Heat pushes water, power use to new highs

Associated Press

Record temperatures continued as highs in at least 30 Texas cities broke the century mark, pushing use of electricity and water to higher levels, too.

Wichita Falls, at 110 degrees Wednesday, tied a record set in 1980 for the same date and registered the state's high.

Houston's 101 degrees broke that city's record of 99 degrees in 1980, as did Dallas-Fort Worth with its 106-degree reading and its sixth day in a row over 100 degrees.

Beaumont was not as hot — 99 degrees — but that was enough to break a high mark set more than 20 years ago in 1962.

Waco, Presidio and Laredo recorded 107 degrees.

Marfa, with a chilly 56 degrees Wednesday morning, topped out at 99, according to the National Weather Service.

No rain had been reported around the state, and only a few paltry showers fell tauntingly off the lower coast.

Even nightfall failed to bring relief. Temperatures remained in the 90s Wednesday night.

A stubborn high pressure center hovering above the area is responsible for the heat wave, the weather service said.

As air conditioners hummed, Texas Utilities in Dallas set a new all-time peak demand at 5 p.m. Wednesday of 16,537,000 kilowatts or about 4 percent higher than last year's peak, said spokesman Dick Ramsey.

"We've still got something a little bit less than 15 percent reserve capacity, so we're still in reasonably good shape to take care of the needs," he said.

"Looking back at the summer of 1980, we had 60 some consecutive days of 100-degree temperatures. We kept up with that."

There were 69 consecutive days of 100 and above temperatures that summer in Dallas and much of the rest of the state.

Dallas Water Utilities officials reported record water consumption on Tuesday, and expected the trend to last through the weekend. Residents used 562 million gallons — up from the 560 million gallons of Aug. 22 last year.

In Wichita Falls, homeowners were put on lawn-watering schedules to conserve in the face of peak demand.

Law enforcement officers will be patrolling the city to back up the lawn-watering restrictions, Wichita Falls officials said. The measures ban watering outside from 5 p.m. to midnight.

Residents may water outside on an odd-even day system, corresponding to their address number. Violators face fines of up to $200.

"We came close to crashing the system," said Public Works Director George Bonnett.

City officials blame the shortages on construction at one of the city's water treatment plants. The plants normally treat 36 million gallons per day, but city use has soared to nearly 60 million gallons per day during the recent hot temperatures.

The number of people seeking food and shelter at the Dallas Life Foundation has risen to 325 a day from the average of 225, and the heat is driving them in, said director Ray Bailey.

And at least five people were treated at Dallas hospitals Wednesday for heat exhaustion or heat-related illnesses.

OPEC optimism boosts oil price

GENEVA (AP) — A note of optimism for the oil industry was struck today when OPEC's president said that all but two of the cartel's 13 members have pledged voluntary cuts in oil output, and that the group has set up a new committee to reach a binding agreement on lower production quotas.

The news Wednesday that the cartel might be moving toward some accord caused September crude oil futures on the New York Mercantile to jump 32 cents and close at $11.73 for West Texas Intermediate crude oil. Inklings of accord among the oil producers has caused the price for West Texas Intermediate has increased 66 cents since Monday and is likely to take another jump today in light of the OPEC announcement.

The cuts are aimed at boosting sagging oil prices, which have fallen as low as $8 per 42-gallon barrel, down from $32 per barrel last December.

OPEC President Rinwalu Lukman, Nigeria's oil minister, said the voluntary cuts totaled 1.925 million barrels a day. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries produces about 20 million barrels daily, and Lukman had said he hoped for voluntary cuts totaling 2 million barrels.

OPEC production is estimated to exceed demand by about 2.5 million barrels daily.

Lukman said the voluntary cuts were an interim arrangement and would become superfluous if a binding agreement could be reached on lower quotas.

He called the pledges "quite satisfactory," and refused to say which two members failed to promise voluntary cuts. The delegations from the United Arab Emirates, Iran and Iraq all have voiced strong opposition to voluntary reductions.

The OPEC ministers, who began meeting in Geneva on Monday, adjourned until Friday afternoon. However, Lukman said the new committee on quotas was starting its work immediately.

Basin officials confident dam will be constructed

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Midland and Odessa city officials say they are optimistic that the Stacy Dam will be built on time despite the Concho river snake.

"I'm very optimistic that the situation will get itself corrected and the problem with the Concho river snake will get a proper solution," said John Lowe, Midland city utilities director.

If the Concho river snake is listed as an endangered species, the dam may not get approval from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to begin construction.

Lowe, along with deputy city manager Fred Poe, took a resolution supporting the $68 million project to a public hearing in Ballinger last week.

Midland is paying $11 million toward the dam's construction for a 16.5 percent share of water.

Lowe said he is confident a "strong challenge" would be mounted against listing the snake as endangered.

"I think we could mount a very strong challenge that the information the Fish and Wildlife Service used was just not adequate to determine the snake is endangered."

Lowe said the Colorado River Municipal Water District's willingness to protect the snake is a positive sign. The district owns the dam.

"I think the district is willing to try to do anything it can to protect the small reptile that probably needs protection.

"I wouldn't mind spending a few bucks to help that snake out if we could get a renewable reservoir of water for West Texas," Lowe said.

Jailed minister was 'hard taskmaster'

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

MONAHANS — A pastor who is in jail today charged with the murder of his wife was a "hard taskmaster" and portrayed a different personality at home than in public, said a Clayton, Mo., police detective who is helping in the investigation.

The Rev. Joseph Loduca, 31, who recently moved to Monahans, was charged Tuesday for the death of his wife, Mary Ellen.

Bond was denied in a Wednesday arraignment. The Ward County District Attorney's office now is handling the case.

Mrs. Loduca's body was found with a plastic trash bag pulled tightly over her head, authorities said.

Monahans Police Chief David Mills said she died from suffocation.

Although police declined to say what the motive may have been, the couple apparently had "a problem in the family," Mills said.

The couple, which moved here July 1 from Clayton — located on the outskirts of St. Louis — had three children.

Det. Sgt. Dennis Davenport, a 15-year-veteran of the Clayton, Mo., Police Department, said his office did a thorough investigation of Loduca to help Monahans authorities in the case.

"From the information we received," said Davenport, "several of Loduca's friends said he was a good co-worker and a fellow student who was very helpful and friendly.

"But when we talked to Mary's friends, it was a totally different story."

Davenport said Loduca was described as a hard taskmaster to his children and wife.

"It (difference between work and at home) was almost like night and day," said Davenport, noting friends of the couple said Loduca was sometimes abusive to his family.

Davenport said Loduca, ordained a minister in May, had worked as a carpenter and a manager at a Shakey's Pizza parlor and had attended various other colleges before attending Concordia Seminary.

Rehnquist's Phoenix home becoming an issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Phoenix, Ariz., area home owned by Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist for eight years in the 1960s had a restrictive deed that barred its sale to anyone but whites, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said today.

The disclosure came a day after it was revealed that Rehnquist's summer home in Vermont has a restrictive deed barring the land's sale to Jews.

It sparked a heated exchange between Kennedy, D-Mass., and Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who termed "ridiculous" Kennedy's claim that the existence of the Phoenix deed is related to Rehnquist's views on civil rights.

Rehnquist is seeking Senate confirmation as the nation's 16th chief justice.

As Rehnquist began a second day of testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Kennedy referred to the Maricopa County deed's wording that it could not be sold or leased "to any person not of the white or Caucasian race."

Rehnquist told Kennedy he had not known about the deed's wording.

"I simply can't answer whether I read through the deed or not," Rehnquist said. "While very offensive, it has no legal effect."

Hatch accused Kennedy of introducing a "red herring" into the proceedings, and charged that the news media had "blown out of proportion" Wednesday's disclosure about the Vermont deed.

"You know it's ridiculous, I know it's ridiculous," Hatch said in a loud voice directed at Kennedy while Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., called for order.

Earlier today, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, told Rehnquist he was concerned about "your credibility, the honesty of your representations to this body in 1971 and at the present time as well."

Metzenbaum said he doubted that Rehnquist had been completely candid in his testimony on three issues:

— His role as a political operative in local Arizona elections two decades ago.

— His role as a Supreme Court law clerk in the 1950s in writing a memorandum supporting racial segregation.

Special session to study school discipline bill

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White will allow next week's special legislative session to consider a teacher-morale-boosting school discipline bill, the chairman of the House Public Education Committee said Wednesday.

Rep. Bill Haley, D-Canter, also said White told him he will not accept cuts in the state's $6-billion-a-year Foundation School Program as a way to address Texas' $3.5 billion deficit. "He said, 'We need to hold the money we've got in public education,'" Haley told reporters.

Haley said he met with White to ask the governor, who controls the agenda of the special session, to permit lawmakers to work on a school discipline bill that passed both the House and Senate last year but died when the House did not accept Senate changes. Asked several times if White promised to open the "call" of the Aug. 6 special session to include the bill, Haley said, "He said, 'Get you bill introduced, get the process going, and get it as fast as you can, and we'll open it at that point.'"

House Bill 72, the massive 1984 public education reform package, changed school discipline patterns, forcing school districts to place "incorrigible students" in "alternative education centers" rather than expelling them. Since that bill took effect, teachers and principals have complained that they have no way of dealing with hard-core offenses such as drug use and sales, assaults and possession of weapons.

Haley's bill would permit schools to expel students for such "serious breaches of conduct." He told reporters the bill does not do away with alternative education centers for lesser offenses.

Open heart program a double dose of help

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

The addition of the $1.5 million open heart surgery capacities at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital soon will help pump up the economy here, according to hospital officials.

At a press conference this morning, it was announced that the open heart program, the first of its kind in Midland, will begin in about six weeks.

Based on the current volume of cardiac catheterization patients, the hospital anticipates performing about 100 open heart surgeries the first year.

"At an approximate total cost of $25,000 a surgery, we will keep about $2.5 million in Midland each year," said Dr. Tulsi Singh, chairman of the board of directors of the ClayDesta Regional Medical Plaza Development Corporation, which owns the hospital.

"No longer will patients have to travel to Houston, Lubbock or Dallas for open heart surgery," he said.

"We found that of more than 200 cardiac catheterization procedures performed at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital over the past six months, 25 percent of the patients required open heart surgery," said Dr. P.V. Patel, director of the cath lab program.

The new facilities were added on to the existing surgical suites earlier in the month.

The renovations included the addition of a Hemodynamic laboratory which provides continuous monitoring of the patient's critical chemical, blood and heart rate levels during the surgery, as well as heart and lung monitoring equipment, a hospital spokesman said.

The intensive care units at the hospital were upgraded and technicians were trained in the care of post-operative procedures for open heart surgery patients, Dick Liley, hospital administrator, said.

African leader: Words won't bring down apartheid

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The leader of Burkina Faso says his colleagues in the Organization of African Unity are trying to bring down apartheid with words, and called for immediate action against South Africa.

"Beyond negotiations with those who will not negotiate, there is only action," Capt. Thomas Sankara, president of the West African nation, said in an interview Wednesday.

The 50-member OAU, which ended its 22nd summit in Addis Ababa on Wednesday, urged all member states to adopt sanctions against South Africa.

The organization also passed a resolution denouncing the West for refusing to back sanctions against South Africa, and urged "freedom-loving" countries to take actions against Western governments that have not imposed sanctions.

Thatcher's policies put Britain on hot seat

An Analysis

By EDITH M. LEDERER

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's vehement opposition to comprehensive economic sanctions against South Africa has thrust Britain onto an international hot seat that shows few signs of cooling off.

An indication of a possible change in government policy came two weeks ago when Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe said "further measures" should be adopted if his talks with South African President P.W. Botha failed to make "tangible and substantial progress."

But less than 24 hours later, while British papers were reporting the apparent shift in policy, Mrs. Thatcher insisted that sweeping economic sanctions would not automatically be imposed against South Africa if Howe's mission did not succeed in softening Pretoria's stand on apartheid.

When Howe returned to London Wednesday after receiving a tongue-lashing from Botha about outsiders meddling in South African affairs, he was greeted by headlines demanding tough sanctions.

The leaders of seven Commonwealth countries open a three-day meeting in London Sunday to consider implementing a host of stiff sanctions including bans on air links, new investment and the import of agricultural products.

Mrs. Thatcher has already said she will not go along with most of the measures.

But U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs Chester Crocker was due to confer with Howe today, and there was growing speculation that Britain and the United States, the two major Western nations holding out against stringent sanctions, would agree to some new measures.

Mrs. Thatcher has repeatedly defended her opposition to sanctions, arguing that they won't end apartheid, will hurt South Africa's majority black community and will ruin chances for peaceful negotiations.

Her critics claim the real reason for British opposition is purely financial: Britain is the largest foreign investor in South Africa and last year was the country's third biggest trading partner. The government forecasts as many as 120,000 Britons would lose their jobs if tough economic sanctions were imposed.

Britain has already agreed to limited sanctions, including bans on new government loans, sales of computers that could be used by security forces, sale of nuclear goods and technology, exports of oil, and the import of South African gold coins.

Even if Britain and the United States agree to new measures, they may not be strong enough for those demanding comprehensive sanctions — a term that has never been clearly defined and has been taken to mean anything from bans on South African produce and coal to a complete naval blocade.

Apparently unimpressed by Howe's initial statement promising further measures if his mission failed and frustrated at Mrs. Thatcher's continuing opposition to sanctions, 32 members of the 49-nation Commonwealth, the association of Britain and its former colonies, decided to boycott the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh.

Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda accused the British and American governments of "joining a conspiracy" to support apartheid, under which South Africa's 5 million whites control the government and economy and the 24 million blacks are denied the vote.

Some commentators, including the Financial Times, remain convinced that Howe's statement represented a key policy shift that might save Britain from international isolation.

But The Financial Times, the liberal Guardian, the respected Economist magazine and other commentators remain puzzled about Mrs. Thatcher's policy on South Africa — calling it "inexplicable," "muddled," "bumbling" or "remarkably stupid."

Britain is under constant attack from the rest of the Commonwealth, which supports tough sanctions, and from some members of the 12-nation European Common Market. British news media have also reported that Mrs. Thatcher is at odds with Queen Elizabeth II, who heads the Commonwealth and is said to fear its breakup over the sanctions issue.

For Mrs. Thatcher, one of the longest-serving and most experienced political leaders in the West, it has been a surprisingly inept performance, commentators say.

In an editorial, the Guardian suggested that Mrs. Thatcher could have won over her critics earlier this month if she had condemned apartheid as evil, said a host of sanctions was high on her agenda, and announced that as a last bid to bring about change in South Africa, she was sending Howe to Pretoria.

Instead, the paper said, "She has done much damage. She has pushed colleagues to open despair. What on earth has it all been about?"

Rulings lead police official to lift certain restrictions

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A police commander has lifted sweeping state-of-emergency restrictions on 119 anti-apartheid organizations in the Cape Town area in advance of a court challenge of their validity.

Judges in two other regions of South Africa struck down similar emergency orders this week that had been issued by police, and more challenges are being prepared elsewhere as critics of the emergency make increasing use of the courts.

Brig. Chris Swart, divisional police commissioner of western Cape province, announced late Wednesday that he had lifted the restrictions, which prohibited the groups affected from holding meetings, and barred the news media from quoting them.

Also repealed by Swart were orders that students be arrested if found outside their classrooms without permission during school hours and that funerals in black areas be held only on working days, not weekends or holidays.

In an order issued June 21, nine days after the imposition of a nationwide state of emergency, Swart barred the 119 organizations from holding meetings, producing publications or making posters in six magisterial districts in and around Cape Town.

Mexican businessmen call for work stoppage to protest fraud

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — Dozens of people blocked a bridge linking Texas and Mexico and business leaders called for an indefinite work stoppage to protest alleged election fraud by the ruling party.

The opposition National Action Party called for simultaneous highway blockades in Chihuahua state, Mexico's largest state bordering Texas and New Mexico.

The indefinite strike began Wednesday afternoon, but it was not immediately known how many businesses went along with it, said Alonzo Baeza Lopez, president of the Business Council.

The walkout was sponsored by 900 members of the council, the local Chamber of Commerce and the Chamber of Industry in Chihuahua. There have been two previous half-day strikes.

At issue are the July 6 elections during which the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, won the gubernatorial race, all 14 legislative seats and 65 of 67 mayoral elections.

The National Action Party, or PAN, contents government representatives stuffed ballot boxes, removed names of opposition supporters from voting lists, refused to admit PAN pollwatchers and delayed voting in PAN strongholds.

Government officials have said the PRI-controlled state legislature will investigate the charges when it reconvenes in August.

Dozens of PAN supporters on Wednesday blocked the Mexican side of a bridge linking Piedras Negras with Eagle Pass, Texas. Bridge supervisor James Bazemore of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said the U.S. side was closed, too.

An English-language sign on the bridge said, "There will be Democracy south of the border — not through government consent, but due to the power of the people."

The protesters said they wanted to show their solidarity with opposition party supporters in Ciudad Juarez, a border city opposite El Paso, Texas. Piedras Negras is in the state of Coahuila. Ciudad Juarez is in Chihuahua.

On Tuesday, PAN ended a 110-hour blockade of a bridge connecting Ciudad Juarez with El Paso.

The same day, people carrying PRI banners painted political graffiti on the walls and windows of the Business Council offices. They wrote "Baeza" in support of governor-elect Fernando Baeza, and also "Barrio Rat," referring to Francisco Barrio, PAN's losing gubernatorial candidate.

Major cut in debtors' interest rates would injure banks, official says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major cut in the interest rates charged to Mexico and other big Third World debtors — as proposed by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., — would have a devastating impact on banks, a Reagan administration official said Wednesday.

Mexico owes about $26 billion of its $98 billion debt to U.S. banks.

The effect of an interest reduction of 3 percentage points "applied to a loan, say to Mexico or any other major debtor that I know of, would be to bring the rate on that loan below the cost of money for the banks," said David C. Mulford, assistant secretary of the Treasury for international affairs.

"That's a pretty sharp reduction and not something to be shrugged off," he said. "Certainly the stock market wouldn't shrug it off, depositors wouldn't shrug it off and you would have, I think, a quite serious situation."

Bradley and Mulford appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Bradley is pushing a three-part plan that includes: the interest rate reduction, forgiveness of 3 percent of the principal of some countries' debts, and new loans to stimulate debtor nation economies.

Mexico paid about $10 billion interest last year. The World Bank puts total Third World debt at about $1 trillion.

Bradley blamed the debt crisis for the loss of thousands of U.S. jobs.

"...Four hundred thousand could have had jobs if Latin American economies had kept growing and 600,000 have lost jobs because debtor countries have increased their exports to get money" to repay the loans.

"In order to pay it back, they are siphoning off funds that they need to maintain their own living standards," he said.

Mulford said banks have made substantial profits on Third World loans but that the "spreads" or profits they charge over their own cost of borrowing money have gone down sharply in the past three or four years.

"They haven't lost money finally but they're not near getting paid either," he added.

"It may well be that...with Mexico there will be a negotiation that produces a further reduction in spreads. And if that can be negotiated between the two parties, so be it."

Mexico is seeking $6 billion from private banks over the next 18 months. Mulford said he had the impression that the banks are impressed by Mexico's plans and have reacted positively.

The program calls for about $12 billion worth of new lending from all sources.

Mulford said the Mexican government must make major reforms in its economy if the program is to succeed. It is promising cuts in spending, tax reforms to produce new revenue and what he called adjustments in the price of goods produced by government-owned industries. This is usually taken to mean higher prices.

Marcos directed acquittals in Aquino trial, panel says

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A special commission today said ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos orchestrated last year's acquittal of 26 men charged in the assassination of his rival, Benigno Aquino.

The panel of three retired jurists recommended that the trial be reopened, saying it was "abundantly clear" Marcos not only told prosecutors and judges how to conduct the trial, but also made sure his orders were obeyed.

In its report to the Supreme Court, the commission accused the prosecution of suppressing evidence and said "witnesses were harassed, cajoled, perjured or threatened" to ensure the acquittal of former armed forces chief Gen. Fabian C. Ver, 24 other soldiers and a civilian.

The commission said the December trial was "stage-managed from Malacanang (presidential palace) and performed by willing dramatis personae as well as by recalcitrant ones whipped into line by the omnipresent influence of an authoritarian ruler."

Aquino, an opposition leader during Marcos' 20-year rule, was gunned down at Manila's airport on Aug. 21, 1983, the day he returned to the Philippines after three years of voluntary exile in the United States.

Bush meets with Jordanians

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Vice President Bush, said by a spokesmen to be getting along with King Hussein "like back-porch neighbors," met with Jordanian officials today to discuss prospects for peace in the Middle East.

Bush is on a 10-day swing through three Middle Eastern countries.

The vice president and his wife, Barbara, arrived in Amman from Israel on Wednesday and joined Hussein and American-born Queen Noor for dinner at Nadwa Palace.

Bush and Hussein discussed a wide range of issues, "including the peace process, regional political and economic problems and the Iran-Iraq war," said Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

"It was a broad discussion setting the stage for today's more detailed meetings" with Prime Minister Zayd al-Rifa'i and Crown Prince Hassan, Fitzwater said.

Court: Cult can be expelled

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled on Wednesday that the government can expel 45 American-born members of the Black Hebrew cult for overstaying their visas.

Interior Ministry spokesman Yitzhak Agassi said they would be deported to the United States in the next few days. The ministry issued the order in April for the first expulsion of members of the controversial community.

Agassi said many others among the estimated 1,500 Black Hebrews are living in Israel illegally and also will be deported, explaining: "Our policy is like that of any other country: we expel illegal aliens."

U.S. Embassy spokesman Robert Hall, reached by telephone, declined comment on the court ruling.

Senate panel debates sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A legislative battle over the strength of U.S. sanctions against South Africa is opening in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, where at least three plans for action against the white minority government are under debate.

The starting point for debate today is a six-step plan drafted by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., the panel chairman, which he describes as "a tough package of sanctions aimed at hitting the white government of South Africa and its infrastructure."

But advocates of tougher sanctions against South Africa, including Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., contend the Lugar bill is too weak.

Weicker hinted Tuesday that a compromise is possible that would strengthen the Lugar approach, and Senate sources said negotiators for Lugar and other principals spent most of Wednesday searching for common ground.

Weicker told the Senate Tuesday, "If I feel that the Lugar bill is not tough enough, and it is not, ...then let us have a meeting of the minds."

He added, "But whatever the product is, let us make it effective."

Weicker and Kennedy say they would prefer Senate approval of a House-passed bill, which orders complete U.S. disinvestment from South Africa and a total trade embargo.

Their fallback position, a 16-point sanctions plan, avoids complete disinvestment but would affect large segments of the South African economy.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., a cosponsor of the Kennedy-Weicker approach, will introduce the Kennedy-Weicker legislation in committee as a substitute for the Lugar bill, as well as the House-passed disinvestment bill.

The Lugar and Kennedy-Weicker bills would write into law and make permanent the six limited sanctions imposed by President Reagan last year.

These ban the import of the South African gold coin, the krugerrand; prohibit U.S. bank loans to the South African government and its agencies; block the sale of computers to South African agencies that enforce the apartheid system of racial separation; forbid U.S. exports of nuclear technology to South Africa; and bar the import of South African military equipment.

They also make mandatory the so-called Sullivan code of equal pay and working conditions for white and black South African employees.

The Lugar bill would give Reagan the authority to sell U.S. stocks of gold to deflate the world price of the mineral. South Africa is the world's leading source of gold and the step would likely devastate the country's economy. But Reagan is considered unlikely to take that step and the bill would not require him to do so.

Lugar's measure would ban the importing of products of companies owned or controlled by the South African government, including steel, uranium, aluminum and cement. It would ban new investment by U.S. companies not implementing the Sullivan code for their South African workers.

The measure also would deny U.S. landing rights to South African airlines, authorize the president to deny visas to South African government officials, and ban the use of U.S. banks by the South African government.

John Gogotya, director of the Johannesburg-based Operation Advance and Upgrade, and Mzilikazi Masiya, national director of Jesus Christ for Peace in South Africa, said Wednesday that the United States should increase investment in their country.

OIL

He said it was made up of himself, Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto and Algerian Oil Minister Belkacem Nabi. He said a fourth person also might join the committee, but did not identify him.

Lukman said that discussions for a new overall OPEC production ceiling would start with an Algerian compromise proposal for 17.6 million barrels a day or less.

At their last meeting in June, most OPEC members agreed the cartel should lower its total production to an average of 17.6 million barrels a day for 1986. Algeria, along with Iran, Libya and Gabon, has sought even bigger cuts in hopes of pushing oil prices up faster.

During a break in today's session, Saudi Arabian Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, asked if progress was being made, told reporters that it "looks so."

"We are now moving in two directions," he said, but did not elaborate.

He apparently was referring to the plan for voluntary production cuts and Algeria's separate proposal for re-establishing an official price structure and binding quotas.

A high-ranking OPEC source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest producer, had pledged under the voluntary plan to reduce its production by 800,000 barrels a day, to 4.6 million barrels a day.

The Saudi pledge assumes a current production level of 5.4 million barrels a day.

However, a report in the respected Middle East Economic Survey said earlier this week that Saudi Arabia's daily output reached 6 million barrels.

Kuwait pledged to cut daily production by 350,000 barrels to 1.25 million barrels, and Nigeria was ready to go down to 1.5 million barrels daily, a decrease of 175,000 barrels, the source said.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait had been blamed for creating the current world oil glut by boosting their production.

The prospect that OPEC might reach some kind of agreement helped boost oil futures prices.

The OPEC source said Wednesday that it was unclear whether voluntary cuts would be implemented if some countries refused to reduce production.

Director to be named

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Lt. Gen. Forrest McCartney, chief of the Air Force Space Division in Los Angeles, will be appointed director of the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, a newspaper reported today.

McCartney, 55, who served as launch director for a 1985 space shuttle flight carrying a secret military payload, will be named to head the Florida space center within the week, the San Bernardino Sun said.

Though the hospital plans to move to new facilities in about two years, Singh said most of the equipment would be able to be moved.

"But we need these facilities now — the community can not wait for us to move to the new hospital," he added.

Dr. Donald Bricker of Lubbock has been named director of the open heart surgery facilities.

Midland surgeon Ronald Belizaire, M.D., who completed a fellowship in cardiovascular surgery under Dr. Michael DeBakey, and N.S. Rao, M.D., a vascular surgeon, will be a part of the surgical team, officials said.

He attended the seminary for the past four years before moving to Monahans, Davenport said.

Mrs. Loduca was a waitress-clerk at a restaurant in Clayton, Davenport said.

The jailing came about two weeks after Loduca called the police emergency number to report his wife's death, Mills said.

Police went to the house July 12 and found Mrs. Loduca's body on a bedroom floor, authorities said.

No suicide note was found.

"The preliminary autopsy showed suffocation," Mills said. "But after learning of the circumstances happening the day of the event, we had grounds for suspicion."

The 2½-week investigation culminated Tuesday when Mills said police questioned Loduca.

At that time, Loduca made a detailed statement regarding the case, authorities said.

Authorities were not specific about the statement.

Loduca was arrested later Tuesday night.

Mills said he is unsure of the residents' reaction to the case.

"They just moved here, and few people knew them," Mills said. "It is an unusual case, and it's difficult to tell what people might think."

Jenco meets with Weir, just wants to go home

LONDON (AP) — The Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco hugged a former companion-in-captivity at a suprise reunion today and kept a pledge to deliver a message from his Lebanese Moslem kidnappers to the spiritual leader of the Anglican Church.

He later told reporters that he felt like the film character "E.T.," who kept saying "home, home."

"I want to go home," the priest said.

Jenco, 51, of Joliet, Ill., was released Saturday in east Lebanon by the Shiite Moslem kidnappers of Islamic Jihad after 19 months of captivity. He is scheduled to return to the United States on Friday.

The Roman Catholic priest, who suffers from a heart condition and appeared pale and drawn, delivered the message to Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie during a private meeting at Lambeth Palace, the prelate's official residence. Jenco had delivered the message to Pope John Paul II at the Vatican on Wednesday.

The content of the message was not disclosed.

He was accompanied during his meeting with Runcie by Terry Waite, the archbishop's special envoy who has made several trips to Lebanon in an effort to gain the release of hostages there.

