51-mph winds whip through Permian Basin

Stormy weather

A foaming mass of wind, dust and storm clouds swirls on Midland's horizon as it approaches the Tall City. The storm hit about 6:30 p.m. Monday, and about the same time a funnel cloud was sighted between Goldsmith and Gardendale. An unconfirmed tornado was also reported west of Odessa on Interstate Highway 20.

From Staff Reports

In the severest weather this spring, gusts up to 51 miles per hour ripped through Midland Regional Airport Monday evening while funnel clouds danced around the Permian Basin doing high-kicks. Before the storm moved on, 13 trailer houses south of Odessa had been overturned by high winds.

A tornado warning was issued at 6:28 p.m. by the National Weather Service at the airport following a report from a weather spotter of a tornado sighted between Gardendale and Goldsmith. The tornado was traveling southeast at 45 mph, according to a NWS spokesman. Thirty minutes later, the Odessa Police Department reported an unconfirmed tornado four miles west of Odessa on Interstate 20, the NWS spokesman said this morning.

At least two persons were injured when high winds tore through a trailer park located south of Odessa, according to a deputy with the Ector County Sheriff's Department.

Deputy R.J. Yearwood said 13 trailer houses were overturned at Pleasant Farms, located 12 miles south of Odessa on South County Road 385.

Yearwood said he could not confirm the damage was from a tornado.

According to a spokeswoman at Odessa Medical Center, two persons were brought to the hospital with injuries suffered "during high winds" last night.

Sandra Jordan, 34, was treated for minor lacerations and Alvin Hicks, 72, was treated for abrasions to the left arm. Both were released.

Although a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms remains in the forecast for tonight, the NWS spokesman said he was not expecting any to be severe.

Skies are expected to be partly cloudy Wednesday with temperatures dipping into the upper 50s tonight and climbing into the lower 80s Wednesday.

Winds should be easterly at 5-15 mph tonight, shifting to southerly and southeasterly at 15-20 mph Wednesday.

The NWS reported 0.23 of an inch of rain was received overnight, bringing the monthly total to 0.5 of an inch and the yearly amount to 2.17 inches.

Parts of Midland reported up to half an inch of rain while area towns also reported rain and high winds.

Monday's high of 93 was eight degrees cooler than the record high of 101, set for that date in 1977. The overnight low of 49 was four degrees warmer than the record low of 45, set in 1937.

Lawmakers have fun in session's final hours

AUSTIN (AP) — Weary lawmakers who worked late into the night to finish important state business before the end of the session may be surprised today to learn that they moved the state capital to Godley.

Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Godley, asked his colleagues Monday to approve his resolution making his hometown the capital-for-a-day this Saturday — the town's 100th birthday.

Gov. Mark White, who visited the chamber shortly after the resolution was adopted, laughed when he was informed of the change and said, "I guess I'll have to go there."

When White had visited the House chamber earlier, he and Speaker Gib Lewis were virtually ignored by the festivities surrounding the real celebrity of the hour.

Joe Wagner's introduction required three speeches.

"He is known in Dallas and Dime Box, from Corpus to Cut'n'Shoot," said Rep. Alex Short, D-Texarkana. "His oratory has been known to make grown men cry. His voice can calm the raging sea — and break glass as far away as Georgetown.

"I give you Joseph C. 'Joe the Doorkeeper' Wagner."

Wagner, a retired Air Force colonel, is in charge of admittance to the House floor.

The House reading clerks had arranged the hoopla as a send-off for Wagner, who said he is retiring after 18 years.

The clerks were not the only House employees who made sport.

The House Study Group, ribbed lawmakers with a tongue-in-cheek "Daily Floor Report" containing an analysis of only one piece of legislation — "HB 38-24-36, by Patronella, Board of Ecdysiast Examiners."

"Ecdysiast activities would be permitted only in specific locations," the report explained.

"Ecdysiast," by the way, is derived from the Greek. It means "stripteaser."

Reagan pledges to reduce deficits

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — President Reagan, having guided the summit through economic differences, is joining other leaders of industrialized democracies in a fresh pledge to reduce high interest rates and large budget deficits.

Reagan, preparing to return today to the White House, said the ninth annual economic summit had been "as fruitful and as useful and enjoyable as we had all hoped."

In a toast to his guests at a state dinner Monday night, he took brief note of the differences that were sometimes aired in the talks.

"Our individual perceptions about particular issues may sometimes differ; but gatherings such as this give us an opportunity to work together on a regular basis to address the problems we share."

Despite European concerns about U.S. interest rates and a dispute over the wording of a statement on arms policy, the summit — which began Saturday — broke up on a harmonious note with the president reading a declaration on economic recovery.

"We must all focus on achieving and maintaining low inflation, and reducing interest rates from their present too-high levels," the president recited.

"We renew our commitment to reduce structural budget deficits, in particular, by limiting the growth of expenditures," the declaration said.

Reagan was flanked by French President Francois Mitterrand, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, Italian Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani, and Gaston Thorn, head of the European Common Market. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher left early to return to campaign for the June 9 parliamentary elections.

Trudeau and other leaders praised Reagan for his handling of the summit.

From the outset, the president had insisted that the talks be more informal than those at previous summits. He didn't want a rigid agenda or a final statement prepared in advance of the meeting.

"He was taking a very big gamble that we could have an unstructured summit and still produce results," said Trudeau. "And I must say I had to congratulate him for having won that gamble."

The 10-point summit declaration also called for greater stability in monetary exchange rates and raised the possibility of an international monetary conference in future years.

It urged a halt in protectionist trade barriers and expressed concern about the debt problems of the developing nations. It said economic relations with the Soviet Union "should be compatible with our security interests."

At one point, the allies set aside their economic talks to discuss arms control in what Secretary of State George P. Shultz called "a free-flowing, honest-to-God exchange."

They eventually agreed on an arms control statement supporting NATO policy, promising to pursue negotiations while maintaining "sufficient military strength to deter attack."

Still, it was the economic talks — the purpose of the summit — that drew the most discussion.

The foreign leaders apparently presented a united front in expressing their concern about the U.S. interest rates and enormous budget deficits.

Kohl observed that was "an important experience for our American colleagues."

U.S. leaders were forced, Kohl said, to see themselves "as being clearly opposed by everyone from the Japanese to the Canadians to us Europeans and that will certainly not fail to have an impact on American policy."

Indeed, a senior Reagan administration source said the talks "will reinforce our determination to try to do something about interest rates and whatever it is that is causing interest rates to stay high."

The U.S. prime rate has fallen from its December 1980 peak of 21½ percent to 10½ percent — still high by historical standards. And the nation's budget deficit is expected to reach about $200 billion this year.

The official, who would only discuss the summit on condition he not be named, indicated the United States would take a fresh look at the problem, including budget deficits and the growth in money supply.

Politburo's oldest member dies

Arvid Y. Pelshe

MOSCOW (AP) — Arvid Yanovich Pelshe, a veteran of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution and the oldest member of the ruling Politburo, has died at age 84.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Pelshe died Sunday and had been suffering from lung cancer and heart problems for some time.

Soviet sources said he would probably lie in state today and be given a state funeral in Red Square before being buried in the Kremlin wall.

On Monday, Tass published an obituary signed by Communist Party chief Yuri V. Andropov and other Soviet leaders. It praised Pelshe as a "prominent figure of the Communist Party and Soviet state" and "one of the oldest representatives of the glorious cohort of Bolsheviks-Leninists."

Pelshe "gave all his strength, rich experience and knowledge to the selfless service" of building Communism, the obituary said, praising him for his contribution to party theory and organization.

Pelshe was the last surviving revolutionary to hold a key Kremlin job, although other veterans of the revolution survive, including Vyacheslav M. Molotov, 93, a former foreign minister who lost out in a power struggle with Nikita S. Khrushchev, and Georgi M. Malenkov, 80, who briefly served as premier after Stalin's death.

The death of Pelshe, who helped Stalin push through violent agricultural collectivization in the 1930s and supported the Soviet bloc invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968, leaves only 11 members on the Politburo and further opens the way for change in the Soviet leadership.

The Politburo had 14 members until the 1982 death of Communist ideologist Mikhail A. Suslov. Its membership was further depleted last November by the forced retirement of Andrei P. Kirilenko and the death of Soviet President and Communist Party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev. Since then, only one man had been appointed to Politburo, the former KGB chief of Azerbaijan, Geidar A. Aliev.

The vacancies give the 68-year-old Andropov a chance to promote supporters and strengthen his hand on the secretive ruling Politburo.

Western and Soviet sources have reported power struggles within the Politburo in recent months, with most accounts centering on Andropov and the man Brezhnev reportedly favored as his successor, 71-year-old Konstantin U. Chernenko.

Andropov has a chance to fill at least one vacant slot on the Politburo next month.

A session of the Supreme Soviet, the nation's parliament, is scheduled for June 16. The assemblies are traditionally preceded by a plenary session of the Communist Party's 300-plus member Central Committee, which endorses all personnel shifts in the top hierarchy.

Leaders voice arms control feelings

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Seven leaders, all with their own political pressures and points of view, resolved under President Reagan's leadership to pursue arms control while maintaining "sufficient military strength to deter attack."

But before they found common ground, their diplomatic cool gave way to what Secretary of State George P. Shultz called "a free-flowing, honest-to-God exchange."

Reagan, bracing his partners, cautioned there would be "grinning in the Kremlin" if they did not endorse U.S. arms control policy, according to accounts of the weekend's tough bargaining.

His most formidable foes in the behind-the-scenes bickering were France's President Francois Mitterrand and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

Mitterrand, facing a severe recession at home, wanted the summit to concentrate on finding solutions to economic problems.

Trudeau has staked out an international role of trying to bridge East and West. He also is mindful of the strong anti-nuclear feelings in Canada and the demonstrations over testing of U.S. cruise missiles in Alberta.

Challenging Reagan to put a greater emphasis on disarmament, Trudeau admonished his fellow summiteers that "we should be busting our asses for peace."

He confirmed an even saltier version of the remarks to reporters on Monday and explained: "I made it emphatic. I wouldn't care to subscribe to that language in such a distinguished audience as this, but with relaxed politicians I don't have to be as uptight as some of your press people are."

Shultz said "everybody made strong statements. There are strong feelings, including by the president."

During the discussion Sunday, according to Canadian sources, Trudeau also jabbed at British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who sided with Reagan, by accusing her of taking a relaxed view of the peace issue because she has a comfortable lead in the polls for Britain's June 9 elections.

Mitterrand was considerably more subdued, but his foreign minister, Claude Cheysson, grumbled that France did not know about the projected statement until Saturday night.

"The French did not want the first and only piece of news to be focused on arms limits," Cheysson said afterward.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who will be meeting in early July with Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov in Moscow, did not push for a strong statement.

Kohl intends to serve as an interlocutor between Moscow and Washington, and there is considerable anxiety in his country about nuclear weapons.

Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone also held back. According to European sources, who asked not to be identified, Japan had urged the Reagan administration months ago not to seek a strong security statement at the summit.

After hours of wrangling and weakening revisions, the statement was approved and announced by Shultz — nearly seven hours late.

The principal change, a gesture to Canada, left the door open to eventually including British and French nuclear missiles in future negotiations with the Soviet Union.

Reagan, alluding to the differences at a farewell dinner Monday night, said "our individual perceptions about particular issues may sometimes differ."

But he said the summit "left me more confident than ever of the basic health of our free way of life and our ability and cooperation."

His severest critics, Mitterrand and Trudeau, sat closest to Reagan and his wife, Nancy. Michael Deaver, the president's deputy chief of staff, told reporters Monday "the statement would have failed yesterday if Reagan hadn't been so persuasive and tenacious."

"He's a great communicator and he did prevail," Deaver said.

The wind-up meeting on Monday was marked by good will.

Rain dampens memorial ceremonies

By The Associated Press

A military adviser killed in El Salvador was hailed for his "sacrifice for American freedom," a 21-gun salute boomed over Boston Harbor, and Utah residents piled sandbags to hold back floods on a Memorial Day marked by bad weather and somber remembrances of America's war dead.

Across much of the nation, memorial ceremonies and other festivities during the holiday weekend were dampened by rain from Texas through the East Coast, flood threats in the Rocky Mountains and lower Mississippi Valley, and chilly temperatures in the upper Midwest.

More than 350 people died on the nation's highways during the three-day weekend which marks the start of the summer vacation season.

In San Diego on Monday, U.S. Rep. Duncan Hunter praised Albert Schaufelberger III, the 33-year-old U.S. adviser murdered last week in El Salvador, saying he made "just as much a sacrifice for American freedom and liberty as a person killed in combat in any of the last several wars we've had."

At Arlington National Cemetery, thousands gathered for the traditional wreath-laying ceremonies at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and a new tomb was dedicated to the 58,000 men who died in the Vietnam War. But that crypt lies empty, because there are no unidentified casualties from the divisive conflict.

President Reagan, continuing his summit meeting in Williamsburg, Va., with leaders of the industrialized democracies, proclaimed Monday "a day of prayer for permanent peace."

In Miami, 150 mothers and fathers, soldiers and civilians marched to the Torch of Friendship in a downtown park. The keynote speaker, Navy Rear Adm. Rafael Benitez, said the military must remain strong in war and peace.

"Let us resolve to remain militarily strong, not to impose our will or way of life on others, but to command respect," Benitez said.

Demonstrators manned a dozen canoes, kayaks and sailboats off the Concord Naval Weapons station in San Francisco Bay to protest U.S. arms shipments to El Salvador. Coast Guard cutters assigned to keep protesters away instead rescued those whose boats overturned in large swells.

A 21-gun salute to American war dead boomed over Boston Harbor at noon as Old Ironsides, the USS Constitution, sent a 20-minute barrage from its long gun. The ship, launched in 1796, is still formally in service with the U.S. Navy.

Flood workers in Utah spent the holiday filling and stacking sandbags in hopes of controlling creeks and rivers overflowing from melting snow. In California's Yosemite National Park, the rising Merced River forced closure of hundreds of campsites, the National Park Service said.

Lifeguards reported that half million people trying to get some sun at Los Angeles-area beaches finally succeeded when clouds and fog burned off in many areas.

"We have a semi-monstrous turnout," said Brian Turnbull a lifeguard at Hermosa Beach.

A Cleveland flag merchant said 3,000 people in Cuyahoga County bought American flags this year, up 50 percent from last year.

"People are feeling more patriotic," said Victoria Benzon of All Legion Flag Sales.

Gritz reportedly scouting Thailand for film site

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Former Green Beret James "Bo" Gritz, who trekked into Laos last year looking for Americans imprisoned during the Indochina War, came to Thailand two weeks ago but his whereabouts are unknown, a Thai official said today.

Police Maj. Gen. Nath Minakanit, head of Thailand's Immigration Department, said records showed the American arrived at Bangkok's international airport May 13 and later extended his two-week visa.

Nath told The Associated Press that Gritz's current visa expires June 11 and would not be extended. He said police and immigration authorities on April 28 recommended that the Thai government declare Gritz persona non grata. The government has not yet acted on the recommendation.

An associate of Gritz in the United States said the former Green Beret was in Thailand to prepare a documentary film.

Gritz went to Thailand to scout filming sites with an independent film company, according to Lynn Standerwick, a Garden Grove, Calif., woman who accompanied Gritz when he made another visit to Thailand in February.

Gritz, of Westchester, Calif., received wide publicity because of his search for American prisoners of war he believes are still held in Laos. U.S. and Southeast Asian officials say they have no evidence that any American POWs are still alive.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said today he had no knowledge of Gritz' movements. The spokesman, who declined to be identified because of the sensitivity of the issue, also said: "We don't condone forays into Laos. They don't help to solve the problem."

The United States and Laos have held talks about repatriation of the remains of Americans killed in Laos during the war. Thai officials try to maintain favorable relations with their communist neighbor and do not want the Laotians to think they help people like Gritz raid Laotian territory.

The English-language daily Bangkok Post, which also reported Gritz was in Thailand, said today it received a taped statement from Gritz in which he denied knowledge of another reported mission into Laos by three Americans.

The tape was brought to the Post by Lance Trimmer, who was identified by the paper as a member of Gritz' search team.

The paper quoted Trimmer as saying he, Gritz and a third team member, Gary Goldman, were in Thailand to film a documentary about their earlier efforts to find and rescue American POWs.

On March 11, a Thai provincial court handed down suspended sentences to Gritz and four other Americans — including Trimmer and Goldman — on charges of operating an illegal radio transmitter. Gritz returned to the United States and in a U.S. congressional hearing failed to produce any evidence that Americans were still alive in Indochina.

Cold weather hits Texas

By The Associated Press

Rain, low clouds and an unseasonable cold snap dominated the Texas weather picture today following violent storms that were blamed for the deaths of six people in two plane crashes.

A plane with five people aboard, all from the West Texas town of Seagraves, crashed about 4 p.m. Monday just northwest of Haskell, spreading wreckage across a muddy field, said Justice of the Peace Geraldine Hise.

Two men, two women and an infant died in the crash, according to Ms. Hise.

Department of Public Safety spokesman Larry Todd identified the dead as Roy Williams, 45; Shirley Williams, 40; Jane Kirk Moore, 36; Lonnie Olin Moore; and Melony Moore, 1, all from Seagraves.

David E. Glover, 26, hometown unknown, died when his small plane crashed in a creek near the Decatur Country Club, north of Fort Worth, according to a Wise County sheriff's dispatcher.

Glover's plane went down between two lines of rain squalls moving through the area, authorities said.

A series of severe thunderstorms rocked a large area near Abilene Monday night, knocking out power in several cities and spawning at least two tornadoes.

One man dies, six people injured in Nevada mudslide

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Three people were missing today after a 15-foot wall of muck thundered down a valley "like a huge wave of chocolate pudding," damaging homes and vehicles, killing one man and injuring six more people, authorities said.

"I heard a rumbling and didn't think anything of it," said Anne Ogilvy, who lost her $200,000 house to the mix of mud and water that burst from a lake Monday and swept down the scenic Washoe Valley.

"A second later I ran out and I saw this stuff coming down toward me," she said. "And so I ran and hid on a little hill. There was clearly nothing I could do but try and get out."

The surging mud, triggered by a massive slide into a lake, closed two highways and swept away 12 to 15 vehicles, a mobile home and truck-sized boulders before coming to rest on rangeland on the east slope of the Sierra Nevada.

Nine homes were damaged, four of them destroyed, and at least six people were injured in the slide, officials said. About 15 people displaced by the disaster found lodging Monday night with friends and relatives or in motel rooms provided by the Red Cross.

Washoe County Sheriff Vince Swinney said a search Monday night failed to turn up any other victims. Deputy Mike Jack said early today that three people were unaccounted for and listed as missing.

The dead man was identified as Joseph Valenzuela, a Gardnerville pastor, whose age was not immediately known, Swinney said.

"It looked like a huge wave of chocolate pudding," said Rick Talovic, a witness to the slide. "It was pouring out like a waterfall."

Catherine Kline, 61, was swept away by the mud before being rescued and flown by helicopter to Washoe Medical Center in Reno, where she was in satisfactory condition with a leg injury, hospital spokesman Jack Bulavsky said.

Her neighbor, Mark Stafford, said he was pulling out of his driveway when, "I saw the dust and all of a sudden the trees started flying and it was on top of us lickety-split."

Then he spotted Mrs. Kline, he said, and ran to rescue her. "Debris was pulling her under. I saw her bob up and down and I started pulling her out."

Three other people were treated and released at local hospitals. A fourth was admitted to Carson-Tahoe Hospital in Carson City with a shoulder injury and abrasions. None was immediately identified.

Sheriff's officials were uncertain about the whereabouts of the sixth person listed as injured.

The slide originated 4,000 feet above the valley floor atop snow-capped Slide Mountain, named for its steeply sloped peak formed by a landslide a century ago.

