'Family Trouble' Is Blamed In Slaying At Levelland

Murder Charge Is Filed After Farm Hand Meets Death

Elmer Wright Is Killed In Shooting Early Saturday And B. A. Foshee Is Held In Jail For Slaying

Makes Statement

Wife Of Confessed Slayer Admits Close Relations With Deceased; Husband Surrenders To Officers

ELMER WRIGHT, 33, youthful Hockley county farmer, is dead, and B. A. Foshee, 24, a neighbor, is in jail at Levelland charged with murder as the result of a shooting on the W. A. Kitchen farm, eight miles northwest of Levelland early Saturday morning. The age-old story of "family trouble" is the explanation of the affair as given by Foshee as he surrendered to officers in Levelland following the event.

Foshee, husband of a 19-year-old wife and father of two small children, declared in a 4 1-2 page statement made to District Attorney Durwood Bradley in Levelland yesterday afternoon, that he had to kill Wright as "he was breaking up my home." Wright was single.

Admits Relations

According to a statement made by Foshee's young wife, she admitted intimate relations with the deceased and said that she had told her husband of the "affair" about three weeks ago. Trouble between the two had been eminent since that time.

The shooting occurred about seven a. m., soon after Foshee had call-

Jimmy Cole Released From Hospital After Crash In Plane Here At Lubbock Airport; Rib Fractured

Jimmy Cole, local aviator, injured Friday afternoon in an airplane crack-up at the Lubbock municipal airport, Saturday morning was removed from the West Texas hospital to his home and is convalescing there, having sustained only slight injuries.

The accident occurred about 6:30 o'clock Friday afternoon as Cole and a student, Davis Vaughn, were preparing to take to the air. The plane had been taxied down the field and brought around into the wind before the take-off. Some speed had been gathered when a wheel struck a dog hole and blew out a tire. The left wing dug in and in trying to right the ship the right wing lurched over and dug in. With this the ship nosed over on its back.

Cole Unconscious

When pulled from the plane, Cole was unconscious and was taken to a house near the port. Two men ran to the scene of the accident when called by Mrs. Clarence Goodnight, who saw the ship crash. Vaughn was uninjured.

An X-ray examination revealed that Cole suffered a fractured rib. He regained consciousness soon after reaching the hospital and was able to tell what had happened.

South Plains Blanketed By Heavy Rain And Hail Saturday; Ends Drought

Traffic Halted and Crops Damaged In Some Sections By Heaviest Downpour For Months; Lubbock Gets Half Inch

RAIN-SOAKED and hail-swept, the entire South Plains this morning looks out upon a territory with crops beat low in some sections, others mature and growing, lakes filled, highways inundated, telephone and telegraph connections severed, as the result of the heaviest rains Saturday experienced in several months.

From eastern New Mexico to points near the Oklahoma line, from the plains north of Amarillo as far south as the T. & P. at Big Spring and Midland, driving rains flooded a territory that has been in the throes of a sweltering drought since early June.

Local precipitation was lighter than any reported fall throughout the territory. Only one-half inch fell in Lubbock and vicinity while other sections reported from one to four inches. The heaviest downpour was reported at Lockney where four inches were said to have fallen in two hours.

Crops Damaged

Crops in various areas were damaged to a great extent by devastating hails which beat down with destructive force. Some hail damage was reported a few miles west of Slaton but its extent had not been determined at a late hour last night. Brownfield and vicinity reported considerable hail with resulting damage.

Possibly the most extensive damage from the ice fall was reported from Hale Center. Here crops were said to have been almost completly destroyed in the path of the storm. Area southwest of Hale Center was also reported damaged.

Big Spring Flier Crashes To Death Enroute To Derby

Frank King Is Instantly Killed Near Tulia When Plane Takes Nose Dive On Way To Amarillo

(By Associated Press)

AMARILLO, Sept. 7. — Two shadows—that of low banked clouds and that of death—fell across the Amarillo municipal airport dedication celebration today and all competitive aerial events were postponed until tomorrow.

Frank R. King, 35, Big Spring business man and aviation enthusiast, was killed instantly today when his small plane fell near the Todd ranch, 6 miles west of Tulia, Texas.

Farmer Saw Crash

King left Big Spring alone this morning for the Amarillo celebration. M. C. Wheeler, a farmer living in the vicinity of the ranch, witnessed the crash. He said he sighted the plane falling nose downward and that the pilot seemed unable to straighten the craft out.

King had been flying for about a year. Besides being connected with laundry enterprises at Big Spring, Pecos and Lamesa, he was agent for an airplane manufacturing company in the Big Spring section. He owned several planes. At one time he was connected with a railroad company in Amarillo.

The body of F. B. King, of Big Spring, flier who was killed Saturday near Tulia, was expected to arrive in Lubbock late last night. It was said that the body would be prepared for burial in this city and shipped to Big Spring.

King is survived by his wife and two children, ages 11 and 14.

A brother of the crash victim and an undertaker from Big Spring, while enroute to the scene of the accident, ran off a culvert between Lubbock and Hale Center last night wrecking the hearse in which they were riding. Both men were uninjured and continued their trip in a Plainview ambulance.

"Cruel" Husband In Divorce Petition Looks Good To Wife After Separation

A NOVICE in court proceedings, Alice nervously awaited the hour she was to appear before Judge Clark M. Mullican, of 99th district court, in a petition for divorce here Saturday morning.

In the legal presentation of charges, John, the husband, was portrayed a monsterously cruel and uncouth man. "He had treated her unkindly," to say the least, and now she was seeking a divorce.

John, living in another city, knew nothing of his wife's intentions—so he said. He had been cited by publication.

Furtive glances of passersby in the district clerk's office, where she awaited the court's opening, were seemingly sympathetic.

A diminutive man, harmless in appearance, panting after two flights of stairs, entered unexpectedly.

"John!" she exclaimed, hastening to her husband.

"Why, Alice! I didn't know—"

They paused.

"How are you?"

"Fine, how are you?"

"Fine, thank you."

"How are the folks?"

"They're all well; how are your folks?"

And then the conversation centered around the home town. His voice was intonated with a softness expressive of lonliness; her's was responsive and tender.

Long Siege Of Pneumonia Claims Veteran Office Holder After Years Of Service At Austin

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Sept. 7. (AP)—J. T. Robison, commissioner of the general land office for 21 years, died of pneumonia in New London, Conn., early today. He had gone there for a visit with his son, Dr. J. T. Robison, Jr., leaving here last July. It was his first vacation from the general land office since he entered its employ as a clerk 34 years ago.

He left here soon after the house of representatives had exonerated him of proposed impeachment charges involving his administration of the land office. At the time of his departure, the 67 year old commissioner, who held the distinction of being Texas' oldest official, both in years and point of service, was plainly fatigued.

Burial In Austin

Robison's body will be brought to Austin for burial in the family plat beside a son and daughter, who preceded him in death. The daughter died after reaching womanhood.

Funeral arrangements will not be completed until after the body is received here next Monday afternoon.

Robison suffered a nervous breakdown soon after reaching New London and later contracted pneumonia. His condition had been precarious for several days.

Robison was a nephew of Joel Robison, Texas patriot who was with the group at San Jacinto that captured Santa Anna.

Eighty Lives Are Lost In Disaster

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Sept. 7. (AP)—At least 80 lives were lost today, including those of many children going to their homes to spend Sunday, when the Finnish steamer Kuru sank in a heavy storm.

There were 200 passengers on board. Many were in the cabins when the disaster occurred. It was believed the heavy death toll resulted from the inability of these to get on deck when the fore part of the vessel suddenly dipped into the sea.

The rescue of many was effected by the steamer Jarganne, while other passengers were washed ashore alive with lifebelts supporting them. Owing to confusion in the port and the heavy weather outside which prevented many boats from going to the rescue it was impossible late tonight to ascertain the exact number saved.

Man Meets Death In Snyder Truck Mishap Saturday

Herbert Baze Is Crushed By Twelve-Inch Oil Well Casing In Collision Of Another Machine

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SNYDER, Sept. 7—Herbert Baze, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Baze, of this city was instantly killed about one o'clock today, near Inadale, in southeastern corner of Scurry county, when a truck driven by Suey May of Snyder ran into the rear of the truck driven by Baze, knocking some twelve inch oil well casing on Baze who was standing on the running board of his truck.

Both men were employed by the Snyder Transfer company, and had been to Trent where they loaded their trucks with casing to be hauled to Camp Springs, east of here. Baze's truck was in the lead, closely followed by May.

According to May, the truck ahead slowed down, and he was unable to turn out before hitting the rear of the load of casing. Baze had already started to get out of the cab before his truck had stopped to repair a tire, which was discovered after the accident to be flat. The casing struck Baze, knocking him to the ground, and then rolled off the truck crushing him. He lived about four minutes. Young Baze is survived by his wife, his parents, three sisters and five brothers.

No funeral arrangements have been made pending the arrival of his parents, who were visiting in Lorenzo at the time of the accident, but it is thought that burial will be here Monday afternoon.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 7. (AP)—Racing from a storm, the air transport liner City of San Francisco crashed into the side of a 10,000 foot mountain and burned last Tuesday in the most desolate section of central New Mexico, with probably instant death to its human cargo of one woman and seven men. (By Associated Press)

RYDE, Isle of Wight, Sept. 7.—Great Britain in the race for the Schneider trophy today, established a new average speed for the 218 mile course of 328.63 miles an hour, which is just a bare fraction under five and one-half miles a minute. This is an improvement of 49 miles an hour over the speed record by which Britain won the last Schneider trophy race at the Lido, Venice, two years ago.

The victorious British pilot was Flying Officer H. R. D. Waghorn, Royal Air Force pilot and a Bridegroom of two months.

Another British aviator, Flying Officer R. L. R. Atcherley, on a machine identical to Waghorn's captured another world speed record for Britain when he surpassed the fastest time ever flown by man anywhere, shooting through the air on two of his laps with a mark of 332.49 miles an hour.

Magic Word Of 'Oil' Echoed Throughout South Plains Section

"OIL!" The word echoes over the South Plains. Rumblings of Lubbock as the next oil capital of Texas have spirited the business pulse.

From a depth of 4,855 feet the earth is offering a new wealth to the South Plains, as oil has pushed up more than 2,000 feet, according to unofficial reports, since Thursday evening at 6 o'clock, when pay sand was penetrated by the Marland Oil Company's No. 1 Slaughter wildcat test in Cochran county, 67 miles west of this city.

Arrangements for storage facilities are now being made, while supplies for handling the expected production had not arrived late last night.

Rumor Discarded

A rumor circulated in Lubbock late yesterday to the effect that plans had been made to shoot the well late last night was discredited in a telephonic message from Lehman shortly before midnight when announcement was made that the well would not be brought in until tanks were provided for production.

J. P. Posey, Ed Alexander, Mike Sharp, and several other Lubbock citizens, who were expected to arrive in this city last night from Lehman were water bound, following heavy rains throughout the South Plains, and they will probably arrive today. Neither of the men could be reached last night for information on the well.

Gas, encountered at the well last Tuesday, is spewing through a four-inch line, piped from the hole. The pressure remains strong.

A national code of practices for marketing refined petroleum products, authorized by the Federal Trade Commission, and adopted by directors of the American Petroleum Institute, which will create a sharp change in the manner of dispensing of gasoline and oil, is made public in a pamphlet received by the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

"The practice of loaning or leasing gasoline pumps, tanks, and other equipment is unsound and uneconomic, and should be discontinued, according to the Federal Trade Commission's authorized code. "The dealer or consumer must pay the lender for the cost of installing equipment," the commission outlines, "and no refiner, distributor, jobber, or wholesaler shall knowingly induce, attempt to induce, or assist a party to break an existing written contract for the sale of petroleum products between that party and another."

Proposed Hollow Drill Steel Levy Seen As Move To Thwart Domination Of Administration By Corporations

BY D. HAROLD OLIVER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7. (AP)—Evidence that the administration was being dominated by giant corporation in the evolution of the new tariff bill was "seen" today by Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, in the proposed levy on hollow drill steel.

He contended the Crucible Steel company would be given "an equal or greater dole" under the increased duty than other steel companies would receive by placing manganese on the free list.

Like the proposed free listing of manganese, Wheeler said in a statement issued by the democratic national committee, the provision to increase from 1.7 to 3 cents a pound the duty on hollow drill steel used in the manufacture of rock drills involved the "robbery of the public in general and the mining men in particular for the special benefit of the steel trust."

Wheeler's attack was the only outstanding development in the tariff situation today.

The republican Independents, who have reached an understanding with the democrats to defer any moves looking to a limitation of the revision to agriculture until the bill has been debated a while, held another conference in the office of Senator Borah, of Idaho, but it was said only a general discussion took place.

Borah announced his group would support the motion to be made Monday by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking democrat on the finance committee, to ask the treasury for profits and losses as disclosed in income tax returns of taxpayers who would benefit under the pending bill.

BUFFALO, Sept. 7.—It was costly information John Coffey gave out to two strangers who approached him and asked him the direction to a certtain place. As he started to tell them he was rudely cut short by the jab of a revolver in his side and relieved of his roll containing $300.

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SLATON, Sept. 7.—Probems connected with profitable poultry-raising were discussed Friday afternoon when poultrymen of this section held a meeting here. Addresses were made by County Agent D. F. Eaton, R. B. Galloway of Amarillo, Mrs. Ed Schroeder of Wolffarth, and H. J. Bowers, head of the agronomy department at Tech college, Lubbock.

Questions of proper feeding and breeding, proper selection and good housing, besides many angles of the poultry industry, were considered for a period of two hours.

Mrs. Schroeder, one of the leading poultry experts among Lubbock county farm women, described many of her experiences in the poultry business, which she entered in 1917. From that time until Sept. 1 this year, Mrs. Schroeder sold produce valued at $10,194.34, she said. Her profits on poultry have always doubled the feed bill for the fowls, she stated.

Two-Year-Old Child Dies As Result Of Accident

Interpreting the Formal Mode for Fall

The woman of distinctive taste will greatly admire this presentation of new fall styles in frocks, coats and ensembles, bringing as it does Paris inspired modes to the South Plains. The modes displayed are accepted successes for Autumn—feminine—sophisticated—inimitably smart in every new detail.

They are being shown at Jarett's, the store that has been the choice of fashion-wise women on the South Plains for years, which makes the revue of increased importance as a style event. Our buyers have far exceeded every previous effort in quality, style and value and every woman in Lubbock and vicinity owes it to herself to view this presentation before selecting her Fall costume.

Frocks are cut along distinguished lines, with bodices that are fitted, waistlines that are higher and skirts that flare. Flat crepes, travel crepes, velvet, clinging satins are the fabrics that will find the favor of those who have watched the fashion trend for Fall.

Coats are eminently successful because of smart detail, subtle manipulation and intricately treated furs. Sportswear with a difference—millinery that introduces dramatic silhouettes and accessories of charm and distinction.

These new things are presented for your inspection and it will be our pleasure to show them to you.

Bulgaria Works To Lighten Burdens Imposed By Wars After Many Trials

By JAMES A. MILLS
(Associated Press Correspondent)

PLEVEN, Bulgaria, Sept. 7. (AP)—After many years of trial, under almost insuperable war burdens, Bulgaria is regaining its feet. This became apparent to the many Americans who visited the little Slav Kingdom during the recent observances of the thousandth anniversary of the reign of Czar Simeon the Great, Bulgaria's greatest monarch. The country's progress is particularly marked in the small cities and towns.

In and about this historic city of Pleven, from which the Russian Army, led by Czar Alexander III, drove the Turks fifty years ago and thus gave Bulgaria her independence, the Bulgarians have raised many fine monuments as tokens of gratitude to their liberators, but their finest monument is the remarkable progress they have made during their half century of freedom, and especially in the decade since the World War.

A visit to any village near Pleven brings this progress into clear relief. For example, in a yard in the village of Trustenik there was found a "zemlianka" or "dug out," which is the kind of a house in which almost all Bulgarian villagers lived a few decades ago. It consists of a little porchlike entrance, then a small kitchen with an open fire place and after that a stall for a pair of big black cows, beyond which there is a slightly elevated section, on the dirt floor of which the family sleeps, with mats made of corn husks under them and heavy goat hair, hand woven rugs over them.

In the whole house there is but one little window, no stove, practically no furniture and no interior room divisions. The animals are placed in the middle of the hut to serve as a sort of central heating system. The inmates of this "dug out" said that the cows kept the house as warm as a stove.

Live With Animals

One can imagine what life would be like in such a small, dark house as this, in which nine or ten people of both sexes and all ages, belonging to two or more families, live with the domestic animals.

But such places are relics in modern Bulgaria. They have given way to solid brick houses, with large windows, good stoves and furniture. Other equally good brick buildings are being built by the thousands, for the farm animals.

Forty years ago this part of Bulgaria was thinly populated and poorly cultivated. There were no railroads and the wagon roads dere bad. Now, prosperous villages dot the land. The fields are excellently cultivated with modern American and German machinery, supplemented by huge hoes deftly wielded by girls. The quality of the farm animals has been improved and the villages have adopted the best kinds of wheat, alfalfa, corn, and fruits.

The Pleven district is noted for its grapes and famous for its large sweet melons. In the Spring every family raises silk worms, feeding them on mulberry leaves from trees which the State furnished. As a result of State supervision and dairy contests the villages have increased the milk capacity of their cows threefold.

In every village there is a school, most of which are housed in excellent modern buildings. In this area less than ten per cent of the younger Bulgarians, including the young women and girls, are illiterate. Bulgaria has the lowest percentage of illiteracy of any country in the Balkans.

Since 1926 forty villages have put in water systems; many have electric light. In more than half of the villages there are public libraries, and in not a few popular lecture courses. Most of the roads uniting the villages as well as the main roads from city to city are macademized.

Banks Popular

There are many popular banks, branches of a general mortgage bank and agricultural banks, all fostered by the state. Cooperative societies abound.

The very heavy, old, hand woven peasant costumes, xtremely hot in summer, have given place to clothes which suit the seasons and straw hats are replacing heavy, sheep skin caps.

Through all this change the Bulgarians have retained their old fashioned morality. The village girls rarely bob their hair, do not wear short skirts and would not use cosmetics or smoke for anything in the world. Yet they are happy, sometimes gay and clever and occasionally very pretty. They resemble their brothers and fathers in being frugal, serious and industrious.

Thanks to these qualities the Bulgarians, although freed but a few decades ago, are turning their country into one of the best cultivated and best governed lands in southeast Europe.

More Autos Paid By Cash Now

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Since 1925, the number of automobiles bought on time payments in the United States has fallen 10 per cent—from 68.2 to 58.1, according to the American Motorists' association.

About 3,200,000 new cars were sold last year and of this number 1,870,000 were sold on time. This figure is 10 per cent smaller than in 1925.

But the percentage of used cars sold on time fell off only slightly. In 1925, of all the used cars sold, 62.8 per cent were sold on time. In 1928 this figure had dropped to only 60.8 per cent.

Judges Didn't Like Beauty Selection

BALTIMORE, Sept. 7. (AP)—Miss Lillian Andrus, 21-year-old brunette representing Buckeye Lake, O., last night was selected "Miss America" of 1929 by the judges at Baltimore's national beauty pageant. The contest was conducted by local interests in place of the discontinued Atlantic City beauty pageant. Forty-seven girls from all parts of the United States entered the contest.

Miss Andrus took the honors under a storm of protest. One of the judges, a theatrical producer from New York, withdrew from the list of judges. After the decision of the remaining judges had been announced five sponsors of entrants announced their protests. They said a second contest would be held at a downtown hotel.

Tech Football Training Season Will Open Tuesday

Athletics Held To Even Break By Indians

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

WITH ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche Sports Editor

Weather permitting, the Lubbock Hubbers will journey to Littlefield today to battle the Mueller-Ratliff baseball combination. The locals have the strongest lineup of diamond stars on hand that has been available here all season, and with the aid of some first-class pitching should be able to give their Lamb county rivals a neat lacing.

Athletic headquarters at Tech will be the scene tomorrow of old-time bustle and activity as candidates for the 1929 Matador football eleven gather to receive equipment prior to the opening of the training season Tuesday. With the change in the Tech coaching regime and promising indications of the Matador's being admitted to the Southwestern Conference, Lubbock football fans are keyed up to an unprecented pitch over the coming gridiron campaign of the Scarlet and Black stalwarts.

This spirit gives all indications that Coaches Higginbotham and Payne will have the whole-hearted support of the entire populace of Lubbock and the South Plains. Local football enthusiasts are of the type that will support a hustling football club, despite reports to the contrary. Actual plans are under way at the present time to promote the largest turnout in the history of West Texas to the clash between the Matadors and the Horned Frogs of Texas Christian university when the Purple eleven invades Lubbock October 26.

The goal for this outstanding battle of the coming season has been set at 15,000, and there's no reason why this cannot be reached. This would prove beyond a doubt to Southwest Conference officials that Lubbock can support an entry in the major football conference of the southwest.

As the grid season nears, discussion among coaches, players and fans alike centers around the changes in football rules, and especially that concerning the "fumble." Quite contrary to the opinion expressed by a number of experts immediately after the new rule was adopted by the rules committee, the majority of coaches throughout the country, including local mentors, are certain that the change will add to rather than detract from the action of the popular fall pastime.

Making the fumbled ball dead at the point of recovery, the new ruling will prevent the opposing team to advance the oval when it is fumbled by the opposition. Only the team which is on the offense when the fumble occurs can advance the ball. It is maintained by many leading coaches, including Pop Warner, the Stanford University genius, that this change will cause the teams to take more chances, will encourage more open football and will give the fans a great deal more spectacular football that could be possible under the old rules. With the chance of the opposing team recovering the ball the team on the offense will try many more trick plays and various passing schemes.

The chain business of the St. Louis American League Baseball club appears to be pretty good this year. The Brownies, pappa club, bid fair to finish no lower than third place, which of course is in the money in the junior major loop, while two Class A clubs controlled by Phil DeCatesby Ball and associates, are in the pennant winning class.

The Tulsa Oilers, perennial pennant winners in the Western league, have been out in front in that slugging circuit for many weeks and are regarded as practically "in." Nick Allen's lads have a seven game lead over the second place Oklahoma City aggregation with a dozen or less conflicts remaining on schedule. This year's flag will be the third in a row for the Oilers.

With good pitching, an imposing array of swatsmiths and practically everything a winning ball needs including a generous share of the breaks, the Wichita Falls Spudders, Brown-owned Texas league team, are leading the Lone Star circuit and will probably go into the play-off with Big Old Dallas. While the Spudders' chances of knocking Dallas off in the pennant series don't look any too bright, you never can tell what may happen in this game of baseball.

Abilene, in the West Texas league, is also owned by the Browns but didn't do so well. The Aces ended in fourth place in a six-club field but what happens in Class X is of little importance. Two or three individual athletes drawing their pay at Abilene progressed nicely and may some day climb through the chain to the Brownies, themselves.

One value of this chain racket was forcibly brought to view in the sending of Steve Gullic, slugging Tulsan, to Wichita Falls in the thick of the gonfalon rush. The Oilers, with a dozen games to the good, were regarded as practically certain to cop the Western laurels so Gullic was shipped to the Spuds where he immediately made his presence known by whaling the well-known apple with as much potency and gusto as he showed at Tulsa. "Powerhouse Red" Bennett, who led the Oiler maceers last season, had already been sent to Wichita to add a punch which was liberally protected at Tulsa, and has been doing nobly with the mallet all year. From the looks of things the Browns are fortunate all the way along.

Amateur Golfing Capital Shifts To St. Paul As Jimmy Johnston Is Crowned

All Ready To Run Up Flag

Mideasterner Has Favor Of Big Gallery

BY ALAN J. GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif., Sept. 7. —The amateur golfing capital of the United States shifted today from Atlanta to St. Paul. Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston, fighting son of the great mid-east, beat the batting dentist of the Pacific northwest, Dr. Oscar F. Willing, four up and three to play, in the final match of the first tournament ever held this side of the rockies.

Succeeds Bobby Jones

Johnston, competing in the title round for the first time in his career, succeeded to the championship relinquished by Bobby Jones when the favorite golfing son of Dixie was unceremoniously eliminated in the first round by Johnny Goodman of Omaha.

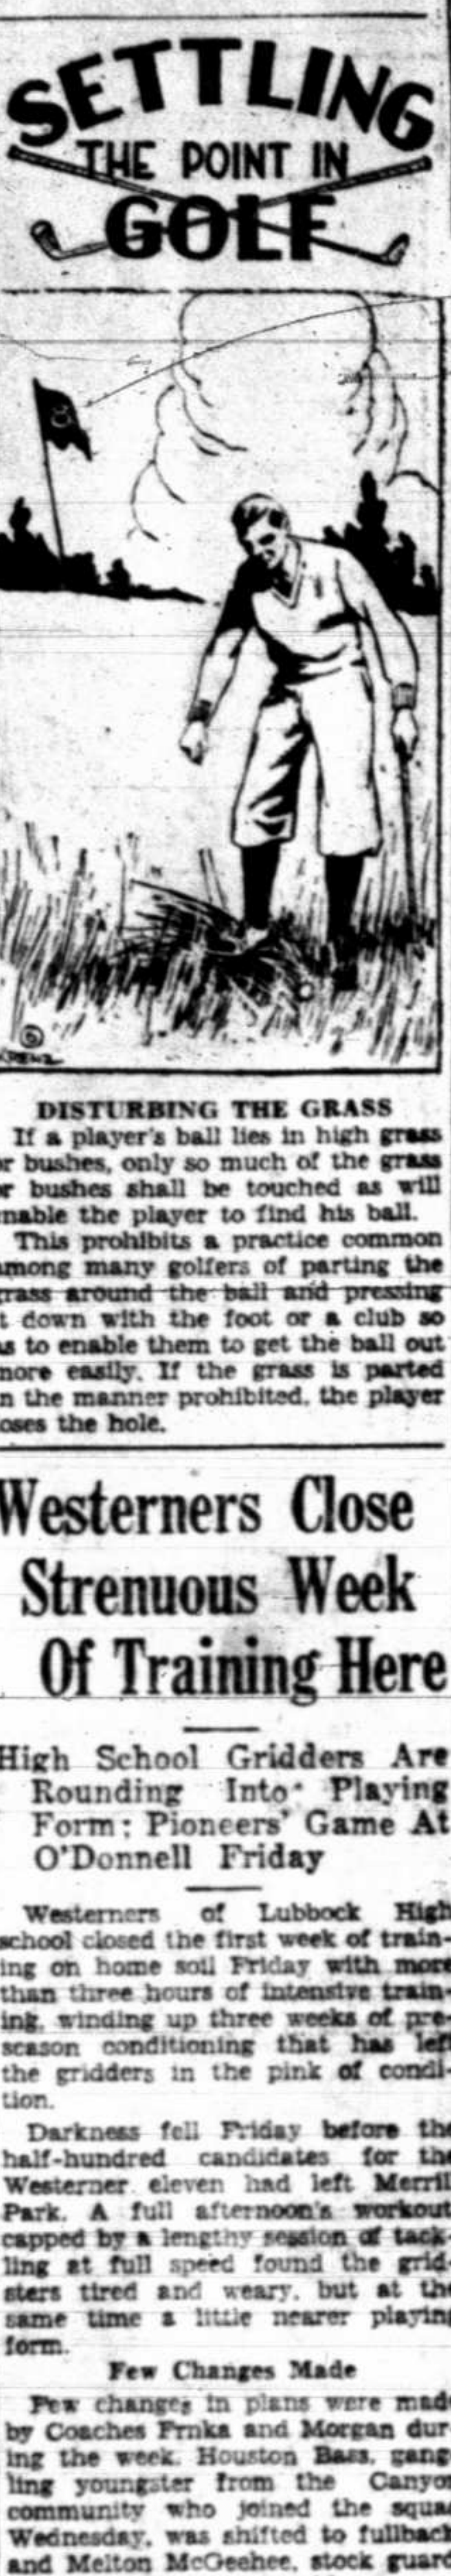
The 33-year-old St. Paul investment broker rallied after a bad start to overhaul and beat the veteran Dr. Willing in a match that was marred by erratic play and by an attitude of distinct hostility toward the loser on the part of a good share of the gallery.

Play Lacks Class

Except for the gallant fighting spirit manifested by both contestants right up to the finishing stroke on the 33rd green, where Johnston got the half that clinched the issue, the brand of golf was not up to championship standard, as it has come to be exemplified by ex-emperor Jones, but the attitude of the gallery toward the robust Oregonian was as remarkable as anything ever witnessed in 33 years of competition for the amateur crown.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Willing carried the banner of the Pacific coast in the final round for the first time and in the first tournament held in the far west, the gallery of perhaps 3,000 spectators manifested strong support of Johnston throughout and gave him a tremendous ovation at the finish.

The contrast between the bareheaded Jimmy and the portly, somewhat sour looking dentist may have had come influence. Johnston, too was the younger, for Willing is a campaigner of 39 and "Jimmy" was the underdog for the first half of the match. Furthermore, the doctor's known disinclination to concede short putts found disfavor among the spectators and that too, appeared a factor in the unusual partisanship of the jostling jam.



SETTLING THE POINT IN GOLF

DISTURBING THE GRASS

If a player's ball lies in high grass or bushes, only so much of the grass or bushes shall be touched as will enable the player to find his ball.

This prohibits a practice common among many golfers of parting the grass around the ball and pressing it down with the foot or a club so as to enable them to get the ball out more easily. If the grass is parted in the manner prohibited, the player loses the hole.

Westerners Close Strenuous Week Of Training Here

High School Gridders Are Rounding Into Playing Form; Pioneers' Game At O'Donnell Friday

Westerners of Lubbock High school closed the first week of training on home soil Friday with more than three hours of intensive training, winding up three weeks of preseason conditioning that has left the gridders in the pink of condition.

Darkness fell Friday before the half-hundred candidates for the Westerner eleven had left Merrill Park. A full afternoon's workout, capped by a lengthy session of tackling at full speed found the gridsters tired and weary, but at the same time a little nearer playing form.

Few Changes Made

Few changes in plans were made by Coaches Frnka and Morgan during the week. Houston Bass, gangling youngster from the Canyon community who joined the squad Wednesday, was shifted to fullback, and Melton McGeehee, stock guard, was moved over to tackle.

Anticipating a passing attack from the Ralls Jackrabbits in their first game here on Sept. 20, the Westerner mentors continued drill on defense for the aerial game. Further work on a passing offense gave indications that the local will give the Rabbits, a dose of their own medicine.

A host of raw recruits, working for positions on the first eleven, that now compose the Pioneer team will be given their first test in actual combat Friday when they journey to O'Donnell to meet the cohorts of Coach Galbreath, newly elected coach. Especially in the case of the line candidates will this contest give Coach Frnka a line of the gridders' ability under fire.

In addition to the regular drill on offense and special forms of defense, the local high school coaches will lay stress next week on kicking off, receiving and place kicking. With the memory of last year's weakness in gaining points after touchdowns, the Westerners are in for many extra sessions in the art of educating toes. Ovie Teal, Mina Watkins and John R. Green have shown ability in this apparently lost art here.

Donie Bush May Buy Hoosier Club

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 7. (AP) — Donie Bush, who is resting here, is not concerned with the National league pennant race.

He is keeping still while rumors as to why he resigned as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and what he will do next year, buzz through baseball's halls.

Bush, it is said here, may buy an interest in the Indianapolis American association club and manage it. Bush was the Indian manager when he went to Pittsburgh.

When James A. Perry, the club owner, was killed in an airplane accident several months ago it was rumored Bush might buy a share of the club.

Justin M. Barry, former basketball coach at the University of Iowa, will coach the cage game at the University of Southern California next season.

Stiff Season Lies Ahead Matadors In First Season Under Direction Of Grady Higginbotham And Payne

Equipment To Be Issued Monday To Forty Candidates For Varsity Eleven; Rhodes Ingerton Will Coach First Year Gridders Again

BY ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Editor

Spiraling pigskins, the thud of rushing feet upon a well-kept turf, shouts of the coaches and the flash of scarlet and black across a Matador gridiron, while out from under a cloudy sky, a Texas sun peers through the mists upon the systematic maneuvering of sweating bodies, will mark the opening of the 1929 football training season at Texas Tech Tuesday.

