Carter Agrees to Bani-Sadr Condition

Speech Reveals 'Positive Signs'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, in a move to gain release of some 50 American hostages, is endorsing an international commission to explore Iran's long-festering grievances against the shah and the United States.

His declaration, at a news conference Wednesday, appeared to mark a policy change. Carter said there were "some positive signs" toward ending the 103-day impasse but refused to go into details.

His announcement capped day-long rumors and political duels between his administration and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, his chief challenger for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The Massachusetts senator had sought to take credit for the latest move. But Carter called Kennedy's claim — and the senator's litany of alleged U.S. foreign policy mistakes — "damaging to our country."

The president's endorsement of "an appropriate commission with a carefully defined purpose" contrasted with his doubts at a news conference Nov. 28 that any forum would listen to Iranian complaints, justified or not.

Carter was careful not to proclaim a breakthrough in the tedious and still unsuccessful negotiations over the Americans seized by militants on Nov. 4.

Reflecting past disappointments, he said "experience has taught us to guard against excessive optimism."

The president did not spell out the kind of commission he had in mind, although he said any settlement must be "consistent with our goals and our essential international principles."

Sources said he wants a neutral commission conducting a balanced inquiry into past U.S. support for the deposed Shah

THERE ARE A LOT OF PROBLEMS in world affairs these days and each individual has their own set of problems.

Whether it be in business or in our personal lives, there is always something that can be improved upon.

Someone always rises to the occasion, however, to solve problems that other people might have believed impossible.

These are the people who are a success. They help other people, they find the solutions, they are leaders. They find the initiative and the know how to bring a remedy.

Some people are just natural at this game and may find

Hamlett Promoted To Armour Position

Tom J. Hamlett, general manager of the Armour Fresh Meat Company plant in Hereford has been promoted to vice president of the beef and lamb division and will move to the company's general office in Phoenix, Ariz., it was announced today by Wallace L. Tunnell, president of the company.

Hamlett, who has managed the Hereford plant since Armour acquired it in 1972, will succeed Ben Denton, who will retire after 42 years with the company. Hamlett's promotion is effective April 23, and he moves to the Phoenix office March 1.

Hamlett and his wife, Mary have one son, Timothy, who will graduate from Hereford High this year, and one daughter, Mrs. Rob (Sue) Lomas of Canyon. Hamlett has served three years on the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce board, and has also served on the United Way of Deaf Smith County board. Mrs. Hamlett is a member of El Llano Study Club.

A veteran of 38 years in the meat industry, Hamlett has a strong background in livestock procurement and plant management. He started with Armour in 1942 as a clerk in the livestock procurement department at the former Fort Worth plant.

He became a livestock buyer in 1944 and successfully completed assignments at St. Louis, Chicago and St. Paul before managing the Cozad, Neb., feedlot in 1960. Hamlett also managed the Lubbock plant and served as region manager for cattle procurement and beef division manager at South St. Joseph, Mo. He was named manager of the Nampa, Idaho, beef plant in 1970 and two years later was appointed manager at Hereford.

"We have some strong roots in Hereford, and we will miss this great community," stated Hamlett today. "We think it was a fine place to raise our children and have them graduate from high school."

Feds Met Clayton Earlier

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Federal agents made at least one contact with Bill Clayton before the Nov. 8 meeting in which the House speaker received a questionable campaign contribution from an FBI informant, an Austin television station has reported.

Attorneys for Clayton told KTBC-TV Wednesday that they had advised their client not to talk to a federal grand jury in Houston because of letters sent by an FBI agent posing as a Prudential insurance agent.

Clayton has admitted receiving a $5,000 contribution Nov. 8 during a meeting with Houston labor leader L.G. Moore and FBI informant Joseph Hauser. However, he contends he intended to return the money.

The station reported it has copies of correspondence between Clayton and an FBI undercover agent representing himself as Michael Sachs, president of a fictitious Prudential financial consulting firm, Fidelity Financial Consultants of Beverly Hills, Calif.

In a letter dated Nov. 5, the agent identifying himself as Sachs wrote Clayton that Prudential could save the state a substantial sum of money if it were awarded the state's employee group insurance contract.

"I, along with my staff, have analyzed your program and believe we can offer you more in the way of service and coverage and yet save the State of Texas a substantial sum of money," said Sachs in the letter.

"I hope as a result of this letter you will use your good offices to have the State of Texas reconsider their present insurance status."

In the letter Sachs said the company could reduce the present cost of the retirement program and improve the administration of the program at a total premium that would not exceed $75 million a year.

The station reported that Clayton responded to Sachs in a letter dated Nov. 14 that he too was a "firm believer in the reduction of costs' and that he was "very interested in receiving additional input from you and your company."

The station said that Sachs sent a letter, purporting to be a copy of the letter sent to Clayton, to the law offices of Austin attorney Randall Buck Wood and Donald Ray, who have also been subpoenaed to testify before the Houston grand jury.

Clayton's attorney, Charles Burton of Austin, said the whole thing was fabricated by the FBI in an attempt to get the speaker to commit perjury before a Houston federal grand jury hearing testimony in the Brilab investigation.

Representatives Hope Against Speaker 'Blitz'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — House Speaker Bill Clayton still holds his powerful job, but 23 representatives conferred Wednesday about avoiding a "blitz" from speaker candidates if he resigns.

Leaders figure the "Uncommitted Independent Caucus" could eventually attract 40 or more members.

"Any candidate will have to deal with this group," said Rep. Bill Caraway, D-Pasadena, who organized the closed-door meeting in a downtown hotel.

Most of those attending were conservatives or moderates.

The 150 House members elect the speaker, whose dominance over legislation makes him one of the three most important state officials.

Clayton appears Friday before a federal grand jury in Houston about receiving $5,000 during a conversation with a Houston labor leader and a man posing for the FBI as a Prudential insurance agent.

Some legislators and lobbyists b believe Clayton would resign as speaker if he is indicted.

If Clayton resigned, House members would elect a new speaker at the special session of the Legislature that Gov. Bill Clements says he will convene in August.

Caraway said he was not a candidate for speaker if Clayton quits but added, "You never say 'never' in politics."

Rep. Gene Green, D-Pasadena, walked out of the meeting because, he said, some spoke against speaker candidate John Bryant, D-Dallas.

"I think if you are uncommitted, you are uncommitted toward everybody," said Green.

Randall Officials Indicted

CANYON, Texas (AP) — Randall County commissioners Jim Fletcher and Dee Griffin Sr. have been indicted on aggravated p perjury charges by a grand jury investigating "gross deficiences" in county fiscal planning.

Griffin, a two-term commissioner, was indicted Wednesday on two counts of aggravated perjury and two counts of official misconduct. Fletcher, who is leaving office to run for the Texas Legislature, was named on one count of aggravated perjury.

The panel also released an eight-page report critical of a county budgeting process containing "gross deficiences and lack of judgment which have caused Randall County citizens to pay many unnecessary tax dollars."

The indictments allege Fletcher and Griffin made false statements to the grand jury

President Carter agreed to one of Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's conditions for the release of the American hostages but was silent on the others, citing the "delicacy" of the situation.

Meanwhile, Bani-Sadr said his proposals had won the approval of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolutionary regime.

As the approximately 50 Americans began their 103rd day of captivity in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, Carter told a news conference the United States would agree to a commission appointed by U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to go to Iran and investigate the revolutionary regime's charges against the ousted shah.

It was the first time since young Iranian militants seized the embassy that Carter did not insist that the release of the captive Americans be the first step in any deal to end the crisis.

Carter had no comment on the other two demands by Bani-Sadr, made public Monday in an interview with the French newspaper Le Monde: that the United States admit its "crimes" in Iran over the past 25 years a and promise not to interfere i in Iranian affairs, and that it acknowledge the right of Iran to extradite the shah and his wealth.

"I cannot afford at this delicate time to discuss or to comment further upon any specific efforts that may be underway or any proposals that may be useful in ending this crisis," said the president.

However, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said earlier this week the United States would not "profess guilt." And he said Wednesday that the extradition question would become a matter to be decided by Iran and Panama, which has given the shah asylum, once the hostages were released.

ABC News reported that the hostages would be freed after the international commission was set up. Presidential press secretary Jody Powell refused to comment on the report, but Carter told his news conference: "Recently there have been some positive signs although experience has taught us to guard against excessive optimism."

Waldheim refused to comment on the prospects for the release of the captives, saying negotiations were at "a very delicate stage" and that he was in "constant" touch with U.S. and Iranian officials.

Bani-Sadr told the French radio station France-Inter that Khomeini, the 79-year-old leader of the revolutionary regime, had approved "new proposals" which he and the ruling Revolutionary Council submitted.

Although he would not go into detail, the proposals apparently were the same three demands he outlined to Le Monde. But there was no indication whether Khomeini also approved another proposal revealed by Bani-Sadr last Monday: that control of the hostages be transferred in a few days from the young militants to a third party.

The Iranian president in another interview with a group of French TV reporters said his government no longer demanded the return of the deposed shah before the hostages were released and reiterated that the fate of the hostages and of the shah "were not linked."

Workers Sue Griffin-Brand

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

The president of Griffin and Brand Sales Agency Inc. said today that migrant farmworkers employed by the Hereford company have not been mistreated, even though a lawsuit filed this week by Texas Rural Legal Aid addresses issues to the contrary.

"I know darn well I haven't mistreated farm workers. I never have and don't have any intention to," said Jack Griffin, president of Griffin and Brand.

Thirty-two farmworkers from the McAllen area filed a $100,000 suit through TRLA in federal district court alleging mistreatment by Griffin and Brand, one of the largest corporate growers and packing operations in Texas.

The suit alleges that Griffin and Brand sent an employee last spring to the Rio Grande Valley to recruit farmworkers for the company's Hereford operation.

The workers charge that the employee--a contractor who divides his time between the Hereford sales agency and Griffin and Brand Inc. of McAllen--induced migrants to come to Hereford "with promises of free housing, good wages and six months of work."

The suit states that upon arrival in Hereford, the workers lived in a barracks on Harrah street with no plumbing, open sewage running under the barracks and 17 refrigerators connected to a single extension cord. Some of the apart[illegible] and wiring was "bare and exposed" in others, according to the plaintiffs.

The barracks were later condemned by the City of Hereford, the suit states.

"Despite all of this and the repeated requests of the workers, Griffin and Brand refused to do anything to alleviate the conditions in the housing," said TRLA attorney Edward Tuddenham, who filed the lawsuit.

"Moreover, the six months of work turned out to be only a few

Witness Says Defendant Shot Brother

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

A Hereford man Wednesday identified Narcisso Lucio as the man who shot his brother in the back in the front yard of a duplex apartment on E. 13th last May 18.

Testimony in Lucio's attempted murder trial began Wednesday in 222nd District Court. He is accused of shooting Danny Hernandez in the back with a .22-caliber rifle.

Hernandez, who was expected to testify this morning before the prosecution rested its case, was left paralyzed following the shooting.

Adolph Hernandez, the victim's brother, testified that the two men were driving down Main St. when Lucio, who was in a parking lot across from Dameron Park, "threw us a finger, and we threw it back."

He testified that the two men drove to Francisca Rios' apartment at 402 E. 13th and were sitting in a car, along with friend Ray Guerrero, listening to a tape player and drinking beer when Lucio and two other persons drove up in a Camaro.

Hernandez said Rios was with his wife and was inside the house, along with the wives of Danny Hernandez and Guerrero, when the car pulled up.

"First, he passed once by the house and went around the block...He came around the block and stopped at Francisca's house. He called Danny out," Hernandez testified in response to questions from District Attorney Roland Saul.

"He (Danny Hernandez) went out near the car and came back," Hernandez said.

"What did you do?" Saul asked.

"I got out of the car and threw a beer bottle at Narcisso's car. "He stopped and got out and shot Danny."

Hernandez testified that Lucio got out of the driver's side with a rifle, laid it on top of the car and fired several shots.

"He started shooting and we all fell on the ground. Then, he took off."

Defense attorney Ed Line questioned Hernandez about previous altercations between Lucio and the two Hernandez brothers.

Hernandez admitted that he, Danny Hernandez and Lucio had been involved in previous fights, including one involving a machete.

"He swung the machete at Danny and hit Danny on the hand," Hernandez said.

"Did not one of you hand the machete to Danny and he attacked Narcisso with it?" Line asked.

"Danny didn't have a machete," Hernandez said.

Line also questioned Hernan-

House Republicans Seek Kelly Probe

WASHINGTON — Eleven House Republicans want an investigation of the only member of their party implicated in the congressional bribery scandal. They say Rep. Richard Kelly's version of how he took $25,000 "challenges credibility."

Saying that fellow Republicans "must clean our own house," the 11 on Wednesday urged their party's leader in the House, John J. Rhodes, to lead an inquiry into whether the GOP should ask Kelly to resign his seat or whether the party should take action against the third-term Florida congressman.

Kelly says he stuffed his coat pocket with $25,000 FBI undercover agents offered as a bribe because he was conducting his own investigation of what he thought was a band of bribers and crooks.

But that assertion "challenges credibility and suggests that Mr. Kelly acted in a manner unbecoming a member of Congress," his fellow Republicans said in a letter to Rhodes.

Houston Labor Leader Denies Funds Abuse

HOUSTON (AP) - A Houston leader says he accepted money from undercover FBI agents in operation "Brilab," but claims the funds were used for his public relations firm.

"I received fees and commissions from Joseph Hauser and the FBI for services of my company," Harold Grubbs, education director for the Pipe Fitters Local 211 Joint Apprenticeship and Training Committee, said Wednesday.

While refusing to say how much money he received or what he did with it, Grubbs added that if he was doing business with the FBI, "they owe me my commission for February, and I wish they would arrange to pay me."

He said he was willing to tell his story "for a price. We're in trouble when they can send the FBI with a sack of money to entrap legitimate business people."

A federal grand jury spent Wednesday hearing testimony from Grubbs and other labor leaders, but the key Texas political figure - House Speaker William Clayton - apparently will not appear until Friday.

Soviet Tanks Battle Afghan Dissidents

AP News

Soviet tanks and at least one MiG-23 fighter fought a sharp battle with Afghan dissidents this week 12 miles from Kabul and there were an undetermined number of casualties, a delayed report from Kabul said today.

In Geneva, Switzerland, The United States told a meeting of the U.N. Human Rights Commission that "substantial numbers of prisoners" had been flown to the Soviet Union from Afghanistan, according to a session transcript released by the U.S. Mission in Geneva. The U.S. delegate asked whether the Red Cross had been invited to visit them.

A dispatch from Afghanistan by Associated Press Correspondent Michael Goldsmith quoted witnesses as saying the Soviets fought an hour-long battle with the rebels Monday in the village of Cargha north of Kabul, the capital. Western diplomats in the vicinity said they saw Soviet infantry and tanks going into action against an army barracks in the village.

The MiG-23 was seen dropping a cluster of small bombs, followed by a cloud of black smoke rising from the ground, they said.

Gas Explosion Levels City Block

ESSEX, Ontario (AP) - A natural gas explosion leveled a city block in this small Canadian town early today, demolishing seven businesses and shattering windows in a blast that was heard 10 miles away.

"To our knowledge there are no fatalities, but everyone and everything in the town has been affected," said Constable Neil McWhinney. "Every building has major or minor damage."

Two men were hospitalized - a gas company worker who tried to disconnect a leaking gas meter before the explosion, and an unidentified man who was pulled from the rubble of his upstairs apartment. The man was found "up to his armpits" in debris, a firefighter said.

Police said the explosion was touched off about 2:10 a.m. when a driver lost control of his car and slammed into a gas meter behind a hardware store.

Gas spewed from the broken meter into the building, where it apparently was ignited by a pilot light, firefighters said. The hardware store and five upstairs apartments were destroyed, as were several other buildings in the block, police said.

Attorney Blasts 'Conspiracy'

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — The attorney for a wealthy Tennessee man says some government witnesses are conspiring to implicate his client in a million-dollar marijuana smuggling operation in order to protect ex-Texas Aeronautics Commission chairman Rex Cauble.

The government has charged John Ruppel, 60, with racketeering, conspiracy to smuggle marijuana and being involved in continuing criminal enterprise.

