Libya claims Egypt preparing to invade

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Libya claimed on Friday that Egypt has completed a military buildup along its border and is preparing to invade after blaming Libya for the hijacking of an Egyptair jetliner last week.

The official Libyan news agency JANA, monitored in Cairo, said the Egyptians planned to claim Libya was plotting an air raid on Egypt and then launch an attack on Libya.

An Egyptian Foreign Ministry source, who spoke on condition he not be identified, dismissed the Libyan report as "purely propaganda."

In another dispatch, JANA claimed U.S. forces in the Mediterranean had increased surveillance of the border in the past 48 hours to help the Egyptians plan the attack.

JANA said the United States was eager for an excuse to intervene militarily in Libya "to put an end to the role" that country played in confronting "American policy" against the Arabs.

Egypt's foreign minister, Ahmad Esmat Abdel Meguid, said Egypt has increased its troops along the Libyan border "in view of the seriousness of the situation that has come out of the hijacking."

"We certainly do not want to embark on any action we consider dangerous, but we have to make Libya understand that we certainly do not accept their interference with us," Meguid told reporters in Brussels after a visit to Belgium to confer with Common Market diplomats.

Egyptian security sources said troops had been placed on alert and reinforcements moved to the border last weekend after gunmen hijacked an Egyptair Boeing 737 with 98 people on board to Malta on a flight from Athens, Greece, to Cairo.

Fifty-eight people died when Egyptian commandos stormed the plane at the airport of Valletta, the Maltese capital, on Sunday.

The hijackers had shot five people before the assault, killing one, an American woman.

A security source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the army was reducing the level of readiness among troops along the frontier since the hijacking ended.

Large numbers of troops are permanently deployed along the Egyptian-Libyan border in a military control zone where the state of readiness is always high.

The Libyan news agency report said: "Reliable sources have said that the Egyptian regime is preparing its forces, massed along Libya's borders, to launch a military attack on the Arab Libyan people after mobilizing the Egyptian people and misleading them into believing the Egyptian army is checking aggression from Libya."

JANA claimed it learned of the Egyptian plan from pro-Libyan officers in the Egyptian army who said "the Egyptian regime has justified these measures to them by claiming that Libya will carry out an aerial sacrificial operation against Egypt."

Egyptian state-owned news media have accused Libya of instigating and financing the hijacking.

President Hosni Mubarak told reporters Tuesday the hijackers were members of an unspecified Palestinian group opposed to Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat, and that there was a "clear connection" between the gunmen and Libya.

Northern U.S. has record-low temperatures

Associated Press

A strong, wet storm slugged Northern California with rain and heavy, blowing snow Friday, dumping nearly 3 feet of new snow in the Sierra Nevada to close out a month that has already seen record accumulations.

And November's unusual blast of cold rewrote more record book entries as temperatures on the northern Plains fell as low as 31 below zero.

A snow slide buried two people at a Lake Tahoe-area ski resort Friday, killing one of them. The other man escaped without suffering serious injury.

The fast-moving Northern California storm snarled traffic with snow in mountain passes and dumped nearly an inch of rain at San Francisco. Pacific Gas and Electric reported outages at some 7,100 homes in Gilroy, Hayward and Livermore, but service was restored in an hour.

Wind gusted to 55 mph and mariners were warned of 12-foot waves along the coast.

Blue Canyon, Calif., got 8 inches of snow during the morning and by late afternoon, 33 inches of new snow fell at Donner Summit in the Sierra Nevada, the National Weather Service said.

Heavy rains, meanwhile, hit Southern California, with three-quarters of an inch recorded in Los Angeles, causing power outages, mudslides and numerous traffic accidents.

Snow also fell from the central and northern Rockies out across the central Plains and the upper half of the Mississippi Valley. In Utah, Wasatch Front ski resorts reported up to 14 inches of new snow Friday.

The higher Sierra Nevada and the Lake Tahoe area got 10 to 20 inches of snow Thursday. Chains were mandatory on vehicles using Interstate 80, the main highway between Northern California and northern Nevada.

Ahead of Friday's weather system, winter storm watches were posted for today for southern Utah, the mountains of northern Arizona, much of Colorado and Wyoming, western Nebraska and northwestern Kansas, with watches posted for tonight over eastern North Dakota and northwestern Minnesota.

Up to 17 inches of snow was on the ground Friday at Ainsworth, Neb.

"It'll pull some more arctic air down...and as it moves eastward across the Plains it'll spread that cold," said Pete Reynolds of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center at Kansas City, Mo.

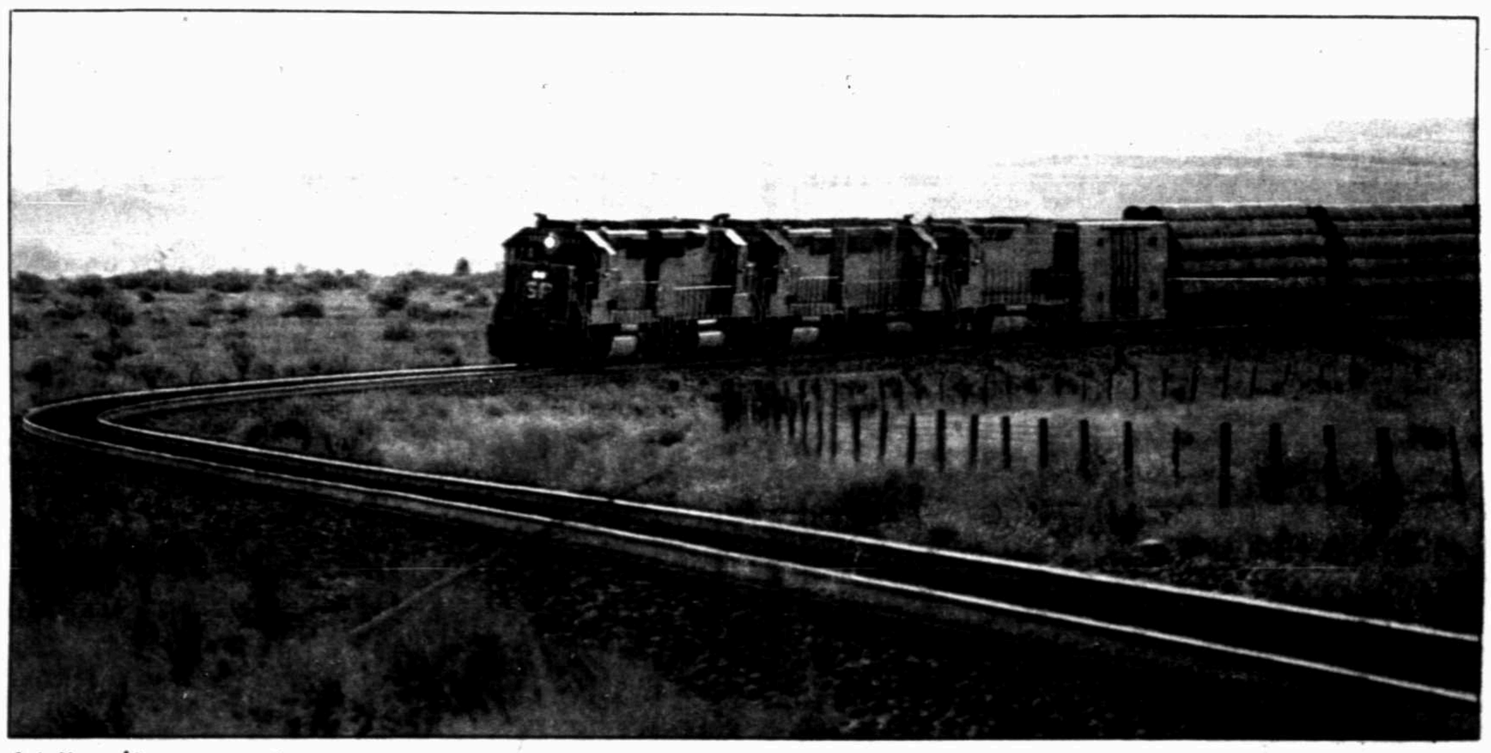

Bismarck, N.D., dropped to a record low of 30 degrees below zero, one degree below the former record, while the coldest spot in the 48 states was 31 below at Grand Forks. International Falls, Minn., posted a record low of 28 below zero, following Thursday's record low of 32 below.

Other records Friday included 18 below zero at Duluth, Minn., and 16 below at St. Cloud, Minn. The low of 14 below at Kalispell, Mont., was a full 10 degrees below the old record, set in 1905.

Another Pacific storm was expected to hit California on Sunday.

"Computer projections of the longer range weather pattern show a storm track stretching from Asia to North America in an almost straight line," said the weather service. "This means a continuing wet spell for California."

Synod disagrees over rights of divorced

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Four leading U.S. churchmen on Friday dismissed as unrealistic suggestions by Austrian, Japanese and Canadian prelates that a way be found to allow divorced and remarried Roman Catholics to receive communion.

"I don't see the possibility suggested would really be acceptable," Cardinal Bernard Law of Boston told reporters.

"Pastoral concern certainly is there, but part of our pastoral concern for the whole church has to be for the very high value of the indissolubility of marriage and the maintenance of that very important key value for us is essential," he said.

Three other U.S. prelates who also were at the news conference gave similar answers when asked to comment on the proposals made at the extraordinary synod assessing the impact of the reforms of the Second Vatican Council.

"We have no evidence that such an accommodation could easily be made," said Bishop James W. Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, president of the U.S. Bishops conference. "The basic question is how a person who continues in what is considered a state of sin be said to repent when in fact that person continues to live in reunion that is invalid."

American prelates also supported the church's exclusion of women from priesthood and upheld priestly celibacy. Cardinal Bernard Law of Boston said he opposed ordination of women "because the priest in his ministry...images Christ, and Christ was a male."

The church does not recognize divorce and Catholics who marry again without an annulment are excluded from communion. A recent poll of American Catholics conducted by the New York Times and CBS News showed 73 percent favor the acceptance of remarriage.

A Japanese archbishop told the synod the exclusion of divorced Catholics from communion "seems an especially cruel measure" and an Austrian prelate suggested that they be re-admitted to the sacraments "after a period of penance" — a call later endorsed by Canadian bishops.

Law and Malone were joined in their assessment by Cardinal John Francis Dearden, archbishop emeri-

Shoppers fill stores as they start count-down to Christmas

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
Associated Press

Eager shoppers clutching wish lists and credit cards braved foul weather in many areas to elbow their way into stores across the nation Friday, the first day of the traditional Christmas shopping season and one of the year's busiest shopping days.

While people came to buy gifts, many also came for the atmosphere — the Santa Clauses, the glittering and tinkling decorations, their favorite Christmas carols.

"It's jammed," said Susan Weiner, an executive at Gimbels department store in downtown Pittsburgh. "It looks like we should have a pretty big increase over last year."

Wally Broberg, manager of Hammond Tots & Toys in downtown Salt Lake City, said, "We're so busy I can't even take the time to talk to you right now."

Some stores opened as early as 7 a.m. and beefed up security to protect shoppers from pickpockets.

Children formed some of the longest lines, waiting to sit on Santa's lap.

While no stampedes were reported, shoppers were grabbing Teddy Ruxpin talking teddy bears and adoptable, soft-sculptured Pound Puppies out of the hands of clerks at several Toys "R" Us stores, said spokeswoman Morinda Christopher at the company's headquarters in Rochelle, N.J.

Retailers, concerned that this year's 26-day shopping season has six fewer days than a year ago, have stepped up advertising and promotions to tempt shoppers.

But markdowns are not as drastic as last year, when retailers were trying to unload huge inventories, analysts say.

Snow couldn't keep shoppers from their appointed tasks, but rain slowed some buyers.

The crowd was heavy at Karcher Mall about 20 miles west of Boise, Idaho, officials said, despite a 27-hour-long snow storm that ended about mid-morning Friday after dumping more than half a foot of new snow.

Judge's ruling could clear way for raising Titanic

LONDON (AP) — An Admiralty Court judge ruled Friday that the British government cannot claim the goods salvaged from the sunken liner Lusitania, clearing the way for an effort to raise another famous shipwreck, the Titanic.

In 1982, a British-led team brought up $3.4 million worth of treasures from the Lusitania, which was sunk by a German submarine off the Irish coast in 1915 with the loss of 1,198 lives.

The government said that under a 14th century law, it had first claim to any salvaged material brought to Britain, including that from the Lusitania.

Because of that law, John Pierce, Welsh leader of the Lusitania salvage operation, had feared that if he went ahead with his plan to raise the recently discovered wreckage of the Titanic, it might be seized when he tried to restore the liner at the Belfast shipyard where it was built.

The idea of bringing the Titanic up from the floor of the North Atlantic was vetoed by the French-American team that found it last September, and at least one survivor of the 1912 disaster is "revolted" by the prospect of disturbing the wreck.

The luxury liner Titanic struck an iceberg on its maiden voyage, taking 1,513 people to their deaths. The French-American team that found it 560 miles off Newfoundland, more 13,000 feet below the ocean surface, decided to leave it where it was and make it a marine memorial.

Judge Sir Barry Sheen ruled Friday that the British government had no title to wrecks found in international waters, only to those within territorial waters.

The judge said no one had a better right to the salvage from the Lusitania than Pierce, the two American businessmen who claim to own the ship's hull, and the two salvage firms that took part in the 1982 operation.

After the ruling, Pierce said: "The Titanic is coming up."

He said he will press ahead with operations to raise the ship using a system of giant airbags, and start work with an international team in 18 months.

Pierce, 44, said he was "very confident" the Titanic could be raised. "As far as we know, she's in a condition that she's rebuildable."

Under his plan, two specialized underwater craft will fix tear-shaped bags along the length of the Titanic's hull. They would be inflated to give the wreck sufficient buoyancy to lift it to the surface.

Not everyone is as confident the ship can — or should — be raised.

American scientist Robert Ballard, who was part of the team that found the Titanic, said at the time that any attempt at salvage would be "ridiculous." It was thought the effort would cost more than the value of the ship or its contents.

Marine expert Robert Spindel of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute in Massachusetts has called Pierce's plan "nonsense."

Eighty-year-old survivor Eva Hart said bringing the ship to the surface would be like "digging up a skeleton."

Miss Hart, from Chadwell Heath in the southeast England county of Essex, said last September that she was "tremendously relieved" the wreckage would not be raised "because I feel that's my father's grave." She was 7 when her father put her in one of the Titanic's lifeboats before he went down with the ship.

"I'm entirely revolted and so are all the rest of the survivors and God knows there are few of us left," she said Friday.

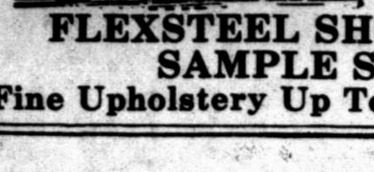

She said Pierce had telephoned her Friday morning to tell her of his salvage plan.

"I told him exactly the same and I think he thought I was quite crazy," she said.

"I'm not a sentimental person about graves but this is something quite different. If they bring up artifacts it will be tantamount to opening graves and stealing somebody's rings."

SYNOD

tus of Detroit and Archbishop John L. May of St. Louis, all taking part in the two-week assembly of bishops which began on Monday.

The synod on Friday concluded five days of general debate, during which most of the 165 participants reported on the state of their churches and broke up in different language groups for more detailed discussion on various themes.

At least two bishops, fearing possible reprisals or repercussions in their countries, asked that their speeches not be publicized, Vatican sources said. The bishops, one from a Soviet republic and another from a non-Communist dictatorship, spoke of "extremely difficult conditions" the church and its followers are facing in their countries, the sources said.

Malone said he was encouraged with the synod, the dominant theme of which appeared to be "universal support for Vatican II — universal agreement that the council was and remains a great gift of God to the church."

That assessment, Malone said, "seems to be coupled with realistic recognition of the many questions and problems that we have 20 years after the council."

But Malone said the problems "are not the result of Vatican II but rather of cultural forces impacting on the church in various parts off the world, along with the fact that there are some mistakes and aberrations in the implementation of the council."

Astronauts race through pyramid construction

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Two spacewalking astronauts raced through the assembly of a 45-foot beam and a pyramid-shaped structure in the cargo bay of shuttle Atlantis on Friday in a test of construction techniques that future homesteaders may use to build villages in orbit.

Sherwood Spring and Jerry Ross completed their work so swiftly they added extra chores to their 5-hour, 32-minute spacewalk.

"It all worked as advertised," said Spring, and Ross agreed, noting: "There were no surprises at all. The learning curve...was pretty dramatic."

The spacewalk began at 4:36 p.m. EST when the spacesuited astronauts drifted into the cargo bay and ended at 10:08 p.m.

Assembly of the long beam took less than 40 minutes and one of eight assemblies of the 12-foot pyramid only 11 minutes.

This was much faster than experts had predicted, and Mission Control said the spacewalkers were an hour ahead of schedule at one point, despite breaks to enjoy the view from their 220-mile-high construction site.

The beam was assembled from 93 aluminum tubular struts that snap together like Tinkertoys. The astronauts used six similar, but longer, struts to build a pyramid-shaped lattic. Both structures were put together and then quickly taken apart.

Six assembly-disassembly cycles were planned for the pyramid, but the astronauts worked so swiftly that they performed eight.

At some points during the work, the astronauts could be heard gasping, but a flight surgeon in Mission Control said the stress was "unremarkable" and comparable to previous spacewalks.

Just before the astronauts re-entered the spacecraft, Spring released by hand 35-pound, aluminum satellite covered with reflectors. Mission Commander Brewster Shaw then used the satellite as a target to test a new auto pilot system on Atlantis. He flew the spacecraft within 35 feet the 15-inch aluminum sphere.

Assembly of the beam and pyramid went smoothly from the beginning and the astronauts picked up speed with each practice.

"This is making out pretty slick," said Spring. "This is pretty good." Earlier, he noted, "This is amazing, absolutely amazing."

"These gloves really have a good grip," said Ross. "It works super."

"You guys are doing great," said Mission Control.

After building the beam once, the astronauts immediately began taking it apart, and reported that disassembly went even faster. In 85 minutes, they completed one entire cycle of construction and disassembly and started on the pyramid.

Television views showed Ross standing on one side of a platform with a rack of struts and Spring at the other side with another rack. Spring would snap yellow-coated struts into place, building one side of a segment, or bay, and Ross then would rotate the platform and secure other struts. When the bay was completed, they slid it upward and started building another segment attached to the first.

The completed beam had 10 bays, and Spring told Mission Control, "For your information, the first bay took two minutes, 30 seconds."

Later, the astronauts got even faster.

Eventually, the beam reached the height of a four-story building.

Each of the bays had nine struts, which are 1-inch diameter tubular bars 4½ and 6 feet long. Both ends of each strut had sockets and spring-powered sleeves. The sockets mated to each other to form rigid joints. No tools were needed.

Several times the astronauts paused to look at the Earth below and one noted, "Ahhhhh, that's beautiful."

"We envy you your view," said Mission Control.

"What are you smiling about, Woody," Ross said, kidding Spring about their excitement at walking in space.

As the spacecraft passed over west Africa, Spring noted, "There are fires down there. Lots of them."

Experts hope that the spacewalk and a similar one planned for Sunday will demonstrate the ability of astronauts to join laboratories, living quarters and power modules to create space stations and even communities in orbit.

"We can carry the modules for a space station into orbit, but we've got to know how to build beams that will hold them all together," said Ross in a pre-mission interview. "That's why we're doing this space walk."

During the space walk, the astronauts assembled the pyramid with their feet anchored and while floating free, and detached the beam and the pyramid and move them about while standing on the end of Atlantis' robot arm.

Men hospitalized in separat e accidents

From Staff Reports

Two men remain hospitalized after two separate accidents, according to reports from the Department of Public Safety.

An 18-year-old man was listed in stable condition at Midland Memorial Hospital Friday night following a two-car accident that morning.

Kevin G. Wilson was admitted about 2:30 a.m. in serious condition with internal injuries, according to the DPS.

According to reports, the accident occurred near Highway 80 and County Road 1290 when Wilson's vehicle, a 1980 Honda, was rear-ended by a 1984 Oldsmobile driven by Joel Brent Howard of Big Spring.

Reports said that both cars were eastbound on Highway 80 when Wilson stopped at a traffic signal and was struck by Howard.

In another two-car accident Friday evening, a Midland man was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital with back and neck injuries. He was listed in good condition.

Injured was Charles Ray Bagwell, 39, of Midland, said reports.

The accident occurred at 6:40 p.m. 3.5 miles south of Interstate-20 on State Highway 349 when Bagwell, driving a 1977 Chevrolet pickup struck the rear end of a 1981 GMC pickup driven by Ricky Lee Minica of Midland.

Both vehicles were northbound. No seatbelts were worn.

The Midland Fire Department responded to a car fire Friday afternoon, according to reports.

Firemen arrived to find the vehicle, a 1973 Buick, blazing at 5009 Rio Grande. The car, owned by Bruce White of 800 Boyd, sustained heavy damage under the hood. The fire was thought to have originated from an electrical short in the engine.

The blaze was extinguished in 30 minutes.

Midland Police Department responded to a residential burglary early Friday, said reports.

Troy Louis of 102 S. Lamesa told officers that someone had broken into the residence through the front window and stolen more than $10,000 of items including a stereo, jewelry, microwave oven and cash.

Also reported was an auto theft at 405 N. Carrizo. The car, belonging to John Vigil, was reported stolen at 1:57 Friday.

Officers also responded to a report of criminal mischief. According to reports, two windows of The Summit Building, 300 N. Marienfield, were shot out sometime around 11:30 a.m.

STORMS

Huron, S.D., already had measured 28.4 inches of snow this month, a record accumulation for November, and the foot of snow on the ground at Boise, Idaho, including a half-foot that fell Thursday, was the most at any one time during any November on record. Usually rainy Seattle had gotten 17.4 inches since the first of two storms struck a week ago Thursday.

But in Upper Michigan, where snowstorms are fueled by moisture from Lake Superior, the weather service said Friday that the Houghton County Airport had reached a record November snowfall of 57.8 inches.

The Idaho Fish and Game Department ordered an immediate end to the pheasant season in eastern Idaho, two days early, because of the weather.

Elsewhere, Southern California got up to 1½ inches of rain that caused minor mudslides in Ventura County and raised the threat of serious slides on hillsides denuded by brush and forest fires earlier in the year, the weather service said.

The storms knocked out power to more than 85,000 customers from Los Angeles to Bakersfield, and about 42,000 still lacked power after nightfall.

A 10-car pileup on the San Bernardino Freeway in El Monte during the rain storm left three people injured. A 120-foot wood-hull sailboat broke loose from its anchor in the storm off Dana Point in Orange County, went aground on a rocky area and was pounded by waves until it broke up and sank. One passenger was suffered a concussion after she was struck by falling rigging.

In Truckee, Calif., a skier was killed Friday after he and another man were trapped in a snow slide at Sugar Bowl ski resort. The 19-year-old skier who survived was able to "swim" out from under the snow, Placer County sheriff's Lt. Nick Mileur said. It took rescuers using probes about an 80 minutes to locate the second skier, who died at a hospital, Mileur said.

In the East, parts of Ohio have had the wettest November on record with up to 10 inches of rain, and crews worked Friday to clear mud and rocks from a highway along the Ohio River, across from Moundsville, W.Va., that has been closed since Tuesday.

State highway spokesman Steve Fought said officials hope to have the highway reopened by Sunday night "and that's optimistic."

Downstream along the Ohio River, rising water prompted Marietta merchants to move their merchandise and Portsmouth police to close roads and bridges.

Australia strikes back at Britain with typical bluntness, bigness

By MARCUS ELIASON

LONDON (AP) — The empire has struck back, with all the hallmarks of the Australian stereotype Britons love and hate — bigness, bluntness, brashness and beer.

Two centuries after Capt. James Cook, the explorer, claimed the continent of Australia for Britain, its colonial sons are back and claiming a chunk of the mother country, from boardrooms to TV studios, from the movie industry to the publishing world.

In a move that has stunned London's financial world, Australian brewery head John Elliott is bidding for a company four times the size of his own in the biggest corporate takeover attempt in British history.

Elliott's $2.57 billion bid for Allied-Lyons, the British brewery, spirits and foodstuffs giant, seems to prop up all the stereotypes in the endless conflict between "loudmouthed Aussies" and "Pommie snobs."

In one corner is Elliott, a former rugby star who sips his beer straight from the can and scorns his English rival as "antiquated," "second-best" and crying out for an injection of Australian brio.

His adversary is Sir Derrick Holden-Brown, who prefers claret to beer and dismisses Elliott's bid as "ludicrously inadequate."

"Stereotypes are what Australia and Britain are all about," observed Yvonne Preston, London-based correspondent of Australia's Sydney Morning Herald.

Elliott's Elders IXL company markets Fosters beer in Britain with TV commercials featuring Australian comedian Paul Hogan at the London ballet, outside the Tower of London or at stuffy wine-tasting sessions. He drawls wryly about the idiosyncrasies of his English hosts between sips from his mug of "golden gargle."

Australia began its colonial history as a British penal colony.

For a century, all the British saw of Australia was its visiting cricket players and, in wars, its soldiers. While Australia's population swelled with British immigrants lured by $25 ship fares, only in the early 1960s did Australians begin flocking here as tourists, roots-seekers or artists craving recognition.

"Contact with the sophisticated Londoner left Australians with a deeply imbedded cultural cringe which is only now wearing off," Philip Knightley wrote earlier this year in The Times.

"In the more sensitive Australian, the cringe expressed itself in a willingness to denigrate everything Australian. The less sensitive Australian compensated for his cringe by loud, aggressive behavior."

England was swamped with jokes about the Australian in his bush hat, corks dangling from the brim to keep away the flies. Britain's satirical Monty Python troupe spoofed such things as an Australian philosophy class debating whether Socrates could out-drink Schopenhauer.

Robert Mackie, a lecturer at the Australian Studies Center in London, says the stereotypes linger, "but the cultural cringe is dead and in its place you have a much more assertive culture."

Australian movies, rock music, TV films and literature have done much to straighten out the cringe, he said.

"Illywhacker," by Australian Peter Carey, was a candidate for this year's Booker Prize, Britain's most prestigious literary award. "Mad Max: Beyond Thunderdome" is London's top movie hit — the latest of numerous Australian films to win international acclaim in the past decade.

A frequent theme of Australian drama and film is the notion of the Aussie doing the English gentleman's dirty work.

In World War I, thousands of Australians were killed in the assault on Gallipoli, in Turkey, which Australians blame on the ineptitude of British commanders.

In 1933, charges that the English cricket team purposely tried to hit an Australian batsman sparked riots in Australia and almost caused a diplomatic rift.

In 1975, Australia went into an uproar when Sir John Kerr, Queen Elizabeth II's governor-general in Australia, resolved a deadlock in Parliament by dismissing the elected Labor Party government of Prime Minister Gough Whitlam.

No longer do Australian writers send their manuscripts to London; London publishers go to them.

British television's most sophisticated talkshow host is Clive James, a rough-hewn, sharp-tongued Australian who can chat with equal felicity about James Joyce and Auguste Renoir.

Device may have caused explosion

LAKE WORTH (AP) — Investigators said Friday they believe an explosion that ripped through a mobile home and killed three family members was ignited by an explosive device.

"I don't want to say bomb, but a destructive device — something that would cause an explosion," said Lou Iliano, resident agent-in-charge with the Fort Worth Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The bureau Friday joined the Tarrant County sheriff's office and fire marshal's office in investigating the Thursday evening blast.

Although natural gas in a floor furnace originally was suspected as the cause of the explosion and fire, the ATF was called in shortly after midnight Thursday to assist with the investigation into a possible bomb.

Iliano declined to say what kinds of materials were found, but said the items will be sent to the ATF laboratory in San Francisco for analysis.

"We have no motives or suspects — none," he said Friday. "We need anything we can get. We'll be talking to everybody in the neighborhood on what they heard, what they saw."

Dead were Joe Blount, his daughter, Angela, 15, and his nephew, whose identity was not available.

Two others in the trailer were injured. Blount's son, 14-year-old Robert Blount, was in serious condition Friday at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth. A next-door neighbor, James Walls, 25, was treated at John Peter Smith and released Friday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The trailer was destroyed in the fire, which burned for nearly an hour.

"When it was detonated, we're pretty sure it detonated inside the trailer," Iliano said of the explosive device.

Firefighters said the victims died from flash burns and probably died instantly.

Tim Tortella, 29, who lives behind the Blount trailer in the 40-trailer mobile home park, was watching television when he heard the explosion.

"It sounded like a stick of dynamite going off," he said. "It shook my house when it went off."

About 40 firefighters from the Lake Worth, Fort Worth and Spillway fire departments responded to the explosion.

UT may be dropping Bible classes

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas officials, concerned by questions raised in an attorney general's opinion, are considering whether to change Bible classes or drop them from the spring curriculum.

The opinion by Attorney General Jim Mattox's office was requested by North Texas State University and released in September. It says the selection process and salary arrangements for Bible professors may violate the Constitution's required separation of church and state.

Bible class professors are recommended by a Bible chair search committee but must be approved by the college administration before they are allowed to teach.

The professors' salaries are paid with funds from churches and religious organizations. All classes are held off campus.

"We are trying to determine exactly what effect the attorney general's opinion has on us. We're unsure if changes are needed and if so, to what extent," said Patricia Ohlendorf, a UT legal counsel.

The university could drop the classes or continue them on a non-credit basis, Ms. Ohlendorf said.

"The university is assessing this relationship in light of the opinion," said Allan McNicol, chairman of the Biblical Studies Association, an organization of Bible chair professors approved by UT.

"No decision has been made about the future of the instruction. But some changes will be made," McNicol said.

McNicol said 550 students are enrolled in the 22 elective Bible classes offered through UT. He said most of the classes are historical in nature and most carry three semester hours of credit.