Facing a severe test for Texas' youngest state institution and yet ready for the task ahead, Head Coach Grady Higginbotham will marshal his forces for what promises to be the most eventful year in the history of the fighting Matadors. Working hand in hand with the head Matador mentor will be Victor Payne, line coach, who will fashion the forward wall of the 1929 Tech machine.

Letter Men Return

Higginbotham will begin his first year as chief commander of the Matador forces with a nucleus of at least a dozen letter men around which to build the 1929 scarlet and black threat. In addition to these veterans of the varsity, the Tech coaches will have an even greater number of gridders from the 1928 freshman squad. From this group the local coaches expect to find valuable additions to the first eleven.

Tomorrow equipment will be issued to approximately 40 candidates for the varsity eleven and a number equally as large is expected to start their college football careers under the direction of Rhodes Ingerton, freshman mentor.

The beginning of the 1229 season marks the second year Texas Tech has played under Southwestern Conference rules and promises for the school's admittance to the conference of major southwest schools looms brighter than ever before, according to Tech athletic officials.

Gate Will Count

"Tech's chances for a berth in the Southwestern Conference will depend largely upon the turnout for the games this season," said Ewing Y. Freeland, director of Tech athletics. "Matador teams of the past have proven their strength on the gridiron but Lubbock has yet to prove that it can support in a financial way, an entry in the conference. The greatest test of the coming season will come on Oct. 26 when the Texas Christian University Horned Frogs come here for their first appearance in Lubbock."

Coach Higginbotham returned last week from Dallas where he has been attending the Knute Rockne - Pop Warner coaching school. Coach Payne also brushed up on his coaching technique during the vacation season, attending the Dana X. Bible school at Corpus Christi.

The attitude of the head Matador mentor indicates that Tech will have a fighting club for the coming season. Coach Higginbotham's plan of building a football eleven is embodied in the word WORK. Candidates for the team are promised a hard season of training before the first game and constant drill between games.

Lubbock football fans will see plenty of action during the coming season, with five of the nine games scheduled for home soil. One southwestern conference, one Texas Conference and two T. I. A. A. teams will appear here in addition to the opening game of the season with Wayland College.

Meet Baylor Bears

Football relations between Tech and Baylor University will be inaugurated during this season, the Matadors meeting the Bears on the Cotton Palace gridiron on Nov. 2. The resumption of the annual Thanksgiving clash between Tech and Simmons is another outstanding feature of the 1229 schedule. Canyon Teachers furnished opposition for the Matadors on Turkey Day last season.

The Tech schedule:

Sept. 28—Wayland College at Lubbock.
Oct. 5—Sul Ross at Highland Fair, Marfa.
Oct. 12—Daniel Baker at Lubbock.
Oct. 19—McMurry at Abilene.
Oct. 26—T. C. U. at Lubbock.
Nov. 2—Baylor University at Waco.
Nov. 11—A. C. C. at Lubbock.
Nov. 19—Howard Payne at Lubbock.
Nov. 28—Simmons at Abilene (Thanksgiving).

Class B Grid Teams Of South Plains In For Big Year

V. Z. Rogers Is New Chairman Of District Executive Committee; Will Meet Next Year In Spring

Hard Struggle Anticipated Between Leading Teams In District Two; Post, Lamesa And Slaton Loom As Strongest Contenders

Perfecting an organization for the coming school year and arranging grid schedules for the impending football season, Class B coaches and school officials of District Two of the Interscholastic League fired the opening gun of the 1929-30 regime Saturday with indications pointing to one of the most successful years in the history of the section.

Headed by V. Z. Rogers, superintendent of Lamesa schools, the new executive body that will rule over the district for the next year was named and plans originated for the coming session. Diverting from the usual custom of naming school superintendents on the executive committee, several coaches are included in the new group. The regular members of the committee are: Froggie Lovvorn, Ralls; Harry Taylor, Post; Mr. Boles, Littlefield; and the chairman, V. Z. Rogers.

Biggers of Lockney was named committeeman-at-large, W. E. Patty, of Floydada, and Winfield Nicklaus, of Tahoka, were named first and second alternates respectively.

The following counties are included in District Two; Bailey, Hale, Lamb, Floyd, Motley, Cottle, Cochran, Hockley, Lubbock, Crosby, Terry, Dickens, Yoakum, Lynn, Garza, Kent, Gaines, Dawson, Borden, and Andrews.

Considerable difference of opinion was brought to the surface in discussion centering around the date for next year's meeting of the same body. Several prominent members of the district favored a meeting in the spring to elect officials for the following year and to arrange schedules. Despite vociferous opposition to this change it was finally voted to held the annual confab on the second day of the district track meet in Lubbock.

Schools in the running for the district championship must have their fees and complete eligibility list in the hands of the district chairman by Oct. 1. The chairman in turn will send each member a complete roster of the teams in the section.

Several schools who have in the past played a leading part in the district football scramble were absent from Saturday's meeting and for this reason the schedules have not been completed, and some few were not available.

Advanced predictions point to another bitter fight for the district crown between Post, Lamesa and Slaton with Ralls and Crosbyton promising plenty of trouble for their opponents.

Foxx Clings To Slugging Lead In American League

Lou Fonseca Of Cleveland Only Two Points Behind Philadelphia Ace; Rivals Gain On Leader

CHICAGO, Sept. 7. (AP)—Although slumping slightly during the past two weeks, Jimmy Foxx of the Athletics still heads the field seeking the American League batting championship for 1929.

Unofficial averages, including Wednesday's games, give the slugging Philadelphia first sacker the season's mark of .373, one less than a week ago and two points better than his closest rival, Lou Fonseca, of Cleveland, who dropped two points during the past week.

Rivals Climb

Most of their rivals gained during the week. Al Simmons of the A's boosted his mark from .364 to .366; Manush of St. Louis, gained three points for .365 and Lazzeri of the Yanks hoisted his one point to .355. Other leaders, Combs, New York, .354; Heilmann, Detroit, .348; Ruth, New York, .343; Alexander, Detroit, .341; Miller, Philadelphia, .339; Gehringer, Detroit, and E. Rice, Washington, .331.

"Lefty" Grove increased his margin in the pitching race with another victory during the week and now has a record of 19 won and 2 lost. Zachery of the Yanks also went out and copped another game and while he has been in 22 games he still has to be defeated, winning 10 games. Earnshaw of the Athletics broke even during the week, winning one and dropping one for a record of 20 victories and 8 defeats.

Philadelphia gained a point in the struggle for team batting honors during the week and is now three points behind the Detroit Tigers, who are setting the pace with .302. In general excellence, however, Connie Mack's band stand out, leading with runs scored with 814 and giving the fewest runs scored against them—543. In team fielding, the Athletics lead with a .977 percentage.

Slaton Tigers Training Hard For Coming Grid Season

Grid Has An Alex The Great, Too

IN THE LAST NINE YEARS, TECH TEAMS UNDER ALEXANDER'S COACHING HAVE WON 58 GAMES, LOST 16 AND TIED 7
BILL SUCCEEDED JOHN A. HEISMAN AS HEAD COACH IN 1920
SORDS
IS BEGINNING HIS TENTH YEAR AS FOOTBALL COACH AT GEORGIA TECH

By JACK SORDS
Sports Cartoonist Writer for Central Press

For the past two years Georgia Tech's football teams have steam rolled over all opposition to capture the undisputed championship of the south.

Last year the eleven, by virtue of it's victory over the University of California team on New Year's day, 1929, in the game made famous by Roy Riegal's run the wrong way, established claim to the national championship. At the throttle of the old "Rambling Wreck" was William Alexander, who is beginning his tenth year as head coach of the Yellow Jackets.

Alexander is a graduate of Tech and played on the team during his school days. As a football player he was only ordinary, but he knew what it was all about and on being graduated in 1915, John Heisman, then head coach, signed him up as his assistant. Bill's job in that capacity lasted until 1920. That year Heisman left and Alexander was made head coach.

Since then Alexander-coached teams have won 53 games, lost 16 and tied seven, which is quite a record when it is considered that many intersectional games have been played with some of the country's strongest elevens.

This fall Alexander promises to have another strong team. He has three of the finest backs in the south in Thomason, Lumpkin and Mizel, around which to build.

Thirty-Five Out For 1929 Bengal Football Eleven

Seven Letter Men Back To Furnish Nucleus For Coach Paul Wright; Will Be Light Team

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SLATON, Sept. 6. — The Slaton high school Tigers, champions of District Two, Class B, interscholastic league for three years out of the last five and once holders of the title for two districts, began their football training this week for the 1929 season. They are now taking hard daily workouts to get in shape for the schedule which was arranged Saturday when school officials of the district met at Lubbock for that purpose.

Thirty-Five Men Out

Thirty-five candidates for places on the 1929 Tiger eleven are out for training, seven of them letter men from last year's squad. These seasoned veterans, upon whom much responsibility will rest this year, are all of light or average weight, according to Coach P. W. Wright.

Average 150 Pounds

The average weight of team members this year is only 145 to 150 pounds, Coach Wright said. Fast work, including aerial tactics on numerous occasions, are likely to be seen in play this season if the Tigers hope to overcome their heavier opponents. Among the new material, Maxey, Covington and Sisk are considered as likely prospects.

The Tigers were district champions in 1924 and again in 1925. They lost by a narrow margin in 1926, but came back in 1927 to win the title in district one by beating Floydada, 14 to 3, in the final game here, and then trounced the Canyon Eagles, 31 to 5, to take the bi-district championship.

Lost One Game

In 1928, The Tigers lost only one scheduled game, the Post Antelopes running away with a 19 to 0 victory on the Tigers' own field. This year the Tigers will meet the Antelopes on the latter's grid, but the date has not been set.

A return bout between Al Singer and Kid Chocolate is likely for November.

Babe Herman And Frank O'Doul In Mad Scramble For Batting Honors In National League Pennant Race

Fraction Of Point Between Two Leaders In Senior Circuit With Brooklyn Slugger Holding Edge

NEW YORK, Sept. 7. (AP)—The mad scramble between Babe Herman of Brooklyn and Frank O'Doul of Philadelphia for the National League batting championship has tightened to the point where four figures are necessary to reveal any difference between them. The Brooklyn swatsmith shades his Philadelpha rival by .3926 to .3925 in his week's averages, issued today and including games of last Wednesday. Bill Terry of New York has slowed up a bit, and owns a mark of .379.

Hornsby Gains

Other leading regulars: Traynor, Pittsburg, .371; Hornsby, Chicago, .369; L. Waner, Pittsburg, .357; Stephenson, Chicago, .355; Klein, Philadelphia, .355; Hendrick, Brooklyn, .351, and Frisch, St. Louis, .348.

Hornsby leads in runs scored with 130 and Ott of New York in runs batted in with 133. O'Doul has 210 hits the largest total, and Frederick sets the pace with 48 doubles. L. Waner leads with 16 triples and Klein with 37 home runs. Cuyler has 34 stolen bases, the high mark in that activity.

Bush Still Leading

Guy Bush, Chicago ace, is finding his nineteenth victory difficult, but he still leads the league with 18 games won and only 4 lost for a percentage of .818. Burleigh Grimes, the Pittsburgh spitter, is only half a game away with 17 and 4 for a percentage of .810.

The Phillies, the Cubs and the Pirates are in the .300 class in team batting, the Phils leading with .309. The other two are tied at .304. The Cubs top the list in the field with .975, one point more than the Giants and the Reds show in a tie for second place.

"Innocents Of Paris" Headlines Week's Theater Program

Chevalier Stars In Lindsey Film Here This Week

European Actor Is Big Hit With New Songs

Maurice Chevalier, to France and England what Eddie Cantor and Al Jolson are to America, and the greatest international genius of song and pantomime that New York has seen in many a long day, has a song in "Innocents of Paris," which he believes will be his greatest lyric success.

The song is "Louise" and it was written especially for the French stage idol by Richard Whiting and Leo Robin, two of Broadway's best known composers of popular songs and musical comedy hits. It is a love ballad and is developed as the theme song of the production.

There are two other songs besides "Louise" which Chevalier sings in English. They are "It's a Habit of Mine," and "On Top of the World Alone."

Puts Over Songs.

Three songs which he sings in French and "puts over" in his own inimitable style of pantomime and mimicry, are "Valentine," the number which brought a sophisticated audience of critical New Yorkers to its feet at the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic recently — and "Dites Moi Mere," and "Les Ananas." The last number is the French version of the perennial American volkslied, "Yes, We Have No Bananas."

"Innocents of Paris" comes to the Lindsey theatre for a three-day run beginning next Thursday. It was written by Ernest Vajda, the noted Hungarian playwright, and the screen version was written by Ethel Doherty.

Sylvia Beecher, Mr. and Mrs. George Fawcett, Margaret Livingston, John Miljan and Russell Simpson are in the supporting cast.

HELMS IS BURIED

Cisco Bandit's Grave Made Within Pen Walls

HUNTSVILLE, Sept. 7 (AP)—In a crude plot of ground within the gray walls of the penitentiary here Henry Helms was buried Friday in a grave prepared by convicts.

Relatives of the man who died in the electric chair for participation in the tragic "Santa Claus" robbery of a Cisco bank December 23, 1927, failed to claim the body.

At 2 p. m. Friday the assistant warden of the penitentiary ordered the grave prepared and two hours later Helms was buried after brief funeral ceremonies conducted by Prison Chaplain W. E. Miller.

Joseph Conrad's Story Presented In Film At Lyric

"The Rescue" With Ronald Coleman Starts Today

"The Rescue," coming to the Lyric theatre today, reveals Ronald Colman in the stardom to which Samuel Goldwyn has elevated him as a result of popular demand. In this Joseph Conrad's greatest story of the sea, Mr. Colman is said to give the most stirring characterization of his screen career.

Mr. Colman became entrenched in the cinematic constellation as one of the most popular actors through his work under the Goldwyn banner in "Two Lovers," "The Night of Love," "The Winning of Barbara Worth," "The Magic Flame," and "The Dark Angel," and previously in "The White Sister" and "Romola."

"The Rescue" also affords Lily Damita, Mr. Goldwyn's importation from the ranks of French stars, her American screen debut. Miss Damita has the coveted role of Mr. Colman's leading lady.

This romantic and adventurous yarn of the sea, as only Conrad can tell it, is spun by the directorial genius of Herbert Brenon, who was rated by critics as the greatest director in 1927. It is the story of honor, love and betrayal in the Java seas, photographed against tropical backgrounds of rare beauty.

"The Rescue" is being released through United Artists, which in addition to handling Samuel Goldwyn productions, distributes the screen plays of Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, D. W. Griffith and Norma Talmadge.

The photodrama's script was prepared from Joseph Conrad's novel by Elizabeth Meehan, scenarist for "Sorrell and Son," and "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." The play presents Mr. Colman as Tom Lingard, and Miss Damita as Lady Edith Travers.

Movie Star To Wed Next Week

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 7 (AP).—Janet Gaynor, above, Hollywood film star and Lydell Peck, San Francisco attorney, filed notice of intention to wed here today. They said the wedding would take place in Oakland sometime next week.

Speedy Drama To Be Seen Starting At Palace Today

"The Voice of The City" Feature Picture

That talking pictures permit a "speeding up" of certain types of drama seems particularly well demonstrated in "The Voice of the City," recently completed by William Mack, the eminent playwright. It is his first all-talking picture, a Cosmopolitan production for Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer, which will open at the Palace theater today.

"It would take a great deal more 'footage' to tell the story of 'The Voice of the City' in silent form," states Mr. Mack. "It is such a compact drama, the whole action taking place in 24 hours, that in its construction explanations are made in a few properly spoken lines which would have taken a reel to express in pantomime.

Voices Effective.

"Furthermore, much of the drama rests in the nuances of the player's voice. For instance, we get a much more dramatic effect from the spoken scene where 'Dapper Dan' smoothly double-crosses Doyle, his 'friend,' than would have been possible in 'silent' form. Just seven words stamp 'Dapper Don' for all time as the cur of curs. And the same thing applies to the whispered conversation of Beebe with Doyle as her sweetheart lies hidden in a hollowed couch, while Biff, the detective, raps on the door."

Willard Mack, who both wrote and directed "The Voice of the City," came to his task with an international reputation for a record number of stage successes, including "Kick In," "The Noose" and "Gang War," and others all dealing with gangland and the underworld.

Laura La Plante is soon to make two more pic titles, "The Poor Sport" and "The Behavior of Mrs. Ctane."

Milton Sills Has Title Role Today In Lindsey Film

'The Barker' Taken From The Famous Stage Play

The shill and the barker; the sucker and the hula girls—all the colorful figures of carnival life—are brought to the screen in First National's picturization of "The Barker," the famous stage play by Kenyon Nicholson, which comes to the Lindsey Theatre today for four days.

To portray the various roles in this dazzling story of life under the gay banners of the street shows, a cast of characters was gathered that has seldom been equaled for versatility.

Heading the list is Milton Sills in the title role. As the picturesque spieler in front of the hula show, this popular star has seldom had a more virile or interesting part. He fairly "lives" the spieler who takes such pride in his work before the flying banners of the hula sideshow.

Dorothy Mackaill, co-stared as Lou, the amateur vamp, is an English girl who won her way into the London Hippodrome and later the "Follies" in New York. This is one of Miss McKaill's finest roles, in a long and varied screen career.

Betty Compson In Cast

Betty Compson, cast as Carrie, the hula dancer and sweetheart of the barker, started her career as concert and vaudeville violinist. She is both beautiful and accomplished.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has already distinguished himself on stage and screen, despite his youth. He appears as the Barker's son.

Once Pugilist and Poet

John Irwin is Sailor West, tattooing concessionaire. Irwin was once a pugilist and called himself Young Sharkey. Later he entered vaudeville as Jack Irwin, monologist, and gained the sobriquet of "The Poet of the Bowery." He was a sailor in his youth and was born at sea.

George Cooper as Hap, is a well-known actor and has had a world of experience on stage and screen.

Sylvia Ashton, playing the role of "Maw" Benson, fortune teller, was also born at sea and has become a character woman of rare ability, one of her greatest hits being in Cecil B. DeMille's "Old Wives For New."

Was Revenue Inspector

S. S. Simon, as Colonel Gowdy, the carnival proprietor, is a native of Sacramento, California, played as a boy with Booth and Barrett and John McCullough, was a government revenue inspector and was instrumental, he declares, in breaking up some of the old time opium rings. He is known as "the cowboy detective" because of his numerous interpretations of such roles in western dramas for the screen.

The gate-crashing genius, One Eyed Connolly, is another character in his own right, noted for his ability to break into the most invulnerable citadels.

From all walks of life they came, this varied and colorful troupe who play the romantic characters of the carnival in "The Barker."

Blond Hair A Handicap, So Joyce Compton Turned Into Red-Head; Goody-Goody Roles Not Cast To Her Lot Now

JOYCE COMPTON

BY DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Sept. 7—If you can't do the kind of work you like as a blond become a brunet or a red head.

That's the advice of Joyce Compton, young screen actress, who has tried the formula and found that it works. I don't know just what brand of ink or dye Joyce used but I do know that a few months ago she was the type of girl gentlemen are supposed to prefer and now she is a flaming red head.

Was Goody-Goody Girl

"When I was a blond all I could get was goody-goody roles," Joyce declares. "I never did like that sweet, sympathetic stuff. I wanted to be a girl with some fire in her. So I became a red head. And now I am getting the type of roles I like. The real me hasn't changed a bit but producers and directors seem to think I have. They didn't used to think I would be good in a dynamic role at all but now they like me as such a character."

Miss Compton is more interesting as just a human being than as an actress. However, she was good enough to get a long term contract from Fox about two months ago. Perhaps it is an unseen charm which takes time to discover.

Think She's Crazy

"My parents think I am a bit crazy," Joyce remarked. "Why? Oh, because of the crazy things I do. Just this morning I went down town and bought an old bed and a dresser for my room. And I suppose they will sit out in the back yard for two weeks until I get around to painting them. By the time I get through I probably will have spent more than a new set would cost. But I'll have a lot of fun doing my own painting.

"Art and music are my two big loves. I would rather play the piano or paint than almost anything else. I studied practically nothing but dancing and art during the two years I attended Tulsa University in Oklahoma. I never have been able to understand why a person should want to study Latin, mathematics or anything like that."

Tough Customer

Joyce is a tough customer for the poor interviewer. She declares that she has had a very uninteresting life and further tha nthat says nothing, preferring to merely answer "yes" or "no" to the interviewer's questions. As a result her real thoughts, if any, are not revealed.

Another of the actress' hobbies is raising dogs and cats. At present she has a regular menagerie of three dogs and five cats.

Some Hollywood stars rent their imported cars for use in pictures when they are not using them. . . . So it sometimes happens that the gorgeous bus you see driven by the villain in a picture really belongs to the hero—or the heroine.

One scene in Lenore Ulric's "Frozen Justice" will show "Aurora Borealis" in color. . . . Some day, perhaps, the Hollywood boys will film the solar system.

Regis Toomey of "Alibi" fame will play a lead in Norma Shearer's "Their Own Desires."

Lionel Barrymore will direct Lawrence Tibbett in "The Rogue's Song."

"Lady Luck" will be featured song in "Show of Shows," forthcoming musical special.

Frank Borzake sails for Ireland to direct John McCormack in his first talkie.

Plans Are Laid For Annual Booster Trips For Fair

Hand Of Good Fellowship Is To Be Extended To Every Community When Advertising For Fair Is Complete

Three Trade Trips Planned By Leaders Of Fair, Says Dickinson, Praising The Proposition

LUBBOCK will reach out the hand of fellowship to practically every hamlet and city of the South Plains when three trade trips, designed to build good will and advertise the Panhandle-South Plains fair, to be held here September 30 to October 5, inclusive, will be made during this month.

Committees will be appointed some time this week to handle each of the separate trips, officials of the fair association announce, and the itineraries will be definitely arranged.

Novelties Arranged

Novelties, such as were distributed along the route of the recent Portales, N. M. trip, and circulars, all advertising Lubbock and the fair, will be distributed in each of the towns.

The good-will evangels will be accompanied by the Lubbock high school band, under direction of H. A. Anderson.

One of the trips will include in its itinerary Plainview, Floydada, Crosbyton, Abernathy, Monroe, Ralls, Lorenzo and Idalou. Towns to be visited by another trade excursion are Brownfield, Plains, Ropesville, Meadow, Seminole and Seagraves. The third itinerary will include Lamesa, Post and intervening towns.

To Be Big Help

"The trade trips," said B. C Dickinson, president of the Panhandle-South Plains fair, "will do more than any other force toward building good will and bringing trade to Lubbock. Towns all over the South Plains, including Slaton, Lamesa, O'Donnell, Tahoka, and Crosbyton, are making monthly trips as means of securing trade for merchants. So far, Lubbock merchants have used this recognised method in a series of trips each year immediately preceding the fair."

"Every merchant," he continued, "taking part in the trade trips has realized new customers as result of acquaintances made on the excursions."

Fair catalogues will be off the press early this week, officials of the fair association announce. There are 172 pages to this year's catalogue, six more than last year, the increase necessitated by the large list of premiums.

Concessions will be on sale some time this week, A. B. Davis, manager of the fair, who will have charge of the sales, announced Saturday.

Officers and directors of the fair are trying to establish a new midway which will add to the convenience of patrons and give better locations for concessions.

Deputy Scout Men Named In District

Five deputy scout commissioners have been appointed to districts in the South Plains area council, Boy Scouts of America, Rev. L. G. H. Williams, president of the council, announced Saturday.

Those appointed are Rev. George E. Terrentine, Littlefield, to have supervision over Littlefield, Anton, and Sudan troops; M. L. H. Baze, Tahoka, to have charge of Lynn county troops at Tahoka, Wilson, and O'Donnell; W. R. McDuffie, Brownfield, for Brownfield and Seagraves groups; J. D. Dyer, Lamesa, for supervision of the three Lamesa troops and the Seminole scouts; Sam Henry, Lubbock, for the Lubbock county troops at Lubbock, Slaton and Shallowater.

"The main qualification of the deputy scout commissioner is experience in scouting and only men that have had scoutmasters are appointed," said Mr. Williams. "The policy of using deputy scout commissioners is in accordance with the latest national policy."

BANDIT IS TRAPPED

Man Is Captured After Robbing Bank Of $1.432

ST. CHARLES, Minn., Sept. 7. (AP)—Trapped in a wood three miles from town by a sheriff's posse, a bandit who robbed the First National Bank of St. Charles of $1,432 in a daring daylight holdup Friday was captured three hours later. The money was recovered.

Nearly 150 possemen surrounded the copse where the bandit had fled afoot after firing several shots at S. J. Thul, vice president of the bank, who sought to capture him as he dashed away from the bank. Thul was not injured.

MAN'S LIFE SAVED

Mexican's Record In Pen Is Cause Of His Stay

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 7. (AP)—Carlos R. Solorzano, who was saved from the firing squad by presidential orders on the eve of the date set for his execution, owes his life to the fact that he was a model student in the penitentiary school.

His teachers took pity on him and went to see the president the night before the scheduled execution. The president acceded to their pleas and at 10 p. m. ordered a stay for an indefinite period. The sentence probably will be commuted to life imprisonment.

More than 10,000 American automobiles will be imported into Germany this year.

Another Malady

Using One Ear Is Causing Deafness

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 7.—In this day of many wrong numbers and strained ears, telephones are going to be responsible for a new disease which will ravage the phone-using public, according to Dr. Perry Mulliken, of Hollywood.

Telephone ear is the name of the malady, and Dr. Mulliken says it is caused from the constant use of a telephone by the left ear. This causes people to listen intently with their left auditory nerve, developing this nerve to its utmost.

While this nerve is being developed, however, the right side is being slighted, with the result that it gradually loses its sensitiveness. This could be remedied by an alternate change from left to right in the instrument, he says.

Open Letters To President To Be Kept In Secrecy

White House Bans Issuance Of Information But That Won't Hurt News Value, Dutcher Opines

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—The fact that White House, as officially announced, "no longer receives letters addressed to the President which are given publicity prior to their receipt and acknowledgement," will not make any particular difference.

The news value of any open letters or protests addressed to Mr. Hoover will remain unchanged. That is, if they are of sufficient public interest they will be given just as much publicity when made public, regardless of the White House attitude. Thus, what is described as an official attempt to curb the use of the White House for publicity purposes is not likely to have that effect.

Any petition of other public message to the President will find its way into the newspapers if the signers are persons of sufficient substance and the subject matter of enough general interest. Our Presidents have always exercised the prerogative of answering or ignoring communications, as seemed most wise and expedient.

Nine-year-old Marshal Newton, the son of Walter H. Newton of Minneapolis, one of the Hoover secretaries, received on his birthday a large surprise package from Mrs. Hoover. The boy was in a hospital recovering from the amputation of a leg necessitated by an accident which recently stirred the capital to sympathy.

One of Marshal's presents was a board with pegs and holes and Mrs. Hoover explained that this was a puzzle which had kept Colonel Charles Augustus Lindbergh guessing nearly an entire afternoon.

Undoubtedly Marshal will enjoy the puzzle, but the incident becomes one of more than common interest as a sidelight on somebody's idea of an afternoon at the White House. Lots of people would be interested to hear the conversation when the Hoovers and Lindberghs get together, but an afternoon trying to solve a puzzle was about the last thing anyone considered as the latest in White House entertainment.

Demonstration To Be Held In City

A weed killing demonstration will be held next Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock in which all parties interested are invited to participate, according to an announcement Saturday by D. F. Eaton, Lubbock county agent.

The demonstration will be conducted under the direction of Mr. Eaton and D. H. Cunningham, representative of the Chipman Chemical Engineering Company, Inc. of Houston. The party will meet at the office of the county agent in the courthouse and proceed to the scene of the demonstration from there.

Blue weeds, Johnson grass and mesquite will be the object of the demonstration and Altacide, a mixture of calcium chlorate, will be used. The poison may be used as powder but the most effective use has been found to be with a spray.

EVACUATION TO START

STRASBOURG, France, Sept. 7. (AP)—Evacuation of the Rhineland by French troops will begin early in October, it was announced today. The battalion which has garrisoned Wissenmbourg since the Armistice will be the first to leave the occupied territory. Evacuation was expected to be completed late in May or early in June, 1930.

SEEKING ENDURANCE

Scoggin-Dickey Conducting Novel Sales Contest

A refueling endurance "sales flight" in which salesmen employed by Scoggin-Dickey Motor company, local Oakland-Pontiac dealer, will be the "pilots," was launched September 1.

Sales of new cars will be scored in the terms of "hours in the air," and Mr. Dickey is confident that the record of 420 hours hung up by the St. Louis fliers will be broken by more than one of his "pilots" who are: H. A. Sneed, A. D. Pace, F. O. Watson, Otto Geister, Ray Dickey and N. G. Kelly.

Aside from their desire to establish new records in this unique contest, the local Oakland salesmen are competing for attractive prizes offered by the dealer as a reward for unusual "sales aviation" performance.

A further interesting feature of the "flight" is a challenge match between the local Oakland sales organization and that of Blackman Motor company, Plainview, neighboring Oakland-Pontiac dealer. So confident is Mr. Dickey of the prowess of his pilots that a dinner with the losing flight crew as hosts has been wagered.

Department stores of Tokyo, Japan, have inaugurated bus services between railway stations and the stores.

Copley Beats Off Attacks Of Vicious Vampire Bats In Flooded Jungle Land

Lubbock Realtor Is Fortunate To Save His Life

E. W. Copley, of Lubbock, former big game hunter, tells today of a harrowing experience with blood-sucking vampire bats while he was marooned by water in the trees. This is the fifth of a series of articles being written by Sutton Christian, Avalanche-Journal staff, told by Mr. Copley.

The rainy season came, flooding rivers and smaller streams in Borneo, and forced us to abandon camp on the river and return into the hills for safety from the overflow.

Progress Is Slow

We broke camp on the river, picked out our nearest cut to the hills, and started on our journey. Very little progress was made the first two days on account of the boggy marshes and rise of water. The third day we were in about a mile of high land when back waters overtook us. We were forced to halt.

Preparing boats with provisions, Copley is getting ready for the trip into the jungles, a jaunt which ended when floods covered the lowlands and flying vampires swooped down upon camp in the trees. Malay hunters are seen in the background.

There was no place to set camp, we were compelled to roost in the trees. The water was rising rapidly and we were then in water up to our waists. Natives who were members of my hunting party took refuge in forks of the palms. I went up a banyan tree, taking my hammock. I made a sort of swing out of it and we passed the time away the best we could under the conditions. Staying in one spot 48 hours before the water began to recede, we lived principally upon cocoanuts and bananas. Our water supply seemed everlasting, with the cloudy weather, the dismal rain and 10 feet of water underneath us, to say nothing of the solitude of the jungles.

Push Reptiles Off

At intervals the stillness was broken by a colony of black howlers in the upmost part of the palms. The big snakes and spiders trying to take refuge on the same spot we were covering gave us exercise shoving them back into the water so that we did not need any rubbing down to limber up. On several occasions I took the butt of my rifle and pushed monster pythons and cobras aside, to say nothing of the big spiders as large as the palm of my hand.

Here I had my first experience with the thirsty blood-sucking vampire bats, commonly called flying fox. The vampire bat feeds principally upon the blood of animals and birds, and many travelers have fallen victims of the vampires' thirst for blood. Fastening their ironclad jaws against the flesh of a person, a colony of the bats destroy by degrees. I had heard the fear-provoking stories, but had given little thought to the accounts.

Plunge Into Water

Unable to sleep while cramped in my hammock, I decided to spend a portion of the night smoking my pipe. The tobacco supply was wet and I spent several minutes trying to dry the shredded leaves by friction in the palms of my hands. I protected my matches by placing them in the crown of my helmet. I struck a match and the light attracted a flying vampire. He made a tremendous swoop at the firt and with the speed of a bullet hit the top of my hammock, overturning it, while I fell into the water. I was not positive as to what had struck my hammock until I drew myself back into the tree. I soon discovered that I was in the midst of a flock of vampires. Natives in adjoining trees became terrorized and took to the water, calling for me to follow. Fearful of being struck, I tied my hammock around my neck, covered my face, and descended.

