Energy Costs Boost February Wholesale Prices .8 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rapidly rising energy costs pushed overall wholesale prices 0.8 percent higher in February, although food costs were falling, the government reported today. Unemployment dropped to the lowest rate since last April, but the decline was only slight.

The Labor Department's seasonally adjusted Producer Price Index for finished goods — down slightly from January's 0.9 percent — translates into about a 10 percent annual inflation rate. The 7.3 percent unemployment rate for February followed two months of 7.4 percent reports and ended a nine-month stretch in which the rate had hovered between 7.4 percent and 7.6 percent.

However, the decline of one-tenth of a percentage point is considered statistically insignificant by the Labor Department, which released both reports today.

By far the biggest jump in producer prices, which usually precede cost-of-living increases at the consumer level, was in energy costs.

The 3.6 percent energy-cost rise, the fourth straight big monthly increase, included a 6.5 percent jump in fuel oil prices and a 4.7 percent increase in gasoline costs at the wholesale level. However, prices for natural gas remained even after rising steadily for 10 months.

The trend toward higher energy costs is expected to continue, particularly in light of President Reagan's recent action to decontrol most remaining U.S. oil prices.

The consumer foods index declined 0.6 percent in February after showing no change in January, but government and private economists expect food prices to rise substantially later this year.

Prices for finished consumer goods other than food or energy rose 0.7 percent in Febrary after rising 0.8 percent in January, the report said.

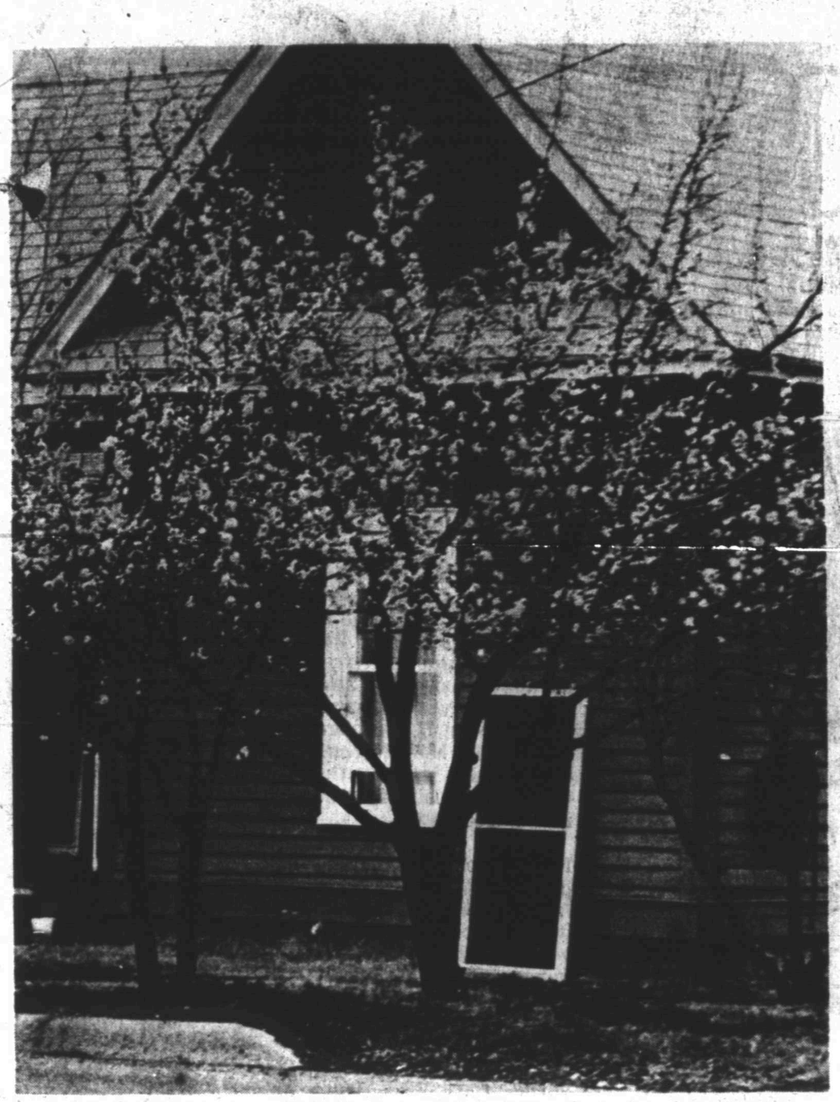

Increases occurred for a broad range of items, including alcoholic beverages, cosmetics, drugs, tires and tubes, health products and newspaper publishing.

Overall, the producer price index rose 1 percent, before adjustment for seasonal variations, to 262.4. That means that goods which cost $10 in 1967 would cost $26.24 today.

One day earlier, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told the U.S. Chamber of Commerce "we know that inflation will come down" if the administration's economic package is passed.

He asked the businessmen to write members of Congress to assure continued pressure when general public interest in the program diminishes in coming weeks and months.

Administration officials predict that if the president's program is approved by summer, results should show up late this year.

FALSE SPRING?—Several weeks of spring-like weather brought fruit trees into bloom here, but the calendar says there are at least a couple more weeks of winter and forecasts for the weekend confirm it. A winter storm watch is in effect for the Panhandle, and colder weather for all of Northwest Texas is predicted tonight and Saturday. (SDN Staff Photo)

Winter Storm Heading Into West Texas Area

An unusually long stretch of spring-like weather may come to an abrupt end this weekend in West Texas, forecasters report.

The national Weather Service posted a winter storm watch for the Panhandle late tonight, and colder weather, along with a good chance for additional moisture, is predicted for the remainder of Northwest Texas.

The prolonged warm period had brought out vegetation and fruit tree blossoms in the Snyder area, and the forecasts for the weekend prompted some concern.

Forecasters warned that the winter storm might dump as much as four inches of snow in the Panhandle late tonight and Saturday. Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms are expected to develop over West Texas by tonight and over the remainder of the state by Saturday.

The weather is expected to turn much colder in the Panhandle tonight, with precipitation starting as rain and then turning to snow.

The forecasts indicated that it probably would be touch-and-go as to whether temperatures dropped below the freezing mark in this area, but the possibility exists.

Keeping tab on our neighbors:

Bob Buckel of the Lamesa Press-Reporter says he has been saving address labels from mail coming into that office directed to people or departments or newspapers that do not exist anymore.

"The mail is a Hall of Fame for former editors and other employees of Lamesa's newspapers down through history," Buckel reports.

Some have been gone for decades, some are long deceased, but their names remain on mailing lists scattered over the country and the last address they had for them was the Lamesa newspaper. Even the paper itself still gets mail with former names attached.

Then there is the mail addressed to various departments or "desks" rather than to individuals.

