Many Changes Called For Here

A study covering the needs of the Colorado Independent School District for the next 10 years was presented to the school board Monday night.

The study, conducted by a team of educators from North Texas State University in cooperation with the local schools and the Region 14 Education Service Center covered the entire school operation from facilities to programs to staff requirements.

The study was authorized by the school board in December in order to obtain a master plan for the school system and to determine its direction for the future.

The team conducting the study headed by Dr. Vaughn Huffstutler, considered by many to be the top educator in Texas, had a great deal of praise for the Colorado School System and its administration.

The report called for a wide variety of changes to be achieved during the next 10 years, changes which Dr. Huffstutler said would make the Colorado Independent School District second to none in the state.

The team made a number of visits to Colorado City, talking with civic leaders, city and county officials as well as school personnel and were given a report on every aspect of operation in the schools.

The report was praised by the school board members as being a very in-depth look at the needs for the school. The board took the report under advisement and said it will make further consideration of the report at its next regular meeting May 14.

No action was taken Monday night on any of the recommendations made in the report.

The study took a look and made a projection of anticipated number of students for the next 10 years. Because of indications that Colorado City is steadily being developed industrially, the report noted that in all likelihood the number of students in the school will continue at its general level of between 1,800 and 1,700 students.

The report indicated that in all likelihood there could only be one school district in Mitchell County in 10 years instead of three. If this is the case, there will be about 2,000 students attending the schools in that district.

The bulk of the report dealt with the school's facilities and it was in that category where most of the changes were called for. Here are the recommendations made by the study team.

--Kelley Elementary is adequate as far as size, accessibility, safety and parking. However, a number of things are needed at Kelley including central air conditioning, landscaping, physical education facility, more drinking fountains, provisions for handicapped students, health service area and exterior painting. The school should serve for many years as the primary education center accommodating students enrolled in kindergarten, grades one and two.

--Hutchinson Elementary, is adequate while having a small site and campus area but with renovation, demolishing the oldest wing which houses the cafeteria and building a new cafeteria would serve as a good intermediate school for third through fifth grades.

Needs at Hutchinson other than tearing down the old wing and building a new cafeteria include improved lighting, better classroom furniture, central air conditioning, covered walkways, street paving around campus, conference areas and landscaping and grounds care.

--Wallace Elementary School, not well located as it is two miles from the majority of residences of the students that attend it. Facilities are inadequate and it is not economically feasible to keep a building for only one grade, and it should be closed. It was said savings could be accomplished by eliminating the job of principal for this one grade school building.

--Colorado Junior High School, is not well suited to today's educational program requirements.

The campus site area for this school plant is not adequate. The site is much too small, with no space for expansion. Other inadequacies of the building include lack of laboratory facilities, too small rooms, no conference areas, lack of acoustics and air conditioning, lack of shop and vocational lab area.

It was recommended that the junior high building be made into an administrative service center and possibly be used to educate 4-year-olds whenever this is required which probably will be in the near future. The auditorium of the building could well serve as a storage and warehouse facility for the school system.

--Colorado High School, the site is not adequate for a comprehensive high school unit to serve 500-600 students. It would be an excellent middle school operation to serve sixth seventh and eighth graders. A high school building with its shops and laboratories can be easily converted into a middle school to serve the changing educational needs of a school system.

Changes that need to be made at the high school include air conditioning, audio-visual equipment, conference areas and better music and band areas.

--Gymnasium - Athletics building, is an excellent facility. It should continue to serve as the game gymnasium for the school system as it is centrally located and adequate in every respect for this function.

--The Wolf Stadium, is an excellent plant but it should be improved some and beautified.

By 1983, there should be approximately 1,625 students enrolled in the Colorado school system.

The renovations of the existing facilities in accordance with recommendations listed above should handle kindergarten through eighth grades.

A comprehensive high school should be constructed to accommodate some 500-600 students in grades 9-12 on a 50-acre site, encompassing the present 8 acre site owned by the district near Interstate 20 on the east side of Colorado City.

The high school plant should include the following features:

--Complex built on the cluster concept. This design should provide for physical separateness and unity of each of the clusters -- science/math, English/foreign language, social studies, career skills/occupational, learning resource center, guidance/counseling, and administrative.

--All space should be designed to permit adaptability in educational programming and techniques to accommodate change and variety of instruction it will need to house and serve during its lifetime.

