Macles Never Cease

One never expects to see even one kind word about the Democrats or the Democratic party in The Lubbock Avalanche, guided by our friend Charlie Guy, "The Plainsman", who is a self-styled independent in politics. Leastwise nothing has been said in extension of any Democrat to my knowledge in this paper in the time I've been reading it, else I've missed it.

But yesterday old Charlie had a little to say, like these two excerpts from his column:

"President Eisenhower might give some thought to asking Jim Farley to act as a consultant to the U. S. Post Office Department, as a consultant because 'Big Jim' has too big a job now to even consider serving as Postmaster General. The reason Farley's advice should be most valuable in rebuilding the department wrecked by Jesse Donaldson and Arthur Summerfield is because Farley, as PMG under Roosevelt in the early 1930's, not only put the Post Office on a sustaining basis, but almost made a profit."

And another in the same issue: "No sulker is Adlai Stevenson. Quietly, but tellingly, the man who was the unsuccessful Democratic Presidential nominee in 1952 and 1956, is doing his best to make up the party deficit..."

"When the 1956 battle for ballots ended, the party's deficit was $1 million. Now it's down to around $660,000, and much of that $340,000 make-up can be chalked up to the efforts of Mr. Stevenson." Adlai, explained, "Charlie, is going about making speeches at $100 a plate dinners, seeking donations from party members, etc."

Increasingly Critical

Many columnists and news analysts are becoming increasingly critical of the administration. These include Ray Tucker, Avalanche columnist who never misses a chance to sling something at the Democrats. Tucker is about to decide that the politician cabinet members of the Roosevelt and Truman administrations seemed to get more done than the all big business cabinets of the Eisenhower administration. Mr. Eisenhower doesn't seem to have the "good press" he certainly had during his first administration.

And more and more writers are becoming critical of the 22nd amendment, which limits a President to two terms. Mr. Eisenhower admittedly is losing what control he had over Congress, particularly in the losing the loyalty and close support of his programs he ought to have from members of his own party. It's going to be difficult for any second term President to maintain leadership and control of his party, since he's on his way out.

How does all this concern me and you, way off down here in old Bailey County? In various ways, but principally we might get to feel that the national government lacks direction; some might decide "we ain't going nowhere."

But another reason I wanted to call this to your attention is to remind you that those we oppose politically do not necessarily wear horns. Our side may not all be composed of saints; and members of the party opposing ours may not necessarily be Communists, Socialists, nitwits or thieves. Keep your shirt on, the next time we have a hot political battle; stick around a while and you'll live to see another one, but with different actors.

Lubbock Man Dies Of Attack Here Wednesday

Charles W. (Charlie) Calhoun, Lubbock concrete contractor and former Texas Tech star football back, died unexpectedly of a heart attack here Wednesday. He was 40.

Calhoun, standout football player under Coach Pete Cawthon in the late 1930's and Chief Jones of Muleshoe were having lunch together at a local restaurant and reminiscing about their football playing days at Tech when Calhoun was first stricken. He complained of a hurting in his chest and across his shoulders. Jones urged his friend to see a doctor and he said he would as soon as he checked on his men who were pouring concrete for a building here.

He collapsed at the scene of the job and was rushed to West Plains Hospital, where he died about 15 minutes later. Calhoun is survived by his wife. Funeral services were set for Friday.

Rainfall For Year is 5.12 Inches In Muleshoe; Drouth May Be Ended

Is the drouth in West Texas really broken?

That is a question of paramount importance to every person in this area, and while it is true that recent rains have considerably relieved the tension brought on by one of the longest drouths in history, rain fall has been fairly spotty in the West Plains area.

Some sections of the county have had five and even ten inch rains, considerable flooding and in those sections, the drouth probably is broken.

In Muleshoe, where the official U. S. Weather Bureau rain gauge is kept by Judge Klump, the years total of moisture recorded is 5.12 inches, or more than half the entire total of rainfall here in 1956.

Rainfall in January was only .22 of an inch. In February .67 of an inch fell, while March totaled 1.18 inches. April was the highest rainfall month of the year thus far with 2.34 inches. May's moisture figure for the first 22 days is .71 of an inch.

Moisture received this year in the immediate area has for the most part been beneficial, falling slowly, with little runoff. Soil retention of the moisture has been good, and planting conditions have been near ideal this Spring.

Gilliam was charged with failure to yield right of way, and being unable to pay his fine, was lodged in jail.

Dwayne Eustace was a passenger in the Gilliam car.

Betty Louise Arnn-Reuel Kirby Married In Monument Lake Church

MRS. REUEL KIRBY

Miss Betty Louise Arnn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Arnn of Goodland, became the bride of Mr. Reuel Kirby, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Kirby, also of Goodland, in a double ring ceremony performed by Elder Glen Williams, Sunday, May 19, at 3 p.m. in the Monument Lake Methodist Church.

