Fighting ebbs in Iraq

Army appears to have crushed rebellions

War popular despite messy peace

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dangerous and messy aftermath of the Persian Gulf War is unlikely to change the public's view of Desert Storm as an undiminished American triumph, according to analysts. After all, says one, "all wars have murky endings."

The flareup over when the war should have been halted, this week's cry of betrayal from Iraq's retreating Kurds, the harsh treatment by Kuwaitis of their Palestinian laborers, democracy's dim prospects and Saddam Hussein's survival have all chipped away at the sharp edge of military victory.

But political scientist John E. Mueller of the University of Rochester, author of "War, Presidents and Public Opinion," said the war's "murky" denouement is typical. The public has come to expect the Mideast to be a

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Iraq's army appeared on Tuesday to have crushed a month-long rebellion as fighting ebbed in the south and Kurdish guerrillas in the north abandoned major cities, fleeing into the mountainous border with Turkey and Iran, administration officials said.

A Bush administration official who monitors the fighting said it was dwindling from a civil war into "a lingering insurgency that the Iraqi government will have to devote some resources against" for months or years to come.

Iraq's official Baath Party newspaper said that the rebellion would be stamped out within days, saying that guerrilla fighters now know that "their inevitable end is near."

Kurdish rebels maintained in turn that they had recaptured the

Mayor calls for LAPD's chief to quit

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — After hesitating for a month after the beating of a black motorist by white police officers, Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles called Tuesday for the resignation of Chief Daryl F. Gates.

"The LAPD's reputation cannot be restored as long as Daryl Gates is at the center of the storm of protest," the mayor told a gathering of reporters in his briefing room on Tuesday afternoon.

"The public has lost confidence in Chief Gates since Rodney King was beaten. I have asked him to show the uncommon courage to retire for the good of the LAPD and the welfare of all of Los Angeles."

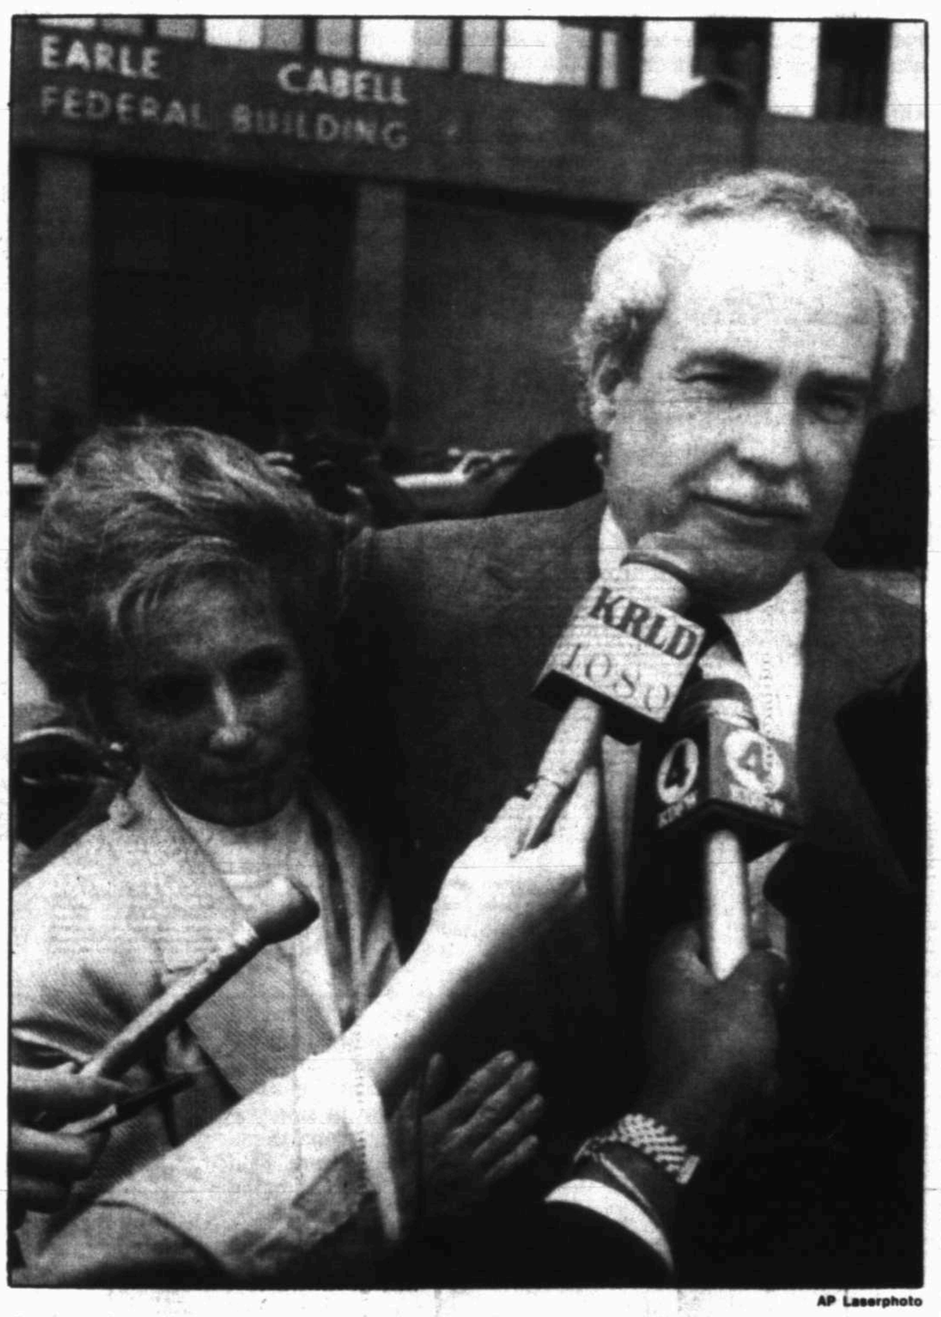

Bradley said he had met Tuesday with the chief and told him of his decision. "He said, 'Mayor. I think you are wrong. and I will not resign,'" Bradley said.

The move adds to the mounting pressure on the 64-year-old chief, who has rejected suggestions that he step aside because of the incident in which the unresisting motorist, Rodney G. King, was kicked and beaten by three officers while more than a dozen others looked on.

Asked by reporters if he would resigned, Gates said only, "No."

Former Vernon Savings & Loan owner Donald Dixon talks to the media Tuesday after he was sentenced to five years in prison for his conviction on 23 counts of bank fraud. With Dixon is his wife, Dana.

Dixon draws 5-year prison sentence, fine

DALLAS — Donald R. Dixon was sentenced Tuesday to five years in jail and ordered to repay almost $600,000 for using money from his Vernon Savings & Loan Association to fund a lavish lifestyle and pay for prostitutes.

Dixon, convicted of 23 counts of bank fraud, could have been sentenced to up to 120 years in jail and fined $5.75 million, but U.S. District Judge Joe Fish said he should not be punished for Vernon's $1.3 billion failure.

Dixon, Vernon's former owner, was convicted in December of illegally using depositors' money to pay for a California beach house and prostitutes.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh called Dixon the "highest of the high fliers among the savings and loan crooks" and his trial had come to symbolize the fraudulent excesses in the troubled thrift industry.

But Fish said the six-week trial did not prove Dixon caused the thrift's 1987 collapse, one of the first costly failures of the savings and loan crisis.

"I think Mr. Dixon is deserving of punishment for the crime of which he was convicted," Fish said. "However, I do not think he

Fire officials: Two stations need replacing

By Brian Pearson

Fire engines with wooden-spoke wheels might look more appropriate in two eastside fire stations that Midland Fire Chief James Roberts called antiquated.

Roberts said Tuesday that he hopes the Midland City Council this year will approve spending federal Community Development Block Grant money to replace them.

It would cost about $400,000 apiece to replace Station 2 and Station 3, which are too small and have plumbing problems, he said. The stations were built in

Woman says she was raped at Kennedys'

PALM BEACH, Fla. (NYT) — A 30-year-old woman says she was raped at the Kennedy family's beachfront estate early Saturday, after encountering Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, one of his sons and one of his nephews at a luxurious nightclub here, the police said Tuesday.

The woman, whose name has not been released, has identified an assailant by name, but investigators have yet to confirm her accusations, said Joseph L. Terlizzese, the chief of the Palm Beach Police Department. The chief would not say who the police had questioned or were seeking to question in the case.

Both Kennedy, the Massachusetts Democrat, and his son Patrick, a 23-year-old senior at Providence College in Providence, R.I., who is also a member of the state Legislature there, issued statements Tuesday saying they were at the estate during Easter weekend but were not involved in the reported attack.

The senator's nephew, William Kennedy Smith, who is in his last term at Georgetown University Medical School in Washington, could not be reached, either through the school or through his mother, Jean Kennedy Smith, the senator's sister, who lives in Manhattan.

'Brett' explains to an assembly at Goddard Junior High the hardships of life behind bars.

Teens hear grim tales of prison

Convicts deliver anti-crime message to students

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Two convicted criminals are roaming the schools of Midland.

Other than the white prison garb they wear and the stories they tell, Texas prisoners No. 565374 and No. 564486 appear to be clean-cut youngsters not too-far removed from the rigors of high school.

But Brett, 20, has served seven months of a 10-year sentence for delivery of cocaine, and Gabriel, 23, has served seven months in a 20-year sentence for delivery of LSD.

They are in Midland from their prison home in Huntsville this week, talking to students about life in prison.

Their evenings are spent at the Midland County Central Detention Facility.

On Tuesday afternoon, about 540 eighth graders at Goddard Junior High got to meet Brett and Gabriel.

"The worst feeling is to have my mom come to jail to visit me with tears running down her face," said Brett, adding that he wasn't seeking sympathy.

The audience replied with solemn faces, laughs and whispers.

"I feel sorry for some of you. I can't help you," Brett said.

Brett and Gabriel related to the youngsters how they were busted in separate incidents, selling drugs to undercover law enforcement officers.

Brett said he was delivering cocaine for a friend. But that's no excuse.

Rescue progress

CARLSBAD, N.M. — An expert cave explorer who suffered a broken leg far inside the nation's deepest cave assisted rescuers Tuesday by giving advice — and was in such good spirits she asked for pizza and a hair brush. About 750 feet beneath the New Mexico desert, Emily Mobley and her rescuers maneuvered over huge boulders, past deep dropoffs and through tight passageways toward the entrance of Lechuguilla Cave in Carlsbad Caverns National Park. Rescuers said they succeeded in lifting her past one of the highest hurdles Tuesday afternoon — a 240-foot litter-borne ascent up a sheer rock face called the Great White Way. The giant step placed her within 1¼ miles of the cave entrance, and officials said they would continue the rescue through the night. "This is cave rescue at its best," said Roy Burkham, 36, head of the rescue team from the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant.

Daley wins election

CHICAGO — Mayor Richard M. Daley was elected to his first full term as mayor Tuesday, easily toppling his opponents to continue a legacy begun by his father more than 35 years ago. "This campaign was a milestone for all of us," Daley said. "We've shattered the myth that with every Chicago election must come bitterness and name-calling." The eldest son of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley was the easy favorite against Harold Washington Party candidate R. Eugene Pincham, Republican George Gottlieb and James A. Warren of the Socialist Workers Party.

Stonewall ends

DALLAS — Film director Oliver Stone has been granted access to the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository, where Lee Harvey Oswald apparently fired the shots that felled President John F. Kennedy. The Dallas County Comissioners agreed Tuesday to grant the filmmaker limited access to the sixth floor for his next movie project, "JFK." The commissioners, on a 3-2 vote, reversed their decision of a week ago denying access to the Dallas landmark, now an assassination exhibit managed by the Dallas County Historical Foundation. The limited access includes the window perch where Oswald, determined by the Warren Commission to be the lone gunman, killed Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963.

STATE

It was cloudy across North Texas on Tuesday but mostly fair in the south, east and far west.

An area of low pressure continued to develop across the Panhandle, with a Pacific cold front trailing across Northwest Texas to the Big Bend. Ahead of this system, a dry line separated moist gulf air to the east from dry air to the west. It streched across western North Texas, serving as the focus for development of afternoon showers and thunderstorms.

Gusty southerly winds prevailed across most of the state, with winds more southwesterly to the west of the dry line. Wind speeds were mainly 15 to 25 miles an hour. Gusts to around 30 miles an hour were common in the west and south central sections. Guadalupe Pass had gusts over 60 miles an hour.

Temperatures statewide were mostly in the 60s and 70s with 80s in far South Texas.

Forecasters expected clouds to linger across North Texas with a chance for thunderstorms, some possibly severe. Clearing from the west. High temperatures today generally in the 70s with 90s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

NATION

Light rain and snow were widely scattered Tuesday from the Northwest onto the Plains and over the Northeast. A bubble of warm air over the upper Midwest pushed temperatures to record highs.

Rain fell over lower elevations of western Washington, northwestern Oregon, southwestern Idaho, west-central Montana, eastern Colorado, southwestern Nebraska and south-central Kansas.

Snow was scattered over south-central Colorado and at higher elevations of western Washington state. Victoria, Colo., got 5 inches of snow overnight.

In the Northeast, rain was widely scattered over New England and northeastern New York state. Light snow was scattered over north-central Pennsylvania and north-central New York state.

WAR: Aftermath unlikely to change public's view quarrelsome place, he said.

(From 1A)

And Everett Carll Ladd, president of the Roper Center for Public Opinion, said the public is equally as unlikely to be disillusioned by the failure of democracy to take root in the region.

"I think there was the sense that someone held power and was using it in a fashion inimical to our interests and it was a good idea to stop it, but not the expectation that democracy was going to flourish there," Ladd said.

They and other analysts of public opinion say the war has taken a fixed place in public opinion as a restorative event after defeat in the Vietnam war and humiliation in the Iranian hostage crisis.

That's the case, they say, despite factors corroding the victory:

■ The fog of postwar diplomacy. Saddam remains in power and U.S. policy toward him amounts to little more than a continuing wish that he will be overthrown.

President Bush's decision against interfering in Iraq's internecine warfare has led to anguished cries from the retreating Kurds. One of their leaders, Massoud Barzani, said the allies have given Saddam a free hand to engage in the kind of genocide at home that they would not tolerate in Kuwait.

■ The reluctance of Kuwait's ruling emirs to share power with their subjects.

Americans aren't accustomed to fighting wars for the rights of royalty to rule. "It will be quite an irony," said political scientist Benjamin Page of Northwestern University, "if it ends up the people we fought for strongly resist any kind of democracy in Kuwait."

■ The heavy Iraqi loss of life. By some authoritative military estimates, 100,000 Iraqi soldiers were killed.

Mueller said the public, recalling the "almost touchingly pathetic" pictures of Iraqi soldiers gratefully surrendering to American soldiers, may come to regret the price inflicted by American bombing.

■ The question of whether Bush stopped the fighting too early.

should be punished for the failure of Vernon Savings & Loan."

He sentenced Dixon to three five-year terms, to be served concurrently. Fish also ordered Dixon to serve five years' probation and 500 hours of community service during the first two years of the probation.

Dixon, who was released until April 23 when he must report to a federal prison, could be eligible for parole in 20 months.

Dixon's attorney, William Ravkind of Dallas, said no decision had been made whether to appeal the case. But Dixon said he thought the sentence was fair.

"I was not tried and convicted for the collapse of Vernon Savings and should not be sentenced for it," Dixon said.

"I'm glad it's over. It's been a nightmare," he said.

"We're pleased that Mr. Dixon is going to jail, that he has been ordered to restore to the FDIC the amount the court has ordered," said prosecutor Robert Hauberg.

But he acknowledged that Fish's sentence was "not an agreement with our proposal" that Dixon serve consecutive prison terms and pay $33 million in restitution.

Dixon, 52, was the 11th person and eighth Vernon officer to be convicted of criminal wrongdoing.

Last April, another federal judge in Dallas sentenced Vernon's former chief executive officer, Woody Lemons, to 30 years in prison, the stiffest penalty given a thrift fraud figure.

Lemons was convicted for soliciting a $9,000 kickback from a loan broker in January 1986 and receiving $212,000 from the broker in April 1986.

Hauberg, who also prosecuted Lemons, said the difference in the cases is that Lemon received Vernon funds directly.

MAYOR: Move adds to mounting pressure on chief

by an amateur cameraman in the Lake View Terrace area of the city and televised nationally, stirring outrage and concerns over the entire issue of police brutality.

The chief, who has led the Los Angeles Police Department for 13 years, is a civil servant and cannot be dismissed by the mayor or the five-member Police Commission, whose members are named by the mayor.

Until now. the 73-year-old mayor, a former police lieutenant who is black, had moved cautiously, stopping short of calling for the chief's resignation, saying only that he thought the chief's "retirement" would hasten the healing process in Los Angeles. But his staff has openly attacked the chief, with whom the mayor has had many disagreements over the years.

As rumors of the mayor's announcement circulated on Tuesday afternoon, Gates avoided direct comment. "Whatever the mayor says is always significant to me," he told The Associated Press during a recess in a Police Commission hearing.

He has denied responsibility for the beating and said he wanted to stay on to restore morale and discipline to the department, which he has served for 42 years.

Four officers involved in the incident, including the supervising sergeant, have been indicted, and several investigations into allegations of racism and excessive force by the 8,300-member police department have begun.

On Monday, Bradley appointed a special committee. The Justice Department is conducting a separate investigation, as is a panel appointed by Gates.

While a chorus of cries for the chief's resignation has come from minority residents here, political leaders have been slow to join in, possibly because the chief enjoys a considerable political following.

Until Tuesday, City Councilman Michael Woo, who represents Hollywood, was the only major local elected official to call for Gates' resignation.

On Tuesday, Bradley said: "Unfortunately, Chief Gates has not recognized the impact he is having on the LAPD. Instead, Chief Gates has embarked on a public relations campaign that has only deepened our wounds and widened our diffences. His reaction to the tragic Rodney King beating has made an ugly situation even worse. Chief Gates has portrayed the public's outrage over the beating as a personal attack on himself and the department, and that is not the case.

"As mayor, I have reluctantly concluded that I can no longer wait for Daryl Gates to do what is best for the LAPD. I can no longer count on him to act in the best interest of all of Los Angeles. That is why today I call on Daryl Gates to resign."

Several community organizations that have been calling for the chief's resignation applauded the mayor's announcement, but added that the move should be seen only as a "first step."

STATIONS: Replacement would cost $400,000 each

(From 1A)

1951.

Station 2 is located at the Baird Street and New Jersey Avenue intersection, while Station 3 is at Golf Course Road and Edwards Street. There are four firefighters per shift at each station.

"There are people working in them 24 hours a day, 365 days a year," Roberts said. "I'm not sure there's any other building in the city that has had that kind of usage for 40 years.

"If I were a fireman I wouldn't want to spend 24 hours over there."

Although both stations underwent renovations about 10 years ago, he said the facilities still are inadequate.

"It's time to rebuild them," he said. "They play an important role in their neighborhoods. They're both in low-income parts of town, where you traditionally have the most fire and ambulance calls."

Roberts said he will make his proposal to city councilmen in May, when CDBG applications are reviewed.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said it will be up to the council to decide whether replacing the stations has priority over other proposals.

"I can't tell you what the priorities will be," McGregor said. "It will be looked at and rated with other CDBG projects."

CDBG money must be spent to upgrade living conditions in selected low- to moderate-income neighborhoods. Both stations are within CDBG territory.

Roberts said he hopes the stations are not only rebuilt but play a more diversified community role.

They could serve as police substations as well as a meeting place for neighborhood residents, he said.

Councilman Bill Williams said the city has put the stations on the financial back burner too long.

"It's been on the CDBG wish list three or four times. But it doesn't get close enough to the top of the list," Williams said. "It's something we keep putting off until the next year."

Williams, who is not seeking reelection to his District 1 seat in the May 4 election, said the council should nudge the stations up the CDBG list this year.

"In essence those are people's homes and eventually they need to be renovated," he said.

Councilman Tom Johnston said he has no qualms about making the stations a CDBG priority.

"I wholeheartedly agree," Johnston said. "They're outmoded and outdated. They don't function as modern fire stations. They need to be replaced."

MESSAGE: 'Some will still end up in prison'

(From 1A)

"I don't think any of you have a friend that will go to the penitentiary if they can send you," said Brett, who comes from Denton.

When youngsters made snide remarks and gestures among themselves, Gabriel, an Odessan, said he knew where they were coming from.

"I never thought I'd go to prison, but here I am," Gabriel said.

"It's never going to be me. ... I'm too slick. This is what everybody thinks," Gabriel said.

The two inmates described a grim prison life to the youngsters.

"At 2:45 a.m., that's the time you wake up if you want to eat chow (breakfast)," Brett said.

"You know the type of people you eat with? Murderers, rapers and child molesters," Brett said. Brett went on to describe his day of work in the prison garden.

"I guarantee it's the hardest work I've ever done," he said.

Recitation of the deprivation of little things teen-agers take for granted brought the most silence among the audience.

"You can't have a cold drink. All drinks in prison are room temperature," Gabriel said.

"In prison, you have no freedom. From the time you wake up to the time you go to bed, you are told what to do. You do have three decisions — whether you want breakfast, lunch or dinner," Gabriel said.

Despite descriptions of harsh prison life, some youngsters will still end up in prison, Gabriel and Brett said.

Youngsters interviewed — both those who appeared to take the talk seriously and others who obviously did not — agreed.

But the program is a success if it just deters a few youngsters, said Joan Lewellen, president of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission that sponsored the appearance.

"It is just one way we are trying to reach kids to help them realize the consequences of some of the choices they are going to make," Ms. Lewellen said.

Brett and Gabriel, who reveal only their first names, are two of five inmates who travel around the state as part of "Operation Kick It," conducted by the Texas Department of Corrections.

More that 225,000 youngsters will hear their message in 1991, according to Hugh M. Bryan, assistant administrator of the community-education program for TDC.

In Midland, Brett and Gabriel will have talked to 18 groups by March 11.

Then they head back to Huntsville.

COMPLAINT: Police have yet to confirm accusations

(From 1A)

nessman who managed many of the Kennedy family political campaigns, including John F. Kennedy's successful run for the presidency in 1960, died last August.

According to a statement issued by the Palm Beach police, the woman said she was raped about 4 a.m. Saturday on the grounds of the Kennedys' Mediterranean-style mansion and was treated a local hospital Saturday afternoon for minor injuries.

Her complaint was filed at 2:32 p.m., about 10½ hours after she said the attack occurred, said Officer Craig Gunkel, the police department spokesman. He said he thought "psychological factors" were responible for her delay in filing the complaint.

Shortly after the woman got in touch with the police Saturday afternoon, investigators were sent to the Kennedy compound, but by that time the man identified by the woman as her assailant had left Palm Beach, Terlizzese said in interviews Tuesday.

Asked whether he was satisfied that investigators have been able to question all members of the Kennedy family who might have information on the case, Terlizzese said, "We are not satisfied."

Terlizzese said the woman told investigators that she met Kennedy and his party late Friday night or early Saturday at Au Bar, a drinking establishment that has a loyal following among some of the wealthiest and most fashionable people here.

