Senate panel votes to cut defense spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lopsided Senate Budget Committee vote recommending a cut in President Reagan's defense spending proposal could pave the way for quick Senate budget accord, including a freeze on Social Security benefits, committee members suggest.

On Tuesday, the panel voted 18-4 to slash $79 billion over the next three years from the Pentagon buildup proposed in the president's $974 billion budget for fiscal year 1986 — including a one-year freeze in "real" spending discounting the effects of inflation.

The vote was only tentative, since the panel will get another shot at defense spending when it takes a final vote on the overall budget package. But committee leaders said they expected it to hold.

The proposal, a flat repudiation of administration policy, was supported by 10 Democrats on the panel and eight Republicans, including chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M.

"The defense number is pretty key to getting a consensus on the rest of the budget," said Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

Grassley and other members said it would be difficult to enact the kind of domestic program cuts recommended by the president without demanding spending restraint of similar magnitude in the Defense Department.

"This starts a pattern of across-the-board freezes," said Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., author of the plan adopted by the panel. "After setting the discipline on defense, we'll be following through on other programs. I think we will be freezing Social Security and other entitlements."

Reagan's budget, which calls for $40 billion in domestic cuts and $30 billion in defense increases in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, would leave intact cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients scheduled to take effect next January.

But there is widespread support in the Senate — as evidenced by Tuesday's vote — for freezing all programs, including Social Security.

Hollings, who was chairman of the committee before Democrats lost control of the Senate to Republicans in 1980, told reporters he doubted the action would send the wrong signal to the Soviets for the opening of nuclear arms talks in Geneva next week.

"Defense items are not successful as bargaining chips. The Soviets are very sophisticated and they know our capabilities."

The committee action would cut $10.9 billion from Reagan's defense budget request for fiscal 1986, $25.3 billion for 1987 and $43.1 billion for 1988.

It would allow defense spending to rise only with inflation in 1986 — compared to Reagan's proposal, which calls for a 6 percent increase above the rate of inflation. In 1987 and 1988, defense spending could rise at only 3 percent above inflation under the committee action.

The margin of the vote reflected the lack of support within the Republican-run chamber for Reagan's defense spending levels. In fact, his defense budget was not even offered to the committee.

Instead, the committee chose from among five separate proposals that were all variations on the same theme of Pentagon spending restraint.

Domenici, who the day before had proposed a plan that would have limited defense spending increases to 3 percent a year — half what the administration wanted — on Tuesday backed away and supported the Hollings measure.

Fraser claims he was bank's 'scapegoat'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Charles D. Fraser, former president of the failed First National Bank of Midland, testified in federal court today that he thought he was being used "as a scapegoat" for some of the bank's problems.

"I feel responsible, yes," Fraser said in the trial which pits the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. against Eagle Properties Ltd.

The seven-member partnership, Eagle Properties, purchased the 24-story FNB building on Dec. 31, 1982, for $75 million. However, Eagle Properties spokesmen contended in testimony last week they were mislead on the building's worth. Evidence suggests the building was appraised at about $50 million and not the $75 million which the partnership paid for the building.

The FDIC is suing Eagle for $25 million, which represents FNB loans that the partnership took out for partial payment of the building. The FDIC became FNB's receiver and liquidator after the bank failure on Oct. 14, 1983.

The balance, $50 million, was secured through loans from Texas Commerce Bank and InterFirst Bank. Those loans today are owned by RepublicBank First National of Midland, which bought FNB's assets for $51.1 million after the bank failed.

Fraser indicated he was "run-off" from the bank's presidency in April 1983 because, "I could not serve and I could not function...because of the action taken by some of the (bank) directors, if not all," he said.

Fraser indicated that he was getting pressure from board members, John Hendrix, Clarence Scharbauer Jr., Frank Cowden Jr. and Richard Brooks.

Fraser, 50, was bank president from Jan. 1, 1980 to April 4, 1983 and had been chief executive officer and chairman of the board since Jan. 1, 1981. He joined the bank in 1966 as a petroleum engineer. He was promoted to managing the bank's oil department and became a vice president about 1970.

Fraser said the bank's board wanted to sell the building for a "composite of reasons." The capital from the sale would reflect the bank profit for 1982, and would help reduce the $200 million which the bank owed the Federal Reserve Bank.

Churches operate food pantry for farm families

■ House OKs farm credit bill; loss-sharing threatens farm credit — Pages 2C, 4C

VERDIGRE, Neb. (AP) — Four days a week, farmers who can't afford to feed their families pull up to St. Wenceslaus Roman Catholic Church in their pickup trucks and haul sacks of groceries out of a basement pantry.

"We had people with empty cupboards, just absolutely empty cupboards," said the Rev. Ronald Battiato, the St. Wenceslaus pastor who organized the pantry in mid-November. "They were eating over at grandma's or down the road at Jim's place because they had no funds to buy food."

The pantry, run by volunteers from St. Wenceslaus and four Protestant churches, serves as many as 30 families a day in this northeast Nebraska community of 600.

The churches also have distributed clothing and medicine, handed out cash to Main Street businesses and given livestock feed to farmers who can't pay for it.

"The goal of the pantry is not just to keep the farmer fed, but it's the survival of their way of life and the survival of Verdigre," said Battiato.

Verdigre — called the "Kolach Capital of the World" after the pastry that the Czech settlers brought with them more than 100 years ago — depends heavily on agriculture.

Those who farm the sections of Knox County surrounding Verdigre face the same problems other Midwestern farmers face — plummeting land values, dropping crop prices and escalating expenses.

But the problems here were compounded last September when the Bank of Verdigre & Trust Co. failed. State Banking Director Roger Beverage said the major causes were "absentee management" and the depressed farm economy.

The bank reopened as a branch of another bank, which assumed some loans but turned 200 others over to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Study: Fewer Americans divorcing

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in 20 years, fewer Americans are getting divorced, with the number of dissolved marriages dropping 43,000 between 1981 and 1982, according to a new population study.

After setting a record with 1,213,000 divorces in 1981, only 1,170,000 married couples called it quits in 1982, the most recent year for which detailed information is available, according to the study by the National Center for Health Statistics.

"This was the first decline in the number of divorces in 20 years," said the study by Barbara Wilson of the center, which collects birth, marriage, death, divorce and health information for the Department of Health and Human Services.

And, the report added, "the divorce rate also dropped sharply, from 5.3 per 1,000 population in 1981 to 5.0 in 1982. This drop of 6 percent was more precipitous than any annual decline since those recorded following the steep, but temporary, surge in marriages and divorces in the aftermath of World War II."

While the government statisticians collect the numbers, they hesitate to speculate on reasons for the changes.

However, Larry Bumpass of the Center for Demography and Economy at the University of Wisconsin suggested that an important factor is likely the changing composition of the nation's population.

Midlander to be extradited to Pittsburgh

From Staff Reports

A 32-year-old Midland man fighting extradition to Pittsburgh on charges of theft of government property will be extradited as soon as the paperwork is finished, according to an official with the Allegheny County District Attorney's Office.

Shabbir Ahmad Syed, 4735 Boulder Drive, was transferred Tuesday to Midland County Jail, where he remained this morning in lieu of posting a $100,000 bond requested by Allegheny County Assistant District Attorney Tony Bittner. Calls Tuesday to Syed's Midland attorney, Ed Shelby, were not returned.

The Pakistani national who became a U.S. citizen in October is suspected of misappropriating $80,000 in federal funds while acting as controller of the Greater Pittsburgh Business Development Corp. Syed left the corporation, which provided federal funds to small and minority-owned businesses, in 1982 after questions about $9,300 worth of checks arose.

Syed was employed as a part-time bookkeeper with Rittenhouse Oil and Gas Co. in Midland until December, according to a company spokesman.

The current controller of Greater Pitt said his auditors discovered that $82,742 of the $773,997 in missing funds were directly linked to Syed, according to an article in The Pittsburgh Press.

Here's one for the (law) books

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Whether there really was a state law banning barefoot drivers or not, millions of Texas teenagers rarely traveled during summer months without a pair of sneakers nearby.

And despite fruitless attempts to find the rule in old statutes, officers in the Midland Police Department Traffic Division swear it was there at one time.

Nonetheless, Texas travelers face enough formal frivolity in day to day driving without having to follow rigid and rumored rules.

Still, there are plenty.

"I remember that (barefoot) law," Beverly Holder protested.

She and others in the traffic division claim it had something to do with getting a bare foot caught between the floorboard and the accelerator, but somehow, that one doesn't seem to stick.

"They even used to have one about lifting up your feet from the floor when you go over railroad tracks," Sgt. B.W. Morgan of the Midland Police Department said solemnly.

"Yeah, it had something to do with getting the weight off the floorboard," MPD officer Emmett Roch said, grinning.

But a Department of Public Safety highway patrol captain disagrees:

"I'm not aware of those ever being on the statutes," Capt. Tony White said, laughing. "But I even heard the same things when I was growing up."

So maybe those "laws" weren't handed down by the Legislature. Still, they were obeyed by many and perhaps whomever authored them should have sought a political office.

Some of those who are in charge, however, have done an exceptional job with trivial traffic statutes.

"It's a state law that you don't have to have a windshield, but you do have to have windshield wipers," said Morgan. Sure enough, there on page 241 of the 1983-84 Texas Motor Vehicle Laws it states the wipers should be "maintained in good working order."

If a windshield is present, it may not have anything including signs, shoe-polished messages or cracks that "obstruct, obscure, or impair the driver's clear view of the highway or any intersecting highway," not to mention any possible pedestrians who may be standing in front of your approaching bumper.

According to state law, it's also illegal, and punishable by a $100-$200 fine, to rent a motor vehicle to an unlicensed person or allow a "dangerous driver" to operate a motor vehicle.

Pulling to the side of the road while funeral processions parade by is a show of courtesy, according to police officers. But it is a misdemeanor offense to hinder the procession in any way, or attempt to cross through it.

"In some places up North, they don't stop," Morgan said. "We stopped an ol' girl once after the officer was trying to block an intersection and she came though it. She told the judge they didn't have to do that 'where she came from' and he fined her $50 anyway."

Israeli troops dismantling eastern Lebanon positions

LAKE QARAAOUN, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops are dismantling and preparing to abandon a series of posts facing Syrian troops in eastern Lebanon — some of the most strategic positions captured in Israel's 1982 invasion.

On a visit to the frontline with Syria Tuesday, reporters saw soldiers loading concrete barriers and bunk beds on big trucks in the second phase of Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon.

Israel's presence in eastern Lebanon brought Israeli guns to within 16 miles of the Syria's capital, Damascus, and had been seen as a potential flashpoint for hostilities with Israel's most implacable Arab foe. But there has been no major confrontation with Syria.

The Syrians are expected to try and "improve their line a little bit" and allow Palestinian guerrillas to move into territory vacated by Israel, said an Israeli army officer who briefed reporters at Rashaiya only five miles from the Syrian border.

But the officer, who identified himself only as Maj. Eytan in keeping with army regulations, said that so far there has been no indication the Syrians want to make trouble.

"There has not been much movement on the Syrian side. They are just sitting. It appears they are not looking for a confrontation," said the officer.

He warned that Israel expects Syria to keep the Palestinians from mounting attacks against Israel from the territory the Israeli Army plans to leave. "We may strike at Syria if there are Palestinian terrorist attacks," Eytan said.

Rashaiya, where Maj. Eytan briefed Israel-based foreign correspondents who were escorted to Lebanon by the Israeli Army, is one of the towns to be abandoned under the second stage, which was set in motion by Prime Minister Shimon Peres' Cabinet on Sunday.

Only one position has been abandoned in the second-stage pullback area — at Khirbet Rouha, 2½-miles behind the frontline in the Bekaa Valley.

Eytan said that so far the dismantling process is underway at only one other spot — the camp on the barren eastern shore of Lake Qaraaoun, whose turquoise waters glistened in the clear, brisk weather under the snowy peaks of the Barouk ridge.

At the camp, which was used as a repair and service depot for tanks and other armored vehicles, a 20-year-old soldier said he was halfway through his three years of mandatory army service.

"I'll really be glad to spend the next year and a half outside of Lebanon," said the young soldier, who refused to give his name.

The first stage of the withdrawal was completed Feb. 16 when Israeli troops pulled out of the area around the Mediterranean port city of Sidon. It was followed by an escalated guerrilla campaign by Shiite Moslems.

The second phase of the pullback, which Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin has said could take up to 12 weeks to complete, will extract Israeli troops from most of the Bekaa Valley near the Syrian border and from Jebel Barouk, the snow-capped mountain that now bristles with sophisticated Israeli surveillance equipment.

However, Israeli soldiers will still remain in a so-called security zone stretching across South Lebanon from the Mediterranean Sea on the west to the Golan Heights in the east which Israel captured from Syria in the 1967 Mideast war. This tier, containing Shiite Moslems who ambush the Israelis every day, is to be vacated in a third stage later this year.

Eytan listed three strategically important sites the Israelis are supposed to leave in the pullback's second stage: Jebel Barouk, the Israel-Syrian confrontation line paralleling the Beirut-Damascus highway, and the village of Yanta.

Eytan said the army would not start moving off the mountain until the end of April because of the heavy snow.

Yanta, a nondescript village far off the beaten path, took on new importance after it was captured because it brought Israeli artillery within firing range of Damascus.

On Jan. 14, the Cabinet approved the three-step plan to evacuate the 25 percent of Lebanon controlled by its army. Peres has said he expects the withdrawal to be finished by the end of summer.

Celebrities cook for charity

Contest benefits March of Dimes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Casting aside their political worries briefly, many of the best-known couples in Washington tested their culinary skills in a benefit expected to raise $250,000 for the March of Dimes charity.

"He's already changed the recipe," sighed Patsy Hollings, the wife of Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., who acknowledged that his wife did most of the cooking at home.

"We practiced last night and he kept saying 'It needs a pinch of mace' and I said, 'It needs a smidgen of mace,'" she said, referring to a thick, creamy She-Crab soup they entered in the competition.

Across the ballroom, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., didn't even pretend to play a big role cooking a roast rack of lamb with mustard persillade, a favorite in Nevada's Basque country.

"I've got an excellent sous-chef over there," he said, pointing to his wife, Carol, as she busily tended the meat for the dish that won in the "Best Entree" category.

Laxalt, one of President Reagan's close friends, said he rarely handled day-to-day cooking in the Laxalt household, even though he boasted about his mean barbeque.

The O'Neill's — House Speaker Thomas P. and his wife, Millie — were making their dish more of a team effort.

But O'Neill, who's fond of complaining about the Reagan administration's way of doing business, wasn't completely satisfied with the type of fish supplied for his recipe of scalloped fish.

"It looks like a Potomac perch," the speaker said, adding that haddock was the best fish for the recipe.

O'Neill said he never eats fish in Washington, anyway. "I'm spoiled by Boston."

Does the speaker cook at home? Mrs. O'Neill was asked. "Yes — but I won't tell you what."

A real chef in the group was Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, who had three pots cooking as he prepared his bouillabaisse. "Here's the saffron I bought from home," Catherine Stevens reminded her serious-looking husband.

Calling himself a "weekend cook," White House Deputy Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver and his wife, Carolyn, whipped up a tomato beef curry that won them the Corning Creative Cookery Award.

Deaver, 45 pounds lighter since he came to Washington four years ago, lauded the recipe's healthful aspects, saying it consisted of lean beef and vegetable. His diet secret? No fat and lots of vegetables, chicken and fish.

Columnist Ann Landers prepares a chocolate mousse during a celebrity cooking contest Tuesday night for the benefit of the March of Dimes. The event was expected to raise $25,000 for the organization.

"I'm a hog farmer, so I'm cooking pork. It beats testifying before Congress."

John Block
Agriculture Secretary

For Agriculture Secretary John Block, the contest brought some welcome relief from the pressures of dealing with the farm bill and angry farmers.

"I'm a hog farmer, so I'm cooking pork," said Block whose recipe was called "Maple Bar-B-Que Ribs."

"It beats testifying before Congress," he said.

Columnist Ann Landers admitted, "I haven't cooked in 20 years," but she looked at home making a chocolate mousse.

Miss Landers, looking trim in a blue gown, said she was still recovering from the sex survey she took of her readers in which most of them said they preferred cuddling to the act of sex. "No more surveys," she said.

Lee Elder, the golfer, didn't mince words as his wife, Rose, helped him with his Sweet Potato Pie, which was picked as the "Best Dessert."

Asked what he normally cooked at home, Elder said he usually sat down, put his feet up and waited for his wife to bring the meal. Mrs. Elder laughed.

Socialist mayor wins third term

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Voters in Vermont's largest city handed the nation's only socialist mayor a smashing re-election victory, while at least 54 communities approved resolutions calling for immediate action against acid rain.

"The people of Burlington are not afraid of socialism," Mayor Bernard Sanders declared Tuesday after the Brooklyn, N.Y., native won a third term in this city of 38,000 by outpolling Democrat Brian Burns by an unofficial 5,429 votes or 55 percent to 3,095 or 32 percent.

Independent Diane Gallagher, originally a Republican candidate, was third Tuesday in the seven-person field with 1,165 votes.

"What we showed was that we could take on the Democratic Party, the Republican Party, big business, the local newspaper, all the big money interests — and we can win," Sanders said.

Sanders, 43, who runs as an independent, shocked Burlington's political establishment in 1981 with a 10-vote victory over a five-term Democratic incumbent.

Residents in more than 100 communities around the state were asked in Tuesday's annual town meetings to endorse resolutions protesting federal inaction on acid rain. Environmentalists say sulfur emissions from Midwest smoke stacks cause the Northeast's acid rain, a deadly precipitation for trees and fish.

Tallies from 55 communities showed 54 supported the resolution and one, Fayston, opposed it. Several Fayston residents argued that town meeting wasn't the proper place for such a debate.

The wording of the resolution differed from town to town, but all urged President Reagan and the federal Environmental Protection Agency to immediately address the problem.

The Reagan administration has taken the position that more study is needed to determine whether the emissions from industries in the Midwest are responsible for environmental damage in the Northeast and Canada.

For fiscal year 1986, which begins Oct. 1, the EPA asked for more money to study acid rain. A budget proposal by EPA Administrator Lee M. Thomas would boost the agency's research by 61 percent to $60.5 million.

State Rep. Peter Allendorf, who originated the acid rain resolutions, said he was elated by the strong support. "Common sense prevailed," he said. "We'll ship the results down to Washington and who knows, we might get something started, by golly."

In addition, the U.S. Office of the Comptroller of Currency (OCC) had been auditing the bank in late 1982. As a result, the bank had "charged off" some non-performing loans. Fraser said that at the time, the bank was being "beat up" in the media.

"I did not want to see a good country run on deposits," he said.

Under questioning by Eagle attorney, Seagal V. Wheatley, Fraser said that Wheatley's comment that 60 to 75 percent of FNB loans were in oil and gas was "probably accurate."

DIVORCE

Young people seeking education and careers are increasingly delaying marriage, resulting in fewer married persons overall and many of those who do wed, doing so at later ages.

Fewer marriages mean fewer divorces, Bumpass observed.

And, he noted, marriages among the young tend to be highly unstable, so delaying marriage may lead to fewer divorces because the partners are more mature.

In support, the study noted that most divorces occur relatively early in marriage — half within seven years. The average duration of marriages in the United States was 9.4 years in 1982, the study added, the same as in 1972.

Since 1972 the average age of persons obtaining divorces has shifted upward slightly. The average age of divorcing husbands increased from 34.9 to 35.7, while for wives it rose from 32.1 to 33.1.

"The trend in age at marriage of divorcing spouses shows that the shift to older average age at divorce between 1972 and 1982 was due to later start of the marriages, not to longer marriages," the study explained.

The report also noted that with the decline in number of divorces, and the shrinking size of families, the number of children affected by divorce fell.

The number of children from broken homes fell from 1,180,000 in 1981 to 1,108,000 in 1982, the study said.

The decline in divorce rates was reported across most of the nation, with declines of 10 percent or more reported in Nevada, Kansas, Mississippi, Idaho and Iowa.

Increases in divorce rates were reported only in Vermont, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Delaware, Virginia and Utah. Statistics were incomplete for Ohio, Kentucky, Arkansas, Louisiana and New Mexico.

Here is a rundown of the number of divorces in the United States, and the divorce rate per 1,000 persons, in recent years:

Year	Divorces	Rate
1982	1,170,000	5.0
1981	1,213,000	5.3
1980	1,189,000	5.2
1975	1,036,000	4.8
1970	708,000	3.5
1965	479,000	2.5
1960	393,000	2.2
1955	377,000	2.3
1950	385,000	2.6
1945	485,000	3.5
1940	264,000	2.0

Although Midland police reported the misappropriated funds could total $2 million, Bittner said, "I can only say he is being extradited on charges of theft of $80,000."

Midland police detective Sgts. Jeff Haile and Gary Bledsoe headed the surveillance of the northwest Midland townhouse leased by Syed and his wife, begun after representatives of the Allegheny County DA's Office visited Midland police Dec. 23.

According to Haile, the couple left Midland at Christmas and authorities feel they arrived in Pakistan on separate flights.

Bittner declined to comment on the reported search in New York by investigators with the Allegheny DA's office of Mrs. Syed and her luggage.

The couple returned to Midland at 8:30 p.m. Monday night, according to the officers, who said they felt the Syeds would return for personal belongings.

"We didn't even let them get in," Bledsoe said. "When they drove up, we approached them and picked them up."

Mrs. Syed was not charged with an offense, they said.

According to Bittner, he expects the process of extradition to take longer than a month.

"We're processing the paperwork to our governor, who, in turn, will send it to your governor," he said.

LAWS

A Texas motorist also is forbidden to cross a fire hose laid across any street or driveway "without the consent of the fire department official in command," according to the law.

"Like you can get their attention out there to ask," Roch added, with a laugh.

It is illegal to leave a child under 7 years old alone in a locked vehicle for more than five minutes, according to Morgan. But the picture of an officer mouthing to a child "how old are you?...8?...never mind," or "you're 3? Well, time's not up, hang in there" is a little perverse, they admit.

A motorist has to yield to a child, and incapacitated or confused pedestrians within a crosswalk or an intersection, but otherwise, it's fair game, according to the law. (The state does ask motorists to "exercise due care to avoid colliding with any pedestrian.")

In Midland, there is no ordinance banning pedestrians from crossing in the middle of blocks.

"A long time ago, they were going to start filing for jaywalking but the first people they caught were the mayor and two of the city councilmen," Morgan said.

"But if they're trying to jaywalk, you're supposed to honk before you run 'em over."

It's against state law to coast in neutral uphill, downhill or along flat surfaces. It's also against the law for a bus to change gears while crossing railroad tracks. "You just have to hope you make it," Roch said.

A driver also is mandated by law to back only if one can do so "with safety and without interfering with other traffic," according to legislation.

Runner-up in reasonability is the law which allows one to drive on the right shoulder of a road "at any time to avoid a collision."

Although legislation is changing, current law requires all passenger vehicles to have safety belts except for buses and school buses.

However, "it is further provided that it shall be unlawful for any driver of any school bus to permit more than one (1) child per seat to stand while said bus is traveling to or from the school being served," according to the law. Apparently that means children can stand as long as they each have a seat in which to be thrown.

A driver also is forbidden to watch television at the same time he or she is driving. A driver can't even legally start his or her car "until such movement can be made with safety."

But it's interesting to note that one law is constantly violated by those who are there to enforce it:

How many times have you been stopped by a police officer who approaches your window after "stopping the engine, locking the ignition, removing the key from the ignition and effectively setting the brake thereon and, when standing upon any grade, turning the front wheels to the curb or side of the highway" of his or her patrol car?

BUDGET

Domenici said the quick agreement on the defense portion of the budget — reached in only the second day of the panel's deliberations — was a breakthrough.

But, he added, "It's going to help but it's not going to be enough."

He said that freezing all programs alone will not reach the target set by Senate Republican leaders of chopping the deficit, now at about $200 billion, by $50 billion in 1986. He said actual cuts and program eliminations — such as the president's planned termination of Amtrak, revenue sharing and the Small Business Administration — are needed also.

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said Tuesday the final budget that arises will have to be a "consensus" negotiated among the House, Senate and White House.

Dole, whose efforts to rally Republicans around a budget plan of their own have not been successful, suggested the Budget Committee get the document to the floor as soon as possible — so the entire membership could have a crack at it.

"I think it's finally going to have to come to that," he said. "Get something to the floor, get the American people to focus on it, get the White House to focus on it, then try to put together a consensus and offer a substitute."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said on Tuesday that Reagan "stands squarely behind his budget."

PANTRY

Although many of the borrowers refinanced, the FDIC wound up with 65 delinquent loans. The agency then ordered firms doing business with most of those farmers to make their checks out to both the farmer and the FDIC.

FDIC officials said the procedure was common collection policy, but the farmers grew angry. At a town meeting in December, many complained that the FDIC was, in effect, freezing their assets.

The controversy swelled when someone set a fire at the FDIC office in Verdigre on Feb. 3. Battiato said the fire, which did no significant damage, may have been set by "people controlled by the FDIC or people employed by the FDIC to gain sympathy."

Battiato's statement drew a sharp denial from FDIC officials, including liquidation specialist Marcia Carrigan, who called the priest's remarks "unfair" and "irresponsible."

The crime is unsolved; the FDIC eventually opened a new office.

"We're really at a critical stage now, where the trucks could start showing up on the farms, repossessing the livestock, grain, machinery and personal property that they've got liens on," Battiato said.

Jim and Barb Sokol have already given up their livestock and farm machinery to creditors and are trying to save their 160-acre homestead in a bankruptcy filing.

"We're just hanging," Sokol said, explaining that he doesn't know what he'll do to support his family. If he can, he'll rent his farmland this spring.

Battiato estimated that the pantry has helped as many as 200 families who, like the Sokols, are struggling with debts. Donations have come in steadily, he said, in part because of the attention the pantry has received from the news media.

"Twenty-four states and the District of Columbia have sent us over $50,000 in donations, and that's just for food," he said. "There's another $10,000 for grain."