McNicol said some of the 13 professors are ordained. However, most are not practicing clergy but professors who also teach non-religious course at UT.

Ervin Crain, a minister at University Christian Church near the campus, said the UT classes he teaches at the church are academic, not devotional, and no attempt is made to convert students to a particular faith.

"These are not advanced Sunday school lessons. They are on an academic level. There is no attempt at indoctrination or persuasion," he said.

Crain said he is puzzled why a perception of a constitutional problem would suddenly emerge in an 80-year-old program.

"I am astounded that after so long, this issue would come up," he said.

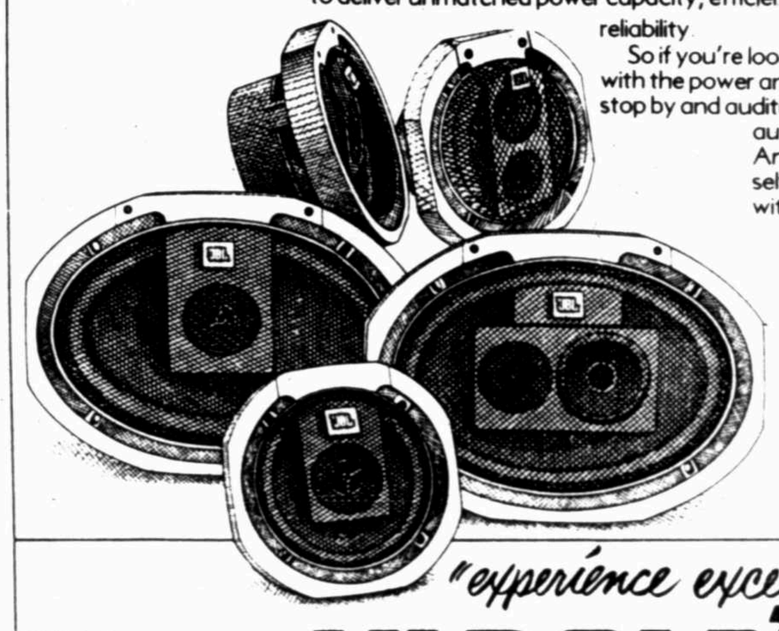

Crain said he sees no violation of church-state separation, since UT officials have the power to approve or reject any Bible chair appointees.

Laxalt won't respond to report concerning casino family owned

Sen. Paul Laxalt

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A 12-year-old report says investigators were told that an underworld figure received money skimmed from a casino when it was owned by the family of Sen. Paul Laxalt, and the senator refused to answer questions about the allegations last month, court documents show.

Laxalt's refusal, at his attorney's directions, appears in transcripts of a four-day deposition taken in Washington, D.C., in October as part of the senator's $250 million libel suit against the Sacramento-based McClatchy newspaper group.

The deposition is on file in U.S. District Court here, where the libel suit was filed.

During the deposition, McClatchy attorney James Brosnahan questioned Laxalt about a Nov. 29, 1973, report by the Organized Crime and Criminal Intelligence Branch of the California Department of Justice.

The report said employees at Ormsby House casino indicated that 15 percent to 25 percent was skimmed from gaming tables by a pit boss. Skimming is the illegal practice of removing a casino's profits before taxes are paid.

The report, which did not identify the employees, said the money was picked up by Rocco Youse, identified as a front for reputed organized crime figure Frank Balistrieri.

Laxalt's attorney, Jim Beasley, refused to allow his client to answer questions about the document.

There was no answer to telephone calls Friday to Laxalt's home or offices or to his local attorney.

Beasley did let the senator respond when Brosnahan asked whether there was something in the way the Carson City hotel-casino was managed that would prevent such a skim.

"I would hope so," Laxalt answered.

"Do you know what that would be?" Brosnahan asked.

"Internal controls and honesty of your employees," Laxalt replied.

Laxalt's family bought the casino in the early 1970s after Laxalt stepped down following one term as Nevada governor. The family sold the casino in the mid 1970s.

Laxalt has been a close friend and adviser to President Reagan since Reagan was governor of California and Laxalt was chief executive in adjoining Nevada. He is general chairman of the Republican Party, a new position to which he was appointed in early 1983 with the urging of the White House.

He was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1974 and announced earlier this year he would not seek a third term, saying he wanted to spend more time with his family. He said the lawsuit was not a factor in his decision.

Laxalt filed the suit following publication of a 1983 article in the Sacramento Bee which said the Internal Revenue Service had developed evidence that at least $2 million was illegally skimmed from the family's casino in the early 1970s.

The newspaper reported that the money that was skimmed went to organized crime figures. Laxalt denied the charges.

Body of woman killed in hijacking flown home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The flag draped casket of Scarlett Marie Rogenkamp, the only American killed during last week's hijacking of an Egyptair jetliner, was brought home Friday and unloaded without ceremony from an airliner.

A light rain was falling as her casket was gently lowered from a Pan American World Airways flight from London. The casket was placed inside an enclosed luggage carrier and driven away.

The 38-year-old woman, a civilian who worked for the U.S. Air Force in Athens, was shot in the head and her body thrown from hijacked Egyptair jetliner after it landed in Malta on Saturday.

Fifty-eight other people, including all but one of the suspected hijackers, were killed after Egyptian commandos stormed the plane.

The woman's parents, Vernon and Heddy Peterson, live in Oceanside, Calif., about 40 miles north of San Diego. Funeral services were planned for today at Saint Mary's Star of the Sea Roman Catholic Church.

Ms. Rogenkamp's parents were at their home Friday, and no other member of the family made themselves available for reporters. Relatives have asked police to keep a 100-yard perimeter around the church during the funeral.

Ms. Rogenkamp had worked as an industrial properties management specialist at the Air Force Contract Management Center detachment at Tanagra Air Base near Athens.

Family members have said they believed Ms. Rogenkamp was singled out by the hijackers because she was an American.

Disaster books a thriving medium

CONNEAUTVILLE, Pa. (AP) — The memories are still painful for many. Yet survivors of a string of savage wind storms are clamoring for copies of a book named "Killer Tornados: May 31, 1985" and contributing to a new, profitable literary form.

Just in Albion, Pa., where last spring's ferocious tornadoes killed nine people and injured dozens more, the first 500 copies were snapped up at Loomis' Newstand in less than three hours.

"We figured it was a way to generate some money for the victims," said H. Jesse Haas, 31, editor of The Conneautville Courier, who put together the 128-page, soft-cover book. "We didn't envision selling as much as we did....They went like hotcakes when they first came out."

After the first printing, and again after the second and third, Jesse's father, Courier publisher Herbert O. Haas, 55, figured, "it has to tail off."

"But it hasn't," he said, smiling and shaking his head.

So far, more than 26,000 copies of the $6.95 book have been distributed around the country.

A dollar from each copy goes into a fund to help tornado victims, a second dollar goes to the seller and the remaining $4.95 per copy goes to the Courier, about two-thirds of which goes toward production and delivery costs, according to Jesse Haas. The Haases recently presented an initial check for $7,000 to relief agencies.

Eighty-eight people died in the May 31 tornadoes that crashed through eastern Ohio, western Pennsylvania and parts of New York State and Ontario, Canada.

THE ELDER HAAS said he was initially skeptical about his son's idea for a book.

"You hate to take advantage of other people's misfortune. We weren't trying to do that. That's one reason we said we would donate a portion to the tornado victims," the elder Haas explained, waving a plastic-tipped cigar.

Accounting for about a fourth of the sales have been the Amish, who saw advertisements for "Killer Tornados" in their national weekly newspaper, The Budget. Many Amish families live in western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio.

"They feel they're helping with some of the (rebuilding) expense," said Verna Kline, 40, assistant manager of Mount Hope Fabrics in Mount Hope, Ohio, a predominantly Amish community. The shop has sold about 500 copies.

Jesse Haas contacted northwestern Pennsylvania newspapers for stories and photographs of the devastation to use with his own. He arranged the material in magazine format, eliminating "the gory stuff," and printed 10,000 copies at The Courier office.

Heralded only by newspaper advertisements and posters, "Killer Tornados" appeared this summer at newstands and grocery stores.

An additional 10,000 copies were printed in August. The next month, another 10,000 rolled off the presses.

AP Laserphoto

H. Jesse Haas, editor of "Killer Tornados — May 31, 1985," sits in his office in Conneautville, Pa. with issues of the book.

ALSO ENJOYING SUCCESS with the "disaster book" format is C.F. Boone, 61, a business publisher in Alto, N.M. Since 1970, he has published 34 books about tornadoes, hurricanes, floods and earthquakes, using a team of reporters and photographers and relying on local newspapers for advertising help.

Boone says he sells an average 25,000 books per disaster, usually donating 5 percent of the cover price to the Red Cross, the Salvation Army or local disaster funds.

His best seller is an account of the Mount St. Helens eruption — 476,000 books were sold for $4.95 apiece.

Boone's latest project, a record of Mexico City's earthquakes last month, is due out in towns along the U.S.-Mexican border in a few weeks in both English and Spanish.

"It's a profitable business or I wouldn't be doing it," he said. "A lot of people have copied me, but I don't mind."

Some people think publishers like Boone and Haas are in it for profit and sensationalism.

"I'M NOT DOING anything different than any newspaper or TV station. I'm reporting the news in a permanent book form," Boone said. "The thing is, I'd never publish the books if there wasn't a demand for them."

Acculturation can be bad for Hispanics' health

By KATHRYN BAKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — A caution for Mexican-Americans: becoming more Anglo could be hazardous to your health.

That is one message that can be gleaned from preliminary findings of an ambitious Hispanic health survey presented by researchers in a series of talks recently at the convention of the American Public Health Association.

Thousands of Mexican-Americans living in the Southwest were interviewed and examined in 1982 and 1983 for information on such potential health risks as smoking, cholesterol levels, hypertension, overweight and contraception.

The preliminary findings showed, with some variance for age groups and sex, that Mexican-Americans who identified more with Mexican culture smoked less, weighed less, had lower cholesterol and less hypertension.

Public Health specialist Robinson Fulwood, who presented the paper on cholesterol levels, said preliminary findings showed that Mexican-Americans generally had lower cholesterol levels than whites, who had the highest, or blacks.

The level of cholesterol increased as the Mexican-Americans became more "acculturated," or adopted lifestyles more like their non-Hispanic neighbors.

The acculturation score was based on questions about language understood, used and preferred; ethnic identity; ethnic identity of parents; place of birth; and where one's parents were born.

"Mexican-Americans who were less acculturated, poor and less educated had lower mean serum cholesterol levels. Why this is true needs to be examined and will be the subject of future analyses," said Fulwood.

The results of the Hispanic health survey were compared with results of a similar national health survey conducted in the late 1970s, the researchers said.

Mexican-American women had higher cholesterol levels than Mexican-American men, which Fulwood theorized could be related to stress.

"We can look at the lifestyle of Mexican-American women...being enclosed in the home they tend to be quite depressed sometimes," he said.

Mexican-Americans also had generally lower hypertension rates than non-Hispanics, said the researchers.

Hypertension was higher among Mexican-American males than females, but the females had greater awareness of their condition, the study suggested.

The acculturation factor did not affect hypertension among Mexican-American women, but hypertension increased among Mexican-American men who considered themselves in the mid-range, or "bi-cultural."

Of Mexican-American men, who were almost twice as likely to smoke as Mexican-American women, 80 percent in the 55-70 age range said they had smoked at some time in their lives.

Current smokers comprised 43 percent of Mexican-American men, compared to about 40 percent for whites. But smoking rates were about 10 percent higher for blacks. Mexican-American women smoked less than non-Hispanic women.

And, said study author Marilyn McMillen, "Mexican-American men and women smoke substantially fewer cigarettes than their non-Hispanic white counterparts."

Mexican-American men smoked about 12 cigarettes per day compared to 24 for whites. For women, it was nine a day for Mexican-Americans versus 20 for whites.

Mexican-American women smoked more as they became more Americanized, from 19 percent for the most Mexican-oriented to 28 percent for the most U.S. culture-oriented, "suggesting that as Mexican-American women adopt U.S. lifestyles, they're more likely to smoke cigarettes and become at higher risk of developing smoking related diseases," said Ms. McMillen.

There was "no such clear trend" for Mexican-American men, she said.

Smoking rates for both groups went down with higher education.

One in three Mexican-Americans is overweight, compared to one in four for Anglos and blacks, according to the research.

Mexican-American men who were bi-cultural or more U.S. culture-oriented were about 10 percent more likely to be overweight. The least acculturated Mexican-American women had the highest level of overweight, which dropped for the bi-cultural group, then went up again for the most acculturated.

A study of the health of Mexican-American children showed that they have about the same rate of hearing and vision problems as white or black children, but are better immunized. But the Mexican-American children reported more bad or missing teeth than whites.

The study of contraception and sterilization showed that Mexican-American women use oral contraceptives and have tubal ligations at about the same rate as their non-Hispanic counterparts, but use of the pill increased with acculturation levels.

'Elbow grease, tender loving care' transform post office

By TOMMY THOMPSON

WILDORADO, Texas (AP) — The first post office in this tiny Oldham County hamlet has been transformed from a shack to a combination gift shop-barbecue restaurant after what owners Comer and Joan Cresap say was more than two years of "elbow grease and tender loving care."

Country Fare Bar-B-Que/Gifts straddles the south side of Interstate 40 near the intersection of the highway and Farm to Market Road 809 in what technically could be called downtown Wildorado. The revamped house joins Jesse's Cafe, a grain elevator and a few service stations as just about the only commercial businesses in town.

The Cresaps said they bought the house from the Robert Fulton family in 1982 after it had been abandoned 20 years. It was hauled over I-40 to its present site in the spring of 1983.

"It cost us more to move than to buy," Mrs. Cresap said. She said local historians have said the house, originally located a mile north of I-40, is the oldest one in Wildorado still standing.

"It was owned by William Timmons, a cowboy with Charles Goodnight," Mrs. Cresap said. "After he lived in it, it was probably the first post office in Wildorado. It was a post office before there was a Wildorado."

A look inside the building today would surprise Timmons. The two-story house has been lovingly restored by the Cresaps and looks like a museum piece, demonstrating turn of the century architecture and furnishings.

Cresap, who has held down a full-time job at Southwestern Portland Cement in Bushland since he began work on the house, also has built a barbecue pit next to the restaurant.

Many of the house's floors are the original surfaces, and Cresap said the only addition to the home has been a bathroom in the back that replaced a dilapidated porch. The upstairs was the most difficult part, said Mrs. Cresap, "since it wasn't used much and was mainly cobwebs and dirt."

Traditional wallpaper covers most walls, along with old documents such as a draft note from now-defunct Wildorado State Bank and Amarillo Daily News articles on the history of Wildorado.

Deaf teen-age girl likes 'mainstream' life

By JAN TOMAS

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Patricia Haro pulled gently on her friend's sleeve in the hallway at San Angelo Central High School. She got a warm smile in return.

That's one way Miss Haro, who is deaf, communicates with her friends. Because she has never heard language sounds, she is mute, although she is learning to read lips and vocalize. She communicates with sign language, gestures and intense facial expressions.

Her life, though silent, seems similar to that of any teen-ager. With her friends, Miss Haro goes to movies, shops for clothes and talks about boys.

"It's as easy to talk to Patricia as anyone else," said Heather Dendy, her classmate. "We talk about guys and walk around campus. Besides, she's nice." Miss Dendy gave her friend a hug as she spoke.

Miss Haro is one of five hearing impaired students at Central who have been mainstreamed into regular classes. This is the first year the students have had the use of interpreters in their high school classes.

Through an interpreter, Miss Haro said she is more comfortable in a hearing world. "My friends understand me without talking. Besides, I can practice speech reading easier."

The 16-year-old's favorite activity is the high school pep squad. "They make a lot of noise," Miss Haro signed. She explained she is able to hear some sounds, such as the happy cheering of the pep squad, or the loud music of a band. She is also active in her church's youth group.

"She is very social and outgoing," said Lucy Dunn, who is the hearing impaired teacher at Central. "She has a good self-concept. Sometimes she gets frustrated when people don't understand her. She may be put out for the moment, but she goes on, she doesn't give up. She takes it in her stride."

The student recalled when she attended her first regular class in the seventh grade at John Glenn Junior High School. "I tried to look around the building. It was hard to find things. My mother helped me find the class."

The year was a hard one for Miss Haro. Her classmates didn't understand when she tried to communicate. "I wanted to try, try and try to get along," she said. Mostly, the students wrote notes to her, a last-ditch form of communication for the youngster, who prefers to sign or use gestures. Her grades fell.

During that year, Miss Haro joined a sign language club. Some of her hearing classmates joined to be able to communicate, she said.

The eighth grade was easier, she said. Classmates attempted to talk to her without signing. Her grades improved.

Miss Haro has always attended public school and special classes. When it became time for school, her parents found there were no facilities for their daughter in Sonora where they lived. They could have sent her to a school for the hearing impaired in Austin or San Antonio. "But we wanted to be a family and stay together, so we moved here," Connie Haro said. Mrs. Haro is a teacher's aide.

Once in a while, the Haro family has asked their daughter if she wanted to go to school in Austin. "She never wanted to go," Mrs. Haro said.

When Miss Haro was growing up, her mother refused to protect her. "I let her ride bikes or go to the store to buy a soda."

There is a close relationship between the mother and daughter, according to Mrs. Haro. "There are times we can communicate the same as with my hearing children."

Pelicans dodge boars, bullets in yearly trek

By RUTH SINAI

HULA RESERVE, Israel (AP) — Having dodged wild boar in Romania and the bullets of Lebanese militiamen, thousands of pelicans are gliding into Israel for a refueling stop on their migratory passage from Europe to Africa.

This marshy wildlife sanctuary in northern Israel hosts the fish-eating fowl twice a year, serving as a halfway haven on the birds' 5,000-mile journey from nesting grounds in Romania to vacation spots on the lakes of Africa.

Navigating with the mysterious skills developed over the centuries, the weary birds arrive here in flocks of thousands, flying in near-military formations to land among the reeds on the fish-filled lakes and canals.

The birds arrive in Kenya by January and start leaving for the return trip to their European nesting grounds in February. "It's tough — 16,000 kilometers (10,000 miles) of arduous travel, and only a few months of rest and procreation," said Eytan Glusman, director of the Hula Reserve sanctuary.

Millions of fish and about 70 species of birds live at the santuary.

"This is a great restaurant for them," Glusman said of the pelicans. "We keep the fish here especially for them, but they have to work harder here to get at them because the water surface is far bigger than in the fish ponds," which are run as commercial ventures.

The pelicans' hardships begin in the delta of the Danube River on the Romanian-Soviet border, where wild boar and dogs prey on the helpless chicks. About 70 percent of the pelicans die in the first year of their lives, said Glusman.

The first flocks take off from Romania in May, crossing Balkan skies to Turkey and on to Lebanon, where militiamen have been known to use them for target practice.

From there they "hitch a ride" on the hot air streams that are a feature of the Syrian-African Rift that extends from Turkey to southern Africa.

But the Holy Land is not devoid of peril for the pelicans, who have run afoul of farmers and the army.

Several years ago a pelican was sucked into the engine of an Israeli air force jetfighter, causing the plane to crash into a mountain. Since then, planes are not allowed to fly over pelican territory at low altitudes, said Glusman.

Farmers in northern Israel devised several means of scaring off gourmand fowl who raid the fish ponds, but not until the pelicans polished off last year's entire fish crop at Sassa, a nearby kibbutz, Glusman said.

The methods include firing gas-filled "scare cartridges" from hunting rifles to warn off the birds and posting sentries near the ponds.

But Glusman said the most effective method is stretching wires over the ponds to prevent the birds from taking off after their meal. The pelicans, which require about 50 yards of waterway to gather sufficient speed for takeoff, see the wires on their reconnaissance survey of the pond and don't land.

Israel breaks out of political, social isolation

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — "The Poles are Coming, The Poles are Coming."

The headline in the daily Haaretz newspaper proclaimed the imminent arrival of two Polish productions: "Mannequin," a modern opera, and the "Dead Class" directed by Tadeusz Kantor.

The visits, the fruit of an agreement in October with Poland on low-level exchanges, are signs of Israel's gradual progress in breaking out of the political and economic isolation that followed the Arab-Israeli wars of 1967 and 1973.

"Israel's isolation is changing. There is a new atmosphere, a new attitude which can be seen in all parts of the world," said Ehud Gol, deputy spokesman of the foreign ministry.

During the U.N. General Assembly meeting in New York last month, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir talked with a record 37 foreign ministers, including seven from countries that do not have diplomatic relations with Israel.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres met with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, and Israeli newspapers published reports forecasting a thaw with the East Bloc.

"I believe that as a result of the positions taken by Israel, Israel's international standing has been greatly strengthened," Peres told Parliament on Oct. 29.

Specifically, Israeli officials say the troop withdrawal from Lebanon last June and the movement towards peace talks with Jordan were big steps toward a better image.

The Palestine Liberation Organization's embarrassment over the Achille Lauro hijacking and the declining influence of Arab oil producers are also seen as sapping Third World support for the Arab boycott of Israel.

Israel's Oct. 1 raid of Arafat's headquarters in Tunisia, in which more than 70 people died, was widely condemned. European Community foreign ministers meeting in Luxembourg said the raid violated the sovereignty of a moderate Arab country and threatened efforts to start an Arab-Israeli peace process.

Although even Washington came around to disapproving of the strike on Tunisia, Israeli officials believe the damage was quickly overshadowed by the hijacking of the Italian cruise liner by Palestinian guerrillas.

Israel's occupation policies in the West Bank, Gaza Strip and Golan Heights have been a continuing focus of international concern.

But the balance has been in Israel's favor recently:

— In Europe, Peres said France has de-emphasized the role of the PLO and that Israel was not criticized as much in international forums. Officials also noted that Spain is expected to establish ties with Israel in early 1986.

— A total of 28 African nations broke with Israel, but officials say disillusionment with promised aid from Arab oil countries is winning back old friends.

Tainted turkeys ruin some people's holiday

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Distribution of a batch of tainted turkeys that spoiled Thanksgiving dinner for some New York and New Jersey residents was probably limited to that area, a poultry processing plant official said Friday.

The Foodtown supermarket chain ordered a recall Wednesday of turkeys processed at Shenandoah Products Corp. after two customers complained of a foul odor emanating from their turkeys.

Hundreds of customers returned their turkeys to Foodtown stores in the two states Thursday, but supermarket officials said they did not know how many of the birds were tainted. Officials estimated that about 200 spoiled turkeys were distributed to 138 Foodtown stores only in New York and New Jersey.

The tainted birds carried the packaging seal "P286," a tag given to all turkeys processed at Shenandoah's Washington, Ind., plant, said Shenandoah spokesman James Blakenship.

Shenandoah sells more than 5 million turkeys a year to supermarkets and poultry distributors across the country. But officials believe only a shipment to Twin County Grocers Inc., which distributed the turkeys for Foodtown in New York and New Jersey, was spoiled because there were no other complaints, Blakenship said.

Blakenship said Shenandoah officials assumed the turkeys, which are shipped in refrigerated trucks, were spoiled after leaving the processing plant.

"Most likely it was a warm temperature at some point," Blakenship said.

The 12- and 14-pound turkeys were processed during the second week of November, he said.

Man finds wife with mail-order-bride scheme

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Tom Williams says he really didn't expect to end up on Phil Donahue's national television show when he came up with his "mail-order bride" idea a couple of months back.

"I stuck a $27.50 ad in the paper to provide women for my men," said Williams, who is building a replica 1800s mining camp as a tourist attraction at Paystreke, 80 miles south of Anchorage.

The ad appeared in September. Then TV networks, magazines and the wire services had stories about Williams and the men at Paystreke. Donahue featured him last week.

"It backfired, I guess," Williams said Tuesday at a news conference he called to announce his engagement to Jill Bandock, one of hundreds of women who answered the call for brides.

Backfired? Williams has received the kind of free publicity that Madison Avenue advertising men dream about. People from all over the country are calling to reserve hotel rooms that haven't been built yet. He has scrapped plans to build a 100-room hotel by 1987 — now it's a 300-room hotel, to be finished by next July.

"Well, it's a good backfire," Williams allowed. "We feel like we should go along with it." But, he added, "If it becomes a nuisance, and it interferes with my business or personal life...then there won't be any more interviews."

Ms. Bandock, 22, of Olympia, Wash., arrived at Paystreke less than three weeks ago. She found an unfinished collection of buildings with no running water, electricity or telephones. She also found Williams, 40, a bear of a man who sports a bushy beard and an oversized Bowie knife on his hip.

"My instincts tell me it's the right decision," Ms. Bandock said Tuesday. "I decided yes, this is the man I'd like to spend the rest of my life with."

Williams had proposed last week on the Donahue show, but Ms. Bandock declined, saying it wasn't the proper time. Tuesday morning, at an Anchorage diner, "She looked at me and said, 'Yes,'" Williams said.

"I said, 'Yes, what?' And she said, 'Yes, I'll marry you!'"

The wedding is set for next September.

Art dealer pleads guilty to evading $4 million in taxes

NEW YORK (AP) — A Manhattan art dealer implicated but not charged in the sex slaying of a fashion design student pleaded guilty Friday to evading more than $4 million in federal income taxes.

Andrew J. Crispo, whose gallery on East 57th Street and Madison Avenue has been closed since February, was released on $300,000 personal recognizance bond.

He faces a maximum of 20 years in prison and $220,000 in fines when sentenced Jan. 27 after pleading guilty to four counts of evading federal taxes before District Judge Leonard B. Sand.

The tax scheme was "an isolated series of incidents," said his attorney Stanley Arkin, but Assistant U.S. Attorney Anne Ryan described it as being "calculated and extremely well thought out."

U.S. Attorney for the Southern District Rudolph Giuliani explained how Crispo — the sole shareholder and owner of Andrew Crispo Art Galleries — carried out the scheme between 1979 and 1982.

Giuliani said Crispo used "bogus invoices that falsely inflated the number of items of artwork sold, thus, on paper, increasing the gallery's costs and hiding corporate profits."

"These bogus invoices were reflected on the corporate books which were then used as the basis for the gallery's tax returns," Giuliani said.

Crispo, 40, will be required to pay at least part of the $4 million in back taxes but the exact amount has not been decided, both sides said.

Earlier this year, Crispo was named by a former employee, Bernard LeGeros, as a participant in the February murder of Norwegian fashion student Eigil Dag Vesti.

LeGeros claimed Crispo was present when Vesti was shot to death after a night of sadomasochistic sex.

NATION IN BRIEF

CDC: Prostitutes played role in disease outbreak

ATLANTA (AP) — Prostitutes played a key role in this year's Boston outbreak of chancroid, a rare sexually transmitted disease, the national Centers for Disease Control said Friday.

The CDC said 53 cases of chancroid were reported in the Boston area between January and September. Just two cases had been reported in Massachusetts in the previous two years.

Thirty-nine of the 53 patients were men, two-thirds of whom reported recent sex with prostitutes, the CDC said in its weekly report. Of the 14 female patients, eight were prostitutes.

"Prostitutes appeared important in transmitting the disease," the CDC said.

The outbreak was stopped through antibiotic treatment of patients and their sex partners.

Kiss costs man his life

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A man who kissed a woman he knew on the cheek and wished her a happy Thanksgiving was followed and killed by the woman's companion, police said.

Investigators said they had no suspects Friday in the Thursday night slaying of Albert Jiles, 20, of New Orleans.

Police said Jiles and two friends were walking in the French Quarter when Jiles saw the woman, kissed her and wished her a happy holiday.

A man who was with the woman took offense and hit Jiles, police said, but Jiles' friends stopped the fight and left with Jiles.

However, they said, the woman's companion followed them and shot Jiles in the shoulder. He died at Charity Hospital.

Official praises talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's trade representative, Clayton Yeutter, on Friday hailed an accord on a new round of international trade talks as an important step toward liberalizing world trade.

The accord was reached Thursday in Geneva by representatives of about 75 countries, including the United States.

Chinese pop singer's arrest foretells uneasy climate for arts

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

PEKING — Authorities have banned one of China's most popular singers from making cassettes or performing in public places at a time of conflicting official signals on artistic freedom.

The decision to place these controls on Zhang Xing, possibly the country's most popular male singer at the moment, was reported to have been made by officials in charge of cultural affairs in the city of Shanghai, where Zhang has been performing.

Shanghai's Liberation Daily recently reported that the singer was arrested there for "seducing and philandering with many women under the guise of courting them." It said Zhang was a "hooligan by nature."

The arrest of Zhang, whose songs seem to be non-political, comes at a time when there appears to be some uncertainty in the Chinese arts world. Currents for greater artistic freedom, as seen in some official commentaries that have praised the great diversity in the arts, have been met by other currents that seem to warn artists against straying too far. Some commentaries have deplored the "corrosive influence of capitalist and feudalist ideology" on arts and culture.

It is unclear where Zhang's arrest fits into this pattern, which has become clearer in recent weeks.

A five-day-long writers' workshop ended in Peking recently with officials calling for more "self-restraint" on the part of China's writers. Writers were urged to explore themes that "serve socialism."

To some observers, these appeals marked a partial retreat from the National Writers' Congress last December at which Hu Qili, a ranking member of the Communist Party Secretariat, pleased writers by saying they must be guaranteed "creative freedom."

In another move, the Peking production of a controversial play that drew sellout crowds earlier this month has been closed. Called "Wo Men," which means "We" in Chinese, the play was remarkably free of propaganda. It described the lives of seven teen-agers who survive bitter hardship in the countryside during the Cultural Revolution of 1966-1976. The play's message is that Chinese youths are vulnerable to the same ills that afflict their counterparts in the West; the Chinese society portrayed is far from ideal.

The play makes clear, too, that a youth who is the son of a high-ranking government official can rise much faster in his profession than others of equal talent.

