Mondale courts vote with 'packing' issue

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

Trailing badly in opinion polls, Democrat Walter Mondale opened the next-to-last weekend of the presidential campaign Saturday by telling a West Coast rally that Ronald Reagan's re-election could lead to right-wing packing of the Supreme Court.

Reagan, meantime, appealed for young people's votes in a radio talk from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

Mondale's running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, also took verbal slaps at the president on the West Coast and suggested that polls showing a big Reagan lead were not taking enough note of Democratic support among women.

And Vice President George Bush, striving to soften public differences within the administration, praised Secretary of State George Shultz for "able leadership" in combatting terrorism — one day after disagreeing with a Shultz comment on retaliation against terrorists.

Meanwhile, an Associated Press survey of poll data and experts in all 50 states and the District of Columbia showed Reagan leading in 40 states with 426 electoral votes, far more than the 270 needed to win. Mondale led only in his home state, Minnesota, and the district for a total of 13 electoral votes.

Nine states holding 99 electoral votes were rated as toss-ups a bit more than one week before the Nov. 6 election.

Major national public opinion polls show Reagan with leads of 14 percentage points and more.

A CBS-New York Times poll released Saturday night gives Reagan a lead of 18 percentage points over Mondale, 53 percent to 35 percent.

A Newsweek poll released Saturday showed Reagan leading Mondale by 17 percentage points, 57 percent to 40 percent.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported in Sunday editions that Reagan is favored in Illinois by 55 percent of the registered voters surveyed, while 39 percent supported Mondale.

Mondale, declaring that "we must carry California," spoke to a rally in a sprawling San Diego park during a day of appearances in Reagan's home state.

He said that if Reagan were re-elected, the Supreme Court would fall under the control of a "far-right fringe."

Ultraconservatives "would seize our temple of liberty and turn it over to judges who passed the approval of the Jerry Falwells of our land," he said in a reference to the leader of the Moral Majority.

Speaking to a cheering crowd of several thousand, Mondale said voters should realize that in light of several judges' advanced ages, Reagan might nominate five high court justices in a second four-year term.

"You are picking that court for the rest of this century," he said.

"This crowd would close down those doors we've opened and follow the dictates of a far-right fringe," he said. "They want the federal government to intrude in the most personal and religious decisions each of us make in our own lives."

Reagan spent the day at Camp David, but he took time out for his weekly radio talk, in which he appealed for young people's votes. He declared that a victory for Mondale could "send many of you from the graduation line to the unemployment line."

Addressing youth at the beginning of his paid political address, he said, "I just have to say your generation really sparkles.

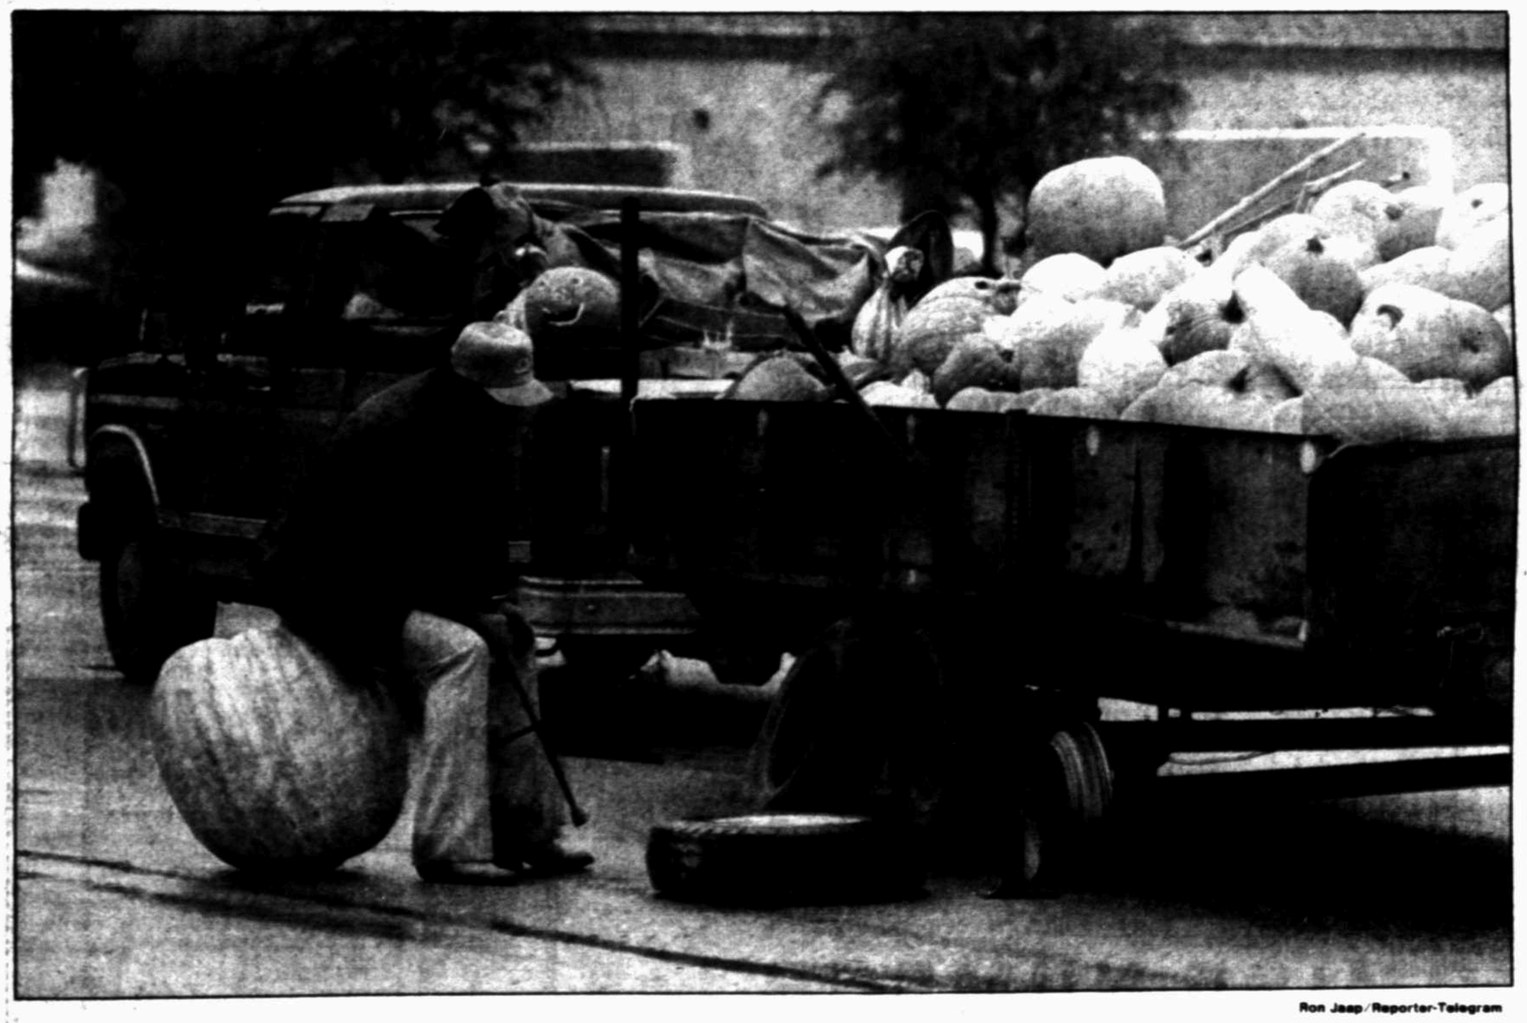

"In my travels I've met you by the thousands and I've seen enthusiasm and patriotism in your eyes that convince me that you get high on America."

Reagan also returned to the themes of his speeches at recent campaign rallies, saying the nation's economy, military strength and opportunities for growth all are greater than when he replaced President Carter four years ago.

"Our nation is at peace and our economy is in one piece," he said, adding that Mondale's policies "would destroy all that ... would cause enormous hardships and send many of you from the graduation line to the unemployment line."

Ms. Ferraro, talking with reporters before a Tacoma, Wash., rally, touched on the sometimes-sore subject of the polls that show her and Mondale trailing badly.

She suggested strong support from women may show up only in polling booths.

Iran, Indonesia back OPEC plan

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland — The oil ministers of Iran and Indonesia threw their countries' support Saturday behind a hastily fashioned plan to prop up OPEC oil prices by cutting production.

Indonesia's Subroto told reporters on his arrival at a Geneva hotel that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would succeed in avoiding a price cut if it slashed production by 1 million to 2 million barrels a day.

OPEC output currently is estimated at 17.3 million barrels a day. Its self-imposed ceiling is 17.5 million.

Iranian delegation chief Mohammad Gharazi said that his country supported last Tuesday's call by six other OPEC oil ministers to tighten the oil spigot in order to preserve the cartel's shaky pricing system, based on $29 a barrel for Saudi light oil.

An emergency meeting of all 13 OPEC oil ministers, starting Monday, will seek unanimous approval of a production-cutting plan. None of the ministers has said how much each member will be asked to cut back, although it is understood that Saudi Arabia — OPEC's largest producer — would make the biggest reduction.

"As a loyal member of OPEC, if that is the decision of OPEC, then certainly (Indonesia) will do this," Subroto told reporters. He declined to say whether he believed all other members would agree to share in the loss of income from oil sales.

Virtually all OPEC member countries have been hurt by a loss of oil income in recent years as oil-importing countries, particularly in the industrialized West, have cut back on energy use in response to high prices and weak economic conditions.

Most Americans 'go back in time'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clocks in all but a few American homes were set back an hour today as the nation returned to standard time.

The official time change occurred at 2 a.m. for all the states and territories that have been observing daylight-saving time since the last Sunday of April.

Those who stay on standard time throughout the year and will not be changing their clocks are residents of Arizona, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa and the part of Indiana located in the Eastern time zone.

The nation goes back to daylight time at 2 a.m. April 28, 1985.

Carr pledges rural emphasis in local sheriff's race

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of an eight-part series looking at local contested races and the eight constitutional amendments. This part deals with the sheriff's race and the Democratic candidate.

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Joe W. Carr, who proclaims that he is "qualified by experience," is seeking to emerge the winner in the three-way race for sheriff of Midland County in the Nov. 6 general election.

Carr

Carr, 45, a detective sergeant in the Midland Police Department, has been in law enforcement since 1963.

"We need someone in that office who has the experience of law enforcement knowledge. We need someone that knows the county, knows the people of this county."

Carr, the Democratic Party nominee, is challenging the Republican Party nominee, former Sheriff's Lt. Gary Painter, 37. In turn, two-term Sheriff Dallas Smith, 41, who was defeated by Painter in the Republican Party primary, is waging a write-in campaign.

"I feel like my 21 years of experience gives me the knowledge to make a good sheriff and to give this county the law enforcement it needs and really deserves. I'm running on my merits."

ELECTION '84

IN HIS CAMPAIGN, Carr has pledged to:

— Completely restructure the Sheriff's Office.

— Organize a reserve deputy force.

— Assign a full-time resident deputy to Greenwood.

— Set up a mounted Sheriff's Posse for esprit de corps, show of force and community pride and spirit.

— Intensify patrol in rural Midland County by zeroing in on the farming and ranching areas, the "rural" residential areas outside the city and the oil fields.

"We're going to completely restructure the sheriff's department from the top all the way down," Carr pledged. "We're going to have very active patrol, criminal and narotics divisions. We're certainly going to maintain the Crime Stoppers, crime prevention unit and juvenile division."

In "looking real strongly" into the reserve force, Carr noted that there's a "vast amount of qualified people who are very interested" in the concept.

"IT GOES ALONG with the Neighborhood Watch program (wherein) people have become involved due to the large amounts of residential burglaries and oil field thefts. I thought it might be a good thing."

Crusader thinks vampire tale 'batty'

By JAMES A. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE — Halloween, that time of scary tales about ghosts and blood-sucking vampires, is a favorite holiday for Merlin Tuttle, who grabs the annual chance to debunk myths about the creatures he loves: bats.

"The problem is that people fear most what they understand least. People don't know much about bats, so they rank at the top of their list of sinister things," said Tuttle, a scientist who has studied the furry, winged mammals for more than 20 years.

Halloween provides him with an opportunity to spread the good news about the creatures he says leave people alone as long as they're not bothered.

"Now, as a matter of fact, it's the ideal time to educate people about bats," Tuttle said. "I'd say we get most of our good publicity at Halloween and much of the bad publicity at other times."

Tuttle, curator of mammals at the Milwaukee Public Museum, said bats have long suffered from misconceptions.

He traced the vampire legend — as portrayed in the tale of Dracula, the creature from the grave that relied on blood from the living to renew its life — to Europe before people there were even aware of the existence of blood-sucking bats which inhabit Latin America.

Tuttle said the vampire bat has little in common with Dracula.

"You could walk into a cave filled with vampire bats and never be attacked," he said. "They'd try to get away from you." He said the vampire bat is a "small timid creature" that sneaks up on its prey, often while the prey is sleeping, to feed on the blood.

Vampire bats pose a threat to livestock and can transmit rabies, he acknowledged, but he also noted the beneficial impact of bats in the tropics. They are important in pollination and seed distribution, aiding in reproduction of the rain forests and crop production, he said.

It is disturbing, Tuttle said, to see bat eradication efforts in such areas when the human residents are "destroying bats that they are very dependent on for survival."

In the United States, he said, bats eat large numbers of insect pests during their nocturnal flights.

Bats are the only mammals that can fly, using a kind of sonar rather than sight to find their way. Some bats live for 15 years or more, and a pair of bats produces only about one batlet a year.

The slow reproduction rate and the fact that many bats live together in huge colonies make them vulnerable to eradication efforts.

However, Tuttle said, bat-transmitted rabies is a potential hazard to humans, as with other animals, and he warns people "not to handle strange animals to begin with."

"You can assume any bat you can pick up is a sick bat," he said. "If we leave them alone, they leave us alone."

Italian papers speculate about fate of missing man in plot to kill pope

ROME (AP) — A Turkish fugitive accused of being one of two gunmen who shot Pope John Paul II may have been killed by Bulgarians to keep him from talking, Italian newspapers speculated Saturday.

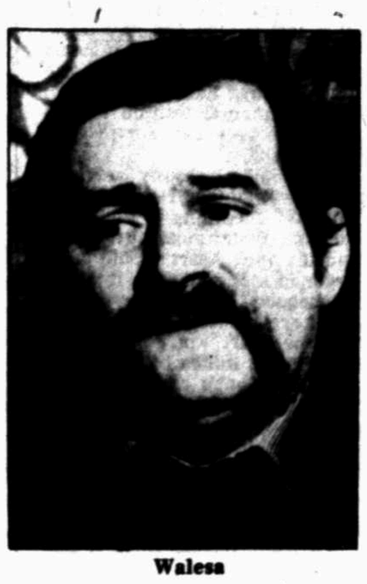

Bulgaria's state-run news agency said meanwhile that the Foreign Ministry in Sofia summoned Italy's ambassador to Bulgaria and handed him a sharply worded protest note on Saturday.

After a three-year investigation into the wounding of the pope on May 13, 1981, in St. Peter's Square, an Italian judge Friday indicted three Bulgarians and four Turks in what he called "an international plot" to kill John Paul. A fifth Turk is serving a sentence in an Italian prison for shooting the pope.

Judge Ilario Martella also charged for the first time that a second gunman shot the pope, who recovered from his wounds. It was originally thought that Mehmet Ali Agca, who was convicted of the shooting, was the only attacker.

Agca first claimed he acted alone but then changed his testimony and implicated the men who were indicted Friday, Martella told a news conference.

They included Oral Celik, whom Martella described as Agca's best friend and who he said helped Agca escape from a Turkish prison in 1979. Both were reportedly members of a rightist terrorist band known as the Gray Wolves.

Martella said that based on witnesses' accounts and ballistic tests it is believed that Celik fired one of the three bullets that struck John Paul.

A blurred photograph taken by an American tourist showed a man running from the square who is believed to be Celik.

The judge also charged two former Bulgarian Embassy employees, Todor Aivazov and Maj. Zhelyo Kolev Vassilev, with arranging for a special vehicle with diplomatic protection to sneak the gunmen out of Italy.

Martella charged another Bulgarian, Sergei Ivanov Antonov, with being armed and waiting outside the square to drive Agca and Celik to safety after the shooting.

Martella did not say how Celik actually escaped. The whereabouts of Celik, 25, have been unknown since the shooting.

Several Italian papers speculated that Celik had been killed to prevent him from talking.

La Repubblica, a left-leaning Rome daily, said that possibility was mentioned by Prosecutor Antonio Albano in his special report in May recommending the indictments. Portions of the report were leaked to the press.

The newspaper said the report "advances the hypothesis that Oral Celik, in turn, was killed by the Bulgarians to definitively close his mouth."

Il Messaggero, Rome's moderate and largest circulation daily, said there were reports from Turkey that "the fraternal friend (Celik) of Mehmet Ali Agca could have been killed after he was taken to a secret location."

Afghans release French journalist

PARIS (AP) — French television journalist Jacques Abouchar arrived home Saturday after being released by Afghanistan's Marxist government, which had sentenced him to 18 years in prison for alleged cooperation with anti-communist rebels.

Abouchar, 53, a producer-reporter for the French network Antenne 2, was released early Saturday by special order of Afghan President Babrak Karmal. He was flown to Paris on a chartered French aircraft.

Abouchar appeared relaxed and in good health when he arrived at Paris' Orly Airport.

He told reporters he had never admitted to the Afghan charges "even though they wanted me to give them a little something on spying and that would have helped their scenario."

Abouchar was sentenced on Oct. 20 to an 18-year prison term for entering Afghanistan without a visa. In a show trial conducted by an Afghan military court, Abouchar also was charged with aiding insurgents and other offenses, which he denied.

Soviet troops seized the veteran foreign correspondent on Sept. 16 when he entered Afghan territory from the border post of Chaman, in southwest Pakistan, with a group of insurgents. Three other members of his television crew fled to Pakistan when they were ambushed by the troops, but Abouchar was captured.

Abouchar and his crew entered Afghanistan to film and report on the fighting between anti-Marxist guerrillas and the Kabul government and its supporting Soviet troops. The civil war, which involves an estimated 140,000 Soviet troops, is now in its fifth year.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce
AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for parts of Oregon, Idaho, Montana, the Dakotas and Minnesota and showers for parts of California, Oregon, Nevada, Idaho and Wyoming and in a band from Louisiana and Arkansas northeast to Maine.

Fair, warm Sunday due for Basin area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders can wake up an hour later today to fair skies and warmer temperatures.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, rain received this year in the area has rested at 18.31 inches and no more is in sight.

Temperatures are expected to climb near 80 today and Monday and drop into the upper 40s tonight.

Winds will be light and variable today.

Saturday's high of 71 was 18 degrees cooler than the record high for that date of 89, set in 1950. The overnight low of 50 was 16 degrees warmer than 1980's record low of 34 degrees.

STATE

Clear to partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures were the rule over much of Texas Saturday afternoon.

Scattered showers, meanwhile, roamed the Coastal Plains beneath cloudy skies.

At 4 p.m., temperatures ranged from 66 at El Paso to 86 over deep South Texas. A southwest wind had blown most of the clouds away from the northwest half of the state.

High temperatures will be generally in the 60s-70s.

North Texas will have considerable morning fog and cloudiness with highs Sunday in the upper 70s to near 80. Lows Sunday night will be in the 50s and 60s and the high Monday will be in the 70s.

West Texas will have fair and cool nights and warm days through Monday. Highs Sunday and Monday will be in the 60s in the Panhandle to the 80s in extreme South Texas.

NATION

An arctic air mass pressed down across parts of the northern Rockies and the northern Plains on Saturday, blanketing the region with freezing temperatures and blowing and drifting snow.

Temperatures were only in the teens during the afternoon over sections of Montana, where Cut Bank was the coldest spot in the nation at 3 p.m. EDT with a reading of 14 degrees. Afternoon temperatures were in the 20s over western North Dakota, northwestern South Dakota, Montana and most of Wyoming.

Travelers' advisories were posted across northeastern Montana and the mountains and passes of northwestern Montana warning of blowing and drifting snow. A foot of snow fell over the northern slopes of the Bears Paw Mountains and 6 inches of snow was reported at St. Marys Mountain along the eastern border of Glacier Park.

Baby girl given baboon's heart

By LYNN ELBER
Associated Press Writer

LOMA LINDA, Calif. — A 15-day-old girl who faced certain death from her own underdeveloped heart was in "remarkably stable condition" Saturday, one day after her organ was replaced with that of a baboon in a historic transplant operation, a doctor said.

"She has good blood pressure. She's opening and closing her eyes. Her chest X-rays have been good. Her blood oxygen levels are appropriate," Dr. Leonard L. Bailey said in a statement released by Loma Linda University Medical Center spokesman Dick Schaefer.

Bailey, who headed the surgical team of more than a dozen people at the hospital 60 miles east of Los Angeles, said "Baby Fae" seemed to have recovered from anesthesia, her neurological signs were normal and she had suffered no seizures.

"The mother is now giving her love," Bailey said. "The baby is in remarkably stable condition."

She passed her first 24 hours with the baboon heart at 11:35 a.m. PDT, hospital officials said.

Sandra Nehlsen-Cannarella, an immunologist who was a member of the operating team, called the case "one of the biggest, overdue advances in our field."

Only four ape-to-human heart transplants have been performed previously, all in adults. Only one recipient survived more than a few hours, living for 3½ days.

No human heart was available for "Baby Fae," born slightly premature two weeks ago with hypoplastic left heart syndrome, which always results in death within a few days, so doctors decided to use the baboon's heart.

The child, whose full name was withheld at the parents' request, was "doing remarkably well," Schaefer said as she came out of anesthesia. "She's on a respirator and she will be probably for a while.... She was stirring and opening her eyes."

Doctors said the infant had nearly died on her sixth day.

The child's mother told the Barstow Desert Dispatch she had taken the ailing newborn home on Oct. 16, expecting the worst, but the baby surprised both mother and doctors.

"She had trouble breathing, and she slept a lot but she was alert when she was awake," the mother said. But she said her daughter "wouldn't be alive today if she weren't in the hospital."

Schaefer said there was "hopeful optimism" that the child could have "a long life" with the ape's heart, based on studies by Bailey.

"In his animal research, he's had animals go from infancy to adulthood and experience pregnancy and delivery (with transplanted hearts), so hope springs eternal that she'll have an active and normal life," Schaefer said.

The research team said in a news release that it hopes to perform four more such baboon-to-infant transplants on an experimental basis.

Schaefer said there had been 200 telephone calls about the case, mostly from the media. One call was from a Chicago man seeking a similar operation for his son, said hospital spokeswoman Jayne McGill.

"It's an infant boy. He's just holding his own, just a little over a week old," said hospital vice president Ed Wines. "We have promised to get back in touch with him," he said, but no immediate decision has been made on that case.

Wines said two calls expressed opposition to such surgery.

Bailey, 41, who has performed more than 150 heart transplants on animals such as goats and sheep, said that if Baby Fae's transplant is successful, his experiments indicate the baboon heart will grow as she does.

Doctors were emotional when the newly transplanted heart began beating without artificial stimulation after the five-hour operation Friday.

Previous ape-to-human transplants, called xenotransplantation, all ended in death:

—In 1964, a 68-year-old man died within four hours after a transplant by Dr. James Hardy at the University of Mississippi.

—In 1977, heart pioneer Dr. Christiaan Barnard in South Africa placed a baboon heart into the chest of Marilena Mattiuzzo Portello, 26, of Italy, who lived only four hours.

—Also in 1977, Barnard transplanted the heart of a chimpanzee "piggyback" beside the heart of Benjamin Fortes, a 59-year-old accountant from Cape Town, who lived 3½ days.

—The fourth case was in London several years ago and also ended in death, hospital officials said. They had no other information on that case.

In an interview in 1978, Barnard said he abandoned the technique of using ape hearts on humans.

"I stopped that, not because I'm so convinced I'm on the wrong track, but I got emotionally involved with the chimp," he said.

Surgeon says ape organs similiar to human, plentiful

Associated Press

Bailey

LOMA LINDA, Calif. — A baboon heart was transplanted into a 15-day-old girl because the animals are plentiful and their hearts are similar to the human organ, says the doctor who performed the historic operation.

Other species of apes might make better donors, but many of them are endangered, Dr. Leonard L. Bailey said in a release issued Saturday by Loma Linda University Medical Center.

Six of Loma Linda's Animal Care Facility's home-bred baboons, ranging in age from 4 months to 1 year, were tested for tissue compatibility with "Baby Fae," the 15-day-old girl who was given a baboon heart Friday because her own heart wasn't fully developed, said spokeswoman Jayne McGill.

Bailey said the field was narrowed to two donors, then to one after a five-day blood test.

"We're not in the business of uselessly sacrificing animals," the doctor said. "But we're forced here to make a choice — we can either decide to continue to let these otherwise healthy human babies die, because they are born with only half of their heart, or we can intervene and, in so doing, sacrifice some lesser form than our own human species."

The internal structure of the baboon's heart is similar to that of a human heart.

"The baboon has only two (aortic) arch vessels, while the human heart usually has three, but for all practical purposes, the internal structure of the baboon heart is virtually the same as the human heart," Bailey said.

Some normal human hearts also have only two aortic arch vessels.

Adult male baboons weigh as much as 90 pounds, females about half that, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica, but Bailey said the ape's heart should grow larger in a human than it would in a baboon.

"There's nothing to suggest that the heart won't respond to the internal milieu of the baby," he said. "That's certainly been true in all our experimental work and is a well-recognized phenomenon in kidney and liver" transplants.

He explained why a baboon was chosen over better simian candidates.

"Of the primates, there is evidence that the chimpanzee, orangutan or gorilla may be a better donor," Bailey said. "The problem with all of those is availability. They are either endangered species or don't procreate well in captivity.

"Baboons procreate readily in captivity," he said. "They are a problem in indigenous areas, where they are known to actually kill children every year, destroy crops and swarm over the countryside."

Transplant expected to stir ethical questions

By LYNN ELBER
Associated Press Writer

LOMA LINDA, Calif. — Officials at Loma Linda University Medical Center said Saturday they were prepared for ethical questions and controversy after their decision to transplant the heart of a baboon into an infant girl.

Security was strengthened at the Seventh-day Adventist institution 60 miles east of Los Angeles, and a special press center was set up. The school also offered a brief treatise on the ethical considerations of such surgery.

The child, identified only as Baby Fae, was listed in critical condition Saturday but was described as stable, with good vital signs. Physicians decided to make the transplant when it was apparent the 15-day-old baby, born with only half a heart, was doomed.

"Objections to the procedure in question will undoubtedly be lodged on a variety of grounds, some of which will be emotional rather than clearly rational," said Dr. Jack W. Provonsha, a physician and philosophy professor who is director of the Center for Christian Bioethics at the university.

"Some will find disturbing the replacing of a human infant's own heart with an animal heart, with all that implies in a cultural tradition giving the heart special significance," he said. "Others may protest against the willful sacrifice of animals...."

Brenda Forsythe, regional coordinator of Mobilization for Animals, said Saturday the baby's doctor "is following in the footsteps of Dr. Christiaan Barnard, who did heart transplant surgery in the past but gave that up because he realized it's wrong to take the life of the baboon in order to prolong the agony of the infant, and to give false hopes to the family of the infant."

And Lucy Shelton, coordinator of the Southern California Chapter of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, said: "Instead of one death now, there will definitely be two.... In essence, they killed a baboon to prolong the child's suffering. We feel it's just ghoulish tinkering.... This is medical sensationalism at the expense of the infant and her family."

She said the differences between a baboon and human are too vast to make a successful transplant possible.

Carr said some people in the private sector have volunteered to donate their time and money to support the reserves, "so that we can give them so much more protection."

He said the reserve deputies would be unarmed state-certified law enforcement officers who would be assigned to full-time deputies in the patrol division. They would work with the Crime Stoppers and Crime Watch programs, and some would be office personnel.

"They mainly will be patroling the farming and ranching communities," Carr said. "It'll be a tremendous savings for the taxpayers of Midland County."

In his planned "restructuring" of the sheriff's department, Carr said "the first thing you've got to do is change sheriffs. You go from the top all the way through the entire department to restructure" by re-evaluating the personnel and "the whole deal."

CARR, WHO HAS worked in patrol, narcotics and criminal investigations in his 19 years on the Midland Police Department, said he has "never had any problem getting along there (and)...with the chief of police, and state and federal agencies. I've worked very closely with them in the past. We've all worked hand in hand.

"I'll be the first to say I see no problem whatsoever in getting along with the city, county, state and federal law enforcement agencies." He said people are "mature enough" to say, 'I'll work it out' and go about your business as usual."

Carr said that his candidacy more or less coincided with the sheriff's department's expansion, which, he said, included a juvenile division, narcotics and intelligence divisions and Crime Stoppers.

"My platform must have been real good; a lot of it was copied verbatim."

Of his proposal to create a sheriff's posse, Carr said he "certainly would have no objection to having a good, well organized sheriff's posse." He said he would consider organizing a mounted posse "after we get our feet on the ground and all."

"It (the posse) will create interest and enthusiasm and will let them (the public) know your law enforcement officers a little better."

BASICALLY, CARR said he is running for sheriff because segments of the rural community have been neglected.

"As far as I'm concerned, the farmer and rancher and the oilman, especially out in the rural community, have kind of been neglected by law enforcement, patrol, and looking after their property, which is what we're charged with doing. We have an obligation in protecting lives and property."

Carr said that "a lot of people in this county have not seen a deputy's car in several years." He mentioned the Midkiff area, in southeast Midland County, where there is "an enormous amount of farming and ranching....We feel like those people are taxpayers just like everybody else."

During his tenure as sheriff, Carr said his deputies primarly would work "outside the city."

"We're going out in the county where we're supposed to work," he said. "Of course, we'll work anything inside the city we're called to work." Carr said he would maintain an "open line of communications with the chief of police (Wayne Gideon). If we're working on something here in the city, the chief of police will be notified of it, so he'll know what we are doing."

Though he's a Democrat in a Republican stronghold, Carr said his chances for winning are greatly enhanced since "Midland right now wants a change."

"I think they're looking more at the man, the qualifications, than they are the party line....I think they'll compare qualifications no matter what party they're with or represent...and will look for the man that can do the best job."

OPEC

But it is the most severely pressed cartel members, such as Nigeria and Iran, that helped throw OPEC into its current crisis by cutting prices or offering disguised discounts to key buyers.

Western oil analysts have said OPEC faces one of the biggest challenges of its 24-year history to stave off a broad decline in prices following price cuts earlier this month by non-OPEC members Norway and Britain and by cash-strapped Nigeria.

Charles Ebinger, director of the energy program at Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, said Friday in a telephone interview he believes OPEC's crisis will force it to act this week.

"I firmly believe that OPEC will be able to get a production-sharing agreement at a lower level," Ebinger said. He said that a cutback to no more than 14 million barrels a day would "go a long way" toward squeezing supplies enough to force up prices.

Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, has said the cartel will seek to agree on production cuts large enough to support OPEC's $29-a-barrel price, although he has not said how large the cuts must be to achieve the goal.

He and other ministers have said they are ruling out a price cut, but many analysts believe that even if OPEC succeeds now in keeping its price at $29, it will be forced to cut it next year.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, said on his arrival in Geneva Saturday evening that the "big issue" for OPEC is the need to agree on a lower level of production.

He also said the ministers must try to agree on a realignment of prices for the different grades of oil produced by the member countries.

Under the OPEC system, prices are aligned around the benchmark price of Saudi light. Lower-quality crudes sell for less than $29 dollars, while those of higher quality sell for more.

Because demand for the higher-quality oils produced by OPEC is weaker than that for the lower-quality grades, pressure is building for a cut in prices of the better crudes, which carry a higher price tag because they yield more profitable products such as gasoline and jet fuel.

"We either have to raise the heavy price or lower the light, or meet in between," Oteiba said. He did not say which option he favored, but stressed that this was a less important issue than the need to cut production.

Festival provides Halloween fantasies

By MAUD S. BEELMAN

KEY WEST, Fla. — Revelers dressed as "ghostbusters," M&Ms and even as a 100-pound coral reef Saturday at the Halloween Fantasy Fest Parade, billed as this island city's answer to Mardi Gras.

As many as 15,000 people crowded into town, with costumes ranging from the more pedestrian Santas, monsters, babies and clowns to a group of people who dressed as a flock of M&M candies, a man who squeezed into a Playboy bunny outfit and a "typical referee."

"I just thought it'd be fun," said Calvin Mitchell, 51, of Tampa, who sported a black-and-white shirt, a whistle, dark glasses and a blind man's cane. "I happen to be an eye surgeon if that makes any difference."

Some folks wore "ghostbuster" garb fashioned after the summer's hit movie. "Ghostbusters" was also the theme of the first of about 40 units to make the 1-mile trek down the Old Town section of the city.

The winner of this year's fantasy fest costume competition — Don Moore of Fort Lauderdale — dressed as a giant coral reef.

The parade was the highlight of a four-day celebration, marked by street dances, concerts, costume contests and vendors hawking their wares.

The fete was started by local businesses in 1979 as a way to boost the sagging off-season tourist economy, and was originally "a sort of adult Halloween party," said Perri Halevy, co-director of this year's celebration.

Polish captain allegedly confessed to priest's murder, minister says

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A captain in the Interior Ministry has said he killed a pro-Solidarity priest who was kidnapped Oct. 19, but his confession has not been confirmed, the interior minister told the nation on Saturday.

The captain and two lieutenants in the ministry have been charged in the abduction of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, said Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak.

He said the three accused men gave conflicting statements, that no one has been charged with any killing in the case and the Roman Catholic priest's whereabouts were still unknown.

Police stepped up patrols in Warsaw, apparently to discourage any street demonstrations. Popieluszko's sermons backing the now-outlawed Solidarity trade union drew as many as 10,000 people to his Warsaw church.

Poland's official PAP news agency said that the Warsaw provincial defense committee met during the day and "took necessary actions to prevent possible threats." It did not elaborate.

Gen. Kiszczak, who oversees all police units, said on nationwide television and radio that he had no immediate evidence to back up the assertion that Popieluszko had been murdered.

"The organizer of the kidnap claims for his part that he himself killed the kidnapped. The area where, according to him, the crime occurred, has also been thoroughly combed. No traces have been found," the general said.

He added that "the kidnap was organized by Capt. Grzegorz Piotrowski."

The interior minister, a close adviser to Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the leader of the Communist regime, said, "One of the justified hypotheses of the inestigation assumes that the kidnapped is dead."

Popieluszko's lawyer, Edward Wende, said in a telephone interview that there can be "only one conclusion" from Kiszczak's remarks.

"I'm sure the priest is dead, and I think it's a horrible thing," he said. "The minister did admit that one of them confessed he had killed. He would have to be insane to confess to murder if he didn't commit it, and I don't think he's insane."

Cardinal Jozef Glemp

Kiszczak said in his address, "Unfortunately, I am not in a position to give information or even sufficient assumptions as for the fate of the kidnapped."

The interior minister said one of the captain's accomplices testified that Popieluszko was left alive on the outskirts of the northern city of Torun, where he was kidnapped by men in another car who stopped his automobile. "However, a lengthy search in that area has not produced any effect," he said.

Kiszczak wore his uniform as he spoke to the nation.

He identified the three arrested Interior Ministry officials as Capt. Piotrowski, head of a ministry department, and two subordinates, Lt. Waldemar Chmielewski, and Lt. Leszek Pekala.

He added the three face possible death sentences.

Popieluszko, 37, became one of the church's most outspoken defenders of the Solidarity federation, the first independent trade union in the Soviet bloc. It was chartered by the government during strikes in August 1980, and suspended with the imposition of martial law in December 1981 and later outlawed.

Kiszczak said authorities would "spare no effort so that the fate of Father Jerzy Popieluszko can be definitively established and the entire hideous affair explained to the very end.

"In Poland, nobody can perish without a trace. Our country is not and will not be a jungle of lawlessness."

Popieluszko's driver, said to be the only witness to the kidnapping, was taken to a police headquarters on Saturday to identify the three suspects, said Janusz Onyszkiewicz, Solidarity's former national spokesman.

The driver, Waldemar Chrostowski, was shown several people and "identified one of them as being one of those present at the abduction," he said. "He recognized two others by the way they walked, but not by their faces."

The driver has been staying at the rectory of Popieluszko's church, St. Stanislaw Kostka, guarded by volunteer workers from Warsaw factories, since his release from protective police custody early last week.

Kiszczak said others also could be charged in the abduction, but he did not identify them.

The interior minister also hinted that the kidnapping was a political attack aimed against the state security organs. "The deliberate actions of the perpertrators are striking," he said. "They were designed to possibly quickly direct the investigation to a supposition that the kidnappers were functionaries of the Interior Ministry."

Poland's Catholic primate, Cardinal Jozef Glemp, ordered a special Mass to be said at all Warsaw churches on Sunday evening "in intention of the return of the kidnapped priest."

Several former Solidarity activists, who described themselves as Popieluszko's friends, have worked in the rectory of St. Stanislaw church to collect and disseminate information on social reaction to the kidnapping.

Thousands of protesters 'die-in' at shipyard

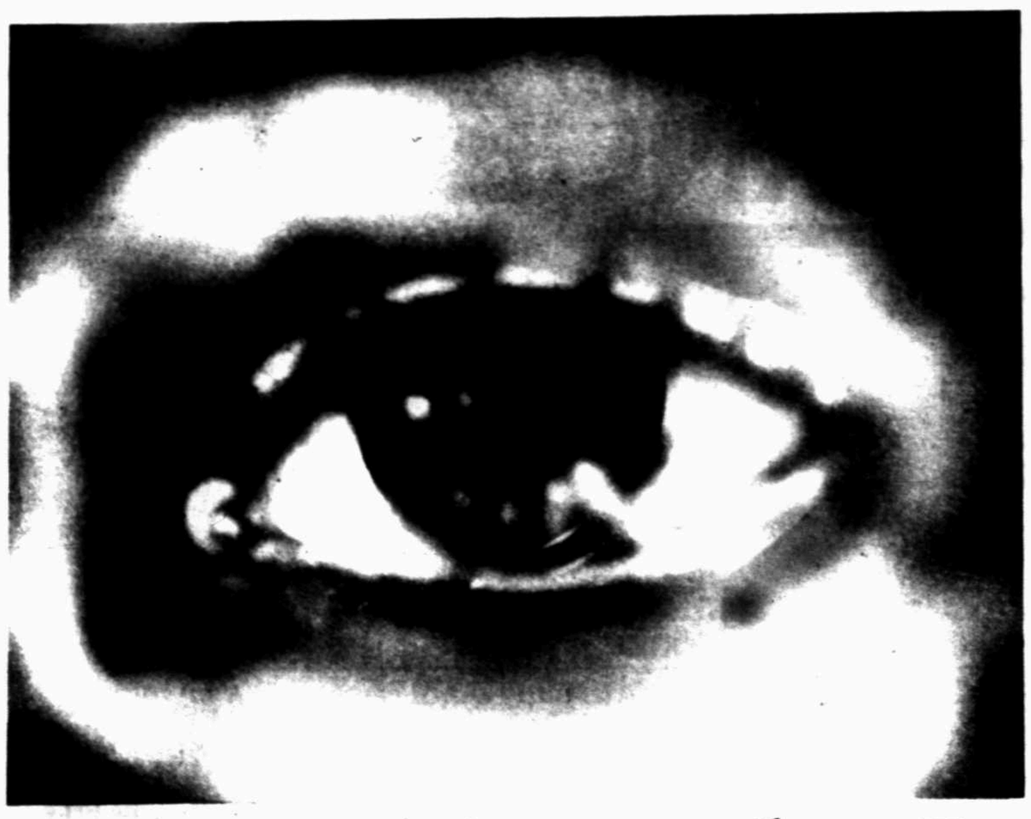

BARROW-IN-FURNESS, England (AP) — Tens of thousands of anti-nuclear protestors staged a "die-in" Saturday, forming a human chain around the vast shipyard where Britain's new Trident missile submarine fleet is to be built.

The demonstrators, waving flags and banners, converged on this one-company coastal town in northwest England that has been a key construction yard for military shipping since the turn of the century.

Four nuclear-powered submarines, each capable of carrying up to 16 U.S.-built Trident missiles, are to be constructed here between 1986 and the early 1990s, replacing Britain's aging fleet of four Polaris nuclear missile-carrying submarines. Each Trident missile will be equipped with 14 nuclear warheads.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce
AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for parts of Oregon, Idaho, Montana, the Dakotas and Minnesota and showers for parts of California, Oregon, Nevada, Idaho and Wyoming and in a band from Louisiana and Arkansas northeast to Maine.

Fair, warm Sunday due for Basin area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders can wake up an hour later today to fair skies and warmer temperatures.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, rain received this year in the area has rested at 13.31 inches and no more is in sight.

Temperatures are expected to climb near 80 today and Monday and drop into the upper 40s tonight.

Winds will be light and variable today.

Saturday's high of 71 was 18 degrees cooler than the record high for that date of 89, set in 1950. The overnight low of 50 was 16 degrees warmer than 1980's record low of 34 degrees.

STATE

Clear to partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures were the rule over much of Texas Saturday afternoon.

Scattered showers, meanwhile, roamed the Coastal Plains beneath cloudy skies.

At 4 p.m., temperatures ranged from 66 at El Paso to 86 over deep South Texas. A southwest wind had blown most of the clouds away from the northwest half of the state.

High temperatures will be generally in the 60s-70s.

North Texas will have considerable morning fog and cloudiness with highs Sunday in the upper 70s to near 80. Lows Sunday night will be in the 50s and 60s and the high Monday will be in the 70s.

West Texas will have fair and cool nights and warm days through Monday. Highs Sunday and Monday will be in the 60s in the Panhandle to the 80s in extreme South Texas.

NATION

An arctic air mass pressed down across parts of the northern Rockies and the northern Plains on Saturday, blanketing the region with freezing temperatures and blowing and drifting snow.

Temperatures were only in the teens during the afternoon over sections of Montana, where Cut Bank was the coldest spot in the nation at 3 p.m. EDT with a reading of 14 degrees. Afternoon temperatures were in the 20s over western North Dakota, northwestern South Dakota, Montana and most of Wyoming.

Travelers' advisories were posted across northeastern Montana and the mountains and passes of northwestern Montana warning of blowing and drifting snow. A foot of snow fell over the northern slopes of the Bears Paw Mountains and 6 inches of snow was reported at St. Marys Mountain along the eastern border of Glacier Park.

Baby girl given baboon's heart

By LYNN ELBER
Associated Press Writer

LOMA LINDA, Calif. — A 15-day-old girl who faced certain death from her own underdeveloped heart was in "remarkably stable condition" Saturday, one day after her organ was replaced with that of a baboon in a historic transplant operation, a doctor said.

"She has good blood pressure. She's opening and closing her eyes. Her chest X-rays have been good. Her blood oxygen levels are appropriate," Dr. Leonard L. Bailey said in a statement released by Loma Linda University Medical Center spokesman Dick Schaefer.

Bailey, who headed the surgical team of more than a dozen people at the hospital 60 miles east of Los Angeles, said "Baby Fae" seemed to have recovered from anesthesia, her neurological signs were normal and she had suffered no seizures.

"The mother is now giving her love," Bailey said. "The baby is in remarkably stable condition."

She passed her first 24 hours with the baboon heart at 11:35 a.m. PDT, hospital officials said.

Sandra Nehlsen-Cannarella, an immunologist who was a member of the operating team, called the case "one of the biggest, overdue advances in our field."

Only four ape-to-human heart transplants have been performed previously, all in adults. Only one recipient survived more than a few hours, living for 3½ days.

No human heart was available for "Baby Fae," born slightly premature two weeks ago with hypoplastic left heart syndrome, which always results in death within a few days, so doctors decided to use the baboon's heart.

The child, whose full name was withheld at the parents' request, was "doing remarkably well," Schaefer said as she came out of anesthesia. "She's on a respirator and she will be probably for a while.... She was stirring and opening her eyes."

Doctors said the infant had nearly died on her sixth day.

The child's mother told the Barstow Desert Dispatch she had taken the ailing newborn home on Oct. 16, expecting the worst, but the baby surprised both mother and doctors.

"She had trouble breathing, and she slept a lot but she was alert when she was awake," the mother said. But she said her daughter "wouldn't be alive today if she weren't in the hospital."

Schaefer said there was "hopeful optimism" that the child could have "a long life" with the ape's heart, based on studies by Bailey.

"In his animal research, he's had animals go from infancy to adulthood and experience pregnancy and delivery (with transplanted hearts), so hope springs eternal that she'll have an active and normal life," Schaefer said.

The research team said in a news release that it hopes to perform four more such baboon-to-infant transplants on an experimental basis.

Schaefer said there had been 200 telephone calls about the case, mostly from the media. One call was from a Chicago man seeking a similar operation for his son, said hospital spokeswoman Jayne McGill.

"It's an infant boy. He's just holding his own, just a little over a week old," said hospital vice president Ed Wines. "We have promised to get back in touch with him," he said, but no immediate decision has been made on that case.

Wines said two calls expressed opposition to such surgery.

Bailey, 41, who has performed more than 150 heart transplants on animals such as goats and sheep, said that if Baby Fae's transplant is successful, his experiments indicate the baboon heart will grow as she does.

Doctors were emotional when the newly transplanted heart began beating without artificial stimulation after the five-hour operation Friday.

Previous ape-to-human transplants, called xenotransplantation, all ended in death:

—In 1964, a 68-year-old man died within four hours after a transplant by Dr. James Hardy at the University of Mississippi.

—In 1977, heart pioneer Dr. Christiaan Barnard in South Africa placed a baboon heart into the chest of Marilena Mattiuzzo Portello, 26, of Italy, who lived only four hours.

—Also in 1977, Barnard transplanted the heart of a chimpanzee "piggyback" beside the heart of Benjamin Fortes, a 59-year-old accountant from Cape Town, who lived 3½ days.

—The fourth case was in London several years ago and also ended in death, hospital officials said. They had no other information on that case.

In an interview in 1978, Barnard said he abandoned the technique of using ape hearts on humans.

"I stopped that, not because I'm so convinced I'm on the wrong track, but I got emotionally involved with the chimp," he said.

Surgeon says ape organs similiar to human, plentiful

Associated Press

Bailey

LOMA LINDA, Calif. — A baboon heart was transplanted into a 15-day-old girl because the animals are plentiful and their hearts are similar to the human organ, says the doctor who performed the historic operation.

Other species of apes might make better donors, but many of them are endangered, Dr. Leonard L. Bailey said in a release issued Saturday by Loma Linda University Medical Center.

Six of Loma Linda's Animal Care Facility's home-bred baboons, ranging in age from 4 months to 1 year, were tested for tissue compatibility with "Baby Fae," the 15-day-old girl who was given a baboon heart Friday because her own heart wasn't fully developed, said spokeswoman Jayne McGill.

Bailey said the field was narrowed to two donors, then to one after a five-day blood test.

"We're not in the business of uselessly sacrificing animals," the doctor said. "But we're forced here to make a choice — we can either decide to continue to let these otherwise healthy human babies die, because they are born with only half of their heart, or we can intervene and, in so doing, sacrifice some lesser form than our own human species."

The internal structure of the baboon's heart is similar to that of a human heart.

"The baboon has only two (aortic) arch vessels, while the human heart usually has three, but for all practical purposes, the internal structure of the baboon heart is virtually the same as the human heart," Bailey said.

Some normal human hearts also have only two aortic arch vessels.

Adult male baboons weigh as much as 90 pounds, females about half that, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica, but Bailey said the ape's heart should grow larger in a human than it would in a baboon.

"There's nothing to suggest that the heart won't respond to the internal milieu of the baby," he said. "That's certainly been true in all our experimental work and is a well-recognized phenomenon in kidney and liver" transplants.

He explained why a baboon was chosen over better simian candidates.

"Of the primates, there is evidence that the chimpanzee, orangutan or gorilla may be a better donor," Bailey said. "The problem with all of those is availability. They are either endangered species or don't procreate well in captivity.

"Baboons procreate readily in captivity," he said. "They are a problem in indigenous areas, where they are known to actually kill children every year, destroy crops and swarm over the countryside."

Transplant expected to stir ethical questions

By LYNN ELBER
Associated Press Writer

LOMA LINDA, Calif. — Officials at Loma Linda University Medical Center said Saturday they were prepared for ethical questions and controversy after their decision to transplant the heart of a baboon into an infant girl.

Security was strengthened at the Seventh-day Adventist institution 60 miles east of Los Angeles, and a special press center was set up. The school also offered a brief treatise on the ethical considerations of such surgery.

The child, identified only as Baby Fae, was listed in critical condition Saturday but was described as stable, with good vital signs. Physicians decided to make the transplant when it was apparent the 15-day-old baby, born with only half a heart, was doomed.

"Objections to the procedure in question will undoubtedly be lodged on a variety of grounds, some of which will be emotional rather than clearly rational," said Dr. Jack W. Provonsha, a physician and philosophy professor who is director of the Center for Christian Bioethics at the university.

"Some will find disturbing the replacing of a human infant's own heart with an animal heart, with all that implies in a cultural tradition giving the heart special significance," he said. "Others may protest against the willful sacrifice of animals...."

Brenda Forsythe, regional coordinator of Mobilization for Animals, said Saturday the baby's doctor "is following in the footsteps of Dr. Christiaan Barnard, who did heart transplant surgery in the past but gave that up because he realized it's wrong to take the life of the baboon in order to prolong the agony of the infant, and to give false hopes to the family of the infant."

And Lucy Shelton, coordinator of the Southern California Chapter of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, said: "Instead of one death now, there will definitely be two.... In essence, they killed a baboon to prolong the child's suffering. We feel it's just ghoulish tinkering.... This is medical sensationalism at the expense of the infant and her family."

She said the differences between a baboon and human are too vast to make a successful transplant possible.

Carr said some people in the private sector have volunteered to donate their time and money to support the reserves, "so that we can give them so much more protection."

He said the reserve deputies would be unarmed state-certified law enforcement officers who would be assigned to full-time deputies in the patrol division. They would work with the Crime Stoppers and Crime Watch programs, and some would be office personnel.

"They mainly will be patroling the farming and ranching communities," Carr said. "It'll be a tremendous savings for the taxpayers of Midland County."

In his planned "restructuring" of the sheriff's department, Carr said "the first thing you've got to do is change sheriffs. You go from the top all the way through the entire department to restructure" by re-evaluating the personnel and "the whole deal."

CARR, WHO HAS worked in patrol, narcotics and criminal investigations in his 19 years on the Midland Police Department, said he has "never had any problem getting along there (and)...with the chief of police, and state and federal agencies. I've worked very closely with them in the past. We've all worked hand in hand.

"I'll be the first to say I see no problem whatsoever in getting along with the city, county, state and federal law enforcement agencies." He said people are "mature enough" to say, 'I'll work it out' and go about your business as usual."

Carr said that his candidacy more or less coincided with the sheriff's department's expansion, which, he said, included a juvenile division, narcotics and intelligence divisions and Crime Stoppers.

"My platform must have been real good; a lot of it was copied verbatim."

Of his proposal to create a sheriff's posse, Carr said he "certainly would have no objection to having a good, well organized sheriff's posse." He said he would consider organizing a mounted posse "after we get our feet on the ground and all."

"It (the posse) will create interest and enthusiasm and will let them (the public) know your law enforcement officers a little better."

BASICALLY, CARR said he is running for sheriff because segments of the rural community have been neglected.

"As far as I'm concerned, the farmer and rancher and the oilman, especially out in the rural community, have kind of been neglected by law enforcement, patrol, and looking after their property, which is what we're charged with doing. We have an obligation in protecting lives and property."

Carr said that "a lot of people in this county have not seen a deputy's car in several years." He mentioned the Midkiff area, in southeast Midland County, where there is "an enormous amount of farming and ranching....We feel like those people are taxpayers just like everybody else."

During his tenure as sheriff, Carr said his deputies primarly would work "outside the city."

"We're going out in the county where we're supposed to work," he said. "Of course, we'll work anything inside the city we're called to work." Carr said he would maintain an "open line of communications with the chief of police (Wayne Gideon). If we're working on something here in the city, the chief of police will be notified of it, so he'll know what we are doing."

Though he's a Democrat in a Republican stronghold, Carr said his chances for winning are greatly enhanced since "Midland right now wants a change."

"I think they're looking more at the man, the qualifications, than they are the party line....I think they'll compare qualifications no matter what party they're with or represent...and will look for the man that can do the best job."

But it is the most severely pressed cartel members, such as Nigeria and Iran, that helped throw OPEC into its current crisis by cutting prices or offering disguised discounts to key buyers.

Western oil analysts have said OPEC faces one of the biggest challenges of its 24-year history to stave off a broad decline in prices following price cuts earlier this month by non-OPEC members Norway and Britain and by cash-strapped Nigeria.

Charles Ebinger, director of the energy program at Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, said Friday in a telephone interview he believes OPEC's crisis will force it to act this week.

"I firmly believe that OPEC will be able to get a production-sharing agreement at a lower level," Ebinger said. He said that a cutback to no more than 14 million barrels a day would "go a long way" toward squeezing supplies enough to force up prices.

Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, has said the cartel will seek to agree on production cuts large enough to support OPEC's $29-a-barrel price, although he has not said how large the cuts must be to achieve the goal.

He and other ministers have said they are ruling out a price cut, but many analysts believe that even if OPEC succeeds now in keeping its price at $29, it will be forced to cut it next year.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, said on his arrival in Geneva Saturday evening that the "big issue" for OPEC is the need to agree on a lower level of production.

He also said the ministers must try to agree on a realignment of prices for the different grades of oil produced by the member countries.

Under the OPEC system, prices are aligned around the benchmark price of Saudi light. Lower-quality crudes sell for less than $29 dollars, while those of higher quality sell for more.

Because demand for the higher-quality oils produced by OPEC is weaker than that for the lower-quality grades, pressure is building for a cut in prices of the better crudes, which carry a higher price tag because they yield more profitable products such as gasoline and jet fuel.

"We either have to raise the heavy price or lower the light, or meet in between," Oteiba said. He did not say which option he favored, but stressed that this was a less important issue than the need to cut production.

Festival provides Halloween fantasies

By MAUD S. BEELMAN
Associated Press Writer

KEY WEST, Fla. — Revelers dressed as "ghostbusters," M&Ms and even as a 100-pound coral reef Saturday at the Halloween Fantasy Fest Parade, billed as this island city's answer to Mardi Gras.

As many as 15,000 people crowded into town, with costumes ranging from the more pedestrian Santas, monsters, babies and clowns to a group of people who dressed as a flock of M&M candies, a man who squeezed into a Playboy bunny outfit and a "typical referee."

"I just thought it'd be fun," said Calvin Mitchell, 51, of Tampa, who sported a black-and-white shirt, a whistle, dark glasses and a blind man's cane. "I happen to be an eye surgeon if that makes any difference."

Some folks wore "ghostbuster" garb fashioned after the summer's hit movie. "Ghostbusters" was also the theme of the first of about 40 units to make the 1-mile trek down the Old Town section of the city.

The winner of this year's fantasy fest costume competition — Don Moore of Fort Lauderdale — dressed as a giant coral reef.

The parade was the highlight of a four-day celebration, marked by street dances, concerts, costume contests and vendors hawking their wares.

The fete was started by local businesses in 1979 as a way to boost the sagging off-season tourist economy, and was originally "a sort of adult Halloween party," said Perri Halevy, co-director of this year's celebration.

Polish captain allegedly confessed to priest's murder, minister says

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A captain in the Interior Ministry has said he killed a pro-Solidarity priest who was kidnapped Oct. 19, but his confession has not been confirmed, the interior minister told the nation on Saturday.

The captain and two lieutenants in the ministry have been charged in the abduction of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, said Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak.

He said the three accused men gave conflicting statements, that no one has been charged with any killing in the case and the Roman Catholic priest's whereabouts were still unknown.

Police stepped up patrols in Warsaw, apparently to discourage any street demonstrations. Popieluszko's sermons backing the now-outlawed Solidarity trade union drew as many as 10,000 people to his Warsaw church.

Poland's official PAP news agency said that the Warsaw provincial defense committee met during the day and "took necessary actions to prevent possible threats." It did not elaborate.

Gen. Kiszczak, who oversees all police units, said on nationwide television and radio that he had no immediate evidence to back up the assertion that Popieluszko had been murdered.

"The organizer of the kidnap claims for his part that he himself killed the kidnapped. The area where, according to him, the crime occurred, has also been thoroughly combed. No traces have been found," the general said.

He added that "the kidnap was organized by Capt. Grzegorz Piotrowski."

The interior minister, a close adviser to Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the leader of the Communist regime, said, "One of the justified hypotheses of the inestigation assumes that the kidnapped is dead."

Popieluszko's lawyer, Edward Wende, said in a telephone interview that there can be "only one conclusion" from Kiszczak's remarks.

"I'm sure the priest is dead, and I think it's a horrible thing," he said. "The minister did admit that one of them confessed he had killed. He would have to be insane to confess to murder if he didn't commit it, and I don't think he's insane."

Cardinal Jozef Glemp

Kiszczak said in his address, "Unfortunately, I am not in a position to give information or even sufficient assumptions as for the fate of the kidnapped."

The interior minister said one of the captain's accomplices testified that Popieluszko was left alive on the outskirts of the northern city of Torun, where he was kidnapped by men in another car who stopped his automobile. "However, a lengthy search in that area has not produced any effect," he said.

Kiszczak wore his uniform as he spoke to the nation.

He identified the three arrested Interior Ministry officials as Capt. Piotrowski, head of a ministry department, and two subordinates, Lt. Waldemar Chmielewski, and Lt. Leszek Pekala.

He added the three face possible death sentences.

Popieluszko, 37, became one of the church's most outspoken defenders of the Solidarity federation, the first independent trade union in the Soviet bloc. It was chartered by the government during strikes in August 1980, and suspended with the imposition of martial law in December 1981 and later outlawed.

Kiszczak said authorities would "spare no effort so that the fate of Father Jerzy Popieluszko can be definitively established and the entire hideous affair explained to the very end.

"In Poland, nobody can perish without a trace. Our country is not and will not be a jungle of lawlessness."

Popieluszko's driver, said to be the only witness to the kidnapping, was taken to a police headquarters on Saturday to identify the three suspects, said Janusz Onyszkiewicz, Solidarity's former national spokesman.

The driver, Waldemar Chrostowski, was shown several people and "identified one of them as being one of those present at the abduction," he said. "He recognized two others by the way they walked, but not by their faces."

The driver has been staying at the rectory of Popieluszko's church, St. Stanislaw Kostka, guarded by volunteer workers from Warsaw factories, since his release from protective police custody early last week.

Kiszczak said others also could be charged in the abduction, but he did not identify them.

The interior minister also hinted that the kidnapping was a political attack aimed against the state security organs. "The deliberate actions of the perpertrators are striking," he said. "They were designed to possibly quickly direct the investigation to a supposition that the kidnappers were functionaries of the Interior Ministry."

Poland's Catholic primate, Cardinal Jozef Glemp, ordered a special Mass to be said at all Warsaw churches on Sunday evening "in intention of the return of the kidnapped priest."

Several former Solidarity activists, who described themselves as Popieluszko's friends, have worked in the rectory of St. Stanislaw church to collect and disseminate information on social reaction to the kidnapping.

Thousands of protesters 'die-in' at shipyard

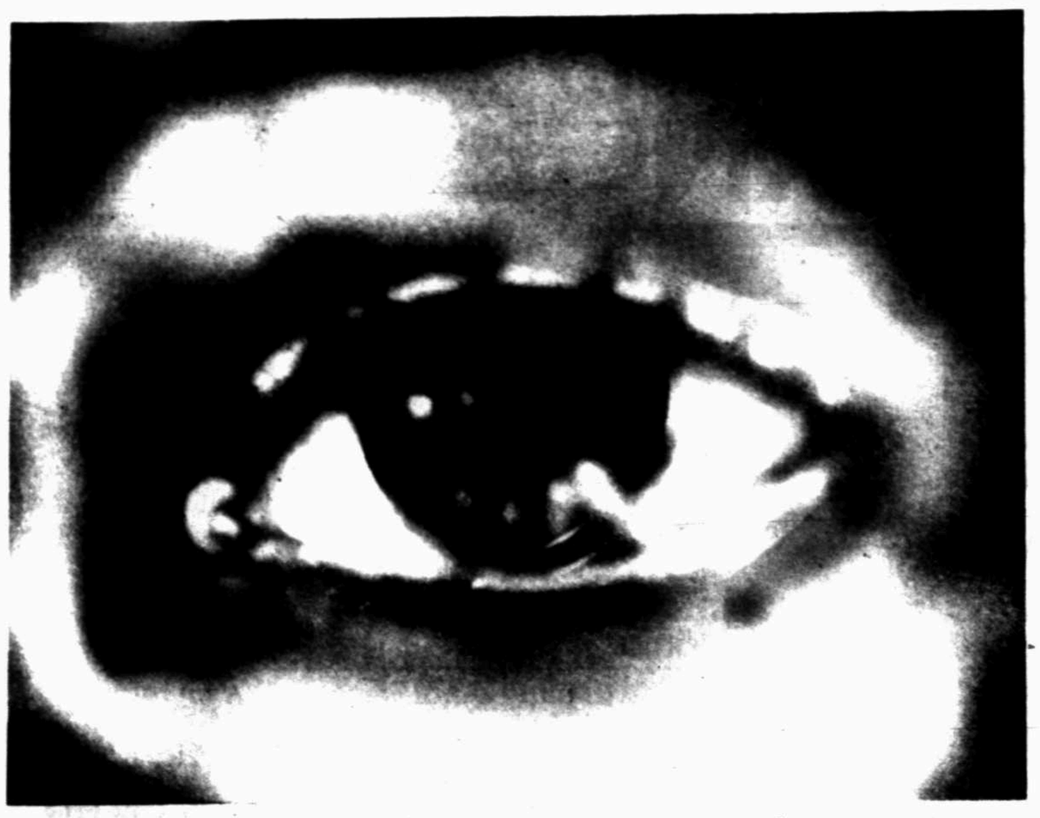

BARROW-IN-FURNESS, England (AP) — Tens of thousands of anti-nuclear protestors staged a "die-in" Saturday, forming a human chain around the vast shipyard where Britain's new Trident missile submarine fleet is to be built.

The demonstrators, waving flags and banners, converged on this one-company coastal town in northwest England that has been a key construction yard for military shipping since the turn of the century.

Four nuclear-powered submarines, each capable of carrying up to 16 U.S.-built Trident missiles, are to be constructed here between 1986 and the early 1990s, replacing Britain's aging fleet of four Polaris nuclear missile-carrying submarines. Each Trident missile will be equipped with 14 nuclear warheads.

Israel's invasion of Lebanon tarnishes nation's image

EDITOR'S NOTE — Of all the wars Israel has fought, none has left it so torn as the one that began June 6, 1982, with the invasion of Lebanon. It has spawned an anti-war movement, afflicted many of the households that provide the nation's soldiers and brought conflicting opinions about its result. Has it become Israel's Vietnam?

