start, say most Democratic politicians. But he failed to make the most of it; his limp performance in Houston was followed by a widely publicized Army firepower demonstration at Fort Hood costing some $2 million.

When the White House permitted the President's anti-inflation theme to be blunted by an Army public relations spectacle, Texas' confidence in the competence of the President and his men was not enhanced.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Too Soft To Resist

OUR MOSCOW embassy has privately reported to Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance the confidential views regarding detente behind closed doors by Communist leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

At the same time, the embassy found that Brezhnev expressed the identical views to the leaders of all Soviet Iron Curtain satellites.

Brezhnev likewise explained detente to Tito (real name Josip Broz) in Belgrade. Last year Brezhnev traveled to Belgrade's ornate White Palace with its high wall and heavy defense against Tito revolters.

IN THE WHITE Palace iron-fisted Tito presented Brezhnev on his 70th birthday Yugoslavia's highest decoration, the Order of Freedom, although both abhor freedom and treat it the way a bulldog treats a tramp.

Moscow trained Tito in guerrilla warfare. The KGB secret police sent him to Spain as Spiridon Mehas, the KGB trumping up the name. It had forged a British passport supposedly issued in Ottowa, Canada.

Tito fought on the Communist side in the Spain's Civil War and the Red underground there gave him the alias "Tito."

OUR MOSCOW embassy reports that there Brezhnev told Tito, as he had previously told each leader of the Communist satellite, about detente.

Brezhnev described detente as only and entirely a tactical policy—merely a time-winning device. He literally scoffed at the Soviet moves to improve relations with the United States.

Brezhnev emphasized to all Red leaders that, detente notwithstanding, the Soviet's interests remain hostile to the United States, said this is manifest whether in the Middle East, the southern rim of the Mediterranean, Southeast Asia, the Philippines, Chili, Cuba, Latin America or elsewhere.

BREZHNEV IGNORED Communism's economic failure. He failed to state that no Communist country has even been able to function for its people over the long haul without assistance from the free world—as true today as in the days of Lenin, 61 years ago.

Brezhnev insisted that America's life-style is soft, overindulgent, essentially decadent. He stated that the tough will win and that it is no longer the nature of America to be tough.

Brezhnev said that a push here, a shove there, and the United States will finally fall apart. He saw an ultimate threat of terror as the clincher in the crumbling of our country.

Brezhnev calculated that the United States will be up for grabs.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

SO YOU DON'T think the marlin is a dangerous fish? I'd say it is.

During World War II, cargo ships from oriental rubber plantations were torpedoed off east Africa. Thousands of 280-pound bales of raw rubber were set adrift.

Over the next 20 years, they floated to shore. And in many if not most of them were found the broken-off tips of marlin swords, embedded four to six inches deep. Some had as many as four sword tips in them, suggesting though not proving the marlin attack in schools, too.

Consider that the next time you're afloat in a rubber raft off the coast of wherever.

Jinxed Cruise Liner Due Canada Probe

NEW YORK (AP) — The cruise liner America, still plagued by plugged plumbing, faulty refrigeration and seasick voyagers, arrived in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Wednesday for a 24-hour visit.

The controversial cruise ship was to be inspected by Canadian health officials, a government spokesman said.

The inspection, not a normal procedure, was being undertaken because of the widespread publicity surrounding the ship's earlier problems, he said.

Last week about 250 of the 950 passengers aboard the boat's first cruise, a "trip to nowhere," demanded to be put ashore, citing filthy living conditions.

In a ship-to-shore radio interview, conducted several hours before the boat reached Halifax, passenger Paul Parker, a reporter for New York City radio station WINS, said many were expected to depart the boat at Halifax, but there was no immediate word on whether any passengers had left the 38-year-old vessel.

Halifax was the 35,000-ton ship's first port of call since leaving New York on Monday. It had been slated to stop in Martha's Vineyard, earlier in the week, but rough seas cancelled that visit.

The ship is scheduled to return to the Passenger Ship Terminal here at 8 a.m. Saturday.

Parker told The Associated Press in the radio interview that with functioning toilets at a premium, scores of passengers were still suffering from seasickness.

He said it was still unknown exactly how many people were aboard the vessel, which charged $249 or more per person.

"If two people fell overboard, they wouldn't know who was missing," Parker said.

According to Parker, Doris Palmieri of Riverhead, N.Y., has gathered 100 signatures of fellow passengers, who plan a class-action suit against Venture Cruise Lines, owner of the vessel.

Parker said the entire crew was helpful and courteous in attempts to overcome what the owners have referred to as "administrative problems."

Next week, the line plans several overnight "cruise to nowhere" excursions.

The America was intended to be the United States Lines flagship, but World War II broke out before it could enter the transatlantic trade. By the time it returned to active service, after serving as a troopship, U.S. Lines was building its new flagship, the record-breaking luxury liner United States, which overshadowed the America throughout the older vessel's career.

The America was eventually sold to a Greek company, which named it Australis and operated it as a cruise ship. Then Venture acquired the vessel and renamed it America.

CHINA INCREASES GOALS

TOKYO (AP) — China exceeded state production goals for light industry for the first half of this year, boosting output by more than 20 percent over the first half of last year, Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency reported Wednesday. As usual, the agency's report did not give specific production figures.

Trash Regulations Toughened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service is reaching to the dregs of its regulatory authority to plug an offal loophole in its garbage regulations.

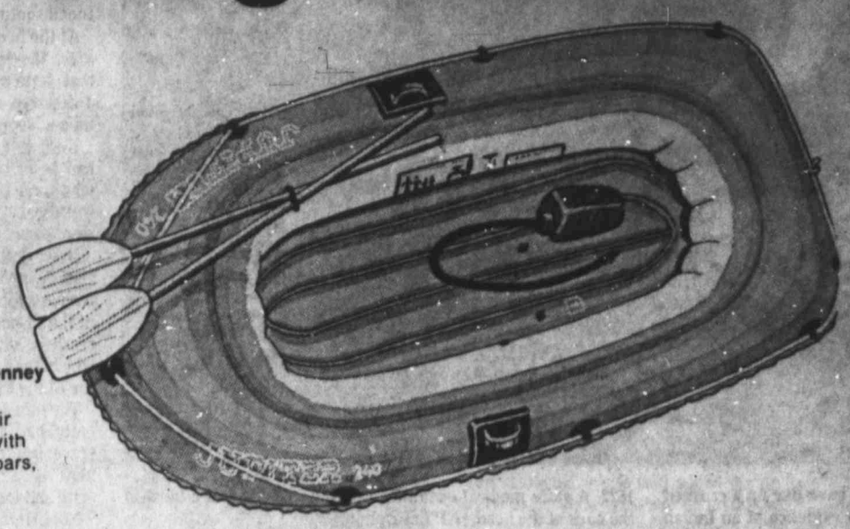

A law, designed to prevent the importation of diseases and pests into this country, puts strict controls on garbage arriving aboard boats and planes unless the litter originated in the United States or Canada.

But thanks to an inadvertent loophole, scraps from other areas can scrape through if the would-be garbage was left on a ship or plane that arrived from overseas but then continued to another U.S. city or between Canadian and U.S. cities.

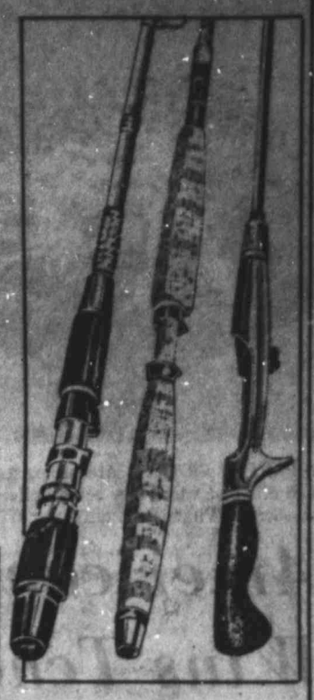

So the government has proposed to trash that problem, limiting the exemption from tight controls only for garbage that resulted from food or other items obtained in the continental United States and Canada.

Food arriving from foreign places that becomes garbage after arriving in the United States or between Canadian and U.S. cities will now face the same strict controls as foreign garbage.

APPARENT VICTIM — Archaeologists have dug up a crushed skull of a man which they believe offers evidence of an Indian massacre of Virginia colonists near Williamsburg in March of 1622. A state medical examiner said the man died of a blow to the back of the head. (AP Laserphoto)

Archeologists Find Evidence At Site Of 1622 Massacre

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — On the morning of March 22, 1622, English colonists in a palisaded fort on what is now Carter's Grove plantation invited some Indians into the fort to eat and socialize.

At the height of the Good Friday festivities, the Indians struck — not only at that settlement, but at others from the Tidewater area as far inland as Richmond. Nearly 350 settlers were killed.

Until last month, no physical evidence had been found of the fort or of those who were massacred at the 17th century settlement along the James River not far from here.

Now Colonial Williamsburg archeologists Ivor Noel Hume and Eric Klingelhofer have found what they think is the site of the ruined fort. They also have found a crushed skull and parts of a skeleton which they believe may represent a victim of the Indian raid.

The dead person, whose body apparently had been dumped hastily into a grave inside the fort, had died of "foul play" — a blow to the back of the head, state and local pathologists concluded.

Noel Hume said the type of blow corresponded to the method of attack favored by the Indians who came unarmed into the victims' homes, then struck with their guests' own tools.

Beneath the remains, found in mid-June during excavations on the Carter's Grove property, lay bits of charcoal and clay daub from a chimney — very likely left when the settlement was burned.

The skeleton, Noel Hume said, "had been thrown in sideways, and not lowered reverently down into the grave."

Also found at the site were a visored helmet, pieces of 17th century armor, some firing pieces, early pottery shards and a coin minted in 1613 — six years after the first English colonists set foot on American soil at Jamestown.

The massacres at what Noel Hume and Klingelhofer believe was colonial Wolstenholme Town, situated at Martin's Landing near here, are believed to have been the work of the Indian chief Opechancanough.

Onechancanogh succeeded Powhatan as chief of the Powhatan Indian tribe, which inhabited this area of Virginia in the days of the early settlements by members of the London Company.

News that the skull and skeleton had been found was released by the National Geographic Society in Washington.

Noel Hume said pathologists determined the skeleton was that of a man between 30 and 40 years old, who stood about 5 feet 3 inches and "suffered somewhat from a little arthritis."

Buildings in the area were constructed on posts — "the earliest kind of frame building" — and, unlike those of Jamestown, did not have brick foundations, the archeologist said.

The excavation work still is going on, with "half a field yet to be explored," Noel Hume said.

But, he added, "from all the accumulative evidence, we believe we can say we've found Wolstenholme Town."

American Violinist Wins Tchaikovsky

MOSCOW (AP) — Elmar Oliveira of the United States shared first prize for violin with Ilya Grubert of the Soviet Union in the sixth international Tchaikovsky musical competition, officials announced early Thursday.

Oliveira, 28, of Binghamton, N.Y., was among four Americans to reach the third and final round for violin in the grueling month-long competition.

Two of the other American musicians who made it to the finals also won prizes.

Dylana Jenson of Bloomington, Ind., at 17 the youngest participant in the violin competition, shared second prize with Micho Dimitrov of Bulgaria. Daniel Heifetz of New York City shared fourth prize with Kimson Ho of North Korea.

The fourth American in the finals of the violin contest, Sung-ju Lee of New York City, did not place but won a diploma for taking part in the competition.

Officials announced on Wednesday that Mikhail Pletnev of the Soviet Union won the gold medal for piano in the competition. Ninety-one pianists from 23 countries took part.

Gayle Martin, 26, of New York City, the only U.S. pianist among the 12 finalists, did not place among the medal winners. She said earlier she considered it a "miracle" that she made the finals because she only had four months to practice.

"I played my heart out in the finals and I did the best I could," said Miss Martin, a native of Houston, Texas, after the final results were announced. She said she still earned a special diploma for her participation in the Tchaikovsky competition.

Second prize for piano was shared by Pascal Devoyon of France and Andre Laplante of Canada. Third prize was shared by two Russians, Nikolai Demidenko and Yevgeny Ryvkin.

Fourth-place honors in the contest were awarded jointly to Terence Judd of Britain and Boris Petrov of the Soviet Union.

The fifth prize went to Christian Blackshaw of Britain and sixth place went to Naum Grubert of the Soviet Union.

Pletnev, now in the fourth course at the Moscow Conservatory under Yakov Flyer, said he plans "to work and work more."

Laplante, 28, one of the second-prize winners, said:

"It's incredible — it's the greatest feeling after months of that intense work. It's like I'll have a whole new career."

Laplante is studying at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City. He is a native of Rimouski, Quebec.

Judd, at 20 the youngest competitor in this year's contest, said he began playing the piano when he was five.

"I started very young; I didn't waste any time," he said. "I've always loved performing and I feel what helped me was the way the Moscow audience reacted so heartily to my playing."

No American has placed first in the piano competition since Van Cliburn took top honors in 1958.

Texas Professor Named Head Of Kansas College

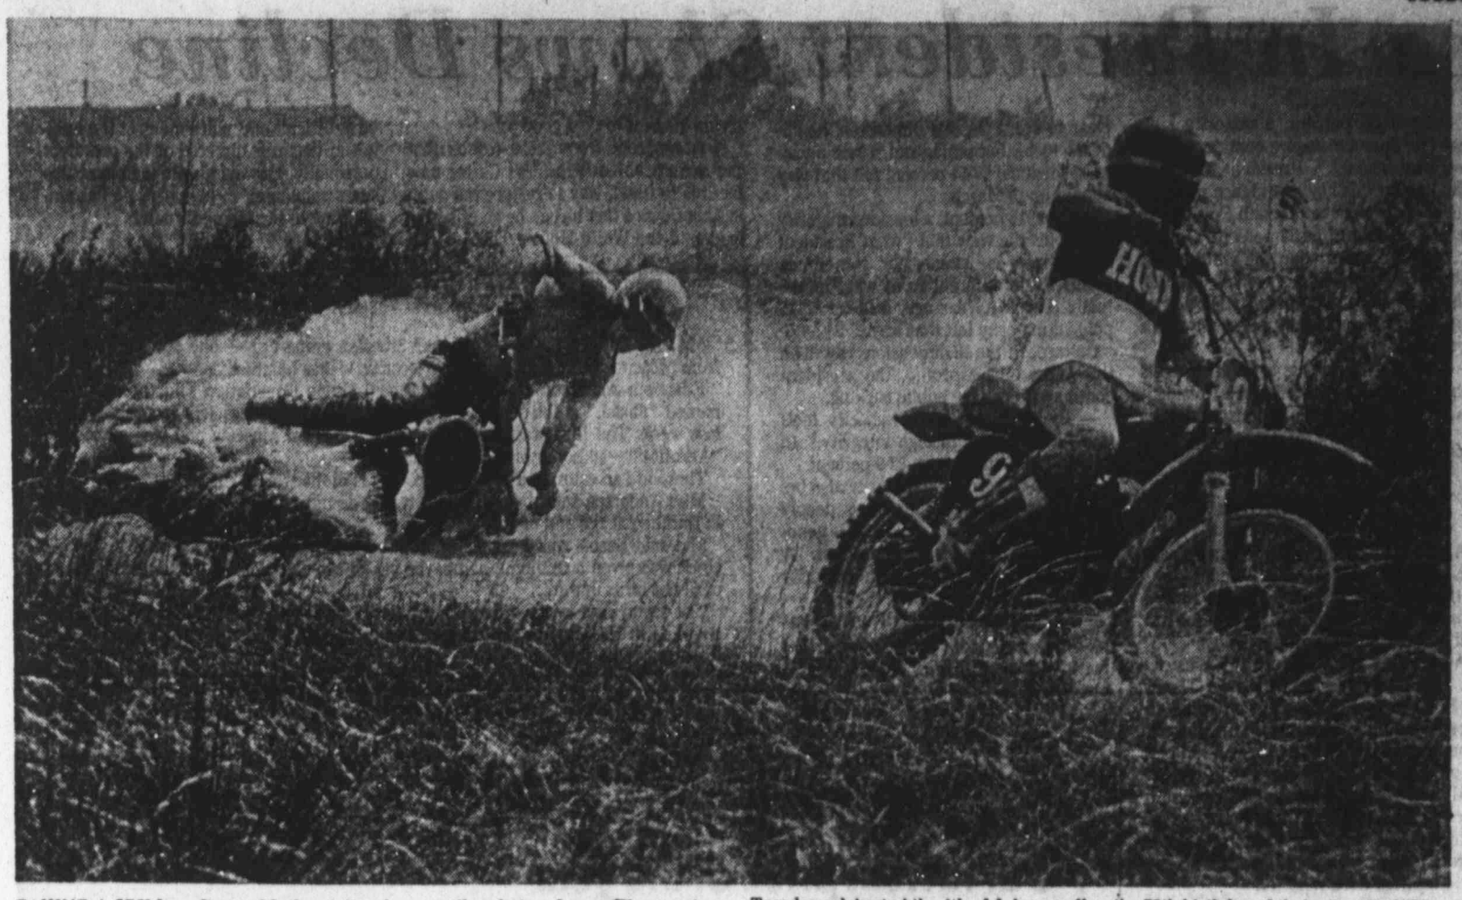

LIBERAL, Kan. (AP) — James E. Hooper, a faculty member at East Texas State University, was named president of Seward County Community College at Liberal Wednesday.

Hooper, 41, an assistant professor of secondary and higher education at East Texas, will assume his new position before the start of the fall term.

Hooper succeeds Wade Kirk, who resigned recently after four years as president. Kirk has taken an administrative position at Kilgore (Tex.) College.

EPA Says Seabrook Cooling Plan Lacking

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Public Service Co. has not proved that warm water discharged from the Seabrook nuclear power plant won't harm marine life off the New Hampshire coast, according to testimony Wednesday from the Environmental Protection Agency.

An analysis by a panel of 10 experts from the EPA's Boston office said that the company's studies of effects of its plant's cooling system contained "serious deficiencies."

The testimony came as the EPA entered its second week of hearings on the $2.3 billion plant's ocean-water cooling system. The hearings may end this week, said Thomas Engellenner, a lawyer for the Boston EPA.

But an opinion from the administrative law judge and a panel of three experts hearing the testimony would not be ready for the next regulatory stage for at least three weeks, Engellenner said.

The additional EPA hearings were ordered by the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston which said EPA Administrator Douglas Costle had based his approval of the cooling system on testimony that had not been cross-examined sufficiently.

Last week, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission ordered a halt of construction by July 21 until the EPA decides whether to approve the cooling tunnels.

Halsey Laing, assistant general counsel to the Boston EPA, said the decision would be "a difficult one because there is a tremendous variety of opinion within the EPA about whether these cooling tunnels should be approved."

He added that he wasn't sure when Costle would decide.

The EPA analysis also says that despite flaws in the evidence submitted by the company, the panel of expert witnesses did not feel that warm water discharged from the cooling tunnels would substantially harm marine life.

"These witnesses emphasized that their opinions are not based so much on the scientific evidence offered by the company as on their own personal experience, observations and the study of the observed environmental effects of operating coastal power plants," the analysis said.

But the panel added that "there is some as yet indeterminate risk or adverse effects" from the discharge.

Tavern Brawl Tops Off Fourth Celebration

OAKVILLE, Wash. (AP) — A Fourth of July brawl erupted among 200 persons at Oakville's lone drinking spot when one patron began shooting off firecrackers. More than 20 patrol cars responded, and several officers were injured while arresting four persons.

Delbert Brown, owner of The Only Tavern, said most of the officers who responded watched from across the street as fire trucks were used to disperse the crowd with water.

"One of my deputies has six broken teeth this morning," Grays Harbor County Sheriff Harold Sumpter said Wednesday. "He has an appointment with a dentist."

Another deputy would miss at least three days work because of a back injury, he said, and a State Patrol trooper also suffered a back injury.

Sumpter said the brawl began after a bearded man weighing about 300 pounds lit firecrackers in the tavern.

The town of 600 was crowded with 8,000 persons who had come for Independence Day festivities including a rodeo, parade, carnival and logging show.

"A patron started shooting off these M-85 firecrackers, which sound like a small stick of dynamite," said Sumpter. "The bartender asked him to leave and he wouldn't.

He said an Oakville patrolman got the man outside, but then the man began "hitting the patrolman in front of my deputies and then people began throwing things. The tavern was closed, for the best interests of the situation, for the night. It was quite a celebration."

The four taken into custody were arrested for second-degree assault. No serious damages or major injuries were reported, but a police car window was smashed and a state trooper also had a cut hand, said authorities.

New Bishop Named

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pope Paul VI has named the Very Rev. Thomas J. Murphy, rector of St. Mary of the Lake Seminary in Mundelein, Ill., to be the new bishop of Great Falls, Mont., it was announced Wednesday.

Public Confidence In President Shows Decline

By LOUIS HARRIS

Public concern about President Carter is clearly beginning to center on his personal capacities to handle the job of president and to inspire confidence in the White House.

According to the latest Harris Survey of 1,523 adults nationwide, Mr. Carter's ratings on certain key dimensions spell trouble for the president:

— A substantial 64-23 percent majority now feels that "although he is well intentioned, at times you begin to wonder if he has the basic competence to do the job," up from a 57-33 percent majority who felt that way back in March.

many new programs, but doesn't seem to know how to follow through effectively." A somewhat lower 59-27 percent plurality felt the same way last November.

— By 57-30 percent, a majority now denies the claim that President Carter "has learned fast on the job and seems to be on top of everything." This latest result is a complete turnaround from a year ago, when a solid 64-27 percent majority felt that Mr. Carter was proving to be a fast learner.

— In another turnaround, a 50-34 percent plurality no longer feels that Mr. Carter "has a style that is rapidly rebuilding confidence in the White House and government." A year ago, a sizable 67-21 percent majority felt that the president was well on the way to restoring confidence.

— By 51-35 percent, a majority feels that "he does not inspire confidence as a president should." President Carter's standing on this key confidence measure is slightly better than Gerald Ford's 1976 negative rating of 54-32 percent. However, it is far better than the all-time low rating Richard Nixon received in 1974, when a 69-24 percent majority felt he was not inspiring confidence personally "as a president should."

— By 78-10 percent, a majority feels that "in some of the mistakes President Carter has made, his lack of experience is clear to see." On this dimension, he appears to be bottoming out, since an almost identical 78-14 percent felt that way about him in March.

— By 69-17 percent, a lopsided majority also holds the view that "what President Carter says he stands for sometimes seems to be different from what he actually does." A year ago, a lower 52-35 percent majority felt that way.

On three of the 10 dimensions tested on this latest Carter profile, the president continues to receive public backing:

— By 73-15 percent, a majority feels that "he is a man of high integrity." In July 1977 the margin was 83-9 percent.

— By 64-20 percent, a majority also believes that Jimmy Carter "feels deeply about less privileged people and is genuinely trying to help them as president." A year ago, a higher 74-16 percent majority felt this way.

— By 83-9 percent, a nearly unanimous majority agrees with the statement that "with all the problems he has, he is trying his best to do a good job."

It is apparent from these results that the main problem President Carter now faces is to find a way to restore the public's confidence that he can be an effective leader in the White House. The job will be a difficult one, since much of the public's criticism is directed at the president personally. However, with well over two years remaining in his term, he has ample time to turn things around.

Raises Sought For City Officers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston police and fire department representatives have asked the City Council to approve pay adjustments totaling about $7 million annually for members of the two departments.

The adjustments would result in pay increases averaging about 7 percent and would be in addition to any cost-of-living pay increase normally granted city employees at the end of the year.

The increases are needed to make adjustments between the ranks in their respective departments, according to Detective Charles Correll, chairman of the Houston Police Officers Association committee for City Hall, and Lester Tyra, president of the Houston Professional Firefighters Association.

As an example, they cited the automatic pay raises police officers and firefighters receive in their first, second and third years of employment. Yet they receive no similar raise for their fourth year of employment.

In addition, a substantial part of the proposed adjustment would make up for cost-of-living pay increases not fully granted in recent years, the two officials said in separate interviews.

Woman Goes Berserk With Lethal Banana

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — An Annapolis woman was charged Wednesday with assaulting a police officer with a banana after she refused to pay a $1.25 toll on the Chesapeake Bay Bridge.

Authorities said Kathleen Wechsler, 31, hit Bay Bridge Police Officer Thomas R. Crouch with the fruit after she allegedly rammed his cruiser with her car when he tried to stop her near a toll plaza on the western end of the twin span.

Miss Wechsler then slipped back into her car and drove off, leading police on a high-speed chase for about five miles before being caught, authorities said.

No injuries were reported.

Second Siberian Crane Hatches

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Another Siberian crane egg — one of seven sent from Moscow to the University of Wisconsin — has hatched.

Elizabeth Anderson of the International Crane Foundation said the chick, named "Sasha," is the second hatched from the seven eggs sent from Siberia last week. The first was born during the trip from Moscow and was named "Aeroflot" — in honor of the Soviet airline.

There are an estimated 360 Siberian cranes in the world.

Miss Anderson said the two chicks would be moved to the foundation refuge in Baraboo at the end of July.

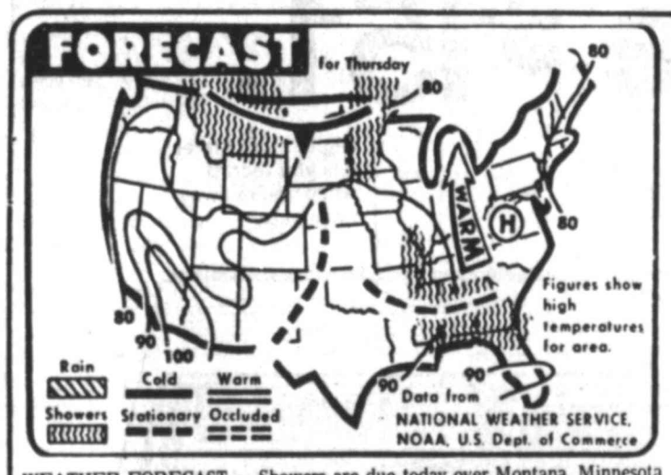

She said Sasha was born at midnight Monday. She said that, though the chick was given a feminine name, the sex of the chicks cannot be determined until the birds mature.

The seven eggs were gathered in eastern Siberia and sent to Madison for incubation in the climate control facilities as part of a Soviet and American effort to save the species.

Burglars Stay On Job, Rob Residents Of Goods

Glen R. Best told police that when he returned Wednesday morning to his home at 2005 15th St. he discovered $5,900 worth of property, including a stereo system and a television set, were missing.

Best said the burglars entered his residence through a window and, in addition to making off with the equipment, also broke a large mirror in the bedroom of his home and rummaged through a jewelry box.

Ralph Nalley, a salesman with Kaibab Industries at 2009 Baylor Ave., told police whoever broke a window in that firm made off with goods totaling $1,663. Nalley listed as missing three calculators, a typewriter, a radio and a cassette recorder.

Police reports indicate that burglars who apparently climbed onto the roof of a business at 1602 Ave. F and kicked in an unused air conditioning unit to get inside the building, made off with a $1,291 haul, including $700 in cash.

The owner of the business, James T. Webb, said the burglars also took tools and a CB radio.

Victor Douglas Johnson of 918 83rd St. said someone took a $1,200 saw he left behind a restaurant at 5416 50th St. Johnson told police he believes at least two people were involved in the theft because of the weight of the saw.

L.G. Fowler said whoever pried open the front door of his manufacturing business at 1600 Marshall St. made off with $1,140 worth of tools.

Frances S. Grist told police that when she returned home Wednesday she discovered a sterec system, two televisions and a Home Box Office unit missing from her 5033 27th St. residence. She estimated the loss at $1,000.

Police reports indicate that $700 worth of goods, including a stereo, camera, watch, clock, wedding band and 50 pounds of beef, were taken from Julio Sauceda's 1827 2nd St. home.

Ronnie Joe Rexroat told police that $350 worth of tools were taken from a trucking company where he is a mechanic at 200 N. Ave. Q.

Curley Quintana said burglars pried open the back door of his 306 Uvalde Ave. home while he was at a concert Tuesday night made off with $250 worth of property, including a television, amplifier and $25 in cash.

Police spotted 25-year-old Clemente Gonzales of 1611 Ave. D bleeding from a forehead cut about 8:30 p.m. in the 1500-block of Avenue G.

According to the victim, a man ordered him to hand over his money, and when he refused, the bandit hit him on the head with a stick or pipe and took his watch and $109 cash.

Gonzales said there were two women with the assailant. However, he could provide police with no descriptions.

There was no rest for overworked burglars Tuesday and, as midsummer approached, police were becoming hard-pressed to keep up with the ever-increasing activities of the break-in artists.

Don Earl Martin complained that someone broke through a window at his 5401 45th St. residence during the holiday and made off with $5,790 worth of property.

Included in the costly haul were several firearms, a $2,000 video recorder and a television.

Bruce Elliott Penny of 1605 Ave. W told officers whoever kicked open a door at his home last week stole $600 worth of albums, as well as assorted tools and some clothing. The entire take, the victim said, was worth $1,300.

A window reportedly provided entry for whoever got inside Louis Eugene Walker's 1319 25th St. home Tuesday. Taken in the burglary were two pistols and a shotgun, altogether valued at $500.