--The high school should contain a learning resource center which should occupy a central position in the complex, to be used by both school and community.

--A cultural arts center should contain specially designed areas for each of these programs including a little theatre for the performing arts.

--The career skills cluster of the high school should be designed to provide for shorthand and typing, business education, See SCHOOL Page 8

City Improvements

A number of city improvements are underway or have been completed. The city in cooperation with the county and schools, plans to pave Cherry Street and 13th Street in the area of Wolf Stadium next week. In the bottom picture is the school tennis courts that were lighted by the city in a cooperative venture. Since the courts were lighted, they have been well used at nights. Also in recent weeks, Oak Street from 10th to 17th was given a new layer of paving to repair damage caused by the January ice storm.

Colorado City Survey

Texas Tech Team Reports Findings

Since March, a team of students from Texas Tech University have been busy with a survey of Colorado City.

Monday night at the City Council they presented their findings a good look at Colorado City, its past, present, and its future possibilities.

C.C. Burt, Mayor of Colorado City opened the meeting Monday night with an introduction to the young men and stated that they had sought the cooperation of the Council to use Colorado City as a model in conducting an audit of resources.

The survey may serve Colorado City in the future, as surveys are required under federal programs in the realm of revenue sharing for small cities.

It is hoped that it may generate interest in the progress of Colorado City in the future.

The team gave a full account of their in-depth study by reading the information in content illustrating with slides which they photographed and compiled as a part of the survey.

The Resource Audit of Colorado City was submitted to Dr. John A. Ryan, Professor of Marketing at the College of Business Administration as part of the requirements of the marketing course, taken by the students.

It was prepared by Gill Bailey, Keaton Grubbs, Ron Head, Jerry McWhorter, Ralph Tilney and Ron Witten.

Members of the team who presented the information were Ralph Tilney, Ron Head, and Jerry McWhorter, also two Colorado City natives, Ron Witten and J. Keaton Grubbs.

Assuming the role of a task force charged by the Texas Tech University College of Business Administration with auditing the resources present in Colorado City, the class also established as part two of their project, a program to develop these resources.

The class also assumed the role of representatives of the College of Business Administration to the Institute of Rural Development of Texas Tech University, in performing the audit.

According to the team, audit represents the implementation of a decision which indicated that methodology used here is the best available for such an audit.

An interesting feature of the program was the showing of a short film with background music by Jay Boy Adams, a folksinger and native of Colorado City.

Although the report dealt with every aspect of the town's structure, one of the most important phases of the survey was the results of a questionnaire to perceive how Colorado City's residents felt about the "quality of life" within the community.

Asked to rate such factors as crime rate, schools, and opportunity as either above average, average, or below average and to state one thing which would most improve Colorado City.

Forty percent of the respondents considered Colorado City a better than average place to raise a family; only 4 percent considered the town below average in this respect.

The respondents were divided in their opinion of the crime rate with about one third responding in each category.

Schools were rated as generally good with two thirds replying above average, although newer residents held a somewhat lower view than older residents.

The most positive response was found in analyzing the rating of the "friendly atmosphere", where almost three quarters stated Colorado City was above average. Again newcomers were less inclined to respond in this manner.

Over 95% rated the climate as average or above. Opinions about recreational facilities were varied and inconclusive.

Both entertainment and shopping facilities were ranked below average by a majority of citizens, although newcomers were somewhat less critical of the town's entertainment than oldtimers.

Interviewees indicated that they felt Colorado City was neither a modern nor a growing community, and almost three fourths of the sample indicated that opportunity in Colorado City was below average.

Over half the sample felt that, all in all, Colorado City is a better than average place to live.

Quoting directly from the report, "The ups and downs of the economy of Colorado City during the past 90 years have left some physical scars on the city. They are particularly evident in the downtown area where many of the original business buildings have fallen into a state of disrepair and vacancy. To the casual observer they may symbolize economic tombstones of the city's past."

"However, the pioneering spirit still exists with the citizenry of Colorado City, and they have pledged to beautify, rebuild, perform facelifting and even submit to surgery, if necessary, to keep their town from dying."

"Historically speaking, Colorado City has experienced some major economic reversals and has proven itself a hard town to kill."

The team's report of the second paper in the survey dealing with Colorado City development is entitled "Model For Resource Development".