The third count, the most serious of the three, carries a possible prison sentence of 10 years to life.

Attorney Robert Ritchie said in his opening statement in Ruppel's marijuana smuggling trial that some government witnesses are "protecting another man to whom they owe allegiance, Rex Cauble."

It is the second drug trial in five months for Ruppel. Another jury deliberated 14 hours last September to return nine convictions and two acquittals and report they were hopelessly deadlocked on Ruppel, the 12th defendant.

The prosecution contends Ruppel conspired with others to use four shrimp boats to smuggle 86 tons of Colombian marijuana worth $113 million into the United States in 1976 and 1977.

Cauble, a wealthy Denton County rancher, was not a defendant, but defense lawyers claimed during the September trial that he was the mastermind behind the plot. Cauble has denied involvement.

Goverment witness Larry Bell Washington testified Tuesday he worked for Charles Elbert "Muscles" Foster in the smuggling operation.

Foster, currently listed as a fugitive, worked on one of Cauble's rannches, Washington said. Washington testified his first contact with marijuana smuggling was in 1977, when he towed a pickup truck full of marijuana to a ranch in Crockett belonging to Cauble.

Washington testified he later drove large refrigerated trucks to transport marijuana. He once picked up Ruppel at the Houston Intercontinental Airport and drove him to an apartment in Houston, where Ruppel and other principals in the September marijuna smuggling trial met, he said.

Washington pleaded guilty earlier to charges brought against him in connection with the smulggling scheme.

U.S. District Judge Robert Parker ruled Tuesday outside the presence of the jury that there was sufficient evidence presented to him to allow the government to present hearsay testimony of Ruppel's alleged co-conspirators in an attempt to prove the conspiracy charges.

Witnesses testified they sold Ruppel two shrimp boats that the government contends later took part in the smuggling operation. But the witnesses also testified there was never anything to indicate to them or to Ruppel that the boats were being used for anything illegal.

Indictments returned last May by a Beaumont federal grand jury covered the alleged activity of 24 persons from August 1976 to December 1978, when 172,000 pounds of Colombian marijuana was transported by shrimpers in five trips, prosecutors said.

Twelve arrests were made while 20 tons of marijuana were being unloaded onto two 18-wheelers at Port Arthur on Nov. 29, 1978, federal officials said.

Until the September trial, Ruppel, a retired owner of a tool and die company, lived in Gatlinburg, a resort community at the foot of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park in Southeast Tennessee.

He reportedly is living in Florida now. His attorney said Ruppel has had three heart atacks in the past three years.

Janssen Funeral To Be Private, Set Next Week

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor David Janssen, who ended his long-running series "The Fugitive" with an episode that drew one of the biggest audiences in television history, will be buried next week in private services.

The 48-year-old Janssen died Wednesday after he suffered a heart attack while sleeping in his Malibu home. Friends said he had no previous history of heart trouble.

Abner Greshler, Janssen's agent and manager for 21 years, said Janssen's doctor "is in just as much of a state of shock as we are."

The death of the Nebraska-born actor came after his wife, Dani, summoned paramedics who tried to revive him.

Actor Stuart Whitman, a longtime friend, said he happened to drive by the Janssens' home about 4:30 a.m. on his way to his ranch. He went inside when he saw an ambulance and a fire truck parked nearby.

"They (paramedics) had taken him out of bed and they were working on him," Whitman said. "It must have been half an hour altogether. One of them then said, 'I think I've got a heartbeat,' and they took him to the hospital."

Two days earlier, Janssen had begun work on a television film, "Father Damian," about a priest who ministered to lepers in Hawaii.

"He had put in a full and productive day and was in high spirits when he left the set (Tuesday)" producer Jean Moore Edwards said in a statement.

Janssen was born David Meyer on March 27, 1931, in Naponee, Neb. His mother brought him to Hollywood after her divorce and Janssen, taking his name from his stepfather, made his film debut at age 9 as Johnny Weissmuller's brother in "Swamp Fever."

His first big break came in 1957, when he won the title role in the television detective series "Richard Diamond." He was in that series for three years but it was not until "The Fugitive" began its four-year run in 1963 that he became a major star.

In the series, Janssen played Richard Kimball, a doctor falsely accused of murdering his wife. Week after week, millions of Americans tuned in to watch Kimball's narrow escapes from pursuing authorities.

The last episode, in which he finally tracked down the one-armed man who committed the crime, was seen by 72 percent of the viewing audience, still the record for a single episode of a continuing series.

"The Fugitive" earned Janssen three Emmy nominations and film roles in such pictures as "The Shoes of the Fisherman," "Marooned" and "Two Minute Warning."

In the 1970s he returned to television in two more series, "O'Hara, United States Treasury," and "Harry O."

Janssen had no children. An earlier marriage to Ellie Graham ended in divorce after 10 years.

The funeral will be held Monday.

Egyptians Admit Arming Afghans

By The Asssociated Press

Egypt is training Afghan rebels, as charged by the Soviet Union, and will arm them before sending them home to fight Soviet intervention in their nation, Egyptian Defense Minister Kamal Hassan Ali said.

He did not disclose the size or location of the camps or how many Afghans were involved, but told reporters in Cairo on Wednesday, "Egypt is training some of them to some extent," and that President Anwar Sadat had approved the project last month.

Diplomatic sources in London, meanwhile, said Moscow had advised key Asian, European and African nations that it will start pulling some of its estimated 90,000 troops out of Afghanistan and open talks with Pakistan as soon as the situation stabilizes along the Afghan-Pakistan border.

A Pakistani government spokesman said such talks would be welcome, but only after a complete withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan, Pakistan's neighbor to the northwest.

However, Indian officials said Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko had given them little or no hope for an early troop withdrawal from the landlocked Central Asian country on the Soviet Union's southern flank.

Gromyko, attending a New Delhi banquet to honor his Indian counterpart, warned Pakistan it must end "intrusions into the territory of Afghanistan" if it wants peace along the border. He returned to Moscow today after a 40-minute meeting with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Indian spokesman J.N. Dixit said the two nations had different interpretations of the Soviet intervention, but that Gromyko had "taken note" of the Indian position "that there should be non-interference in the internal affairs of sovereign countries and that frontiers should be invioable."

However, their joint communique made no reference to Soviet action in Afghanistan. It said only that Russia and India had "reviewed the international situation including the developments in the region and around it. The two sides expressed their agreement to maintain the exchange of opinions between the two countries on issues of mutual interest on a continuing basis."

An Indian envoy sent to Afghanistan as part of Mrs. Gandhi's efforts to avoid further superpower confrontation in the region said Afghan officials told him they would "invite" the Soviets to withdraw when they received assurances there would be no "outside agression."

Previously the Kremlin has charged that Aghan rebels, aided by the United States, Egypt, China and Britain, were launching attacks from Pakistan into Afghanistan. Before Ali's disclosure, the governments of those countries had denied the Soviet charges.

President Carter, at a Washington press conference, reiterated his call for a U.S. boycott of the Moscow Olympics this summer if Soviet forces do not leave Afghanistan.

The International Olympic Committee this week overrode the U.S. protest and voted to hold the Olympics in Moscow as planned.

Yards Run Over By Vehicle

Police said approximately 25 yards in northwest Hereford were run over by a vehicle either Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning, but only one individual turned in a complaint.

Jeff Smart, 103 Fir, reported that someone drove over his front lawn.

Riverside Chemical Co. of Hereford told police that approximately 250 or 300 gallons of gasoline were stolen from a storage tank. The incident was reported Wednesday.

Police investigated a report of an harrassing telephone call Wednesday arrested a man for public intoxication and wrote seven traffic tickets.

solutions by mistake when they are actually in search of something entirely different.

Penicillin was discovered by mistake, but that didn't alter its importance or the fame of the scientist.

This reminds us of a story we heard from Lou Holtz, head football coach at Arkansas. It goes something like this:

There was a small rural town about halfway between two large cities where a major oil company had a drilling sight nearby.

There was an explosion and a huge fire erupted instantly. The fire departments from the two large cities responded to the call and were on the scene with all their trucks and modern equipment. But the fire was so intense that it was determined out of control and the new trucks were parked in a line 400 yards from the blaze and would not go any closer.

And then another bell was heard, speeding down the dirt road toward the blaze was the volunteer fire department from the small town.

Four men manned the old truck with the Fire Chief behind the wheel. They had two buckets of sand, a pail of water, and some blankets.

Everone wondered why they didn't slow down and pull up where the other trucks had been parked a safe distance from the inferno. The men in the old truck just yelled as they went screaming by and disappeared into the smoke and flames.

Everyone cheered as those men threw on the water, dumped their buckets of sand and beat the fire out with their blankets.

The oil company executive in charge was so impressed with their heroism that he presented the smoke-covered Fire Chief with a reward of $3,000.

He took the check with gratitude and stated, "Thank God, now I can get those brakes fixed."

days of work at wages below minimum wage," he added.

Griffin said he has never sent anyone to the Valley to recruit workers.

"I've never sent a man in my life to recruit farmworkers. They don't know what they're talking about," Griffin said.

"Also, I had nothing in the world to do with renting barracks to anybody. I know the barracks they're talking about, and I specifically instructed my people not to rent them. In fact, I tore all my old barracks down to keep from getting in trouble," he said.

Farmworkers employed by Griffin and Brand "have to rent their own places, and it's been that way for several years," Griffin said.

He added that the company has paid at least minimum wage "since the law's been in effect."

"It's just not true," said TRLA attorney Bill Beardall concerning Griffin's statements.

"These folks were recruited--both the contractor who did it and the workers have said so. And, what he (Griffin) is saying about paying minimum age is just not true in this case," Beardall said.

"These people were only given work in the fields for a couple of days, and they were told that was all the work that they had. After being here for several weeks and things were not getting any better, most of them went back to the Valley, having lost money."

Beardall said "a number of families" came to the TRLA office in Hereford last summer.

"They were upset and they asked for our help," he said.

Beardall said the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act requires contractors, at the time they recruit workers, to furnish a statement outlining the terms and conditions of employment.

"That includes the type and quality of housing, wages and the amount of work in both hours and duration," he said.

"These people weren't furnished a statement, even though it's the contractor's obligation."

Griffin said he has not been served with papers concerning the filing of the lawsuit in the Amarillo court.

"I haven't talked to my lawyer yet and I won't until I know what this thing's all about. It came as a 100 percent surprise," Griffin said.

Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Carter's approach clearly rules out a show trial designed merely to assess guilt against the United States, the sources said.

Kurt Waldheim, the U.N. secretary general, and other intermediaries have been at work for some time on a number of plans keyed to creation of a commission and freeing the hostages.

However, a spokesman for the militants who occupy the U.S. Embassy in Tehran reiterated Wednesday their initial and unwavering precondition — return of the shah to Iran to face trial as a war criminal.

Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, the new Iranian president, stressed three demands in a broadcast interview. He said the United States must acknowledge its "crimes," accept Iran's right to extradite the shah and recover his wealth and promise not to interfere in Iranian affairs.

Stiff as his proposals are, Bani-Sadr did not insist on extradition of the shah from Panama, but simply Iran's right to bring him back.

The key to the crisis may be held by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, whose position U.S. officials said privately is not clear.

For his part, Carter struck a conciliatory stance. He did not castigate Iranian authorities or the militants, as he had in the past, and he did not insist that the Americans be set free before the commission could begin its inquiry.

And yet, the president refused to accept blame for the U.S. role in restoring the shah to the Peacock throne in 1953.

"That's ancient history," he said, "and I don't think it is appropriate or helpful for me to go into the propriety of something that happened 30 years ago."

"Narc so and three other guys jumped on us," Hernandez said.

Concerning the altercation on May 18, Line asked Hernandez: "Did you not make threat against Narcisso to the effect you were gonna send him to hell?"

"No, sir," Hernandez responded.

Line had told prospective jurors during selection of the panel on Tuesday that self-defense would be raised as an issue in the case. He is expected to call Lucio to the stand today.

Also testifying Wednesday were police officers Roger Scott and Joe Brown; Steven Gonzales, a passenger in the defendant's car during the shooting; Toby Hernandez, another passenger; Fernando Gonzales, the defendant's brother-in-law and a third passenger; Roger Rocha, Guadalupe Mendez and Joe Trevino, who witnessed the shooting while they were in another car on 13th St.; Rios, who testified she watched the shooting from the front porch of the duplex; and emergency-room physician David Hodgson, who treated Danny Hernandez.

If convicted of the second-degree felony, Lucio could receive two to 20 years in the penetentiary.

and that Griffin tried to avoid investigation and that he refrained from performing the duties of his office.

Grand jurors also charged in the report that the county auditor's office has not been functioning according to law and that County Auditor William F. Tirey has been negligent in his job.

The panel said the auditor's office had not provided the Commissioners Court with timely financial statements.

The panel recommended the county hire a full-time auditor.

The grand jury returned the indictments and released the report about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday. Fletcher, Griffin and Tirey could not be reached for comment Wednesday night.

The report also said the Commissioners Court "must be more diligent in observing the letter and spirit of the laws governing their activities. Past actions have indicated a blatant disregard for these matters."

Criminal District Attorney Randall Sherrod said his office will prosecute the indictments even though the grand jury had acted against the wishes of his office in returning the indictments.

"It was not my office's recommendation that the indictments be returned," said Sherrod. "From the standpoint of the evidence, however, there is evidence to sustain them."

The grand jury fixed most of the blame for the county's troubled finances on the Commissioners Court.

"There is and can be no justification for the laxity and negligence we found in the administration of Randall County financial planning."

Connally Uses TV Stations in Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former Texas Gov. John Connally's campaign for the Republican presidential nomination is using three Texas television stations to supplement his national broadcast over a cable "super station."

Connally's "Freedom from Crisis" program was scheduled at 9 p.m. cst today over Channel 17 from Atlanta, a cable station with a wide national range; Channel 39, KTVT in Houston; Channel 4, KMOL-TV in San Antonio; and KTVT, Channel 11 in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Telecasts were scheduled over other stations around the country to make the program available in almost every state.

Supporters planned to host nearly 5,000 parties designed to raise funds at the same time as they watched the program.

Jere Thompson, the campaign's national finance director, said each party had the goal of raising at least $1,000.

Walcott Trustees Fight House Fire

Members of the Walcott School Board interrupted their regular monthly business session Tuesday night to respond to a fire alarm in the rural western section of Deaf Smith County.

A fire unit is stationed at the Walcott School and trustees and superintendent Eddie Derr manned the truck in responding to a fire at the home of Tom Timberlake, seven miles west of the Walcott School.

Despite the efforts of approximately 35 firemen with [illegible] leg Corner and Hereford, the Timberlake home burned to the ground.

After responding to the fire, board members returned to approve the 1980-81 school calendar and also considered board policies concerning employee benefits.

Policies dealing with leave, bus driver salaries, cafeteria workers and personal leave for teachers were approved.

Trustees also heard a report that 48 percent of the money budgeted for the current year has been spent, while tax collections are at 94.24 percent for 1979 and 98.77 percent for 1978.

Board members appointed Linda Brown and Sue Thweatt election judges for upcoming trustee elections.

Bill Findling, seventh and eighth grade instructor at Walcott gave a presentation on methods used in the classroom.

New Owner for Craft's Originals

Craft's Originals, located at 149 N. 25 Mile Ave., opened under new management last week, and the Hereford Hustlers welcomed the firm to the business scene. Lynn Andrews, owner, is pictured behind the giant scissors used in the Hustlers' ribbon-cutting ceremonies. The shop features decorative items in ceramics and plaster.

Texas Briefs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio police officials were unable to communicate with most of their officers for about 15 minutes Wednesday night after six of the eight police communications channels broke down, authorities said.

There apparently were no major emergencies missed because of the breakdown, officials said.

A power failure at police headquarters caused the problem. The situation was complicateed when an emergency back-up power system also failed, authorities said.

An emergency channel and the channel for the downtown area were the only ones working during the power failure. Officers in other sections of the city were unable to receive or send messages unless they switched to the operating channels — something officials could not tell them to do.

Communications for the fire department and other emgergency services were not affected.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Manuel Bernardo Aguirre of the Mexican state of Chihuahua will be a guest of Texas Gov. Bill Clements Feb. 28 in the Texas capital.