"We should, by all rights, have a fine arts editor, a boating editor, an outdoor editor, a farm editor, an oil editor, a church editor and a whole host of managing and executive editors," Buckel continues. That is, of course, if the mail is delivered precisely as addressed.

"One that puzzles me is addressed to Vivian's Notebook, at the Texas Reporter," Buckel says. "I never met Vivian, but I bet she's got a swell notebook if it gets mail all by itself."

We still get mail here at the SDN addressed to former employees, some of them dating back several decades. Occasionally there will be something addressed to Willard Jones, who sold the Scurry County Times (forerunner of the SDN) more than 30 years ago, and lots of mail coming in still has names of persons who were here in the intervening years.

But Buckel also marvels that the Postal Service people are able to deliver some of the mail because of the way it is addressed. Wrong box numbers, wrong Zip Codes, the misspelling of the town and other errors are not unsual.

One thing that most of this mail has in common, however, is that it is junk, pure and simple. Therefore, it doesn't take long to dispose of it.

Linda Haynes of the McLean News has her dander up about the way some of the media treat women in major news stories.

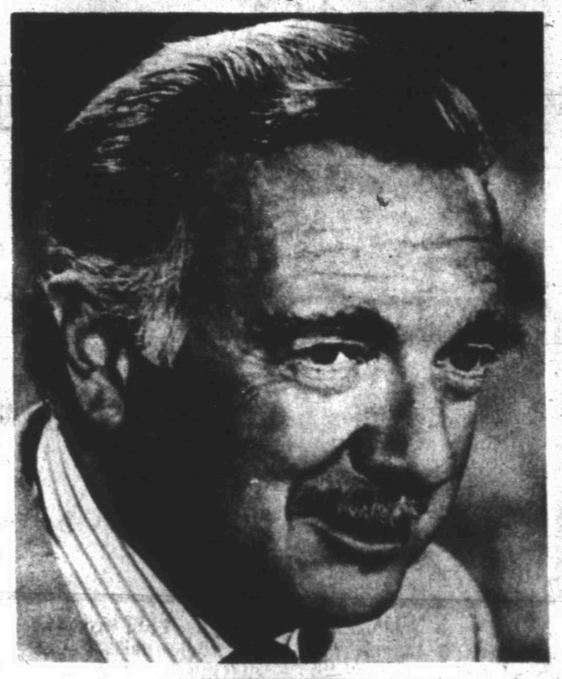

"Have you ever noticed that newspaper reporters invariably describe the clothes of women in the news? Last week a woman was indicted for shooting her husband, and the newspaper carried a full paragraph description of what she was wearing when she came before the judge!"

She continues, "Just once I want to read a story like this: Joe Blow, accused of the May 5 robbery of the U-Take-It Convenience Store, appeared before Judge T. M. Wright today and pled guilty to the charge of robbery. Blow, who wears his brown hair in a modified page-boy style, was wearing rugged blue denims, a plaid flannel shirt featuring two front pockets, and brown work boots. The judge, recently appointed to the job, was wearing a new black serge robe which was cut just low enough to reveal a lightly starched white polyester collar...."

We confess that she has a point. However, we must contend that not only men, but women as well, are more interested in what the women in the news wear—or don't wear—than in the attire of men.

WALTER CRONKITE

Walter Cronkite Leaving Anchor

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Cronkite is retiring as the nation's most beloved anchorman tonight, leaving his familiar seat at "CBS Evening News" to Dan Rather after 19 years of assuring Americans that "that's the way it is."

Cronkite, recognized in a poll taken in the mid-1970s as the most trusted man in America, leaves as the pre-eminent figure in television journalism.

"He has been an absolute giant, and all of us in the business owe him a great deal," said Roone Arledge, president of ABC News and Sports, whose "World News Tonight" stands to gain from Cronkite's departure.

The competition for Cronkite's faithful began several days ago, though neither Arledge nor William J. Small, NBC News' president, expects any sudden shift in viewer preference.

"I think a lot of people underestimate Dan Rather's ability and popularity," said Small, a former CBS News executive. "I don't see any immediate change. If one does come, it will be a matter of months."

Rather takes over as "Evening News" anchorman Monday night. His new contract was originally reported to be for $8 million over five years, but

Tax Package Before House

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A legislative package to prevent shifting of the tax burden from businesses to homeowners has been introduced in the Texas House.

Reps. Lee Jackson, Wayne Peveto and John Sharp said taxing property on its full market value, which will be mandatory next year, would cause the shift if the Legislature does not prevent it.

The lawmakers said homestead exemptions of up to 20 percent would remedy the problem.

Steve Bartlett, Dallas city councilman, said the package has the support of the Texas Municipal League and the Dallas and Fort Worth city councils.

Bartlett called the measures "the best hope Texas cities have for achieving equity and fairness in the property tax system."

Dallas revalued property in 1979 and saw huge jumps in residential tax assessments while business' share of the tax burden stayed about the same.

Survey Set On Housing For Elderly

Bill Warner, chamber manager, said the survey is being conducted to determine whether rental housing units for the elderly are needed here.

No definite plans for any projects have been made, although there has been some indication of interest. A survey of need would be one of the first things needed if someone should be interested in pursuing such a project, Warner said. Therefore, the chamber decided to conduct a survey and then consider further efforts if enough interest is shown.

Senior citizens are being mailed survey forms along with return envelopes. They are being asked to complete the forms and drop them in the mail as soon as possible.

Kids Not Entitled To Money

WACO, Texas (AP) — Two South Texas youths are not legally entitled to $490,000 police took from them four years ago, but they may be allowed to keep it anyway, a judge declared.

Jurors in a civil trial decided Thursday that the money was stolen, eliminating the youths as rightful possessors. However, U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon said the youths, who maintain they dug up the money on a South Texas ranch, still might be able to retain the cash if he decides police improperly seized it.

Getty To Sue For Permit

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Shocked by the Florida Cabinet's refusal to allow Getty Oil Co. to drill for natural gas in an estuary, the giant firm will sue the state to seek a drilling permit.

The Tallahassee firm of Hopping, Boyd, Green & Sams is preparing to file suit in Florida's 1st District Court of Appeal, Getty spokeswoman Michelle Beale said Thursday afternoon.

Clements Backs Tuition Hike

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The high cost of a college education has not kept anyone who "really wants one" from getting it, Gov. Bill Clements says.

Supporting a proposal to double tuition at state colleges and raise medical school tuition 400 percent, Clements recommended that poor and middle class students take advantage of existing loan and scholarship programs if they find themselves strapped.

Houston Hunting Teachers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston-area public schools have begun an intensive out-of-state recruiting drive in an effort to ease a severe shortage of teachers in this growing metropolitan area.

Ben Keith, personnel director for the Spring Independent School District, said Thursday, "If we get out there and hustle, we can find teachers. Our Texas colleges are turning out fewer teachers, but other states have greater supplies because of layoffs."

