U.S. Senate in session despite bomb damage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI said today a bomb that did extensive damage just outside the Senate chamber, blasting a gaping hole in a wall and severely damaging congressional cloakrooms, was a "high explosive device with a delayed timing."

Federal law enforcement officials who requested anonymity said that, pending laboratory tests, they estimated the blast may have had a force equivalent to two sticks of dynamite.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., told the Senate, which convened at 9 a.m. EST despite the rubble outside its chamber doors, that the explosion would have caused "grave injury...and, perhaps, loss of life among senators and staff" had the Senate been in session when the bomb went off approximately 10 hours earlier.

"What happened last evening will not deter us from transacting the nation's business," Baker told colleagues.

But he did say that he and Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, whose office doors were blown down in the blast, would meet later today to consider tighter security precautions.

Baker later told reporters that video tapes from a hallway television monitoring system are being reviewed "to see when the device was planted and perhaps who was involved."

He added, however, that he was not absolutely certain the area of the blast was covered by the cameras.

Theodore M. Gardner, the special agent in charge of the Washington FBI field office, told a news conference that analysts had not yet determined whether the bomb was dynamite.

He spoke as FBI investigators poked through debris in a marble hallway outside the Senate chamber this morning, searching for the remnants of the bomb that exploded in the heart of the Capitol.

He said the FBI and local police agencies are conducting a joint investigation "to determine who was responsible." He said that the group claiming credit — the Armed Resistance Unit — was the same group that had claimed responsibility for a recent blast at Fort McNair in the District of Columbia.

He said the FBI knew nothing else about the group.

Although last night's bomb produced no structural damage to the Capitol, it apparently damaged or destroyed a number of priceless paintings and damaged a grandfather clock built in 1815, Senate officials said.

An aide to the Democratic leadership said damage may total $1 million.

Senate Sergeant at Arms Larry Smith said a police officer stationed near the main doors to the Senate chamber 30 feet away barely escaped injury in the explosion.

"It was a mess," he added. "It was depressing. The only good thing is that no one was hurt."

The main doors leading into the chamber were splintered and the nearby Republican cloakroom, a meeting room just off the chamber, received considerable damage, Smith said.

Later, at a news conference, Smith said that congressional leaders had earlier scheduled a meeting for later today to discuss tightening security. "Unfortunately, it's one day too late," Smith said.

Firefighter injured at Briercroft Savings

An electrical fire at an eastside downtown building Monday night left a fireman injured and caused a power outage, according to Midland Fire Department reports.

Jack P. "Scooter" Magee, 23, suffered a flash burn to his eyes during the electrical fire, which broke out about 9:30 p.m. at Briercroft Savings, 200 N. Loraine.

According to a hospital spokesman, the two-year veteran of the Midland Fire Department was treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital.

The fire, extinguished with chemical powder, caused heavy damage to Briercroft's insulation and wiring.

According to Sara St. Clair, public relations specialist for Texas Electric Service Company, electrical power was interrupted intermittently at several downtown buildings for 20 minutes. These buildings were the Briercroft, Marathon Oil, Midland Tower, Wall Tower East and South, Hilton Hotel, Oil & Gas Building, Midland Center, City Hall, Heritage Center and Atrium Center.

But the power was not restored to Briercroft until 12:35 a.m. today, according to Ms. St. Clair.

"Also, the traffic signals on each corner of Texas, Illinois, Loraine and Main were out of service," she said. "And the buildings on the west side between Texas and Illinois were without electrical service."

Traffic conditions soured as lemons stray onto highway

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — There were more lemons on the road than in a dozen used car lots, but no one was driving them.

A truck pulling two trailers full of lemons overturned about 1 p.m. Monday just east of the Interstate 10 overpass, clogging traffic for nearly three hours, said Officer Larry Murphy.

"It was solid lemons," Murphy said as workers shoveled thousands of whole and squashed lemons into garbage trucks.

No one was injured, and some bystanders used boxes to carry off free fruit, he said. Juice poured into gutters.

The truck, driven by Donald Sherman, 26, was traveling north on the interstate exit ramp and overturned while turning right, Murphy said.

Sherman, an employee of the Tempe-based Central Citrus Co., was cited for running a red light, speeding and having faulty brakes, Murphy said.

Israel, Syria watch each other stage mobilization

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli officials are warily watching Syria's emergency mobilization of reserve forces but insist Israel is not planning to attack Syrian troops or pull its own forces out of Lebanon.

The Syrian mobilization of 100,000 reservists was announced Monday in conjunction with a military alert.

Israel Television quoted military sources as saying the Syrians were responding in part to a mobilization drill for Israeli reserves, which the Israeli Military Command said was intended to test the strength of its call-up system for wartime.

The Israeli army said the drill was "approaching" but would not specify the date because it wanted the element of surprise. A spokesman today denied a Tel Aviv newspaper report that the drill would be canceled to calm Syria's fears.

The Israeli government tried to reassure Syria by announcing on state radio and television that there were no plans to mount an attack. Officials indicated a similar message was being conveyed to Syria through private channels.

In Damascus, the Syrian capital, a spokesman for President Hafez Assad said the government had put its 220,000-man army on alert and called up a 100,000-man reserve force.

Israeli television quoted officials as saying the Syrian moves reflected concern in Damascus over the dispatch of 30 U.S. warships to the Lebanese coast and its fear of possible joint Israeli-American military reaction to recent series of truck bombings that killed 230 U.S. servicemen, 58 French paratroopers and 28 Israeli soldiers and security officers.

Israel said last week it was willing to coordinate military policy and operations with the United States in Lebanon.

The State Department in Washington urged Syria to exercise "restraint and prudence." A spokesman, who declined to be identified, tried to discourage speculation that a second aircraft carrier battle group sent to the eastern Mediterranean was part of a buildup to strike Syrian forces.

U.S. military sources said the carrier John F. Kennedy, which led the battle group, is expected to sail through the Suez Canal to the Indian Ocean to replace the carrier Ranger. The Ranger had an engine room fire last week that killed six sailors and injured 43 others.

The Israeli newspaper Maariv reported from Washington today that within two months the Soviet Union would drastically reduce its presence in Syria by turning over to Syrian troops the missile batteries, radar and communications networks now manned by Soviet technicians.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens vowed Monday to keep Israeli troops in southern Lebanon despite a truck bombing of its military headquarters in Tyre on Friday that killed 28 Israelis and 32 Lebanese.

Speaking in Parliament, Arens said Israel would not withdraw from Lebanon "until we are sure that it won't be taken over by terrorist gangs and that the northern Israeli frontier will be secure."

"Whoever stood by the graves (of the Tyre victims) as I did yesterday and felt the pain, could not help but ask himself over and over what can be done to put an end to this carnage," Arens said.

"But it is a mistake to think that surrender will put an end to it," he said. "The answer is to hit these gangs and hit them again and defeat them." Israel has eased its ban on Lebanese traffic across the Awali River bridges which it imposed after the bombing.

The Military Command soldiers were allowing a trickle of pedestrian and vehicles to cross the bridges that span Israel's frontline in Lebanon north of the port city of Sidon.

Texans vote on constitutional amendments

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans go to the polls today to decide on a few more patches for the state Constitution, but Houston voters might make the decisions for the entire state.

The 11 proposed amendments — including garnishment of paychecks to guarantee child support payments and a plan to keep the Legislature in operation after enemy attack — does not seem fascinating enough to attract many of the 6.5 million registered voters.

A turnout of about 11 percent was predicted by the Secretary of State's office. About half the votes are expected to come from Houston, where there's a mayor's race on the ballot.

Texas' 107-year-old constitution already has 253 amendments. Another 144 proposed amendments have been defeated over the years.

Here are the proposals at stake today:

Proposition No. One — Allows counties with less than 30,000 population to have as few as four justices of the peace now required.

No. Two — Replaces the $10,000 limit on urban homestead exemptions with a one-acre limit.

No. Three — Authorizes the Legislature to allow commodity boards to collect product assessments to help promote the commodity.

No. Four — Requires lawmakers to set up a system to keep the Legislature in operation in case of enemy attack; allows the governor to convene the Legislature outside of Austin in case of attack.

No. Five — Permits the Legislature to take money from the Available School Fund (which is the interest earned on the Permanent School Fund) to guarantee local school bonds.

No. Six — Allows garnishment of paychecks to cover child support payments.

No. Seven — Allows Veterans' Land Board to issue $500 million in state bonds to establish a Veterans' Housing Assistance Fund for mortgages.

No. Eight — Permits political subdivisions to make tax-exempt property out of property owned by veterans' organizations.

No. Nine — Authorizes Legislature to allow probate court judges to substitute for county judges in probate matters.

No. 10 — Allows lawmakers to authorize cities to spend public money to replace sewer lines on private property, if the owner pays the city back.

No. 11 — Gives Board of Pardons and Paroles the exclusive right to determine which inmates should be paroled; takes the final authority away from the governor.

West Texas skies clear

By The Associated Press
Clear skies dominated West Texas early today as low clouds and patchy fog developed over the eastern two-thirds of the state.

The haze was the product of a southerly flow of moist air from the Gulf of Mexico.

Scattered light drizzle was noted near Wichita Falls and Del Rio and over the extreme southeastern corner of Texas.

Showers were expected to develop over wide sections of West Texas later today and continue over northern sections of the area through Wednesday, the National Weather Service said. There also was a chance of light rain over Northwest Texas and scattered sections of East Texas on Wednesday.

Pre-dawn temperatures were generally in the 50s and 60s statewide. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 53 at Amarillo to 69 at Del Rio.

Winds were generally from the south at 5 to 10 mph, except over the northern Panhandle and South Plains where gusts up to 15 mph were noted.

Slightly cooler temperatures were on tap for most of Texas on Wednesday.

Texas area forecasts

West Texas: Partly cloudy with widely scattered showers, mostly in the north, through Wednesday. Highs 75 north to 85 south. Lows mostly 50s, except near 38 Panhandle. Highs Wednesday 90 north, 60 southeast and 78 Big Bend valleys.

North Texas: Generally fair to partly cloudy through Wednesday. Widely scattered thunderstorms in northwest Wednesday. Highs 71 to 76. Lows 50 to 57. Highs Tuesday 86 to 73.

East Texas: Partly cloudy through Wednesday. Highs 75 to 82. Lows 55 to 60.

South Texas: Partly cloudy through Wednesday. Slight chance of showers northern sections by Wednesday afternoon. Highs 70s north to 80s south. Lows 50s north to 60s south.

Port Arthur to Port O'Connor: Easterly winds 10 to 15 knots becoming southeasterly 10 to 15 knots tonight and Wednesday. Seas 3 to 5 feet isolated showers.

Extended forecasts

Thursday through Saturday

West Texas: Mostly cloudy and cold Thursday. Partly cloudy with a slow warming trend Friday through Saturday. Lows Thursday morning ranging from near 30 Panhandle to 30s south plains and 40s elsewhere. Warming by Saturday to upper 30s Panhandle with 40s elsewhere. Highs Thursday mid 50s to low 60s Panhandle and South Plains with mid to upper 60s elsewhere, warming by Saturday to the mid and upper 60s Panhandle and South Plains with 70s elsewhere.

North Texas: Decreasing cloudiness Thursday becoming partly cloudy Friday and Saturday. Continued cool nights and mild afternoons. Low mid 30s Panhandle to near 40 southeast on Thursday warming to upper 30s Panhandle to the mid 40s southeast on Saturday. Highs 50s Thursday and 60s Friday and Saturday.

Reagan pledges U.S. partnership

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, embarking on a whirlwind visit to Asia, pledged today that the United States will "remain a reliable partner for peace and stability."

Before leaving the White House, Reagan said, "We will work hard to foster a new era of equality and economic cooperation" with Japan and South Korea, the two stops on his journey.

"We make this journey as ambassadors for peace and prosperity between the citizens of our lands," Reagan said. After his remarks, Reagan went to nearby Andrews Air Force Base where he and his wife departed aboard Air Force One.

In Japan and South Korea, meanwhile, massive security forces are being mobilized to protect the president and his wife.

Reagan called attention to the Soviet attack that downed Korean Air Lines Flight 007 on Sept. 1, and the Soviets' "continued military buildup in Asia, including the deployment of SS-20 missiles," and said "we live in a dangerous world."

"I will reaffirm America's commitment to remain a reliable partner for peace and stability in the region and the world. And in both Tokyo and Seoul, we will look for ways to make the region even more stable and secure," the president said.

Reagan said partnerships "require a willingness to listen, to work hard and to compromise. That is the spirit of our trip. I am confident that our bonds of friendship will be strengthened in the next few days."

Reagan praised the "global responsibilities being undertaken by both Japan and Korea" as "positive developments for those who cherish peace, and seek economic progress and human freedom."

"We are builders of tomorrow, and working as partners to make tomorrow better and more secure is what this trip is all about," he said.

The president, who on Monday called attention to a "dangerous imbalance in trade" between the United States and Japan, said today that the United States and the two nations he will visit will grow closer "if we keep our eyes fixed" on common goals and values.

The president and his wife are scheduled for a whirlwind, 15,650-mile, 6 1/2-day trip to Tokyo and Seoul.

It was reported that Japanese police seized detailed plans by a radical leftist group to raid the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo and the U.S. Navy base in Yokosuka before or during the president's visit. A 90,000-member force was mobilized in Japan. In South Korea, an increased state of military alert was ordered. North Korea has said the president's visit is a "very dangerous war junket."

Reagan dropped the strife-torn Philippines and two other countries from the trip Oct. 3, saying congressional business would prevent a prolonged tour. But administration officials said privately that there was concern about the president's safety in Manila, where President Ferdinand Marcos has been confronted with bloody antigovernment riots since the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

Reagan, in an interview with Fuji Television in Japan on Monday, acknowledged that the United States and Japan "have some differences with regard to trade." The trade imbalance is expected to reach $30 billion in Japan's favor next year.

While trade issues are a continuing sore point in U.S.-Japanese relations, the president is unlikely to return from his trip next Monday with any new agreements limiting Japanese shipments to the United States or increasing the U.S. share of the market in Japan.

"People are concerned about the trade aspects of the trip, seeking more open markets, but the president is not going over there to haggle for more citrus," said one White House official, referring to the U.S. interest in increasing its shipment of grapefruits and other citrus produce to Japan.

Under a recently announced decision, Japan will limit its exports of automobiles to the United States next year to 1.85 million vehicles. The statement was said by Japanese sources to be timed to alleviate the issue as a source of contention during Reagan's visit.

In the television interview, Reagan also said that "a strong Japan, a Japan able to manage more of its own defense, will be a great factor for stability in that whole area" of the world.

The future role of Japan's defense forces is a subject of major political debate in Asia. Under its post-World War II constitution, the Japanese military role is limited to defensive capabilities. The United States has assumed a major role in the defense of Japan.

The president, who is likely to draw attention during the trip to the Soviet Union's expanding Asian military operations, said Monday that the Soviets have 50 divisions and about 120 SS-20 nuclear missiles on the Chinese border.

In South Korea as in Japan, concern about East-West trade issues has been heightened by the Soviet attack on the Korean jet, with a loss of 269 lives, and the explosion, blamed on North Koreans, that killed 17 high-level South Korean officials on a visit to Burma last month. The government in Seoul has not retaliated, but has said it would strike back if another attack is launched. Air Force One was said to be taking a route different from that from which the Korean plane strayed.

In an interview with a reporter from the Korean Broadcasting System at the White House on Monday, Reagan referred to the explosion in Burma and said "I admire your government's restraint under this extreme provocation."

The president used the interview to predict "much greater and closer cooperation...between the United States and the nations of East Asia," and said he looked forward to it "because I think that is the new frontier in the world."

Nation goes to polls on varied issues

In other races, Kentucky Lt. Gov. Martha Layne Collins says she expects to be the state's first female governor despite opponents' claims that the "woman issue" will send some voters to the GOP candidate, former major league pitcher Jim Bunning.

Two incumbent mayors are expected to swell the ranks of women winners at the polls today, as San Francisco's Dianne Feinstein and Houston's Kathy Whitcomb were expected to win re-election handily.

Sharecropper's son W. Wilson Goode was favored to win the Philadelphia mayoral contest, and voters in the North Carolina cities of Durham, Raleigh and Wilmington also were expected to choose black chief executives for the first time.

In Georgia, Kathryn McDonald, widow of Rep. Larry McDonald, who was killed in the downing of Korean Air Lines Flight 007, faces state Rep. George "Buddy" Darden, a fellow Democrat who opposes Mrs. McDonald stands against the Equal Rights Amendment, grain sales to the Soviets and buying land for a state recreation area.

Mississippi Attorney General Bill Allain, a Democrat, faces GOP businessman Leon Bramlett in a campaign in which Allain has fought to overcome allegations of homosexual liaisons. The evidence compiled by an independent group of Bramlett's campaign supporters includes claims by three male prostitutes that Allain had sex with them.

Allain, who angrily denied the charges, took a lie detector test last week and said the results showed he is telling the truth.

The winner of the Washington Senate race will serve out the remainder of Jackson's term, until 1988.

Evans has racked up a consistently pro-Reagan voting record since being sworn in Sept. 12, after Jackson's death Sept. 1. But Congressman Mike Lowry, the passionate and outspoken liberal Democrat in the race, refuses to concede anything.

"You're going to see the greatest upset since Tom Dewey ran into Harry Truman," he said in Walla Walla on Friday.

A statewide poll of 600 registered voters released Monday by KIRO Broadcasting showed Evans preferred by 58.6 percent of the voters, with Lowry getting 40.1 percent.

Evans, president of The Evergreen State College and chairman of the Northwest power council, was given the seat by Republican Gov. John Spellman. He and Lowry emerged from a record field of 33 in a special primary and since then have clashed in a high-spending campaign.

Lowry calls the Senate balloting "the most important election of the entire century" and adds, "When we win, we will change the politics of this country and the world."

Lowry, a three-term congressman, urges a nuclear freeze and has flailed the administration's foreign policy, defense spending, and its position on social programs. He has called for massive military spending cuts, including scrapping the MX and Pershing II missiles.

Evans has called for lesser military cuts, supports MX and Pershing deployment and backs the "build-down" approach to arms control.

A referendum that would outlaw nuclear weapons work in the academic community of Cambridge, Mass., is before today's voters and has caused a furor of campaign spending, but the paper ballots won't be counted until at least Thursday.

In Maine, a group called SMOOSA — Save Maine's Only Official State Animal — has succeeded in getting a ban on moose hunting on the ballot. If the measure passes, it would be the first time the hunting of a game animal has been outlawed through the ballot box.

Arafat offers to stop PLO fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Beleaguered PLO chairman Yasser Arafat today offered to stop fighting Syrian-backed guerrilla mutineers if they halt their onslaught to drive him from Tripoli, his last Middle East stronghold.

In Beirut, U.S. Marines abandoned a vulnerable outpost on the capital's southern outskirts, trimming their peacekeeping zone after the worst outbreak of Lebanese fighting around their positions in six weeks.

"I am now in the protection of Tripoli, this ancient Islamic city," the Palestine Liberation Organization leader told dozens of Western reporters after a meeting held at midday with religious and political figures. They had been pressuring him to renounce his vow to fight unconditionally.

"They have my word that I will do everything in my power to avert a bloodbath in Tripoli," Arafat said. "I will only fight in self defense, and the decision on war or peace is theirs."

The committee of Tripoli's religious and political leaders issued an appeal to Syrian President Hafez Assad to intervene personally to stop the mutineers from pushing into the northern Lebanese city to hunt down Arafat and his loyalists.

Sources close to the committee said it also had contacted breakaway PLO Col. Saeed Mousa, urging him to rein in his forces. But one source, who refused to be identified, said the mutineer leader insisted Arafat "should either get out (of Tripoli) of face a court martial before a revolutionary court."

WHEN YOU SERVE PEOPLE THE WAY FRONTIER DOES, IT'S HARD TO SLIP INTO TOWN UNNOTICED.

The reaction is the same everytime we land in a new city. People are genuinely glad to see us. They've heard about all the extras Frontier gives them. Something quite refreshing at a time when many airlines are cutting back.

Extras like our two daily nonstops to Denver. The only nonstops to Denver from Midland. And our connections to over 80 cities across North America.

They've heard about our service. The kind that's been pleasing our passengers for over 37 years. Like our extra legroom and deluxe meals.

Then there's the chance to earn travel awards to Hawaii and over 150 cities in more than a dozen countries through Frontier's participation in the American Airlines AAdvantage Program.® We'll even give you extra, double bonus miles when you fly to or from Denver anytime between now and December 31st.

It all gets attention. So call your travel agent or Frontier at 561-5156 when we land in Midland on November 18. And tell them you noticed, too.

world in brief

Officials to be installed early

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President-elect Raul Alfonsin and his civilian government will be installed Dec. 10, seven weeks earlier than originally scheduled. Argentina's ruling generals have announced.

The date for the transfer of power was set in a communique released Monday by President Reynaldo Bignone, a retired army general. The military has ruled the country since a coup in March 1976 ousted the elected government of President Isabel Peron.

Alfonsin and his center-left Radical Civic Union won the Oct. 30 general election with a surprisingly strong victory over the Peronists, who had dominated Argentina's politics for 40 years. The new government had been scheduled to take office Jan. 30.

Alfonsin is expected to announce his Cabinet selections this week.

Africa suffering from famine

ROME (AP) — The head of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization says emergency aid must be sent "without delay" to at least 22 African nations facing famine.

FAO sources say parts of Africa are suffering from the worst famine since the 1973-74 food shortages, which killed several hundred thousand people.

Director-General Edouard Saouma, addressing the organization's 22nd biennial conference Monday, urged donor nations to speed up and increase deliveries of food and other aid.

He addressed delegates from about 100 countries who are expected to ratify the Rome-based agency's 1984-85 budget of $425 million during the three-week session.

Bomb wounds 60 people

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A bomb killed at least 14 people and wounded 60 at a railway station in Assam state, shortly after anti-immigrant agitators announced they would start a protest against the government.

The agitation leaders said they planned to stage a statewide road blockade starting Friday to protest Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's scheduled two-day tour of Assam.

The explosion Monday, which police said was caused by a time bomb, occurred at Gauhati, Assam's main city 310 miles northeast of Calcutta.

Student-led groups in Assam have been agitating since 1979 for the expulsion of more than 1 million immigrants, mostly refugees from neighboring Bangladesh.

More than 3,600 people were slain in riots in Assam last February after Mrs. Gandhi announced state assembly elections. Many native Assamese object to giving voting rights to immigrants.

Prisoner slashes Ripper in face

NEWPORT, England (AP) — A prisoner serving time with Peter Sutcliffe, the Yorkshire Ripper, has been convicted of slashing the mass murderer in the face with a piece of glass.

"How can you use too much violence against the Ripper?" James Costello yelled as he was hustled out of court by police after the verdict Monday. Judge Henry McCreery postponed sentencing.

Costello, 35, is serving 10 years for armed robbery. He pleaded innocent to wounding Sutcliffe last January during a fight in the top-security Parkhurst prison on the Isle of Wight.

Costello said he was attacked by Sutcliffe, 37, who began a 30-year minimum sentence in 1981 for brutally slaying 13 women during a five-year reign of terror in northern England.

Prosecutors said Costello attacked Sutcliffe, ripping open his face with piece of glass. The ex-truck driver's wounds required 30 stitches.

Sutcliffe was returned to Parkhurst and Costello was sent another prison.

Oil wealth brings drug problems

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Oil wealth has brought a drug problem to the Arab nations along the Persian Gulf.

Sheik Khalifa Bin Salman, the prime minister of Bahrain, told a recent Cabinet session that he was deeply concerned about it and proposed "stiffer punishment" for drug pushers and traders.

The interior minister, Sheik Mohamed Bin Khalifa, called for regional and international action to combat what he called a creeping menace among the youth of the area.

Officials noted that narcotics problems cropped out in the area after the quadrupling of oil revenues in the 1970s.

Bahrain officially reported a 350 percent increase in the number of addicts admitted to hospitals in 1982 over 1980.

The number of confirmed addicts is estimated at 6,000 out of a population of 365,000.

For the first half of 1983, records showed 191 arrests for smuggling, pushing or taking drugs. In all of 1982, the figure was 300.

In Saudi Arabia, the harsh punishment that is given addicts has largely curtailed the problem. But officials say drug trafficking among young men remains a problem. No statistics were available on addicts and smugglers.