Bob Kment said he tacked up a "Verdigre Press Club" sign on the front window of his bakery because, so many reporters have stopped by. "Keep Verdigre Alive For Us" reads another sign in the bakery window, made by a fourth-grader as part of a class project to boost spirits in town.

"It's time for us to quit looking down," Kment said. "The food pantry and all that are fine, but we've got to keep looking up. It's not what each one of us is going to do to survive; it's what we can do together to survive."

Delores Ruzicka, who runs a craft shop across Main Street from Kment's bakery and lives on a farm 21 miles away, said she's not giving up on her hometown.

"I wouldn't be going with my business if I didn't think there was a future here," she said.

Chief calls black leaders racist

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Black leaders who promote preferential treatment for blacks are racists, more intent on "peddling pain" than establishing a color-blind society, says the chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

Clarence M. Pendleton Jr., who is black, said Tuesday that programs such as goals, timetables and quotas for minorities amount to "the new racism that confronts black people today."

Pendleton, who was appointed by President Reagan, has led a new commission majority to adopt positions vehemently opposed to race and sex quotas — views endorsed by the administration.

On Tuesday, the panel voted 5-2 to adopt a position on enforcement of civil rights laws that also is favored by the administration.

The position, which affects private colleges whose students receive federal loans, goes beyond what the Supreme Court required in February 1984 when it narrowed civil rights enforcement in institutions receiving federal money.

In a speech to the National Press Club, Pendleton asked, "What is the new racism that confronts black people today? Who are these new racists? Many of them are the media-designated black leaders. These new racists, many of them black, exhibit the classical behavior system of racism. They treat blacks differently than whites because of their race."

Following the speech, Ralph Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, made a sharp response.

"Pendleton has gone beyond the pale," Neas said. "Such foolishness does not deserve the dignity of a reply."

Pendleton said civil rights leaders should be concentrating on improving education for blacks.

"But no, our so-called black leaders are spending every moment peddling pain, complaining about budget cuts in food stamp programs, job training programs, legal services and aid to families with dependent children," Pendleton said.

The correct prescription for change, he said, is the one proposed by President Reagan — a strong economy, low inflation, low interest rates, less government and an increased gross national product. Pendleton said Reagan "is trying to create a society that is truly color blind."

As Pendleton spoke, he was flanked by Reagan administration appointees who have battled repeatedly with organized civil rights groups: Linda Chavez, staff director of the Civil Rights Commission; Clarence Thomas, chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and William Bradford Reynolds, assistant attorney general in charge of civil rights.

The chairman said "the most important civil rights decision of this decade" was a Supreme Court decision last June in a case involving the Memphis, Tenn., fire department.

The high court ruled 6-3 that employers may not be forced to scrap seniority plans that favor white males to protect affirmative action gains by minorities and women during times of economic difficulty.

In its vote Tuesday on civil rights enforcement, the commission said penalties should not cover private colleges that receive no direct federal money, even if their students receive federal assistance.

The Supreme Court also voted 9-0 that scholarship aid is enough to bring portions of college programs under civil rights enforcement provisions.

The commission agreed with the court that enforcement should apply only to an institution's specific program or activity receiving federal aid. The court voted 6-3 on that issue.

Major civil rights groups and their congressional supporters didn't like either part of the court's decision, and Neas said Tuesday they'll vigorously oppose the position of the Civil Rights Commission.

The commission said, "A college which deliberately forgoes federal aid to avoid federal edicts should not be federalized as a result of enrolling students who have themselves received federal student aid."

It added: "America is not ready yet — and may it never be ready — for a society standardized by the federal bureacracy ... so that virtually nothing is left untouched by the federal bureacracy."

Civil rights activists are trying to get legislation passed in Congress to restore the institution-wide coverage they say existed before the court ruling.

Justices overworked, analysis says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court justices, who have complained they increasingly are overworked, have themselves to blame because they accept cases better left to "percolate" in lower courts, two law professors said today.

"Nearly one-fourth of the cases decided by the United States Supreme Court have no legitimate claim on the court's time or energy," New York University law professors Samuel Estreicher and John Sexton said.

The professors' conclusions, based on an analysis of the court's 1982-83 term, undermines a proposal by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger calling for an experimental national court to siphon off as many as one-third of the cases decided by the nation's highest court.

Sexton, a former Burger law clerk, and Estreicher said, "While the Supreme Court presently may be overburdened ... there is no need for a major structural change such as the proposed new court."

Burger's plan, first unveiled in 1983, has not picked up much support in Congress, and it has been shelved indefinitely.

Most of the nine justices, five of whom are over 76 years old, have complained about their workload. Justice John Paul Stevens, for example, has said the court agrees to decide far too many cases.

The 1,200-page NYU study, which is to be published by the university, concluded that 39 of the 165 cases the court agreed to hear in its 1982-83 term represented a waste of the court's time.

The study said the court agreed to hear many of those cases because of justices' ideological positions.

"The doctrinal or political agendas of the individual justices ... encourage (the court) ... to hear petitions (that) do not merit Supreme Court review," the study said.

For various reasons, it would have been wiser for the issues raised by those cases to remain in the lower courts to allow more time for development there, the report said.

The Supreme Court should act as "a wise, effective manager" of the nation's legal system "committed in substantial measure to the policy of percolation," Estreicher and Sexton said. "It is ordinarily best for the court as manager to stay its hand until there has been a period of exploratory consideration and regional experimentation by the lower federal and state courts."

In the 1982-83 term, the court was asked to intervene in some 4,000 cases, but accepted only 165. It requires four votes for the high court to agree to review an appeal.

The NYU study said only one-half of the 165 cases had "percolated" enough to require the high court's review. Another one-fourth merited the justices' attention only if the court members had excess time and energy, the study said.

The remaining one-fourth, which the study said did not warrant the court's review, included some of the more headline-making cases the court decided.

For example, the professors said the court erred in agreeing to review a case in which it decided that law firms may be sued for sex discrimination when refusing to promote a woman to partner.

The likelihood that the case had been decided wrongly by a lower court is not sufficient reason for the Supreme Court to hear the case, the professors said.

Thai air force jets flush out Vietnamese troops

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Thai air force jets strafed three hilltops in Thai territory near the Cambodia border to flush out Vietnamese troops that intruded while attacking a Cambodian resistance camp, a Thai army spokesman announced today.

Sixty Vietnamese soldiers were killed in the air strike and a battle with Thai troops for the hills, he said.

Spokesman Maj. Gen. Naruedol Dejpradiyuth said Thailand struck Tuesday when Hanoi's forces tried to seize the hilltops in order to encircle Tatum, the headquarters of forces loyal to Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk. Sihanouk is a former Cambodian leader.

The Thai general said the intruders had killed two Thai soldiers and wounded another 13 in the assaults on the hilltops about four miles from Tatum and located in Surin province.

Naruedol did not say if any Vietnamese troops remained in the area or if the air raids were continuing today.

"It is obvious that these (hilltops) are between two to three kilometers (1.2 To 1.8 miles) inside Thailand," he told a news conference.

He also reported that Thai forces were trying to evict an unspecified number of Vietnamese troops who had crossed the border during an attack on the Khmer Rouge base opposite Khun Harn district of Sisaket province.

About 200 Vietnamese troops supported by artillery attacked the guerrilla base before dawn today and some of them later clashed with Thai troops about a mile inside Thailand, he said.

Naruedol said Vietnamese forces, launching a multi-pronged attack after a two-week lull on the battlefields of western Cambodia, also seized Tuesday both Sanro Changan and Dongruk — the last bases of the third guerrilla group, the Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

Vietnam invaded Cambodia in late 1978 and maintains an estimated 160,000 troops there to battle 50,000 or more resistance fighters. Since the dry season fighting began last November, Vietnamese forces backed by uprecedentedly massive firepower have overrun all major resistance camps near the Thai border except for Tatum, on the northern sector of the border, and Khmer Rouge bases in the south near the Cardamon mountain range.

Naruedol said the Vietnamese incursion in the Tatum area came after Vietnamese fire bases poured 200 artillery rounds into the Tatum area Tuesday, and about 50 stray shells went into Thai military outposts along the frontier. He identified the hilltops the Vietnamese tried to seize as "361', "400" and "424."

"We speculate...that the Vietnamese poured their troops (into Thailand) in order to try to seal the border and seize the Cambodian resistance stronghold by encircling it," Naruedol said.

Sihanouk spokesman Truong Mealy said in Bangkok that the guerrillas were holding firm against the Vietnamese offensive on Tatum, but Thai military sources at the border town of Aranyaprathet said the artillery bombardment had pushed back the camp's outer defense lines.

The Vietnamese attack, which began before dawn Tuesday, was the first ground assault on Tatum.

Mealy conceded that Vietnamese troops attacking from four directions had surrounded Tatum.

From Aranyaprathet, Khun Harn is 145 miles north, Tatum 76 miles north, Dongruk 45 miles north and Sanro Changan 43 miles north. A Vietnamese attack was also reported on a Khmer Rouge base opposite Pong Nam Ron district of Thailand's Chantaburi province 55 miles south of Aranyaprathet, but no details of the fighting were available.

The three guerrilla groups are allied in battling the Vietnamese.

Both Mealy and Thai military sources said the resistance, armed with recoilless rifles and mortars, inflicted heavy casualties on the Vietnamese attackers, said to be backed by 20 T-54 tanks, 28 M113 armored personnel carriers and 16 field guns.

The Thai sources spoke only on condition they remain anonymous.

"We have stopped them from advancing ... and we are attacking them from behind," Mealy said, adding the fighting at Tatum had subsided to mainly exchanges of rifle fire by this morning.

The Sihanoukists claim to field some 10,000 guerrillas, but will not say how many are defending Tatum.

WORLD in brief

Factory boiler explodes in cashew nut plant

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A factory boiler exploded in a cashew nut processing plant in the northeastern city of Fortaleza, killing at least 10 people and injuring 45, firemen said.

"It was like a burning cauldron. When the boiler exploded, the entire processing plant was enveloped in flames," said fireman Antonio de Lima Medeiros, in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Medeiros said eight of the dead were factory workers at the Lindoia Limitada cashew nut processing plant, where the blast occured. The two others worked at a nearby real estate agency which caught fire. He said five people were missing.

The fireman said the cause of the accident had not been determined.

'Flower Basket' stolen

HANAU, West Germany (AP) — Paul Gauguin's "The Flower Basket," one of eight valuable paintings stolen from a Norwegian museum in 1982, has been found in a train-station locker in Innsbruck, Austria, authorities said.

The West German Federal Criminal Office in Wiesbaden and the state prosecutor's office in Hanau reported Tuesday that the painting, valued at $176,000, was found Feb. 25 by Austrian police.

They said the French masterpiece, stored inside a brown plastic suitcase in the locker, was "badly damaged" by mishandling.

The seven other paintings stolen from the Norwegian National Gallery in Oslo on Oct. 11, 1982, were recovered earlier.

A lawyer representing a man being held in Hanau, near Frankfurt, in connection with the theft told authorities about the Gauguin painting's whereabouts, the Federal Criminal Office statement reported.

Soldiers believed missing

TOKYO (AP) — Richard Childress, a member of the U.S. National Security Council, discussed American soldiers believed missing in action in Vietnam with Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach during a three-day visit to Hanoi, Vietnam's state radio reported.

No details were given. The brief report, monitored in Tokyo, said Childress and Thach also exchanged views on "problems concerning bilateral relations." The U.S. official's visit ended Tuesday.

Just Found and Released For Public Sale

26.4% Annual Interest Guaranteed Last 10 Years

GENUINE UNITED STATES GOV'T. SILVER DOLLARS

ALL COINS UP TO 100 YEARS OLD

UNITED STATES COIN RESERVE

U. S. Coin Reserve, a distributor of Government Currency is officially announcing the release of its famous collection of 3000 high grade U. S. Government Silver Dollars. Due to the market surge and tremendous demand from the American Public the Officers of the U. S. Coin Reserve have been forced to authorize the release of their last current stockpiles of silver dollars. Most of these 50 to 100 year old coins are Brilliant Uncirculated and include many from the Carson City Mint. Since this collection must be sold out completely in only one week we are offering these coins for $50.10 less than a major national advertiser! Only $34.90 each! Orders received later may not be honored due to volatile fluctuations in the precious metals market, and checks may be returned uncashed.

NO LOSE INVESTMENT

American citizens from all walks of life including Bankers, Lawyers, Doctors, Stockbrokers, Collectors and Investors are searching frantically for what is considered by experts the world over to be a No Lose Investment. Once thought to be plentiful 50 years ago investors are now scrambling to get their hands on the nearly impossible to find Gem United States Government Silver Dollars. Well-known brokers such as Salomon Brothers have published reports stating that for the last 10 years, rare coins have outperformed all other investments, tangible as well as financial. Silver dollars alone have had an annual appreciation rate of 26.4% despite fluctuations in the price of silver! It is a proven fact that smart investors, for the last 10 years, have been secretly hoarding these coins. They are sitting on a silver mine which they will not sell and already have at least 1000% overall appreciation! This is just the "Tip of the Iceberg" in terms of what is to come, for example the 1891-0 is now worth $85 and is projected by experts in only 10 years to be worth approximately $1000! Even more startling is the fact that only 10 years ago this coin could be bought for $7-$10! This is a proven fact and documented in records of American History.

CONGRESS MELTDOWNS CREATE SHORTAGE

These beautiful pieces of American History were created by the millions at the United States Mint over a century ago. Although when one studies U. S. History it becomes obvious why these treasured relics are so rare today. In 1918 during WWI, Congress authorized the melting down of 350,000,000 (350 million!) silver dollars, after this regrettable event the value and scarcity of these coins increased dramatically. Also in 1980 when silver exploded to $50.00 per ounce, the private sector melted down millions more U.S. silver dollars leaving a decimated and widely scattered supply. Our staff of experts at the U.S. Coin Reserve has estimated that only 1% of the original mintage of uncirculated coins still exist. Most of these are not for sale but are being held by large investors until they are worth at least $1000 each. Remember that this treasured, historical silver represents some of this great nation's most illustrious periods in history, the frontier of The Wild West including the silver mines of Carson City, Nevada, Jesse James and rough stage coach travel, Henry Ford and the newfangled Model-T and lastly the Roaring 20's and the beginning of American Jazz Music. This is a once in a lifetime opportunity to invest in a piece of this country's most valuable resource, the UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT HISTORICAL SILVER DOLLARS.

LAST KNOWN GOV'T SILVER RELEASED

Through our national coin networks the U. S. Coin Reserve, a division of Verret Enterprises, a private corporation, has taken a major audit of the silver dollar supply of the entire United States. The results indicate that this famous hoard of 3000 Gems is the last known public collection of its size and quality available. NO other comparable collection is for sale anywhere in the United States. Also consider the fact that investments such as oil, diamonds, gold or silver bullion, represent commodities of unlimited supply. Through modern mining techniques the supply of these commodities never really runs out, but the highly collectible Government Silver Dollars have a LIMITED, FINITE and ever DECREASING supply.

A Drug Enforcement Agency agent leads away a man identified as Norman Saunders, chief minister of the British Islands of Turks and Caicos, on Tuesday after his arrest. Four persons were arrested by the DEA on drug-related charges.

DEA says arrests to help break drug links

MIAMI (AP) — The chief minister of the Turks and Caicos Islands was arrested after he accepted $20,000 from undercover agents to assure a smooth flow of drugs through his island colony from Colombia to the United States, federal authorities said.

The minister, Norman Saunders, was arrested Tuesday with three other men, including two other high-ranking island officials, during a meeting in a Miami hotel room, the Drug Enforcement Agency said in a statement.

During the meeting with undercover agents Tuesday, the four men said that some 400 kilograms of cocaine could be smuggled through the Turks and Caicos Islands each week, said Peter Gruden, chief agent in the Miami DEA office.

They recommended using South Caicos as a refueling stop for planes traveling from South America to southern Florida, Gruden said.

Saunders was jailed in lieu of $2 million bond along with Stafford Missick, minister of commerce and development; Aulden Smith, one of its 11 legislators; and Andre Fournier, a Canadian who has a home in the Bahamas, said DEA spokesman Frank Chellino.

Saunders is the highest-ranking member of the British West Indies colony's Legislative Council, the statement said.

The four were charged with conspiracy to import narcotics into the United States, conspiracy to violate the Travel Act and interstate and foreign travel in aid of racketeering enterprises, the DEA said.

"The focus of this investigation was to break up support organizations that are critically important in moving narcotics into the United States," the statement said.

The Turks and Caicos, a British dependency with about 8,500 inhabitants scattered on six of more than 30 islands in the Bahamas archipelago, is located about 575 miles southeast of Miami, at the southern tip of the Bahama Islands.

Saunders, a member of the Progressive National Party, has been chief minister since 1980, when his predecessor, J.A.G. McCartney, died in a plane crash.

The arrests followed a three-month investigation in which an informant and an undercover DEA agent posed as organizers of a cocaine and marijuana smuggling operation, Chellino said.

The informant and the agent met with the suspects in Miami several times during the investigation, the DEA said.

The two originally met with Smith, who told them that he would need money to pay off other Turks and Caicos officials to ensure the success of their smuggling operation, the statement said.

Smith then arranged for them to meet Saunders, who told the informant he would take care of all difficulties with government officials, the DEA said.

In subsequent meetings and telephone calls, payoffs were arranged and the agent arranged to receive cocaine from Fournier for $375,000 a trip, the statement said.

WE'RE HURTING.

Saving lives can be very expensive. The costs of our disaster relief and other humanitarian programs keep mounting. And we can't afford to come up short.

Saved, by a hair

With the buildup to Midland's Centennial celebration appropriately kicked off last week by Vice President and Mrs. George Bush, it's a fine time to start making plans to participate in the once-a-century gala. Now's your chance!

In the true spirit of the celebration, the Midland Centennial Commission has announced a beard-growing contest to get residents into a festive frame of mind, or face, as may be the case.

Don't snicker! Already such local notables as Mayor Thane Akins have given the centennial commissioners their solemn promise they'll be sporting facial hair at least until July 7th. That's when the centennial activities will end.

The gesture by Akins should encourage other Midlanders to throw their hats — and faces — in the ring, and to set aside their razors until July 8th at least. In fact, we'll go as far as encouraging the mayor to challenge other local elected officials to join in the beard growing.

Of course, the centennial commission is giving residents a little incentive to participate in the contest, in the form of fines to be levied against unbearded shirklings at official centennial events.

If a man truly cannot stand the thought of growing a beard and putting all the city's other male residents to shame, he can purchase a license not to grow one for $10.

But that's the coward's way to a clean face. The ladies in the community can help by urging their favored men to get going in this challenge.

Come on, Midland, get growing!

A reassuring sign

Early reports about the state of the nation's economy in January support those who have predicted continued economic growth in 1985.

The U.S. Department of Commerce tells us that the economy expanded 1.7 percent during that month. To put the figure in perspective, the department noted the increase was the highest in 19 months. The report came from that reliable reader of the economic climate, the government index that includes 11 indicators, eight of which reflected forward motion.

Foremost among the positive signs was an 8.1 percent rise in new orders for consumer products. Construction spending, led by the building of offices and shopping centers, took a leap of 2 percent in January. Builders may not be enjoying a boom, but they are happy that the 2 percent figure is the biggest boost in eight months.

Claims for unemployment benefits were down, suggesting that the health of the labor force remains robust.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige addressed himself to the January figures by saying it was "a reassuring sign of the economy." What happened in January could happen in February.

Another View:

One war too late

Jordan, backed by Egypt and Saudi Arabia, claims to have won the PLO's consent for negotiations — presumably with Israel but maybe only the United States. The tortured language of King Hussein's agreement with Yasir Arafat bears only a faint resemblance to the terms of Camp David and the Reagan Plan and is far from a realistic basis for negotiation. But if pro-American Arab leaders say it is a step forward, that's reason enough for the United States and Israel to embrace it as that.

The accord mentions negotiation but not Israel. It promises "peace" for a "total withdrawal" from the West Bank, Gaza and East Jerusalem, but not even recognition of the rest of Israel. It envisions the PLO sitting with Jordanians in a joint delegation but contemplates a confederation of the "states of Jordan and Palestine," with "Palestine" left free to exercise "self-determination."

These terms only prove that the diplomacy of the most moderate Arab regimes continues to be at least one war too late. After the 1967 war, they offered to settle for terms they could have had in 1948. Since the war of 1973, they have yearned for the terms available in 1967. And though in the Lebanon war Israel has surely lost its taste for occupying hostile Arab terrain, the PLO lost a great deal more: its last base of operations against Israel. The Israelis did not chase the PLO out of bases in the north only to grant it sovereign bases in the east.

Still, the latest exertions deserve some respect, for they represent a grudging recognition by the pro-American Arabs that the aid and protection of the United States must be paid for with their progressive acceptance of Israel.

President Mubarak needs this sense of movement because he wants more economic aid from a Congress that resents his chilly observance of the Camp David peace. He has kept his ambassador out of Israel since the invasion of Lebanon and even before then held travel and trade to a minimum. Now that Israel is withdrawing from Lebanon, he feels hard pressed to improve relations. Having the PLO appear interested in coexistence can blunt the charge of radical Arabs that Egypt is still betraying the Palestinians.

Jordan and Saudi Arabia can similarly benefit from Arafat's apparent blessing. Actually, Hussein and Arafat are rivals in seeking to speak for the Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza. It is good that the king is gaining in that competition, but he is far from ready, over Syria's opposition, to arrange an Israeli-Jordanian condominium in the West Bank.

Such a condominium now seems to be the only plausible formula for the future. Israel may not be ready for it either. But it should, in time, want to shed the burden of subjugating the huge Arab populations of the West Bank and Gaza. Until their status is resolved, they threaten Israel's domestic order. And until Israel finds a way to grant them the autonomy it promised at Camp David, they cannot produce the natural leaders needed to supplant the vexatious PLO once and for all.

"I THOUGHT THIS ADMINISTRATION WAS PRO-FAMILY."

ART BUCHWALD

Mandate feels like a sword!

Democratic Congressman Tender was chuckling.

"What's the joke?" I asked him, as we stood on the steps of the Capitol after lunch.

Art Buchwald

"They're all coming up here to make their case and get relief."

"Who is they?"

"The people who voted for Ronald Reagan in November because he promised to cut government spending without raising their taxes. The joke is everyone thought Reagan was talking about the other guy when it came to chopping off a federal program. The farmers voted for him because they believed he would eliminate urban transportation subsidies, and the Yuppies voted for him because they wanted him to cut agricultural price supports. The conservative students thought his economies had nothing to do with school tuition, and the Republican governors still can't believe the Gipper wants to do away with federal revenue sharing."

"But the president has to cut the budget deficit," I said.

"I didn't say he doesn't. All I'm saying is that everybody who voted for him, except for the defense contractors, didn't realize they were on Stockman's hit list. Come over to my office and see what's going on."

We wandered over to the Sam Rayburn Building. Tender pushed through the crowd to his office.

"I make them take a number like you do in a Baskin Robbins ice cream store." He rang for his secretary. "Who's out there this afternoon?"

She replied, "There is a delegation from the Fraternal Order of Retired Military Officers, the Contractors to Save Federal Highways, the Tax Shelter Institute of America, the Tobacco Growers United, the American Medical Association, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Brotherhood of Real Estate Brokers, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, and the entire state of South Dakota."

"Anybody waiting who voted for the Democrats?" Tender asked.

"Not that I know of. The Retired Military Officers are holding number 345 and are next."

"Send them in," Tender said.

The RMO delegation crowded into Tender's office. The spokesman said, "Congressman, are you going to allow cuts in our fighting men's pensions?"

"I hadn't thought about it until our Commander-in-Chief said it had to be done."

"It's an outrage. We had a contract with the American people that if we served our country we would be compensated for it. Now they're trying to break the faith and it's your duty to stop it!"

"Have you gentlemen taken this up with the Republicans?"

"They have to support the president on this. Our only chance is for the Democrats to stop it before it becomes a fact."

"I don't know why you are so shocked. The president has to cut everything across the board."

"Then why doesn't he cut the defense weapons budget? As retired military people we can assure you there's more waste there than any place in the government."

"I didn't think I'd ever hear you people say that."

"We wouldn't before Reagan announced he was going to cut back on our pensions. Congressman, you're our only hope," the spokesman said with tears in his eyes.

Tender put his arm around the man, "I'll see what I can do."

After they left, Tender said, "This has been going on ever since President Reagan proposed his new budget. I know I shouldn't enjoy it, but we Democrats have so little to be happy about. It isn't our fault that the people gave the president a mandate and he gave them the sword."

OAS taxpayer bills questionable

WASHINGTON — Extravagance in the furnishing of Washington's diplomatic residences is of no concern to American taxpayers — except when the diplomat involved is the secretary-general of the Organization of American States. The U.S. government pays 67 cents of every dollar in the OAS budget, which is currently running at $93 million a year.

Jack Anderson

At a time when an OAS spokesman admitted that "we are facing serious problems with the budget," the organization has spent nearly $150,000 to spruce up the secretary-general's residence in a high-rent district of the capital.

The casual OAS attitude toward money surfaced last year when it was revealed that the former secretary-general, Argentine millionaire Alejandro Orfila, was still drawing his salary from the OAS months after he went to work for a public-relations firm. The official residence was refurbished for his successor, Jose Baena Soares of Brazil.

There is no doubt that the mansion, valued at $1.8 million, required some serious repair work. Floors were rotting, windows and doors had to be replaced, plaster was crumbling and a new retaining wall was needed.

But some of the other expenditures seem to be for things a diplomat might be expected to provide for himself — instead of charging to the taxpayers. OAS documents obtained by my associate Donald Goldberg list some of the little luxuries bought for the Baena Soares home:

— Two king-size, one queen-size, one full-size and two twin mattress-and-box spring sets, at a total cost of $2,780.49.

— A series of mirrored glass doors and wall pieces: $1,931.95.

— A 19-inch color TV: $527.77.