The bridal party stood before an archway of emerald foliage, flanked by baskets of pink gladioli and pink tapers in candleabra. The bride also was marked with pink satin bows.

Bridal Gown
Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an original gown of white imported lace and nylon tulle over net and satin. Designed with high neckline, framed with upstanding Mandarin lace collar, the fitted lace bodice had a sheer yoke outlined with scalloped lace, long sleeves extending in points over the hands, terminating with a point at the center front waistline. From this stemmed a voluminous waltz-length skirt of tulle, fully shirred, enhanced with scattered appliques of lace, full length panels of scalloped lace accented the center front and each side, framing a wide panel of tiny nylon tulle ruffles. The immense fullness of lace net and silk was emphasized by crinoline worn beneath.

Her veil of silk illusion was joined to a tiara type cap of lace embroidered with iridescent sequins and seed pearls.

Bridal Bouquet
The bridal bouquet was an arrangement of pink roses and stephanotis in cascade style. She carried out the tradition of something blue, her garter; her dress was new, and for something old, and borrowed, she wore a gold wedding band of her grandmother, Mrs. J. W. Arnn of Denver, Colo.

Attendants
Charles Abbe, of Maple, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man. Gall Arnn, sister of the bride was maid of honor. Mrs. John Weaver, sister of the bridegroom, of Grand Prairie, was matron of honor. Ushers were

Red Cross Early On Scene of Disaster In Western Texas

Texas, hard hit by floods and tornadoes which have battered widespread areas of the state since early April, reeled again last week under the impact of a series of tornadoes which struck the Panhandle, causing damage in five communities. The Red Cross rushed disaster workers to Silverton, 100 miles southeast of Amarillo in Briscoe county, which was hardest hit with 38 persons injured, 22 homes destroyed and 38 damaged.

Red Cross workers were also dispatched immediately to Goldston in Donley county, Vigo Park in Swisher county, Plains in Young county, and a rural area in Briscoe county 17 miles north of Lockney, where damage was reportedly less extensive. The Silverton tornado, which struck near midnight Wednesday of last week in a residential section, leveled six city blocks and left the town temporarily without lights or telephone service. First reports of the disaster were radioed to Red Cross State Relations Representative Ralph Husted in Austin by the Department of Public Service and telephoned by him to Red Cross Disaster Headquarters in Waco. Field representatives and chapter workers in the Amarillo area were on their way into all stricken communities within an hour of the first report to survey needs and to organize Red Cross emergency relief for the disaster victims. Within four hours after the tornado struck Silverton, 12 disaster specialists were on their way from other Texas communities to help volunteers working under the direction of a Red Cross Field Representative.

From Amarillo, the Red Cross chapter director set out with a mobile canteen, arriving at dawn to serve breakfast to exhausted disaster volunteers. From Littlefield, John Chisholm, volunteer member of the Midwestern Area Red Cross Advisory Committee, headed for Silverton, accompanied by a Red Cross building adviser assigned to survey damage to buildings and supervise needed rebuilding and repair of homes.

From Plainview, the chapter manager went to the disaster scene to handle the welfare inquiries pouring into Silverton as people from other sections of the county sought for news of relatives. Volunteer field representative Mrs. Thelma Cave drove from Plainview to coordinate the work of trained Red Cross volunteers in the area. Caseworkers were sent by the Department of Public Welfare for emergency duty on the Red Cross disaster staff, and from Waco Disaster Headquarters a nurse was dispatched to arrange assistance with emergency medical and nursing care for the injured. Other workers are now being transferred from Texas disaster areas where the job of restoring families to normal living is nearly ended.

The tornadoes, striking four counties, brought to 45 the number of Texas counties in which Red Cross is now conducting, or has recently completed, relief and rehabilitation operations. In Lampasas, hard hit by a devastating flash flood on Sunday, all

Study Completed On Tomato Crops In Plains Area

West Texas farmers "backed to the wall" by acreage controls and low grain sorghum prices are scanning the list of vegetable crops in a search for some profitable use of diverted acreage. Tomatoes may fill the bill if growers can economically produce the necessary quality for moving into central states' markets.

A 1956 study conducted by Texas A. & M.'s Department of Agricultural Economics and Sociology revealed that farmers in Bailey, Farmer, Deaf Smith, Castro, Lamb, Hale, Lubbock, and Floyd counties produced 348 bushels of tomatoes an acre. Production and marketing costs averaged $188 an acre. Chief competitor for West Texas tomatoes in the central states area will be California, long-time producer of high-quality vegetables. West Texas growers must realize the importance of management practices such as padding and covering for transporting tomatoes in containers, and the advantage of a good grading system if they expect to enter serious competition for any major market.

Unlike most West Texas crops, tomato prices fluctuate widely. Agricultural Economists cannot give a complete set of reasons for the annual price variations, but can partially explain them. Variations in Texas and competing area production of tomatoes as well as variations in the national disposable income are cited as important influences concerning these price differences.