The most recent sign of a cultural chill came last week when the China Youth Daily newspaper spoke of a campaign against unofficial scandal sheets, describing them as "spiritual rubbish." These words reminded some observers of the 1983 campaign against "spiritual pollution," which intimidated many artists and writers.

In the case of singer Zhang Xing, interviews with other singers in Shanghai and official statements seem to indicate that his troubles related more to his easygoing lifestyle and his high earnings than to the content of his songs. A top-selling cassette of his that has been extremely popular among young people this fall includes a love song praising a beautiful woman. The song is called "I'm Saying Goodbye to You."

The unmarried Zhang is said to have had numerous love affairs. In his 20s, he is reported to be earning money at a rate that exceeded the wildest fantasies of most Chinese.

At a time when the current economic liberalization has come under criticism by some who feel that the policy has gone too far, Zhang's high earnings seemed to draw close scrutiny.

In September, the official magazine Democracy and Law published two letters concerning Zhang Xing. One of them said that a tendency to put money above everything else had reached a "dangerous level" in China.

"Some cultural, propaganda and other units invited Zhang Xing to perform and paid him a considerable sum of money," the letter said. "Some periodicals also gave him too much publicity. This should make us more vigilant."

Most singers in Shanghai who sing in bars, hotels and coffee houses, as well as in concert halls, earn 10 to 30 yuan, or $3.12 to $9.37, for a performance. Zhang Xing was earning 100 yuan, or $31.25, per concert. He also had a two-year contract with a cassette distributor.

South African guerrillas: Mines plantedin 'escalation' of battle

WORLD

South African soldiers stand on a rural farm road behind a landmine that was discovered and diffused after anti-apartheid guerrillas planted the explosives earlier this week, killing one man and wounding seven.

AP Laserphoto

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The main South African guerrilla group said Friday that its men planted land mines and rocketed energy plants this week in a "generalized escalation" of the battle against white rule.

The mines, which killed a man on a tractor and wrecked police and army vehicles, and the rocket attacks Thursday added new elements to South Africa's 15 months of violence.

The attack on the refineries struck at the heart of the country's energy program. Police Commissioner P.J. Coetzee said the four to six rockets missed and the refineries were not shut down.

In a statement telexed to The Associated Press from its offices in Lusaka, Zambia, the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla group said the mines and rockets marked "a generalized escalation of both the political and military struggle against the South African racist regime."

"The ANC vows that it will continue with the struggle to overthrow the apartheid regime and replace it with a united, non-racial, democratic and just society," it said.

The mines were planted on roads that connect vast white-owned farms near the border with black-ruled Zimbabwe. The rocket attacks were on two refineries that extract oil from the nation's vast coal reserves.

More than 800 people, nearly all of them black, have been killed in the 15 months of rioting against apartheid, the official policy that assures domination by South Africa's 5 million whites and denies rights to the 24 million blacks.

Violence was reported in several communities Friday.

Police said black snipers in the Crossroads squatter camp near Cape Town fired on patrolling officers, who responded with shotguns and automatic weapons, killing one man and wounding two.

In nearby Nyanga, a black man was shot dead after policemen "were fired upon," according to the report from national police headquarters in Pretoria.

Government rules bar journalists from covering the unrest independently to confirm police versions of arrests.

The land mines, rocket attacks and recent gun battles such as those near Cape Town mark a change in the character of the anti-apartheid struggle.

It was the ANC's sfirst reported use of mines, which kill at random. They were planted just inside the heavily guarded frontier with Zimbabwe, which the government has considered its most secure.

Police halted all traffic in the area after the explosiions Tuesday and Wednesday, which killed one man and injured seven, and painstakingly swept the dusty rural roads.

The rocket attacks indicate that the insurgents have been able to smuggle in the 122mm rockets despite tight security.

Stones and gasoline bombs have been the traditional weapons of black rioters, but the recent shootouts demonstrate that an increasing number of firearms are turning up in the townships.

Tom Lodge, a political science lecturer at Johannesburg's University of the Witwatersrand and a student of the African National Congress, said the guerrillas appear to be moving toward a tactic of mounting offensives in the countryside while young rioters in urban black townships challenge the police and army.

Lodge, who is white, said rioters have turned from arson to attacking police and taking their weapons, which they call "the disarming of the enemy."

Louis le Grange, minister of law and order, said Friday that police will be pulled off border patrols because they are needed in the townships. The army still patrol the borders, he said.

He said 6,000 of the more than 30,000 policemen currently were on riot duty. Soldiers back them up, but the number assigned is secret.

In its statement, the ANC denied government claims that its guerrillas entered South Africa from Zimbabwe. The sabotuers are "based and operating inside South Africa," it said.

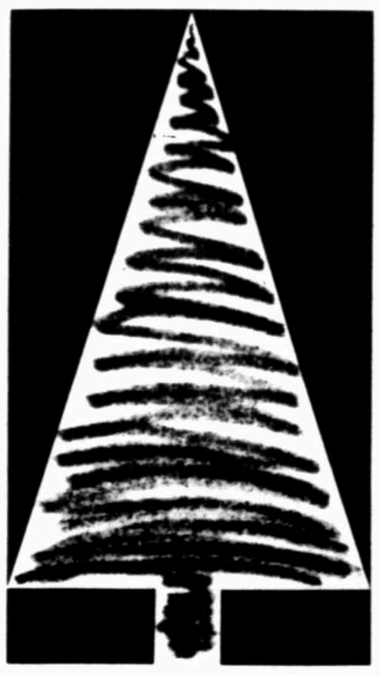

Lodge said the ANC appears to have more men operating inside the country than in previous years.

Foreign Minister Roelof F. Botha said earlier this week that security forces would pursue guerrillas into Zimbabwe if necessary. Zimbabwe denies providing bases to ANC guerrillas.

In the past five years, South African commandos have raided inside Lesotho, Mozambique and Botswana.

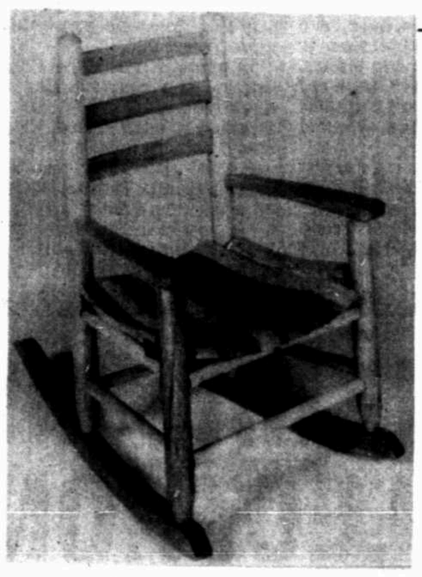

Police said they killed three guerrillas several hours later who were trying to flee in the bush about 60 miles away.

Sailing ship

Texas ranked No. 1 in number of police raids on illicit speed labs

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' ranking as the number one state for raids on speed labs during the last three years reflects a growing problem with the clandestine manufacture of drugs, officials say.

Texas accounted for about 30 percent of the nation's 139 illicit speed labs seized by federal agents in 1984, the Drug Enforcement Administration reports. And for three years, Texas has led the nation in such seizures.

The dubious ranking is due to fast growth in the number of labs, said Bill Pruitt, head of the narcotics office of the state Department of Public Safety.

Speed now ranks with cocaine as the number two drug problem in Texas after marijuana, state law officers said in the report in Friday's Dallas Morning News.

Manufacturers are attracted by the isolated rural areas of the state, where no neighbors are near to object to the stench produced by the drug's production, and by the fact that law enforcement agencies often are spread thin by Texas' sheer size.

"There is nothing to indicate from our standpoint that the problem is diminishing or even leveling off," Pruitt told a congressional subcommittee investigating the manufacture of illegal drugs last September.

"Any kid with brains and a little knowledge of chemistry can make speed," said Bexar County deputy sheriff M.R. Rose.

He calls it a perfect cottage industry, with illegal labs set up in homes or apartments.

"You don't have to set up any foreign connections or worry about smuggling it into the country. And it doesn't take any genius to sell it. The thing about speed is that it's so easy, it's awfully hard to stop."

In the past three years, DPS agents have seized $164 million in drugs from illegal labs. They predict 100 labs will be seized in Texas alone this year compared to 139 seized nationwide last year.

Amphetamine and methamphetamine — known as speed — were once considered the country cousins of the drug trade. But law enforcement officials now say illegal speed labs have grown like mushrooms and the drug is becoming a major law enforcement nightmare.

Speed is easy to make, relatively cheap, the profit margin is high and the labs are easily moved from one location to another, officials say.

The drug's danger is incalculable, they add.

"This is a drug surrounded by violence," Pruitt said. "We've seen labs wired with detonators. We're seeing many, many weapons, including automatic rifles."

From 1982, when state and local officers seized 19 labs statewide, to 1984, when 58 were raided, DPS seizures increased 200 percent.

According to officials, a rudimentary lab can be set up for between $1,000 and $2,000. The wholesale price for a pound of pure speed is about $20,000.

But the profit comes in retail sales. Cut with milk sugar or baby laxative, the drug brings a street price ranging from $100 to $125 a gram. A pound can sell for $56,000.

In Texas, law enforcement officers quickly are learning the scope of the problem.

"We began learning about speed real fast," said Johnson County Sheriff Eddie Boggs, who found out his county was one of the worst in Texas for speed labs after his election last July. Since October 1984, Johnson County officers have raided 31 labs in the rolling ranch land south of Fort Worth.

"We want to send a message to the speed makers that we don't want them here," Boggs said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Highway panel proposes law to license car dealers

AUSTIN (AP) — The state highway commission has proposed rules for implementing a new law to license car dealerships.

"The effect of this legislation is that dealer licensing is no longer an optional provision of law," said Dian Neill, assistant director of the Motor Vehicle Division. "We understand that the legislative intent was to assure the public of some administrative control of car dealers by a state agency and to ensure that such outlets will be accountable to the public."

Prior to enactment of the 1985 law, dealers or individuals selling any number of vehicles registered in their own name were not required to be licensed. The new law requires licensing of all businesses or individuals that regularly sell or exchange vehicles. It exempts persons or firms selling fewer than five vehicles a year.

Rules proposed by the commission require a dealer to either own or have a 12-month lease on the sales lot, which is designed to eliminate weekend parking lot sales.

The commission is expected to adopt the rules by Feb. 1.

Guard foils armed robbery

DALLAS (AP) — A security guard foiled two men's armed robbery attempt Friday morning at a savings and loan office when he shot and wounded one suspect and sent both fleeing on foot, police said.

Two men were arrested later in the day at a north Dallas apartment in connection with the robbery attempt at a University Savings Association branch in Dallas, said Police Cpl. Lloyd Watkins. Formal charges had not been filed against the two Friday evening.

One man was in the Dallas County Jail, and the other was listed in stable condition at Parkland Memorial Hospital after undergoing surgery Friday for a gunshot wound, Watkins said.

The guard surprised two men armed with revolvers after they entered the office about 11:40 a.m. and demanded money from a clerk, Watkins said. The guard fired two shots from a .44 caliber Magnum, striking one of the men.

The guard worked for Smith Security, Watkins said. He would not release the man's name on the request of the guard.

Police seek armed robber

AMARILLO (AP) — Police were searching for a man who walked into a savings and loan, brandished a .45-caliber automatic and escaped with a folder stuffed with cash Friday morning.

"The tellers cooperated and everything happened real briefly," said Ken Bostick, an employee of First Federal Savings and Loan Association. He was probably only in there 20 or 25 seconds.

S&L customer Charles Keaton said the bandit told customers to stand back, then ordered a female teller to fill the cardboard folder with money. He said the man stuffed money into the folder until it was full and then rushed out, leaving money behind on the countertop.

Bostick said the robber escaped by running through a vacant lot and jumping over a fence into an apartment complex.

Police said they have few leads in the case. They described the suspect as in his late 20s or early 30s, about 5-foot-7, with light brown hair and a rough, possibly acne-scarred, complexion.

They said he was wearing blue jeans, a black jacket and a red cap with a white bill. He was carrying a .45 caliber automatic pistol and an expandable folder, they said.

Ex-lawmaker's burial today

LUFKIN (AP) — Services were scheduled today for former State Rep. John W. Laird.

Laird, 90, died Wednesday at a local hospital.

Laird served in the Texas Legislature as a representative from Angelina and San Augustine Counties from 1921 to 1927 and from 1931 to 1935.

He also served a six-year term on the State Board of Education from 1935 to 1941 and a six-year term on the State Industrial Accident Board from 1943 to 1949.

Texas man killed in wreck

ATCHISON, Kan. (AP) — A 66-year-old Fort Worth, Texas, man was killed Friday when the car he was riding in collided head-on with another car in eastern Kansas, the Kansas Highway Patrol said.

The patrol said John D. Morton was killed in the wreck, which occurred on U.S. 73, about 4½ miles west of Atchison.

In West Texas, windy and scattered showers today. Turning colder tonight with scattered showers north of rain or snow. Decreasing cloudiness but breezy and cool Sunday. Highs today 40s and 50s north to 60s and 70s southwest. Lows tonight 20s north to 30s and 40s elsewhere.

In North Texas, thunderstorms through central Sunday. Turning much colder north tonight and over the remainder of the area Sunday. Highs today 53 northwest to 76 southeast. Lows tonight 20 northwest to 42 southeast. Highs Sunday 24 northwest to 43 southeast.

In South Texas, showers and thunderstorms most sections today. Partly cloudy and warm Sunday Turning colder north and northwest Sunday afternoon. Highs today mainly in the 70s except in the 80s extreme south.

Winter winds in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Winter winds will hit Midlanders on their first post-Thanksgiving weekend, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Today will be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers or thunderstorms with high in the mid-60's. Winds will be out of the southwest at 10 to 20 mph becoming 20 to 30 mph and gusty by the afternoon.

Tonight will be partly cloudy and cold with brisk northerly winds. Lows will be in the upper 30's.

Sunday calls for fair and breezy weather with highs in the low 50's.

The highest temperature ever recorded for Friday's date was 78 degrees in 1975. Four years later, a low of 18 degrees was recorded for today's date.

STATE

The eastern two thirds of the state remained under a blanket of low clouds Friday, while fog and drizzling rain persisted across parts of South Central and North Central Texas.

A few widely scattered rain-showers fell offshore Friday from Corpus Christi to Brownsville, according to the National Weather Service. Drier air filtered into far West Texas from northern Mexico, bringing clear to partly cloudy skies to the Big Bend and the Edwards Plateau.

The forecast for West Texas called for windy with scattered showers today. It should turn colder Saturday night with scattered showers of rain or snow. Sunday should be less cloudy and cool. The highs today and Sunday should range from the 30s to the 70s, and the lows should be in the 20s, 30s and 40s.

South Texas was expected to have scattered showers and thunderstorms today. It should be partly cloudy and warm Sunday. The highs Saturday and Sunday should mabe in the 70s and 80s, and the lows should be between the upper 50s to lower 70s.

NATION

Rain and snow pummeled much of the nation Friday, with snow falling over the Pacific Northwest and north central parts of the country and rain battering much of the South.

A possible small tornado in Eufaula, Ala., destroyed an unoccupied lounge at a motel, shattered windows in nearby apartments and snapped electrical lines, but no injuries were reported.

California got the one-two punch, with the northern part of the state getting up to 8 inches of snow and the southern portion recording more than an inch of rain.

DuBose does in Reagan's Owls

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

LAMESA - When one athlete is the difference in a playoff game of this magnitude, you know it's a special athlete. And when that athlete is a punter, it makes it even more unique.

But it was Abernathy's punter, placekicker and all-state caliber defensive end Bill DuBose that was the difference in Reagan County's 21-13 loss in a Class 2A Region I game here Friday night.

DuBose somehow handled a pair of "oops, it's over my head" snaps in the second half and booted the Antelopes out of danger and into the quarterfinals against Hamlin. Abernathy, ranked No. 8 in the state, is now 12-1. Reagan County finished the season 9-4.

"The two big plays by their great athlete were the real turning points," Owls' coach Ronnie Reeger said. "And he is a great athlete, I think we've got some good ones, too, but he made the big plays tonight and he's a great kid, too. I've known him since he was in the fifth grade when my daughter went to school with him."

THE ACROBATIC punts by DuBose, a 6-2, 240-pound blue chipper, robbed the Owls of excellent scoring chances with the score 14-7 in favor of the Antelopes. Touchdowns by Rowdy Powell, Jamie Mansanales and Billy Cooper did the rest.

The first "punt-stunt" by DuBose shot out between a half-dozen Owls converging around the hurrying kicker and buried Reagan County at its own 12 rather than putting the Owls deep in Abernathy territory.

On the second, even more dramatic misnapped-mishap, DuBose backed up, picked up the ball on his own one and rammed the ball 81 yards down the field to put the Owls in a hole they couldn't climb out of.

"You couldn't print what I was thinking when that second one went over my head," DuBose said. "We haven't had a problem with snaps all year. Our center's really done an excellent job until tonight. I just knew I had to get (the second punt) off. I knew we couldn't give them the ball that close to the goal line."

When DuBose wasn't pulling his magic tricks, the Abernathy ground game was chewing through the tough Reagan County defensive line for good yardage. Although Abernathy was moving the ball for almost 200 yards, the Owls' defense was, more often than not, able to snuff the Antelopes short of the end zone.

THE FIRST half was a defensive struggle that sent both sides scurrying to the locker room with a 7-7 tie.

"They took some things away from us that we've been able to do against other teams and just did a good job defensively," Reeger said of his ground game that only managed 82 yards. "We're just elated with our season as a whole, I think the team really showed its character all year. If we had a couple of breaks that were right there for us, we might have done even better."

Abernathy took its first possession of the second half down to the one-foot line, only to fumble in the end zone. But the 'Lopes stiffened on defense and Reagan County was forced to punt after three downs.

After a foiled possession of its own, Abernathy's DuBose pulled his first punt miracle. On Reagan County's next play they turned the ball over on the four-yard line. Mansanales took it in for the go-ahead score.

With three minutes left in the game and the Owls failing on a desparate fourth-and-five from their own 23, Abernathy marched in for a final score.

Owl quarterback Scott Lipsey passed the Owls down the field for a score as time ran out, punching the last two yards on a roll out.

Neither team could cross the goal line in the first quarter as the two teams exchanged punts. Abernathy recorded its first penetration late in the quarter but a field goal attempt from 27 yards by Bill DuBose was blocked.

THE ANTELOPES finally broke the scoreless deadlock with a 69-yard, 12-play drive early in the second quarter before the Owls had even picked up their first down. Cooper punched the ball in with a 12-yard run off tackle at 8:23.

On the next possession, Reagan County did get a first down, but that was it. The Owls held Abernathy deep in its own zone and forced their first punt. The Antelopes' Mr. Everything, DuBose again, booted a high, hanging punt that came down near midfield.

The problem was it was it hung too much and came down on one of his teammate's head. Reagan County had its best field position of the night, and took advantage of it.

Lipsey engineered an 11-play drive that ended in a five-yard scoring pass to Joel Griner. The Owls' drive nearly stalled but for a personal foul on a pass reception by Tatum.

The ball was moved up from the 22 to the 11. In three plays, Lipsey had the score knotted at seven at intermission.

Overton likes home field edge

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

IRVING — Texas Stadium plays host to the Class 5A Region playoff joust at 2 p.m. today between Irving MacArthur's Cardinals and Midland Lee's Rebels, and MacArthur coach Ray Overton is happy to be in his own backyard.

"The first thing you learn when you move to this area is that it isn't like coaching in West Texas," noted Overton. "Our kids have always slept on their own pillows, in their own beds, next to momma and dad."

A trip for MacArthur is a 20-mile bus ride. A trip of 300 miles might as well be a trip to the moon.

"My first year here was in 1983, and the longest trip we ever made was last week when we took our squad to Wichita Falls. Our kids thought that was a trip. I couldn't help being a little amused about that, considering the fact that when I was at Cooper, a trip like that was normal routine," said Overton.

The 8-2-2 Cardinals play most of their games within a short bus ride to the opposing stadium. That's why Overton is glad his Cardinals won the flip with Lee to earn the right to host today's game.

"The biggest trip we make during the season is a 20-mile bus ride to Duncanville. Our kids think that is an out-of-town trip. I don't know how they would react if we had had to come out to Midland or Odessa to play.

"However, we would like to stay in the playoffs long enough and often enough to experience some real travel," said Overton. "It's either that or keep winning coin flips."

Another factor in favor of the Cardinals today is that MacArthur has already played in Texas Stadium this year, defeating Trinity by a 16-7 margin in Bi-district.

"I hope that's a good factor," said Overton, "but Lee is used to travelling and playing in big stadiums. The playoffs are nothing new to Lee."

At one point during site negotiations, MacArthur decided they wanted to use the visitor's side at Texas Stadium since that was the side they were on against Trinity. The feeling was that the kids would be more at home in the same dressing room. However, the Cardinals had already issued tickets to Lee and there was no chance to change on the afterthought.

To make things as easy as possible on the Rebels, Lee coach Jack Tayrien bussed in his team into Irving for a 3:15 p.m. workout at Texas Stadium.

"Playing in Texas Stadium can be a distraction for kids because it is an awesome sight. We hope working out on Friday will get them used to it so when we kickoff Saturday we can concentrate on football," said Tayrien. "And I don't think it's that big a deal for our kids. We have 17 of them who suited up and were at the state championship game here 1983. Those kids should be a big influence on the younger players.

"I know one thing, our kids wanted to come and play at Texas Stadium. They were excited about the prospect."

Today Lee will be playing its 43rd football game in three years. "That's a season plus two games over what we normally play," noted Tayrien. "We're a lot further along this year than I thought we would be. I think that is a great tribute to our kids and the coaching staff I have. They've all worked hard to be where we are."

Lee is 35-7 over that three-year span and 10-2 in the playoffs. MacArthur is 2-1 in the playoff experience.

Tayrien is now 22-4 in his two years as head football coach at Lee, the best two-year record in Lee history.

Utah beats Texans, 87-61

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Senior guard Manuel Hendrix fired in 18 points to lead host University of Utah to an 87-61 victory over Houston Baptist in the first round of the Utah Classic basketball tournament Friday night.

Rebels, Bulldogs move to Tall City quarterfinals

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs and Midland Lee Rebels gained entry into today's quarterfinal round of the 20th annual Tall City tournament.

The Bulldogs will face El Paso Bel Air at 1 p.m. and Lee will take on El Paso Riverside at 3 p.m. Both games are slated for Chaparral Center.

To gain the quarterfinals, the Bulldogs posted an easy 87-65 victory over Class 2A Morton and then clawed their way to a 58-57 win over Lubbock High.

Four players busted into double figures, three in each game, for the Bulldogs. Elvin Mackey led the 'Dogs against Morton with a 28-point performance while Sears added 27 and Ben Grimes 11. Against Lubbock High, Sears scored 21, Mackey 15 and Anthony Deande 16.

The Rebels also opened with an easy victory, downing Del Rio 63-49 and followed with a "revenge is sweet" victory over Lubbock Coronado, 64-57. In their first game of the season, the Rebels lost a 57-52 decision to the Mustangs at Chap Center.

Eddie Riley and Lee Dixon were the only double figure shooters for Lee against Del Rio with Riley canning 20 and Dixon 19. In the nightcap game, Dixon scored 18, Riley 17, Henry Brewer 12 and Greg Johnson 10.

In other games Friday, Lubbock High defeated Abilene Cooper, 56-53; El Paso Bel Air downed Big Spring, 65-60; El Paso High nipped Amarillo High, 49-33; El Paso Riverside defeated Lubbock Monterey, 69-59; Odessa Permian bombed Amarillo Tascosa, 66-54; Lubbock Coronado blitzed Odessa High, 63-42; Morton downed Cooper, 72-65; Amarillo tore up Big Spring, 64-52; Monterey outgunned Tascosa, 80-69; Odessa ripped Del Rio, 73-56; Bel Air edged El Paso, 48-47 and Riverside nipped Permian, 65-53.

IN TODAY'S games at Chap Center, Morton takes on Amarillo at 11 a.m. followed by Monterey-Odessa High at 9 a.m.; Morton-Amarillo, 11 a.m.; Midland High-Bel Air, 1 p.m.; El Paso Riverside-Midland Lee, 3 p.m.; Loser's bracket consolation, 5 p.m.;

Forecaster back in business

Last week's football predictions failed to make it into print and the disappointing letters poured in in protest...

That doesn't quite sound right. Let's rephrase it to "and the letters poured in in disappointing numbers."

Typically, "How can you expect us to successfully pick against the spread, if you don't point us in the wrong direction so that we know which is the right direction," signed from Peering out of a Barrel.

The author may know what he's trying to say, but he leaves me as confused as some of the games I have to pick.

"Your weekly forecasts are more effective than a stern sermon on gambling. No where are the evils and the disasterous consequences thereof more telling depicted," the letter is signed the Clergy.

"We asked you nicely before the season, and now we are telling you, Do not publish the point spreads involving SWC games," the SWC.

"I can still hear you. You didn't go far enough," this one apparently from someone who founded Greeley, Colo.

And this one is completely beyond me. "How can you do this to me?" but for the life of me, I never even knew a Joe Pulitzer.

As you may have noticed this week's forecast already is off to a flying start with the pick of the Lions plus three and the Cowboys minus 14, not to mention A&M minus 31 over Texas, even though the spread was only four.

The colleges...

Houston minus 3 1/2 over Rice- The spread may be too much. Both played spellbinders with Tech.

Georgia minus three over Georgia Tech- Upset? Hey, this is football, not basketball.

Oklahoma State plus 14 over Oklahoma- Although billed as a traditional rivalry, this may be the most one-sided of its ilk in the nation. Sooners will, win, but it's hard to believe, after Nebraska and Iowa State last week, they can take Cowboys seriously.

Notre Dame plus 12 over Miami- How will Irish react to Gerry Faust's resignation? It's a team that could be in the doldrums or inspired...

Florida minus four over Florida State- Gators beat Miami. Miami beat State...both games so close that four points may be too many.

Syracuse minus 7 1/2 over West Virginia- Mountaineers not used to a roof over their heads.

The pros...

Houston plus 7 1/2 over Bengals- In the AFC Central, any teams-and-points is temptation.

Giants minus 5 1/2 over Browns- Browns are an AFC Central team, but they aren't playing another AFC Central team. These Browns may be contenders, but any resemblance to current team and illustrious predecessors is in name, not deed, only.

Patriots minus 6 1/2 over Colts- You gotta remember, they schedule games like this and have an obligation to play them.

Denver plus one over Steelers- Reasoning Broncos not as bad as they looked last week and Steelers not as good as they looked...I said it, you figure it out.

49ers minus four over Redskins- I know, Redskins beat Steelers last week, nevertheless...

Bears minus 3 1/2 over Miami- If anybody can beat the Bears, it's Marino on a hot night. A couple of long strikes on mistimed blit"es and anything can happen.

Permian hosts Denton today

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

ODESSA- For Odessa Permian, it may be just another rung on the ladder to the state finals, but for Denton Saturday's 2 p.m. date in Ratliff Stadium is a career.

Although the Broncos have been to the playoffs the last four years, they've never advanced beyond the second round of play.

After a 32-11 win over Grand Prarie, Coach Jim Bateman and his kids are "tickled to death" to be where they are.

"They're (Permian) a pretty tall order," Bateman admits, "but in the final 16, there are not that many easy teams left. We just have to do the best we can."

That may be true, but the 11-0-1 Panthers are a four-touchdown favorite to eliminate the 9-3 Broncos. Last week, Permian, still looking for a post-season workout, beat El Paso Austin, 33-0.

Permian will be playing today without linebacker Kevin Wilson, injured in a two-vehicle accident last week. Wilson is out for the season.

Earlier, Permian lost running back Woody Bryant, but last week replacement Patrick Wilson responded with 156 yards and three TDs against Austin.

What's really scarey is that Wilson achieved his totals in just 11 carries.

Denton's prime threats are Leroy Wilborn, a 1,000-yard rusher, and wingback Warren Wright. Wilborn scored twice and Wright once against Grand Prarie last week, but it was the Broncos' defense that impressed the most, holding GP to minus one yard rushing.

Denton defeated Trimble Tech, 28-18, in bidistrict while Permian advanced with a 34-15 win over Amarillo Palo Duro in bidistrict.

While Permian is an overwhelming favorite and plays on home turf, Bateman says, "The kids are pretty excited because this is the fartherest we've gone in four years. You get a little more confidence the farther you go in the playoffs."

Permian's John Wilkins has been over this road before and has a remarkable ability for readying his team for what may seem to some as the most menial of tasks, where the upsets occur. However, Permian's record for not stubbing its toe, is as remarkable as its ability to consistently win the big ones.

A Permian victory combined with a Lee victory over MacArthur today in Irving would set the stage for another meeting between the 4-5A rivals.

The last two playoff meetings were held in Lubbock, to accommodate the demand for tickets. Last fall, the regular season meeting was held at Midland's 10,000-seat Memorial Stadium, which resulted in the historic televising of a regular season game.

Elsewhere in regionals, North Mesquite and Cy-Fair meet at 2 p.m. in Waco and Plano East faces Conroe at 2 p.m. at College Station.

Last week, Lewisville beat North Mesquite, 20-14; Cy-Fair edged Longview, 14-7; Planos East downed Dallas Bryan Adams, 21-7; and Conroe advance on penetrations after tying Temple, 27-27.

Rankin bows 21-0

ROBERT LEE— Goldthwaite spoiled Rankin's playoff dreams on three touchdown runs by Scotty Miller in a Class A football game, 21-0.

After a scoreless first period, Miller struck from one-yard out with 2:33 left in the half and Tim Sims kicked the extra point for a 7-0 lead.

With 2:47 left in the third period, Miller again went in from nine yards out and Sims converted. The final TD came with 2:50 left to play on a one-yard run by Miller.

Rankin finished the season with an 8-4 record while 13-0 Goldthwaite barrels into a quarterfinal show down with unbeaten Iraan, a one-point winner over Rankin during the regular season.