Authorities said a 40-acre chunk of snow and earth on the waterlogged peak gave way and splashed into Upper Price Lake, with the debris forming a dam on the lake's edge.

Pressure from water behind the dam gradually increased until it burst, sending the muck cascading into Lower Price Lake, which quickly overflowed. Mud rolled three miles down the wooded mountain slope.

Man tries to cash check, flees when he can't remember name

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who tried to cash an unemployment check at a pawn shop fled when the store owner discovered the man could not remember the name on the check.

Pawnbroker Ted Kipperman said Monday the man ran from his store Saturday after being dumbfounded by the first question on a store identification card: "What is your name?"

"He gave me a blank look and said he was having trouble remembering," Kipperman said. "That made me slightly suspicious, since the check was already endorsed. I told him if he didn't know whose name was on the check, he didn't do his homework right."

The man fled as Kipperman reached for a telephone to call police, the pawnbroker said.

Kipperman said the man presented the $266 check, made out to Richard W. Hartman, Saturday. Kipperman said he went to Hartman's address Sunday and gave the check to the unemployed carpenter's family.

House votes down legal aid

AUSTIN (AP) — In one of the most vigorous floor fights on the final night of the legislative session, the House voted down a proposal to raise money to pay for legal service for poor Texans.

The 77-60 vote Monday killed a plan to fund the program with interest drawn on money held in escrow by lawyers for their clients.

House sponsor Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, called the measure the "equal access to justice act." The money would have gone to a nonprofit corporation set up to pass the funds to needy clients.

Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman, fought the plan, saying it would be a "very heavy burden" for lawyers and could force an increase in fees.

The original House version of the bill made lawyers' participation in the program voluntary, but the version voted on Monday night would have made it mandatory.

Senator blames House for death

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate sponsor of a car safety bill for young children blamed a House committee Monday for the recent death of a 2-year-old girl.

Sen. Carl Parker said Abigail Carnes, a passenger in a car driven by her mother, might have lived had she been in a child safety seat.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, sponsored a bill this session that would have required parents to obtain safety seats for children 4 years of age and younger. The measure passed the Senate early in the session, but Parker said the House Calendars Committee had killed it.

He spoke in the Senate on Monday after reading a newspaper article of the child dying when a car struck her mother's car and threw the child onto the pavement. The mother was in serious condition at a local hospital with massive head and internal injuries.

Parker said Texas leads the nation in infant deaths, "because of a lack of safety seats in automobiles."

Officer shoots driver

HOUSTON (AP) — A tractor driver who had rammed several vehicles was killed by a police officer whose partner was in danger of being run over, a detective says.

Officer G.L. Woodard's arm was caught between a tractor tire and fender Monday when his partner fatally shot Kenneth Kent, 32, of Liberty, police said. Detective M.E. Doyle said the blast from W.M. Knox's 12-gauge shotgun struck Kent in the head and shoulder.

Doyle said the shooting came after Kent drove his front-end loader more than a mile to a shopping center, ramming a parked vehicle along the way and two vehicles at the shopping center.

Woodard leaped on the back of the machine to try to shut off the engine or pull Kent away from the controls, but his arm was caught between the tire and fender, Doyle said. The detective said Woodard was apparently not seriously injured.

Doyle said it was not immediately apparent what had prompted Kent's trip.

The detective said Kent started the tractor at his brother's house, "ran over a fence and knocked over a building on his brother's property."

Kent drove for more than a mile, ramming a vehicle parked on the road, Doyle said. When he got to the shopping center parking lot, Kent apparently had trouble stopping the machine.

"The people in one of the stores thought he was going to run into their store," Doyle said.

Kent finally stopped the tractor, then backed it into a van, the detective said. He leaped off the machine and exchanged words with that vehicle's owner, then jumped back on the tractor and rammed a police car which had just arrived.

Legislation encouraging welfare mothers to train for jobs passes

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that might encourage — but would not force — welfare mothers to train for a job cleared the Legislature with just minutes to spare Monday night.

The key to Senate acceptance was an amendment on Saturday that made the program voluntary.

Nevertheless, Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, said the bill was an important step in a different approach to welfare.

The measure was locked in a House-Senate committee until just before adjournament at midnight Monday, when House sponsor Gerald Geistweidt, R-Mason, said he would reluctantly accept the conference committee report.

Under the so-called workfare proposal, recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children, or AFDC, would spend up to two months in a job-training program conducted by a participating employer. During that time, the trainee would receive only the AFDC payment, plus subsidized child and health care.

The training would be followed by four months of job experience, with the pay at least the federal minimum wage, and then, hopefully, full employment of the welfare recipient.

Parr writes of TV

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — For five tumultuous years, Jack Paar was king of American television, holding the nation in thrall with his unique brand of showmanship. Now he has written about his time of glory.

The book is called "P.S. Jack Paar," and it reads as he sounded on the "Tonight" show: pungent, provocative and untainted by false modesty.

Paar and his wife, Miriam, recently visited Los Angeles for a round of interviews that did not include the "Tonight" show with Johnny Carson, Paar's successor.

Carson is much praised in the book. Paar's predecessor, Steve Allen, is not.

Never one to elude controversy, Paar gave the full history of his non-appearance on the Carson show.

"First of all, I sent a copy of the uncorrected galley proofs to Johnny, because I'm a great admirer of his," he said. "Johnny sent me a letter he had written in longhand — imagine taking the trouble to write by hand! He started out by saying, 'We must stop corresponding like this.'

"A joke, because I don't think we've written to each other in 19 years. Johnny was very complimentary about the book."

Paar said he next heard from Carson's producer, Fred DeCordova, who told him, "You gotta be on the show ... Johnny loves you, and he's a pussycat when he has those he loves on with him."

A May 17 date was set, with the proviso that Paar would appear on no other network show during that week.

Paar, however, did allow a CBS News crew to tape a lengthy interview with him at his Connecticut home. But Paar says he was suprised when the interview was carried for five days running on the CBS Morning News.

"I think CBS used me," said Paar.

He soon got a call from DeCordova, who wanted another 10 days to think about the appearance. "I considered that an indignity, and so I canceled."

"P.S. Jack Paar" tells his life story with emphasis on his tenure with "Tonight" from July 29, 1957, to March 30, 1962. Television had never seen anything quite like him. Paar managed to evoke sparkling conversation from guests who ranged from Jack Kennedy to Dodie Goodman.

Claude Delmouly has been a leading, and sometimes controversial, figure in French bridge for more than 25 years. He proved that he has lost none of his skill with this hand from a recent tournament in Holland. It should be a strong candidate for the best-played hand of the year.

East's opening bid showed 0-9 points and North's two diamond bid was a transfer to hearts. The rest of the auction was natural, and the same contract was reached at both tables of a team match. The Dutch declarer failed. Now watch Delmouly.

He captured the jack of spades with the king and immediately led a low diamond to the jack, which held. When East sluffed a heart on the second diamond, declarer played low and West won the ten. Best defense would have been to shift to a high club, but West instead chose a low club. The ten was covered by the queen and taken by the ace, and West was thrown back on lead with a club. With nothing better to do, West chose to cash his club winner and exit with a club. East made the fatal discard of a heart, and declarer parted with a spade and a diamond. Declarer came to hand with the queen of hearts but, instead of cashing the ace of spades from his now entryless hand, he continued with hearts. This was the position:

On the king of hearts, declarer pitched a diamond, and West was in trouble. If he sluffed a diamond, he would be thrown in with the ace of diamonds and forced to lead a spade into declarer's A-10 tenace, so he parted with a spade. Now East was thrown in with a heart, on which declarer ditched the king of diamonds. West was forced to return a spade, and declarer made the last two tricks by rising with the ace!

Danger of truth

If the Free World needed any more evidence of the sham and deception implicit in all Soviet declarations of policy, it can readily be found in the announcement by the Russian masters that they again have denied an exit visa for Andrei D. Sakharov, one of their foremost scientists.

Their decision, they insist, is dictated by concern for national security which would be threatened abroad by Dr. Sakharov's possession of "important state and military secrets." The explanation was delivered, with a straight face, when the whole world knows that the ailing Dr. Sakharov has been stripped of security clearance and of any access to technological and political secrets for all of 15 years.

No, Dr. Sakharov's sin against the Soviet state has been his advocacy of human rights in his own homeland — a transgression for which he has already paid dearly. He was not permitted to leave the country in 1975 to accept a Nobel Prize in Oslo and his tormentors have turned aside every invitation he has received to address audiences in Europe and America.

The official harassment of this eminent physicist was capped three years ago when he was banished to Gorky, far from the circles of learning in which he had always moved. In Gorky, he lives under virtual house arrest — an exile in his own country. His health has failed and his plight reportedly causes periods of acute depression.

In contrast to this grim story comes the report of how exiled Russian novelist Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn's 11-year-old son, Yermolai, turned the tables on a Soviet "Bridges for Peace" propaganda team visiting a school classroom in a small Vermont town. After hearing the team's spiel, Yermolai threw a few questions about Russian disarmament which left the Soviets stunned.

Yermolai's only weapon was truth, expressed in a free give-and-take. Think how such a weapon could be used by a man of Dr. Sakharov's intellectual attainments during a similar encounter on free soil.

The Russians obviously don't intend to take that risk.

Sensitive subject

It took less than 35 minutes May 18 for the House of Representatives to debate whether to raise the debt ceiling of the U.S. government. Then, avoiding the embarrassment of a roll-call vote, the House shouted approval of a bill to raise the federal debt ceiling from $1.290 trillion to $1.389 trillion. House Speaker Tip O'Neill ran through the formalities so quickly that a TV film of the event resembled an old-time movie where the action is speeded up.

This wasn't the case last year when the House debated the amendment to require Congress to balance the budget. Then, congressman after congressman got up and explained to their constituents how the federal debt was ruining the country and how the profligate government must be reined in and made to pay its debts.

This goes to prove that when Congress doesn't want to do something, it wastes days explaining why it shouldn't and can't do it. But when Congress wants to act and not to talk, it can move like greased lightning.

Another View:

Provocative Syria

Not quite one year ago Syria lost nearly 100 aircraft, 400 tanks, 20 missile sites and thousands of men in less than a week of fighting against Israel in Lebanon. All of the weapons losses have now been replaced and in some cases upgraded by the Soviet Union, which in addition has sent 5,000 military advisers and an arsenal of long-range antiaircraft missiles to Syria to boost its ally's self-confidence. For all that, Syria's armed forces remain, by every estimate, qualitatively inferior to those of Israel. In another war Syria almost certainly would lose badly. In that case, what is Syria trying to do with its provocative actions and belligerent talk in Lebanon?

This week, according to American intelligence reports, Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization added 2,500 men to their forces in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley. Also this week Syrian planes tried, without success, to shoot down two Israeli reconnaissance craft over Lebanon. Meanwhile, Damascus has stepped up the threats and warnings that have been its response to the agreement on future security and political arrangements reached this month by Lebanon and Israel.

Syria quite clearly has mounted an all-out campaign of political warfare. Its foremost aim is to destroy the Lebanon-Israel accord. Failing that, it wants at a minimum to put itself in a strong position for extracting concessions from Lebanon and the United States if and when it decides that its troops and those of the PLO should leave Lebanon. It is reminding everyone involved that it is still a key player in the game, and that without its concurrence Lebanon can have neither peace nor sovereignty. But in the Bekaa Valley, where opposing armies are only a few hundred yards apart and opposing air forces are only seconds away from confrontation, political warfare can all too easily become the real thing. Syria may not be seeking conflict by design; but it is inevitably risking conflict by miscalculation.

Israel did not respond to this week's attack on its planes, and it took the unusual step of publicly ruling out retaliation. That was clearly meant to signify that it wants no new fighting, but whether this signal will reassure or embolden Syria remains to be seen. The last thing that Israel would welcome, after suffering nearly 500 war dead in Lebanon, is a fresh and essentially pointless resumption of battle. But one thing that Israel will not tolerate, as its defense minister has said repeatedly, is a Syrian effort to wage against it a low-level war of attrition. Lebanon is not yet again a battlefield, and if Syria's leaders are thinking straight they probably do not intend that it should become one. Miscalculations, though, are never intentional. They occur anyway, and sometimes they can bring disaster in their train.

Soviet savagery of Aghans told

WASHINGTON — Eleven days ago the State Department issued a public denunciation of Soviet atrocities in Afghanistan, specifically the repeated aerial bombing of civilian population centers that are without means to defend themselves. The announcement called the air raids "intolerable by any standard of civilized behavior."

Jack Anderson

Secret cables to Foggy Bottom from our embassies in the region make clear that the State Department's formal charges understated the degree and extent of Soviet depredations in Afghanistan.

The cables tell of towns and cities systematically bombed into rubble; entire villages massacred; men, women and children summarily shot; women and girls raped; and suspected rebel sympathizers subjected to torture.

Soviet troops are apparently indulging in the same kind of unrestrained savagery they showed toward German civilians in World War II — when at least they had the excuse of retribution for Nazi atrocities in Russia.

Here are some of the grisly details of atrocities committed by Soviet troops and soldiers of the communist puppet regime's army:

— The Guldara Valley, which is headquarters for a major Afghan resistance leader, has been the repeated target of attack. "It has been made clear to the local population that normal life... will not be allowed to continue," one confidential cable states. It continues: "On April 30, for example, a group of more than 20 elders, women and children who attempted to complain to the occupying regime forces about the severity of the bombardment were summarily shot. A man who tried to work his fields near Guldara met the same fate at roughly the same time, this time at the hands of the Soviet troops."

— In another village of the region, the terrified populace fled to escape the troops' violence. The abandoned homes were "systematically looted" by Soviet soldiers and Afghan army troops.

— In some areas where resistance has been the most stubborn, the Russian-Afghan occupation forces have adopted a "scorched earth" policy, destroying crops and buildings to leave the guerrillas — and the entire civilian population — without a means of existence.

— The fighting has even spread to the Shomali region just north of Kabul. The repression has been particularly ruthless there. "Many villages and towns have been flattened, and civilian casualties are high," a cable reports. Travelers throughout the area report that Soviet soldiers are selling looted goods along the roadside.

Why are the Soviets acting so barbarically in Afghanistan? A classified cable seen by my associate Lucette Lagnado concludes that the Soviets have given up any hope of winning the hearts and minds of the fiercely independent Afghan people, and are interested only in holding onto the country's strategic real estate.

"Since Andropov's coming to power," the report states, quoting a recent defector, "Moscow's policy of controlling Afghanistan, rather than the Afghan people, has become even more apparent than it had been before."

The repression and terror have had a noticeable effect on the surviving Afghans, according to a report on the situation in Kabul. "The litany of killings, arrests, robberies and other cruelties is endless. (Afghans) throughout the town are so preoccupied with stemming a flood of woes and injustices that they are often listless and seem unfeeling in the conduct of their professional lives.... (They go) from one personal catastrophe to another."

Not all the Afghans are demoralized, though. Assassinations of Russian personnel in the cities are frequent. And in the countryside, the outgunned but determined guerrillas continue to resist the Soviet terror with every means at their disposal.

INSIDE REPORT:

'Kingmaker' giving demos flavor

NEW YORK — First-year Gov. Mario Cuomo is becoming the runaway choice to deliver the keynote address at the Democratic National Convention 13 months hence, climaxing the startling domination of the party's drab landscape by one luminescent newcomer.

Rowland Evans

Cuomo most certainly will not be, as none other than Richard M. Nixon has been suggesting, a late contestant for the 1984 presidential nomination. But besides becoming the most likely keynoter, he has blossomed as the party tastemaker, a possible kingmaker and (despite his own protests that he never would do it) a most desirable vice presidential prospect.

Robert Novak

Undeniably, Cuomo is the party's hottest property today, and superior platform style is not the only reason. What makes him is a political blend that combines Walter F. Mondale's undiluted support of liberal special interest groups with John F. Glenn's evocation of traditional values.

"I would say that Mario regards himself as not merely equal to anybody else in the party but actually their superior," one pro-Cuomo Democratic insider here told us. That was affirmed to us during two hours of talking politics with him over dinner in a midtown Manhattan restaurant last week.

Cuomo knows Mondale well and regards him as an incomplete politician who strings issues and constituencies together without a connective theme. He scarcely knows Glenn at all (a one-on-one meeting has been talked about for weeks but not yet scheduled); he is fascinated with the old astronaut's popular appeal, but feels Glenn badly needs close, personal identification with one or two issues.

Nevertheless, Cuomo believes the field is closed with no likelihood for important new runners and that the nominee probably will be either Mondale or Glenn. That is an important judgment considering the fact that his closest associates cannot conceive of the governor indefinitely riding out the presidential contest in impotent neutrality, leaving his state's other prominent Democrats to make their own choices (as his predecessor, Hugh Carey, did in 1980). Indeed, Cuomo defied conventional wisdom in keeping New York's Democratic barons neutral, at least until the state's presidential candidate forums in September.

Thus, the governor, who carried the Carter-Mondale standard against the 1980 Kennedy tide, has amply repaid Mondale for failure to support an underdog Cuomo in last year's primary for governor. Bronx leader Stanley Friedman, Queens leader Donald Manes and many lesser lights were eager to join the former vice president's bandwagon when it was in full throttle several weeks ago, but were dissuaded by pleas from their newly-elected governor to stay neutral.

Cuomo's own aides doubt he can keep New York neutral beyond September, but knowledgeable Democrats here believe Mondale's recent slump in the polls offers the governor new room to maneuver. What's more, Cuomo's new notoriety — phantasmagorically pumped up by Nixon's comments that he would be President Reagan's toughest opponent — makes his an endorsement with impact far beyond this state's borders.

Cuomo's inclination to be kingmaker but not king was obvious from the day he was elected. Timothy J. Russert was hired away from Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan's staff to become the governor's counselor not because of expertise in Albany (zero) but because of media and political contacts in Washington (excellent). But when the Communications Workers Union's political operative here, Jan Pierce, began publicly boosting Cuomo for president, he was quickly silenced.

On the day before Cuomo spoke before the Democratic National Strategy Council in Washington, he personally placed a telephone call to influential liberal activist and newsletter publisher Alan Baron in the capital to alert him to that event. But when Baron goodnaturedly suggested the beginning of the Cuomo-for-president campaign, the governor abruptly ended the conversation.

It was that speech, embodying Cuomo's embrace of undiluted old-fashioned liberalism with a call for "reasonableness," that triggered the keynoter boom. "When we began, we gave him a polite hand because he's governor of New York," Rep. Timothy Wirth of Colorado, who like many other Democrats present never had heard him before, told us, "but when he ended, we were cheering."

They were cheering the vision of a Democrat who at least equals Fritz Mondale in devotion to each and every liberal cause, but also can appeal to middle-class Americans by talking up traditional values, including family. In our conversation, he was passionate in denouncing conservative columnist Patrick J. Buchanan's recent suggestion that AIDS disease is retribution for homosexual sin, but weighed in heavily about lack of discipline in American life.

The vagaries of politics make a joke of current depiction in some Democratic circles of Mario Cuomo as the once and future president, beginning in 1988. More than speculation, however, is the fact that he is determined to play a major role in setting the party's 1984 agenda and perhaps ticket. The party's national operatives, delighted by a real, live liberal with an appeal to Joe Six-pack, are only too delighted to let him play.

People made visit success

To The Editor:

On May 8-16 we were visited by our 7-year-old nephew, Bryan McClinton, and his mother and sister who live in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Bryan is striken with cancer and his trip was sponsored by the "Make-A-Wish Foundation" which sponsors such trips for children with critical illnesses.

Bryan greatly enjoyed Midland and Texas, and we loved having him and his family. We would like to publicly recognize the following Midlanders who so greatly added to Bryan's visit:

To the Midland Reporter-Telegram, KMID-TV and KCRS-Radio who publicized Bryan's visit and the extraordinary work of the "Make-A-Wish Foundation."