Water Level Report On Irrigation Wells Available

In most sections of Texas farmers right now are more concerned about excessive moisture than about the need for irrigation. But, says Extension Agricultural Engineer T. V. Thamm, conditions can change in a hurry and supplemental irrigation may be needed before the summer is out.

It is a good idea, points out the irrigation engineer, for farmers to keep abreast of what is happening to the state's underground water supplies. One of the principal sources for this information is the Texas Board of Water Engineers with headquarters in Austin. Thurmond says the Board has just released valuable information on the water levels in observation wells in 29 counties in the Southern High Plains area of Texas.

The information is presented in base maps for each county. The observation wells all carry a number which is shown at its approximate location on the county map. Thus, a farmer can quickly locate his farm and at a glance see what has happened to the water level for his immediate area the past two years.

The studies are made in cooperation with the U. S. Geological Survey and cover observation wells in all sections of the state. The water level data maps for the 20 Southern High Plains counties are carried in Bulletin 5705, and may be obtained by writing to the Texas Board of Water Engineers, Austin, Texas.

Chief competitor for West Texas tomatoes in the central states area will be California, long-time producer of high-quality vegetables. West Texas growers must realize the importance of management practices such as padding and covering for transporting tomatoes in containers, and the advantage of a good grading system if they expect to enter serious competition for any major market.

Unlike most West Texas crops, tomato prices fluctuate widely. Agricultural Economists cannot give a complete set of reasons for the annual price variations, but can partially explain them. Variations in Texas and competing area production of tomatoes as well as variations in the national disposable income are cited as important influences concerning these price differences.

A constant change is underway in modern agricultural marketing.

For example, the retailer has lost the important role he once played in marketing farm products. Today's consumer no longer buys merely what the retailer offers.

The merchandise itself is the salesman. In other words, the boss of agricultural marketing today is the consumer.

The Texas Department of Agriculture is proud of the role it plays in marketing—the work it does on the consumer level. Inspections, grading of commodities, testing of weights and measures, are but a few of the services TDA renders for consumer benefit.

Marketing changes in recent years—caused by "Boss" consumer—have created greater competition among producers and their products. And this competition for the consumers' dollar has improved efficiencies and cut costs.

Farmers have many responsibilities, in this "Super Market" era of commodity promotion. They must be constantly to the demands of "Boss" consumer. And to meet the growing competition, they must produce better products at lower production costs.

The Texas Department of Agriculture—like the farmer—has gone through a transition period marked by a changed agriculture. Its operations are now geared to keeping open the channels of trade within and without the state. It has become chiefly an agricultural law enforcing agency with primarily administrative and regulatory duties. And its work concentrates heavily on the consumer, through the TDA Marketing Division.

As the agricultural marketing picture continues to change, TDA must likewise assume different roles to meet this challenge. After all, we must either move forward or backward.

We enjoyed some castor oil for the first time in our life the other day. Made into a filmy, synthetic fabric, it appeared in the form of negligees worn by some pretty models.

Cotton School At Texas A & M To Be Held June 3 - July 12

Texas A. & M.'s 48th annual Summer Cotton School will be held June 3 to July 12, according to Prof. J. M. Ward of the Department of Agricultural Economics and Sociology.

Purpose of the school is to provide training for persons who expect to enter the cotton trade; for growers who wish to learn how to market their cotton more profitably, and for buyers who wish to review grade and staple standards or to become more familiar with the elements of quality in cotton.

Instruction, by men with successful careers in the practical aspects of the cotton trade, covers cotton grading, stapling, determination of cotton properties and cotton trade procedure.

Most of the student's time will be spent in actual practice and discussion; the rest will be spent in lectures and in visits to the U. S. D. A. Spinning Laboratory on the campus and to other laboratories of interest, such as the Cotton Seed Oil Research Laboratory, also on the campus.

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. Monday, June 3, in the large room on the third floor of the Agricultural Engineering Building. Students who report on Sunday may obtain temporary housing from the Housing Office, Professor Ward says.

Further information may be obtained by writing to Professor Ward at the Summer Cotton School, Texas A. & M. College, College Station, Texas.

Besides the new track, with a modern aluminum gooseneck rail, some of the other improvements include:

A widened course to permit a ten horse field instead of eight.

A new enlarged tote board.

20,000 added square feet of standing space in front of the grandstand.

New enclosed annex to provide additional facilities, including a greater seating capacity.

Infield lakes shaped as the initials R. D.

Over 100 new stalls erected for horses.

Expanded paddock, jockey and parimutual facilities.

In fact, the Downs, which now ranks as the fastest growing race track, has spent the entire off-season doing everything possible to add to the pleasure of their racing fans.

Cotton accounts for a large portion of the high level economy we on the West Plains enjoy.

Research and Promotion of uses of cotton fiber can further increase the market for our major cash crop.

Surplus cotton sold on the free world market at a competitive price can create still further demands for increased cotton crop production.