Clements conferred visited Chihuahua City last year to discuss issues of mutual concern. He also visited governor of the three other bordering Mexican states and invited them to visit Austin.

Following airport welcoming ceremonies, Bernardo Aguirre will be taken for a helicopter tour of the city, then to the state Senate chamber for a former welcoming ceremony.

The two governors will talk privately, followed by a luncheon and a tour of the LBJ Library.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A kidnapping conviction was reversed Wednesday because a judge told a defendant he could get up to 20 years and then sentenced him to 25 years.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ordered a new trial for Joseph Allen Weekley in the Houston kidnapping case.

Weekley also received a 25-year sentence after pleading guilty to attempted capital murder, but the high court left that sentence intact.

Weekley was convicted of taking Billy Joe Blackstock and Edwin Stockman as hostages to shield his getaway after a theft and of firing a shotgun at Harris County Deputy Sheriff J.E. Reider.

State law requires a judge to warn a defendant of the full range of punishment before accepting his guilty plea.

"When appellant pled guilty in this case he was told the range of punishment was not more than 20 years in this case. After the pre-sentence investigation was conducted, punishment was assessed at 25 years," the court said.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Rapidly rising precious metal prices have sent the price of a class ring out of the reach of many graduates. At Texas A&M, a 10-karat gold ring without jewels now costs $338.

But school officials announced Wednesday the 90,000-member Association of Former Students has authorized a silver ring so students won't be priced out of the market. It is only $149.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Tom Laramey Jr. has been named deputy executive director of the Texas Department of Community Affairs, according to department officials.

Laramey has served as TDCA general counsel since 1974 and will replace Peter Collumb.

Collumb is resigning March 1 to become director of Sen. John Tower's office in Dallas.

DALLAS (AP) — A former professional football player fired from his job as a Dallas County deputy earlier in the week for allegedly threatening his superiors with violence is seeking reinstatement.

Former deputy Al Wash, who was a defensive lineman for the Houston Oilers and Denver Broncos, was fired Monday from his job as head of the jail's recreation program.

Massachusetts Man Enjoys His Life as Vagabond

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Norman Simpson's office, on Pine Street, is a half block from a two-centuries-old country inn, the Red Lion, on Main, in this quiet Yankee village in the hills.

The small sign on Norman Simpson's door says: "The Berkshire Traveller Stoppeth Here."

You are lucky to catch him there, though, because he rarely stoppeth anywhere for long. He is always on the go, traveling from his beloved Berkshire hills in search of romantic hideaways, similar to the Red Lion, along the backroads of two continents.

It has to be among the more enviable pursuits of anyone with a wanderlust. The irony is that he came to his vagabonding ways because he disliked travel.

"What I disliked," he said, seated on a red plush couch in the parlor of the Red Lion, warmed by a crackling fire, "was stopping at yet another motel as cold and impersonal as the last one.

"I had the choice of staring at the color TV in my room or staring at the bartender. Neither appealed to me."

Any frequent traveler knows that lonely despair, which explains why so many are grateful for the upshot of Norman Simpson's discomfort: a paperback book, "Country Inns and Back Roads."

In the decade that Simpson has been publishing his guidebook, sales have settled to a steady 50,000 copies a year.

"I was as surprised as anyone that it would become so popular," he said. "I never expected it to become a business. The first issue was sort of a lark. I gave it away."

That was in 1969 when Simpson and his late wife Nancy, an artist, ran an advertising agency. His travel was around New England, selling ads.

"Because of my dislike for motels I stayed at as many country inns as I could find," Simpson said.

"I decided to make up a little pamphlet, 16 pages, describing the 12 I had visited. I wrote it in the style of Pepys' Diary. It was a promotional gimmick, really, for our agency."

The current issue is no pamphlet. It has 362 pages and describes 172 inns in 27 states, six provinces of Canada and the Virgin Islands, and Norman Simpson has visited every one of the inns.

Not satisfied with that, he has put out a guidebook of inns in Europe, and has visited all of them, too.

Between trips, he publishes a twice-monthly newsletter for country innkeepers, keeping in touch, and arranges an annual convention for them.

"They have so little in common with the big hotel operators and so much in common with one another that they need their own convention," he said. "We meet, of course, at a country inn.

"Every inn has its own memorable quality. That's what makes them such a pleasure. By their very nature, no two are alike.

"They offer another benefit for the traveler. People who prefer them seem to be of a certain type — at least they have that preference in common," and can share it around a real fire rather than in a bar.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Feb. 14, the 45th day of 1980. There are 321 days left in the year. Today is Valentine's Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 14, 1929, seven gangland figures — rivals of the Al Capone gang in Chicago — were gunned down in a garage. It became known as the "Saint Valentine's Day Massacre."

On this date:

In 1663, Canada became a royal province of France.

In 1893, Hawaii was annexed by treaty to the United States.

In 1956, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev denounced Stalin's policies a at a Soviet Communist Party conference.

Oklahoma Shippers Fight To Keep Railroad Open

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A group of southwest Oklahoma shippers is going to the state Supreme Court in an effort to clear the way for Oklahoma to accept federal funds to keep a portion of the Katy Railroad operating.

The group, organized as the Red River Railroad Authority, will ask the court to overturn three opinions handed down by state Attorney General Jan Eric Cartwright.

Charles Nesbitt, an Oklahoma City attorney who represents the shippers, said the opinions interpret federal money earmarked to help ailing railroad lines as state gifts to corporations, and thus banned by the state Constituion.

He said he would ask the court to assume original jurisdiction in the matter, to overturn the opinions and to prohibit Cartwright from enforcing them.

The shippers are opposing abandonment of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad line between Altus and Burkburnett, Texas. They contend Cartwright's opinions are keeping the railroad from accepting the federal money they say would run to over $1 million a year.

The Katy is seeking to abandon the branch line mainly because the trackage is so badly deteriorated that trains can move no more than eight mph, the petition says. The railroad contends it cannot afford to repair the 64.5 miles of track.

Nesbitt contends the Altus-Butrkburnett branch transports "enormous quantities" of agricultural produce, particularly wheat, and such commodities as fertilizer and other essential chemicals.

"In event the railroad is abandoned and (Red River) members are forced into bankruptcy because of more costly, unreliable truck transportation, this will produce a serious economic blow to the entire economy of southwestern Oklahoma," Nesbitt's petition reads.

It adds that under a 1976 federal revitalization act, $1.39 million in railroad help funds was appropriated to Oklahoma last year to aid such lines, but was blocked from reaching the railroads by Cartwright's opinions.

The petition argues tht the federal funds, which Oklahoma will continue to lose under the opinions, constitute public aid and not a corporation gift.

"No funds would be given directly to a railroad corporation, but would be expended only by and through the Oklahoma Department of Transporation, an oficial government agency," the brief says.

Cartwright has held that federal funds lose their federal identity and become state funds once they are deposited in the Oklahoma treasury — thus are barred by the Constitution from being given to a corporation.

Nesbitt contends this is in error and that the state merely becomes the custodian or trustee of the federal funds.

The Lighter Side

In Search Of Love

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Ralph Haberman, a San Diego bachelor, has this thing about hearts and flowers.

As a fifth grader, he sent his favorite girl 1,000 valentines. Last summer, he sent a young lady he was dating 113 dozen roses.

"The roses didn't work," he said, but he remains undaunted, an incurable romantic still searching for the "perfect valentine."

He plans to spend Valentine's Day randomly handing out Valentines at San Diego's main airport — Lindbergh Field — and at the campus of San Diego State University. Inside each Valentine will be a personal note: "I'd like to get to know you."

Say It With — Pizza?

EMPORIUM, Pa. (AP) — A state police trooper from northwestern Pennsylvania said it with a tree. A local chef said it with a heart-shaped pizza.

And about 175 other listeners of Cameron County radio station WLEM showed their affection for the station's six disc jockeys with homemade valentines, some made from teabags and catsup bottles.

The station awarded prizes in 29 categories Wednesday after holding a two-week contest.

Aggies-Baylor Sign Top Billed Football Players

By The Associated Press

Tom Wilson wore the biggest smile after Wednesday's first day for signing high school football players to Southwest Conference letters of intent.

The Aggie coach grabbed four players with super billing in linemen Tommy Robison (6-5, 260) of Gregory-Portland, Ken Reeves (6-5, 240) of Pittsburg and Scott Polk (6-4, 240) of Dallas White and running back Bubba Hill (5-11, 190) of LaPorte.

But Baylor, which hasn't had a highly regarded quarterback in years, also was ecstatic after landing Waco Richfield's Alfred Anderson, who ran and passed for 31 touchdowns last season. Anderson was the most highly sought quarterback in the state.

"Obviously, I'm very pleased and excited about this group," Wilson said.

"If the people who have evaluated these players — including our coaching staff, other coaching staffs and the media — know what they're talking about, then this could be a super group."

Only four schools announced their signings Wednesday. The others opted to wait until the national signing deadline next Wednesday to reduce the chances of presenting a "shopping list" for schools in other conferences to make an 11th-hour recruiting blitz in Texas.

Besides Baylor, Rice and TCU also disclosed their signings.

Baylor coach Grant Teaff was happy about inking both Anderson and Klein quarterback Allen Rice.

"Alfred has the best potential of any young quarterback I've seen in the last 20 years. He's only played quarterback one year, so he's got a long way to go, but he has so much raw talent," Teaff said.

Anderson was a running back until his senior season. Anderson completed passes for 365 yards and three touchdowns against Temple, the eventual AAA champion.

Teaff said Rice would start out as a candidate for the quarterback job, "but he's the kind who can play many positions. He is an outstanding athlete."

Baylor also signed Joel Barrett of Corpus Christi Miller, a 6-6, 240-pound tight end whose brother, David, is a sophomore running back for the Aggies.

Rice grabbed quarterback Doug Johnson of Pasadena Dobie and tight end Ricky Askew of Euless Trinity.

Among TCU's signees was tailback L.C. Hubbard of Dallas White.

Although the official announcement won't come until next week, Texas was known to have signed running back-linebacker Terry Orr of Abilene Cooper, who shared with Robison the largest number of votes in a "can't miss" blue chip poll by the nine SWC head coaches.

Highland Park quarterback Lance McIlhenny cast his lot with SMU, as did Dallas White lineman David Randle, while Dallas Carter quarterback David Roberson and Huntsville wide receiver Lloyd Archie both signed with Houston.

Here is a list of Southwest Conference schoolboy football signings Wednesday. Only Rice, Texas A&M, Baylor and Texas Christian said they would provide complete signing rosters. The other six schools said their lists would be withheld until national signing day Feb. 20th.

TEXAS A&M — Linemen: Tommy Robison, 6-5, 260, Gregory-Portland; Scott Polk, 6-4, 240, Dallas White; Ricky Richardson, 6-2, 225, Corpus Christi Moody; Ken Reeves, 6-5, 240, Pittsburg, Bruce Lawson, 6-4, 250, Dallas White; Kermit Foster, 6-3, 230, Beaumont Hebert; Ken Choyce, 6-4, 230, Houston Strake Jesuit; Nathan Steadman, 6-1, 240, Houston Scarbrough; Jeff Sciba, 6-2, 225, Pasadena Doby; Aubrey Raiford, 6-3, 230, Kerrville Tivy. Receivers: John Kellen, 6-2, 215, Conroe; Ricky Kyle, 6-3, 230, Diboll; Jimmy Williams, 6-0, 175, Robbie Beavers, 6-2, 225, Beaumont Charlton-Pollard. Marshall. Taiwanese Unhappy With IOC's Decision

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — "I will go on fighting for the athletes of my country," said Henry Hsu, the Taiwan member of the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

As the unhappy team from Taiwan bowed out of the Olympic Games for the second time in four years, Hsu prepared for the next chapter in the long, complex dispute over names, flags and anthems.

"I always think of the athletes," Hsu said. "They have been in my mind from the start, and I shall go on working for them. I will try to get them into the Olympic Games at Moscow, I will try very hard."

The Taiwan delegation has been fighting for years to hang on to its place in the Games and to the name and flag of the old Republic of China.

In 1976 they went home from the Olympic Games in Montreal because the Canadian government refused to admit them under that name. Now they have lost a New York State court battle against the IOC over the same issue and prepared Thursday to leave the XIII Winter Games at Lake Placid.

The IOC, in a package deal aimed at bringing Mainland China into the Games, ordered Taiwan to adopt a new name — the Chinese Taipeh Olympic Committee — and to use a special Olympic flag. Taiwan claimed this was a breach of the Charter and challenged the IOC first in the Swiss courts, in an action filed by Hsu himself, and then in the United States.

Hsu's action is still pending in Switzerland. He said Lord Killanin, the IOC president, has asked him to drop the case.

"I must talk to my lawyers," Hsu said. "I must think of the athletes, and what is best for them."

When the team from Taiwan lost an appeal in the New York State Appelate Court Monday, they gave up the struggle and prepared to leave Lake Placid. They declined an offer to march with the United States' team in Wednesday's opening ceremonies.

Any National Olympic Committee which sends a team to the Games and then pulls out is liable to suspension. But Shen Chia-Ming, president of the Taiwan Olympic Committee, wrote to Killanin asking for his team to be excused from competing.

The request is likely to be considered by the IOC executive board.

It is the first time in history the IOC has been sued by one of its own members. The action was filed in a Swiss court because the IOC's headquarters are in Switzerland, and in Hsu's name because under Swiss law the inner workings of any organization can only be challenged by its members.

As competition in the Games continued Thursday, President Carter kept up his pressure on the U.S. Olympic Committee to stay away from the Summer Games in Moscow.

The biathlon was first competed for in the Winter Olympics in 1960 at Squaw Valley, Calif.

There are four figure-skating events in the Winter Olympics, the men's and women's singles, the pairs, and the dance.

Lucas Trade Pays Off For Nets

By The Associated Press

The recent trade with Portland for Maurice Lucas paid its first dividend for the New Jersey Nets Wednesday night.

Lucas scored 21 points, had 12 rebounds and put the Nets ahead for good with 1:02 left as New Jersey recorded a 98-96 National Basketball Association road triumph over the Indiana Pacers.

"Lucas did a good job for us," said Coach Kevin Loughery. "He had a lot of assists, scored 21 points and he didn't have any errors. It's great to get a player like Maurice Lucas. He's one of the premier forwards in the league. He's still not in the best shape yet, but he'll get there."

Elsewhere, the Phoenix Suns nipped the Boston Celtics 135-134, the Philadelphia 76ers creamed the Utah Jazz 107-85, the Seattle SuperSonics beat the Atlanta Hawks 93-86, the Los Angeles Lakers routed the Portland Trail Blazers 129-103, the Milwaukee Bucks whipped the Chicago Bulls 111-101, the Houston Rockets defeated the New York Knicks 122-117, the Washington Bullets turned back the San Diego Clippers 108-103, and the Cleveland Cavaliers downed the Detroit Pistons 107-102.

Lucas received plenty of help from 19-year-old rookie Cliff Robinson, who contributed 16 points, and Ed Jordan, who had 14 points plus eight steals.

Suns 135, Celtics 134

Walter Davis hit two free throws with 10 seconds remaining to boost Phoenix to its come-from-behind victory over Boston that ended the Celtics' seven-game winning streak. The Suns, who trailed by as many as 11 in the final period, out scored the Celtics 14-4 in the final two minutes. Davis had 20 points while Paul Westphal led the Suns with 34 and Len "Truck" Robinson had 24, offsetting a career-high 45-point effort by Boston rookie Larry Bird.

76ers 107, Jazz 85

Bobby Jones led a balanced Philadelphia attack with 23 points while Steve Mix scored 18 and Julius Erving and Darryl Dawkins had 16 each and Caldwell Jones snared 20 rebounds.

SuperSonics 93, Hawks 86

Reserves James Bailey and Fred Brown and starter Dennis Johnson rallied Seattle from an eight-point fourth-quarter deficit. The Sonics have won six in a row while Atlanta's seven-game winning streak came to an end. Seattle ran off 11 straight points midway in the final quarter for a 82-77 lead.