— $3,100 worth of linens, blankets, towels, napkins, tablecloths, quilts, comforters, placemats and pillows.

— Fabric and upholstering expenses of $9,286.

The OAS spokesman said the refurbishing project had been approved before Baena Soares' election as secretary-general last March. If so, the elegant touching up continued after Baena Soares moved in. One detailed document "for refurbishing at residence of Ambassador and Mrs. Baena Soares" was dated Oct. 5, 1984. It gives a room-by-room rundown on drapes and upholstering:

— Pongee-textured, floor-length draperies in the hallway: $800.

— Floral-print drapes and matching sofa fabric in the library: $3,000.

— Drapes and fabric in the family room: nearly $3,000.

— Master bedroom drapes and upholstery: $4,000.

— Son's bedroom curtains: $1,300.

The total bill for the drapes and reupholstery work done in the fall came to more than $24,000.

The OAS spokesman said the organization's Permanent Council had approved all the costs of refurbishing the secretary-general's residence, but my sources are skeptical that the council was informed of the details. They also say that when inquiries were made by my associate, officials quickly passed word to employees not to talk.

HELP ON THE WAY?: Better late than never, I guess. Congress finally seems to be taking an interest in the confusion caused by the Justice Department's breakup of AT&T. If a bill introduced by Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., is passed, Ma Bell's orphans will get some help from the Federal Trade Commission.

The bill would plug a regulatory loophole by giving the FTC authority to keep tabs on the various long-distance services being offered to the public with a maximum of competitive hustle and a minimum of enlightenment. The bill would do for telephone users what the truth-in-lending laws do for consumer-borrowers, the fuel-economy charts do for car buyers and the food-labeling laws do for grocery shoppers: provide information.

Riegle's bill would require the FTC to "promulgate rules to ensure that interstate long-distance companies notify all residential consumers in writing of any changes in rates or related charges" within 10 days. The agency would also see that phone customers are given "simple, straightforward" rate schedules on request.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: The Reagan administration's tilt toward Iraq has caused uneasiness in some circles at the State Department. The fear is that the United States is once again relying on a dictator — President Saddam Hussein — who might be killed or ousted.

They point to a coup attempt against Hussein last fall, which reportedly was followed by congratulations to those involved from Iran, which wished the plotters "better luck next time." The congratulations were premature, and any hopes of future success were quickly dashed by Hussein's execution squads.

— U.S. diplomats pooh-pooh the intelligence community's concern over the use of native workers for menial jobs at embassies in the Soviet bloc. The State Department relies on a study done a few years ago by its Office of Security, which concluded that there was no serious threat posed by local chauffeurs, cooks and others, even though they presumably report everything they learn to the secret police.

EVANS & NOVAK

Reagan in trouble in heartland

ST. PAUL, Minn. — The political payoff of the farm belt financial crisis may be a reverse party realignment, pushing veteran state Sen. Charlie Berg out of the Republican Party because of what he calls its "tendencies toward political suicide."

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Just back from a futile Paul Revere ride to Washington, Berg told us President Reagan no longer is Teflon-coated out here in the devastated farm belt. "He's out to decapitalize rural America," said the angry state legislator. "He'll reduce the price of farm land and the land will all end up in the Federal Land Bank or the insurance companies."

Given his reputation as a canny political gadfly first elected as an independent, Berg may have been exaggerating. But toned-down versions of his warning are being heard from the Dakotas down to Texas and from the Rockies east to Missouri and Illinois. That comprises the home states of about half the 22 Republican U.S. senators up for reelection next year. Four of them — Mark Andrews (N.D.) Charles Grassley (Iowa), James Abdnor (S.D.) and Bob Kasten (Wis.) — deserted Republican ranks last week in defeating Reagan on the farm bailout bill.

Berg and other farm belt Republicans are rankled because they understand the source of the farm credit crisis and feel the Reagan administration does not. "Isn't our problem tied to the tight high-price money policy of the Federal Reserve Board?" Berg asked Agriculture Secretary John Block in Washington. Block did not reply.

That non-answer reflected the Reagan administration's attitude, born out of ignorance and fear of tangling with Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker. Instead of dealing with commodity deflation as a monetary phenomenon, the president is pressing on with his New American Revolution. He truly intends to return agriculture to something approaching a free market economy and regards the 1985 farm crisis as a tragic but essentially minor impediment.

Berg believes what he was told in Washington: Reagan will veto any bailout legislation approaching in cost the bills passed last week by the House and Senate. He calls budget director David Stockman "as compassionate as Auschwitz" and joins farmers in labeling Block an incompetent who is afraid of Stockman.

Nobody knows whether a Reagan veto would appeal to non-farm voters swept up by enthusiasm for the Reagan revolution against big government handouts. But farm-state Republicans think they know what it would do to voters dependent on agriculture — 42 percent of Minnesota's population. "Big political trouble in '86" at both state and federal levels, Republican state chairwoman Marge Gruenes told us.

Republican National Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf, addressing a recent state GOP fund-raising dinner here, was so fearful of triggering a political backlash that he hardly mentioned the farm crisis. Even state Sen. Randy Kamrath, a conservative Republican champion of repealing many federal farm-aid programs, worries that Reagan's move to freer markets will attempt too much too quickly. "If this transition goes too deep," he told us, "a third of our farmers, our villages and our churches and banks will go down."

That not only threatens party realignment toward a Republican majority in the farm belt but promises reversal of 1984 tides. Reagan captured a huge farm-vote majority in Minnesota last November, with votes from many members of Walter Mondale's Democratic-Farmer-Labor (DFL) Party. Mondale carried his only state on the strength of urban voters.

But Berg, elected in 1972 as an independent before switching to the Republicans in 1980, and several other GOP legislators have "an open invitation" to join the DFL caucus. Reagan's veto could persuade them to accept it. That would assure Republican loss of the Minnesota House in 1986. If repeated elsewhere, such switches would undermine Republican gains in state Legislatures and pose a major political threat to the president.

Sensing their first crack in years at a vulnerable Ronald Reagan, Democratic politicians here are playing coy, avoiding for now efforts to exploit the president's weakness. Targeting soft-cushion shots against the hated Stockman and the expendable Block, they are reserving heavy ammunition until after Reagan's expected veto.

Republicans fear Democrats will demand that Reagan justify Washington's bailouts for Lockheed, Chrysler and Continental Bank. "They talk free markets," Berg complained, "but make us pay $2,000 extra for a car by putting a quota on Japanese autos."

White House polling since the crisis started shows only 39 percent of farm-belt voters give Reagan good marks on "handling the economy." That compares with 60 percent in the rest of the country. While still riding high nationwide with Republican realignment in the air, Ronald Reagan is in deep trouble in his native Midwestern heartland.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 6, 1836, the Alamo in San Antonio, Texas, fell to Mexican forces after a 13-day siege. All of the 187 defenders of the mission compound — including Davy Crockett and James Bowie — were killed.

In 1944, U.S. bombers staged a daylight raid against Berlin during World War II.

In 1957, the former British African colonies of the Gold Coast and Togoland became the independent state of Ghana.

In 1967, the daughter of Josef Stalin, Svetlana Alliluyeva, appeared at the U.S. embassy in India and announced her intention to defect to the West. She returned to the Soviet Union last November.

In 1978, Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt was shot in Lawrenceville, Ga., and left paralyzed.

In 1981, Walter Cronkite signed off for the last time as anchor of "The CBS Evening News."

British officials report military crisis inevitable

LONDON(AP)— British officials believe that a political-military crisis may be in the making in the South Pacific far outstripping New Zealand's refusal to let nuclear-equipped U.S. warships to visit its ports.

Talks with New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange, who is now in Britain, have convinced them that a radical leftist swing could lie just ahead in both New Zealand and its more important neighbor, Australia.

Such a political development would almost certainly lead to both countries opting out of the Western alliance and declaring themselves "non-aligned." The U.S. would then face serious difficulties in the strategically vital southern Pacific area, at which the Soviet navy is already casting covetous glances.

Although the ebullient Lange has quickly been turned into the golden boy of Britain's anti-nuclear groupies by his refusal to accept U.S. nuclear powered or armed ships, British officials stressed that the 42-year-old former lay preacher is actually on the moderate wing of his party.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has repeatedly condemned his anti-nuclear stand, reportedly emerged from a private meeting with him at No.10 Downing Street disturbed that even worse might be in store.

Lange is said to have warned her that, if America and Britain appeared to be "ganging up" on him, much more extreme elements in the New Zealand Labor Party would demand drastic counteraction. He implied that he has so far been able to hold these elements in check only with the greatest difficulty.

Officials here were inclined to accept much of what he said at face value. They said that, while Lange was personally an ardent nuclear disarmer, he would have been prepared to allow nuclear-powered, although not nuclear-armed, vessels into New Zealand waters for Anzus alliance exercises. He had been compelled to impose a categorical ban, even though recognizing the political risks, by overwhelming party pressure.

Experts in Britain's Foreign and Commonwealth Ministry described New Zealand's Labor Party, which won power last year, as increasingly influenced by crypto-communists who entered it after the local Communist Party split in a battle between pro-Moscow and pro-Chinese factions in the late 1960s. Several major party figures were avowed Communists until about 15 years ago and never disowned their beliefs.

Officials here said that another critical influence on the Labor Party and Lange's government is New Zealand's powerful Federation of Labor. It is so pro-Soviet that it has persistently refused to disaffiliate from the notorious, Moscow-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions.

Lange has repeatedly insisted that he wants his remote nation of only three million people to remain allied to Australia and the U.S. What has been overlooked is that the Labor Party, while in opposition two years ago, voted to quit the Anzus alliance.

British officials emphasized that the real significance of New Zealand's strong veer to the left is the effect it is already having in Australia.

Mrs. Thatcher is said to have received a recent warning from Australia's Prime Minister Bob Hawke that his political position is under severe menace by the extreme left in his Labor Party.

Hawke, unlike Lange, is a firm supporter of Anzus. But the political climate in Australia increasingly resembles New Zealand's. Hawke's government only narrowly won re-election last December and he is now said to have little more than a third of his party solidly behind him.

Meanwhile, the left is set to launch a big anti-nuclear campaign throughout Australia beginning at Easter. The movement's masterminds are the country's two most powerful labor leaders, John Halfpenny and Laurie Carmichael. Halfpenny is a graduate of the University of Moscow. Carmichael is the former head of the Australian Communist Party.

Informants here said that Halfpenny's influence, especially, extends beyond Australia. He has been active in stirring up anti-American and anti-Anzus agitation in several of the now independent mini-states scattered around the South Pacific. He is a great traveler. He regularly returns to visit his Soviet alma mater.

Warmer temperatures expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warmer temperatures are expected in the Midland area tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for partly cloudy skies tonight with lows in the upper 40s warming to highs in the middle 70s Thursday. Winds will be from the southeast at five to 15 mph tonight, increasing from the south to southeast at less than 25 mph and gusty Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 65 was 20 degrees below the 1956 record of 85. This morning's low was 20 degrees above the record set in 1948.

STATE

Calm weather prevailed over all of Texas today with forecasters calling for the possibility of some drizzle or scattered light rain in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Low clouds covered most of the southern half of the state early today with clear skies reported over northern and western sections. The only precipitation reported was in the form of light drizzle in the Valley and some light showers that were actually in the Gulf of Mexico off the lower Texas coast.

Early morning temperatures were in the 30s and 40s over northern and western sections and in the 50s and lower 60s in southern sections of the state. Extremes ranged from 35 at Amarillo to 67 at Brownsville.

Forecasts called for partly cloudy to cloudy skies statewide with a chance of rain or drizzle in South Texas. Highs were to be mostly in the 70s, ranging from the 60s in North Texas to the lower 80s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Lows tonight will be in the upper 30s in the mountains, the 40s and 50s over most of the state and in the 60s in extreme South Texas. Highs Thursday will be mostly in the 70s, ranging from the upper 60s in the Panhandle to around 80 in southern portions of the state.

NATION

Snow spread through the mountains from California to Montana today and rain pelted the Pacific Coast, while snowshowers were scattered from New England into the nation's midsection.

A storm warning for heavy snow extended over the mountains of northeast California and the Sierra Nevadas of eastern California.

Rain was scattered along the northern and central Pacific Coast. Snow spread over the mountains of northern California, northeast Nevada, eastern Idaho and western Montana.

Bulldogs hang on for win

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

"I think the difference between this year and last year is last year we let a couple of these games get away from us. This year we're aware of a few of the adversities," said Midland High catcher Greg Hatcher after the Bulldogs watched a seven-run lead nearly disappear Tuesday in a 10-9 victory over Lubbock Coronado.

Leading 10-3 going into the top of the seventh and final inning, Bulldog starting pitcher Michael Gonzales felt the sting of the Mustangs' rally when he lost the control that saw him through 6⅓ innings. When he left the game for reliever Paul "Bullet" Neatherlin, the margin was 10-5 with one out and the bases loaded.

Coronado's John Johnson lead off with a double and was replaced by pinch runner Travis Neal. Lonnie Langston followed with a walk and was yanked for runner Brad Marshall. Steve Martin walked to load the bases and Randy Dietrich singled up the middle for the Mustangs' fourth run.

When, one out later, Jon Mize drew a bases loaded walk, MHS Coach Tim Whalen decided it was time to go the the bullpen. However, Coronado wasn't ready to concede.

Mike Beberniss tapped Neatherlin's first pitch down the third base line , scoring the third run of the inning.

Neatherlin then walked in a run and it was 10-7.

Jeff Fleenor brought home Mize with a sacrifce fly to right field and Johnson connected with his second double of the frame to score Beberniss. It was now 10-9, with runners on second and third with two out.

Neatherlin came up with the save when he struck out Terrell Gillespie, the fourth time the Mustang first basemen went down swinging.

As to Whalen's decision to leave Gonzales on the mound as long as he did, he said, "I went out and talked to Hatcher and he said Gonzales was still throwing hard. He wanted a complete game so I left him out there. Maybe I left him out too long. Early in the year like this, most pitchers aren't strong enough to go seven innings and they begin to realize it when this happens so they start working harder to get in better shape."

DESPITE THE scarey finish, Whalen was pleased with the victory and happy to see his team "keep battling. They're going to be playing a lot of games like this and it's good to see they don't give up."

The Bulldogs jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first inning on a Mike Stanton RBI double to left field. In the top of the third, Coronado rallied for a pair of runs on Fleenor's two-RBI double to take a brief advantage.

In the bottom half of the frame, Kenny De La Garza drove in Darren Thorpe with a single to left and walked home two batters later when Greg Hatcher sent a screaming line drive over the center field fence, his first four-bagger of the year. MHS went on to score four more runs in the fourth and two in the sixth to gain the victory.

According to Hatcher, the home run pitch was a "fastball, the kind of pitch hitters dream about really, perfect, waist high. I felt it was gone when it left the bat but I ran hard to first to make sure. It felt good. The score was 2-2 when I hit it."

"It didn't take long for the ball to clear the fence," said Whalen. "He pinged that one."

BULLDOG NOTES — Before the game, Whalen held a brief ceremony to dedicate the field to a longtime friend of the team and of the school, Galberson Zachery, who died on Christmas Eve of last year. "Mr. Zack," as he was known by many, retired from the school district last September after 20 years of service. His name will live on in the memories of his friends and will be introduced to those who never had a chance to know him each time they gaze upon the center field scoreboard...

In gaining the victory, Gonzales improved his season record to 3-0 while Neatherlin picked up his first save...

At the plate, Stanton led the way with a 3-for-3 performance for two-RBI. Thorpe, De La Garza and Hatcher each added two hits...

Today, the Bulldogs travel to Snyder for their third game in as many days...

Globetrotters bring show to Chap Center

From Staff Reports

The Harlem Globetrotters, masters of basketball and on-court comedy, will take the Chaparral Center floor 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The 1984-85 version of the Globetrotters four former Texas college players.

Jimmy Blacklock, 6-2, and Ovie Doston, 6-5, played at the University of Texas while 6-9 Lou Dunbar played at Houston and Robert "Baby Face" Paige, 7-0, is from Houston Baptist University.

The Trotters have presented their unique form of comedy basketball to more than 100 million people in 101 countries since the team was founded on Jan. 7, 1927 in Hinckley, Ill.. The team's legendary ballhandling skills evolved over a period of years, starting in the early days when they would barnstorm across the country taking on all comers. At that time, the Trotters playes "serious" basketball with little, if any comedy."

When they would take a lead over their opposition, the Trotters would dazzle the crowd with ballhandling tricks and other feats of basketball legerdemain. They realized that the fans enjoyed the tricks more than the "serious" game.

The Trotters continued to recruit the finest basketball players in the country and, year in and year out, proved themselves to be among the nation's elite teams. But, comedy became more and more a part of every game.

Today's Trotter roster includes some of the nation's finest college players, led by Hubert "Geese" Ausbie, 6-foot-5, billed as the "Clown Prince of Basketball." Rounding out the roster are Clyde "The Glide" Austin, 6-2; dribbling star Larry "Gator" Rivers, 6-1; Osborne Lockhart, 6-2; Billy Ray Hobley, 6-7; and Harold Hubbard, 6-8.

Once again, the Trotters will be facing the Washington Generals, a team that has seen an extremely limited amount of success against the Globetrotters, a team that can be defeated but not very often. In their 58-year history, the Globetrotters have lost only 332 games (5.7 losses per year).

Tickets for the Globetrotters are $7, $8 and $9 apiece at the Chap Center box office, Sears in both Midland and Odessa and at the Midland Center.

Chaps' Binns named co-MVP

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Teviin Binns, 6-9 Midland College sophomore, was named co-Most Valuable Player of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference along with Amarillo College Sophomore Andrew Kennedy.

Joining Binns on the all-WJCAC team picked by the conference coaches was teammate Vernon Coleman, a 6-2 sophomore guard.

As a result of a tie in the voting, 13 players wound up on the all-conference team.

Binns, in leading MC to its fourth first place finish in five years, led the conference with a 22.7 scoring average, 8.9 rebounds a game and 110 blocked shots.

Kennedy was largely responsible for Amarillo's 26-5 season, finishing third in scoring with 21.2 points a game and third in rebounds, 8.3.

The all-WJCAC team on the even of the eight-team Region V tournament beginning Thursday at Snyder's Scurry County Coliseum.

Midland College faces Cisco Junior College in a first round game at 9 p.m. Thursday. In other quarterfinal action, McLennan, the Northern Conference winner, squares off against New Mexico JC at noon, while Odessa College, the WJCAC runnerup, meets Texas State Technical Institute at 5 p.m. At 2 p.m., Amarillo and Grayson tangle.

The finals of the women's Region V tournament are scheduled for 7 p.m.Thursday.

If Midland wins Thursday, it will play the 9 p.m. game Friday.

MC and OC drew automatic berths into the Regional, but Amarillo beat Howard and NMJC beat NMMI Monday in the WJCAC mini-tournament to select the other qualifiers.

ODESSA'S 6-7 Dewayne Chism and 6-5 Mark Benoit were named to the all-conference team along with Steve Dailey, 6-5 Amarillo sophomore, Joe Johnson, 6-3, NMMI soph, Mike Porter, 6-4, Howard sophomore, Bruce Kimble, 6-3, Howard freshman, James Dawn, 6-5, WTC freshman, Steve Liford, 6-6, South Plains sophomore, Eddie Newell, 6-3, NMJC sophomore, and Derrick Hill, 6-8, NMJC freshman.

Rebs rally to split with Lubbock Monterey

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

After blowing a 5-0 lead in the opening game of Tuesday's doubleheader with Lubbock Monterey and tallying one hit in the first six innings of the nightcap, Midland Lee looked like it had spent its last dime.

But in Donnie Rivas, the Rebels found some spare change. Enough to pull out a four-run seventh-inning rally and give the Rebels a 4-3 win and a split for their evening's work at Angel Stadium.

The big blow came after Lee had gone down meekly to the junk-yard deliveries of Monterey's Brad Walker for six innings. Using a crafty curve and a sneaky change of pace, the left-handed Walker allowed just one hit and one walk while striking out eight Rebels prior to the seventh.

But three walks and a hit batsman into the Rebel's last at-bats, Rivas stepped to the plate and cleared the bases of the final three Lee runners with a double into the gap in left centerfield.

RIVAS, normally considered a light-hitting first baseman, also knocked in a pair of runs in the first game with a double down the third base line.

"We were kind of down on the bench," Rivas said of the pre-rally Rebel mood. "But when he (Walker) started walking us, we started to feel like we were back in it. I felt like I had to start something and this was as good a time as any."

Mike Rittenberry (2-1) picked up the win in relief of Terry Baxter although Rittenberry gave up a pair of runs in two innings work. Walker (2-1) absorbed the loss.

Perhaps the biggest mystery of the night was after Walker obviously lost his control in the seventh, Coach Bobby Moegle didn't replace him with stopper Dan Doggett, who earned the save in Game 1.

"It all happened so quick, I didn't have much time to think about it," Moegle said. "Before I knew it, the ball was into the gap and the game was over. Walker hadn't gone more than five innings all year and I wanted to stretch him out a bit. I tried to stretch him a little too far, I guess."

Rivas' game-winner stopped a season-long six-game winning streak for the high-flying Plainsmen, who left town with a 6-1 record.

Texas wins in 17th

AUSTIN (AP) — Bill Bates singled in the winning run in the bottom of the 17th inning as Texas defeated Cal-Fullerton 4-3 in the second longest baseball game in Longhorn history.

The game took five hours and six minutes to play, and matched the defending NCAA champion Titans against last year's runner-up Longhorns. Texas is now 12-3 on the 1985 season and Fullerton is 9-11-1.

What if computer malfunctioned, and...

Years ago, one of the favorite shticks of a columnist on a rainy day was to resurrect that old bromide of how, if it hadn't been for a clerical error or a sloppy scouting report, Willie Mays, Henry Aaron and Roberto Clemente might have wound up in the same outfield. I forget which one. The Giants', maybe.

It was considered horror-story stuff because, had it happened, baseball, as we know it, might have disappeared.

Baseball almost did, anyway. Ruth and Gehrig turned up in the same lineup and the cry, "Break up the Yankees!" resounded through the board rooms and the bleachers of the game.

The point was not lost on pro football and pro basketball planners, who were moved to concoct an ingenious draft system aimed at producing something called parity.

By and large, it has worked well. Which is to say that Wilt Chamberlain and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar never played in the same frontcourt, and Super Bowl teams never seemed to be able to perpetuate themselves.

BUT I BRING this up now because basketball is in the perilous position of having one franchise swallow up the game.

Through adroit coin-tossing, the Houston Rockets have been able to sign up what appear to be the two most awesome forces ever to get together in one front court – 14 feet of the most damaging scoring muscle and rebounding punch ever seen in one lineup. Not since King Kong scaled the Empire State Building has one populace been so terrified.

The Twin Towers, the press calls Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olajuwon. The Creatures That Ate Basketball may be their next appellation.

When you consider that Houston narrowly missed hanging onto Moses Malone when he declared for free agency in 1982 -- Houston matched Philadelphia's bid but Malone forced a trade and moved on anyway – you can see where the Houston Rockets would have made an Aaron-Mays-Clemente outfield look makeshift, and the 1927 Yankees and Lombardi Packers inconsistent.

Even without Malone, the new Houston front court of Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson looks like double jeopardy to most observers. If it was any other business, the government would break it up as un-Constitutional. It's like Babe Ruth being twins. Being hit with flood and blizzard at the same time. Death and taxes. Famine and Pestilence. The Two Horsemen. Murder two.

ONE IS 22, the other is 24. This racks up another article of faith of games people play. Great presences, overpowering careers, are not supposed to overlap, they're supposed to come in procession. Ruth should be going out as DiMaggio is coming in, DiMag leaving as Mickey Mantle is arriving. And even if you have Bill Walton and Abdul-Jabbar playing concurrently, you don't give them the same uniform.

The hope of the league had to be that this would be too much ego for one hat, too much talent for one position, too much bottom for one chair. After all, these were both centers, both proud men. Ralph Sampson, for instance, had spent his life in the pivot and had been all-world at the position when Olajuwon was still a soccer player.

You can imagine the delicacy with which management had to ask Sampson if he'd mind, heh-heh, just moving over a step or two to make way for this, ah, er, well, less experienced ("Flatter Ralph a little, eh, fellows?") young African.

If they got along, there goes the league.

AND THE Sampson-Olajuwon act seems, indeed, to be getting along swimmingly, like Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald. A duet made in heaven.

A nosy reporter nevertheless approached the pair in the locker room after a recent (and narrow) defeat by the Lakers in a game that had all the subtlety of mud wrestling.

The questions were artful. "Do you feel comfortable moving to a new position?" the scribe asked Sampson. Translation: "How does it feel to have to move over for a rookie, dummy? Haven't you got any pride?"

Sampson surveyed the interrogator with something less than warmth. "You've got to go play. It doesn't matter much where. The idea is to win."

The reporter was persistent. "Don't you have to make adjustments to play a new position?" Translation: "What are you, an apprentice? Why do you have to make changes? Who's the star around here anyway?"

Sampson was annoyed. "Of course you have to make changes. It's a different position, calls for different techniques."

"Is it working?" the interrogator wanted to know. Translation: "Is it too late to go back to your old position? Are you locked into being second banana? What are you gonna do, try guard next?"

Sampson just glared.

ACROSS THE room, Olajuwon was beaming as he answered questions.

Yes, he very much enjoyed matching up with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Yes, he enjoyed playing basketball. Sure, center was fun. The travel was fun. Life was fun.

"Are you glad you didn't have to learn a new position?" the trouble-maker interjected.

Olajuwon just grinned.

"Don't you feel you two guys will dominate the boards in this game for years to come?" Translation: "Patrick Ewing, where are you? Hurry up and get in this league!"

Quad Cities Open rejected

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. (AP) — The cash-starved Quad Cities Open golf tournament, hoping for a bailout from the state of Illinois and area communities, has found support for extra financing from this city's trustees. But the tourney was rejected by the East Moline City Council.

