Dukakis bills himself as man who can win

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Michael Dukakis, continuing his march toward the Democratic nomination with a lopsided win in the Oregon primary, touted himself as "a candidate who can win the presidency." Democratic rival Jesse Jackson, however, warned his rival not to count him out yet.

Vice President George Bush, who already has a mathematical lock on the Republican nomination, picked up all 32 delegates in Oregon. But Bush was getting less attention for winning another primary than for trailing Dukakis in a series of surveys.

And Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, who dropped out of the Republican race back in March, skimmed off nearly a fifth of the vote in Oregon. It doesn't do Dole any good at this point, but it points to weakness that could hurt Bush in November.

The primary season is now in its final phase, pointing toward the closing contests June 7 in California, New Jersey, New Mexico and Montana.

■ Relates stories — 3A

Jackson has vowed to make an all-out effort in California, which offers him a last chance to come out a winner before the Democratic convention in July. He headed to the state while the votes were being counted in Oregon, and vowed to press on.

"The support we're getting from the public is a mandate for change, and we will continue," he told supporters Tuesday night at a Hollywood hotel. "We will not surrender."

Dukakis, who was capturing 56 percent of the vote to Jackson's 38 percent in Oregon, issued a victory statement that looked to the coming primary contests — but that also tacitly assumed that he would be the one to face Bush in the fall.

"We will campaign hard for victories in California, New Jersey, Montana and New Mexico on June 7 and for the White House next fall," said the Massachusetts governor, who has won nine of the last 10 primary contests.

"Today the people of Oregon voted for change," he said. "They voted for a candidate who can win the presidency."

A pair of polls out today suggested Dukakis was widening his lead over Bush in a hypothetical matchup. A poll by the Los Angeles Times indicated that in California, Dukakis had a 17-point lead over the vice president. In that survey, Dukakis had 53 percent to Bush's 36 percent, with 11 percent undecided.

Couple jailed in Jackson plot

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A member of a white supremacist group and his wife are in jail on charges of conspiring to kill or harm Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson because they believed he was "getting too close to being president," the U.S. attorney's office said.

Federal agents quoted Londell Williams, 30, of Washington, Mo., as saying he was a member of several white supremacist groups.

His wife, Tammy, 26, was quoted as saying Jackson would be shot on June 12 or July 12.

The couple, arrested Friday, are being held without bond, said Jay Foushee of the Secret Service's St. Louis office. Foushee said the threats were made recently, but declined to provide any details.

The case will be presented to a grand jury, assistant U.S. Attorney David Rosen said Tuesday.

Jackson, campaigning in California on Tuesday, was asked about the arrests. "I'm going to keep this campaign focused on the issues, making America better, and not be ... distracted by the dream-busters," he said.

The Williamses were also accused in a criminal complaint with threatening a witness in the case and with possession of an unregistered firearm.

According to the criminal complaint filed in U.S. District Court, an unidentified person contacted the Franklin County sheriff's office earlier this month, claiming that the Williamses were conspiring to assassinate Jackson.

Chicago bank breaks employee's embezzlement scheme

CHICAGO (AP) — Officials at the nation's 10th-largest bank say they foiled one of the biggest "almost crimes" ever, an employee's attempt to embezzle $70 million through a series of computerized cash transfers.

First National Bank of Chicago announced Tuesday that the employee, whose name was not released, tried to steal the money through a sophisticated wire transfer scheme involving banks in New York and Chicago.

The Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Sun-Times, quoting unidentified sources, reported today the money ultimately was to be channeled to Vienna, Austria, where the worker had set up accounts. The newspapers said the suspect had worked at the bank six to eight years but was not a high-ranking official.

No loss is expected to the bank or its customers, the bank said.

The worker has been identified, but may not have acted alone, said bank spokesman Tony Zehnder. He refused to give details, saying the investigation had been turned over to the FBI. He would not say how the bank learned of the scheme.

FBI spokesman Jim Kuntzelman said his agency was studying the possibility that up to seven people were involved in the scheme, which affected the accounts of the New York-based financial firm Merrill Lynch & Co., Chicago-based United Airlines and Louisville, Ky.-based Brown-Forman Corp., the wine and spirits company.

No arrests were made and no charges were filed by Tuesday night, Kuntzelman said.

"It was really the efficiency and the soundness of our controls that allowed us to thwart this embezzlement," Zehnder said. "This has to be one of the biggest almost-crimes in the country. We're quite pleased that our system came through for us."

At many banks, money can be transfered to various accounts by computer. A person with access to certain accounts and computer codes could transfer by wire large sums of money from Chicago to banks in New York, and from there to international banks.

Merrill Lynch issued a statement saying it discovered Monday that $20 million was missing from its account and rumors of huge losses circulated on Wall Street, forcing First National to issue a statement on the discovery of the scheme.

United Airlines declined comment Tuesday, and officials of Brown-Forman could not be reached at company headquarters Tuesday night.

Neither Zehnder nor Merrill Lynch gave details of the fraudulent transfers. But the Tribune and Sun Times said the employee wired the funds to Citibank and Chase Manhattan Bank in New York, from which it was to be transferred to Vienna.

The newspapers said the employee used fake tape recordings of the voices of two Merrill Lynch officials who were authorized to approve wire transfers. One of the officials was in California at the time, the other in the hospital.

Zehnder said $50 million of the transferred money was back in Chicago, and the rest was expected back today.

Midland's May sales tax rebate up slightly

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

State Comptroller Bob Bullock remained optimistic this month after sending out state sales tax shares to cities and counties which were larger than last month's checks.

"The economy of Texas is recovering and the consumer confidence is reflected in the rebates going to local governments," Bullock said in releasing the data that showed Texas 1,041 cities and 81 counties were to receive $120 million from the local option sales taxes.

Midland's share of the state sales tax brought $807,506 to the city coffers this month, a figure 1 percent above last May's check of $799,382.

City Director of Finance Troy Gifford compared the growth rate with last year's pace, saying, "In general, the attitude in the state is improving. There certainly is a greater sense of stability in our economy."

A glance at year-to-date sales tax receipts for Midland show the city running 11.2 percent ahead of last year's sales pace, according to the Comptroller's report.

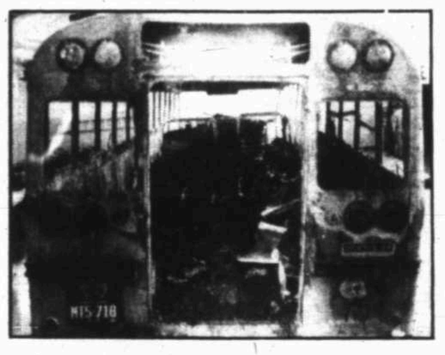

The city so far this fiscal year has collected almost $3.37 million as its sales tax share, compared to $3.03 million by May last year.

Midland County Auditor Floyd Jarnigan said the county's payment, which is 76 percent higher than last month, confirms there has been a "slight increase in economic activity in Midland."

Midland County received a total $445,829 in May sales tax receipts from the Comptroller's Office, compared to $253,119 last month. So far this year, the county has received about $883,655 since it began collecting a half-cent share on Jan. 1.

The money represents the city's 1-cent share of the 7.50-cent sales tax.

Identification of bodies makes church loss 'fresh'

RADCLIFF, Ky. (AP) — The names of the dead were known less than a day after a fiery bus crash killed 27 people, but official confirmation of the deaths "just brought it fresh again" to the victims' families, a minister says.

Hearses began removing the bodies Tuesday afternoon from a National Guard armory in Carrollton, 100 miles northeast of here, that served as a morgue.

There was "a lot of grief" inside Radcliff First Assembly of God church, where most of the victims' families gathered Tuesday morning to be told that the last of the burned bodies had been identified, said the Rev. Dan Mattingly, minister of Christian education at the church, which owned the bus.

"Some began to break out in tears and grief," Mattingly said. "They pretty well knew it, but to actually hear it once and for all, one time, 100 percent sure on the confirmations, it just hit again. It just brought it fresh again in their hearts."

The city of Radcliff scheduled a memorial service for Thursday evening at a high school football field.

Meanwhile, offers of money and donations of time have poured in for survivors and their families, hospital officials said.

Scores of people have called Humana Hospital-University of Louisville, 30 miles northeast of Radcliff, offering food, babysitting, and even rooms in their homes to families of hospitalized victims, said spokeswoman Taylor Rice.

Callers wishing to donate cash are being referred to one of four funds set up to aid the victims and their families, she said.

Bus driver's response questioned

CLEVELAND (AP) — A bus driver may have mistakenly pressed the accelerator rather than the brake in an accident that killed a teen-age passenger and injured 23 others, police said today.

"The passengers told us after the impact the bus accelerated," Patrolman Emil Cielec said of the accident late Tuesday night. "We feel she might have stepped on the accelerator instead of the brake."

Cielec said the crash occurred when a car tried to turn left in front of the bus. The bus struck the car, then lurched out of control, striking a tree, a utility pole and a fence before grazing a building, he said.

The bus driver, Audrey Simmons, 27, was hospitalized in fair condition with a broken leg. Cielec said she has been a bus driver about seven months.

The crash is still under investigation and no charges have been filed, Cielec said.

A 13-year-old boy on the Regional Transit Authority bus was killed when a pole from the fence pierced the boy's side, according to Cielec. He identified the boy as Bernard Murry of Cleveland. The boy was on the bus with his aunt, who was not injured.

Five people, including the bus driver, were admitted to area hospitals, but none were seriously injured. Eighteen others were released after treatment. Officials were unable to say how many people were on the bus.

The driver of the car was in the middle of three lanes on a one-way street when he tried to turn left, Cielec said.

"He was trying to make a left turn and was struck by the bus," Cielec said. "He said he never saw the bus."

Cielec said the utility pole struck by the bus fell on the driver's car, but the driver was not injured. He said it did not appear alcohol was involved, but an alcohol test was conducted.

877 vote absentee in five school runoffs

From Staff Reports

Tuesday was the last day in which voters could cast absentee ballots in Saturday's school district runoff election.

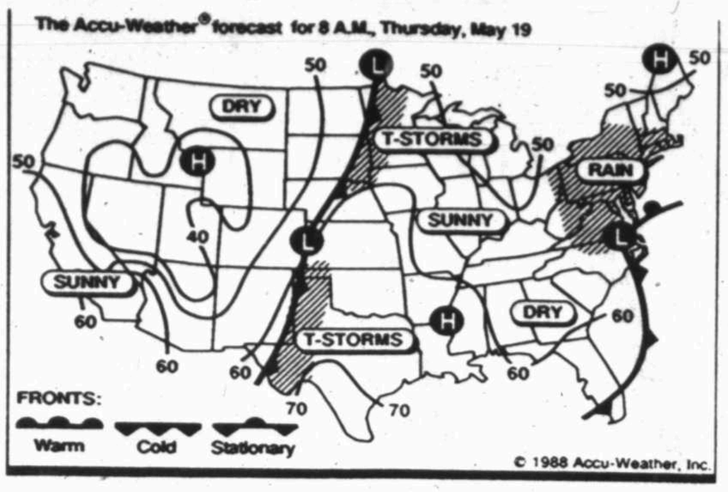

According the Midland County Election Administrator's Office, 877 total voters cast absentee ballots prior to Tuesday's deadline in five of the seven school district races.

Candidates facing runoffs in the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustee election are Clarence "Putty" Zachary and Adela Marmolejo in District 2; Ken Morrison and Don Aldridge in District 3; George Staley and Betsy Robinson in District 5; Bob Rich and Dianne Anderson in District 6; and John Kennedy and Ken Marks in District 7.

Voting hours Saturday will run from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. at various polling places citywide.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

Under cloudy skies, Midlanders can expect a 30 percent chance of rain and a few possibly severe storms, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low is expected to be in the low 60s with southeast winds at 10-20 m.p.h.

Cloudy skies also are expected Thursday with a continued 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. The high is expected in mid-80s. Southeast winds should blow at 10-20 m.p.h.

Tuesday's high of 91 was six degrees cooler than the record of 97 set for that date in 1978. The overnight low of 66 was 21 degrees warmer than the record of 45 set for that date in 1967 and again in 1986.

STATE

Scattered thunderstorms may reach severe levels across West Texas tonight, forecasters say.

The thunderstorms, being triggered by the combination of a low pressure system over the Trans-Pecos and high pressure across East Texas and an approaching storm system over northwest Mexico, began late Tuesday and were expected to continue through tonight.

The rest of the state was to have continued clear to partly cloudy skies and warm to hot temperatures.

Lows tonight will be in the in the 50s in the Panhandle and in the 60s over the rest of the state.

Highs Thursday will be mostly in the 80s and 90s in West Texas, ranging from the upper 70s in the Panhandle to near 102 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas, in the 90s in North Texas and in the 80s and 90s across most of South Texas except along the Rio Grande where readings will climb to near 100.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported on the eastern slopes of the mountains in West Texas and showers were reported during the predawn hours in the Panhandle.

Skies were cloudy over most of West Texas early today and clear to partly cloudy over the rest of the state.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s, ranging from the upper 50s in the mountains of Southwest Texas to the 70s along the coast and in extreme South Texas. Extremes ranged from 58 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 74 at both Laredo and Corpus Christi.

NATION

Thunderstorms boomed over the central High Plains today after unleashing a tornado and hail as big as golf balls in Nebraska, while rain fell from Florida to New England.

Strong thunderstorms developed in the Nebraska Panhandle as showers and thunderstorms continued over southern Nebraska and northern and western Kansas.

Showers were scattered over the southern Rockies and the northern High Plains.

Showers lingered from New England to Virginia, and showers and a few thunderstorms fell along the East Coast from North Carolina to northeast Florida. Cloudy skies and scattered showers dampened Washingon state and Oregon. Fair skies prevailed across the rest of the nation.

In Nebraska on Tuesday, the storms produced a tornado that touched down a mile or two southeast of Harrisburg in the Panhandle, but no damage was reported. Golf ball-size hail fell in Oconto in the central section of the state.

Winds gusted to 49 mph in Goodland in northwest Kansas. Thunderstorms dropped large hail on the Carolinas.

High-temperature records were set in seven Southern or Midwestern cities and tied in four.

It was 94 degrees in Texarkana, Ark., where the old record of 93 was set in 1913. Records were also set in New Orleans, Mobile, Ala.; Monroe, La.; Pensacola, Fla.; Rapid City, S.D.; and Fort Smith, Ark. Records were tied in Apalachicola, Fla.; Baton Rouge, La.; El Dorado, Ark.; and Lake Charles, La.

Today's forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms over central and southern Florida, from New England to the Middle Atlantic states and from the central Appalachians to the Carolinas; thunderstorms from the Dakotas and western portions of the central and southern Plains to the central and southern Rockies, Utah and parts of Arizona; and showers over parts of Idaho and the Pacific Northwest.

Baker comments on Noriega issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr. said today he is "reasonably hopeful" that the United States will succeed in removing Panamanian ruler Manuel Antonio Noriega from power.

Baker spoke with reporters one day after President Reagan said at a surprise news conference that he will not strike a deal that would "whitewash anyone" in Panama.

Both the president and his chief of staff declined to discuss reports that the United States has offered to drop drug trafficking charges against Noriega.

"The negotiations are underway," said Baker. "Our policy is that Noriega must go and indeed that remains our commitment."

He said he did not know how the negotiations would be affected by Tuesday's 86-10 vote in the Senate for a nonbinding resolution expressing opposition to any negotiations for a deal that would involve dropping the indictment.

"I understand the frustration that was expressed by the Senate and I am sympathetic to that," said Baker, a former Senate Republican leader.

"The fact remains that the administration has a firm, fixed policy that Noriega must go and we are working very hard to see that that happens. We're working very hard to see that that happens. I am reasonably hopeful that we'll get that result, but we don't have it yet."

"The idea of indicting the leaders of foreign governments is fairly new," Baker said. "It's not one of the traditional instruments of foreign policy. But it certainly is something that has had a concentrating effect on Noriega's mind, apparently, so by whatever means, we're going to use that to our advantage to try to implement administration policy, which is to see that Noriega leaves power, leaves the country, and paves the way for democratic rule in that nation."

Questions about Noriega and embattled Attorney General Edwin Meese III dominated Reagan's meeting with reporters Tuesday. Reagan also said no decisions were made at the White House on the basis of astrological advice to first lady Nancy Reagan.

When asked whether he believed in astrology himself, however, he paused and replied, "I don't guide my life by it, but I won't answer the question the other way because I don't know enough about it to say is there something to it or not."

Of Meese, the president said, "I think that there's been a wave, and for quite a long time ... in which accusation or allegation is taken to mean conviction. And there's been too much of that."

"I think that for him to step aside would be what he himself once said — that he would then live for the rest of his life under this cloud — with nothing that had ever been proven."

The Justice Department has been rocked in recent weeks by unrest and resignations stemming from criminal investigations of Meese's affairs.

On Panama, Reagan said much of what has been written about the negotiations had been "based on some kind of leaks or misinformation, because there are no facts to sustain it."

In refusing to discuss the negotiations, Reagan said, "It would be foolish to do so. Some things you have to keep to yourself when you're arguing with someone else."

Reagan also denied the administration knew long ago that Noriega was involved in drug trafficking and chose not to act on the knowledge.

"There had been some rumors ... but no one ever received or could get evidence to substantiate those rumors," the president said.

Reagan opened his news conference with a statement applauding the agreement to start Senate debate on the U.S.-Soviet intermediate-range arms treaty. He described the March trade figures, which showed a dramatic drop in the monthly deficit in the balance of exports and imports, as "the best news on this front since March of 1985."

Reagan's last regularly scheduled news conference was Feb. 24.

Dallas psychologist hopes to avoid giving deposition in Railey case

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas psychologist Lucy Papillon says she does not want to testify about her relationship with former Methodist minister Walker Railey because the publicity would damage her reputation.

A hearing was scheduled today on a request by Ms. Papillon that she not be required to give a deposition in a suit filed by the parents of Railey's comatose wife, Margaret "Peggy" Railey.

The former minister's wife has been comatose since April 1987 when she was nearly choked to death in the garage of her north Dallas home.

A default judgement last month resulted in a ruling that Railey, former minister of the First United Methodist Church of Dallas, was responsible for the attack on his wife. Railey, who now lives in California and has surrendered his credentials as a minister, declined to fight the civil suit.

The suit was filed by Billie Jo Nicolai, Mrs. Railey's mother. A jury trial is set for Oct. 3 to determine how much money in punitive and actual damaes should be awarded to Mrs. Railey's mother.

Judge John Whittington will consider Ms. Papillon's motion at a hearing today.

The psychologist had been subpoenaed to appear for depositions, at which she would testify and produce any documents relating to Railey.

Ms. Papillon said in a motion filed Tuesday that because the issue of liability already has been resolved, Nicolai's attorney could use her testimony to support a new argument for damages, meaning the deposition would be no more than a "fishing expedition."

The woman, who testified to a Dallas County grand jury in July that she and Railey were romantically involved, says in the motion that she "has been subjected to much undue, harsh and adverse publicity in the past."

She claims that she and family members "have been constantly harassed by members of the news media for many months."

"Additional publicity will exacerbate damage already done to her personal and professional reputation and disrupt and injure her ability to earn a living," she said in the motion.

A.W. "Bill" Arnold, the lawyer representing Peggy Railey and Billie Jo Nicolai, said Tuesday night that a jury has the right to consider "all the underlying facts or circumstances" surrounding the assault.

Mexicans continue to enter U.S.

COMBES, Texas (AP) — Mexicans continue to head north in search of work, apparently hoping U.S. employers will ignore a new law banning them from hiring illegal aliens, authorities say.

"I think we're going to show them we're serious about enforcing employer sanctions," Border Patrol agent Jerry Hicks said Tuesday after authorities arrested 42 people stowed aboard a freight train.

One of those arrested, Tomas Vega of San Luis Potosi, Mexico, said he got on the northbound railroad grain car without knowing what city he would reach.

"I came to find work wherever it (the train) stops," the 21-year-old undocumented alien said, adding he could not find a job in Mexico.

Vega and about 16 others, including a man carrying a crying 3-year-old boy, appeared stunned Tuesday as they climbed down a ladder from the grain car. Their trip was cut short 30 miles north of the Rio Grande.

The 42 aliens found scattered along the Houston-bound train are among the thousands of people officials say are continuing to flock to this country illegally every week.

Employer sanctions under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 go into full effect June 1.

Hicks, the deputy chief patrol agent with the Border Patrol's McAllen Sector, said the numbers have been increasing lately, and agents who stopped the train Tuesday had expected to find even more aliens in the train's 113 cars.

Immigration officials say lack of employment in Mexico is prompting the aliens to take their chances on whether employers will flout the new law.

A recent five-day sweep of trains netted more than 100 aliens per day, officials said, including a group suffering from dehydration in a sealed boxcar.

"The situation in Mexico is terrible, and people are caught in a situation where their country has nothing to offer them," said Telma Longoria, director of Catholic Social Services for the church's Brownsville Diocese.

She said the diocese is seeing more Central Americans than ever at its Casa Oscar Romero shelter east of Brownsville, which averages 150-200 aliens at any time.

With the weather warming up, immigration officials said they are checking the trains more often in order to prevent a repeat of the tragedy in Sierra Blanca last summer, when 18 aliens suffocated in a sealed boxcar in the west Texas heat.

On hand to observe Tuesday morning's pre-dawn train operation were Jim Olech, the Border Patrol chief in Washington, and Henry Oncken, the U.S. attorney for the Southern District of Texas.

Parents charged in boy's imprisonment in closet

HOUSTON (AP) — The mother and father of a 5-year-old boy allegedly beaten and kept in a closet were charged with one count each of injury to a child, police said.

The child, identified as Jesus Vasquez, told police he had been subjected to punishment because he could not control his bowel movements, police said Tuesday.

"He went into great detail as far as how his parents had beaten him, tied him up, left him in a closet and tried to drown him in both the toilet and tub in the past," said Houston Police Department Sgt. William Staney.

The young Vasquez had been with his family in Houston since November, after spending time with relatives in Mexico, Staney said.

After being alerted by concerned neighbors, police visited the family's Houston apartment on Friday, taking the boy and three other children into custody and arresting the parents, Staney said.

At the time he was found, the child had numerous injuries to his head and buttocks, apparently from beatings, said Houston Police Department spokesman Al Baker.

Blanca Vasquez and her husband, Guilebaldo Vasquez, both 34, were being held in lieu of $20,000 bond apiece, Baker said.

The Times poll questioned 2,202 Californians by telephone over six days, ending Monday night, with a margin of error of 3 percentage points.

Another poll — a nationwide Gallup survey commissioned by the Boston Globe and Boston stations WEII and WCVB — suggested Dukakis was ahead of Bush 54 percent to 38 percent. The Gallup survey was based on telephone interviews conducted May 13-15 with 1,204 registered voters, with a sampling error of 3 percentage points.

Bush, asked about a poll from a day earlier by CBS News and The New York Times, which also showed Dukakis with a double-digit lead, acknowledged that the numbers weren't encouraging.

"No, they weren't," he said. But the vice president quickly pointed to surveys taken just before the New Hampshire primary — which he won handily — that suggested he was well behind. And he said he hasn't really gone head-to-head with his Democratic rival yet, although he and Dukakis have frequently exchanged barbs.

"The thing hasn't really started in terms of Democrats versus Republicans and we haven't gotten any of that in focus and it won't be until after the convention," Bush said as he campaigned in California.

The vice president, who has always made much of his role as President Reagan's loyal second, conceded that controversies in the administration may be hurting him.

He has been peppered with questions on the campaign trail about administration dealings with Panamanian leader Manuel Antonio Noriega, under indictment on drug charges, and about Attorney General Edwin Meese III, who has refused to step down although he is beset by legal troubles.

Dukakis has been saying he doesn't attach much significance to surveys focusing on a contest still months away. But he couldn't conceal a certain amount of glee.

"All I can say is I think something is cooking out there," the governor said Tuesday.

Dukakis had spent the primary day at home in Massachusetts while Jackson, who had campaigned heavily in Oregon, scoured the state for a few more votes.

The Massachusetts governor was heading to New Jersey for campaign appearances later today.

Dukakis has an overwhelming lead in the delegate race — he has 1,642 to Jackson's 974, by the latest AP count — but is still several hundred short of the 2,081 needed to nominate. The Massachusetts governor was taking 27 of the delegates in Oregon to Jackson's 18.

In Oregon, with about 91 percent of the expected vote counted, it was 187,079, or 56 percent for Dukakis, to 128,014, or 38 percent for Jackson.

THREAT

The information was relayed to the Secret Service and agents met with the informant, who agreed to wear a hidden microphone and meet again May 10 with Londell Williams, this time with law enforcement officials listening in, the complaint said.

According to the complaint, Londell Williams said he was a member of The Order and other white supremacist groups, and that Jackson should be killed.

The complaint said the informant later received a death threat from the Williamses for informing on them.

At a hearing Tuesday, Secret Service agent J. Christopher Murphy testified that the informant led sheriff's deputies to a wooded area in Franklin County where they found an AR-15 Colt semi-automatic rifle and a bag the informant said belonged to the Williamses.

The complaint said the bag contained a postcard addressed to Londell Williams and maps, one of which had his fingerprints. The rifle had been reported stolen from Springfield, Mo., according to the agent.

Murphy said that during the recorded conversation with the informant, Williams said he wanted to get the rifle back because it had been issued to him by the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord, a white supremacists' group. Williams also said the organization wanted it returned because it had been used to kill a law enforcement officer, Murphy said.

Murphy said that the informant brought up the assassination plot during the conversation and Williams said "the CSA was planning to assassinate candidate Jackson on the Fourth of July."

Murphy said that after the Williamses were arrested, Londell Williams told authorities about the individual who provided him with the rifle and also made statements about a plan to kill Jackson. Murphy also said Tammy Williams had been present for two conversations in which the threats to Jackson had been discussed.

Secret Service agent David Northcutt testified that he had interviewed Ms. Williams after her arrest.

BUS

"Thanks to all the doctors, thanks to all the nurses, thanks to everyone who cares. Thanks for all the love and thanks for all the prayers," he said through his mother.

The bus collided head-on Saturday night with a pickup truck being driven north in the southbound lanes of Interstate 71 near Carrollton. The fuel tank on the bus ruptured and burst into flames, authorities said.

The bus was returning from a day at an amusement park north of Cincinnati. Autopsies showed the 27 died of smoke inhalation.

Fourteen of the bus riders remained hospitalized today with burns, including eight in critical condition.

Local, state and federal authorities were continuing the investigation, but few details of their work were released. State Police Capt. Neal Brittain said investigators believed they knew how the pickup truck driver, Larry W. Mahoney, came to be driving on the wrong side of I-71, but would not elaborate.

Mahoney, 34, of Worthville was charged Monday with 27 counts of murder. Tests showed his blood contained nearly 2½ times the amount of alcohol needed to be declared intoxicated, authorities said. He was in fair condition at the prison unit of Humana Hospital-University of Louisville, Ms. Rice said.

The first victim to be taken from the armory Tuesday was April Mills, 14, daughter of an Army sergeant, who was to be buried in Fernandina Beach, Fla. Another victim was to be buried in Tyler, Texas. The process continued throughout the afternoon.

At least eight were to be buried in this town of 14,000 people. Tiny yellow flags marked their plots in North Hardin Memorial Gardens cemetery near the church.

The cemetery adjoins North Hardin High School, which three of the victims attended, and was less than 2 miles from Radcliff Middle School, which lost 16 pupils in the crash.

TAX

Money the city and county received represents taxes collected by monthly filers in March and quarterly filers for the first quarter and reported to the Comptroller by April 21.

With receipts this month of $750,904, Odessa's fiscal-year-to-date sales tax revenues reached $2.9 million, a figure 16.3 percent ahead of last year's pace.

Andrew's May receipts of $66,416 brought year-to-date revenues to $243,139, 10.2 percent ahead of the same figure recorded last May.

Big Spring city administrators received a $183,626 check, bringing total payments for the year-to-date to $623,670, 0.41 percent behind last year.

In Stanton, a May Comptroller's check of $7,893 contributed to a total $25,102 year-to-date payment figure, 18.8 percent ahead of last year's pace.

Public seems to be bearish on Bush

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

An Analysis

WASHINGTON — Even good economic news doesn't seem to cheer people up these days, and that could prove to be bad news for Vice President George Bush.

The latest example came Tuesday when the stock market declined sharply — after receiving news of a substantial improvement in the latest trade figures.

That bearish response to good tidings was enough to make Bush wonder what it will take to get a favorable political bounce out of an expanding economy.

"We have an economic situation any incumbent ought to just dream about having," said Eddie Mahe, a Republican political consultant not involved in any presidential campaign.

But at the same time, he said, national polls are recording "a sense of unease, a sense that it's time for a change."

Consider the trade figures. The government reported that in March, the trade deficit dropped more than $4 billion as exports increased by 23 percent.

When trade figures a month earlier showed an increase in the deficit, the market dropped 101 points — demonstrating the readiness of investors to believe the worst. It was a disappointing deficit report that triggered the 500-point market drop last October.

Yet, the reaction on Wall Street to good news on the trade front was a drop of 21 points in the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks.

The same day the new trade figures came out, a CBS News-New York Times poll said Democrat Michael Dukakis was leading Bush by 10 points in a national survey of 1,056 registered voters. A poll two months earlier had the two candidates in a dead heat with Bush favored by 46 percent and Dukakis by 45 percent.

It certainly wasn't the economy that went sour for Bush in the period between those surveys.

Consider the recent statistics:

— The unemployment rate in April was 5.4 percent, the lowest since June 1974.

— Business sales climbed 1.9 percent in March and construction spending climbed 1.5 percent, the biggest increases in both areas in a year.

— Even with recent increases in energy prices, the inflation rate remains below 5 percent.

Bush tried to brush off the latest poll by comparing it to surveys that showed him running behind in New Hampshire just before last winter's Republican primary.

"I was 8 points back and I won by 10," he told reporters in California. "They were off by 18 points."

"I don't worry about it. The election is 5½ months away," he said.

But, of course, he worries about such statistics. Any politician would.

One theory common among Republican and Democratic political analysts is that the administration's economic story is being obscured by the attention received by the trials and tribulations of Attorney General Edwin Meese III and by public concern over whether Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega will be let off the hook on drug charges.

When Bush was asked if he thought the Meese and Noriega affairs were contributing to his negative ratings in the polls, the vice president replied, "You may have put your finger on something there."

But before going too far with the poll figures, it must be said that such numbers six months before the election are not reliable indicators of how people will vote in November.

They are just a warning to Bush that things aren't going his way at this early stage of the contest.

They also reflect that because the race for the Republican presidential nomination ended early, Dukakis has been much more in the public eye for the past six weeks.

Week after week, the Massachusetts governor is portrayed as the victor over Jesse Jackson in yet another Democratic primary.

As one GOP analyst, speaking on condition of anonymity, put it, "Every time Dukakis wins another primary, he grows an inch."

At the same time, Bush is coasting unopposed through those same primaries, his victories getting only perfunctory notice from a public knowing the suspense went out of the GOP race on Super Tuesday.

Democratic pollster Peter Hart said Bush is suffering because on the Republican side "there wasn't enough of a campaign, so there wasn't enough of a dialogue." He said voters never reached the point of getting a clear view of Bush.

That problem should be dissipated when the battle is truly joined in the fall, when voters get a chance to compare Bush and Dukakis as the men between whom they must choose when they vote for president. Dissipated, that is, if Bush finally escapes Reagan's shadow and is able to convince voters that he is strong enough to lead.

As for the bearish attitude of the country, analysts in both major parties use the same terms.

Richard Wirthlin, Reagan's pollster, has said that his surveys show Bush is behind at this point and that they also show most Americans believe the country is headed in the wrong direction.

