U. S. OFFICIALS JUBILANT

Adenauer Victory Believed Blow To Soviet's Prestige

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 —UP— U. S. officials Monday hailed the landslide victory of West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's pro-American coalition as a crushing blow to Soviet prestige in Europe.

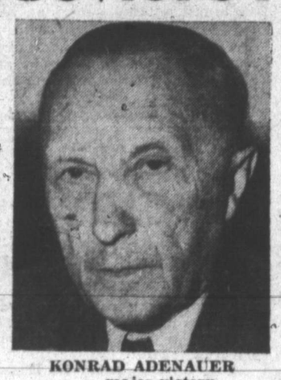

American jubilation mounted as the Adenauer victory assumed massive proportions. Officials said the decisive outcome of the elections would be a shot in the arm for a unified European army.

Adenauer and his Christian Democrat party came out boldly for linking the future of free Germany with the United States and its Allies. The victory guaranteed German participation in Western defense plans for Europe.

The Socialist opposition had campaigned for German neutrality in the East - West struggle and opposed Adenauer's rearmament plans.

Officials here saw Adenauer's sweep as a major setback to Russian prestige comparable to the June 17 uprising of workers in Communist - controlled East Germany.

The Communists had waged a violent propaganda battle in an effort to unseat the Adenauer government. They denounced the 77-year-old chancellor as a "militarist" and warned Germans his continued control of the West German government would dash hopes for unification of the country.

KONRAD ADENAUER
. . . major victory

The Christian Democrat sweep took Secretary of State John Foster Dulles off the spot for his unprecedented endorsement of Adenauer in the closing stages of the campaign. Some officials had feared the endorsement might react violently against Adenauer, but they speculated that it came too late to affect the outcome materially.

The endorsement had made Dulles a last-minute issue in the campaign. Socialist candidates denounced it as "outrageous intervention" and the criticism was echoed in some segments of the Western European press.

Western Germany Elects Adenauer

BONN, Germany, Sept. 7 —UP— Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's pro-American coalition scored a major victory for the West in the Cold War Monday by winning a working majority in West Germany's Parliament.

Adenauer's three - party team smothered the opposition under an avalanche of votes in Sunday's election by Germans who chose to stick with the West during the next four years.

The voters turned out in droves to endorse the rearmament platform of the 77-year-old chancellor and ignore warnings from Russian Premier Georgi Malenkov that an Adenauer victory would lead to war.

At the same time voters removed the Communists and the Nazi-like German Reich party from West German politics by denying them even one seat in the Bundestag (lower house).

None of the 38 seats in the Bundesrat (upper house) was at stake.

Adenauer's Christian Democrats teamed with the Free Democrats and the German party to win 306 of the 487 (correct) Bundestag seats in the contest.

The coalition failed to gain the two-thirds majority that would enable Adenaur to amend the constitution and end the court dispute on whether rearmament is legal.

However, it was believed that the tiny Center party and the Refugee Association which won four and 27 seats, respectively, would join forces with Adenauer and give him the majority.

Under Germany's election system, each voter cast two ballots.

First he voted for the candidate of his choice for Bundestag seat. Then he endorsed, on a second ballot, the party of his choice. The party receiving the greatest percentage of votes in each constituency will name its candidates to the Bundestag.

Tropic Storm Skirts Island Of Nantucket

BOSTON, Sept. 7 —UP—A tropical hurricane with winds up to 100 miles an hour skirted the vacation island of Nantucket Monday and pushed northward toward the Canadian Maritime Provinces.

The weather bureau said at 7 a.m. est that the hurricane was centered about 50 miles east of Nantucket. The storm is moving northeastward about 20 miles per hour and is expected to move into the Bay of Fundy off Canada Monday night.

Fringe winds up to 60 miles an hour whipped across Nantucket. At the center of the hurricane the weather bureau estimated winds from 75 to 100 miles an hour.

But most of the New England coast is expected to get no more than moderate to fresh winds. The skies will clear over southern New England late Monday, the weather bureau said.

Northeast storm warnings have been up since 5 a.m. Sunday from Eastport to Block Island. Storm warnings have been lowered from Block Island to Manasquan, N. J.

An earlier advisory said gales extended 250 miles eastward from the "eye" of the 100-miles-an-hour hurricane, which sideswiped Bermuda Sunday, buffeting the island resort with high seas and winds.

"This is still a dangerous storm and maximum precautions are advised along the New England coast against dangerous northeast gales, heavy seas and high tides, especially in the Nantucket and Cape Cod areas," the weather bureau said.

FBI Checks Girl's Story

CHANDLER, Okla., Sept. 7—UP —Federal Bureau of Investigation agents Monday checked into the story of a 21-year-old San Antonio woman who said she was beaten and thrown from an automobile near here.

Undersheriff Ed Mattmeyer said the injuries of Susana Reza were not as serious, however, as officers had first believed when she appeared at the county jail here Sunday.

Miss Reza said she was slashed and thrown from a car by two men who were holding another girl in their car and threatening to kill her.

Highway patrolmen later arrested the two men and the second girl a 17-year-old Mexican national from Nogales.

FBI agents entered the case when the Mexican girl said she had been smuggled over the U. S. border in the trunk of the car.

The men are both residents of Arizona. They denied having beaten the Reza woman.

Old Hotel Burned At Texarkana

TEXARKANA, Tex., Sept. 7—UP —Fire early Sunday gutted the old Victory Hotel recently used as a warehouse and badly damaged two adjoining buildings.

Fire Chief S. F. Walsh, hurrying to the fire, was injured when his car collided with one driven by Leslie Cleghorn of Dallas. Cleghorn's wife and a young woman, Miss Tommie Cleghorn, believed to be their daughter, also were injured.

The fire loss will run heavy, but no immediate damage estimate was available, firemen said. A department store had used the building as its warehouse and many television sets and Christmas toys were destroyed.

Fire Won't Stop Baseball Contest

TEMPLE, Tex., Sept. 7 —UP— Although an early morning fire Sunday destroyed the major portion of the grandstands at Legion Field, home of the Big State League Eagles, a scheduled Labor Day doubleheader with the Austin Pioneers will be played.

Business Manager Bob Conwell said 2,000 seats are still available.

The blaze, discovered about 1 a. m., was believed to have been set in an attempt to cover up evidence of burglary. The fire, which caused damage estimated at $20,000, destroyed the center stands and also those on the third-base side.

The club house and two concessions stands had been burglarized, but only three cases of beer were reported missing. The club house was not damaged and nothing was missing from it.

Insurance was carried on the park by the Temple American Legion, and the baseball team had the concessions insured.

Plans for reconstruction have not been revealed.

Truman Blasts GOP Leadership

DETROIT, Sept. 7—UP—Former President Harry S. Truman charged Monday the Republican administration was more interested in aiding big business than working for the good of the people.

Mr. Truman cut loose with one of his "give 'em hell" type speeches as organized labor's holiday guest here. It was the first specific criticism the former President has made against the administration which succeeded him.

Flanked by labor leaders and fellow Democrats, he told his huge Cadillac Square audience that many persons now are sorry that they voted for an administration which "is no longer so concerned for the welfare of all of us."

"You should hear the farmer weep and wail and ask forgiveness for voting as he did last fall," he said. "That is true in my part of the country."

Fourteen Are Dead In Chicago Blaze

CHICAGO, Sept. 7—UP—A tenement fire early Monday killed at least 14 persons, and police said three other residents were "unaccounted for."

At least six of the dead were small children.

Fourteen bodies were recovered from the ruins of the South side, four-story apartment building and pronounced dead at county hospital.

Police rescue squads continued to search through rubble of the destroyed building for three persons believed to be missing and feared dead.

One mother lost two children, her own mother, a grandfather and a step-father in the fire. Another woman identified the bodies of her three children.

Some of the victims, all Negroes, were killed in their bedrooms by the raging flames and others died as they tried to flee.

Several residents leaped to safety from upper windows.

Two men who jumped from the third floor were taken to Michael Reese hospital with broken legs.

Five of the victims were members of one family. Three other victims were young children in another family.

Police squad car officers Ray Hederman and Dan Creedon were credited with saving the lives of several of the apartment residents after they spotted the fire and ran through the smoky halls of the building, giving the alarm.

Firemen said the fire may have been caused by a cigaret butt.

The flames raced through two four-story apartments after midnight when most of the residents were asleep.

Pampa Activity Light On Holiday

Labor Day dawned bright, clear —and free of people—today as Pampans either stayed in bed or remained away from the city to take advantage of the long weekend.

Local streets were almost devoid of residents and vehicles, though the coffee houses were doing their usual morning business.

Downtown temperature at 9:30 a.m. today was 86 degrees and it looked like another warm day. Barometer reading was 29.3 an the humidity was low—29. High mercury reading for Sunday and the low this morning were 89 and 54.

Activity on the police front was at a minimum. There had been no accidents since Saturday night within the city limits.

Pampa's police force was shorthanded today with only one car on the streets, according to Police Chief Jim Conner. No one was working the streets on foot—Pampans can park free all day. Both sheriff's officials and highway patrolmen planned to put in their regular working days.

Only city and county offices, except law enforcement agencies, reported open this morning were those of the county farm agent and home demonstration agent. They were to be open at least part of the day.

However, the door of Justice of the Peace D. R. Henry appeared open this morning and Justice of the Peace D. R. Henry appeared briefly in the courthouse—but he was on his way home.

In essence, it was a legal holiday and that meant Pampans—like everyone over the nation—were making the most of it. And that meant taking it easy.

McCarthy is Winner

HOUSTON, Sept. 7 —UP— Witnesses said Saturday oilman Glenn McCarthy was a one-punch winner over an unidentified man Friday night in the Cork Club of his plush Shamrock Hotel. The witnesses said the unidentified man provoked the attack and as a result suffered a well-blackened eye.

UN Claims Evidence Shows Red Hold-Out

DEATH RIDES HOLIDAY HIGHWAYS — Rescuers and curious crowd around wreckage of two autos and the cab of a tractor-trailer near Erie, Pa. Five persons died in the smashup and two were seriously injured as the two passenger vehicles, which locked bumpers in a passing accident, were demolished by the tractor-trailer combine, far left, which sped into the intersection. The National Safety Council fears that nearly 440 persons will have died over the long Labor Day weekend, when final traffic fatality totals are compiled (NEA Telephoto)

Little Hope Held For Allied POWs

MUNSAN, Korea, Sept. 7 —UP— Both sides in the completed prisoner exchange believed Monday that some of their men were being held captive against their will.

Authoritative United Nations sources said they have documentary evidence proving the Communists are holding back Allied prisoners — possibly hundreds.

These sources said they saw little hope of ever getting back any of these prisoners.

"It probably would be better to write them off as dead," one UN source said.

Charge Allies Hold Back

Peiping Radio, voice of Communist China, charged the Allies with holding back more than 100 Chinese prisoners accused of prison camp and war crimes.

Maj. Gen. Blackshear M. Bryan, chief UN delegate to the Military Armistice Commission, "categorically" denied the charge.

The United Nations announced that it would repatriate all of its captives who wanted to go home and said that the last were turned over to the Communists Sunday, when "Operation Big Switch" ended.

At a meeting of the Military Armistice Commission at Panmunjom Monday, the Communists charged the UN with three more violations of the Korean truce.

Reds Complain

The Reds complained that UN personnel crossed the demarcation line on Aug. 31 and that UN planes violated the neutral corridor on Sept. 4.

Bryan said the UN had notified the Reds it intended to increase the strength of its police force in the demilitarized zone to 1,000 as allowed in the armistice agreement.

The UN also asked for permission to send armed guards into the demilitarized zone with North Korean and Chinese soldiers who are refusing to go home and are to be turned over to Indian troops.

Passengers Beat Death In Crash

TACOMA, Wash., Sept. 7 —UP— Passengers aboard a Super - Constellation that crash - landed in flames at McChord Air Force Base saved their own lives by scrambling out of the plane before the fire could trap them, witnesses said Monday.

Mrs. John Eisenhower, the President's daughter-in-law who came to Seattle, Wash., to meet her husband on his return flight from Korea, had been a passenger on the plane but alighted before the accident took place in the pre-dawn hours Sunday.

Nine of the 32 passengers aboard the commercial airliner were still hospitalized Monday, but there were no deaths. A total of sixteen persons were burned by flaming gasoline.