Aleida Lezva Segura, the last former Cuban woman prisoner to leave Grenada, reports to President Fidel Castro on arriving in Havana, Cuba Monday. She was one of 100 Cuban repatriates to arrive aboard an IL-62, a Soviet-made jet.

U.S. officials will investigate rumors of mass grave

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — Cuba is asking the United Nations to help prevent the expulsion of its entire embassy staff in Grenada, and U.S. officials say they will investigate "rumors" of a mass grave mistakenly reported by the State Department.

The State Department had said Monday it was "well established" that a mass grave had been located, possibly holding the bodies of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop and more than 100 other victims of the coup that prompted the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada.

But Brian Carlson, a State Department press officer in Washington, later said the department "is deferring to U.S. representatives on Grenada, who indicated they are checking out local rumors of possible gravesites."

"At this point, neither they, nor we, can confirm the existence of any such sites," Carlson told reporters.

Guy Farmer, chief spokesman for the State Department mission in Grenada, blamed the contradictory reports on poor communications between officials in Washington and the Caribbean island.

In another development, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar received a report Monday containing a request from Cuba that it be allowed to keep four diplomats at its embassy in Grenada.

Governor General Sir Paul Scoon has ordered all Cuban diplomats off the island with the exception of a charge d'affaires.

The requests were conveyed by U.N. official Diego Cordovez, who visited the island over the weekend to prepare a report requested by the General Assembly after it voted 108-9 to deplore the Oct. 25 invasion and call for immediate withdrawal of foreign forces.

The report also said Cuba wants to discuss the return of heavy construction equipment that was being used by some 600 Cuban workers to build a jet airport on Grenada. The Reagan administration had contended the facility would serve Cuban and Soviet warplanes, although Bishop's leftist government denied the charge.

Meanwhile, the leader of a bipartisan congressional delegation which inspected Grenada said U.S. troops should be withdrawn "at an early if not immediate time."

Commander rejoins rebel alliance

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Nicaraguan guerrilla commander Eden Pastora says he has rejoined the rebel alliance he quit two weeks ago and plans a U.S. tour starting today to seek aid to battle the leftist Sandinista government.

Pastora, a former Sandinista hero known as "Commander Zero," made the announcement Monday at a news conference with the heads of the four Nicaraguan exile organizations that make up the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance rebel group.

Elsewhere in Central America, a top Pentagon official made a surprise visit Monday to Guatemala, and leftist Salvadoran guerrillas charged that Guatemala and Honduras were planning to intervene in El Salvador on the side of the U.S.-backed rightist government.

Frederick Ikle, undersecretary for policy in the Defense Department, met with Guatemalan chief of state Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores at the Presidential Palace.

He said afterwards he had discussed the possible renewal of military aid to Guatemala, suspended since 1977 when the Carter administration linked further aid on improvements in human rights policies. The government rejected the conditions.

In a broadcast monitored in El Salvador Monday, the leftist guerrillas' Radio Venceremos claimed the Salvadoran army had asked Guatemala and Honduras to intervene to help fight the rebels.

The broadcast claimed 4,000 Guatemalan troops were massed at El Salvador's northwestern border, with Honduran troops concentrated near the eastern border.

Salvadoran, Honduran and Guatemalan spokesmen denied the charge.

Honduran troops are concentrated in the Jicaro Galan area, in a spur of Honduran territory between Nicaragua and El Salvador, for joint maneuvers they have been holding with 3,500 U.S. troops since August, but a spokesman there denied an invasion of El Salvador was planned.

In Panama City, Pastora said members of the anti-Sandinista rebel alliance had "resolved our differences. We have agreed to restructure the alliance to the new conditions of struggle against totalitarianism."

Pastora said he would begin a tour of the United States today to "ask for support from the people of the United States, who like all noble people are friends of democracy."

Freedom's cause

"No one can be sentenced to immigration."

If these seem like strange words it is because they have been provoked by a strange situation. They came from the lips of a Polish Roman Catholic priest, the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, while he was delivering a homily in Warsaw's St. Stanislaw Kostka Church. He was referring to the Communist government's recent offer to free imprisoned Solidarity union activists provided they agreed to leave the country. To make departure possible the government has been granting passports that for a long time have been difficult for the Polish people to obtain.

Communist leaders say that a good many activists have taken advantage of this form of amnesty, but obviously Father Popieluszko looks upon it as a dishonorable and immoral activity. He spoke forcefully at a "mass for the motherland," a mass that has been conducted monthly ever since the Warsaw overlords imposed martial law nearly two years ago.

"A man," he told the assembled communicants, "has a right to his homeland."

A true believer in freedom of expression, the priest offered prayers "for our brothers still in jail because they had different views."

He made his points even more effective by preaching his sermon in the form of an open letter to Pope John Paul II. It included this dry remark: "I hope the penal code does not provide for any action against those who write letters to the Holy Father."

What this latest "mass for the motherland" tells the world is that the Poles are as determined as ever to persist in their fight for freedom. The courage of Father Popieluszko, who not surprisingly is under police investigation, is typical of the courage of Poland's church leaders who are unafraid to speak out against the Warsaw dictatorship.

Tactics of repression

In its attempts to revive and strengthen a measure aimed at gagging the world's press, the Soviet Union has succeeded in unmasking its sinister designs for manipulating international opinion to its own advantage.

The Soviets made their move at the General Conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in Paris by exhuming a five-year-old declaration by the group which already has been denounced as hostile to Western ideas of press freedom.

To this declaration, which most of the Free World had hoped was moribund, the Soviets would add press curbs to create, in their words, "a new world information and communication order." Translate that as outright governmental control.

And to the draft of the resolution they submitted, the Soviets characteristically have appended the sly suggestion of a "hit list." They recommend that UNESCO prepare a roster of "mass media organs" whose articles did not hew to the line of the old declaration, for appropriate actions.

With their rag-tag following of Third World representatives, the Soviets just might be able to put this vicious resolution across. But if UNESCO does buy the whole Soviet package, it will lose its credibility throughout the Free World.

Another View:

Weakness for sale

Most Americans know little about the coterie of tax-exempt foundations contributing heavily to the unilateral nuclear disarmament movement which world affairs analyst Anthony Harrigan says "dovetails nicely with the foreign policy objectives of the Soviet Union."

The Journal Foundation News, which reports on foundation activities, said recently 90 so-called peace groups had raised a total of $20 million and that 31 percent of their budgets came from private foundations.

The publication said among foundations involved in the "peace" movement are the New World Foundation, Rockefeller Family Fund, Field Foundation, Stern Fund, Ottinger Foundation and W. Alton Jones Foundation of Charlottesville, Va.

One, the Field Foundation, spent $416,000 in 1982 on "military peace and defense issues."

Peace groups funded by the tax-exempt foundations are actively involved in campaigns to halt MX missile production and enact a nuclear freeze that would leave the United States in a position of inferiority.

There are, of course, no rich private foundations backing the multitude of disarmament movements in the Soviet Union. The resultant imbalance of influence in the two countries cannot be lost on the highly-educated, sophisticated people running the foundations and the peace movements.

The U.S. public is being asked to urge Congress to enact a freeze and legislation that will cut missile production.

The Soviet public is simply being told to do what the controlled press and authorities tell it to do under threat of winding up in a forced labor camp or phony psychiatric ward.

The unequal campaign naturally has the consequence of working entirely in favor of totalitarianism.

The end result, if the process reached completion, would be a totalitarian world.

It is hard to believe that the bright people in the foundations and the peace movement do not know this too. How many of them look forward to such an eventuality?

By the way, legislation governs the foundations' tax-exempt status, and they are not supposed to try to influence legislation, although through their role in the disarmament movement, that is what they are doing. The Justice Department should review this straying off course.

There's plenty of good that the foundations could do. All sorts of worthy projects could use funds being misspent to push unilateral disarmament.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Japanese concessions unlikely

WASHINGTON — Even administration officials privately admit that President Reagan's visit to Japan is a masterpiece of bad timing.

The supposed point of the trip is to repair serious strains in U.S.-Japanese trade. But with parliamentary elections coming up next month, Japanese political leaders won't risk offending powerful domestic constituencies — such as farmers or high-technology workers — by opening the door to American imports.

Jack Anderson

"You can't have any progress with the Japanese on trade liberalization while they're preparing for December elections," one official told my associate Michael Binstein. "It's really a P.R. trip for the president."

The Japanese market could be a bonanza for U.S. industries struggling to keep the nation's economic recovery alive. But while American workers and businesses suffer from the flood of Japanese goods into this country, only a trickle of U.S. exports is allowed into Japan.

Frustrated trade officials foresee no significant concessions from Japan coming from the president's trip, though the Japanese will try to make it look as if Reagan has achieved something for his pains.

Japan would dearly love to buy Alaskan oil. Since the Japanese are almost entirely dependent on imported energy supplies, this would be a "concession" that would make them appear reasonable trade partners — yet would actually cost them nothing. More importantly, it would pose no threat to Japan's high-tech industries from American competition.

The Japanese are known to be looking for some large U.S. purchase to make before the end of the year, in hopes that Japan's $30 billion trade surplus with the United States will be trimmed a little, or at least not grow alarmingly. This will allow Japanese trade negotiators to minimize American representatives' claims that the current situation is in need of drastic overhaul.

Japan's government-owned monopolies, which control the sale of imported goods and services, are good illustrations of the problems that vex U.S. negotiators. One such monopoly is the Japan Tobacco and Salt Public Corp., which subsidizes growers by purchasing all domestically produced tobacco at three times the world price. At the same time, the Tobacco and Salt Corp. controls the sale of imported cigarettes by using various tariffs to jack the price at least 45 percent over comparable Japanese brands.

U.S. negotiators have identified an almost kabuki-like pattern in the Japanese negotiations: After dragging the talks out at exhausting length, the Japanese finally compromise just enough to prevent U.S. retaliation. Then the concessions are quietly tied up in bureaucratic red tape until a new U.S. or Japanese administration takes power — providing an excuse to start the ritual all over again.

What the United States wants is simply a sporting chance to compete with Japanese industry on some where near an equal basis, as Japanese industries do in this country. The Americans are particularly keen to crack the Japanese computer, robotics and agricultural markets, which are either Japanese government monopolies or fiercely protected by high tariffs and import restrictions.

What the American negotiators will get is anybody's guess. As U.S. Trade Representative William Brock quipped, "We'll know in about 35 years."

POLAND REVISTED: In a surprising reversal of its hardline policy against Poland, the administration last week decided to lift two of the economic sanctions it imposed when the Polish regime declared martial law in December 1981.

What was surprising is that the decision came despite recently increasing U.S.-Soviet tension in the wake of the Korean airline disaster and the invasion of Grenada. And the sanctions are being lifted when all the evidence points to greater — not less — repression by the Polish government, even though martial law was technically rescinded.

The decision to lift the two sanctions — on Poland's right to fish in U.S. waters and on discussion of rescheduling Poland's international debt — was a victory for the so-called detentists in the State Department. This faction, headed by Lawrence Eagleburger, undersecretary for political affairs, and Richard Burt, assistant secretary for European affairs, had argued for months that it was time to improve U.S. relations with Poland.

Sources in Foggy Bottom see it as significant that the decision to lift sanctions was made when the president's national security adviser, William Clark, was replaced by Robert McFarlane. Judge Clark was dead set against lifting the sanctions. If McFarlane cared strongly one way or the other, he was distracted by other, more pressing matters.

In fact, the advocates of lifting the sanctions timed their latest, successful effort to take advantage of high-level preoccupation with other foreign policy decisions of far greater importance. Both the president and Secretary of State George Shultz were too busy with Lebanon and Grenada to worry too much about a change in U.S. policy toward Poland.

Seizing their opportunity, the detentists persuaded the president that the Polish problem had to be decided quickly, and that our European allies wanted the sanctions lifted. The president was reported to be visibly discomfited at being rushed to judgment on a matter that had been on the back burner for so many months, particularly when there were other, more vital matters he had to deal with at the time.

Jack Anderson writes for United Feature Syndicate.

INSIDE REPORT:

German consensus shattered

BONN, West Germany — The shattering of a 25-year consensus among West Germany's major parties over the nuclear issue has unleashed political forces here certain to cause dangerous new tensions with the U.S., a fact made clear in high-level reactions to the Grenada affair.

A top Social Democratic Party (SPD) leader, Horst Ehmke, told the West German parliament that the SPD condemned the U.S. no less harshly than it had the Soviet Union for its invasions of Czechoslovakia and Afghanistan. Ehmke carried further, privately informing prominent diplomats that the trouble with the Americans was — Ronald Reagan.

Such comments from an astute politician of Ehmke's stature would have been unthinkable in the SPD leadership of the recent past. It would have been unthinkable if the SPD had not broken with the NATO decision — originally the SPD's own — to deploy Pershing II missiles here next month. The party was voted out of power late last year. It is now exploiting its opposition to the Pershings (and hence to the U.S.) in hopes of raiding the left-wing, anti-nuclear Green Party to rebuild its strength.

How far the SPD will go in its headlong rush away from accepting Pershing missiles, the most important NATO decision in years, and toward what looks like neo-neutrality is widely speculated upon here. But party Chairman Willy Brandt supplied a foretaste when he announced that he had originally accepted the Pershing II deployment decision only because he did not want to oppose then SPD Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, who made it the centerpiece of West German security policy.

The questions being asked are: How many in the SPD leadership, both federal and regional, supported Schmidt's courageous insistence on the new Pershing missiles for the same reason Brandt did? And how many — if any at all — will stand with the 1979 decision when the SPD finally votes not to deploy the missiles at its Nov. 18 party conference?

At stake is not the Pershing missiles themselves (all but certain to be installed in December with the full support of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's conservative government) but future effects of the shattered consensus.

"How astonishing," one official who is not a partisan politician told us, "that within one year the whole SPD Party has run away from Schmidt's policy."

One effect is to open the shooting season on the U.S., as vividly displayed by Ehmke's rebuke on Grenada. Such hyperbole may play well to the frenzied galleries of Petra Kelly's Green Party and the far-left fringe of the SPD, but it could raise hackles in the U.S. Congress, if not the White House itself. That pushes the U.S. toward re-examination of the American military role in West Germany and its ever-rising costs. It feeds American go-it-alone.

Ambassador Arthur Burns is meeting regularly with prominent SPD politicians to warn that the poison in their rhetoric could produce unwanted antidotes across the Atlantic. Yesterday it was Grenada that made the pretext for poison. Tomorrow it could be Nicaragua. NATO itself may soon lose its immunity to SPD attack from the far left. There is concern that efforts will be made at the Nov. 18 party conference to link unwanted Pershing II missiles to the integrity of the alliance.

Shattering of the quarter-century consensus is also perceived here as driving a wedge between the SPD and the Bundeswehr, the West German military. One high official told us that if the SPD continues its campaign against the missiles next year, after deployment, "a split between this major political party and the Bundeswehr is possible, and it would be very dangerous."

Since May 1955, when the SPD ended its long struggle against West German membership in NATO and against any nuclear weapons on West German soil, the consensus on national security between the major parties has been a fulcrum of decision for one government after another, no matter how they split on other issues. Its shattering now points in ominous, unknown directions that could transcend the missiles themselves, doing irreparable harm to the intimate Washington-Bonn partnership that has guaranteed Western Europe's freedom.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak write for Field Enterprises.

CHARLEY REESE Big media wanted to exploit war

I must file a "minority report" on the subject of the Reagan Administration's decision to bar the press from Grenada during the invasion. Most of my colleagues are outraged; I think President acted wisely.

To put matters in perspective, there was no attempt to deprive the American people of knowledge of the invasion. The President announced it once it was underway; the Pentagon made periodic announcements of the progress; and none of the students or foreign nationals who were evacuated was told not to talk to the press.

Furthermore, as soon as the fighting lessened, a press pool was taken in for a tour and, of course, when the military objectives were secured, the press was allowed in.

So we are talking about a very narrow issue which is whether in the initial stages of combat operation in which the soldiers and Marines met unforeseen opposition several dozens of correspondents and cameramen would be turned loose in the midst of the fighting or if the information would be provided by the government.

The small numbers of Rangers and Marines who made the initial assaults had more than enough to do without having to nursemaid the press. It does not make sense to drop troops on an island in a commando operation, one objective of which is to find and evacuate Americans, and at the same time allow more civilians into the island.

This was not, it must be emphasized, a stable position war where the good guys clearly occupied this area and the bad guys, that area. These troops had to fan out at top speed, locate the enemy, engage him, and at the same time, locate and protect the students and other American civilians some of whom were scattered about in a large town.

Those members of the press who are claiming they did not want anything but permission to land on the island are being less than honest. They would have begged the Army for use of its transportation and communications facilities because it does no good to have a story and picture if you can't get it back.

But what about the "tradition" of the press covering all of America's wars. Well, let's look at that. The press, not the government, broke that tradition in Vietnam. The tradition prior to that was that when America went to war, the press went to war, too, and cooperated with the government by accepting military censorship and even imposing self-censorship on itself. The tradition was that the press would do nothing that would hinder the nation in its war effort. No one wrote any sob stories about the miseries of the Germans or Japanese. No one went to Berlin and put Nazis on camera to "tell their side of the conflict."

In the latter stages of the Vietnam War, some of the major news media organizations in effect declared their neutrality. They would not support the American government. They would treat the North Vietnamese and the Americans equally. Americans back home would soon be hearing stories of how the North Vietnamese were suffering from American bombs. They would soon be exposed to all the mistakes and alleged mistakes the American troops made.

I don't think most people understand what a radical break with tradition this represents. From out of that decision has grown the role of not just an adversary, but a hostile adversary. From that has emerged the practice of advocacy journalism in which, if journalists disagree with the President's decisions, they set out to undermine them. The press has published classified information, exposed covert operations, and made it absolutely clear that it will publish what it pleases without regard for the consequences to American policy or American personnel.

Okay, if that's the rules the press itself wants to establish, then the press is surely mature enough to understand that both sides can play the game. If the press makes a fetish out of non-cooperation, how can it demand cooperation and assistance? If it refuses to declare in advance on the basis of patriotism that it will be supportive of Americans in combat, then the first obligation is to the troops in the fight, has a duty to keep the press out of the way until they can no longer hurt the operation.

I have been using the word "press" in a generalized way. The real culprits who changed the rules are the national TV networks and one or two big newspapers. Unfortunately, the rest of us suffer the consequences of their arrogance. Just remember the issue wasn't the people's right to know but the big media's right to exploit.

Parents oppose surgery for daughter

MOUNT SINAI, N.Y. (AP) — A couple who have rejected life-prolonging surgery for their deformed baby girl say they cherish her and wish others would understand their anguish as they decide the infant's fate "with the whole world watching."

Linda and Dan, who requested that their last names not be used, told The Associated Press they will continue to fight efforts to force two operations for the month-old girl. Doctors say the girl will probably die within two years without the operations.

"In the long run, it's just Danny and me against the federal government. And that's frightening," said Linda, 23, who with her husband consulted with doctors and Roman Catholic clergy before rejecting surgery in favor of conservative treatment based on nutrition and antibiotics.

"This is tearing us apart," she added, her eyes brimming with tears. "It's not a case of being inconvenienced by a handicapped child. If that was it, we would have walked away from her on the very first day."

nation

"Baby Jane Doe," as the infant is called in court documents, was born Oct. 11 with spina bifida — a failure of the spinal column to close — and with an abnormally small head and fluid on the brain.

A right-to-life advocate took the couple to court in October seeking unsuccessfully to force the operations. Last week, the U.S. Justice Department sued University Hospital at Stony Brook, N.Y., for release of the baby's health records so federal lawyers could determine if the infant's civil rights were being violated.

The suit marked the first time the federal government has gone to court to protect the rights of an infant with a birth defect.

Linda and Dan said they would like to explain to President Reagan, for whom they voted, why they decided to oppose surgery.

"I would like to tell him we came to this decision in the best interest of our child," said Dan, a self-employed construction contractor. "I would like him to understand what it feels like...to be going through this with the whole world watching."

"If he's any kind of human being," added Linda, "he wouldn't permit all these court actions to continue."

Doctors have said that surgery could allow the baby — the couple's first child — to survive into her 20s, but that she could be paralyzed and require repeated operations.

Dr. C. Everett Koop, the U.S. surgeon general who is also a pediatric surgeon, has endorsed the surgery and said the legal battle is a fight for the principle that "every life is uniquely sacred."

The case has come to the attention of the Vatican newspaper, L'Osser-vatore Romano, which said in an editorial Monday. "For the believers, the choice is without doubt. The baby girl has a right to live even in her malformed condition."

"The right-to-life (movement) perhaps has something to say. But to be able to come into our house with those opinions, I cannot understand and I can't accept," said Dan. "I wouldn't force what I believe onto their family."

He said his daughter's case has become "a political issue they don't want to let go. They have been using our baby as a test case to set up some guidelines for future cases like this."

The couple, who married in November 1982, said they visit their blue-eyed, reddish-haired daughter daily, changing the gauze on her back, wrapping her in a blanket and holding her.

"When we are with her, we feel good," said Dan. "We are at peace with ourselves."

Linda said Dan had added two rooms to their shingle-and-brick home "with his own hands" in anticipation of the baby's arrival, and looked forward to the day they can bring her home.

Catholic nun shot to death

DETROIT (AP) — A Roman Catholic nun was shot to death and her purse was taken as she approached her home on the city's northwest side, police said. Sister John Clement Hungerman, a teacher at Marygrove College, was shot Monday night several blocks from the college, police said.

Neighbors told police that Sister Hungerman's purse was missing and its contents strewn along the street. The purse was found two blocks from the shooting scene, they said.

House to debate payment for dairy farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A splintered House is approaching a show-down vote on whether to extend to the nation's dairy farmers an offer traditionally reserved for grain growers: government payment for not producing milk.

Debate on the issue began Monday and a final vote was expected on Wednesday, with both sides saying the outcome was very much in doubt. "It's a toss-up," said one House Agriculture Committee aide.

Farm groups which normally band together to help push through price-support legislation were badly split. Major dairy groups were pushing hard for their "compromise" bill, while the Reagan administration, the Farm Bureau and meat producers were backing an alternative.

The issue arises because current law is nearly universally unpopular. It assesses farmers $1 per hundred pounds of milk produced as an incentive to hold down production, but surpluses of government-owned butter, dried milk and cheese have continued to swell.

Under the law, the Commodity Credit Corp. buys surplus milk products to hold the market price of milk at or above the support level of $13.10 per hundred pounds. Such purchases cost $2.6 billion in the fiscal year just ended.

The dairy industry compromise would shave the support price from $13.10 per hundred pounds to $12.60, do away with half the assessment on producers and set up a 15-month paid diversion program — paying farmers $10 per hundred pounds for milk they don't produce, up to 30 percent of their normal output.

That approach, similar to grain subsidies which pay farmers not to grow crops, is backed by the politically active major milk producers organizations, which gave upwards of $1.8 million to members of Congress during the last campaign season. The Senate already has passed a nearly identical bill.

Proponents say the plan would quickly cut milk production and virtually eliminate government-owned stockpiles of dairy products. The reduced need for government purchases would mean the program would actually cost roughly $1 billion less than the alternative plan over two years, backers contended.

And they said the paid diversion aspect is only fair if milk producers agree to swallow a continued 50-cent assessment and a cut in the support price.

"If there is any subsidy, it is the American consumer that is being subsidized by the American producer," said Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee and a backer of the industry bill. He said Americans enjoy relatively cheap food and farmers often are paid less than it costs them to produce it.

The alternative sponsored by Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., would kill the paid diversion and instead give the secretary of agriculture authority to immediately cut the support price by $1.50, to $11.60 per hundred pounds.

Woman advertises for baby

CONCORD, Calif. (AP) — A divorced mother of three teen-agers who advertised for a baby to adopt says she received dozens of calls from men — but none from women — offering children.

Nancy Skaggs, a nurse who advertised in the Contra Costa Times that she had "no money to give, but a warm home & lots of love," said Monday she also received several calls from couples and single women hoping she could help them find children to adopt.

The men who called on behalf of pregnant girlfriends or of mothers wishing to give up young children said they "want to protect the women involved," said Ms. Skaggs, 37. The ad was pulled after five days after it was discovered that it was illegal for an individual to advertise for a child, City Editor Nancy Ward said.

Jean Harris appeals for new trial

NEW YORK (AP) — A state appeals court will hear a motion for a new trial for Jean Harris, whose lawyer says she was psychotic, addicted to amphetamines and incompetent to stand trial when she was convicted of murdering Scarsdale Diet doctor Herman Tarnower.