"There's a lot of apprehension," said Hart. A common attitude, he said, is: "Today's OK, but I'm worried about tomorrow."

New Jersey looks for respect during primary season

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the final push of the primary season, it's California that seems to get all the attention. But New Jersey is also looking for a little respect.

The two states hold primaries on the same day — June 7 — along with Montana and New Mexico.

California, with its prize of 314 delegates and its importance in the general election, naturally finds its way into the campaign spotlight.

Democrat Jesse Jackson, for one, is throwing nearly all of his remaining resources, both time and money, into his California campaign.

Vice President George Bush, the GOP nominee-to-be, is campaigning as intensely as if he still had active primary opponents and needed California's 175 Republican delegates. Bush is clearly looking to the fall campaign, in which California's 47 electoral votes could be pivotal.

But New Jersey wants a share of the limelight too.

Though offering only about a third of the delegates at stake in California, New Jersey is still the nation's eighth-largest primary, with 109 Democratic delegates and 64 Republican delegates at stake.

The candidates can't really afford to turn their their backs on those kind of numbers, despite the headaches of simultaneously running campaigns on both sides of the country.

Even if jet lag is the price to be paid, they're taking the New Jersey primary seriously.

Both Jackson and Democratic front-runner Michael Dukakis were in New Jersey Sunday, and Jackson will be back next week.

Dukakis was scheduled to campaign in New Jersey Wednesday and Thursday before heading to Los Angeles.

Newark Mayor Sharpe James, chairman of the Jackson campaign in New Jersey, says even if the candidate can't be in two places at once, he'll make his presence felt in New Jersey.

"He's everywhere you have to go to get votes," said James.

Observers are already predicting Jackson will do well in New Jersey's cities and among minority voters, but Dukakis seen as likely to win the state by a sizable margin.

Rep. James Florio of New Jersey, a Dukakis backer, says even though the Massachusetts governor is favored in the state, he doesn't intend to get complacent and slight New Jersey.

"The combination of New Jersey and California are very important," Florio said. Aides to Dukakis are hoping the combination of contests on June 7 will give their candidate the number of delegates he needs to clinch the Democratic nomination.

In past elections, New Jersey has demonstrated some clout.

In 1984, Walter Mondale racked up a comfortable win over Gary Hart and Jackson in New Jersey, a victory that did much to nail down the nomination. The same day, Hart scored a 2-1 triumph over Mondale in California, but it was too little, too late.

Still, some New Jersey politicians long for a place in the sun — without having to compete with California.

New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, a Republican, has attempted unsucessfully to have the date of the state's primary moved up.

"I worry that New Jersey is getting lost in the presidential primary shuffle," Kean said in a speech to the state Legislature.

Nunn pick of Southerners

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia is a solid choice of southern Democratic party leaders as a running mate for likely presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, according to interviews by The Charlotte Observer.

The party officials, in 14 Southern and border states, also say a ticket including Jesse Jackson would hurt Dukakis in their states, although most say promising Jackson a key but lesser in a Democratic administration would help.

The 11 Southern states and three border states — Kentucky, Missouri and West Virginia — offer 164 electoral votes, 30 percent of the total.

Senate's Pentagon bill held up over anti-drug rider

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate tried again today to untie a legislative knot that has prevented it from passing a Pentagon budget bill because of an unrelated amendment allowing the death penalty for some drug dealers.

"We're trying to work out some type of agreement, but we don't have one yet," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va. "I don't know when it will be done."

Byrd and other senators were seeking a compromise that would permit approval of the bill, which authorizes Pentagon spending of $299.5 billion in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The fight involves an amendment that would let dealers convicted of killing someone to be sentenced to death.

Opponents threatened a filibuster against the proposal after they threatened to kill it.

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., chief author of the amendment, has refused to remove it from the Pentagon bill unless he receives assurances from Democratic leaders that it will be returned to the Senate floor later with the promise of a certain vote.

"We've been trying to get a vote on this for years," D'Amato said Tuesday.

Three anti-drug proposals have already been attached to the bill, including one that would increase the military's involvement in the effort to halt illegal drug trafficking.

"We've got to catch them first, and then we can take care of the penalties. This bill, with the changes we've made, would help us catch them. Let us go ahead," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee.

In his appeal to D'Amato, Nunn noted D'Amato was also a major sponsor of the amendment ordering the military to help catch drug traffickers.

The Senate voted easy approval Tuesday of a pair of amendments expressing displeasure with reports that Reagan is negotiating with Panama's military ruler, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Noriega has been indicted on drug charges in Florida, but he has refused to quit. U.S. economic sanctions have thus far been ineffective in forcing him out and there are reports the administration is considering dropping the charges in return for Noriega stepping down.

The Senate first voted 95-0 approval of an amendment by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., which provides that no U.S. aid be sent to Panama until Noriega leaves power and until Reagan certifies that no Soviet or Cuban troops are in the Central American nation.

Then the Senate passed, 86-10, a resolution offered by Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas that put the Senate on record as opposing any deal in which U.S. drug-trafficking charges would be dropped.

Senate passage will send the measure to a conference committee to be reconciled with the separate Pentagon budget bill passed a week ago by the House.

That bill also includes an anti-drug provision, stiffer than the Senate proposal, which orders Reagan to have the military essentially seal off U.S. borders against drug trafficking.

Other differences between the bills include:

STAR WARS — The Senate measure proposed $4.6 billion for Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, while the House voted $3.5 billion. Reagan had sought $4.8 billion. The most likely compromise would grant about $4.1 billion, which would be an increase over the current SDI budget of $3.9 billion.

PAY RAISE — The Senate approved Reagan's request for a 4.3 percent average pay hike for the nation's 2.1 million uniformed military personnel, while the House voted for a 4 percent increase.

ARMS CONTROL — Both bills ban any SDI tests that would violate the existing, "narrow" interpretation of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty. But the House measure contains two other restrictions, including a ban on spending for any weapons that violate numerical restrictions on various categories of weapons in the unratified 1979 SALT II treaty, and a ban on all but the smallest tests of U.S. nuclear weapons.

BASE CLOSINGS — The Senate bill creates a 15-member Pentagon commission to study the nation's 3,600 military installations and recommend by Dec. 31 which ones can be closed. No such provision is part of the House bill, although that chamber will consider the base-closing idea in a separate bill.

Reagan waived advisers' doubts about SDI shield

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's decision to pursue an ambitious space shield against nuclear weapons came despite his own top advisers' belief that the Star Wars system wouldn't work, says former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane.

McFarlane, giving his first public account of the origins of Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, told a congressional committee Tuesday that the president apparently came up with the idea on his own against the advice of McFarlane and other top military officials.

The idea that any technological system "could so devalue the nuclear threat" from additional and more accurate Soviet intercontinental missiles as to produce "a no-nuclear world...is infeasible," he told the House Armed Services Committee.

But McFarlane said the idea already has served the purpose he originally saw for it — forcing the Soviets to reconsider their offensive missile buildup and to add to the pressures that brought perestroika, Mikhail S. Gorbachev's restructuring of the Soviet economy.

McFarlane later told a reporter he had chosen to speak out on the subject after remaining silent for five years because "I've become more despairing about the responsiveness of government to people, and it's not going to get better until we put aside the notion that the American people are too dumb to understand."

He said he feels "guilty as a member of a community...that has not been very candid with the American people about their safety."

McFarlane said he directed the military Joint Chiefs of Staff in late 1982 to develop the idea of using U.S. technological superiority for some kind of anti-missile defense. The idea was "to demonstrate to the Soviet Union that we intended to redirect our investment strategy to an area where we had the comparative advantage," he said.

The military chiefs came up with a proposal for a limited, ground-based system, McFarlane said, but Reagan turned that limited concept into a much more ambitious system which McFarlane had recommended against.

He said the president had been thoroughly briefed on the problems of such a system: the risks of technical failure, the suspicions that would be aroused among allies that the United States was seeking only its own security, Soviet suspicions of U.S. preparation for a first nuclear strike and the "fiscal extravagance" involved.

"My approach was one...based on a rather sober, conservative judgment about technological risk, fiscal realities and traditional allied strategy," he said in a brief interview. "I was paid to deal in the real world. Presidents are paid to inspire, to lead, to have a vision that goes beyond the status quo."

When Reagan announced his idea for a space-based missile shield in a March 1983 speech, members of the military establishment, including then-Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, were flabbergasted because it so differed from anything previously discussed.

McFarlane, who now is at work on a book while at Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies, said the original idea for a defense system came in late 1982 from Adm. James Watkins, then chief of Naval operations.

"The president never directed me to develop an SDI program," McFarlane said. "I never heard from anyone (in the White House) the guidance to do this," although he was aware Reagan had some interest in anti-ballistic missile defense dating from before his 1980 election.

In late 1982, the administration had lost several battles in Congress over what kind of basing mode to use in deploying the MX missile and was concerned that the United States was losing ground to the Soviets in offensive weapons, he said.

Adm. John M. Poindexter, then a National Security Council deputy, came to him with Watkins' idea, and McFarlane told the Joint Chiefs to develop the idea further, he said. The chiefs met several times in January 1983, then at a Feb. 11 meeting summarized their findings in a meeting with Reagan.

"The president interrupted, and said, 'Are you telling me that you believe as a body that we should consider whether defense could make a greater contribution (to the strategic balance)?' And each, in turn, answered yes," McFarlane recounted.

"But the military was talking about missiles," McFarlane said.

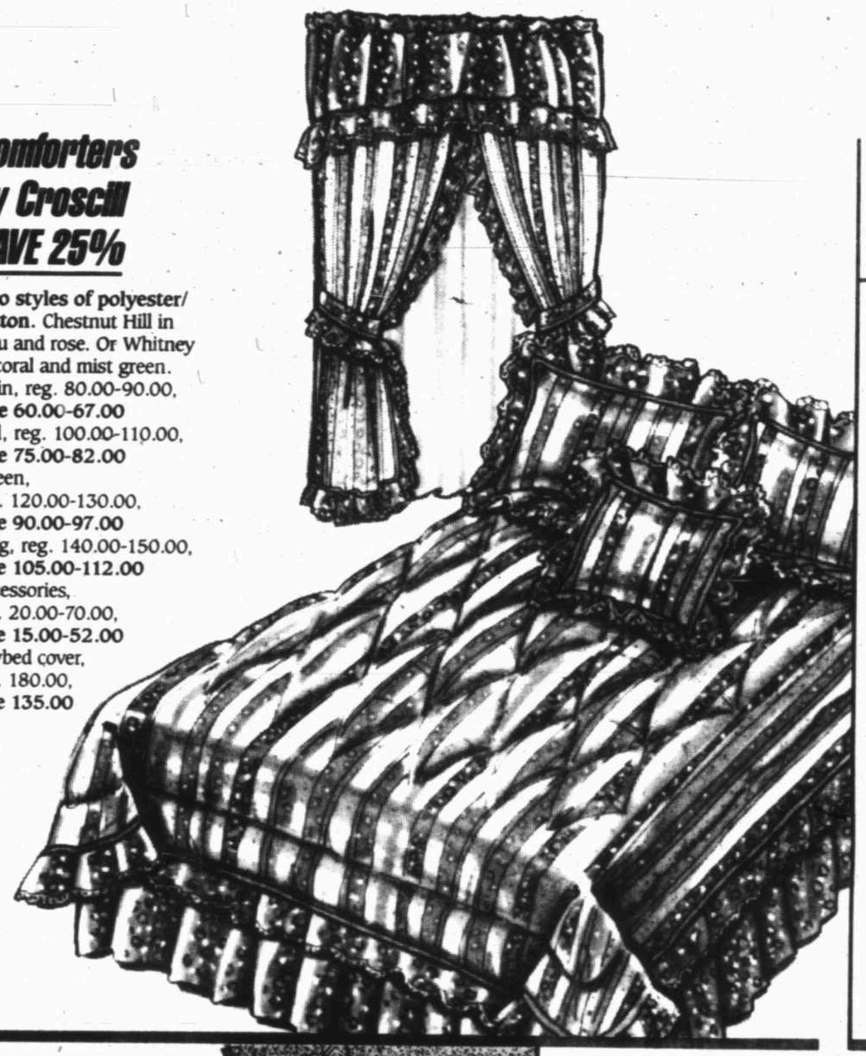

"How did that get changed into an Astrodome to protect the population?" asked committee chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis.

"Basically, the president wanted to change it, Mr. Chairman," McFarlane answered.

Texas crime victim reclaims his life in wheelchair

CLUTE, Texas (AP) — Laurin "Spud" Ivy Jr. lived 40 years of his life as many others have. He was a Freeport Facts delivery boy, served in the U.S. Navy, then worked as a painter in the Brazosport area where he grew up.

But his everyday lifestyle ended one night six years ago when he was robbed of $30 and shot in the neck with a .22-caliber pistol in the parking lot of a Houston painters' union hall.

"I gave him my billfold, and then he shot me," Ivy says simply, describing in few words the crime that left him paralyzed from the shoulders down. The thief was never caught.

What followed was the beginning of the rest of Ivy's life: weeks in intensive care at Ben Taub Hospital, weeks at the Texas Institute for Rehabilitation, then the long trip home to take up residence at Woodlake Nursing Home.

For the first year he was deeply depressed and rarely left his bed, even though he had a wheelchair and access to people trained to help him. But his self-imposed isolation ended when Sharon Seifert took over as administrator at Woodlake and insisted that Ivy stop wasting his life.

"Sharon came here and saw I was in bed and had a fit," Ivy says fondly, grinning as he remembers her common-sense method of motivating him to move.

When he refused to get up, she assigned him a roommate who had problems with bladder and bowel control, and the occasional odor of accidents finally drove the quadriplegic out of bed and into the wheelchair.

At first, he only went to the nurses' station for a few minutes, returning to sit in his room. Before long, he was going to the lobby. And then a Woodlake employee, Iraida "Yayi" Gonzales, invited him to go with her to the store. He rode in his wheelchair as she walked beside him.

Soon, he was going out alone.

"It was scary at first," the 46-year-old Freeport native says. "But people are really nice. They're nicer than you think they are. I've had people stop and get out of their cars to help me."

A friend, Mac McCollister, gave Ivy the headlights and some of the other things mounted on the wheelchair. A red reflector hangs from the back. There's a horn, an umbrella and a radio, which isn't working at the moment.

The battery-powered wheelchair has trouble getting over railroad tracks, and once Ivy stopped too close to the sloping side of a ditch and rolled into it, unable to back out.

It was almost dark, but passers-by saw his lights and came to help. Still, he says he wasn't especially worried.

"I always tell someone where I'm going and when I'm going to leave, so they know when to expect me," he says. Waiting calmly in a ditch for help to come would require patience, and that's something Ivy has plenty of.

The divorced father of two admits that before his accident, he wouldn't have gone near a nursing home, but after he was shot he chose to go there despite his mixed feelings about the decision.

"One person can't take care of me, it ties them down too much," he says. "This way is better. It's no problem here; I can do what I want to. If I want to go downtown, I go downtown. I've even been to Lake Jackson in this chair."

He has plenty of relatives in the area and a good many friends who come by to visit or to invite Ivy to go places — he's been to parties, barbecues, rodeos and a variety of other events.

"My family about drove me crazy when I first came here," he says. "Some of them came by two or three times a day. I told them, 'Hey, I didn't see you this much before, there's no need to do it now.'"

He goes out to eat from time to time at Cooker's Restaurant, where Pete and Norma Atkinson help him strap on a special device for feeding himself.

"They're really good to me," he notes. "If I can't get over there, sometimes they bring the food over here."

He wonders why anyone would want to write a story about him, and says he's just like anyone else would be in his position.

"I don't see that I'm a lot different than anybody else," he says. "I get to feeling bad sometimes, but heck, I'm not dead. I can still talk and go. I could be a whole lot worse off, and there's just no point worrying about it.

"I lived for 40 years one way, and I've had six years this way," he adds.

Auction is where the action is

LONE OAK, Texas (AP) — A junk sale is a salvage auction. And don't you forget it.

The salvage auction is a happy conglomeration of rustic, rural Texas folk and a miscellaneous assortment of parts and wholes better known as junk.

When rust meets mouth in Lone Oak, there is often an auctioneer singing a "gimmee-eee, gimme-e-e" song to a happy bunch of buyers.

This scene occurs every Thursday night at the Lone Oak auction run by Milton Sasser and his wife, Denae.

Although the "gimmee-e-e-e" song starts at 7 p.m., interested souls start arriving hours early.

As buyers unload boxes of collectibles in the back of the downtown building, sellers enter the front, jockeying for the best seats on the odd assortment of raggedy couches and kitchen tables that Aunt Mabel most likely sat on 50 years ago.

A concession stand appears immediately on the right and is run by Janice Rogers and her niece, Amy Savannah Tucker.

"Sometimes we make more money here at the concession than the auctioneers do," Ms. Rogers says.

Sellers line up at the "control" table at the left of the door. Denae Sasser collects names that will be drawn just before 7 p.m. to determine the selling positions.

"The best positions are usually two through five for the sellers," explains auctioneer Sasser. "It takes a while to get everyone worked up, but then we really start to roll."

Buyers also register at the table, receiving a number on which their bill for the night will be tallied.

Seven o'clock arrives and the event begins. Sasser sits on a high table at the rear of the long, high-ceilinged room and the melody starts.

All bids must start at one dollar. Prices go up in increments of 25 cents as one more buyer expresses some casual interest in a particular item.

"One dollar, gimmee, gimmee 25, gimmee, gimmee one dollar; gimme, gimmee 25," wails Sasser.

A buyer scratches her nose.

"Twenty-five; gimmee, gimme 50; gimme, gimme 25," and so goes the song for any item of interest.

Sometimes an item attracts no interested parties on its first showing.

If repeated pleadings don't bring out a bid from the crowd of 100 or so, a desperate seller who doesn't want to cart the item home may throw in a box of other junk or some totally unrelated items to generate some interest. Then buyers bid on the whole lot.

One way to unload miscellaneous items that would probably not bring a bid on their own is to sell pasteboard boxes of junk. A dollar or so brings the pot luck buyer a grab bag of goods.

"It's a lot of fun to take pot luck," says one of the buyers. "You get the box brought back to you and you get to rifle through to see what you got stuck with. Sometimes there are some real goodies inside."

During the conversation, the buyer finds a rusted back scratcher, an antique thermometer, half a deck of cards.

Jim Nall, owner of the building and one of the "holder-uppers," hoists an old thermos. He rolls it around above his head, then says, "It's got a small crack, won't hurt a thing."

Later, one seller finds that various assortments of dishes and china go best as "choice" items.

For instance, an antique saucer and dish are offered in this fashion. The buyers bid until the price reaches its highest amount, then the winning buyer gets to pick the item he or she wants.

Often, the remaining item is offered to anyone else at the same price.

A different version of pot luck is pig-in-a-poke. While pot luck box offering are often held up for all to see as the bidding starts, a pig-in-a-poke is a closed box. The bidder takes a chance.

Then there is pig-in-a-poke with choice. One seller holds up two small blue boxes.

No one bids for a long period. Then a jokester inquires, "Is there a skillsaw in them little boxes?"

Everyone laughs.

As the evening progresses and the hour approaches 10 p.m., Sasser takes his sawed off broomhandle and starts rapping hard on the table to wake everyone up.

As various electronic and electrical items appear on the block, an extension cord is plugged in, the machine is run for 10 seconds and turned off.

Nall, or his cohorts, yell "It works! It works!"

Midlander cited for his service

Midlander Ed Vogler is the type of man who sees a potential problem and strikes out to avert it. He's also the type of individual who sees an opportunity and pursues it. And he has shown he can do both — successfully.

Vogler has been commended by the Midland City Council and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm for his efforts in favor of Stacy Dam & Reservoir and Midland International Airport.

Vogler was one of those watching when the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service attempted to have the Colorado River Municipal Water District create habitats for the Concho River water snake to protect the species. But Vogler was able to show the wildlife service that the snake actually is plentiful and was not threatened by the construction of Stacy Dam. Eventually, his work led to deletion of most of the $3.7 million that had been earmarked by the CRMWD for protection of the snake.

That was a noteworthy instance of getting involved in a project that eventually will benefit literally hundreds of thousands of West Texans. But Vogler's other accomplishment also is worthy of comment.

As chairman of Midland's Airport Planning and Development Advisory Board, Vogler was active in gaining Port-of-Entry status for Midland International Airport and an impending Foreign Trade Zone at the airport. Those designations will be vital to Midland in years to come as trade, and particularly foreign trade, become increasingly important to this region.

Too often, many West Texans who have the opportunity to take steps that will improve the quality of life for all the people of this area fail to do so. That becomes a tragedy, then, not only for the ones who had a chance to make life better for those in this area but also for all the ones who would have benefitted from the action.

Ed Vogler didn't fail to take positive, forthright action when he saw he could make a difference — and as a result Midland, and the rest of West Texas, will reap the rewards in years to come. We join others in saying to Vogler, "Well done."

LETTERS

Children aren't animals

This letter is in reference to the article in the May 8th newspaper concerning the "irresponsible" AIDS curriculum to be used in the Midland Independent School District health classes.

I am so very sorry to hear such "well-educated" people infer that my children are animals. It is such a shame Mr. Langdon and Dr. Hall have never experienced the joy of training up a child in the way he should go. My job of training is not finished yet, but it is irresponsible of these two gentlemen to infer that my sons are at the mercy of hormones and will react as mere animals.

Again, my sympathies to these men who have never experienced the incredible capabilities of a child, pre-teen, or teen who has been given solid ground to stand on and values to trust and believe.

The teaching of tried and true values will save our community a great deal of heartache, not to mention the deadly consequences that will be avoided.

Kennedy 'outstanding'

We believe John Kennedy will be an excellent school board member. He has an impressive record as a leader and a volunteer in our community. His educational background is outstanding.

Even more impressive is that John really cares about our educational system. John wants to be involved and be a voice in the future of Midland's schools. We feel he is fair, open-minded and will make responsible decisions.

We are convinced that Midland needs two equal high schools. John is committed to ensuring that our high schools are equal and pledges to work with parents, teachers and administrators to make all our schools the best.

Rodney and Linda Satterwhite

Re-elect Mrs. Robinson

I am very concerned with the drug use in our schools. Our board member, Betsy Robinson, has done so much to make the Midland schools "drug free." I would like to see Mrs. Robinson re-elected because of the good job she has done. No one else seems to want to admit that we have a drug problem in the schools, much less do anything about it.

Drugs are a concern of everyone, rich or poor. We all know families that have been hurt because one or more of their children have used drugs. I urge the voters of Midland to elect Mrs. Betsy Robinson to another term on the school board.

Jane W. Harmon
Midland

Facts 'misrepresented'

Do the voters need representation or misrepresentation on the school board? One of the District 5 candidates is distributing cards that state "With four school age children, George Staley has a real stake in our schools." Most people might think that the words "our schools" means Midland Independent School District schools. The facts are otherwise.

George has two children in a private school in north Midland. I have nothing against private schools, their students or the parents who choose them over public schools. However, I do have doubts about politicians who mislead the voters. I prefer one who leads them.

Bobbie Moore
Midland

EDITOR'S NOTE: George Staley confirmed he has two children in private schools in Midland, but noted he also has two in public schools here.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, May 18, the 139th day of 1988. There are 227 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 18, 1980, the Mount St. Helens volcano in Washington state exploded. The blast took 1,300 feet off the top of the mountain, left 57 people dead or missing, devastated 150 square miles of forest and blew an ash cloud around the world.

On this date:

In 1642, the Canadian city of Montreal was founded.

In 1804, the French Senate proclaimed Napoleon Bonaparte emperor.

In 1860, the Republican Party convention in Chicago nominated Abraham Lincoln for president.

In 1910, Halley's Comet, as seen from Earth, moved across the sun.

In 1911, composer Gustav Mahler died in Vienna, Austria. His last word: "Mozart."

In 1917, Congress passed the Selective Service Act, authorizing draft registration for men between ages 21 and 30.

Eyewitness details Nicholson murder

WASHINGTON — A U.S. Army major, shot by a Soviet sentry in East Germany and left to die, lived long enough to speak to his driver. "Jess, I've been shot," Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson said to Sgt. Jessie Schatz. Then, while Nicholson lay dying on the ground, the sentry held Schatz at gunpoint and wouldn't let him help.

Jack Anderson

Three years after the 1985 murder, the Army has released to us the record of its investigation of Nicholson's death.

The United States protested the murder, but never got so much as an apology from the Soviets for their trigger-happy sentry. Secretary of Defense Frank Carlucci on March 16 asked the Soviets once again to apologize. He made the request to Soviet Defense Minister Gen. Dimitri Yazov in the Soviet Embassy in Bern, Switzerland. So far, there has been no response.

We obtained the first person accounts of the event after more than a year of pressing the Army for the information. Each account makes it clear that the Soviets were callous and abusive after the shooting, like blustering bullies trying to cover their crime.

The most dramatic account came from Schatz, the only American eyewitness to the murder. He gave his version to Army intelligence and investigating officers three days after the shooting.

The pair had driven to Ludwigslust, East Germany, on March 24, 1985, to inspect a Soviet tank shed. Their job with the liaison team was sanctioned espionage allowed under an agreement with the Soviets. The United States can observe certain Soviet military facilities in East Germany and the Soviets are allowed to do the same at U.S. facilities in West Germany.

Nicholson got out of the car and took pictures while Schatz kept watch, standing up through the sun roof of the car. After they had been there for 25 minutes, a young Soviet sentry stepped out of a forest about 150 yards away. The sentry raised his rifle and without warning fired three shots at them.

During the debriefing by Army investigators, Schatz closed his eyes and mentally paced the sequence of events from the time he first saw the Soviet soldier until Nicholson, mortally wounded, spoke to him. It took 17 seconds.

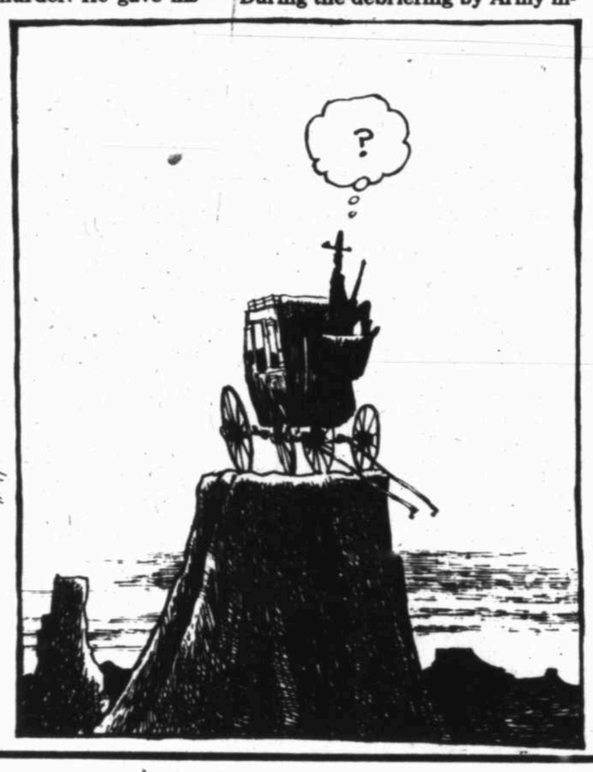

The guard stepped out of the woods and aimed his rifle, Schatz told investigators. "I turned around and yelled at Major Nicholson (who was) behind me... I've never been shot at before in my life. I have no idea how it's supposed to sound or if you're supposed to feel it before, like they say in the movies. I just know that when I saw the guard, I immediately turned around and at the same time yelled, 'Sir, get in the car.' And ... while I'm saying that, something just whooshed right by my head. I mean, I couldn't see it, I just heard it."

Schatz said he unlocked Nicholson's door and started to back up, assuming the major was running for the car. "I think I was already moving backward when I heard the other two shots," Schatz said. "Then I heard him scream." He turned and saw Nicholson lying on the ground near the car. "He looked up at me and said, 'Jess, I've been shot.' Then his head fell to the ground."

Schatz reached behind the seat of his car for a first aid kit. When he looked up, the Soviet sentry was beside the car, his rifle ready. Schatz said he got out of the car and faced the sentry. "He was screaming at me and I didn't understand what he was saying. I wanted to make clear to him that I wanted to give first aid to Maj. Nicholson, so I pointed to the cross on the first aid kit. ... He just kept on hollering. I just kind of looked at him for a second. Then I took a step toward Major Nicholson and started to bend down and he raised his weapon up like that and came closer and pointed it right at my head. At that point, I got back in the car."

Kitty pushing Glenn for Dukakis VP choice

WASHINGTON — The major source of Glenn-for-vice-president talk in the Dukakis-for-president campaign is the governor's wife, Kitty.

Mrs. Dukakis, intensely liberal and deeply involved in her husband's political fortunes, spearheads Democratic activists who want a running mate no more conservative than Glenn. While the former astronaut and Marine fighter pilot is culturally conservative, his voting record is overwhelmingly liberal.

Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Brountas has not begun his formal survey of vice-presidential prospects, and the candidate himself has not yet become engaged. When they do, they will hear criticism of Glenn as a weak campaigner still burdened by debt from his disastrous 1984 presidential campaign.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

OLLIE CAMPAIGNS

Oliver North will make his debut as a partisan politician June 1 when he addresses a fund-raiser at the Spruce Goose in Long Beach, Calif., for ex-Reagan speech writer Dana Rohrbacher's uphill Republican congressional campaign.

Rohrbacher, one of the last California true-believers to leave the Reagan White House, must corral conservative voters to have any chance in the June 7 Republican primary. On June 2, the indicted North will speak for ex-White House associate counsel Chris Cox, running in another contested GOP primary in the adjoining congressional district.

A footnote: Right-wing interest in North challenging Democratic ex-Gov. Chuck Robb for the Senate from Virginia is strictly local. National conservative leaders confide that even if North were freed to run by a presidential pardon, they would not want him to oppose Robb — who is not only unbeatable but a conservative on national security questions.

CABINET QUARREL

Sharp disagreement has broken out between Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci and Commerce Secretary C. William Verity over how much the U.S. should help Mikhail Gorbachev reform the all but bankrupt Soviet economy.

Publicly, President Reagan's two Cabinet officers have limited their argument to polite differences over the huge ($2 billion) West German commercial loan to the Kremlin. Verity has refused to criticize it in any way; Carlucci claims its real purpose is to build up Soviet military power.

Privately, the Pentagon claims Verity is angling to push Reagan into major trade concessions at the Moscow summit. Verity is backed by Secretary of State George Shultz, but Carlucci's worry over the widening stream of Western financial help to Moscow is shared by the CIA and the national security bureaucracy. As of today, Reagan lines up with Carlucci.

WALL STREET GOPers

Wall Streeter Lawrence Kudlow, right-hand man to OMB Director David Stockman early in the Reagan administration, is laying plans with other concerned businessmen to try to take over the collapsed New York State Republican Party from the professional politicians.

Now a senior executive at the Bear Stearns brokerage house in Manhattan, Kudlow argued the press of business commitments when (like many New York Republicans) he turned down pleas to run against Democratic Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan this year. But he wants to bid for the state GOP chairmanship, now held by Westchester County Republican Leader Anthony J. Colavita.

Regular Republicans will fight the businessmen, challenging their party credentials. They note Kudlow was a Democrat as recently as 1976, when he supported Moynihan's first-term bid for the Senate.

WARNING BUSH

A quiet warning of election-day disaster in California has been sent to George Bush by Sen. Pete Wilson: If the vice president does not come out against off-shore oil drilling along the California coast, both the prospective presidential nominee and Wilson's own re-election are doomed.

Wilson has told Bush the off-shore drilling issue cuts across party, geographic, age and income lines in California. In the words of a Wilson aide, it is not "feel-good politics," but an issue that could gut the entire Republican ticket.