Jenco was to fly to Washington on Friday for a meeting with President Reagan. He said he had a separate message from his former captors for Reagan, but said no one else knew its content.

"It's in my heart. It's only in my heart," he said.

Jenco had an unexpected and emotional reunion today with the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian missionary. The two Americans, who were held hostage together in Lebanon, embraced and kissed.

Weir, 61, held captive for 16 months before being released Sept. 14, flew to London for the surprise reunion with Jenco arranged by the Anglican Church.

At a news conference, Jenco said his reunion with Weir was "a very deep emotional strain for me" and had left him "not that alert right now." He spoke in a low voice. Weir did not appear at the news conference.

Runcie said the Anglican and Roman Catholic churches have worked closely together on behalf of hostages in Lebanon.

"We shall continue our efforts, in concert with other religious leaders, to secure the release of those still held in captivity and to support all endeavors to secure peace and justice in that tragically divided part of the world," the archbishop said.

Jenco, who was kidnapped in Moslem west Beirut on Jan. 8, 1985, was held with three other Americans kidnapped by Islamic Jihad. The Shiite extremists said they killed a fourth American, but no body was found.

Runcie and Jenco met privately in the archbishop's study, then went to the chapel at Lambeth Palace to give thanks for the priest's release and to pray for the remaining hostages, the archbishop said.

Waite declined to discuss his role in the hostage affair. He would say only that his presence in the region "was not coincidental." He was in Amman, Jordan, at the time of Jenco's release.

Jenco arrived from Rome at the Royal Air Force base at Northolt outside London on Wednesday and spent the night at an undisclosed location arranged by the Servite Brothers, the religious order to which he belongs.

After his release Saturday, he flew from Syria to West Germany, where he underwent several days of medical tests at the U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden.

Doctors said Jenco suffered from an "ongoing heart disease." Islamic Jihad has said it released Jenco because of his deteriorating health.

Jenco said he had messages for the families of the remaining hostages. Asked if they were letters, he said: "No, only messages of the heart."

TDC inmate's death thought caused by heat

NAVASOTA (AP) — Texas prison officials are blaming the current heat wave for the death of an inmate working outside the Department of Corrections Pack I Unit.

Adolfo Banda, 30, collapsed while working in a field squad of 14 inmates and was pronounced dead Wednesday afternoon, department spokesman Charles Brown said today.

An autopsy was planned but the death was believed to be heat related, Brown said. The temperature at the time of his collapse was 98 degrees and the inmate crew, which uses hoes to weed the area around the prison, had been outside about three hours, he said.

Banda, serving 25 years for murder with a deadly weapon in Harris County, had been imprisoned only since July 1, Brown said.

REHNQUIST

— That he was unaware until days ago that a property deed for his summer home in Vermont prohibits sale of the land to Jews.

Rehnquist had been questioned at length on those issues Wednesday, and also before his confirmation to the Supreme Court in 1971.

Rehnquist sat through more than five hours of Senate Judiciary Committee questioning Wednesday, remaining unapologetic about his staunch conservatism.

His testimony was to be followed by some 50 other witnesses in what was likely to be a long day of proceedings. Thurmond said he was prepared to preside over a marathon session today so the hearings that began Tuesday could be concluded by midday Friday.

In his Wednesday appearance, Rehnquist weathered intensive questioning from Kennedy over allegations he harassed and intimidated black and Hispanic voters in Phoenix in the early 1960s as part of a state Republican Party ballot-security program.

Rehnquist said he does not remember whether he ever challenged anyone's right to vote, a routine and proper endeavor by poll watchers, but said he never tried to block lawful voters from casting ballots.

"If you're talking about harassment or intimidation, I categorically deny that," Rehnquist told Kennedy.

Ten witnesses who Democrats say are ready to testify they saw Rehnquist try to intimidate minority voters are scheduled to appear before the committee Friday.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said he harbored questions about Rehnquist's "sensitivity to civil rights and liberties."

"I don't see someone who is a champion for justice for all ... for minorities and women, people who don't have a champion and need one," Simon said. "Do you think you can be an effective symbol for justice for all?"

Rehnquist answered, "Yes, I do."

The nominee seemed embarrassed when Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., disclosed that a Greensboro, Vt., home Rehnquist bought in 1974 has a restrictive deed barring him from selling it to anyone "of the Hebrew race."

Rehnquist said he was amazed to find out days ago about the restriction, calling it "quite obnoxious."

He called the restriction "meaningless in today's world — it is unenforceable under the Constitution or federal law."

Asked by Leahy if he planned to have the restriction stricken from the deed, Rehnquist answered, "If there's a procedure under Vermont law (for that) I certainly would go through it."

Lawyers contacted in Vermont by The Associated Press said such excisions are difficult but possible under state law. They said such discriminatory provisions are rare in Vermont property deeds.

DAM

If the dam is not built, Midland would have to use its $11 million to construct a pipe system from an untapped, underground field of water about 65 miles west of the city.

Midland is holding the T-Bar field in Winkler county in reserve, but may have to use it if the dam project falls through, Lowe said.

"We have alternative sources, but a renewable resource is much more valuable to you than one that is a finite source.

"Once you start developing a well field, that bucket only has so much water," Lowe said.

Odessa Mayor Don Carter, who also attended last week's hearing on the dam, said he is sure the snake controversy will be cleared up.

"I don't visualize anyone putting a snake before a human being."

Odessa is a member of the water district building the dam.

The city of Odessa is not even thinking the dam won't be built, Carter said.

"If the dam is not built there are just going to have to be some other alternatives explored. But we're not even thinking that.

"We're thinking Stacy Dam all the way. We're not going to look back."

WHITE

"The teacher will once again be allowed to remove an incorrigible student from the classroom," Haley said. The bill will "give some teeth into the teachers' and the local school districts' ability to discipline the students."

Senate Education Committee Chairman Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, carried the Senate version of the bill last session. A Parker aide said the senator will support Haley's bill if it accomplishes what Parker tried to do last year.

James Butler, executive director of the Texas State Teachers Association, said the bill will help boost sagging teacher morale.

"I don't think every teacher has a discipline problem," Butler said. "But in a lot of situations, the system does not allow the teacher to expel a student who is continuously disruptive."

Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said the State Board of Education supported the bill last year and included it in its legislative agenda for the 1987 regular session. Kirby said he was pleasantly surprised by the news that White would include in the special session.

Haley, Butler and Kirby all agree that the bill has the support of most of the education establishment. "Everyone I talked to this year says, 'Go for it, let's try to get that done before school starts,'" Haley said.

House OKs plan to sell subsidized grain to U.S.S.R.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration would be forced to sell subsidized grain to the Soviet Union and other unfriendly countries under a plan approved by a House panel aimed at boosting the nation's worsening agricultural trade picture.

The House Agriculture Committee, with some dissent, approved the idea on Wednesday as the Commerce Department announced the second straight monthly deficit in U.S. agricultural trade.

Farm imports in June exceeded exports by $71 million, following a May deficit of $348 million that had been the first such dip into the red since 1959.

The committee bill, similar to language already passed by the Senate, would broaden the year-old Export Enhancement Program to offer its subsidies to any U.S. commodities customer, not just the narrowly targeted nations now allowed to participate.

Under the program, the government offers surplus commodities it owns as bonuses when purchases of U.S. farm goods are made. Traditional large buyers like the Soviet Union and China have been excluded for foreign policy reasons, and grain traders say that restriction has meant the program has hurt rather than helped exports.

The House bill would open the $1 billion, three-year program to any sales, regardless of whether the buyer is a U.S. ally.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., has been pushing for a broadened subsidy program for months, and on Monday, President Reagan heard divided opinions on the issue from his top advisers. The matter is awaiting a presidential decision, and lawmakers say their action is designed to influence that decision.

"We're trying to get them to show some progress on exports," said Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan. "Perhaps it will not be an across-the-board EEP, but some initiative that will keep us from limping along with the current export projections."

Deputy Agriculture Secretary Peter C. Myers, asked about administration plans to boost exports, said: "At this point the administration is not proposing to expand the Export Enhancement Program. Most of the rhetoric right now is coming out of the Senate and the House."

U.S. commodity sales abroad have dipped from a peak of $43.8 billion in 1981 to an expected $27.5 billion this year, and failure to reverse that trend is seen as a potentially major political liability for the Republicans this election year.

Committee opinion on broadening the export bill was split, with some arguing that increased susidization could only lead to conflict with U.S. allies who compete in the wheat market, such as Canada and Australia.

Cagney's widow donates hay to stricken farmers

By MARTIN STEINBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hay shipments to feed starving livestock were continuing today from around the nation, including tons from the 700-acre farm of Jimmy Cagney's widow.

The drought, which extends from southern Pennsylvania to northern Florida, has cost farmers more than $2.3 billion, and an accompanying heat wave this month has contributed to 62 deaths in the South and Midwest.

"Basically, I don't know of any commodity in agriculture, whether it be honeybees or catfish, that is exempt from the drought situation," said Bob Nash, president of the 162,000-member Georgia Farm Bureau.

Maryland officials said Wednesday that 10 percent of the state's 18,000 farmers face ruin with no crops to pay off debts.

There "just isn't any hope for a lot of farmers," said Wayne A. Cawley Jr., Maryland's secretary of agriculture.

Weather forecasters say no long-term relief is in sight from the drought, and that the heat wave from the Southern Plains to the Southeast should continue for days.

Record highs were reached Wednesday in more than 20 cities, including Mobile, Ala., where the 99-degree reading broke a 103-year-old record by one degree, and Tulsa, Okla., where the high soared to 110.

Houston's 101 degrees made Wednesday the fourth straight day of record heat, and the 107-degree reading in Springfield, Mo., broke the daily record for the fifth time in six days.

The heat sent scores of people in Dallas, New Orleans and Baton Rouge, La., to seek treatment Wednesday, and hospital officials said many victims were elderly or poor.

"The sad part is we've seen a lot of old people who are scared to go outside," said Dr. Jim Hogan in the emergency room at New Orleans' Charity Hospital, where more than a dozen heat victims were treated. "Instead, they'll stay in and close their windows, shut their doors and just sit without any air conditioning."

Agencies in Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Tennessee have offered help with fans or air-conditioned shelters.

Crews in Kentucky have loaded more than 2,600 tons of hay onto a train that will start rolling to North Carolina on Saturday.

Cagney's widow, Frances, donated 1,000 bales of hay from her New York farm on Wednesday for farmers in Tennessee and Georgia. "This is something Jimmy would have wanted to do," she said.

Based on a survey taken July 15-25 in Georgia's 159 counties, the drought has caused $533.6 million in agricultural damage, and probably will reach $1 billion unless there is more relief, said Nash.

Sixty percent of Georgia's jobs depend on agriculture, the state's leading industry, so the impact could reduce state revenues, raise unemployment and trigger a new round of farm failures, he warned.

July's heat has been blamed for 25 deaths in Georgia; five in South Carolina; four each in North Carolina, Missouri, Indiana and Illinois; three each in Arkansas and Alabama: two each in Kentucky, Louisiana and Mississippi; and one each in Tennessee, Virginia, Michigan and Texas.

Farmers may get free grain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers, trying to speed aid to farmers in the drought-striken Southeast, are considering a plan to offer surplus federally owned grain to the region's farmers.

The House Agriculture Committee approved a bill Wednesday that would send free grain to the hardest-hit parts of the parched region, liberalize disaster payments to farmers and get the government to pick up half the cost for buying feed for qualifying livestock producers.

"This is everything we can do short of making it rain, which only the good Lord can do," committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, said at a news conference to announce the package.

Rep. Edward Madigan, R-Ill., said the Reagan administration already was using its available authority to help farmers in the drought area, but that the legislation would serve to back that up in case further legal authority was needed.

A similar bill, sponsored by Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., was awaiting action as an amendment to legislation before the Senate to raise the national debt limit.

Some House members chided the Agriculture Department, saying drought-relief efforts thus far have failed to provide needed help to the region, where farm losses are estimated at $1.9 billion.

The House bill would require that the department donate surplus feed grains to farmers in counties where livestock and poultry feed is in critical shortage.

It also would require use of current authority the department has to offer half-price emergency feed to farmers in other disaster areas, and would allow producers to make use of hay growing on acres they had agreed to idle under crop price-support programs.

Other provisions would pay up to 80 percent of transportation costs for moving hay from surplus areas to places where it is needed, and would allow distressed dairy farmers to delay the assessments they otherwise would have to pay under the milk price support program.

De la Garza said moving the grain to Southeastern farmers could also relieve another problem, that of tight storage space in Midwestern grain elevators. Storage is 93 percent full nationwide with a bumper crop of corn less than six weeks from harvest.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Stay alert to opportunities in September that will enable you to increase your income and power. Avoid arguments with siblings. Love will usually conquer all for you. The closer you are to loved ones, home and family, the happier you will be. Travel at Christmas time will give you a new lease on life.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: "Star Spangled Banner" composer Francis Scott Key, funnyman Dom DeLuise, Tempestt Bledsoe of "The Bill Cosby Show," novelist Herman Melville, fashion designer Yves St. Laurent and catcher Milt May.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Those tied to family responsibilities or domestic duties may have trouble staving off boredom. Look for new ways to make the routine more fun. A legal matter will be settled in your favor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family issues continue to create problems if you let them. A candid talk with family members can bring a splendid compromise. Look forward to mixing business with pleasure.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Perform more home services to cut expenses. Encourage family members to follow your example. Issue a casual invitation if you think your social life is lacking.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your financial aggressiveness begins to pay off. Follow through on all assignments before starting new projects. A figure of authority could have you in mind for a promotion.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make an early start so you can get away for the weekend early. Teamwork could bring in some extra cash. You enjoy meeting an influential person under social conditions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not expect to pick up bargains today. Mutually held funds should not be used to buy luxury items. Do-it-yourselfers can save substantially.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Read the fine print before signing any agreements or contracts. Avoid signing anything that will damage a long-term business partnership. Put more effort into improving the look and value of your property.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can deal splendidly with those who work at a distance. Make use of the telephone and express mail. Aim high and your dreams are likely to come true!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stifle the urge to say or do too much. Postpone signing anything important as more information is needed. Take conservative approach in relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A desire to make easy money can cloud your judgment. Seek advice from experts. Finish up old work projects by this afternoon. A telephone call cheers you up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not take any risks with your money. Postpone formulating new alliances or business partnerships. People who work for or with you are a major help. Share the limelight with those who are worthy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Go slow with tasks that require concentration on detail. Do not rush paperwork. Now is the ideal time to work on projects that require no outside assistance.

About 13 years ago, Frederick Turner published an article in "The Bridge World" describing a humorous bridge ploy which he dubbed the "Grosvenor Gambit." To bring it off, a defender had to make a deliberate error so egregious that declarer would refuse to believe it. As a result, the declarer would go down in a contract that could have been made thanks to the error.

The rationale behind all this is that you should pull it off early in a match. The declarer would then be so demoralized that he would not play his best for the rest of the match. Here is a simple example of what we mean.

South held back nothing in pressing on to a heart slam. In the methods his side was using, North's two no trump bid showed some values, and his five diamonds was a cue-bid promising first-round control.

Against six hearts, West led the king of clubs and, in response from an encouraging signal from his partner, continued with ace. Declarer ruffed and had a lot of work to do. Even if he could ruff his third spade in dummy, he would still have to find the queen of trumps, and the percentage play would be to finesse.

Declarer cashed the ace-king of spades and ruffed a spade with the jack. Instead of overruffing and setting the contract, East discarded a diamond! As far as declarer was concerned, that marked the queen of trumps with West. So he banged down the ace-king, only to find that he had set up East's queen for the setting trick. South's confidence was shattered for the rest of the night.

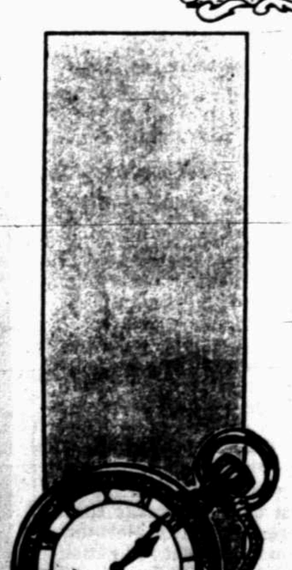
WATCHES



Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

If you need a good helper, try advertising in our classifieds. Who knows? You may spark the beginning of something big!

Will private eye Thomas Magnum escape death in building explosion?

Selleck

HONOLULU (AP) — Will television private eye Thomas Magnum escape death when an old hospital building is dynamited?

The "Magnum, P.I." series, starring Tom Selleck, will film an episode around the demolition of the 10-story Kaiser Hospital, which is being torn down to make way for a $130 million luxury apartment and hotel, the Honolulu Star-Bulletin reports.

The script calls for Magnum, played by Selleck, to be trapped in the building's elevator, the newspaper reported. The detective's celebrated red Ferrari will be filmed near the site on the day of the demolition.

The blast was to take place Friday, but was rescheduled for Aug. 15 when demolition experts discovered the building was strongly reinforced.

Carter

WASHINGTON (LAT) — Sometime carpenter Jimmy Carter and his wife Rosalynn led some 500 people Wednesday on the first leg of a 1,000-mile walk from Americus, Ga., to Kansas City, Mo., to raise money to build houses for the poor.

"I'm just going to walk nine miles, almost 10 miles, with you today," the former president explained. "This walk shows the dedication of leaders for Habitat for Humanity all over the world who hope to raise a million dollars." Carter plans to meet the group at the completion of the walk in Kansas City on Sept. 18.

The Carters are strong supporters of Habitat for Humanity program and for the past two years have worked on building rehabilitation projects in New York City. The hoped-for $1 million will go to the poor in interest-free loans to buy materials for houses. Habitat's volunteers help the loan recipients build their own homes. Among the small group on the trek are representatives from as far away as New Guinea and India.

NEW YORK (AP) — Claus von Bulow may wait until September to give a deposition in a $56 million lawsuit filed by his wife's children, a judge said.

Von Bulow, the Danish-born socialite acquitted last year of trying to kill his wife, is suffering from a painful nerve inflammation known as shingles, and U.S. District Judge John Walker agreed to delay the deposition, now tentatively set for Sept. 15, Von Bulow's attorney, John S. Martin, said Wednesday.

Alexander Auersperg and Annie Laurie Auersperg Kneissl, Sunny von Bulow's children by a previous marriage, contend that von Bulow caused their mother's coma by injecting her with insulin. Mrs. von Bulow remains in a coma.

HOLLYWOOD (LAT) — Motion picture director Vincente Minnelli was eulogized Wednesday by actors Gregory Peck and Kirk Douglas as an artist whose work will live as long as there are films.

The 83-year-old Minnelli, winner of the Oscar for "Gigi" and director of other musical classics such as "Meet Me in St. Louis," died Friday after a long struggle against emphysema.

The funeral service at Forest Lawn Memorial Park's Wee Kirk o'the Heather in Glendale, Calif., was crowded with more than 125 mourners, including his daughter, singing star Liza Minnelli; comedian Bob Hope; singer Kenny Rogers; actors Jimmy Stewart and Richardo Montalban; composer Henry Mancini and producer Jack Haley Jr.

Singer Michael Jackson entered the chapel with Liza and the director's widow, Lee Minnelli, on each arm. He sat with them and Minnelli's other daughter, Christiane Nina Miro of Mexico, throughout the service.

Father George O'Brien of the Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills conducted the brief Catholic service.

The familiar voices Peck and Douglas, both of whom worked under Minnelli's direction, were piped outside for the benefit of about 125 news photographers and reporters, Minnelli fans and others who said that they came less to mourn the director than to see the entertainment stars.

Peck called Minnelli "a man who literally gave his life to reach for the distant star, to create works that 100 years later will glow with life and power."

He was, Peck said, not only an artist but "a showman who knew how to give them the old razzle dazzle."

Stahl

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS White House reporter Lesley Stahl has been named the national affairs correspondent for the "CBS Evening News."

Ms. Stahl has had the prestigious White House assignment since 1979, sharing the beat with correspondent Bill Plante since 1980. No replacement for Ms. Stahl was immediately named.

She will continue as anchor on CBS Sunday morning broadcast "Face the Nation," a job she assumed nearly three years ago.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bargainers for producers and two actors' unions extended their strike deadline in an effort to avert a walkout by 92,000 actors that could halt production of movies and prime-time TV shows.

"We've decided to stop the clock," Mark Locher, a spokesman for the Screen Actors Guild, said early today.

"It's a hopeful sign because both sides have agreed to continue talking," Locher said. He said the talks had reached a critical stage.

SAG and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists will continue talks with the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers at 10 a.m. today, he said.

Talks began Wednesday at 11 a.m. and continued past the deadline until 1:15 a.m. today, said alliance spokeswoman Carol Ayikama. The self-imposed deadline of 12:01 a.m. was reset to 5 p.m., she said.

AFTRA spokeswoman Pamm Fair said she hoped today's talks would result in an agreement. "We're going in for a full day and hopefully we can come out with a contract," she said. "We are trying to come out and avoid a strike."

SAG and AFTRA officials had been authorized by their members to call a strike if the talks appeared fruitless.

A strike would affect all union feature films as well as network prime-time dramatic TV shows.

Many television shows already have begun production for the new season, but a strike likely could disturb production of "The Cosby Show," "Miami Vice," "Dallas," "Moonlighting," "Hill Street Blues" and others.

Let charities help

One of the foundations on which Ronald Reagan built his presidency was the belief that smaller, less costly government is more efficient government, and that responsibilities which can be assumed by charitable organizations should be handled that way.

The Reagan Revolution has been remarkably successful at obtaining state and local cooperation in a number of areas. The current conference committee debate over Reagan's tax policy reform is the next step down the path in that revolution. Unfortunately, one proposal along the tax policy reform path is moving in the wrong direction: Wiping away the income tax deduction for nonitemizers who give to charities.

While the benefits to be derived from tax policy reform could result in significantly lower tax rates and a much simpler income tax reporting system, there also could be a tremendously adverse impact on charities throughout the country. According to an impact study performed by Professor Larry Lindsey of Harvard University, repeal of the deduction for nonitemizers' charitable gifts actually could result in a loss to charities of nearly $5.87 billion the first year alone. That amounts to nearly $30 billion over a five-year period and translates into a lowering of the quality of life for recipients of the charitable services performed by numerous agencies around the country.

In a community such as Midland which is noted for its charitable giving, there undoubtedly would continue to be a high degree of giving. But there's little question that local charity organizations would feel the pinch of the change.

Professor Lindsey noted in his study that the government estimates it will realize only $6.9 billion over a five-year period as a result of the change on nonitemizers' deductions. In effect the government would be swapping $30 billion worth of voluntary services for $6.9 billion in governmental services. Recognizing the government's track record on frugal utilization of tax money, that isn't good money management and it certainly isn't good "Reaganomics".

House-Senate conferees hammering out the final tax policy reform package would do well to consider the loss the nation could suffer if the nonitemizers' deduction is killed and what help millions of people in the nation could receive through charitable organizations if it isn't.

Another View:

Retooling rhymes

Little Ms. Muffet sat on a tuffet ... perhaps perusing her copy of "Father Gander: the Equal Rhymes Amendment," a book of politically correct nursery rhymes. Muffet, incidentally, holds her own against the spider quite nicely in Father Gander's reworking of the famous rhyme.

It approaches heresy to suggest that Mother Goose can be improved upon, yet ponder the deplorable circumstances in which some nursery rhyme characters seem to find themselves: An apparently single parent who lives in a shoe has too many children, so she beats them; a husband crams his wife into a pumpkin to imprison her.

Those are vivid images for young minds. Father Gander's approach to such sorry plights is to rework them; The woman in a shoe becomes a couple (Dad's an equal partner); the children sup on nutritious whole-wheat bread; kisses replace whippings. The kicker is a couplet promoting family planning that is tacked onto the original poem:

(There's only one issue I don't understand.)
If they didn't want so many why didn't they plan?

If preschoolers find the concept of responsible parenthood a bit too sophisticated, they should have less trouble with the retooled "Peter, Peter Pumpkin Eater," who treats the missus with respect. She in turn hugs him. Significantly, no mention is made of pumpkin-stuffing.

Why tinker with the classics this way? Why sprinkle nursery rhymes with references to equal rights, acid rain and working mothers? As author/head gander Doug Larche explains, nursery rhymes have an enormous impact on the young, representing for some their first contact with literature. As such, these early poems ought to reflect values with which parents are comfortable, Larche maintains.

Well, maybe — but only if Mother Goose isn't quashed altogether; indeed, we see no reason that the two texts can't exist side by side, as testimony to the freedom of expression that Americans value so highly.

Now then, has anybody seen Ms. Spratt? Last we heard, she had been urged by some uppity gander to go on a low-cholesterol diet.

Secret Service spied on its own agent

WASHINGTON — Three Secret Service officers with a high-powered video camera staked out the beach at Ocean City, Md., for three hours and 45 minutes on July 6, 1984. Crouching in the sand dunes, they surreptitiously observed and filmed a muscular, innocent-looking man of 34 as he lay on the beach, soaking up sun.

Jack Anderson

Was this part of some secret anti-terrorist operation? Was the target of the Secret Service surveillance a suspected assassin, perhaps a member of a dread Libyan hit squad?

Not quite. The object of all this attention was Robert Hambsch III, a member of the uniformed Secret Service and a union activist. The photographic evidence of his afternoon at the beach was used by agency officials to fire him six months later.

The "crime" so painstakingly documented by Secret Service inspectors was that Hambsch, though on unpaid sick leave for a knee problem, had been forbidden to go farther from Washington, D.C., than his home in Annapolis, Md., and its environs. Service regulations require permission before officers may leave their duty area. Ocean City is a two-hour drive east from Annapolis.

Summoned for interrogation later by a staff inspector, Hambsch was told to state where he had been from July 2 to July 8; he was told he could be "as vague as he wanted." Hambsch responded that he had been in Annapolis and nearby Cape St. Clair, Md.

Hambsch requested the presence of an attorney or a neutral witness at his interrogation. This was refused. On the transcript of the interrogation, he wrote "Under Protest" beneath his signature. Hambsch was later fired for "falsification of facts" and insubordination.

Hambsch appealed his dismissal to the Merit System Protection Board, claiming that his superiors were acting in retaliation for grievances he had filed against them. He also argued that the regulations requiring permission to leave the area should not have applied to him, since he was on leave without pay. His appeal was rejected.

Hambsch then took his case to the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals. He lost again, even though the court acknowledged that "one might be able to infer that high-ranking officers of the Secret Service were 'out to get him.'"

Court records reviewed by our reporter Jim Lynch reveal the basis for such an inference. They show that six agency officials met on June 19, 1984, to begin a formal investigation of Hambsch. Background information was provided to the officials by a senior staff inspector whom Hambsch had filed a grievance against two months earlier.

On June 29, Hambsch submitted a request to go to Ocean City, which was denied. On July 3, three agency inspectors staked out Hambsch's Annapolis home and noted that "no vehicle known to be used or owned by the subject was observed." Three other inspectors and a sergeant meanwhile took turns phoning the house, letting the phone ring 25 times on each call. They got no answer.

Two of the inspectors left Hambsch's home that day and drove to Ocean City. At 4:10 p.m., they spotted Hambsch walking from the beach. Three days later, the inspectors returned to Ocean City with a photographer and filmed him on the beach.

Meanwhile, though they knew Hambsch was in Ocean City, agency inspectors continued to phone his Annapolis home — 39 times over five days, for a total of 975 rings. The service claimed it had been trying to call Hambsch back for limited duty — though the gumshoes in Ocean City made no attempt to contact him.

A Secret Service spokesman said the Hambsch investigation was "standard procedure to get sufficient evidence." Hambsch has asked the federal appeals court for a rehearing.

GEORGE F. WILL

'Abolitionists' not helping S. Africa's cause

WASHINGTON — If arguments acquired cogency from vehemence, the case for sanctions against South Africa would be made. Vehemence abounds, as does right-mindedness — the belief that morality consists of voicing certain sentiments.