Justice Milton Mollen of the state court's Appellate Division granted permission Monday for Mrs. Harris to appeal Westchester County Court Judge Aldo Nastasi's denial of a new trial.

Mrs. Harris, 60, is serving 15 years to life on her 1981 murder conviction in the 1980, death of Tarnower, her lover of 14 years. Her conviction was upheld by the two state appeals courts.

Ex-CIA agent to be resentenced

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Former CIA agent Edwin Wilson, convicted of illegally shipping arms to Libya, was incorrectly sentenced to 15 years in prison on two overlapping laws but could face an even longer term when he is resentenced, an appeals court and a prosecutor say.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Wilson's conviction of two counts each of interstate transport of firearms with intent to commit a felony and of exporting firearms without a license. However, the court said Monday the charges were "practical equivalents" and ordered resentencing on one charge, but not both.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Theodore Greenberg said the 15-year sentence included concurrent time for the two charges. He said he would now seek the maximum 20 years on the interstate transport conviction.

Rabies kills rare red panda

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rabies killed a rare red panda at the National Zoological Park in Washington but has not harmed Hsing-Hsing and Ling-Ling, the giant pandas given to the United States by China, a pathologist says.

Dr. Richard Montali told an international symposium Monday the red panda died Oct. 23, a victim of a rabies outbreak reaching epidemic proportions in the mid-Atlantic states. Thirteen raccoons that wandered into the zoo since May also had the disease, Montali said.

A raccoon carcass was found in the giant pandas' yard, but the two pandas — which are on the endangered species list — had been vaccinated and were not in jeopardy, Montali said.

Father gains custody of son

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A woman who attracted national attention when she lost custody of her son after bearing an illegitimate, mixed-race daughter — prompting a two-year custody battle — has turned the boy over to his father for good.

A judge denied that his initial custody ruling had anything to do with race. Kathleen Blackburn later regained custody from the child's paternal grandmother, but lost custody to her former husband after a judge deemed Ms. Blackburn "sexually irresponsible."

Violinist quits master classes

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Violin virtuoso Jascha Heifetz says "I didn't resign, I quit" in a dispute over his master classes at the University of Southern California.

Earlier this year the 82-year-old Heifetz sued the university for allegedly reneging on promises to fund the program, in which he coached gifted musicians. He disputed a report in the student newspaper that he had resigned amicably because of his age.

"Nonsense — I quit," said Heifetz on Monday at his hilltop home, where he has continued his classes since March.

A child prodigy who made his New York debut in Carnegie Hall in 1917, Heifetz has not performed in public for 10 years.

Asked if he would ever return to the concert stage, he replied firmly: "No. Never is a very strong word, but I can't see that I would ever go back. I've done my share."

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — Kathryn Crosby says she'll decide by Friday where and when she'll put on a big bash "for all of Bing's friends."

Kathryn Crosby

Mrs. Crosby had planned the party over the next 11 days in the three-story mansion she and the late crooner shared, but because there was a commercial aspect to the affair, the Hillsborough town officials in this exclusive suburb south of San Francisco blocked it. Mrs. Crosby planned to use the open house to promote a drapery and rug cleaning company.

She said the details will be worked out by week's end, noting that a problem is trying to find a place big enough.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Entertainer Wayne Newton is in line to become owner of the Aladdin Hotel — again.

Wayne Newton

Attorneys involved in the complicated sale said Monday the papers have been signed and all that's needed now is the approval of state gaming officials.

Newton, 41, and Ed Torres, who gave Newton his first job in Las Vegas in 1957, became partners in the resort when they bought the hotel for $85 million in October of 1980. The partnership lasted 21 months, with the pair splitting in July 1982 over what Newton called business differences.

Attorney Mike Sloan declines to disclose details of the sale, but previous reports have said it tops $70 million.

Newton is not expected to actually take over the Strip property until after the first of the year.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — David Toma, the former undercover cop on whom the television shows "Toma" and "Baretta" were based, sounded an alarm to 9th-grade students — 7,000 of them.

The students from 34 schools in the Omaha area were bused Monday to the City Auditorium Arena to hear Toma speak on the dangers of drugs.

Toma, 51, told them he became a police officer because he wanted to help people. He said he watched in dismay as five of his nephews became drug addicts, and he saw the effect that had on his family.

St. Louis' morning newspaper will cease publication

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Staff members reacted first with stunned silence and later with tears after they learned that the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, the city's morning newspaper, will cease publishing Dec. 31.

The newspaper's publisher, G. Duncan Baum, said he did not anticipate any way to save the paper.

The closing of the paper, which was founded in 1852 as the Daily Missouri Democrat and was bought in 1955 by the S.I. Newhouse Publishing Co., will leave the afternoon Post-Dispatch as the city's only daily newspaper.

An industry source, who asked not to be identified, said the decision to shut down stemmed from a shrinking advertising base and losses. Joe Gallagher, a city desk editor and employee for 38 years, noted that the newspaper's daily circulation of 280,572 as published for 1982 exceeded the 235,520 of the rival Post-Dispatch.

Chaps win opener

Pressure too much for Cisco

BY BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

When the Midland College Chaparrals opened their 1983-84 basketball season Monday, it was a case of something old and something new.

What was new was the team itself, which returns only one starter from last year's 31-4 squad. Coach Jerry Stone is counting on plenty of newcomers.

What was old, as least as far as Stone goes, was the Chaps' 94-82 win over the Cisco Junior College Wranglers. Winning has become a tradition at MC, and the biggest reason is Stone.

THE CHAPS MAY have new faces, but the results were the same. MC used tenacious defense and relentless pressure in forcing the Wranglers into many turnovers. The Chaps had many easy baskets because of the pressure, and they pounded the Wranglers with a barrage of shots, mostly from the inside.

If the opening game was any indication, the Chaps will definitely be a new look unit. Sophomore Jackie Phinnessee, the returning starter, and 6-9 freshman Tevii Binns were dominant inside, and controlled the pace when they were in the game.

Binns' debut was one that was particularly significant. He scored 22 points to lead MC on 10-15 field goal shooting, and could have had more, but he got into foul trouble in the second half and left the game with five personals late in the win.

Phinnessee added 19 points, and he and the big rookie controlled the boards. "We were a little nervous," Phinnessee said afterwards. "This team has a lot of freshmen, but they're good freshmen. Coach Stone has been running us real hard."

THE RUNNING seemed to pay off against the Wranglers. CJC had already played two games, something that Stone was concerned about, but the Chaps went to a pressing defense late in the first half and maintained the quick pace in the second half.

Phinnessee and Stone knew something. They both knew the Chaps were in running shape. Against CJC, the Chaps simply outquicked the Wranglers.

In the first half alone, MC forced 17 turnovers out of CJC.

The game was fairly close in the first half, but MC finished strong to go out at half with a 43-32 lead. Phinnessee started the Chap's strongest surge with 7:30 left in the half, taking a pass inside and jamming it home on the play. Phinnessee was fouled by CJC's Melven Jones. The foul was Jones' third, and he took a seat beside Cisco coach Dan Montgomery. Jones, at 6-4, was CJC's big man for the night. He finished with 16 points, as did guard Lloyd McArthur. But Cisco's biggest force was guard Kenneth Jackson. Jackson hit his first eight shots from the floor and finished with a game-high 24 points, but his scores never came at the right time for the Wranglers.

After Phinnessee missed the free throw, he took advantage of a Cisco turnover to put a soft bank shot off the glass and give MC a seven-point edge, their biggest at that time.

Half a minute later, Phinnessee added a free throw, his and MC's fifth straight points, and the Chaps were in command. Phinnessee shoveled an assist to Chap Brian Essary, and MC began to pull away. Binns added a thunderous slam off a feed by Jerald Wrightsel, and Burt Cooper sank a jumper at the buzzer. MC lead at the break by 11 and were never seriously threatened again.

"My first couple of shots I felt a little shaky," Binns said of his collegiate debut. "But our guards kept feeding me the ball. After that I just started working on them."

he found a home with his teammates. "He's real strong at 6-9," said Phinnessee. "We call him 'Samp'. (As in Ralph Sampson) He's real aggressive."

Stone likes having the big man, too. "He protects the basket. We've never had that at Midland College before. He's a guy that can cover for us on defense."

With that luxury, Stone can continue to press the dickens out of the likes of Cisco, usually to great effect.

Both Binns and Phinnessee capped the Chap win early in the second half. Binns got three hoops, and Phinnessee got two more to put the first ten Chap points up. Binns nabbed three quick personals in three minutes, and Stone went to his bench. There he found a bevy of young animals, the best Monday being Big Spring freshman Jerald Wrightsel. Wrightsel and frosh Lawrence Chumbley of Dallas Samueli went wild in the second half, scoring a combined 17 points on 8-11 shooting. Both led the Chap break, and Wrightsel added a pair of assists.

"I thought there were three things about this game," said Stone. "First of all there are a lot of freshmen." Stone has 10 on the 14-man team. "Second, we run a lot of stuff both offensively and defensively, and at this point we don't run anything very well." Stone says the Chaps are running his plays at about 60 percent effectiveness.

Rebs in first playoff experience since '76

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

After 23 regular seasons of football competition, the Midland Lee Rebels do not have a long and storied state playoff history. In fact, this year's "Rebels of Destiny" would like to add a little lustre to that playoff look.

When the Rebs take to Jones Stadium's artificial turf at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in Lubbock against Amarillo High, the Rebs will be making their third voyage into playoff waters. Overall Lee owns a meager 1-2 record in two previous playoff trips.

Both playoff teams were produced by Coach Jim Acree in the years of 1974 and 1976. Eight years have passed since those glory days of Lee football and this year's Rebel seniors were only in grade school. Most of Lee's players don't even remember when Lee was last in the playoffs.

IN 1974, Lee produced an overall record of 8-2-1. The Rebels won the 4-5A playoff berth with a 6-1-1 record in district play. The key to that season was a 34-7 win over Odessa Permian.

But the Rebels didn't finish strong in 1974. Acree's Rebels tied Coach John Reddell's Midland High Bulldogs, 7-7, to end regular season play with an 8-1-1 mark. The playoff experience didn't last long either.

In the first bi-district rattle out of the box, Lee was swamped by Wichita Falls Rider by a humiliating 35-8

Lee 1-2 in previous post season games loss on the artificial surface in Wichita Falls.

Under gloomy skies on that late November day, Lee held the game in check after one period with a 7-7 tie. But Rider put Lee under quickly in the second quarter with three TDs on the passing arm of quarterback Mike Patterson. Patterson hit tight end Anthony Flenoy with 12 and 11 yard TD bombs to put the game away. Lee running backs Mike Oliphant and Blaine Murray were held to 33 yards rushing each. Greg Rendall was the Lee quarterback that year.

LEE'S DEFENSE was superb in 1974 with three All-District selections. Defensive lineman Junior Miller, now with the Atlanta Falcons of the NFL and former Nebraska All-American, led the charge. Defensive lineman Keith Bishop and cornerback Murray were also All-District picks that year as was offensive guard David Sledge.

In 1976, Lee produced its most successful season in the history of the school, winning 10 and losing twice. This year's Lee squad would have to win two playoff games to equal that mark.

Lee won the district title in 1976 with a 6-1 district mark and was 9-1 heading into the playoffs. That is the only Lee team to win nine regular season games.

Again Lee relied on stiff defense in 1976, defeating Permian again in the key game by a 14-13 margin after losing to Odessa High by a 15-14 score.

That was also the year of the "Great Blizzard of 1976." Lee finished regular season play with a 15-6 win over Midland High as four-feet of snow was dumped on Memorial Stadium that night. Lee overcame a 6-0 lead by MHS that year for the victory, but had to wait until Saturday to see if the Rebels were playoff bound. On Saturday, Permian defeated OHS to put Lee in the playoffs.

In the bi-district game of 1976, Lee shutout the Eules Trinity Trojans by a 17-0 count, becoming the first Rebel squad to win a playoff game. That game is still Lee's only playoff victory. Lee quarterback Brad Wright, who went on to stardom at New Mexico and two tries to latch on to a Dallas Cowboys' team berth, threw for 165 yards in that game, including a TD pass.

BUT AGAIN the playoffs ended on a sour note for Lee. The following week, on Nov. 27, the Rebels were pounded by Arlington Sam Houston's Texans by a 38-13 count in San Angelo. Sam Houston scored 24 third period points to ice that contest. That contest was also marred by breakout of periodic fighting on the field. That, more than anything, left a bad taste in the mouths of Midlanders since Lee was guilty of contributing to the fighting.

But Lee hasn't been able to make up for all that since they haven't been in the playoffs since 1976. Still, Lee's most successful squad came that year and again defensive players dominated the All-District selections.

Defensive linemen Jeff Degenfelder, Donald Salinas and Eric Stewart were Lee's All-District choices in 1976 along with defensive back John Lowery. Offensive tackle Brian Rainey was the only offensive player selected as Wright was placed on the honorable mention list.

Lee's bi-district victory over Trinity came on natural grass in Abilene. The loss to Sam Houston was also on grass, but Lee's loss to Rider was on the artificial surface.

It's easy to see why this year's Lee squad would like to make up some ground on lost time. Lee hasn't had many opportunities to play in the playoffs and the 1-2 playoff record needs some upgrading.

THIS YEAR'S Lee squad is much more potent offensively than its two playoff predecessors, thanks to fullback Isaac Garnett, who has rushed for 1,397 yards to rank as Lee's all-time leading rusher.

But in addition to Garnett, Lee has four other rushers over 200 yards on the season with Walter Jones (428), Tyrone Thurman (307), Jeff Motley (219) and Billy Gibbs (201).

Defensively, the Rebels appear to be even better than the other two playoff teams, giving up only 72 points, less than both of the other playoff units.

And now the past doesn't count. This team will have to play on its own merits, win or lose. It's a new game after eight long seasons and Amarillo High's Golden Sandies are first on the list.

McNorton thefts spark Lions, 15-9

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Bruce McNorton, the Detroit Lions' second-year right cornerback out of tiny Georgetown College, earned the nickname "Chill" in training camp — but he also learned how to play one of the most demanding positions in pro football.

McNorton put those lessons to work, with two of the Lions' three interceptions as Detroit earned a 15-9 victory over the New York Giants.

"During training camp, the defensive backs had to put a dollar in the chili fund if you missed a ball at practice and I missed so many that the other guys said I was paying for the whole chili party, we were planning," explained McNorton, who earned one of three game balls. "So, they started calling me 'Chill' and it stuck."

McNorton also explained that balls began sticking to his hands after he started wearing gloves four weeks ago.

The victory was the fourth in five games for the Lions who lost four of their first five. Their 5-5 record tied the Lions with Green Bay for second place in the NFC Central Division — one game behind the Minnesota Vikings.

Running back Billy Sims, who was the game's leading rusher with 86 yards and the only touchdown of the contest on 14 carries, earned the second Detroit game ball. Robbie Martin, whose 51-yard kickoff return set up Sims' TD, got the other.

McNorton's interceptions both came in the fourth quarter as the Giants tried in vain to post their first victory in six games.

"I thought we ran the ball well, but we couldn't get the passing game going," Giants Coach Bill Parcells said.

Baseball's Musical Chairs may be coming to end

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1983 free-agent re-entry draft may have signaled the end to wholesale movement of players in what had become baseball's most lucrative open market.

The major league's 26 teams Monday went through the formality of a round-by-round draft, which really is of little significance since any player may be picked any number of times by any team.

Still, 29 of the 45 free agents were picked by less than four teams, meaning they have been cut loose to negotiate with any club they want, if any wants them.

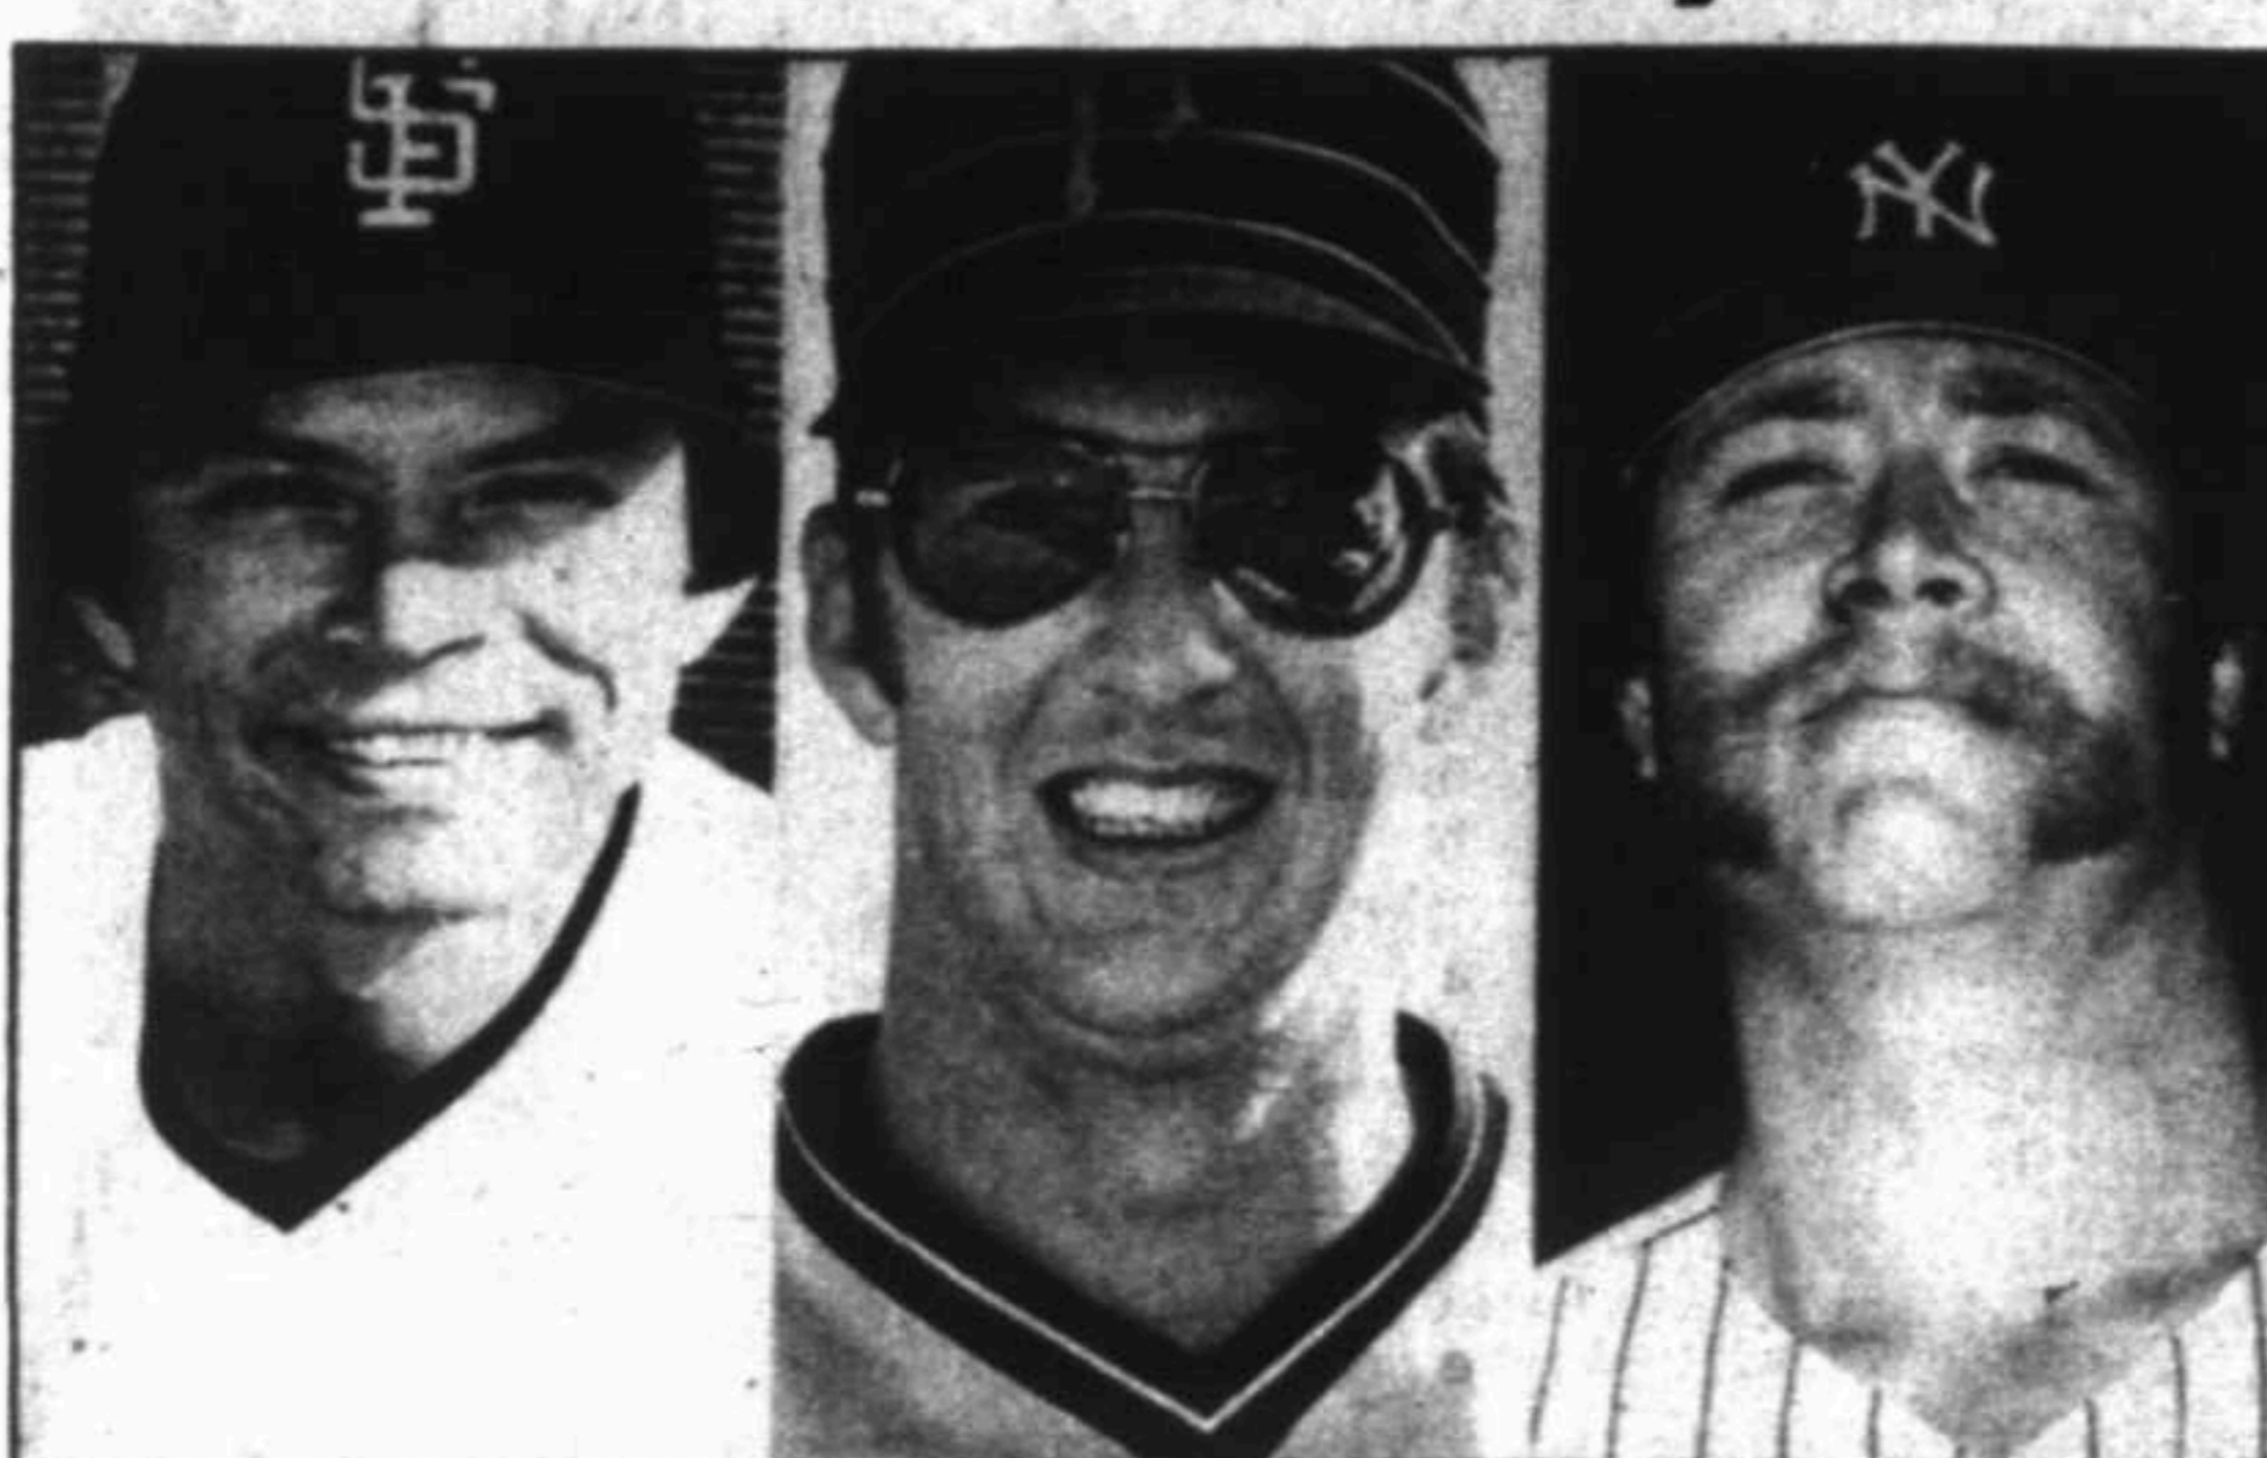

"AS FAR AS a player is concerned, they may now see some danger in going for the re-entry draft," Al Campanis, Los Angeles Dodgers vice president, said. "People are going more for their own farm systems. Some players in the future who aren't outstanding might think twice about becoming free agents."