That puts Bush, the former Texas oilman, in a political vise. Off-shore drilling is a staple of the Texas economy. But Wilson insists the vice president must either come out strongly against it or find a credible hedge for his position.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak are columnists for North America Syndicate.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Americans need to keep eye on convention

WASHINGTON — Are you looking forward to the summit? When that question is asked of Georgi Arbatov, the Soviet propagandist, he sighs and substitutes a less enthusiastic verb: "We're waiting for the summit."

William Safire

He strikes that no-big-deal pose for a purpose. The impression he wants to leave is that the Reagan-Gorbachev meeting in Moscow is of no overriding importance to the Kremlin. What will be, will be; if no new strategic treaty, perhaps an outline of a treaty.

Arbatov is an accurate purveyor of the party line, and the opposite of what he would have us believe is invariably true. On that theory of consistent prevarication, we can deduce that the Russians are eager for — even anxious about — agreements at the summit conference.

What makes this summit so special to them?

First, it is the overtur to the much more important event in Moscow next month, the Communist Party conference. The superpower meeting was set for the beginning of June not merely because Nancy Reagan's Friend found the stars in favorable alignment, but because Raisa Gorbachev's husband needs a surge of popularity to help him carry the day at the subsequent Kremlin showdown.

Talk about the world turned upside down: we all know what will happen at the Democratic and Republican Party Conventions, but we don't know what will happen at the Communist Party convention. The rubber stamp is on the other foot.

Mr. Gorbachev, recognizing the inability of the Communist system to maintain superpower status into the next century, has patched together a coalition of the underperked to disentrench the Party nomenklatura.

These newly correlated anti-bureaucracy forces include the Andropov KGB; the technology-minded faction in the army; the intelligentsia, which has long resented the Party privilegentsia and has been entranced by glasnost; the outsiders that Lenin liked to call "the useful idiots of the West," and — of all people — selected representatives of the Soviet peoples, many of whom are now startled to find their letters being printed in newspapers blasting recalcitrant Party members.

"You wanted us to become more pluralistic," smiles Arbatov, the new democrat. "Now we are."

The Party membership is fighting back, which is what makes June's Party conference less predictable than before. My guess is that Mr. Gorbachev will be allowed to do the dirty work and then, some time later, a party-mollifying replacement will be chosen to carry out much of his perestroika.

The second reason this Reagan visit is so important to the Gorbachevites: The new regime is desperate for Western help. It seems to be on the way. West Germans are shelling out billions in financing, our secretary of commerce blessed the dispatch of a planeload of 400 U.S. businessmen to Moscow to speed Soviet recovery, and ex-CIA men Arthur Macy Cox and William Colby wooed Arbatov with a dismaying display of self-flagellation and moral equivalency.

Far more prudent is the advice from Lt. Gen. William Odom, the Brzezinskian strategist soon to step down from leadership of the National Security Agency: "We should applaud perestroika but not finance it."

Secretary of State Shultz is closing his eyes to the weakness revealed by the new thinking's need to revile past dogma. He still speaks of "15 percent to 17 percent" of the Soviet GNP spent on arms, a figure that many embarrassed CIA analysts are already jacking upward in light of Soviet admissions of no growth in the 80s. Moscow's arms budget, not including the cost of empire, is closer to 25 percent — sustainable only by great consumer hardship — which should be central to our summit negotiating strategy.

For Americans, on the eve of our news-free Conventions, the central line of questioning should concern itself with the real Topic A: With Soviet economic vulnerability on parade, is it in America's national interest to bail out the failing Soviet system — to help Mr. Gorbachev succeed in bringing about autocratic rule with a human face? Would they become "like us" — or regain the strength to resume subversion? Would trade and lessened pressure dull the desire for a market system that breeds individual freedom?

Like Gorbachev, we should negotiate at the summit with one eye on his party conference. We should let him strut about like a statesman if he will stop arms shipments to Iran and begin to reverse Soviet imperialism in Eastern Europe, Africa, the Caribbean and the Far East. Linkage lives — that would be a summit message to look forward to.

Commander says sailors didn't die in vain

AP Laserphoto

Elizabeth Ann Erwin, sister of Steven T. Erwin, who died in the Iraqi attack on the USS Stark in the Persian Gulf one year ago, is comforted by a friend during a memorial service Tuesday at Mayport, Fla.

MAYPORT NAVAL STATION, Fla. (AP) — Events in the Persian Gulf have shown that the 37 sailors killed there a year ago on the USS Stark did not die in vain, the commander of the frigate's home port said at a memorial service.

Capt. John B. Mitchell Jr., commander of the Mayport Naval Station, told 140 relatives who attended the dockside anniversary service Tuesday that the reason for the observance was engraved on the stone and bronze monument next to him: "You will never be forgotten..."

Mitchell also quoted the commanding officer of another Navy ship recently damaged by a mine in the Persian Gulf.

"The superb crew of USS Stark taught us the essence of bravery, professionalism and persistence," Mitchell quoted Cmdr. Paul X. Rinn, the skipper of the USS Samuel B. Roberts, as saying. "Their sacrifice...gave us an example to follow. Their loss is without a doubt the predominant factor responsible for our survival."

One parent at the memorial service, Rodney Erwin, recalled tearfully how much his son loved boats. Another, Karen Welch, held her head up, smiled and said proudly, "My son is still as close to me now as he was before he went off to sea."

Erwin of Troy, Mich., lost his 22-year-old son, Seaman Steven T. Erwin, in the attack by an Iraqi warplane in the Persian Gulf on May 17, 1987. Mrs. Welch, from Flint, Mich., lost her 20-year-old son, Petty Officer Kelly R. Quick.

Following the service, many of the relatives boarded the Stark's sister ship, USS Antrim, for a 5-mile voyage out to the Atlantic to drop a symbolic wreath in the ocean.

Hugging each other and crying, the relatives of the dead sailors each dropped two yellow roses in the sea before returning to port.

Similar observances were held in Pascagoula, Miss., where the Stark is undergoing a $100 million overhaul; in Washington; in the Persian Gulf and aboard many Navy ships and installations around the world.

Except for the shipboard ceremonies that followed the memorial services, there were few tears. Flags on the base and aboard ship flew at half-mast, and the echo of taps wafted far out at sea following a 21-gun salute by an honor guard.

Seaman John K. Lampkin, 22, sat during the services with eight members of the family of Seaman Vincent Ulmer, another of the Stark's victims.

"We were best friends. Played basketball together. Joined the Navy together. Came here together," said Lampkin, who is a crewman aboard the USS Gallery, the same type of ship as the Stark.

Lampkin said he returned from the Persian Gulf in March and was due to return soon.

"It's very scary. I still worry about it," he said.

Chief Petty Officer Lawrence H. Barrow, the Stark's operations chief, was one of two surviving Stark crewmen chosen to commit the memorial wreath to the sea.

"I was a little apprehensive about this (ceremony) at first. I had a lot of anxiety," said Barrow. "But I think it's been beneficial for all. I know I feel better, remembering them."

Gorbachev may offer European troop cutback

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials say Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev may withdraw 50,000 to 100,000 troops from Eastern Europe this year in a bid to win support for a new round of East-West negotiations on conventional forces.

A unilateral Soviet withdrawal of that scale would have "little impact strategically" said a U.S official. But the political payoff could be immense in Western Europe, where polls show great enthusiasm for Gorbachev's foreign and domestic policies.

U.S. officials trying to anticipate Gorbachev's summit strategy have also detected hints that he will suggest a fifth summit meeting before Reagan leaves office in eight months. The projected sites are Vienna or Budapest.

Another summit would give the two sides more time to work on a treaty to cut their strategic nuclear weapon arsenals by 30 to 50 percent.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz acknowledged after making final summit preparations last week in Geneva with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze that "it is now clear there is no way these questions can be shaped up in treaty form in time for the summit" in Moscow May 29-June 2.

The two sides, however, may use the Moscow summit to sign one "protocol" of the proposed Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, a provision under which each side would notify the other of the time, place and intended target of any planned missile tests, including those from submarines, said one U.S. official.

Because no major agreements are to be signed at the summit, U.S. officials who spoke only on condition of anonymity said they foresee it as an event to consolidate improvements in U.S.-Soviet relations since Gorbachev took office in 1985 and began the summit meetings.

At the same time, U.S. officials were preparing for possible surprises.

At Reykjavik in 1986, Gorbachev seized the initiative with sweeping proposals to slash nuclear weapons.

This time, some U.S. officials said, Gorbachev may propose a 25 percent reduction in ground forces in Europe and opening negotiations in Vienna in late fall.

Pentagon and other estimates of NATO and Warsaw Pact troop strengths vary widely — from a 900,000-man edge for the East to a 200,000 Western edge.

The Warsaw Pact has a decided lead in tanks and artillery. The Pentagon estimates the Soviet-led alliance has 52,000 tanks compared to 20,000 in NATO, and 43,000 artillery pieces compared to NATO's 18,000.

The Soviets keep 380,000 of their armored and motorized ground troops at a high state of readiness in East Germany.

High school students rap out history of civil rights

ATLANTA (AP) — The "Civil Rights Rap," a six-minute rap and video excursion into the civil rights movement, makes the history lesson a whole new song and dance.

The video, starring 30 high school students from Massachusetts and aimed at a young audience, covers some of the major events of the civil rights movement, setting to rap prose the stories of the Montgomery bus boycott, the Supreme Court decision which ended school segregation and the 1960s sit-ins.

The video, to be shown at the 12th Atlanta Film & Video Festival, which opens tonight, begins with the rappers from Lincoln-Sudbury Regional High School moonwalking to a driving beat and offering historical raps such as this verse about the 1956 bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala., which propelled the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. to national prominence:

"This short rap tells of Rosa Parks,
"Who caused some friction, set off some sparks.
"Rosa wasn't gonna moan, she wasn't gonna fuss.
"She just sat down at the front of the bus.
"Cops they came and threw her off the line.
"Rosa was told that she had to pay a fine.
"Blacks all said, 'We refuse to ride.'
"They had their dignity, they had their pride.
"It took a while but after a time,
"Blacks up front was no longer a crime."

The "Civil Rights Rap" is the product of Rapping Up History, a nonprofit project devoted to developing innovative educational material to make history more attractive to a new generation.

The video shows the young actors portraying the events in the song, and includes shots of the rappers performing and documentary footage from the 1963 March on Washington. It ends with King's "I Have A Dream" speech.

History teacher Thom Thacker conceived the idea out of his desire to involve students in learning, said Richard DeLaura, a friend of Thacker who put the teacher's words to music and produced the song.

NATION IN BRIEF

Restaurant workers killed

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A management trainee and his wife were shot to death in the head and another man was critically wounded during a possible robbery at a Domino's Pizza, Police Chief James Gabbard said today.

The trainee, Bill Edwards, 27, and his wife, Frances, 29, a driver for the chain, were killed late Tuesday night, Gabbard said.

Matthew Boornoosh, another Domino's employee, and the couple were each shot in the head in a back room, he said, adding that none of the victims was bound.

The Edwards were the parents of a 2-year-old daughter, Tiffany, who was home with a baby sitter when they were killed.

"We're investigating robbery as the probable motive, but we don't have any conclusive evidence at this time," Gabbard said. Police have no witnesses, he added.

Burglary tools made in class

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — One teen-ager pleaded guilty and four others pleaded innocent to charges they broke into at least 33 vehicles in what police called a high school burglary ring operation.

Police said the students, using tools they made in shop class, sold the stereos, radar detectors and other items they pilfered.

Authorities contend the boys used tools made in metal shop or bent coat hangers to break into the vehicles in Peoria. They were arrested after an anonymous tip to police.

The stolen items were sold to fellow students and other residents in Metamora, a community of about 2,500 people 17 miles northeast of here, police said.

Impeachment considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Judiciary panel reluctantly opened impeachment hearings today with its chairman saying misconduct charges against federal Judge Alcee L. Hastings of Miami may be racially and politically motivated.

Hastings, the first black federal judge in Florida, is accused of lying under oath and manufacturing evidence for his bribery trial in 1983.

'Custody' center to boost Odessa economy

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Placing a "return to custody" center in Odessa for 250 parole violators will provide "an economic boost" for the city if the state can find the $2 million it needs to build and run it, Mayor Don Carter says.

Working to relieve overcrowded county jails, the Board of Pardons and Paroles Tuesday approved a plan to open four return to custody centers around the state with capacity for 850 parole violators.

"It will allow this agency to remove parole and mandatory supervision violators — who have no new felony charges pending — from county jails," board spokeswoman Barbara Slaughter said of the plan, which will cost about $9 million in fiscal 1989. The Criminal Justice Policy Council has identified about 1,400 parole violators currently serving terms in county jails.

The approved plan falls far short of the 2,000 return-to-custody beds Gov. Bill Clements' Criminal Justice Summit recommended in February. Ms. Slaughter said the board stretched its budget as far as it could, and then some, to finance the 850 beds approved in Tuesday's emergency meeting.

"You have to start somewhere to alleviate the overcrowding," said Rider Scott, general counsel to Clements. "It is not all of the answer, but it's beginning to be."

The plan calls for the board to contract for the construction and operation of 250-bed centers in Odessa and Cleveland north of Houston. Both of those are scheduled for opening in December, but Ms. Slaughter said the board has no funds for the $2 million Odessa site.

The board will contract to convert and operate a 150-bed center in Houston now operated by Corrections Corp. of America for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service by October 1. It is looking for a site in San Antonio to house 200 parole violators and open by September 1 but lacks the $2.1 million for that project as well.

The board also approved adding 100 half-way house beds in Houston for about $1 million, which is in the budget.

Persons who commit technical violations of their parole rules, who commit misdemeanor crimes and who are suspected but not convicted of felonies would be eligible for the centers, Ms. Slaughter said. "It could be a lot of people who have tested positive for drugs," she added.

Odessa Mayor Carter said the city has worked for about two years to attract some sort of minimum-security facility. "It's an economic boost as far as we're concerned," he said.

Carter said few residents have expressed concern about the safety of such a project. "We're not interested in a maximum-security (prison) that has violent offenders," he said. "That's not our game."

Ms. Slaughter said the board has $5 million of the $9 million total cost available in unspent funds from its fiscal 1988 budget. It will ask Clements' office for help in finding the remaining $4 million for the Odessa and San Antonio sites.

The board's staff recommended two centers that could house a total of 300 violators in Rosenberg south of Houston and in Edinburg in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. The board directed the staff to look instead near the Dallas-Fort Worth area, where county jails are particularly overcrowded with parole violators.

Testimony in rape case continues

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Testimony continued today in the trial of a 28-year-old Midland man who was found "conked out" on the couch of an elderly woman who had been raped minutes before.

A neighbor of the 67-year-old victim today told jurors she came to his house after the alleged attack. The neighbor, Donald Ray Clater, 36, said he and another man watched the residence until police arrived a few minutes later.

The victim told Clater that a man had just raped her and was still inside her house, he testified.

Prosecutors contend the accused, Albert McAfee, forced his way into the woman's home last December, raped her twice and then immediately fell asleep on a couch, oblivious to the police that surrounded him minutes later and awakened him, according to testimony the first day of the trial Tuesday.

McAfee, who watched the proceedings dressed in a gray suit and white tie, is being tried on charges of aggravated sexual assault and burglary before a five-man, seven woman jury in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District Court.

The first witness was the victim, who told prosecutor Robin Sams she had lived in her small southeast Midland house since 1946. She has lived alone in the house since 1963, when her husband died, she testified.

The woman's eyes widened behind thick glasses and she raised her hand to her cheek when Ms. Sams asked her to tell what happened the night of the attack.

She was watching television in her front room when she heard a noise at the front door, she told prosecutor Robin Sams.

"He pushed the door open....caught ahold of me," she said, describing her attacker only as a black man wearing a rag over his face. The man ordered her to turn off the lamp and TV set, then at knifepoint ordered her to undress.

The woman was attacked twice before the man left her alone, she testified.

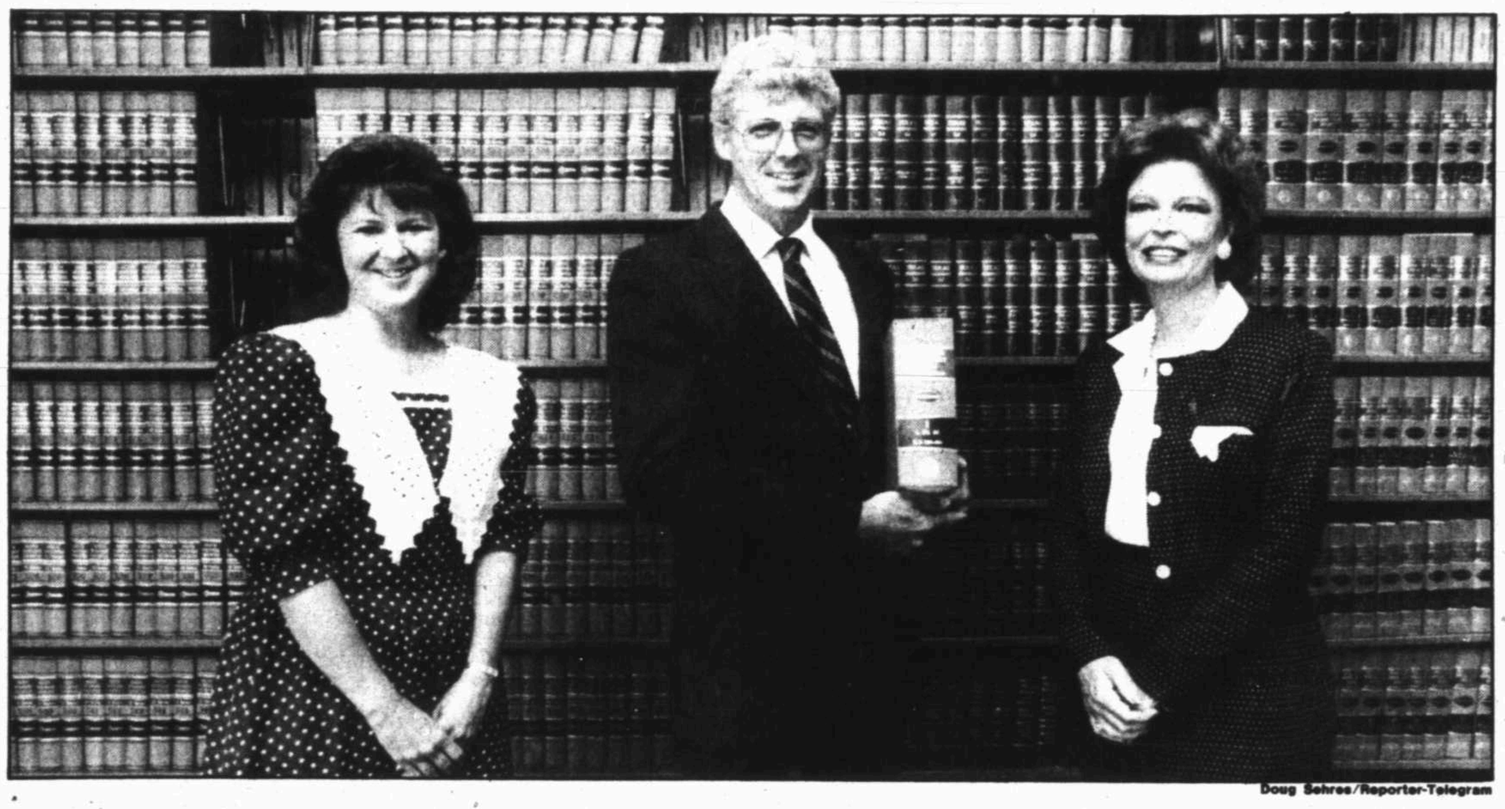

"He sat down on the couch and I guess he went to sleep," she told jurors.

After she left that house and told a neighbor what had happened, police were notified, she told the jury.

Several police officers who arrived at the house minutes after the attack testified and identified McAfee as the man who was asleep on the woman's couch.

Officer Ricardo Candelaria said he saw McAfee and identified himself, but had to shake him several times before he woke up.

MC students building law library

Expansion could lead to accreditation

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A group of enterprising paralegal students at Midland College is delving into the book business for their and others' edification.

The group is staging a weekend garage sale of assorted junk and treasures to raise money to build up the law section of the Midland College Library — what academicians call the Learning Resource Center.

And the students also are taking donated law books and cash donations, such as the $1,000 check which Midland lawyer Hamilton McRae recently gave the MC Association of Legal Assistants by way of Sandra "Sandy" Jones.

Ms. Jones is a recent Midland College paralegal graduate.

"When he (McRae) called, he said, 'This is so modest you may not want it,' " Ms. Jones recalled.

She quickly deposited the check.

"That's one thing they teach you in school," quipped paralegal student Gloria Maddox. "Once you get the check, put it in the bank."

Ms. Maddox is president of MC Association of Legal Assistants.

The fund-raising effort does have ulterior motives.

In helping build up the MC Law Library stack, the paralegal students hope to help get the college's paralegal program accredited by the American Bar Association.

"After all, the college has given us so much, this is an opportunity to put something back into the college," said MC paralegal student Steve O'Neal.

O'Neal estimated that about $5,500 is needed "to start off with" toward getting more of those expensive law books toward ABA accreditation for the college.

The paralegal students will be setting up their cash box and garage-sale offerings toward that $5,500 goal this Saturday at 2509 Country Club Drive, which is Ms. Jones' address.

"If anybody has any junk they can donate," volunteered O'Neal, "Sandy Jones is in charge of picking it up. She has a pickup." Ms. Jones is reachable by dialing 682-8831.

"If we can get ABA recognition," O'Neal said, "we would be the only Texas junior college to be accredited by the ABA. It means that we have superior standards in the curriculum. It means that we are doing something right."

Dr. Nancy Hart, whom the students agree is the "driving force" behind Midland College's paralegal program, said that the MC Law Library not only would serve MC students but lawyers who live or work in the north part of Midland.

"The nice thing about the college," she said, "is that the books are coded, and if you try to leave the library with the books, the alarm will sound."

The law books are deemed reference material and may not be checked out.

Currently, paralegal students join practicing lawyers in using the downtown Midland County Law Library in the basement of the Midland County Courthouse.

"A few scattered books are missing (there)," said Dr. Hart, who is MC's paralegal coordinator and instructor, "and it's always going to be the one you are looking for."

The MC Law Library's volumes include "Texas Statutes," books of Texas civil and criminal law; "South Western Reporter," reference books of cases from the Texas Supreme, Court of Criminal Appeals, and 14 intermediate courts of appeal; "Texas Jurisprudence," a legal encyclopedia of Texas law, and "United States Supreme Court Reporter," reference books on federal cases.

Law books, noted MC Public Service Librarian Aline Collins, are "very expensive." And she expressed delight in the support which the college can give its paralegal students.

Bob Peetz, coordinator of MC's Criminal Justice program and an investigator for Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman, said that "fortunately" most of the MC law-book collection has been donated.

"Law books are pretty expensive," Peetz said. "That's been a real help."

MC paralegal students have been using the Midland County Law Library for much of their research.

"It's an inconvenience to the students" who travel from college to courthouse to do their research, Peetz noted. And the "rummaging around" by the students may be disconcerting to the lawyers who are in the library to prepare cases for trial.

"Actually, Nancy (Hart) was the impetus behind the whole thing," Peetz said of building up the MC Law Library. "It took two years to form a viable operation where we could see the books on the shelf."

Dettman, who has taught criminal law at the college, said that the paralegal students seem "enthused and hard working" in their studies.

"That (law-library building effort) will help establish a good basic law library that will serve not only the students of Midland College but the public in general and, more particularly, members of the bar who will use it," Dettman said. "I will go out there and use it. It's only a mile from from my house. I could study while I'm running out there — if I'm so inclined."

Dettman said that the students' drive to build up the Law Library is "a good idea. It reflects favorably on the college and the college's personnel."

Paralegal students, noted Ms. Maddox, seem to be over-achievers.

"Ask Nancy (Hart)," Ms. Maddox said. "They can't take losing. They've got to win."

And, noted Julie Crume, a Texas Rehabilitation Commission counselor who has guided students who are seeking new careers and careers in law, "Paralegals are really obsessed with paralegalism."

Odessa to open first subdivision in decade

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An improving economy and the planned extension of Yukon Road in North Odessa has prompted announcement of the opening of the city's first residential subdivision in about 10 years.

The development, with paved streets, curbs and gutters and paved alleys, is located west of Ratliff Stadium and is known as the Ratliff Addition.

James R. "Buzz" Hurt and Realtor Virgil Trower Tuesday announced the availability of about 60 acres of land that has been subdivided into 17 about 1/4 and 1/2 lots that can be purchased by contractors or individuals. Cost of the lots in Phase I of the subdivision, which consists of a total of about 15 acres, will vary from about $10,500 to $15,500, depending on location, Trower said Tuesday.

During a news conference at the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce Tuesday afternoon, Trower said the first lot in the Ratliff Addition has been sold. The home to be built on the lot will contain "somewhere over 3,000 square feet." He said the size of homes built in the new addition will be restricted to no less than 2,000 square feet. The size of lots will range from about 75 feet by 150 feet to 85 feet by 230 feet. The addition will feature underground utilities, said Trower.

Phase II of the project has already been "curbed and guttered," Trower said, but it won't be opened up until all lots in Phase I are sold.

"I think we're doing it at a real good time," said Trower, explaining that Yukon Road east of Loop 338 "is coming around Ponderosa Estates and will tie in to State Highway 191 out by Mission Dorado."

Asked if he though this was an opportune time to open a new subdivision, Trower said he does because "there aren't that many lots left on the market. If a builder comes in from somewhere and wants to build a house on speculation we'll have lots for them that won't back up to older areas."

Trower said he approached Hurt "several months ago" with the suggestion that "it looks like it's getting about time" to open this up and Hurt agreed. The land, formerly used as ranch land, had been zoned for multi-family use, but Hurt had it rezoned for single-family construction.

Trower said the Ratliff family retains ownership of the subdivision and his real estate firm will be the sales agent for the lots in the development.

The addition is about three blocks south of a new golf course being built.

Jan O'Neil, a member of the Midland chapter of the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness, will help educate Midlanders about preventing blindness.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Midlander opening eyes to blindness prevention

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

When Jan O'Neil was a little girl, two things happened that convinced her no one should ever have to go blind.

She met her mother's great aunt, an elderly woman who was blind. That scared her, Mrs. O'Neil said Tuesday.

Secondly, she underwent surgery when she was six to counteract a condition known as "lazy eye."

Muscles surrounding that left eye pulled the organ inward and gave her appearance of being "cross-eyed," Mrs. O'Neil explained.

Had the surgery not been completed she could have lost sight in her left eye, she said.

"It is so much fun to look around and see the flowers...to see the creativity and beauty in the world," Mrs. O'Neil said.

Today she sits on the board of directors of the Midland chapter of the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness, a group formed to educate the public about diseases and injuries that can take a person's sight away.

This past weekend, the group hosted a booth at the Health Fair, sponsored by Midland Memorial Hospital, that offered participants free glaucoma screenings.

Glaucoma is the leading cause of blindness and is an insidious disease that often creeps up when it is too late to save someone's sight.

Statistics from the chapter's national headquarters, the Chicago-based National Society to Prevent Blindness, estimate that nearly 50,000 people will lose their sight this year.

Half of those cases could be prevented by regular eye exams, early diagnosis, treatment of eye disorders and use of protective eyewear in situations hazardous to the eyes, Mrs. O'Neil said.

The Midland branch of the TSTP will also begin performing free eye tests to check students' eye sight at local public schools, she said.

Saving the sight of one child would be a reward in itself, she said.

Anyone interested in helping with the society as a volunteer or in their annual October fundraiser, People of Vision Dinner and Roast, should call the Midland TSTP office at 688-6300.

DEATHS

Elsa DeLay

ODESSA — Funeral services for Elsa DeLay, 78, of Odessa will be at 10 a.m. Friday at the Frank W. Wilson Funeral Directors Chapel, with Shon Wagner, officiating. Graveside services will be at 11:45 a.m. Friday at Fairview Cemetery in Midland.

She died Tuesday at a local hospital following a lengthy illness.

She was born April 30, 1910, in Shamrock, Okla. She was a homemaker and a member of the Baptist Church. She had lived in Midland for several years prior to 1976. She was married to Frank DeLay Oct. 28, 1931, in Atoka, Okla. He preceded her in death.

Survivors include five daughters, Betty Wittie of Austin, Frances Whitehead of Abilene, Sue McAnear, Fay Roberts and Linda Kevil, all of Odessa; three brothers, Lloyd Cooper of Klamath Falls, Ore., Claudie Cooper of Arcda, Calif., Ira Cooper of Lane, Okla.; a sister, Minnie Cartwright of Lane, Okla.; 13 grandchildren; and 11 great-grandchildren.

Sadalia Kelly

Services for Sadalia "Sissy" Kelly of Midland are scheduled for 11 a.m. Thursday at the Assembly in Christ Church with Glen and Betty McNerlin officiating. Burial is to follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Tuesday morning at a local hospital.

She was born May 29, 1963, in Midland. She was reared in Midland and attended Midland schools. She was a member of the Assembly in Christ Church.

Survivors include two sons, Jonathan Brad Pearson and Jimmy Joe Pearson, both of Midland; a daughter, Stephanie Nicole Pearson of Midland; her parents, A.L. Minica of Blanket and Patsy Webb of Midland; two brothers, Terry Minica and Keff Kinsey, both of Midland; and two nieces.

Mildred Tipton

LUBBOCK — Services were held Monday for Mildred Tipton, 93, of Lubbock.

Burial was in the Whitharral Cemetery under the direction of Sanders Funeral Home.

She was born in Fort Worth and married Thomas Tipton in 1910 in Oklahoma.

They moved to Whitharral in 1926 and later moved to Levelland in the early 1960s.

Mrs. Tipton was employed by South Plains Junior College.

The Alamo speech squad is sponsored by Jill McElligott.

From Staff Reports

Sally Rucker, chairperson for the mathematics department at Alamo Junior High School, recently attended the 66th annual meeting of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics in Chicago, Ill.

Participants at the conference were asked to review the document being considered for approval containing the curriculum and evaluation standards for school mathematics.

Ms. Rucker, along with other conference delegates, will review the document and provide specific statements to help improve it before the final draft is produced.

Ms. Rucker is also a charter member of the executive board of the West Texas Frontier Council of Teachers of mathematics. This organization recently sponsored a mini-conference entitled, "Frontiers in Math Education" for all interested West Texas Math Teachers.

The Frontier Council is affiliated with the Texas Council of Teachers of Mathematics, for which Ms. Rucker serves as a regional director.

Class registration continues

From Staff Reports

Registration for Midland school district driver's education classes is continuing this week for two summer sessions. Driver's education, a high school elective course, teaches sound driving practices.

Students or their parents may register at the Central Office Annex, 2101 W. Missouri, now through May 27 from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m. Registration must be in person and accompanied with full payment for the course.

Cost for classroom and "behind-the-wheel" instruction is $175.00.

The first summer session begins June 3 and concludes July 1. The second session begins July 5 and ends Aug. 5. For participant requirements and other details, contact Sue Summers 682-4151.

MC to transfer securities

From Staff Reports

Midland Junior College District trustees Tuesday voted to transfer almost $10 million in pledged securities to the Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas.

The move mirrors those executed last month by the city of Midland, the Midland County Hospital District and the Midland Independent School District.

The college will transfer $9.3 million in pledged securities from First Republic Bank Dallas to the Federal Reserve in that city.

MC Vice President for Business and Finance Bob Phillips said the move was one of "convenience" and didn't entail the removal of any MC deposits.

"In the event that something should happen to the bank, which we don't expect, it would be a little more convenient for us to get our money out," Phillips said.

All totaled, the four taxing entities have moved $70.6 million in pledged securities from the ailing Dallas bank to the Federal Reserve.