To the following businesses who so generously gave of their merchandise: Water Wonderland, Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream at Plaza Center, Carmella's Pizza & Italian Food Restaurant and Petroleum Museum Souvenir Stand.

To Mrs. Raymond Vaden of Goldsmith, the mother of Ray M. Vaden of Auburn Court in Midland, who for her Mother's Day purchased gifts for Bryan. Mrs. Vaden epitomizes the generosity of all mothers.

To Mayor Thane Akins who proclaimed Bryan as an "Honorary Citizen of Midland."

To Carl and Carletta Knappe who generously gave Bryan a surprise birthday gift.

To the many friends Maxine and Hugh McCullough who thoughtfully gave of themselves — as always!

To all of you we would like to say very sincerely "thank you" and may God bless you abundantly!

Nothing dirty

To The Editor

In reference to last Sunday's letter to the editor about "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," I just want to put my two cents worth in.

One of the letters stated that this play has been put forth as a funny, wholesome comedy. In all of the commercials and advertisements I have seen and heard, this play has always been referred to as a funny, ADULT comedy. I saw the play and it is a funny, ADULT comedy.

If people don't want their children to see this play, don't let them because it is an adult comedy but don't force their "moral majority" opinion on others.

If I may quote a line from the show, "There is nothing dirty going on here."

Salt Lake City residents watch from a sandbag dike as flood waters are channelled down State Street Sunday night. Diking controlled the heavy flow of water through the downtown area.

Utah floods continue devastation

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Two mudslides swept through Utah on Monday night, inundating homes and cars, snapping power poles and forcing officials to evacuate about 1,500.

No injuries were reported immediately in either slide.

The first slide swept without warning through Farmington, about 15 miles north of Salt Lake City, and officials evacuated about 400 people in a 50-square-block area.

The second slide occurred in Fairview, about 80 miles south of Salt Lake City, and 1,100 residents of the town were taken 6 miles away to Mt. Pleasant, where they were to be housed at the high school and elementary shcool, said Sanpete County sheriff's dispatcher David Edwards.

The Fairview mudslide blocked Cottonwood Creek, and Edwards said authorities feared the creed would overflow and flood the town.

In Farmington a paramedic station was being set up and all off-duty officers area were summoned.

The area also was being hit by canyon winds gusting to 45 mph, with higher gusts predicted.

Patrolman Robert Childs, who saw the Farmington slide when it started, said at least three homes were destroyed — "one was completely flattened."

"I heard trees snap and a couple of people were screaming and running out of the canyon," Childs said.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Harry Jones said the Farmington slide was about 1 mile wide and two miles long.

"It's a mud mountain. The whole side of the mountain just gave way," he said.

A group of hikers was reported stranded in the foothills above the slide, but they were not believed in danger.

Ron Nelson, Farmington public works director, said the slide had gone through about 10 homes and appeared to be slowing. It initially had been moving several feet a second.

A large volume of water came down with and ahead of the slide, which Nelson said apparently started at Rudd Springs, about 100 feet below the peak.

The slide occurred as thousands of volunteers joined sandbag brigades in Salt Lake City for the sixth straight day Monday and the city battled a rising flood compared with the worst in arid Utah's history.

A second major street through the city was diked and converted into a spillway as an unseasonably warm sun bearing down on a heavy snowpack sent muddy water cascading down mountainsides, surging into homes and closing canyons. The flooding was said to be worse in some spots than the record flood of 1952.

Authorities reported the first flood-related death Monday. Two-year-old Joseph Garzarelli of West Valley City was swept into a creek near where his family was camping Saturday. He was pulled from the river and taken to a Salt Lake City hospital, where he later died.

A citizen's band radio operator in San Diego heard a Utah fisherman calling for help and alerted authorities in eastern Utah's Duchesne County, where sheriff's deputies worked Monday afternoon to evacuate about 75 campers and fishermen from Red Creek Reservoir. A road to the nearest town was in danger of washing out.

Residents of a half-dozen towns were ordered to boil drinking water.

Silt-laden waters blocked roads — including Interstate 15 in central Utah — and rapidly filled reservoirs across the state, while Salt Lake City — with the help of 4,000 volunteers — turned a second street into a temporary canal.

Beleaguered flood control officials hoped for relief from 80 to 90-degree temperatures that arrived suddenly last week, melting a snowpack held in check until now by cooler than normal temperatures.

Officials again Monday asked for volunteers and were "overwhelmed" by the response, as teen-agers and senior citizens stood shoulder-to-shoulder with flood control workers on sandbag lines in communities throughout the northern half of the state.

In Salt Lake City, more than 325,000 sandbags were in place and the state planned to bring in thousands more for distribution statewide.

"We had the most overwhelming outpouring of public support that I've ever seen," Salt Lake Ciy Mayor Ted Wilson said.

FBI held liable for Klan incident

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — A federal judge today held the FBI liable for damages a crippled man claims he suffered 22 years ago in a Ku Klux Klan beating of civil rights "freedom riders" in a bus trip through Alabama.

U.S. District Judge Richard Enslen ruled that Walter Bergman, 83, of Grand Rapids may seek damages from the FBI. Bergman claims in a $1 million lawsuit that the agency failed to prevent the beating of civil rights activists outside Anniston, Ala., and in Birmingham, Ala., on May 14, 1961.

The amount of damages will be determined at another trial.

Bergman filed suit in 1977 seeking payment for physical and emotional damages resulting from the beating.

Bergman, a white and former director of the Detroit Board of Education, claimed in the 1977 suit that the beating left him paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair. The FBI has said Bergman was crippled by complications from an appendectomy months after the bus ride.

Bergman claims the FBI was told by informants, including Gary Thomas Rowe Jr., that the KKK planned to attack the Greyhound bus in two northern Alabama cities and that local police would not interfere for a period of time.

The suit says the FBI should have protected the freedom riders, who were testing the 1960 Civil Rights Act, which barred, among other things, racial discrimination aboard interstate buses.

During the non-jury trial, goverment lawyers said the FBI did not act on Rowe's information because the agency considered it hearsay which the Klan might have given Rowe to see if he was an informant.

Rowe has become part of the federal Witness Protection Program and now lives under another name in Savannah, Ga. He was cleared last week in Ann Arbor of the 1965 slaying of civil rights worker Viola Liuzzo, whose family filed a $2 million lawsuit against the federal government.

Enslen refused on March 8 to allow the FBI to defend itself after the agency declined to give the court certain documents. The FBI said the papers would reveal the names of other informants involved in the case.

"The chilling effect on a citizen's right to challenge official activity is all too apparent," Enslen said in barring the FBI from defending itself.

Because of the ruling, most of the evidence presented during the trial came from Bergman's witnesses.

Herman Harris, another freedom rider, testified that the bus driver refused to continue unless blacks moved to the back of the bus. After that, the beatings began as police watched from outside.

Democratic telethon financially successful

Hearst Feature Service

If Republicans did jam the Democrats' Memorial Day weekend telethon phone lines, they may have done their opponents a favor by encouraging Democratic supporters to dig deeper than they might have, according to officials running the event.

With projections claiming the 17-hour telethon on NBC would gross $16 million to $20 million, telethon executives were heartened Sunday morning after spending a long night at their command post at the Burbank studios. Democratic National Committee Chairman Charles Manatt had only expected to make $2 million after expenses of about $6 million.

By midmorning, telethon producer Russ Reid announced that pledges were running at an all-time high and "Celebrate America," a package of entertainment and political messages, apparently was a financial hit.

The event had received little publicity until Manatt last week made public a Republican fund-raising letter that asked GOP loyalists to call in during the telethon with expressions of support for President Reagan.

Once the telethon began, Manatt announced that his worst fears were being confirmed, saying there was a high incidence of jamming, presumably by Republicans.

But Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown, chairman of the telethon, said that "irrespective of the (jamming) tactics. . .Democrats just marched right through them."

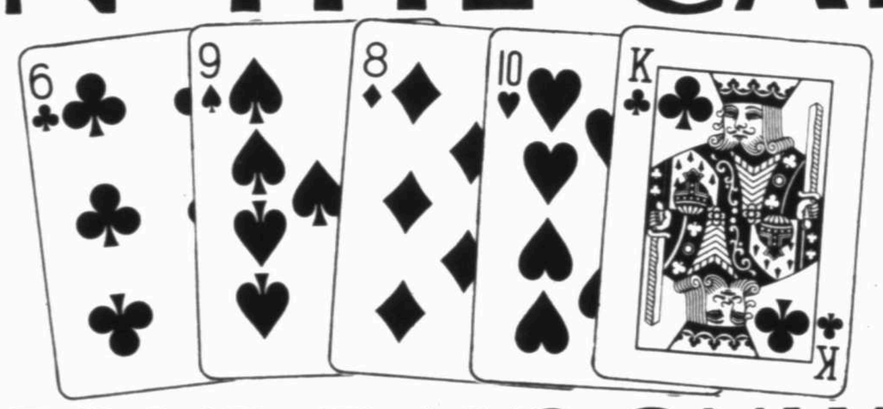

Brown called the telethon "the first step in revolutionizing fund raising" in the history of the Democratic Party, an attempt to match the GOP's fund-raising prowess.

One Democrat, wealthy party contributor Carmen Warshaw, who helped answer phones set up at the Rose Bowl, explained she turned the tables on some of the unwanted callers. She said she received 61 suspicious calls in two hours, but responded by asking callers at the outset of each call for a pledge.

Manatt said most of the intrusive callers went along with telethon operators until a pledge was requested, then would say, "No, I support the president."

'Soviet economy to remain stagnate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rigidly centralized Soviet economy will continue to stagnate because Kremlin leaders resist basic reforms that might remove obstacles to prosperity, a congressional study says.

The study, released Monday, included a CIA analysis forecasting that the bottleneck-ridden economy will strain ahead through the 1980s at a low growth rate but without danger of collapse.

"The Soviet economy, despite its monstrous inefficiencies and irrationalities, grinds on. ... It does not face collapse or a precipitate decline" in total output, the intelligence agency concluded.

It also cautioned that efforts to exert pressure on Moscow using trade embargoes or other economic sanctions "run the risk of boomeranging" because of potential damage to the West's own economic interests.

"Anything the Soviet leaders might do that would be economically significant in improving performance, say to a 3 or 4 percent annual GNP growth, would be politically unacceptable within the U.S.S.R.," said a Congressional Research Service summary of the study's main findings.

The 1,100-page study, bringing together more than 50 detailed papers by government and private experts, was prepared under the aegis of the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

In releasing the study, Sen. Roger W. Jepsen, R-Iowa, the panel's chairman, and Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind., vice chairman, said that during the 1980s "average GNP (gross national product) growth in the Soviet Union could go as high as 2 percent in some years, but ... improved economic performance is unlikely without major policy changes."

The two-volume report surveyed issues such as Soviet energy policy, the country's sluggish steel industry, deterioration of health care, alcoholism and a surprising drop in life expectancy for Soviet men.

Most specialists contributing to the study were highly skeptical about the prospects for fundamental reform in the Soviet economic system.

"Institutionally strong power holders in the military, police (KGB) and party apparatuses have no motivation or reason to support changes within a system that has been successful in meeting their needs," the study said.

Reporter fires lawyer in Hitler case

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Reporter Gerd Heidemann, accused of fraud because he bought the phony Hitler diaries for Stern magazine, has fired prominent attorney Egon Geis and hired another lawyer.

Heidemann, 51, had retained the well-known Frankfurt attorney to defend him in the case of the century's largest literary scandal.

A telephone receptionist at Geis' office confirmed today that the attorney no longer represents Heidemann but declined to say why. The receptionist, who asked to remain anonymous, said Geis was not available.

Hamburg lawyer Holger Schroeder announced in Hamburg he had been retained by Heidemann and that he will begin studying the evidence immediately. Shcroeder declined to say why Heidemann changed attorneys.

Heidemann was arrested Thursday after Stuttgart-based Nazi relics dealer Konrad Kujau, 44, implicated him in the diary scandal.

Prosecutors said Heidemann's arrest came after Kujau confessed to forging the 62-volume diary set. Kujau also is jailed on fraud charges.

Geis said Kujau told prosecutors that Heidemann supplied him with the paper on which the diaries were written and helped bind them.

Syria intervenes to resolve PLO mutiny

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — President Hafez Assad's government has formed a three-man committee to resolve a mutiny in Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat's guerrilla group Fatah, informants said today.

The informants, who requested anonymity, said the decision to intervene was taken during an emergency session of Assad's ruling Socialist Baath Party on Monday.

The committee was charged with initiating contacts between Arafat and his adversaries to resolve the differences that started the two-week-old mutiny in Damascus and east Lebanon's Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley, the sources said.

The mutiny, they said, had embarrassed the Syrian government because it could endanger the improved relations between Assad and Arafat and trigger charges that Syria was encouraging the mutineers.

The rebels, headed by Col. Saeed Mousa, also known as Abu Mousa, challenged Arafat's appointment of two unpopular PLO officers to take command of guerrilla forces in the Bekaa and northern Lebanon.

The rebels claimed Arafat appointed the two to prepare for a PLO military withdrawal from Lebanon and the "final abandonment of the armed struggle" against Israel.

Arafat accused Libya of masterminding and funding the mutiny. He also ordered a blockade of food, fuel, water and ammunition supplies to the rebels and stopped their salaries.

In retaliation, the rebels on Saturday shot their way into six Fatah warehouses in the sprawling Yarmouk Palestinian refugee camp on the southeast outskirts of Damascus, wounding two guards. Since then the rebels have controlled the warehouses.

Rebels attack power station in capital city

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Moslem insurgents attacked a power station in Kabul last week, killing 35 to 50 Afghan soldiers guarding it during one of the largest rebel offensives in months, Western diplomatic sources said today.

The attack on the Afghan capital, a coordinated effort Wednesday night by three normally independent rebel bands, also damaged six government armored vehicles, according to reports both here and in Islamabad, Pakistan, from diplomatic sources who requested not to be identified.

There was no indication of insurgent casualties and the report could not be independently verified.

Quoting "reliable sources" in the Afghan capital, the report said the raid was the work of three fundamentalist rebel groups — the Hezbi-Islami, the Harkat-e-Inqilab-e-islami and the al Nasr.

There was no immediate word on damage to the hydroelectric plant at Pul-e-Charkhy, but government troops were seen removing the gutted hulks of six tanks from the area the next day, the sources said.

Sixers near NBA playoff record book

Lakers can make it 14 straight fallen champs with loss

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — After years of frustration in the playoffs, the Philadelphia 76ers are thinking more about winning the National Basketball Association championship tonight than trying to set records.

Philadelphia leads the Los Angeles Lakers 3-0 in the best-of-seven championship series going into tonight's fourth game, and a 76ers victory would give them the NBA title with an unprecedented 12-1 playoff record.

"It would be nice to be the first team to make it through the playoffs with one loss," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said Monday. "But what would really be nice for a change would be to win the last game of the playoffs."

THE 76ERS, who last won the championship in 1967, are making their fourth trip to the finals in the last seven seasons. They lost to Portland in 1977 and to the Lakers in 1980 and last year, but their only defeat so far in three rounds of this season's playoffs was in Game 4 of the semifinals against Milwaukee.

But all-star Philadelphia guard Maurice Cheeks said, "We're not trying to make history, we just want to get one more win."

No team has ever come back from a 3-0 deficit to win an NBA playoff series. But Cunningham saw the 76ers blow a 3-1 lead to Boston in the 1981 semfinals and nearly had the same thing happen last year before defeating the Celtics in the seventh game.

"We're so close now but we can't listen to people telling us we've got it won," Cunningham said. "It's very important to win it in four. Too many things can happen."

"I'd rather get it over with in four," said 76ers center Moses Malone, who averaged 26 points and 16 rebounds in the first three games against the Lakers. "The fewer games it takes the better. But it doesn't make any difference as long as we win it."

THE LAKERS, although they're close to becoming the 14th consecutive NBA champion to fail to repeat, say they haven't given up hope.

"It's possible we can win, not probable, but possible," Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said.

"You do yourself a disservice if you write yourself off," coach Pat Riley said. "Pulling this off is the ultimate dream. If we can get one it might bolster our confidence, and after that, you never know."

Riley said it was the 76ers and Cunningham, not poor play by Los Angeles that has put the Lakers in a hole.

"Billy has exploited every weakness we have — and going into the series I didn't think we had many — and taken away our strengths," Riley said. "I haven't seen any team execute against us defensively as well as they have. We are a running, free-flowing team and we have had that taken away from us."

But Cunningham said the 76ers can play better than they have so far.

"Our defense has been outstanding, but offensively we have not been at our peak," Cunningham said. "For example, we haven't seen Andrew Toney just explode on the offensive end."

ALTHOUGH HE is averaging 21 points in the finals, Toney, another Philadelphia all-star guard has not shot as well as he did in last year's championship series that the 76ers lost in six games.

Meanwhile, Norm Nixon one of four Los Angeles all-stars, is hobbled by a knee injury and key reserve Bob McAdoo aggravated a thigh bruise in Sunday's 111-94 Philadelphia victory.

Both are listed as questionable but are expected to play tonight.

Miller's touchdowns lead Michigan to rout, 43-7

USFL Roundup

By The Associated Press

Terry Miller might have surprised some of the folks around the United States Football League with his two-touchdown performance for the Michigan Panthers.

Don't include Panthers Coach Jim Stanley in that group.

Miller, acquired from the Denver Gold last week, rushed for 55 yards on 12 carries with TD runs of 5 and 10 yards to lead Michigan to a 43-7 rout over the Tampa Bay Bandits Monday night before a crowd of 23,976 in the Silverdome at Pontiac, Mich.

"I've known what Terry can do for many years," said Stanley, who recruited Miller out of high school and had him at Oklahoma State from 1974 to 1978. "We already had some good backs here, but when he became available, I felt he could help us, too."

In another Monday night game, the Chicago Blitz trimmed the Arizona Wranglers 36-11 before 13,952 fans in Soldiers Field at Chicago.

In weekend games, Denver edged Birmingham 21-19 on Friday and on Sunday Boston upset Philadelphia 21-17, New Jersey downed Washington 32-29 and Oakland topped Los Angeles 20-10.

THE PANTHERS also got a boost from quarterback Bobby Hebert, who completed 13 of 23 passes for 166 yards and one touchdown, and a fired-up defense that forced four fumbles, blocked a punt and recorded six sacks for 48 yards.

"All year long, we'd make mistakes, but our defense would bail us out," said Tampa Bay Coach Steve Spurrier of his club's play. "We couldn't do it today. Michigan got up early and never quit."

Michigan's 43 points was the highest of any team in the USFL as the Panthers raised their record to 8-5 in the Central Division. Tampa Bay and Chicago share the Central lead with 9-4 records.

Tampa Bay's lone touchdown came on Jimmy Jordan's 37-yard pass to Eric Truvillion in the third quarter.

Frank Corral kicked four field goals and Lenny Willis returned a punt 40 yards for a TD to lead the Blitz, avenging a 30-29 loss to Arizona earlier in the season. The Wranglers dropped to 4-9 in the Pacific Division.

Rookie Tim Koegel, making his first start, hit on 12 of 29 passes for 202 yards. Wide receiver Trumaine Johnson had four receptions for 117 yards, including a 36-yarder for a TD.

The Wranglers scored on their first possession when Tom Risher connected on a 21-yard pass to Neil Balholm. The Blitz dominated play the rest of the way.

BOSTON'S VICTORY over Philadelphia dropped the Stars to 11-2 and kept them from clinching the Atlantic Division title with five weeks left to play. The Breakers remained nominally in contention with an 8-5 record.

Philadelphia led 17-13 with 1:50 left when Boston began a march from its own 35.

With four seconds left, Johnnie Walton heaved his desperation pass from the Stars' 14 into the end zone. It deflected off Charlie Smith, the intended receiver, and into the hands of Frank Lockett, who was standing unguarded about five yards away.