Crew members and air police pulled and helped some of the passeners from the vicinity of the burning plane and through a fiering of gasoline spilled on the run-way.

The Constellation was on a non-stop flight from Seattle to Chicago for Northwest Airlines, which had leased the plane from Eastern Airlines for the weekend.

Northwest said one engine on the plane failed shortly after it took off from Seattle - Tacoma airport. The pilot, Russ Bird, decided to land at Portland, Ore., for repairs.

However, the other engine on the same side failed as the Constellation passed over McChord. Bird was forced to make an instrument landing on the fog-shrouded field.

As the plane struck the runway the landing gear failed. One side of the plane crashed to the ground and the plane skidded, spilling gasoline in a circle. The accident took place about 2:30 a.m. pst.

Air force policeman Naftali Gromb of Newark, N. J., said the fact the passengers abandoned the plane in only five minutes saved their lives.

"I saw a helpless woman, I think she was pregnant, lying on the ground. Her hands and face were pretty badly burned. I picked her up and got her out of the way just in time."

Officers Seeking 4 Jail Escapees

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 7—UP —Oklahoma police were keeping a sharp lookout Monday for four men who locked a Kansas sheriff in his jail and escaped.

The Highway Patrol said no authentic reports of the men have been received so far, although they were reported headed for Oklahoma. A rumor that the men were in the Tulsa area proved false.

The four men stole the automobile of Sheriff Arthur Hendrix of LaBette county and were last reported near Melrose in southeast Kansas just north of Miami, Okla.

The men have been identified as Basil Kingsley Beck, Pueblo, Colo.; Dennis Howard Vould, Odessa, Tex.; Russell E. Smith, Cherryvale, Kan.; and Billy O. Goyer, Neodesha, Kan.

Hendrix said the men pulled him against the jail bars, took his gun and keys, freed themselves and fled shortly after Saturday midnight.

Demos Hope To Air GOP Contract Deal

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 —UP— Democrats demanded Monday that a House Armed Services subcommittee publish "all the facts" about a secret investigation which linked a prominent local Republican to an attempted "four per cent" deal on a Navy munitions contract.

Rep. Porter W. Hardy (D-Va.), said the subcommittee's findings, at closed-door hearings last June and July, "show clearly that neither political party has a monopoly on influence peddling."

He said he and other Democratic members will insist, at a subcommittee meeting tentatively scheduled for Tuesday, that the full transcript of the hitherto secret hearings be made public.

No Immediate Comment

There was no immediate comment from subcommittee chairman William E. Hess (R-Ohio) but congressional sources said he has no intention of hushing up the matter and has instructed the subcommittee staff to begin preparing a full report.

Rep. William H. Bates (R-Mass.) a member of the group, said at his home in Salem, Mass., the matter was not "resolved" but it looked like an "inside job" with someone in the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics "operating with someone outside."

"But we can't point the finger at anyone right now," he said.

Authoritative information about the hearings, made available to reporters over the weekend, showed that a principal figure was Warren L. Stephenson.

Heads Inaugural Panel

Stephenson is a Washington socialite who traveld last fall on Prsident Eisenhower's campaign train and later became executive secretary of the presidential inaugural committee.

Stephenson, who could not be reached for comment, also served for a time as secretary of the swank Capitol Hill Club organized by Republican members of Congress early this year.

The subcommittee inquiry centered around testimony that Stephenson offered to help a California manufacturer sell launches for the Navy's "Mighty Mouse" rockets. The testimony showed that Stephenson sought a fee of four per cent of the sale price, but the manufacturer turned down the offer and reported it to the Navy.

Pampa Firemen To Convention

Seven Pampa firemen will be among the estimated 300 on hand Tuesday for the 39th semi-annual Panhandle Firemen and Fire Marshalls Convention in Wellington.

Led by Fire Chief Ernest Winborn, the other six will be Capt. Paul Skidmore, Elmer Darnell, A. W. Ferguson, Harold Rickley, Charles Elliott and Don Hendricks.

Those six will form Pampa's pumper team and will compete with other teams from over the Panhandle to determine which team can do the quickest job of tying onto a plug, extending 100 feet of hose and getting water out to the end of the hose.

Labor Day Takes Toll Of Texans

Most Texans took it easy in mild temperatures under blue skies Monday, but the Labor Day holiday week end already had exacted a terrible price—at least 17 lives.

Two accidents, one on land and one on water, killed six persons.

A boat exploded and caught fire on Corpus Christi Bay off Aransas Pass Saturday, killing three persons. The bodies of Mrs. Edith Riley, 26, and her father-in-law, Albert Riley, 58, both from Corpus Christi, were recovered. The Coast Guard did not immediately find the body of Mrs. Riley's husband, Dale Newton Riley, 29, and late Sunday called off the search.

'HEADED FOR HOME'

Freed Pampa PW Wires Relatives

The first direct word from either of Pampa's two released prisoners of war arrived here late Sunday by cable.

The message was sent by M-Sgt. James W. Hart to his mother, Mrs. E. C. Hart, 1012 E. Twiford.

The message read:

"Am free again and headed for home. Am in pretty good shape. Getting wonderful care. Don't worry about me. Looking forward to seeing you soon. Love to all at home. (signed) James."

The sergeant gave no date, but the War Department has officially notified Mrs. Hart and Mrs. Eugene Williams, wife of Sgt. 1C Eugene Williams, also a released POW that they were back in military control and would be returned to the states "at an early date" by surface transportation.

Late this morning, Mrs. Williams said she had not heard from her career soldier husband other than the official message from the War Department.

Mrs. Williams plans to meet her husband on the west coast while Mrs. Hart is not sure whether she will go to Amarillo or Albuquerque, but says she doubts that she will go out to the coast at this time.

The two Pampans were among the last to be released in the prisoner exchange at Panmunjom, Korea. They had been held by the Communists since their capture in the early days of the war—Sgt. Hart on April 22, 1951; Sgt. Williams in November, 1950.

Traffic deaths mounted over the Labor Day weekend as the nation's highways claimed 440 lives, the National Safety Council estimated Monday.

The council said the toll was based on reports from 41 states and the District of Columbia.

The estimate was 10 per cent above the 400 deaths recorded in the same 41 states during the 1952 Labor Day weekend.

The council said the estimate was based on a 78-hour period from 6 p.m. local time Friday to midnight Monday.

'BECAUSE I LOVED HER'

Kills Afflicted Daughter

PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 7 —UP— Police Monday held a 54-year-old man who said he killed his 28-year-old daughter, who had suffered from cerebral palsy since birth, "because I loved her."

Detectives said Henry Herman Nagle, plant guard, admitted the fatal shooting Saturday of his invalid daughter, Betty Virginia.

Nagle told reporters he shot his daughter twice in the head with a .45 caliber automatic while she slept at home in her wheel chair "because I loved her."

He said he believed he was suffering from a serious illness and "I didn't want to leave her all alone in the world."

Nagle said he had taken care of Betty Virginia since the children's mother died 14 years ago. She has two sisters.

He said the thought of killing her had haunted him for years.

Nagle told detectives he decided to carry out the plan after he became ill while shopping in downtown Phoenix Saturday. He said he felt that he didn't have much longer to live and he was to enter a Phoenix hospital this week for an exploratory operation to determine the nature of his illness.

Nagle said his daughter was "competely helpless." He said he "dressed her, fed her, and looked after her need."

He said that ten years ago he placed her in a New York institution, but "I took her out a few months later."

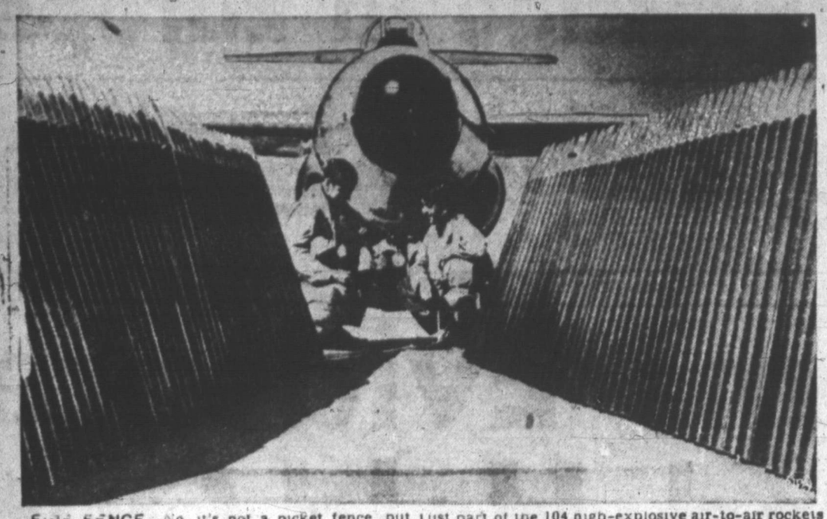

He said he promised her that "she would never again be put in an institution. . . But what I did was the toughest for me and the best for her." He said "those last couple of seconds before pulling the trigger were tough as hell. It took all the will power I had."

Police Seeking Car Ransackers

City police today were investigating the theft of items from a car owned by Lt. Dick Andrews, El Paso.

Theft was reported to police at 12:15 a.m. Sunday. Incident occurred at front of the Blue Bonnett Inn, 1020 W. Brown.

Missing are a suitcase, camera and clothes—including sports shirts, officer's jacket, sport coat, dress shirt, dress pants and khaki pants.

FIRE FENCE—No, it's not a picket fence, but just part of the 104 high-explosive air-to-air rockets with which the new Northrop Scorpion F-89D all-weather interceptor will be armed. The rockets are carried in wing-tip pods and make the F-89D the heaviest armed fighter in the world.

Friends Go To Bat For Pewt

By CLARK PORTEUS
NEA Special Correspondent

DES ARC, Ark. —(NEA)— Pewt Olive is home again, to his wife and three kids the townsfolk here who have come to understand the terror that can lie in an afternoon stroll through town.

Up 'til the time Pewt went away, almost any one of the 1600 residents in Des Arc could have recited his vital statistics. He was born Reavis Clinton Olive. At 31, he was tall, taciturn. And he was a good farmer, a good family man and honest as they come.

But in the 10 years that Pewt Olive lived here, nobody ever saw his kinfolk who were supposed to live in Lawrence County, Tenn. And why, everyone wondered, did he tremble and go pale if you knocked on his door at night?

There were other strange things, too. You couldn't get him to take a drink. Not even a glass of beer on a hot Arkansas night.

Police Chief Bud Mansell used to scratch his head about it. It was funny how sweat would suddenly stand out on Pewt's forehead if you met him in town on an afternoon and began to ask him anything how's the wife, the kids, the crops?

More than once John A. Jones, "boss" on Pewt's share crop farm reported with wonder how his hard-working tenant would wait hot hours in the Arkansas sun to refund some of his pay check.

Pewt was like that, always sure he was worth just a little less than anyone else. You loved him for being your neighbor. But you wondered.

Then Pewt went away suddenly and the whole story came back to Des Arc.

Reavis Clinton Olive was back home in Tennessee, in the penitentiary beginning to serve out his two-to-ten year term for having killed a man.

When he was 19, he had gone on a beer drinking spree that had ended with a fatal knifing and a quick trial. At the time there was talk about bribed witnesses. But that was soon hushed up. And three and a half months later, when Pewt escaped from the Tennessee penitentiary, everyone was sure he'd been guilty.

For 12 years he had stayed away from his home, his family and what he was certain was another man's guilt. He finally settled in Des Arc, married, and began to build a new life.

"I just couldn't think of having to pay for another man's crime," he said later. "I was just a kid in those days, and there was a killing in the penitentiary every week or so."

But no matter how God-fearing, how scrupulous he lived in Des Arc, every stroll downtown was torture for him. Had Chief Bud Mansell found out? Had his boss? And who would knock on his door tonight?

Two years ago, when he realized how easily the black cloud over him could envelop his growing children, he went to give himself up. Halfway to Nashville, Tenn., he turned back.

Eighteen months ago he confessed to his wife. Together they prayed and took counsel from the Bible. And then Pewt went to prison.

Back in Des Arc, police chief Bud Mansell drew up a petition and got everyone to sign it. The Baptist minister wrote to Tennessee Gov. Frank G. Clement. Somebody else called Gov. Francis Cherry of Arkansas.

With 1600 signatures on a petition, municipal testimonials and top-level directives before it, the Tennessee Board of Paroles took a further look into the 12-year-old case of the People vs. Reavis Clinton Olive. The Board's recommendation: full pardon.

And so, 19 days later, with a hot Arkansas sun forcing him to wipe his eyes, Pewt Olive came home to Des Arc—and the neighbors who helped free him from his conscience-stricken terror.

Dulles, Ike Busy On Foreign Policy

DENVER, Sept. 7 —UP— President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles Monday tackled a 10-point docket of major foreign policy problems extending from Indo-China to Germany.

The importance of the business between the chief executive and his state secretary was indicated by the fact it had to be conducted on a holiday.

Dulles arrived here Sunday night aboard an Air Force plane placed at his disposal for the trip.

The President reached his office at 8:25 a. m. MST—9:25 a. m. CST —and Dulles arrived 15 minutes later, accompanied by a secretary and a State Department security officer carrying Dulles' briefcase.

To Leave After Talks

White House aides said they expected the Eisenhower-Dulles meeting to last anywhere from an hour to two and a half hours.

Dulles, barring a change in plans will leave for Washington shortly after his conference with the chief executive is concluded.

"I've got a docket of about 10 items to discuss with the President," Dulles said.

High on this docket undoubtedly was the smashing victory in West Germany Sunday of the Christian Democrats of incumbent Chancellor Konrad Adenauer over the Social Democrats led by Dr. Erich Ollenhauer.

Dulles Not Surprised

Dulles said when he arrived here he was "not surprised" by the results of the German election. He received the first news of the Adenauer victory from newsmen who met him at the air field.

Dulles' statement last week that an Adenauer defeat would be "disastrous" for the chances of German re-unification led to an outcry from Ollenhauer that this was "improper intervention."

This was followed by a published report that Mr. Eisenhower was unhappy over Dulles' remarks about Germany, plus other things the secretary of state said recently about Trieste, Italy and Japan.

PRANKSTERS PEPPER CEILING—Teen-agers have forgotten the goldfish-swallowing fad which swept the U. S. a few years back, but they've started another one which is giving restaurant owners a headache. ## Takes Expert To Play This Hand

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

There are said to be some 30 million bridge players in this country, but only a few thousand of them would make the correct play in today's hand. The average player's first step, when he is declarer, is to draw trumps. Perhaps 50 million Frenchmen can't be wrong, but 30 million bridge players certainly can.

When West opens the jack of hearts, South cannot afford to lead even a single trump. If he does, East will take the king of trumps and lead another heart. This takes away South's remaining high heart, and now South cannot prevent the loss of two trumps, a heart and a club.

It is really quite easy for South to see this all coming, and he should therefore make plans to prevent it. The only way to avoid the loss of a heart trick is to establish dummy's clubs immediately in order to obtain a discard.

South therefore wins the first trick with the king of hearts and immediately returns the jack of clubs. West takes the ace of clubs and leads another heart, forcing out South's ace. Now South leads a club to dummy and gets rid of his losing heart on dummy's extra club. (If West has reused the first club trick, South can get to dummy with the king of diamonds in order to obtain his discard on the third club.)

Only after South has discarded his losing heart can he afford to lead a trump.

Closeup Of Average Egyptian

BY FRED SPARKS
NEA Staff Correspondent

CAIRO — (NEA) — Imagine working all week for the price of a carton of cigarettes!

That's the payoff for millions in the Arab Middle East, many of them citizens of this newest of the world's republics. Their razor-thin slice of the world's prosperity pie is the basic reason why any political big mouth who'll promise three squares can send a mob on a house-burning, throat - cutting spree.

As you read about U.S. concern for the Suez Canal, the desert oil fields and Middle East Defense, you should know something of the area's citizens, for people are politics.

To meet an average Egyptian I motored 25 miles from Cairo along the River Nile. For 6000 years before the first electric blanket this river has watered the only substantial Egyptian soil. (From the air the Nile Valley looks like a green ribbon of toothpaste on an endless sand-white capet.)

Near the river we stop by the half-acre farm of Abdullah Iffifi, one of 14 million Egyptian farmers who scratch for the skinniest life. We see a water buffalo cow with a blindfold over her eyes walking in an endless circle threshing grain with an ancient wooden wheel contraption.

Iffifi's smallest son, naked as a picked chicken, straddles the beast, the family's most precious property. I'm told the animal is blacked out because if she sees she's getting no place after days of endless plodding she'll go stir crazy.

Irrigation ditches fork from the Nile like veins; one cuts through Iffifi's lot. Two of his daughters (who'll never use lipstick) pump ditch water for the wheat field using two tightly woven baskets fixed on a pole. It's a 14-hour daily drudge that would exhaust Charles Atlas.

Iffifi's one room house, large as 15 sedans tightly parked, is made of dried Nile mud with a doorless break for air and entrance. Besides the family there are hundreds of flies buzzing collectively like a B-29 and sticking to your face until slapped dead.

Some personal odds and ends are pitched in a corner but there's not a stick of furniture. The family's clothing consists of a few slats of wraparound white cloth, and some peppermint striped pajama outfits.

The market possibilities of a revived Middle East shake the trader: If each shoeless citizen could buy one pair all our shoe factories would work overtime and give Christmas bonuses.

The Iffifis sleep on pressed corn stalks and Mom cooks on a kerosene lamp every other day, fuel being that costly for their thin wallet.

The menu lists unleavened bread, raw onions and beans. Meat is a vaguely recalled dream. The water buffalo contributes milk and cheese. The dreary diet, plus the fly-borne germs, is why no Iffifi expects to celebrate a 50th birthday.

Introduce Iffifi to an average American home and he'd be as confused as his water buffalo. He couldn't flip the light switch or open the refrigerator and the mad movements on the TV screen would give him the shakes.

But he is used to sights that would give you the shakes — his own primitive existence, the every-day sight of other fellahs like himself, harnessed to sailing ships they pull along the desert canals.

Every few weeks he goes to town for the luxury of a thimble of Turkish coffee. There he hears cafe chatterboxes comment on Mohamed Naguib, Egypt's strong man, whose promises of plenty are blocked by the simple truth of too many people for too little good earth.

Unable to read a paper, Iffifi can't tell you what the U.S.S.S is, where or why.

He has only one surplus: hate. He hats foreigners, blindly blaming them for all ills. He particularly hates the neat, strapping British tommies who speed by en route to the Canal Zone.

Given the word from the minaret, given arms, he and his sons would pitch violently into a holy war for misty reward. If they are killed? "As Allah wills it."

Superiority Of Women Has A Silver Lining

NEW YORK — (NEA) — When a man comes along and says, flatly, that women are superior to men, it's a fortunate thing that he brings along a silver lining.

The man in this case in anthropologist Ashley Montagu, the author of a new book, "The Natural Superiority of Women," Macmillan. He attempts to prove, scientifically, that the female of the species is better equipped to survive, which is, he says, the essence of superiority.

The whole thing leaves the male under a dark, inferior cloud, but let's consider the silver lining. Since the ladies are superior, why give them you seat in the bus? Or any public conveyance?

"If a young girl got up and gave me a seat," says Montagu, a self-confessed middle-aged man, who looks mighty healthy, "I should most certainly accept."

This philosophy, of course, must be practiced with caution. The idea is that the "superior" person should offer his (or her) seat to the less superior, and sex enters in only secondarily. Young women should defer to old men, and young men to old women.

Except for that one bright spot, the picture for men is pretty bad. Montagu wrote in his book that a female is superior to a male in almost everything but plain, muscular strength. And, even after the book is out, he can't think of anything to soften the situation.

"I very much regret to announce to the world and the universe at large," he says, in his clipped British accents, "that those are the facts."

And what are those facts? Well, in essence, he writes that the average woman is healthier, better balanced emotionally, and, with the exception of mathematical and mechanical reasoning, more measurably intelligent than the average man. Take it or leave it.

"And I left something out of the book," says this ivy-covered Benedict Arnold. "I left out the fact that natural selection — the basis of evolution — favors women. The infant mortality rate for females is lower."

Since the book was published, Montagu, on leave from the Rutgers University faculty, has had only favorable response. Even from men. The only objections have come from what he terms "phony feminists" — women who try to compete with men by aping their attitudes.

If you accept Montagu's theory —and most of his theory is fact, making it pretty tough to reject — what should you do about it? Not that there's much you can do.

"Well," says Montagu, "men should provide women with all the respect and affection that they deserve — as human beings, not because they're another sex."

And women?

"The average housewife," he says, "must acquaint herself with the facts about herself. She should learn what her capabilities really are."

And couples? Should a man marry a woman older than he, to compensate for her probable longer life?

"I hadn't thought about it," he says, "but, off-hand, I'd say definitely yes. Of course, there are exceptions to everything."

And any touchy male can take solace in that fact — there are exceptions to this business about women being naturally superior. Montagu is writing about the average man and woman; any one particular man, such as you, may be superior to any one particular woman, such as your wife.

Yippee! Two silver linings!

Holiday Traffic Deaths On Upgrade

By UNITED PRESS

Traffic deaths were expected to zoom Monday as millions of fun-seekers take to the highways for the last and most hectic day of the Labor Day weekend.

Auto fatalities seemed to be climbing steadily toward a predicted total of 440, despite an encouraging start that had led safety experts to hope that as many as 100 lives might be saved.

A United Press survey showed that at least 335 persons had been killed since the start of the holiday at 6 p.m. Friday, 231 of them in traffic. Drowning claimed 33 lives, seven persons died in plane crashes and 64 in miscellaneous mishaps.

14 Die In Fire

Fire destroyed a Chicago tenement early Monday, and police found the bodies of at least 14 victims, all Negroes. Rescue workers were searching for three other persons feared dead.

Two persons were killed nard Bayard, Neb., when the auto they were riding in hit a mule deer and swerved into the path of a bus.

A major holiday disaster was averted when 32 persons were pulled from the flaming wreckage of a Northwest Airlines Super- Constellation that crash-landed at McChord air base at Tacoma, Wash. Nine persons were hospitalized, but there were no deaths.

Coastguardmen prevented yachting tragedies in Lake Michigan off Chicago by pulling nine persons thrown from their sailboats by an afternoon squall.

Death Toll Lags

For a time the highway death toll lagged, and National Safety Council President Ned H. Dearborn "congratulated" motorists and said "if we keep it up we can save almost 100 lives during the holiday period."

But as the Sunday evning count climbed, a council spokesman said "it looks like the count is running right on the beam." The council forecast 440 traffic deaths.

Monday afternoon and tonight most of the estimated 40,000,000 motorists who took to the highways for the holiday will be heading back home, sleepy-eyed, and in a hurry to get home. The spokesman pointed out that this is the traditional time for an upsurge in accidents.

He drove home the next afternoon.

How Air Force Guards Atomic 'Heart'

By DOYLE KLINE
NEA Correspondent

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (NEA) —Guarding the heart of the U.S. atomic weapons effort is a tense and astonishingly efficient air defense.

The story of that defense can now be told. The installations which gave birth to the atomic and hydrogen bombs have been made into a defensive "island" in the overall U.S. plan to avert a possibility of an atomic "pearl Harbor."

Within a 100-mile radius of Albuquerque lie the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, where atomic weapons were born; Sandia Base, which includes a nuclear weapons school and nuclear weapon "hardware" center; the Air Force Special Weapons Center, and the Atomic Energy Commission offices which conduct nuclear weapons tests.

A successful atomic attack on this area could be disastrous to the U.S. ability to wage atomic warfare.

And the defense must work fast. The job belongs to the 34th Air Division (Defense), which likens itself to a spider web of radar surveillance stations.

The zones they cover overlap so that all portions of the sky are seached every second, 24 hours a day. Telephone lines and powerful radio transmitters connect these sites with 34th headquarters in a windowless concrete blockhouse at Kirtland Air Force Base, Albuquerque.

Into the tightly-guarded blockhouse flows an uninterrupted stream of information. Nothing that flies more than five miles an hour goes undetected. Once, through some trick of radar, a Greyhound bus rolling toward Albuquerque appeared to be flying. It was "intercepted" by two flabbergasted F-86 pilots.

Even the "island" defense has special priority areas. No aircraft identified or unidentified flies toward Los Alamos without interception except Carco Air Service, the only airline permitted to land at the atomic city.

What the Sabre pilots do when such an interception takes place is classified by the Air Force under "rules of engagement," but it is known the intruder must change course, land, or be shot down. Not long ago a Montana pilot was forced down by the F-86s when he accidentally flew toward Los Alamos.

All planes flying into the area must cross the line of identification within five minutes of the time designated on their flight plans, at the altitude estimated and within 10 miles of the predicted entry point.

If they don't, they become "unknown" the instant they show up on radar. An intruder plane will be spotted within 10 seconds after entering the defense area.

The 34th sets a time limit of five minutes from "initial pickup" to "identification" of an intruder plane. In that time it must establish a location, plot a course, altitude and speed, and check all known flight plans. It does the job, on the average, in three and a half minutes.

If the plane cannot be identified, the blockhouse orders a "scramble" of F-86s from Kirtland. Time limit from scramble signal to airborne is five minutes. The 34th has whittled the total time from initial pickup to airborne to seven and a half minutes.

Pilots of these interceptors are combat veterans, including jet aces of Korean combat against Russian-built MIG-15s. Scrambles average six to eight a day.

At the head of the 34th are Col William A. Matheny, commanding; Col. H. P. Huglin, vice commander, and Maj. R. F. Zachmann, director of combat operations. They spent months molding the 34th into an outfit which has never been caught napping, despite repeated attempts by other Air Force units to penetrate the area undetected.

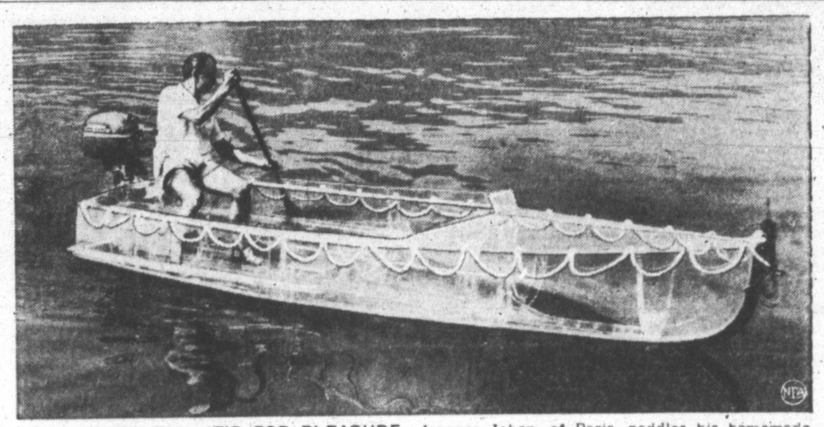

"We once had 24 interceptions in 24 hours," Col. Huglin relates. "We told the command which owned the planes that every one of them would have been shot down if they had represented an enemy in wartime."

Another time, a transient jet pilot flew over Albuquerque at 30,000 feet. He couldn't see the ground or the many mountain peaks beneath him because of a raging dust storm. The 34th used its radar information to guide him down.

One of the reasons the 34th can boast such a record is its "radar scanners graduate school." Airmen and WAFs come here with basic training in radar and in 10 days are turned into expert scanners, plotters and "tellers."

Most scrambles result when airline pilots, military crews, and careless civilian — for all are guilty at times — fail to turn in adequate flight plans, fly into prohibited areas, or blunder along ignorant of their positions.

Civilians are subject to two-year prison terms and $10,000 fines or both for violations. Military pilots can be court-martialed.

Miss LaVerne McAdams Is Recent Bride Of Glen Satterwhite In White Deer

WHITE DEER — (Special) — Miss LaVerne McAdams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl McAdams, White Deer, became the recent bride of Glen Satterwhite, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Satterwhite of Skellytown, in a ceremony performed in the White Deer Church of Christ.

Otto Shewmaker, Pampa, read the ceremony before an altar of white and bronze chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Roy Davis, Darrouzett, sang, "Because of You" and "I Love You Truly" preceding the ceremony.

Attending the bride was Miss Norma Lou Gibson, White Deer, while the best man was Jimmy Evans, Skellytown.

Escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a two piece off-white dress of faille. Her off-the-face brown hat was complemented by the rich brown of her other accessories. Her corsage, of yellow roses and yellow daisies, was mounted on a small white Bible.

Miss Gibson wore a dark brown faille suit with white accessories, which were accented by a corsage of yellow daisies surrounding a single yellow chrysanthemum.

A reception was held for the immediate families in the home of the bride's parents. Table decoration was a white carnation centerpiece.

Both the bride and the groom were 1953 graduates of White Deer High School, where they were active in both sport and scholastic achievements. Following a short trip to Turner Falls, Okla., the couple is at home in White Deer where the bridegroom is employed.

GRACE FRIEND

Dear Grace

I have a little problem I would like you to solve for me.

I am going to be married and I want my married sisters to be my bridesmaids.

Would it be proper for their husbands to act as ushers or should the ushers be friends of the bridegroom?

Hilda

Dear Hilda

If the bridegroom-elect doesn't have anyone else in mind as ushers and would like to have your brothers-in-law serve in that capacity there isn't a reason why they shouldn't.

You should discuss the question with your fiance and whatever you agree to do will be correct.

NATURAL CHILDBIRTH

Dear Mrs. Driend

I am going to have a baby early next year and I am interested in all of this talk about natural childbirth.

Will you tell me a little bit about it or where I can find out?

Bertha

Dear Bertha

If you want to try natural childbirth write to the Maternity Center Association, 48 E. 92nd St., New York 28, N. Y. and they will be able to tell you whether there are any physicians in your area who are interested.

The method is not suitable for every case and of course it would have to have the approval of your doctor.

It does not mean that you will have no pains when your child arrives and will not have to take any drugs. It is said by its advocates that it is based on the absence of fear and that it minimizes the need for pain-killing drugs.

With this method the husband may remain in the delivery room and the baby stays in the same room with the mother. I believe there are special exercises to be taken during the pregnancy so if you are truly interested you should investigate it as early as possible.

MATURE PARENT

By MURIEL LAWRENCE

Babs has broken a home law against visiting friends after school without telephoning her whereabouts. The penalty is an extra turn at washing and drying the dinner dishes.

Her father is impatiently waiting to drive us over to the Browns fo play bridge, so we don't have time to help Babs put the dishes away. As we hurry through the kitchen on the way to the garage, we drop a quick kiss on our 12-year-old's shoulder and say, "A good job, Babs. This is the way to cancel out the lack of consideration you showed this afternoon."

It is, nowever, a little unfortunate that we get home so late from our bridge party that there's no time to prepare an extra-nice school lunch for Babs. It's too bad there's only time to put a piece of cold meat between pieces of badly buttered bread — and wrap them up with an apple that has lost its freshness.

An extra-nice school lunch for Babs would have helped us prove to her that we have not punished her because we don't love her, but because we do.

An extra-nice lunch, carefully prepared, would have said unmistakably to the little girl who opened it, "This lunch was made last night when your mother was tired and wanted to go to bed. This lunch was the result of deliberate thoughtfulness. This lunch is your return on the effort you showed last night to cancel out your failure in thoughtfulness."

Thus, Babs' lunch would have nourished more than her young bones and blood. It would have fed a little girl's appetite for faith that a mother's justice is always motivated by love.

In institutions for delinquent children suffering from lack of love, pleasant meals are no accident. Carefully prepared menus are part of treatment. A dessert is not merely regarded as a physical energizer, but an energizer of children's belief that their pleasure is important to those in charge of them.

Tasteless meals that might suggest children's pleasure is of no consequence are avoided, and thus irritated and excited self-doubts that might undo much careful building also are avoided.

LESSON IN JUSTICE

There are many things we can do to show children that we love them after punishing them, if we are very careful that our motives for doing them stem from love, not fear.

If we prepare an extra - nice lunch box for Babs because we are afraid we have punished her unjustly, our lunch box is not a proof of love, but a bribe.

If we are afraid that Babs will not forgive us for punishing her, our effort will do little for her or for us.

But if we make the meat and bread serve our pure desire to show Babs that her pleasure is important to us, it will serve a purpose just as important as physical nutrition.

A favorite dessert for dinner, a crumpled suit or skirt carefully pressed, and hung quietly in a child's closet for him to discover—any act of thoughtfulness after punishment helps us to confirm the lesson we have tried to teach. The lesson: that we punish, not for our personal convenience, not because we enjoy denying something, but because loss is a consequence of a refusal to give.

This is of course a lesson in justice; another name for love.

So if we can arrange that a child's acceptance of justice results in a visible demonstration of our love, a gain in his self-confidence, we teach him to trust justice and respect it. We have made our punishment serve its real purpose.

Keep All-American Look If You Can, Advises Film Star

(EDITOR'S NOTE The secret of Donna Reed's captivating beauty lies in the fact that she stays true to her own type. She is the typical American girl with wholesome, fresh radiant looks. In this exclusive NEA story, she tells women how she kept her particular kind of beauty. She is now starred in "From Here to Eeternity.")

By DONNA REED
Written for NEA Service

I'm probably a very typical American girl in my looks, with my clean-cut features, medium-brown hair, hazel eyes, pinky fair complexion, and my 5' 4" of height and 115 pounds. It's been said that my success is part of a trend in which the public is making stars out of its typically American actresses. Since we stars do seem to influence American girls' beauty habits, perhaps this is all to the good.

Speaking to the typically American girl, then, may I suggest that you do everything in your power to keep that world-famous attractiveness known as the American look? It thrives on basic good health habits and meticulous grooming. It dies an untimely death when good times are had at the expense of sufficient rest, when coffee and dessert are taken for lunch instead of a well-balanced meal, and when indoor occupations are allowed to deprive us of fresh air and exercise. Excessive makeup and too many, too fussy clothes are its enemies.

I'm still young and so have no particular skin problems. My main concern is to keep it scrupulously clean. It's smooth and fine-pored because of the thorough soap-and-water care I give it every night and morning. A slight tendency to dryness is counteracted with a lanolin-rich night cream. I go without make-up as often as I can, never using the thick mask-like preparations for street wear. I'd suggest the same for any young American girl.

I use a thin foundation lotion when make-up is necessary and pat powder over it, a light-rachel color, using a lamb's wool puff. My eyebrows I leave alone, just touching them with a little oil to make them glisten. I use darkest brown mascara, letting my brush be lightly coated so that no beading occurs. Just a smidgen of brown eyeshadow finishes my eye makeup, except for especially glamorous occasions when I put green over it. My lipstick is a medium true red. With naturally pink cheeks, I need no rouge.

Clothes colors are so entirely individual. Even within a type, each complexion is different from any other. I can only tell you my favorites and suggest that you experiment with colors so as not to get into a color rut.

I like golden brown to pick up the golden lights in my hazel eyes. Any lively brown is good with my hair. I like red with my vivid coloring, golden reds and terra cotta reds, no purplish or bluish ones. Soft pinks bring out the pink in my skin. Black and gray are good on me only if I pick them up with color near my face. This color is sometimes in my jewelry, topaz or amber, for instance.

I currently wear my hair in a long page-boy style that just misses my shoulders. I find the fulness at the ends rather softening with my squarish jaws. It's drawn back and caught behind my ears, so that the tops of the ears are covered and the lobes revealed. My high, rounded forehead is flattened with a bang on either side of a center part. This simple hairstyle is adaptable to most young grils. But they must take the trouble to shampoo and brush it frequently and give it oil treatments as needed, because its beauty depends on gloss and fluffiness.

Corduroy Shows Up In Suits, Coats and Sportswear

Corduroy takes to the campus in clothes for wear around-the-clock this fall. Suit (left) is taupe corduroy combined with a crisp cotton print for blouse and jacket lining. Fly-front skirt buttons from waistband to hem; hat is wreathed in the cotton print. Black-and-white print in waterproof corduroy (center) makes raincoat with neckband and front closing in a black knit. Bandanna printed corduroy vest (right) pairs with lipstick red slacks for after-class campus wear or study sessions. Corduroy for 1953-54 is softer and finer-waled, is used for late afternoon and dressy clothes too.—By Gaile Dugas, NEA Woman's Editor.

RUTH MILLETT

Here is a letter from a wife who says she is so sick and tired of the eternal senseless quarrels she and her husband are getting into she is thinking of leaving him even though they have three small children.

Why don't you stop quarreling, instead of running away? It only takes one person to nag or to be disagreeable, but it takes two to quarrel.

Granted your husband is always the one who touches off a quarrel. It's unlikely, but let's grant it anyway. There's no law which says you've got to answer back.

You can respond to a fight-provoking statement in any number of ways besides hitting back verbally.

You can throw him momentarily off-balance by looking thoughtful and saying: "You may be right" and following up with a quick, "What do you think we ought to do about it?"

You can let the remark pass. This may annoy him — but so long as you don't let yourself get angry or look hurt you still haven't got a quarrel going.

You can get busy cleaning out a closet or looking for something in the attic. It's hard to start a fight with someone who has to keep asking "What did you say, dear?"

CHANGE THE SUBJECT

You can "just happen to think" of something that will change the subject. Never mind if it makes you sound scatter-brained. What a lot of men regard as women's "senseless chatter" is just smart strategy to change the topic of conversation.

Say: "You look tired. Are you sure you're feeling all right?" Almost any man will forget a grudge long enough to start worrying about his health.

If you don't like any of those suggestions, figure out some of your own. You may find it can be as much fun to figure out ways of avoiding a quarrel as to figure out how to say something mean enough to top what has just been said.

Looking for a quick-cooking main course? Try one of the simple Chinese meat recipes. You can't do better than this one for Pepper Steak, for instance. It is easy-to-do, deliciously satisfying and it is ready for the table in 15 minutes!

PEPPER STEAK

3 tablespoons fat
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ cup finely diced onion
1 pound round or flank steak
1½ teaspoons Kitchen Bouquet
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 large green peppers
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon cold water, or vermouth

Place fat in frying pan over moderate heat. Add garlic and onion and cook about 2 minutes, stirring frequently. Meanwhile, cut meat in thin strips about 2 inches long and the diameter of a pencil. Place in a bowl and sprinkle with Kitchen Bouquet. Stir well to coat meat evenly. Add slivered steak to onion in frying pan and brown lightly, stirring frequently, about three minutes. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and add the green peppers which have been cut into thin strips like the meat. Cover tightly and continue cooking until the pepper is barely tender, about 10 minutes. Blend together the cornstarch and cold water. Add to meat and peppers, stirring constantly until juices thicken. Serve immediately with hot cooked rice or buttered noodles.

Yield: four servings.

Leave Thick Suds On Face Longer To Clear Complexion

By ALICIA HART

"Natural 3-D" may be new to the movies but it's old stuff to us non-actresses. We're always seen in three dimensions. Tiny imperfections that go unnoticed in a flat picture stand out in a 3D one or in real life.

So let's take care that no one in our private public ever sees an unnecessary bump or a dingy look on our skin. There's a way to get your skin into really good condition if it's not there already. It involves soap and water.

After your usual washing, have a second sudsing and let the thick soapsuds remain on your face until dry — a matter of a few minutes. This will give the soap a chance to dislodge embedded soil. Follow up with a warm and a cold rinse. A few weeks of this treatment can do much to improve poor complexions.

Speaking of "dimensions," do you happen to be slimming yours for the new fall slender look? If you're losing weight, it may interest you to know that one reducing expert recommends a minimum of two baths a day during dieting periods. He points out that poisons are being cast out by the pores during this time.

The scalp and hair also need twice as many shampoos during diet periods.

Yes, we who are permanently in 3-D must always be conscious of our beauty and grooming.

FIRESTONE'S NEW TUBELESS TRUCK TIRE — and lightweight drop-center rim is 36 pounds lighter than the conventional tire, tube and rim now used as standard truck equipment, according to Al Osko, local Firestone store manager. Harvey S. Firestone Jr., chairman of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company (right) and Raymond C. Firestone, vice president in charge of research and development of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company (left), point out the difference in weight of the first revolutionary new tubeless truck tire to be developed in the rubber industry.

Truckers' Work Is Easier By Firestone

A revolutionary new truck tire which is tubeless and mounted on a one-piece, drop-center rim has been developed by The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, Raymond C. Firestone, vice-president in charge of Research and Development, has advised Mr. Al Osko, local Firestone Store manager.

"This development will make changes of truck tires as simple and easy as the mounting and demounting of passenger car tires," according to Mr. Firestone.

"The greatest departure from conventional truck tire design in the new product," Mr. Firestone says, "is the new bead construction." A conventional tire is held on the rim by flanges of substantial height. The new tire is supported on the rim by a tapered fit so that the customary high flanges are no longer necessary. Lowering of the rim flange permits the new tire to be mounted on a one-piece drop-center rim. The forced-taper fit permits a lighter construction bead. The combination of lowered flange plus forced-taper fit radically reduces the forces on the rim so that a substantially lighter rim is now possible.

Weight Reduced

To carry this simplification further, that portion of the tire normally back of the flange has been eliminated so that a significant material and weight saving is made with no sacrifice in ultimate tire mileage or durability.

An example of the weight saving involved can be drawn from a tractor trailer outfit previously equipped with 9.00-20 tires. A single 9.00-20 tire, tube and flap weighs approximately 104 pounds, a conventional rim 66 pounds, making a total assembly weight of 170 pounds. The new tubeless tire on a drop-center rim weighs approximately 134 pounds—giving an assembly weight saving of 36 pounds per wheel position.

The tractor trailer unit equipped with ten of the new tubeless truck tires would thus have a reduction of 360 pounds in unsprung weight, which is a big factor in the trucking business.

Fits Present Mountings

The tread, body and sidewall construction of the new Firestone tubeless truck tire are essentially the same as tires now in use. The air - impervious innerliner, which replaces the tube, is an inherent vulcanized part of the casing. The troublesome tube and flap are eliminated. The difficulty normally encountered in mounting a truck tire, tube and flap on a two or three-piece rim has been reduced to a minimum. Mounting and demounting of heavy, over-the-highway truck tires is as easy as a passenger car tire.

The Firestone tubeless truck tire and drop-center rim is a unit assembly and as such can be made to fit hub and wheel mountings of trucks now in use, giving identical clearances.

Census Shows More Married Couples

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 —UP— There were more married couples in the United States last year than ever before, the Census Bureau said Saturday. But its figures indicated single women will have to work harder to land husbands.

The report estimated there were 76.5 million married Americans in April, 1952, an increase of 1 million married Americans in April, 1952, an increase of 1 million from 1951. The total made up 69 per cent of the population 14 years of age and up.

But it noted that "eligible" young bachelors in 1952 were outnumbered by "eligible" single girls and that this relative shortage of men was greater than in 1950.

Eligible Described

By "eligible" the bureau meant women 18 to 24 years-old and men 21 to 27 years old. These are the ages at which most marriages are made.

The report showed that the females (58 million) outnumbered males (53.6 million) in the 14 years and older population bracket.

The number of males and the number of single males, particularly between the ages of 20 and 24, has declined since 1950. On the other side, the number of females increased during that period and the number of single females remaine about the same.

There were some notes of comfort for single women:

Test Out Some

1. For some unexplained reason, the bureau left out of its male count the number of bachelors in the Armed Services who were stationed outside the United States or living in barracks.

2. There was no statistical shortage of bachelors 25 years of age or older.

3. The number of all unmarried women was 11.1 million as against 12.9 million all unmarried men.

Not all wedded couples were living in a state of bliss. About 1.6 million persons were separated because of "marital discord." about 1.9 million were living apart for other reasons.

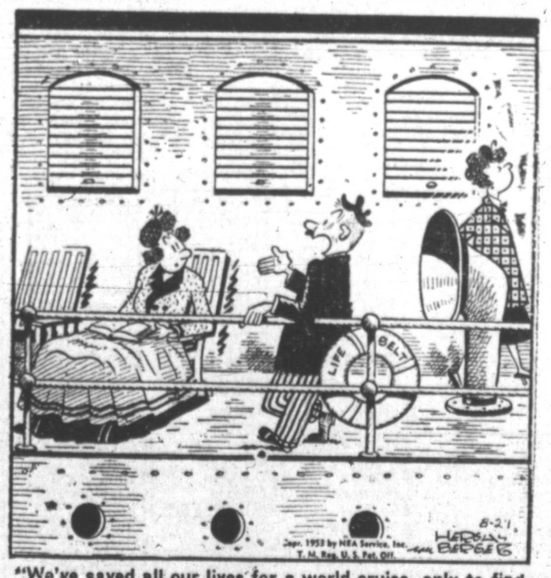

Divorced persons numbered about 2.1 million, or two per cent of the 14 years and older bracket, and widowed persons about 9.1 million or eight per cent.

Take Your Choice

EDINBURG, Tex. — (UP) — The Edinburg Chamber of Commerce acted to establish the population of the city beyond question after learning that each of the four signs on the four main roads into Edinburg listed a different figure.

Logical Enough

HASTINGS, Neb. — (UP) — An Adams County motorist picked up for reckless driving here told the judge: "Well, sir, I guess I was thinking about politics and just naturally drifted a bit to left of center."

"We've saved all our lives for a world cruise, only to find everyone else on board won it in a contest!"

Owners Reminded Of Dog Ordinance

Dog owners who have three or more dogs have been requested to report them to the Health Department by Sept. 10 or face citation for not having complied with the new dog ordinance and registering as a kennel.

Health Inspector L. E. West said Saturday, dog owners who refuse to secure kennel licenses where there are three or more dogs are subject to a fine.

And, by Sept. 10, all crowing chickens—roosters, that is—must be removed from the city limits, and all pens holding livestock will have to set so they are 50 feet from the property line, and 100 feet from the nearest dwelling.

These regulations are new and have been set up in recent animal control ordinances which are now in effect.

Safety Backfires

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 7 —UP— Minneapolis Jaycees thought they would point out Labor Day traffic hazards last week.

They towed two wrecked cars to busy Highway 12 at Minneapolis' outskirts. They parked an ambulance nearby and scattered dummies around to represent victims.

While they were putting up a sign which said, "don't—let this happen to you," a passing motorist noticed the wrecked cars and jammed on his brakes for a quick look.

Four cars following him crashed into his car and each other.

Get Quality Seat Covers For Less At Hall And Pinson's

It's easy to select the right set of seat covers for your automobile at Hall and Pinson's, located at 700 W. Foster.

You can choose just the right color, design and style from the large display shown at Hall & Pinson's. This large display is kept for your convenience and you make your selection from a variety of covers that will fit your car no matter what year and model.

Then Leymond Hall and his employees will fit those new seat covers on your car. The installation, if done properly, adds years of wear to the covers.

You buy seat covers to protect your seats and for the beauty of the seat covers themselves. If the covers are installed properly the motorist gets long wear and the covers increase the beauty of the car interior. If they are not installed correctly, the covers wrinkle, wear unevenly and give out long before they give the service to which the owner is entitled.

They make sure your seat covers fit just right before they ever leave the shop, Hall declares. If you buy seat covers at Hall & Pinson's you can rest assured that you not only are getting the best buy in town, but you are getting the best installment to be had.

One of the marvelous features about Hall & Pinson is their giant stock of seat covers they carry. This makes them the truly largest seat cover headquarters in the Panhandle.

Their reason for this is to give motorists a selection of style, color design in covers that fit his individual automobile.

In seat covers, a large stock is essential if you are going to offer a good selection, Hall said. Different sizes are required for each model of the automobiles marketed. A few standard sizes of tires are needed to fit all cars. But that is not true in seat covers. A special size fits each individual model car.

Hall & Pinson carries a large stock to fit the various models, yet gives you a large selection of colors and patterns to choose from. And too, you'll find that the price is available in your budget range.

Just remember, the headquarters for the best in seat covers and seat cover installation is Hall & Pinson located at 700 W. Foster. Drop in and see them as soon as you're ready for the best in seat covers.

Sultan Ready For New Home

AJACCIO, Corsica, Sept. 7 —UP —The former Sultan of Morocco loaded two wives, two concubines, six children and several cases of champagne into trucks Saturday and rolled off to a new "home away from home" to await the arrival of 28 more concubines and "several" more wives to solace him in his exile.

Corsica's Prefect (governor) Marcel Savreux heaved a sigh of relief as the royal convoy trundled away toward the 40-room hotel Golden Ram in Zonza. The deposed Moroccan monarch and his entourage had all but crowded Savreux out of his own home.

French authorities dumped the perfume - loving, candy - chomping Sultan into the prefect's lap without warning when they decided to oust him and put his cousin Moulay on the throne. Savreux and his wife had to move from their regular quarters to a stuffy attic bedroom at the height of the Corsican summer.

Despite the inconvenience, Savreux did his best to make his unwilling guest comfortable, but the Sultan complained that the prefect's 18th - century residence "did not satisfy his and his family's habits, comfort or wishes."

Mohammed and his family will be the sole tenants of the Golden Ram, at a rental of $4,600 a month.

The Sultan himself seems well enough satisfied with his new quarters, but palace servants in his former capital at Rabat said the hotel's 40 rooms would accommodate only 28 of the 42 concubines the Sultan left behind him. The other 14 were sent back to their families.

Pampa Street Paving Ended

The 1953 Pampa street paving program is over.

The last drops of asphalt were shot on five blocks of Worrell late Saturday afternoon, the men working well after 5 p.m. to finish the second course.

But, although the topping was halted for the year stabilizing of blocks and installation of curb and gutters will continue through the winter months as usual. Topping out those streets, and others to be stabilized next spring, will start around the same time next summer.

Close to 80,000 square yards, or 3.5 miles of newly paved streets has now been added to the city's paved street mileage. Actual count of paved mileage inside the city limits is still not fully determined by the city engineering department.

Live And Let Live

We recently had a discussion with a politician who summed up the politician's creed, saying: "People can't be trusted to do the right thing. They have got to be forced to do good."

This creed is based on a profound contempt for humanity. It is the exact opposite of the humane Christian doctrine which teaches "to live and let live." This line is from Swinburne's "Felise." It was used by Mary Baker Eddy in her sermon "Message to the Mother Church" in this manner:

"To live and let live; to wait on divine love; to write truth first on the tablet of one's own heart — this is the sanity and perfection of living, and my human ideal."

Contrast these lines with the politician's statement: "People can't be trusted. Therefore we must force them to obey plumbing codes, planning commissions, etc., or else the world will go to pot."

The Christian code of live and let live stands as a monument pointing the way to true love of your fellow man. The politicians code of "Use force or the world will collapse in anarchy" stands as a monument to distrust, hatred, power complexes and dictatorship.

But the politicians will protest that their motive is to do good, that their motives are sincere, that they serve others, that they are benign humanitarians.

Isabel Paterson, the great American political philosopher, has this to say about humanitarians in "The God of the Machine," Chapter XX, "The Humanitarian with the Guillotine":

". . . he is confronted by two awkward facts; first, that the competent do not need his assistance; second, that the majority of people, if unperverted, positively do not want to be 'done good' by the humanitarian.

"When it is said that everyone should live primarily for others, what is the specific course to be pursued? Is each person to do exactly what any other person wants him to do, without limits or reservations . . . and only what others want him to do?

"What if various persons make conflicting demands? The scheme is impractical. Perhaps then he is to do only what is actually 'good' for others. But will those others know what is good for them?

"No, that is ruled out by the same difficulty. Then shall A do what he thinks is good for B, and B do what he thinks is good for A? Or shall A accept only what he thinks is good for B, and vice versa? But that is absurd.

"Of course what the humanitarian actually proposes is that he shall do what he thinks is good for everybody. It is at this point that the humanitarian sets up the guillotine."

When a politician sets up plumbing codes or planning boards, or laws forcing everybody to patronize a city-created service, say to him:

"Live and let live." He'll look shocked. He'll answer: "You're impractical. You don't know people as well as I do. I've been a 'humanitarian' for 40 years and my experience has taught me that people can't be trusted."

What would Christ have said to that? Perhaps He would have said: "Try trusting them." Actually, He summed it up when He said: "Love one another."

Gentle Pandit!

India's Pandit Nehru, political heir of the great leader of India's long struggle for independence, Mahatma Gandhi, long has been the darling of the liberal-intellectual set. He has been pictured a man of great nobility, of almost holy attributes.

Nehru's devoted admirers have applauded his policy of guiding India in a "neutralist" course between the pressures of Russian communism and alleged American imperialism. So devoted is the Indian Prime Minister to neutrality and non-violence that India, though a member of the United Nations, contributed only an ambulance unit to the UN's cause in Korea, and later withdrew it.

Nearer home, however, in the case of India's dispute with Pakistan over control of the province of Kashmir, the gentle Pandit has shown a consistant, practical belligerence suprisingly at variance with the mantle of saintly mysticism drawn about him by his left-wing rooters. Recently, Kashmir's Premier Mohammed Abdullah and thirty of his top officials were jailed in a political coup reportedly instigated by India. Abdullah's crime was that he advocated an independent, "neutralist" Kashmir, controlled neither by India nor Pakistan.

Crowds who gathered to protest Abdullah's ouster were ruthlessly dispersed and fired on by the police. He has been replaced by a puppet Permier who favors union of Kashmir with India.

Obviously, if Nehru can help it, there henceforth will be no neutralism in Kashmir. It will be interesting to see how the liberal admirers of this gentle hero react to these recent developments which reveal the Indian Prime Minister, in matters close to home, as a shrewd, scheming aggressor.

School Teacher Writes Beliefs In Tax Supported Schools

II

I want to continue to discuss what a school teacher has written Freedom Newspapers as to his beliefs in tax supported schools.

Since probably most people base their beliefs in tax supported schools on the same conclusions, I think it is well to try to point out how I think he errs in drawing his conclusions.

The school teacher contends that voters have a right to vote for or against school bonds for public schools. If the voters have a right to vote for school bonds and the majority or two-thirds can force the minority to pay for same, then we certainly are violating the spirit of America as expressed in the Declaration of Independence that says "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." It does not say from the consent of the majority or the consent of two-thirds. And it of course meant from the consent of the individual because the writers of the Declaration of Independence well knew, as does every other rational person, that only the individual himself can give his consent and that no other person without the authority from the individual can give his consent or act as his agent if we are to follow the Declaration of Independence.

And to vote for school bonds to make individuals pay for schools that they do not believe are moral, ethical or educational, is certainly a violation of the Golden Rule, unless the Golden Rule is determined by majorities. And even this school teacher admits that the majority does not determine the Golden Rule or the meaning of the Golden Rule. The Golden Rule is a natural law, just as the law of gravity, and it can be no more distorted by the majority than the law of gravity can be changed by the majority.

Of course, if we had a pure democracy or an unlimited government without the consent of the governed, then the government could use force to make people pay for whatever those in power wanted them to pay for. But some people do not even vote for schools or school bonds because they believe it would be a violation of the Golden Rule to force people to pay for something that they did not want and thought was harmful.

And if one follows the school teacher's reasoning to its logical conclusion, then the majority, or whatever the law requires, can vote bonds for "free" medicine, "free" housing, "free" food, "free" whiskey, "free" churches, and "free" everything else.

Then we have a collectivist form of government rather than a government that respects the inalienable rights of each and every individual. And a man's inalienable rights are certainly not respected when the majority has a right to force him to pay for something that he does not want.

Then the school teacher writes: "For the better security of all, the Golden Rule does not rule out the use of force."

I do not think any of the Freedom Newspapers has ever contended for one minute that the Golden Rule ruled out the use of force. The individual has a moral right to use force to protect his life and his property. But the Golden Rule certainly rules out for the individual and for the government the right to initiate force. That is, the right to attack, to assail, or to assault any individual or get his other peoples property without their consent. It rules out the right to start a fight. Certainly, the American government, different from all other governments was formed for the very purpose of using force to stop individuals and groups from initiating force or attacking individuals to get things in an involuntary way.

Then the school teacher contends that the majority should have the right to make laws about public support of education.

If the majority has the right to make laws that initiate force by way of taxation or to be the final judge as to what education is, then we have an unlimited government and can perform any other form of tyranny. Rose Wilder Lane contends that tax supported schools are the "primary tyranny." Isabel Paterson says they are "tyranny naked." If the government has the right to exercise this tyranny, it has the right to exercise every other tyranny.

Then the school teacher chides us because we pay taxes for things we do not believe in. He writes:

"Great men in history who argued for or against certain things usually were able to stand up stoutly with actions as well as words. Aren't you willing to sacrifice a little for your beliefs?"

But his "little" would practically mean committing suicide, because no man can live in the United States without directly or indirectly paying taxes. The government wouldn't put the man in jail because he didn't pay certain taxes, but it would simply attach his bank account or any property he had and sell it if he didn't pay taxes assessed against his property. Only if he resisted with physical force would they put him in jail or kill him if he was too aggressive.

Then the school teacher contends that because we pay taxes that we are not consistent.

If he can cite one case in the United States where a man with property has worked out some way that he doesn't need to pay taxes directly or indirectly that he thinks are harmful, we would be under great obligation to him.

We want to support a government that uses force only to stop individuals or groups or other governments from initiating force, but we do not want to pay taxes to support that part of the government that uses the taxes to initiate force. We do not believe it is inconsistent to do so when there seems to be no way not to to for any person who provides anything. If it is inconsistent, then Jesus was inconsistent because he paid tribute.

Hank Gets His Creditors Told In Letters He Puts In His Pocket

By HENRY McLEMORE

Every month I write two sets of letters.

I tear one set up, and the other I drop in the mail box, just as that magnificent gentleman and humorist, Stephen Leacock, used to do. Here is an example of one that never gets to the post office:

Bordeaux Hand Laundry,
2214 Elm Street,
City

Gentlemen: Your bill for the month of July is at hand and confirms what I have thought to be true ever since you picked up our first bundle of laundry; namely, that you are a cheating, thieving outfit that is preying on trusting citizens.

Thirty-seven ($37) dollars, indeed! If you ever get paid it will be in Confederate money.

Send that juggler you employ as a bookkeeper to my home and I'll show his crooked eyes that the bill couldn't have been more than $11. My wife joins me in branding your charges as pure and simple picking of pockets, and while she is a bit under the weather these warm days, she has asked me to buy her an iron in order to spite you and to start you on what she and I hope will be the road to going out of business.

You claim to be a hand laundry. You must be, because no machine made could ever hope to rip, ravel, and tear clothes with the precision that your firm does.

Angrily yours,

Here is the letter that got mailed:

Gentlemen: Please find check for thirty-seven ($37) dollars for July. I regret having inconvenienced you by late payment, but I have been out of the city for several weeks.

Cordially.

Here is another that was written but never mailed:

Granite Guaranty Life Ins. Co.
5203 First Avenue, Northwest,
City.

Dear Sirs: The last thing I ever expected from such an organization as yours was the scurvy trick which you apparently are trying to play on me. What the devil do you mean by saying that I did not send my June premium, and that if it does not reach you by the 30th my insurance will lapse?

If you high-binders think I am going to pay twice, you'd better come down off your high horse. I remember as well as I do my own name walking up the hill and mailing that premium to you. It was a broiling hot day, and I recall thinking that you, my insurance company, wouldn't like my climbing a hill in such weather.

My age! That's what you blackguards are thinking about when you claim I haven't sent my June premium. You've got it all figured out. You know that if my insurance lapses I won't be able to get any more without paying as high as a cat's back for it. You're afraid I might kick off, too, and you'd have to come through. Don't take me for a fool. I have been around a long time, and have been up against sharpsters before.

Yours in disgust and amazement.

This letter was posted:

Dear Sirs: If I have overlooked my June premium, and I must have if your efficient accounting office says I did, please forgive me. Enclosed find check for the amount, and I beg and beseech you not to allow my insurance to lapse.

Activities Of U. S. Reds Follow Fixed Pattern Since Early '30s

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — American Communists' current efforts to ferret out top military secrets on European, Far Eastern and atomic strategy follow the fixed pattern of penetration of government agencies that they have woven at Washington since as early as 1930.

The Senate Security Committee, headed by Sen. William E. Jenner of Indiana, has uncovered evidence that a government Printing Office employe stole information on new weapons, possibly atomic.

Sen. McCarthy has checked on Army civilians at a New York base, whence arms and supplies are shipped abroad to U. S. and allied troops supporting the cold war.

Since Moscow's only concern now centers on our ability to resist Red aggression, the Kremlin has given new instructions to surviving and undected spies to concentrate on that problem. It has shifted the Red spotlight from less important agencies to the factor which will prove decisive in any showdown—our military might.

NEW RED ACTIVITIES — The new and alarming direction of the Reds' activities bears out another Jenner conclusion that disturbs the smug and complacent in their belief that all anti-American agents have been thwarted by congressional and governmen. investigation and prosecution. It indicates that they have only become more cautious, now that their more distinguished leaders have been caught.

Elizabeth Bentley has testified that two rings at Washington were never unmasked. In accord with Muscovite secrecy, she was never informed of their identity or field of operations. She worked only with the Perlo and Silvermaster cells, which have been broken up. The new evidence suggests that important remnants are still active.