"Sure have paid that loan down since you changed to AMALIE L. P. G.!"

"You wouldn't believe what that AMALIE L. P. G. Oil can save when you're burning butane or propane in your engines. Butane's a problem; common, ordinary oil thickens up till it looks like gear-grease. Dust and grit cake up. That sure is rough on engines. But no more — with AMALIE L. P. G.!" Nothing but the finest Pennsylvania crude in AMALIE L. P. G. Oil — no other crude like that on earth. And AMALIE chemists have done two great things: In refining, produced an oil that holds its "viscosity," or flowing quality, and developed additives to keep grit, dust, etc., in solution, so they filter out. Babson Discusses . . .

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Babson Park, Mass., May 23 — During the past winter I have used my spare time trying to decide what industries have the best opportunities. Among these, the following seem the leaders. The Oil Industry, represented by one of the large companies, The Chemical Industry, in which I consider the American Agricultural Chemical Co. of Florida one of the best. Household Heating by uranium, with American Radiator & Standard Sanitary the most conservative and National U. S. Radiator perhaps the best speculation. Electronics and Thermodynamics, with Westinghouse Air Brake perhaps the best speculation. Earthmoving Machinery, with Caterpillar Tractor the most speculative and International Harvester perhaps the most conservative purchase. The Microwave Industry, of which Hughes Products of Los Angeles and the Motorola Co. of Chicago are among the leaders. Greeting Cards, with a Gibson, Hallmark, or Norcross trademark. The Broadcasting of Power for small kitchen utensils may be developed by the Radio Corporation of America.

Reasons For The Above Selections

There are four basic factors which I am considering in selecting these industries:

- (1) LABOR SHORTAGE. This will continue due to the desire for four more years of education and for retirement at 65, and to other factors which will offset the population growth. This will further strengthen the power of Labor Unions.
- (2) AUTOMATION. At first glance this should cause unemployment, but automation will be so expensive that it will come about only slowly. Furthermore, although automation reduces greatly the number of employees needed, yet the quality of the employees needed will be considerably upgraded. Automation for many years will barely offset the possible shortage of labor under present conditions.
- (3) INFLATION. We ought to fight inflation in any form, but it will slowly creep up on us, resulting in a gradual increase in the cost of living. Of course, if World War III should come, the value of the dollar will drop from 50 cents to 25 cents, but I am not looking for anything like this now.

GUEST EDITORIAL

At the approach of the warm months and the beginning of the seasonal rise in sex crimes, there is a special need to focus public attention on a despicable business, the sale and distribution of obscene material. The serious danger of this "big business" criminal enterprise lies in its degrading influence on youth and American communities. Too often the purveyor of filth in the form of movies, playing cards, books, photographs and other devices; reaps a rich reward as a result of lackadaisical public opposition to its evil occupation. The carefree hours of school vacation time afford these parasitic peddlers of ugly wares many opportunities to claim inquisitive and impressionable minds of the Nation's youth.

The most effective means of preventing juvenile crime is proper adult guidance and practical moral training in the home, school and church. A breakdown in this basic phase of adult responsibility, however, is clearly evidenced by the spiraling youth crime statistics. The shame of this problem lies in the fact that all too frequently the clean living majority of our youth seek in vain for guidance through the pitfalls of this modern era.

Many letters which I receive from the younger population implore help against these temptations, particularly the obscenity bombarding them from all sides. One 17-year-old stated that even though lack of family life and absence of religious training were seeds of the youth problem, certainly sordid literature, pornography, and other forms of obscenity acted as fertilizers to nourish these seeds into juvenile crime. His cry, typical of the respectable youngster across the country, was, "Please do us American teen-agers a favor and get rid of this trash."

The weapons for combatting this menace must be found or forged in the arsenal of local, state and Federal laws. One major blow at these dealers in indecency was the amendment of the Interstate Transportation of Obscene Matter Statute in June of 1955, giving the FBI authority in cases involving the use of personal automobile or any other form of transportation, as well as express or common carrier, in such interstate trafficking.

What are the next steps? There must be co-operative public and police effort to assure that local ordinance against obscenity are adequate and rigidly enforced. While these sewage salesmen prosper in the loopholes of weak laws and "license-fee-type" small fines, heavier sentences or jail terms upon conviction serve as strong deterrents to their trade.

Parents, school authorities and law-abiding citizens interested in the welfare of youth must share the duty of reporting sources of obscene material to the proper officials.

Public opinion and coordinated action can sound the death knell for the obscene material peddler. Assuredly, each and every citizen must contribute to the fight against filth mongering or suffer in the contamination spread by this diseased business.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

The spiritual basis of true grace and beauty will be emphasized at Christian Science services Sunday.

Bible passages to be read in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Soul and Body" include the following from Psalms (90:16, 17): "Let thy work appear until thy servants, and thy glory unto their children. And let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us; and establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish thou it."