Bucks 111, Bulls 101

Milwaukee rolled over Chicago behind 32 points by Junior Bridgeman and 23 by Brian Winters. Winters scored 13 points in the third period to help Milwaukee open a 90-77 lead and the Bucks went on to post their fourth consecutive victory.

Rockets 122, Knicks 117

Robert Reid scored 13 fourth-quarter points and Moses Malone canned six free throws in the final two minutes to rally Houston, which trailed 108-102 with 4¼ minutes left.

Pageantry Gets Underway in Placid Olympics

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — The color-coordinated Olympics are under way, opened in a spectacular splash of rainbow patterns that lit up a dismal winter's day in this sleepy, picturesque little town.

A crowd of 23,000 spectators, creating a massive traffic tangle, huddled together in frigid temperatures under overcast skies Wednesday and watched the pomp and pageantry of the opening ceremonies highlighted by the spectacular parade of athletes.

Teams from 37 nations signalled the start of the Games by marching proudly through a small stadium on the outskirts of town. Their colorful winter gear, ranging from the bright red parkas of the Australians to the tan Texas rancher outfits of the U.S. team, seemed culled from a painter's palate.

Now the sea of colors that enveloped the opening of the Games turns into the pursuit of gold, silver and bronze — a medal chase that could be every bit as memorable as those colorful ceremonies for the United States.

It started today with American Beth Heiden a clear threat in the women's 1,500-meter speed skating and skier Bill Koch, who stunned the world by winning a silver medal at Innsbruck four years ago, shooting for more metal in the men's 30-kilometer cross country race.

But the glamor event on today's schedule was the men's downhill skiing — a duel with Whiteface Mountain's 3,009-meter Alpine course. Italian Herbert Plank, bronze medalist at Innsbruck in 1976, had Wednesday's fastest training time — 1 minute, 43.91 seconds — a full second better than any other competitor. Peter Mueller of Switzerland, defending World Cup downhill champion, and Canada's Ken Read, winner of two of the last three World Cup downhills, shared the favorite's role in the event.

First runs of men's and women's luge competition were held Wednesday night, a few hours after the colorful opening ceremonies. Veteran East German Dettlef Gunther set a course record to take the men's lead, while Vera Zozulya of the Soviet Union led the women.

The second of the four luge runs were scheduled for today along with six more hockey games, including the United States against Czechoslovakia. The young Americans rallied for a 2-2 tie with Sweden in their hockey opener Tuesday, while Czechoslovakia ripped Norway 11-0.

The carefully orchestrated opening ceremonies went off without a hitch — unless you count the monumental traffic jam that left many of the spectators and even some of the athletes walking the 1¼ miles from the stadium back into town. It was faster than waiting out the hopeless tangle of cars and buses.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale was in the reviewing stand with Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, and other dignitaries. Mondale officially opened the Games with one simple sentence that stuck strictly to Olympic protocol.

"On behalf of the president of the United States, and the American people," the vice president said, "I am pleased to declare officially the opening of the XIII Winter Olympics held this year at Lake Placid."

There was no trace of the political turmoil that has overshadowed the Olympics for the last month, except for the presence of a few lonely demonstrators outside the arena who protested the IOC's treatment of Taiwan.

But Taiwan's athletes were absent, seeking to be officially excused from these Games rather than to compete under regulations set down by the IOC. Those regulations stipulated the name, flag and national anthem under which they would be allowed to participate — a move that cleared the way for the inclusion of athletes from Mainland China in these Games.

Taiwan sued over the issue, lost two appeals on the case, and then announced its decision to return home rather than participate on the IOC's terms. But a spokesman made it clear that his country was not withdrawing, but seeking to be excused. The difference seems semantic but is important in the IOC lexicon.

"The IOC rule says if you don't compete after you enter, you're subject to severe penalties and we have done nothing wrong," said Thomas Hsueh. "We will be here until the (IOC) board excuses us."

Outside the stadium where opening ceremonies were held, demonstrators who said they were Taiwan citizens living in the United States carried banners denouncing the IOC position on the issue. There were no incidents.

Inside, the athletes from Mainland China paraded behind their five-star flag, smartly attired in dark blue uniforms manufactured, ironically, in Japan.

Many of the delegations marched to careful cadence but others adopted a carefree flare, waving merrily to the crowd. There was a muffled sound about the applause that accompanied the parade, probably because of the gloves worn by nearly all the spectators.

The largest welcomes were reserved, understandably, for the U. S. team, the last delegation to enter the stadium, and Canada. Both teams were greeted warmly.

Speed skater Eric Heiden, who could win five gold medals in these Games, took the Olympic oath on behalf of all the athletes, and Terry McDermott, a former speed skating medalist, did the same for the officials and judges.

Leaving the stadium where the ceremonies were held was an adventure. Spectators milled about, searching for transportation. But traffic was simply not moving and many shrugged their shoulders and simply began walking. It was a festive crowd and there were few complaints even in the cold, unpleasant temperatures.

The dramatic ceremonies provided a pleasant interlude from the political climate that has surrounded the Games ever since President Carter requested that the IOC move, postpone or cancel the Moscow Summer Games because of Russian intervention in Afghanistan.

The IOC has rejected that request and is moving ahead with plans for the 1980 Summer Games. The United States Olympic Committee said it would have a statement today concerning the president's call for "a prompt" withdrawal from the Moscow Games. Officially, the USOC has until May 24 to accept or reject the invitation to the Summer Olympics and Taiwan has already proven that withdrawal from competition isn't always prompt.

North Carolina St. Downs 10th Ranked Duke

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Norm Sloan found some answers. On the other hand, Bill Foster was faced with a big question.

In short, that was the difference between winning and losing as North Carolina State upset 10th-ranked Duke 76-59 in college basketball Wednesday night.

"That certainly answered a lot of questions for me," said Sloan, alluding to his team's first-half rally without the services of leading scorer Hawkeye Whitney.

"We cut the lead with Hawkeye on the bench," added Sloan, in reference to Whitney's foul trouble which kept him out for the last 14 minutes of the first half. "That showed me something about this team. Hawkeye's a great scorer and naturally, he's our scoring leader when he's out there."

The Blue Devils hit on 13 of their first 21 shots to take a big early lead after Whitney was forced to the bench with three fouls. But then Clyde Austin and Kenny Matthews led a 10-point burst to shoot North Carolina State back into the game, helping to cut Duke's lead at the half to three points, at 37-34.

With the foul-troubled Whitney contributing only 14 points, Austin took over the scoring burden for the Wolfpack with 20.

In other Top Twenty games, No. 1 DePaul routed Valparaiso 95-71; No. 5 Kentucky hammered Florida 95-70; No. 6 Louisiana State trimmed Auburn 50-44; No. 8 Maryland whipped East Carolina 85-72; Virginia upset No. 10 Clemson 89-87 and Iowa State stunned No. 19 Kansas State 66-58.

Mark Aguirre scored 23 points and Skip Dillard added 20 to lead DePaul's 21st straight victory this season and 22 over two years. The Blue Demons broke the game open with a 14-2 spurt at the start of the second half.

"We played about 25 minutes — the first five minutes and the last 20," said DePaul Coach Ray Meyer. "We had about 20 minutes of going through the motions. I don't think you could affect this team if you threw a bomb in among them. When they have to play, they play. When they don't have to play, they coast. They've certainly given me some anxious moments."

Babe Ruth was a member of the Yankees the first seven times they played in the World Series. The first time without him was in 1936.

There were 12 track and field events in the 1896 Olympics at Athens, Greece, and the United States won nine of them.

Archaeologists say cross-country skiing is at least 4,000 years old.

Trevino, Bean Co-Favorites

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Although his scorecard didn't reflect it, Lee Trevino figures he "won" his last tournament, and he appears to have a good chance to win another — officially — in the $300,000 Tucson Open scheduled to begin today.

Trevino, coming off a six-week layoff, finished second to Andy Bean in the Hawaiian Open that ended Sunday, and he and Bean are co-favorites for the Tucson title.

"I felt like I had won," Trevino said of the Hawaii tournament. "That gives me a tremendous amount of confidence, to play well in my first tournament of the season.

"I hope I can continue it this week."

Trevino, the Tucson Open champion in 1969 and 1970, is a gallery favorite with the crowds here and said he particularly enjoys playing in the event.

"The people here are real friendly, and desert courses seem to suit me, too," said Trevino.

Desert courses are typically dry and hard, favoring line-drive hitters like Trevino, but that may not be the case with the Tucson National course during the Open. A thunderstorm washed out half of Wednesday's pro-am, with more rain forecast.

The Tucson National layout has been remodeled, with the greens now smaller and bunkers closer to the pin. The course is a whopping 7,095 yards, with 73 par.

Bruce Lietzke is the tournament's defending champion, having won on a public course, Randolph Park, last year while Tucson National was being renovated. Lietzke also won the event in 1977.

Another former champion in the 144-man field is Johnny Miller, who won three consecutive Tucson Opens in the mid 1970s.

However, many of the PGA circuit's top names — including Tom Watson, Jack Nicklaus, Hubert Green, Arnold Palmer and Ben Crenshaw — passed up the 72-hole tournament.

The final two rounds of the event, which wraps up Sunday, will be nationally televised.

Games—Salute To Hypocricy

By WILL GRIMSLEY

LAKE PLACID, N. Y. (AP) — President Carter snubbed it. The Russians got a cold shoulder. All the Yanks loved the Yanks, naturally. Parachutists parachuted. Balloons by the thousands drifted skyward. They lit the torch and unleashed the traditional doves of peace.

So off we go — another Olympics, dedicated to sportsmanship and good will among nations. The endless flame burns on.

Too bad, it has to be a quadrennial salute to hypocrisy.

There is something very moving about an opening Olympic ceremony, with its pagan pomp woven majestically into modern artistry — whirling ballerinas on skates, marching athletes attired in colors of the rainbow, recitation of the athlete's Olympic oath.

Greece, as home of the Ancient Games, led the parade, as always, and the United States, as the host nation, brought up the tail-end, its athletes looking like Old West cattle drivers in their white 10-gallon hats, blue jeans and sheep-lined suede jackets.

Only Yugoslavia separated the cowboy-clad Yanks from their chief rivals, the Soviet Union, impressively attired in knee-length fur coats and fur hats.

One had to strain to see who came between Taipei and the USSR. Would Taiwan show? No, a void. The empty space reflected the scars of international politics and utter insensitivity of the IOC.

The crowd of 23,000, sitting in freezing weather, sat on its hands and failed to applaud until the Star Spangled Banner sprang out of the chute ahead of the parade of smiling, hat-waving Americans.

Vice President Mondale, dispatched by the President to sub for him in formally opening the XIII Winter Games, turned his head and chatted with the Rev. Bernard Fell, chairman of the Lake Placid Organizing Committee, as the Russians marched past the presidential box.

The reverend, recognizing his role as host, politely turned toward the track and waved at the Russians.

Usually the head of state opens the Olympic Games. Adolph Hitler did it in Berlin in 1936. Charles DeGaulle did it at Grenoble, Emperor Hirohito in Tokyo and Britain's Queen Elizabeth, in her shocking pink dress, at Montreal four years ago.

U. S. Presidents have thrown out first balls at World Series and shivered at Army-Navy football games but never have enuniciated "I declare the Olympics open." Down through the years — at Los Angeles, Squaw Valley and here in 1932 — they always have found an excuse to send a pinch-hitter.

Carter didn't break the streak. The President had something more important to do — a press conference dealing with Iran, Afghanistan, energy and other pressing problems of state.

Even if all else were serene, chances are Jimmy wouldn't have felt comfortable sitting alongside Lord Killanin, the plumpish president of the International Olympic Committee. They don't exactly see eye-to-eye on what constitutes proper decorum on the part of an Olympic host and Carter's present plans not to come to dinner in Moscow.

Furniture Store Has Opening

V.L. Taylor & Son Furniture, 603 Park Ave., had its formal opening here Wednesday afternoon as the Hereford Hustlers conducted ribbon-cutting ceremonies. It was an opening under new management, since the business was formerly known as Taylor Furniture & Appliance. The new owners are not related. From left in the front row are Stan Taylor, Rosa Garza, manager Stan Rose and his wife Suzanne, and Dave Taylor. The Taylors are from Amarillo. A large group of the chamber Hustlers attended the ribbon cutting.

Kennedy Continues Attack on Carter

NASHUA, N.H. (AP) — More and more, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is comparing President Carter to former President Richard Nixon for his policy of not campaigning personally for re-election.

Speaking Tuesday at Harvard University, Kennedy said Carter is asking voters for a "blank check" by staying in the White House while the campaign unfolds.

And he drew a standing ovation when he declared, "The last time the people in this country gave a blank check, we gave it to Richard Nixon. And once is enough."

Kennedy, on a lengthy campaign trip through New England, arranged to spend today stumping for votes in New Hampshire, where the first state presidential primary election will be held Feb. 26.

This was Kennedy's first trip outside Washington since his narrow defeat at Carter's hands in last Sunday's Maine caucuses.

Kennedy's home state holds its Democratic presidential primary on March 4, and the Massachusetts senator spent most of Tuesday campaigning in and around Boston.

Wherever he goes, he assails Carter for staying in the White House and refusing to debate him. Carter says he cannot engage in partisan political activity while he is dealing with international crises in Iran and Afghanistan.

But in his second reference of the day linking Carter to Nixon, Kennedy told a group at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, "As we learned in 1972, a president who is not open with the people during the campaign may well conduct a closed presidency after the election."

Aides billed the speech at Harvard, Kennedy's alma mater, as his attempt to outline a view of the presidency. And while it was laced with historical references to past presidents, the address also contained some of Kennedy's harshest criticisms to date of Carter's foreign policy.

Complaining that Carter is a leader "who fumbles his power away," Kennedy said both the 102-day Iranian crisis and the Russian invasion of Afghanistan need not have happened.

Of the latter, Kennedy said, "In the hands of other presidents, the crisis might have ended with nothing more than Soviet military maneuvers near the Afghan border."

On Iran, he said Carter has vacillated on the question of economic sanctions against the Iranian government and on a proposal to set up a United Nations commission to investigate grievances against the shah.

"No president should be re-elected because he happened to be standing there when his foreign policy collapsed around him," Kennedy said.

"And no president who refuses to explain his record and to run on it should regain the office by getting a base on balls," a baseball term meaning a free pass.

At Three Mile Island Plant

Commission Probes Nuclear Leaks

By The Associated Press

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is investigating the second discharge this week of radioactive krypton gas at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Pennsylvania and says it only learned of xenon gas leaks at a plant in Maryland when an inspector checked plant records.

Meanwhile, officials of Metropolitan Edison Co., operator of Three Mile Island, disclosed that krypton 85 has escaped from the plant at Middletown, Pa., on several occasions in recent months.

None of the emissions into the atmosphere, including the most recent in Pennsylvania and at the Calvert Cliffs nuclear plant at Lusby, Md., threatened public health, officials said, but they were concerned some may not have been properly reported.

Victor Stello, director of NRC inspection and enforcement, was going to Three Mile Island today to investigate the latest leaks. On Monday, about a third of a curie of krypton 85 leaked during an accidental spill of reactor cooling water, and Gov. Dick Thornburgh has expressed concern that Met Ed did not inform the state.

Another puff of about three curies escaped between Tuesday night and noon Wednesday during work on an air sample collection system inside the building housing the reactor damaged last March 28 in the worst accident ever at a commercial nuclear plant. In the March accident, the reactor's core came close to a meltdown that could have spread lethal radiation over a large area.

Met Ed said Wednesday the NRC and state agencies have known about the other krypton releases.

"Over the last four months of 1979, the monthly releases...as reported to the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources and the NRC were 70 to 75 curies per month," said Robert Arnold, chief of the recovery operation at TMI.

"By comparison, during 1978, TMI Unit 1 released about 1,000 curies per month...," he said. There are about 50,000 curies of krypton in the containment building, and Met Ed is seeking permission to safely vent it in a period of less than a year.

Asked why Met Ed had never before disclosed the krypton discharges, plant spokesman David Dalzingaro said, "You're probably going to have to ask the NRC. They've been aware of it all along."

At Calvert Cliffs, the NRC was concerned over whether Baltimore Gas & Electric Co., the plant owner, "should have reported the leaks and whether they analyzed the situation correctly," NRC spokesman Karl Abraham said.