Almost every recent witness before congressional committees has refused to describe fellow-conspirators' actions or to identify them, even though the statue of limitations will spare them any prosecution.

They have met these leading questions with frozen silence. It is extremely significant that only six suspects, including Perlo and Silvermaster, refused to answer questions on the ground of "incrimination" 510 times, or an average of 85 refusals. They would take no chances on helping the government to spot and de-fang the remaining networks.

SEEK WHERE MOST DAMAGE POSSIBLE — The current concentration on secret military data fits in with the chronological system of spying as it has been analyzed by Capitol Hill experts. The Reds always infiltrated through their interlocking influence into that segment of the government where they could do the worst damage at that particular moment. They chose and capitalized on successive crises since the 1929 panic.

In the depth of the depression, the original Harold Ware conspirators (he was the Soviet-trained son of Mother Bloor) crawled into the AAA, WPA, National Recovery Administration, Labor and Resettlement, Social Security. They sponsored many economic schemes denounced by Congress as "'socialistic" and by the courts as unconstitutional.

Simultaneously, they attached themselves to congressional committees dealing with such sensitive subjects as Interstate Migration, Civil Liberties, the Ny Munitions Investigation, Small Business. They missed no chance to arouse class hatred and bitterness.

TRANSFERRED ACTIVITIES — When war enveloped Europe, they transferred automatically and en masse to the National Advisory Defense Council, Board of Economic Warfare, War Production Board, Price Administration, Army Military Government, the OSS, Elmer Davis' OWI, Air Force Planning, the National Labor Relations Board. They contributed to the alphabetical confusion that botched all planning and preparation after Pearl Harbor.

In the period of postwar rehabilitation, they rolled up their sleeves to remake the world in accord with the Kremlin's desire. They shifted to the United Nations, UNRRA, the International Monetary Fund, the International Refugee Organization, State, Treasury, Commerce, National Defense.

Today, in view of changing world conditions and conflicts, the Army Navy, Air Force an dour atomic arsenal are their primary targets.

BID FOR A SMILE

Teacher — Yes, (explaining) quite a number of plants and flowers have the prefix 'dog.' For instance, the dog-rose, and dog violet are well known. Can any of you name another?

There was silence, then a happy look illuminated the face of a boy at the back of the class.

Youth — Please, teacher, (proud of his knowledge) Collie flower.

Price Of Freedom Under God

(Christian Economics)

REV. JOHN BRUERE, D.D.

Calvary Presbyterian Church Cleveland, Ohio

Excerpts From His Spiritual Mobilization Prize - Winning Sermon

Perhaps the greatest question of our day is whether we shall put security above freedom, or freedom above security. America is making its decision. Some nations have made their decision. These are nations that are willing to give up freedom for state-protected and state - controlled lives. Security from the cradle to the grave can be made to look more appealing than freedom from the cradle to the grave, because at first glance it seems less expensive. Such security is the most expensive thing in the world.

FREEDOM AND SECURITY

Powerful forces in this country seek to convince us that it is time for us to change, to give up a system of guaranteed freedom for a system of guaranteed security. Without freedom there can be only the security of cared-for animals. In any nation where freedom does not come first, the individual and his rights come last.

I said that we have our choice between freedom and security. In a truer sense, there is no real security apart from freedom. In our history to date, this nation has set more store by freedom than by anything else. From the time when we refused to pay taxes to the mother country without representation, we have refused to surrender our freedom at any price. Many of our people have given up the security of established communities and accepted customs, to trek westward where they would be more free to work things out for themselves. Freedom, not security, has always been so, this nation has become the one nation of the earth in which there has been a large measure of security for its people. Freedom does not destroy security. It is the only soil in which it can grow.

"DANGEROUS DOCTRINE"

Our Declaration of Independence is still one of the most revolutionary documents in the world. In the larger part of the world it is still considered a dangerous doctrine, one to be discouraged by firing squads and prison camps.

How many of us truly understand the significance of its words? How many off us realize that it is more important than our natural resources, than our wealth than our whole industrial system? It is more important because without it we would not have developed our natural resources; we would not have created our wealth we would not have developed our industrial system.

John Adams has this to say about that Declaration: "Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America, and a greater, perhps never was, nor will be decided among men. That day will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am well aware of the toil, and blood, and treasure that it will cost us to maintain this declaration, and support and defend these States. Yet through all the gloom, I can see the rays of ravishing light and glory. I can see that the end is more than worth all the means."

It is fitting, therefore that we pause and remember the price of the freedom under God that we enjoy. In one sense, freedom is an inalienable right of every human being, but that freedom is purchased at a great price. We take it for granted that man is naturally a free agent and that there is nothing unusual about living in a society in which he is allowed to live and to act as a free agent.

Such a naive assumption shows little awareness of the actual history of the race. It is natural for men to be free, but it is equally natural for the strong and the clever to impose their will and their schemes upon their fellows. Freedom has never been any easy acquisition or an effortless attainment. All freedom, whether religious, political, or economic has come from struggle and sacrifice in which good men have endured terrific hardship and sometimes sacrificed their lives.

What is the nature of the freedom for which men have been willing to make such great sacrifice? Most of us take it for granted that freedom is simply the opportunity to do whatever we please, without any interference from the state or church or society.

A NOBLER MEANING

However, it was not for this concept of freedom that men have been willing to endure prison and persecution and death. Freedom must have a higher and a nobler meaning or it ceases to be a great ideal. The ideal of freedom that sustained the religious, political, and social pioneer was freedom for man to express his real self, to follow his best ideal, to serve God not according to temporal ruler but according to his own conscience.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Smith was relating his experiences in South America.

Smith — I was taking my usual morning dip when I spotted three gladiators making for me, so I had to swim for my life!

Jones — You mean navigators — something like a crocodile?

Smith — Well, what are gladiators?

Jones — Gladiators? Why, they're a sort of flower grown from bulbs.

In a crowded nite club, recently, an escort stooped over to pick up his girl's glove. Before he could straighten up, a waiter had thrown a tablecloth over him and seated five people.

LOOKING SIDEWAYS

By WHITNEY BOLTON

There used to be a saying around town that if you didn't have it to give you ought to move out. It concerned the young men and women coming up on Broadway as entertainers, a fat percentage of whom were entertaining to no one but themselves. This condition still exists and, after looking over a fresh crop of determined youth, I am in favor of reviving the phrase. All it means is that if you have no talent, for heaven's sake go away and make room for someone who has.

The summer theater is as good a mirror of current talents as there is, and the mirror this summer has been dismayingly blank. It is almost impossible to name one promising youngster of either sex. They tell me that over on Television Row there is a raft of kids coming along, most of whom will dazzle 20,000,000 living rooms at a time this winter. These are described as authentic magic in all departments: drama, comedy, dancing and singing. And the TV monarchs are a little smug when they tell you about their stables of winners-to-be. They imply that, naturally, no talented young person will seek fortune and fame in the theater when for less starving and less effort these rewards can be found in television.

Maybe. I doubt it. I think a kid with talent and magic in his mitts will bruise himself on the theater nine times out of ten rather than get in the silk door of TV. He will do it because he knows that the theater is the key to all the rest. Once a youngster has unlocked that door and gotten himself praised by a clutch of critics he can go anywhere: TV, movies or Sardi's. I know girls who are veritable whizzes on television, kids who work steadily and at handsome wages, but who feel odd when they walk into Sardi's for lunch. They feel alien and out of things. They are real fireballs in TV but they know instantly that none of the theater crowd is in the slightest awe of them. They would rather be ingenues on chancy Broadway than queens on secure television.

You may say that is a bizarre kind of thinking and that security is worth all the dazzle of Broadway. Sure it is. But you can't make the younger division believe it. They will rehearse for three weeks, go out of town for three more on try-out, then come into Broadway in a show that opens on Tuesday and closes Saturday and call it great, just great. At least, they say, they now have been in a Broadway show. For what the cachet is worth, they have it.

My personal feelings about all this are that the young people are a little dented in the skull. Few of them can afford to be so snooty about TV and in the years to come they will regret having spent their best years battering at an indifferent and probably disastrous Broadway while losing the chance to set themselves and rivet themselves into an entertainment form that virtually guarantees them professional safety. The theater, alas, is becoming less of a force each year, with fewer plays to be seen and, obviously, fewer jobs to be had. The rising and enormous costs of play production are making the theater of New York a luxurious gamble fewer men and women are willing to undertake.

I don't go along with the kids who are arch about TV. They ought to thank heaven for it. But they don't and they won't.

All of which is a long walk from the original thought: that the summer theater failed to disclose any new theater talents of igniting power — and there seems to be no answer for it.

Probably there isn't any answer.

Oilers Down Plainview Twice; Close Home Schedule Tonight

Barbee's 3 Homers Spark Sunday Wins

The curtain will fall on the 1953 Oiler home schedule tonight when Porky Pawelek's crew continue the battle for a first-division berth by meeting the Plainview Ponies in a doubleheader at Oiler Park.

The first game will start at 7. Pawelek was at a loss as to who would start the games tonight. He used every pitcher he had yesterday when the hustling Oilers captured both ends of a twinbill from the Ponies, winning the first game 8-5 and the nightcap, 14-13. When queried on who he was going to pitch tonight, Pawelek answered "all of 'em."

The Oilers gained a half-game on fourth place Clovis with yesterday's double win. The Pioneers defeated Borger last night, 11-4, to lead the Oilers by three games. The Oilers, however, gained a game and a half on Lubbock and now trail the third place Hubbers by 3½ games.

In winning yesterday's twinbill, the Oilers were forced to come from behind in both games to win. In the first game, Bob White sent Plainview into a 4-3 lead in the top of the sixth with a three-run pinch-hit homer but the battling Oilers came right back to stage a five-run rally in the bottom of the sixth for the victory.

The big blow of the sixth inning surge by the Oilers was Johnny Sanderson's two-run triple that drove in the tieing and winning runs.

Earlier in the game, Quincy Barbee, who blasted three homeruns in two games, had given the Oilers a 2-0 lead in the first inning with a 2-run homer. The Ponies narrowed it to 2-1 in the second on Bobby Brown's bases empty homer. The Oilers made it 3-1 in the third on Doug Lewis' run-scoring single.

The locals appeared headed for a certain win until White unloaded his pinch-hit homer in the sixth to send Plainview ahead for the first time, 4-3. But the Oilers were not to be denied and surged right back to ice the decision with five runs in the lower half of the sixth.

Joe Borrego, Oiler nemesis for most of the season, absorbed the Pony loss in the opener. Sad Sam Williams, coming on in relief in the Pony sixt, goht the win, his 26th of the year. Rolando Rodriguez had started the game.

Nearly everything happened in the second game. Six pitchers saw action in the game, four for the Oilers. Rookie Jim Lemons, the fourth Oiler hurler, got the win. The loss when to Oran Stoker.

Barbee hit two homers in the second game, hitting one with two on in the third and coming back in the sixth to clout another, this time with the bases empty. Johnny Sanderson also homered for the Oilers in the nightcap with two aboard in the fourth.

Ben Felder drove across the winning marker for the Oilers in the seventh who came from behind with two runs in the last go around. Felder doubled to score pinch runner Jimmy Robinson. Previously, Deck Woldt had singled across the tieing run to set the stage for Felder's blow.

Barbee's first homer was the longest blow of the season at Oiler Park. The ball cleared the top of the scoreboard. Barbee's blow travelled more than 400 feet from home plate.

Austin Surprises Shamrock's Hale

Amarillo, Midland, Canadian and Pampa furnished the semi-finalists in the 18th annual Top o' Texas tournament this morning as the championship field of 32 was pared to four following yesterday's second and third round of play.

Rex Baxter, Jr., United States Junior champion, and one of the tourney favorites, battled his way into the semi-finals with a 3-2 win over Pampa's C. F. McGinnis in the second round Sunday morning and then coming back in the afternoon to defeat another Pampan, John Foreman, 2-1, in the quarterfinals.

Foreman previously had pulled a surprise in the morning round Sunday when he defeated Jimmy Smith of Amarillo, 2-1. Smith was the lad who ousted medalist Malcolm Douglass in the opening round Saturday.

Joining Baxter in the semi-finals are Elmer "Red" Watkins of Midland, Harry Wilbur of Canadian and Grover Austin, Jr., of Pampa.

Watkins won over Bill Barton, 2-1, in the second round Sunday morning and coming back in the quarter-finals in the afternoon to eliminate Bob Geise of Amarillo, 1-up.

Wilbur won over John Farquahr of Amarillo in the second round, 2-1, and disposed of C. R. Caldwell, another Amarilloan, in the quarter-finals, 2-1. Austin defeated fellow townsman Buster Carter in the second round, 3-2, and then pulled one of the major surprises of the day in the afternoon with a 4-3 quarterfinals victory over Tommy Hale of Shamrock, 4-3.

Hale, who was a finalist here in 1951, was regarded as one of the favorites of the tourney.

In the semi-final matches this morning, Baxter met Watkins and Wilbur was pitted against Austin. The winner of the two matches will hook up in this afternoon's 18-hole finals, starting at approximately 2:30.

Austin is the only ex-champion left in the running. The brother of Pampa Country Club pro, Johnny Austin, Austin won the title in 1950.

Meanwhile second round matches were played in all other flights Sunday. The third and fourth round matches in the lower flights are on tap for today.

Rain Washes Out Celebrities Golf

By PAUL SOUTHWICK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 —UP— The National Celebrities Golf tournament washed out by driving rain for the second straight time Sunday, headed into the third and fourth rounds Monday with Lew Worsham leading a pack of "name" pros with a 36-hole score of 137.

The $15,000 72-hole event, scheduled to wind up Monday with 36-holes of golfing starting at 8 a. m., finds the celebrites division pared down to six pros shooting for a special Arthur Godfrey award after Sunday's field, including Gen. Omar Bradley, was forced to quit the tourney with nothing but a good soaking for their efforts.

All but nine of the professionals had concluded their play in the third round when officials called off the play at 3 p. m. with Jack Isaacs of Langley Field, Va., and Ed (Porky) Oliver of Palm Springs Calif., tied at 214 after third round scores of 68 and 69, respectively. Sammy Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and George Fazio of Pine Valley, N. J. were deadlocked for second with scores of 215.

Seitz Turns Thumbs Down On Allowing Oilers To Replace Injured Max Molberg

GROVER SEITZ IS AT IT again. He has turned thumbs down on allowing the Oilers to replace Max Molberg who is out for the season with an injury.

The deadline for adding players to the West Texas-New Mexico rosters has expired but in most cases when a player is lost via injury after the deadline, the league heads generally allow the cub to pick up a player to fill out the rest of the year.

But it takes a unanimous vote around the league for a club to add a player and when the Oilers contacted all clubs of the WT-NM, Grover at Clovis was the only one casting a negative vote.

It's probably the first time in history of the WT-NM or any other league that something of this sort has happened—that of not allowing a club to replace an injured player at the tail end of the season. Most managers or club officials know what a predicament a club can get in when they lose a player via injury at the late stage of a season, especially when it is a pitcher that is injured.

But not Grover. The ex-Oiler pilot must have left Pampa with some sort of hatred toward the Top o' Texas because he has been trying to "foul up" the Oilers all season. Early in the year when WT-NM clubs were calling off games because of the cold weather, Grover refused to call a game between the Oilers and Pioneers at Clovis when near freezing weather existed and as a result pitcher Molberg, who pitched and won the game, came up with a lame arm and he hasn't been himself since.

Molberg was ticketed as a 20-game winner before the season started and he would probably have made the grade had it not been for the early season incident. There were less than 200 fans who braved the cold weather in the said game so you can see it was nonsense to play the game. That's not treating the hometown fans right. Maybe that's the reason Clovis' attendance is poor.

Molberg received a badly injured knee in the final game of the Abilene series Friday night. He is definitely lost for the remainder of the season. That cuts the Oiler mound corps from six to five and with these double-headers here at the end of the season, certainly is making it rough for the homeside.

Manager Porky Pawelek of the Oilers, who was fighting mad yesterday when he heard of Seitz' action, could hardly believe that anyone could be that "dirty." "You can quote me," Porky said "that if any like situation is ever presented to me, even if it means the difference of a playoff berth, I wouldn't cast a dissenting vote to replace an injured player."

"When a player is hurt, he is hurt and there's nothing you can do about it," Porky added.

Newt Secrist was the fellow the Oilers were going to replace Molberg with. Secrist, a local man, has been playing semi-pro ball all season and played one game in the pro ranks, appearing in one game with the Abilene Blue Sox against the Oilers here several weeks ago.

AT ANY RATE, THE OILERS are going right ahead and put out their all in their drive for a playoff berth although their chances are slim. Time is rapidly running out and the Oilers have three games yet to pick up with only six games to go.

Tonight is the last home appearance for the Oilers and the stands should be packed for the twinbill with the Plainview Ponies that is on tap. Those who saw that doubleheader yesterday will vouch for the fact that the Oilers haven't given up. They had to come from behind in both games and in one game, they had to rally at the 11th hour—two runs in the final inning for the victory.

The pitching staff is pretty well beat up at the moment and it's anybody's guess who will start tonight's games. All five of the Oiler moundsmen saw action yesterday so you can see that no one will be ready for a ful game assignment.

But, let us remind you once again, this is the last date on the Oiler home schedule and local fans can certainly show their appreciation to the Oilers by turning out in full force tonight.

Colts Tackle Browns Tonite

By Earl Wright

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 —UP— The Baltimore Colts, back in professional football after a two-year break, take on a team they never have beaten Monday night when they play an exhibition with the Cleveland Browns at Akron, Ohio.

In the past, the Colts have been one of Cleveland's better punching bags. They dropped seven games to the Browns in the old All-American conference and took a 31 to 0 beating in their only brush with Cleveland in the National Football League in 1950.

The Colts have a better exhibition record than the Browns going into Monday night's contest. Baltimore Coach Keith Molesworth lost his top passer, Bobby Williams, to the Navy, and his top draft choice, Billy Vessels of Oklahoma, to the Canadian League, but the team has won two of its three warm-up games. The Browns have a victory, a tie and a defeat so far.

In other exhibitions Monday night, the Los Angeles Rams meet the Chicago Cardinals at Portland, Ore., and the San Francisco Forty-Niners play the Philadelphia Eagles at San Antonio.

Coach Hamp Pool's Rams are undefeated in five exhibition starts, including two against service teams. The Cardinals have split even in two games. Coach Jim Trimble's Eagles won their two previous exhibitions, while the Forty-Niners have two victories and two defeats and one of their triumphs came against a service club from Fort Ord.

In exhibitions earlier this weekend, the champion Detroit Lions and the Browns played a 24 to 24 tie Friday night at Detroit and the Washington Redskins edged the Green Bay Packers 13 to 6 Saturday night at Green Bay, Wis.

Furillo-The Lip Tangle

Fists Fly As Bums KO Giants Again

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 —UP— That long - expected brawl between the Giants and Dodgers finally exploded but nothing was settled — so, unless Carl Furillo and Leo Durocher meet on the street in the meantime, there won't be any more fist swinging until the teams meet again next April.

It was a dilly of a fight while it lasted, although both Dodger outfielder Furillo and Giant Manager Durocher insisted that no punches landed, though plenty were thrown.

Furillo wound up with a broken left finger suffered when he was stepped on or kicked by a Giant, not necessarily Durocher, in the melee. He also faced a probable fine and suspension for provoking the assault in the second inning of Sunday's mad finale between the teams, which the Dodgers won, 6 to 3, as Preacher Roe pitched a four-hitter and Roy Campanella broke a major league mark for catchers by hitting his 38th homer. Roy also tied another by driving in two runs to give him a total of 133.

The fight was touched off when Giant pitcher Ruben Gomez hit Furillo on the wrist with a pitch. Furillo, who once was beaned by Giant pitcher Sheldon Jones and was hospitalized for several days, charged to the mound.

Umpire Dusty Boggess tried to restrain him but could not. Finally Dodger teammates pulled him away while Manager Charley Dressen had hot word with Gomez.

Quiet prevailed temporarily while Gomez pitched to Billy Cox. Suddenly, pointing his finger at Leo in the Giant dugout, Furillo raced off first base and Durocher leaped up the steps.

"We collided head on and we both went to the ground," Durocher said, "I never said a word to him. I hadn't spoken to him since he played for me in the All-Star game two years ago. I don't know what got in to him. The pitchers all throw at my boys and if they get hit, they put down their bats and go to first base. Nobody was throwing at him and nobody told anybody to throw at him."

Furillo had his own ideas about that.

"That guy has had it coming for a long time. And he's going to get it, too. I'd have given a thousand dollars to have hit his ugly mug just once and I'm going to do it, too. I'm sorry I really never landed a punch."

"I've got news for Furillo," was Durocher's retort. "If he doesn't hurt me any more than he did this time, I'm not worried. Besides, it is no disgrace to lose a fight. And for an old guy of 50 I might be able to land a few punches myself before he cuts loose."

Campanella's two-run homer, just before the brawl, topped Gabby Hartnett's previous high of 37 for catchers set with the 1930 Cubs. And it equalled the high for runs driven in set by Bill Dickey of the 1937 Yankees. Preacher won his 10th straight game and the Giants were topped by the Dodgers for the 10th time in a row.

Milwaukee remained 11 games behind the Dodgers in second place by defeating the Cardinals, 3 to 1, then battling to a 3 to 3 darkness-halted eight inning tie.

Ed Mathews hit his 45th home run in the opener as Bob Buhl gained credit for his 12th victory with relief help from ace lefty Warren Spahn, who was honored with a "day" by Milwaukee fans. The Cards rallied for three runs in the two final innings to tie up the second game after Joe Adcock hit a Milwaukee home run earlier.

Chicago twice trimmed Cincinnati 7 to 6 and 7 to 2, winning the opener with two runs in the ninth as Dee Fondy stole home with the winning tally, and taking the second game on eight-hit pitching by rookie Jim Willis. Ralph Kiner, Hank Sauder, Fondy and Randy Jackson hit first - game Chicago homers. Grady Hatton and Will Marshall homered for Cincinnati. Sauer also hit a second game homer.

Yanks Rained Out

Del Ennis, Johnny Wyrostek and Gran Hamner hit homers as the Phils topped the Pirates, 7 to 2, on the 10 hit pitching of Karl Drews.

in the ninth and taking the second game on Mickey McDermott's six-hit pitching. Ted Williams hit his eighth homer in the opener.

Harvey Kuenn drove in three runs, collecting three singles as Detroit topped the Browns 5 to 2 and Ted Gray gained his eighth victory.

Playoff Berths Still Unset As TL Enters Final Day

By UNITED PRESS

Just one night is left in Texas League play, but things were not settled by any means, except that Dallas, for the second year in a row, is the 1953 regular-season champ.

With four doubleheaders on tap Monday night, second, third, fourth fifth and—of all things—last place remained undecided.

Tulsa stayed one game ahead of third - place Fort Worth Sunday night by taking the measure of Dallas' Eagles 5 to 1, and Fort Worth widened the gap between itself and Oklahoma City to two full games by trimming the Indians 6 to 5.

Sports Drop One

Shreveport, the flop of the late season, still has a chance to get into the first division. The Sports dropped a 5 to 4 decision to Houston to remain two games back of Oklahoma City and best they can do now is tie for fourth place.

Currently the hottest battle is for seventh place in the circuit. Beaumont climbed out of the cellar Sunday night by whipping San Antonio 9 to 3, and both teams are now tied for seventh place.

Monday night's schedule calls for doubleheaders at all four stations with Oklahoma City at Fort Worth, Dallas at Tulsa, Houston at Shreveport and Beaumont at San Antonio.

Dallas pushed across a lone run in the ninth inning to save itself from a second straight whitewashing by Tulsa. Al McNeilance held the Eagles to six hits to register his 11th win of the season. Eulas Hutson homered for the Oilers in the fifth inning with none on.

Cats Clinch Berth

For the eighth straight year, Fort Worth clinched a playoff berth as the Cats nipped Oklahoma City. The Indians, who still can tie for third place, or, if Tulsa loses, can ease into a second-place deadlock, scored first, but trailed all the way after the third inning.

After Harry Heslet's 41st homer of the year knotted the score at 4 to 4, Houston's Harry Miggins poled an eight-inning four-bagger to give Houston a close decision.

Two home runs by Fred Taylor and another by Jack Maupin gave George Eyrich, who relieved Bud Smith in the fourth inning, all the margin he needed as Beaumont turned back San Antonio. The two teams, who have been on the bottom of the league for most of the season, will fight it out for seventh-place again Monday night.