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel — The conflict in Lebanon has been a divisive and bitter experience for Israel.

Nearly 600 soldiers have been killed and 3,500 wounded, almost as many as in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Hundreds of millions of dollars have been consumed, a peace treaty torn up and Israel's image tarnished.

In a nation of 4 million where almost everyone serves at one time or another in the army, the Lebanon experience touched most households. It resulted in a protest movement that rent the national consensus in the midst of a war for the first time.

In many ways, it was Israel's Vietnam.

"Internally, the war has prompted sober reflections in Israel. It created questions about the limitations of power to solve political disputes," said Simcha Dinitz, former Israeli ambassador to Washington and a leading member of Prime Minister Shimon Peres' Labor Party. "We did not succeed in forcing peace."

Called "Operation Peace for Galilee," the thrust into Lebanon was launched June 6, 1982, with the stated aim of uprooting the Palestine Liberation Organization from southern Lebanon and restoring normal life in Israel's border towns and settlements that had been repeatedly shelled by guerrilla rockets and artillery.

In the end, it went far beyond that announced goal.

"WE WENT into Lebanon hoping that we would not have to carry out another operation in defense of our northern border. Nobody can blame us for harboring that hope," said Moshe Arens, who served as Israeli ambassador to the United States during the invasion and later as defense minister.

The outstanding accomplishment of the operation, he said, was that for two years "not a man, woman or child has been hurt in northern Israel. Factories are open, people can shop and move freely and everybody is living above ground instead of in bomb shelters."

Israeli forces remain today — still taking casualties — in southern Lebanon and along the border, generally in positions that their leaders had originally set out with the invasion.

But Menachem Begin, prime minister at the time, and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, who has since left office, had bigger dreams. With their columns moving to Beirut itself, they sought to change the political map of Lebanon, eliminate Syrian influence and establish a stable, Western-oriented neighbor bound by a peace treaty to Israel.

SOME ISRAELI analysts say the government leaders envisioned that destruction of the PLO would drive Palestinians to seek a homeland in Jordan and leave the way open for Israel to settle the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, both areas that were captured in the 1967 war.

Interviewed in his office in Jerusalem, Arens said the prospect for a solution to the Arab-Israeli problem was still far off. But he said there had been a "significant improvement" in relations with the Palestinians living in the West Bank and Gaza as a result of the Lebanon war which weakened the PLO.

"There is a more positive attitude on the part of the population...and far less suppport for terrorism than in the past," said Arens, a member of the current Labor-Likud Bloc coalition Cabinet.

Mark Heller, a Middle East analyst at Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies, said in an interview that the PLO's crushing defeat and internal divisions were of little consequence to Israel politically.

"One of the pre-war assumptions was that all that stood between Israel and a political settlement with the Palestinians was the PLO. I think it was the greatest delusion of them all...I don't think the damaging of the PLO has eliminated the Palestinian factor to the point where they can be completely bypassed," Heller said.

THE WAR also aggravated a growing gap in society between the right and the left. Anti-war groups, such as Peace Now, staged rallies, marches and sit-ins, sometimes clashing with counter-demonstrators who supported government policy. An unprecedented 137 Israelis refused to serve in Lebanon and went to jail.

"The Lebanon war produced a breakdown in the national consensus," said Ze'ev Sternhal, a political science professor at Hebrew University. "For the first time, there was a very deep revolt in public opinion that exploded in the middle of a war."

Sternhal sees the vigorous protests as a sign of maturing public opinion and a more sophisticated press than existed in Israel a generation ago, when the society had an unlimited faith in its leaders and "faith in the fact they knew better than you did."

"I think the most important lesson of the war was learning what can and cannot be done by force," said Sternhal. "I think Israel will be much more careful in using military power in the future."

Sternhal and other Israeli analysts said the war in Lebanon exposed a lack of effective checks and balances in the political structure that allowed Sharon and Begin to conduct the war without the Cabinet or Parliament having full advance knowledge.

U.S. spending more than $3 million per day on emergency food aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has been spending an average of more than $3 million a day over the past few weeks on emergency food aid to Africa in what appears to be a mostly losing battle to help the more than 100 million people on that continent suffering from a severe famine.

Ethiopia seems to be the hardest-hit nation, with about 6 million people facing possible starvation, but the problem plagues about two dozen other countries in the sub-Saharan area as well.

As the conditions have worsened, the Reagan administration has responded with substantial increases in emergency food aid. The assistance in that category was slightly more than $100 million in the 1983 fiscal year and jumped to $172 million last year.

Although fiscal 1985 is just four weeks old, $92 million already has been approved by the Agency for International Development for emergency food aid, a figure that officials say has been going up almost daily.

The emergency aid supplements other U.S. food programs, which totaled about $437 million in fiscal 1983 and 1984 combined.

Despite the sizable increases in emergency aid, some private advocacy groups, including the Washington Office on Africa, complain that the administration's effort has been inadequate.

Martin M. McLaughlin of the Washington-based Inter-Faith Action for Economic Justice agreed. He called the administration's response "slow, skeptical and eventually not enough."

Food aid sometimes is held up by obstacles built into the American political system. For example, $150 million in supplemental aid for Africa was stalled for weeks earlier this year because it was tied to a controversial proposal for military aid for Central America.

But the development agency's administrator, M. Peter McPherson told reporters last week that the U.S. response in recent weeks "is, frankly, enormous."

McPherson said the United States has committed $43 million for Ethiopia alone since Oct. 1, a figure he said was of "historical proportions."

He said the lack of rain, particularly in northern Ethiopia, has been compounded by numerous other problems.

A Bedouin in drought- and famine-stricken Mauritania, on Africa's west coast, stops at an oasis to fill an innertube with fresh water, which he will take to his family.

AP Laserphoto

A continuing civil war in that region has made truck deliveries unsafe and the mountainous terrain poses an additional hazard, he said. Inadequate port facilities hamper the assistance effort and the 300 trucks the Ethiopian government has at its disposal are about half of what is required, McPherson said.

The official said another "tremendous problem" has been the attitude of Ethiopia's government. He suggested that authorities misplaced their priorities by spending "a couple of hundred million dollars" last month celebrating the 10th anniversary of Marxist rule while paying inadequate attention to the nation's food needs.

At one point recently, he said, a cement delivery from the Soviet Union was given precedence at an Ethiopian port over a food shipment.

The administration normally has attempted to minimize the ideological aspects of Ethiopia's food problems, contending that the issue should be above politics. But McPherson said the Soviet Union, Ethiopia's principal ally, provided only about $3 million in rice shipments to that country over the past year. And, he said, rice generally is not part of the Ethiopian diet.

"It almost seems like callous indifference to be providing billions of dollars in military assistance...and (almost) nothing for practical purposes in terms of food when it is clear that 6 million people are at risk," he said.

An Ethiopian embassy official, Tamese Eshete, replied Friday that, although he did not have the exact figure, it was an "absurdity" for McPherson to suggest that Ethiopia spent $200 million on the anniversary celebration.

He added that Ethiopia is giving the famine problem "top priority."

McPherson made it clear that Africa's food problems are not limited to friends of the Soviet Union. Included among the African countries with food shortages, the most serious, besides Ethiopia, he said, are Kenya, Niger and the Sudan — all with close ties to the United States.

He also listed Mozambique, once one of Moscow's best friends on the continent and where, according to published reports, there were 100,000 famine-related deaths in 1983.

Lebanon's army will attack ships in 'illegal ports'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's government decided Saturday to use its armed forces to attack ships trying to dock or unload at militia-controlled "illegal ports" that cut into official revenues, state radio reported.

The threat against shipping appeared to be a warning to militias to turn over the ports quickly and without resistance when told to.

Any military action against shippers is not expected to be taken until foreign government and international shipping firms had been notified of the decision, sometime next month.

Saturday's action was taken at a six-hour Cabinet session chaired by President Amin Gemayel. It was the latest in a series of emergency measures aimed at braking a sharp fall in the Lebanese pound, brought on by uncertain security conditions and losses in government customs revenues.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami, whose "national coalition" Cabinet has been unable to enforce a public security plan outside Beirut, warned that "those attacking the financial security of the state will be brought to justice."

The Cabinet approved a military plan to take over all ports being run by rival Moslem and Christian militias north and south of Beirut, and to re-establish government control over Beirut's airport and the mid-city telecommunications center, according to state and private radio broadcasts.

The Cabinet, made up of Lebanon's main warlords, ordered the army command to prepare the necessary forces for the takeover and set Nov. 4 as the deadline for carrying out the plan, the radio reports said.

The Cabinet empowered the Lebanese air force, navy and army to attack any ship that violated its order, the broadcasts added.

The Lebanon military has about a half-dozen aging Hawker Hunter jet fighters, one large, 25-year-old patrol boat, several smaller coastal patrol craft, and tanks, howitzers and other artillery that could be fired from shore.

Most ships have been using militia-run harbors for security reasons since the 1975 outbreak of the civil war. That practice has stripped the state treasury of hundreds of millions of dollars in taxes and customs duties.

The government said Saturday that official warnings would be served on foreign governments and shipping firms that Lebanese forces would strike at any ship violating the government resolution limiting all imports to the nation's "legitimate ports."

In a statement broadcast on state-run Beirut Radio, Karami said the Cabinet had agreed to steps for "confronting smuggling," but he gave no details. He said a special investigator would be named to enforce the Cabinet's decisions.

He also listed a half-dozen other steps intended to help improve government revenue collection, thus strengthening its currency.

Marcos says he's not 'pet dog' of America

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos lashed out Saturday at what he regarded as U.S. pressure on his government, saying he was not a "pet dog" and that he could stay in power without American assistance.

Marcos said he was "shocked" when President Reagan, replying to a question during his Oct. 21 debate with Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale, said communists would take over the Philippines if the United States were to stop its military and economic aid to the country.

"The answer...should have been there is no indication that the Marcos government can be overthrown by either the bullet or the ballot," Marcos said in a televised speech to members of the 1.4 million-strong Philippine Army Reserve.

"May we inform our friends, the Americans, that we are not doing things here in order to satisfy the State Department or the Americans but in order to meet the requirements of the law provided for in our constitution," Marcos said.

He said the Philippines was thankful to have "such a strong and very generous partner" as the United States, "but we certainly don't want to appear before our Asian brothers as if we were the pet dog of any Western ally."

Marcos was reacting to a U.S. State Department comment that praised him for sending the Benigno Aquino assassination case to a civilian court for trial. Marcos took that action last week after a fact-finding board's majority report said the opposition leader was not killed by a communist agent as the government said, but by a soldier in a military conspiracy involving the armed forces chief, Gen. Fabian C. Ver.

The State Department had earlier expressed concern that Marcos might act only on the dissenting report of board chairwoman Corazon Agrava, who exonerated Ver. The majority report named Ver at the top of a list of 25 military men and one civilian it said were indictable for Aquino's "premeditated killing" in August, 1983.

In his speech, Marcos also lashed out at his local critics for questioning the impartiality of a nine-judge court he has designated to try Ver. Opposition leaders and various business, civic, church and lawyers groups are calling for the creation of a "people's court" to try Ver and the others.

Marcos described as "publicized hysterics" the opposition to Ver's trial by an existing court whose members he personally chose. The chief justice of the court has said that there should be no fear of partiality because the judges, although named by Marcos, can be removed only by impeachment, as in the U.S. federal court system.

"It is a sad note, however, that the orderly working of our judicial process will still be disturbed by the partisan activities of those who would utilize this case for their own selfish political purposes...to undermine the government," Marcos said.

Scientists probe 2,500-year-old murder

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — The victim: male, about 25 years old, manicured fingernails, neatly trimmed hair, mustache and beard, an aristocrat perhaps. The weapon: a string, apparently twisted tourniquet-fashion with a stick at the back of the neck.

Approximate time of death: 2,500 years ago.

The perpetrators are long gone, but scientists are trying to find out all they can about the victim — Wilmslow Man, alias Bogman, alias Pete Marsh, the best-preserved prehistoric body ever found in Britain.

The investigation is expected to take about two years and could fill some of the many gaps in the scientific story of Iron Age man in Britain, providing new evidence of what he ate, how he looked and how, sometimes, he died.

Wilmslow Man was found in parts over the past year in an ancient peat bog near Wilmslow, a town in northwest England about 10 miles south of Manchester. He had been sliced in half by an excavating machine, and was found lying, face-down in a fetal crouch. He was naked except for an armband made of animal skin, the significance of which is unknown.

Preliminary radio carbon-dating puts his death at about 550 B.C.

Through the centuries, Wilmslow Man lay encased in peat, partly decayed plant matter found in marshes and used as a garden fertilizer and fuel. Peat gives off a preservative acid, absorbs moisture and blocks out oxygen.

Although his face is crushed against his shoulder, Wilmslow Man's facial features are distinct and much of his skin and hair is still intact. His hair is a mousy color and his mustache, sideburns and beard have a reddish tinge, although experts say that could be the result of staining by the peat.

AP Laserphoto

Ian Stead, right, Deputy Keeper of Prehistoric and Roman British Antiquities at the British Museum, works with two assistants earlier this month on the remains of a man which are estimated to be 2,500 years old. The prehistoric corpse, nicknamed Wilmslow Man, was found in August in a peat bog near Wilmslow, England.

Scientists estimate his height at 5-foot-6 and his age at between 20 and 30.

"Providing he was appropriately dressed, he could walk down the street today and people wouldn't turn a hair," said Dr. Ian Stead, the archaeologist in charge of the project.

Wilmslow Man was probably a Celt and, judging from his finely cut fingernails, a member of the ruling or priestly class, Stead said. "He certainly wasn't a working man."

The prehistoric corpse was first put on public view at the British Museum on Oct. 4. At the time, newspapers nicknamed him Bogman and Pete Marsh, but Stead said it was decided Wilmslow Man was more appropriate because it designated the discovery site.

Since then, Stead, an authority on Iron Age metalwork, and other scientists have been putting Wilmslow Man through a series of tests, using such sophisticated equipment as a nuclear magnetic resonance scanner to take computerized images of his insides.

Stead discussed the project during a recent interview at his tiny, cluttered office in the British Museum, where he is deputy keeper of the Department of Prehistoric and Romano-British Antiquities.

He said tests show that the only internal organs Wilmslow Man has left are his stomach, esophagus and small intestine, which apparently were preserved by hydrocholoric acid of the stomach. The contents of the stomach were removed by a surgeon and will be analyzed over the next six months.

Stead said scientists hope to discover what Wilmslow Man ate for his final meal. "We already know that he had two different types of worms," he said.

Among the dozens of scientists involved in the project are botanists, microbiologists, X-ray specialists and Scotland Yard forensic experts, Stead said.

"It's very much police work," he said, thumbing through a group of black-and-white photographs of Wilmslow Man taken from various angles. "We want to find out as much as we can."

In fact, the police have been involved from the start.

In May 1983, workmen found what turned out to be a human head at the 150-acre Wilmslow bog.

"Police at the time were investigating a murder," Stead said. "They were told a man murdered his wife 20 years ago, chopped up her up and buried her in the back garden, which backs onto the peat bog. They confronted him with the head and he confessed: 'That's my wife; I did it.'"

Still unsatisfied, police sent the head to Oxford University, where carbon-dating showed it was not that of the man's wife but of someone — not Wilmslow Man — who had lived around 210 A.D., Stead said.

The husband is still in jail, having been convicted on the basis of his confession.

An Analysis

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — One week before the elections the Sandinistas promised when they came to power five years ago, the leftist government finds itself with little real oppposition and little chance of gaining the legitimacy it sought from the contest.

Lined up against the avowedly Marxist Sandinistas are only a few small parties of the left or ones that have cooperated with them to some extent.

Most moderates have withdrawn from the race.

The Sandinistas early this year set Nov. 4 as the election date and are going ahead with the contest to elect a president, vice president and a 90-member national constitutional assembly.

The election has drawn criticism from inside and outside this Central American country, with four recognized parties abstaining and two others considering withdrawal, complaining there are restrictions on their campaigns.

Despite the criticism and lack of centrist opposition, the Sandinistas vowed to hold the election on schedule even if "we have to go alone" to the polls.

That was the phrase used by Daniel Ortega, the chief of the Sandinista junta and its presidential candidate, after learning on Oct. 22 that the Liberal Independent Party had decided to withdraw from the election.

The party, headed by Virgilio Godoy, said it was quitting the contest for lack of "adequate conditions" and because the election would "not resolve the problem of peace" for Nicaragua.

Its decision prompted two other parties — the Democratic Conservatives and the Popular Social Christians — to reconsider their participation.

Criticism of the electoral process began even before the Sandinistas set the November election date last February.

It reached a crescendo when the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate, reckoned as the main opposition party, declined to officially register its candidates, claiming "a lack of guarantees for a free election." Its presidential candidate would have been Arturo Cruz.

The coalition embraced three recognized political parties, a fourth without official recognition and two labor unions.

The four parties are the Social Christian Party, founded in 1959; the Liberal Constitutionalist Party, a small, conservative group founded in 1967; the centrist Social Democratic Party, formed in 1980 with many ties to Social Democrats elsewhere in Latin America and Europe, and the Conservative Party of Nicaragua, which is not officially recognized.

The two unions are the Nicaraguan Workers Central and the United Workers Confederation.

The coalition demanded that the Sandinistas give it free access to the press and to election registration books, permit free campaigning, and remove voting boxes from military bases "so soldiers can vote without pressure."

Although the government did not lift press censorship imposed by a national emergency decree issued in March 1983, it said it would permit newspapers and broadcast stations to carry criticism of the Sandinista party and would continue to censor only information pertaining to the war against U.S.-backed rebels fighting in the mountains of northern and southern Nicaragua.

With that assurance, nine opposition parties indicated they would officially inscribe candidates for the election, including the three in the coalition headed by Cruz.

But as the Aug. 4 deadline for registration came and went, Cruz balked at formally listing his candidacy. He is a respected economist and a member of the first Sandinista-headed junta installed after the July 1979 ouster of the late Anastasio Somoza, the rightist, pro-American strongman.

United States 'outraged' by murder of embassy worker

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The U.S. Embassy said Saturday it was "grieved and outraged" by the murder of a 62-year-old Salvadoran, Raul Melendez Aquino, who worked as a senior guard supervisor at the embassy.

Melendez was killed Friday while walking to work when a man claiming to be a member of a lefitist guerrilla group jumped from a car and shot him in the back and head. It was the second time this year a U.S. Embassy employee was shot to death while going to work.

"The embassy has constantly condemned terrorist acts of all kinds. In the light of the murder of Mr. Melendez, we repeat that condemnation in the strongest of terms," said a statement issued by the embassy.

Embassy spokesman Donald Hamilton said Friday the gunman shouted he was with the Popular Liberation Forces, one of the largest groups in the guerrilla coalition waging a five-year-old civil war against the U.S.-backed government.

However, in Saturday broadcasts by the rebels' clandestine radion station there was no claim of responsibility for the murder.

In April, Joaquin Alfredo Zapata Romero, 59, chief of Salvadoran security personnel at the embassy, was killed by gunmen who drove up alongside his car at a traffic light and fired 10 bullets into his body.

WORLD in brief

Scientists warn villagers of possible eruption

LEGASPI, Philippines (AP) — Government scientists alerted villagers Saturday to be ready to evacuate the area around Bulusan volcano, which is showing signs of erupting after a year-long slumber.

The Philippine Institute of Volcanology said seismographs recorded 53 tremors Saturday from the 5,144-foot volcano, 250 miles southeast of Manila.

There was a mild eruption last year from Bulusan, which has had about 30 major eruptions since 1852. None is known to have caused casualties.

Bulusan is 50 miles south of Mount Mayon volcano, which has been erupting since Sept. 9. Mayon appeared to be gradually returning to normal, with no significant activity observed for several weeks. But the institute said it was recommending that more than 50,000 refugees in evacuation centers not return home on the slopes of 8,124-foot Mayon because of danger from mudflows.

Angolans kill 77 guerrillas

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Government forces in Angola killed 77 guerrillas and captured two others in six days of fighting this month, the official Angolan news agency, Angop, reported Saturday.

Angop said the rebels were killed in an anti-guerrilla offensive in the central provinces of Benguela, Bie and Huambo from Oct. 2-7. It said large stores of arms and ammunition were seized and 47 captured civilians were freed.

The guerrilla organization UNITA, the initials standing for National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, has been fighting to bring down the Marxist Angolan government since Angola's independence from Portugal in 1975.

China ready for teahouses

PEKING (AP) — It's high time that China's teahouse tradition was revived, the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily said Saturday.

Teahouses with wooden tables and chairs where people could talk or play board games were once a fixture in Chinese cities. There were once 300 teahouses in the city of Hangzhou.

Their closure has been blamed on the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, in which leftist radicals attacked old customs and fomented class struggle.But now teahouses are reappearing.

"Like a cafe in Western countries, China's teahouse is a place for people to rest, meet or while away the time," the People's Daily said."Now it is high time to restore the teahouse business since the life of the masses has improved. It is advisable that in some teahouses, music or folk ballads should be organized to entertain drinkers, and sell more tea."

Reagan sitting on enormous lead; Democrats insist it's not over yet

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is sitting on an enormous lead over Walter Mondale slightly more than a week before Election Day 1984, a nationwide Associated Press survey says, but Democrats are reminding voters "It ain't over until nt's over."

The momentum of the campaign did shift to Mondale in the past two weeks, observers say, but the impact of the second debate with Reagan a week ago appears to have slowed, if not, stopped that motion.

These turns of events have left Reagan ahead in 40 states with 426 electoral votes, the AP survey found, far more than 270 needed to win. Mondale leads for only 13 electoral votes, with the rest of the states in the toss-up column.

"I think there is movement toward Mondale, but obviously, it ain't enough," said New Hampshire Democratic chairman George Bruno.

"We benefitted from the surge between the first and second debates and rallied most of the Democrats, but there is no movement now," said Colorado party chairman Floyd Ciruli.

"The first debate made Mondale respectable. He's no longer a joke. He's now just a chuckle instead of a guffaw," said University of Virginia professor Larry Sabato. "The second debate restored a bit of Reagan's luster but it didn't basically change the dynamics of the campaign."

Kansas Democratic party chief Pat Lehman is a bit more hopeful: "It ain't over until its over, as they say. I still think there is a chance Walter Mondale can get his message through all that packaging around Reagan."

But Mondale's task is a daunting one, despite a slight movement in his direction.

Reagan currently enjoys a big cushion in putting together the margin needed to win a second term. He draws 170 electoral votes from states that are solidly in the GOP's corner. The Republican incumbent gets 256 more from states where he is leading, but by smaller margins.

President Ronald Reagan claps and smiles while speaking to Jewish leaders at Temple Hillel in Valley Stream, N.Y., Friday. In his speech, Reagan reiterated his support for separation of church and state and his opposition to intolerance.

AP Laserphoto

Mondale is ahead only in his home state of Minnesota, with 10 electoral votes, and in the District of Columbia, which awards only three of the 538 electoral votes at stake on Nov. 6.

The race in nine states — Hawaii, Iowa, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island, West Virginia and Wisconsin — is too close to call, experts in those states say. They share 99 electoral votes.

AP correspondents in all 50 states assessed available poll data and talked with political experts to evaluate the campaign. The situation state-by-state is significant since presidents are not elected by the total nationwide vote, but in separate state elections whose results determine the winner in the Electoral College.

Two weeks ago, the AP survey showed Reagan was leading in 43 states with 450 electoral votes, while Mondale was leading only in the District of Columbia.

The major changes from the AP survey two weeks ago were these: Minnesota shifted from Reagan's column to Mondale's, and Iowa and West Virginia moved from Reagan's camp into the toss-up category.

Commenting on Mondale's new lead in his home state, former Minnesota GOP chairman Dave Krogseng said, "I find it incredibly difficult to believe that he's going to lose this state."

In the South and in the Mountain states, Reagan is maintaining large margins over his Democratic opponent.

"If there's been any movement in the last couple of weeks, it's that people are stronger for Reagan," said James Lopach from the University of Montana.

In Florida, a poll released this week gave Reagan the backing of 61 percent and Mondale only 32 percent, virtually identical to the results a month before. The survey conducted after the Kansas City debate was based on telephone interviews with 749 voters.

Indians take BIA to court over brothel

MOAPA, Nev. (AP) — Reservation bingo can't compete with casinos just 25 miles away, so the Moapa band of Paiute Indians came up with a different idea — a brothel — as their answer to stifling poverty, 83 percent unemployment and government funding cuts.

"It's not that we really want a brothel here, but we do need things to help us out," said tribal chairwoman Olivia Tom. "Government aid has really been cut down, and it has hurt us badly. We need something here to make money."

The entrepreneurial spirit of the 350-member tribe, located near Las Vegas, did not impress the Interior Department, however, which rejected the proposal as "not the kind of economic development envisioned by federal policy."

The denial sparked a legal battle, and earlier this month attorneys for both sides argued their cases before the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco, which has yet to deliver a ruling.

Tribal leaders see a bordello, legal in most of Nevada, as a means of achieving self-sufficiency. They angrily accuse the Interior Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs of blocking the only realistic plan to improve life on the 72,000-acre desert reservation.

"We're sitting here dying, and the BIA won't give us any options," complained tribe business manager Jim Toner.

The main industry on the reservation, located just east of Las Vegas, is bagging manure from a nearby dairy plant for fertilizer. A tribal store and a greenhouse are the only other businesses.

Toner said that in the past three years, federal funding to the Paiute band has dropped from more than $200,000 to less than $100,000 a year and the tribe is $750,000 in debt. The tribal administration came close to filing for bankruptcy earlier this year.

Serious crimes down again, FBI reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of serious crimes reported to the police during the first half of this year was 5 percent below the figure for the same six months of 1983, the FBI said Saturday.

Attorney General William French Smith called the half-year drop "another unprecedented development," because it followed the first two consecutive year-long declines since 1980.

During all of 1983, serious reported crime dropped by 7 percent from the year before, and in 1982 reported crime was 3.3 percent below the 1981 figure. During 1981, there was no statistically significant change from the previous year.

During the first half of 1984, overall violent crimes declined 2 percent while the total of the vastly more prevalent property crimes was down by 5 percent, the FBI said.

However, there are increases for four specific crimes. Rape increased 6 percent, aggravated assault 1 percent, motor vehicle theft 1 percent and arson, for which there were only incomplete figures, 2 percent.

Among violent crimes, murder declined 5 percent and robbery, 7 percent. In property crime, burglary was down 8 percent and larceny-theft declined 5 percent.

The overall decline during the first half of the year came in all regions of the nation, in cities of all sizes, suburbs and rural areas, the FBI said.

During this political season, President Reagan and Smith have claimed credit for the decline in crime.

In a statement accompanying the FBI report, the attorney general said, "This administration has made crime control a top national priority...Reflecting a new resolve on the part of the American people, law enforcement at the federal, state and local levels is achieving unprecedented success."

Most academic experts have attributed the decline in crime to the movement of the post-World War II baby-boom generation past the crime-prone ages of 18 to 25. The decline has shown up in both the FBI reports and in the Justice Department's national surveys, which are based on hundreds of thousands of interviews each year and are considered more accurate.

While Smith has acknowledged a role for demographic explanations, he and other administration officials prefer to stress increases in the number of prison inmates to record levels, citizen watch programs and a generally tougher stance toward crime.

The academic experts do not deny that some of these developments may have helped reduce crime, but they argue these changes have been far too small and too limited in area to significantly affect the large national crime totals.

The annual number of crimes reported to the police has exceeded 12 million for many years; the department's interview surveys put the total of reported and unreported crimes at well over 30 million a year.

Hostage crisis began on sleepy Sunday

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

It was a sleepy Sunday, half filled with the hum of American life.

In Detroit, three people died in a skirmish between rival motorcycle gangs. Jerry Brown challenged Democratic presidential candidates to debate.

Snow fell on the Rockies; it rained in Florida.

And halfway around the world, on that Sunday five years ago, the first chapter of a 444-day national nightmare began at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Hundreds of Iranians, angered that the hated Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was out of their reach and sheltered in a New York hospital, rushed past the embassy's iron fence and Marine tear gas to seize Americans caught by fate on the 27-acre compound.

The American flag was burned by gleeful militants, their American captives were displayed for the cameras. The image of bound and blindfolded Americans was seared into the national psyche in ways that social historians say can still be felt today.

"There was a humiliation factor for this country — a feeling that we won't take it any longer," said M. Joachim Maitre, a professor at Boston University's Center for International Relations. "It has reinforced a feeling that America must be strong and reawakened the patriotic spirit."

Iranian students hold an unidentified hostage with his hands tied and a blindfold in place, on Nov. 8, 1979, at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, Iran.

THERE HAD been indications of trouble. The embassy was overrun nine months earlier by militants who were pursuaded to leave. Weeks before the Nov. 4 takeover, Bruce Laingen, the embassy's charge d'affaires, sent a cable predicting another takeover if the shah were allowed to remain in the United States for treatment of cancer that would eventually kill him.

But the signs were ignored. Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the aging Islam holy man who led the revolution against the shah, urged followers to take action. Americans soon learned of the wrath alive on the streets of the ancient Persian capital for "the great Satan, America."

The militants said they would keep their hostages until the shah was returned. President Jimmy Carter refused. The result was a stalemate that was to last one year, two months and 19 days.

As the first few days of captivity grew into weeks, anger flared across this country.

When 900 Iranians marched against the shah in Washington, bystanders flung insults and rocks. "Get the hell out of America," shouted counter-demonstrators. Angry Americans scuffled with Iranian protesters in Los Angeles, Columbus, Ohio, and Springfield, Mass.

LONGSHOREMEN refused to load goods bound for Iran. Los Angeles officials lit the torch to be used in the 1984 Olympics as a show of solidarity with the hostages.

"We have been almost like a family again," Vice President Walter Mondale told a flag-waving crowd in Seattle.

But attempts at negotiations failed. Carter froze $8 billion of Iranian assets in U.S. banks. The flow of Iranian oil into this country trickled to a stop.

Hopes were raised Nov. 19, when the militants sent five women and eight blacks home, leaving 53 hostages behind. On Dec. 10 the militants allowed Marine Cpl. William Gallegos to be interviewed in exchange for the telecast of a burst of rhetoric from a female militant.

Five days later, the shah flew to a resort island in Panama. The militants demanded the U.S. "puppet" return him to Iran. Hope soon faded.

The captives spent the first of two Christmas holidays in captivity as tons of packages and cards from America jammed the Iranian postal system.

The national gloom lifted briefly in late January when six American embassy workers who had escaped the initial takeover escaped Iran using passports supplied by the Canadian officials who had shielded them.

It was the last good news for a long time.

THE CRISIS became a fixture on U.S. television screens. The nation learned to pronounce the names of Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh and President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr. Their faces appeared on the nightly broadcasts, along with the bearded glowering continence of Khomeini.

The situation seemed endless. Khomeini ignored a U.N. commission established to settle the crisis. He refused a plan for the militants to turn over the captives to the government. The new Iranian parliament procrastinated.

A spring and summer of pessimism passed. In July, hostage Richard Queen was released for treatment of multiple sclerosis. The number of hostages would remain at 52.

Later that month the shah died in Egypt. The death had no effect on the deadlock.

By now the crisis was a dull ache in the United States' consciousness. Every evening CBS anchorman Walter Cronkite reminded viewers of the national dilemma, intoning the number of days the hostages had been imprisoned. Each night the latest development was dissected on news specials.

So great was the interest that late night news shows were created to report on the crisis. ABC's "Nightline" was popular enough to last well past the return of the Americans.

BUT IT was the early risers who first heard the bad news on April 25, 1980. The White House, in a brief, early morning announcement, told the nation that an attempt to rescue the hostages had ended in a debacle.

Mechanical failure prevented three helicopters from reaching Desert One, a lonely rendezvous in the Iranian desert. Officials scrubbed the mission, but not before tragedy struck. One of the surviving helicopters collided with a C-130 transport plane on the dark desert floor, killing eight men.

A nation already chagrined by the daily reminder of its inability to protect its citizens endured the sight of Iranian militia picking at the charred bodies of U.S. servicemen. The militants holding the hostages announced they had been moved to other locations.

The failed mission brought recriminations over an inept military and an ill-conceived policy. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance resigned in protest. The national frustration grew.

But as the months ground on, the shame and frustration turned to pride and patriotism. Flag makers reported a booming business in U.S. and Iranian flags. The Stars and Stripes were for display; the green stars and white, red and black stripes of Iran were bought for burning.

HOSTAGE ceremony and symbolism became part of American life. Each noon the bells rang at Wall Street's Trinity Church; each day a new flag was added to the display at a Hermitage, Pa., cemetery marking the days of captivity. Yellow ribbons, a traditional American sign of hope for homecoming, blossomed on trees and lampposts across the country.

Not all the symbols were polite. Bumper stickers proclaiming "Nuke Iran," appeared on cars. Baker's Driving Range in Lanesboro, Mass., featured a portrait of Khomeini exploding into an American flag when hit by a golf ball.

Hundreds of Iranian students in this country were deported, many more returned to their homeland voluntarily. Those who stayed often became the focus of the nation's frustration.

When Iranian demonstrators staged a fast near the White House to protest arrests of their countrymen, students from Georgetown University's Foreign Service School came by to taunt them with fried chicken.

IN SEPTEMBER, hopes were raised when Khomeini listed four conditions for the release of the hostages: a pledge of U.S. non-interference, return of the "stolen wealth" of the shah, return of Iranian assets and a moratorium on U.S. lawsuits against Iran.

The United States accepted the first proposal and set about to negotiate the others.

As the first year's anniversary passed, the crisis claimed another victim as Ronald Reagan rode a tide of national resentment that swept Jimmy Carter from the White House.

Events moved slowly toward resolution. U.S. and Iranian officials bargained by public announcement and private consultation through Algerian intermediaries.

Warren Christopher, the deputy secretary of state, flew to Algiers on Jan. 8 to work out final details as a team of bankers and lawyers shifted billions of dollars.

On Jan. 20, 1981, shortly after Ronald Reagan took the presidential oath of office, Algerian jetliners loaded with 52 eager Americans took off from Tehran's Mehrabad Airport on the first leg of a trip that would return them to a grateful country. The crisis was over.

U.S. Embassy symbol of revolution's success

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

Like the Bastille or Bunker Hill, the walled, wooded compound on Tehran's Taleghani Avenue — the old U.S. Embassy — is today the symbol of a triumphant revolution.

For Iran's Moslem militants, holding 52 embassy hostages for 14 months was a strategic success, a turning point that enabled them to tighten their revolutionary grip on a nation.

The 41 million people of the Islamic Republic of Iran may today be beset by costly war, widespread joblessness and shortages of basic goods, but their leaders — the fervently anti-American militants — still appear firmly in control, analysts say.

One of the most powerful of them sounds confident as the fifth anniversary of the hostage-taking nears.

"The Islamic Republic, as a revolutionary country, is standing on its own feet," Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani declared to a recent Friday prayers service.

The U.S. Embassy seizure was the stunning first blow in a "Neither East Nor West" campaign by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionaries.

Within two days of the Nov. 4, 1979, takeover, the revolution's first prime minister, Mehdi Bazargan, was driven from office, accused of being too pro-Western. By mid-1981, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who had tried to defuse the showdown with the United States, was in forced exile.

After rupturing their U.S. ties, the revolutionaries turned against the East, ejecting some Soviet diplomats from Tehran and crushing the Iranian communist party because of its links to Moscow.

"Looking back, you must put the hostage situation in this context," a leading U.S. analyst of Iran, political scientist James Bill of the University of Texas, said in a telephone interview.

The embassy takeover "helped cement the new policy of the revolutionary regime," Bill said, but it was only the first phase. The second was the attack against the left. Now, he said, "there is no doubt the regime maintains a pretty strong consolidated position."

The last real opposition party, the remnants of Bazargan's liberal Freedom Movement, disappeared from Parliament after elections last April, giving the Moslem fundamentalists and their Islamic Republican Party a totally free hand to shape the new Iran.

They have been busy perfecting the "Islamization" program — making it a criminal offense for a woman not to wear a veil in public, further segregating the sexes, imposing a stern Islamic penal code.

On the economic side, Khomeini last month declared the revolution's unequivocal support for private enterprise as the route to development.

Politically, the revolutionaries have installed a system of succession for perpetuating their power.

Outside analysts generally agree that the lackluster Ayatollah Ali Montazeri, 62, the successor favored by Khomeini, most likely will take over as supreme leader once the ailing, 84-year-old Khomeini leaves the scene. But Rafsanjani and President Ali Khamenei are expected to be the true powers in Tehran.

The revolution's "consolidation" has been bloody.

Anti-Khomeini exiles say 30,000 or more people have been executed by Iran's revolutionaries since 1979, mostly political opponents, but also including drug and sex offenders and members of the persecuted Bahai religion.

The human rights group Amnesty International said last week it could confirm that 5,447 people had been executed, but "the total number of executions was certainly much higher."

Ex-Marine speaks out on experience

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Kevin J. Hermening, youngest of the Americans taken hostage in Iran five years ago, has found a way to ward off any lingering nightmares: he talks.

He considers his public speaking appearances good therapy. Besides, he likes to talk; and he has a message.

He has given 569 speeches since his return. They're entitled: "An Appreciation of America."

Hermening was 20 and a Marine guard when he and 51 other Americans were seized at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4, 1979, and held hostage for 444 days.

Hermening, now 25 and a part-time journalism student, relaxed as he was interviewed in a conference room of Channels 10 and 36, the public television stations where he works part-time.

"The fact that I'm speaking and giving interviews may help me get it out of my system," he said. "I've only had two bad nightmares about it. Both were in 1983, and that was all."

Hermening has sold advertising for Fine Tuning, the magazine of the two TV stations, for three years while attending school. He drives 80 miles to the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh on Tuesdays and Thursdays for journalism and marketing classes that begin at 8:40 a.m. and end at 9 p.m.; he works here Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

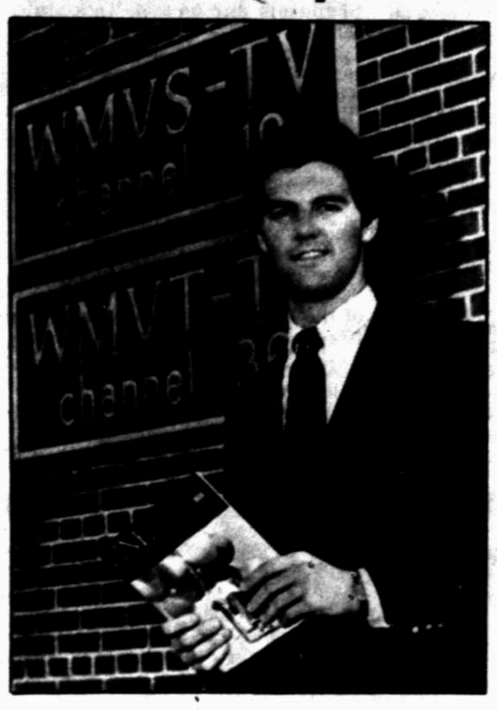

"Some people are surprised that I'm still speaking on the subject (of Iran)," he said. "But it's amazing how much interest there is in it. It was something that dominated the news for over a year."

Hermening was released from the Marines in August 1981, eight months after the hostages were freed, and planned to enroll in architecture at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

"But all the media contacts in the hostage situation made me very media conscious," he said. "I decided to enroll in journalism. I thought that I had always been treated fairly by the media."

He said his mother, Barbara Timm, "can't understand me wanting to go into journalism."

Mrs. Timm, who lives in suburban Oak Creek, drew worldwide attention when she visited her imprisoned son April 21, 1980. In recent years, she has refused all requests for interviews.

Kevin Hermening, the youngest of the Americans taken hostage in Iran five years ago, poses outside Milwaukee's Channels 10 and 36, where he works part-time selling advertising for the public television stations' magazine.

Assault on judge halts tribunal's proceedings

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The U.S.-Iran Claims Tribunal, charged with settling billions of dollars in financial claims arising out the Islamic revolution and the hostage crisis in Iran, has been at an impasse since two of its Iranian judges assaulted a Swedish judge Sept. 3.

The unprecedented attack on Judge Nils Mangard over his rulings has resulted in the suspension of all financial mediation activities at the tribunal, the only forum in the world where U.S. and Iranian officials have regular contacts.

The Islamic revolutionary government of Iran has reportedly appointed replacements for the two judges involved, Mahmoud Kashani and Shafei Shafeiei, according to a Western diplomatic source at the tribunal.

But the replacement judges have not yet taken their places, and no date has been set for arbitrations to resume.

Since it was organized July 1, 1981, the three-chamber tribunal, with an American, Iranian and third-nation judge in each chamber, has settled about 325 claims totaling about $300 million.

The tribunal was set up as a result of the 1981 Algiers accord to mediate $3 billion to $4 billion in claims — most by American firms — arising out of the Iranian revolution and the ensuing U.S. Embassy hostage crisis.

Despite a heavily charged political atmosphere at the tribunal, Iranian officials had exerted a major influence there, until the assault forced arbitration proceedings to a halt.

The outgoing tribunal president, Gunnar Lagergren of Sweden, suspended the proceedings after the attack, claiming "conduct of arbitration in an appropriate manner had ceased to be feasible."

Woman finds strength in hostage situation

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Kathryn Koob, one of the two women among the 52 Americans held hostage for 444 days in Tehran, says she has eased back into normal life through a lot of speechmaking, a positive philosophy and religious faith.

"You can either remember how difficult and awful it was...or you say: 'OK, it's done, it's over,' and you take what is good," said Ms. Koob, now cultural attache at the U.S. Embassy in Vienna.

"And usually you can find something good in even the most horrible of things, because if nothing else you have learned about yourself going through a dramatic experience, whether it's being a political prisoner or losing someone in a bombing."

When taken hostage five years ago Ms. Koob, now 46, was the director of the Iran-American Society in Tehran, responsible for the library at the U.S. Embassy, and worked with the director of the English-language program.

She arrived in Vienna seven months ago.

"I was lucky," she said in an interview last week. "I had terrific parents. My dad always said, 'Don't cry over spilled milk,' and in a way that year was spilled milk.

"There is no way I can get that year, those 14 months, back. There is no way I can relive them...but I chose not to dwell on that. Rather, live today for tomorrow, next year, much the way I have, the rest of my life."

After her release, she said, she was "just absolutely astounded to find out that the interest and the requests for speaking went on as long as I was in the States, and indeed it followed me here to Vienna."

She added that her positive outlook and her strong belief in Christian charity proved most valuable to her as a hostage.

"In the first place, one of the most important things to remember when you are in a dramatic situation is that while your situation is unique, there are also at the same time people who are in another dramatic situation.

"One of the things you have to deal with is depression. I come out of a strong religious background. I grew up in a Lutheran home and the values that were taught to me in that home were very, very important. So you look back to what you have inside you and pull that forward."

Ms. Koob said she would think of people held political prisoners by their own governments, being physically handicapped or whose lives were shattered by disease or accidents, while she herself basically enjoyed good health and had enough to eat.

"And by the time I got that far down my list," she recalled, "I usually was a lot more aware of having things in perpective."

Before coming to Vienna, Ms. Koob said, she worked at the U.S. government's foreign press center in New York City where she helped create programs for journalists visiting the United States from Eastern Europe and Africa.

NEW OR EXISTING HOME?

If you are in the market to buy a home but haven't made up your mind whether it will be a new or an existing one, you should let your Realtor help you weigh the merits of each. For instance, you will probably find a wider selection of older homes for sale. Also, when you compare living space, location, construction materials, and other factors, you may be getting more for your money if you buy an older home.

Older homes tend to be closer to established shopping areas, churches; and other neighborhood attractions. Homes in established neighborhoods also have a more "settled" look, with mature trees and shrubbery. On the other hand, new houses have obvious advantages, too.

When you're dealing with an experienced Real Estate broker, however, you have already made one of the most important decisions long before you find the house you want to buy.

Mondale warns of Reagan Supreme Court

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Walter F. Mondale, opening a late West Coast drive, said Saturday that if President Reagan is re-elected the Supreme Court will fall under the control of a "far-right fringe."

Mondale attacked Reagan's record on civil liberties issues and said ultraconservatives "would seize our temple of liberty and turn it over to judges who passed the approval of the Jerry Falwells of our land" — a reference to the leader of the Moral Majority.

At a rally attended by several thousand cheering partisans, Mondale admonished voters to consider that Reagan might nominate five high court justices in a second four-year term. Five of the justices are 75 or older, though none has announced retirement plans.

"You are picking that court for the rest of this century," Mondale said.

"This crowd would close down those doors we've opened and follow the dictates of a far-right fringe," he said.

In his San Diego speech, Mondale described Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist as "former president (Richard M.) Nixon's gift to the far right" and criticized Rehnquist for a recent statement that it's acceptable for a president to choose a high court justice for ideological qualifications.

Mondale came to California at a time when Democratic sources say Reagan's already substantial lead in public opinion polls has been increasing.

Mondale's campaign strategy assumes that if he is to achieve an upset on Nov. 6 he needs the populous state's 47 electoral votes.

He said bluntly on Saturday, "We must carry California."

He told the enthusiastic San Diego audience that under Reagan, "they have taken justice out of the Justice Department...This crowd has sought to make justice a monopoly of the few."

He said that the head of the civil rights division in the Justice Department opposes affirmative action for minorities and women.

He also criticized the nomination of presidential counselor Edwin Meese III to become attorney general and charged that "they trashed the Civil Rights Commission."

In addition, Mondale attacked Reagan's support of anti-abortion proposals and prayer in public schools.

"And, so — in a strange, bizarre twist — these alleged advocates of a weaker federal government would fuse the power of the state to intrude into the most personal and religious aspects of our lives," Mondale said.

"They doubt the capacity of the American people to worship their faith and choose wisely for themselves and their families," he said.

Mondale said the civil rights gains of the last 20 years would be lost if Reagan wins a second term.

Arriving in San Francisco, Mondale met privately with Mayor Diane Feinstein, who was nearly selected as his vice presidential running mate over Geraldine Ferraro.

Mondale earns dignity along campaign trail

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

QUINCY, Ill. — In the darkness at the end of a 17-hour day, exhausted journalists beseeched Walter F. Mondale to take a break from campaigning and ignore a group of supporters waiting at the edge of an airport tarmac.

"Put him in the car. Put him in the car," they chanted in jest to the candidate's staff — equally anxious to get to a hotel and enjoy a few hours of precious sleep.

Mondale caught the spirit of the moment and responded:

"Let's have a little dignity. There are only 13 days left. Follow my lead. Let's have dignity."

Dignity. It is a word which lept easily to Mondale's lips, even when enjoying a light moment with the reporters. It is also a description he's earned after many months on the road in quest of the elusive presidency.

"He places great importance on the dignity of public office," says senior speech writer Martin Kaplan. That, and his Norwegian reserve, explains in large part why Mondale's private personality of loose, jocular good humor sometimes seems to disappear behind a still public image.

The private Mondale enjoys smoking a chewed up cigar, retelling fishing stories and recalling past political campaigns while dressed in jeans and running shoes.

On the stump, the public Mondale is almost always impeccably groomed, his silver-gray hair meticulously combed, his blue suit always pressed.

The only exception was a period after the Democratic National Convention when Mondale began each event by tugging off his suit coat, loosening his tie and rolling up his sleeves to project the image of "Fighting Fritz," an aggressive leader capable of challenging President Reagan.

His public humor is nearly always understated as in Quincy or at a farm in northeastern Missouri where Mondale quoted Reagan as saying the demise of the family farm was not the fault of his administration.

"Bull," shouted a supporter in the audience.

"I condemn those harsh words," Mondale said with a wide grin. "They told me if I came here to Canton I would get some help."

In Minneapolis, Mondale spoke of the polls which have had him as many as 20 percentage points behind Reagan.

"For a while there," he said, "the polls were so low I was beginning to have doubts about Joan (Mondale)."

And at Youngstown State University in Ohio, where Mondale mistakenly referred to the second presidential debate as occurring on a Saturday.

"Sunday," he was loudly corrected from the audience.

"You see why that's why I come to Youngstown State, to learn," said Mondale without missing a beat.

But understated humor rarely makes headlines, and Mondale's funny asides rarely make the network news.

Privately, senior aides concede the problem of Mondale's public image, as conveyed by the television camera, the preachy, whiny, overly serious politician with deep lines rimming his eyes.

Those who have known him for a long time say the picture is inaccurate, that he is warm, witty and deadpan.

In a Washington Post interview early this month, Mondale said, "I watch the evening news occasionally and I come across too hot. I've got a high-pitched voice."

Laughing, he said, "I don't know if I could go to surgery, but I don't think so.

"Also, my tendency is when I really am angry about something, my voice rises and I think I look like maybe a shouter," he said. "I wish I had a better way of expressing my anger. So that's what people see, and you know, I'm working on it."

In the same interview, Mondale expressed his dislike for the need to conform to the needs of television, saying he hates "the idea that somebody is sort of manufacturing me, putting me in some kind of box, you know, coloring my hair."

Mondale conceded that for most Americans voting decisions are made on what they see on the evening news.

"What people see on that 30-second clip of it at night, that's all they've got to live with for most of them. I understand that. And if I'm not doing well there — and I'm trying — I'm not doing well."

In an interview, Kaplan said Mondale "is determined to avoid any of that element of manipulation. It just runs against the grain."

Bush praises Shultz's leadership in U.S. efforts to fight terrorism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush, smoothing over publicly voiced differences within the Reagan administration, Saturday lauded Secretary of State George P. Shultz for "able leadership" in efforts to fight international terrorism.

Bush's remarks, in a speech to the Zionist Organization of America, contrasted with comments Friday in which he appeared to take issue with Shultz's call for U.S. armed retaliation against terrorists.

The Bush appearance at a Washington convention of the Zionist group came a day after President Reagan appealed for Jewish support at a Valley Stream, N.Y., synagogue, stressing the "shared ideals and mutual interests" of the United States and Israel.

Bush said that while the two countries had "honest differences," they also had suffered "common tragedies" in terrorist bomb attacks in Lebanon.

But he noted that "terrorism is not only or even predominantly a Palestinian phenomenon. It is truly international. Many local groups have broad and, often, common international connections and couldn't operate as they do without those connections."

"Isn't it time that we recognize this and join with our allies in a truly international drive against terrorism? Under the able leadership of Secretary Shultz, the State Department is focusing, as never before, on international terrorism and what can be done about it," Bush said.

He asserted that "the United States under this administration will never — never — let terrorism or fear of terrorism determine its foreign policy."

The administration has come under sharp criticism from Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale for not taking better precautions to prevent terrorist attacks, such as the latest bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex just outside Beirut.

Bush's speech Saturday did not specifically mention the issue of U.S. retaliation against terrorists, which had prompted the apparent disagreement earlier between him and Shultz.

Shultz told a synagogue congregation Thursday night in New York City that the United States "must be willing" to use force despite the "potential for loss of life of some of our fighting men and the loss of life of some innocent people."

During a television interview Friday in Cincinnati, Bush was told by a reporter that Shultz had expressed support for armed retaliation "even if it kills innocent people."

"I disagree with that," Bush responded. "I think you've got to pinpoint it and we're not going to go out and bomb innocent civilians or something of that nature."

While campaigning Saturday in Waterloo, Iowa, Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro issued a statement criticizing the apparent disagreement between the vice president and the secretary of state over terrorist activities.

"Given the fact that over 260 Americans have already died as a result of terrorist attacks, I am disturbed that these two officials are debating each other, while the president equivocates."

She said, "An uncertain policy makes us more vulnerable. Indecisiveness only encourages hostile actions...We need a president who takes charge."

President Reagan on Friday appeared to be trying to distance himself from Shultz's speech, saying, "I don't think it was a statement of policy...He was saying all these things must be considered."

However, John Hughes, the State Department's chief spokesman, said the speech was "cleared by the White House" and that Shultz had been "voicing an administration position."

Later Friday, Bush himself strived to soften the apparent dispute by moving toward Shultz's endorsement of retaliation.

"The question is, should we retaliate — yes. I would like to see swift and sure retaliation provided we knew we were going after the people who did it," he said.

In his speech to the Zionist group Saturday, Bush praised Israel as "our foremost strategic friend in the Middle East."

He cited recent joint U.S.-Israeli military exercises, as well as initiatives on strengthening Israel's inflation-plagued economy that were announced after Washington talks earlier this month between Reagan and Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

More than 2,000 march against racism

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 2,000 demonstrators protested racism and boosted the "silent majority" within the Latin American community here in a march through downtown on Saturday.

The marchers walked from Pershing Square to the Olympic Auditorium in the rally sponsored by the Los Angeles Apostolic Assembly, the International Committee Against Racism and a group raising funds for Assemblyman Richard Alatorre. Traffic was stalled for more than an hour.

The Latin community has drawn attention recently because of a spate of gang killings. In one drive-by shooting Oct. 12 which authorities have said may have been an "execution" in a feud between rival cocaine syndicates, five youths were killed and five others wounded.

"It was one big parade with three sub-groups, and the attendance was expected to be 2,000, but there seemed to be that many on one corner," said police officer Jim Murphy.

Ruben Garcia, a spokesman for the Apostolic Assembly, said his group took part in the march "to draw attention to the silent majority withing the Latin American community who no longer wish to be stereotyped as non-productive members of this great city."

Busy afternoon traffic, including city buses, came to a virtual halt as the parade made its way slowly through the downtown streets.

DC-10 loses engine parts, but lands safely

CHICAGO (AP) — Parts of a DC-10 engine rained down on a residential area shortly after the plane took off Saturday, causing no injuries but forcing the jetliner, carrying 265 passengers, back to O'Hare Airport, officials said.

The crew of the Honolulu-bound United Airlines plane was forced to dump 109,000 pounds — or about 15,500 gallons — of fuel to lighten the load before landing safely at O'Hare at about 2 p.m., some 30 minutes after it took off, United spokesman Chuck Novak said.

No one on board the plane — Flight No. 3 originating at O'Hare Saturday — was injured, according to United spokesman Joe Hopkins.

Parts of the engine fell in the suburban Wood Dale and Hillcrest areas. Wood Dale Police dispatcher Sarah Adams said five engine pieces were found by local residents.

"People found them in their back yards," she said, "but no injuries were reported whatsoever."

The dispatcher said the engine parts were turned over to officials from the airline and the Federal Aviation Administration.

Novak said airline officials are not yet sure what happened, but it appeared that the rear part — the core cowling — of engine No. 3 came apart after takeoff.

"We don't want to say it disintegrated," he said, "but it came apart."

Novak said there was no damage to the main part of the engine, but the pilot did shut it off, relying instead on the plane's other two engines.

"You can fly a plane on two engines," Novak said, "but you wouldn't want to do it for safety reasons. Because the engine was out, we did bring it (the plane) back.

Chicago Fire Department spokesman Donald Walpole said the firefighters on duty at O'Hare were on routine standby for the landing.

Novak said all the passengers were transferred to other flights bound for Hawaii. He said most had left the airport by 3:30 p.m.

Novak said the landing has been reported to the FAA and the National Transportation Safety Board.

Jim Travis, head of the Tuesday Team Inc., the advertising arm of President Reagan's campaign, agreed.

"This is absolutely the most important time," he said. "We're in the final phase."

All told, the Reagan campaign intends to shell out about $25 million on television ads — more than half the roughly $46 million each presidential campaigns is allowed to spend.

The Mondale campaign refuses to say how much it will divert to television, but Laurenti said he doubts that it will be as much as Reagan's campaign. By contrast, he said, Mondale is likely to spend more on get-out-the-vote drives than Reagan.

Others familiar with the advertising industry say Mondale probably is not spending much less than Reagan on television adversiting.

Each campaign has produced a series of new television spots for the final barrage, augmenting or replacing pieces that have already aired. During prime-time television viewing hours, networks charge between $50,000 and $150,000 for a half-minute of advertising.

The candidates' ads, tested by audience groups before they run, attempt to reflect the campaigns' themes, aides say.

"Our theme is that of leadership and the positive accomplishments of President Reagan," said Doug Watts, the Reagan campaign's media director.

The decline in inflation, the improved economy and the resurgence of a strong America are the messages contained in Reagan's ads, Watt said.

As one piece says: "Why would we ever want to return to where we were less than four short years ago?" The closing refrain in many of the Reagan ads: "President Reagan — leadership that's working."

Ferraro: Attacks make family stronger

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro says that although she is offended by accusations and innuendoes about her husband and other family members, the barbs accompanying her historic vice-presidential campaign have made her family stronger.

"As protective as we were about each other, we've become more so," she said. "We are stronger."

She made the comments in an interview while campaigning on the West Coast last week.

Speaking often of family, she also said that family strength in her younger years — years she said were filled with hard work after her father died — surely helped her rise in politics later on.

Since her nomination last summer, published reports have gone deep into her past and that of her husband, real estate broker John Zaccaro, as well. They have not only gone into his real estate dealings but reports of possible links between his father and organized crime.

Ms. Ferraro said she is indeed bothered by "the innuendoes that he is anything less than honest...But we anticipate that Election Day, win or lose, those stories will end."

She added, "His business is his business. It's never been something that's terribly interested me or something that I'm going to be involved with either now or in the future."

Incidentally, she said in a separate interview with The Boston Globe that she told Mondale and Democratic campaign officials before her nomination that there would be allegations of organized crime connections to her family.

Ms. Ferraro, in an interview published Saturday in the Globe, said she told them such allegations had surfaced in her 1978 campaign for the House — an election she won after an acrimonious campaign.

"I don't know how much we anticipated, but we did anticipate personal attacks" in 1984, she said. "I didn't think it was going to be as rough as it has been."

"I think the fact that I have been a credible candidate and that I will be a good vice president will put us into a position where women candidates will be taken a lot more seriously. They'll be induced to run instead of discouraged," she said.

Texas gains SWC lead, beats SMU 13-7

Big defensive plays save Longhorns from Ponies

AUSTIN (AP) — The No. 2 Texas Longhorns lived dangerously once again Saturday, but three big defensive plays in the fourth quarter preserved a hard-earned 13-7 Southwest Conference victory over Southern Methodist.

The victory, coupled with Houston's 17-3 loss to Arkansas, put Texas atop the SWC ladder with a 3-0 record. But it didn't come without some nervous and controversial moments at the end.

Linebacker Ty Allert's fourth-period quarterback sack and James Lott's controversial pass defense cemented the victory over the 14th-ranked Mustangs.

"It was our defense that did it," said Texas Coach Fred Akers. "It was our kind of football. We believe in defense at Texas."

The Longhorns advanced their overall record to 5-0-1 while SMU dropped to 4-2 and 2-2.

TEXAS BUILT a 13-0 lead in the third quarter on Jerome Johnson's seven-yard touchdown run, but the Mustangs threatened to take it away.

Keith Brooks intercepted a Todd Dodge pass and ran it back 42 yards for a touchdown. Then SMU drove to the Longhorn 14 and 9 yard lines late in the game but came away empty.

Allert sacked Mustang quarterback Don King for an 11-yard loss on third down to force a missed field goal attempt.

On SMU's next drive, Lott batted away a fourth-down pass from the grasp of wide receiver Marquis Pleasant in the 'Horn end zone. The Mustangs argued to no avail that there was pass interference on the play.

"I've got the worst seat in the house." SMU Coach Bobby Collins said of the call. "The officials were right on top of the play and they didn't call anything. We'll just have to grade the films."

Pleasant added that "it was interference."

Lott disagreed, saying "I knocked down the ball, then I pushed him down as I fell."

Lott then leaped high to intercept a King pass with 31 seconds left in the Texas end zone to subdue the feisty Mustangs.

"Texas did a great job defensively," Collins said. "They are solid, a solid team. You have to give Texas a lot of credit."

DODGE'S PASSING setup every Longhorn score in the game played before 80,754 fans, the second largest crowd in Memorial Stadium history. His passing positioned the Longhorns for two second period field goals and a 6-0 halftime lead.

Brent Duhon caught a 28-yard pass and William Harris snagged an 11-yarder on a 57-yard drive to the SMU 19 before Ward drilled a 41-yarder.

Then Harris got free for a 35-yard toss from Harris to the Mustang 26. A personal foul aided the 'Horn cause, but the drive stalled at the SMU 16 and Ward hit a 35-yard field goal.

SMU's best chance to score was on a first-quarter drive to the Longhorn 17 where Tomas Esteve missed a 33-yard field goal attempt. The Mustangs got to the 'Horn 22 in the second quarter but a holding penalty set them back.

Tech's rally a touch of revenge

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

LUBBOCK —It wasn't a public lynching like Tulsa's 59-21 win here last year, although it could have been, but revenge may have been even more satisfying this way.

Rookie quarterback Aaron Keesee maneveured Texas Tech 56 yards in nine plays to the Tulsa 14 and Ricky Gann kicked a 31-yard field goal with 1:56 left to give the Red Raiders a 20-17 come-from-behind victory at Jones Stadium Saturday.

Tech trailed 17-10 going into the final period after the Hurricane had stormed to two third-period touchdowns. Keesee finally got the Raiders moving late in the third period on an 80-yard drive that carried over into the final period.

KEESEE, STARTING only his third game since winning the job against Texas A&M, fired a 14-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Troy Smith with 12:04 left in the game to pull Tech into a tie at 17.

"It was just a curl route by the wide end. He saw the coverage, adjusted and it was just a case of hitting him," said Keesee.

The Raiders, who had scored 10 points in the second period, got their offense going about the same time the crowd of 34,624 mastered The Wave, which they had botched like a butter-fingered receiver earlier in the game. Once they got the hang of it, they refused to stop and The Wave kept circling the sun-splashed saucer until it was feared it might bring back the weeklong rain.

"The crowd did a great job of pumping us up," said Keesee.

BUT TO rescue the game, the Raiders still had to stop a Tulsa advance to the Tech 29, recovering a fumble, and then countermarch 56 yards to set up Gann.

"If you're looking for big plays, that sprintout pass on third and 10 to Troy Smith was it," said Coach Jerry Moore. The play went for 11 yards to the Tech 41 and kept the Raiders on the move. It was his most important of five receptions.

Gann's field goal was his second of the game. Earlier he had split even on two 50-yard attempts. From the press box, it looked as though his first period miss, after Tulsa's Jason Staurofsky's 37-yarder had given the Hurricane a 3-0 lead, was against the wind.

"It was a swirling wind," said Gann, who now has 12 field goals for the year, "and the one I missed was with the wind. I just got under it." The 50-yarder with two seconds left in the half "was against the wind."

That kick was set up by a curious 12-play drive that covered only 37 yards.

Robert Lewis' 14-yard run, ending a 78-yard match, gave Tech its first TD early in the second quarter.

But the difference was that final kick. As the Raiders moved downfield, Gann got ready on the sidelines by kicking into the net. "I was telling myself, 'I don't like this.'" He didn't know when the call would come, or if it would come.

"But once I got on the field, I tried to treat it like it was just a normal kick."

KEESEE, COMPLETING 18 of 28 for 239 yards, was getting good mileage out of his high, hard one over the middle, but it also caused him some grief. Three of the passes went through the hands of receivers and all were picked off by Tulsa free safety Nate Harris, who tied a school record for interceptions.

The first theft in the second quarter thwarted a Tech drive that was on the threshold of at least three points. His two third-quarter swipes led to Tulsa touchdowns. That's a swing of 20 points or so, which could have made this a one-sided Tech win.