The discharge of about 40 curies of radioactive Xenon-133 gas Monday and Tuesday when radioactive water seeped past a valve that had not closed properly was discovered Tuesday by a resident NRC inspector, the agency said.

Plant engineer Lee Russell said the NRC must be notified within an hour "when the reactor is in an uncontrolled state or condition." The leaks had "nothing to do with the reactor," he said.

Meanwhile, a nuclear reactor at Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick plant in Southport, N.C., automatically shut down Wednesday when sensitive instruments were jarred. The shutdown caused the release of low-level radioactive gas into a containment building, but not into the atmosphere, a company spokesman said.

In Galveston, Texas, 11 employees at a nuclear waste storage site were contaminated this week with a low-grade radioactive material. A Galveston Health Department doctor said the dose received by workers at Todd Shipyard Co. was "significant, but not unacceptable."

Court Upholds Death Sentences

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah's Supreme Court has upheld the death sentences for the men convicted in the torture-slayings of three people during the 1974 robbery of the Hi Fi Shop in Ogden.

The case now moves to U.S. District Court, where defense attorneys have preliminary documents filed for appealing the sentences imposed on William Andrews of Dallas and Pierre S. Dale, who formerly was called Dale S. Pierre but had his name changed.

Assistant Attorney Geneeral Craig Barlow said the state could seek to have new execution dates set, but federal court would nullify them.

The Supreme Court upheld the sentences in separate 4-1 decisions Wednesday.

Justice Gordon R. Hall said the defendants failed to raise issues of significant weight to warrant changing the outcome.

Justice Richard F. Maughan dissented in both cases.

Lord Horatio Nelson was born in 1758.

American Pie

Socialist governments seek to feed everybody equally by slicing the pie in identical slices.

Our capitalist system prefers to feed everybody better by baking a bigger pie.

At least, we used to.

Last year for the first time ever we baked a smaller pie.

The productivity of American workers--the output per man-hour--last year declined nine-tenths of a percent.

Always theretofore per-man-hour productivity in the United States had increased each year. Not last year. Last year it decreased almost one-percent.

And the problem was not strikes; there were fewer work days lost to strikes last year than any year in several.

The problem was less efficient production facilities and less efficient workers.

While the great American pie was getting larger every year, we all enjoyed more of it and paid less for it.

But when workers are paid more while turning out less goods and services, naturally the goods and services we turn out cost more.

So the lack of productivity becomes a major factor in inflation.

Let's not imagine that lazy workers are the whole problem.

You give an average worker a machine to assist him and he can turn out more. Give him a better machine and he can turn out more yet. Nobody has demonstrated this fact better than the American farmer who, with efficient machinery, can produce enough for himself and 50 other people.

The Japanese are instinctively and by tradition industrious. They have been further aided in their productivity, however, by steel mills that are more modern than most of ours.

As an aside, our government, in helping defeated Japan back to its feet following World War II, assisted the Japanese in developing steel-making capacity which now is eclipsing our own.

Japan leads the world in per-worker productivity -- and West Germany is close behind--because both came out of the Big War with a come-from-behind spirit and with newer and better and more efficient industrial equipment.

The average factory in the United States is using machinery that's 20 years old. In Japan the average production machine is 10 years old.

Americans have further curtailed productivity with environmental restrictions which other nations ignore.

There are those who believe that "a military war would be good for us," that a national emergency would "put the spurs to us."

What an awful price to pay for increasing productivity.

But if ours continues to decrease we may lose an economic war and reap a whirlwind almost as devastating.

Dawn Music Club Names Officers

The slate of officers for 1980-82 was nominated and elected to serve Tuesday afternoon during a meeting of Dawn Music Club in the home of Mrs. Ronnie Johnson.

Nominated by a committee composed of Mrs. Carl Wimberley and Mrs. R.E. Curtsinger, the new officers will be Mrs. Reece Stewart, president; Mrs. L.W. Tooley, vice president; Mrs. Johnson, secretary; Mrs. O. Wertenberger, treasurer; Mrs. Alfred Smith, historian; Mrs. Curtsinger, reporter; and Mrs. R.T. Stewart, parliamentarian; and Mrs. J.B. Caraway, choral director.

The business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Stewart, president. Plans were completed for a dinner party at 7 p.m. on Feb. 22 at Dawn Community Center, where husbands will be special guests.

Also, the April program was scheduled for March and the variety program was rescheduled for April 18.

The afternoon's program was "Parade of American Music" which is being presented nationally by the National Federation of Music Clubs. The program featured Henry Mancini--The Man and His Music. Mrs. H.H. Mller presented highlights of Mancini's life, stating that he was born in 1924 in Ohio and began the study of the flute at the age of 8. He took up the piano four years later and began to arrange music at an early age. Following high school graduation, Mancini enrolled in the Julliard School of Music, but his studies were interrupted by his being drafted into the U.S. Air Force in 1943. He later served in the infantry.

Mancini was a member of the Glenn Miller Orchestra and in 1952, he joined the Music Department of Universal Studios. His awards include an Oscar for Best Song for "Days of Wine and Roses," and 18 Grammies. He gave a command performance for the Royal Family in London and appeared at the White House during Nixon's stay in office. Photography and skiing are Mancini's hobbies.

Musical selections performed Tuesday afternoon in relation to the program were "Moon River" and "Theme from Romeo and Juliet," presented by Mrs. R.T. Stewart at the piano. Other piano selections heard were "Days of Wine and Roses," "Theme from Love Story," and "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head," all played on the piano by Mrs. Wimberley.

Mrs. Johnson concluded the program by giving a brief history of the monthly hymn "Joyful, We Adore Thee" before leading the group in singing it.

Others present at the meeting were Mrs. H.V. McCabe, a guest, Mrs. LeRoy Johnson and Cory Johnson.

The club's next meeting will be March 11 in the home of Mrs. Reece Stewart.

Couple Married

Sammie Cherry and Dwight Rasmussen were married Jan. 28 at First Christian Church by the Rev. Mack McCarter, pastor.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cherry. He is the son of Stan Rasmussen of Madelia, Minn., and Mava Rasmussen of Mesa, Ariz.

The bride is presently a junior at Hereford High School. The bridegroom is self-employed as a truck driver. The couple will take residence in Mankato, Minn.

Holy Land Program Set Friday, Sunday

Richard L. Gunn, professor of art and education at Brigham Young University, will be presenting a slide and lecture program on The Holy Land Friday evening and Sunday afternoon at the County Library.

The public is invited to attend the two-part program, free of charge.

In Friday evening's session, beginning at 7:30 p.m., Gunn will discuss "Foundation of Jewish Courage." The second part of the slide presentation will be entitled "The Holy Land Seen through the Life of Chrst" through the Life of Christ" and will begin at 4 p.m. Sunday.

Gunn is a noted teacher, artist and lecturer. He has traveled extensively in Europe and the Mediterranean region, where he has directed tours, studied and painted.

This is a public education event sponsored by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (The Mormons).

Valentine Ball To Be Saturday

The four Sweethearts from the city's Beta Sigma Phi sorority chapters will be spotlighted in a waltz with their husbands to highlight Saturday evening's BSP Valentine Ball in the Knights of Columbus Hall from 8 p.m.-12 midnight.

This year's honorees are Lillie Shipman from Alpha Alpha preceptor, Debra Cook from Xi Epsilon Alpha exemplar, Susan Sublett from Kappa Iota, and Susan Shaw from Alpha Iota Mu.

Expected to attend the traditional affair will be BSP sorority sisters and their guests.

General chairman of the event is Ginger Wallace.

Dayton Todd from an Amarillo radio station will be on hand to play disco music for the Valentine party.

In charge of decorations for the Valentine Ball are Bonnie Decker, chairman, Roberta McNeese, Donna Jones and Lillie Shipman. The ceremony honoring the four sweethearts will be arranged by Jan Walser and Mardel Robinson. Heading up the clean-up committee are Nancy Graves, chairman, Lynn Carter, Phyllis Neill and Mary Ann Laing.

Parish Dinner Planned Sunday

The Fourth annual Knights of Columbus pork roast is scheduled from 11:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m. Sunday at St. Anthony's School cafeteria and the public is invited.

Admission will cost $4 for adults, $2 for children aged 6-12 and children under the age of 6 admitted free of charge. Tickets are available from any KC member.

According to co-chairmen Larry Walterscheid and Melvin Kalka, the annual dinner usually attracts a crowd of 900 to 1,000 people.

Browns Initiated By Eastern Star

Linda and Gerald Brown were officially initiated into the Order of the Eastern Star during regular business meeting Tuesday evening in the Masonic Temple.

Brown's mother, Golda Brown, served as conductress for the initiation ceremony and his sister-in-law, Wanda Brown acted as Worthy Matron.

Also during Tuesday evening's meeting, Past Matrons and Past Patrons were honored with 16 former chapter leaders receiving silk roses in recognition of their service. The current Worthy Matron, Beverly Brooke, was presented with a heart-shaped pillow and money corsage in honor of Valentine's Day.

During the business session, invitations were received from Lockney Chapter, which will be observing Friendship Night Feb. 22, and Muleshoe Chapter, whose Friendship Night will be March 8.

The OES chapter was draped Tuesday night in memory of the late Iva Cocanougher and the late Leola Williams.

Refreshments were served from a table decorated in the Valentine motif. Host couples were Charlie and Wanda Brown, Golda Brown, Mary Carter and Mildred Lewis. Twenty-six were in attendance.

Citizens Invited To Craft Workshop

The public is invited to a Silk Flower Workshop, Friday Feb. 15, at 1:30 p.m. at the Banquet Room of the Community Center.

Sondra Blankenship, Adrian, will teach each participants to make four flowers, a small rose, camelia, iris and lily. There will be a $5 charge for supplies. Everything will be furnished so participants do not need to bring any supplies.

Louise Walker, County Extension agent, encourages anyone interested to make plans to attend the workshop. For further information, one may contact Mrs. Walker at the County Extension Office, Room 304 of the Courthouse or call 364-3573.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

Ann Landers

Personal Testimony

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Although you take the position that homosexuals are not "normal and healthy," will you consider another theory? I believe they are a third sex, created by nature to control the population. Look at the facts:

Most animals have built-in controls over reproduction. Man cannot, and will not, control his sex drive. By the sheer weight of numbers, scientists should come to the conclusion that homosexuality is more than perversion. Homosexuals exist in virtually all cultures and have existed throughout history.

As you may have guessed, I am a homosexual. The homosexuals I know, both men and women, have many things in common--which brought me to this conclusion. None were seduced when young, and all were attracted to members of their own sex since childhood. Those who married did so under pressure from their familes, and most of them are now divorced.

This may seem silly, but homosexuals can recognize each other at a glance. "It takes one to know one" is true. I believe this also is part of nature's plan.--Name Deleted By Request

DEAR DELETED: There is a great deal of controversy among psychiatrists on whether or not homosexuals are "born" or "made." I side with those who believe they are "made," and I don't mean seduced by perverts. I believe homosexuals are psychologically conditioned very early in life. This rules out the third-sex theory as a method of population control.

You are right about instant recognition. I have heard this statement from many homosexuals, and I believe it is true.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am an 86-year-old Harvard graduate (class of 1915), now a retired professor of languages at the University of New Hampshire in Durham.

I enjoy your column and think you do a good job, but I did not like the letter from the reformed shoplifter who said she quit stealing because of something she had learned in your column. In a previous response you referred to specially constructed price tags that trigger an alarm system when the merchandise goes through the door.

Your column should be teaching people the glory of honesty and not simply how to stay out of jail.--J.W.H.

DEAR J.W.H.: I appreciate your high-minded position, sir--but human nature being what it is, I am happy if I can teach them anything at all.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 22-year-old woman who has been seeing a 25-year-old man for nearly three years. We love each other a lot and neither one goes with anyone else.

For my birthday last year I thought he might surprise me with an engagement ring, but instead he bought me a lovely dress I had admired in a shop window. I am hoping he will buy me a ring this year, but so far he hasn't said anything about it. I have a hunch money is the problem, and he is embarrassed to admit it.

I have a good job and a nice nest egg. Should I offer to help him buy the ring?--The Itch To Hitch In Pendleton, Ore.

DEAR ITCH: An engagement ring needn't be an expensive rock. Your friend could have bought you a modest stone last year for what he paid for the lovely dress. Don't offer to "help him out." The ring will be much more meaningful if he buys what he can afford on his own.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious--lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor,

The following is borrowed from a local church bulletin and is submitted for your readers' consideration:

JUST A LITTLE CONTAMINATION

One day a mother was scraping vegetables for a salad as her daughter came in to ask permission to go to an "adult" movie. "But all the kids are going," she said, "and their folks don't think it will hurt them."

As she talked, she saw her mother pick up a handful of scraps and toss them into the salad. Rather startled, she shouted, "Mother! You're putting garbage in the salad."

"I know," her mother replied, "But I thought if you didn't mind garbage in your heart and mind, that you wouldn't mind a little in your stomach."

Thoughtfully, the girl picked the peelings from the salad and then smiled at her mother. "I guess I'll tell them I'm staying at home tonight," she said as she went through the kitchen door.

Ships were vital in the defense of the harbors and coastline as many naval encounters with the British took place. The first naval battle in the Revolutionary War was off the coast of Machias, Maine, when the Margaretta was captured. This engagement is known as the "Lexington of the Sea." The public is asked to join the Daughters of the American Revolution and observe this February as American History Month.

Real Estate Tips
by Tommy Bowling

Will the value of my home automatically increase if I build an addition on it?
Not necessarily. You need to make certain any improvements you make to your property will gain more in value than the actual cost of the work. Before making any drastic alterations or additions, consult your broker. Your broker's knowledge of home construction, desired features and area property values can help you determine if you are making a valuable change or a mistake. A poorly-built addition, a room with traffic-flow problems or extreme decorating techniques may possibly detract from your home's value. Conversely, well-designed and executed improvements can increase home values.

Keyboard Scholarships To Be Offered by WT

A number of keyboard music scholarships, including three special full tuition awards, are being offered by West Texas State University.

The full tuition awards include the Pauline Brigham Award, given to a student entering WTSU as a piano major in the fall semester; two Knutson Piano Awards given to two students entering WTSU as piano majors showing a strong interest in studio piano teaching careers; and the Anderson Memorial Organ Award, given to a student entering WTSU as an organ major.

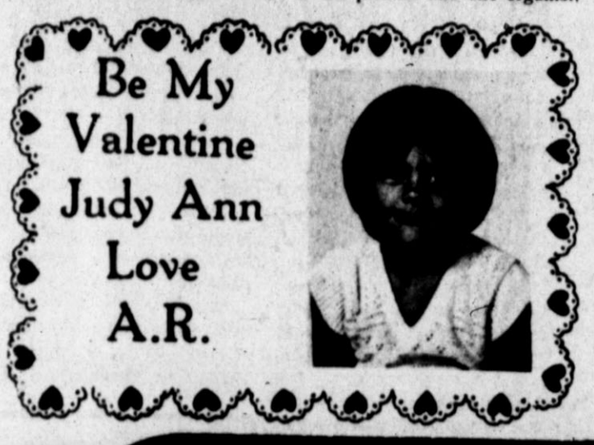

Additional scholarships will be awarded in varying amounts, some on a continuing basis, to students who are keyboard majors at WTSU.

The WTSU Music Department is touted as one of the best equipped facilities in the Southwest for keyboard study.

In addition to the Fine Arts Building, there is Mary Moody Northen Hall, containing a recital hall, practice rooms with Steinway grand pianos for the exclusive use of piano majors. Reuter pipe organs and one practice room with a two-manual William Dowd French harpsichord.

Piano studios in the Fine Arts Building are of classroom size, each with two model "B" Steinway or Baldwin pianos. The organ studio in Northen Hall is a two-story brick triangle-shaped room, its 20-rank Reuter simulating the sound of an organ in a cathedral. The 600-eaf recital hall has a 63-rank Reuter pipe organ, Steinway concert grand piano and Baldwin concert grand piano.

The keyboard faculty included four pianists and one organist, Mary Helen Demus, MM, WTSU; George Eason, DMA, University of Colorado; Bill Evans, MM, North Texas State University; Stanley Potter, MM, Michigan State University; and Mary Ruth McCulley, MM, University of Oklahoma.