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will be read the following (247:19-24): "Comeliness and grace are independent of matter. Being possesses its qualities before they are conceived humanly. Beauty is a thing of life, which dwells forever in the eternal Mind and reflects the charms of His goodness in expression, form, outline, and color."

THIS WEEK

-In Washington

With

Clinton Davidson

One of the odd things in Washington is the different viewpoints Congress and the White House take on the "Communist situation." It worries both, but for different reasons.

Congress likes to ferret out communists in this country and bring them up before investigating committees, where they invariably hide behind the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.

The Administration takes a dim view of the hide-and-go-seek game the lawmakers play. The President thinks Congress is wasting its time when it ought to be paying more attention to such far-away places as the Far East, the Near East, Africa and Eastern Europe.

It is becoming more and more difficult for Mr. Eisenhower to get as much foreign aid out of Congress as he would like. And, every time there is talk about cutting the defense budget he calls a group of Congressmen to the White House to lecture them.

The explanation of these differences may not be hard to find. The President assumes that the FBI already knows who the communists are in this country and is watching them. Recently some Congressmen have been poking around old places in the world and gathering their own information.

One of those is Rep. Jamie L. Whitten of Mississippi, a veteran of the important House Appropriations Committee. He spent two weeks back of the Iron Curtain as, he says, strictly a tourist, going wherever he wished and talking with whomever he pleased.

Some of the things he observed and reported give you a pretty good idea of why not all congressmen roll over and play dead when somebody shouts "the communists are coming." By no stretch of the imagination could you call Whitten a pro-communist, either before or after his Russian tour.

"Frankly," he told us, "we were greatly surprised at many of the things we found. Also, we were surprised at the friendliness of the people toward the United States. In Russia, of course, they are not the government."

"The Soviet Union is largely a 19th century group of republics attempting to compete in a 20th century world. It is a nation of dirt roads, 35 mile-per hour trains, few railroads, poor communications, and horse-and-buggy transportation."

"There are a few show-places built to impress Western visitors, but in most things it is a backward nation as compared with the United States. The efficiency in agriculture, and in most light industry, is at least 50 years behind the U. S."

"A disproportionately large amount of farm work is hand labor, and half or more is performed by women. There is very little light, power machinery. In cities we saw innumerable middle-aged and older women with homemade brooms, sweeping leaves from the sidewalk, one by one, as they fell."

Whitten found that the Russian people do not seem dissatisfied with their life under the present regime, but neither do they appear enthusiastic in their support. "It appears," he said, "that their present system is generally satisfactory to them, since it is no worse than they've been accustomed to through the centuries."

Russia's greatest weakness, Whitten concluded, is its backward and inefficient agriculture, and lack of transportation. Practically all of the farm land is north of 40 degrees latitude, the same latitude as northern Minnesota. Roads are impassable much of the year.

Whatever the ambitions and intentions of the Russian rulers are, the country certainly could not sustain a long war, Whitten declared.

TODAY'S MEDITATION

Read Romans 8:1-10.

There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. (Romans 8:1)

Seamen tell the story of a ship disaster in the Atlantic. Men were battling for their lives in the fearsome waters. One of the seamen, caught by the terror of the experience was shouting with all the power of his voice, "For God's sake save me! Won't someone save me?" He was looking in the wrong direction for help; he did not see the life preserver just a few feet away. Death claimed him.

In the face of our problems and burdens, we cry out in desperation for someone to save us. We turn to things, such as riotous living, whisky, sleeping pills, and other devisings of man to solve our problems, but they only create additional ones. We fail to notice that ever so near is the help we need—our Saviour, Jesus Christ.

How the world needs Christ! Mankind can be saved if we will but have faith in Christ, and reach and accept Him who is always so near and so eager to save us.

PRAYER

O God, our life, we have tried the way of man and have found them wanting. Now we reach out in faith to be received into Thy care and keeping. We pray in the name of Him who taught us to pray, "Our Father who are in heaven . . . Amen."

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY
To recognize my need of Christ is the first step I can take to help build a better world.

—Hal J. Bonney, Jr., (Va.)

"One sure thing wrong with the younger generation is that a lot of us don't belong to it any more!"

Sandhill Philosopher Comes Out . . . With Brand New Idea to Solve Surplus Problem via Style Route

Editor's note: The Sand Hills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm has a new idea for the farm surplus problem, but outside of saying it's new, that's about all you can say for it.

Now that the Soil Bank has about gone bust, at least I read in a paper last night that Congress has decided it should close up after this year and be written off as a failure, and now that Sec. Benson has declared that it is virtually impossible to control farm production, and now that the drought is over in many sections of the country and a bumper crop is in prospect, the problem of a farm surplus once more is coming to the front and the door is now open for new ideas on its solution.

According to Mr. Benson, a "technological explosion" has taken place on the farm, due to machinery, and the production per farm worker has doubled in the last 15 years, which makes the problem of surpluses worse than ever.