Church sponsors bazaar

From Staff Reports

The Lighthouse Church of God in Christ, 506 S. Fairgrounds Road, is sponsoring a bazaar Saturday beginning at 9 a.m.

Items and booths included in the bazaar are homemade cakes and pies, crafts, a yard sale and concessions.

The public is invited.

Collection reflects lifetime of interests

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Coca-Cola memorabilia, antique automobiles, and mementos of the Gainesville Community Circus all are part of a curious collection compiled over the years by F.E. "Frankie" Schmitz.

This week, as part of the city's Depot Days celebration, Schmitz is opening the collection to public view for the first time.

Schmitz, a former auto salesman and the last owner of the local Coca-Cola Bottling Co., keeps the mementos in the retired, remodeled bottling building at the corner of Scott and Denison streets where he keeps an office.

In one cluttered corner, photographs, paintings, programs, newspaper and costumes recall the glory days of the Gainesville Community Circus. Schmitz, who was associated with the circus from the late 1940s until its demise in 1958, clowned through his first four years before being elected president of the organization.

After the circus' final curtain call, "I was crazy enough to keep some things," Schmitz recalled.

Beyond the circus collection, an assortment of antique cars chronicles still another era of the Gainesville entrepreneur's life.

"I was as dumb as they come...started off selling used cars," Schmitz said. "I always fooled with cars." He stuck with it for 28 years.

Every model in the collection from the shiny black Model T currently being restored to the hunter green Dodge Plymouth truck proudly advertising "F.E. Schmitz Motor Co., telephone no. 187" has its own story.

"I got this one because the very first new car I gave my daughter when she went to college was a little red and white Metro," Schmitz said, pointing to a fiesty little Metropolitan sporting red and white paint.

Further back, two Desotos, — relics from Schmitz's years as a Desoto dealer — bear undeniable testimony to the changing fashions and passions of car enthusiasts.

"There was a time when the fins were so popular — that's a '59 Desoto," Schmitz said, opening the door on a vintage car. Inside, a surprise awaits the uninitiated — a button gear-shift box on the left instrument panel. The neighboring car, a 1955 Desoto, features a gear shift lever located on the right instrument panel.

Among Schmitz's favorites is a 1929 Dodge Sport Roadster — his vehicle of choice for the grueling coast-to-coast Great American Race, which he will participate in this summer.

AP Laserphoto

Frankie Schmitz of Gainesville relaxes in the midst of Coca-Cola memorabilia he has collected. His museum also includes an antique car collection and a local circus collection.

One of nine known to be in existance, the canvas-backed antique sold for $985 fresh from the factory. It sports a number of unique features, including a golf door and metal hubs.

"That year, all regular cars had wooden wheels, but the roadster had hardware wheels," Schmitz explained.

Along one wall of this cavernous downstairs room stand Coca-Cola machines of every shape, size and model — a vanguard of a more extensive collection housed upstairs.

Up the narrow, carpeted stairs, past samples of Coca-Cola trays and advertisements, beyond the street sign identifying Coca-Cola Avenue, is — quite simply — Coca-Cola heaven.

"Coca-Cola has used every method of advertising you ever dreamed of," Schmitz said. "Every year, they bring out something different."

Neatly lined on specially-designed shelves, tucked into glass cabinets, and hung from wall and ceiling are what seem to be every form of Coca-Cola memorabilia known to man.

Tiffany-style Coca-Cola hanging lamps light the room. A Coca-Cola train engine pulls Fanta, Tab and Sprite cars and a Coke caboose across a section devoted to toys. From its specially-designed shelf, a rare Coca-Cola urn reigns over glass cases filled with more souvenirs.

Dominos, cards, checkers, key chains, thimbles, ashtrays, cigarette lighters, belt buckles, mirrors, toy trucks, flash lights, telephones, cameras, rugs, place mats, cup towels, caps, clocks, trays, T-shirts, puzzles, pictures, pitchers, glasses, and — of course — bottles fill the room from bottom to top.

Scattered across one table are the collectors's bibles: glossy illustrated volumes that detail every Coca-Cola item ever manufactured, as well as fascinating gems of trivia hidden in the soft drink giant's history.

"When the man in the drug store invented Coca-Cola, it wasn't a drink, it was a tonic," Schmitz said.

In fact, America's favorite soft drink began as the star in a traveling medicine show.

"Those medicine shows would all sell a tonic that was supposed to cure everything," Schmitz said. At the turn of the century, after company officials decided their "tonic" would do well as a beverage, they encountered miles of red tape with the patent office due to their product's history.

Then there was the problem of packaging.

"There were no bottles outside of medicine bottles," Schmitz said.

Court rules to reinstate Odessan's conviction

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals this morning reinstated an Odessa man's murder conviction but gave a Midland murderer a better chance at parole.

Charlie Garrett of Odessa was sentenced to 40 years in prison for the April 28, 1982, shooting death of Michael Rheams. On March 6, 1985, the El Paso Court of Appeals reversed his conviction, stating that the state had failed to comply with the terms of the Speedy Trial Act.

The Speedy Trial Act required prosecutors to proceed with cases on a certain timetable. If they failed to meet that timetable, the case was automatically dismissed.

On July 1, 1987, the Court of Criminal Appeals ruled that law unconstitutional, stating that it was vague and violated the separation of powers doctrine of the Texas Constitution.

David Rosado, assistant Ector County district attorney, then asked the court to reinstate Garrett's murder conviction. The court agreed with that argument this morning.

In the Midland case, Rex Bradley Shanks was sentenced to 99 years in prison for the July 28, 1980, stabbing death of James David McPeters in an alleged insurance scam involving McPeters' wife.

The jury found that Shanks had used a deadly weapon in the commission of the crime, a finding which forced Shanks to serve a flat one-third of his sentence before becoming eligible for parole. He could not accrue "good conduct time" towards that minimum one-third.

Shanks argued from prison that the jury erred in that decision because the indictment charging him with a crime did not state that he used a deadly weapon.

That decision means Shanks may now earn good time — for good behavior, education or jobs training — toward his parole eligibility date. The actual awarding of good time remains the responsibility of the Texas Department of Corrections, and the final parole decision rests with the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

RAPE

A pocket knife was found in the defendant's pants pocket and his palms and chest were bloodied, Candelaria testified.

On cross-examination, the officer told defense attorney Paul Williams that the defendant was not drunk and did not try to run away.

Another officer testified McAfee had a bandana with him, and was drunk when he was arrested and taken to jail.

Officer Arthur Villareal agreed with Williams that the defendant was calm, cool and collected when he was taken into custody.

The jury also heard from a Dallas forensic scientist, who said semen on a bedsheet from the woman's home contained a "genetic marker" which matched the type of marker found in the defendant's blood, which was also tested.

But she told Williams on cross-examination that nearly a third of the general population has the same "marker" that linked the defendant to the bedsheet.

If convicted, McAfee has requested though his attorney to be sentenced by Baskin. The accused man faces up to life in prison should the jury's verdict goes against him.

School district looks into abuse complaints

KATY, Texas (AP) — After a four-hour meeting, top officials of the Katy Independent School District offered few specifics about what action might be taken in the case of a cafeteria monitor who allegedly fondled students.

"We are going to continue to cooperate with the investigation, and we certainly expect to cooperate fully with all the enforcement agencies to bring this thing to a conclusion," said district spokesman William Callegari.

Last week, Charlou Koenig, 34, was charged with three counts of indecency with a child for allegedly touching the breasts of three 9- and 10-year-old girls at West Memorial Elementary School.

The principal of the West Memorial Elementary School, Freddye Kelly, 49, has been given a temporary reassignment pending the outcome of investigation, and could lose her job.

The investigation was sparked after parents complained that Ms. Kelly failed to notify Harris County Children's Protective Services in a timely fashion after the cafeteria monitor was accused of touching the breasts of three 9- and 10-year-old girls at West Memorial.

During the four-hour meeting of the district's board of trustees, teachers at the school turned out to show support for Ms. Kelly.

"Our whole issue today is Freddye Kelly and that what is going to be determined this afternoon," said Joyce Newhouse, a teacher. "We wanted to show support."

Ms. Newhouse and other teachers carried placards expressing support for Ms. Kelly, who declined all comment.

The cafeteria monitor, Koenig, who also teaches Latin at Taylor High School, was relieved of his elementary school duties last month. He continued to teach Latin classes until his arrest May 11. He was placed on administrative leave with pay pending the outcome of his case.

Several parents were outraged to learn about a February memo from Ms. Kelly to Koenig that warned that touching the shoulders and chests of female students could be grounds for child abuse.

Despite new law, undocumented aliens keep crossing border

STATE

COMBES, Texas (AP) — A new law banning employers from hiring undocumented aliens hasn't stopped the northbound quest for work, immigration officials said after arresting 42 people stowed aboard a freight train.

One of those arrested, Tomas Vega of San Luis Potosi, Mexico, said he got on the northbound railroad grain car without knowing what city he would reach.

"I came to find work wherever it (the train) stops," the 21-year-old undocumented alien said, because he cannot find a job back home.

Vega and about 16 others, including a man carrying a crying, sleepy 3-year-old boy to the immigration bus, appeared stunned as they climbed down a ladder from the grain car Tuesday. Their trip was cut short a mere 30 miles north of the Rio Grande.

The 42 aliens found scattered along the Houston-bound train are among the thousands of people officials say are continuing to flock to this country illegally every week, despite a new immigration law making it illegal for anyone to hire them. Employer sanctions under the new law go into full effect June 1.

Jerry Hicks, deputy chief patrol agent with the Border Patrol's McAllen Sector, said the numbers have been increasing lately, and agents who stopped the train Tuesday had been expecting to find even more aliens in the train's 113 cars.

Immigration officials say lack of employment in Mexico is prompting the aliens to take their chances on whether employers will flout the new law.

"I think we're going to have to show them we're serious about enforcing employer sanctions," Hicks said.

A recent five-day sweep of trains netted more than 100 aliens per day, officials said, including a group suffering from dehydration in a sealed boxcar.

"The situation in Mexico is terrible, and people are caught in a situation where their country has nothing to offer them," said Telma Longoria, director of Catholic Social Services for the church's Brownsville Diocese.

She said the diocese is seeing more Central Americans than ever at its Casa Oscar Romero shelter east of Brownsville, which averages 150-200 aliens at any given time.

Most, she said, do not stay at the sanctuary more than a couple of weeks.

"The people are coming," Ms. Longoria said. "There is no doubt about that. We see it all the time."

With the weather warming up, immigration officials said they are checking the trains more often, in order to prevent a repeat of the tragedy in Sierra Blanca last summer, in which 18 aliens suffocated in a sealed boxcar in the West Texas heat.

"The smugglers don't care about the aliens that much," said Travis Johnson, agent in charge of the Harlingen Border Patrol station. "They want their money."

On hand to observe Tuesday morning's pre-dawn train operation were Jim Olech, Border Patrol chief in Washington, and Henry Oncken, U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of Texas.

The first week of May, the Border Patrol's McAllen Sector reported 1,691 apprehensions of undocumented aliens, most of whom were not on trains. Last week the sector reported 1,080 apprehensions, 204 involving people from countries other than Mexico, said Fred Rangel, a Border Patrol intelligence agent in McAllen.

"We're getting reports of actual large numbers of people crossing," Rangel said, adding the number of aliens apprehended has dropped since the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 was passed, but that the total is up from a year ago.

"They are finding ways of getting around the legalities of it" (the new law), Rangel said.

"We're still catching 500 or 600 a day," said Doug Mosier, with the Border Patrol's El Paso Sector that stretches to the New Mexico-Arizona border.

He said apprehensions in the sector are about 30 percent below the rate of 1986, when the sector made 312,000 alien arrests, some of which were multiple apprehensions of the same people.

"The new law's had its impact, but still people are willing to take a chance," said Laredo Sector Border Patrol agent Michael O'Barr. "Unfortunately, we have those employers who are willing to hire them."

Patton Village mayor proposes 'amnesty' plan for traffic violators

PATTON VILLAGE, Texas (AP) — The new mayor of this community is proposing granting amnesty to people cited for traffic violations on a nearby highway in hopes of shaking the town's speed-trap reputation.

"I envision a police department that is not a cash register on (U.S. Highway) 59," Mayor Robert Devaney said Tuesday after his first council meeting. "I see it as a small-town law enforcement (department) operating within the city of Patton Village."

Patton Village's new council members agreed Tuesday to research the proposed "amnesty program" to determine if it would be legal.

Meanwhile, the Municipal Court remains closed and its four workers are out of jobs — actions Devaney took Monday and the council backed Tuesday.

A Montgomery County constable on Tuesday began investigating the court's docket and warrants to determine if they were executed properly.

Devaney, a 66-year-old accountant, said he doesn't believe the warrants were executed properly, and that's part of the reason he wants the amnesty plan. He's also upset that the town, located 30 miles north of Houston about a quarter-mile off the highway, is known as the local speed trap.

City secretary Linda Cayton, who resigned Tuesday after the council meeting, said 90 percent of the town's 1987 fiscal budget of $435,000 came from traffic tickets and other municipal court fines. From August 1987 through March, the court generated $180,502 in town income, she said.

The town of 1,300, which is nestled in the piney woods, has often generated publicity for its political infighting.

Earlier this year, the council ousted Police Chief J.D. Broussard Jr., Mayor Dottie Norton and Councilman Wesley Lagrone.

But a council that included three new council members reinstated Broussard on Tuesday and also voted that Ms. Norton and Lagrone were ousted improperly, meaning they can run again for office in the next election.

The council's action drew applause from the crowd of about 20 people attending the meeting.

But there were some grumblings in the audience. And the two council members not replaced in the last election — Doris Burd and Dezzie Hutson — voted against the actions.

Despite the closing of the court, the 20-member police department remains in operation. The mayor, however, said the officers won't be out on the highway setting up a speed trap.

"The officers may be out there periodically, but they won't be citing people for going two miles over the speed limit or other things like that," Broussard said after being reinstated.

Broussard replaced Alan E. Hall, who was told by the council to vacate the premises immediately.

Hall, who had submitted his resignation last week, called the city government a "three-ring circus" and predicted the new council's actions would soon wreck the city.

"You've got a bunch of idiots up here going off the deep end," Hall said.

Hall questioned the legality of Devaney's decision to close the court. So did Police Lt. Jay L. Myers, who submitted his resignation after Broussard was reinstated.

"I was told he'll be liabling this city to false arrest charges if you just start returning tickets," Hall said. "It don't take an Einstein to figure it out from a liability standpoint. The man is a stone-cold idiot."

Elna Christopher, spokeswoman for the Texas attorney general's office, said there is no state ruling indicating whether a mayor has jurisdiction to close down court and grant amnesty on traffic-ticket fines.

Devaney said the court will be closed for about 30 days for an outside audit and then reopened "hopefully with a different focus, not getting money we're not entitled to."

The next action might be to disincorporate the town, he said. But the mayor said such a move would have to be decided by the voters, not him.

'Captain Hook' first to plunge into Gulf

ABOARD THE LONGHORN (AP) — Led by "Captain Hook," a hardened veteran of the high seas, 1,100 endangered sea turtles raised in captivity were dropped into the Gulf of Mexico in a population-boosting experiment.

The Kemp's Ridley turtles hit the water 8 to 15 miles off Port Aransas, Texas, on Tuesday, and marine biologists hope they'll return to multiply on the beaches of Texas after being decimated by exploitation and pollution earlier this century.

"It's quite a day — raising the little guys from eggs and getting to see them shipped off," said project spokesman Donna Shaver.

First to hit the water was "Captain Hook," a turtle that was caught earlier by a fisherman whose 3-inch-long hook and steel cable was imbedded in the turtle's throat. The fisherman turned it over to authorities.

Veterinarians were unable to dislodge the hook and had to surgically slit the turtle wide open to get it out. Captain Hook survived.

"We try not to get emotionally attached to any of them," said Tim Fontaine, project manager of the sea turtle "head start" program. "But we feel really good about him."

The sea turtle release was the 10th in as many years, and experts are still waiting to see if the experiment to increase the population is a success, said Ms. Shaver, National Park Service manager for the incubation and imprinting phase of the Kemp's Ridley Restoration and Enhancement Program.

Altogether, 13,500 turtles have been raised and released by the National Marine Fisheries Service in Galveston since the so-called "head start" program began in 1977.

The Kemp's Ridley turtles, considered the world's most endangered sea turtles, are known by their species name as Lepidochelys kempi.

After being hatched on Padre Island and allowed to crawl into the Gulf of Mexico, the turtles were recaptured and taken to Galveston for a year or two of raising in captivity.

Fontaine supervised the growth of the turtles since they were 3 to 5 days old and about the size of silver dollars weighing just 15 grams.

Now, the year-old turtles weigh about 2¼ pounds each. And for the first time this year, 96 2-year-old turtles weighing about 25 pounds each were released as biologists hoped the more mature animals will stand a better chance of surviving.

Galveston-grown turtles — marked with metal tags or special skin grafts or electronic and magnetic devices — have been found as far away as Morocco, France and Newfoundland.

Texan says he gives mother's love to birds

WEST COLUMBIA, Texas (AP) — Step inside the little brown house behind Joe Cariker's home and it's like being in a jungle with loud screeches, chirping and whistles.

The deafening clatter comes from the hundreds of parakeets, cockatiels, lovebirds and canaries he keeps in an aviary there.

Lined up on perches like a choir in song the Australian budgerigars or "budgies" flap their wings, groom their plumes of bright green, aqua, or cobalt-blue and swoop from one end of the large pen to the other.

Just around the corner of the tidy house, where the air is permeated by the sweet smell of cedar chips used to line cages, more activity is going on with dozens of yellow crested cockatiels and dainty lovebirds with torsos of lime green, and orange spotted faces flutter about their cages.

Noisy yes, but the lanky 64-year-old West Columbia resident's feathers aren't a bit ruffled. He couldn't be happier in his birdhouse.

"I just love these birds," he shouts above the clamor, "I love animals."

Cariker bought his first pair of birds eight years ago and began raising them as a hobby. But after retiring last June as superintendent of Varner-Hogg State Park, a job he had for 25 years, he now spends his days caring for the birds full time.

There are hardly hours in a day to do the enormous job of tending to their needs, especially now since this is nesting and egg laying time.

"Ten hours a day, seven days a week I figure I spend out here," Cariker says.

"You have to do that to make sure everything's okay with them."

Cariker isn't the only one whose been in a frenzy lately. In the past month or so his birds have layed more than 200 eggs.

In another nearby bird house, things are just as busy, but the chatter is missing. There the mood is peaceful as canaries in a rainbow of shades ranging from traditional bright yellow and orange to blue-gray seranade each other.

Soft music plays from a radio which Cariker says keeps the birds calm and may even inspire some to sing.

"Someday's it's just heavenly out here," he says, sighing. "You can come in and forget your troubles..."

Cariker is relentless in his caring for the birds.

Sometimes twice a day he checks on the occupants of the more than 80 cages where pairs are nesting. He makes notes on the cards posted next to the pens, marking the date and number of eggs each hen has produced.

Moving from cage to cage he examines the newborn chicks and puts an identification bands on their legs. Cariker has powerful hands from years of outdoor work, but he handles the pink-skinned and wiggly creatures more gently than their own mothers do.

A Childress native who majored in botany, he keeps close track of their egg laying since each bird is pedigreed and many will be shown in competitions in Houston and throughout the state.

Like an expert in orinthology, the branch of zoology dealing with birds, he spouts the dos and don'ts about crossing breeds, the cycle of each bird's clutches or egg laying periods.

"The genetics of these birds intrigues me. My dad was a doctor and my mom was nurse so I'm used to hearing about scientific stuff," Cariker says.

He explains which markings indicate if a bird is male or female.

On budgies, he says it's easy to tell by looking at the cere above the beak. If it's blue, the bird's a cock and if it's brown, it's a hen.

Canaries are a little harder since it is said only males can sing, but Cariker says hens will "chirp a little and confuse ya, so you have to be careful."

Lovebirds are even trickier. The way to tell their sex is by examining the bird's pelvic bone structure. Hens, he says have bones that seperate and move, while cocks don't.

Feeding the birds is itself a science that only one dedicated to ensuring proper conditions for their growth and development would bother to do.

At 6:30 every morning he starts the flock's breakfast ritual. In cafeteria style he fills each cup hanging on the cages with assorted seeds and a special nesting mixture of wheat germ, thistle, dried carrots.

For a treat he pokes a branch through the cages which the birds strip bare of bark.

Fresh spinach, corn on the cob, whole wheat bread and hard-boiled eggs are added to the nearly 50 pounds of seeds and grains he serves them each week.

"Sure, they're well-fed, but they deserve to be treated well, especially when a they're laying eggs. A hen needs good food when she's feeding her babies," he says.

Despite his meticulous care, tragedy struck this bird haven three years ago.

Cariker still feels a twinge of guilt when he tells the story of how he lost 119 of his budgies.

"I remember the day it happened. I walked in here on Dec. 13 and saw them all...It really tore me up," he says.

It may have been the chlorination of the water or something they were fed, but Cariker still isn't sure what killed his pets.

Losing the birds felt like losing close friends, Cariker says since he thinks each has their own personality.

"They're like people to me, some are big singers, real loud and aggressive. Others are shy and just kind of peep. I love every one of them so it was tough to see them go," he says.

Texas' long-delayed thirst may drain Pecos Valley

By SUE MAJOR HOLMES

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — Pecos Valley farmer Earl Graves says giving Texas more water from the Pecos River will dry up New Mexico's water rights and end agriculture in the river valley of southeastern New Mexico.

"If they take the water, there won't be any farming," said Graves, who farms about 400 acres of cotton and alfalfa with his brother south of Roswell.

The U.S. Supreme Court last June accepted the findings of special master Charles Meyers that New Mexico violated the 1948 Pecos River Compact and now owes Texas 340,000 acre-feet of water for the period between 1950 and 1983. Meyers has recommended the debt be settled by New Mexico's delivering to Texas 34,000 acre-feet of water a year for a decade.

The court also ruled that in the future, New Mexico must send Texas an additional 10,000 acre-feet a year so as not to underpay the water allocation.

The decision is a double whammy for New Mexico's Pecos Valley farmers and ranchers: not only will they have to do without 34,000 acre-feet of water for 10 years, but they will have to do without the additional 10,000 acre-feet a year permanently.

New Mexico wants to pay the debt in dollars. Texas wants the water.

New Mexico officials argue that sending what would amount to more than 110 billion gallons of water to Texas would mean virtually shutting down farming in New Mexico's Pecos River Valley for a decade.

STATE LAW and a provision in the Pecos River agreement say that when water starts to run out, priority must be given to the holders of the oldest water rights.

The owners of land with newer water rights — those issued after 1947 — face the threat of the shutoff of their water rights to pay Texas for future water obligations.

"If the remedy is water payback, as a matter of law, we would have to curtail all junior users in the Pecos River Basin" to the tune of 34,000 acre-feet a year for 10 years, said Peter White, a special assistant attorney general for the New Mexico Interstate Stream Commission.

Meyers set trial on the issue for Sept. 7 in Denver.

White said that if water priorities are called against junior users, all water rights in the Roswell basin would be curtailed for 10 years, affecting 112,000 of the 190,000 irrigated acres in New Mexico's Pecos River Basin.

"It's a very significant impact," he said.

He said certain water rights with priorities from the 1880s in the Carlsbad area and similar priorities in the Roswell area would be curtailed for two years.

White also said most of the water rights held by the communities of Roswell, Artesia, Carlsbad, Fort Sumner, Ruidoso and others are "junior" water rights that would be curtailed if the law were strictly applied.

"We feel like it's the state of New Mexico and the state engineer's fault that we're in the shape we're in. They issued the water rights to the people here and they adjudicated them and we bought them. If Texas does win, and if we have to pay back in water, we feel like they (the state) ought to pay us back."

— Pecos Valley farmer Earl Graves

HOWEVER, municipalities, as political subdivisions, have the right to condemn and acquire more senior rights for their minimum needs if they could not buy or lease water during the 10 years, White said.

Graves said New Mexico's Pecos Valley farmers are caught in the middle.

"If the water rights are not valid, the land is not worth anything because you can't grow anything without water," he said.

Water already is a scarce commodity in the desert of southeastern New Mexico.

Wells in the Pecos Valley around Roswell, Dexter and Hagerman are metered and farmers are allowed to pump only 3.5 acre-feet per acre per year, Graves said.

Graves said the state granted farmers the water rights and the farmers believed they were valid.

"We feel like it's the state of New Mexico and the state engineer's fault that we're in the shape we're in," Graves said. "They issued the water rights to the people here and they adjudicated them and we bought them. If Texas does win, and if we have to pay back in water, we feel like they (the state) ought to pay us back."

The uncertainty about future water supplies has all but halted agricultural real estate sales in the area, Graves said.

"It's just killing us, especially if someone wants to sell a place right now," he said.

Tom Davis, manager of the Carlsbad Irrigation District downstream from Roswell, said the district has not been hit as badly by uncertainty because it holds priority water rights dating from 1888.

HOWEVER, HE said everyone is apprehensive about the case.

"It's definitely going to have an effect on everyone in the lower Pecos Valley from Fort Sumner on down," Davis said.

"I'm hoping this gets settled soon — but depending on the outcome, I may not be," he said.

Davis said he doesn't blame anyone for the muddle because the compact is so complex.

"It's a difficult formula to determine just what New Mexico has the right to and just what Texas has the right to," he said. "The Pecos is not a consistent river...the flows run according to rainfall."

New Mexico also has proposed to "bank" annual shortfalls and surpluses that occur in the Pecos River in the future and not give the additional water to Texas unless shortfalls over a five-year period exceed 30 percent of the state's water obligation over the same period. Texas wants any shortfalls made up within a year after they occur.

Meyers said last October New Mexico's plan could mean years of shortfalls for Texas.

WORLD in brief

Sikh radicals kill 31 Hindus

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Sikh radicals with automatic rifles shot and killed at least 31 migrant Hindu workers to avenge the police siege on the Golden Temple complex, which entered its 10th day today.

Twenty people were injured in the attack on the workers, which occurred late Tuesday night at a makeshift camp of a canal construction crew near Kharar village, 12 miles from the state capital of Chandigarh.

Police Superintendent Chander Shekhar said a note found at the scene claimed responsibility for the Khalistan Commando Force, one of a dozen Sikh separatist groups active in Punjab.

Shekhar said the note stated that the attack was in retaliation for the police siege at the Golden Temple, Sikhism's holiest shrine. Survivors said the gunmen repeatedly shouted that they would avenge the siege of their shrine.

Soviet troops departing

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — An armored convoy carrying 1,300 Soviet soldiers home from the war in Afghanistan snaked its way through guerrilla strongholds in the winding roads of the Hindu Kush mountains.

The convoy, which continued its trip Tuesday, is the first significant withdrawal of Soviet forces under a U.N.-sponsored peace accord that calls for the Kremlin to remove all of its 115,000 military personnel within nine months.

But the 300-vehicle convoy must pass through a mountain-rimmed gorge and the Salang tunnel, where anti-communist guerrillas have been active, before it reaches the Soviet border city of Termez. The convoy left Kabul on Monday and the hazardous journey is expected to take three days.

Soviet media reported Tuesday that residents of Termez have decorated the streets with welcoming streamers and prepared meals for the returning soldiers.

Ariane rocket launched

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — The European Space Agency has scored its 18th success in 22 launches of the Ariane rocket, sending an Intelsat V telecommunications satellite into orbit in a near-flawless operation.

The only incident was a 15-minute halt in the countdown caused by a storm cloud passing by six minutes before scheduled liftoff.

The launch took place at 8:58 p.m. Tuesday (7:58 p.m. EDT). Sixteen minutes and 40 seconds later, the 4,374-pound satellite separated perfectly. Officials at the European space center in Kourou, on the north coast of South America, called the flight "a complete success."

It was the second successful operation this year. Six more launches are planned in 1988 and nine each in 1989 and 1990.

U.S. accused of plot

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panamanian intelligence officials charged that the United States may have been behind a plot to encourage anti-government guerrilla violence aimed at ousting Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

The accusation came during a news conference on Tuesday where Eduardo Sanchez, one of the alleged conspirators, was presented to reporters.

Sanchez described the plot in a brief statement, then was removed from the room. Reporters were not allowed to ask him questions.

In another development, the pro-Noriega newspaper La Republica said on Tuesday the Treasury Ministry has prepared charges against Panamanian consulate officials in London and four U.S. cities who have remained loyal to Delvalle.

Japanese ship attacked

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Three Iranian speedboats attacked a Japanese-owned chemical carrier in the Strait of Hormuz today, setting it ablaze and forcing its crew to abandon the vessel, shipping sources said.

The 6,730-ton craft, the Panamanian-flagged Ace Chemi, put out a distress signal at 8 a.m. (midnight EDT Tuesday), according to the gulf-based shipping executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"May Day! May Day! We are under attack. We are being approached by four gunboats," radio monitors heard a voice from the Ace Chemi shouting, the executives said. Only three of the gunboats attacked, the executives said.

A salvage tugboat that was in the vicinity picked up the seamen and brought the fire aboard the carrier under control, they said. The tugboat then began towing the vessel through the strait, into the gulf, they said. It was not immediately clear what chemical, if any, the ship was carrying.

Israeli troops fire on protesters; One killed, 10 injured

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers shot and killed one Arab and wounded 10 in the occupied lands today, hospital officials said. Hours earlier, troops clashed with Palestinian guerrillas who infiltrated from Jordan.

Troops today fired live ammunition at protesters in Abwein, a village north of the West Bank city of Ramallah.

They killed Majdi Youssef Hilal, 16, who was struck with a bullet in the chest, and wounded 10 Arabs, three of whom were in critical condition, Dr. Yasser Obeid, director of Ramallah Hospital, said in a telephone interview.

The army confirmed the clash but did not immediately provide details.

No Israeli casualties were reported in Tuesday night's infiltration, the second from Jordan since the anti-occupation uprising began Dec. 8 in the lands Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

Also Tuesday, Palestinians in the occupied lands observed a near-total commercial strike as Moslems marked the second day of Id el Fitr, a three-day feast that concludes the holy month of Ramadan.

Israeli officials said five months of unrest and Arab strikes have cost Israel $500 million in military expenses, tourist income and uncollected taxes.

But in a sign of Israel's growing view that the uprising is waning, officials said they would reopen the West Bank's 1,199 schools, which are viewed as centers of unrest and were closed four months ago.

The army said it freed 100 Palestinian detainees in the occupiedd Gaza Strip on Tuesday as a gesture to the Moslem holiday.

In the infiltration, military sources said the guerrillas were spotted by a patrol near a hole in the border fence outside the Kfar Ruppin communal farm, which is on the Jordan River about 50 miles northeast of Jerusalem.

Within minutes, settlements in the area were on full alert, flares lit the sky and soldiers opened fire in the direction of the fence break.

Two guerrillas fled into Jordan and the third was shot near the farm's fish ponds after trying to fire his pistol at the soldiers, a platoon commander at the scene told Israel army radio.

The wounded guerrilla was treated by army medics and taken to an army base. Army radio said his chest bore the tattoo "Palestine."

It said the guerrillas apparently planned to attack Kfar Ruppin.

Jewish leader apparently embezzles Holocaust funds

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Before he died this year, the long-time head of the nation's Jewish community apparently embezzled millions of dollars in government funds earmarked for Holocaust survivors, his successor said.

"I am shocked, horrified and furious that such a thing could be even possible," Heinz Galinski, Werner Nachmann's successor as president of the Jewish Council of West Germany, said on Tuesday.

Hessicher Rundfunk radio in Frankfurt had reported that the council believes Nachmann, who died in January, embezzled about $19 million in Holocaust reparations from 1980 to 1987.