The Dodgers, who traditionally have eschewed the draft, were not alone in thinking this way. Even the New York Yankees, rebuilt in the 1970s through free agency, chose only one player in the draft, Darrell Evans of the San Francisco Giants. The busiest drafter was the Texas Rangers, who picked 13 players. Seattle took 12, Toronto 11 and Pittsburgh 10. But 13 clubs, half of those in the major leagues, selected five or fewer players.

"WE CAME here with the intent of drafting only one player," Yankees General Manager Murray Cook said. "The Baltimore Orioles had a lot to do with this. When they won the American League pennant this year, it had a profound effect on the approach of a lot of teams."

"They're going more with their farm systems and away from free agency," Cook said. Evans was the No. 1 pick in the draft, selected by 17 teams. The next two most popular players were relief pitchers Kent Tekulve of Pittsburgh, who was selected 12 times, and Rich Gossage of the Yankees, who was picked by 11 teams. Two players, pitcher Dan Schatzeder of Montreal and first baseman-outfielder Dennis Walling of Houston, were chosen by eight teams. Six players — pitchers Jerry

Darrell Evans Kent Tekulve Goose Gossage

Koosman of the Chicago White Sox, Frank LaCorte of Houston, Larry Sorensen of Cleveland and Milt Wilcox of Detroit; outfielder Oscar Gamble of the Yankees, and utilityman Derrel Thomas of Los Angeles — were chosen by seven teams.

BUT SEVERAL of the big-name free agents received little or no attention in the draft, which was completed in 18 rounds. Rod Carew of the California Angels, a seven-time AL batting champion who hit .339 in 1983, was not chosen at all. Manny Trillo of Montreal, a second baseman, was chosen once (Chicago White Sox), and only two clubs each picked catcher Ted Simmons of Milwaukee (Pittsburgh, San Francisco) and outfielder Dave Parker of Pittsburgh (Cincinnati, Seattle).

"Many of these players are leaving contracts that are awfully strong," Expos President John McHale said, "and if there's a great rush for these players, I would suppose they'd think they could get even more."

"Clubs all think somewhat alike when they say, 'Are these players playing at an important position and are they going to do that much for the club?' And perhaps they are reaching the same answer, 'no,'" McHale said.

Tekulve and Wilcox were the only Type A players, all of whom were pitchers, to elicit much interest. Tom Underwood of Oakland was picked just once. Doug Bair of Detroit was selected twice and Dennis Lamp of the White Sox five times.

LIKEWISE, the Type B players, Trillo and outfielder Ruppert Jones of San Diego, were unpopular. While Trillo was picked just once, Jones was picked by only three teams.

Campanis said some of these players might find themselves to be "real free agents. If I'm in that position, I think it would put a little fear into my heart."

And he said those players picked by less than four clubs might not be getting any bargain by being able to deal with any team.

"That could mean there'll be nobody knocking on their doors," Campanis said. "Now they have to do a little solicitation, a little selling to even get a job."

'Lincoln' ignored in draft

Peter Seitz goes unmentioned

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
Baseball staged its eighth free agent draft Monday at a midtown New York hotel but there was no mention of the man who made the decision that changed the face of the game.

To ballplayers, basking in their million-dollar contracts, arbitrator Peter Seitz was their Abraham Lincoln. He freed the diamond "slaves." But to the club bosses, sitting around their white-cloth tables and poring over sheaths of charts, there remains a deep thread of lingering resentment.

AFTER ALL, Seitz was the guy who uprooted baseball's financial structure by ruling that, once a player has completed his contract, he is free to sign with a club of his choosing. In so doing, he erased the reserve clause which bound a player to one club for life (or until traded or sold) and allowed players to sell their skills on the open market.

It was a touchy baseball law that even the Supreme Court dared not tamper with.

Peter Seitz died last month in New York at age 78, leaving a legacy that had an enduring impact on the sport.

After eight years, is baseball better or worse off than under the reserve clause?

"Obviously, the players benefited," said Bob Howsam, vice-president and chief executive officer of the Cincinnati Reds, who spurned the first free agent draft in 1976. "As for baseball, it's been on and off."

"It has helped some clubs, hurt others. We cannot go back to the reserve clause but we can develop means whereby clubs can hang on better to those players they have spent years in developing."

HANK PETERS, who holds a similar position with the world champion Baltimore Orioles, agreed and added that Seitz' arbitration ruling had caused an economic upheaval, the effect of which has not yet been fully determined.

"It's too early to tell," he said. "Before free agency, the knock on the reserve clause was, 'Why should a player be made to stay with a club if he doesn't want to?' But I don't think there is as much movement now as most people thought."

"Nobody says you have to sign a player for an exorbitant sum. Certain clubs have gone overboard. We have lost good men that hurt like hell. But we have survived by concentrating on player development. It's the system. You can't stick your head in the sand."

Al Campanis, vice-president in charge of playing personnel for the successful Los Angeles Dodgers, said the Dodgers have readjusted by putting more emphasis on growing their talent on the farm and dipping lightly into the free agent pool to meet crucial needs.

"FREE AGENCY definitely helped the Yankees," Campanis added. "George Steinbrenner was pretty prolific with his money and bought pennants by picking up players such as Reggie Jackson and Tommy John. But that's not our way. As some sage once said, 'If you don't know where you are going, any road will lead you there.'"

"Yankees' General Manager Murray Cook said he finds free agency has set off a salary spiral that gets higher every year.

"Obviously it must balance out," he said. "The ceiling is not unlimited. It can't go on forever. We cannot legislate the reserve clause back into existence — it would create a hornet's nest — but reason can prevail."

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, whose 14-year tenure ends in December, a few years ago warned that free agency was a "ticking bomb," hanging over the game and threatening to create a wide gap between baseball's wealthy "haves" and struggling "have nots."

"The impact of free agency is a mixed bag," the commissioner said. "It creates some off-season excitement. A positive influence is that it will encourage more clubs to develop their own players. On the negative side, I am concerned that rising budgets will have an adverse affect on ticket prices."

"I never opposed free agency, as such. It's too bad the arbitrator's decision caught the owners by surprise before they could work out a fair system. But it isn't true that free agency brought about the enormous growth in attendance."

NFL REPORT

Despite success, Chuck Noll never coach of year

An AP Sports Analysis
By BRUCE LOWITT

Chuck Noll has never been Coach of the Year. Chuck Noll has four Super Bowl rings. Call it a triumph of substance over style.

Style is two teams throwing the ball all over the field and running up final scores approximating high school basketball games.

Substance is winning. The National Football League, ever mindful that pizzazz sells, spends each offseason looking for new and different ways to open up the offense.

And, each season, Noll finds new and different ways to shut it down.

His Pittsburgh Steelers might well have crumbled under the loss of Terry Bradshaw, their starting quarterback, and enough injuries to count on two hands.

But Noll and the Steelers have adapted. Their defense is vastly different than the Steel Curtain of the 1970s, yet almost as effective. Only one team in the American Conference has allowed fewer points this year.

Pittsburgh has become the 'winningest' team in the AFC, owner of a six-game winning streak and a three-game lead over Cleveland in the Central Division with six games remaining.

Contrast that to Coach Don Coryell's San Diego Chargers and their Steel Sieve defense.

For years, the Chargers were survivors, not so much defeating the opposition as outlasting it. No playoff team scored more points or allowed more than the Chargers did in 1982 ... and in 1981 ... and in 1980

... and when they lost their quarterback, Dan Fouts, and a fistful of starters, their defense couldn't carry them through the lean games and they crumbled.

Only one team in the conference has allowed more points this year and the Chargers have lost four in a row and are 3-7 and last in the AFC West.

Only the NFL's success at achieving parity — nine of the conference's 14 teams are at 500 or within a game of it — is keeping San Diego in the running at all.

In the '70s, when the Steelers were labeled an NFL dynasty, the bulk of the defense from year to year was carried essentially by 11 players, with only an occasional substitution from time to time.

This year, Noll has 18 or 19 defensive players shuttling in and out, sharing the playing time almost equally. With free safety Ron Johnson, nose tackle Gary Dunn and defensive end John Goodman among the missing at one time or another, the coach has managed to make the mix of youngsters like defensive end Keith Gary and veterans like linebacker Jack Lambert work.

"I think it's the attitude of the people who are playing the game that makes the difference," Noll said when asked to reflect on the similarity of the Steelers' and Chargers' injuries and the opposite directions of the two teams. "The guys believe that they can do it. We have guys that are looking for the opportunity to play. Sometimes an injury allows somebody to step in and play and then the other fellow doesn't get a chance to come back."

"We're still growing right now. What's happening is that a lot of people are getting experience because of those injuries and that's going to make us better in the long run."

Among the injured Chargers this year have been free safety Tim Fox, strong safeties Andre Young and Bob Gregor and linebacker Cliff Thrift. Coryell, in a crash rebuilding program, has four rookies starting on defense. For the time being, it's not working.

Perhaps in this era of more scoring, more yardage, more everything, Pittsburgh is proving that less still is better.

"The whole idea of the game," says Coryell, "is to score more points than the other people."

"If they can't score," says Keith Gary, "they can't win." The defense rests.

Top four unchanged in college grid poll

By Associated Press

Nebraska, Texas, Auburn and Georgia held on to the top four spots in the Associated Press college football poll today, while Illinois moved ahead of Miami into fifth place and traditional powers Oklahoma and Notre Dame fell out of the Top Twenty and were replaced by Clemson and Pitt.

Nebraska, which routed Iowa State 72-29, received 58 of 80 first-place votes and 1,198 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Texas, a 9-3 winner over Houston, received the other two first-place ballots and 1,140 points. Last week, with 59 voters, participating, Nebraska led Texas 57-2 in first-place votes and 1,178-1,123 in points.

Auburn defeated Maryland 35-23 and remained in third place with 1,063 points — the losers dropped from seventh to 11th — and Georgia's 10-9 squeaker over Florida kept the Bulldogs fourth with 999 points, while pushing Florida from ninth to 14th. Auburn visits Georgia on Saturday.

However, Illinois' 50-23 victory over Minnesota boosted the Illini from sixth to fifth with 975 points, while Miami's 12-7 triumph over East Carolina on a touchdown with 1:04 remaining dropped the Hurricanes from fifth to sixth with 951 points.

UIL changes physical exam rules for '84

AUSTIN (AP) — Starting next school year, Texas high school athletes will no longer be required by the University Interscholastic League to undergo annual physical exams.

School districts still will be allowed to require the annual exams, but the UIL rule will mandate physicals only at the start of junior high school and high school.

In other years, the new UIL rule requires only a health questionnaire.

The UIL system is based on advice from the Texas Medical Association, which said large urban schools have trouble doing physical exams on athletes.

Dr. David Campbell, head of the TMA's sports medicine committee, said "the new system staggers physicals so the quality has to be better."

Bill Farney, UIL athletic director, said the annual questionnaire "scans the entire periphery of what is done in the medical exam." The questionnaire will be filled out by athletes' parents.

The UIL will allow a physician, school nurse, trainer-coach or principal to review the forms.

WAC honors Mowry

DENVER (AP) — Wyoming linebacker Bruce Mowry was named the Western Athletic Conference's defensive player of the week Monday for his performance against New Mexico.

Wyoming lost 17-10 Saturday in Albuquerque, but Mowry was credited with 13 unassisted tackles and four assists. A junior from Kemmerer, Wyo., Mowry also had a fumble recovery and a quarterback hurry in Saturday's game.

Others nominated for defensive honors this week were linebacker Greg Zolniger of Air Force, defensive back Mark Allen of Brigham Young, defensive tackle Stan Hornung of Colorado State, New Mexico linebacker Gary Butler and linebacker Raymond Morris of Texas-El Paso.

E. Illinois gridders boycott practice

CHARLESTON, Ill. (AP) — Eastern Illinois football players, miffed at having to take a five-hour bus ride to a game when they expected a one-hour flight, boycotted practice Monday.

The Panthers, 8-2 and ranked No. 11 in the NCAA division I-AA poll, were to fly Friday to Bowling Green, Ky., for their final regular season game against Western Kentucky.

But because of finances, the university decided to bus the team rather than fly, reversing travel arrangements that had been made during the summer, said sports information director David Kidwell.

"The players would rather fly, but so would everybody else," Kidwell said. The team has flown to one other game at Akron, but also was busied on an even longer trip to Northeast Missouri.

Rangers, Cranes, Badgers press on

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Area Football

Three area districts concluded play last Friday, so for many of the Permian Basin teams it's time to look towards the basketball season. But for three teams, the playoffs loom this weekend. As for the districts with regular seasons to end, no area team has a playoff hope left.

Greenwood's Rangers clinched district two weeks ago, but the Rangers ended the regular season on the right note, winning a 35-15 decision at Garden City. The Rangers travel to Stanton this week for the first round of the class A playoffs. Greenwood faces the district 7-A north zone runner-up, Klondike, in a 7:30 p.m. start at Buff Stadium.

The Rangers finished 8-2, and Klondike was 5-5. Greenwood's eight wins came consecutively, and the Rangers have not tasted defeat since losing at home to top rated Wink Sept. 9.

The Rangers could meet the 'Cats again later on down the road.

lead option, but may be in for a real battle. Marfa is very good.

Other teams ending their season last week were Reagan County and Stanton, both of district 8-AA. Stanton's loss ended their season and playoff hopes on a down note. The Buffs finished 4-6.

Reagan County ended a frustrating year with a 24-0 loss to district champ Wall. The Owls posted a 2-8 mark in 1983.

District 6-A Rankin winds up its dismal year with a home game against equally unimpressive Fort Davis. Pride is all that is at stake for the Red Devils, 19 young men who have braved a great deal in 1983. Rankin has scored only 33 points this year, but Fort Davis hasn't exactly overpowered anyone. Rankin could finish a notch higher in the district standings with a win. Last week, Rankin took a beating, literally, at the hands of Wink by a 63-0 score. The Devils will attest to Wink's lofty rating.

THE OTHER area playoffs are both district runners-up. Crane (6-AAA) and McCamey (8-AA) wrapped up playoff spots Friday, but the pressure was on in both games. Crane, 9-0-1, risked playoff elimination to Colorado City but relied on Jim Vasquez' 218 yards and two TD's rushing to seal the 21-14 win.

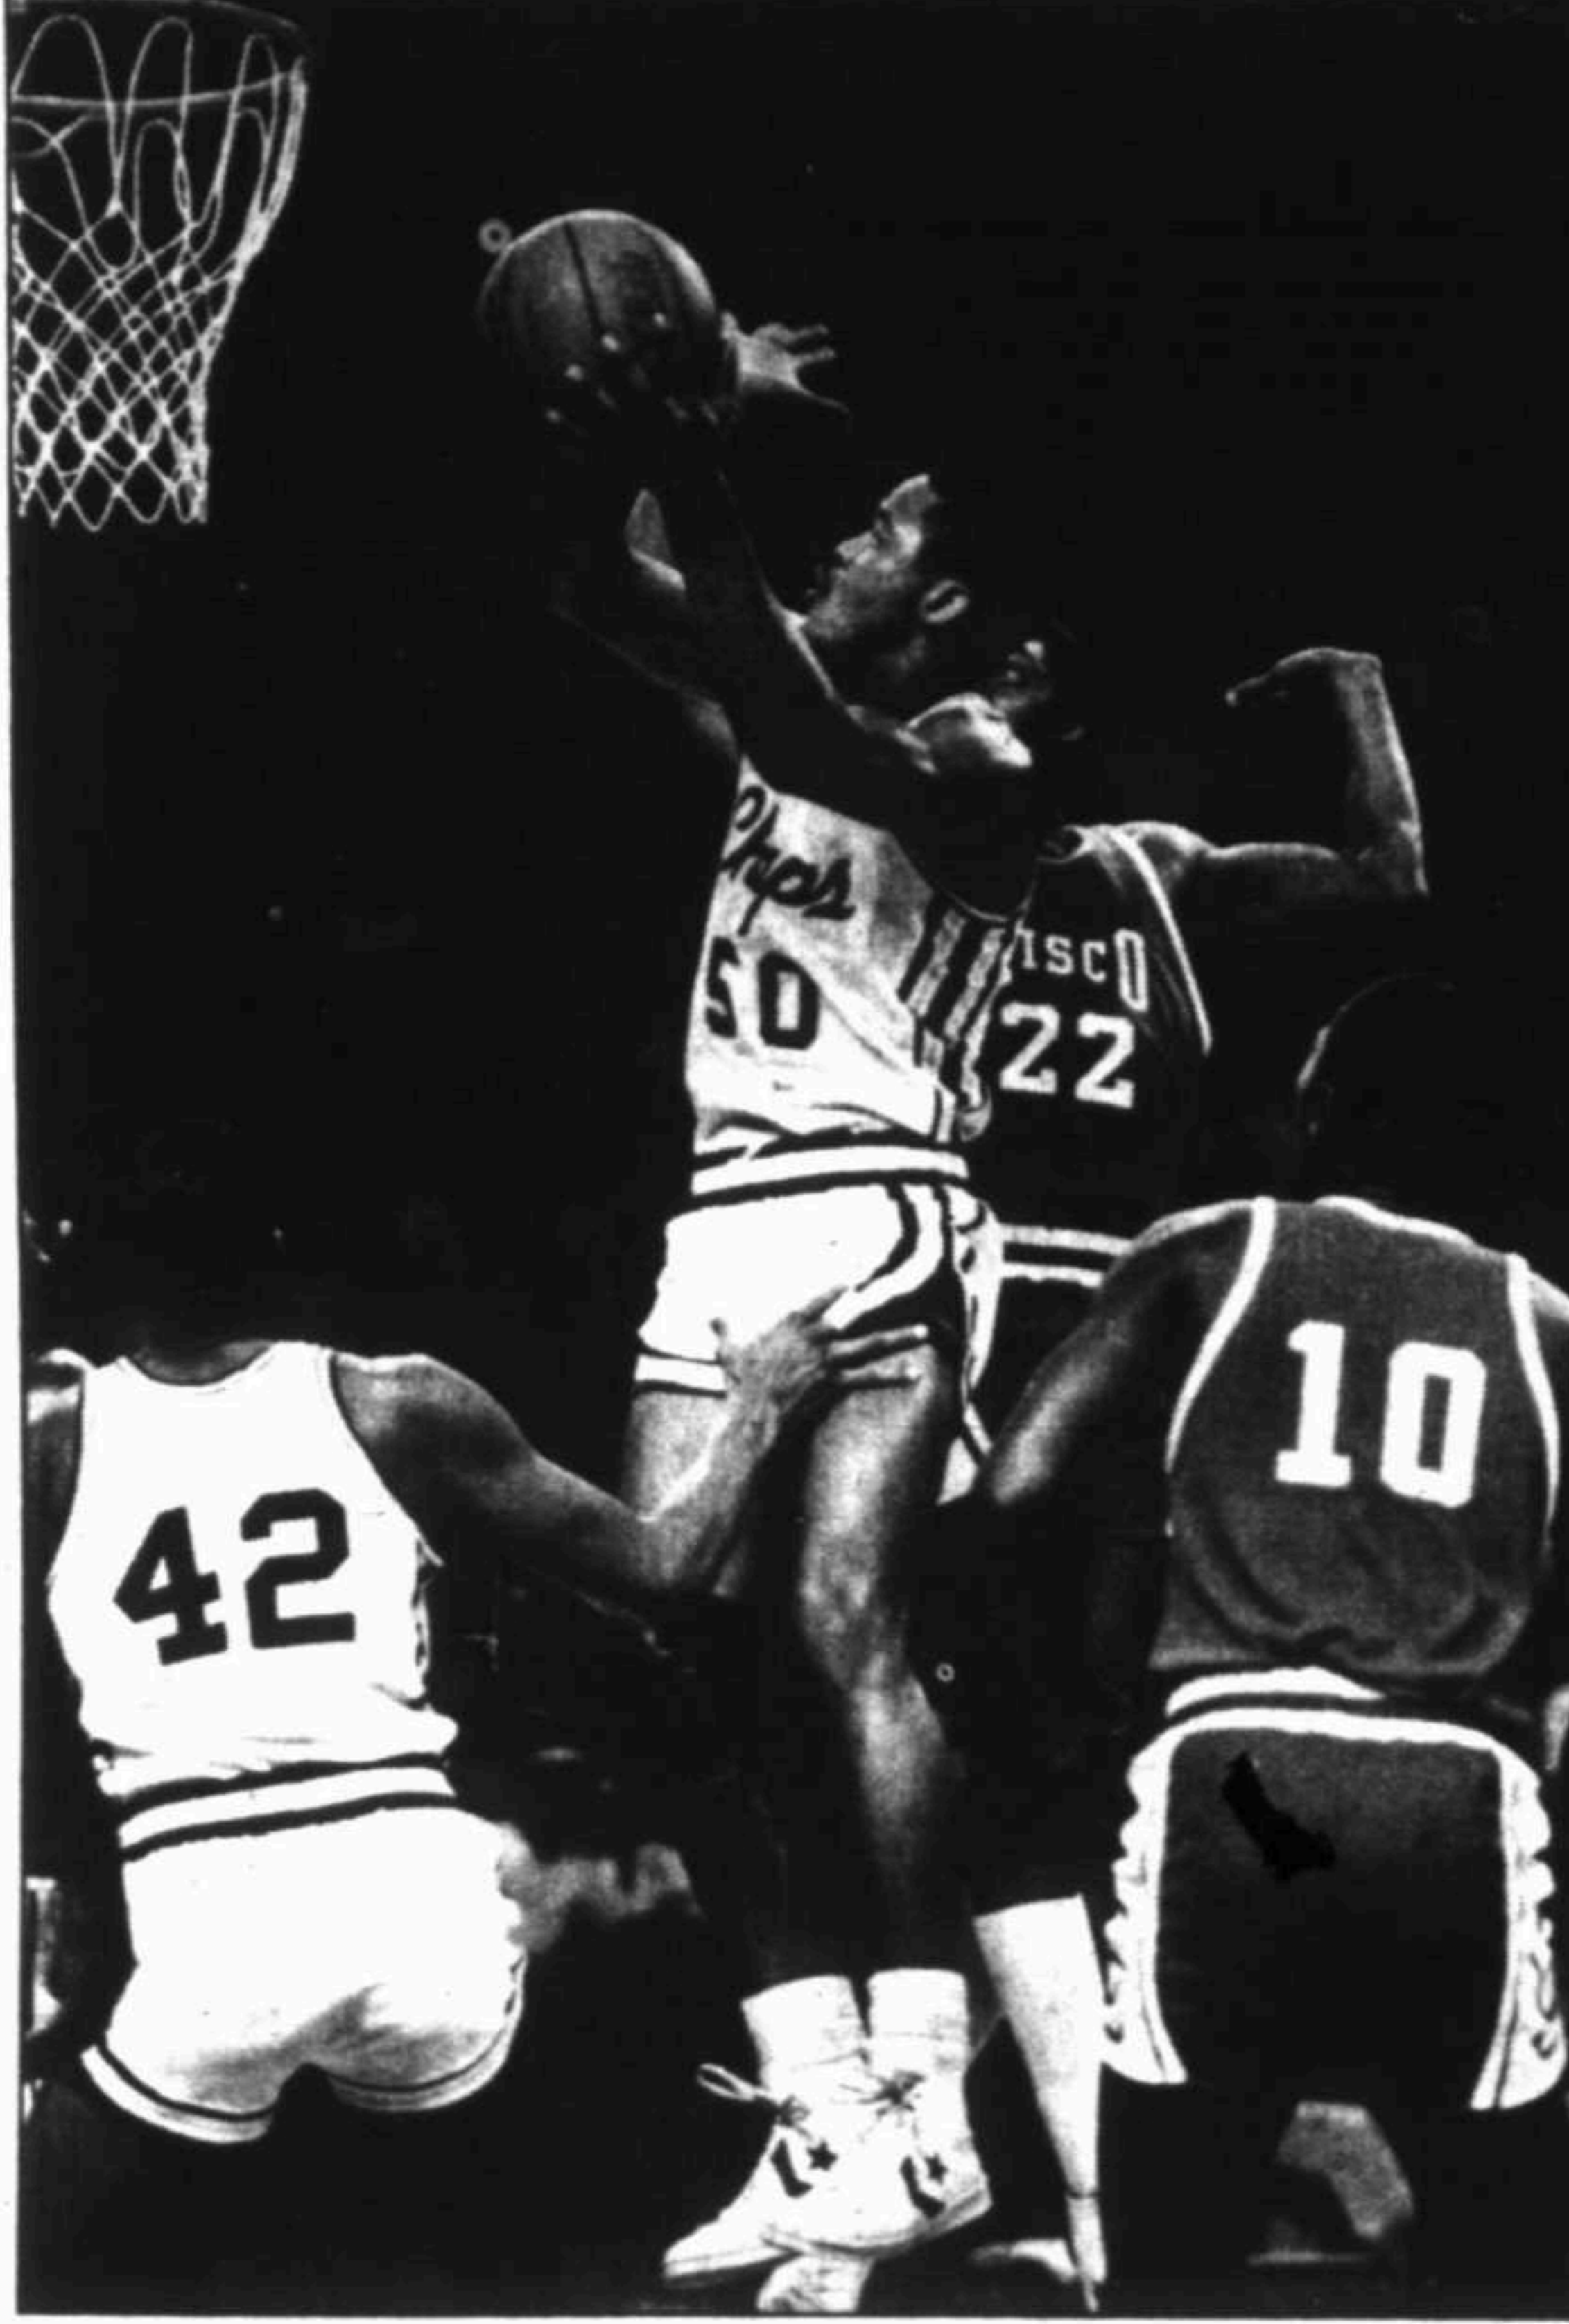

IN DISTRICT 2-AAAA, Lamesa travels to Andrews to end the season for both schools. The two went about different manners in arriving at this last game.