Tar Heels Show Missouri door

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Led by Brad Daugherty's 22 points, No. 1-ranked North Carolina survived a sluggish start to defeat Missouri 84-63 in the opening round of the eighth annual Great Alaska Shootout college basketball tournament Friday night.

In the opening game, Purdue overpowered Alaska-Anchorage 92-70. Later first-round pairings matched defending NCAA champion Villanova against 16th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas and Arizona against Texas-San Antonio.

The inspired play of Dan Bingenheimer had the Tigers smelling an upset in the first half against North Carolina. The 6-foot-9 senior from Belevedere, Ill., scored 12 of Missouri's first 18 points to stake the Tigers to an 18-7 lead seven minutes into the game.

Although all three Tar Heels on the front line are 6-10 or taller, it was their guards that brought them back. With Steve Hale scoring six points and Kenny Smith and Jeff Lebo adding four apiece, North Carolina stormed back to take a 23-22 lead with 7:28 left in the first half.

The North Carolina giants then began to assert themselves underneath and the Tar Heels led 39-31 at halftime. After Missouri's 7-0 freshman Gary Leonard drew his fourth foul just 10 seconds into the second half, the rout was on. Missouri scored only three points in the first 3½ minutes as North Carolina built a 17-point lead.

Missouri Coach Norm Stewart threw in the towel with 8:42 left, pulling his starters with North Carolina leading 69-48.

College Basketball

Bingenheimer led Missouri, 2-1, with 21 points, all of them in the first half.

Duke 71, St. John's 70

NEW YORK — Senior guard Johnny Dawkins finished with 20 points, including the game-winner with 21 seconds remaining, as sixth-ranked Duke defeated No. 18 St. John's 71-70 Friday night to gain a berth in the championship game of the inaugural Big Apple NIT.

With St. John's leading 70-69, Dawkins hit a foul-line jumper 13 seconds after Duke had called a timeout when Walter Berry's turnaround jumper with 37 seconds remaining gave the Redmen the lead. Berry, a junior forward, finished with 35 points.

St. John's, 2-1, called timeout with 19 seconds left to set up a final chance at victory. But a short jumper by Mark Jackson bounced off the rim and Duke, 4-0, held on.

Dawkins, who had eight points in the first half, brought the Blue Devils from a 52-48 deficit with 10:18 remaining into a 54-52 lead 90 seconds later as he connected on two free throws, a jumper and a driving layup.

David Henderson finished with 16 points for Duke, while Mark Alarie had 15.

Duke led 36-35 at halftime as the Blue Devils erased a 28-21 St. John's lead with 7:22 remaining in the first half. Henderson scored six points and Dawkins four for the Blue Devils' first lead since 14-12.

Houston 100, Texas Wesleyan 73

HOUSTON — Houston's Greg Anderson scored 23 points, grabbed 20 rebounds and blocked nine shots to lead the Cougars to a 100-73 non-conference basketball victory over Texas Wesleyan Friday night.

The Cougars, who evened their record to 1-1, broke from an 8-8 deadlock early in the game and led 51-32 at the half.

Anderson led five Houston players in double figures. Alvin Franklin scored 10 of his 17 points in the second half. Rickie Winslow hit 14 points, Renaldo Thomas hit 17 points and freshman Gerry McGee hit 12 points.

Guard James Smith led the Rams, who are 6-2, with 17 points.

Syracuse 102, Southern California 68

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Seniors Wendell Alexis and Rafael Addison paced Syracuse with 22 and 20 points, respectively, Friday night as the undefeated Orangemen crushed Southern California 102-68 in non-conference college basketball.

Playing the third of 10 straight home dates in the Carrier Dome, No. 4-ranked Syracuse improved to 3-0 while dropping the Trojans to 1-2.

The Orangemen, who are averaging 100 points per game, raced to a 47-26 halftime lead and, except for a brief flat spell, kept pulling away in the seecond half.

Syracuse also got double-figure scoring from Howard Triche, with 16, Michael Brown, with 13, and Dwayne Washington, with 10.

Freshman Tom Lewis, heavily recruited by Syracuse before deciding to remain in his native Los Angeles area, paced the Trojans with 16 points, while Derrick Dowell and Greg Kimble contributed 12 each.

Syracuse applied its customary full-court pressure from the outset, forcing 13 first-half turnovers (25 for the game) and holding Dowell, who had been averaging 24 points, scoreless until the last three minutes of the first half.

By then, the Orangemen held a 39-

Iraan bulls ahead, 35-7

From Staff Reports

ODESSA— The Iraan Braves continued to roll toward a state Class A title here Friday night with an impressive 35-7 Region I victory over Roscoe.

The Braves, ranked No. 5 in the state, are now 12-0 and are on a collision course with Goldthwaite, a 21-0 winner over Rankin.

Chewy Ulate and Jay Wade each breezed for two touchdowns and Mike Volanti added one. Iraan turned the game into a laugher with 21 second half points. Roscoe had knotted the score at seven after one quarter.

Wade opened the scoring with a seven-yard sprint in the first quarter before Tommy Williams notched Roscoe's only score on a 54-yard breakaway. Volanti put the Braves ahead with a two-yard run in the second period.

Then Ulate got into the act with a score in each quarter in the second half and Wade added his second in the fourth quarter. Ray Zapata was perfect in five extra point attempts.

Amazingly, a team once won the championship of the National Football League WITHOUT A HEAD COACH! It happened to the Chicago Bears in 1943. Their head coach, George Halas, went into the Navy that year and he turned the team over to 2 of his assistants--neither of whom served as head coach. The Bears won the title that year--the only time a team won the NFL championship without a head coach.

Can you name that 4 U.S. Presidents who played varsity college football? Answer: Dwight Eisenhower who played at Army. Richard Nixon who played at Whittier College. Gerald Ford who played at Michigan. And Ronald Reagan who played at Eureka College.

Does Kansas State really belong in Big 8?

By DOUG TUCKER

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Does Kansas State, the losingest major college football program of all time, even belong in the Big Eight?

Yes, say most of its most recent head coaches.

But the fact remains that in the past 51 years, K-Staters have had only four winning seasons. It's a record of 295-470-40, for a winning percentage of .391 which is the worst in the nation.

The 30-0 loss to Colorado on Nov. 23 closed out what has become a typical K-State season — a 1-10 record and last-place finish in the Big Eight. Another coach bit the dust this year, too. Jim Dickey, who in 1982 took the Wildcats to their only bowl game, was fired after the second game.

Now athletic director Larry Travis is about to hire yet another man to make yet another fling at building a winner at the Manhattan campus, far removed from any major population center.

Mark Janssen, sports editor of the Manhattan Mercury, figured this would be a good time to pick the brains of Kansas State's five most recent head coaches.

INTERVIEWS with Bus Mertes, Doug Weaver, Vince Gibson, Ellis Rainsberger and Dickey uncovered feelings of bitterness, regret and, in every instance, frustration.

Janssen asked each man four questions: Does Kansas State belong in the Big Eight? Can it field a consistent winner without cheating? Did you have administrative support at K-State, and what type of coach is needed?

Only Doug Weaver, who had eight victories in seven years beginning in 1960, refused to share his thoughts.

"No, I don't think so," he said when Janssen reached him at Michigan State, where he is director of athletics. "I haven't been asked about my story for 20 years and there's no reason to tell it now."

WEAVER was the losingest coach in K-State history. From 1960-66, his teams suffered 24 shutouts while winning only 12 percent of their games. Against arch-rival Kansas, Weaver was 0-6-1 and outscored 191-3.

"The Weaver family's been dissected enough. We did the best we could," he said.

Mertes, 65 and retired in Minneapolis, was 15-34-1 beginning in 1955.

Gibson made the vow, "We're gonna win," the K-State motto and tasted brief, heady success, beating Oklahoma in 1969 and '70. In eight seasons beginning in 1967, his log was 33-52.

In three years beginning in 1975, Rainsberger's teams were 6-27 and did not win a conference game. From 1978 through the final two games of 1985, Dickey's Wildcts were 25-55-2.

AS TO whether Kansas State even belongs in the Big Eight, here's what they had to say:

Mertes: "I don't think that's the problem. That's a copout...but of course, that's easy for me to say sitting here at my kitchen table."

Dickey: I think they do, but people need to be very realistic in their expectations."

Rainsberger: "Yes, but Manhattan's geographic location is a very strong negative aspect."

Gibson: "In football, maybe not. But there are more sports at Kansas State than football. You can still have a good Big Eight program without football."

Can Kansas State have a consistently winning program without cheating?

Mertes: "It'd be tough. If you win, you're going to be accused of cheating. If you lose, you're going to get fired. Take your choice.

Gibson: "You're not going to consistently win in football against Big Eight competition."

Rainsberger: "I would say yes if it's determined that the competition is doing what you're doing. Overall, it would be very hard to be a consistent winner at Kansas State unless drastic changes are made in administration philosophy."

Dickey: "I would be very impresed with someone who could do it. It would be very, very tough to do every year."

Did you have administrative support at K-State?

Mertes: I thought we did, to a point. It wasn't as outward as we would have liked, but educators aren't going to be boisterous toward a football team."

Gibson: "Oh yes. What a great guy (then K-State President) Jim McCain was. He was just super. What a great person. He would do anything you would do anything you would ask him to. We always took recruits to his house."

Rainsberger: "The president (Duane Acker) gave his new athletic board the challenge of keeping football where it belonged."

Dickey: "It was non-existent (under Acker), and he's the guy who is the most influential to a strong athletic program...not the athletic director and not the football coach."

What type of coach is needed at K-State?

Mertes: "A man of great personality and perseverance.

Gibson: "First, the athletic director has to hire him. then he has to be the type who can work with the great, super people of Kansas State."

Rainsberger: "A man who can coordinate a total plan of Kansas State people working together."

Dickey: "Someone who is a good organizer, good recruiter and a little lucky."

Refrig on Hope show

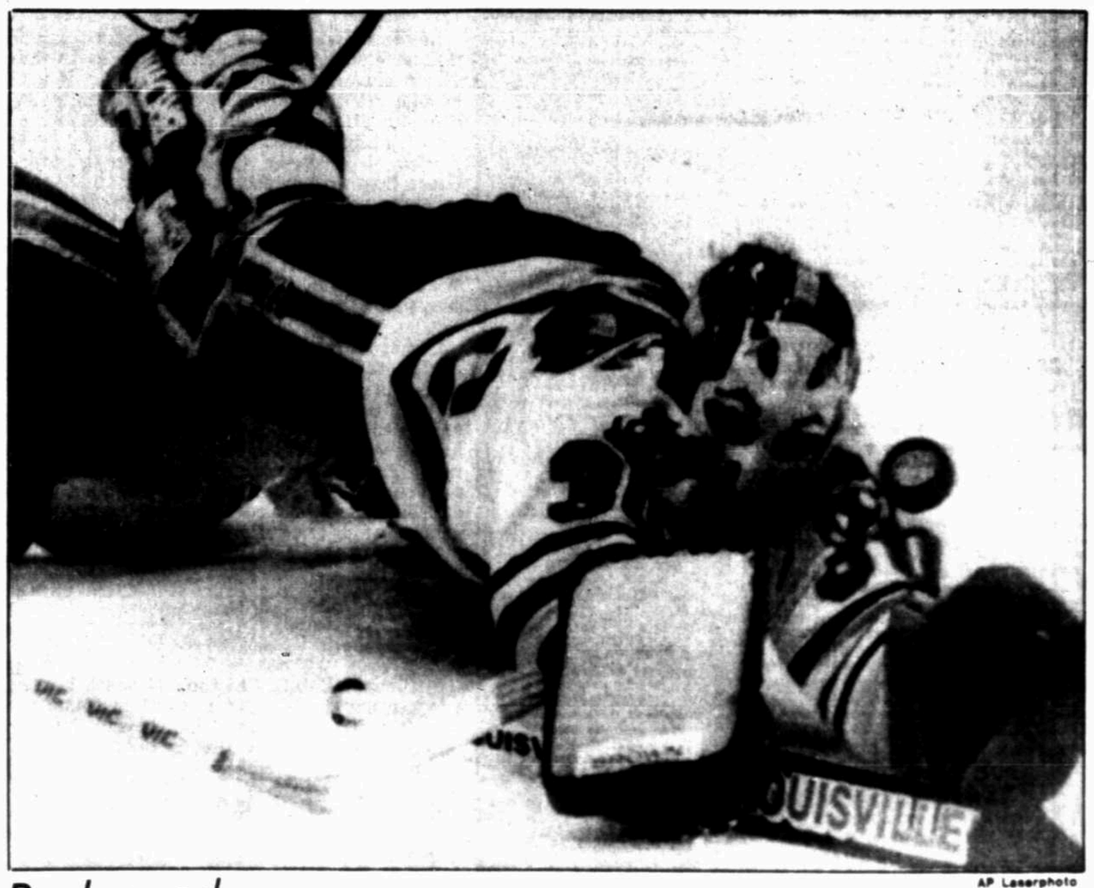

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Chicago Bears' William "The Refrigerator" Perry will make his debut as an off-the-field entertainer on "The Bob Hope Christmas Show" Dec. 15 on NBC, a spokesman for Hope said Friday.

Perry, who's dieted down to 302 pounds, was invited personally by Hope to appear on the holiday special.

The comedian is flying to Chicago to go one-on-one with the pro football player in a video-taping session.

The show also will feature Hope's introduction of The Associated Press All-American football team for 1985.

Perry appeared on the Hope Christmas show two years ago as an All-American selection out of Clemson.

QB Wilson gets Call of the North

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Wade Wilson will start at quarterback for the Minnesota Vikings against the Philadelphia Eagles on Sunday in place of Tommy Kramer, the National Football League team announced Friday.

"Kramer has not practiced all week because of various injuries, just general wear and tear," said Minnesota Coach Bud Grant. He added that Kramer would be available to play if needed.

Earlier in the week, Grant said he had no plans to play backup people because the Vikings are out of the playoff picture following their 30-23 loss to New Orleans last Sunday.

"I'll play regulars and those that are the healthiest," he said then. "We're going to have our best players in the game, whoever they are in our judgmend."

Starting linebacker Scott Studwell, who broke his thumb last week against New Orleans, also will not play against the Eagles. He will be replaced by David Howard, a rookie from Long Beach State who played the last two years in the United State Football League with the Los Angeles Express.

At guard in place of Brent Boyd will be Mark MacDonald. Boyd left practice early Friday with the flu. MacDonald is a rookie from Boston College, was the Vikings' fifth-round draft choice in 1985.

Wrong people hold vault keys

By JOHN NADEL

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ernie Chambers comes from a state where college football is king. He believes that the wrong people hold the keys to the royal vault.

"There's a lot of emphasis on the game of football and little concern for the men who play it and bring all that money in," says Chambers, a state senator from Nebraska.

Since 1980, Chambers has proposed that football players at the University of Nebraska be treated as employees of the school and entitled to every benefit — including a salary.

Dismissed with a laugh when it first was introduced five years ago, Chambers' bill is getting increasing attenion.

He managed to get the bill out of committee this year, meaning it will be debated before the full Nebraska Legislature in 1986.

"I've always argued that I'd like to see the changes occur within the collegiate structure, but it takes outside pressure to show them the need for a change," he said. "If they don't do it, government will force the changes."

THE IdEA of a paycheck for college athletes is one of a number of proposals, all aimed at curbing recruiting violations, that revolve around a thought regarded as heretical just a few years ago: Providing money, through either salaries or stipends, for particpants in amateur sports.

A couple of years ago, Nebraska became the only the state to require insurance for players. It also prohibits the lifting of any scholarship because of injury.

Other states are considering similar laws, and a California state legislator, Sen. Robert Montoya, also is proposing a player payroll.

An athlete on scholarship is barred from holding a job. The idea is to keep schools from creating phony positions so that a fullback can rake in five figures a year. The reality often is a young person far from home without a dollar in his pocket and finding it hard to say "no" to alumni and other boosters offering cash and other gifts against the rules.

"An athlete is not allowed to work, he's given no spending money, no transportation money to go home in case of emergency, and the scenario can go on and on and on," UCLA football coach Terry Donahue said. "I think there's got to be a system within the NCAA that takes into account that this is 1985 and the cost of living has gone up since 1975."

DONOHUE said he supports the National Collegiate Athletic Association and its efforts to police college sports, but thinks changes need to be made.

"It's like the income tax system," he said, "it needs to be improved."

A full athletic scholarship — tuition and fees, room and board, and books — can be worth $65,000-$75,000 over the four years normally required to complete work for a bachelor's degree. Proponents of paying players cite that as a precedent.

"The NCAA has decided what the athletes should be paid — the amount of the scholarship," said Mike Trope, a leading agent for pro athletes. "The players deserve a fair shake, a piece of the rock. That's what it boils down to. Maybe there should be two systems — one Ivy League system (for smaller programs) and one professional system."

FORMER college football coaches John Robinson and Charlie McLendon believe a stipend would be more appropriate than an outright salary.

McLendon, head football coach at Louisiana State University from 1962 through 1979 and now executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, said more and more football coaches seem to be favoring a stipend.

"I really believe it would cut out a lot of the problems," he said. "I think you're just talking about the bigger schools. I don't think the smaller ones could afford it."

Robinson said many of the athletes needed whatever help they could get. He noted that Southern California, where he coached, was penalized by the NCAA in a case involving the sale of the players' football tickets.

Three plays were difference, claims Hanifan

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Except for three plays, Coach Jim Hanifan said Friday, the St. Louis Cardinals might have emerged Thanksgiving Day winners instead of losers against the Dallas Cowboys.

"I told them right after the game that, hey, I was proud of their effort," Hanifan said of his message to his players following Thursday's 35-17 National Football League setback. "They fought like a sonofagun all day long in every phase of the game."

According to the St. Louis coach, two of the plays that doomed the Cards against the National Conference East leader involved turnovers deep in Dallas' territory during the first and third quarters.

"We had the opportunities. We fumbled at the one-yard line, we fumbled at the 19. Those two chances, when you look at them, could have put 10 or 14 points on the board," Hanifan said. "You do that and it comes down to who's going to win the ballgame."

Nonetheless, the picture that emerged from St. Louis' eighth defeat in the last nine weeks was not all dark, the coach said.

"I'd say it was his best performance of the season," Hanifan said of quarterback Neil Lomax, who completed 28 of 43 passes for 319 yards. "He really played well. He was decisive."

Lomax, whose previous top passing day in 1985 had been 274 yards against the Houston Oilers, teamed with All-Pro receiver Roy Green for seven completions gaining 88 yards and found Pat Tilley six times for 115 yards.

"The fact that Roy was finally ready helped make adjustments but, again, I think Neil was just very decisive," the Cards coach said. "Offensively, we moved the ball well. The discouraging point is we had the opportunities on 3-4 instances of putting some points on the board and failed to do so."

Hanifan said St. Louis, which is mired in the NFC East basement with a 4-9 record, came out of the game against the Cowboys in relatively good physical condition.

"We've got a couple of bumps and bruises but none of the serious nature," the coach said. A sprained left shoulder suffered by Lomax should heal sufficiently by next week, he said.

Of greater concern to Hanifan than the minor injuries, obviously, was a Cards pass defense that yielded four touchdown passes to Dallas quartebback Danny White and a 42-yard aerial gain off Tony Hill's reverse to set up the Cowboys' final seven points.

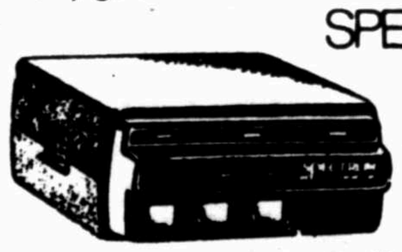

Hanifan labeled Hill's pass to tight end Doug Cosbie the final of the three plays that doomed St. Louis' chances of repeating an earlier victory this month over Dallas in a Monday night game

Faust, Irish in swan song

College Football

Associated Press

"Dear Father Hesburgh," began the letter from the head football coach to the president of the University of Notre Dame.

"I wish you to know that I am tendering my resignadion . . . effective immediately."

In a brief letter to the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh on Tuesday, beleaguered Gerry Faust ended five years of what he called "ups and downs" under the Golden Dome.

Lou Holtz will be the coach when Notre Dame takes the field for its 1986 opener but Faust still has one piece of business remaining — Saturday's 1985 finale at fourth-ranked Miami.

"I just want these kids to enjoy this game, especially the seniors," Faust said. "I want them to go out and win this game for themselves. I don't need the good comments and I've already heard all the bad comments."

FAUST'S record is 30-25-1, which would be more than satisfactory at some schools but not at Notre Dame, where his .545 winning percentage pales alongside Knute Rockne (.881 in 13 years), Frank Leahy (.855 in 11), Ara Parseghian (.836 in 11) and Dan Devine (.764 in six).

Of Notre Dame's 23 head football coaches other than Faust, only Joe Kuharich (17-23-0 in four seasons) and Hugh Devore (9-9-1 in two years) have lower percentages. In fact, in the first five years Notre Dame fielded a football team (1887-88-89-92-93), it played without a head coach and the record was 7-4-1 — .625.

Miami has won nine games in a row since dropping its opener to Florida and the Hurricanes, still in the national championship picture, are headed for the Sugar Bowl. Coach Jimmy Johnson says he doesn't see Faust's resignation "as having an effect on our football team. They've got to be concerned with themselves and their preparation for the game. We shouldn't be concerned about things we have no control over."

TOP-RANKED Penn State and runnerup Iowa are through until their bowl games but No. 3 Oklahoma visits No. 17 Oklahoma State for a night game, sixth-ranked Florida entertains No. 12 Florida State, seventh-ranked Auburn meets Alabama at Birmingham's Legion Field and No. 10 Tennessee needs a victory at home against Vanderbilt to represent the Southeastern Conference in the Sugar Bowl. Fifth-ranked Michigan, No. 8 Nebraska and No. 9 Brigham Young are not scheduled.

In the Associated Press Second Ten, No. 13 LSU is at Tulane for a night game and No. 20 Georgia visits Georgia Tech under the lights. No. 11 Air Force, No. 14 Arkansas, No. 16 UCLA and No. 19 Ohio State have finished their regular seasons while on Thursday night No. 15 Texas A&M trounced No. 18 Texas 42-10.

Oklahoma is in the Orange Bowl against Penn State regardless of what happens in its final two games against Oklahoma State and Southern Methodist.

"It's difficult to be more pleased than I was at the way we played against Nebraska (27-7 last week)," says Coach Barry Switzer. "And yet, while we are extremely happy to again represent the Big Eight in the Orange Bowl, we realize we can't spend a lot of time thinking about it. Oklahoma State has all the tools to bring us down to earth in a hurry."

FLORIDA has never had three consecutive nine-win seasons but the Gators will be shooting for that when they meet Florida State. It will mark the end of Florida's season since the Gators are on probation and ineligible for a bowl game.

Florida was off last week and Coach Galen Hall welcomed it, saying he had "a very tired football team after facing Auburn, Georgia and Kentucky in successive weeks.

"Florida State will present us with perhaps our biggest challenge of the season. They can run and pass the ball with equal effectiveness and have big-play capabilities in both areas. Their defense has been solid throughout the year and is much improved over last year.

"Florida State will be ready for us because they have lost four straight games to Florida. I feel we will be ready because of the time off and the fact that it will be our last game of the season."

The Seminoles will play Oklahoma State in the Gator Bowl but Coach Bobby Bowden says he "doesn't even want to think about bowl games right now. This is the most important thing on any of our minds. We have people from freshmen to seniors who have never beaten Florida. That is oer only goal."

Last year, Alabama ended Auburn's Sugar Bowl hopes with a 17-15 upset. This time, the Tigers are locked into the Cotton Bowl against Texas A&M while Alabama is headed for the Aloha Bowl, with an outside shot at the Sugar Bowl if Vanderbilt, a 20-point underdog, upsets Tennessee.

"Auburn is always, and always will be, the biggest game of the year for Alabama," says Coach Ray Perkins. "They are the most talented team we will play this year. Not only that, they are the deepest team, depth-wise, we will play this year. And, without a doubt, (Bo) Jackson and (Brent) Fullwood are the two best backs we will face this year."

Meanwhile, Auburn's Pat Dye points out that only seven points keeps Alabama from being undefeated "and possible No. 1 in the nation. They have lost to two fine teams in Penn State and Tennessee by two points each and tied LSU in Tiger Stadium.

"The Auburn-Alabama game is a game that probably not only affects the State of Alabama, Auburn University and the University of Alabama, but the entire country. Everybody looks forward to this game just as much as they look forward to the Ohio State-Michigan and the Southern Cal-Notre Dame games."

Tennessee-Vanderbilt isn't that kind of game but Coach Johnny Majors of the Vols says he has "always respected this intense rivalry and we know from experience you have to play your best against this cross-state opponent. We know the Commodores will be foaming at the mouth when they come into Neyland Stadium.

"Frankly, I am very concerned about getting ready for Vanderbilt and playing to our fullest potential against Vanderbilt. I don't plan to worry about things you can't control. We will talk about preparing for Vanderbilt, staying hungry for our goal of winning the SEC championship and trying to play to our full potential. I think the worst thing I could do would be to create too much caution with our team and give them too many things to worry about.

"This is a unique football team. This football team does as much as any I've ever been around to reach its potential week after week. It is a team that has overcome adversity (the midseason loss of quarterback Tony Robinson) while playing the toughest schedule in my years of competitive athletics. I hope we can put one more big one together. You can't get too excited about Christmas or you will forget about Thanksgiving."

Oklahoma's Barry Switzer doesn't see how his Sooners can play any better than they did last week in the rout of Nebraska in the Big Eight title game. Still, Switzer must have his team ready for Oklahoma State, loser to Iowa State last week.

Bengals look Houston for 'Get-well' tonic

Oilers

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals hope to rediscover their offense on Sunday against the AFC Central Division rival Houston Oilers, a team looking to stay on an offensive upswing.

The Bengals have failed to score a touchdown in their last two games, losses to the Los Angeles Raiders and the division-rival Cleveland Browns. The Browns dominated in a 24-6 victory in Cleveland Stadium last Sunday, knocking starting quarterback Boomer Esiason out of the game and bottling up the Bengals' usually potent passing attack.

Esiason managed just three completions in five passes for 30 yards with an interception before he had to leave the game with a bruised hip. His backup, Turk Schonert, completed 10 of 14 passes for 109 yards, but the offense remained inconsistent in the face of a heavy pass rush.

Bengals Coach Sam Wyche said he's not worried about the offense, which was the most productive in the National Football League until the last two games.

"We'll be all right," Wyche said.

The Raiders bottled up the Bengals' passing game by playing tight man-to-man coverage and bumping receivers at the line of scrimmage. The Browns, who played more of a zone defense in a loss at Cincinnati earlier this season, also were successful with tight man-to-man coverage last Sunday.

"It's the way the game has gone now," Wyche said. "The game has changed defensively. The whole metamorphosis has taken place this season. You can see it happening because of the (looser) interpretation of the bump-and-run rule or the interference rule."

Happy Cowboys take a holiday

Dallas

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have until Monday to enjoy their Thanksgiving blessings, which included a 35-17 revenge victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Coach Tom Landry gave his team a three-day break after the victory which increased the Cowboys' record to 9-4 in the National Conference Eastern Division.

"They earned it," said Landry after quarterback Danny White threw four touchdown passes in his finest game of the year.

"We're excited about the playoffs and going to Cincinnati," said defensive back Everson Walls. "It will be a tough game against the Bengals, but we smell the playoffs now just like you would smell a cooking turkey.

"Hopefully, we can go into the playoffs in the fashion we want to and that's by winning all the football games."

THE COWBOYS are a half-game ahead of the New York Giants in the NFC East. The Giants play Cleveland on Sunday.

"This puts us in great position in our own division," said running back Tony Dorsett. "We can control our own destiny.

"Danny was just excellent. When he's playing like that, we're going to be hard to stop. We're ready for the big showdown now against the New York Giants (Dec. 15) in Texas Stadium."

White hit 14 of 26 passes for 235 yards, throwing touchdown passes of 53 and 16 yards to Tony Hill, 18 yards to Mike Renfro and 19 yards to Doug Cosbie.

Hill also turned passer, throwing a 42-yard pass to Cosbie off a reverse to set up Dorsett's 3-yard scoring run.

"We learned after the Chicago game (a 44-0 thumping) that if we don't play to the best of our ability we can get embarrassed," said Dorsett. "It's a happy Thanksgiving for sure."

DALLAS is now 14-3-1 in Thanksgiving games and 4-0 against the Cardinals on the holiday.

The Cowboys are 16-1 after Thanksgiving.

"New York is the class of the East right now," said Landry. "But right now we have a lot going for us and some time off to relax and get ready for the final three games."

Landry said the Cowboys' offense is coming on strong.

"I feel a lot better after our last two games," Landry said. "Danny has seven touchdown passes and I think our offense will have a lot more confidence."

The Cowboys' final game of the year is a Monday night matchup in San Francisco.

"We just want to play the last three games like we did the last two," said defensive tackle Randy White. "That's fighting and scratching from start to finish."

Innovations help night fishermen

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Bass Beacon, a unique new lighting system for easier night fishing, and the Catch Keeper, a livewell liner to help unload the catch, are the latest innovations for anglers.

Beacon's florescent lighting system fits around the pedestal of any bass boat seat. It lights the entire platform, making detailed rigging and baiting easier than ever.

The Catch Keeper is made of nylon mesh and will fit inside any livewell. It is held in place by a weighted bottom seam and universal suction cups that adhere to either aluminum or fiberglass.

Both products were introduced by Fishing Aids Inc...

WILDLIFE biologists have identified seven pergegrine falcon eyries in Big Bend National Park recently.

In a study by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept. and National Park Service, biologists reported that 10 young peregrines fledged from six sites, the best ever reported for the species in the park. This year's production was up from three fledged in 1984 and 1983..