In Washington, the Federals absorbed their 12th loss in 13 games when Dave Betz, who had replaced Dave Jacobs as New Jersey's kicker just last week, booted a 50-yard field goal as time ran out. The Generals' Herschel Walker gained a league record 194 yards rushing, including an 83-yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage as the Generals improved their record to 4-9.

Oakland's win over Los Angeles put the two teams in a tie for the lead with 6-7 records in the league's undistinguished Pacific Division.

The key touchdown for the Invaders came in the third quarter, when Fred Besana threw from the Los Angeles 38 to Raymond Chester at the 5. Chester fell and fumbled at the 2, but recovered the ball in the end zone to give Oakalnd a 14-7 lead it never lost.

Connors, McEnroe last hopes for American victory

United States men haven't won French Open tennis in 28 years

PARIS (AP) — Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe remain the last hopes for the first victory by an American male in 28 years at the French Open tennis tournament.

Connors, the 30-year-old top seed, meets unseeded Christophe Roger-Vasselin, a 25-year-old Frenchman ranked 130th, today to battle for a berth in the semifinals of the first grand slam event of the year.In the only other men's quarterfinal today, hometown favorite Yannick Noah, the No.6 seed, takes on Czech Ivan Lendl, seeded third.

McEnroe, the second seed, plays again on either Wednesday or Thursday against defending champion Mats Wilander, the 18-year-old Swede who last year became the youngest man to ever win a grand slam title.

McEnroe, 24, survived his quarterfinal match Monday with a 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1 victory over No.10 seed Eliot Teltscher, a 24-year-old from Sebring, Fla. Wilander moved into the quarterfinals Monday by defeating fellow Swede Henrik Sundstrom, seeded 14th, 6-4, 6-1, 6-3.

Meanwhile, McEnroe, the fiery New Yorker, came under fire for his on-court outbursts by fellow American Tim Mayotte, playing in England.

"It is time to stop all the buffoonery," said Mayotte, who is playing in the Northern Grass Court Tennis Championships at Manchester. "The only way is to keep McEnroe out of Wimbledon and the other top tournaments. I feel sure that would get the backing of all the leading players.

"You have to fight fire with fire on these occasions."

Last Saturday, McEnroe was fined a total of $3,000 for physical and verbal abuse during his first-round match against Ben Testerman in the French Open. He has now been fined a total of $5,750 in the last 12 months, moving him close to the $7,500 limit that would mean a 42-day suspension from all Grand Prix tournaments, pending appeal.

IN THE two other men's fourth-round matches played monday, No.4 seed Argentine Guillermo Vilas, the 1977 champion, doused the hot streak of Jimmy Arias, an 18-year-old from Grand Island, N.Y., who won the Italian Open earlier this month.

Vilas outstroked Arias 7-5, 6-3, 6-2 and plays his quarterfinal match later this week against No.8 seed Jose Higueras of Spain, who earlier Monday eliminated Andres Gomez of Ecuador 7-6, 6-4, 7-6.

The big upset of the day monday came when Britain's Jo Durie, an unseeded 22-year-old, toppled No.4 seed Tracy Austin 6-1, 4-6, 6-0 to reach the women's semifinals at this $1.3 million clay court tournament.

In the other women's quarterfinals settled Monday, Yugoslav Mima Jausovec, who took the French title in 1977, stopped the spectacular advance of Kathy Horvath, a 17-year-old from Florida who had defeated top-seed Martina Navratilova in the round of 16. Jausovec, an unseeded 26-year-old, plays Durie later in the week.

Three other American women still face quarterfinal duals today. No.2 seed Chris Evert Lloyd, now favored to win her fifth title here, plays No. 8 seed Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia while No. 3 seed Andrea Jaeger faces Gretchen Rush, a 19-year-old student at Trinity University in Texas, who is playing in Paris as an amateur.

CONNORS AND McEnroe are attempting to become the first American man to win the French Open since Tony Trabert took the title in 1955.

"I'm hitting a lot of good balls," Connors said going into his Tuesday match against Roger-Vasselin. "I have a good topspin, good slice and am hitting a variety of shots. I'm happy to stay out there for six hours and hit 15 or 20 balls in one point. I'm not scared."

Connors last year was eliminated in a quarterfinal match of the French Open, the only grand slam title that has eluded him.

"When I left here last year and changed to grass, I decided to improve my serve, to attack more and to get to the net more and that is what is helping me here," Connors said. "I'm getting a lot more first serves in with more speed and getting to the net more. I'm also volleying better, too."

Staubach just another 'Dallas Cowboy fan'

DALLAS (AP) — It took a while for Roger Staubach to finally get over a case of "retirement syndrome" after he left the Dallas Cowboys, but now the former quarterback says he's just another fan.

In an interview with The Dallas Morning News, Staubach said it's been easier to get along without pro football with each passing season since he announced his retirement in May 1980.

The first year away was difficult, the second year and little easier, the third year easier still, Staubach said.

And now?

"I'm just another Dallas Cowboy fan," he said.

Staubach, 41, still runs 20-24 miles a week and still looks fit enough to return to the Cowboys' huddle, where he called the plays that led the team to the Super Bowl four times in eight years, with Dallas winning twice.

He will be inducted into the Texas Sports Hall of Fame in Grand Prairie next Saturday.

"There's still that feeling of accomplishment," Staubach said. "I'll never lose that feeling. I know that if Roger Staubach never does anything the rest of his life, I did do something in one area that was very special. It's just that you can't play 'til your 70 years old. There's a physical thing that won't let you do that."

Staubach is not without challenges now. In addition to his wife and five children, he's involved in a real estate business. He also continues to set goals for himself.

"There are a lot of floaters in this world," he said. "Floaters that have had good opportunity not to float. That's a waste."

As a quarterback, Coach Tom Landry called all the plays. Now, Staubach calls them for his business — and he likes that.

"I like being in a position where I can call my own shots," he said.

Staubach, who became a partner in the real estate business in 1977, is involved primarily in developing commercial real estate, especially small office and condominium projects, and supervises 31 employees.

"Our business projections look good," he said. "Of course, a lot will depend upon the economy."

Staubach also has found that managing different personalities is not easy — a task faced each season by his former boss, Landry.

"You want everybody to get along," Staubach said. "You want to create a Utopia, an atmosphere where everybody is happy. But that's impossible, of course."

Staubach has picked up some money doing commercial endorsements — but he has turned down others, including some in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"I want people I do business with to take me seriously," he said. "I don't want them to think I'm always out doing some commercial instead of protecting their interests. And, after all, it is my personal investment."

1927 — First baseman Johnny Neun of the Detroit Tigers duplicated Jim Cooney's feat from the day before when he snagged Homer Summa's line drive, tagged Charlie Jamieson between first and second and then touched second base before Glenn Myatt cound return for an unassisted triple play against the Cleveland Indians, who lost the game 1-0.

1937 — New York Giants hurler Carl Hubbell's 24-game winning streak ended with a loss to the Brooklyn Dodgers.

1964 — The New York Mets and San Francisco Giants played the longest doubleheader by time in major league history — 10 hours, 16 minutes — with the help of a 23-inning marathon in the nightcap, won by the visiting Giants 8-6 on run-scoring hits by Del Crandall and Felipe Alou against Galen Cisco. The second game took 7:23 to play.

Did You Know?...

The Dean brothers, Dizzy and Paul, won all four games for the St. Louis Cardinals in the 1934 World Series against Detroit. Each won two games.

When will Cooney step into ring again?

The question isn't when will Larry Holmes fight for the last time, it's when will Gerry Cooney fight again?

Holmes says this will be his last year of fighting, which could mean one more fight, two more fights or no more fights. The 33-year-old World Boxing Council champion has already defended the title twice this year, and in his most recent bout he had real trouble in scoring a split decision over 25-year-old Tim Witherspoon.

Cooney, still called a contender although he has not fought since being stopped in the 13th round by Holmes last June 11, seems enthusiastic about returning to action, something he was set to do June 18.

Last Thursday after seeing a doctor in Boston, Cooney said his badly swollen middle knuckle on his left hand wouldn't keep him from fighting Phillip Brown, a former Cooney sparring partner, June 18 at Las Vegas.

Sunday, Mike Jones, Cooney's co-manager, said the fight against Brown won't be held until mid or late July. It is another in a growing list of Cooney postponements.

"He just hasn't had enough time to spar," said Jones, noting that Cooney has sparred only 14 rounds since opening training for the Brown fight and that the knuckle was inflamed after Cooney worked three rounds Friday.

Cooney said he injured the knuckle ten weeks ago. "I don't know how these thing happen."

But they do happen, and how much longer can they happen before Cooney might decide it's not worth the effort and frustration?

In 1980, a Cooney fight against Earnie Shavers was called off because of a finger injury to Cooney.

A fight against Ken Norton was postponed when Cooney developed a back problem. When the fight was held May 11, 1981, Cooney knocked out Norton in 54 seconds.

Cooney was set to fight an exhibition with Joe Bugner in January, 1982, to help him tune up for a March fight against Holmes. The exhibition was cancelled because Cooney had back trouble again, and he went into the title bid against Holmes with no action since his brief appearance against Norton.

And the March fight against Holmes was postponed for three months when Cooney hurt his left shoulder while sparring.

The lastest injury might have knocked out a rematch against Holmes, something Cooney says he wants badly.

Some boxing people feel that Holmes would like to fight Cooney again in a big-money match. They note that Holmes talked up Cooney following his tight squeeze against Witherspoon, calling him the best heavyweight other than himself.

Bucs hammer Braves

By The Associated Press

The Lumber Co. is back in business at Three Rivers Stadium, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Pirates hit four homers, two by Dale Berra, to beat the Atlanta Braves 8-6 Monday, and Manager Chuck Tanner says he never gave up hope.

"We haven't been hitting, but I've known all along we were going to," Tanner said. "I've been looking for this."

The Pirates' bats, suffering from a severe case of termite infestation, had produced a team batting average of only .255 coming into the game. But they pounded out 14 hits Monday, including eight in 4⅔ innings off Braves rookie ace Craig McMurtry.

"The past tells it," said Berra, who had never hit two homers in one game before. "When I hit, we seem to win. I don't know what it is, but it is ironic."

Cardinals 9, Reds 1

Darrell Porter drove in four runs with a two-run triple and a home run, and John Stuper scattered nine hits to lead St. Louis to its sixth victory in seven games. Stuper lost his shutout in the ninth inning when Dan Driessen scored on Duane Walker's groundout.

The Cardinals pounded out 14 hits off three Cincinnati pitchers, including starter Ted Power, who lasted only 2⅓ innings. Keith Hernandez had a double and a triple, and Tommy Herr had three singles.

Astros 9, Cubs 7

Terry Puhl hit a two-run triple with two out in the eighth inning to snap a 7-7 tie and lead Houston over Chicago in the first game of their three-game set. The Cubs led twice, 4-1 and 6-3, but had to rally with a run in sixth to tie the score 7-7 on Bill Buckner's second homer of the game and four this year.

Leon Durham also homered for Chicago, and Jose Cruz hit one out for the Astros, helping to make a winner of reliever Bill Dawley, 3-1.

Giants 5, Mets 0

Darrell Evans hit his 11th homer of the season to back the combined five-hit pitching of Fred Breining and a pair of relievers. Breining, 5-4, allowed two hits in five innings. Andy McGaffigan pitched two hitless innings of relief, and Jim Barr finished up, allowing three hits in two innings.

Evans' solo homer came in the first off Neil Allen. The Giants scored twice more in the second and chased Allen with two more in the fifth, giving them an 18-7 record in the month of May. The Giants have won six of their last seven games.

Dodgers 5, Phillies 2

Burt Hooton hurled a seven-hitter for his first complete game of the season and drove in four runs with a double and a single in beating Philadelphia for the fourth time in a row and seventh in his last eight decisions against them.

The Dodgers erased a 1-0 deficit in the second inning when consecutive singles by Rick Monday, Steve Yeager and Bill Russell loaded the bases and Hooton cleared them with a double down the left-field line.

Padres 5, Expos 4

Pinch hitter Ruppert Jones drew a bases-loaded walk with two out in the ninth inning from Montreal ace Steve Rogers to give San Diego a 5-4 victory over the Expos. Steve Garvey led off the ninth with a single off Rogers and Terry Kennedy grounded to first baseman Al Oliver, who threw wildly to second, putting runners at second and third. Sixto Lezcano was walked intentionally to load the bases and Rogers retired Tim Flannery on a pop-up and struck out pinch hitter Jerry Turner before walking Jones on a 3-2 pitch.

TCU coach expected NCAA title as final outcome

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The NCAA Women's Golf Championship at Athens, Ga., went exactly as Fred Warren thought it would. He figured that five good, solid Lady Frogs would be one too many for the other 16 teams that teed off last Wednesday for the 72-hole tournament.

And the TCU coach couldn't have been more accurate if he'd owned a crystal ball. Getting help from the No. 4 and No.5 spots each day, the Frogs upended defending champion Tulsa and won their first-ever national title by three strokes — overcoming a two-stroke deficit entering Saturday's final round over the University of Georgia course.

"Depth will be important in a four-day tournament," Warren had predicted Wednesday when the Frogs first teed off. "And I think we've got the best overall five players. If everyone just plays their normal game, I believe we'll win."

ON THE first day, junior Rae Rothfelder, who entered the tournament as the No. 5 player, chipped in with a three-over-par 77. Rothfelder came through the second day with a 76, and her 78 counted the third day when Jenny Lidback stumbled to a 79.

On Saturday's final day Anne Kelly, the senior who fired a 69 the final day of the Southwest Conference tournament to help the Frogs win that title, came through with a one-under par 73, and Rothfelder came through for the fourth straight day with a 74.

Warren, though, couldn't say enough about his freshman Rita Moore. The 18-year-old who had won the SWC individual trophy fired a three-under-par 71 the final day to outbattle two Curtis Cuppers — Kathy Baker of Tulsa and Cathy Hanlon of SMU. The hot finish allowed Moore to finish fourth in the individual race at 294.

However, Moore's accomplishments didn't earn her a spot on either the first two 10-player All-American teams and Warren was steaming about the snub.

MARCI BOZARTH, a senior who tied for fifth at 295, could understand Warren's feelings. According to her, Warren is responsible for this team winning the championship.

"He taught me how to set goals, and what I had to do to work for them," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram at the tournament. "When he came here, I didn't have very good work habits. I didn't practice much, either. But he's shown me how to discipline myself, and it's made a big difference in my game the last three years."

Warren said winning the NCAA title will no doubt help recruiting, but said, "actually the main thing is just having a good program. Then the girls you're trying to recruit will look at who you have coming back, and what kind of schedule you're going to play before making up their minds."

The thing about winning the title, he said, was that it gives TCU national exposure.

"When I came here four years ago, there were a number of girls I'd talk to who have never heard of TCU," he said.

Bozarth and teammate sophomore Jenny Lidback were named to the first All-America team. Bozarth and Anne Kelly are the only players Warren will lose, and he expects to have another strong team next year with the return of Lidback, Rothfelder, Moore and Kris Hanson, a junior who didn't qualify for the national trip but is another talented player. Warren also expects to bring in some good recruits.

BUT HE proved this year he can take a high school golfer who was bypassed by most schools and help turn her into a top-caliber competitor.

Moore, who played at Ursuline Academy in Dallas, was virtually overlooked by most recruiters since she had only a modest record. Her best achievements inlcuded winnign the Texas State junior championship in 1980 and finishing second in the 1981 Texas Amateur Championship.

"He was really the only coach who was watching Rita and noticed how she was improving," said Rita's mother. "He was scared to death that someone else might notice, too. Some athletes are just late developing, and I think that's Rita's case."

It also didn't help Rita's ratings when she began turning in scores in the 90s when she was 16. But that came during a transistion period when she was taking lessons from touring pro Marilyn Smith. They were, incidentally, Rita's first lessons even though she had began playing golf at the age of 10.

Mrs. Moore liked Smith's positive attitude and the discipline she was instilling in her daughter. Those were two of the same qualities she saw in Warren when he began watching Rita.

"They've both been good to Rita," Mrs. Moore said.

WARREN HELPED improve Rita's distance off the tee by putting her on an exercise program. One of the drills was swinging a golf club with just her left arm.

"I couldn't even make it swish when I first started," Rita said.

"She probably was hitting the ball about 180 yards off the tee when she first got here," Warren said. "But she's hitting the ball much farther now. Sometimes she can be just as long as anyone off the tee."

"Even the other girls on the team have told me I'm hitting the ball longer, and Jenny says she was going to start doing the exercises. She doesn't want me to start outhitting her," Rita said with a laugh.

Chisox down Bosox, 6-4

By The Associated Press

Fenway Park's Green Monster was no match for Chicago rookie Ron Kittle, who is rapidly becoming pretty much of a monster to American League pitchers.

Boston's Bruce Hurst, who blanked Chicago on three hits last week, felt Kittle's thunder when he surrendered a tie-breaking home run in the fourth inning — Kittle's 11th of the season, tying him for the AL lead — and Carlton Fisk added a solo homer in the fifth as the White Sox defeated the Red Sox 6-4 Monday.

Kittle, who also singled and stole a base in Chicago's fourth consecutive victory, had plenty of help from Fisk, who also had two singles and scored three runs.

"When I saw the Green Monster, or whatever they call that left-field wall here, I was sorry that we couldn't take batting practice," Kittle said. "I also was worried about missing BP for the third day in a row.

"Actually, though, it probably helped. If I had tried to hit the ball over the wall in BP, I probably would have done it during the game. That would have been a mistake. The way things went I just tried to keep my mind off the wall and concentrate on the pitches."

Kittle is batting a respectable .271 and has driven in 36 runs.

Indians 6, Angels 5

At Cleveland, Broderick Perkins' tie-breaking pinch single with the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth enabled the Indians to end a four-game skid and snap California's seven-game winning streak. Mike Hargrove led off with a single and took second on a wild pitch by reliever Luis Sanchez. After Andre Thornton was intentionally walked, Toby Harrah beat out a bunt to load the bases. Julio Franco grounded into a force at the plate before Perkins came through.

Blue Jays 6, Tigers 4

At Detroit, Damaso Garcia and Buck Martinez delivered RBI singles in the 10th inning as Toronto snapped the Tigers' five-game winning streak and took a one-game lead over Boston in the AL East. After being held hitless for six innings by Dave Stieb, Detroit rallied for four runs in the ninth, three on Lance Parrish's double, to send the game into extra innings. But Alfredo Griffin led off the Toronto 10th with e double off Dave Gumpert and Garcia singled him home. Lloyd Moseby hit his seventh home run of the season and third in two games in the top of the ninth, an inside-the-park shot.

Orioles 6, Twins 1

At Minneapolis, Eddie Murray drilled a three-run homer and Mike Boddicker scattered five hits over seven shutout innings in his fifth major league start. Murray's homer, his fifth, came with two out in the thrd inning after a walk to Al Bumbry and Cal Ripken's double. Ripken hit his seventh homer in the eighth inning to seal Minnesota's fifth straight loss.

Yankees 10, A's 5

At New York, Dave Winfield's bases-loaded triple highlighted a six-run rally in the eighth inning that gave the Yankees their first four-game winning streak of the season. With one out, singles by Graig Nettles, Andre Robertson and Ken Griffey off Tom Burgmeier produced the tying run and Steve McCatty walked Roy Smalley to load the bases. Winfield then tripled for his eighth game-winning RBI of the season — tops in the AL — and scored on Don Baylor's suicide squeeze bunt.

Brewers 6, Mariners 3

At Milwaukee, hard-luck Jerry Augustine, who had pitched only 2 2-3 innings since April 14 because of injuries, hurled eight strong innings and Jim Gantner drove in three runs with a homer and a single as Milwaukee snapped Seattle's four-game winning streak.