Lamesa, much improved at 2-7, lost their last non-district battle to the same Mustangs by a 39-0 count. Since then, Lamesa has played well but hasn't won many games. Coach Clyde Nonkester's first year must be tabbed a success despite the non-winning record. The Tors lost last Friday to Fort Stockton, 56-20.

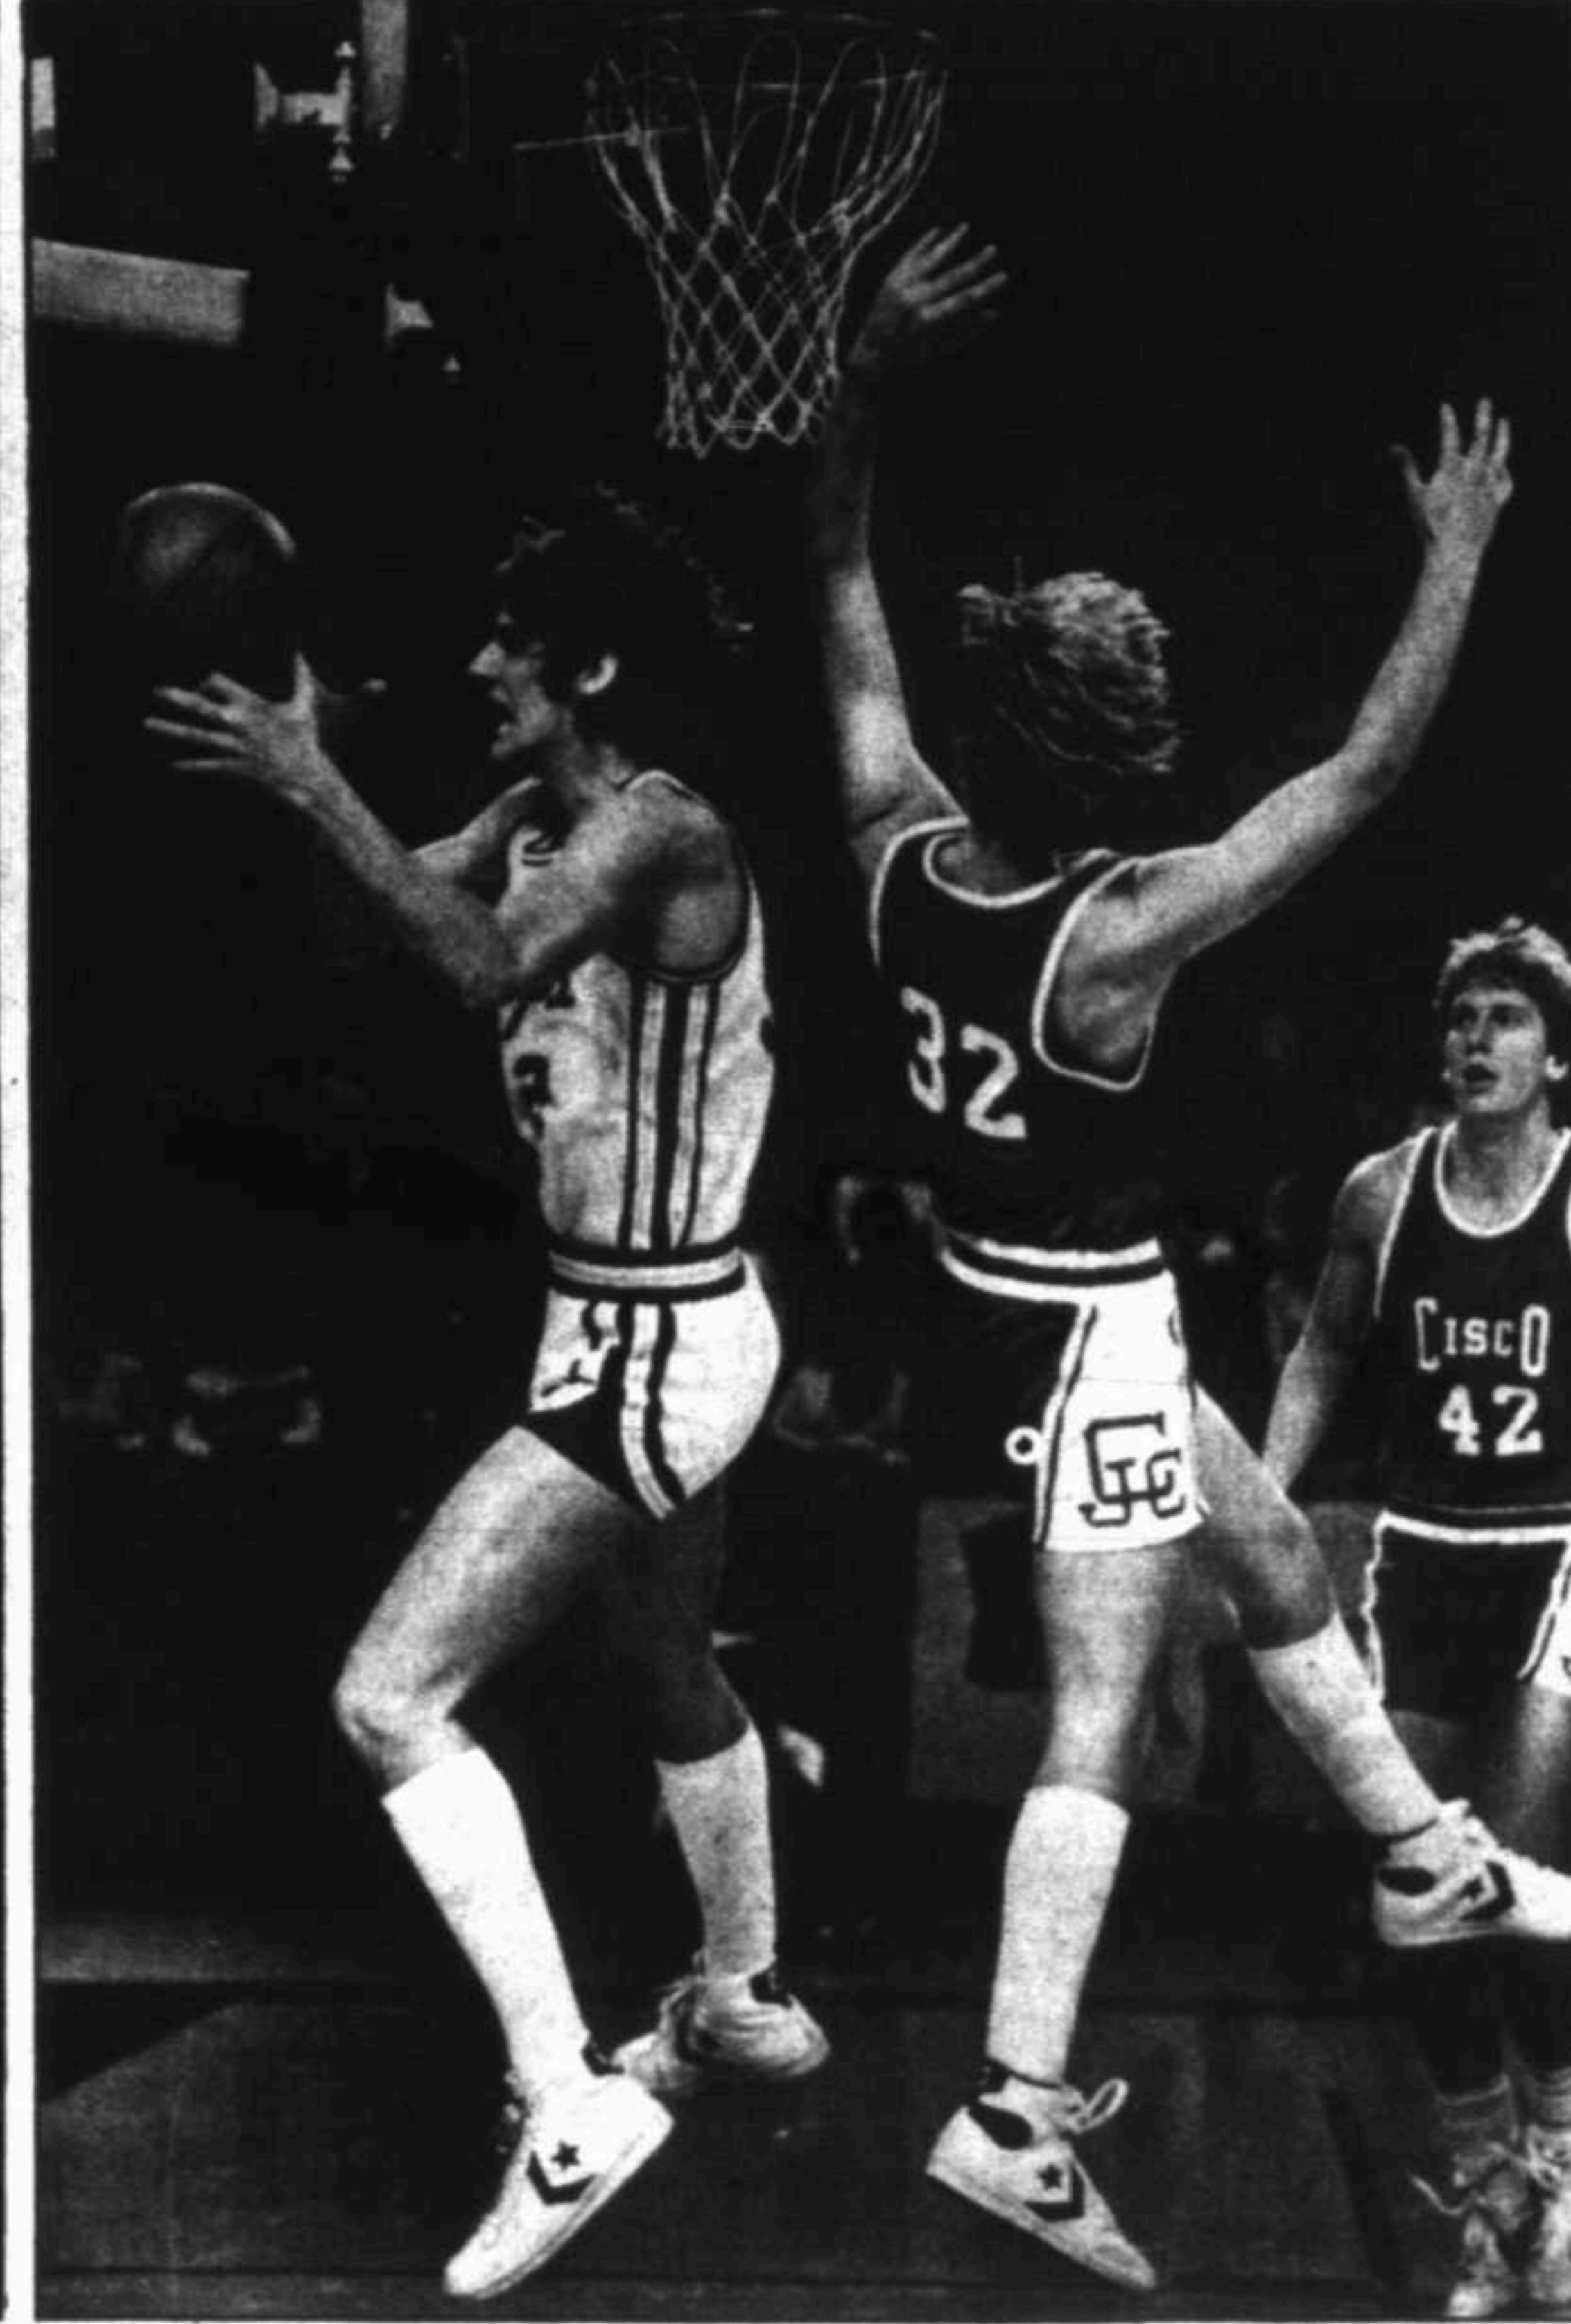

Andrews was 3-0 after that win in September, then the Mustangs fell apart. Despite a 54-12 blowout of district doormat Snyder last Friday, Andrews is only 5-3-1. The Mustangs are waiting until next year.

McCamey also faced elimination, but overcame Stanton 31-6 behind the leadership of 1982 All-District quarterback Ray Zarate.

Andrews was 3-0 after that win in September, then the Mustangs fell apart. Despite a 54-12 blowout of district doormat Snyder last Friday, Andrews is only 5-3-1. The Mustangs are waiting until next year.

Midland College's Jackie Phinnessee (50) ignores heavy traffic to go for two against Cisco's Auldon Robinson (22) and Lincoln Jones (10). Lawrence Chumbley (42) gets ready to catch Jackie, should he get hung up on hoop.

'No Mas' still hangs over Duran

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Three years have passed since Roberto Duran turned his back and walked away from Sugar Ray Leonard, losing the welterweight championship under the disgrace of "No Mas." Marvelous Marvin Hagler believes the cloud of that tumultuous loss still hangs over the proud Panamanian.

And that, says Hagler, could spell trouble for Duran when he reaches for the middleweight title Thursday night against the bald brawler who has not lost a fight in more than seven years.

"He's got a lot of pride and a lot of pressure because of that thing that happened," Hagler said. "It could be bad because he could stand in there and take a beating. If it goes 15, he'll take a beating."

Hagler has been known to administer those before, and the warmup shirt he wore for four rounds of sparring Monday delivered the message. "Destruction And Destroy," it said on the front. "Don't Play With Him, Bust Him Up," was the advice on the back.

From Duran's standpoint, the battle of New Orleans, when he abandoned his title against Leonard, is ancient history. He has come miles from there, first discarded as a washed-up quitter, and then reaching into a reservoir of determination to fight his way back to another title.

"I am redeemed," he said after his workmanlike wipeouts of Pipino Cuevas last January and Davey Moore for the World Boxing Association junior middleweight crown last June. That gave Duran his third championship — he earlier owned both the lightweight and welterweight crowns — and if he conquers Hagler he will become the first man in boxing history to win four titles.

It is no small incentive.

Old friend Luis Spada, who stayed with Duran when others thought he was through, guided him through those comeback bouts and is convinced that his man is in the best shape of his career for Hagler. Spada also sees no problem moving up in weight class to the 160-pound division.

"I am sure Roberto is in shape and when he is in shape, he can beat anybody from the middleweight division down," said Spada.

The victories over Cuevas and Moore positioned Duran for this $20 million bonanza in the outdoor stadium constructed in the parking lot at Caesars Palace. And nobody is happier about that than Hagler, who has been hungering for that big payday but never had anybody in the other corner who could help him produce it.

Hagler's purse is a guaranteed $5 million and Duran will get $4 million. When percentages from other income are added, the package could balloon to a combined $15 million. That's why there is a certain respect in his voice when Hagler talks about Duran.

"Duran is gutsy," he said. "He'll fight anybody. And he has an edge because he's been through this (the big fight buildup) before."

Hagler also is aware of Duran's reputation and the shape Moore's eye was in after being prodded with a thumb early in their fight.

"Sure, I think he's dirty," Hagler said. "And he'll get more dirty when he's in trouble. But when I dump Duran, there will be no excuses."

Spada believes that each of the four losses in Duran's fabulous career have come because the fighter was not in shape. And Duran, who has sparred nearly 250 rounds and run 300 miles for this fight, pledges that will not be a problem on Thursday night.

"I think I trained harder for this fight than for any fight of my life, because I am going for the fourth title and most people say Marvin Hagler is invincible."

That is understandable Hagler has won 31 fights since 1976 with only a draw in a title fight against champion Vito Antuofermo Nov. 30, 1979 marring the streak. He is convinced he won that fight, too, but all the draw did was delay his claiming the division crown for a year. Hagler won it by knocking out Alan Minter on Sept. 27, 1980 — barely two months before Duran's "No Mas" loss to Leonard.

Studley ruffles feelings of Campbell, Nielsen

HOUSTON (AP) — As if Houston Oilers coach Chuck Studley didn't have enough to worry about with his team in a 17-game losing streak, he is now faced with dealing with the damaged feelings of individual players.

Studley apparently tripped over Earl Campbell's ego while trying to preserve him from possible bodily injury in Sunday's 55-14 loss to Cincinnati.

Campbell gained 42 yards on 16 carries before being called to the sidelines for the rest of the game. Campbell reacted angrily, saying he was treated like a dog and suggested if the Oilers didn't want to use him, they should trade him.

Studley also benched starting quarterback Gifford Nielsen and turned the game over to Oliver Luck, who also will start Sunday's game in the Astrodome against the Detroit Lions.

Nielsen is licking his wounds privately, however.

But Studley is still faced with trying to repair the lost confidence of Nielsen, soothe Campbell's hurt feelings and give a boost to the entire team.

"I think it simply was a case of him verbally venting some frustrations that had built up in his mind," Studley said of Campbell's rare outburst. "I have no idea what he said but as far as I'm concerned there was no harm intended and no harm done."

Studley said he talked with Campbell Monday and said he would make the same decision again under similar circumstances.

"I made no effort to apologize or explain it to Earl," Studley said. "It was my decision to remove him from the game. I thought it was the right thing to do for Earl Campbell and for the football team."

Campbell went into the game with 659 rushing yards on 151 carries. In addition to being removed without being told, Campbell complained that his benching kept him from attaining personal goals.

Campbell will be back in the lineup Sunday when the Oilers host Detroit but Nielsen will remain on the sidelines while the Oilers put Luck under the gun.

"There's no way we could go into the next draft not knowing where we stand with our starting quarterback and our backup," Studley said. "We have to know what Oliver can do."

As for Nielsen, it was just another wrong turn in a star-crossed career filled with injuries and questions about his durability.

"I'm a little bit down but I don't think my career is over," Nielsen said.

"I can play in this league. I've won big games for this team. I'm not giving up. I will never give up on myself. Right now I'm going to lick my wounds privately."

Drilco plant to remain in Midland

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-energy Writer

Drilco Industrial, a division of Smith International Inc., is here to stay said Jim Brand, vice president and general manager of Drilco's Midland manufacturing plant.

"I'm very, very pleased that Smith International has recognized the importance of this operation and its involvement in the Permian Basin area," Brand said.

The recent announcement ends several months of speculation that Drilco, a supplier of drilling tools and equipment to the mining and construction industries, would be closing the Midland plant.

Rumors began earlier this year, said Brand, when Drilco, like many industries in the Permian Basin, began laying off workers. In addition, Smith International began studying the possibility of consolidating its manufacturing plants across the country.

"The study began approximately six months ago with the downturn in both the petroleum and industrial markets," Brand said.

Brand was pleased to say the results of the study indicated that it was in Smith's best interest to continue their operations in Midland. Which, he said, was good news to the plant's 160 employees and to the city.

"Obviously it is important to us. This is important to Midland because it means at least 160 jobs, that had the move been made, those jobs would have disappeared. The city would have also lost a good citizen.

"Drilco Industrial has been such a good corporate citizen of this city for so many years, we grew up with this city. Management, as well as all of the employees here, have been extremely active in civic affairs such as United Way, Junior Achievement and the Chamber of Commerce. I'm just tickled to death to be able to give some good news to our employees and to the city right now, they need it," Brand said.

A long-time resident of the Permian Basin, Drilco Industrial, then a department of Drilco Oil Tools, was founded in Midland in 1949 by Stanley Moore. Drilco Industrial operated this way until 1974 when it became a separate division of Smith International.

Because the company and its founder have been such an integral part of Midland, the Permian Basin and Texas, in 1980, then Gov. William P. Clements declared the Midland plant a historical landmark and presented a plaque honoring the accomplishments of Moore and his company.

With the consolidation study completed, Drilco can once again concentrate on the future.

"Our long-range business plans indicate that there will be a slow improvement in our markets over the next three to four years. We expect our growth to parallel that improvement. Our order levels have improved in the last three months and we have a good solid workload for the remainder of this year," Brand said.

FDIC loans more time to Republic First Bank

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has approved Republic Bank First National Midland's request for a 30-day extension on the banks exclusive right to review and purchase loans from the old First National Bank of Midland.

Thomas J. Wageman, Republic Bank president, confirming the FDIC's approval said, "We hope to get the job done sooner, however, it is a comfort to know we have this (extension) should we need it."

Approximately 90 loans have already been bought back. Speaking last week at the Midland Lion's Club, Wageman said, the FDIC had taken over loans totaling in excess of $1 billion dollars and he would not speculate on the number of loans Republic Bank would be buying back. The extension will give the bank until mid-December to complete its loan purchases.

Wageman also denied rumors regarding possible layoffs at the bank. "There is absolutely no substance to this rumor at all. I don't know where people get these ideas. I think, if we were going to lay people off, I'd know about it," Wageman said.

Officials say report not true

HOUSTON (AP) —
Officials of a company whose drilling ship sank late last month in the South China Sea have denied a Chinese newspaper's report that the bodies of 78 crewmembers were found trapped in the vessel.

"That's false. I'm positive," Gary L. Kott said Monday night, referring to the report by the newspaper Ta Kung Poa. Kott is president of Global Marine Drilling Co. of Houston, owner of the Glomar
Java Sea.

The Chinese-language newspaper said in a dispatch from Canton that the 78 included 37 Americans, 34 Chinese, four British, one Canadian, one Australian and one Singaporean.

"I have no knowledge of that at all," Kott said.
"We're running the search."

He said he did not plan to check on the report until today.

Richard Vermeer, vice president of Global Marine Inc., the drilling firm's parent company, refused to comment on the report and said he would check on it today.

