THREE FACE LIQUOR COUNT AFTER RAIDS

OFFICERS SALLY FORTH ON THREE 'RUM' HOLDOUTS

ONE WHITE MAN, MEXICAN AND NEGRO RUN AFoul OF LAW SUNDAY

"When the old cat's away, the mice begin to play," and when the sheriff leaves town law breakers get busy. But in this particular instance they played too long for Sheriff Johnston and members of his department successfully staged three raids Sunday evening.

Frank Lynch, M. Lucero, and Herschel Hamilton are in the county jail where they will await action of the grand jury on charges of violating the liquor law, four alleged drunks are helping them keep warm in the county jail, and two "gun toters" are going to have an opportunity to explain the necessity of artillery.

The first raid was staged shortly before dark Sunday night. Officers had been tipped off that there was a brewery two and one-half miles east of town and they went to investigate. Upon their arrival at the home of Frank Lynch they found what they sought—a real brewery with salt and tables and real service. One whole room was given over to the liquor business, officers charge.

Lynch was unarmed and arrested and later carried to the county jail. Something like 500 bottles of beer, dozens of empty bottles and other equipment found in his home were taken over by the officers.

More excitement follows. A pretty good haul for Sunday evening and officers were feeling good. Yet the real excitement was to follow when they had unloaded their cargo of headache producing liquid, lodged its owner in jail and had finished wiping the perspiration from their brows, they drove over to "Lit-

Two Youths Held In Shooting Over Hallowe'en Prank

O'Dell Blackwell, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Blackwell of 1408 Avenue N, who was shot with a small calibre gun Saturday night, is slowly improving today, and two boys, Jewell Woods and Joe Wilson, who are charged with the shooting will be given an examining trial before Judge Goodman at five o'clock this afternoon.

Young Blackwell, in company with several other boys of similar age, was enjoying a hallowe'en frolic Saturday night when they were armed by the larger boys to get off of the sidewalk or they would be shot. The boys all ran into the home of Jas. L. Dow at the corner of 11th street and O avenue, but the bullets followed them. Two shots are known to have been fired, and one of them passed through a screen door at the Dow home and on into young Blackwell's leg.

He was rushed to a local hospital where he was given surgical aid, while officers were notified of the shooting. The boys stated at the time that they knew the guilty parties and it was only a short time later until they were arrested. There may have been more than two implicated in the shooting, but only two were arrested. They were instructed to appear at the city hall at 5 o'clock today and both were present.

As several witnesses were absent, however, the trial was set for five o'clock this afternoon.

Five Other Guns Confiscated. Since the boys were arrested Saturday night officers have confiscated 5 guns similar to those used by the defendants. They are reported to be 12 blanks, though most of them will shoot an ordinary 22 calibre cartridge. There are a number of these guns in the city, and officers are going to make an effort to get them all.

SMALL OUTWARD INTEREST SHOWN IN GREAT DERBY

STATE CAMPAIGN ISSUES BADLY MIXED AND NO ESTIMATES OFFERED

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The answer to all the efforts of the political leaders and candidates during weeks of intensive campaigning will be furnished tomorrow by the voters.

Sweeping claims of victory continued to come today from the rival camps, republican and democratic; wet and dry—but the key to the great biennial election puzzle rested with the millions who had manifested few outward signs of interest and given little hint of how they might be expected to vote.

Both Claim Congress Control. The big prize in the election from the national party standpoint—control of the seventeenth congress—was claimed by both sides, with many democratic managers confident that they had better than a fighting chance to control at least the senate and with the republicans apparently equally confident that any threat of such a result had been removed.

Issues in the state campaigns had become so badly mixed that national party managers did not undertake to make any general estimates. Interest in such campaigns naturally centered in New York, where Governor Smith is waging a fifth battle for election; in Maryland where Governor Ritchie's tenure as chief executive is at stake, and in Ohio where another democratic presidential candidate possibly might emerge—Governor W. Denney.

Eight May Dry Voting. While locking horns in many senatorial and congressional battles, the wet and dry leaders had their eyes focused on eight states in which the question of prohibition was to come to a direct vote on repeal of state codes or on some other form of the wet and dry problem. These states are New York, Illinois, Wisconsin, Colorado and Nevada.

Flashes Of Life

By Associated Press.

Fashion Blamed. NEW YORK—Fashion is blamed for an increase in deaths from tuberculosis among New York girls. Among those from 15 to 19 years old the rate is 237 in every 100,000; from 20 to 22 the rate is 370. A physician of the New York Tuberculosis association thinks the principal reasons are the desire to be slim and the economy of working girls on lunch in order to save for pretty frocks.

Money Makers. WASHINGTON—Three Americans make more than $5,000,000 a year, latest income statistics reveal. There are 75 mere millionaires. The figures are for 1924.

Sees Many Booms. NEW YORK—A pioneer woman operator in real estate, who presumably left a large fortune, is dead. Miss Hannah Freud, 78, was active till a few days ago in the business she had conducted for forty years, foreseeing many booms. She came from San Francisco.

Attention, Girls. NEW YORK—No young lady may powder her face or rouge her lips while Rabbi Wise is preaching. He stopped a member of his congregation with the warning that the next time the offender would be asked to leave.

Harry Houdini, Mystery King, Fails In Battle Against Death And Carries Secrets Of His Methods To His Grave

Laughs At Death, Flies Injured

(By The Associated Press) DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 1.—Harry Houdini's mysterious feats of escape, which thrilled spectators throughout the world in his life, today were locked in the mystery of death.

The magician, hailed by his fellow workers as the greatest of them all, died here last night, taking with him the secrets of how he escaped from manacles, chains, coffins, straight jackets and other contrivances, performances which no other man ever had duplicated under his challenge.

Methods Never Revealed. Although Houdini wrote copiously on magic, the fruit of his quarter of a century experience as a conjuror, his managers announced that his own methods never were revealed.

His stunts were his own and not adapted from something someone else had done," said E. M. L. Ernest, vice president of the society of American magicians, offering an explanation of his unrevealed mystery.

Although Houdini performed the usual run of magical tricks, and gained considerable notice for his startling attacks on spirit mediums, his public probably was most attracted to his adeptness in releasing himself from almost any kind of confinement that could be devised.

Favorite Trick. In one of his favorite tricks he permitted himself to be bound hand and foot in a box wrapped with ropes and chains and placed under water. He escaped from thousands of straight jackets, locked manacles and freed himself while hanging from a derrier in manacles and straight jacket.