ARCO track to run at Lee

The ARCO—Jesse Owens Games will hold its initial competition in Midland on Saturday, June 11 at Midland Lee's track field.

The goal of the games, with competition determined by age in three different groups, is to help build interest in the sport of track. Winners of each event will earn an all-expense trip to Dallas to compete in the regional meet and all Dallas winners will receive a trip to Los Angeles to compete at nationals.

Other awards include: ribbons for first through third place finishes in each event and all-participants will receive a T-shirt. There is no entry fee to compete. Proof of age may be required.

Under the meet's format, 28 competitors from Midland are guaranteed a berth in the regional meet — 14 boys and 14 girls. An individual may enter only one event.

Forms for the meet can be picked up at all sporting goods stores, the YMCA, Parks and Recreation Department and at the local Boy and Girl Scout offices. Entry forms should be returned to the Parks and Recreation Department at 300 Baldwin.

LCC posts 7-1 victory in NAIA World Series

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Host Lubbock Christian used Dan O'Connor's two-run double to ignite a five-run fifth inning and beat Southwestern 7-1 in the first round of the NAIA World Series.

Union University of Tennessee, top-ranked Lewis-Clark State of Idaho and Coastal Carolina also came up winners Monday in the double elimination tournament.

Union beat Williams Jewell of Missouri in a wild 13-12 contest; Lewis-Clark ran over College of St. Francis of Illinois 15-2, and Coastal Carolina defeated Liberty Baptist 5-2.

In today's second round, William Jewell will play College of St. Francis at 10 a.m; Liberty Baptist and Southwestern play at 1 p.m.; Union plays Southern Arkansas, which got a first-round bye, at 5 p.m.; and Lubbock Christian plays Kansas Newman, which got a first round bye, at 8 p.m.

Southern Arkansas and Kansas Newman got first-round byes. Coastal Carolina and Lewis-Clark State received byes for the second round.

DAVID BULLS hurled a seven-hitter for Lubbock Christian and lost his shutout in the ninth. Southwestern starter Russell Martin, 14-4, took the loss.

Coastal Carolina's Mark Clemmons allowed only five hits and his teammates capitalized on five Liberty Baptist errors to score four unearned runs in the third game.

Frank Talotta got the game's only RBI in the Coastal half of the first. The South Carolina college then scored three unearned runs in the third and another in the seventh.

Liberty Baptist of Virginia scored two unearned runs in the fifth.

Clemmons, 10-4, got the win and Kyle Bryan, 8-4, got the loss while giving up just six hits and one earned run.

Lewis-Clark's Jim O'Dell set a new college RBI record when he cracked a three-run homer that sparked an eight-run second-inning outburst that crushed College of St. Francis.

O'Dell's homer gave him a college baseball record 131 RBIs and extended the top-ranked Idaho school's record to 66-5.

Brian Thomas also got a second-inning homer and drove in a total of four runs for Lewis-Clark. David Martinez got four of the Warriors' 16 hits and Thomas and Chad Miltenberger each had three.

Sneva's 10-year wait is over

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Sneva waited 10 frustrating years for his first victory in the Indianapolis 500, an unusually long apprenticeship for a first-time winner.

He's not complaining now.

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway increased the total purse by more than $340,000 from last year, sweetening its payoff to $2,411,450 — the biggest prize package in auto-racing history.

And Sneva, a former schoolteacher who will be 35 on Wednesday, earned a record $285,886 of that for himself and the rest of the Bignotti-Cotter Racing Team.

"It's quite a relief," the spectacled driver said, feigning seriousness as he accepted the largest paycheck of his career at the annual Victory Dinner Monday night. "After I heard last place paid $50,000 and 32nd place was $45,000, I wasn't sure when it was all over that I'd wouldn't owe the Speedway money."

Each driver, in the reverse order of finish, was called to the podium to accept his award. The reason Chet Fillip, who finished 33rd, earned more than 32nd-place George Snider was that he received an extra $5,000 in accessory prizes.

BY THE time Sneva came forward, however, it was obvious his award was going to be considerably more than even he expected; nearly $100,000 more than Gordon Johncock received for winning the race last year.

"It's a lot of money," Sneva said.

Actually, he won't get all of it. The driver usually gets a fixed percentage, agreed to before the race. Sneva wouldn't say exactly how much he'll take home, but he admitted he's "going to end up with 40-plus percent. We'll find something to do with it."

That still would be more than $154,000 — not a bad haul for three hours of driving. His teammate, fifth-place finisher Kevin Cogan, added another $73,756 to the Bignotti team effort.

SUNDAY'S VICTORY was well-rewarded, and well-deserved. Sneva had trouble with his primary race car early in the month in practice, then switched rides to his backup machine and finally found the speed to qualify at 203.687 mph, good for a second-row start.

"I didn't have to work too hard, but the crew worked very hard. If it wasn't for them, we wouldn't be up here," said Sneva, whose crew chief George Bignotti got his seventh career victory at Indy. "It was a team effort."

Sneva stayed up front the entire race, never falling below sixth place. He took a seemingly comfortable lead in the late going but lost it to Al Unser after a lengthy pit stop, and he had to play catch-up for the next 20 laps or so. It was made more difficult by the intentional imposition of Al Unser Jr., the three-time winner's son, between the two leaders.

Twice, Sneva almost caught Al Jr. going high on the track the first time and down low toward the apron the next. Both times, the 21-year-old rookie chopped him off at the first turn, preserving the lead for his dad. Finally, when all three cars, separated by less than one second, overtook some slower traffic, Sneva maneuvered around Al Jr. and then swept by Big Al for a lead he never lost.

Silicon Valley: haven for entrepreneurs

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SUNNYVALE, Calif. — Here at Nolan Bushnell's Catalyst Technologies, where inventors and entrepreneurs are subsidized to produce Bushnell's favorite high-tech ideas, there is an arcade providing free video games 24 hours a day, and dancing robots supplying the entertainment at office parties.

At Apple Computer in Cupertino, Calif., each employee receives an Apple personal computer to take home.

At ASK Computer Systems in Los Altos, Calif., there is an in-house beer blast every Friday afternoon.

At Sunnyvale's Televideo, President K. Philip Hwang (who refers to Atari founder Bushnell as an "idol" he worked to emulate) recently found himself to be worth about half a billion dollars when Televideo went public in February. In this part of the world, that is not exactly big news. But at Televideo, a dozen employees simultaneously became millionaires due to their stock holdings.

WELCOME TO SANTA Clara County's Silicon Valley, the 25-mile-long strip of land southeast of San Francisco known in pre-tech days as "the peninsula." It stretches physically from Palo Alto to San Jose but mentally, emotionally and perhaps spiritually the area has begun appearing in dozens of cities across the country, all of which hope to lure more high-tech industry by claiming to be long-distance subdivisions of the famous original.

The Silicon Valley has become so celebrated of late that Avon Books recently published "The Official Silicon Valley Guy Handbook." The satire of the region is subtitled, "A Total Guide to Digit Heads: How to Maintain, Program and Interface with Silicon Valley Guys."

For those who have never visited the home of the microelectronics revolution, the mental pictures that emerge are typically grim: row upon row of faceless, high-tech factories, wire mazes further blighting the asphalt landscape and, of course, streets paved with silicon microchips, which were invented here and form the soul of today's computers.

Indeed, in 1981 when journalists convened here to cover California's emerging Mediterranean fruit-fly crisis, Sunnyvale Mayor Diane McKenna says that they were frequently shocked to discover that the area had so many trees — along with pleasant residential areas and a highway (Interstate 280) claiming to be the "World's Most Beautiful Freeway."

THE JOURNALISTS WERE similarly amazed, she added, to find that the residents of the famed Silicon Valley were not all electronics "nerds" who dropped out of MIT, started software companies in their rented garages, worked 48 hours a day and banked their first millions by the time they were 25.

Such stereotypes may have a basis in fact. But a larger truth is that this so-called worker's paradise, this valley reknowned for its overnight tycoons and limitless opportunity, has not been completely overrun by wild-eyed developers and gleeful workaholics. It is still a relatively stunning place to live — by the standards of both outsiders and residents.

Surrounded by mountains, lined everywhere with trees (left from the pear and apricot orchards that dominated the valley until the late 1960s), rapid expansion of companies such as Hewlett-Packard, Apple, Intel, Atari, National Semiconductor and hundreds of other multinational corporations, has retained a good deal of attractiveness despite the favored with picture postcard views and even some remaining chunks of open land, the area

And there is one town here, Los Altos Hills, population 7,500, that bans all commercial activity except for a few working fruit orchards left over from the early days.

Los Angeles Times Photo: Mary Frampton

Lorel Kish, president of TimberTech computer camp, stands with a few of the Androbots on her staff. Kish says the entrepreneurial spirit of Silicon Valley attracted her to the area, which is southeast of San Francisco.

THE KEY PROBLEM (or opportunity, as the entrepreneurs would point out) now facing most of the valley's other cities and the county itself is how to maintain a high quality of life yet take advantage of the remarkable growth that now ranks Santa Clara County as the highest per capita income county in the nation.

In short, residents repeatedly say, that the area has everything going for it, but unless the growth is controlled, the place is in danger of looking and feeling and breathing like Los Angeles.

There are some ominous comparisons to support such fears with similarities in traffic congestion foremost among them. In Sunnyvale, for instance, which contains the highest concentration of high-tech companies in the valley, the population is about 110,000 but an additional 85,000 people commute to the city to work every day. For Stephanie, an Atari receptionist who refused to give her last name, that translates to a one-hour drive each morning on the freeway.

"It's just like L.A.," she sighed, explaining that her drive from Los Gatos to Sunnyvale should take 20 minutes and that she arrives at 6 a.m. because that is when "everybody comes to work."

LEONARD NEWMAN, THE Caltrans chief of the highway operation branch for the Bay Area counties, affirms that bumper-to-bumper horrors of the Silicon Valley are, in fact, among the worst in the state. Fifty percent of the traffic congestion in the nine Bay Area counties occurs in Santa Clara County, he says, noting that the Santa Clara County traffic pileups far exceed those in San Francisco. "As far as individual roads go, there are probably some spots as bad as the bottlenecks in Los Angeles," Newman said.

In Cupertino, citizens attempted to get a growth-restricting initiative on the ballot, a measure ensuring that if traffic reached critical levels (as measured by flow at intersections) that the city would have to limit development. The proposal never qualified for the ballot, however, due to technicalities.

In San Jose, the city is putting $90 million into a new freeway and a light rail system is under development. But at the same time, the city is working to lure more high-tech companies to locate within its limits and has the most available space (about 5,000 acres of industrially zoned land).

While the county's prospects for immediate traffic relief look about as dim as those in Los Angeles, there are entrepreneurs here who even capitalize on the traffic.

BUSINESSWOMAN LOREL Kish, for example, knew last year that if she wanted everybody in the valley to know about the opening of TimberTech, the computer camp that she created with Nolan Bushnell, the best way to reach them would be by having a banner announcement flown over the rush hour freeway traffic. In addition to serving as president of TimberTech, where her camp directors introduce kids to computer programming and robots, Kish is a prime mover and shaker in Bushnell's venture capital organization, Catalyst Technologies.

Shamrock, Natomas will merge tax-free

Dallas (SWN) — William H. Bricker, chairman and chief executive officer of Diamond Shamrock Corporation, Dallas, and Dorman L. Commons, chairman and chief executive officer of Natomas Company, San Francisco, today jointly announced that a definitive agreement to merge the companies through an exchange of stock would be submitted for a vote of the shareholders of both companies in approximately 90 days. As a result, Diamond Shamrock is withdrawing its tender offer filed May 23, 1983, with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The merger is expected to qualify as a tax-free reorganization.

Under the terms of the agreement, Natomas shareholders will receive 1.05 shares of Diamond Shamrock common stock for each of the approximately 55,750,000 shares of Natomas common stock presently outstanding. In addition, through a spin off, the stockholders of Natomas will receive all of the shares of a new public company which will hold the assets and continue the businesses of Natomas Transportation Company and Natomas Real Estate Company. Natomas Transportation Company is the parent company for American President Lines, Ltd. In 1982, Natomas Transportation Company had revenues of approximately $647 million.

In addition, the agreement provides Diamond Shamrock the option to tender for up to $300 million worth of its own common shares at some future d!te.

Diamond Shamrock's Bricker said, "In terms of both operations and geography, the two companies have an excellent strategic fit. The merger significantly strengthens the energy involvement of both companies in the strategically important Pacific Basin. Natomas's Indonesian operations, in particular, are among the most attractive and productive sources of crude oil in the growing Pacific Basin. This enhanced potential augments strong domestic operations which will represent approximately 80 percent of the combined companies' assets.

"The combination's strength in energy will be broadened further by Natomas's geothermal business which is generally recognized as the largest and finest commercial application of geothermal energy in the world.

"In addition," Bricker said, "the structure proposed for the merger will result in a company with strong cash flow, and debt as a percent of capitalization will remain well within the 35-40 percent range we believe is optimum for Diamond Shamrock."

Natomas's Commons said, "I am especially pleased that the managements of the two companies were able to professionally and constructively structure a merger in the best interests of all concerned. Stockholders of the resulting combination will emerge with holdings in a stronger, broader-based energy company. They, and employees throughout the merged organization, will benefit from enhanced opportunities for growth.

"At American President Lines," Commons said, "both employees and stockholders will have a stake in the finest, most modern U.S. flagship carrier in the Pacific, operating independently under the capable direction of Bruce Seaton."

Seaton is president of Natomas and of Natomas Transportation Company.

"Most important, this agreement creates the stability and continuity so neccessary for constructive planning among shareholders, employees and the communities which we serve," Commons said.

Under the agreement, Natomas will become a wholly-owned subsidiary of Diamond Shamrock, with headquarters in San Francisco. The agreement calls for Commons to continue as chairman of Natomas and to become a vice chairman of Diamond Shamrock's Board of Directors.

The agreement also calls for the addition to Diamond Shamrock's board of one member of Natomas's management in addition to Commons and two additional non-employee directors selected in concert by Diamond Shamrock and Natomas management.

Diamond Shamrock (NYSE-DIA) is a domestic integrated oil and gas company headquartered in Dallas, Texas. Sales and operating revenues in 1982 were $3.2 billion.

Stripper well production jumps

SEATTLE — Production of crude oil from the nation's stripper oil wells was substantially higher in 1982 than in 1981, the National Stripper Well Association reported during its spring meeting.

A stripper well is one producing 10 barrels or less a day. About 85 percent of the oil wells in the United States fall in this category.

NSWA estimated 1982 production at about 439 million barrels, almost 12.5 million barrels more than 1981 production of 426.5 million barrels.

However, G.E. Stahl of Amarillo, Texas, an independent oil producer who is also president of the Tulsa-based national association, pointed out that the 1982 increase was less than half the increase registered in 1981 over 1980. That increase was 25.5 million barrels — from 401 million barrels in 1980 to 426.5 million in 1981.

Stahl said the 1982 slowdown in the rate of increase was due to several adverse factors, including the impact of the Crude Oil Windfall Profits Tax. Other factors were a decline in crude oil prices, the general slowdown in the world economy and conservation measures that helped slow down energy fuel demand.

He said the exemption of oil produced by independent oil producers from the Windfall Profits tax-an exemption which became effective January 1 of this year - would help offset the adverse factors to some extent. But, he warned, increased oil taxes or other adverse action by federal or state governments could bring about a decline, rather than an increase, in annual production of stripper and other domestic oil.

Stahl said that in the five years before the oil embargo in the winter of 1973-74, domestic stripper oil was declining an average of 15 million barrels a year.

"This decline resulted from the flood of cheap oil from the Middle East and elsewhere," he said, "Yet there were those who said higher prices for domestic oil wouldn't help because this nation was running out of oil. What happened after the embargo when world oil prices rose sharply and when stripper oil was exempt from the U.S. oil price controls clearly proved that it was the lack of economic incentive, not the lack of oil to be found in this country, that caused the sharp decline in stripper oil production in the years before the embargo."

He said that by 1973 stripper oil production had dropped to 385.6 million barrels a year. "That is a far cry from the 439 million barrels produced in 1982."

"Furthermore," he pointed out, "if the pre-embargo rate of decline of 15 million barrels annually had continued to the present, 1982 stripper oil production would have around 250 million barrels instead of 439 million barrels. That's a big difference and its the result of one thing: increased economic incentive."

Stahl said the 1973-74 oil embargo clearly demonstrated the danger of too great a dependence on foreign sources for vital domestic energy fuel needs.

"We have made some headway in recent years in reducing that dependency, but we still have a long way to go. This certainly is no time for the federal government to hike oil taxes again or to take other actions that would reduce incentive for domestic energy development," he said, "Yet there are those in Washington D.C., and elsewhere who are advocating such measures."

The Association's estimate of 1982 production was based on preliminary figures from five key stripper oil producing states — Texas, Oklahoma, California, Kansas, and Ohio. These five states account for about 80 percent of the nation's production of stripper oil. Final figures on 1982 production will be published in October in a National Stripper Well Survey, a joint project done annually by the National Stripper Well Association and the Interstate Oil Compact Commission.

The preliminary 1982 figures on the five key states (with 1981 production in parentheses) are: Texas, 147,436,178 bbl. (145,939,797 bbl.); Oklahoma, 88,435,750 bbl. (83,248,733 bbl.); California, 55,419,356 bbl. (54,803,777 bbl.); Kansas, 49,596,103 bbl. (45,010,362 bbl.); Ohio, 10,199,361 bbl. (9,485,947 bbl.).

The National Stripper Well Association, organized in 1934, works with and through the Independent Petroleum Association of American (IPAA) and other producer organizations to tell the story of "Little Oil," the stripper well category.

Investors still 'bullish' on stocks

In the midst of a continuing boom on Wall Street, The Merit Report attempted to determine how the nation perceives the future of stock prices. Overall, Americans express a "bullish" outlook with a majority forecasting higher rather than lower stock prices in the future.

Specifically, when asked about year-end prices on the stock market, 53 percent of the public believes stock prices will be higher by the end of 1983 (45 percent slightly higher, 8 per cent much higher). Far fewer, 16 percent, think prices will drop (12 percent slightly lower, 4 percent much lower), 18 percent think they will remain about the same as current prices, while 13 percent expressed no opinion.

Dollar clobbers franc

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar hit a new all-time high against the French franc and gained on all other major currencies except the British pound in early trading today. Gold bullion prices were little changed.

West German traders attributed the dollar's strength to the weekend economic summit meeting of seven Western nations at Williamsburg, Va.

They said the summit produced no concrete measures likely to lower American interest rates. Higher interest rates make the dollar more attractive to investors.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose for a fifth straight session to close at 238.60 Japanese yen, compared with 238.45 Monday.

Later in Europe, the dollar hit a record high against the French franc for a fourth straight session. The dollar was quoted at 7.5595 francs, from 7.5495 Monday.

The British pound continued to benefit from market speculation of a victory by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party in Britain's June 9 general election.

Sterling was quoted at $1.6099, its highest level since Jan. 5, when it cost $1.6242. London markets were closed for a holiday Monday, but the pound was quoted at $1.6060 elsewhere in Europe during the previous session.

Oil stocks rated 'buy' despite pricing jitters

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern say the Oils Are Dead.

Well, it isn't quite that way. Henry Wojtyla, economist/strategist for Wall Street's Rosenkrantz, Ehrenkrantz, Lyon & Ross remains bearish on oil stocks.

Not surprisingly, he also thinks the current international oil price won't hold.

And you have to listen to Wojtyla. A few years ago, when the oil price was going straight up and oil equities were roaring, he was almost alone in predicting that the price would plummet as OPEC's puissance evaporated.

Wojtyla said that the worst areas to invest in during this recovery will be those related to the capital goods cycle — particularly, oils, machinery and mining stocks.