The woman said that after spending some time at the Kennedys' table, "she went up there for a couple of cocktails," the chief said, referring to the Kennedy compound.

Holly Montgomery, a Palm Beach resident, said she and her husband, Michael, went to the club about 1 a.m. after attending a party. Sometime later, she said, she saw the senator talking and laughing with a group of people in the crowded bar.

A local businesswoman, who asked not to be identified, said she saw the senator accompanied by several other men and women still at the bar well after the last round of drinks was served at 3 a.m. on Saturday.

Members of the Kennedy family have made regular winter and spring visits to their villa on North Ocean Boulevard since its purchase in 1933.

David Kennedy, son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, died of a drug overdose in a Palm Beach hotel during one such Easter sojourn in 1984.

The Kennedy villa, designed by Addison Mizner, the architect who put his signature on the Palm Beach style of Mediterranean mansions, has about six large bedrooms and extensive servant quarters.

Thick hedges of sea grape and cypress block any public view from the street, and there is a high wall on the beach that gives the compound a bunker-like appearance.

Although the complaint was filed Saturday afternoon, the police department did not officially release any information on it until Monday morning and since then the authorities have declined to discuss details of the case in their formal statements.

The police, for instance, will not say whether anyone is officially considered a suspect despite the woman's identification of an atacker.

Nor will they say whether or not they have any physical evidence of a rape, such as semen samples, even though the woman received hospital treatment.

IRAQ: Hit-and-run raids replace sustained battles important northern city of Kirkuk, which government troops had occupied over the weekend, but Bush administration officials said the city remains in government hands.

Since the American-led coalition of forces drove Iraqi troops from Kuwait last month, President Saddam Hussein's government in Baghdad had been seriously challenged by rebellions by Shiite Muslims in the south and in the north by Kurds, who have waged guerrilla war against Baghdad intermittently since the 1920s.

A Pentagon spokesman, Bob Hall, declined to state flatly that Iraq had suppressed the four-week-old rebellion, calling that a "subjective" judgment. He said that large numbers of Kurdish rebels in the mountains still may be capable of a counterattack, and that the army has not secured some rural areas.

But government troops "occupy the major population centers," he said, adding, "They can exercise physical control when they want to if they put large enough units around."

Sustained battles have been replaced in the last week by hit-and-run guerrilla raids and scattered civil unrest in the southern city of Basra and lesser towns, administration officials said.

The Iraqi government's success against the rebellions leaves the region with a flood of refugees, and representatives of the rebels are among those who have criticized the United States for its refusal to intervene in the uprising against Saddam.

Turkey's National Security Council stated Tuesday that more than 200,000 women and children, some near death, were headed toward its border, and it asked the United Nations to convene a Security Council meeting on the matter.

The semi-official Turkish news agency, Anatolia, quoted journalists as estimating that 2.5 million Iraqis were fleeing toward Turkey and Iran. Bush administration analysts said that figure was probably exaggerated and added that the actual size of the exodus is not known.

In Washington, the State Department said that it would conduct four meetings this week with representatives of Iraqi dissidents. Among those expected to attend are Sunni Muslim Arabs, the group that predominates in the Iraqi government; Shiite Muslims, who number around 10 million of the nation's 18 million people; Kurds, who account for about a fifth of the nation's population, and Iraqi-Americans.

The first meeting, between Assistant Secretary of State John Kelly and six Muslim intellectuals opposed to Saddam's regime, will be held on Wednesday.

The sessions appeared intended to dampen criticism of the administration for its refusal to commit American troops or military aid to the uprising. The State Department's spokeswoman, Margaret D. Tutwiler, said Tuesday that the meetings reflect no change in the administration's policy of allowing Iraq to resolve its internal divisions without outside interference.

She noted that neither the United Nations nor the United States' partners in the military coalition against Iraq have suggested that outside force be used to overthrow the Saddam government.

Other American officials said Tuesday that Saddam's forces had consolidated their hold on power and that the Iraqi leader's position appears secure for the time being.

American intelligence reports suggested that the uprising may actually have prolonged Saddam's rule by forcing his military critics to rally behind him, out of fear that a successful Shiite revolt would end with their execution.

American officials said Tuesday that the apparent victory of the Iraqi army against Kurdish forces was less a rout than a strategic retreat by the Kurds.

The Pentagon said Tuesday that Saddam's troops had retaken three major towns in northern Iraq, Erbil, Dahuk and Zakhu, leaving Kurdish forces in control only of rural villages and one provincial capital, Sulaimaniya,near the border with Iran. Officials said that the Kurds had left some of those towns without putting up a fight.

The State Department said the army had begun to raze much of the town of Tuz Khurmatu, about 100 miles north of Baghdad, apparently in retaliation for heavy resistance mounted in the area against government troops.

Prices soar but Soviet lines stay long

MOSCOW (NYT) — After waiting and worrying and hoarding, Soviet citizens faced the first day of steep consumer price increases Tuesday by doing what they have been doing every day for years: they stood in lines for shabby and scarce goods and grumbled about the government's ineptitude in improving the country's grave economic lot.

Many stores around Moscow were closed, their windows bearing handwritten signs that said "No Goods." Despite widespread expectations that officials would stock a cornucopia of products in the stores to offset the unpopular move, the flood of goods generally failed to materialize.

Where there were things for sale — at prices double, triple and sometimes quadruple the levels on Monday — there were the usual webs of weary shoppers, lending resonance to the Soviet adage that lines are a good sign, because at least it means that something is for sale.

"There's nothing more here than when I came yesterday," said Galina Klachkova, as she waited in line outside a dairy store on Sadovo Karetnaya Street in the center of Moscow. "And I don't think there's going to be any more than usual in the stores anytime soon. Where would they get it from?

"Production is down, and these idiots in the leadership are like a bunch of squirrels racing around a wheel. They're not getting anywhere, and neither are we."

Tuesday, the official press agency Tass described the price increases as "the most unpopular of all the decisions taken by the Soviet leadership" since Mikhail S. Gorbachev came to power in 1985.

Mrs. Klachkova waited nearly two hours to pay for and buy a few packages of cottage cheese — the price more than doubling overnight from 35 to 83 kopeks for a kilogram, just over two pounds — and the line that stretched before her and grew behind her was a study in resignation and anger.

At the dingy store, fortuitously stocked for a spell Tuesday with eggs, cream, sour cream, cottage cheese, dumplings and low-grade sausage, there was little socializing among the strangers as they muddled through the demoralizing ritual of waiting.

But there was communal commiserating over how these price increases were yet another indignity imposed upon them by a government unwilling to commit to full market reforms and unable to perform under the centralized controls it refuses to renounce.

"Is there milk?' asked Olga Bukhanova, 35, an administrative worker in the nearby Automobile Transportation Ministry, as she joined the line in the early afternoon.

Galina Berezhnaya, a retired kindergarten teacher, replied, "They say no."

"Earlier they say there was sour cream and eggs and cream and kefir," a fermented milk product, she said, adding, "but now they're pretty much down to cottage cheese, some cheap sausage and eggs."

Mrs. Bukhanova sighed, keeping her place in line all the same, "They raised prices and there's still nothing."

AP Laserphoto

A line of Moscow shoppers jam a counter to buy milk Tuesday at a state-owned food shop as price increases took effect. The price of milk doubled overnight.

Mrs. Berezhnaya, more versed in the empty promises of her government, said, "You expected anything different?"

About 40 minutes later, as Mrs. Berezhnaya was three customers away from paying for eggs — customers in Moscow first stand in a line to pay for their goods, then in another to collect them — a bespectacled man made a sudden announcement that eggs would no longer be sold, pending a clarification of the proper price.

"These days, people are in a constant state of panic," said Alimazhan Sharipov, who has worked for 20 years as a stock clerk in the store.

Meanwhile, as the egg prices were being debated, the store ran out of cream, then sour cream, then kefir. Still, it remained full of shoppers waiting to buy eggs, which were eventually put back out at a new price of 2.20 rubles.

The average salary for workers in Soviet government jobs is about 270 rubles a month, while workers in cooperatives and other high-paying enterprises may earn more than 1,000 rubles a month. The government has said it will raise pay as partial compensation for the price increases.

Communists end bid for Yeltsin's ouster

MOSCOW (NYT) — The Communist apparatus retreated Tuesday from its attempt to bring down Boris N. Yeltsin, president of the Russian republic, after a week of hardball politics that seemed only to have increased his popularity in relation to that of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

While the political challenge to Yeltsin's authority was being scrapped in the Parliament of the Russian republic, the largest and most powerful of the nation's 15 constituent republics, the latest deficit figures at the national treasury were announced.

Officials held the Russian republic's separatist politics, championed by Yeltsin, mainly responsible for a shortfall of more than 20 billion rubles in national tax revenue that was withheld in the first two months of this year.

Late last year, the Russian republic said it would limit its contributions to the national budget, which normally amount to about half the payments to the national till, and a handful of other republics followed suit.

In the Russian republic's Parliament on Tuesday, Ivan Polozkov, a Yeltsin antagonist and leader of the Russian Communist Party, sought to put a statesman's edge on the Communist machine's retreat.

"The situation in Russia is bad, and it is our duty to stop the decline in all spheres of life," he said.

"I believe this is not the moment to change the leadership," said Polozkov, trying to end the challenge started when the legislature's hard-line wing called for a meeting to challenge Yeltsin in an effort to force him from office.

On the opening day of the session last Thursday, about 100,000 people rallied in Moscow in support of Yeltsin, despite a Kremlin order banning demonstrations in the capital. The demonstration produced widespread criticism of Gorbachev, and since then the Russian Parliament has failed to place on its agenda a vote on the Yeltsin issue. Tuesday again, the hard-liners could not get enough votes to put the issue on the ballot.

Domestically, Gorbachev is now the choice for leader of only 14 percent of the nation, against Yeltsin's 70 percent, according to a new opinion poll of 3,000 people conducted nationwide by U.S. News & World Report.

At least one newspaper in Moscow described the events of the last week as further evidence of the rapid decline of Gorbachev's fortunes. Kommersant, an important independent paper, described the week as "Gorbachev's Waterloo."

"The gunslinger has no bullets," the business weekly declared of the Soviet leader on its front page, in a tone of summary disrespect that is becoming commonplace among the democratic opposition, hard-line Communists and an ever larger part of the public.

Another paper, Moscow News, praised Yeltsin's "amazing stability of opinions."

"Now we are on the verge of admitting that Gorbachev has been just another of our exaggerations," it declared in a two-page essay that read like a political epitaph.

Terrorists claim murder of German industrialist

BONN, Germany (AP) — The murder of an industrialist charged with transforming eastern Germany's economy into a free-market system sparked fears Tuesday that the woes of unification may fuel terrorism.

The leftist Red Army Faction terrorist gang claimed responsibility for the killing of 58-year-old Detlev Rohwedder, who was shot by gunmen lurking outside his mansion in Duesseldorf in western Germany.

Found on a bench nearby were binoculars and a note from the Red Army claiming responsibility.

Yet many politicians and observers were asking whether renegade members of former East Germany's Stasi secret police may have been involved in order to throw a wrench into unity's delicate machinery.

Spokesman Willy Fundermann, Bundeskriminalamt, a sort of German FBI, said "non-typical" methods were used that did not bear the clear signature of any particular group. He did not elaborate.

Rolf Hannich, spokesman for the Federal Prosecutor's Office in Karlsruhe, said all that could be said with certainty was that the Red Army had claimed responsibility.

Whoever the culprits were, the assassination raised the specter of violence at a sensitive time for a country united only six months ago on Wednesday.

Many in the east are upset by their region's economic problems, and Rohwedder's agency had come under particular fire in recent weeks for allegedly failing to keep east German businesses afloat and jobs available.

He was appointed by Conservative Chancellor Helmut Kohl last summer as president of the Treuhandanstalt, an agency that assumed ownership of virtually all goverment assets in eastern Germany.

IG Metall, the giant German labor union, suspended weekly Monday demonstrations in Leipzig because of the attack. The protests had denounced the slow pace of east Germany's recovery and criticized Treuhand, which means Trustee.

Jochen Kletzin, the union's spokesman, said the union feared further protests could lead to an "escalation of violence."

Others feared that leftist radicals might try to win supporters among disgruntled eastern Germans.

Manfred Stolpe, governor of eastern Germany's Brandenburg state, called the assassination "a dangerous signal that political criminals want to exploit the mood in the east."

ZDF television, without giving its sources, said that "there is also suspicion" that former Stasi members were involved.

Just last week, German justice officials said the Stasi had trained Red Army Faction members who tried to kill a U.S. general and other soldiers in West Germany in 1981.

Also last week, unknown assailants firebombed a Treuhandanstalt office in Berlin. There was speculation, still unproven, that Stasi agents were involved because information about secret police workers was kept there.

Pro-Iranian terrorists may release hostages

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The foreign minister of Switzerland, the intermediary between Iran and the United States, arrived Tuesday in Tehran amid growing signs that Western hostages held by pro-Iranian radicals in Lebanon could soon be freed.

Tehran radio, monitored in Nicosia, said Rene Felber would meet during his three-day visit with Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani and Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati.

British businessman Roger Cooper was released from a Tehran prison on Tuesday after nearly 5½ years in prison on espionage charges.

The freeing of Cooper is believed linked to the decision of a London court last month to drop charges against Mehrdad Kokabi, an Iranian student implicated in a series of arson attacks on bookshops in Britain.

The release of Cooper was seen as a further sign that Rafsanjani, who is believed to want to improve ties with the West and close the chapter on Iran's involvement in terrorism, was ready to order the release of the hostages.

During the Gulf War, Rafsanjani made repeated contacts with Washington through the Swiss embassy in Tehran, which has handled U.S. interests since Tehran and Washington severed diplomatic ties in 1979.

Sources in Tehran, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Iranian officials sensed an unprecedented "seriousness" in Washington to solve the hostages issue in a "comprehensive way." What the officials mean, the sources said, is that Washington has promised to help unfreeze billions of dollars of Iranian assets.

During the hostage crisis, the United States froze Iranian investments and military hardware that had been bought by the late Iranian monarch Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi before he was toppled in the 1979 revolution. The funds have been Rafsanjani's principal condition for freeing the hostages.

The Swiss visit is aimed at working out the final details of the deal, the sources said.

In Bonn, meanwhile, a government spokesman said Tuesday that Germany has contacted officials in the Middle East to try to gain the release of two Germans believed held in Lebanon.

Renate Schimkureit of the Foreign Ministry made the remarks when asked about the status of Heinrich Struebig, 49, and Thomas Kemptner, 29, aid workers who disappeared in 1989.

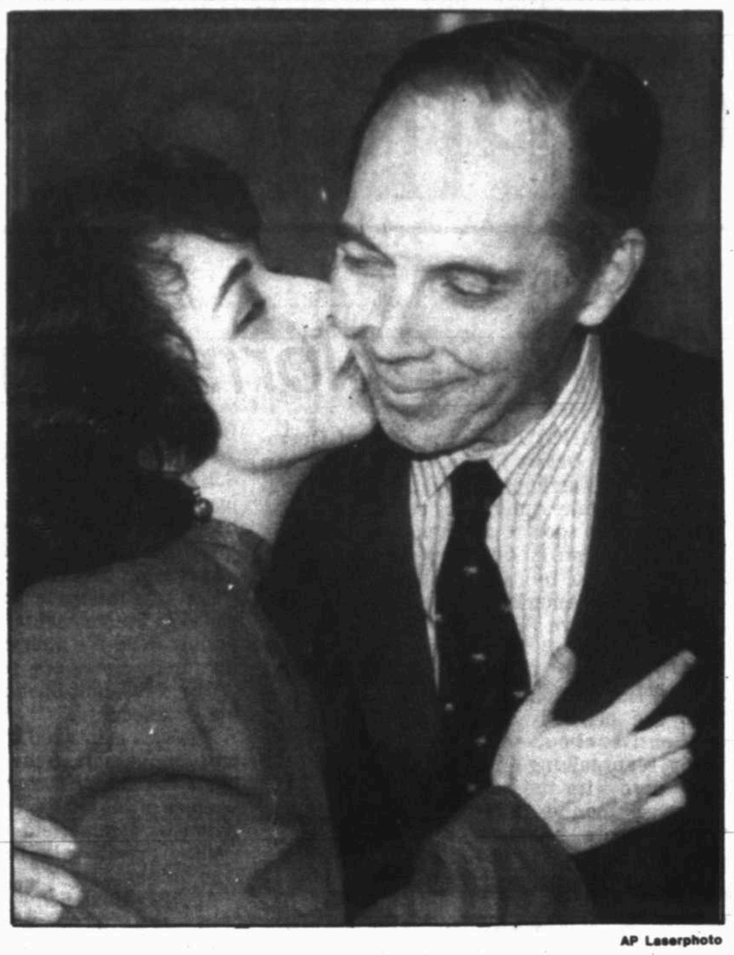

Most of the hostages are believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite Muslim factions under the umbrella of the Hezbollah.

The missing Westerners include six Americans, four Britons, two Germans and an Italian.

Sources close to the Hezbollah in Lebanon, who wanted to remain anonymous, confirmed that details of a deal to free the hostages were being hammered out and said part of that agreement involved the amount of money Iran intends to give the Hezbollah as a "reward."

The sources in both Tehran and Lebanon cautioned that the hostages would not be freed before the end of Ramadan, the Islamic holy month of fasting, in mid-April.

The hostage-takers and the Iranians had previously also demanded the release of Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, a Shiite Muslim cleric abducted from Lebanon by Israeli paratroopers in July 1989, and the freeing of Arabs imprisoned by Israel and its proxy Lebanese militia.

U.N.: Iraq must scrap threatening Scuds

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraq will have to scrap all its Scud-type missiles capable of hitting Israel under the Security Council's proposed Gulf War cease-fire resolution, according to a text of the document obtained Tuesday.

Western diplomats predicted the sweeping resolution, which strips Iraq of the ability to threaten its neighbors, would be adopted Wednesday.

The missile-range issue was the last major unresolved issue among the five permanent council members — the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain and France.

Diplomats also focused on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's military onslaught against the Kurds and Shiite Muslims trying to topple his government.

In Paris, Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said France was asking that the United Nations intervene to "stop the actions of extermination" against Kurds. France's U.N. ambassador said his country sought a separate Security Council resolution to get Saddam to negotiate with Kurdish and Shiite rebels.

But Britain, the Soviets and the United States apparently rejected the idea.

British Ambassador Sir David Hannay noted, "There is a very long tradition of not interfering in the internal affairs of any member-state."

When asked if the council should deal with the issue, Soviet Ambassador Yuli Vorontsov shook his head no, emphatically.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said France had made no proposal for a separate resolution.

"We have checked, and we know of no such proposal to bring this issue to the ... Security Council by the French government," she said in Washington. "So it doesn't exist."

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said he was "gravely concerned about reports of heavy fighting and bloodshed in both northern and southern Iraq" and urged Saddam's government to halt its campaign against the rebels.

The U.N. chief said he "is worried about the substantial increase in the number of Kurdish and Shiite refugees entering Iran and Turkey in the past few days."

Turkey told its U.N. ambassador to request an urgent meeting of the Security Council to discuss the plight of at least 200,000 Kurdish refugees who want to enter Turkey from northern Iraq.

The United States is pressing for adoption of the Gulf War cease-fire resolution so it can withdraw American troops from the region.

Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir Al-Anbari on Monday complained that the cease-fire resolution "doesn't call for a permanent cessation of hostilities."

Hannay noted that if Iraq doesn't accept the resolution, it leaves open the possibility of the resumption of hostilities. If it does accept, and complies with the resolution, the U.N. economic embargo of Iraq would be lifted.

The resolution demands destruction of Iraq's chemical and biological weapons, nuclear weapons-grade materials and most missiles under U.N. supervision. The United Nations would demarcate and patrol the Iraq-Kuwait border.

Some non-aligned nations object, arguing this gives the United Nations power to infringe upon what are properly domestic affairs.

Western diplomats said they hoped for a positive vote from China but were sure China would at least abstain.

A new draft of the resolution began circulating Tuesday that resolved the final issue: whether Iraq would be able to keep some short-range missiles, as Moscow urged, or whether they all would be destroyed, under a U.S. proposal.

The new draft says that all Iraqi ballistic missiles with a range of over 150 kilometers (93 miles) must be scrapped. That would leave Iraq unable to lob missiles into Israel, as it did during the Gulf War.

Alleged Saddam 'front' companies elusive

LONDON (AP) — The British government said Tuesday it planned no new action against the 33 British-based companies listed by the United States as fronts for Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to get arms or hide stolen oil profits.

Most of the British-based companies were not listed in the telephone directory, had telephone numbers no longer in use or did not return calls seeking comment.

Spokesmen for those that did denied wrongdoing and said they were shocked at being included on the list of 89 companies the U.S. Department of the Treasury says have helped build Iraq's war machine.

A British trade official said the Treasury mainly intended the list as a guidance for American companies, so they'll know which firms the treasury believes trade with Iraq.

"This is not a document the United States is expecting us to do anything about. ... We've taken what action we can," a spokesman at the Department of Trade and Industry said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

In Italy, two of the three firms listed there are owned by the same man, Kassim Abbas, who was expelled in January and is believed to be living in Frankfurt, Germany, the Italian Interior Ministry said.

A man identified as the personnel manager at one of Abbas' companies, S.M.I., denied on state television that arms were made there.

The Honduran government is investigating two companies listed there, officials said Tuesday. The Foreign Ministry of the Central American nation said that on Oct. 11 it cancelled the registry of four Honduran flag ships that allegedly belong to Saddam's relatives.

The British-based companies listed range from those openly controlled by the Iraqi government to those known to have had trading links with the Iraq, said one British official.

Britain froze the assets of some of the listed companies last August to comply with U.N. trade sanctions, after Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, and has investigated others, the Trade Department spokesman said.

Robert Khoshaba, one of 13 people with British addresses on the U.S. list, said he had complained to the U.S. Embassy about being listed.

"It is destroying my reputation," Khoshaba said.

He said he worked for a year as an accountant for a London company, the Technology and Development Group, which U.S. officials suspected of laundering money for the Iraqis.

Khoshaba said he left the company on Aug. 1, a day before Iraq invaded Kuwait. "If someone had told me don't work for that company, I would not have worked for that company," he said.

The manager of London's Iraq Reinsurance Company, owned by the Iraqi government, said the company dealt only with the London insurance market and had no connection with arms trading.