Probably one of his most spectacular feats, also one of his latest, was when he was confined in a coffin under water for ninety minutes. This performance resulted from his long standing challenge that he could duplicate, and expose any seeming magic

MAN SHOTS WIFE AND KILLS SELF

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Nov. 1 (AP)—Believed despondent for the last several days, George B. Brieger of Ozona shot himself to death at his home there Sunday night after firing two shots and close range at his wife and inflicting injuries that may prove fatal.

Mrs. Brieger is at a hospital here with a bullet lodged in her spinal column. Brieger's body is being sent to Bastrop for interment.

Brieger walked into his home late Sunday night, bade a daughter, Mrs. Theron Cook, "good night," and turned, firing from a distance of ten feet at his wife. She fell at the first shot and as the daughter ran to her, another bullet missed its intended mark, the first one entering the abdomen and lodging in the spine. Brieger then turned the gun on himself, the bullet entering above the temple.

Brieger was an employee of the Smith Drug company for several years. Letters he had left in the care of his daughter with the request that they be unopened until he qualified were found to contain his insurance papers and his will, leaving everything to the daughter. Mr. Brieger had been in ill health for some time.

FAIR TRIAL SAID IMPOSSIBLE DUE TO COMBINATION

(By The Associated Press) FORT WORTH, Texas, Nov. 1.—Charges that city officials of Fort Worth, members of the Knights of Columbus and Roman Catholics in general have entered a "combination" to prosecute Dr. J. Frank Norris, Baptist pastor, were made when Norris' trial on a charge of murdering D. E. Chippis, Fort Worth lumberman, was called in Judge Honey's court here today.

The charges were presented in an application for change of venue filed by defense attorneys, and read to the court by Dayton Moses, leading defense counsel.

Says Fair Trial Impossible. The application avers that the fundamental principle of a "fair and impartial" trial in Tarrant or Dallas counties, and asks that the case be transferred to some other Texas county, "free from the prejudices which exist here."

Court recessed at 10 o'clock until 2 p. m., to permit the prosecution to prepare its answer to the request for a venue change. District Attorney Robert Hanger, leading the prosecution, announced the state would resist the application.

Says Many Enemies Made. Dr. Norris and wife listened intently to the reading of the application, which set forth that Norris' pulpit battles had made many enemies, who were bent on obtaining his conviction in the present trial.

During the recess, the defense subpoenaed 31 witnesses to testify on the application for change of venue.

Answering the application for change of venue, the state denied that there existed any combination or prejudice against Norris, but "on the contrary these thousands of disinterested, qualified jurors in Tarrant county, who will give the defendant

"Ma" And Jim Vote Democratic Ticket

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 1 (AP)—Governor Miriam A. Ferguson and her husband announced today that they have voted straight democratic tickets in the election to be held Tuesday, by absentee voting. The votes were sent to their home at Temple.

Former Governor James E. Ferguson said that the voting of the straight democratic ticket by himself and his wife is more than what many democrats who supported Dan Moody for governor in the recent democratic primaries, did two years ago when they voted for George C. Butte, republican nominee for governor. He meant by that declaration that he and his wife were more loyal to the democratic party than many of those who bolted the ticket at the general election in 1924 and voted for the republican candidate against his wife, he said.

He denied as "another political falsehood" published reports that he would vote the republican ticket tomorrow.

Journal News Reel

J. Frank Norris asks change of venue when murder trial called in Fort Worth this morning. Three men and much alleged liquor taken in series of raids by county officers here Sunday night. the Juarez, and arrived just in time to make connection with M. Lucero, a Mexican also wanted for making and selling beer. Lucero was armed with a big six-shooter, but Sheriff Johnston and five deputies were more than he cared to battle, so he meekly accepted a berth in the county jail.

Lucero was prepared for business; his beer being on ice, and several prominent Lubbock men (his customers) visited the home while officers were present.

One Taken In Flats
From Lucero's home the officers went to "Negro Town" where they arrested Herschel Hamilton. He was lodged in jail and his liquor making equipment was taken to the court house where it will be held until the negro faces trial. There were plenty of drunks in negro town, officers said, and two of the dusky sons of Ham were armed to the teeth. They are in jail today, and their cheap artillery is in the office of Sheriff Johnston.

No gamblers were arrested, though several decks of cards were found and all of them show signs of being old. Sheriff Johnston and Deputies Ford, Williamson, Roberts, Bundy and Crump, who say they are going to do their best to put Lubbock liquor dealers out of business, made the raid.

Samson won many other prizes in the individual classes, taking second in sweepstakes in vegetables in the entire state. Hale county took first in the vegetable sweepstakes while Lubbock county took fourth, proving beyond a doubt that the South Plains is adaptable to the growing of any kind of staple agricultural product.

a fair and impartial trial. That if there be a few citizens in this county prejudiced against the defendant it has been brought on the defendant by his own unwarranted attacks against such citizens.

No Untoward Danger
"The state of Texas," continued the answer, "denies that there is any dangerous combination against the defendant J. Frank Norris. That the only combination that exists against the defendant known to the state of Texas is the combined testimony of honorable, high class witnesses which caused his indictment, which said witnesses are present in any other county in the state."

The answer says there is but a negligible number of the 500 venturers who are Roman Catholics, and that the percentage of Roman Catholics in Tarrant county is not greater than any other county in which the trial could legally be held.

Denial is made that any one has employed special prosecutors in the case except Mayor Meacham and Mrs. D. E. Chippis, divorced wife of the slain man.

Meacham Controversy
"The state of Texas," continues the answer, "says that the controversy if any, which exists between H. C. Meacham and O. E. Carr (city manager) on the one hand and the defendant on the other, was occasioned by the unwarranted attacks made by Norris on the said Meacham and Carr as individuals and grew out of the fact that Meacham as mayor and Carr as city manager and city council were endeavoring to force the said defendant to pay taxes to the city and water rent as required by law."

The answer also states that Norris' application for transfer of the case is designed to create a prejudice against religious institutions "other than the one he claims to be a member of," and to "divert public attention from the crime committed by the defendant and to create sympathy for himself."