The first paper represented an audit of resources of Colorado City and the objective of second paper is to develop a model which, when implemented will enhance the quality of life in Colorado City.

The model presented to the City Council Monday night was timed to fit into the framework for implementation as the model can best be depicted by use of a chronological path.

According to the team, after the model has been implemented a bench mark will exist against which future progress may be compared.

The combination of agencies working with Texas Tech are described in the model as catalytic vehicles which are reality; the Industrial Team, City Council, Chamber of Commerce Texas Electric, WCT Council of Governments, Industrial Consultant and Small Business Administration.

In evaluating the agencies, the team evaluated the best single catalytic vehicle as the Industrial Team with Texas Electric, the City Council, and the Chamber of Commerce tying for second place, followed in order by the group of Texas Tech personnel, the Industrial consulting firm, the Small Business Administration, and the West Texas Council of Governments.

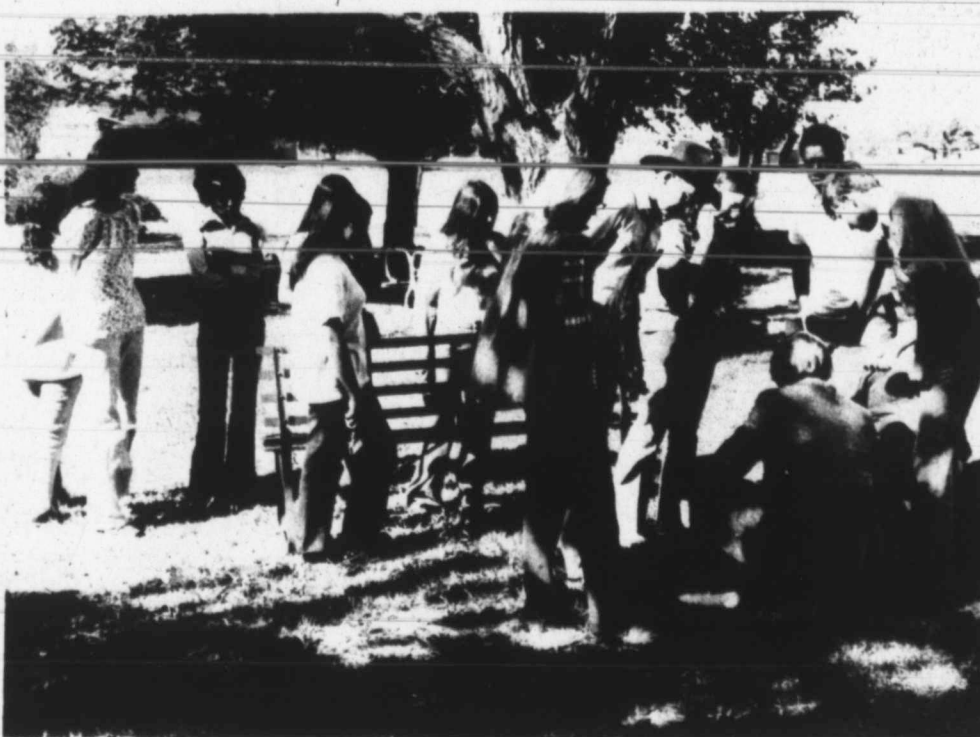

The Industrial Team of Colorado City would perform a major role acting as a central coordinator for the inputs of all eight agencies involved in the combination, according to the report.

Texas Tech could and should play a much larger role in this scheme and the team proposed in their report that the role could be fulfilled most effectively through an Institute of Rural Development, hereafter referred to as IRD.

IRD would serve three major functions; that of researching, analyzing, evaluating, and recommending sources of action for communities such as Colorado City.

The second function would be serving as a centralized source of needed data for businesses and industries who are searching for a place to locate.

The third major function of the IRD would be a blending of the first two functions.

Ready For May-Fest

Colorado High School students turned out Tuesday to help prepare Ruddick Park for the upcoming Second Annual May-Fest May 12, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce. The students did general clean-up in the park and put a new coat of paint on many of the park's facilities. Another student workday is scheduled Saturday.

Pickens Speaks To Women's Club On "Civic Participation"

The president, Mrs. Dona Reed called the meeting to order. Mrs. Pace led the club collect and pledge to the U.S. flag.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as read.