The Rock Island City Council voted 5-1 Monday to donate $7,500 from a city hotel-motel tax to the Professional Golf Association tournament, which says it needs to boost this year's purse to $300,000 from last year's $200,000 to remain a viable PGA-sanctioned stop on the summer tour.

Like Flutie, big bonus won Otto

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The story sounds familiar.

A big-time college star is approached by a new league, romanced with a fat contract and turns his back on the established National Football League to sign with the new guys.

Doug Flutie, right?

Right ... and Otto Graham, too.

More than 40 years ago, Graham was a hotshot tailback at Northwestern University. He was drafted by the Detroit Lions but World War II had the first option on his services.

"I never heard a word from the Lions during the war," Graham said. "I was at the Glenview Naval Air Station making $75 a month as a cadet. Paul Brown was at Great Lakes."

Brown had coached at Ohio State during Graham's Northwestern days. He knew the young man's potential. "Paul approached me and told me about a new league, the All America Football Conference, that was forming after the war," Graham said. "He offered me a $1,000 bonus to sign right then and a two-year playing contract at $7,500 a year.

"The real clincher was when he said, 'As long as the war lasts, I'll send you a check for $250 a month.'

"Now, when you're making $75 a month ..."

IT WASN'T exactly Flutie's $7 million United States Football League deal, but for the time, it was big bucks. And that was how Graham wound up with the Cleveland Browns.

Cleveland was the class of the AAFC and its champion for four straight years with stars like Graham, Dub Jones, Mac Speedie, Lou Groza and Marion Motley. Then, in 1950, the league was absorbed by the NFL, and Commissioner Bert Bell decided the hotshot Browns would open against the NFL champion Philadelphia Eagles.

"We were on a mission," Graham said. "We wanted to show that we were as good as they were. We'd have played them anywhere for a keg of beer or a round of milkshakes. Nobody was more ready."

The Browns won 35-10.

"And," Graham is fond of reminding listeners, "we had two more touchdowns called back."

It was the birth of a dynasty. That season, their first in the NFL, the Browns finished 10-2, beat the New York Giants in a playoff game to win the American Conference title and then won the NFL championship with a 30-28 victory over the Los Angeles Rams — who had forsaken Cleveland for sunny southern California four years earlier.

For each of their first six years in the league, the Browns played for the title and won three of them. That gave the team and Graham, their single-wing quarterback, 10 straight championship games, a remarkable accomplishment.

PAUL BROWN was the architect but there were times when Graham hated the old man. Once when his pocket protection broke down, the quarterback started to run. On the next series, George Ratterman replaced him.

"Then Paul said to an assistant, loud enough for me to hear, 'At least now we've got a quarterback in there with the guts to stay in the pocket.'

"I was so mad if I had a gun, I'd have shot him. But the next time I went out there, I didn't care if I got my head torn off — I stayed in the pocket."

Baylor probe leads to automobile loans

DALLAS (AP) — Two Dallas high school basketball stars obtained cars with loans from a Waco bank headed by a Baylor booster soon after they signed with Baylor University in 1983 and 1984, the Dallas Times Herald reported Tuesday.

Michael Williams and DeWayne Brown obtained loans with significantly smaller payments during the school year than during the summer, the newspaper said.

National Collegiate Athletic Association rules prohibit a school's staff member or representative of its athletic interests from arranging loans for prospective student-athletes prior to completion of their senior year in high school, said David Berst, the NCAA's director of enforcement.

The cars were purchased from Dallas auto dealerships with loans from Westview National Bank of Waco less than a month after Williams and Brown signed national letters of intent to play at Baylor, in April 1983 and April 1984, the Times Herald said.

The bank officer who handled both loans, William Martin, told the newspaper he was instructed to work with the players' families by bank president Smith Thomasson, a Baylor alumnus and friend of basketball Coach Jim Haller.

Haller resigned Feb. 22 after admitting to school officials that he gave a reserve center, John Wheeler of Dallas, a university check for $172 to make three monthly car payments.

Haller told the Times Herald he did not remember whether or not he directed Williams and Brown to the Waco bank, now known as the United Bank of Waco.

Thomasson said his bank tries to help "all Baylor students, not just athletes, with their financial needs.

USFL expands instant replay

From Wire Reports

FOOTBALL—The USFL will expand its use of instant replay to appeal officials' calls to all games televised by ESPN or ABC. Until now, the replay appeal, which is limited to calls involving pass completions, fumbles, or a ball carrier's progress at the goal line, has been used only in the Sunday game televised nationally by ABC. There have been three appeals in two games and three more in two exhibition games — with USFL supervisor of officials Cal Lepore upholding the game officials in all...

Players want formal letter

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Negotiators for the Major League Players Association have asked for a formal letter from management detailing what baseball owners claim are the game's serious financial problems.

In the first of a series of meetings which will take the two sides through spring training sites in Florida, Arizona and California, management repeated its concern for the game's financial well-being. The theme was first sounded a week ago when the owners called upon the union for help in dealing with what they view as an economic crisis.

"What we indicated today in mulling over last week is there is no question the players are skeptical," said Don Fehr, acting executive director of the union. "There is a lot of history there and some difficulty understanding what they are talking about."

The players asked the owners to outline their problems in letter form and Lee MacPhail, president of the Player Relations Committee, said management would try to have the document ready for the next bargaining session in Orlando next Tuesday.

"We would like in writing what it is they want us to understand and consider and what they want to demonstrate," Fehr said. "I'm trying to get an understanding of what they're talking about. So far it's a very general statement of 'financial problems.' Hopefully, they will provide a statement as specifically as they can."

Brown charges expand to pot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Football Hall of Famer Jim Brown and a female companion allegedly were drinking and smoking marijuana before he allegedly beat and choked a 33-year-old teacher to force her to have sex with him and the woman, a police report says.

"You're not going anywhere," Brown told the teacher, according to a report filed in Municipal Court in support of a search warrant to comb Brown's Hollywood Hills home, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported Tuesday.

The teacher told police that Brown, 49, hit her in the eyes, nose and stomach, and when she told Brown to stop, he became more agitated and continued to strike her, the report said.

The former Cleveland Browns halfback was booked Feb. 19 for investigation of rape and sexual battery. He is free on $17,500 bail. Carol Moses, 22, was booked for investigation of sexual battery and is free on $1,000 bail.

Neither has been charged in the case. A district attorney's office spokesman has said the office will decide this week on filing charges.

An attorney for Brown told the Herald Examiner he had no comment on the case, but Brown and Ms. Moses have maintained they will be vindicated.

The newspaper also said court documents indicated that blood-stained paper towels were found at Brown's house the day after the arrest.

"The victim used towels, toilet paper, paper towels and tissues to wipe up blood from her injuries," a police detective said in a sworn affidavit.

Chaparral netters just miss stunning upset

From Staff Reports

SAN DIEGO — The Midland College mens tennis team took on San Diego State University here Tuesday and came within one match of pulling off a major upset before finally losing, 5-4.

Chaparrals Brad Bailey and John McCauley accounted for three of their team's victories. Bailey, playing No. 3 singles, defeated SDSU's Jim Kellogg, 6-4, 7-6 and McCauley knocked off Glen Stephens, 6-4, 1-6, 6-3.

The two MC netters then teamed up in doubles to defeat Donny Young and Julio Noriega, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. The fourth Chap victory came from Emil Bijleveld, who rallied from a 5-2 deficit in the third set to claim a 6-1, 4-6, 7-5 victory.

Andy Bruner, playing No. 6 singles, nearly came up with the winning match, taking San Diego's Larry Lindsey to the wire in both sets before losing, 7-5, 7-6.

In other matches, Sean Strickling lost to Ian McLaughlin, 6-1, 7

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, March 7, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Illusion and glamour play a key role in your career and financial success. Keep your image shiny-bright. A family member provides valuable suggestions. Listen carefully. Your powers of persuasion are at an all-time high in October and November. Be patient and loved one will come around. Travel is fine so long as you keep expenses within reasonable limits. Entertain at home. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: naturalist Luther Burbank, actor James Broderick, Cleveland Indians slugger Joe Carter, Oakland A's Jeff Burroughs, auto racing's Janet Guthrie, Atlanta Braves speedster Albert Hall, football's Lynn Swann, Franco Harris and Billy Joe DuPree.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your intuition serves you well in business and finance. A job-seeking friend gives you a lead on new business. A period of meditation gives you several bright ideas!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spend more time and money on sharpening your skills and developing a special talent. You make rapid progress once you stop scattering your forces. Romance looks bright. Take mate into your confidence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those in the arts prosper now. Buying and reselling goods boost your income. Make intelligent concessions and a long-held dream will come true in the near future.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Those in sales, computer science and the arts have great luck today. Regular exercise will keep you in top shape both physically and mentally. A romance with a Virgo deserves further consideration.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Find a quiet place where you can work alone and you accomplish wonders. Partner gives you every opportunity to make good on a promise. A job offer is in the wind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A friend helps you resurrect an old project. New profits are possible. Plan a trip very carefully for the best results. A change in lifestyle will help romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Shun both unproductive ventures and negative people. A long-term relationship improves when you act in a positive manner. Make amends to someone you may have neglected recently. Romance heats up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Now is the time to travel or take advantage of a new financial opportunity. A Leo plays a major role in your professional or personal life. Romance thrives. Confide your hopes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A hobby could become a source of income. Students feel more motivated than in the past. A temporary setback could teach an important lesson. A platonic relationship brings lasting benefits.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Making a tough decision will bring both short-term and long-range financial benefits. Put all of your energies into new projects. Share the credit and you gain widespread support.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Bonuses or perks may be less than expected. Do not commit yourself to a project until you know how much it is going to cost you!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Foreign travel will help business. You need to make a choice where romance is concerned. Those in seasonal businesses reap higher profits when they diversify. Investigate new products and services.

The purpose of a crossruff is usually to allow you to single in your low trumps. But be sure to count your tricks before you proceed along such a line.

North-South bid reasonably well to reach the only game that stood a chance — four hearts on the Moysian 4-3 fit. When you are defending against two hands that are clearly distributional, it is often a sound tactic to lead trumps. Here, though, West feared that a trump lead would blow a trick, so he attacked with the ace of spades. East signaled enthusiastically with the nine, so West continued the suit, won in dummy with the king.

Declarer had four tricks outside the trump suit, so he needed only six trump tricks to make his game. He succeeded in collecting them with the minimum of risk. After cashing the ace-king of diamonds, he ruffed a diamond with his low trump. Next came the ace of clubs and a club ruff with dummy's low trump. Once those two ruffs stood up, the contract was safe regardless of the distribution or the location of the jack of trumps.

Declarer ruffed two spades in hand and a club on the board with the king, queen and ace of trumps, in that order. That brought his trick total to nine and he still had the ten of trumps in hand and the nine in dummy. It didn't even matter which hand had the lead — all declarer needed to do was lead a plain suit and ruff in one hand or the other. Either the ruff would stand up for the fulfilling trick or, if a defender overruffed, declarer's remaining trump would be promoted to the tenth trick.

Successful Mexican rock singer has 'piece of the rock'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Making his weight an asset, entertainer Vitorino has become a classic overnight success story here with the motto "158 Kilograms (348 pounds) of Rock."

He made his debut in November, but already his songs are heard frequently on the radio and he appears on the major television programs in Mexico.

Vitorino, whose style is similar to such 1950s stars as Bill Haley and the Comets, claims he is the first purveyor of authentically Mexican rock music.

"My secret has been the creation of a new sound, without imitating anyone. Something really ours, since never before has anyone made Mexican rock which would respect our roots," he said in an interview with The Associated Press.

However, his publicity concentrates on his figure as much as his music. The title of his first record is "150 Kilos of Rock."

"Whatever Vitorino has in weight, he also has as a good singer and composer," the specialized "Musical Notes" magazine wrote in its latest edition. Others have compared him to Fats Domino or Barry White.

Vitorino himself recognizes that overeating is a disease that must be cured. He has formed a group called "Gluttons Anonymous," which first was considered a joke but now has more than 50 members.

"Jokes about my figure don't concern me. They never have bothered me. The only thing that interest me is my music," the 35-year-old entertainer said.

He plans to take his act abroad soon, traveling to Costa Rica, Panama, Peru, Ecuador and, at the end of March, to Dallas.

Vitorino insisted that, "Before me, all rock that was heard here was aggressive and protest music. Mine is simple, natural, spontaneous, addressing only trivial things."

Unlike the majority of singers of what is called "modern music" here, Vitorino has little respect for such famous American entertainers as Prince and Michael Jackson, who are extremely popular in Mexico.

"They're too elaborate, artifical and are good only because of their productions," he said.

Vitorino generally wears sequined costumes.

He made previous attempts to break into show business here, but never was successful and spent most of his time developing a used car business instead. He first record finally came out in November and was a quick hit.

The new star has been earning good reviews as well as record sales.

"Overnight, he has given a good bath and an example to many rockers who have spent several years wanting to make good rock in Spanish and, however, have not been able to make any headway in the taste of the majority," musical critic Leopoldo Guerrero has said.

Among his songs are "No te voy a rogar," or "I'm Not Going to Beg"; "Somos rockers," "We are Rockers," and "Es el rock y escuchen," — "It's Rock, and Listen."

Billy Carter doesn't mind gas station not part of historic site

Billy Carter

WAYCROSS, Ga. (AP) — Billy Carter, whose service station in Plains, Ga., once was a tourist attraction, said Tuesday he doesn't mind that it's been passed over by planners of a national historic site to honor his brother, former President Jimmy Carter.

"It don't bother me a bit," the younger Carter said. "I live in Waycross now. Plains don't bother me at all."

The plan for the Jimmy Carter National Historic Site includes preserving the facade of the hospital where the 39th president was born, the small home where he grew up, Plains High School, the railroad depot that was his campaign headquarters and the ranch-style home in which he now lives.

The wooden service station with two gasoline pumps, which is located near the depot, drew national attention in 1976 when Billy Carter held court there, drinking beer and talking to reporters.

Now, says the younger Carter, who is vice president of a Waycross mobile home manufacturing company, "I don't care if they bulldoze the whole town."

Peter Pulitzer

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A judge has ordered publishing heir Peter Pulitzer to pay his former wife's divorce lawyers $26,000, ruling their claims for $12,000 more were unjustified.

The lawyers represented Roxanne Pulitzer in failed efforts to have the settlement in her 1982 divorce modified on appeal.

Lawyers Melvyn Frumkes and Cynthia Greene sent Pulitzer a bill for $38,000 for their work during the proceedings, which lasted nearly two years.

Circuit Judge R. William Rutter said Monday the demand was too high "in view of the non-noteworthy issues, the poor result, excessive time...and hourly rates" charged by Frumkes, who testified that he receives $250 an hour for divorce cases. Rutter ordered Pulitzer, 54, to pay the lawyers $26,000.

Alimony of $2,000 a month for 24 months ran out in December 1984. Ms. Pulitzer, now 33, contended she was entitled to half of the $7.3 million in assets the couple accumulated during their seven years of marriage.

Her lawyers contended she was entitled to extended alimony payments because the couple had briefly resumed their relationship last year.

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner called it "a great night," as he and about 1,000 others, many sporting Braves caps, joined in a $75-a-ticket benefit gala movie premiere of Neil Simon's "The Slugger's Wife."

Michael O'Keefe, who plays a Braves slugger, donned the war bonnet of the team's mascot, Chief Noc-a-Homa, while co-star Rebecca De Mornay wore a team cap, as they posed for pictures.

The gala raised more than $50,000 for an arts endowment campaign, an organizer said.

The film, depicting the star-crossed marriage between the ballplayer and a rock singer, was filmed in Atlanta last summer.

Simon acknowledged difficulties in the production but said the finished product was reasonably true to his screenplay.

"You give up some things and you get some things and if you come out even, you're lucky," he said.

JERUSALEM (AP) — When Israeli Energy Minister Moshe Shahal flew home from Cairo last week after talks with Egypt's president, his suitcase went to New York.

"Even when we try to do things without the Americans, they always manage to become involved," Shahal quipped, according to a report Tuesday in the newspaper Yediot Ahronoth.

Shahal flew back to Tel Aviv last Thursday after talks with President Hosni Mubarak about the Egyptian leader's proposals for new Middle East peace talks.

Godwin wants elected education board

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A bill that would replace the currently appointed 15-member State Board of Education with a 27-member elected board has been introduced by Rep. Kelly Godwin, R-Odessa.

House Bill 1124 would reverse the method for choosing members to the SBOE back to a 27-member board, which had been in place before passage of House Bill 72 during a special legislative session last summer.

The proposed bill specifies the existing appointed board's term would end in 1987, rather than 1989, with the members being elected during the November 1986 general election.

Also, the proposed bill would require that one-third of the members serve two-year terms, expiring Jan. 1, 1989; one third would serve four-year terms expiring Jan. 1, 1991; and one third would serve six-year terms expiring Jan. 1, 1993. Members would draw lots to determine who would serve terms of two, four or six years.

Under House Bill 72, 15 members were appointed by Gov. Mark White, thus eliminating the 27-member board that had been elected from the 27 congressional districts.

"I believe this (HB 1124) provides more equitable representation for all regions of the state," said Godwin. "By electing these officials, the people participate directly in the election process. I view this as providing more equal control over the acts of school boards."

Godwin added, "Based on Congressional Districts, I think the school boards will continue to reflect the population shifts of the people of Texas."

Opponents of HB 72 have expressed disappointment that an appointed SBOE does not equally represent all regions of the state.

At the time of the appointments, Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees president Parker Humes said he was "disappointed that we in the Permian Basin will not have a representative on the board."

MISD trustee Ronald A. Britton also said, "The entire education bill was a very poor one and part of that is the selection of the 15-member board. I hate to see our State Board of Education become a political football and be taken out of the hands of elected officials."

Katherine Pearcy Raines of Cleburne, who represents District 14 on the current board, said of the proposed bill, "The will of the people should prevail." District 14 encompasses all of Midland County.

She added, however, "I believe that people are getting excellent representation from this board. I feel that we have West Texas as well as rural, agricultural, urban and other areas of the state well represented.

"I understand that people would like someone who is close, but I'm only a phone call away. This board does lean, whenever possible, toward local control of the school. But the bill (HB 72) is very specific in what the State Board of Education shall or shall not do," she said.

Montford bill would mandate scoliosis testing

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Midland's schools will be provided with a mandatory screening program for scoliosis (curvature of the spine) in children if legislation proposed by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, is approved.

"Senate Bill 373 provides for the Texas Department of Health and State Board of Health to develop a screening program for children in grades six through 10 in public and private schools," said Jimmy Rodman, Montford's aide.

The bill will try to coordinate the program with other health screening programs and provide technical assistance to school districts, state agencies and volunteer organizations in developing screening programs, said Rodman.

Currently, the bill would primarily affect Midland's private schools.

"We've been doing scoliosis screening for the last two years," said Ron Hunt, coordinator of health and nurses for the Midland Independent School District.

Hunt, who taught kinesiology, the study of human muscular movements, at Texas A&I for 20 years before coming to Midland, is a strong supporter of the screening programs.

"Scoliosis is a pet peeve of mine," he said. "If we have a proper physical education and health program, then we can eliminate a lot of the 'marginal' cases. I believe it's just as important as screening for hearing and visual (problems)."

Currently, MISD screens school children from grades four through nine," said Hunt. "We're trying to get all of the youngsters before the fourth, fifth and sixth grades. Last year, we screened those three grades and this year we are working on the eighth and ninth grades and continuing on the fifth grade.

"Many physicians say that there's not much of a problem before the fourth grade," said Hunt. "The fifth grade is kind of awkward, but the seventh grade is when you want to catch it. The ninth grade is the 'last shot.' "

"I'm really pushing this because of my health background," he said.

Hunt indicated that more staff would be necessary if SB 373 is approved.

"If it is passed, it would put us in a crunch," he said. "We're taxed to the maximum right now. We really get the mileage out of our nurses."

The examinations are lengthy, said Hunt, and require the children be taken out of the classroom for the screening.

"It does take a lot of time," he said. "We take the children out of their P.E. class to check them. They stand in front of a screen and bend over next to a wall with lines on it. We look at the shoulders and hips, backside, neck and, on the boys, the nipples.

"The Texas Nurses Association has really been pushing for the screening and we have been doing it religiously," he said.

Although MISD already has the program, area private schools do not.

Odessa council alters liability provision

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — City council members in special session late Tuesday moved to preserve the city's liability insurance coverage under a contract with the Texas Municipal League.

City attorney Joel Roberts informed council members he had received a letter from TML insurance fund general counsel David LaBrec, advising that if Odessa voters approve lengthening the liability notification period he would be forced to recommend the fund's board of trustees void the city's interlocal agreement.

Citing various legal precedents, LaBrec suggested the Odessa Council modify the proposed charter revision amendment to shorten the notification of liability period from 120 days to 60 days.

LaBrec proposed council members consider adopting an ordinance already in use by many TML members.

According to LaBrec, the suggested Notice of Claim ordinance provides the fund "an opportunity for investigation, and allows (time) to adjust differences and settle claims without resort to litigation."

The purpose of shortening claim notice time, he said, is not to defeat legitimate claims, but to protect against spurious claims.

"If the claim is not just and litigation becomes necessary," said LaBrec, "such notice provisions enable the city to get factual proof...before witnesses scatter and while facts are fresh in their minds."

Council members voted unanimously to accept the TML recommendation, dropping the proposed revision that would have extended the claim notice period to 120 days, thus deleting the proposal from the list of propositions voters will be asked to consider April 6.

Of the remaining proposed charter revisions, Propositions 5 and 6 provide initial motivation for the calling of a charter revision election, which will be held the same day as regular municipal elections.

Proposition 5 calls for revision of the charter provision on recalling elected city officials. The revision stemmed from an unsuccessful effort to recall Mayor John Minor about a month and a half after he was elected in April 1984.

The charter required that 50 percent of all the persons signing the recall petition certify that they voted for the person to be recalled. The wording of the existing provision makes recall impossible.

The proposed revision may not be much of an improvement, if simplification of the recall procedure was the council's goal.

To recall the mayor or an at-large council member under the proposed charter revision, "the petition must be signed by at least 50 percent of the number of votes cast at the last regular municipal election for that office which is the subject of the petition, but in no event shall the number be less that seven thousand five hundred (7,500) for the mayor and council member-at-large and not less than two thousand (2,000) for any other (single district) council member."

In the April 1984 mayor's race between Bob Bryant and John Minor a total of 8,152 votes were cast.

Under the proposed charter amendment, a recall petition would have to contain the signatures of 92 percent (7,500) of all those who voted for either Bryant or Minor.

In the District 1 council race, in which Thomas Perkins won a second term, it appears no recall would be possible since less than 2,000 votes were cast for the three candidates. Total votes cast for Perkins, David Narbaez and David Godoy was only 1,571.

Proposition 6 on the April 6 ballot is sometimes referred to as the "Perkins' Amendment."

The new charter proposal sets forth attendance requirements for Odessa's mayor and council members.

The proposal stipulates that should the mayor or any council member miss 50 percent of the regular city council meetings for any six-month period the council shall declare the office vacant and fill the vacancy as soon as possible.

Initially, council members had discussed setting a limit of three meetings consecutively missed, without valid reason, as grounds for removal. This was tempered in subsequent sessions.

Under state statutes governing general law cities, that is non-home-rule cities, the number of missed meetings allowed for council members or aldermen is three, after which time the mayor is required to declare the position vacant.

Perkins' absence for about six months after his re-election prompted the call for an attendance provision.

Perkins, a U.S. Army reserve office, accepted an active duty assignment in the Washington D.C. area.

Midland Realtor files petition for bankruptcy

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland Realtor Charlie Linebarger filed for bankruptcy this week just as State Savings & Loan Association of Dallas was to foreclose on the Mesa Verde Shopping Center.

Linebarger, who holds the second lien on the center, said he voluntarily petitioned for bankruptcy under the U.S. Bankruptcy Act's Chapter 11 for reorganization. Otherwise, Linebarger said he stood to lose about a quarter of a million dollars which he said Midland developer Gordon Dwayne Casbeer owes him.

Mesa Verde, owned by Casbeer, has a market value of $2.9 million but is indebted to State Savings, the first lien holder, for $2.6 million. Casbeer had borrowed $2.4 million from State Savings to finance the center's construction.

"This (bankruptcy) is going to protect me and give me time to sell the center," Linebarger said Tuesday. "He (Casbeer) is the debtor, and I'm the one catching the bullet," he said.

Linebarger said he is "current" in paying his bills and will be paying "dollar for dollar" on his debts. "We're cash flowing every month," he said.

More charges to be filed in indecency case

From Staff Reports

Additional charges are expected to be filed against a 62-year-old Midland man charged Monday with indecency with a child by sexual contact after sheriff's officers raided his southside trailer house and confiscated a number of allegedly pornographic photos of Midland children.

Carroll "Curly" Pullin, of Westgate Mobile Home Park, remained in Midland County Jail this morning on a $100,000 bond, according to sheriff's officers. Investigator Sue Rudie confirmed the confiscated material consisted of photographs, not videotapes, but declined to comment on the number of photos seized or who was pictured.

According to reports, the photos were of children, but Lt. Roy Harrison said he could not discuss how many were involved or their ages.

"We don't believe there is going to be anyone (adult) else involved, at least in Midland County," Ms. Rudie said.

Many Midlanders support horse-racing legislation

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Betting on the ponies will no longer be limited to SMU football fans if a bill to legalize gambling on horse racing passes the Legislature. Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, has predicted the bill will pass this session, and that's just fine with two-thirds of the 15 randomly selected Midlanders polled Tuesday on the issue by the Reporter-Telegram.

"It's a good idea," said John Mulcahey, Route 14, a roughneck. "It'll sure raise money if they do it right."

The Legislature should pass the law "so we can keep all those dollars out of New Mexico and Louisiana," said paper salesman Jim Brookman, 4804 Storey. "There are more cars parked at Louisiana Downs from Texas than from Louisiana."