Babe Ruth Worth All He Can Drag Down, Is Claimed

How much is Babe Ruth worth? The New York Club will have an answer that question to the satisfaction before spring rolls around. Ruth received $2,000 for his services during the season just closed. He is paid in weekly installments of $1,000, extending over the entire year. The idea is to keep Ruth in spending money. If the Babe received $2,000 per week during the season, as any other ball player having a $52,000 contract would, he probably would be broke about a week after the season ended.

Money was made to be spent—that is the theory the Babe works on, and so far he has successfully carried out his thoughts on frenzied finance.

Ruth has let it be known that he intends to ask for $150,000 for 1927. That seems like a lot of money, but Babe holds he is worth every cent of it.

During his American League career he has made about ten millions for the club owners. Babe is likely to get the $150,000 if he sells.

Jack Dempsey got close to a half million for 30 minutes, battling with Gene Tunney. That figure makes a mere matter of $150,000 seem not so much for playing 154 ball games.

Ruth is a bigger attraction than Jack Dempsey was as a fighter, and he packs 'em in daily.

Hitting Sports Highspots With James R. Dow

Back to Lubbock again after a good trip to 'cow-town' where the Matadors was defeated for the first time this season by the Matty Bell Texas Christian University Frogs. But nevertheless, the Matadors showed them they could be scored on more than they have been this season.

The 'bull-fighters' had Matty Bell jumping around—he was sending in men at all times of the game to check the drive of the Scarlet and Black. Bell did more substituting in Texas than since the season has been on.

Well the Matadors have a hard task to get over this week with the Daniel Baker eleven to battle in Brownwood.

The Hill Billies defeated the Simmons University Cowboys with a count of 77 to 7 on the Coy Boy range.

The Southwestern conference is certainly getting into a hard shape. However, it looks like that the Mustangs are coping away in a fast trot.

The annual battle, Baylor Un. and Texas Aggies, was engaged in last Saturday at Waco. The students of both schools got together with the half of the game.

'Big Un' Freeland was right—he stated sometime before the Frog clash that he was to pull one play that would either let the Frogs score or the Matadors would—he did a perfectly executed triple pass—Hill to Callaway to Wauldrige for a touchdown. It was case of 'don't know what to do' for the Frogs.

The 'bull-fighters' justly deserve much credit for their showing last week. It was a victory for the Tech even though in defeat.

Matadors have a tough row yet to go through with Daniel Baker, Howard Payne, A. C. C. and Canyon.

The Westerners will meet with the Littlefield high school here this week. The Westerners have worked hard this season and should be given much credit for their actions. Coaches Van Tuiglein and Frnka, also deserve mention—as they have put in much time and effort with the high school and have put out a real club.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 1.—Oglethorpe University appears to have one of the best football teams it has had in seasons this fall.

Shortly after the Tech defeat, that school turned around and fairly shocked the football fraternity by whipping the great Tulane aggregation. All of which makes Oglethorpe stand out as a formidable eleven.

Saint And Sinner

To Faith, the quiet of that Saturday evening seemed like the full between storms, but her tired nerves were grateful for it. Joy sat close beside her at the cleared tables, her head bent low over her arithmetic. Across the table Mr. Lane sat tilted back in the wicker chair, draped in from the living room, his tired, shoeless feet crossed upon a dining chair, his evening paper folded at the editorial page, which he scanned with tired eyes that looked wide behind their spectacles.

"I just can't get this old problem," Joy tapped angrily with her pencil upon her tablet. "The answer in the back of the book must be wrong! I've worked it three times, and it just won't come out right."

"Let me see it," Faith smiled into the angry, knotted-up little face, the tide of affection flowing out upon the child for whom no one ever seemed to have much time. She took Joy's pencil, and ran with expert swiftness down the columns of figures. "Oh, here's your mistake. What is seven times nine?"

"Fifty-six," Joy answered promptly.

When the problem had been corrected, and five minutes of that precious peace between storms had been expended in drilling Joy in the "seven times" table, Faith relaxed over her sewing again. She was making shorter and smaller lovely white crepe de chine costume slip, trimmed at the cambrile top with real lace, which Cherry had bought for her trousseau, charging it to Mr. Cluny.

For Cherry. Always something for Cherry. But there was no bitterness in the thought now. That warm tide of affection rose higher in her throat at the very thought of Cherry. Of course she had given up her date with Bob so that Cherry might have her one last fling.

Not that Bob looked as if he would collaborate in making it a real "fling," for he had been almost sullen, his blue eyes hard and angry when Faith had told him that his mother, tired out from her afternoon of curiosity-ridden, malicious callers, needed her. And not even the sight of Cherry, incredibly beautiful in a new gold colored chiffon, trimmed with metal lace, that exactly matched the gold strands among the curls of her curls, and the gold of her eyes, had wiped the frown from his handsome, lean, brown face.

"Mighty foolish of you to let Cherry run off with Bob Hathaway this evening," Jim Lane lowered his paper and glanced at his daughter over the top of his glasses, as if he had picked up her thought waves, like a human radio receiving station. "I wouldn't trust her with a man as far as I could throw a bull by the tail."

Faith caught her breath sharply, but she smiled on him with misty-eyed fondness. "I care more about Cherry than about anything else, Dad. If she can get him, it would solve a big problem for us, wouldn't it? Bob used to be in love with Cherry. I'm hoping—" she stopped, reminded of Joy's presence by the magnetic power of the child's wide, curious eyes upon her.

"Don't make a fool of yourself, daughter," Jim Lane said gruffly. "It don't pay to go around playing God

Revival Meeting At Baptist Church Closes Last Night

The revival meeting which has been in progress at the First Baptist church for the past two weeks closed with the evening service Sunday. It was one of the greatest revivals ever held in this city is not disputed, and Evangelist W. Y. Pond, who did the preaching, was given a vote of thanks at the last service.

During the meeting many scores of people made public professions and 204 individuals presented themselves for church membership. Of this number 78 joined by experience and baptism.

Baptismal services will be conducted at the church Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, and Pastor Bowen urges all candidates to be present on the occasion.

for folks. Well, guess I'll go see if your Ma wants anything."

"Faith, why didn't you let Chester Hart come over, like Cherry wanted you to?" Joy closed her arithmetic with a bang. "He always brings a box of candy."

"Because I don't like Chester Hart very much, honey," Faith smiled. "But for heaven's sake don't tell all Myrtle street and the kids at your school that I said so. I know you don't mean any harm, honey, but it can cause a lot of trouble that you don't understand."

"All right," Joy yawned indifferently. "I don't have to go to bed at nine tonight, do I? Tomorrow's Sunday."