Members present heard Seton Pickens speak on "Responsibility Through Civic Participation". "It is extremely important that we have a city government that is alert to every situation," Pickens said.

"We must capitalize on our many assets and opportunities. The city has made progress in many areas in the past, but there is much to be done to make our city a better place to live," he continued.

"We can make our city outshine many others around, but we will all have to help. Every person in the city has an opportunity to do just that, he said.

One of our main responsibilities is to vote; if you have voted you can afford to participate in civic affairs. Why not have fellowship with the different organizations so that you will be aware of what is going on in our community.

"We should be aware of opportunities to share our own ideas with civic groups, friends and neighbors. It is important for each of us to do all we can in the civic organizations of our country," Pickens concluded.

At the close of the program, Mrs. Reed honored each person gram or yearbook committee with a gift as an award for their services and also a tribute in the form of a poem.

YEARBOOK GIRLS

With doubt and dismay you are smitten
You think there is no chance for you, to ever make a yearbook.
Then the thoughts -
Why the best books haven't been written
The best race hasn't been run

The best score hasn't been made yet
The best song hasn't been sung
The best tune hasn't been played yet -
No chance? Why, the club is eager
For things that you can create
Your, stores of true wealth is not so meager
You didn't worry or fret, or grow faint hearted
The chance had begun
You finished the work you had started
And the year book was done.

County Judge Bill Carter announced this past week that the county has been fortunate enough to receive a grant to institute a new program to deal with juveniles.

Under the program, which will cover three years and bring in some $24,380 in state and federal money, a juvenile officer, Jerry Evermon, has been hired.

In this job, Evermon will work with juveniles on probation, and he will work with the Mitchell County Boys Club to offer programs to help keep youngsters out of trouble.

We appreciate the efforts of Carter and the county commissioners to get this grant and wish Evermon the best of luck in this project.

Get an air conditioning checkup before the heat's on.