A $425 stereo was stolen from the 172-A Ave. T residence of David Bryan Sweatt Tuesday, reports showed. The burglar apparently crawled through a bathroom window to get to the property.

The same mode of entry reportedly was visible at Juanita Guzman's apartment at 1017 E. 29th St., No. 34, early today.

According to reports, blood was found on the inside of the broken window of the residence from which a 12-gauge shotgun was stolen. Police said they found a named suspect in another apartment and the man had fresh cut marks on his arm, wrist and hand.

The suspect, however, told officers a dog had caused the injuries.

No arrests were made at the time of the incident.

Memphis Stay Ends

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — National Guard troops ended a four-day emergency assignment in Memphis on Wednesday as city officials resumed negotiations with unions representing police and firemen.

"We are here seeking good and fair negotiations and a quick and rapid settlement," said Allen Blair, an attorney for the firefighters union whose three-day strike beginning Saturday brought 860 guardsmen to the city.

Blair and other representatives of Local 1784, International Association of Firefighters, met at city hall Wednesday with Henry Evans, the city's chief administrative officer, and other members of the city's bargaining team.

The negotiating session —. the first since last Thursday — was conducted in secret after a reporter for the city's afternoon newspaper, The Press-Scimitar, was ejected from the room.

At about the time the city and firemen's union resumed talks, the last of the National Guardsmen activated Saturday to augment non-striking firefighters left the city.

The city experienced more than 400 fires during the three-day strike, including 225 in the first 24 hours of the walkout. Mayor Wyeth Chandler and Police Director E. Winslow Chapman said most of the fires were the work of arsonists. Two striking firefighters were arrested Saturday night and charged with arson.

Firemen obeyed a court order Tuesday morning and returned to their stations at 7 a.m.

The firemen want a 50-cent-an-hour bonus for night and evening duty. Since the firemen work 24-hour shifts, that would amount to a raise of $986 per year. Firemen are now paid a base salary of $1,108.88 a month.

Chandler said during the strike that the city could not afford the $1.3 million the shift differential pay would cost. The city is offering a 6 percent pay raise to be followed by a $30-a-month boost next April and another 7.5 percent increase in October 1979.

While the firemen's negotiations went on, the Memphis Police Association resumed its deadlocked contract talks with the city. Union President David Baker said he was going back to the bargaining table with the authority to call a job action if talks did not go to suit the union. He said the job action could range from a work slowdown to a strike.

"I just hope the city has realized that in labor negotiations there has to be an effort to avoid an impasse," Baker said. "Without some flexibility, this same type of tragedy is likely to occur again and again."

The Police Association has refused to accept the city's standard wage offer which has been accepted by 11 other unions.

News Briefs

Steve Miers, 24, of Lamesa remained in critical condition Wednesday night in Lubbock Health Sciences Center Hospital following a one-car mishap which injured two other members of his family near Brownfield late Monday. Advice Sought In Deciding Future Of Public Lands

WASHINGTON (AP) — Persons interested in the nation's public lands are being asked to help decide the future of more than 62 million acres of undeveloped areas within the National Forest System.

A draft environmental statement containing an inventory and analysis of more than 2,000 areas for possible designation as wilderness, non-wilderness or for further planning has been prepared.

Agriculture Scretary Bob Bergland said the statement sets forth 10 alternatives for the land but does not propose any particular action. He said public response will be an important factor in making a final decision.

Pamphlets describing the national forest wilderness management program and review are available from the Forest Service, P. O. Box 2417, Washington, D.C., 20013.

Comments should be received by Oct. 1 and they should be sent to regional offices, which can also supply supplements containing information on specific local wilderness areas under discussion.

Federal Building, Missoula, Mont., 59807; Box 25127, Lakewood, Colo., 80225; Federal Building, 517 Gold Ave., SW, Albuquerque, N.M., 87102.

13-Year-Old Killed In Collision With Car

A 13-year-old boy was killed and his 13-year-old companion seriously injured late Tuesday when their bicycles collided with a car on a darkened portion of South University Avenue.

The car, driven by a 16-year-old, did not have its headlights turned on and the bikes had no lights, according to official reports.

Bobby Marquez of 2322 81st St. remained in critical condition Wednesday night at Methodist Hospital.

The driver of the auto was not injured.

The 11:30 p.m. mishap resulted in Lubbock's 24th traffic fatality of the year.

According to witnesses, the car was northbound in the 7700-block of University Avenue and the two cyclists were going southeast across the thoroughfare when the vehicles collided.

The Baigen youth, who was riding a small black bicycle, was knocked 141 feet, and his companion, on an orange 10-speed, was thrown 201 feet by the impact.

Witnesses said the victims were almost on a direct head-on course with the car. The impact reportedly occurred at the left front portion of the auto.

Police said the boys, each wearing a white T-shirt, were riding side-by-side.

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy, who pronounced the Baigen youth dead at the scene, has not yet made a ruling in the death.

Rosary for the Baigen youth will be recited at 8:30 p.m. today in W.W. Rix Chapel. Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Friday at St. Patrick's Catholic Church with the Rev. Steven Keogh officiating.

JOHNNY L. BAIGEN

Burial will be in Peaceful Gardens Memorial Park under direction of Rix Funeral Directors.

The Baigen youth was a Slaton native who had lived in Lubbock for the past eight years. He had completed the sixth grade at Hodges Elementary.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Baigen Jr.; a sister, Rosalinda of the home; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Paez of Lubbock and John Baigen Sr. of Slaton; and his great-grandfather, Emilio DeLeon of Slaton.

Stats Indicate Year's Crime May Pass '77

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Six months into 1978, Lubbock police department statistics indicate this year may match 1977 in terms of violent crime.

Police already have recorded 16 murders, almost half of the 33 slayings investigated by the department last year. Only two of the 1978 killings, however, are still unsolved.

Through June, 50 rapes have been reported to police, well over half of the 78 such incidents reported in 1977. Police have cleared 29 of this year's rape cases.

Robbery figures indicate that so far 122 hold-ups have been reported, with only 65 cleared by investigators. In 1977 a total of 282 robberies were reported to the police.

Of the 1978 robberies, 41 occurred in Lubbock streets or alleys, while business and residential areas recorded 23 each.

A total of $59,308 worth of property thus far has been taken in the heists.

Assault reports are somewhat behind last year's trend, with 503 being reported so far this year compared to the 1977 total of 1,021. Police list 208 of the incidents as simple assault, followed by 109 cases in which the assailant used a gun on his victim.

For the first half of the year, 1,777 burglaries have been reported to police, and only 313 cases have been cleared. In 1977, the total number of break-ins reached a record 4,412.

Most of this year's 565 burglaries occurred during the night and the victims were local home owners or renters. Residential burglaries during daylight hours rank second with 542 such cases.

Business burglaries occurring at night are third with 438. Police report a total of about $1.1 million worth of goods stolen from businesses during the first six months of this year.

Theft reports totaling 3,926 for 1978 are close behind with more than $1 million worth of goods lost to thieves.

Police have cleared 899 of 1978's theft cases and recovered almost $200,000 of the property.

The 15 arson reports listed for the year have resulted in $5,340 worth of damage to owners while 1,611 criminal mischief reports show a total damage estimate of $258,443.

29th Division Leader Gen. Sands Dead At 86

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Retired Maj. Gen. William Hamilton Sands Jr., who commanded the artillery of the 29th Infantry Division from the Normandy landing to the Elbe River in World War II, is dead at 86.

Sands, one of the few National Guard general officers to lead troops in combat, died Monday in Portsmouth Naval Hospital. He commanded the full 29th Division from the end of the war until he retired in 1954.

A native of Richmond, he had lived in Norfolk since 1917. He also practiced law for 50 years.

Sands began his military career shortly after passing the Virginia bar examination and starting his practice here, becoming an officer of the 80th Division in France in 1917 during World War I.

After World War I, he joined the Virginia National Guard as captain in command of the Norfolk Blues of the 111th Field Artillery.

By the start of World War II, he had risen to the rank of brigadier general in command of the 54th Field Artillery Brigade of the 29th Division.

He commanded the division's artillery in England, France and Germany, landed with the 29th at Omaha Beach on D-Day and fought with it for 238 days, until its link-up with Russian forces at the Elbe.

He commanded the 29th Division when it was reactivated after the war until his retirement, and oversaw its conversion from a wartime combat unit into the 29th Infantry Division of Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia.

He is survived only by nieces and cousins.

A funeral service with full military hoors will be held at 9 a.m. Friday in Arlington National Cemetery.

New U.N. Official Said To Be Soviet KGB Agent

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said Wednesday he is "looking very carefully" into allegations that a newly appointed U.N. personnel executive in Geneva is a member of the KGB, the Soviet secret police.

Geli A. Dneprovski is to become U.N. personnel chief in Geneva on July 15.

Waldheim said the newspaper reports identifying Dneprovski as a "senior KGB officer" have created a "very delicate" situation. "It has to be clarified in all its aspects before a decision is taken formalizing the appointment," Waldheim told a news conference.

The secretary general said it is against U.N. regulations for its employees to take instructions from their governments.

"If there is proof (that this code has been violated), adequate measures will be taken ... for the simple reason that international civil servants have to be loyal to the United Nations and nobody else," Waldheim said.

However, he said the United Nations might not have the necessary machinery to thoroughly investigate the allegations.

"In all such cases, it is extremely difficult to get all the information you need," he said.

The United Nations, he said, has contacted the "governments concerned" — the Soviet Union, the United States and Britain. It also has asked Dneprovski to respond to the allegations, Waldheim said.

He said Britain was contacted because it granted political asylum to the purported source of the allegations, Vladimir Rezun, a third secretary of the Soviet mission in Geneva who defected 10 days ago. He was a captain in the Soviet military intelligence, the GRU.

The London Daily Telegraph said Rezun's cross-over was a major coup for British counterintelligence agents. Rezun, because of his GRU rank, "was allowed access to the most sensitive files" and was permitted to live outside the heavily guarded Soviet diplomatic compound in Geneva, the newspaper said.

Rezun's allegations have been widely reported in the Swiss press. Blick, Switzerland's top-circulation newspaper claimed in a front page banner headline that "Soviet spies (in Geneva are) trembling — Waldheim plans a clean-up."

The Dneprovski nomination also was discussed at the Swiss Cabinet meeting Wednesday and is expected to come up during an official visit Waldheim is scheduled to make Thursday and Friday to the Swiss government in Bern.

The Swiss Justice Ministry, in an unusual move, has announced that Dneprovski's application for an entry visa will be examined closely, and a decision is expected within a few days. Dneprovski, who has held U.N. posts for more than 12 years, is expected July 10.

Soviet, Pole Land Safely After Hook-Up In Space

MOSCOW (AP) — Poland's first man in space returned to earth with his Soviet flight commander Wednesday, ending the second manned flight that is bringing Soviet bloc countries into Russia's expanding space program.

An East German is scheduled to join the next flight in the Soviet Intercosmos program at the end of this year.

Tass reported that Miroslaw Hermaszewski, a 37-year-old Polish air force major, and the Soviet commander, Pyotry Klimuk, soft-landed at a designated location about 200 miles west of Tselinograd, in Kazakhstan.

"The cosmonauts feel well," Tass said.

The Soviet news agency said the international space team undocked their Soyuz 30 capsule, leaving two other cosmonauts aboard the orbiting space station Salyut 6, and descended to earth.

"We are saying goodbye today to our lads. The Caucasuses (code name for Klimuk and Hermaszewski) have finished their work and now they are at the threshhold of our home," said one Salyut 6 cosmonaut to the departing men, a message relayed on Soviet television.

Tass said the two men left "after successfully completing planned research studies and experiments on board the orbital reasearch complex."

Hermaszewski and Klimuk had been aboard Salyut 6 since June 28, along with Soviet cosmonauts Vladimir Kovalenok and Alexander Ivanchenkov.

The news agency praised the Polish cosmonaut for displaying "high professional mastery by efficiently cooperating both with his commander and members of the mixed crew."

He was the second man in space who was not an American or a Soviet. A Czechoslovak went up before him.

Kovalenok and Ivanchenkov remained aboard the space station. There was no indication how soon they would return to earth.

It was aboard Salyut 6 that a previous pair of Soviet cosmonauts, Yuri Romanenko and Georgy Grechko, set a world space endurance record of 96 days and 10 hours, breaking the previous 84-day record set by four U.S. astronauts.

The Polish-Soviet team conducted experiments on the growth of semi-conductor crystals under weightless conditions, space psychology and various medical tests. The cosmonauts also photographed terrestrial and ocean zones, Tass said.

Western sources have said the bloc countries are being joined with the program to help pay for the Soviet space program.

College Scholarship Awards Increased

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (UPI) — Phillips Petroleum has increased its college scholarship awards for children of employees to $1,000 a year, up from $600.

The awards go to 66 high school seniors selected as 1978 winners, and to current scholarship holders entering sophomore, junior and senior years in the fall.

Since establishing the fund in 1939, Phillips has awarded 1,000 scholarships.

U.S. Aide To Visit Afghans

WASHINGTON (AP)— The Carter administration will have its first high-level contact with the new, pro-Soviet government in Afghanistan when Under Secretary of State David Newsom visits that country in the next few days.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Newsom will visit Afghanistan and four other countries in the area beginning this Friday.

Newsom, a former ambassador to the Philippines who assumed his new post several weeks ago, also will visit Iran, Pakistan, India and Saudi Arabia.

The mission will permit Newsom to establish contact with senior officials in each country and to acquaint himself with problems of the region. He undertook a similar mission to South America last month.

The chairman of Afghanistan's new revolutionary council, Noor Mohammed Taraki, is a communist but has said his country hopes to retain friendship with the United States and all other countries.

Canada Plans To Ask Soviet Pay For Hunt

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Canada announced Wednesday that it will ask the Soviet Union to pay more than $12 million as the cost of recovering radioactive debris from a Soviet nuclear satellite that fell apart Jan. 24 over northern Canada.

Erik B. Wang, a Canadian space expert, told the U.N. Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space that Canada will also submit to Moscow a claim for damage caused by the contamination of Canadian territory by radioactive parts of the Russian satellite.

The Soviet Union is expected to contest the claim.

Since the spy satellite fell from orbit, Canadian and U.S. scientific teams have been searching an area in northern Saskatchewan and Alberta for radioactive fragments. Wang reported that the teams have so far discovered some 220 pounds of debris including two large pieces, "which would be lethal after a few hours of close contact."

The components recovered ranged in magnitude from 44 pounds down to particles the size of peppercorns and even smaller — some so small they are invisible to the naked eye, he said.

He warned that the small pieces have high radioactivity and "can impart a significant radioactive dose if inadvertently consumed by man." For this reason, he said, the Canadian government is launching the second phase of the search operation called "Operation Morning Light."

Many of the surveys previously carried out over snow-covered areas will be repeated now that the snow has melted, Wang said, adding that particular attention will be paid to inhabited areas, roads and railway lines.

Social Security Files' Safeguards Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Safeguards for the Social Security Administration's files on millions of Americans should be tightened to prevent loss, destruction, abuse or misuse, a congressional report said Wednesday.

The General Accounting Office, Congress' investigating agency, expressed apprehension that security weaknesses could enable unauthorized persons to gain access to the records, kept by the federal government.

The Social Security Administration, which stores files on more than 170 million Americans, is one of the largest repositories of personal information.

Depending on the program, an individual file may contain information on a person's earnings, real estate holdings, marital status, children and medical history, including drug and alcohol use.

The GAO report on laxness in security concurs with an internal investigation undertaken by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, last year.

According to the GAO, officials at the Social Security Administration have begun some tightening of security procedures and are testing others to try to solve potential problem areas.

The GAO said it found four design and management problems that led to weaknesses in safeguarding beneficiary records stored in the computer system that links more than 1,300 Social Security Administration offices.

Those weaknesses include:

— The computer network was set up so that beneficiary files can be created as well as queried from most of the 3,700-plus terminals in a variety of federal, state and private insurance offices.

— For the most part, individual employees can gain access to the data in the files and even create new files without being required by the computer to identify themselves.

For example, the GAO said, one employee who had access to the computer was selling Social Security cards to illegal aliens and others who desired a new identity.

The employee would summon up the names and Social Security numbers of people who had died and type that information on Social Security cards he had stolen from the office, said the GAO.

In another case, the GAO reported, a Social Security employee in a district office netted about $20,000 in fraudulent claims by redirecting to himself payments for a beneficiary who had died. In both instances, the employees were apprehended.

— The GAO said the system used by the Social Security Administration to lock its computer terminals often doesn't work properly. These terminals could be used by unauthorized persons during non-working hours, said the GAO.

— In many offices, the GAO said, there is unlimited and unrestricted access to computer terminals by employees.

Califano To Go Ahead With Disputed Tax Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., told 54 senators Wednesday he is sticking to his plan to make state and local governments pay Social Security taxes to the federal government more promptly.

The states and localities have raised a howl, echoed by their senators, that they will lose upwards of $200 million a year in interest they now earn by investing the payroll taxes in short-term accounts before turning them over to the federal government each quarter.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., and 53 other senators wrote Califano last month that his proposal to make states turn the money over to Washington monthly would have "a severe adverse effect upon virtually all state and local governments throughout the nation."

Califano wrote back that the central issue was whether the states and localities should be able to keep using the taxes to defray their general costs, "or should they be used for their designated purpose: to finance the Social Security program?"

Califano expressed doubt about the senators' claim that paying monthly would substantially increase the administrative costs for the states and localities, or that it would detract from their traditionally high rate of accuracy in reporting earnings.

Even paying monthly "the states and their political subdivisions could still earn a minimum of $50 million annually from prudent, short-term investment of the withheld taxes," Califano said.

Califano and the Social Security Administration proposed the change last March 30. The regulation is not yet final and would not take effect before 1980 at the earliest.

The senators, noting that bills have been introduced in both houses to preempt the proposed rule, asked Califano to withdraw it "until such time as the legislative process has run its course."

Califano noted that private employers must deposit Social Security taxes weekly, bi-weekly or monthly, depending on the size of their payroll. "All employers, state and local governments included, meet these same deposit requirements for income taxes," he said.

Although no federal workers pay into Social Security, most other government workers do. Nine million of the 12 million state and local workers are covered by Social Security and, with their employers, they will pay an estimated $11.6 billion into the trust funds this year.

Carter Confers On Campaigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter took advantage Wednesday of the first sunny weather after a rainy Fourth of July holiday weekend to play tennis at Camp David, his spokesman said.

The president, who flew to the mountaintop retreat in northern Maryland Friday afternoon for a 10-day vacation, has "also spent a fair amount of time on the telephone," White House press secretary Jody Powell said at the daily White House news briefing.

The spokesman said Powell talked with various Democratic candidates around the country, both incumbents and challengers, holding "very informal chats about how the races are going."

Powell said the president also spoke by telephone with Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd, who is traveling in Belgium and Spain, about international and domestic issues.

Powell said the president also had written material to help him prepare for his trip to Germany at the end of next week.

The president plans to return from Camp David on Sunday.

He flew by helicopter to the White House Tuesday evening to confer with Vice President Walter F. Mondale, just back from the Middle East, and to watch the display of Independence Day fireworks near the Washington Monument. He returned to the camp Tuesday evening.

School Houses Scientists

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — An exclusive college prep school here is the summer home for about 40 of the nation's top scientists who are spending about six weeks on Defense Department projects.

Dr. Edward Freeman, a Princeton University physicist, said the Bishop's Schools campus has been used for the studies since 1973. "It's known as the JASON Group," Freeman said. He said that much of the work done at Bishop's involves peaceful projects.

Soviet Journalists Reviewed By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House called Soviet journalists to a meeting Wednesday to review their accreditation in an apparent response to the slander charges filed against two U.S. reporters in Moscow.

White House press secretary Jody Powell left open the possibility of recalling the credentials of Soviet correspondents based in the United States, stating that decisions on such moves would be made after current accreditations are reviewed. But he said none was lifted at the meeting.

One of Powell's deputies, Rex Granum, said: "We thought it was an appropriate time that these correspondents be called in to review the rights, privileges and responsibilities of holding White House accreditation."

First Responses

The meeting in the Old Executive Office Building next door to the White House and a similar State Department session last Friday were the first public responses by the administration to the slander charges filed against a New York Times and a Baltimore Sun correspondent in Moscow last month.

It was the first such session at the White House in at least 16 years. Six reporters were summoned and four showed up. A second such session for other Washington-based Soviet reporters was scheduled.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance; Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, and other senior administration officials met Monday at the White House to review the Moscow situation.

Message To Moscow

One official, who asked not to be identified by name, said a message had already been sent to Moscow to convey "our very serious view" of what the Moscow court charges against the reporters, Craig Whitney of the Times and Harold Piper of the Sun, mean to U.S.-Soviet press and commercial relations.

Neither Granum nor Walt Wurfel, the deputy White House press secretary who conducted the approximately 30-minute conference, would draw any connection between the Moscow case and Wednesday's meeting.

Powell denied at the daily White House news briefing that the meeting was called to apply pressure to the Soviet Union.

Granum and Wurfel also refused to say whether the Soviet reporters were told their credentials, needed to cover presidential news conferences and briefings in the White House press room, might be lifted.

"You may wish to draw your own conclusions," Granum said.

Wurfel offered no comment when asked whether the president was involved in approving the meeting, whether the reporters were told their credentials were under review or whether loss of credentials was implicit in the meeting.

There was also no comment from officials asked whether the meeting would have taken place if Whitney and Piper had not been charged in Moscow.

Wurfel conducted the meeting because he is in charge of issuing White House press credentials.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said "it is safe to assume" Carter was aware of the meeting.

The press secretary said the session involved two Tass reporters, one from Pravda and one from Izvestia.

He said the White House passes of three of the reporters in the meeting expire this year, with one of them up for renewal this month.

Egypt's Peace Plan Gets Cool Reception

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt unveiled a new six-point Mideast peace plan Wednesday calling for Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and the West Bank of the Jordan River, including East Jerusalem. But the main elements of the plan already have been rejected by Israel and Egyptian diplomats say they have little hope for a breakthrough.

Israel radio called the plan "rigid and reflecting no change" in President Anwar Sadat's stand.

Israeli government officials withheld immediate comment on the proposal, which also stipulates Israel must abandon Jewish settlements built in the occupied territory. A decision on whether to send Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan to London for a meeting with Egyptian and American officials later this month to discuss the plan probably will not be made until Sunday's Israeli cabinet meeting.

Israel has said it will not withdraw from the occupied territories and will not give up any of the settlements there. Even the opposition Labor Party in Israel has said it would be willing to withdraw only from certain areas of the West Bank.

The Egyptian plan, prepared at the urging of the United States, calls for a five-year transitional period during which the occupied territories will be administered by "freely elected" representatives of the Palestinian people under the supervision of Jordan on the West Bank and Egypt in Gaza. The future of the 1.1 million Palestinians will be decided after the transition period.

The plan calls for talks involving Egypt, Jordan, Israel and "the representatives of the Palestinian people" with the participation of the United Nations to discuss details of the transitional government, a timetable for Israeli withdrawal, mutual security arrangements, and any other issues all sides can agree to discuss.

It suggests that only after agreement is reached on all these issues would the Israelis be expected to begin a U.N.-supervised pullout from the territories captured in the 1967 Mideast war. The present military government would be dismantled at the beginning of the transition period.

Any security arrangements would be guaranteed by Egypt and Jordan "and will continue to be respected in the West Bank and Gaza." It appeared this clause was meant to allay Israeli fears of a vengeful Palestinian entity from which terrorists would be free to attack the Jewish state.

No reference was made to the Palestine Liberation Organization, with which Israel refuses to negotiate, and it was unclear who the Palestinian representatives would be. It also left unanswered the question of compensation for Palestinian refugees and how immigration would be handled.

President Sadat is scheduled to meet Israeli opposition leader Shimon Peres this weekend and the plan is certain to be discussed. Egyptian diplomats made it clear one objective of their current tactics is to drive a wedge between Prime Minister Menachem Begin and his opponents at home.

"We hope this will bring pressure to bear on the Israeli government, but I have little hope of any breakthrough in London," said one Egyptian source who declined to be identified.

The Israeli plan put forward by Prime Minister Menachem Begin in December offers the Palestinians limited self-rule but calls for Israeli military presence.

Rape Case Bonds Total $350,000

bathtub to try to lock the bathroom door, but indicated she was too late.

The assailant reportedly knocked the woman back into the bathtub, then grabbed her hair.

According to reports, the man forced the complainant into a bedroom and made her lie facedown on the bed. The woman told officers that several pairs of panty hose were drying in the bedroom.

She said the man tied her hands behind her back with one pair of panty hose, then tied two other of the garments around her face to prevent her from seeing.

The woman said the man then rolled her over on her back and began fondling her. The woman said that she screamed and that the man slapped her, warning her to be quiet.

The woman said the man then rolled her back onto her stomach and began anal intercourse. According to the complainant, the attacker told her that with anal intercourse she did not have to worry about venereal disease.

After the attack, the complainant said, the intruder forced her into a living room closet and warned her not to call police.

Jackson was charged with burglary of a habitation in connection with a July 18, 1977, incident in which another 22-year-old apartment resident reportedly was terrorized.

The woman in that case said she awoke about 11:20 a.m. to find a man in her apartment. The man reportedly forced her to lie facedown on her bed and close her eyes. The woman said that she heard the sound of a dresser drawer opening, and that the man returned to place a white cloth over her eyes.

The man reportedly ordered the woman to remove her night clothes, but the victim reportedly refused, then jumped up from the bed.

At that point, the woman told police, the man stuck what she believed was a knife into her ribs and removed her nightgown.

Suspect Flees

However, reports indicate, the woman bolted from the room, pulled the front door open and began screaming. The man reportedly fled.

Jackson was arrested in connection with that case after police talked to several witnesses who a saw a suspect leaving the area on a motorcycle.

The attempted rape indictment was returned against Jackson as a result of an incident which occurred about a month later, on Aug. 22, 1977.

In that incident, Jackson is accused of trying to rape a high school girl in an open field, after happening upon the 16-year-old girl and a male companion.

Officer Jerome Chaney reported that he went to investigate after being informed there was a motorcycle in the open field, near the 7500-block of Flint Avenue and behind the Southpark Apartments, about 11:30 p.m.

The policeman said a young man came running up and told him that the man on the motorcycle had just attempted to rape his girlfriend.

The officer said he pursued the motorcycle rider, who was arrested after falling off his vehicle in a muddy area.

The complainant and her friend both gave statements to police, in which they said the man on the motorcycle had driven up behind where they were parked and begun making insulting remarks.

The complainant said that she eventually tried to start the car, but that the man jumped in and grabbed the keys.

She said she and her friend then struggled with the man, who allegedly caught hold of one of her pants legs. She said the pants were torn apart.

According to the girl's statement, the man never really touched her.

The complainant said she and her friend kept asking for the car keys, and that the police officer showed up during the impasse.

Syria Boosts Attack On East Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria stepped up its attack Wednesday on Lebanese rightist militia strongholds in Christian East Beirut despite a Lebanese government appeal for a truce.

Rightist Christian militiamen held their ground against a withering barrage of Syrian rocket, artillery, mortar and machine gun fire, said to be the heaviest onslaught in four days of fighting in the crowded Christian residential district.

Syrian gunners escalated their attack two hours after Fuad Butros, Lebanon's foreign and defense minister, returned from the Syrian capital of Damascus.

Appeals To Syrians

Butros had appealed — apparently unsuccessfully — to the Syrians to halt firing by their troops, who make up the bulk of the Arab peacekeeping force charged with maintaining order in Lebanon since quelling the civil war there in November, 1976.

The third cease-fire of the current conflict collapsed Tuesday afternoon after 17 hours. Gunfire persisted through the night, slacked off during the day Wednesday and reached a new peak after nightfall.

Witnesses said the entire capital shook under the latest shelling.

Trucks Line Road

Eyewitnesses reported convoys of trucks moving at daylight into Beirut from Sidon, the provincial capital 25 miles south of Beirut. A string of 44 Syrian trucks loaded with ammunition also lined the road from the airport.

An indication of the emotions lingering since the 1975-76 civil war is found in the undisguised glee the predominantly Moslem residents of west Beirut show at seeing the Christian quarter leveled.

Residents of high-rise apartments in the western sector were seen on their roofs during the night, applauding each time a Syrian shell exploded in a flash across the city.

The latest casualty count issued by Beirut police indicated 167 residents of east Beirut were killed. Some 579 persons, mostly civilians, have been wounded since the clash erupted Saturday.

"The Phalangists and National Liberals are criminal gangs out to usurp power and partition Lebanon into sectarian states," stormed the state radio in Damascus.

"Their state will be allied with Israel to imperil Syria's western flank. That's why they are provoking Syrian forces in the Arab peacekeeping army, but these forces represent the legitimate authority in Lebanon as well as the genuine will of the Lebanese people," Damascus Radio asserted.

The 30,000 Syrian force in Lebanon is the core of the Arab League's peacekeeping force policing the armistice since the civil war ended.

The Syrians cooperated with the Christian rightists in the civil war to fend off an alliance of Palestianians and Moslem leftists. But in-fighting among the Christians and their cooperation with Israel in the south have caused relations between Syria and some Christian factions to deteriorate.

Rain, Hail Dumped By Area Storm

the upper 90s. The low tonight will be in the mid-70s, and Friday's high will reach near 100 degrees.