I found what I thought was the shallowest spot in the jungles, where water was up to my neck, and here I spent the remaining hours of the night in misery; natives doing likewise. [illegible] dawn came the vampires [illegible]. We waited there in constant dread, not knowing what else might happen. Hearing a flutter in a palm tree nearby at daybreak, I looked over my shoulder and saw a vampire swinging with his head up. This seemed unusual, as all bats I had ever seen would swing downward. On approaching I found that it had caught its head in the fork of a split palm leaf. I knocked it out with a large club, caught it by its wing and beat its brains out against the body of a tree.

In a Dajak village, near the ridge of the jungles, Copley made friends with the natives. Here he appears with a Malay child and a baby Ourangoutang.

Large As Fox

The vampires are called the flying fox, because they are as large as the common grey fox of America and their jaws are just as powerful.

We lost all our provisions, matches, and worst of all, tobacco. My shotgun shells had swollen so as to be of no use, but rifle shells were not damaged. We managed after reaching a small hill, where the ground was bare, to dry enough rice to chew on until we could reach a Dajak village. With dry rice, cocoanuts and mangoes we fared very well. After reaching the village we dried out our clothing, luggage and all equipment. Securing the services of a Dyak guide we abandoned thought of a trip back into the hills, took the shortest route, and left for Pontians, the principal port of Borneo, and the most welcome sight we had seen for many days

The Frock and Ensemble

Mode For Fall

We see the new mode not as a series of headlines to the effect that skirts will be longer, waistlines higher, etc., but rather from the fundamental change in fashion—or to put it another way, we are no longer to be dressed uniformly but individually—chic now lies in the selection of garments that are becoming to one's figure.

In our collection of frocks, ensembles, and coats for daytime and sports wear, one finds a flare adroitly placed to lend longer lines to a short figure—frocks that flaunt a natural waistline—frocks that delicately intimate a waistline—and so throughout the entire collection, every highlight of Paris openings is applied skillfully, discretely, and with an understanding of figures as they are. You will delight in the showing, for as usual Jackman's have searched the markets thoroughly to give its patrons the utmost in smart style, fine quality and better value.

It happened that the doctor's team won, and the big loving cup was presented to him when lo and behold it was found to contain all the beautiful and valuable presents which the members of the B. Y. DESTRUCTIVE STORM WEDNESDAY

Wednesday evening about 8:30 a very destructive wind, hail and rain storm visited Lorenzo and surrounding country, doing considerable damage in places. Within the city limits of Lorenzo the rain was light and the hail was not in sufficient quantity to do any harm, however, the wind twisted up several windmills.

A strip of hail three miles north beat everything into a pulp, it is reported, and was accompanied by a heavy rain. The hail was not so heavy south of town, but it is estimated that entire damage from hail will run about ten to twelve per cent of the entire crops of the trade territory.

Extensive Service Assistance To Co-operatives Cited

Possibilities And Limitations Of Help To Farmers' Organizations By Agricultural Agents Are Numerous

Trend In Problems Today Is Toward Marketing; Past County Agents Concerned With Production Mostly

By C. W. WARBURTON
Director of U. S. Extension Work

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The followings excerpts are taken from the address of C. W. Warburton, of the United States Department of Agriculture, as delivered before the American Institute of Cooperation, at Baton Rouge, La., recently.)

The aim of the cooperative extension service is to aid farm people to increase their net incomes and to improve their living conditions. It was with this end in view that the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges fifteen years ago pooled their extension efforts under the Smith-Lever Act.

The cooperative extension service today comprises a field force of 5,500 workers and its total budget for the fiscal year 1928-29 was 22 1-2 million dollars. To attain its aim, the Extension Service recognizes that improvement in the marketing of farm products is vital. It likewise recognizes that in obtaining such improvement farmers' cooperative associations show that two million farmers are now members of these associations. The 11,400 asociations represented by this membership did a business of approximately 2 1-2 billion dollars in 1928.

Object Is To Increase Incomes

The ultimate object of the cooperative associations is the same as that of the Extension Service, that is, to increase the net income and improve the living conditions of the farmer. It is inevitable that these two great forces in the farm life of the country, seeking each in its own way the same end, should find it easy to work together in harmony and with mutual benefit. I welcome, therefore, this opportunity to discuss the possibilities and limitations of the assistance which the Extension Service can render to cooperatives.

At the outset, let me say that the Extension Service is a strong advocate of properly organized cooperative associations as a means of improving marketing conditions. Few realize, I believe, how closely the representatives of the Extension Service have worked with cooperatives in the past fifteen years, or the extent to which it has contributed to the success of cooperative associations. While the Extension Service has been helpful, I think it can and should render even greater assistance to cooperatives in the future.

The ways in which the extension agent can assist the cooperative association are many. The things which he cannot legitimately do for such an association are very few. The agent can aid greatly by obtaining a full knowledge of marketing conditions affecting his county. He can assist the farmers of his county in determining whether or not they are ready to form an organization. If it is found advisable to form an association, the agent can advise as to the type of organization best fitted to meet the needs and how it is to be managed. He can give facts on the experience and practices of other similar associations, on how they are organized, how they get and hold members, how they finance their operations, what requirements they make of their membership as to the quality and uniformity of their products, and how they develop their business.

After the association begins operations, the agent can keep its management advised of new information whihc comes to him from the state agricultural college and the U. S. Department of Agriculture on production and market trends and the bearing they may have on its business. The extension agent can be helpful also in advising the farmers of the county through field demonstrations, meetings, exhibits and the press on improved methods of growing and preparing products of superior quality for market.

Limitation Is Named.

The only limitation of the extension agent to giving assistance to a cooperative association is that which any public official must recognize, namely, that he cannot engage in any private business which conflicts with the performance of his full services as a public servant. Briefly, the extension agent cannot serve as an officer of a cooperative association, transact business or handle funds for it, or enroll members. This applies to cooperative purchasing quite as much as to cooperative selling. On the other hand, it is his duty to aid in organizing the association on a sound basis and to give such advice as he can to its officers in their efforts to transact its business efficiently and to build up its membership. In our experience, the extension agent who has given the largest service to the cooperative association is the one who has been successful in aiding the members of such an association to acquire promptly the ability to conduct their business in an efficient and satisfactory manner unaided.

The extension agent today must be equipped to assist the farmers of his county in the intelligent selection of the type of cooperative association suited to their needs and in determining when to effect its organization. On the other hand the agent is in no sense obligated to aid in the organization of any and every type of association which may be proposed for his county. In fact, it is his business to help the farmers of his county determine whether the type of association proposed will justify its existence under their conditions. This will occasionally bring the agent in conflict with agencies seeking to promote some particular type of organization, and perhaps with the representatives of some of the larger commodity associations seeking to organize local branehes in the county.

The Extension Service holds that it is not the right but the duty of the agent to satisfy himself fully as to the desirability of organizing an association in his county before he goes on record as favoring it. He should satisfy himself, first, that the type of association proposed is sound; second, that there is a real need for it in the county; and third, that the time is ripe for organization. He may well bring to the attention of the group which is discussing the organization of a cooperative association the essentials for its success, such as adequate volume of business, adequate capital, good management, selected membership, standardized products, and sound sales policies. He may well caution them that increased returns are dependent quite as much on the interest of the individual member and his attention to details which he alone can give, as it is to business judgment of the officers and managers. Our experience has been that, if an association organized with the advice of the agent fails, it is a serious question whether the agent will long survive the defunct association in service in that county. The extension agent has too important a program in his county to jeopardize its development by impulsive or ill-considered support of a type of cooperative association unsuited to local conditions and needs.

Extension Service Cooperates

I believe that a situation such as I have suggested in which the county extension agent may come in conflict with agencies seeking to promote an undesirable type of organization is largely avoided where the state extension service has a competent and adequate staff of marketing specialists. This is a field in which the cooperatives and the Extension Service can work together to great mutual advantage. The Extension Service has the knowledge of local needs and conditions and should be competent to determine when the time is ripe for organization with respect to a given commodity. The commodity organization has the machinery and the personnel to establish local units on a sound working basis. With this combination, the progress in the organization of stable cooperative associations in such states should be steady and without serious setback.

This very naturally raises the question of what the Extension Service is now doing in meeting marketing problems and, particularly, those relating to the organization and conduct of cooperative associations. There are at present 63 marketing specialists working in 28 states. In 1928, there were 1,642 county extension agents reporting marketing work. These agents reported giving assistance in the organization of 942 new cooperative associations and working with 2,269 associations previously organized. The amount of business done by these associations was estimated at $233,202,395.

Production Has Been Stressed

The total funds made available exclusively for marketing work during the fiscal year just ended, 1928-1929, amounted to $244,150. Compared to the total extension appropriation of $22,492,646 for the same period, it may seem that marketing did not receive its due support from the cooperative extension service. The figure first quoted, however, does not take into account the time devoted to marketing by state workers other than marketing specialists, and by the county extension agents. It should also be borne in mind that it is only within the last five years that tested facts and data on marketing have begun to become available in any volume from either the U. S. Department of Agriculture or the state agricultural colleges. Until very recently, few extension agents had received any considerable training in economic and marketing problems. With limited facts available and with personal limited in marketing training, it is natural that the emphasis in extension work up to now has been along production lines.

The trend today is unmistakably toward the expansion of extesion effort in the marketing field. The important role which the cooperative associations are expected to play in improving the agricultural situation naturally centers interest on them and their problems. I confidently expect to see our extension agents generally rendering efficient service in connection with the development and stabilization of cooperative associations during the coming year. The Extension Service prides itself on its ability to adapt its organization to the needs of American agriculture and with the body of economic facts now available from the Department and the state agricultural colleges there should be a steady advance in the progress made by extension agents in helping to solve the marketing situation.

CHEESE BRINGS FAME TO WISCONSIN

Swiss Aid State In Producing Three-Fourths Of Country's Supply

By NEA Service.

MONROE, Wis., Sept. 7.—Ninety five years ago there settled in Green county, Wis., a little band of 108 Swiss immigrants who brought with them a cheese-making ability that has made Wisconsin the leading cheese producing state in the Union.

About 500,000,000 pounds of cheese are produced in this country annually. Of this amount, Wisconsin produces more than three-fourths. And the majority of this cheese is produced in a single county — Green county — within whose confines of 24 square miles are located 150 cheese factories, three milk condenseries, one plant in which powdered milk is manufactured and a few cremeries.

Chief among the cheese manufactured here are the Swiss and Limburger varieties. The former is traced directly back to the original band of Swiss people who settled here in 1845.

It is an interesting story, this settling of the Swiss here. Faced with starvation in their native land because of increasing population and decreasing land on which to produce crops, the canton of Glarus sent two advance agents to America to survey the country and pick out a suitable site on which the Swiss could locate.

Swiss Found Little Glarus.

They selected a location in the picturesque valley of the Little Sugar river, in northern Green county. Here each settler received 20 acres and on these they hastily erected log houses. A little village, named after their home canton, Little Glarus, was formed and here they started their lives anew in a virgin territory of America, still clinging to many of their Swiss habits and traditions.

Cheese making along the same lines they employed in Switzerland was started the second year after their arrival here. Each family received a cow. The cream from the milk of these cows was made into butter and the skimmilk was used in making a cheese called Glarnerkase, or Schabzieger. These were small, usually less than a pound in weight, and took the form of the frustum of a pyramid.

Soon the population of the little village was increased to 1,200 people. Then wheat raising was started, with the result that nearly all of the settlers were bankrupt. So the swing back into dairying was started and by 1873 this section was known as "Little Switzerland."

First Cheese Factory In 1851.

Swiss cheese was made in a small way in this county at the start. Prior to 1851 all the cheese made in this country was made on farms.

Ex-President Calvin Coolidge indulged in a slice of Green county's famous Swiss cheese when he vacationed on the Brule river in Wisconsin last year.

The factory system was started in New York in that year by Jesse Smith. The process then employed was the use of a copper kettle, holding about 10 pails. These were placed over a fire and the skimmilk boiled. The curd was then removed and the cheese was cured and the seasoning of a Swiss herb was mixed in.

The Swiss cheese industry has now branched into mass production methods. In place of the small copper kettles, the 20th century cheese maker uses kettles with capacities ranging from 3,000 to 4,000 pounds. These are mounted on concrete foundations and are heated with steam. One Swiss cheese factory in Monroe uses about a dozen of these big copper kettles.

In these kettles the milk is heated to about 140 degrees Fahrenheit. When the rennet, the dried stomach of a calf used for curdling milk, has done its work, the curd is lifted from the kettle with a cheese cloth and dropped into the forming hoop. Here it is punched and kneaded until the surplus whey is worked out, after which it is put into a press and the remainder of the whey is worked out. After a day or so in the press the cheese is given a brine bath and stored.

Holes Are Quality Index.

The Swiss, or Emmental cheese, as it is known in Switzerland, is stored in a curing cellar at a temperature of about 68 degrees. Here it is turned and salted every other day. The holes in the cheese are the result of gas formation produced by bacterial action through which proper quality is developed and are, therefore, more or less of an index of quality.

In the process of manufacture the cheese seems not to incorporate in the curd all the fat content of the milk. In olden times this excess fat went to the calves and pigs with the rest of the whey. It is now possible to salvage this fat with centrifugal separators in the same manner that cream is separated from milk. This fat has various uses and makes a fair quality of butter if properly handled.

Even though Wisconsin does produce such a large amount of cheese, the per capita consumption in the United States is so low that this state can nearly furnish the demand. Other states have small outputs. If the American per capita consumption of cheese should increase to equal that of the Swiss or Germans, it is estimated it would take 10 states like Wisconsin to supply the domestic demand.

Chief, Grain Futures Administration

The compiling of daily reports of transactions in grain futures from all markets, the checking of false and misleading information which affects or tends to affect the prices of grain, and the making of general observations of the entire grain marketing machinery with a view to preventing abnormal fluctuations of prices and to crate market conditions which will reflect supply and demand, is handled by the Grain Futures Administration of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This office has charge of the carrying out of the grain futures act of September 21, 1922, which place the supervision of all trading in grain futures in the hands of the federal government.

Worm Riddance Is Giving More Eggs

ABILENE — After treating his flock of 324 hens for worms, J. S. Reagen of Shep community gathered 42 eggs less each day for eight days. But 19 days after the treatment the flock began laying 84 more eggs daily than before. The flock used to lay 110 eggs, now they lay 194 eggs each day. The commonest worm treatment used by the county agent is two pounds of tobacco dust mixed with 100 pounds of mash and fed for three weeks, omitted for three weeks, and then repeated for the same period.

WEED KILLER DISCOVERED

EL PASO—A powdered weed killer composed of calcium chlorate has been used successfully against possession vine, blue weed, Johnson grass and tullies in the El Paso Valley, the county agent reports.

JEWELRY STOLEN

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (AP) —Two young robbers today held up a jewelry salesman on the lower East Side and escaped with jewelry valued between $10,000 and $20,000.

Cooperatives Are Proving A Factor In Dairy Outputs

Big Percentage Of Nation's Production Is Credited To Farmer Owned And Managed Organizations

Thirty-three per cent of the creamery butter produced in the United States in 1928 was made in farmer-owned or farmer-operated plants. In Wisconsin more than 75 per cent of the output of creamery butter came from cooperative plants. Sixty-seven per cent of the creamery butter made in Minnesota was produced by cooperative associations. The percentages of Vermont creamery butter produced by cooperatives in 1928 was approximately 50 per cent, and the percentages for some of the other states were: California, 44; Iowa, 43; Washington, 30; Michigan, 30 per cent.

Practically all the cheese made in Maine in 1928 was made in farmer-controlled plants, and 75 per cent of the cheese produced in Oregon was the product of cooperative enterprises. Some of the other states with a high percentage of cooperative activity in manufacturing cheese are: Minnesota, 60 per cent; Wisconsin, 34 per cent; Michigan, 22 per cent; and Illinois, 20 per cent.

The farmer-controlled cheese factories reporting to the United States Department of Agriculture for 1928 produced approximately 28 per cent of all the cheese made in the United States during that year.

One Crop Farmer Tries Diversity

LIBERTY—"No more cotton for me," announces S. S. Sherman of Lake Charlotte community in Liberty county. He had been a one-crop farmer all his life until 1928 when E. L. Meyers, county agent, induced him to demonstrate a diversified system which includes truck crops for cash, and corn, soy beans, peas and hay for feed. He has been averaging $12 per day in sales of truck crops, including roasting ears which returned him at the rate of $140 per acre.

Sudan Pasture Increases Milk

GRAHAM—Two days after turning his eight Jersey cows into a Sudan pasture, H. M. Burdick of Red Top community weighed up 13 pounds more milk than before, the increase being from 160 pounds daily to 173 pounds. He planted a little less than one acre per cow this year as a demonstration but told the county agent his intention to plant two acres per cow next year.

UNFAIR FINE

FORT WORTH, Sept. 7.—Glenn Bavousett, ambulance driver, was fined $2 and costs for driving an injured man through a red traffic light. He picked up an injured negro and was taking him to a hospital when he crashed the signal. The negro died 20 minutes after reaching the hospital.

Authors Of Old Favorties Return To Familiar Themes

Penrod Is To Be Revived After 13 Years

WITHIN the next fortnight, a half dozen of America's favorite writers will be safely back on the book shelves. Most of these, having rambled off on strange literary trails, finds themselves back on a road that brought them their early crowds of followers.

Marie de la Roche, who came out of obscurity into the forefront by winning the Atlantic Monthly prize with "Jalna," carries along the lives of characters introduced in that best seller of another season.

Meanwhile Booth Tarkington will pick up Penrod where he left him almost thirteen years ago. While "Alice Adams" will remain my own particular Tarkington favorite, still Penrod is the most amusing young person to appear on a book page since Tarkington bade him goodbye.

And Mary Roberts Rinehart having deviated from old courses after her experiences on western dude ranches, appears again in happier company. Mrs. Rinehart is to writing what Mrs. Fiske and George Cohan are to the theater. She's a grand trouper. There's skill and experience and background in everything she writes. At worst, she never has done a really dull story. Her much-touted "Lost Ecstacy," seemed to me so much cowboy-city girl suff. But in her latest "The Romantics," Mrs. Rhinehart has some extremely good short sketches.

In these episodes she spins tales of folk who rise to the tragic and sink to the maudlin in the good cause of romance. There is an opening story titled, "The Old Man Cleans His Revolver," which has a fascinating and brooding terror hanging over it—the terror of two aging lovers whose quaintness stirs laughter as they go down the years clinging to romantic vanities.

Mrs. Rinehart, by the way, now appears under the imprint of a firm in which her son, Alan, who with John Farrer stepped out of the Doubleday, Doran firm one day last winter to go into publishing for themselves, is a member. And an up-and-coming young team they promise to be.

Fannie Hurst, also has returned to happier hunting grounds. Her last novel, "A President Is Born," was an idea—but little more. Not a bad idea, to be sure, to check back in a small home town and vision a future president in his short pants and overalls surrounded by his family.

Unfortunately, biography has had a vogue which puts presidents and princes in a light far above the capacity of most fictioneers. The life story of almost any dignitary is more fascinating in reality than in fiction. And so far as the making is concerned, any newspaper reader who has taken the time and trouble to follow the dispatches concerning the closeted conferences at a party convention has no illusions concerning the manner in which the man who becomes candidate is nominated. Mrs. Hurst forgot to get this very important detail into her book.

However "Five and Ten" (Harpers.) is of a pattern which Mrs. Hurst designs well. This is a very Woolworth of a book—based as it is on nickels and dimes secured through a fortuitous marriage by one John Rarick. He becomes one of the world's richest men, but his family life is something else again. For his millions went to his heart as well as his head. And we see one daughter crying out for things that money cannot buy—dripping as she is in gold. There is the excellent legend of a modern Croesus in this book.

To remedy the poor telephone service in France, underground cables are to be laid to link the chief cities and towns, the program calling for two years' construction, and the first line, connecting Paris and Marseilles, is being laid.

Three hundred men who, as unemployed charity subjects had been engaged on relief work at Lennox Castle, Stirlingshire, England, have struck as a protest against the dismissal of 30 workers.

Turns Of A Bookworm

Book News Notes For This Week

THE FALL books are rolling forth in ever rising waves.

From England comes "Ultima Thule," a sad recountal of the sufferings of an Australian family, the husband and father of which could not endure the shock of losing his fortune and so floundered through bogs of regret and undecision into a mad house.

The novel is the third of a trilogy projected by a woman under the pen name of Henry Handel Richardson, the last volume having succeeded abroad after the other failed.

In "The Street of Chains," Lillian Laufetry deals with the drama of intermarriage, bringing the orthodox Jew, with his century-welded loyalties to family and racial ideals into conflict with equally characteristic leanings of other bloods. Nor are more famous fictionists neglected.

Donn Byrne's "Field of Honor," a Napoleonic novel and his last: "The Romantics," a collection of short stories by Mary Roberts Rinehart; "Five and Ten," Fannie Hurst's tale of a dime store magnate's family; "The Beautiful Years," by Henry Williamson, who wrote "The Pathway"—these are in the familiar style of their respective authors.

"One of a sovereign's greatest difficulties is to get people to tell them the truth," says Daisy, Princess of Pless, in her autobiography. "Most of us dislike the truth and hate people who insist on blurting it out." She reveals the extreme lengths the Kaiser's advisers or he himself went to prevent him from knowing the truth. "I have explained several times what devices I had to resort to in order to ensure Press cuttings reaching the Emperor personally. This was essential because he never saw an ordinary newspaper. There was prepared for him daily a newspaper printed in gold—can anything more hideous be imagined, or more tiring to read! It was made up of excerpts from the Press of the world, suitable ones, of course, such as it was considered the Emperor might wish to read. Nothing else. This carefully edited Golden Journal was for years the only medium through which news of the doings and feelings of the outside world reached the German ruler!"

The world's knowledge of the Russia that was—the Russia of the Czars—was drawn a little from political news and historical records but chiefly from the fiction and dramas of Russian writers. Thus it always has been, and thus, a decade after the terrors of the Bolshevik revolution, the likeness of the new Russia begins to become discernible to other peoples. Perhaps it is the fact that lends particular interest to the publication of a collection of "Short Stories Out of Soviet Russia," compiled and translated by John Cournos, (E. P. Dutton.)

But wholly apart from this sociological significance, the stories in this collection have reasons for translation. They are writing, for the most part, of this very first order.

There are stores of war and of peace, of peasants and scholars, of love and hate, of frustraton and—in the case of "The Man You Couldn't Kill"—a species of fulfilment, in the group. For honest enjoyment and truthful portrayal of Soviet Russia, this little red book is, perhaps, better than any "guide book" that has appeared since the Revolution.

Some murders happen twice: once in the mind of the murderer, and again when the person is killed. And that's when a psychological detective, like Detective Duff, the hero of Harvey O'Higgins' new book, "Detective Duff Unravels It," published by Horace Liveright, puts it all over the old-fashioned sleuth. Detective Duff tracks his criminal through the twists and turnings of the human mind, and finds amazing solutions to the most baffling crimes.

Mr. Nelson served with the Salvation Army for 30 years.

"Can an artist live in a university?" asks Irwin Edman in one of the essays in his new volume, "Adam, the Baby, and the Man From Mars." He goes on to answer the question by explaining why a creative literary worker cannot thrive under the domination of the dull, plodding, unimaginative civil-servan who typifies the majority of any universal faculty. Wanda Fraiken Neff expands this thesis in her forthcoming "Lone Voyagers" (Houghton Mifflin company), by saying that the average university atmosphere is deadly to any kind of original or exceptional ability, whether in the arts, in science, or in scholarship. Mrs. Neff, who is the wife of Professor Emery Neff of Columbia, is the author of "We Sing Diana," a recent novel which deals with the dilemma of the intellectual woman.

Vera Caspary, the young author of "Ladies and Gents," (Century.) which is the newly published story of a glorified little hoofer and her adventures on New York's "Main Stem," learned about life as it is lived on Broadway while she was editor of a magazine devoted to the raptures and aesthetics of The Dance.

Boy Of Eleven, Heir To $2,000,000 Is Lonely Without Mother; Story Queer

By NEA Service.

DETROIT, Sept. 7. — Jimmy Smith, who is only 11 years old, has inherited an estate of $2,000,000—but he hasn't any mother.

Or, rather, he has one but he has only seen her once in the last eight years. And the Michigan courts must decide in the near future whether an 11-year-old multimillionaire shouldn't have a mother as well as a vast bank account.

Jimmy's full name is James Frederick Smith. His mother is Mrs. Rose Ruoff Bryce. Sickness, sudden riches, death and loneliness are the elements that go to make up the story of this poor little rich boy.

During the World war Mrs. Bryce, who was then Rose Henry, an 18-year-old immigrant from Ireland, fell in love with a soldier at Fort Wayne, Ind. They were married in the summer of 1918; then the soldier went overseas, to die in action in France. Early the following summer, Jimmy was born.

The young mother, getting a job in the Ford factory, managed to support herself and her child until the lad was nearly a year old. Then she fell seriously ill and had to go to a hospital for many months. A friend of her dead husband put her in touch with Mr. and Mrs. James W. Smith, a married couple in moderate circumstances, and they volunteered to keep Jimmy for her until she got well enough to take care of him herself again.

The Smiths were as good as their word. They gave Jimmy a good home. Fortune, furthermore, smiled on them. Smith's business enterprise prospered. He became well-to-do.

When Mrs. Bryce finally left the hospital she had a desperately hard time establishing herself once more. The Smiths were as fond of her son as if he were their own. Besides, they were able to take care of him in much better style than she could have. At last, in desperation, she consented to give up her claims to him and let the Smiths formally adopt him.

This was done. Since then Jimmy lived in the Smith home. The Smiths grew rich; when they died, some months ago, they left Jimmy $2,000,000.

The courts, having lost sight of the fact that Jimmy's mother was still living, made Helen R. Fader, Smith's niece, the boy's guardian. Jimmy was packed off to a military school. Mrs. Bryce traced him there, went to see him one day—the only time she has seen him in more than eight years.

Jimmy, she said, told her he was lonely, and begged her to take him away. So now she has filed suit in probate court here, asking for the cancellation of her son's adoption papers and the removal of Mrs. Fader as his guardian.

Huston's Choice For G. O. P. Post Is Believed Sure

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7. (AP)—Election of Claudius H. Huston of Tennessee as successor to Chairman Hubert Work probably will be the only business transacted by the republican national committee at its session Monday.

This was indicated today after high leaders of the party held preliminary conferences. Huston is unopposed for chairman and all controversial subjects are to be eliminated from the session.

There had been the suggestion that the committee elect a national committeeman for Georgia to succeed Ben Davis, negro, who failed of reelection by the Georgia delegation to the Kansas City convention. However, it was stated that the vacancy would not be filled at this time. Patronage matters will continue to be handled by the special committee of republicans and Hoover democrats which has been set up in that state.

Cotton Declines; Market Highstrung

New Ventures Are Avoided Saturday By Cotton Buyers

Market Largely Pre-Bureau Affair As Traders Have Desire To Even Commitments Before Reports

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 7. (AP)—Cotton was largely a pre-bureau affair today, traders evincing a desire to even commitments and avoid new ventures in advance of the government's crop report due Monday. Opening low, prices gradually worked off. December dropping to 19.12 and closing at that figure for a net loss of 9 points. The general market closed steady at net declines of 8 to 10 points.

Despite relatively steady Liverpool cables the market opened easy at a decline of 1 to 4 points. Following a momentary rally on some pre-bureau covering which carried active positions up 1 to 3 points over yesterday's close, the market weakened under selling.

Final Prices Low

At the lowest October traded at 18.83, and January 19.13, or 11 to 12 points down from the highs. Final prices were at or near the lowest.

Receipts 36,298; for year 708,844; last year 497,776. Exports 13,414; for year 396,024; last year 402,982. Stocks 739,987. Last year 536,079. Stock on shipboard 55,101; last year 877,646. Spot sales 39,902; last year 49,654.

Cotton Market Is Quiet Saturday

NEW YORK, Sept. 7. (AP)—Cotton was comparatively quiet today and fluctuations were attributed chiefly to further evening-up of accounts in preparation for the government crop report which is to be published Monday. Early advances on some trade buying and covering were followed by reactions under liquidation with December selling off from 19.35 to 19.25 where it closed. The general market closed steady at net declines.

The opening was steady at an advance of 1 to 4 points on buying

Weather Notes

Snow Falls Early In West Sections

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 7. (AP)—From Montana on the north to the Colorado-New Mexico state line the frosty fingers of winter stretched out today over the Rocky Mountain region, leaving record low temperatures for September. The cold wave brought a blanket of snow in parts of Wyoming and in high altitudes in Colorado.

In one of the worst storms that Colorado has experienced in years at this season, driving rain that turned to snow at high altitudes forced navy planes en route from Colorado Springs to Denver down at Parker, Colo. They continued to Denver later. Other planes were forced down at Pueblo last night. Traffic by automobile over several mountain passes was characterized as dangerous today.

The Lander territory in Wyoming today registered the earliest snow fall in 38 years.

Fourteen inches of snow fell in the Fox Park district near Laramie, Wyoming.

An eight inch blanket of snow draped the summit of Pike's Peak. A snow plow cleared the road for the cog train but the automobiles highway up the peak remained closed for the day because of heavy drifts. Low hanging clouds and chilly temperatures enveloped Colorado Springs.

Paris Goes Dry

Citizens Drink Up All The Beer

PARIS, Sept. 7. (AP) — Placards announcing "no more beer" in letters several inches high today adorned the windows of some of the largest and most important Paris cafes in the vicinity of the Opera, the Bourse and the Grand Boulevard in mute testimony to the thirst that has reigned here during a 10-days heat wave.

Paris has gone dry as regards beer, but not from choice. Its citizens literally have drunk it dry.

One afternoon paper today calculated that 7,342,000 glasses of beer were consumed in Paris and its suburbs yesterday alone, although it furnishes no means of checking its statistics.

Wheat Enlivened In Ninth Inning Rally Of Prices

Improved Demand By Millers Of Northwest Gives Upturn To Heavy Tone In Late Market Sessions

By JOHN P. BOUGHAN
Associated Press Market Editor

CHICAGO, Sept. 7. (AP)—A ninth inning rally enlivened the wheat pit today after a dark start. The tone for the most part had been heavy, but improved demand from Northwestern millers for December wheat at the easier levels inspired a late upturn in which short covering played a part.

Corn was weak throughout. The overnight frost along the Canadian border having wrought no apparent damage to corn.

Wheat Firm

Wheat closed firm at prices unchanged to 5-8c higher than Friday; corn was easy; 1-4 to 7-8c lower, and oats were firm throughout, finishing at net gains of 5-8 to 1c. Provisions were unchanged to 12c down.

Iowa and Nebraska for the most part escaped last night's freeze and the regions affected are unimportant corn growers. With trading quiet and rains in order corn values were easier. Oats gained strength from bullish views of the feed situation and of the Canadian yield. Provisions declined a little on scattered liquidation.

For the progressive improvement of crops in Spain the government plans to select wheat from districts producing the best qualities for distribution in those having poor crops.

FORT WORTH, Sept. 7. (AP)—After a week of very liberal receipts of cattle and calves, Saturday's offering was light.

A few cows 3.75 to 7.25. Common steers 8.00. Common heifers 7.00 to 9.00.

Calf prices 5.00 to 10.50.

Sheep values considered steady.

Hogs fairly active. Rail top 10.65; truck top 10.25; bulk 175-250 pound rail and truck butchers 10.00 to 10.60; packing sows 7.75 to 8.00.

Cattle Offerings Light On Market

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 7. (AP)—(USDA)—Cattle trade around the 11 market circuit this week was slow and uneven with packers endeavoring to obtain price concessions on most all killing classes. Beef steers and yearlings are closing steady to unevenly lower, some points reporting declines of 25c to $1.00. Aggregate receipts 224,000 a slight increase over last week but 14,000 short of the same period a year ago.