Galinski confirmed that an investigation had been launched and said Nachmann was suspected of having stolen more than $6 million in interest accumulated from Holocaust survivor funds.

He called the radio's figure "pure speculation."

Nachmann, president of the council since 1965 until his death at age 62 of a heart attack, had been in charge of disbursing the funds to Holocaust survivors around the world, according to the radio report.

About $236 million was appropriated by the government in 1980 for Holocaust survivors who had not previously made reparations claims.

The funds were in addition to billions already paid by West Germany to Holocaust survivors or victims' families.

"After the death of Werner Nachmann, financial irregularities of considerable proportions were discovered" in transactions involving the funds approved in 1980, Galinski said.

"Learning of this surprised and dismayed the council's directorate, which immediately informed government leaders," he said in a telephone interview from his Berlin office.

"This has presented me with the most serious problem I have ever faced in my 40 years of working for the Jewish community," Galinski said.

He said the Jewish Council "has contracted with financial experts to look into the accusations" and the investigation is expected to take two to three weeks.

Hessischer Rundfunk radio said the council believes Nachmann "transferred millions of marks to dummy corporations...which seem to be unknown to anyone."

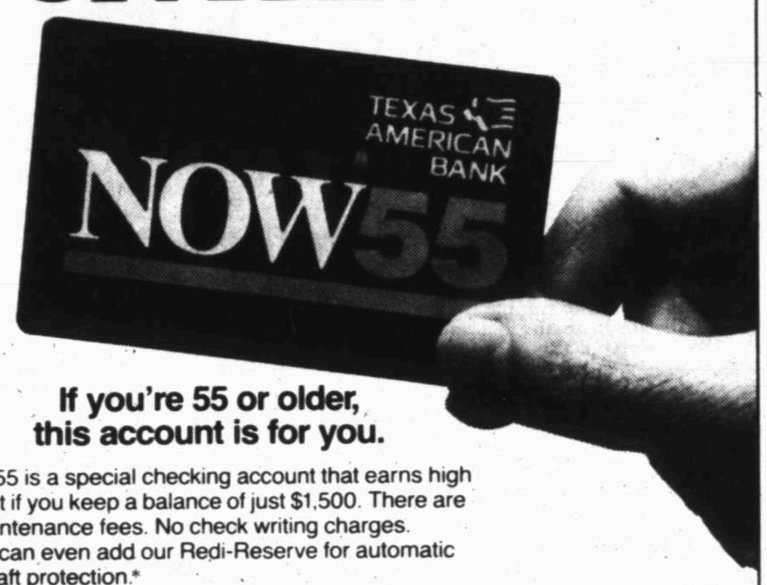

Galinski said the council has asked a civil court in Karlsruhe to freeze money from Nachmann's estate pending an investigation into the allegations.

Ship carrying Soviet youth burning in Japanese port

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — Fire broke out early today on a lower deck of a docked Soviet passenger liner, killing 11 people, injuring 35 and gutting the ship, fire officials said. All aboard were thought to be Soviet citizens.

The 4,870-ton Priamurye was carrying Communist Youth League members on a good-will visit to Japan. Most passengers were sleeping at the time.

Police said eight badly burned bodies were found on the lowest of three passenger decks, where the fire was discovered shortly before 2:00 a.m. (1 p.m. EDT Tuesday) in an area above the 406-foot ship's engine room.

The 11th body was found on an upper deck this afternoon, almost 12 hours later. Police said they believed no one else was missing from among the ship's 295 passengers and 129 crew members.

They said all the victims were passengers — seven men and four women — and that some of the bodies would be difficult to identify.

According to a tentative list issued by the Maritime Safety Agency, the 11 victims were between the ages of 22 and 35 and came from several Soviet cities.

Yoshihide Yasuda, spokesman of the Osaka Prefectural Police, told a news conference this evening that 15 of the 35 injured people remained hospitalized for smoke inhalation. The others were treated and released for minor burns, smoke inhalation and other injuries.

The Kyodo News Service said police were investigating both careless smoking and an engine-room problem as possible causes of the fire, which sent smoke billowing through the vessel and over this western Japanese harbor.

Yasuda refused to comment on possible causes.

He also said police had so far been unable to question the ship's captain, crew and passengers because Soviet consular officials had refused to sign papers permitting such questioning for possible later use as evidence.

Passengers who fled the ship were taken to a junior high school gymnasium.

Pope comments on democratic ideal

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Pope John Paul II, responding to Paraguayans' complaints of political oppression, told a cheering, chanting crowd that democracy is impossible without real participation by all citizens.

At a meeting with prominent citizens Tuesday night that Paraguay's authoritarian government initially tried to prevent, a capacity crowd of 3,800 interrupted the Roman Catholic leader 18 times with applause.

The pontiff spoke of human rights and fundamental civil liberties in this landlocked country that Gen. Alfredo Stroessner has ruled for 33 years in what is widely regarded as a dictatorship.

A block of 60 chairs reserved for officials of Stroessner's rightist government and governing Colorado Party sat empty during the hour-long gathering in a government-owned sports stadium.

Hundreds of policemen and soldiers, some carrying automatic weapons, ringed but did not enter the arena.

Trade deficit shows improvement

By MARCY GORDON
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After seeing the stock and bond markets take a tumble over reports of the best U.S. trade performance in three years, investors and traders may be wondering how much more good news the markets can stand.

The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that the trade deficit shrank by more than $4 billion in March to $9.7 billion — the lowest monthly deficit since March 1985 — largely on a boom in exports.

The news was good for the dollar, which surged against other major currencies. The dollar's long-term decline apparently has paid off by making U.S. exports more attractive, and currency dealers widely believe monetary authorities aren't likely to depress its value further.

But on Wall Street and the bond market, the trade news confirmed recent fears that growing exports reflected strong economic growth that could ignite high inflation.

After a brief rally Tuesday, stock prices slumped. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had risen late Monday on expectations the trade shortfall would narrow, fell 21.22 points to close at 1,986.41.

Bond interest rates jumped after initially receding. The yield on the Treasury's closely watched 30-year bond jumped to 9.22 percent from 9.11 percent late Monday.

Inflation erodes the value of fixed-income investments such as bonds, and tends to depress bond prices and drive interest rates higher.

Stock and bond traders saw the 23 percent jump in exports in March — to an all-time high of $28.97 billion — as another sign that the U.S. economy may be overheating dangerously.

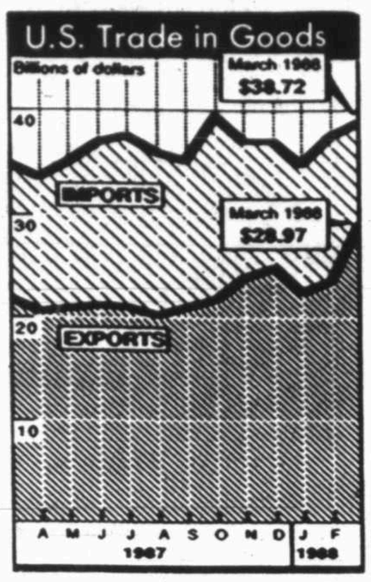

The markets fear the surge in output of export goods could aggravate inflation by tightening factory capacity, putting more spending money into workers' pockets and driving up wage costs due to shrinking labor pools. That could move the Federal Reserve to push interest rates even higher to try to curb growth.

Many traders are so worried about inflation that "they'd take almost any (economic) number at this point and put a negative cast to it," said Gary Schlossberg, senior economist for Wells Fargo Bank.

The last big dose of good economic news also knocked the wind out of the markets, when the Labor Department reported that the nation's unemployment rate in April had dropped to a 14-year low.

Following the employment report, the Fed nudged short-term interest rates higher, and major U.S. banks responded by raising their prime lending rates by half a percentage point to 9 percent.

As a result, the "good news is bad news" syndrome that has gripped the financial markets made even an improved trade performance cause for alarm.

Rally supports West Texas business

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

If Midland-Odessa retailers could retain 30 percent of the "leakage" of sales to other areas, it would be the equivalent of a new industry creating 3,000 jobs, according to John Foster, general manager of KMID-TV.

Foster was speaking to a gathering of Midland businesses at a "Buy West Texas First" rally sponsored by ClayDesta Communications, KMID-TV and the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Unveiling a series of public service announcements featuring local businessmen, Foster said the "Buy West Texas First" campaign has two parts: To build community awareness and to persuade local merchants to participate.

He said his station intends for the campaign to lead up to the critical fourth quarter, which includes the Christmas buying season. "People travel a lot during this time. We have some excellent football teams, so when you travel to the playoff games or college games, please think of where you shop," he said.

Prior to beginning the "Buy West Texas First" campaign, KMID worked with Baylor University on obtaining retail leakage figures. According to Dr. Ray Perryman of Baylor's Department of Economic Research, 1987 retail sales for Midland-Odessa totaled $2.6 billion. Retail sales leakage was estimated at 13 percent, totaling $334 million. If 30 percent of that leakage had been retained, retail spending would have increased $100 million.

Doug Sehres/ Reporter-Telegram

Over 350 local business leaders learn about "buying West Texas" in new campaign to support local economy.

In the West Texas trade area, encompassing 16 counties, retail sales in 1987 totaled $3.5 billion. Estimated leakage totaled $464 million, and would have been increased $140 million if 30 percent of that leakage had been retained.

Clayton Williams, owner of ClayDesta Communications, told the group that his company wouldn't exist today, employing 176 people in Midland-Odessa and 400 statewide without the support of local customers. "To me that's a good illustration of what can be done when we work together and support each other."

John Fowler, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, stated that "we're delighted KMID has started this undertaking." He noted the Chamber's retail committee was planning a similar campaign when KMID began theirs. He added that the Chamber will do what it can to make local businesses aware of the campaign.

Jack Sherman, owner of Jack Sherman Chevrolet, called the campaign upbeat, positive and progressive. "It's what we have to do," he said. "People have to go a long way to find the spirit that's found in West Texas."

Geologist honored for 56 years service

Hollingsworth helped name the formations

By JOHN PAUL PITTS

The terms Woodford, Atoka and Morrow are well-known geological targets in the Permian Basin, responsible for the production of billions of dollars of oil and gas. Tuesday the man who introduced those common geological terms to Permian Basin oilmen was honored.

Described as a "giant of earth science" longtime Midland resident Richard V. Hollingworth was honored with an Honorary Life Membership in the Permian Basin Chapter of Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists. The presentation was made at the monthly meeting of SEPM.

A geologist since 1935 and a resident of Midland since 1942, Hollingsworth helped pioneer much of the understanding about West Texas

Housing starts edge higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing construction edged up 0.5 percent in April, the third monthly gain in a row after a sharp slump at the end of last year, the government said today.

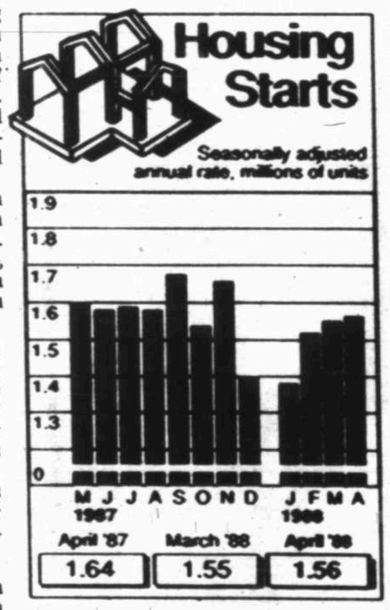

The Commerce Department said the increase pushed construction activity to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.56 million units.

But all of the strength came in apartment construction, which often has wide month-to-month swings. Construction of single-family homes, a closely watched category, posted a decline, which analysts blamed on rising interest rates.

"In the single-family, it's a little bit discouraging to see starts fall off like that, but at the same time we've started to see interest rates drift up," said Thomas M. Holloway, senior economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

"Our outlook is for interest rates to continue to drift up over the year and for ... starts to continue to decline modestly," he said.

The overall increase last month followed a gain of 2.3 percent in March and 9.9 percent in February. But housing activity was still 4.5 percent below last year, in part because of declines in December and January.

Housing starts plummeted 15.8 percent in December and then fell another 1.2 percent in January.

Carpet store enjoys new location

By MELLA McEWEN

Moving to a location 10 times as large has done wonders for CLASSIC CARPETS, according to Don Hughes, who owns the store with partner Bob Jehring.

McEwen

Classic has been in its new location at 2500 W. Illinois — the 20,000 square foot former Safeway store — for a month, and Hughes says business has been great. "We've had more Saturday traffic than we ever had," he stated. "Our hours used to be 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Now it's 8 a.m. to 6 p.m." Part of the reason could be easier access to the store, and the larger parking lot.

The larger store has allowed the owners to add more samples to their display, and make those samples larger, giving the customer a better idea of what he's looking at. "We're enjoying the move," Hughes said.

The new location, like the original store in ClayDesta National Bank, will carry antique furniture, fabrics, silk flowers and plants, decorative home accessories, artwork and gift items and homemade chocolates among its inventory. Also offered will be in-house interior design consultation.

As part of the grand opening festivities for the new store on June 4, a drawing will be held to give away two free round trip tickets to San Francisco on American Airlines.

Clark explained that he has been in partnership with a British firm manufacturing lighting fixtures, aluminum trusses and stage sets for the entertainment industry. The company, Tomcat UK Limited, has been manufacturing the fixtures in England, but "we can't get make them and ship them to the United States fast enough," Clark said.

Because the U.S. comprises 50 percent of the business, Clark is establishing Tomcat USA Inc., and is currently negotiating to buy a manufacturing facility in Midland.

Oil prices turn downward

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices turned downward after showing little change Tuesday, dropping 22 cents to stand at $17.54 at midmorning.

In another session of apathetic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange, June contracts for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, rose 10 cents to settle at $17.76 per barrel on Tuesday.

Among June contracts for refined products traded on the exchange, wholesale prices for unleaded gasoline rose 0.01 cent to 52.74 cents per gallon, while heating oil fell 0.20 cent to 47.78 cents per gallon.

Trading was quiet for most of the day, with with no news having any lasting impact on the market, said Peter Beutel, assistant director of the energy group at Elders Futures Inc.

He said many traders have decided to limit their activity until they see what happens at the next meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Dollar continues edging higher

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar edged higher in light European trading early today, with traders predicting restrained activity a day after the dollar's sharp gains. Gold prices fell.

While a sharply improved U.S. trade performance in March boosted the dollar on Tuesday, dealers predicted the dollar was unlikely to gain much more ground and said its downward trend had not been reversed.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to a closing 125.53 Japanese yen from 124.82 yen at Tuesday's close. Later, in London, it dipped to 125.50 yen.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.8586 from $1.8630 late Tuesday. The pound dropped 3 cents on Tuesday after the Bank of England signaled a cut of half a percentage point in the commercial banks' base lending rate to 7.5 percent to force down the surging currency.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

–1.7053 West German marks, up from 1.7045

–1.4215 Swiss francs, up from 1.4190

–5.7717 French francs, up from 5.7710

–1.9093 Dutch guilders, up from 1.9060

–1,265.75 Italian lire, up from 1,264.00

–1.2373 Canadian dollar, up from 1.2358

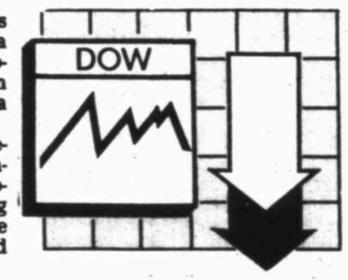

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $453 a troy ounce, down from $453.50 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $452.70.

In Zurich, the noon bid price was $453, down from $455 bid late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell to a closing bid of $454.54 from $454.67 bid at Tuesday's close.

Silver fell in London to a bid price of $6.55 a troy ounce, down from $6.59 bid late Tuesday.

Stocks fall amid inflation worries

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices sagged Tuesday despite news of a sharply lower trade deficit, and brokers called the reaction another sign that the market's post-crash anemia won't disappear soon.

An early rally over the trade report collapsed, reflecting some concern that it signaled a surging economy, hence higher inflation and rising interest rates. Selling intensified late in the day, though volume remained light.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 21.22 points to 1,966.41, erasing its 17.08-point gain Monday. Broader market indices also fell substantially.

In composite New York Stock Exchange trading, declines outnumbered advances by nearly 2-to-1, with 985 down, 521 up and 473 unchanged. Volume on the Big Board totaled 133.85 million shares, vs. 155.01 million Monday.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Judge rules AT&T treated unfairly

WASHINGTON (AP) — An administrative law judge has ruled that American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was treated unfairly by the General Services Administration and awarded AT&T four telecommunications contracts previously won by regional Bell telephone companies.

But Judge Vincent LaBella, ruling Tuesday for the GSA's Board of Contract Appeals, also found that bias against AT&T was not pervasive and refused to award the company three other contracts it sought.

Sony, Visa advertise on Soviet television

MOSCOW (AP) — Madison Avenue has spoken to the socialist masses, with Soviet TV showing commercials featuring bottles of Pepsi-Cola popping their tops to rock music riffs.

Sony TV sets and Visa credit cards also flashed across the screens Tuesday to millions of viewers during the late-evening premiere of a five-part series on life in the United States.

They were the first paid commercials on staid, state-run Soviet TV, and came in advance of President Reagan's visit to Moscow later this month.

Greyhound, Trailways mergerapproved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission has given final approval to the $80 million merger of Greyhound and Trailways, the nation's two largest bus companies.

The two bus lines have been operating as a single carrier since last July when the ICC gave temporary approval to the merger because Trailways was on the verge of going bankrupt while operating independently.

The ICC decision came Tuesday.

Tentative accord averts Goodyear strike

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A strike by 15,000 Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. workers at 11 plants nationwide was averted when negotiators reached a new tentative settlement shortly before a noon strike deadline.

There was no immediate indication whether the settlement might affect a walkout by 4,700 rubber workers against Firestone Inc. That strike, which entered its third day Tuesday, was called after the United Rubber Workers said Firestone failed to match an earlier agreement with Goodyear.

Firestone said its offer was equal to the earlier Goodyear pact.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bank of New York Co. has refused to abandon its hostile effort to acquire Irving Bank Corp., even though it lost a crucial proxy battle for control of the rival banking company.

Bank president accused of making fraudulent loans

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The former president of a bankrupt Shreveport-based finance company who is accused of bilking a bank out of at least $1 million in fraudulently obtained loans goes to a bond hearing today before a judge in Texas.

Elizabeth Erholm Chester, 50, is charged in a federal indictment unsealed Tuesday with fraudulently obtaining 15 loans totaling $1 million. Authorities say Chester collected an additional $3.5 million in fraudulent loans from Shreveport's Commercial National Bank that are not listed in the indictment.

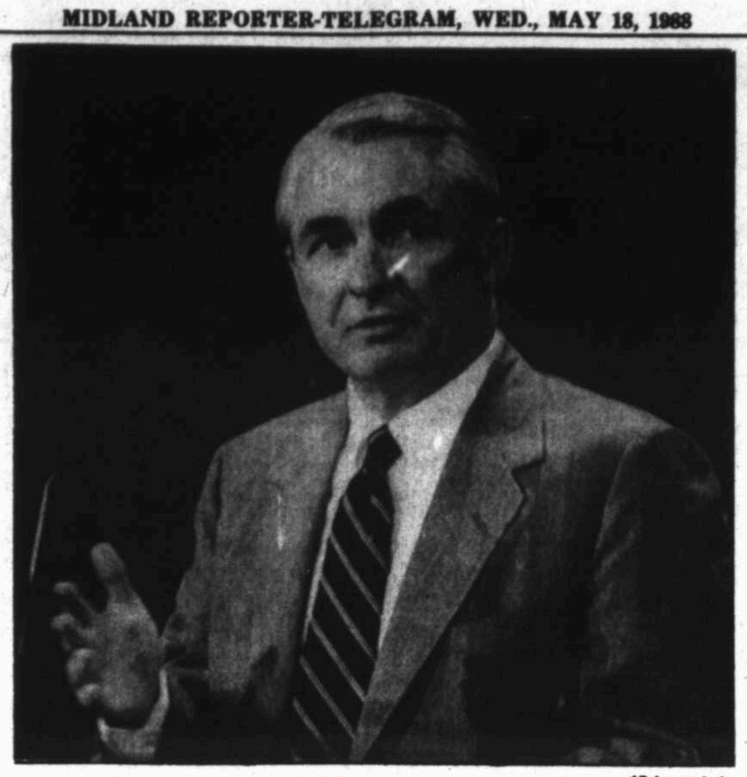

A bond hearing for Chester was set for today in Dallas.

Chester, of Garland, Texas, is former president of a now-bankrupt, finance corporation she has operated under the names of Cosmopolitan Credit and Investment Corp., Artex Finance Corp. and Chanel Financial Corp, the indictment said. She is accused of obtaining the loans through misrepresentation to help run the finance company.

The loans in the indictment were made by CNB from October 1984 through mid-February 1986.

The bank recovered more than half its losses after filing suit in 1986 against Chester and her business. The remainder was written off as bad debt.

"We did incur a loss in our relationship with Ms. Chester. But accounting adjustments were made in 1986 to handle that," said Bob Brown, CNB's public relations manager.

Bass boys move on MacMillan publishers

By GERALDINE FABRIKANT
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Robert M. Bass Group of Texas said Tuesday that it had made an unsolicited offer to acquire Macmillan Inc., the New York-based publishing and information services company, for $64 a share, or about $1.6 billion.

The offer did not surprise Wall Street experts. Takeover speculation had pushed the price of the company's stock as high as $64.75 this year. The offer came after the stock market had closed Tuesday. Macmillan stock had finished the day at $50.625, down $1.125.

A Macmillan spokesman did not return telephone calls, and the company had no official comment.

Last August, Macmillan's board adopted a "poison pill" provision to fend off unfriendly bids.

Bert Boksen, a publishing analyst at Raymond James, in St. Petersburg, Fla., noted that Macmillan had generally indicated that it did not view favorably an offer by the Bass group, which already owns about 9 percent of Macmillan stock.

One media expert wondered whether the bid was not simply a ploy by the Bass group to put Macmillan into play so it could sell its stock at a higher price. But Boksen said that if the bid was serious, Macmillan would either attempt a restructuring or look for a friendly suitor.

Boksen noted that Macmillan had grown at a compounded rate of more than 20 percent a year in the last five years and had had a 22 percent return on equity. Boksen said he felt the $64-a-share offer was a "lowball" bid.

In a letter to, Edward P. Evans, Macmillan's chairman, Robert Bass seemed to indicate that he might increase his offer "after discussions with you." The letter was part of a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission Tuesday.

Bass also said the offer "is intended to be consensual and is conditioned upon the approval of the board of directors." Bass seemed to be holding out the possibility that management would participate in the acquisition.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

What does 'book-entry' mean to owner of bonds

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. Please explain the "book-entry" procedure for bonds. Under book-entry, is it possible to get a bond certificate? And can interest checks be sent directly to the bond owner instead of the brokerage firm through which the bond was purchased?

A. The quick explanation of book-entry is that the record of ownership is maintained on computers. Bond certificates are not printed. Bond owners receive statements showing the status of their accounts.

Past that, things get complex. Some bond issues come in "book-entry only" form, meaning no certificates are printed. With other bond issues, investors have the choice of using book-entry or of receiving certificates.

All new issues of U.S. Treasury bonds and notes have come in book-entry only form since August 1986. U.S. Treasury bills have been book-entry only since 1979.

When you have Treasury securities in your own "Treasury Direct" account, interest is sent electronically to the bank you have designated on the day the interest payment is due and should be credited to your account that very day. Payments of principal at maturity and "discounts" on T bills are handled the same way. Checks are not issued.

If you have purchased Treasury securities through a brokerage firm or bank, the payments automatically go to the brokerage or bank on the due dates to be credited to your account there.

Book-entry municipal and corporate bonds can be purchased only through brokerages and banks. In that case, payments go to your brokerage or bank and should be credited to your account the same day.

With a bank, you should be able to withdraw the money immediately. If you're dealing with a brokerage and have a money market mutual fund there, you can do the same thing by writing a check on the money market fund.

Summed up, checks are never issued for bonds and other debt securities in book-entry form.

Q. After a mix-up about whether a "bearer" bond I own had been called for early redemption, I turned the bond over to a broker who said he would monitor it and redeem it if it is called.

This bond pays high interest and trades at a price well above its face value and call price. What's to prevent the broker from advising me the bond has been called, sending me a check for the "call price," selling the bond at its current market price and pocketing the difference?

A. Basically, you'll have to depend on the broker's integrity. The scenario you outline is downright thievery. Despite horror stories you hear and read, the vast majority of brokers are honest.

If you really don't trust the broker, you can either get that bond back or keep an eye out for it being called. One way to do that is by checking Standard & Poor's Corp.'s "Called Bond Record," which you will find in the reference section of large public libraries.

Bearer bonds come with interest coupons attached, which must be cut off and redeemed. The owner's name does not appear on such a bond or on the record books of the issuer. No new bonds, of any type, have been issued in bearer form since 1982.

A bearer bond stops paying interest when it is called. At that point, it should be turned in and redeemed. The call price always is at least equal to – and usually higher than – the bond's face value. With a high-interest-paying bond, however, the call price usually is lower than the current market price.

Q. When a stock is split, how does this affect a convertible bond issued by the same company?

A. Convertible securities, whether they be bonds or preferred stocks, normally are "protected against dilution." That means, upon conversion, they are entitled to more shares of stock if the stock is split or has a stock dividend.

Let's say you own a $1,000 XYZ Corp. convertible bond, whose conversion privilege allows you to exchange it for 20 shares of XYZ common stock. If XYZ common is split two for one, your bond should entitle you to turn it in and receive 40 share of XYZ common. Check your bond's dilution protection provision to be sure.

Computer firms moving to standardize software

N.Y. Times News Service

A United States and European coalition of seven rival computer makers said Tueday that it would create a new software standard that may make it possible for users to mix and match computer hardware and software from different vendors.

Industry analysts expressed doubts, however, about the motives of the coalition's most powerful members, and key industry executives suggested that a richly financed organization set up by the group might actually increase confusion in the industry.

The new group consists of IBM, Digital Equipment, Hewlett-Packard and Apollo Computer as well as Europe's Groupe Bull, Nixdorf Computer and Siemens. Its existence challenges AT&T's plan to create, with Sun Microsystems, a standard based on AT&T's Unix operating system.

The seven companies said they had raised more than $90 million to form a nonprofit corporation named the Open Software Foundation. The organization will develop a new set of software standards. Within two years the foundation plans to release a competing version of Unix that will be available on many hardware brands.

Bell & Howell buyout approved

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Bell & Howell Co. shareholders voted Tuesday in favor of a $702 million buyout led by Texas financier Robert M. Bass and members of Bell & Howell's management.

The shareholder approval cleared the way for the Skokie-based information-services company to become a subsidiary of Bell & Howell Group Inc., which was formed by an affiliate of the Robert M. Bass Group Inc., Acadia Partners L.P. of Fort Worth, Texas, and certain Bell & Howell executives including Gerald E. Schultz, chairman and chief executive officer.

Each shareholder will receive $64 per share for their common and preferred stock, Bell & Howell said in a statement.

Financing arrangements for the deal were consummated shortly after the shareholder approval, the company said.

The financing includes $200 in senior subordinated debt, of which Acadia Partners is buying $30 million; $344 million in bank financing; $100 million equity participation in the form of cash and Bell & Howell stock; and $58 million of Bell & Howell's cash-on-hand.

GEOLOGIST

As owner of the Paleontological Laboratory, which he opened in 1944, he was also responsible for compiling the most extensive collection of fusulinid data available on the Permian Basin. The collection is now housed with the Midland Energy Library.

Geologist Garner L. Wilde, who presented the honor, called Hollingsworth's collection of fusulinids thin sections and reports spanning 32 years a great legacy.

"Imagine what it would be like without them, trying to separate the Cisco from the Canyon," said Wilde.

Born on a farm in Grayson County, Texas in 1909, Hollingworth attended the University of Oklahoma, graduating in 1931 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Geology. This was followed by a Master of Science degree in 1933 and graduate studies at the University of Chicago in 1934.

From 1935 to 1941, he worked for Shell Oil Co. in Tulsa and taught one semester of college at the University of Oklahoma. He was transferred from Tulsa to Midland in 1942, and resigned his job with Shell to form the Paleontological Laboratory in May of 1944.

After suffering a heart attack in 1972, he closed the Paleontological Laboratory in 1976 and devoted his energies to serving various geological professional organizations including: West Texas Geological Society, American Association of Petroleum Geologists, Geological Society of America, and National SEPM, which he served as president in 1957.

He was also been highly active in civic and church affairs since retirement.

FRESH HAWAIIAN GINGER

The Good Cook's Secret Ingredient

Fresh ginger has been a highly prized spice since ancient times. Long used to add zest and a distinct flavor to Chinese cookery, fresh ginger has been adapted into many cuisines throughout the world. Today, fine chefs and discriminating home cooks everywhere regard fresh ginger as an important staple and use it as their own "secret ingredient" to enhance a wide variety of dishes.

Fresh Hawaiian Ginger—World's Finest
For its flavor, freshness and quality, food connoisseurs consider fresh Hawaiian ginger far superior to all others. Carefully cultivated on the "Big Island" of Hawaii, fresh Hawaiian ginger is available in Mainland markets from January through June. Selective cooks who "know their ginger" stock up on Hawaiian-grown ginger during its peak season to assure a year-round supply. (See "Ginger Facts and Tips" below.)

Fresh Hawaiian Ginger—Adds Zing to Menus
With its peppery-spicy taste, fresh ginger from Hawaii adds its own unique zip and character to appetizers, soups, salads, meats, poultry, seafood, sauces and desserts. So now, while fresh Hawaiian ginger is in ample supply, see how it can turn an ordinary dish into something extraordinary. Then, before the season ends in June, follow the storing tips and keep the flavor of the Islands in favorite dishes until the next harvesting season comes along.

GINGERED ISLAND SALAD

Fresh Ginger Vinaigrette
Gingered Cheese Rolls
16 pink or white grapefruit segments
16 fresh Hawaiian pineapple wedges
1/2 cup thin slices sweet red onion
1/2 cup diagonal sliced celery
1/3 cup thin strips yellow, red or green sweet pepper
8 cherry tomatoes, halved
1-1/2 quarts mixed salad greens (romaine, butter lettuce)

Prepare Fresh Ginger Vinaigrette and Gingered Cheese Rolls. Toss grapefruit, pineapple and onion with 1/4 cup dressing. Toss celery, pepper and tomato with salad greens. Combine with marinated fruits and arrange on chilled salad plates with Gingered Cheese Rolls. Makes 4 entree servings.

Fresh Ginger Vinaigrette: Measure into a jar, 1 tablespoon minced fresh Hawaiian ginger, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1/4 teaspoon paprika, 1/8 teaspoon salt, 4 drops liquid hot pepper seasoning, 1/3 cup each pineapple juice and rice or white wine vinegar, 3/4 cup salad oil. Cover tightly and shake well. Allow to stand an hour to mellow. Makes about 1-1/2 cups.

Gingered Cheese Rolls: Soften 1 package (3 oz.) cream cheese with pimiento. Beat in 2 teaspoons milk and 1/4 teaspoon grated fresh Hawaiian ginger. Spread on 4 to 6 slices boiled ham or turkey-ham. Roll up, cover and chill. Cut rolls into thick slices.

GINGER CHICKEN

1 tablespoon grated fresh Hawaiian ginger
2 teaspoons pressed garlic
4 or 5 large frying chicken pieces
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/4 cup shortening
1 cup halved fresh mushrooms
2/3 cup condensed chicken broth
1/4 cup dry white wine or chicken broth
1 teaspoon minced fresh Hawaiian ginger
2 teaspoons each minced parsley and green onion

Combine grated ginger and garlic. Rub over chicken and refrigerate an hour. Mix flour and paprika and toss with chicken. Brown chicken on both sides in heated shortening in heavy skillet. Drain off any excess fat. Add mushrooms, broth, wine and minced ginger. Cook just until chicken is tender, about 10 minutes longer. Remove chicken and keep warm. Boil pan liquid until reduced by a third. Add parsley and onion. Pour over chicken. Makes 4 or 5 servings.