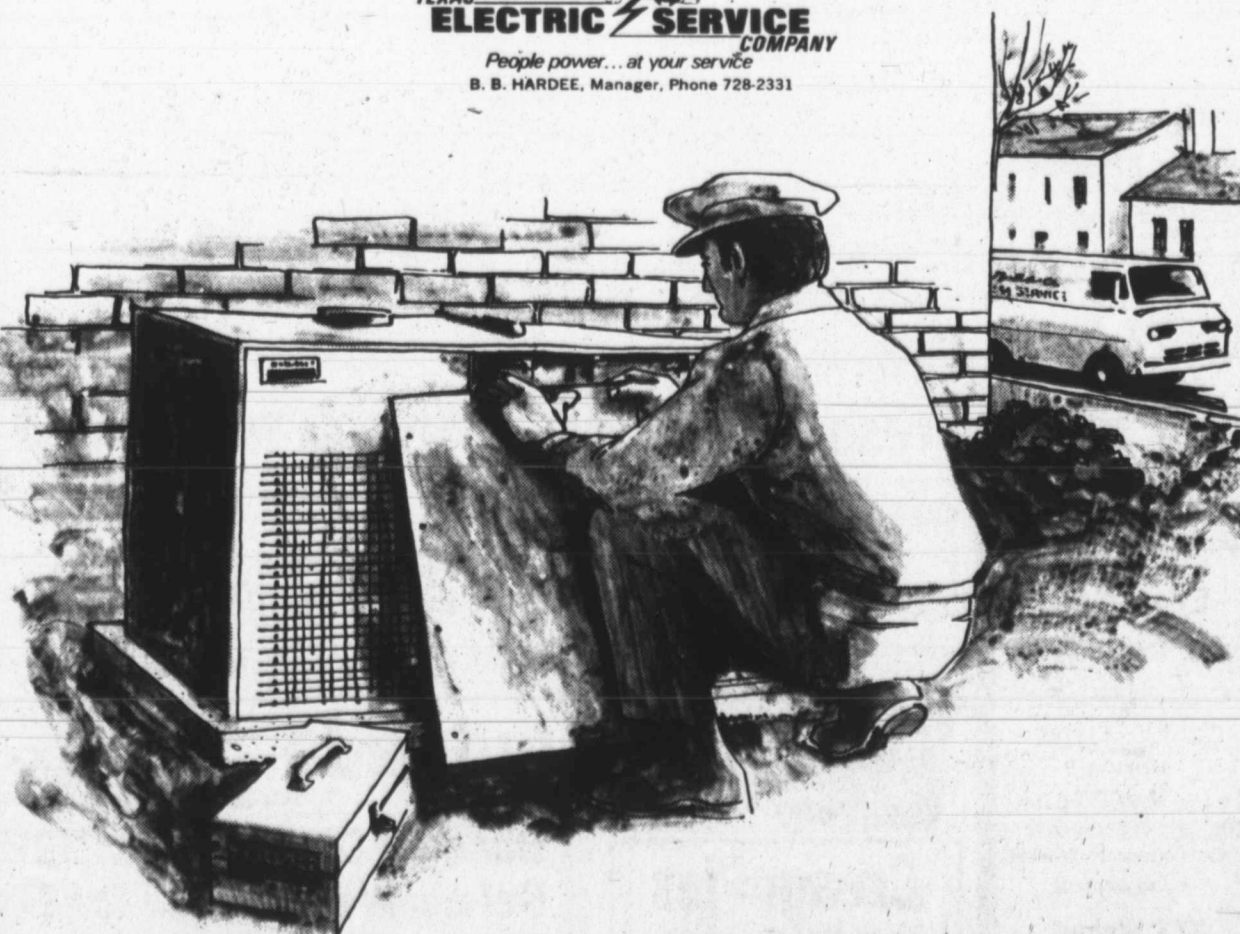

Now's the time to call your air conditioning serviceman. Because right now he can work your call into his schedule. And get your unit ready to deliver dependable, efficient cooling through the summer ahead.

We know that many people wait until the heat's on to have their units serviced. Later on, your dealer or serviceman may have a waiting list.

Although Texas Electric does not service, sell or install air conditioning equipment, we do want you to get full value from your electric service. One way we can help is to remind you to get the jump on summer by calling your serviceman early.

County Judge Bill Carter announced this past week that the county has been fortunate enough to receive a grant to institute a new program to deal with juveniles.

Under the program, which will cover three years and bring in some $24,380 in state and federal money, a juvenile officer, Jerry Evermon, has been hired.

In this job, Evermon will work with juveniles on probation, and he will work with the Mitchell County Boys Club to offer programs to help keep youngsters out of trouble.

We appreciate the efforts of Carter and the county commissioners to get this grant and wish Evermon the best of luck in this project.

Tourney Ends Sunday

Only five more days remain for fishermen to cast their lines in search of $300 cash plus two trophies in the second annual Colorado City fishing tournament.

The tournament got underway last Saturday and ends at 3 p.m. Sunday with winners to be announced at 5 p.m. Sunday at Lake Colorado City State Park.

Entry fee for fishermen is $2 per person in the adult division for the entire tourney. The fee in the junior division is $1.

Some 200 to 300 fishermen are now participating in the tournament and it is hoped that at least a total of 500 will register before the tourney ends.

The four categories in the tournament are:

--Bass, $100 for the largest bass, $50 for the second largest and $25 for the third largest.

--Catfish, $75 for the largest catfish and $50 for the second largest catfish.

--Junior division, 12 and under, a trophy will go to the one with the largest game fish.

--Junior division, 12 and under.

der, a trophy will go to the one with the largest string of game fish.

teacher planning and work center, design and production laboratory, crafts and ceramics area, home management labs, an assembly area, student seminar areas, resource-library area.

--A school community physical education, and recreational center should be developed consisting of: a gymnasium-physical education facility for boys and girls and community use. This facility should seat people and should provide dressing room facilities, special activity areas, physical treatment areas, lecture areas, staff planning and work areas, public restrooms and swimming pool; an outside area should include baseball area, tennis courts, swimming pool, golf area for practice, handball area and ample parking.

--A cafeteria, student activity community center including a snack bar section.

--A vocational technical-occupational center for shop areas.

All the new buildings and facilities should be air conditioned except gymnasium, shops, storage and stadium.

The estimated cost of the new high school would be $1 million, the study group estimated. The needed renovations of other buildings to achieve recommendations of the group would cost about $700,000.

The financial condition of the school district is excellent the group concluded. The total estimated value of school property and facilities is now $2,896,593.

The assessed property values now stands at $53,898,340 and is expected to remain at about $54 million for the next 10 years.

A $1.7 million bond issue, which would be necessary to make recommended changes, would result in a 23¢ tax increase.