"Yes, you do," Faith was firm. "And it's five minutes after nine now. Take a bath and put on those clean flannellette pajamas. I mended them yesterday."

Nine thirty. Joy had gone to bed. Mr. Lane was poring about the house on bed-time chores. Faith finished her work on the costume slip for Cherry and took up a book that George Pruitt had sent her—Somerset Maugham's "Of Human Bondage." Poor, lonely little Philipp, with his club foot.

Ten o'clock. What was Cherry and Bob doing? Bob had sworn that he would not take her to a restaurant to dance. Were they driving all these long hours? She shifted in her chair, read on. How could Philipp love that terrible, common little Mildred? But Mildred was pathetic too, only the author didn't seem to think so—eleven o'clock. She was so engrossed with the story that she had not heard the car stop, or the front door open.

But the sound of voices jerked her eyes from the book. "Could that be Bob Hathaway's voice, that cold, hard, angry voice, that ripped the silence of the night like a rusty knife?"

"You'll see Faith? Do you think for a minute I'll leave this house tonight without telling her myself? If Uncle Rauld throws you over, I'll not be the goat! It was a trick—and you know it was a trick!"

Faith dropped her book and sprang from her chair, her heart beating so wildly that her voice sounded strange and far away as she struggled to call out to them. "Cherry! Bob!"

TOMORROW: Bob Hathaway tells an amazing story of Cherry's desperate last minute attempt to save herself from a loveless marriage.

Three Drunks Pay Off In Corporation Court

Two drunks arrested Sunday night and one arrested Saturday night by members of the police department were given fines of $15 each in corporation court Monday morning.

Youngsters were rather rowdy Saturday night, but with the exception of one shooting scrape no other serious damage was done. Speeders, reckless drivers and other law breakers were on good behavior, though officers were still looking for two negroes who tried to use the street as a race track an evening or so ago. A white man got the car amber and made the complaint.

MARINES AND THE MILLS

Postmaster General New will be in a position to drop the "postmaster" part of his title and call himself simply "general" if he gets his plans perfected for prostituting the mails against bandit attacks.

He'll have a regular army under his command—an army big enough to lick a small sized country—picked men, armed to the teeth and trained to the minute. The force of marines which the navy department is sending him is merely to fill in, while New is doing his recruiting and organizing. New's scheme is to have a fighting machine of his very own—aviators, but the hardest boiled, scrappiest kind of civilians in America.

The size of the postmaster general's body of super-scrappers will depend on the amount of money he can induce congress to appropriate to pay for them.

The department borrowed 2500 marines in 1921, so it's assumed that a cohort of at least that number will be asked for—maybe more, for the postoffice's business steadily increases, and New is entering now on a campaign, not of mere defense, but of extermination.

New also wants a capital offense made of an attack on the mills with deadly weapons. However, if he gets the army he wants, that will hardly be necessary. There won't be any live mail hand left to hang or electrocute after his outfit has finished with them.

JOHN COOLIDGE'S GUARD

When President and Mrs. Coolidge stay at home or go out together, they have a secret service guard cover them. When they go out separately, each has a secret service escort.

No, there wouldn't have been anything surprising about it, agrees social Washington. "Starting isn't there at a secret service guard at his heels from the time he first left the parental roof. But such wasn't the case. Evidently there was no worrying about him during his first year in college. Now, all at once, it transpires that Col. Edward Starling lives with him at Amherst, and never lets him out of his sight, except in his classroom.

"Why this sudden solicitude?" asks social Washington. Starling was given his assignment so unostentatiously, too! Directly after John's school year began, the question began to be asked around the White House, "What's become of Starling?" Nobody knew. When John was asked if he had a personal body-guard, at first he said no. It is a fair deduction that he didn't like it.

The "presidential spokesman," without vouchsafing further details, lets it be known that it was at John's father's request that Col. Starling is at Amherst. "That's no news," comments social Washington. "Starting isn't there at John's request. That's certain."

HURRYING HOME

Because four men were in too big a hurry to get home, they were smashed to bits beneath the wheels of a train. The wives of these men killed at a Boston crossing all explained that their husbands always were in a hurry to get home to supper, wives, and children after the day in the box factory, and that they often said it "made them crazy" to see a train coming as they got near this crossing.

Husbands and fathers whose idea of "a big night" is to get home to "the missus and kids" are the sort of citizens we all can spare.

At all events the fighting spirit of our army and navy has been fully demonstrated in the recent hearings in Washington, Lakewood and elsewhere.—Auburn Citizen.

There is getting to be a pretty general sentiment to the effect that the submarine as an implement of war should be spurned resolutely.—Punxsutawney Spirit.

IN NEW YORK SEE-SAWING and DOWN BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—No day-to-day historian of Manhattan events can quite overlook the significance to be found in the casual announcement that Bobby Edwards has gone to work.

Don't smile! There is something almost historic in this seemingly inconsequential item. It may be the final gesture of the Greenwich Village of yesterday.

First, since the name of Bobby Edwards is not an uncommon one, let me explain that this particular Bobby was perhaps the last exponent of those "village" traditions that made this section the legendary spot that it is.

He was to Greenwich Village what whiskers are to Charles Evans Hughes or what George M. Cohan is to Broadway. From which you will gather that he was both a decoration and a mystical figure.

This Edwards was associated with the "inside" of the Village back in the days when it was importing poets, artists, garrets, radical discussions. The old Villagers went. The Bohemia grew commercial. But Bobby Edwards stayed. His stock in trade was a ukulele. In a garret he would make them out of cigar boxes and what-not, would inscribe them, and sell them to the yokels. When night fell he would step out his ukulele and sing a group of songs of Village vintage. Also he published the official Village magazine.

In the old days the Bohemian resorts were his haunts. Sometimes he would get meals, always he would sell his periodicals—and thus he lived.

Work was some nebulous term to be applied to the benighted sons of struggle. He applied the finest traditions of leisure and play handed down from those hardy pioneers who crossed the city in wheelbarrows and underwent the awful hardships of bathless garrets and gaslight basements to build up a kingdom of freedom that lasted until they all grew up.

Bobby refused to surrender to the changing Bohemia. He refused even to admit that the Village was changing. His magazine adopted each vanguard poet and artist; his songs were wistful echoes of bygone days.

And now, I learn, he has gone to work in a department store's art department.