George F. Will

In the name of capturing "the high moral ground" (that real estate was last in the news when Mondale said we lost it by liberating Grenada), moralists are demanding denial of landing rights for South Africa's airline. That may be done, just as soon as we finish re-establishing landing rights for the Soviet airlines.

It will cost the University of California $118 million in commissions and other administrative costs to divest itself of holdings in companies that do business in South Africa.

Political hygienists in the British Commonwealth have pronounced themselves too fastidious to participate in the Commonwealth Games with the British because Mrs. Thatcher opposes sanctions. These hygienists include Zimbabwe's president (the state of emergency begun under white rule continues under Mugabe; see "Torture in Zimbabwe" by Amnesty International) and the current reincarnation of Ghana's popular will, Flight Lt. Jerry Rawlings, and whoever is now supreme in Uganda.

Ethiopia's communist regime has engineered a famine that kills more people every day than die in violence (much of it black against black) in South Africa in months. People up there on the high moral ground calling for sanctions should study a new word: "Ethiopianization." That may be the fate awaiting 80 million black Africans in the six southern African nations whose economies — in some cases, barely subsistence economies — are dependent on South Africa's economy.

These nations depend substantially on South Africa for transportation, electricity and jobs for itinerant workers. Those nations will be forced to collaborate with South Africa in defeating sanctions (by transshipping material, and other assistance) or face "Ethiopianization."

Today 1.2 million black workers from the north are in South Africa illegally and 350,000 are there legally. The money they send home to their families in their much poorer countries is crucial to those countries. The flow of money will slow if South Africa's economy slows and will stop if sanctions cripple South Africa's economy so much that these workers are expelled.

"Which side are we on?" asks the New York Times, assuming there are only two sides, that the choice is obvious, and that the Reagan administration has chosen immorally. The Times is thrice wrong. Obviously America is not "on the side" of white oppressors, having condemned apartheid as immoral and called for release of Mandela, its foremost opponent. What is "the" side of the blacks? The leader of the largest black group, the Zulus, opposes the sanctions the Times supports.

It is not in the U.S. interest to contribute to the creation of a Lebanon — a war of all against all — in South Africa. American interests include pluralism and prosperity in southern Africa, neither of which will be advanced by deepening South Africa's isolation.

The social and cultural as well as economic dynamism that accompanies capitalism is the surest solvent of superstitions and irrationalities like apartheid. So South Africa needs more of what sanctions would diminish. It needs foreign capital operating under rules of racial justice written in the nations from which the capital comes.

And South Africa also needs something the London Times advocates, something incompatible with a policy of isolation. It needs a Marshall Plan targeted at educating, housing, training and capitalizing blacks.

The pounding of South Africa by moralists at a safe distance is not softening the regime. Support for the Botha regime from English-speaking South Africans, the more liberal element, has recently risen sharply. Even if all the "English" whites emigrated, there would be three million Afrikaners armed with the products of a domestic arms industry that grew in response to Western sanctions — an arms embargo. The industry produces fine aircraft, tanks, howitzers, projectiles.

Will the regime use these? The example of the Shah, Somoza, Duvalier and Marcos may suggest that oppressive regimes — at least non-communist ones — melt away rather than use military force against their populations in order to hold power. But the well-armed Afrikaners are descendants of the ferocious Boers who fought the British Empire at the peak of its power.

They will fight, if it comes to full civil war. They probably will lose, but not before a million blacks have lost their lives. Will the West, having disengaged, have clean hands?

In the years before the American Civil War, "abolitionists" wanted slavery abolished. But that could not be done immediately, so some of them favored abolishing the Union less they be sullied by further association with slave states. That would not have helped the slaves, but helping the slaves was not their primary concern. A sense of purity — right-mindedness — was.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 31, the 212th day of 1986. There are 153 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 31, 1777, the Marquis de Lafayette, a 19-year-old French nobleman, was made a major general in the Continental Army after offering his help to the rebelling American colonies. Lafayette later played a role in the British defeat at Yorktown.

On this date:

In 1498, Christopher Columbus discovered the island of Trinidad.

In 1556, Saint Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Society of Jesus, died in Rome.

In 1875, Andrew Johnson, 17th president of the United States, died in Tennessee at age 66.

In 1948, President Harry S. Truman helped dedicate New York International Airport at Idlewild Field. The airport was later renamed Kennedy International Airport.

In 1953, Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, known as "Mister Republican" for his conservative philosophy, died in New York at age 63.

In 1972, Democratic vice-presidential candidate Thomas Eagleton withdrew from the ticket with George McGovern after disclosures that Eagleton had once undergone psychiatric treatment.

In 1984, the U.S. men's gymnastics team won the team gold medal at the Los Angeles Summer Olympics in a major upset over the Chinese team.

Ten years ago: Among the gold medal-winning boxers at the Montreal Summer Olympics were Americans Howard Davis (lightweight); Sugar Ray Leonard (light welterweight); Michael Spinks (middleweight) and Leon Spinks (light heavyweight).

Five years ago: A mid-season strike against major league baseball ended as both sides reached agreement on the issue of free-agent compensation.

One year ago: The government of South Africa banned group funerals for riot victims.

Today's birthdays: Economist Milton Friedman is 74. Sportscaster Curt Gowdy is 67. Actor Don Murray is 57. Actress France Nuyen is 47. Actress Susan Flannery is 43. Actress Geraldine Chaplin is 42. Tennis player Evonne Goolagong Cawley is 35.

Thought for today: "Life is like an onion; you peel it off one layer at a time, and sometimes you weep." — Carl Sandburg, American author and poet (1878-1967).

JAMES RESTON

Harriman typified best in public service

WASHINGTON — Averell Harriman lived long enough to fight the central political battles of the age and still retain the respect and admiration of both his colleagues and his critics.

James Reston

For more than half a century, as governor of New York, secretary of commerce, ambassador to Great Britain and the Soviet Union — to mention only a few of his responsibilities — he was a model of the public servant, ranking in the memory of this capital with George Catlett Marshall, Dean Acheson, George Kennan and a few others who have devoted their lives to the ideals of the Republic.

He was both a politician and a statesman, with qualities of character that enabled him to fight for his party without losing sight of the larger interests of the nation. Unlike so many of his contemporaries, he knew that simplicity and concentration produce lucidity and decision.

Thus, he devoted most of his public life to the great struggles of the economic Depression, the fight against Fascism in the Second World War and the tangles of U.S.-Soviet relations in the postwar atomic age.

The issue of Soviet-American relations was his enduring concern over the last 40 years, and even at the end he established a center for Soviet studies at Columbia University to keep the cold war, as he saw it, in historical perspective.

It should probably be noted that he did not follow the prevailing fashions of his class and time. He came out of a great conservative railroad tradition, but joined Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal in what he regarded as an essential crusade to modify and preserve the capitalist system.

Likewise, he came out of his stewardship in Moscow, as Kennan did, with a clear determination to contain the spread of Soviet power and Communist influence, though always with the conviction that war between these two atomic giants must and could be avoided.

He worried about the tendency among his fellow countrymen to think of the Soviet leaders as comparable to the Nazis. Even in his declining years, he was presiding with his wife over seminars in his Georgetown house where men and women of different political and philosophical persuasions debated the issues of the arms race.

It irritated him to hear it said, on the one hand, that the Soviet Union was so strong as to threaten the existence of the United States, and on the other, that it existed mainly by borrowing and stealing modern technology and therefore was so weak that it would be overwhelmed by the rush of science in the computer age.

Not long before he died, his wife, Pamela, formerly the daughter-in-law of Winston Churchill, published one of his favorite Churchillian passages, in which Churchill had proposed that communism should be "strangled in its cradle," and had warned the world against Moscow's imperialistic designs and materialistic philosophy. Nevertheless, like Tocqueville, Harriman believed that the United States and the Soviet Union had emerged as the presiding giants of the world and had to keep negotiating until they found some common ground in their common interest.

If Harriman's eloquence had matched his thought, he might have been chosen to represent his party in its bid for the presidency. But it would be a mistake to say that he was a pioneer in the ideas of his age. He was a servant and a collector of the best thought he could find. Though fiercely partisan, he never forgot that after the political battles were over, those engaged in them would have to go on working and living together.

This is a rare quality in Washington. For all too often, officials here cannot bear public criticism without private resentment. Harriman was not like that. He spoke his mind and when his dander was up, he could be almost recklessly frank; but his storms of thunder and lightning soon passed and he could forgive even the press for what he often regarded as its impudent condemnation of his ideas.

In short, he was a gentleman who did not apologize for his old-fashioned concept of noblesse oblige. He was particularly fond of Walter Lippmann's definition of the ideal standards of a public man, and tried to live by them.

"Those in high places," Lippmann wrote shortly before Harriman came to Washington, "are more than the administrators of government bureaus. They are more than the writers of laws. They are the custodians of a nation's ideals, of the beliefs it cherishes, of its permanent hopes, of the faith which makes a nation out of a mere aggregation of individuals ..."

When we have said that, it will be understood why those who knew Averell Harriman best admired him most, and why he will be remembered as a symbol of the best in our public service.

Explorers say Titanic doomed by hull plates that sprang leak

WASHINGTON (AP) — The second and final visit to the Titanic by a team of undersea explorers has shed new light on what doomed the grand liner as well as the macabre, deep-sea ravagers who dined at its grave.

Researcher Robert Ballard, who discovered the Titanic in the North Atlantic last Sept. 1, said its collision with an iceberg in April of 1912 did not create a huge gash in the hull — as many, including himself, had long supposed. Instead, he said, the 12-inch-thick plates on the hull simply popped their rivets and buckled enough to spring a fatal leak.

Ballard said the comprehensive photographic exploration of the wreck in 12 dives earlier this month showed "absolutely no evidence" of a gash, estimated in some historical accounts as 300 feet long.

His team, from the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Woods Hole, Mass., took more than 57,000 still photos and 50 hours of videotapes. One series of pictures will result in a complete mosaic of the shipwreck, a project scheduled for completion within six weeks.

Ballard met reporters Wednesday at the National Geographic Society headquarters, where Navy Secretary John Lehman commended the Woods Hole team.

The explorer said the fact that the stern of the liner was found 600 meters away from the bow section shows that the ship broke apart not when it hit bottom, 12,500 feet from the surface, but on the way down. He theorized the ship might have imploded from the pressure.

Ballard described the "frozen terror" of the stern section. "You really felt it when you were there," in the tiny, three-man submarine, called Alvin, that scoured the wreckage. "The sheer carnage...it looked violent and destructive."

On the other hand, he said, the bow section was much more intact, though all four funnels have disappeared — perhaps disintegrated — and "the entire wheelhouse has been eaten" by wood-boring organisms.

His photos showed millions of the tubular skeletons of the creatures that dined on the organic remains of the Titanic. Scientists previously had not known that such creatures lived at those extreme depths.

Ballard said he was not surprised, after noting "the absence of any wood, anything organic," that he found no evidence of human remains. The only organic artifact found was a patent leather shoe, he said.

Ballard said he spotted one safe, and photos taken by a sled named Angus and a robotic video scout called Jason Jr. showed at least four others.

But he said that anyone trying to salvage such artifacts wasn't likely to get his money's worth. Most retrievable objects — those lying directly on the ocean floor — are from the steerage area of the luxury ship, he said.

There is no way, contrary to published fictional suggestions, to raise the broken ship itself, he added.

Rust was everywhere on the wreckage, except for copper and ceramic objects. The photos showed gleaming copper pots and pans from the ship's kitchen, the head of a doll, a copper cup sitting upright atop one of the engine boilers.

"It would have been easy to retrieve these things," Ballard said. "We felt it was better to leave them where they were." Ballard added that he saw no need for scientists to return to the vessel, and he declined comment on plans by West Texas oilman Jack Grimm to attempt to salvage such items.

Days earlier, Ballard expressed hope that people will leave the Titanic alone so it and the 1,513 passengers who perished can "finally rest in peace."

Ballard talked of the problems he and his crew had getting oriented when they reached the liner, which was as long as three football fields and 11 stories high. Because there is no light at the bottom, it is impossible to get a perspective of the vessel from a distance, he said. And up close, "it's like standing up against a Sequoia with a flashlight, and you say, 'That's great bark' while you're trying to map the forest."

Each of the 12 dives lasted about eight hours, with three hours at the Titanic. "We spent five hours commuting each day," Ballard noted. As for the cramped quarters inside the Alvin, "It was like working inside a Swiss watch," he said.

On one dive, the crew of explorers placed a memorial plaque on the deck of the liner, commemorating the dead and affirming the name of the vessel that was lost on its maiden voyage. "Nowhere could we find the name," Ballard said. "Time had wiped it away."

Derrick Poole kisses his newborn daughter, Michele Odette Poole, Thursday after she was delivered by Caesarean section from his brain-dead fiancee Marie Odette Henderson.

Brain-dead woman's baby born

Henderson

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — A brain-dead woman kept on life-support systems for 7½ weeks until her pregnancy neared term was disconnected and died shortly after giving birth, hospital officials said.

The baby, named Michele Odette Poole, was delivered Wednesday by Caesarean section at Kaiser Permanente Hospital here and was "raring to go," hospital officials said.

The baby's father, Derrick Poole, fiance of 34-year-old Marie Odette Henderson, fought a legal battle with Ms. Henderson's parents, Edna and Otis Henderson of Detroit, who wanted to disconnect their daughter's life-support systems.

Poole, 31, obtained a court order to keep the life-support system connected, eventually reaching an agreement with her parents to keep her alive until the baby was born. He also was granted custody.

Ms. Henderson was six months pregnant when she collapsed June 4 because of a stroke caused by a golf ball-size brain tumor. She was declared legally dead three days later.

Dr. Stephen Fernbach, director of the neonatal intensive care unit at Kaiser, said the child is doing well and probably will be ready to leave the hospital in seven to 10 days.

"She was more mature and more vigorous than I expected. She's a real pretty baby," said Fernbach. "She was more active than many normal deliveries. She was raring to go."

After the baby's birth, and the death of Ms. Henderson, Poole said Wednesday, "Knowing Odette, and how bad she wanted to have this baby, maybe it was God's will that today was the time for her — the time to take the baby."

Michele was delivered by Dr. Donald Dyson, chief of perinatology at Kaiser Permanente Hospital. She weighed 4 pounds, 5 ounces and was 16½ inches long.

Dyson said only 5 percent of all brain-dead people survive more than two weeks on life support, adding that he had read about only five cases of babies being delivered to brain-dead mothers.

Doctors decided to deliver the 32-week-old fetus after getting results of an amniocentesis Tuesday that showed the lungs were mature enough.

"I know how it feels to be a father now. She looked at me and I looked at her. I only wish Odette were here," said Poole, waiting outside the delivery room.

"I'm very happy about the outcome for Michele, but I'm still grieving a little bit (for Ms. Henderson)," Poole said later at a news conference. "Michele's birth today makes things a little easier."

Poole said his daughter had a full head of hair and was wearing a pink T-shirt that said, "I was born at Kaiser, Santa Clara."

"When I looked into her eyes, I could see the extension from Odette into her. Michele looked like a carbon copy of Odette," Poole said.

Poole said he hoped his fight would inspire other fathers faced with the same difficult decision.

"If I can go to my grave saying I have Michele here on earth and I can reach out and touch somebody by doing all this, then my job was served well here," Poole said.

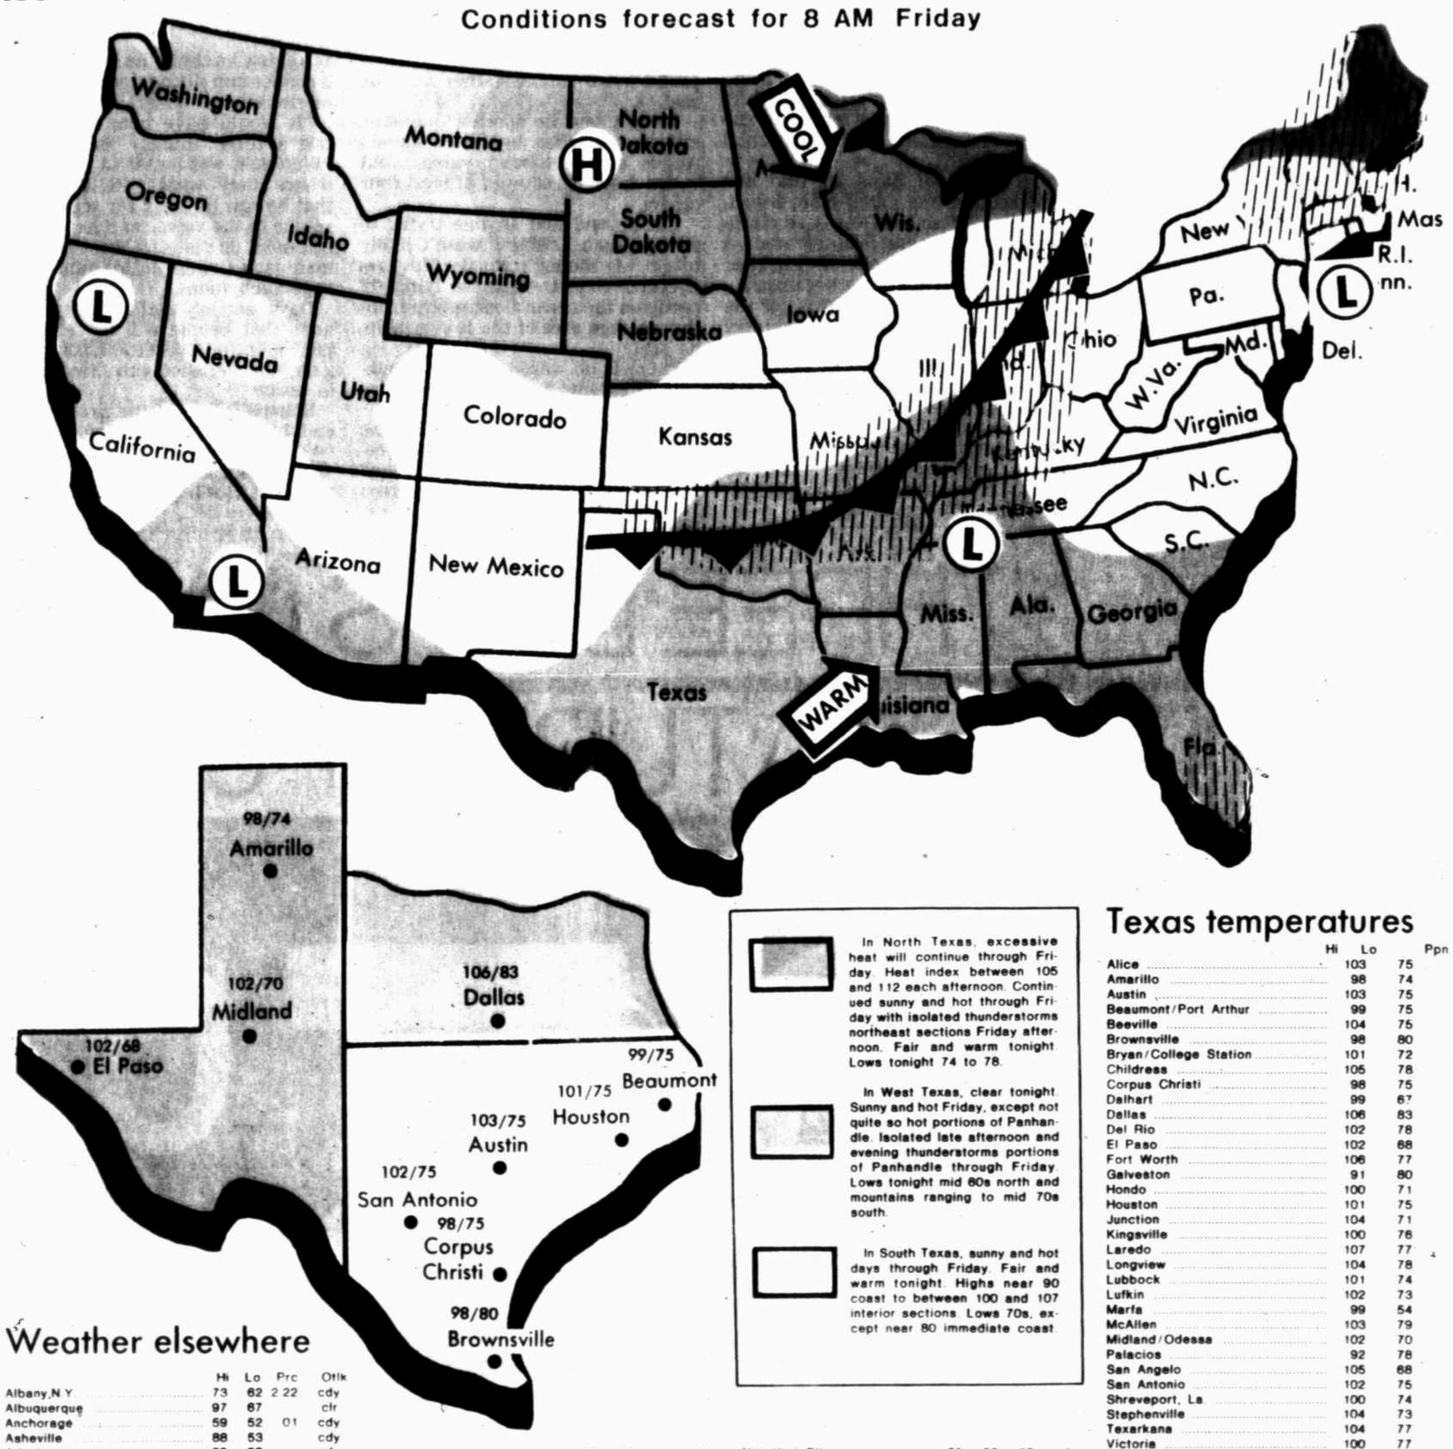
TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH
(Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form.)

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

Conditions forecast for 8 AM Friday



In North Texas, excessive heat will continue through Friday. Heat index between 105 and 112 each afternoon. Continued sunny and hot through Friday with isolated thunderstorms northeast sections Friday afternoon. Fair and warm tonight. Lows tonight 74 to 78.

In West Texas, clear tonight. Sunny and hot Friday, except not quite so hot portions of Panhandle. Isolated late afternoon and evening thunderstorms portions of Panhandle through Friday. Lows tonight mid 60s north and mountains ranging to mid 70s south.

In South Texas, sunny and hot days through Friday. Fair and warm tonight. Highs near 90 coast to between 100 and 107 interior sections. Lows 70s, except near 80 immediate coast.

Highs stay in the 100s

From Staff and Wire Reports

No relief from century mark highs are predicted for the end of the week, says the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight will be clear with a low in the upper 60s. Winds will be southerly at 5 to 10 mph.

Friday will be sunny and continued hot with a high near 100 degrees. Winds will be southeasterly at 5 to 15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 102 degrees was 4 degrees cooler than the record high of 106 set in 1937. The overnight low of 69 degrees was 9 degrees warmer than the record low of 60 set in 1971.

STATE

Some relief from the searing heat may be on the way, but it will be at least Sunday or Monday before any significant temperature drops are expected, the National Weather Service says.

Forecasters say the heat index will remain extrmely high through Friday in North Texas and Northeast Texas.

The heat index, a measure of the combined effect of temperature and humidity on the humand body, will remain extremely high through at least part of the weekend.

Heat index values of between 105 and 110 can be expected across western and central sections of North texas, including the Wichita Falls and Dallas-Fort Worth areas, each day. Values should remain just below 105 in the Abilene area.

In East Texas, higher humidities will result in heat index value between 105 and 112, forecasters say.

And, forecasters warned, exposure to full sun can increase these values up to 15 degrees.

NATION

Strong thunderstorms hit the Midwest today and heavy rain prompted a flood warning in New York, while a heat wave showed no sign of letup.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across the northern Rockies, central Plains, the Mississippi Valley, the mid-Atlantic states and New England.

Strong thunderstorms moved across west central Illinois, and a severe thunderstorm watch was posted in central and southern Illinois and southwest Indiana.

A flood warning was in effect in Lewis County in western New York. The area had as much as 4 inches of rain as storms drenched southern New England and sections of the mid-Atlantic states. About 4 inches of rain also fell in northeastern New Jersey.

Aggie combo gets all-star test

HOUSTON (AP) — South quarterback Lance Pavlas and receiver Percy Waddle, both Texas A&M signees, begin what they hope will be a successful pass-catch combination Thursday night when they face the North in the Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star football game at 7 p.m. today in the Astrodome.

South Coach Lynn Etheredge of Tomball will try to use Waddle's speed and the strong arm of Pavlas to dent the North's defenses.

Waddle, 6-2, 175, of Columbus is a two-time state Class 3A 400-meters champion and ran a leg on a junior world-record 1600-meter relay team.

"We hope to get the ball to Percy deep," Etheredge said. "But he's a threat no matter what the range of pass. That speed is hard to beat. We can make it fun if he can catch a few passes."

Prep Football

High-scoring games are rare in the annual all-star clash, however. The North won last year's game in Dallas 14-7 to increase its lead to 28-19-4 in the series. The South won the 1984 game in Houston 27-7 but the last rout was a 65-0 South victory in 1971.

"It's so hard to get an offense in in four days," Etheredge said. "The defenses are always superior to the offense early in the season and that is accentuated for this game."

Pavlas led Etheredge's Tomball team to the state Class 4A title game the past two years, making Etheredge's job easier for the All-Star game.

"It means that I don't have to coach the most important position on the team, it saves a lot of time," Etheredge said.

North Coach Marty Criswell of Denison will start Mineral Wells quarterback Sean Fisher, who passed for 4,600 yards in his schoolboy career.

Criswell also expected his defense to meet the North's offensive challenge.

Allison Memorial golf benefit set

From Staff Reports

The Jimmy Allison Memorial Golf Tournament, benefiting the Midland Unit of the American Cancer Society, will be held Monday at Mission Country Club, it was announced by Neill McClung, tournament chairman.

The field for the 1:30 p.m. Shotgun start will be limited to the first 120 teams. Entries, $150 donation, will be accepted until the 11:30 a.m. Monday.

Play will be two-man low-ball, low net with full handicap. There will be A and B divisions.

"The money raised by the tournament will go to education, service, rehabilitation and research," McClung said. "Education includes schools, films, video and advertising which warn of cancer's danger signals. Service includes supplies, hospital, rides for treatment and equipment. And research is in the form of grants to universities and hospitals.

"The society's slogan is 'Let's help wipe out cancer in our life time,'" said McClung, "and that's part of the objective of a tournament like this one."

Allison is the former publisher-owner of the Midland Reporter-Telegram who was a victim of leukemia.

Following the tournament, a steak order dinner for participants and their spouses or dates will be held in the Mission ball room.

"There will be a lot of prizes, a full range of top line equipment for the winners," points out McClung. "And Honda will off cars for holes-in-one on No. 8 and No. 13 while the other par threes will be closest-to-the-pin betting holes."

There will also be longest-drive contest out on the course.

For information, contact McClung (682 9197) or the American Cancer Society, 601 South Main (683 6374).

NEW YORK — Juror Margaret Lilienfield, a retired liason officer for a foreign policy organization, denied another juror's contention that the panel decided to award only $1 in damages to the USFL only because it thought Judge Peter K. Leisure would increase the amount on his own.

"There was never any intention of this award being thrown back to the court. We knew exactly what we were doing."

That conflicted with the account of school teacher Miriam Sanchez, who said the jurors were confused about how much to award, so had decided to throw it back to the court...

NEW YORK — A federal arbitrator ruled Wednesday that drug-testing clauses contained in the contracts of several hundred major league baseball players are unenforceable. "They must go through the union."...

DENVER — With four victories this season, including three of the LPGA's four majors, and a season-leading $380,496 in winnings, Pat Bradley might be inclined to take it easy the rest of the year. Sorry, gang. Bradley, believe it or not, still has some unfulfilled goals for 1986.

"I'm going to play in eight more tournaments, and I feel at least one or two have my name on them," she said after a practice round for the LPGA National Pro-Am, which begins today. "I've never been Player of the Year, and that's one of my main goals."

Ride home is long for Halos

From Staff Reports

JACKSON, Miss. — The ride back promised to be a long one, not that a Jackson to Midland trip isn't always long, win or lose.