Fund-Raising Projects Discussed by Chapter

Plans for a garage sale and a teen dance were discussed recently by members of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, during a business meeting in the Community Room of First National Bank.

Opal Glenn, ways and means chairman, announced that the chapter will be staging a garage sale as a fund-raising project at the end of this month or in early March. She also stated that XEA will sponsor the teen dance April 25 at the Community Center, also as a money-making project.

Members were reminded of the annual BSP Valentine Ball which will take place Saturday evening from 8 p.m.-12 midnight in Knights of Columbus Hall. XEA's sweetheart at the ball will be Debra Cook.

Letters of thanks to Secret Sisters were read from Mary Sledge, Ilajean Brinkman, Linda Thorell and Debra Cook. Also, plans for booths to be set up during the district BSP convention here in October were made.

The two-part program was presented by Linda Thorell, who spoke on the history of England, and Mary Sledge, discussing "The Royal Family and Important Figure in England."

The chapter's next meeting is planned Feb. 19 in Pioneer Natural Gas Flame Room with the program to be given by Betty Davies and Bonnie Decker.

Stanton Dogie Roundup

Freshman Boys to Play In District Tournament

Compiled By
Stanton Journalism Staff

The Freshman boys' basketball team will be boarding the bus early Saturday morning to travel to Dumas for the district basketball tourney. Their first game will be against Canyon Purple. This is the only Stanton team to be in the district play-offs this year. They ended the regular season with a 15-5 record.

The eighth and seventh grade boys' teams won their last games of the season against Canyon Purple last Thursday, but the wins didn't give them a pass to the district tourney. The eighth ended their regular season with a 13-7 record, and the seventh had a 7-10 record.

In girls' action last Thursday, all three teams suffered losses. The season record for the girls' teams are: freshman 11-7; eighth 9-9; and seventh 3-10.

The Stanton girls' locker room was the wrong place to be if you are looking for smiling faces last Thursday night. The ninth grade girls were on their way to district as they led Canyon Purple most of the first half. At half time, though, the scoreboard showed a 27-26 score in favor of the Canyon Eagles. But the Dogies were determined not to let that one point difference get to them. They came out of the locker stealing the ball, hitting their shots, and ready to win.

Stanton led during most of the second half, but in the last three minutes of the game, Canyon came back. The Eagles finally realized what they had to do, and they did it by slipping past the Dogies. When the clock ran out, the Eagles had the game in their claws by only a slight margin, 37-34. This loss for the Dogies kept them from going to district, and paved the way for the Eagles.

Jennifer Eggen stole the high point honors as she ripped the nets for a total of 11 points. Tiffi Dirks followed with 9 points, and Angela White tallied up 7 points for the Dogies.

The 1979-80 season had its up and downs for the Stanton Freshmen. They lost, a few heart-breaking games, but patched up the let-down feelings by winning Consolation honors at the Canyon tournament, and running away with championship honors at the Clovis, N.M. Junior High Friendship Tourney. The freshmen finished with an 11-7 season record.

Cagers for SJH include: Pam Nixon, Angela White, Jennifer Eggen, Barbara Brown, Annette Dawson, Barbara Weaver, Roxanne Gomez, Tanya Jones, Violeta Valdez, Holly McNeese, Margie Morales, Sherry Crawford, Rosie Garza, Tiffi Dirks, and Laurie High. Pam Nixon, Margie Morales, and Tiffi Dirks served as captains.

The team, coached by Joe Don Cummings, would like to thank everyone who gave their time and support to help this team get as far as they did. With basketball at an end, (until next year, that is), track season begins to make its way into the picture Good luck in track and congratulations on a good basketball season. Seventh graders saw the film, "How The West Was Won", yesterday during the first three periods of the day. In the past several years the seventh grade had seen "The Alamo," but teachers made the decision to try another approach for a year or two, at least.

Award Recipients

Stanton Students Receive Ribbons

Karri Vinton and Tanya Gauthreaux, students at Stanton Junior High School, recently entered artwork in the Scholastic Art Awards contest in Amarillo. Those pieces of artwork have earned blue ribbon awards and will be entered in contest soon in New York City.

This is the second time that Miss Vinton has won in the photography category. Her entry, color photography, depicts her younger brother practicing the piano while wearing his baseball uniform with a baseball glove nearby. The photo was entitled, "Three Minutes to Go."

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Vinton, is on the yearbook and newspaper staff at Stanton and is a member of the band.

Miss Gauthreaux, a third year art student, entered a bronze sculpture, entitled "Bridge Over Troubled Water." The sculpture depicts "the feeling of people helping people."

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Gauthreaux, is in mixed choir and will be in the upcoming musical "She's One of the Boys." Both girls are honor roll students.

Evangelism Clinic Planned Tomorrow

Dr. Frank Warden, who left a position with one of the top legal firms in the South to enter the ministry, will be leading a workshop on evangelism Friday night from 7:30-9:30 p.m. in the parlor of First Christian Church.

Interested persons are welcome to attend the workshop. A nursery will be provided at the church.

Dr. Warden is currently the Minister of Evangelism at Highland Park United Methodist Church in Dallas. At the invitation of Dr. Leighton Farrell, Dr. Warden has established a unique ministry of evangelism at Highland Park to train laymen and teachers, set up Bible studies and organize special evangelistic events, such as sing-alongs, retreats and workshops.

A native of Little Rock, Ark., Dr. Warden attended Hendrix College, Vanderbilt University and Southern Methodist University. He served as prosecuting attorney at Little Rock and as a judge's advocate in the U.S. Air Force, later becoming an owning partner of Arkansas' largest law firm.

Dr. Warden was called to the ordained ministry in 1969 and has served as Minister of Evangelism at University Park and Highland Park Methodist Churches in Dallas. He is the author of Trinity Bible Studies, now in use by churches of several demoninations.

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

Poets write so glowingly of love...it leads me to believe that none of them ever married.

According to them, love makes the world go around...means never having to say you're sorry...is the crown of all our bliss...has no bounds..is the sun, earth, moon and stars..is the living essence of a divine neighbor, and being in it at least once is better than never to have been in it at all.

When I was young, I too was a poet on the subject. And why not? Love was everyhere I turned. I could see it, touch it, smell it and feel it. (Mother slapped a lot in the name of parental love.)

After I was married, love became nocturnal--its expressions reduced to a Candygram and an embarrassed, "You KNOW I do. Do I have to say it?"

I wondered what happened to love. Was it to be like the bottle of champagne at the wedding where the bubbles no longer tickled your senses, the liquid lost its kick, and finally everything went flat? Was it gone? Had it taken a new form? Would I know it when I saw it? What should I look for?

I had remembered love as something thoughtful.

I still said, "Sit still, I'll get you a beer while I'm up." (C'mon. It had to be more than that!)

I recalled it had to do with sharing.

There had been the day when we buried his mother. We lay side by side in her bed and cried silently, neither of us speaking a word until morning. (But that was instinctive, wasn't it?)

I seemed to remember love meant sensitivity.

There was, of course, the day when one of the kids mouthed off and told me to shut up and my husband grabbed him by the shoulder and said, "How dare you talk to my wife that way!" (Could it be?)

Love as a lot of patience.

How could I forget when I couldn't make it the nine miles into the Grand Canyon and gave up on the trail only to have him hike the last two miles down and back again with a Dixie Cup full of water. (Was that love?)

Could it be that love in its refined state is odorless, colorless, and without the usual heart-shaped form? Could it be something so simple as a tear when you are sad? A smile when you need it? Lips brushing your hair? A hand touching as you exchanged a cold beer?

James Grover Thurber in his wisdom asked a 47-year-old woman who had been married 27 years and had six children to describe what love really is.

Repairing Flags

Members of the American Legion Auxiliary spent an entire day Tuesday sewing and repairing worn flags. This is an annual event for the auxiliary. The flags were bought and furnished by the American Legion. The Kiwanis Club sells the flags to local merchants and the Key Club boys place the flags out on holidays. Flags that become irreparable are burned during a special ritual ceremony. Working on a few of the flags are from left Ruth King, Troyce Hanna and Pet Ott. [Brand photo by Denise Smith]

Mrs. Thomas Named As Club Candidate

Betty Thomas was elected as Palo Duro Extension Homemakers Club's nominee for "EH Woman of the Year" during a business meeting Monday morning in the Camp Fire Lodge.

The "EH Woman of the Year" will be recognized by The Hereford Brand during the annual Appreciation Luncheon on March 24.

Mrs. Thomas, club president, called the meeting to order. Members chose Cindy Norvell as their nominee for district delegate to the area meeting in April at White Deer.

Becky Grousnick was the guest speaker who presented a program on aerobics.

The club's next meeting is scheduled Feb. 25 at 9:30 a.m. in the home of Rycke Higgins.

Attending the recent meeting were Mary Fisher, Mrs. Thomas, Sheri Hammett, Janet Coleman, Gail Carter and Mrs. Norvell.

Hereford Newcomers Club Convenes for Luncheon

The Hereford Newcomers Club met Tuesday for a luncheon at "The Way We Were" restaurant. Each member enjoyed visitation after a short business meeting.

Those in attendance were Brenda Campbell, Tracey Stevenson, Vanneta Beach, Marge Mehlberg, Janet McEachern, Martha Hall, Gwynn Linville, Nora Holland, Dean Green, Kathryn Ruga, Pat Walsh, Shorty Weston, Leona Carruth, Vera Threewit, Joy Mathews, Donna Mandino, Carol Hendrick and Judy Bradley.

Columbus did not reach the American mainland until his third voyage in 1498, when he landed at the Gulf of Paria in what is now Venezuela.

IN WASHINGTON

Irrational outcome

Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - A careful examination of the economic sanctions President Carter recently imposed upon the Soviet Union suggests that the actions may penalize the United States far more than the nation supposedly being punished.

There is no quarrel with Carter's determination to force the Soviets to pay a price for their military invasion of Afghanistan, but the president may have blundered by substituting moral indignation and precipitous action for a measured response and a coherent strategy.

The most striking example of the counterproductive nature of the new White House policy involves the inclusion of all equipment used in petroleum exploration and production in the president's hastily constructed embargo on exports of high-technology items.

Throughout the 1970s, the Soviet Union has been the world's leading oil producer, surpassing even Saudi Arabia. But, like other regions of the world, the USSR now is rapidly depleting its reserves of readily accessible "easy" oil.

The Soviets now face the complex task of locating and producing their "hard" oil, with deposits found in frigid, desolate and remote areas such as western Siberia — a task the Central Intelligence Agency predicts will be increasingly difficult.

The CIA estimates that the USSR last year produced a record-setting 11.7 million barrels of oil daily, but that figure was lower than Soviet planners expected. Similar shortfalls have occurred since the mid-1970s.

The CIA is predicting that the Soviets this year will fail to surpass their 1979 production and that there will be a gradual decline in production throughout the 1980s. The USSR eventually could be forced to shift from its current status as a net exporter of oil to a net importer.

Depriving the Soviets of the equipment necessary to meet internal demands for petroleum products probably will force them to turn to the Persian Gulf to fulfill their needs.

At best, that would mean another major buyer of Middle East oil, whose substantial demands would increase upward pressure on already soaring prices. At worst, it could lead to an attempted Soviet military or political takeover of one or more oil-producing nations.

Carter's embargo of 17 million metric tons of feed grains that the Soviets had contracted to purchase poses a very real danger of increased taxes, higher inflation and larger federal budget deficits in this country.

Although both future and cash grain prices have been temporarily stabilized following a brief but precipitous drop, the vast surplus that the federal government has agreed to buy will continue to overhang the market, posing a constant threat of economic disruption.

The price the government must pay for storage facilities, price supports and other grain embargo costs currently is estimated at $2.5 billion to $3 billion — and those figures do not include the cost of a greatly expanded "set-aside" or diversion program under which farmers will be paid in the future not to grow corn and other crops.

An already weakened dollar will be adversely affected by an expanded balance-of-payments deficit. Other nations may become chary about relying upon imports from the United States that are susceptible to politically motivated embargoes.

Carter's response to Soviet adventurism in Afghanistan undoubtedly is more acceptable than this country's reaction to the USSR's earlier military repression in Hungary and Czechoslovakia — occasions on which the United States did little more than send condolences and a funeral corsage.

But when the occasion demanded a rational policy carefully crafted to produce a desired result, Carter only reacted impulsively and irrationally to the time-honored c[illegible]f "don't just stand there, do something."

Members Welcome Husbands to Dinner

A Valentine party was held by Frio Homemakers Club Tuesday night in honor of members' husbands in the home of T.L. Sparkman Jr.

Serving as hostesses for the festive occasion were Mmes. Don Tindal, John Paetzold and Eugene Baldwin.

Following the meal, guests enjoyed card games and "42."

Those present were Messrs. and Mmes. J.E. Warrick, E.F. Vogler, Edgar Vinson, Billy Warrick, Harlan Barber, Ted Caro, Jimmy McMillan, Gary Hathaway, Bobby Kendrick Dave Yandell, Miles Caudle, Jerry Richardson, Don Tindal, Eugene Baldwin, Mrs. Richard Sims and Alma Andrews.

"That Valuable Article-Hemp". Hemp was a vital commodity during the Revolutionary War and was used in great quantity. Rope was made from it for the rigging on the sailing vessels as well as the canvas for the sails. This was an exciting time in history. Americans can join the Daughters of the American Revolution and observe February as American History Month.

New Arrivals

Mr. and Mrs. Nat Guerrero are the parents of a daughter, Micaella Rene Guerrero born Feb. 12. She weighed 7 lbs.

A home is still the best investment you can make, says a housing and home furnishings specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Housing prices are expected to stay with inflation--one reason homeowners are now making so many improvements and additions, Dr. Jane Berry reports.

Lamaze Classes To Begin

A new series of Lamaze Childbirth Preparedness classes is scheduled to begin here Thursday, Feb. 21 for expectant couples.

A $30 fee will be charged for instructonal materials.

Couples may pre-register for the class by contacting the instructor, Penny Jessup at 364-6435.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ability to speak depends primarily on the brain's left hemisphere, according to Scientific American magazine.

Couples Attend Valentine Party

Members of Young Mothers Study Club welcomed their husbands as guests during a Valentine dinner party Monday evening in REC Medallion Room.

Members brought covered dishes to be served with barbecued roast beef, catered by Savages' Hickory Pit. After the meal, dummy bridge was played with prizes going to the high scoring team of Mr. and Mrs. David Boyle and to the low scoring players, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Holmes.

Other couples attending the party were Messrs. and Mmes. Dan Dudley, Danny Haney, Barry Josephson, N.D. Kelso, Richard Schilling, James Self, Johnny Stone, Matt Street and Mike Wilson.

The club's next meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 25 in SWPS Reddy Room.

Gospel Business Men To Present Speaker

Borger physician and surgeon Dr. M.E. Ingham will be the keynote speaker Saturday evening for the monthly dinner meeting of the local chapter, Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International (FGBMFI).

The public is invited to attend the buffet supper, beginning at 7 p.m. in the high school cafeteria, to be followed by the program at 8 o'clock. Cost of the meal will be $3.65 per person.

Dr. Ingham will present his Christian testimony, relating how he turned his life toward the teachings of the gospel.

Currently serving as officers of the local FGBMFI chapter are Jonny Cloud, president; Leo Harper, vice president; Jack Chapman, secretary; and Jimmie Allred, treasurer.

Arts, Crafts Festival Scheduled in Plainview

Applications are now being accepted for the 1980 Running Water Draw Arts and Crafts Festival in Plainview. The show is scheduled for Oct. 17-19, jointly sponsored by the Plainview Rotary Club and Llano Estacado Museum. This is the festival's sixth annual year.

Proceeds from the show will go to benefit the two organizations.

Any artist or craftsman interested in applying for a booth may contact Rob Strong, Wayland College, Plainview, Texas 79072 for application forms and requirements.

Shipbuilding was one of America's oldest industries and shipyards sprang up in all of the Colonies along the coast and navigable rivers. In July, 1777, at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, the vessel Ranger was outfitted under the command of Captain John Paul Jones. February is American History Month. Citizens are asked to join the Daughters of the American Revolution and observe it with them.