The storms that held Portales at bay for almost two hours began brewing in the early afternoon. By 6 p.m., the city police department had logged reports of 10 to 14 tornadoes, some of which may have been duplicates, the police chief said.

Heavy hail littered the ground about 10 miles west of Portales on U.S. 70, Brown said.

Although the turbulence lasted only from 4:10 to 5:50 p.m., "it seemed a lot longer," Brown said.

"Could Have Been Nasty"

"It looks like we just lucked out (with the tornadoes)," he continued. "It could have been nasty, but it wasn't. It looks like they (tornadoes) just bounced around."

Clovis was dampened by about .01 of an inch of rain and pelted by pea-sized hail during the afternoon, but the storm moved north of the city before spewing out additional precipitation.

By 9:30 p.m., clouds had started to break up over eastern New Mexico, and no additional precipitation was expected by the National Weather Service.

However, erratic storms continued to churn over the Panhandle and to drift southward into the South Plains counties.

The line that had originated around Portales and stretched eastward across the state line to Muleshoe kept expanding, eventually extending from between Levelland and Tulia north to Pampa.

For most of the evening, seething storms menaced all of Bailey County and the northern part of Cochran County. Despite the threat of a deluge, however, Muleshoe reported less than .25 of an inch of rain accompanied by marble-sized hail.

Electric Service Decision Awaited

annexed land be re-opened, and asked Shaver not to rule on the injunction pending the outcome of the PUC case.

However, Shaver refused to grant the motion Wednesday, but said he would consider it before making a final ruling on the injunction.

Johnson said the co-op had no objection to LP&L furnishing power for municipal facilities such as fire stations and street lights, but said LP&L did not plan to stop there.

Co-op general manager W.G. Newton testified LP&L had already begun to install underground lines which would enable the utility to provide electricity to homes in the annexed area.

The question of whether LP&L has the authority to serve homes there became obscured Wednesday as attorneys attempted to prove which utility would suffer the greatest hardship from Shaver's possible rulings.

Double Expense Seen

Two systems serving the area would mean "double the expense," Newton said, because each utility would have to be able to serve all the needs of the area.

He said the co-op would suffer "irreparable damage' if Shaver rejected the injunction request in the form of "loss of revenues and added expense of operations due to the complicity of construction beyond the service needs."

Competition brings the need to solicit customers from the other utility, Newton said, which further reduces revenues.

The higher costs would translate into a "higher cost of service" in the area, Newton said. Despite "adverse conditions and higher operating expense," Newton said the co-op sells electricity for 10 percent less on the average than LP&L.

"We've been able to do that because there is no duplication of service, no solicitors and no unneeded plant facilities," he said.

If the co-op were forced to pull out of the annexed area, it would mean increased costs in the rest of South Plains' service area, Newton said.

Senter argued the city's financial position might be adversely affected if Shaver ruled in favor of the co-op, "especially if they need to issue financial bonds at a later date," Senter said.

City Sells Bonds

Bill Woods, city director of electric utilities, testified the city already had sold about $18 million in bonds to serve the city's growing populace, including those who will eventually live in the annexed territory.

He said it was "possible" the city might be unable to pay off those bonds if not permitted to serve the new area.

Woods testified LP&L has had a competitor since it began providing electric service in the early 1900's, and said the competitive situation is "good."

"good."

He explained LP&L had begun to bury cable to serve homes in the area because the cost would have increased with a delay.

The co-op's request for an injunction is similar to its effort last year to enjoin LP &L from extending service lines into the anneeed area.

Eventually the PUC granted both LP &L and the co-op permission to serve the area, but a district court judge later withdrew the city's certification because it did not formally apply for the right.

A Southwestern Public Service application to serve the annexed property was denied by the PUC.

Airlines Set Record On Fourth Weekend

NEW YORK (AP) — The Fourth was certainly glorious for the nation's airlines, who had their busiest weekend ever over the July 4 holiday and say they're on the way to a record year.

More than 3 million persons flew U.S. airlines over the weekend, and the industry expects traffic for the year to exceed 265 million passengers — a healthy jump over 1977's 240 million air travelers.

"It appears that America's sudden fling at air travel could be turning into a lengthy phenomenon," said Russell L. Ray, senior vice president for marketing at Eastern Airlines. "It's already lasted four solid months and from our advance bookings it should continue through the summer."

Industry officials attribute the boom to cheap discount fares — which were utilized by over 40 percent of the past weekend's passengers — and the health of the economy.

"You've got a combination of things," said Bill Berry, a spokesman for Delta Airlines. "One, of course, is that the economy has maintained a very positive level, so therefore your business traffic is quite heavy and your discretionary travel is heavy. And you've got to give a lot of credit to discount fares."

"The key factor is the availability of discount fares," said Dan Henkin of the Air Transport Association. He also cited the length of the weekend and generally good weather thoughout the country as contributing to the holiday boom.

Airline officials say, however, that all kinds of fares, not just discounts, are popular. "Business traffic and normal fares have shown growth too, so it's a balance," said Eastern spokesman Robert V. Christian.

Whatever the reason, air travel has climbed so far up that industry observers have been continually raising their estimates for traffic growth in 1978. Originally projected at 6 percent, the growth projection has since been revised upward to 12 percent. And there's no end in sight.

The numbers are impressive. Eastern reported the heaviest day in its 50-year history Friday, carrying more than 136,000 passengers. That got the second half of the year off to a start that indicated it would do better than the first half — when Eastern's traffic rose 17.4 percent from a year ago.

Lubbock High Boundary Changes Axed court-ordered school integration plan.

While the Lubbock High proposal would enhance integration, submitting it to the court nevertheless would take time — and the school board might not get an answer before the start of classes in August.

Waters said school trustees "have our hands full as it is. There are an awful lot of things do to between now and the start of school — such as the school district budget. I don't think it is possible for us to get to the Lubbock High enrollment issue before August."

The issue is a delicate one, he said.

"Lubbock High has great traditions and a great facility. Boosting the enrollment would definitely enhance the school," Waters said.

"At the same time, however, the four other high schools are also very independent and proud, with their own traditions."

According to school district projections, Lubbock High this year will have a peak enrollment of 1,363 students. That compares with 2,020 students at Monterey and 1,938 students at Coronado (the city's other AAAA schools); and 1,262 students at Estacado and 905 at Dunbar.

Ex-Manson Follower Convicted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leslie Van Houten, the high school homecoming princess who became a disciple of mass murderer Charles Manson, was found guilty again Wednesday of first degree murder and conspiracy in the 1969 Tate-LaBianca killings.

It was the third time that the 28-year-old Miss Van Houten had been tried for the shocking murders.

One of her trials ended in a hung jury last year. But Wednesday's conviction affirmed the original jury verdict in 1971 which convicted her along with Manson and two other women.

The 1971 verdict was overturned by an appeals court which ruled Miss Van Houten had been denied adequate legal representation after her lawyer, Ronald Hughes, died on a camping trip during the trial.

The slender, dark-haired Miss Van Houten hung her head and clutched the sides of her chair when the verdict of guilty of first degree murder in the slayings of Leno and Rosemary LaBianca was read.

She also was found guilty of conspiracy in the killings of actress Sharon Tate and four others — although she was not present at those murders.

Superior Court Judge Gordon Ringer immediately ordered her returned to prison and set sentencing for July 21. Ringer revoked the $200,000 bail that permitted her to be free during the trial.

Her attorney, Maxwell Keith, met with her in a holding cell just after the verdict was announced. "She was upset, of course," Keith told reporters. "... But she was brave as usual."

Keith said he hoped Miss Van Houten would soon be released from prison. He said she would be eligible for parole after seven years, and she has already served eight years behind bars.

Keith said her months of recent freedom proved she could live in the community and cause no danger.

However, in a news conference outside court, District Attorney John Van de Kamp indicated his office would oppose immediate parole.

Keith had sought to convince jurors that Miss Van Houten was a drug-dazed puppet manipulated by Manson when she went along on a killing spree Aug. 10, 1969. Keith contended that Miss Van Houten did not have the capacity to premeditate murder.

Miss Van Houten, who had been a homecoming princess in the Los Angeles suburb of Arcadia, was a teen-ager with a troubled past when she joined Manson's roving clan. She had experimented with drugs, had an abortion and had run away from home.

Manson, she would say later, offered her a life free from decisions. He told her and other followers what to do — including giving them orders to commit murder.

On Aug. 10, 1969, after a Manson foray the night before had ended the lives of Miss Tate and her friends, Miss Van Houten recalled being ordered by Manson to go on a search for murder victims.

The LaBiancas were chosen at random, and she went with the others into the house where Manson had left the middle-aged couple tied up.

She recalled other Manson henchmen stabbing the screaming LaBiancas and urging her to join in the killing. Miss Van Houten said she eventually plunged a knife repeatedly into Mrs. LaBianca's body, but she believed the woman was already dead.

In 1970, Manson, Miss Van Houten, Patricia Krenwinkel and Susan Denise Atkins were tried, convicted and sentenced to death. Their sentences were commuted to life in prison when the U.S. Supreme Court outlawed the death penalty.

Survey Shows Food Prices Still Rising

By LOUIS COOK
Associated Press Writer

Summer barbecues are no bargain this year. An Associated Press marketbasket survey shows meat prices rose again last month, helping boost grocery bills to a level almost six percent higher than at the start of 1978.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and non-food items and checked prices at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month, although one item — chocolate chip cookies — had to be dropped from the list, late last year, when the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

Among the highlights of the latest survey:

—The marketbasket bill increased during June at the checklist store in eight cities and decreased in five. On an overall basis, the bill was about a third of a percent higher at the start of July than it was a month earlier. This compared with a half a percent increase during May.

—Hamburgers went up at the checklist store in eight cities during June; pork chops went up in nine cities; and frankfurters rose in five cities. The average price of a pound of chopped chuck at the checklist stores has risen from $1.03 to $1.39 since Jan. 1, an increase of about 35 percent.

—Consumers looking for alternative sources of protein were in luck. Eggs continued to decline, dropping in price at the checklist store in eight cities during June. On the average, the price of a dozen, medium, Grade-A white eggs was just over 62 cents at the start of July, down 18 percent from the 76-cents-a-dozen figure on Jan. 1.

—The marketbasket bill was up in every city during the first half of 1978, rising an average of 5.6 percent. The marketbasket bill this July 1 was only four-tenths of a percent higher than it was a year earlier, but the small size of the increase was due mainly to the fact that coffee prices dropped sharply after reaching a peak in June 1977. When coffee was removed from the totals, the AP survey showed the average marketbasket bill is 5.7 percent higher today than it was a year ago.

The outlook for the rest of 1978 is mixed. The Agriculture Department, predicting an increase of eight to 10 percent in food prices alone this year, says the worst is over. That does not mean sharp declines, however.

Cattle producers, who cut the size of their herds when beef prices were low, did not start to rebuild until late last year and it will take some time for supplies to increase again. Supplies remain relatively tight in relation to demand — a ratio that "should preclude any substantial declines ... for the balance of the year," according to Howard W. Hjort, chief economist for the USDA.

The coffee picture is brighter. Brazil recently announced it was cutting its export price — from $1.60 to $1.50 for unroasted beans — and wholesale and retail prices are expected to follow.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied, depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes were used when available. If the requested size and brand was not available on March 1, 1973, a comparable substitute was selected. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the overall total.

The AP did not attempt to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and six percent in another.

The USDA marketbasket issued each month is based on a complex set of statistics. It includes 65 retail items of U.S. farm-produced foods in amounts that theoretically could supply a household of 3.2 persons for one year. The department, which draws on information from 1,500 supermarkets in compiling its report, says the figures do not correspond to actual family food spending and are used mainly to illustrate changes in costs.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Ga., Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, Salt Lake City and Seattle.

ALBUQUERQUE: The total for 13 available items went from $15.14 to $15.32, up 1.2 percent. Chopped chuck, pork chops, fabric softener, detergent and peanut butter went up. Orange juice, tomato sauce and eggs went down. Frankfurters were not available at the checklist store on the latest survey date and the other items were unchanged.

ATLANTA: The 14-item total went from $16.57 o $16.50, down four-tenths of a percent. Chopped chuck and pork chops went up; coffee, eggs and detergent declined; the other items stayed the same.

BOSTON: The 14-item total went from $16.87 to $16.86, down less than a tenth of a percent. Increases in the price of chopped chuck, eggs, butter and peanut butter were offset by declines in the cost of pork chops and frankfurters. The other items were unchanged.

CHICAGO: The total for 12 available items went from $12.70 to $12.51, down 1.5 percent. The drop came despite a sharp boost in the price of eggs, which had been on sale at 43 cents a dozen at the start of June and were back up to 65 cents in the latest survey. Milk and frankfurters also increased; chopped chuck, pork chops, paper towels and detergent decreased. Neither coffee nor fabric softener was available at the checklist store in the requested size and brand. Other items stayed the same.

DALLAS: The 14-item total went from $16.48 to $15.76, down 4.4 percent, largely because of a sale on coffee — $2.49 a pound compared to a June 1 price of $2.99. Chopped chuck, paper towels, sugar, eggs, and frankfurters also declined; pork chops, peanut butter, detergent and milk went up; the other four items were unchanged.

DETROIT: The total for 13 available items went from $15.34 to $15.62, up 1.8 percent. Pork chops, chopped chuck and frankfurters went up; eggs went down; the requested size and brand of orange juice was unavailable at the checklist store; other items were unchanged.

LOS ANGELES: The 14-item total went from $15.18 to $15.71, up 3.5 percent. Paper towels, chopped chuck, fabric softener, frankfurters, eggs, pork chops and milk all went up; orange juice and detergent went down; everything else stayed he same.

MIAMI: The 14-item total went from $16.69 to $16.75, up four-tenths of a percent because of an increase in the price of pork chops — the only item to increase. Butter, orange juice and frankfurters decreased; everything else was unchanged.

NEW YORK: The total for 12 available items went from $18.04 to $18.13, up half a percent. Paper towels, pork chops, peanut butter and milk went up; coffee and frankfurters went down; the requested size of fabric softener and eggs were unavailable at the checklist store; other items stayed the same.

PHILADELPHIA: The 14-item total went from $17.29 to $17.50, up 1.2 percent. Coffee, frankfurters, peanut butter and milk went up; tomato sauce, chopped chuck and eggs went down; everything else was unchanged.

PROVIDENCE: The 14-item total went from $16.77 to $16.31, down 2.7 percent. Milk, chopped chuck and sugar went up; tomato sauce, frankfurters, butter and eggs went down; other items stayed the same.

SALT LAKE CITY: The 14-item total went from $16.69 to $17.25, up 3.4 percent. Paper towels, chopped chuck, peanut butter, pork chops, tomato sauce, milk and frankfurters increased; eggs, detergent and sugar decreased; butter, orange juice, coffee and fabric softener stayed the same.

SEATTLE: The 14-item total went from $15.75 to $15.91, up 1 percent. Chopped chuck, peanut butter, pork chops and detergent went up; orange juice, butter, eggs, tomato sauce and sugar went down; other items were unchanged.

Cautious Consumers Saving Their Money

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumers, cautious in the face of fast rising prices in such essentials as groceries, are saving more and spending less, a business research group reported Wednesday.

Retail sales during the first half of the year were up about seven percent from the level a year earlier, but inflation accounted for about six percent of that, according to Fabian Linden, consumer economist for The Conference Board, a business research group.

At the same time, the percentage of total income consumers put in savings has been running close to the traditional level of six percent, Linden reported. That was up sharply from a 4.7 percent savings rate in the first six months of last year.

He points to rising food prices as a culprit with both real and psychological repercussions on the family budget. Gross sales at supermarkets rose about nine percent during the first six months of this year but nearly all of that was due to higher prices, Linden found.

"Consumers are particularly sensitive to rising prices, especially when they are encountered in the supermarket, where they are most readily perceived and where they affect an essential item in the family budget," Linden wrote in a report for the business group's monthly publication, "Across the Board."

Sales and savings trends for the balance of the year will depend largely on the extent to which inflation can be restrained, he predicted.

Linden rejects a theory that rapidly rising inflation acts to spur purchases by convincing people to buy now to avoid price increases later.

"In real life only a small fraction of families behave that way. The vast majority experience an erosion of real income as prices escalate ... (they) tend to reduce spending and increase savings as a means of assuring their future ability to secure everyday necessities and meet fixed financial commitments," he wrote.

In other catagories, after adjusting for inflation, the study found retail sales at restaurants were stagnant, and sales of automobiles, apparel and home furnishings declined at specialty stores in the first six months of this year.

However, department stores had sales about 12 percent higher than in the first half of last year, and much of that due to increased volume, not because of price inflation, the report said.

Since about three-fifths of department store sales are from apparel and home furnishings, some of their increased business was drawn away from specialty shops. Linden suggests that the severe winter may have provided a bonus to department stores by encouraging one-stop shopping.

Georgia Corn Bought By Taiwan

ATLANTA (AP) — A group of Taiwanese businessmen signed contracts Wednesday to buy 101,000 metric tons of Georgia-grown corn for more than $11.6 million.

The contracts were signed at the state Capitol as Gov. George Busbee played host to members of the buying mission from the Republic of China.

The businessmen and government officials are participating in a six-week, 15-city tour of the United States.

H. K. Shao, director general of the Taiwan Board of Foreign Trade, said the group will purchase $750 million in U.S. goods, ranging from nuclear energy equipment to letter sorting machines, during the tour.

The corn purchase will be made through three brokers selected during a bidding process. The total price was $11,651,330.

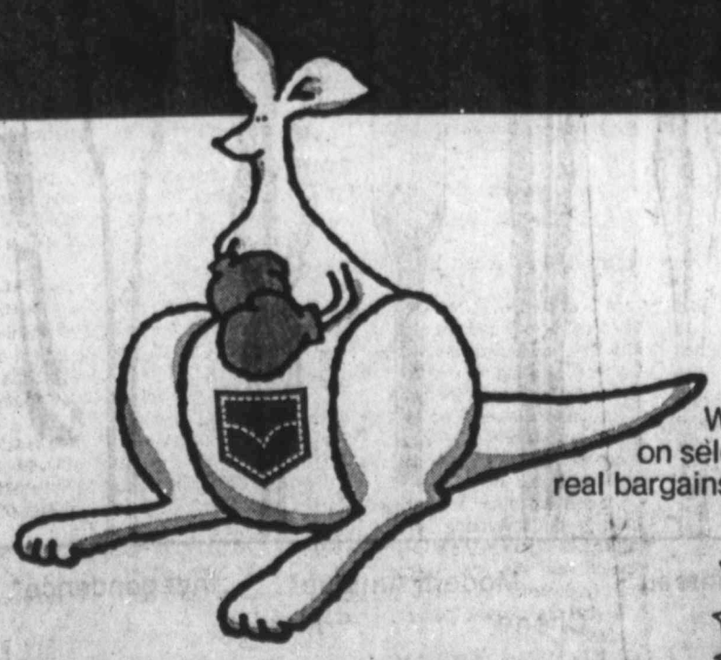

Shao said Taiwan previously has bought grain from midwestern states. He said the corn will be used for fodder.

The trade mission is the second of three sponsored by the Chinese government.

A Chinese delegation was in Atlanta last February to buy 54,000 metric tons of Georgia soybeans valued at $12.5 million.

Shao said his government has begun a "Buy More From America" drive to correct a trade imbalance with the United States. He said more than 35 percent of his country's total exports are destined for the U.S. market.

Dangers Rise For Some Public Workers

At street level, a highway repairman is grimy with benzene and coal tar pitch — known cancer agents.

Alongside the numerous office jobs, the payrolls of state and local governments are peppered with jobs like these. On average, working for the public is more than three times as dangerous as performing the average job in private industry, according to recently published figures from the National Safety Council.

A recent Labor Department study found that injuries to federal workers are costing the government about $5 billion a year in direct costs and lost productivity. No figures exist on what public employee injuries are costing state and local government, but those costs are likely in the billions, too.

In New York alone, Mayor Edward Koch has estimated that the 21,000 disabling public worker injuries each year are costing the city nearly $100 million.

Labor and urban experts say the growing health and safety hazards public employees face are a hidden consequence of the money crunch affecting local government in the 1970s, especially in the Northeast.

The workplaces and tools of these jobholders — the public buildings, roads, bridges and tunnels, the fire equipment, the garbage trucks — are deteriorating, and local governments have less to spend on repairs and replacement.

"Payrolls have come before potholes," says John Shannon of the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations.

The Urban Institute calculates that city and state governments spent the equivalent of $10 billion less in 1977 than the $36.4 billion spent in 1970 for capital needs, taking inflation into account.

The safety council's latest injury figures, which combine the years 1974 through 1976, show that in all industries, there were 10.87 disabling injuries, and 668 missed work-days, per million hours worked. But public employees suffered 37.55 disabling injuries, and lost 1,174 work-days, per million hours worked.

Federal job safety laws formulated in 1970 require, among other things, that private industry keep track of safety and health conditions in the workplace. They also protect private sector workers who complain about unsafe job conditions from losing their jobs.

But city and state employees have no such federal protection. The Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 specifically excludes state and local workers from its provisions. Twenty-four states have adopted OSHA-like safeguards for public employees. But in the remaining 26 states, public workers have virtually none of the workplace safety protections that private sector workers have.

The safety council's figures, and interviews with labor experts in and out of government, reveal how some of the more dangerous private and public jobs compare:

The average garbage collector is injured on the job twice as often as the average coal miner, who holds the most hazardous private sector job, according to the council's statistics. Mining injuries tend to be far more severe, however.

Coal miners also face black lung disease from the air they breathe. The New York City Health Department found that sanitation men have twice the rate of heart disease as other workers in similar age groups because, walking as they do behind garbage trucks, they breathe in high levels of exhaust fumes.

And a recent study by the federal Environmental Protection Agency found that four out of ten solid waste workers are injured each year, have a nine per cent chance of having a limb amputated during their work life, and a 23 percent chance of ending up with some sort of permanent disability.

"Yet, ironically, a sanitation worker employed by a private contractor hauling trash is covered by the federal OSHA Act, while one who works for a city, county or a state is not," says Joe Adler, an official of the American Federation of State County and Municipal Employees.

Firefighters have the highest death rate of any job, at 70 deaths per 100,000 workers, ten percent higher than the next highest, the coal miner, at 63 deaths per 100,000 workers. Police average 39 deaths per 100,000 workers. The average for all industries is 14 deaths per 100,000 workers.

Firemen can expect to be injured four times as often, and twice as severely, as a steel foundry worker, according to the safety council.

Many health and safety risks to policemen, firemen and others in the public sector are obvious and well known. Police, for instance, know the violent risks of interrupting a family fight, and firemen know that exposure to 350-degree heat on the job means an increased risk of lung problems and heart attacks.

But Mike Smith, an official of the International Association of Firefighters, says there are now occasional reports in large cities of firemen being shot by arsonists in the course of fighting fires.

There have also been instances of arsonists apparently sawing holes in the floors of buildings so that firemen attempting to fight the blaze fall through the floor and injure themselves.

Communist Party Forms Coalition In Tiny Republic

SAN MARINO (AP) — The Communist Party will form a leftist coalition government in this oldest republic in the world, the republic's executive branch announced Wednesday.

The Communists won 16 seats in the general election last fall. With the Socialist and another leftist party, they will command 31 votes in the 60-seat parliament.

The Christian Democrats, who hold 26 seats, were first given the task of forming a goverment but failed to find coalition partners. The Communists headed a coalition government with the Socialists for 10 years beginning in 1947, and the republic has been ruled by the Christian Democrats in recent years.

White House Staffer Dies

WASHINGTON (AP) — William W. Parish, 57, was fatally stricken, Wednesday, shortly after reporting for work at the White House, where he had been employed for about a year as a photographic editor.

Presidential spokseman Jody Powell said Parish collapsed in the White House photographic office, was rushed to nearby George Washington hospital and died there, apparently of a heart attack.

Prisons' Toxic Weapons Cited

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Potentially lethal chemical weapons are in wide use in American prisons, routinely as well as against armed inmates, the International Commission of Jurists said in a report published here Wednesday.

The gas-filled weapons, which allegedly include grenades and hand-administered devices, frequently produce serious toxic effects and sometimes death, the report said.

Other effects, it claimed, were second degree burns, permanent eye injuries, pneumonia and brain damage.

Although developed for riot control, the gases are being used "routinely to control disruptive or disorderly individuals," the report asserted, adding the effects were particularly dangerous in small, poorly ventilated prisons.

"In a majority of these cases, the individual is locked securely in his cell and presents no threat of riot, escape or physical injury," said the unsigned report which appeared in the latest International Commission of Jurists review of world human rights problems. It did not name individual prisons.

The report accused the United States of violating United Nations standards for the protection of prisoners. It said use of the gas was "clearly unwarranted."

Niall MacDermot, general secretary of the ICJ, an organization of lawyers, law teachers and judges in non-Communist countries, told The Associated Press the report was the result of studies by an American ICJ official based in Geneva who was helped by legal aid officers in the United States. He did not name the American.

Other reports in the review include a fresh condemnation of alleged human rights violations in Cambodia and claims a million people have been executed there since 1976 while the total number of Cambodian refugees in Vietnam and Thailand "probably exceeds 100,000."

"Harsh political repression" in El Salvador was also denounced by the ICJ, which cited "murder, abduction, torture and multiple rape" as examples of punishments imposed on those who criticize the government.

It said Catholic priests were among those murdered by security forces as "part of a deliberate campaign to preserve the priviliged position of the ruling minority."

A fourth report claimed political prisoners in South Korea are tortured to get them to confess to anti-government activity.

Repeat Offender Gets Two Years

An 18-year-old Lubbock man received a two-year prison term Wednesday after pleading guilty to unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Assessed the term after pleading guilty in Judge Robert C. Wright's 137th District Court was Clement E. Jackson, of 2904 E. Bates St.

The offense to which he pleaded guilty was committed less than three weeks after Jackson had been placed on probation for burglary.

The defendant took the witness stand to admit he had used an auto April 29 without permission of the owner.

According to stipulated testimony, the car in question had disappeared from a repair shop April 26.

Jackson was arrested three days later after the nephew of the car owner spotted the vehicle and contacted police, stipulated testimony indicated.

The defendant had been assessed a two-year probated prison term April 10 after being convicted of burglary in connection with a Sept. 28, 1977, incident.

Premium Catalogs Mailed For South Plains Fair

More than 4,000 catalogs detailing premiums being offered and events scheduled during the 61st annual Panhandle South Plains Fair have been placed in the mail.

Fair general manager Steve L. Lewis said the catalogs were mailed to prospective exhibitors, officials, schools, libraries, county agents and others.

Approximately $60,000 in premiums are being offered during the eight-day run, Sept. 23-30.

Livestock: Beef-Angus $4,370; dairy cattle (including milking shorthorn, Jersey, Holstein and Brown Swiss) $12,275; open barrow show $5,650; open sheep show $4,100; junior dairy calves $1,800; Hereford heifers $1,290; Angus heifers $1,305; junior lamb show $3,485; junior steer show $3,530; open cutting horse contest $750; pigeon and poultry shows, approximately $1,500; rabbit show, approximately $1,000.

Women's department: textile $15; crafts and hobbies $900; crocheting, knitting, tatting and weaving $637; culinary $916; youth $1,020; fine arts $550; china painting $813; relics and antiques 1,077.

A total of $1,500 has been earmarked for the fiddlers' contest and $2,250 is tabbed for the parade of bands.

Former Indian Home Minister Decries 'Office Boy' Treatment

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Former Home Minister Charan Singh, forced to quit his cabinet post last week, said Wednesday that Prime Minister Morarji Desai treated him like an office boy even though "I had made him prime minister."

Airing a list of grievances against Desai, Singh also told a meeting of ruling party dissidents a proposed corruption investigation against the prime minister's son was dropped because of Desai's negative reaction to the idea.

He also revived the issue of who in the government is to blame for inaction on prosecuting former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi for alleged abuses during her 1975-77 emergency rule.

His latest public statements brought closer a probable split from the ruling Janata (People's) Party of the faction headed by Singh and former Health Minister Raj Narain.

Singh and Narain were forced to resign last week for breaking cabinet discipline.

The dispute came to a head after Singh publicly accused the government of stalling on the issue of taking legal action against Mrs. Gandhi. Desai could have asked him to explain instead of resorting to the drastic action of making him resign, Singh said.

"I was not an office boy. I had made him the prime minister and the whole world knows it ...through my pen Desai became prime minister."

He was referring to his written offer to yield in favor of Desai when Janata leaders were selecting the prime minister after the party's March 1977 election victory over Mrs. Gandhi's Congress Party.

Singh said Desai must have been rankled by his proposal last March to launch an investigation into bribery complaints against Kantilal Desai, the prime minister's son.

Singh said he did not know if the complaints were justified but an official inquiry would have enhanced the image of both Desai and his government. The matter was dropped, he said, because of Desai's cold response.

The 82-year-old Desai said recently he would be the first to order prosecution if any evidence of wrongdoing were uncovered against his son.

Bank Deposits Here Brighten Area's Agriculture Outlook

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

South Plains agriculture looks a little better now than it did at the end of the first quarter this year, Lubbock bankers said Wednesday in reporting record second quarter deposits.

Holding at more than $1 billion through the first half of 1978, the eight Lubbock banks reported June 30 deposits of $1,063,958,390.

The total is 11.7 percent more than the $952,547,098 on deposit a year ago.