Harris raced 60 yards to the Tech six to set up running back Gordon Brown's six-yard run that tied it with 12:47 left. His next came at midfield and set in motion a 52-yard drive that ended in a one-yard run with 2:04 in the quarter.

"Tulsa was dropping their linebackers deep, so we were going underneath with hopes that it would eventually set up something deep," Keesee explained the over-the-middle strategy. The interceptions, "they're just gonna happen and you've got to live with them."

"Aaron may mistakes," says Moore, "but he doesn't come off the field like a whipped dog."

Tech's defense, which limited Tulsa's 400-plus yards-per-game offense to just 183 yards, kept the Raiders within catching distance and one of the big contributors to that effort was Calvin Riggs, the defensive end from Midland Lee, and linebacker David Jiles. Riggs had four tackles including one 10-yard loss sacking of Tulsa quarterback Rickie Stephenson, which took the wind out of first period drive. Jiles had five tackles, two assists and one sack.

The Raiders, 4-3, will host Texas at Jones Stadium Saturday while Tulsa, 4-4, faces Illinois State next.

TCU rally helps shot at bowl bid

FORT WORTH (AP) — With a regional televison audience and eight bowl scouts looking on, Texas Christian may have proved Saturday that the 1984 Horned Frogs are no flukes.

"The dream is still alive!" exclaimed Coach Jim Wacker as the Christians, 6-1, devoured Baylor's Bears 38-28 in a Southwest Conference clash featuring TCU's Kenneth Davis, the nation's No. 2 rusher.

"If Kenneth Davis is not one of the two best backs in the nation, then I don't know who is," chortled Wacker, in his second year at the TCU helm and bringing the Frogs back from a 1-8-2 season and near oblivion for a quarter century.

"Is Davis super or what?"

The triumph assured the Frogs their first winning record since 1971 and only their third in 20 years.

Davis, a junior from Temple, scored on runs of 20, 60 and 9 yards while rushing for 173 yards on 20 carries. He soared past the 1,000-yard mark for the season.

Only Jim Swink, a TCU legend of the late 1950s, has gained 1,000 yards for the Frogs in a single season.

"Woo boy, that was a big one!" cried the irrepressible Wacker as the Frogs twice came from behind to win their fourth in a row and hike their SWC record to 3-1, their best in 22 years.

Wacker compared the victory to TCU's 32-31 thriller over Arkansas in importance and said:

"We needed this one to keep our hopes alive for the rest of the season. We have four more ball games, and who knows?

"We're capable of winning them...

The Frogs play Houston and Texas Tech before what could be an unlikely and unexpected Nov. 17 showdown with Texas.

The Frogs, trailing 10-0 and 20-14, overtook the Bears for keeps in the third period on a 20-yard pass from Anthony Sciaraffa to Dan Sharp that gave TCU a 21-20 edge.

BAYLOR, 2-5 and 2-3, mounted a 20-14 halftime lead on a 20-yard pass from Tom Muecke to Ralph Stockemer, a 9-yard toss from Muecke to Glenn Pruitt and field goals of 29 and 31 yards by Marty Jimmerson.

Muecke also winged a 24-yard scoring pass to Pruitt with 14 seconds remaining.

The Frogs, winning their fourth in a row and off to their best start in 26 years, shook off a terrible first quarter in which the nation's top offensive unit failed to make a first down and held the ball only 2:54.

But Davis struck for second-quarter TDs of 20 and 60 yards to keep the Frogs respectable and his third score shoved TCU into a semi-comfortable 28-20 lead.

Ken Ozee's 34-yard field goal and a 5-yard touchdown run by Tony Jeffery wrapped up things for TCU in the final quarter.

Taylor, defense lead Hogs to win

HOUSTON (AP) — Arkansas' defense kept trying to help out its offense by snatching four interceptions and two fumbles from the slippery-fingered Houston Cougars.

The Razorback offense capitalized on only one of the gifts however and instead relied on quarterback Brad Taylor to direct the Hogs to a 17-3 Southwest Conference football victory Saturday.

Before leaving the game tired and with a bruised knee cap late in the third quarter, Taylor had guided the Razorbacks to a 14-3 lead.

"Sure it was disturbing not capitalizing on those turnovers," Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield said. "But on defense a guy can play helter-skelter and wide-eyed and make a big play that makes you look bad.

"On offense, if a guy messes up it will destroy your whole scheme and that was happening to us today."

The Hogs had to overcome five turnovers, including three interceptions by Taylor, who said he was more tired than injured.

"Basically, I was beat up from last week and I got tired," Taylor said. "When I threw that last (third) inteception, it was mainly because I was tired."

Despite losing six turnovers, including the first three of the game, Houston Coach Bill Yeoman said the miscues were not a factor in the game.

"They just made the most of theirs," Yeoman said. "We did not move the ball at all. They stuffed our people inside, they just shut it down."

The Cougars, who have not scored a touchdown against the Razorbacks in three years, dropped from the SWC unbeaten ranks with a 3-1 record and 4-3 for the year. Arkansas is 4-2-1 and 2-2.

Taylor was plagued by three interceptions and left the game with a bruised knee cap after making the tackle on his third interception toss late in the third quarter.

The senior from Danville, Ark., did not return to the game but he had already staked the Razorbacks to a 14-3 lead on an 11 yard first quarter run by Marshall Foreman and Taylor's five-yarder in the second quarter.

Taylor finished with 10 completions on 16 attempts for 130 yards.

Greg Horne added a 24-yard field goal for the Hogs with 7:58 left in the game.

The Arkansas defense also played a key role in handing the Cougars their first SWC loss by coming up with five Cougar turnovers.

Arkansas' offense could take advantage of only one of he turnoers however, after receivng the ball at the Houston 41, 17, 26 and nine yard lines. Kevin Wyatt's interception of a pass by Houston's Gerald Landry et up Foreman's first round touchdown.

Houston's only scoring came on a 33-yard field goal by Mike Clendenen in the second quarter.

Rebels claim first 4-5A cross country crown

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Midland Lee's youthful cross country team gave Coach Sam Volpe the District 4-5A cross country championship here Saturday in his last school year to coach the sport.

It was the first cross country championship ever won by the Lee Rebels. Volpe is also head track coach and has already announced that this spring will be the last Rebel track team he will coach. He is the only head track coach the school has ever had.

The Rebs brought home the title with three sophomores leading the way. Arthur Cantu posted a 16:34 to win the individual title while Mike Garza was second in 16:38. Teddy Ruiz was fifth with a 16:48. Other Lee runners were Mike Davis, senior, eighth, 17:05; Derek Westbrook, senior, 11th, 17:23; Miles Goodyear, senior, 20th, 17:58; and Steve Nutt, junior, 29th, 18:21.

"I think it is really something that a sophomore wins the meet. That is very unusual," said Volpe. "And to have three sophomores in the top five is unusual too. We have never

It's hard to talk basketball during football

The guy in the back of room, raising his hand. You say you want to talk out of turn. Well, go ahead, Jerry Stone. But remember, this is football season. You are supposed to be seen but not heard for three more weeks.

"But, Mr. Chairman, we open the season Saturday night against Sul Ross Junior Varsity at the Chaparral Center and nobody knows about it. Can't I make make an announcement?"

Sit down Mr. Stone. You know better than to bring up basketball when Midland Lee is scrambling for a berth in the football playoffs and Greenwood is playing in Class AA like it had been demoted from Class 4A rather than promoted from Class A. And don't you know, Mr. Stone, that there's a Midland High-Midland Lee game coming up and they are already building barricades around the Memorial Stadium ticket windows, just in case.

There goes that hand again. What is it this time, Mr. Stone, if you have to leave the room, good riddance.

"I just wanted to say we are having an Open House at the Chaparral Center Thursday night, starting at 6:30 p.m. We will introduce the basketball, golf and tennis teams and then play an intra-squad scrimmage. All Chaparral athletic supporters are invited."

You never give up, do you Mr. Stone. Well, what else do you want to say, go ahead and say it.

"Well, we have nine new players and seven of 'em are guards. We even have a 5-4 guard, and everyone knows what happened the last time we had a guard that small.

"We also have five returnees from last year's 21-12 team. We are looking forward to an interesting year."

MR. STONE somehow seems to have taken over the meeting. Some people are just pushy. "Although it may seem strange to be talking basketball in October, the Chaps have a real early season treat in store for the fans the weekend of Nov. 8-9-10. That's when the Chaparrals stage their Chaparral Classic.

"This year, the eight-team meet will include Barton County, Garden City of Kansas, Grayson, Weatherford, Cisco, Howard, Odessa and Midland colleges from the Western JCAC.

It will be the biggest tournament here this season, since the Regional, which Midland has hosted the last several years, will be played in Snyder this season."

"You in the back, raising your hand. Did you want to say something?"

Yes, can I have my meeting back so we can get on with our football discussion?

A&M routs Rice, 38-14

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Fullback Roger Vick scored on two short runs and Texas A&M picked up its first Southwest Conference win of the year Saturday in a 38-14 rout of Rice University.

Despite setting a school record for penalties, A&M raised its overall record to 4-3 and its conference record 1-3. The Owls, who did not score until the fourth quarter, saw their record drop 1-6 and 0-4 in the conference.

A&M put the game away in the first quarter with two quick touchdowns after Owl errors. On the game's opening series, Rice quarterback Kerry Overton fumbled on his own 12 when hit by defensive end Jay Muller. Linebacker Johnnie Holland recovered at the 15, and three Aggie running plays put the ball in the end zone.

Vick punched it over from the floor and Allan Smith's kick made 7-0 with only a minute and 56 seconds gone in the game.

Rice's next possession ended when Steve Kidd's punt was smothered by Mike Ashley at the Rice 30.

Aggie quarterback Craig Stump capped an 8-play drive with a 5-yard touchdown toss to tight-end end Mark Lewis.

Smith added the kick and the Aggies had a two touchdown edge with 6:56 to go in the first quarter.

Vick ended the game with 50 yards on eight carries. Thomas Sanders led the Aggies with 70 yards on 16 carries. Stump hit on 14 of 23 passes for 127 yards, one touchdown and one interception.

A&M BROKE a school record by piling up 17 penalties that cost the Aggies 150 yards.

An Aggie turnover posptponed A&M's third touchdown of the first half. Sanders coughed it up at the Rice 7 after a 14-yard run.

But A&M punt returner Jimmie Hawkins added the third touchdown with a 68-yard touchdown return with 5:39 to go in the second quarter.

Quarterback Eddie Burgoyne, who replaced Overton, drove the Owls from their own 29 to the Aggie 20 before an offensive pass interference call pushed Rice back to the 35. James Hamrick's 41-yard field goal attempt was aborted by a low snap.

The closing score of the first half came on a Smith 4-yard field goal with one second to play. Rice prolonged the Aggie's drive by putting 12 men on the field during an Aggie punt with 23 seconds to go. The Aggies kept Rice bottled up through the first half when the Owls started only one drive outside their own 20.

Rice's two fourth quarter touchdowns came on runs by Overton.

Sanders picked up his first touchdown of the year with 2:16 to go in the third quarter when he ran it in from the 9. The score capped A&M's longest touchdown drive of the game, a 59-yard effort on 11 plays.

Vick's second score capped another short Aggie drive that started with a Rice turnover.

Lee White loses first, Maroon still unbeaten

From Staff Reports

Odessa Nimitz handed Lee White its first loss of the year in the Midland-Odessa ninth grade football conference Saturday morning at the Lee Freshman Field.

The loss leaves White with a 5-1-1 record, but Lee Maroon kept its unbeaten streak alive on Thursday with a 38-0 win over Odessa Ector. Maroon is now 6-0-1 on the season.

In other ninth grade action, Odessa Bowie handed Midland Gold a 14-12 loss while Bonham slipped by Crockett 12-6 in a game between Odessa teams. Midland Purple played Hood Saturday night and results were not known on that game.

In the eighth grade Midland-Odessa conference, Odessa Crockett remained unbeaten with a 28-14 win over Odessa Bowie. In a game of Midland units, Goddard survived a 14-12 win over San Jacinto and Alamo crushed Odessa Bonham 24-6. Nimitz defeated Hood by a 28-6 margin.

In the eighth grade Midland city conference, Alamo won an 18-0 verdict over Goddard White. The San Jacinto-Trinity results were not known.

In the seventh grade American Conference, Goddard had a big day with two victories. Red slapped San Jacinto White by a 42-0 count while White rolled over Alamo Grey by a 36-0 margin. Alamo Scarlet won a 24-6 decision over San Jacinto Green in the other contest.

In the seventh grade National Conference, Goddard again captured two victories as Red won a 22-0 verdict over San Jacinto White and White slipped past Alamo Grey in a 14-12 squeaker. In the only other game played, Alamo Scarlet defeated San Jacinto Green by a 52-20 margin in a high scoring shootout.

MHS swimmers win three of four duals

From Staff Reports

Midland High's swim team won three of four dual matches against Abilene Cooper and Abilene High Saturday in what was called a double dual meet between the three District 4-5A teams.

The MHS boys defeated Abilene High by a 42-16 point margin and won a 42-32 decision over Cooper.

The MHS girls had a 57-10 advantage over Abilene High, but dropped a 51-24 decision to Cooper.

Sam Perry, Andrew Jordan, R. Perkins, R. Frable, Alan Gruzens led the MHS boys to the double sweep by winning more than one event.

Kathleen Dunbar, Becky Simpson, Wendy Walker, Krissy Simmons, Debbie Colson, K. Kelly and S. Barbee all had victories for the MHS girls.

M-Raiders win soccer tourney in Brownwood

From Staff Reports

The Midland Raiders won the Brownwood Coca-Cola-Sunkist Invitational Soccer tournament in the Boys 12-and-under division.

The Midland Soccer Association team tied the Brownwood Banditos 0-0, defeated Abilene United 1-0 and the Commanche Landgrabbers, 8-0, to reach the semifinals where they defeated the Abilene Raiders, 5-2. The Raiders defeated the Waco Bandits 3-1 in the finals.

Midland Raider team members: Clifford Angelo, Eric Collins, Brian Cooper, Matt Dickey, Barrett Gun, Erick Holt, Jeb Honeyman, Shane Mansell, David Miniham, Chris Murray, Jordan Reed, Russel VanHusen, Kirby Williams, Wayne Wilson. Coaches for the 11-2-2 Raiders are Sonny Williams and Buster Dickey.

Houston rookie center Akeem Olajuwon (left) gives teammate Ralph Sampson a good luck handshake prior to the start of Saturday's game against Dallas.

Giants step on Mavs, 121-111

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

DALLAS — It's still a little early to begin planning NBA playoff tickets for the Houston Rockets, but they took a giant step forward Saturday with a season opening 121-111 win over the Dallas Mavericks.

Actually, the Rockets took a whole bunch of giant steps, and it was second-year star Ralph Sampson and University of Houston rookie Akeem Olajuwon who did the stepping.

Olajuwon topped Rockets' scorers with 24 points, 22 of which came in the second half.

"We voted 7-5 in here to let him play in the second half," said Rocket coach Bill Fitch afterward.

Olajuwon has been hounded as a No. 1 draft pick might expect, but Akeem's debut didn't appear destined for glory. It took the 7-foot Nigerian exactly 10 seconds to commit his first NBA foul. The rest of the half took a similiar form. Olajuwon scored one hoop, had another foul, and after only five minutes of playing time, took up residence beside Fitch on the bench.

After the first period, Dallas held a 31-27 advantage, but Sampson and point guard John Lucas went to work. The Rockets bombed away at Dallas for a 63-51 halftime edge.

It was Lucus, the eldest Rocket who turns 31 Wednesday, who geared up Houston. Dallas had led by five points twice in the second quarter, but Lucas' passing and leadership on the fast break got Houston running. Coupled with Sampson's shear ability, Houston took a lead it never relinquinshed.

"They're big," said Dallas coach Dick Motta. "They got the ball where they wanted it, when they wanted and we didn't. We couldn't deny them in the middle at all."

The Rockets wound up with 22 first half points off the break to Dallas' five. Lucas dished out five assists and plenty went to the 7-4 Sampson. Houston got all but 10 of their first half points from inside the lane. Defensively, the Rocket monsters choked off Dallas' inside game.

Lucas would finish the day with 23 points and seven feeds. "Lucas drove on us well," said Motta. "So much for scouting reports. He gives them a dimension they didn't have."

What success Dallas did have came from money man Mark Aguirre and Jay Vincent. Aguirre, the NBA's second leading scorer last season, got off to a healthy start with team highs of 30 points and nine rebounds. Vincent added 28 points on 10 of 15 shooting.

"There's no doubt we beat a good Dallas team," said Fitch. "They execute and execute every time down the floor. I was never comfortable with our lead."

The Mavs, playing before less than a full house but to a sold out Reunion Arena, tried in the fourth quarter to make the game interesting. Aguirre opened with two quick baskets that cut the gap to six. But Fitch summonned help in the form of Sampson and Rodney McCray, and with Olajuwon thrown in, cleaned the backboards, pushed the lead back to 18 and out of reach.

Dallas' most obvious problems were easily recognizalbe. First, the Rockets are much better than the team that was 29-53 a year ago. Dallas also has five new players, some in major roles. But where the Mavs really suffered was on the boards. Houston outrebounded Dallas, 42-32, but the biggest problem again came from Olajuwon, who snatched six offensive rebounds. Dallas as a team nabbed only seven offensive boards.

Rookie Mav center Sam Perkins had a solid game with 12 points and eight rebounds, but Sampson and company taught Perkins that school was definitely out.

"It was just one game," said Lucas, who has had an up and down nine-year career. "But we have the talent to be good."

"It's just the beginning. In the first half, I was thinking about this being my first pro game. I was excited," said Olajuwon. "It's not going to be easy. You have to work for everything. I'm just looking forward to the season."

The Mavs won't get much of a chance to breathe as they host defending Western Conference champion Los Angeles today at 7 p.m. The Rockets, meanwhile, are off until Tuesday when they play Dallas at the Summit in Houston.

Once-proud AFC features hapless Oiler-Bengal show

HOUSTON (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals, 2-6 this season, will try to improve their playoff possibilities when they meet the winless Houston Oilers in a National Football League game in the Astrodome Sunday.

The Bengals in the playoffs?

That was the cry a week ago when Jim Breech kicked four field goals to lead the Bengals to a 12-9 victory over Cleveland and a second-place position in the American Football Conference's once-proud Central Division.

It is a sad commentary on the division that once was the "bumps and bruises" division. Now Pittsburgh leads with a 4-4 record and the four teams have a combined 7-25 record for the first half of the season.

"At least now that there is a glimmer of a chance for us coming back and being in the hunt later in the year, it may had added motivation," Cincinnati Coach Sam Wyche said. "But we really never had that problems where the team felt like it was condemned to a poor finish."

Wyche used three quarterbacks trying to find a winning combination against the Browns, who fired Coach Sam Rutigliano after the game and Breech's game-winning fourth field goal came in the closing seconds.

Wyche seized the moment after the game by saying, "We're in it."

Wyche has reason for confidence going against the Oilers, because he's settled on quarterback Ken Anderson to start the game. Anderson has been an Oiler nemesis over the years. He completed an NFL record 20 consecutive passes in a 35-27 victory in 1982.

Anderson dinged the Oilers 55-14 and 28-10 last season. Anderson was sidelined by injury Oct. 7 in the two teams' first meeting but Boomer Eliason led the Bengals to their first victory of the season, 13-3.

Despite their dismal first half, the Oilers have shown improvement in their past two games against Miami and San Francisco, despite 28-10 and 32-21 losses.

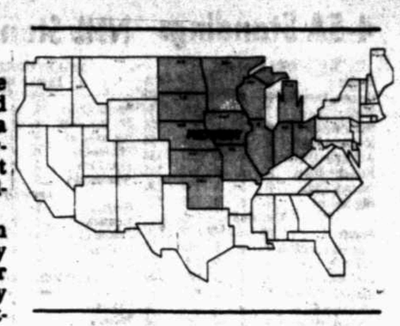

Oiler quarterback Warren Moon turned in one of his most versatile performances, completing 25 of 33 passes for 356 yards and two touchdowns against the 49er defense.

Jayhawks kick Sooners, 28-11

Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Dodge Schwartzburg kicked four field goals and Wayne Ziegler scored on a 63-yard interception return Saturday, sparking Kansas, a 28-point underdog, to a 28-11 upset of second-ranked Oklahoma.

The Jayhawks took a 7-3 lead on Lynn Williams' one-yard run early in the second quarter and never again trailed the previously unbeaten Sooners. Kansas, dominating the game over the final three periods, added a safety by blocking a punt through the Oklahoma end zone.

Oklahoma, 5-1-1, was forced to go with freshman quarterback Troy Aikman because of an injury to senior Danny Bradley and the Sooners' offense never got untracked, making only five first downs in the first half and none in the second period.

Mike Norseth set up Kansas' first touchdown with a 54-yard completion in the second period and hit five straight passes in the second-quarter drive which led to Schwartzburg's first field goal. The victory was Kansas' first over Oklahoma since 1975 and the first time they have beaten the Sooners in Lawrence since 1964.

The Jayhawks were leading 15-3 when Ziegler iced the upset with his 63-yard interception return. Two Oklahoma players lunged at Ziegler's ankles as the Kansas defensive back neared the end zone but they couldn't catch him.

Wisconsin 16, Ohio St. 14

MADISON, Wis. — Wisconsin shut down Ohio State's vaunted offense and received 203 rushing yards from substitute tailback Marck Harrison to post a 16-14 Big Ten football upset over the 6th-ranked Buckeyes.

The Badgers, 5-3 overall and 3-3 in the Big Ten, especially dominated Ohio State, 6-2 and 4-2, in the first half when they outgained OSU 309-119 yards in the nationally televised game.

Keith Byars, the nation's leading rusher, picked up 142 yards but was stopped consistently for short gains by Wisconsin linebackers Jim Melka and Craig Raddatz and nose guard Michael Boykins.

The Buckeyes, averaging 448 yards per game coming in, had only punted 25 times all season. But Wisconsin held Ohio State to 320 yards, forcing seven punts.

Iowa 24, Indiana 20

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Quarterback Chuck Long passed for 227 yards and broke an NCAA record with 22 straight completions, including touchdown passes of 5 yards to Jonathon Hayes and 16 yards to Bill Happel, leading 17th-ranked Iowa to a 24-20 Big Ten Conference victory over winless Indiana.

The victory, coupled with Ohio State's 16-14 loss at Wisconsin, gave the Hawkeyes sole possession of first place in the conference.

Long, a 6-foot-4 junior, finished with 26 completions in 30 attempts. He totaled 176 yards during his long string of completions that began with three minutes left in the first quarter and ended at 10:53 of the final period on an interception by Indiana's Jeff McBain.

Oklahoma State 20, Colorado 14

STILLWATER — Rusty Hilger fired a 47-yard touchdown pass to Malcolm Lewis and 10th-ranked Oklahoma State used a stifling defense to make up for costly errors as the Cowboys edged Colorado, 20-14.

The long scoring throw allowed the Cowboys, 6-1 and 2-1 in the Big Eight Conference, to break an 8-8 second quarter tie.

Hilger, a senior, became the first Cowboy player to surpass the 1,000-yard mark in a single season for the second time in his career.

Nebraska 62, Kansas St. 14

LINCOLN — Quarterback Travis Turner scored two touchdowns and threw for another in the first half as Nebraska pummeled Kansas State 62-14 in Big Eight Conference football.

The fourth-ranked Cornhuskers, 7-1, scored on seven of their eight possessions in the first half to build a 48-7 lead. Turner tallied on a pair of two-yard runs and threw an eight-yard touchdown pass to freshman Jason Gamble.

The verdict, coupled with Oklahoma's upset loss to Kansas, gave three-time defending champion Nebraska sole possession of first place in the Big Eight with a 4-0 mark.

Michigan 26, Illinois 18

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan quarterback Chris Zurbrugg, reviving the option play, rushed for 51 yards and one touchdown and Bob Bergeron tied a school record with four field goals to lead the Wolverines to a 26-18 Big Ten football victory over mistake-prone Illinois.

Tailback Rick Rogers scored on a 2-yard run, Zurbrugg scored on an 8-yard sweep and Bergeron kicked field goals of 32, 40, 38 and 31 yards — tying the Michigan record set by Bob Woods against Stanford in 1975.

Missouri 14, Iowa St. 14

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Reserve quarterback Alan Hood flipped a 7-yard touchdown pass to David Smoldt with 3:59 remaining and followed with a two-point conversion pass to David Wodka, rallying underdog Iowa State to a 14-14 tie with Big Eight rival Missouri.

Hood, who entered in the third quarter for injured Iowa State starter Alex Espinoza, drove the Cyclones 40 yards in seven plays to their tying score. Featured were a 13-yard pass to Tracy Henderson, one of 10 yards to Smoldt and a 9-yarder to Bobbie Minor.

Cent. Mich. 42, Bowling Green 21

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich. — Tailback Curtis Adams rushed for three touchdowns and quarterback Bob DeMarco fired two scoring strikes to lead Central Michigan to a 42-21 victory over Bowling Green in a Mid-American Conference contest.

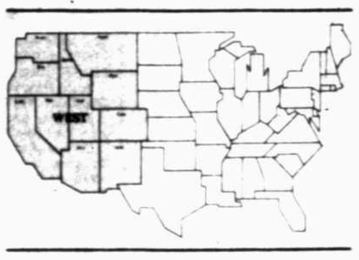

Wichita St. 23, Drake 6

DES MOINES, Iowa — Sergio Lopez-Chavero kicked three field goals of more than 50 yards and Eric Denson ran for two touchdowns to give Wichita State its first victory of the year, 23-6 over Drake in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Lopez-Chavero, helped by a wind that gusted up to 30 mph, kicked two 54-yard field goals in the second quarter to five Wichita State a 13-6 halftime lead and added a 51-yarder in the fourth quarter for the Shockers' final points.

No. 1 Huskies fight back to beat Wildcats

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Jacque Robinson ran for three touchdowns in the second half and the No. 1-ranked Washington Huskies, getting another stellar performance from their defense and special teams, came from behind Saturday to beat the Arizona Wildcats 28-12 in a turnover-plagued Pacific-10 Conference football game.

There were 19 turnovers on a 48-degree, overcast day at Husky Stadium and Washington's defense came up with 10 of them, including a crucial 22-yard fumble return by Steve Alvord for a touchdown in the third quarter that put Washington ahead 14-6.

In addition, the Huskies, 8-0, had a blocked punt to set up one of Robinson's TD runs, a 4-yarder in the fourth quarter.

Arizona, 4-4, was intercepted six times and coughed up four fumbles.

Southern Cal 31, Cal 7

LOS ANGELES — Freshman tailback Ryan Knight ran for 122 yards and two touchdowns to pace 20th-ranked Southern Cal to a 31-7 victory over California and keep the Trojans perfect in the Pacific-10.

Ryan, a reserve seeing his first extensive duty, replaced starter Fred Crutcher in the second quarter. The shifty 6-foot-1, 205-pound freshman carried 22 times and tallied on a pair of one-yard dives.

The victory gave the Trojans, who led 17-0 at halftime, a 6-1 overall record and 5-0 Pac-10 mark. Cal, playing without injured quarterback Gale Gilbert, fell to 2-6 and 1-5 in conference play.

Wash. St. 50, Oregon 41

EUGENE, Ore. — Rueben Mayes set an NCAA single-game rushing record with an unofficial 357 yards, leading Washington State to a wild 50-41 Pacific 10 Conference victory over Oregon.

The 6-foot, 208-pound junior broke the old mark of 356 set Eddie Lee Ivery of Georgia Tech against Air Force in 1978.

Mayes carried the ball 39 times and scored on runs of 2, 69 and 12 yards as the Cougars moved the ball at will against the Ducks.

Wyoming 43, Colorado St. 34

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Fullback Dave Evans rushed for 228 yards and two touchdowns and halfback Kevin Lowe added 170 yards and two more scores, powering Wyoming's big-play wishbone offense to a 43-34 Western Athletic Conference victory over Colorado State.

The victory raised Wyoming to 5-4 overall and 4-2 in the WAC. Colorado State fell to 2-6 and 2-4.

UCLA 21, Arizona St. 13

TEMPE, Ariz. — Ron Pitts returned a second-quarter interception 46 yards for a touchdown and UCLA used a last-minute goal-line stand to beat Arizona State 21-13 in a Pacific-10 Conference game.

The Bruins stopped the Sun Devils on five plays from the 3-yard line with linebacker Tommy Taylor sacking Arizona State quarterback Jeff Van Raaphorst with 34 seconds to go in the game at the UCLA 11 on fourth down.

UCLA improved its record to 6-2 overall and 3-1 in Pac-10 play.

Brown plays clean for one-shot lead

Pensacola Open Golf

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Ken Brown, playing in rainy, blustery weather more common to his native Scotland, saved par on the final hole to preserve a no-bogey 69 and establish a one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $300,000 Pensacola Open Golf Tournament.

Brown, a former Ryder Cup player for Great Britain, completed 54 holes in 203, 10 shots under par on the rain-drenched course at the Perdido Bay Inn and Resort.

One stroke off the pace at 204 were former PGA champion John Mahaffey, Bill Kratzert and rookie Joey Sindelar, who closed up with a 66 in the scattered showers. Mahaffey had a 70 and Kratzert matched par 71 in the difficult conditions.

Danny Edwards, with a 71, and Ralph Landrum were at 205. Landrum, the leader through the first two rounds, slipped to a 73. Scott Hoch, 69, and Tim Norris, 71, were next at 206.

In the race for Player of the Year honors, which will be determined at the close of this season-ending event, the absent Tom Watson was the beneficiary of some poor play by Bruce Lietzke and Hal Sutton and, with one round to go, moved into the lead on the points list that will determine the winner.

Lietzke and Sutton, who were eighth and ninth in scoring average going into the day's play, had 74s, which dropped them both behind Tom Watson, who moved from 10th to eighth.

With Player of the Year points awarded for positions to the top 10 in scoring average (20 for first, 18 for second, and so on down to two for 10th), Tom Watson's total increased to 56.

South African Denis Watson, who had a 75 and was far back in the pack at 215, has 54 points.

The final standings will be determined after Sunday's play, and the eventual winner will be determined from the positions in scoring average.

Tom Watson has a 70.971 mark. He is followed by Lietzke at 70.967, Sutton at 70.969 and Dan Pohl at 71.009.

If Tom Watson finishes ahead of all three, he wins Player of the Year. If he finishes ahead of two of them, Tom and Denis Watson tie for Player of the Year. If Tom Watson finishes ahead of only one of them, Denis Watson wins Player of the Year.

Sutton and Lietzke need a final round of 69 or better to go past Watson, and Pohl needs a 67.

Brown, in his first full season of competition on the American tour, did not make a bogey in his effort, but had to one-putt five times to save. The last came on the final hole, where he missed the green with a 2-iron but played a delicate little chip to within a foot of the cup for an easy save.

Dallas can't forget last victory by a Colts team

IRVING (AP) — It's been a long time since the Colts' National Football League franchise has defeated Dallas but the Cowboys never will forget the last time.

Dallas has beaten the Baltimore Colts four consecutive times dating back to Jan. 17, 1971.

It was that day the Colts downed Dalas 16-13 in Super Bowl V on a last-second field goal by Jim O'Brien.

Dallas is 5-3 in the series and beat the Colts 37-13, the last time the two teams met in 1981. Tony Dorsett rushed for 175 yards on 30 carries for the Cowboys.

Dorsett is happy to see the Colts, now based in Indianapolis, coming.

He hasn't rushed for 100 yards in 11 straight games dating back to last season.

"I think we are going to start running the ball better," said Dorsett. "The overtime victory over New Orleans is the shot in the arm we've needed. I think we became a team."

Dorsett needs 70 yards Sunday to become the sixth player in NFL history to rush for 9,000 yards.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said Dorsett is going to have a tough time getting it.

"The Colts are a very tough running ballclub," Landry said.

The 5-3 Cowboys, who came from behind to defeat New Orlean 30-27 in overtime Sunday night, are tied with Washington and St. Louis atop the National Conference Eastern Division.

The game marks the return of Danny White as the starting Cowboy quarterback. Ironically.

Spurs nip Lakers

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs, behind the 32-point performance of George Gervin and aggressive rebounding by Artis Gilmore, edged the Los Angeles Lakers 113-112 in a National Basketball Association game Saturday night.

The Spurs led 66-50 at the half and built the margin to 20 points in the third period.

Notre Dame avoids four-game losing streak, 30-22

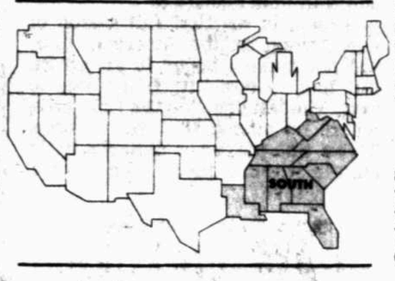

Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — Struggling Notre Dame, seeking to avoid its first four-game losing streak in 21 years, spotted LSU an early touchdown, then rallied on Steve Beuerlein's passing, Allen Pinkett's running and John Carney's three field goals to upset the seventh-ranked and previously unbeaten Tigers 30-22 Saturday.

Pinkett's one-yard run capped a nine-play, 79-yard drive as Notre Dame tied the score at 9:30 of the opening period and the junior tailback, who rushed for 162 yards and tied a school record with 40 carries, leaped over the top of the line from two yards out 28 seconds before halftime to give the Irish a 17-7 lead.

Carney's 44-yard field goal midway through the second period put Notre Dame in front to stay 10-7 and he kept the Irish safely ahead with field goals of 37 yards in the third quarter and 34 yards early in the final period. The last one came after Notre Dame used 14 plays in driving from its 17 to the LSU 16 after a 66-yard touchdown burst by Dalton Hilliard chopped the lead to 20-14. Hilliard finished with 118 yards on 13 carries.

The teams exchanged meaningless scores in the final minute, Mark Brooks running three yards for Notre Dame and LSU scoring with six seconds left on a 50-yard pass from Jeff Wickersham to Rogie Magee.

Auburn 24, Mississippi St. 21

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Freshman Robert McGinty kicked a 35-yard field goal on the game's final play to cap a 10-point Auburn rally in the final 4¼ minutes to lift the 12th-rated War Eagles to a 24-21 Southeastern Conference victory over Mississippi State.

Trailing 21-14, Auburn recovered a fumble at the Mississippi State 33-yard line with 4:21 to play, drove for the tying touchdown and extra point and then came back with a 21-yard march for the winning field goal.

Winning for the sixth straight time, Auburn pushed its record to 6-2 overall and 3-0 in the SEC, but twice had to come from 14-point deficits. Mississippi State fell to 3-5 and 0-3.

Maryland 43, Duke 7

DURHAM, N.C. — Stan Gelbaugh threw three touchdown passes in one half and running back Tommy Neal rushed for 122 yards and two scores as Maryland ripped Duke 43-7 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Gelbaugh, a 6-foot-3, 196-pounder from Carlise, Pa., completed 10-of-12 passes for 207 yards and touchdown passes of 15, 32 and 47 yards. Neal, a 5-10, 203-pound sophomore from Gaithersburg, Md., added a 54-yard run in the third period to his 15-yard scoring reception in the first half as the Terrapins gained 549 total yards, while holding the Blue Devils to 10 yards rushing and 203 total offense.

Clemson 35, N.C. State 34

RALEIGH, N.C. — Stacey Driver scored three touchdowns, two of them after North Carolina State turnovers, and Clemson held off the Wolfpack for a 35-34 Atlantic Coast Conference victory.

Henry Walls intercepted a Tim Esposito pass and returned it 12 yards to the Wolfpack 33. The Tigers, 5-2, cashed in the turnover four plays later on Driver's 2-yard run with 12:42 left in the third period. Donald Igwebuike added the conversion kick for a 28-24 lead.

Vince Evans fumbled one play after the ensuing kickoff and Jeff Wells recovered at the 11. Driver scored four plays later from 1 yard out with 10:41 left in the quarter for a 35-24 edge after Igwebuike's kick.

Tennessee 24, Georgia Tech 21

ATLANTA — Fuad Reveiz drilled a 22-yard field goal with 35 seconds remaining as Tennessee edged Georgia Tech 24-21.

Reveiz's 14th consecutive field goal capped an 80-yard drive in which the Vols converted a fourth-and-six situation on Tony Robinson's 31-yard pass to Jeff Smith that carried to the Tech 10.

John Dewberry scored on a two-yard keeper one play after Robert Lavette's 59-yard sprint as Georgia Tech battled back to tie Tennessee 21-21 earlier in the final quarter.

Vanderbilt 37, Mississippi 20

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Quarterback Kurt Page passed for two touchdowns and ran for another and freshman tailback Everett Crawford rushed for two more scores to lead Vanderbilt to a 37-20 homecoming victory over Southeastern Conference foe Mississippi.

The victory snapped a three-game losing streak for Vanderbilt, upping the Commodores' record to 5-3 overall and 2-2 in the SEC.

Mississippi, which has now dropped four games in a row, is 3-4-1 in all games and 0-3 in the conference.

The two teams battled to a 7-7 tie after one quarter before the Commodores ran off 15 straight points against a Mississippi defense that had been surrendering only 12.9 points a game.

Georgia 37, Kentucky 7

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Just one day after hobbling into Commonwealth Stadium on a cane, Georgia's Kevin Butler booted three field goals to boost the No. 13 Bulldogs to a 37-7 drubbing of Kentucky.

Georgia, 6-1 overall, improved to 4-0 in the Southeastern Conference football standings while Kentucky fell out of title contention at 5-2 and 1-2 in the league.

S. Carolina 42, E. Carolina 20

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Reserve quarterback Mike Hold passed for 210 yards and two touchdowns and Kent Hagood rushed for 118 yards and a touchdown to lead No. 9 South Carolina to a 42-20 victory over East Carolina and equal a school record seven-straight wins.

Flutie closing gap on offense record

Associated Press

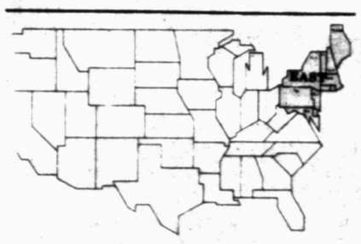

NEWTON, Mass. — Doug Flutie threw for three touchdowns, ran for another and moved to within 142 yards of becoming the NCAA's all-time total offense leader as 11th-ranked Boston College downed Rutgers 35-23 Saturday.

Flutie completed 21 of 30 passes for 318 yards and ran five times for 25 yards. He finished the football game with 9,582 career yards, second only to Jim McMahon of Brigham Young who holds the total offense record of 9,723 yards.

Flutie, who hurled touchdown passes of 35 yards to Troy Stradford, 29 yards to Kelvin Martin and 11 yards to Peter Casparriello, also jumped ahead of Tennessee State's Joe Adams and into fifth place with 8,937 career passing yards.

Boston College, 5-1, built a slim 14-10 lead on the passes to Stradford and Martin, which came one play after Tony Thurman's eighth interception of the season. Rutgers, 5-3, scored on Dan McHarris' 44-yard punt return and the first of Tom Angstadt's three field goals, a 34-yarder with 2:15 left in the second period.

But just 51 seconds after Angstadt's kick, Flutie capped a 6-play, 74-yard march with his pass to Casparriello that gave the Eagles a 21-10 halftime lead.

Navy 28, Pittsburgh 28

PITTSBURGH — Sophomore quarterback Bill Byrne scored a touchdown, threw for another and passed for a tying two-point conversion in an amazing 13-second span as Navy rallied from a 14-point deficit in the final 1:07 of play to gain a stunning 28-28 tie with Pittsburgh.

The Midshipmen trailed 28-14 before Byrne scored from a yard out with 1:07 remaining and Todd Solomon missed what proved to be a decisive placement kick that left Pitt holding a 28-20 lead.

Navy then recovered an on-side kick at the Pitt 46 and Byrne, eluding a heavy Pitt pass rush, quickly threw for 30 yards to Chris Weiler before finding John Lobb on a 16-yard scoring pass with 54 seconds remaining. Byrne then lofted a tying two-point conversion pass to running back Mark Stevens that touched off a wild celebration on the Midshipmen bench.

Syracuse 27, Army 16

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Mike Kmetz, a sophomore who never had taken a snap in a Syracuse game, came off the bench after two other quarterbacks were injured to guide the Orangemen to a 27-16 victory over Army.

Kmetz' storybook debut, which included a 19-yard run to set up the go-ahead touchdown and an 8-yard scoring run for the last points of the game, overshadowed a strong performance by Jaime Covington. The senior tailback surpassed the 2,000-yard career mark and ran for touchdowns of eight and seven yards and picked up 84 yards on 29 carries.

The Orangemen snapped a three-game losing streak and evened their record at 4-4 with the triumph, while their intrastate rival dropped to 4-2-1.

Richmond 45, VMI 3

RICHMOND, Va. — Quarterback Bob Bleier threw for 266 yards and two touchdowns and tailback Greg Grooms ran for two more scores as Richmond's Spiders administered a 45-3 thrashing to Virginia Military's Keydets.

Bleier, who left the game early in the final quarter, completed 19 of 28 passes with one interception and scoring strikes of 5 yards to wide receiver Leland Melvin and 32 yards on a screen to tailback Ricky Corey.

Colgate 35, Columbia 16

NEW YORK — Quarterback Steve Calabria passed for two touchdowns and ran for another to lead Colgate to a 35-16 victory over Columbia.

Calabria, who completed 18 of 29 passes for 322 yards, hit flanker Tom Stenglein with scoring passes of five and 37 yards in the first half and ran nine yards Colgate's final touchdown in the fourth quarter. Stenglein's ninth scoring reception of the season broke the Colgate record of eight set in 1970 by Steve Fraser and equaled in 1983 by Joe Kozak.

Maine 13, Connecticut 10 (OT)

STORRS, Conn. — Jack Leone booted a 25-yard field goal in overtime to give Maine a 13-10 Yankee Conference victory over Connecticut.

The kick came in Maine's first possession under the conference's tie-breaking system, in which each team alternates possession of the ball from the 15-yard line until a team scores.

Boston U. 31, Massachusetts 21

BOSTON — Senior tailback Paul Lewis became the first New England collegiate football player to run for more than 4,000 yards and set three other sectional records in leading Boston University to a 31-21 Yankee Conference victory over Massachusetts.

Although shaken up late in the first half, Lewis carried 38 times for 137 yards and two touchdowns, the 50th and 51st of his career. The old New England touchdown record was 49, scored by New Hampshire's Bill Burnham from 1975 to 1977. Lewis increased his career rushing yardage record to 4,003. The two touchdowns gave him 308 career points, breaking the New England record of 307, set by Myles Lane of Dartmouth in 1925-27.

Holy Cross 38, Brown 17

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Quarterback Peter Muldoon threw for 202 yards and three touchdowns as the nationally ranked Crusaders defeated Brown 38-17 for their seventh straight victory.

Muldoon connected on nine of 14 tosses for 202 yards as the Crusaders, ranked No. 2 in Division 1-AA play, boosted their record to 7-0. Brown fell to 3-3 for the season.

Penn 34, Yale 21

PHILADELPHIA — Quarterback John McGeehan passed for 222 yards and three touchdowns to lead Penn to 34-21 victory over Yale in the Ivy League.

The Penn Quakers, 5-1 and 4-0, opened the scoring on their first possession with a 72-yard pass play from McGeehan to wide receiver Jim O'Toole. McGeehan ended the opening period with his first of two touchdown passes to halfback Steve Ortman, a 2-yarder.

Bloomsburg 14, Kutztown 3

BLOOMSBURG, Pa. — Sophomare Jay Dedea completed 14 of 21 passes for 209 yards and two touchdowns as Bloomsburg handed Kutztown a 14-3 defeat in the Pennsylvania Conference.

Dallas re-signs Warren to punt

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have re-signed John Warren to handle punting duties in Sunday's game with the Indianapolis Colts, the team announced Saturday.

Team spokesman Greg Aiello said quarterback Danny White, who will start in Sunday's game, had a groin injury that prevented him from punting.

In order to make room on the roster for Warren, rookie linebacker Billy Cannon was placed on the injured reserve list, Aiello said. Cannon suffered a bruised spinal cord in last week's game with the New Orleans Saints and will be out for four weeks.

Middle linebacker Bob Bruenig, who suffered back spasms this week, has recovered and will start Sunday against the Colts, Aiello said.

Warren, who played with the Cowboys last season as a rookie from Tennessee, was released by the team this summer.

Sunday's game will not be televised locally. Aiello said 4,000 tickets remain and will go on sale at 10 a.m. Sunday at Texas Stadium.

won the district cross country title at Lee and the 23 points we scored was the lowest that I can ever remember being posted in this event. I'm really proud of these kids."

San Angelo finished second with 67 points while Midland High was third with 74. Others in order were Odessa High, Abilene Cooper, Abilene High and Big Spring.

The top performer for MHS was Valdeman Ruiz, who finished 12th with a 17:29 and teammate John Hernandez was 13th with a 17:41. Others were Eraclio Sanchez, 16th, 17:46; Sammy Venegas, 21st, 18:00; Felipe Suchil, 26th, 18:13; and Nayera, 32nd, 18:38.

Abilene High won the girls varsity division with 31 points while San Angelo was second with 47 and Big Spring third with 72.

San Angelo's Cindy McClure was the top girl with a 12:54. The top runner for Midland High was Christian Gribble, placing seventh with a 14:09. Other MHS runners were Ursula Bryant, eighth, 14:10; Betsy Woodruff, 14th, 15:02; and Reyna Elida, 18th, 15:35. The Bulldog girls did not compete for the team title with five runners and Lee had no varsity competitors.

There was no team title awarded in the girls JV division, but Odessa High's Tammy Batson won top honors with a 16:01 while Lee's Shelia Hundley was second with a 17:12.

San Angelo won the boys JV division, two points better than OHS and four better than Cooper. However, Lee's Danny Wheeler won the event with an 18:08 and Midland High's Jose Hernandez was third with an 18:45. Neither Lee or MHS competed for the team title. Other MHS JV runners were Wurtz, ninth, 19:43; Jesus Lopez, 11th, 19:58; and Larry Sandez, 15th, 20:39.

The top two boys and girls teams and top five individuals earn berths to the Region I cross country meet next week in Lubbock at Mae Simmons Park, where state berths can be earned. The Region I meet, which will feature runs in all classifications for both girls and boys, will begin at 9 a.m.

HOGS

The Cougars, who have not scored a touchdown against the Razorbacks in three years, dropped from the SWC unbeaten ranks with a 3-1 record and 4-3 for the year. Arkansas is 4-2-1 and 2-2.

Taylor was plagued by three interceptions and left the game with a bruised knee cap after making the tackle on his third interception toss late in the third quarter.

The senior from Danville, Ark. did not return to the game but he had already staked the Razorbacks to a 14-3 lead on an 11 yard first quarter run by Marshall Foreman and Taylor's five-yarder in the second quarter.

Taylor finished with 10 completions on 16 attempts for 130 yards.

Greg Horne added a 24-yard field goal for the Hogs with 7:58 left in the game.

The Arkansas defense also played a key role in handing the Cougars their first SWC loss by coming up with five Cougar turnovers.

Arkansas' offense could take advantage of only one of the turnovers however, after receiving the ball at the Houston 41, 17, 26 and nine yard lines. Kevin Wyatt's interception of a pass by Houston's Gerald Landry set up Foreman's first quarter touchdown.

Wyatt picked off his second interception with seconds remaining in the game giving Houston six turnovers for the day.

Houston's only scoring came on a 33-yard field goal by Mike Clendenen in the second quarter.

TCU

DESPITE THEIR scant 20-14 halftime lead, the Bears rolled up 368 yards to TCU's 162 in the first 30 minutes and for the day finished with 556 yards in total offense to the Frogs' 435.

Overall, Muecke hit 28 of 55 passes for 362 yards, second best in Baylor history, but the Frogs picked off three passes in the fourth quarter to keep the game under control.

The Bears struck for 10 quick points on the Muecke-to-Stockemer pass and Jimmerson's 29-yard field goal.

Muecke hit four passes for 33 yards in the TD drive and got off a 14-yard shot in the second scoring effort.

Anthony Gulley, before yielding to Sciraffa in the second quarter, drove the Frogs 82 yards in 8 plays for the first TCU score. His 23-yard pass to flanker Keith Burnett preceded the 20-yard scoring burst by Davis.

Baylor spent the next 10 minutes flirting with the TCU end zone, once gambling and losing on a fourth-down pass at the Frog 2, and came away with only Jimmerson's second field goal.

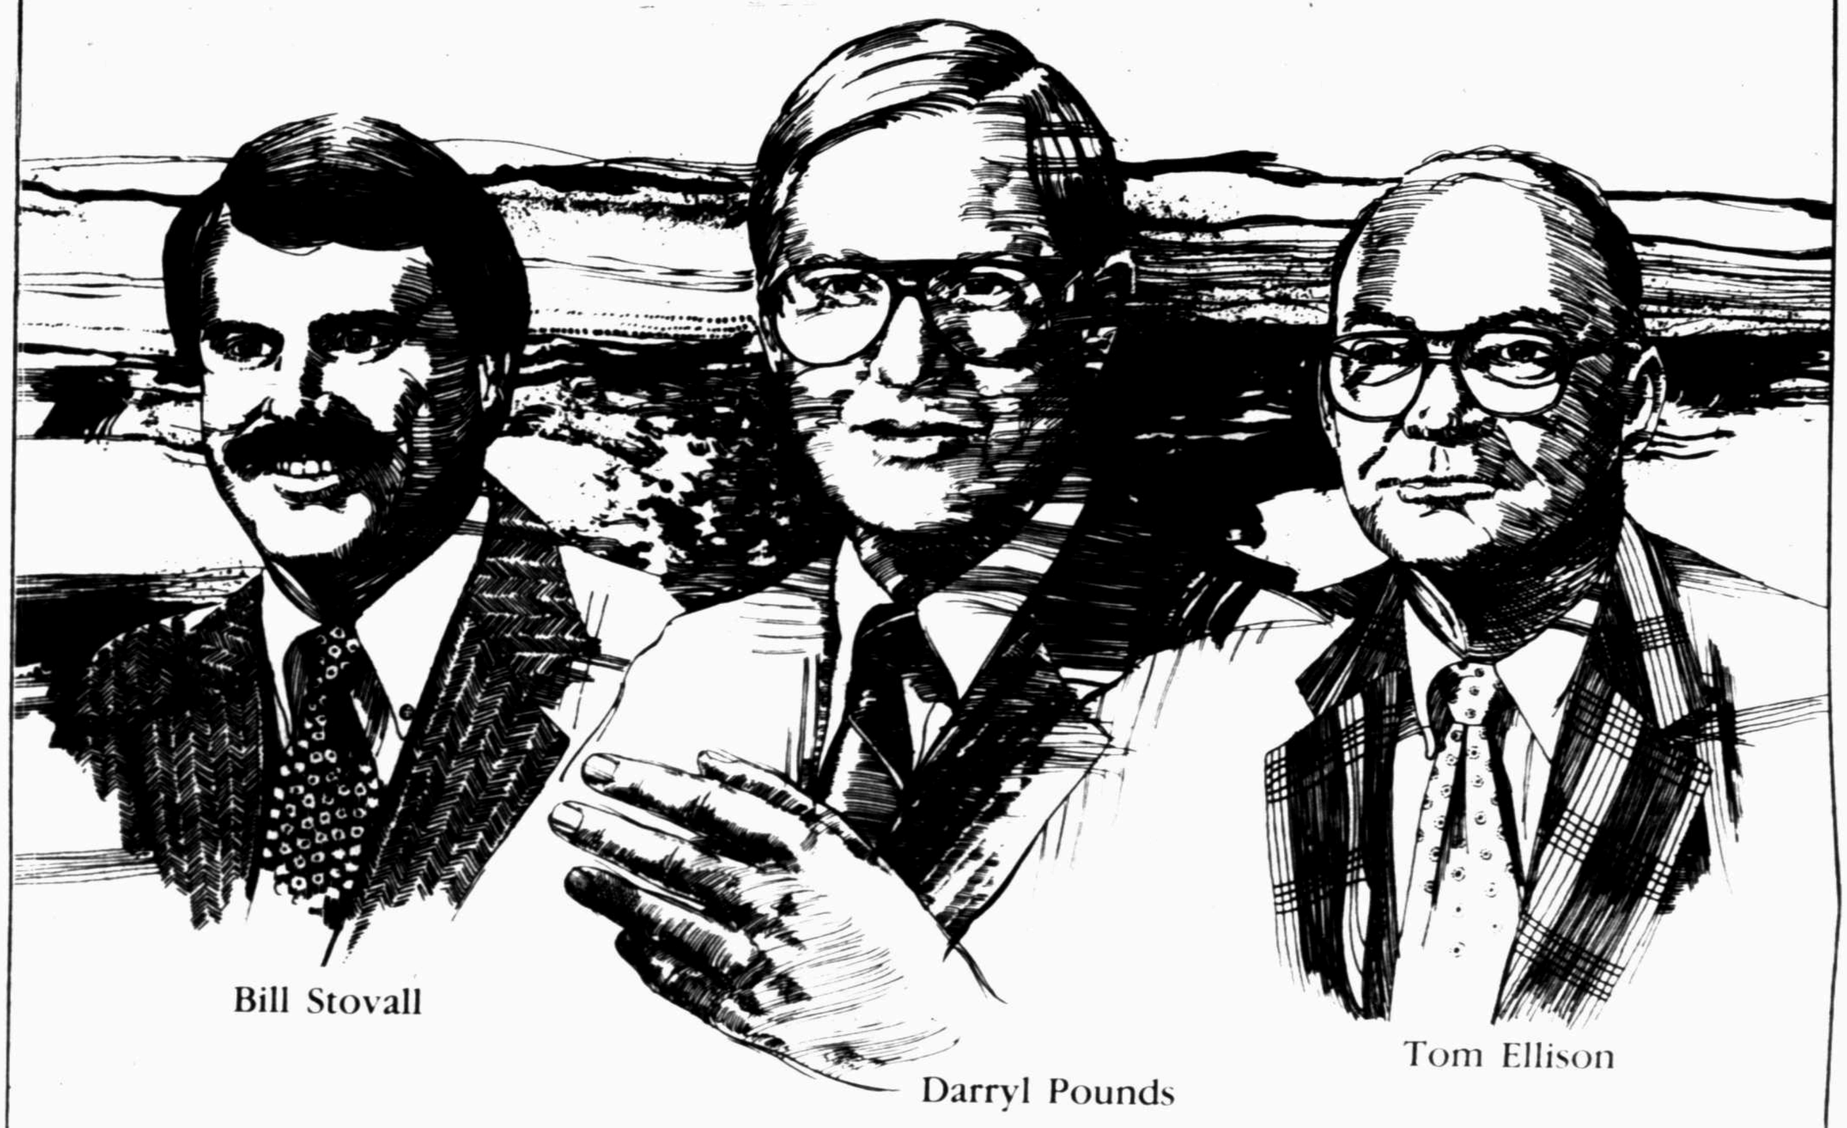

The Frogs then seized a 14-13 lead on the 60-yard run by Davis, who raced down the left sideline after a last-second pitchout from Sciaraffa.

Racing against time, Muecke took Baylor airborne 80 yards in 11 plays to regain the lead, with the big yardage coming on Matt Clark's receptions of 24, 18 and 24 yard. The payoff pitch to Pruitt came with eight seconds left in the first half.

For TCU, Sciaraffa returned from the injury list in a frenzy, hitting on 8 of 14 passes for 167 yards and the touchdown toss to Sharp.

He was at the controls when TCU moved 91 yards for the go-ahead TD and went on to direct scoring drives of 82, 76 and 16, the latter after Gerald Taylor's pass interception return to the Bear 17.

'Yes' on three

Eight amendments to the Texas Constitution will be put before voters Nov. 6th. Four of the proposals — Amendments 1, 2, 7 and 8 — are more significant than the others, in our opinion, and should get priority consideration by the state's voters.

Those four amendments are the focus today, while the other four will be dealt with Monday.

Amendment No. 1

After talking with numerous banking officials and legislators, we believe this proposal should get the approval of voters. What it provides, in effect, is a strengthening of the historically significant dual banking system in the state, by giving to state-chartered banks the same rights and privileges now enjoyed and exercised by national banks.

Local banking officials say the provisions in the amendment are needed to bring state-chartered banks onto equal footing with national banks. They also say the loosening of long-prohibited banking practices such as drive-in teller windows, electronic transfer machines and bank holding companies has moved banking into the 1980s and with the trend to such convenience features for customers the change is needed to allow state banks to compete on an equal basis.

Additionally, although it is staunchly opposed in the state, if a move to allow an expansion of current practices now prohibited under federal laws governing branch banking ever succeeds, this amendment would allow state-chartered banks to compete on an equal basis with national banks.

On the ballot, the amendment will read: "The constitutional amendment to provide state banks the same rights and privileges as national banks."

Amendment No. 2

This amendment, which would re-establish and re-structure the permanent university fund is heavily supported by college and university personnel. A previous permanent funding provision was lost earlier this decade and in the interim, colleges and universities — a number of them in this region — have been required to compete for construction funding during legislative sessions.

What this amendment would do, supporters argue, is to dedicate $100 million a year of the state's general revenue for the purposes of constructing and equipping buildings and making other permanent improvements at various colleges and universities around the state. The funds could not be used for student housing, athletics or auxiliary enterprises, but could be used for purchases of capital equipment, library books or library materials.

Area colleges and universities that would benefit from approval of the amendment include the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, Angelo State University at San Angelo, Sul Ross State University at Alpine and Texas Tech University at Lubbock.

Some of those who oppose the amendment argue that with college enrollments dropping, there is no longer a need for such funding. We disagree. We believe it would again implement an intelligent, logical manner of planning for future college needs.

On the ballot the amendment will read: "The constitutional amendment to create from general revenue a special higher education assistance fund for construction and related activities, to restructure the permanent university fund, and to increase the number of institutions eligible to benefit from the permanent university fund."

Amendment No. 7

The State Commission on Judicial Conduct was created by constitutional amendment in 1965 and, in effect, considers complaints against judges and other judicial officials. This amendment would alter to a degree the make-up of the commission and provide additional authority for dealing with judicial officials who overstep the bounds of their authority.

While some potential drawbacks to this change have been heard from some quarters, we believe it's good because it further strengthens the ability of the commission to deal with judicial misconduct. Voters would be wise to support it.

On the ballot the amendment will read: "The constitutional amendment relating to the membership of the State Commission on Judicial Conduct and the authority and procedure to discipline active judges, certain retired and former judges, and certain masters and magistrates of the courts."

Amendment No. 8

This amendment proposes an increase in the per diem expense allowable to members of the Legislature while they are in session, in addition to their regular legislative salary.

Currently, legislators receive $600 per month during the entire term to which they are elected. The daily expense allottment is an additional $30 a day for each day they are in session, regardless of actual expenses.

The proposal is to not set any particular per diem increase but, rather, to set it at the maximum deduction allowed under federal income tax law for a state legislator's ordinary and necesssary expenses. That amount is determined each Jan. 1.

Those arguing in favor of it point out that the proposal would eliminate the need to keep adjusting the amount every so often by the constitutional amendment process.

While we agree wholeheartedly that the per diem allowable for legislators needs to be increased (it hasn't been changed since 1975), we don't believe that this is the proper vehicle to make the adjustment since it could result in an unrealistic increase. Some opponents to the amendment argue that the proposal would increase the current per diem payment of approximately $900 a month in addition to salary to an estimated $2,250 a month and with it tied to the federal guidelines it feasibly could even go higher in the future.

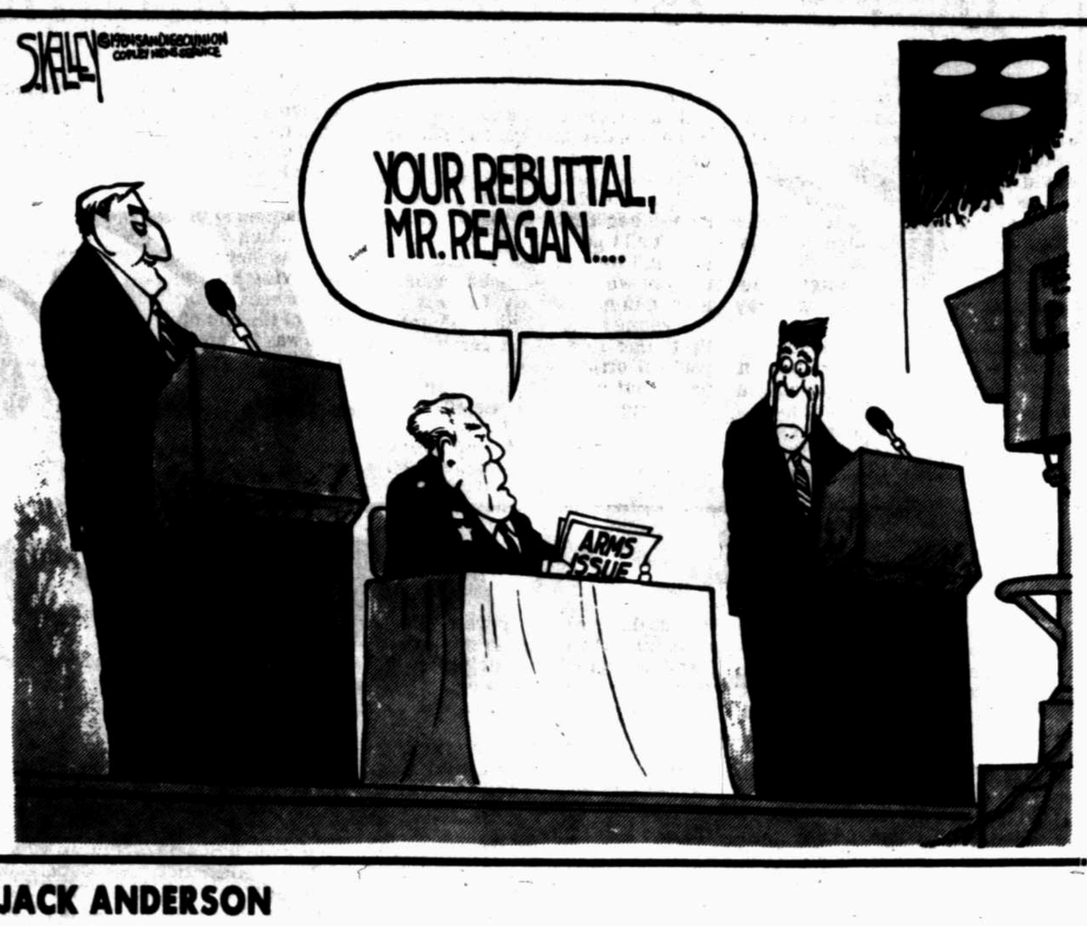

We urge voters to reject this proposal, but encourage the legislators to make an alternate proposal next time around.

Soviets testing 'terror weapons'

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union's pitiless testing of deadly weapons on native populations has evoked memories of the Nazis' still-unpunished arch-criminal, Dr. Josef Mengele.