Hog Prices Drop

Hogs dropped to the lowest levels since early June or 15 to 40c lower than a week ago. Chicago had a late top of $11.15. Total offerings 376,000 against 438,789 last week and 316,922 a year ago.

The sheep supply 391,000 an increase of 41,000 over last week and 10,000 more than a year gao. Fat lambs weak to 35c lower as compared with last Saturday.

Turbulent Market Ends Active Week At Highest Pitch

Week-End Profit Taking Is Feature Of Final Session Saturday; Firm Undertone Shown in Wall Street

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 7. (AP) — The stock market ended the most turbulent week since early August today with speculative enthusiasm still at a high pitch. Week end profit-taking came in some volume before the close but the market displayed a firm undertone, and net gains more than offset a long list of losses at the close.

Trading was rapid. Food shares and coppers were firm. General motors was again heavily traded, but failed to make headway.

Foreign exchanges were fairly steady, but Sterling cables were under pressure, moving a shade lower at $4.84 23-32.

Turkey's proposed new tariff law tends toward the exclusion of luxury articles, particularly high-priced automobiles, perfumery, jewelry, haberdashery, silks, rayons and high grade woolen and cotton textiles.

Letters Cause It

Mail Order Love Not So Lovely

CHICAGO, Sept. 7. (AP) —There are letters you write to get married, then there are letters that lead to divorce. The former Elizabeth Hopkins of Port Arthur "white, clean, healthy and 20," has written both, her husband, Victor Von Gerhard, said in his suit filed today.

The couple started a correspondence after he read an advertisement in a magazine in which Miss Hopkins said she was lonely. Their letters led to the altar, but later the husband found his wife did not quite measure up to her description of herself. She used snuff for one thing, he said, and another thing, she treated him rough. So they separated. Now Gerhard said he received another letter from his wife in which she threatened to come back and do him "bodily harm."

That was the letter that led to the suit for divorce. He said also he wanted an injunction to keep her from carrying out her threat. The couple was married in 1926.

TO RECEIVE AID

BIG SPRING, Sept. 7.—(Special)—The first apportionment of state aid to schools will be received in Howard county on or before September 15, according to Pauline Cantrell, county superintendent of schools. The first amount to be received will be $11,512.50 made on the basis of $2.50 per scholastic capita. In Howard county rural districts there are 1,938 scholastics; 290 scholastics reside in the Coahoma Independent district and 2,377 in the Big Spring Independent district. Total apportionment for this present school year will be $17.50 per capita.

ed at the home of W. A. Kitchen, Wright's brother-in-law, asking for Wright. Upon being informed by Mrs. Kitchen that Young Wright was not there, Foshee informed, she told officers, that he had a "little proposition to make him down at my house." Foshee then called at the King home, nearby and asked for Wright there. Being told that he was not there also, he began a search of the house under protest of Mrs. King, officers were told.

As he was leaving the King home, Foshee noticed Wright and another young man driving up in a car from an adjoining field and the shooting followed.

Foshee approached Wright as he stopped the car and demanded that he go with him to his home as he had a "little proposition" for him, witnesses said. Wright refused. Foshee jerked him out of the car with one arm and told him "to prepare to meet his maker." Wright started running as Foshee pulled his gun.

Circling the King home, Wright started toward the Kitchen home with Foshee in behind him, firing. Near the Kitchen place, one shot took effect and Wright stumbled. Foshee fired twice more and then ran up and beat the fallen man across the head with his gun. Foshee fired five times, he declared in his statement to District Attorney Bradley. A .32 calibre Colt was used.

Following the shooting, Foshee drove to Levelland and surrendered to officers. He was questioned by Attorney Bradley in the afternoon and placed under the murder charge. No bond was set and no date made for the examining trial.

The two young men had been neighbors since January, both moving to the section from points in Oklahoma, Foshee from Granfield and Wright from Razia.

An inquest was held over the body by Justice of the Peace L. N. Graham and Sheriff L. P. Williams, of Hockley county. One shot took effect in Wright's back, another in his chest and the third in his arm.

Wright is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Wright of Razia, Oklahoma and his sister, Mrs. Kitchen. His body is to be sent to Razia for burial.

Special Services For Ham Revival

Evangelist To Preach To Men Only This Afternoon On Seventh Commandment; Start Final Week

With the services today at the union tabernacle, Rev. M. F. Ham will launch into the fourth and final week of the city-wide revival in this city at Texas Avenue and Sixteenth street, in which he will speak to men only.

The usual services will be held at all of the churches during the morning hours and this afternoon at 3 o'clock the evangelist will preach to men on "The Seventh Commandment — Adultery." The night subject will be "God's Last Call". At the same hour in the evening the women of the city will gather at the First Christian church for a program to be held under the direction of local church leaders.

Plan Special Services

The final week of the campaign is to be characterized by a number of special delegations for night services and features are planned throughout the week. There will be three services Monday. At 9 o'clock Monday morning Rev. Ham will deliver his regular Bible lecture. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon he will speak to women only on the subject of "Love, Courtship, Marriage, Home, Family, Heaven." The night session also will be for women only and will be a repetition of Sunday night's message. The young ladies of the high school will attend afternoon's meeting in a body while local business concerns have been asked to allow women employes to attend.

On Tuesday night the entire high school will attend in a body, together with students of Draughon's Business college, for a special young peoples night.

Civic Clubs To Be Honored

Thursday night members of local civic clubs will be special guests and will attend as a delegation. On other nights various elements of the business and industrial life of Lubbock will be represented.

Saturday night a large crowd braved the cold and damp weather and heard Rev. Ham speak on "The Mystery of the Silence of Heaven." At the conclusion of the service a number of conversions were recorded.

It had been announced that no service would be held Saturday morning and despite this fact some 200 people gathered at the tabernacle. Rev. Ham was sent for and spoke to the gathering. Saturday afternoon's services were held in the district court room because of the inclement weather and a crowded room heard the message "The Millenium."

Troubles Started

After having served in public office for many years without accusation of wrong-doing, Robison's troubles began last January, when he refused to postpone sales of mineral rights in University of Texas lands, after he had been importuned to do so by the board of regents, Governor Moody and the attorney general's department.

Rains

day afternoon stated that Shallowater had been almost completely wiped out as the result of a cyclone. These reports were unconfirmed and telephonic advices to the Avalanche-Journal last night from Shallowater denied that such destruction was true.

Reports from the union bus terminal stated that territory on the run from Lamesa to Lubbock received the heaviest downfall seen in year. A bridge was washed out four miles south of Woodrow and travel over the highway was delayed several hours.

Roads Heavy

Roads to Post and below were exceedingly heavy. A large draw the other side of Post was said to be running water higher than residents had ever seen it. Bus travel from Lubbock to Amarillo was delayed several hours as machines were unable to make passage.

At one time yesterday afternoon late 12 automobiles were reported stuck in a ditch between this city and Hurlwood where a veritable waterspout was experienced.

Not only was tourist and industrial traffic halted but telephone and telegraph wires were reported damaged and connection severed with several points.

Reports Listed

Special telephone and telegraphic reports to the Avalanche-Journal last night follow:

LOCKNEY—Four inches of rain fell here in two hours today, probably one of the heaviest rains in the history of the county. Lands prepared for wheat are inundated and the lakes are rapidly filling. Farmers are rejoicing as the rain will not damage growing crops and the moisture received at this time will insure a good wheat planting season. Heavy overhanging clouds promise additional rainfall.

BROWNFIELD—Rains estimated at as much as one inch in the vicinity of Brownfield and as much as two inches in other portions of this county, are being received this afternoon and are the first general rains since May, although showers have fallen during that period over a considerable portion of the territory. Considerable hail accompanying the rain and much damage resulted. Late crops are being benefitted by rain but cotton condition will not be improved.

FLOYDADA—Seven-tenths of an inch rain fell here Saturday afternoon bringing total precipitation this week to two inches. Rain began falling slow at noon and continued through the evening with weather still threatening.

SLATON—More than one inch of rain fell here late Saturday, breaking a drouth that has been continuous since early June with the exception of light local rains in certain areas. Rain was still falling at a late hour. Some hail damage was reported a few miles west of Slaton, but its extent had not been determined here at nightfall. The moisture will benefit cotton and feed crops that were not too badly burned by the dry weather, it is believed. Pastures will also be benefitted. The precipitation was apparently general over this territory.

IDALOU—Three inches of rain fell here this afternoon, while to the north toward Petersburg almost a waterspout was seen.

Students Report For Examination

Lubbock students planning on entering Texas Technological college in the fall term should report to the Lubbock sanitarium sometime this week for physical examination E. L. Dohoney, registrar of the college announced yesterday. This plan will eliminate congestion in physical examination work at the opening of the college week after next.

Mr. Dohoney also stated that all 1929 graduates of Lubbock high school should get their credits into the registrar's office this week in order to get their entrance cards filled out earlier than the other students.

Registration of first year students will be held on September 23 while upper classmen will be registered on September 24 and 25.

WICHITA, Kas., Sept. 7. (AP)—Delayed by unfavorable weather, pilots of the "City of Baltimore," cross country Shuttle endurance plane, late today announced they probably would take off at 1 a. m. Sunday morning.

Plane Found

around and zoomed down to within a thousand feet.

There the appalling sight of twisted, burned metal, and a circle of burned trees surrounding it was revealed to Lieutenant Rice, his copilot and the four passengers.

Thrice did Lieut. Rice circle the tragic scene. It is one of the most rugged sections of the wild west. Not only were there no landing possibilities in the vicinity, but there were no roads. Passage by horse appeared impossible. No sign of any living thing was seen near the wreckage.

The trained, experienced eyes of Lieutenant Rice, a world war flier, instantly revealed the tragedy. Knowing the plane had circled Grants, New Mexico, Tuesday just about noon, and this scene being to the northeast, it was apparent that pilot J. B. Stowe of the City of San Francisco was racing back toward Albuquerque to avoid the storms which held other air transports to the ground on the fatal day.

There were one woman and seven men aboard the City of San Francisco. It left Albuquerque on Tuesday morning, in face of adverse weather, hoping to get through to Los Angeles that afternoon.

The passengers aboard were:

Mrs. Corina Raymond, wife of George B. Raymond, of Glendale, Calif. A clerk of the Trans-Continental Air Transport company, owners of the City of San Francisco.

Amasa B. McGaffey, wealthy lumberman of Albuquerque.

William Livermore, shipping man of Boston.

M. M. Campbell, of Cincinnati, paper concern sales manager.

William Henry Beers, New York, golf Magazine editor.

Members of the crew were:

J. B. Stone, chief pilot of Clovis, New Mexico.

Edwin A. Dietel, copilot of New Braunfels, Texas.

C. F. Canfill, New York, courier.

Greatest Hunt Staged

When the disappearance of the plane became known Tuesday one of the greatest hunts in the history of the wild west, was the most spectacular air search ever conducted, got under way.

Scores of army planes, navy, marine corps and civilian planes sailed through the cloudy and storm beset skies of the wildest section of the continental United States.

Oil Well

cated that the well will be good for at least a 200-barrel producer, oil men say, and will open a formidable field of production in commercial quantities.

Leasing Slow

Since the well is in the midst of a 10,000-acre lease of the Marland company, there has been little of leasing activities, except in sections far separated from the test location. Lease prices in bordering tracts have not yet reached big figures.

Real estate men and owners of tracts of land in Cochran county were active in Lubbock Saturday. Blue prints and oil maps were on every desk, as land dealers here were deluged with inquiries by person, telephone and telegraph.

Scouts Arrive

Scouts and officials of practically every major company have arrived in Lubbock to watch developments.

Meanwhile, Cochran county is thumbing its vest in anticipation of wealth. Lehman, Morton, White Face and Bledsoe, small towns which have come into existence within recent years through colonization of ranch lands, are assuming hopeful aspects. All are reaching out for benefits of the new offering.

J. P. Posey and Ed Alexander, both of Lubbock, are in Lehman, five miles northeast of the well, in charge of developing the townsite, owned by the Santa Fe railway company. Sales are active in the potential oil town, according to reports received late Saturday. Improvements at Lehman are a $50,000 school building, depot and railway facilities, one general store (owned by Robert Cruite,) and several dwellings. Population of the town is scarcely 50. Alvin O'Pry is postmaster. Lehman is the geographical center of the county.

Morton County Seat

Morton, an inland town 12 miles north of the well, is the county seat and has a population of about 400. A $50,000 high school, $50,000 ward school building, $160,000 court house, modern hotel, three general mercantile stores, one drug store and four retail oil stations are improvements.

Bledsoe is 12 miles northwest of the test, and has a population of about 200. In the town are a $100,000 school building, modern electric ice plant, three mercantile stores, one drug store, two wholesale and four retail oil stations, depot and railroad facilities, and three small hotels.

White Face, located on the east line of the county, has a population of about 40. There are two general mercantile stores, one retail oil station, modern brick hotel, $50,000 building, and a depot.

Blesoe, White Face and Lehman are served by a branch rail line of the Santa Fe leading out of Lubbock.

Storage facilities will be entirely arranged for before the well will be drilled in, it was reported from the test yesterday.

Boles Well Rumor Given Denial

A rumor that plans had been made for resumption of drilling on the Boles No. 1 test, located seven miles southeast of Lubbock, was denied last night by George M. Boles, owner of the land on which the test was located.

The rumor was circulated in this city Saturday.

"It is not improbable that drilling will be resumed," said Mr. Boles, but at present no plans have been formulated.

The test was abandoned about five weeks ago, when a big supply of tools fell in the hole, followed by unsuccessful efforts to clean out for re-drilling.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our great appreciation for the many acts of kindness shown us during the anxious hours of Alvin's illness and his death, also we are thankful for the many beautiful flowers and the sympathy they brought. Especially are we grateful to the nurses at the West Texas Hospital who were so untiring. May God in His wisdom see fit to give each and every one of you a special blessing.

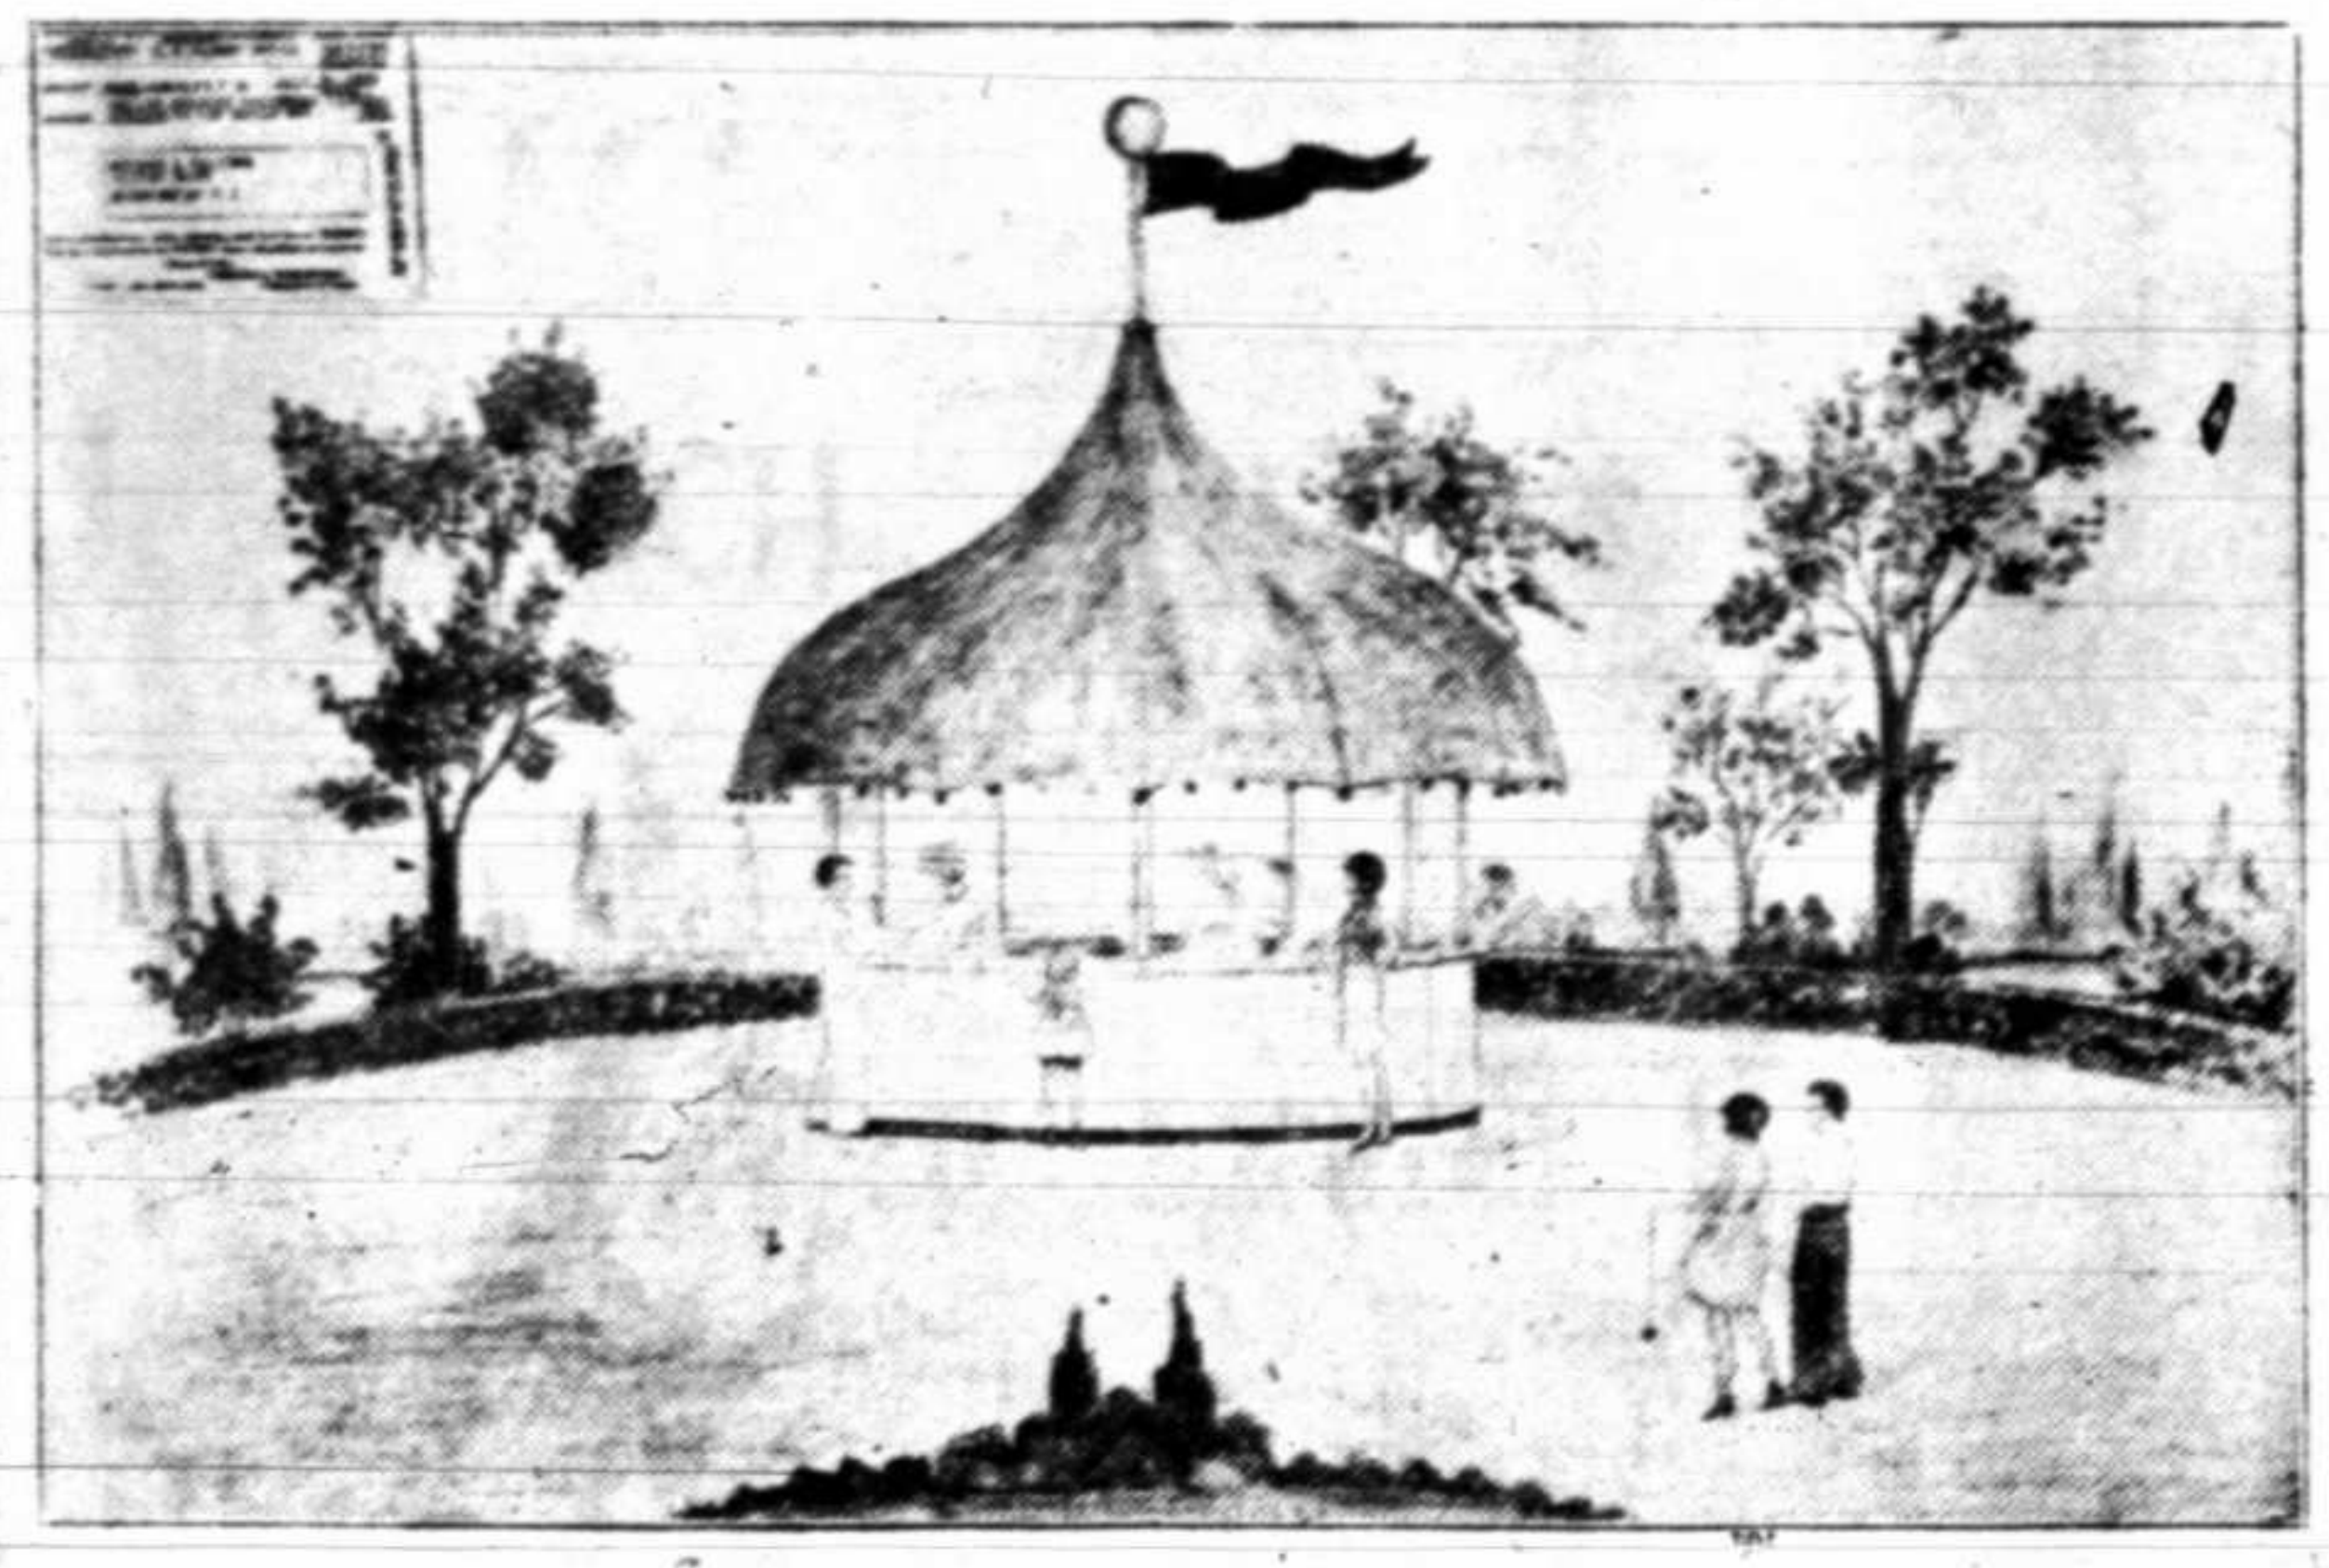
Lubbock Men Invent 'Revolvo-Top' And Will Market Their Product From City



THE 'REVOLVO-TOP'

CHARLES T. RICE

CHARLES E. CHILDS

Future Is Seen For New Invention Of Local Men

Planning the manufacture of equipment parts in Lubbock, Charles T. Rice and Charles E. Childs, both of this city, have designed a new idea in outdoor advertising, titled "Revolvo-Top," for which patent application has been filed.

"The purpose of the revolving top idea," said Mr. Childs, "is to lower expenses of persons operating small suburban businesses. The roof, which revolves, provides a plurality of faces for advertising. The top is lighted at night by reflectors mounted on a central mast and a chain of lights operated by a flash system surrounding the edge of the eave converts the entire roof into electric signs."

Speed Is Controlled

The roof of each building will be so constructed that it can be revolved at any desired speed.

One of these buildings is now being constructed in the 1900 block on 19th street. T. E. Mitchell and Mrs. W. A. Neve have purchased the county rights and plan to have a business at the location on 19th street.

Mrs. L. G. H. Williams is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Oscar H. Cleveland, in Memphis, Tenn. Mr. Cleveland is Mrs. Williams' brother.

Fulfillment Will Be Attempted Of British Mandate

Arthur Henderson, Foreign Minister, Pledges His Country's Suport As Aid In Palestine Problem

GENEVA, Sept. 7. (AP)—Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary today pledged his country's efforts to the fulfillment of its mandate over Palestine and the restoration and maintenance of peace in the territory which has been torn by racial and religious strife during the last two weeks.

Henderson made his statement before the council of the League, which devoted a full hour to discussion of the Palestine situation.

British Determined

The British foreign secretary's words left no doubt in the minds of the members of the council of British determination to control the situation. He said Great Britain had no intention of abandoning the mandate for Palestine. One of the basic principles of British policy in the country is the famous Balfour declaration of 1917, in which the venerable statesman, who was then foreign secretary, called for the establishment of a national home of Jews in Palestine.

Henderson announced an impartial inquiry would be made into the Palestine troubles but explained that this inquiry would not be permitted to change what he called Great Britain's major policy in connection with Palestine. This was interpreted by his hearers as saying that whatever is the result of the inquiry, Great Britain would not be led to abandon the mandate.

Moody May Have Reappoint Board

AUSTIN, Sept. 7. (AP)—Governor Moody may have to reappoint the nine members of the new board of education created by the 41st legislature.

Assistant Attorney General Jack Blalock today held that the first law creating the new board was void because the caption was faulty in that it did not cover that part of the bill providing for the board to take over the duties of he textbook commission.

He held that the law passed at the second called session of the legislature, correcting the first law will not become effective until October 2, and that the present board of education composed of the governor, attorney general and secretary of state, will continue to function until then.

The governor had appointed the new board before either of the bills became effective, it was pointed out.