Hijackers Kill Hostage

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP — Hijackers aboard a Pakistani jetliner at the Kabul airport today shot and killed a Pakistani diplomat held with more than 100 other hostages since Monday, the Afghan radio said. At least four Americans are among the hostages.

The hostage, a Pakistani diplomat assigned to Tehran, Iran, was shot while the leader of three hijackers spoke by cockpit radio to a Pakistani negotiating team at the airport, the broadcast said. There was no indication what led to the firing.

Past Presidents On CC Project

The Snyder Chamber of Commerce is forming a special "task force" composed of former presidents of the organization for a special project, Bill Warner, chamber manager, has announced.

The group will be asked to hold a series of meetings and evaluate the chamber organization and make recommendations to improve its effectiveness,

Warner said a number of past presidents still live here and most of them are still active in community life. He said that so far 16 past presidents have responded affirmatively to the request that they serve on the task force. Their tenures as chamber president dates from the early 40s to the present, which means there will be representatives who were active in chamber work from the pre-oil boom days to the 80s enabling them to observe Snyder's development under various conditions that existed over a period of four decades.

Past presidents of the chamber who have agreed to serve on the task force and the year, or years, they served as president, include Lyle Deffebach, 1944-45; James Rosser, 1951; Hubert Cargile, 1954; Wacil McNair, 1956; Dr. Wilton N. Jones, 1957; Gene L. Dulaney, 1960; R. C. Patton, 1963; Henry Clark, 1968 and 1977; Max von Roeder, 1970; Mel Gilbert, 1971; Paul Sizemore, 1972; John Thomas, 1973-74; Joe Williamson, 1975; Roy Kidd, 1978; Dalton Walton, 1979; and Charlie Henderson, 1980.

ceta misses mark

If each of the CETA scandals frequently making the news were in themselves unique, it could be chalked up to a case of cleverness overcoming strict safeguards. But the CETA programs seem to invite scandal. Last year alone 64 CETA operations in 15 cities were hit with indictments for embezzlement, misuse of funds, false statements, kickbacks and bribery.

The modus operandi seems to be similar, with a few local variations thrown in:

Get into the CETA pipeline and set up your own employment training firm to oversee the grants.

Use the money to pay you and your friends lavish salaries, rent prestigious offices and buy expensive furnishings.

Hire a secretary skilled in writing reasonalbly credible reports, and you're on the gravy train.

Does anybody get trained? Do some unemployable people receive the skills they need to get and hold a job? Who cares, as long as the money keeps coming in. And as long as the unemployment figures are high, you've got the rationale for continuing the operations.

If the available pool of "needy" people declined, somebody might question whether spending all this money were necessary.

That's not the way all CETA programs have been run, to be sure, but the pattern has been remarkably consistent across the country. And the pattern has persisted because the program itself builds in the incentives to do it that way.

For the central administrators in Washington, the emphasis is on making grants, and making them as big as possible. the bigger the grants, the more people get them, then the greater your prestige, and the bigger your appropriation is likely to be for next year. The system doesn't offer big rewards for careful monitoring of expenditures or prevention of waste.

If the Reagan administration is serious about cutting out wasteful programs, CETA would be an ideal place to start. Since it began in 1974 as a modest $1.2 billion job training program it has expanded to a bloated bureaucracy that can show little in the way of results. Congressman William Dannemeyer has suggested that $3.1 billion be sliced from the CETA budget for this year. That would be a modest pruning measure.

If CETA cutbacks (or even, dare we say it, phasing out the program to nothingness) were accompanied by a program of tax breaks for employers and elimination of regulations in the inner cities along the lines of the urban enterprise zones idea, that would be even better.

But we don't want to fall into the trap of suggesting that one appraoch to poverty needs to be replaced by another approach.

The CETA program has proven itself inherently wasteful and not helpful to the poor and unemployed. It should be eliminated, independently and posthaste. Its demise should not be contingent on a replacement.

Nowaday: only the most hideo : of crimes will get y the death sentence. E n then, with a good lawyer, a lot of money, and a little luck, your chances of beating the rap are pretty good. And if worse comes to worse there are enough ways to appeal for a person to live out his normal life span with a death row address, if he dies when he is supposed to.

In the days of old, the judicial system was much more simple. You did something wrong, you hanged. Very neat and efficient, if not always accurate.

Once tried and sentenced to death there was only one hope of survival and that was to survive the execution. And you can bet your life that was no easy trick. Technically, even when the execution failed to accomplish its intended purpose, the criminal was not automatically reprieved, as is the common myth, but out of humanitarian reasons was given a prison term instead or perhaps even set free. That was probably the world's fastest and most effective rehabilitation program. And besides, those people weren't barbarians. It is only today that we keep the prisoners sweating, until finally they beg for execution, and then sometimes don't get it. Talk about cruel and unusual punishment.

A publication of U.S. News and World Report outlines some of the instances in which criminals survived their prescribed punishment.

One of the most famous cases of a man surviving his date with death occurred in England. John Lee survived three hanging attempts when the trap door to the scaffold refused to open. The trapdoor worked perfectly during tests and it was later deduced that a warped board was responsible and that the prison chaplain, who was present at the executions but not the tests, caused it to bend and jam the trapdoor.

Lee's sentence was commuted to life imprisonment and he was later released and he emigrated to the U.S. where he died in 1933.

Anne Greene was completely freed after her "execution". In 1650 she was sentenced to be hanged for the murder of a child. After hanging for half an hour, she revived as a surgeon was about to dissect her body. She recovered completely, married and had three children.

A chap named John Smith, sentenced for housebreaking in 1705, had been hanging for 15 minutes, when a reprieve arrived. He was immediately cut down and revived. He was pardoned on the condition that he rejoin the army and he spent the remainder of his days known as half-hanged Smith.

Margaret Dickson of Scotland was on her way to the graveyard after her hanging, and gave the patrons of a tavern quite a scare, when she climbed out of her coffin. Since she had been offically executed, her husband was legally a widower. So to make things proper, she was required to marry him again.

Poor bloke. He got a second chance at bachelorhood and blew it. I guess some people just never learn.

I have a recurring nightmare in which my son is getting the Nobel Prize for Science. After he is presented the award, he turns to see the entire audience on its feet clapping wildly. Finally, the applause dies down and there is a silence that lasts at least a year.

I can't stand it. I crawl to the stage on my hands and knees, tug on his pantsleg and whisper, "Say thank you!" He is 55 years old.

To a mother, "Thank you" is the ultimate in manners and breeding. It's toney...it's style...it transcends raggy underwear, knotted shoestrings and dog hairs on your sweater. It melts the hardest hearts, bends the rigid, and insures a happy death for her.

To a child, "Thank you" is something you say to make your mother let go of the cookie.