Jack Anderson

Some who have conducted autopsies on the victims say the comparison may not be farfetched. But the Nazi doctor's grisly experiments were confined to one ghastly "laboratory" at Auschwitz; the Marxist Mengeles have plied their lethal trade around the world for a decade or more.

The Soviets have tested and perfected bombs that look like toys in Afghanistan, umbrella-fired poison pellets in London, "yellow rain" in Indochina and sophisticated torture techniques in Latin America. Like their Nazi counterparts, the Soviet weapons-testers carry out their experiments on helpless human guinea pigs.

And like the Nazis, the Soviets take meticulous notes on their experiments, sending experts out in the field where the "live testing" has been conducted. Sometimes the after-action analysts are white-smocked scientists; at other times they are KGB agents or high-ranking uniformed officers dispatched specially from Moscow. They do their work with a cold, dispassionate ruthlessness that Mengele would envy.

A particularly appalling example of the Soviets' coldblooded callousness was contained in a top-secret National Security Agency report reviewed by my associate Dale Van Atta. It told of the Soviets' effort to sell the Indian army one of the new Soviet artillery pieces. The Russians invited a delegation of Indian military officers to visit Afghanistan and to watch the new gun in action against Afghan guerrillas. The Indians declined.

For nearly five years now, Afghanistan has been the Soviet military machine's bloody proving ground. Except for an occasional skirmish with the Chinese, or the quick suppression of civilian uprisings in Eastern Europe, the war in Afghanistan has offered the Soviet high command its first opportunity to test men and weapons in combat since World War II.

The weapons tried out in Afghanistan range from trucks built with American technology at the Kama River plant in the Soviet Union to Mi-24 helicopter gunships, used in both combat and police actions. The high-speed choppers can fire 6,000 rounds a minute and carry sophisticated gear for spotting targets on the barren hillsides where the Afghan guerrillas hide out.

A top-secret CIA report notes that until the Vietnam War, Soviet helicopters were "somewhat crude and aerodynamically inefficient, (lacking) the speed and maneuverability required for armed combat assault." But the Soviets observed the deadly effects of U.S. helicopters in Vietnam and came up with the Mi-24. Its crews began training in 1975, and have been perfecting their killing skills in Afghanistan since the 1979 invasion.

But as they have become bogged down in Afghanistan, the Soviets have resorted to less conventional weapons to discourage the guerrillas and cow their supporters in the villages. They have used chemical weapons to kill the rebels and poison their water supply, and they have dropped so-called "butterfly" mines in fields and roads.

The airdropped mines are usually disguised as animal manure or clumps of vegetation. But the Soviets' Mengelian scientists have also devised miniature mines that are imbedded in stuffed animals and other toys, the CIA reports. Such mini-mines are not always lethal, but they can blow away an arm or leg of an Afghan child tempted to pick one up.

In Laos, more than 20,000 Hmong tribesmen have died in the relentless bombardment of Soviet chemical agents, a variety of chemicals popularly lumped together as "yellow rain." For once, the Soviets knew the toxic effects of the chemicals before they used them on the Hmong. They had already tested them on their own people.

A secret CIA report describes the specific tests of yellow rain substances done on prisoners in Soviet prison camps since World War II:

"Soviet toxicity studies in humans involved addition of various doses of the toxic material to ground meat which was then fed to political prisoners, and the course of development of toxic effects was monitored."

For its urban battlefields — the sites for political assassination and similar terrorist attacks — the KGB prefers reliable, well-tested poisons that leave the appearance of a heart attack. For example, Soviet scientists first tested a potassium cyanide spray on dogs tied to trees. When perfected, the deadly spray was used to assassinate a Ukrainian emigre in Munich; the spray gun was hidden in a rolled-up newspaper.

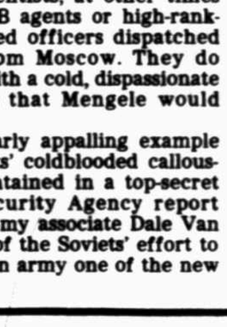

In London, a Bulgarian emigre was killed in 1978 with a ricin-laced poison pellet injected by the tip of an umbrella. He appeared to have suffered a heart attack. Another Bulgarian anti-communist survived an identical attack a little later because the pellet had been slowed by his heavy sweater and the poison hadn't been released.

BIG issues not even talked now

WASHINGTON — If you are easily entertained — if you are the sort of person who sees drama in the sight of, say, a small mailman delivering a big package — we are ending 12 months of golden memories. My favorite is of Gary Hart describing how, if a Czech airliner penetrated U.S. airspace heading for the air-defense center in Colorado Springs, he would order interceptors to peek in the windows to see if the passengers were wearing uniforms. But among the other fascinating features of these 12 months have been things left unsaid, or said and then soon abandoned.

George F. Will

Twelve months ago, seven Democrats (Jesse Jackson had not yet entered the Syrian primary; can you name the seven?) were elbowing one another and stepping on each other's insteps in the struggle to see who would break his lance against Ronald Reagan. A presidential commission — announcing a crisis, of course — had all the candidates rattling on about one issue. What was it? Education, the decline and fall thereof. But that issue was worn out by Thanksgiving, and little has been heard about it since, for two reasons.

First, saturation journalism, especially on television, quickly wears out most issues, or at least the public's interest in them. Some issues are more durable than others. It took two weeks to beat into a shapeless pulp the Good-Lord-(If-You-Will-Pardon-the-Expression)-Religion-and-Politics-Are-Getting-Tangled-Up-In-This-Nation-Begun-By-Pilgrims issue.

But another reason the education issue withered is that the electorate is smarter than it was even a decade ago. It knows that education always has been, is today, should be, and will for the foreseeable future remain, primarily the responsibility of state and local governments, and will be influenced only marginally by federal decisions.

The same is true of another issue that, you may have noticed, is no longer noticeable as a national issue. Last year, in one out of every five households, someone suffered an assault, burglary, larceny, rape or robbery. Few of the criminals involved were or will be caught, and fewer will be prosecuted, and fewer still will be convicted. In California, where one-tenth of the electorate lives (lives anxiously, evidently), a reliable poll reveals that crime is now the foremost concern. Yet crime has not been an issue in the presidential campaign.

One reason is that crime is declining. For the first time in 20 years the crime rate has declined in two consecutive years. That fact has, naturally, caused the administration to puff out its chest and point with pride. Never mind that, as conservatives know, and if they were out of office would be quick to proclaim, the decline has little to do with government action at any level and almost nothing to do with federal action. It has a lot to do with demography. There is a decline in the crime rate because there is, at the moment, a decline in the number of young men between the ages 16 and 25.

The phrase "demography is destiny" contains much truth, including the conservative truth that social dynamics often govern life more than government does. But that truth sometimes limits the ability to brag.

However, the main reason crime is not an issue is not that the crime rate has changed. It is that the electorate has changed. It recognizes that federal policy is peripheral to the problem.

Like the issues that are not, as November nears, issues, another interesting aspect of this election is a regional bonanza that is not sure to materialize. If, as seems likely, Republicans retain control of the Senate, that will be the worst defeat for the South since the Army of the Potomac completed the siege of Petersburg.

If Democrats recapture the Senate, these Southerners would acquire (in some cases re-acquire) committee chairmanships: Mississippi's John Stennis, Appropriations; Louisiana's Russell Long, Finance; Georgia's Sam Nunn, Armed Services; Florida's Lawton Chiles, Budget: South Carolina's Fritz Hollings, Commerce; Louisiana's J. Bennett Johnston, Energy; Texas' Lloyd Bentsen, Environment and Public Works.

The only chairmanships the South would lose are those held by Republicans Strom Thurmond of South Carolina (Judiciary) and Jesse Helms of North Carolina (Agriculture). Helms' re-election is in doubt in any case. If you count Kentucky as part of the South, Democratic capture of the Senate would keep the Agriculture chairmanship in the region, with Kentucky's Walter Huddleston. But correct thinkers do not count Kentucky as part of the South, that state having behaved reasonably well in those days when Lincoln said he hoped to have God on his side but had to have Kentucky.

ART BUCHWALD

Weapon worth 'walk in woods!'

The telephone in the Kremlin rang after last Sunday's debate.

"Is Ivan, at the Soviet Embassy in Washington. I have to speak to Comrade Chernenko immediately."

Art Buchwald

"Have you gone mad, Ivan? Do you know what time it is in Moscow and how old Chernenko is?"

"Age is not issue in presidential campaign in United States."

"It is here and I'm not going to wake Chernenko up. What do you have to report?"

"Reagan has offered to develop a star wars weapon to make every nuclear missile in the world obsolete, and then turn it over to the Soviet Union."

"Ivan, how much vodka did you drink tonight?"

"Is absolutely true what I am telling you. I am sending a videotape by diplomatic pouch tomorrow morning."

"Tell me precisely what Reagan said."

"I don't have exact words, but in answer to a reporter's question on star wars, the president said if Americans develop weapon that makes nuclear missiles obsolete, he would go to us and say, 'Look, here's what we can do. We'll even give it to you. Now will you sit down with us, once and for all, and get rid of all your nuclear weapons?'"

"Ivan, I think you need a rest. Maybe a few months in the Lenin Heroes' Sanitarium will do you a world of good."

"I'M NOT CRAZY. I HEARD IT WITH MY OWN EARS."

"Lower your voice, the FBI could hear you. What did Mondale say?"

"He said Reagan WAS crazy."

"Did Reagan explain exactly what this weapon is?"

"He said he hadn't roundtabled it with the chiefs of staff."

"What does it mean, he hadn't roundtabled it?"

"I don't know. I guess it meant president hadn't sat down and discussed it with military. He said at the moment the weapon is just dream, to do away with all nuclear weapons. He doesn't know what kind it should be or even where it should be placed, because he's not a scientist. But he thinks world would be better off if the United States had one."

"You say he doesn't have weapon, but he's offering to give it to us, once Americans build it?"

"That's what I'm trying to tell you. We don't have to pay one ruble for super bomb."

"Will Mondale give it to us too?"

"No, he said he wouldn't, because he doesn't trust us."

"Mondale said he didn't trust us?"

"What else could he say? He's 15 points behind in polls."

"I'm writing all this down. How much did Reagan tell such weapon cost?"

"He didn't, but Mondale say a trillion dollars."

"And Reagan not get mad?"

"I don't think so. He was much relaxed than he was in first debate."

"So tell me, Ivan, what are you really calling about?"

"I want to know what our response should be."

"To what?"

"Reagan's offer to give us the secret of his weapon to destroy all nuclear weapons in the world."

"Tell the American press when the United States gets it built, and Reagan gives demonstration, we take a walk in woods and think it over."

Politicians have lost touch with their constituents

Modisett

This is the season of the politician — complete with a never-ending barrage of political ads that spew forth from the airwaves and the pages of daily newspapers, mini-debates (better known as political forums) at which candidates take turns picking each other apart and rallies intended to get those in attendance literally rabid about this or that politico.

Keep in mind, though, this exercise in blood-letting is fun.

A visitor to this country, unschooled in the ways of the American political system, likely would be shocked by the fierceness of this process. Uncertain what he was seeing as he watched the progression of a campaign, the visitor might ask: "What is this?"

A helpful American might nonchalantly reply, "Oh, this is the way we pick our leaders."

Hmmm! That's food for thought.

After watching the evolution of American politics for 20 years, I'm convinced the system has lost a measure of the sophistication that graced it in days gone by. In the loss of that degree of sophistication, politics also has lost much of its charm.

If that's the case, and I believe it is, no wonder politics isn't fun anymore.

My first political memory dates back to the third grade. If you can remember that far back, politics wasn't all that dominant in your life. It wasn't in mine, either, and I can't tell you why this particular moment is vivid in my memory. But it is.

A young man traveling the state at that time in a quest for his first political office came to town. Campaign buttons and literature were distributed and I got one of the buttons. I heard the man speak.

When you're that young, particular events can make a lasting impression. I pinned that campaign button on my shirt and wore it for days until the thrill wore off. I kept the button for years after that, but I don't have it anymore.

I wish I did. The year was 1961 and the campaign button that so held my fascination was that of John Tower. He was elected, of course, and now is serving his final days as a United States senator since he retired effective at the end of this session.

It was in those days, I believe, that politics in general — and particularly in Texas — was at a high point. During that time politicians still traveled the state extensively, making personal contacts and not merely relying on the communications revolution to carry their story to the voters. That was the time when the voters got to know a politician; politicians walked down the sidewalk, shook hands with voters, kissed babies and talked about making life better for the everyday person. Voters could identify with them; voters felt the politicians were "one of them."

Maybe that's why the political process seems so harsh and unforgiving today. We are living in an electronic world in which people are relegated to nothing more than numbers. They are a telephone number, a Social Security number, a voter registration number.

That's a shame because the political process is so vital to the American way of life. Politicians should reflect that value through their concern for people and the political process.

Adlai Stevenson, who was a Democratic nominee for president in the 1950s, once said: "I'm not an old, experienced hand at politics. But I am seasoned enough to have learned that the hardest thing about any political campaign is how to win without proving that you are unworthy of winning."

Politicians today should heed his words.

City should support Lee Rebels Band

It seems to me that entirely too much criticism of the Lee High School Band has taken place lately. It is said they don't play enough during games, their field routines are always the same, etc., etc., etc.; but, as I took my child this morning at 6:45 a.m. and was driving by the marching field in pitch dark, I could see those forms as "dark soldiers" standing ready to attack another day of practice for the sole purpose of supporting the Rebels and entertaining the Rebel fans. Have you walked outside at 7 a.m. lately? Well, it's dark folks! And damp and cold; but, they are out there working hard!

Many afternoons are spent in practice sessions, sectional rehearsals and private lessons to insure increased quality of sound and musical ability. These are all a part of the band students' week. And, how about that performance in Odessa in the pouring rain! Those uniforms are not very comfortable, at best, and soaking wet, they were unbearable. But, when the rain stopped, the band returned and dripping wet they played their hearts out.

So, let's stop criticizing and start supporting our band! A football game just isn't the same without them and they serve and have earned our respect and the respect of the entire school! Let's hear it for the Lee Rebel band!

Shelter can expand after successful sale

This is to thank the wonderful people who made our benefit garage sale for the homeless animals a success.

The new animal shelter is now in the process of expanding the facility to house more animals.

The shelter is a much needed facility for our homeless animals. It will give them an opportunity to be adopted into a new home when they become homeless. The shelter plans to work closely with the Midland Animal Control in placing homeless animals.

Your support is much needed and much appreciated. I thank you kind people for caring for the animals. If they could talk they would say thank you for a chance to make someone happy.

World's fair was educational and fun

It was great! We loved it!

On November 11 the 1984 Louisiana World Exposition will draw to a close, and the people of Louisiana should be commended for a high-level fair that was clean, informative, educational, and fun with a rich blend of food, music, history, culture and folklore. Louisiana is a distinctive and unique state, and the total flavor of this uniqueness permeates the colorful fairgrounds.

It's proximity to Texas should be an encouragement for all Texans to attend. Only three more weeks. I highly recommend it!

People don't need guns to kill each other

John Savage's letter concerning handgun statistics in the Oct. 21 Reporter-Telegram ended with "'Nuff Said." Wrong. Mr. Savage has unfortunately let himself fall into the trap of quoting misleading statistics without investigating their full meaning.

View the referenced statistics not in terms of gun control but instead in the degree of certainty that the person committing any violent crime has of being punished. People on this earth bent on violence have been cheerfully killing each other since long before Mr. Colt's birth.

Great Britian has an 83.5% homocide conviction rate and an 87.9% robbery conviction rate. Japan suffers no "plea bargain" and has a 99.5% violent crime conviction rate, with 98% of those convicted serving jail time. Switzerland even requires able-bodied men to keep automatic weapons and ammunition in their homes. In the United States, only 20 adults and five juveniles are jailed for every 500 serious crimes. Which country do you think will suffer more violent deaths, regardless of the weapon used?

Think again if you believe that firearm registration will stop crime by disarming criminals. It is a fact that a known felon cannot own a firearm. However, the U.S. Supreme Court has held that requiring a felon to register a firearm violates his Fifth Amendment rights against self-incrimination. So the only people that can be punished for not registering a firearm is the law-abiding citizen without a criminal record.

Ten Myths About Gun Control is a lucid and realistic examination of the facts, with in-depth statistical support and is available from the National Rifle Association by calling (202)828-6250. This pamphlet explodes supposed data placed before the public by the various anti-groups. It makes good, solid reading.

Day care centers vulnerable targets in today's society

By MARY ANN RANGEL

Mary Ann Rangel has been a resident of Midland five years. A native of Lubbock, she is the owner of Wee Share Day Care.

As a result of the current revolution of numerous and what appears to be never-ending articles in newspapers, our day care centers have become a vulnerable target for today's society.

Parents are now accusing us of rather bizarre actions and demanding a lot more out of directors and staff. But what's funny is that some of these accusations have now stemmed from anonymous complaints made to the Texas Department of Human Resources, our licensing agency. The agency, in turn, comes rushing forth, without warning, to investigate the situation without any proven facts or evidence, which they use against us.

Some of these silly complaints are "made up" by parents who never pay their bills or maybe get into an argument with the director or staff member about their child's behavior. Others are complaints by your own friends and day care centers that are jealous or envious of you because they would like to be as strong-willed as we are to do the line of work we're doing. But most of the other nasty complaints come from former employees who are still bitter over getting fired.

It could take a year before those individuals forgive us, but they may turn in a complaint once a month over the phone using a different name.

When we get reported, we are never told who turned in the complaint, so we're in the dark. We don't know who to blame or who to protect ourselves from. I sincerely feel that DHR should not waste its time investigating day care centers unless it has a complaint filed in person and stated on paper in the complainant's own handwriting. Anyone can pick up the phone and make an anonymous phone call. They should get some sort of proof to base their complaint on. Who is being protected here?

If anyone should be investigated, it should be the unlicensed "home" child care providers. They don't have to pay taxes. They don't have to follow any rules or regulations. They aren't checked by DHR. Who investigates them? Nobody.

If parents are concerned about their child-care providers, then they should do some checking around, drop-in unexpectedly, ask friends for recommendations, check if the prospective providers are licensed, find out what hours they are open, how many people are on the staff and so forth. Get personal with them!

After all, it is your child you are leaving in the care of these centers. After your child has been there a week or so, take note of any unusual changes in your child's behavior and attitude. Does he/she seem unhappy or do you see that he/she loves coming to the door when you drop them off. Set up conferences with the director and ask how your child is doing. Inform the center of any problems at home that may affect the behavior of your child.

Cooperation is the key to the problem we face. We must work together. A child's development is at stake here.

Let's not ruin him or her for life.

Readers' views on: Sheriff's race

Ex-secretary offers perspective on race

As former secretary to the Sheriff of Midland County, I had the opportunity to work closely with Dallas Smith. The nature of my work made me privy to many details of his personal and professional life. With great consternation I have read about developments in the race for Sheriff in Midland County; I wish to offer my perspective on Dallas Smith.

Professionally, I admired Mr. Smith for his extreme dedication to his work and was amazed at the countless hours he devoted to his work. He respects his employees regardless of rank, and is relentless in his efforts to make the Sheriff's department innovative and progressive. Dallas Smith is attentive to the details of the position, yet keeps his perspective; he is decisive and efficient. What I found most notable about Mr. Smith, however, was frankly what I least expected to find in a high-ranking public official, namely, his concern for the individual — regardless of social or economic status. Mr. Smith gives his careful consideration to every problem that confronts him, his policy is absolutely open-door; I referred many calls to his home whenever necessary.

On a more personal level, I remember that in beginning my work in the department, I was a total stranger to Midland. Sheriff Smith helped me establish myself in Midland thus facilitating my transition to my new job. When he learned that I was bilingual, he expanded my duties as his secretary, I worked also as translator and interpreter. This move was positive both for me as well as the department. He knows his employees' abilities and uses them to their best advantage — a trenchant example of both insight and foresight.

I returned to Illinois to pursue graduate studies, but I wholeheartedly wish I were a Midland voter on Nov. 6th. I sincerely hope that Midlanders will carefully check the incumbent's record in office before casting their vote. There is no doubt in my mind, that they can ill-afford to lose Dallas Smith as Sheriff.

Smith did not work with clerk's office

As a former employee of Midland County for 17½ years in the District Clerk's office, 10 years as chief deputy clerk, I feel that I should speak out in reference to the sheriff's race.

I retired three years ago this September. I was there five years after Dallas Smith was elected sheriff. In relation to our office we did not have the cooperation of Dallas Smith in carrying out his duties as the sheriff. Our office is one of the most important offices in the county and we were stymied in carrying out our duties.

The sheriff's office is the same as other offices in county government. When elected to head that office you need experience, or at least to keep some of the employees who did know the duties. Only two remained in the sheriff's office under duress because they needed to stay to get their retirement. The dissension was unbelievable. I can say we might not have had uniforms or marked cars; we did have a competent sheriff's office.

Gary Painter has told you of his qualifications and experience. He was elected overwhelmingly in the primary. I don't think he should be penalized for the feud between Dallas Smith and Chief Wayne Gideon.

If you want a man of knowledge and capabilities to be your sheriff, don't split the Republican ticket.

Voters should look at qualifications

I have been a resident of Midland for over 25 years and this is the first time I have felt the need to write to the editor of this newspaper. I'm tired of reading all the "at-a-boy" letters for Dallas Smith and Gary Painter.

As a Republican and a businessman who is extremely concerned about our local sheriff's race, I have looked past all the publicity and "five easy steps" to voting. I feel each of us should stop placing so much emphasis on the "party" and pay more attention to the man and his qualifications. For many years our county was well served by Sheriff Ed Darnell. I am one of those many Republicans who supported and voted for Mr. Darnell with no concern about him being a Democrat. Maybe our county would be better served by a non-partisan sheriff's election.

It seems obvious that a man who has worked with our city police department for 19 years would have no problem working cooperatively with the Midland Chief of Police and his entire department; a man who has a background of law enforcement which includes undercover narcotics understands more about establishing an effective narcotics division for the Midland County Sheriff's Department; a man who has a background as a detective possesses the insight into solving crimes.

In my opinion, Joe Carr is the only candidate who commands this degree of experience and I for one am pleased that a man with his background and experience wants to be the sheriff of Midland County. All the registered voters of Midland would do well to take the time and evaluate the candidates based on experience, knowledge, stability and dependability.

Debate may have been draw, but Reagan clear winner

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — The returns are in, and have been scrutinized for the meaning at home and abroad, of the second and last debate between President Reagan and Democratic challenger Walter Fritz Mondale. On a strict non-partisan consensus, it was a draw but Mondale needed a mammoth victory to help him close the gap so near Election Day with a universally popular president. President Reagan's enormous appeal to the electorate is so great that ex-President Jimmy Carter conceded the other day the hopelessness of Mondale's task. The former president should know since he opposed then Republican candidate Reagan with Fritz Mondale as a running mate in 1980 and lost badly.

During last Sunday evening's debate and ever since, Mondale decided on his own to mock President Reagan for huge military outlays. In this context, the former Vice President also belittled President Reagan's support for an operational anti-ballistic missile system which critics describe in their own shorthand as "star wars." We have conducted two successful tests in space but lots more research must be done before our system can be fully operational.

MONDALE SCOFFED at the potential cost of the full-scale program, which he claimed couldn't be successful for ages. For his part, President Reagan rebutted this view, saying that the alternative was the nuclear standoff "MAD," spelled out as Mutual Assured Destruction. That concept, asserted the president, could convince an aggressor to try a quick first strike nuclear attack against us.

William Safire wrote a penetrating column on the issue recently in The New York Times. He pilloried the doubters of the system and wondered why Mondale employed what he hoped would rally critics to his side as "militarizing the heavens." It's not that way at all, even in trying to feint your opponent into a knockout opening in politics. You see, space defense can make it possible for the superpowers, as the world's nuclear police, to spot a missile in space and knock it out before it reaches land and causes a holocaust.

I know that I have written about and endorsed this proposal by the president long before it was raised in debate. It's a complicated program but I firmly believe in what my Pop wrote many years ago for The Hearst Newspapers which concluded with: "Our object, therefore, is not to enquire whether a thing can be done, but whether it ought to be done, and if it ought to be done, to so exert the forces of publicity that public opinion will compel it to be done."

IN THE give-and-take of debate, President Reagan had obviously precious little time to present all the finer points. A questoner from the panel asked if the president might be willing to have the Soviet Union join the United States in sharing our technology. Without hesitation, President Reagan declared that he would. Of course, the problem of verification arises, which is always at the heart of all arms control controversies.

Mondale said, no; he wouldn't turn over advanced American technology to the Soviets. Yet there he continues, demanding a freeze on nuclear weapons and scorning our ABM efforts while, by the way, the U.S.S.R. keeps on trying to get the first system going but, thank God, to date has failed. Should it meet with success first, the Soviets can and will blackmail the West into marching to their lockstep.

Our strategic ABM defensive system — the accent always is on defense — was conceived by Lt. Gen. Daniel O. Graham, U.S.A. (ret.), who didn't want Americans and our future generations living under the menace of a nuclear threat. He thought, logically, that there had to be a better way out of the nuclear stalemate into which we were pinned by MAD. Not a scientist himself, he assembled many who were and are and they worked toward a program.

DAN'S UNSELFISH, unstinting efforts brought him to the attention of President Reagan. Gen. Graham's project, called "High Frontier," was endorsed by the president last year and the Soviets have opposed it fiercely ever since in their desire to work out a made-in-Moscow monoply, if possible. To make the program substantive, President Reagan then appointed Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, USAF, to head the project and saw that initial budget requiremens were met.

In mentioning the above issues, I think it most odd that Mondale tried assiduously to depict himself as more of a take-charge commander-in-chief than President Reagan. He can't kid the American voters with such claims. Just look at the record of Election Day in 1980. It was inglorious. Our military was in sad shape and Central America seemed to be measured for a takeover by Nicaraguan Sandinistas. In less than four years, President Reagan rebuilt the armed forces. We are preserving Central America from Soviet-created upheavals aided by Cuba.

America stands tall again, not by threat as the Soviets exercise but by willingness to assist friends and allies in need of protection. We can cast a giant shadow where it matters. In debate and on the campaign trail, Mondale would like voters to believe that he could out-Reagan Reagan.

YOU CAN'T restore military morale and rebuild all our defense services without spending great amounts of money. President Reagan managed that in the shortest span of time while peace has prevailed. His is the record; the Carter-Mondale years, the dreadful wreckage.

Our allies in NATO clearly prefer President Reagan. They feel that their governments have a stake in the outcome of this election and recall with a shudder how nearly neo-isolationist the previous administration behaved toward them.

None of the allied governments are concerned, by the way, about the size of the American national deficit. They wonder aloud about how to improve the plight of their populations, approximately 250 million, the way essentially President Reagan managed. That's also the manner in which our allies hope to defend themselves.

If they could, the NATO countries would re-elect Reagan overwhelmingly. Where they're concerned, losers need not apply for office.

Gramm: White House closed to Doggett

LIBERTY (AP) — Republican Phil Gramm said Saturday that Texans need him in the U.S. Senate because President Reagan will be re-elected and Democrat Lloyd Doggett would be ineffective trying to work with the White House.

"My opponent could knock on the door of the White House until his knuckles bled and nobody would ever open that door," Gramm said.

"I think that's important in a campaign where we all know Ronald Reagan is going to be re-elected."

Gramm, in a speech to the Texas Association of Builders meeting in Austin and during campaign stops in Wharton, Liberty, Houston and Fort Worth, said the Reagan economic program that he co-authored is working.

Proof of that was the most recent drop in the prime lending rate, he said, telling the builders who gave him a standing ovation, "The applause is for me, but the standing was for the the drop in the prime."

Predicting that Reagan will carry Texas overwhelmingly on Nov. 6, Gramm said he has plenty of examples of how he has worked with Reagan.

When some congressmen began discussing a flat tax rate instead of an income tax code riddled with deductions, Gramm said he quickly went to Reagan to urge him to preserve the deduction allowed for home mortgage interest payments and donations to charity.

"I met with the president and talked about the importance of coming out early and strong to preserve mortgage interest deductibility and charitable deductions," Gramm said.

Reagan did, the Republican said, "And that's what I mean about being effective in working with the president on behalf of the people of Texas.

"When I knock on the president's door, that door is going to be opened. Our concerns are going to be heard. Our needs are going to be met."

Gramm said Doggett has voiced opposition to Reagan administration policies, and he repeatedly linked Doggett to Walter Mondale's tax increase plan.

However, he charged that Doggett is trying to hide from his record by using ads which accuse Gramm of favoring a flat tax plan that would eliminate the mortgage interest deduction and claiming that the Republican favors a so-called value added tax, in essence a national sales tax.

"That's role resversal," Gramm said.

"I'm the guy who went to Washington to cut taxes and did it. My opponent's the guy who went to the Legislature to raise taxes and did it.

"I've never voted for a general consumption (sales) tax in my life — never supported one. My opponent just voted to raise sales taxes as part of a $4.6 billion tax increase," Gramm said, referring the the Legislature's raising of the Texas sales tax to fund public school reforms.

Speaking to a rally of about 80 people at a Liberty bank, Gramm said he expects a tough race, but believes that an indication of his support is the number of financial contributions he has received from individuals.

Gramm said he has gotten money from some 60,000 people, "more individual contributions than any non-incumbent (candidate) in the history of this nation."

The Republican also said he sees no reason to amend his June 30 federal finance report in which his campaign reported no specific debt left over from the May 5 primary.

Doggett, noting that report and some $110,000 in contributions Gramm later accepted to pay primary debts, contends Gramm violated election law.

Pros: Focus shifting to Texas Senate race

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Top political leaders and consultants in Texas see President Reagan with a sizable lead in the vote-rich Lone Star state that may or may not last, but say the big contest developing is in the U.S. Senate race.

"The Lloyd Doggett-Phil Gramm race is very tight," said Ken Towery, former campaign manager for retiring Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, and now a political consultant in Austin.

Towery said he believes many Democrats have given up on the Walter Mondale-Geraldine Ferraro ticket in Texas, and have switched their enthusiasm and efforts to other Democratic candidates, particularly Doggett.

'Gramm is still ahead but it is just a question of by how much Reagan can carry Texas," said George Christian, a former White House press secretary who also is an Austin political consultant. "If Reagan can carry Texas by at least 10 points, it would be awfully hard for Doggett to win."

Most polls up to now show Reagan with a margin of about 20 percent in Texas, according to the continuing sample of expert opinion by The Associated Press.

Mondale has two more Texas trips scheduled, and Ferraro has a tentative date in Houston before the election.

"The race between Gramm and Doggett is close," said Texas Republican Party chairman George Strake. Gramm is still ahead but Doggett is hanging in there. We are hoping for a big win for Reagan so it will help Phil."

State Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle predicts Doggett will win on Mondale's coattails after a furious last minute vote-getting drive by Texas Democrats.

Texas Democrats could spend as much a $14 million in national party and state party funds to support Democratic nominees, Slagle said.

"Approximately 3 million to 4 million contacts will be made by our telephone banks by election day," Slagle said.

The state Democratic chairman says Reagan is still ahead in Texas "but we are closing rapidly."

"The Democrats say they are closing but they certainly are not closing fast," said Strake. "I'm amazed how little movement there is in the polls. The undecided vote is the smallest I have ever seen...After the second presidential debate, I think we have a chance to really do well in Texas, if there are no big shocks before the elections."

"So many people made up their minds early," said Christian. "This is one of those races where people decided early and don't want to change horses in midstream."

"Mondale has had trouble increasing his support because so many Democrats defected early," he said.

Christian added that he doubted if the 20 percent margin would stand. "I don't think it will be that big for Reagan," Christian said, "more like 55-45."

Judge rules Dallas must pay protesters' legal fees

DALLAS (AP) — The city of Dallas, already faced with paying $1.5 million for costs leftover from the Republican National Convention, has learned that it must pay legal fees to lawyers who represented two groups of protesters.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders ruled Friday that the city must pay $32,902 for lawyers who represented protest groups in two suits filed against the city before the convention.

Dallas Mayor Starke Taylor and other city officials said prior to the convention that the city's costs would not come from tax funds and would be paid for by the GOP and from private donations. But the city came up about $1.5 short and say the money will evidently have to come from tax funds.

Sanders ruled that $19,165 should go to the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN) and $13,737 to the March and Rally Committee.

'Once an Aggie, always an Aggie'

By JUDY GIANNETTINO
Associated Press Writer

The saying at Texas A&M University goes: "Once an Aggie, always an Aggie" and U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm apparently is no exception.

A former professor at the College Station school, Gramm's dedication goes so far that he wears a gold Texas A&M watch with the university's logo emblazoned in the left-hand corner.

But the unique watch, which Gramm said was a gift from a friend, has an even better quality for Aggies — it plays the "Aggie War Hymn."

On a recent campaign trek, Gramm noticed he had cracked the crystal of the watch. Would he replace it? Of course — you never know when an ex-Aggie will yen to hear the school fight song.

• • •

In his campaign for the U.S. Senate, Phil Gramm knows that every scheduled stop across the state is important and the Republican congressman is determined to make them all — come rain or shine.

However, on a recent campaign swing through north and east Texas, heavy thunderstorms plagued the trip, forcing Gramm to cancel visits to Texarkana, Longview, Nacogdoches and Lufkin.

But it took three hours of flying through thick clouds and pelting rain to convince Gramm the stops could not be made.

Despite word at Texarkana that East Texas was under severe thunderstorms and that visibility and ground cover at Longview was 0-0, Gramm wanted his pilot to try and land the twin-engine airplane that carries the candidate across Texas.

Options such as landing at Tyler and driving to his scheduled stops or flying to Shreveport, La., to hit the East Texas media market were discussed, but finally Gramm had to concede.

It was frustrating for the determined candidate, who didn't want the media and his supporters thinking he just randomly canceled the stops. He only was appeased when he realized he would be back in the area the following week.

The dedication in the Gramm campaign isn't limited just to the candidate.

The man flying Gramm across the state for the past several months, Carey Hobbs of Waco, has been providing the tedious service voluntarily.

Doggett stresses need for 'jobs, jobs, jobs'

WESLACO (AP) — Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Lloyd Doggett, criss-crossing South Texas Saturday, said extra efforts and a strong voter turnout among Hispanics could give him a winning margin on election day.

Doggett, stressing the need for more jobs in some of Texas' poorest areas where uneployment rates are among the highest in the nation, said Rio Grande Valley voters have "never forgotten Lloyd Doggett and Lloyd Doggett will never forget the Valley."

"Our priorities in the valley are jobs, jobs, and jobs and that's where we need to get working," he said. "That's what this Democratic Party needs to be about changing — providing opportunities to people, not just the opportunity to vote but the opportunity to share in the great American dream."

Doggett said he needs 80-85 percent of Hispanic voters on Nov. 6 to win and hopes his concentrated efforts in South Texas can provide the winning margin.

After addressing an outdoor rally here, he flew to Brownsville to attend a fundraiser with Gov. Mark White and about 200 party supporters.

"Two years ago, they were saying that Mark White can't win because he's behind in the polls," the governor said. "They were wrong then because the people of South Texas went out and worked hard to make sure that every eligible voter was there to vote."

Earlier in a stopover in Sinton, Doggett said he would work with any Supreme Court nominee, either "biased" or unqualified.

Doggett said President Reagan, if re-elected, may have a chance to appoint at least two justices to the high court, but the required Senate confirmation process would provide "a check and balance" system.

He told about 30 supporters in Beeville that he would actively work against any Supreme Court nominee "either not qualified or so biased on some issues as to suggest that they would not be a good member of that court.

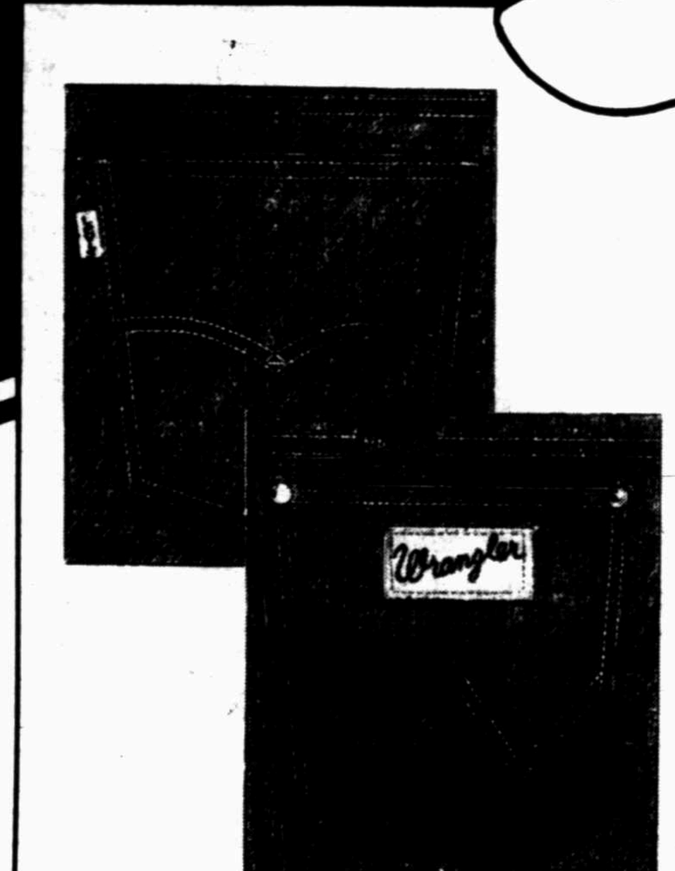

"I do find that a very scary proposition that there be named a number of justices by this administration," Doggett said. "Everyone has to recognize that there is a chance that that could happen, despite our best efforts."

Doggett traveled throughout South Texas Saturday in an effort to firm up his strong Hispanic support and encourage non-Hispanics in small towns to vote Democratic.

After breakfast in Beeville, he rode in the "Old Fiddlers Festival" parade here and then traveled to Laredo for a news conference in an Hispanic neighborhood.

In Beeville, site of a naval air station, Doggett said he was not as liberal as some opponents had painted him.

Doggett win depends on voters casting Reagan-Doggett ballots

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

"I know quite a few businessmen who will be voting Reagan-Doggett."

— Alan Haynes, owner of sporting goods' stores

TYLER — Alan Haynes, who owns sporting goods stores in this East Texas area, knows several people who plan to cast what he acknowledges may seem an unusual combination of votes on Nov. 6 — Ronald Reagan for president and Lloyd Doggett for U.S. senator.

"I know quite a few businessmen who will be voting Reagan-Doggett," Haynes said.

While anyone planning to vote for the conservative Republican president might seem an unlikely prospect to also vote for a liberal Democrat for senator, Haynes said the reason is Doggett's personal appeal over Republican Senate hopeful Phil Gramm.

"The more you know Lloyd, the better you like him. He's sincere as the dickens," Haynes said.

For the Austin state senator to defeat Gramm, a three-term congressman from College Station, he's going to need lots of Reagan-Doggett voters.

Reagan holds a substantial lead over Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale in Texas opinion polls, and although Gramm has a smaller lead he has aligned himself closely with the president in this campaign.

But during an interview aboard his campaign plane late last week, Doggett said he is sure many Texans will vote the Reagan-Doggett combination.

SOME OF those voters are in traditionally conservative West Texas, around San Angelo, for example, Doggett said.

"Even the Republicans there, though they can't explain it, are conceding there's a big Doggett-Reagan vote," he said.

In advertising and campaign appearances, Gramm has consistently referred to Doggett-Mondale and Gramm-Reagan combinations. Doggett admits he "certainly" wishes Mondale was stronger in Texas, where polls have shown the president running anywhere from 10 to 20 percentage points ahead.

"The question is," Doggett said, "how long are the (Reagan) coattails?

"I don't think they're very long. I think it has some benefits. I think if he (Gramm) did not have that argument to rely upon, he'd be far behind in this race. I think it has some spillover; it's just a question of whether it's enough to permit him to win."

After campaigning with Gov. Mark White recently, Doggett said White told him that this Senate campaign was further along with two weeks to go than White's campaign in 1982, when he upset incumbent Republican Bill Clements, who enjoyed a lead in opinion polls right up to election day.

But Doggett knows 1984 is not 1982, when the economy was sour, unemployment was high and Republicans lost offices across the nation.

"WERE IT another election year, I don't think this race would be so close," Doggett said, noting that polls show him doing better than Mondale.

"I still think it's possible for me to win independent of him in Texas," Doggett said.

"I suppose most people who are looking at this race and are undecided at this point are probably going to be moved more by the personalities involved," he added.

Although they may find an issue, such as Social Security, that concerns them, Doggett said many voters now "are looking at President Reagan and finding him personally more likable to their way of thinking than Mondale.

"But they're not mean-spirited people, and as they evaluate Phil and myself, recognizing we'll be there (in office) long after President Reagan or Vice President Mondale's term is completed, they still will pick me as their senator."

This week, his last full week of campaigning, Doggett has a simple plan: "Go everywhere, literally, from El Paso to Texarkana. There's not an area of the state where we don't have to do some work."

Doggett said several areas of the state are crucial, "but in different ways."

IN THE regions of his strongest support — South Texas, the Golden Triangle and Central Texas around his hometown of Austin — "it's a matter of maximizing my turnout more than persuading voters. I think we're already running very well in those areas. We've just got to get turnout."

The same thing holds for some urban areas, such as San Antonio and El Paso, he said.

Doggett concedes West Texas will go for Gramm. But for Doggett to win statewide, it is vitally important that he holds Gramm to as slim a margin possible in the west.

Doggett said he expects to win some rural counties while losing in cities such as Abilene. Most of all, he said, he cannot allow Gramm a margin like Democratic challenger Kent Hance piled up against him in the primary.

"We've got to not permit the kinds of margins I had in the race with Kent out there," he said.

Doggett figures to win Tarrant County and lose Dallas County, leaving Harris County and East Texas as regions which could swing the election.

"I think we have a good chance of eking out a very small victory in Harris County. It'll be very close, percentage-wise. A good many statewide Democratic candidates don't carry Harris County."

As for East Texas, Doggett said, "I think it's a major battleground. Phil has tried to paint me as anti-family in order to discourage traditional Democratic voters from voting for me."

THEIR RACE already has cost a combined total of about $10 million, and likely will wind up the second most expensive in the nation.

Gramm has spent about twice what Doggett has so far, which is why the Democrat says he waited until this month to launch his own advertising blitz.

"We made a decision early on that no matter how intense the attack became, we would have to save our money and make it a short campaign. That's hard to do — we just had to sit back and take it (during the summer)."

As for the final days, he said, "I don't have any last-minute surprises." His campaign will continue to focus "on the same kinds of issues we've had all along."

Officials use state plane to travel to fund-raiser

AUSTIN (AP) — Three top state officials — Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, Attorney General Jim Mattox, and Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez — received free rides on a state plane to attend a Corpus Christi poltical fund-raiser recently, according to published reports Saturday.

Although Hightower said he was going to send the state a $190 check to pay for his and an aide's plane trip, Mattox has no plans to reimburse the state, a spokeswoman said.

"It's a courtesy ride anytime you can hitch a ride and save the state some money," said press secretary Elna Christopher.

Ms. Christopher told the Houston Chronicle that Mattox "is always talking (state) business."

Hightower said in a statement he plans to reimburse the state because of questions raised about the "official purpose of the trip." The $190 is what it could have cost him and aide Mignon McGarry to make the round trip on a commerical flight, he said.

The Dallas Morning News reported that the plane, which is used by the Texas Department of Human Resources, was carrying agency staffers to Corpus Christi to deliver letters to Vicki Garza, a member of the DHR board, said board chairman J. Livingston Kosberg.

"I don't think it was a crucial matter," said Ms. Garza, who is treasurer of the state Democratic Party.

Hightower, Mattox and Gonzalez were on their way to a political fund-raiser for state Sen. Carlos Truan, a Corpus Christi Democrat.

Others on board the plane were DHR commissioner Marlin Johnson, his executive assistant Mary Polk, chief DHR budget officer Tom Suehs and Austin attorney David Shapiro.

Agency spokesman Bill Woods said it cost the state $560 to fly the eight passengers to Corpus Christi aboard the department's twin-engine plane and return them to Austin.

State law prohibits the use of agency airplanes for political or private purposes.

High school referee killed in crash

AMARILLO (AP) — A 27-year-old high school referee, returning to Amarillo after officiating a high school football game, was killed late Friday when his single-engine airplane crashed in the Panhandle, authorities said.

The victim was tentatively identified as Bobby Glenn Pool, who had officated a high school football game between Groom and Gruver, Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells said Saturday.

Wells said Pool had radioed the Amarillo airport, but lost contact about 11:10 p.m. Friday. A search was initiated shortly thereafter, Wells said.

The wreckage of the Cessna 180 single-engine aircraft was found early Saturday about 20 miles north of Amarillo and 8 miles south of Fritch.

Houstonians clean up flooded homes

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston residents worked to clean up their flood-ravaged homes Saturday, while authorities scrambled to provide emergency assistance to people in the 800 houses affected by the rising water.

The American Red Cross opened a disaster service center at an area church Saturday morning to begin helping the estimated 2,500 people affected by the floods, said Red Cross spokesman Bobby Allred.

"This is strictly for immediate needs," Allred said. "They'll sit down with a case worker who will find out what they need — food, clothing, special medical prescriptions."

Waist-deep flood waters swelled into houses in north Harris County Thursday and Friday after more than 15 inches of rain fell on parts of the city, the third largest rainfall in Houston history.

About 170 people spent Friday night in a Red Cross shelter, Allred said, and a shelter spokesman at an area church said there would be room for people there Saturday night.

"We're not expecting any more problems unless we get the torrential rains again," said Markett Ryza of the Harris County Flood Control District. "All the bayous have stabilized. Some aren't going down very much, but at least they're not rising."

Earlier Friday authorities located the body of Dorothy Wied, 43, whose car plunged into the swirling, muddy waters of Braes Bayou during the heaviest part of the storm Thursday.

Hundreds of cars stalled on freeways and roads and tow truck drivers reported booming business.

On Friday, insurance company adjustors poured into northern sections of Harris County to begin examining the damage to homes in the subdivisions affected by the flood.

"It could run into an astronomical figures, but we don't know yet," said Debbi Frank of the National Flood Insurance Program.

Houston Intercontinental Airport, the city's main airport, was virtually cut off from the rest of the city when flood waters closed all but one of the roads leading to the facility, forcing the cancellation of a planned trip by former President Gerald Ford.

Ford, who had been planning to stump in Sealy for Republican congressional candidate Mac Sweeney, decided to cancel the trip after Secret Service officials told him the drive to Sealy, which is located about 30 miles west of downtown Houston, would take 3½ hours, instead of the usual 1¼ hours.

"It was the same thing that happened to thousands of Houstonians," a spokesman for Sweeney told the Houston Chronicle. "He was trapped because of the weather. President Ford called Mac to say he really wanted to come, he really tried. He said he wanted to get back before the election."

So far in October, 15.9 inches of rain have been recorded in Houston, compared with a normal 3.03 inches. Normal for the entire month is 4.67 inches.

Inmate stabbed in dispute over television channel

HUNSTVILLE (AP) — An inmate at the Ellis II Unit, angered when a prisoner attempted to change a television channel, repeatedly stabbed the other convict Saturday with a homemade weapon, a Texas Department of Corrections official said.

Gerald Tolden, 27, who was serving a five-year sentence for burglary of a habitation in Galveston County, was listed in stable condition Saturday afternoon after being stabbed in the left shoulder, the right side of his jaw, his hand and cut slightly under his right eye, said prison spokesman Charles Brown.

"The incident took place in the unit's dayroom. Both inmates were watching TV when the victim attempted to change channels," Brown said.

The suspect, identified as William Mathews, 23, was serving a six-year sentence for theft of an auto and a truck and burglary of a habitation in Harris County, Brown said.

The suspect used a sharp homemade weapon in the stabbing, which occurred about 12:10 p.m. Saturday, Brown said.

Widow of slain officer wants Barefoot executed

Associated Press

The widow of a slain Central Texas police officer said Saturday that six years of "anger, frustration and rage" will end if Thomas Andy Barefoot, the man convicted of killing her husband, is executed this week.

Barefoot, 39, a former oilfield roughneck from New Iberia, La., faces death by injection shortly after midnight Monday for the August 1978 shooting death of Harker Heights police officer Carl LeVin.

It is the fifth execution date for Barefoot, who has steadfastly maintained he is innocent.

LeVin's widow, Anna Aaron, said she wants to end the six years of suffering.

"We want to see justice done," said Mrs. Aaron, who has remarried and lives with her husband and two children in Old Hickory, Tenn., a suburb of Nashville. "We want him to be executed. We want him to pay for what he has done.

"I certainly have no feelings for him at all," Mrs. Aaron said. "He certainly had none for us."

Barefoot previously has won four stays. His lawyers have asked the U.S. Supreme Court, which blocked his execution in January 1983, less than 11 hours before it was scheduled to begin, to spare Barefoot's life again.

His family and a prison reform group have asked Texas Gov. Mark White to grant a 30-day reprieve.

Mrs. Aaron said she experiences the old memories of "anger, frustration and rage."

"This has been in front of us for six years now," she said. "We're not allowed to forget. We have to relive it, especially when these serious execution dates come up."

Mrs. Aaron said she plans to wait up Monday night to hear word about Barefoot's execution.

LeVin's parents, who live in Pennsylvania, will also be awaiting word of Barefoot's execution, Mrs. Aaron said.

"His (LeVin's) parents are taking this very hard," Mrs. Aaron said. "They absolutely hope it will all finally be over. This is the worst thing that could have happened in their lives."

Mrs. Aaron, who works as a volunteer in county courts in Nashville, said she understands the legal procedures used to grant Barefoot his four stays.

"I'm sure the state of Texas has showed a lot more compassion to Barefoot, than he ever showed us," Mrs. Aaron said. "He wiped out our whole future."

Couple gets probation for arson

RUSK (AP) — A Nacogdoches couple was given 10 years probation Saturday after being convicted of arson in connection with a fire in their antique shop that later destroyed a one-block area.

A jury in Rusk deliberated three and a half hours Saturday before sentencing Donald and Catherine Wade, who leased the antique shop Fantasies.

The April 14 fire destroyed another antique shop and jewelry store and damaged a bank and pharmacy in two adjacent buildings.

The trial was moved to Cherokee County because of pretrial publicity.

The jury on Friday returned a guilty verdict against the Wades.

The fire that the Wades were charged with setting began about 6:30 p.m. April 14 in the Colony Mall.

Legislators will call for local exchange

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Midland and Odessa are only 20 miles apart. They share television and radio stations, an airport and a mutual dependence upon the oil and gas business. Yet people who telephone from one city to the other must pay long-distance rates.

That may soon change, however. State Reps. Tom Craddick of Midland and Jay Gibson of Odessa plan to reintroduce a bill in the next legislative session that would provide local exchange service between the two cities. And if that bill fails, a local engineer has proposed that the cities build a microwave system of their own which would bypass Southwestern Bell altogether.

"I'm proposing a microwave link between Midland and Odessa because you can have an antenna in each city" without any physical linkage, and the system would cost users less than half what they now pay for a prefix-563 number, says Darlene Anderson, a product marketing engineer at Texas Instruments.

Ms. Anderson studied the feasibility of local exchange rates between Midland and Odessa earlier this year, when she was still an engineering student at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. According to her professor, Tom Hyde, the lack of local phone service inhibits economic growth in the area.

"In any endeavor, the largest barrier to progress is poor communications," he says. "The idea we had was a municipal telephone system, administered and directed by the two West Texas municipalities, which would foster greater communications between the two cities."

There is no technical reason why the two cities can't have local exchange rates, says Ms. Anderson, who notes that Reno and Carson City in Nevada and Denver and Boulder in Colorado have local exchange, and both sets of cities are 30 miles apart.

Though she said exact figures were hard to come by because Southwestern Bell wouldn't give her detailed information, Ms. Anderson figures there are about 5,000 "563" lines now in use between Midland and Odessa, and the users of these lines could save $9 million over five years if the microwave system was built. She proposes that the two cities form a task force to study the matter.

"The two cities could go together and consider themselves a mini-MCI or a mini-Sprint," says Hyde.

But if Craddick's bill passes, the cities will get local service without having to go into the telephone business themselves.

"I think we'll have an excellent chance of passing it," says Craddick, who thinks Bell may drop its opposition to the bill after hearing about Ms. Anderson's proposed alternative.

YMCA offers classes to fulfill 'expectations'

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Flash back to 1964 for just a moment. A pregnant woman waddles carefully with a frantic husband alongside asking her how she feels, gingerly leading her over every crack in the sidewalk. With delivery still three months away, the expectant couple's attitude is, well, expectant.

Zoom into 1984 — the YMCA in Midland. The baby who was once the unknown receiver of worrisome adoration is now an expectant mother herself. With no harried husband in sight, she stretches, bends, pulls, pushes and sweats in her Jane Fonda tights, complete with leg warmers, to the sound of "Flashdance."

Times have changed.

Offering a full program of exercise for the pregnant woman, the YMCA has introduced aerobics to the mothers-to-be of Midland.

"We wanted a total package," said Judy Reuiter, fitness director of the Central YMCA. The YMCA is offering exercise classes for both during and after the pregancy and soon will begin Lamaze courses.

"We decided to add the Lamaze because the classes in town are full and we wanted to make it more convenient for people who are already involved with our other classes," said Ms. Reuiter.

Expectations, an aerobics class for expectant mothers (pre-natal) has been offered at the YMCA since 1981. Recovery, also aerobic, is geared for women after pregnancy (post partum). Lamaze is a method of breathing used during delivery that allows the mother to be alert during labor with a minimum of drugs. Penny Sawyer, a licensed physical therapist, will be teaching Lamaze at the YMCA. Ms. Sawyer has been an instructor in the course for seven years.

"LEARNING TO RELAX is the key," said Ms. Sawyer. "It is not something you can learn from a book — you must practice."

Lamaze requires that a coach help with the delivery.

"Usually it's the husband, but I have been called out many times in the middle of the night to help deliver a baby. I enjoy it," said Ms. Sawyer.

Lamaze also teaches how to handle daily activities while pregnant.

"Getting out of bed is one thing we kind of laugh about," she said. "A woman wakes up and finds that she is unable to get herself in an upright position. We teach them how."

Correct lifting, posture adjustment and reaching techniques also are taught at the class.

"The goal of Lamaze is a happy mother and a healthy baby," said Ms. Sawyer. "The delivery should be an experience that can be remembered with joy."

While Lamaze deals more with the actual delivery, Expectations and Recovery are body conditioning before and after the delivery.

Mary Beth Soto oversees the aerobics courses for pregnant women, a program she founded three years ago when she was pregnant with her second child.

"There was a big lack of exercise for pregnant women," said Ms. Soto. "That's why I decided to start it."

Ms. Soto became interested in exercise after she had her first baby.

"It was a very difficult pregnancy," she said. "I bordered on toxemia and had to lay in bed for eight hours a day."

WHEN BECKY (her first child) was 3 months old, Ms. Soto began working out at the YMCA, attending aerobics classes. Soon she got a job at the center teaching the class. In July 1981, Ms. Soto attended a workshop where she learned about teaching exercises to pregnant women. By September of that year (and three months into her second pregnancy), she started teaching Expectations at Central YMCA.

"The difference was amazing in my own situation," said Ms. Soto. "After my first girl was born, I couldn't even walk for a week. But after teaching the class while pregnant with Laura, I was ready to go two days after delivery."

The classes, said Ms. Soto, are important because of what they don't do.

"We don't want to hurt pregnant women," she said. "The women take their heart rate after each exercise. The whole purpose is to increase stamina and endurance without raising the heart rate. There is nothing fast — no jumps, rotating of the trunk or anything that could jeopardize the pregnancy."

PARTICIPANTS usually start off with 15 minutes of warm-up stretching which cause the lubricating fluids actively produced during pregnancy (synovial fluids) to flow more freely. This is followed by 15 minutes of aerobics to music and then 15 minutes of body conditioning using floor exercises.

Ms. Soto warned of the danger of a pregnant woman increasing her heart rate.

"A pregnant woman's heart enlarges somewhat to allow for the extra blood that is produced during the pregnancy. A sudden rush of blood taxes the heart even more and can be dangerous," she said.

Legionnaires from 20 West Texas posts gather in Midland

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The 16th District of the American Legion's Texas Department is holding its fall convention in Midland this weekend, and delegates from 20 Legion posts in 19 West Texas counties are on hand for the festivities.

"The primary purpose is to get the 20 posts together to discuss problems, come up with solutions and do what we can to further the work of the Legion," said District Commander Eugene Towne of El Paso.

Seminars were scheduled on such subjects as changes in bingo regulations and the proper writing of resolutions, and Towne hopes to use the convention to organize the District Sons of the American Legion. This group of male descendants of Legionnaires was originally founded in the 1930s, when the veterans of World War I thought they had fought a war that would end all wars.

"They thought the Legion would die off," said Towne. "The purpose (of the Sons) was to take over the patriotic functions. Unfortunately, it wasn't the last war."

The Legion is now reviving the Sons in the hope that "eventually we'll be able to achieve the dream of our fathers" and not have another war.

The 16th District is the largest in the country in terms of area and the second largest in terms of numbers with a membership of 5,300, Towne said.

Department Vice Commander Mike Saenz conducted a membership workshop for the convention delegates. Recruitment for the Legion is "Terrific," said Saenz, "But it can get better, especially for the vets of the Vietnam era."

Saenz said more Vietnam vets are joining the Legion these days, as they get older "and get more educated about what the Legion stands for."

A.J. McCright is serving as general chairman of the convention for the host Woods W. Lynch Post 19. He said the Midland post will be more active in local charitable causes this year.

"We will have more funds to distribute this year because we will have bingo."

The Legion's charitable activities were the subject of a talk by Department Auxiliary President Jane Shultz of Bryan, who said the Legion is stressing the problem of adult illiteracy this year.

"It's a national problem which must be solved on the local level," said Ms. Shultz. "I urge the auxiliary units to assist any community projects which are already in progress."

Other Auxiliary projects include a legislative program which keeps Legionnaires informed about pending legislation on the state and national levels and rehabilitation programs at Veterans Administration hospitals, she said.

VA benefits was the subject of convention guest speaker Dennis Kuehl, director of the VA National Cemetery at Fort Bliss in El Paso.

"I'll be giving an overview of the VA, with emphasis on the Department of Memorial Affairs," said Kuehl, prior to Saturday night's speech. "So many private- and public-sector people have no idea how large the VA is," with 234,000 employees and a $27 billion budget, Kuehl said. "And I'll bring them up to date on benefits."

The 16th District holds two conventions each year, and Towne said Midland is a favorite site.

"All of us in the district like to come to Midland because you put on the best conventions we ever have."

New Mexico dam project begins with weekend blast

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

CARLSBAD, N.M. — The $258 million Brantley Dam Project exploded into reality Saturday as a charge of dynamite symbolized the beginning of its construction.

Federal, state and local dignitaries gathered at the site about 15 miles from Carlsbad to recognize what U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici called "a building block for the future."

The 4.5-mile project is to eventually replace the antiquated McMillan Dam, which has left the city sitting unpredictably between this worn-out structure and a wet place in recent years.

Mayor Walter Gerrells explained that completion of the new dam sometime before the end of the decade would remove the spector of flood damage for area citizens.

Carlsbad has had 18 major floods in the past 100 years, claiming 44 lives and millions of dollars in damages. An engorged Pecos River brushed over the area as fast as 100,000 cubic feet per second at its peak in 1966, said Gerrells.

The new dam is not expected to affect the flow of the Pecos through Texas, as it is designed to replace the McMillan, according to project managers, who cited the agreement determining the flow of the river along its path.

Bureau of Reclamation officials lauded it as the first dam undertaken by their office in the past seven years. The Brantley Project was authorized by federal law in 1972. Amendments passed in 1980 increased the cost ceiling from $55 million to $258 million in federal funds.

Gerrells said the dam was 98 percent for flood control. Currently the city cannot qualify for flood insurance under federal law without instituting restrictive zoning codes, he said.

But the new dam also will aid irrigation of this part of New Mexico by providing additional water storage capacity for the area irrigation district.

The resulting reservoir will be developed for outdoor recreation on 2,500 acres. Upon completion of this project, the area will be designated as a state park.

Another 2,200 acres will be acquired for a water fowl refuge, managed by the State Department of Game and Fish.

'Wealth of knowledge' turns to money

Anyone who has spent time in a coffee shop knows that you can pick up a wealth of knowledge just by sitting back and listening to others ramble on about life and its assorted inequities.

The discussions cover all types of subjects. The Dallas Cowboys. Politics. Nuclear war. Religion. Homosexuals. Gun control. Utility companies. And, of course, money.

That last one — money — has become increasingly popular of late. It seems everyone has an opinion about it, and, unfortunately, they insist on sharing it with anyone who has the misfortune of being in the same room.

This is an especially boring predicament for people like myself because we have absolutely no interest in money. To us, a paycheck is something that is supposed to be spent. Immediately. Not tomorrow, not the next day, but right now.

That's our philosophy. Spend, spend, spend. Savings accounts are for sissies. Real men carry a roll of bills with them at all times and they are not the least bit shy about flashing it for everyone to see. After all, there's always next week's check.

But not everyone is like that. Indeed, some people are downright stingy with their money. They are usually the same kind of people who worry a great deal about the future. Will they be able to retire comfortably? Will they be able to leave a modest nest egg for their children? Will they be able to avoid starvation if Social Security finally proves its critics correct and goes bankrupt?

All of these questions weigh heavily on the minds of conservative, family-oriented heads of households. And, I suppose, it is commendable in a mundane sort of way.

That's why the coffee shop talk is dominated by the subject of money. It is that concern for the future that gnaws at people's insides. In some cases it becomes almost an obsession. They spend the bulk of their time worrying about how to turn a small amount of money into a large amount. The number of ways to accomplish this is endless, but from my coffee shop experiences these three seem to be the most popular:

1) Good old-fashioned savings. "Here's my advice," a crusty old man was saying the other day. "Everytime you get a paycheck put a little bit aside. Put it in a bank, a savings and loan, whatever. Just forget you have it. Then when you get to be my age, you won't have a problem in the world."

Great, old man. The gas company is threatening to cut me off, VISA says we're going to court and the bank is whining about some silly overdue loan payment and you want me to forget about the only cash I have to my name? Try explaining that to the bill collector.

2) Stocks. This one is for the more daring individual. The chances of showing a quick profit are there but the risks are intensified, as well. It is not as boring as a savings account, but neither is it as safe. (NOTE: One small advantage to playing the stock market is that it gives you a legitimate reason to read the Wall Street Journal, which should impress your boss, not to mention the wife and kids who are always belittling you for reading nothing but the sports section.)

3) IRAs. This is a rather recent phenomenon. It can help you avoid paying taxes now while saving for the future. On paper it sounds good. The problem is, you have to have the money to start the IRA and the banks snicker at you when you show up with a big jar of nickels and dimes. To begin an effective IRA you need dollars not nickels and dimes. Another thing: IRAs are geared for a person's later years, like say, his 60s and 70s. That's just not practical for some of us.

As for me? I say turn your money fast and here's a free tip. Take the Raiders and lay the points against Denver today.