"If it's appropriate I'll put out a press release," he said.

The Glomar Java Sea sank during a typhoon
Oct. 26. Company officials have reported 80 crew members were aboard, but have refused to release a list of names.

The Chinese paper did not cite the source of its story and did not attempt to account for the other two workers.

Tanker fire burns out

PORT NECHES, Texas (AP) — About 175 people spent the night in a Red Cross center as firefighters watched a blaze aboard an oil tanker burn itself out, authorities said.

The fire broke out Monday when diesel fuel fumes apparently were ignited by welders making final adjustments on two newly installed generators, officials said.

One crewman was hospitalized for treatment of smoke inhalation, authorities said. No other injuries among about 40 other crewmen were reported.

Officials had planned to allow residents in a three- to four-block area around the ship to return home late Monday, but sent them instead to a center set up at an area school as a precautionary measure, police said.

The fire erupted in the engine room of the Mara Hope, a 71,000-ton tanker, about 7:30 p.m., said Alex Palamiotis, a representative for the Greek company that owns the ship.

The empty ship was scheduled to leave for Venezuela on Friday to pick up a load of crude oil for area refineries, Palamiotis said.

The fire was confined to the ship, "but we're evacuating people because of the potential danger if it blows," Patrolman Ricky Poss said early in the fire-fighting efforts.

But John Adams, vice president of operations for Coastal Marine Inc., which owns the maintenance facility where the ship was docked, said the blaze was "minor."

Later, however, a series of explosions occurred and fire officials said they feared for awhile that the fire would rage out of control again. The explosions apparently were caused by oxygen and acetylene bottles still on the ship, officials said.

Imported steel hurting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. International Trade Commission has ruled that imports of hot-rolled carbon from Belgium and West Germany are hurting U.S. producers.

The 40 decision Monday was made on an anti-dumping complaint filed by Gilmore Steel Corp. of Portland, Ore., which has argued that the plate imports have risen in its region, cutting into its market.

The Commerce Department and the European Community agreed last year on voluntary quotas limiting European exports to the United States. Fifteen domestic steel companies then agreed to withdraw 44 complaints against European producers. But Gilmore was not one of them.

Despite Gilmore's claim, overall imports of hot-rolled carbon plate are "down very sharply this year," because of the marketing arrangement, a Commerce Department official told the commission last month.

Imports in 1982 amounted to 1.5 million tons valued at $502 million, the commission said, noting total U.S. consumption was 5.4 million tons.

MMH directors accept bid for parking garage

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A low bid for the construction of a parking garage at Midland Memorial Hospital, submitted by J.W. Cooper of Odessa, was accepted by directors Monday after the construction firm reduced the number of days required for the project to be completed.

During the special meeting of directors, four bids were opened for the contract, which calls for the construction of a two-story parking garage to be built on the lot east of the hospital and facing Illinois Avenue.

J.W. Cooper constructed the original wing of the hospital, the second and third floors.

According to Chairman of the Board of Trustees Gene Abbott, the latest estimate by the architect for the project was $585,000.

J.W. Cooper made the low bid of $531,800 for the project. The highest bid came in at $598,800.

Second lowest bid, from Area Builders of Odessa, came in at $549,500. However, completion time was 120 calendar days, compared to the 180 calendar days proposed by J.W. Cooper.

Calling the 60-day difference "critically important," Abbott suggested asking J.W. Cooper to reduce the number of days to 130 "is not an unreasonable request because two of the bidders thought it could be done that fast."

Area Builders' completion time of 120 days was similar to that of HBF Construction's proposed 125 days.

Following telephone calls with the company, directors decided to award J.W. Cooper the contract with a completion time of 130 days from Nov. 15, the time the contract is expected to be signed and returned.

Although no penalty for delay was included in the bid notice, directors approved a $100-a-day penalty for each day the construction was late or a $100-a-day bonus for early completion.

Tentative plans for providing transportation to hospital employees was the expense which made the penalty necessary, according to directors.

About $600,000 of junior lien revenue bonds, approved last summer, will finance the project.

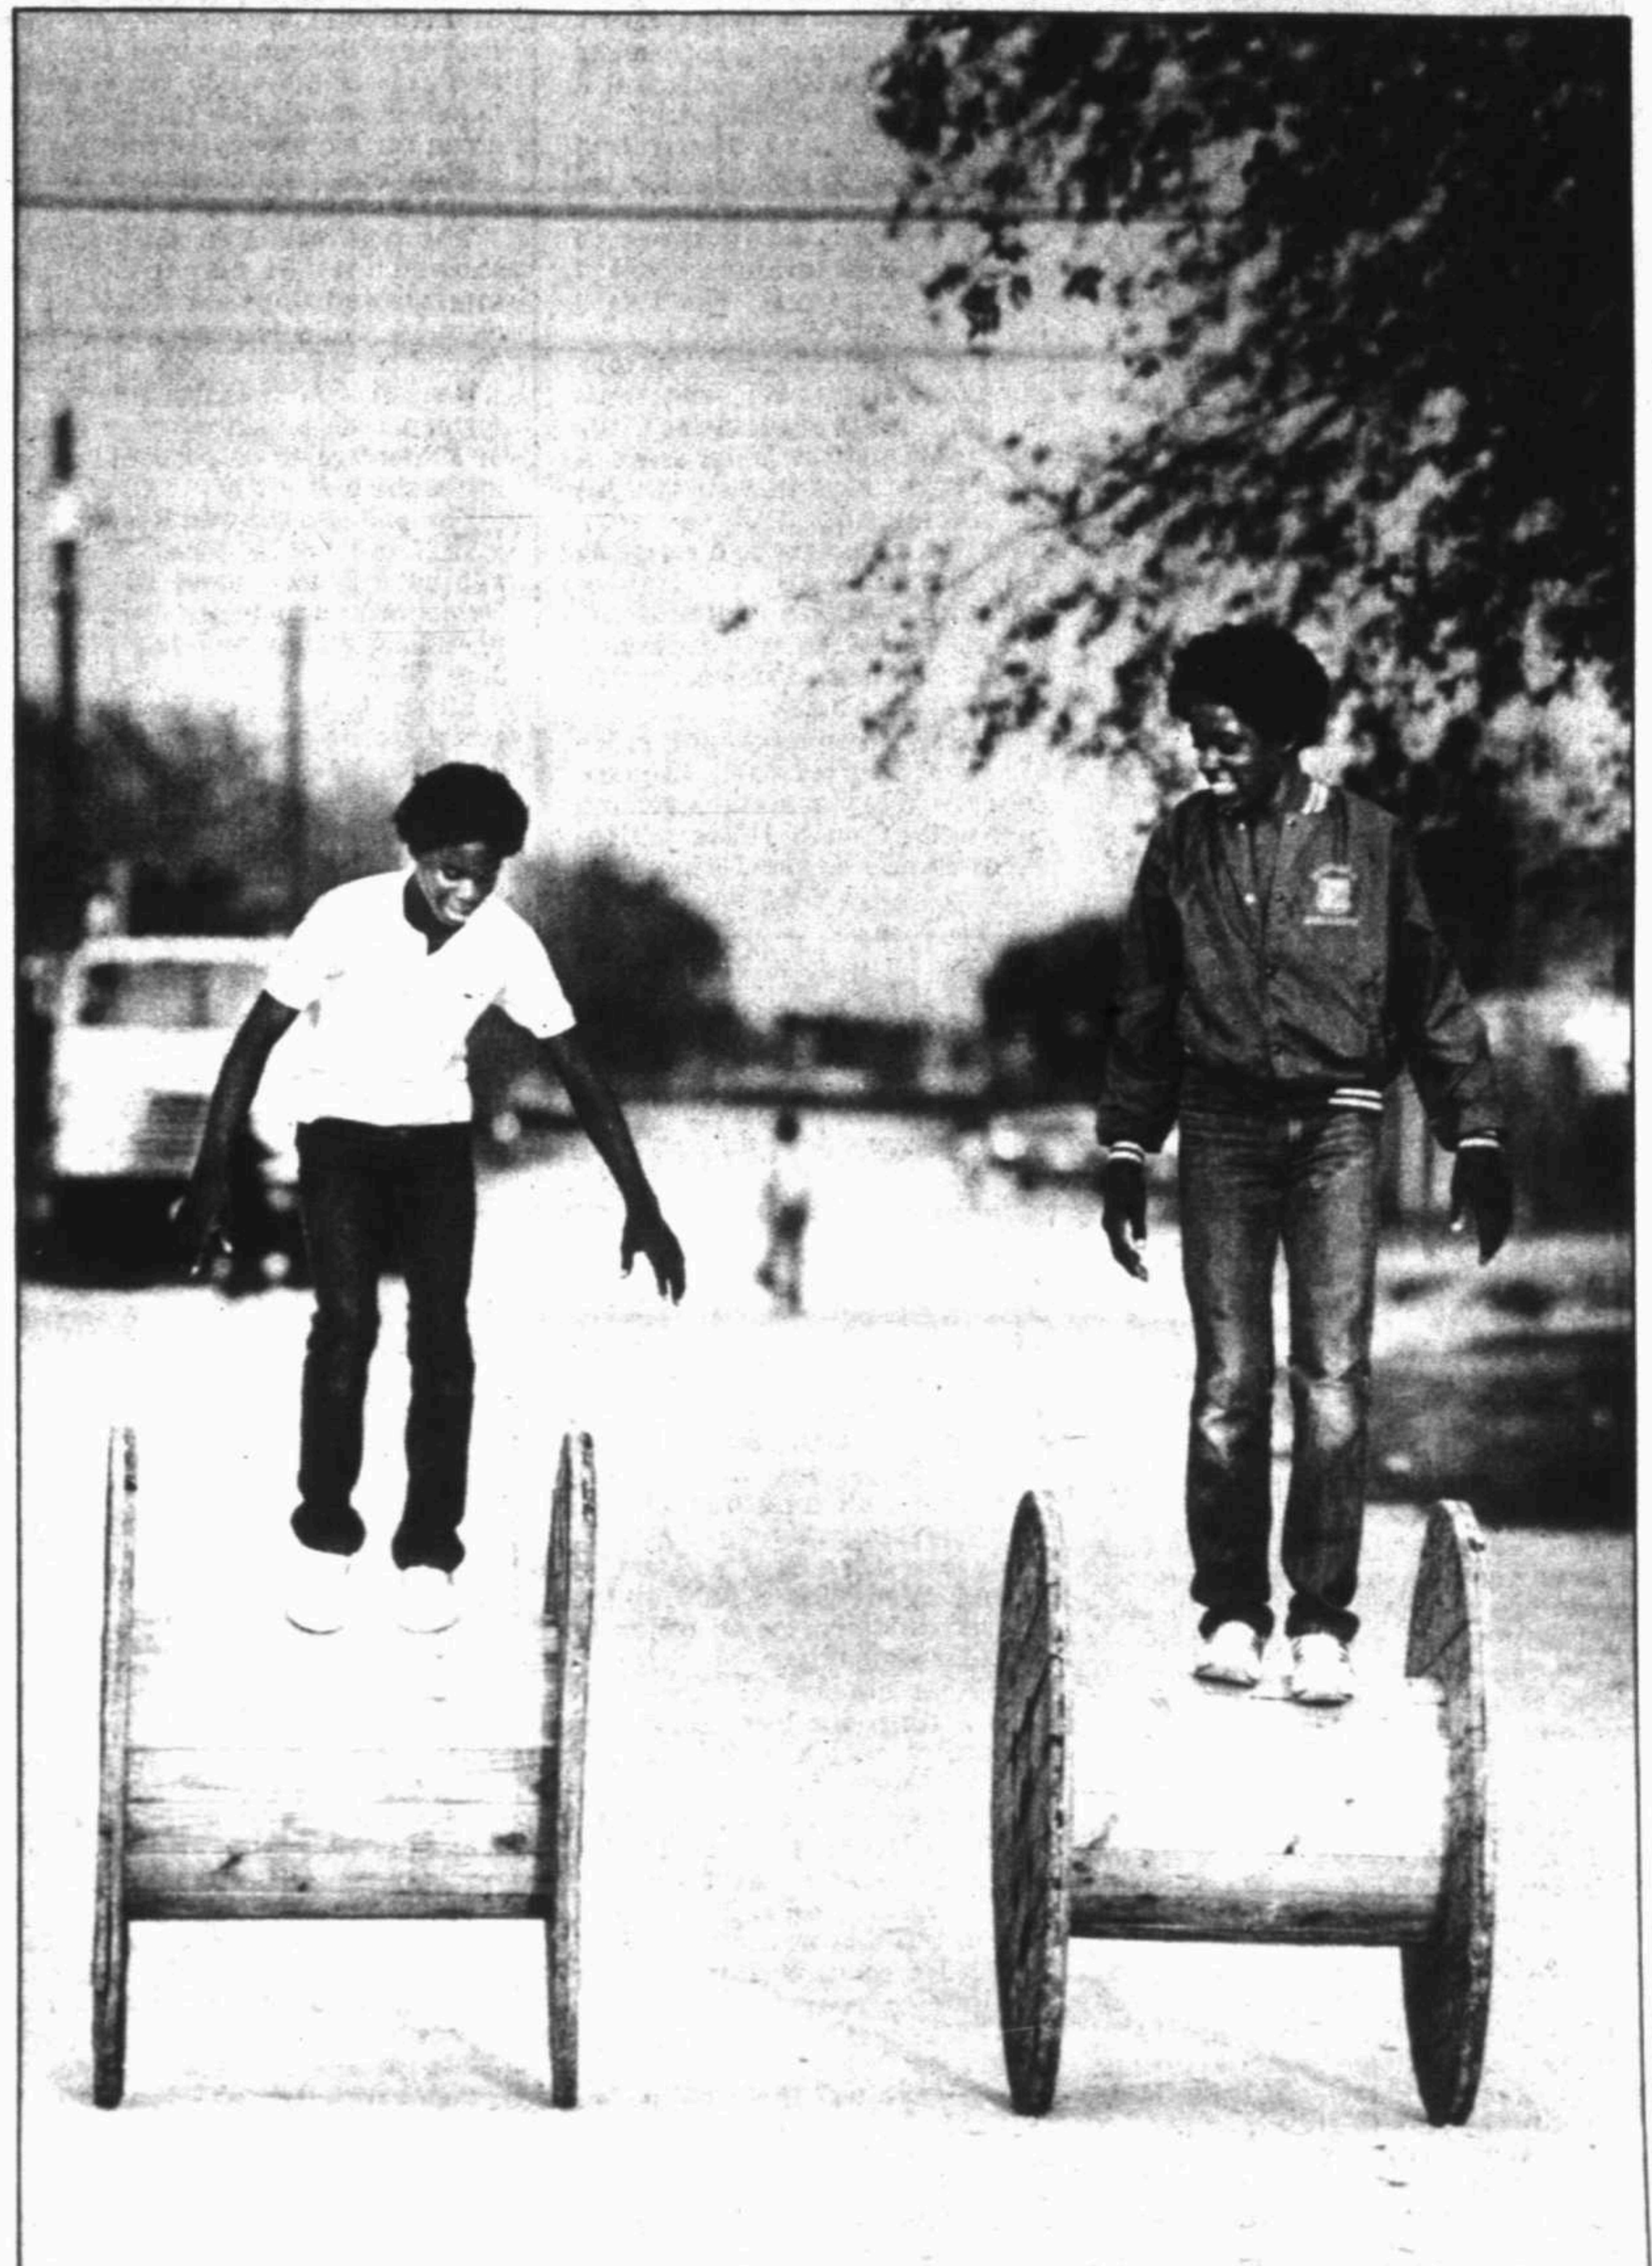

In other action, directors approved paying South Texas Construction Co. $29,000 for demolition of a gas station and resurfacing of the parking lot north of the hospital. The funds are to come out of the building fund, which has about $150,000 in it.

A check to Area Builders for $172,174 was approved by directors for remodeling to accommodate a new CT Scanner, a sophisticated X-ray machine. The scanner, approved by the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin Friday, is expected to arrive next week.

The money also will come from the junior lien revenue bonds.

Another $41,062 was awarded to Area Builders for items for the construction and renovation program which began in 1979. The items included stainless steel toilets and insulation.

Funds were to come from the permanent building fund.

Retired officer says deaths of troops 'served no purpose'

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Although the tragic deaths of more than 200 U.S. troops in Beirut "served no purpose," there's no one group the nation can strike back against, according to a visiting retired Marine Corps officer.

Retired Major General George Smith, who spoke at the Petroleum Club Monday, was in Midland to raise funds for the Marine Military Academy in Harlingen. Smith is the superintendent of the school, which houses 360 cadets from 13 to 19 years old.

Before answering a question about Lebanon, Smith said he was "not in a position to give any public utterances. As a retired military officer, my utterances are private."

He said the war in Lebanon "is based on religious principles which are centuries old."

While he said he was saddened by the deaths, Smith added, "I support the president's decision. We should fall on our knees and pray for that man every day. He has some tough decisions."

Another "tough" decision was the invasion of Grenada. Smith said Re-gan's decision to send troops to Grenada "was a great effort to fix" any Soviet and Cuban influences in the Caribbean.

Retired Maj. Gen. George Smith

"I don't know exactly why, but I have enough respect (for the president) that there was sufficient evidence held by him to suggest we had to do something about this," Smith said. "In my opinion, as a private citizen, there is no question that was the purpose."

Responding to the media's initial exclusion from the Grenada invasion, Smith said: "There cannot be 100 percent carte blanche exposure to the public."

The media indicated that accounts of the invasions were impossible to verify first-hand because reporters remained barred from Grenada.

However, according to Smith, the events in Lebanon and Grenada have brought about a "national spirit."

A Marine recruiting officer from Odessa, who attended the luncheon, said inquiries about enlisting in the military service have increased.

"We've had a tremendous number of phone calls. Although not everyone qualifies, the spirit is there," he said.

In Midland, a spokesman for the U.S. Navy recruitment office said in a telephone interview: "I haven't had any problem making my goal."

Smith was invited by Phil Yeckel, a former Midlander and board member of the Marine Military Academy. Yeckel gathered oilmen, old friends and former Marine comrades for the luncheon.

Prostheses available to correct impotence in males

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The sexual life of the American male has grown more important as healthier, longer lives have become more common. Yet impotence, the inability to obtain or maintain an erection suitable for intercourse, has plagued males for centuries and is still a major concern.

"It's a growing problem in the United States," said Dr. Kirby Tarry, Midland urologist. "People are healthy longer and they're living longer."

While impotence usually affects men aged 40 to 70, accidents, illnesses and psychological conditions can hit at any age.

"Basically, society has looked at this as something it didn't want to talk about," Tarry said. "In the past, people would just shrug their shoulders and give up that part of their life."

Five men in Midland didn't. Beginning last April, Tarry has done penile prosthesis implants, surgical replacements in the penis that allow an impotent man to have an erection.

In the normal human male there are three chambers in the penis: the urethra, which runs from the bladder carrying urine, and the other two, the corpus cavernosum. The penis becomes firm during an erec-

Many men suffer from occasional impotence

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Most men, during some time in life, suffer from impotence.

While many incidents are isolated cases due to stress, preoccupation, anger or an overindulgence in alcohol or drugs, about 10 million American men today are chronically incapable of achieving or maintaining an erection adequate for intercourse.

Of those men, about half are impotent because of psychological causes. The others, mostly diabetics, suffer from physical disorders.

According to the American Medical Systems, a medical device firm, primary impotence, in which a man has never had an erection, is rare. Secondary impotence, a chronic failure to complete intercourse to the satisfaction of both partners, is more common.

Some sex researchers and physicians say one out of every 10 males in the country suffers from primary or secondary impotence, the AMS said.

Impotence has been a source of fear, concern and myths for ages. Ancient Chinese, Egyptian and Greek writings refer to the problem.

As recently as 1979, some statistics indicated nine out of 10 cases of impotence could be rooted in psychological problems. Medical science advances, which have improved diagnostic methods, have shown that many patients who were diagnosed as psychologically impotent actually have physical problems which impair their ability to have an erection.

Performance anxiety, fear of failure, religious orthodoxy, premature ejaculation, alcohol or drug over-indulgence, emotional reaction to vasectomies, marital problems, mid-life crisis, homosexuality, depression and lack of sex play roles in psychological impotence.

Most of these victims can be cured through counseling and sex therapy. For those with physical causes, however, more drastic measures, including treatment with hormones or surgery, are necessary.

tion because the corpus cavernosum fill with seven times the normal amount of blood and the chambers swell. Millions of tiny valves regulate the increased blood flow.

BECAUSE BRAIN messages, nerve impulses, muscle reactions, hormone levels and blood flow all play a part in an erection, the causes of impotency must be determined through complex testing.

"Basically, the problem is the blood is not getting into the area or it is getting in and running out too fast," Tarry said.

A test developed in 1970 is one way of determining if the cause is psychological or the result of a physical problem, such as damaged valves or blood vessels.

A male normally has three to five erections during the stage of deep sleep called REMs (rapid eye movements). If his impotence is physical, he will not have these normal erections.

The Nocturnal Penile Tumescence Monitor is a band which is wrapped around the penis for three nights in a row. If small threads in the band are broken in the morning, it is evident the man experienced erections while he slept.

"This impotency testing device measures the degree of the erection during REMs," Tarry said.

About three months of examinations of the urinary system, hormone balance, glucose tolerance and X-rays also are performed, he said. If the patient's impotence is determined to be of a psychological origin, a psychiatrist or psychologist is recommended.

IF IT IS a physical condition, depending on the severity, it sometimes can be corrected surgically or with hormone treatments, Tarry said.

There are other alternatives. One of the first attempts at a prosthesis was in 1936, when a physician inserted a portion of a rib cartilage into a penis to improve rigidity. It didn't work.

In 1950, acrylic implants were used.

McCamey man pleads guilty to burglary, not guilty to murder

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

SAN ANGELO — Thomas Alan Graham, 18, of McCamey pleaded guilty to burglary and not guilty to murder charges in 119th District Court here Monday in connection with the July 15 death of an Upton County sheriff's deputy.

Charles A. "Chuck" Renfro, 45, a 4 1/2-year veteran of Upton County Sheriff's Department, was found shot to death inside a McCamey hardware store after he reportedly responded to a silent alarm. Following a two-day manhunt, Graham was taken into custody when he was wounded and his father, 40-year-old Richard Graham, was killed by a Bakersfield gas plant operator who claimed they were trying to steal a pickup.

The younger Graham, represented by Lawrence Barber of Odessa, entered a plea of guilty to the charge of burglarizing the McCamey hardware store of Eugene Coveil. Simultaneously, he pleaded not guilty to an indictment reading, "while in the commission of a burglary, a murder was committed."

The trial was moved to San Angelo on a change of venue from Rankin.

A jury was selected and sworn in Monday, and Coveil took the stand to testify to his duties as manager of the hardware store.

Approximately 100 photographs were expected to be entered into evidence by the state upon resumption of testimony this morning.

William Earnley of Marfa is serving as judge, while prosecuting attorney is Aubrey Edwards of Big Lake.

Graham, who was blinded in the gas plant incident, has been in the custody of his mother on two personal recognizance bonds of $10,000 each. Edwards has indicated the state will not seek the death penalty.

Midlander joins Reagan campaign

William Blakemore II named finance co-chairman

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A Midland man will help direct President Reagan's 1984 re-election campaign in Texas, it was announced Monday.

William Blakemore II, who is president of Alpha 21 Corp. in Midland, will serve as Texas finance co-chairman for Reagan-Bush '84, the president's re-election committee. His appointment was announced by Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., who is head of the committee.

Laxalt also said five other Texans have been chosen to head up Reagan's drive in the state for a second term. They include Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, who will be chairman of the effort.

Blakemore is no newcomer to political fundraising, having helped coordinate finances for several state and local political candidates.

He is president of Alpha 21 Corp., a privately-held oil and ranching company, and lives in Midland.

Blakemore will work under Tower, a strong Reagan ally who has announced his retirement from the Senate after 22 years there.

Also named finance co-chairmen for Reagan-Bush '84 in Texas were: Sam Barshop, of San Antonio, president of La Quinta Motor Inns, Inc.; Robert Dedman, of Dallas, chairman of the Texas State Department of Highways and Transportation and the General Services Commission; Michel T. Halbouty, of Houston, president of the Michel T. Halbouty Energy Co.; and Walter M. Mischer, also of Houston, head of Allied Bancshares, Inc., and the Mischer Corp.