Diverting Texan dollars from the state coffers of New Mexico, Louisiana and Chihuahua, Mexico, seemed to be the main motivation for those who support the bill's passage.

"We have a deficit and that's a pretty good way" to reduce it, said Carolyn Schoolcraft, 410 N. Weatherford, a bookkeeper. "People are going to do it anyway so we might as well get the taxes."

"They go over there (to Juarez) in droves," said Troy Long, 1708 Belmont, a retiree who added that he didn't bet the ponies himself, but respected other peoples' right to do it.

"I wouldn't spend a dime on any

J. Mulcahey

K. Smith

J. Hopper

J. Mitchell

of them myself," he said, "But a person ought to be able to do what he wants to."

But most people were more interested in the tax benefits than in protecting people's right to gamble. For Kathy Smith, a secretary who preferred not to give her address, the added income outweighs the possible bad effects of legalized gambling.

"It's a substantial amount," she said, while conceding that "there are some very bad facets" such as a possible influx of organized crime.

"But I feel Texas has the law-enforcement agencies to cope with it," she said.

For Jack Hopper, P.O. Drawer 2696, who's in the oil and real estate business, the law should be passed, "Because people are going to bet anyhow."

"The churches are against it," Hopper noted, and the Rev. Johnny A. Mitchell, 303 E. Maple, proved his point.

"I think it's immoral," said the Baptist minister. "I used to be a gambler — gambling's bad."

But Mitchell thinks the law will pass, "Because that's the way the times are."

William Davis, 916 E. Pearl, also opposes the bill. He doesn't think the added revenues are worth the cost.

"I think it will bring in a lot of criminal elements," said the independent businessman. "The loss of life, the lost youth will outweigh any revenue we could get."

"I don't think we need it," said Don Helm, 2307 Castleford, vice president of engineering for an oil company. "I don't think it'll be that beneficial to the state."

But not everyone discusses the issue in terms of added revenue or lessened moral climate. Terri Folger, Route 11, Box 11226, a Texas Oil and Gas employee, supports the bill for a more personal reason:

"I like to go to horse races."

Jury awards ginner $316,447 in damages

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A federal jury in Midland has awarded J.C. "Smoky" Greenhaw, a Lenorah ginner and cotton trader, $316,447 after it found Dallas stockbroker Charles Dennis Scott did unauthorized trading on Greenhaw's accounts, violated federal securities laws and the Commodity Exchange Act, and breached a fiduciary duty.

Defendants in the suit were Scott, an account executive for the brokerage house of Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Cooper, Scott's wife, Margaret, also a stockbroker, and the brokerage house.

"He (Scott) was a hot shot at Merrill Lynch," said Midland lawyer David Greenhaw, who represented his father in the lawsuit. "He was the largest cotton broker for Merrill Lynch in the world."

Greenhaw said the Midland offices of Merrill Lynch were not involved in the suit or in the Greenhaw-Scott dispute.

Greenhaw said he had "not one complaint, not one thing bad" to say about Merrill Lynch-Midland.

Greenhaw said Scott was such a prominent person at Merrill Lynch that management there "trusted him" and failed to supervise him.

He said Scott, who earned about $300,000 annually in commissions, made the unauthorized trades primarily to increase his commissions.

The jury awarded Greenhaw $62,622 and the Smoky Greenhaw Cotton Co. $253,825. Of the $316,447 in damages, $125,000 was in punitive damages, according to court records.

In rendering its verdict, the jury determined that neither Greenhaw nor his cotton company had waived claims against Scott and Merrill Lynch.

Court records indicated that Greenhaw opened two trading accounts with Merrill Lynch in December 1980 and filed suit against Scott and the brokerage house after Merrill Lynch refused to reimburse Greenhaw for his losses.

Merrill Lynch had wanted to settle the controversy in arbitration but Greenhaw petitioned for a jury trial.

Greenhaw claimed Scott fraudulently used funds from his securities account for unauthorized trading in Greenhaw's commodities account.

Greenhaw, who operates the gin at Lenorah about 30 miles northeast of Midland, buys cotton for resale, uses cotton futures to hedge purchases, and speculates on the future price of cotton.

House sends president farm credit legislation

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In the face of a strong veto threat, the House Tuesday approved and sent to the president a Senate-passed emergency farm credit bill intended to throw a lifeline to cash-short farmers.

The 255-168 vote indicated the House lacks the muscle to overturn a presidential veto. If all members were present and voting, a veto override would require 290 votes. Last week the Senate passed the bill by 63-35, also short of the 66 votes necessary to override.

Bolstered by visiting delegations of troubled farmers and bankers, the House last week approved its own version of the emergency legislation 318-103.

All of the Texas House Democrats voted for the bill and all but one of the state's Republicans — Rep. Mac Sweeney of Victoria — voted against it.

House Agriculture Committee chairman E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Mission, said the House measure had features he would have liked to include, but he took up the Senate's bill to avoid delay in merging the differing versions.

"I hope the president will agree, in a spirit of compromise, that it makes sense to sign this bill into law," de la Garza said. He denied administration claims that it is a "budget-busting bill" and said the cost can be handled "within the framework of our overall budget-reducing targets."

At a House hearing Tuesday, dejected farmers pleaded for a chance to hang onto their land with the help of expanded government-backed loans.

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, chairing the hearing at one point, said farmers are willing to take their fair share of cuts but the administration wants to trim agriculture by 50 percent in the next three years, "and we would still have a $143 billion deficit."

Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, said he voted against the aid package because the administration last fall made available $650 million in additional loan guarantees "to assist credit-strapped farmers and ranchers and agricultural renters."

"In addition," Loeffler said, "the administration has exercised forbearance on individual loans and additional personnel have been ordered by the Department of Agricultue to assist in this difficult time for agriculture."

Also, Loeffler noted, the president and Agriculture Secretary John Block have promised to ask for additional funds if existing loans and loan guarantees prove to be inadequate.

Witnesses at Tuesday's hearings said very few farmers qualified for loans from the $650 million pool.

Ex-commissioner says promise netted contract

AUSTIN (AP) — A former state water commissioner says he landed a $9,950 consulting contract from state government due to a promise made by Gov. Mark White when he eased the man off the Texas Water Commission in 1983, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

The contract was $50 below the $10,000 level that would trigger a requirement for competitive bidding.

The newspaper quoted former Water Commissioner John Stover as saying he received the contract because of White's promise "to help any way he could" after Stover resigned his water post to allow White to appoint a new commissioner.

"I was following up on (White's) offer to help," Stover told the newspaper.

"I told him I needed some business. I was looking for work, and this seemed to be the only way to go about it," Stover said.

For the $9,950, Stover wrote a report on water and sewage issues. The 23-page narrative contained information "readily available from the Texas Department of Water Resources and federal agencies," the American-Statesman said.

The newspaper said White denied awarding the contract to Stover for his resignation, to fulfill any promise to him or to ease Stover's transition to private life. The governor's press office had no immediate comment when asked by The Associated Press about today's newspaper report.

Police probe theft of $8,500 in jewelry

From Staff Reports

Midland police are investigating the theft of $8,500 worth of jewelry from a northside apartment.

According to Sue B. Blair, 5101 N. A St., Apt. No. 177, the jewelry was stolen at 10:30 a.m. Saturday morning. Taken were a $1,500 pair of jade and diamond earrings, $2,000 opal ring and $5,000 diamond watch.

C.N. Flournoy, 1609 E. Wadley Ave., told police his home was burglarized betwen 6:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. Monday by persons who pried open the lock of a rear door. Taken were a $700 television set, $300 stereo unit and $250 cable television converter box with remote control. Total value was $1,250.

Don Wayne Parrish, 1115 E. Maple, told police he returned home at 6 p.m. Tuesday to find a pane valued at $20 in a sliding glass door was broken. Taken from the house between 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. were $5 in pennies and two cable television converter boxes valued at $250 each. Damage to dressers, which were ransacked, was estimated at $100. Total loss was $625.

Jackie Benson, 1904-E Indiana, No. 2, told police a 13-inch portable television valued at $500 was taken Feb. 22 by someone known to her who has refused to return it.

Reginald Caul Royals, 415 E. Oak, reported his 1974 Plymouth Fury III was burglarized while parked at Milton's Records, 1405 N. Lamesa, at 7:15 p.m. Tuesday. According to reports, the car was unlocked while Royals was in the store for about three minutes. When he returned, a $150 stereo and $105 speakers were taken.

Officer testifies Port confessed to murder

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — David Port confessed to police shortly after he was arrested last June that he killed mail carrier Debora Sue Schatz, a police investigator testified today.

Homicide Sgt. David Collier of the Houston Police Department offered the testimony in a hearing on a defense motion to supress physical evidence in the case.

The defense is seeking to have thrown out all written and oral statments Port, 18, made to police.

Collier told the court that he was writing out an affidavit asking a judge for a search warrant when he got a phone call from another police officer on June 8. Collier said the officer told him Port had been arrested moments earlier.

"He advised me David Port had admitted killing the mail carrier," Collier said.

Collier's testimony came outside the presence of a nine-man, three-woman jury that was seated Tuesday to hear the case, which drew heavy publicity when Port's father and stepmother refused to testify against him before a grand jury.

Ms. Schatz, 23, disappeared last June 7 while delivering mail.

According to Harrison, investigators are questioning several children, but officers are not ready to release the ages of the children.

Pullin, a heavy machine operator, was arrested Monday evening on his way home by officers who began a week-long investigation after receiving a tip from a suspicious parent of one of the children involved, reports said. An evidentiary search warrant was used to enter his trailer home in the recreational vehicle section of the mobile home park on Interstate 20.

"It (the bankruptcy) had nothing to do with my business practices," Linebarger said. "It had to do with my trusting people I shouldn't trust. I'm just a victim of circumstances."

Linebarger's attorney, Mike Borland, said Linebarger can pay off his debts.

But he filed for bankruptcy to protect his interests in Mesa Verde should State Savings foreclose; foreclosure was impending. Midland County Court records indicate State Savings had moved for foreclosures on more than $18 million in Casbeer's Midland developments, including Mesa Verde, Liberty Square and Lone Star Plaza.

In December 1981, Linebarger and his son Dan sold Casbeer 3.2 acres at Neely Street and Midland Drive, now the site of Mesa Verde, for $525,000. Linebarger said Casbeer has paid $325,000 for that land but owes an additional $200,000 plus $65,000 in interest on the $200,000 note which Linebarger is carrying.

Mesa Verde, which has 17 commercial spaces, includes such businesses such as Zentner's Steakery and Flex Athletic Center.

Bankruptcy records in federal court here indicated that Linebarger holds $3.75 million in real property and his debts total $3 million.

Records show that Linebarger and his wife, Bobbie Jean, are doing business as Charlie Linebarger Realtors, The Linebarger Agency, Petro-Tex, C&D Rentals, Linebarger Inc., and C&K Properties.

DEATHS

TESTING

"At this point we don't have a screening program, but if it is passed, we would work with a doctor in town on it," said Eddy Lee, principal at Midland Christian School.

Other private school principals indicated they were enthusiastic about the proposed legislation.

"I would be delighted if they were screened," said Betty Sides, of Trinity School. "The Junior League does the screening for visuals and hearing right now. I don't know if they would do that as well or not."

"I would like very much if we could screen the children," said Bridgett Keene of St. Ann's School. "Right now, I have no one trained to screen, but I would really encourage it."

SB 373, however, indicates that children may not necessarily have to be examined at the school site.

"A parent or guardian would be able to substitute a professional examination for the school screening test," reads the bill. The bill also "provides that an individual would be exempt from the screening requirements if the tests conflict with the tenets and practices of a recognized church or religious denomination of which the individual is an adherent or member."

The bill is in the Health and Human Resources Committee. "We're still working on it," said Rodman.

Local builder files for place on MCHD board of directors

From Staff Reports

Gene Abbott

Gene Abbott, a former chairman of the board of trustees for Midland County Hospital District has filed as a candidate for the MCHD board of directors, according to reports.

"I was on the board of trustees for eight years," said Abbott. I think that the experience will help me while serving as a board director."

Abbott believes that changes in the health care industry will require experience to deal with.

"Things are changing so rapidly," he said. "There are a lot of challenges."

Abbott, owner of Abbott Building Co., also is director of Western Bank, chairman of the Midland Housing Authority and has been involved with the American Heart Association, Junior Achievement and the Chamber of Commerce.

He graduated from the University of Oklahoma in 1946 with a degree in civil engineering and is a registered professional engineer in the state of Texas and a licensed real estate broker. He also is licensed as a general contractor in New Mexico and Louisiana.

Final vote expected on wiretap bill tentatively OK'd by House

AUSTIN (AP) — The wiretap bill that stirred heated debate four years ago when approved as an experiment has been tentatively OK'd by the House as a permanent law.

A final vote that would send the measure to the Senate is expected today. The preliminary approval came in a non-record vote on Tuesday.

In 1981, lawmakers approved court-ordered wiretaps in drug cases. It was part of that year's war on drugs package, and the 1981 law dies Sept. 1. Rep. Terral Smith, R-Austin, said electronic eavesdropping has helped nail drug dealers and not infringed on privacy.

"The Department of Public Safety has performed admirably and there is no reason to have any sunset provision," he told the House. "It would take a conspiracy between your police chief, district attorney and (DPS Director) Col. Jim Adams to have an illegal wiretap."

Under the law, prosecutors can get a court order to tap telephones or conversations in suspected drug cases. All such requests must be cleared through the Department of Public Safety.

The Texas Civil Liberties Union has opposed the law as a potential invasion of privacy.

DPS reported it has used wiretaps in 17 investigations since September 1981, when the law went into effect. A total of 25,340 conversations were monitored, including 2,378 considered incriminating.

The wiretaps led to 164 arrests and 56 convictions, the DPS said.

Rep. Terral Smith, R-Austin, rallies tentative approval in the Texas House Tuesday to a measure continuing the use of court-ordered wiretaps to catch big-time drug dealers. AP Laserphoto

Controlled substances worth $12.7 million, 49 vehicles, 86 firearms and $140,000 in cash has been seized as a result of wiretaps, according to DPS.

Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, offered an amendment that would kill the wiretap law in September 1987 if not re-enacted by the 1987 Legislature.

"The overview (by the Legislature) has served us and the people of Texas well," she said.

But Smith said the "sunset" provision is unnecessary.

"There have been no complaints," Smith added. "Everything we have heard has been complimentary."

The House voted 86-55 to kill Ms. Danburg's amendment.

Senate OKs bill linking taxes, permits

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill that would require the comptroller to reject license or permit applications controlled by his office if a taxpayer is delinquent in payments to the state.

Senators on Tuesday also voted to increase fees for beauty shops and to require state agency financial reports that would include what the agencies have done to save money.

The Senate in a 31-0 vote approved Sen. Ed Howard's bill to require the comptroller to refuse to issue or renew a permit or license to a person who does not have a proper permit or who is delinquent in paying any tax collected by the comptroller.

Howard's bill, which goes to the House, also authorizes the comptroller to revoke or suspend any permit or license issued to a person who fails to comply with any provision of the Tax Code or Bingo Enabling Act.

The Legislative Budget Board estimated that the bill would raise nearly $2.68 million for the state over two years. When Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, asked to bring up a beauty shop bill, cries of "Oh, no" greeted him from senators mindful of past legislative battles over that industry. Traeger assured his colleagues the bill would merely raise fees, including the student permit fee from $10 to $25, which would provide money for holding examinations in cities other than Austin.

The bill was sent to the House on voice vote.

Sen. Grant Jones' bill on state agencies specifies what they should include each year in reporting to the governor, comptroller, treasurer and Legislative Budget Board. In addition to cost-cutting efforts, the reports would include how much in federal funds the agencies had earned, how much money was deposited outside the treasury and how many job positions had been filled.

The conference committee report on the bill was approved 31-0. The House approved the measure Monday, so it goes to the governor.

The Senate on Tuesday also approved and sent to the House bills that would:

— Establish a legal defense for merchants who innocently sell "abusable glue" or aerosol paint to a minor who presents a driver's license showing the minor is 17 or older.

— Extend the life of the five-member State Soil and Water Conservation Board, which was created in 1939 and underwent recent review by the Sunset Commission. The bill includes a stricter conflict-of-interest provision and changes terms on the board from five years to two.

The Senate refused to accept a House amendment to a Senate bill that would ban the for-profit sale of human organs. The amendment added "fetal tissue" to the list of body parts that could not be sold. A Senate committee was appointed to work with a House committee on the amendment.

Let's face it, at my age things can sneak up on you, and you may need some help. The electric company understands that.
That's why they'll arrange it so your bill payment can wait until your social security check arrives.
And their Special Friend Program makes sure someone doesn't overlook monthly bills. There's even a program to help provide essential energy services in a real emergency.
Right now, I don't need all this help to take care of myself. But I get a kick out of knowing it's there.

Lawmaker: Loss-sharing threatens farm credit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Sam B. Hall, D-Texas, says loss-sharing by Farm Credit System banks threatens the whole system and is unfair to states like Texas where Farm Credit banks are strong.

Hall told a news conference Tuesday that the Farm Credit Administration is pooling resources from the 37 Farm Credit System banks and shifting the money from healthy banks to troubled ones without stockholders' approval.

But Ron Erickson, a spokesman for the FCA, said the FCA only ratified the action of the FCS bank boards, who approved pooling resources because the current method of loss-sharing "usually is not triggered until it is really too late to save the troubled bank."

"What the system has agreed to do is work together earlier so the financial assistance will, in fact, cause the troubled bank to survive," Erickson said.

Federal Land Bank stockholders committee chairman Ron Neal of Rochelle, who also attended the news conference, said the new method penalizes Texas, because the amount of the contribution to a troubled bank is based on the strength of the contributing bank.

"We feel like that's penalizing the people that did the best work. We didn't think that if you do the best and become the strongest, you get to pay the most, but that's what happens," Neal said.

"I do not believe that a system that's been paid for by the prudence of the people at the grass roots level will be improved by taking it away from them," he said. "Whenever we begin to fail out there, then you might be taking it away from us, but until we fail I feel like these people should leave it with us and let us continue to do our good work."

Hall said the policy threatens to bring about "the ultimate destruction of the Farm Credit System" and accused the FCA of "misuse of authority...under the ruse of administrative simplicity and consumer convenience."

Under legislation he has introduced, Hall said, "each bank will tend to its own business. You can't get any closer to grass roots than that."

There are 37 Farm Credit System banks nationwide, overseen by the Farm Credit Administration, which is run by a board appointed by the president.

Tax-poor school districts renew court battle for funds

AUSTIN (AP) — Tax-poor school districts and a group of Mexican-American parents have renewed their court claim that Texas does not treat students in poor and wealthy school districts the same.

Eight low-wealth school districts and the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund said Tuesday that the recently passed school reform bill did not do enough to correct the inequity and asked a Travis County district court for relief.

No hearing dates were set.

"The plaintiffs in the litigation appreciate the increased funds available to low-wealth districts," said Al Kauffman, MALDEF attorney. "Unfortunately they are not sufficiently distributed or large enough to bring the finance system into line with our own state Constitution. Plaintiffs are continuing to suffer from the finance system and they will continue to fight to improve it."

The eight school districts and 24 parents of school children represented by MALDEF filed suit in May 1984 claiming the state school financing system discriminates against them because much of the financial support for schools was based on local property taxes. Poor school districts did not get as much support from taxes as other districts.

The school reform bill passed last summer included a new method of allocating state school money with a formula designed to give the poorer schools more state aid.

State Commissioner of Education W.N. Kirby told a Senate committee Monday that the new formula was based primarily on the size and density of populations in a school district but also was influenced by wages paid in adjoining districts and by the number of "disenfranchised children" in the district.

The State Board of Education has asked this Legislature to let it review the formula at the end of this school year and make changes if necessary.

The petition filed Tuesday said the revisions made by the summer special session "were supposed to sufficiently compensate for the insidious and comprehensive inequity and unconstitutionality of the system. They did not."

THE SOUP PARTY

Fun, No-Fuss Entertaining

Leave the linen tablecloth and heirloom china tucked away and pull out the casseroles, crocks and pottery dishes. A soup party, with its impromptu atmosphere, puts guests at ease and lets you join in all the fun. It's also an easy-on-the-budget way to entertain lots of friends.

Keep the set-up simple to showcase the food. Crocks, pots and baking dishes can be arranged buffet-style on counters for easy serving. Practical and colorful dish towels double as napkins. Baskets, platters, even large bowls can hold breads and rolls.

Serve soups that go from pot to bowl in less than 30 minutes. The key to streamlining preparation is the use of convenient canned broth, vegetable juice or milk in place of traditional stocks. Frozen and canned vegetables supplement long-cooking fresh varieties while keeping chopping and slicing to a minimum.

Whole kernel corn and milk, zipped up with mustard and cheddar cheese, form the base for deliciously satisfying Corn Chowder. Ground oat flour thickens this creamy soup subtly flavored with bits of smoky bacon and crisp celery.

Vegetable lovers will warm up to Italian Minestrone. This do-ahead meatless main dish soup features protein-rich kidney beans, tomatoes, frozen mixed vegetables and macaroni in an herb-seasoned stock made extra-easy with canned beef broth.

For variety, pair one or more soups with a chill-chasing stew. Chicken Barley Stew is glamorous enough for guests, but takes less than an hour from start to finish. Wholesome barley, with its chewy texture and appealing flavor, complements inexpensive fresh winter produce and chunks of chicken. For added convenience, prepare ahead and reheat just before serving.

Home-baked breads make natural companions for stews and soups. This Quick Risin' Oat Bread recipe yields two golden brown loaves with light and tender texture. Pancake syrup adds just a hint of sweetness.

Convenient pancake mix makes Easy Herb Biscuits super-simple to prepare. All you need to add are water, oil and dried herbs to give these drop biscuits a savory flavor.

Complete the menu with Homespun Apple Dumplings. Here, tart, crisp apples are filled with cinnamon, sugar and nuts. Then, they're wrapped in squares of corn meal pastry and baked until golden brown. Serve them warm with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream for a party dessert from which memories are made.

Corn Chowder

- 6 slices bacon, diced
- 1 cup sliced celery
- 1/4 cup Ground Oat Flour*
- 2 cups water
- 2 cups milk
- One 7 to 8-3/4-oz. can whole kernel corn
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- 2 cups (8 oz.) shredded cheddar cheese

In large saucepan, fry bacon until crisp; set aside. Pour off all but 2 tablespoons drippings. Saute celery in drippings; blend in oat flour. Gradually add water and milk; continue cooking over medium heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Reduce heat; add reserved bacon, corn and mustard. Continue cooking over low heat about 5 minutes or until heated through. Remove from heat; add cheese, mixing until well blended.

GROUND OAT FLOUR

1. PLACE 1/3 cup quick or old fashioned oats, uncooked, in blender or food processor.
2. COVER; blend about 1 minute, stopping occasionally to stir oats.

ABOUT SIX 1 CUP SERVINGS
APPROXIMATE COST PER SERVING: 47¢

Chicken Barley Stew

- One 28-oz. can tomatoes, undrained, cut into pieces
- 2 cups sliced celery
- 2 cups sliced carrots
- One 13-3/4-oz. can single strength chicken broth
- 1-1/4 cups water
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 cup regular barley*
- 1 tablespoon parsley flakes
- 2 teaspoons basil, crushed
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 2 cups cooked chicken or turkey, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour

In 4-qt. saucepan or Dutch oven, combine tomatoes, celery, carrots, chicken broth, 1 cup water and onion, barley, parsley, basil, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Cover; bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Reduce heat; simmer 30 minutes. Add chicken to mixture. Combine flour and remaining 1/4 cup water; stir into stew. Continue simmering about 15 minutes or until mixture is thickened and barley is tender, stirring occasionally.

NOTE: Or substitute 2/3 cup quick barley. Add barley during last 15 minutes of cooking.

EIGHT 1 CUP SERVINGS

Quick Risin' Oat Bread

- 1-1/2 cups whole wheat flour
- 1 cup quick or old fashioned oats, uncooked
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 3 pkg. active dry yeast
- 1-3/4 cups plus 1 tablespoon water
- 1/2 cup regular or lite syrup
- 1/2 cup margarine
- 3 eggs
- 3-1/2 to 4 cups all-purpose flour

Generously grease two 9 x 5-inch loaf pans. In large mixer bowl, combine whole wheat flour, oats, salt and yeast. Heat 1-3/4 cups water, syrup and margarine until very warm (120 to 130° F). Pour over oats mixture; add 2 eggs. Beat at low speed of electric mixer 1 minute. Continue beating at medium speed 2 minutes. Gradually stir in enough all-purpose flour to make a soft dough. On lightly floured surface, knead in enough remaining flour until dough becomes smooth and elastic; about 10 minutes. Place dough in large greased bowl. Cover; let rise in warm place about 45 minutes or until double in size.

Punch dough down. Divide into 2 parts; shape each into ball. Allow dough to rest, covered with inverted bowl, about 15 minutes. Shape each ball into loaf. Place in prepared pans. Cover; let rise in warm place about 1/2 hour or until double in size.

Heat oven to 375° F. Combine remaining egg and 1 tablespoon water; brush over loaves. Bake 30 to 35 minutes or until loaves sound hollow when tapped lightly. Immediately remove from pans. Cool.

2 LOAVES (18 SLICES EACH)
APPROXIMATE COST PER 1/2-INCH SLICE: 5¢

Italian Minestrone

(Not pictured)

- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 2 cups water
- One 10-oz. pkg. frozen mixed vegetables
- One 16-oz. can tomatoes, undrained, cut into pieces
- One 13-1/4-oz. can single strength beef broth
- 1/2 cup dry macaroni
- 1 tablespoon parsley flakes
- 1 teaspoon oregano, crushed
- Two 15-oz. cans red kidney beans or red beans, undrained

In 4-qt. saucepan or Dutch oven, saute onion and garlic in oil until tender. Add remaining ingredients except beans. Bring to a boil; simmer 5 minutes. Add beans; simmer 5 minutes longer or until macaroni is tender and soup is heated through.