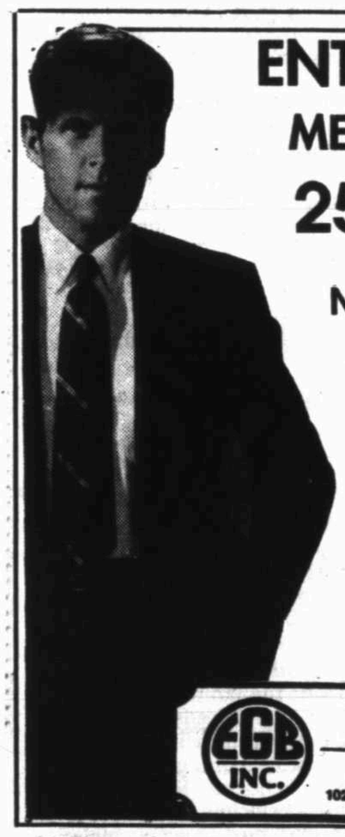

Another company, Euromac Ltd., and its owner, Ali Ashour Daghir, a dual Iraqi-British citizen, were charged in September with trying to export nuclear detonating triggers to Iraq a year ago.

A company with a similar name in Italy, Euromac Trasporti International, belonged to the expelled Abbas and was one of those being liquidated, Italian officials said.

In Britain, the opposition Labor Party said the Conservative government should identify which names on the U.S. list had broken the arms embargo and clear any that had done nothing wrong.

"It is now time for us to be told which companies broke the arms embargo against Iraq and what action will be taken," said Labor Party spokesman Gordon Brown.

New drug thrust tied to education

Bob Martinez, the law-and-order former governor from Florida who now heads the Office of National Drug Control Policy, is giving good advice to President Bush when he says there needs to be more emphasis on drug prevention and treatment of abuse in the national war on drugs.

Bush already has recommended an 11 percent increase in federal anti-drug spending for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. That will be a whopping $11.6 billion expenditure, but it will be worth every penny if Martinez and his staff can help stem the flow of illicit drugs to this country and convince the youngsters at risk in this nation not to take illegal drugs the first time.

In a recent interview, the new "drug czar" noted that "every year we get a new crop of youngsters that reach the age that they could begin to experiment with drugs, and we've got to make sure that we educate them away from the use of drugs. Every year we'll have some new addicts, unfortunately, and we've got to provide the treatment for those who are prepared to receive it."

Martinez is absolutely correct. The "drug problem" in this nation is multi-faceted and a single-pronged approach to it would be about as effective as fighting a grassfire with a garden hose. The fire will spread faster than you can work to put out blazes, race behind you, or leapfrog over you.

Under William Bennett's direction, the Office of National Drug Control Policy properly placed its emphasis on getting Americans to recognize the drug problem and demand action to counter it. In fact, under Bennett the office placed 70 percent of its federal anti-drug spending on stemming the flow of drugs into this nation and 30 percent to reducing the demand for drugs. The new bill Bush has introduced leaves at 70 percent the amount earmarked for law enforcement.

President Bush touched on the stronger emphasis expected to be placed on treatment when he said, "Any long-term solution also depends on successful education and treatment."

This new direction for the anti-drug program shows that the administration recognizes that a multi-pronged policy will be needed to overcome the efforts of the "drug lords." That's good; this nation needs to target the insidious threat posed by those who profit at the misery of others.

Stopping the flow of drugs into this country is an important element in the war against drugs, but education of our young people against the threat posed by illicit narcotics is the key.

Filipinos deserve U.S. citizenship

Filipino sailors who survived the Persian Gulf War are now battling a tough new opponent — American bureaucracy. A presidential order officially declaring the gulf conflict "a period of hostility" is expected soon. It will make thousands of resident aliens and foreign nationals who served in the U.S. armed forces immediately eligible for citizenship.

All, that is, except for the Filipinos whose dreams of citizenship could become casualties of a quirk in the law.

The expected executive order will open a fast track to citizenship to those in the military who at the time of enlistment "shall have been in the United States, the Canal Zone, American Samoa or Swains Island, whether or not he has been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence."

Notably missing in that list are Filipinos recruited by the United States in their homeland. It's an oversight that should have been corrected years ago.

Last year, the Senate unanimously endorsed a bill that would have opened citizenship to Filipino service personnel after they served for six years and re-enlisted for another six, with or without a war. The legislation was lost in the crunch of last-minute bills and never reached the House floor, where approval was virtually certain. The House had endorsed a similar bill the previous year.

Filipinos' brave service in the Gulf War should assure success this time around. The Senate bill — sponsored by Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Alan Simpson, R-Wyo. — has been reintroduced. And Reps. Duncan Hunter and Randall "Duke" Cunningham, both R-Calif., have introduced a bill that would ensure that at least the Filipinos who served during the Gulf War get a chance at citizenship. The Hunter-Cunningham bill would simply add "or in a former possession or colony of the United States" to the list of approved recruitment sites now in the law.

Both bills should become law.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, April 3, the 93rd day of 1991. There are 272 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 3, 1860, the legendary Pony Express began service between St. Joseph, Missouri, and Sacramento, Calif. The service lasted only a year and a-half before giving way to the transcontinental telegraph.

On this date:

In 1776, George Washington received an honorary doctor of laws degree from Harvard College.

In 1783, Washington Irving, author of "Rip Van Winkle" and "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," was born in New York City.

In 1865, Union forces occupied the Confederate capital of Richmond, Va., during the Civil War.

In 1882, the notorious outlaw Jesse James was shot to death in St. Joseph, Mo., by Robert Ford, a member of his own gang.

In 1936, Bruno Hauptmann was electrocuted in Trenton, N.J., for the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh infant.

In 1946, Lt. Gen. Masaharu Homma, the Japanese officer responsible for the Bataan Death March during World War II, was executed.

In 1948, President Truman signed the Marshall Plan, which allocated more than $5 billion in aid for 16 European countries.

In 1968, North Vietnam agreed to meet with U.S. representatives to set up preliminary peace talks.

In 1979, Jane M. Byrne became the first woman to be elected mayor of Chicago, as she defeated Republican Wallace D. Johnson.

JACK ANDERSON

Stormin' Norman more than a general

WASHINGTON — The hero of Operation Desert Storm, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, is expected, as his next conquest, to take America by storm. He will be coming home soon to a tumultuous welcome.

Anderson

Already, polls acclaim him to be the most popular American — a notch above President Bush himself. That has unnerved some White House politicos who are privately apprehensive about this burly, blunt-talking military hero with the no-nonsense manner and outreaching humor. Schwarzkopf's party affiliation is independent, but there is talk in Washington that he leans toward the Democrats.

Americans are just getting acquainted with Schwarzkopf, who may continue to play a role in their lives. They need a closer look at the human face behind the warrior's mask. So Zebra Books asked us to dig into his background and present his life story in a paperback book.

For two intensive weeks, our staff has engaged in the journalistic equivalent of the two-minute drill. We interviewed more than 100 of his family members, friends, co-workers and critics. President Bush even contributed a couple of anecdotes.

America is in need of a hero and has found one. In Vietnam, Schwarzkopf was a muddy-boots commander whose first priority was the welfare of his troops. Once, he stepped gingerly across a minefield to rescue a screaming, flailing private who had been mangled by a land mine.

Another time, Schwarzkopf dashed through enemy territory to rescue some injured soldiers who had been separated from his unit. He repeatedly demonstrated a remarkable physical courage. During one firefight, he was wounded, yet refused to take cover or be medically evacuated until his mission was accomplished.

Despite Schwarzkopf's battlefield heroics, he never lost his humanity, or his humility. He is a general who hates war and is repulsed by those who glory in it. He encountered generals in Vietnam whom he described as "war lovers."

"They scared the living hell out of me," he told us. By his standards, they're "not very good generals."

Schwarzkopf kept a well-thumbed, camouflage-covered Bible beside his bed in Saudi Arabia. Yet, according to his family, he is not a Sunday-go-to-meeting Christian. His sister, Sally Schwarzkopf, said she wouldn't call him religious. "I would call him spiritual."

At the dawn of Desert Storm, Gen. Schwarzkopf assembled his full staff in the war room in Riyadh and asked the chief chaplain, Col. David Peterson, to pray for the protection of his troops. Then Schwarzkopf ordered the playing of one of his favorite songs, Lee Greenwood's "God Bless the USA."

"War is an intensely personal, emotional experience for everyone that is involved in it," Schwarzkopf has said. "And you know you have to draw your strength from whatever sources you draw your strength from."

Those who know Schwarzkopf expect him to throw his great weight into a cause, but they don't think that cause will be politics. He dropped this small hint: One of his historical heroes is Chief Joseph, of the Nez Perce Indian tribe. For years, Chief Joseph outfought and outmaneuvered superior federal forces. He never surrendered. Then one day, he simply quit and declared with finality: "I will fight no more forever."

Wolfing down the goodies in Washington

I was having dinner in a Washington restaurant with Belberg. He had a large piece of steak on his plate and called the waiter over to our table. "Would you put this in a doggie bag for me, please?" he said.

"Yes, sir."

Buchwald

When the waiter disappeared, I whispered to Belberg, "You do that every time we go out to eat."

"Do what?"

"Ask them to put your leftovers in a doggie bag. There's nothing wrong with this except that you haven't got a dog."

"They don't know that," Belberg said.

"That's not the point. By asking for a doggie bag, you're living a lie."

"I'm doing it because the restaurant help are much nicer to you if they think you're a dog owner. I suspect that most of them have dogs. Besides, when you ask for a bag it makes them feel that the food is not going to waste."

"I don't know if I should trust someone who gets food wrapped for a dog he doesn't even own."

"Who's getting hurt?" Belberg wanted to know. "Look, the restaurant is happy to get rid of the food, everyone thinks that I'm a real good guy, and when I leave I'm carrying a package that a French poodle would kill for."

"What do you do with the food?"

"I usually dump it in the trash can next to my apartment house."

"Why don't you give it to a dog?" I shouted at him.

"I don't want any canines in my building to become dependent on me. As a matter of fact, that's why I don't own a dog. They're always expecting you to bring home the leftovers when you go to a restaurant."

"I'm glad that there are not many people like you who are chiseling dog scraps from the management."

"What difference does it make what I do with my leftovers? I'm paying for them."

"What happens if an employee asks you your dog's name?"

"I tell them it's Czar Nicholas, and his breed originated in Rasputin's monastery."

"Well, at least you give them a good story."

"For a guy who never had a dog, I'm the best. Sometimes after I finish a story the waiter goes back into the kitchen and throws in a couple of bones."

"This doesn't shame you?"

"Not really. Look, I didn't start out life lying about being a dog owner. It came to me one night at a restaurant when everyone else at the table asked for a doggie bag. The waiter assumed that I wanted one as well and handed me a silver foil swan. When I thanked him and told him Czar Nicholas would go crazy, he took the leftovers from the next table and handed me them, too."

I said, "I want you to know that I think you're weird."

The waiter returned with the bag and a big smile on his face. Belberg handed him a dollar, "You're sending joy to a dog who has been doing nothing but guarding sheep for 24 hours."

The waiter was so impressed that he validated Belberg's parking ticket three times.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Morally, should Bush be backing out now?

WASHINGTON — Why did all the weight of the Bush administration come down on General Schwarzkopf for revealing that the decision to abort the war a day too soon was not unanimous — or as the general later half-clarified, not as originally planned?

Safire

The reason is that the pre-decision disagreement within the National Security Council was supposed to be kept secret.

No president lightly consigns thousands of human beings to certain death. He had personally and publicly assured the Kurdish and Shiite rebels that Saddam's gunships would be grounded; his general on the scene admitted he had been "suckered" into agreeing to let them fly.

When a decision is made to place cool pragmatism above morality — in this case, to accept historic accountability for choosing military dictatorship over a less orderly system of self-determination — the president expects his advisers to close ranks, to "sign on" to the decision.

Nobody is supposed to say that the chief executive was torn between what was expedient and what was right.

Rules of deep background preclude me from attributing this to any sources other than my own imagination, but here were the conflicting forces:

The strongest voice for ending the shooting before Saddam Hussein's army was destroyed was Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs. True to his Weinberger training, he did not want us to be blamed for overkill, or to be drawn into responsibility for replacing Saddam Hussein; he wanted U.S. troops withdrawn before American public opinion became impatient or terrorists hit.

Supporting this was the State Department's James Baker, influenced heavily by Saudi Arabia's Prince Bandar. Reasoning: only a Sunni Moslem military dictator in Baghdad would be stable enough to provide a balance against Iran, and a U.S.-imposed democracy might split into three nations.

(Later, influential Israelis agreed, based on the selfish concern that Kurdish independence might lead to Palestinian statehood.)

Mildly opposing this premature cessation was the national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, not happy about leaving the job half done, and Vice President Quayle, concerned about the president's credibility with the rebels and the world. Defense Secretary Cheney, in light of Powell's reminder about losing lives in Lebanon, zipped his lip.

Result: President Bush wavered, then decided to cut his winnings and go home. He flip-flopped on his pledge to shoot down Iraqi gunships, leaving his spokesmen admitting "ambiguity." In the name of realpolitik, he made our forces bear shamefaced witness to the bloodletting now under way.

Must history remember George Bush as the liberator of Kuwait and the man who saved Iraq for dictatorship? Preserving Saddam I or planting Saddam II would have other costs: People like the too-trusting Kurds now know they can get killed by relying on Bush's assurances. U.S. troops will return home with a sense of shame at the bloodletting that followed our political sellout.

Having refused to impose the opportunity for the rudiments of democracy in what we left of Iraq, Bush would then presume to impose his settlement of the Arab-Israeli dispute. Good luck.

For one bright, shining moment we had a president who made the White House pre-eminently a place of moral leadership. George Bush did not go to war primarily for oil, or for jobs, or even for protection against incipient attack; his decision to liberate Kuwait was bottomed on hard-rock principle, to right a wrong in a world too accustomed to accommodating imperial wrongdoing.

That moral courage, backed by the will to use power, carried the day, rolling over contrary opinion, emboldening the coalition, vitiating the will to fight of the Iraqi troops. It wasn't "self-righteousness" after all; it was right.

Now that same feeling for a moral world order demands we give the people of Iraq a last chance for freedom.

We are there, occupying a fifth of the country; we created the opportunity for a federation of autonomous peoples; we cannot creep away with our internal allies exposed to Soviet-made aircraft and tanks.

Bush still has time to say: "No more population-killers. Our aircraft will destroy any plane or chopper or tank or heavy artillery that moves. Fight if you must, but with rifles and knives in a primitive form of self-determination."

Why wobble now? If we are too timid to impose democracy, we owe it to our sense of right and wrong to at least level the killing field.

Injured caver should reach surface Thursday or Friday

By Suzanne Gamboa

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — An expert cave explorer who suffered a broken leg far inside the nation's deepest cave assisted her rescuers Tuesday by giving advice, and was in such good spirits she asked for pizza and a hair brush.

Beneath the New Mexico desert, Emily Mobley and her rescuers maneuvered over huge boulders, past deep dropoffs and through tight passageways toward the entrance of Lechuguilla Cave in Carlsbad Caverns National Park.

Rescuers succeeded in lifting her past one of the highest hurdles Tuesday afternoon — a 240-foot litter-borne ascent up a sheer rock face called the Great White Way, Park Ranger Jeff Denny said. The giant step placed her nearly halfway to open air — within 1¼ miles of the cave entrance, he said.

He said the Great White Way combined with other, smaller ascents through the day brought her up to about a depth of 700 feet.

Denny said the rescue effort would continue through the night — as long as she is up to it.

"This is cave rescue at its best," said Roy Burkham, 36, head of the rescue team from the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, a proposed federal nuclear waste repository near Carlsbad. "You have to crawl on your belly, go through tight places and have to have the right screws in your brain to go through this. You have to want to help someone real bad."

Officials said it will be Thursday or Friday before Mobley will be out. Fellow spelunkers who went for help after she was injured Sunday took eight hours to reach the entrance, about two miles away.

The pristine cave, discovered in 1986, is not open to the public. The National Park Service allows only about 200 people in annually for exploration and mapping. It is 1,565 feet deep and about 54 miles of passageways and rooms full of colorful, delicate rock formations have been mapped so far.

Mobley, an expert caver with 20 years experience, fell about 12 feet Sunday while climbing down a steep slope. A rock had given way when she put her weight on it. The 80-pound rock fell on her left leg below the kneecap.

Bob Addis, 45, of Parkersburg, W.Va., a caver who was with Mobley when the accident occurred, said she was leading a team of five cavers through an area known as the Reason Room.

"Emily went down over the rocks and she did everything absolutely correctly. She tested the rock ahead of time," Addis said.

He said her immediate reaction to her injury was "she hoped the media didn't find out about this."

Despite her splinted leg, Mobley managed to move about half a mile through a moderately difficult section of the cave by Monday night.

Rick Bridges, president of the Lechuguilla Cave Project Inc., said 18 people — including a doctor — were helping. She was able to hobble wherever there was enough room to stand upright.

"There had several small slopes from 10 to 30 foot they had to lower her down. . . . There was one 45-foot sloping pit she had to be lowered down; there was one 15-foot pit she had to hauled up, all that got done," Bridges said.

Telephone lines were stretched to below the area so rescuers could communicate with Ms. Mobley. Bill Justice, a Carlsbad Caverns ranger, said telephone contact was made with the woman, and that she was in good spirits.

Bridges said the most difficult part of the rescue will be in the next couple of days in an L-shaped area of the cave called the Rift.

"The Rift is a relatively level passage. The problem is it has big holes in the floor and we have to get her across those holes," Bridges said. "Normally we scurry around them on small ledges."

But Mobley may not be able to traverse some of the ledges. If not, she'll have to hauled across on a stretcher.

"This is one of the most complex and difficult cave rescues ever effected," Bridges said.

Mobley was in good spirits but was being treated for the probable fracture and for nausea.

"She is helping herself and the last reports from people who had exited the cave is that she looked like she'll continue helping herself today. She actually is a little stronger than she was yesterday," Bridges said.

He said she had asked for a hairbrush and pizza.

Border Patrol faces violence, problems with aging vehicles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Border Patrol agents on the Southwest border aren't always able to monitor alien and drug-smuggling traffic because their rickety vehicles are in the shop or they're busy enforcing employer sanctions, according to a report to Congress.

The General Accounting Office said attrition, the use of agents in traditionally non-border activities, and the patrol's aging fleet may be to blame for a decrease in the number of agents patrolling some sections of the 2,000-mile border.

Along one stretch of South Texas border, seven agents patrol 66 miles of the Rio Grande. But for three hours each night, all seven agents carry out other duties, and as a result, the area is abandoned for three hours, said GAO, the investigative arm of Congress.

Similarly, a supervisory agent in the San Diego sector told GAO that one-third of the border under his jurisdiction is not patrolled.

The report was requested by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., who was scheduled to release it Wednesday at news conferences in Arizona. A copy was obtained Tuesday by The Associated Press.

More than half of the agents' vehicles may need to be replaced, the report said. GAO investigators said they observed vehicles in the field with cracked frames that had been welded several times. Many vehicles have more than 100,000 miles, although the government recommends replacing trucks at 40,000 miles and sedans at 60,000 miles.

The need for frequent repairs has left some sectors with up to one-third of their fleets in the shop, GAO said.

At times, the report said, some parts of the border are not patrolled during shift changes because there are not enough vehicles to maintain coverage.

Duke Austin, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said Commissioner Gene McNary was aware of the problem and was reassessing the Border Patrol's role in some non-border duties.

"He has said that the place for the Border Patrol is on the border, and he's making every effort to do that," Austin said.

GAO said the amount of time spent by agents on border control activities on the Southwest border had fallen from 71 percent of total hours in 1987 to 60 percent in 1990.

At the same time, narcotics seizures have escalated from 649 in 1985 to 4,000 last year.

Former deputies found guilty in beating

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three former Orange County sheriff's deputies have been convicted of beating a jail inmate during an off-duty visit a year ago.

The men were convicted Monday of felony assault and misdemeanor battery "under the color of authority" for beating 30-year-old Marino Martillo on March 23, 1990, at Maywood Jail.

Michael Elliott, 32, Ivan Budiselich, 26, and John Rice, 25, all of whom denied beating Martillo, face sentences of up to three years in prison. Superior Court Judge Judith Champagne, who ruled in the non-jury trial, set sentencing for April 30.

Rice's father, veteran Los Angeles police Sgt. John Rice, complained outside court that no officer can get a fair trial in the wake of the March 3 videotaped beating of motorist Rodney King.

Deputy District Attorney Jeff Oscodar noted both sides in the Martillo case agreed to try the case without a jury in an effort to avoid any emotional bias from the highly-publicized King case.

Daley wins bid for re-election

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Richard M. Daley was elected to his first full term as mayor Tuesday, easily toppling his opponents to continue a legacy begun by his father more than 35 years ago.

"This campaign was a milestone for all of us," Daley said. "We've shattered the myth that with every Chicago election must come bitterness and name-calling."

The eldest son of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley was the easy favorite against Harold Washington Party candidate R. Eugene Pincham, Republican George Gottlieb and James A. Warren of the Socialist Workers Party.

Gottlieb, a police sergeant, was given little chance for victory in Chicago, a Democratic city of 2.8 million people. Republicans last won the mayor's office in 1927.

"We'll be back again and we'll be stronger the next time," Gottlieb told supporters.

Pincham, a black former state appellate judge, carried the banner of the party formed after the 1987 death of Washington, the city's first black mayor. But he and the Washington Party have failed to capture the black and liberal voting blocs that propelled Washington to office.

The Chicago Board of Election Commissioners predicted a 46 percent turnout in the city's election — a record low for a municipal election. Tom Leach, a board spokesman, said the previous low was in April 1975, at the height of the elder Daley's reign, when 47.3 percent voted.

With 1,867 of 2,912 precincts reporting, unofficial returns gave Daley 319,632 votes, or 74 percent. Pincham had 92,429 votes or 21 percent; Gottlieb had 17,067, or 4 percent; and Warren had 1,844 votes, or less than 1 percent.

In elections elsewhere:

—Wisconsin voters rejected an amendment to the state constitution to enable the state to buy, build and refurbish private housing for low-income residents.

Backers of the "affordable housing" amendment, including the Wisconsin Realtors Association and homeless advocates, argued the change is essential to provide safe, affordable housing to low-income families and the elderly.

But opponents, led by state Rep. David Prosser, charged the amendment would encourage a "full flowering of the welfare state in Wisconsin."

—In Colorado, Mary Ellen McNally, a six-year councilwoman, gave Colorado Springs Mayor Robert Isaac his first serious challenge since he took office 12 years ago. Residents also acted on proposed amendments that would require voter approval of any new tax or tax increase.

—In Fort Collins, a 21-year-old Colorado State University student named Smokey Spencer challenged Mayor Susan Kirkpatrick, a 40-year-old doctoral candidate at the university.

—In East St. Louis, Ill., Gordon Bush, 48, a former city treasurer, ran uncontested after defeating incumbent Mayor Carl E. Officer by a nearly 3-to-1 margin in the Democratic primary. East St. Louis is $47 million in debt, and has been unable to pay for trash pickup for more than two years.