The Mets beat Midland 6-5, to take the Texas League series between the teams by a convincing 4-1 margin.

It was a battle of home runs. Only trouble was that Jackson's homers came with runners on base. Midland's were the kind of eerie solo jobsthat have haunted the club all season.

Pat Keedy hit both Midland homers and both with the bases empty. For Jackson, Kevin Elster hit a two-runner, his second of the year, to win it in the seventh. Rick Lockwood earlier had hit a two-run homer to give the Mets a 3-2 lead in the third.

Midland, down 4-2, in the fifth, tied it when John Hotchkiss singled, moved up on a sacrifice and the runs came in on singles by Kevin King and James Randall.

In the sixth, Midland inched ahead with an unearned run, but then Keith Miller reached on an infield hit. Submariner Julian Gonzalez relieved starter Phil Venturino and surrendered the Elster homer. Gonzalez suffered his first loss since reporting from Edmonton.

Jeff Ennis came in in the ninth to earn his 19th save of the season and his third in this series.

Waiting for the Angels at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Angels Stadium will be the San Antonio Dodgers, only the hottest team in the league with 11 wins in its last 12 games. Last time Midland met San Antonio in the Mission City, the Dodgers won five out of six from the Angels.

Diablos deck Captains

Associated Press

Alan Cartwright doubled home Billy Bates with the winning run in the top of the 11th inning to give the El Paso Diablos a 5-4 Texas League win over the Shreveport Captains.

But it took a sensational bit of defense in the bottom of the 11th inning to preserve the victory.

In other Texas League action Wednesday night, Jackson slipped past Midland, 6-5, Beaumont defeated Tulsa, 7-4, and San Antonio edged Arkansas, 2-1.

After Cartwright doubled home Bates, who had walked and moved to second on a sacrifice, it took a one-out, bases-loaded double play to keep Shreveport from tying the game. The double play went from third to home to first and preserved the Diablos victory.

Alan Cockrell had a two-run homer, his 13th of the season, for Shreveport in the fifth inning and teammate Greg Liton added a solo homer, his sixth, in the ninth inning.

Shane Mack's three-run homer powered the Beaumont Golden Gators to a 7-4 victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

Beaumont had 10 hits, including two each by Mack, Steve Garcia, Scott Parson and Sandy Alomar.

Sutcliffe, Dickson reach Women's City final

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Penny Sutcliffe is poised and ready. Jo Dickson is poised and hoping.

The two women squared off this morning in a final round match play to determine the Women's City Championship of Midland after posting runaway semifinal victories Wednesday.

Dickson is playing in her third City Championship final and still looking for her first victory. Sutcliffe, fresh from a two-year stint at New Mexico State golf squad is playing in her first City Championship.

But it is Dickson, the veteran, who is worried.

"I'm going to have to play like heck to win it," Dickson said, shortly after disposing of Helen Brant 4-and-3. "I'm playing somebody who is just a better player than I am. I just hope I'm in it."

History would say that Dickson needn't worry.

Just 13 months ago, Sutcliffe and Dickson met in the Women's West Texas tournament, and though the younger Sutcliffe emerged with a win, it took 18 holes and a little bit of luck.

WEDNESDAY, SUTCLIFFE breezed over Stacy Owens, 6-and-4, to advance into the final round against Dickson.

"I think it will go at least 18 again," Sutcliffe said of the rematch. "It should be a real good match. I hit the ball real well on the back nine, but every day is a new day with me, I never know how I'll play.

"I have sort of an unorthodox swing, it doesn't look pretty, but it works for me."

It was sure working for her against Owens in the semifinals. After starting slowly, Sutcliffe warmed up to the task and ousted the inexperienced Owens after 14 holes.

"My timing was off when I first got out there, but the last three holes on the front nine were all right," Sutcliffe said. "The bye may have affected me. I played 14 or 15 holes Tuesday, but I didn't have my mind on golf."

Dickson completed her round early as well, finishing off Brant with three holes left to play in what she called an "exceptional round."

Included were a front nine 36 and "a few important birdie putts." But even with a round like that, if Dickson is to take her first city title, she will have to play over her head, by her own admission.

"I just hope I can play well enough to stay in it," Dickson said. "Sometimes you can play poorly and get down so much that you just fall apart."

IN OTHER flights, it will be Kay Lawson and Jere Smith in the first flight finals, Jane Koch and Shirley Rosignol in the consolation; Marge Bassett and Jean Elkin in the second flight, Dorothy Melzer and Marge Tope in consolation; Treve Gieb and Beverley Duncan for the third flight title; Sandra Wagner and Cheryl Kuzmich for fourth flight title; and Joyce Coleman and Jean Conner for the fifth flight title.

Midland Women's City Tournament

Championship Flight: Penny Sutcliffe 6-4 over Stacy Owens; Jo Dickson 4-3 over Helen Brant.

First Flight: Kay Lawson 1-up over Sylvia Roberts; Jere Smith 1-up over Becky Huff, 20 holes. Consolation: Jane Koch, bye; Shirley Rosignol 2-1 over Ella Heath.

Second Flight: Marge Bassett 1-up over Phyllis Maxwell; Jean Elkin 1-up over Edie Stahl, 22 holes. Consolation: Dorothy Melzer, bye; Marge Tope 2-up over Beverley Burleson.

Third Flight: Treve Gieb 1-up over Joyce Cramer; Beverly Duncan 5-3 over Kathy McNeese. Consolation - Judy Hunnicutt 5-4 over Charlene Rosebery.

Fourth Flight: Sandra Wagner 1-up over Marlene Kasch; Cheryl Kuzmich 4-3 over Toni McMillan. Consolation: Ginny Piette 4-3 over Evelyn Milby; Pebbie Corbell 4-2 over Nancy Cox.

Fifth Flight: Joyce Coleman 1-up over Deanie Arnn; Jean Conner 2-1 over Mamie Calloway. Consolation: Cleva Brown 7-6 over Bobi Lloyd; Janell Glasshof 4-3 over Julie Nerby.

TED BATTLES

Faith in justice shaken again

When someone wanted to know if the outcome of the USFL-NFL antitrust suit was a surprise, there was no hesitation. "You bet. I couldn't have been more shocked if Norman Mailer had written a book that revealed Marilyn Monroe was really a boy."

There's no doubt about it. The decision was a shocker and rocked many to the very foundations of laissez-faire. It was a blow to popular belief that this country was built on individual enterprise.

Outrageous is the only way to describe what happened.

A dollar! How could they? What did the USFL ever do to deserve a dollar except stand in the soup line with its hand out.

HOW COULD the USFL complain about an NFL monopoly when the league never fielded a marketable product. Who would pay to sponsor the USFL product if one of the major networks opted for hari-kari and gave the four-year old league equal time.

This is a league that couldn't make it without any competition. It played its games in the spring and nobody came.

It paid big salaries to lure super stars like Herschel Walker and Kelvin Bryant and after four years in exile, no one knows whether these guys can still play or not. The reputations built in college are gone with the wind.

IF THE USFL thinks it still has a product and wants to display it in the fall on TV, there's always Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Of course, Friday and Saturday TV might raise a few hackles among the high school and college groups. Weekday nights aren't Sunday afternoon, but then they aren't a Sunday in March, April or May.

Chances are there are some TV people who would like to see the USFL land a network contract. Ted Turner and the Chicago Tribune both figure it would be great for ratings...the ratings, that is, of WTBS and WGN.

ONE FAN may have given the USFL its niche in history, "I don't think it'll be any more part of history than the World Football League. The WFL is hardly ever remembered."

If a league is serious about making it, it can be done. The American Football Conference is a prime example, although the approach must be adjusted to the times. And, truly, the AFC was bucking a monopoly in 1960.

In those days there were just three networks. The NFL did business exclusively with only one. But this is a different era. There are the three major networks, all with contracts with the NFL. And then there are the WGNs and WTBSs and don't discount their impact.

The major networks can't compete in viewership with the Atlanta Braves and Chicago Cubs. In fact, the cable network dominance, even with these also-rans, was so complete that the majors had to sue for relief. "Please, guys, no televising your games we have a game-of-the-week going."

If the USFL were serious about making it, instead of trying to con a piece of the action through the courts, the cable networks are there, not to mention, eager-for-anything live ESPN. And if they had something worth watching....

No secrets in London

By MATTHEW NUGENT

LONDON (AP) — The Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears and the Dallas Cowboys openly spied on each other as they began serious preparations Wednesday for their exhibition game Sunday in the "American Bowl" at Wembley stadium.

Both NFL teams arrived within five minutes of each other at the National Sports Centre, south of the British capital, and the Bears were assigned a field hockey pitch at the back of the indoor complex while the Cowboys used the infield at the running track.

They were within 150 yards of each other, and the temptation to see what the other was doing during the two-hour workouts was too much to resist.

A Bears' coach wandered to the Cowboys area for a peek, and it wasn't too long before a Cowboys' aide strolled over to see what was happening on the field hockey pitch.

For the Bears, everything appears to be going well. "Everything is fine," said head Coach Mike Ditka. "I think the guys are enjoying it, I don't see too much of that jet-lag that everybody is talking about. I think they are doing OK."

"We've had two good practices — today was fine. We got a lot done, that's important, just to keep getting things done, to keep improving."

Ditka was philosophical about his team having to uproot their camp from Wisconsin and travel to London for a week.

"We're here now. We just have to make the adjustment now and that hasn't proved a problem. We are going to make the adjustment and I think we've done as good as you can expect at this point," said Ditka, who is on his first trip to England.

He said he has enjoyed what he has seen — and who he has met — so far. "I've enjoyed meeting the people. I didn't know what to expect. But the people have been very friendly,' said the Bears' coach.

"What I like too is the fact that they are very interested in football. They might not know a lot about it but they want to learn. That makes it exciting."

Louganis perfect on springboards

HOUSTON (AP) — Greg Louganis scored two perfect 10s and grabbed a big lead in the men's 3-meter springboard diving Wednesday night at the U.S. Olympic Festival, which already has set a record for ticket sales.

The 26-year-old world champion and winner of two gold medals at the 1984 Olympic Games trailed early in the competition before moving ahead of his rivals by executing dives with high degrees of difficulty.

Louganis, of Boca Raton, Fla., had 724.53 points after 11 preliminary dives. Mark Bradshaw of Springfield, Ore., was a distant second at 697.32. Kent Ferguson of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was third at 664.14.

"I was surprised that I scored that high," said Louganis, who has won 38 national titles. "I feel like I'm right on schedule. It was one of the top scores I've had in the preliminaries."

The scores in the preliminaries carry over to Thursday's finals, with the top two finishers earning spots on the United States team for next month's world championships.

U.S. Olympic Committee officials announced that the mark of 251,196 tickets sold actually was set Monday, but tabulation of figures is running about two days behind.

Revenues from ticket sales have reached $2 million, easily passing the $1.3 million high set in Indianapolis. Those figures do not include most of the revenue from Monday and Tuesday's events.

With gymnastics, track and field and the basketball championship round still to come, organizers are confident of reaching their break-even mark of 350,000 tickets sold.

Festival

At the pool at The Woodlands, Mitchell, of Scottsdale, Ariz., was mad at herself for a poor ninth dive, but still the Olympic silver medalist compiled 512.49 points in near 100-degree heat to 512.40 for Wendy Lucero of Aurora, Colo. Kelly McCormick of Long Beach, Calif., was third with 488.61 points.

The men's preliminaries, featuring Greg Louganis, the world's best diver, were held later Wednesday. All the points in the preliminaries are carried over into Thursday's finals, with the top two finishers earning spots on the United States team for next month's World Championships.

"I'm going to try to hit 10 of 10 dives tomorrow," Mitchell said of the finals. "But I just don't handle stupidity well and that's what I feel happened on my ninth dive. It infuriates me."

Mitchell said she "bolted" out of a reverse 2½-somersault tuck.

"I tried to make the dive happen instead of waiting for it to happen," Mitchell said.

But she fared much better than Wendy Wyland, the 1984 Olympics platform bronze medalist. Wyland of Boca Raton, Fla., did an incorrect dive on an inward 2½-somersault tuck and received no points. It knocked her down to seventh in the competition.

Red Sox' Roger Clemens loses pair; Rangers win

Associated Press

Boston's Roger Clemens says he tagged first base on a disputed play that resulted in his ejection as the winning run scored in the fifth inning Wednesday night as the Red Sox lost 7-2 to the Chicago White Sox.

"There's no question in my mind I got the bag," Clemens said.

"I honestly believe I had the play right," said first base umpire Greg Kosc, who said a replay to the contrary was not shown at the propert angle.

John Cangelosi scored from third base as Clemens, 17-3, took a throw from Bill Buckner, who had fielded Harold Baines' grounder. That capped a three-run fifth. In addition to Clemens, pitchers Bruce Hurst and Al Nipper were ejected for leaving the Boston dugout.

Don Baylor's hit his 19th homer for Boston. Tim Hulett hit his 10th for Chicago.

AMREICAN LEAGUE

Rangers 5, Orioles 3

Don Slaught's two-run homer with one out in the bottom of the 11th inning won it for Texas. Slaught, whose 11th homer set a new club record for home runs in one year by a catcher, came after Steve Buechele singled off Nate Snell, 2-1. Jeff Russell, 2-1, the fourth Ranger pitcher, picked up the victory. Pete Incaviglia hit a three-run homer, his 17th, for the Rangers.

Brewers 5, Yankees 0

Milwuakee completed a sweep of the three-game series as Ted Higuera, 13-7, pitched a six-hitter and Jim Gantner hit a homer and scored twice. The left-handed Higuera struck out six in completing his ninth game to tie for the AL lead as the Brewers won their fourth straight. Rookie Doug Drabek, 2-4, took the loss, New York's fifth in a row.

Angels 6, A's 2

A pinch-hit double by Doug DeCinces scored Reggie Jackson from first base in the eighth inning to break a 2-2 tie. John Candelaria, 4-1, pitched five-hit ball for seven innings, striking out five and walking none. Donnie Moore got his 12th save.

Tigers 11, Indians 3

Detroit backed rookie Eric King, 8-2, who allowed six hits over 7 1-3 innings with 13 hits to to win for the 11th time in 14 games since the All-Star break. Dwight Lowry hit a three-run homer for the Tigers, and John Grubb had three RBI. The Indians, who got all their runs on two homers by Tony Bernazard, have lost six of seven.

Blue Jays 7, Royals 2

Homers by Ernie Whitt and Jesse Barfield, whose total of 26 leads the majors, spiced a five-run fifth inning night to help pitcher Joe Johnson to his first AL victory. George Bell also homered as Toronto completed a sweep of the three-game series. Jim Sundberg hit a pinch homer for Kansas City.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Cardinals 6, Phillies 3

Curt Ford and Terry Pendleton each singled home a run to break a 2-2 tie in the fifth inning, and Todd Worrell earned his 21st save by working out of a boases-loaded, one-out situation in the seventh. Bob Forsch, 10-6, won his fourth straight decision. Charles Hudson, 6-10, took the loss.

Astros 4, Braves 2

Rookie left-hander Jim Deshaies checked Atlanta on four hits in 8 2-3 innings and Glenn Davis hit a solo homer for Houston. Deshaies, 6-3, struck out nine and walked only one before needing last-out relief help from Dave Smith, who recorded his 19th save. Ken Griffey's fifth homer accounted for the Braves' runs in the ninth.

Padres 9, Reds 3

Graig Nettles had two homers, his first in nearly six weeks, and drove in five runs as San Diego ripped Cincinnati. Ed Whitson, 1-2, got his first win since returning to the National League July 9. Nettles had a three-run homer in the third inning off loser John Denny and added a two-run shot in the eighth. He now has 382 for his career, tying him with Frank Howard for 24th on the all-time list.

Cubs 4, Mets 3

Ron Cey's three-run double in the first inning and Gary Matthews' solo homer in the third led Chicago over New York in a game delayed nearly two hours by rain. Cey's first-inning double came after loser Sid Fernandez had walked the bases full. Fernandez struck out 11 in his five-inning stint.

Tors' Mason named MVP

HOUSTON (AP) — Mike Howse of Corpus Christi Miller hit a layup with 42 seconds to play and Michael Hobbs of Clear Lake hit two free throws in the final 14 seconds to lead the South to a 74-71 victory over the North in the Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star basketball game Wednesday night.

Hobbs, a last-minute replacement, gave the South a 73-71 lead with his first free throw with 14 seconds left in the game and padded the lead with another free throw with six seconds to play.

The victory extended the South's lead to 22-20 in the annual series.

Jerry Mason of Lamesa, who scored 17 points, was named the most valuable player for the North squad and Calvin Tillis of Grapeland earned the honor for the South.

The South blew a 10-point third quarter lead, but regained the lead for good with 1:21 to play on a basket by Roderick Brown of Alief Hastings.

Prep Basketball

The South took a 36-29 halftime lead and built a 10-point margin at 54-44 with 2:50 to go in the third quarter. But the North rallied to take the lead at 60-59 with 7:33 left in the game on a basket by Mason.

The South rallied from a 62-59 deficit with 7:14 to play and regained the lead on a basket by Robert Barley of Brookshire Royal and five straight free throws.

The North scored nine straight points in the first quarter for a 13-7 lead and was ahead 17-13 at the end of the opening period.

But in the second quarter, the South surged ahead. Brown slammed home the first basket of the period after taking a behind-the-back pass from Howze, and Barley gave the South an 18-17 lead, as the Rebels scored 11 straight points while holding the North scoreless until the 5:31 mark.

The South led by as much as eight points in the second quarter.

The North played the game without Roderick Hampson of Dallas Kimball and Billy Ray Smith of South Garland, who were dismissed from the team for disciplinary reasons.

"I think we will play great," Criswell said. "This is the greatest team I've ever been associated with and after seeing the spark in their eyes this morning, I'm excited just to see what they will do."

Criswell, whose Denison teams run an I-fortmation attack, expects a blend of passing and running for the North.

Republican gubernatorial nominee Bill Clements addressed an open session of the coaches and received standing ovations for his comments on the state's no pass, no play statute.

The coaches voted Wednesday night to support Clements in his bid to unseat Democratic Gov. Mark White.

White has taken a strong stand in favor of the law, which bars a student from extra-curricular activities for six weeks if the student is failing a course at the end of a six-week grading period.

North basketball Coach George Byerly dismissed two of his players, Roderick Hampson of Dallas Kimball and Billy Ray Smith of South Garland.

Tynes captures Bassmasters

From Staff Reports

Mike Tynes won the Midland Bassmasters tournament at Elm Creek July 19-20 by reeling in 18 pounds, three ounces, good for 291 points.

Steve Moreland was second with 11-15 for 191 points while Dow Scott had 8-15 for 143.

Richard Mears took the first day's Big Bass with a 6-7 and Tynes' 6-9 was the Big Bass catch of the second day. It was reportedly the biggest bass ever for both.

For the season, Moreland's 40.1 pounds and 641 points tops the club while Scott is second with 38.3—611; Bob Knox third with 34.10—554; Jack Daniels, fourth, with 34.1—545; Claude Bass, fifth, 33.4—532; Mike Tynes, sixth, 33.0-528; Ronny Meador, seventh, 15.2—242; Mike Smith, eighth, 13.12, 220; Bob Apple, ninth, 13.3—211; and Tubby Towery, 10th, 10.8—168.

The next Bassmasters meeting is 7:30 p.m. Aug. 7 and the next tournament is Aug. 23-24 at Brownwood. Headquarters will be the Dow Hilton.

Pats ready to pounce

Associated Press

If the USFL folds, the New England Patriots are ready to sign three players from the league.

Dick Steinberg, Patriots' player development director, would like to add wide receiver Ricky Sanders, quarterback Walter Lewis and tight end Mark Keel, whose rights the Patriots own, to their training camp roster.

But he's waiting to see the repercussions of Tuesday's jury decision awarding the USFL $1 in its $1.69 billion suit against the NFL, a ruling that could doom the younger league.

Meanwhile, New England still hasn't signed its top two draft choices — first-round pick Reggie Dupard, a running back from Southern Methodist, and second-round choice Mike Ruth, a nose tackle from Boston College.

Giants

New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells is on the verge of telling running back Joe Morris that he must participate in the team's contact drills.

Morris, who missed the first two days of training camp because of a contract dispute, has refused to participate in contact drills until the contract issue is settled.

Morris is seeking a multiyear deal worth $500,000 annually with a big signing bonus.

Steelers

Veteran linebacker Dennis "Dirt" Winston (hemorrhoid surgery) and offensive tackle Pete Rostosky (broken finger) will be sidelined from the Pittsburgh camp indefinitely.

Lions

Stanley Floyd, who beat 1982 Kentucky Derby winner Gato del Sol in a television episode of "That's Incredible," is trying to earn a wide receiver berth with Detroit as a free agent.

Saints

Bobby Craighead was dropped by San Diego last year. "I got cut," he said. "I got hurt and missed some work and got caught up in the numbers game," the free agent fullback also is facing a numbers game with New Orleans, but he said, "I just hope I get a good chance, a fair shot, and let whatever happens."

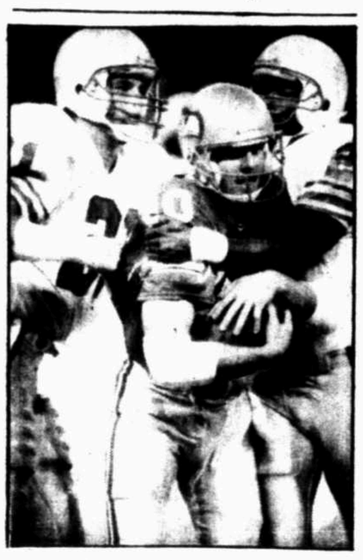
Jets

The New York Jets got down to 93 players with running back Tony Mazzu of North Dakota and defensive tackle Brian Donahue leaving camp. Both were free agents.

Colts

Kevin Call, 6-7, 295-pound, Indianapolis offensive lineman called the Creature, no longer is the butt of jokes. "He should be ready to make a move this year," said assistant coach Tom Lovat because of his increased strength and flexibility.

NFL Camps



AP Laserphoto

Seattle Seahawk receiver Steve Largent is double teamed by Houston's Bo Eason and Richard Johnson in Wednesday scrimmage at Seattle.

Chiefs

Offensive tackle Brian Jozwiak, the unsigned No. 1 draft choice of the Kansas City Chiefs, is prepared to consider other alternatives than pro football this season, his agent says.

Eagles

Former Big East track star Martin Booker has cleared many hurdles in his day, but the toughest one may be convincing Eagles Coach Buddy Ryan he can catch a foootball. Booker, who has not played contact football since high school, is trying out for one of the Eagles' five wideout slots at their West Chester training camp.

Booker is a 9.3 sprinter and won the Big East Championship in the hurdles with Villanova, but speed alone won't raise Ryan's eyebrows.

Dolphins

Miami offensive lineman Ronnie Lee suffered a shoulder injury Wednesday in the team's first workout during its four-day trip to the Atlanta Falcons' training camp.

Oilers-Seahawks

Rookie quarterback Sean Salisbury passed for the Seattle Seahawks' only two touchdowns against the Houston Oilers Wednesday in an NFL scrimmage that was dominanted by defense.

The Oilers got their only touchdown on a 1-yard run by second-year running back Mike Rozier before 8,428 fans in Seattle's Kingdome.

The 6-foot-5, 215-pound Salisbury, a rookie free agent from the University of Southern California, completed four of five passes for 145 passes, including a 65-yard scoring pass to rookie wiide receiver Earl Winfield and a 27-yard TD aerial to four-year veteran wide receiver Byron Franklin.

Packers

Green Bay has rejected contract counter-offers made on behalf of two unsigned veterans, center Mark Cannon and wide receiver Phillip Epps.

Colts

Indianapolis Coach Rod Dowhower hinted Wednesday that he's looking for a replacement for the team's starting placekicker, Raul Allegre. Dowhower said Allegre is officially the starter, but with placekickers Dean Biasucci and Chris White also in camp the job is not locked up.

Chargers

Veterans Chris Faulkner and Fred Robinson are part of a training camp experiment designed to bolster San Diego's defense, the weakest in the NFL last season.

Faulkner played tight end and offensive guard for San Diego last year while Robinson played defensive end, picking up seven quarterback sacks in 16 games.

This year, Faulkner is being tried out at defensive end while Robinson moves off the defensive line to linebacker. The two third-year players were reserves in their old positions but could be in the running for starting slots, depending on how they adapt to the conversions.

Rams

Veteran safety Johnnie Johnson underwent arthroscopic knee surgery Wednesday, but is expected to miss only two to three weeks of practice.

Browns

Uwe von Schamann has hopes that he can kick aside his past disappointments and with renewed confidence kick his way onto the Cleveland roster.

To do so, he will have to displace veteran kicker Matt Bahr, who made 14 of 18 field goal tries and all 35 extra point efforts for the Browns last season.

Dollar skids

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell in early European trading today and hit a new post-World War II record low in Tokyo following Secretary of State George Shultz's comments that the dollar was still overvauled.

Reports that the U.S. trade deficit in June expanded to $14.17 billion from $13.12 billion in May also contributed to the dollar's downswing, dealers said.

But it was Shultz's speech late Wednesday to the President's Export Council saying the Reagan administration expected further declines in the dollar that was mainly responsible for the dollar's fall, dealers said.

The dollar sank to 154.15 yen, a fall of 2.05 yen from Wednesday's close of 156.20 yen and 1.15 yen lower than the previous post World War II record-low closing of 155.30 yen on July 22. In London, the dollar was even lower at midmorning at 153.95 yen.

In London, the dollar fell slightly against the British pound. It cost $1.4920 to buy one pound, more expensive than $1.4915 late Wednesday.

Other midmorning dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Wednesday:

—2.1000 West German marks, down from 2.1140

—1.6835 Swiss francs, down from 1.6970

—6.8160 French francs, down from 6.8525

—2.3670 Dutch guilders, down from 2.3810

—1,443.50 Italian lire, down from 1,450.25

—1.3807 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3845

Bullion dealers said gold prices took off in active trading, sparked by Shultz's comments.

In London, gold opened at $353.25 a troy ounce, but as a result of heavy buying, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $357.75 just three hours later. Both were up from Wednesday's closing bid of $352.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, gold was selling at a bid price of $357 at noon, up from $351.50 late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of $2.21 an ounce to close at a bid $352.86.

Silver bullion prices also rose on the London market where the metal was selling at a bid price of $5.06 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $4.99

Over 6,000 attended the first day of the latest FDIC auction, above. Auctioneer Mark C. Thomas, right, took bids on a number of automobiles obtained from failed banks in the area.

FDIC auction earns $1 million

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Auctioneer Mark C. Thomas, whose firm is handling Wednesday and Thursday's auction for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., reported that the auction's first day brought in over $1 million.

"We're real pleased, and we feel things brought reasonable prices," he said. "We'd intended to go over $1 million yesterday, and we did, so we're right on schedule."

He said the auction brought over 6,000 people Wednesday, many of whom were attending their first auction. "A lot of folks were attending their first auction, and they got some bargains."

The first day of the auction saw a large number of cars, six airplanes, forklifts, cranes, well servicing equipment, trailers and mud logging trailers put on the block, all obtained from area banks that had failed.

Thomas said he expects a smaller crowd for today's auction. "Today we're selling office equipment and shop equipment. We'll probably sell a couple of hundred thousand dollars worth," he said.

Wednesday's session at the warehouse was the second of three auction days. On Tuesday night, about 1,000 people bid on art objects ranging from Indian blankets to a Ming vase.

The FDIC, which has taken over First National Bank of Midland, Metro Bank of Midland, National Bank of Odessa, Peoples' National Bank of Lampasas, Moncor Banks of Hobbs and Roswell, First National Bank of Ruidoso, and Eddy County Bank of Carlsbad, set up the auction to recoup losses the agency has incurred by taking over the institutions.

The area has been hard-hit by the world-wide slide in oil prices, which have dropped from about $26 per barrel in January to less than $11.

"This won't be the last of the FDIC auctions in West Texas," Thomas said. "With oil prices as unstable as they are, you can talk to the independent oil men in Midland, and they're anticipating a lot of future problems."