Looking back, I think my kids were under the influence of hypnosis. They'd stand there like a fire hydrant until I said the key words, "What do you say?" and then they'd respond with all the feelings of a doll with a string in its neck, "Thank you".

They'd say "Thank you" for a piece of auto glass and a weasel tooth.

They'd be comatose when someone gave them a ride to the library in a blizzard.

The "Thank you" experience may be an exercise in futility, but it is one lesson that mothers never seem to give up on. They pursue it forever. The other day I said to my son, "Did you ever thank Mrs. Butler for that little bathtub toy for your birthday?"

"Mom! That was 23 years ago."

"She's probably wondering if you liked it."

"I ate it, didn't I?"

"And I don't suppose you ever thanked Aunt Mary for the atlas for your graduation."

"Why are you bringing all of this up now?"

"Because I am tired and I want to put child-raising behind me."

He lifted up the phone, dialed and finally said, "Hey, thanks a lot!"

I beamed. "You see, that wasn't so difficult, was it? By the way, who were you talking to?"

He shrugged. "It was a recording. I forgot myself."

"Grapes of wrath" is not a Biblical expression but was suggested by Isaiah. Probably Mrs. Julia Ward Howe was thinking of the "blood of the grape" when in the Battle Hymn of the Republic she wrote "He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored."

"I have trodden the winepress alone.... and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments. And I will stain all my raiment." — Isa. 63:3

WASHINGTON (NEA)—On the night of Feb. 12, a secret meeting was held in Bonn West Germany, among Hans-Dietrich Genscher, Jean Francois Poncet and Lord Carrington. They are the foreign ministers, respectively, of West Germany, France and Great Britain.

The purpose of the meeting was to assess the new U.S. government and to establish a united front for their dealings with Washington. The foreign ministers were reportedly more than a little concerned and confused over the early signals emanating from the Reagan administration.

"Consistency" is the Western Europeans' frequent response when asked what they would most like to see in U.S. foreign policy. One of their chief complaints about the Carter administration was its changeability.

As an official of the French foreign ministry puts it: "We never knew from one day to the next whether some policy that was considered anchored in bedrock would suddenly change completely. And always we were expected to change as quickly in line with the new policy."

The Europeans were also uneasy about President Carter's emphasis on human rights. They well understand—without necessarily agreeing with—power politics of the type practiced by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. But they often found it difficult to comprehend the policies pursued by Carter and his aides.

The Europeans were pleased that President Reagan chose Alexander Haig as his secretary of state. The former NATO commander is personally known to them, is almost universally respected and is perceived to be practitioner of power politics in the Kissinger mold.

But the Europeans were less pleased with the often conflicting pronouncements coming out of Washington urging the early weeks of the Reagan administration.

Especially unsettling to them was the flap over the deployment of the neutron warhead on European-based missiles. First, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said that the United States would like to begin production and deployment of the warhead. Then Haig said that such statements carried no weight unless they came from his office.

This quick about-face was noted only briefly in this country. But in Europe, where the neutron bomb is a major issue, both Weinberger's statement and Haig's counterstatement received banner headlines. The Europeans saw the exchange as a continuation of the inconsistency that characterized U.S. foreign policy under Carter.

The foreign ministers reportedly agreed in Bonn upon some common policies that they will pursue during their forthcoming visits to Washington.

Detante with the Soviet Union has had a greater practical impact on Western Europe than on the United States. It has been felt especially strongly by West Germany, which is enjoying a dramatic lessening-of tensions with East Germany, and by France, which has found a major export market in Eastern Europe.

Thus, both countries have a great interest in preventing a resumption of the Cold War. They are worried about how the United States might respond to Soviet intervention in Poland and are seeking to find out exactly what contermeasures are being contemplated by the Reagan administration.

Equally important to the Europeans are further arms-limitation talks. The NATO allies agreed to the deployment of additional U.S. missiles on their soil in exchange for Carter's pledge to begin negotiations on mutual reduction of medium-range missiles in Eastern and Western Europe.

The foreign ministers agreed to tell the Reagan administration that their governments will oppose the deployment of additional missiles if the United States refuses to pursue those talks.

The European foreign ministers are expected to stay in close contact over the next few months concerning their dealings with Washington. They say that their top priorities will be determining precisely what the United States wants from its Western European allies—and informing Reagan and Haig that the allies want from them a clear and consistent foreign policy.

Decorator Tells About Clients In "There's No Place Like Home"

BY BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

You may hide your symptoms from your doctor and your assets from your lawyer, but don't try to hide a thing from your decorator, because a decorator always knows.

And Carleton Varney, the decorator whose clients have included Rosalynn and Jimmy Carter, Joan Crawford, Van Johnson and Ethel Merman, not only knows. He also tells in his new book, "There's No Place Like Home."

Who else but a decorator would be privy to such oddly assorted facts as his clients' favorite colors and drinks, the way their bedrooms are furnished and the contents of their closets and drawers? Who else but her decorator could describe Joan Crawford's preference for fake flowers and plants (less messy than the real thing) and plastic covered upholstery? Or Ethel Merman's red, white and blue color schemes and Polly Bergen's all-white bedroom? Who else could detail Van Johnson's method for transforming his hotel room into an instant home?

Besides providing entertaining insights into the decorating and other habits of his celebrity clients, Varney's new book recounts some details in his battle with the late Dorothy Draper, the woman he calls the greatest decorator of them all and an early mentor of his. (Varney purchased and eventually took over the Draper firm almost 20 years ago, but not without a fight from Mrs. Draper.)

With many decorating books and a syndicated column to his credit plus scores of hotel projects and costly private homes, Varney has been in the thick of the decorating world for many years. But he is probably best known for the party settings he created at the White House for President and Mrs. Carter. And, in an interview at his office at Dorothy Draper & Co., he turned straight to the subject of the White House.

"The only thing people ever seem to ask me any more is how does it feel to be out of the White House. But I don't feel that I'm out. It's not as though the White House is up for sale to the latest inhabitant. The White House belongs to all of us, and the president's family simply lives there for a while," he said.

Varney has been sorry to see public statements that the White House is in threadbare or poor condition.

"The public rooms which get heavy use may be a bit threadbare. But refurbishing them is not up to any single administration. It's up to the Fine Arts Committee that is in charge of the job," he said.

The private part of the house is in excellent condition, in his opinion. As for changing around the private quarters, Varney asserted that there were enough extras in the White House store rooms to satisfy anyone without resorting to new purchases.

He disclaimed any designation as the Democrats' decorator, even though he says he expects to work on refurbishing the Washington home of Joan and Walter Mondale. "I do have clients in the Reagan administration as well, you know," said Varney.

Politics aside, Varney has a cheerfully irreverent attitude toward himself and his clients. He doesn't believe in playing the status game.