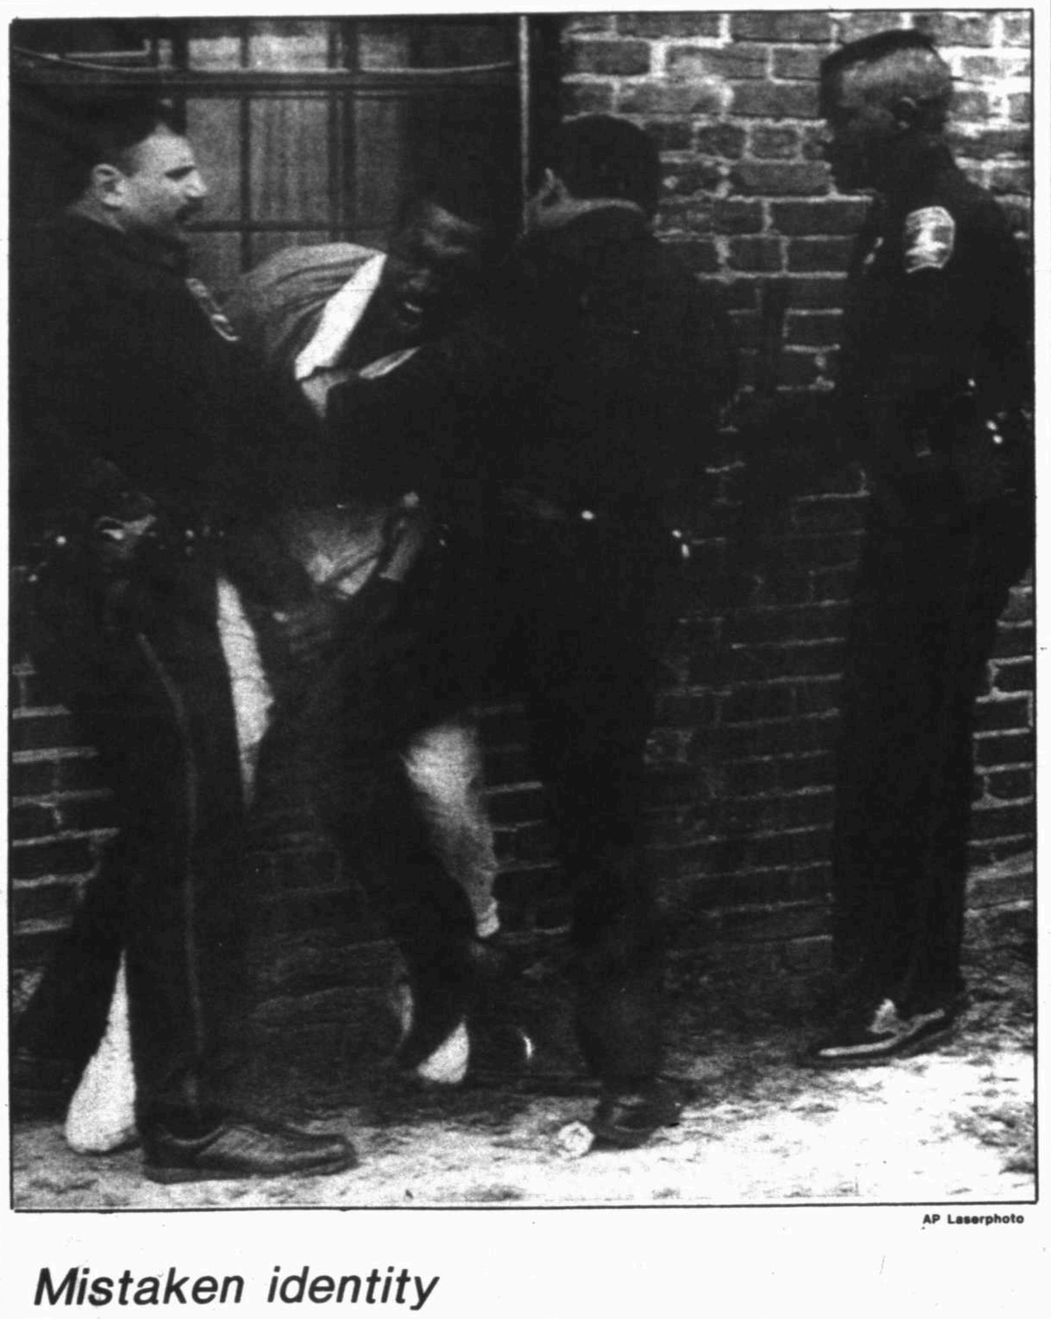

—In Springfield, first-term Mayor Oswald "Ossie" Langfelder, 64, faced the city's elected public works director, R. Todd Renfrow, 56, in a race between the top two vote-getters in February's non-partisan primary.

Daley, 48, trampled his Democratic opponents in the Feb. 26 primary, capturing 63.5 percent of the vote and eclipsing his 55.4 percent showing in 1989 when he was elected to complete Washington's second term after he died in office.

Daley made inroads in all-black wards during the primary and said at the time that his victory proved "we can have an election in Chicago without tearing our city apart."

He continued that theme after the primary with a quiet campaign that focused more on getting out the vote than attacking his opponents.

Daley was endorsed by the city's two largest daily newspapers, the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Sun-Times, and by the Chicago Defender, the city's largest black daily.

FBI recommends discipline for 11 agents

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — An internal FBI inquiry into a case of racial harassment against a black agent has resulted in a recommendation that FBI Director William S. Sessions consider disciplining 11 employees for their involvement.

Monday, the bureau announced the results of the inquiry, but did not disclose the names of the agents or the punishment they could face. A spokesman for the bureau said Sessions is reviewing recommendations and is expected to decide shortly on whether administrative sanctions are warranted.

The action stems from accusations of racial harassment first made in 1983 by Donald Rochon, who was then assigned to the FBI's Omaha field office. His charges have been upheld in administrative inquiries by the Justice Department and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Until now, only one white agent has been disciplined as a result of Rochon's allegations. The agent, Gary Miller, has acknowledged that in 1985 he forged Rochon's signature on an application for a death and dismemberment insurance policy. Miller, who received a two-week suspension without pay, has denied the insurance policy was intended as a death threat.

In another episode in Omaha, Rochon returned to his desk to find a photograph of an ape's head pasted over a photograph of his son. On one occasion, a photograph of the bruised face of a black man was placed in his mail.

Rochon has said that after he complained about the incidents and after he was transferred to Chicago in 1984, the harassment by white agents intensified. A year later, he said, he received two death threats.

Brown firing political, backers say

■ Odessa councilman claims colleague was pressured to vote for city manager's dismissal.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Pressure from a political "social group" led to the dismissal of Odessa City Manager Bill Brown, City Council members who voted against the termination said Tuesday.

"They convinced the third vote that he might be voted out" if he didn't support the firing, District 4 Councilman W.A. "Dub" Kennedy said.

The council, after a three-hour executive session, voted 3-2 Monday night to fire Brown. The termination was effective immediately.

Kennedy opposed the firing along with At-large Councilman Omer Bishop. Bishop said the councilman with the swing vote "had some extreme pressure placed on him."

Voting in favor of the termination were council members Jo Ann Davenport, District 1; Dr. James B. Goates, District 2; and Fred J. Crawford, District 3.

A high-ranking city official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, identified Crawford as the councilman who held the swing vote. Crawford could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Calls to Brown's office and home were not returned Tuesday.

Kennedy's and Bishop's statements notwithstanding, Goates said Brown's termination had "nothing to do with politics. It had to do with helping the city of Odessa."

Goates said Brown did an admirable job of managing the city's finances, but a poor job of managing the city's employees.

"We were constantly getting reports from employees and from citizens about low morale at the city," Goates said.

Although Goates declined to cite instances in which Brown's behavior caused morale problems, Kennedy said most of the incidents in question arose simply because Brown was following council instructions.

Certain firings, the elimination of a sick-leave buy-back program, and increases in insurance premiums were among the council-mandated actions for which Brown took the rap, Kennedy said.

He said a relatively small group of people in Odessa pressured the council into firing Brown by threatening to withdraw support in the May 4 election for council members opposing the termination.

After voting on the termination, the council unanimously approved a severance package for Brown that includes four months pay and four months of house payments. Brown's yearly salary was $84,936, the city personnel office reported.

Brown had been Odessa's city manager since Nov. 16, 1987. He came from Houston, where he served as the city's director of finance and administration.

Mummers movieola to be shot during Glad Bag-A-Thon

■ Local notables and trained llamas will participate in Keep Midland Beautiful event.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Villains chasing heroines across railroad tracks and local celebrities attempting to guide a caravan of llamas are only a few of the events planned for Saturday's Glad Bag-A-Thon.

Midlanders will be afforded an opportunity to watch Summer Mummers' cast members cavort while filming the show's movieola during Keep Midland Beautiful's fourth annual Glad Bag-A-Thon 9:00 a.m.-12:30 p.m.

Most of the action will take place at Midland's railroad right of way, located at the intersection of Main Street and Highway 80.

"Union Pacific Railroad's locomotive and flatcars will cruise the tracks to haul away filled trash bags," said Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful.

Local notables, including the mayor, fire chief and police chief have all volunteered to guide a caravan of trained pack llamas during the event. The llamas will carry bags of litter to the train cars.

And Midlanders may become local celebrities themselves if they appear in Summer Mummers Movieola, which is being filmed during the Bag-A-Thon.

"We will be filming a five-minute segment of the movieola," said Ann Breeding, assistant producer of the film. "Some of the dramatic moments will feature a villain trying to take a lady's Bag-A-Thon money away," Ms. Breeding said. "Of course, the hero will show up in the nick of time."

Ms. Breeding said the film may include some people in the Bag-A-Thon and the llamas since animals, especially the film's trademark sheep, are perennial Summer Mummers favorites.

Despite the entertainment, participants will have an opportunity to clean up the area while participating in a nationwide event.

"Groups may bring a banner labeled with the name of their group or organization," Ms. Hotchkiss said. "We will hang banners on the locomotive so that everyone will know that your group is involved in making Midland a cleaner place to live."

Trash bags will be provided and each participant will receive a Glad Bag-A-Thon painter's cap. Food and drinks will be provided by local merchants.

The group collecting the most bags of litter will receive a $100 cash prize.

The target area to be cleaned is along Highway 80, but groups may also clean specific areas of their choice.

State school employee arrested in resident's rape

LUBBOCK (AP) — A 24-year-old Lubbock State School employee was arrested and charged Tuesday with the rape and impregnation of a 26-year-old mentally retarded resident.

Russell Alan Griffith was arrested at his mother's home after prosecutors received the results of a genetic paternity test, said Lubbock police Cpl. Billy Hudgens.

Investigators collected blood samples from five state school employees who worked in the dormitory inhabited by the victim, known only by the initials "T.S."

All five employees currently work at the school, said police Capt. Frank Wiley.

Lubbock State School President Lonnie Willis would not discuss the incident when contacted at his home Tuesday night by The Associated Press.

"I don't have all the information to comment on this at this time," Willis said.

However, in a prepared release transmitted from Austin, Willis said Griffith has been placed on emergency leave. Griffith could be terminated if the school's Client Abuse and Neglect Committee confirms the incident.

A $50,000 bond has been recommended. Griffith remained in the Lubbock County Jail late Tuesday.

"I'm outraged that an employee would victimize a person living at a state school," said Jaylon Fincannon, a Texas Department of Mental Health-Mental Retardation deputy commissioner, in the same release. "It just shouldn't have happened. Our department requested this investigation so we'll continue to work with the police."

The severely retarded resident, who has lived at the school since she was 9, gave birth to a boy on Dec. 7, 1989, according to court records. But the birth wasn't reported to police until over a year later.

Authorities believe the woman was raped in late March 1989. The pregnancy was discov-

MHMC's a success story

■ Thriving and surviving hospital complex featured in present issue of 'Healthcare Forum Journal.'

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The forces behind Midland's Memorial Hospital and Medical Center have cause to "point with pride" at the hospital's success in boom-to-bust times and in days when many hospitals are foundering.

Midland's hospital and its auxiliaries are faring so well that the medical complex and its administration were featured in the March-April 1991 issue of "Healthcare Forum Journal."

The theme of the hospital's success story was an "extraordinary resourcefulness" that allowed the hospital to survive and thrive in economically depressed times. While Texas leads the nation in hospital closures, 105 in five years, the periodical reported, Midland's 272-bed hospital flourished.

Though the hospital is not operated by the profit motive, it is operated as if it were a "for-profit corporation" for the sake of fiscal responsibility to serve the community and region.

"We have a business plan," said Tom Bruner, president of the Midland County Hospital District's board of directors. "And we have an organization that is designed to perform efficiently. You would expect a business organization to be run in a business-like manner. And that's what we try to do at the hospital. We take the approach that you have to rely on taxes only for the cost of indigent care."

Otherwise, noted Bruner, hospital operations are "conducted in normal business-like perimeters.

"We would not, for example, build additional beds unless we foresaw a need and a return on the investment just like you do in a corporation."

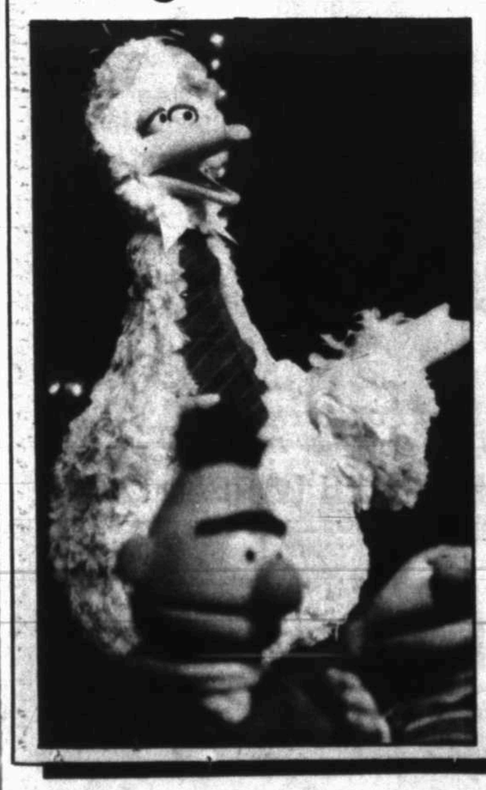

The non-profit Midland hospital, which had its beginnings in the late 1940s, is not operated like a county hospital," which can grapple for tax funds when costs exceeds income or debts become overwhelming.

County tax-supported hospitals often are governed by elected people "who don't know anything about business, and they've got a political ax to grind," surmised Bruner. "It just does not make a very workable situation."

Joseph I. O'Neill III, chairman of the hospital's board of trustees, cited the fiscal strength of the hospital.

Lawmakers seek finance compromise

■ Lewis says House will not approve school finance bill developed by a House-Senate conference committee.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Lawmakers searched for a compromise on school finance reform Tuesday, and the House took action to allow quick consideration of a deal if one is reached.

A state judge on Monday effectively gave the Legislature two more weeks to reform the school funding system, which twice has been ruled unconstitutional by a unanimous Texas Supreme Court.

Speaker Gib Lewis indicated the House wouldn't change its mind and approve a bill developed by a House-Senate conference committee, although Gov. Ann Richards personally called opponents in a bid to switch votes.

The conference committee bill, which would have shifted hundreds of millions of dollars in local property tax revenue from wealthier to poorer school districts, passed the Senate but was rejected last week by the House.

"I think those votes were pretty much in concrete ... You're looking at an issue right here that can defeat probably anybody on the House floor at the next election, and you've got to take that into consideration," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Bill Cryer, Richards' press secretary, said the governor also believed it would be hard to pass the bill.

But Rep. Greg Luna, D-San Antonio, said he had expected Richards to take a stronger role in the school finance battle: "My dear governor has not done enough to help. That low-profile stuff was nothing that I expected from her

Larry Kemp suffered a fractured left leg and right shoulder from the accident that occurred about 6:50 a.m. at County Road 1150 and Farm to Market Road 307.

According to DPS reports, Kemp, driving a 1986 Harley-Davidson motorcycle, was southbound on Country Road 1150 when he failed to yield the right of way at Farm-to-Market Road 307. Kemp was struck on the left side by a 1990 Ford sedan travelling west on FM 307.

The driver of the car, Peter Wilkinson, was not injured.

No evidence has been found to definitively indicate a gunshot, police said.

MHMC: Journal features local hospital

(From 1B)

"And we intend to keep it that way. That's my goal."

Foremost, he said, the hospital is "well-managed, so it's not a burden on the taxpayers" as many hospitals have been.

"Consequently, when the economy turned down (in the early 1980s), the burden wasn't so great that the taxpayers just didn't turn up their hands and say, 'Let's forget it.' "

And "the most important thing," O'Neill said, is the continued "fiscal integrity" of the hospital. The burden of the hospital's operations, new equipment and additions fall on users of the hospital and donations and not on taxpayers.

"We do have a great hospital," O'Neill said. "We have facilities like no other town of a size two, or three or four times" Midland's 100,000 population.

O'Neill, who is undergoing treatment for cancer in the hospital's Allison Cancer Therapy Center, said that he was "just amazed" by the quality of care at the center and by the sophistication of equipment.

Ray Branson, the hospital's president and chief executive officer who was featured in the "Healthcare Forum Journal," cited the roles of the hospital's directors and trustees in building a strong, regional hospital.

"There can be no achievement without effective boardmanship," Branson said. "The decisions that have to be made today are much more complicated and more involved than they used to be."

The hospital survived the economic downturn of the 1980s. "We didn't base our future on the price of a barrel of oil," Branson told writer Rhoda Weiss in the "Healthcare Forum Journal."

And the persons who serve on the hospital's boards of directors and trustees are "put in demanding positions in terms of their time and expertise.

"They have allowed the CEO to set a direction for the future of the hospital and then to achieve that direction," Branson said.

And the "main direction is quality," he said.

"If you don't have quality, nothing else matters. That's how you distinguish yourself in the healthcare business. It's hard to measure. The satisfied patients, the purchasers of the hospital's services, are the key indicator of quality."

While noting the importance of money matters and a "healthy financial bottom line," Branson said that they are "secondary to quality.

"My greatest personal satisfaction the 10 years I've been here is working with the excellent employees. They are exceptional. They are committed and dedicated, and without them, there would be no quality."

Branson noted the "extraordinary physicians" at the hospital.

"It's been a pleasure to see the medical staff grow. We have a high quality staff and distinguished specialists" in, literally, areas of the mind and heart.

Bruner and O'Neill cited the hospital's Allison Cancer Therapy Center, which was provided through gifts of the old Allison newspaper family in Midland.

"We've got as good a cancer-treatment program here as you can have anywhere," Bruner said. "We are very blessed. Now, we have a heart program," which was started by a gift. "We are very fortunate to have that."

The hospital, for example, has "the finest linear accelerator," Bruner said. "You couldn't find a better one in M.D. Anderson," in Houston.

And Bruner and O'Neill noted how the hospital's Clearview Hospital (now, Memorial West) was in danger of faltering and failing in recent years when insurances companies suddenly reduced their coverage on alcohol- and chemically dependent patients.

The old Clearview, before the Memorial Hospital and Medical Center acquired it, had been set up primarily for treating alcoholics and addicts of other drugs.

To ensure Memorial West's survival, said O'Neill, the hospital's leadership was "able to adjust the focus" to psychiatric care from chemical-dependency.

Without the switch to a form of treatment covered by health-insurance companies, "Clearview would have closed overnight," he said.

The Memorial Hospital and Medical Center's survivability and viability are linked to leadership.

"Our genius, if we have one, is that we have maintained the board of trustees as the arm of the original creators of the hospital — the board of governors — to continue to function as the managing board of the hospital, Bruner said.

And the elected board of directors, working with the appointed trustees, "ensures that the hospital district serves its purpose, and the hospital is successful."

tant city managers Tom Cody and Ray Kendall will perform Brown's duties. Cody said council members are expected to discuss the selection process for a new city manager at their meeting next week.

Meanwhile, Cody said, his office will continue the search for a police chief. The position was left open in January after the retirement of Chief Alan Stewart.

Goates said no timetable has been established for filling the city manager's position, but added that the council wants to hire someone with "people skills" for the job.

Mayor Lorraine Bonner, who could not be reached for comment Tuesday, said in a prepared statement after Monday's vote that Brown was fired because his relationship with employees was poor.

His management tactics also created a rift between the city and other Ector County agencies, said the mayor, who has no vote on council matters.

candidacy."

In a procedural move, the House did vote to reconsider its rejection of the conference committee bill and left the measure as pending business.

If House conference committee members come up with a new compromise that senators accept, the plan then could be substituted for the conference committee bill, and the House and Senate could vote again, leaders said.

"What we're trying to do is keep ourselves in the posture that we can act when we come to agreement on the education finance bill," Lewis said. But he encountered some suspicion from House members who opposed the conference committee bill and wanted no action that could allow its passage.

Rep. Alan Schoolcraft, R-Universal City, asked how much advance notice lawmakers would get if the same bill was going to be taken up again. Lewis said he did not intend to catch anyone "blindside."

"I guess we're going to have to rely on good faith around here," Schoolcraft said. Lewis responded, "I don't think I've ever tried to slip anything by anybody."

The House did not send the bill back to conference committee, Lewis said, because senators were unwilling to do so unless the House first comes up with an acceptable compromise.

Lewis said one compromise proposal would make it easier for school districts to raise local property taxes to enrich programs. He said he did not think senators would agree to a complete overhaul of the conference committee measure.

Senate Education Committee Chairman Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and Lewis agreed that, one way or another, dramatic change is coming to the school system.

The Supreme Court has twice unanimously ruled unconstitutional the current $14 billion-a-year school finance system, which relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money.

Differences in local property values now result in large disparities in education funding available to school districts.

"We cannot continue to have our own little school district that we can do with whatever we want to do. The court and the constitution does not allow us that privilege any longer," Lewis said.

Parker said, "The hard facts are that there are only about four ways to get an equitable system ... You've got to either have massive consolidation, massive infusion of state money, massive increases in local property taxes, or caps (on spending), or some combination of the four."

Parker met with the House Democrats but said afterward no consensus had been developed.

"We were just having a little prayer meeting," he said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Proposed tax called 'wrong'

AUSTIN (AP) — State Rep. Sam Johnson, R-Plano, says a proposed state income tax is unnecessary, unwanted and "just plain wrong."

In a letter Tuesday to Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock Johnson said taxpayers oppose the idea.

"More taxes mean less money for families. More taxes mean higher costs to businesses, and that means fewer jobs. More taxes mean more bureaucracy and more waste," Johnson wrote.

"The only thing a state income tax will create is an even greater slump in our state's economy."

Johnson pledged to fight any income tax proposal, predicting that Bullock's plan would be defeated if brought before lawmakers for a vote.

"It's time for us to bury the tax-and-spend mentality that has predominated our state government for too long," he wrote Bullock.

Texas escapee caught

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ontario (AP) — A man who escaped from a Texas prison where he was serving a 99-year sentence is to appear before an extradition hearing Wednesday, immigration officials say.

Michael Blegg, 31, who is being held in the Sault Jail, was arrested by customs officers and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police on March 22 and charged with drug and firearm offenses.

Immigration officials said the Illinois man escaped from a Texas prison where he was serving the lengthy sentence for various crimes, including several armed robberies. Officials would not say when Blegg escaped.

He was charged in Canada after a search of a man's vehicle uncovered drugs and a loaded firearm.