Now while it may be true production per worker has doubled in the last 15 years on the average, I'd like to point out in passing that this is no average farm out here, and if my production is any better now than it was 15 years ago, I can't tell it.

But as for the solution to the farm surplus problem, I hate to see Mr. Benson give up, and would like to offer an idea.

The trouble with us farmers is, we aren't style conscious. How far would the car manufacturers get if they brought out the same model cars year after year? The inside of the engine doesn't have to be any different, it still uses gas, oil and water, but if the windshield and the back fenders and the height of the top weren't changed from year to year, nobody would feel self-conscious about driving a car 10 years old, and how many new cars would get sold?

But what does a farmer do? He goes right on raising the same style wheat or rice or corn or cotton or potatoes or beans he's been raising for generations. A bushel of wheat today looks exactly like a bushel of wheat when Pharaoh farmed the Nile and rested in the shade of a pyramid. A man with a warehouse full of 1952 cotton has the same style cotton the cotton farmers will flood the market with this year.

Farmers just haven't caught on to the fact people are style-conscious. Why some people are so style-conscious if the plumbers were smart they could get them to change bathtubs every year if they had bathtub style shows like automobile shows and could attach a swept-back fender to the things. They could get people where they wouldn't be caught using a last year's sink.

The agricultural experts ought to get to work on this idea. The only way to get rid of the surplus is to make last year's carry-over as out-of-date as a car that's tall enough for a man to go into without knocking his hat off.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

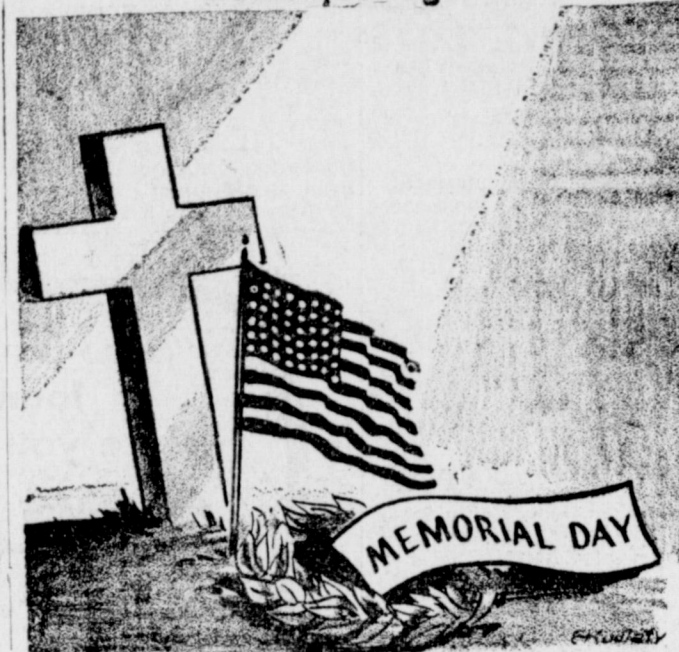

Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new. —(II Corinthians 5, 17.)

Through our Savior and Redeemer, Lord Jesus Christ, in real repentance we can receive God's forgiveness and tender mercy. In that moment, in His strength, we become in truth a "new man" completely — leaving behind the shame and sins of the past.

Wildlife Refuge Near Muleshoe Supports Huge Bird Population

Muleshoe National Wildlife Refuge is one of a chain of refuges in the Central Flyway. It was established as a winter area for migratory waterfowl. Its location, on the High Plains of West Texas near the New Mexico border is at an elevation of 3750 feet above sea level. Even though it is one of the smallest units in the national refuge system, it supports tremendous populations of waterfowl thru the winter. Established by Executive order dated October 24, 1935, it is administered by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The WPA assisted in early construction and development.

Migrating waterfowl begin to arrive on the refuge lakes during August and reach their peak wintering population, often exceeding 700,000 birds, by the end of December. A few Canada geese winter here while frequent small flocks of snow geese visit the refuge for short periods during spring and fall migration. First of the fall migrants are the pintail and blue-winged teal, followed by American widgeon and finally the predominant species, during winter, the mallard. Shoveler, scaup, bufflehead, and ruddy ducks are also common throughout the winter.

Sandhill cranes arrive at approximately the same date year after year. In late September, and build up to the largest concentration of this bird to be found anywhere in the United States. Flocks totaling 30,000 birds frequently are seen. Before returning to their breeding grounds, the cranes spend six months at Muleshoe Refuge.

October and November are the best months to observe migrating songbirds. Most of the 181 species recorded on the refuge are present at that time. Mourning dove, mockingbird, and lark sparrow also are prominent nesting birds. Most of the small birds can be seen in the shelter-belt planting, surrounding the refuge headquarters.