"Today, labels have become more important than the products they identify," he said. "I'd like to see people refuse to accept labels. We'd all be better off."

Good design is not about labels; it is about appropriateness to the environment.

"You can't have a Texas log cabin fixed up like a New York penthouse. It's just not appropriate. And what's right for Georgia is not going to appeal in California. We're all too addicted to following some fashion must instead of seeking appropriateness for our own lives. That's why you get people in the sunny south buying and wearing mink coats. Mink coats in a hot climate are simply ridiculous," he said.

Dear Abby

Gold Digger Gets Nailed By Irate Customer

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I used to get a manicure every other week. My manicurist charges $12, which is all profit because she works out of her home and is self-employed. Considering this, I never tipped her. However, I always gave her a gift on special occasions.

Last Christmas I gave her a pair of expensive costume earrings. The next time I went for my manicure she showed me the gifts all her other clients had given her, then she proceeded to return my earrings, saying, "Sorry, I wear only real gold."

Abby, I thought this was so rude I never went back to her. Later her neighbor told me that she returned my gift because I had never tipped her.

What do you think of her behavior in view of her self-employed status?

BETTY E.

DEAR BETTY: Her behavior was gross, and her profit was net.

DEAR ABBY: After 19 years of marriage, my husband decided he wanted a night out with the boys. I wrote to you, and you said it was good for a man to have a little diversion from his work and everyday routine, so I accepted your answer and have been trying to live with it.

The problem is that my husband has been coming home at 4 a.m. and 5 a.m. from his "nights out." By the time he gets home I am not only upset, I am worried sick, wondering what has happened to him. Do you think he is being fair to me? He says he is not hurting me, and I should go to sleep and not worry about him, but I can't go to sleep, and I can't help worrying about him.

I feel that if this continues it will put a strain on our marriage. Please tell me what to do.

READY TO CRACK

DEAR READY: My idea of "a night out with the boys" is a card game, bowling, seeing a basketball game, etc. — not disappearing until dawn! He is hurting you. Perhaps if he were more specific about where he is, or if he called you, it would put you at ease. A more equitable solution would be for you to take a "night out with the girls" and agree that both of you should be home at a certain time.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to NO GUTS, who struck and killed a dog with tags, disposed of the dog, but didn't have the guts to notify the owner:

People who really love their pets do not let them run loose! A friend of mine will never walk again because the driver of the car in which she was riding swerved to avoid hitting a dog and struck a telephone pole.

Dead dogs and cats alongside the road are mute testimony to pets who have had their "freedom." People who really love their pets do not let them run loose either to get hurt or killed by motorists, or to become a nuisance or menace to others.

LOVES ANIMALS — AND PEOPLE

DEAR LOVES: It is said that man's best friend is his dog. How sad that sometimes a dog's worst enemy is his master.

(Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Margaret Martin Lectures On Treatment Of Diabetics

Margaret Martin, a registered nurse at D.M. Cogdell Hospital, spoke to 17 members of Beta Sigma Phi at their regular meeting Tuesday night about the education and treatment of diabetic patients.

Education of the patient is fundamental in controlling the disease, she stated. Nurses get very involved in the education process, according to Mrs. Martin, and are usually sent to patients' bedsides to explain exactly what is happening to them.

Diabetes is caused by the body's inability to use sugar or glucose properly. And though it cannot be cured, it can be controlled with proper care. She discussed the insulin pump, a device worn outside the patient's body that steadily infuses insulin. Insulin helps glucose enter body cells. Without it, glucose stays in the bloodstream.

Mrs. Martin concluded the discussion by handing out literature about diabetes and answering several questions.

Mona Bryan, chapter president, presided at the business meeting which followed. Wanda Early reported that pledges have completed their training and will receive the Ritual of Jewels on March 17. The ritual will be held in conjunction with a formal dinner in the home of Carolyn Limmer. Carolyn Greene reminded members of the March 7 party which has been planned by husbands of members. Others making reports were Dena Ellis and Sue Sewell.

Hostesses for the meeting were Donna Fowler and Paula Middleton. Nancy Ballinger was chairman for the evening program and the hostess gift was won by Cyndee Gayle.

Getting rid of a loser before knocking out the ace of trumps in a slam contract can be a frightening experience. Look at what South had to go through on today's hand.

South would easily make his slam without a diamond lead, but of course, West had no problem in finding that lead. After declarer won his diamond ace at trick one, he had one problem — getting rid of that diamond loser before playing spades. He solved it, but it required patience, and some good luck.

High hearts were led at tricks two, three and four. The third round of hearts was trumped with dummy's queen of spades. If East held the ace of trumps he could overruff and lead a diamond, but East didn't have that nice card.

Now South led dummy's king of clubs. Second bit of luck. East held the ace and could do nothing better than play it. South ruffed.

Another heart was led. West could ruff that with the ace of trumps, but South would simply discard dummy's diamond loser and claim. So West discarded.

South ruffed with dummy's king of spades, led the queen of clubs, discarded his losing diamond, and finally led a trump to make slam.

Incidentally, the bidding was not exactly scientific, but everything came up roses for South.

ARE ANNOUNCING SEPARATE BILLING
EFFECTIVE FROM APRIL 1st, 1981
WHY THE RADIOLOGIST'S BILL IS SEPARATE FROM THE HOSPITAL BILL
X-Ray Costs
Hospital's Charge
Radiologist's Fee

The radiologist is a private physician specializing in the use of x-rays and radioactive substances used in medial diagnosis and therapy. Your physician requested the services of the radiologist in interpreting the results of your recent examination in the X-ray Department.

With some examinations, the radiologist was personally involved in the examination. If you had only films made, your personal contact may have been solely with the technologist. Once the films were made and checked, they were presented to the radiologist for his interpretation, as well as his written and oral consultation with your physician.

The hospital bill will include a charge for x-ray to cover the use of its equipment, the films, supplies, and technical personnel. The bill from the radiologist is for his professional consultative services.

Prophecy Seminar To Begin Sunday

REV. HOBART CASTEEL

Rev. Hobart Casteel of Monteclair, Calif. will be teaching a prophectic seminar Sunday through Thursday at the First Assembly of God, located on 19th and College Ave. Service time is 10:50 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

"Rev. Casteel will be sharing with the people of First Assembly of God some of the amazing prophecies of the Word of God, which are being fulfilled now, and other prophecies which will soon take place," said Rev. James Jackson, pastor.

Rev. Casteel teaches from a 5½ feet by 30 feet artistic chart. Time will be alloted for asking of questions during each service. Everyone invited and there is no registration or tuition fee for this seminar, said Rev. Jackson.

Rev. Casteel is an ordained minister of the Assemblies of God. He received his Bible training at the Shiloh Bible Institute in Zion, Illinois. He is well known in several Pentecostal organizations. He has ministered throughout the United States.