Wojtyla says he believes the current recovery, which should peak in mid-1985, "will not be long enough for a full-fledged capital spending boom to develop. This will provide confirmation that the period 1980 to 1986 represents the downside of the 12-year capital goods cycle, the 16th in U.S. history."

Wojtyla believes it's possible — but not certain — that "oil prices will collapse. Probably to below $20 a barrel, possibly to below $10 a barrel. But even at $18 to $20 a barrel, half of the $600 billion dollars in debt accumulated by the developing countries in a period of rapidly rising commodity prices and growing world trade will have become unrepayable in a period of stable to declining commodity prices and declining to stable world trade." He noted that from 1973 to 1982, in the United States, real (inflation-adjusted) economic growth was 18 percent, while energy use declined 5 percent. "There has been too much conservation of energy demand" for the oil price to drift down to $26 and then be supported at that level.

And he is not bullish on gold, either. There has been a "remarkable coincidence" between gold's price and oil's price since the early 1970s, and therefore if oil collapses, gold should, too.

OTHER STOCKS: GENERAL DYNAMICS RATES HIGH

General Dynamics disappointed the Street by only earning $1.03 in the first quarter, but Paul Nisbet of Prudential-Bache still rates it a buy. Margins are improving in several areas, the Missile & Gun Systems group is enjoying fast growth, the cruise missile program is on track and "we also expect that the General Dynamics F-16 may beat out the McDonnell-Douglas/Northrop F-18 as the U.S. entry in the competition for future Greek figher aircraft," says Nisbet, who feels that General Dynamics will earn $4.90 this year and $6.90 in 1984. John V. Pincavage of Wall Street's Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins isn't quite so enthusiastic: He rates the stock a "strong hold."

MOVE FAST: ONLY FIVE UNDERVALUED DJ STOCKS

Geraldine Weiss, author of Investment Quality Trends, says in the latest issue that only five of the 30 stocks comprising the Dow Jones Industrials are still undervalued. They are American Telephone, DuPont, Exxon, Merck and Texaco.

Richard Russell, writing in the current Dow Theory Letters, asks what's behind the "astounding performance" of the market, and lists some factors: 1. The breakout of the major averages from a 17-year trading range; 2. A flood of money pouring into mutual funds; 3. Money flooding into stocks through IRAs (individual retirement accounts); 4. The worldwide nature of the advance; 5. The fact that the big move was unexpected — thus, equities were "under-owned." 6. The growth of skepticism.

Fledgling business magazine joins AABP

West Texas Business magazine, a regional bi-monthly publication headquartered in San Angelo, has been accepted into membership of the Association of Area Business Publications, announces publisher Jerry F. Lackey.

"We received the good news from AABP president Erwin E. Coleman Following a meeting of the board in Chicago," he said.

AABP publications appear in virtually every important economic region in the United States and Canada. Total circultion of AABP publications nears the 1,000,000 mark. All are ABC or BPA audited. All are distributed — in pre-selected markets — to executives.

As West Texas Business approaches its first anniversary, the magazine has 7,661 subscribers. A second office was opened in Abilene in March to service that market. There are WTB representatives in the Midland-Odessa area, too.

"I am extremely plased that our young publicaton has now been accepted in this national network," commented Lackey. "This is most sgnificant in giving WTB national credibility."

The AABP, founded in 1979 by a handful of publishers, has experienced tremendous growth. In effect, the emergence of regional business publications has created a brand new industry and many major publishing companies are getting involved. Standard Rate and Data Service now recognizes the regional business publications, and has created a special category for them (20-A: Business — Metro, State & Regional).

The qualified personnel of Foto-Makers brings 110 years of photographic experience to Midland. The full-service photographic center is willing to share their knowledge with photographers of all levels of experience. Foto-Makers owners stress that "one of the key elements of our philosophy is the importance of personalized attention." The owners believe in complete service for customers, from processing to personalized service.

This personalized attention has been extended one step further. In May, Foto-Makers began issuing complimentary "photo-guides" with each roll of film developed on the premises. These photo-guides are designed to guide the photographer, acting as a personal critique.

Foto-Makers offers three categories of photo-guides; each one correcting a different problem. One photo-guide congratulates the quality of photographs taken. It reads, "You take beautiful photographs...The pictures are well taken and we congratulate you. Keep it up. If you have any questions about your camera, please feel free to ask. Our qualified and experienced personnel will be glad to help."

Photo-guide number two offers advice concerning the exposure of your photographs. The owners say, "You take beautiful photographs...But some are over-exposed/under-exposed. We will be glad to check your camera batteries and answer any questions. This is a complimentary service."

The third type of photo-guide is in the form of a blank card. This allows the staff to make corrections according to each customer's specific problem.

Every roll of 35 mm. film will be complimented with a Foto-Makers photo-guide, whether it be prints or slides. When the owners say, "You are in here for quality...Demand it!", be assured they will follow through with this philosophy.

Foto-Makers' comprehensive summer vacation program is currently in progress and experiencing tremendous success. Photographers of all levels are encouraged to enroll.

The program includes the availability of the lowest priced cameras in town - at cost plus $20. The staff will offer their expertise as to operating your new camera. Foto-Makers will process your film free, up to a total savings of over $100. All prints will be examined in order to solve individual problems. Through the summer vacation photography program, the quality of your photographs can only improve.

Foto-Makers' owners believe that "our best source of advertisement is word of mouth. This is why we constantly strive toward personalized service."

"Do us a favor.Spread the word around - only to those who believe in quality." Go where the professionals go for quality - Foto-Makers.

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, right, points to his jogging shoes on the floor of the Senate in Austin, and tells Gov. Mark White he is ready to filibuster again if necessary to kill passage of a bill to force farmers to extend workers compensation benefits to some farm workers.

Senator dons jogging shoes for filibuster

AUSTIN (AP) — Quiet-spoken Sen. Bill Sarpalius put on his blue and white jogging shoes for a second time within a week to defeat a House-approved bill to protect farm and ranch hands with workers compensation insurance.

"Farmers can't afford this," the Hereford Democrat said over and over Monday night as he halted almost all Senate business for the final two hours of the 140-day session.

Meanwhile, Mexican-American members of the Senate and House protested that Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby had been unfair in letting Sarpalius gain the floor. During his 1982 campaign for re-election, Hobby had endorsed workmen's compensation for farm workers.

"Bill Hobby has spoken. He has told us he does not want the support of Mexican-Americans in his next effort for political office," Sen. Hector Uribe told a news conference called while Sarpalius spoke.

Uribe, D-Brownsville, claimed Hobby should have recognized Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, to propose an amendment to Uribe's bill. Doggett admitted to the news conference that his sole reason for offering the amendment was to try to keep Sarpalius from getting the floor.

Hobby said Doggett's amendment was nothing but "improper parliamentary trickery," that violated an agreement which got Sarpalius to end another filibuster last Friday.

For more than two hours Monday night, Sarpalius strolled back and forth behind his desk talking in low tones about the financial plight of farmers and ranchers. At times, there were only two or three other senators in the chamber.

"Farmers and ranchers are still losing money," Sarpalius said. "If they were making money, this might be a bill we could look into."

Under Senate rules, a member delaying consideration of other legislation with a filibuster must remain on his feet, not lean on his desk and keep talking. He cannot leave his desk for any reason, even to go to the bathroom.

Uribe, Senate sponsor of the House-approved bill, got a vote of 21-10 to try one last time for final approval of the measure.

Last Friday night Sarpalius staged his first filibuster against the bill. After almost nine hours, in an agreement with Hobby and Uribe, he sat down and the Senate tentatively approved the bill, 16-11.

The agreement said Sarpalius would get a chance to talk some more when the bill came up for a final vote.

"Farmers cannot afford workers comp," Sarpalius said. "Farmers are losing money. We haven't passed any bills to help them make money. Here at the last of the session comes House Bill 521. What does it do?

The bill would have required employers of farm and ranch laborers to provide workers compensation insurance to pay the expenses of on-the-job injuries. Farmworkers are not currently covered by workers compensation laws.

Intrastate rivalries drown water bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A proposed state water plan designed to avert geographic bickering when it reached a statewide referendum never got past intrastate rivalry among legislators.

A provision that pitted West Texas lawmakers against their Gulf Coast colleagues stalled House-Senate negotiations on the measure in the final hours of the legislative session Monday.

The water plan, in the form of several proposed constitutional amendments, would have been put to voters in a statewide election in 1984. Like previous water plans, it would have faced scrutiny from interest groups as diverse as drought and flooding.

The package authorized $300 million in bonds for water projects, and put up $250 million in state money to back additional local bonds.

Senate sponsors of the package feared Gulf Coast interests would defeat the referendum if the proposal was weighted too heavily in favor of dry West Texas. They purposely included a measure designed to protect coastal shrimp estuaries from potential damage of upstream water projects.

House members, however, did not want an area they see as having an excess of water put above an agriculture industry struggling to survive on the arid plains.

They passed the water package but changed the bays and estuaries provision to make it difficult for downstream interests to challenge an upstream project.

"In our judgment, it is more important to quench the thirst of people and industry," said Rep. Gerald Geistweidt, R-Mason, at the panel's final meeting. "If we have enough water, then we can take care of the bays and estuaries."

"While agriculture up river is important, this is agriculture, too," argued Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, referring to the shrimping industry he said could lose billions of dollars if upstream projects choked off the flow of fresh water needed by the shellfish.

Geistweidt offered a compromise measure that would have made a court bond apply to both parties in a fight over a water project, but Sharp said because the bond would apply only to cases involving bays and estuaries, it would be ruled unconstitutional.

Sharp said the Senate might accept the bonding provision if another House provision — unseverability — were removed. Under the House language, one section of the measure could not be severed from the rest, so if the bonding section were ruled unconstitutional, the whole water package would be thrown out.

Man protests church's stand

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A defrocked homosexual minister knelt in silent protest after the United Methodist Church's Southwest Texas Conference affirmed its ban on homosexuals in the ministry.

Gene Leggett, who was removed from the ministry in 1971 after announcing he was a homosexual, staged his silent protest Monday after he was refused permission to address delegates considering the homosexual resolution.

"Many are afraid and unwilling to hear him speak," charged the Rev. William C. Renfro, a delegate from Austin who accepts Leggett's homosexuality. "The church is wrong in not allowing him to be himself.

"I hear a lot of self-righteous comments from people who consider homosexuality sinful," he said. "This could open up the way to ostracizing other 'sinful' people.'

Only about 100 of the approximately 900 delegates to the conference that meets here through Thursday voted to allow Leggett to speak. No one interfered with his silent protest.

The delegates voted almost unanimously to adopt the resolution affirming the ban on homosexuals becoming ordained ministers in the Southwest Region.

The vote came after delegates suspended the rules that usually require a 24-hour wait before voting on a resolution.

The delegates also voted Monday on official church appointments, leaving the name of self-proclaimed homosexual Troy Stokes of Austin off the list of nominees for the Board on Church and Society. His election to the board last year sparked a recall effort, protests and threats by local churches to withhold conference funding.

Leggett, an active lay member of Oaklawn United Methodist Church in Dallas, had staged several protests and attempts at reinstatement since his removal, but all have been unsuccessful.

He has also actively campaigned for the church to establish a ministry to serve the gay community.

His activities have met with staunch resistance from church members who see homosexuality as contrary to Christian teaching.

"Since 1971, the church has gone almost nowhere on this issue," Leggett said in an interview shortly before his protest. "People are willing to accept gays as long as you don't talk about it."

Stokes said that the church "depends on the closeted relationship of gays."

Jurors to hear final arguments in Cuevas trial

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors return from a long Memorial Day weekend today to hear final arguments in the third capital murder trial of the only inmate who survived a 1974 prison escape attempt.

Ignacio Cuevas, one of three convicts who held 13 hostages at gunpoint for 11 days, is charged with capital murder in the slaying of Julia Standley, 43.

Ms. Standley, a prison librarian, was one of two hostages killed when the prisoners tried to escape beneath two blackboards reinforced with law books and hostages used as shields.

Attorneys defending Cuevas, 47, rested their case last Thursday after presenting only two witnesses. State district Judge Miron Love recessed the trial until today.

Cuevas was convicted twice earlier and twice sentenced to death, but the convictions were overturned on technicalities associated with jury selection.

The third trial started March 21. Attorneys took nearly two months to select the eight-man, four-woman jury. Testimony began on May 16.

According to testimony, Cuevas and two other inmates, Fred Gomez Carrasco and Rudolfo Dominguez, used guns that had been smuggled to them to seize control of the library on July 24, 1974.

The hostages were kept handcuffed in the library for 11 days as the three inmates negotiated by telephone with prison officials. They also constructed the rolling shield.

On Aug. 3, the inmates handcuffed themselves to three of the women, secured other hostages to the outside of the shield and then started moving out of the library toward an armored car parked in the prison yard.

As the group started down a ramp from the library, high pressure water was directed at the shield. Gunfire broke out when a hose broke and stopped the torrent.

Mrs. Standley, Carrasco, Dominguez and another hostage, Elizabeth Beseda, all were killed. A priest was wounded, but survived to testify three times against Cuevas.

Legislation will aid new library

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The proposed library, Midland County's elusive apparition, came somewhat closer to reality recently when the Texas Senate passed a bill which authorized counties to issue revenue bonds to finance construction of public libraries.

"Midland has had trouble getting their library financed," the bill's sponsor, Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, told fellow senators prior to the 29-1 vote.

The bill, which already passed the House of Representatives under the sponsorship of Rep. Tom Craddick, now goes to Gov. Mark White for his approval or veto.

"I was happy to see that it went through," said County Commissioner Win Brown, who was instrumental in getting the bill written by former County Attorney Robert Rendall and sponsored in the House by Craddick. "The Legislature never did give the counties much (authority). The Legislature has always felt that we (county commissioners) were a bunch of hicks anyway."

As a result, local control was restricted.

"It's now coming down to territorial rights," Brown said, as county commissioners are gaining ordinance-making powers and more authority.

Brown said the governor should readily approve the library revenue bill.

"We are pleased," said Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis, who is the commissioners' liaison to the library. "We were very confident that we would have no problem with that piece of legislation."

The legislation was proposed after The First National Bank of Midland in 1981 had tendered an offer: The bank would assist the county in securing up to $5.5 million toward building a new four-story library, which architectually would complement the bank's proposed 40-story tower or towers in its envisioned Eagle Plaza.

Within months of the proposal, which came at the peak of Midland's petroleum boom, the economy experienced a downturn. And the bank, under the throes of economic woes, held off on its own building plans and the library financing.

The bank's idea was to lease the basement and the third and fourth floors of the library until the library needed additional space. In theory, by then the bank's new tower or towers would have been built. In the meantime, the county would pay off the revenue-bond indebtedness with the bank's lease money.

"If the governor signs it," Davis said of the bill, "of course I am confident that we will have more leeway in planning for a needed addition and/or construction of a library facility for the city and county of Midland."

The bill to authorize the revenue bonds got hearty support from representatives from El Paso, Dallas and San Antonio, noted Brown.

" 'We have similar situations in our cities,' " Brown quoted the representatives.

Principal appeal of the revenue bonds is that they do not impose a burden on the taxpayers, the commissioner said.

The bill's beneficial effects, Brown said, made it "one of those whiskbang type of thing."

With the promise of a revenue-bond bill and with an upturn in the economy, Brown foresees renewed financial strength in the bank.

"I have a very upbeat feeling that the bank...will recoup its losses and build" as outlined in its master plan. "It's looking more and more positive."

While the commissioners are mulling over what to do about the library, they are reconsidering another on-going problem: the jail.

Commissioners are eyeing certificates of obligation to finance a jail near the Midland County Exhibit Building east of Midland. That approach surfaced after the county's $11.69 million courthouse-jail bond issue failed at the polls April 23.

"We worried the bond issue to death," reflected Brown. "We talked about it too long."

Odessans come to earth after 60-day odyssey

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — There's more to the end of an around-the-world flight than the exhaustion of travel and the thrill of meeting the challenge.

It's the homecoming.

"They're coming!" shouted Ingrid Zeeck, as the distant aircraft approached. "That's them."

Earl Rodman continued with the celebration.

"OK," he pointedly asked as he clenched two bottles of French champagne, "who needs a refill?"

It was 1:05 p.m. Monday, a memorable day for Phillip Zeeck and Loyd Woodward as the two physicians rounded out their 60-day odyssey.

The aircraft taxied up to the waiting party of friends, associates and kin at Schlemeyer Air Field, stopped, became silent, and out of the twin-engine Cessna 340 crawled Zeeck, 46, and Woodward, 32, in their orange flight suits. Both were unshaven.

"The welcome-back party is better than the going-away party," said Zeeck. "Thank you all. I think you're just as surprised as we are that we made it."

"No," yelled the greeting committee, who put together the welcoming, which had the fanfare of a scaled-down return of the Space Shuttle.

"We missed you in the (Medical Center Hospital) emergency room," Dr. Gardiner Pier, who, with champagne in hand, was celebrating his 70th birthday. "So this is the big Seven O," said Zeeck. "Congratulations."

Zeeck, an orthopedic surgeon, and Woodward, a general practitioner, began the journey in the 10-year-old airplane March 31 from Midland Regional Airport. The plane was laden with 500 gallons of fuel in wing and wing-tip tanks and two 140-gallon fuel tanks in the fuselage where passengers normally would sit. The two pilots had to crawl over the tanks to get in and out of the airplane. The fuel load was good for about 16 flight hours.

Zeeck said the trip, which took between 140 and 150 airborne hours in an easterly route, was without incident.

"The weather was good," Zeeck said. "We didn't have any hair-raising, harrowing adventures. But," he conceded, "the anxiety keeps you going — every little bump and noise in the airplane...keeps you going," particularly over the oceans.

The fliers sported astronauts' beards. Zeeck's was just a stubble, a dark shadow; Woodward was letting his beard return.

"We had good weather," assured Woodward, who experienced some anxious moments over the oceans. "The (right) engine would cut out every now and then and get our attention."

The continuous hours of flight were not humdrum, Woodward said.

"You're pretty busy. You check points to know where you're at. Then you have time for discussion."

Their point-checking, via the Omega navigational system used by the airlines, "tells you your address (in flight)," said Zeeck, "and you can find any spot in the world."

Zeeck who, with his pilot-wife Ingrid, has flown the transatlantic route before, said the impetus for the trip was "partly the challenge and to see the world."

Wives of the fliers flew by airline to Cairo, Egypt, and joined their husbands there April 11 for the series of flights to the Fiji Islands. From there, Ingrid Zeeck and Jody Woodward returned to the States last week, and the pilots reinstalled an on-board fuel tank which they had removed to accommodate their spouses.

"It has been a hard trip; that's true," said Ingrid Zeeck, who learned to fly gliders in her native Sweden. "But we have stayed well."

Along with the "scenic beauty" of the flight, there were some no-see sights.

Midland city manager asks MidTran's director to resign

By VINCE GIOGI
Staff Writer

City Manager James Brown said this morning he's accepted the resignation of MidTran's director effective Wednesday — marking the third time in as many months that a city department head has been asked to resign.

Brown said he asked for Jim Johnson's resignation a month ago because "I didn't feel the operation was being operated to our standards. It just wasn't up to the quality we needed."

Brown said Midland has had trouble in recent years securing federal transportation funds but he declined to elaborate on specific reasons behind requesting Johnson's resignation, except to say "I just lost confidence in him. The job wasn't being pursued properly."

Johnson, MidTran director since late 1981, could not be reached for comment.

Earlier this month, Brown asked for the resignation of Wayne Kohout, parks and recreation director. On March 2, Midland's former finance director, Grant Walton, submitted his resignation.

Brown said Doris Velazquez, who's been with MidTran for 3½ years and had been serving as operations manager, will assume the director's job.

The MidTran director had been earning $2,867 per month, according to the city's Personnel Department. Brown said Velazquez will likely be paid the same salary.

Johnson came to Midland in 1981 after spending about 14 years working for two municipal transportation systems in California.