Bank operates well without cash hassles

By JULIA MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Lone Star National Bank is like any new banking enterprise. Its officers work hard to drum up deposits, its tellers are courteous, the lines are short. But it lacks something most others have — cash.

Originally, when its chairman decided to operate without cash, the idea was to do it only while the bank was housed in temporary quarters.

But two months after opening the doors, Lone Star's executives like the way things are going so much that they have decided the time has come for a cashless, completely electronic bank.

"We're growing at a nice rate and we're not running into customer resistance, so we plan to continue operating without cash," said Joe Stedman, chairman and chief executive officer of the bank.

Sheldon D. Golub, a spokesman for the American Bankers Association, said he knew of no other bank in the nation working without cash.

Lone Star, with $6 million in assets and 150 depositors, has more than doubled its assets since opening Aug. 3 in an industrial area near downtown, catering to medium-size businesses.

The small bank's two tellers do not accept cash deposits, do not make cash withdrawals and do not cash employee paychecks. Most transactions are done by mail. If customers want cash, they must use automatic teller machines.

Unlike most bank lobbies at peak hours, Lone Star's lobby is quiet and free of long lines — one of the things Stedman hopes will lure depositors.

"I know from past experience that you lose people who don't want to stand behind the 20-minute transaction," he said. "If you've ever been behind someone from a grocery store who had to deposit hundreds of dollars in cash, get it verified by the teller and then get change, you know what I mean."

> "We're growing at a nice rate and we're not running into customer resistance, so we plan to continue operating without cash."
>
> —Joe Stedman, chairman, Lone Star Bank

Lone Star decided to go cashless after learning that a 700-square-foot mobile home was to be the bank's temporary quarters until a permanent building was completed in January. Bank executives decided the trailer was not secure enough to accept cash.

They soon concluded the no-cash operation was saving on security guards and armored cars as well as employee salaries and insurance premiums. By banning cash, they reasoned, Lone Star could hold down costs, offer customers higher interest rates on accounts and at the same time save them from long lines.

"People once traded in chickens and rocks. Eventually came money and now it's electronics," said Stedman, 44.

He acknowledged, however, that Lone Star was not for everyone. "We wouldn't be convenient for household accounts, and we do give up some retail outlets," he said.

But he believes Lone Star will do well without some "labor intensive" and "cumbersome" clients.

"Some businesses are not willing to give up a certain share of the marketplace. Yet many would be better off without them," he said. "We're willing to do that. Deregulation enables you to do both less and more. We're going to do less, but better with what we have."

Stedman said the bank currently pays about a quarter of a percentage point higher interest on accounts than other banks in the city.

But at least one bank analyst is not sure Lone Star's cashless operation will survive.

"It's nonsense and doesn't make sense for a banker to consider doing this," said Robert Walters, senior vice president of Sheshunoff & Co., a bank consulting firm in Austin.

"Even the bank's employees can't cash payroll checks," Walters said. "They have to deposit the check and then go to an ATM (automatic teller machine) to get cash. So they have to go through two transactions instead of one. I just can't see how this would be in the public's best interests."

Nevertheless, Walters concedes Lone Star will be "an interesting experiment."

The office of the Comptroller of the Currency in Washington says it is up to the public to judge the idea.

"There is nothing innately incorrect about that type of operation," said Ellen Stockdale, spokeswoman for the comptroller's office. "All banks decide what services they will offer and not offer, and customers can decide what bank to deal with."

Don Reynolds, a partner with LWFW Group, a Dallas-based management consulting firm, sees potential for Lone Star in an era of financial deregulation.

Debbie Smith, left, Helen Judson and Shirley Homan, with daughter, Tanya, work out during "Recovery," an YMCA exercise program for recent mothers.

COURSES

Care also is taken in the Recovery class after the baby is born.

"The enlarged heart does not simply disappear," said Ms. Soto. "It takes eight to 10 weeks for the body to recover. Also, new mothers are getting up in the middle of the night, and all this combined with exercising — well, you just don't want to exhaust the mother."

Ms. Soto encourages mothers to begin Recovery classes two weeks after delivery, doctor permitting. Some mothers don't take the course until eight to 10 weeks after delivery, and some stay in for a year.

"You can tell who had Lamaze and Expectations," said Ms. Soto. "They are usually the ones who are back exercising in two weeks."

EXPECTATIONS AND Recovery are similar in format, although Recovery is "a little more strenuous." Recovery also adds one more element — babies. "The babies are in the class with us," said Ms. Soto. "If they cry, then the mother can go nurse them or whatever."

The class also offers a time for the mothers to massage their babies, using circular motions on the head, around the face and on the chest, while talking to them.

"It gives the mother a time to touch her baby and build a bond. It relaxes the baby and helps calm them down when they are fussy."

"A lot of babies get colic in the evenings and this seems to help," said Ms. Soto. "We encourage the mothers to massage their babies at home."

Expectations is taught at Central YMCA on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 9 to 10 a.m.; 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. and Tuesday and Thursday, 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.

Recovery is offered Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 10 to 11:15 a.m.

A time has not been set for the Lamaze class.

"It depends on how many sign up," said Ms. Soto, "but we hope to start a session in November."

DEATHS

Olivia D. Walsh

MAITLAND, Fla. — Olivia D. Walsh, 92, of Maitland, died Friday. She was the widow of William T. Walsh, a pioneer in the West Texas oil industry.

Services were scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday at St. Mary-Margaret Catholic Church in Winter Park, Fla., with burial at Woodlawn Memorial Park in Orlando, Fla.

Mrs. Walsh was born in Rhode Island on August 16, 1892.

Survivors include a son, W. Tom Walsh Jr. of Casselberry, Fla.; a daughter, Jean W. Quinnett of Norman, Okla.; and nine grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

21-year-old Midlander arrested on criminal mischief charges

From Staff Reports

A 21-year-old man was arrested for criminal mischief and reckless damage after Midland police responded to a disturbance call Friday evening at 809 N. Baird St.

The man, who gave police a home address in the 600 block of north Mineola, was arrested at about 7 p.m. after Raymond Velarde Jr., of the north Baird residence, told police the suspect had broken Velarde's car windshield by throwing a half-inch wrench at it twice.

The man also was charged with reckless damage "due to (the suspect) destroying the victim's pit bull terrier dog by running over it with a vehicle," according to police reports.

Ralph Griffen, 1404 N. A St., reported Saturday morning that more than $1,160 worth of items had been stolen from his house since 6 p.m. Friday. Taken were a television set, stereo and speakers, revolver, table and clock-radio. Total loss was placed at $1,166.

Robert Conklin, owner of Robert's Copper Pot at 6 Desta Drive Space 1200, reported about $900 in change and bills had been taken from his store within the past month.

PHONES

"I think if Bell sees that they're going to get more realistic more quickly."

According to Darlene Gifford, Bell's manager for community relations in Midland, the phone company has nothing against the idea of local service between the two communities, but the lost revenue from long-distance rates will have to be made up on some other part of the customer's bill.

"We're really not against furnishing the service at all, and we think it would be very good for Midland-Odessa and good for business," she says. "But someone will have to pay for it if we lose the revenues."

If Craddick's bill passes, it will be up the the Public Utilities Commission to determine how the change would be effected, and "It just depends on how the PUC wants to apply it," says Ms. Gifford, who notes there are now about 40 similar requests for local service before the PUC.

'Crime index' improves in Texas

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Public awareness, heightened perhaps by the Henry Lee Lucas case, has led to a decrease in crime in Texas, said officials responding to the FBI's latest "Crime Index," released Sunday.

According to the FBI figures for the first six months of 1984 compared with the same period in 1983, crime dropped nationwide by 5 percent, despite increases in forcible rape and aggravated assault.

According to the report, crime in 18 Texas cities with populations over 100,000 declined by a combined 1.3 percent. Arson and rape increased the most. Other violent crimes decreased.

The figures were provided to the FBI by local law enforcement officials.

The decline in Texas' crime rate was coupled with a population increase from 1983 to 1984 of 2.2 percent projected by the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas.

"In light of Texas' increase in population, it's good to see a decrease (in crime)," said Department of Public Safety spokesman Larry Todd in Austin.

"We think it's a good sign and hope the decrease will set a trend that will stay with us."

Public awareness is probably the biggest reason for the decline, Todd said.

"People are more aware of criminal activity and therefore take more precautions," he said. "The Henry Lucas case has gotten so much publicity in Texas, it has made women traveling or walking alone more aware of the danger and they're taking precautions that are preventing assault and rape and even murder."

However, forcible rape was one of the crimes that increased in Texas, at twice the rate it increased nationwide.

Rape was up by 12 percent in the 18 Texas cities included in the report.

"More rapes are being reported and maybe not more committed," said Delte Dascomb, a spokeswoman for the San Antonio Police Department.

San Antonio's crime rate increased 5 percent, with rapes increasing from 211 cases in 1983 to 342 this year.

Ms. Dascomb said San Antonio officials consider the crime rate to be fairly stable.

The FBI report broke the crime figures down into categories of murder, forcible rape (as opposed to statutory rape), robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny theft, motor vehicle theft and arson.

In Texas, arson increased the most. There were 382 more cases for a percentage increase of 16 percent.

Todd said DPS can't say for sure but speculates that the increase might be due to economic woes or better crime detection methods.

Murders in Texas declined by 45, a 7 percent decrease. Robbery was down 8 percent, 1,000 fewer cases. Aggravated assault decreased by 279 cases for a 2.4 percent decline. Burglaries were down by 5,258, a 7 percent decrease.

Rapes in the 18 cities increased by 249 cases, up 12 percent. Larceny increased slightly, 1,961 more cases for a 1.4 percent increase. Motor vehicle thefts increased by 317 cases, 1 percent. Houston's crime rate mirrored the national figure, going down by 5 percent.

"We're seeing people coming forward with evidence," said Harris County District Attorney John Holmes. "Crime Stoppers has flourished. People care now. They're fighting back."

Arlington had the biggest percentage increase in crime, but police research analyst Cheryl Taylor pointed out that the city's population increased last at the same rate as crime.

Figures from Texas cities detailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are FBI crime statistics for the 18 Texas cities included in the Bureau's "Crime Index" report, released Sunday:

People of our community who make a difference.

Ray Moudy

The semi-arrid plains of West Texas are frequently interrupted by cotton fields and oil patches and then..., then the thriving city of Midland. Though Midland prospers from the agricultural and energy resources of the Permian Basin, its richest resource is its people. Banker Ray Moudy is not only aware that people are Midland's greatest asset but is one of those people who makes a difference.

Mr. Moudy moved to Midland in 1968, just in time to be the chairman of the Red Cross Disaster Relief Unit when the floods of that era began. This newcomer had started a long career of serving his community.

Midland's Red Cross Chapter tapped into Mr. Moudy's leadership abilities when they appointed him as chairman of the chapter. The Downtown Lion's Club called on this active member to be president from 1970 to 1971. Even the Midland Chamber of Commerce recognized Mr. Moudy as a valuable asset when he served as president in 1980. As president of the chamber, Mr. Moudy helped Midland organize to meet the "Objectives for the 80's".

The city of Midland also reaped great benefits from this man's insight when he became a trustee of the city as well as a trustee of the Firemen's Relief and Retirement Fund. Mr. Moudy says his greatest challenge, however, is serving on the Board of Trustees of Midland Memorial Hospital.

Midland can be proud of this transplanted citizen that serves the community both on a local scale and at the state level. In 1981 Governor Bill Clements appointed Mr. Moudy to a second term as a board member of the Texas Housing Agency.

Mr. Moudy continues his service on the local level as a member of the board for the Midland Crime Stopper Program. He points out the one thing which makes Midland such a nice place to live is that it doesn't have the crime problems which larger cities are encountering. Another thing which makes Midland a great place to live is the contributions made by citizens such as Mr. Moudy.

Concern, commitment, and action are why Ray Moudy makes a difference in Midland.

City Council to consider street work, zoning issues

Streets and zoning cases will dominate the agenda Tuesday when the Midland City Council starts its session at 10 a.m. in City Hall Council Chambers.

The panel will discuss widening or rebuilding Garfield from Golf Course Road north to Wadley, an ordinance to prohibit right turns on Neely and Midland Drive at certain hours, an ordinance establishing stop signs at two locations, a resolution to accept the paving project on Sinclair and an ordinance to establish "no parking" along Illinois Avenue between Big Spring and A Streets.

Two requests for Christmas tree lots will be presented. One lot would be on the north side of Andrews Highway about 150 feet west of McDonald Street and the other on the northeast corner of Andrews Highway and Midkiff Road.

Planning and Zoning Commission will present recommendations for revising the city's Major Street Plan.

A public hearing at 1:35 p.m. will consider the request by Catherine Burris for a mobile home on the west side of Main Street between Jax and Hamby.

A 1:40 p.m. public hearing will cover the request of John A. Drake for a specific use permit for the sale of all alcoholic beverages in a restaurant on the south side of Wall Avenue between Colorado and Big Spring Streets. It would be within RepublicBank First National Midland.

A 1:45 p.m. public hearing on a request by John Younger will consider a zone change from PD, planned district for a housing development, to TH, townhouse district, on 5.2421 acres on the north side of Wadley Avenue and west of the intersection of Wadley and Wedgwood.

A 1:55 public hearing will consider a request by Loyd O. Freeman for a zone change from MH, mobile home, to PD, planned district for a housing development, on Loma Vista, Clay and Benton Streets between Mulberry Lane and Orchard Lane.

A 2:10 p.m. hearing will consider a request by Alamo Bancorp and others and a city-initiated proposal for a zone change from 1F-2, single family, to MH, mobile home district, on Tilden, Calhoun and Loma Vista between Orchard Lane and Mulberry Lane.

A resolution appointing a city attorney and declaring the effective date will be considered by the council.

Under the consent agenda portion, the council will consider a resolution employing a special counsel for the city of Midland.

Parks Department is asking the council to approve plans and specifications on cart paths at Hogan Park Golf Course and to authorize advertising for bids. The paths will be paid for with Revenue Sharing funds.

John Anderson to report on nation's political trends

From Staff Reports

John Anderson, former U.S. congressman and 1980 independent candidate for president, will speak at 8:15 p.m. Thursday at the Texas Tech University Center Theatre.

Anderson's lecture, titled "Politics '84: An Alternative View," will focus on current and future political fabric of the U.S., the 1984 presidential elections and the nation's present political and social issues.

Tickets for the lecture are $2.50 for Tech students and $3.50 for all others. All tickets will be $3.50 at the door.

A founder of the independent National Unity Committee political party, Anderson graduated Phi Beta Kappa from the University of Illinois in 1942. After his service in the U.S. Army, he received law degrees from UI and Harvard University Law School.

He practiced law for several years and served an appointment as a U.S. foreign service officer in West Berlin, Germany before winning the Republican nomination for state attorney of Illinois. In 1960, he was elected to the state's 16th Congressional District and served until 1979.

In the 1980 presidential election, Anderson first ran as a Republican candidate. Toward the end of the primaries, he ran on an independent, liberal-oriented ticket.

Although many political experts mentioned Anderson as a strong possible contender in the 1984 presidential elections, he decided instead to endorse Democratic candidate Walter Mondale.

Anderson, a college campus speaker, is writing a book dealing with his ideas about the restoration of the U.S. economy and the country's position in the world.

For more information about Thursday's lecture, call (806) 742-3610.

Former pastor to be honored at reception

Dr. H.D. Bruce, former pastor of the First Baptist Church of Midland, is to be honored today with a reception at 4 p.m. in the church's Fellowship Hall.

Dr. Bruce was pastor of the church from 1938 to 1942, when he went to Marshall to serve as president of East Texas Baptist College. He now lives in Georgia, and this is his first visit to Texas in several years.

All friends of Dr. Bruce are invited to the reception.

TAHC amends Class C Area brucellosis regulations

The Texas Animal Health Commission has amended brucellosis vaccination regulations for heifer calves in the Class C Area of Texas, effective Nov. 5. Although Midland County is in Class B Area, West Texas ranchers are encouraged to keep up with developments in the Class C Area.

The changes were made in response to recommendation from the livestock industry during recent hearings favoring an increase in vaccination for brucellosis control. The new regulation is in two parts:

1. Heifer calves born after January 1 of this year which are between 4 and 12 months of age and acquired and used for breeding, grazing, dairying or confinement in a dry lot not under quarantine must be officially vaccinated according to the amended regulation.

2. Heifer calves born after January 1 of this year which are unvaccinated when they are over 12 months of age may change ownership only after being spayed or consigned to a livestock market to be spayed or "S" branded prior to the sale; or consigned directly to slaughter, quarantined feedlot or quarantined pasture.

Producers should start making plans now for vaccination of all eligible heifers.

State funds are available for free vaccinations. Producers should contact their own private veterinarian or their area Texas Animal Health Commission office for complete details. The new regulation applies to the 113 counties making up the Class C Area of Texas.

It is important that livestock producers make sure their calves are properly identified when vaccinated. A tattoo in the right ear is proof of vaccination, but the procedure must be done correctly. The person doing the vaccination should clean the ear carefully, rub the ink in thoroughly and press the tattoo pliers firmly.

A vaccinated calf is worth more, but if not properly identified it will cost the producer later on.

Producers should be cognizant of the fact nitrate poisoning may occur under condition experienced in the last few weeks.

Long periods of cloudy weather can result in accumulation of high levels of nitrates in plants. It must be remembered that cattle, sheep, goats and horses all are susceptible to nitrate poisoning. Levels of more than 1% nitrates can be expected to cause fatalities among these livestock.

Unfortunately, nitrate poisoning often strikes quickly and unexpectedly. Often, the only symptom observed in poisoned animals is that the animal is now dead. If you are fortunate enough to observe syptoms such as nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain, bloating, fast pulse or prostration, then nitrate poisoning is easily identified. Blood can also be used to identify nitrate poisoning, being either dark brown or cherry red in color.

If you suspect nitrate poisoning, please obtain samples of the plant grazed and send off for analysis.

To prevent nitrate poisoning, it has been suggested that rations high in carbohydrates may reduce and sometimes prevent losses. When animals do become poisoned, they should be handled quietly, and methylene blue should be administered intravenously. It is usually administered in a 1-4 percent solution, which also contains 5 percent dextrose, at the rage of 1 gm of methylene blue for each 250 pounds of animal weight. Due to the vasodilation effect of the nitrate, vasoconstrictor drugs (such as adrenalin) should be adminiatered. In chronic poisoning, Vitamin A should be given.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service is cooperating with the Internal Revenue Service in offering 38 Tax Practitioner Workshops across the state. The nearest workshops to our area are Abilene, Dec. 6-7; Lubbock, Dec. 3-4; and San Angelo, Nov. 19-20.

These two-day workshops are specifically designed for tax practitioners who work extensively with farmers and ranchers.

This year 13 advanced programs also will be offered. The closest will be Lubbock, Nov. 19-20.

Persons interested in additional information should contact the Midland County Extension Office, 682-9481, Ext. 433, for a brochure explaining more about the program and registration information.

Florida's citrus woes may outshadow hard-hit Texas orange groves

By SYDNEY RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

AGRICULTURE

MISSION, Texas — Bill Thompson leaned his elbows on the steering wheel of his pickup parked on the edge of an orange grove and watched a growling bulldozer churn under a 30-year-old tree.

"It took 30 years to grow that tree and about 30 seconds to knock it down," Thompson said.

Thompson, like hundreds of other Rio Grande Valley citrus producers, is struggling to rebuild an industry left as barren by last winter's record-shattering freeze as the bulldozed tree.

In the midst of the rebuilding, Texas growers are lamenting their winter misfortune because they can't take advantage of citrus woes in Florida, where citrus canker, a highly contagious infection that kills citrus trees, hit some nurseries.

"The canker problem in their nurseries should reduce tree replacement stock and slow down their recovery a bit and keep prices up," said Ray Prewett, director of the Texas Citrus Mutual.

Florida lost one-quarter of its 800,000 acres of citrus to last winter's freeze but was replanting faster than Texas until the canker problem hit the nuseries, Prewett said.

Seven million seedlings in Florida have already been burned, the only known way to destroy canker.

"You can always expect a few good years after a freeze when demand has been greater than supply. Whoever gets there first has an advantage, you know prices will be good," Prewett said.

A lot of Texas growers who had reservations about staying in the citrus business because of low market prices before the freeze are encouraged by Florida's misfortune, he said.

Thompson said that when trees begin producing again in two or three years and "investors see there can be a profit in citrus, people will get back in the business."

"The canker in Florida is one of the best things that has happened to us in a long time" because growers who do recover from the freeze will find higher prices for their fruit," he said. "Of course, I don't think we're going to get rich quick off Florida's problems by a long shot."

Industry experts say acreage devoted to citrus production in Texas may never again reach what it was before last winter's freeze.

About half of the groves covering 70,000 acres were lost to the freeze, but the real extent of the destruction won't be known until the first aerial grove survey is completed in December.

"My dad and grandfather set out this grove of Valencia oranges," said Thompson, 33. "It's like losing a home that belonged to your parents, one that you've worked at building and cared for for years. It's a piece of yourself to lose. It hurts."

Trees that might have recovered from the winter couldn't survive the adversity of spring, he said.

"We went from 19 degrees to 107 degrees in about three months," he said.

Growers who would normally be starting to harvest oranges this time of year instead are bulldozing fields and transplanting seedlings. The baby trees were cultivated all summer long to replace nursery stock also lost to the cold.

It will be three to five years before citrus trees are back in large-scale production, experts say. But growers are planting more marketable, higher-yield citrus varieties and hope to get more fruit per acre when trees mature.

"We hope to get 40,000 acres replanted in the next four years," said Prewett. "But it will cost about $100 million to do this."

Thompson is hoping to quickly replace about 110 acres of citrus trees on his family's 1,000 acre farm. Another 200 acres will be replaced over the next five years, he said, because even trees that survived the freeze will never be the same.

Underneath the summer leaves that cover surviving trees are weather-caused gashes that look like open wounds and make trees vulnerable to disease. The trees will never be "big producers" again, he said.

"It's like a car wreck," he said. "When you're young you recover real good, but if you're 50 years old, you'll probably never be the same. It's the same with a 20-year-old tree."

"We'll basically replace every tree we own. It's just that some won't be 'dozed and replaced for five years," he said.

Thompson has a commitment to stay, but many growers have not yet decided whether to replant citrus, sell their land or convert it to another use.

MAKING THE GRADE

Two students from Midland are recent graduates of Abilene Christian University. Trayce Paige Thomas, daughter of Mack and Shirley Thomas of 2204 Shell, received a bachelor's degree in business marketing. Receiving a bachelor's degree in geology was Stacey Dwaine Blackwell, son Roy and June Blackwell of 122 S. Dewberry.

Jimmy Orr, son of Mr. and Mrs. O.B. Orr of Midland, was named to Alpha Delta Sigma, a national scholastic honorary society for advertising majors. The society recognizes students in the top 10 percent of their class.

Orr, a senior at Texas Tech University, is majoring in advertising.

Alsup

Midland Downtown Rotary Club recently honored two Midland High School seniors.

Jeff Alsup, son of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Alsup, 1612 Winfield, was elected senior class president and student council representative. He serves as student council chaplain and is a member of the German Club, National Honor Society, Young Life. He participates in band and athletics.

Morris

Deidre Morris, daughter of William and Judy Morris of 1603 N. C St., was elected Packbacker squad leader and a member of the President's Cabinet. She is a member of the student council, Young Life and Senior Girls.

Cobb

Lee High School senior Kelley Cobb, daughter of Richard and Kathy Cobb of 324 Willowood, recently was honored by the Midland West Rotary Club. A member of the marching band and honors band, she serves as chaplain of the band and the student body. She also is a member of Dixie Darlings and the French Club.

Twenty-two upper school students at Trinity School were listed on the honor roll for the first six weeks. Named from the seventh grade were Emily Allen, Emily Brenner, Robin Landreth, Micky Ray, David Schmidt and Reema Shroff. Eighth graders on the list were Sara Coffey, Ivan Garcia, Kim Hartman, Robert Hay, Christi Leonard, Elaine McKinney and Al Sommers.

Making the honor roll from the ninth grade were Megan Burleson, Noreen Buster, Degen Donnelly, Ginny Graham, Clint Hamilton, Layna Lankford, Erin Marko, Margaret Mogford and Travis Sturdivant.

Among more than 100 Southwest Texas State University students nominated for Gaillardian honors was Michael H. Cunningham, of 2820 Maxwell Drive. Students will go to the polls to elect six men and women for the honors.

Cunningham, a finance senior, was nominated by Phi Chi Theta, professional business fraternity.

Three Midlanders are recipients of Texas Tech University Department of Music's 1984-85 scholarships.

Senior Stacy Lewis, a flutist, was awarded one of the first Dickey Music Scholarships. Senior Eddie Pleasant, a voice major, is the recipient of the Tim T. Magness Memorial Scholarhip. Sophomore Robert Rumbelow received an Eva Browning Scholarship for piano majors.

Craig

Laura Renick and Kristi Craig, both LHS seniors, were selected as Outstanding Girls of the Month for September and October, respectively, by the American Association of University Women.

Renick

Miss Renick is the daughter of Pete and Lynda Renick. A National Merit Semi-finalist, she is a two-year member of the National Honor Society, a member of the student council and a National High School Science and English Merit Award member. She also is a member of the University of Texas Honor Colloquium.

Miss Craig, daughter of Robert and Jan Craig, is a two-year academic letterman. She also has lettered for three years in choir and two years in tennis. A member of the French Club, she was voted Junior Outstanding Choir member and Most Valuale Rebelette.

A Texas A&M University junior from Midland was selected as a member of the Ross Volunteers, the ceremonial honor company of the university's Corps of Cadets.

Timothy S. Green, son of Mr. an Mrs Don Lee, is a civil engineering major. He attended Lee High School and serves as Aggie Band Operations Sergeant in A-Battery.

"Making the Grade" features students who have received degrees, awards, scholarships or other honors. Items should be brought or mailed to Education Writer, Midland Reporter-Telegram, Box 1650. Photographs can be obtained from the librarian or will be returned if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

EDUCATION

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Music workshop slated

An all-day musical workshop will be held Saturday by the Midland Independent School District at Santa Rita Elementary School. Conducted by nationally known clinician Gene Wilmouth, the workshop will feature the use of instruments in the classroom and rhythmic activities using hand drums, tennis balls and movement.

The event is co-sponsored by the Texas Music Educators Association and Carver Cultural Center.

In addition to those from MISD, participants will include teachers and music specialists from West Texas school districts.

Chairman of the event is Dr. Grace Osadchuk, music/art instructor at Fannin Elementary School.

Historic group to meet

"Twenty-five Years of History" will be the central theme for the fall meeting of the Permian Historical Society at 9:30 a.m. Saturday in the Community House of Fort Stockton's Rooney Park.

Free and open to the public, the meeting will include a catered luncheon for $5.25 and an afternoon field trip to 14 historical sits in the Fort Stockton Historical District.

Speakers and their topics include: Olan George, "Historical Events and Personalities of Pecos County"; Mary Alice Townsend, "A.J. Royal, Sheriff of Pecos County"; Betty Orbeck, "The Permian Historical Society, 25 Years of History"; and Lee Harris, "Fort Stockton Historical District."

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Chaparrals to open season

By H.A. TUCK

Chaparral basketball starts Saturday! The Chaps open their 1984-85 season at home at 7:30 p.m. in Chaparral Center against the Sul Ross University JV.

Then it's time for the Chap Classic Nov. 8-10 with a strong, eight-team field. Entered are Midland, Odessa, and Howard from the Western Junior College Conference; Weatherford, Cisco, and Grayson from the Northern Texas Conference; plus Barton County and Garden City, both from Kansas.

After that, the Chaps hit the road for a doubleheader in Waco hosted by McLennan Community College and a Thanksgiving weekend tournament in Amarillo.

The Chaps won't be back in town until their conference opener Nov. 26 against Clarendon College.

Coach Jerry Stone feels the Chaps should be stronger than last season ... but thinks the entire conference will be better. There were lots of coaching changes in the conference. New coaches can be found at the helm for Howard, Odessa, Western Texas, and New Mexico Military Institute. Assistant coaches are elevated at WTC and Odessa, while NMMI brought back a coach who was there in the large 1970's.

• • •

In conjunction with the start of MC basketball, the college is planning a big Chaparral Rally Day at Midland Park Mall on Saturday, Nov. 3, at 4 p.m. It features a number of the MC athletes, drill team, cheerleaders, and a couple of the midland Collee musical groups.

Wednesday is Halloween and what could be a more natural combination than Halloween and blood! The Student Activities Office has scheduled a Blood Drive in the Student Center from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, followed with a Halloween costume party and dance from 7 p.m. to midnight. While the party is restricted to students and faculty, the blood drive is open to the public so persons who want to give blood can come by and open a vein.

• • •

Final talk in the Student Center's Brown Bag Luncheon Series is set for Tuesday at 12:30 p.m. with representatives from the Midland Rape Crisis Center presenting the program. The talk is open to the public and you can either bring your lunch or purchase food from the Snack Bar.

• • •

Coach Joe Williams sends his men's tennis team into a tough two-day tournament at Texas Tech Friday and Staruday. The Chap men are undefeated this fall, but if they can survive this tournament with their record still unblemished, they'll be even stronger than anyone hoped.

• • •

McCormick Gallery is empty this week for one of the few times during the school year. The next show will be a retrospective of works by the late Clarece Kincaid, for many years a professor of art at Texas Tech and one of the best-known watercolorists in West Texas. The Kincaid exhibition opens Nov. 4.

• • •

By the time this is published, work should be completed on the gym floor in the P.E. Building. The contractor finally determined the best way to solve the problem of water coming up through the floor was to install three-inch wooden braces, then put marine plywood atop that, followed by the poured flooring. That leaves a gap between the concret and the new flooring in case of more rising water.

Completion will make a lot of folks happy, since many P.E. classes were having to be shuffled around, the basketball team couldn't practice on campus part of the time since Chap Center was tied up with a ski sale, all available hallway space in the buildig was crowded with removed bleachers and contractor's equipment, and office work was almost impossible because of the sawing, hammering, and general confusion.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

Short courses scheduled

Bookkeeping II, Drawing with Varied Media, Stenciling, Automotive Service Techniques, Watercolor, Interior Decorating II and Self Hypnosis I will be offered by the Midland College Department of Community Services. All courses start this week.

Dan Rush will teach Bookkeeping II on Monday from 7 to 10 p.m. through Dec. 12. This is a continuation of Bookkeeping I and covers combination journals, general and subsidiary ledgers, payroll systems and inventories, and also introduces automated data processing. Class is limited to 30 students. Fee is $36.

Drawing with Varied Media, to be taught by Nancy Stewart, will meet from 7 to 9:30 p.m. on Tuesdays through Dec. 4. The course covers drawing techniques using pencil, charcoal, ink and mixed media. Supply list is available at Community Services Office. Class is limited to 20 students and the fee is $24.

Stenciling, to be taught by Cindy Koerner, will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday and Nov. 6. Students will learn a unique method for making gifts or adding special decorative touches. Class will provide an opportunity for students to design and cut stencils and actually paint on fabric the pattern that has been created. Supply information is available at Community Services Office. Course fee is $8 and supplies will cost about $10.

Johnny Moore will teach Automotive Service Techniques from 7 to 10 p.m. Thursdays through Dec. 13. Course covers automobile service principles and maintenance. Areas to be covered include lubrication, oil and filter changes, electrical services, exhaust system service, cooling system service and principles of tune-up. Fee is $30.

Watercolor, to be taught by Judy Morrison-Griffin, will meet Thursdays from 6:30 to 9 p.m. through Dec. 13. Instruction will be in the use of transparent water colors, composition and perspective. Students should bring paper, brushes, colors and water containers to the first class meeting. Class is limited to 16 students. Fee is $23.

Steve Carter will teach Interior Decorating II from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursdays through Dec. 13. Information on the effects of color, the use of texture and the importance of design. Furniture arrangements, carpet treatments, draperies and the use of wallpaper are explained. Students will complete individual projects. Class is limited to 25 students and the fee is $18.

Self-Hypnosis, to be taught by Bettie Brannen, will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. Wednesdays through Dec. 12. The course is directed toward general self improvement including greater business success and better health. Through a personalized approach, a simple method is taught for making direct contact with the inner self and finding the true source of problem-solving, decision-making and improved communication. Class is limited to 20 students and the fee is $28.

Further information on these and other Community Services short courses may be obtained by contacting the Department of Community Services, 684-7851.

VOTERS

BEWARE OF SLOT #16

Do not experiment with the write in slot. If you lift the slot tab first, you will lock all levers up below the write in slot, and you cannot vote for candidates below the write in slot.

We know you will be too wise to waste your vote by voting for a write in candidate.

So just pull the lever down over GARY PAINTER'S name and that will solve slot #16 in the Midland County Sheriff's Race.

Paid Political Adv. by Friends of Gary Painter, T.H. Mitchell, Treasurer, 79 Katie Lane, Midland, TX. 79701

WHY?

Why do some city policemen say the Midland County Sheriff's Office is not cooperative?

I would not go along to get along. I would not close my eyes to organized prostitution, illegal gambling or criminal violations by certain police officers in the city of Midland.

We have worked numerous cases with the Midland Police Department. We have been cooperative and are willing to cooperate.

We have worked numerous cases with the Texas Rangers, State Criminal Intelligence, State Narcotic Service, Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission and other state agencies — they will not say we are uncooperative.

We have worked numerous cases with the F.B.I. and other federal agencies — they will not tell you we are uncooperative.

If the price of being called "cooperative" by Chief Gideon and some of his officers with the Midland Police Department means closing my eyes to selected illegal operations and illegal actions, they will never call me cooperative.

I will not go along just to get along. But, the Midland County Sheriff's Office will continue to enthusiastically and unselfishly work with any law enforcement agency which truly wants to enforce the law.

Central Texas has three times normal amount of rain in October

AUSTIN (AP) — After months of below-normal rainfall, clouds over Central Texas this month have dropped nearly three times the usual amount of rain for October.

The welcome wetness has doused lawns, primed long-dry creeks, and cheered farmers and ranchers with prospects for winter crops.

At the National Weather Service office here, 10.27 inches of rain — nearly three times the normal rainfall of 3.36 inches for October — had been measured by Saturday afternoon The record in Austin for October is 12.31 inches in 1960.

So far this year, Austin has had 21.12 inches of rain.

"That means we have had 48 percent, or almost half, of our 1984 rainfall this month," said meteorologist Dave Owens. Austin rainfall is still about 5½ inches below the average for this time of the year.

Some would disagree, but at least one Central Texas farmer, Ken Johnson, thinks that the October rains have finally ended the drought.

"And what's really helping is that it's been staying cloudy after it rains, so that the moisture stays and soaks into the ground more," said Johnson, who farms near Hutto in Williamson County, northeast of Austin.

Johnson said the rains moistened the soil just in time for fall planting of wheat and oats.

"It's time to put them in now," he said. "Of course, some folks gambled and got them in before it rained, and some of that got washed out."

In Blanco, 45 miles southwest of Austin, Postmaster Roy Byars said 8.65 inches of rain has fallen this month.

"But we need more rain before we can say the drought is over," said Byars, who has kept daily rainfall records since 1935. "It depends on where you're sitting, whether there's been enough rain.

Rainfall predictions for November and December are not out yet. But forecasters say that they normally are not considered rainy months in Central Texas.

County commissioner's wife shows winning 'wrist action'

FORT WORTH (AP) — Tarrant County Commissioner B.D. Griffin may have a losing swing on the golf course, but his wife's wrist action at the slot machine is a definite winner.

Griffin lost his match in the First Annual Golden Nugget Golf Tournament in Las Vegas last week, but his wife, Bobbie, outplayed a slot machine by winning $196,614.25 — the all-time high jackpot at the Golden Nugget casino.

"Those four nuggets dropped across the middle of the machine and I started screaming," Mrs. Griffin said. "I thought I had won $19,000. When I found out it was $196,000, I buckled. That was unbelievable."

"Those four nuggets dropped across the middle of the machine and I started screaming. I thought I had won $19,000. When I found out it was $196,000, I buckled. That was unbelievable."

— Bobbie Griffin, winner of jackpot

Mrs. Griffin said she was killing time while waiting to attend a women's luncheon and fashion show. She said she changed a 20-dollar bill into quarters and prepared to give them away.

The machine had paid off insignificant amounts a couple of times, she said, before she hit big money by dropping three quarters into the slot and pulling the lever.

After the winning combination appeared, everyone concerned was immediately notified — casino, gaming commission and income tax officials.

Man gets Purple Heart 66 years later

CISCO (AP) — Military honors didn't come quickly to Brady Leveridge.

In fact, he needed the help of a friend, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, U.S. Rep. Charles Stenhol and the U.S. Marine Corps. But 66 years after he was shot while serving during World War I, he's been awarded a Purple Heart.

Leveridge, 88, was shot in the jaw June 8, 1918, while serving with the Marines in France. The shot broke his jaw, knocked out several teeth and sent shrapnel through his chin.

The Purple Heart for wounded servicemen originally was established by George Washington, but only three were actually awarded until a new Purple Heart medal was authorized Feb. 22, 1932.

"I didn't think about being honored," Leveridge said. "They didn't give Purple Hearts in World War I. That's why it took so long for me to get mine."

It wasn't until earlier this year, when a friend he knew through the American Legion and VFW contracted Stenholm's office that action was taken to bring Leveridge the overdue honor.

"It was Stenholm and the VFW that got the ball rolling," Leverdige told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "It was a surprise. Some man contacted me and told me they were going to give it to me."

Stenholm aide Mark Lubin said the congressman received a letter in April about Leveridge.

Man indicted in shooting death

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A Bernalillo County grand jury has indicted a Vidor, Texas, man in the shooting death of 2nd Lt. Harley Stone of Kirtland Air Force Base five years ago.

James Skibo, 32, was indicted on an open charge of murder or, alternatively, on a charge of felony murder, or murder committed during the commission of another felony.

The five-count indictment filed Friday also charges Skibo with kidnapping and armed robbery of Stone, the unlawful taking of his vehicle and tampering with evidence by hiding a firearm.

Skibo was being held in the Bernalillo County Detention Center under $500,000 bond.

Stone, a Dexter native, disappeared April 16, 1979, as he was talking on a pay telephone in Albuquerque. His body was found in July 1979 near Laguna Pueblo. Officers said he had been handcuffed, beaten over the head and shot several times.

Skibo was arrested in May in a Pittsburgh, Pa., suburb on a charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. Pennsylvania officials dropped that charge about a week ago, allowing New Mexico officials to extradite Skibo.

ALL ABOUT ASPIRIN AND ACETAMINOPHEN

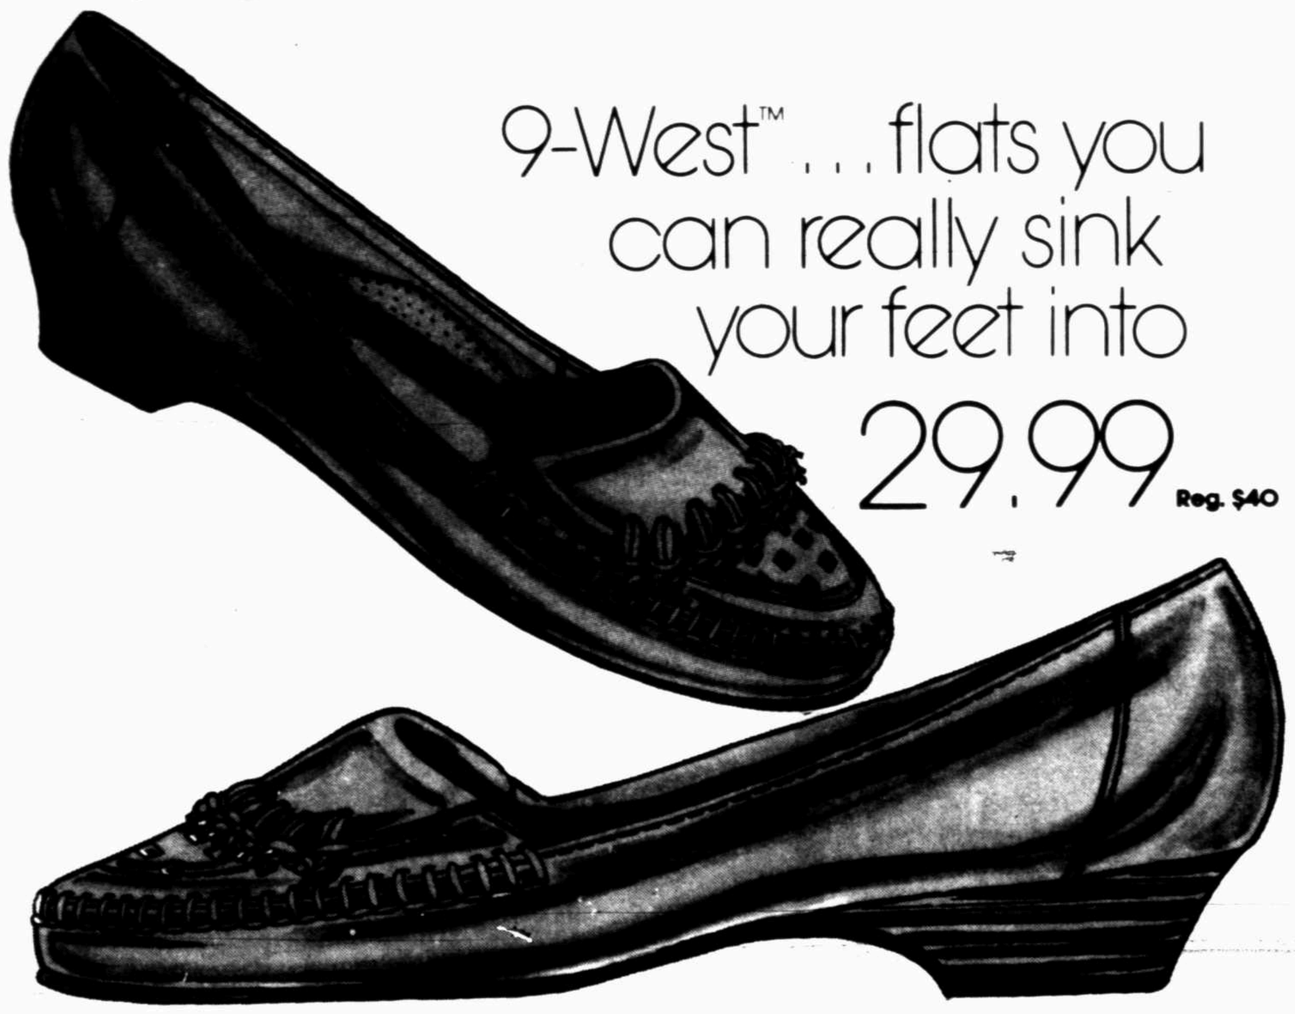

Because aspirin is an acid, it can irritate the stomach. It causes nausea in as many as 10% of users. If the irritation is not serious, it can be avoided by taking the drug with milk or solid food or by using painkillers that combine aspirin with an antacid. However, aspirin can cause an ulcer attack in those susceptible to this ailment. If the ulcer bleeds, the anticoagulant effect of aspirin will worsen the bleeding. Among the several aspirin substitutes, only one, acetaminophen, is considered both safe and fully effective. Acetaminophen works as well as aspirin in relieving headaches and other pains without aspirin's gastric and allergic side effects. However, acetaminophen can cause liver and kidney damage if taken in too large amounts.

When you're looking for a non-prescription pain reliever or other non-prescription medication to relieve a specific ailment, it's time to turn to your friendly neighborhood pharmacist for advice. At SERVICE DRUG OF MIDLAND, A & Sharbauer (682-2519), we're glad to take the time to listen to your needs and let you know which simple remedy sounds best for you. We're open Mon.-Sat. 8-7. Visa, Mastercard, and charge accounts accepted. Happy Halloween!

HINT:

Unlike aspirin, acetaminophen does not relieve the soreness that is associated with inflammation.

Queen mother side-steps security efforts

VENICE, Italy (AP) — British Queen Mother Elizabeth side-stepped security guards to shake hands and kiss children at the dedication Saturday of the recently restored Oratorio dei Crociferi, a small chapel just outside the center of Venice.

About 2,000 people, including local church leaders, packed the 13th-century chapel to greet the 84-year-old queen mother.

The chapel was closed because of damage from the floods of November 1966. It was restored with the help of UNESCO, the Italian government and numerous private groups, including the British-backed Venice in Peril Fund. It features a famous series of paintings by 16th-century artist Palma the Younger.

Italian Senate President Francesco Cossiga and several other government officials also took part in the dedication.

The queen mother then made a brief visit to a rest home for elderly women next to the chapel and was given a gondola ride on the city's famed canals.

O'Toole

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Actor Peter O'Toole, booed during an appearance at a theater reopening, on Saturday defended his reading of an 18th-century Irish satirical essay that advocated the eating of starving children to boost the economy.

O'Toole's performance Friday night before a audience of about 1,000, including Irish President Patrick Hillery, sparked heckling and a walkout by several dozen people who had paid 25 pounds (about $30) a ticket for the reopening of the Gaiety Theater.

The actor was reading a piece by 18th-century Irish author Jonathan Swift entitled "A Modest Proposal," when some members of the audience shouted "disgusting" and "offensive."

O'Toole said Saturday that the reading was meant to show what he called "Swift's savage indignation."

The author wrote the piece as an attack on certain economic theories and had "a little something to offend everybody," the actor said.

Lee

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ten bands from around the country will compete Friday for the right to record an album and win other prizes in the $100,000 Wild Turkey Battle of Country Bands.

The 10 have already won regional competitions, the best among more than 2,000 groups that entered local contests at 101 nightclubs nationwide.

Country music stars Johnny Lee and Lane Brody, who teamed up this year for the No. 1 country hit "The Yellow Rose," will be hosts at the finals at the Tennessee Performing Arts Center.

The winning band will get to record an album, win a year's booking contract and receive $5,000 and a full set of drums, a guitar and boots.

Second place will win $2,500 and get to record a single. The remaining eight bands will receive $1,000 and also get to do a single.

NEW YORK (NYT) — James Brunot, an early promoter and the first producer of Scrabble, died Monday at his home in Bridgeport, Conn. He was 82 years old.

Brunot was a federal official and a social worker who was looking for a retirement pastime in the late 1940s when he teamed with Alfred M. Butts, an architect. In 1933, Butts had invented a word game they had casually played over the years. Brunot coined the name Scrabble for the game.

Brunot and his wife, Helen, began manufacturing Scrabble in their Newtown, Conn., home in 1948. Butts, as the inventor, retained patent rights on the game and earned royalties on sales.

The game at first lost money for the Brunots, then the demand outstripped their capacity to manufacture it. Eventually the basic hame was sold to Selchow & Righter, the game manufacturer, which had earlier rejected Butts's offer to sell it. Within a few years, the game became a commercial phenomenon.

By the mid-1950s, not long after the Brunots sold the game, five million sets had been sold. In a few years, Selchow & Righter predicts, sales will total 100 million.

In 1971, Brunot sold all trademarks, copyrights and other claims in the United States and Canada.

Brunot was born in Greensburg, Pa. He graduated from the University of Chicago with a degree in social work. He worked in the charities field for New York State, then joined the federal government in Washington in 1940.

Brunot's wife died in 1972. He is survived by a half-sister, Rose Turner Crumpacker of Colorado Springs.

NEW YORK (NYT) — Carol Brandt, a longtime literary agent who represented Thornton Wilder, John Dos Passos, Vincent Sheehan and Marcia Davenport, died Thursday at her home in New York City. She was 80 years old.

Mrs. Brandt, whose maiden name was Denny, was born in Montclair, N.J. In the late 1920s she wrote "Wild," a novel that was serialized in Vanity Fair. In 1931, she married Carl Brandt, a literary agent, and in 1945 became international story editor of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. In 1955, she joined the Brandt and Brandt agency and remained active there until her death.

In 1961, four years after her husband died, she married Edmund Pavenstedt.

She is survived by a son, Carl, of Rhinebeck, N.Y., the president of Brandt and Brandt.

NEW YORK (NYT) — Dr. Rudolf K. Michels, who taught economics at Hunter College in New York for 42 years before retiring in 1968, died of cancer Tuesday at the William P. Clough Extended Care Center in New London, N.H. He was 83 years old and lived in Danbury, N.H.

Michels was born in Germany and graduated from the University of Cologne with a doctor of laws degree. He came to the United States in 1924 and earned a doctorate in economics at Columbia University. He also graduated from the Brooklyn Law School and in 1946 founded the Manhattan law firm of Michels, Stack & Horgan.

He is survived by his wife, the former Ilse Gruner; two daughters, Doris Edwards of Margate, Fla., and Phoebe Burns of Sea Girt, N.J.; three sons, Edgar, of Raleigh, N.C.; John, of Londonderry, N.H., and William, of Greenwich, Conn., and 14 grandchildren.

NEW YORK (NYT) — Dr. Morris Gold, a psychiatrist and former director of the Southeast Nassau Guidance Center in Seaford, N.Y., died of a heart ailment Wednesday at Lenox Hill Hospital in New York. He was 60 years old and lived in Woodbury, N.Y.

Gold, who was born in Manhattan, graduated from New York University and received his medical and psychiatric education at the University of Zurich. He also studied at the Swiss Analytic Society in Zurich and interned at Montefiore Hospital.

First Daisy troop blooms in Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — They're a little smaller than Brownies and they won't be allowed to sell cookies, but the 5-year-old girls inducted Saturday into Daisy Girl Scout Troop No. 1 have plenty to look forward to as members of the newest rank of Scouts.

"We get to keep this," said Sonya Marie Lewis, one of 12 girls presented with the green-and-gold Daisy pin, denoting official membership in the Girl Scouts of America. "I'm going to wear it all day."

National Girl Scout President Jane Freeman, in Detroit to oversee the organization's 43rd triennial convention, presided over the induction that formally created new class of Scouts.

Until now, the 72-year-old organization has limited membership to girls at least 6 years old or in the first grade, Mrs. Freeman said.

"This is the first time girls this young are official members," she said, adding that 70 of the 336 Girl Scout councils have experimented with groups for 5-year-olds.

The success of those pilot projects led to the creation of the Daisies, who get their title from the childhood nickname of Girl Scout founder Juliette Gordon Low.

Their Sunday-best dresses covered by blue smocks that next year would be traded for Brownie uniforms, the new Scouts dutifully recited the Girl Scout pledge before presenting Mrs. Freeman with a dozen daisies and singing the Daisy Song.

"Daisy, Daisy, we honor your memory," they sang, borrowing the tune of the old standard, "Bicycle Built For Two."

Mrs. Freeman said she was touched by the unexpected serenade.

"That's the nicest present I've had in a long time," she told the diminutive chorus.

The Daisies already have had a positive effect on the 6-, 7-and 8-year-olds, said troop leader Julia Belmares.

"We have gone on a trip with them, and the Brownies liked it, especially since they're no longer the youngest ones," she said. "We have a buddy-buddy system, so the Brownies are the big sisters. That made them both feel good."

The newest Scouts will not be able to earn badges but will work on special scrapbooks, Mrs. Freeman said.

The one-year program will focus on arts and crafts, singing, safety instruction and other basic skills, she said.

The Daisy troops represent the first major organizational change since the current groupings of Brownies, Juniors, Cadettes and Seniors were formed in 1963, Mrs. Freeman said.

The Brownies were expanded to include 6-year-olds in 1973, otherwise, the hierarchy of ranks has remained intact: Junior Scouts, ages 9-11; Cadettes, 12-14; and Seniors, 14-17.

Navy's newest carrier launched in Virginia

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — The Navy's newest aircraft carrier, the Theodore Roosevelt, was launched Saturday after speakers praised the giant warship as a fitting tribute to the president who said, "Speak softly and carry a big stick."

With a single swing of a champagne bottle across the bow, Barbara Lehman, wife of Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr., christened the nuclear-powered ship before a crowd of about 11,000 at Newport News Shipbuilding.

Horns sounded, thousands of balloons floated into the air and four Navy F-14s flew in formation over the $2.3 billion carrier, which will be the 15th in the fleet and the fourth of the Nimitz class.

"This ship, as a symbol of deterrence and as a ready power for peace, will be a fitting and glorious representative of Theodore Roosevelt, a man of action, of energy and of vision — and a man of peace," said Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

Two other speakers, Lehman and Sen. John W. Warner, R-Va., took partisan jabs at Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale, contending that he opposed funding the carrier during the Carter administration.

Lehman said the former vice president had argued that "after World War II, the attack carrier, indeed the entire Navy, has become a force without a mission."

Warner said the carrier was funded in 1980, four years after it was proposed, only through the determination of Congress.

Shipyard officials said the Roosevelt, which will be delivered to the Navy in 1986, was launched nearly 18 months faster than the Carl Vinson, which was launched in 1980 and commissioned two years ago.

Warner, a former Navy secretary, contrasted what he called former President Jimmy Carter and Mondale's efforts to veto the carrier with the Reagan administration's eagerness to spend money on defense.

"Like Theodore Roosevelt before him, President Reagan has led the nation in modernizing our Navy," Warner said.

Warner, who is seeking re-election Nov. 6, also appealed for arms negotiations.

"We can...speak softly not because we are a nation that is weak, but because we are strong," he said.

After the ceremony, tugboats inched the 97,000-ton, 1,092-foot carrier out of its shipway into the James River.

The yard is building two other carriers, the George Washington and the Abraham Lincoln. A keel-laying ceremony for the Lincoln is set for Nov. 3.

Truffaut's death seems both cruel, precocious

By DAVID ELLIOTT
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — I was driving to Los Angeles on a perfect California Sunday, when suddenly a shadow fell from Paris. The radio brought news that director Francois Truffaut was dead, of cancer, at 52.

So, he had been precocious in death as in life, but it hardly seemed fair or fitting. There was too much life in his work, and too much genius for life and art in the man, for this departure to be felt as anything but cruel. There are artists who stir your mind but not your heart, and Truffaut was not one of those. What he was, we will be a long time harvesting.

Certainly he was the leading spirit and finest talent of the French New Wave, which he called forth in his combative film criticism and then baptized, in 1959, in his debut film, "The 400 Blows." "Shoot the Piano Player," and then "Jules and Jim" — his overflowing fountain of time and desire, his "Citizen Kane" — proved he was not just a flash. His best work remained young, if not so imposingly original, long after most of the New Wavers had soaked into the sand.

Generosity was the key to his nature, even in his reviewing, though he had a reputation as the guillotine of the tired old men of French cinema (and later admitted, a bit sheepishly, that he cut them so hard, and not always fairly, to make his reputation bristle). Yet his best reviews were love letters. Read his collection, "The Films in My Life," and you see how he learned the art of fun from American directors like Welles and Hawks, how he imbibed humanity from the films of the greatest old man, whom he adored, Jean Renoir.

He got it also from the greatest film critic, Andre Bazin, who had become his adoptive father and taught the scrawny young film addict the need for stern scruples joined to passionate sympathy. "The Wild Child," in which Truffaut played the patient, civilized teacher of a boy raised among beasts, was a beautifully lucid valentine to Bazin.

Movies came out of his marrow. "The 400 Blows" compressed Truffaut's lonely, hurt youth. "The Last Metro" dramatized his memories of Paris stifled by the German Occupation. "Day for Night" was a souffle of his joys in filming. Above all, his subtle intoxication with women brought glory to actresses: Jeanne Moreau ("Jules and Jim"), Catherine Deneuve ("Mississippi Mermaid," "The Last Metro"), Kika Markham and Stacey Tendeter ("Two English Girls"), Claude Jade ("Bed and Board"), Isabelle Adjani ("Story of Adele H.") and Fanny Ardant ("The Woman Next Door"). One of his movies was, naturally, "The Man Who Loved Women."

With men he was less sure. He was a bit tediously loyal to Jean-Pierre Leaud, who played the Truffaut alter-ego Antoine Doinel in five films, and who grew from the tough, plucky kid in "The 400 Blows" into a sylph of callow mannerisms, an actor smaller than the parts Truffaut gave him. And the long, analytic fixation with Alfred Hitchcock, whose work he enshrined in a fawning but fascinating book, was played out too long, although with much wit and insight. He came closest to wedding Hitchcock effects and Renoir graces in "Mississippi Mermaid" and "The Woman Next Door."

All of Truffaut's work shows the elation of life at risk, full of surprise and danger. "My people are weak, vulnerable, fragile," he said, not pityingly. He was "existential" in that way, but what could be more deflating of pompous Sartrean gloom than the baby falling out of a high window and landing safely on its bottom in "Small Change"? That comic merger of the Little Rascals to Brueghel's "Children's Games" was Truffaut at his most endearingly resourceful.

Truffaut was often picked at, sometimes fairly, as sentimental and facile. He did care to entertain more than the Left Bank, and aspired to a prolific career, like the old Hollywood directors. He didn't want perfect movies, but human ones, and so we can forgive the softness in his Oscar-winner, "Day for Night," in which filming is a giddy picnic and it hardly matters that the film being made is mediocre. Who can deny the flourishing charm, or the hushed power of the scene of a boy stealing a picture of "Citizen Kane"?

IT'S TRICK or TREAT TIME!

KEEP OUR CHILDREN SAFE!
LET HALLOWEEN BE FUN-TIME

Halloween

Follow these Simple "Trick or Treat" Rules:

(1) Stay in your own or familiar neighborhood.. well lighted areas if possible
(2) Always stay in groups. Small children should be accompanied adults. Parents should never let little ones go out alone.
(3) Caution children not to eat any of their "loot" until parents can examine it at home. Hopefully there are not any mean people around but wise parents will caution their children to play it safe.
(4) Caution children not to go into a house even if they are invited.
(5) Costumes should be light colored clothing that can be easily seen by traffic.
(6) Stay on the sidewalk; stay out of the street.
(7) Walk on the left side of the road facing the traffic and well off the pavement in areas where there are no sidewalks.
(8) Look both ways before crossing any street.
(9) Cross the street only at the corner.
(10) Don't wear a mask over your eyes when crossing the street or walking along a road that does not have a sidewalk.
(11) Don't let children carry lighted candles or wear flammable costumes.

To Lease or Not To Lease

Reasons To Lease:

1. Leasing is convenient – you only pay for what you use and not for the full price of the car.
2. There is no used car to dispose of at lease end.
3. Leasing frees your cash and you can use your available bank line of credit for other purposes.
4. Lessee – leasing for business purposes will have the benefit of simplified tax records.

1985 Lynx

1985 Topaz

Red Carpet Lease Program

	Monthly Lease Payments	Number of Months	Cash Due at Lease Inception		Total Mileage Allowed	*Mileage Penalty	Total Payments
			Security Deposit
Topaz	$178	48	$200	$378 & TT&L	60,000	6¢ mile	$8,544
Lynx	$132	48	$150	$282 & TT&L	60,000	6¢ mile	$6,336

The Red Carpet Lease Program lessee may have the option to purchase the car at lease-end at a price to be negotiated with the dealer at lease inception, however, lessee has no obligation to purchase the car at lease-end. (With approved credit.)
* Mileage Penalty occurs if mileage exceeds 60,000 miles in the 48 month lease period. The penalty is 6¢ per mile.

"Some people only live this way two weeks a year."

Welcome to vacation living all year long. Welcome to Saddle Club Apartments. Saddle Club isn't a resort-we just look like one. We offer you 2 sparkling swimming pools, 2 lighted tennis courts, 2 indoor racquetball courts, a universal gym, indoor and outdoor jacuzzis, and wet and dry saunas.

Once inside a Saddle Club apartment home you can cozy up to a warm fireplace, relax on your own patio or balcony and enjoy the feeling of luxury living.

There's privacy here, but if you want activities, we have planned resident get-togethers.

Rent beginning at $309. We're located only minutes from major businesses, recreation, fine restaurants and entertainment. We're probably only a few minutes away from where you work.

So if you feel like taking a vacation that never has to end, take a drive over to Saddle Club and let us show you how.

HUD HOMES FOR SALE

BUYER'S MUST OBTAIN OWN FINANCING

The listing price is HUD'S estimate of fair market value. HUD reserves the right, in its sole discretion, to accept less than the listing price but only the offer which provides the GREATEST NET RETURN TO HUD WILL BE ACCEPTED after considering both the bid price and cost to HUD.

In its sole discretion, HUD will only pay discount points which HUD determines to be reasonable on ALL CASH, AS IS, NO WARRANTY sales. All other discount points beyond those HUD is willing to pay are the responsibility of the buyer.

Information on closing cost, sales commission, and other incentives associated with the sale may be obtained from any licensed real estate broker or from the local HUD office. Purchasers may request HUD to pay any of these costs, including discount points, but each offer will be judged on the basis of the greatest NET RETURN to HUD.

Effective IMMEDIATELY only the HUD-9551 (Broker's Tender) and Addendum will be submitted on properties in the ten (10) day listing period shown below. Within five (5) working days after notification that an offer submitted on HUD Form 9551 has awarded first priority for processing, the selling broker must submit the following exhibits:

1. Earnest money deposit.
2. Executed HUD Form 9548 (Standard Retail Sales Contract)
3. Addendum to HUD Form 9548 (Standard Retail Sales Contract).
4. Executed statement of Forfeiture of Earnest Money Deposit.

Upon receipt of the earnest money and HUD-9548 and Addendum to HUD-9548, the earnest money will be deposited. On FIRST-COME, FIRST-SERVE properties, include all documents in bid offer. $500 Earnest Money is required on all properties.

DEADLINE FOR RECEIPT OF BIDS: NOVEMBER 6, 1984 4:45 p.m.
BID OPENING DATE: NOVEMBER 7, 1984 9:00 a.m.
1205 Texas Avenue, Lubbock, Texas - 5th Floor Federal Bldg., Rm. 521

Planning for pumpkin profits

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

David Barton is a young man of vision.

In May, when most children his age were busy planning what they would do during the long summer vacation, David, 6, was planting pumpkins for Halloween.

"The initial plan was for David to plant the pumpkins to set himself up in business and sell to all his friends in the neighborhood," said Mrs. Larry Barton, David's mother. "David initiated it. All I did was put on the fertilizer."

David, a kindergarten student at Rusk Elementary School, counted the seeds, dug the garden and watered the plants. "Then we all watched them grow," Mrs. Barton said.

Pumpkins are planted in the spring, David said, and five seeds go in each hole. Then they are fertilized and water and weeded "all summer."

Pumpkin vines produce yellow flowers which are "kinda big," he said. "The pumpkins grow under the flowers."