Thomas said the next FDIC auction to be handled by his firm, Mark Thomas & Associates, would be in Minnesota in September, "where farmers there are having their own problems."

"Our business is always good, but it's great during the bad times," Thomas said. "We are making more money than we could ever get with $20 per barrel oil."

Appeals start in Texaco, Pennzoil case

HOUSTON (AP) — For every minute Texaco Inc. and Pennzoil Co. argue over an unprecedented $10.53 billion judgment, Texaco is assessed more than $2,000 in interest to Pennzoil.

A Houston jury in November found Texaco wrongfully interferred in the planned Pennzoil-Getty merger in 1984 and ordered the third largest oil company to pay the $10.53 billion.

Attorneys for the two oil companies were scheduled to argue before a three-judge 1st Court of Appeals panel today in the continuing battle between the two oil rivals.

The landmark case kindled so much interest from stockbrokers, reporters, law students and others that today's hearing has outgrown the courtroom.

The hearing was slated for a 750-seat auditorium at the South Texas College of Law, adjacent to the appeals court building in downtown Houston.

The three judges are likely to take the case under advisement and issue no immediate opinion.

According to court procedures, Texaco had 60 minutes to present its case. Pennzoil was given 90 minutes. Texaco then had 30 minutes to close.

The panel's ruling could result in affirming the judgment, ordering a new trial or sending disputed points back to the lower court for rehearing. If the judgment is affirmed, Texaco could appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Pennzoil's lead attorney, Joe Jamail of Houston, would not reveal his game plan but said six Pennzoil attorneys would argue before Justices James F. Warren, Jack Smith and Sam Bass.

Texaco attorneys refused to return numerous telephone calls from The Associated Press on Wednesday. Texaco spokesmen declined to comment about the case.

"We don't have any kind of comment at this point," spokesman Chris Kiersted said. "We didn't anticipate any comment before the hearing."

After the jury ordered Texaco to pay Pennzoil, state District Judge Solomon Casseb Jr. upheld the damage award — the largest in U.S. history — and added another $600 million in interest. Casseb stepped in as presiding judge after Judge Anthony Farris became ill.

New home sales fall 9.9 percent

But sales are still ahead of 1985

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of new homes fell 9.9 percent in June, the third consecutive monthly decline, but sales for the first half of the year were well ahead of the 1985 pace, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that single-family homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 703,000 units last month following declines of 11.8 percent in May and 4.3 percent in April.

Even with the string of declines, sales of new homes for the first six months of the year were running 18 percent ahead of the pace in 1985 as housing has been one of the few bright spots in the economy.

Helped out by falling mortgage rates, sales of both new and existing homes have shot up dramatically. Fixed-rate mortgages dropped below 10 percent for the first time this decade in April, but began creeping back up in May and early June.

However, in the past six weeks rates have been declining again, dropping to a national average of 10.4 percent last week, according to a survey done by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

Analysts have predicted that the recent mortgage rate declines will spur further increases in sales in the months ahead.

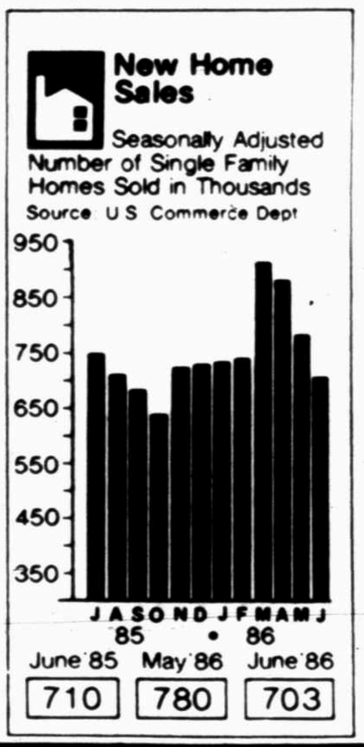
The weaker sales pushed prices down in June. The median price of a new home fell 3.3 percent to $89,600. The median price, which means half the homes sold for more and half for less, had been $92,700 in May. The average sales price declined by 4.2 percent to $111,100.

The June sales rate of 703,000 units was the slowest pace since last October. Sales soared as high as an annual rate of 924,000 units in March before beginng to fall back.

The weakness hit all regions of the country last month except the West, where sales rose by 9.4 percent to an annual rate of 210,000 units.

The sharpest decline came in the Midwest, a 37.9 percent drop which put sales at an annual rate of 64,000 units.

Sales in the Northeast, the hottest home-buying region of the country this year, fell by 35.6 percent to an annual rate of 96,000 units.



Tipperary's stock will continue to be quoted

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Tipperary Corp. announced that its common stock will continue quoted by the National Association of Security Dealers Automated Quotation System (NASDAQ) under an exemption from the minimum capital and surplus requirement.

Because of the Secutiry & Exchange Commission mandated write-down of oil and gas properties Tipperary failed to meet the system's minimum requirement of total capital stock, paid-in capital and retained earnings as of March 31.

The temporary expception was granted by NASDAQ subject to Tipperary's previously announced restructuring agreement.

"NASDAQ granted the exception because they believe that the restructuring will allow our company to regain compliance with the minimum requirements," said Tipperary president James Ross.

If at some future date Tipperary securities should cease to be quoted on NASDAQ's National Market Issues system, they should continue to be quoted in the over-the-counter market, Ross noted.

The company is required to file a report with NASDAQ on Sept. 30 on the status of the restructuring plan.

Tipperary also announced a change in the structure of its board of directors. Gerard J. Gambs, John J. McKetta, Jr. and Rush Moody, Jr. have resigned from its Board of Directors but have agreed to serve as advisory, non-voting directors effective July 29, 1986. The Board of Directors now consists of Deane H. Stoltz, chairman and James D. Ross, president.

Stoltz stated that the resignation of Gambs, McKetta and Moody were the result of Tipperary's inability to secure Directors and Officers liability insurance coverage on acceptable terms. Stoltz also announced the resignation of Turner V. Harness as Vice President, Finance and a Director.

Can a moral victory be used to meet payroll?

With increasing frequency, business decisions made in the boardroom are taking a back seat to those made in the courtroom and other halls of government.

In the multi-million dollar business of professional sports, the decision made this week by six Manhattan jurors in the NFL-USFL antitrust lawsuit will ultimately have a much greater impact on shaping the future of pro football than any consensus of opinion between 28 NFL or eight USFL franchise owners.

Despite convincing jurors that the NFL monopolized professional football, the struggling 4-year-old USFL was unable to persuade jurors that substantial damage was done by virtue of that monopolistic position. Therefore, the league will receive only $3 — triple the $1.00 jury damage award.

The case focused on the relationship among the leagues and the national television networks. The USFL maintained the NFL's contracts with the three major networks were intended to exclude and did exclude a competing league in the fall.

The USFL also claimed the NFL exercised its monopoly power by exerting pressure on the networks.

In addition to asking the jury for monetary damages, which the USFL estimated to be between $301 million and $565 million over a 10-year period, the league's suit asked the judge to give it other legal relief, including ordering the NFL to give up one or more of its network contracts.

Jerry Sklar, owner of the USFL Birmingham Stallions, was perplexed by the verdict.

"We proved our case in court, but failed to win any damages," he said. "I find that hard to understand. At this point we'll have to go with that.

"I was excited when I heard the first part of the decision by the jury when they found in favor of the USFL."

As vital as proving their point, was the hoped-for windfall of major monetary gain which could have been used to keep the floundering league afloat through its first head-to-head competition with the NFL this fall.

With astronomical player salaries, sluggish season ticket sales and no network television contract revenues — the prognosis for the USFL is bleak, at best. Proving your point doesn't cover overhead expenses.

THE JUDGE AND JURY in the NFL case refused to get involved in a fundamentally private business agreement between the three major networks and league management. Whether the U.S. House of Representatives follows suit by staying out of regulating all forms of tobacco advertising remains to be seen.

Last year, the nation's cigarette manufacturers spent $829 million advertising to keep their brands in the hands and on the lips of American smokers. If some Washington lawmakers and lobbyists get their way, that amount will be zero next year.

Hearings on a proposed advertising ban are being held by the House subcommittee on health and the environment. The bill would forbid all advertising and sales promotions for cigarettes and other tobacco products.

The total cost of promotions, including free samples and sponsorship of sports events — such as the Virginia Slims tennis tournaments, Winston Cup auto racing and Marlboro Cup horse racing — is estimated at well over $1 billion.

The brunt of lost revenues from banned advertising would fall on the tobacco companies' advertising agencies and the media that attract the bulk of tobacco advertising — magazines, newspapers and outdoor billboards.

Yet the opposition bases its arguments not on potential revenue losses, but on constitutional grounds. "Products that can be legally sold in our society are entitled to be advertised," says an American Newspaper Publishers Association position paper. "This commercial speech is constitutionally protected."

The anti-ban position is supported by — among other groups — the Magazine Publishers Association, the American Association of Advertising Agencies (4As) and the Association of National Advertisers.

Proponents of the ban argue that last month's U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding the right to restrict casino advertising in Puerto Rico allows a government to restrict truthful advertising of a legal product if the product is considered harmful.

For newspapers, the loss of cigarette revenue "would be serious" but far from fatal, said Leo Bogart, executive vice president of the Newspaper Advertising Bureau. Although he labeled cigarette advertising "significant," the $204 million realized in 1985 amounted to less than 1 percent of the total newspaper advertising revenues of $25.3 billion.

Opponents of a ban fear that any such legislation could establish what 4As president Leonard Matthews calls "a dangerous precedent."

Carried to its logical extension, he says, "Congress could ban butter because of its high cholesterol content, or automobile advertising because 50,000 Americans are killed in accidents every year."

"It's not inconceivable that health addicts will say fast foods should not be advertised," says Joe Lorfano, a spokesman for the American Newspaper Publishers Association. "We get a little annoyed with do-gooders trying to be national nannies."

There's a lot to be said for individual initiative, without running behind the skirts of judges and lawmakers, whether you're a USFL commissioner or a health-conscious 'do-gooder.'

Tempo Energy tests 227 barrel field well

The San Simon field of Lea County, N.M. gained a strong Yates producer as TEMPO ENERGY, INC. completed the No. 4 San Simon State in the field.

On potential test, the well flowed 227 barrels of crude and 37 barrels of water on an open choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 100 psi. Production is from perforations 3,861 to 4,055 ft. No treatment was reported.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 4,231 ft. and plugged back to 4,078 ft. Pay was topped at 3,861 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from south and 1,650 ft. from west lines of Section 4, T22s, R35e.

Eddy reentry yields 52 barrel discovery

A plugback project in Eddy County, N.M. has yielded a Wolfcamp discovery for HNG OIL CO.

HNG reentered and plugged back the No. 1 Fate "34", an Atoka producer in the Culebra Bluff South field, potentialing the well to flow 52 barrels of crude, 1.4 Mmcfd and no water on an 8/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,750 psi. The Wolfcamp zone was perforated from 10,606 to 10,655 ft.

Originally drilled to 12,355 ft., the well was plugged back to 11,125 ft. A 5 1/2 inch liner was hung from 9,375 to 12,150 ft.

Formation tops, on elevation of 3,057.9 ft., include the Delaware at 2,620, Base Salt at 6,290, Wolfcamp at 9,750, Strawn at 11,338, and the Atoka at 11,570 ft.

Location is 910 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 34, T23s, R28e.

Pogo loses $4.5 million during second quarter

HOUSTON (SWN) — Pogo Producing Co. reported a second quarter loss of $4,592,000 on revenues of $35,404,000. Last year for the same period, Pogo's net income was $4,027,000 on revenues of $59,508,000.

After the payment of preferred dividends, Pogo's second quarter loss applicable to common stock was $6,513,000 or $0.36 per share, compared to commmon stock earnings of $1,271,000 or $0.07 per share for the three months ending June 30, 1985.

Continued depressed crude oil prices coupled with lower prices for contracted natural gas production and increased curtailment of natural gas sales, contributed to the negative results for the quarter, said William E. Gipson, president of the Houston-based company. Gipson pointed out it was necessary for Pogo to take a pre-tax write down at the end of the quarter in the amount of $4,450,000 in the cost of its domestic oil and gas properties.

"Despite Pogo's natural gas producing capability remaining approximately the same as it was at the beginning of 1986, the severe cutbacks in sales of our natural gas by Pogo's principal pipeline purchasers, not only reduced gas sales markedly during the quarter," Gipson pointed out, "but also liquids production. We naturally recover less liquids associated with natural gas production when gas sales are reduced as they are currently".

Natural gas sales were off approximately 21 percent to 100,890 Mcf/day from 127,203 Mcf/day a year ago, he said.

The company's board of directors declared a third quarter cash dividend of $.05 per share of common stock issued and outstanding, payable on Sept. 10, to shareholders of record at the close of business on Aug. 15.

In addition, the board declared a quarterly dividend of $2.50 per share on Pogo's cumulative convertible preferred stock payable on Sept. 30, with a record date of Sept. 16.

Entex chairman, CEO adds title of president

HOUSTON (SWN) — Entex, Inc. announced that Wayne D. Johnson had resigned as president and director of the company effective July 31. Johnson, who has been president of the company since 1978, stated that he had resigned "in order to pursue other interests."

Jackson C. Hinds, Jr., chairman of the board and CEO, will assume the additional title of president.

Devon slashes cash distribution rate by half

OKLAHOMA CITY (SWN) — Devon Resource Investors announced that it will make a quarterly distribution of $0.15 per unit on Aug. 29 to unitholders of record as of Aug. 16. This represents a 50 percent reduction from the previous quarterly distribution rate.

"The reduction in distribution rate is the result of the decline in oil prices brought about by OPEC's recent actions and of lower gas production and prices due to the currently lower market demand," said J. Larry Nichols, president and CEO of Devon Energy Corp., Devon Resource Investors' general partner.

"Maintaining the previous distribution rate would have represented self-liquidation to a point which would have been inconsistent with our stated long-term growth objectives." Preserving a strong working capital position and relatively low debt is critical to long-term success.

Simultaneous to the announcement, Devon Energy Corp. announced its intention to purchase between 50,000 and 100,000 Devon Resource Investors units, adding to the 1,679,000 (28 percent of outstanding) units Devon Energy already owns. This new investment will be consumated through open market transactions to be conducted over the next three to six months.

Camco Inc. income slides in first six months

HOUSTON (SWN) — Gilbert H. Tausch, president and CEO of Camco, Inc. announced operating results for the quarter and six months ended June 30.

Camco reported second quarter net sales of $41.3 million and net income of $2.1 million, or $.28 per share. This compares to net sales of $43.0 million and net income of $3.9 million, or $.53 per share, for the same period last year.

For the first six months, net sales were $81.5 million compared to $85.1 million a year ago. Net income for the first half of 1986 was $3.1 million, or $.43 per share, compared to $6.7 million, or $.92 per share, for the same period last year. The 1985 period included a one-time, $.10 per share gain from the sale of a subsidiary.

Cooper registers slight income improvement

HOUSTON (UPI) — Cooper Industries Inc. reported net income of $36.7 million ($.75 a share) for the second quarter of 1986, up 4 percent from income of $35.3 million ($.74 a share) for the same period of 1985.

Revenues for the quarter were $901 million, compared with $773 million for the same period last year.

Net income for the six months ended June 30 increased to $62.5 million, or $1.29 a share, from $52.9 million, or $1.06 a share, for the first half of 1985. Revenues rose to $1.8 billion from $1.3 billion during the same period last year.

The market for oil and natural gas drilling and production equipment, parts and services continues to decline, said Cooper chairman Robert Cizik. Cost reduction and containment measures taken during the first half contributed to a near break-even performance by the compression and drilling products segment in the second quarter, he said.

But the compression and drilling segment is expected to remain depressed until the drilling industry recovers.

ATTENTION GEOLOGISTS

Cambe Geological Services is pleased to announce the beginning of a new membership in its Midland Data Library. On August 1 you will be able to join Cambe's library in Midland for only $75.00 per month. For this small monthly fee you get complete access to Cambe's complete data base. You pull your own scout tickets, production figures (Dwight's), paleo records, etc., copy them and give a list of the logs you need (30 day limit) to our log department. We pull the logs, run the copy if necessary and check them out to you for 30 days. You must pick up all the data at our office. If you need to buy logs you get the special membership price of $6.00 per log.

In these difficult times Cambe is making it cheaper to operate. Our $6.00 logs and $75.00 membership dues are the lowest prices available anywhere. Since 1933 Cambe has provided the industry quality data at a reasonable cost. Call Marianne Lamkin or Rita Cone at 687-1053.

Texas oil bank woes still piling up

Bad energy, real estate loans rip local economies

By SCOTT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — Instead of lollipops and toasters, First City Bancorp. of Texas decided it had to offer some unusual gifts to entice wealthy depositors, gifts like Arabian colts, Porsche automobiles and single-engine Cessna aircraft.

Bankers don't normally offer such toys of the rich, but then these are not normal times for oil patch bankers, who have seen losses mount as the oil and real estate depression ripples through the local economies and rocks the foundations of financial institutions.

Already a slew of small banks have failed, including five Louisiana thrifts that were closed in a single Friday. On July 14, First National Bank & Trust of Oklahoma City, one of that state's oldest and largest financial institutions, was closed — the second largest U.S. bank failure ever.

Some other big ones are clearly struggling under pressure from regulators and creditors.

First City, one of Texas' largest bank holding companies, lost $232.4 million in the first quarter this year because it set aside $275 million to cover potential loan losses. The $232.4 million shortfall was nearly double the amount First City earned in 1984 and 1985.

And while bank officials say the cash — about $280 million — raised by last fall's elaborate gift offering wasn't vital, it did help.

"It was a very nice addition to the deposit base," said First City spokesman John Jamison, adding, "It was clearly not a desperation move." To receive a horse, Porsche or plane, a depositor had to put $1 million in First City.

OF THE 10 LARGEST banks in Texas and Oklahoma, six posted losses in the first quarter and four saw their earnings drop between 30 percent and 86 percent. And results for the second quarter, which ended June 30, have been just as bleak.

InterFirst Corp. of Dallas, the state's third-largest, suffered a giant $281.1 million loss in the second quarter because of fears that a big chunk of energy and real estate loans won't ever be repaid.

Besides InterFirst's loss in the second quarter, five of the top seven Texas banking firms reported that their earnings plummeted, between 40 percent and 94 percent, over the same period of 1985.

First City reported a 3 percent earnings gain in the second quarter, but analysts questioned how it was accomplished. The company charged off $126.6 million in bad loans, but million loss for the first three months of the year, and a 40 percent drop in second-quarter results. BancOklahoma Corp. of Tulsa, Oklahoma's second-largest banking firm, lost $44.1 million in the first quarter and $50.3 million in the second. Texas American Bank of Fort Worth has lost more than $21 million for the first six months this year. And Banks of MidAmerica, Oklahoma's largest bank company, lost $34.8 million in six months.

At Texas Commerce Bank in Houston, first-quarter profits of $20.6 million were 30 percent lower than last year, and second-quarter profits of $10.5 million were 66 percent lower.

The same was true at other well-established holding companies. RepublicBank Corp. in Dallas, Texas' largest banking firm, saw first-quarter earnings fall 34 percent, second quarter 84 percent. Houston-based Allied Bancshares' earnings were off nearly 54 percent for the first quarter, 64 percent for the second.

The banks' problems not only stem from loans made to energy businesses, but also to real estate projects, retail operations and scores of other businesses.

"It's a sad fact of economic life in Oklahoma and Texas that when the oil business is not making any money, no one else is making any money," said Coy Hobbs, spokesman for BancOklahoma.

"There's not a lender in Texas that hasn't been affected by low energy prices," said Frank Anderson, a banking analyst at Weber Hall Sale & Associates in Dallas.

BANCTEXAS GROUP INC. of Dallas, a smaller holding company and one of Texas' most troubled, announced a merger June 25 contingent on an unusual arrangement of "substantial financial assistance" from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the sale of its four troubled Houston banks.

Stock analysts called the proposed deal with a Dallas banker-lawyer a Chrysler-type bailout where the FDIC will be asked to assume an undisclosed amount of bad loans — a step the agency normally takes after a bank fails.

BancTexas has been under pressure from creditors to raise $26.3 million to pay off its borrowings. Last year, BancTexas lost $35 million and laid off 14 percent of its employees. At one point, the holding company's capital ratio dropped below Federal Reserve Board guidelines. To raise capital, two of its banks were sold.

The failure of First National in Oklahoma City produced an unusual rescue plan.

Regulators tried to keep First National afloat for several months, twice extending a deadline to raise new capital before closing the bank and selling it to Los Angeles-based First Interstate Corp. As part of the deal, the FDIC made some unprecedented concessions to First Interstate, analysts said.

One of the banks watching the Oklahoma deal closely is First City in Houston, which was one of First National's main creditors.

AS THE ECONOMIC chills spread through the Southwest economy, observers expect more losses this year.

Ms. Flannigan said she believes banks will need to make even greater provisions for oil and real estate losses.

"Historically Texas bankers were an optimistic group. I don't think you can say they're an optimistic group anymore," she said.

Anderson agrees.

"It's going to get a little rougher before it gets better," he said. "But I think there'll be a brighter day ahead."

THAT HAS RESULTED in the river of red ink.

MCorp of Dallas posted a $119.9

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Hughes closing leaves 500 Houstonians jobless

HOUSTON (AP) — Hughes Tool Co. will close a drilling equipment facility in Houston by Sept. 30 leaving about 500 employees jobless, company officials announced Wednesday.

Spokesman Don King said the depressed oil drilling industry is the main force behind the unit's closing.

"It's a casuality and a direct result of the decline of oil drilling," King said.

The facility near Houston's Intercontinental Airport will immediately begin phasing out its duties to other facilites.

Hughes Drilling Equipment Facility manufactures rig and drilling tools as well as drilling rigs.

ALCOA to bring Texas plant back on line

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Aluminum Co. of America will restart production lines at plants in Rockdale, Texas, and Wenatchee, Wash., in mid August, the company announced Wednesday.

ALCOA said the restart at Rockdale will bring to five the number of lines operating at the plant out of a total of eight. About 90 employees will return to work to operate the line.

The Wenatchee plant will return to full five-line production, and the workforce will total 675 hourly employees, the company said.

The restarts will enable the company "to balance metal supplies against current demand levels," ALCOA said.

J.C. Penney extending financial services line

NEW YORK (UPI) — J.C. Penney announced Wednesday that a wide-range of Security Pacific loan and investment products will be made available to customers in financial centers at 17 of its stores in San Francisco, Sacramento and San Jose.

These products, the store said, will be added to J.C. Penney auto, homeowners, life and other insurance products currently available at the centers.

Unsecured personal loans, lines of credit, home equity loans and automobile loans will be provided by subsidiaries of Security Pacific, the seventh largest bank holding company in the United States.

Penney also said it will make available investment products and services, including various types of mutual funds, unit investment trusts and self directed IRA plans.

The move was seen as a natural outgrowth since Sears Roebuck, Penney's chief competitor, already has established financial centers offering similar services.

Compulsory bids on federal leases approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to require competitive bidding for oil and gas leases on federal land was approved Wednesday by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committeee.

The measure by Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., would overhaul a system in which as many as 97 percent of the leases were being offered noncompetitively by the Bureau of Land Management. It was cleared for floor action on a 15-1 vote.

Under the plan, all leases would have to be first offered under a competitive bidding system. If no bids were received or if the bids came in under $20 per acre a year, the BLM could sell the leases through a lottery or directly to an individual or energy company.

Texan pumps funds in to Nautilus purchase

LAKE HELEN, Fla. (UPI) — Body building equipment inventor Arthur Jones will have completed the sale of Nautilus Sports/Medical Industries Inc. to Dallas millionaire Travis Ward within 10 days, a company spokesman said Wednesday.

Jones, 63, is selling the company for an undisclosed price to devote his time to research into lower back pain and development of diagnostic equipment.

Ward International Corp. of Dallas signed a contract to buy Nautilus last week, Nautilus spokesman Dan Vaughn said.

The new owner plans to maintain Nautilus headquarters at its 15-acre site north of Orlando, Fla. The reclusive Jones has never disclosed revenues, profits or even the number of employees since marketing his first Nautilus machine in 1970.

Jones, who lives on a ranch near Ocala, Fla., with his 24-year-old wife Terri and a number of elephants, alligators, rhinoceroses, snakes and a gorilla, required that Ward not discuss the sale until the deal is closed.

Tandy revamps line

NEW YORK (AP) — Tandy Corp. revamped its line of personal computers Wednesday with five new machines, including one that it said was four times as fast as IBM's best-selling XT but cheaper.

The new computers combine plentiful features with low prices and should put pressure on International Business Machines Corp. and other makers of PC-compatible computers, analysts said.

Analysts were most impressed by the $1,699 price tag on the new Tandy 3000 HL, which is intended to compete with IBM's XT, the world's best-selling personal computer.

The Tandy machine uses Intel Corp.'s speedy 80286 microprocessor, which IBM uses only on its top-of-the-line PC AT. The price is "phenomenal," said Gibbs Moody, an analyst for the Gartner Group in Stamford, Conn.

"Tandy is the first major retailer to introduce an aggressively priced (80286-based) product," Moody said.

Moody and other analysts said Tandy's new products are a sign that the price wars that have taken hold in the low end of the personal computer market are starting to move up the ladder to more sophisticated machines.

The stock price for Tandy, which is headquartered in Fort Worth, Texas, was unchanged Wednesday at $36.50 a share in consolidated New York Stock Exchange trading.

Tandy, traditionally strong in the home and small-business market, has been trying to penetrate the Fortune 500 as well.

It strengthened its computer line Wednesday on a broad front, announcing two pieces of software and three disk drives along with the five computers ranging in price from $219.95 to $4,299.

"This is a full product line which in some cases is pushing on the state of the art," said Richard W. Gochman, an analyst and vice president of J.&W. Seligman & Co.

"These new products are not clones," said Ron Stegall, Tandy's senior vice president in the business products division. Although compatible with IBM computers, the Tandy offerings have extra features, he said.

Tandy introduced two computers to replace its Model 1000, which is the best selling IBM-compatible personal computer other than those made by IBM itself.

One, the Tandy 1000 EX, is intended for schools and homes and is priced at $799. The other, the Tandy 1000 SX, is intended for businesses and is priced at $1,199.

On the cheap end of the market, Tandy announced a new version of its Color Computer, the Color Computer 3, at $219.95. And at the expensive end, it announced a version of its Tandy 3000 HD with a big 40-megabyte hard disk drive, priced at $4,299.

APPEALS—

Since the November award, the total has been gaining interest at a rate of $3 million a day, for a total of $708 million.

In February, Casseb refused to overturn the jury verdict, effectively denying White Plains, N.Y.-based Texaco's request for a new trial. Texaco then filed with the 1st Court of Appeals.

Texaco filed a 100-page brief with the court in April, complaining that Casseb misinterpreted New York contract law and Texas procedural law. The New York law is an issue because discussions of the mergers were held in New York.

Houston-based Pennzoil responded with a 400-page brief in June.

"Unable to deal effectively with New York law and the question of evidence, Texaco resorts to myriad hypertechnical complaints about the trial's court's charge," the Pennzoil brief said. "Technicalities alone provide Texaco's last hope of avoiding responsibility for its actions."

Other parties, including the New York attorney general, have filed briefs with the appeals court, agreeing on Texaco's behalf.

Jamail, however, said the Texaco briefs were "orchestrated and purchased by Texaco," and were an attempt to persuade the court of some economic problems Texaco may face.

White: Tax would hurt future economy

By LAURA TOLLEY

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas governor's race whisked through Houston as Gov. Mark White and Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements spoke to different support groups.

White, addressing 400 people attending a Houston Chamber of Commerce luncheon Wednesday, said a state income tax may help solve Texas' projected $3.5 billion budget deficit, but implementing such a measure would hurt future economic development.

"No, we're not going to have an income tax — corporate or personal — because that will drive business off," White said.

But he would not discuss whether a tax increase may be needed to meet projected budget shortfalls.

When asked about possible cuts in primary and secondary education budgets, he said he would fight such moves.

"We must not turn our backs on the future," White said.

During the luncheon, the governor defended the state's education reforms, such as the no pass-no play rule, saying they are good for the students and eventually will help the economy.