LAKE BALMORHEA, a 573 acre oasis in Reeves County, showed a big improvement in fishing late last summer and the upswing was credited to unusually stable water levels.

According to biologist Billy Follis, largemouth bass up to 7 1/2 pounds and white crappie to three pounds were taken along with channel catfish in the three to eight pound class.

Striped were stocked in 1983 to utilize the large populations of adult gizzard shad. Now these five to seven fish are now becoming important game fish at Balmorhea....

Terps defeat Cavs; Ross to stay at Maryland

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) - Coach Bobby Ross hinted strongly that he would stay at Maryland after the Terps squelched Virginia's second-half comeback to beat the Cavaliers 33-21 Friday and win their third straight Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

A 40-yard scoring pass from Stan Gelbaugh to Ferrell Edmunds gave the Terps breathing room early in the fourth quarter after Virginia scored twice to pull with 23-21.

Ross, mentioned as a candidate for almost every open coaching job despite no concrete offers, promised to make a decision soon after meeting with his family.

"As of right now, nobody has come to me," he said, "so it looks like I'm going to stay here. I want to stay at Maryland."

The Terps, headed for the Cherry Bowl, finished with their fourth straight 8-3 regular season mark under Ross. They were 6-0 in the ACC after posting a 17th consecutive league victory and their 14th in a row over the Cavaliers.

"I still don't think we're going to beat them," said Coach George Welsh of the Cavaliers. "I think they're a little bit better than we are right now and we just have to catch up next year. . .hopefully."

Virginia, 6-5 overall and 4-3 in the ACC, pulled to within 23-21 on a one-yard TD run by Don Majkowski on the first play of the final period.

But on the fourth play after the ensuing kickoff, Edmunds pulled loose from grasp of Chris Warren after his clutch reception, and went the final 12 yards to score.

Dan Plocki's 40-yard field goal, his second of the game, completed the scoring with 3:56 left. Keeta Covington made interceptions on Virginia's final two possessions.

The first of Howard Petty's two TD runs opened the scoring for Virginia, but the Terps were ahead 23-7 by halftime.

Sandwiched between two short-yardage TDs by Rick Badanjek was a 25-yard score by Alvin Blount, who rushed for 186 yards on 28 carries. Plocki booted a 23-yard field goal just before halftime.

Petty scored from four yards out midway through the third quarter to launch Virginia's comeback, and a second time-consuming drive ended with the TD by Majkowski.

Petty rushed for 124 yards and Keith Morgan gained 129, each on 24 carries, against a Maryland defense which had allowed only one 100-plus rushing game all season.

Malone holding own with Jazz

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Rookie Utah Jazz power forward Karl Malone, rather than still playing college ball, is competing in the National Basketball Association a year ahead of time.

He is more than holding his own against players older and more experienced, and, sometimes, just the thought of it startles him.

"I'll be lying in bed and say, 'Hey, this is everything I've dreamed of," said the 6-foot-9 Malone, who is providing badly needed muscle on the Jazz front line.

The 22-year-old former Louisiana Tech standout has been averaging more than 10 points per game. More important, Malone is averaging more than seven rebounds per game and he hauled down a season-high 13 wayward shots Wednesday night against Chicago.

"We were very fortunate to get him in the draft when we did," said Utah Coach Frank Layden, who chose Malone in the first round last spring. "He's getting the opportunity to start and to play and (he's) getting better and better."

Malone gave up his final year of eligibility at Louisiana Tech for a chance to play in the pros, and he says coming to Utah has been "a dream come true" because the Jazz have given him the playing time he needs to develop.

"First of all, coming to a club that needs a power forward and getting to play as a rookie," has helped him develop, he said. "College and the NBA are like night and day. You've got to play to get experience."

Malone has been getting the playing time. He's been a regular starter since Nov. 5 and he has been getting more court time each game.

It hasn't been easy for Malone, Tech's No. 3 all-time scorer, No. 6 all-time rebounder and All-Southland Conference selection all three years.

"In college, there are just one or two plays," Malone said. The pros, on the other hand, have dozens of offensive plays, as well as defensive plays.

"You really have to be thinking," he said, of the Jazz offense. "Then you have to run back down the floor and play defense."

Fireman Fuller fills emergency

By JOE MOOSHIL

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — If Steve Fuller wasn't a quarterback, he might well be a fireman, waiting on call.

Every week, Fuller remains in the wings, his status with the undefeated Chicago Bears depending on quarterback Jim McMahon's injured right shoulder.

"That's the only way to approach it," said Fuller, "until further notice."

McMahon, who has tendinitis, says every week he'll try to be ready to play. And for the last three weeks, Fuller has stepped in and done the job.

Victories No. 10, 11 and 12 have come with Fuller at the throttles as the Bears have outscored their opponents 107-3. They have not allowed a point in 10 quarters or a touchdown in the last 13.

"Until three weeks ago, I felt I hadn't contributed," said Fuller, who started game No. 3 at Minnesota but had to be relieved by McMahon, who rallied the team to 33-24 victory.

"That bothered me," said Fuller. "But I feel a lot better about my place now. It's not always great to be a backup quarterback, but I don't mind playing behind Jim."

FULLER'S career in the National Football league has been checkered. He was drafted out of Clemson by Kansas City in 1979 and played four years for the Chiefs, mostly as a starter.

He was traded to the Los Angeles Rams in 1983 and did not throw a pass that season. The Bears acquired him last year from the Rams for two draft choices.

When McMahon suffered a serious kidney injury in the 11th game last season, Fuller relieved him, starting four games before he was injured himself.

Fuller came back in the playoffs, leading the Bears to a victory over Washington before the team was eliminated by San Francisco, the eventual Super Bowl champion.

He'll start against Miami next Monday night, but feels McMahon will be back sometime before the playoffs.

"Every player's dream is to start in the Super Bowl, but I have every confidence Jim will be back. His rehabilitation now is centered on getting him ready for the playoffs," he said.

"I wouldn't shy away from that possibility," said Fuller when asked if he had thought about starting in the playoffs and possibly the Super Bowl.

"But it wouldn't hurt for Jim to pay the last couple of regular season games," said Fuller. "You have to get accustomed to having guys flying in front of your face and getting knocked on your butt."

HAS HE thought of being a regular starter again somewhere?

"I've only played seven years, but right now I'm happy where I am," Fuller said. "I have a chance to be part of one of the great teams of all time."

Two years ago with the Rams, Fuller had some doubts.

"You come into the league, you know you have to wait and learn," he said. "Then you want to play and become a part of a championship team.

"It didn't work out that way for me. I found myself with three teams in two years.

After five years of tragedy, Irish play it for laughs

Well, I see where the University of Notre Dame has given the farewell performance of The Damnation of Faust, a football opera in five acts where everybody dies in the end. It's too early to tell who lost his soul.

It was hard to take Gerry Faust seriously with that bowl haircut right out of the Gay '90s and that Hail Mary approach to football. Gerry always managed to look as if he just fell off a hay wagon, the kind of guy you'd sell a vegetable peeler to. He led the league in looking thunderstruck on the sidelines. He always seemed to be running around looking for somebody to explain to him what the hell was going on. Coaches fought to get on his schedule. They figured Gerry Faust's game plan was light a candle.

BUT, NOW what do we get at the Institute of Our Lady of the Lake, comedy? You look at the new coach and your first thought is "My God, it's Woody Allen!" You have to stop yourself from asking "What's the matter – was Rodney Dangerfield busy? Red Buttons? Henny Youngman?"

Notre Dame is going to play it for laughs? The hallowed institution that saw George Gipp, Knute Rockne, the Four Horsemen is going to be a minstrel show? They're going from "Hamlet" to Mack Sennett? What's next, a laugh track?

Some guys are coaches' coaches. Lou Holtz is a comedian's coach. Gerry Faust gave 'em scripture, Lou Holtz will give them one-liners.

NOTRE DAME hasn't had a coach who was funny, on purpose, since Knute Rockne. What made Gerry Faust so endearing was, he didn't know he was funny. Like Inspector Clouseau, he couldn't understand why things kept blowing up in his face.

What's Holtz going to do – throw pies?

Lou is the most un-coachlike mentor you'll ever see. During a game, he paces up and down the sideline like a caged leopard. He logs more miles than a drum major. He says it's because he doesn't want the alumni to get a clear shot at him, but it's more like he can't bear to look at what's going on on the field. If he sits down, he'll start to scream.

It's not hard to see why Notre Dame wanted Lou Holtz. It's less easy to see why Lou Holtz wanted Notre Dame. It's hard to be funny when you have the shade of George Gipp on your hands. It's hard to make jokes about shaking down the thunder from the sky for loyal sons on high.

NOTRE DAME is chronically in the grip of an athletic schizophrenia. It likes to win. But it likes to make friends. It has more than a reputation to serve. It has a religion.

The two aims are antithetical. It's hard to make friends of people you beat 27-0. Knute Rockne was the last coach to bring this off. Rockne could whip 'em – and leave them laughing. Or crying. Rockne was like Chaplin. He could mix humor and pathos like a master. He could make it an honor to get beat by him.

Good coaches, like Dan Devine, and genius coaches, like Frank Leahy, wouldn't bring this difficult double off, not even winning 85% of their games, as Leahy did, nor 75%, as Devine did. Notre Dame wants its coaches to do banquet shtick, too. It wants to preserve its image of the wisecracking Irishman given it by the Celt from the fjords of Norway, Knute Rockne, or that wit from the Protestant belt, George Gipp. Notre Dame needs a little Take-my-wife-please! in its program.

WILL LOU Holtz be able to bring it off? Well, Lou left 'em laughing at William and Mary (where, he likes to point out he had less difficulty coaching William, Mary was the hard part) North Carolina State, Arkansas, Minnesota and the New York Jets.

But, life wasn't all seltzer squirts and baggy pants and fake glasses. Lou had to stop being funny on at least one occasion in his career.

It happened in 1977. Lou was coaching Arkansas and they were to play Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl. Oklahoma was 11-1 and ranked No. 2 in the country (right behind the Pittsburgh Steelers) and they were favored by anything from 16 points to infinity.

As if that wasn't bad enough, two weeks before the game, Holtz got the really bad news. Two of his top running backs and a wide receiver got caught bringing girls in the dormitory in violation of the school's rules.

Holtz promptly suspended them from appearing in the Orange Bowl game.

They sued. Sixteen black players on the squad threatened to walk out unless they were reinstated.

Skeptics thought Lou Holtz had put them up to it. He hadn't. He told them to go ahead and boycott. They didn't.

Two days before the Orange Bowl, the courts upheld Lou Holtz. On New Year's Day, his team did. They won, 31-6.

Coach Holtz doesn't always play it for laughs. But, at Notre Dame, they could use a yuk or two about now. Holtz is OK for that but, personally, my choice for the job would have been Eddie Murphy. Now, there's a guy you'd like to hear give the George Gipp speech!

McLemore quits Baylor's cagers

WACO, (AP) — Baylor sophomore forward Robert McLemore has left the basketball team for personal reasons, head coach Gene Iba said Friday.

McLemore played in the Bears' 67-58 season opening win over Oral Roberts University Tuesday in Tulsa, Okla. He had been slowed by an ankle injury that sidelined him from practice for two weeks.

The 6-4 Houston Austin High School graduate played in 28 games when he was a freshman. He averaged 5.9 points and five rebounds a game.

Iba declined to comment on specifics on McLemore's decision to leave the team

Oklahoma fullback Leon Perry struggles for a few extra yards. No. 2 Sooners face Oklahoma State today.

Mum's the word with Cowboys

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Can this really be Oklahoma-Oklahoma State weekend?

Where is the verbal sparring normally done between the two teams? Where are all the colorful comments, the kinds of things that wind up on the bulletin boards of opposing teams?

A year ago, Oklahoma State offensive guard Paul Blair said Oklahoma had no class, and he personally claimed responsiblity for causing injuries to two Sooners. This year he is calling Oklahoma the best team in the nation, and says the Sooners are twice as good as a year ago.

"I don't see how they can bad-mouth us," said Oklahoma defensive tackle Jeff Tupper. "And we can't bad-mouth them. They've got a good program and a good team."

PERHAPS IT is because No. 17 Oklahoma State, 8-2 overall and 4-2 in the Big Eight Conference, is coming off a loss to Iowa State. That defeat bumped the Cowboys from the Orange Bowl picture.

To keep this game in its historic perspective, however, there is Brian Bosworth. The Oklahoma linebacker has a reputation for turning a good phrase or two, and while his comments this year are tame by his standards, they do throw a little grease on the fire.

"It's hard not to get fired up because you're playing Aggies," Bosworth said of the game. "It's an intrastate rivalry, but it doesn't mean a whole lot other than that.

"It means enough to us to where we have to live in the state, and we don't want to live with a bunch of Aggies breathing down our throats saying they came up and beat us."

National rankings prove Bosworth wrong, and show that Saturday night's game is much more than a question of state pride. An Oklahoma loss would knock the third-ranked Sooners from the national championship picture and deny them an outright Big Eight Conference title. An Oklahoma State loss would mark the first time a Pat Jones team has lost two straight.

"We're going to go out and play hard, regardless of what's at stake," said Oklahoma State noseguard Marvin Hawkins.

"OBVIOUSLY, a national title and Big Eight championship is not dangling in front of our eyes," said Jones, "but as far as playing the game, the two teams are basically the same."

Oklahoma, 8-1 and 6-0, has used its potent wishbone to roll to five straight victories. Jones said it is foolish to think the Sooners can be stopped. Instead the plan is "to not give up any cheapies. You hope to make 'em go the long, hard way, and hope they help you out a little by turning the ball over," he said.

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said the key to beating Oklahoma State is to stop tailback Thurman Thomas, the league's top rusher, and hope quarterback Ronnie Williams does not have a big day.

Spinks plans exhibition

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Heavyweight champion Michael Spinks is planning a December exhibition bout against Eddie Gonzalez in Houston to benefit Mexican earthquake victims.

Spinks made the announcement Friday at a news conference to kick off the formation of a police athletic league here. The Wilmington Trust Co. donated $22,500 in Spinks' name to renovate an elementary school for the program.

The Dec. 12 fight will be Spinks' first appearance in the ring since hee upset Larry Holmes to win the International Boxing Federation heavyweight title. Gonzalez is a cruiserweight who also is one of Spinks' sparring partners.

The boxing program will include Thomas Hearns, the super welterweight champion, while Lupe Pintor, the super bantamweight champion, will appear in another bout. There will be four other fights on the card.

SLC ADs, coaches feel there's a better way

DALLAS (AP) — Athletic directors and coaches around the Southland Conference disagree with the decision of the University of Texas at Arlington to drop the school's football program.

Some of the other member schools, like UTA, also face low attendance and large athletic department budget deficits but wouldn't end football, the Dallas Times Herald reported Friday.

Meanwhile, Tom Cravens, a prominent Arlington businessman and major supporter of UTA, said he was angered by the unversity's decision and that he would reconsider future donations.

"I was a major supporter, and sports is what I supported more than anything else," Cravens told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "But I doubt if we'll support (the university) to the level we used to in the past."

UTA President Wendell Nedderman announced Monday that the school would drop its football program because of an annual deficit approaching $1 million and lack of community support.

However, a booster group, the Maverick Club, is hoping to raise $950,000 by Dec. 6 to resurrect the sport.

The athletic directors and coaches interviewed by the Times Herald said they believed the UTA decision to drop football was a bad one.

"I personally feel like it was a big mistake," said Corky Nelson, North Texas State coach. "It hurts all the kids and the coaching staff."

The UTA problem was evident, said Arkansas State football coach and Athletic Director Larry Lacewell.

"We've always been aware that they've had trouble drawing fans," he said. "You knew there was a problem but not that serious. I've been out there (at UTA) when there was nobody there but the band. And that was last year at homecoming. I don't know if they could have turned it around."

Northeast Louisiana Athletic Director Benny Hollis said many schools have operated with budget deficits.

"I was shocked about UTA," he said. "I've been around Bill Reeves (UTA athletic director) countless times. He said they had problems with attendance, but he never mentioned it was that serious."

Skins Game victim of rain

MURRIETA, Calif. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller, ambling around the clubhouse while a cold, wet rain washed out the pro-am, took a look at his fellow competitors in the Skins Game.

"Hey, these are class guys," Zoeller said Friday of the other three members of the quartet that will compete for $450,000 in the two-day, 18-hole Skins Game.

They are Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson, all charter members of the made-for-television golf show that now is in its third year.

"What is Zoeller doing here?" asked Fuzzy, holder of a U.S. Open and Masters title, but whose career credentials are pale in comparison with the others.

The answer is simple:

The same as the other three, trying to win a large amount of money, possibly the whole purse.

Palmer won $140,000 in the inaugural Skins Game. Last year, Watson won the ninth hole, worth $120,000. And, the following day, eight holes went by without a winner, the money was carried over and Nicklaus dropped a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole for $240,000.

Nihilator triumphs

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Nihilator capped off a brilliant pacing career with a 1:53 victory in the prestigious $565,053 Breeders Crown for 3-year-old colts Friday night at Garden State Park.

Driven by Bill O'Donnell, Nihilator took the lead before the first quarter in 27 4-5 seconds. O'Donnell backed down the pace, setting fractions of :57 1-5 and 1:27, and the champion pacer threw in a swift :26 final quarter to post a 2¾-length victory over stablemate Chairmanoftheboard.

Dangarvon finished third.

Nihilator was coupled in the betting with Chairmanoftheboard and returned $2.20 and $2.10. Because of the small field, five betting entries, show betting was canceled.

The handicappers at Garden State showed their respect for Nihilator by hammering the place pool. Of $391,136 bets to place, $388,116 was bet on Nihilator, creating a minus place pool of $79,909.

Nihilator raced at Garden State Park seven times. The track has lost a total of $414,858 from minus pools bet on the colt.

Last week, Nihilator left from post 10 and was parked out the entire mile, finishing second by a neck to Armbro Dallas in the $770,000 Pilgrim Pace at Garden State Park.

It was only Nihilator's third loss in 38 career starts.

The victory avenged the defeat and sends the undisputed champion into retirement on a winning note. With him will go several harness racing records, including the fastest race time, a 1:49 3-5 score at the Meadowlands on Aug. 3.

Only Niatross has paced a faster mile, a 1:49 1-5 clocking in a time trial in 1980.

Nihilator has won more money than any standardbred with a career bankroll of $3,225,653. While touring on harness racing's Grand Circuit, Nihilator also racked up track records at the Meadowlands, Garden State Park and the Red Mile in Lexington, Ky.

Tito wants to return to Cougars

HOUSTON (AP) — Tito Horford, the central figure in one of the most complicated recruiting stories in NCAA history, says he wants to enroll at the University of Houston in January and play for the Cougars' basketball team.

"I'm positive I want to play for Houston," Horford said. "One of the reasons is that I've been in Houston the last three or four years and I have a lot of friends there. My dream is to play with the same friends I had in high school," he said.

But Horford's plans may be thwarted by an NCAA ruling last summer that he is not eligible to play at Houston because of a recruiting violation committed by a member of the Cougars' coaching staff.

AN NCAA subcommittee ruled the Cougars had gained an unfair recruiting edge when assistant coach Donnie Schverak visited Horford in his native Dominican Republic during a non-contact period.

A second appeal was scheduled to be heard two days after Horford went to Baton Rouge, La., and enrolled at Louisiana State. He was subsequently dismissed from the team by LSU Coach Dale Brown for missing a team meeting and a practice session.

"I realize I made a mistake to go to Louisiana," Horford told the Houston Post during a telephone conversation Wednesday night from Washington. "I'm interested in going to school here (the United States) and there's only one school I'm interested in — the University of Houston."

HORFORD, a 7-foot-1 center regarded as the nation's most coveted recruiting target a year ago, signed an early national letter-of-intent with Houston last November while a senior at Marian Christian.

Houston was forced to release Horford from the letter when school officials disclosed Schverak had visited Horford's home in July 1984, a time of dhe year such contacts are prohibited between recruiters and prospective student-athletes under NCAA rules.

U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, says he has been helping Horford try to extend his student visa. If the visa is not extended and Horford does not enroll in another school by next Sunday, he would be considered an illegal alien and subject to deportation.

"He really does want to go there (UH)," said Leland, who said he is optimistic Horford's visa problems will be settled soon.

Houston Athletic Director Tom Ford said the university would pursue a second appeal to the NCAA in an attempt to restore Horford's eligibility at UH if Horford enrolled on campus next spring and said he wanted to play basketball.

"We felt we put together a very good case for restoration of his eligibility at UH on the second appeal based on a number of things I cannot talk about at this time," Ford said.

"We thought we were slam-dunked on a jaywalking charge."

James Dean's persona captured in videotape legacy

By DAVID ELLIOTT
Copley News Service

On Sept. 30, 1955, James Byron Dean smashed his Porsche Spyder into the Ford of college student Donald Turnupseed on a highway near Cholame, Calif. Turnupseed survived, but Dean died of a broken neck. Four days later, "Rebel Without a Cause" opened in theaters, and James Dean began to be as immortal as movie stars can get — so famous that now, in 1985, Warner Home Video salutes his memory (and enriches itself at $99.95 a shot) with "The Dean Legacy," a video package of "Rebel," "Giant" and "East of Eden."

No other star has had quite that kind of tribute, even other posthumous deities such as Valentino, Monroe and Presley. And none of the big stars of Dean's own brief year in Hollywood, except maybe Monroe and Bogart, is remembered as passionately. Within a year of his death, the upstart hotshot from Indiana who had broken into movies after a few small but magnetic stage roles performed a stellar pole-vault over the laboriously built celebrity of Clark Gable, Gary Cooper and other Hollywood heavies. Today their fame is fatigued, many of their films nearly forgotten, while Dean sizzles on for kids born long after his death, and for aging fans to whom he is still the shiniest keepsake of their lost youth.

As early as late 1955, sober-minded citizens were wondering why, and coming up with pat answers. Dean was media-fixed as another "wild one," and in one of his many chameleon guises he pounded enough bongos and rode enough cycles to fit the cliche'. (What wouldn't have fitted in, in prim 1955, was his bisexual adventuring, although an element of androgyny was obvious in his acting.)

James Dean was quickly tagged as another hot fragment of the Brando explosion, and indeed "Rebel Without a Cause" was to have been a Brando film (just as Dean cleared the way for the next in line, Paul Newman, who broke through by inheriting Dean's next commitment, in "Somebody Up There Likes Me." And how many recall that Dean screen-tested with Newman for his own breakthrough, "East of Eden"?)

Dean's mythology is, for a film star, unusually alive. It feeds on the fertile crack between what he was and what he might have been, between his summing up of "the Method" as a new force in films and his forecasting of a style of hyperintensive personality that shoots off suggestive rays beyond any method or explicit content. Even when shoved by Director George Stevens into marginal, reactive moments in "Giant," Dean gobbled up everything around him — slouching his body and sinking his chin into his chest, while his eyes stared into an inner distance. He made Rock Hudson and Liz Taylor seem like busy bees who envied his honey.

ENTERTAINMENT

He packed a lot into three movies. They trace a trajectory between a raw, surging arrival (as the tormented hayseed in "East of Eden"), astonishing assurance as a symbol of youth (as moody newcomer Jim Stark in "Rebel") and a late burst of refined character acting (as wildcatter Jett Rink in "Giant") that may well have outlined the shape of his coming career.

A key factor in his cult survival is that his films, unlike most of Monroe's and nearly all of Presley's, remain deeply involving, if not exactly deep. They are taut, supercharged '50s melodramas, and they frame his talent flatteringly, so that the groping, body-twisting mannerisms that copycat actors soon junked into stale jokes have kept their fiery force in Dean's work.

Dean didn't live to make weak films and become fat and rich, like Brando. Yet like Brando he was talking about becoming a director or writer and, given his image's identity with youth, his genuine literary interests and his tendency to age prematurely — in some photos he looks a decade past his 24 years — he might well have stopped acting after a few more big character roles. Or, just as likely, given his recklessness, he would have met some other version of Turnupseed's Ford.

He had an amazingly supple face, and a serpentine mind to give it subtle shifts of motivation. Dean as the angry young stud was never as convincing as Brando, but as the haunted, secretive lad who hungers to be a man he was prodigious.

Pasadena Playhouse evicts spiders, pigeons, hoboes for new opening

By RICHARD BENKE

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Pasadena Playhouse — a training ground for such stars as Dustin Hoffman, Gene Hackman, Robert Young and William Holden — had been a home for spiders, pigeons and hoboes for the past 17 years.

In 1966, the Internal Revenue Service padlocked the Playhouse doors for non-payment of $31,000 in taxes. While supporters gamely staged shows for almost three more years, debts finally forced the theater-college to close.

But things are happening again at the Playhouse, a Spanish-style historical landmark in the heart of downtown Pasadena.

Plush new seats have been installed, newly painted walls have been reinforced to meet earthquake standards, new wiring and plumbing were put in, and a new season may be announced soon.

"We're planning an opening season, and we hope to have our brochure out for that season within the month," said Jessica Myerson, a member of the team formed by developer David Houk to manage productions under a contract with the city.

Recently, guests attended the first production on the Playhouse's main stage before a live audience since the old seats were auctioned in 1970: the taping of a TV special, "Deja View," on the music of the 1960s. Hosted by John Sebastian and featuring Graham Nash, the independent production will be telecast next month.

The city bought the Playhouse, founded in 1917 and heralded in its heyday as "the state theater of California," out of receivership from the Bank of America in 1975 and has struggled for 10 years to reopen it.

Pasadena tried unsuccessfully to interest Los Angeles County in a joint venture to run the theater in 1969.

"The people of Pasadena are trying to unload a white elephant on the rest of the taxpayers," County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn complained. "Those who vote for the Playhouse will be in the doghouse later on."

Other efforts, including one by actor Raymond Burr involving the University of the Pacific's theater department, fell through as well.

Houk has been working on the reopening for 6½ years, beset by numerous delays, the latest of which threatened a contract clause calling for a show by Dec. 1.

Houk said that he asked the city for an extension. He declined to elaborate but promised, "All I can tell you is there will be a season." He said he had until May to complete a successful season.

The Playhouse, founded by the late Gilmor Brown, produced 1,348 plays in its first 25 years, including the premiere of Eugene O'Neill's "Lazarus Laughed" in 1928.

Besides Burr, Young, Holden, Hackman and Hoffman, others who appeared in Playhouse productions included Dana Andrews, Karen Black, Charles Bronson, John Carradine, Lee J. Cobb, Agnes DeMille, Paul Muni, David Niven, Tyrone Power, Robert Preston, Sally Struthers, Gig Young and many others.

The theater's decline began after World War II, and Playhouse spokeswoman Peggy Ebright said it hit bottom with the bank auction in 1970.

"They sold every single thing in the Playhouse," she said. "Just before Halloween they sold the costumes. I think it was two bucks apiece."

Theater groups purchased them, so they went to good use, she said. But the theater has been virtually dark since.

"It looked pretty grim, mostly because the seats were gone," she said. "We did have some vagrancy. They built little fires and emptied the water hoses."

"There were black widows up in the tower building," which once housed the Pasadena Playhouse College of Theater Arts, she said. "There were a lot of pigeons up in the school — a little college of pigeons."

Houk said a $1.3 million federal grant and "$3 million that came out of our own pockets" refurbished the theater. He aims to raise $3 million more to develop a wing of the Playhouse and the building behind it into restaurants, shops and offices for regular income. About half that has been raised.

City Manager Donald McIntyre said the Dec. 1 deadline may be extended, but the city worries about the theater's ultimate success.

B-52 excavation near end; Hanoi to hand over remains

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The U.S.-Vietnamese excavation of a B-52 crash site in Vietnam will end Tuesday, and the next day Hanoi will hand over what it says are the remains of seven Americans killed in the Vietnam War, a Vietnamese Embassy spokesman said.

He gave no further details of the joint excavation in his statement Friday.

A team began digging at the site near Hanoi Nov. 19 and has recovered nearly 20 bone fragments and enough aircraft parts to determine that a B-52 crashed in the area.

The Vietnamese say a B-52 bomber was shot down by missiles Dec. 20, 1972, and four American airmen were killed.

Foreign Ministry officials in Hanoi said earlier that the remains to be delivered next week are those of Americans killed during air strikes in the Hanoi-Haiphong area.

WHY DOES GOD CARE?

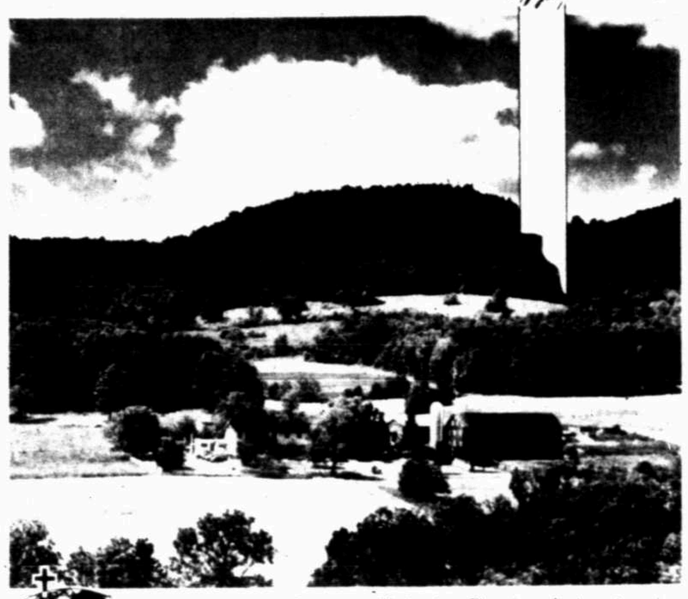

We are so tiny in the vastness of space, so drab in the grandeur of nature. Why does God care about each one of us?

This question has always plagued the mind of man. It will probably never be completely answered to his satisfaction until he sees and believes the evidence of man's importance to God: Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels.