HAWAIIAN APPLE TART

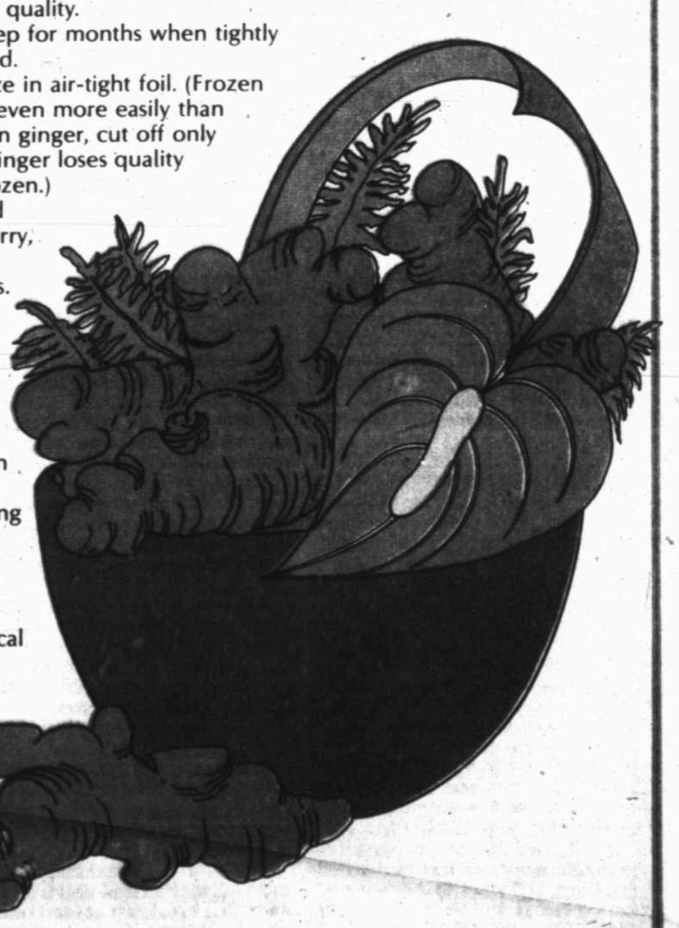

1-1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
3/4 cup light brown sugar
1/2 cup butter
3/4 cup grated sharp cheddar cheese
5 large cooking apples
1-1/2 tablespoons minced fresh Hawaiian ginger
1/2 cup apple juice
1/3 cup granulated sugar
1-1/2 teaspoons each cornstarch, lemon juice and butter
Gingered Cream

Mix flour, brown sugar and butter to fine crumbs. Measure out 1-1/2 cups and turn into a buttered glass quiche pan (9-1/2 x 1-1/2 inches) or baking pan of similar size. Press into an even layer. Bake in 375°F oven to rich golden brown, 8 to 10 minutes. Cool. Add cheese to remaining crumbs and set aside. Pare, core and cut apples into eighths. Measure ginger, apple juice and granulated sugar into a 10-inch skillet. Add apples, cover and simmer until barely tender, about 8 minutes. Lift apples with slotted spoon and arrange on crust. Blend cornstarch and lemon juice. Add to pan liquid along with butter. Heat, stirring, until thickened. Spoon over apples. Cover top with cheese crumbs. Bake in center of 375°F oven, 20 minutes, until top is rich golden brown. Cool. Garnish and serve, cut in wedges, with Gingered Cream. Makes 8 servings.

Gingered Cream: Beat 1 cup heavy cream with 2 teaspoons sugar and 1 teaspoon grated fresh Hawaiian ginger until stiff.

FRESH HAWAIIAN GINGER FACTS AND TIPS

- Fresh ginger is sold by the "hand" (the whole root) or the piece in the produce department. You'll recognize fresh Hawaiian ginger by its plump shape, freshness, light brown color and thin, clean skin. Look for firm, irregularly shaped ginger with no soft spots.
- Hawaiian-grown ginger is the only graded ginger shipped to the U.S. Mainland, which assures consistent quality.
- At home, ginger will keep for months when tightly wrapped and refrigerated.
- For longer storage, freeze in air-tight foil. (Frozen ginger grates and slices even more easily than fresh. When using frozen ginger, cut off only as much as you need. Ginger loses quality when thawed and re-frozen.)
- Fresh ginger, peeled and immersed in a jar of sherry, will retain its shape and flavor for several months. (The ginger won't absorb the sherry taste.)
- Never substitute dried ginger for fresh. It simply doesn't taste the same.
- To prepare, peel the skin with a vegetable peeler or sharp knife. Depending upon your recipe, fresh ginger may be sliced, diced, minced, grated or shredded.
- Fresh ginger is economical because a little goes a long way. To get just the right ginger taste, start with a small amount, taste-test, then add more if needed.

Meatless menus 'trendy' way to better health

By MARY FRANCES SMITH
Copley News Service

If you still think of vegetarians as grass-eating members of an undernourished counterculture and have written off vegetarian food as "rabbit chow," it's time to take another look.

Vegetarian cuisine is in vogue.

Vegetarian magazines, organizations and cooking classes are thriving. And some of the country's trendiest restaurants are offering sophisticated vegetarian dishes to an increasingly health-conscious clientele.

Largely responsible for the myths and misunderstandings about vegetarianism is the traditional American diet upon which most of us were raised. Like most old habits, the tendency to build a meal around meat is a tough one to change.

However, encouraged by frequent reports on the health-diet link, more people are discovering that creative combinations of grains, legumes, vegetables, fruits and dairy products can make meatless meals exotic and delicious, as well as nutritious.

Many restaurateurs attribute the rise in popularity of vegetarianism to an overall health-consciousness.

But such a healthy attitude need not entail a drastic change of lifestyle, a new library of cookbooks or the abandoning of favorite restaurants. Most ethnic cookbooks offer an array of vegetarian dishes.

CNS Photo

Vegetarian cuisine has new style today.

ITALIAN FOOD is especially accommodating to the vegetarian palate and the meatless dishes on most Italian menus are among the most popular.

Italian food is no longer spaghetti and meatballs; today, there are specialties such as fettucini funghi, made with mushrooms and green peas or manicotti stuffed with spinach and ricotta cheese and covered in a tomato sauce. Vegetarian appetizers include marinated eggplant and zucchini and minestrone or pasta e fagiole (pasta and bean) soups.

Beyond the Greeks' popular lamb and beef dishes are their vegetarian specialties, which highlight the produce indigenous to their Mediterranean weather and terrain.

Horiatiki, a peasant salad of feta cheese, artichoke hearts, bell peppers, red onions, olives, cucumber and tomatoes, is a showcase of this vegetable wealth. Other meatless Greek favorites are spanakopita (spinach pie); tiropita, filo dough triangles filled with cheese, mushrooms or spinach; hummus, a garbanzo bean and tahini spread served with pita bread; and fassoulatha, a white bean and tomato soup.

The chile rellenos and cheese enchiladas on Mexican menus can be as savory as the carne asada. And huevos rancheros and other Mexican egg dishes are not just for breakfast anymore. However, diners should be aware that many eateries use lard in preparing frijoles and other deep-fried items.

Even trendy French bistros are getting into the vegetarian act with their five-cheese pizzas and vegetarian entrees made daily with available produce.

And just in case there are any remaining myths about nutritional voids in a meatless diet, we're here to dispel them. Contrary to long-standing beliefs and stubborn traditions, a meal without meat does not equal a meal lacking in nutrition.

THE KEY concern over meatless meals is that they do not contain the necessary amount of protein.

Soy products, such as tofu, are especially rich in protein. In addition, there are simple rules of thumb for combining food groups that complement each other to provide the proper amino acids, the building blocks for complete protein.

Key combinations include legumes, such as beans or peas, paired with grains; and dairy products paired with nuts or seeds.

While these combinations may seem revolutionary to Americans, they are the centuries-old staples of traditional societies where meat has been non-existent, difficult to acquire or against certain religious convictions.

Vegetarian entrees are praised for their low fat and cholesterol content. However, many nuts and seeds (peanuts, cashews, sesame and pumpkin seeds) contain 75 percent or more fat and should be consumed in moderation. Rules of moderation also apply to eggs, a good source of protein that is also high in cholesterol.

Suzanne Weeks, a registered dietitian acting as a nutrition consultant, emphasized the need to steer clear of fats. "When we cut down our fat intake, we lower the amount of cholesterol manufactured in our liver," she said.

Weeks went on to say that an increasing number of restaurants and hotel chains, such as the Marriott, Sheraton, Hyatt and Hilton, are implementing low-fat, low-cholesterol choices on their menus, many of which are meatless.

FOR VEGETARIANS, these options have obviously simplified dining situations that used to be difficult or awkward. Weeks specifically mentioned the lavish breakfast buffets at some of the larger hotel chains that begin with mounds of fresh fruit and whole-grain muffins and end with the fatty meat accompaniments and desserts.

SPANAKOPITA
(Greek Spinach Pie)

Filling:
6 (10 ounce) packages frozen chopped spinach, thawed
1 quart small curd cottage cheese
1 (8 ounce) package cream cheese, softened
2 cups crumbled feta cheese (equals 1 pound)
1 dozen eggs, slightly beaten
1 cup chopped onions
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon nutmeg
Crust:
1 package (1 pound) filo dough, thawed (follow package direction)
1 pound unsalted butter, melted and clarified

For Filling: Place thawed spinach on large clean cloth or cheesecloth. Wrap cloth completely around spinach, twist top of cloth tightly, squeeze to remove all moisture; set aside.

In large mixing bowl, combine cream cheese and cottage cheese. Add eggs, mix well, add feta cheese, mix again. Add spinach and onions, mix well. Add seasonings, mix again and set aside.

Assembly: Using soft paintbrush or pastry brush, spread melted butter on bottom of 9x9-inch pan, unroll filo dough on clean cloth. Brush first sheet of filo with melted butter, lift gently and place evenly in pan. Layer five more sheets of buttered filo in pan. Filo will overlap pan sides. Fill with 5½ cups of spinach filling, spread evenly around pan. Layer five more sheets of buttered filo on top of spinach filling. Top with one unbuttered sheet of filo. Tuck ends of filo under. Butter top layer. Score into nine pieces. Prepare second pan in like manner.

Bake for 35 to 40 minutes or until golden brown in 350 degree F oven.

Note: Spanakopita may be covered with foil and frozen before baking. When needed, remove foil, place frozen pie in preheated 350 degree F oven and bake for 75 to 90 minutes or until golden brown.

MILLECOSEDDE
(Thousand Little Things Soup, from Italy)
¼ pound dried chickpeas
½ head red cabbage
½ pound fresh or 4 ounces dried wild mushrooms
1 onion, chopped
1 stalk celery, chopped
1 carrot, chopped
3 tablespoons olive oil
Salt and black pepper
2 quarts water
¼ pound rigatoni, penne, elbow macaroni or other short pasta
½ cup grated pecorino cheese

Soak dried chickpeas overnight in water to cover. Drain. Cut cabbage vertically into thin slices. If you are using fresh mushrooms, clean and slice them.

In very large skillet or soup kettle, saute onion, celery and carrot in oil until they are lightly colored. Add cabbage and mushrooms, with salt and pepper to taste, and stir. Cook until cabbage has wilted. Add beans and water.

Bring soup to simmer, and cook over low flame for 2 hours,, adding pasta during the last 10 minutes. Serve soup hot and pass grated pecorino cheese and pepper grinder.

SIYAMI
(Vegetarian Stuffed Cabbage, Arabic)
1 cup medium-grade bulgur
Water
1 medium cabbage
1 cup water
1 (1 pound) can garbanzo beans, drained
1 medium tomato, chopped
½ cup chopped fresh parsley
1 medum onion, chopped
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground cumin
Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 (10 ounce) can tomato juice

Place bulgur in large bowl. Cover with water, let stand 30 minutes. Place cabbage in large saucepan. Add 1 cup water. Cover. Simmer over low heat 10 minutes or until outer leaves are barely softened. Drain in colander. Cool.

Puree garbanzo beans in blender or food processor. Set aside. Drain bulgur, if necessary, squeezing out excess moisture. In large bowl, combine drained bulgur, pureed garbanzo beans, tomato, parsley, onion, cinnamon, cumin, salt and pepper. Add olive oil, mix well.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Grease a 13x9-inch baking pan. Separate leaves from cabbage. Trim off bulky stem ends. Place about 1 tablespoon filling in center of each leaf, use more filling if leaves are large. Fold in sides. roll up jellyroll fashion. Place cabbage rolls seam side down, in prepared baking pan in a single layer. Pour tomato juice over rolls. Cover. Bake 45 minutes to 1 hour or until filling is tender.

Nutritional information researched

What are Americans eating today, and, just as important, what are they not eating? Do Americans really know what constitutes a good diet?

In 1980, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Department of Health and Human Services jointly published "Nutrition and Your Health — Dietary Guidelines for Americans." In 1985, the two agencies published a slightly revised edition. The first guideline recommends eating a variety of foods to provide needed nutrients. The second guideline suggests the amount of foods be commensurate with energy needs so that desirable body weight be maintained.

These two guidelines form the framework of a good diet. The other five guidelines give the characteristics of a good diet. They recommend eating food with adequate starch and fiber and avoiding too much fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, sugar, sodium and alcohol.

So how are Americans doing in relation to these recommendations? A survey by the National Nutrition Monitoring System provided, in part, some answers.

The first guideline — eat a variety of foods to provide needed nutrients: More than 1,500 women reported one-day intakes in the spring of 1985 and the same number in 1986 of between 1,600 and 1,700 calories per day. Compared with a 1977 survey, there was a considerable change — now they are eating more skim and low-fat milk, carbonated soft drinks and mixtures that are mainly meat, poultry, fish and whole grains.

They eat less whole milk, less meat and fewer eggs. Higher-income and better-educated women led in these changes. The one-day intakes were below the Recommended Dietary Allowances for energy (calories), folacin, vitamin B-6, zinc, iron, magnesium and calcium.

Avoid too much fat, saturated fat and cholesterol guideline: Fat in the women's diets contained an average of 37 percent of calories, with cholesterol average about 300 milligrams per day.

Eat food with adequate starch and fiber guideline: Starch and sugars provided 46 percent of calories, and fiber is about 12 grams per day (20 grams is recommended by the National Cancer Institute).

Avoid too much sugar and too much sodium guidelines: Intake of sugar-containing foods was up from 1977. Sodium intakes seemed to be in the OK range but were probably low because they didn't include salt at the table.

In a four-day breakfast survey, almost all women and children reported eating breakfast at least once during the four days, but only 53 percent of the women and 85 percent of the children had breakfast each of the four days.

Child-pleasing foods tasty, healthy

Good nutrition habits begin in childhood

Hearst News Service

Studies say that 11 million children in this country are overweight, and that heart disease can begin in childhood.

Wise parents show concern for their children's diet. With parental guidance, meals and snacks can supply nutrients for growth and energy for exercise without adding extra pounds.

At every age, food provides the essentials for growth, energy and good health. Milk, meats, vegetables, fruits and grains provide the basics. Select a variety of foods from these groups to provide recommended amounts of vitamins and minerals.

Introduce a variety of new foods early. For very young children, all flavors are new. Learning to like the taste of food and appreciate variety is an important part of growing up.

Mealtime should be a happy time. Appearance and flavor are important to children.

Nutritious meals can be easy to prepare. School lunch menus published in the newspaper will provide clues to what is popular with students. Ethnic foods and a meal in a bun are tops with teens.

SOUTHERN BANANA PUDDING

1 package (4-serving size) vanilla pudding mix
1 egg, separated
2¼ cups milk
12 vanilla wafers
1 banana, sliced
2 tablespoons sugar

Combine pudding mix, egg yolk and milk in saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture just comes to a boil. Remove from heat. Cover surface of hot pudding with waxed paper and cool. Beat pudding smooth.

Arrange layer of vanilla wafers in bottom of 1-quart baking dish. Add layer of banana slices and layer of pudding. Repeat.

Beat egg whites until foamy. Gradually add sugar, beating until mixture forms stiff peaks. Pile lightly on pudding. Bake at 425 degrees for five to 10 minutes, or until meringue is lightly browned.

CABBAGE-GRAPE SLAW

1 cup cottage cheese
¼ cup milk
¼ cup cider vinegar
2 teaspoons honey
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon celery seeds 1 quart finely shredded cabbage
2 cups seedless grapes, halved

Process first four ingredients until smooth. Add salt and celery seeds. Just before serving, shred cabbage and combine in bowl with grapes. Add dressing and toss to mix.

CARROT-BROCCOLI-MUSHROOM STIR-FRY

1 pound broccoli
2 tablespoons oil
1 pound carrots, thinly sliced
½ pound mushrooms, sliced thin
5 green onions, sliced
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Pepper
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon thyme

Wash and trim broccoli. Peel stems and cut into 2-inch lengths. Separate florets by cutting into quarters.

In large skillet or wok, heat oil over medium heat. Add broccoli, carrots, mushrooms and onions. Cook and stir until vegetables are tender-crisp, about five minutes. Stir in lemon juice and seasonings.

LEMON BREAD PUDDING

6 slices bread, cut into ½-inch cubes
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons margarine
4 eggs, separated
½ cup lemon juice
¼ cup powdered sugar

Combine bread cubes, lemon rind and salt in large bowl. Set aside.

Combine milk, sugar and margarine in saucepan and heat until margarine melts, stirring occasionally. Pour over bread cubes.

Beat egg yolks and lemon juice. Stir into bread mixture. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Fold into bread mixture. Spoon into lightly greased 2-quart casserole. Dust top with powdered sugar. Bake at 325 degrees for 45 minutes.

SWEET POTATO CAKE

2 cups flour
½ teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cloves
½ cup oil
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup cooked, mashed sweet potatoes
½ cup milk
½ cup nuts (optional)

Sift first seven ingredients together onto square of waxed paper. Beat remaining ingredients together in bowl. Stir in dry ingredients until combined. Pour into greased 9-inch square pan. Bake at 350 degrees 45 minutes or until cake tests done.

BEEF FLORENTINE CASSEROLE

1½ pounds ground beef
1 onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1 package (10-ounce) frozen chopped spinach
Water
1 can (16-ounce) spaghetti sauce
1 can (8-ounce) tomato sauce
1 can (6-ounce) tomato paste
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground red pepper
1 package (7-ounce) shell macaroni, cooked
1 cup shredded cheese
½ cup soft bread crumbs
2 eggs, beaten
2 tablespoons oil

Cook beef, onion and garlic in large skillet until meat is lightly browned. Drain off excess fat.

Cook spinach according to package directions. Drain, saving liquid. Add water to spinach liquid to make 1 cup. Combine spinach liquid, spaghetti sauce, tomato paste, tomato sauce, salt and red pepper. Stir into meat mixture. Simmer 10 minutes.

Combine spinach with macaroni, cheese, crumbs, eggs and oil. Spread in 9x13-inch baking pan. Top with meat mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Freeze leftovers in single servings for quick warm-up in a microwave oven.

MOCK TAMALE PIE

1 pound ground beef
1 onion, chopped
1 can (16-ounce) tomatoes
1 can (15-ounce) whole kernel corn, drained
1 cup yellow cornmeal
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon chili powder
½ teaspoon salt

Cook beef and onion in large skillet until meat is brown and onion soft. Add remaining ingredients. Stir and cook until mixture bubbles. Pour into greased 2-quart casserole and bake covered 30 minutes at 350 degrees.

If desired, casserole may be topped with ½ cup sliced olives and 1 cup grated cheese and baked uncovered 10 minutes longer.

CRISP OVEN-FRIED CHICKEN

3 pounds cut-up chicken
3 tablespoons oil
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup cornflake crumbs or crushed chips

Rub chicken with 1 tablespoon oil, salt and pepper. Roll chicken in crumbs until well coated. Arrange in shallow foil-lined baking pan and sprinkle with remaining oil. Bake at 375 degrees until browned and tender, 45 to 60 minutes.

Questions on dairy foods answered

Associated Press

As the temperature rises, so does concern about handling foods safely. Here are some dos and don'ts for storing milk, cheese and other dairy products.

■ My grocery store has some milk on the shelf instead of in the dairy case. How can it be safe?

The new type of milk you're describing is called UHT (Ultra High Temperature) milk. It's specially pasteurized at a higher temperature, then aseptically packaged and is very safe. The milk will keep on your shelf at home for about three months but must be refrigerated after you open it. Keep this milk on hand for emergencies or camping trips.

■ The electricity in my house went off during the night, leaving my refrigerator without power. Are the dairy foods inside still safe?

Normally, dairy foods are safe inside an unopened refrigerator for four to six hours in a power failure. If the electricity was off for eight hours or more it's best to toss the foods. If there's a delay in getting the power back on, you can add block ice to the refrigerator to keep it cool. Don't open the door unless absolutely necessary or the cool air will escape.

■ Can I use sour cream with little dots of mold on it?

Throw it away. On a hard surface, as on most cheeses, a little mold can be easily cut away. But in cartons of soft dairy foods such as sour cream, yogurt, and cottage cheese, little spots of mold on the top usually mean there is mold present throughout the food. Sour cream will keep three to four weeks when properly stored in a 40 degree refrigerator.

■ Can I leave butter out at room temperature?

Store tightly wrapped butter, margarine and blends in the refrigerator for two to four weeks. Because they are high in fat, they're susceptible to oxidation, which causes spoilage. Refrigeration slows oxidation. If you leave butter out overnight, it should be safe, but its shelf life will be shorter.

■ When I opened a carton of milk this morning, it had a funny, sour smell. Is it OK?

Check the top of your milk carton for the "Sell by" date. Most milk cartons are stamped with this date, which indicates to your grocer how long the milk can safely stay in the dairy case. If the milk smells sour and is beyond the "Sell by" date, pour it down the drain. If the milk smells sour before that date, it may have picked up odors in the refrigerator or have been allowed to stand on the table too long at mealtime. Use your best judgment on whether or not to use the milk. A distinctly sour smell means that the milk is bad and should be thrown out.

DEAR ABBY

Woman shocked by attire in church

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I live in a small suburb of St. Paul, Minn. As a child, my family was Lutheran, but after I married, I started to go to the Catholic Church with my husband.

Abby, I've seen a lot in that church, but today took the cake! Sitting in front of us was a woman with two small children in their pajamas!

I have been upset when I see people in church in blue jeans or shorts because I was taught that it was a sign of respect to dress up for church. I feel uncomfortable around all these slobs. Needless to say, I don't really care to go to church anymore. I've talked to my husband about going to another church, but he thinks I'm being ridiculous.

Are there other people who think going to church like this is OK, or am I being a prude? — FROSTED IN FOREST LAKE

DEAR FROSTED: Perhaps the children you saw dressed in pajamas were wearing the best clothing they had. I give the mother credit for not only going to church but taking her children. At least they were in church. I'm sure the Lord didn't care what they were wearing.

DEAR ABBY: I am responding to the mail you got after your appearance on the Donahue show. I am one of those old-fashioned women from the country who gave up their nursing careers to stay home and raise families.

What did I get after 29 years of marriage? I got dumped for a woman my husband met in a piano-bar in Atlanta!

I foolishly paid him a surprise visit and got the shock of my life! I had stayed in New York trying to renovate our house so we could sell it. He got a job transfer to Atlanta and was living it up in a nice apartment.

During our 29 years of marriage, my husband was a student for 10 years. We fled Germany and came to the United States after he had finished his studies.

After my surprise visit to Atlanta, my husband told me he wanted a divorce! My lawyer isn't much help. (Mr. Marvin Mitchelson, would you like to give your legal services to a dumped housewife? I'll give you half of my $300 cash support and half of my $50 for dog support.)

I kept my sanity because I know I am better off without a cheating husband.

All you women in Atlanta, beware of a tall, balding guy with a German accent who loves to talk about his possessions and achievements and drives a Mercedes. He is a wolf in sheep's clothing, who is not able to give you material things — or love either.

If you think you've got it made, check into his finances. His debts are staggering, and he has to support me, too. — DUMPED IN NEW YORK

Process makes potato chips 'lite'

Copley News Service

The slogan, "tastes great, less filling," may be used for more than just beer. You may soon be saying that about your potato chips.

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, chemical engineer Benjamin Lu has developed a process for removing about 80 percent of the oil from potato chips. He calls the process "superficial fluid extraction" and likens it to removing caffeine from coffee. It involves putting potato chips in a sealed chamber, where they're bathed in carbon dioxide for several hours under high pressure.

Lu says blind taste tests show that 50 percent of those eating the carbon-dried chips couldn't tell the difference from regular chips.

But he has a little more refining to do before you see potato chips that "taste great" and are "less filling."

WHAT'S COOKING

Mother should be made honorary Aggie in family

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the second article in a series of interviews with members of the Midland Aggie Mothers' Club.

By ELIZABETH EDWIN
Lifestyle Editor

Although Lois Harrington didn't attend Texas A&M University, she should be named an honorary Aggie. She married an Aggie and three of her five children graduated from A&M.

It all started when she married Clayton "Red" Harrington, A&M Class of '50. The couple has five children: Clay who recieved an appointment to West Point, Kevin who lives in Midland — then the chain of Aggies began — Michael Harrington earned a masters degree in Ocean Engineering and married an Aggie, Robin; Megan Harrington graduated from A&M with a health and science degree and married Aggie James Skees; Tina Harrington graduated from A&M with a bachelors degree in psychology and married Tim Truitt, who just by chance also is an Aggie.

So, Mrs. Harrington has seven Aggies in the family, and since there are already five grandchildren, there are sure to be more Aggies in the future.

Because of her association with A&M, Mrs. Harrington became a member of the Midland Texas A&M Mothers' Club. Currently she is program chairman, but also has served as secretary and quilt chairman.

"If they had a job I thought I could do, I did it," Mrs. Harrington said.

She is a firm believer in the club's effectiveness, especially for "first time parents."

"The Mothers' Club really helps first time moms with problems," Mrs. Harrington said. "First time moms" are those who are sending their first child away to college. "The club gives you someone to talk to who has been through what you are going through now. There's someone to tell you that the things that are happening with your child happen all the time."

In addition to being an active Aggie mom, Mrs. Harrington also is a member of St. Stephen's Catholic Church, and is a docent and membership chairman for the Petroleum Museum. Her hobbies include tennis, needlepoint and quilting.

In fact, quilting as a hobby led to Mrs. Harrington serving as quilt chairman for the A&M Mothers' Club. For the past three years, members of the Mothers' Club have made an A&M quilt as a fund-raising project. The first year, the quilt was auctioned. But for the last two years, members have sold chances on the quilt. The proceeds go to various projects at the university.

One of Mrs. Harrington's favorite projects is "The Mentors." This is an organization of over 300 professors who donate time outside of their class hours to help students, whether the students need help with class work or just need someone to talk to.

"I think every university should have one (a Mentors program)," Mrs. Harrington said. "The parents can also call a Mentor for help. If a parent is worried about their child, they can call a professor on the Mentor list and ask for their child to be checked on."

The Midland club has about 90 members, and Mrs. Harrington said that in addition to helping each other and the university, the members have fun.

"We have a $10 dues that pays for a box of goodies we send to each of the kids during dead week," Mrs. Harrington said. "We also have a brag session. If your kid has done something you're proud of, then you can tell everybody about it."

Mrs. Harrington also submitted recipes to the Texas A&M Mothers' Club cookbook, "Aggies, Moms and Apple Pie," and her Chile Verde recipe was selected for publication. The Chile Verde recipe and two other family favorites follow.

CHILE VERDE
1 to 1½ pounds steak, diced
2 small cans chopped green chiles
2 cups water
2 boullion cubes
2 cloves garlic, chopped or mashed
Cumin to taste
1 can refried beans
Shredded Monterey Jack cheese
Shredded chedder cheese
1 chopped onion
Small amount of oil
Flour tortillas
Picante sauce

Brown round steaks small amount of oil. Add onion and saute until wilted. Add chile, boullion cubes, garlic, water and cumin. Cook over low heat until meat is tender — 2 to 2½ hours adding more water if necessary. Steam flour tortillas until warm or heat in microwave. Mash refried beans, adding a little water if necessary. Heat and add shredded Monterey Jack cheese.

Spread bean mixture over tortillas, add meat mixture down center; top with picante sauce and shredded cheddar cheese. Fold like a burrito.

This recipe was given to Mrs. Harrington by Barbara White of Midland and it was so good she saw no need to add anything.

BARBEQUED SHRIMP
Shrimp in shell
1 stick oleo per pound of shrimp
Parsley flakes
Garlic powder
Celery flakes
Ground pepper flakes
Salt to taste
Italian seasonings
Lemon juice
Cracked pepper

Layer shrimp in pan. Mix seasonings and shake over shrimp. Cut oleo in pats; layer over shrimp. Add salt and lemon juice. Make second layer in same way and cover in foil. Bake 45 minutes in 350 degree oven. Serve with french bread.

SHRIMP COURT BOULLION
Make a roux of ¾ cup oil and ¾ cup flour. Cook about 10 minutes or until brown.

Chop 3 large onions and add to roux; cook about 15 minutes. Add one large can tomatoes and cook until thickened. Add:
6 cups water
1 small can of tomato paste
1 pod garlic
½ cup celery, chopped
1 teaspoon thyme
¼ teaspoon basil
¼ teaspoon allspice
2 bay leaves
1 pod hot pepper
½ cup chopped green pepper
Some chopped green onions
Parsley
Small can of mushrooms
2 tablespoons dry white wine

Cook for about 30 minutes over lower heat. Add shrimp. Let set to season. (Mrs. Harrington allows shrimp to season for a couple of days.)

Pantry, microwave team for quick meals

Copley News Service

Need to prepare a meal in minimal time? Team your pantry and microwave for lightning-quick results. And most canned foods can be warmed and served in the same container, for easy clean-up when you're done.

Canned foods are an important source of nutrition for Americans. Close to 90 percent of all tomatoes grown in this country are canned, as are 95 percent of beets and about half of all sweet corn. And canned foods are comparable in nutrients to fresh and frozen.

The Canned Food Information Council recommends that you analyze your family's 10 favorite quick recipes, make a list of the canned products needed to prepare them, and keep an inventory of these items so they're in your pantry when you need them.

What are the advantages of canned foods? They're easy to store, don't take up much room, and will keep on the shelf for years. Stock up when you see a sale, and keep on hand for later. Don't purchase cans that are bulging, dented, or damaged in any way.

For a quick, convenient meal, add canned pineapple and Vienna sausages or diced canned ham to a can of pork and beans. It may not be haute cuisine, but you'll be out of the kitchen in a hurry.

Dress up canned vegetables with slivered almonds, shredded cheese, dried or fresh snipped herbs, or melted butter. Following are some more ideas for a variety of quick dishes from a can:

MINUTE MANHATTAN CHOWDER
1 (11-ounce) can condensed vegetable soup
1 (7½-ounce) can minced clams, with juice
1 cup canned tomato juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon each dried thyme and dried parsley, crumbled
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

Combine all ingredients in 2-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cover and microwave 10 to 12 minutes, stirring every 4 minutes, until heated through.

SOUTH-OF-THE-BORDER BEAN DIP
1 (1-pound) can refried beans
1 cup shredded mild cheddar cheese
½ cup sliced green onions
½ cup mild green chili salsa or 3 tablespoons taco sauce
¼ teaspoon ground cumin
Tortilla or corn chips

Combine all ingredients except chips in 1-quart microwave-safe casserole, stirring to blend well. Cover and microwave 4 to 6 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until heated through and bubbly. Serve hot with tortilla chips for dipping. (This can also be used as a burrito filling in corn or flour tortillas.)