"We see success stories built around education investments all around the country," he said. "The important thing to do in the future is to continue these investments in education."

Across town, Clements also said he stongly supports keeping the current state spending on education at 51 cents per state tax dollar.

But the former governor told the Texas High School Coaches Association Convention he wants to change the no pass-no play standards.

The controversial rule prohibits students failing a course from participating in extracurricular activities for the ensuing six-week grading period.

STATE

Clements says the six-week suspension period in the regulation is too long and discourages students from taking difficult courses. He said he agrees in principle with the educational reforms, but said changes are needed in order to help school officials.

Clements said he believes the state should spend a majority of its revenue on education, with two-thirds of the education money going to public schools and the rest to higher education.

The gubernatorial candidate also said he would work with school officials to further improve the Texas educational system.

"It has diluted the authority of teachers in the classroom," he said of Texas' reform legislation. "There is no question about that. We need to put back the classroom discipline to the teachers, where it belongs."

He criticized teacher competency tests, saying the system needs to be improved, but he did not say how the system could be improved.

Clements briefly discussed the state's economic problems, saying Texas needs strong leadership to cut spending and avoid budget shortfalls.

Economist: Recession to continue until last of '87

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas economy appears to be in a recession that will continue, not bottoming out until the last half of 1987, says a senior economist.

Thomas Plaut of the state comptroller's office said the agency's most recent forecast projects Texas will lose 81,000 jobs this year and another 33,000 in 1987 before an upswing begins.

The current energy-driven recession will top the 1982-83 slump as the most severe Texas recession in the 1980s, Plaut said.

"The economy continues to deteriorate," Plaut told a Tuesday night meeting of the Austin chapter of the American Association of Individual Investors.

"I'd like to say things will get better, but right now we don't see any light at the end of the tunnel. If things do change, it's likely they will change for the worse," added Plaut, who introduced himself to the group as "Dr. Doom."

Bill Allaway, executive vice president of the Texas Association of Taxpayers, said the state is reshaping its economy and faces some hard choices in revamping the tax structure to match changing economic strengths.

The current debate over state revenues, Allaway said, is marked by too much political posturing and not enough deep discussion of likely alternatives.

Proposed major cuts in state spending to meet the projected $3.5 billion state budget deficit would hurt the state's economy and its business climate, said Allaway.

Woman's will not hampered by disability

WACO (AP) — Sandy Bailey sometimes makes people forget that she has a disability.

After a few minutes, you forget that cerebral palsy has severely impaired her speech. You just listen to what she has to say and begin to appreciate her as a person with feelings, thoughts and goals.

Unfortunately, few people take the time to do that — with Mrs. Bailey or any other disabled person. All they see is what makes them different. That makes her mad. But she's doing something about it.

As a member of the Governor's Committee for Disabled Persons, she is working to make people aware of the person behind the handicap. Employers are her main target.

"Two point three million disabled people are unemployed simply because the employer doesn't know how to relate to someone who looks different," the 35-year-old single mother said. "Buy a pair of sunglasses and don't look at them, but hire them."

Mrs. Bailey has a degree in mental health from McClennan Community College and is working toward a degree in data processing. Despite her qualifications, she has been turned down for many jobs.

"You wear glasses, but that's no big deal," she said. "I may see better than you but because you walk better than I do, I won't get the job."

Cerebral palsy is a permanently disabling condition caused by damage to the brain, usually before or during birth, that results in a loss or impairment of muscle control, but does not affect intelligence. So when would-be employers ask her how customers would talk to her, she responds curtly, "with their mouth."

Mrs. Bailey said people can become more comfortable around handicapped people if they stop to realize that being uncomfortable — at first — is OK.

"We all have a little bit of Archie Bunker in us. I'm guilty of that, too. There are handicapped people I'm uncomfortable with," she said. "But being uncomfortable doesn't make it bad. It just means you're unfamiliar with it."

Mrs. Bailey was appointed in April to a two-year term on the 16-member Governor's committee, half of which is comprised of disabled people. They include a Vietnam veteran, a person who is deaf and a person who is blind. She is the only person on the comittee who has cerebral palsey.

"I got a telephone call April 1 and thought 'Is this an April fool's joke?' I had applied two years ago but forgot about it," she said.

"You know how you want certain things you think you'll never get? I just put my name in the hat and thought, why not?"

She went to a meeting in Austin three days later and found her new mission and the people she met "wonderful." Most work now is conducted over conference telephone calls, however, in an effort to reduce expenses.

"It's strange talking to more than one person and it's hard to know when to talk," she said.

Telephone calls remain Mrs. Bailey's downfall. She said if she doesn't get hung up on within the first 30 seconds, she considers it a miracle.

"A lot of them say, 'What have you been drinking?'" she said. "I say 'coffee.' I'm not a teetotaler, but I'm also not in the habit of making phone calls when I've been drinking alcohol."

Mrs. Bailey, who plans to be married for the third time next summer, said she looks at life like a tennis match in which she often loses but never concedes defeat.

"I may get creamed, but I just tighten up my racket, get some new balls and start a new game," she said.

One of the reasons Mrs. Bailey enjoys data processing is because computers don't discriminate. It may take her longer to type in the accurate information, but once it's there, the machine will sputter out whatever she requests.

"They'll do anything I want them to," she said. "They're very fair."

She would like to open her own computer consulting firm in about two years with the idea of servicing banks and insurance companies. Sounds pretty ambitious until she tells you that her fiance's goal is to get her to the top of Mount Everest. A more reachable and immediate goal, however, is to make Waco more barrier-free for the handicapped.

"Austin is a handicapped person's paradise. But Waco is a very hard town to get around in."

Plan would reduce health care insurance costs

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital administrators hope to offset declines in Medicare reimbursements and hospital patient loads by introducing a plan to help employers reduce health care insurance costs.

The plan was to be discussed today by the Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees.

"The average length of a hospital stay has decreased from 11-12 days three or four years ago to about 7-8 days today," said Ray Branson, MMH president.

Expenses for supplies, research and development and liability insurance premiums also have increased, he said.

The financial burden faced by the hospitals eventually trickles down to employers, who must pay increased employee health care coverage costs, Branson said.

A report, released by the Health and Human Services Department, said the portion paid for hospital care was 45 percent, or $167 billion and 22 percent, or $83 billion, was spent on doctors.

Branson said the trend toward organizations such as the hospital's proposed "preferred provider association," (PPA) grew as employers were faced with these spiraling health care costs — increasing by as much as 17 percent between the mid 70's and early 80's.

As a result, he said, employers began seeking methods of lowering the costs of employee health care.

The PPA, a contractual agreement between the hospital and physicians, and local employers for their employees, is designed to manage health care costs by keeping in check the cost and appropriateness of the use of medical and hospital resources.

Branson said the provider association, slated to begin by October, appealed to MMH administrators because it gave participants greater freedom of choice than the other common plan, a health maintenance organization.

This popularity could guarantee a bigger success rate for the hospital and member physicians, and greater savings for the employers.

"A health maintenance organization (HMO) operates on a set fee basis and doesn't allow for a choice of physician.

"The PPA will maintain a fee-for-service payment plan and offers a variety of physicians, instead of having one assigned by virtue of what day it is or who's on duty, Branson said."

Branson said employers will give the option of joining the PPA to their employees but may introduce incentives such as lower deductibles or greater coverage benefits.

Discussions on the PPA began in last August, Branson said.

"The number of physicians wanting to participate grew to such a large number that we enlisted the help of a consultant to evaluate the feasibility of our proposal," Branson said.

Branson said one reason physicians are interested in the PPA is because they are facing a glut in their profession and a PPA would help bring in customers.

It was determined there was a market because Midland employers need to watch costs now more than ever, Branson said.

The PPA will be called the Premier Health Plan.

It will be managed by an advisory group, the Memorial Health Care Group (MHG), which is equally composed of members of a physician's representative body, the QualCare Group (QCG) and the Midland Memorial Foundation.

Branson said a small percentage of the patient's services fee will be retained by the Premier Health Plan to offset administrative expenses of the program.

A press conference announcing MHG, QCG and PPA board members as well as an executive director of the provider association is scheduled for August.

Hightower: Economic recovery in interests of Texas farmers

By JANE DEES

■ Competitive structure of agriculture threatened — Page 2D

There is no budget crisis in Texas — there is an economic crisis because no one is making any money to pay taxes that would finance the government at a responsible level, Jim Hightower, Texas Department of Agriculture Commissioner said.

About 40 supporters turned out Wednesday night for a Hightower fundraiser at the Midland County Democratic headquarters.

Hightower spoke on an economic recovery made by cultivating the interests of Texas farmers instead of begging out-of-state conglomerates to come down and pump up the economy."

"We need to abandon the notion of 'trickle down' and think about 'percolating up' instead.

"There will be no economic boom, as the Republicans in Washington keep saying we have, until the small people are booming, as well," Hightower said.

This notion comes on the heels of statistics released by Hightower that claim Texas has lost 16,000 small farms to bankruptcy since 1981.

Efforts to keep the number from growing any larger are in full swing, according to Hightower.

The first and foremost effort, Hightower said, will be in aiding small farmers in the marketing of their wares — whether its on a local level in the form of farmers markets or on an international level such as trading livestock with Mexico.

Hightower said Texans need to process their own commodities, as well.

"We grow our own wheat in the panhandle and then send it away to be processed. The farmer is only making a 5 cent profit on the 28 cent price of a pound of flour.

"If he processed it himself, he could get a 26 cent return instead," Hightower said.

Also on Hightower's mind for new industry was the increasing business of growing Christmas trees and grapes.

Police Department's response time quicker due to computer

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The Midland Police Department has nearly halved the time it takes to dispatch a patrol car since the department's computer aided dispatch (CAD) system was implemented a week ago, according to local officials.

Under the old system, complaint slips had to be filled out by hand and given to a lead dispatcher, who would then contact a police unit.

The clerk who took the complaint had to write a report number, classification code, location of the complaint, police area, district within the area, and several other details.

The new system uses a computer terminal and keyboard. When a citizen calls the police, the operator enters a name, address, and type of complaint. The computer automatically assigns a report number to the complaint.

According to the address entered, the computer automatically assigns it to one of five geographical patrolling areas, then further into 20-square block districts, then eight to 10 square block reporting areas.

The information is then sent to a lead dispatcher with the information displayed.

Tonna Hanzel, 26, the communications supervisor for MPD, said under the old system at least five minutes usually elapsed from the time a call was received until a police car was dispatched.

UTPB officials say accounting problems have been corrected

From Staff and Wire Reports

ODESSA — University of Texas of the Permian Basin officials say they already have corrected some of the accounting system deficiencies cited Wednesday in a management audit of the UT System.

UTPB's poorly functioning accounting system was the only "material weakness" state auditors cited in the report.

"The university was not utilizing its accounting system to generate accurate and timely financial information, and as a result, significant control procedures were not performed," Ronnie Jung, director of higher education audits, wrote in a letter to the UT regents.

"This situation created a significant risk that errors or irregularities could occur and not be detected in a timely manner."

Jung cited no material weaknesses for the system as a whole or for any of the other component schools or medical centers.

Because of its accounting system, the audit stated, UTPB could not "determine how certain transactions impacted the system or why some transactions were duplicated in the ledgers."

Also, the university "was not processing routine journal entries because they were unsure of the impact on the balances in the ledgers."

Midlanders give opinions on status of police chief

By HOLLY LONGABERGER
Staff Writer

The City of Midland is in the process of a nationwide search for a new police chief.

A consulting firm out of Bellevue, Wash., has been hired to look for qualified applicants from Midland and across the nation.

On Wednesday the Reporter-Telegram surveyed 11 people and asked if the City of Midland should hire a police chief from within the city or should they look elsewhere.

Seven people felt the city should hire a police chief from within. One person suggested hiring a police chief outside the city while three others suggested that they hire the person best qualified.

Sheila Patterson of 1409 West Pine Ave. said the city should hire within the area because that person would know Midland better.

E. Robertson of Midland agreed.

"We don't need to spend the money to search for a police chief. We have enough men down at the police station who know what is going on," he said.

Amy Travland, Melanie Schmidt and Angela Coldin, all of Midland and Ralph Hilton of Odessa also stated that the police chief should be hired within Midland.

"He would know more about Midland and its problems, better than a person from outside would," Ms. Coldin said.

Shirley Shroyer of Big Spring felt that if the city found a qualified person in Midland he should be the one hired.

"It will also encourage career development within the department," she added.

On the other hand, Craig Atchinson of 2209 Shell Drive, said the city should look elsewhere for the police chief.

"We need someone with new ideas to deal with the problems."

However, some people say that it does not matter where the new police chief is from as long as he is qualified.

Tom Collins of 6080 Liddon Ave. said that it did not matter where the chief came from as long as he was qualified. "That's the most important thing."

Midlander Jack Fryar said he felt the same way.

"It does not matter where he is from," he stated.

Mrs. Loewellyn of 4205 Boulder Drive concluded, "It doesn't make any difference as long as we have the right person."

My friend, my mortal body turned on me

For years, the cigarette was my friend. Smoking was my habit and my pleasure.

With a Lucky Strike or an occasional Camel in hand, I was never — never — alone. That was one of the blessings, intangible but so real, of the cigarette, the fag of bygone days and of the old Humphrey Bogart movies.

Often, I have been alone in a strange or familiar city and was prone to be distraught for no apparent reason outside of loneliness. But I was never alone as long as I had a pack of cigarettes in my shirt pocket. I would be sitting in a cafe drinking coffee, for example, and would feel the world had forsaken me. I would feel uneasy, nervous and conspicuous. I would be about to panic but didn't know where to run to. The world was closing in. Insanity was moving in. So, I would sip another cup of coffee and ponder how I would survive.

The cigarette saved me time and time again.

I would reach for the pack with my right hand, ponder the beauty of tobacco, flip my hand in a jerking motion until a cigarette would emerge from the pack, pull it out and would pack the tobacco by repeatedly pounding the cigarette on the face of my watch, the coffee table, the cigarette lighter (if I had one) or the coffee cup. After that ritual, I would smartly place the ready-roll cigarette between my eager lips and would light up. Mostly, I would use a match to set the cigarette afire and smoking. Matches held far more purity to me than did a lighter, including the durable Zippo. So did the "regular" cigarette. The "regular" was pure and represented the virility which I imagined would suddenly or eventually permeate me if I smoked enough cigarettes.

Once I got the cigarette going, everything was all right. Simply and just. I had practiced lighting up from my late teen-age years until my mid-30s. I had the art refined. That's one thing I was good at. I could have been a contender in the Smoking Olympics. Rarely did I get a bit of tobacco in my mouth. I was a good packer. And never, except at the outset of smoking, did I wet the tip of the cigarette with my lips. I was a proud and masterful smoker. Had they known, the big tobacco companies would have signed me up to promote their product, their handiwork, my idol, my friend — the ever-comforting cigarette. I smoked from morning 'til passing-out or falling-to-sleep time.

I was a proud smoker. I was amazingly tolerant of non-smokers, whose self-righteousness I abhorred. And I felt that smokers of filtered-tip cigarettes were second-class smokers. They hadn't the taste of quality to savor a "real" cigarette or the stamina to enjoy a regular cigarette. I demanded purity. I wanted nothing between me and that tobacco. I shunned the filtered tip, which clouded the "taste" of delicious tobacco. Oh, how I craved it.

The cigarette was indispensable. I had rather smoke than eat. And given a choice, which I had as a near-starving reporter in Galveston years ago, I would spend what silver I had or could scrounge up to buy a pack of cigarettes, which at that time cost about 30 cents a pack. I had a lust and a passion for the cigarette.

Now, I did try smoking pipes and cigars. But pipe-smoking left holes in my pants, shirts and jackets. Pipes were so troublesome but fun if you enjoyed piddling before, during and after smoking. A good cigar, say one filled with Havana tobacco, I savored after a good evening meal. But I always returned to the cigarette — to the romance of lighting up, breathing that smoke, tasting the tobacco, and talking silently to my friend, the cigarette.

From time to time, I still crave the cigarette even 12 years after I turned tobacco aside. I abandoned my friend — my worshipful master — only after I felt the cigarette and my mortal body had turned on me. Smoking was killing me. The surgeon general or any physician need not tell me that. I knew. I began to outwardly and inwardly evidence the drawbacks of smoking: that overall aching and "low" feeling, the almost unbearable urge to smoke when I wasn't smoking, the shortness of breath, the hacking and the coughing, the repulsive phlegm, the scorched lips, the dry throat, the dreariness, the headaches, the "burning" lungs, the pangs, and the tingling sensations which signaled "the need" for another drag.

After numerous dry runs, I finally quit smoking. I overpowered my urge. Aside from desiring good health, I wanted to prove I had some measure of will power. My health and stamina improved, and I felt so much better. Much.

Even today, I sometimes romanticize the cigarette. Occasionally, I desire to smoke, but I allow the urge to pass. And I can appreciate "the smoking habit" of others, especially my friends. Some have quit smoking, some are trying to stop, others are playing with the idea of quitting but aren't yet resolute, and others are still puffing away with the apparent "full enjoyment" of smoking.

I understand their tobacco pleasure, habit and addiction. Their friend the cigarette also was my friend.

And if they ever decide to quit smoking, I will understand that and the agony they will be going through. It will pass if they don't give up.

New Mexico may have to repay Texas for water

AUSTIN (AP) — The state of New Mexico may be ordered to repay Texas for the amount of Pecos River water that Texas should have been receiving for the past 30 years, Attorney General Jim Mattox said Wednesday.

That recommendation came Wednesday from Charles J. Meyers of Denver, a special master appointed by the U.S. Supreme Court to resolve issues in the 12-year dispute between the two states over Pecos River water and terms of the interstate contract, Mattox said.

"The farmers in the Pecos River Valley have suffered from a shortage of irrigation water for a long, long time," Mattox said. "Although West Texas is always going to be pretty dry, the extra water coming down the river from New Mexico will allow our farmers to put acreage under irrigation and into cultivation, land that has been fallow too long because of the lack of water."

In the report, Mayers found that New Mexico owes Texas more than three decades worth of Pecos River water, amounting to 340,100 acre-feet.

He also recommended that the U.S. Supreme Court order New Mexico to comply with its future obligation under the interstate contract, which would increase water deliveries in Texas by about 10,000 acre-feet each year.

Mattox said he expected the Supreme Court to act on the special master's recommendation by next summer.

Lost letters finally meet destination after 42 years hidden within attic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty two years ago, Raul Alvarez wrote to his sweetheart, "I picture ourselves together again. ..."

Alvarez did indeed get together with his sweetheart, Terry Espinosa. They got married in 1950.

But it wasn't until Wednesday that the former Miss Espinosa got the letter — and it was hand-delivered by the postmaster general of the United States.

The story of the letter begins on May 21, 1944, when the missive along with 234 others from homesick soldiers aboard a troop transport was collected as the ship docked in Algeria. The letters were to have been put in the mail on the ship's return to Newport News, Va.

But the GI from Raleigh, N.C., who was supposed to mail them forgot. Scared, he later stuffed them in a duffel bag with some socks and hid them in his aunt's attic.

Early this month, a termite exterminator found the duffel bag and took it to the Raleigh, N.C., postmaster, Ross Garulski. However, the exterminator, Michael Minguez, first had to promise not to mention the name of the resident of the house nor that of her nephew.

Postal authorities and the Veterans Administration began to search for the senders, known only by name and wartime address. So far, they have returned 16 letters to four veterans and the son of one who had died, and on Wednesday 10 more were personally handed over to four more veterans.

One letter writer, Walt Dropo, former first baseman for the Boston Red Sox, said the ship, the Caleb Strong, was attacked on the 18-day voyage, but the letters focused on the weather and personal health and thoughts, because of wartime censorship.

"You'll be getting mail a little more regularly from now on," Dropo said in his letter to his mom and dad.

Agriculture head says Reagan policies will result in eventual loss of farmer

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says the current thrust of Reagan Administration farm policies will result in destruction of the independent, family farmer and give rise to a monopoly of sorts that will ultimately mean higher consumer prices.

"We, as a society," Hightower said, "are going to lose if we destroy the competitive structure of agriculture. That's the irony of what Reagan is doing. In the name of free enterprise, we're going to destroy the competitive structure and true free enterprise nature of agriculture and replace it with a monopolistic structure," he said, adding, "You're going to get the same fun on your grocery bill as you get on your utility bill now."

Hightower was in Odessa at the Hilton Hotel for the first meeting of one of the Texas Department of Agriculture's newly formed Odessa District Advisory Board. Fifteen members of the board were selected from several towns and cities in the 34-county West Texas district.

"The eyes and ears of the Texas Department of Agriculture are literally being expanded across West Texas," he said in commenting on creation of the advisory board.

Hightower said advisory boards are being established in all 12 TDA districts in a further effort to decentralize the agency.

"Farmers, ranchers, farm business people, other professionals and community leaders — both men and women — from across the area have agreed to serve.

"They have agreed to give their time so your Texas Department of Agriculture can do a better job of serving the people," stated Hightower.

The Odessa district is the eighth to have a TDA advisory board. Others have been formed in Amarillo, Stepehnville, San Antonio, Tyler, Dallas, San Juan and Beaumont.

The Odessa district serves Andrews, Brewster, Coke, Concho, Crane, Crockett, Culberson, Jeff Davis, Ector, El Paso, Glasscock, Tom Green, Howard, Hudspeth, Irion, Loving, Martin, Menard, Midland, Mitchell, Nolan, Pecos, Presidio, Reagan, Reeves, Runnels, Schleicher, Sterling, Sutton, Taylor, Terrell, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties.

Secretary for the Odessa District Advisory Board will be Mozelle Lowe of Odessa.

Members include: Naomi Chandler, Midland; Harold Ivey, Tornillo, Jack Stallings Jr., El Paso; Paul Hopper and Larry Shaw, both of Knott; Mary Gentry and Phyllis Gentry, both of Dell City; Gerald Hanson, Stanton; Alton Raschke, Colorado City; Clifford Hoelscher, Garden City; Randall Conners and Michael Deike and Robert Parramore, all of Winters, Ronnie Freeman, Trent; and A.H. (Chico) Denis, Van Court.

Hightower told advisory board members that, while they will regularly meet on a quarterly basis, they don't need to wait for regular meetings. If anyone has an idea, something that might help, a meeting can be called anytime.

Soft drink vending machine falls, kills youth

SPRING BRANCH (AP) — A 16-year-old youth died early today when a soft drink vending machine he was shaking fell on him, police in this Houston suburb said.

Officers said the youth, who was not immediately identified, was crushed to death when the large soft drink vending machine, located in an apartment complex, fell, crushing him.

A friend who was with the youth at the time, said his friend was shaking the machine in an attempt to get money out of it at the of the accident.

From Staff Reports

A lawyer and a paralegal will be featured speakers in a joint meeting of the Midland County Bar Association and the Legal Assistants Association/Permian Basin at 11:45 a.m. Friday in the Petroleum Club of Midland.

Marcia McGinnis, a legal assistant for Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson, will speak on "Utilization of a Legal Assistant," and Michael B. "Mike" McKinney, a lawyer for Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder, Inc., will speak on the "Economics of Using a Legal Assistant," according to LAA/PB President Carolyn Benson.

This will be the first joint meeting of both associations, said Brenda Ringener, LAA/PB treasurer.

Jewelry, cable TV converter reported stolen, police say

From Staff Reports

The Midland Police Department is investigating the burglary Wednesday of almost $3,000 in jewelry from an apartment. Scott Nickel, 3100 Caldera, told police he was moving out of his upstairs apartment Wednesday afternoon when he noticed the items, which were left near the front door, were missing.

A man's gold nugget ring with a diamond valued at $2,200, a man's Texas A&M ring valued at $380, and a man's watch valued at $300 were reported stolen.

The burglary of a cable television converter and a toolbox was also reported. Linda Defelix, 1109 E. Parker Ave., told police the converter, valued at $250, and the toolbox, valued at $200, were taken after someone apparently broke out a window at the house.

The theft of two radar detectors from separate vehicles was reported to police Wednesday.

Michael Pannell told police he parked his 1984 Jeep wagon about 3 p.m. at the 7-Eleven store at Terrell Street and Wadley Avenue and went into the store. According to reports, when he left the store he saw a suspect described as a black male walking away from the vehicle with a radar detector valued at $275.

A radar detector was also reported stolen from an automobile parked at 407 N. Lee St. Lonnie Payne told police the detector, valued at $100, was taken about 2:15 p.m. Suspects in the case are described as two black males, both approximately 25 years of age.

The Midland County Sheriff's Department today reported the theft of a television set valued at $80. Thomas Mollohan, a resident at Westgate RV park, told deputies the residence of Willie Covitt was burglarized sometime between Sunday and Wednesday.

COMPUTER

"That was an average — it was at least that long," she said. "I checked this morning, and we're having a two to three minute response time with CAD. And it should drop even more because we are still learning the system, and the functions of the keys."

If the address is incorrect, or the call is unclear, the CAD can give a display of phonetically similar streets. For example, an address on Wall Street also displays Wallace Drive, Walton Avenue, and Walcott Avenue.

Also, the computer can display all locations of certain businesses, for example Stop-N-Go convenience stores. And, if the operator is told the name of a business only, such as Green Tree Country Club, the computer will display the correct address, 4900 Green Tree Blvd.

Lt. Hank Norton, spokesman for MPD, said the CAD system will be invaluable in recordkeeping.

"It's not going to solve any crimes for us," Norton said. "It's going to make our response time quicker and it's going to give us access to areas we never had before except by memory."

One of the capabilities of the system is address history: a complaint at a certain address will list past calls to the address, and if necessary will display a "danger zone," a sign that two or more officers need to be dispatched to the scene.

Norton said also the calls are "prioritized." The CAD system can operate six terminals and keyboards tied in to a Burroughs B25 computer, which was installed about 18 months ago. Ms. Hanzel said the delay was primarily due to software problems. Also, she said city streets had to be inputed into the computer to create a grid.

PROBLEMS

In response to the criticism, UTPB officials said they would either buy "an accounting package that would run a mini computer" or return to manual accounting to correct the problem.

The audit covered the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1985, a period of time during which UTPB converted its manual records to an automated accounting system.

Other UTPB deficiencies listed in the audit include:

— No division between the person who calculates the payroll and the person who receives the pay checks for distribution.

— Reliance on the state comptroller to keep track of the school's appropriations balances and slow reconciliation of bank account balances.

— The lack of "complete and consistent policies, standards and procedures for information processing."

— An inadequate password security system for its computer system.

— A one-month delay in the deposit of tuition payments into the state Treasury. State law requires such deposits occur within seven days of receipt.

In their response to the audit, UTPB officials said they will work to correct all of the deficiencies.

"Success of the program will be measured in how effectively we can decrease the health care rates of the employers," Branson said.

DEATHS

Wallace C. Pfister

Wallace Cyril Pfister, 64, of Midland died at his home late Tuesday evening following a brief illness.

Memorial rosary and mass were held today at 9 a.m. at St. Ann's Catholic Church with the Rev. George Thekkedam officiating.

Pfister was born Sept. 22, 1921, in Alameda, Calif., and was reared in New Orleans, La. He graduated from Louisiana State University with a bachelor's degree in petroleum engineering in 1944. He served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. After his discharge, he worked for Tidewater, which later became Getty Oil Co. He moved to Midland in 1969 and retired as District Operations Manager in 1979.

He was a member of St. Ann's Catholic Church and the A.I.M.E Association.

Survivors include two sons, Michael Pfister of Corsicana and Jack Pfister of Austin; three daughters, Ginger Pfister of Austin, and Jan Pfister and Cindy Pearcy, both of Midland; his father, Edwin Pfister of New Orleans, La.; one brother, Roy Pfister of New Orleans; and two sisters, Marilyn Allard and Maureen Pfister, both of New Orleans.

The family requests that memorials be directed to the S.P.C.A. of Midland.

'Borderwatch' official agrees to speak at convention

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of Mexican American Democrats of Texas said Wednesday a "borderwatch" official has accepted an invitation to speak to MAD's convention in McAllen on Aug. 8-9.