The 5809 acres of the refuge is broken by two caliche outcroppings, in the form of rimrock, near the north and west boundaries, with frequent prominent gullies leading into the lakes. Over 5,000 acres of predominantly short grass mesquite type is under a managed grazing program, with livestock rotated among several pastures to provide the best utilization of available grasses. The three sink-type lakes have no outlets, depend entirely on runoff for their water supply and are periodically dry. When all lakes are full, 500 surface acres of water are available for wintering waterfowl. Refuge personnel farm 160 acres which are managed for maximum benefit to waterfowl. A variety of grain sorghums and wheat is planted and crop varieties that can best stand dry land conditions are utilized.

The refuge is located 20 miles south of Muleshoe, Texas, on state highway 214. Visitors are welcome to travel refuge roads from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., evening picnics and overnight camping are permitted in the recreation area. Refuge headquarters can be reached by traveling west from highway 214, 2½ miles over a gravel road. Here visitors may register and obtain information about the refuge.

Our mild climate with its abundance of sunshine provides every opportunity for excellent observation and photography of birds, permission is not required for amateur photography of wildlife on the refuge. Photography requiring construction of blinds or special travel, may be authorized by the Refuge Manager.

Fishing on the refuge, in compliance with state laws and carried on so as not to disturb wildlife, may be permitted later this year. Fishing will depend on the growth and condition of fish planted last year and is permitted in Upper Goose lake only. If the lake is opened to fishing, it will be announced later by the manager.

Picnic and overnight camping facilities are provided for public use near refuge headquarters. Fires are permitted in the recreation area. Use only dead wood for fires or better, bring your own wood if you can. Special arrangements should be made for large group picnics.

Approximately 20 miles of secondary roads and graded native soil firebreaks are satisfactory for auto travel. Cottontail and jackrabbits are abundant, and quail are frequently seen. Prairie dogs and burrowing owl may be seen during the summer while during the winter several golden eagles are residents of the area.

For information concerning the refuge, address the Refuge Manager, Muleshoe, Texas; telephone Needmore exchange, WH1tehall 6-2191, or see the manager whose residence is at the refuge headquarters.

Bailey, Parmer And Lamb Counties Form New 154th Judicial District

By ANDY ROGERS, Senator
30th Texas District

At last the crowded 64th Judicial District whose dockets now hold cases which are years old, will be split to form two separate districts. It is a much needed measure and, curiously, one which at the beginning of this legislative session was thought to have little chance of passing. The bill, sponsored in the House of Representatives by Representative Jess Osborn of Muleshoe, gained final passage in the Texas Senate.

As citizens and attorneys in the district have long known, the extremely crowded conditions of the docket in the six-county judicial district created a situation which resulted in citizens not receiving speedy trials and the justice guaranteed by both our State and the U. S. Constitutions.

Now composed of Hale, Swisher, Parmer, Lamb, Castro and Bailey counties, the old 64th Judicial District will be divided on the basis of population by making a new 154th Judicial District of three of the counties: Parmer, Lamb and Bailey. Hale, Swisher, and Castro counties will continue to be designated as the 64th Judicial District and their 47,000 citizens will be served by this court. The 42,000 residents of the new three-county district will be served by the newly-created 154th District Court.

The measure provides that Judge E. A. Bills of Littlefield shall continue as judge of the new 154th district for the remainder of his elected term and that the 64th District Attorney, Joe Cox of Plainview, shall serve out his elected term in his present office. Thus, these officers will continue to serve the districts in which their homes are located.

The bill allows the governor to appoint qualified attorneys to serve as 64th District Judge and 154th District Attorney until the next general election when these officers would be elected at the polls.

Conservation Can Increase Forage Range Production

By managing ranges to get maximum sustained forage production, ranchers are able to increase beef production. In recent years they have developed many important improvement practices each using those which fit his own operations.

Some of the most common practices such as proper stocking, deferred grazing, range reseeding, strategic salting, caking, and fencing for even cattle distribution have become routine ranch operations.

Water conservation has become increasingly important during the past seven years. Water is the chief factor limiting forage and livestock production. In order to hold the water when it does fall and utilize it for best results, it has been necessary to initiate several new practices. These include the practice of installing net wire diversions on shallow depressions above gullies, overfalls, and at end of existing structures to introduce further spreading. Other new practices include the use of range pitting to hold water in pits, contour furrowing to hold water where it falls, series of spreader dikes designed to slow down water and let it soak in as it moves down slope. Water-holding stock dams located to impound water from extensive watersheds usually supply cattle with water the year round and also irrigate land below the dam. All these are enabling practices designed to conserve precious moisture.

Brush control is another practice that has proven beneficial by increasing production from 50 to 70%. Chemical and mechanical controls are both employed. Best control is realized during moist years when brush is making good growth.

Moderate grazing has definitely proven to be more rewarding in terms of forage yield, beef production per acre, and profit — than either heavy or light grazing. Grazing experiments showed that moderate grazing returned 26% more profit than heavy and 36% more profit than light grazing. "Grazing half and leave half" is the guide to moderate grazing — half for beef production and the other half for plant reproduction. Heavy grazing cuts forage growth severely and the soil is damaged, while moderate grazing maintains soil stability, keeps down surface evaporation, and maintains high water intake rate, resulting in abundant forage for livestock production.