MidTran's budget had grown to about $936,000 by late 1982. Beginning in January 1983, fares were increased to help offset a deficit of about $22,000 per month.

Gov. Mark White, left, administers the oath of office for president pro tempore of the Texas Senate to Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, in Austin, as Doggett's wife and two daughters watch.

'Baby member' named president pro tempore

AUSTIN (AP) — A U.S. Senate campaign may have been born Monday night when Lloyd Doggett, once the "baby member" of the Texas Senate, was saluted with reminders of Theodore Roosevelt and the Kennedy era.

Doggett, a 36-year-old Austin lawyer who has made it known he will run for the U.S. Senate in 1984, was sworn in as Senate president pro tempore, or assistant presiding officer of that legislative body.

Among opponents in the Democratic primary presumably would be former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger and possibly former Gov. Dolph Briscoe. Up for re-election next year is Texas' senior senator, Republican John Tower.

Doggett's reputation as a give-no-quarter Democrat was reflected in that all 11 speeches for him were by Democrats. The Senate's five Republicans applauded, and some shook his hand.

Doggett was sworn in by Gov. Mark White, spoke briefly with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and had as a visitor at his desk Attorney General Jim Mattox, all Democrats.

Sen. Craig Washington of Houston, the Senate's only black, read Roosevelt's oft-quoted "in the arena" comment, and Sen. Hugh Parmer of Fort Worth mentioned a "place called Camelot" — a phrase associated with the Kennedys — and said that place "is around the desk of Lloyd Doggett."

In a joking mood, Sen. Carl Parker of Port Arthur referred to "Saint Lloyd of Austin," and described him as a politician who is "criticized for being an idealist."

Sen. Hector Uribe of Brownsville said Doggett is a "hardball player who likes to win, and fights for good causes. I'd rather have him on my side than against me."

Sen. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi said Doggett "will not go along to get along just to be fashionable. He is people-oriented, a consumer advocate...He represents minorities, and puts his money where his mouth is."

A crowded gallery responded with applause when Doggett was routinely elected as Senate pro tem, a position based on seniority. White noted the applause and said, "I wish I always had the success in the Senate that you have."

Man sued for impersonating Vader

EL PASO (AP) — A man who says he has traveled the country for six years playing Darth Vader, the sinister Jedi knight from the "Star Wars" trilogy, has been sued in federal court by the film maker.

Lucasfilm Ltd. filed the action against Terry Kelly, who spent Saturday through Monday playing the part of the Dark Lord of Sith at an El Paso car dealership, said Roberta Cairney, associate counsel for the film maker.

Ms. Cairney said Kelly, 34, was served Saturday with a copy of the suit and a summons to a federal court in Denver.

"Now he's under the jurisdiction of the federal court in Denver," Ms. Cairney said Monday in a telephone interview. "We've got him."

Kelly said he was unconcerned about the suit and did a show at Northeast Datsun Monday afternoon.

He said he has made such appearances since 1977 and has been paid as much as $1,000 for a show.

Ms. Cairney said Lucasfilm did not give Kelly permission to pose as Vader and that such performances infringe on copyright and trademark laws.

Lucasfilm had planned to serve Kelly during a scheduled appearance last week in Denver, Ms. Cairney said. But at the last minute, Kelly's appearance was canceled.

Kelly, who says his real name is Fred Anderson, contends he was a stunt man for Vader in the movies, but Ms. Cairney said she is not aware of him playing a part in any of the "Star Wars" movies. Film credits list Bob Anderson as the Vader stunt man.

Lucasfilm, said Ms. Cairney, also sent a telegram to Northeast Datsun, telling the car dealer the performances are unauthorized and should be stopped immediately.

Dealership general manager John Hinshaw said he still hadn't received the telegram after the last performance ended Monday.

Ms. Cairney said that by sponsoring the show, the car dealer also could be sued, but no decision has been made on such action.

Hinshaw doubted that Lucasfilm could sue his dealership or could order it to stop the performances.

"They can't come after me because I didn't make a deal with Lucasfilm," Hinshaw said. "They're going to make themselves look like the village jackasses if they sue the 500 to 600 places where (Kelly) appeared in the last few years."

Ms. Cairney also took issue with radio ads sponsored by Northeast Datsun that invited the public to see "the real, the original Darth Vader."

"Well, he's not the real, the original Darth Vader," Ms. Cairney said.

TEC may ride into autumn sunset

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas legislators headed home today after an early morning session-ending adjournment that left the state without a bill to keep the Texas Employment Commission in business.

Lawmakers could not agree on Monday, the final day of the session, on a proposal to set up a TEC department to resolve job discrimination complaints.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett led the fight for a department of human rights, a provision he added to a House-approved TEC bill. But House supporters of the plan fell 26 votes short Monday of the 100 needed to allow consideration of the idea by House members of a joint conference committee.

TEC faced "sunset" review this session. State law requires all agencies to undergo periodic review of their functions. Without approval of a TEC sunset bill, the agency dies on Sept. 1.

Doggett said there's a "100 percent chance" that the commission will not go out of business. Gov. Mark White is expected to call a summer special session to deal with the TEC impasse and other matters.

Doggett and Rep. Lloyd Criss, House sponsor of the TEC bill, heated up their personal battle on the bill Monday.

Criss, D-LaMarque, blamed Doggett for prompting a "bitter feud."

"The House just got its back up at Doggett's grandstanding. He tried to intimidate the House and in the process he killed any chance of a compromise," he said, adding that Doggett should reimburse the state for the "$300,000 a special session will cost."

If TEC dies and the federal government steps in, unemployment taxes on Texas businessmen could rise by $1 billion, according to Criss, who said he favors the new department, but not at TEC.

Doggett said he was agreeable to a compromise that would set up the new department at another agency.

"I wish that instead of getting so excited and kind of throwing a temper tantrum about it early, (Criss would have) gotten on this program initially," the senator said.

Doggett said Criss should have moved to approve the Senate version of the bill, and then rely on a special session to move the department out of the TEC.

White tells lawmakers 'another day' coming

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White, who ran into a legislative brick wall with major portions of his program, told House members shortly before adjournment that "there will be another day."

The regular session of the 1983 Legislature ended shortly after midnight, but most lawmakers headed home knowing they'll soon be back. White told them he would call a special session "at a time most convenient to the members of the House and Senate."

The major unresolved issue is the future of the Texas Employment Commission. Without approval of a bill during a summer session, the TEC dies on Sept. 1.

Also pending is White's call for a tax hike to fund a 24 percent teacher pay raise. That program was killed by strong opposition from Speaker Gib Lewis and House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen.

"We have had our differences," White told the House, "but that is only because we are all true Texans — and true to our heritage we fight hard for what we believe."

"For victories we rejoice, and for battles lost there will be another day," he said.

White's office released a scorecard showing 19 wins and two losses in his program. The victories included bills concerning utility regulation and criminal justice reform. The failures included the teacher pay raise proposal and a call for an elected Public Utility Commission.

But House Law Enforcement Committee Chairman Ray Keller, R-Duncanville, questioned White's claim to the criminal justice package.

Odessans end 60-day odyssey

"There are entire countries (including Burma) that won't let you fly over," said Zeeck. "They don't have to give you a reason; it's their country, and they can do with it as they see fit."

He noted the "spectacular scenery" afforded by flight and cited flying over oceanic storms "and vignettes."

The Woodward-Zeeck journey took in the 13½-hour Newfoundland-to-Paris leg, Greece, Africa, the Middle East, the Orient, Australia, the South Pacific and the 15-hour Hawaii-to-El Paso flight.

In the welcoming-home party were Zeeck's father and mother, Jarvis and Bee Zeeck of Plainview.

"It's the kind of thing a mother worries about," Mrs. Zeeck said of the flight. "But what can you do about it?"

The elder Zeeck, a retired engineer and former bush pilot who taught his son to fly at age 8, said he had a feeling of "envy — not being along. But that's a lot of airplane riding."

Law school bill ruled out of order

AUSTIN (AP) — A House proposal that would have allowed legislators to become lawyers without going to law school died on the final day of the session.

The House on Saturday attached the law school amendment to an unrelated Senate bill that allots a certain number of ballots per election.

On Monday, however, Sen. Oscar Mauzy, refused to ask the Senate to approve his amended bill. Instead, he called for a House-Senate conference committee, and his request was approved.

"It's dead. It never had a chance," said Mauzy, D-Dallas.

The conference committee removed the law school amendment, leaving Mauzy's bill as it originally passed the Senate.

Mauzy had said the proposal for legislator-lawyers was one "with which I have great sympathy."

Robber gets away with a lot of 'dough'

ODESSA — Police are investigating the Monday night robbery of Winchell's Donut Shop at 3117 Andrews Highway.

Clerk Kay Strawn told officers a white man in his mid-30s came into the store shortly after 9:10 p.m., gestured as if he had a weapon and escaped on foot with about $100 in a paper sack.

He was described as being muscular, of medium height and weighing 150 pounds. He had dark hair and was wearing blue jeans and a baseball cap.

House approves bill making state pay cost of inmates' trial

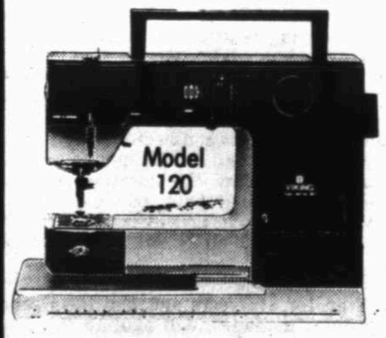

AUSTIN (AP) — The House on Monday gave final approval to a watered-down version of Rep. Allen Hightower's plan to make the state pay the cost of prosecuting inmates who commit crimes in prison.

Hightower, D-Huntsville, wanted to make the state pay the costs of prosecuting all in-prison crimes. He said several counties have had their budgets strained by the prosecution costs.

On Monday, Hightower said he would have to settle for an agreed bill passed in the Senate.

DEAR ABBY

'Stupid law' saves baby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Because you were one of the first to give national publicity to the importance of placing infants and children in car seats, I hope you will think this is important enough to print. — REGULAR READER, DETROIT NEWS

PUBLIC ACT 117 OF 1981
THAT STUPID LAW

(An open letter to the Muskegon Chronicle)

"Dear Editor: I would like to tell your readers how mad I was when I was forced to go out and pay $45 for an infant seat, and to top it off we couldn't fit everybody in my pickup truck with that big bulky thing.

"On April 2, my wife was forced to go off Highway M-120 into a ditch to avoid a collision — that's 55 mph to a dead stop. The back of the child car seat was facing the windshield (as I was told the law required for 4-month-old infants). That seat broke off the ashtray, cracked the dashboard and chipped the windshield. Our baby didn't have a scratch on her!

"I would like to thank God and whoever else is responsible for passing that 'stupid' law." — GREG HIBBARD, HOLTON, MICH.

DEAR ABBY: Our 9 1/2-year-old daughter (I'll call her Angela) has been sleeping with my husband and me in our king-size bed (in the middle between my husband and me) since she was 7 months old.

This began when she had roseola with a high temperature. We wanted her close to monitor her temperature in the middle of the night in order to be able to administer aspirin and/or tepid baths, should she need them. Angela was born to us in our late 30s, is an only child and was wanted and prayed for for years. We are a very close and loving family.

She is a pretty big girl now, and it is most uncomfortable to have three in a bed because she sleeps sideways and moves about a lot. Plus my husband and I need and want the cuddling and intimacy we would have if we were alone.

Angela feels very secure and loved in the "family bed," and we are glad we were able to give her that experience, but it's time for her to move into her own bedroom. It is next to ours and beautifully furnished.

The problem is obvious: She absolutely refuses to leave our bed! She says she's "afraid" to sleep alone. In all other ways she is very independent, "grown-up," secure and normal.

Can you help us? — THE THREE OF US

DEAR THREE: Angela should see a child psychologist to help her overcome her fears of sleeping alone. Your pediatrician should be able to recommend one. Or, call the nearest mental health clinic. Three is a crowd, especially in this case. Hurry. You and your husband have a lot of catching up to do. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: My father hit the ceiling when my 17-year-old brother said he wanted to make dinner for the family last night.

Dad said, "No son of mine is going to put on an apron and start cooking! That's for sissies!"

I tried to explain that lots of men cook nowadays, but Dad went on and on about how cooking was a woman's job, like sewing, housekeeping and taking care of the kids. He said men were mechanics, carpenters, policemen, firemen and so forth.

What is your opinion? — ANGRY IN TEXAS

DEAR ANGRY: Your father is wrong. Some of the most accomplished cooks in the world are men. Men also sew, keep house and take care of kids. Tell your dad that there are also female mechanics, carpenters, policewomen and firewomen.

(Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

AT WIT'S END

Girls cost $21,000 extra

By ERMA BOMBECK

Forget anatomical.

Do you know what the real difference is between boys and girls? It's $21,000.

Someone has figured out raising a boy child costs $226,000 and a girl $247,000. The figures surprise no one . . . especially those who have had girls. The extra expenses are attributed to the cost of transporting them from place to place and entertaining them.

I would have guessed peer pressure and upped the price tag by another 70 thou. Since the beginning of time, the female species has traveled in packs, or no less than two. Women never go to the bathroom alone. They never go to the gym alone. Or bar. They never get a haircut by themselves or their teeth cleaned. They never go to the library solo or to the movies alone.

They not only surround themselves with other people, but the standards are set by this group for how they talk, dress, eat and feel.

Peer pressure once forced me to buy a full-length brown leather maxicoat for my daughter which she wore for two months and discarded when everyone else stopped wearing them.

I listed it on our income tax under MEDICAL. When our tax man questioned it, I said, "She threatened to stop breathing and die if she didn't get it. Would you pull the support systems on your only daughter?"

Another time, her pressure group convinced her that her long straight hair needed "styling and permed" and would give her a reason for living. Two weeks later, they convinced her it looked better the old way and that she needed another hair appointment to reverse the perm. I put that one under "MEDICAL" too when I couldn't stop crying for three weeks and was worried about myself.

It has never stopped. Dolls with two-inch busts that had more expensive underwear than I had at my wedding . . . sweaters that cost more than the check-up I kept putting off . . . a car that was to save time for me? . . . a college near the ski slopes so I wouldn't worry about air travel in the winter.

And don't forget weddings, the brunt of which is borne by the bride's family. One father I know said when he and his wife were married, the wedding cost $35 and lasted 40 years. His daughter's wedding cost $10,000 and lasted 52 days.

I told him, "List it under MEDICAL." If he can't get his nervous breakdown written off, he isn't trying.

Non-drinker top bidder for rare wine

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Carl Mayhue, who says that he does not drink, paid $45,000 Thursday for two bottles of 1806 Chateau Lafite, making him the top bidder at the 15th annual Heublein auction of rare wines here.

Mayhue, owner of a chain of liquor and wine stores in south Florida, has been one of the largest bidders at Heublein auctions in recent years.

"I just like to attend auctions," he said Thursday, after beating out Roger Birkowitz, a Boston seafood restaurant owner, for the Lafites, a Bordeaux wine from one of the world's oldest and best vintners. Birkowitz had stopped at $36,000.

In all, about 1,700 bottles of wine were sold for more than $600,000 by Heublein Inc., the nation's third largest wine and liquor company. It was the first time the prestigious auction had been held in Southern California.

Although Heublein said that the price Mayhue paid for the two-bottle case was the largest in terms of dollars at any Heublein auction, it did not set a record for a single bottle. That is still held by John Grisanti of Memphis, Tenn., who paid $31,000 for a bottle of 1822 Lafite at the 1980 Heublein auction in San Francisco.

Mayhue said that he sells only a few of the rare wines he purchases at such auctions; he keeps most of them for his own cellar. "I buy it just for the pride of possession, to know that I have it in my cellar. To look at it," he said.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Foliage plants can also flower

Miniature eucharis

By ELVIN McDONALD

Outdoors, it makes sense to grow food plants that are also ornamental, or vice versa. Indoors I get a lot of pleasure from foliage plants that also bloom.

Spathiphyllums come first to mind since one or more from my collection is always sending up snowy peace lily flowers, each of which lasts several weeks. The plants range from 12 inches to 4 feet tall and the blooms from some are pleasantly lemon-scented.

The eucharis or Eucharist lily, an amaryllid, gets even higher marks from me. Its evergreen leaves are darker green and thicker, far less likely to brown at the tips or edges from such stresses as fertilizer salt burn and parched soil.

In fact, the natural progression that leads to bloom in eucharis includes a lean time of letting the soil go nearly dry. After half-resting a month or so, flowers appear after watering triggers active growth.

Eucharis grandiflora, from the Colombian Andes, also called Amazon lily, is best known. The bulbs may be sold by mail in a dormant state, without leaves. Set one in a 6-inch pot and do not disturb until first flowering, perhaps three years.

I am glad to report on specimen plants of Eucharist lily on display last winter at the Tropical Plant Industry Exhibition, held in Miami by the Florida Nurserymen and Growers Association. If you are lucky enough to get one locally, here's care in a nutshell:

Eucharis thrives in bright light but needs little direct sun. Temperatures over 60F. promote rapid growth. Water freely and fertilizer regular to encourage the formation of as many large, healthy leaves as possible.

After a few months or a season of such growth, stop watering and fertilizing. Let the soil get dry enough to cause slight wilting; a few leaves may die but most remain evergreen. Expect blooms soon after generous watering resumes.

There are other eucharis worth growing. E. korsakoffii is intermediate in size between E. grandiflora and a miniature form from Central America known as E. subedentata. These lesser ones are available from Marcia's Amaryllids, 255 Galveston Rd., Brownsville, Tex. 78521 (list $1).

Eucharis flowers resemble daffodils more than spathiphyllums but have a similar lemon scent. Grandiflora's name announces large blooms, each to 3 inches across, in clusters that rise on stems well above the foliage. The other two species have smaller flowers, also white and fragrant.

Q. What should I do about the funny looking blooms that have started growing up among the leaves of my fancy caladiums?

A. Cut them off, in the bud stage when possible, so as to concentrate the caladium's strength toward beautiful leaves all season. This plant declines in poor light, takes more sun than we usually imagine, and thrives with constant moisture and summer warmth. Fertilize with fish emulsion.

Q. My figure-8 hoya is yards long; how can I get it to bloom?

A. You've asked about Hoya kerrii, also called obovata. Give it "fat" conditions in spring and summer (plenty of water, fertilizer and light strong enough to foster sturdy but not sun-bleached foliage). "Lean" (cooler temperatures, less light and water, no fertilizer) in fall and winter. Next year when the seasons and your care switch from winter's lean to spring's fat, your hoya will bloom profusely.

Complete details are in one of my most popular newsletters, "What Makes Hoya Bloom?". Send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Hoya" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305; in Canada, 4141 Glenayr Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont. L2E 6K1.

Quick Take: Send $1 to the National Garden Bureau (P.O. Box 4160, Libertyville, Ill. 60048, before June 1, 1983) and you'll receive packets of lettuce and zinnia, along with a 16-page booklet for beginners, "How to Grow Your Garden Successfully."

Q.T.: Not all garden stakes have to be purchased. Prunings from the trees and shrubs often make effective and attractive supports. Peas, pole beans and morning glories can climb on suitably twiggy clippings, a practice English gardeners call "brushing."

Q.T.: Surface mulches for container plantings indoors and out save water and look neat. Try sheet moss (florist or woods), unmilled sphagnum moss, pine needles, bark chips, sandstone pebbles or water-polished stones.

Losses may not be $100 million

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Losses to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. from the closure of five Tennessee banks declared insolvent last week probably won't exceed $100 million, says FDIC Chairman William Isaac.

The banks, scheduled to reopen today after being taken over by new owners, had a combined total of 40 branches, assets of $718.2 million and deposits of $660 million, the FDIC said.

Federal examiners spent the long holiday weekend counting cash and reviewing loan portfolios to get a better picture of the banks' financial health, officials said.