ABOUT TEN 1 CUP SERVINGS

Homespun Apple Dumplings

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup enriched corn meal
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/3 cup plus 2 tablespoons margarine
- 1/3 cup vegetable shortening
- 1/2 cup cold water
- 1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/8 teaspoon nutmeg
- 6 medium baking apples, peeled, cored
- 3 tablespoons coarsely chopped nuts
- 1 egg, beaten

Combine flour, corn meal, sugar and salt. Cut in 1/3 cup margarine and shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add water, 1 tablespoon at a time, stirring lightly until mixture forms a ball; divide into 3 equal portions. Combine 2 portions to form 1 ball. On lightly floured surface, roll out larger ball to form 14-inch square; cut into 4 squares. Roll remaining dough into 14 x 7-inch rectangle; cut into 2 squares.

Heat oven to 400° F. Combine brown sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg. Roll apples in sugar mixture to coat, reserving remaining sugar mixture. Place 1 apple on center of each pastry square. Add nuts to remaining sugar mixture; spoon about 1 tablespoon into center of each apple. Dot each apple with 1 teaspoon margarine. Moisten corners of pastry. Bring corners of pastry to top of apple; pinch to seal, leaving corner folds open.

If desired, roll out any remaining scraps of dough; cut to form leaves for decoration. Place dumplings in 13 x 9-inch baking pan; brush with beaten egg. Bake 30 to 35 minutes or until crust is golden and apples are tender. Serve warm with sweetened whipped cream or ice cream, if desired.

Fajitas fad made skirt steak popular cut

By MERLE ELLIS

From time to time in this country, a particular cut of meat will suddenly become the rage

A cut of beef that has recently, and rather suddenly, become very fashionable is the skirt steak. The reason? A south Texas speciality called fajitas (pronounced fah-HEE-tahs).

The skirt is the diaphragm muscle of the beef animal. It is a long, narrow, thin muscle attached to both sides of the rib cage that serves to raise and lower the lungs in the breathing process. Fajita is Spanish for "little belt" or "sash," which is what the skirt steak resembles when removed from the carcass.

There are only two skirt steaks per carcass and with the rapid spread of the fajitas fad in the past couple of years a shortage has developed. To supply the growing demand for fajitas, beef packers have come up with another part of the carcass that they can sell as "skirt steak." The original skirt steaks described above are called the outside skirt in the wholesale trade. The secondary flank muscle from the interior portion of the flank on the hind-quarter, which looks and tastes very like the outside skirt, is now being merchandised as the inside skirt. However, both cuts usually are labeled skirt steak at the meat counter and most of those are inside skirts these days. These are less tender than the outside ones but can be rendered more tender by cutting diagonally across the grain of the meat first in one direction and then in the other, pounding to break down the connective tissue.

I tasted my first, and to date best, fajitas a couple of years ago in San Antonio, the city that claims to have originated the fad. But, according to Texas A&M research, fajitas originated a little farther south.

One account was given by a cowboy who worked on the famous King Ranch when cattle roundups could last three months. Usually, two to five head of cattle were slaughtered daily to feed the 70 cowboys involved. The jefes (bosses) always had first priority for la faja de adentro, the inside belt. That has come to be called fajitas.

You can do them on your range in a heavy skillet.

FAJITAS

1 beef skirt steak (about 1 to 1½ pounds)
½ cup lime juice
¼ cup tequila (optional but good)
3 or 4 cloves garlic, finely minced
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper

Cut the skirt steak into 3- to 4-inch pieces. Put the steak in a plasic bag and add the remaining ingredients. Tie the bag securely and marinate in the refrigerator for 2 to 3 hours. Drain marinade and discard. Broil steak over coals — mesquite if you want to be authentic — or pan broil in a heavy skillet over medium-high heat. Either way, cook only 2 to 3 minutes per side. Carve into thin slices across the grain. Serve on warm tortillas with your choice of assorted condiments — chopped onions, tomatoes, grated cheese, guacamole, sour cream, salsa picante, Pico de Gallo.

PICO DE GALLO

½ cup choppedgreen onions
1 serrano pepper, chopped
½ tablespoon corn oil
1 5-ounce can tomatoes with green chiles
1 large fresh tomato, chopped
2 medium avocados, chopped (optional)
Juice 1 large lemon
Salt, pepper
5 or 6 sprigs fresh cilantro, chopped (optional)

Combine all ingredients and chill at least 1 hour before serving. This may be served as a salad, appetizer or an accompaniment to fajitas.

SALSA PICANTE

2 large tomatoes
6 green chiles
3 cloves garlic
½ cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon white vinegar
1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 teaspoon cinnamon
6 sprigs cilantro, chopped fine (optional)
Salt to taste

Peel tomatoes. Roast and peel chiles; remove stems and seeds (or use canned green chiles). Grind (or blend in a food processor) tomatoes, chiles, garlic and onion together until fine. Add vinegar and spices. Store in a covered jar in the refrigerator.

Aebleskiver pan makes Danish treat

By ROSE DOSTI
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DEAR ROSE: I have inherited an aebleskiver pan but haven't the slightest idea what to do with it. Do you have a recipe for aebleskiver? —READER

DEAR READER: The Danish aebleskiver pan is a skillet with several indented compartments. Each compartment is filled with oil, and the biscuit doughnut batter is poured into them. The batter is turned constantly to bake rounded on all sides, until it is a complete well-browned sphere.

AEBLESKIVER

2 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 cups buttermilk
3 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
Oil
Strawberry preserves or syrup

Sift together flour, salt, baking soda and baking powder into bowl. Add buttermilk, egg yolks and vanilla and mix thoroughly. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into batter. Add melted butter and mix gently.

Heat aebleskiver pan over high heat. Fill each indentation about half-full with oil and heat oil. Pour about 1 tablespoon of batter into each indentation. Lower heat to medium. Turn aebleskiver often, using pointed skewer. Cook until aebleskiver are deep brown and skewer comes out clean when inserted in center. Serve hot with strawberry preserves or syrup. Batter can be refrigerated, but do not keep longer than 2 days.

Passover foods can be made vegetarian way

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

Passover is the yearly commemoration of the enslaved Jews' exodus out of Egypt and into freedom. Over the years Passover has become, in addition, a time to reflect on the need for freedom among all peoples of the world, both Jewish and Gentile.

Lasting eight days, Passover will begin this year on Saturday, April 6. The first two evenings are home holidays known as seder (meaning "order") in which Jews go through the ritual of recounting the flight from slavery.

Seder meals include a number of symbolic foods that mark important aspects of the celebration. For instance, a mixture of chopped apples, nuts and wine known as charoset symbolizes the mortar with which Jews were forced to construct buildings for the Egyptians.

Included on the seder table are a bitter herb (usually horseradish) and a container of salt water, to symbolize the bitterness of slavery and the tears of the oppressed. Another herb, parsley, celebrates the coming of springtime.

Some of the traditional Passover foods include meat, as well. But for those vegetarian Jews who would like to celebrate Passover with meatless, low-cholesterol recipes, the recently published "Vegetarian Passover Recipes II" should be of interest. Recipes include over 40 eggless dishes, including eggless matzoh brie, and information on creating a vegetarian seder plate.

"Vegetarian Passover Recipes II" is published by The Jewish Vegetarians of North America, a group that promotes the practice of vegetarianism within the Judaic tradition. A vegetarian seder, the group believes, "exemplifies the intrinsic values of Judaism: compassion for animals, concern about world hunger and ecology, and a close family atmosphere with hospitality to neighbors and friends." For your copy, send $1 to: Vegetarian Passover Recipes II, P.O. Box 1463, Baltimore, MD 21203. Send an additional $1 for "Passover Recipes I" (published in 1984).

PASSOVER BLINTZ

¾ cup matzo meal
1 small banana
4 tbsps. potato starch
1¼ cups water
4 tbsps. apple sauce (optional)

Blend all ingredients together. Pour about 7 tablespoons of batter into ligtly oiled preheated frying pan. Cook over medium heat until no longer moist.

Remove from pan with spatula and place on napkin. Wrap around filling and bake at 350 F for 30 minutes.

FRUIT BLINTZ FILLING

2 tangerines
2 small apples, finely chopped
½ cup raisins
½ cup chopped walnuts (optional)
⅔ cup apple sauce
1 tsp. cinnamon
2 tbsps. water

Heat above ingredients over medium heat for 15 minutes until apples soften. Use to fill Passover Blintzes.

Chinese-style Blintz Filling: Finely chop 2 carrots, 4 mushrooms, 2 stalks celery, ½ bunch scallions and ½ cup almonds. Saute in small amount of oil or water over high heat. To this mixture add ¼ cup water, 6 tablespoons apricot preserves and 2 tablespoons potato starch. Heat a few minutes; stuff blintzes, and bake.

Coffee cake touch of 'pearadise'

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Back in the 1950s and 1960s Patricia Murphy's Candlelight restaurants became well-known. There you could order elegant American "tearoom food" in charming settings.

The restaurants were founded and run by Patricia Murphy, an extraordinarily energetic and resourceful woman who as a young girl came to New York from Newfoundland. Although she began her restaurant career in Depression days, she "slugged away" and won success on her own.

In 1961 Patricia Murphy wrote a book called "Glow of Candlelight" (long out of print) telling the story of her life, her adventures in gardening and her food secrets. The food secrets consist of recipes and menus used in her restaurants and residences in New York and Florida.

One of her recipes, Coffee Pearadise, is as appropriate now as it was when she served it years ago in her own home. It's a delicate dessert whose ingredients are easy to have on hand and to put together.

PATRICIA MURPHY'S COFFEE PEARADISE

1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
2 tablespoons cold coffee
6 tablespoons sugar
1 cup hot strong coffee
⅓ cup pear syrup
5 to 6 canned pear halves
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
½ teaspoon vanilla

Soften gelatin in cold coffee; add sugar. Pour hot coffee over all and stir until dissolved. Add pear syrup. Arrange pear halves in bottom of 10-inch ring mold. Add part of gelatin mixture to depth of about ⅛ inch; chill. Chill remaining gelatin mixture until slightly thickened. Whip cream and vanilla together; fold into remaining gelatin mixture. Spoon into ring mold; chill until firm. Unmold on serving platter.

Sri Lanka brews big tea business

By JANET FULLWOOD
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

I'll never plop a teabag into a cup of hot water again without conjuring a swim of swaying snakes, dark eyes, green fields and shuddering machinery beneath the surface.

Such connotations are inevitable after a visit to Sri Lanka, that island nation formerly known as Ceylon that hangs like a teardrop from the flank of southern India.

Tea is big business in Sri Lanka — an economic mainstay that earns more than half of the country's foreign exchange. But the way it is grown and processed has changed little since the British introduced the crop to Ceylon back in 1867.

Next to the ubiquitous rice paddies, where water buffalo pull the plows and men, women and children perform the stooped labor of planting and harvesting, the most common rural scene in Sri Lanka is that of the tea plantations. Virtually everywhere one travels in this lush, pastoral land can be seen hillside after hillside of the glistening green shrubs and, working among them, crews of women clad in saris of screaming pink, green and blue, each with a wicker basket harnessed to her back by a tumpline over the forehead.

TEA IN SRI LANKA is grown in three elevational districts, with the high-grown varieties, coming from levels above 4,000 feet, considered the best. For the top grades only the two newest leaves and the bud they enfold are plucked and tossed into the baskets. Every two kilos of leaf so harvested will yield about a half-kilo of ready-for-the-pot tea.

But first it has to be processed, and for this the laden baskets are carried to a factory, usually a small one serving only the surrounding estates. While modern facilities for tea processing do exist, the small factory I visited, in a scenic growing area near the old hill country capital of Kandy, is typical of plants serving the industry.

Dark, dank and Dickensian, it was filled with clanking, clattering, turn-of-the-century machinery and staffed by barefoot men in colorful sarongs and barefoot women in bright saris who smiled up through the racket as though from another world. For their labors, the factory workers receive a wage of about 1,000 rupees, or $25 a month — not much, even by local economic standards.

Most Sri Lankan tea factories welcome visitors, and this one, with an attached room offering "short eats" (the local term for snacks) and, of course, pots of perfectly brewed tea, was no exception. Nor was the sideshow offered on the grounds anything unusual for Sri Lanka.

THE MEN squatting by the drive admist an array of flat, lidded baskets were snake charmers by profession, eager to engage the attention of tourists and even more eager to pocket their rupees. In exchange for a coin or two they would, with great flourish, pull out a flute, open a basket and play to the cobra that rose hissing and swaying from within. A few rupees more bought opportunity to pose for a photo with a 12-foot python around one's neck.

The inside of the tea factory presented a series of scenes only slightly less dramatic to foreign eyes. First stop was the area where fresh tea leaves are spread on racks to wither, a process timed at 18 hours on the nose. Then comes the rolling process, accomplished by heaving machines that crush the leaves (and conceivably an arm if the operator isn't careful) to prepare them for fermentation.

Fermentation, the most crucial stage in the manufacturing process, takes place in a cool, humid room where, over the course of about two hours, the tea acquires its flavor through oxidation of the tannin in the leaves. From here the leaves go to a drier that uses forced hot air to arrest fermentation and remove all but about 2 percent of the moisture content.

In the next stage of processing, the dried leaf mixture is spread on long tables where patient women perform the tedious task of picking out stems and fibers by hand. Then it's off to the sifter, another jolting, jerking machine, which separates the tea into grades. The primary grade in most factories is the one most familiar to Americans — B.O.P., or Broken (referring to the way it is picked) Orange (the color it turns when brewed) Pekoe (originating in Peking).

IN SRI LANKA, as in most Asian and Arabic nations, tea is called cha'a, after the mountain in China where it was said to have originated when a holy man, having trouble staying awake to meditate, cut off his eyelids and flung them to the ground. Legend holds that from these pieces of flesh the first tea plants sprung.

The first tea-drinkers in Europe were the Portuguese, who imported a taste for the beverage from their Chinese colonies. But it was the British who turned India and Sri Lanka into the biggest tea-producing nations in the world — and Britain still is the biggest tea customer of her former colonies.

The marketing of tea in Sri Lanka is tightly controlled by the Ceylon Tea Board, a division of the national Ministry of Trade and Commerce. By law, all Sri Lankan teas must be sold through a broker at auction in Colombo. The marketing process involves buyer, seller and broker in tasting rituals similar to those performed for wines, held before the Monday and Tuesday auctions conducted in the stock-exchange atmosphere of the Ceylon Chamber of Commerce. Among the biggest buyers: England, Iraq, Saudi Arabia and the United States.

Prices Effective Wednesday March 6, thru Tuesday March 12, 1985.

DEAR ABBY

Magazines disgust wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 27-year-old wife and mother. A few years after I was married, I found some pornographic girlie magazines my husband had hidden. It hurt me to discover that he was reading such filth, and it hurt me even more to know that he tried to hide it from me. We discussed the matter and he promised never to read that trash again.

Well, you guessed it. Today I found some recent issues of that magazine hidden in a different place. I'm so disgusted and angry I don't know what to do. I happen to be a pretty good-looking woman, so I can't understand why my husband would want to look at filth like that. What should I do? — DECEIVED

DEAR DECEIVED: Please get over the notion that only men with unattractive wives read girlie magazines. What you look like has nothing to do with your husband's desire to look at what you call "filth."

You have much to learn about why men read girlie magazines. (It has nothing to do with you.) Please see a counselor. It would be better if your husband went with you, but if he refuses, go alone, because the problem is yours — not his.

No man should have to hide his reading material from his wife. And no wife should "make" her husband promise not to read what he obviously enjoys reading. He is a grown man, and you are not his mother.

DEAR ABBY: This is for wives who insist that their husbands wear wedding rings:

My husband and I have been married for 35 years. He wore a wedding ring all those years, and I thought we had a perfect marriage.

Then he went to his 42nd high school reunion, looked up his old high school sweetheart, and started contacting her, writing love letters and making telephone calls. I later found out he drove 200 miles on a regular basis to make love to her. (All day, he says.) The point to all this is: A wedding ring doesn't stop anything.

My boss says I should castrate him. What do you think? — NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: The old saying, "Don't cut off your nose to spite your face," doesn't apply anatomically here. But I think you get the idea.

DEAR ABBY: Tell the widow who found a whole bunch of keys in her late husband's drawer and was going crazy trying to find out what they were for, not to throw them away.

I also have a goodly supply of useless keys, and one day I plan to make wind chimes out of them. — MRS. P. IN SANTA BARBARA

DEAR MRS. P.: Before you make all those useless keys into wind chimes, if you have neighbors, please ask them how they feel about wind chimes. They may not share your enthusiasm.

DEAR ABBY: Apropos flat-chested women: I recall a lovely French poem set to music. The translation into English is: "Oh, you flat-chested femmes, I adore you. With you, I am closer to your hearts!" — REMINISCING IN CANADA

Microwave tuna for super supper

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

In turn-of-the-century California a sardine canner, faced with a shortage of sardines, packaged instead an abundant supply of tuna.

Thus was born an industry that now pulls in upwards of $800 million yearly.

Of the four main species of tuna, only albacore may be labeled "white meat." (The others are called simply "light meat.") Cans reading "solid white" contain large chunks of albacore tuna, the most expensive variety of the fish.

Cans marked "chunk light" contain skipjack, yellowfin, or bluefin tuna — darker in color, stronger in flavor and less expensive than albacore.

A good source of protein, vitamins and minerals, tuna also is low in calories. But oil-packed tuna has twice the calories of tuna packed in water, so choose the latter when dieting.

The tuna sandwich has become an American tradition, and our brown-bag repertoire would be in a sorry state without it. The typical American consumes about 3 pounds of the fish each year, most of it in sandwich form.

While tuna is more expensive than it used to be, it's still a good buy, and a lifesaver in the kitchen when you need a meal in a jiffy. Besides sandwiches, tuna's great in salads and casseroles — which are especially easy when microwaved.

TUNA CHEESEBURGERS

1 (7 oz.) can tuna, drained
1 hard-cooked egg
¼ cup mayonnaise
2 tbsps. chopped green onion
¼ tsp. pepper
Sliced pimento-stuffed olives, to taste (optional)
2 or 3 hamburger buns, split and toasted conventionally
4 or 6 slices processed American cheese

Place tuna in medium-size mixing bowl and break into small pieces with fork. Add egg, mayonnaise, green onion, pepper and olives, mixing gently.

Spread mixture on both sides of toasted hamburger buns. Top each with cheese slice.

Microwave on paper plate or towel 1 to 2 minutes per sandwich, until filling is hot and cheese melted.

Makes 4 or 6 open-face sandwiches.

TUNA-MAC

2 tbsps. butter or margarine, melted
2 tbsps. flour
¼ tsp. each salt and pepper
1 cup milk
1 cup finely diced processed American cheese
1½ cups cooked macaroni noodles
1 (6½ or 7 oz.) can tuna, drained and flaked with fork
3 tbsps. minced onion

Blend together the melted butter, flour, salt and pepper to form a smooth paste; set aside.

Pour milk into a 1-quart glass container. Microwave 2½ minutes, or until milk is almost boiling.

Stir small amount of hot milk into butter-flour paste to thin. Add this mixture to the milk, beating well with a wire whisk.

Return to microwave and cook at MEDIUM-HIGH (70 percent power) about 2 minutes, stirring after 1 minute. Add cheese and stir until melted.

Combine cheese sauce and macaroni noodles, tuna and onion in a 1½-quart glass casserole. Stir lightly to blend ingredients.

Microwave, covered, 5 to 7 minutes at MEDIUM-HIGH (70 percent power), stirring after 3 minutes.

Let stand, covered, 3 minutes before serving.

Serves 4 to 5.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens. Foods are cooked on HIGH (100 percent power) and uncovered unless otherwise specified.

Pizza: Delicious taste combined with fascinating history

By JIM WOOD
Hearst News Service

Some uninformed folks might think that pizza was originally Italian. Wrong. There's lots of evidence we owe pizza to the Greeks.

Evelyne Slomon, whose great new "The Pizza Book" promises "everything there is to know about the world's greatest pie" and very nearly delivers, says that Greeks were the premier bakers of the ancient world. They passed along pizza while they were in Italy from about 730 B.C. to 130 B.C. She points to a passage in Plato that describes a dough made of barley and wheat flour kneaded and cooked with relishes, salt, olives, cheese, onions and greens; he goes on to tell about what may have been some of the world's earliest pizza parties.

Pizza also turned up in ancient, high-living Pompeii, but as Waverly Root notes in "The Food of Italy," those pizzas would have to wait 1,500 years before the first tomatoes were seen in Europe, delivered, according to legend, by sailors returned from Peru.

Apicius, the early Roman food writer who produced what is thought to be the world's first cookbook, gives a stuffed pizza recipe which includes cooked sow's teats, warblers and the bellies of cooked thrushes. (For the details of this bizarre recipe, see "Ars Magirica." It may give you some idea of why Rome fell.)

THE NEAPOLITANS popularized modern pizza. Slomon gives credit to Raffaele Esposito, who in 1889 combined tomato, mozzarella cheese and basil to commemorate the colors of the Italian flag in honor of the pizza-loving monarch Queen Margherita.

By 1905, pizza had spread to the United States, although it remained mostly in cities with substantial Italian populations. The biggest boost came in Italy late in World War II when thousands of American GIs came, tasted and were conquered by pizza. When the GIs returned to the United States, they brought memories of pizza with them. Many, eligible for GI loans, went into the pizza business and prospered.

Home pizza-making can be easy, fun, satisfying and economical. It's also creative. Once you have the basics down, it's a matter of following a few rules. After that, you won't be able to resist experimenting.

Equipment: Pizza equipment can be quite costly or relatively inexpensive; it's up to you. Basically, what you need is a hot oven, one that can reach in the neighborhood of 550 degrees.

Many serious pizza makers like to use unglazed quarry tiles, one-half to one-inch thick, to simulate old-fashioned Italian ovens. If you have gas, put the pizza on the floor of the oven; with electric ovens, put it on the lowest shelf. The pizza is then baked right on the tiles (available at building supply stores.) I have a pizza stone, basically the same idea, although it's a little more expensive. If the tiles or the pizza stone should crack or become discolored, don't worry about it. The stains don't hurt, and the cracked tiles or stone can be shoved together.

IF YOU PREFER, you can use a round pizza pan, the kind with a sieve in the bottom so that the heat gets to the dough. These work very well and require less skill to place in the hot oven. With the tiles or the stone, you use a pizza paddle: sprinkle corn meal over the paddle to act as little ball bearings and put the dough on the paddle. Lay the other ingredients on the dough quickly, the cheese first. Gently insert the pizza paddle into the oven, almost to the back of the oven, parallel to and just above the tiles. Give a little forward jerk to get the pizza moving, then pull back on the paddle.

If you keep in mind what pizza really is, it's easy to make. Basically, you're talking about (1) a crust covered by (2) a cheese topped if you like by (3) a sauce which may be garnished by (4) vegetables, herbs or other cheeses. Here's a basic, easy-to-make crust from "The Pizza Book":

BASIC PIZZA DOUGH

1 cup warm tap water (110 to 115 degrees)
1 package active dry yeast
3 to 3½ cups all-purpose white flour
½ teaspoon salt

Pour the water into a medium size mixing bowl and sprinkle in the yeast. Stir gently with a fork until the yeast has dissolved and the liquid turns light beige in color.

Add 1 cup of the flour and the salt. Mix thoroughly with a wooden spoon. Add a second cup of flour and mix well. After the second cup of flour has been mixed in, the dough should start coming away from the sides of the bowl and should begin to form a soft, sticky mass. It is now ready to be kneaded.

Measure out the third cup of flour. Sprinkle some flour over the work surface and flour your hands generously. Remove all of the dough from the bowl and begin to work the mass by kneading the additional flour in a bit at a time.

To knead the dough, use the heel of your hand (or both hands) to push the dough across the floured work surface in one sweep. Clench the dough in your fist and twist and fold it over. Use the dough scraper to help gather into a ball the wet dough that sticks to the surface while kneading. Repeat this action over and over again, adding only as much flour as it takes to keep the dough from sticking to your hands. Work quickly and don't be delicate. Slap and push the dough around to develop its gluten and to facilitate its rolling out. (Kneading pizza dough is a great way to relieve pent-up aggression!)

When the dough no longer feels sticky, push the heel of your hand down into it and hold it there for 10 seconds. If your hand comes up clean, the dough is done. If it sticks, a bit more kneading will be necessary. Once the dough is no longer sticky, do not overwork it by adding more flour. Continue kneading only until the dough is smooth and elastic (it should spring back when pressed) and no lines of raw white flour show. The whole process should take 5 to 10 minutes. Now it's time to let the dough rise.

Lightly oil a 2-quart bowl with vegetable oil. Roll the ball of dough around in the bowl to coat it with a thin film of oil. Tightly seal the bowl with plastic wrap to trap in the moisture and heat from the yeast's carbon dioxide gases. This will help the dough rise faster.

Place the bowl in a warm, draft-free place, preferably in a gas oven with a pilot light. For electric ovens, set the thermostat at 200 degrees for 10 minutes, then turn the oven off; this should provide enough warmth to raise the dough. Be sure the oven is off before you put the dough inside or it will begin to cook! Let the dough rise for 30 to 45 minutes.

Once the dough has doubled in bulk, punch it down by pushing your fist into it. All of the gases will quickly escape and the dough will collapse. Remove the dough from the bowl and knead it again for about 1 minute.

The dough is now ready to be patted or rolled into pizza or to undergo additional rising. (All doughs made with bread, high-gluten, or semolina flour really need a second rising time, anywhere from 15 minutes to 1 hour, to develop their gluten potential. Added rising time and further kneading produce a more refined, even-crumb structure in pizza crust. 10. To raise dough a second time, add a bit more oil to the bowl and repeat the procedure indicated for the first rising. The dough is now ready to be shaped.

Pan rising: For a slightly thicker crust, let the dough rise again in the pan for 10 to 20 minutes before baking.