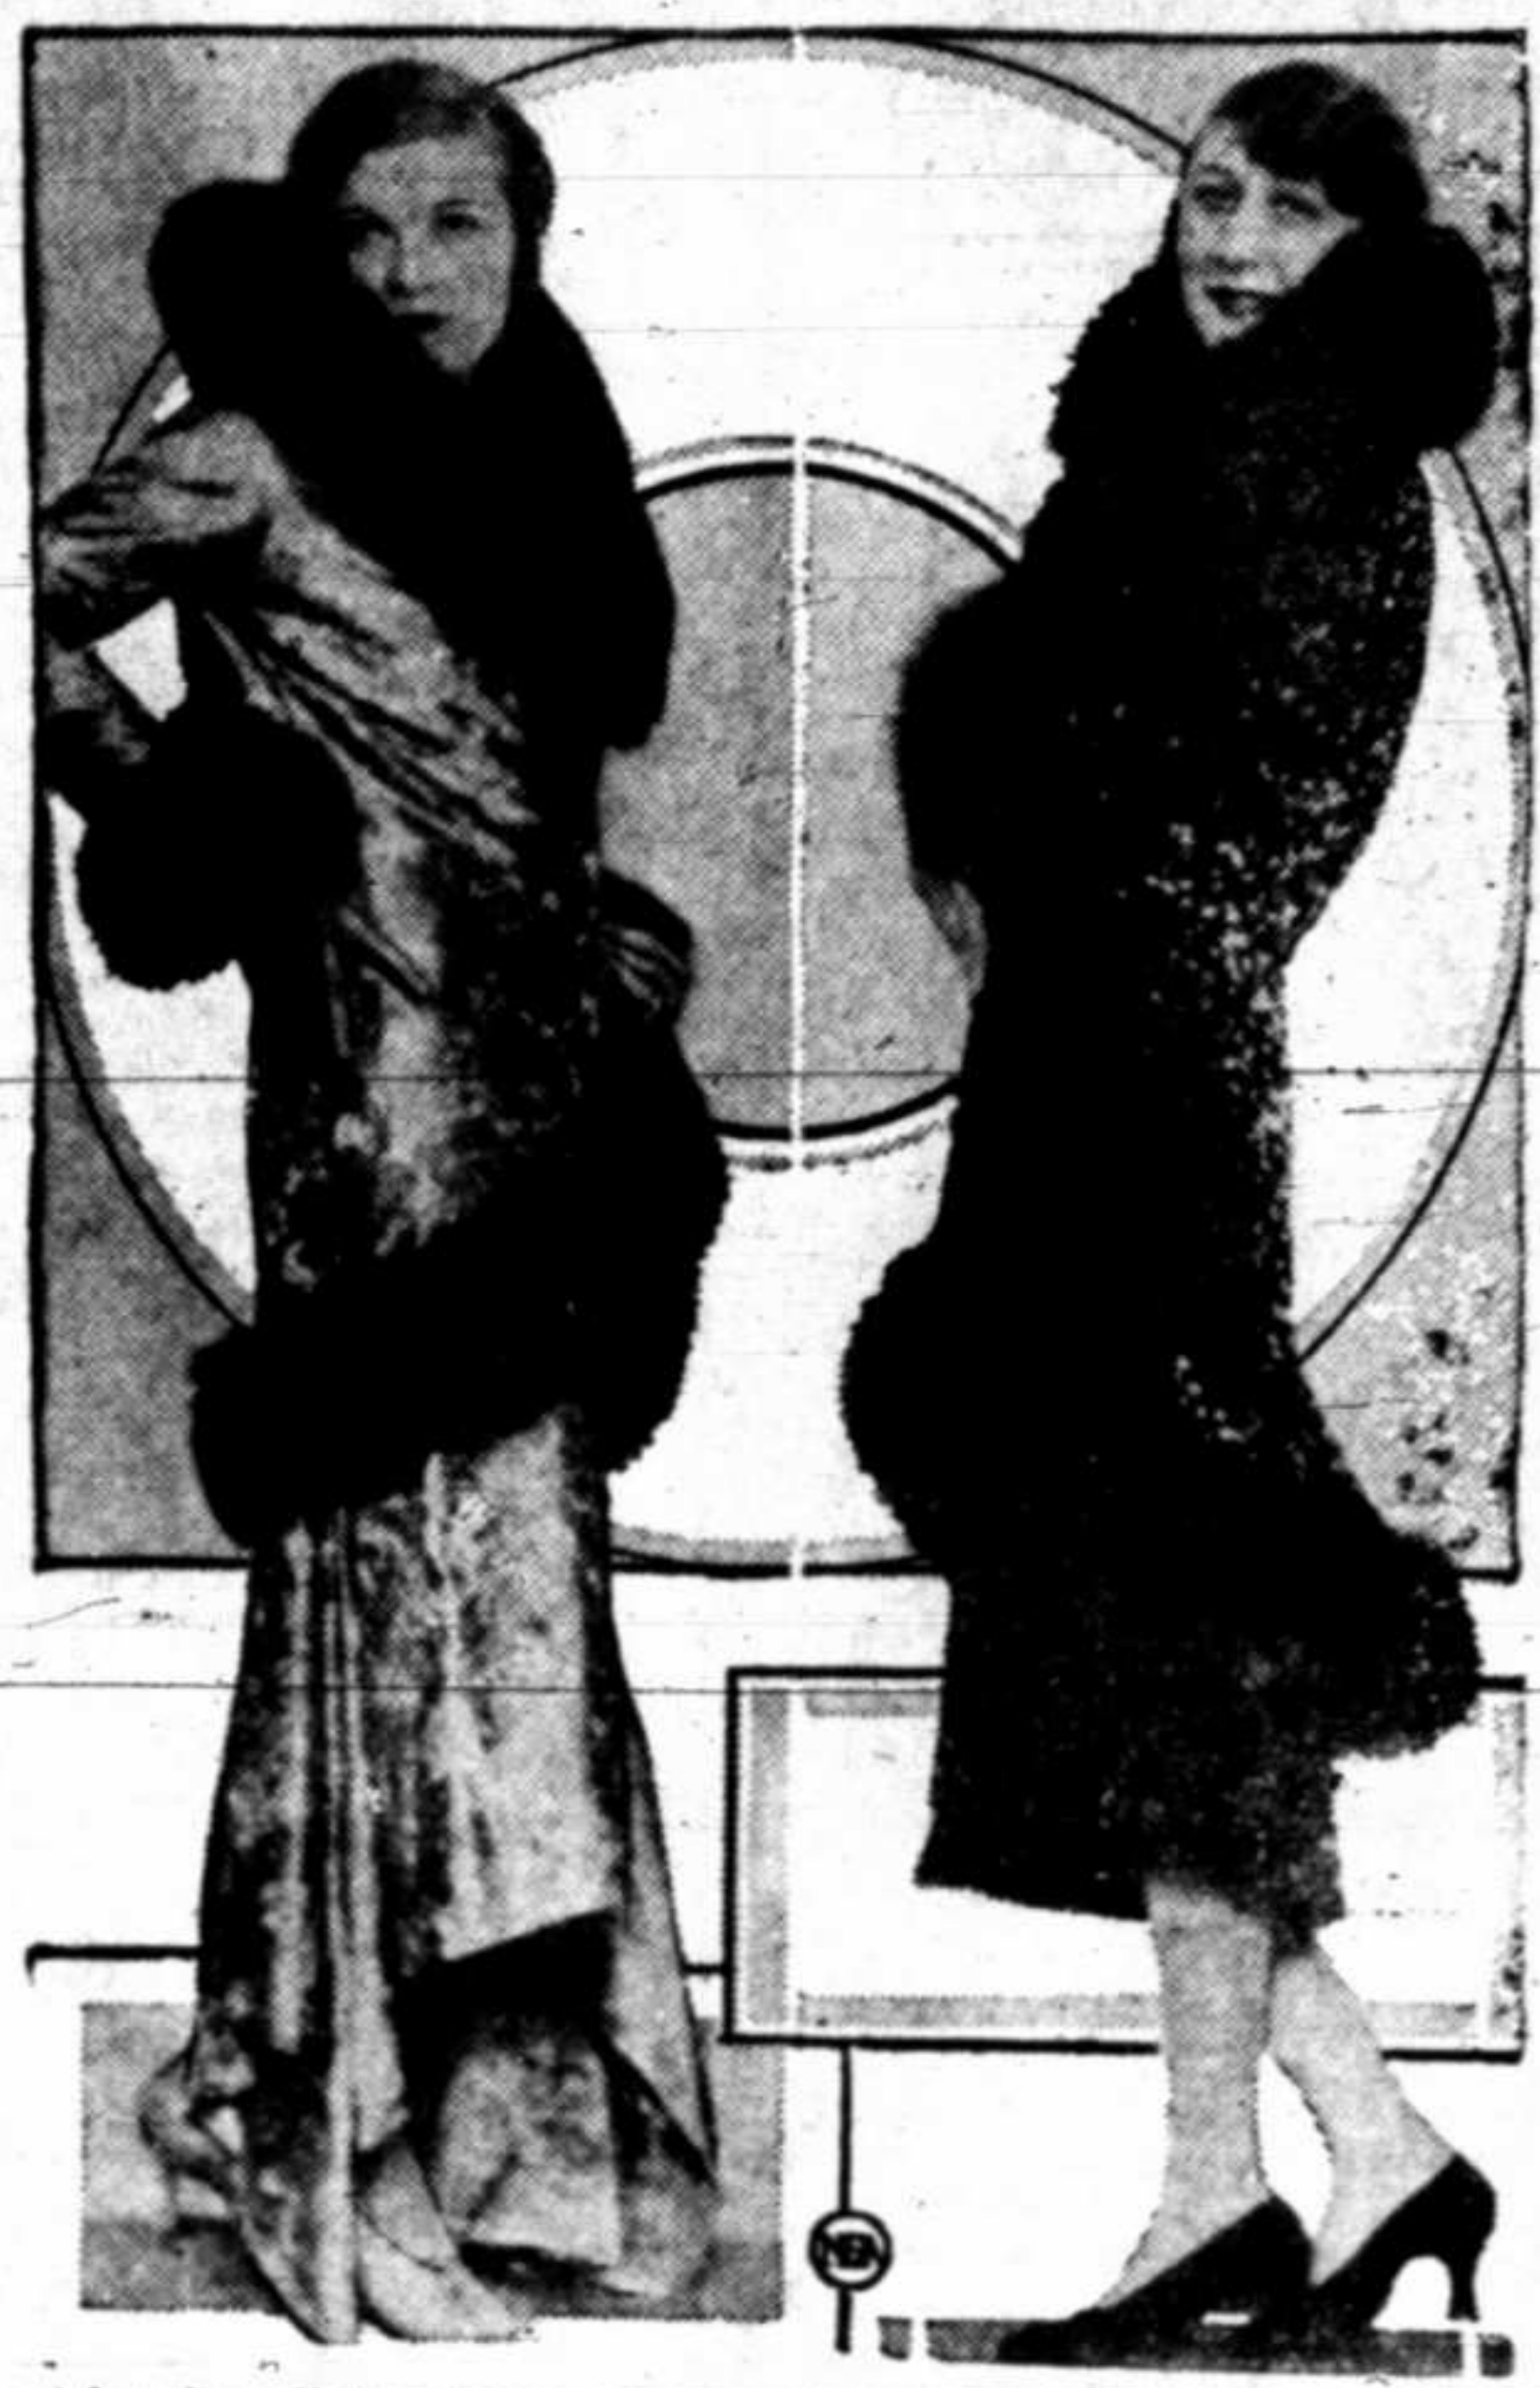
Dame Fashion Shortens Fall Coats



Fur trimming distinguishes new evening coats from Paris. A beautiful Patou evening ensemble (left) which strikes a very new note is made of faille printed in tones of pink and green; the short coat is heavily outlined in black fox fur. An informal evening ensemble (right) is made of printed velvet, green on a black background. The coat shows the new train effect and is bordered with fur to accentuate the movement.

BY JEAN PATOU

Written for NEA Service

PARIS, Sept. 7.—Every season's fashions are made up of contradictions, however paradoxical this may sound. I have long since come to the conclusion that it was impossible accurately to define any mode by simply pointing out one particular style.

That every contradictory style can still remain in perfect harmony is a fact that appertains to fashions, just as ordinary characteristics can make up a charming personality. This is particularly true of the feminine character and fashions are but a reflection of its vagaries.

In the world of fashions, when a feature so truly representative of the general mode as a uniform lengthening of the skirts is seen, you will find another feature in direct contradiction. This is personified by a short coat or wrap, the brevity of which is even more accentuated by the addition of a heavy fur trimming, just as the train effect on some of the evening gowns is outlined by fur.

Lace and Velvet Favored

These new ideas will of course be seen in evening clothes more than in clothes designed for street wear, as it is only in the former that they first can be expressed successfully. This season the most compelling "ensembles" for the evening are certainly those made of lame and velvet. Lame no longer figures alone in the realm of dazzling, sumptuous fabrics. Serious rivals are plain and printed velvets and the new faille silks. The value of a sumptuously-colored velvet as a medium for an evening gown is appreciated by the discerning woman but she is also fascinated by printed velvets.

Where printed effects are concerned, I have invariably noticed how the eye becomes tired of floral designs at the end of every summer season. Winter designs are much more sombre of hue as well as motif — small leaves or fantastic figures take the place of multi-colored flowers. There are certain gowns, through, in which the sparkling, colorful note is required without being obliged to make use of brilliant embroidery or shiny fabrics such as broches. For such gowns I am in favor of utilizing rather stiff materials like faille with a multi-colored floral pattern.

A Different Fabric

A flowered winter evening dress differs totally from its summer prototype. The difference lies in the fabric itself, not the pattern. For the summer gown some gossamer fabric like chiffon is used and the very fullness of the style prevents the design from standing out distinctly. In a flowered faille the pattern stands out because of the stiffness of the fabric and because of the more conventional cut of the gown. An imperceptible difference to the undiscerning eye, perhaps, but a very important one to the dress creator.

So far as the winter evening coat is concerned, whatever fabric employed, there will be only two correct lengths —the very short and the very long. Both, in their way, accentuate the new, long lines of the gown. An intermediary length would only prove unbecoming to the figure.

Five Meetings To Be Conducted For Societies In City

Sorosis New Era, Lu-Beta Delphian, What-To-Read, Twentieth Century Clubs Meet This Week

THIS WEEK is to mark the beginning of club activities — an engagement which lasts for nine months of the year for several hundred women of Lubbock, and an occasion for study and more informal activities during the three summer months during which regular meetings are conducted.

The study clubs of Lubbock offer to women an opportunity for cultural development and for social contacts which develop some of the firmest friendships among the feminine half of the city.

Club work offers a training in public service for women of the city and provides a systematic outlet for energies directed toward social service, civic and other worthwhile tendencies of the women here.

Influence Is Felt

Social engagements and other affairs of women during the next nine months will be determined to a large extent by the study club activities here.

Tuesday is to be a day of first meetings.

Sorosis club members are to have an initial meeting in the home of Mrs. R. T. Campbell, and Mrs. C. B. Powell, who is chairman of the calendar committee, is to introduce the year's study of Mexico with a historical and descriptive map study.

On this same afternoon there is to be a meeting of the Twentieth Century club and the greeting from the president, Mrs. J. S. Johnson, is to be the program feature. A general survey of the course will be given at the meeting on September 24 by W. B. Gates, member of the Technological college faculty, who is lecturing to the club this winter.

While meetings of the Athenaeum society fall regularly on the second and fourth Tuesday afternoons of each month, the initial program for this society will not be given until September 17 this year in order that women connected with the Technological college, who have memberships in the society, may be back from their vacations and attend.

Lu-Beta Delphian chapter members are meeting on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. J. H. Hankins, 2401 Broadway, and Mrs. R. D. Moxley is to be leader of a program on "Dramatic Art and the Character of Greek Drama." Regular meetings of the society during the winter will be in the Tech administration building. A luncheon is to be served in two weeks.

The newly formed Alpha Delta chapter of the National What to Read club is meeting for its initial program session on Tuesday evening at 7:45 o'clock in the office of Mrs. C. J. Atchison.

Flowers that bloom in Lubbock's gardens this fall need not blush unseen for their fragrance may permeate halls of the women's building at the Panhandle-South Plains fair and they may be viewed by the thousands who are expected to throng the grounds during the annual exhibition.

The flower show at the fair has been growing in favor during the last few years and, excepting unusual weather conditions, it is expected to compare favorably with the best exhibition of the past this year.

Mrs. W. O. Stevens is chairman of this division again this fall and has been instrumental in making some changes in the premium lists.

To Replinish Bouquets.

An exhibit which has grown unsightly is to be removed at any time by the superintendent and prize winners on cut flowers are requested to replenish exhibits as needed, according to the regulations in this department.

Of the many social affairs which have been given over the South Plains during the past week perhaps the loveliest have been those given for young people who will leave for school soon.

One of the leading weddings was that of Miss Lucille Putnam of Plainview to Orrin Auld, of Houston, on last Sunday.

On Monday, September 2 at the home of Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Munger in Lubbock, Miss Kate Cleveland, of Abernathy, became the bride of Dan I. Cummings, of Slaton, with Rev. Munger officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and her maid of honor was her sister, Miss Elizabeth Putnam.

Charles Pierce, of Dallas, was best man.

Immediately following the ceremony the couple left for a tour through the Southern states and will be at home in Houston.

Mrs. Auld has been a member of the high school faculty of Plainview schools for the past three years and is a graduate of the University of Texas.

Mr. Auld is a graduate of Wayland college and took a degree in journalism from Missouri university where he was a member of Alpha Delta Sigma, journalistic fraternity. He is at present a member of the Brennan, Brown & Auld advertising firm, of Houston and Dallas.

Margaret Kirmse Turns From Harp To Sculpturing

By NEA Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Margaret Kirmse came to this country from England to be a harpist.

"But playing the harp in a church choir did not fulfill my ambitious dreams," she said. "It paid for bread, if I didn't eat too much, but it provided me with no butter. I was forced to have a side line."

The side line was art. She had taken a course at the School for Animal Painting in London, because since her earliest childhood she had taxed her teacher's patience by drawing processions of dogs all over the margins of her copy books.

Followed Two Arts

So she played the harp on Sundays, and drew dogs during the week. Finally orders began to be fairly plentiful and today Miss Kirmse is renowned as an etcher of dogs, and has recently turned to sculpture, and bronze casts of her Scotch terriers are becoming plentiful. The harp career has been abandoned.

"I had been doing portraits of dogs for years, when it occurred to me that no matter how striking a likeness may be obtained from a fixed viewpoint, there are many different points of interest that might be discovered about the same subject studied from different angles," she went on.

So she began to raise her own models.

"Now," she laughed, "I have fifteen Scotch terrier pups besides an airdale, an Irish terrier and a field spaniel. Scotties are such thoughtful puppies, so unswerving in their devotion, so philosophical whatever the wind or weather. They seldom whimper, neither are they unduly exuberant. They keep to the even tenor of their ways, and are absolutely ideal models — as well as dear friends. And they are invaluable in my work."

A Model Romping Ground

The models have a fine old country estate in which to romp. Miss Kirmse, who is Mrs. George W. Cole in private life, and her husband have turned an old tobacco farm into an estate that anyone could be proud of. Orchard, garden, house, and kennels, everything is the result of their mutual painstaking effort.

Miss Kirmse has specialized in studies of dogs because she has been outstandingly successful with them from the start.

"Even as a child, the pups I drew were pups," she said. "No one ever took them for anything else. And so long as there is so much fascination about them, I don't think I shall change my subject. It'll always be with me, love me, love my dog."

The Woman's Day

By Allene Sumner

Allene Sumner

Courting corner for young people, right inside the churches, are advocated by the Rev. Dr. John Thompson, pastor of the Chirago Temple. He okayed some conclusions reached at the recent convention of the International Youth Disciples of Christ to the effect that hand holding and demonstrations of affection, though utterly disapproved by their elders, were not in the class of evil at all.

"They're right," said he. "Nothing is more harmful or unjust than to attribute wicked thoughts to potential lovers who are naturally and wholesomely expressing themselves. Every church should have dim-lighted parlors for this very thing."

"TOO HANDSOME"

Because she claimed her husband was "too handsome," Mrs. Jules Ascher asked Supreme Court Justice Byrne of Brooklyn, N. Y., for a divorce. She said that none of the women could leave her "regular movie sheik" alone and that he was too weak to resist.

How often you hear a woman married to a handsome man advise some other woman never to marry a handsome man—if she wants to be happy. And yet, what virtue is there in being homely? Obviously what Mrs. Ascher resented about her husband was not his handsome features, but what she termed his weakness.

It is easier for a handsome man to attract woman than a homely one—though many of the world's most famous heartbreakers have been positively ugly — not necessarily because of his looks, but because his beautiful features enable him to get by with so many unpleasanta traits of character that would be quite obvious in a less personable man.

From the woman's angle of holding her man, there's undoubtedly much more generalship in keeping a man devoted who is obviously attractive in appearance than one that nobody notices.

WOMEN DO SMOKE

Recently I saw a young girl, with her bobbed hair outside of an upstairs window, puffing away at a cigaret, being very careful to blow the smoke outside. No Sherlock Holmes was needed to know that she was having a forbidden fag.

That very afternoon I came across this paragraph in "Ebb and Flow" by Frances, Countess of Warwick:

"I knew the kaiser's sister well, Princess Charlotte of Saxe Meiningen. How old-fashioned it sounds, but she was one of the first women I ever knew who smoked cigarets and she did this constantly. I found her once at Buckingham Palace, sitting in her bedroom, smoking at an open window, and letting the smoke disappear into the open in case the queen should find out. Queen Victoria had absolutely forbidden smoking in any part of the palace and to have found a lady smoking in her bedroom, would doubtless have been horrifying."

History does repeat itself — and some girls will be smokers.

NEW-OLD WORDS

Each generation has its own vernacular, but it is the result of a rotary process rather than new material. Today, the youngsters don't "paint the town red," they "make whoopee." Though that sounds very modern, it is as old as Shakespeare, even in that sense, says Dr. Frank Vizitelly, word expert.

Another descriptive modern expression was also in the Elizabethan's vocabulary — "necking." However, in those days it was used in connection with executioners and professional stranglers.

Sister Edwards and Sister Bernards of St. Agnes Catholic Academy at Houston, spent Friday in Lubbock as the guests of Mrs. H. P. Bradley. They were en route home from Los Angeles where they have been visiting. Sister Edwards and Sister Bernards are former convent classmates of Mrs. Bradley's.

CHAPTER I

The boxes that came for Helen Page always caused excitement at Miss Spann's school for girls.

Miss Spann's girls were smart and up-to-date and quite often their own clothes bore the label of a Fifth avenue shop. But few of them possessed even a single garment with a Paris label in it.

All the clothes that came for Helen were Paris originals. Helen did not know, so she could not explain, that her guardian had them brought over by a friend who made frequent trips abroad—a friend he had never allowed Helen to meet.

As a matter of fact she had met none of his friends. But this friend had perfect taste and Helen's clothes were the envy of her school mates.

Just now they were engaged—all who could crowd into her room—in helping her open the two large packages that had come that afternoon.

Helen was less interested in the new things than in the coming visit of her guardian himself. She was thrilling happily to the thought of it. For Leonard Brent was more to Helen than just a guardian in the common sense of the word. She had given him the adoration of an untouched heart, without question of the manner in which he might guard the gift.

Of his guardianship of herself Helen had no complaint. It was lonely sometimes when the other girls, all but one or two, were away at home for holidays and the summer vacation, but there was always Leno's next visit to look forward to.

"Oh, Helen, just look at this dinner dress!" one of the girls cried, holding up a periwinkle blue chiffon creation. "Don't you love it?"

Helen took it and rushed over to the mirror in the closet door. "I'll wear it tonight," she exclaimed, holding it up before her, judging its lines.

"You ought to take that V out of the back," one of the girls remarked as Helen held the dress off and studied it.

Helen shook her head. "Leno wouldn't like it," she said.

"Don't you ever get tired of living up to his freak ideas?" someone asked her. "It must be a strain."

Helen smiled. She had been through this before. That her guardian was strict and old fashioned about her rearing and education everyone knew. But Helen delighted in pleasing him and so did not mind having her modernism limited in a measure.

"Of course Helen can get away with the role of Miss Simplicity because she's descended from Helen of Troy," another girl put in sarcastically. "But I'll bet old guardian could go blow a whale if she needed a beauty treatment."

The flush on Helen's cheek belied the words. Someone laughed.

"That old guy's a whole course of beauty treatments in himself!" the girl who had laughed declared. "Watch out, Helen, [illegible]. No facial could do so much for her."

Helen whirled upon the speaker. "Old guy!" she repeated belligerently. "Leno isn't old. Not more than 35 anyway."

"Absolutely decrepit," the other girl returned.

"Don't be silly, Agatha," she was admonished by still another girl. "Mr. Brent is the most distinguished looking man who comes here."

"The most distinguished man in New York, I'd say," put in the girl who had suggested making the dinner dress more [illegible]. "When Helen and I went down to town last Saturday we saw him at the Ritz."

"At the Ritz! Shallimar Morris, you never had enough money to lunch at the Ritz!"

"Why be a goose?" Shallimar retorted undisturbed. "Of course not. We went there to see what's being worn. Mr. Brent came in . . ."

"Did he take you to lunch?"

"He was with a date," Shallimar explained patiently.

All the girls were interested, for Helen's guardian was a topic of unfailing interest in their conversations.

"Bet she was dressed like Queen Mary and had the manners of a Victorian Duchess."

"Not at all," Shallimar hastened to assure them. Then she turned to Helen. "Shall I describe her?" she asked.

Helen shrugged. "What's the use?" she said. "Just because Leno thinks there isn't anything funny about teaching a girl to be a lady they imagine he's a dodo."

"Oh, don't be a meany, Helen. Go on, Shallie."

"Well, I just wish you'd seen her for yourselves," Shallimar began uncertainly. "She was smart as could be and not a bit stiff."

"Did he introduce you?"

"No . . ." Shallimar's glance sought Helen's. The latter hastily turned away. "No, we decided he wouldn't have any use for a couple of school girls just then," Shallimar went on, flushing a trifle under her suntan powder.

"You don't mean to say you passed up a chance to meet one of Leno's lady friends!"

Helen spoke up sharply. "You mustn't call him Leno just because I do," she said.

The girls laughed. "Oh, we wouldn't think of getting familiar to his face, if that's worrying you," one of them said. "We wouldn't want him to think we aren't proper companions for you. He might take you away from us and put you in a more fashionable school."

"Yes, you know I've wondered, Helen, how he happened to place you here at Spann's," the girl Agatha [illegible] with youthful frankness. "The Ritz and French originals! He could do better by you in the way of schools. If my dad could afford it I'd be at [illegible]. It's exclusive. All the girls come from six-car families at the very least."

"I'm quite happy here," Helen declared. "And now will you all get out please? I want to try on some of these things and dress for dinner."

"I wonder you don't put Shallimar out too," one among them grumbled as they departed. "She has eyes the same as we have, Miss Prim."

Helen laughed. She could afford to be good natured. Tonight she would dine with Leno at the inn—and dance with him.

Shallimar helped to clear the beds of boxes and tissue paper. She was Helen's room mate and quite used to removing things to make sitting room.

But on this occasion she wore a slight frown. Not that she minded having her portion of the room overrun with Helen's belongings. She was thinking of Helen herself, wondering if she wasn't a bit of a fool to fall so hard for her guardian. There was that woman they had seen him with in town, for instance. She certainly looked as though she knew her way about, not at all the sort of person that Mr. Brent seemed bent on making of Helen. Shallimar didn't think it was fair.

And then there was the way Helen had acted on that occasion. Afraid to intrude, Shallimar thought. And Helen hadn't explained why she had drawn back abruptly as he passed with his unknown companion. But Shallimar knew she was aware of the queerness of her act for since the trifling episode Helen had been reluctant to speak of it.

Helen observed the frown on Shallimar's darkly beautiful features and a bit of her elation over the news that Brent was coming vanished. She hated to be a mystery to her room mate. Shallimar had confided her intimate affairs unstintedly and Helen felt guilty over withholding her own secrets.

Secrets! With her life itself just one long secret how could she confide anything? The thought had troubled her through many wakeful hours.

But she could see that Shallimar was seriously disapproving of her now. Often the dark granddaughter of a Spanish dancer had warned her that she would lose her individuality if she tried to remake herself in an outmoded mold.

Impulsively she decided to explain her reason for not making her presence in the Ritz known to her guardian. She put down the stocking box in which she was putting away her new hosiery and came over to sit on Shallimar's bed.

"You think I have the makeup of a mouse, don't you, or that I believe children should be neither seen nor heard?" she began half teasingly. But under the light tone she adopted there was a hint of appeal for tolerance from her friend.

"Oh, if you want to efface yourself that's your business," Shallimar answered, "provided you really want to."

Helen spoke softly. "I do, when Leno wishes it," she admitted.

Shallimar gave her a straight, quick look that Helen found made her uncomfortable.

"Yes," she went on, reading Shallimar's thought. "I'd do anything for him."

"Are you jealous of him?"

Helen started and reddened. "Of course not," she said quickly.

Shallimar laughed. "You don't mind his being with a knockout like that woman we saw and yet you're so crazy about him that you have to tingle with delight over obeying his slightest wish. Something's wrong with the picture, Helen. But tell me, has he forbidden you to speak to him in public?" She ended tauntingly but Helen was invulnerable to the jibs. Delicate sarcasms, and broad, were favorite weapons of the girls at verbal grips with each other.

"That's what I want to tell you about, Shallie dear," she said quietly and Shallimar was instantly disarmed. She opened her eyes a little wider and then narrowed them in anticipation. Was Helen actually going to open up?

"There's a reason, but I don't know what it is, why Leno wants me to grow up to be what he calls a lady. Please don't laugh. You know there is a difference between girls who take refinement and good form seriously and those who don't."

"What if there is?" Shallimar interjected impatiently. "Is that any reason why you have to give up even a dab of rouge along with cigarets?"

A tender smile wreathed Helen's lips before she answered. "Maybe Leno does carry it a bit far," she agreed, "but what I wanted to tell you was that he has never arranged for me to meet any of his friends or acquaintances and I know he wouldn't want it to happen by accident."

Shallimar scoffed. "Afraid they will contaminate you probably. But that's going to be pleasant for you when you leave school, isn't it? Who are you going to know? What are you going to do? He won't be able to create a set of Priscillas and Prudences just for you to associate with."

"He says we're going to travel," Helen explained.

"And show the world one American girl who is natural and unspoiled, I bet. So that is what you are being groomed for."

"I don't know, Shallie. Maybe it's just that Leno believes girls ought to be natural and unspoiled."

Shallimar laughed again. "After the lady we saw him with you can't pretend that he prefers unspoiled girls for himself."

Helen flushed darkly red. Shallimar had found the chink in her armor, either by accident or design. This woman they spoke of was not the first sophisticated, modish female that Helen had seen in Leonard Brent's company.

Once on paying him an unexpected visit she had found him entertaining a charming friend whom he had hurriedly sent away—afterward scolding Helen for her surprise.

And Helen had not been blind to the fact that his choice of friends among the gentler sex was quite decidedly for the women of today. Why, then, did he want her to be so different?

Helen's heart sank anew at every repetition of the question. For the answer was always the same. Leonard—Leno—did not regard her as she regarded him. He might not be in her mind too aged for her fancy to weave a love dream about him, but it was her great fear that he regarded her as a child.

She got up and moved away to hide her face from Shallimar's close scrutiny.

"Don't be a goose," Shallimar exclaimed sharply. "Be yourself, Helen. Cut out the ingenue. You're 18, you know. I don't approve at all of your falling for Mr. Brent, but if you want to get anywhere with him you won't allow yourself to be a football for his notions. Not while you have proof that his personal taste is contrary to all he is making of you."

Helen answered with a half sob. "Sometimes I think I'm just naturally uninspired," she said, fishing a fresh handkerchief out of a box.

Shallimar rushed over and put an arm about her. "No, you're not, honey. Don't you see? No one but a person with a lot of character could do what you're doing. And that's why I think it's a shame that you should try to be anything but yourself. It just happens that Mr. Brent wants you to be a throwback. If you thought he liked modern youth as it's sometimes pictured to make a story or a sermon you'd flame to high heaven to please him."

Helen wiped her eyes and blinked back the rest of her tears. It was pretty hard being the ward of a man you were in love with—a man who had loads of fascinating women friends—and to know that you were just a . . . a sort of experiment with him; but hard or not Helen hated tears. They were too much in keeping with the character being thrust upon her.

"Well, anyway," Shallimar said cheerfully, "he doesn't dress you in hoops and bustles. I can't quite get his idea. An old fashioned girl in the latest word in clothes."

"I don't get it either," Helen confessed. "But I'm grateful for the lovely things he sends me. I'd hate to look funny."

"As you would if he wanted you to," Shallimar sniffed. "I hope I never fall in love if this is what it does to a girl. But honestly, Helen, I don't think you're in love with him, really. He's got you hypotized, that's all."

Helen was pinning her thick heavy hair up on her head preparatory to taking a shower bath. She smiled at her reflection in the mirror. How little Shallimar knew about the grand passion her great brown eyes said to those in the glass. She pitied Shallimar. For no matter how much it hurt to be in love it was an experience not to be missed.

And it made having a new dress ever so much more exciting. "Shall I wear silver slippers or the blue moire?" she asked, facing about and forgetting that her dearly beloved Leno would very likely remain unstirred by any choice she made among the things in her plentiful wardrobe.

"Wear the blue—silver's overdug," Shallimar advised. "And here's a bar of soap that Aunt Cecilia sent from Hungery. You'll love the odor. It's lasting but that won't matter since your arbiter won't permit you to use perfume."

"He doesn't object to a delicate scent," Helen corrected as she took the cake of clear green soap and disappeared into the hall. She ran down to the bath room but, early as it was, she found all the tubs and showers in use and had to wait 10 minutes for her turn. The girls were forever upsetting the bathing order established for them by the house rules committee. It did no good to grumble even if you had to hurry back to your room and content yourself with a sponge bath, aided by a rubdown with cologne. The facilities for luxurious living at Miss Spann's were limited. Still the school had a reputation for worthiness that kept its enrollment full and things went on as they were.

When Helen returned to don her crepe de chine dancing set and the periwinkle dress she was aglow with well being and happy anticipation.

Shallimar stood by and offered well meant suggestions that were entirely ignored. No, not even a hint of lipstick, and certainly no eye shadow. Helen was firm.

"Not that you need it," Shallimar cajoled, "but there isn't a woman born who can't be made more beautiful. And you want to look beautiful, don't you?"

Helen consented to having her slightly water shined nose powdered and she allowed Shallimar to arrange her heavy hair in a way that permitted one adorable little ear to invite a caress, but that was as far in modern allurement as she would go.

Finally Shallimar announced herself satisfied. Helen gave her a swift hug. "It's funny about you," she said impulsively. "You hate to see me going out with Leno, I know you do, and yet you do all you can to make me devastating to him. Why is it, I wonder?"

Shallimar shrugged. "I suppose it's because when two women aren't after the same man they are allies against all men."

"I hope I can do as much for you some day," Helen acknowledged. "Which wrap shall I wear? I want to be downstairs when Leno comes."

"You don't want to lose a minute before asking him about last Saturday, do you?" Shallimar teased.

"No, I wouldn't dare do that," Helen told her; "but there's something he has promised to do for me. I'm anxious to remind him of it."

She was in the closet now, running her finely modeled hands over the row of wraps that hung there behind a cretonne curtain. She seemed uncertain of her choice. Her mind was not on the wraps. She came out with a black and white one. Shallimar gasped. "Helen, not that! With blue slippers?"

Helen regarded it. "It would be a bad combination, wouldn't it?" She threw it on the bed and turned back to the closet. This time she selected a gray velvet.

The nod of approval Leonard Brent gave her a few minutes later rewarded her for her exercise of taste.

Helen's hands trembled as Brent took them in his own and kissed their finger tips. It was not a serious gesture, but it delighted the girl whose love of romance and love of love itself had settled upon this handsome, worldly man.

As he bent his head and looked at her from dark eyes that turned up slightly at the outer corners, following the line of his satanic eyebrows, her heart pounded alarmingly.