"His teaching is simple yet profound. The ardent student of the Bible and the younster equally receive instruction and edification from his teaching," said Rev. Jackson.

Governor Is Glad Gasoline Tax Proposal Has Been Ressurected

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A trip to the gasoline pump could press your wallet even flatter than it does now if Speaker Bill Clayton can persuade lawmakers to re-examine one of Gov. Bill Clements' ideas.

Clayton, D-Springlake, has resurrected the Republican governor's proposal to raise the state tax on gasoline, and Clements said Thursday he's all for it.

"If the Legislature in its wisdom sees fit to raise the gasoline tax, I certainly will sign that bill," he said.

Clements stressed that the idea is still just "floating" while Clayton tries to find out how much support it might get from lawmakers.

Clements' original proposal to double the current nickel-a-gallon tax — the nation's lowest — was practically laughed out of the House.

"This idea was dropped several months ago (because) it got no support whatever in the Legislature, and I said so at the time," Clements told his weekly news conference.

But Texans' successful conservation efforts have made the proposition more attractive, he said.

Funds from the tax pay for highway construction and maintenance, as well as for public schools. Clements said the highway department's shortfall, which is made up by general taxes, could be as much as $900 million over the next two years.

"This is caused by less driving, a conservation measure, and smaller cars, also conservation," Clements said. "It means that revenues are going down while the cost of highway maintenance is going up."

Asked if voters would perceive a tax increase as "punishment" for using less gasoline, Clements said people who drive should pay for state roads.

"This is a user tax. The philosophy is that people who use the highways should pay for the highways, in part. Dipping into the general revenue funds in place of the user tax is wrong," he said.

He added he isn't sure other taxes should be reduced to compensate for an increase, as he had insisted when he broached the idea last October.

"This has been revived by Bill Clayton on his own investigation (of state highway funding)," Clements said. He said he would reveal details of any proposal "when we're farther down the road."

He said he didn't know how much or in what form an increase would be proposed because "this is an initiative of Speaker Clayton's," but hinted that trucks might have to pay more because they cause "most of the wear and tear" on Texas roads.

Czar Peter III was dethroned in 1762 in a coup in Russia.

Sharing And Caring Theme Of BSU Meeting On Aging

"Sharing and Caring" was the theme of the first annual Baptist Student Union conference on Aging held recently at Baylor University.

BSU council members from Western Texas College attending were Rhonda Reynolds from Crosbyton and Linda Wright from Sweetwater. BSU Director Jerry Summers also participated in the conference, which was held to seek ways for BSU members to improve or begin ministries to older people.

Sessions examining biblical perspectives on aging, setting up a ministry to older people and other topics were held.

Students were encouraged to actively care for the elderly to share the love of God and to restore a sense of purpose and value in the lives of often-neglected older persons. The conference was coordinted by students of the Baylor BSU and led by professors and workers in the field of ministry to the aging.

The BSU group at WTC plans to begin a personalized ministry to the elderly in the Snyder community soon, Summers said.

Different causes for diabetes

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Our 25-year-old daughter was admitted to the hospital Friday with diabetes. She has been losing weight steadily for some time while maintaining that she ate "like a horse." We live in a different city so we weren't aware that she was constantly thristy and urinated very frequently. The disease was well advanced and they are putting her on insulin right away.

Two sugar tests yesterday were 400 and 450. Her doctor said the normal level was around 110.

My husband and I have six healthy children so this has been quite a shock to us. We always thought it was hereditary and know of no other cases on either side of the family. We would certainly appreciate any answers you can give us.

DEAR READER — It is always a shock to parents to find out that one of their children has a health problem. Your story is typical of advanced diabetes. In the early stages a person may not have enough changes to lose a lot of sugar in the urine. There may be no symptoms then.

Later, when a lot of sugar is lost in the urine — and the sugar can be made from protein as well as coming from carbohydrates — diabetics lose a lot of calories in the urine. So they do eat an enormous amount and still lose weight. The sugar has to be diluted to stay in solution and for reasonable kidney function, so the kidney eliminates a lot of urine. This in turn requires a constant replacement of the lost water.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes: Diagnosis, Prevention and Management, to help you understand your daughter's problem better. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

There is a family tendency to have some forms of diabetes. But there are several different causes for diabetes. Some cases are now known to be caused by a virus infection that attacks the islets of Langerhans, the part of the pancreas that forms insulin. Mumps has been implicated in some cases. So your daughter may be the only member of your family who ever has the disease.

And there are lots of new developments in helping diabetics which she is young enough to be able to use in her lifetime.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please tell me which foods I should eat and not eat for colon trouble? I know a few but not enough.

DEAR READER — Colon trouble could mean gas, constipation, diarrhea or colon spasms. It makes a difference which one you are talking about.

In general, coffee (including decaffeinated products), tea, colas and chocolate can irritate a sensitive colon. Cold drinks can precipitate a colon spasm as in irritable colon. Spices, such as garlic, irritate some people.

Alcohol is a frequent underlying cause of spastic colon symptoms and mild diarrhea. People who have milk intolerance may have gas, diarrhea and spastic colon symptoms from milk and foods made with milk or milk products.

Some people have trouble digesting carbohydrates and have gas from too many starchy foods. Of course, the gas formers are beans, the cabbage group and those foods that the individual learns cause gas for him.

Bulk is important, but remember that bran can cause gas.

For Poor...

Reagan Wants To End Free Legal Aid Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who clashed with a poor peoples' legal aid group when he was governor of California, is calling for elimination of all federal money for free legal help for the poor.

Reagan's budget proposals for 1982 also would give states direct control for the first time over 40 health and social programs — such as rat control and alcohol abuse — but provide 25 percent less money from Washington to run them.

Initially, that group was to include the Legal Services Corp., a program stretching back to the Johnson administration's anti-poverty initiatives of the mid-1960s.

But a spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget, who asked not to be identified, said Thursday that Reagan now wants to abolish Legal Services altogether.

The legal services agency, which provides free legal help in civil disputes to some 1.5 million people a year, has a $321 million budget for 1981 and requested $399 million for fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1.

Local legal aid groups who receive the money represent poor people only in civil disputes, such as divorces, tenant-landlord cases, consumer problems, minimum wage violations — particularly those involving farm workers — and suits against the government. The agency does not deal with criminal matters.

Reagan's attempt to abolish it reopens a fight that he fought and lost as governor of California.

In 1971, then-Gov. Reagan vetoed a $1.8 million federal grant to California Rural Legal Assistance, which he charged was illegally helping United Farm Workers President Cesar Chavez organize field hands.

Reagan, who frequently attacked the legal organization, reversed himself after a federal review group exonerated the California agency.

The fight this time is unlikely to be any easier for Reagan.