MICROWAVE MARINARA SAUCE
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ cup minced onion
2 (8-ounce) cans tomato sauce
3 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon dried basil leaves, crumbled
½ teaspoon each ground dried oregano and sugar
¼ teaspoon each salt and pepper
2 tablespoons snipped fresh parsley (optional)
Grated Parmesan cheese

Measure olive oil into 1-quart microwave-safe casserole. Add onion and microwave uncovered on HIGH setting 3 to 5 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until onion is soft. Stir in all remaining ingredients except parsley and Parmesan. Cover and microwave on HIGH setting 4 minutes. Stir in parsley, if desired. Cover and microwave 8 to 10 minutes longer at LOW setting, stirring every 3 minutes. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese to taste. Serve as-is over pasta, or add cooked meatballs, sausage, or crumbled ground beef.

BRANDIED CHERRY SAUCE
⅓ cup granulated sugar
1½ tablespoons cornstarch
¼ cup brandy
⅛ teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 (1-pound) can pitted cherries in heavy syrup

Combine sugar and cornstarch in 1-quart microwave-safe casserole. Slowly stir in brandy to make a smooth paste. Blend in cinnamon, then stir in cherries and syrup.

Cover and microwave 10 to 12 minutes, stirring every 5 minutes, or until sauce is thickened and heated through. Let stand, uncovered, 4 to 5 minutes before serving. Serve warm over ice cream.

Vertical rotisserie latest in Cajun cooking innovations

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — James D. Booker got tired of depending on community festivals to keep him supplied with tender cochon de lait, so he built a better rotisserie and began hanging his own hogs.

With the help of a friend, lots of experimentation and an insatiable appetite for roast pig, Booker developed what he says is his first and probably only invention: the vertical rotisserie or Hog Hanger.

"All my life I loved roast pig," Booker said. "But I always was at the mercy of church fairs and that sort."

Hanging a hog or cooking up a cochon de lait (milk-fed pig) is a favorite catalyst for a wintertime gathering around Booker's hometown of Marksville in the French-Catholic region of Louisiana known as Acadiana.

The regular vertical rotisserie for pigs up to 90 pounds is not an original idea, but the first to be marketed commercially, Booker said.

"I probably am the first to patent it," he said. "Everybody who roasts their pigs have always had to make their own equipment."

The Hog Hanger is powered by a small 1 RPM motor. The rotisserie on which the pig slowly turns over a cooking pit is 36.5 inches long and weighs 17 pounds.

The 40-year-old U.S. Postal Service employee got started cooking pigs with the help of a friend from another Acadelles Parish town, Bunkie. "He told me no one makes a commercial rotisserie, that I was going to have to make one myself," Booker said.

It took several tries to get the design right and a motor that would stand up to the pressure of up to nine hours of hanging a hog, goat or beef over a fire for a day and turn at the same time.

"It's kind of embarrassing when you have friends over and the motor burns up and your pig stops turning," he said, recalling the third such burn out in the trial stages.

He finally came up with a model that withstood 56 hours of turning and less than two years later, in April 1985, Booker had the first patented pig rotisserie in south Louisiana or the United States.

"I haven't had any complaints yet. It's going to last forever. It's perfect for what it's designed for," he said.

DEAR ABBY

Woman shocked by attire in church

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I live in a small suburb of St. Paul, Minn. As a child, my family was Lutheran, but after I married, I started to go to the Catholic Church with my husband.

Abby, I've seen a lot in that church, but today took the cake! Sitting in front of us was a woman with two small children in their pajamas!

I have been upset when I see people in church in blue jeans or shorts because I was taught that it was a sign of respect to dress up for church. I feel uncomfortable around all these slobs. Needless to say, I don't really care to go to church anymore. I've talked to my husband about going to another church, but he thinks I'm being ridiculous.

Are there other people who think going to church like this is OK, or am I being a prude? — FROSTED IN FOREST LAKE

DEAR FROSTED: Perhaps the children you saw dressed in pajamas were wearing the best clothing they had. I give the mother credit for not only going to church but taking her children. At least they were in church. I'm sure the Lord didn't care what they were wearing.

DEAR ABBY: I am responding to the mail you got after your appearance on the Donahue show. I am one of those old-fashioned women from the country who gave up their nursing careers to stay home and raise families.

What did I get after 29 years of marriage? I got dumped for a woman my husband met in a piano-bar in Atlanta!

I foolishly paid him a surprise visit and got the shock of my life! I had stayed in New York trying to renovate our house so we could sell it. He got a job transfer to Atlanta and was living it up in a nice apartment.

During our 29 years of marriage, my husband was a student for 10 years. We fled Germany and came to the United States after he had finished his studies.

After my surprise visit to Atlanta, my husband told me he wanted a divorce! My lawyer isn't much help. (Mr. Marvin Mitchelson, would you like to give your legal services to a dumped housewife? I'll give you half of my $300 cash support and half of my $50 for dog support.)

I kept my sanity because I know I am better off without a cheating husband.

All you women in Atlanta, beware of a tall, balding guy with a German accent who loves to talk about his possessions and achievements and drives a Mercedes. He is a wolf in sheep's clothing, who is not able to give you material things — or love either.

If you think you've got it made, check into his finances. His debts are staggering, and he has to support me, too. — DUMPED IN NEW YORK

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Process makes potato chips 'lite'

Copley News Service

The slogan, "tastes great, less filling," may be used for more than just beer. You may soon be saying that about your potato chips.

Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, chemical engineer Benjamin Lu has developed a process for removing about 60 percent of the oil from potato chips. He calls the process "superficial fluid extraction" and likens it to removing caffeine from coffee. It involves putting potato chips in a sealed chamber, where they're bathed in carbon dioxide for several hours under high pressure.

Lu says blind taste tests show that 50 percent of those eating the carbon-dried chips couldn't tell the difference from regular chips.

But he has a little more refining to do before you see potato chips that "taste great" and are "less filling."

Mother should be made honorary Aggie in family

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the second article in a series of interviews with members of the Midland Aggie Mothers' Club.

By ELIZABETH EDWIN

Although Lois Harrington didn't attend Texas A&M University, she should be named an honorary Aggie. She married an Aggie and three of her five children graduated from A&M.

It all started when she married Clayton "Red" Harrington, A&M Class of '50. The couple has five children: Clay who recieved an appointment to West Point, Kevin who lives in Midland — then the chain of Aggies began — Michael Harrington earned a masters degree in Ocean Engineering and married an Aggie, Robin; Megan Harrington graduated from A&M with a health and science degree and married Aggie James Skees; Tina Harrington graduated from A&M with a bachelors degree in psychology and married Tim Truitt, who just by chance also is an Aggie.

Vertical rotisserie latest in Cajun cooking innovations

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — James D. Booker got tired of depending on community festivals to keep him supplied with tender cochon de lait, so he built a better rotisserie and began hanging his own hogs.

With the help of a friend, lots of experimentation and an insatiable appetite for roast pig, Booker developed what he says is his first and probably only invention: the vertical rotisserie or Hog Hanger.

"All my life I loved roast pig," Booker said. "But I always was at the mercy of church fairs and that sort."

Hanging a hog or cooking up a cochon de lait (milk-fed pig) is a favorite catalyst for a wintertime gathering around Booker's hometown of Marksville in the French-Catholic region of Louisiana known as Acadiana.

The regular vertical rotisserie for pigs up to 90 pounds is not an original idea, but the first to be marketed commercially, Booker said.

"I probably am the first to patent it," he said. "Everybody who roasts their pigs have always had to make their own equipment."

The Hog Hanger is powered by a small 1 RPM motor. The rotisserie on which the pig slowly turns over a cooking pit is 36.5 inches long and weighs 17 pounds.

The 40-year-old U.S. Postal Service employee got started cooking pigs with the help of a friend from another Acyelles Parish town, Bunkie. "He told me no one makes a commercial rotisserie, that I was going to have to make one myself," Booker said.

It took several tries to get the design right and a motor that would stand up to the pressure of up to nine hours of hanging a hog, goat or beef over a fire for a day and turn at the same time.

"It's kind of embarrassing when you have friends over and the motor burns up and your pig stops turning," he said, recalling the third such burn out in the trial stages.

He finally came up with a model that withstood 56 hours of turning and less than two years later, in April 1985, Booker had the first patented pig rotisserie in south Louisiana or the United States.

"I haven't had any complaints yet. It's going to last forever. It's perfect for what it's designed for," he said.

THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Reach out and assume power. Although your associates look to you for ideas, they think you should pass them out for free. Set them straight. Be willing to make adjustments in order to win friends and ensure the boss's cooperation. Do not let others pressure you into making investments you cannot afford. Heed your own instincts in family matters. A new relationship should develop at its own pace. Push and you will be sorry.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: painter Sarah Peale, TV host David Hartman, actress Nancy Kwan, Black Muslim Malcolm X, pitcher Eric Show, Ho Chi Minh.

ARIES (March 21-Paril 19): Control your emotions and business will produce unusual rewards. Keep a romantic relationship on an even keel as well. Telephone messages give you a hint of what is to come. Be prepared.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are in the mood to lead, not follow. Grab the reins and do not let go! Outside forces favor your efforts. Love throws you a curve, but everything turns out fine.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Let friends do most of the weekend planning. You reserve your energy for work and business entertainment. Follow doctor's diet suggestions and you will feel much better.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are eager to give of yourself. Be sure a prospective partner is worthy of your devotion and trust. Financial claims will be honored. Chat with an old friend. Share favorite memories.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Decide who is the brightest of your suitors and spend more time together. Business demands will get lighter as the week winds down. Be open-minded. Consider family member's idea for weekend recreation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Focus on work during early morning hours. Major changes may be needed to improve the bottom line. Hire experts. The spotlight is on your relations with those at a distance. Write letters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good time for sizing up opportunities nearby. Show initiative and complete important work. A parent-child relationship improves after spending quality time together.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Unexpected financial gains are in the picture. Business progress comes slowly but surely. Changing your views could confuse others. Joint funds can be invested to increase earnings. Consult partner.

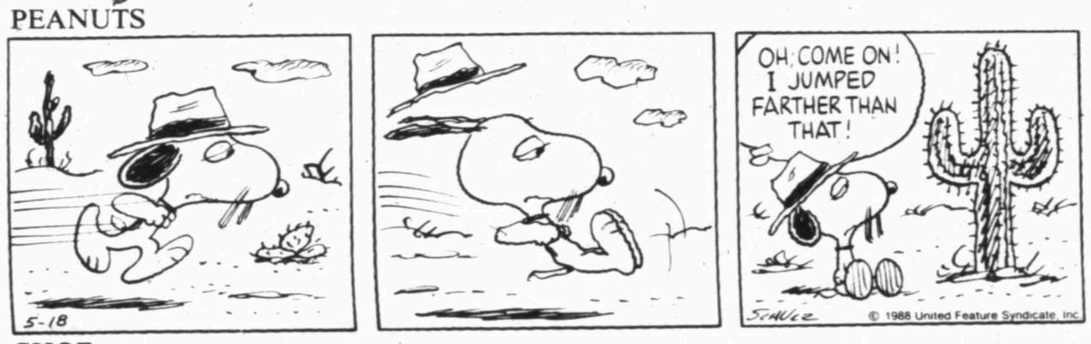

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An argument may be brewing. Tact and diplomacy are your strongest allies. Try to compromise. Bring accounts up to date. An older person lends a helping hand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Work is excellent therapy for chasing away depression. An expert can provide quick, accurate information on reason for present discomfort. Postpone signing important papers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep your schedule flexible. Behind-the-scenes activities affect your career and personal life. Get all agreements in writing. Have your thoughts well-organized before making a presentation. Be concise.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An unusual situation will bring favorable results. Give top priority to attracting new business. Improved communication does wonders for a romantic connection.

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	Pass	2 ◇
Pass	3 ◇	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	5 ♣	Pass	6 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♡

Treat this as either a single-dummy or double-dummy problem. The winning line is not easy to spot, no matter which way you go about it.

In view of South's balancing cue-bid, North's hand revalued to close to an opening bid. But rather than choose a suit himself, North correctly cue-bid in return. When South showed a strong hand by jumping to game, North judged his hand merited one move toward slam, and a second cue-bid was the obvious choice. Despite his void in that suit, South's hand was clearly worth slam opposite partner's implied heart support.

Since he was reluctant to lead away from an honor, West chose a trump as his opening lead. Even if the spade finesse were to succeed, declarer saw that he had a sure spade loser. To complicate matters, West's opening bid doomed the diamond finesse. Can you spot a way for South to prevent his downfall?

Win the trump in dummy, cash the ace of clubs, discarding a spade from hand, and lead the queen. If East covers the club you ruff, return to dummy with a trump and discard another spade on the jack of clubs. The ace-queen of diamonds will then endplay West.

When East doesn't cover, discard another spade. West wins the king and his only safe return is a club. Discard your queen of spades, cash the ace of spades, cross to a trump and ruff a spade. When both defenders follow, you can claim your contract. You get to the table with a trump for another spade ruff, and you still have a trump as an entry to the table to take a diamond discard on your established nine of spades. Well done!

Williams didn't bring home Oscar, but he has last laugh at Comedy Awards

Williams

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robin Williams dominated the American Comedy Awards ceremonies by winning four awards honoring him as a standup comic and as a movie star for his madcap disc-jockey role in "Good Morning, Vietnam."

Williams was honored as the funniest male performer of the year, the funniest male standup comic, the funniest male performer in a comedy special, Comedy Relief '87, and the funniest male performer in a movie, last year's hit comedy about a disc jockey trying to make sense or nonsense of the Vietnam War.

Ullman

British comedian Tracey Ullman scored as the funniest female performer of the year and her series, the "Tracey Ullman Show," garnered her the award for funniest female performer in a leading role in a TV series.

Garry Shandling, host of "It's Garry Shandling's Show," took the award for funniest male performer in a TV series.

The awards, staged by George Schlatter, were presented during a two-hour ABC special Tuesday at the Hollywood Palladium.

An annual Lifetime Creative Achievement Award was given to producer Blake Edwards, whose films include "The Pink Panther," "10," and "Victor Victoria." His latest movie, "Sunset," stars Bruce Willis and James Garner.

Other winners were:

Funniest female performer in a TV special: Roseanne Barr, "On Location: The Roseanne Barr Show."

Funniest actress in a motion picture: Bette Midler for "Outrageous Fortune."

Funniest supporting female, TV or movie: Olympia Dukakis for "Moonstruck."

Funniest supporting male, TV or movie: Albert Brooks for "Broadcast News."

FORT WORTH (AP) — One of actor Kirk Douglas' film-producing sons is among 12 defendants named in a $15 million federal lawsuit that claims he and another filmmaker defrauded investors by not producing three films and a TV documentary.

The lawsuit, filed Monday in U.S. District Judge David O. Belew Jr.'s court, names Joel Douglas as one of those who allegedly used fraud, negligence and deceptive trade practices in connection with the four Texas movie projects, a court clerk said.

The filmmakers allegedly bilked at least $1.5 million in investments since October 1985 from people interested in fronting money for the films, said Earl Rutledge, a Fort Worth attorney who is co-counsel for the plaintiffs.

Rutledge and co-counsel George Flannigan said the film producers, including R. Jon Emr, preyed on his clients' illusions of Hollywood movie industry glamor.

The civil suit also alleged violations of an organized crime statute, the Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act.

"The RICO count in the lawsuit alleges wire fraud, mail fraud and interstate or foreign commercial travel in furtherance of fraud," said Rutledge.

The films include "Jonah" and "Bohica," along with a 13-part television documentary, "A Chance To Live" and a planned full-length movie spinoff, "The Bobby Garwood Story," Rutledge said.

"Bohica" is based on former CIA agent Scott Barnes' best-selling autobiography. One of the TV docudrama episodes and the movie spinoff was to concern Marine Cpl. Bobby Garwood's ordeal after his capture in North Vietnam, said Rutledge.

Not all the plaintiffs invested in movies and not all the defendants named in the 49-page complaint claimed to be film producers, said Rutledge.

"Mr. Barnes signed a contract with these guys, selling the movie rights to his life story, but they did not pay as promised and they prevented him from having any other legitimate movie maker available, saying they own the movie rights to his story."

The suit seeks actual damages of $1.5 million and punitive damages of $14,190,000.

Besides Barnes, of Kernville, Calif., other plaintiffs are Aubrey Brothers of Colleyville, Texas; B.R. Franks of the Fort Worth area; CSI Video Center Inc., of Los Angeles; A&P Bros. Builders Inc. of Texas; and Yoko Wright of Los Angeles.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Cajun Chef John D. Folse headed for the Soviet Union to serve up spicy gumbo and catfish filets at the Moscow World Trade Center during the summit meeting between President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev.

For 10 days, the owner of Lafitte's Landing in Donaldsonville will operate Lafitte's Landing East, complete with Cajun band, on a 140-seat mezzanine as part of the summit talks that begin May 25.

Nearly 30,000 pounds of seafood, spices and other cooking supplies were loaded aboard planes for Moscow on Tuesday.

Folse, who also left Tuesday, was invited to make the trip after he introduced visiting Soviet scientists to Cajun food last August.

He will head a team of about 40 people, including four chefs who will assist him in the kitchen.

ATLANTA (AP) — An Atlanta Ballet dancer recuperating from an accidental stabbing during a performance of "Romeo and Juliet" said he still believes real swords and knives should be used in the production.

"You need it for effect," said Richard McLeod. "It makes you pay attention a lot more, because you realize there is that element of danger, and if you don't do what you're supposed to do, you could get hurt."

Ballet officials also defended the use of real weapons but said they would not try to repeat the stabbing stunt that left McLeod with a punctured lung during Friday night's performance.

A protective shield had been sewn into McLeod's costume so he could be dramatically stabbed in the back with a 3-inch serrated knife. But the shield had shifted out of place.

"Usually, (dancer George Prieto) stabs me and leaves the knife in there. But he said he felt something was wrong, and he pulled it back out — and I fell on the ground," said the 20-year-old McLeod, who is recovering at Georgia Baptist Hospital.

Atlanta Ballet President Kenneth T. Hertz said the clinking and scraping of real swords is a vital part of a "major league" production.

"There's nothing that can really duplicate that sound," he said. "The performers can really go at it a little bit more strongly, because it's equipment that was designed for that, not equipment that was designed to look like it was designed for that."

Mark McGwire personifies Oakland A's awesome power with blast to fence.

By TIM LIOTTA

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Oakland Athletics settled in around the batting cage for their pregame batting practice. It was an intimidating sight.

After Dave Parker, a very large baseball player, took his swings, two even larger Athletics — Mark McGwire and Jose Canseco — took turns bashing baseballs into the left-field bleachers. All this with Don Baylor, the little guy in this group, looking on.

These are the leaders of the Bash Club.

MCGWIRE AND Canseco have been taking turns depositing home runs at almost every stop around the American League this season. Each of them have hit 10 home runs this season, one behind league-leader Kent Hrbek of the Minnesota Twins.

"Jose and I don't compete against each other," McGwire said after the Athletics' 7-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Sunday.

"If he hits one out or I can, it helps the ballclub. There's no competition between us. We're good friends."

McGwire: "Jose and I don't compete against each other. If he hits one out or I can, it helps the ball club.... We're good friends."

These good friends have initiated the newest version of the high-five — an intimidating forearm bash after each home run trot.

MCGWIRE hit his 10th homer of the season Sunday, a towering drive to left-center field to lead off the fourth inning.

"He is so strong," said Orioles pitcher Mark Williamson, who surrendered the homer. "That ball went 500 feet in the air. I thought at first it was a high fly out. Then I looked at it and said, 'Jeez, that ball is out of here.'"

Canseco's 10th came four innings later off reliever Dave Schmidt, a two-run shot which landed 12 rows up in Memorial Stadium's left-field bleachers.

"He hit it nine miles, and it was a good pitch," said Schmidt.

The night before, McGwire and Parker each hit three-run homers in the Athletics' 8-0 victory.

"We have been hitting some home runs," said Oakland manager Tony LaRusso. "I expect us to hit it hard.

"It's nice having a deep lineup, but most of the games we've played over the first six weeks have been games with good hitting with some balls leaving the park."

THE ATHLETICS are 24-4 this season when they hit as many or more home runs than their opponent. The three homers Sunday gives them 40 for the season tied for the major league lead with the New York Mets.

The Athletics are 16-4 in road games and McGwire has led the way. Eight of his 10 home runs have come on the road, so have 20 of his 31 RBI.

Oakland's 26-10 record, the best in the majors, comes after the Athletics have won 20 of their last 24 games. They've also won 11 of their last 12 road games.

Over the past 24 games, Canseco has 34 hits in 96 at-bats with five homers and 23 RBI.

"I'm playing better than last year," Canseco said after Saturday night's victory. "My goal this year is 40 home runs and 40 stolen bases."

Last year, McGwire and Canseco combined for 80 home runs for the Athletics. McGwire set a major-league record for home runs by a rookie with 49. Canseco, in his second season, added 31.

Givens blanks Angels

From Staff Reports

JACKSON, Miss. — Lefthander Brian Givens threw a four-hit shutout to pull the Jackson Mets even in their five-game series with the Midland Angels. The Mets racked Midland starter Chris Collins for eight hits in the first five innings of the 6-0 Met win.

Craig Gerber had three of the four Midland hits, including a third-inning double. The Angels loaded the bases with one out in the ninth, but Givens finished the game by striking out pinch-hitter Jim McCollom and getting designated hitter Mike Knapp to ground out.

The Mets got the runs they needed in the third inning on a double by Alan Hayden, a walk to Jeff Gardner and consecutive RBI singles by Angelo Cuevas and Marcus Lawton.

Jackson added three runs in the fifth off Collins, 1-4, and an unearned run off reliever Kurt Walker in the eighth.

Shane Young, 0-2, starts on the mound for Midland tonight against Jackson's Mitch Cook, 1-2.

In other Texas League action, El Paso broke a first-place tie with San Antonio in the Western Division by beating Arkansas 7-6, while San Antonio 1st to Shreveport 4-3. Tulsa and Wichita split a doubleheader, Tulsa winning the first game 4-1 and Wichita taking the nightcap 8-4.

OC, Tyler stand in Chaps' way of JC tennis title

From Staff Reports

PASADENA, Texas— Midland College continued its quest for another national junior college women's tennis title Tuesday by advancing all of its players to today's quarterfinals.

The Chaparral women are tied for the lead along with two other Texas tennis powers, Odessa College and Tyler Junior College.

Midland has won four National Junior College Athletic Association women's titles—in 1975, 1976, 1981, and 1986—and were runners-up last year.

"This was a big day for us as four of our singles players and two of our doubles teams played their first matches after having byes in the first round. If you win following a bye, it counts two points, but you get nothing for that first round bye if you lose in the next round," MC coach Joe Williams explained.

The three team leaders pulled away from the rest of the field and compiled 19 points each after two days.

The tourney concludes Friday on the San Jacinto College courts.

None of their opponents could push the Chaparrals, who lost just three games in singles.

Rebeca Nevarez-Ayon, playing the No. 2 singles position for Midland, plays Wendy Frazier of Tyler in one crucial singles match today. Nevarez-Ayon is seeded sixth while Frazier is seeded second.

Only team to push the Chaparrals doubles tandems were Wertenberger and Wertenberger of Palm Beach, Florida, who took six games from Midland's No. 1 doubles team of Caroline Bhaguandas and Sara Hancock.

That duo might sound a bit familiar to MC tennis fans as former Chap star Jill Wertenberger is now teamed with her sister Kristen at Palm Beach. Jill played one year for Midland before returning to Florida.

Joining the women late today will be the Chaparral men's team, which came to Pasadena to continue their pre-tournament workouts under Williams' eye.

The men will play their national tournament at Tyler next week, but Williams wanted them to start getting used to the humidity. They'll also be practicing some with the women and giving them some spectator support during their matches.

Singles: Raquel Colvin (MC) d. Dondi Whitaker, Peace College, NC, 6-1 6-1; Rebecca Nevarez-Ayon (MC) d. Angie Giacomini, Lincolnland, Ill, 6-0 6-0; Caroline Bhaguandas (MC) d. Amy Whitmer, Barton County, Kansas, 6-0 6-1; Sara Hancock (MC) d. Lisa Kustas, Dean College, Mass., 6-0 6-0; Gabi Csorba (MC) d. Zolgrete Barnes, Hines College, Miss., 6-0 6-0; Jill Vallandigham (MC) d. Melinda Weiss, Lewis & Clark College, Ill., 6-0 6-0.

Doubles: Bhaguandas-Hancock (MC) d. Wertenberger-Wertenberger, Palm Beach College, Fla., 6-4 6-2; Colvin-Vallandigham (MC) d. Studinski-Anderson, Illinois Valley, Ill, 6-0 6-0; Csorba-Nevarez-Ayon (MC) d. Hodgens-Angello, 6-0 6-0. Points: Midland College 19; Odessa College 19; Tyler Junior College 19.

Krueger defies Indy odds

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Phil Krueger defied the odds by qualifying a 2-year-old car for the 72nd running of the Indianapolis 500. Now his fondest wish is a strong finish in the race.

Krueger, who hopes his performance in the May 29 race can generate enough financial backing to allow him to field a full-time Indy-car team, is pinning his hopes on a 1986 Cosworth-powered March. It is sitting on the outside of the fifth row in the tentative starting lineup.

The 36-year-old Krueger qualified for his second Indy Saturday.

Mavs, LA Lakers forge ahead, 3-2

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Seeking to be the first repeat NBA champion since 1969, the Los Angeles Lakers responded like, uh, champions against gritty Utah.

Michael Cooper's only basket of the game, a jump shot from near the top of the key with seven seconds remaining Tuesday night, gave the Lakers a 111-109 victory over the Jazz and a 3-2 lead in their NBA Western Conference playoff series. It was the first game-winning field goal of Cooper's 10-year career.

NBA

And it saved the Lakers from going back to Utah facing elimination against a team few observers expected to test the champs.

"They are one of the grittiest teams I have played against since I've been with the Lakers," Cooper said. "They just keep battling back."

But so do the Lakers.

"I don't think that we are going to run into another team that will play that well against us," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "It was a great effort on our part. We have a chance to close it on Thursday that we want to take advantage of."

In the other Western semifinal, Dallas won 110-106 at Denver for a 3-2 lead.

Tonight, both Eastern Conference series resume. Detroit, holding a 3-1 edge, can eliminate Chicago with a victory at home, while Boston entertains Atlanta, with the Celtics and Hawks tied 2-2.

Cooper, who scored only three points, hit his winning shot after Utah had taken a 109-108 lead on a baseline jumper by Thurl Bailey, who led the Jazz with 28 points.

Magic Johnson penetrated the Utah defense and fed the ball to Cooper, who was wide open outside.

Petchey selected

LONDON (AP) — Mark Petchey, a 17-year-old ranked among the world's top junior tennis players, was named Tuesday to the British team for next month's Davis Cup matches against Finland.

Petchey joins Jeremy Bates, Andrew Castle, Stephen Shaw and Chris Bailey for the European Zone semifinal series, which is scheduled for Bristol, England, June 9-11.

TED BATTLES

It's not just another scrimmage

Battles

Midland High holds its annual Bill Mims game Saturday evening at Memorial Stadium.

It's the spring fling in which the Bulldogs are divided somewhat equally for the game-condition scrimmage that concludes three weeks of spring training and provides a clue, hopefully, as to what lies ahead in the fall.

What may be elusive is the game's dedication.

A lot of folks have come and gone in Midland since that unfortunate day in September 1953. In fact, if all the people who were in Midland that fall were still here, it would be something like one of every three present-day Midlanders. And even that would be a ratio that would be a gross over-estimate of those still around.

So, if a lot of present-day Midlanders wonder "Why the Bill Mims game?", it's understandable.

The year before, Mims, a top student and three-sport star, had made all-district as an end. As a senior, he was being moved to the backfield.

In a preseason scrimmage, Bill was getting up after carrying the ball and was hit in the back by a tackler. It was something that was to change his entire life.

MAYBE TODAY'S technical advances in medicine might have made a difference, it was an injury from which Mims never fully recovered.

He has been paralyzed since 1953 and every year since then they've played the annual Bill Mims game to raise money to help pay for the constant care required.

Bill has never walked, but he has recovered to lead a productive life and maybe the fact that he is at the other end of the phone when some distraught individual is facing a crisis and needs support counseling tells, more than anything, what makes Bill a special person.

That's at night, mostly, when the rest of the world is asleep. He's also into real estate....

For the 53-year-old paralytic, it's the early morning that may be toughest. "It takes me a long time to get ready to face the day," he admits...and the assistance of his companion who helps him prepare to face it.

THE MIMS game is a nice gesture for a city that remembers after all these years, but more importantly, it's Midland's way of offering a helping hand.

"The freshmen play at 5:30 p.m. at Memorial Stadium," says Bill Worley, a former Bulldog and Texas Tech back who was almost too young to remember in 1953, "and the varsity will begin between 7 and 7:30 p.m. The Booster Club will be selling hamburgers.

"So many people don't really know who Bill Mims is," adds Worley, "and we'd like them to know that this isn't just another football scrimmage."

Despite an injury that changed a life, Mims still loves the game. He doesn't make as many games as he used, but if he's feeling up to it, he might even be there Saturday.

JIM MURRAY

This is one record Beamon out to lower

Murray

In the summer of 1920, Babe Ruth hit 54 home runs, or 30 more in a season than anyone else had ever hit before and 25 more than he had hit the season before, when he had been only a part-time hitter and full-time pitcher. This was widely perceived at the time as, maybe, the outstanding single sports feats of all time.

In 1918, Jack Dempsey knocked out two men, Fred Fulton, and Carl Morris, in a total elapsed time of 32 seconds, including the counts — Morris went 14 seconds, Fulton was tougher, he went 18 — and these were considered the standards for pugs to shoot at the rest of time.

ON OCT. 18 1924, Red Grange scored 4 touchdowns in 12 minutes the only times he touched the ball, running 95, 67, 56 and 44 yards for scores against Michigan. He later scored twice more, once each on a run and a pass reception, and that was the day he became the Galloping Ghost, the spectral runner against whom all subsequent ball carriers were to be measured.

On March 2, 1962, at Hershey, Pa., Wilt Chamberlain threw in 100 points in a pro basketball game, 22 more than his own previous high and 29 more than anyone else ever had.

On June 10, in 1977, in the second round of the Memphis Open golf tournament, Al Geiberger shot 11 birdies and an eagle and took only 23 putts to shoot an unheard-of 59, lowest round in pro tournament golf history.

Extraordinary achievements all. But, almost without question, the most incredible single athletic feat of all time took place on Oct. 18, 1968, at 3:46 p.m. in the gathering gloom of the Olympic long jump pit at the stadium in Mexico City.

IT WAS one of the glowing moments of sports history when everything comes together almost in a flash of insight, almost as if the athlete were standing outside of himself watching, too.

Bob Beamon was in the air just shorter than the Wright Brothers. No one had ever been aloft that high or that long over a long jump pit before — or since. It wasn't a jump, it was an orbital flight.

Beamon didn't break the record, he disintegrated it. It was not only how far he had jumped, it was how high. Some thought he might have broken the high jump and long jump records at the same time.

"I thought he never would come down," I remember runner-up Ralph Boston marveling.

RUMOR HAD it Beamon came up on the traffic controllers' screens at the airport. They thought he was the noon flight from Guadalajara. Lindbergh didn't get that high off the deck.

No one had ever jumped 28 feet before. The world record was 27 feet 4 3/4 inches and the machine designed to measure the long jump at the Mexico City Olympics that year had a nervous breakdown. The optical device could not digest the information being fed back to it.