First quarter deposits were $1,069,610,435 and slightly more than the second quarter total.

Howard Yandell, president of the First National Bank, said a decrease there from $332.5 million March 30 to $326.8 million June 30 was caused primarily by a summer demand for agricultural and other business funds.

Yandell said three months ago that this is a crucial year for South Plains agriculture, and he said today that the farm situation looks somewhat better with crops in the ground now and some improvement in commodity prices.

"I still think it is very precarious," he said. "The dryland cotton is showing the effects of the tremendous heat of the past few weeks.

"However, at this point we can see maybe a strengthening of commodity prices, so we feel that maybe the farmer can see a better price for his products this year."

Yandell said an increase in farm exports is helping the markets.

The prime interest rate went up from 8 to 9 percent during the quarter, and the bank president said that has had an effect on the availability of money.

Lubbock National Bank President Wayne Finnell said some confidence has been re-established in agriculture with the new crops up and some improvement in sub-soil moisture with late May and early June rains.

"We're anticipating a very strong second half of this year," Finnell said. "Business in general in Lubbock and the surrounding area is very good."

W.R. Collier, president of American State Bank, said the Lubbock and South Plains economy "remains strong with a low unemployment rate and a strong building industry.

"We're experiencing higher rates of interest, which would tend to slow the economy somewhat," Collier said.

City Teacher Chosen For State Project

A.C. Jackson Elementary School's Vernita Holmes is one of 85 school personel selected throughout Texas to participate in the Administrative Trainee program at Stephen F. Austin University this summer.

The kindergarten teacher was chosen from more than 200 applicants. Completion of the program will mean a Master of Education degree and temporary administrative certificate for

The program is sponsored by the Texas Center for the Development of Human Resources . The center encourages women and minorities to enter leadership positions in the educational system to help solve problems related to sex and racial discrimination.

Because of her involvement with the problems of desegregation in her area, Mrs. Holmes hopes to become a director or consultant of a program concerned with multi-cultural teachings.

"I believe that we should expand our curriculum to include teaching about the socio-cultural and psychological experiences of all peoples, rather than a course in the history of minorities.

A teacher for 12 years, Mrs. Holmes will complete 12 hours of administrative courses this summer. Another 12 hours will be completed during the school year and she will finish the final 12 hours of the program next summer to qualify for her master's degree and certificate.

Local Airports Surveyed

Airports in Crosbyton, Lamesa, Midland and Odessa are among the 12 airports in Texas to be included in a general aviation survey July 14-15.

The Federal Aviation Administration and the Civil Air Patrol will conduct traffic counts and pilot interviews on those dates.

The traffic count will be used to calculate traffic density between airports. Interviews with pilots will be used to compile profiles of aircraft and pilot activity.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Gosh, did I surprise myself and come up with a goodie the other day! I was patching a hole in a pocket. After I turned the pocket inside out and pinned the patch on I thought it would be very awkward to have one hand up underneath the coat while I tried to sew with the other hand.

So I thought if I had something hard and smooth to put in the inside of the inside-out pocket I would have both hands outside to sew and hold with.

I did and it worked beautifully!

After struggling for about 30 years patching pockets I wish I had thought of this a lot sooner. — Bert B.

Your brain sure flashed a goodie, Bert. I like your idea and I love you for sharing it with us. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

My mom has a great idea. Since we were running short of beach towels and had plenty of old bath towels, she just sewed a couple of bath towels together and made beautiful beach towels.

DEAR HELOISE:

I don't know if I have invented this or not, but when making cupcakes I put the batter in a pitcher and pour it into the muffin tins.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

Everytime I'm trying to pull an electric plug out of the wall I'm ready to pull my hair because my finger slips right off and pulls on the wires. No elevation at the end of the plug to hold onto.

My friend Elsie says that things are like that because men design them — like putting heat registers by windows so that all the heat goes behind the drapes and curtains!!?? — Mildred Skoney

You could be right, Mildred. One of my friends has white floor tile in her four-bedroom home. Think that was a man's idea too? — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When you think you have emptied that container of pepper or salt, do this: For the pepper can, use a regular bottle opener and open the corner of the can. For the salt, pull out the metal tab of the container and tear the cardboard back to the edge.

You will be surprised at how much extra pepper and salt you will find in the containers. — Annie Ferguson

DEAR HELOISE:

I had trouble storing the extra bobbins to my sewing machine where they would be handy when I needed them.

I now keep three or four extras on the second thread spindle of my machine.

I wish my machine had two spindles. That's a brilliant idea. — Heloise

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Do you have room for one more comment on "Happy Wally" who majored in economics and minored in sex? He said he slipped a $10 bill into his wife's bra whenever he felt the urge. In 28 years he estimates he spent $3,000.

This figures out to 13.6 love feasts a year — or slightly more than one a month. Wally says they are supremely happy and he wants to share his secret with others. I don't consider myself a sex maniac but to a normal, healthy person, his batting average sounds like celibacy. I hope the idea doesn't catch on. It could make sex obsolete. — You Don't Get Much Of Anything These Days For Ten Dollars (P.S. Ann, where do you find these nuts?)

Dear Don't Get: I must say I agree with you. And in response to your P.S., Buster, I don't find THEM. They find ME.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are atheists. This is not something we announce generally. Our close friends and relatives are aware of our convictions but some of our distant kin are not.

Recently we were at a large family gathering and the host asked my husband to say grace. He was caught totally off guard but rather than offend everyone he said a muddled prayer.

Should we be caught this way again, please suggest a way we can tactfully let it be known that we respect their beliefs, but do not wish to compromise our own. — Puzzled

Dear Puzz: Simply say, "There are others present who are far more articulate in offering thanks. I defer to Uncle John or Cousin George."

The Professor's four-spade opening was a mighty good bid.

When an expert does elect to open with four spades or four hearts he almost always has some sort of extra values.

The idea is that he is likely to be doubled and he just hates to go down two or three tricks only to find that he was tilting at windmills and that the opponents did not have a game.

The Professor just needed a couple of key cards – say the king of clubs and an ace in his partner's hand to bring four spades home.

His partner didn't have those key cards, but the Professor wrapped up the game anyway. It seems that West, after prolonged cerebration, led the deuce of hearts. It didn't take the Prof two seconds to finesse with dummy's queen, discard his losing diamond on the ace of hearts and wind up losing just one spade and two clubs.

"Could I tell which king to lead from?" asked West.

"No," replied the Professor. "Nevertheless you should have set me. Your correct lead was the ace of spades. After that start it should not be too tough to cash a diamond and two clubs."

WINNER'S CIRCLE — To be in the winner's circle this fall wear "racy" jewelry with an equine look. There are horse heads, horses in full gallop, even mythological winged horses decorating stick pins, rings, earrings, tie tacs and bar pins. Whichever you choose, you'll be showing fashion know-how as well as horse sense.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please write about swimmer's ear — its treatment and how to avoid it. — K.S.

Swimmer's ear is known medically as "external otitis" and it is painful evidence that the human ear was not intended for long periods of immersion. It is also a miserable hazard for anyone trying to enjoy water sports.

It's an infection of the outer ear canal, usually associated with insufficient cerumen (earwax). The purpose of this waxy substance is to keep the ear membranes healthy. When there isn't enough of it the membranes become dry and crack, providing ready entry to bacteria or fungus infections. In swimmer's ear, the culprit is usually a bacteria.

When infection develops it can be treated with antibiotic drops. For swimmers prone to this problem the best preventive (for those who can use them) are the glycerine or mineral oil drops. They are placed in the ear canal and retained with earplugs. I say "for those who can use them," because drops should not be used if a person has a perforated eardrum or even suspects he has.

In explaining swimmer's ear to a patient of mine, I mentioned the earwax problem and the fact that the moistened ear canal can be an invitation to infection. A sufferer from athlete's feet for years, he caught on, and commented, "Oh, sort of athlete's foot of the ear?" A good description. Some other thoughts: allergic persons may be more susceptible to swimmer's ear. Also, it is thought that the stage may be set by getting foreign materials (such as hair sprays) into the canals. Dry heat can be used to ease the pain. The chief signs are itching and pain.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it true that one's blood pressure can rise or fall as much as 20 points in a half hour? How high does one's pressure have to get before you get a stroke? — I.M.

Yes, fright, anxiety or strenuous exercise can cause a 20-point rise or more in blood pressure. There is no fixed point at which a stroke occurs. As you know, stroke is brain damage related to faulty blood circulation. This depends on other vessels nourishing the brain, also on the length of time pressure is elevated. Age is also a factor. See my booklet, "Stroke: Hope and Help," for a fuller discussion of the various kinds of stroke. Many readers are surprised to learn they can be prevented. For a copy send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please explain gluteal bursitis. — Mrs. C.M.

"Gluteal" (GLOO-tee-ul) bursitis is bursitis occurring in the buttock area. Bursitis is inflammation of the bursae, the tiny fluid-filled sacs that allow muscles and tendons to slide easily over joints. The hip area contains some large and important muscles to allow us to stoop and to keep our bodies erect. These structures in the hip tend to be close to the surface and thus are easily injured.

Bursitis in this area is particularly unfortunate because it may limit general activity for long periods. So it is well to have it treated promptly to avoid the complications that can come with prolonged inactivity, especially in older persons. Drugs, either by injection or orally, are effective.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I just found out I have a chemical imbalance. What is this and how can I get it equal again? — J.B.

A meaningless term unless you know what chemicals are involved — sugar, minerals, hormones, what? Find out and write me again if you have questions.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My right eye has been tearing so that frequently tears roll down my cheek. Is this serious and will drops help prevent it? — R.M.D.

You probably have a plugged tear duct. It may be obstructed so tears back up and spill over into the eye rather than into the nasal area. Drops won't help. Simple surgery can unplug a duct. It is not serious.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: On orders, I gave up my seven cups of coffee a day (bad kidneys). Since, my asthma has been relieved greatly. Any connection? — A.B.

Probably. If you are allergic to it, it could have been a factor in your asthma. A bit of serendipity from your kidney treatment.

• • •

Don't take chances with "kidney trouble" — it could be dangerous. Read Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Your Kidneys — Facts You Need to Know About Them." For a copy write Dr. Thosteson, P.O. 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — As a recent ad proclaims, just when you thought it was safe to go back in the water, there's a movie making the theater rounds which aims at scaring you into staying on the beach.

In serialdom, there's a "Guiding Light" story involving a haunting accident that also might scare you enough to clip your water wings. Last week on the soap opera, the audience learned why Peter Chapman has been hesitant to commit himself romantically to Holly Bauer. Seems that a few years ago Peter was involved in a Santo Domingo escapade with two sisters. Peter fell madly in love with Maya Waterman (was a pun intended?) but scheming, seductress sister Linette lured Peter to take her scuba diving on her 18th birthday during a brewing tropical storm. Linette never returned and Peter ditched Maya feeling guilty and remorseful. That's the story so far, but the production tale is equally intriguing.

"Guiding Light" sent director John Pasquin, actors Curt Dawson (Peter), Sands (e.q.) Hall (Maya), Ellen Deitz (Linette), and one videotape camera to Nassau to film flashback sequences that preceded the accident, as well as sequences underwater of the fateful day, and other sequences both above and below water that will air on the serial throughout the summer as Peter dives to exorcise his ghost.

"Director Pasquin captured slendiferous scenery around the Bahamas for the land sequences, while Hollywood genius Al Giddings was hired for the underwater scenes. Giddings is the cameraman who contributed to the beauty of the movie, "The Deep," and his efforts for "GL" are no less stunning. "The underwater sequences were shot using movie film but were later transferred to videotape," informs actor Curt Dawson, "to match the taped quality of the land scenes. But from what I've viewed of everything that was filmed, Pasquin and Giddings will undoubtedly be credited with giving a soap opera one of the finest quality segments ever done in terms of visual beauty." No viewer will argue with Dawson's judgment; the scenes are stunning.

Interestingly enough, Dawson spent a few weeks in the Bahamas before the tapings to learn how to scuba. He became so proficient that his stunt man was only used for spots that were filmed below 50 feet of the ocean's surface.

But the sight of a serene underwater cove suddenly shattered by exploding bubbles that signify drained oxygen tanks is enough to make even a shark drop his jaws in fright.

Tune in tomorrow. It's only a story.

SHORT TAKES: KAREN MORRIS, the new Faith Coleridge Desmond on "Ryan's Hope" lost a potential bundle in modeling fees by joining the ABC serial. She had been one of the more recent "Breck Girls" and therefore follows the trail of such other former shampooers as Jackie Smith and Cheryl Ladd of "Charlie's Angels," Cheryl Tiegs and Brooke Shields.

Also from "RH" comes news that the most anticipated character arrival in serial history is about to take place. For years Siobhan, a never-before-seen Ryan daughter, has been gossiped about occasionally. For at least the last six months her arrival seemed imminent as the clan discussed her latest follies involving a prison term. Try not to be surprised by Siobhan when she will finally surface sometime in July in the personage of actress Sarah Felder.

GRETCHEN WALTHER, who was one of the young Patty Tates on "Search For Tomorrow" and one of the Susan Dunbars on "Secret Storm" a few years ago, is the one and so far only Faith Manning, a recent arrival, on "Love of Life."

NO SAD SONGS for Gerald Gordon. He wanted it that way and has kept his promise to dump his role of Mark Dante on "General Hospital." Recasting is underway.

BEFORE GOING to her final reward as Jennifer Brooks on "The Young and The Restless," Dorothy Green endured the story traumas of a mastectomy, not to mention the trial of keeping her daughter separated romantically from the daughter's secret half-brother. Now comes the news that Dorothy is selling real estate in Beverly Hills. That's what comes of too much of an emotional soap opera thing.

(Send your questions about soap operas to "Tune In Tomorrow," 230 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Questions cannot be answered personally but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

Couple Repeats Wedding Vows

JAYCON—GREEN

Lynne Jaycon became the bride of Steve Green in an 11 a.m. ceremony Saturday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tim Barnett, cousin of the bride. Grover Stephens officiated.

Honor attendants were Mrs. Tim Barnett and Bill Estep.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Frankie Jaycon and the late Pete Jaycon. Green is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Green of Baird.

The bride attended Slaton High School and Texas Tech University. The bridegroom was graduated from Tech.

Clip 'n' Cook

GOLDEN APPLE CHICKEN BAKE

2 tsps. flour
3 golden apples
2 tbsps. brown sugar
2½ lb. cut up fryer
2 tbsps. margarine, melted
½ cup cider vinegar
1 tbsp. salt
Paprika

Place cabbage wedges in bottom of shallow 2-qt. casserole. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon flour. Core and slice apples into rings. Set aside several rings. Cover cabbage with remaining apple rings. Mix brown sugar and remaining 1 teaspoon flour, sprinkle over apples. Arrange chicken pieces, skin side up, with reserved apple rings. Mix together margarine, vinegar and salt, pour over chicken. Cover. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Remove cover and bake 30 minutes longer. Sprinkle with paprika. Makes 4 servings.

Role Of Raising Robins Changes Couple's Life

CAMPING IS FOR THE BIRDS — Fern and Jimmie Miller of Waukegan, Ill., watch a robin sit on its nest on their camper, early this summer, at Illinois Dunes State Park, near Zion, Ill. Two robins, whom the Millers named Robbie and Lady Bird, built the nest, hatched their eggs, and raised the young, Eeenie, Meenie and Miney. Until the young were old enough to fly, the Millers weren't allowed to move their camper. Now the birds and the Millers have moved on. (AP Laserphoto)

CHICAGO (AP) — Eenie, Meenie and Miney, three young robins whose nest on a camper trailer held Jimmie and Fern Miller captive in a state park for weeks, have taken wing — allowing the Millers to do the same.

"This has changed our life. It has given us an appreciation of happiness and joy," Mrs. Miller said Wednesday. "We can recognize Eenie, Meenie and Miney. We still talk to Lady Bird and Robbie (the names they gave the birds' parents)."

Robert Needham, superintendent at the Illinois Beach State Park, said he wants to bronze the nest the parents built on the camper's fuel tanks and display it in a park nature museum.

Mrs. Miller said in telephone interview that she and her husband — who have been touring the country for three years — would leave the park to go camping at the Chain of Lakes, about 17 miles away.

"But we'll be back in five days to check on the robins for a few days," she added.

The 61-year-old Mrs. Miller and her husband, 67, came to the park, 40 miles north of Chicago, in May for what they thought would be a two-week stay.

But then Lady Bird and Robbie built their nest of cattail fuzz, shoelaces and mud on the trailer and were oblivious to slamming doors, flashlights or curiosity seekers. The eggs hatched June 16, she said.

"It was no inconvenience, really. We just had to cancel some campouts," she said. "It was more rewarding staying here and watching our robins."

Even had the Millers been in a hurry, they would not have been allowed to move their trailer. Ranger Bob Grosso said Conservation Department regulations forbid disturbing nesting birds on state property.

"There have been so so many people who came here from great distances just to have a happy thought," Mrs. Miller said. "A 93-year-old woman came here just to see the robins."

The Millers said they will be back in their home base of Apache Junction, Ariz., in November. They plan to visit friends and relatives in Minnesota and Michigan after staying with their daughter, her husband and their two teen-age grandaughters in Grand View, Wis., for a week.

"Through all of this we've made so many friends," Mrs. Miller said. "Wherever we go people will say 'You're the Robin Lady.'"

Ice Cream Social Added To Portales 'Music Man'

PORTALES, N.M. (Special) — An old-fashioned ice cream social and picnic will precede Friday's performance of "The Music Man" at Eastern New Mexico University.

Fine arts organizations will offer soft drinks, homemade ice cream and cotton candy at concession stands, beginning at 5:30 p.m. Friday.

Gospel music and selections from "The Music Man" will be presented during the picnic.

Curtain time for the play is at 8 p.m. in the Corral Playhouse. There will also be a matinee at 2 p.m. Sunday, which will not include a picnic.

Tickets are $2 per person. ENMU students will be admitted free.

Ex-Agents Urge Bell To Dismiss Indictments

WASHINGTON (AP) — An organization of former FBI agents urged Attorney General Griffin B. Bell on Wednesday to dismiss indictments against three former FBI officials charged with authorizing illegal surveillance in the early 1970s.

The Society of Former Special Agents of the FBI submitted a resolution to Bell and President Carter which said the prosecution against former acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III and two top-ranking aides was unwarranted.

"None of these officials obtained personal gain or profit. They acted to protect the country, to prevent terrorism and to apprehend federal fugitives," the society said.

The other two defendants in the case are W. Mark Felt and Edward S. Miller, who served under Gray.

The society, which has 7,400 members, has raised over $400,000 to help defend FBI agents and officials accused of crimes.

In their statement to Bell and Carter, the society appealed to the administration to reimburse the organization for legal fees.

Accused U.S. Newsman May Return To Moscow

WESTBORO, Mass. (AP) — New York Times correspondent Craig R. Whitney, charged with slander in the Soviet Union, is back in the United States but said Wednesday he might return to Moscow "just for appearances" before his trial.

However, he said he was sticking to his decision not to appear in court at the July 18 proceedings.

"If they're going to pull something, I would rather be there," Whitney said in a telephone interview. "I don't want to give them an excuse to say that Whitney cared so little about the matter that he was on vacation on the trial date.

"Whatever happens, if it seems advisable, I will go back before the end of the month."

Whitney returned to the United States Tuesday on a delayed vacation.

"I can go back," said Whitney by telephone. "What we have is a multiple-entry visa valid until September.

"The earliest date for the trial is July 18. I might go back to Moscow before...just for appearances.

Whitney and Harold D. Piper of the Baltimore Sun papers were charged with slandering the Soviet television service in articles quoting sources as doubting the authenticity of a televised confession by Zviad Gamsakhurdia, a Soviet Georgian dissident. Both have told the judge they will not appear in court.

Whitney said he did not want to discuss what might happen following the trial date, although under Soviet law, defendants do not have to appear in civil actions, which continue without them.

"One of the possibilities is they won't let me back," he said, "but I don't want to give them any ideas.

"I want to go back. I've been in Moscow since last September. I would like to be there two or three years more."

Whitney said foreign news reporters in Moscow believed the slander action was linked with worsening U.S.-Soviet relations. He said Malcolm Toon, the U.S. Ambassador to Russia, told correspondents they were being warned by the action to stay away from dissidents.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the White House called in six Soviet journalists to review their accreditation, apparently responding to the charges against Whitney and Piper. Four of the six showed up for the session, the first of its kind in 16 years.

"We thought it was an appropriate time that these correspondents be called in to review the rights, privileges and responsibilities of holding white House accreditiation," said deputy White House press secretray Rex Granum.

Whitney said he planned to be in Moscow at the latest by July 29 when David K. Shipler, Times bureau chief there, was scheduled to go on leave.

Whitney said he and his wife had planned their vacation before the slander action was disclosed. He said his wife and two children left Moscow Sunday as scheduled, but he delayed his departure to meet Monday with the Soviet judge.

High Court Approval Of Quotas Predicted

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An NAACP attorney predicted on Wednesday that the U.S. Supreme Court will decide in its next term that racial quotas are constitutional when designed to correct the results of prior injustices.

Nathaniel Colley, co-author of the NAACP's brief in the Allen Bakke case, said he thinks the court would have ruled differently in that case if University of California regents had proved past discrimination.

Bakke, who is white, asked the court to force the university to accept him as a medical student, saying he was refused admission while less qualified blacks were allowed to enter the medical school. The court ordered Bakke admitted to the school, but at the same time it ruled that affirmative action programs for minorities are constitutional.

Colley said the court's decision to order the school to accept Bakke was an insignificant part of the ruling.

"What was significant about the situation was that the Supreme Court of the United States, by at least a 5-4 majority, said that affirmative action programs are legitimate and they said further that race can be used as a factor in ... efforts to undo the harm done from 100 years of slavery and at least 100 hundred of partial slavery," he told a news conference at the 69th annual NAACP convention.

Colley, of Sacramento, Calif., is a national board member and western regional counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

He said it was important to understand the divisions on the Supreme Court and to realize that "only Justice Powell has said that inflexible quotas do not meet constitutional muster. Not another justice expressed that view."

"... I would predict that before the end of the next term (in 1979) the Supreme Court will make a definitive decision which will say that when the inflexible quota is the least intrusive device to correct prior existing discrimination by the institutions involved, whether it's a business institution or a university, then these quotas are legal as a remedial device," Colley said.

He said he doubts if the Bakke ruling will have a major impact on minority hiring and school admission programs, and he said it might even be an impetus to such programs.

Saying the NAACP is not "wedded to quotas," he said the group doesn't care what method is used as long as black people enter the mainstream of society.

Colley said the NAACP must "maintain its fighting posture and exploit the good parts of the Bakke decision in showing the nation the need for affirmative action" programs.

High Court Reverses Sunday School Rule

AUSTIN (AP) — A Dallas domestic relations judge acted unconstitutionally in ordering a divorced woman to take her children to Sunday school, the Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The judge's decree violated the state constitutional provision for separation of church and state, the Supreme Court said, in upholding a Dallas Court of Civil Appeals opinion in the case.

In another case, the Supreme Court reversed lower court rulings and dismissed an $87,000 judgment awarded to a test driver's family after he was killed during a testing accident.

The Sunday school decree case involved Richard Watts Jr. and his wife, Virginia, who were divorced in March 1975. Mrs. Watts received custody of the children, but two years later custody was changed to the father.

The judge granted the mother visitation rights on alternate weekends providing that she marry a man with whom she was living or sever the relationship, and that she take the children to Sunday school and the "church of her choice."

The 5th Court of Civil Appeals in Dallas reversed the ruling and sent it back to the trial court. The Supreme Court affirmed the appeals court ruling without writing an opinion in the case.

The Supreme Court issed a "take nothing" judgment in the case of Clemente Urquidez, who died in April 1972, when a tire blew out on his tractor-trailer rig.

Urquidez was driving at 60 mph on an oval test track near Pecos when a tire not being tested blew out, causing the truck to overturn and killing the driver.

His son and widow asked damages from Armstrong Rubber Co., which had contracted for the test drive, under the products liability law.

At issue was whether the faulty tire had "entered the stream of commerce." The Supreme Court said the tire never was released to the consuming public and therefore the company was not liable. The opinion reversed actions by an Odessa jury and the El Paso Court of Civil Appeals.

In other cases, the court:

— Ordered an automobile insurance company to pay damages in a fatal, one-car accident, although the driver's father had excluded him from policy coverage. The Dallas County case arose from an accident which killed the driver, David Wyloge and a passenger, Melinda Craddock.

The court said the father's insurance policy was liable for personal injury protection because the father had not rejected such coverage in writing, as required by law.

— Kept alive a suit brought by Laredo taxpayers, who claim the Webb County commissioners tried illegally to move the courthouse outside the county seat.

Hobbs 'Superstars' To Compete

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS — Friday is the deadline to enter the Hobbs annual "Superstars" athletic competition.

Events will include golf, a mile run, 100-yard dash, long jump, tennis, horseshoes, ping pong, basketball, free throw, bowling, bicycle race, the obstacle course and swimming.

The competition, sponsored by the Hobbs parks and recreation department, will be conducted over a four-day period beginning July 13.

The competition is open to persons 15 and older.

Cowboy Hall Of Fame Proposed

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS — A Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center has been proposed for the New Mexico Junior College campus.

A board of directors has been selected, and a drive for 5,000 charter members has been launched.

"Such a center would honor residents of Lea County who have distinguished themselves in rodeo or ranching life," Dale "Tuffy" Cooper, board chairman for the proposed center, said.

Membership dues are $15 annually. Persons becoming members by Nov. 1 will be charter members and will be eligible to nominate persons for induction into the Hall of Fame and can elect future directors for the center.

Other board members include Sylvia Benge, secretary; Muriel McNeill, treasurer; Mrs. Jerry Claton, Bob Eidson and Bill Zimmerman, all of Lovington; Mrs. Robert Madera of Jal; Tom Pearson of Eunice; Mrs. Dessie Sawyer of Tatum; Leo Sims of Hobbs; and John Shepherd and R.N. Tydings, both of New Mexico Junior College.

E.L. Short Barbecue Planned

A-J Correspondent

TAHOKA — Lynn County citizens will host an appreciation barbecue for E.L. Short July 14 from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Mel Leslie's Tahoka Lake Ranch.

Short, a former state representative, is the Democratic nominee for the 28th District state senatorial seat.

More than 1,000 persons, including Attorney General John Hill, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker of the House Bill Clayton, are expected to attend.

Tickets for the event are $25 per person and may be purchased at the gate or by calling 998-4761.

Swisher 4-H Contestants Named

A-J Correspondent

TULIA — Swisher County will be represented at the District Two 4-H Dress Revue today at Texas Tech University by Angela Stewart, young junior; Angela Stark, older junior; and Denise Thompson, senior.

Parents of the contestants are Mr. and Mrs. Larry Stewart, Route 2, Tulia; Mr. and Mrs. Rickie Stark, Tulia; and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Thompson, Star Route, Kress.

Judging will be in the Home Economics Building at Tech. Participants, parents and agents are invited to a luncheon in the University Ballroom. The public revue will be at 2 p.m. in the Home Economics Building auditorium.

Austin Special Session Agenda Under General 'Taxes' Heading

AUSTIN (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton told two House committees Wednesday he hoped they would make "sensible" suggestions for tax relief to the special legislative session and avoid "drastic approaches."

He said testimony before the committees on ways and means and constitutional amendments would show that a California Proposition 13-type proposal would not work in Texas.

The committees began a joint two-day hearing without knowing what specific proposals Gov. Dolph Briscoe would allow them to consider.

The 30-day session begins Monday.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, asked chairman Tim Von Dohlen of the constitutional amendments committee to "avoid the foolish suspense" by calling Briscoe and asking him what he was going to present to the legislature.

"If I thought the phone call would get an answer, I'd go make it," said Von Dohlen, D-Goliad.

The governor's control over the session, however, was questioned, by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who cited an 1886 Texas Supreme Court ruling. The court ruled that a tax levied in an 1882 special session was constitutional even though it had not been included in the governor's call.

"I think this session will be open to virtually every matter in the tax field. Personally, I would like to see it limited as tightly as it could be," Hobby said.

Clayton said 40 tax proposals already had been filed or were being drafted for House members, but he said, "I do believe the governor has the prerogative to narrow the call."

"If the session is opened to all tax issues, it certainly will take longer," he said. "This is an emotional issue, and you have a lot of people who want in on the act."

Clayton asked the two committees to seek public sentiment on possible tax relief, but he added that he hoped the committees' proposals "would be of a sensible nature and not the drastic approach of Proposition 13."

He said, however, a San Antonio newspaper survey of nearly 3,000 persons showed that all but 79 favored "some type of legislation similar to Proposition 13."

The California proposition — approved overwhelmingly in a statewide vote — restricts property taxation.

"Personally," said Von Dohlen, "I don't feel this (constitutional amendments) committee or the Legislature should take action if they don't know the full impact on the state of Texas.

"We are not California," he said.

Von Dohlen said there is a "general public concern" over taxing and governmental spending, but the concern "could be cured" by an amendment to the U.S. Constitution providing for a pay-as-you-go approach, such as in Texas.

Also, he said, there appeared to be "insufficient supervision" of state agency spending by the Legislature.

Von Dohlen said he felt no constitutional amendment could be proposed that was not in the governor's call.

He said no specific tax relief proposals would be considered until Thursday.

Construction In May Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — New construction increased by 2.9 percent in May to an annual rate of $198.6 billion, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

In the three months ending May 1978, the increase was 9 percent to $192.1 billion.

Private construction grew by 2 percent to $153.8 billion, while public construction increased 8 percent, to $44.8 billion.

'Tipped' Ticket Caused Suit

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — A judge Wednesday ordered a freeze on payment of a lottery ticket that could be worth $1 million, pending the outcome of a legal dispute between the man who bought it and the bartender he gave it to — allegedly as a tip.

Acting state Supreme Court Justice Richard Daronco ordered State Lottery Commission Director John Quinn to act as "stakeholder" of the ticket, now worth $10,000 and one of about 100 tickets entered in the August "million-dollar" lottery drawing.

Paul Monsell, attorney for the ticket's purchaser, Joseph Beaudette, 22, of Manhassett, N.Y., said his client maintains he was drunk and didn't know what he was doing May 10, when he gave the ticket — allegedly as a tip — to Clifford Bice, 26, bartender at Kilmeade's bar in Manhassett.

The ticket involved was an "instant" ticket, in which players scrape away thin foil covering numbers that reveal whether the ticket-holder is a winner or not. Bice scraped away the foil and found out he'd won $10,000 and a chance at winning $1 million.

"The issue here is how much responsility a bar and a bartender have for their patrons, and whether Bice was taking advantage of Beaudette, who was bombed at the time," Monsell said.

Judge Daronco ordered Quinn to "act as stakeholder of ticket 6221-4540," and also ordered that Bice neither collect any money from the state, nor be allowed to sell it to anyone else, pending arguments on the merits of Beaudette's complaint.

Monsell said Beaudette is seeking $3 million damages, "but our fallback position would be, 'Okay, let's split whatever the ticket brings.'"

At the drawing in August, the ticket will be eligible to win $1 million, or any of 50 lesser prizes. Having been certified for the drawing, the ticket is now worth at least $10,000.

BICYCLES MOST HAZARDOUS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bicycles and related equipment head the 1977 list of hazardous products, prepared by the National Injury Identification Clearinghouse. The next most hazardous group of items was stairs, steps, ramps and landings. Football activity and equipment was third.

Study Says Strip Mines Lake Danger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Strip mining threatens flood control reservoirs by accelerating erosion and filling the impoundments with silt, a new U.S. Geological Survey study shows.

The study found, for example, that Fishtrap Lake near Pikeville, Ky., was filling with sediment seven times faster than anticipated.

The amount of silt flowing into reservoirs located in Eastern Kentucky coal fields, where strip mining predominates, ranged from 2,890 to 21,000 tons per square mile, compared to 732 to 3,470 tons in areas where deep mining prevailed.

The study, which focused on Fishtrap and Dewey lakes, was released Wednesday. Both impoundments were built by the Corps of Engineers.

The study was requested after the corps became alarmed at the rate in which the impoundments were filling with sediment.

After strip mining began at Caney Fork near Gulnare, Ky., "the sediment yield was about 100 times greater" than before, the study said.

Shark Story Catches People

LUDINGTON, Mich. (UPI) — A taxidermist had folks around this resort community convinced a shark had been caught in Lake Michigan. They fell for the fish tale "hook, line and sinker."

Wednesday, he let the shark out of the bag.

Taxidermist Edward Stowe said a friend caught the 6-foot-long blue shark off the California shore, several weeks ago, and asked him to mount it.

Because he didn't have room in his store to make the mold, he performed the task on a Lake Michigan beach, about four miles north of Ludington.

"This guy came by while I was doing it and he asked me where I got it," Stowe said. "Since I had my fishing pole and stuff with me I told him I caught it while I was fishing. I told him it bumped me in the leg and I killed it with a shovel.

"That guy swallowed it hook, line and sinker. I got quite a chuckle out of it. I told him it was a Lake Michigan Blue Shark, and he believed me," Stowe said.

The guy was Howard Roberts, city manager of the Grand Rapids suburb of Walker. Roberts took pictures of the dead shark and sent them off to the Department of Natural Resources, which initiated an investigation.

Meanwhile, the story made the rounds around town and nobody seemed willing to dispute the claim.

Deputy Jim McInnis of the Mason County Sheriff's Department said, when contacted earlier Wednesday, that he believed Stowe's tale even though freshwater lakes are an alien environment for sharks.

"It's biologically possible," McInnis said. "We put feelers out all over. It's too bad the barber shops aren't open because they usually know."

When informed later that the shark story was nothing more than a hoax, McInnis expressed disappointment.

"Oh no," he said. "That's really rotten. It was quite exciting for a while, and something like that is feasible."

Roberts was not at all disappointed by the news.

"Boy, I'm relieved," he said. "I'm tickled to death. That answers an awful lot of questions."

Candidate Visits Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Perry B. Duryea, the Republican candidate for governor of New York, began a six-day visit to Israel on Wednesday.

And he says he is "particularly interested in getting first-hand information about the problems Israel is facing and about American-Israeli relations." During his stay here, he is to meet with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman.

Man Fights To Die At Home

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Covello, a 34-year-old convict with terminal cancer, was home Wednesday — a temporary victor in his fight to die where he was born rather than in a prison ward bed.

Covello was granted a 48-hour medical furlough Tuesday by the state Department of Correctional Services after Gov. Hugh Carey told Correction Commissioner Benjamin Ward he would ask the Parole Board to consider Covello's case immediately.

"The governor wants the board to act 'sympathetically' in this matter," said Judy Deitch, speaking for the governor.

Covello, who doctors say has only days to live, has a stomach cancer that has withered him to 78 pounds. He is unable or sit up without help. He has served three years of a one-to four-year term imposed after he plead guilty to manslaughter in 1976.

Wayne Newton Hospitalized

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Entertainer Wayne Newton was in satisfactory condition in a Hospital on Wednesday, complaining of stomach pains.

NEWTON

Newton was stricken about 15 minutes into his act Tuesday night at the reopening of the Desert Inn Hotal on the Las Vegas strip. He left the stage and several other entertainers, including Robert Goulet, Joan Rivers and Nipsey Russell, filled in for him.

A hospital spokesman said Newton had what he called "a touch of the stomach bug" and said he was nauseous and dehydrated.

Nixon Mulls More Books

MIAMI (AP) — Richard Nixon says in a telephone interview with a Miami radio station that he is thinking about writing three more books.

But, the former president told Stan Major, a talk show host on radio station WNWS, that he isn't sure just what the books will concern, other than, "They will be books about the future, not about the past."

Nixon, who resigned the presidency in 1974, has one book on the market now: "RN: Memoirs of Richard Nixon." He was contacted by Major on July Fourth at the former president's home in San Clemente, Calif.

Amy Wins Fishing Award

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — The Norfolk-Virginia Beach Bluefish-Tuna Tournament is turning into a First Family affair.

AMY CARTER

President Carter, who took his family on a fishing vacation last week, currently is in first place in the men's competition with his catch of a 24-pound, 8-ounce tuna. First Lady Rosalynn Carter is in third place in the women's division with her catch of a 25 pound fish and their 10-year-old daughter, Amy, holds first place in the girl's division.

Also, Amy was named the tournament's "Angler of the Week," not because her 25-pounder was the largest fish caught during the week, but because of her age.

Tournament secretary George Roper II said Amy will receive a plaque, but tournament officials haven't decided how they will make the award after the tournament ends in a few weeks.

Boy May Be Genius

NEW YORK (AP) — Sayed Jalal is a smallish 8-year-old with what some people think is a genius intelligence.

The boy, born in Afghanistan, is in New York while his father, Sayed Karim, looks for help to continue his son's education. Brooklyn College mathematic professor George Booth says the boy "does a good high school level math and is mature in academic ability far beyond his years."

Another professor, Robert A. Marino, a physicist at Hunter College, adds that "with better English and some refresher work, he would be ready for college."

The youngster's father says that his son completed 12 years worth of high school work in 18 months, and predicts that his boy could complete requirements for a PhD by the time he is 11 years old.

The boy's intelligence has not been accurately measured because of his English language problems, but Dennis Moore, who works with gifted children, says non-verbal tests have shown that he has superior intellect.

Reporters Greet Cub

LONDON (AP) — "I know just what it's like," Carol Thatcher told reporters waiting in a drizzle at London's Heathrow Airport. "I've done airport work myself."

The 24-year-old daughter of Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, leader of Britain's opposition Conservative Party, flew to London from Australia after eight months as a trainee reporter for the Sydney Morning Herald.

She was met by her mother, her father, Dennis, and her brother, Mark. Miss Thatcher is in Britain for a four-week vacation.

"I enjoy my work in Australia and will be going back after the holidays," she said. "I am out there for an indefinite period — certainly for the remainder of this year and the whole of the next."

Parade Marches To Radio

MOSCOW, Vt. (UPI) — The town of Moscow held one of the smallest, but perhaps one of the most innovative, Fourth of July celebrations in the state.

The town's 200 residents wanted to stage the third annual parade but had no band to supply the music. Tme town called radio station WRFB in nearby Stowe and requested marching music.

With radio speakers set on windows sills along the parade route, residents marched to a recording of "The Stars and Stripes Forever," broadcast from WRFB.

Ghana's Chief Of State Resigns In Mysterious Surprise Move

LONDON (AP) — Col. Ignatius Kutu Acheampong resigned as Ghana's chief of state Wednesday, according to a Ghana News Agency broadcast monitored here.

The report from Accra, capital of Ghana, quoted a military statement that said Acheampong was replaced by Lt. Gen. Fred Akuffo, chief of the defense staff and second in command of the ruling Supreme Military Council. The report was monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp.

A Foreign Office spokesman in London said foreign diplomats in Ghana were told the Supreme Military Council and a second governing body called the National Redemption Council were meeting in emergency session.

The news agency report said the Ghana-Togo border was sealed off. It gave no explanation, and it was not immediately known if the two events were related.

The military communique said Acheampong resigned as head of state and also retired from the armed forces, which have ruled the West African country since 1972.

A terse statement said only, "This decision has been taken to ensure the unity and stability of the nation." It gave no explanation.

The agency said the statement had taken the nation by surprise.

Ghana, a union of the former British colony of Gold Coast and the U.N. Trust Territory of British Togoland, became an independent member of the British Commonwealth on March 6, 1957.

In February 1966, the army overthrew President Kwame Nkrumah, and the military and police ruled the country until October 1969, when the military restored civil liberties. Dr. Kofi Busia, a sociology professor-turned-politician, was elected prime minister.

The Oxford-educated Busia conducted a lonely experiment in democracy for just over two years in a continent whose nations are controlled predominantly by military strongmen and one-party governments.

His efforts were seriously hampered by economic problems brought on by falling world prices for cocao, Ghana's chief export crop and main source of foreign capital.

Fighting a massive $800 million foreign debt, Busia devalued Ghana's currency 44 percent and imposed stiff austerity measures in 1971 that hit at civil servants and more significantly the army.

Acheampong and his followers ousted Busia in a coup Jan. 13, 1972, that followed widespread grumbling over the austerity program and cuts in military expenditures.

The new military government withdrew the 1969 constitution and banned political activity.

Acheampong repudiated $94 million of the nation's foreign debts which he said resulted from corrupt deals in the Nkrumah era. Late in 1972, he announced the government was taking over 55 percent of all foreign-owned mining and timber companies.

Despite these moves, the economy has remained on shaky ground and efforts to recoup a staggering trade deficit were dealt a severe blow when world oil prices tripled in 1973. The inflation rate topped 100 percent last year and widespread famine has been reported in northern Ghana.

Negotiations Aimed At Avoiding Secession

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — "Peace negotiations" between the tiny town of Brinnon and Washington state were staged Wednesday in an effort to forestall a war declared because of a dispute over speed limits.

Ron Bockstruck, acting regional administrator of the Department of Transportation, met with businessmen and residents and proposed what he called a "three-point peace plan" to end the Hood Canal town's threats to secede from the state.

More than two dozen residents of the town along U.S. 101 last week signed a declaration of war against the state. The real aim: to reduce the speed limit from 50 to 35 miles per hour along a section of the highway.

Bockstruck, along with officials of the Washington State Patrol and the Parks and Recreation Commission, said they would give official sanction to the 35-mile-per-hour advisory signs and congestion warnings installed by community "rebels."

This will give the department two weeks to see how effective the signs are in slowing traffic — mostly vacationers visiting nearby state parks in the area bordering the scenic Olympic Mountains.

If that doesn't work, the department will consider officially lowering the speed during the summer vacation season only. The final alternative is a lower speed limit the year around, Bockstruck said.

"Secession or not, we realize the people of Brinnon are serious in their concern for highway safety, and so are we," said Bockstruck before the meeting.

He said he thinks the people of Brinnon will agree with the department's proposals, which also include parking and traffic improvements at a nearby state park and highway improvements scheduled for next year.

706 Die On Highways On Four-Day Holiday

By The Associated Press

In advance of the holiday, the National Safety Council estimated that between 650 and 750 persons might be killed on the nation's roads between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Tuesday.

During a normal four-day, non-holiday weekend at this time of the year, a highway toll of 560 persons could be expected.

Zoning Change Requests Face Commissioners

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Zone changes for a new subdivision north of 19th Street and east of Milwaukee Avenue will again be considered by Planning and Zoning commissioners today after no action on the request was taken last month.

Developer S. Shami had requested single-family residential (R-1) zoning on the 120-acre tract be changed to two-family (R-2), family apartment (A-1) and general retail (C-3).

On the advice of city staff members, commission members objected to the size of the general retail area and continued the discussion until this month's meeting.

Also at the 7 p.m. meeting in council chambers, commissioners will hear a request of A.D. Brown, representing M.L. Gardner Estate, to change a tract south of Clovis Road and west of the intersection of Fordham Street and Clovis Road, from general retail zoning (C-3) to commercial (C-4) to allow a used car lot.

Victor Igal will seek a zone change from local retail (C-2) to C-3 for a dinner theater to be located south of 4th Street and west of Frankford Avenue.

Fancy Richardson will request a change from C-2 to C-4 zoning south of Parkway Drive and west of Zenith Avenue. The change would permit a game room.

Donald Smith, representing Bowman Lumber Co., will request a zone change from R-1 to A-1 to allow apartment construction south of 82nd and east of University Avenue.

A change from R-2 to C-4 specific use will be requested by Alton Shipley, who wants to build mini-warehouses on a tract east of Avenue H and south of 44th Street.

Nelson Hall, representing Mesquite-Ring, Inc., will request a zone change from C-3 to C-4 to permit a lot for recreational vehicle sales on a tract south of Clovis Road and west of Flint Avenue.

A change from C-2 to C-3 requested by Ken Flagg for Sonny Arnold, will allow the construction of a convenience store with self-service gas pumps on a tract south of 34th Street and west of LaSalle Avenue.

Billy Meeks, representing Tara Land Co., will ask the commission to approve a change from R-1 to R-2 and A-1. The zone change would allow a buffer between single-family residential and a mobile home park.

John Orr, representing Communities Development Corp., will seek a change from R-3 specific use, allowing a mobile home park, to A-1 on a tract south of Loop 289 and west of North Quaker Avenue.

Joe Feagin will ask the commission to change a site plan which originally permitted 150 units to allow the construction of 200 units on property west of Elgin Avenue and south of 74th Street.

Mike Field, representing Peace Tabernacle, will request a change from R-1 to R-2 on property west of Frankford Avenue and south of 68th Street to create a buffer between church property and single-family residences.

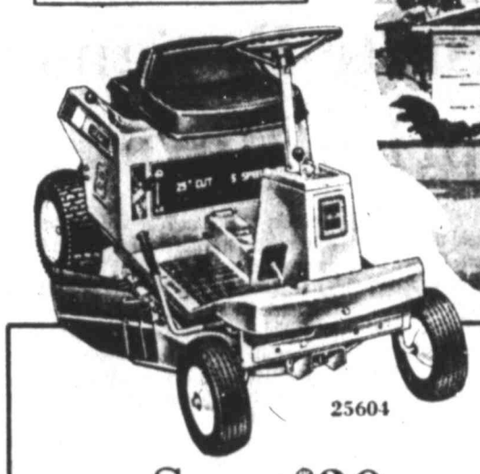

John Abney, representing Abney & Hatch, will seek an amended site plan for a shopping center north of Loop 289 and east of Slide Road. This request makes the fifth time the commission has been asked to make a decision on the proposed shopping center since 1975.

Audrey Fiel, representing Southeastern Plaza, Inc., will ask the commission to approve a change from apartment-medical (AM) to hotel/retail on property located south of 19th Street and east of Memphis Avenue. Fiel proposes to construct a motel on the location.

Dollar Moves Upward Slightly After Record Low Against Yen

By The Associated Press

The dollar moved higher in slow trading on New York and European foreign-exchange markets Wednesday after hitting another record low against the Japanese yen in Tokyo earlier in the day.

Dealers attributed the recovery to profit-taking and European central bank intervention, and to promises of Japanese central bank action to halt the dollar's slide. But one West German dealer said confidence in the dollar is "at a very low level."

The price of gold fell in Zurich, meanwhile, to $184.375 an ounce, down 25 cents from $184.625 Tuesday. It dropped 35 cents an ounce in London to $184.20, from $184.55.

In Tokyo, Wednesday, the dollar inched toward the 200-yen mark, opening at 200.50 yen and closing at 200.975, down from 201.325 Tuesday. Later in New York, the dollar recovered to 201.60 yen. New York foreign-exchange markets were closed Tuesday for the Independence Day holiday; in late London trading Tuesday the dollar had closed at 200.80 yen.

Bank of Japan Governor Teiichiro Morinaga said the central bank would intervene to prevent wild fluctuations in the yen's value and told reporters the dollar would be kept above 200 yen.

The statement appeared to be aimed at halting heavy dollar selling based on a feeling that the dollar has nowhere to go but down unless America's problems of inflation and trade deficits are solved.

Expectations were that the dollar would drop below 200 yen before the summit meeting of seven industrial powers in Bonn, West Germany July 16-17, but dealers also expected heavy Bank of Japan intervention at that level.

Dealers said the central bank believed a break through the 200-yen barrier would deal a heavy psychological blow to Japanese exporters, whose goods tend to be made more expensive by the yen's rise, although their raw materials and energy become cheaper.

Dealers said, meanwhile, that foreign central banks bought about $85 million in European trading Wednesday to shore up the dollar. At the close of New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 2.0565 West German marks, up from Wednesday's late Frankfurt rate of 2.0485 and Tuesday's Frankfurt close of 2.0460.

The dollar rose against the Swiss franc in New York trading, closing at 1.8178 francs, up from 1.81475 Wednesday in Zurich, a gain from Tuesday's Zurich close of 1.7970.

Other late dollar rates included 4.4537 French francs in New York, up from 4.43875 in Paris earlier in the day and up from 4.4387 francs in Paris Tuesday; 2.2065 Dutch guilders in Amsterdam, unchanged from Tuesday; and 846.30 Italian lire in Milan, up from 845.05 the day before.

It took $1.8680 to buy a British pound in New York Wednesday. In London, the pound closed at $1.8703, compared with $1.87325 Tuesday.

Antitrust Suit Ends Deadlocked

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A nearly $1 billion antitrust suit filed by Memorex against International Business Machines ended in mistrial Wednesday when a federal jury reported 20 days of deliberation had left it in a "futile" 9-2 deadlock.

The six men and five women on the jury said they originally were deadlocked 5-4 in favor of Memorex with two undecided. About 10 days later the vote changed to 7 to 4 and a switch five days ago made it 9-2 for Memorex.

Memorex attorney John Endicott said he would go ahead with a retrial by another jury.

Memorex had alleged IBM violated antitrust laws by attempting to monopolize the electronic data processing industry. It claimed IBM eliminated competition through unfair leasing practices and predatory pricing.

U.S. District Judge Samuel Conti heard the case, which began Jan 19.

The jury sent a note to Conti Wednesday saying: "Each of us feels that the evidence tilts the scale in one way or another and all attempts to change the other's minds are futile."

Conti then asked attorneys if they would stipulate that instead of a unanimous verdict, they would accept a verdict favored by three-fourths of the jury or one from the first six jurors originally selected.

Memorex attorney John Endicott said his client would agree, but IBM lawyer Patrick Lynch said the huge computer firm would not.

The judge then suggested cutting the jury to seven members by using preemptory challenges with a three-quarters vote for a verdict. As an alternative he suggested selection of six jurors on the basis of drawing names.

Memorex agreed to that, too, but IBM refused.

Memorex, which filed its suit in 1973, asked for $306 million in damages, which would be tripled under antitrust law.

During the trial, Memorex attorney Endicott told the jury the outcome could determine whether the nation's economy will be "controlled by monopoly power or the competitive process."

Lynch told jurors his client was innocent of any wrongdoing and merely has been following good business practices in lowering prices and introducing new products in an effort to make the most profit.

Dignitaries To Observe Solomons' Freedom

HONIARA, Solomon Islands (AP) — Britain's Solomon Islands, which include Guadalcanal, one of World War II's bloodiest battlegrounds, become independent Friday. Visitors here to mark the event range from British royalty to a former Seabee who says he's looking for his old foxhole.

The United States, Britain and Japan have sent delegations to the ceremonies, but there is some grumbling locally about the choices.

Britain sent the young Duke and Duchess of Gloucester to represent Queen Elizabeth II. Some islanders say they're too reserved and openly wish the more vibrant Prince Charles had been sent instead.

The United States sent former astronaut Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, and two warships. Island leaders say they would have preferred Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

The Kennedy name is well known here. Former President John F. Kennedy fought in the Solomons. His patrol boat, PT109, was sunk in a night battle with Japanese destroyers.

Many islanders feel the British didn't want Sen. Kennedy because he would outshine the 34-year-old duke and the duchess, who is 32.

But most of the 200,000 Melanesians on the primitive, 900-mile string of islands east of New Guinea and northeast of Australia, who speak more than 70 languages among them, are showing little excitement for the formal, British-organized affair, the marching band and the cocktail parties that are closing out 85 years of rule.

Politics is a friendly business in these islands once known for cannibalism, and no missionary has been killed here since 1965. The new governor-general, Baddely Devesi, 37, is the Solomons' champion snooker player. The game is similar to pool.

The British have promised $43 million over the next four years to supplement the islands' $20 million budget and will leave some advisers after independence. The islands have had an interim self-government since Jan. 2, 1976.

The government requisitioned their hotel rooms for official visitors, forcing the hotel's manager to put them up eight to a room in his own house.

But it was better than in August 1942, when the Marines landed at Red Beach to start one of the most decisive battles of the Pacific War. The Solomons, which include Bougainville and New Georgia, were the scene of the first big Allied push in the Pacific.

"Ah, hell. I'd sleep on the beach," said former Marine Gunnery Sgt. Ed Twohill, 55, of Yonkers, N.Y., who was in the first wave of Marines to hit Guadalcanal. "I did it before."

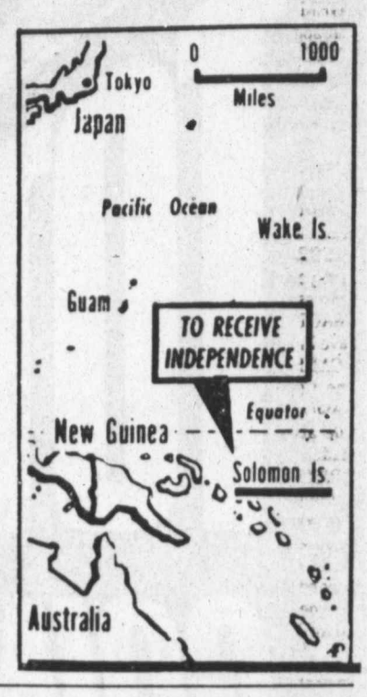

Walter Pfaffinger, 65, a former Seabee and now a farmer from Blue Earth, Minn., said his biggest thrill was returning to Henderson Field, the air base he helped build under fire.

"I'm going to go back there tomorrow and see if I can find my old foxhole," he said.

The Japanese, who have fishing ventures here, are also represented. One delegate, Takeo Kameoka, a former Cabinet minister, was wounded at Guadalcanal.

Despite the war relics and so many sunken ships they call the harbor Iron Bottom Bay, the islanders rarely mention the war.

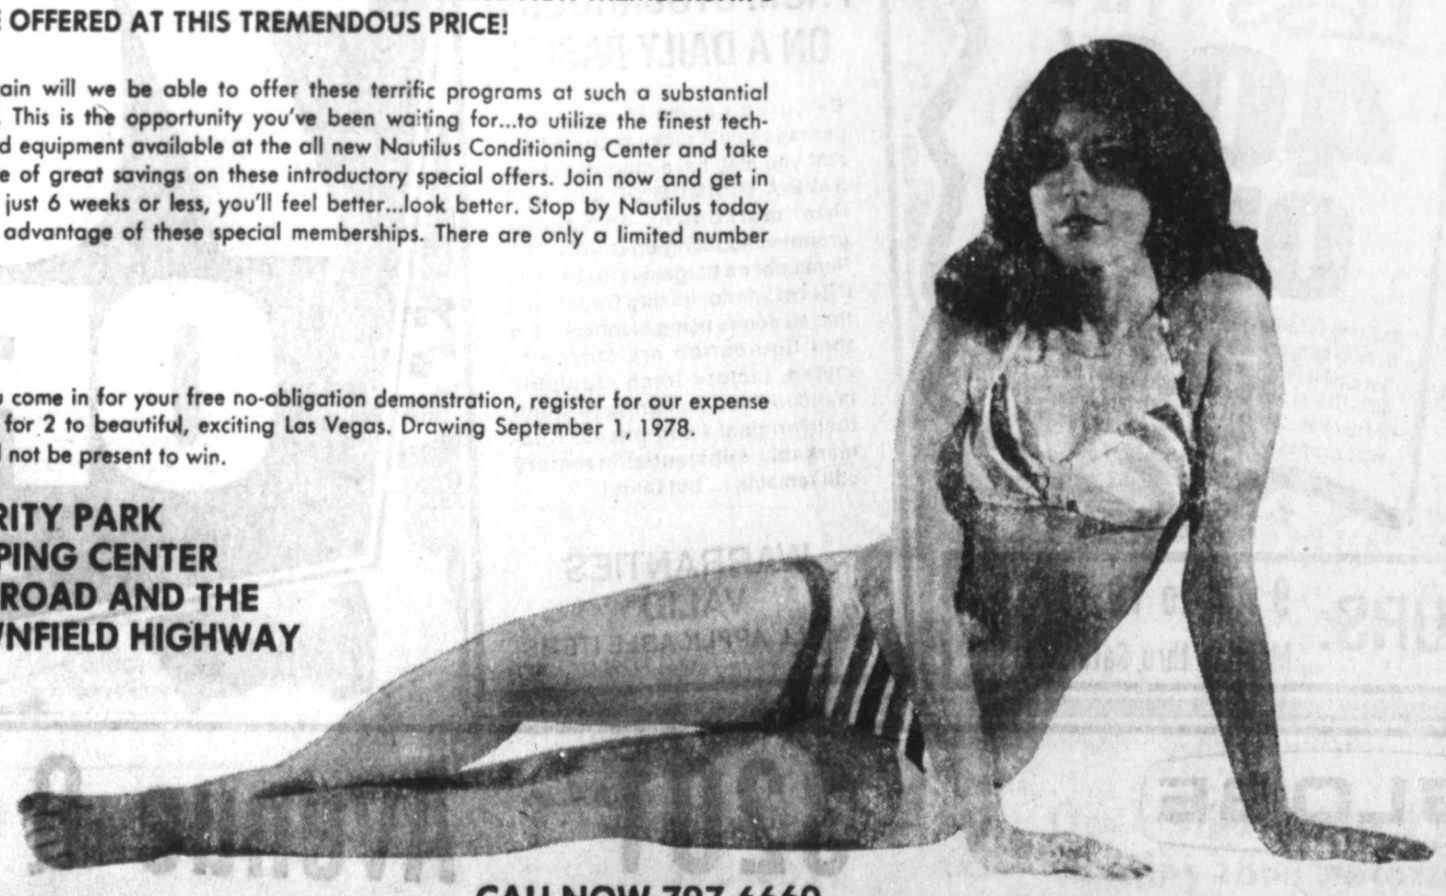

Their focus is on lifting the economy from its subsistence level with new crops of rice and oil palm and cattle breeding to supplement the traditional earners, copra and timber.

Disclosure Figures Released

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal law enforcement agencies spent nearly $36 million to comply with Freedom of Information and Privacy Act requests over a three-year period beginning in 1975, a new congressional report shows.

Prepared for a Senate Judiciary subcommittee as part of a study of "erosion of law enforcement intelligence gathering capabilities," the report was based on a review of 13 agencies by the General Accounting Office.

But in keeping with policy, the GAO — Congress' auditing agency — drew no conclusions as to whether inquiries under the two laws had actually hampered intelligence operations.

Neither did investigators try to "evaluate the balancing benefits of the legislation, such as increased citizen confidence resulting from providing access to government information," the study said.

However, the report quoted unnamed Justice Department officials as saying a more liberal policy toward the release of information had resulted from a review last year of some 600 cases pending in courts.

It said the 13 agencies handled a total of 147,000 requests during the period of study. They included the FBI, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Drug Enforcement Administration, Internal Revenue Service, Customs, Secret Service; Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms; Postal Service and a number of Pentagon units. The CIA was not among the agencies examined.

The report said the Immigration Service and the FBI, both divisions of the Justice Department, dealt with the most requests — 51,000 and 43,000 respectively, with the FBI spending by far the most money, $13.8 million.

The civil and tax divisions of the Justice Department, which handle litigation under the two laws, spent about $900,000 on court cases in 1976-77, it said.

The Freedom of Information Act, adopted in 1966 and amended in 1974, established means for increased public access to documents held by the government unless specifically exempted by law.

The Privacy Act, passed in 1974, was intended to give access to personal records and prevent official abuses of them, while protecting confidentiality where merited. However, some agencies have claimed difficulty in complying with one law without risking violation of the other.

The study said the Justice Department's civil division, which handles all court cases under the acts except tax cases, has had a "continually increased workload" since 1975. It quoted an official as saying the staff of 11 attorneys assigned to the cases should be doubled "in view of the important and difficult litigation requirements" of the two laws.

It quoted department officials as saying that most cases are settled out of court and the government wins most of those that are tried.

Yantis To Seek Confirmation

AUSTIN (AP) — State Insurance Board Chairman Hugh Yantis said Wednesday that he will seek confirmation by the Senate in the special session that opens Monday.

He denied reports that he was planning to resign rather than face what is expected a to be a bitter confirmation fight.

"Except for the fact that I do not know who my sponsoring senators will be, I'll play it right down the middle ... I will go before the committee. My record shows I ought to be confirmed but, if they don't wish to, that will be up to them," Yantis said in an interview.

At one time Yantis spoke of his changing his official residence to Seguin, the home of Sen. John Traeger, who supports Yantis' confirmation. But Yantis said Wednesday he has taken no step, such as the purchase of property, to establish residence in Seguin.

Yantis said he would not be surprised if insurance companies were lobbying for the 11 senate votes needed to reject his appointment.

"They are very upset that I won't give them a 'homeowners' rate increase," Yantis said.

The board meets Thursday to act on property insurance rates. Yantis claims he has the votes necessary to prevent the increase in homeowners coverage.

Yantis formerly was executive director of the Texas Water Quality Board until the agency went out of existence last Sept. 1, and Gov. Dolph Briscoe soon afterwards appointed him insurance board chairman to replace Joe Christie, who made an unsuccessful race for the Democrat nomination for U.S. Senate.

School's Government Contract In Jeopardy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government accused the University of California at Berkeley on Wednesday of impeding a federal review of the school's employment practices concerning women and minority faculty members.

The departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare charged in a joint complaint that the university refused to let HEW remove and copy academic records pertaining to the hiring of faculty members.

The government alleged that the university's action violates federal equal employment opportunity requirements and jeopardizes a $1.5 million contract renewal pending with the Navy.

The government requires federal contractors to meet certain guidelines concerning the hiring and promotion of women and minorities.

Contractors with awards of more than $1 million are subject to reviews of their equal employment opportunity records and affirmative action programs undertaken on behalf of women and minorities.

The Labor Department said that contractors also are required to furnish and allow duplication of all information the government seeks to determine if the guidelines are being met.

The review of Berkeley's employment records was part of the government's routine check of contractors and was not prompted by any complaints of job discrimination, according to the government.

The Labor Department said the university allowed the government to review the documents when requested in March, but would not let them be copied and removed from the Berkeley campus, citing the need to protect the confidentiality of the records.

A complaint was issued after efforts to seek a compromise broke down, the department said.

The university has 20 days to respond to the complaint and request a hearing before an administrative law judge. The judge could then recommend that the school be barred from future federal contract work.

Pending is a two-year extension of research work being done for the Navy by the university's naval bio-science laboratory.

Local Glider Pilots To Receive Awards

Two Lubbock glider enthusiasts have completed requirements for the highest award given by the Federation Aeronatique International.

Darrel Watson of 5108 72nd St. and Dr. James Crisp of 4601 22nd St. will receive, subject to the international organization's final approval of the pilots' documentation, the Diamond Badge.

Watson and Dr. Crisp flew from Marfa to Lubbock via Big Lake Sunday to fulfill the 500-kilometer distance requirement.

Documentation included verification of distance and altitude attained as well as photographic evidence of the route flown.

Each pilot has received preliminary badges, the Silver and Gold, to the Diamond Badge.

National Archives Selling Old Posters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Archives is offering a set of four colorful reprints of World War I posters urging civilians to back the war effort.

Included is Haskell Coffin's famous Joan of Arc poster carrying the message: "Joan of Arc Saved France — Women of America Save Your Country — Buy War Savings Stamps."

The other three posters were issued by the Agriculture Department and Food Administration covering canning of foods and encouraging eating more fish and vegetables.

The posters measure 20 by 26 inches and sell for $2.50 each or the three food posters as a set for $6.50. Order from the Cashier, National Archives (GSA), Washington, D.C., 20408. Make checks payable to NATS (NEPS).

Casino Take: Half Million Daily

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The East's only legal casino is winning an average of $534,627 a day and will take in more than $192 million in its first year, if gamblers keep up their frantic betting pace here.

On Wednesday, officials of the Resorts International Hotel Casino released figures for June showing their new casino won $16.04 million in its first full month of operation.

The new average daily win figure is 22 percent higher than the average daily win of $438,504 reported for the casino's first six days from May 26 through May 31, which includes the Memorial Day weekend.

"Those were pretty good figures," chairman James M. Crosby conceded. "It's attracting other people to town to build their own casinos, which is the point of it all."

Crosby said he didn't expect the casino to continue winning at the same pace during the winter, traditionally the slowest time in this seashore resort. But, Crosby said, he hoped his casino could avoid the 10 to 15 percent wintertime slump experienced by northern Nevada casinos.

The casino's win — which is actually the amount lost by gamblers — is similar to a business' gross revenues before capital costs, operating expenses and taxes.

By law, New Jersey receives eight percent of a casino's gross revenues for senior citizens and the disabled. This will amount to $1.28 million in June alone.

A casino's win figure is usually just over 20 percent of its "drop," or the total amount bet in a casino. The new figures mean that more than $2.7 million is wagered in the casino every day.

Resorts International officials said slot machines accounted for an average win of $240,050 per day, or about 45 percent of the total. They said table games brought in an average of $294,577 a day, or about 55 percent of the total.

This is a reversal of the casino's first six days, when officials said that slots averaged $242,536 per day, or 55.3 percent of the total. They said table games averaged $195,968 per day, or 44.7 percent of the total.

Crosby said the table games will continue to earn a higher percentage as the casino extends more credit to gamblers.

"And, of course, our dealers are getting more proficient and handling more business," he said.

In the casino's first days, about 19 percent of its 893 new slot machines were broken down and between 11 percent and 21 percent of its 84 table games were not open, according to company figures.

Resorts International did not give similar information in its June report. However, Crosby said fewer slot machines were broken in June and more tables were opened as additional dealers were licensed by the state early in the month.

The company has asked the New Jersey Casino Control Commission for permission to expand its present 33,000-square-foot casino by about 60 percent in floor space, adding 461 more slot machines and 56 more table games. The expanded casino is furnished and waiting commission approval, which is expected soon.

U.S. Firm To Help Build Belgian Plant

CLEVELAND (AP) — The McKee Corp., an international engineering and construction firm, said Wednesday its Belgian affiliate, McKee-Tractionel Petrochem, received a contract to provide engineering services for a multi-million dollar lube oil additives plant in Belgium.

McKee said it will provide design, engineering and construction supervision for the facility, which will produce chemical additives and blend additive formulations used in lubricating oil.

The company said the plant, to be constructed for Edwin Cooper S.A., a wholly owned affiliate of Ethyl Corp., will help meet expanding requirements for such products in Euorpe, the Middle East and Africa. Completion is scheduled for early 1980, the company said.

Water Board Hearing Set

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Water Commission has set a hearing for July 11 on the application of Ivan Dement Inc. for a temporary permit to divert and use six acre-feet of water for a two-year period from a reservoir in Hall County for highway construction.

The reservoir is on an unnamed tributary of Jonah and Parker creeks, Prairie Dog Town Fork of the Red River.

Blind Picket Aviation Building

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chanting "FAA, see our way," about 1,000 blind persons demonstrated Wednesday against a rule that forces them to surrender their white canes during airliner takeoffs and landings.

The demonstraters, some led by guide dogs, tapped their canes on the pavement as they marched in a tight, orderly circle in front of the headquarters of the Federal Aviation Administration.

They carried signs proclaiming: "FAA Unfair to Blind Travelers," "Fly Me, Cane and All," and "Canes Are Not Baggage."

They singled out United Airlines as the prime offender, with placards saying: "United Skies Are Unfriendly."

The marchers came by bus from Baltimore, where the National Federation of the Blind is holding its annual convention. After two hours they returned to Baltimore, 40 miles north of Washington.

"We think the FAA is overregulating," said James Gashel, chief of the federation's Washington office. "It should stick to regulating on the more important issues and let blind people have their canes on airliners. A cane is part of us and would be our means of getting out of an aircraft if there is an accident."

The demonstrators refused an invitation for their representatives to meet inside the building with FAA officials.

"We talked to them last week and got no response," said Gashel. "So this time we told them no. This time we want to speak to the American people.

"The only way we ever get the FAA to move is to come out on the streets, go to the media and create a spectacle," he added.

FAA spokesman Pete Clapper defended the rule, which requires flight attendants to stow long rigid canes during takeoffs and landings. He said that in the case of turbulence or an accident, canes could be a potential hazard as projectiles, and could block exits or puncture escape chutes during evacuation.

"Our complete sympathy is with these people," he said. "We want to seek an accommodation that will meet their needs as well as the safety of all aboard an aircraft."

Repesentatives of seven blind organizations met last week with Quentin Taylor, FAA deputy administrator. Taylor said the agency would consider alternatives such as providing sightless passengers with folding canes or with safe storage places near their seats.

"It was the typical bureaucratic nonsense we get out of the FAA," Gashel said of last week's meeting. "There has never been a case where a cane hurt anyone on an airplane. Blind people have a right to hold on to their canes."

The federation earlier this year asked a federal court to declare the regulation null and void. But the judge said it was a lawful and enforceable regulation. The case now is before the U.S. Court of Appeals here.

Ralph Sanders of Baltimore, president of the federation, said United Airline is the only carrier enforcing the rule. But Clapper said an FAA survey showed that all major airlines are enforcing it.

Twice in the last six months Sanders has had run-ins with United over his cane when he boarded flights at Baltimore-Washington International Airport. The federation said that 15 members enroute to the Baltimore convention this week were forced off United flights because they failed to surrender their canes. United believes these are the reasons it has been singled out.

Embassy Occupation Thwarted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eleven persons were arrested Wednesday after an unsuccessful attempt to occupy the Syrian embassy here, the Secret Service said.

Ken Lynch, a Secret Service spokesman, said nine men and two women were charged with willful destruction of property owned by a foreign government after their arrest at the embassy.

Two unidentified men called The Associated Press to report that Lebanese-Americans had occupied the embassy. Lynch said Secret Service agents and uniformed officers responded to a report of disorderly conduct at the embassy a short time later.

Syrian troops, who make up the bulk of an Arab League peacekeeping army, have battled with Lebanese Christian militiamen in Beirut since late last week as cease-fires repeatedly collapsed. Lebanese casualties were reported heavy.

No details were available on exactly what embassy property allegedly was destroyed by the demonstrators.

The embassy incident came as about 100 other persons sympathetic to Lebanon held a demonstration in front of the White House. Those protestors burned what they said was a Syrian flag, but no disorders were reported.

Steel Producers Want Action To Alleviate Import Problems

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Steelmakers are growing impatient for effective relief from alleged import dumping, industry officials say.

The government is trying to curb imports through a minimum price system designed to discourage dumping — the sale of foreign goods in the U.S. for less than the cost of production.

Yet through May, foreign steel totaled 9.4 million tons, better than 50 percent ahead of the record pace set a year ago when imports were blamed for losses and layoffs.

Lewis Foy, chairman of the American Iron and Steel Institute, says he is disappointed with the administration's trigger price system.

"In view of the high import rate, steel producers obviously will continue to explore alternative means of import relief," he said.

This could include anti-dumping suits or pressure in Congress for quotas or tariffs, industry sources say.

Foy, chairman of Bethlehem Steel, spoke out after the government released May figures showing imports totalling 1.5 million tons. Treasury Department officials had predicted a one million ton level.

May was critical because it was the first month after an April 30 deadline for the arrival of major products ordered before trigger prices took effect. Foreign tonnage had risen dramatically as importers sought to beat the deadline.

"We believe that if the plan is effective, there should have been strong results in May," said an industry source.

National Steel Chairman George Stinson said recently that another month at the May level would create a "very critical problem" and force producers to make "some tough decisions."

The trigger plan was designed to cut imports to 12 million to 14 million tons annually. But current import entry suggests a level approaching 18 million tons.

Treasury Department officials, who are implementing the trigger price plan, say the system is working better than some industry officials have allowed, however.

Japan's exports were down 58 percent in May to 360,000 tons. European steel amounted to 476,000 tons, down 22.8 percent.

"Because of the rush to beat the deadline, we're fairly certain the first few days of May show an unusual bulge," said a spokesman, who declined to be identified.

In addition, preliminary analysis of May shipments shows that products covered by trigger prices declined sharply, he said. Some steel is eligible to enter the U.S. market through June 30.

A trouble spot are imports from smaller nations like South Korea, Mexico, Spain and South Africa. These nations shipped 45 percent of the May import total, more than double a year earlier.

"We're taking a hard look at that kind of market share," said the Treasury official, noting that the government is investigating five countries for possible steel dumping.

"We just don't want people to be too pessimistic too soon."

Insulation Law Approval By Carter Expected Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is expected to place his signature soon on a measure setting a federal safety standard for cellulose home insulation, an increasingly popular consumer item linked to fire hazards.

Within a few days, Carter is expected to sign the bill, which cleared Congress last week. The legislation is an attempt to deal with fly-by-night insulation firms that sprang up after Carter urged Americans to insulate their homes to save money in fuel bills and to ease the national energy problem.

Cellulose insulation consists of ground newspaper treated with chemicals that retard fires.

"If it is done the wrong way, it can do more harm than good," said Sen. Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., the chief sponsor of the bill. Ford said consumers have no way of knowing if their insulation still will be fire-resistant several years after it is treated.

"Some operators were going around with a grinder in the back of a truck and putting ground-up newspaper directly into the attic and the eaves of a house," Ford said in an interview.

According to a Federal Trade Commission estimate, six million Americans insulated or reinsulated their homes last year, outstripping the supplies of traditional fiberglass and mineral-wool types of house insulation. Because of shortages, much of the new insulation has been cellulose.

Ford said he introduced the bill out of exasperation with the Consumer Product Safety Commission, the agency responsible for policing the safety of goods on the marketplace.

He said the commission's own Denver office proposed in June of 1975 that the agency study the safety of home insulation. However, he said the commission did not initiate proceedings until November of 1977 and is not expected to have regulations in effect until next year.

"Their Denver office said this is dangerous and we have to take a look at it. And they didn't do anything," Ford said.

Potter Ruckus Flares Over Budget 'Threat'

AMARILLO (AP) — Another chapter in a series of intergovernment squabbling in Potter County has erupted, this time pitting the district attorney against the county commissioners in a dispute over the district attorney's budget.

Potter County Commissioner Steve Scott tape recorded the conversation he had with District Attorney Tom Curtis last month in which Curtis threatened to sue the commissioners if they reduced the salaries of his staff.

Scott and a majority of the other commissioners voted in favor of some budget increases for Curtis, but later Scott apparently felt he had been unfairly coerced and released the tape to the Amarillo Globe-News.

The newspaper Sunday ran a transcript of the conversation, quoting Curtis telling Scott that if the commissioners tried to cut the salary of the DA's staff "I'd try to seek an injunction immediately against you in the state and federal courts."

In another part of the conversation Curtis said he was "fixing to get after them good," referring to two commissioners who sought to cut his staff's salaries.

Scott consulted Attorney General John Hill, who questioned the ethics of Curtis' actions but said no laws were broken. Curtis said Wednesday he was merely warning the commissioners that it was against the law for commissioners to slash salaries in a prosecutor's office.

"If the commissioners court had cut my assistants' pay, I assure you as I assured Commisioner Steve Scott that I would have brought the suit that I threatened in my conversation with him."

Several Potter County public officials have had felony charges brought against them for various and separate incidents in a situation local residents have dubbed "Pottergate."

A county commissioner is appealing a theft conviction, the county attorney faces charges of taking a bribe, perjury and theft, plus charges of assault in nearby Randall County, and the sheriff has survived a civil removal hearing that is on appeal.

with the continued problem of inflation."

Tommie Stevens, president of Texas Commerce Bank, also said higher interest rates will be an economic depressant.

"In my opinion, Lubbock is still on a very strong economic base," Stevens said.

"Looking to year-end with current crop prospects and with the recent rise in some commodity prices, it would appear that the Lubbock area economy would remain strong. It would also appear that higher interest rates will be a depressant on new construction."

Rodney Joy, president of the Bank of the West, said a nationwide increase in interest rates and inflation will have some effect on Lubbock.

"I think the outlook for the remainder of the year is for slower growth and higher inflation and a further rise in interest rates," Joy said.

Douglas Boren, president of Security National Bank, observed that retail sales have been a strong point in the Lubbock economy.

Sitting Near Smoker Said Bad For Heart

BOSTON (AP) — Sitting near cigarette smokers makes people with bad hearts more susceptible to the sometimes crippling chest pain called angina, a federal study says.

The findings give new ammunition to cigarette foes who want to ban or at least segregate smoking in lobbies, restaurants and other public places.

"Since there are millions of people who have angina who are adversely affected by smoking, it is a definite health hazard," Dr. Wilbert S. Aronow, who directed the study, said in an interview.

The study found that men with heart trouble could not exercise as long as normal after they sat in a room with cigarette-puffing experimenters. Some of them also had premature ventricular heart beats, a disorder associated with sudden death.

The results, gathered at the Veterans Administration hospital in Long Beach, Calif., were published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Aronow tested 10 men who had suffered in the past from angina. He measured the effects on their bodies of sitting in 11-by-12-foot rooms for two hours with three people, each of whom smoked five cigarettes.

Ordinarily, the men could exercise for four minutes before chest pains set in. But after breathing in the smoke-filled room, their average exercise limit fell to 2½ minutes.

Because of the smoke, their heart rates increased, their blood pressures rose and three of them had irregular heart beats.

Aronow said that breathing other people's cigarette smoke, or "passive smoking," is not as bad as smoking directly.

"An active smoker is at worst risk, but nevertheless, a passive smoker is still at significant risk," he said.

Aronow said the carbon monoxide in cigarette smoke cuts down the amount of oxygen in the blood. At the same time, the nicotine in the smoke increases the heart's demand for oxygen.

The situation is aggravated in angina patients. The vessels of their hearts can supply less oxygen than normal because they have been damaged by disease.

The symptoms of angina vary from a vague ache to a crippling, crushing pain. It is usually triggered by physical activity.

MULESHOE (Special) — Bobby Grumbles of Muleshoe won Tuesday's world champion muleshoe pitching contest beating Russell Magby, who had held the title for the past two years.

FACES THAT MATCH THE NUMBERS

Search For Work Proves Frustrating

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

Felix Morales slammed the door and stormed into his house, heavy black boots assaulting the floors. The echoing thump-thump-thump telegraphed an image of menace.

In the Brooklyn street gang known as the Sex Survivors, he is called Felix the Cat, but the suggestion of feline stealth doesn't fit. On this spring afternoon, he displays the blunt anger of an enraged bull.

Felix stalked into the kitchen and rummaged through the refrigerator for a cold beer, only half listening as the trio in the living room continued a conversation about the stubbornly high unemployment rate among black and Hispanic youth and what it means on Essex Street, Brooklyn, U.S.A.

Lewie sprawled on the sofa, his white T-shirt barely covering a beer-fed middle of immense proportions. At 28, Lewie Morales is the leader, elder statesman and father confessor of the Sex Survivors. He philosophizes about his tribe.

"They got this attitude that nobody gives a damn about them. They can't go around all their lives with this attitude. One day they gonna go out and kill some innocent person, and that's not my bag.

"But these kids aren't stupid, you know? They're not stupid at all. A lot of these kids could turn out to be some really hip citizens, tomorrow, if they were given a chance."

He looms in the doorway, a forbidding six-foot figure in jeans and a black leather jacket with the sleeves cut out to better expose rippling biceps. His head is swathed in a red bandanna, topped with a black felt Zorro-type hat slanted over glowering black eyes.

It is a uniform Felix has planned as carefully as any Wall Street lawyer choosing the three-piece pinstripes of moneyed Manhattan. The uniform sends a message and Felix knows this and has chosen the message he wants to send.

"You see me walk into a place the way I'm dressed, you give me a job?" he bellowed as if daring anyone to say yes. Change is unthinkable because "this is my style, man!"

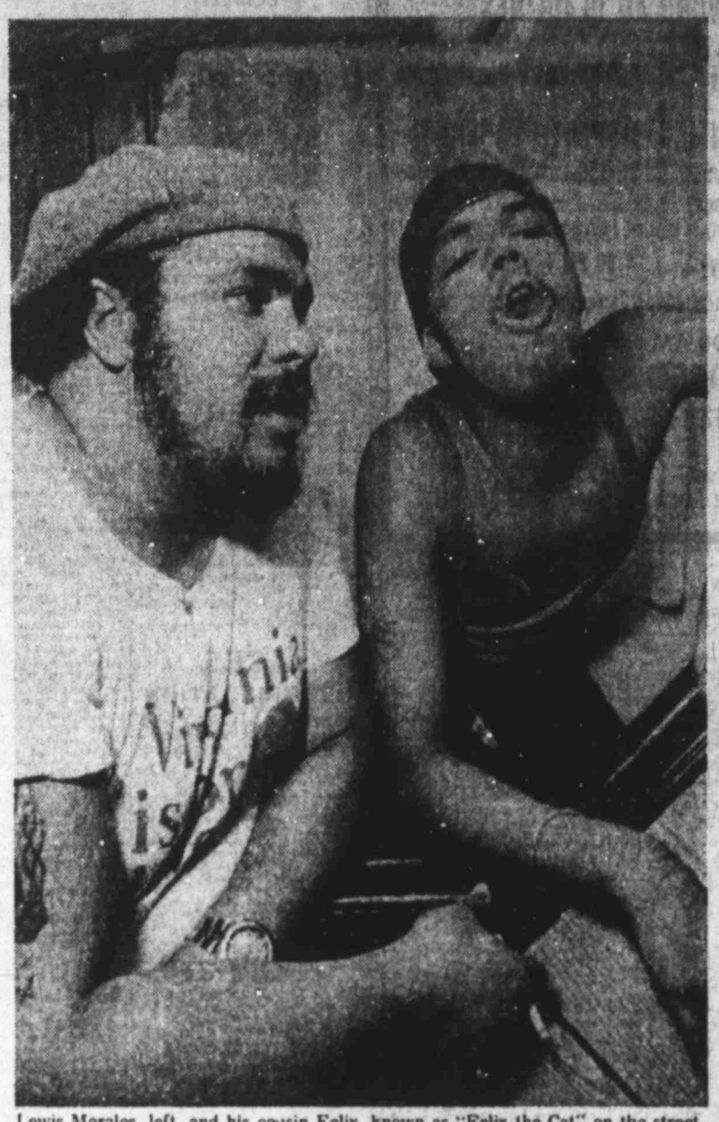

But Felix faes a much more serious barrier to employment than his rebellious fashions. He cannot read much more than a stop sign, and he cannot write much more than his name.

He displayed no sign of embarrassment about it, perhaps because reading is simply not an essential skill on Essex Street.

Why? The explanation comes from John Galea, whose plainclothes work with the Police Department's youth gang unit makes him more social worker than cop:

"A lot of these kids can't read. They drop out of school and pass the time hanging around the streets or the gang clubhouse. They never get very far from the neighborhood and they know all the locations by sight. They never have to read bus signs because they don't take buses."

"Felix is realistic," Galea continued. "He knows there are certain kinds of jobs he can't get because he can't read or write. He's had a few jobs, working in candy stores or grocery stores around the neighborhood. No, no, not as a cashier, nothing that required much skill. Just unloading stuff, sweeping up, things like that."

Lewis Morales, left, and his cousin Felix, known as "Felix the Cat" on the street, smoke in their Brooklyn, N.Y., home. At 28, Lewis is the leader, elder statesman and father confessor of the Sex Survivors, his gang. (AP Laserphoto)

Perhaps the government can help? Felix spat out his contempt for the array of multibillion-dollar government programs launched over the years to provide jobs and training for ghetto youth.

He glared at Officer John Edmonds, also a police youth gang worker and one of the afternoon visitors at the neat, gray-shingled Morales home. Edmonds had suggested that Felix see a man named Frank about a possible job in one of the government programs.

"I went to Frank, and you know what Frank gave me? A whole bunch of runa-round!" Felix shouted. "Yeah, I'll try to learn how to read. A, B, C! G, B, D! Yeah, I'll go to school, why not, man? But they wasn't putting money in my pockets, you know? And when they did, it was $2.50 an hour. I don't need $2.50 an hour, man. I make $2.50 an hour hustlin' on the street. Ain't gotta pay taxes either. And that's the truth, man.

"That's how I see this ... system. This whole system's full of s—. It's the truth, it's full of s—!"

The enraged bull, the walking bomb, stomped outside to the familiar comfort of the street, to be seen later sauntering near a two-story brick building where a Sex Survivor named Danny had drawn a mural to the memory of another gang member who was stabbed in a fight with a rival gang.

"They took his belt and he wanted it back and they killed him," Lewie explained.

Such is life among the gangs on Essex Street.

With only slight variations, such is life on streets with other names in New York, in Philadelphia, in Chicago, in Los Angeles, all cities where youthful street gangs ebb and flow in numbers and strength.

Mention gangs, and most Americans conjure up the romantic image of "West Side Story." The Broadway musical bore little resemblance to the gangs of the 1950s and none at all to those today. Homemade zip guns have been replaced by well-made, expensive .38-caliber revolvers, often stolen from gun shops. The '50s gangs battled with one another over turf or girls. Police officials and academic specialists say there is still much fighting, but the gangs have turned their greatest energies to making money.

"They rob, they steal, that's how they get money," said Rodney, a black Brooklyn 14-year-old. "Whoever they can't handle, they will definitely kill. They really don't know what they be doing. They shoot you in 15 minutes."

Felix and other gang kids also spoke of making money "hustlin' on the street." Officer Galea explained:

"Panhandling. Strictly begging. They come up to someone and demand money. People are afraid if they don't give them money they'll be harmed. And they sell stuff. They'll find some old box springs in an abandoned building or thrown out on the street and they sell it to junk dealers."

Galea believes that Felix at 20 may be approaching an age "when he'll wake up one morning and decide he just doesn't want the fighting any more." The mellowing of age, a process Lewie has undergone to some extent, may encourage Felix to trade the leather jacket for a work shirt.

"Felix does have a child now, not more than a year old, living with its mother, I guess," Galea said. "And he seems to have an awareness of being a father. He's very fond of the kid."

Felix had not mentioned his child to the visitor. To do so would have destroyed the carefully constructed image of the young tough on Essex Street, Brooklyn, U.S.A.

Felix Morales is by no means typical.

But glimpses of his life, and the quite different experiences of a young black woman, show something about the employment plight they share and the conditions that created it for each of them.

"I see some people way ahead and I say, 'Oh God, I'll get there.'"

A flash of determination crossed Chantal's face for an instant. Then she smiled, and her fingers twisted the folds of her flowered blouse.

Chantal's face changes as quickly as the patterns of a kaleidoscope, revealing perhaps more than she realizes. Her eyes seem to sink into the most private inner recesses as she talks of the birth and sudden death of her son. There is a twist of disgust at the thought of a stepfather who threatened her life and forced her to leave home. There is anger, lilting laughter, discouragement, frustration, fear and, yes, remarkable courage, written across the face of this slender blue-jeaned woman, just turned 18.

In the fluorescent office glare of a Manhattan training center, Chantal described past setbacks and uncertain hopes for the future, asking only that her last name be withheld.

"I left school when I was 15 because I got pregnant. When my mother found out, she took me to court and she got in front of my face and told me, 'My husband don't want her to come back.' Had me so upset they had to call me a social worker and she cooled me down because she said if you get any more upset, you ain't gonna have no baby. So I stopped crying.

"The court put me in a group home in the Bronx. Then my son was born and I went home and told my mother I'd try. Maybe I didn't try hard enough, but I tried.

"My stepfather tried to throw me out the fourth-floo window one day. I had all my fingernails in his skin and pulling hard. I wanted to pick up my mother's lamp and hit him but he smacked it out of my hands. I left that night, I told them I would not come back in that house.

"My social worker put me in a home in the Bronx. I was supposed to stay there one day. They were supposed to find me a home for me and my son.

"They never found it.

"He was living in a foster home in Queens, but I went to see him a lot. The last time I seen him, four days after that, he died of crib death. I couldn't understand it. He seemed so fine. I said, 'Oh my God, why?'

"Then I said maybe he was meant to go, maybe he wasn't meant to be here at this time."

Second In A Series

She paused before making the mental leap to the present.