After which announcement the coming of the "postmaster" to a Village cafe—announced in this column some days back—loses much of its importance. It seemed at first to indicate a return of those posturings of which so much has been mentioned. Now it seems but a weak bit of mimicry. I have often held that the postures and garreters have passed; that the old Village is all but gone—scrapping apartments rise in old Barrow street, along the avenue at the Village door, and one by one appear on the side streets. Each night the faces in the coffee houses seem stranger.

And then Bobby Edwards goes to work. Let no one tell you that this is the Greenwich Village of yore. —GILBERT SWAN. (Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

Journal Jobs

We seldom feel the need of a thing until we see one else enjoying it. You cannot refute anything by constantly iterating your own opinion and paying no attention to the other fellow's argument. A friend is a person to whom you may confide your shortcomings and mistakes, and who will listen with a sympathetic ear. A judge who hasn't the heart to punish criminals hasn't the head for a judge. Any man is a bore when you don't want him around. Although there is a good deal of law defiance these days there is still one that is pretty generally being obeyed—the mother-in-law.

What Would Grandmother Say?

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

DAWN OF 1928 WILL FIND U. S. LEADING WORLD IN AVIATION, FLYERS PREDICT

By CHARLES P. STEWART, NEA Service Writer. WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The end of the year 1927 will see the United States leading the world in aviation. William P. MacCracken, assistant secretary of commerce, in charge of aeronautics, says so. F. Truman Davidson, assistant secretary of war, in charge of aeronautics, corroborates MacCracken. Edward Pearson Warner, assistant secretary of the navy, in charge of aeronautics, corroborates both MacCracken and Davidson.

Commercial aviation is at a disadvantage in America, as compared with Europe, because there it is subsidized by the governments, while here public sentiment will not permit it. Only two American flying concerns are making money, MacCracken reports, while the others, at best, are only breaking even, and some are losing. MacCracken's problem is to encourage more Americans to travel and ship by air.

Rates inevitably will be higher here than abroad, because of the foreign companies' subsidies. That, however, does not matter so much, since Americans, having more money, can afford to pay more, and seem inclined to have what they want no matter what it costs. MacCracken's theory is that the essential thing is to make flying safe and certain.

Most aviation accidents occur, MacCracken points out, as landings are being effected. Planes take off without difficulty and are all right in the air; but landing is ticklish business. This is especially true at night and MacCracken considers night flying, if anything, more important than day flying just as a busy man prefers to take a night train, in order not to break in on his working hours, and likes to have emergency shipments of goods, currency or papers leave his office at night, that it may be in somebody else's hands in the morning.

As a matter of fact, America does, at present, lead the world in night flying, doubtless for the reasons given. European commercial aviation is, indeed, ahead of America's but not her commercial night aviation. With the establishment of a great system of model landing fields and of beacons, to guide aviators on their way to facilitate descents, MacCracken is certain night flying will take such a spurt as the nation does not even dream of.

By the end of 1927 he promises that such a system will be established. Davidson and Warner are as much interested in commercial aviation as MacCracken. The more civilian flyers there are, the more the army and navy will have to call on in an emergency. MacCracken, Davidson and Warner all are practical aviators. As such, they are war products. They still do most of their traveling by plane. If anything happens to the pilot, not one but can take charge himself and do his work competently. They are also very young men for their responsible positions—Davidson 29, Warner 22, MacCracken 27, Assistant Postmaster General Glover is 47.

Chuckle Awhile With Credit to S. Blythe

Sam Blythe claims this is a true one. Maybe he is right. Sam generally is. He says a Washington wholesaler wished to learn the relative qualities of two brands of muschige. He handed one bottle of each brand to his negro janitor.

"Henry," he said, "take these and test them and see which one is the stickier." Hours passed before Henry reappeared. Wearing a somewhat unhappy, not to say distressed, expression, he entered his employer's office and placed the two bottles on the latter's desk.

"Well, Henry," said the jobber, "what's the result of your experiments?" "Boss," stated Henry, "it's lak dis: Dis yere one cummed up my mouth the most; but dis yere other one, the taste lasted the longest."

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

By ARTHUR N. PACK, President American Nature Ass'n.

High in the air a flying wedge of Canadian geese, led by some wise old gander, seek a winter home in southern bayous. What memories and fancies they bring to one's mind!

In some far northern marsh, perhaps within the sound of the restless ice-strewn waters of Hudson bay, perhaps in some spruce bordered swamp flanked by snow covered mountains their summer was passed.

There the broods were raised and thence, as the first heralds of the ice king threatened to set fast their feeble grounds, they rose and arranged their ranks into the wedge that experience has taught them serves best to help them cleave swiftly the pathways of the air.

Yesterday they padded the icy waters of the north, with winter close on their trail, today they gather their food in the hazy calm of our Indian summer days; tomorrow, if they wished, they might be reveling in the endless summer of the tropics.

And, as they fly, one of their number suddenly closes his wings and falls lifeless to the marsh. Perhaps some far-flung shot, sent at random at the speeding flock, had found its mark in some less vital spot, gradually weakening the strong heart and willing muscles as they strove to keep up with the fast flying band.

Perhaps old age had set its final curb on that one tireless frame. At any rate, his seasoned flights between the tropics and arctic are past forever.

As the poet has said, we may well gain a lesson from this far-flying band of waterfowl winging its way unerring through the pathless heavens, needing neither guide post nor compass: "He who, from zone to zone guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight, in the long way that I must tread alone, will guide my steps aright."

And when our time comes to die, may we all meet death as bravely and as fearlessly as the wild geese who, even though wounded unto death, strives with his fellows along the appointed path until he reaches the end of the trail, and uncomplaining dies.

Helpful Health Hints

OVEREATING HARMFUL AFTER MIDDLE LIFE. By DR. MORRIS FISHELIN (Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Myxia, the Health Magazine).

Most of the illnesses that afflict the man beyond middle age are due to the fact that he does not realize his intestinal limitations. The most pernicious misdemeanor after middle life is overeating. The person who works out of doors is, of course, able to dispose of more and heavier food than does a brain-worker. The brain worker who tries to eat meat three times a day will find himself in most instances, in better condition if he eats meat only once each day, but in this condition quantity of food is more important than its nature.

Cooked Foods. The human being gradually has been acclimating himself to more and more refined and thoroughly cooked foods. Nevertheless, it is not desirable for him suddenly to change to foods that are coarse and indigestible. These perhaps will aid elimination, but at the same time they will irritate the delicate lining of the intestines and permit the more easy entrance of bacteria into the body.