Clements Upset at 'Mediocrity' in College System

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Like his friend Eddie Chiles, Gov. Bill Clements is mad. He's mad at the mediocrity he perceives in the tax-supported higher education system over which he nominally presides.

"We have let some of our degree-granting universities turn into nothing more nor less than degree factories," Clements said in an interview.

Clements is trying to burn his own brand into the hide of a state college system which he thinks could do a better job. Seven of the 18 members of the Texas College Coordinating Board are his appointees. Chiles, with his high indignation quotient, is now a North Texas State University regent.

The governor's statement raises the question: Just how good are Texas' state universities?

Kenneth Ashworth, state commissioner of higher education, and Dean Lorrin Kennamer of the University of Texas College of Education say there are no objective standards of measurement.

But some things still can be said about educational quality in Texas.

Of the 37 tax-supported senior institutions under 15 governing boards, only the University of Texas at Austin and Texas A&M consistently show up on nationwide departmental ratings.

Some examples:

— The Chronicle of Higher Education published a survey in January 1979 ranking A&M 11th in agriculture and forestry and UT-Austin seventh in business administration and sixth in foreign languages.

— Change magazine published a survey of professors in 1977 that placed UT-Austin's law school fifth among public universities, its graduate programs ninth and its graduate business school ninth.

— An organization called National Education Standards ranked undergraduate degree programs in January 1979 and placed A&M first in petroleum engineering, second in agriculture and agricultural engineering, seventh in nuclear engineering and 10th in industrial engineering. UT-Austin ranked sixth in botany and seventh in petroleum engineering. Rice placed No. 8 in French. Texas schools with programs that received votes but did not make the top 10 included Texas Tech, Baylor, SMU and North Texas State.

— A 1979 report by the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges ranked UT-Austin behind only Harvard among leading research libraries.

— Texas spends $13.08 of every $1,000 in personal income on tax-supported higher education, less than 17 other states, including Alabama, Mississippi, North Carolina and South Carolina.

— Faculty salaries average 5.8 percent less than the national average of $22,250.

— Kennamer says less than half the 63 teacher education programs at Texas colleges have sought national accreditation, and "that gives you some kind of indication whether we have adequate programs in all 63."

Ashworth, whose agency, the Coordinating Board, is charged with promoting excellence, says Texas schools stack up well.

"Even without UT-Austin and A&M, our system of higher education would still be recognized as of good quality, compared with other states," he said.

But Frank Erwin, UT lobbyist and former regent, who has been intimately involved with higher education for more than 15 years, is not so charitable.

Quality is found "only in a very few spots," notably UT-Austin, A&M and the UT and Baylor medical schools, he said in an interview.

"Obviously, there are some, like Sul Ross, West Texas State and numbers of others that are just sort of high-grade junior colleges," Erwin said.

Erwin helped former Gov. John Connally write the 1965 law creating the Coordinating Board but is disappointed at the result.

"They never had the guts to make the decisions they were supposed to make, because great pressure was exerted on them. ... Each person (on the board) too often represents the geographic area from which he comes instead of what is good for the state as a whole," Erwin said.

He said the board should advise the Legislature to close Sul Ross and West Texas State because of low enrollment but establish a University of Houston campus near Conroe.

Clements says the Coordinating Board has ducked big issues while concentrating on minor matters.

"There are two reasons why the Coordinating Board would busy itself with matters of less than great substance. First, none of these various institutions ... wants the Coordinating Board digging down into its business. ... The second reason is, to overcome this resistance really requires a commitment and a dedication to dig, dig, dig into these complex and difficult matters. ... I think the board as it is now constituted (with seven Clements appointees) will move forward in this direction," Clements said.

Ashworth says the board, "on the whole," has succeeded at preventing excessive construction and unnecessary duplication of programs at state colleges.

Some would say, however, that the board has been overly permissive.

Each new campus created since 1965 — except Lamar University's two freshmen-sophomore "centers" — had its blessing, including the Sul Ross branch opened at Uvalde while Dolph Briscoe was governor.

The board approved 57 new degree programs in 1978 and disapproved only four. Last year, the board allowed 22 new degree programs and disapproved 11.

It has, however, limited expensive doctoral degree programs to 15 campuses, generally those offering Ph.D.s before the board was established.

Board powers are limited by the ability of colleges to make end runs to the Legislature. In 1975, for instance, lawmakers gave the board a veto on construction but also went over the board's head to authorize 135 specific building projects.

"In terms of clout with the Legislators, the colleges are the ones that have that," Ashworth said.

Aspirin Draws Praise

NEW YORK (AP) — Eighty years after its introduction as a "wonder drug," plain old aspirin remains full of surprises.

The "pain reliever doctors recommend most" appears to help prevent strokes in some people, may give some protection against heart attacks and could even aid in diabetes.

This common fever reducer and anti-inflammatory drug is now known to lessen the redness of sunburn and has become part of therapy for a rare and once-fatal disease.

One study suggests aspirin, in regular doses, may avert migraine headaches. It is even being tested for possible use against cancer, in birth control or in preventing the rejection of transplanted organs.

"Aspirin is a remarkable drug. It has been around for 80 years and it's only within the last two or three years that we've really understood how it works," says Dr. William Fields, chairman of neurology at the University of Texas at Houston and one of the pioneers in using aspirin to prevent stroke.

"With the new understanding, we now are finding new indications for its use. ... I think it's a wonder drug, no question about it," he says.

While few of the new uses are established yet, the rebirth of aspirin is being watched closely by U.S. manufacturers, who grind out 25 million pounds of aspirin a year, and by individual Americans, who swallow the equivalent of 100 aspirin tablets each per year.

Aspirin is getting so much good press lately that many people have begun taking half a tablet a day the same way some people take vitamins. This is a development that worries some doctors.

Critics point out that the largest and latest study of aspirin and heart disease — released last week — showed no benefit of aspirin to people who had suffered at least one heart attack.

But others respond that the study may have been flawed, and another large study due for release next week will show more positive results.

Regardless of the outcome, most doctors agree that aspirin or drugs like it will be important weapons in the pharmaceutical arsenal of the 1980s.

This probably would have surprised Felix Hofmann, the German research chemist who set out in 1893 to find a remedy for his father's rheumatoid arthritis.

Hofmann dug through pharmacopoeias looking for other salicin relatives until he came on acetylsalicylic acid, synthesized by another German chemist in 1853 but unappreciated at that time. Hofmann found a cheaper and simpler way to make acetylsalicylic acid, and it gave his father the first relief he'd had in 10 years.

Hofmann wanted to call his new drug "a-salicin." But his employers at the pharmaceutical firm Bayer & Co. overruled him, and the drug was christened "Aspirin" when it was launched in 1899.

It remained for John Vane and his colleagues in 1971 to discover how aspirin works.

Vane, of the Royal College of Surgeons in London, showed that aspirin inhibits the production of prostaglandins, ubiquitous hormone-like substances that are involved in body mechanisms ranging from fever to inducing labor.

Aspirin does this by blocking an enzyme known as prostaglandin synthetase or cyclo-oxygenase. The body needs this enzyme to make precursors for most of the half-dozen known prostaglandins and a few other key substances as well.

Among the prostaglandins that are blocked are those that make it easier for nerve cells to pass pain signals from one to another; those that raise fever in the body's thermostat in the brain; and those that promote the swelling of inflamed tissue.

But the key to many of aspirin's newest uses is something that was once considered its main drawback — its ability to increase bleeding.

Aspirin does this by inhibiting the blood cells called platelets from making a prostaglandin derivative called thromboxane which allows the platelets to clump together when a blood vessel is injured.

These clumps of platelets lay the foundation for a more substantial blood clot formed of fibrin fibers and red and white blood cells. Thus, platelets initiate blood clotting, but clotting can still proceed when there is serious injury, even if the platelets are stilled.

Since the body continually replaces platelets, repeated doses of aspirin are needed.

Unfortunately, if the dose of aspirin is too high, it will also inhibit another prostaglandin — prostacyclin — made by the blood vessel walls. Prostacyclin has the opposite effect from thromboxane — it dissolves clots, apparently to keep the platelets from clumping dangerously on healthy blood vessel walls.

Now a number of researchers are investigating whether this anti-clotting action can be used against a range of diseases in which blood vessels are damaged — including strokes, heart attacks and diabetes.

Report on Cribs Due to Parents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of parents will receive warnings about cribs that have been blamed in the strangulation of six infants, under an action approved today by the government.

Consumer Product Safety Commission spokeswoman Heidi Bowers said, "We have accepted a consent agreement with Bassett Furniture Industries, Inc.," that obligates the company to send out the warnings.

Ms. Bowers said the company's Mandalay and Candlelite cribs were "designed in a way that the infant's head could become trapped between either the headboard or the footboard and a bedpost."

She said the text of the agreement will be published Thursday in the Federal Register for public comment. The commission later will take a second vote on the agreement before the warning letters are mailed, she said.

Infants old enough to stand in a crib could get their necks caught between bedposts and either headboards or footboards, the warnings say. Under the consent agreement, the mailings will go to about four million households having children of up to 21 months.

About 1,654 colonial-style Candlelite cribs and 5,800 oriental-style Mandalay cribs were made from 1974 to 1977. The majority are still in homes despite a company program to modify the cribs, which retailed for $100 to $125.

The commission complaint that resulted in the settlement alleged that Bassett knew or should have known about defects in the Candlelite in September 1977, and in the Mandalay in March 1978, that "could create a substantial risk of injury to the public in that it could cause death or serious bodily injury due to strangulation."

At the manufacturer's Bassett, Va., headquarters, company president Robert H. Spilman, who signed the consent agreement, and Frank Snyder, general counsel, were unavailable for comment.

David Schmeltzer, the agency official who signed the consent agreement, estimated the package of warnings and a $175,000 penalty will cost Bassett about $1 million. The company has reported annual sales of $281 million.

English inventor Robert William Thompson patented the pneumatic tire in 1845, although at that time rubber was too expensive for the invention to be practical.

THERE IS A NEW twist to the line down the center of this road near the Sacramento, Calif., suburb of El Dorado Hills. The unusual line warns motorists that a dead end is just over the next rise.

Collapsing Hillside Gets Attention by Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Down in Kentucky, on a hillside just outside Louisville, the earth is slowly sliding out from under 200 houses. Two houses have already collapsed.

Here in Washington, one paragraph in a $4.2 billion House public works bill approved Feb. 5 authorizes the expenditure of $700,000 to save the hillside. That lone paragraph is refueling a fiery debate about "pork barrel giveaways."

Critics of the $700,000 authorization say it typifies wasteful government spending by a congressman seeking to curry favor with the voters back home.

The people back home don't see it that way. They see themselves as victims of a natural disaster, distinguishable from floods and tornadoes only in that it is measured in weeks and months rather than days and minutes.

Rep. Gene Snyder of Kentucky, the fourth-ranking Republican on the House Public Works Committee, wants something done about it and is sponsoring the Burkshire Terrace project.

Burkshire Terrace is an upper-middle class housing development on the outskirts of Louisville. About 200 houses were built there in the mid-1970s, built on a layer of silt topsoil overlaying an inclined layer of poor grade shale.

Local zoning did not then require geological surveys before building.

The homes would be priced in the $60,000-$70,000 range today — if anyone were buying. Now, when it rains hard, the silt becomes saturated and starts slipping on the shale, sliding out from under the houses. Of three homes condemned, two have tumbled off their foundations. About 25 others are in immediate danger, and ultimately, all 200 could be threatened, experts say.

Snyder, who represents the area, has volunteered the Army Corps of Engineers to stop the landslide, at an authorized cost to taxpayers of $700,000. He wants the Corps to shore up the hillside and develop drainage systems that would allow rainwater to get off the slope without taking the hill with it.

He and his supporters say government is serving its citizens. Critics say using federal money to help private landowners amounts to a government bailout.

The project has been attacked in a newsletter called "Profiles in Pork" — a reference to the pork barrel aspects of the bill — written by the Coalition for Water Project Review, a Washington-based environmental group spearheading opposition to the works bill.

"It's obvious that those people have a problem," says Chuck Hoffman of Lexington, Ky., coordinator of the Kentucky Rivers Coalition, which compiled a state-level report on the situation for the water project coalition. "But if those folks can get 100 percent free help, why can't everyone else come to Congress and get some relief? You have to draw the line somewhere."

Critics also say the project amounts to reimbursing private citizens for poor house-buying judgment. And, they say, it carries the corps into a project far beyond the Army's usual duties, setting dangerous precedents for future use of tax money.

But on the other side: "Most of my neighbors are middle-class, middle-aged, hard-working people," says Douglas Sharp, who lives near the crest of the ridge. "They've paid taxes all their lives, and they fully expect to pay taxes all the rest of their lives.

"These are the kind of people who work all their lives without expecting anything from the government. But they see all this money going to other places. And they feel this is the one time when they need some governmental body to help them. That's one of the justifications for government."

The Coalition for Water Project Review says the answer lies in suing the developer, not starting a federal project.

"If Representative Snyder's provision is the start of things to come, then developers across the country would be relieved of the responsibility for considering the terrain on which they build houses," the coalition argues in "Profiles in Pork."

"If it is not a part of any broader policy or program, then it represents a special favor to certai: If there's a problem, come to the Public Works Committee for a quick fix."

A suit has already been filed by one homeowner against the builder of his house. James Steinfeld, a Louisville lawyer representing five other homeowners, said he is planning to file a separate suit asking that the problem be corrected and the homeowners' damages be paid.

Blankenship Construction Co. Inc., owned by Jerry Blankenship, his brother Charles, and Ernest Burkhead, developed Burkshire Terrace. But Blankenship says the company only built the roads in the subdivision.

"The land was stable before it was disturbed by the homebuilders and homeowners. I don't know for sure what caused the problems, but there was nothing wrong with the land," he said.

Snyder himself added to the barrage of criticism when he questioned his own proposal in an unusually candid statement in December to the Louisville Times.

"Some of the special projects (in the House bill) are not a proper use of the corps, and mine is probably one of them," he said. "But I have no reservations. I'm employed to represent my people — that's what they pay me for."

But he defends the project now: "This is not a bailout. This is taking care of the people who have been paying for the bailouts around the world for all of these years."

Tax Breaks Pushed For Pension Supporters

NEW YORK (AP) — When you have inflation of the sort we've been experiencing, it's difficult to make ends meet or to have things add up to the answers your arithmetic teacher taught you.

The distortions spread. Financial theories that once were solid hold no more water than a strainer, and long-established standards of behavior either change or show themselves to be badly dated.

There persists the notion that U.S. Savings Bonds are to be purchased as a wise investment and patriotic duty, even when the 7 percent yield after 11 years means an almost certain net loss.

There is no mystery to the mathematics involved. A taxable return of 7 per cent or less, depending upon how long the bonds are held, is a poor return at a time when inflation is almost double that rate.

Meanwhile, inflation has presented a dilemma to the nation's life insurers. They want Congress to allow workers to invest additional funds in their pension plans — and get a tax break for doing so. The industry has its reasons: it administers many pensions plans.

Many plans have been badly eroded by inflation, and need beefing up. If workers could defer taxes by investing up to 10 percent of incomes in supplementary plans, the situation might be improved, and the declining savings rate might be raised some.

If such a plan were implemented, it might deprive the government of funds. Deprivation is no safeguard against excessive spending — the government spends anyway, running up deficits.

Deficits, especially when they follow a decade of deficits, are widely considered to be inflationary. Inflation last year was 13.3 percent, as measured by the Consumer Price Index.

The industry has therefore compromised:

It will push for tax breaks to those who contribute to supplementary pension plans, an industry spokesman said, but only when the federal government gets its deficits under control.

"And when will that be?" he was asked. There was a long pause.

As the insurance industry considered the question, the people at the National Association of Realtors found it difficult to decide whether existing home prices rose or fell in December. Inflation again.

If you have followed housing prices you might be aware that they grew enormously during the 1970s, causing analysts to say it was the best investment of the decade. Now it is "burdened."

The median sale price of the existing home — based on actual sales throughout the country — was $56,500 in December. That represented a gain of 11 per cent or $900. Or did it? It did in current dollars, but adjusted for inflation it was a decline of more than 2 percent.