Refrigerated rising: If you wish to have pizza the next day or evening, prepare the dough through step 6 and refrigerate it overnight. The next morning it will have doubled; punch it down, knead it for about 1 minute and return it to the bowl. Let the dough rise again until you are ready to use it that night. Take the dough out of the refrigerator 30 minutes before you want to stretch it out or it will be stiff and difficult to handle.

Food processor method: Fit the work bowl of your processor with either a steel blade or a special dough blade if your processor has one.

Pour in the hot tap water (up to 115 degrees) and sprinkle in the yeast. Turn the machine on and off once or twice to dissolve the yeast.

Add 3 cups of flour and the salt to the work bowl and process continuously until the dough forms a ball. (Often, with a steel blade, the dough won't go into a ball but will form a layer under or over the blade. This is fine.)

Test the dough by squeezing a portion in your hand. If it sticks, add a dusting of flour and process until it is no longer sticky. Dough that is too dry has the tendency to crumble. If it's dry, add water a tablespoon at a time until the right consistency is reached. (Bread flour, high-gluten or semolina flours can require up to 4 tablespoons of additional water.)

Remove the dough from the processor. Knead it briefly into a ball and proceed with the Basic Pizza Dough recipe from step 6.

FOR THE CHEESE, try mozzarella, thinly sliced, and scatter over the top of the crust. It's hard to get Italian mozzarella which is made from the milk of water buffalo. Marcella Hazan, the Italian cooking expert, says that if you grate 6 ounces of whole mix mozzarella and let it steep in a bowl with 3 tablespoons of olive oil for an hour or so, the effect is almost as good.

Here is a basic tomato sauce from "The Joy of Pizza" by the talented Pamella Z. Asquith:

TOMATO SAUCE

2 pounds ripe tomatoes
1 teaspoon minced garlic
½ teaspoon fennel seed, crushed (omit if incompatible with the ingredients of a particular recipe)
1 tablespoon minced fresh parsley or ½ tablespoon dried
2 tablespoons olive oil
Salt, black pepper and sugar to taste

Rinse the tomatoes. Seed and peel them. In a saucepan over medium heat, saute the garlic, fennel and parsley in the olive oil. Add the tomatoes and reduce, stirring occasionally, until the sauce is thick and measures about 2 cups. Add salt, pepper and sugar to taste. Sto well-sealed in the refrigerator freezer.

TOMATO SAUCE FROM CANNED TOMATOES

Substitute one 28-ounce can whole Italian tomatoes for the pounds of fresh tomatoes in t above recipe and proceed in t same manner. Although the result not as fresh-tasting, it is still go when suitable fresh tomatoes a not to be had.

Of course, there's no end to t combinations you can try. Here a a few from "Italian Country Coo ing" by Judy Gethers, a very usefu fun-to use book.

— Tomatoes, peeled and thin sliced; Mozzarella cheese, grate hard-cooked egg, chopped; salam thinly sliced; fresh basil leaves; ore ano; anchovy filets.

— Tomatoes, peeled and crushe blanched garlic, chopped; Fontin cheese, thinly sliced; Mozzarel cheese, grated; sausages, slice cilantro, chopped.

— Tomatoes, thinly sliced; art choke hearts, sliced; eggplant, slice and sauteed; Mozzarella chees thinly sliced; Parmesan chees grated; thyme, fresh or dried.

— Pesto; roasted peppers, slice tomatoes, peeled and crushe onion, chopped; scallops.

— Cooked ham, slivered; Mo zarella cheese, thinly sliced; Parm san cheese, grated; sun-dried tom toes, sliced; basil leaves, julienned.

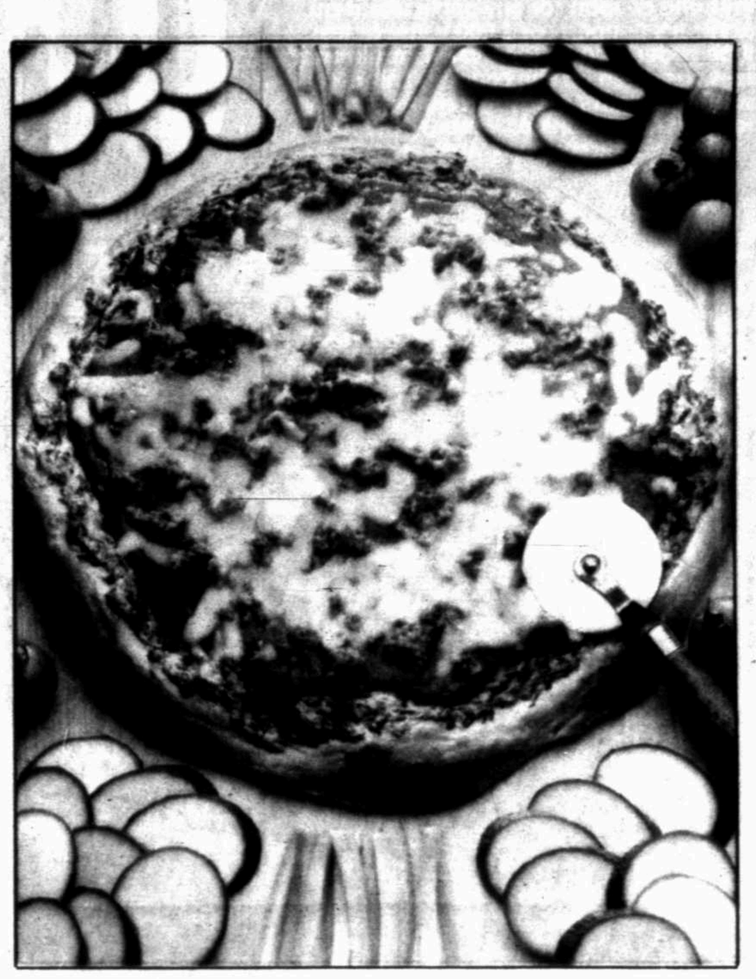
— Onion, chopped; Pecorin cheese, grated; proscuitto, slivere olives, pitted and halved; roaste peppers, sliced.

— Shrimp, peeled; tomatoe peeled and crushed; capers, drained Parmesan cheese, grated; Mozzarell cheese, grated; parsley, chopped.

— Green onions, thinly sliced mushrooms, sliced; sun-dried toma toes, chopped; garlic, blanched an chopped; smoked ham, slivered; ye low squash, sliced.

THERE ARE MANY, many mor combinations in "Chez Paniss Pasta, Pizza and Calzone" and in th "Asquith Joy of Pizza," as well a Slomon's "The Pizza Book" which is in its quiet way, a pizza-creatin masterpiece. All three books offer a number of delicious crust recipes.

I avoid the deep-dish pizza controversy and shun any mention of Chicago as a place where pizza is made. To some pizza persons, this is like discussing Catholicism without mentioning Rome, and I have to admit I'm being just a bit petty. The reason: I strongly prefer thin, crisp pizza.



Pizza, a favorite dish for many, can be topped with a variety of ingredients and combinations. This pizza is covered with homemade sausage and spinach.

One-pot meals time-savers for cooks in a hurry

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — For working people with time-pressed lives, probably the most sensible meals to make are those that can be prepared in an hour or so (excluding cooking time) on a weekend afternoon. They should also be the kind of foods that keep well in the refrigerator or freezer for later consumption and that require the least number of pots and pans.

Winter is the season that calls for this kind of cooking. So-called one-pot meals fill all the above criteria, and besides, they can be savory and nutritious. They also are ideal for entertaining because they can be brought directly from stove to table, making for minimal cleanup.

The following recipes, devised with Pierre Franey, demonstrate that one-pot cooking is not limited to the same old stews, soups and casseroles that nurtured us through winters past. These variations all illustrate a key point in cooking: A little imagination in ingredient combinations, herbs and spices can dress up almost any dish, so that it becomes memorable, something you would proudly serve to guests.

One example of jazzing up a familiar dish is beer-braised beef. It is essentially a twist on a classic Flemish dish, boeuf en carbonnade. In the traditional version beef cubes and bacon are browned well, then braised in dark beer with onions and mixed herbs. In the version that follows, a whole piece of well-trimmed beef is browned, then braised in beer with a dash of saffron and cinnamon. This small variation yields a completely different-tasting dish — saffron lends a pungent Oriental edge to the sauce while cinnamon imparts an inviting tinge of sweetness.

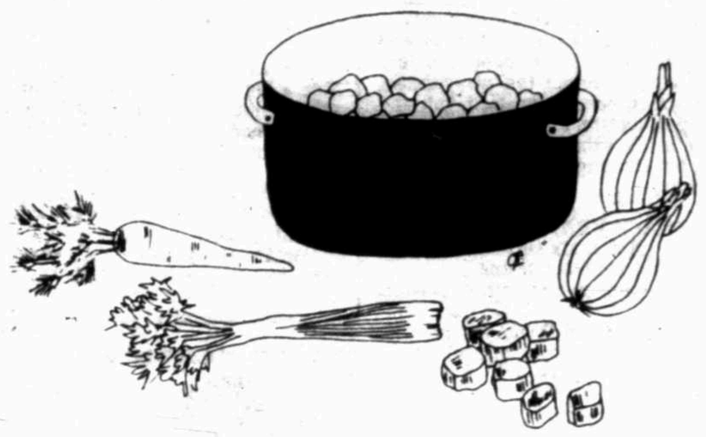
OTHER MODIFICATIONS could just as easily be tried, perhaps a teaspoon of curry powder for an Indian flavor or some cumin and hot peppers for a fiery edge. The key is to think of natural food affinities — beef and curry, chicken and tarragon (or garlic, sage, thyme and so on), fish and dill — and experiment. The flavors of both dishes described would intensify if stored in the refrigerator for a few days.

Dried bean dishes — roasted lamb with lentils, dried cod with chickpeas, navy bean soup — lend themselves perfectly to one-pot cooking. They are soul-warming, nutritious and remarkably inexpensive.

Few home cooks have three days free to make an authentic cassoulet, the traditional white bean stew with lamb, sausages and confit of goose from southwestern France. However, another savory dish that requires far less work is haricot de mouton. This lustily seasoned casserole enhanced with garlic, thyme, salt, pepper, carrots, onions and tomato can be put together in half an hour and placed in the oven to cook for two hours.

BEER-BRAISED BEEF WITH ONIONS

Beef, top chuck, 4-pound piece
Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1½ pounds onions, quartered and sliced (about 6 cups)
1 tablespoon minced garlic
2 tablespoons flour



CNS Sketch

⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
4 cloves
1 tablespoon tomato paste
1 bay leaf
½ teaspoon dried thyme
1 cup chicken stock.

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

Sprinkle the meat with salt and pepper. Heat the oil in a Dutch oven over high flame and brown the meat on all sides. Remove the meat from the pot. Add the onions and garlic and stir periodically until the onions are brown. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Stir in the flour and the beer. Add the saffron, cinnamon and cloves. Bring to a boil. Add the tomato paste, bay leaf, thyme and chicken stock. Put the meat back in the pot, bring to a boil, cover and simmer in the oven for about 2 hours and 15 minutes or until done. To test this, pierce the meat with a carving fork. If the fork comes out clean without effort the meat is done. Slice the beef and serve in a deep dish with the cooking liquid.

Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

LAMB AND WHITE BEANS WITH VEGETABLES

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
4 pounds of lamb stew from the leg or shoulder, cubed
Salt and pepper to taste
2 cups coarsely chopped carrots
2 cups coarsely chopped onions
1 tablespoon chopped garlic
2 bay leaves
1 teaspoon dried thyme
1 cup white wine
1 cup crushed canned tomatoes
1 tablespoon tomato paste
3 cups chicken stock
8 cups water
1 pound white beans, soaked in water overnight
1 carrot, peeled
1 whole onion pierced with a clove
1 garlic clove, peeled
1 cup water

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

Heat the oil in heavy cast iron skillet over high heat, add half of the meat to the pot and brown on all sides. Season with salt and pepper. Remove the browned meat cubes from the pot, set aside, and brown the rest. When that is browned, add the the other half to the pot along with the chopped carrots, onions and garlic. Season with one bay leaf and thyme and cover with the white wine, tomatoes, tomato paste, chicken stock and water. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer in the oven for 1 hour.

Meanwhile place the beans in a large pot, add the carrot, the onion pierced with the clove, the remaining bay leaf and garlic clove. Cover with water and season with salt. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer for about 1 hour or until soft.

Drain the beans and reserve 1 cup of the cooking liquid, the carrot and the onion. Add the beans, carrot and onion to the lamb with the reserved cooking liquid. Return the pot to the oven and cook 15 minutes longer. Remove the pot from the oven and check for salt and pepper. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve.

Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

Chocolate pate new dessert

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Urged on by the current interest in chocolate desserts, we tried a brand-new one — Chocolate Pate. It is molded in a loaf pan and makes 16 servings.

A make-ahead dessert, it is refrigerated for six to eight hours or overnight and served after that. Or better yet, in our opinion, it may be put in the freezer for several hours and offered in frosty form.

This pate has mild chocolate flavor — a pleasant change from the chocolate overkill that's around so much these days.

CHOCOLATE PATE

2 large eggs
2 packages (each 4 ounces) sweet cooking chocolate
⅓ cup butter
1 tablespoon instant coffee
2 tablespoons dark rum
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups finely ground walnuts
2 cups heavy cream

Line the entire surface of a loaf pan (about 8x4x2-inches) with a sheet of plastic wrap with ends extended over edges of pan.

In a small bowl beat eggs until yolks and whites are blended.

In a small saucepan, over low heat, melt chocolate and butter, stirring often. Stir in instant coffee and rum and continue stirring until coffee is dissolved; add eggs and stir constantly over low heat until slightly thickened. Off heat stir in vanilla and walnuts. Turn into a large bowl; cool to room temperature.

Whip cream until stiff, fold into chocolate mixture. Turn into prepared pan. Chill for 6 to 8 hours or overnight, or freeze for about 3 hours or until firm.

Using the extended edges of the saran, lift loaf from pan and turn out onto a serving platter; remove saran.

Garnish with extra whipped cream and, if you like, chocolate curls.

Beans can make meals historical

By KIT SNEDAKER
Hearst News Service

Beans have never ranked in the same high, thin culinary stratosphere as endive, saffron, caviar and smoked salmon, but at least they're getting a pedigree with the opening of the Baked Bean Historical Center in Dandridge, Tenn.

The foundation, sponsored by Bush Brothers & Co., producers of canned vegetables, states that North American Indians first perfected the technique of cooking beans slowly in fire pits. The Indians passed this method on to early settlers who added maple syrup (which they also learned about from the Indians) or molasses and baked the beans in earthenware pots.

Those pots with their fat bodies and thin necks didn't originate with the settlers, either. According to the Baked Bean Center, the design is Assyrian.

Beans are as old as Eqypt, where they were worshipped as a symbol of life. The Romans loved them. Trojans ate them. Peruvian Indians relished them. In this country, New Englanders made them famous.

The early settlers, especially the Puritans, ate Sunday beans because they could be fixed on Saturday (along with codfish cakes) and would stay warm until Sunday when Sabbath cooking was forbidden.

WHAT THESE New England bean eaters didn't know is that beans have a good deal of protein, a lot of fiber, vitamins and minerals. Team them with eggs, milk or add soybeans and have a low-fat meal with complete protein, all eight off the essential amino acids.

A pound of beans makes eight or nine servings of ¾-cup each. The quickest way to cook them is to use 3 cups of water for each cup of beans. Add beans to the water, bring to a boil and boil for 2 minutes. Cover and let them cool for an hour. Then cook them as called for in the recipe. They can be soaked ovenight, which shortens cooking time.

To keep the foam down during cooking, add a tablespoon of vegetable oil and simmer — don't boil.

If plebian baked beans seem to ho hum for a meal, consider the heights they have reached in culinary capitals — a cassoulet in France, pasta e fagioli (pasta and beans) in Italy or New Orleans' famous red beans and rice.

Here, from "The Complete Bean Cookbook," by Victor Bennett, a complete range of beans is presented, beginning with hors d'oeuvres.

GARBANZO NUTS
(Makes two to three cups)

1 pound dried garbanzo beans
¼ pound butter
4 cloves garlic, crushed
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon chili powder
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon onion powder
1 teaspoon powdered ginger
⅛ teaspoon garlic salt
3 teaspoons soy sauce

Soak washed beans in enough water to cover overnight. Don't drain. Cook in well-salted water until just tender, but still a bit hard, about 1 hour. Drain and divide into two equal parts.

In two skillets, melt the butter, equally divide and saute 2 garlic cloves in each. Remove garlic and add a portion of garbanzos to each skillet. Saute slowly, turning and stirring often, until the beans begin to sizzle and turn dark golden brown, When crunchy on the outside and tender on the inside, they are done.

Mix mustard, chili powder, salt and onion powder. Sprinkle over one batch of garbanzos and toss lightly until throughly coated. Mix ginger, garlic and soy sauce and sprinkle over second batch and toss lightly until coated.

Serve hot in separate bowls as nibbles to accompany cocktails. They may be frozen and reheated on a baking sheet under the broiler for several minutes.

CUBAN BLACK BEAN SOUP
(Serves six)

2 cups dried black beans
2 cups celery, coarsly chopped
1 onion, medium sized, finely sliced
4 whole cloves
½ pound salt pork, cut in 1-inch pieces
1 teaspoon Worchestershire sauce
2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup sherry
6 fresh lemon slices, thinly sliced

Cover washed beans with 2 quarts cold water and refrigerate, covered, overnight. The next day, put the beans in a larger kettle. Add celery, onion, cloves and salt pork. Bring beans to a boil, then reduce heat and simmer, covered, for approximately 3 hours or until beans are tender.

Press the beans mixture, including liquid, through a sieve to puree. Add Worchestershire sauce, lemon juice, salt and pepper, and reheat thoroughly for several minutes.

Just before serving, stir in the sherry. Serve in individual hot soup plates and garnish with a lemon slice.

BEAN AND CHEESE SALAD
(Makes six servings)

1 cup dried navy beans
4 cups water
1 tablespoon minced onion, or to taste
½ green bell pepper, finely chopped
1 cup celery, finely sliced
1 cup sharp Cheddar cheese, diced
½ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon prepared mustard
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

Cover beans with water. Bring to a boil and boil two minutes. Cover and let stand one hour. Cook until tender. Drain and cool thoroughly.

Place beans in a salad bowl and add the onion, green pepper, celery and cheese. Blend the mayonnaise, vinegar, prepared mustard, salt and pepper to taste. Pour over bean mixture in the salad bowl and toss gently, but thoroughly. Chill well before serving.

BLACK BEANS AND RUM
(Makes six servings)

1 pound dried black beans
1 onion, medium size, thinly sliced
1 bay leaf
¼ teaspoon dried thyme leaves
1 celery stalk, finely chopped
¼ pound salt pork, cut in ½-inch cubes
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
Salt to taste
¼ teaspoon Tabasco sauce
¼ cup dark rum
Commercial sour cream

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Cover washed beans with cold water and soak overnight, covered, in the refrigerator. The next day, place in a large kettle with soaking liquid. Add onion, bay leaf, thyme, celery, parsley, salt pork and enough cold water to make 2 quarts. Bring to boiling point, reduce heat and simmer gently until beans are tender or about 2½ hours. Stir the beans several times while cooking.

Drain beans and reserve the liquid. Place the beans in a 2-quart casserole. Melt butter in a small saucepan; remove from heat. Stir in flour, salt, Tabasco and 2 cups of the reserved bean liquid. Reheat over low heat until mixture bubbles, add rum and pour over beans.

Bake uncovered for 40 minutes. Serve topped with sour cream.

PAPA ROSSI'S PASTA E FAGIOLI
(From a 2,000-year-old recipe; makes six to eight servings)

1 pound white dried beans
1 cups good olive oil
Salt to taste
1 clove garlic, unpeeled
1 large leaf Italian bay leaf
1 level teaspoon coarse ground red hot pepper
A few sprigs fresh parsley
½ pound elbow macaroni

Soak the washed beans overnight in cold water with a ratio of 3 times the volume of beans, to which salt to taste has been added.

The next day, don't drain, but place them on the fire and start cooking slowly. Bring to a boil, remove foam and add the oil, garlic and bay leaf.

Cook the beans gently for two hours or until just tender.

Begin cooking the pasta in boiling water seasoned with salt. Let it boil six or seven minutes. Drain and reserve 1 cup of the macaroni liquid. Add the pasta to the beans, after removed the bay leaf and garlic clove. Serve hot.

'Copycat' nut mix can be made at home

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: A friend sent me a big can of a delicious "nibble," which she bought at a specialty food shop. Peanuts, raisins, hazelnuts, almonds, pepitos, sunflower seeds, curry powder, garlic, salt and spices were in it. I wish you would copycat it.— HOME COOK.

DEAR HOME COOK: I know the nut mix you mention.
— C.B.

COPYCAT NUT MIX

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon turmeric
1 to 1½ teaspoons garlic powder
2½ to 3 tablespoons curry powder
1 cup unblanched whole almonds
1 cup blanched hazelnuts
1 cup roasted peanuts
1 cup shelled sunflower seeds
½ cup raisins

In a large skillet over moderate heat, heat oil. Add salt, pepper, turmeric, garlic powder and curry powder and stir together. Add almonds, hazelnuts, peanuts, sunflower seeds and raisins; stir until evenly coated with the spiced oil and the mixture is slightly toasted — about 3 minutes. Turn out onto a large cookie sheet, cool completely. Store in a tightly covered airtight container in the refrigerator.

Note: Use nuts and sunflower seeds that are unsalted. Blanched hazelnuts are available at health food stores.

Dollar increases

LONDON (AP) — The dollar resumed its assault on record heights in early trading today as central banks again failed to follow through on last week's massive intervention against the U.S. currency.

Gold prices turned lower.

Last week, after the dollar soared to new highs against the currencies of Britain, Canada, France and Italy, central banks poured an estimated $4 billion on world foreign exchanges to halt the rally. But within days, the dollar was rising again, and economists and government officials were saying there was little intervention could do to reverse the trend.

This week, central banks have remained on the sidelines, and the dollar has renewed its climb in nervous trading.

In the early going today in Frankfurt, West Germany, the dollar was just two pfennigs shy of the 13-year high it reached against the mark last week — 3.47 marks. There are 100 pfennigs to the mark.

David Mulford, assistant Treasury secretary for international affairs, said Tuesday that after the initial shock of last week's concerted intervention, the central bank's assault on the dollar turned out to be "totally ineffective." Mulford told the a House subcommittee on international economic policy and trade that, "The dollar is strong because of outstanding U.S. economic performance, the best for the past quarter century."

In Tokyo, where trading ends before European markets open, the dollar climbed to 261.25 Japanese yen from 260.70 yen Tuesday. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 261.78 yen.

Also in London, the British pound fell to $1.0545 at midday from $1.0593 late Tuesday.

In the British capital's City of London financial district, the talk was not of whether sterling would sink to parity with the dollar but when. "If the pound slips below $1.02 or $1.03, the market will get its eyes fixed on parity and it will happen very quickly," a currency trader said.

The all-time low of $1.0395 for the pound was reached during European trading on Feb. 26.

Officials propose deficit-reduction plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two members of congressional tax-writing committees have come up with similar proposals that would require business and individuals who itemize deductions to share the burden of reducing the federal deficit.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., who serves on the Finance Committee, wants to reduce the value of most deductions, credits and exemptions by 15 percent for the next five years. Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., a member of the Ways and Means Committee, proposes to cut all individual itemized deductions by 10 percent and all other tax benefits — including all those for business — by 20 percent.

A person who pays $2,000 interest on a home mortgage (now fully deductible), would deduct only $1,700 under Chafee's plan or $1,800 under Stark's.

Chafee's plan would slash the deficit by $168 billion over five years with 74 percent of it coming from individuals; Stark would produce $178 billion, 60 percent from individuals.

The Joint Committee on Taxation estimates Chafee's plan would raise taxes on a typical taxpayer with income under $10,000 by $23 in 1986. A taxpayer between $30,000 and $40,000 would pay $267 more than under current law. At the top of the scale, a person making $200,000 or more would pay nearly $18,000 more. In percentage terms, the increases in taxes would range from 1.8 percent at the under-$10,000 level to 12.2 percent at the top. Stark's figures are similar.

By lowering the value of deductions, the proposals would induce many taxpayers who now itemize deductions to join the approximately 64 percent who do not. Neither bill would affect the $1,040-per-person exemption or the standard deduction.

One of the most successful television game shows of all time was "To Tell the Truth," which enjoyed a 24-year run ending in 1980. The format was simple: A person with an unusual occupation or accomplishment and two imposters tried to fool a celebrity panel whose job was to find the "real person."

For example, there was Ed Feinhandler, who "won the ugly man contest for four years. He's the first person to win the title three consecutive times ... and the only one to win without the use of makeup." Or, George Sroda, who "owns 2 million worms." And Joan Haas, who, because she has had so many operations is known in some medical circles as "the $6 million woman."

Those cases are direct from the files of U.S. Tax Court, where Goodson-Todman Enterprises, producers of the show, sued the IRS after being refused an investment tax credit for part of the production costs. The IRS contended that Congress, in passing the credit in 1962 to encourage job-creating investments, had said it should not go for property expected to last three years or less.

The IRS argued that a game show was clearly not qualified because its content was topical, its appeal fleeting. The Tax Court pointed out that Congress had specifically said the credit should go for such productions as "Mod Squad" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," but not for such "transitory" shows as "Johnny Carson" and "Firing Line."

The court held the IRS had exceeded its authority in denying the credit to game shows and specifically ruled that "To Tell the Truth" was eligible for the benefit. The shows "presented durable human-interest stories whose audience appeal was as potentially long-lasting as that of many situation comedies or dramatic shows," Judge Samuel B. Sterrett concluded.

Should one state be able to tax a mail-order sale from another? That's the question to be pondered this week by the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, a national organization created by Congress to monitor the federal system.

The commission estimates state and local governments lose about $1 billion a year in sales and use taxes on purchases ordered by mail or phone from out-of-state dealers. The Supreme Court ruled in 1965 that such sales generally are not taxable. The commission contends the federal government should step in with a new law allowing such taxes in the interest of protecting in-state merchants.