Too much starch, proteins or fat is harmful because it will not be digested fully and will encourage the growth of bacteria in the intestines. As one becomes older his tolerance for sugars become less, and if he eats too much sweet or starchy foods he is likely to develop disorders of sugar elimination. All health authorities are agreed that the greatest danger for the man beyond middle age is overeating. The records of great insurance companies show that the life expectancy of the man slightly underweight at this age is greater by far than that of the man who is overweight.

As the old farmer expressed the matter, pigs would live longer if they did not make hogs of themselves.

With Our Contemporaries

WHICH WAY ARE YOU GOING

A passerby saw a man at a staff doorway, wrestling with a big table. He grabbed hold to help, and the two struggled until both were out of breath. "Pretty tough," said the visitor. "But we'll get it out next week." "Oh, you dummy!" screamed the first. "I was taking it in, not out."

Secretary Jardine says that the farmers want: Some tariff changes; tax reduction, especially local taxes; better credit facilities. Congress would gladly give any of these, if it knew exactly what the farmer wants and needs. Although the agricultural tariff was built for the farmer, it could be changed if farmers were able to agree wherein it is either too high or too low. National tax reduction is already an established fact; local taxes are entirely in the hand of local voters. Farm credits are little understood by either Congress or by farmer organizations; it would be a foolish Congress that would pass any sort of credit bill when the farmer does not even know exactly what he wants.

That is about the present political situation in regard to farm legislation.—Quannah Tribune-Chief. The Journal is inclined to agree with Mrs. Ferguson's statement of the other day when she said that the farmers already had too much advice and not enough actual help. The above editorial from the Quannah editor's typewriter seems to hit the nail on the head.

BY VIRGINIA SWAIN COPYRIGHT 1926 NEA

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
DEAN TIMOTHY BROWN, of the discipline committee, rules Pendleton University under strict law. JUDITH MARTIN, a new teacher, defies the conventions by seeking as her friends, ERIC WATERS, a radical student, WILL WETHEREL, Eric's frat brother, and EVE GERHART, a town widow.

PROFESSOR PETER DORN, of the astronomy department, admires Judith and disapproves of her acquaintances. Judith and Eric get into many scrapes and escapades, the last of which was a moonlight hike with Eve Gerhart's set, from which Eric was brought back drunk by "Kitty" Shea, unsavory town character. Judith had been left behind by the party of hikers; and when she found Eric unconscious, was forced to accept the offer of Shea to drive them both back to town.

Distressed by the affair, Judith decides to run up to the city for the week end. At the station she meets Dean and Mrs. Timothy Brown.

The dean says his wife is going to visit relatives in a small town upstate, but Judith sees her in a city hotel with a handsome man.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XVI
The dean's wife was laughing over her shoulder at the man. Sparkling, richly gowned, she was scarcely recognizable as the little gray woman who had left Judith in the train.

Neither she nor her companion saw the girl watching them from the next table. All their attention was fixed on each other. The man came back to his own chair and sat down. Judith could see his hand stealing across the table toward Mrs. Brown's. The woman's eyes were stary as she looked at him.

Then Judith moved in her chair, and the dean's wife caught sight of her. She did not break off in the words she was addressing to her companion, but Judith saw her face go white.

Judith see her salad rapidly and pushed her chair back. She knew that the dean's wife followed her with horror-struck eyes as she left the dining room.

The Sunday night train to Pendleton picked up returning week-enders along the way, until it was nearly as noisy as the one that had first taken Judith to the university. But this time, the clamor was a familiar one, that embraced instead of excluding her.

Judith looked about for Mrs. Brown, but did not see her on the train. Alighting on the thronged platform at Pendleton, she ran into Eric Waters, who had also stepped from the train, bag in hand. "Hello, Judith," he said, reaching for her bag. She yielded it to him somewhat hesitantly.

"Come on," he said to her, striding ahead. "I parked my car at the garage across the street. I'll take you home." There was nothing to be done but follow him through the crowd. Near the front of the train, they met Dean Brown, walking up and down with his watch in his hand, and his face set in a puzzled frown.

Eric ran into him and backed away, with grinning apologies. The dean glared at him, saw Judith, looked at the two suitcases in Eric's hands, Judith nodded a greeting, which the dean barely acknowledged.

In the car, Eric smoked a white in silence. Judith stubbornly held her tongue also. They were not going toward the Stedway house.

At last Eric threw away his cigaret. "Damn it, Judith, I apologize. I shouldn't have drunk so much on a hike, when I had a woman to take home. I suppose the others gazed you a lot."

Judith's silence was forbidding. "Come now, Jude, can't you forgive me, when I've humbled myself?" His voice did not sound humble.

"Yes," she said. "I can. I don't hold grudges. I just look out for the next time. Naturally, I don't care to be left out in the woods with Kitty Shea again. So I shan't go with you any more hikes."

Eric stopped the car and turned to her. "My God! Were you left with Shea? I didn't know that."

"Exactly," said Judith, in a grim voice. "You didn't know what happened to me. And you didn't much care."

Eric was no longer debonair. "Oh, I say, Jude, that's abominable. Of course I cared. Only, I wasn't much in condition just then—to know what happened."

"Just so," said Judith, more grimly still. Eric fell back in the seat and looked gloomily ahead.

"I suppose you came back with the crowd and one of the fellows piloted me home. That night was a total blank. I tried to get you by phone next day, to beg your pardon, and when they said you'd left town, I felt pretty rotten. That's why I ran up to the city myself. This town didn't look so good to me, in my state of mind."

"Shea!" He paused, then spoke impetuously. "I swear, Judith, I'll be ashamed of this as long as I live. I wouldn't have left you out there with him for a million dollars. You know that, don't you?"

"Eric," said Judith, bluntly. "Just what do you know about Shea?"

"Enough to realize that he's no fit playmate for a little girl." He gave Judith a sheepish look. "You know it was my jealousy that started the trouble. You teased me so all evening, by flirting with that rascal, Wetherel."

Judith shook her head. "No, Eric, it wasn't that. It was your injured pride. You have to be the high chief frog in every puddle."

He threw in his clutch and shifted gears savagely. Nothing more was said until they were going up the Stedway steps.

"Good night," he growled. Judith went into the house and found a small boy waiting in the hall. He was gnawing at an all-day sucker.