It remained for Jesus Christ to reveal the love of God. Christians celebrate the sacrament which is their richest experience of the glory and honor God has given.

The world over, men will rejoice in the Divine Love, so far-reaching, that God gave His Son for humanity.

Macedonia Baptist presents 'M' Night Service

Macedonia Baptist Church, 201 S. Carver St., will present its annual "M" Night Service at 6 p.m. Dec. 8. "M" Night is a special service set aside yearly on the church calendar for motivating church members to become more actively involved in church training.

Special guests for this year's program are Caprice Scott and Carolyn Gilbert. Ms. Scott is a missionary in Kenya, Africa. She is affiliated with Trinity Fellowship, a non-denominational missionary outreach based in Kenya. Along with Ms. Scott's missionary work, she also serves as a teacher in special education for handicapped children in Niarobi, Kenya.

Caprice Scott

Carolyn Gilbert

Ms. Scott, a native of Ranger, is a graduate of West Texas State University, where she received her bachelor of science degree in special education. She also holds a master's degree from Texas Women's University, Denton.

Ms. Gilbert, a native Midlander, is a member of Greater St. Luke AME Church. She will be speaking on "Exercising Our Spiritual Gifts through Serving." She is the youth supervisor and pianist for the Cherub Choir at her church.

Ms. Gilbert attended Texas Tech University where she received a bachelor of business administration degree and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin where she received a master of business administration. She is employed by Conoco, Inc.

The church's pastor, the Rev. Otis Archie, invites the public to attend this special service, being presented by the church's Training Union Department. Buster Bell is director of the TUD and Myrtle C. Hall is program director.

Unity minister will host two-day series

Rev. Marianne Bowers, Minister of Unity of San Angelo, will be in Midland to host a two-day series on "What Unity Teaches About God and Jesus" and "What Unity Teaches About Health, Healing, Prosperity and Abundance."

Rev. Bowers

The series will be from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Sunday and Monday at the Hospitality Room of the Airport Executel.

Rev. Bowers is a graduate of the Unity Ministerial School, Unity Village, Mo. Since her ordination in June 1980, she has served as minister of Unity of San Angelo, with satellite groups in Midland-Odessa and Abilene.

In addition to her regular ministerial duties, Rev. Bowers writes, produces and presents the daily radio and television program "Upbeat."

A firm believer in teaching the basic principles of Unity, she styles her approach as "Truth-With-A-Light-Touch." Rev. Bowers attributes much of the dynamics of her presentations to her first Unity minister, Catherine Ponder, with whom she worked for many years as editorial assistant, and the driving force in her ministry is what she chooses to term "Ponder Power."

She is a cum laude graduate of Purdue University with a degree in psychology, and is a member of the American Association of University Women, the International New Thought Alliance, the International Platform Association, the National Association of Female Executives, and the Quartus Foundation.

A free-lance writer and editor, she is listed in Who's Who in the South and Southwest, Notable Women of Texas and Who's Who of American Women.

Jehovah's Witnesses focus on quest for global peace

Global peace — people's attention has been focused on world leaders' quest for this elusive goal.

However, from what source will global peace come? That question and what the Bible says was the theme for a public Bible lecture delivered by Gene Shalkoski, district overseer for the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society.

This talk was the main address at the two day circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses held at Ector Junior High School in Odessa earlier this month.

The assembled audience numbering 1,753 listened as Shalkoski pointed out that "instead of promises being fulfilled, conditions have grown progressively worse to the point of threatening human existence."

The audience was reminded of the efforts toward peace made by world governments in this century. "Following World Wars I and II, leaders spoke of peace, but promises based on treaties, League of Nations, United Nations, political alliances, regional pacts between nations, and other schemes have all failed to put an end to armed conflicts."

Shalkoski noted that the "record of man's quests for peace and his subsequent failure during this 20th century remained one of what the prophet Jeremiah wrote concerning the disappointment of unfaithful Judah at Jeremiah 8:15, 'There was a hoping for peace, but no good came.'"

Since man cannot bring global peace, Shalkoski said it would come from "Almighty God, Jehovah." He described how God has progressively foretold the steps he would take to restore peace to earth. "This would center on God providing his son, Jesus, as the needed ransom and laying the foundation for a Kingdom of peace by installing him as king on a heavenly throne."

The worldwide preaching of the Kingdom by Jehovah's Witnesses has gathered millions of people into a free society worshiping Jehovah under peaceful conditions. These millions now entertain the hope of survival into a righteous New Order on earth.

Nine-day pilgrimage to Rome, Assisi set for March

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On Easter Monday, March 31, pilgrims will fly from New York to Rome and Assisi as part of a nine-day pilgrimage under the direction of Father Ralph A. DiOrio.

The Pilgrimage will open in Rome on April 1 with mass in St. Peter's Basilica at the Altar of the Cathedral of St. Peter with papal audience on April 2 and mass at St. Paul's Outside the Walls in the afternoon.

Full sightseeing of ancient and modern Rome with time free for individual activities or visits to Anzio, Nettuno's Shrine of St. Maria Goretti, Monte Cassino and an excursion to Capri. Mass at the principal Shrines will be held each day during the pilgrimage when and where time permits. There will be services with DiOrio in addition to those scheduled above.

Closing the pilgrimage will be two days in Assisi, the City of St. Francis and St. Clare, with mass over the Tomb of St. Francis, visit to the Convent of St. Clare and final mass at the Basilica of St. Mary of the Angels, containing the Portiuncula Chapel.

Pilgrims return to New York on April 8 via Alitalia Airlines.

Persons wishing to accompany DiOrio or wishing literature on the pilgrimage, should write to Father DiOrio Pilgrimage, Catholic Travel Office, Suite 226, 4701 Willard Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., 20817.

CBN third-largest cable network

By MARCUS STERN
Copley News Service

VIRGINIA BEACH Va — In 1961, Rev. Pat Robertson, then a young Baptist missionary, founded the Christian Broadcasting Network with only $70 in cash.

Using the money toward the purchase of a dilapidated UHF station in nearby Portsmouth, Va., Robertson sought 700 sponsors willing to contribute $10 a month to keep his ministry on the air.

He called his donors "The 700 Club."

Today, the Christian Broadcasting Network is a $230 million-a-year enterprise. With its programs aired in nearly 70 nations, it is the third largest cable network worldwide.

It also operates a university, four television stations, including one in Southern Lebanon, and produces one of the oldest and most popular religious programs on television, "The 700 Club."

CBN's Virginia Beach complex is on 685 acres a few miles from the ocean and includes a $22 million broadcasting facility, a university, and a stately home for the university's chancellor — Robertson.

Christian Broadcasting Network University has about 750 students, including about 250 broadcasting students. Construction of a law school is underway.

CBN programs are beamed by satellite to cable services wired to more than 30 million households.

CBN wasn't always so successful.

But in 1981, realizing that religious programming alone would not attract large numbers of viewers, Robertson began airing a wide range of family entertainment.

Now, viewers of CBN can see such secular favorites as "Lassie," "Hazel," "Dobie Gillis," "Gunsmoke," "Wagon Train" and the "Best of Groucho."

Programmers at CBN credit the family fare for the organization's rapid growth in recent years.

The networks' proceeds come from commercials, which include many of the nation's top advertisers. There are no beer commercials, however.

CBN also has a commercial subsidiary that syndicates much of the company's original programming.

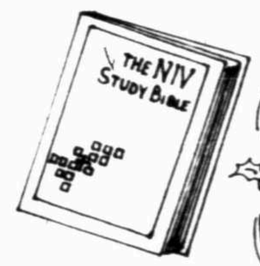

A religious soap opera failed to gain a following. But CBN, organized as a non-profit corporation, retains its spiritual staple. "The 700 Club" has a talk show format and is hosted by Robertson.

The show includes interviews, features, news and prayer — almost all of it geared around evangelical themes.

"The 700 Club" gets some of its news from the CBN Washington bureau, headed by James Whalen, former editor of the conservative Washington Times.

Jesus is the reason for the Season.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro appears on this veterans' program ad supporting a constitutional amendment that was on the Nov. 5 ballot. Mauro said no state money was spent on the advertisement.

Political ads not funded by state

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN (AP) — Land Commissioner Garry Mauro believes Texas' veterans program is the nation's best, so he put his face on billboards trumpeting it.

Gov. Mark White wants motorists to buckle up in their cars and students to buckle down on their studies, so he's in television ads seeking support for the seat belt law and no-pass, no-play rule.

Attorney General Jim Mattox wants Texans to make their child support payments, so he's on on billboards and TV ads to announce his aggressive collection campaign.

State Republican Chairman George Strake wants Democrats Mauro, White and Mattox beaten at the polls next year, so he would like to find something illegal with the ads.

"I sit there and kind of want to gag when I look at it," Strake said. "It's the most politically ambitious thing I've seen an incumbent do. They walk right on the edge of legality. But to come out with a real blast at them, I just haven't been able to do it."

The GOP chairman has found nothing illegal with the ads because state money has not been used to pay for them.

Mauro's face has appeared on two series of billboards, one for the veterans programs and one pushing a constitutional amendment that was on the Nov. 5 ballot.

No state money was spent on either board, he said. The first board said "Texas Veterans Programs: the Best in the USA." Mauro's name was prominently displayed, as was his photograph.

The billboards were donated by outdoor advertising companies. Production of the ad was paid for by Mauro's political fund.

"I didn't have to, but I paid for them," said Mauro, who is chairman of the Veterans Land Board. "Not only am I proud of the veterans program in Texas, not only do I talk about it, I've put my money where my mouth is. We spent $100,000 on those billboards."

"Obviously, it helps me politically. I would encourage any elected official to put up billboards if they are proud of their accomplishments," said Mauro. "Incumbents run on their records. If we have the best veterans' program in the U.S.A. it ought to help me get re-elected."

"I've never had a single person come up to me and question those boards, except journalists and political junkies," Mauro said.

One Waco billboard business official said he heard questions from other people.

"Is he really advertising himself or the Texas Veterans Program?" Foster and Kleiser official Scott Pitzer said he heard people ask.

As it turned out, the Waco firm had no boards available and didn't run the Mauro ad.

The money for the constitutional amendment ads, which carried the same picture of Mauro, was raised through a political committee set up to push the proposal which would have authorized the state to issue $500 million in bonds for veterans housing.

The Mattox child support billboards were funded, in part, by Scheppes Dairy of Dallas. Mattox aide Gary Witt said the attorney general's photo was put on them because it helped get across the message.

"Whenever we feel the weight of the presence of the attorney general warrants his appearance, we put him on. In child support, we really want to warn the people that if you don't do it, something bad is going to happen to you," said Witt.

Amarillo cancer center stages homecoming

AMARILLO (AP) — It was a day for rejoicing and smiles, not needles and radiation at Harrington Cancer Center.

Former and present cancer patients from the center gathered recently for a homecoming filled with worship and singing.

"We give thanks this day," the crowd of about 100 people boomed during the litany at the "Rejoicing in Life" service.

Patients ranged in age from 3 to 80 and had come from as far away as Hooker, Okla., and as near Amarillo.

"The homecoming shows people are going on," said 62-year-old Bill Kennedy of Amarillo, who was diagnosed with cancer in 1984.

He has completed his radiation treatments and now volunteers at Harrington Cancer Center.

"Cancer patients need lots and lots of support," Kennedy said.

The doctors and nurses at the center are special, he said, and they know all about cancer, except that they haven't had it. That's where he comes in.

"They don't know how it affects you emotionally," Kennedy said.

"Devastating" is the only word, he says, to describe that feeling when someone learns he has cancer.

Some people give up, and that's not what to do, Kennedy said.

"I look on the bright side of everything," he said. "Cancer is a terrible disease, but we are making strides."

Kennedy says the reunion reflects this.

One can look around the room at people who were diagnosed with cancer over 10 years ago and are still doing fine, he said.

"Just cause you have cancer, it doesn't mean you're going to die right away," Kennedy said.

Enjoyment is not something he equates with his volunteer work. But he describes it as rewarding.

When someone says to him "Thanks a lot for talking to me today" he says he gets his reward.

For him, cancer wasn't the end of the world, and he tries to convey this to other people, Kennedy said.

And Kennedy pointed to one particular cancer patient as an inspiration to all the patients who go to the center 3-year-old Martin Aquilar.

Martin won the distinction Friday of being the youngest cancer patient at the homecoming.

Martin has had Ewing's sarcoma, a bone cancer, since he was about 6 months old, his mother, Irene, said.

For her, the reunion represented something extra special. Martin finished his last treatment last month, she said.

"We can come here, and he's not sick," Mrs. Aquilar said.

"At times, I feel like we're all alone, but (at the reunion) I can see how they (other cancer patients) have progressed, and it gives you hope," she said.

Martin had become kind of a pet at the Cancer Center since the Aquilars moved to Amarillo five months ago. And he has a special routine to receive his chemotherapy.

Auto mechanic becomes 19th-century storyteller

TWO HARBORS, Minn. (AP) — Don Cameron sometimes spends 70 hours a week up to his elbows in grease, oil or auto electric problems at his auto shop. But other hours find him in a white wig, moustache and white suit — telling the stories that Mark Twain told a century ago.

His motivation, he says, is simple: Society needs the humanities. "It is our life support system," he says with passion.

Cameron, 61, had long admired the writer, but it wasn't until about five years ago at his church that he started adopting the Twain persona.

Church members patterned a Sunday service after a "meeting of the minds" television theme about Russian novelist Fyodor Dostoevsky, Britain's Queen Victoria, early feminist Lucy Stone and Twain.

The players rented costumes and learned the characters' words and thoughts to be more realistic as they related 19th century thinking to 20th century problems.

Bomb explodes in booby-trapped car, killing part-time Irish soldier

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A bomb exploded Friday in a booby-trapped car, killing a part-time soldier who served in a Protestant militia, police reported. The outlawed Irish Republic Army said its guerrillas planted the device.

A police spokesman in Belfast said the bomb killed Gordon Hannah, a 44-year-old captain in the Ulster Defense Regiment, just after he drove away from his home in Kilkeel, a fishing village on Northern Ireland's southeastern coast.

The mostly Roman Catholic IRA asserted responsibility for the bombing in a telephone call to a radio station in South Down. The IRA has been fighting a guerrilla campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland and unite the predominantly Protestant province with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic.

Some Soviets to be granted visas

MOSCOW (AP) — The emigration agency director has confirmed that some Soviet citizens married to Americans will be allowed to join their spouses, a member of the "divided families" group said Friday.

Rudolf A. Kuznetsov, chief of the All-Union Department of Visas and Registrations, said only that "a group" of spouses would be allowed to leave and the other requests would be rejected, the source said, asking not to be identified by name.

State Department officials in Washington said on Nov. 15, four days before the U.S.-Soviet summit in Geneva, that the Kremlin would grant exit permits to seven Soviet citizens married to Americans.

No visas have been issued so far and there has been no public comment from Soviet officials. There are about two dozen names on a U.S. list of Soviets being denied permission to join their American spouses.

Kuznetsov did not say which people would be granted visas, when they would get them or when the others might have another chance, the source said, but he did say it would be pointless to renew a visa application before spring.

Chinese disciplined for selling land

PEKING (AP) — Hundreds of peasants and rural officials have been disciplined for selling state-owned property, the state-run newspaper Economic Daily said Friday.

Private ownership of land is illegal in China, but the paper said some peasants in Zhijin county in southern Guizhou province sold land allotted to them by the government and used the profit for gambling or starting up businesses.

It said county officials had buildings constructed and then sold them or rented them out for personal gain.

The account did not say how violators were disciplined.

Tug Greenpeace docks in Sydney

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The tug Greenpeace, flagship of the environmental organization, docked in Sydney on Friday on its way to Antarctica, which the group is campaigning to turn into a world park.

A flotilla of small craft accompanied the vessel into Sydney harbor after its voyage from Auckland, New Zealand.

The 200-feet-long vessel replaces the Rainbow Warrior, which was mined and sunk by French agents in Auckland harbor on July 10 before it could lead a Greenpeace protest against French nuclear testing in the Pacific.

A Greenpeace photographer died in the bombing. Auckland High Court on Nov. 22 sentenced two French agents to 10-year prison terms for manslaughter and willful damage in the bombing.

Amal says it attacked Israeli troops with rocket-propelled grenades

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Shiite Moslem Amal militia said Friday it attacked positions manned by Israeli troops and their Christian militia allies in south Lebanon with rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns.

Israeli warplanes displayed their air supremacy for a third day by buzzing Syrian military positions in the eastern Bekaa valley before veering west to rattle Beirut with sonic booms as they broke the sound barrier.

Amal said it attacked Israeli positions and South Lebanon Army militiamen at Alman, a small village southeast of the SLA stronghold of Marjayoun, about eight miles north of the southern border with Israel.

The National Resistance, a coalition of a half-dozen Syrian-backed factions operating against Israel in south Lebanon, said it raided Israeli troops and the SLA Thursday night near Suweida, six miles north of Marjayoun.

The Resistance, which includes Amal, said the Israelis and the mainly Christian SLA retaliated with a tank-cannon barrage on the village of Habboush, near Suweida. No casualties were reported.

Israeli military sources in Tel Aviv said there was no Israeli activity in either area.

Security sources said Israeli soldiers machine-gunned a car near Arnoun, four miles southwest of Marjayoun, seriously wounding a 21-year-old Shiite woman.

The reported raids followed an Israeli sweep into the villages of Kafra and Yater on Thursday to search for guerrillas and arms caches.

Israel radio said three Katyusha rocket-launchers, which are capable of firing into northern Israel, were found in the villages in Israel's self-proclaimed "security belt" north of its border.

The radio said 21 Katyusha rockets have been fired from the buffer zone into Israel's northern Galilee panhandle since June 10, when Israel pulled back into the border enclave after a three-year occupation of south Lebanon.

In west Beirut, Sunni Moslem youths tossed hand grenades from speeding cars and burned tires in the streets in an attempt to enforce a strike to protest five days of street battles last week between Druse and Shiite Moslem militias.

But a joint Druse-Shiite task force formed under Syrian auspices Sunday to restore peace in west Beirut dispatched armed patrols to reopen shops, cafes and businesses and remove burning tires from the streets. No casualties were reported.

Sunnis make up the majority of west Beirut's population of 650,000. They are economically powerful, but have no militia to confront the private armies of Druse leader Walid Jumblatt and Shiite chieftain Nabih Berri.

Police said 68 people, most of them civilians, were killed and 300 wounded in the fighting for supremacy in west Beirut last week. Damage was estimated at about $3 million.

Sunni political and religious leaders have called for the formation of a special force of 5,000 army troops and policemen under Syria's sponsorship to take over west Beirut's security from the feuding militias.

Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon, is sending more military observers to reinforce a 36-man team already in Beirut to help restore peace.

Lebanese government sources said 92 more observers and about 400 bodyguards were expected to arrive in Beirut by this weekend.

American businessman released after five months in Chinese prison

PEKING (AP) — American businessman Richard S. Ondrik said Friday he was stunned when he was awakened by guards and led to freedom after spending five months in a prison.

Ondrik, an energy specialist based in Hong Kong, was serving an 18-month term in a Harbin city prison after he was convicted of causing a hotel fire that killed 10 people last April in Harbin, 1,600 miles northeast of Peking.

"I must admit that I was rather stunned when I was awakened by the prison cadre at 6:30 a.m. (Thursday) and told to wash my face, shave and pack my bags," Ondrik said in a statement.

"He (the guard) could not tell me the 'good news,' which had to await the official tribunal session announcement at 10 a.m." Ondrik said in a statement that was obtained from sources close to the U.S. Embassy.

Ondrik's statement said he was treated well, and his "overseers went out of their way in attempting to make my incarceration as pleasant as possible under the circumstances."

He said, however, that he would make no further statements regarding his imprisonment or release until he was reunited with his parents in Honolulu.

Charles Ray, an official at the U.S. Consulate in Shenyang, 310 miles south of Harbin, said Ondrik would leave the city Sunday for Hong Kong by way of Canton.

Ray, who went to Harbin on Wednesday night to assist in the release, said Ondrik was in good mental and physical condition.

Ondrik was sentenced on Aug. 13 and fined the equivalent of $46,900 on charges of criminal negligence in the April 18 Swan Hotel fire in Harbin. He could have received a sentence of up to seven years in prison.

A Harbin court ruled that he caused the fire by smoking in bed. Five North Koreans from an industrial mission and four Chinese hotel staffers leaped to their deaths from the top of the burning building. The 10th victim was Ondrik's Chinese-American business colleague, Alan Eng.

His company, Energy Projects (S.E. Asia) Ltd., paid the fine.

Ondrik's trial in July received extensive publicity in China, with Chinese authorities hailing the trial as an example of how foreigners and Chinese are treated alike under Chinese law.

However, some Western diplomats and business executives said that under Western law the offense would have been tried under civil law, and that the sentence Ondrik received might discourage foreign executives from coming to China.

Evidence at his trial, which was open to the foreign press, showed the hotel had no insurance, fire doors were locked, the security duty officer was drinking in the bar and it took 30 minutes for the fire department to arrive.

Ondrik said he would make no comment concerning the trial other than to say that the Chinese "followed the procedures and tenets of China's own unique legal system."

He added, "The tragedy of accidents and their aftermath is a calculated risk born by any expatriate conducting business in a developing country, and China is no exception."

Ondrik, who received a master's degree in Chinese studies from Indiana University, said: "There's no question that I will be returning to China and spending considerable time here in working with energy-related industries in concert with China's modernization program."

Two Louisiana parishes warring over oil-rich Civil War site

By DAVID McCORMICK
Associated Press

PORT HUDSON, La. — A point of high ground on the Mississippi River where Confederate cannons once shelled Union gunships is now the site of a modern battle between lawyers warring over disputed oil and gas royalties.

The land used to be in West Baton Rouge Parish, but the Mississippi has since moved course well to west, leaving it in territory now claimed by East Baton Rouge Parish.

An 1807 charter places the two counties' border in the middle of the Mississippi. Now that the river's meandering has left much mineral-rich land to the east, West Baton Rouge has gone to court seeking to prove that its border should be drawn where not where the river flows now, but where it coursed almost two centuries ago.

"It's a very interesting question," said Ernest Eldred, a lawyer for the state who is watching the dispute. "There's been a lot of new land created since the Civil War, and a lot of land titles that are going to have to be changed if they move the border."

West Baton Rouge Parish is hoping to win a share of $75 million in royalties held in an escrow account since the dispute was raised in 1979. Under Louisiana law, 10 percent of royalty money collected on state-owned land is forwarded to the parish the land is located in.

Officials across the river make no bones about their motive.

"We want West Baton Rouge to be entitled to any royalties to which it is entitled," stated Police Juror Ted Blanchard after the board recently announced plans to file suit in state court.

The suit also names East Feliciana Parish as a defendant, saying any change in the other two parishes' border could also affect its boundaries.

There has been no date set for a hearing.

According to Assistant Attorney General David Kimmel, state law holds that when a river changes course abruptly, the boundary line remains where the river used to flow. When change occurs gradually, the line moves with the river, he said.

But Kimmel said the law is aimed at state boundary lines, and that he is unaware of any previous suits involving parish borders.

The legal war is far more polite than the 1863 battle over Port Hudson, when the river lapped at the town's feet and Confederate batteries stood poised to prevent Admiral David Farragut from making his way upriver into the Rebel heartland.

Only one of Farragut's 15 boats, the flagship Hartford, passed the batteries. Another boat was lost to the Confederate cannons, and smoke from the artillery fire kept the rest of the fleet at bay to the south.

Today, war buffs visiting the site can no longer see the river from where the batteries once stood. Where the gunboats once sailed are fields and trees, the result of steady silting built up as the wayward river moved west.

If West Baton Rouge Parish wins claim to the land, it will also inherit responsibility for maintaining it, Lowrey said.

"Our attitude is going to be that if it's not ours, we're not going to have anything to do with it," he said. "Let them come across the river to maintain it. Let them tax it and try to collect."

Moving the parish border across the river could create real problems for West Baton Rouge Parish, Kimmel said.

"There are parts of Mississippi that lie on the Louisiana side of the river and vice versa," he said. "They sometimes have distinct difficulties in getting things done."

Seattle seaman pulls to renovate ship for hungry

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SEATTLE, Wash. — Don Tipton wants an ocean-going freighter so he can deliver groceries to starving nations as the start of a worldwide, multimillion-dollar, eight-ship program of mercy voyages directed by his Park West Children's Fund.

Unfortunately, there is only $38 in the Los Angeles charity's Wells Fargo bank account.

Yet at a mooring next to clattering Russ Trask Shipyard, just across Puget Sound from here...

There is the former USS Palisana, a 4,000-ton, ex-Navy store ship that a local marine company recently deeded to Tipton's charity. A crew of experts and handypersons is working for nothing on her mothballed innards and diesels pickled in Cosmoline. A British engineering officer, another volunteer, will come on board as soon as he can thumb a ride from London.

Tipton's list of freebies stretches from there to Alabama; legal counsel from O'Melveny & Myers of a Los Angeles firm, sheets and pillowcases from a the Holiday Inn at Brentwood. Toilet rolls. A five-day loan of a water blaster. Fast food by the bucket and farm produce by the ton. Plumbing parts and 200 gallons of yellow paint. A $3,000 tug tow from Tacoma to the Trask yard.

And Tipton has his eye on what might become additions to his navy: A Czech yacht currently frozen by a marshal's sale; a wooden tug that nobody wants to insure; and seven of Palisana's sister ships, one a derelict World War II mortuary ship that carried American dead from European battlefields.

"So why rattle a tin cup and bang on doors for money when there's another way?" boomed the bearded, 40-year-old rain barrel in a Woolly Pully.

"There's people and there's energy. There's spoilage and corporate waste.

"Example. The sheet metal I need for this ship is in some corporate backyard right now, rotting. There are samples, bad orders that weren't picked up, overruns. If you ask them (corporations) they'll tell you it's very valuable. But if you ask 'em properly and they realize what you're doing and recognize the tax value of a donation...well, they'll de-shelf it to make room for other things and give it to you."

Timing helps, said Tipton, and there is the power of prayer. If faith can move mountains, imagine how far it can pull a small ship. But just in case divine attention falters, meat and potatoes money has come from Brentwood Farms, an equestrian facility operated by Tipton on 750 acres of West Los Angeles land leased from the Getty Foundation.

"Right now, I don't need the money," he said. "If I run into a problem with the ship, something that needs money, can only be solved by money. then I'll go out after it.

"Until then, I'm after corporations and waste."

Tipton's Project Spirit graduated from California planning to Washington donkey work five weeks ago. Volunteers committed to Bruce Springsteen and world hunger have not been in short supply. Goodliness must be next to contagious because local hands have started to pitch in.

But who could resist the romance of returning a future to a tough little supply ship (butter and eggs and pot roasts from Seattle to Aleutian bases in 1944) that surely once felt the impatient footfalls of Mr. Roberts?

So dry dock and sandblasting is being planned for Palisana and her stern has been measured for a new name: Spirit. A vintage diesel generator fired up at the first touch and is running power to refrigerator holds and engine room. The galley, the hot plates, the vegetable steamers and coffee pot are functional.

Toilets flush and cabins are moving from chilly towards cheery and the ship smells lived in. Better yet, Tipton's scarfaced retriever (Capone, of course) and a beagle (John Henry), his gift to project vice president Sondra George, have signed on. As resident sea dogs.

"Are we going to make it happen?" said Tipton. "Yes. Absolutely. In less than a year from now, Spirit will sail with her first cargo and we'll go wherever the need is.

"You know, there are places where people are spending the equivalent of $60 for a chicken. There are 2,000 people a day dying in Ethiopia and that's down from 400 an hour. There's North Kenya. Uganda. Nigeria.

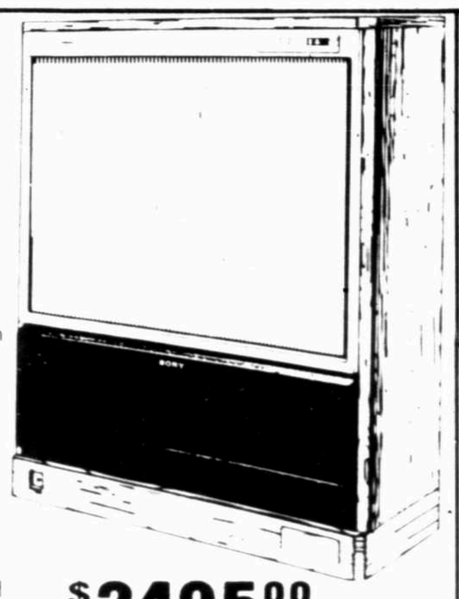

"Project Spirit will have at least one ship going around the world at all times. Then I'd like to see one ship in every major port city in the country...and they'll be floating, Queen Mary types as day care centers, as shelters for battered children, and operated by senior citizens who have so much to give...."

Ambitious. But, said Tipton, when your life has been geared to the outlandish, ambitious becomes only mildly challenging.

Adult makes discovery of space at challenging space camp

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — Bob Klein was in grade school in the 1960s, when a space launching was still enough of an unfathomable near-miracle to earn constant, breathless coverage on television. Klein would stay glued to the family television set until bedtime, then he'd turn on a little reel-to-reel tape recorder his mother gave him, point it toward the set and fall asleep on the living room floor. The next day he'd play the tape back, over and over.

The consuming passion that so many kids have with space remained with Bob Klein. Now an 11-year Army man from Arlington, Va., Klein spent three days in November at the Alabama Space & Rocket Center's Space Camp, a short course for amateur astronauts.

On the afternoon of the third day, Klein was sweating it out in the right seat of the camp's space shuttle cockpit simulator. As pilot, Klein and the mission commander were responsible for the safety of their craft and a half-dozen mission specialists who were along for the ride.

Klein, a private pilot in real life, thought that he was used to handling airborne emergencies, but this was something else. First the booster rockets misfired, then wouldn't jettison. Then there was an engine fire.