She could not fathom that look, part mocking, part triumphant, part amused. But Leonard Brent could not be wholly laughing at her. Oh yes, she was aware that he knew of her feeling for him. There was something in his glance that made it possible to endure his knowing; something not altogether of mockery and amusement.

"You're looking lovelier than ever," Brent said to her and the words were uttered warmly.

Helen longed to say that he too was looking very well had she not felt it would be too artless to compliment him. He might want her to be simple, but not a simpleton.

But she allowed her eyes to feast upon him and Brent understood her as though she had spoken. He permitted no hint of his understanding to show in his manner. A long and varied experience with women had accustomed him to their admiration.

Helen's feet seemed scarcely to touch the flagstone walk as they made their way out to Brent's car, a long, narrow convertible. Tonight it was open and Helen had an instant of regret that she was not to sit in the delicious intimacy it afforded when closed. But the feel of a soft breeze, warm with the promise of summer, brought a surge of pleasure that held no place for regret.

It was a short drive to the inn—a drive in May scented twilight. Helen's thoughts were turned to the sheer delight of the wind in her face, the lift of her hair about her face, the racing hope that sped with her.

At the inn, before they left the car, she turned to her companion, her lips apart and her eyes seeking his. "Leno," she said softly, wistfully, "tonight you will do what you promised?"

"Tonight?" Brent repeated.

"I can't wait any longer," Helen urged. "You must tell me. You promised, when I finished school. That will be soon. I've tried to be patient, but you've no idea what it means not to know anything about yourself except your name. And I'm not even sure of that."

Brent's lips took on a cross determination. He spoke sharply. "Don't be a nuisance and spoil our evening, Helen. I'll tell you everything as I promised, when you graduate."

Helen sat very still, facing her disappointment. Brent put an arm about her. "There is one thing I want to know," he said, "before I tell you who you are."

Air Mail Cargo To Be Featured In Howard Event

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

BIG SPRING, Sept. 7. — More than 5,000 air mail letters have been received by the chamber of commerce to be mailed September 11-12, in connection with the opening of the Big Spring Airport, C. T. Watson, manager of the chamber of commerce announced here today.

"Letters have been sent to Big Spring from every state in the Union and from several foreign countries to be mailed out on the dedication day," Mr. Watson said. "Nearly all the principal stamp collectors in the United States as well as many friends and former residents of Big Spring have sent letters here to be mailed that day and canceled with the special air mail cache prepared for the occasion. This is in addition to the large volume of air mail brought to the office for mailing that day by citizens of Big Spring.

Permission Obtained.

"Special permission was obtained from Post Master General Walter D. Brown to send this mail by air since this town is not yet on a contract air mail route. Special permission was also obtained to stamp the letters with our special cachet". This special cachet reads "Air Mail, Big Spring, Texas, September 11-12." For the stamps to be canceled with this special die, letters must be mailed not later than noon September 11, Mr. Watson said.

Coincident with the dedication of the airport, it will be turned over to the Southern Air Transport system, which has leased the field for three years Mr. Watson said. Lieutenant Robert H. Gray, operations manager of the Southern Air Transport system, and probably other officials of this third largest air transportation company in the United States will be here to accept the port from the city, Mr. Watson said.

Big Spring is the luncheon stop on the Dallas-El Paso line of the T. A. T. Flying Service, Inc., a division of the Southern Air Transport company.

Roberts is principal of the junior high and west ward schools, and M. S. Ledger is principal of the east ward school. The high school had an initial enrollment of 315, the largest first-day enrollment in its history.

Various adjustments are being arranged this week under direction of Superintendent Green, and the pupils will go at once into steady school work. There are 45 teachers on the school faculties.

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

"Now stop the car," wee Clowny cried, "before it tips o'er on its side. That was the wildest ride, I think, that we have ever had. The scare has cleared out of my mind since we have left the bull behind. When trouble clears away it always makes a person glad."

Then Scouty said, "I'll stop real soon, but while the engine's in good tune we may as well keep going. Gee, I'm hungry as can be. Perhaps we'll find a small town street where we can get a bite to eat. But, why a town should be 'round here I really can not see."

They traveled over hill and dale and looked, but to no avail. They didn't see a man or child or anything at all. "I'm hungry too," another cried. "I need some eats in my insides. If I should try to stand up I am sure that I would fall."

Then, suddenly they heard a noise. A deep voice said, "Hello there, boys! I am the friendly baker man, and I have rolls galore. Here, help yourselves, the treat's on me. To you my lovely rolls are free. Eat all you can and after that just try and eat some more."

The Tinies thanked him very much. His rolls looked most too good to touch, but each one ate a couple. Then the baker disappeared. "Oh, look," cried Coppy. "Over there I see a bridge. Say, this is rare. Let's cross it." So the auto to the little bridge was steered.

"How queer it looks," one Tiny cried. "I wonder if it's safe to ride. Let's try it now and see if we can reach the other end." So on they rode, and very quick brave Scouty shouted, "This is slick." Just at that moment they were shocked. The bridge began to bend.

(The bridge does some funny things in the next story.)

"IT CERTAINLY HAS PROVEN A BLESSING TO ME"

Amarillo Housewife Gives Orgatone High Praise—Perfect Health

Among the many Amarillo people who have expressed their hearty and sincere approval of Orgatone after putting the medicine to practical test and deriving convincing results from it, none are more genuinely enthusiastic than Mrs. J. H. Holston, 305 North East Fourth, Amarillo, Texas.

"I certainly do give Orgatone credit for my great improvement," said Mrs. Holston, "for it has helped me over a bad case of kidney trouble and indigestion that has honestly been with me for twenty years, and the last two years I was going from bad to worse until I simply felt like I had no life in me at all.

"My stomach just seemed to go back on me entirely, for almost everything I would try to eat would ferment and form sour gas and give me such a puffed-up, miserable feeling that sometimes I felt like I couldn't get another breath to save my life. The pains around my kidneys and through the small of my back would frighten me and make me so weak and nervous I could hardly stand it.

"I couldn't sleep at all well at at night and I became so badly rundown I was simply not equal to anything and for a long time I felt like I was going to be forced to give up my housework. If I hadn't heard about Orgatone and given it a trial I don't know what would have become of me.

"I have taken three bottles of this splendid medicine, and I can say positively and candidly that I have never felt better and stronger in all my life. I am gaining in weight and strength and my stomach and kidney troubles have left me as completely as if I had never suffered with them a day in my life.

"My food agrees with me perfectly now, and I am not bothered with gas or nervousness in the least. I sleep just fine, and if there's any reason to believe I'm not in perfect health, I don't know what it is. I want to recommend Orgatone to my friends, for it surely has proven a blessing to me."

Genuine Orgatone may be bought in Lubbock at Bowens Drug Store.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

My son, keep thy father's commandment, and forsake not the law of thy mother:
Bind them continually upon thine heart, and tie them about thy neck.—Proverbs, vi. 20, 21.

THE SAGA OF THE PLAINS

WORK on the 1929 Panhande-South Plains Fair edition of the Avalanche-Journal publications is well under way and in this edition the staff of the South Plains' Own Newspapers hopes to present as nearly as possible the story of a great section.

Two weeks from today South Plains people will be poring over the Fair edition and, at the same time, fast trains will be carrying it to every corner of the nation in response to requests for information on this territory, sent to the Board of City Development through the South Plains Advertising campaign. As never before through the columns of any newspaper, the story of this new west will be told in more than 100 pages of the paper—going to more than 15,000 individuals for the perusal of more than 20,000 persons!

The annual Fair edition frankly means more than a 'big paper' to the men and women who daily labor in this organization. It means an added avenue of service to the section they have chosen to call home. It means an opportunity to do an added bit to help make the South Plains a bigger, better and more prosperous place in which to live and Earn.

The Panhandle-South Plains fair has become to be known as "The Show Window of the Panhandle-Plains." Augmenting the fair, the Avalanche-Journal's annual edition has likewise reached a new pinnacle—that which has made it "The Mirror of the Panhandle Plains."

Day and night during the ensuing days, Lubbock's newspaper workers will be busily engaged in framing this great edition—their annual effort to help prove to the world that all is well in this part of Texas. Time and working hours to them will mean nothing for theirs is a labor of pride as well as of necessity. The finished product, they feel, will fully compensate them for their extra thought, time and trouble.

Twenty-eight pages of rotogravure sections—artistic picturization of Lubbock and South Plains scenes—will be supported by approximately 100 other pages of newspaper telling the tale of our progress. From every angle and based upon all statisitcs available, the camera and the typewriter have been pressed into use that the world may know the facts.

This newspaper organization believes its every-day constituency will appreciate this effort. It hopes its regular readers, particularly, will watch for it and read it carefully for that will be a sufficient reward for intense labor involved. The Fair edition will be more than a newspaper—it will be a painted form of the Saga of the Plains.

BASEBALL SEASON WANING

Baseball is on its last legs—seasonally, not as an institution of sport.

Another season is fast drawing to a close. League standings are virtually decided and the nation is reconciled to seeing the world series played in Philadelphia and Chicago. If a change of scenery will benefit this great tournament of baseball, here is its opportunity.

Baseball is still king. The 1929 season has been successful from several angles. No complaints about the "gate" have been heard from the club owners, there has been no "race suicide" in the fans and a lot of good on-the-square baseball has been played.

This season has placed in the limelight enough promising material to start the fans talking about 1930 prospects before the 1929 season is dead. Boosters of tail-end clubs who have been predicting championship ball for them for many years only to see them fall by the wayside year after year now can cite facts and figures to prove that their pet nines will be in the running next year. Nothing would please fandom better than to see these prophecies come true.

THIRD CABIN

First and second class and steerage made up the passenger lists of the big ocean steamships in bygone days, but the government's restrictive immigration laws have created another—the third class—which has become an important factor. In 1925, when the tourist third cabin passengers first obtained recognition from the steamship companies, there were 19,678 such passengers who left all United States ports.

The following year the third cabin passengers increased to 43,780; in 1927 to 79,906; in 1928 to 93,869, and for the present year the estimate is not less than 125,000.

What's the use of paying four or five prices for sleeping space and three meals a day, when the trip may be made for one, and a longer time spent in vacationing "abroad" with opportunity to do some shopping in Paris and London?

There is a possibility that before many years the lightning-proof electric line will be invented or perfected. A statement made by the bureau of engineering of the navy department says that material progress was made last year in reproducing lightning within high voltage laboratories, when 5,000,000 volts was achieved. The record previously had been 3,600,000 volts; so that during the year there was a gain of 1,400,000 volts.

F. W. Peck, jr., who was responsible for the achievement, believes that there is no limit to what may be accomplished, and is working toward the 10,000,000 volts goal. He says "the practical lightning proof line is in sight." That will be a great boon to timid passengers on trolley cars, listeners-in on the radio, and to users of the telephone. Also it will remove the fears of many who are terror-stricken during a thunder-storm.

SAVING ON THE ARMY

Secretary of War Good says that the entire general staff of the army is to be assigned to the job of trying to discover what savings can be made and still safeguard the nation's defense, in accordance with President Hoover's economy program.

Greater results might be expected if the job had been assigned to a commission of disinterested men. Army men have a habit of sticking together.

There is a hint of this feeling in the statement made by Secretary Good that the army's annual budget has been increased by "only $75,000,000 to $80,000,000 by certain preparedness plans that have been adopted since the war. Members of the general staff [illegible] as a suggestion that the economy knife must not be made to cut too deeply into the army.

MACDONALD SHOWS SHREWDNESS IN SELECTING OCTOBER VISIT

BY CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Premier Ramsay MacDonald evidently is not a canny Scot for nothing. Obviously he realizes that the ideal time to drive a shrewd bargain is when the other fellow is in a bigger hurry than he is.

October clearly is inconveniently too soon for Mr. MacDonald to get away from his new job in London, to visit President Hoover in Washington.

In fact, he has so much home work on his hands that he practically had called off an earlier tentative arrangement to be here then, for a talk with Mr. Hoover concerning an Anglo-American compact to cut down the two countries' navies.

Nevertheless, he now has changed his mind again, and is coming.

The truth is, cancellation of the original plan for an October conference between Premier MacDonald and President Hoover would have left the latter in rather an awkward predicament—of course, unintentionally on Mr. MacDonald's part.

The supposition that he and his expected British guest would arrive at a naval agreement, in the course of their conversation, presumably was what inspired Mr. Hoover to delay a start on three of the five cruisers which the last congress provided for, for American shipyards to work on during the current fiscal year—July 1, 1929, to June 30, 1930.

Not all the legislative brethren concurred with them, but big navy senators and representatives promptly took the attitude that the president had overstrained his executive authority in modifying a congressional mandate thus.

Ever since he acted as he did, it has been a foregone conclusion that Mr. Hoover is due to be attacked by certain lawmakers, soon after they reassemble on Capitol hill, for his cruiser policy.

Even if the president did slightly exceed his rightful powers, these attacks will not amount to much if he can show that he simply saved the taxpayers' money by preventing initial expenditures on three cruisers which are not going to be needed anyway—because he and Premier MacDonald have agreed on a naval reduction plan.

They may be quite embarrassing for him, if his critics are able to say that he merely thought he could effect such an agreement, but that there is nothing to prove the least interest in it on the other side of the Atlantic.

The senate will begin holding regular sessoins early in September, but will be too busy with the tariff to discuss anything else for awhile. The representatives will gather some three weeks later. Both houses will be just about ready to plunge into the cruiser debate by mid-October.

Right then Premier MacDonald will be here, according to the present schedule.

If he and President Hoover come readily to terms, all the wind will be gone out of the presidential critics' sails. If they fail to come to terms at all, there will be a gale sufficient to inflate every stitch of canvas the critics can carry.

Possibly no one has told Mr. MacDonald that this would seem to be a favorable opportunity for him to negotiate, from England's standpoint.

Still, October is when he expects to be here.

There is this to be considered about the British:

Possession of the world's strongest navy is a habit of centuries with them.

They need to reduce it now. There is no make-believe about their anxiety to do so. Their reasons are financial. Only habit is too much for them. If they reduce, they want America—which, alone among the powers, has the money to equal or outbuild them—to reduce also enough to leave them ahead, as heretofore.

They have no objection to admitting America's right to equality—provided America does not exercise it.

They are willing to call each ton of their naval strength only two-thirds of a ton, or to recognize each ton of America's as a ton and a third. Americans can have anything they like—on paper. All the British ask is, actually, the stronger navy.

Premier MacDonald may be an exception. However, it is Mr. MacDonald who suggests that peculiar method of reckoning tonnage.

DEFICIENCY OF PROTEIN WILL LEAD TO DISEASE, WARNS DOCTOR PETERS

Protein in Diet

DEAR DOCTOR: Some years ago I had inflammation of the kidneys and my doctor cut out all the flesh foods from my diet and I have continued to do this ever since. But I find I am losing weight and getting anemic. Do you suppose to have some flesh foods now?

You may not need flesh foods, J., but you probably do need more of the element that is high in flesh foods—the protein. A lack of sufficient protein means a lack of sufficient of the element to repair your tissues and to furnish growth of the new blood cells. (And, of course, in the young, all the tissues.)

The public is pretty well aware now that a deficiency of the mineral elements—especially iron and iodin—and of the vitamins, leads to disease, but it is not sufficiently aware that a deficiency of protein also leads to disease. Because the protein wastes are eliminated by the kidneys, it is customary to limit them markedly in kidney disease, but in chronic cases it is imperative that the patient gets sufficient for his needs, else the kidneys and the other organs will not be able to repair themselves. I may add parenthetically that there are certain types of kidney disease that improve on a liberal protein intake.

The minimum of protein needed is estimated to be one and one-half calories per pound of normal body weight; so if your normal weight is, or should be, 150 pounds, you should have 225 calories of protein at least, daily.

I'll give you a list of the protein content of various foods, so you can check up on yourself.

Protein Calories In 100-Calorie Portions of Foods

	Calories of Protein
Bread, 1 full slice (1-2-inch thick) whole wheat highest	12 to 16
Cooked cereals, 1 small cup (oatmeal highest)	10 to 16
Rice, 1 small cup	10
Macaroni, 1 small cup	15
Whole milk, 5 ounces	20
Skimmed or buttermilk, 10 ounces	35
Cheese (cottage) 6 level tablespoonfuls (3 1-4 ounces)	75
Cheese (American, cream, Swiss, etc.) approximately 1 ounce	25
Eggs, 1 1-3	36
Meat or fish, very lean, 2 to 3 ounces	50 to 75
Nuts (peanuts highest)	10 to 20
Beans, 1-3 cup average	20
Green peas, 3-4 cup average	28
Corn, 1-3 cup average	12
Onions, 3 to 4 medium	12
Potatoes, 1 medium	12
Tomatoes, 1 pound	15
Fresh fruits (berries, currants, rhubarb) about 1 cup	10
Others:- 1 medium apple, orange, pear, etc.	2 to 7

We have an article on Balanced Diet which you may be interested in, J. It also gives a list of books on dietetics, some of which you should have. We also have a new pamphet on Kidney and Bladder Disorders which takes up the Diet in Kidney Disease, which will help you. See column rules for obtaining these.

"I SAW TWO CLOUDS AT MORNING"

I saw two clouds at morning
Tinged by the rising sun,
And in the dawn they floated on,
And mingled into one;
I thought that morning cloud was blest,
It moved so sweetly to the west.

I saw two summer currents
Flow smoothly to their meeting,
And join their course, with silent force,
In peace each other greeting;
Calm was their course through banks of green,
While dimpling eddies played between.

Such be your gentle motion,
Till life's last pulse shall beat;
Like summer's beam, and summer's stream,
Float on, in joy, to meet
A calmer sea, where storms shall cease,
A purer sky, where all is peace.

Has Queer Road

Dentist Uses Old Teeth To Pave

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—One of the oddest driveways in the country has been constructed outside the city. A dentist, in building his driveway, was able to get false teeth through business connections cheaper than he could buy gravel. So he strewed the teeth on his driveway. No punctures have been reported from the teeth biting into automobile tires.

It would take nearly 35 years for an airplane, traveling two miles a minute, to fly from the earth to Mars.

On the Fence with The Seer

Prosperity in its pleasing supremacy sometimes creates a perplexing problem. In America, the automobile is fast becoming a necessity but is carrying with it a boomerang. The fate of the second-hand auto has, in the past ten years, become a national problem of ever-increasing intensity.

The Seer has studied the proposition from every angle, and despite the fact that the college Romeo is doing his part with the 'Collegiate Chariot,' the Seer has about given it up as a hopeless task.

Cleopatra once lamented to Charmion that the sky was only a covering for Egypt's tomb. Mysterious Egypt, whose earth is imbedded with its dead for centuries and centuries—beneath the father you'll find the grandfather and the great-grandfather and should you dig down forever you would still find the underlying dead.

* * *

Folks, that gives the Seer an idea. Why not bury this discarded product that has become a white elephant upon our hands—the second-hand automobile.

How Der Grap Zep's Crew Functions

Highly Trained Group Of Forty Air Adventurers Takes It's Operations Calmly But With Real Precision

By DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Sept. 7.—"Take landing stations!"

The Graf Zeppelin is arriving! Slowly, lazily it makes its last encircling tour of the landing field as it gets the "feel" of the wind and as its commander, Dr. Hugo Eckener watches the 400 men on the ground ready to grasp the ropes of his great ship.

On the Zeppelin itself, the 40 men comprising the crew are scuttling through the passageway along the keel and the one runing upright through the ship. A squad climbs up to the very nose of the dirigible, prepared to throw out the two lines to which the ground crew will attach the two "spiders," consisting of 15 smaller lines, each to be held by a squad of the 400 trained men on the ground.

Over the entire ship the highly trained Zeppelin crew distributes itself evenly along the walk in the keel so that proper balance is maintained while the great airship is being maneuvered to the ground.

If the ship is to be tied to a mooring mast, the men at the nose slip a mooring rope though the tip, while men on the mast are ready to grasp it. At the same time the enginemen, one in each gondola, take their places at the reversing levers and throttles, prepared for quick orders sent from the pilot room by mechanical telegraph, such as that employed on the large ocean liners.

In the pilot room of the Zeppelin's control car stands Dr. Eckener with his three aides, Captain Ernst A. Lehmann, H. C. Flemming and Hans von Schiller. At the two controlling wheels are the pilots, one handling the rudders and the other the elevators. In the room directly behind the control room are the three navigating officers, finished with their job of charting the course on the basis of weather reports obtained through the radio operators in the room adjoining.

Every man of the crew of 40 on this airship is up and ready for landing orders.

During the voyage, however, this crew of 40 has been divided into three eight hour shifts. There are 15 enginemen—five on a shift—one for each engine. Each of these men has looked to his own motor, a 550 horse power Mayback, similar to the engines used on the U. S. navy's Los Angeles.

In the interior of the ship, at the head of the working crew, are Chief Engineer Wilhelm Siegle and his assistant, Karl Roesch. These men carry perhaps the greatest responsibility, excepting Dr. Eckener. They have to see that not only the engines, but every condition, that the crew is operating systematically and that both the commanders and the passengers are well satisfied.

Under their direct command are the enginemen, the riggers, the mechanics and the electrician. There are three riggers, one for each watch, two mechanics dividing their time in accordance with the demand, and one electrician, who is called upon when needed.

The riggers patrol the walk running along the longitudinal axis of the ship. They watch the huge balloonets that contain the hydrogen and fuel gas. There are 16 hydrogen balloonets containing a total of 3,700,000 cubic feet. Beneath these, in 14 of the compartments or bulkheads into which the Zeppelin is divided, are as many fuel gas balloonets, containing the "blau gas" that is used in the motors. Gasoline is also carried for emergency use.

The riggers watch for wrinkles that might have worked themselves into the rubberized lining of the balloonets, with the "breathing" of these huge bags. These wrinkles must be smoothed out, and this may occasion a rigger's climbing up through the network of wires to the scene of the defect. The riggers also maintain the entire rigging of the ship.

The mechanics are "handy men" and help both the riggers and the enginemen, if necessary.

In the pilot house, the rudder man and the elevator man are the men who, holding firmly to the wheels that operate the rudders and elevators, strain every muscle at times in their efforts to keep the Zeppelin on its course and at an even keel, despite strong winds and heavy storms.

That storm over the Pacific, shortly after the Graf Zeppelin left Japan, struck them severely. They had to brace themselves to withstand the buffeting the ship got as it was tossed about in the sky. While one used his wits trying to offset the lurches an drolling of the big ship with proper turns of the rudder, the other had just as difficult a task straightening out the ship as the liner dropped suddenly into a "bump" or heaved up above a rising air current.

When the voyage is over and the ship is in port and the passengers are landed, Dr. Eckener's task is finished temporarily.

But not Chief Engineer Siegle and his men. They must go over every inch of wire and bracing and fabric and every one of the motors to make sure all is in good condition and ready for the next long hop.

In New York

With Swan

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—Just a few steps from the spot where the modern Croesus has his castles, you'll find America's best Toonerville trolley.

It may not make all trains, but it makes all stops and it's typical of the incongruity of Manhattan that a good old one-man trolley line should operate through some of Manhattan's most hectic highways, winding up its run at Cortland street in the shadow of the steel giants of lower New York.

Some have called it the "phantom trolley," for seldom does it carry passengers. Most folk have no time to waddle along in an old caboose, preferring subways and taxicabs. But this relic of another day keeps in operation because the car company doesn't want to lose a franchise.

Daniel Connors is the veteran navigator. In the best tradition of the rural one-horse cars he takes it to the barn and puts it to bed about 6 o'clock in the evening—the franchise agreement having been kept—unless of course, traffic demands another run. Few trips from Cortiand street to the edge of the Polo Grounds rate better than 15 cents.

* * *

The latest addition to Manhattan's street sights is a sun-burned young man, whose name might well be Ginsberg, garbed in full feathers and warpaint of an Indian chief, who acts as the "ballyhoo" man for a new restaurant on 33d street.

Also, just a few nights ago, a Broadway motion picture emporium introduced the "living electric sign," which had its birth in Hollywood. The "living sign" consists not only of the usual flare of bright lights, but added to this a complete chorus of girlies, dressed in the "very-very."

But New York's climate being more uncertain than California's, the first night out came a rainstorm and so ruffled their plumage and so drenched their more-or-less tights that they had to call for umbrellas, much to the amusement of the street crowds, and finally had to retire from their perches.

And speaking of ballyhoos, Luna Park has an old-fashioned tramp cyclist to work the "bally" in front of the innumerable sideshow concessions, and help attract the crowds from one place to another.

Despite his make-up, it seemed to me this particular "bally" showed a waistline not in keeping with a trick cyclist—that is to say, it was fast approximating the girth of Mr. Paul Whiteman. Making inquiry, I learned that this gent was none other than one Harry Fisher, who 30 years ago was the daredevil who rode down the chute-the-chutes on a bicycle, a very breathtaking stunt in those days.

But that was before a new generation learned to walk on its hands upon the wings of a soaring airplane.

And speaking of girth, there's a gag going round to the effect that when Whiteman went on the 18-day diet he lost three musicians.

CROP REPORT GIVEN

Oklahoma Corn Crop Will Not Make So Much

CHICAGO, Sept. 7 (AP)—The Oklahoma weekly crop report of the Chicago board of trade said early corn in Oklahoma has matured with a fair yield, but late corn will be largely a failure as a result of drought and heat. It has burned beyond hope of recovery on most uplands and is only fair to poor and still needing rain badly on bottom lands.

BRAZIL SHIPS SNAKES

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (AP).—Many snakes are imported into this country, as well as snake-bite serum, for study by chemists in an effort to combat poisonous reptiles. M. C. Brown of Busch Terminal, reports that no other country in the world has made such progress in fighting snakes than Brazil, and for this reason Brazilian methods are being studied here.

NO DIVING HERE

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 7.—After partaking of several rounds of liquor, 20 to be exact, a group of sponge divers decided they would like to do a little diving. They reached one of the main streets where one of them perched upon his car and was in the very act of staging a sponge diver's dive into the pavement when he was halted by and officer and hauled into court.

MUD—SPLASH—SUIT

NASHVILLE, Sept. 7.—There were probably a few chuckles when Mrs. Russie E. Thompson slipped in a mud puddle and fell recently. But taxpayers aren't laughing so loud now, for she has brought suit against the city for $25,000 for injuries sustained in the fall. Her husband has filed an additional suit for $10,000 for the loss of his wife's services.

WHO'S THE CHIEF?

KEYSER, W. Va., Sept. 7.—strange predicament arose in this town when the mayor appointed a police chief and then the city council reappointed another. Both laid claim to the office and each patrols the streets unmindful of the other. The outcome will be learned when the payroll is made out as only one will be payed.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Miss Beatrice Harrison, staff artist for the British Broadcasting Company, has some odd pets. In her home at Ox[illegible] she keeps such opposites as nightingales and alligators. To Our Customers and Friends:

We want you to know something about the Citizens National Bank of Lubbock and what it stands for.

We are proud of the fact that our bank is "The Oldest Bank in Lubbock County". For nearly a quarter of a century The Citizens National Bank has ministered to the financial needs of this territory. We have progressed with the community. Our success we owe to our patrons, who have shown a loyal and understanding appreciation of our policies.

All through the years one ideal has been uppermost—to give our patrons something more than banking formality; to give them personal, friendly service within the bounds of conservative banking. A patron is not just a name in our ledgers; he is a friend. We hope always to have that sincere personal touch.

For over a year executives and employees of the Citizens National Bank have been planning and working with architects and builders in remodeling our banking premises, that we might have the most complete and modern banking house on the South Plains.

Remodeling of our banking room, and insztallation of complete new banking fixtures is now going on. We earnestly ask that our many friends bear with us during the inconvenience which this means to them temporarily. It will only be a short while longer now when we will be able to place at the disposal of this community a banking house of which we may ALL BE JUSTLY PROUD.

Forty-First Legislature May Record New Mark In Sessions; Two More Are Possibility Before Close Of Period

Three Important Matters To Come Up Soon If Reports Of Committees Are Made; Boundary Debate Set

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Sept. 7. — With committees and commissions created by the Legislature about ready to report, the 41st legislature now is in a position to establish an endurance record.

Already with a regular and three extraordinary sessions for a total of 144 days to its record, it faces the prospect of at least two more special sessions. The record is four special sessions for a single legislature.

Three Matters Important

Three important matters will come before the legislature this fall or early next winter as a result of findings of legislative commissions and committees. They are the penitentiary problem, fee system and boundary between Oklahoma and Texas.

Any one of these is big enough and loaded with sufficient partisanship to keep the legislators busy a full 30-day extraordinary session, constitutional period. If this should be the case, there are at least three more specials ahead before the 52nd legislature comes into being in January, 1931, unless Governor Moody should grow weary and just decide the law-makers had run their course as far as he was concerned.

Plenty of Issues

There are enough side issues to keep the legislature grinding promiscously. Included are corrective bills to straighten out the to Confederate pension troubles and the measure designed to license barbers. If here should develop a dearth of subjects the governor could bring his regulation of public utilities and his proposed income tax as a substitute for ad valorem to the front.

Considerable contention is likely to develop over the penitentiary centralization proposal, even among the commission of 18 created by the legislature to make a survey of conditions and report its findings and recommendations.

Returned From Tour

The commission has returned from a three weeks' visit to penitentiaries of many states and is prepared to decide what it wants to do about the Texas system.

If it decides centralization should not be affected on the lands now owned by the state it will make a trip over Texas for the inspection of probable sites for the central prison.

Irrespective of the commission's recommendations the legislature promises to be split on the proposal and a hot battle is virtually certain.

Debate Promising

The debate over Texas' attitude with reference to keeping the boundary along the eastern side of the Panhandle is certain to be anything but one-sided. There is strong sentiment to let Oklahoma keep the some 40,000 acres, together with occupants, thrown into Texas by the supreme court's decision in fixing the true 100th meridian as the boundary. There also is firm decision on the part of some legislators to retain the land as part of Texas.

The Texas committee that dickered with Oklahoma over the drafting of a compact which would settle the dispute was supposed to be strongly inclined to refuse flatly any offer of Oklahoma to keep the area, yet it voted almost unanimously to submit to the legislature the compact suggested by Oklahoma under which the line would be left where it has been for many years.

Sooners Feel Confident

The Oklahomans feel they have more than an even chance to retain the area with the legislature as a whole passing on the proposal.

Almost as warm will be the controversy over the so-called and long talked-about fee system under which county, state and district officers operate.

Report of the committee headed by Senator Pink L. Parrish of Lubbock, who sponsored, unsuccessfully, a bill to limit the compensation of county officials to $10,000 annually, probably will create a furore and bring the same big lobby to Austin that the Parrish bill brought during the last session.

The committee is certain to recommend passage of a bill fixing compensation of county officials according to population, and also enactment of a measure designed to break up the practice of county commissioner courts contracting for collection of delinquent taxes.

Rodeo To Feature West Texas Fair

Plans Made For Real Wild West Show, Management Of Exposition Announces; Military Display Set

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

ABILENE, Sept. 7.—A wild west rodeo with bucking horses, untamed steers and elusive goats and calves along with a horse show and polo game will be presented by the West Texas fair on the afternoon of September 24, in front of the grandstand as one of the items on the entertainment program of the fair for this season.

Willis Cox, member of the fair executive board, will direct the rodeo and horse show program. He already has a good assortment of four-footed performers lined up for the affair and with the sizable cash prizes that will be offered to the winners of the various events he anticipates a large list of talented leather and hemp artists taking part in the different contests on the program.

Miliary Program Set.

Arrangements for the military program to be staged at the fair on the afternoon of September 26 under direction of Capt. Earl Hoppe, and to be participated in by the three national guard units in Abilene and militia units from nearby towns, are going forward satisfactorily.

Featuring that event will be the actual firing of several thousand shells by the artillery companies; infantry drills and formations and a sham battle in which a number of thrilling stunts will be provided.

Final Plans Of W. T. C. C. Convention Are Made; More Business Will Mark Sessions In El Paso, Officials Say

Advisory Board Meets Recently To Perfect Final Details; Hoover May Not Be Able To Attend

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

STAMFORD, Sept. 7.—"If that part of West Texas Chamber of Commerce responds in the same cooperative manner as the points visited when the annual report is submtited to the El Paso convention, it will show the organization completely out of debt and on a firm financial foundation."