"You Miss Martin?" he gurgled, shifting the sucker to one side of his mouth.

When she assented, he pulled a grimy note out of his pocket and handed it to her. "Miss Brown told me not to give it to anybody but you," he remarked. "That's why I waited."

The Horace class at two o'clock Monday marked the end of an lonesome day. Judith had pined through her classes, unable to confure up the needed enthusiasm to make them interesting.

Eric came in for his share of her displeasure, when he was asked to translate a passage that contained three obscure gerundives. He had to relinquish it to Miss Reiser.

When the bell rang, Judith cleared her desk and made ready to leave. She had fallen into the college habit of going hatless about the town; but she had a sweater and a bright scarf.

The home of Dean Brown was in Avon place, directly west across town from College road. Judith left the campus and took the western path. Leaves were coming down at every gust of wind, and she found a childish pleasure in kicking them along the path ahead of her.

The winding road that led across the Stratimore bridge was lined with old elms and maples in full autumn panoply. Professional houses of chaste Colonial architecture were set in quiet rows behind the elms, their green blinds carefully drawn, and their brass knockers gleaming in the afternoon sun.

The dean's house in the side street was a Tudor cottage of dark stucco and shingles, with two funeral little fir-trees in jars on the door posts.

The dean's wife met Judith at the door. "It was good of you to come, Miss Martin." She led the way into the living room, in which a wood fire burned. Rows of books and delicate prints on the walls bespoke the frugal gentility that Judith had noticed before in the homes of teachers. A bowl of bitterweet stood on the table.

A bowl of bitterweet stood on the table. Mrs. Brown motioned her guest to a deep chair by the fire. Judith saw that she was wearing a simple black dress, open at the throat. Her hair was dressed in the extreme of simplicity and her hands were ringless.

Suddenly turned to Judith. "Let's not beat about the bush. What are you going to do about it, Miss Martin?"

"Why, I don't know what—" began Judith. But the dean's wife waved the protest aside.

"You do know what I mean. What are you going to do about it?"

"Well," replied Judith slowly. "I don't meddle in matters that do not concern me. I hope that answers your question."

NEW YORK TRADING

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (AP)—Cotton opened steady at an advance of three to seven points in response to higher Liverpool cables, reiterated reports of improved demand for cotton goods in Manchester and continuation of the buying movement responsible for the firmness on Saturday.

The advance met considerable southern selling, however, supposed to be largely in the way of hedging, and after selling to 12.65, the market rallied about 2 to 4 points net lower at the end of the first hour.

Trading was quiet after the first half hour, with business evidently restricted by today's holiday in New Orleans, and the fact that tomorrow will be a holiday in the market here.

One of the chief features was the trading in October 1927 deliveries, which started this morning at prices ranging around 12.70, or about 25 points above the price for July. Part of the buying of the coming crop position was attributed to foreign trade interests, while there was also some local buying believed to be for investment accounts. Prices at mid-day held steady at 12.68 for May or not unchanged to two points higher.

The market sagged off to 12.65 for January, or about 5 points net lower under further realizing or pre-holiday liquidation. Offerings were light, however, and the market steadied on covering. January was selling around 12.88 at 2 o'clock, with the general market about net unchanged to 1 point higher.

Stocks And Money

WALL STREET TRADING. NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (AP)—Stock prices failed to follow a definite trend at the start of today's session, as traders were reluctant to make commitments pending the outcome of the elections. U. S. Steel, General Motors, Studebaker and other popular shares opened lower. Union Pacific and Norfolk and Western were heavy but Southern Pacific gained a point.

The outlook for continued easy credit conditions due to steady accumulation of funds at this center curbed selling activities in the early trading and assisted several groups which were working for higher prices. More interest was shown in the oil shares, with General Asphalt responding to reports of a segregation of its various properties. Atlantic Refining, Pan-American "B" and several low priced issues also worked higher. With leading rails and industrial drifting quietly, most of the trading activity centered in the specialties. A buying movement in the silk shares carried OFFY Hosiery preferred and Gotham Silk Hosiery first preferred up four points or more to the year's highest prices. Fresh selling broke out in the fertilizer stocks, such as American Agricultural preferred as a result of the campaign for restricted cotton acreage. Foreign exchanges opened steady, with French francs and Italian lire gaining ground.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE. NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (AP)—Foreign exchange firm; Great Britain demand 4.84 3/16; cables 4.85 1/2; sixty day bills on banks 4.80; France demand 3.17; cables 3.18 1/2; Italy demand 4.34; Belgium 12.50; Germany 23.75; Tokyo 45.00; Montreal 106.12 1/2.

Missing Ranchman Located At Sonora

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Nov. 1 (AP)—While citizens of Sutton and Crockett counties searched for him two days during the week and R. J. Mrs. Brown shook her head again. "This isn't Utopia. Women don't mind their own affairs, in this world. Please tell me the truth. When and to whom are you going to relate our meeting?" "Perhaps you ARE telling me the truth, but I've been afraid to trust anybody." She sat clasping and unclasping her hands and staring at the fire.

"About the man in Middleburg, I'll tell you nothing," she stopped a moment. "But as for the dean—Timothy Brown is a good man. I hate him, I hate him. I hate him. The words cracked in the still room."

"Why don't you put on your things and come for a walk with me," she said. "We'll stop in somewhere and have cocoa and muffins and forget our troubles."

Mrs. Brown dried her eyes with a bit of tissue-trimmed linen. "Thank you," she said, chokingly. "But I can't come. The dean expects me to be at home when he arrives." She looked up at Judith, trying to smile. "I'm sorry to have made such a scene," she said, with a hint of her normal self-contained gracefulness.

Judith took her hand. "I'd like to be your friend. Will you go hiking with me some day soon?" The dean's wife was about to reply, when a key grated loudly in the front door.

A moment later, the portiers at the wide door of the living room parted slowly, and the dean entered. "What have you done with my door mat?" he said to his wife. "Everybody will track dust over my hall carpet."

Then he saw Judith and his face hardened. "How do you do, Miss Martin?" He was setting his umbrella in a corner. "I trust you and Mr. Waters enjoyed your week end trip."

Judith knew now that in Dean Brown she has an enemy. In the next chapter she saves Myra from a horrible scandal.

HOUDINI SUCCUMBS TO ILLNESS IN DETROIT

trick. Raymen Bey an Egyptian man of magic, had been creating discussion by remaining in a sealed coffin under water for 15 minutes and he accepted Houdini's duty to duplicate the trick.