Ruben Bonilla extended an invitation to Tom Posey, national commander of Civilian Materiel Assistance Group, an organization Bonilla said is "vigilante-like," but Posey said he would not be able to attend the convention.

Bonilla said, however, J.R. Hagan, also of Alabama and director of American Border Watch, "which is tied in with Posey's group," had "welcomed an opportunity to set the record straight" about possible border patrols.

There were published reports that Posey's organization would patrol the Mexico-Texas border to deter drug smugglers and illegal aliens from crossing the border, but Bonilla said Wednesday he understood that plan was off.

RECOVERY

"There are three to four million households in Texas who buy Christmas trees for $50 each year and then when they get them home, the needles fall out.

"In West Texas, farmers are growing the Afghan pine which can be harvested and sold in 24 hours — they'd last until Easter," Hightower said.

Hightower said West Texas farmers, who collectively sold 300,000 Afghan pines last year, made $725 an acre profit.

The grape growing and wine producing industry is booming and Hightower said this was an example of "investing in Texans" instead of "begging Gallo" to come down and build a plant.

"In 1975 there was one winery in Texas. Today, there are 18 with four of five more on the way.

"There is a $3 billion sales potential each year in the wine industry," Hightower said.

Hightower said he's offering a vision of moving Texas forward and not back to the days when a few lobbies in Austin ran the government.

"Help doesn't always have to be financial — you can invest in people," Hightower said.

Parks and Wildlife budget cuts could close a third of state parks

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 34 percent cut in the budget of the Parks and Wildlife Department could close a third of the state parks, according to Charles Travis, executive director.

The parks division will take the biggest blow in any budget cutting because it operates out of the general revenue fund, plus money received from one cent of the cigarette tax, Travis told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Gov. Mark White first asked state agencies to make a voluntary 13 percent cut in their current budgets. Last week, after Comptroller Bob Bullock estimated the deficit at $3.5 billion, White asked a number of major agencies, including the Parks and Wildlife Department to assess the impact of a 34 percent cut.

"Everybody is afraid to blink," said Bob Kemp, the agency's director of fisheries.

"Right now, it's all a state of confusion," said Al Springs, who works in the department's wildlife division. "They (budget planners) are drawing lines and sharpening their knives, but we won't know just how deep the cuts will be until after the legislative session is over."

Travis said, "We took a look at our general expenditures — $13.5 million — and voluntarily cut $2.4 million, which is in the 13 percent range."

"Right now, it's all a state of confusion. They (budget planners) are drawing lines and sharpening their knives, but we won't know just how deep the cuts will be until after the legislative session is over."

— Al Springs

He said the hardest hit of the agency's divisions will be parks, which Travis has presided over since the resignation of former parks chief James Bell several months ago.

The parks division will receive the biggest blow because it operates off of general revenues and tax funds generated by a one-cent tax on cigarette sales.

Travis said the House appropriations committee, which reviewed the original budget for 1987, has suggested the parks division forfeit the $27 million a year it receives from the cigarette tax.

Travis said the outcome of such a cut would be "pretty drastic." At least 157 parks employees would lose their jobs and 30 of the state's 96 state parks would have to be closed, he said. Another 97 employees who work in the parks designing and engineering section also would lose their jobs.

Other divisions, including fisheries, wildlife and law enforcement, operate primarily out of Fund 9, which is funded by the sale of hunting and fishing licenses and stamps.

Least hit will be the law enforcement division.

"It's too early to say how hard we will be hit," law enforcement official David Palmer said. "I'm sure we will be looked at real closely just like everyone else. And I expect that we all will see our salaries cut."

Travis has a week to revise the Parks and Wildlife Department budget. The Legislature is scheduled to convene a special budget session Aug. 6.

STATE IN BRIEF

Prosecutors await fate of ex-Boy Scout leader

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Prosecutors will wait to see whether a former Boy Scout leader jailed in Texas on an outstanding warrant from Illinois will waive extradition before taking further action, a LaSalle County official says.

Frank H. Morris, indicted May 27 in LaSalle County on a charge of indecent liberties with a child, was arrested Friday in Texas on a warrant carrying a $100,000 bond. He has been held in Williamson County.

Two weeks earlier, a Champaign County judge dismissed 32 counts of child pornography against him.

Morris, 49, was accused of deviate sexual conduct with a 14-year-old Champaign County boy at an Illinois state park in October 1984. Morris, a former area Boy Scout leader, was to have appeared for arraignment Tuesday.

Betty Roliardi of the LaSalle County state's attorney's office said Wednesday that prosecutors are waiting to see whether Morris will waive extradition.

Morris' attorney, Arthur Lerner, said Wednesday that Morris had planned to appear for Tuesday's proceeding and that he believed LaSalle County authorities had been aware that Morris was in Texas.

Then "someone in Texas somehow arrested him" on the LaSalle County warrant, the attorney said. "I'm at a total loss."

Earlier this year, Morris was convicted in Philadelphia of sexually assaulting the same boy there in July 1985. He was sentenced to 23 months in jail, but he was credited for time served while awaiting trial and paroled.

On July 14, a Champaign County judge dismissed 32 counts of child pornography filed against Morris.

Prosecutors had charged Morris, who lived in the area from 1972 to 1985, on the basis of hundreds of sketches depicting homosexual relations between men and boys found in a search of his Philadelphia home last fall.

UT publication suffers

ARLINGTON (AP) — The University of Texas at Arlington's student publications department is trying to sell enough subscriptions to continue publishing the campus newspaper, The Shorthorn, four times a week.

Unless The Shorthorn is able to sign up a large number of new paying readers, the department will be forced to cut back to one or two publications a week, officials said this week.

Rising production costs, cuts in work-study funds and frozen student fees have created a budget crunch after 10 years of four issues a week, said Dorthy Estes, student publications director.

This week letters were sent to faculty, staff and business and community leaders outlining the problems. The letters request subscriptions or one-time tax-deductible donations to help the newspaper with its funding.

The paper needs to sell 2,000 subscriptions by Aug. 15 to maintain its Monday through Thursday publication schedule during the 1986-87 school year, officials said.

Fired teachers decide fate

LAREDO (AP) — Two teachers with 46 years of teaching experience between them have not decided yet whether to appeal their firing after they refused to take the state-ordered competency tests.

Eugene Miller and his wife, Hildegarde Miller, were fired Tuesday during a special meeting of trustees of the Laredo United Independent School District. Trustee Jan Ottmers said the Millers' refusal to take the test left the district no alternative.

The couple has 10 days to appeal the filing. Mrs. Miller said she and her husband are still thinking it over. Mrs. Miller has taught English for 18 years and her husband has taught history for 28 years.

"We are dedicated teachers and it was not an easy decision," Mrs. Miller said. "It wasn't a decision of arrogant defiance at all. It was more an act of civil disobedience because we don't believe that the law was right."

The Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers was approved by the Texas Legislature as part of the education reforms passed in the 1984 special session. Since the tests were first given in March, about 97 percent of teachers have passed.

Teachers are required to pass the TECAT in order to keep their teaching certificates. Those unable to take the test the first time it was administered were allowed to make it up later.

The Texas Education Agency allows districts to request waivers for educators who failed TECAT, enabling those educators to retake the exam up to five times.

Treating woks right prevents rust

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. Is it possible to purchase a wok that will not rust? I follow the manufacturer's instructions for seasoning my wok but still have trouble. After washing and before seasoning, my dishtowels pick up a terrible metallic residue. Is that residue harmful to my family's health? Are cast iron woks available? What do Chinese restaurants use? Phyllis Dodd, Avalon, N.J.

A. Woks are made in various metals from thin iron to stainless steel, copper, brass and aluminum. Irene Kuo, in "The Key to Chinese Cooking," advises that the thin iron is the best to buy. I'm assuming that this is the one you bought, so keep it.

Rust is not harmful to your family's health, but to prevent its unsightly occurrence Kuo recommends the following: "A new wok should be seasoned with oil before using it to prevent food from sticking and the metal from rusting. It should be heated over very low heat, brushed lightly all over with oil, then tilted and rotated while resting on the rim collar so that the oil coats all of the interior. Wipe it clean with paper towels.

"Oil and clean twice; then rinse it well and dry it thoroughly with a towel or over direct heat. A wok that is well seasoned by repeated use doesn't rust. But it should be oil treated before storage if you don't use it often, especially when it is new and the metal is still 'raw.' "

Cast iron woks are generally not used in this country, although I am told they are used in China where wok cooking is a continuing all-day process for large families. With cast iron the rust would be even more of a problem, but again, not harmful to one's health.

Q. For years we have been buying Lay's sour cream and onion potato chips. The price seems to remain the same — $1.47 per package. But the net weight has changed. Originally it was 7½ ounces, then it went to 7 ounces, and recently to 6½ ounces. We consumers should be aware of these practices. Lawrence Boisvert, Long Beach, Calif.

A. We're all aware of the candy bar that has been shrinking over the years, but we're less inclined to notice a difference in the weight of a product. Thank you for pointing this out.

Another reader wrote having observed that Del Monte's cans of whole peeled tomatoes and stewed tomatoes were smaller, having decreased from a 16-ounce size can to a 14½-ounce size. And while the 7-ounce size of tuna cans used to be standard, they are slowly being replaced by 6½-ounce size cans.

Another sales method is to decrease the size of a can and label the product a "gourmet" item, as cat food manufacturers have done recently.

Readers who have noticed size and weight reduction of products, with no commensurate lowering of price, please pass the information along so we can all keep abreast of what seems to be a trend in marketing.

Q. Can you tell me if it is worth spending the extra money for a well-known bleach (Clorox), compared to house or store brands? The difference is quite a bit of money. John Offermann, Kingston, N.Y.

A. Liquid bleach is liquid bleach. Buy the cheapest you can get. There is little difference from brand to brand, all having about the same amount of active ingredient.

Of all the bleaches now on the market, including liquid and powder, chlorine and non-chlorine, liquid chlorine bleach is the most effective and the least expensive.

The only problem with chlorine bleach is that if you use a lot of it and you have a septic tank, you may have to have the tank cleaned more often because the bleach tends to slow down the decomposition process.

Reader update:

In a recent column concerning beef fat, or tallow, and how widespread its use is in packaged food and for deep-fat frying in restaurants, I stated that Burger King's chicken sandwich is deep-fried in shortening that's approximately 93 percent beef tallow and 7 percent vegetable oil.

Since then I have received information from Kate Holcomb, director of community relations with the Burger King enterprise in Florida advising us that this company now uses 100 percent pure vegetable oil to cook its fish and chicken products. Additionally, the National Heart Savers Association recently endorsed Burger King's new Chicken Tenders as a heart-healthy fast-service food.

Reader feedback:

■ Peter Kurowski, Pulaski, Wis.: "This is in regard to a question from a reader who wanted to know how to remove sap safely from auto finishes. Having parked my auto under trees for many years, the easiest and safest solution for the removal of tree sap is to dab it with gasoline until the sap dissolves, then lightly wipe the spot dry. Make certain to repolish the spot."

■ M. Pearce, Portland, Ore.: "I have successfully used a product called GOOP for removal of pitch, road tar, black marks from rubber, etc. This cleaner liquefies at body temperature and dissolves these hard-to-remove substances almost instantly with no rubbing."

■ Joyce Jameson, Lincoln, Neb.: "We solved the problem by using No. 7 Tar and Bug Remover by DuPont. Tar is similar to remove. Do it as soon as possible because the sap discolors the paint."

■ Mrs. E. H. Hovey, Clearwater, Fla.: "Use mineral spirits. Put some on a very small rag or Q-Tip and rub on the spot. It will not hurt the finish. But do remove it — it will eat through the finish eventually if you don't."

■ Harrison Balthaser, Honesdale, Pa.: "Rubbing alcohol is the answer. I've been using it for years. It will cause a white-colored film after use, but this can be removed with auto polish."

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Snacks healthy

By LINDA ANDERSON

I don't know about most families, but in mine, limiting food intake to three square meals and no snacks is virtually impossible. When an attack of the munchies hits, it hits and must be taken care of immediately or it gets out of control — and the next thing you know the whole chocolate cake or container of ice cream is gone.

When you have kids at home, however, you try to set a good example in everything you do — including, unfortunately, choices of snack foods (which is hard, because I much prefer O'Grady's au gratin potato chips and peanut M&Ms) — and choosing nutritious snack foods often means eating something yucky.

Kraft foods, makers of many cheese and cheese products, have recently branched out of the dairy case to present a "new" product, which is basically an old favorite in a more convenient form.

VegiSnax are cleaned, peeled or stringed, ready-to-eat one-serving packages of carrots or celery. That's it — nothing to wash, skin, cut up or feel guilty about. Just open the little "snax" sacks and enjoy.

Some taste-testers had a veggie-tasting marathon to decide just how worthwhile these "new" old foods really were. We crunched both the celery and the carrots for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

According to information from Kraft, VegiSnax are "all natural; no preservatives or additives ... need no preparation — they come cleaned and cut ready to eat ... two convenient sizes — 3 ounces and 6 ounces ... answer consumer preferences for crispy, crunchy, flavorful vegetables. Carrots are naturally sweet and juicy. Celery has snap and fewer strings ... specially grown and packaged for their super snack characteristics ... the result of highly selective hybridizing" and on and on and on ...

VegiSnax in 3-ounce packages cost 49 cents, and in 6-ounce packages they sell for 89 cents. This seems steep when you consider that carrots are currently going for about 69 cents for a two-pound sack and celery for 89 cents a bunch; but when compared to other snack foods, the prices are much more competitive. For example, individual serving packages of potato chips cost about 35 cents each, and regular chocolate candy bars cost about 40 cents. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

In the all-important taste test, the vegistix passed with flying colors. In spite of a slightly dried outer appearance — which happens if vegetable sticks are left unrefrigerated for a while, whether the veggies are VegiSnax or cut up at home — the veggies proved to be every bit as sweet and crisp as promised in the advertising — though not as cold as I like my crisp vegetables to be.

VegiSnax are tasty, healthy snacks, and obviously have more nutrition that chocolate cookies or onion dip.

Are they worth buying? Depends on how much you want to pay for convenience, because that's what you're paying the most for — but you also have to weigh the price of poor nutrition, because that's what you get with most other snack foods.

Omitting sugar in canning affects texture, flavor

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Foods can be preserved at home with less sugar, but the results may or may not be acceptable to your tastes. Before trying no sugar recipes on your produce, experiment with small batches first to see if you are pleased with the results.

Recipes for canning fruits call for the addition of sugar or a sugar syrup to maintain the texture, shape and color of the fruit and to improve the flavor. Omitting the sugar will primarily affect the fruit texture and flavor.

When canning without sugar, use only firm, ripe or slightly under-ripe fruit so it won't become too soft from canning. By adding ascorbic acid or a commercial anti-darkening agent, fruit will retain better color.

If you plan on using artificial sweeteners, add it when the fruit is served. The heat of processing can cause some artificial sweeteners to become bitter and others to lose their sweetening power.

Fruit can also be frozen safely without added sugar, but will not maintain its quality during freezer storage as well as fruit that has sugar added.

Berries and fruits which do not darken when exposed to air can be frozen in a single layer on trays and then packed into freezing bags or containers. The fruits which freeze well in this manner are blueberries, strawberries, dewberries, blackberries, raspberries, cherries, plums, dates, grapes, melon balls, pineapple chunks and rhubarb slices.

Light-colored fruits such as apples, peaches and apricots freeze well in unsweetened juice or water to which ascorbic acid has been added to prevent darkening. Light-colored juices, including apple, pineapple and orange, are suitable as liquids to cover frozen fruits.

Since sugar gives sweet pickles and relishes their unique texture and flavor, omitting this ingredient can result in a mushy and less flavorful product.

It's also difficult to get good sugarless jams and jellies, since sugar is essential to get formation, serves as a preserving agent and improves the flavor.

Jams and jellies made without sugar are more like a gelatin product than a true jam or jelly. The "mouth feel" will be different and the flavor tart.

Even with these drawbacks, jams and jellies made with artificial sweeteners, a small amount of sugar or a combination of artificial sweetener and sugar can be acceptable.

In addition, some brands of low methoxyl pictins give instructions for making jellies without any additional sugar. But if this method is used, try using very ripe fruit which has a high concentration of natural sugars.

BETTER BUSINESS

Job listings rip-off

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

If you place advertisements for employment in the newspaper, you may receive inquiries from not only potential employees, but from "job listing" companies.

The "job listing" company may ask you if they may send someone over, or if the position is still available. Your company name may then appear on a list that the "job listing" firm sells to consumers.

These "job listing" companies require consumers to pay a non-refundable fee for the list of job openings. Consumers may pay these fees believing they will be provided exclusive listings. Most often these listings are compiled from newspapers and other publications and may be outdated.

To distinguish these callers, ask the name of their business, if they are an employment agency registered with the Department of Labor and whether consumers will be charged in advance for the information you are giving them.

In many cases, businesses are being placed on these lists unknowingly and job seekers are paying large sums of money for information they could have obtained from the classified help wanted section for the cost of a newspaper.

Buying stocks amid bad news termed 'courageous'

Associated Press

The best opportunities in today's volatile stock market often come when most investors are frightened away, according to a Wall Street market timing analyst.

"It takes courage to buy when the news is bad," says Robert Farrell, vice president and chief market analyst of Merrill Lynch & Co. Inc. "Perhaps the biggest mistake investors make is buying as the market is peaking. Few investors buy when stocks are out of favor."

Another mistake, Farrell adds, is failing to stay with a stock that is profitable to the investor.

"Many people are tempted to sell at the first sign of bad news," he says. "But if you have a long-term conviction, and the stock has not become overpriced historically, you should look at a decline as an opportunity to add to your investment.

"Many investors also tend to sell the stocks they have profits in when the market declines and hold the losers, hoping for better news. By doing so, they sell off the winners and keep the losers."

Farrell believes there has been a fundamental change in the market in the past few years.

"Many of the assumptions on which economic and market forecasts have traditionally been made are no longer valid," says Farrell, given a top rating as a market timing analyst by a financial publication for the past 10 years.

"Econometric models built on the premise of inflation are not valid in an environment of disinflation, for example. In addition, investor behavior has changed dramatically as a result of new financial tools, such as options, options on futures and futures.

"As a result, while it is important to be a disciplined investor, it also is important to avoid making mechanical decisions based on patterns of past behavior."

For the long-term investor, Farrell suggests, a good motto might be: "Patience pays, Speed kills."

"If you plan to take one, two or three years to reach your investment destination, choose something that is out of favor at the moment instead of something trendy," he advises. "Trendy stocks are good for traders, but not always for long-term investors.

"If it's not a secret any more, then the stock has probably gone up a lot. If you buy a stock that's depressed, most of the negatives have probably been shaken out, although you may have to wait awhile before it goes up."

Prehistoric diets healthier than today's

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — People of the Stone Age could teach modern man about good nutrition.

Dr. Dee Graham of Del Monte USA says prehistoric man consumed more fruits and vegetables and ate meat that contained less fat, all prescriptions for a healthy diet.

Women 'obsessed' with fitness

NEW YORK (UPI) — American women of all ages have become "obsessed" about fitness, nutrition and dieting, according to a national survey conducted for Weight Watchers.

A random sample of 1,000 women ages 25-54 responded to questions about exercise, body appearance and eating habits. The survey results included:

■ Four out of five women said they worry more about fitness and weight now than they did five years ago.

■ Three out of five exercise at least three times a week. Nearly that number think every day about their health and ways to improve it.

■ Seven out of 10 have dieted at one time or another and nearly four out of 10 see themselves as overweight.

■ When asked what part of their bodies is most attractive, "legs" were a close second to "face."

■ More than four out of five women said they eat foods they regard as "most beneficial" at every or most meals.

■ Three out of five women reported that their ideas on which foods are healthy have changed in the past 10 years.

"The American woman is preoccupied, indeed some could say obsessed, with health and exercise," the researchers concluded. "We found that the preoccupation that the media has with health and exercise has led American women to become far more concerned with these two subjects than they ever were before."

Stress, depression cause headaches

NEW YORK (AP) — Tension headaches, the dull, non-throbbing kind of ache that is often described as a "tight" or "squeezing" sensation, can occur when the neck and scalp muscles have been unconsciously tightened and held taut.

The headache can be cured with aspirin, heat or stretching exercises, but the same symptoms can be caused by long periods of emotional stress and depression.

This is a more serious condition and might require prescription drugs, psychotherapy or biofeedback, says Family Circle magazine.

If the pain cannot be quickly relieved, seek medical help for depression.

Overheating automobile spells disaster on road

Associated Press

Lots of vacation traveling in the hot summer sun can lead to problems with an overheated engine. In fact, a glowing temperature light could spell disaster on the road, says Better Homes and Gardens.

Your first concern is to get off the road safely. At the first sign of overheating, put on the car's warning flashers, check the traffic around you, and try to pull off right away. Should traffic prevent immediate exit, turn off the air conditioner, open the windows, and turn on the heater and blower. That should circulate coolant and remove heat from the cooling system — unless your problem is the fan belt.

If you're at a standstill in traffic instead, take the steps above, but also shift into neutral and rev the engine a little. Again presuming the fan belt is not the villain, this action will have a cooling effect, making the water pump and fan speed up to draw more liquid and air through the radiator.

Once safely parked, turn off the ignition and raise the hood. Let things cool down for at least 30 minutes. Only then should you try to analyze the problem and either make temporary repairs in order to get to a service station, or decide that you'd better get help to come to you.

To check the coolant level in the radiator, use a thick cloth to cover the cap and slowly turn it counterclockwise as far as possible. Wait for the pressure to escape, then put downward force on the cap and turn it until it comes free. (Step to one side as you lift the cap off.) Cars with coolant recovery systems do not require removal of the radiator cap. Simply glance at COLD FULL, HOT FULL and ADD marks on the transparent tanks by the radiator.

A low coolant level or discolored areas on the radiator or hoses indicate a possible leak. Refill the radiator or recovery tank with water, replace the cap and start the engine. While the car is running, look for leaks in or around the hoses connected to the radiator, the body of the radiator, hose clamps and radiator cap seal.

With a slow leak, it's safe to drive to a service station — unless the temperature light comes on again. Rapid coolant loss from a crack in a hose or radiator is another matter. Do not drive unless you can patch the leak.

To spot coolant blockage look for a rusty tinge to the coolant. Rust and sediment may be preventing coolant flow through the radiator, the thermostat, or both. If so, you can probably make it to the nearest service station without overheating again. Also examine the bottom radiator hose, which contains a spring that may lose tension, causing the hose to collapse and block coolant circulation.

There may be other causes for the problem, too. You should:

- Inspect the drive belt operating the fan and water pump. The belt could be loose or broken (and probably missing), so water is not being pumped through the engine. Nor is the fan drawing air through the radiator.

In most cars, you can fix a loose belt temporarily by adjusting its tension: loosen the adjustment bolt at the top of the alternator; carefully pry or force the alternator outward with tire iron; then retighten the bolt, allowing about one-half inch of "play" at the midpoint of the belt. If the belt is broken or missing and you don't have a spare, call for a tow truck.

- Inspect the face of the radiator. Paper, leaves, bugs or other debris may be sticking to it and restricting airflow. After you have cleared the blockage, you can continue driving.
- Feel around the water pump for dampness. (Make sure the engine is turned off first.) The pump is located behind the fan and fan pulley; use a rag to protect your hand. Any wetness means the pump may need replacing. Do not drive the car farther.

Bike buys: Different spokes, different folks

WASHINGTON (AP) — City trails and country roads are beckoning millions of Americans to the bike paths for fun and exercise, with many who haven't cycled since childhood buying new two-wheelers.

Would-be riders may be bewildered by the variety of bikes and options on sale, but picking the most suitable one needn't be complex.

There are different spokes for different folks — so to speak — so the answer is to analyze ahead of time how and where the bike will be used, the budget available and the types of equipment, such as seat and handlebars, desired.

Thinking about those things in advance will make it a lot easier to sort through the options at the bike shop.

If cost is a consideration, and it is for most people, the range is pretty wide. Bikes can be had from less than $100 to $2,000 or more, the Bicycle Manufacturers Association observes.

m

THE SIMPLE, old fashioned single-speed bike is usually the cheapest, with the price rising through the three-speed numbers to the lightweight many-speed racers.

So, the Bicycle Federation says, think about what kind of terrain the bike will be used on, and how long the rides will be.

People living in a relatively flat area like New York or Los Angeles, using bikes mostly for short trips on weekends, could be well satisfied with inexpensive single-speed or three-speed models.

On the other hand, riders in San Francisco or West Virginia or other spots with lots of steep roads are more likely to be happy with a 10-speed to help ease the strain of the hills.

An occasional recreational ride or trip to the convenience store, of course, requires a less sophisticated bike than longer rides over varied terrain.

The bike federation notes that riders can always trade up if their riding needs grow and they decide a more costly and complicated bike is in order.

ANOTHER FACTOR to consider before making a purchase is maintenance — the more complicated the bike, the more effort required to keep it in good operating condition. And more complicated machinery means more possibilities for malfunctions.

Folks who aren't handy will want to keep their bikes and equipment as simple as possible.

Arrival at a bike shop may still come as a shock to folks who haven't ridden in a while. The bikes don't look quite the same as in years past, what with narrow seats (they call them saddles now) and upside-down handlebars.

The so-called Maes-bend handlebars help cyclists lower their heads, increasing efficiency by reducing wind resistance. The narrow, hard seats are preferred by racers.

Both of these developments are only uncomfortable at first, riders get used to them, the Bicycle Federation insists.

Be that as it may, they also concede that riders who only want to take a spin around the neighborhood may be happier with old-fashioned touring handlebars and wider seats.

Don't be put off by salespeople spouting the merits of the "derailleur." That's just the device that allows a multi-speed bike to shift. Derailleur means gear-shift, in this case.

SHIFTING GEARS allows more efficient use of human-power in different situations — but whether the bike is one-speed, 3-speed, 10-speed or more, it only has the speed its rider can give it.

The term lightweight can also have a variety of meanings.

The bike manufacturers report that most lightweight bikes are between 25 and 30 pounds. Using extremely light alloys can cut this to 20 pounds or so, but that raises the price.

Brakes are another consideration — with pedal-operated coaster, or hand brakes, the two common options.

Coaster brakes are generally reliable and long-wearing. Hand-operated caliper brakes, usually found on the multi-speed models, can be too, although they may take a little getting used to.

Accessories must be considered and those depend on the desires of the biker.

A light biking helmet is very desirable from a safety standpoint, as well as a light and reflectors. Other options will vary by need, such as a child carrier, carrying rack and so forth. People who want these items need to make sure the bike they buy is suitable for the attachments.

FINALLY, THE League of American Wheelmen urges bikers to take along a basic emergency kit on their travels. The league says this should contain a tire pump, patch kit, spare tube, tire levers, small screwdriver, adjustable wrench and, just in case, bus fare.

Auto 'chop shops' practice sophisticated car theft

Associated Press

It was a warm summer night when a Colorado teenager named Tom borrowed his big brother's 1976 Corvette and went for a ride in the countryside north of Denver. On a two-lane stretch of the roadway, Tom tried to pass another car at high speed and lost control.

The Corvette flew off the road and bounced down the side of a steep canyon into the streambed below.

Tom's life ended at that moment — but the crushed yellow Corvette would be born again. The following names have been changed, but the story is true ... and typical. The insurance scam happens repeatedly and is one way thieves regularly rip off America's auto insurance companies — and therefore their policyholders — to the tune of more than $4 billion a year, according to Friendly Exchange magazine.

Tom's brother was promptly paid the full value of the $7,400 car by his insurance company, which sold the wreck at a salvage auction. The parts dealer who bought it was secure in his $900 investment. He knew the wreckage contained a small metal plate — the Vehicle Identification Number (VIN) — worth a lot of money. All he needed to do was wait a few months, until Peter T., a young man he hadn't met yet, got in a bind for cash.

Peter, the owner of a yellow 1976 Corvette, was late with his car payments. "I'm about to lose my car to the repo man," he told a buddy.

"No problem," said the friend. "Just leave it at the shopping center where I can steal it. Report the theft to the sheriff. The car won't be found. Then your insurance company will pay you full value."