This was the statement made here today by members of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Advisory Board in conference with President Manager Bourland and field men indicating success of the campaign. Less than half of West Texas has been visited and more than half of the amount needed has been subscribed. The campaign, although only in operation for three weeks, has met with wholehearted support whereever it has been presented, indicating that West Texans are resolved that the organization which has served the interests of West Texas for the past 11 years must continue with even greater support than ever accorded before.

Outlined Plans.

The Advisory Board met in all day session, considered membership work and outlined plans for the El Paso convention, October 24, 25 and 26. Members of the board present were President Manager Bourland, Vernon; Ray Nichols, Vernon; Judge Joe A. Wheat, Seymour, and Clifford B. Jones, Spur. Judge R. W. Haynie of Abilene was unable to attend.

The board also announced a change in plans for this year's convention. More business sessions will be held, but at the same time there will be plenty of entertainment for all who are expected to attend. On Wednesday, October 23, a meeting of the board of directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce will be held at which time Mr. Bourland will submit his report, not only for his term as president but for his term as president-manager.

Changes To Be Suggested.

In the afternoon of the same day a meeting of duly appointed delegates will be held to hear the report of the special committee appointed last year at Colorado to suggest changes in the constitution or program of work. This session will be presided over by Walter Cline, chairman of the committee. Other members of the committee are O. P. Thrane, Snyder, and Col. R. E. Penick, Stamford. Delegates expected at this meeting are to be chosen, it was announced, by each affiliated town of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. Each place will be allowed one delegate for every 10 members in the rgional organization.

One of the outstanding entertainment features will be the military parade which will see the greatest mobilization of troops since the World war. Following this parade bands representing various West Texas towns will pass in review. It is expected also that many of the West Texas points will enter floats in the parade. Still another feature will be the presentation of band programs on the plaza where a huge band stand will be erected. Each town desiring to give a program will be alloted a special time for this feature.

Hoover Not Certain.

No definite assurance has been given that President Hoover will attend, but should he do so the program will be arranged for the occasion. Efforts are also being made to have President Gil of Mexico to attend but no assurance has been given that he will be there.

The convention will be concluded Saturday night with a great Spanish fiesta in Juarez where the delegates to the convention will be guests of the citizens of that place.

The program in its minute details will be announced within a short time.

How Is She Hittin'?

Pertinent Facts About Automobiles By Israel Klein, Science Editor For NEA Service

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

One of the most important duties connected with good automobile driving is that of reading the instruments on the dash. These instruments are there for an express purpose, yet few drivers cast an eye upon them for the information that they can obtain from them. The reason is that few know or appreciate the value of the instruments before them.

Even the speedometer, which is best known of all, is sometimes misread and misunderstood. Take the matter of speed alone. When the speedometer shows the driver stepping on it and registers around 60 or 70 miles an hour, the usual driver will boast about the mileage shown on the dial as though he had actually made it.

But this, in practically every case, is not so. The speedometer happens to be the most unreliable instrument on the dash. It is calibrated, or set, on the average automobile to register accurately when the car is going around 30 or 35 miles an hour. At this speed it may be believed.

But the speedometer is so made that it can not go up or down in exactly the same proportion as the actual speed of the car rises or falls. Therefore, when the dial reads 60 miles an hour, the car may actually be going only about 56 or 57. When it reads 70, the car speed may be only 65, and so on. Below 30 or 35, the actual speed is slightly higher than that shown on the dial.

The speedometer, also, should be watched carefully for mileages at which the oil should be changed. Many drivers gauge this duty by time rather than mileage. Mileage, however, is the proper rule to follow. At every 1000 miles or so, the oil should be checked for proper viscosity and should be changed if it is too thin. At the same mileage, the car should be greased thoroughly.

At the 10,000-mile points, the oil filter, gas filter and air cleaner might need cleaning or replacing. They should be checked by a competent mechanic. Then again, at every 10,000 miles, the spark plugs might be ready for replacement, the valves ground and the cylinders scraped of carbon.

By watching the speedometer while driving, and feeling the accelerator, the experienced driver can tell whether he is getting the best out of his fuel. His foot in its various positions toward the floor board, is a telltale in co-operation with the speedometer as to the efficiency of the running parts of the car.

If the speedometer shows a speed lower than what the driver expects from the car, by the position of his foot on the accelerator pedal, he can suspect such failures as that of a dragging brake, a slipping clutch or the emergency brake handle not fully released. In the engine itself, there might be a power leak somewhere, through the valves, the plugs or through loose pistons. Much of the fuel that he might be feeding into the motor may lose itself unburned down the cylinders into the oil pan, and the speedometer, in conjunction with the right foot, can tell.

In the matter of economy of operation, the use of fuel can only be judged in the light of the speed at which the car has been run. Here the speedometer comes forth again as an important instrument. Usually the most economical speed has been found to be around 30 miles an hour. Most engines have been built for that because most of our driving is done around that speed.

If someone tells you he got good mileage on his latest cross-country trip, you will discover on questioning him about his speed that he had been loping along at the modest rate of 30 or 35 miles. If he complains that his gallons were consumed faster than he could record them, he most likely had been scooting over the roads at 60 or 70, quite a costly and wasteful operation.

This is a good thing to remember in buying a car. If a salesman boasts high mileage for his car, ask him at what speed, and then get the car's mileages at other speeds. It's the only way to compare the economy factor of automobiles.

One bee-hive usually contains a queen, 300 to 400 drones and about 40,000 workers.

N. G. Kelly, formerly with the Bradley Motor company and Davis Oldsmobile company of this city, has joined the sales force of the Scoggin-Dickey Motor company, local Oakland-Pontiac dealers. Mr. Kelly is well known in Lubbock automobile circles and is now back with the product which he formerly demonstrated when connected with Bradley Motor Company.

Popularity Of 8 Cylinders Shown

Trend Of Buying Public In Direction Of The Straight Eight Models Reflected By New Marmon Sales

With automobile production and sales this year surpassing high records of years gone by, it is evident that public trend toward the straight-eight is rapidly growing in intensity, according to Thomas E. Jarrard, general sales director of the Marmon Motor Car company.

A survey of automobile registrations throughout the country for the first seven months of the year conclusively shows that sales of eight cylinder cars are greater this year than ever before, Mr. Jarrard pointed out. This fact, he said, is apparent not only in the large cities and thickly populated areas, but in the rural districts and, in fact, wherever automobiles are used or sold.

Increase Not Unusual

"When all facts are taken into consideration, this rather remarkable increase in public desire for eights is not an unusual circumstance, but rather the natural result of growing knowledge of the advantages of this type of car," Mr. Jarrard said. "Likewise, the factor of price has been significant, for it must be realized that, by and large, the eight is lower in price than ever before."

Franklin Given Wide Acceptance

The wide public acceptance of the Franklin Convertible on the Model 135 chassis has resulted in another convertible being introduced by the Franklin Automobile company on the Model 130 chassis, thus providing this popular type of car in two distinct price ranges.

Franklin dealers throughout the country report that with the devotees of the great outdoors increasing more rapidly than ever before in all strata of society, the Franklin convertible models, powered by the efficient air-cooled engine, meet the demand in an ideal way.

Popularity No Mystery

It is pointed out that there is little mystery about the popularity of these models since they give, not only free and unobstructed access to the sunshine but can, in a moment, be transformed into a closed car with all the snug warmth and weather protection of the closed body. The rumble seat has extraordinarily generous dimensions both as to width and leg-room.

Particularly among the younger set, the Franklin Convertible with the top collapsed is becoming more and more the vogue, even in the fall and winter months.

Th additin of the new Convertible in the Model 130 line is seen as a strategic move by Franklin since it opens an entirely new field of buyers for the smart convertible type of car—a type which is characterized by outstanding style and smartness, whether the car is driven as a open or closed model.

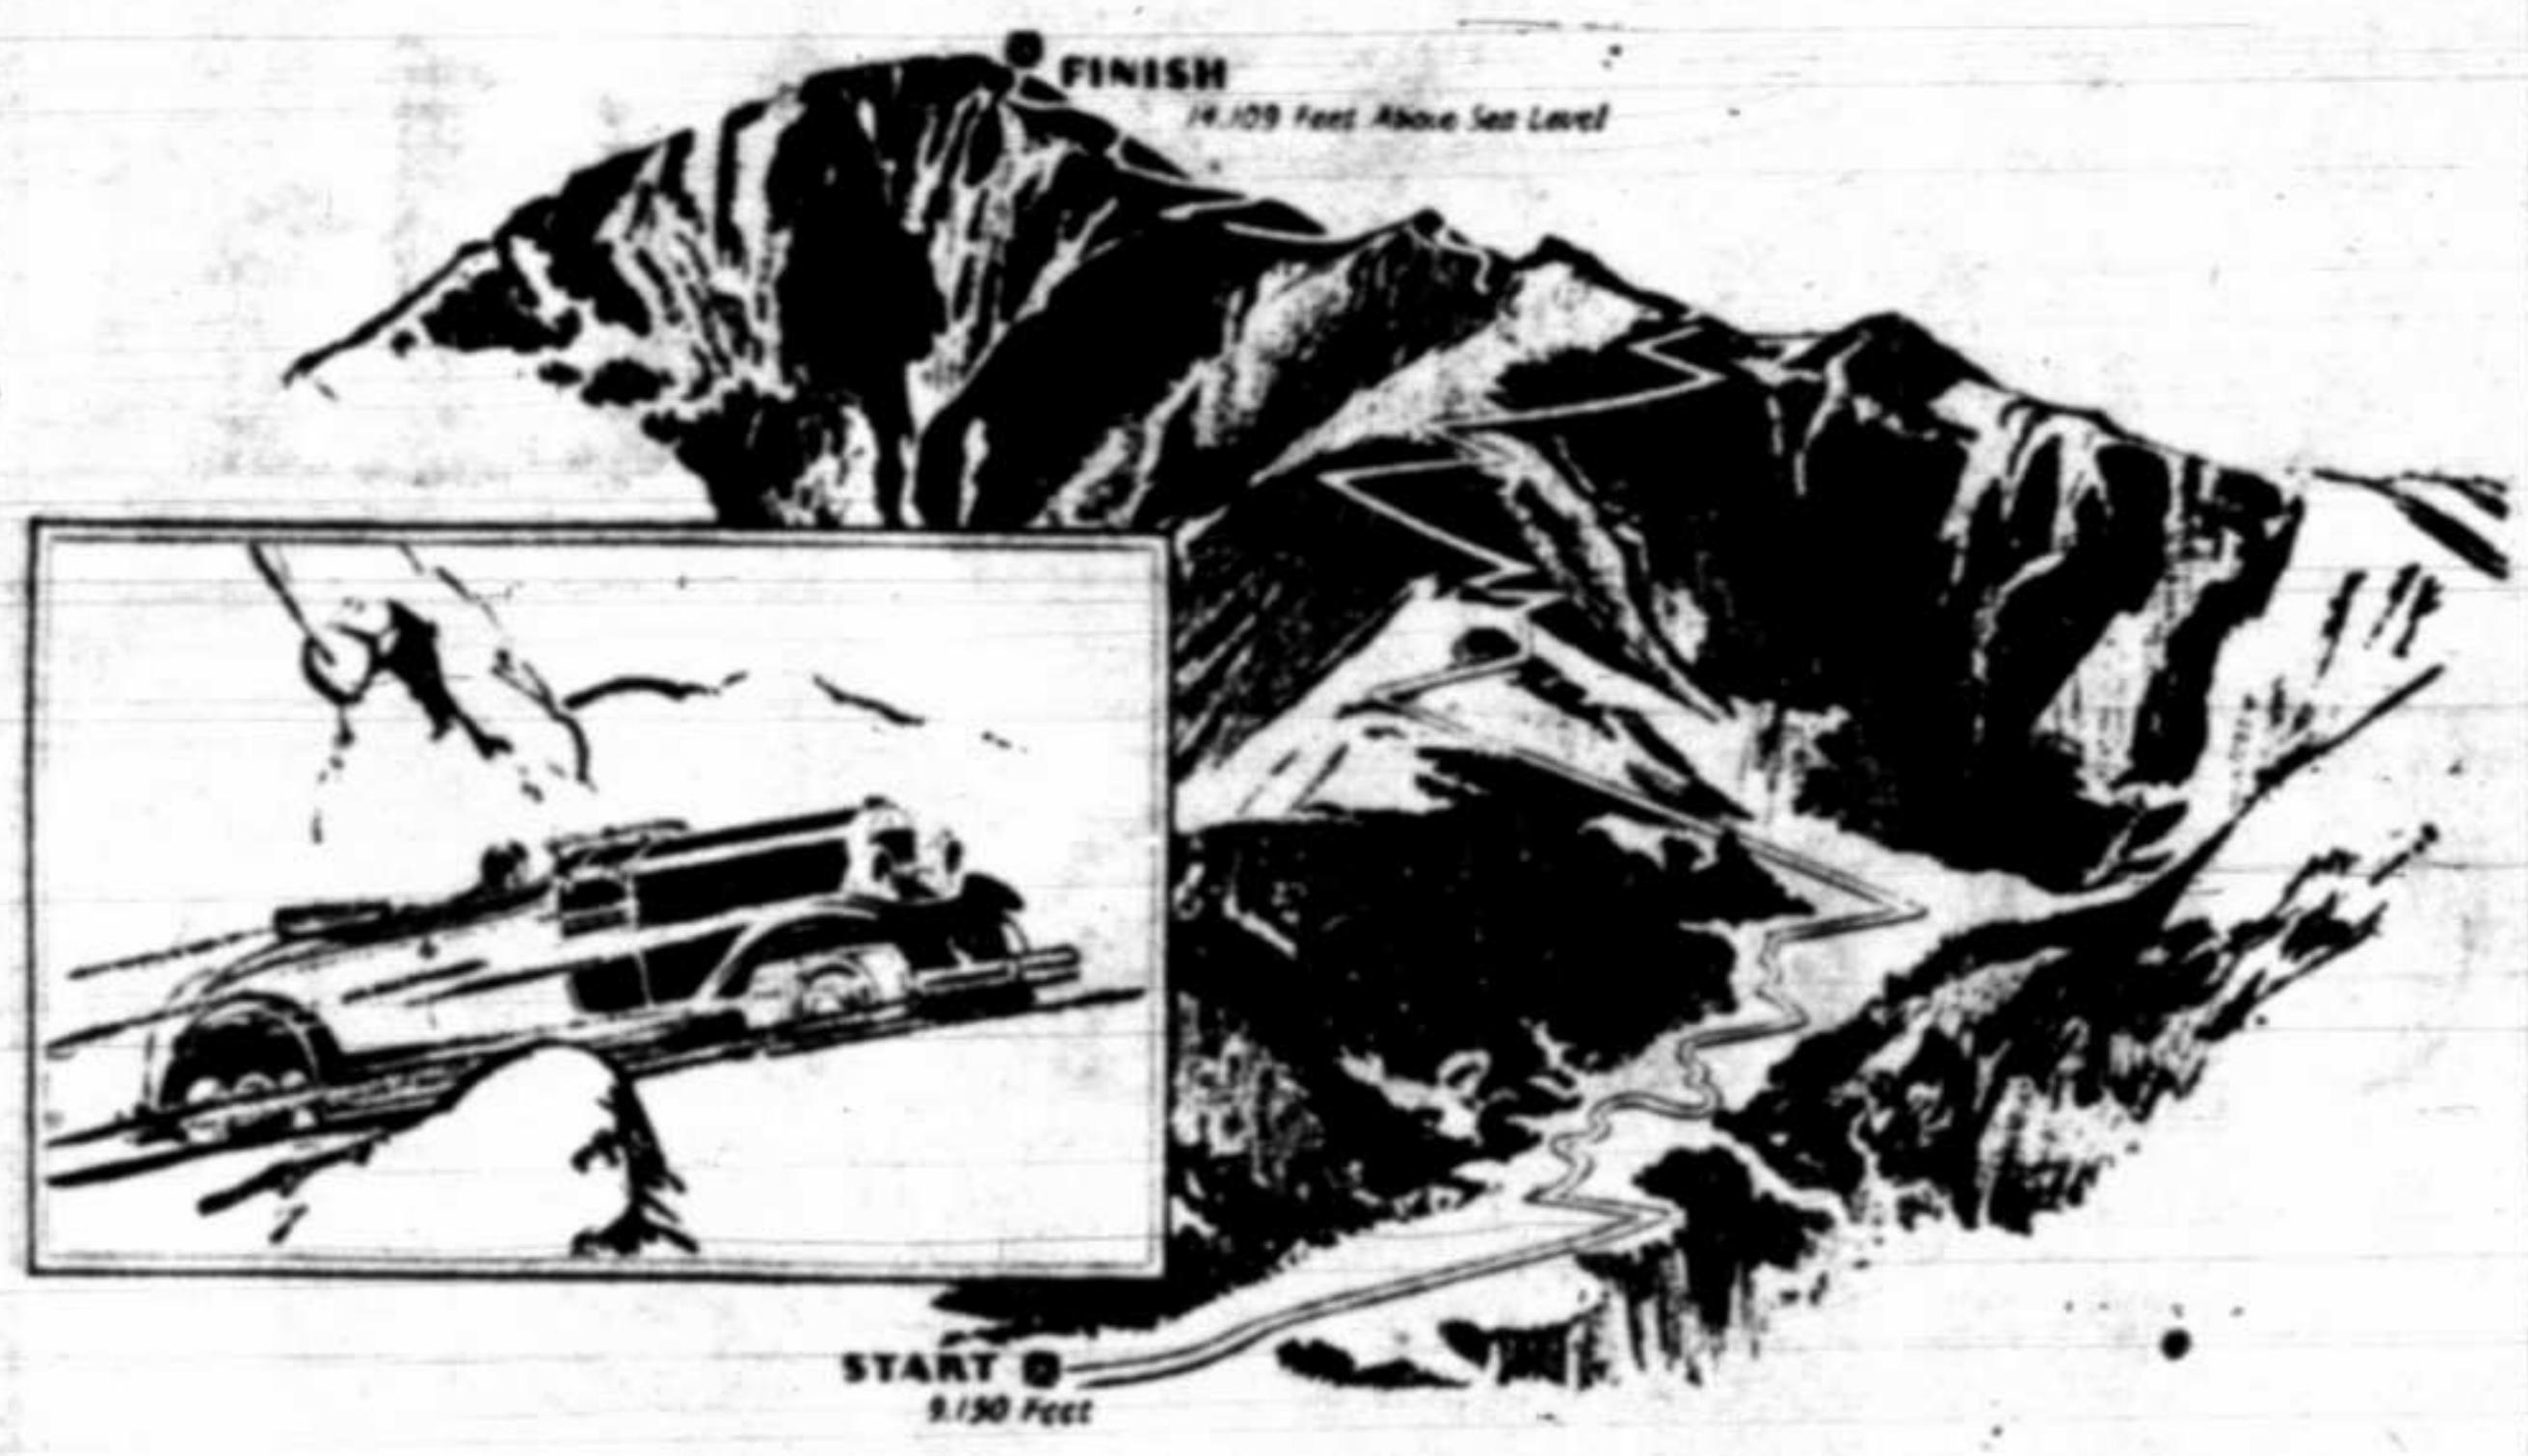
PRESIDENT EIGHT

sets New Stock Car Record in 1929 Pikes Peak Climb!



—Adds famous Penrose Trophy to 11 world and 23 international records

A strictly stock and fully equipped Studebaker President Eight, driven by Glen Shultz, set the fastest stock car time in history to win the Annual Penrose Trophy Race to the summit of Pikes Peak, 14,109 feet above sea level!

Already holding, undisputed, more official stock car records for speed and endurance than all other makes of American cars combined, Studebaker triumphs again.

American Automobile Association officials followed the same procedure in selecting the winning stock model President Eight as they did previously with the strictly stock President Eight which traveled 30,000 miles in 26,326 consecutive minutes. Picked at random from the Studebaker factory, The President was checked and certified as strictly stock before the race, and again after the run.*

The President Eight's record conquest of Pikes Peak is further proof of eight-cylinder performance supremacy—just as eight-cylinder popularity has been proved by Studebaker's world leadership in the sale of eights! Why wait a year to own an eight when you can own the car of tomorrow today!

You can buy a duplicate of the Pikes Peak President from any Studebaker dealer. See it—drive it—own a Studebaker champion eight at a new, low One-Profit price! And remember your car will be worth more a year from now—if it is an eight!

High compression head (6¼ to 1) and mountain gear ratio (4.08 to 1) were used—either of which is optional and available to any Studebaker purchaser anywhere.*

NEW LOW PRICES

President Eight	$1735 to $2350
Commander Eight	1445 to 1785
Commander Six	1185 to 1335
Dictator Eight	1245 to 1475
Dictator Six	995 to 1195
Erskine Six	860 to 1045

PRICES AT THE FACTORY

Studebaker's winning President Eight covered the 12 miles and 2200 feet to the summit of Pikes Peak—9150 feet to 14,109 feet above sea level—in the record stock car time of 21 minutes, 43.4 seconds. Average speed over this tortuous, twisting roadway was 34.3 miles per hour. 154 breath-taking curves make this course a supreme test of motor car balance and handling ease. That running conditions were not so advantageous this year was emphasized by the running time in the non-stock event, which was approximately 41 seconds slower than last year. Yet the President's time was the fastest ever made by any stock car over this course!

Front Drive Automobile Returns In New Cord Model

Pull Substituted For Push In Late Automotive Move

Inspection Of New Car By Science Editor Reveals Success Of Auburn Company's Two Years Work

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service.

AUBURN, Ind., Sept. 7.—In the early days of the industry, automobiles were built with the drive applied to the front wheels. But the great difficulty of steering such a vehicle under the conditions then existing forced manufacturers to resort to rear wheel propulsion.

Now however, with the steering difficulty overcome and many other troubles cleared up, the front drive motor car is coming back.

The first of these to be ready for popular sale is the Cord, which is being introduced by the Auburn Automobile company of this city. It is named after E. L. Cord, president of Auburn, is made in four models and is to sell for around $3,200.

Introduction of the front drive car does not mean that the car of today is to become extinct. In fact, Auburn itself is continuing the production of its rear-drive models in even greater proportion than heretofore. The new type cars are much costlier, due largely to the necessity of retooling, and many automotive engineers are not yet convinced of their entire practicability.

What Car Can Do.

For more than two years Auburn had been working on this type of construction and even before that time Harry Miller, famous front drive racing car designer, had been experimenting with it, improving on the design from year to year. The Cord front drive is the combined product of Miller, C. W. Van Ranst, another front drive expert, and the Auburn engineers.

I have just completed inspection of this car and a test drive over wet streets, gravel roads and deep-rutted detours and I am satisfied that if there were any serious disadvantages to this type of automobile they have been overcome. This is what three of us did with it:

We took turns on wet gravel roads and close to the edge at 70 miles an hour without skidding over or losing control of the machine.

We drove across a banked railroad track at 40 miles an hour, came down on the other side with only one easy bump and levelled out much faster than any rear-drive car could.

We locked the rear wheels going at 60 miles an hour on wet asphalt and came to a stop without skidding out of our tracks.

We drove into a car track—and right out again without the least extra effort.

We drove with the left side on wet grass and the right on gravel road, then speeded up the engine to make the left wheels spin without traction and we moved straight forward as the driver steered. The uneven traction had no effect on the direction of motion.

We took sharp curves at faster speed than we would dare with rear-drive cars without kicking the rear over or losing control of the steering.

We turned completely around in a 40-foot circle and that with a car of 137 1-2 inches wheelbase.

We bumped over deep ruts at fast speeds while the front driving wheels continued to pull us along at a steady pace without difficulty.

Pull Supercedes Push.

And all the time we had quite a comfortable journey. The reason being that the car has more sprung weight than the rear-drive models and is built lower to give it greater roadability.

The secret of the front drive automobile lies in the pull as against Cord engineers say this affords easier traction, easier steering, reduced thrust on front wheel bearings, reduced skidding, reduced pitching, less strain on body and springs. Also since the power is always applied in the direction the wheels are going there is increased efficiency and ease of operation.

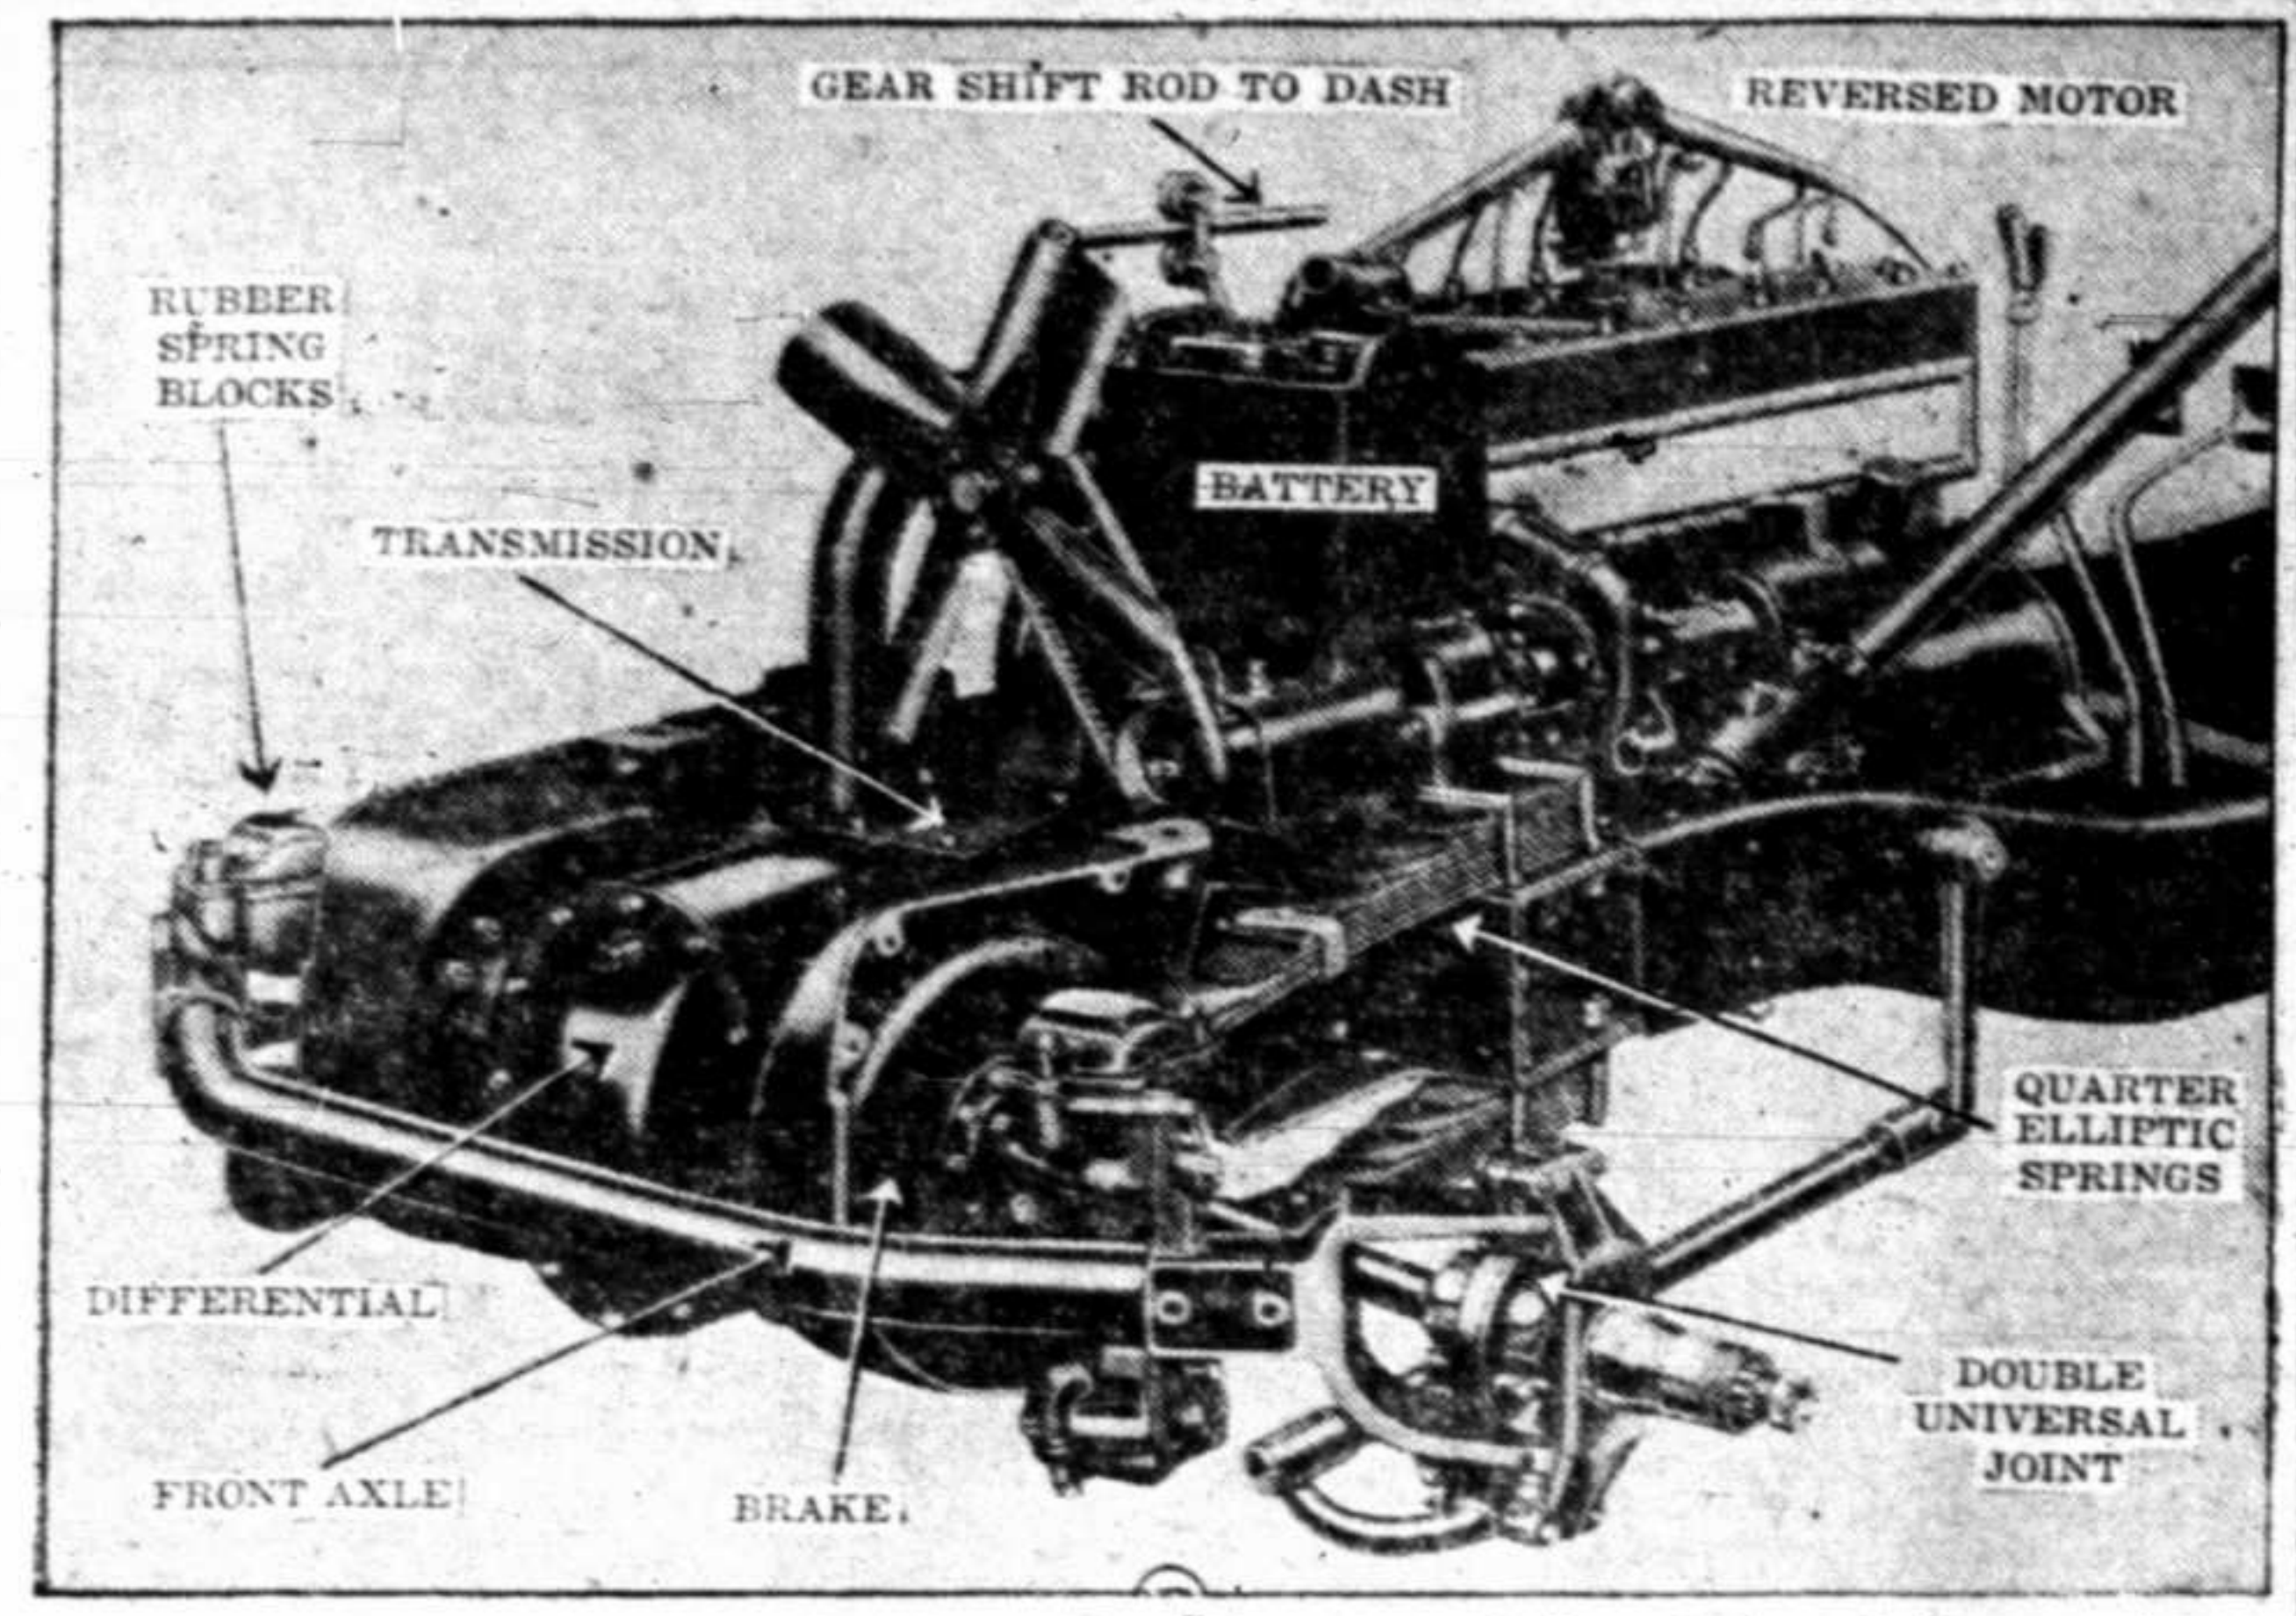
Front drive necessitates turning the engine around so that the flywheel is toward the front and hitching on in order clutch, transmission and differential in one complete power unit. From the differential come the two propeller shafts, one to each wheel, independent of the axle which, in the case of the Cord, is a sturdy tubular member joining the steering knuckles and crossing in front of the differential housing as an added protection against possible damage to the driving mechanism.