"Overgrazing" is an overused term for good ranchers are well aware of the condition of their ranges and avoid overgrazing as much as possible. However, due to drought, economic factors, etc., it has not always been possible to move cattle quickly enough to avoid a certain amount of overgrazing.

With severe, extensive overgrazing, ranges can be observed to be on a downward trend. The interrelationship of forage plants has been proven and is called plant succession. In cases where there is severe overgrazing, climax plants on a sandy-land site (sand hills), such as Sand bluestem, Indiangrass, and Switchgrass, decrease in number and less desirable plants come in, such as Sand dropseed, Perennial threeawn (needle grass), Red lovegrass, Skunkgrass, Shiny oak, Queen's delight, and Perennial broomweed. This results in a retrogressive succession which causes an abundance of less desirable types of plants which produce little forage and are less palatable.

Other ranch-proven practices include deferred grazing which means resting ranges part of a season or for one year (at least 1/3 of range each year, and continuous year-long grazing com-

Parmer County Farm Bureau News

By Raymond Euler

650 was the number of Parmer County Farm Bureau members in good standing as of April 1, 1957. This was the announcement made at the last directors meeting by vice-president and membership chairman, Jack Patterson. This number is the quota accepted by officers of the organization at the beginning of the year. There are approximately one hundred twenty-five whose memberships expire between now and October 31, the end of the fiscal year. Patterson suggested that each director and officer bring in three renewals at the next directors meeting.

Although we are not able to speak for any other agency, we doubt that any Parmer County Insurance agency approves the increased rates the State Insurance Commission prescribed for casualty insurance. We can only agree when we hear insureds say they think the increase is steep and uncalled for. Such unwanted increases are contributing factors to the effort of Farm Bureau to seek legislation allowing flexible rates for this type of insurance. Possibly, at the next legislative session favorable action will be forth coming.

Apparently the U. S. State Department will try anything. Recently it was reported that citizens of some small country were throwing rocks at the U. S. Embassy Office and saying the familiar "Americans go home" phrase. So what did the State Department do? It sent an American Jazz Band over, and in a little while the citizens put down their rocks and hoisted the band director to their shoulders and shouted praise to this wonderful American Jazz band director. Farm Sales In 1849 Not Quite Same As Now

Rufus Carter, of Lazbuddi community, has furnished The Journal with a copy of a farm sale bill printed in the Anderson, Ky., News in 1849. Mr. Carter found the sale bill in the Chickasha (Okla.) Star in a recent issue. The Star opined that J. L. Moss, who was putting on the sale, was probably one of the original Okies that came from the blue grass state.

FACTS ABOUT THE CAPITAL STOCK INSURANCE COMPANIES NEW COTTON HAIL POLICIES

- There are only two kinds of hail insurance policies written. One, the Capital stock companies with unlimited resources who can and will pay full loss — any time — year in and year out. The other, the policy holders constitute the company, and losses can only be paid out of premiums paid in any particular year, and if losses exceed premium paid, the available funds are PRO-RATED among claimants as far as it will go.
- The advantages of the Capital stock companies hail policies:
 - No pro-ration clause whereby one may not collect all of his damage.
 - No step ladder clause as has been heretofore. Full loss is paid when it occurs.
 - Improved method of adjustment where one can be assured of proper adjustment of loss and full payment or damages at time of loss.
- The full damage occurring by hail to cotton from the day it is up to a stand, unless the loss is total. This is in contrast with the old step ladder clause now eliminated from Capital Stock company policies.

Compare these advantages with other policies that have the said pro-ration clause referred to above and still have the old step ladder clause.

The following firmly established agencies handling only old time tested, capital stock, companies solicit your hail business. Insure now — with date of stand to be supplied when up. Get the advantage of the full season's insurance.

Santa Fe and Electronics

New electronic methods keep constant check on all freight cars moving over Santa Fe rails

New electronic wonders are contributing to precision railroading on the Santa Fe.

Take freight car locating, for instance. With our Red Ball service, we can "put the finger" any time on any one of many thousands of freight cars moving over the 13,150 miles of Santa Fe rails every day.

Information on these cars is recorded on cards which are fed into electronic machines. These "electronic brains" process the cards as fast as 2,000 per minute—and tell us within a few seconds where every car is, what it contains, where it is going.

This information is immediately available for our customers. Shippers of produce may take advantage of any changing market conditions and divert their shipments while en route to other points where markets may be more favorable.

With this advice, consignees know in advance the time of arrival of their shipments. This facilitates their plans for delivery of shipments or scheduling of production.

This method of locating freight cars is only one of the many electronic tools now employed by Santa Fe. Some of the others are microwave, two-way radio, and supersonic rail detectors.

Something new in the science of railroading is a daily objective on the Santa Fe—the railroad that's always on the move toward a better way.