It could not, in effect, believe its eyes. It had been constructed to measure jumps of 28 feet. Everyone thought that would be enough to measure any jump on the planet Earth by any creature that didn't have horns or spots.

Bob Beamon had broken the long jump record by nearly 2 feet —by 20 inches to be exact. He had broken the Olympic long jump record by almost 3 feet — 31 inches to be exact.

"He has broken the Olympic record by a half century," the British long jumper, Lynn Davies, said later. "He has destroyed the event."

IT WAS AN enormous mark. It was like a man hitting 80 home runs, batting .502, shooting 50, winning Wimbledon love-love-love. It is an Olympic record not likely to be broken in our lifetimes.

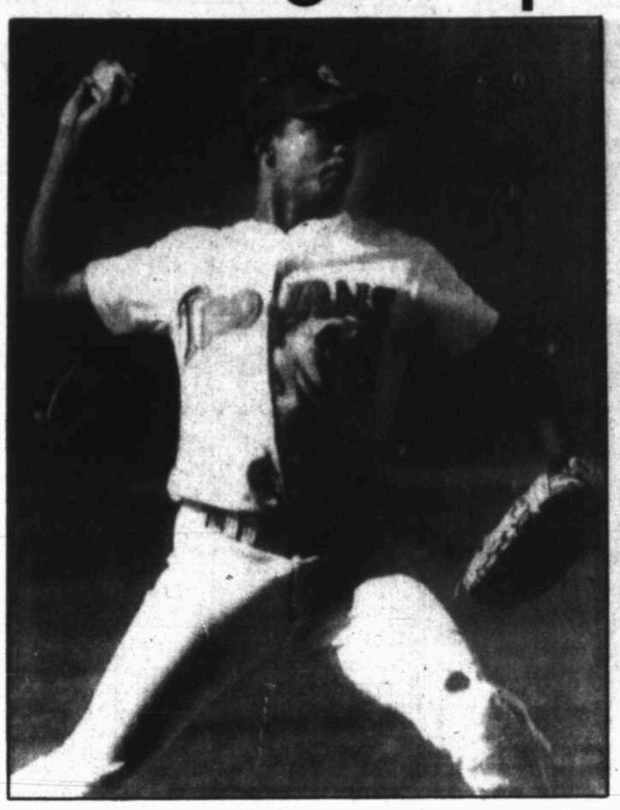

It has had the extraordinary effect of making Bob Beamon a bigger celebrity as his achievement fades into antiquity. It is usual, 20 years after the event, for a public to have difficulty remembering either one.

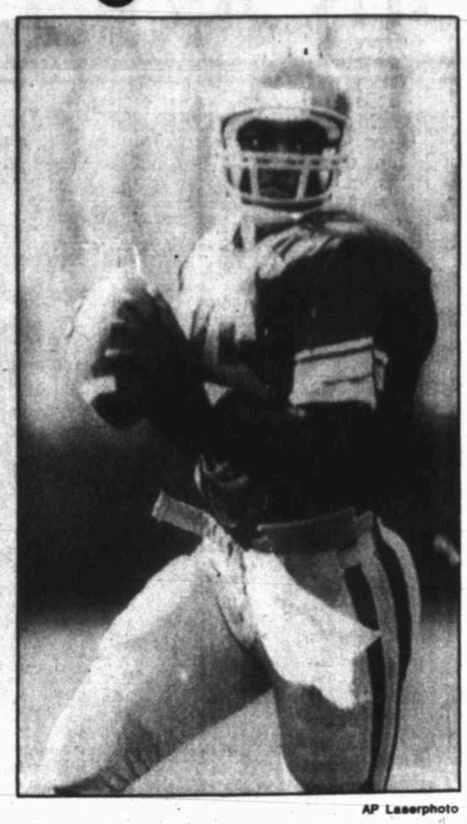

But in the 20 years since the Jump, Beamon has seen the Olympic record, even with the great Carl Lewis on the runways, barely creep to 28 feet — 28-0 1/4. To be sure, word

USC's Peete in grid spotlight

By BERNIE WILSON

AP Laserphoto

Rodney Peete shows both sides of his split per sonality, left, as a third baseman and, right, as a quarterback.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — No matter how hard he concentrates on baseball, Rodney Peete can't escape the football spotlight.

It's the last day of final exams at Southern Cal and Peete, wearing an NCAA umpire's hat, is talking about baseball.

Former Trojans tailback Anthony Davis walks by, and the two exchange greetings. Then Davis, pausing in front of the four Heisman trophies in the Heritage Hall lobby, says, "Next time, you've got to get one of those."

Peete is USC's record-setting quarterback, and next fall as a senior he'll face high expectations. The Heisman hype started in February when he and UCLA quarterback Troy Aikman were photographed together.

But it's spring, and Peete is enjoying his best baseball season at USC. The third baseman is batting .339 and has extended his hitting streak to 15 games, with four remaining. He's also hit in all 22 Pac-10 Conference Southern Division games in which he's played, and has eight homers and 32 runs batted in.

"I'VE enjoyed both those games, football and baseball, since I was 8 years old, and I wasn't going to stop once I got to college," Peete said. "They're still very fun to me and I have a great time playing them both.

"They have the same type of thrills in both of them. When you hit a home run the feeling is pretty much the same as when you throw a touchdown pass."

Peete was drafted out of high school by the Toronto Blue Jays.

"I told them straight out that I wanted to go to college. Under no circumstances would I sign a professional contract at that time. I wanted to get an education and I wasn't ready to give up football," he said, then added he's glad he won't have to decide on a professional career until next year.

"It's something that I'm not ready to do right now. I'm just having fun and I just guess I have to wait to see what kind of season I'll have in football next year, and what kind of season I'll have in baseball, and just go from there.

"I don't think I'm going to be a guy who's going to be following in Bo Jackson's footsteps and try to do both," the 6-foot-2, 190-pounder said. "But even so, I think I'm still going to have some feelings of what it would be like to play the other sport."

PEETE'S father, Willie, is an assistant coach with the Green Bay Packers. Golf pro Calvin Peete is his second cousin.

Peete says his biggest challenge each season is catching up with his baseball teammates, who play a fall schedule. Wide receivers John Jackson and Randy Tanner also play baseball for USC.

But at least on the diamond Peete's free from the intense scrutiny he faces in football, particularly since the focus of USC's offense has shifted from tailback to Peete's passing.

"It's a nice change from football to baseball," he said. "Football is very intense; you have guys out there hitting you all the time every day, and practices are very, very tough and you're always moving.

"... But then you come out on the baseball field and there's a lot of standing around and it's kind of relaxing. There's a lot of B.S. time out there. It's a nice change to be in that relaxed type atmosphere."

Peete was moved from shortstop to third base this season and is part of a new infield that includes freshmen at first and second and a junior college transfer at shortstop.

"It's a tough position to get used to," Peete said. "You've got to get used to getting the ball in a different way. Right now I'm feeling very comfortable at third and I'm playing very well."

IN HIS first at-bat this year, he suffered a broken hand when he was hit by a pitch while bunting, and missed the next six weeks. In the game he returned, he homered twice against Arizona.

Peete missed all of the 1986 season after tearing his Achilles tendon in the 1985 Aloha Bowl against Alabama. Last spring he pulled a hamstring in the first month of the season, but finished hitting .304.

"I don't know what it is. I get a lot of teasing from players who say 'Now you come out for the real sport and get hurt.' I don't know why it happens in baseball," Peete said.

Expos, government agree

TORONTO (AP) — The Montreal Expos have reached agreement on a four-year lease with the Quebec government to continue using Olympic Stadium, club president Claude Brochu says.

The Expos, unhappy with the terms of the previous lease which had expired, have been playing this season without an agreement.

"We're more pleased now," Brochu told the Toronto Globe and Mail on Monday. "It's not everything we wanted, but it's one of those things where we came down the middle."

Under the previous lease, the Quebec government through the Olympic Installations Board controlled revenues from parking, concession sales and advertising — worth about $5 million, the newspaper estimated.

Brochu said the new arrangement gives concession and restaurant revenues to the Expos. The government retains revenues from parking and the sky boxes. Advertising revenue is to be split. The Expos also will also operate concessions for non-baseball events, but 22.5 percent of revenues goes to the government.

NBA Today

By The Associated Press
SCOREBOARD

Chicago at Detroit (7 p.m.). The Bulls, who won Game 2 at The Silverdome, will have to win there again to stave off elimination. Michael Jordan, who scored a record 45.2 points per game in the first round against Cleveland, has managed "only" 28 per game in four contests against Detroit.

The Pistons, winners 38 times in 46 home games so far this season, have forged their 3-1 lead with a tenacious defense that has allowed the Jordan-dominated Bulls less than 86 points per game. In Detroit's two victories at Chicago Stadium, the Pistons held Chicago to 79 and 77 points.

An interesting sideshow in Game 5 will be the play of Detroit forward Rick Mahorn, a .574 shooter during the regular season who was just 1-for-17 (.059) from the field in Games 1-4.

PASSING FANCY

NBA assist champion John Stockton of Utah tied the NBA playoff mark of 24 assists in the Jazz' 11?-109 loss to the Lakers on Tuesday night. Stockton, who also had 23 points and five steals, equaled the record established by Los Angeles' Magic Johnson on May 15, 1984 against Phoenix.

FOUL SHOOTING

The Nuggets, who led the NBA in free throw shooting this season, missed seven straight times from the line in the final seven minutes of their 110-106 Game 5 loss to Dallas on Tuesday night.

GOLDEN NUGGET

Denver center Danny Schayes continued his superb postseason play with perhaps the best performance of his career Tuesday night, scoring 33 points points and grabbing 13 rebounds in 34 minutes of the Nuggets' loss to Dallas. Schayes, 11-for-16 from the field on Tuesday, has made 50 of 76 field goal tries in the postseason for an NBA-best .658 percentage.

SUPER SUBS

Roy Tarpley of Dallas also maintained his postseason excellence, scoring 21 points and pulling down 16 rebounds in a reserve role on Tuesday as the Mavericks beat Denver 110-106. Tarpley, 10-for-16 on Tuesday, has averaged 19.4 points on 58.2 percent shooting and grabbed more than 12 boards per game in the playoffs.

SPEAKING

"The assist record doesn't mean anything when you don't win. I wasn't even tired and I wasn't aware I didn't come out of the game. This is no time to be tired. Whether we win or lose, this has been the most fun experience for me since I've been playing basketball." — Utah guard John Stockton, one of three Jazz to play all 48 minutes on Tuesday night, on tying the playoff assist mark with 24 in a losing effort.

CORPORATE PREP SPONSORS? — The University Athletic League is considering corporate sponsorship of its high school athletic and academic competitions, UIL director Bailey Marshall says. Marshall told the Associated Press Sports Editors that revenue would go to endow college academic scholarships, pay for schools' district championship trophies and provide a fund for advertising UIL activities. "Corporate sponsorship in high school athletics across the country is growing," Marshall said. "I would say 50 percent or more of the state athletic associations across the country are now involved. California recently signed a $1 million contract with a sponsor."

SETTLEMENT SOON— A settlement in the civil case against sports agent Norby Walters for his dealings with former University of Alabama basketballer Derrick McKey should be completed this week, said the college's attorney...

EXPOS CUT COSTS— Claude Brochu, Montreal Expos president, said the team has cut the cost of playing at Olympic Stadium by about $1 million a year. Brochu said the team and the Quebec government, which owns the stadium, have agreed in principle on a new lease, which still leaves the Expos paying more than most other major league baseball teams.

PINNED— British professional wrestling is being thrown out of the TV ring in Britain. ITV, Britain's independent television network, said it would drop Big Daddy, Giant Haystacks and the rest of the wrestling fraternity by the end of the year. The network is trying to polish its image, while cutting an expensive show that had lost more than half its audience in the last three years.

1912 — Detroit players struck in protest over Ty Cobb's suspension. To avoid a forfeit and fine, Manager Hugh Jennings recruited college players and others who played and lost to the A's 24-2. Joe Travers gave up all 24 runs.

1929 — The Brooklyn Dodgers outslugged the Philadelphia Phillies for a 20-16 victory in a doubleheader opener. Babe Herman and Johnny Frederick each had five hits for Brooklyn. Frederick scored five times to give him a major-league record of eight runs in two games.

1957 — Dick Williams of the Orioles hit a ninth-inning, game-tying solo home run against Chicago's Paul LaPlume seconds before 10:20 p.m. — a time set as a curfew so that the White Sox could catch a train out of Baltimore.

1962 — Bob Allison and Harmon Killebrew each hit a grand slam in the first inning to propel the Minnesota Twins to a 14-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

1968 — Frank Howard hit his 10th home run in a six-game span to power the Washington Senators to an 8-4 victory over Detroit at Tiger Stadium.

1969 — Cesar Tovar and Rod Carew ran wild on the basepaths in the second inning against the Tigers, both stealing home for the Twins. Tovar singled and Carew walked; they pulled a double steal. Tovar then stole home and on the next pitch and Carew pilfered third. He then made a clean theft of home to tie the score 2-2. Lolich and Freehan were the embarrassed battery for the Tigers, who still won 8-2.

NHL Today

SCOREBOARD

Boston at Edmonton (8:05 p.m., ESPN). Game 1 of the Stanley Cup final. Grant Fuhr will be in goal for the Oilers, Reggie Lemelin starts for the Bruins.

STATS

Ken Linseman leads Boston in playoff scoring with nine goals and 12 assists for 21 points. ... Reggie Lemelin has started 16 of the Bruins' 18 playoff games and posted a 2.45 goals against average. ... Edmonton enters the Stanley Cup final 8-0 at home in the playoffs.

STREAKS

The Bruins scored six straight goals when they beat the Oilers 7-4 in Edmonton on Feb. 12. The game was marred by five separate fights.

SLAPSHOTS

Montreal has given veteran left wing Bob Gainey permission to talk with the Minnesota North Stars, who are interested in his services for the vacant post of general manager.

SHOTS ON GOAL

Boston has the best defensive record in the playoffs while Edmonton is tops on offense.

SWITCHING SWEATERS

In 1984, when Edmonton won its first Stanley Cup, Andy Moog played the final two games and was in goal when Ken Linseman scored the game-winning goal in the Oilers' 5-2 victory that gave them the Cup, four games to one over the New York Islanders. Moog and Linseman are now with the Boston Bruins.

SO LONG

Jean Perron resigned as coach of the Montreal Canadiens Monday for personal reasons. Perron coached the Canadiens for three seasons, including the Stanley Cup championship in his first year.

SPEAKING

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime thing, and we're going to be ready. It's nine years for me on this team, and this is my first shot at the Cup, and I'm going to give it my all." — Boston defenseman Ray Bourque.

Rangers go 14 to nip Jays, 7-6

TORONTO (AP) — Oddibe McDowell drew a bases-loaded walk in the 14th inning to force in the go-ahead run, then stopped halfway up the first-base line, unsure whether the last pitch had actually been ball four.

That's the kind of game it was.

It took the Texas Rangers five hours and 20 minutes — longest game in Toronto history — to beat the Blue Jays 7-6 Tuesday night. After McDowell's walk, Scott Fletcher hit a sacrifice fly off Tom Henke, Toronto's seventh pitcher, for what proved to be the decisive run.

The Blue Jays, who scored twice in the ninth to send the game into extra innings and tied it again in the 13th, scored a run in the bottom of the 14th on doubles by Tony Fernandez and Rance Mulliniks, but George Bell grounded out off winner Dale Mohorcic, 2-0, to end the game.

"I can decide what I want to do in that situation," Johnson said. "I saw a little opening and went toward the middle for my hook. They all collapsed on me and Cooper was wide open, so I went to him."

And Cooper put it home.

Mavericks 110, Nuggets 106

Undermanned Denver couldn't overcome the absence of star guard Lafayette Lever and forward Jay Vincent, the second and third-leading playoff scorers for the Nuggets. They also couldn't handle Mark Aguirre and Rolando Blackman.

Aguirre had 25 points, including a clinching 3-pointer with 19 seconds to go. Blackman scored 18 of his 24 points in the second half.

"This was an extremely big win for us," Aguirre said. "We can go back home and end it now, but we can't think it's over yet."

The Nuggets, who shot 80.4 percent from the line to lead the NBA this season and came into Tuesday night's game hitting 84.4 percent in the playoffs, missed seven straight free throws in the final seven minutes.

"It's a disappointing loss, but we played hard," Nuggets coach Doug Moe said.

Tigers 8, Brewers 4

Paul Gibson pitched seven solid innings as the Tigers snapped a three-game losing streak.

Gibson spent 10 years in the minor leagues before getting his first shot in the majors this year. And he didn't find out that he was going to get his first start until 10 minutes before game time Tuesday night.

"I threw strikes. The biggest fear when you go out there, especially when you haven't started a game in the big leagues before, is walking four or five guys in a row," said Gibson, whose decade in the minors included stops in Shelby, Tampa, Cedar Rapids, Lakeland, Birmingham, Orlando, Glens Falls, Nashville and Toledo; some of them twice.

"Once I established that I was going to throw strikes, especially with my off-speed pitches, I felt comfortable. I had a lot of fun out there."

Athletics 12, Red Sox 7

Carney Lansford and Walt Weiss had three hits apiece and Mark McGwire hit his 11th homer as Oakland won for the 22nd time in its last 26 games and raised its road record to 18-4.

Mariners 6, Yankees 2

Billy Swift pitched a career best three-hitter and Ken Phelps and Scott Bradley homered. The Yankees committed three throwing errors and the Mariners scored four unearned runs off previously unbeaten Richard Dotson.

Indians 6, White Sox 2

Rich Yett and Doug Jones combined on a six-hitter and Andy Allanson hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning as Cleveland won for the sixth time in the last seven games.

The Indians scored a first-inning run on Joe Carter's RBI double and made it 3-0 in the third on singles by Julio Franco, Willie Upshaw and Pat Tabler plus Mel Hall's sacrifice fly.

Twins 6, Royals 5

Astro three-hitter beats Pirates, 3-2

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros outfielder Kevin Bass says he and the other everyday players appreciate the work being done by the Houston pitching staff and take it for granted that that the starting pitcher will give them a quality game.

This season the Astros have had quality starts from their starting rotation in 31 of their 36 games, like the combined three-hitter that starter Mike Scott, 5-0, won against the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-2, Tuesday night.

It is considered a quality start when a pitcher goes six or more innings and allows three or fewer earned runs.

Bass, whose first inning double off Pirate loser John Smiley, 3-3, began the Astros offense, really appreciated the work of the Houston hurlers.

"As a position player, we expect it," Bass said. "When Scott, Nolan (Ryan), (Jim) Deshaies or (Bob) Knepper are out there, we expect them to go six or seven innings and know it is going to be close enough that we only have to score a few runs to win."

Houston manager Hal Lanier knows that pitching is Houston's strength, but even he is amazed.

"It's hard to imagine 31 of 36 quality starts," Lanier said. "Our strong point coming out of spring training we knew would be starting pitching."

Scott, who is off to his best start ever, had 10 strikeouts in seven innings to take the National Legaue lead with 73.

He had a no-hitter going through five innings before Pittsburgh shortstop Rafael Belliar's infield single opened the sixth inning.

Pittsburgh has lost four straight games, and Lavalliere feels Houston isn't the place to recover. "It's a combination of their quality pitching and our poor hitting," Lavalliere said. "That's a bad combo to come in here with."

Braves 3, Reds 2

Dale Murphy, Andres Thomas and Gary Roenicke hit home runs as Atlanta won in Cincinnati. Rick Mahler, 3-4, improved his career record against the Reds to 12-2. The Braves ended Cincinnati's longest winning streak of the season at three games.

Expos 6, Dodgers 5

Rookie Johnny Paredes drove in three runs with a pair of bases-loaded, two-out singles as Montreal ended a four-game losing streak by winning in Los Angeles.

Phillies 8, Giants 1

Von Hayes got three of Philadelphia's 15 hits and Kevin Gross stopped San Francisco on a six-hitter. All of the Phillies' starters had at least one hit and Gross got two. Mike Schmidt extended his streak to five straight hits after ending an 0-for-30 slump Monday night. Gross, 4-1, pitched his third complete game.

Cardinals 3, Cubs 0

St. Louis' Luis Alicea hit a bad-hop, two-run single with two outs in the 11th inning that broke up a pitcher's duel at Wrigley Field. Loser Greg Maddux, 6-3, shut out the Cardinals on two hits until the 11th, when two-out singles by Tom Brunansky, Bob Horner and Tony Pena loaded the bases. Alicea's single bounced over the head of second baseman Ryne Sandberg, and Jose Oquendo followed with an RBI single.

MURRAY

coming out of Russia is that the Soviets' Robert Emmiyan has posted a 29-foot jump but the details are sketchy.

Few of us are ever privileged to experience the perfect moment in life. It may come to athletes, it may come to actors or actresses, opera tenors. Maybe even a poet can find words that he has no idea where they're coming from.

BUT BOB Beamon has worn his laurel gracefully. He's not sitting around bars, inviting strangers to buy drinks for "the world's greatest jumper ever" or showing his gold medal at cocktail parties, Beamon is still trying for that perfect jump, he's attacking the boards.

He is in town to promote the 1988 Pepsi Invitational meet at UCLA June 5, where the pharmaceutical company he works for, Glaxo, Inc., is sponsoring both the men's and women's 100-meter dash.

His long jump may never come down in our time but the jumper came down a long time ago. Beamon became a national spokesman for the treatment of high blood pressure when he found that he, the super athlete of all time in his event, had, of all things, high blood pressure.

It is, Beamon points out, a disease without symptoms. Usually, the first indication you get of it is death. Almost 50 percent of the people who have high blood pressure do not know it — until they die from it. It makes its presence known mainly at autopsies.

It is estimated that 6,315,000 blacks in the United States suffer from it, and that its rate of occurrence in blacks is more than three times than in whites.

This is one record Beamon would rather lower than increase. Lobbying for something as worthwhile as this and bringing the message of his company's medication is a proper application of athletic fame and if the Jump helps him spread it, Beamon is grateful.

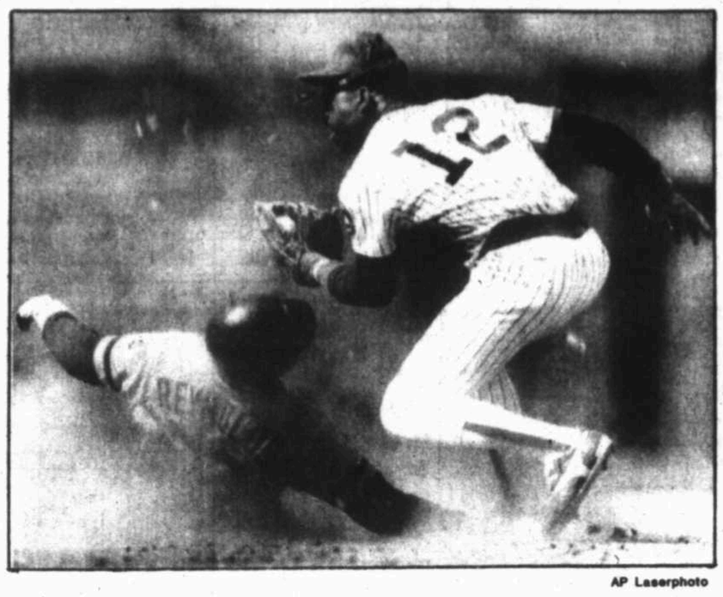

What of the record? Can it be broken at Seoul? Beamon smiles. "Records are made to be broken."

Maybe so. But it won't be broken by any 2 1/2 feet.

Waiting for Dunston: the time may be now

By JOE MOOSHIL

AP Laserphoto

Former Midland Cub Shawon Dunston, 12, may be on the verge of fulfilling his potential with the Chciago Cubs.

CHICAGO (AP) — Will this be the year that Chicago Cubs shortstop Shawon Dunston fulfills his potential and great expectations?

Dunston thinks so.

Cub manager Don Zimmer hopes so.

And some of the rival managers in the National League are beginning to show respect for Dunston, the No. 1 pick in the June 1982 draft and the highest amateur pick in New York City history.

"Yes, I'd say this is his hump year, I certainly hope so," Zimmer said. "It's not a matter of life or death, but this is the year he should become a good player. He's been around several years and he has gotten better."

Dunston has had a spotty career since coming up to the Cubs three years ago.

In 1986 he hit 17 home runs and drove in 68 runs, the most by a Cub shortstop since Ernie Banks. Last year he got off to a horrendous start and had one RBI during the first month. When he finally got rolling, a broken finger sidelined him for two months.

This year Dunston is off to a solid start. In the first month of the season he had four home runs with 17 RBIs and kept his average around .270.

"As you get older, you mature and see things differently," said Dunston, 25. "I got married last November and I'm very happy.

"My wife is pregnant and that means more responsibility. I'm not playing for myself anymore, I'm playing for the family," he said.

Dunston seems to have rid himself of the pressure that came from being a No. 1 pick from New York. Added pressures came because others selected in that draft after Dunston included the likes of star pitcher Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets and relief ace Todd Worrell of the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I can't help what other people say or expect," said Dunston. "The pressure came when I came to the big leagues. Everybody compared me to Dwight Gooden and to Wally Joyner (California Angels).

"I was only 22 and I had the physical talent, but it's not all physical. It's mental, too," said Dunston. "Now I have no goals, I just want to play everyday and do my best."

Zimmer was a coach with the Cubs when Dunston first came up and felt Dunston was getting too much imput from everybody in the organization. When he took over as manager this spring, Zimmer made a decision.

"The first thing I did in spring training was to tell the other coaches I didn't want them to say anything to Shawon," said Zimmer. "I decided I was going to handle him.

"I wanted him to relax and play the game and not be scared to death to make a mistake. He had too much feedback with four or five people telling him what to do and how to do it. Too much instruction can kill progress."

Zimmer is enjoying the fruits of his efforts.

"When he first came up he was like a young colt with wobbly legs," said Zimmer. "But he has matured and he has improved.

"I stay on him and keep talking to him but never too much, just enough," said Zimmer.

Dunston's biggest improvement is making the double play across his body, Zimmer said. The manager is still looking for consistency in Dunston's hitting, but Zimmer says "he's showing more discipline up at the plate."

Dunston doesn't think he's the same player who was criticized for not being able to harness his talents and emotions.

"I don't think I'm out of control anymore," he said, "but I care when I strike out. I get mad when we lose and I'm happy when we win. I still show emotion, I just have to keep it at a happy medium.

"Somebody once told me that if I get to bat 600 times and get 200 hits, I'm going to make out 400 times. But I'd still hit .333 and you can't be mad at that," he said. But I do want respect."

Dunston is getting that, too. In a recent game against San Francisco, Manager Roger Craig switched pitchers in order to force Zimmer to bat Leon Durham for Dunston in a one-run game.

STATE IN BRIEF

Amnesty program draws criticism

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The director of the El Paso Legalization Center disputed claims that the amnesty program for special agricultural workers isn't being conducted properly.

Criticism of the program came Tuesday from a farm workers union leader as about a dozen union members demonstrated at the center.

"We feel they aren't doing what Congress intended," Carlos Marentes, head of the Union of Border Agricultural Workers, said. "It looks like they're trying to discourage applicants from applying."

Marentes said the Immigration and Naturalization Service isn't accepting enough amnesty applications a day, that workers arbitrarily reject applications and that the INS expects undocumented workers to risk deportation while compiling documentation needed to earn immigration amnesty.

None of the accusations are true, countered Pete Reyes, director of the El Paso Legalization Center.

Rare mammoth fossil unearthed

EASTER, Texas (AP) — The fossil of a huge woolly mammoth's head and tusks unearthed in West Texas this week is on the way to a museum, officials said.

The prehistoric mastodon, estimated to be between 11,500 and 65,000 years old, is believed to be a female elephant felled by disease or old age along Frio Draw in northeastern Castro County.

A farmer and an archaeologist stumbled on the find in April. But it took until Monday to free the fossil from the ground.

"We had been working on the chapel at the old Italian P.O.W. camp near here," said Lon Woodburn, the farmer. "I brought Eddie (Guffee, an archaeologist,) up here to take a look where they had found some teeth in March, 1987."

Stanley Wilcox of Hereford, an employee of West Texas Rural Telephone Co., had spotted some teeth last year when he was repairing a damaged underground cable along the dirt road.

Dallas postal workers arrested

DALLAS (AP) — Ten postal employees were arrested on charges of trafficking cocaine and marijuana at the Dallas Main Post Office and two more were being sought, authorities said.

U.S. Postal inspectors, who conducted a nine-month undercover investigation, arrested the 10 employees Tuesday as the workers reported to their jobs on the evening shift at the postal center.

Notice of Full Facility Closure

Pursuant to 31 Texas Administrative Code (TAC) Section 33.118(b), the Executive Director of the Texas Water Commission hereby gives notice of the closure plan received on January 23, 1986 for the hazardous waste underground storage tanks (two wastewater sumps) operated by Champion Chemicals, Inc. The unit is located on Proctor Road adjacent to U.S. Highway 80, Odessa, Texas. Pursuant to the closure plan submitted and approved by the Executive Director, Champion Chemicals, Inc. intends to close the underground storage tanks (two wastewater sumps and associated equipment) by removal of all wastes and waste residues.

The purpose of this notice is to give members of the public the opportunity to submit written comments on the closure plan and request modification of the plan. Any comments must be submitted within 30 days of the date of publication of this notice to Mr. Samuel B. Pole, Chief Hazardous and Solid Waste Enforcement Section, Hazardous and Solid Waste Division, Texas Water Commission, P.O. Box 13087, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711-3087. Pursuant to 31 TAC Section 335.118(b), the Executive Director is required to approve, modify, of disapprove the plan within 90 days of receipt. Copies of the closure plan are open for public inspection at the Central Office of the Texas Water Commission, 1700 North Congress Avenue, Austin, Texas and at the Commission's District 10 Office, 2626 Parkway, Bldg. B., Suite 129, Odessa, Texas.

In addition, pursuant to 31 TAC Section 335.118(b), the Executive Director may, in response to a request or at his own discretion, hold a public hearing on the closure plan whenever such a hearing might clarify one or more issues concerning the plan. Any request for a public hearing should be submitted within 30 days of the date of publication of this notice to Samuel B. Pole, Chief, Hazardous and Solid Waste Enforcement Section, Texas Water Commission, P.O. Vox 13087, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711-3087, telephone 512/463-8425.

Issued in Austin, Texas on May 12, 1988.

B A bonus will be paid to broker by VA at closing.

The offer which best serves the interest of VA will be processed for acceptance. The name of the successful offeror and sales broker will appear in subsequent publications. VA will accept cash offers up to 10 percent below the advertised term sales price. VA also will pay reasonable loan discount points and buyers' closing costs on cash offers. However, the combined loan discount points and buyers' closing costs may not exceed 10 percent of the advertised term sales price. Offers must be submitted at term listed price when buyers request a new GI loan with $1.00 move-in. Interest rate of available financing is 10 percent (APR 10.1 percent). VA has properties for sale statewide. If you desire to purchase properties in other areas, please contact any sales broker located in the area in which you are interested.

FORFEITURE OF EARNEST MONEY DEPOSIT

Prior to signing the offer, broker must deposit in broker's trust account at least $500 earnest money. Once a purchase offer has been accepted for processing by VA and is subsequently cancelled at the request of the purchaser, the Earnest Money Deposit WILL NOT be refunded and the broker will be required to forward the Earnest Money to the VA as liquidation expenses. There will be no exception to this policy. Therefore, the VA suggests that all brokers interview their buyers to assure they want the property, prior to submission of an offer to purchase.
VA pays 5% sales commission. Offers are subject to the provisions of VA Form 26-6705, Credit Statement of Prospective Purchaser and Contract of Sale, on which all offers must be submitted. VA Form 26-6705 must be submitted in duplicate to:
