All federated club presidents of the city are asked to meet with Mr. Deaver and members of Memphis civic organizations in the West Texas Utilities Company office tonight at 7:00 o'clock.

NEW YEAR IS QUIET IN CITY

Business as Usual is Order of the Day
as New Year Starts

New Year's Day in Memphis was a quiet one, with no special observance planned or carried out.

The New Year was ushered in night before last with a few whistles and fireworks here and there, but yesterday was apparently just Wednesday to most folks.

All the business houses in the city were open for business, with the personnel, in most cases, busily engaged in taking invoice of stocks. As a result, most of the salespeople were rather "touchy" and irritable, and questions usually received a rather short answer.

Those who had the afternoon off, for the most part, either visited friends, took a drive, or sat

NATION HEARS OF MEMPHIS

Rose Bowl Broadcast Included Name of the City Yesterday

Yesterday afternoon, when "Tug" Sanders of this city, left tackle for the Mustangs, was substituted for Spain, this city received mention over the radio on a nation-wide broadcast.

When Coach Matty Bell replaced Spain with Sanders, the announcer stated that the man going in was "Sanders of Memphis, Tennessee," but modified his statement with the correction that Sanders was "from Memphis, down in Texas."

Thus did our city's name reach the ears of millions of people in the nation who were listening to the football classic. To the average person listening in it meant nothing, but we'll wager that many an ex-Memphian listening in

Gomez Dead, Venezuela Riots

How death, stilling the iron hand of a dictator, can unleash long pent-up mob resentment is shown in this remarkable picture of a riot in Caracas, Venezuela, following the death of Dictator Juan Vicente Gomez. Vandals are busy venting their fury by destroying the equipment of a newspaper that had supported the Gomez regime. More than 40 were killed in this and other Venezuela riots.

TRADE CENSUS BEGINS SOON IN THE COUNTY

Three Enumerators to Take 1935 Business
Census in County

In connection with the business census announced yesterday, we have learned that three enumerators will begin within the next few days in this county, securing data for the census.

The state is divided into 21 districts, employing 984 enumerators. Hall County is included in the Amarillo district, which comprises Potter, Gray, Childress, Collingsworth, Hall, Hutchinson, Wheeler, Carson, Dallam, Armstrong, Briscoe, Castro, Deaf Smith, Donley, Hansford, Hartley, Hemphill, Lipscomb, Motley, Moore, Ochiltree, Oldham, Parmer, Randall, Roberts, Sherman and Styisher counties.

The census will cover a greater scope this year than ever before, due to requests from business interests on lines not formerly covered by the census. For the first time, the census will include banking and finance for the entire range of commercial, agricultural and mortgage and

ANNUAL MEET MEMPHIS P. C. A. ON WEDNESDAY

Will Make Report on 1935 Operations of the Local Office

The Memphis Production Credit Association is endeavoring to approach 100 per cent attendance at its annual meeting which will be held in the courthouse at Memphis Wednesday, according to J. Henderson Smith, secretary-treasurer.

Quite a little rivalry has developed among the 38 associations over the state, each trying to beat the others in the percentage of members in attendance at the meetings. Every member has been asked to bring at least one guest.

In addition to the election of directors for the coming year, an interesting program will be given, including an address by an officer of the Production Credit Corporation of Houston. The manager and directors of the association will report to the members on the 1935 operations of the association telling them how many farmers and stockmen have been served, how much income the association has received, the amount of ex-

COMPRESS SITUATION SERIOUS

THE situation in regard to where the railroads must or may drop cotton for compressing is becoming a serious one.

Day before yesterday the Anderson-Clayton company secured a temporary injunction against the Wichita Valley and Fort Worth & Denver railroads, restraining them from applying intra-state rates on cotton from this section of the state. Hearing on a permanent injunction will be held at a later date.

The crux of the situation is that, according to the rules of the Interstate Commerce Commission, interstate cotton, or that which originates in a different state from its destination, may be compressed anywhere the compress chooses within 100 miles of the point of origin; while intrastate cotton, or that originating in the same state as its destination, must be compressed at the nearest compress to the point of origin.

The granting of this temporary injunction means that cotton from this section of the state north of us will be hauled by the railroad right by the compress in this city and on to the press at Childress, in which Anderson-Clayton is interested, we understand.

The contention of the counsel for Anderson-Clayton was that this cotton should be rated as interstate, inasmuch as it was consigned to foreign and coastwise trade. Despite the fact that we are not a lawyer, the contention seems rather thin to us. Since when did the authority of the I. C. C. extend past the territorial boundaries of the United States.

This Northwest Texas cotton originates in the state and the ultimate destination of the staple, before it leaves the boundaries of the nation, is also in the state. So how, in the name of reason, can you figure this as interstate cotton.

If the ruling is made permanent it will mean that many presses will be forced to close, including the one in this city. But we feel that the courts will not work this kind of an injustice on the compress owners, despite the far-fetched contention of the counsel for the big cotton people.

that stormy night. Her heart had not come alive since; a month had passed and Scott had neither called her or tried to see her.

Lawyers might term what she had done "desertion," but Dana never doubted that Scott knew she had left him because he had stayed at Paula's all night. Any woman who had any self-respect would have done the same thing. And if Scott had had any explanation to offer he would have pleaded with her to come back to him. He hadn't—which was proof that he didn't want her.

Aunt Ellen entered her niece's room. She said, "My dear, you aren't happy. Isn't there something that can be done about it?" "No, Aunt Ellen" There was a sob in Dana's voice.

"Let me write to Scott," her aunt pleaded.

"No, no!" Dana's voice rose vehemently. Then she was sobbing in Aunt Ellen's arms. When she was quieter, she poured her troubles into the sympathetic ear. She told things she had vowed she would never tell anyone, but telling them to one who was so dear and understanding and dependable was like whispering them to herself. Dana knew without bonding her to secrecy that Aunt Ellen would never break the confidence. And was comforting to hear her gentle, sympathizing voice saying things Dana wanted so terribly to believe but couldn't.

"It wasn't anything I did," Dana insisted. "I loved Scott so much, and he knew that. I didn't mind doing without all the silly things a lot of girls want. I didn't mind cooking and doing dishes. It was fun. Because, no matter what went wrong, Scott never complained. He didn't expect things of me. He helped a lot—not puttering around but really helping. And he worked so hard at the office—" Dana's voice broke.

"Then why," Aunt Ellen asked bewildered, "why did you leave him?"

"It was something outside all that. Something I suppose he couldn't help." Dana's miserable eyes met her aunt's.

"You mean—a woman?" Aunt Ellen could scarcely sav the word. It had a fearfully indelicate sound.

"Yes," Dana answered.

"You are sure?" Her aunt's voice was shaken.

"Yes. You see I was a sneak and checked up on him."

"But are you sure?" It was almost impossible for Aunt Ellen to accept this dreadful explanation, remembering the happy faces of her niece and Scott the day they married. Only a year ago—and here was Dana telling her about some other woman.

"And then she went away," Dana whispered. "About three days after—after I found out about it she left town. It is all very mysterious. She didn't tell anyone where she was going. Just disappeared, and her apartment was closed. But of course I knew why she left. Maybe she thought I'd take the role of an avenging wife. Or maybe she just wanted to get out of town until it all blew over."

Aunt Ellen had decided, "It was that Long girl then." She was the one her siser had said Scott should have married in the first place. If he had, this child would not be sitting here looking like a little ghost.

It might have been better for Dana to have pretended she knew what was going on. In the old days women pretended they didn't know about their husband's philanderings. They just acted as though they didn't know and kept on living with their husbands.

But young girls today, with so much fire and spirit, demanded fair play. When they didn't get it they struck back. Dana had rebounded, wounding her sorely.

"My dear," Aunt Ellen protested, "you can't go on this way. You've been here a month now, and you haven't been out of the house. Don't you think you could take a walk?" Or go to a movie?"

"I couldn't go to a movie," Dana said. "I couldn't stand it." Then as she saw the troubled look on her aunt's face deepen, she said gallantly, "But I will go for a walk. I hate to face people, though I know it's silly. But it's horrible to feel people are speculating about you, looking at you and wondering and saying 'There's Dana Stanley. Well, she and Scott have hit the rocks already.'"

Aunt Ellen nodded. "They probably will say those things. But you must be brave and face the music. You can't become a recluse because you and Scott couldn't live together. After a while people will forget. It's a good thing most of us have such short memories."

Dana said, "It's a nice day. Fresh and sunshiny, though a little windy. I'll enjoy getting out." She said it for her aunt's benefit and saw Aunt Ellen's face brighten.

Dana was scarcely out of sight when the doorbell rang. A moment later Sarah plodded up the stairs, her eyes bulging.

"It's Mister Ronnie," she said. "He's askin' for Miss Dana."

Aunt Ellen fluttered down. With her sister and Nancy both away, she didn't know what she would say to the young man. It didn't seem decent, exactly, for him to be inquiring for Dana when the child was still married. Still she'd have to give him some sort of answer. Young people did the most amazing things. Aunt Ellen knew she must be careful, because her sister would be furious if this particular young man was offended.

"Dana's out walking," Aunt Ellen said vaguely. She added (and the devil himself must have been prompting her), "She went south. She can't be so very far away because she only left a few minutes ago."

Ronnie thanked her and left.

Dana's feet were taking her along a familiar way. It was the same walk she had been caught in the deluge and Scott had come running after her. Every step was filled with memories. This was the street where Scott had lived then. His house stood at the end of the block.

She had almost reached the car standing in front of Scott's house before she recognized it. It was Scott's car. Dana put out a hand and touched it. Suddenly she was shaken by sobs, blinded by tears.

She opened the door and climbed in. Sinking back against the seat, she gave up to desolation. She would sit here and wait. When Scott came out she would tell him what was in her heart. She would tell him she couldn't go on without him, ask what had become of the love he had once had for her.

Suddenly fear gripped her. What if Paula had not gone away as people said? What if she had taken over Scott's house? Perhaps the tenants had given it up and Paula had come here, knowing that someday she would be its mistress.

The story that Paula had left town had been so vague. But if (Continued on Page 5)

Matlock-Foust Nuptials

The marriage of Mrs. Ara Matlock of this city to E. S. Foust of Amarillo, was solemnized last evening at 7 o'clock at the Methodist parsonage with Rev. Orion W. Carter, pastor of the First Methodist church, officiating. The beautiful ring ceremony was read in the presence of Rev. Carter's family and the only attendants, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Bass.

For her wedding the bride was becomingly gowned in a sheer navy crepe, made on slender lines, with matching accessories.

Mrs. Matlock is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Alexander of Hamlin, Okla. She has made her home in Memphis for the past ten years and has been proprietor of the Pounds Cafe for more than three years.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE

NEA Service Staff Writer

ONE of the supposedly complicated processes of housekeeping is making cream of tomato soup. I say supposedly complicated because it seems to me the premise is all wrong. Cream of tomato is no harder to make than a piece of toast if you know how. I'm against adding soda. In fact, it's almost impossible to add soda in small enough amount to small quantities of soup not to ruin the flavor entirely.

The following rule is carefully worked out and produces a deliciously smooth cream soup. The method is quite as important as the proportions.

Cream of Tomato Soup

Two cups canned tomatoes, 1 small onion, 2 teaspoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, celery tops, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 cups milk, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 8 peppercorns.

Melt one tablespoon butter and add onion, peeled and sliced. Cook over a low fire for five minutes. Add tomatoes, sugar, salt, celery tops and peppercorns. Cover pan and simmer fifteen minutes. Rub through a sieve. In another pan melt remaining butter and stir in flour. Cook and stir until bubbly. Slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and bring to the boiling point. Boil one minute, stirring constantly. Take the sauce from the fire and add the sifted tomato pulp which has been kept hot while the thin white sauce was being made. Be sure to add the tomato puree to the sauce, NOT the sauce to the puree. Add parsley and serve at once. This soup will separate or curdle if allowed to stand or if

Four tablespoons butter, brown sugar, 3 or 4 cup seedless raisins, 3-4 ed cheese, 1-4 cup short cup granulated sugar, cup milk, 2 cups cakey teaspoons baking powder, spoon salt, 1 teaspoon 1-2 teaspoon vanilla.

Wash raisins and boiling water. Let stand minutes and drain. Melt frying pan and spread with brown sugar. pared and thinly sliced kles with raisins, spices cheese and cover made as follows:

Soften shortening until light, beating in softened shortening, sift flour, salt, cinnamon powder and add vanilla to first mixture and pour over prepared. Bake forty minutes in oven (350 degrees F.)

A moment later Scott came out of the house. He glanced down the street, and his heart leaped wildly. That was Dana, not more than a block away. She was walking slowly.

Scott hesitated a moment. Then he started walking rapidly toward the distant figure.

Landslide Rips Paving Into Slabs

Public evidence of the tremendous force of the landslide which tumbled down from Lone Mountain, San Francisco, is offered by this wreckage of concrete roadway, twisted apart and flung in huge blocks 60 feet from its original position. Sidewalks and pavements buckled, telephone poles snapped, and the San Francisco College Women veriled, the enormous slide starting only 60 feet from its buildings.

It wasn't until John began to find fault with every meal I served that I realized he was getting sick and tired of the "same old dishes."

Almost in desperation I began searching the food ads in the newspaper, hoping to find something different, something better, something more to the liking of an active man. . . .

And I did. The ads in the Daily Democrat showed me exactly where to go for the largest varieties, the freshest stocks and the most tempting menu possibilities. . . .

Since then our mealtimes have been things of joy. John's boyish enthusiasm for everything I serve is always too wonderful to believe.

Tiresome Exercise? Not for Lions

To a human being, tussling with an auto tire is anything but fun. But to these 2-year-old jungle monarchs, frolicking on an El Monte, Calif., lion farm, a few discarded auto tires provide royal sport and vital exercise. The 300-pound beasts leap 15 feet with ease. Maybe the solution of what to do with those old tires cluttering the garage is to buy a few pet lions.

MORE HOGS IN 1936

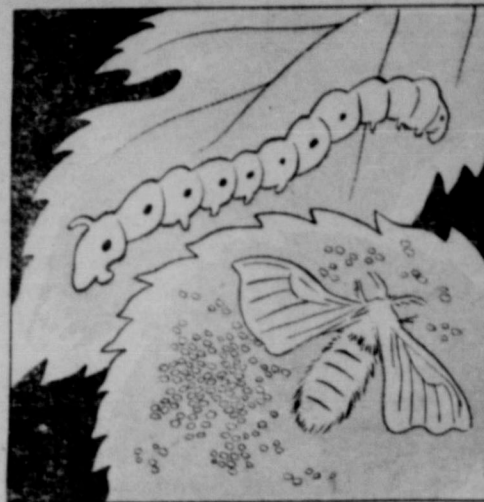

COLLEGE STATION — The 1936-1937 Corn-hog adjustment program will stimulate the growing of hogs in areas in Texas where drought and other obstacles have reduced hog numbers will apply "brakes" to the expansion of hog production where without any program, production would be unreasonably increased, believes E. M. Regenbrecht, chairman of the State Corn-Hog Review Board.

The new contract provided that in order to get the maximum adjustment payment, the producer must grow for the market at least 50 percent of the number of hogs in his base. For every hog below this 50 percent, $2.50 will be deducted from his payment. This provision will encourage contract signers to raise enough hogs so that they may receive the maximum payment.

penses for the year, and the net earnings available for reserves.

The address and the reports of the men in charge of the association's affairs provide a good opportunity for members and other farmers and stockmen to learn more about the purposes of the association and the services which it is prepared to render to agriculture, Mr. Smith stated. They will learn just how the association makes loans and the approximate cost of these loans to borrowers.

They will learn that Texas farmers and stockmen already own about $500,000 worth of stock in the 38 production credit associations in the state and that those borrower-members have obtained about $12,000,000 in loans during 1935 at a very low interest rate, which has resulted in thousands of dollars of saving to the members.

During 1935 the amount of business done has been about twice as much as was done in 1934. Texas farmers and ranchmen are showing a rapidly increasing interest in these new credit institutions, Mr. Smith said. The associations are strictly farmer's and stockmen's organizations in which each member has a voice in the management.

Clarence Strochle is leaving this afternoon for his home in Blackhawk, Colo., after a visit in Memphis. He was guest in the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Fitzjarrald.