"We would be strongly opposed to any move of this kind," said Robert Evans, a lobbyist for the American Bar Association. "It would result in a serious denial to equal access to justice. ... Many view this as a keystone to the basic rights of people in this country."

Reagan also may encounter opposition to his plan for saving $2.2 billion by consolidating the 40 health and social programs into state grants for basic health, preventive health, social services and emergency aid.

Spending on the programs — totaling nearly $9 billion this year — would be reduced to $6.8 billion in the next fiscal year, with each state given the power to decide how its share should be spent.

Reagan, who will unveil complete details next week of his proposals to cut 1982 spending by $45 billion, has promised that the neediest Americans would not be hurt by the budget cuts. But opponents of increased state control argue that the federal government has shown itself to be a better guardian of needy Americans.

TEC Says Employment Bill Hampering Efforts

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Chairman Nolan Ward of the Texas Employment Commission says the Legislature, in its zeal to deny jobless pay to people who quit, has hampered the TEC's ability to find work for the unemployed.

The House passed a bill, 101-28, Thursday denying unemployment compensation — with some exceptions — to workers who quit their jobs, are fired for misconduct, or reject "suitable" jobs found for them by the TEC.

A worker's disqualification from benefits would continue until he or she found another job, earned wages equal to six weeks' benefits and then was laid off.

Maximum weekly benefit in Texas is $105 a week, about three-fourths of the minimum wage.

The bill next returns to the Senate for action on amendments added by the House, including one that Ward said could "gut" the bill by preserving the TEC's discretion to award jobless benefits if a worker had a good reason for quitting.

Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, the sponsor, said he would ask the Senate to accept the House changes and send the bill to Gov. Bill Clements for signature.

Ward said the bill would increase TEC responsibilities at a time when Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan has recommended a $150 million federal budget cut for state employment services.

The TEC's operating budget comes entirely from a federal tax on employers.

Ward said Donovan's proposal would reduce the TEC's job-finding staff, and Blake's bill would impose a further reduction by forcing the agency to assign more people to handling disputed claims for benefits.

"We should be concentrating on getting people jobs instead of on how disqualifications are handled. ... The people who drafted the bill really didn't understand unemployment compensation," Ward said.

House amendments allow payment of benefits to people who quit because of illness or pregnancy and to military personnel who do not re-enlist.

The House also made jobless benefits available to workers who quit because a spouse's job requires them to move, but they would have to wait at least six weeks to collect.

Ward said the commission currently imposes a disqualification of one or two weeks on people who quit because of a spouse's job transfer.

An amendment that attracted little attention says a person may collect benefits if his or her "work-related reason for separation from employment was urgent, compelling and of a necessitous nature so as to make separation involuntary."

"It almost guts their bill, that's what it does," Ward said of the change. "The test is going to be what a majority of reasonable commissioners, in considering a case, decides meets the test for a compelling reason, which is what we have now."

Blake, however, said he did not think the amendment damaged the bill.

"My people at the TEC assure me it doesn't harm the bill at all," he said.

Rural Areas Note Rise In Drug Use

By ANDREW SCHNEIDER Associated Press Writer

The use of marijuana, cocaine and even heroin is increasing rapidly in small-town America and may soon equal the levels that have made drugs a scourge of big cities, according to a new federal report.

Dr. Adele Harrell, who led the drug study for the National Institute on Drug Abuse, said researchers "found a slowing of growth of drug use in metropolitan areas but a steady growth in rural sections of the country, and chances are that we will soon see an equal level of drug use throughout the nation."

The report, obtained by The Associated Press, describes a study of the use of marijuana, hashish, cocaine, heroin, hallucinogens and psychotherapeutic drugs by 3,253 people 12 years old and older in "non-urban" communities of fewer than 25,000.

According to the study, one out of every four youths in rural areas had used marijuana at least once, and more than half of those using marijuana went on to use at least one other drug.

"It's clear from the study that states with large rural or non-urban populations have a growing problem and should be making a significant investment of efforts toward the problems of drug abuse," said Dr. Barry Brown, chief of the institute's treatment, research and assessment branch. "Young people in rural communities should be the prime target."

Brown said the survey, done in 1979 and compiled last year, indicates the rural drug problem is greatest in the Northeast and the West.

Differences between rural and non-rural communities still "are much more noticeable in the South and north central regions...than in other areas of the country," the report said.

"The rural drug problem is a different ballgame," Brown said, "and most of the nation's drug programs were constructed in the late '60s and throughout the '70s to serve urban drug abusers.

The report said that between 1972 and 1979, marijuana use among 18-to-26-year-olds in rural areas climbed more than 40 percentage points, with the result that marijuana is used by 61 percent of the rural population of that age. During the same seven years, urban use increased only 15 percentage points, to about 70 percent.

The use of harder drugs also increased more rapidly in the smaller communities. There was a 20 percentage-point increase to almost 30 percent among rural populations compared with only an increase of 10 percentage points to 35 percent in cities.

"Should these rates be sustained for only a few years, the metropolitan, non-metropolitan difference in illicit drug use among young adults may become a thing of the past," the report says.

Child Chokes While Playing

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — A 21-month-old girl who went outside to play accidentally killed herself when her T-shirt got tangled in a barbed wire fence and strangled her to death, police reported.

"It was an accidental death by strangulation," said Peace Justice Ruth Nicholson, after investigating the death of Treena Lake.

TIGER PITCHER – Snyder's Mike Roemisch, above, held Brownfield at bay for several innings here yesterday, recording eight strikeouts over the last four stanzas. Unfortunately for the Tigers, Brownfield had gone out to an early lead before Roemisch came aboard, and won the game 3-0 - Snyder's second loss of the season. SWC Cagers In Semis

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The late-blooming Texas Longhorns take on the regular season champion Arkansas Razorbacks and the Cinderella TCU Horned Frogs tangle with the Houston Cougars tonight in the semi-final round of the Southwest Conference Basketball Tournament.

The Longhorns, spurred by 21 points and 13 rebounds from towering LaSalle Thompson, rallied in the second half to down Texas Tech, 66-58, and TCU's Jeff Baker came off the bench to score 18 points to lift the Frogs to a 56-47 triumph over Baylor in tournament play Thursday night.

TCU meets Houston at 7:05 p.m. and the Texas-Arkansas tilt will begin 30 minutes after the first game is completed. SWC officials announced 2,500 tickets were still available for the two games and the 8:05 p.m. finals Saturday in the 16,000-seat HemisFair Arena.

Tonight's action matches teams that split during the regular season. Texas downed Arkansas 62-60 in Fayettville and the Razorbacks won 54-48 in Austin, while the Cougars beat TCU 68-59 in Houston and the Horned Frogs won 78-77 in four overtimes at Fort Worth.