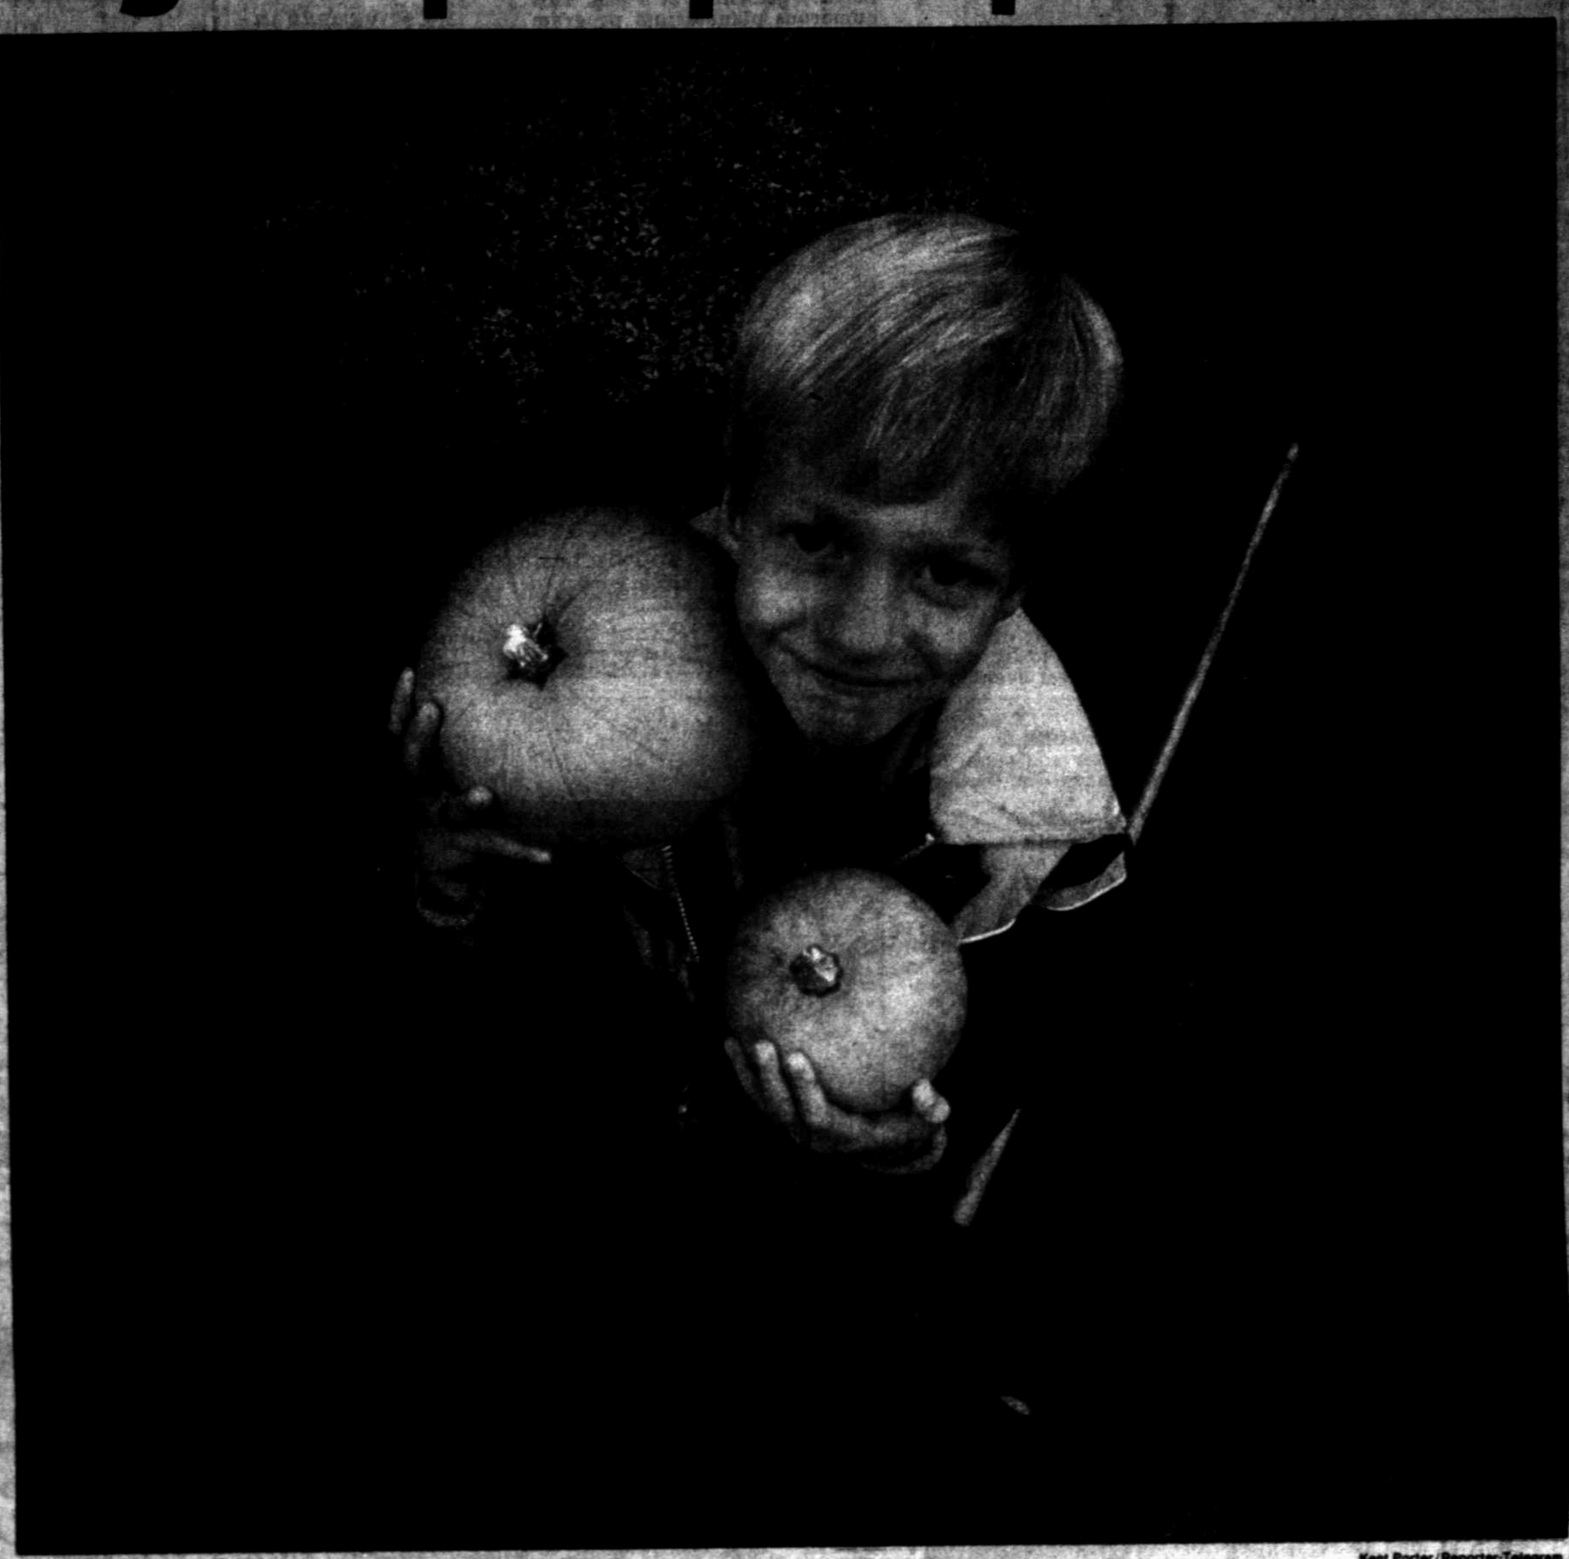

Growing pumpkins is not easy, David said. "You gotta pick out the weeds, gotta water them — that's the hard part. It's hard to pick them. When the vines turn brown you start to pick them."

The vines grew to about 30-feet in length, said Larry Barton, David's father, and were not difficult to grow. "Nursery people said just about anything will grow here if it is fertilized and watered."

This year's pumpkins were the first David had ever grown. He said he didn't receive any advice from farmers, he "just went out and planted them." And he had no trouble with bugs.

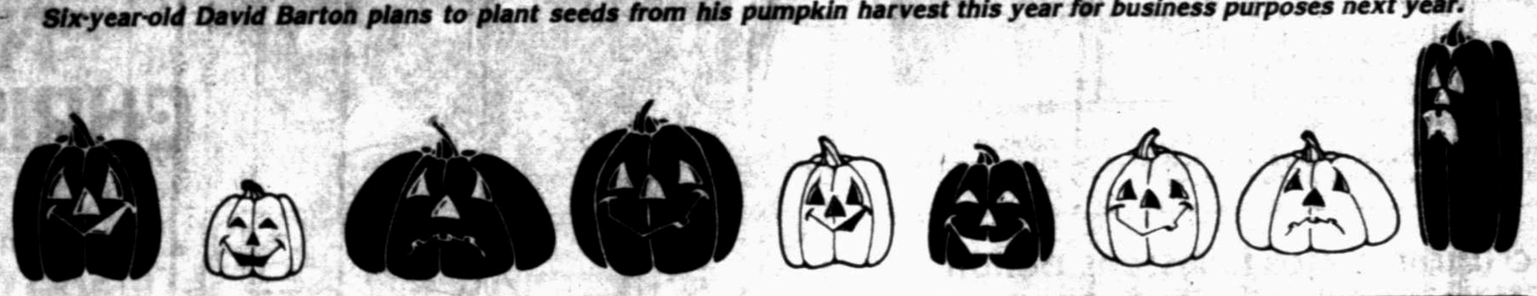

Although the vines produced seven or eight little pumpkins this year, only two ripened enough to be harvested. David plans to plant the seeds from this year's crop early next spring and sell the pumpkins next Halloween. He said he would keep the seeds in a bag in the kitchen, "but you have to dry them first."

David worked several months to bring in his pumpkin crop, and plans to do the same next year. But he didn't enjoy the experience, he said. "I didn't know it was going to be like that — I never planted pumpkins before."

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Six-year-old David Barton plans to plant seeds from his pumpkin harvest this year for business purposes next year.

Goblin goodies

BLACK CAT COOKIES

½ cup solid shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
1¾ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
½ cup unsweetened cocoa
1¼ teaspoon baking soda
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup buttermilk or sour milk
1 cup peanut butter chips
Peanutbutter frosting (see recipe)
30 1-inch black gumdrops (garnish)
1 licorice stick for garnish

*To sour milk, use 1 tablespoon vinegar plus milk to equal 1 cup.

Cream shortening and sugar in large mixing bowl until light and fluffy. Add egg and vanilla; beat well. Combine flour, cocoa, baking soda and salt; add alternately with buttermilk to creamed mixture. Stir in peanut butter chips. Drop by heaping tablespoonfuls 2 inches apart onto lightly greased cookie sheet. Bake at 375-F. for 8 to 10 minutes or until cookie springs back when touched lightly in center. Cool slightly on cookie sheet. Remove to wire rack to cool completely. Frost with peanutbutter chip frosting; garnish with gumdrop cat silhouettes. Makes about 2½ dozen.

PEANUTBUTTER CHIP FROSTING

1 cup peanut butter chips
1 8-oz. pkg. softened cream cheese
½ teaspoon vanilla
⅛ teaspoon salt
2½ cups confectioners' sugar
1 or 2 teaspoons milk

Melt peanut butter chips in top of double broiler over hot, not boiling, water. Meanwhile, beat cream cheese, vanilla and salt in small mixing bowl until creamy. Add ½ cup confectioners' sugar; beat until smooth. Add melted chips; beat well. Gradually add remaining 2 cups confectioners' sugar; beat until smooth. Stir in milk, ½ teaspoon at a time, until of spreading consistency.

BLACK CAT SILHOUETTE

For each cookie, slice a 1-inch black gumdrop horizontally into 3 slices. Use small rounded end slice for head and largest slice for body. Cut tail and ears from third slice. Thinly cut licorice stick for whiskers.

PUMPKIN CAKE

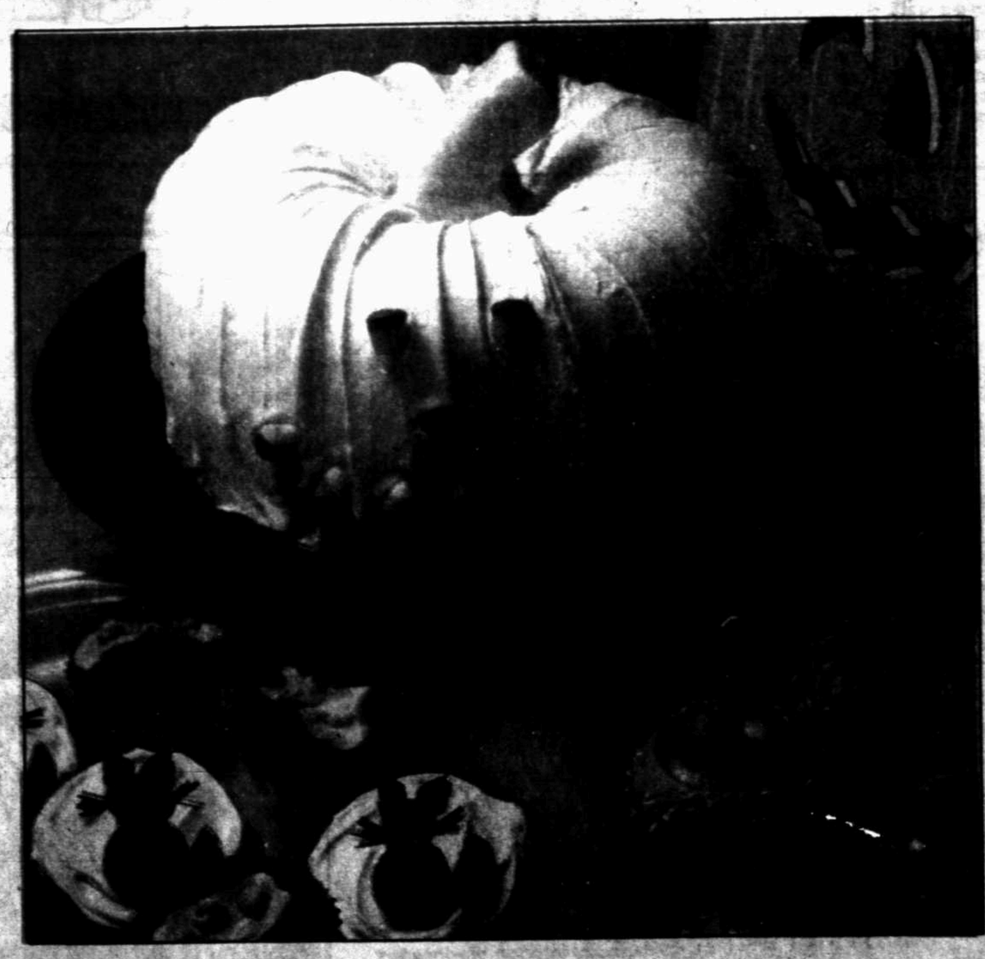

2 Halloween chocolate bundt cakes (see recipe)
Orange buttercream frosting (see recipe)
1 3-oz. pkg. softened cream cheese
3 cups confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
Green food color
Candy corn

Make 2 Halloween chocolate bundt cakes. Cool completely. If necessary, even flat surfaces of each chocolate bundt cake by cutting off thin slice. Fit cakes together to resemble a pumpkin by matching ridges on the two cakes. Frost with orange buttercream frosting. For stem of cake, beat cream cheese until smooth; gradually beat in confectioners' sugar, vanilla and food coloring. Beat until well-blended; chill 10 minutes. Spoon minture onto waxed paper. Dust hands with confectioners' sugar and shape to form stem. Cut a 3½-inch cardboard circle to fit into center of hole. Place stem on top of cardboard, molding stem to shape as necessary.

HALLOWEEN CHOCOLATE BUNDT CAKE

¾ cup butter or margarine
1⅔ cups sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup dairy sour cream
2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
⅔ cup unsweetened cocoa
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 cup buttermilk or sour milk

*To sour milk, use 1 tablespoon vinegar plus milk to equal 1 cup.

Grease well and flour a 12-cup bundt pan; set aside. Cream butter, sugar, eggs and vanilla in large mixing bowl; blend in sur cream. Combine flour, cocoa and salt. Stir baking soda into buttermilk; add alternately with dry indredients to cream mixture. Beat 2 minutes at medium speed. Pour batter into prepared pan. Bake at 350-F. for 60-65 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pan. Cool completely.

ORANGE BUTTERCREAM FROSTING

Combine 4½ cups confectioners' sugar, ½ cup butter and 3 to 4 tablespoons milk in mixing bowl until smooth and creamy. Add 2 teaspoons vanilla and red and yellow food color in drops to achieve desired orange color.

'Scrubbing' gases lessens pollution

SWEENY, Texas (AP) — By "scrubbing" flue gasses before they are allowed to reach the air, Phillips Chemical removed enough sulfur from its refinery last year to fill 980 hopper cars.

The sulfur was removed from sulfur oxides contained in the flue gasses, and was sold as elemental sulfur to help defray the $19.5 million pollution abatement control program at the plant.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Halloween and autumn decor provided a festive setting for a surprise party given in honor of Rita Buckley on "her" day Oct. 20. Planned by her daughter, Barbara, the party was held in the Buckley home, with many longtime and dear friends on hand to celebrate the occasion.

Indian corn, gourds, orange and black crepe paper streamers and pumpkins were among the decorations, along with a huge "Happy Birthday" sign across the fireplace.

Among those toasting the honoree were Gertrude (Mrs. Edwin) Alstrin, Helen Giffert, Verna and Joe Canon, Mabel (Mrs. Henry) Shaw, Mable (Mrs. Dave) Henderson, Patricia Wettstein, Fern and Mac McGuigan, Maurice Kennedy and Mark Collingsworth. Also present was the newest member of the Buckley clan, three-month-old Erin Buckley, daughter of Leslie and Steve Buckley and Rita's 14th grandchild.

Rita was honored the previous weekend at a family gathering when her son, Michael, came in from Connecticut, and daughter, Neysa (Mrs. Mark) Meuller came up from San Antonio.

AFTER MANY YEARS in West Texas, Pat and Tom Rattan have pulled up stakes and moved to the Hill Country. They are enjoying both the beautiful countryside and their new two-story home in Kerrville. The couple is employed there by the architectural firm of Owen Graham & Associates, Tom as construction manager and Pat as office manager.

Faithful volunteers at Midland Community Theatre, the Rattans are greatly missed, but we look forward to seeing them back in Midland from time to time as both sets of parents, Mary K. and Al Rattan and Juanita and Ralph Meacham, reside here.

TWO MIDLAND COUPLES, Rubalee and H.K. Thomas and Bertha and Ciro Sanchez, enjoyed a fall foliage tour of New England and Canada recently. They traveled through a total of 19 states, as well as the Canadian province of Ontario, enjoying perfect weather during the 15-day trip.

They visited the St. Lawrence River in the Thousand Islands area, Niagara Falls, Lake Champlain, New York City and Boston, among other interesting and historic places. Highlights included dinner at Mama Leone's Restaurant in New York, where they were serenaded by a pair of Spanish musicians; a tram ride to a peak in the White Mountains of New Hampshire, where they encountered up to three feet of snow, and a tour of The Constitution, popularly known as "Old Ironsides," in Boston Harbor.

I ENJOYED A TELEPHONE visit not long ago with my Kansas State sorority sister and former Midlander, Connie (Mrs. Jerry) Metz. Latest news is that Connie and Jerry recently moved further south from the Houston suburb of Kingwood to Sugar Land, where they are enjoying townhouse living now that both children are in college. Mark is a junior at the University of Oklahoma, and Sarah, a freshman at Stephen F. Austin University at Nacogdoches. Jerry is a geologist with Kaneb Oil and Gas Co. (formerly Moran Explaoration).

MIDLAND COED Lonna Bartley is one of five finalists for University Queen at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene. The coronation will take place this coming Thursday.

An education and journalism major and senior student, Lonna is the daughter of Judy Bartley. She takes an active part in campus activities, currently serving as chairman for Parents' Day and Homecoming in Student Conress. She is former editor-in-chief of the campus newspaper, the "HSU Brand."

TWELVE MIDLANDERS were among the 246 persons participating in the 35th annual field conference of the New Mexico Geological Society recently. "The Rio Grande Rift: Northern New Mexico" was the subject of study for the three-day meet.

Midlander Pat Wood Dickerson was one of the four editors of the impressive 400-page guidebook for the conference. In addition to Mrs. Dickerson, others going from here were Dan Kozak, president of the West Texas Geological Society, and his wife Marjorie; Wendell Edgell, Rusty Goetz, Lewis Markley, Cy Perusek, Dick Rousselot and his wife Neva, Vince Scury, Coyle Singletary and Tom Turmelle.

The participants enjoyed three spectacular days of geology, scenery and companionship aboard six 38-passenger buses. Social events incuded a cocktail party, a barbecue and a closing banquet, all at the Kachina Lodge, the convention headquarters, in Taos. Guest speaker at the banquet was Dr. Harrison (Jack) Schmitt, who spoke on his "Field Trip to the Moon," showing fascinating geological slides of his trip into space.

The Midlanders agreed that the field conference was a stimulating opportunity to be exposed to the latest research in understanding the origin and evolution of the Rio Grande rift, as well as a unique chance to enjoy the wonders of a New Mexico Octoer. Nature put on a show of intense beauty for the geologists, with the fall foliage as its most brilliant.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Turn clear sweater box into carefree garden

By ELVIN MCDONALD

One of the smartest investments an indoor gardener can make is in a clear plastic sweater storage box, the kind sold for a few dollars along with other closet organizers at the five-and-dime. The one sharing my desk today cost $4.50 and measures 10x15x6 inches deep; it could store a few garments but instead serves as a greenhouse for 12 unusual miniature plants.

Another use of the plastic sweater box is as a propagation chamber — a protected place to sprout tiny or difficult seeds, to root cuttings or encourage new life from almost any bit of plant tissue. The ideal spot for such a unit is in bright natural light, but not where sun shines directly on it, or about 6 inches under the tubes in a fluorescent-light garden.

What you wish to grow in a sweater box will determine the best temperature range: cool (40-55F.), moderate (55-70F.) or warm (65-80F). Most houseplant seeds and cuttings grow at 70-72F.

There are many miniature begonias that will thrive in a moderate-to-warm sweater box, along with such small gesneriads as mini Sinningia, Gesneria cuneifolia and any young or diminutive Episcia. In fact, hardly any plant can give more pleasure in an enclosure of glass or plastic than the fancy-leaved Episcia, which also gives brilliant flowers when there is sufficient light and warmth.

For a sweater-box garden in cool temperatures, choose small insectivorous plants such as Drosera, Dionaea and Sarracenia. Fascinating mosses often sprout up from the growing mediums of these and suggest another invaluable gardening tool: an ordinary Sherlock Holmes magnifying glass, which lets you see and enjoy Lilliputian leaves and blossoms that migh otherwise go unnoticed.

You can set cuttings, seeds or little plants directly in growing medium placed in a sweater box, but my preference is to use individual containers set on a half-inch layer of sandstone pebbles. A clean medium such as vermiculite, vermiculite and perlite, or a packaged sterile mix (Jiffy Mix, Pro-Mix) works best. Once well moistened, little or no additional water will be needed for weeks or months, presuming the plastic cover is kept in place. If you remove the cover frequently, perhaps to let moisture beads inside dry, more watering will be needed.

Q. Originally my gloxinia had only one top, then three, now there are five. At repotting time I found only one large bulb and was afraid to cut it, yet the number of sprouts worries me. What do you suggest?

A. Stop worrying and break off all but the strongest one to three sprouts. Sometimes it is possible to root the parts removed, in case you have need for more gloxinias; set an inch or two deep in moist vermiculite, cover with glass or plastic.

Your instinct was right, incidentally: If too many sprouts are left on a gloxinia, all tend to suffer from crowding, lack of light and air. Some growers feel that the best gloxinias are those only a year or two old from seeds. On the other hand there are heritage gloxinia tubers 50 years old and more, passed down through two or more generations of gardeners.

Beware 'mean' elephant seals

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Elephant seals, which can weigh up to three tons and reach a length of 16 feet, are the meanest members of the family of pinnipeds, which includes seals, sea lions and walruses, according to marine biologists.

In cases where seals have attacked divers and surfers, elephant seals were responsible every time the offending animal could be identified.

Even on the beach, the seals are worthy of caution. Despite their bulk, they can cover short distances faster than a human can run.

Lifestyle policies

The following are policies for publication of stories and announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the story is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

CHILDREN'S ROOMS

Since many children's rooms are limited in size, a carefully considered plan is important. Whether the room is for one child or two, it probably makes sense to allow for an extra bed. Bunk beds are favorite and they conserve floor space as well. Trundle beds are also a good choice for accomodating sleepover company. If two children use the room, consider placing twin beds at right angles to each other. With the use of some wedge-shaped bolsters, the beds can be used for sitting during the day-time and the space in the center of the room can be used as a play area.

There are many wonderful, whimsical ways to decorate a child's room, using furniture and coordinated wall coverings and fabrics. At WINDOW DECOR, we'd like to share our ideas with you for your child's room and any other room in your home. We can come to you or you can visit our showroom at 30 W. Industrial Loop. We're open Mon.-Fri. 8-4:30 or Call 685-0875 and schedule an appointment at a more convenient time.

MEYER-LINDGREN

A Nov. 24 wedding is planned for Anne Marie Meyer of Albuquerque, N.M. and Kevin M. Lindgren of Midland. The couple will be married at 6 p.m. at University of New Mexico Alumni Memorial Chapel. Parents of the bride-to-be are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O. Meyer of Albuquerque. The future bridegroom is the son of Donna J. Mills of Citrus Heights, Calif., and Richard J. Lindgren of San Leandro, Calif.

Miss Meyer is a graduate of the University of New Mexico. Her fiance graduated from California State University at Sacramento and is employed with Mobil Pipeline Co.

TOMPSON-HAUGHTON

Marjorie Amy Tompson of Midland and Frank Bridges Haughton Jr., also of Midland, will be wed at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 1 at First Presbyterian Church. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Carr Tompson of Midland and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bridges Haughton Sr. of Dallas.

Miss Tompson is a graduate of Midland High School and Trinity University in San Antonio. She has been employed with Neiman-Marcus in Dallas and will be a shopping consultant for the same firm in Midland. Her fiance is a graduate of University of Texas at Austin and is self-employed in the oil and gas business.

Wedding contracts 'almost necessity'

Associated Press

Double beds make for romantic marriages, but separate bank accounts make sense.

In these days of working women and multiple marriages, according to an article in the October issue of Bazaar, it is more important than ever that a woman protect her financial future with a prenuptial agreement or marriage contract.

"If marriage contracts are a good idea for first wives, they are almost a necessity for second wives," says Glynnis Walker, author of "Second Wife, Second Best?"

"It lets a second wife know just what she is getting into."

U.S. Census Bureau statistics show that one out of every two American marriages ends in divorce; the average U.S. marriage lasts only seven years, and 40 percent of all remarriages end in divorce.

THE ARTICLE recounts some second marriage financial disasters:

There's the woman who learns, when her husband dies after eight years of marriage, that she and her daughter were omitted from his life insurance in favor of his first wife and family.

There's the successful computer programmer, married to a divorced man, who discovered that her income meant increased payments to his first, nonworking wife.

Or the wife who worked full-time to send his kids to college — only to be left without a roof over her head when she and her husband divorced.

Marriage contracts or prenuptial agreements lessen the threat of unpleasant surprises as a couple finds out about each other's financial affairs.

"Women should definitely get prenuptial counseling," says Jeanette Lofas, the author of "Living in Step" and president of Step-Family Foundation Inc. "Marriage is the only license you can get without knowing anything.

"A LOT OF women come here and don't know anything about discretionary income or financial management, and they've hurt their children because they've given up alimony to remarry.

"They need to know that lawyers will tell them one thing, and what they get is actually another. They also have to get off the idea of Daddy taking care of them. It doesn't take the love away to be smart."

"We're the bad guys," Lofas says. "We say, this is part of your deal with us, this is what you need to be doing. Then it takes it off their hands, and no one has to feel, 'How can you be so unromantic?'"

But the outcome can be unromantic — she says 25 percent of her clients decide not to marry after all.

Divorce lawyer Dorothy Phillips, with an affluent Philadelphia clientele, emphasized the need for women to establish a secure economic base.

"It's mind-boggling what must be covered in prenuptial agreements these days," she told Bazaar. "But people feel comfortable when they've entered into something very fair.

"If you can, lay it all out in a short concise agreement: This is mine. This is yours. This will be ours. That's fair."

Man glides into toy business

WEST CORNWALL, Conn. (AP) — The damp air was cooling with the onset of evening when Tim Locke rushed out the front door with his small invention in hand.

He planted his feet in the thick grass and launched the toy hang glider on a slow, looping flight that ended after a few seconds with a gentle landing.

The toy has a 14-inch foam wing and a hard plastic balancing weight shaped like a pilot that together give it the appearance of a miniature hang glider.

To protect the design, Locke has patented it in the United States, West Germany and Japan under the name Windseeker.

Surfboard ceremony unites two lifeguards in marriage

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SAN ONOFRE, Calif. — The bride wore a white form-fitting creation by Eeni Meeni and a waist-length veil that fluttered in the breeze. The groom wore a black top hat and white tails. The altar was a pair of freshly waxed surfboards.

The ring bearer was a scuba diver who emerged from the blue-green water bearing the precious bands like some kind of treasure from the deep, then disappeared with a flip of his fins.

And so it was that under balmy 70-degree sunshine, lifeguards Greg Page of San Clemente, Calif., and Kara Webber of New Zealand solemnly took their vows about a half-mile off San Onofre State Beach, north of San Diego. It was the first surboard wedding in memory for the more than 150 friends bobbing on surfboards around the couple in ideal semi-glassy, two-to three-foot swells.

Why were they married at sea on surf boards?

The new Mrs. Page explained: "My parents couldn't come. It was the closest we could get to New Zealand if we did it in the water. It's the same ocean."

Change in medication improves man's life

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote that her husband had been impotent for the last eight years due to the medication he'd been taking for high blood pressure.

I went through exactly the same thing. My doctor prescribed medication that knocked me clear out of the ballpark (sexually, I mean). When I told him how it affected me, he said, "Oh, you're just getting old."

Well, I didn't believe him, so I went to another doctor. My new doctor told me that there were different kinds of medication to bring down blood pressure — that what works for one person may not work for another.

To make a long story short, in six weeks I was back on the ball team, hitting a home run once a week and sometimes more often.

I am 61 years old and my blood pressure is 140 over 80.

Sign me ... HOME RUN HERBERT

DEAR HERBERT: I'm glad you wrote. Too many people are reluctant to question their doctor's pronouncements.

I have long been an advocate of getting a second opinion. And a third, and even a fourth, if necessary. Hooray for you.

DEAR ABBY: My wife's sister, "Zelda," drives her mother to the eye doctor, the foot doctor, grocery shopping, etc., for which she charges her $20.

My wife drives her mother to the same places for free. When Zelda hears about these free trips, she blows her top!

Two questions: Is the money Zelda gets from her mother considered taxable income? And can my mother-in-law claim the money she pays Zelda for driving her as a "medical deduction?" — MR. IN-BETWEEN

DEAR MR. IN-BETWEEN: My accountant, Jerome Weinstein, says: "The money Zelda receives for chauffeuring her mother is taxable income, but she may deduct any expenses incurred in order to earn it. (Gasoline, parking, depreciation on her car, etc.)

"However, all the money your mother-in-law pays Zelda for chauffeuring her is not deductible — only the medical portion would be deductible, and only if it exceeded 5 percent of her adjusted gross income."

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a large shower for a young bride-to-be.

After the bride opened all the gifts, she passed around some note-sized envelopes and asked every guest to address an envelope to HERSELF! I had never seen this done before.

Some girls thought it was practical. Others called it tacky. What do you think? — WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I think it's a clever time-saver. I would not call it tacky.

AT WIT'S END

Supermarket shopping not for faint-hearted

By ERMA BOMBECK

One by one the mystiques of men and women are crumbling. We have done in-depth psychological studies on why men like football, why women buy shoes that hurt their feet, why men refuse to answer the phone when it rings and why women go to the restroom in twos.

But no one has had the courage to study how a woman can go into the supermarket for a quart of milk and emerge with two full shopping carts.

The easy answer is when women enter a supermarket, the air becomes thinner and they black out. When the air hits them, they are $103.93 thinner than when they went in.

The real answer takes longer and is more complicated. First, a little history.

Women have always been foragers for food. In the animal kingdom, it is the female lion who drags back an impala for lunch and then sits there while the males stuff themselves before she gets to eat.

In the days B.S. (Before Supermarkets), the men used to track down something furry with bad breath and bring it home to be cleaned, cooked and served by the little woman.

When the first general store came upon the scene, men (and wisely so) gave the job back to women. They told them it would be a social experience where they could visit with neighbors, buy a piece of candy for the kids, a length of calico for themselves and then load up the buckboard with a year's provisions.

The supermarket experience, as we know it today, is not for sissies. It begins with the cart delicately engineered so that when you push it forward it runs backward over your foot.

You go from the heat of revolving barbecue spits to the bone-chilling cold of the frozen turkeys, to the humidity of the produce within seconds. There's a child seat in the cart where the child's legs can kick you in the stomach as you shop. There's the Garden of Eden waiting room (at the check-out).

Small wonder women shop for two hours and get home to find they have nothing edible to cook for dinner.

Diet Pill Sweeping U.S.

New Grapefruit 'Super Pill' Gives Fast Weight Loss

No Dieting - Eat All You Want Pill Does All the Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA. (Special) An amazing new "super" grapefruit pill has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose at least 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

This "super" grapefruit pill is a dramatically improved version of the world famous grapefruit diet. It is far more effective than the original and eliminates "the mess, fuss, and high cost of eating half a fresh grapefruit at every meal."

"Pill Does All the Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation "diet menus" to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise, and NO hunger pangs." It is 100% safe. You simply take the pill with a glass of water before each meal and the amazing combination of powerful ingredients are so effective they take over and you start losing weight immediately.

Pill Has ALL Daily Vitamins

The powerful and unique combination of ingredients are what make this a "super-pill". It contains highly potent grapefruit concentrate and a diuretic to help eliminate bloat and puffiness. No need to take any vitamins to maintain your good health and energy. The pill is fortified with ALL (100%) of the U.S. Government daily vitamin requirements.

Contains Japanese 'Glucomannan'

Each pill also contains an amazingly effective amount of "glucomannan", the remarkable natural dietary fiber discovery from Japan (used successfully for over 1500 years) that expands in your stomach and gives you a full and satisfied feeling all day long.

The super-pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Now Available to Public

You can order your supply of these highly successful "super" grapefruit pills (now available directly from the manufacturer by mail order only) by sending $12 for a 14-day supply (or $20 for a 30-day supply, or $35 for a 60-day supply) cash, check, or money order to: Citrus Industries, 9903 Santa Monica Bl., Dept. 841, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard, and Amer. Express OK. (Send card number, expiration date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call toll free 1-(800)-862-6200, ext. 841. © Copyright 1984.

NEED THE RESOURCES OF AN INTERIOR DESIGNER BUT NOT THE DESIGNER?

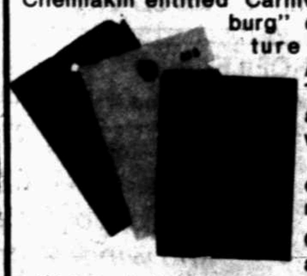

The Midland Market is proud to announce their association with The Peterson Fine Art Gallery of Dallas. Included in the first group are signed and numbered serigraphs by Miro' Calder and Dali.

Also of special interest are internationally known textured works in acrylic casting by Southwestern Artist Paul Maxwell, who has works hanging in many corporate and private collections not to mention museums including Dallas, Denver, Houston, and San Antonio.

Included also is a suite of three serigraphs by Russian artist Mihail Chemiakin entitled 'Carnival at St. Petersburg" or a bronze sculpture "La Paloma" by Alvar.

These works of art and others, are available off the floor and would make wonderful Christmas gifts.

There is still time to do some redecorating of your home to make it ready for the approaching holidays.

Come by and let Shari and Gwen help achieve the look that says "Welcome! We're glad you are here to share this Special Season with us!"

For a unique gift idea give a gift certificate from the Midland Market for a piece of art, consulting time, or a new look for that special room.

CARAMEL APPLES

It wouldn't be autumn without 'em

When the night air adds a crispness and the scents of fall return, farm stands and supermarket produce sections abound with fresh, juicy apples looking in flavor. For many, the advent of the apple season triggers fond memories of a tart, juicy apple tucked inside some chewy caramel.

Not too many years ago, making caramel apples from fruit picked in the family orchard was an annual ritual looked forward to by everyone—grandparents, parents, aunts, uncles and children of all ages. After the fruit was handpicked, the bushels were culled for the best apples while the kids unwrapped the caramels. Melting, stirring, dipping and cooling followed. Finally, it was time for munching and crunching.

Although times have changed—today, family orchards are few and far between—making caramel apples is still an activity family, friends and especially the kids will find fun. Whether you begin in the orchard or at the produce department in your favorite supermarket, now is a good time to celebrate the caramel apple season.

Possibilities for homemade caramel apples are nearly limitless. Recipes can range from the old-fashioned, traditional favorite to these new variations just developed by the Kraft Kitchens: chocolate fudge, peanut butter, cinnamon, and laced with liqueur. But before you plunge right in, here are a few hints for choosing and preparing your caramel apples.

When picking the apple of your eye, you may be confused by the numerous varieties available. One rule of thumb is that tart and tender apples are the best for caramel apple making. The tartness complements the rich, sweet flavor of the caramel, while the tenderness makes it easier to take a big bite.

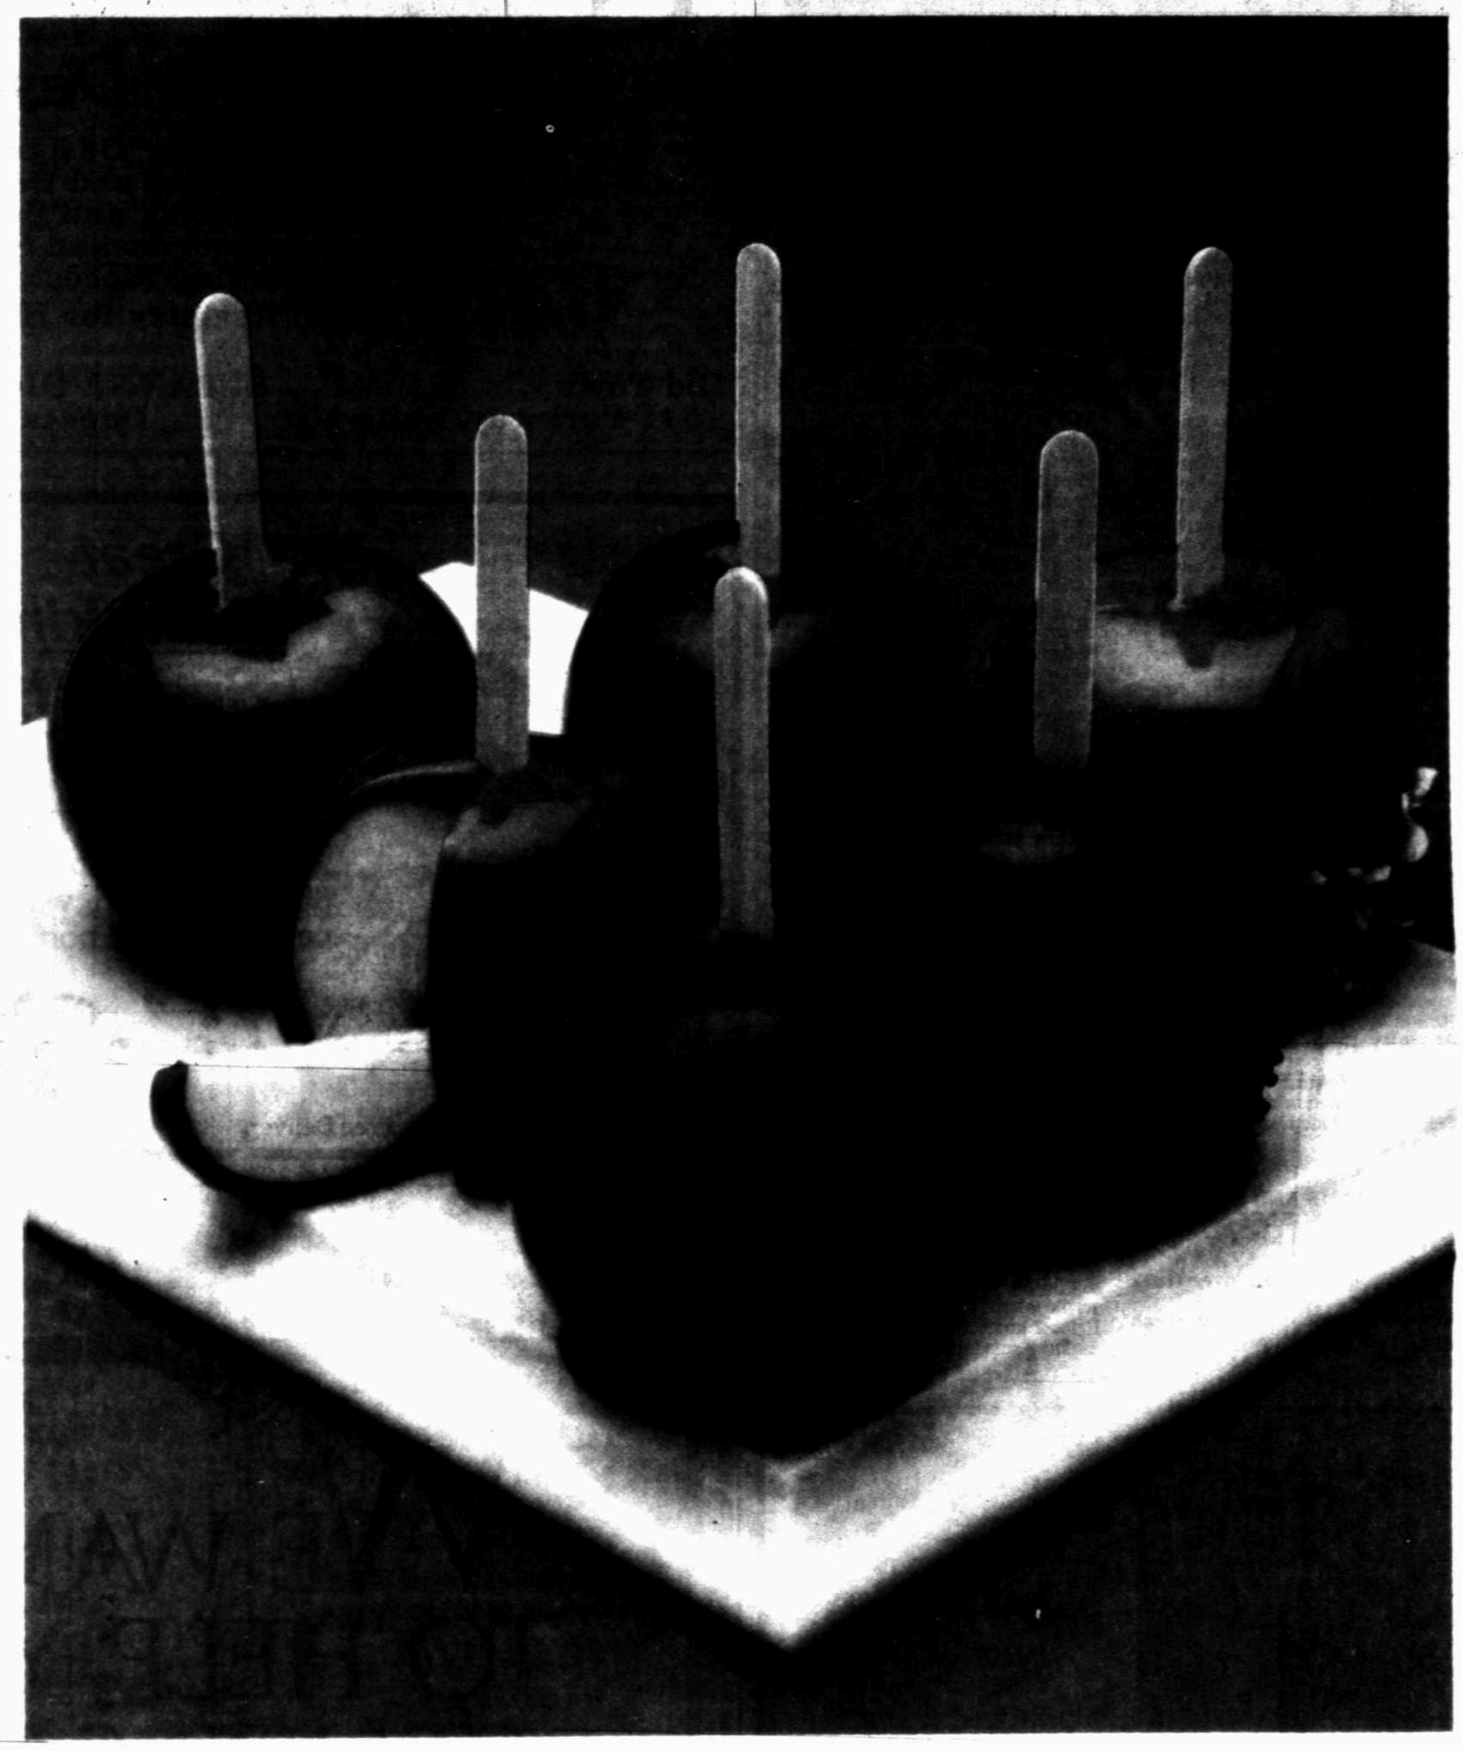

Two common apple varieties, McIntosh and Jonathans, are among the Kraft Kitchen's favorites for caramel apple making. First grown in Ontario, Canada, around 1800, the McIntosh is now widely produced in many areas throughout the country. Jonathans are a native American variety best known for their brilliant red color, excellent flavor and fragrance. Other popular choices for caramel apple making are Delicious apples, red or yellow.

When selecting your apples for caramel apple making, remember that bigger is not always better. Medium sized apples, which are about 2-1/2 inches in diameter, are the best for dipping. Another guide to follow is that there are about 3 medium apples per pound.

The famous proverb, "Beauty is more than skin deep," also applies to apples. Choose apples with a smooth skin and without any soft spots which will turn into brown bruises inside the apple. Once you've picked the apples and brought them home, handle them with care so you don't create any bruises yourself.

Before you actually begin preparations it's important to wash and dry the apples in a mild soap solution to remove their natural waxy coating. This process cannot be skipped or when you begin dipping, the caramel will slide off the apple.

Now you're ready to begin! Assemble the everyday kitchen utensils you will need: heavy 1-1/2-quart saucepan, spatula, wooden spoon, wax paper, and cookie sheet.

HOMEMADE CARAMEL APPLES

1 14-oz. bag Kraft caramels
2 tablespoons water
4 or 5 medium size apples
Wooden sticks

1) • Unwrap caramels.
• Place caramels and water in heavy 1-1/2-quart saucepan.
• Cook over low heat, stirring frequently until caramels are melted and sauce is smooth.

2) • Place sheet of wax paper on cookie sheet.
• Lightly grease wax paper with margarine.
• Wash and dry apples.
• Insert a wooden stick into stem end of each apple. During autumn, wooden sticks are included in bags of Kraft caramels which are specially marked.

3) • Holding stick, dip apples, one at a time, into hot caramel sauce, tilting sauce pan and turning until well coated.
• Scrape off extra sauce from bottom of apple with spatula.
• Place apples on greased wax paper.

4) • Store in refrigerator. Let stand at room temperature 15 minutes before serving to allow caramel to soften.

To Microwave:
• Place unwrapped caramels in a small, deep, glass bowl.
• Add water.
• Microwave on high for 2-1/2 to 3-1/2 minutes, or until sauce is smooth, stirring after each minute. Continue with Step 2 as directed.
• If caramel sauce is too thin, let stand about 2 minutes before dipping apples.

CHOCOLATE FUDGIE APPLES

Just one taste of this rich and creamy coating will confirm why chocolate sauce has long been renowned as a flavorful dipper for fruit.

1 14-oz. bag Kraft chocolate fudgies
1 tablespoon milk
4 or 5 medium size apples
Wooden sticks
Chocolate shots

Melt fudgies with milk in heavy 1-1 2-quart saucepan over low heat, stirring frequently until smooth. Wash and dry apples; insert stick into stem end of each apple. Dip into hot fudge sauce; turn until coated. Scrape off excess sauce from bottom of apples; dip in chocolate shots. Place on greased wax paper. Store in refrigerator. Let stand at room temperature 15 minutes before serving to allow caramel to soften.

Variation: Mocha: Dissolve 2 teaspoons instant coffee granules in 1 tablespoon hot water. Substitute for milk. Continue as directed above.

To Microwave: Microwave chocolate fudgies and milk in small, deep, glass bowl on High 2-1/2 to 3-1/2 minutes, or until sauce is smooth, stirring after each minute. Continue as directed above. (If caramel sauce is too thin, let stand about 2 minutes before dipping apples.)

PEANUT BUTTER CARAMEL APPLES

Two of America's favorite flavors—peanut butter and caramel—unite to provide this tempting apple wrap. Chopped peanuts add extra crunch!

1 14-oz. bag Kraft caramels
2 tablespoons creamy peanut butter
2 tablespoons water
4 or 5 medium size apples
Wooden sticks
Chopped peanuts

Melt caramels, peanut butter and water in heavy 1-1 2-quart saucepan over low heat, stirring frequently until smooth. Wash and dry apples; insert stick into stem end of each apple. Dip into hot caramel sauce; turn until coated. Scrape off excess sauce from bottom of apples. Dip in nuts. Place on greased wax paper. Store in refrigerator. Let stand at room temperature 15 minutes before serving to allow caramel to soften.

To Microwave: Microwave caramels, peanut butter and water in small, deep, glass bowl on High for 2-1/2 to 3-1/2 minutes, stirring after each minute or until sauce is smooth. Continue as directed above. (If caramel sauce is too thin, let stand about 2 minutes before dipping apples.)

CINNAMON CARAMEL APPLES

Just as cinnamon enhances the flavor of apples in pies, cobblers and applesauce, cinnamon candies add spark to caramel apples.

1/4 cup cinnamon candies
3 tablespoons water
1 14-oz. bag Kraft caramels
4 or 5 medium size apples
Wooden sticks

Melt cinnamon candies with 1 tablespoon water in heavy 1-1 2-quart saucepan over low heat, stirring frequently until melted. Add remaining water and caramels; stirring frequently until smooth. Stir in few drops red food coloring. Wash and dry apples; insert stick into stem end of each apple. Dip into hot cinnamon caramel sauce; turn until coated. Scrape off excess sauce from bottom of apples. Place on greased wax paper. Store in refrigerator. Let stand at room temperature 15 minutes before serving to allow caramel mixture to soften.

To Microwave: Microwave cinnamon candies and 1 tablespoon water in small, deep, glass bowl on High 2 minutes; stir. Add caramels and 2 tablespoons water. Microwave on High 2-1/2 to 3-1/2 minutes, or until sauce is smooth, stirring after each minute. Continue as directed above. (If caramel sauce is too thin, let stand about 2 minutes before dipping apples.)

SPIKED CARAMEL APPLES

Caramel apples, spiked with a liqueur of almost any flavor, are a new way for adults to enjoy this seasonal favorite. Experiment with your favorite liqueur or try these suggestions from the Kraft Kitchens.

1 14-oz. bag Kraft caramels
2 tablespoons orange or almond flavor liqueur
4 or 5 medium size apples
Wooden sticks

Melt caramels with liqueur in heavy 1-1 2-quart saucepan over low heat, stirring frequently until smooth. Wash and dry apples; insert stick into stem end of each apple. Dip into hot caramel sauce; turn until coated. Scrape off excess sauce from bottom of apples. Place on greased wax paper. Store in refrigerator. Let stand at room temperature 15 minutes before serving to allow caramel to soften.

To Microwave: Microwave caramels and liqueur in small, deep, glass bowl on High 2-1/2 to 3-1/2 minutes, or until sauce is smooth, stirring after each minute. Continue as directed above. (If caramel sauce is too thin, let stand about 2 minutes before dipping apples.)

Delicious on a stick, these adult treats are even easier to eat when cut into bite-size wedges. Just remove the sticks and slice into eight pieces. Serve with ice cream, if desired.

HINTS FOR A PERFECT CARAMEL APPLE

- Wash and dry the apples before dipping to remove their natural waxy coating and ensure that the caramel will stick.
- If the apples are extra juicy, be sure to dry them again after inserting the sticks.
- When preparing the caramel or fudgy based sauce, be sure to measure the liquid exactly with a measuring spoon.
- Sweet treats may scorch easily. When melting caramels be sure to use a heavy saucepan over low heat.
- Once the caramels begin to melt, stir them gently with a wooden spoon to prevent scorching and air bubbles from forming.
- Allow about 20 minutes to melt caramels in a heavy 1-1/2-quart saucepan on a conventional rangetop.
- Tilt the pan to evenly coat the apples. If necessary, spoon on the caramel sauce to completely cover the last apple.
- After dipping each apple the excess caramel should be scraped off the bottom with a spatula before setting on the wax paper.
- Be sure to store your apples in the refrigerator to prevent the caramel from slipping off.
- After storing caramel apples in the refrigerator let them stand at room temperature 15 minutes before serving to allow the caramel to soften.

Jack-o-lantern today, goodies for microwave tomorrow

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Some of us never grow up. For me, Christmas just wouldn't be Christmas without a tree. Tinsel, lights, the whole works. Thanksgiving without a turkey? Fat chance.

And Halloween without pumpkins? The two are firmly associated in my mind by what the philosopher Hume called a "constant conjunction" (meaning that they always appear together).

If love and marriage go together like a horse and carriage, Halloween and pumpkins are just as strongly linked in this punkin' head.

What do most of us do with our rounded orange friends come Halloween? We carve them up into grinning jack-o'-lanterns, stick a candle inside so that their tops shrivel and blacken and leave them for the trashman on Nov. 1.

Don't get me wrong. I love a creatively carved pumpkin face, and the wonderfully Halloweeny fragrance of melting candle wax and singed squash. But I love the flavor of pumpkin, too, and on this holiday we seem to forget that the squash is edible, as well as just plain fun. Why wait for Thanksgiving to bake up a pumpkin pie? Halloween is the perfect night to microwave a quick pumpkin treat for your favorite trickster.

This seasonal squash is really quite versatile in the kitchen. Even the seeds can be put to good use, so don't throw them out when you're carving your jack-o'-lantern masterpiece. Roasted pumpkin seeds are a regular snack in Mexico, where they're known as "pepitas" (see recipe following).

When buying fresh pumpkin for cooking, choose one that is heavy for its size, and with a hard, unblemished rind.

MUNCHY PUMPKIN SEEDS

About 1 cup pumpkin seeds, fresh from pumpkin
Salt

Place pumpkin seeds in colander under running water and rub lightly with hads to remove fiber; drain seeds on paper towels. In shallow glass baking dish sprinkle light, even coating of salt. Sprinkle seeds in even layer over salt. Microwave, uncovered, 5 to 7 minutes, stirring every minute, until seeds are crisp. Rest 5 minutes. Serve as you would sunflower seeds or nuts.

PUMPKIN PIE

1 unbaked 9-inch pastry shell
2 eggs
1 (1 lb.) can solid-pack pumpkin, or same amount fresh cooked pumpkin
½ cup brown sugar
1 tbsp. flour
Dash salt
1 tsp. cinnamon
¼ tsp. each ground ginger and cloves
⅛ tsp. ground nutmeg
1 (13 oz.) can evaporated milk

Prepare favorite pie crust recipe, or use a purchased frozen deep-dish pie hell. Place in glass pie plate and microwave 4 to 5 minutes, until no longer doughy. Set aside. Beat eggs in large bowl, then add pumpkin, stirring well. Blend in sugar, flour, salt and spices. Add evaporated milk and beat until smooth. Pour mixture into pastry shell and microwave 12 minutes, stirring filling gently every 3 minutes. Then microwave 3 to 4 minutes longer until filling is set.

FRESH COOKED PUMPKIN

1 lb. fresh raw pumpkin
¼ cup water
½ tsp. salt

Microwave pumpkin for 1 to 2 minutes. Remove and let stand 2 minutes. Peel nd cut into 1-inch cubes. Place pumpkin in 1½-quart glass baking dish with water and salt. Cover and microwave 7 to 8 minutes, stirring and rotating dish ¼ turn after 4 minutes. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes. Season with salt, pepper and butter to serve as vegetable, or let cool and mash for use in pie, breads, etc.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens. Foods are cooked on HIGH (100 percent power) and uncovered unless otherwise specified.

Apple list: Guide to 'pick of the crop'

By SHELLEY DAVIS
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Anyone who's ever used a Mcintosh apple to make apple pie, learned the hard way that there is wide moisture variation among apples. More likely than not, when cutting into the pie what they found was applesauce on top of a soggy crust.

It makes good sense to know an apple's individual characteristics before going to the store. Unfortunately, there isn't any general rule for when to cook and when you don't, says Cathy Belcher, information technician with the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services. You need to know individual characteristics of each apple in order to make the best selection for your dishes.

RED

Cortland: Medium sized, bright red. Similar to mcintosh. Mild and tender. Good for eating or baking.

Jonathan: Small to medium. Round with patches of green. Tart, crisp and juicy. Good for eating and cooking.

Mcintosh: Medium round. Slightly tart, tender flesh. Good for eating and sauces. Softens considerably when cooked.

Red delicious: Very large, long and angular shaped. Firm, sweet flesh. Good for eating. Can be cooked only when very fresh, softens with age.

Rome: Round and squat. Firm, mild, juicy flesh. Best variety for baking.

Stayman: Medium to large, dull red color, steaked with green. Firm, tart and juicy. Good for cooking and eating.

APPLE, LAMB AND SAUSAGE CASSOULET

1 lb. great northern beans
1 carrot
1 large onion with 2 cloves stuck in each end
Bouquet garnish: 1 sprig fresh thyme, 3 sprigs fresh parsley, 1 large clove garlic
¼ pound salt pork
Freshly ground pepper, to taste
For the meat:
1 lb. Italian sausage
2 tblsp. vegetable oil
3 lb. lamb shanks
2 onions, with 2 cloves stuck in each end
Bouquet garnish: 1 sprig fresh thyme, 3 sprigs fresh parsley, 2 cloves garlic
For finishing:
1 lb. bacon
3 Mcintosh apples, peeled and quartered and tossed in 2 tblsp. lemon juice
Freshly ground black pepper, to taste
Salt, to taste
3 tblsp. fresh thyme, minced
2 cups fresh bread crumbs

Rinse and pick over beans. Cover beans with 2 inches of water and soak overnight. Place in heavy pot with soaking liquid, carrot, onion, bouquet garni, salt pork and freshly ground pepper to taste. Simmer very slowly until beans are done (about 2 hours).

In a large, heavy soup pot, brown sausage in oil and remove from pan. Brown lamb shanks in the same pot. Return sausage to pot, add onions, bouquet garni and water to come halfway up the meat (about 3 cups). Simmer 1 hour.

Drain beans. Discard carrot, onion, bouquet garni and salt pork. Remove lamb and sausage from cooking liquid. Reserve cooking liquid from the meats; slice sausage in ½-inch rounds.

Line a heavy, ovenproof casserole with bacon. Place half the beans in the bottom of the pot. Top that with half the cooked meat and six apple quarters. Season with lots of freshly ground black pepper, half the thyme and a moderate amount of salt. Repeat with a second layer of beans, meat, apples. Season with more black pepper, fresh thyme and cover with bacon slices. Sprinkle with bread crumbs. Degrease meat cooking liquid and pour evenly over casserole (about 2 cups) and bake at 325-F. for 2 hours.

Makes 8 servings.

Kauai is an island of myths and nowhere is the spirit and mystery felt more intensely than on the NaPali coast. Boats arrive at the beach for an early morning drop off.

See Hawaii 'best way' — by sea

By MICHAEL CARLTON
Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

HONOLULU — The Hawaiian islands are seldom enjoyed as they should be. Visitors arrive on the islands in a swirl of fumes from fat jumbo jets, jump into gas-belching taxis or buses, and rush to antiseptic, airconditioned hotels for a week of looking outward at the ocean.

They tour cultural centers, shop for ill-made shell jewelry, drink mai-tais and perhaps — if they're adventurous — take a helicopter ride.

But rarely, with the exception of a sunset cocktail catamaran cruise, do they see Hawaii as the first Polynesians and Europeans saw it — from the deck of a ship.

Waterfalls tumble from rugged cliffs, deep gorges thrust into hillsides covered with mango, papaya, and breadfruit, and rivers curl to meet the sea. On some of the Hawaiian islands the tops of volcanoes are covered with snow and rivers rush down their flanks; on others cacti grip to a tentative life in lava fields as black as the night and as dry as dust. The variety is immense.

As your ship gets closer to land little emissary birds fly out to greet you, and whales can sometimes be seen racing across the bow. There is a special privilege in sailing into the ports of Hawaii, rather than rushing from airport to airport. It is serene on deck — no jet engines to blast your ears, no staccato of airport announcements, no long walks through impersonal terminals — only the boom of the waves as they are dissected by the ship's hull.

Seeing a town like Lahaina from the water gives you a better appreciation for the place. From the sea, looking at its colorful wooden buildings nestled snugly at the foot of rolling hills of sugar cane, you get some idea of the thrill the whalers felt when they first sighted the town.

The same can be said about sailing past the magnificence of the Na Pali coast of Kauai — where waterfalls cover the sheer cliffs like tears — cruising just offshore the ancient City of Refuge on the Big Island, seeing the former leper colony at Kalawao on Molokai, or approaching the skyscraper hotels of Waikiki. They all look more exotic, more exciting, even more intimate when approached from the sea.

And now, thanks to the renaissance of two ladies of the '50s, visitors to Hawaii can once again see the islands from the water, as they should be seen.

American Hawaii Cruises offers weekly seven-day cruises on the SS Constitution and SS Independence, a pair of old timers that once represented the pride of the American cruise industry — an industry that has, in recent years, been taken over by the Norwegians, the Dutch and the Italians.

Winter best time for trip to Scandinavia

By JAMES T. YENCKEL
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Winter seems an improbable time to visit Scandinavia, but that's when the residents "enjoy the many cultural attractions," says Winge of Scandinavia, an Oslo-based travel company offering a series of week-long escorted tours, "Royal Viking Triangle," to the capital cities of Stockholm, Oslo and Copenhagen.

From fall to spring, travelers can visit the cities "at a time when they are not packed with other tourists ... when their whole atmosphere changes and the cultural life flourishes." Two nights are spent in each city, and reservations can be made for ballet, opera and other performances.

Because of frosty days, it is mostly an indoor tour: galleries, museums, shops. But participants will also get a chance to view the countryside. The group travels by afternoon train from Stockholm to Oslo. And the journey onward to Copenhagen is by overnight steamer through the Oslo Fiord, arriving in the Danish capital after breakfast.

Travelers can expect snow in mid-winter, but the cities are used to clearing it rapidly from streets and sidewalks. A blanket of fresh snow over treetops and buildings can add to the fairyland charm of these old cities. In January and February, daylight hours are short.

The land cost is $795 per person (double occupancy), which includes "deluxe" accommodations, full Scandinavian breakfasts, a farewell dinner in Copenhagen, train and cruise fares (with dinner aboard ship) and escorted sightseeing tours. Round-trip airfare from New York via SAS, the Scandinavian airline, is $395 to $495 per person depending on month of departure. The winter cost represents a saving of about $500 over similar summer packages.