"I don't cry over it now. I learned how to talk about it and get it out so it won't hurt as much. When I get older, I just know I'm going to replace him 'cause I want two, three kids.

"After he died, I moved from the group I was into and they put me in another home, in Crown Heights in Brooklyn. But they won't keep you after you're 18, so I have to go in three months. That's why I have to have a part-time job.

"I've been looking for a secretarial job but don't nobody want to hire me because I don't have any experience.

"I had one job, but that was so long ago, so long ago. I was working at a restaurant, but the boss fired me. For personal reasons."

She will say nothing more about this and her face, for one rare instant, turns blank to conceal rather than reveal.

"You know when Carter put out those jobs last year? They put a certain amount in Crown Heights, and we went and stood in line. We were so far back and as soon as we got around the corner, this man came out and said no more jobs. God, I could have died I was so mad!

"You know what I hate? People that need people to work for them, they call the counselor here and say they got a job, and the counselor sends me out and this man says, 'Come back tomorrow, come back next week.'"

Chantal shows the confusion of adolescence as she speaks with equal enthusiasm about a career in sales, secretarial work and drafting. Manpower specialists note that most teen-agers experience a period of floundering about, moving from one job to another until finally settling on the work that most interests them. But middle-income teen-agers, with education and a grapevine of job information from working relatives and friends, make this transition easier an faster than Chantal.

As summer began, she displayed a frail but determined confidence in the future. She is concentrating on classroom studies at the Vocational Foundation, a private non-profit jobs and training service for hardcore unemployed youths in New York City. Soon, she hopes to qualify for the certificate equivalent to a high school diploma.

She had found a part-time job in a company cafeteria and had applied for a nine-month drafting course offering a stipend of $120 a week.

"I have to go at it slowly, it takes time, people don't want to hire you. I'm trying to live my life up right. But I just know I'm going to do something to f—it up." She stopped short, embarrassed. That was a street phrase, inappropriate for an office, and she had not meant to use it. The language and life of the street have no place in the bright future Chantal still hopes to find.

Next: Can Carter's Programs Make A Difference?

Economic Summit May Be Slow In Putting Decisions To Work

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — The road to the Western economic summit in Bonn July 16-17 is paved with good intentions — as well as broken promises and unfulfilled hopes.

The success of the Bonn meeting will depend to a great extent on a number of events taking place in the two weeks preceding it.

Previous summit conferences at Rambouillet, Puerto Rico and London have been long on exhortation but short on practical steps to turn around the global recesssion cuused in part by the five-fold increase in energy prices five years ago.

Last year's London summit "produced a declaration which sounded well on the day and for a short time afterwards," said Roy Jenkins, president of the European Common Market Commission. "But it could not rescue the world from its difficulties. In Bonn, we have got to do something firmer and harder."

Nothing has come of the meeting.

The main advantage of these conferences, as West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has pointed out, is that they avoid "beggar thy neighbor" policies among the world's main economic powers.

"I would see the 1978 summit in this context," Schmidt said in a recent interview. "The most necessary and most wanted effect of such meetings is that the heads of state try to so devise their economic policies as to be complementary."

Heads of government and foreign ministers of the European Economic Community, or Common Market, will be meeting in Bremen July 6 and 7 to try to coordinate their monetary policies.

All the summit nations will be deeply involved during the next two weeks in the GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) multilateral trade negotiations in Geneva, which are scheduled with more optimism than likelihood to end July 15.

The trade talks aim at reducing tariff and non-tariff barriers to free world trade, and thus remove the specter of protectionism which hangs ever more dangerously over the developed world.

Finally, the few days before the summit may at last see some movement on President Carter's stranded energy bill. House and Senate conferees on the taxation parts of the bill have agreed to meet again July 13 for the first time since December.

The summit will bring together the three major economic blocs outside the Communist world — North America, Western Europe and Japan.

The seven countries represented will be the United States, Canada, West Germany, France, Britain, Italy and Japan. Jenkins will take part when topics affecting the Common Market are discussed, and he will essentially be the voice of the smaller community countries — Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Denmark and Ireland.

The figure of $45 billion tells a lot of what the sunmit is all about.

This represents the combined estimated 1978 surplus of the OPEC oil-producing countries, Japan and West Germany.

It also roughly represents the deficit of the United States and Canada and the other Common Market countries.

Economists say that if the deficit and surplus could be brought more nearly into balance, the way would be opened to healthier growth.

The surplus of the OPEC countries has been reduced to an estimated $17 billion this year from more than $40 billion only three years ago. In part this is because the Western countries have been selling more to the oil producers, in part because the value of the dollars with which the producers are paid has declined and in part because OPEC has been operating a price freeze for the past two years.

Japan also is expected to tally a $17 billion surplus this year. But its high 7 percent growth-rate is fueled by exports, not domestic sales. The same is true of West Germany, which is likely to run up a $8-10 billion export-led surplus in 1978, although its overall growth rate remains at a worryingly low 2.5 percent rate for 1978.

110 MILLION REASONS
WHY INSTA-TUNE MAKES MORE THAN SENSE
Most of the 110 milion cars in America are tuned every six to nine months. The growing trend is away from the high cost, time consuming gas stations, garages and car dealerships to the skilled specialist.
Insta-Tune is America's largest chain of scientific "One Price While You Watch" auto tune-up centers. We use the most modern equipment and methods including dynamometer testing.
Insta-Tune is a total franchise. Skilled professionals assist you every step of the way from obtaining your location to local and national advertising support. No automotive experience required. Complete training provided.
With as little as $25,000 and good credit you can share in a five billion dollar market.
Business Week says—"It appears to be an idea whose time has come!!"

THE COST OF GOING INTO BUSINESS FOR YOURSELF JUST WENT DOWN. DRASTICALLY.
It used to be, that the cost of becoming an owner/operator with north American Van Lines was $4300. That included the down payment for a NEW tractor. But right now and for a limited time only the cost is only $2500.
The offer applies to our New Products Division only. That's because business in the New Products Division is so good that we've got to have more owner/operators. The emphasis is on the owner, and that could be you. This is a special offer. Compare it to any other package in the industry.
Remember, the $2500 goes for the down payment on your NEW tractor. Along with the rig, your investment covers your personal expenses during training (if you need it). And by training, we mean a lot more than just how to back a trailer. We'll teach you the business end of the business. We want you to make it. Big.
If you can handle the $2500 and are 21 or over, call us Toll Free at 800-348-2191, OR WRITE:

A KING'S RANSOM?
NO! A mere $33,500! Tops in this range. Three bedrooms, living-den + isolated master. Tastefully decorated. Assumable FHA loan. Low equity. Payments of $297.00.

LOOK ME OVER
Then call one of our Agents to see inside! 4520 54 is three bedrooms, plus office or sewing room. Just old enough to have all the "kinks" out. Fireplace, built-in kitchen, refrigerated, custom drapes. Owner leaving town, so it is priced right for quick sale!

COMFORTABLE COUNTRY HOME
On one acre NE of Lubbock, just 10 minutes from T.I. Three bedrooms, one and one-half baths in "mint" condition. Many, many fruit trees.

Lost Oil Fortune Remains Mystery

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Some say Willie and Floyd Mayweather blew a $3.5 million Oklahoma oil inheritance on women and gambling. Others say they never got that much.

But the two brothers didn't change much over 40 years; they continued to work as hod carriers and kept the same friends. Now that they're dead nobody's sure what happened to the money.

"They blew the money," said Leo McKamey, who heads the hod carriers union local in Kansas City. "It ain't hard to do if you got a drinking habit and like the girls."

But on reflection, McKamey doubted they went through $3.5 million. "If they did that kind of gambling on the street it would raise the economy of this whole area."

The two brothers were divorced on the same day in 1947. "Sometimes he would have from $2,000 to $5,000 in his pocket and I would have only five or ten dollars," said Willie's wife during the proceeding. "He drank a lot and gambled with his money. He would come home sometimes at night and at other times he wouldn't."

The wives got $1,500 each. Floyd remarried. Willie never did.

"There's none of the money left," said Floyd's second wife, Nona Mae Mayweather. "I don't really know what happened. He (Willie) didn't really live high, at least not what I would call high."

Chester Sampson, a friend and drinking companion of the brothers, said Willie, who retired on a $123.50 monthly pension in 1974, would get religious and began to preach after a few beers. "We'd have to threaten to pull him out."

Floyd died in 1970 and Willie died late last month. They left Floyd's wife and daughter very little.

"I don't think anybody knows (what they did with the money)," said Robert Powell, a funeral director and friend of the brothers. "A lot of people would like to know the answer to that question."

There was a court fight over the money but no one knows the details, and only the docket sheet on the case is left in the U.S. District Court's offices in Tulsa, Okla.

Anthony Nugent, an assistant U.S. attorney and the son of the lawyer who won the fortune for the brothers, provided some information in a recent interview.

"My dad was always very proud of that case and always willing to let people know he made a million dollars on it," Nugent said of his father, Anthony Nugent Sr., who died recently. "I don't think he did."

Nugent, who was in school while his father was working on the case, said his family lived well after the Mayweather settlement, but not like millionaires. He estimates his dad got $50,000 to $75,000 and the brothers got twice that amount.

Not $3.5 million, but still not bad for two poor men in the post-Depression year of 1941.

"My father was terribly upset with what they did with the money," Nugent said. "They may have blown a couple of hundred thousand dollars. They may have blown a million dollars."

But they always worked. The money didn't change their station in life. In the 1940s, being blacks they were hod carriers and couldn't move up to the white trade of bricklayer, McKamey said.

"We've gone on about the same as we would have without the money," Floyd said in a 1959 interview. "We don't try to go out and splurge."

"We're not working because we have to, we're working because we don't want to be idle," Willie said during the interview. "Doing nothing will make you lazy."

Evert, Navratilova Gain Final At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert tamed the big-serving defending champion Virginia Wade 8-6, 6-2 in a fickle wind Wednesday and reached the Wimbledon tennis final for the fourth time in six years.

She will meet Martina Navratilova, the Czech who defected to the United States two years ago, Friday. Navratilova patiently wore down an injured, limping Evonne Goolagong 2-6, 6-4, 6-4 in the other semifinal.

Evert is aiming for her third Wimbledon title and a first prize of $30,780. It will be Navratilova's first final.

The men will play their semifinals today. Defending champion Bjorn Borg will take on unseeded Tom Okker, who upset seeded players Guillermo Vilas and Ilie Nastase. Jimmy Connors, the 1974 champion who lost to Borg here last year, will face fellow American Vitas Gerulaitis.

A packed crowd of 14,000 at center court watched the downfall of Wade, Britain's heroine of a year ago, in conditions more suited to the Winter Olympics than tennis.

"The wind went round in circles and it showed in our serving," Evert said. "Virginia doesn't usually serve so many double faults."

The British player had difficulty throwing the ball up and double-faulted four times in her first two service games, six times altogether. Throughout the match her first service was off target more often than not.

But the wind did not hamper Evert's lobbing, one of the decisive factors in the match. Whenever she lobbed, she won points, finding Wade's baseline with unerring accuracy.

Wade volleyed well, her groundstrokes were consistent and she made a long and exciting fight of the first set, which lasted more than an hour. Wade broke service first at 3-1, Evert came right back to win the next game and broke again at 7-6.

"She was coming in at the net, and I wanted to keep her at the back of the court and I succeeded in doing it," Evert said.

With her crown wobbling, Wade raised her game and broke back with powerful forehands. Evert now led 4-2. But Wade double-faulted again in the next game and Evert placed her double-grip backhands cunningly to close out the match quickly.

"It was different then," Evert said. "I was the defending champion and she had everything to gain and was more relaxed. Today the pressure was on her. I looked at her eyes across the net and I could see she was nervous."

Goolagong, the 1971 titlist and three times the defeated finalist since then, could not cope with the powerful Navratilova in her weakened condition. The Austalian made all the best strokes, some of her backhands drawing stirring roars from the crowd. But the handicap was too great.

Navratilova was like a lioness stalking a wounded deer. To win, all she had to do was move the ball about and keep her crippled opponent moving.

Goolagong walked gingerly from the start, but was mobile enough to win the first set comfortably. Then she started to limp more heavily.

Navratilova toyed with her opponent in the second set and raced to a 5-1 lead, but Goolagong struck back with graceful strokes and took three games in a row before a net cord helped Navratilova win the last game of the set.

NL Announces Eight Starters

NEW YORK (AP)— Outfielder Greg Luzinski, with some 3.5 million votes, and infielder Larry Bowa, both of the Philadelphia Phillies, topped the National League balloting for the 49th All-Star Game, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced Wednesday.

The game will be played next Tuesday night in San Diego.

Luzinski, whose 18 home runs equalled George Foster's as the best in the league through games of Tuesday, will start for the third consecutive year. Foster of the Cincinnati Reds, also a starter, leads the league with 61 runs batted in.

Bowa, who trailed through most of the balloting by fans, will start at shortstop for the second time. He was elected to start in 1974, and was an All-Star in 1975 and 1976.

Luzinski, who received 3,503,738 votes, Bowa, with 3,396,054 votes, and Foster, with 2,543,815, will be joined in the starting lineup by Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench (2,442,201 votes), Los Angeles first baseman Steve Garvey (3,181,270), Cincinnati second baseman Joe Morgan (2,838,250), Cincinnati third baseman Pete Rose (2,980,377), and Los Angeles outfielder Rick Monday (2,234,763).

Luzinski, Garvey, Bench, Morgan and Foster all started last year. Rose, who reached the 3,000-hit mark earlier this season is starting for the seventh time — at either third base, second base or the outfield. Monday starts for the first time.

The American League starters, announced Tuesday, included Boston catcher Carlton Fisk, Minnesota first baseman Rod Carew, Milwaukee second baseman Don Money, Kansas City shortstop Fred Patek, Royals third baseman George Brett, and outfielders Jim Rice of Boston, Richie Zisk of Texas and Reggie Jackson of New York.

Bowa, enjoying his best season both at bat and in the field, beat Cincinnati's Dave Concepcion, the All-Star starter each of the past three years, by 2,457,433 votes.

Bench is making his 11th All-Star appearance, his 10th straight as a starter. He and Carew are the only players to be elected in each of the years since the fans took over the voting in 1970.

Milwaukee Open Tourney Begins

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Andy North, one of the biggest names in the Greater Milwaukee Open, also is the star-slighted golf tournament's biggest booster.

"Unfortunately, we can't play in every event, and I have to say that if I wasn't from this area, I might not play here, either," said North, the 1969 Wisconsin amateur champion from Madison, Wis., and winner of the U.S. Open last month.

"But there is a great field here every year," North said. "Anytime Jack Nicklaus doesn't play, the writers say it's a terrible field. But Nicklaus only plays in 15 tournaments a year. Does that mean we have 30 other terrible fields? That's ludicrous. There are so many good players on the tour, it's a joke."

Still, North and former U.S. Open and PGA champion Lee Trevino are among the few big name players in the 14th annual GMO, scheduled today through Sunday at the 7,010-yard, par-72 Tuckaway Country Club course.

Trevino stands fifth and North seventh on the tour's earnings list this year, but the field includes only three others in the top 20—Fuzzy Zoeller (12th), Lou Graham (14th) and MacMcLendon (19th). Jim Simons, who stands 16th, withdrew Wednesday, citing exhaustion.

As usual, several of golf's top names are skipping the GMO in order to travel to and practice for next week's British Open, one of the most prestigious meets of the year. And with the purse here a relatively small $150,000, many other stars are vacationing during the GMO and next week's Quad Cities Open.

"But it's going to get better," North said."Hubert Green has promised me he'll be back next year. Tom Watson will be here some year, if only as a courtesy to me. Most guys who play here end up coming back.

"One reason is this is a nice course and always in great condition, one of the best courses we play," he said.

SPC Inks Pair Of Tracksters

LEVELLAND (Special)—South Plains College has added two more athletes to the list of scholarship signees for the 78-79 season.

In track Chris Dunn has signed to run for SPC. Dunn, who specializes in the 100 and 440, is from Brownfield .

His career best in the 100 is 9.6 and Dunn won district with a time of 49.4 in the 440 yard dash his senior year.

Mimi Finch, from Vernon, has joined a high school teamate in signing with the SPC women's tennis team.

Finch and Bambi Rader ,who signed earlier, were doubles patners in high school and won the district 4-AAA doubles titles three times.

Ex-A-J Staffer Moves To UM

UNIVERSITY, Miss. (Special) —Brooks Tinsley, assistant information director for the Southwest Athletic Conference for the past three years, has been named associate director of sports information at the University of Mississippi, Athletic Director Waner Alford announced.

A 1974 Texas Tech graduate, Tinsley was responsible for compiling statistics on each of the nine SWC schools and writing news releases and updating press guides.

Tinsley also worked with press relations for the Cotton Bowl, SWC Post-Season Basketball Tournament and other conference events.

Myers To Aid U.S. Cage Unit In Russia

Gerald Myers, the Texas Tech basketball coach who has spent time in Peru and West Germany the past two years teaching his specialty, will head for Russia next month as coach of a United States team.

Myers will assist Bill Vinine, head coach at Ouachita Baptist University of Arkansas, in guiding a collegiate group in the Uri Gagarin Cup in Valnais, USSR, during the latter part of August. The U.S. team will also play two exhibition games against the Soviet National team prior to the tournament.

The Gagarin Cup tournament will have the national teams from Czechoslovakia, Mexico, Panama, and two other teams yet to be selected, in addition to the U.S. and USSR clubs.

The United States' team will be composed of the top 12 freshmen and sophomore collegiate players and will be selected by a committee headed by North Carolina coach Dean Smith.

The coaches were picked and the tour sponsored by the Amateur Basketball Association of the United States.

"This is a great opportunity for me to work on the international level," Myers said Wednesday. "Anytime you get to coach the caliber of players that will be on this team, it will help your program as well as yourself. I'm sure we'll be having players like Mike Gminski (Duke) and Darrell Griffith (Louisville).

"And, it'll be a challenge to play such teams as the Soviet National Team, one which usually is in the Olympics. I'm tremendously pleased for the honor. It's just a tremendous opportunity for me and for Texas Tech."

Two years ago, Myers and Norm Sloan of North Carolina State conducted a series of clinics in West Germany and England sponsored by the Air Force. And, last year, Myers headed a series of clinics in Peru. The experience in these overseas sessions was a factor in Myers being selected for the Russian tour, sponsors of the Russian trip reported.

According to Bill Wall, executive director of the sponsoring ABAUS, the team will begin training Aug. 2 at Colorado Springs, Colo., and will leave for the Soviet Union on Aug. 17. The team will play the Soviets in exhibition games Aug. 17 and 19 before entering the Cup tournament Aug. 24-29.

Wall said competitors have been limited to freshmen and sophomores because the trip is a part of the Olympic Development Program, designed to prepare the U.S. athletes for possible competition in the 1980 Olympic Games.

In addition to Myers and Vining, the staff will have Doug Huffman Georgetown University as trainer, and Frank Kovaleski, athletic director at New Castle, Ind., High School, as team manager.

Area Schools Need Coaches

Two schools are looking for coaches, with Lamesa High School in the market for two.

O.W. Follis, the Lamesa athletic director, is accepting applications for positions of baseball coach and an assistant basketball coach. The baseball mentor will also assist with junior varsity football. Paul Russell was baseball coach but resigned to go to Lockhart with football coach David Bonds.

Matlack Wins; Rangers Edge New York 3-2

By The Associated Press

Richie Zisk's eighth-inning single scored Toby Harrah from third base and gave the Texas Rangers a 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees behind Jon Matlack's seven-hit pitching.

After Bobby Bonds singled to open the eighth, loser Don Gullett, 4-1, threw wildly to first on Harrah's sacrifice bunt, putting runners on second and third.

Reliever Rich Gossage got Jim Sundberg to hit a grounder to shortstop Bucky Dent, whose throw to the plate retired Bonds. But Zisk then drilled a single to right field to bring in the deciding run.

The Yankees took a 1-0 lead against Matlack, 7-8, in the second inning when Lou Piniella doubled, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Chris Chambliss' grounder.

The Rangers went in front 2-1 when Bobby Thompson led off the third with a single and Bonds hit Gullett's 3-2 pitch into the left-field bleachers for his 12th home run of the season.

O'S SWEEP BLUE JAYS

Rick Dempsey, who hit a two-run homer earlier, drove in the winning run with a seventh-inning sacrifice fly and the Baltimore Orioles scored an 8-6 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays to sweep a twi-night doubleheader.

TIGERS 13, INDIANS 3

Lou Whitaker, Rusty Staub, Jason Thompson and Steve Kemp drove in two runs each Wednesday night as the Detroit Tigers breezed past the error-plagued Cleveland Indians 13-3.

The Tigers, trailing 2-0, erupted for seven runs off Rick Wise in the second inning on four hits, three errors and a sacrifice fly. Staub hit a two-run homer in the inning, Whitaker delivered the sacrifice fly and Milt May and Alan Trammell had RBI singles.

Rookie second baseman Whitaker also singled home a run in the fourth and Thompson rapped a two-run single in the sixth off Don Hood.

Schedule Set For Tourney

The West Region National Baseball Congress Tournament will begin Wednesday, July 12 at Lubbock's Mackenzie Park Field.

The opening game of the tourney will match the Lubbock Cardinals and Lubbock at 6 p.m. At 8:30 that evening, Brownfield is scheduled to battle the Lubbock Brewers.

Two games are scheduled for both Thursday and Friday, while six games are set for Saturday and five for Sunday.

The tournament will resume Thursday, July 20 and will conclude Sunday, July 23.

The 14-team tournament, including nine Lubbock clubs, is the largest the meet has been in 10 years.

The teams entered are Lubbock, Lubbock Z's, Lubbock Chaps, Lubbock Texans, Lubbock Brewers, Lubbock Indians, Lubbock Rebels, Lubbock Bulls, Lubbock Cardinals, Brownfield, Wichita Falls, El Paso, San Angelo, and the defending champion Abilene Bulls.

TWINS 3, BREWERS 1

Rod Carew went 4-for-4 and Mike Cubbage went 3-for-3 while Dave Goltz scattered eight hits as the Minnesota Twins completed a three-game sweep over Milwaukee by defeating the Brewers.

The Brewers staked Lary Sorensen to a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Sal Bando singled with two out, stole second and scored on Robin Yount's single.

PHILLIES 7, METS 5

Warren Brusstar, 2-0, was the winner in relief of Steve Carlton, who was blasted out by the Mets in the third inning.

New York scored twice in the first on singles by Tim Foli, John Stearns and Willie Montanez. In the third, Foli led off with a single and rode home on Lee Mazzilli's ninth homer.

The Phillies jumped on loser Jerry Koosman, 2-9, for four runs in the top of the fourth. Garry Maddox walked and scored on Luzinski's triple. Jose Cardenal singled to score Luzinski, and came home himself when Dave Johnson doubled. The Phillies added another run on a New York error.

CUBS 5, CARDS 1

Mike Krukow and Bruce Sutter combined on a five-hitter and Krukow triggered a two-run rally in the third with a single to lead the Chicago Cubs to a victory over St. Louis, their ninth in a row over the Cardinals.

ROYALS 10, ANGELS 1

Hal McRae rapped a two-run triple and a solo home run for his 1,000th major league hit, Darrell Porter singled home two runs and every Kansas City starter collected at least one hit as the Royals romped past the California Angels.

Loser Nolan Ryan, 3-7, returning to action after three weeks on the disabled list, gave up single runs in the third and fourth innings and then walked the bases full in the fifth. Porter's single scored two runs and Clint Hurdle added a sacrifice fly.

San Diego Gives OK To Cage Lease

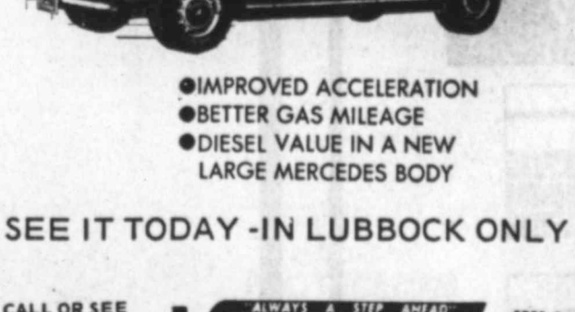

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The city of San Diego cleared the way Wednesday for the National Basketball Association to move a team to San Diego by waiving a lease limitation for the Sports Arena.

Irv Levin, owner of the Boston Celtics, has reportedly signed an agreement to use the downtown arena located on city land through 1981.

If the NBA's Board of Governors approves the plan, the Buffalo Braves would be moved to San Diego by Levin and he would turn over the Celtics to John Y. Brown, now owner of the Braves.

Lions Club Hosts Kids' Track Meet

The Redbud Lions Club will host a recreational track and field meet July 15, it was announced Wednesday.

Registration will begin that day at 8 a.m. at the site, Coronado High School. First events will begin at 9 a.m.

Divisions for both girls and boys will be Squirts (under-5), Pee Wees (6-7 years), Bantams (8-9), Midgets (10-11), Juniors (12-13) and Intermediates (14-15).

There will be a 50 cent entry fee per event, with a limit of five events. Top three finishers in each event will receive medals, and the fourth through sixth placers will receive ribbons.

Events for the squirts will be 50, 100, 220 and 440 dashes, the long jump and softball throw. The pee wees will have the same events plus the high jump. Bantams will run the 50, 100, 220, 440 880 and 440-yard relay and have high jump, long jump and shot put in field events.

Midgets' event list will be the same, plus the mile run. Juniors and Intermediates will run the same as midgets, except there will be no 50-yard dash.

WHA Prexy Says Aeros May Leave

NEW YORK (AP) — Howard Baldwin, president of the World Hockey Association, revealed Wedneday "that it is unlikely the Houston Aeros will operate in 1978-79."

Based on a report from Aeros trustee Kenneth Schnitzer, the WHA's Board of Trustees has decided to take appropriate and Schnitzer will be given formal notice of the board's decision when he arrives in New York Thursday.

Meanwhile, the WHA Board of Trustess released the Birmingham Bulls from a financial commitment made a month ago at which time Birmingham posted its escrow for the 1978-79 WHA season when merger talks with the National Hockey League were initiated.

John Bassett, the Birmingham trustee, was given until July 12 to meet with his board of trustess and establish definite plans for the 1978-79 season.

With Houston likely dropping out, and Birmingham questionable, the WHA would operate with six teams. They are New England, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Quebec, Winnipeg and Edmonton.

"We are excited about the prospects of a six-team league," said Baldwin. "The NHL operated for 50 years with six teams."

In regard to the signing of underage juniors, Baldwin and Ben Hatskin, WHA chairman of the board, had recommended to all WHA teams not to sign underage (under 20) juniors.

The three Canadian teams have reiterated that they were against such signings. However, some of the United Stated based teams have indicated their desire to sign underage juniors. They based their decision on the Ken Linseman court ruling of last year that it was not legal in the United States to deprive a qualified player, no matter what his age, of the right to earn a living.

Murrow Interviews To Rerun

PBS REVIVES 'PERSON TO PERSON' — Edward R. Murrow holds that omnipresent cigarette during his interview with Marilyn Monroe on an episode of "Person to Person." About 50 of the nation's public television stations plan to broadcast 26 of the Murrow interviews over a 13-week period, starting tonight. Episodes will include interviws with John F. Kennedy, then newly-elected to the U.S. Senate, and his wife of one month, Jacqueline, and with Korean War hero Maj. Gen. William F. Dean. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — The art of interviewing newsmakers on television reached a high point 25 years ago when Edward R. Murrow introduced a new program called "Person to Person."

Murrow sat, wreathed in cigarette smoke, in his New York studio and, in his relaxed and self-assured style, interviewed "the nation's headliners" in their homes. The show, a picture window on the famous of the 1950s, became one of the most popular in the history of television.

For a 13-week period, beginning July 6, about 50 of the nation's public television stations will broadcast 26 of the "Person to Person" interviews originally aired on the CBS Television Network from 1953 to 1959.

John F. Kennedy, newly elected to the U.S. Senate, and his wife of one month, are paired on the premiere rerun with Korean War hero Maj. Gen. William F. Dean.

Successive programs feature, among others, Marilyn Monroe and Sir Thomas Beecham, Lauren Bacall and Humphrey Bogart and Maria Callas, Groucho and Harpo Marx, Fidel Castro and Norman Rockwell, Duke Ellington and Eddie Cantor.

In these informal interviews, Murrow defined how television could be used as a creative medium. Although he physically was separated from the people he was interviewing, Murrow's manner clearly put his subjects at ease. The viewer had a close-up view of the famous in their own environment, not a sterile studio.

In his interview of Gen. Dean, only weeks away from the experience of three years in a Korean POW camp, Murrow's questioning reveals a disciplined military leader who questioned his own ability.

WNET, New York's public TV station, is presenting the series, which is being distributed by the Eastern Educational Television Network. The network comprises the public television stations, mainly in urban areas, that reach the majority of public television viewers.

Radio Station Manager Battling More Than Alaskan Elements

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — "Excuse me for a moment," said Bill Weeks, "while I try to get the money we need to keep the station on the air."

The comment was made in the matter-of-fact style of an engineer, which Weeks is.

Since Weeks began managing the nation's northernmost radio station last summer, he's battled the elements of all sorts: the weather, the town's most powerful political figure, a language problem, and Federal Communications Commission rules that sometimes seem as appropriate to this Eskimo community as they would be to the moon.