The officials will work for a repeat performance of Reagan's win in Texas in 1980, when he captured 55 percent of the state's vote to 41 percent for then-President Jimmy Carter.

Although Reagan has yet to formally announce whether he will run for re-election next year, he authorized formation of a campaign committee last month.

USDA inspecting condition of corn

LUBBOCK (AP) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture planned today to begin a two-week inspection into the condition of 21.5 million bushels of corn that state officials want released to drought-stricken ranchers in West Texas.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary John Ford ordered the inspection Monday after touring a grain elevator in Plainview. State officials contend the corn in the South Plains elevator has deteriorated while being stored.

Ford said the condition of the corn "continues to be a source of controversy" and that Agriculture Secretary John Block "wants the public to know the exact condition of the grain."

The new inspection is necessary, Ford said, because Congress is expected to act this week on legislation that would require the lower-grade grain to be made available. Block wants to know exactly how much poor grain is available, said Ford, a native of Lubbock.

"If Congress acts on the legislation to release the grain, Secretary Block has pledged to make the grain available the moment it becomes law," Ford added.

Block, who had dispatched Ford to West Texas, has opposed the release.

"We are not down there to announce any (grain) release. I can tell you that," Ford said before his tour Monday.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, who wants the grain made available as cattle feed to drought-stricken areas of West Texas, says that an analysis he commissioned of the corn indicated its quality had seriously deteriorated.

Hightower, who contends the grain is needed to save dwindling herds of cattle and sheep, reacted angrily Monday.

"These guys have got more kinds of waffles than Howard Johnson. They are embarrassing themselves with these pitiful excuses and evasions," Hightower said.

Poll: Americans divided over Reagan re-election

DALLAS (AP) — Americans are divided over whether they want President Reagan re-elected and the two top Democratic presidential hopefuls would give the incumbent a run for his money, according to a Gallup Poll commissioned by The Dallas Morning News.

The poll, taken in mid-October, showed that 44 percent of those interviewed opposed Reagan's re-election, while 40 percent favored a second term.

Reagan won approval for his performance as president by a margin of 50 percent to 34 percent, according to the poll.

The poll also showed Reagan faces a difficult race when matched against his two most likely 1984 Democratic opponents, former vice president Walter Mondale and Sen. John Glenn.

Either Mondale or Glenn "would run a strong race against the president in the largest states in the country," the poll concluded.

Reagan stands in a virtual dead heat with Mondale and Glenn in the race for Texas' 29 electoral votes, according to the poll.

The statewide poll of 1,004 registered voters found Democrat Bob Krueger and Republican U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm leading in attempts to gain their party's nomination. But with almost 44 percent of Democrats undecided, the race remains wide open for the seat being vacated by Republican Sen. John Tower.

When matched head to head, Krueger led Gramm by 12 percentage points.

The poll shows Mondale and Glenn, D-Ohio, "statistically tied" with Reagan in Texas.

Krueger has a large lead over fellow Democrats state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, and U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, and outpolled Gramm 50 percent to 38 percent with 12 percent undecided, the News said.

In a test presidential contest, 50 percent of the registered voters polled in Texas support Reagan, 47 percent support Mondale and 3 percent were undecided. When Reagan and Glenn were matched, each drew 48 percent with 4 percent undecided.

The poll was conducted between Oct. 5 and Oct. 18, before the terrorist bombing in Lebanon and the invasion of Grenada.

If Reagan does not seek re-election and Vice President George Bush becomes the GOP nominee, he probably would lose narrowly to Mondale or Glenn in his home state, the survey said.

Texas will cast the third-largest number of electoral votes in the 1984 presidential election. It is also a swing state in Republican efforts to retain control of the U.S. Senate.

Sixty-two percent of those polled approved of the performance thus far by Gov. Mark White, who took office Jan. 18 as the state's chief executive. He received favorable ratings from 75 percent of the Democrats polled, 58 percent of the independents and 45 percent of the Republicans.

DEATHS

H.H. Buchanan

Hubert H. Buchanan, 77, of Hart died Sunday in Plainview after a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 1 p.m. Wednesday in Ellis Funeral Home chapel here with the Rev. Elvis Barrington, pastor of Primitive Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Gardens in Odessa.

Buchanan was born Dec. 8, 1905, in Nimrod and was reared in Putnam. He married Elnora Brewer Jan. 30, 1947, in Beaumont and they later moved to Dallas. In 1947 they moved to Lubbock, and in 1982 they went to Hart.

Buchanan was a member of the Primitive Baptist Church and the Texas Lumberman's Association.

Survivors include his wife, Elnora; two sons, Douglas Buchanan of Plano and Ron Buchanan of Dallas; a daughter, Beverly Walker of Beaumont; four sisters, Iola Hicks and Mrs. Mervil Seastrunk, both of Abilene, Bertha West and Xenia Williams, both of Midland; eight grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Michael Britsch

ODESSA — Services for Michael Britsch, 20, of Odessa, will be at 4 p.m. Wednesday in the Tanglewood Church of Christ with burial in Sunset Memorial Gardens, directed by Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Ms. Britsch died Monday in an Odessa hospital following a lengthy illness.

She was born March 18, 1963, in Odessa. She was a student and a member of Tanglewood Church of Christ. She graduated from Permian High School in 1981. She was named Sweetheart of the Sheriff's Posse in 1977.

Survivors include her parents, Elroy Britsch of Kerrville, and June Guess of Odessa; her grandparents, Roland and Ella Britsch of Bandera, and Helen Harrison of Kerrville; and an aunt.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorials be directed to the Odessa Christian School or Hospice of Odessa, Inc., 601 W. 4th St., Odessa, Texas 79761.

Marilyn Aycoc

Memorial services for Marilyn Weed Aycoc will be at 3 p.m. Thursday at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity with the Rev. Fred Tinsley officiating.

Mrs. Aycoc died at her home Oct. 28.

Survivors include her husband, William Pannill Aycoc; her mother, Mrs. Clyde Weed of Fort Worth; and her sister, Katherine Weed Vittatos of Dallas.

Southwestern Bell to get head start on new billing

Although the breakup of the AT&T system isn't scheduled until January, Southwestern Bell is getting a head start this month by issuing a more detailed customer bill that reflects some of the coming changes.

The new statements will break down components of phone service to be provided by different companies next year. However, Southwestern Bell will continue to issue only one bill for services previously provided by the Bell System. Only one payment need be made by customers.

"We want to make a smooth transition and help our customers to get accustomed to the changes by introducing new bills now," said Sam Ogletree, district community relations manager.

Beginning with the November billing, long distance charges for all Southwestern Bell customers are to be split into categories: those listings for long distance charges from Southwestern Bell and those for toll calls made within the surrounding service area, which Southwestern Bell is to continue handling, Ogletree said.

Calls made outside the local calling area won't be handled by Southwestern Bell after Jan. 1. Those calls will be listed separately because, beginning next year, AT&T's long distance network will be a separate company not affiliated with Southwestern Bell's local phone service. Previously, all long distance calls were billed together.

Southwestern Bell will act as a billing agent for AT&T and has offered this service to other long distance companies.

Another change will be separate page listings for local service and equipment, which in the past were grouped together.

Effective Jan. 1, all equipment currently leased from Southwestern Bell will become the property of AT&T. Southwestern Bell will continue as a billing agent for AT&T.

Because Southwestern Bell will continue to provide local service, the charge will be separate from the equipment.

Each page will list a phone number that customers can call for questions regarding the itemized charges. Each company will be responsible for handling questions concerning its services.

Midland police investigate rash of local burglaries

Midland police are continuing to investigate a rash of burglaries, including six more which occurred Monday and early this morning.

James Campbell, 1106 E. Oak, told police about 1 a.m. today that a burglary occurred at the same residence. According to reports, $1,999 worth of items were missing.

George Srur, 1619 E. Pine, reported a burglary about 11 p.m. Monday. According to reports, entry was gained through a north door and assorted items valued at $6,000 were taken.

About 4 p.m. Monday, George Patterson, of Elm Grove Trailer Park, reported a burglary for Joseph Prieto, of the same park. According to reports, entry was gained through the living room window and a TV valued at $400 was taken.

Shortly after 4:30 p.m., a burglary was reported at 1105 S. Connell. Reports stated a TV, stereo and speakers valued at $1,400 were taken.

At 5:31 p.m., Jeffrey Kelton, 1300 S. Cottonflat Road, told police a burglary had occurred at another residence. According to police, a TV, stereo and samurai swords valued at $550 were taken.

About noon Monday, Larry Jeter told police that a typewriter valued at $924 was taken from the Drill Bit Magazine, located at 3106 Big Spring

Many men suffer from impotency during some point in their lives

According to the AMS, 50 percent of diabetic men suffer from physical impotency. Damage to nerves in the penis is common and diabetes often leads to penile atherosclerosis, which affects the blood flow of arteries in the penis. Surgical removal of the blockage or bypass may be used.

Hypertension and high blood pressure can accelerate atherosclerosis and about 33 percent of males with hypertension who are not taking medication to lower their blood pressure have experienced difficulty obtaining or maintaining erections. But impotency also may be the side effect of medication for high blood pressure, depression and psychosis, abnormal serum cholesterol, weight reduction, ulcers, stomach diseases and cancer.

A high percentage of men with chronic impotency have endocrine or hormonal disorders. Hormones, including testosterone, prolactin and the thyroid hormone, can affect the ability to have erections.

Impotency also can be traced to surgeries of the aorta and iliac arteries, prostate, colon and bladder. Operations on the iliac arteries can cause damage to the nerves of erection and surgical removal of an aortic aneurysm also can cause impotency.

In most cases, prostate surgery, required in 2 out of every 10 men over the age of 60, does not cause impotency. However, when complete removal of the prostate gland is necessary, about 50 percent of the patients suffer nerve damage resulting in impotency from external-beam radiation. Seven percent become impotent because of interstitial irradiation, radiation between the parts or space of tissues.

Impotency also is a consequence of nerve damage accompanied by colostomy. Removal of the bladder also can sever the nerves that control erection. Organic abilities can remain in both cases, but the potential of ejaculation is lost when the bladder is removed, according to AMS.

Injuries to the spinal cord and penis can cause impotency, depending on the location and extent of the injury. Surgical reconstruction and reattachment of partial amputations of the penis have been developed.

Damage from strokes or tumors to certain parts of the brain can result in severe disability while damage to the cerebral cortex, or "thinking center," can prevent messages from reaching the nervous system.

Diseases such as multiple sclerosis, which can produce temporary or permanent nerve damage, and Leriche Syndrome, which blocks the lower aorta, can cause impotency. Permanent impotency is a risk when performing corrective surgery for Peyronie's Disease, in which scar tissue builds up in the penis causing a painful erection that bends at the site of the scar tissue, and in priapism, a condition where a painful permanent erection occurs.

According to Tarry, the implants needed to be made of something that wouldn't be rejected by the human body. Today there are two basic types of prostheses.

A semi-rigid rod, made of solid elastic silicone and called a Small-Carrion implant, can be placed in each of the two chambers of the penis. The rods fill the chambers, causing the penis to be in an erect position at all times. Although this is the easiest to surgically implant, is the cheapest and rarely requires follow-up operations or replacements, the disadvantages turn some potential patients to a similar type.

This prosthesis, called the Jonas implant, is similar to the semi-rigid rod but it has an inner core of braided silver wire, allowing it to be bent down. Because it, too, is simple and there is a lack of mechanical problems, many prefer it.

THE OTHER TYPE OF prosthesis, "the Cadillac type," according to Tarry, is the inflatable penile prosthesis. Developed to mimic the hydraulic process of a normal erection, the prosthesis is flaccid when not in use and can be extended to a near-normal position for intercourse.

The inflatable prosthesis is made of three parts. A balloon-shaped reservoir, filled with a fluid that can be detected by X-ray in case of a leak, is placed in the abdomen, in front of the bladder and behind a muscle area so that it is well-protected. Two expandable rods are placed in the chambers of the penis. A pump, used to transfer the fluid from the reservoir to the rods, hangs loosely inside the scrotum. The parts are connected by silicone tubing.

By manually operating the pump, positioned near the left or right testis depending on the patient's preference, the rods can be inflated up to twice the size of the penis, although in some cases, the size may not reach that of normal erection, Tarry said. A pressure-release valve in the pump is used to deflate the penis, returning the fluid to the reservoir.

The incisions for both types of implants are made on the underside of the penis where it joins the scrotum, Tarry said.

THERE IS AN infection rate of about 3 percent for inflatable penile prosthesis patients. If an infection does set in, the prosthesis usually is removed and another implanted after a waiting period of about six months, he said.

Although the inflatable prosthesis works more naturally, the cost is about $2,000, compared to $800 for a semi-rigid rod implant, according to Tarry. The surgery takes about 2 1/2 to 3 hours, while a semi-rigid rod implant only requires an hour of surgery. Hospital stays, which are longer for the inflatable implant, can increase costs to about $3,500 for the rod and $7,000 for the inflatable prosthesis.

The inflatable implant has a warranty, "just like tires," Tarry added. "They are warranted for up to five years, and if something goes wrong, they'll replace it for a fraction of the cost."

Implants that are done for medical reasons usually are covered by insurance, he said.

If the patient was able to have an orgasm and ejaculate prior to the implant, he will be able to continue doing so. On the other hand, if those abilities were lost, they will not be restored with the surgery.

"MANY HAVE THE (sexual) desire, but can't be sexually active," Tarry said, using paraplegics as an example. "They may not have a normal orgasm and ejaculation, but they certainly can satisfy a partner."

Of the five patients which have received inflatable penile prostheses from Tarry since last April, two suffered impotency from diabetes, one from a stroke, one from inadequate blood flow due to atherosclerosis, and one from a heart attack in the past, from which he never regained potency.

The implants have a success rate of 95 to 98 percent, he said.

Tarry, who studied the procedure under Dr. Brantley Scott, a Houston urologist who helped develop the inflatable implant in the early 1970s, said it has benefited many people.

More than 16,000 inflatable penile prostheses have been done in the United States since it was developed, he said.

"I see people every day that are interested in it," he said. "I don't think it's for everyone, but I think it's going to be a much more common thing."

"The message is that there are things that can be done for them," Tarry said, "things that are reliable from reliable people. This is a big thing for American medicine — people have been suffering because of impotency for thousands of years."

Commission OKs MMH request

Austin Bureau

The Texas Health Facilities Commission approved a request Friday from Midland Memorial Hospital to replace a second generation computerized tomographic scanner with a more recent model CT whole body scanner.

The project involves the renovation of 2,707 square feet of space for the relocation of a classroom, EEG, EKG and stress testing areas.

A hearing on the request was waived after no opposition to the proposal was received by the THFC by the deadline Wednesday, a spokesman said.

Houston's mayor goes to polls against former supporter

HOUSTON (AP) — Incumbent Mayor Kathy Whitmire, who has seen the economy in this oil-run town plummet during her administration, goes to the polls today against a former supporter who says she's failed to live up to her promises.

Polls showed Mrs. Whitmire leading businessman Bill Wright with about 55 percent of the vote. Turnout among the city's 1.1 million voters is expected in the traditional 30 percent range, said Harris County Clerk Anita Rodeheaver.

The mayor discounted reports showing her far ahead of her former campaign worker.

"We don't need any more stories that say the mayor's race is over," she said.

Nine candidates are on the ballot. But the contest is squarely between Mrs. Whitmire, the first woman ever elected to a citywide office in Houston, and Bill Wright, a former vice president of an oil company.

The campaign has been lackluster. Mrs. Whitmire's leadership and the city's finances have emerged as the key issues in the race.

To win, Mrs. Whitmire must overcome a plunge in the city's oil-dependent economy that sent unemployment into double digits, forced belt-tightening in the city budget and triggered hostility among city employees who have not received a pay raise in more than two years.

Odessa woman charged with husband's murder

ODESSA — A 49-year-old woman has been charged with murder of her 70-year-old husband, according to a spokesman at the Odessa Police Department.

Mary Francis McClintock, of 210 S. Lee, who was arrested Sunday night, was formally charged Monday.

Arlous M. McClintock, of the same address, was pronounced dead at 9:45 p.m. Sunday by Justice of the Peace R.G. Hungerford. According to police, an autopsy showed McClintock died of head injuries, which were made with a blunt instrument.

According to reports, the Ector County Sheriff's Office notified the Odessa police at 8:29 p.m. Sunday.

Nurses aides get certification

Four more employees of Stonebrook Care Center, 2000 N. Main St., have received their nurses aide certification.

Sandra Hill, Brenda McMarilyn, Laura McKee and Rosetta Christian recently were certified, a regulation of the Texas Department of Health.

Brenda Winters is the inservice coordinator teaching the classes.

Dealer Lynne Headricks works his blackjack magic Vegas-style at the March of Dimes "Monte Carlo Night" benefit.

An estimated $75,000 worth of chips floated through the hands of gamblers, pit bosses, card dealers and bankers the evening Midland Center was transformed into Monte Carlo for a recent March of Dimes benefit.

Proceeds from the event will fund new equipment for Midland Memorial Hospital, according to Leonard C. Mitchell, chairman of the March of Dimes board.

Mitchell explained, "We're chartered by national, so 60 percent of the proceeds will go to them; 40 percent is designated as discretionary funds. We use the funds as we see fit. We have chosen to spend the proceeds for equipment at the hospital's pediatric ward."

"Children who need special care can stay in Midland with their parents instead of going to Dallas," Ray Branson, president of MMH, told the crowd. "Since 1980, March of Dimes has given $75,000 to the hospital, he said.

Waitresses, garbed in black French-maid uniforms with ruffled slips, passed out drinks from the open bar, as hundreds of people dressed in the latest designer cocktail fashions poured into the arena-style room for the semi-formal event.

Seventy-five dollars worth of chips were given to patrons as they paid their $125-per-couple-tickets.

The sixth annual "Monte Carlo Night," has become recognized as an annual event in the community with attendance increasing each year. At the craps table, one man said, "By this time last year, I had already written two $100 checks."

Dealers and pit bosses, most of them members of the March of Dimes board, were managed by Dave Clark, board member, and officially trained Lynne Headrick, owner of The Rack, who was a professional blackjack dealer in Las Vegas.

Crowds gathered at the roulette table as the wheel spun and created the same excitement as found in glittering cities.

The chips stacked up, some dwindled away — but one consolation remained even to the losers. "It is for a good cause," several people recited throughout the evening.

Game money was redeemed for prizes auctioned at the end of the evening — most of the prizes donated by Midland merchants.

Tables were closed at 10:30 p.m. and the auction began.

The crowds oohed-and-ahhed at the displays of some of the gifts — a blue fox ranch mink, a 27-foot boat, a trip to Las Vegas, a television set and a 1983 Bronco.

Other prizes auctioned by Lynn Cowden were guns, video recorders, an interior design consultation, health club memberships, diamonds, sapphires, video games, charcoal prints, ski trips, parties, a home entertainment center, crystal, a birthday party, a fishing trip, a fishing rod, clothing, stationery, dinners at local restaurants, tuxedos, flower arrangements, bedding, a snorkel, mask and fin set, a ceiling fan, a bicycle, toys, a butcher block and gold jewelry.

"Most of the prizes were donated by local merchants, but some of the larger items were received as partial donations," said Mitchell.

The March of Dimes biggest fundraiser of the year was organized last August by 32 people who remained involved in some capacity throughout the event, according to Mitchell.

Because he expects checks to be coming in for two more weeks, the dollar amount from the benefit has not been totaled.

"We feel it was just as successful as last year, even though we had more in attendance this year," Mitchell said.

Other officers of March of Dimes, Midland County Chapter, are Burgess Wade, vice chairman; Frank Tirey, treasurer; and Jeri McCaslin, secretary.

DEAR ABBY

Poem says it's good to slow down

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A number of years ago, perhaps 10 or 12, I clipped a poem from your column. It was one of the most inspirational pieces I have ever read, and began, "Slow me down, Lord."

I want to pass it on to my grandson, but I can't find the clipping. I would be so grateful if you would print it again. Sorry, I can't recall the author's name. Thank you. — MARGARET G. IN MANKATO, MINN.

DEAR MARGARET: The inspirational piece was written by Wilfred A. Peterson, and here it is:

Slow me down, Lord!
Ease the pounding of my heart
By the quieting of my mind.
Steady my harried pace

With a vision of the eternal reach of time.

Give me,
Amidst the confusions of my day,
The calmness of the everlasting hills.

Break the tensions of my nerves
With the soothing music of the singing streams
That live in my memory.
Help me to know
The magical restoring power of sleep.

Teach me the art
Of taking minute vacations of slowing down to look at a flower;

to chat with an old friend or make a new one;

to pat a stray dog;
to watch a spider build a web;
to smile at a child;
or to read a few lines from a good book.

Remind me each day
That the race is not always to the swift;

That there is more to life than increasing its speed.
Let me look upward
Into the branches of the towering oak

And know that it grew great and strong
Because it grew slowly and well.

Slow me down, Lord,
And inspire me to send my roots deep
Into the soil of life's enduring values

That I may grow toward the stars
Of my greater destiny.

DEAR ABBY: My wife's 23-year-old nephew from Europe and his 21-year-old girlfriend, touring the United States and Canada for six months, popped, in for a visit with us. They had bought a station wagon and had often slept in their car.

Without consulting me, my wife asked our 13-year-old son to give up his room and double bed and sleep downstairs in the family room so the guests could have complete privacy.

Since both visitors still live with their parents in Europe, I feel that my wife encouraged something which she and I personally disapprove of.

In my opinion it would have been better to let them "camp" in the family room. What do you think? — OLD-FASHIONED IN N.Y.

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: What difference would it have made if your guests had "camped" in the family room instead of in your son's room? If either you or your wife "disapproved" of their sleeping together in your home, you could have let them sleep in their car.

Veterinarians: Jogging can cause canine collapse

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Jogging may keep people's bodies from going to the dogs, but some veterinarians say owners who take their pooches running could be risking canine collapse.

"Dogs with pulled muscles or inflamed muscles are very common," said Dr. Rick Wells of Tempe Veterinary Hospital Ltd. "A lot of people go jogging and expect their dog to keep up, and it doesn't work."

"Dogs have to work into condition, just like humans," he said. "You just can't take Rover out of the back yard, where he hasn't run more than a few yards for a year, and expect him to go a couple miles."

Another problem, said Wells, is that streets and sidewalks can get extremely hot in the summer, burning a dog's footpads.

"Then, too, dogs overheat much easier than humans, so while you may feel OK, your dog may be about to have a heat stroke," he said.

Dr. Rick Sampson of Ingleside Animal Clinic said that while he doesn't see a high percentage of dogs with jogging-related injuries, the number has increased noticeably and those he does see have major problems.

"I think the owners believe the dog will recover naturally, and when that doesn't happen they bring them in," he said.

erinary Hospital said, "We are seeing more dogs for emergency treatment for injuries than we did, say, five or 10 years ago. In just about every case the dog was out with a jogging owner."

"Their feet and legs need to be watched carefully," said Sampson. "Dogs are susceptible to joint stress and abrasions of the feet, particularly when running on pavement. The owner must remember that while he has shoes, the dog doesn't."

AT WIT'S END

Life ends as soon as dinner is ready

By ERMA BOMBECK

There's a joke making the rounds these days where a rabbi and a priest are debating when life begins. The priest says it begins from the moment of conception, to which the rabbi replies, "Wrong. Life begins when the kids leave home and the dog dies."

I have no intention of opening a discussion on when life begins but I can tell you the exact moment life ends. It ends the minute you yell, "Dinner's ready."

I don't presume to know why. I just know those two little words cause children to bolt out of the kitchen and disappear. Men will run to the bathroom and clean out the medicine chest. And guests will make a mass exodus and take their drinks to the curb to finish them.

I've never seen anything like it. One minute, you have an entire family hanging over your shoulder who will hear you say, "We're going to be ready to eat in five minutes." They'll watch you get the salad out of the refrigerator. They'll watch you lift the meat out of the skillet. They'll watch you transfer the gravy from a pan to a serving dish. When you yell, "Dinner's ready," you feel a chilling draft, followed by deafening silence. You're standing in the kitchen alone as if life had never been.

"Dinner's ready" is another one of those Mother Mysteries like the washer that eats one sock out of every pair you put in, and the coat hangers that have sex and multiply.

It's one of those buzz phrases that trigger a physical response that no one can explain. For example, the phrase, "Whose turn is it to do dishes?" is a signal for every bladder in the house under the age of 20 to reach its capacity and head for the bathroom.