A "bonus" is a $50 discount on purchases of $100 or more at a major department store in each city, including Illums Bolighus of Copenhagen.

Vermont inns feature home-like comfort, soothing atmosphere

By JERRY HULSE
Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WEATHERSFIELD, Vt. — He's a big bear of a man, and on this particular night he's seated at the piano playing "Moonlight in Vermont." Sensitively.

Candles cast their shadows against the walls, and guests listen as he picks up the lyrics. The warmth of the scene ignites the room like a log fire on a chilly evening.

For those who are searching for the perfect hideaway for one of those old-fashioned Christmases, I've found it ... beside a country lane in southern Vermont.

A yellow endorsement tells it all: "An intimate 18th-century inn nestled at the base of Hawks Mountain in a quiet, dreamy village ...."

The Inn at Weathersfield on Vermont 106, between Springfield and Woodstock, is a rambling old two-story pile that's filled with warmth and the love of its proprietors, the stirring of a resident ghost and the company of four friendly mutts who snooze before one of 11 fireplaces whenever they're not off chasing rabbits or padding behind a horse-drawn carriage (or in winter a sleigh filled with guests).

The Inn at Weathersfield is a joy, and without question this is due to the proprietors, Mary Louise and Ron Thorburn, who grew weary of the city and the corporate game (they're from Ohio) and decided to take a fling at country living. Or more specifically, operating a country inn. Mary Louise, gracious and charming, commands the kitchen. Ron, 57, describes himself as "the houseboy." Perhaps, but one gets the impression he'd be a tough act to follow, and I suspect impossible to replace. Wearing faded jeans, an old flannel shirt and a pair of reading glasses with one stem missing, he plays the piano nightly, romantic oldies, in a dining room whose walls are lined with books and antique bottles.

STEPS AWAY, KEROSENE lamps glow in another room that bids the guest to settle in with a glass of port on one of those chilly New England evenings.

While some inns serve merely as bedrooms for leaf peepers doing the fall foliage circuit, Weathersfield is a bastion of creature comforts. Collapsing into a deep sofa here is like coming home after a long and tiring journey and slipping into a pair of old jeans and comfortable sneakers and uncorking a bottle of sherry and forgetting the world beyond the door.

Vermonters travel miles to take their meals with Mary Louise, whose culinary talents are famous with New Englanders. The David Rockefellers arrived by horse-drawn carriage this summer; actor Paul Newman spent several days at Weathersfield with his actress wife and five daughters, as did former astronaut Wally Schirra. One evening novelist J.D. Salinger popped in with his daughter for dinner and Mary Louise begged off. Exhausted, she implored: "Please, could I serve you hors d'oeuvres instead?"

SALINGER ARGUED, politely but firmly. "I told my daughter, 'We are going to dine here' — and we are going to dine here."

And they did.

Originally a farm, the Inn at Weathersfield was also a tavern and a stagecoach stop. Each of its 10 guest rooms — several with working fireplaces — have private baths (none of that business of slipping down the hall to soap and shower). This plus two suites.

Guests are served breakfast in bed complete with silver setting, and high tea is an afternoon ritual. The bed-and-breakfast rate per couple is $68, or there's the modified American plan that figures out to $109 for shelter, Weathersfield's famous breakfasts, high tea and dinner. (Guests who choose a room with a fireplace pop for the wood — an extra 4 bucks.)

With only a minor blemish here and there, Weathersfield is my kind of inn. Homey, informal, warm. What sets it apart from competitors is its cheeriness. Obviously, life for Ron and Mary Louise is a continuing romance, and it is this love that touches each guest.

Whenever Ron is busy stoking fires, a 94-year-old aunt takes over at the piano, belting out the sort of romantic nonsense Nat King Cole was famous for. Imagine, 94 years old.

The Inn at Weathersfield takes on a special glow at Christmastime when guests bundle into a horse-drawn sleigh, bells ringing, and hurry off to cut a tree for the parlor. Afterward they string pop corn and cranberries and join in a yule log-lighting ceremony.

During the Christmas season, carols are sung each evening and candles glow and snowflakes freeze against frosted windowpanes. Christmas morning finds Mary Louise turning out turkey, ham and duck dinners and for desserts her home-baked pumpkin, apple and mince pies.

THE INN AT Weathersfield is set back off the highway and surrounded by maple trees. Out back there's an English garden. It's here that guests play croquet and horse shoes. And in summer they pick wild berries for Mary Louise's pies and swim in a pond that freezes over in winter when skaters take over.

Now, alas, it's that season when the leaf peepers come out of hiding to fill country inns from Essex, Conn., to Bethel, Me. — and a lot of places in between no one has ever heard of. My stake remains in Vermont, with scenes like those from an old kitchen calendar. In springtime, meadows are mottled with black-eyed Susans; summer brings forth corn and other garden-fresh vegetables; then with autumn the entire countryside is set aflame with the colors of maples, elms, birch and others. After this, snow covers the land and locals strap on cross-country skis to explore the white world of Vermont.

But I'm getting ahead of myself. Currently everything is a huge bouquet of reds, yellows and oranges. With autumn's arrival, Ty Jurras provides a special welcome at Chester House, a wonderful old two-story inn facing the green in Chester, Vt. Jurras, a master chef, is renowned for his quiches. With the holiday season approaching, his Christmas menu will include cold quiche Lorraine with champagne, caviar, a veal roast, vegetables grown in his own garden and home-baked pumpkin pies.

Other times Jurras turns out marvelous lamb stews, chops and soups — one that features a puree of home-grown vegetables, scallops, bacon and a thick chicken broth. Currently, he confides, he's completing plans for a world-class restaurant in connection with his room rentals at Chester House, one that promises to become known throughout New England. At the same time, prospective buyers have been at him, and he might be persuaded to sell one day ... might.

NO INN IN OLD New England is so spotlessly clean. Hooked rugs lie scattered across highly polished floors. Flowered paper covers the walls. Chester House evokes an Old World image that brings to mind a gracious and more genteel America. Lovingly restored, Chester House is impossible to fault. Guests snooze beneath handmade quilts and explore public rooms filled with warmth and books and the personality of its white-bearded host, an ex-Californian who delights in spreading the joys of New England.

Rates at Chester House figure out to $85 a couple or $50 single, including breakfast and a picnic lunch. For an extra 28 bucks Jurras provides a gourmet dinner complete with wine.

Up the road Andy and Sharon Papineau welcome other leaf peepers at Stone Hearth Inn, a handsome country roost with eight rooms and six baths. Sharing the spread are three youngsters, nine chickens and a canary. A pub room features a dart board and a player piano; the ubiquitous grandfather clock ticks away the hours. Strung across the front of Stone Hearth Inn (circa 1810) is a porch with rockers and a view of the meadow and Sharon's flower garden.

There's a game room with a pool table and Ping-Pong, and stored inside are bikes and skis. Rates at Stone Hearth Inn range from $24 to $32 per person.

Farm vacation popular

By CAROLE SUGARMAN
Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

PARADISE, Pa. — Off Route 30, beyond the neon "Shoofly Pie" signs that sprinkle Lancaster County's highways like salt on a pretzel, is a real slice of paradise: a dairy farm, a breakfast of fresh eggs, creamy-rich milk and home-cured salami and a family that welcomes vacationers and city folk looking to get their Adidas dirty.

Meet the Rancks, owners of the Verdant View Farm and one of a nationwide network of farm families who open their homes to overnight guests.

For the Rancks, this arrangement provides a supplemental income and as Don Ranck puts it, "a break from animals and nature"; for visitors, it is a lesson in lifestyle and a crash course in the scientific and complex occupation of farming.

Depending on the type of operation, farm vacationers around the country can watch or help milk cows, ride horses, pick produce, make jam, catch fish, bale hay or round up cattle.

And depending on the cook, meals may be served — with food, of course, directly from its sources: eggs the chickens laid at dawn, just-picked vegetables in salads and stews and roasts from home-grown beef.

TO URBANITES used to coffee and croissants, the Rancks' breakfast is a filling one. But like other farmers in a county of almost 2,000 dairy operations, Ginnie and Don Ranck have been up since 5 a.m. milking their herd of 58 Holsteins — perhaps with only a cup of cafe au lait to fuel them.

The group of 15 guests staying at the Rancks' this weekend — from as far as Singapore and as close as Silver Spring, Md. — have only to tumble out of their quilt-covered beds and saunter down a flight of steps before breakfast.

In the rebuilt kitchen an Amish woman, Lydia Beiler, and Ginnie Ranck's sister, Pam Helton, coordinate the meal. Much of it has been prepared with ingredients obtained through the farm method of shopping: swapping.

There is rhubarb-pineapple sauce (the rhubarb from an adjacent farm), thick omelets (made with eggs from the Beiler farm, cheese from a local farmers' market and Ginnie Ranck's attic-cured salami), whole wheat crumb pie (Ginnie's grandmother's recipe), big pitchers of unpasteurized milk from the morning's milking (available in little cups for those who want just a taste), whole wheat toast and jam, coffee made with well water and spearmint tea from the plants that grow alongside the front porch.

Ginnie Ranck, who was once a poultry judge for the 4H Club, and is now a cooking teacher there, is very particular that her eggs be absolutely fresh. She says she can tell a fresh egg automatically when she cracks it into a bowl — the white stands firmly around the yolk.

Ranck always serves an egg dish to guests (sometimes she steams them: cook like fried eggs but cover and place on low, slow heat), and there is always meat — either her salami, bologna or homemade veal sausage called bockwurst.

FRESH FRUIT is a regular breakfast accompaniment and some sort of pie, a tradition that Ranck said was started by Amish farmers in need of carbohydrate fixes after the morning chores (since simplified by the invention of breakfast cereal).

Ranck used to churn butter and make cottage cheese from the fresh milk, but it was too much work, she says. She has tried making yogurt, but hasn't gotten the procedure down; she says the cream settles on the top, because the milk is unpasteurized.

Ginnie and Don Ranck join the group for breakfast at a long wooden table in the 1896 farmhouse's dining room. Chatty and informal, the couple lead the discussion, complete with tales of a five-year stay in Brazil as part of a Mennonite agricultural-aid program, and a description of their new computer business called Sire Search, a mating service for bulls and cows.

The Rancks' four children sit among the guests: Eldon, 10, whose jobs include hayride driver and farm-tour guide; Heather, 8, who lets guests share her chore of bottle-feeding the newborn calves; Aaron, 4, who sits quietly, rubbing his sleepy eyes, and Alisa, 2, who is busy with her bottle of fresh farm milk.

After breakfast the milk is collected. A hose hooked to a refrigerated tank in the room adjacent to the milking parlor pumps the morning's milk into another tank — this one on a huge truck.

After picking up milk from the 15 farms on his route, Dale Keller, the driver, will have a truckful of 53,000 pounds, or 6,000 gallons, of creamy yellow milk. From there it will be transported to a dairy, where it will be pasteurized and sold.

Keller takes out test-tube-sized vials from the back of the truck — samples of milk from each of the farms on his route. Each vial is tagged with the code number of the farm, and the time and the date of the pickup.

IF ANTIBIOTICS are detected when the milk reaches the dairy, the original samples can be tested to find the culprit.

The 3,200-member farm co-op the Rancks belong to shares the monetary responsibility with the farmer if a truckload has to be disposed of; the total loss could be anywhere from $5,000 to $50,000.

Don Ranck, who says he drinks about 12 cups of milk a day, says his cows each produce about 8 gallons of milk daily from two milkings, with a butterfat content of about 3.8 percent. (Most whole milk contains 3.5 percent.)

But Ranck says that since the trend nowadays is toward low-fat milk, many dairy farmers are working to produce milk with a higher protein content instead, which adds body and richness to milk without the fat. To do this, they are feeding their cows with dry, longer-fiber feeds.

After Eldon Ranck's tour of the farm, which includes a walk through the three barns, a verbal and visual analysis of the cows' daily menu plan ("they like new hay the best"), a lesson on how to bale the hay and a taste of the black walnuts that have fallen from a towering tree, it's time for the afternoon milking.

The Rancks use milking machines that allow them to milk six cows simultaneously. The large, white-and-black-spotted cows line up in approximately the same order for every milking (their own pecking order), and walk lazily into a small room with wires and rubber contraptions. Here, little suction tubes pump their udders for 6 minutes.

Clad in high rubber boots, Don and Ginnie Ranck tie the cows' tails back and affix the suctions. As rich milk begins to fill the six glass containers under each cow, Don Ranck explains how it all happens: the massaging motion sends a message to the cow's pituitary gland, which releases a hormone, which releases the milk.

RANCK ALSO EXPLAINS that there's such a thing as a "perfect udder," an important trait in selective breeding. For milking machines, a cow's teats must be equally balanced and short, not long, as they are preferred for hand-milking.

After the milking comes dinner at the Esbenshades', the farm adjacent to the Rancks', which claims to be the oldest turkey farm in the United States.

There Gladys Esbenshade serves up a family-style meal of turkey in the straw, turkey steaks, smoked turkey ham and seemingly endless bowls of stuffing, buttered carrots, chow chow, apple butter, applesauce, creamed corn and potato bread.

Tired and stuffed, the guests relax on the back porch after dinner, while Eldon Ranck drags a few hard-core visitors back to the barn to feed the cows a late-night hay snack.

In the morning the visitors drive away, and the Rancks prepare to welcome another group of guests to their home.

New England trip full of romance

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BROOKLYN, Conn. — Here's a trip guaranteed to enchant romantics young and old — and those in between.

Trust me.

It's laid out for anyone traveling to Connecticut. Especially northeastern Connecticut. Yes, and particularly to Brooklyn and The Golden Lamb Buttery at Hillandale Farms.

Picture Henry Fonda and Katharine Hepburn in the film "On Golden Pond" and you get a fair idea of the mood for this romantic setting. While Bob Booth doesn't resemble the late actor particularly, his effervescent wife, Jimmie, could be taken for Hepburn.

Besides, like Fonda and Hepburn, they're lovers. Only in real life. And there's a pond, which reflects the image of The Golden Lamb Buttery, the restaurant they operate in conjunction with an inn that's set inside a two-story farmhouse, circa 1740, in this rural community with its grazing sheep and old-fashioned goodness.

Were I a honeymooner I'd go no farther. Not a step. I'd take a room in the inn and after this I'd stroll with my bride down a peaceful path to The Golden Lamb Buttery, the restaurant Bob and Jimmie Booth have established inside a 100-year-old barn. A red, picture-postcard barn. One with a hayloft that's still used and a wonderful old-fashioned kitchen and bundles of antiques.

Couples fall in love here, get engaged here, and return to repeat their wedding vows. That should tell you something about the romantic nature of this wonderful slice of New England.

Outside The Buttery a breeze stirs, carrying with it the fragrance of roses, and down by the pond the meadow glistens with dew. It would be a pity to come to The Buttery without a companion. Imagine dining alone with no one to share the moonlight and the wine and the warmth of this marvelous old barn.

Within its walls one forgets the daily pressures, relaxing in a setting from a forgotten yesterday. Weather is of no concern. Pooh. Let it rain. The drops spatter on the roof and a welcome fire blazes inside.

One writer described the barn as "a study in sophisticated rusticity." There's the smell of age and tantalizing odors that waft from Jimmie's kitchen. She's an incorrigible romantic who sends her guests on hayrides while she prepares dinner. A girl guitarist strums love songs while guests sip cocktails in a wagon pulled by a tractor. What Hollywood movie mogul ever created a dreamier scene?

For those who remain behind, drinks are served on a deck outside the barn with a view of Jimmie and Bob Booth's own special golden pond.

During dinner, hurricane lamps flicker at the tables with their fresh flowers, and the same girl from the hayride strolls through the little dining rooms playing her romantic melodies. The place is a charmer with its weathered barn board, bottle-glass windows and waitresses dressed in gingham gowns.

Dinner costs about $35 apiece but it's worth every penny. Not only because of the meal but because of Bob and Jimmie Booth, who met on a blind date when she was a buyer for Lord & Taylor and Bob was raising sheep and selling wool at his Hillandale Farms. Says Jimmie, "The moment I saw him I told myself, 'I'm going to marry him'" and of course she did.

Should the no vacancy sign be up at Jimmie and Bob Booth's, a second inn north of here is worth the detour. The Felshaw Tavern (a misnomer since it doesn't sell booze) offers bed and breakfast in a pre-Revolutionary dwelling on Five Mile River Road in the bucolic village of Putnam.

More than 200 years old, Felshaw Tavern already stood at a time when George Washington was running around in rompers. It has lost none of its charm.

At Felshaw Tavern guests have the choice of two bedrooms, each with a private bath, a working fireplace, four-poster beds and dozens of of elegant antiques. As an aside, Gen. Israel Putnam of Bunker Hill fame slept here as did Gen. John J. Pershing, the unflappable commander of World War I dough boys.

The price is the same single or double ($53.75), which includes an English-style breakfast of sausage and eggs, muffins and tomatoes.

Texas 800 miles wide

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — The distance across the breadth of the state of Texas is about 800 miles, according to the Rand McNally "Road Atlas."

It says the straightest route across the state is virtually due west from the eastern border near Shreveport, La., past Dallas and through the center of the state, to El Paso on the western border.

It would take just under approximately 18 hours of continuous driving to travel from border to border, according to the estimates printed in the Atlas by Rand McNally.

AFTER DERGULATION

Deregulation has proven to be a boon for travelers. Before 1978, the Civil Aeronautics Board controlled fares and routes. Consumers who wanted to fly from big city to big city could choose among airlines which all charged identical fares. Passengers traveling between smaller cities often had no choice it all, usually one airline with one fare. Under deregulation, however, consumers can now choose among several airlines and from among several "discount" fares. The emergence of small, low cost airlines has meant drastic price cuts on many routes. The ease with which community and regional airlines can enter new markets has improved service to smaller cities. These changes, when coupled with no-cost-to-the-consumer travel agent service, make the skies seem friendly indeed.

Whether you are traveling across the state or across the country, for business or for pleasure, a travel agent can be instrumental in getting you the most cost-effective airfare. At LONES TRAVEL SERVICE, 319 W. Texas on the street level of the Permian Bldg., our computerized system makes all your travel arrangements and reservations hassle-free. And because we are a full service American Express office, we can issue travelers checks, replace lost Amex credit cards and cash checks for card holders. We're open 8-5 Mon.-Fri., and Sat. by appointment. Phone 682-8645.

It is our policy to always search for the lowest airfare available for our clients.

COUNT THE EYES

There are 39 pair of eyes on this page. These represent the number of eyes you would need to view the 39 television channels available in the Midland area.

If you are a merchant you would need to air your commercial on every one of those channels at the same time to reach your prospective customers. Even then you wouldn't reach everyone because at no given time is everyone tuned to a television program.

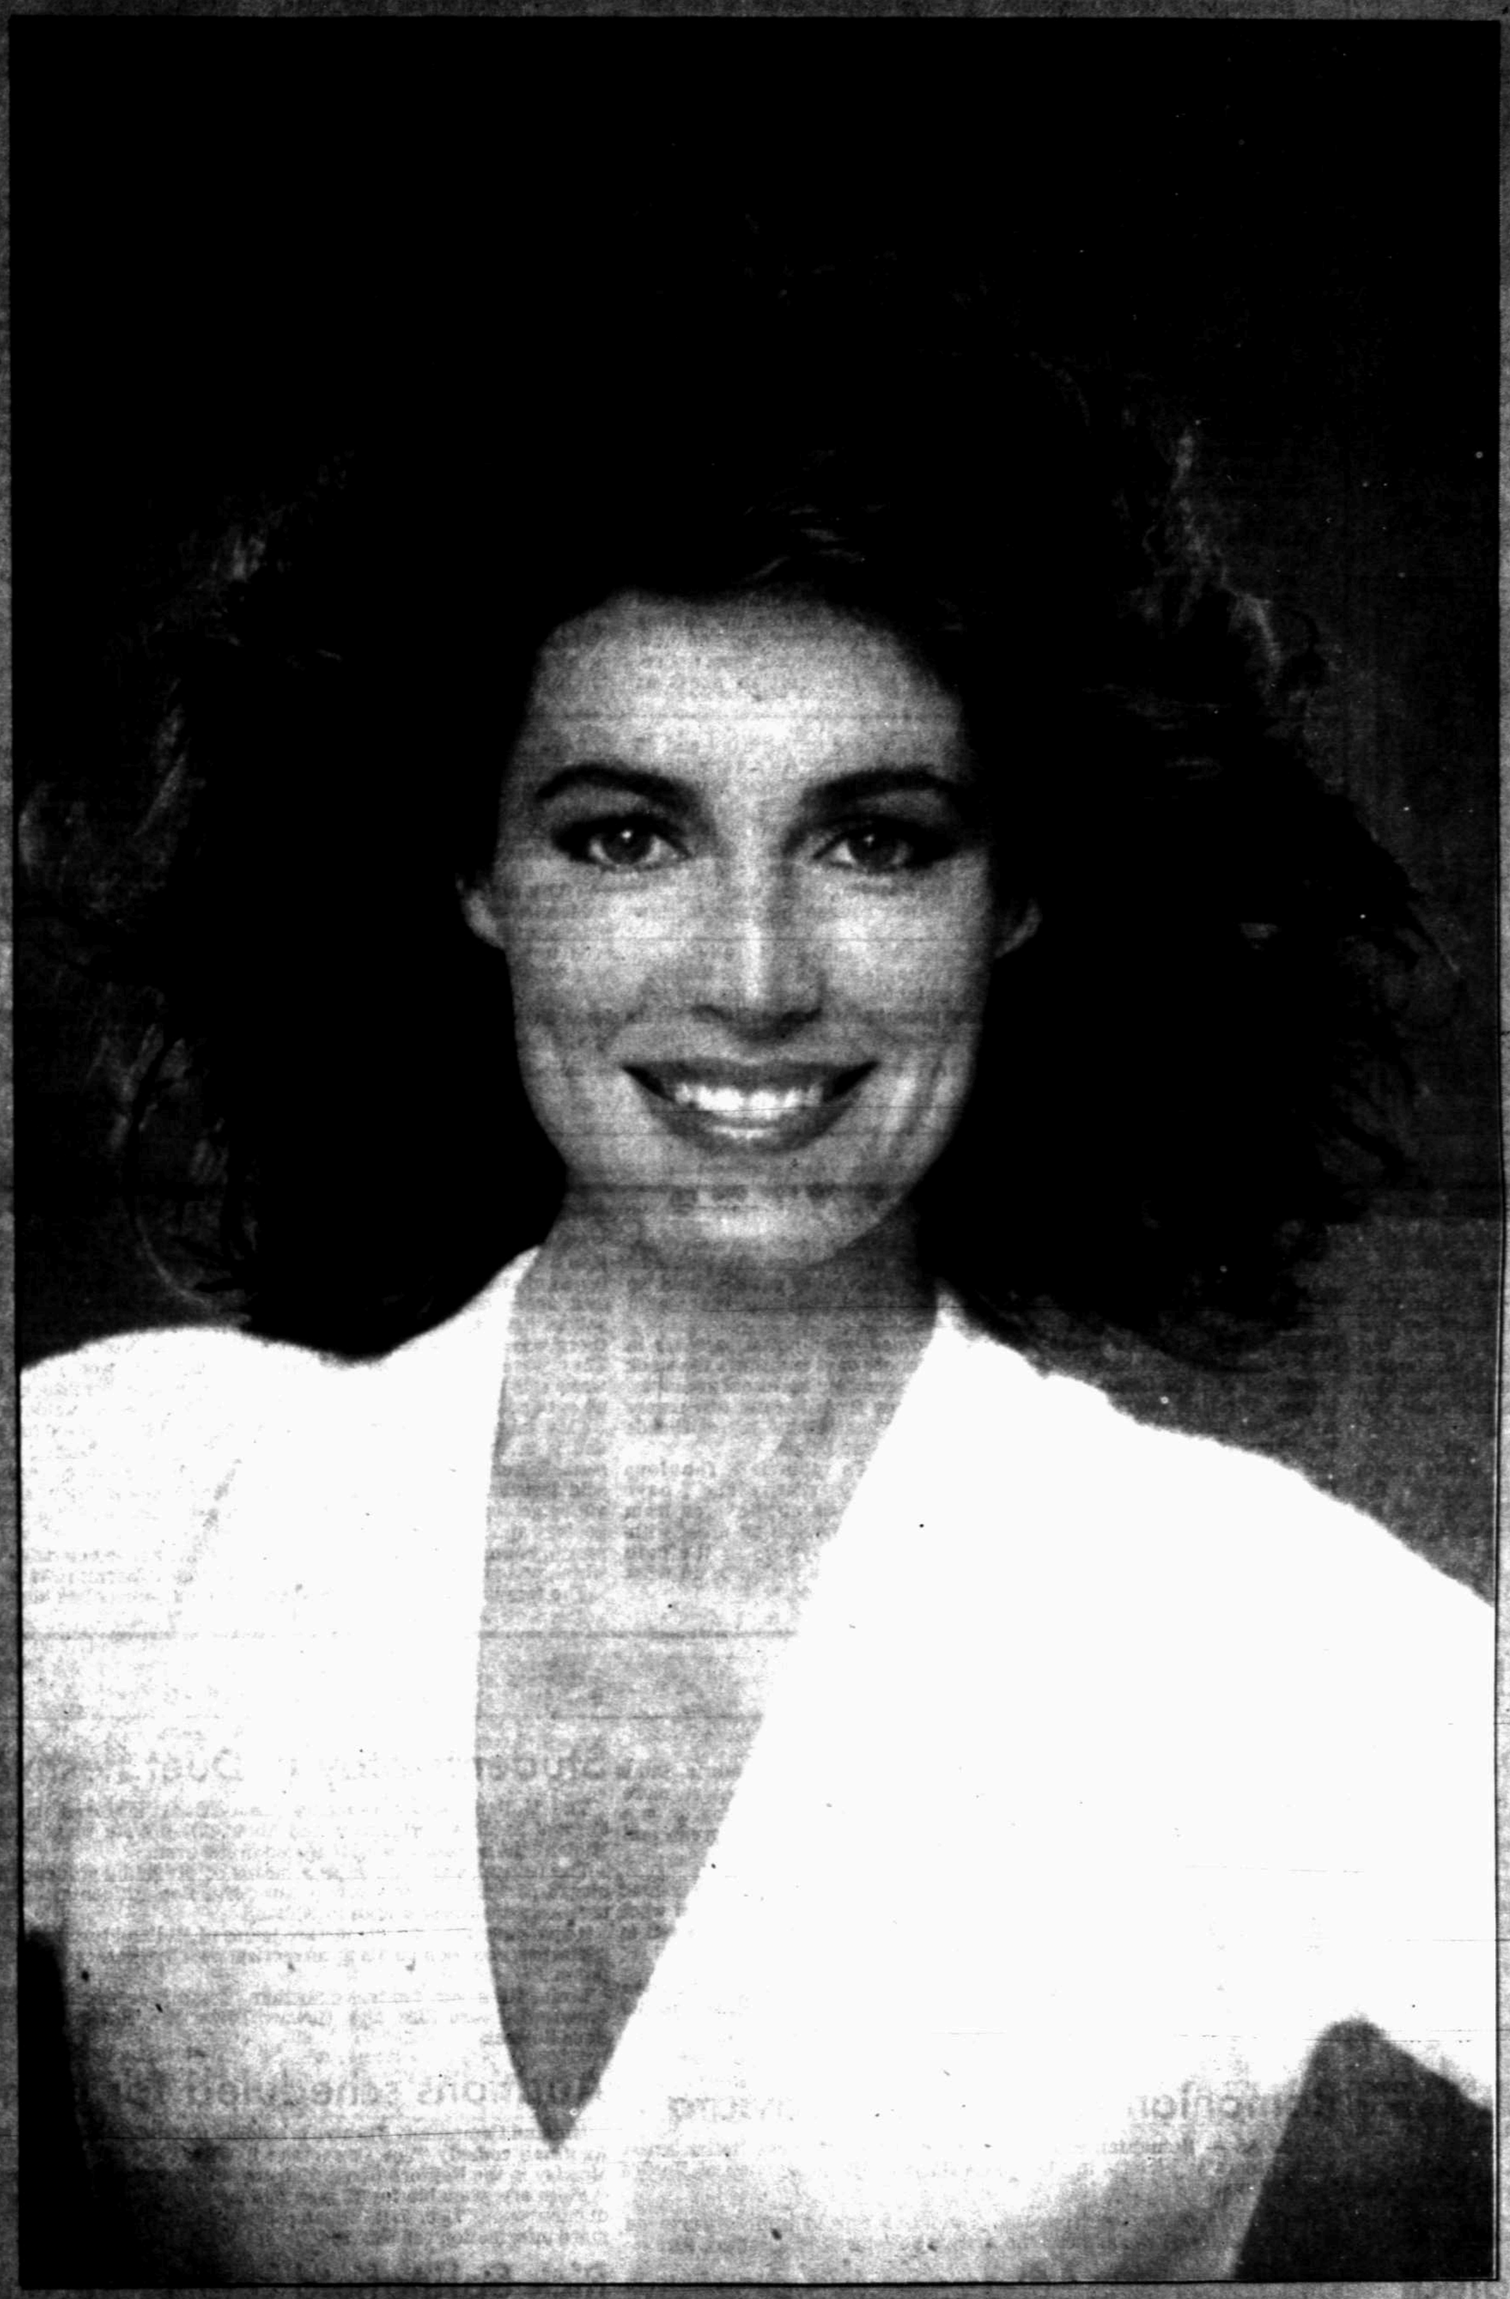

With an advertisement in the Midland Reporter-Telegram you can reach most of your prospects and in combination with the Midland Review you can reach all of your market. Furthermore, your sales message will be seen when your customers are there just as you are reading this ad now.

WEEK-LONG...

Courage of her convictions

Actress Cynthia Sikes plays Dr. Annie Cavanero on NBC-TV's "St. Elsewhere."

By JANE ARDMORE
King Features Syndicate

It is a joy to meet her. She is a vivid, audacious beauty, this girl who plays Dr. Annie Cavanaro in NBC's Emmy-award-nominated "St. Elsewhere." Cynthia Sikes is wearing a lilac blouse and her eyes blaze the same color.

"At this time yesterday I was jumping from a 40-foot cliff into the turbulent waters of the American River," she says. "It was something I'd never dreamed of in my life. But I've been too set in my ways. It's important to get out of your usual life and into nature, to challenge yourself. On a raft with four friends, I had just shot the rapids in the Middle Fork and that was exhilarating.

"We found this cliff and stopped to watch friends on another raft take the shoot. As we stood there, my friend Maria, a journalist, said, 'Let's jump!' 'Do what?' I said. It was something that would never in the world have occurred to me. But we did have on life preservers and tennis shoes in case we hit rocks.

"She jumped and I jumped right after her. Wild! Cold! Oh, the water was startling. A complete experience. I love something like this — to challenge myself and win, to overcome fear. Overcome fear and the rest is a piece of cake."

She continues, "Nature is so important to me. I'm part Cherokee Indian and to that I attribute the rhythm I feel in nature. We get so far away from that in business; our minds get overloaded and we short-circuit we go so fast. To spend a day as I did out of doors in the wilderness — the water, the trees, the mountains, to feel a part of it. You come back feeling nourished. I feel like the happiest girl alive."

IT IS A radiance bound to be reflected this season in her character as Dr. Annie, with whom she has no trouble identifying, for if the medical profession is consuming and imposes very real problems on the woman, acting, too, is consuming and imposes similar problems.

Ms. Sikes says, "Dr. Annie is dedicated, committed, strong and intelligent. I have to rise to the occasion. She doesn't really have a personal life, her life is the hospital. I think she exemplifies the struggle, the dichotomy women face in wanting to have a personal life and a career, to achieve a balance and not compromise one for the other.

"So far, Dr. Annie has just one focus, which is not satisfying. I'm hoping this year we can explore areas more personal, more human, even humorous. We'll see what the writers have up their sleeves."

Ms. Sikes knows what is up her own sleeve. She is opening up her life to having more fun, more emphasis on personal enjoyment. No more of this night and day, eating, sleeping, thinking and dreaming just of her career.

"I've been going non-stop since '74," when she dropped out of college to come to Hollywood, "and I've never been married, probably because I didn't take the time to develop the relationships. Not that I didn't have a couple of nice relationships, but I couldn't afford the time or energy for marriage so I didn't allow that to be in my consciousness. It's selfish in a way, but you cut yourself off — if you really want to achieve professionally — it takes that kind of commitment, you sacrifice a lot of things.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Everly Brothers

Q. I was wondering if you could tell me what the Everly Brothers are up to and if they're married and where they live.

Iris Pretz
Chicopee, Mass.

A. They've been busy following their much-publicized reconciliation: They just finished a two-month tour of the U.S. and next month start a tour of the U.K., on the heels of their new album "EB '84" — their first in over a decade. They should be back in this country for more appearances by the end of the year.

Both are divorced single parents. Don lives in Nashville; Phil, in L.A.

Q. Could you please tell me about Alan Hunter from MTV? Is he from the South?

H.M.
Snellville, Ga.

A. Sure is. The 26-year-old former actor was born in Birmingham, Ala., and educated at Millsaps College in Jackson, Miss. Being from the South even helped land him on MTV: He met MTV executive Bob Pittman at the "Up North in Mississippi" picnic, the annual get-together for natives of that state, in New York's Central Park. A month later he got a call from Pittman to go on the air.

He did do some acting, though, before becoming a VJ and one project is always likely to turn up on MTV. He was in David Bowie's video, "Fashion."

Alan Hunter

Q. I enjoy all of Steven Spielberg's movies. What can you tell me about him?

J.J.
Valparaiso, Ind.

A. He was born December 18, 1947 in Cincinnati, Ohio, but because of his father's computer/electronics career switches, the family moved several times during his childhood — to Haddonfield, N.J.; Scottsdale and Phoenix, Ariz. and finally, Saratoga, Calif.

As a child, Spielberg had a highly developed imagination and was afraid of everything, reports his mother, Leah. According to Spielberg, he was skinny, had big ears and acne and was always picked last for sports teams in school.

He sought refuge in moviemaking and had an early affinity for it: When his father began photographing baby Steven's first steps with a new movie camera, according to his mother, her son walked straight toward the camera.

He made his first movie at 12, a collision between his Lionel trains. At 13, he made a film about robbing a train, starring a neighborhood friend. Other stars of his home epics were his three younger sisters, on whom he perfected the art of movie terror. "I killed them off several times," he explains. At 16, he made a 2½-hour film called "Firelight" that was a sci-fi forerunner of his later blockbuster, "Close Encounters..."

He studied English at California State College at Long Beach, but spent most of his time sneaking onto the lot at Universal to watch real moviemakers at work. A few months short of his 21st birthday, he became one of them when a Universal executive, impressed by his 24-minute short about hitchhikers, "Amblin'," gave him a contract to start directing TV.

Today, his production company, Amblin, is based at Universal. And Amblin is busy: On the heels of his summer hits "Indiana Jones" and "Gremlins," Spielberg is producing a new film, "Goonies," to be followed by "Young Sherlock Holmes" and "Peter Pan." The third installment of the Indiana Jones saga is penciled in for release in the summer of 1987.

In the meantime, he's developing a series for NBC called "Amazing Stories," an anthology series not unlike "Night Gallery," the late '60s series on which he got his start.

He was involved for several years with actress Amy Irving but they broke up in 1980 en route to their wedding. At last report, they seem to be back together.

Q. Please tell me about Martina Navratilova.

A fan
Waterbury, Conn.

A. As you probably know, she's originally from Czechoslovakia, where she began to play tennis at the age of 5 because she liked it; but by 7, she started to focus on goals.

"I saw the finals at Wimbledon on television," she explains, "and I started dreaming about becoming the youngest ever to win Wimbledon and the youngest to be number one. From that time on, I was determined to be the best tennis player in the world."

Since you're a fan, you know that she's achieved that right now, at least on the women's circuit, and is now shooting for history with the Australian Open starting next month. If she wins that title, it will make eight straight Grand Slam victories — a first.

She's also gunning for Chris Evert Lloyd's 56-match streak which she will probably have surpassed by the time you read this — although Chris did beat her in an exhibition to benefit the Martina Youth Foundation, right after the U.S. Open. Chris, obviously, is fighting back.

Martina first trained with her parents, since both were top-ranked amateur players in Czechoslovakia. She visited the U.S. in 1973, defected in 1975 and became a U.S. citizen in 1981. She lives in Dallas, when not traveling the circuit, roots for the Dallas Cowboys passionately, and seems to spend more time than she likes in gossip columns for her personal life.

A relationship with writer Rita Mae Brown broke up rather loudly a few years ago and now she's being hounded, most noticeably by the British press at

Martina Navratilova

Wimbledon, over the presence of a blond Texas socialite named Judy Nelson.

Q. Whatever happened to Garry Moore and Peggy Cass?

Y. Readding
Bargaintown, N.J.

A. Moore retired to Hilton Head, S.C., about seven years ago and, according to an associate, is unlikely to return to TV.

Peggy Cass, on the other hand, has been working pretty steadily. In the past few years, she did the rounds of the game shows and the soaps ("The Doctors"). Lately she has been concentrating on theater. She was onstage in New York in the shows "Once a Catholic" and "42nd Street," and spent this summer in Easthampton, Long Island, in a play called "Hail Thurber."

Q. What can you tell me about "Buckaroo Banzai" star Peter Weller — background, next projects?

Pat McKinnis
Henderson, Nev.

A. His background is military brat — born in Stevens Point, Wisc., raised in Germany and all over the U.S. He's rebellious: While at North Texas State as a music major (he'd planned to become a trumpeter) he marched in anti-Vietnam War rallies at the same time his father and brother were serving in the war.

After college, he came to New York on a scholarship to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts. Soon after graduation, he appeared in the Vietnam drama "Sticks and Bones," then on Broadway in "Picnic."

You may have seen him as Ali MacGraw's lover in the film "Just Tell Me What You Want" (a role he continued for a while after shooting) or as Diane Keaton's lover/contractor in "Shoot the Moon."

Next, you can see him in another domestic drama: "First Born." It opens this week.

CYNTHIA

"And then, all of a sudden, you're 30, OK now, relationship time, but you can't just order it out of the sky. 'One relationship, over easy on rye, hold the mayonnaise, please.' Someone recently brought up the subject of my biological clock ticking. I still have time, but even if I didn't, what am I supposed to do?"

"He said he'd have a child out of wedlock; but I don't know that I would want a child on my own. I believe in marriage and the family unit. That to me would be part of having a child, the joy of love and sharing. I don't think of a child as a biological experience. It should be something spontaneous and lovely.

"The choice is there, of course. Maybe that's what the liberation movement is about. If there are people who wish to do this, great. But for me...I come from a big family, I'm one of five. I'm tuned to the idea of husband and wife, the whole old-fashioned view.

"I'm actually in the best place of my life right now. I'm seeing a man I've known for about a year, I'm exploring that relationship and it's very wonderful. A nice beginning. So we'll see..."

She and her friend Colleen Camp (who is now filming "They All Laughed") were just discussing the subject. They've known each other since they were 21. That, they decided, may have been the time they should have each gotten married. "It may take us years now. Maybe we know too much."

But she and Ms. Camp both know better. "First, of course," Ms. Sikes says, "you have to be a whole person yourself. Then, when you partner with someone, you know it is for the right reason. It's not to make them responsible for you. It's to be a team.

"When I think of men in the old days, having to be responsible for everybody...that was too much. My view of marriage is to have an equal partner, really share the load and support each other equally, hold up your side of the bargain. That would be fun.

"Women were equal partners in the pioneer days and that's the stock I come from. My maternal grandparents came from Ireland (they were Irish and Indian) and my dad's side is English and Dutch.

"My dad's mom is a fabulous woman, very creative and I have her spirit. I took up the torch from her because she was an artist without a support system or the path to pursue it. I've gotten to do what she didn't get to do."

Ms. Sikes was born in Coffeville, Kan., "beautiful country, but in terms of women finding themselves and creatively expressing themselves, this is the Bible Belt and there was a severe code for women. They were in the home and there was a role to play. They couldn't just go out and have a career.

"My mother is a housewife; my dad is in the independent oil business. When I was growing up he sold insurance; but he had been a young geologist and he went back to geology and developed his own company, changed paths in mid-life which was pretty brave."

The family had moved to Wichita. There was no real plan for Ms. Sikes to go to college or have a career so, at 17, she decided that the way to get to school would be to enter the Miss Wichita pageant, win and go on to be Miss America. The Miss Wichita win would give her scholarship money, create an avenue on which she could achieve a different kind of life, a career for herself.

"I didn't do badly," she admits. I was planning to go to the top and I was the runner-up to Miss America. I was in the top 10 and won the swimming-suit title."

With her scholarship money, she attended Wichita State University, with a journalism major in mind.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Novel writing subject of workshop

"Writing the Great American Novel" is the subject of a week-long workshop being conducted here by P.M. Fielding of Tulsa beginning Monday.

A night and afternoon session will be offered in this course which is sponsored by The Professional Writers Workshop. Seating is limited.

"You don't have to spend years writing a book before you sell it," Ms. Fielding says. "If it isn't going to sell, you might as well find out before you waste a great deal of time on a project."

Many of her students, she says, sell books by proposal or by writing a partial and they sell magazine articles by query letters.

Ms. Fielding says it isn't "mysterious or difficult" to get published; "you have to know what is expected of you and produce good quality manuscripts."

While she is in Midland, Ms. Fielding will speak to the Texas Nightwriters at its regular meeting at 1 p.m. Saturday. The group, which is composed of writers from Texas and New Mexico who are interested in writing to sell, meets at the Artificial Lift Efficiency School.

For more information on either the workshop or the writers group call Ginger Rawlins, 685-3568 or 685-3232.

Weaving will be demonstrated

BIG SPRING — Nancy Martin will demonstrate spinning and weaving at the Heritage Museum from 1 to 5 p.m. today.

Mrs. Martin will illustrate the steps involved in cleaning and carding raw wool to prepare the wool for spinning. She then spins prepared wool into thread on a spinning wheel.

On a small floor loom, Mrs. Martin weaves the thread into fabric. She is currently working on a woolen tartan. As a plaid, tartans require more precision in weaving than some fabrics. The one she is working on is a variation of the Black Watch tartan, a hunting tartan in blue, green and black.

She also spins and weaves materials other than wool, and she has created a supplementary display of various fibers. The display illustrates raw wool, linen, silk, cotton and other more exotic fibers and the steps involved in processing and spinning those fibers into thread.

The Heritage Museum is located at 510 Scurry in Big Spring. Admission is $1 for adults and free to children, members, youth and state hospital groups.

Romanian to be in 'La Traviata'

DALLAS — Romanian soprano Nelly Miricioiu replaces Italian artist Maria Chiara as Violetta in The Dallas Opera's 1984 production of Verdi's "La Traviata."

Miss Chiara withdrew from the production due to injuries received in an accident, said Nicola Rescigno, artistic director of The Dallas Opera.

Miss Miricioiu made her American debut and earned critical acclaim in performances of "La Traviata" last season with San Francisco Opera. Recent appearances include the title role of "Lucia di Lammermoor" at La Scala with Luciano Pavarotti.

"La Traviata" opens The Dallas Opera's fall season at 8 p.m. Thursday and Saturday. All performances are at the Music Hall in Fair Park.

Students play in Duet Festival

The Midland Music Teachers Association sponsored its annual Duet Festival Saturday afternoon and about 280 private piano students of 20 Midland music teachers participated in the event.

The festival was planned as a means of providing students the opportunity of participation in a group music situation. Students performed simultaneously at several studios in Midland.

Adjudicators for the event were teams of Midland teachers who rated the performers on such points as memorization, rhythm, accuracy and interpretation.

Leslie Ring was festival chairman. Committee members were Shelley Crawford, Laura Ellis, Mrs. Howard Price, Mrs. Rafael Ramirez and Mrs. Hans Roweck.

Audtions scheduled for comedy

Midland Community Theatre is holding tryouts for the Moss Hart, George Kaufman comedy "You Can't Take it With You" at 7:30 p.m. Sunday and Monday in the Redfern Room, Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Roles are available for 12 men and seven women ages 18 to 70. The production opens Dec. 7 in Theatre One, the Walter R. Davis Theatre. For more information call 682-2544.

Rick Springfield coming in concert

ODESSA — Rick Springfield will be appearing in concert Nov. 14 at Ector County Coliseum.

Appearing with Springfield will be special guest Corey Hart. Tickets may be purchased at Endless Horizons in Midland and Odessa and Odessa's Permian Mall.

'American Dreamer' funny, witty film

By DAVID LEE FORREST

At first, the advertisements for "American Dreamer" don't sound nearly as good as the film truly is: "She was an ordinary housewife until her trip to Paris turned into an extraordinary adventure."

This may sound frighteningly similar to the stupid plot of the recent — and very bad — film, "Until September," but, happily, "American Dreamer" turns out to have much more in common with another recent and quite enjoyable movie, "Romancing the Stone."

In fact, "American Dreamer" may even be a funnier than its romantic comedy predecessor.

JoBeth Williams plays a housewife who lives in Ohio with her two young sons and her boring, bland and balding businessman husband.

She is an avid reader of a fictional series of romance-thriller novels about a character named "Rebecca Ryan," a lovely globe-trotting heroine who speaks five languages and is a master of martial arts.

Ms. Williams enters a promotional contest to win a trip to Paris by writing a short story using this character. Her obnoxious husband (one woman in the audience during the film's preview showing got so annoyed at him, she yelled "Jerk!" at the screen) condescendingly humors her.

"The important thing, kid, is that you're doing something you like to do," he says with a smirk on his face.

To his astonishment, his wife wins the contest and — when he still proves difficult — takes off for Paris without him.

At first, Ms. Williams acts like a typical American tourist. Then things take an amazingly bizarre turn. Ms. Williams receives a bump on the head in a traffic accident and when she comes to, believes that she is the rich and irresistable super-sleuth, Rebecca Ryan.

As Rebecca, she begins to have a wildly terrific time. She meets and throughly confuses Tom Conti, who, realizing that she is more than a little crazy, chases after Ms. Williams trying to keep her out of trouble. She stays constantly one step ahead of him all the way, however.

Whether drinking a half-dozen Russian diplomats under the table or disrupting the highest levels of French politics, Ms. Williams maintains an uncanny combination of high elegance and even higher weirdness.

She charges into rooms, stylishly tosses her wrap over her shoulder (usually unwittingly hitting someone in the face with it), announces a non-existent crime is about to take place and then mysteriously vanishes, leaving massive bewilderment in her wake.

Of course, there does just happen to some real foul doings taking place and she and Conti stumble right into the middle of it. Then real bullets start to fly, pushing the puzzled Conti even farther into the Twilight Zone.

After her appearance in "The Big Chill," it's easy to think of Ms. Williams as the prototypical '80s female. In the current film "Teachers," she also plays an upwardly mobile, but idealistic Yuppie lawyer.

During the first part of this film, she again fits neatly into the well-scrubbed Midwestern, suburban WASP stereotype, which makes her abrupt transformation into Rebecca Ryan all the more fun.

In many respects, her character turns out to be much more positive than the similar one Kathleen Turner protrayed in "Romancing the Stone."

While Ms. Turner needed a he-man armed with a sawed-off shotgun to protect her, such a macho father-figure would simply cramp Ms. Williams style. Conti proves to be her best friend rather than her heavy bodyguard.

Conti, looking a little like a befuddled Dustin Hoffman, comes across as warm and funny even though he spends much of his time playing the straight man to Ms. Williams.

The mystery subplot of "American Dreamer" is never resolved very well and the whole plot is, to put it mildly, a bit far-fetched.

The clever wit and lovable characters, however, will probably have audiences laughing so hard that they'll remember the film's sweet dreams rather than the minor flaws of "American Dreamer."

"American Dreamer," rated PG for some adult situations, is now showing at Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

'Buckaroo Banzai' eccentric film

There is an oddly funny scene in "The Adventures of Buckaroo Banzai Across the 8th Dimension" in which a mad scientist is delivering a emotionally-charged Hitler-style harangue to his horde of evil followers, the Lectroids from Planet 10 (known for their slovenly housekeeping, love of junk food and determination to corrupt the universe).

"Where are we going?!?" he shouts to them.

"Out there," the lackluster group answers in unison.

"When?!?" he screams.

"Real soon," comes the reply.

In a way, that off-the-wall exchange aptly summarizes "Buckaroo Banzai." The film's goal is to get somewhere way out there in left field and it does so real soon.

One may leave the theater having enjoyed the tongue-in-cheek fantasy adventure a great deal but still be completely convinced that the whole thing made very little, if any, sense.

The film's hero, Buckaroo Banzai, the son of a Japanese scientist and Texan engineer, is a world-renowned physicist, neurosurgeon, rock singer, race car driver, private investigator, professional adventurer and all-around media hero.

He uses a jet-powered automobile both to break the world's land speed record and to break into the eighth dimension. This inadvertently provides an avenue of escape for a group of hostile alien warriors who have been imprisoned in that dimension — a throughly nasty place — for their crimes.

Buckaroo and his inseparable companions the Hong Kong Cavaliers — a combination scientific think tank, A—Team and rock band — battle the clever and unpredictable enemy to save the universe.

That is a grossly oversimiplified synopsis of the plot since it doesn't even mention Buckaroo's late wife's long-lost twin sister, the United States president's preparations to bomb Russia despite his bad back or the fact that Orson Welles's famous 1938 "War of the Worlds" radio broadcast wasn't a hoax.

Not only does "Buckaroo Banzai" throw in everything, including the kitchen sink, it does so at a simply amazing breakneck, hell-bent-for-leather pace.

The movie is packed with wild ideas, wacky humor and weird characters. Peter Weller is fairly good as the too-cool-for-words Buckaroo — a pulp hero Doc Savage for the '80s — but perhaps plays his role in almost too dead-pan a fashion at times.

There are simply too many Hong Kong Cavaliers for any one of them to make much of an impression, even though the screenplay is careful to try to give each of them some distinctive attributes.

Out of this thundering herd of brillant researchers and so-so musicians, only Jeff Goldblum as New Jersey stands out and it is more due to his horrendously ugly cowboy costume than his characterization.

John Lithgow is wonderfully strange as the Italian scientist Emilio Lizardo, who has been possessed by the spirit of the demonic alien dictator John Whorfin.

The real star quality of the film, however, shines out from the outlandish screenplay by native Texan Earl Mac Rauch and the quirky direction of W.D. Richter. The writer and director pack so many funny lines and screwy details into "Buckaroo Banzai" that it is nearly impossible to catch all of them in just one viewing.

Still, this is definitely not a film for everyone. It is just too eccentric.

The hectic razzle-dazzle that will thrill many viewers will no doubt simply leave others feeling confused. And audiences looking for logical plot development will be grossly disappointed.

If one can just jump aboard for the ride without being overly concerned about where the roller-coaster ends, though, "The Adventures of Buckaroo Banzai Across the 8th Dimension" can be a lot of silly fun.

After all, as Buckaroo himself sagely notes during the film, "No matter where you go, there you are."

"The Adventures of Buckaroo Banzai Across the 8th Dimension," rated PG for violence, is now showing at North Park Cinema.

'Sheena' stupid movie (Honestly)

Take the worst, the dumbest, the most poorly made Tarzan movie you've ever seen, add some female nudity, update it slightly and the result would be something similar to "Sheena."

"Sheena" is the type of movie that's so bad that friends are incredulous when you tell them about it. They suspect you're making it up and you have to keep swearing, "No, honest. It really is that stupid."

As a young child, Sheena is left in the African wilderness when her parents, two American doctors, are killed in a cave-in while they're exploring the bowels of a sacred mountain for the source of magic healing earth that cures cancer. ("Honest.")

Sheena grows up in the jungle, learning to telepathically communicate with animals by holding her fingers to her forehead and scrunching her eyes tightly shut. She looks so ridiculous doing this that one suspects the animals cooperate merely because they feel embarrassed for her.

As she grows in womanhood, Sheena, played by Tanya Roberts, a former "Charlie's Angel," also spends a great deal of time riding a zebra around. Since she does this wearing only a skimpy leather halter top and bikini bottom (with ragged edges to give it that chic jungle look), one wonders how the fair-skinned female avoids terminal sunburn.

Her blissful life is interrupted when the king of Tigora (the film was shot in Kenya), where Sheena lives, is assassinated by his brother, the prince of Tigora.

The evil brother, played by Trevor Thomas, drives a red Mercedes-Benz convertible, kicks 60-yard field goals for an NFL football team and says things like, "Hey, my man, what's happening?" ("Honestly.")

An American TV sportscaster, played by Ted Wass, is also in Tigora at the time of the assassination to film footage of the prince kicking a football over the royal palace for a show called "Sports World." ("Really").

Both he and Sheena find out too much about the regicide and are pursued by the prince and his gang of mercenaries.

Sheena uses her animal friends to combat the bad guys. In the movie's most memorable — and perhaps silliest — scene, she destroys an armed military helicopter by attacking it with a flock of vicious killer pink flamingos. ("Really, I'm not making this up.")

Tanya Roberts protrays Sheena by staring blankly, using awkward body language and mouthing horrible dialogue in a flat monotone. She makes Johnny Weissmuller — who played Tarzan in during the 1930s and 1940s — look like a poet.

The absolute best that can be said about her performance is that she looks very pretty.

Wass fares a little better by camping up his character. There is no way, however, that delivering lines like "How many toes does a zebra have?" or "I love you so much it busts my heart" is going to help further his acting career.

It would be more fun to scan the cable-TV channels for a rerun of an old Tarzan movie than to sit through "Sheena." For that matter, it might be more fun to watch 24-hour continuous weather forecasts on the Weather Channel than to sit through "Sheena."

"Sheena," rated PG for some sexual innuendo, is now showing at the Texan Drive In.

Project objective to get arts into neighborhood

"You Gotta Have Art" is Midland Arts Assembly's newest program designed to take quality arts experiences into neighborhoods throughout Midland.

The idea for "You Gotta Have Art" evolved from the success of the Assembly's first Celebration of the Arts held earlier this year.

"The whole concept behind the Assembly is to get arts organizations, large and small alike, to work together to emphasize the importance of the arts in the community," says Jean Posey, president of MAA. "Celebration '84 was our first major effort to this end and 'You Gotta Have Art' " is the second project.

"We want to take quality arts experiences out to kids where they live, in their own neighborhoods, to get them to feel comfortable about creatively expressing themselves. The underlying objective is to let them have fun with the arts."

Also involved in the project along with staff from the Museum of the Southwest is the Parks and Recreation Department, whose recreation superintendent, Em Carnett, says, "We want to reach children and expose them to new experiences in the world of arts appreciation."

Upcoming events include "Dancing" at Dennis the Menance Park, Nov. 17; "Music" at Guadalupe Catholic Church, Dec. 15; "Hidden Treasures" at Park Center YMCA, Jan. 19; "Kites" at the Girl Scout House, Feb. 16; "Kite Flying" at Windlands Park, March 16; "Creative Dramatics" at Theatre Midland, April 20; "Fine Arts" at Washington Park Pavilion, May 11; and "Celebration of the Arts" at Midland Center, May 18.

Sculptor in action

San Antonio sculptor James M. Romberg will demonstrate his technique, which includes using the raku firing method, in a two-day workshop Nov. 10 and 11 at Midland College. Cost is $25 for non-students and $20 for students. For registration information call MC's Community Services Department or the art department. Romberg also has a showing of his work opening at Gallery 1114, 1114 N. Big Spring St., at 7 p.m. Nov. 10. The public is invited to attend the opening.

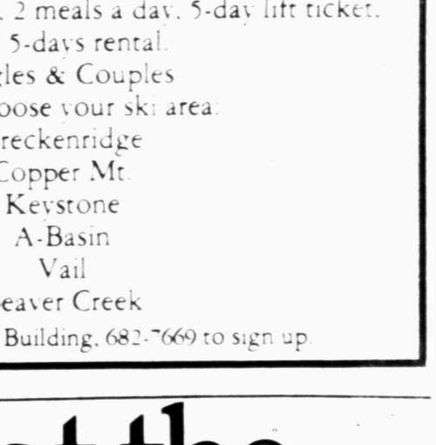

Laid back

Leslie Caron as Gigi takes it easy as Louis Jourdan and Hermione Gingold kick up their heels. "Gigi" is the second in the 12-film presentation in Midland Community Theatre's "Cinema '84." Due to less tickets being sold by Monday's opening night showing of "Dr. Zhivago," the subscription membership drive will continue through the Nov. 5 presentation of "Gigi." Ticket price for the series is $20 for MCT members and $25 for non-members. For more information call Theatre Midland, 682-2544.

Singing four

The Cathedral Quartet with their pianist performs at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Bonham Junior High School in Odessa. Since its formation in 1964, this gospel quartet has recorded over 50 albums. The group won four Dove Awards in 1977 and performed backup on Johnny Cash's first gospel album. Tickets, priced at $6 in advance and $7 at the door, may be purchased at area bookstores.

Workshop sponsored on fundraising for organizations

ODESSA — The Texas Assembly of Arts Councils and the Odessa Cultural Council will sponsor an in-depth workshop on "Fundraising for Non-Profit Organizations" from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 10 at Odessa College, Room 109, Electronics-Technology Building.

John W. Sims, executive director of the Arts Council of Fort Worth and Tarrant County, will lead the workshop. Sims, a recognized fundraising authority, conducted similar workshops earlier this fall in Longview and Abilene.

Sims was associated with the YMCA before coming to the Fort Worth Council in 1961 and holds a masters degree in business administration from Oklahoma University. He is a member of the board of directors of the TAAC and the North Texas March of Dimes and belongs to the Fort Worth Chapter of the National Society of Fund Raising Executives.

Registration fee for the session will be $30 for members of the TAACs or a local arts council and $40 for non-members. Those wishing to attend need to send their name, address and registration fee to the Texas Assembly of Arts councils, 121 East 8th, Suite 1103, Austin, Texas 78701.

For more information, contact the Assembly office, 1-512-474-8495 or Jo Ann Steet, Odessa Cultural Council, 1-337-1492.

"We are pleased to be able to offer this workshop to non-profit organizations," says Peter Fox Jr., president of TAAC.

"In our work with non-profit groups all over the state, we have found a real need for specific instruction on how to raise funds for local organizations. Board members, administrators and volunteers can all make valuable use of the techniques and practical tips offered in this workshop."

Symphony, chorale to give free concert

The Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale will present its free fall choral concert the "Three Great B's of Choral Music: Bach, Brahms and Britten" at 8 p.m. Nov. 3 in Odessa and 2:30 p.m. Nov. 4 in Midland.

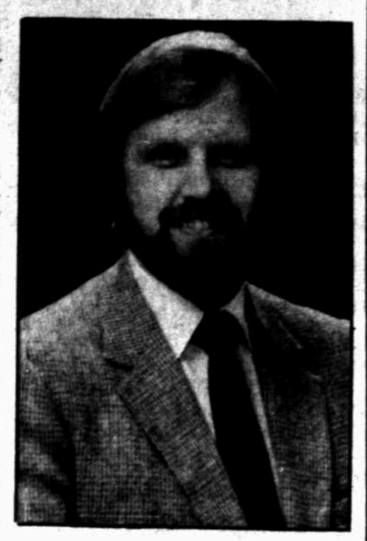

The Odessa performance will be at Crescent Park Baptist Church and the Midland performance at First Baptist Church. Both will be conducted by Dr. Stanley Engebretson, now in his sixth season as chorale director.

Throughout his tenure, the chorale has grown in quality and size and membership now numbers over 130 singers. Engebretson also serves as director of choral activities at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, Odessa, and as music director of Memorial Christian Church, Midland.

Soloists for the upcoming performances from Midland are Beth Hanssen, Midge Anderson, Linda Kester, Scott Hammond and James Humphreys. Other soloists are Susan Dawes of Big Spring and Jane Debenport and G.W. "Dub" Shepherd, both of Odessa.

"The concert features some of the brightest and most enjoyable music written by the three great B's of choral composition," says Engebretson. "We especially wanted to perform works by J.S. Bach this year in preparation for (the anniversary of) his 300th birthday in March of 1985."

Works to be featured on the concert include a motet by J.S. Bach, "Der Geist hilft unsrer Swachheit auf," followed by some of Brahms' lightest and most attractive works, the Neue

Dr. Stanley Engebretson

Leibeslieder (New Lovesong) waltzes. Concluding the first portion of the concert will be a traditional favorite by Benjamin Britten, "Rejoice the Lamb." This animated English work utilizes both choir and pipe organ to their fullest potential.

Following the Britten will be several choral works of a lighter nature including folk songs by Stephen Foster, such as "Nelly Bly," "Skip to My Lou" and "Go 'Way Down From my Window," performed by the Pro Arte Singers, a chamber group from the Symphony Chorale. The concert concludes with some of the best loved traditional spirituals.

For more information call the symphony offices, 563-0921.

Yoder returns to choreograph 'Tomran'

New York City choreographer Jerry Yoder has returned to Midland to stage the musical numbers in a new play, "Tomran," set to open at Midland Community Theatre Nov. 2.

Yoder will be remembered by many area residents for his work with MCT dancers in "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," staged for the official opening of the Yucca Theatre after its renovation. Again last spring, Yoder guided the choreography in ACT IX's production of "Bells Are Ringing."

"Tomran" is by playwright Dr. Andrew Edington and composer Harriette Flachmeier. Edington and his co-producers are hoping to eventually stage a professional production in New York City.

Edington is president emeritus of Schreiner College, Kerrville, and Mrs. Flachmeier is a professional musician living in Dallas. The Midland production will be directed by MCT's executive director, Don Bachmann.

Kent Porter/Reporter Telegram

The cast of "Tomran" rehearses for the musical's Nov. 2 opening.

The background for the story begins in 1867 when a group of adventurous men and women from the South found they couldn't endure the humiliating environment of Reconstruction and decided to begin their own community in another land. Two river boats carried them from New Orleans to Brazil. Eventually 3,000 Southerners steamed up the Amazon River and founded the settlement of Americana.

In Americana they and their descendents remained in almost complete isolation until 1943 when the crew of a U.S. naval vessel searching for a missing team of explorers was startled to discover along the river, plantation masions built in the style of the Old South. It is at this point that the story begins.

Heading the cast are Becky Engelstad, who has replaced Marissa Morris as Tomran, Scooter Tilley as the Captain and Mike McLaren as the Consul. Supporting roles are played by Mike Wilson, Jim Bartlett, Marilyn Bassinger and David Hidinger.

Others in the cast include Brian Ameel, Billy Cook, Kenneth Busbin, Jay Hundley, Andy Salcedo, Cecil Beare, James Brazell, Marc Slattery, David Bowmaster, Rich Davidson, Nancy Cook, Charlotte Larson, Carol Cristiani, Judy Coleman, Martha Manulik, Sharon Perkins, Carla Davidson, Robin Palmer, Deanna Mutter, Leanna Beique, Crysti Scoville and Patricia Loftis.

Musical director for "Tomran" is Tom Roberts. Choreographer is Jerry Yoder and the set designer is David Layman. Stage manager is D.A. Plumlee.