Foreclosure bill signed

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill to give a break to borrowers whose properties have been foreclosed has been signed into law by Gov. Ann Richards.

Under the legislation signed Tuesday, a lender still could sue a borrower to recover more money than the property brought at a foreclosure sale.

But a major change made by the new law would allow a borrower to ask a court to deduct the property's fair market value from the total debt.

Under the law, a creditor going through a nonjudicial foreclosure would take the property, and the debt would be extinguished.

If a creditor goes to court seeking a deficiency judgment for the additional money, a debtor could prove the fair market value at the time of sale. That value then would be deducted from the debt.

Similar legislation was adopted in 1989 but vetoed by then-Gov. Bill Clements.

UT astronomer honored

AUSTIN (AP) — An asteroid has been named for University of Texas astronomer Roman Smoluchowski.

The International Astronomical Union bestowed the award over the weekend on Smoluchowski, a solid state physicist and planetary astronomer.

The asteroid named for him was discovered March 1, 1984, by E. Bowell at the Anderson Mesa Station of the Lowell Observatory in Arizona.

A native of Austria, Smoluchowski became head of the physics and metals section of the Warsaw Institute of Technology.

In 1940, he came to the United States, where he was a researcher for the General Electric Co. and the Carnegie Institute of Technology. He also was a professor at Princeton University for many years. After retiring from Princeton in 1978, he joined UT.

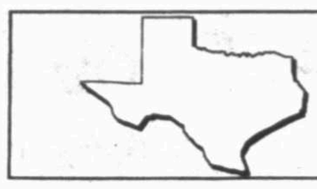

HUD orders repayment

DALLAS (AP) — City officials say it could take up to two years to resolve questions about its improper spending of $1.8 million in community development funds.

The U.S. Department of Houston and Urban Development has ordered Dallas officials to repay the development funds slated for poor neighborhoods.

An audit report by the HUD Office of the Inspector General said the money was used for improper administrative costs, home improvement loans to ineligible borrowers, inflated prices for land and funds for city services that did not benefit poor communities.

Railey delivers Easter sermon

DALLAS (AP) — A former Dallas minister still considered the chief suspect in the near-fatal attack of his wife four years ago has delivered his first sermon since 1987, a published report said Tuesday.

Walker Railey, 43, delivered the Easter Sunday sermon at the First United Methodist Church of Santa Ana, Calif.

The former senior pastor for First United Methodist Church of Dallas began attending the 354-member church last September, and became a member in January, church officials said.

"We're supporting Walker Railey on the hopes of helping him get on with his life," said the Rev. Kenneth G. Heaton, pastor of First United Methodist Church of Santa Ana.

Heaton did not return telephones calls to The Associated Press.

Railey has been ordered to pay $18 million in damages to his wife after being found liable for the incident by a civil jury. However, Railey has claimed he is too poor to pay.

Heaton said Railey was reluctant to join the Santa Ana church because he was afraid his membership would cause problems for the congregation. He joined after being warmly received by other church members.

"After four years, how much more can he take?," Heaton told The Dallas Morning News. "How long do you beat him down? We believe the man is innocent."

But Norman Kinne, Dallas County's first assistant district attorney, was surprised anyone would invite Railey to preach.

"I wouldn't walk across the street to hear him preach," Kinne said. "This is a man who took the Fifth Amendment rather than respond to questions which were designed to find out what happened to his wife, abandoned his wife and children, and flitted off to California."

Railey, who has never been charged in the April 21, 1987 choking attack that left his 42-year-old wife in a vegetative state, has been named the chief suspect in the case by Dallas authorities.

Another batch of evidence was presented last week to Dallas authorities. Kinne said he would decide this week whether there is enough evidence to prosecute anyone in the case.

Sunday's sermon, titled "Stumbling Into Easter," addressed the pessimistic outlook of some Americans. Railey also mentioned his own 1987 suicide attempt.

"Resurrection affirms that in those moments when we feel most vulnerable, God is most invincible," Railey said in his sermon.

Later he told the congregation: "I had always believed that only crazy people committed suicide, but four years ago, I did not feel crazy, just depressed."

Miriam Hofferbert, chairwoman of the California church's evangelical committee, said Railey's address was "one of the most dynamic sermons" she had ever heard.

"It's a shame that a man with such talents is not able to preach," Ms. Hofferbert said.

"He comes across to me as a very sincere man and remarkable speaker. I would find it difficult to believe that he was in any way guilty."

Senate OKs bill to establish rehabilitation fund

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has voted to establish a fund to help pay long-term rehabilitative expenses of people who suffer head or spinal cord injuries.

A bill by Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, would create the fund and impose surcharges on certain traffic tickets to finance the state effort — $5 on speeding offenses, $25 on DWIs.

The special fund would be administered by the Texas Rehabilitation Commission, with any unexpended balance over $500,000 returned to general revenue at the end of the fiscal year.

Ratliff's measure was sent to the House on voice vote.

In other action Tuesday, the Senate approved and sent to the House bills that would:

- Require a left-hand turn from a one-way street to another one-way street be made as close as practicable to the left-hand curb or edge of the road.
- Require people "lawfully detained" by law officers to report correctly their name, address and birth date.
- Enable cities with a population of 125,000 or less that are engaged in distributing and selling electricity to pass concurrent ordinances establishing a municipal power agency.
- Authorize the state highway commission to enter into contracts to construct and maintain public roads that cross boundaries between Texas and an adjoining state.
- Require commissioners courts of counties with a population of more than 100,000 to establish branch absentee polling places.
- Abolish the Council on Disabilities and transfer its functions to the Governor's Committee on Disabilities, which would be renamed the Governor's Committee for Disabled Persons.
- Prohibit penalties against sport shooting ranges to regulate noise.

Nolan Ryan big hit with Legislature

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan, known for hurling strikes, was a hit Tuesday in the Legislature.

Ryan

Lawmakers flocked to his side, seeking autographs. Some brought baseballs for him to sign. Dozens shook his hand. More waited in line to pose for photos with him.

Gushed one state senator — twice — "You are a real, live Texas hero."

The crowd around the pitcher grew so large on the House floor that Speaker Gib Lewis had to order the chamber's photographer to stop taking pictures long enough for a resolution honoring Ryan to be read aloud.

"Members, we'll have ample opportunity to take your pictures," Lewis said, banging his gavel in a bid to bring order. "I know everybody's excited about meeting Nolan Ryan. I'm excited."

Last week, the Senate passed a bill to rename part of state Highway 288 near the hurler's hometown of Alvin as the "Nolan Ryan Expressway." The House was expected to approve the bill as well.

"Wonder if he's got a plan for schools?" asked Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, who has spent weeks in so far unsuccessful negotiations over court-ordered school finance reform.

He didn't.

Ryan, whose 5,000 strikeouts and blazing fastball have won him fans nationwide, was in Austin for a Tuesday night exhibition game between the Rangers and the University of Texas Longhorns.

The 44-year-old pitcher was making his last spring training start before next week's season opener, while 19-year-old freshman Reid Ryan was taking the mound for the Longhorns.

Perhaps inevitably in such a political atmosphere, Ryan even found himself answering questions about his possible interest in public office. Last year, the Texas Farm Bureau had urged Ryan to seek the Republican nomination for state agriculture commissioner.

"I don't know that I really had political ambitions at the time the Farm Bureau contacted me," he said.

"My interest there was twofold, really: because of my interest in agriculture and serving the people of Texas. So if there's something in the future I really don't know ... I don't really foresee myself going into politics."

Couple robbed while visiting son's grave

DALLAS (AP) — An elderly Dallas woman says it might be awhile before she and her husband visit their youngest son's grave after they were held up by robbers during a recent visit.

Two men robbed W.G. Woehleke, 76, and his wife Annette, 71, of her purse and the couple's car Monday, police said.

"I don't know what we'll do," Mrs. Woehleke said. "It's terrible to have that feeling."

The couple were at Laurel Land Cemetery when two men walked up behind them, brandished a pistol and stole the car and purse.

"It was really a horrible situation," she said. "I'm a little numb."

Mrs. Woehleke said they don't visit very often the grave of their son, Gill, who died in an accident 11 years ago, but Monday was special.

"It was his birthday and we went to put some flowers on his grave," Mrs. Woehleke said.

Cemetery workers and police were quick to help the couple. Mrs. Woehleke and her husband, who has a heart condition, were not injured.

"But my purse is still gone with all my house keys, and we've got to get our locks changed," she said. "It's terrible."

Corporate, Banking & Business

Q. What is an assumed business or professional name certificate?

A. For an unincorporated business or profession, whenever any person or joint venture regularly conducts business or renders a professional service under an assumed name, Texas law requires that an assumed name certificate be filed in the office of the county clerk in each county in which such person maintains a business or professional premise or where such person conducts business or renders professional services. The assumed name certificate sets forth such things as the names and addresses of the individuals or entities involved, the period (not to exceed 10 years) during which the assumed name will be used, and how the business or profession will be conducted (such as a sole proprietorship, general partnership or joint venture).

Family Law

Q. I have two, very young children from a previous marriage. I will soon be remarried and my fiance wants to adopt the children. My ex-husband pays child support and has visitation privileges. The children carry his name. My fiance would like to give the children his name. Is this feasible?

A. Your question deals with two very different legal procedures: adoption as opposed to a name change for a minor.
Before an adoption can be granted, there must first be a legal termination of the parent-child relationship between the children and their father. The Texas Family Code sets out specific grounds which must be alleged and proved in order to terminate a parent's rights. If termination is granted, the court can then consider whether it is in the best interest of the children to grant an adoption. If the adoption is granted, the adopting parent then has all the rights, duties, and privileges of a parent in regard to the children.
The second part of your letter raises the issue of a name change for the children, which would accomplish that and only that, a name change. The father of the children would be entitled to notice of your request that the court grant a name change for the children, even though other aspects of his parent-child relationship may not be affected. You should discuss the specific circumstances of your situation with an attorney to determine if either of these procedures are appropriate in your case.

Estate Planning And Probate

Q. Should a person's will always be probated?

A. Generally, if a person dies leaving a will, the will should be probated. A will may be probated at any time within four years after decedent's death. Any beneficiary named in this will has the right to submit the will for probate. If the will is probated, title to the decedent's assets will pass to the beneficiaries named in the will. If the will is not probated, the decedent's heirs under the laws of intestacy. A formal court proceeding will be necessary to make such determination. Even if a decedent's intestate heirs and the beneficiaries named in the decedent's will are the same people, in most situations it is easier and less expensive to probate a will than to have a determination of heirship. As a result, there are very few instances where a will should not be probated.

Court backs crack mother

LANSING, Mich. (NYT) — A Michigan appeals court ruled Tuesday that a women should not stand trial on charges of delivering cocaine to her newborn son through the umbilical cord in a case civil libertarians said could set the tone for future cases involving pregnant women who abuse drugs.

In a unaminuous decision, the Michigan Court of Appeals rejected the state's argument that Kimberly Hardy, 24, an unemployed factory worker from Muskegon, passed cocaine to her son, Areanis, in a way that constituted criminal delivery of drugs. The charge arose from Ms. Hardy's use of crack just hours before her son's birth.

The court decision overturned a lower court ruling that had ordered Ms. Hardy to stand trial. It was the highest level ruling yet on the question of whether a mother's drug use during pregnancy and it's effect on a child should be criminal matter, according to the American Civil Liberties Union.

"Today's decision should effectively put an end to a vicious and counterproductive prosecutorial tactic," said Howard Simon, executive director of the Civil Liberties Union in Michigan. "The practical effect of this kind of prosecution is to drive pregnant women from prenatal care. That is a horrible consequence."

Tony Tague, the Muskegon County prosecutor, stood by his 1989 decision to charge Ms. Hardy in the autumn of 1989, and said he would appeal to the Michigan Supreme Court.

"This is a major health care crisis, and we must use whatever means we can to reach a solution," Tague said. "When the drug war is making casualties out of newborn children, it requires action."

Shot kills wife in crash

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The wife of a radio executive thought to have died in a plane crash was shot to death, authorities said Tuesday.

The state medical examiner's office ruled the death of Ursula Korsen a homicide and didn't release a cause of death for her husband, Richard Korsen.

The bodies of the couple were found Sunday near Korsen's wrecked two-seat Cessna on a densely wooded hilltop in Barkhamsted, 10 days after the plane took off from nearby Simsbury airport.

The body of Korsen, 55, executive vice president and general manager of WDRC-FM in Bloomfield, was found near the plane, next to the remains of a campfire. The body of Mrs. Korsen, 50, was found in the wreckage.

A medical examiner's spokesman who refused to give his name said Mrs. Korsen had been shot in the head. He refused to provide further details.

Capt. Charles Perrault, a spokesman for the Civil Air Patrol in Connecticut, said searchers at the crash site didn't realize Mrs. Korsen had been shot.

Spill forces evacuation

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A hazardous chemical leaked from a pipe at a General Motors auto parts plant Tuesday and mixed with another chemical, creating irritating fumes that prompted the evacuation of about 1,500 employees.

Thirty-four people were sent to hospitals after the spill at the Inland Fisher Guide Division plant on the city's west side, authorities said. Two people were admitted for observation and the rest were treated and released.

The vapors were created when nitric acid, which is used to anodize aluminum, came into contact with caustic soda, said city fire spokesman Richard Jahn.

Jahn said the substance could have exploded if it mixed with water.

Lambert said no more than several gallons of acid leaked. The spill was contained moments later.

The area where the leak occurred remained closed, but work resumed in another part of the plant late Tuesday, said Harry Lambert, plant manager. The entire plant was expected to be operating Wednesday.

Quake alarm gets action

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Three California legislators were talking Tuesday at the Capitol when somebody screamed, "earthquake." The trio dove under a desk, awkwardly bumping heads and elbows.

More than 2 million others in schools, offices and businesses across California supposedly ducked for cover at the same instant, 10:10 a.m. An emergency tone wailed from radios in Los Angeles, San Francisco and dozens of other cities.

The emergency tone ended and Gov. Pete Wilson explained over the radio, "This is a test. ... April is California earthquake preparedness month."

Wilson asked Californians to "join in an earthquake duck, cover and hold drill."

"Duck down and take cover under a sturdy desk or table or against an interior wall. Hold this position until this test message has been completed," he said.

In the Capitol, Democratic Assemblymen Rusty Areias of Los Banos, Bob Epple of Norwalk and Sal Cannella of Ceres crawled out and talked with news reporters.

Body in Oregon identified

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A body found near a remote logging road was identified Tuesday as that of a missing bank teller whom police believe was one of five people killed for their credit cards.

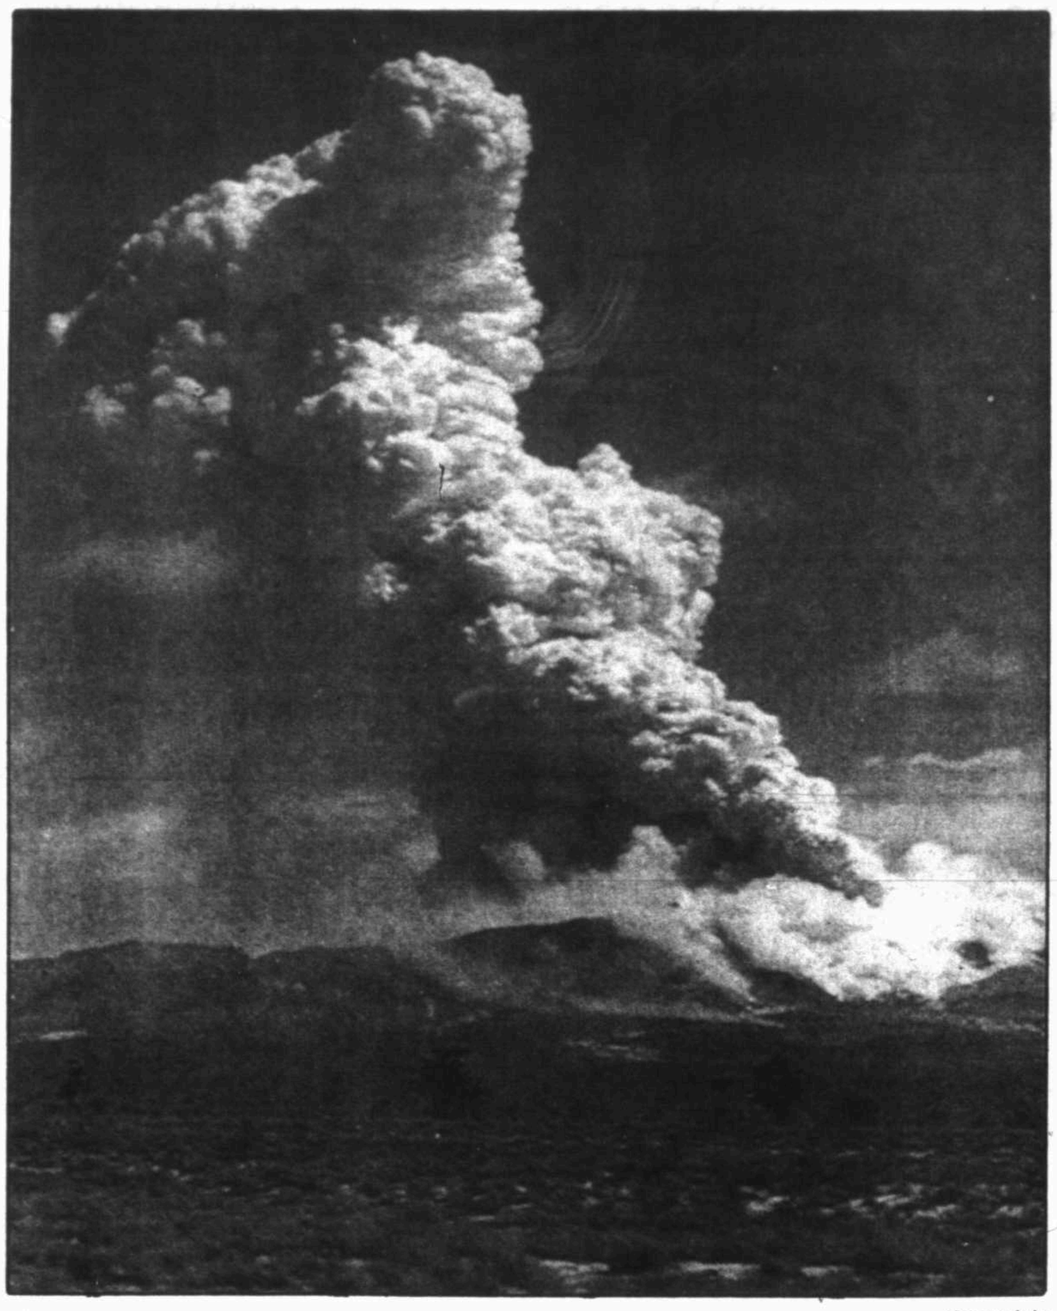

State Medical Examiner Larry Lewman used dental records to identify the body as that of Christine Guthrie, 32. Lewman said she died from gunshot wounds to the head.

Police say Guthrie was killed Feb. 26, three days after she was seen leaving a party in Portland with John J. Fautenberry. The two then drove to a coastal motel.

Fautenberry, 27, is charged with killing Guthrie and three other people in Alaska, Ohio and New Jersey. He also is a suspect in the disappearance of a Texas man last seen in Oregon. He was arrested in Juneau, Alaska last month and is being held in lieu of $3 million bail.

Guthrie's fully clothed body was found Monday, about 200 feet off a road near the community of Timber 35 miles northwest of Portland, said Sherre Calouri, spokeswoman for the Washington County sheriff's office.

Deputies found the body after Portland detectives told them where to look. Portland homicide detectives have interviewed Fautenberry extensively since his March 17 arrest.

A tower of smoke marks the explosion of an experimental 110-foot long rocket motor being tested for the Titan IV program at Edwards Air Force Base in California Monday. The cause of the explosion is unknown and there were no injuries reported at the base, located 90 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles, from the explosion which occurred during the first test firing of the engine.

Dantley a Buck

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks announced on Tuesday the signing of forward Adrian Dantley to a contract for the remainder of the season.

Dantley

To make room for Dantley, the Bucks placed guard Dale Ellis on injured reserve. Ellis, who has back problems believed caused by a herniated disk, is expected to be out of action at least 10 days.

Dantley played for the Dallas Mavericks in the 1989-90 season, but was released at the end of the season.

Ellis came to the Bucks earlier in the year via a trade from the Seattle Supersonics. Ellis' first NBA team was the Mavericks, who made him their first-round draft pick out of Tennessee.

Bo might sign

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — The Chicago White Sox have called a "major" news conference for 10 a.m. today, and ESPN reported the club will announce the signing of Bo Jackson.

White Sox officials had no comment Tuesday night.

Jackson, one of the biggest stars in two sports, was released by the Kansas City Royals last month when the team determined his football-related hip injury would not allow him to play this season.

Royals doctors said they do not believe Jackson will be able to play baseball this year, and possibly never again. But Dr. James Andrews, a leading orthopedic specialist in the athletic field, examined Jackson and did not rule out a return to pro sports.

Jackson, 28, has one year left on his $7.4 million contract with the NFL's Los Angeles Raiders. The Raiders said they will stick with him, and expect him to be ready to play next season.

Zachery stars

If you happened to catch "A Triumph of the Heart: The Ricky Bell Story" on CBS Tuesday night, you might have recognized former Midland High and Canadien Football League football star James Zachery playing the role of Leroy Selmon.

Zachery, a defensive standout in the CFL, was a natural for the role of Selmon, who was a nose tackle for the Tampa Bay Bucaneers when Bell played with Tampa Bay.

Zachery has also had some roles in the "Wise Guy" TV series as he makes his transition from football to stage and screen.

Franklin accepts position at NMMI

■ Former Midland College basketball coach agrees to return to his alma mater.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Former Midland College head basketball coach Reggie Franklin announced Tuesday that he has accepted the head coaching position at New Mexico Military Institute.

Franklin

Franklin, who began his basketball career at NMMI, graduated from and later served as an assistant for a brief period at the Roswell, N.M., school, will officially begin work at his junior college alma mater at the end of May.

"They say you can never go home again," Franklin said, "but actually this is my third time going home.

"I think New Mexico suits my personality and my beliefs in education. I think I have the positive support I need mentally and physically and financially at New Mexico Military Institute."

After four years and an 81-43 record as head coach at Midland College, Franklin's contract was not renewed for another season by the MC Board of Trustees last month. He has since been replaced by former Howard College head coach Steve Green.

Franklin's final MC team finished 17-13 overall, 8-8 and in fifth place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

Franklin, who was contacted by NMMI officials two weeks ago, will take over a Bronchos team that features seven returning players. NMMI finished with a 7-20 overall record, 2-14 and tied for last place with Clarendon during the 1990-91 WJCAC season.

Franklin said he had been in contact with four universities and two junior colleges concerning coaching vacancies. His decision to choose a junior college head coaching job over an assistant's position at a major university, he said, was based on family.