That seeming gain but actual loss led Jack Carlson, executive vice president and chief economist to "stress that the housing industry is bearing more than its share of the inflation-fighting burden."

Other seemingly profitable industries have the same beef. While reporting record-high profits, in terms of current dollars, they are show big losses when those dollars are adjusted for inflation.

So bad has the distortion become that corporations this year must include the adjusted figures in their annual reports.

Thus we have hundreds of companies reporting great profits and huge losses in the very same report. No longer does one and one equal two. It might equal two or perhaps just zero or less.

Muniz May See Freedom Soon

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Former La Raza Unida party gubernatorial candidate Ramsey Muniz has been recommended for release on parole from federal prison late this year.

Two parole board examiners at the Federal Correctional Institute — where Muniz has been held the past year on a conviction for plotting to smuggle marijuana into the United States — recommended Wednesday that Muniz, a former Corpus Christi and Robstown lawyer, be released Dec. 22.

Muniz won the recommendation after a 40-minute hearing concerning his first possible chance to win parole.

Muniz, who went to prison in 1977, could be transferred to a minimum security facility in Texas by March and to a halfway house by June, said Ruben Bonilla, national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Bonilla, who appeared on behalf of Muniz, said after staying in the halfway house between June and December, Muniz would be freed Dec. 22. All of that is contingent on the regional parole board in Atlanta approving the decision reached Wednesday.

Debbie Barron of the parole board in Atlanta said Wednesday afternoon the board would act once it received the paperwork from the Memphis hearing.

Bonilla praised Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, for his part in helping Muniz.

"He was the one federal official who went to bat for Ramsey," Bonilla said of the conservative Republican. "All political considerations aside, Ramsey wanted it known he is grateful to the senator for his interests and his numerous inquiries into Ramsey's well being."

Bonilla said a final decision from Atlanta is expected within two to three weeks, adding that parole officials received an inordinate amount of letters supporting Muniz' early discharge.

"In the meantime we will begin efforts to transfer Ramsey from the medium security unit at Memphis to the minimum care unit at Seagoville," said Bonilla.

Muniz is in good health, Bonilla said.. "He looked very good. He surprised me with his physical fitness and strength. He has been jogging and is on a weight program."

Ex-Mortician Blasts Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Funeral directors learn how to manipulate grieving consumers to unnecessarily expensive bills, a Texas embalmer-turned-dentist has told a congressional panel.

Dr. James Reveley of San Antonio said Wednesday he once attended a one-month funeral management course where he was taught "a very subtle hard sell."

The techniques included lighting and arranging caskets to make the cheaper ones look less attractive.

"They keep the low-end units looking as unattractive as possible," Reveley, who now operates a no-frills funeral business as a sideline, said.

Reveley testified before the House commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations chaired by Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas. The House has taken a step that could prevent the Federal Trade Commission from enforcing its proposed rule on the funeral industry.

"The House voted to stop the FTC funeral rule without the benefit of any hearings into the problems of the consumer, the states or the FTC," Eckhardt said in a statement. "Aside from the merits of the rule, I think it is important to closely examine the kind of special interest lobbying that appears to go on behind the scene."

Reveley told congressmen how he was "dressed down" by funeral managers for not having a sales average that was high enough. He said he decided to become a dentist and worked his way through dental school as an embalmer because he could no longer tolerate the industry's practices.

"I do think the substantial majority of funeral directors need some sort of regulation, very much so," Reveley said. "I think that the majority of funeral directors either practice or condone the abuses butlined by the FTC."

The no-frills funeral that he offers with a plain, rope-handled pine box costs $335 for a simple cremation or $365 to prepare for a burial. Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., said the average funeral nationally costs $1,400.

The Texas Legislature passed a law in its last session to put consumers on the State Board of Morticians and establish a Bill of Rights for the bereaved.

Among its requirements are itemized bills and the display of lower priced caskets with a sign telling how many colors in which they are available.

Reveley contended that some funeral businesses are finding their way around the law by resorting to "pre-need" sales because the state board said the law only regulates sales "at need," or at the time of death.

"My next push in the state of Texas is to see that all that pre-need law is taken care of," he said.

Taxpayers May Cheat Selves If Not Alert

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many people may cheat themselves, and not the government, when they file their income taxes this year.

This is particularly true of low-income workers and senior citizens.

Many people still aren't aware of the "earned income credit," a cash payment of up to $500 that may be available, even if you had no taxes withheld in 1979.

To qualify, you must file jointly as a married couple and earn no more than $10,000.

All your income must come from wages, salaries, tips or anything else of value you received from your boss for actual services performed.

In response to double-digit inflation, Congress this year increased the credit from $400 to $500 and raised the income you can make to qualify from $8,000 to $10,000.

In addition, people who qualify for the credit now can get advances on the money from their employers. This change is designed to increase workers' take home pay.

In 1978, 4.9 million taxpayers claimed the credit, the Internal Revenue Service reported.

Senior citizens, meanwhile, are frequently not aware of the special tax credits they qualify for, as well as the earned income credit, the IRS cautions.

The "Tax Aide" program, run jointly by the American Association of Retired Persons and the National Retired Teachers Association, is designed to clear up some of the confusion.

It's a free counseling service available at more than 3,300 locations nationwide. The advice is provided by 8,800 retirees, trained by the IRS in areas of tax law that apply to people over 65.

The retirement groups estimate that counselors will help prepare about 800,000 returns this year.

For the locations of centers near you, write to: Tax Aide Program, Dept. NK, NRTA-AARP, 1909 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20049.

Even if you don't have to file a return, you should — if income tax was withheld from your paycheck. This is particularly true of part-time workers, such as senior citizens, students and housewives.

"If you want us to, we will figure your taxes for you," the IRS says. Its offer stands if you do not itemize and your income includes only salary, wages, tips, interest, dividends, pensions and annuities. You must file a 1979 return if:

—You are single and under 65, having at least $3,300 in income last year.

—You are 65 and over and had at least $4,300 in income.

—You are married, filing jointly, under age 65 and making at least $5,400.

—You are married, filing jointly, both 65 or over, with a combined income of $7,400 or more.

—You are a dependent and have dividends, interest or other unearned income of $1,000 or more.

—You are a qualifying widow or widower, under 65, making at least $4,400, with a dependent child, or you are over 65, earning at least $5,400.

—You are self-employed with net earnings of at least $400.

With divorce rates increasing rapidly, many taxpayers are now qualifying as head of household, which helps single people with children claim some of the tax breaks available to married couples filing jointly.

People legally separated or living apart may also qualify for this special tax rate. You have to pay more than half the cost of keeping up the home of your child.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Last Monday marked the official opening of the political campaign season—it was the filing deadline for all candidates seeking office.

Already the 1980 election year seems one destined to stand out in history. Determined to end Texas' tradition as a one-party state, Republicans have fielded candidates for as many offices as possible and party leaders act confident of gaining more seats in the Legislature and on state courts.

In no small way are Republican hopes resting on their governor's promise to call a special session of the Legislature at the "most inopportune time" for incumbent Democrats. Governor Clements has long promised to bring the lawmakers to Austin to tackle initiative and referendum, wire-tapping authority and tax relief.

Last week he partly fulfilled his promise by saying he will hold the special session in August at a specific date to be announced later.

Why August?

Clements said September bumps into too many deadlines before the Nov. 4 general election.

August is also the month the Democrats will hold their national convention, and the special session will surely disrupt their participation.

The Governor has come under hot criticism for his intentions of calling the session. Most Democrats are of the opinion Clements is trying to burn their party at taxpayers expense ($1 million, at least). There is no emergency need for the special session since the regular session would be only four months away, they believe, and Clements is simply trying to put the pressure on them shortly before the election.

Clements, of course, has his defense for spending that much tax money: he thinks he can force the Legislature to reduce taxes by an amount more than the special session will cost. His public opinion poll shows voters are split 50-50 on the necessity of a special session.

Clayton: "Not Necessary"

House Speaker Bill Clayton repeated his position last week: the added cost to the taxpayer will not be worth a special session. Legislators can consider Clement's three issues in the regular session beginning next January.

Slush Fund Allegations

Two weeks ago in Iowa, Texas Republican presidential candidate George Bush took his party's lead for the presidential nomination, at least partly on the strength of his clean image. Last week, amidst the skirmishes of politics, that image was attacked with newspaper reports Bush accepted and failed to report some $106,000 from a secret Nixon White House campaign fund.

Newly obtained records disclose Bush accepted the funds during his unsuccessful 1970 Senate race against Democrat Lloyd Bentsen. Bush declined to comment, but his 1980 campaign manager, James A. Baker III, said that former Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski had already looked into the allegation and given Bush "a clean bill of health." Jaworski last week validated Baker's statement, adding that campaign reporting requirements in 1970 were extremely lax.

Teachers Collective Bargaining

The state's largest teacher organization will seek passage of a collective bargaining bill that will give teachers the right to strike during labor disputes.

Texas State Teachers Association director Cecile Russell called the legislation one of their top priorities for 1981 session.

A similar bill, though weaker, died in committee during the 1979 session. The new bill will give teachers the right to select a labor organization to represent them in contract negotiations with school boards.

Clements promptly promised to veto the bill if it passed the Legislature.

Appointment In Line

State Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, may be nominated by Pres. Jimmy Carter as the new head of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. U.S. Atty. Gen. Benjamin Civiletti said he will urge the nomination of the son of a one-time illegal alien.

AG Briefs

In a legal opinion issued last week, Texas Atty. Gen. Mark White ruled a governmental body may not meet in closed session to discuss the employment of an independent contractor such as an engineering, architectural or consultant firm.

White also ruled the comptroller has the discretion to make payroll deductions from state employees' wages upon their written authorization.

Oily hair should be washed every two to three days; dry hair every five to six days.

Tax Audit Hits 1 Filer in 47

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tax audit. It has an ominous sound, but long odds.

In the past, the Internal Revenue Service says only about one taxpayer in 47 has been audited each year.

The IRS checks about 1 of every 66 people earning below $10,000 a year.

Middle-income taxpayers, however, have a 2.4 percent chance; people earning more than $50,000, an 11.4 percent chance.

A computer will decide who is investigated and who isn't, and more than likely it will be attracted to the most unusual deductions or the most significant tax changes from last year.

Generally, to protect yourself, keep tax records at least three years. That's the time in which the IRS must start its investigation.

Short of the shock from an audit is the embarrassment following a dumb mistake.

The IRS says the most frequent errors are: Forgetting to sign your form; failing to enclose the W-2 form or other statements detailing your wages and salary; and omitting your Social Security number.

To avoid mistakes and lessen the chances of an audit, make sure to report all income correctly and take only the deductions you can justify.

Here is a list of what income should be reported:

—Wages, salaries, bonuses, commissions, fees, tips, and unemployment benefits.

—Dividends, although up to $100 can be excluded for an individual, and up to $200 for a couple filing jointly.

—Earned income from sources outside the United States.

—Interest received on U.S. Savings Bonds, but not interest on state and municipal bonds.

—Profits, rents and royalties.

—Earnings and interest from savings and loan associations, mutual savings banks, credit unions and similar institutions.

—Income from pensions, annuities and endowments after deducting the contributions you made to your own pension fund.

—Alimony receipts and separate maintenance payments.

—The value of prizes and awards, plus gambling income.

—Refunds of state and local taxes if they were deducted in a prior year.

Major income items that aren't taxed include: Social Security benefits, welfare payments, some disability retirement payments and other benefits, workman's compensation benefits, child support, dividends on veterans' life insurance, and gifts, money or other property that you inherited.

There are several basic rules for which tax form to use.

You can file the 1040A short form if your total income is $20,000 or less as an individual or $40,000 or less as a couple filing jointly. In addition, your income cannot include items other than wages, salaries, tips and unemployment benefits. And you cannot earn more than $400 each in interest and dividends.

You must use the 1040 long form if you itemize deductions.

The IRS estimates that about 96 percent of all taxpayers will be able to figure their taxes by looking at tax tables in the booklet rather than having to do complex arithmetic.

That's a key reason that the number of people turning to professional tax preparers is down 20 percent in two years.

One rule that should come as no surprise: You must file your return no later than midnight, April 15.

If you encounter problems meeting the deadline, you can seek an extension by filling out Form 4868. Technically, a penalty equal to 0.5 percent on the tax due may be assessed for each month or part of a month that the return is overdue for a maximum of 25 percent.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Problem is fat, not water

DEAR DR. LAMB — In one of your columns you advised a weight reducer that the purpose of losing weight was to eliminate excess body fat and not the normal water in the body. But isn't it true that the body can have excess water and hence contribute to obesity? Or does the body automatically eliminate excess water? I ask this because in addition to exercise, I was thinking of taking steam baths to lose some weight.

DEAR READER — There are a lot of conditions that cause the body to retain excess water, but that's not obesity. Obesity refers to excess fat. Even a person who has heart failure may accumulate excess water. That's because the body retains too much sodium because of poor circulation and the body retains the water in response to the retained sodium salt.

You see the same thing in women just before their menstrual periods. That's because estrogen stimulates the body to retain salt and when you retain salt, you retain water.

The body has to have a certain amount of water to be in a good healthy state. If it loses this water it's dehydrated. This varies, but on the average between 50 and 70 percent of a person's your body weight is water. Men tend to have a higher percentage of body water than women.

If you lose this normal amount of water, which is vital to your basic metabolic balance, you're like a plant that hasn't been watered and you begin to wilt. In older people this can cause mental confusion. This can also occur in younger people, but older people are more susceptible to changes and their bodies are sometimes less able to cope with the abuses imposed upon them.

If you deplete the normal body water, it's not a healthy state and as quick as the body can, it will try to readjust to its normal healthy level. To use the plant analogy, if you let a plant dry out and then give it some water, it will absorb as much of it as it can until the plant becomes properly hydrated again. You can see it literally suck in the water and get rid of the wilted appearance.

Fat tissue actually contains very little water. Only about 15 percent of a pound of body fat is water. Compare this to a pound of lean muscle which is more than 70 percent water.

No, I'm afraid eliminating your normal water stores won't help relieve your obesity problem if you have one. I don't think that taking steam baths is a good way to try to get rid of the excess roll of fat that most overweight people have around the waist. That's fat, not water. The same is true of the excess fat around the hips and buttocks. Excess water tends to accumulate in the ankles and feet. It runs downhill.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, to give you a guide to a sensible balanced diet you can use to help you control your weight. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. The Health Letter I'm sending you advocates exercising regularly while dieting. That helps to avoid muscle loss, which occurs if you're on too strict a diet.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Polly Cramer

Gifts in matching wrap

DEAR POLLY — I would like to share a Pointer that proved very satisfactory this past Christmas. I have two pre-school age children. All the presents for the 4-year-old were wrapped in the same design paper and those for the 2-year-old were in a different but matching design paper. Instead of someone having to read tags for them they each recognized their gifts by the wrapping paper.

My husband's navy blue corduroys were machine washed and dried with bubble gum on them. It was not noticed until he was ready to wear them and he discovered white spots of gum that looked like bleach spots. I do not think ice will help this. Any suggestions? — MRS. D.L.

DEAR MRS. D.L. — Ice is probably your best bet. Do give it a try and then sponge spots with cleaning fluid. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — To keep pictures hanging straight on the wall I wrap a little adhesive tape around the hook and this keeps the wire from slipping. — IRENE

DEAR POLLY — A piece of food dropped on my dining room shag rug. It dried before I noticed it. When the sweeper failed to remove it I moistened a small cotton ball with cold water, put it on the spot and left it there for a couple of hours. This worked like a charm and I was able to remove the food without any pressure and without disturbing the rug fibers. Since then I have used this simple procedure on stubborn dried spills on my stove top and kitchen floor tile. Sure saves time and effort. — MARGE

DEAR POLLY — If you have a dog that stays outside all winter or is fed outside do not put his food or water in a metal dish. His tongue can stick to such a bowl and the skin be torn off. This will frighten him and he will think the food is hot and be afraid to eat it. Use a plastic or wood bowl, or milk carton. Also, if you put his water in a wooden bowl it does not seem to freeze as fast. — ELSIE