Underdog TCU's victory in the first game Thursday upped its record to 11-17, the most wins for the Frogs since 1972, in the wackiest SWC basketball race in memory.

The surprise Frogs knocked the pre-season favorite Texas Aggies out of the playoffs Monday night, 62-60, on a 38-foot shot by Darrell Browder at the final buzzer.

The tenacious Horned Frogs smothered Baylor with a zone defense behind the scoring of Baker, who got 14 of his 18 points in the second half despite a 3-inch gash in his head, and 16 points from Browder.

TCU, shooting 56 percent from the field, ran up a 28-23 halftime lead over the cold-shooting Bears, who tied Houston for second place in the regular SWC season standings. Baylor ended the season with a 15-12 record.

The Longhorns, now 14-14 for the year, outshot the Raiders from the field 54 percent to 50 percent and outrebounded them 27-24. Texas turnovers helped keep Tech in the game as the Longhorns miscued nine times to five for the Raiders, who ended the season at 15-13.

Tulsa Eased Out Of MVC Tourney

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Creighton travels to Wichita State Saturday for the finals of the Missouri Valley Conference post-season tourney and an automatic berth in the NCAA tournament.

Wichita State dumped Drake and Creighton nipped Tulsa in the semifinals Thursday night, setting up the 1 p.m. final round.

Regular season league champion Wichita State got 25 points from Antoine Carr and 20 from Randy Smithson in the 88-74 victory over Drake.

"They are by far the best team in the league. They've got like a pro front line," said Drake's Lewis Lloyd, the Valley's top scorer, who had 21 points before fouling out with 7:14 left and Drake trailing 69-62.

Drake's season ends at 18-10 while the Shockers go into the finals 23-5.

The Tulsa Hurricane led Creighton 62-57 with 3:09 to play, but lost 66-64 when the Bluejays' Daryl Stovall hit a pair of free throws with one second left.

Tulsa had set up a last-second shot with the score tied, but the shot was off the mark and Stovall rebounded. He was fouled by Tulsa's Ed Lindblad with one second left.

Kevin McKenna led Creighton with 17 points while Greg Stewart had 18 for Tulsa.

Tulsa ends its season 21-7 while Creighton is 20-8. Two of the Bluejays' losses have come at the hands of Wichita State, 77-72 in Omaha and 83-70 in Wichita.

Netters Edged By Big Spring

Snyder netters slipped to Big Spring 10-9 this week, winning in boys play 7-3, but losing in girls, 7-2. The Tigers return to action Monday, taking on Sweetwater at the local courts.

Monday's fare will be Snyder's final District 2-4A team match of the season, making up a meeting which had originally been slated for earlier in the year. Snyder can take second overall in district team play with a win over the Mustangs. Fort Stockton is the 1981 2-4A team champion.

The Tigers trek to Big Spring on Thursday of next week, hoping to avenge this week's loss to the Steers, then compete in the Sweetwater tournament Friday.

Martinez Does The Trick As...

Cubs Blank Tigers, 3-0

Snyder's Tigers found the going tough again here yesterday afternoon and tumbled 3-0 to former 3-3A foe Brownfield High School. The loss gives the punch an 0-2 record for the young season, heading into doubleheader play Saturday in Lubbock.

Earlier this week, Snyder ran into Midland High pitching ace Mark Howitt, who sat the home team down 2-1. This time it was Brownfield's Jimmy Martinez who did most of the work, recording 12 strikeouts while allowing only four hits.

"We gave up runs early but we've held our own here these last few innings," said Tiger Coach Albert Lewis yesterday. "But we're not getting the hitting we need right now. This is the second real experienced pitcher we've gone up against in two games."

Martinez, one of the toughest pitchers the Tigers faced last year while in District 3-3A, fooled the locals most of the day, effectively mixing his pitches. He gave up only four hits - no two in the same inning - to Perry Echols, Tony Degrate, Neil Evans and Gerald Don Hicks.

Brownfield went up and down in the first inning, taking to the dugout after three straight fly balls. But the next two innings told the story.

Working against Tiger varsity newcomer Hicks, the Cubs opened with a walk and a fielder's choice before Ronny Jordan and Jerry Rimen cracked singles and Curtis Estill added a double. The effort notched two runs, and when singles from Pete Garza, Raymond Gibson, Stacy Terrell and Martinez led to a third in the next inning, Brownfield had all it would need.

Hicks was charged with two of the three runs; reliever Jesse Hernandez was tagged with the other.

Mike Roemisch, one of two returning starters for the Tigers from last year's state semi-final team, eventually took over the mound duties. His efforts over the last four innings - two singles and eight strikeouts - gave Tiger coaches something to smile about defensively, but Snyder was never to generate an offense.

Snyder looks to pump up its game this weekend, meeting Lubbock High in Lubbock at 1 p.m. Saturday. The Tigers then host two games - Midland at 4 on March 9 and Big Spring at 4 on March 10 - before beginning Monahans Tournament competition.

Felines Open Track; Six Lettermen Return

Snyder High School welcomes back six lettermen to last year's girls track team, which competes in its first meet of the season Saturday in San Angelo.

The returnees include juniors Brenda Anderson, who took fifth in the state shot put last season, and Pam Brown, who advanced to the state 100 meters two years ago. Both advanced to regionals in at least two events last season.

Another returning junior trackster is Kelly Dryden, who lettered as a sophomore but did not compete last year. Sophomores returning are Sherry Spells, a member of the regional qualifying 800 meter relay team, and Penny Wolfe and Patty Gleastine.

"We should do pretty well in the sprints this year," said second-term coach Patty Grimmett, speaking of the 100, 200 and 400 dashes and the 400 meter relay. Snyder also returns three girls off of the 800 relay team that finished second in district; Anderson, Brown and Spells.

"We don't have any milers or two-milers. We'll be hurting there," she added. "But we should do pretty well in our field events, and if the girls work hard, we could have a very representable team this year."

Anderson was also one of the district's best triple jumpers and will compete in that event this year, as well as the discus, the 200 meters, and two relays. Brown will compete in the 100 meters and the 400 and 800 relay.

Although Grimmett noted some changes in relays or individual events may occur as the season progresses, a tentative list has Dryden competing in the 100 meter hurdles, the 400 meters and the 400 and mile relays; Spells in the 800 and mile relays, the 400 dash and the triple jump; Wolfe in the shot, discus, 400 dash and mile relay; and Gleastine in the hurdles, 400 dash and mile relay.

Newcomers to varsity track include junior Michelle Townsel, 200 meters and high jump; sophomore Ramona Murphy, hurdles, 400 meters and 800 relay; and Linda Walker, 100 dash, 400 relay; Debra Cline, 800 run; Dena Underwood, high jump, 200 meters, 800 meters; Andrina Kitchens, 100 dash, long jump; and Robin Huntsman, high jump, long jump; all freshman.