Despite all the "works" in front there is only 40 pounds difference in weight between front and rear, due to the heavy frame and body.

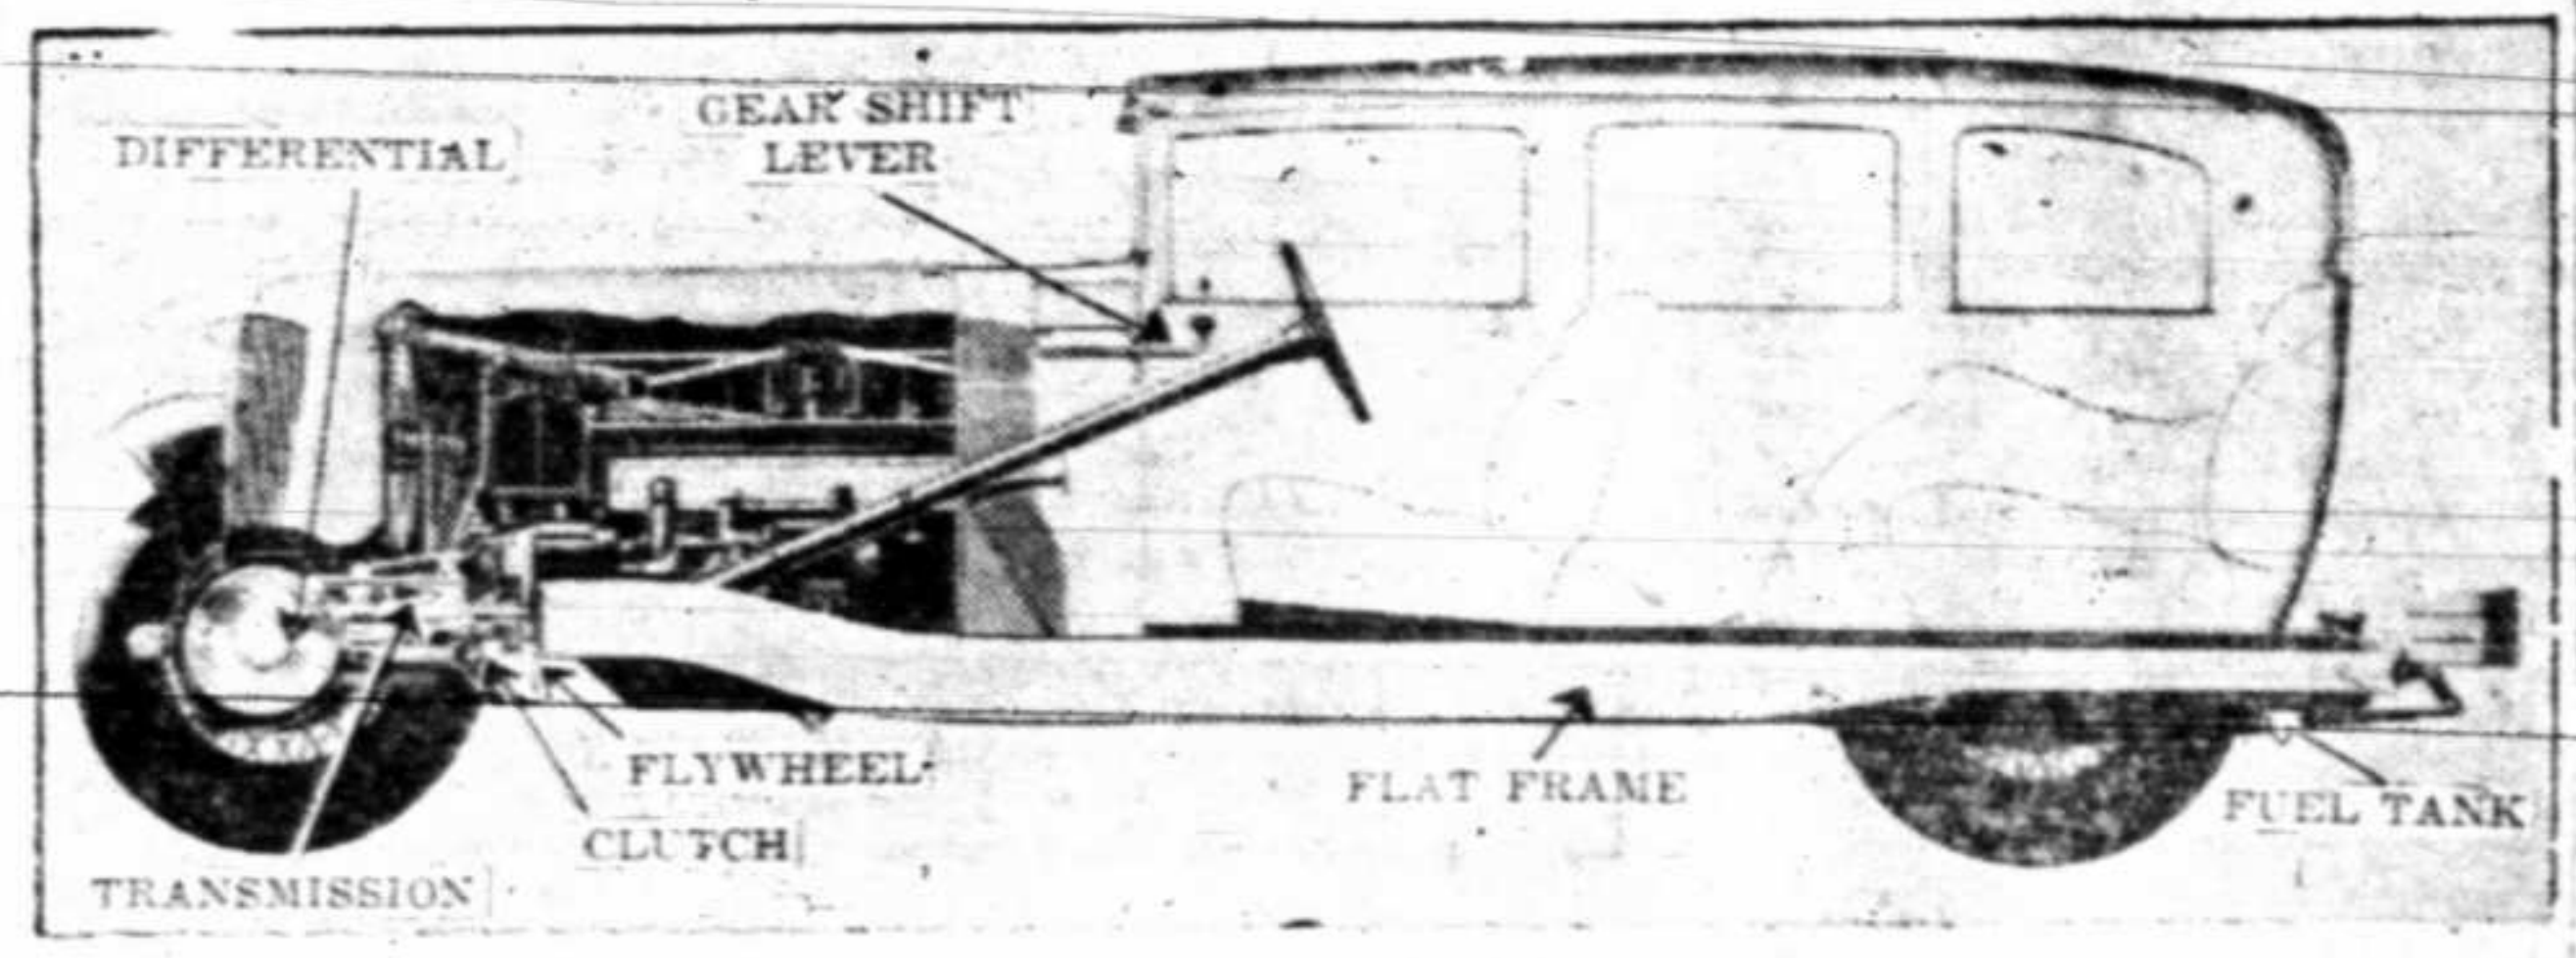
As a result of putting the entire driving mechanism in front, the frame in back can be straightened out and the body lowered considerably, thus providing much greater comfort and roadability, according to the engineers. The Cord frame, besides, has been strengthened with sturdy X-cross members in order to eliminate side-sway, which was found to exist in early experimental models.

One of the great disadvantages which engineers pointed to on front-drive cars was the difficulty of steering the front wheels and yet keeping them rotating at unvarying speed. This has been overcome in the Cord by a sturdy double universal joint at each wheel to be steered at a 42 degree angle, greater than those on most rear-drive cars, but also assures constant driving speed while turning.

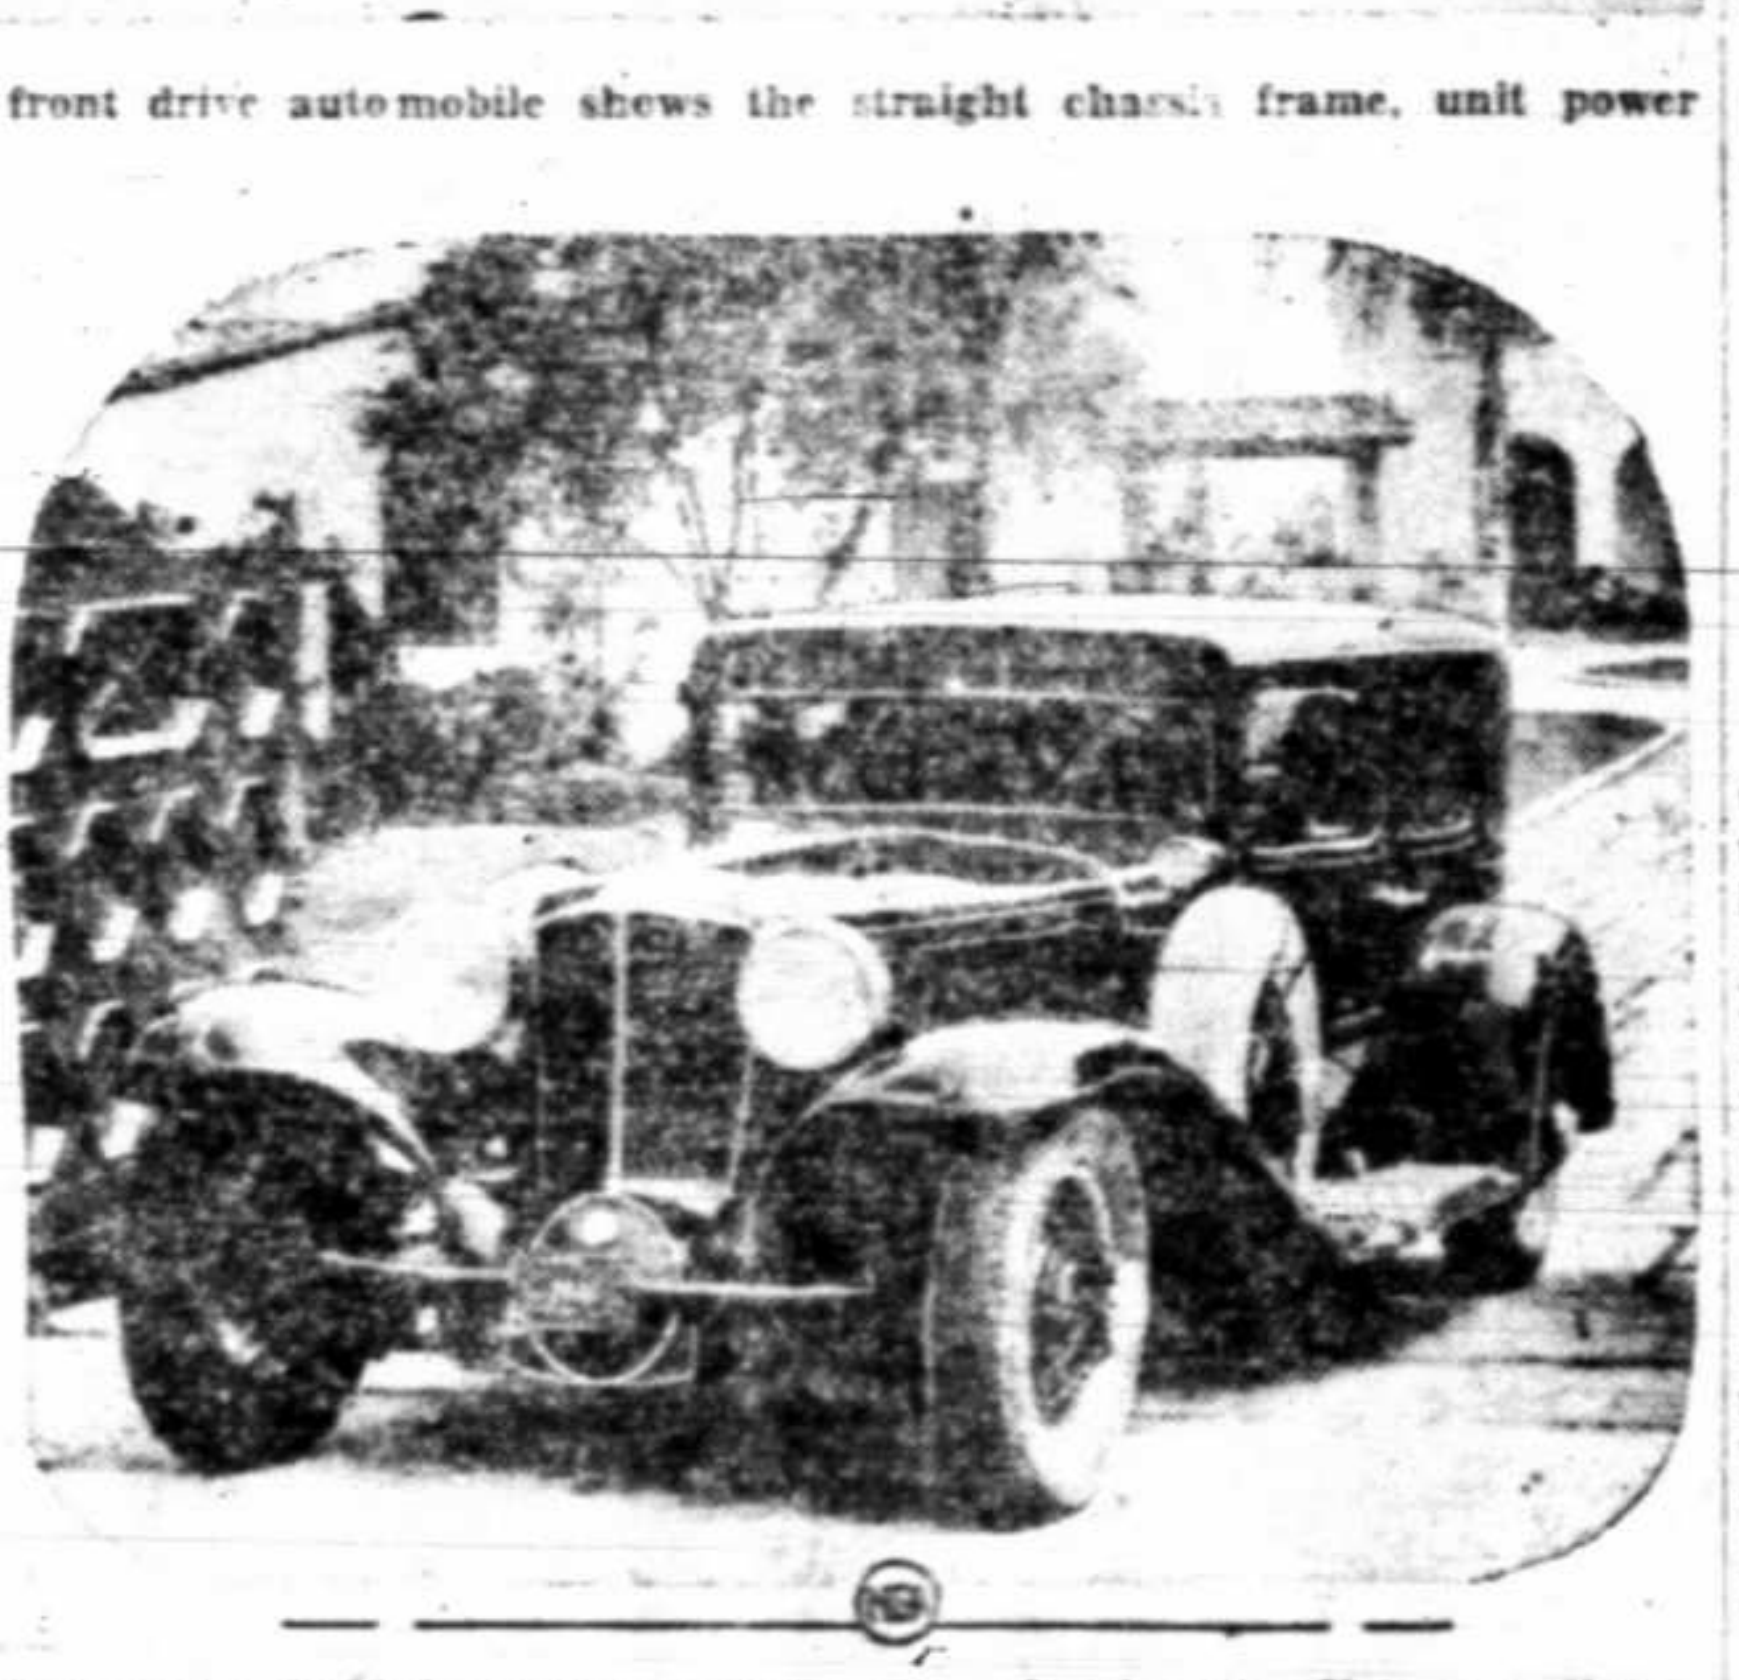
Since the transmission is toward the front, the gear shift lever extends through the dash and over the engine. It is easily manipulated by a turn and a thrust through neutral, much like the old Dodge system.



This shows the whole "works" of the Cord front drive power plant. It is a single unit, from motor to differential.



This phantom view of the new Cord front drive automobile shows the straight chassis frame, unit power plant and leveled seating position.



View of the Cord front drive sport sedan, showing the V-type radiator, sweeping fenders, differential in front and in front of that the axle. A set of bumpers goes ahead of this.

Studebaker Sport Coupe Is Popular

Smart Four-Passengered Enclosed Car Making Hit With Automotive Buying Public After Showing

The popularity of the smart, four passenger enclosed car, with a comfortable rumble seat for the occasional extra twosome, is emphasized by the success of the Commander Eight Sport Coupe recently introduced by Studebaker.

Graceful in line and ultra smart in appearance, this model combines the intimacy of a closed car with the rakishness of an open roadster. It is the ideal car for all sport and social occasions besides being appropriate as a second car for the increasing number of two car families.

Has Flowing Lines.

The flowing lines of the Commander Coupe for four reflect the finest coachcraft. Chrome plated exterior brightwork sets off the distinctive color scheme. The interior is richly upholstered in fine mohair. The wide driving seat accommodates three persons without cramping and it is so shaped as to assure complete driving and riding ease over long distances. Another feature characteristic of all Commander models is the adjustable seat, brake and clutch pedals, and steering wheel.

The roomy rumble seat in the rear—upholstered in leather—is amply dimensioned to accommodate two passengers.

Every watchful for the comfort and safety of driver and passengers, Studebaker engineers have incorporated in the Commander coupes numerous comfort and safety giving features. The windshield is shatterproof, eliminating the danger of injury from flying glass. The steel cored steering wheel gives added strength and safety.

New Transmission In Flying Cloud

Driving In Modern Traffic Is Thought Simplified By New Invention Of Engineers of Reo Company

LANSING, Mich., Sept. 7.—A new transmission that will simplify the task of driving an automobile in heavy traffic has been invented and perfected by engineers of the Reo Motor Car company and will be included on the new 1930 Master Flying Cloud, Richard L. Scott, president of Reo announced yesterday.

The transmission, he declares, is the result of several years of experimentation and is one of the most important accomplishments the automobile industry has contributed in recent years toward the simplification of driving in heavily congested traffic.

Traffic Is Problem.

"Street and highway engineers, public officials and civic organizations have struggled with the so-called traffic problem since automobiles became a necessity rather that a luxury. And anything resembling a solution still remains a remote possibility of the future," Scott declares.

"As a direct result of this congestion, the effciency of motoring has been interfered with to the point where it is costing large sums of money, and the necessity for relief becomes of greater importance daily."

Satisfied Owners Of Viking Eights Dominant Factors

Companion Car To Olds Six Is Making Big Hit With Public, According To A Survey Of Purchasers

Satisfied owners have formed one of the dominant factors in the acceptance of the Viking, the 90-degree, V-type, eight cylinder companion car to the Oldsmobile Six introduced to the motoring public this spring. This fact has been shown by a survey conducted among Viking purchasers.

More than one in every three purchasers were influenced either by other Viking owners or their own experience as the owner of an Oldsmobile, the survey revealed.

Owners Satisfied

Although the Viking has been on the market but a comparatively short time—about five months—one of every five Viking purchasers stated that they had been influenced in their preference for Viking by the enthusiastic reports of other Viking owners.

Many of these reports have not been confined to word of mouth recommendations, but also have been sent to the Oldsmobile-Viking factory by owners of this new car, factory officials report. These voluntary contributions are taken as recompense for the months and miles of testing given the Viking before it was introduced to the public.

Boosts Viking

"I write to tell you that from now on I'm a booster for the Viking," writes a Chicago produce dealer. "I've owned several cars and can truthfully say that the Viking is my ideal of a real automobile."

Another Viking owner in Maryland writes that he has driven his new car 4,000 miles and is highly pleased with its performance.

"We are truly amazed at the wonderful performance of this car," writes another Viking owner regarding his experiences on a 2,185 mile trip in California. "At no time did we find anything on the road that was out-performing the Viking, so far as we were concerned. If we wanted to pass a car, we just passed. Nothing seemed to stop us, although several of the more expensive cars attempted to keep the lead but they eventually gave up and dropped back."

ON AUTO ROW.

LIGHT WEEK REPORTED

Just as a lull usually proceeds the storm, auto sales in Lubbock during last week experienced one of the lightest weeks in some time. Anticipating the opening of the fall motor car rush, local dealers last week were given a period of rest, indicating that the storm of business is about to break.

USED CARS MOVING

For the majority of local motor car distributors, the first week in September gave no definite indication of what is to follow during the busy cotton season. Used cars are moving with their usual activity, while new car sales have let down considerably.

27 CARS SOLD

During the month of August, Scoggin-Dickey company, local Oakland-Pontiac distributors, sold 27 new cars, all of which came through the Lubbock house. This number includes sales over the large territory of which the local concern is the headquarters. Since September 1, three retail deliveries of new machines have been made here.

AUGUST RECORD GOOD

The popularity of the new Buick, which is distributed over Lubbock county and two adjacent counties by Kent Buick company, is attested by the sales record for the month of August, during which time 12 new machines were delivered. No sub-stations are operated by the local Buick concern. W. E. Lavender is sales manager of the Lubbock Buick house.

USED CARS MOVING

Ted Tipps, sales manager of the Joe Hilton company here, reports the sale of eight used cars during the past week in addition to one new delivery. A Plymouth sedan was purchased by Herman Staton, representative of a credit company.

ATTEND MEETING

G. P. Kuykendall, local Chevrolet dealer, together with N. H. McFarland, used car manager, and W. K. Moreland, service manager, were in Amarillo Monday attending a district convention of Chevrolet dealers. Approximately 100 dealers and 300 retail salesmen were on hand for the meeting at the Potter county capital.

A similar meeting Friday at Sweetwater was attended by J. V. Spikes, sales manager of the Lubbock Chevrolet house. Seven additional members of the local retail sales force accompanied Mr. Spikes.

ON TO TWO MILLION

Chevrolet production is well on its way toward the two million mark, figures released by Kuykendall Chevrolet company last week reveal. Since reaching the millionth mark several weeks ago, more than 200,000 new Chevrolets have been rolled off the floor by the manufacturers. At the present time, the motor numbers are running well over 1,250,000.

BUYS NEW HUP

West Texas Motor company, local Hupmobile distributors, announce the sale of a new custom "6" sedan to F. H. Sadler of Littlefield, adding another to the long list of owners of this new machine.

TWO CARS SOLD

Another carload of new Studebakers arrived in Lubbock Saturday billed for Gough Motor company. Included in the car were a President Eight, Dictator Six coupe, Commander Six sedan and a Commander 8 Regal braughm.

W. W. Rix, local furniture dealer, and T. E. Butler, of Levelland, are the latest Studebaker owners. Both have taken delivery on the Dictator Six sedan. Mr. Butler has been named Studebaker agent at Levelland, it was announced here by C. E. Gough, president and manager of the local Studebaker headquarters.

JESSIE JAMES AGAIN

BURLINGTON, Ia. Sept. 7.—Jesse James is at it again, but it seems this time he git the wirst if an enciunter. A man named Shapiri filed information against a Jesse James here recently, accusing him of making threats. Police wentt to James' address to find him already in bed, badly bruised and damaged. It looked like Shaprio had taken things in his own hands beforehand.

Production Rate Of Willys Knight Greatly Boosted

Increased Speed Demanded By Influx Of Orders For New Great Six Line Now On Automobile Market

The Willys-Knight company announces that production schedules of the new Willys-Knight Great Six line recently introduced are being rapidly stepped ahead in order to meet the influx of orders that immediately folowing the presentation the the new cars. With thousands of unfilled orders on the books, it will be necessary to maintain peak output o fthe new Knight engined sixes.

Willys-Overland dealers throughout the country report that never in the history of the company has any Willys-Overland product met such a wide acclaim as the new Great Six, These cars have been characterized as the greatest achievement in the history of the company, both from an artistic as well as a mechanical standpoint.

Road Tests Made

Many months were spent by the engineering department in perfecting the Willys-Knight Great Six. Exhaustive road tests were made in various sections of the country in order to meet every type of driving condision. Steep mountain grades were employed to provide tests of the car's power, while its riding qualities were tested over rutted dirt roads as well as paved highways.

It is no secret that the designers of the car were provided with every facility to bring out a new Willys-Knight Great Six that would establish an entirely new idea of modern body style. Close observers who have carefully inspected the new cars state that the aim of the company has been accomplished and that the distinctiveness of the models is due to originality in the treatment of every detail.

STRANGE, IF TRUE

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 7.—When R. Racious Smith was brought before the judge on a charge of intoxication he offered the excuse that two men stood over him with a gun and forced him to drink a pint of liquor without stopping. Unfortunately for Smith the judge didn't believe the story and he was fined $10.

Off the coast of China the sea is quite yellow. This is because tons and tons of yellow mud flow into it continuously from the great rivers of China.

Families Buying Smaller Type Car

Purchases of smaller cars by families to save the big car and cope with the growing traffic congestion in the big cities expanded to a greater volume than ever during the summer months, according to reports received from Willys-Overland dealers.

This fact played a greater role in increasing sales of Whippet fours and sixes, due to their ease of handling in traffic, their economy of operation and increased roominess which solved the transportation problem of many families, the dealers say. The two car per family idea evidently has taken hold more than ever due to the growing insistence and dependence of Americans on their own automobiles and the fact that women and grown-up children left in the home demand a ready and private means of transportation.

Compactness Feature

The compactness of both the Whippet four and six with the speed, power and style appeal of these cars, has attracted this kind of buying. Both models possess unusual pick-up, and getaway in heavy traffic while they may be parked in comparatively small spaces in the busy business district. In addition to this, they have an exceptionally effective braking power which enables the driver to come to an immediate stop at dangerous intersections.

To Introduce New Line of Cadilacs

DETROIT, Cept. 7.—The Cadillac Motor Car company next Monday will introduce throughout the country a complete new line of Cadillac, LaSalle and Fleetwood cars, Lawrence P. Fisher, president and general manager, said today they will be the roomiest, fastest, most powerful and finest-built cars the company has ever produced.

Thirty-two new body styles will be offered on the Cadillac and LaSalle chassis. Many improvements and innovations will be found throughout the chassis and bodies. Outstanding among these are refinements to the braking and syncro-mesh transmission, greatly improved steering system, more efficient carburetion and easier starting.