And that's what happened: Peter's fancy car disappeared, and his insurance company paid him and his mortgage-holder $8,000 for the loss.

Peter's friend drove the hot car directly to a shop operated by Felix M., and collected $1,500 for an hour's work. To auto thieves, Felix's place was known as a "chop shop."

Felix knew Peter's car was coming. The day before he'd paid a parts dealer $1,350 for a totally wrecked yellow Corvette. Felix could afford the price because the wreck held the magic number needed to make the stolen Corvette salable. It was the VIN from the car that had carried Tom to his death six months earlier.

Felix removed the VIN plate from the stolen Corvette. He knew the plate would betray him if it were checked on the state's computer. Then he replaced it with the VIN plate from Tom's wreck, secured a Utah title for the reborn Corvette, duly used it to reregister in Colorado, and the stolen car was laundered.

Things moved smoothly. Felix sold the Corvette for $6,000 — more than twice his investment — to a used-car dealer, who resold it to a franchised Chevrolet dealer. Every time the doctored car changed hands, someone made money. The Chevy dealer found a private buyer who paid $9,800.

The proud new owner, William N., enjoyed the flashy car and kept making his $300 monthly payments for more than a year. Then William's world collapsed. A stranger appeared displaying a badge that identified him as a Denver detective, and took the yellow Corvette away.

Felix's chop shop had been under investigation, and the trail finally had led to William. His title to the car was invalid. The law says a thief cannot pass a valid title, even to a good-faith purchaser. The car really belonged to the insurance company that had paid Peter for his loss.

A grand jury indicted Peter, his buddy, Felix, and several others 2½ years after Tom went for a drive in his brother's car.

Vacationers warned to take precautions

Hearst News Service

An overflowing mailbox could be an invitation to burglars.

That's a warning from the U.S. Postal Service, which suggests that before you take off for vacation, you contact your post office and have your mail held or forwarded for a specified time.

Travelers can arrange for first-class mail to follow them for up to 18 months, 60 days for second-class publications and 12 months for third-class and fourth-class items. With the exception of fourth-class parcels, there is no charge for forwarding.

Consumers can make arrangements by filling out a change of address order Form 3575, which includes beginning and ending dates. The form is available at any post office.

The alternative to having your mail held or forwarded, the post office points out, is an overflowing mailbox that could be damaged by vandals, animals or weather conditions. It is also a clear signal that no one is home.

Preventing burglars from discovering no one is home is also the focus of a free leaflet published by the Insurance Information Institute, a trade organization.

The institute said you could lessen the chances of a burglary by securing your home before leaving and by creating the impression that someone was home. Here's how:

- Leave blinds open in their usual position.
- Lower the sound of your telephone bell so its ring can't be heard outside.
- Arrange to have your lawn mowed, and ask a friend to pick up "throwaway" newspapers and circulars.
- Use automatic timers to turn lights on and off at appropriate times. Also consider connecting a radio to a timer.
- Don't leave extra keys around the mailbox, doormat or flower pots. Change your locks if your keys are lost or stolen.
- Put large amounts of cash, jewelery and other valuables in a safe deposit box at the bank.
- Don't advertise your vacation in your local newspaper. Burglars could be among the readers.

It's also a good idea, says the institute, to make an inventory of your personal belongings before leaving on vacation.

For a free copy of "How to Keep Your Family Burglar Unhappy," call the institute toll-free at 1-800-221-4954.

Foreign auto insurance laws different

New York Times News Service

Travelers planning to drive their own cars to Mexico or Canada this summer should be aware that insurance laws in those countries differ from those in the United States.

Getting in an accident in Mexico without special Mexican automobile insurance, for example, could land an American driver in jail.

And a motorist who drives in Canada without some way to prove financial responsibility, risks having the car impounded or driving privileges suspended in an accident.

DEAR ABBY

Young mother's discipline abusive

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday while grocery shopping, I witnessed a young mother screaming at her son to hurry up and choose between a Twinkie and a Ding Dong. The child was so frightened he couldn't decide. Instead of waiting, she grabbed him by his hair and whipped his head back! He started crying and fell to the floor. She reached down, pulled the little fellow to his feet, then slapped him as hard as she could and whipped his head back again. Needless to say, the child ended up with nothing.

I noticed that four or five other shoppers had witnessed this cruel scene and appeared as disgusted as I was.

Why didn't one of us do something? A part of me said, "Stay out of it — it's none of your business," and another part of me said, "That woman is abusing that child; you should intervene."

What should I have done? — WITNESS IN HUNTINGTON BEACH

DEAR WITNESS: It would have been appropriate to have quietly approached the young mother and in a very kind and non-judgmental way expressed concern for her: "You must be very tired, impatient and under a lot of pressure to have overreacted as you did. Please discuss this with your physician instead of taking it out on the little fellow."

DEAR ABBY: I need to know something about homosexuals, and I can't ask anyone I know for fear of exposing my husband.

We have been married for 25 years, and in all that time I have never suspected him of homosexual behavior. I've suspected a couple of his friends, but never him.

My husband has had ulcerative proctitis for the last 20 years. Yesterday I mentioned this to my friend and she said, "Oh, that's a homosexual disease." This left me very upset and suspicious of my husband, and I need some answers before this totally destroys my marriage.

Please ask your medical experts if ulcerative proctitis is a homosexual disease. — NAGGING DOUBTS
m

DEAR NAGGING: I consulted Dr. William C. Bernstein, senior consultant in colon and rectal surgery at the University of Minnesota Hospitals, and he assured me that ulcerative proctitis is NOT a homosexual disease.

For further reassurance, you should discuss the matter of your husband's physical condition with his physician. And questions concerning your husband's sexual activities should be addressed to your husband.

DEAR ABBY: "Afraid to Love" (age 15) asked when she'd know she was ready to go to bed with her boyfriend. He was 16, and had been pressuring her.

You replied: "You will be ready when you are so sure you will not have to ask anyone."

My answer would have been: "You'll know you are ready to go to bed together when you can openly discuss what methods of birth control you will use, and what action you will take, should you become pregnant." Sign me ... TWENTY-FIVE AND STILL NOT READY

DEAR TWENTY-FIVE: Thank you. Your answer was better than mine.

(Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Sulfite labeling questioned

Hearst News Service

To sulfite and label, or not to sulfite at all. That is the question facing the food industry pending a Food and Drug Administration proposal to label foods containing sulfites.

Sulfites have come under scrutiny in recent years as a result of allergic reactions among a portion of those who suffer from asthma. Sulfites are used on dried fruits, in wine and on produce in restaurant salad bars to prevent discoloration, among other things.

A response to the growing concern about sulfites, the FDA's proposal nonetheless is drawing fire from one scientific group, the Institute of Food Technologists, an association of food science professors. The IFT contends the proposal's limit is too low to be measured accurately.

IFT food scientists, in a summary report, endorse the FDA's labeling approach as a better alternative than ceasing to use sulfites. The IFT, however, says the FDA's proposed limit of 10 parts per million is too low.

Dr. Richard F. Matthews of the University of Florida explained that a current process to test for sulfites in foods is too complicated and not exact enough to test for a quantity as small as 10 ppm. The process, called the Mornier-Williams method, involves distilling sulfite, known chemically as SO_2, from the food and then checking its chemical identity by the use of a reactive agent.

Usually, Matthews said, the product on which sulfites are used is acidic or has been treated with vinegar, and so some acid can be distilled in the process, resulting in a false positive for sulfite.

"Now at least everybody admits there's a problem," Matthews said. "For a while they wouldn't even admit that.

"Some people feel that for some products, like dried fruit and dehydrated potatoes, it would be hard to find a substitute for sulfites," he said. "My personal view is that sulfites should be eliminated from all salad bar lettuce. I can understand dried fruit — it's a different product — but if they made salads fresh daily from wholehead lettuce, the way we do at home, they wouldn't need sulfites."

Choosing right veterinarian for pets takes time

Associated Press

Sooner or later, most pet owners call on the services of certain professionals.

Whether it's a veterinarian, boarding kennel or groomer, the best time to find good ones is before your pet needs them, suggests Better Homes and Gardens.

To start your search, begin by getting recommendations from people you trust: neighbors, friends and relatives who are devoted pet owners; members of cat fanciers' groups, and of breed and obedience clubs. Veterinarians can sometimes suggest boarding kennels and groomers, and vice versa.

Generally, breeders who raise and sell dogs and cats can recommend good veterinarians. But beware — some breeders are so cost conscious they may be satisfied with marginal care. (Breeders usually groom their own animals and also may operate boarding kennels as a sideline.)

Besides you, the most important person in your pet's life is likely to be your veterinarian. Start narrowing your recommendations with phone calls, then follow up with visits to veterinarians you're really interested in.

Ask the veterinarian what kind of animals are treated. Generally, small-animal vets are more knowledgeable about pets than veterinarians whose practices include farm animals and such. But if you have several different kinds of pets, you'll probably want a vet who can care for all of them.

Ask if the office is open on Saturdays and-or in the evenings. Is a veterinarian always on call in case of emergencies? Who handles patients when the veterinarian leaves town? Are clients always permitted to see the veterinarian, rather than just a technician or assistant?

The standard fee for an office call is a good reference for comparisons. Does the veterinarian give estimates of treatment costs? Does the clinic offer a prepaid pet-care or pet-insurance plan?

On your first visit, ask for a tour of the facility. Are reception and treatment areas clean? Animal odors shouldn't be overpowering. Is the office staff courteous and helpful?

Are you comfortable with the veterinarian? Does he or she inspire your confidence? Can you communicate? Does the veterinarian listen to what you have to say?

Check the office walls for credentials from an accredited college of veterinary medicine and a state license to practice. If the veterinarian has been practicing for some time, does he or she participate in continuing education programs (professional seminars and conferences)? Consider memberships in professional organizations a plus.

If there's a question about diagnosis or treatment, does the vet seek second opinions? Are cases referred to specialists?

When pet and veterinarian first meet, the vet should give your pet a thorough physical and compile a complete health history. How does your pet respond to the vet? Are all those dealing with your pet caring and well-trained? Most pets don't enjoy going to the vet, but the visit shouldn't be a trauma.

Full-time boarding kennels are generally your best bet. Unlike dog and cat breeders and vets who board pets as a sideline, boarding kennels' primary business is boarding pets.

When you call a boarding kennel, find out during what hours on what days you can drop off and pick up pets. Also, specify the kinds and sizes of your pets. Rates vary from one animal to the next. How are boarding days figured? How late can you pick up your pet without paying for another day?

Call for an appointment to visit the kennel. (If you're turned down, take your business elsewhere.)

Estate sales draw browsers

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — They began lining up early on the steps of the old clapboard bungalow. The browsers and hunters seemed in good spirits as they waited in turn to enter the home of its late resident.

Almost 500 people filed through that weekend — examining the solid cherry bedroom set, the hand-rubbed mahogany buffet, the linen, the lace and the china.

And if the browsers didn't find just what they wanted, or somebody else bid too much for it, there was always next week. There would always be more estate sales, as long as people lived and died in Champaign-Urbana.

Barbara Peckham, who administered that sale, has held estate sales in the area for 14 years

"There is nothing very nice about having to dispose of your family's heirlooms," she said.

"It is very distressing to have people going through your things, but by the same token, how else are you going to handle it if you don't want it?"

Peckham uses a "tag-sale" system. You can offer the appraised value marked on a tag attached to the item and take it away immediately or make a lower offer.

There are 50 to 100 estate sales a year in Champaign-Urbana, say area auctioneers. An average home sale will net between $3,000 and $5,000. It is usually the executor of an estate or an attorney representing the heirs who initiates the sale.

In some cases, though, the people who owned the pieces most of their lives will authorize the sale, such as when they retire and move to smaller quarters.

"That's more traumatic than when there has been a death in the family," Peckham says. "It's a home they've lived in many, many years and raised their families in. All the furniture that maybe they've inherited from their parents or things they purchased early in their lives are there and they have to give all this up."

Seemingly, anything can be found at estate and moving sales, from old photograph albums to old Packards. But it is heavy, original hardwood furniture that sells best, local auctioneers agree.

Dale Rawdin of Rawdin Auction Service says furniture was finished and joined better in the early years of the century.

"Drawers, for example, were dovetail construction," he said. "The locks and pulls were better and the drawers were dust-proof."

An anomaly of estate sales is that heirs often will bid on furniture and collectables that were left to them in the first place.

Rawdin says that happens when the deceased has left no guidelines on how to disperse the household effects and the heirs cannot agree on how to divide the property.

Then they may elect to sell the items and divide the cash instead. If one heir wants an item more than another, he or she will have to bid on it like anybody else.

But Peckham said the differences in opinion over how to dispose of an estate can lead to open dispute.

"I have actually canceled a sale in the middle because the family has gotten into such a fight," she said.

Capital of costume jewelry

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — The capital of the nation's smallest state is one of the world's biggest costume jewelry manufacturing centers.

Rhode Island produces 80 percent of the costume jewelry — or fashion jewelry, as the industry calls inexpensive to medium-priced adornments — made in America. Concentrated in Providence and its suburbs are 900 jewelry firms employing 24,400 workers with an annual payroll of $350 million.

Among the products turned out by Providence's factories are earrings, bracelets, necklaces, pins, pendants, rings, chains, cuff links and tie tacks.

"Jewelry is the largest manufacturing sector in Rhode Island," said Bill Parsons, assistant director of the state's Department of Economic Development. "We ship 1 million pounds of costume jewelry a week out of state. It is a $1.5 billion industry for Rhode Island."

Rhode Island has been the heart and soul of costume jewelry for nearly two centuries. In 1794, Nehemiah Dodge — considered the father of the industry — developed a revolutionary process of plating base metal with gold in his small Providence shop.

A number of other companies quickly grew up around Dodge's factory, using the techniques that he pioneered. Today, the concentration of jewelry producers has expended to Massachusetts towns bordering Rhode Island — but nearly all are located within a 30-minute drive from Providence.

MOST OF Rhode Island's jewelry manufacturers continue to be small, family-owned and-operated businesses with 25 to 100 employees. But there are also many large, well-known companies such as Trifari, Monet, Jewel Co. of America, Kienhofer & Moog, Anson, Bulova, Gorham, Swank and Speidel.

Costume jewelry represents 40 percent of all jewelry made in America. The other 60 percent is more expensive jewelry of precious metals and stones, primarily produced in New York, New Jersey, California and Florida.

The 1980s have been booming for fashion jewelry. But the biggest beneficiaries have not been U.S. manufacturers. "At a time when fashion jewelry is selling like hot cakes, we're getting squeezed out by foreign imports," lamented Charles Rice, a spokesman for the 2,400-member Manufacturing Jewelers & Silversmiths of America, headquartered here.

Imports have made serious inroads in the last eight years. More than 8,000 jewelry employees have lost their jobs and 300 companies have folded since 1978.

According to the MJSA, U.S. sales of all types of jewelry increased 40 percent in the last four years, with the total value (manufacturers' price) increasing to $6.4 billion from $4.5 billion. The value of jewelry imports, however, increased 83 percent in the same period — to $1.9 billion from $1 billion.

American Ring Co. and Excell Mfg. Co. are examples of two family-owned firms that have successfully coped with the challenge from foreign imports.

Renato Calandrelli, 59, a native of Naples, Italy, came to this country when he was 18. He worked for minimum wages for a tool-and-die-company until Jan. 21, 1973, when he decided that he would try to make it on his own by launching American Ring Co. in East Providence.

"THAT FIRST year I was the company's sole employee. The company grossed $24,000 from the sale of 2,000 rings," Calandrelli recalled. Last year, he said, American Ring employed 180 workers and had gross sales in excess of $11 million.

"Competition from the Orient is fierce. It is a constant worry," Calandrelli admitted.

His company is a style-setter. It produces 80,000 rings a week, most of which retail at $15 to $20. "Every three months we introduce new styles," he explained. "That is one way to beat them (imports). I spend between $200,000 and $300,000 a year on new ideas, developing new models. I have modernized my plant for higher productivity.

"Foreign producers don't know what the American public wants. They have to follow us. We establish trends (that) they copy."

Fred Kilguss, 75, chairman of the board of Excell Mfg. Co., one of the nation's largest jewelry chain companies, told how his firm took a different approach to counter the loss of business to Italian imports.

"The Italians came out with a new fashion chain that became popular overnight in the United States," Kilguss said. "We were not making that kind of chain. Our sales plummeted.

"We could have gone belly-up like several chain companies in Providence did, but we climbed on the bandwagon. The Italians not only manufacture chain but sell the machinery to make chains. We bought the Italian machinery."

Cruise ship docks after fire

By RICHARD COLE

MIAMI (AP) — The sooty but seaworthy Emerald Seas docked at the port of Miami today with 970 passengers after a shipboard fire that hospitalized 15 other passengers and two crew members.

After inspecting the ship this morning, Bernard Chabot, the cruise company president, said the fire started in a large storage locker and then a nearby oxygen tank blew up.

"That was the cause of the explosion," he said. Twenty-six cabins suffered smoke damage, and four will remain closed when the vessel embarks Friday on another Bahamas cruise, he said.

Chabot added there had been "very, very few cancellations, if any" from passengers booked on future excursions aboard the Eastern Cruise Lines ship.

Hundreds of high-spirited passengers leaned over the stern's railing answering in unison the questions posed by dozens of reporters and photographers on the dock.

"Yes," they shouted when asked if they were treated well. But the answers were mixed when asked if they would go an another cruise after going through Wednesday's fire.

The injured passengers were airlifted to Miami by U.S. Coast Guard helicopters while their shipmates spent a few hours on Little Stirrup Cay in the Bahamas, an island owned by the cruise line.

All passengers were evacuated from the Emerald Seas when a smoky fire sparked storeroom explosions Wednesday morning just after the 623-foot liner anchored off the island.

The fire aborted the planned four-day cruise and company officials said passengers would be offered a 50 percent refund or a free pass for a future cruise.

Passengers and crew returned to the ship Wednesday evening for the trip back to Miami.

The ship was only slightly damaged by the fire and explosions, which reportedly could be heard as far as two miles away. Several portholes were broken and the edges of lower ports were discolored with soot, but company officials said most equipment was functioning normally.

Chabot said cleaning chemicals inside the storage locker caused the dense smoke. He said the fire erupted at 9:20 a.m. and that passengers began evacuating at 10 a.m.

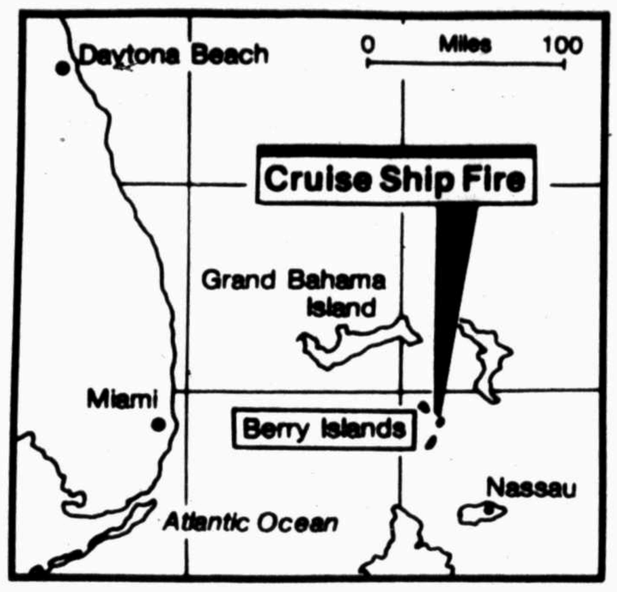
Twenty shipboard firefighters were quickly at the scene and extinguished the blaze within 20 minutes, Chabot added.

Asked why it took 40 minutes to begin the evacuation, Chabot said, "They (crew members) were probably very busy fighting the fire."

The signal to abandon ship wasn't sounded but an emergency signal was given, followed by a fire alarm and several announcements for passengers to assemble on the top deck, he said.

"I am satisfied that the bulk of the crew members did exactly what they were supposed to do," Chabot said.

Passengers said the evacuation was orderly but the initial smoke and explosions had caused panic, especially below decks.



AP Laserphoto Map

"I heard two loud explosions, back-to-back. People started to panic. They were screaming, trying to get their families together," said Glenn Powell, a 21-year-old student from New Bern, N.C.

The safety drill at the beginning of the cruise eased the evacuation, said Bill Peacock, 29, of Raleigh, N.C. He said the crew announced the evacuation over the ship's speakers and calmly loaded passengers into lifeboats. From there they were taken less than a mile to Little Stirrup Cay.

All the injured were in stable condition. They suffered from smoke inhalation, and one crewmember also complained of a back injury.

The ship was in the Berry Islands, about 50 miles north of Nassau in the Bahamas and 130 miles east of Miami, when the fire broke out, authorities said. Chabot said the crew extinguished the flames quickly, but the Coast Guard said it took several hours to bring the blaze under control.

The 24,458-ton Emerald Seas, built in 1944 and refurbished in 1985, sails on three- and four-night cruises from Miami to the Bahamas, with a stop on privately owned Little Stirrup Cay.

Ex-FBI agent moved to Minnesota prison

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — Richard W. Miller, the first FBI agent ever found guilty of espionage, was moved to a small federal prison facility in Minnesota Wednesday to serve two life prison sentences.

Miller, 49, was flown to the Federal Medical Center in Rochester, Minn., about 70 miles south of Minneapolis. He had been held at the Terminal Island federal prison in Los Angeles.

The pre-dawn move brought a protest from Miller's estranged wife, Paula, who charged that officials at Terminal Island had denied Miller a chance to say goodbye to his children.

"I went there Monday with six of our eight children to say goodbye and I begged them to let us see him," Paula Miller said. "They told me he wouldn't be gone for at least a week. I was afraid of this very thing," she added. "Richard warned me not to believe what they were telling me. I should have known it would happen."

A prison official at Rochester described the facility as a "medium security" institution opened two years ago with an inmate population of 305.

Other sources said the Rochester facility houses a high number of white-collar and non-violent criminals and is considered a relatively safe location for Miller, who has expressed concerns about his safety in prison because of his FBI background.

Miller's lawyers, Joel Levine and Stanley Greenberg, said they had expected Miller to be moved out of California for security reasons soon, but that they had no idea he would be moved Wednesday morning.

Lawmaker wants troops to help fight smuggling

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Dallas Rep. John Bryant, a Democrat known to be a civil libertarian, wants to call out the armed forces to stem drug traffic along the Texas-Mexico border.

While it wasn't his intention, this position makes Bryant an ally of vigilantes who took it upon themselves in July to stop suspected illegal aliens crossing the Mexico border into Arizona. The paramilitary group said they acted because they believe the illegals often carry drugs into the U.S. and local and federal law officers can't cope.

The vigilantes, members of Civilian Materiel Assistance, want the government to place troops across the Southern U.S. border. They point out that troops are guarding the border between North and South Korea but can't "protect" U.S. borders.

Bryant has introduced legislation that would require the Defense Department to provide military equipment, including radar and manpower to help stop drug smuggling when requested by state law enforcement officials. And it specifically prohibits paramilitary groups from taking the law into their own hands.

Current law permits military action to locate drug traffic in limited circumstances but servicemen cannot actually interdict drugs.

Bryant can't estimate how much it might cost to enlist the military in drug fighting, but he points out that the armed forces have been sent to help Bolivia destroy cocaine processing plants.

At a Dallas news conference last week, Bryant was flanked by Police Officers Association members from Brownsville, Fort Worth and Mesquite as well as Dallas area officers who said they would welcome help from the military.

Bryant said drug smugglers typically fly across the border at altitudes of 500 to 1,000 feet, but right now radar observation of the Rio Grande is so inadequate that thousands of planes flying below 15,000 feet, carrying tons of narcotics, can enter the country undetected. There is no radar surveillance between Candelaria and Del Rio. "A 747 could fly in unnoticed," he said. "This is unacceptable and it must be stopped now."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen recently introduced a bill requiring the federal government to hold dependence on oil imports to 50 percent of demand.

For any year in which imports are projected to exceed 50 percent of demand the president would have 90 days to develop a plan for reducing dependence. He could recommend an oil import fee, encourage energy conservation, provide incentives to domestic producers and boost use of renewable energy, among other actions.

Oil imports as a percentage of total oil consumption have jumped from 27 percent last year to 39 percent in June while domestic oil production in the first half of this year was down 140,000 barrels a day compared to the same period in 1985.

"American consumers and oil producers are in OPEC's gunsights," Bentsen said. "My legislation will establish a national energy policy designed to minimize the risks of disruption by OPEC." Since last fall, when Saudi Arabia decided to flood the world oil markets, oil prices have plunged 60 percent.

The Energy Department is inviting small business firms to submit proposals for the Small Business Innovation Research program. Winners could receive up to $50,000 to explore their ideas, and those with the best ideas could get another $500,000.

The program is intended to strengthen the role of small, innovative firms in areas of research and development.

Firms with strong research capabilities in science and engineering in any of 28 technical areas are encouraged to participate.

The Energy Department will issue its fiscal 19876 program solicitation on Aug. 15. For copies of this solicitation, small businessess — with 500 employees or fewer — are invited to write to: SBIR Program Manager, U.S. Department of Energy, Washington, D.C. 20545.

Texas law imposes the death penalty for police killers, but 17 states and the District of Columbia do not. "This is outrageous," says Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, who is cosponsoring a bill by Rep. Mario Biaggi, a former New York City policeman, to encourage those states and the D.C. government to change their laws.

Their legislation would withhold certain federal funds from states that do not allow their criminal courts to impose a death sentence on those convicted of killing police officers.

NATION IN BRIEF

Soldier killed during maneuvers

TWENTYNINE PALMS, Calif. (AP) — One soldier was killed and two were injured in demolition training Wednesday during the "Gallant Eagle '86" military exercise, a spokesman said.

Details on the accident, which happened about 90 miles southeast of Salt Lake City, Utah, were not immediately available, said spokesman U.S. Air Force Maj. John E. Meyer.

The soldier, who was not identified, was killed at the Dugway proving grounds in Utah, Meyer said from the command headquarters in this desert community.

One soldier was treated at a hospital and released, and another was hospitalized in stable condition, said Meyer.

The maneuvers taking place across the Southwest involve 35,000 troops of all four armed services who are practicing desert warfare.

Reporter won't get to cover Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — A correspondent for an Israeli newspaper lost his bid to cover Vice President George Bush's visit to Jordan when officials of the Arab country refused to allow him to join other reporters traveling with Bush.

Jordanian Prime Minister Said al-Rifai told U.S. Ambassador Paul Boeker Wednesday that if Wolf Blitzer, an American who is Washington correspondent for The Jerusalem Post, tried to enter Jordan he would be expelled.

Bush aides had initially invited Blitzer to accompany the vice president on his Mideast trip and said he would get an exclusive interview. But the vice president's aides later bumped Blitzer from the trip, saying Jordanian officials had objected. It was after the incident was publicized that arrangements had been made for Blitzer to go to Jordan after all.

Unbuckled riders to be ticketed

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Drivers won't be held responsible if front seat passengers don't wear seat belts under Louisiana's new law, but the unbuckled riders can be ticketed, even if they are children.

Law enforcement officers have been issuing warnings during July for failure to wear seat belts. Beginning Aug. 1, violators will be subject to $25 fines.

"A juvenile traffic violator (over age 5) is subject to the Juvenile Code. Failure to utilize a seat belt by a juvenile passenger has to be designated as a traffic violation," said an attorney general's opinion.

A violation would be handled in juvenile court or by a juvenile traffic referee, said Assistant Attorney General Barbara Rutledge.

Accident doesn't spill material

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — A truck carrying a small amount of radioactive material overturned, but no spill or contamination resulted, authorities said.

James Harshbarger, 49, of Peoria, Ill., was in satisfactory condition early today at a hospital here for treatment of injuries sustained when his truck overturned late Wednesday.

Officials cleared about 40 motorists from the area after learning that radioactive material was aboard, said Lt. Rob Brown, spokesman for the Boone County Fire Protection District.

Firefighters used Geiger counters to locate the material, which was stored in a box surrounded by about 30 pounds of lead.

The material, which was being transported to St. Louis from a hospital in North Platte, Neb., was taken to the University of Missouri for safekeeping, fire officials said.