"Could someone help me unload the groceries from the car?" is another phrase that for some reason makes the phone ring.

Mothers have learned throughout the years to deal with adversity. The other afternoon around 2 p.m., I felt like a little quiet time, so I shouted over the din, "Dinner's ready." The kitchen empty was empty. The dog stared at me as I drank my coffee in peace. I said to him, "Whose life is it, anyway?"

Scarf not new idea

NEW YORK (AP) — Season after season, the scarf has continued to be a key accessory in every woman's wardrobe. But, while it's as new as the latest fashion forecast, the scarf is actually one of mankind's oldest garments.

The art of draping and tying flat pieces of fabric to adorn the body is mentioned in the earliest historical records, according to researchers at Echo Scarfs.

In Egypt during the 12th century B.C., early scarfs known as "mantles" were worn by both men and women. Mantles were draped over both shoulders and fastened in front, or sometimes thrown over one shoulder, passed under the opposite arm and then fastened.

The mantle proved to be a most versatile garment. The Greeks called it the "himation." In Rome, it was the "toga" for men, the "palla" for women — worn draped like a man's toga, but covering the head. And in Assyria, royalty wore mantles edged with fringe, folded in the same fashion as a contemporary shawl.

Medieval women were, in fact, so fond of scarfs that they often wore two — a wimple on the head, and a mantle flowing freely from the shoulders. The ensemble can still be seen nowadays, in the form of habits worn by many religious orders of nuns.

Eye trouble possible AIDS sign

CHICAGO (AP) — Eye problems such as blurred vision, spotty images and drooping eyelids can be an early sign of AIDS and also can alert doctors to other curable, sexually transmitted diseases, say doctors at a meeting of the American Academy of Ophthalmology.

Two physicians at the group's annual meeting in Chicago are presenting studies suggesting certain eye problems can signal the start of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, an incurable, often deadly disease.

Dr. Alan G. Palestine of the National Eye Institute at Bethesda, Md., said that individuals with eye lesions — spots on the retina arising from any of four major diseases, including Kaposi's Sarcoma — should be suspected as AIDS victims if they are in "high-risk" groups.

Palestine presented a study suggesting monitoring eye lesions in AIDS victims.

The photographs are something that usually cannot be replaced at any cost, because your photos will catch tender moments that often will never again be reproduced. You, as the photographer, are only half of what is necessary to insure yourself of a precious lifelong memory of that moment. If the film developing lab you take your film to does not do a superior job of developing and printing your film, all is for naught. When you leave your film, you want fast, dependable service by someone you can trust. You can trust Fast Photo Service, Town & Country Shopping Center in Midland, to protect your memories with top quality prints and fast, friendly, dependable service.

take a five week photography class which meets once a week. Contact manager Aaron Salton for information on these classes.

Fast Photo has recently added brand new enlargement equipment for even better service. They can make enlargements on your 110, 126, 120, or 35mm film in sizes from 20 x 24 down to wallet size. When you trust Fast Photo with your enlargements, you receive 3 day service and the added relief of knowing that your negative never leaves the store. That means you don't have to worry about your film being lost, exposed to excess heat, or mailed somewhere else to be processed. Enlargements may be made for either color or black and white film. This is just another way Fast Photo offers their customers top-quality service.

This service also offers other unique applications, such as videotaping of a wedding, etc. Fast Photo will videotape a special event for you that will serve as a lasting memory to you and your loved ones. Photographs alone simply cannot recreate the event the way a videotape can. Vatican talks about TV

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican, which spreads the pope's words around the world through its newspapers and over its own radio station, has moved into television to project the pontiff's message. In the first step toward what church officials say could one day be a full-fledged TV station, the Vatican has opened a center for the production and distribution of religious TV programming. "There is a real need in many countries for television documentaries of the activities of the pope," said the Rev. Pasquale Borgomeo, a Vatican Radio official named to the television center's board of directors. Programming will be designed for distribution to papal embassies and Catholic-run television stations, but the Vatican also expects agreements for co-production of films and tapes and service to station or commercial stations. A pilot production filmed during Pope John Paul II's pilgrimage to the shrine at Lourdes, France, last August has been offered to Italy's state-run RAI network.

Father Borgomeo said the Vatican and Austria's ORF network collaborated on a project on the pope's trip to Austria in September. Vatican officials have talked for years of getting into television, the only major media in which it does not have a hand. Vatican Radio, founded under Pope Pius XI in 1931, now beams 250 hours of programs a week in 35 languages, most of it over shortwave broadcasts. The Vatican publishes a daily newspaper in Italian, L'Osservatore Romano, weeklies in French, English, Spanish, German and Portuguese and a monthly in Polish. The Vatican had one brief experience with its own television system. French pilgrims donated transmission equipment in honor of the 1950 Holy Year and Vatican ceremonies were beamed over closed-circuit inside the tiny city state for a few years, until the equipment fell into disuse. The production center is still in the initial stages. The Vatican has appointed a nine-member board and assigned office staff in the city state's Belvedere Palace, but it is still putting together a professional staff and has yet to name the executives. The Lourdes production was filmed by an outside crew and written by Luigi Accatoli, Vatican correspondent of Milan's Corriere della Sera newspaper. Vatican officials say there are no immediate plans to expand to a television station, because of the cost and the transmission difficulties that a multinational TV network would encounter. But they don't rule it out.

Declarer simply continued with the eight to force out West's jack, and his nine tricks were there. Note that declarer's play would succeed if diamonds were 3-3 — all he would be giving up was an overtrick. But it would also succeed in those cases where diamonds were 4-2 and the doubleton was either J-10, J-9 or 10-9.

About six years ago, our late colleague Harold Ogust won the International Bridge Press Association's "Hand of the Year" award. The central theme of his play forms the basis of this problem composed by Swedish star Jan Wohlin. Despite the fact that North had not shown much more than a six-card diamond suit with his two diamond rebid, South had not yet fully expressed the value of his hand, especially since the king in partner's suit was an important card. Two no trump was as good a forward-going move as any, and North had just enough to go on to game. West was reluctant to lead any of the bid suits, so he attacked with a heart. Obviously, declarer would need diamond tricks to make his contract, and it might seem that the only way to tackle the suit is to cash the king, then cross to the table with the king of hearts and play off the high diamonds in the hope that the suit would break 3-3. That would indeed be the case if declarer needed six tricks in diamonds for his contract. However, since declarer had four fast tricks in hearts and clubs, five diamond tricks would be enough to bring home the bacon. Declarer found an elegant method to increase his odds. He won the opening lead in hand, led the king of diamonds and overtook with the ace on the board! He cashed the queen of diamonds and, when the 10-9 appeared from East on these two tricks, all was well.

Passengers crowd the waiting room of Trailways Bus Lines Monday afternoon in Dallas. Greyhound Lines' nationwide strike has brought passengers to Trailways, forcing the Dallas-based carrier to add buses and recall all 500 of its laid-off employees.

Greyhound may be seeing red but Trailways is in the pink

DALLAS (AP) — While Greyhound Lines is seeing red during its nationwide intercity bus strike, competitor Trailways is in the pink. Trailways ran an extra 1,500 buses last weekend to accommodate travelers stranded by Greyhound and has rehired all 500 of its laid-off employees, a Trailways spokesman said Monday. "This last weekend, sales were along the lines of Christmas weekend," said Roger Rydell, vice president for public relations at Dallas-based Trailways. "From the standpoint of passenger loads, we're doing quite significant levels," he said. "It's an unexpected sort of windfall." Trailways, a privately held company, should profit from the strike by the Amalgamated Transit Union workers, along with airlines and Amtrak, Rydell said. "Obviously when you have a situation where you have a slow period and you all of a sudden have ridership levels that are quite high, a lot of money goes right to the bottom line," he said. Rydell said early November is traditionally a slow travel period. Ninety extra buses departed New York City last weekend, compared with only seven for the same November weekend in 1982, he said. "We traditionally put drivers and terminal people on furlough because it very much is a seasonal business," said Rydell. "We lay people off in the fall and bring them back in the spring. But we've been bringing people back since last Wednesday." He said Trailways officials determined Monday that all 500 of its furloughed employees had been told to report to work immediately. Rydell said Trailways employees, many of them union members, had "mixed emotions" about the benefits Trailways was reaping from Greyhound's trouble. "From the humanistic standpoint, we have people who relate very closely to those people," Rydell said. "A lot of our employees are working while their union brothers are in a strike situation." Greyhound, which normally carries 60 percent of intercity bus passengers, idled its 4,500 buses when the strike began last week but said it would resume operations within two weeks.

state in brief Gilmer hotel owner charged with four counts of murder

GILMER (AP) — A Gilmer hotel owner charged with four counts of murder in the shooting deaths of his wife and three children was released Monday from a Marshall hospital and held in jail after recovering from a self-inflicted gunshot wound. G.M. Patel, a 37-year-old native of India, was dressed in white jail overalls. He appeared sullen as he was escorted by Gilmer police from the office of Justice of the Peace W.V. Ray, who denied bond and ordered him held in Upshur County jail, the Longview News-Journal said. Patel is charged with killing his wife, Bhikiben, and three children, ranging in age from 2 to 9, sometime between 8 p.m. Oct. 24 and 3 p.m. Oct. 25, when Upshur House residents became suspicious of the family's absence and found the bodies in an apartment of the downtown hotel. A Texas Department of Public Safety trooper found Patel sitting in his car in a roadside park east of Marshall several hours after the bodies were discovered.

Staff votes doctor's suspension

ALPINE (AP) — The medical staff of Big Bend Memorial Hospital voted Monday to uphold the hospital executive committee's Sept. 10 suspension of Dr. Bill Lockhart, 74, a two-time mayor of Alpine who has been hospital chief of staff three times. Lockhart, who established the hospital and is its senior staff member, said the charge involves a letter alleging professional misconduct. Hospital bylaws require a three-fourths majority to uphold the suspension of a doctor. Administrator Tom Santry declined to reveal the vote, but said it was sufficient to support the suspension and said the matter will now go to the hospital's board of directors.

West Texan acquitted of murder

ABILENE (AP) — An Abilene man who shot his roommate 11 times was acquitted of murder charges by reason of insanity Monday. State District Judge Billy John Edwards found Michael Howard Pollock, 29, innocent after reviewing reports from five psychiatrists, all of whom said Pollock was insane at the time he killed Bobby Joe White, 31, formerly of Eastland, on July 6, 1982. The reports reflected a "long history" of treatment for mental illness, both before and after the slaying, the judge said. A police officer who arrested Pollock said the man told him that he emptied two pistols at White at "point-blank" range because White "has had 100 percent control over my life, my radio, TV, everything I do."

Lawbreakers may aid sportsmen

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas sportsmen and recreation lovers may be able to get some help from lawbreakers, a House committee was told Monday. "They have a reimbursement plan in the state of Washington for wildlife that is illegally taken," said Rep. Fred Agnich, R-Dallas, chairman of the House Committee on Environmental Affairs. "In addition to their fines, poachers must repay the state for the cost of the wildlife killed. A moose or an elk costs $1,000 and a bear $500 and so on."

Women charged in kidnapping fit FBI psychological profile

FORT WORTH (AP) — Two women charged in Texas this year with kidnapping infants from hospitals both fit an FBI psychological profile of likely kidnapers who would never harm an abducted baby because they thought it was their own, police say. Linda Ashmore Gomez, charged in the May 10 abduction of Cherie Ann Kennedy from a Fort Worth hospital, and Norma Jo Smith, sentenced to prison for the March 20 kidnapping of Harold Deshawn Patterson from a Dallas hospital, both had a desire for a child to love, police said. It was that desire that drove them to steal a baby from its parents arms, Fort Worth Police Lt. Tommy Swan said Sunday. In both cases, the women arrested suffered a severe traumatic experience prior to the kidnapping, and FBI agents believe that trauma triggered the kidnappings. "In the United States there are 13 cases on record similar to Cherie Kennedy's," said Swan, who worked with FBI Agent Darrell Shaver on a psychological profile of a woman who might be involved in a kidnapping. "In each of the cases the suspect was a female, middle aged or approaching middle age. She was a former nurse or had some type of medical background," Swan said. "In each of the cases, the suspect was an employee or former employee where the offense occurred." Mrs. Gomez worked as a nurse's aide at several area nursing homes, but police this weekend were still trying to determine if she ever worked at John Peter Smith Hospital. Harold Patterson, then three days old, was taken from Dallas' Parkland Hospital after Ms. Smith convinced his mother she had a fever and the infant needed to go back to the nursery. Cherie Kennedy was taken by a woman also dressed as a nurse who said she wanted to show the child to other nurses nearby, but instead walked out of the hospital and disappeared.

Cherie was born the March 23, the same day that Harold was found by Dallas police in Lawton, Okla. Swan told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the psychological profile indicated that each of the suspects "were familiar with medical procedures and were able to act out a role in the hospital setting such as she was not exposed" or discovered. Swan said FBI agents working on Cherie's case investigated hundreds of persons, including each John Peter Smith employee. "They went back for years," he said, investigating former employees. From statements obtained from Mrs. Gomez and from information police and FBI agents gleaned from neighbors, the 32-year-old woman's desire for a child increased tremendously in May after a Fort Worth doctor told her she would not have a child. She was seven months pregnant at the time. A few days later, police believe, Mrs. Gomez went to John Peter Smith dressed as a nurse and approached Penny Kennedy and asked for Cherie. "Based on the suspect on this case and working with her we know that Linda Gomez had an intense desire to have a child. We don't think Linda would have ever returned the baby — she loved the baby as much as much or more than she did her own child," Swan said. Two months after Mrs. Gomez allegedly kidnapped Cherie, records show, she had a daughter, Amanda, in a Las Cruces, N.M., hospital, disproving the Fort Worth physician's false diagnosis. Police would not release the name of the physician. Fort Worth neighbors said that before the kidnapping Mrs. Gomez often stuffed pillows under her clothes to appear pregnant. Shaver said the mistaken diagnosis "may have triggered her going and getting a baby."

Accused kidnapper changes plea after talking to lawyer

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 32-year-old woman pleaded guilty, then changed her plea to innocent — at a lawyer's urging — in the kidnapping of Cherie Ann Kennedy, a Fort Worth baby who was reunited with her parents last weekend. The guilty plea by Linda Ashmore Gomez on Monday stunned public defender Jack Cook, who had not yet been appointed to defend her. "I don't think she ought to plead to anything...She didn't have a lawyer," Cook protested to State District Judge Gordon Gray during her arraignment. The judge, who told Cook that she could change her plea any time, allowed Mrs. Gomez to change her guilty plea following the appointment of Cook and Don Gandy, both of Fort Worth, as her lawyers. "I advised her to change her plea. She was confused and upset," Cook said. At the request of Gandy and Cook, Gray appointed a psychologist to examine the defendant. Mrs. Gomez was arrested in El Paso last week after a computer check at an international bridge between El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, revealed she was driving a car that had been reported stolen from a Las Cruces, N.M., used-car dealership. Cherie Ann, now 7 months old, was reunited with her parents, Andrew Kennedy, 24, and Penny Jo Kennedy, 21, Friday night at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport. Mrs. Gomez signed a statement in which she admitted abducting the child last May 10 from Fort Worth's John Peter Smith Hospital, police said. Mrs. Gomez remains under constant watch in a single-person cell at Tarrant County Jail under $205,000 bond.

Lawyer says Lucas 'worn to frazzle'

DENTON (AP) — Self-proclaimed mass killer Henry Lee Lucas, being tried here on charges stemming from the slaying of a 15-year-old traveling companion, is "worn to a frazzle" from countless conversations with law officers and plans to remain silent, his lawyer says. After 4½ hours of individual questioning about whether publicity had caused them to form an opinion as to Lucas' guilt or innocence, attorneys narrowed a jury pool of 100 people to 46 on Monday. Once a jury is seated, Lucas is expected to enter a formal plea of innocent even though investigators have a video-taped statement by Lucas in which he said he cut the teen-ager into "little teeny pieces." Lucas' court-appointed attorney, Tom Whitlock of Denton, said over the weekend that Lucas is "worn to a frazzle" from talking to investigators from across the country and now plans to remain silent. Lucas was convicted in 1960 of killing his mother, and claims to have killed 165 people in 17 states. The 47-year-old Virginia-born recluse has detailed several dozen slayings to investigators and even drawn pictures of some of his victims. Law officers believe they can attribute as many as 60 slayings to him, although he probably won't be charged in that many cases. Lucas is accused of fatally stabbing Frieda Powell of Jacksonville, Fla., whose body was found along a Denton County highway after Lucas led officers to her shallow grave. Lucas claims the teen-ager he called "Becky" was his common-law wife, and had accompanied him to Texas in early 1962. The couple settled at a religious encampment in the North Texas town of Stoneburg. In August 1982, Lucas told friends he and the teen-ager were driving to Florida, but he returned alone a few

Final arguments ready in Williams trial

DALLAS (AP) — Attorneys prepared final arguments in the trial of a 25-year-old former E-Systems engineer accused of the $31 armed robbery of a suburban convenience store. If convicted by the all-white jury, Anthony Williams could be sentenced to up to life in prison. Civil rights groups say Williams and Lenell Geter, a former roommate and co-worker, are victims of racism and inaccurate police work. Both are black. Williams has pleaded innocent, and a girlfriend testified Monday that she was with him in his Greenville apartment when a 7-Eleven store in Garland was robbed of $31 on Aug. 22, 1982. Geter, who moved with Williams from South Carolina last year to work for E-Systems, Inc., in Greenville, 50 miles northeast of Dallas, was sentenced to life in prison last year for the 1982 robbery of a fried chicken restaurant in the southeast Dallas suburb of Balch Springs. Both sides rested in Williams' trial Monday. A Greenville police detective testified Monday that he considered Williams, who moved to Texas from South Carolina, a suspect because his roommate was suspected of another robbery. At one point, police Lt. James Fortenberry said, he showed robbery victims the pictures of all six E-Systems' black engineers from South Carolina. The prosecution's key witness, Lyla Baggett, who was on duty at the 7-Eleven when it was robbed, testified last week that she had "no doubt" that Williams is the man who robbed her. Karen Moore, who now lives with

Williams in Arlington, testified Monday that she was with Williams in his Greenville apartment when the robbery occurred. When prosecutors asked her why she had not previously told police or investigators that information, she said she originally was uncertain about what night the robbery occurred. Annette Loftin, another friend of Williams, testified she talked with him by phone in Greenville less than one hour before the Garland robbery. Fortenberry, called by the defense, testified he considered Williams a "possible suspect" in a series of North Texas armed robberies several days before the robbery of the Garland store. Fortenberry said that because Geter was a robbery suspect and because Williams was his roommate

Judge rejects man's pleas in Gulf Oil extortion trial

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge rejected a Colorado man's pleas for probation and sentenced him to a maximum 15-year prison term despite his argument that he tried to make up for planting five bombs at a chemical plant as part of a $15 million extortion plot. U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald Monday handed down the maximum sentence to Timothy Wayne Justice, 31. Justice admitted planting the explosives at a Gulf Oil Chemicals Co. Cedar Bayou plant, about 30 miles east of Houston. He struck a plea bargain with prosecutors in which he pleaded guilty to a reduced number of charges in the September 1982 plot. Justice, of Durango, Colo., carried out the promise he made in exchange for the deal, testifying at length in pretrial hearings and at the trial just ended in which Theodore Duane McKinney, 46, was convicted.

Prosecutor Ron Woods told the judge that Justice has been "very cooperative" but added that he and the others are "deeply guilty" of serious offenses. "There is something in the system called punishment," Ms. McDonald said. "You are the individual who planted the bombs. You put bombs at Cedar Bayou." The extortion attempt ended when the bombs were defused and Worth and McKinney were arrested when trying to arrange for a ransom money pickup. Ms. McDonald said the fact that Justice planted the bombs, yet was first to confess and tell the truth to government agents "showed inconsistencies" in his thinking. Justice, who pleaded guilty to using a telephone call to commit a felony and transporting bombs in interstate commerce, was originally charged with 10 additional criminal counts.

UT study: Illegal aliens contribute revenue to state

AUSTIN (AP) — A University of Texas study shows that illegal aliens contribute more revenue to the state than Texas provides in public services to them. However, the report prepared by UT's LBJ School of Public Affairs says urban areas lose money when the public services provided illegal aliens are compared to revenues from those persons. The "Use of Public Services by Undocumented Aliens in Texas" report was prepared for the Governor's Budget and Planning Office. Co-directors of the project were Dr. Sidney Weintraub of the LBJ School and Dr. Gilberto Cardenas of the sociology department. The report, released Monday, found that education is the most costly service for illegal aliens at both the state and local levels and that most illegal aliens pay for their health services. "Our findings show that there is little use by undocumented aliens of social services such as food stamps and Aid to Families of Dependent Children for which undocumented persons are explicitly not qualified," the report said. "When costs and revenues are disaggregated (broken down) by state and local levels, our conclusions is that local governments bear the brunt of the cost burden and the state receives the bulk of the revenues." In comparing revenues and costs, the study looked at two levels — the state and the six urban areas of Austin, Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, El Paso and the Rio Grande Valley centering on McAllen.

LEGAL NOTICES

PUBLIC NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP Notice is hereby given that the Partnership composed of Jan T. Webb and K.R.P. Inc., a Texas Corporation, heretofore doing business under the firm name of "Austin Technical Services Group," also known as "ATS Group," of 3216 W. Park Row, Suite J, Arlington, Tarrant County, Texas 76013, was dissolved on the first day of September, 1983. DATED: October 21, 1983. Jan T. Webb K.R.P. Inc., a Texas Corporation By: Ken Pirany, President

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

Pursuant to Article 5421g, V.A.T.S., notice is hereby given to the City of Midland Parks Department and the general public of a public hearing to be held on the 22nd day of November, 1983, at 1:30 o'clock p.m. in the City Council Chambers at 300 North Laramie Street in the city of Midland, Texas, for the following purpose: The City Council of the City of Midland is contemplating advertising for bids for and executing an all day lease on Section 13, Block 29, T.15, T&P Ry. Co. Survey, Midland County, Texas, commonly known as "Hogan Park." The proposed program or drilling project is described as follows: A. Lessee must agree and obligate itself to restore the surface of all land which might be damaged by its operations hereunder on nearly as possible to its original condition as soon as it has finished with the use of the area where such damages occur. Lessee must further agree to indemnify against any and all claims upon the part of third persons for damages or injuries of any kind or character which might arise from the Lessee's operations hereunder. Specifically since this is a park site with (4) four possible drill sites, it is understood that drill sites will be selected and determined in cooperation with the Director of Parks and Recreation in order to minimize harm or disturbance to any Hogan Park Facility and/or recreation activity. B. On drill sites located within or on the limits of the Hogan Park Golf Course Lessee shall repair all turf and support systems, i.e. cart paths, water lines, sewer lines, etc. to their nearest original condition with greatest care to enclose production off flow lines whenever possible (in undeveloped or non-maintained areas of the Hogan Park Golf Course). The layout and staking of flow and production must be approved by the Parks and Recreation Department. C. All Drill Sites and land areas will be specifically used and approved to accommodate normal drilling operations in cooperation with the Director of Parks and Recreation Department. Permissible drill sites are reflected on a map on file in the office of the City Secretary and available for public inspection. D. The City will prohibit the surface disposal of salt water or oil field waste on the herein above described tract of land and Lessee must agree that any topographical or above ground surface sites will be protected with levers to protect the park use during drilling operations and any subsurface disposal of salt water and/or oil field waste on said tract shall meet with the written approval of the Director of Parks and Recreation Department of the City of Midland Texas. E. The use of potable water from the Hogan Park Golf Course for any primary or secondary recovery will be expressly prohibited and the use of such water for any other purpose is prohibited. F. Lessee must conform to all City Ordinances and codes contained in the City Code, Chapter 6-17 "Oil and Gas Wells." G. Lessee and agent to drill sites must be approved by the Director of Parks and Recreation Department. The site containing a tank battery should be located such that ease of work, normal maintenance and access to said tank battery will be on an asphalt surface sufficient in size and carrying capacity to accommodate proper removal of all production from the tank battery site. This site will be protected by gates and fencing in accordance with all City codes. The public hearing is to advise the City Council in determining whether or not (1) there is a feasible and prudent alternative to the use or taking of such land for the above described project; and (2) such project or project includes all reasonable planning to minimize harm to such land as a park or recreation area resulting from such use or taking. James W. McCullough, City Secretary, City of Midland