One (space walk simulator) has you strap in, flip completely upside-down and hang there with the blood rushing to your head while you try to unfasten a small metal box held on with four bolts, using a socket wrench. "Hey, space isn't all fun and games," said our mildly sadistic instructor, who remained right side up.

By flipping the right switches, Klein managed to get the shuttle's cargo door open to launch a satellite. But the satellite wouldn't launch. Then the door wouldn't close. "Whew," Klein said.

MEANWHILE, THE CAUSE of these problems, instructor Gene Jackson, sat at a control panel in a distant room flipping the switches that were making Klein's life a simulated hell. Jackson was grinning. "Let's see how he handles this," Jackson said, flipping the toggle switch that made warning lights on Klein's control panel illuminate, telling him that he'd just lost all cabin pressurization. Most of the camp's instructors are college students, and most, like Jackson, have a mildly sadistic bent.

Through his headset, Klein alerted mission control that he'd just lost pressurization and asked for instructions. In another room, Mission Director Steve Weisblatt (actually a physician from Bronx, N.Y.) flipped through the mission director's handbook and found which one of the 200-plus switches Klein faced was the proper one to restore pressurization. Weiblatt found the right paragraph, Klein found the right switch and the shuttle was saved. At least until Jackson could decide on the next emergency.

Klein, Weisblatt and 26 other adults, male and female, ranging in age from 18 to 63, paid $400 each to enroll in the three-day camp. They'd hear lectures from experts, tour the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Marshall Space Flight Center, wander through the Space & Rocket Center's mammoth museum and take part in a couple of simulated space missions that would have delighted Walter Mitty.

THOSE PLAYING ASTRONAUT included a teacher from New York, a computer programmer from Florida, a banker from Illinois, an "entrepreneur" from Hollywood and an oncologist from Arizona. And me, a reporter from Dallas.

Adult space camp is actually a spinoff a space camp for kids that was founded in 1982 at the suggestion of the late Dr. Werner von Braun, the nation's chief rocket scientist and former director of the Marshall Space Flight Center a few miles from the camp. Von Braun was worried that the youth of America who — like Bob Klein — showed an unusual and abiding interest the space program had no place to go for formal, in-depth training. Since the program began, Space Camp has hosted 7,995 kids for the various weeklong camps held from March through September. The adult camp was founded last year, and more than 500 men and women have attended the three-day sessions that run from September to mid-November.

Check-in for the last space camp of 1985 was at 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 17, at the Space Camp's odd yellow-plastic building — formerly a pavilion at the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn. — located on the edge of the Space and Rocket Center grounds.

Upon arrival we were measured for the familiar blue jumpsuits worn by NASA astronauts during training, then divided into two teams, appropriately called "Challenger" and "Discovery." That afternoon we Challengers got a guided tour of the museum, then an early dinner at the Space and Rocket Center's dining room unfortunately named Lunch Pad.

AFTER DINNER WE were introduced to the various simulators. There are mock-ups of the cockpit of the space shuttle, mission control headquarters, Spacelab and a space station. There are several simulators that attempt to duplicate a spacewalk; one of them has you strap in, flip completely upside-down and hang there with the blood rushing to your head while you try to unfasten a small metal box held on with four bolts, using a socket wrench. "Hey, space isn't all fun and games," said our mildly sadistic instructor, who remained right side up.

After all this simulating, we were assigned jobs for a Monday and Tuesday mission. Monday, I would be the launching and landing director in Mission Control; Tuesday, I'd be payload specialist C, shot off into space to conduct scientific experiments that would benefit all mankind. Sobering stuff. After practicing for our missions, it was off to our bunk beds in the dormitory.

The following morning was reserved for mission practice and the academic portion of the training, which included several lectures, two of them by pioneering NASA scientists who worked with von Braun. The most interesting lecture was by Boeing Co. engineer Art Bozlee, who spoke not about engineering but his hobby, the investigation of the Soviet space program. Bozlee and a friend who shares his interest own the largest civilian library of Soviet space material in the country, and they're working on a book. Bozlee said that the Soviet program is remarkably sophisticated in some areas, very unsophisticated in others.

FEW OF US were aware, for instance, that the Soviet space capsules have leather-covered walls and wood-lined doors.

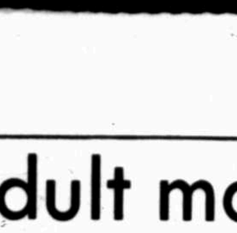

Late Monday afternoon it was time for Challenger's first mission. Some of us manned the remarkably accurate control panels in Mission Control, others were in the shuttle cockpit, others worked in Spacelab and still others made spacewalks. Everyone was audibly linked with headsets, and most of us could monitor each other's progress and problems over a series of closed-circuit TV cameras.

As launching and landing director, my job began at T-minus 10 minutes, meaning 10 minutes before countdown. On a big video screen at the front of mission control, we watched a tape of the real shuttle awaiting takeoff. Periodically I'd check with the weather and tracking officer on takeoff weather; with the shuttle commander and pilot on their instrument readings in the cockpit; with the mission director and flight director for readings on their instruments. We had seen a film shot in the real mission control, and this seemed remarkably similar.

Upon launch, the problems began. No sooner had I announced, "The shuttle has cleared the tower!" (and it really had, as we were, by then, engrossed in the tape of the real shuttle clearing the tower on our video monitors) than instructor Jackson began flipping his own switches. The rockets weren't producing enough thrust, and we solved that one. Some of the sensors on the shuttle malfuctioned, and we overrode them.

Parents of transplant patients speak out

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Sandra Fuller speaks out every chance she gets about the desperate need for human organs for transplantation. It's a full-time effort that's taken her from coast to coast.

Mary Ann Engebretsen devotes virtually all her free time to her foundation to increase donor awareness and assist families seeking organs.

Nearly every day, Charlie Fiske counsels and consoles parents looking for advice and support while they await a transplant for their sick child.

The three parents understand. They have been through it with their own children.

"Parents are taking a more active role. It's very necessary. It's parents in this position who know best what it's like," said Mrs. Engebretsen, 31, chairwoman of the National Organ Transplant Education Foundation in Plantation, Fla.

"You're never uninvolved in the issue, only because you're still living with a person who's been through that," Fiske agreed.

Fiske, 40, a health care executive from Bridgewater, Mass., gained national attention on Oct. 28, 1982, when he addressed about 400 pediatricians at their New York convention and begged them to help find a liver for his dying daughter, Jamie.

The following week, the 11-month-old girl received a new liver and renewed life. A healthy, happy Jamie celebrated her fourth birthday Tuesday.

"We weren't sure she would see her first birthday. So when you get a call from another parent in a situation where time is running out, you're reminded pretty quickly," Fiske said.

About 350 people are awaiting liver transplants nationwide at any one time, and another 200 are awaiting hearts, according to Don Denny, organ procurement coordinator for the University of Pittsburgh, the nation's leading transplant center.

"We're doing more transplants, but that doesn't necessarily translate into fewer people dying while waiting because there are more people being referred for heart and liver transplants," Denny said.

Mrs. Engebretsen, an elementary school teacher, formed her foundation in August 1984, seven months after her daughter, Trine, underwent a liver transplant. Trine is now an energetic 4½-year-old.

A happy ending for one patient does not signal the end of the transplant crisis, Mrs. Engebretsen said. "The problem is never over. Many, many people are waiting every day."

Sandra Fuller, mother of 9-year-old Kimberly Fuller of Yukon, Okla., who received a heart-lung transplant recently at Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh, speaks out around the country on the need for organ donors.

"Mrs. Fuller has become very sophisticated because of the tremendous love and concern for her little girl. Every one of them (poster parents) has an overwhelming love and ability to get beyond their fear to go on in a positive direction to helping other families."
— HHS spokeswoman Kay Robichaud

Sandra Fuller contacted the nonprofit foundation when her 9-year-old daughter, Kimberly, needed a new heart and lungs.

A public relations specialist who serves on the organization's advisory board assisted the Yukon, Okla., woman in her campaign.

"When it's your kid out there dying, the word has to get out," said Mrs. Fuller, 34.

She wrote to every congressman and senator urging them to support legislation to help increase the availability of donor organs. She went on TV, addressed organ transplant task forces and was responsible, in part, for a U.S. Department of Health and Human Services poster showing 28 children awaiting transplants.

"Mrs. Fuller has become very sophisticated because of the tremendous love and concern for her little girl. Every one of them (poster parents) has an overwhelming love and ability to get beyond their fear to go on in a positive direction to helping other families," said department spokeswoman Kay Robichaud.

"On an emotional level for us, we felt we were doing something rather than just sitting around," said David Fuller, 37, a commercial sign salesman.

Time was running out for Kimberly, however, and the increasingly ill girl told reporters at a Pittsburgh news conference Oct. 30 that she'd gladly donate her organs to someone else if a donor couldn't be found in time.

Three weeks later, on Nov. 20, Kimberly's 1½-year wait came to end. She received the heart and lungs of a 4-year-old Arizona boy, becoming the youngest person in the country to undergo the double transplant.

The happy endings of these much-publicized cases may be deceptive, according to Fiske.

"Parents say, 'If I don't get media coverage, my child will die.' It's not a media issue. It's a medical issue," he said.

Transplant surgeons, like Dr. Robert Hardesty of the University of Pittsburgh, insist that need and tissue compatibility, not publicity, lead to organ matches.

"On the other hand, in a positive sense, the more awareness there is of the need for donors, such as Mrs. Fuller's efforts, that probably does help," Hardesty said.

Mrs. Fuller says she'll never know for sure whether any of her work led, even indirectly, to Kimberly's transplant. She said it doesn't matter.

"We've fought so hard, we've worked so long trying to increase donor awareness. Hopefully, someplace along the line it's done some good," Mrs. Fuller said.

Proxmire: Llama is Republican

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) — Snubbed by a llama, Sen. William Proxmire concluded the beast must have been a Republican.

The Wisconsin Democrat spent a day recently helping care for animals at the Myrick Park Zoo, his latest temporary duty in a series of state visits in which he works for a day alongside constituents in their various jobs.

Proxmire got the cold shoulder from the llama when he tried to offer the South American animal some breakfast.

"Must be a Republican," he said.

Proxmire said his last temporary job in La Crosse was about six years ago, "filling potholes with the highway department."

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A pilot on a domestic flight made an emergency landing after discovering a yard-long, striped snake moving around his feet, the official Antara news agency said today.

The pilot told the control tower at an airport on the Indonesian island of Sulawesi that he wanted to return to the airport because of a minor disturbance, the agency said.

Security officers removed the snake after the plane landed, and the snake caused no injuries.

Young soldiers

Two boys, a 10-year-old with an M-1 carbine rifle at left, and a 12-year-old carrying a rocket-propelled grenade on his back, were among a group of Colombian leftist guerillas when this photo was taken last year in Corinto. These guerrillas are sending children as young as twelve into combat.

Children armed with rifles fight for guerrilla cause

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Leftist guerrillas are sending children as young as 12 into combat, armed with assault rifles nearly as tall as themselves.

Last month three girls — 12, 13 and 14 years old — were killed when guerrillas of the April 19 movement ambushed an army patrol near the town of Tulua, about 250 miles southwest of the capital of Bogota.

The report came from Tulua Mayor Alvaro Leon in a broadcast interview. He said the children's bodies were so torn by grenade shrapnel and bullets that it would be difficult to identify them.

Twenty guerrillas and four soldiers were killed, the Defense Ministry said. Guerrilla reports on fighting, slipped under the door of the AP's Bogota office, say the army always distorts such figures in its favor.

It is not unusual to find children helping out in guerrilla camps in Central America and South America, but sending youngsters to fight usually indicates desperation.

Fighting between the April 19 Movement, known as M-19, and the army the last few months has been the heaviest in the last 30 years of almost constant guerrilla insurrection in this country of 30 million people.

More than 200 guerrillas and 70 policemen and soldiers have been killed, most of them in the Andes in southwest Colombia, according to military communiques and broadcast interviews with small town officials.

The M-19, which the army estimates has about 5,000 combatants, broke a one-year truce last June.

The April 19 Movement, which takes its name after the date of an allegedly fraudulent presidential election in 1970, is a Cuban-line group.

The three girls killed near Tulua are not the first youngsters to die fighting for the rebel cause recently.

A 10-year-old boy was killed as the tried to place a bomb in a government building in Medellin in September, the police there said. Medellin, in western Colombia, is the country's second-largest city with 2 million people.

On Oct. 1, a 16-year-old girl armed with a submachine gun and hand grenades was killed in a shootout with policemen in Bogota.

Ten other guerrillas, all between the ages of 17 and 23, three of them women, were also killed in that battle.

The guerrillas had hijacked a milk truck and were apparently on their way to a lower class neighborhood in the south of Bogota to give the milk away in the streets to the poor.

Colombian television news programs have shown film taken at M-19 base camps, showing children who appear to be as young as 10 and struggling to handle big Belgian FALs and other heavy assault rifles.

The coverage includes interviews with the children, who say they want to fight against oppression.

In the federal district of Bogota there are 690,196 primary school age children, but no room in public schools for 140,307 of them, the Ministry of Education has said.

Many schools have dirt floors, no lighting, no toilets and no heating. The temperature sometimes drops to near freezing in Bogota, at 8,000 feet.

In the countryside, there are few primary schools and no secondary schools.

The Colombian army's dealings with the peasantry may contribute to the popularity of the M-19, which grew from a scant 750 combatants seven years ago.

Generation of war endures in Beirut

Moslem Ghazi Sabbagh, 20, a university student, said, "I can't sleep unless I hear the sounds of shells." On quiet nights he plays a tape he made of the shellfire, the mortars, the rocket-propelled grenades, the AK-47s, what Beirutis call "the symphony."

By HALA JABER
Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — They may not know Grimm's fairy tales, but Beirut's children can tell the difference between the sound of a 106mm recoilless rifle and a 120mm mortar. Toddlers can tell an incoming shell from an outgoing.

They are Lebanon's war generation, raised during a decade of civil war and facing bleak years ahead in a country in ruins.

"If we continue this way, our future is a very sad one with the kind of children we're raising," said Iman Khalife, a Beirut nursery teacher.

"One wonders what these children will be like when they are older, what with all the ugliness surrounding them."

Amid daily fighting, a generation of children has lost direction.

"A child is no longer a child," said Miss Khalife.

She said the 3- and 4-year-olds she works with "don't talk about the kind of things that childrfn normally talk about. Their conversations revolve around shelters, explosions, battles and fighting, electricity cuts and water shortages."

Their favorite game is "war," she said in an interview.

"They pretend a shell has exploded nearby and then they all start to scream, some hitting the ground while others huddle in hideouts like they do in their shelters at home.

"Life is distorted for them. They don't know what the reality around them is anymore."

WITH AS MANY as 130 distinct religious, ideological and social groups, many with widely differing visions of the Lebanon they are fighting for, the young generation has grown up with a sharp sense of alienation.

"This is a very serious problem for young people," said Dr. Samir Khalaf of the American University of Beirut.

"How do you expect to reintegrate youth into a society they can't identify with, a society they can't understand; more importantly a society they don't know?"

Like everything else in Lebanon, the young generation is divided.

The Green Line that separates Beirut into mutually hostile Christian and Moslem camps separates the young as well. Before the war people on both sides mingled all the time.

Now the young go to separate schools. The history books they read give different versions of the past and the centuries-old feuding that has kept their communities apart.

According to Khalaf, the war has forced people increasingly into what he calls "bubbles," to the extent that families, rather than communities, have become the key social grouping.

This, he argues, limits youngsters' outlooks and comprehensions of the world as they are squeezed into ever-diminishing social contact, even among people of their own religion, class or sect.

"WHAT DO YOU say to a 3-year-old child who asks you why Christians and Moslems can't live together?" Miss Khalife lamented.

"Their childhood has been hijacked," said Professor Laila Farhood, a mental health specialist at American University.

Lebanon's teen-agers and young people in their 20s have spent the past 10 years "witnessing a catalogue of horror," Khalaf observed.

He said most Lebanese have gone into a chronic state of mourning, "be it for losing friends, family, property, opportunities or wasted years."

"But the most painful of all," he said, "are those grieving the loss of a way of life that may never be restored."

Unlike young girls elsewhere, where main preoccupation are hairstyles or fashions, Hala Tawil, 22, an English-language student at the university, is more concerned with survival.

She has learned which corner of her house provides the best protection during shellings, how to study by candle light during the frequent power cuts, how to get through the often bewildering jigsaw puzzle of militia checkpoints, how to get by without the things that girls in other countries take for granted, like going dancing or to the movies, going out on a date.

"We've lost a lot of things because of this war," she said. "We've lost our youth because what has gone will never come back. There is no purpose anymore, nothing to aim for."

"I can't sleep unless I hear the sounds of shells," said Moslem Ghazi Sabbagh, 20, another university student.

ON QUIET NIGHTS he plays a tape he made of the shellfire, the mortars, the rocket-propelled grenades, the AK-47s, what Beirutis call "the symphony."

Michel Ayyoub, 21, was 11 years old when the war started. His family was shelled out of three homes between 1975 and 1983 and he now lives in Christian East Beirut.

He attended the university, which is in Moslem West Beirut, until 1983 but had to give up his business studies when it became too dangerous to cross the Green Line. Now he's an artilleryman with the Lebanese Force militia.

Your horoscope

BY JEANE DIXON

Sunday, December 1, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Do things with style and your career will soar to new heights. Original ideas set you apart from the crowd. Let a business or romantic partner know your desires in a matter-of-fact way. Get out your pencil and calculator before saying "yes" to a financial agreement. A new romance or friendship expands your horizons. You give serious thought to changing your lifestyle. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: actor-writer-director Woody Allen, comedian-actor Richard Pryor, Mary Martin, New York Mets slugger George Foster, Bette Midler, actress Charlene Tilton, golf's Lee Trevino, actor David Doyle, singer Lou Rawls, ballet's Alicia Markova.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take the phone off the hook and relax. A day of peace and quiet will give you a whole new perspective. You could be falling in love without even realizing it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You learn how to encourage activities that will bring you and loved one closer together. A light touch helps you make an important point without irritating a good friend. Use humor.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A major new development could change your plans for the week ahead. Turn your back on someone who tries to give you a hard time. You rise to a challenge and win big!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A happy-go-lucky day lies ahead. Send a letter or post card to someone you love. A new venture fills you with joy and anticipation. Give lots of thought to your preparations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A shared experience draws you and that special someone closer together. A simple statement is more convincing than a long explanation. Stop being such a recluse. Get out and socialize more.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Focus on someone's strengths, not his weaknesses. A positive and affectionate manner works wonders. Loved ones are touched by your thoughtfulness. Write to someone who may be feeling lonely as the holidays approach.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A family member or close neighbor will appreciate a helpful reminder. Be tactful. Romance could be in a slump. Get together with people who share your interests. Music relaxes guests.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Are you trying to convince others ... or yourself? Think about it. A new approach will eliminate much of the tension in your life. Encourage a family member to return to the fold.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Think about what you may be doing to someone else if you make a selfish decision. Solo endeavors hold the greatest promise. Get rid of negative thoughts and associates. Rely on yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A student receives financial assistance from a loving sponsor. You learn something from sharing an idea with a confidant. A phone call brings immediate results. Relocation could hold special appeal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A young person's dazzling performance inspires you to do good works. Avoid making promises you may not be able to fulfill. Actions speak louder than words. Roll up your sleeves and get busy!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A half-hearted effort will not succeed. Put real feeling into whatever you do. Discuss a trust or jointly-owned property with family members. New ideas receive close attention.

Soviet chess player praises Fischer

Karsparov

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) - Soviet grandmaster Garri Karsparov, at 22 the youngest-ever World Chess Champion, has praised former world titleholder Bobby Fischer of the United States.

Reporting a Yugoslav television interview Kasparov gave in Moscow a day earlier, the state-run Tanjug news agency Thursday quoted the new champion as saying, "In a juster world of chess, we might be able to see Fischer at the chess board again."

He said, "Fischer was the first to introduce scientific method into chess" and added the American "not only made chess more popular but also raised its quality."

Fischer, who held the world crown from 1972 till 1975, lost the title by default after refusing to accept International Chess Federation rules for a championship match in April 1975.

Kasparov gained the title earlier this year after beating Anatoly Karpov.

Recalling that FIDE did "great injustice to Fischer," Kasparov reportedly stressed in the interview that "the role of that organization should be to benefit chess and chess players and not the opposite."

VINTON, Iowa (AP) — The loss of a job won't dim one of eastern Iowa's better-known displays of Christmas lights.

Larry Kersten, who worked for more than 21 years at FMC Corp. in Cedar Rapids, was among hundreds of employees put out of work this year when the construction equipment producer closed the plant.

But Kersten still plans to switch on 16,000 Christmas lights for the 21st holiday display at his home.

Actually, he plans to start a week earlier than usual. Because the first Saturday in December comes so late this year, the Kerstens decided to switch on the lights starting this Saturday .

Last year, the Kerstens added the 48th scene to their Christmas pageant — a "Cabbage Patch" scene that included a stork, Cabbage Patch kids and Santa Claus with a stethoscope. This year, they added 1,750 more lights.

Kersten said it never occurred to the family not to have the display this year.

"We have that little donation thing by the road and that's more or less covered its expenses. We've got our fingers crossed this year," Kersten said.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Liviu Ciulei, who will end five years as the Guthrie Theater's artistic director next March, will return as a guest director in February 1987.

Ciulei will return to stage Euripides' "The Bacchae," the concluding production in the Guthrie's 1986-87 season, the theater announced Thursday.

He and two other directors — fellow Romanian Lucian Pintilie and British director William Gaskill — will participate in an eight-play season that features restagings of two plays from the Guthrie's past, plus contemporary classics by Harold Pinter and Eugene Ionesco.

The first two productions of the 1986-87 season have been staged by the Guthrie. Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," which opens June 6, was first seen at the Guthrie in 1964. "The Taming of the Shrew," which joins the repertory on June 27, was staged in 1971. Directors have not been named.

Pintilie, who staged a controversial version of "Tartuffe" at the Guthrie last year, will return to direct a production of Pinter's 1958 play, "The Birthday Party," which opens July 18.

Joining "On the Verge" in an autumn repertory will be Ionesco's "Rhinoceros," staged by Associate Director Stephen Kanee.

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) - Greek Leonidas Kavakos and Soviet Ilja Kaler have been declared co-winners of the fifth international Jean Sibelius violin competition.

The first prize carried a cash award of $5,000 for the two co-winners announced Thursday.

Vilmos Szabadi of Hungary placed third and received a cash award of $3,000.

In all, 59 violinists from 22 countries participated in the contest dedicated to Finland's most famous composer, Sibelius.

LONDON (AP) - The diaries of John Braine, author of the landmark novel "Room at the Top," have been withdrawn from auction because they failed to bring the minimum price demanded.

The diaries, which Braine had hoped would raise enough to buy him an apartment in London, were expected to raise at least $36,000 when they were put up for auction by Bloomsbury Book Auctions.

Braine, 63, says he was left virtually penniless and homeless after leaving his wife three years ago for another woman. He now rents a one-room apartment.

The handwritten diaries in 130 notebooks cover about 30 years of the author's life and chronicle the writing of his best-known novels. "Room at the Top," his 1957 book about an unscrupulous young man climbing the social ladder, was one of the first works on the much-explored theme of the "Angry Young Man" rebelling against Post-World War II British society.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — If sales are hurt by false rumors that your company puts cockroach flour in its pies, you're better off waging an all-out campaign to refute the rumor than ignoring it, a Tulane University professor says.

"Hit 'em hard and fast," said Dr. Fredrick W. Koenig, a professor of social psychology whose book "Rumor in the Marketplace" was just published by Auburn House Publishing Co.

"Either it's a problem or it isn't. And if it is, then you do everything you can to extinguish it," said Koenig, who has been studying commercial rumors since 1977.

In the last several years, such false but damaging reports have included claims that Proctor & Gamble was in league with Satanists and that Wendy's and then McDonald's hamburgers were made with worm meat.

Koenig's book says a company confronted with a rumor has four choices:

- Do nothing and hope the rumor will burn itself out.
- Do something locally as rumors erupt, rather like fighting brush fires.
- Try to deal obliquely with the rumor, without ever mentioning the rumor itself.
- Wage an all-out campaign, using all the media resources available.

Koenig, who serves as a consultant to companies that want to quash rumors, said his preferred approach is not always popular.

"There are poeple who think that if you try to fight a rumor that you're just calling attention to it," he said.

He said he never planned to become an expert on commercial rumors.

It started when he read an article about the rumor that McDonald's President Ray Kroc was giving money to the Church of Satan.

"I thought, 'That's the craziest thing I ever heard of,'" said Koenig.

"And I decided I'd call (company spokesman) Doug Timberlake in Oakbrook, Ill.," said Koenig. "This is one of these examples where you do something on impulse and it changes your whole life."

As media coverage of the rumor continued, Koenig said, Timberlake started referring calls to him.

"So AP, the Wall Street Journal — everybody was calling me as the expert on rumors," he said. "Before I knew it, I was the internationally renowned expert on commercial rumors."

Koenig said he originally thought the McDonald's rumor might make a good case study for a scholarly article, but "instead of an article, before too long I ended up with enough material for a book."

Manager entertains thousands of drop-ins

By RICK SMITH

POTTSBORO, Texas (AP) — Jim Williams manages the most popular bed and breakfast business on the Red River.

He entertains hundreds of thousands of travelers each autumn.

He never minds when parties of 500 or more drop in unannounced.

And he only advertises by word of mouth — or beak.

Williams manages the 39-year-old Hagerman National Wildlife Refuge on Lake Texoma near Pottsboro.

Winged visitors of every shape and size stop over at the 11,319-acre park each fall and spring during migrations.

Navigating by landmarks, the angle of the sun, and a mysterious internal compass, birds from across North America home in on places like Hagerman.

"Birds are pretty. Ducks, especially, but even something as nasty and mean as a starling. Once you really look at a starling you begin to see how it shines, green and purple and black, white little dots all over them. "They're still nasty little buggers, but they're beautiful, too."

— Jim Williams, manager of wildlife refuge

Some are en route to refuges on the Texas coast, while others set their sights on Mexico.

One group of Hagerman guests, the tall grass prairie flock of Canadian geese, migrates farther than any other North American water fowl. They fly from north of the Hudson Bay to spots in south Texas.

Bald eagles stopped by, and the pelicans have already moved through — 30,000 strong — clouding the autumn skies.

"They travel on thermals, like buzzards, hundreds and hundreds of them at a time," said Williams.

"They look like so many silver balloons, bubbling around, caught in a vortex."

Fall also brings the watchers of birds. They range from expert birders who follow the migration, state by state, to people who can't tell a sparrow from a parrot.

"Bird watching is a challenge. It has the same appeal, I think, as hunting. It's trying to outwit the game, to see who's smarter," Williams said.

Though he courts all visitors, human and fowl, Williams plays favorites.

The refuge is designed for birds. Wheat fields lure fly-in tourists. Open meadows and marshes, brushy thickets and thousands of oaks and elms offer birds shelter for a night or an entire season.

People are welcome to watch. There is a self-guided auto tour route, a short nature trail, and a visitor's center.

But make no mistake: Birds come first here.

Only two other refuges are located in North Texas, both in the Panhandle.

"We don't choose where the refuges are, the birds do," said Williams.

Instant city rises above one-time Texas prairie

EDITOR'S NOTE — Las Colinas, which means "The Hills," is not exactly a city, but it certainly can pass for one. Whatever it is, it shows how fast a planned community of skyscrapers and homes can grow with generous applications of Texas money.

By DOUG CRICHTON

IRVING (AP) — Even in a place like Texas, where oil rigs and glassy skyscrapers spring up virtually overnight, something as vast as Las Colinas was still a gamble.

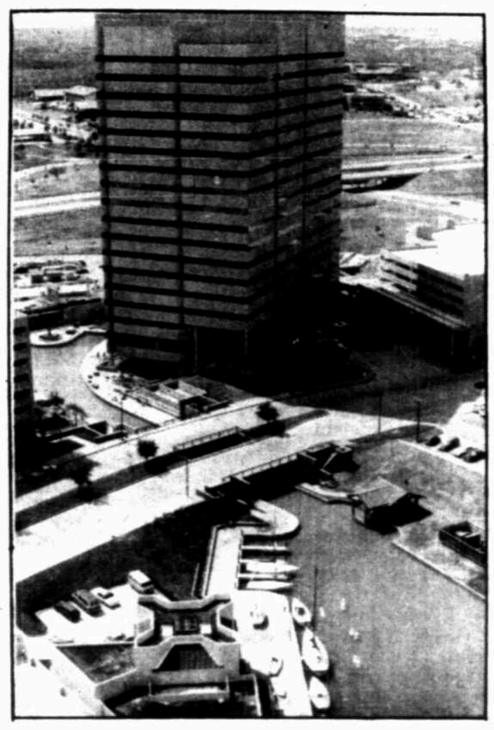

Less than a decade ago, as the nation was in the throes of an economic recession, the "city" was just 12,000 acres of scrubby prairie with miles of granite-flanked streets that led nowhere. Sewer lines, canals, and even a lake bed, sat neatly excavated but unused.

But now, as though the water pumped into Lake Carolyn sparked a chain reaction, dozens of skyscrapers have popped up from the North Texas dust, Venice-style taxis motor through picturesque canals, and homes of more than 22,000 people dot the manicured landscape.

"I suppose you could say I'm satisfied with how it's doing," says Ben H. Carpenter, former president of Dallas-based Southland Financial Corp., who guided the project to maturity over the last 15 years.

Now one of the nation's largest planned communities, Las Colinas in less than nine years has evolved into Dallas' second downtown and a new corporate headquarters haven where 50,000 people flock daily to work.