"I'm a family man first and a coach second," Franklin said. "I need to keep my family together as much as I can, that's important to me. Being an assistant at a four year university, you have a lot of evaluation periods when you have to be out of town."

Franklin said being away from family for professional reasons would prevent him from seeing his high school age son, James, play basketball.

"I decided to stay in the junior college circuit at least three more years until he graduates from high school, then I'll go ahead and pursue my career at some other school at some other time."

Franklin said he felt the military aspect of the school would not make it difficult to recruit prospective players, but would make it harder to keep them there once they arrived.

"The academic standards are much harder," he said. "When you graduate from a school like New Mexico Military Institute, you have the perception that you're a great kid, you've gone to a great school, and you have a great background. People know they don't have to worry about your discipline, because they know you've been disciplined at New Mexico Military Institute."

Franklin, who replaces former NMMI head coach Carlisle Dean, said the nature of the competition helped in his decision to stay in junior college ball.

"I like the competitive nature of this conference," he said. "I never, ever considered (the vacancy at) Western Texas, I never, ever considered (the vacancy at) Howard. From the time I was an assistant here, I knew if I were to ever coach anywhere else in this conference, it would be at New Mexico Military."

Franklin said he plans to continue to remain active in community service work, having already been approached by representatives of an underprivileged children's group in Roswell.

"(Monday) when I was over there to sign my contract," he said, "I was already (contacted) to do some things. I said 'Hey, I'll do it, just let me know when and where,' and that's the same attitude I've taken in Midland for the last four years."

Franklin said he harbors no ill will toward Midland, and would miss certain aspects of West Texas.

"I'm going to miss the guys that I have here," he said. "It's been a pleasant stay here at Midland College. I'm not bitter about anything. I've made some good friends in this community.

"I think the mental support that I need right now is there from the (NMMI) athletic director (Rciahrd Stecklein), and that's something very important to me. I've got to have someone who knows Reggie Franklin and what type of a person Reggie Franklin is."

NMMI assistant coach Porter Cutrell will be retained in that capacity through the 1991-92 school year.

Rebels derail Bobcats, move into first-place tie

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — The Midland Lee Rebels pulled into a tie for first with Midland High in the District 4-5A baseball race Tuesday afternoon with a 4-2 win over San Angelo.

Lee starter Jeff Johnston pitched a complete game to run his record to 7-1. Johnston, a senior, struck out nine and walked just one.

Lee is 13-7 overall, and 5-1 in district along with MHS.

"We didn't score as many runs as we're used to scoring, but we scored them with two outs," Lee coach Jesse Benavidez said. "These kids have handled the pressure real well."

Elsewhere in the district, Abilene Cooper lost its fifth straight district game, 5-4, to Odessa Permian, and Abilene High defeated Odessa High, 7-5. Midland High was idle.

With the score tied at 2-2 in the sixth, Lee's Sean Salois, on a 3-1 pitch, singled to center with two outs to drive in Mike Lambert with what would eventually be the winning run. A wild pitch later scored Salois to give the Rebels their fourth and final run.

The Duke team surrounds coach Mike Krzyzewski while holding the NCAA championship trophy after the Blue Devils beat Kansas 72-65.

Blue Devil fans roar approval

■ Around 10,000 show up to greet the Duke basketball team, which finally took home a national title in its ninth trip to the final four.

Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — The NCAA champion Duke Blue Devils came home Tuesday to share their trophy with the rest of the team. About 10,000 fans showed up to claim the prize.

The homecoming reception at Cameron Indoor Stadium had a different tenor than ones in the past three years, when Duke was beaten in the Final Four. Coach Mike Krzyzewski recalled fighting back tears when confronting the Duke fans then.

Not now.

"Excuse me, but I can't stop smiling," he said. "It feels good, doesn't it?"

The crowd roared its approval.

Krzyzewski played to the crowd, saying the fans had helped Duke win all of its home games this year.

"As happy as we are about winning, this makes it complete, sharing it with our sixth man," he said.

Seniors Greg Koubek and Clay Buckley drew thunderous applause when they hoisted the tournament trophy above their heads and Koubek shouted, "We did it!"

Krzyzewski reminisced about the contributions of each member of the team, how guard Bobby Hurley brought them back from a five-point deficit against UNLV in the semifinals; how freshman Grant Hill drove for key buckets; how Koubek scored Duke's first five points, and Christian Laettner, "looking so nervous on the line," hit all 12 of his free throws in the 72-65 final victory over Kansas.

"My best memory, though, is of all these guys playing as tough a game of basketball for 80 minutes as any team has ever played to win a national championship," he said.

Krzyzewski and Duke players were generous with their time from the moment they returned to Raleigh-Durham International Airport, signing hundreds of autographs, slapping high fives and talking freely with fans.

The return was greeted with giant cakes in the shape of basketball courts and full page ads in local newspapers, including an adidas ad that played on the spelling of Krzyzewski's name.

"Kongraczyulations, Mike," the ad said. "Now that Coach Krzyzewski and the Duke Blue Devils have just won the 1991 NCAA Championship, perhaps it's time we all did a little czelebrating."

In Cameron, the fans were attentive one moment, rowdy the next, chanting "Hurley, Hurley" and "Koooobs" at mentions of the players.

Dignitaries also spoke.

Nolan Ryan, left, meets with son Reid of the University of Texas before their dual Tuesday night in Austin.

Nolan Ryan schools Reid

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Reid's no Nolan yet.

Nineteen-year-old Reid Ryan found out Tuesday night that 44-year-old pappy Nolan is still top gun in the Ryan family.

Ryan, a freshman at the University of Texas, gave up four runs in two innings and trailed 4-1 to his dad when he left the game.

Nolan led 5-3 when he left after throwing 111 pitches in five innings. He gave up five hits and three runs, walked three and struck out seven.

"I'm not happy with the way I pitched but I have to put it in perspective against who I was pitching against," Reid said. "It was fun and something I'll always remember. It was frustrating because of some of the cheap hits they got against me. They didn't rip the ball."

It was the first known mound duel between a major leaguer and his son. The only father-son combination to appear in the big leagues at the same time is Ken Griffey Sr. and Jr.

Nolan was a proud father.

"I was pleased with the way Reid threw and I thought he pitched better than I did," the senior Ryan said. "He got some bad breaks on a couple of those hits. He did a good job.

"My intensity level was not there. I think I was probably distracted watching him. It's two different mind sets and I prefer competing to being a spectactor."

Seven more waived before deadline

Associated Press

Seven more players were let go Tuesday, the last possible day to place a player on waivers without guaranteeing his entire 1991 salary.

Pitchers Kevin Hickey and John Mitchell of Baltimore, infielder Edgar Diaz and outfielder Mike Felder of Milwaukee, infielder Nelson Liriano of Minnesota, pitcher Jose Guzman of Texas and pitcher Don Carman of Houston all were placed on unconditional release waivers.

That brought the total waived during spring training to 36. The three dozen, some of whom still may be claimed through Friday, will get a total of $4,798,510 in termination pay instead of $18,102,500 in salaries.

"I played good, so what can I do?" Liriano said, hinting that his $507,500 salary was part of the decision. "I have a good feeling on my part because I felt I played well for them. They know why they released me."

Fernando Valenzuela, placed on waivers by the Los Angeles Dodgers last Thursday, cleared Tuesday and became a free agent.

"I'm very confident that he'll continue writing great pages of history for another team," said Valenzuela's agent, Tony DeMarco. "His career will continue. There was Rocky I and Rocky II."

While some players were shuffling off, several found spots on major league rosters. The biggest name among them was 39-year-old pitcher Mike Flanagan, who agreed to a one-year, $250,000 contract with the Baltimore Orioles. Flanagan, released by Toronto last season with a 2-2 record and a 5.31 ERA, can earn another $250,000 in performance bonuses.

"It was nice to get the thing finalized," Flanagan said. "I felt that I had a good spring and the numbers worked out for me."

Flanagan pitched three solid innings Tuesday in Baltimore's 10-5 victory over the Atlanta Braves at West Palm Beach, Fla. He has a 2.00 ERA in five games this spring and will be the Orioles' left-handed middle reliever.

The Milwaukee Brewers signed three free agents who had been in their camp as non-roster invitees: outfielder Candy Maldonado, second baseman Willie Randolph and catcher Rick Dempsey. With less than a week to go before opening day, 19 of the 96 free agents remain unsigned.

"We didn't bring Randolph, Dempsey and Maldonado in to waste their time in a situation where they didn't have a bona fide chance to make our ball club," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "They did nothing to make you say, 'Well I'm not sure about this guy.'"

92 mph in the first inning while Reid's "junior heat" was clocked at 84 mph on the radar gun.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead off Reid in the first inning on Jeff Huson's double, a fly out and Geno Petralli's run-scoring grounder. They got two cheap runs in the second on a broken bat single, a double over third base, and a two-run bloop double by Donald Harris.

Facing metal bats for the first time in his career, Ryan gave up consecutive two-out singles in the first inning before getting out of the jam. A walk and Shane Halter's ground double down the left field line gave the Longhorns a run in the second. Texas got two more runs in the fifth on a double, a walk, two wild pitches and a single.

"It was fun, a big thrill going against your son but I'm relieved its over," Nolan said. "I thought Reid really kept his composure. But I'm not sure I want to do this again next year."

OC to roast former star, retire jersey

Staff Report

ODESSA — Former Odessa College basketball star Larry Johnson, who went on to earn All-America status at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, will be honored at the OC Sports Center Saturday, April 13.

A roast of Johnson will kickoff the banquet at 7:30 p.m. and OC will retire the No. 5 jersey that Johnson wore while playing for the Wranglers.

Johnson, who helped lead UNLV to the 1990 national NCAA basketball championship and berth in this year's Final Four, has an excellent chance of being the first player picked in the NBA draft.

During his freshman year at OC, Johnson led the Wranglers to its first ever Region V championship and again in 1989 as a sophomore. He was Junior College Player of the Year both years, averaging 18 rebounds both years and averaging 30 points per game his sophomore season.

At UNLV, Johnson was a first team All-America selection both seasons. In 1989, he was named U.S. Amateur of the Year by the Amateur Basketball Association.

Larry Johnson posters and T-shirts will be sold at the April 13 event. Tickets are $6 per person and may be purchased at the Sports Center. Proceeds will go for OC athletic scholarships. For information, call 335-6567.

Broncos tight end arrested

AURORA, Colo. (AP) — Denver Broncos tight end Clarence Kay, who twice has violated the NFL's substance-abuse policy, was arrested Tuesday for driving under the influence of alcohol, police said.

The arrest could jeopardize Kay's NFL career. The league's policy requires an immediate ban after three offenses.

Kay violated has failed tests for cocaine use in two occasions. In September of 1989 he was arrested in Edgewater for driving while impaired by alcohol but was given the go-ahead from NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue to continue playing following a review of the case by the league.

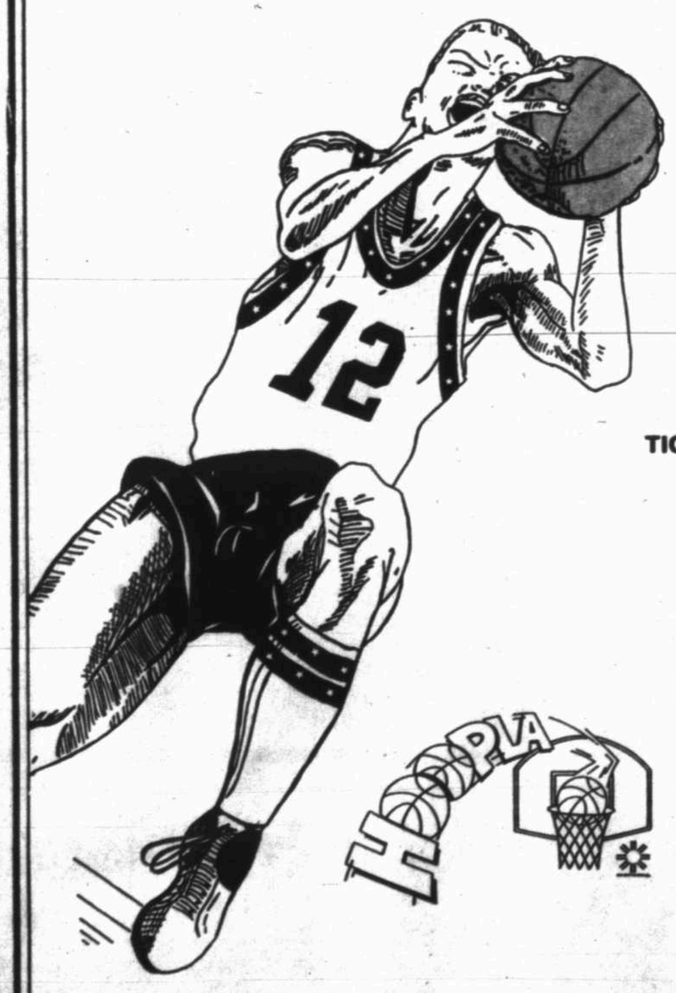

Kay, who must appear in court June 3, also was arrested last July in a domestic disturbance involving a former girlriend in Denver. He was charged with trespassing, destruction of private property and disturbing the peace.

Mavericks reject Nuggets

Associated Press

DALLAS — Derek Harper had 24 points and James Donaldson and Rolando Blackman 23 apiece as the Dallas Mavericks beat Denver 133-126 Tuesday night, the Nuggets' 14th straight road loss — one short of their club road.

Dallas put seven players in double figures while ending a four-game losing streak. The Mavericks had to overcome Denver's backcourt tandem of Michael Adams, who scored 37 points, and Chris Jackson, who had 30.

After trailing by as many as 24 points in the third period, the Nuggets pulled to 119-116 on Adams' 3-point basket with 3:15 to play. It capped a 24-11 surge.

But Dallas got two free throws from Donaldson and four consecutive points from Harper during a 6-2 spurt to put the game away.

Lakers 122, Spurs 115

SAN ANTONIO — Magic Johnson had 30 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists — his 13th triple-double of the season and third in four games — as the Los Angeles Lakers defeated San Antonio.

Johnson's effort overshadowed David Robinson's 36 points and career-high 23 rebounds and ended the Spurs' five-game winning streak. It was also the Spurs' first loss in 11 home outings.

Bulls 106, Magic 102

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored a season-high 44 points, including the go-ahead basket on an alley-oop slam dunk with 1:12 remaining, as the Chicago Bulls rallied for a victory over Orlando.

The Magic led 100-97 with 2:51 left, but Jordan came back with two free throws 12 seconds later, then took a perfect pass from Scottie Pippen for the go-ahead dunk.

John Paxson then stole an errant Orlando pass with 48 seconds left and Horace Grant sank two free throws for a 103-100 edge with 37 seconds left.

Bucks 121, 76ers 104

PHILADELPHIA — Fred Roberts scored a career-high 32 points as the Milwaukee Bucks handed Philadelphia its worst home defeat of the season.

The 76ers played without Charles Barkley, who suffered a sprain ligament in his left knee Sunday.

Roberts, an eight-year veteran, connected on 14 of 18 shots as the Bucks defeated Philadelphia at home for the first time since Dec. 13, 1988. The 76ers' worst previous loss at the Spectrum this season was 112-97 against New York on Jan. 19.

Bullets 101, Cavaliers 82

LANDOVER, Md. — Washington held Cleveland without a basket for the first 7:50 of the fourth quarter and got five points from A.J. English in a 14-0 run that lifted the Bullets to a victory.

Ledell Eackles scored 21 points for the Bullets, who blew a 15-point lead in the third quarter, but rallied to break a three-game losing streak by forcing Cleveland to miss its first 15 field-goal attempts of the final period.

Pistons 83, Hornets 78

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Joe Dumars scored 24 points and extended his club record by making his 59th consecutive free throw as the Detroit Pistons beat Charlotte.

Mark Aguirre scored 17 of his 23 points in the second half for the Pistons, 19-1 when holding the opposition under 90 points.

Vinnie Johnson gave the Pistons their biggest lead at 71-59 with 9:30 to play on a 15-footer.

Celtics 94, Nets 77

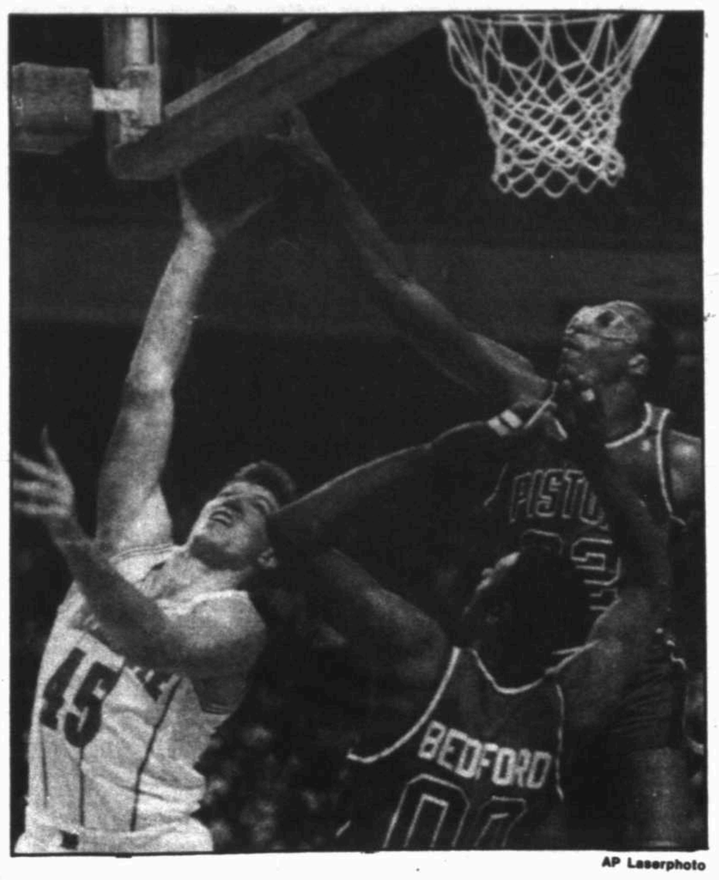

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Reggie Lewis scored 22 points and the Boston Celtics limited New Jersey to 32 percent shooting from the field and its lowest point total of the season.

The Nets made 28 of 87 shots against the NBA's top-rated defensive team in field goal percentage, and that had them out of contention midway through the third quarter as Boston opened a 21-point lead.

Suns 131, Jazz 117

PHOENIX — Kevin Johnson scored 12 of his 37 points in a span of 2:02 in the third quarter and had a season-high 20 assists as Phoenix beat Utah.

Xavier McDaniel had 28 points and 12 rebounds for the Suns.

Malone resigns at Cooper

Aesociated Press

ABILENE — A District 4-5A baseball coach who was suspended for using profanity has resigned, educators said Tuesday.

Andy Malone, Abilene Cooper High coach, has been released from further duty "effective immediately," said David Yeager, an administrative assistant for Abilene schools.

Yeager made the announcement in a memorandum from Charles Hundley, superintendent of Abilene schools, who he said was unavailable for comment.

Hundley, in an October reprimand, had forbidden Malone from using profanity in front of his team. Shortly after losing two consecutive games in the Fort Worth Southwest Tournament, Malone used profanity in chastising his team, administrators said.

After a player and parents had complained to administrators about the abusive language three days later, Hundley suspended Malone for the rest of the season.

Malone, who was suspended March 12, resigned effective at the end of the current school year.

The coach was out of town Tuesday, but his wife told the Abilene Reporter-News that his plans remain indefinite.

Malone's Cooper teams have won six district championships and have appeared in the playoff seven consecutive seasons, including state championships in 1987 and 1988.

The coach's record at Cooper was 220-52, including a 33-3 mark in 1987.

Richardson willing to listen to Tulsa proposal

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — If Tulsa wants to meet again about the job as the school's basketball coach, Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson says he'll listen.

Richardson said Monday that he had had one meeting with Tulsa officials.

"Right now I'm going to say I'm going to listen to the second go-around, if there is one," Richardson told the Arkansas Gazette. "If they want to talk to me after what I said, I'll listen.

"The first go-around was maybe a 'feel-out' go-around. Then they can get their facts together and say, 'Let's do this.' Then they can come back and present it to me.

"When they get all their facts, and once I get all my facts, I think I can find what I need to do. But I don't want to be drawn into a situation where they're in a wait-and-see what I'm going to do or vice versa."

Tulsa has not made any offers, he said.

"I think they wanted to find out basically what I have here," he said.

At Arkansas, Richardson's package is reported to be worth about $500,000 a year.

Richardson succeeded Eddie Sutton at Arkansas in 1985, after five years at Tulsa. J.D. Barnett, who replaced Richardson, was fired recently.

Prices recover

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rose Tuesday, largely on speculation that the nation's supply of gasoline would keep falling.

Unleaded gasoline futures led the rally at the New York Mercantile Exchange, with contracts for delivery in May rising 1.62 cents to settle at 67.72 cents a gallon.

Crude oil for May delivery also moved higher, settling at $19.70 per barrel, up 41 cents.

Crude has shown a reluctance to go much below $19 a barrel or much above $20 per barrel in recent weeks. When it dipped into the low $19 range on Tuesday, futures players started buying.

Natural gas for delivery in May settled at $1.420, up .5 cent a gallon.

Metro files

DALLAS (AP) — Metro Airlines Inc., the regional carrier stung by the demise of Eastern Airlines and other industry woes, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization Monday.

The company lost more than half its revenue earlier this year with Eastern's collapse and the sale of its operations in the Northeast and Caribbean.

Metro's sole remaining operation — as American Eagle for American Airlines in Dallas-Fort Worth — will continue to fly during the reorganization.

Metro blamed the filing on losses of $19.5 million in 1990 and $2.7 million in 1989, primarily due to the poor performance of Eastern Metro Express, its Atlanta subsidiary that was the regional carrier for Eastern Airlines until it closed Jan. 19.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar dropped for the second straight session Tuesday, the victim of speculation that U.S. interest rates may continue to fall.

The British pound advanced to $1.7780 in New York from $1.7685 late Monday.

The U.S. currency slumped to 137.85 Japanese yen in New York from late Monday's 139.35.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's prices, included: 1.6705 German marks, down from 1.6725; 1.4185 Swiss francs, down from 1.4255; 5.6615 French francs, down from 5.66375; 1,245.50 Italian lire, up from 1,244.50; and 1.15515 Canadian dollars, down from 1.15785.

Gold fell on the Commodity Exchange in New York, closing at $358.50 a troy ounce, down $1.90 from Monday.

Gold rose earlier in London to a late bid of $357.75 a troy ounce from $355.75 late Thursday.

Silver rose 4.9 cents on the Commodity Exchange to close at $3.989 a troy ounce.

Regulators putting clamps on First City

■ First City Bancorp. is feeling heat both from federal regulators, which have asked for an evaluation of its biggest banks, and from ousted board chairman A. Robert Abboud.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — First City Bancorporation will be asked by federal regulators to conduct a study evaluating management and board supervision at the company's biggest banks, the company revealed.