Michael Porcaro, executive director of the Alaska Public Broadcasting Commission, says the job of managing the public radio station here may be the toughest in Alaska. Porcaro adds that Weeks has handled it so well, "people have asked me whether I put him together in my basement."

Weeks' cautious but pragmatically optimistic approach is consistent with the reserved manner of the Eskimos who outnumber whites more than 9-to-1 here.

The Eskimo people have learned over the centuries to survive in the unforgiving Arctic. In a much shorter time, Weeks, his wife, Diane, and their two small children have had to adjust to the harsh climate and the absence of nearly all ordinary amenities. They must haul water into their small home, and there is no central water or sewer system.

When Weeks arrived, the station, which operates with 10,000 watts during the daytime and 5,000 watts at night, had set a record for violations of FCC rules by a station west of the Mississippi.

"They were mostly technical, like bookkeeping, and about 40 percent involved equipment," Weeks said.

The problem was intensified "by a lack of trained people. Most places you have kids who want to be a star disc jockey, who have been playing with it all their lives. Here they've heard of radio, but that's all."

The community had been served previously by a 50-watt Armed Forces station. But the introduction of KBRW in December 1975 was the area's first station with significant range and local operation.

"These days we're in pretty good shape," he said. "We've got backup for most everything, including two transmitters."

And the FCC has obliged by being flexible on some rules. For example, ground radial lines — for signal propogation — are supposed to be buried. But that's impossible in the permafrost of Barrow, so the commission is allowing the lines to be laid above ground.

The commission also set up a special timetable to determine the sunset-sunrise time for Barrow, where the sun never goes down during the summer, and never comes up during the winter. That schedule is used to determine when to shift power.

Weeks' most celebrated battles have been with Eben Hopson, mayor of the vast North Slope Borough, which includes Barrow. The two men battled over Weeks' efforts to cover borough assembly meetings. Hopson objected because Weeks hadn't asked his permission.

In the wake of that battle, the borough announced that it would not give the station the second half of a $50,000 grant approved earlier in the year. That could have forced a shutdown of the station last month — but at the last minute, Hopson authorized payment.

The mayor had been demanding that Weeks be fired by the community board that runs the station, but consented to the grant after a promise was made that more Eskimo-speaking announcers would be hired.

Weeks says three of KBRW's announcers now use the area's Eskimo dialect on the air. That places him in the interesting position of not knowing what is being said on the station.

Producers Plan New Project

Papp, legit's busiest producer, announced Wednesday that choreographer Bennett's untitled new project goes into workshop preparation July 24, at the Public Theater.

"That environment," Bennett added, "is the most conducive to creative work that I have encountered in my career." In contrast to the usual way of putting a production together, "A Chorus Line" evolved after almost a year of collaborative testing.

Bennett's idea for the new undertaking derives from "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom," a CBS television play by Jerome Kass that starred Maureen Stapleton and Charles Durning.

The same technical staff is being enlisted — scenic designer Robin Wagner, costumer Theoni V. Aldredge, lighting designer Tharon Musser and orchestrator Jonathan Tunick — but the creators of the original teleplay will also participate. They are Kass, composer Billy Goldenberg, and lyricists Marilyn and Alan Bergman.

As in "A Chorus Line," Bennett is assembling about 40 dancers, singers and actors to share the creative workshop process. Under special arrangements with Actors Equity, they will share in any future profits, along with Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival.

That umbrella organization, not incidentally, is now largely dependent upon revenues from "A Chorus Line" to sustain a wide assortment of other activities, and a new bonanza would be a welcome hedge against ultimate decline in profits.

Eager Publicist Aims New, Giant Billboard At Sky

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — You can run, but you can't hide — not even thousands of feet in the air.

Warren Cowan, of the prestigious Rogers and Cowan publicity firm, has seen to that.

Cowan, a veteran of more than 30 years of publicizing movie and television stars, has flown hundreds of thousands of air miles, gazing down at earth and wondering how to take advantage of all that blank space on behalf of his clients.

Cowan envisioned bored passengers brightening their lives by looking down at a succession of signs singing the praises of, say, Paul Newman, a Cowan client.

Little did city-boy Cowan, New York-bred and -reared, know that his dream had been realized more than 50 years ago, perhaps right after the advent of the Wright Brothers.

In the early days of this century virtually thousands of barn roofs in America were emblazoned with ads for Mail Pouch tobacco and Lydia E. Pinkham's compound for ladies.

In those times barnstormers and mail planes flew low enough to read the ads. Even the fledgling airliners, trimotors und the like, were limited to sufficiently low altitudes to allow their fares to scan the messages.

But with the advent of four-engined planes and then jets, soaring to altitudes of 30,000 feet, passengers were pressed to make out such prominent geographic features as entire cities. Rooftop advertising became all but extinct.

Whether the sale of chewing tobacco and the consumption of ladies' nostrums have deteriorated apace has never been fully examined.

Cowan, unaware that hucksters of another era had beat him to the punch, never wavered from his quest and now, at last, his dream has become reality.

Passengers aboard airliners arriving in Los Angeles can look down today and see emblazoned in six-foot letters:

"Peter Falk Is

"Neil Simon's

"The Cheap Detective."

The sign, measuring 35-feet by 80-feet in orange day-glow and bordered in navy blue, also glows at night.

Divorce Seems Answer To Medicaid Cutoff Fear

DALLAS (AP) — C.W. King is divorcing his sick wife Ruth, after 45 years, so she can be taken care of. The money he saved for their burial expenses is considered excessive by Medicaid officials and they are threatening to cut off her benefits.

King, 78, has reluctantly filed for divorce, and it will become final in August unless he intercedes to pull the matter out of court.

Herb King, one of the couple's three children, said his mother is totally incapacitated with Huntington's Chorea, which deterioriates both the mind and body. Her entire Social Security check goes to the nursing home each month to pay her expenses and Medicaid pays the balance of about "60 percent," the son said.

About two months ago, he said, Medicaid sent a form to his father asking his financial status and noted that the maximum assets the couple is allowed is $2,250.

"He has $2,715 that he has scrimped to save for their burial," King said. "That's about $300 more than he's allowed. So they threatened to cut off his Medicaid.

His father won't talk about the situation.

"He's scared to death," the son said.

It was this fear, he said, which caused his father to see a lawyer who advised him the best solution would be to divorce his wife.

That way, Mrs. King would have no assets in her name and her Medicaid would continue to pay for the nursing home.

"The divorce was very traumatic for him," the son said.

The only other option would be for his father to sign over all his savings to someone else, which "he doesn't want to do."

Mrs. Joyce Dempsey, supervisor of the medical eligibility unit at Medicaid in Dallas, said she had no personal knowledge of the case but said the payments to the Kings had not been halted.

"Probably Mr. King does not fully understand the correspondence we are sending him," she said.

Government Forum Scheduled Here

The South Plains Association of Governments will host an area forum from 9:30 a.m. to noon July 10 in the Garden and Arts Center, 4215 University Ave.

The seminar, hosted by SPAG's community development planning department, will concern solid waste planning. Bill Colbert, of the solid waste planning unit of the Texas Department of Water Resources, will conduct the seminar.

The general public as well as public officials in the South Plains are invited to attend. For more information, contact Jim Crider, 1611 Ave. M, 762-8721.

GI Forum To Conduct Annual Garage Sale

The American GI Forum will conduct its annual garage sale next week to aid its scholarship fund.

The forum awards a $500 scholarship each year to Lubbock-area students planning to attend or already enrolled in a four-year university. Criteria are need and a grade-point average of 2.5.

The garage sale will take place at the Armed Forces Reserve Center, 2903 4th St., from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. July 15-16. Donations to the fund are tax-exempt. Those wishing to contribute items for sale may call 763-8541.

Rookie Director Jittery About Television Debut

AWAITING FIRST PRODUCTION — This is Adell Aldrich. She's the mother of three, and is now awaiting her first television production as a director. She's the director of the CBS movie, "Daddy, I Don't Like It Like This," a story about mental child abuse. (AP Laserphoto)

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Adell Aldrich, who has given birth to three children, admits she is "a little scared" as she awaits the debut of her first television production as director.

On Wednesday, July 12, CBS will present the movie-for-television, "Daddy, Don't Like It Like This," starring Talia Shire and Burt Young in a script written by Young. Aldrich has no fear about the quality of the film.

"I just don't know how it will be received because it is about such a sensitive subject," said the first-time director. "It's about mental child abuse, which is worse in many ways than physical abuse."

The drama concerns an Italian-American pair in New York City who attempt to live their own unrealized ambitions through their 11-year old son. Pressured at home and at school, the boy withdraws into his own special world.

"I'm concerned not only because of the subject matter, but because our production spanned a regime change at CBS," said Aldrich. "I don't know how the new bunch feels about this bastard child that was spawned by the previous regime."

Some indication can be drawn from the scheduling of the show during arid July instead of the regular season. "That doesn't bother me," Aldrich said. "We'll be up against two reruns, so we might be able to get a respectable rating. And as Burt says, if only one parent sees the show and learns from it, the whole thing will be worth it."

Adell Aldrich admitted that there was a certain inevitability about her becoming a director. Her father is Robert Aldrich, director of "The Dirty Dozen," "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane" and many other films, as well as president of the Directors Guild of America.

"All of us children were made to work during the summer," she recalled. "I started at 16 as an assistant editor. I found it interesting, but I didn't like being stuck in one room. I wanted to be 'out there' with the rest of the movie company.

"At that time, the only jobs for women on the movie set were hair dresser, wardrobe woman or script supervisor. My father didn't want me to do the other two jobs, so I became script supervisor.

"I did it for 14 years, and found it to be a blessing. You work very closely with the director, the cameraman, the actors, the editor. You learn how the camera moves and how the film is put together. I'm surprised that more script supervisors haven't become directors."

The script supervisor is one of the studio workhorses, laboring 12 hours a day with immense responsibility. She or he must record everything that happens during filming; an error in matching one scene to another could cause retakes costing thousands of dollars.

Aldrich worked for her father as well as Robert Altman, Sidney Poitier, Sidney Furie, Buzz Kulik and other directors. A divorcee, she earned enough to support herself and children — $650 a week in recent times.

Her directorial debut had its beginning when she flew to Munich to surprise her father on his birthday. He was filming "Twilight's Last Gleaming," and cast member Burt Young showed her his script of "Daddy." She was overwhelmed and offered to direct. She convinced Talia Shire to play the wife, and CBS bought the package.

She finished the film right on schedule — three weeks in New York, two in Hollywood. Any problems because she was a woman?

"Only in New York, where there are few women in the film business. On the first day there were a few remarks, which I ignored. After a day they seemed to be feeling, 'I think this kid knows what she's doing.'

"I applied what I learned from other directors: Always be prepared. There can be no emergencies as long as you know what to do."

Philippine Casino Flourishing

ZAMBOANGA CITY, Philippines (UPI) — In a smoke-filled room in the opulent Zamboanga Plaza Hotel, well-dressed Japanese tourists and wealthy Filipino businessmen flock nightly to the high-stakes gaming tables.

They play roulette, high-low, blackjack and dice in the only authorized casino in the southern Philippines, where the government has been fighting a Moslem separatist rebellion over the last 54 years.

"Business has been good so far," says Floro Santos, 63, manager of the Zamboanga Plaza. He admits, however, that the occasional kidnaping of tourists by Moslem rebels and reports of fighting have adversely affected tourist traffic to Zamboanga.

The Zamboanga Plaza sits atop a 500-foot hill at Pasonanca Park four miles from the downtown area. The casino on the Plaza's ground floor was opened last January as part of a move by local authorities to promote tourism in this seaport located 500 miles south of Manila. Zamboanga is known as the "city of flowers" in the Philippines.

The casino is the first to be set up outside Manila since gambling was legalized in the Philippines in 1975. A "floating casino" aboard the 4,776-ton ship Philippine Tourist has been doing brisk business at Manila Bay.

Whereas proceeds from the floating casino are used to fund the flood control project in Metropolitan Manila, earnings from the Zamboanga Plaza tables will be used to finance infrastructure projects in the war-ravaged Mindanao-Sulu region.

The peace and order situation in the southern Philippines has improved so much that authorities this spring lifted the midnight-to-4 a.m. curfew, imposed since martial law was declared in 1972.

British Railroads Pick Up Speed

LONDON (AP) — Britain's nationalized railroads are whizzing past the French, Germans, Americans and the Soviet Union, surpassed only by Japan's high-speed "Bullet Trains," according to Paul Goldsack, editor of Jane's World Railways.

When Britain's 150 m.p.h. electric Advanced Passenger Train comes into service in mid-1979, British trains will not only undergo a dramatic speed-up, but will cut by a quarter the energy presently used, Goldsack wrote in the 1978 edition of the reference book, released Thursday.

The train is lighter, and therefore needs less power to run, because it uses light-weight aluminum alloys instead of the heavier steel. Streamlining also helps reduce wind resistance, according to a spokesman for British Rail.

Goldsack said Japan's "Bullet Trains" cover 108 miles between Nagoya and Shizuoka at an average speed of 103.7 m.p.h. The trains are capable of traveling speeds exceeding 125 m.p.h.

British Rail has four trains scheduled to run the 41 miles from Swindon to Reading at an average of 103.2 m.p.h. Fifty-nine other trains operate at average speeds just more than 93 m.p.h., Goldsack said.

He listed the fastest French train as the Etendard, timed to cover 63 miles between St. Pierre and Poitiers at an average of 101.6 m.p.h.

Lagging in fourth place was the United States, whose Metroliners are advertised as covering the 68.5 miles between Baltimore, Md., and Wilmington, Del., at an average of 93.4 m.p.h.

The fastest West German service was listed as the Nymphenburg's 89 m.p.h. run over the 61 miles between Dortmund and Bielefeld.

Goldsack explained that delays in improvements to the Moscow-Leningrad line mean that the fastest Soviet train is the 83.9 m.p.h. Aurora, which covers the 205.7 miles between Moscow and Bologoye.

Goldsack warned that, despite the rising cost of oil, Britain and the United States are lagging in powering more trains electrically, although other rail systems are pushing ahead with massive electrification plans.

British Rail has said it is aiming at 3,000 miles of electric rail over the next 20 years. In the United States, nothing has come so far of a dozen studies of powering 31,000 miles of rail electrically.

In contrast, France and West Germany have each converted about 6,200 miles of track to electricity.

In Japan, the National Railways timed an experimental railroad car that floats above its track on a magnetic cushion, Wednesday, at a world railway speed record of 209 m.p.h., according to Japan's transport minister, Kenji Fukunaga.

180 Vietnamese Rescued

SINGAPORE (AP) — The French freighter Chevalier Paul arrived here Wednesday with 180 Vietnamese refugees, rescued from an unseaworthy boat in the South China Sea, immigration officials said.

The refugees, rescued Monday, apparently were headed for Hong Kong, the official said.

Self-Policing Accounting Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The accounting industry should be allowed to police itself rather than being subject to direct government regulation, the Securities and Exchange Commission said Wednesday.

The commission has been looking into congressional complaints that accountants may lack objectivity because they are paid by the same company they are investigating.

"Disclosure of widespread questionable payments and illegal acts in the 1970s, among other events, have raised concerns about the integrity and credibility of financial controls and reporting at publicly owned companies," the report said.

"This is a question of national importance," SEC Chairman Harold Williams told reporters. "We are dealing with the credibility of the corporate statement and confidence in corporate management."

Williams said the SEC believes that the industry, with SEC oversight, is making enough progress in policing itself.

"Progress during the past year has been sufficient to merit continued opportunity for the profession to pursue its efforts at self-regulation," the report said.

If that effort fails, legislation may be needed, it said.

As one step, the SEC wants companies to set up auditing boards that are independent of the company management.

"In companies where the auditors report to an independent audit committee, a potentially important buffer is provided to insulate accountants from inordinate management pressures," the report said.

The SEC said a major accomplishment was the establishment of a section for self-regulation within the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants. However, it said the section should be stronger and more accounting firms should take part.

"The section's sanctioning power is still untested and thus its timeliness, fairness, evenhandedness and effectiveness remain to be demonstrated," the report said.

CLEMENTS NAMES CHAIRMAN

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements said Wednesday that W.C. Perryman of Athens, an independent geologist and oil operator, will serve as his regional campaign chairman for East Texas. Perryman will be in charge of organizing 34 counties.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My husband's salary is $21,000 a year. Our house has a present value of about $42,000 and a $16,500 mortgage, at 7 1/2 percent. One of our children will be graduated from college next year. The other will enter college this fall.

When my husband retires, in 14 years, he should receive $856 a month from his pension and Social Security. I am enclosing a list of our savings and investments. How should we rearrange these, in order to plan ahead for retirement?

A. You've done exceptionally well to date. The list you sent along shows a total value of somewhat more than $58,000. Accumulating that much is quite an accomplishment. And, with $33,000 in savings certificates, $1,000 in U.S. Savings Bonds and $15,000 in other bonds, it's a conservative list.

Frankly, it's a bit too conservative for people whose aim is to build capital, as you are trying to do. The savings and bonds are fixed-income things which hold out no hope of growing in value.

With inflation constantly eating away at the value of the dollar, you should think about putting more of your money into things that, hopefully, will increase in dollar value and provide more income in the years ahead.

The stocks and mutual fund shares you have on your list make up the smallest part of your savings-investment portfolio. Consider putting more of your money there in the future. I'm not telling you to make a big switch in a hurry. Do it gradually. By the time your second child is out of college, you should have more money for investments.

From that time, until you get close to retirement, more of your money should be working in things expected to grow in value.

• • •

Q. We are on Social Security and live in an apartment. My husband wants to buy a townhouse. I don't feel we can afford it, on our income. I want to leave some money to our fine children. What is your feeling on this?

A. The same as your husband's. Based on the information about your family finances detailed in your letter, you can afford to buy a townhouse, condominium or some other type of home. When taxes and other considerations are taken into account, you would probably come out way ahead.

Since you asked for my "feelings," I'll tell you that I feel, very strongly, that people should use their money to enjoy the things they want out of life and not worry about leaving a fat estate. Your fine children should understand that.

• • •

Q. My wife won 50 shares of stock in a local company, a couple of years ago. We recently received a letter from that company, stating it is considering a merger into a much bigger company. If the merger goes through, we will have two choices.

We can elect to receive $17.50 cash for each of our 50 shares. Or we can receive "convertible preferred" stock of the bigger company, which might have a higher value in the future. What should we do?

A. If I were in your shoes, I would take the cash — strictly on the old "bird in the hand" theory. The other choice might be better in the long run. But it's a complicated arrangement, as are many of the merger deals these days.

• • •

Q. Since there no longer are "fixed" commissions on buying or selling stock, how will I know what a broker will charge me?

A. Ask the broker, before you place your order. And, try "negotiating." Since fixed commissions were aboilished, that's the name of the game — "negotiated rates."

Sporting Goods Firm Buys Famous Name

HOUSTON (AP) — Oshman's Sporting Goods Inc. Wednesday completed the acquisiton of the exclusive rights to use the Abercrombie & Fitch name, clearing the way for the opening of a new A&F store in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Abercrombie earlier this year closed all stores operating under its name because of financial problems. Oshman's said the new A&F operations will be independent of Oshman's existing sporting goods stores.

Oshman's also said it may open other A&F stores and run a mail order business under the Abercrombie & Fitch name.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JULY 6, 1978

Cattle Futures Finish Strongly

By Reuters

CHICAGO — On a turnover of 24,186 contracts, live cattle futures finished 52 points higher to 25 lower Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Nearby August paced the upturn with February off the most. The market reacted after an early advance of 100 points and slumped 45 in October for a time.

The commission house with a cash cattle connection was an active seller in late trading after buying early with another active commission house on both sides of the market.

Late selling was primarily profit-taking after three-week highs and an advance of more than 6 1/2 cents per pound from recent lows.

Wholesale beef was up one cent at 85 1/2 to 86 cents a pound, a two-week high. Cash cattle were off 25 cents to up $3 with the top at $57.25 per hundredweight in Omaha.

Wednesday's slaughter was estimated at 140,000 head. The six markets expect 6,700 head to arrive today.

Feeder cattle futures tumbled 27 to 95 points on 2,406 sales. August and May were off most at their lowest levels of the day. The market reversed course after an early gain of 90 points in January.

Aggressive profit-taking and other selling pressured the late trade after prices climbed more than nine cents from recent lows to their highest points in more than three weeks. Initial support was sparked by light cattle supplies and strength in cash cattle and beef.

Six-market arrivals are expected to be 3,000 head today. Cash feeders were steady to up $6 per hundredweight with a top of $79 in San Antonio.

Live hog futures closed 90 points higher to 30 lower. Distant August was up the most on a bid with June at the only loss.

The market was up 110 points to off 35 in erratic swings.

Early short covering and other buying was prompted by the upsurge in cattle futures and strength in feed grains along with light hog runs.

Buyers backed off from top prices when cattle futures sagged and they also noted slow ham demand and lower cash hogs.

Wholesale hams were unchanged at 75 cents asked to 77 cents per pound asked, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were steady to off $1.50 per hundredweight on a top of $48.75.

The major terminals expect 23,500 head to arrive today. Kill on Wednesday was set at 269,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures finished 40 points higher to 15 lower on 4,809 contracts exchanged. February and May paced the upturn with nearby August off the most.

Nearby July broke 110 points early in the session and distant August gained 95 late in the day.

Outset selling carried over from Monday on poor clearance of bacon. Strength in other meat futures brought short covering, as did firming in cash bellies at noon.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up two cents at 49 to 56 cents per pound, f.o.b. river, a two-week high.

Cotton Co-Op Names New Head

C.L. Boggs has been named general manager of the Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Cooperative Association (PCCA), one of the largest marketers of cotton in the United States.

He succeeds Dan Davis, who resigned last month after 22 years as executive head of PCCA. Davis is forming his own company and said he will develop an electronic marketing service for the independent cotton sector in the Southwest.

The PCCA is handling more than one million bales this year for 20,000 producers in Texas and Oklahoma who use the association's electronic marketing service known as "Telcot."

In addition, the association is marketing about 300,000 bales to worldwide points for American Cotton Growers (ACG), another farmer-owned enterprise whose 3,000 producers also own and operate a denim manufacturing plant at Littlefield.

Boggs served for 11 years as assistant general manager of PCCA, prior to becoming general manager of ACG, last September.

Based on actions taken by the boards of PCCA and ACG, he will manage both associations.

A native of Quitaque, Boggs joined the PCCA staff as office manager in 1965 and became assistant general manager the following year. He was associated with the cotton cooperative sector in Texas for nine years as a certified public accountant before moving into cooperative management.

"Boggs has been an integral part of the cooperative management structure in the Southwest for many years," said L.C. Unfred of New Home, president of both the PCCA and ACG.

"He has been a part of PCCA during its most dynamic growth periods, including the development of our electronic marketing system, and has assisted ACG from its outset."

Unfred said Boggs' dual capacity as general manager of the two associations will mean greater efficiency and savings.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

COTTON IS MAKING EXCELLENT GROWTH across most of the South Plains.

"At the same time, fields are relatively insect free — at least for now," say extension entomologists James F. Leser and William P. Morrison of Lubbock.

Some cotton has been squaring for a couple of weeks or more and other fields have only one true leaf. Leser and Morrison say the great range in cotton growth will complicate the insect situation this year.

Most cotton is approaching the fourth or fifth true leaf stage, and a large percentage of the cotton no longer is vulnerable to thrips damage.

WITH THE INITIATION OF SQUARE formation in many fields, the entomologists advise, producers should start paying close attention to fields for cotton fleahopper activity.

Very light numbers have been observed on host weed plants adjacent to cotton fields. As the weed host plants mature, fleahoppers will migrate into cotton fields when young squares are available on the plants.

The main damage caused by the fleahopper is the destruction of young pinhead squares soon after they emerge from the terminal clusters. A second and noticeable type of damage is the abnormal growth of the affected plants.

The abnormal growth may be one of several forms, Leser and Morrison say, but the most common is tall whip-like growth of the main stem, with a supression of fruiting branches or with an increase in vegetative branches.

IF THE TERMINAL BUD IS DESTROYED, one or more of the side branches may show an excessive growth or there may be a cluster of short branches at the topmost node of the stalk. This is especially common in young cotton.

A third type of damage is the production of lesions due to the feeding on the stems, leaf petioles, and the mid-ribs of the leaves.

Potential for fleahopper damage is greatest during the first three weeks of squaring beginning with the pinhead square stage. Feeding on pinhead squares results in blasting of the small squares.

During the first three weeks of squaring, 100 cotton plant terminals should be selected at random in the field and checked for cotton fleahopper numbers (nymphs and adults) and blasted pinhead squares, Leser and Morrison advise.

ALL INSECTICIDE TREATMENTS should be based on 15 to 25 percent damaged pinhead squares as well as on numbers of fleahoppers, the entomologists say.

During the first three weeks of squaring, 25 to 50 fleahoppers per 100 plant terminals may cause damage. Blasting of pinhead squares may result from several factors in the field.

Therefore, the entomologists say, fleahopper numbers as well as number of damaged pinhead squares should be considered closely before insecticide controls are applied.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures leaped about 10 cents, while soybeans and corn scored good-sized gains on the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday.

The Department of Agriculture's report that corn exports soared to an all-time record of 57.7 million bushels last week more than offset the negative impact of fine crop weather in the Midwest.

Exports of soybeans and wheat also were hefty, and traders responded to an active demand for U.S. grains in overseas markets.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading was slow Wednesday in the Lubbock cotton market.

Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was light. High Plains growers sold mixed lots at 775 to 1,100 points over loan rates.

The base quotation on grade 41, staple 34, micronaire 3.5-4.9, was off 25 points at 53.50 cents, down 60 points from a week ago.

LUBBOCK SPOT COTTON

Quotations are the approximate prices reported to the Agricultural Marketing Service for qualities equal to the U.S. Official Grade and Staple Standards. Prices are for micronaire (mike) readings of 3.5 through 4.9, in mixed lots, uncompressed, free of all charges in the warehouse in the market.

Brezhnev Speech Asks More Farm Production

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Leonid Brezhnev's address to the Communist Party Central Committee makes it clear the Soviets still have failed to solve problems of waste and inefficiency in agriculture.

The 294-member central Committee unanimously approved Brezhnev's lengthy analysis of what was right and what was wrong with Soviet agriculture and ordered a better performance at all levels.

"The basic problem outlined by Brezhnev was that the government is not getting a sufficient return on its investment in agriculture," one Western diplomat said.

The Central Committee session was held on the eve of a meeting of the nation's parliament, the Supreme Soviet, which opened Wednesday. Brezhnev, Premier Alexei Kosygin and virtually the entire Kremlin hierarchy were present.

Brezhnev's report made it clear that Soviet society has yet to solve its farming problems and that Soviet agriculture, although it has made impressive strides, is not able to meet the demands of the nation's 280 million people.

Brezhnev listed poor results in agricultural transportation, modernization and mechanization, development and use of chemical fertilizers and insecticides, and in official cooperation and management.

Brezhnev and the Central Committee said they would raise production targets sharply in the 1981-1985 five-year plan — but budget outlays for agriculture would not rise much.

"They want the agriculture sector to do more of the same but do it better, while investment in agriculture will continue at about the same 27 percent of total outlay," the Western diplomat said.

Brezhnev and the Central Committee called for elimination of waste and greater efficiency at all levels of the agricultural economy.

The Kremlin hierarchy said the next five-year plan would set targets on grain production at an annual average of 238 million to 243 million tons.

Gambling Tops Mart

NEW YORK (AP) — Gambling stocks rallied sharply on the crest of a late wave of buying, Wednesday, while the rest of the market languished in quiet post-holiday trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 7.10 to 805.79, extending its loss over the last three sessions to 15.85 points.

New York Stock Exchange volume came to 23.73 million shares against 11.56 million in Monday's session, when many traders were off on a long July 4 weekend.

The gambling stocks, which ran up some dramatic gains in the second quarter, had come under pressure in recent sessions.

But they took off again, Wednesday, sparked by Resorts International's announcement that it had a "net win" of better than $16 million during June from gambling operations at its new casino in Atlantic City, N.J.

Resorts also said it expected approval soon on its application to expand space in the casino by about 70 percent.

New York (AP) —Wednsday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Discrimination Charged Again Black University

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas Southern University professor has filed suit in federal court alleging his constitutional rights are being violated.

George Silverstein alleges the TSU board of regents and its president, Granville Sawyer, discriminate against white employees and that whites are deprived of equal rank and pay with black professors.

Silverstein alleges early in 1977 he tried to get tenure on the TSU faculty. He says his department chairman yelled at him at a faculty meeting and told him he would block any efforts by Silverstein to gain tenure.

Silverstein also alleges the dean refused to get involved when Silverstein pursued the matter with him. Silverstein was notified his job was abolished in the spring of 1977.

Silverstein has been on the TSU staff as an instructional media consultant since 1971. He says despite notification his job has been abolished, he has kept that job. But he says now he is the only faculty member in his department who has not been told what his duties will be in September.

Silverstein says he has not been given a hearing in the matter as TSU regulations require, thus depriving him from his job without due process of the law.

Silverstein seeks a temporary restraining order and a permanent injunction to keep the board of regents from firing him and $100,000 in damages.