Casino dealers end first strike

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The nation's first strike by card handlers against a gambling casino ended after two days when a union said it was dropping efforts to represent 700 dealers and croupiers.

Local 137 of the Sports Arena and Casino Workers Union had represented the 700 dealers when the strike began Saturday morning against Bally's Park Place. But pickets dwindled through the traditionally busy Memorial Day Weekend and by Monday all but about 30 strikers had returned to work.

William Eggeling, business manager of Local 137, said the union saw little sense in trying to represent workers who voluntarily had ended a strike. "They've set themselves back 20 years by not supporting this," Eggeling said. The union had been seeking better wages and security and a clause requiring all workers to join the union.

Plane loses power, crashes

EAST FARMINGDALE, N.Y. (AP) — A single-engine plane making an instrument landing in poor weather lost power and crashed after snagging power lines, killing all four people aboard, officials said.

The aircraft, carrying two couples returning to Long Island after a holiday weekend in South Carolina, crashed Monday on a highway in an industrial section of East Farmingdale, authorities said. The pilot had been trying to land at Republic Airport.

No one on the ground was reported hurt but power to about 290 utility customers was cut briefly, officials said.

"It was making an instrument approach landing, so the visibility had to be low," said Lou Achitoff, public affairs manager for the Federal Aviation Administration.

Companies sign labor contracts

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Separate labor contracts providing more benefits, but no general wage increases, for more than 40,000 union members have been signed with the nation's three largest aluminum companies.

Aluminum Company of America, Reynolds Metals Co. and Kaiser Aluminum Co. signed a three-year pact Sunday night with the United Steelworkers of America which guarantees a 3.6 percent increase in benefits for 25,900 workers. The Aluminum Brick & Glass Workers International Union signed a similar pact Monday with ALCOA and Reynolds covering its 15,900 members.

Explosive issues fizzle out at economic summit

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — President Reagan's dispute with European leaders over trade with the Soviets once seemed a time bomb ready to explode, but like other divisive issues it was defused at the Williamsburg economic summit.

During weekend meetings, Reagan and leaders of six other key industrial democracies debated several issues that had threatened to split Western alliances, but they reached agreement on a final statement that seemed to satisfy all sides.

The economic statement issued Sunday was produced easily in comparison with the declaration on nuclear arms issued the day before, said European Community President Gaston Thorn, who sat in on all the meetings.

The declaration — a commitment to deploy new U.S. missiles in Europe next December unless the Soviets agree to dismantle their SS-20s aimed at Western capitals — cleared the air, said Thorn.

Some issues were expected to be too hot to handle at the summit conference. Here is a rundown on how the leaders dealt with them.

EAST-WEST TRADE:
Reagan's attempts last year to stop Western sales of equipment for construction of the natural gas pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe was bitterly opposed by Britain, France, Italy and West Germany. They resented his attempts to veto their choice of an energy source and his attempts to punish companies under their legal jurisdiction.

The matter was virtually shelved by the summit conference, appearing as the ninth of 10 items in the final statement, which said the leaders wanted to continue studies promised by the United States last November.

The issue could be rekindled, however, if Congress approves pending legislation that would give the president authority to ban imports from companies in other countries when the U.S. administration maintains they violate guidelines with the Soviet bloc.

THE DOLLAR:
Tied to the previous issue, this provoked a presummit call from Mitterrand for a new international system of exchange rates. The summit conference agreed to a new study to recommend improvements to the existing system.

INTERVENTION:
Another aspect of the currency problem, this issue pitted the Europeans against the Americans. The Europeans want the U.S. Treasury to sell dollars on world currency markets if speculators start driving up the dollar's value.

Monetary conference in doubt

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Summit leaders have told their underlings to look into the idea of a big conference to improve the way the world handles its money. But such a meeting appears a long way off.

"In a year, we'll know whether we're going to have a conference or not," said Gaston Thorn — the top executive of the European Community and one of the eight participants at the summit meeting that ended Monday night.

The world leaders asked U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and his colleagues in the other governments to join with Jacques de Larosiere, the director of the International Monetary Fund, to see what can be done to improve the present system.

They should look into what part a high-level conference could play in improving the current monetary situation, the official statement said.

The idea was promoted by French President Francois Mitterrand, although Regan had suggested it earlier. Both recalled that in 1944, before the end of World War II, governments got together to devise a new system because the failure of the old one was blamed by many as one of the causes of the war.

The Bretton Woods Conference had taken four years to prepare, and lasted three weeks.

It met at a big, old fashioned resort hotel in Bretton Woods, N.H. A tightly integrated system sought by Britain's John Maynard Keynes was watered down in accordance with what American delegates believed Congress would accept.

The new system linked the dollar to gold: $35 an ounce was to be the unchangeable price. Other currencies — the pound, the franc, the lira, the yen — were all to be linked to the dollar at fixed rates. Any change in the value of the currency would be a major operation.

That system broke down in the early 1970s when the United States refused to pay out gold any longer at the agreed price. Critics say that what has developed since is hardly a system at all: currencies are worth what they will fetch on the market, which varies from day to day or even hour to hour.

Stephen Wozniak, the driving, creative force and principal financial backer of the US Festival, gestures with happiness from the stage Monday night as the three-day rock concert nears an end at Glen Helen Regional Park in Devore Calif. Wozniak said he will bankroll the event again after losing millions for a second year.

Authorities bid farewell to US Festival; Wozniak vows not to finance again

DEVORE, Calif. (AP) — A sheriff said a rock group contributed to violence at the huge three-day US Festival, marred by 145 arrests and one death, and its promoter said he would not bankroll the event again after losing millions of dollars for a second year.

Up to a half-million music lovers gathered for the festival, which was capped late Monday by a rare U.S. appearance from singer David Bowie. The arrest total for a variety of misdemeanors and felonies was four times higher than the 38 of last year's event.

Rock and bottle throwing occurred early Monday after a concert by the Van Halen group. San Bernardino County Sheriff Floyd Tidwell said lead singer David Lee Roth inflamed the crowd.

"He (Roth) was totally wiped ... saying things like 'Let's show these cops what violence is, let's show these cops what fun is,'" Tidwell told a news conference Monday. "There's no call for that."

Tidwell said later in a telephone interview that Roth "excited" the crowd with four-letter words.

"I wouldn't say he was absolutely responsible. I think he contributed to it (the later violence)," Tidwell said, adding, "There are a couple of bands that never need to come back to our county. Van Halen, for example."

Roth and other performers in the band left the concert site Monday for Los Angeles and were not available for comment, according to members of their entourage.

The sheriff, however, praised the crowds for their behavior overall.

"Ninety-five percent of the people conducted themselves well. I don't want to bring discredit on the majority of the crowd. With the amount of arrests we had it just wasn't that bad," Tidwell said.

Despite the big crowds, Apple computer designer Steve Wozniak, who financed the event, said he was finished with the festival.

"I will not bankroll another one myself," Wozniak told about 100 reporters and festival-goers Monday.

Wozniak, who funded the festival for the past two years, said he could lose up to $10 million on this year's $18 million show. He also said the first US Festival last Labor Day weekend lost $10 million.

Stewart revisits English air bases

James Stewart

OLD BUCKENHAM, England (AP) — Actor James Stewart recalled the 20 bombing missions he flew as a U.S. Air Force lieutenant colonel during World War II while he and 550 ex-airmen toured their former bases in the East Anglia region.

Stewart attended a dedication Monday of an extension to the village hall. Officials commemorated it to the 400 men who lost their lives on missions flown from the airfield 75 miles northeast of London.

"It's a very nostalgic, wonderful thing for us, but I think even more than that, it's going to be something that's going to mean something to our children and their children," said the 75-year-old, who starred in such films as "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "The Philadelphia Story."

The Old Buckenham field, abandoned by the Air Force, is now used for small private planes.

Alfred Landon

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Former Gov. Alfred M. Landon, the grand old man of Kansas, is expected to remain hospitalized about two weeks, then face a lengthy recovery after surgery to repair a broken right hip.

Landon, 95, the elder statesman of the Republican Party and its 1936 presidential nominee, was in satisfactory condition at Stormont-Vail Regional Medical Center after surgery Monday to place three metal pins in the bone, a hospital spokeswoman said. Landon broke his hip Saturday night in a fall at his northwest Topeka home.

Less than an hour after surgery, Landon was awake and able to receive his wife, Theo, and his daughter, U.S. Sen. Nancy Kassebaum.

"A nurse said we could call this a 'lucky break,' and I like that description," Mrs. Kassebaum said. "I think we are awfully fortunate that it wasn't any worse, if it had to happen.

"Of course the tough part will be in two to three weeks when he comes home," she added.

The surgeon who inserted the pins, Dr. Robert R. Payne, said it would be three to six months before the bone is healed completely, but it eventually should be just as strong as it was before the accident.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Douglas R. MacKenzie, a former Associated Press reporter and retired public relations executive, died Monday at a Twin Cities hospital. He was 78.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Charles J. Battaglia, described by federal prosecutors as a former lieutenant in the reputed crime family of Joseph C. Bonanno Sr., died Friday of a heart attack. He was 66.

Burt Reynolds

LOGANVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A windstorm ripped four columns from actor Burt Reynolds' Georgia mansion, styled after the fictional "Tara" estate of "Gone With the Wind."

The mansion's caretaker, Marshall Crowe, estimated Monday that repairs would cost $50,000 to $65,000.

The Sunday windstorm tore four of six white columns from the front of the home, used as a part-time residence by Reynolds and his parents, Crowe said. The mansion was unoccupied at the time.

The wind also damaged the mansion's roof, ripped the roof from a pump house, knocked down 250 feet of fence, blew over two trees and damaged tennis courts, Crowe said.

The mansion, located in Walton County in north central Georgia, was the site of some scenes in one of Reynolds' films, "Cannonball Run."

Reynolds bought the house in 1980 from Carl Newton, who has said the price was between $500,000 and $700,000. The actor reportedly tried to sell the house for $1.2 million last year.

Susan Anton

PEKING (AP) — Chinese soldiers stared goggle-eyed as a tall, blonde and braless Susan Anton strolled the Great Wall in a sundress for an Oriental episode of the "Love Boat" television series.

"They never saw anything like that before," one bystander said Monday.

Chinese women still wear breastplate-like brassieres and consider it unladylike to show their shoulders.

Also shocking the Chinese in another scene were performers John Forsythe and Ursula Andress, locked in the first cinematic smooch on the Great Wall.

"Oh, these Americans are so daring — they have no shame," said one blushing but mesmerized Chinese woman, an extra in the segment.

The ABC-TV series is filming three two-hour segments in Hong Kong, Shanghai, Peking and Tianjin, where the boat, called Pearl of Scandinavia, is docked.

Pat O'Brien

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Actor Pat O'Brien was hospitalized in stable condition after pain from an arthritic condition caused him to collapse on stage during a performance of "On Golden Pond."

O'Brien, 84, was playing opposite his wife, Eloise, when he became ill Saturday night at the Fiesta Dinner Theater. The final two performances set for Sunday night were canceled.

O'Brien was recuperating Monday at San Antonio Community Hospital.

The O'Briens began performing the play here May 3.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Quality of life just as important as length

Dear Dr. Solomon: With all the do's and don't's I read about, I get the feeling that everything that makes you feel good is either illegal, immoral or fattening. It seems to me that the attitude of eat, drink and be merry makes sense. I don't think that people who are careful about their health live any longer than those who are not, so why not live it up while you can? — Frankie, Queens, N.Y.

Solomon

Dear Frankie: Most people would agree that it is not only the length of life but the quality of life that is important. A person fortunate enough to live out his or her life as a healthy, vigorous, productive human being is infinitely better off than the person who lives the same number of years in poor health.

I have no argument with eating, drinking and being merry. But we can eat without consuming excessive quantities of saturated fats, salt and empty calories that can lead to cardiovascular disease. We can drink in moderation so that alcohol enhances our sense of well-being without injuring our livers or affecting our interpersonal relationships. And we can make merry without resorting to drugs that damage both our bodies and our minds.

Death is inevitable no matter how carefully and healthfully a person lives. With my patients, my goal is to help them attain a level of physical well-being that will enable them to enjoy their allotted span of years to the fullest, regardless of its length.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My baby had a little fever after getting her DPT shot, and I'm wondering about the vaccination for whooping cough because I've read so much about it lately. Would it be a good idea to skip the whooping cough part of the shot? — Mrs. K.W., Farmingdale, Long Island, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. W.: According to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, a mild to moderate fever is not uncommon following administration of the DPT vaccine. The faver may even linger for a day or two and be accompanied by symptoms of vomiting and irritability. However, this in itself is no reason for not continuing with further pertussis (whooping cough) vaccination.

On the other hand, a high fever would be a contraindication to additional doses of pertussis vaccine.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that it is not unusual for a man to have trouble with his prostate as he grows older, even if he doesn't have any disease. Can this be avoided if the man stops having any sexual activity? — Don, New York City

Dear Don: The condition to which you refer, benign prostatic hypertrophy, occurs as often in men who are celibate as in men who are sexually active.

For Morris, Columbia, S.C.: Asthma is a difficult disease to diagnose in young children. For that reason many physicians are reluctant to make such a diagnosis in children under two years of age even when they suspect that asthma may in fact be the problem.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column)

Sunshine Kids treated to Louisiana fishing trip

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — They're called the Sunshine Kids, this pack of desperately ill youngsters, many from Texas hospitals, who squealed happily while learning how to fish for bass, ride horses and master other challenges.

It was a picture-perfect spring day at Camp Clear and, unlike most children, these 20 or so had little time to waste.

Courage bought their visit to Nate Durham's and Buddy Evans's Clear Lake camps. These children were suffering from cancer, leukemia and other deadly diseases.

Durham met the Sunshine Kids while on a ski trip to Colorado, where they were enjoying the first annual Sunshine Kids Winter Games.

"I met them there and well, to know them is to love them," Durham said. "I decided that if they could do something like that in Colorado, Louisiana could do even better."

Durham and the Sunshine Kids Foundation got together and the bass fishing school was on. It developed into a master plan to chase away hospital gloom by giving the children happier times to look forward to.

"We want to put quality in their lives," said secretary-treasurer Betty Adams.

"None of us now how long we'll be here and we need to do everything we can to make this day count."

The foundation's director is Rhoda Tomasco, who says the organization aims to show children "that there's something ahead."

"We saw how on occasions that a child who'd been sick and in the hospital undergoing treatment for a long period of time couldn't envision anything else but more doctors and more hospitals in their future."

She said it also helps the youngsters regain a circle of friends.

"When they go back to school usually they've lost a leg or an arm or maybe the therapy has made their hair fall out so they don't fit in any more. This gives them someone to talk to, somebody their age who knows exactly what they're going through."

Parents are invited on the outings.

"We've seen on several occasions where fathers have cancelled business engagements to stay with us another day on a trip because they know that they won't have this time again," Ms. Tomasco said.

Other than a few crutches and wheelchairs, the children looked like any other group of youngsters gathered for a day of fun.

Stuart Bell, 7, ran charging up a hill carrying a string of tiny fish, yelling at his mother, "Look what I caught!"

Farmers' machinery wiping out Oregon Trail's ruts

LA GRANDE, Ore. (AP) — Some of the ruts cut more than a century ago by Conestoga wagons along the Oregon Trial are vanishing under farm tractors and the discs of tillers.

"It's one of those things that just sneaked up and happened," said Bob Rennells of La Grande, who with his wife, Bertha, has been photographing the Oregon Trail since 1968. The trail was used by settlers between 1842 and 1870.

When the Rennells photographed a seven-mile segment west of Echo in 1975, the ruts on the windblown steppes of eastern Oregon were in pristine condition.

But they were recently wiped out in a single afternoon, replaced by irrigated potato fields. Rennells said the trail could have been preserved by sparing a strip 8 feet wide and 7 miles long, or less than 8 acres in all.

Students arrested for protests

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thirteen students were arrested on charges of leading anti-government demonstrations last week, police said today.

They said nine students from Sung Kyun Kwan University were accused of scattering leaflets and shouting slogans in campus demonstrations Thursday and Friday.

Police also issued arrest warrants for four students at Seoul National University after detaining them on charges of instigating campus demonstrations Friday.

The arrests brought to 98 the number of students known to have been arrested on such charges this spring.

Libyan officers defect to Sudan

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Ten Libyan officers have defected to Sudan after studying in West Germany for two years, the Sudanese news agency reported.

The alleged defectors had joined an exiled Libyan opposition group known as the National Front for the Salvation of Libya, the agency said in its report Monday.

It did not give the names or ranks of the officers, who reportedly arrived here Saturday.

Ten killed in train derailment

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Ten people were killed when five cars of a passenger train derailed and were hit by an oncoming train, police sources said.

They said the first train was headed to the Mediterranean city of Alexandria when the train left the tracks at Sendion, 12 miles north of Cairo, on Monday.

Forty people were reported injured.

Rebels say they attacked base

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Moslem Afghan rebels say they attacked a military air base west of Kabul, killing 21 government and Soviet troops and destroying two helicopters.

Their claims of an attack Monday on the Jalalabad airport could not be independently confirmed.

Moslem guerrillas have been battling the Marxist government in Kabul since the Soviets intervened in December 1979 to bolster it.

Medical students protest reforms

MARSEILLE, France (AP) — About 400 medical students protesting proposed university reforms burned their white lab coats in downtown Marseille, then marched to the docks and threw a police officer into the sea.

The policeman reportedly was rescued by a fisherman.

About 300 law students staged a similar protest in Lyon, and authorities said there were minor injuries in clashes with police. Six students reportedly were arrested.

AIM reports plane was shot down

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The Mozambican national news agency, AIM, reported an unidentified jet plane was shot down over the capital of Mozambique and disappeared into the Indian Ocean.

AIM, monitored in Lisbon, said official sources had not confirmed that Mozambican defenses shot down the plane on Monday.

Contadora talks end; No success

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The latest attempt to mediate a peaceful settlement between the leftist government of Nicaragua and its Central American neighbors has ended without success.

The Contadora group — composed of the foreign ministers of Mexico, Panama, Venezuela and Colombia — met here with representatives of Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador and Guatemala to discuss the region's political conflicts. The meeting ended Monday night after 16 hours of talks that began Sunday

Costa Rica, Nicaragua's southern neighbor, asked the Contadora foreign ministers to establish a permanent team of observers to monitor its tense border with Nicaragua. The ministers agreed to study the request.

The meeting failed to make progress in resolving Central America's most potentially explosive issue — the conflict between Nicaragua and Honduras.

The Central American countries again were unable to agree on what kind of talks are needed to resolve the growing tension in the region.

Nicaragua still wants head-to-head talks with Honduras, its northern neighbor, while the other Central American countries say the issue is regional peace and are seeking multilateral talks.

Nicaragua accuses Honduras of supporting and providing refuge to rebels trying to overthrow the leftist Sandinista government in Managua and warns there will be a war unless the raids stop.

Honduras, El Salvador and the United States accuse Nicaragua of funneling weapons through Honduras to Marxist guerrillas fighting the U.S.-backed government in San Salvador.

Costa Rica, meanwhile, is trying to maintain its neutrality but does not have an army to guard its border and prevent rebels from crossing into Nicaragua to fight the Sandinistas.

"That which threatens the region most is the problem that exists between Nicaragua and Honduras," Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto said Monday night. "Honduras keeps rejecting bilateral talks to resolve the situation and because of that they are in the inescapable position of being responsible for the consequences."

The session was the Contadora group's fifth meeting since Jan. 5, when representatives of the four nations first met on the island of Contadora off Panama's Pacific coast.

The ministers decided Monday to name a committee to study what should be discussed at future meetings and to set a date for another session after the group meets here again in mid-June

In its petition, Costa Rica requested a permanent commission composed of at least one civilian and one military official from Mexico, Venezuela, Panama and Colombia.