Beats Man At Own Trick

"Short breaths and conservation of oxygen did it" was Houdini's explanation after he had bested the Egyptian at his own game by remaining under water more than four times as long.

Although Houdini's appearance before the public began at the age of eight as a trapeze performer with a circus troupe, he first turned his attention to the business of locks without keys when he was apprentice to a lock smith in Appleton, Wis., his birthplace, after his mother objected to a continuation of his circus career.

The trick of opening handcuffs was discovered when a handcuffed prisoner was brought into Appleton by a sheriff who had lost his keys. Houdini said the trick was known only to him—his wife, and the prisoner.

Standing Offer

One of the magician's standing offers, which he never had to pay, was $10,000 to any medium who could produce phenomena which he would not reproduce solely by his strength and mental ability.

Houdini was born in Appleton, Wis., April 6, 1874, the son of Rabbi Mayer Samuel Weiss later adopting the name by which he was known on the stage. He was taken suddenly ill during a performance here and was operated on for appendicitis last Monday, peritonitis resulting. His widow survives. The body will be taken to New York in the bronze casket he carried everywhere.

Wisconsin Inheritance Tax Ruling Reversed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1. (AP)—The supreme court today reversed the Wisconsin courts which had held valid a state inheritance tax imposed upon gifts made within six years of the death of the donor as having been made in contemplation of death. The case arose out of gifts made by Henry Ellin in and upon which taxes of $22,398 had been paid.

PLEA MADE FOR BIG VOTE HERE

Democratic Leaders Urge All Freeholders To Exercise Franchise Tuesday

"Now is the time for Democrats to get busy and swing Republicanism," stated Frank E. Wheelock, Lubbock county Democratic chairman, today. "Tomorrow we should go to the polls and show our colors. Of course the Democratic nominees will be successful in this state, but our state convention vote is based on ballots cast in the general election."

Mayor Parrish and K. L. Riggs, live-wire Democrats, are also striving to get all qualified voters to take part in the election.

There are 20 voting boxes in this county and there should be at least 5,000 votes cast. Two of the boxes, No. 27 and No. 28, have just been created.

The polls will open at 8 a. m. and close at 7 p. m. and there will be a sufficient number of clerks to care for voters without delay. Boxes in Lubbock county, with election judges follow:

Avalanche-Journal And Fort Worth Star-Telegram Cooperate And Give Lubbock Grid Boosters Home News

Matador boosters who were unable to make the trip to Fort Worth with Texas Tech's great grid squad on the Avalanche-Journal's special train were today looking over copies of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram which were brought back from the game and which through the cooperation of the Star-Telegram and the Avalanche-Journal were literally inundated with Lubbock news.

The noon street edition of the Fort Worth paper showed the front page practically given over to Lubbock news and pictures after a member of the Avalanche-Journal staff crawled out of bed at six o'clock Saturday morning to send special dispatches in time to have it appear that morning. A later edition also gave great space to Lubbock news and to Texas Tech. Both editions carried pictures of Lubbock and Tech subjects.

The January 10 noon edition read Tech's Red and Black Boosters Storm Town and on the 4 o'clock edition the banner read Matador's Lead From Five Hundred People In Fort Worth for the game was thus translated to home town news—even though they were away from home.

California, Nevada, Missouri and Montana.

Behind all the claims of victory from the hostile camps there appeared a certain apprehension from reports from political canvassers in various sections describing a state of public mind concerning the election that might be interpreted as little short of apathy.

Get Out the Vote

Partisan and non-partisan campaign organizations have joined in the minute drives to get out the vote to which President Coolidge has added his voice through an appeal to his fellow citizens to exercise their suffrage.

Let no voters abdicate their sovereign right of self-government at the election on Tuesday by failing to vote," said the president's sentence appeal.

To stimulate the movement to the polls, Mr. Coolidge will leave today for his home town, Northampton, Mass. to cast his vote for Senator Butler and Governor Fuller, the only candidates in the entire country he has publicly endorsed.

Dem's Hope for Victory

Hopes of the democratic managers to obtain a majority of the new senate are pinned on contests in sixteen states where they have concentrated the bulk of their efforts in the senatorial campaign. These states are: Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, which is to elect two senators.

Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri, Nevada, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

Seats in dispute in all these states are held by republicans and while the democrats express confidence in obtaining the necessary nine to give them control of the senate, republican leaders assert that with few exceptions, sixteen states are normally republican and can be expected to remain so this year.

Must Win 26 Districts

To capture the house, the democrats must overturn the republicans in 26 districts. Some democratic managers assert this will be done, predicting a democratic landslide but the R. O. P. managers practically dismiss this as a rather idle dream indulged in by their opponents. In approaching the polls to register their preference the voters have to consider a maze of issues—national, state and local—for out of all of the weeks and months of battle there has emerged no great national question which might be expected to swing the pendulum of popular preference.

Some of the old national issues have been resurrected for the campaign, but the real issues have been local and at least have been made to call. Prohibition and the world court once gave promise of becoming real campaign material but the national party leaders have kept silent on them for candidates in both parties were split on both of them.

Party in Elections

In some states disclosures before the senate campaign funds committee furnished the fighting points. Party in elections became an issue in Pennsylvania as a result of the huge expenditures on behalf of Senator Pepper and William S. Vare.

Public utilities campaign contributions started a row in Illinois which eventually led President Coolidge to declare a neutral attitude but in that state as in Pennsylvania, the wet and dry issues formed the real basis for the campaigning.

Prohibition also was a foremost question in the Massachusetts contest in which President Coolidge's personal friend, Senator Butler, whom he chose to conduct his campaign for the presidency two years ago, is a candidate against former Senator David I. Walsh.

Uproar in Indiana

In Indiana, where both Senators Watson and Robinson are seeking reelection, charges of a corrupt republican-Ku Klux Klan deal, and of Klan control of politics created an eleven-hour racket with charges and denials flying in almost all directions.

Besides the 22 seats in the new senate involved in this election, there are four in the present senate—one for Indiana, one for Missouri, one for Massachusetts, and one for Iowa Senator Robinson, Indiana; Williams, Missouri; and Butler, Massachusetts, seek popular approval of their appointment by the governors of their states, while David W. Stewart, republican, Iowa, is unopposed for the seat left vacant by the death of Senator Albert B. Cummins.