President Reagan's new budget asks Congress to overhaul the tax credit designed to help offset work-related costs of caring for a child or other dependent. The proposal would tilt the benefits more toward lower- and middle-income families.

The Congressional Budget Office calculates that a one-child family earning $16,500 could get an $864 benefit under the proposal, compared with $624 under present law. The $60,000, two-child family, which now may qualify for a $960 credit, would get nothing under the proposal.

How the plan would affect 1986 taxpayers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is how a deficit-cutting plan by Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., would affect taxpayers at various income levels in 1986.

The plan would reduce most individual and corporate tax credits and deductions by 15 percent over the next five years. It, thus, would temporarily increase taxes on those who itemize deductions. Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., has offered a similar plan.

Eastern to offer off-peak-hour flights

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines, entering the world of cut-rate, no-frills flights, said Tuesday it would offer $98 coast-to-coast fares with connections to Houston next month when it begins an overnight freight program.

Those low-fare flights, which will leave only at off-peak hours once a day, will coincide with the overnight freight service that starts April 1 on seven of Eastern's 34 wide-bodied A-300 jetliners, said company spokesman Glenn H. Parsons.

The jets' 252 seats will be reserved for passengers. But the cargo bellies will be used for the deliveries in conjunction with CF AirFreight, a freight-forwarding subsidiary of Consolidated Freightways Inc., of Palo Alto., Calif, Parsons said. CF AirFreight has 106 terminals in North America, and sales representatives in major cities worldwide.

"The costs (of operating the seven jets) are already covered by the freight operation," said Russell L. Ray Jr., Eastern's senior vice president of marketing. "The rest is icing on the cake. We were just looking for ways to market to empty seats on those jets."

Under Eastern's overnight fare program, which will be marketed as the "Moonlight Special," flights to Houston from Philadephia, New York, Boston and Atlanta on the East Coast, and San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle and Portland, Ore., on the West Coast will be $49.

Connecting service in the new program also will be offered in Chicago. All connecting flights between those cities will be $49, the company said.

Parsons said the flights would begin at early-evening and night hours and all would arrive in Houston by 3:30 a.m.

There are several restrictions attached to those flights, similar to those placed by cut-rate carriers such as Newark, N.J.-based People Express Airlines:

—Tickets must be purchased within 24 hours of making reservations. They can be refunded for a $25 service charge only if cashed in before departure time.

—Luggage is restricted to two carry-on pieces. Passengers with additional luggage will be charged $10 per bag for up to three bags, subject to availability of space and normal weight and size restrictions.

The airline also refuses to guarantee that baggage will arrive at the same time of the flight. "In most cases, these bags will be available for pickup at Eastern's baggage claim officer later on the same day ...," the company said.

—There are no assigned seats. Passengers wishing to sit in the larger, first-class seats, without the usual first-class amenities, will have to pay $15 more.

—Snacks cost $4 and soft drinks 50 cents.

"In effect, we have a People Express type of service at night," said Ray. "It's not our intent, though, to compete with People Express...."

Defense suspends firm's annual payment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department suspended part of its huge annual payment to General Dynamics Corp., citing evidence that the largest U.S. defense contractor billed the government for unauthorized expenses.

Pentagon spokesman Michael I. Burch said "we found that General Dynamics' testimony was nauseating" when the contractor tried to explain the problem to Congress last week.

The Pentagon said $40 million in monthly payments for administrative expenses would be halted for 30 days while the department investigates whether General Dynamics wrongly billed the government for unauthorized expenses.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who announced the decision Tuesday, said "it came out in our audits that they were billing us, as part of their overhead costs, a lot of expenses that did not benefit the government."

General Dynamics spokesman Peter K. Connolly said that if the Pentagon investigation shows any wrong billings, the company will return the money immediately.

"The company believes it will be able to satisfy the Defense Department's concerns regarding the validity of its billing procedures," Connolly said in a statement issued at General Dynamics' headquarters in St. Louis.

HNG directors approve dividend increase

HOUSTON - The Board of Directors of Houston Natural Gas Corporation (HNG) have approved a 3 cents per share increase in the cash dividend on its common stock to an annualized rate of $2.12, a 6% increase from the current annualized rate of $2.00 per share. This is the 14th consecutive year in which the dividend has been increased.

The new rate will be paid April 1, 1985, to shareholders of record March 18, 1985.

House approves credit bailout for farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved a credit bailout for financially troubled farmers and their lenders, setting up a politically charged confrontation with a veto-minded President Reagan.

The 255-168 vote Tuesday came as several hundred farmers lobbied on Capitol Hill for more government aid. The credit measure now goes to Reagan, who has made it clear he intends to veto it as too costly and unnecessary.

Reagan "seems to want the farmers to cry 'uncle' before he gives them the help they need," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., who decided to shortcut normal procedures and send a Senate-passed version of the bill straight to the White House.

O'Neill said the president "can veto the farm bill, but he can't veto the problem. If we can spend hundreds of billions putting missiles in the ground, we can spend half a billion to put seed in the ground."

The credit provisions, appended to an African relief measure, are aimed at easing credit for farmers whose unmanageable debt loads are preventing them from getting new loans for spring planting.

Americans to spend $12 billion on lotteries

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Americans will spend $12 billion for lottery tickets this year, up 50 percent from 1984, an industry researcher reports.

Seventeen states and the District of Columbia already have lotteries, and as many as five additional states may have lottery games by the end of the year, according to Duane Burke, president of the Public Gaming Research Institute, Inc., of Rockville, Md.

The firm sponsored a three-day conference here of about 250 state and lottery vending officials, who discussed lottery and related marketing technology for the 1980s.

Some of the officials were from California, which is expected to start a lottery sometime this year following voter approval last November.

A state director has yet to be chosen, but California's 5-week-old lottery commission attended the conference to get some insight on what to expect.

"This gives us an opportunity to see all the products and share information with other lottery directors," said Howard Varner, chairman of the California commission. "We're trying to learn as much as we can. We'll have the largest lottery in the country."

Midland Park Mall adds five new stores

By SUSAN LINDSAY

Five new stores have opened in Midland Park Mall, said Pam Leach, public relations director of the mall.

PAUL HARRIS, a ladies and juniors clothing store, opened Friday. Mimi Anderson is the manager of the store. Headquarters for the store is in Indianapolis, Ind. FUDRUCKERS will open today. The San Antonio-based company is a contemporary adult upscale hamburger restaurant. Other than hamburgers, the restaurant offers rib-eye steak sandwiches and New York-style hot dogs. The restaurant will serve beer, wine and other alcoholic beverages.

STUART'S, a division of Petrie Stores, based in Secarecus, N.J., offers womens and juniors ready-to-wear clothing. The store opened February 5.

MILLER'S OUTPOST is scheduled to open March 28. It will offer casual clothing for men and women.

KG MEN'S WEAR, which opened February 14, carries a complete line of men's clothing. John Johnson is the manager.

SUNBELT SAVINGS MORTGAGE BANKING DIVISION has opened its loan office in Midland at 3303 N. Midkiff in San Miguel Square.

Bill Oglesby, vice president and West Texas regional manager for Sunbelt Savings, will manage the company's four West Texas offices. He has more than 20 years of mortgage banking experience and has been with Sunbelt since July.

The loan agency office is part of the Mortgage Banking Division of Sunbelt Savings. Sunbelt was founded in 1955 in Stephenville, and now has 15 branch locations with over $760 million in deposits.

ST. CLAIR HOMES OF MIDLAND has recently become an area distributor for MELCO HIGH TECH STEEL framed buildings.

Lonnie St. Clair, president of the company, said "MELCO Steel Framing offers many advantages not found in ordinary construction. The patented joist design is super strong and in fact, is the same design used in jet airplane wings. It's so light weight, a commercial building can be framed in much less time."

ATCHESON, CARTWRIGHT & ASSOCIATES has announced the firm's name change to AC ASSOCIATES.

The architectural, engineering and planning firm will continue operations from its present facilities at 4010 Avenue R in Lubbock.

AC Associates' most recent Midland area projects include the Liberty Square Office Building, an addition to St. Luke's United Methodist Church, the Taylor Park Child Care Center and Meadowpark Recreation Center and several planning studies and projects at Midland Regional Airport.

AC Associates is the architectural division of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., a Midland civil engineering firm.

ARMOR DECK, a new product that transforms an ordinary pickup truck into a more versatile vehicle, is now being introduced in Texas and New Mexico, said D.P. Kilgo, president of Armor Deck of West Texas and Southern New Mexico, headquartered in Gardendale.

Kilgo estimated that there is about 2.3 million pickup trucks in Texas, with annual sales ranging from 250,000 to 300,000 per year. More than 26 million pickup trucks are owned in the U.S. today, with 1985 sales expected to exceed three million.

Armor Deck is an accessory made of high-strength aluminum panels that fold back and forth over the bed of the pickup. The panels lock on both sides as well as the tailgate, creating a solid waterproof surface that provides real security for cargo.

W.D. BAILEY, INC., a purchasing and material management company, announces the opening of its offices in Suite 302 Ghils Tower West, 114 N. Big Spring.

Darrell Bailey, owner and resident of Midland since 1958, said the company offers over 30 years of combined experience in the areas of purchasing, material management and inventory control.

Boeing withdraws claim against Pentagon

Firm says $1,800 dinner legitimate expense

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Boeing Co. is withdrawing its claim against the Pentagon for $61,075 in direct political contributions to candidates, expenses it sought to add to the cost of the weapons systems it sells the U.S. government, the company says.

But the Seattle-based aerospace giant says the $1,800 it spent that year for dinner with Vice President George Bush is a legitimate "community relations expense," chargeable to the government and the taxpayers.

And a spokesman said it is still seeking reimbursement of more than $65,000 in other political expenses, including contributions to state political parties, legislative campaign organizations, political action committees and groups associated with voter issues.

The spokesman said Monday the billing for political contributions would be withdrawn. However, he said today that he only meant that the company would no longer seek reimbursement for the direct candidate contributions.

Boeing said all of these are subject to negotiations with the Pentagon and that while some may be disallowed, it believes many are legitimate overhead expenses.

Boeing wants to be reimbursed by adding the cost of the Bush dinner — and hundreds of thousands of dollars in other public relations expenses — to the costs of its weapons contracts with the Defense Department.

Within hours after The Associated Press reported the billing of political contributions Monday, Carr called the news agency to say the company had notified the Defense Contract Audit Agency it was withdrawing its request for payment.

The spokesman, Harold Carr, said there had been "no intention of charging this to the government" and that the contributions "inadvertently had been placed in the wrong account."

"It became apparent that (claiming for) contributions directly to candidates was in and of itself a mistake," Carr said today.

This was a change from an earlier statement in which Carr said such expenses were routinely billed even though the company knew that a certain percentage of them would be disallowed after negotiations.

"The rules say certain things — that contributions and donations are unallowable," Carr said initially. "And then you go on and look at other sections and you see a lot of gray areas."

Carr said an $1,800 expense shown in a Pentagon audit for "dinner with the Vice President" apparently refers to Boeing buying a table at a dinner honoring George Bush.

"We would argue that was a community relations expense," Carr said.

Asked if he was sure the dinner was in fact for Bush, the Boeing spokesman replied, "I don't think there is any other vice president running around."

Another item in the audit discloses a total of $25,000 contributed by Boeing to a committee trying to "kill" a Washington state ballot intiative that would have had the effect of raising Boeing's state taxes.

Boeing apparently is still seeking reimbursement for that expense.

The initiative was defeated overwhelmingly in 1982.

Carr said Boeing believes certain other community relations contributions should be allowed. He cited, for example, money given to a school betterment organization in a small town.

Pentagon audit agency documents made available to The Associated Press show that Boeing gave $61,075 in 1982 to political candidates of both parties, and contributed $20,228 to Republican and Democratic campaign and party committees, $38,600 to groups on one side or another of various voter issues and $6,944 to state and local political action commitees.

Pentagon auditors called the charges "questionable" and "unallowable," and Defense Department auditors refused to approve reimbursement.

Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., said Boeing's decision to withdraw its claim "raises more questions than it answers.

"Boeing still insists on billing the taxpayer for ... other contributions which are patently unallowable," he said.

Stark plans to introduce legislation this week to prohibit defense contractors from claiming certain public relations expenses on their federal income taxes.

"It's tough to be shocked at waste in weapons programs any more, but these billings go beyond impropriety," Stark said.

GM assembly plant may be retooled

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The General Motors assembly plant here may be converted to the construction of front-wheel-drive cars by 1987, a move that would result in the loss of several hundred jobs to robots, union sources have told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

The newspaper today quoted sources from the United Auto Workers Local 276 as saying the Arlington plant is one of several selected to build the GM "10," a front-wheel-drive car designed to replace the Oldsmobile Cutlass and Chevrolet Monte Carlo now being built here.

Bob Hartnagel, a GM spokesman at Dallas, said GM has made no announcement on any future project model in Arlington. GM compnay policy prohibits officials from discussing production plans, he said.

Sources said the reported model changeover would require a major overhaul of the plant and some expansion, meaning that the plant would have to curtail operations by late 1986 or early 1987 for four to five months.

Several hundred jobs would be permanently trimmed because of automation, sources said. The jobs would be eliminated partly through early retirement and layoffs, sources said.

John Childers, president of UAW Local 276, who represents about 4,000 GM employees here, said he had no comment on the report.

Automation would cause the loss of some jobs and some other skilled jobs would be created.

"The (employees) that get laid off will probably be in pretty good shape," Childers said. "Maybe we won't get hurt too bad."

Sources said workers who were laid off would be eligible for retraining and reassignment within GM as part of the "job bank" agreed on in the latest national labor contract between the UAW and GM.

George Campbell, Arlington's deputy city manager, said GM officials have recently contacted city officials about various projects during the plant, but GM officials have not been specific about any plans.

"They're very secretive about the reasons they're asking the questions," Campbell said.

IRS reveals most taxpayers favor tough car record-keeping rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nothing raises the blood pressure of the average taxpayer more than seeing a wealthy professional socializing in a tax-deductible car.

That, says the nation's chief tax collector, is what's behind tough new record-keeping rules for automobiles.

"If taxpayers lose their respect for the system, we can expect serious consequences in the area of voluntary compliance," Roscoe L. Egger Jr., commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, told the House Ways and Means Committee on Tuesday.

If the laws on substantiating deductions "permit highly visible abusive cases to exist, we will see the consequences," he said.

Egger pleaded with Congress not to repeal rules that went into effect Jan. 1 requiring that up-to-the-minute records be kept on most vehicles used partially for business.

But nearly two dozen members of Congress who testified at the hearing Tuesday before the Ways and Means Committee said repeal is the only way to free taxpayers from what they regard as onerous paperwork requirements.

"We have used a cannon to kill a gnat," said Rep. Thomas Bliley, R-Va., suggesting millions of honest taxpayers are being caught up in the attempt to stop people from cheating on their taxes.

The lawmakers' complaints were seconded by several business and farm groups.

"We continue to support repeal of ... (the) requirements, which are unduly burdensome and potentially unenforceable," said Grace Ellen Rice of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

"The confusion and uncertainty generated by the law and the efforts to apply it have seriously impacted business, and small business in particular," added Donald C. Alexander, a former IRS chief testifying for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Because of such complaints, more than half the House members and at least 40 of the 100 senators have signed bills to repeal the new law.

Egger said in trying to stop cheating on automobile expenses, public perception of a fair tax system is as important as collecting revenue.

The IRS estimates taxpayers are claiming well over $3 billion a year in excess tax benefits by overstating deductions for business use of automobiles under the pre-1985 rules. Egger cited a case involving 937 employees of a big corporation who were furnished cars by the company and kept no records of personal and business use of the vehicles. After auditing the employees, the IRS last year demanded additional taxes averaging $846 per person — a total of $800,000.

"I see no realistic alternative to the maintenance of records" to prove business-related deductions, Egger said.

Several members of Congress disagreed and left few adjectives unused in criticizing the rules. "Crazier than a bedbug," said Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont. "Onerous," said Rep. Wes Watkins, D-Okla. "Senseless," added Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wis. "An administrative nightmare," said Rep. Marilyn Lloyd, D-Tenn.

Until this year, the law required only that a taxpayer keep adequate records to support a deduction for local (as opposed to away-from-home) business use of a car or truck. It did not specify the type of record, so if the IRS challenged a deduction it often had to estimate mileage by consulting an appointment calendar or other records.

The new regulations, require taxpayers to keep a current log or diary of all business mileage. When a car is used mainly for deliveries or customer calls, the owner may avoid a log by limiting the tax deduction to 70 percent of usage. Similarly, a farmer may claim 70 percent business usage of a tractor or other vehicle not designed for personal use and not have to keep a log.

No log is needed for a vehicle used only for business and kept on company premises at night.

ODESSA DIAGNOSTIC Imaging Center
A LOCALLY OWNED OUTPATIENT FACILITY
318 N. Alleghaney • Suite 100 • Odessa, TX 79761

The Odessa Diagnostic Imaging Center wishes to announce that one of the latest methods in diagnostic testing —

MAGNETIC RESONANCE IMAGING

— will soon be available to the people of West Texas and New Mexico.

- Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) is a new device which allows physicians to examine the human body without radiation.
- MRI can detail body functions and structures and detect abnormalities at early stages. It adds new dimensions to medical diagnoses in conditions such as multiple sclerosis, brain and spinal cord problems and abnormalities of various parts of the body not detectable by any other method currently used.

Odessa Diagnostic Imaging Center — first in West Texas and New Mexico to offer the MRI — provides the latest in diagnostic equipment:

- C.T. Scan
- Ultrasonography
- Radiology
- Cardiac Stress Testing
- Nuclear Medicine
- Clinical Lab
- Mammography
- EKG/EEG

All diagnostic tests performed on an outpatient basis.

Vegas sells scenery as well as sizzle

ENTERTAINMENT

By ROBERT MACY

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Las Vegas has long been a mecca for movie makers — from the days Roy Rogers rode the city's dusty streets to sci-fi movies where giants created by radiation from nearby nuclear testing trampled the town.

Now, with a growing trend toward location shooting, the city that sells itself with flash and pizzaz is wooing filmdom with an unorthodox combination of sizzle and scenery.

More than a dozen films for television and theatrical release have shot on location in Las Vegas during the past year, and a growing number are finding there is more to the city than the two ribbons of neon known as the Strip and downtown's Glitter Gulch.

David Balkan, producer of "Stark," an upcoming movie for CBS, spoke softly as his camera crews readied for a shot in the towering Red Rock Canyon area 20 miles west of Las Vegas.

"What a beautiful setting," Balkan said, nodding to mountains serving as a backdrop for actors Marilu Henner and Nick Surovy. "We couldn't ask for more beautiful scenery. We shot the entire movie on location. Filmmakers are going more and more to that. It gives a film a better look."

Balkan and his crew spent time filming in Strip casinos, the glittery downtown district, nearby deserts and the imposing mountains west of the city.

"We found Las Vegas very, very accommodating and the area provided for every kind of scene we needed," he said.

Bob Hirsch, the director of the motion picture and television division of the Nevada Commission on Economic Development, said producers are continually amazed at the scenery around Las Vegas.

"Everyone knows about Hoover Dam, but the people with 'Remington Steele' were astonished by the beauty of Lake Mead," Hirsch said. "I took some MTM (Mary Tyler Moore Productions) people up to Lee Canyon (a mountain ski area 45 minutes northwest of Las Vegas) and they were amazed to find water skiing and snow skiing areas within an hour of each other."

Recent shootings in the Las Vegas area have included "Starman," two episodes of "Hill Street Blues," episodes of "Remington Steele" and "Benson," "Stark," "Fever," "Vegas Strip Wars," "The Man From the South" and "Circus of the Stars."

There are also the films "Road Trip," "Lost in America," "Mugsy's Girls," "Desert Bloom," "Pritzie's Honor" and "The Hitcher."

"I think most people would agree that you can't fake Las Vegas," Hirsch said. "Every once in a while someone will try it and they think, 'Well, if I just buy a few feet of footage of the Strip and dress this card room up to look like a casino, I can pull it off.' It looks phony and everybody knows it, so we're finding less of that happening."

Two recent TV shows in which the leads spent time in Las Vegas featured Strip footage vintage 1960s — drawing the ire of Don Payne, who heads the city's news bureau.

"Some of these producers think they can go to stock film companies and get any Vegas footage to throw into the film. But they end up showing old shots that are a dead giveaway for anybody who knows our city," he said.

When Gov. Richard Bryan formed the film division two years ago, the state was earning about $5 million a year in movie production money. The figure for the first seven months of the current fiscal year is $20 million.

Hirsch is intent on selling all of Nevada as a movie set — from the glitter of Las Vegas and its nearby mountain areas to the scenic Sierra Nevada and Lake Tahoe in the north.

Debt-plagued festival begins 14th season

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Filmex, Hollywood's very own film festival, begins its 14th shaky season March 14 with another incredibly varied menu that includes 50 hours of fantasy and a 15½-hour feature.

Filmex is the handier name for the Los Angeles International Film Exposition, which has periodically gone through crisis and rebirth. Plagued by deficits, the directors fired founder Gary Essart last year and brought in a new team: executive director Suzanne McCormick, formerly with the Chicago Film Festival, and artistic director Ken Wlaschin, late of the London Film Festival.

The Filmex operation has a new headquarters, a picturesque bungalow on the grounds of the American Film Institute, formerly Immaculate Heart College.

"We're under the same roof this year — the three theaters of Mann's Westwood triplex," said Miss McCormick. "That has happened before, but in two big theaters in Century City. This year's theaters seat 500, 300 and 300, which are more suitable for discussions with the filmmakers after the screenings."

"This year we're having a competition for the American independent feature," added Wlaschin. "Sixteen films have been selected, and they will be judged by an international panel."

Opening night, always an important moneymaker for Filmex, will salute the British Film Year with a gala screening of "A Private Function," starring Maggie Smith and Michael Palin, the Monty Python man. It will be followed by a disco ball.

Both directors said "Heimat" ("Homeland") will be a major event.

"It is said to be the longest film ever made — 15 hours and 32 minutes," said Wlaschin. "It is not a television miniseries but a movie, filmed over a five-year period by Edgar Reitz. The story is semi-autobiographical — the story of a German village between 1919 and 1982. It has been a sensation in Germany."

The Filmex diet will be leaner this year — 150 films vs. 1984's 180. They come from 40 countries and the variety is astounding, everything from "Otto Is a Rhino," a Danish children's film to "Man Marked for Death," a Brazilian documentary.

The marathon screening features fantasy films. There also will be an all-night salute to sophistication with such movies as "Top Hat" and "Breakfast at Tiffany's." Champagne will be served between movies.

Tribute and retrospectives are always part of the Filmex fare. This year brings a salute to American Playhouse, which has helped finance such films as "El Norte" and "Testament." Academy Award day, March 25, will bring a salute to the late Janet Gaynor with screenings of the films for which she won the first best-actress Oscar: "Sunrise" and "Seventh Heaven."

"We inherited a deficit of about $300,000," said Miss McCormick. "Last year we were able to cut it down to $230,000, and we expect to reduce it by the same amount this year."

"American film festivals have always been underfunded," added Wlaschin. "It's impossible to make them pay by ticket sales only. So they must rely on grants and donations, plus special events such as we have the year around."

Holbrook honors, performs Twain

By JACKIE HYMAN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A chat with actor Hal Holbrook can produce some unexpected nuggets of information, such as how fast you have to draw a gun to play a gunslinger in a Western, or what Mark Twain said about monkeys.

Holbrook has performed his one-man show, "Mark Twain Tonight!" for 31 years. This year, he plans to take his act overseas in honor of Twain's 150th birthday.

It's also the 100th anniversary of the publication of "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," and the 75th anniversary of Twain's death.

In addition, Halley's Comet — which passed through the skies the year of Twain's birth and again the year of his death — is due to return late this year or early next.

The actor hasn't lost his enthusiasm for the writings of Twain, whose real name was Samuel Clemens.

"You hardly ever get a chance to do material as funny and wise," said Holbrook, who varies his show each time. "It has all the colored lights in it you could want."

It was hard for him to select a favorite quote from Twain, but he settled on, "I wonder if God invented man because he was disappointed in the monkey."

Performing a show for 31 years about 20 times each year, is certainly a challenge, Holbrook said.

"What it really comes down to is that's what acting's all about. The whole artistry or craft is to make it look like you're doing it for the first time even though you're not," he said in an interview.

In the middle of March, Holbrook will take a break from his Twain performances to play Abraham Lincoln in the TV miniseries, "North and South." He won one of his three Emmys portraying the 16th president in an earlier series, "Sandburg's Lincoln."

His other Emmys came for the TV series, "The Senator," and a TV movie, "Pueblo." He has also won a Tony award playing Mark Twain, and appeared in numerous films including "All the President's Men" and "Star Chamber."

The actor has taken on a five-year cable project as host and narrator of "Portrait of America" for Ted Turner's WTBS in Atlanta.

On May 23-24, he'll perform as Twain in the American Arts Festival in London and possibly tour the world under State Department auspices. Cities that have expressed an interest in seeing Holbrook's Twain include Lisbon, Prague, Bucharest, Cairo, Tel Aviv, Bombay and New Delhi, he said.

Holbrook has a few unsatisfied yens — to play a hobo, King Lear and Willy Loman in "Death of a Salesman" — and to star in a Western.

"I just want to be able to do the gunfight and ride horses," he said, adding that he's studied up on gunslinging.

"In order to make the draw really fast, you have to be able to draw, cock and shoot in less than half a second," he said.

WHY SETTLE FOR LESS THAN A BUICK?

Why should you...even if it's a small car you're looking for? You're exactly the person Buick had in mind when it designed the 1985 Skylark. A serious driver who wants practicality and affordability tempered by comfort and convenience. The very things Buicks have long been noted for...as well as for roominess and quiet and the security of a well-built car. They're all here in the '85 Skylark. Drive one today.

Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?