The company's banks in Houston, Austin and San Antonio also will be ordered to add outside directors to their boards and develop three-year capital and business plans, the company said Monday in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

First City already has agreed in principle to the agreement with the Office of the Comptroller of Currency, the filing stated. The company said it expects to reach a similar agreement with the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas.

Monday's SEC filing also revealed that A. Robert Abboud, the First City chairman ousted last week, has accused the board of violating his five-year management contract, the filing said.

Abboud asked the company on March 28 to "cure such non-compliance" within 10 days.

The filing said the board would consider Abboud's objections, but that any future payments to him "may be subject to regulatory approval." Abboud's base salary under the agreement was $500,000 a year.

In addition, the filing revealed that First City paid former Vice Chairman Frank C. Cihak $93,750 in consulting fees after he resigned under duress Oct. 16.

Cihak, who helped Abboud with the 1988 bailout, was blamed for some of First City's most serious loan problems.

The bank originally gave him a $450,000-a-year consulting contract when he resigned, but it canceled the contract Dec. 31, leaving Cihak with only the $93,750 he already had been paid.

Two consecutive quarters of high losses and problem loans have left First City facing a new capital shortage of $200 million. No matter how the company solves its capital problems, the outcome probably won't be good for stockholders, the filing said.

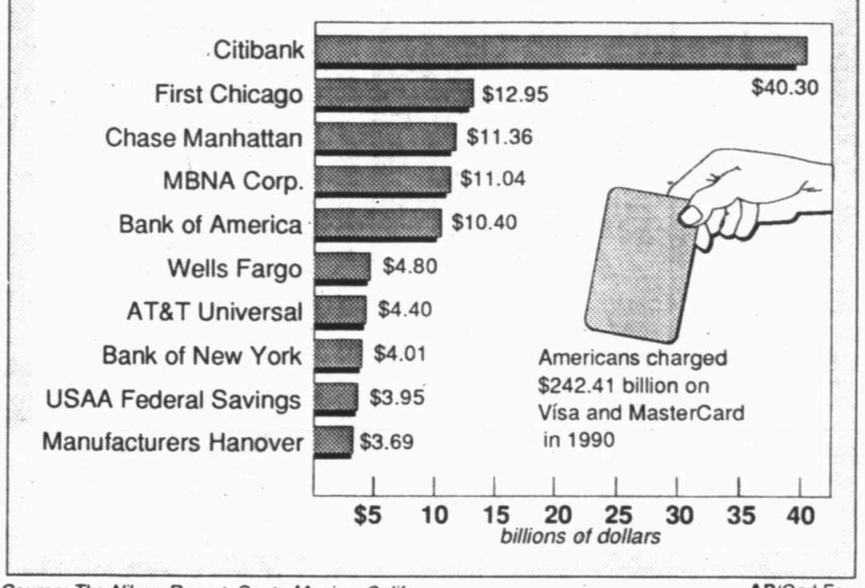

"It is anticipated that existing preferred shareholders may be required to make substantial concessions and existing common stockholders will experience substantial ownership dilution," the filing states.

Although the company is trying to relieve its financial woes, problem assets will increase, and the company will lose money for the year, the filing said.

First City expects to lose between $50 million and $75 million in the first quarter of 1991, after a loan loss provision of between $60 million and $85 million.

Judge tells Continental to make lease payments

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The bankrupt Continental Airlines must pay $58 million on leased aircraft if it wants to keep on flying the planes, says a federal judge.

Attorneys expect an appeal of the ruling by District Judge Robert Gawthrop III that reversed an earlier decision by a bankruptcy judge. The case would go to the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia and could delay action on lease payments for months.

"Every day that goes by without Continental making a payment benefits Continental in its operation," Michael Bloom, attorney for some of the creditors who leased planes to the airline, said Tuesday. "We would hope that the matter can be resolved very quickly."

Continental filed for Chapter 11 reorganization last Dec. 3.

The bankruptcy judge's ruling was taken to court in a suit filed in Wilmington, Del., by 61 creditors who said the airline had to make the lease payments despite the bankruptcy filing. Gawthrop was assigned to the case and released his 29-page opinion in Wilmington Monday.

Bloom said the decision "strengthens the intended scope of the bankruptcy code. The judge decided that a lease is a lease and must be paid, otherwise it would jeopardize financing to the aircraft industry."

Gawthrop ruled Continental improperly "sought the continued use of aircraft ... without having to pay the amounts now due on these leases, which totals approximately $58 million."

Continental claimed the planes were under a sale and leaseback arrangement and therefore were part of its assets.

"When title remains with the creditor, as when equipment is leased or sold conditionally, the property is not properly part of the debtor's estate when reorganization is attempted," the judge said.

Continental Airlines had no immediate comment when contacted at its Houston, Tex., headquarters by telephone.

Five other airlines — America West Airlines, American Airlines, Northwest Airlines, United Air Lines and USAir — joined the lease holders in opposing the Continental position

Citibank implements best-price promotion

■ Citibank may begin a wave of credit-card promotions with its new lowest-available-price guarantee for goods bought with credit cards it issues.

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Citibank says it is prepared to guarantee people who shop with its card that they will pay the lowest available price.

Citibank, the world's largest issuer of credit cards, said the service would cover consumer electronics, furniture and clothing, but not air travel, art, antiques.

Goods bought at "going out of business," "limited quantity" and "cash only" sales, as well as at "close-out prices," are not covered, Citibank said.

The program requires the customer to make a claim within 60 days of the purchase and document that the goods could be bought at a lower price.

A card holder who buys a videocassette recorder for $500, for example, and finds it sold elsewhere for a lower price, could claim a rebate of the price difference from Citibank.

Other banks that issue credit cards, as well as American Express Co., could well follow suit.

"This is a very major development," said Kurt T. Peters, editor of Credit Card News, an industry newsletter, when informed of Citibank's plans. "This is bound to set off a new wave of card enhancements by competitors who will follow Citibank's lead."

The last major innovation in the credit-card business was instituted in 1987 by American Express and quickly copied by Visa and Mastercard. Their programs provided expanded warranties for items bought with a credit card in the case of breakage, loss, theft or fire damage.

Credit-card issuers are resorting to such incentives because they have cards in the hands of nearly everyone who qualifies for one. Up to 90 percent of the eligible households have an American Express, Visa, Mastercard or Discover card, analysts say. More than 111 million people have one or more credit cards.

So now the card issuers want to get consumers to use their cards more frequently and charge more when they do. Card companies have been exploring many new outlets for card use, like movie theaters, fast-food restaurants and supermarkets.

Last year, American consumers charged nearly $350 billion of goods and services on cards.

"This new program is very important to us," said James L. Bailey, the executive in charge of credit-card products at Citibank, a unit of Citicorp, the nation's largest banking company.

"This service is like the meal on an airplane. The airlines don't make money on meals. But if the meals and rest of the service are better and more competitive,

■ In order to get the Point Arguello project moving, the U.S. is considering giving Chevron a break on future royalties.

N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — The U.S. Interior Department is proposing to give Chevron Corp. a break on future royalties it would pay for pumping oil from the Point Arguello oil field near Santa Barbara in order to help get the project moving, informed sources said.

Chevron prefers to move oil from the huge field, located on federal lands, by tanker but that has caused an environmental furor.

Environmentalists would allow sending the oil from the biggest field on the West Coast through a pipeline, but that would be more expensive for Chevron.

The Interior Department, interested in gaining millions of dollars more in oil royalties, is willing to take less so that Chevron will spend more to run the crude through the pipeline to Los Angeles, sources say.

Will Price, president of Chevron's U.S. subsidiary, was in Washington Monday to discuss the plan with Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan.

Chevron's reaction to the proposal is lukewarm, because the company thinks existing pipeline capacity isn't sufficient to handle the flow.

There is a technical complication as well. Chevron argues that there is a shortage of a chemical needed to make the crude oil less viscous so that it can flow more easily through the pipeline.

Point Arguello is the nation's largest domestic oil find since Prudhoe Bay. U.S. Energy Secretary James Watkins has recently supported Chevron's position on hauling oil in tankers.

The Point Arguello platforms have been ready to pump oil for years, but environmental opposition has kept them idle.

This is costly not only to Chevron, but the federal government. Oil royalties are the government's second largest revenue sources after income taxes.

This summer, Chevron plans to begin pumping 20,000 barrels a day from the field and move it north through pipelines. But it has been seeking to carry additional loads — up to 80,000 barrels a day for as long as four years — in tankers.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices climbed sharply Tuesday, boosted by computer-driven trading that pushed several market indexes to record highs.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks shot up 63.86 points to 2,945.05. But the Dow did not join the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, the New York Stock Exchange composite index or the NASDAQ index in setting records.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by more than 5 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,193 up, 447 down and 428 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 189.53 million shares, up from 144.01 million Monday.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 226.93 million shares.

Analysts and traders said there was no fundamental economic reason for the market's rise. They said it may have been sparked in part by stronger bond prices and a climb in stock prices abroad.

"We have lots of buyers and not a lot of sellers, and that makes for higher prices," said Dudley Eppel, managing director of equity trading at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. "The tone is very strong."

Prices were pushed higher late in the session by computerized trading that takes advantage of differences between the price of stock futures and the value of the underlying stocks themselves, said Hugh Johnson of First Albany Corp. The effect is to prompt traders to buy stocks.

"This doesn't appear to be a market that is driven by investors, it is driven by traders," Johnson said.

He said the market appeared to feed off its own momentum, drawing even more traders as well as institutional investors who have been looking for a place to put their cash.

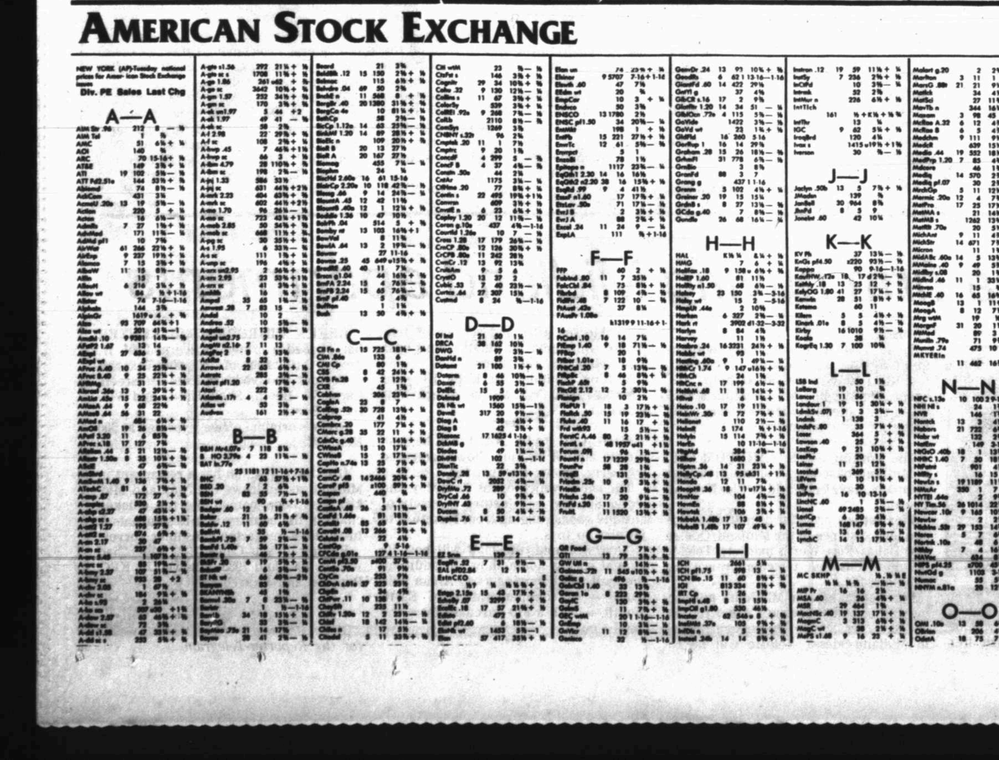

The Dow's climb set off one of the NYSE "circuit breakers" about 3:30 p.m., which restricts computerized trading when the Dow rises by 50 points.

The market's rise seemed to be a repudiation of Monday's session, when the Dow fell 32.67 points to close at 2,881.19. The drop was caused in part by a report that showed the economy remained in a recession.

Among most-active blue chip stocks, Philip Morris rose 2% to 69¼, IBM gained 1 to 113¼, General Electric rose 2% to 72¼, American Telephone & Telegraph gained ⅝ to 34¾ and Boeing advanced ¾ to 47¼.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 4.01 to a record 207.42.

Factory orders fall again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders for factory goods fell in February for the fourth straight month, the government said Tuesday. Analysts said the 0.5 percent drop was another sign that the manufacturing sector remained in a recession.

"Certainly, in this series of numbers, there doesn't seem to be any sign of a trough or bottom in the recession," said Gilbert Benz, an economist with the Swiss Bank Corp. in New York.

The Commerce Department said orders for durable and non-durable goods fell to $233.2 billion after shrinking 1.6 percent a month earlier. Factory orders have not risen since peaking at $255.0 billion last October.

Benz said he was concerned not only that "big-ticket" durable orders fell, but also that orders for non-durable goods including apparel and household goods declined.

"There doesn't seem to be any demand by businesses or consumers at this point," he said.

Orders for durable goods — big-ticket items ranging from cars to computers expected to last more than three years — slipped 0.3 percent to $117.5 billion. It was the third decline in the last four months, including a 2.0 percent drop in January.

Orders for non-durable products fell for the fourth straight month, down 0.8 percent to $115.8 billion after a 1.1 percent decline in January.

And orders for non-defense capital goods, often a barometer of business plans to expand and modernize, slipped 0.7 percent following an 11.9 percent plunge a month earlier.

"When aircraft orders are excluded from non-defense capital goods, the decline was an even more severe 3.9 percent," said Marilyn Schaja, an economist with Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. in New York.

The slump in the manufacturing sector has cost more than 1 million jobs in the last two years, including 127,000 in February, according to Labor Department statistics.

CITIBANK: Wants card used more

(From 5D)

then the airlines make more money by more people flying their planes."

The idea for Citibank's price-protection plan is not entirely new. Analysts say an Arizona bank, the Valley National Bank of Phoenix, pioneered the idea with its credit cards.

Also, Diner's Club, another Citicorp unit, has a similar service, except that it charges an additional $49 fee and the service applies only to specific stores.

Citibank would not disclose how much it expected to spend on the price-protection program. Industry analysts say the cost could be relatively little, if credit-card issuers' experience with warranties is any guide — very few cardholders have filed claims under the warranty program.

H. Spencer Nilson, publisher of the Nilson Report, an industry newsletter, estimates that substantially fewer than 1 percent of card holders file claims under programs like buyer protection.

In addition, people who buy larger-ticket items like furniture and stereo equipment are likely to comparison-shop anyway and get the lowest price. Whatever the minimal cost of the program, it is likely to be offset by more purchases on credit cards.

"It is a very crowded market," Nilson said. "The first one in the market with an incentive like this gets the advantage. Everyone else is a me-too."

The credit-card issuers, usually banks, make their money from annual fees from card holders and monthly interest charges. They and other banks that process the credit-card paperwork also share fees that they charge merchants who accept the cards.

Fooling with Italian recipes is American tradition

By Florence Fabricant
N.Y. Times News Service

No sooner was that first plate of stylish fettuccine or risotto off the stove than some American had to start fooling with it. But then Italian food in America has always been open to interpretation.

It all began about 100 years ago with spaghetti and meatballs. Like many dishes — even pasta primavera — it is unknown in Italy.

It was originally served when the earliest little mom-and-pop restaurants run by new immigrants opened their doors in this country.

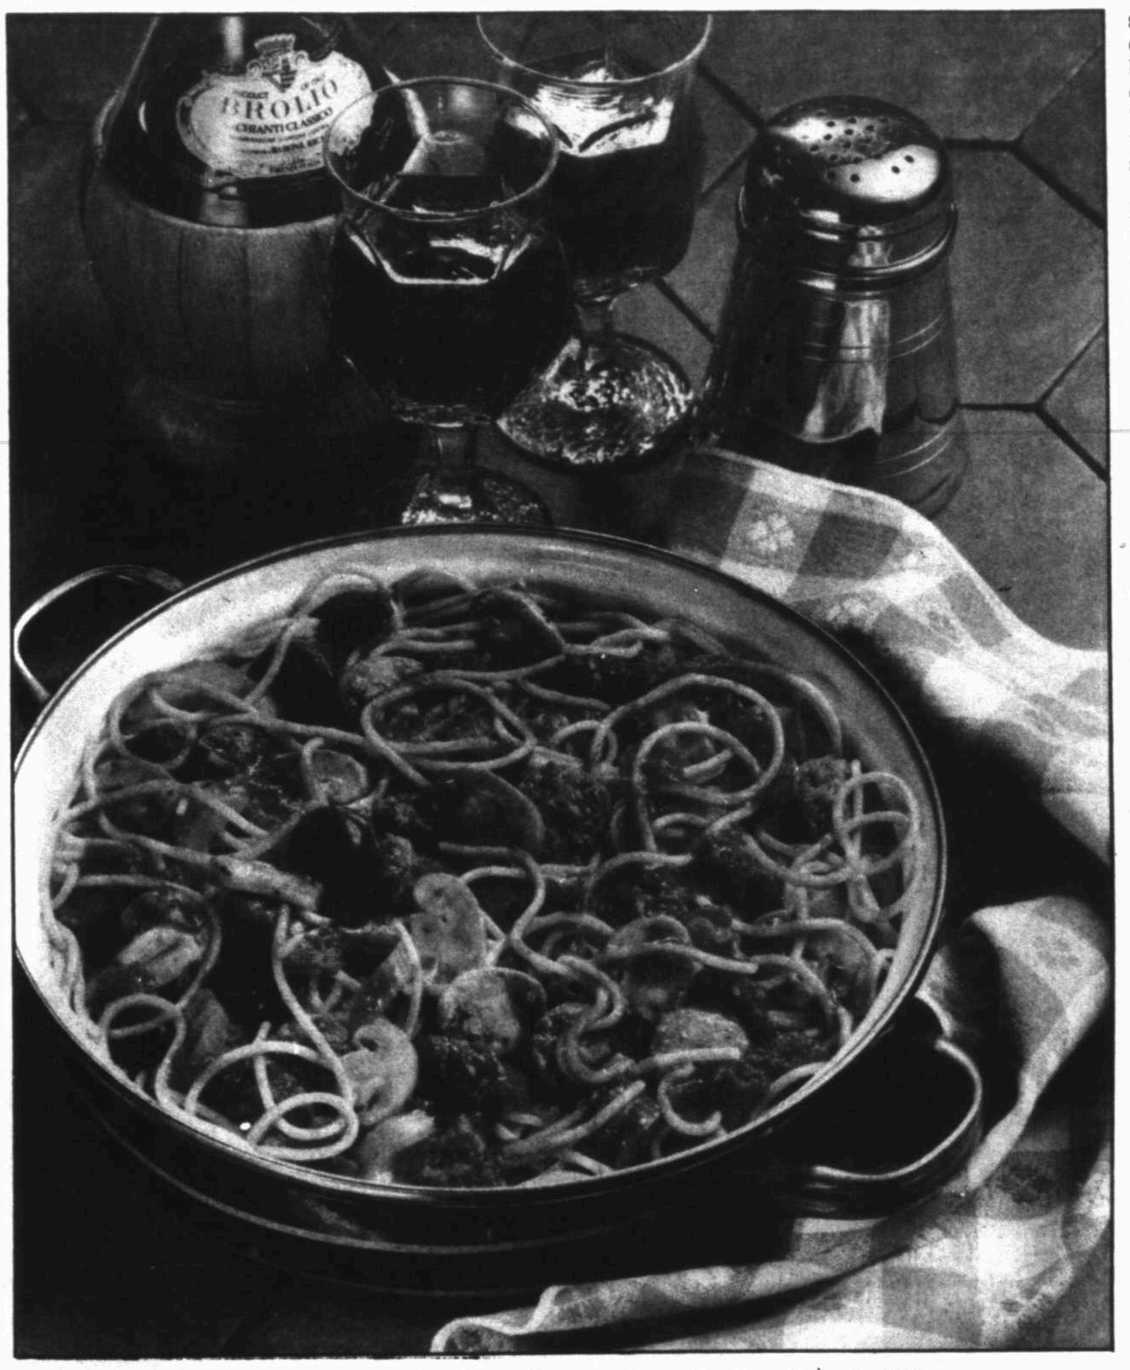

Over the past decade, a different style of Italian-American cooking has developed, inspired by a new group of chefs, new ideas about diet and ingredients new to the United States.

"I'm not saying some of the new ideas that cash in on the trends are bad," said Giuliano Bugialli, the author and cooking teacher. "They're just not Italian. There is this idea that all you have to do is add olive oil, balsamic vinegar and sun-dried tomatoes and you're in business."

This latest adaptation of Italian cooking grew out of efforts to counter the older generation of Italian-American dishes that were drowned in red sauce.

In the gastronomic revolution of the 1970s, cooks discovered pesto, rushed out to buy pasta machines and books by Bugialli and Marcella Hazan, and flocked to restaurants that served tortellini alla panna instead of baked ziti.

"Americans wanted to upgrade by getting rid of all the tomato sauce, but what they came up with instead was not necessarily any more authentic," Bugialli said.

Italian dishes, such as this spaghetti meal, are a favorite American tradition.

A GOOD EXAMPLE is costoletta Milanese, simply a veal chop pounded thin, breaded and fried. That dish has been served in America as veal Parmesan covered with tomato sauce and melted mozzarella. New-wave Italian restaurants began serving authentic costoletta Milanese, but not for long.

"Today, chefs are obsessed with creativity," said Lidia Bastianich, co-owner of Felidia in New York City and author of "La Cucina di Lidia" (Doubleday, 1990). "They won't get enough recognition if they do an ordinary costoletta Milanese with some salad on the side, so they decorate it with the salad on top. Then another chef does it with a plain veal chop, and so on. There's a mixing of California ideas as well."

In "Cucina Rustica," by Viana La Place and Evan Kleiman (William Morrow, 1990), the authors include a recipe for the dish made with chicken: chicken scallops with tomato and arugula salad.

Of the numerous pasta dishes that are served with vegetables in Italy, none are called primavera (springtime). "I invented the dish in 1974," said Sirio Maccioni, the owner of Le Cirque in New York. "It seemed like a good idea and people still like it."

It has been copied around the country. At Convito Italiano in Wilmette, Ill., the menu lists a linguine primavera al mare with shrimp in a light broth instead of cream.

Pasta primavera even made it into the latest edition of the "Better Homes and Gardens Cookbook" with cashews or almonds instead of pine nuts.

Unlike old-fashioned Italian-American cooking, which evolved in part to compensate for a lack of proper ingredients in this country (and is now being rehabilitated in a wave of revisionism) there are plenty of first-rate imported and domestic ingredients for the new dishes. And still adaptations are being made.

Ms. Kleiman, executive chef and owner of the three Angeli restaurants in Los Angeles, said that she has to make concessions to the customers, but that she feels that her cooking still has great integrity.