Nearly 80 percent of the complex's 10.3 million square feet of office space is filled and another 2.4 million is under construction. By the year 2000, more than 50,000 people are expected to live in Las Colinas and another 200,000 to work there.

The Caltex Petroleum tower in the Las Colinas development in Irving rises above the Mandalay Canal, which runs through the urban center.

Laserphoto

"Las Colinas is, to say the least, very impressive," says Bill Wood, senior vice president and treasurer for Green Holdings Inc., which just relocated here from Des Moines, Iowa. "We wanted a dynamic city to move to, and Dallas is it."

Las Colinas isn't exactly a city — "multi-use community within an existing community" is how Carpenter describes this part of Irving about 15 minutes northwest of Dallas — but it certainly can pass for one.

Its spanking-new downtown area, which rings Lake Carolyn and is linked by canals and soon-to-be completed elevated railways, includes the offices of more than 600 companies, a Mandalay Four Seasons hotel, nearly 40 restaurants, 80 retail shops, an equestrian center and film studios. Suburban-style residential communities sprawl out on all sides.

The development is also distinctly Texan. It has a stone bell tower in the style of an 18th century mission, cobbled walkways and tile-roofed storefronts. At its heart Williams Square, a vast expanse of pink Texas granite bordered on three sides by office towers.

In the middle of that 300-square-foot plaza, a waterfall provides the setting for the Mustangs, the world's largest equestrian sculpture. It depicts nine wild horses crossing the flowing stream.

"They provide a sense of place on their own," says Carpenter, 61, who has lived in his ranch house near the new "downtown" since 1948. "The Mustangs are symbolic of this part of the world."

Just 10 years ago, that part of the world was much like the prairie the sculpture seeks to typify. At its heart was 2,000 acres of Carpenter family ranch land, where cowboys and cattle still roamed.

In the late 1960s, Carpenter recognized that the land was in the path of Dallas' growth. It is minutes away from the gargantuan Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, which opened in 1973. Carpenter figured "there had to be a better answer to development than the urban sprawl we'd seen since World War II."

'I came here because there is no life in Beirut'

By JEFF LISSON

SHERMAN (AP) — It's difficult to imagine living through a bloody civil war like the one raging in Lebanon. Americans are used to reading newspapers and seeing video images of war and death in other countries, but somehow it never touches home.

But to someone who has lived in there during 10 years of hell, it is all too real.

"I came here because there is no life in Beirut," says Maha Allameh, who was born in Beirut. "Three-quarters of our life is spent in shelters, escaping the bombs. It's a miserable life in Beirut. It's no life."

At 28, Mrs. Allameh came to Sherman with her children to see "if there is a possibility of starting a new life in the United States." Her husband remained in Beirut, where he maintains equipment in an all-too-busy Beirut hospital.

"When I came here, there was so much fighting, there was no one to replace him," she explains.

As her children, 4-year-old Naim (whose name means Glory) and 3-year-old Farah (Joy) watched cartoons, Mrs. Allameh spoke of life in Beirut, and life here.

"The first thing my children asked about (when we arrived in Sherman) is 'Where's the shelter?' and I told them 'They don't use shelters here — It's a different country.'"

The civil war in Lebanon began in earnest in 1975 and has focused on Beirut, the country's capital and former "Paris of the Middle East." The fighting now is mainly between rival religious factions, she says, each afraid of losing political power, or being persecuted for religious reasons.

"The strange thing about it is people get used to the war," the former stewardess and bank clerk said. "They'd spend all night in the shelter hearing bombs, and get up the next morning and dress and go to work."

She has been living in Sherman with her brother and sister-in-law, both U.S. citizens, in a quiet home on a quiet block with a quiet school just down the street.

In Beirut, it's different.

"We live right next to the border," or Green Line, that divides Moslem West and Christian East Beirut. "We're in the middle, near the airport. It's mostly a Shi'ite (a Moslem sect) area, and Christians don't like Shi'ites, so they keep bombing the area," she said.

"My kids have spent most of their lives in shelters. We're almost always sleeping in the shelter. If there's nothing (no bombs), we sleep at home, and in the middle of the night hell would break out, and we'd be on our nerves until morning."

The children don't seem to miss the shelter. They play on the carpet, drawing As and Bs with red, blue, and green crayons, displaying their ability in English. Farah's eyes shine after she finishes a perfect row of green As, looking up for approval with innocent eyes. Naim, not to be outdone, lists the alphabet all the way to K (though not necessarily in the correct order).

"People spend most of their time in the shelter. They go wash, do their cooking, and go back to the shelter. Everyone has his own corner, bed, emergency food, candles and water. They gather the young ones and they sing and play together, and the older ones sit and chat.

"I find it strange people can live there. There would be terrible bombing and shelling, and we'd be sitting in the shelter with the youth laughing and making jokes. They (the children) want to live their life and don't want to despair."

Though she answers questions with no apparent pain, she displays more the attitude of the battle-hardened than openness. Or maybe it's the ability to discuss the mundane, the ordinary, the everyday occurrence.

"It starts in the afternoon, as if they give people a chance to get back from work. The fighting starts, and no one can go out of their house. You can say it's like a prison. In some places (in Lebanon), there is nothing. People live their lives as if there was no war. But in other places..." She lets the sentence trail off, as if the ending should be obvious.

One problem facing Mrs. Allameh if she decides to move to the U.S. is the wait for a work visa. The earliest she could obtain a green card, according to immigration officials, is four years from now.

Yet she still hopes, if the situation in Beirut does not improve, to bring her family to America. Her sister-in-law, Mary Newman Said, explained why many Lebanese hope to come to the U.S., despite the wait.

"When my husband and I were in Beirut, people would ask us about America, and get this look on their faces like 'Oh, America! That's the promised land,'" she said.

"It's a very hard thing, just to give up and start a new life" in a foreign country, Mrs. Allameh said, noting how family and culturally oriented the Lebanese people are.

The children, who understand the English Mrs. Allameh has been able to teach them, don't seem to miss their native land.

"The only thing they say they miss is the fighting," comments their mother. "And I say, 'We don't want fighting!'"

Mrs. Allameh is Baha-i, a religion that believes all faiths and religious prophets are stepping stones used by God to reveal his truth. The theory of the religion, founded in 1892, is called "progressive revelation." Despite a formerly large number of adherents, few openly practice the religion in Beirut now.

"The families are still there, but we meet no more. The Christians in the East think we are Moslems, and the Moslems in the West are fanatics. We are being persecuted in Iran, which the Lebanese Moslems follow," she said.

"We're just in the middle. We take it from both sides."

What is it, then, that keeps people in Beirut, a city divided by hate, blood and bullets? She stops for a moment, considering the question.

"Hope, I think. The people live in hope that one day a solution will be found. If it hadn't been for hope, the people of Beirut would have left years ago. They hope for a solution to the bloody fighting in Beirut and an end be found to the dirty war that has been going on for years now."

Artist community ginning along in small town

By LAURI GRAY BUSIEK

KERENS, Texas (AP) — On the cobbled streets of downtown Kerens, morning is a quiet time.

Old-timers of the town, population 1,582, seem to wallow in hometown comfort, coffee and conversation. Businesses like Bain's Hardware, Kerens Auto Supply, Orr & Orr Real Estate, Penny's Flower Shop and the Kerens Tribune open faithfully each business day in the face of the mostly vacant buildings across Colket Street. The town's main street off Texas Highway 31 on some days sees more teen-age cruising than commerce.

One block away at the corner of Second and Senter is a man with an idea to bring art, inspiration and population to this square block section of the town, bounded by Colket, Second, Senter and Third streets.

He wants to create a community. "I'd like to see this whole little block nothing but artists," he said.

Arthur Zeanon, an artist immigrant from Dallas, perhaps is eyed with a cocked brow by many Kerens residents who have watched as he has turned a tumbledown cotton gin from a barely used warehouse into his home and sculpture studio.

In early light, the old wood-and-brick Beryl Teague Gin appears almost picturesque; neon-blue morning glories spill in a tangle over the split-wood fence outside, and a pot of red-striped zinnias in a boarded-up window lend a provincial charm. Inside, the scene is more challenging than charming. One might call it rough.

Only a sculptor for the past three years, Zeanon once was a businessman with "a nice, cushy job...a secretary and all that...," he said.

Now he is not only without a secretary, but he barely has running water. And "all that" today includes a makeshift latrine, a rudimentary sleeping area on a "second floor" platform of planks in the cavernous old gin and a small, gated garden wherein he can contemplate building an artists' empire.

The idea for The Art Gin, now registered in the Navarro County abstracts, came to him when he spied the monstrosity on a visit to Kerens.

"I fell in love," he said. He bought the gin from W.A. Ware.

Though what he calls the "financial realities" of being an artist have produced a case of starving-artist blues, Zeanon still dreams of sharing his life with the old gin and a few artist friends. Artists need company of other artists, he said. "We need to get people so they don't feel so isolated. There's got to be some reason we're here."

Finances are a good reason. Compared with Dallas studios — even the cheapest of them — Kerens is a bargain. Ask John McMurphy, Southern Methodist University arts instructor and abstract imagery pioneer. A friend of Zeanon, McMurphy recently moved his permanent creative address to Second Street, a small child's stone throw from Zeanon's gin.

McMurphy's place, bought from businessman and downtown Kerens property owner Will Latta, will be his full-time studio for his independent video art. The medium combines photography, electronic video imagery and a wild imagination. He has exhibited at El Centro College in Dallas and has created a video project to promote the SMU dance department.

"Those of us who try and make our living with new and different things, it's a little difficult," said McMurphy, who once lived and worked in Deep Ellum, a Dallas "artist" community now troubled with politics and spiraling rents.

"I like to play. I want to make my living playing," McMurphy said of his unique art style. "It's a good deal for an artist to be able to find property that's affordable," he said. "Now that I've got a big space to play with I plan to do more of these kinds of things."

Futuristic, electronic video and the classic art of sculpture could mix sweet in mellow, downtown Kerens, said Zeanon. The project could become a mecca for artists of all types.

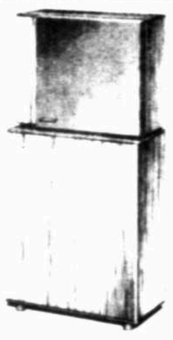

He's willing to share his gin, which he fantasizes turning into a ceramics workshop, foundry and sculpting center. The old weigh station would become a sand-blasting pit, and "the boiler room has dirt floors...already the basis to pull our own kilns," he said. "My real goal at this point is to find a person who is a ceramicist."

Meanwhile new life is stirring among older, established businesses on Colket Street.

The Rev. H.H. Brookins, a longtime civil rights supporter, was instrumental in the presidential race of Jesse Jackson, who he is pictured with above.

'The Kingmaker'

Brookins creates political royalty

By ROXANNE ARNOLD
and RON HARRIS
Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — In a career spanning more than three decades, the Rev. H.H. Brookins trudged along the civil-rights trails arm-in-arm with the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., was banned from what was then white-ruled Rhodesia and has been to the White House so often that the thought of another visit leaves him unimpressed.

"I've seen it all," he boasted with a chuckle. "And I've been part of 80 percent of it."

Brookins, the freewheeling bishop of the African Methodist Church, is, by various accounts, the man who reigned for years as kingmaker to black politicians — confidently playing mentor to Jesse Jackson, plucking a dull Tom Bradley out of nowhere to help make him mayor of Los Angeles.

Brookins may be sell-assured but his stories are no tall tales. His claims are borne out by many political and religious figures.

Yet, for a man so involved in recent history, he is little known outside religious and political circles. Although Brookins, a Democrat, has been courted to run for public office, he has chosen to remain off stage. He is content, or so it seems, to maneuver others into the limelight where he hopes that they will further his goals.

"A whole generation of us, in some sense, grew up under the bishop," Jesse Jackson said. "He has the touch, the green thumb."

Now, however, in the years when he should be savoring his accomplishments in politics and in his church, the third-largest black denomination in the country, Brookins is troubled. He says he is disappointed by the ineffectiveness of most of the politicians he helped elect, unsettled by a failed marriage and smarting from his recent reassignment from Los Angeles to a remote church post in Little Rock, Ark. At 60, Brookins is struggling to come to grips with his future.

Throughout his life, the restless Brookins has been struggling one way or another.

Inside the church, he has been a maverick whose aggressive style and fierce social activism have often upset his more traditional peers. To Brookins, there are no sacred cows when it comes to criticizing politicians, power brokers and even his religious brethren.

"He is controversial and he is different," said Dr. A. Lee Henderson, an African Methodist Episcopal Church official in Nashville, Tenn. "Most people do not understand him. He lives in a world of ideas unto himself."

His supporters describe him as a tough, passionate crusader for human rights, a man gifted with a keen analytical mind and an ability to motivate others.

His detractors sarcastically call him "the Hollywood bishop," complaining that he does things with too much of a Tinseltown flair. Some say he is an egotist who tends to magnify his own importance.

And, they add, he simply does not act like a minister. He smokes, drinks and tells funny, off-color stories.

"He doesn't go around crowded into sacredness," acknowledged Dr. Joseph McKinney, the Washington-based African Methodist Episcopal treasurer and Brookins' friend.

On one thing his detractors and supporters agree — Hamel Hartford Brookins is a showman, from dress to demeanor.

He strides rather than walks, garbed in the suits that put him on the list of Ebony magazine's 10 best-dressed men.

And he loves the sound of his own voice.

One Sunday, for example, Brookins found himself in the Indiana home of old college buddy Otis Jackson, without a pulpit and without an audience. That did not stop him.

"He just preached to the walls," Jackson said with a laugh.

At first glance, Brookins is not a commanding presence. He is balding with a pot belly. In private he often seems tired, almost spent. His brown eyes seldom smile.

But in front of a crowd, he is transformed.

His baritone soars theatrically, his speech is spiced with humor. He roars, cajoles, whispers and, and in doing so, arouses his audience.

Brookins never created more drama than the morning in Dallas when he was elected to the bishopric, a cadre of 23 men who represent the highest position attainable in the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

The elections, held every four years, are as fierce as any campaign for public office.

In 1972, they were rancorous as usual. Brookins, then a prominent Los Angeles minister seeking a bishop's post, faced stiff opposition from incumbent Bishop John Douglas Bright, the most powerful prelate in the nearly 3 million-member national church. Bright did not like H.H. Brookins.

"Brookins," the Bishop pronounced, "will be elected a bishop over my dead body."

After all-night voting, at 9 a.m. Brookins was elected a bishop, "and at 9:10, (Bishop Bright) fell dead," Brookins recalled. "It was a self-fulfilling prophecy."

As delegates carried Bright's body offstage, jubilant supporters carried Brookins to the dais on their shoulders, attendees said.

It had been a long climb up from Yazoo City, Miss., where Brookins was born and raised, the seventh of 10 children. And it was a far cry from the days of tiny Campbell College in Jackson, Miss., where, as an uncultured freshman, Brookins strode onto campus, a tin suitcase in his hand and a cap pulled snugly on his head, its turkey feather flagging the breeze.

As an undergraduate student there, he pastored his first church, New Hope African Methodist Episcopal.

Brokins' ascent to prominence inside the Church, and ultimately the broader arena, began in Wichita, Kan., where he landed in 1954 after seminary and brief stints at churches in Topeka and Lawrence, Kan. It was the year that the U.S. Supreme Court declared segregated schools unconstitutional.

"(I was) really the one who got Jesse to run for president. I vicariously saw (myself) in him and tutored and steered and supported and guided him so I got satisfaction from the fact he was doing the kind of thing he did...Rather than be the front man, I'd be the kingmaker."
—Rev. H.H. Brookins

As the first black president of the 200-member interracial ministerial council, Brookins had found a platform, and he began to speak out.

"People needed somebody to voice what they could not express, and I was in that position," he said. "One thing led to another. Then I developed an appetite for it. I sought it.

"All leadership is coupled with one's own proclivities, and one's ego and one's desire and one's sense of commitment. My ego drives me to want to make a difference. I'm sure some celebrity is mixed up in it. I'm sure of that, but I would hope it is not the overriding issue."

In 1959, Brookins was transferred to the largest and most prestigious African Methodist Episcopal Church west of St. Louis, First Church in Los Angeles.

Moving quickly to the head of the civil rights movement in Los Angeles, Brookins worked closely with Martin Luther King Jr., rallying 60,000 people to King's first Los Angeles appearance and raising $90,000 on his behalf.

He seemed to be everywhere. He marched in protests from Selma, Ala., to Washington. He trekked to Jackson, Miss., to establish a trust fund for the wife of a slain civil rights leader and on later trips to Mississippi gave away truckloads of food and once handed out $25,000 in $20 bills from the back of a pickup.

To aid him in his many causes, Brookins amassed a glittering list of entertainers and politicians that included the likes of Bob Hope, Sammy Davis Jr., Danny Thomas, Nancy Wilson, Tony Curtis, Burt Lancaster, Robert F. Kennedy, Nelson Rockefeller and California Gov. Edmund "Pat" Brown.

He was the man whom white politicians saw if they wanted black votes.

He won black votes for Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. He worked in presidential campaigns for John F. Kennedy and Robert F. Kennedy, for Hubert H. Humphrey and Jimmy Carter.

Brookins had known Jesse Jackson since the early days of the civil rights struggle when Jackson was a young lieutenant of King and Brookins was a leader in the West.

It was then, Brookins said, that "I got to know Jesse so well and really help shape his career, as he puts it....He was wild and immature...rude and crude. His language...was nothing like church language."

Brookins said he was "really the one who got Jesse to run for president. I vicariously saw (myself) in him and tutored and steered and supported and guided him so I got satisfaction from the fact he was doing the kind of thing he did....Rather than be the front man, I'd be the kingmaker."

Jackson concurs with Brookins' assessment.

Brookins speaks almost paternalistically about Jackson, one of the very few politicians he openly admires. Others have disappointed him.

He levels his angriest criticism, however, at ministers whose inaction he equates to sinning.

"Sin goes beyond drinking and chasing women," he said. "It goes to the point in my judgment of having the ability to do something for the good of the whole and (not doing it), not just giving people some sort of anesthesia to get through here."

Too often ministers wrap themselves blindly in the Bible, he compains.

"The easy way out is to stay away from (social issues), to talk about the by and by, sweet milk and honey, pearly gates, mansions in the sky and forget about this old sloppy tenement house I'm living in," he said.

"But people need jobs, they need housing. The Bible says feed the hungry, clothe the naked, set the captives free. Well, they are not just people in prison, but captives in the mind, attitude, ambition and self-esteem.

"If you're talking about feeding the hungry, you've got to deal with the Agriculture Department, the Commerce Department. If you talk about the homeless, then you're talking about the whole housing industry, you're talking about (federal housing)...the city housing authority, the mayor, city government, state goverment."

On the subject of the human condition, Brookins recognizes that "People do not have as much religion as they talk. People...are not all out to do good. All people who are up proclaiming and declaring are not sincere."

Instead of wringing his hands, Brookins tries to turn those human flaws to his advantage.

"People want the pastor...to be a good, clean moral man," he said. "That's what they say they want. At the same time they don't want him to be insensitive to the fact that they are not moral."

It is the end of the line for caboose in most states

DENVER (AP) — After a century and a half of pulling up the rear on the rails, it's the end of the line for the caboose — in most states.

Railroads say economics and modern technology are pushing the caboose off the tracks, and the days of friendly railroaders waving from the caboose at crossings are over.

Some people, especially caboose crews, are fighting mad about it.

"Well, there are romantic things always going out," said Tom LaHood, Union Pacific railroad spokesman in Omaha, Neb. "There are no more gas lights on the streets. It's a matter of economics and crew safety. The caboose simply has outgrown its usefulness. It's outmoded."

Nationally, there are about 12,000 cabooses in operation, each weighing around 27 tons and costing about $80,000 brand new. They're being replaced by an electronic box that fits on the coupler of the last car of a train.

Weighing about 35 pounds and costing $4,000, the "Trainlink" monitors air brake pressure, train speed and other data and transmits it to the locomotive engineer.

Some railroad workers say the device cannot replace the human touch in a caboose, checking for broken wheels and axles, or watching out for overheated bearings.

Cabooses, which usually carry one or two crew members, are making sort of a last stand in North America.

"They are virtualy extinct in Europe," said Frank Wilner, assistant vice president American Association of Railroads in Washington. He said a few cabooses are still at work in Britain, where some cars still lack automatic brakes, but they will be phased out.

In Canada, however, cabooses are still the rule, Wilner said.

U.S. railroads say about 95 percent of on-train injuries occur in cabooses, and it costs nearly $1 a mile to operate a caboose. They note that the United Transportation Union agreed to eliminate the back car from one-fourth of through trains and all local and switching movements in a contract signed in October 1982.

"It was an arbitration award. It was dictated, actually," said Jack Shaver, Colorado legislative director for UTU. "We think public safety is at stake and all trains should have a caboose."

That is why the union has pushed for legislation in several states to require that trains have cabooses if they exceed a certain length — most about 1,500 feet — or are carrying hazardous materials, he said.

So far, Virginia, Oregon, Montana, Nebraska, and recently New Mexico have passed such laws. Similar legislation in California was vetoed this year by Gov. George Deukmejian.

Negotiations are under way for a new national railroad workers contract, but Shaver said the union is seeking more money for its 100,000 members and cabooses are not a big issue.

John Bohlman, assistant state legislative director for the UTU in Nebraska, said, "The railroad tends to push the effectiveness of the electronic devices, but in actuality they're not failsafe."

The railroads, however, say the safety issue is settled and cabooses are not needed. The Federal Railroad Administration, which has extensive railroad safety rules, does not require use of a caboose.

The Presidential Emergency Board, in making its ruling on cabooses in 1982, estimated that railroads could save $400 million a year by the action.

The board used Florida East Coast Railroad as an example of safe operation without cabooses. Between 1973, when FEC started operating without cabooses, and 1980, the railroad's train accident rate averaged 39 percent of the national rate. In some years it was as low as 15 percent of the national rate.

In 1982, the Interstate Commerce Commission recommended that the Milwaukee Road operate without cabooses to help pull itself out of bankruptcy. Soo Line, which purchased the Milwaukee Road, began eliminating cabooses last year.

Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and Missouri Pacific are also running cabooseless when and where possible.

In Wisconsin, railroad workers urged the legislature to enact a caboose law.

Railroads and shippers opposed any restrictions. Christopher J. Burger, assistant vice president for Chicago & North Western Transportation Co., told a legislative hearing that the company runs more than 100 freight trains daily without cabooses and that workers are safer in the locomotive.

LaHood said Union Pacific has operated about 7 million cabooseless miles since October 1984. Although he did not have accident statistics available, he said he was sure accidents had decreased after the move.

Burlington Northern would also like to do away with cabooses, said company spokesman Bill Joplin. However, because many of its trains travel through Nebraska, the company is keeping cabooses on most trains.

Burlington has challenged the constitutionality of the Nebraska law but lost the first round in federal court. The case is being appealed.

"We have to face reality and stay competitive with the marketplace," said Joplin. "If we don't, not only do we lose business, but jobs."

Center planned for Galveston homeless

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Plans to convert a two-story bakery into a day center for this resort island's homeless have alarmed some residents, who fear it will become a magnet for drunks, drug addicts and the mentally ill.

The City Council will decide Dec. 12 whether the daily influx of as many as 100 people poses a threat to one of the town's oldest neighborhoods.

"I'm not against the program. I'm just against the location," said Edward Patton, who lives near the bakery. "I don't think I could feel comfortable raising my two daughters with every destitute person in Galveston in my back yard."

The Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word want to operate the center. The proposal is backed by the Galveston Ministerial Association, the University of Texas Medical Branch, the Texas Department of Human Resources and the county's Women's Crisis Center.

The day center, to be named "Our Daily Bread," would be located in a 10,000-square foot bakery building that has been on the market for 12 years. It would offer a daily hot meal, medical services, a place to shower and get clean clothes and a job referral service.

"The thrust of our entire program is rehabilitation," said Ted Hanley, a Houston architect who will run the center if council members grant the special permit.

"We are not providing overnight shelter simply because we feel that would enable people to use our facility to continue in their homeless pattern," Hanley said.

Hanley and Sister Martha McMahon have worked with the Salvation Army and other charitable agencies and determined there may be as many as 900 homeless people in Galveston.

"The first subgroup and the largest are younger unemployed men between the ages of 21 and 40," Hanley said. "Next largest is a group of alcoholic and drug-addicted people, followed by transients and a group of mentally ill people."

Hanley said services would be denied to people who persistently loiter near the building. He also said a Neighborhood Watch program would be set up to fight what residents say is an already high crime rate near the bakery.

The city's Department of Urban Planning mailed 86 notices of the proposed center to residents and property owners. The agency received only 13 responses, with all but two opposing the plan.

"If you say something is free in Galveston, you're going to get more than just transients," said Patton, a 33-year-old bank vice president.

Engine fire forces evacuation of jetliner

CHICAGO (AP) — A fire in the engine of a Republic Airlines DC-9 jet forced the evacuation of 45 passengers at O'Hare International Airport, but officials said Friday there was only minimal damage to the plane.

"It was just some fuel in the stack of the engine," airline spokesman Walter Hellman said about Thursday's fire. "It apparently was nothing serious because the aircraft is back in service."

None of the passengers was injured and were shifted to other flights, Hellman said.

The Republic fire occurred just hours after a Northwest Orient cargo jet dropped parts from an engine cover on a nearby suburb just after takeoff.

The pilots of Republic Flight 241 bound for Milwaukee discovered the fire shortly after 2 p.m. Thursday when warning lights came on as the plane approached the taxi area.

Hellman said the passengers, using the stairways, were evacuated in less than a minute as the pilots began to battle the fire until the airport firefighters arrived.

The flames and smoke did minimal damage to the aircraft, he said, adding that the cause of the fire had not been determined.

In the earlier incident, a Northwest Orient Airlines Boeing 747 all-cargo jet bound for San Francisco lost one of its four engine covers about 10:20 a.m. over suburban Glen Ellyn, said company spokesman William Wren. The plane returned to O'Hare, and no injuries were reported.

UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
SAN ANTONIO DIVISION

In re:

THE CHARTER COMPANY, et al.,

Debtors.

Case Nos. 84-289-BK-GP through 84-332-BK-GP Inclusive (Chapter 11) (Pending in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Middle District of Florida, Jacksonville Division)

CHARTER CRUDE OIL COMPANY, et al.,
Plaintiffs,
vs.
THE ROLLERT CO., INC., et al.,
Defendants.

Adversary No. 5-84-0827-E

To

Those persons, firms, corporations, partnerships or other entities who, as interest owners, have not been paid for crude oil sold to plaintiffs, or their affiliates, as first purchasers, as those terms are defined under Tex. Bus. & Comm. Code §§ 3.19 (Vernon Supp. 1984) ("Section 9.319"), produced from oil, gas and mineral leases located in the State of Texas, specifically excluding, however, Gulf Oil Corp., Exxon Co., U.S.A., Texaco, Inc., Getty Oil Co., Mobil Oil Corp., American Oil Co. ("Amoco"), Atlantic Richfield Co. ("ARCO"), Phillips Petroleum Co. (except insofar as they may have acquired a claim through their acquisition of Aminoil, Inc.), Conoco, Inc., Chevron, Tenneco and each of their respective affiliates and subsidiaries.

On April 20, 1984, the Plaintiffs, and certain affiliates, filed petitions for reorganization under Title 11, Chapter 11, of the United States Bankruptcy Code, in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Middle District of Florida, in Case Nos. 84-289-BK-J-GP through 84-332-BK-J-GP, inclusive. Adversary proceedings and contested motions were commenced by and against those persons, firms, corporations, partnerships or other entities (the "Defendants") who asserted claims as secured creditors against the Plaintiffs, pursuant to Section 9.319, for crude oil sold to Plaintiffs but not paid for, produced from oil, gas and mineral leases located in the State of Texas. The adversary proceedings and contested motions referred to herein were initiated in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Middle District of Florida, Jacksonville Division, and subsequently were consolidated and transferred to the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Western District of Texas, San Antonio Division, in Adversary Proceeding No. 5-84-0827E (the "Adversary Proceeding").

By this Adversary Proceeding, Plaintiffs seek a declaratory judgment that the Defendants, on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated, have no lien rights under Section 9.319 in any of the Plaintiffs' property, or in the alternative, for a judgment pursuant to Section 552 of the Bankruptcy Code.

As a result of an order of this Court of November 6, 1985, which designates this action as a class action, any judgment, whether for or against those against whom the subject action is directed, will apply to the following class:

(a) All persons, firms, corporations, partnerships or other entities who, as interest owners (as defined in Section 9.319), have not been paid for crude oil sold to the plaintiffs, or their affiliates as first purchasers (as defined in Section 9.319), produced from oil, gas and mineral leases located in the State of Texas, specifically excluding, however, Gulf Oil Corp., Exxon Co., U.S.A., Texaco, Inc., Getty Oil Co., Mobil Oil Corp., American Oil Co. (Amoco"), Atlantic Richfield Co. (ARCO"), Phillips Petroleum Co. (except insofar as they may have acquired a claim through their acquisition of Aminoil, Inc.), Conoco, Inc., Chevron, Tenneco and each of their respective affiliates and subsidiaries.

This notice has been directed to you in the belief that you or your organization may be a member of the class defined above. This notice is not to be understood as an expression of any opinion of this Court as to the merits of any of the claims or defenses asserted by either side in the subject action.

If you have any questions concerning the matter dealt with in this notice, you may address them to:

Clerk, United States Bankruptcy Court

INTRODUCING THE SAAB 9000. A REAL CAR FOR THE PRICE OF A 190E.

For about the same money you'd have to pay out for a so-called "Baby Mercedes," you can have a full-grown Saab 9000.

Standard features of the Saab 9000 include Saab's turbocharged 16-valve engine, a completely new Automatic Climate Control system, and something that the 190E can't even offer as an option: room for five adults to travel in real comfort.

Come and see one for yourself soon.