"I try to stress the simplicity of it, which is what Americans find most appealing," she said. "Basically, I don't think Americans perceive of Italian cuisine as a foreign cuisine. But today the spirit of Italian cuisine is more authentic than in the past, regardless of how the dishes are prepared."

ANOTHER CALIFORNIA chef, Michael Chiarello of Tra Vigne, in the Napa Valley, said, "It takes some reinterpretation to make an authentic dish palatable to most Americans." He describes Tra Vigne as a Californian restaurant inspired by Italian tradition.

Along with the trinity of olive oil, sun-dried tomatoes and balsamic vinegar, new Italian-American cooking often depends on bright, fresh ingredients, lightly cooked and sometimes raw. "That's why it's so easily confused with California food," Bugialli suggested.

But Bugialli and others, like Mrs. Hazan and Carlo Middione, the owner of Vivande in San Francisco, point out that crunchy, undercooked vegetables may be healthy, but they are definitely not Italian.

"There's no point in being strictly authentic with an empty dining room," Mrs. Bastianich said.

SPAGHETTI PRIMAVERA
(Adapted from Le Cirque Restaurant, New York City)
4 tablespoons olive oil
Salt
½ cup shelled fresh peas
¾ cup heavy cream
3 tablespoons mascarpone
3 tablespoons unsalted butter
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese (about 1 ounce), approximately, plus additional cheese for the table
Freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons pine nuts
1 cup thinly sliced mushrooms
1 medium-size zucchini, split and sliced ⅛ inch thick
1 cup broccoli flowerets
½ cup green beans, preferably haricots verts, trimmed and cut 1 inch long
12 very thin asparagus, cut in 1-inch segments
1 teaspoon finely chopped jalapeno pepper or ½ teaspoon red pepper flakes
1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic
3 sprigs basil, leaves only, chopped fine
4 fresh ripe plum tomatoes, seeded and cut in ½-inch cubes
½ pound spaghetti
2 tablespoons chopped chives
Whole basil leaves for garnish

Bring 1 gallon of water with 1 tablespoon of the olive oil to a boil. Let simmer until ready to cook the pasta.

In a 1½- to 2-quart saucepan, bring a quart of water with ½ tablespoon salt to a boil. Add the fresh peas and cook for 3 minutes. Drain, cool the peas under cold running water and drain again. Set the peas aside.

In the same saucepan, combine the heavy cream, mascarpone, butter, Parmesan cheese, a pinch of salt and freshly ground pepper. Cook slowly over low heat for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and set aside.

In a large skillet, place 2 tablespoons olive oil and toast the pine nuts over high heat until light brown. Add the mushrooms, zucchini, broccoli, green beans, asparagus and jalapeno pepper, and cook, stirring, for 5 to 7 minutes. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Stir in the peas and set aside.

Warm the remaining tablespoon of olive oil in a small pan over medium heat. Add the garlic and basil and cook slowly for 2 minutes. Do not allow the garlic to color. Add the tomatoes, salt and pepper to taste, and cook another 3 to 4 minutes. Mix with the sauteed vegetables.

Just before serving, add a tablespoon of salt to the boiling water, plunge the spaghetti into the water, stir and cook for 5 to 7 minutes until al dente. Drain and return the spaghetti to the pot. Add the reserved Parmesan cream sauce, the chives and half of the sauteed vegetable mixture. Toss well for two minutes and add a little additional Parmesan cheese if the sauce needs thickening.

Pour the spaghetti mixture into a warm bowl. Sprinkle the remaining vegetables over it. Decorate with basil leaves and serve grated Parmesan cheese on the side.

RISOTTO ALL'AMATRICIANA
(Adapted from "Cucina Rustica" by Viana La Place and Evan Kleiman (William Morrow, 1990)
4 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 small onion, peeled and finely chopped
3 slices pancetta (about 2 ounces), cut in short strips
½ teaspoon crushed dried red chili peppers, or to taste
1½ pounds ripe plum tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped, or 2 pounds canned plum tomatoes, well drained and chopped
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
2 cups Arborio rice
6 cups beef broth (approximately)
6 tablespoons grated Italian pecorino Romano cheese, plus additional for the table

Place 2 tablespoons of the butter in a heavy two-quart saucepan. Add the onion and cook over low heat until the onion begins to soften. Add the pancetta and red chili peppers and saute until the pancetta renders its fat and the onion is tender.

Add the tomatoes, salt and pepper. Increase the heat to medium and cook until the tomatoes thicken and turn into a sauce, about 10 minutes. Add the rice, stir and reduce the heat slightly.

Heat the broth to boiling. Turn the heat to very low under the broth to keep it warm. Begin adding the broth to the rice mixture about half a cup at a time, stirring constantly to prevent sticking. As the rice absorbs the broth add more warm broth. Continue adding broth until the rice is al dente, tender outside but with a little bite at its center, and the mixture is quite moist, about 25 minutes total cooking.

Turn off the heat and stir in the remaining butter and the six tablespoons of grated pecorino Romano cheese. Serve extra grated cheese at the table.

New frozen entrees lower in fat, lower in cost

By Linda Anderson

I wonder if Tommy Lasorda knows about this: Ultra Slim-Fast frozen dinners.

Anderson

Of course, once I read the labels that claimed these products were "Low Fat, Low Cholesterol," came in "Generous Portions" and were low — or at least lower — in calorie than ordinary frozen dinners, I knew I had to check them out.

And the fact that these dinners are actually just entrees, with no space wasted on such things as corn or applesauce, helped quite a bit.

So I gathered up five different dinners and sampled them for taste, price and advertising accuracy. The small taste-testers helped some, but they weren't all that interested (none of the boxes had Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, Barbies or New Kids on the Block on them).

Price for the dinners was two for $5, or $2.50 each. That's not bad, considering many of the other "healthy" frozen dinners can cost $3 to $4.

Each frozen dinner was 12 ounces in weight, which explains that "Generous Portion" claim. Many other frozen entrees are only 9 to 10 ounces in weight (and often cost more).

Label advertising claimed the dinners are "The Healthy, Delicous Way to Lose Weight." On the back of the box, advertising claims go like this: "Ultra Slim-Fast Entrees are delicious and nutritious satisfying dishes created by chefs and nutrition experts. Only delicious combinations of lean meats, delicate sauces, and wholesome vegetables are used in the preparation of these entrees."

Also, each label includes a list of the nutrients in that particular dinner, and a chart showing the caloric composition of that dinner (broken down into percentages of carbohydrates, protein and fat). And, according to the chart, each dinner contains less than the 30 percent fat recommended by the American Heart Association.

Each dinner is contains a carbohydrate such as pasta or rice (or potatoes, which also counts as a vegetable), vegetables of some kind, and meat, mostly beef or chicken, in some kind of sauce. In the photos on the boxes, they look yummy.

Unfortunately, in the actual taste-test, they taste just like what they are — frozen dinners. Some of the chunks of beef and/or chicken are bigger than chunks in other frozen dinners and taste less like "parts is parts" meat than some of the others do. A lot of the dinners come with pasta, which I like better than rice. (In fact, some of the pasta is even the green and orange kind, which I like even better.)

But nothing can change the fact that these are frozen dinners, not anything that you would particularly want to serve your guests.

However — when all you're feeding is yourself, and you really don't mind the frozen dinner taste and you appreciate the convenience of not having to cook, Ultra Slim-Fast frozen dinners can be a pretty decent choice.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.

DEAR ABBY

AIDS listed in an obituary can cause family more grief

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Is there any reason why an obituary must state that a person has died of AIDS? I notice that it is never stated that a person has died of steroids, yet steroids attack the system in a similar manner by destroying the immune system.

Van Buren

Due to ignorance, many people think AIDS is a venereal disease — which it is not. Please consider the anguish that loved ones must endure when this kind of information appears in the obituary. I can remember when people were just as afraid of cancer. They wouldn't go into the home of one so infected, lest they, too, become infected.

By the way, I do not have AIDS nor am I HIV positive. Thanks, Abby, for letting me have my say. — HELEN IN K.C.

DEAR HELEN: When the cause of death is AIDS, and that fact appears in the obituary, it is very often the wish of the deceased. (It is nothing to be ashamed of; we have lost some of our finest people to AIDS.) However, if the family of the deceased chooses to omit (or disguise) the cause of death, the family will have the last word. Literally.

DEAR ABBY: My husband calls telephone sex numbers when I'm not around. I never know how many calls he's made until our telephone bill comes. Every month, these calls are more numerous, and they are running into a lot of money. He knows how much it hurts and upsets me, but he continues to do it.

Abby, I am a good-looking woman, and he tells me I am great in bed, but if he doesn't quit making these sex calls, I am going to leave him. Please tell me how to handle this new habit of his. — NOT GOOD ENOUGH

DEAR NOT GOOD ENOUGH: You are not responsible for what turns your husband on. This "habit" has nothing to do with you — unless he's spending more time on the telephone than he spends with you. You and your husband need to talk this out together with a marriage counselor. If he refuses to go, go alone. You are not the only wife who feels she is not "good enough" because her husband discovered telephone sex.

DEAR ABBY: When a person visits a relative in a different state, and one party prefers to stay up late and sleep late the following morning, and the other one is in the habit of getting up early in the morning and retiring early, who should adjust his or her schedule — the visiting guest or the host?

There have been no disagreements over this, and all visits have been most congenial, but I would like your opinion as to which one should adjust his or her schedule during such a visit. — WONDERING IN MANHATTAN, KAN.

DEAR WONDERING: Why should anyone adjust his or her schedule? The early bird should feel free to get up in the morning without bothering the night owl. And the night owl need not get up early to accommodate the early bird.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I just received what at first appeared to be a formal invitation to attend the graduation ceremonies of a young man whose father was "immensely" proud of his son's record.

Actually, it was not an invitation; it was more like an apology. It stated: "Since there is limited seating in the auditorium, there is no room for you, but we want you to know that our son is graduating from this fine old Virginia prep school." Then a "few" of the boy's accomplishments were listed.

How do you size this up, Abby? — APPALLED

DEAR APPALLED: Please don't blame the boy. His father was so prideful, he wanted you to know that even though "there was no room for you," his son was being graduated from a fine old Virginia prep school.

I would give the father an A for good intentions, and a D minus for taste.

Abigail Van Buren's column is distrubuted by Universal Press Syndicate.

Prepare Irish coffee the proper way

N.Y. Times News Service

John Ryan, who represents the Irish distillers in Dublin, gives the following recipe for Irish coffee:

Preheat a 6 to 7-ounce stemmed Irish coffee glass with hot water, then replace the water with four ounces of fresh-brewed strong coffee. Add sugar to taste and stir to dissolve. Then add an ounce of warmed Irish whisky, stir, gently float some unsweetened, lightly whipped heavy cream on top by pouring it over the back of a spoon. Do not stir it again.

Community cookbook competition announced

Staff Report

The McIlhenny Company, maker of TABASCO pepper sauce, annouces the second annual community cookbook competition, open to non-profit organizations which have published cookbooks to raise funds for charitable causes.

The TABASCO Community Cookbook Awards will recognize the best cookbooks published in 1990 and 1991 which are not previous winners, while the Walter S. McIlhenny Community Cookbook Hall of Fame will honor the best previously published books which have sold over 100,000 copies.

"We have been gratified with the response to these awards in their first year, and are pleased to continue this program of recognition for the many volunteers who produce and sell these books. They not only contribute substantially to their communities, but help preserve the richness of our American food traditions," said Edward McIlhenny Simmons, president of the McIlhenny Company.

In the 1990 competition, 158 cookbooks were submitted for the three national and six regional prizes, and 23 previously published books were selected for the Walter S. McIlhenny Hall of Frame. Copies of the books have been placed in the Walter S. McIlhenny Community Cookbook Library in the company's headquarters on Avery Island.

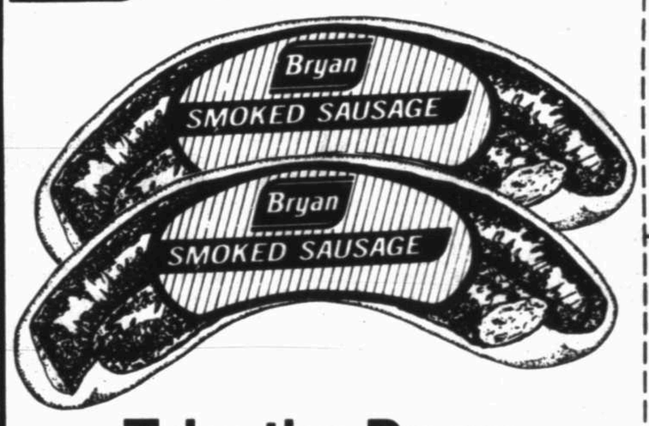

Deadline for entries for both competitions is Oct. 1. TABASCO Award winners will receive contributions to designated charities, plaques for their organizations and certificates for committee members. Stickers for their cookbooks will be sent to all winners and Hall of Fame honorees.

The panel judging the competition will again be chaired by Jan Turner Hazard, food editor of Ladies' Home Journal. Other judges will be Meryle Evans, culinary historian; Ann H. Harvey, executive editor at Oxmoor House; Jan Longone, Wine and Food Library; William Rice, Chicago Tribune columnist; Tommy Simmons, food editor of the Baton Rouge Morning Advocate, and Nahum Waxman, Kitchen Arts and Letters.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 3, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Career advancement is featured, bringing you greater financial security beginning in August. A hobby can be turned into a lucrative "cottage industry" next October. Be cautious about making new investments in November. A family reunion leads to an overdue reconciliation as Christmas approaches. Your scholastic or professional achievements will bring an exciting job offer in February or March of 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: superstars Marlon Brando and Eddie Murphy, actresses Doris Day and Marsha Mason.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Home is where security generally can be found. Strangers who offer the most for the least often manage to take everything and give nothing in return. Do not be swayed by peer pressure.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your visionary ideas have considerable appeal today. Be outgoing and others will want to jump on your bandwagon. Tend to routine matters before beginning new projects. Romance looks mostly rosy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Disquieting news may arrive today. If an old problem resurfaces, tackle it head-on. Solving a difficult situation once and for all will be worth the effort. Escape into an adventure film tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Business trips — short or long — may be taxing today. Concentrate on routine chores to clear the deck for a new project. Do not let an inconsiderate partner ruffle your feathers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep your plans under wraps today. The less said or written, the better. Build bridge of friendship to your co-workers and neighbors. Curl up with a good book tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Comparison shoppers should examine merchandise carefully; it may not be a bargain. Communications about your intentions are best avoided. Be discreet. Proceed slowly in a romantic situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Positive thinking will help you advance your business interests today. A change of employment, residence or partners may be necessary. Show more enthusiasm over a loved one's accomplishments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your imagination could land you in hot water if you are unable to separate fact from fantasy. Old friends are hoping to hear the latest news. Look forward to a lively evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your co-workers are sensitive to your moods. Avoid taking advantage of their good nature. If you have allowed yourself to fall behind at work, catch up.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A journey you had to postpone can now be undertaken with successful results. You profit from keeping certain plans under wraps. A loved one's special needs may require your making new concessions.

Playing bridge is as easy as driving a car, we have been told. Maybe, maybe not. But now you can certainly learn bridge while driving a car. New York teacher Edith Seligman has prepared a course on two 105-minute audio cassettes accompanied by a 146-page book, How to Bid Your Best in Bridge, (available from Baron/Barclay Bridge Supplies, 3600 Chamberlain Lane, Louisville, Ky. 50241, $39.95, plus $3 for postage and handling). It is a sound basic course for anyone who wants to learn elementary bidding.

Seligman held the South cards in a recent rubber bridge game at New York's renowned Cavendish Club. The auction followed the methods she espouses in her book. Three clubs was Stayman, looking for a possible four-card spade suit in the North hand. Three spades offered North a choice of contracts and, with superb three-card support, North chose the suit contract.

West found the best lead of a trump. At first glance it might seem that, with nine top tricks, the contract depended either on an even heart break or a successful diamond finesse, a combined chance of about 70 percent. As the cards lie, both these possibilities would have failed.

But why settle for a 70 percent chance when a virtually sure-trick line is available? Declarer won the opening lead in dummy perforce and immediately led the ace and queen of diamonds. The defense was helpless.

The best the defenders could do was to return another trump. Declarer then came to hand with the ace of hearts and ruffed a diamond. Three more trumps in hand together with the two trump tricks, diamond ruff and three plain-suit winners delivered by dummy brought declarer's total to 10.

Prime minister regrets indifference to school

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister John Major says he regrets his indifference to school as a boy. But the man who finished high school by correspondence and never earned a university degree says academic credentials don't impress him.

"I know an awful lot of people who have an armful of academic qualifications and ... they are wholly useless, most of them. They have no common sense at all," Major said in a TV interview broadcast Monday.

Major left school without taking many of the usual qualifying tests British schools require.

Despite his lack of a university degree, he made a career in banking, was Britain's treasury chief at 46 and prime minister at 47, four months ago.

"I certainly was pretty idle at school," he said. "It was ... extremely silly."

Major grew up in London's tough Brixton neighborhood. His family lived in a cramped rooming house. Meals were cooked on a gas burner.

He said little angers him except snobbery, bigotry and intolerance.

And "being patronized sends me into orbit," he said.

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) — Murder on an Indian reservation is the subject of both a documentary and a commercial that motion picture director Michael Apted is working on in southern South Dakota.

The documentary, which is expected to be released for television in late summer, will explore the life of former American Indian Movement leader Leonard Peltier, who is serving two life prison sentences for his conviction of killing two FBI agents on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in 1975. Peltier has maintained his innocence, and alleged the FBI intimidated the trial judge.

Redford

The documentary is being financed by actor Robert Redford, and produced by Tribeca Productions, a 2-year-old production company owned by actor Robert DeNiro and partner Nan Rosenthal.

Apted, who has directed such films as "Coal Miner's Daughter" and "Gorky Park," also is starting work on the reservation for a movie entitled "Thunder Heart."

It is the story of an FBI agent sent to investigate a murder on the reservation in the early 1970s. In the process, he discovers a part of his own Indian heritage.

"It is a contemporary fictional narrative, a story that is clearly a story onto itself," said Rosenthal. "And even though viewers might be able to draw some analogies, it is not Leonard's (Peltier) story."

FORT WORTH (AP) — Country music greats Willie Nelson, Garth Brooks and the Carter Sisters sent video greetings as Texans observed the 10th anniversary of Billy Bob's Texas, an enormous honky-tonk.

Ray Wylie Hubbard was the featured performer Monday night as about 1,500 people celebrated the anniversary of the bar that was opened by Billy Bob Barnett with some trepidation on April Fools' Day in 1981.

Nelson

Friends recalled that Barnett did not know if the converted discount store would really make it. So, if it didn't, he could simply close it and say it was all a joke.

"I'm glad we've kept this place going. It's great it's still open. It's even more solid now," said Steve Murrin, co-owner of the club that has 42 bar stations and seating for 8,000. Barnett has moved on to open another bar in Baltimore.

MIAMI (AP) — U.S. Sen. Bob Graham spent Tuesday pouring cement as a bridge construction worker in his 250th "workday," a gimmick that transformed his political career.

The workdays changed more than his political standing, Graham reflected.

"The undiluted, unfiltered contact with the public has been terrifically valuable," Graham said. "It's made me a lot more confident and comfortable in all the situations. And it gives you a sense of having been there."

Graham began early Tuesday working at a new bridge span connecting Tampa and St. Petersburg. His other one-day jobs have ranged from chicken plucker to truck driver to working with emotionally handicapped children.

Graham, a Harvard-educated member of a wealthy land-developing family, has reaped invaluable attention from the odd jobs while developing the campaign style that helped him win two governor's races and the 1986 Senate race.

NORRIS, Tenn. (AP) — Alex Haley, who turned Americans on to digging up their roots, is giving evidence of his to the University of Tennessee.

The Pulitzer Prize-winning author said Monday he is donating his papers to the university in Knoxville, about 20 miles from his farm and conference center here.

"I'm a pack rat. I keep stuff," said Haley, who turns 70 in August.

The collection includes manuscripts of Haley's "Roots," his "Autobiography of Malcolm X," and magazine articles.

Servant girl turns heads since emergence from tomb

By Mimi Mann

GIZA PLATEAU, Egypt (AP) — She works forever at the grindstone, but is garbed for grander stuff: red lipstick, black mascara, necklaces and a braided wig with ribbons in it.

The ancient Cinderella in stone has turned many heads since making her debut in February after more than 4,000 years in a tomb near the Giza pyramids.

Egyptian excavators found the statue of a servant girl in a cemetery for overseers and workmen from the days of the early Pharaohs, and a team of experts restored it.

The limestone carving is a foot long and eight inches high, tinted with dyes of red, yellow and black, a rare survivor in the genre Egyptologists call "maid over millstone."

It depicts a maidservant hard at work over a stone slab, her body bent forward, fingers wrapped around a roller and toes curled beneath her shapely form.

She wears a tight white skirt from waist to knees, but nothing above the waist. For hair, the anonymous ancient sculptor carved a fancy plaited wig decorated with a braided ribbon tied in a bow at the back.

She wears two necklaces and a bracelet. The delicate face, with a broad nose and tight lips, still bears traces of brushed-on color: Her eyes are rimmed with black eye shadow, her lips painted red with lipstick.

Statues depicting servants at their chores were placed in a master's tombs to make sure his soul would be served through eternity. Unlike Pharaohs and royalty, whose likenesses were carved to show regal majesty, common people could be portrayed with charm and endearing touches.

Whether she is rolling dough or grinding grain is the subject of debate, but there's no controversy about her charm and detail.

"She's really lovely, a work of art," said Zahi Hawass, antiquities director of the pyramids area and chief of the cemetery excavation.

The statue, not yet on regular display, is far superior to a famous one of a female servant crushing grain that is a tourist favorite at the Egyptian Museum in Cairo. That maidservant has no jewelry and only a simple wig.

Statues depicting servants at their chores were placed in a master's tombs to make sure his soul would be served through eternity. Unlike Pharaohs and royalty, whose likenesses were carved to show regal majesty, common people could be portrayed with charm and endearing touches.

Servants were depicted carrying the master's sandals, straining beer, making pots, roasting a goose on a brazier. The practice died out in Egypt's later periods, replaced by paintings of working servants on tomb walls.

Hawass said the girl's statue was the latest surprise from a cemetery that had produced many since its discovery last August, She and two other figures were found in a niche in the mud-brick tomb of an overseer, Kehy Neseb, and his wife Heb-ny-Khawyess.

Salt has badly eroded the overseer's statue, but that of his wife is in good condition. The figure depicts the lady of the house, obviously a woman of means, sitting on a chair.

As to the question of what the servant girl is doing at the stone, Hawass believes she is rolling dough to feed her master and mistress in the afterlife.

Amal Samuel, chief inspector for the pyramids area, disagrees.

"I think she's crushing grain, because there's part of small sack at the back of the grindstone," said Mrs. Samuel, who was at the excavation site when the statue was found.