Casting committee members are Marilynn Weaver, Clint Galloway and Penny Taulman.

The production closes Nov. 17. For more information call the box office at 682-4111.

Finicky felines perform taste tests

CARNATION, Wash. (AP) — The culinary tastes of 571 finicky felines are enough to give an executive an acid stomach if the cats don't like what's put before them.

The cats and their discerning palates test new recipes for Friskies and other cat foods at The Carnation Research Farm just east of Seattle.

"We do a very serious job here," assures Ed Kane, the eatery's manager. "These cats make the decision of what will get out on the market."

With their keen senses of taste and smell, the cats can detect the slightest change of ingredients.

"When that cat walks away, the consumer won't buy again," Kane said, and that could mean millions of dollars in losses for a pet food company.

Leonid Hambro Piano quartet will perform

The Leonid Hambro Piano Quartet performs at 8 p.m. Monday at Midland High School. The performance is part of Midland Community Concerts' subscription season.

The program will include works ranging from classical selections to popular tunes. Called a modern day Renaissance man, Hambro has combined a solo piano career with his work as composer, conductor, author, lecturer and teacher.

His early beginning as a child prodigy in Chicago led him to a five-year fellowship at the Juillard School of Music where he was subsequently appointed to the faculty.

After winning the Naumberg Award, Hambro was designated the official pianist of the New York Philharmonic. He was also pianist of the well-known New York classical music radio station, WQXR, where he gave weekly live chamber and solo recitals for 15 years.

The other members of the quartet are Adam Stern, Bin Wang and Yoon-Sung Shin.

Stern played the role of the contestant Mark Landau in the film "The Competition" starring Richard Dreyfus and Amy Irving. Born in Hollywood, he began his musical studies at the age of 5.

The Leonid Hambro Piano Quartet will perform at 8 p.m. Monday for the second concert in the Midland Community Concerts season.

At 15, he was accepted and began training at the California Institute of Arts, where he received a master of fine arts when he was 21. He was the youngest music student in the school's history to have received a master's degree.

Since graduation, he has served, among others, as assistant director of the Pacific Northeast Ballet in Seattle during the 1982-83 season. His duties there included conducting performances with the Seattle Symphony and Vancouver Opera Orchestra.

A native of China, Bin Wang made her first public appearance at the age of 13 in the Young Musicians Gala Concert which was broadcast on radio and television in China. A graduate of Shanghai Conservatory of Music, she has given numerous recitals as well as performances for radio broadcasts in China and the United States. She is also active in playing chamber music.

A native of Korea, Yoon-Sung Shin won her first major music competition at the age of 9 in Seoul. Since coming to the United States in 1975, she has garnered additional awards and honors, most recently in 1983 when she won the Young Artist Peninsula Competition.

All seats for the Monday Midland performance are reserved for subscription ticket holders.

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

The Five of Diamonds (he derived his name from the fact that he was a jeweler by trade) was full of nervous energy. Although he did not make many tricks in his own right, he was a favorite partner of many more powerful players because of his knack of making the right play at the right time.

"I do hate these preempts. Having to make decisions at such high levels bothers me," he muttered. "Still, I had to do something over three hearts. I felt I was too strong for three spades and four spades is so unilateral. So I settled for a double and before you could whistle Dixie, I found myself playing in slam.

"West led a club. Had he led his partner's suit, I would have been able to assure the contract. Why do I always have to contend with these individualists?

"Obviously, that had to be a singleton. And while I could no longer afford to strip the red cards from both my hand and dummy, draw trumps and then lead a club to the eight to guarantee the hand, an alternative plan presented itself.

"From the bidding and lead, I knew 10 of East's cards—seven hearts and three clubs. If he had no more than two diamonds, I was a shoo-in.

"I won the ace of clubs, drew trumps in two rounds, cashed the ace-king of hearts for two club discards and ruffed a heart. Now I cashed the ace-king of diamonds, on which one of dummy's clubs was discarded. The time was ripe for me to enter the fray.

"You might have elected to ruff the Five of Diamonds. Not I! I chose to discard another club. West was forced to win and return a diamond—poor soul had nothing else in his hand. I discarded the table's last club while ruffing in hand, and since there was nothing but trumps left on the board, the slam was home."

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARY

Books memorial to late Midlander

By JOHN W. DEATS

The late Charles F. Henderson was a well-known and highly respected independent oilman who was an active supporter of virtually every cultural organization in Midland since 1940. He was president of the original library board and served as county commissioner in 1955 and 1956, when he played a major role in the planning and construction of the present Midland County Library.

Upon Henderson's death two years ago, the family established the Charles F. Henderson Memorial Foundation for the purpose of helping to provide patrons with specialized books in the areas of art, music, travel, and geography. Outstanding books continue to be purchased for the library, and the following list is evidence of a living memorial to a man of many interests and a desire to share them with others.

LIFE ON WALLER CREEK, by Joseph Jones, is the first history of Austin written in the past 20 years, a history of the frenzied first century of the University of Texas, and the story of the effects of civilization along a small stream common to them both.

GREAT RAILWAY JOURNEYS OF THE WORLD is a delightful account of modern-day travelers on seven of the most exotic and adventurous railways from the Zambezi Express in South Africa, to the Deccan in southern India, and including routes in Australia, South America, the British Isles, Europe, and the United States.

Fred Beckey, the legendary mountaineer, has climbed all the peaks beautifully described in MOUNTAINS OF NORTH AMERICA, a collection of 140 color photographs of 35 representative mountains.

IDYLLS OF FRANCE is a brilliant collection of photographs of the French countryside captured by Proctor Jones. Accompanying the photos of country roads, cathedrals, rivers, valleys and villages are quotations from renowned travelers such as Robert Louis Stevenson, Mark Twain and Edith Wharton.

A one volume treasure trove on the geography, history, government, art, and religion of England can be perused in BRITAIN'S HERITAGE, edited by John Julius Norwich. The work is full of informative maps and photographs to complement a text by authorities in the field.

MASTERS OF EARLY TRAVEL PHOTOGRAPHY propels the reader back in time through 250 illustrations of the world as it was in the early days of photography. Rare glimpses of life in the orient, Egypt, Greenland, the Amazon and the American West are reinforced by commentary by Rainer Fabian and Hans-Christian Adam.

Dr. Robert Endean, is the foremost authority on the subject of his book, AUSTRALIA'S GREAT BARRIER REEF, published by the University of Queensland Press. He explains the inter-relationships between the reef's flora and fauna, including may species poisonous to man. Another unusual book is A DAY IN THE LIFE OF AUSTRALIA, the result of the efforts of 100 of the world's top photojournalists. Of 96,000 photographs shot on one day, March 6, 1981, 367 were chosen to explore a day in the life of unusual Australians on a singular continent.

The editors of National Geographic Society provide a breathtaking tour in the sumptuous volume, JOURNEY INTO CHINA. Chinese history and geography, from the Great Wall, Tibet, and the cold Northeast frontier, to the monsoon jungles of the interior, to the South China coast, are explored with the qualitive style characteristic of the publisher.

A later article will describe other exceptional books presented to the library by the Charles F. Henderson Memorial Foundation.

John Deats is head librarian at Midland County Library.

Trilogy begins with book on Civil War

"Unto This Hour," by Tom Wicker; Viking; $19.95; 736 pp.

A Review

By CAROLYN SEE
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Tom Wicker has finished the first volume of what is to be a major trilogy about American life. One part will be about baseball, but this one is about the Civil War, or, more appropriately, the War Between the States. "Unto This Hour" minutely traces all the events (in an imaginative and conscientious effort meant to combine fact and fiction) that led up to, through and beyond the Second Battle of Bull Run — as the North named it — or Second Manassas, as the South remembers that same battle.

It was a stunning loss for the North and a smashing victory for the South — perhaps the last, highest point for a part of American culture that from then on would have to cope with a darkening consciousness; not simply defeat by the North but the humiliation of having been misunderstood by the North and made forever after to have to stand for various villainies, slavery being only one of them.

If, just for the fun of it, we decided to divide this culture, this "America," not into North-South, or East-West, but male-female, and if — this is only theoretical, remember — the female were the dominant culture, it would be possible to study Wicker's work as an archetypal example of a "masculinist" novel, in the tradition, say, of "War and Peace," "Dr. Zhivago" and "For Whom the Bell Tolls." There is a form to these sprawling books and a set of conventions to them; perhaps because the same kinds of imagination and ambitions form them.

FIRST, THESE books must be big. More is more. Fewer than 500 pages won't do it. (Dame Helen Gardner said much the same thing in describing how you tell a "great" poet; the lines have to be there, she said. You can't be "great" with just a handful of lyrics.) Second, there should be a crowd of characters. Because how can you mirror a world without a crowd of characters? Third — which comes out of the second — coincidence must play a great part. Whether they dance across the Russian steppes, or the relatively circumscribed farmlands of Virginia, these characters must meet — if only to destroy each other, or else there is no novel. And fourth, no matter what else is happening, there must be present one or two of the most beautiful women in the nation; force of circumstance is going to put them in the arms, or the sleigh, or the sleeping bag, or the buffalo robe of the hero. Fifth, although humans may people these masculinist novels, the real subject is "larger": A war is best. One thinks of "Sophie's Choice" and even "Paradise Lost," which "justified the ways of God to Man" by describing Satan's fall as a celestial Civil War or a War Between the States.

So here, in 736 pages, we have a "field of folk" from both the North and the South (but the Southerners seem more human), ranging from Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson to Abraham Lincoln (fretting for more dispatches), and down into the middle ranks of people like Captain Fargo Hart (fresh from a European education, returning to serve with other soldiers of Virginia), and back up to the (fictional) General Hoke Arnall, cordially loathed by many of his troops; Hoke's "ladylike" waif Amy shoots her own cook, Easter, under the mistaken assumption that she's the runaway murdering slave, Jason; Hoke's orderly, Larkin Folsom, a sweet-tempered homosexual poet, falls out of a pine tree on his head.

Perhaps most embarrassing (to those not precisely "in" the culture) is that insistence on the woman who understands. She is, of course, also in her teens, and gorgeous, and — in her enthusiasm and ability to become impregnated — she guarantees immortality for the hero whether, like Pierre, he lives, or like Robert Jordan, Dr. Zhivago or Fargo Hart, he dies.

Those girls! How did the sweet Maria so quickly recover from seeing her parents die that she could set the hills of Spain moving all over the place in that sleeping bag? How does Lara keep looking so marvelous with nothing but roots and vodka to subsist on? And how does the nubile Missy, who surely comes from the very creepiest white-trash family in the entire South, earn (a) the courage to visit vile fields of putrefying wounded in the tradition of Florence Nightingale; (b) the fastidious personal hygiene to take a bath in a convenient creek before snuggling up in Fargo Hart's buffalo robe; and (c) the erotic know-how to do what she does with Fargo Hart (although Wicker takes care of that by the perhaps-racist explanation that she learned it all from peeping at the slaves)? Just part of the conventions for this kind of novel is probably the answer. Which is not to say that "Unto This Hour" is not a conscientious, scholarly effort.

Wicker writes of when he paced Civil War battlefields, "feeling shivery at being in the actual footsteps of history." And Wicker himself has the reputation of being such a good man, and such a good writer. With trepidation, and with great respect for all the work here, I must say: My family comes from the South, and there are flowers from Civil War battlefields in our family Bible. I wanted to shiver from this novel, but I couldn't.

Parties seasoned to taste.

Add some spice to your next party and throw it at our place. We have all the ingredients for a funfilled evening for any occasion — great food, excellent service and live bands at no extra charge.

Wild game latest trend in American haute cuisine

By ANNE FLAHERTY
King Features Syndicate

Bored with basic beef and potatoes? Consider joining the elite in their quest for elk tenderloin, sauteed rattlesnake, partridge breast, and buffalo sirloin in red wine.

Does the idea of spending up to $30 for one of these wild game entrees send you salivating to the nearest burger franchise? Not if you are among the adventurous weekend gourmets with a passion for partaking in America's latest trend in haute cuisine.

Once limited to the privileged palates of ardent game hunters, the scent of simmering wild meat now wafts from kitchens of elegant restaurants coast to coast. San Francisco's acclaimed Chez Panisse serves succulent game birds. Seattle's internationally praised epicure, Robert Roselilini, offers elk, pheasant and venison at his Other Place on Union Street.

In Denver, the wild game menu changes daily at Plum Tree Cafe — everything from beaver to black bear. Dining diplomats in Washington, D.C., will find everything from rattlesnake to moose nose in Dominique's. Sophisticated New Yorkers will find wild game entrees like elk, quail, pheasant, venison and rabbit in some of the poshest restaurants in Manhattan — like the Four Seasons, Lutece and Le Cirque.

According to Flying Foods International, New York City's principal purveyor of wild game meats and birds, Manhattan chefs cook more than $60,000 worth of venison in a month. (Depending upon the cut, venison wholesales for $12 to $15 per pound.)

Where does Flying Food in New York find venison? Not grazing wild in Central Park, to be sure. Their source is Native Game in Spearfish, S.D., one of only a dozen wild-game resources in the United States.

Steve Hauff opened Native Game three years ago to a very sluggish market.

"In the beginning we had trouble selling buffalo roast and other wild game," recalls Hauff. "People were afraid of it. But just in the last few months public awareness has grown, and this season the market is amazing. Three years ago I could hardly give wild meat away. Now I can barely keep up with the demand from restaurants, gourmet food stores and delicatessens."

Hauff says that New York and San Francisco are two of his biggest markets.

"New Yorkers like venison. In San Francisco, they want buffalo. One of my San Francisco clients, Nightbird (a wholesaler), orders $10,000 worth of buffalo steaks a week."

Another game meat supplier, Dale Beier, of Dale's Exotic Meats, Denver, has watched his annual sales triple to three-quarters of a million dollars in the past few months.

Why the sudden hunt for wild game?

"Gourmets are bored," says Steve Hauff. "You can order beef anywhere. The gourmet who can afford the price of fresh salmon, caviar or escargot wants to try a different taste. Have you ever tasted smoked fresh pheasant? Addictive!"

And of course Hauff likes wild game. He has to like it...right?

"Some game meats are better than others," Hauff admits. "I might not go out of my way to eat mountain lion, but I truly like the taste of elk, venison, buffalo and game birds.

Native Game also locates and ships other game besides ranch-bred venison, elk, buffalo and pheasant.

"I can supply the restaurant chef or gourmet food store almost anything that walks on four legs or flys," assures Hauff. "I ship rabbit, grouse, quail, mallard duck, wild geese and turkey, peacock — which is about $40 a bird — partridge, rattlesnake meat and even black bear."

Black bear was a recent entree at the Plum Tree Cafe. Owner/chef Kevin Dowling, prepared the black bear in a red wine sauce for $26.95 per person.

"The black bear was pretty well accepted," said Dowling. "Our customers come here specifically for the wild game, however. That is our specialty. At Plum Tree Cafe we also serve beaver with almonds, pheasant, wild ducks, sauteed rattler and various unusual seafoods.

Innovative restaurant chefs like Kevin Dowling are just beginning to devise "classic" recipes using game meats and birds.

"This is the tip of the iceberg," says Hauff. "People say there is nothing new under the sun — well, wild game is still in the experimental gourmet category. But the demand rises every day across America.

"Today, nobody thinks twice about ordering lobster or crab legs — but once they were as foreign on a restaurant menu as partridge or buffalo tenderloin. Chefs who have discovered game are really into it because there is so much room for creativity."

FRESH PHEASANT PATE

8 ounces lean, boneless raw pork
1 pound boneless raw pheasant
1 pound pheasant livers
1 pound pork fat back
1 small onion
3 shallots
1 medium egg
2 tablesoons cream
2 tablespoons brandy
½ teaspoon crushed thyme dash of rubbed sage
⅛ teaspoon each ground ginger and nutmeg
3 cloves garlic, chopped
Salt and pepper to taste
1 bay leaf
½ cup flour
Bacon slices

Grind pork, pork fat, pheasant, livers, onions and shallots into coarse mixture. Stir in cream, brandy, egg, garlic, spices, salt and pepper. Refrigerate mixture overnight to blend flavors. Stir in flour. Correct seasonings.

Line loaf pan with bacon slices. Pack pate into pan and top with bacon slices and bay leaf. Place in another pan with enough hot water in it to come halfway up sides of loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees about two hours.Cover with foil. Put a weight on top. Chill well before slicing into thin slices. Serve with toast fingers and chilled lingonberry sauce.

MIGNON OF VENISON

2½ pounds filet mignon deer
¼ cup vegetable oil
Salt and pepper to taste

Cut deer filets into 6-ounce portions (about 1½ inches thick).

Heat oil. Saute mignons in the hot oil eight to ten minutes or until rare, turning once during cooking time. Season to taste.

To serve, place one portion on each serving plate and surround with Wild Mushroom Sauce. Garnish with steamed baby vegetables — onions, carrots and pea pods. Serves 6.

WILD MUSHROOM SAUCE

1 pound fresh wild mushrooms
¼ cup unsalted butter
1 tablespoon chopped peppergrass
2 garlic mustard pods
½ cup dry white wine
½ cup cream
1½ cups deer stock

In saucepan melt butter and saute mushrooms, peppergrass and garlic mustard pods until wilted (about five minutes). Add wine and cook and stir over high heat, scraping particles. Cook until almost dry. Reduce heat. Stir in cream and simmer until thickened (about 10 minutes). Blend in deer stock and heat until very warm.

Fresh Deer Stock: 2 pounds deer bones
1 onion, chopped
1 carrot, sliced
2 stalks celery, chopped
2 cloves garlic
1½ cups red wine vinegar
3 tablespoons butter
1 bay leaf
12 black peppercorns
¼ cup fresh thyme sprigs, chopped
3 cups dry red wine
7 to 8 cups veal broth

Have butcher slice deer bones into 2-inch pieces.

In large pan, saute bones, butter and vegetables until browned. Pour off fat. Stir in wine vinegar and cook over high heat until pan is nearly dry. Add red wine and seasonings and boil until only one cup liquid remains. Add veal broth to reduce mixture. Cover and simmer two hours, or until reduced to one quart.

Grandma always in motion

By BOBBYE MORGAN KLEIN
King Features Syndicate

I can't remember a time when my mother-in-law, Mili Jackson, wasn't on wheels. Driving the five miles through town on this sunny day to visit her, I begin to count. How many times was it that she had the wheels and never had to wait for us to come to her?

When I first met "Grammil" (her own choice of name after the first of seven grandchildren was born and she cleverly condensed Mili and Grandma), she was a volunteer chauffeur for World War II officers stationed in Sacramento.

Mothers of thousands of soldiers and flyers were busy rolling thousands of bandages for the Red Cross. Not her. Smartly dressed in a tan raincoat and black boots, she borrowed an Army private's cap and briskly saluted the passengers she drove from post to town. A one-woman Army Transport Command. We used to boast that she was the only uncommissioned woman who rated a return salute from lieutenants all the way up to four-star generals.

Grammil was 44 or 45 then, but her driver's license was a wonderful cover — it dated her as 36. Like Jack Benny, she refused to count birthdays and remained in her 30s for years after.

Grammil made her fourth trip to the altar and began a new business career in 1952. The husband-wife team drove a long black Lincoln with a one-room motor vehicle hinged to the back. Covering all of California, they billed themselves as "Jacksons on Wheels" and sold unusual crafts and gift items to the better stores.

The business thrived. The marriage didn't. The Jacksons split. She settled in Palm Springs. It was 1960 and she was independent at last.

For the next decade Grammil managed small motels.

Now she drove a long, black station wagon with power steering to pick up guests at the Palm Springs airport and ran errands...one-woman Desert Ferry Command. She was a tireless driver for those who asked; her mobility was seriously appreciated, as witnessed by gifts and letters from tourists coast to coast.

When Grammil decided she had worked long enough, she invested a small inheritance in some stocks and declared she was retired.

That meant she was free to be a professional volunteer. For years she spent four to six hours daily (wo)manning the senior center in the heart of town; her home phone rang continuously the other hours of the day and night. It was the "crisis" number for senior emergencies.

Then she sold her tired, old station wagon and bought a blue tricycle (two bike wheels and one small one to bring up the rear). It was quite a sight to see — this colorful, blond-wigged plump senior lady sedately pedaling her vehicle on the street and sidewalks of Palm Canyon Drive. Her cocker-spaniel roommate, Max, trotted close to the rear wheels so he wouldn't get lost.

In 1977 the Chamber of Commerce gave "Grandma on Wheels" a special lunch and award for her years of selfless giving. The next year, when the desert heat finally became overpowering, she moved to Coronado on the beach. Here she stays.

Until four months ago, the desert tricycle was perfect for Grammil's every-other-day trek into town. But her step was getting slower and unsure. One Saturday she tumbled on the steps in her apartment lobby.

Now her broken shoulder prevents the open-air rides. Dial-A-Ride vans and yellow cabs are her current transportation.

When I knock on her apartment door to announce my arrival today, Grammil calls out: "Come on in!

YOU CAN'T BELIEVE EVERYTHING YOU SEE.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

Monday, October 29, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: "Scarecrow & Mrs. King's" Kate Jackson, actor Richard Dreyfuss, singer Melba Moore, cartoonist Bill Mauldin and the Toronto Blue Jays' Jesse Barfield celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: the late Broadway and radio star Fanny Brice. Success comes when you do things the old-fashioned way and work long hours. A rare business or career opportunity presents itself. Move quickly and you make impressive financial gains. Romance leads you in new directions. Think twice about making a radical change in your lifestyle. Are you only doing it to please someone else? Give high priority to the needs of children.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Real estate ventures bring you good luck. Focus on making a good impression on people who can help your career. Family financial matters require prompt attention. Postpone starting new projects.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A romantic partner or close friend gives you a helping hand. Ask influential people for assistance. Wear your heart on your sleeve and the right person will quickly respond. Romance soars.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Check appointment times before setting out today. Prompt payment of bills preserves your credit rating. Be good-natured about filling in for someone on vacation. A raise or promotion is possible.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A fresh business or career start boosts your spirits. Long-distance calls can save you the expense of a trip. Although associates are cooperative, you accomplish the most when working alone.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dress fashionably but on the conservative side for job interviews. Someone gives advice which may or may not apply to your particular situation. Listen, but follow your own intuition. Romance brings delight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone may press you to make an important decision before you are ready. Resist. Although family connections can help you get a job, your performance determines whether or not you keep it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Deeds mean more than apologies to someone you have slighted. Do something special for this person. Let mate or partner set the pace where entertainment is concerned. Limit spending.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A problem involving an older person requires careful handling. Be diplomatic when making suggestions. A good friend could act in erratic fashion. Try to find out why without asking direct questions.

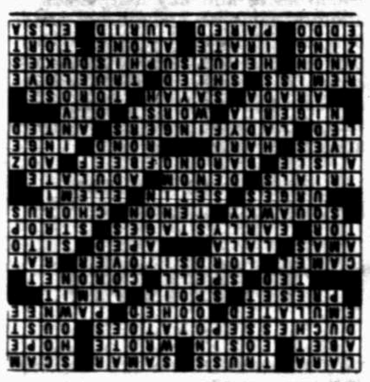

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Meet all financial obligations on time. Influential person decides to act on your behalf. Entertain this person in your home where you can speak candidly without fear of being overheard.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A self-improvement program boosts your confidence. A platonic relationship intensifies. Resist the temptation to talk about matters that should be kept confidential. Review your options before making a job change.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stop blaming yourself for past mistakes. The news from abroad is excellent. Someone may try to claim credit for your work. Stand up for your rights. A gamble begins to pay off.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It may be difficult to communicate with member of opposite sex. Loved one's behavior strikes you as strange. Withhold judgment -- there could be extenuating circumstances. Meet deadlines on time.

MC art instructor receives award

For the fifth consecutive year, Midland College art instructor Warren Taylor has had a work accepted and honored with an award by the National Watercolor Society in conjunction with its annual exhibition.

Taylor's work "Septuagesima" was selected to receive the Walter Bronson Crandall Cash Award. It is included in the 64th annual Exhibition of the National Watercolor Society, which opens in the Brea Civic Cultural Center in California, Nov. 3.

"This award has very special significance for me because the juror was Joseph Raffael, whose opinions and judgments I respect a great deal," Taylor says.

In recognition of his achievements, Taylor was chosen in 1981 as a fellow in the American Watercolor Society.

"Just to be included in this show is an honor, but to win awards five years in a row is very gratifying," Taylor says.

Taylor received his bachelor of fine arts from Bethany College and his master of fine arts and master of arts degrees from Fort Hays State University.

He joined MC's faculty in 1979 and has become well-known in West Texas for his award-winning watercolors. His works have also been selected for shows throughout the United States. Last summer he served as a watercolor instructor for the famed Chautauqua Institute in New York.

Injection continues

This injection manifold remains busy as carbon dioxide injection into Shell's Denver Unit of the Wasson field at Denver City continues on schedule, with 330 million cubic feet per day expected to be injected by the end of this year. As yet, breakthrough of the carbon dioxide at producing wells has not been achieved.

Total domestic products up

Staff Reports

Total domestic products supplied last month was up 2.2 percent over earlier levels, according to American Petroleum Institute.

Increases for the third quarter were almost the same at 2.3 percent, while products supplied were up 7 percent and 5 percent for the first and second quarters respectively.

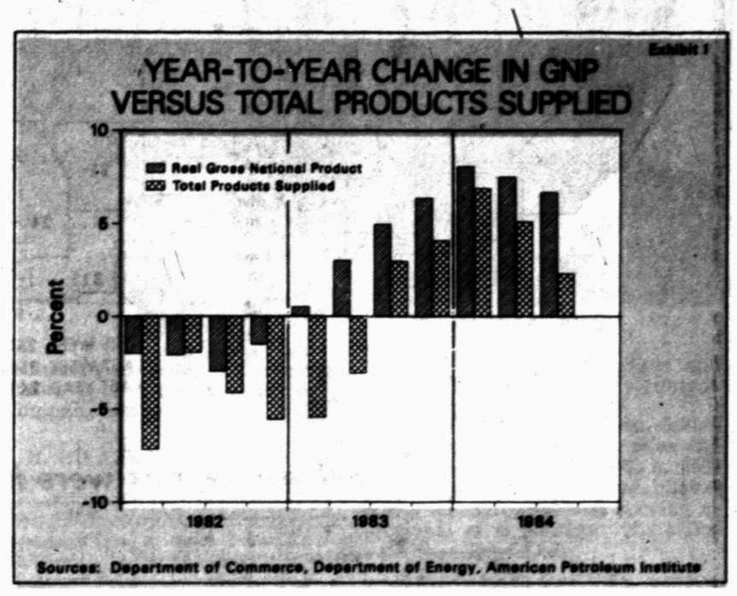

The lower rate of the third quarter generally parallels the behavior of the economy, which experienced slower growth during that period. A Department of Energy study indicates a close parallel between the GNP and products supplied from 1982.

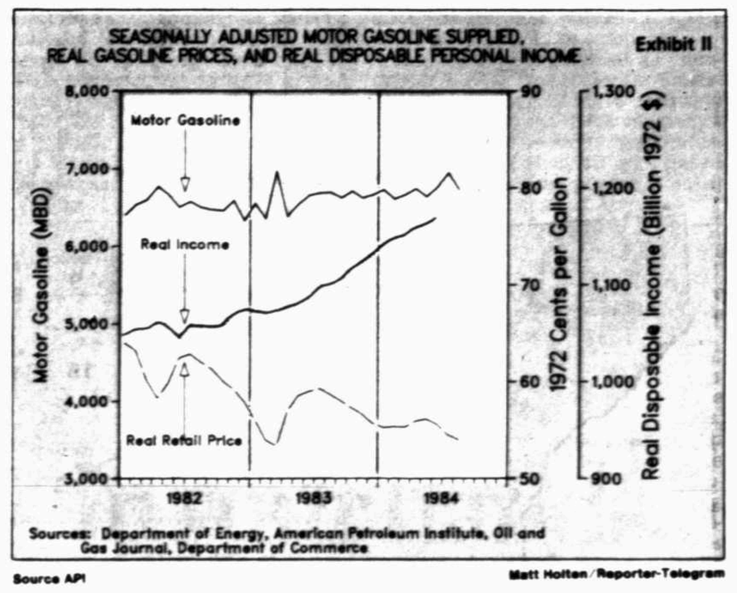

During the third quarter and September increases in light product deliveries were a major contributor to the year-to-year increases. Residual fuel oil deliveries, while still at almost the same level as a year ago for the same period, were still more below last year for the third quarter.

Crude oil production, though rising only 0.4 percent above last year's level, reached the highest September level in more than a decade. Imports fell almost 560 MBD, or about 10 percent, during September and experienced a similar decrease for the third quarter as a whole; about three-quarter imports decrease resulted from the lower crude oil imports. Inventories fell almost 9 million barrels in September as uncertain crude markets in earlier months continued to affect crude oil imports. Inventories normally rise by a roughly equal amount in that period.

In the pursuit of products, rig activity was about 7 percent ahead of last year for the month and was up 12 percent for the year to date, but has changed little since the first part of 1984 on a deseasonalized basis. The number of wells drilled was up 43 percent in August, but September data has not been released yet.

Gasoline deliveries rose 84 MBD over August levels for a 1.8 percent increase in the first half. Pump prices increased 1 cent in September, but, adjusted for inflation were almost 10 cents or 7 percent below earlier levels in the year. in 1984 dollars.

Matt Holten/Reporter-Telegram

The quarterly trend of deseasonalized gasoline demand tracked by DOE since 1982 with the path of inflation-adjusted prices and disposable income reflect that the decline in gasoline prices that began following decontrol in 1981, continued almost uninterruptedly into 1983 and 1984, though there has been a slight decrease since August.

Midland seminar speakers to be on CBS News

Lecturers who will be presenting "That's Business," a two-day workshop seminar for area businessmen in Midland, will be interviewed by Dan Rather at 5:30 p.m. Monday on the CBS Evening News.

John Welsh and Jerry White of Owner Managed Business Center, Inc. of Richardson will present the workshop December 3 and 4. The event is sponsored by the Small Business Council of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The seminar will include such topics as cash-flow management, accounting, forecasting, keys to survival and success, managing assets receivable, financing growth and being creative with depreciation.

For "That's Business" information, phone the Chamber of Commerce.

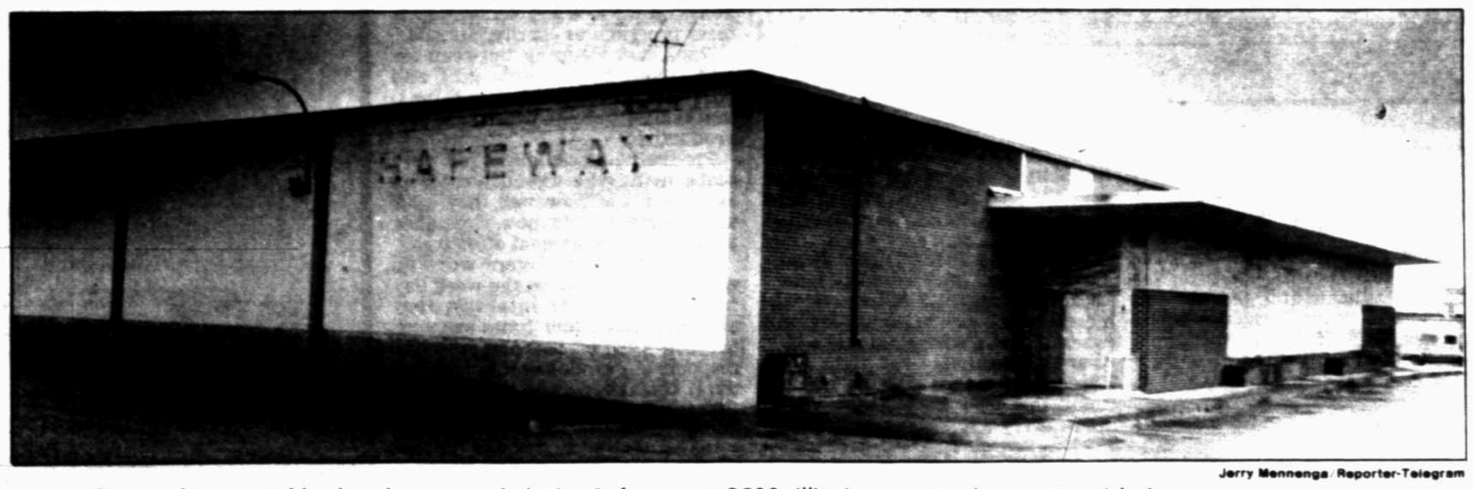

Many mourn Safeway closing like loss of a friend

MELLA McEWEN
Business-Oil Writer

The passing of a supermarket is usually not an occassion for mourning, except maybe for the firm that owns the store, but when the Safeway store at 2500 Illinois closed earlier this month it was a period of mourning for many who had patronized the store in its 30 plus years of operation.

Some have described its passing as like the death of a good friend. "I have very fond memories of the store," said Judy Cummins, 3102 Mariana, a longtime shopper at the store, "It was more like the old neighborhood store my grandmother shopped at. All the clerks there knew you and your kids, about your problems and your operations."

"I remember when my father died and I had to cash a large personal check to leave town. None of the other supermarkets I shopped at would cash it, but the manager at Safeway was very nice and cashed it without any hesitation, and when I was sick I could send my mother-in-law to the store with a my personal check and they would cash it without any problems. That's the kind of store it was. It's sad to see it all boarded up, now; I'll miss it."

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Once a busy, neighborhood supermarket, the Safeway at 2500 Illinois, now stands vacant and forlorn.

THE STORE WAS truly a neighborhood store. According to Safeway employee Gwen Dotson, many people from the neighborhood would walk to the store. She added that many of the customers were elderly, residents of Trinity Towers, who would take their daily walk to the store to do light shopping.

"I was very upset to see it closed," said Mrs. Molly Hiett, a resident at Trinity Towers. "It was closed when I returned from a trip. It was just gone...without any warning."

Mrs. Hiett said she had shopped at the store for over 20 years, when she lived on Garfield, and before she moved into Trinity Towers.

"I knew all the checkers. It was a friendly, courteous store, and everyone was very helpful. You didn't have any problem cashing checks either."

Safeway has arranged with Midtran to pick up people at Trinity Towers and bring them to the new store twice a day, according to Dotson, adding that Midtran will take elderly people who have no other way to a supermarket to any store free.

Dotson knew almost every customer by name, occupation and family history.

"WE HAD A CUSTOMER who just wrote a book on the history of Midland. Her sister works at the museum and makes real old-fashioned cowboy stew (probably sonofagun stew) every year. You'd be surprised at what all goes into it. We knew what she wanted the items for, and if we didn't have a certain item, we would order it for her."

JOHN PAUL PITTS

How about them, there crude oil prices?

"How about them 'ere oil prices?" It wasn't World Series or Super Bowl time, but a single topic dominated talk on Midland streets this week. It was oil prices.

Norway and Britain dropped the benchmark price for North Sea light, the equivalent to West Texas intermediate as debt-torn Nigeria quickly followed and OPEC called a special meeting to best determine a response. The response was to cut production from the 17.5 million barrel output level and try to hold the price on crude. But, even as the response was being formulated, Mobil became the first major oil company in over a year to reduce its posted price for West Texas intermediate crude, the benchmark for domestic oil. It was a hectic week, and there was acute awareness that things were changing.

While Mobil's 75 cent per barrel downward change in the posted price was made in conjunction with the dropping of its 75 cent transportation charge, it was enough to send chills of anxiety into the hearts of producers, here, everywhere.

The obvious questions: Where to from here? How far will oil prices drop? Can OPEC hold the line? Is petroleum price-fixing organization finally doomed?

HARVARD ECONOMIST, Joseph Kalt, who conducts nationwide seminars on economics and energy and avails himself from time to time to brain-picking journalists, told this columnist, in a phone interview Friday that OPEC probably would not be successful in holding the line on prices.

"OPEC cannot cut production much lower, because substitutions for OPEC oil are growing and a positive, world economic rate is increasing demand for crude oil. I don't think they can hold production down for long when the pressure is to increase production," said Kalt. He added that if OPEC was successful in holding the price, it would be only because of a rise in domestic inflation over the next two years, in which case it would be a "phoney" holding of the line.

Energy experts in Europe, according to, Dan Smith, editor of London Oil, believe this weeks's tumbling oil prices signal the end of an era of fixed prices set by OPEC.

"Efforts to hold up prices by limiting production were always doomed," Smith told Bernard Kaplan, our Hearst correspondent in Europe. "Oil is, in every sense, just too volatile a commodity for OPEC to be able to do it. Also, the OPEC countries simply no longer possess the leverage they had a decade or so ago. There is too much oil elsewhere."

SMITH SAID the true tipoff as to the state of the oil market had been the meager influence on prices as a result of the Iran-Iraq war. He called OPEC a paper tiger.

Permian Corp. President, Bill Kleine, however, is not so sure that OPEC has fallen to the status of "paper tiger." "We have looked for them to collapse before, but they didn't. OPEC has survived some pretty tough bouts in the market and remained intact. I don't think they are done for, yet."

And what about the future of crude prices?

Kalt said he expected crude oil prices to remain soft for the next two years, barring a major political disruption in the Middle East, with posted crude prices ranging from $26 to $29, balancing supply and demand.

"The world spot market gives us a good measure of supply and demand. What the price of crude oil is right now, is probably what it should be," he informed.

Will other majors join Mobil in dropping the posted price? Probably, says Kalt, but it won't be a follow-the-leader response: "Other majors will probalby lower prices, but it won't be just because Mobil did it. It will be a direct response to a real downward pressure on a very soft market."

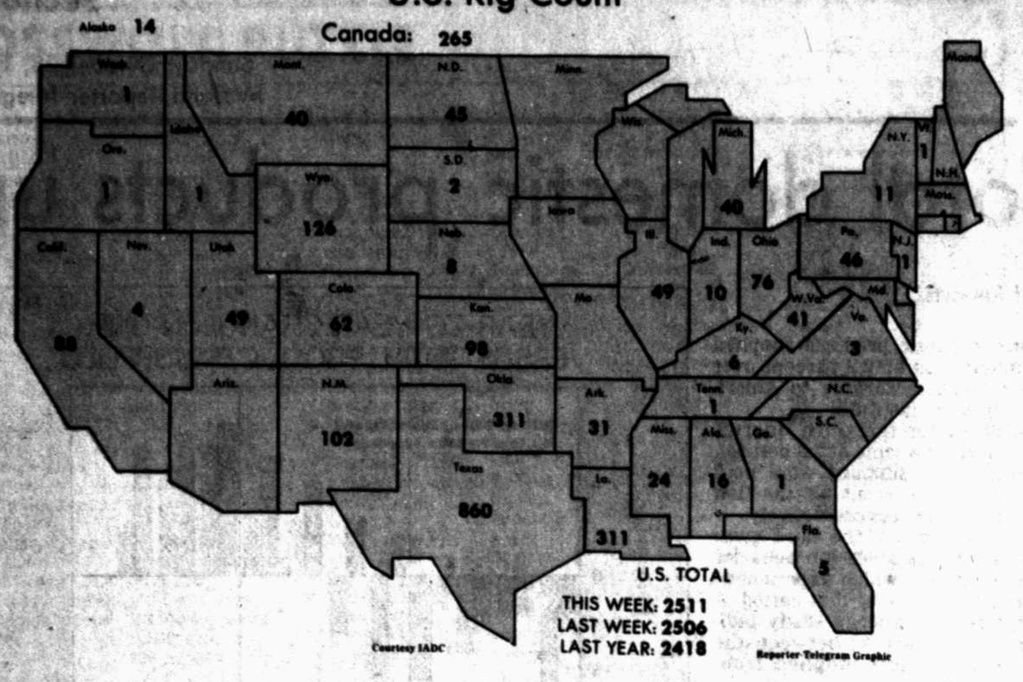

SECRETARY OF ENERGY Donald Hodel's prediction that the average world price for crude would be $25 per barrel may not be that far off, as some grades of North Sea oil have all ready crashed below the official Norweigian floor to $26, and Nigeria's oil has been lowered $2 to the $28 range.

But, Ed Thompson, executive vice president, Permian Basin Petroleum Association, feels hand wringing and panic about a possible return to $15 oil is uncalled for. "It's nonsense," says Thompson, "I don't think we will ever see $15 oil again, but if we do we will survive."

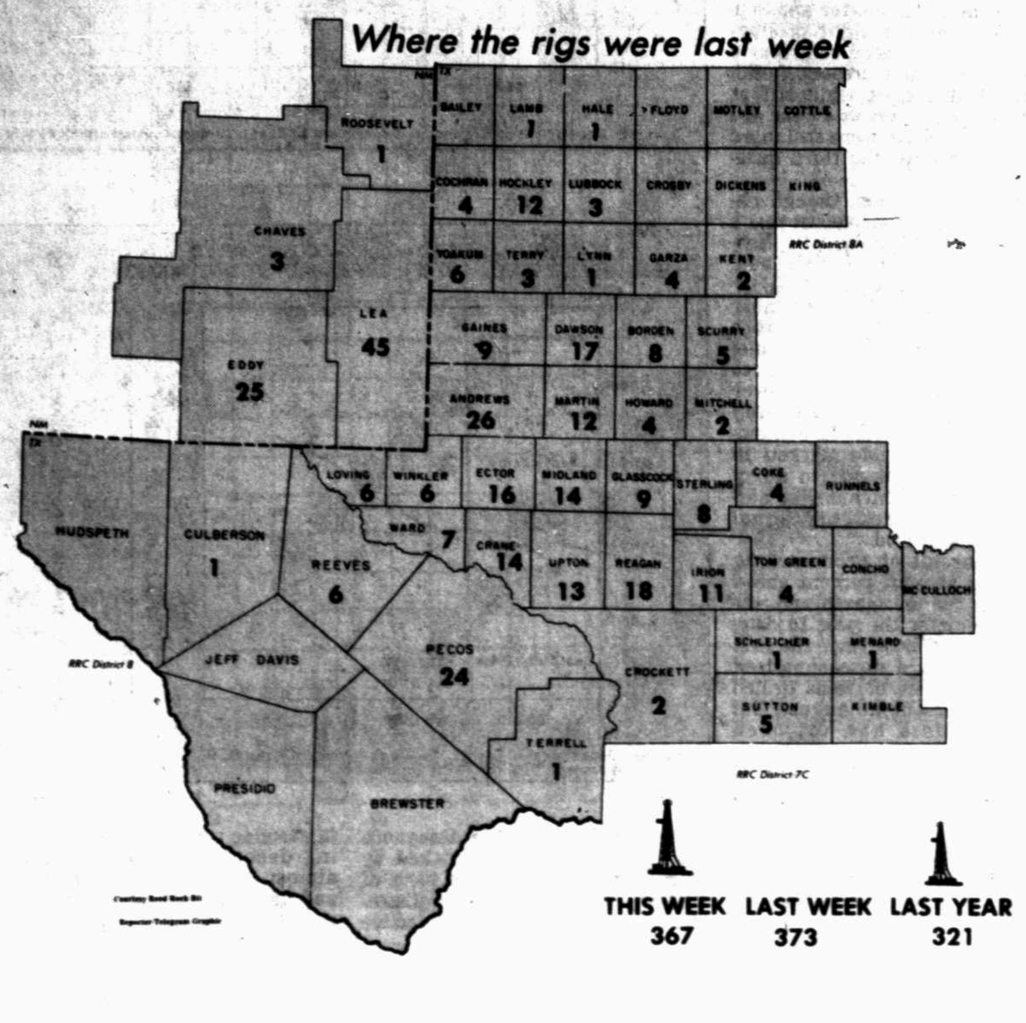

Conclusion? We can conclude that oil prices will probably stay soft for the time being. Downward pressure will continue on the posting prices, but prices probably will not drop below $25 per barrel, at least for the next couple of years. War interruptions in the Middle East could bring prices back. Likewise the law of supply and demand, could run its course within a matter of months and an expanding world economy brought about by lower energy prices, could stimulate demand and bring prices back up. OPEC will survive, but may lose it's price fixing power.

U.S. Rig Count

Where the rigs were last week

Basin rig count decreases slightly

Despite the nation's slight increase in working rigs this week, the Permian Basin showed a small decrease of six rigs — from 373 to 367.

Lea County N.M. had the largest number of rigs per area county again this week with 45, down six from last week's total of 51. Andrews County showed 26 rigs, an increase of two from last week.

Crane County showed the largest increase this week. It's total increased by five rigs — from 9 to 14. Reeves and Upton counties' totals both increased by three rigs each. Borden, Dawson, Eddy and Reagan counties all showed increases of two rigs.

The United States' total increased by five working rigs this week - from 2506 to 2511.

Texas's rig count increased by 16 rigs this week — up from 844 last week to 860 this week.

New Mexico showed an increase of 12 rigs this week while Montana's number went up by eight and Oklahoma's by six.

Kansas showed a sizeable decrease of 34 rigs this week. Last week the state showed 132 compared to this week's 98.

Canada's total increased by six drilling rigs — from 259 to 265.

BOB VINCENT, formerly executive director of the Salvation Army and most recently salesman at Copying Machine Corp., has been appointed district manager of Business Supplies Inc. at their Midland office.

JAMES L. WADDELL, JR. retired Oct. 1, 1984, with Shell Pipeline Corp. after 34 years of service. He was the right-of-way agent for Shell Pipeline's Western Division.

Waddell joined the company in Odessa as a pipeliner in 1950, transfering to Colorado City in 1953 as a general clerk, then in 1954 transfered to the Midland office where he worked as an analyst, buyer and in 1956 began as a right-of-way agent.

He worked on the Four Corners Pipeline construction from Farmington, N.M. to Los Angeles in 1957-1958. He is a member of the International Right-of-Way Association and the Southwest Chapter 35. He holds a B.S. degree in animal husbandry from Texas Tech University.

FRANK PICKETT, 45, of Odessa, recently purchased two manufacturing units from Odessa-based Chromalloy Compression & Measurement Services Co., a division of Chromalloy American, St. Louis, Mo.

Pickett, former president of Chromalloy Compression & Measurement, will head the new firm to be known as Wells Compression Inc. and to operate from facilities located at 606 West University, Odessa.

Prior to purchase by Chromalloy American in 1972, the firm was originally known as The Wells Companies.

Pickett said annual sales are expected to be in the $4 million range.

Study concludes smokers more productive than non-smokers

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Smokers are slightly more productive than non-smokers, possibly because they are "addicted to their work," and production increases with age, a health economist says.

"It is interesting to note that age alone appears to increase managerial productivity by slightly less than 1 percent per year," said Tor Dahl. "This isn't the first study showing that age increases productivity."

Dahl, of the University of Minnesota, said Tuesday the study analyzed the correlations between health and productivity among 53 credit managers at a Farm Credit Services bank.

"When we measured how well individuals utilized their productivity potential, we found that smokers utilize slightly more than non-smokers," he said."That part of it irks me. I'm a non-smoker. Smoking is our greatest health hazard. I really would hate to try to explain this."

The study found that smokers are 2.5 percent more effective at making the best use of their time, Dahl said, adding, "The possibility that that happened by chance alone is only 7 percent."

Possible reasons for the finding, he said, were that smokers tend to have addictive personalities "and may well be addicted to their work," and the fact that smoking has a temporary stimulating effect.

"The most important thing we found is that regular exercise has a positive effect on productivity. What that means is that companies don't have to look at health improvement programs as charity," he said.

Dahl said sleeping between six and seven hours per night and refraining from between-meal snacks also were shown to increase productivity.

Productivity was measured on a scale using the executives' own assessments of how well they manage their time and how close they are to being 100 percent effective.

Each of the managers wore an electronic unit during the work day for six weeks. At intervals that averaged about four times an hour, the units asked the managers to respond to questions on how effectively they were using their time at that moment.

The questions included whether the managers were actually working or waiting to work, whether they were performing a task that could be done by a subordinate, whether the task should be done at all, whether they had planned what they were doing and how efficiently they felt they were doing the task.

Dahl looked for correlations of productivity with 11 variables: sex of the executive, age, managerial level, sleep, regular breakfast, eating between meals, weight in relationship to height, physical activity, alcoholic beverage consumption and smoking.

Dahl also has studied executives at IBM, 3M, Mobil, Honeywell and Exxon. As a result of the Farm Credit Services study, the bank started a wellness program, hoping that it could improve productivity.

She recalled another customer, a man who had been blind all his life, she thought, who frequented the store. "He'd come in and tell us what he wanted. He knew his way around, or one of us would take his elbow and lead him around. If he couldn't find it himself, we'd put it in his basket."

One time I handed him a stalk of celery that I thought was perfect, and he handed it back. He could tell more by touch than I can by sight," she said. "He had his money separated, and he knew how much he gave you and how much you gave him."

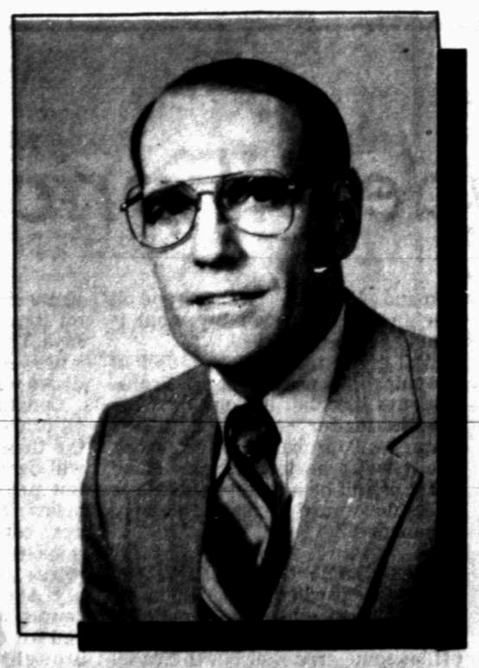

The store was scheduled to be closed when the new store on the corner of Illinois and Midland was opened. But the economy was booming, according to John Buchanon, who was managing the store when it closed, so management decided to keep it open.

Not only the economy, but petitions from neighborhood ladies kept the store going, according to Dotson. But the business just wasn't there.

NOT ONLY DOES DOTSON miss the customers, who were like family to her, she misses the store. "It was home to me for so long," having worked at the store eight and a half years. "I'm terribly lost right now. Closing that store was the saddest thing that ever happened to me. I knew every wrinkle of that floor."

Randy Klein

Atlantic Richfield Co. presented a service award to D.D. DOUGLAS recently at a safety meeting.

Douglas started working for ARCO on Nov. 4, 1964, in Carmi, Ill., as a roustabout and lease pumper. In November 1969, he was transferred to Andrews are where he has worked as a roustabout, lease pumper and gangpusher. In February 1969, Douglas was promoted to Technician III, gas tester, which is his present job.

MICHAEL L. CHANEY, 36, has recently been promoted to vice president-manager of operations for Hobbs, N.M.-based Moranco Drilling Inc.

An engineering graduate from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, Chaney has worked for the company since 1982.

H. ED LINDSEY, president and chief executive officer of MWL Tool Co. and its affiliate, Lindsey Completion Systems of Midland and Bryan, respectively, has announced changes in its management organization.

KENNETH DURHAM has been elected executive vice president. Durham has been with MWL since 1979. He served in reservoir, production and drilling assignments with Exxon for five years before joining MWL. Durham will continue to work out of the Midland headquarters.

Elected as MWL's vice president of manufacturing and operations was WESLEY C. ERMIS. He joined the company in 1971 as a service tool operator. He has served as district manager, regional manager and manager of plant quality control. His office will be in Bryan.

RANDY KLEIN has been elected vice president of packer sales and service. Klein joined MWL in 1982 after eight years with several Baker Oil Tool affiliates, last serving as regional sales manager. His office will be in Tulsa, Okla.

WILLIAM F. GREENE, general agent in Midland for the Franklin Life Insurance Co., Springfield, Ill., has earned one of the company's top sales honors, said William J. Alley, CLU, president of the company.

Greene has been named an "honorable mention" qualifier for Franklin's Centurion Club, a national honor organization of the company's most successful sales associates. Greene's qualification was based upon outstanding personal sales totals for the month of August.

Graduate center offering five oil-related courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer five courses in the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois, Midland.

"Principles of Sedimentary Basin Analysis," will be offered Monday-Tuesday, November 5-6, from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. This course will concentrate on the techniques required to develop an understanding of the stratigraphic architecture and paleographic evolution of sedimentary basins. Dr. Andrew D. Miall, professor of geology, University of Toronto, will instruct the course. Fee is $325.

"Lease Records Administration for Oil and Gas Co.," will be from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, November 7. This introductory course provides a step-by-step presentation on how a lease is managed from the time the draft is issued and the lease purchase report arrives through the organizational and maintenance procedures until expiration. Linda H. Williamson, vice president/land and assistant secretary, Falcon Oil and Gas Co., Inc., will instruct. Fee is $150.

"Well-site Geology and Cutting Samples" in Introduction to Oil Well Drilling and Completions will be offered Wednesday, October 31, from 7-10 p.m. Ab Ellis, Sohio Petroleum Co.; Clyde Hewitt, Gearhardt Industries; and Chuck Devier, Core Lab, will instruct. Fee is $25.

"Tax considerations" in Principles of Land & Leasing will meet from 7-10 p.m. Thursday, November 1. Sarah Langston, tax manager, Main Hurdman, will instruct. Fee is $25.

"Cement bond evaluation using wireline logging tools," will be from 1-5 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 8. This course is designed for petroleum engineers, completion engineers or anyone involved in the completion of wells. Richard Werner, West Texas region engineer, Wireline Service Division, Geosource, Inc., will instruct. Fee is $50.

"Effective Listening" will meet from 7-9 p.m. Thursdays, November 8 through December 6. Dr. Vernon Stokes, assistant director for instruction, Region 18 Education Service Center, will instruct the course. Fee is $90.

For registration, phone 683-2832.

Is Bigger Better?

Midland has a very big financial community. There are many big banks, filled with many big bankers, who love to tell you just how big they are.

At Midland American Bank, we too are proud of our size. We're the smallest bank in town. We say this with pride because although we're smaller in assets and deposits than our taller neighbors, we're bigger when it comes to ideas, service and convenience.

You're probably a lot like us. Small today, with big plans for the future. Whether your financial needs are related to your business or your family, Midland American Bank offers some surprising advantages.

Our ability to expedite loan decisions is remarkably fast. Our bankers give their customers unequaled personal attention. And with our main bank downtown at Big Spring and Texas and our mini bank at Cuthbert and Andrews Hwy., we're certainly the most convenient. There's even plenty of free, ground-level parking at our downtown location.

We're not a big bank. But we feel good about the big things we do. We think you will too.

Midland American Bank — for people who want more than just a big bank.

TRRC approves contract changes

AUSTIN—The Railroad Commission has temporarily approved natural gas contract changes sought by three pipeline companies which will reduce rates to Valero Transmission Co., United Texas Transmission Co., Intratex Gas Co., and Houston Pipe Line Co. and their customers by more than $4.9 million.

Since mid-September, the Commission has temporarily approved more than $17 million in gas rate reductions requested by pipeline companies.

The proposed rates must be studied further by the Commission before permanent approval. However, Chairman Mack Wallace and Commissioners Buddy Temple and James E. (Jim) Nugent approved the rates on a temporary basis during the study period because of the cost reductions to utility customers.

Valero, United Texas Transmission, Intratex and Houston Pipe Line must pass the reduced gas costs directly to city gates and other customers using previously approved automatic adjustment clauses.

The largest contract change was submitted by Clajon Gas Co., reducing rates charged to Intratex Gas Co. from $3.80 per MMBtu (million British thermal units) to $3.40 per MMBtu. The annual savings to Intratex and its customers are estimated at $4 million.

Producer's Gas Co. submitted several gas contract changes for approval. The largest involves a rate reduction from $3.34 per MMBtu to $3.25 per MMBtu, for three contracts with Intratex Gas Co. The annual savings to Intratex and its customers are estimated at almost $753,000.

A change to another Producer's contract involves rates charged to United Texas Transmission Co. for surplus sales. Customer savings are estimated at $34,000.

Interfirst reports net income gain

DALLAS—InterFirst Corp. has reported a net income of $81.3 million ($1.16 per fully diluted share) for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1984. Net income included net non-recurring items of $68.9 million, including the previously announced gain on the sale of the company's interest in its headquarters building.

InterFirst's third-quarter results represented the third consecutive quarter of increased earnings and fourth straight quarter of profitability for the Dallas-based bank holding company.

The company reported net income of $13.4 million (20 cents per share) in the second quarter of 1984 and a net loss of $248.5 million ($3.72 per share) in third-quarter 1983.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1984, InterFirst reported consolidated net income of $104.3 million ($1.52 per fully diluted share).

The $6900 Lister HR3-G Natural Gas Engine.

Built like a diesel to work like a diesel... at a fraction of the diesel's cost.

Over 15 million hours in the field, supplying power for pump jacks and generators, prove this to be one tough engine.

This smooth-running, air-cooled 1,400-lb three-cylinder natural gas engine is a favorite among oil producers. A 220-lb flywheel powers its way through load fluctuations.

The HR2-G and HR3-G are, by design, Lister diesel engines converted to natural gas service. The cast iron crankcase, high tensile steel crankshaft, tough cylinder barrels and connecting rods are identical in all respects to those in the famous Lister diesel. It's not uncommon for a Lister engine to deliver 40 to 50 thousand hours of service with no more than normal maintenance.

Attorney questions why oil firm wants trial moved

HOUSTON (AP) — An attorney for two U.S. oil companies that are suing a Venezuelan national oil firm says he wants to find out why the foreign company has requested a change of venue for the federal lawsuit.

Tom McDade, a Houston attorney representing Coastal Corp. of Houston and Mobile Bay Refining Co. of Mobile, Ala., said Tuesday he wants to take a deposition from the president of Petroleos de Venezuela of South America to find out why the company has asked to change courts.

Coastal and Mobile Bay Refining Co. of Mobile, Ala., filed a suit in a Beaumont federal court on Sept. 5 alleging PDVSA violated four U.S. anti-trust laws.

McDade said the Venezuelan firm filed a motion on Monday asking the case be transferred from a federal court in Beaumont to one in Houston. But McDade said he wants to take a deposition from PVSDA President Brigido Natera to find out why the company requested the change of venue.

"I want him to show up and tell the court why this case needs to move," McDade said. McDade would not discuss specific facts of the case.

J. Clifford Gunter, the attorney representing the Venezuelan company, did not return calls to The Associated Press Monday.

McDade said he will file the motion within the next two weeks asking that the deposition be set for Nov. 5.

Coastal and Mobile Bay Refining allege in their suit, which seeks minimum damages of $125 million, that PDVSA unlawfully reduced the supply of its crude oil to Coastal, boycotted Mobile Bay Refining, and encouraged its Gulf Coast and Caribbean clients to do the same.

The suit alleges undisclosed PDVSA officials accepted bribes as part of the plot to drive Coastal and Mobile Bay Refining out of business. PDVSA has said it asked both companies that filed the suit to name the officials, but the firms have not complied.

PDVSA officials have said the suit is "absurd, rash and irresponsible" and "has no other motive than to pressure the Venezuelan petroleum industry to supply the two plaintiff firms with greater volumes of hydrocarbons."

The Venezuelan company also says it is "senseless" to claim PVDSA "could direct a conspiracy among a numerous group of international clients of such prestige and solidity."

Lumber company predicts sharp sales increase

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A wood-products company based here forecasts a 33 percent increase in sales volume through its acquisition of two plants in western Idaho.

Idaho Timber Corp.'s purchase of former mobile-homes plants in Weiser and Parma has been financed by more than $1.5 million in industrial revenue bonds.

The Weiser plant manufactures products for home centers and had been leased by Idaho Timber for seven months. The company is preparing to expand its product lines and intends to open the Parma plant in about a year. Both facilities are 90,000 square feet.

Braniff will hibernate this winter to survive

NEW YORK — As Braniff Inc. tells it, the troubled airline has resorted to a new form of hibernation, an act of shriveling to stay alive through the winter.

"We'll shrink the airline through the winter to preserve our cash," Patrick Foley, Braniff's new president, said in an interview Thursday, "and then expand again in the springtime."

By most accounts, however, that notion is more of the excess optimism that has characterized Braniff since it came out of bankruptcy reorganization last March with hopes of winning a new niche in the competitive Dallas market. More likely, outsiders say, Braniff has chosen a retrenchment that may only postpone its demise.

The carrier announced late Wednesday that it would abandon service to 10 cities, surrender 9 of its 12 gates at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, chop its fleet to only 10 of its 30 Boeing 727-200's, and seek to lease the rest to other airlines.

Braniff also announced the resignation of its president, William D. Slattery, who was brought in about a year ago by Braniff's owners, the Pritzkers of Chicago, to head the revived airline. He had been an executive in Europe for Trans World Airlines.

The retrenchment will cost hundreds of jobs and reduce Braniff to a semblance of its former self. The old Braniff International mustered a fleet of more than 60 planes and employed 7,000 people when it filed for protection from creditors in May 1982.

Jay Pritzker, who put together a $70 million package to revive the airline and bring 2,500 people back to work, said Thursday that he had not given up on the carrier, however.

"We remain dedicated to building Braniff into a viable airline," Pritzker, the chairman of the Hyatt Corporation, said in a statement.

Pritzker and Foley, who had been vice chairman of Braniff, outlined the cuts at a meeting attended by hundreds of employees at Dallas Love Field Wednesday night.

Foley said Thursday that Braniff had already agreed to allow 10 of its planes to be used by Northeastern International Airways Inc., a relatively new carrier based in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Braniff was negotiating with other carriers, tour operators and charter services for the remaining 10 aircraft, he said.

In the Northeastern deal, Braniff would get more money leasing each plane than the $90,000 a month it must pay its own creditors for each plane, he said. By reaching six-month service agreements with other airlines for the 20 planes, he said, Braniff would keep its crews employed and be able to expand next year if traffic warranted.

Foley said that, effective Nov. 5, the airline would suspend service to San Antonio, Houston and Austin, Tex.; Kansas City, Mo.; Detroit; Miami; Newark; New Orleans; Oklahoma City, and Philadelphia. He said he did not know exactly how many people would lose their jobs.

He characterized flights to these cities as short hauls "that we never made money on and have been a drain." It was doubtful that Braniff would ever restore service to them.

Instead, Braniff will concentrate on long hauls. It will continue to serve nine cities from Dallas-Fort Worth: Boston, Chicago, Denver, Las Vegas, Los Angeles, Phoenix, New York, San Francisco and Washington.

American — which has been Braniff's major rival, matching its lower fares at Dallas-Fort Worth — has agreed to let those who bought tickets by Wednesday for the discontinued Braniff flights travel on American without paying additional charges.

Analysts were skeptical that Braniff's holding action would work and said they saw little chance for the airline to escape liquidation.

"Whenever a company gets smaller, it rarely works to make a company stronger," said David P. Campbell, an airline analyst for Wheat, First Securities Inc. "It usually continues to lose money — maybe less, but it continues to lose money."

"It is not a strategy that will make any difference," he added.

Pritzker and Foley took a different view. According to Foley, the cutback plan had been worked out months ago with Pritzker, Braniff executives and board members. "Somehow, someway," he said, "we will find a way to make this airline stay in business."

Independent businessmen present award to Loeffler

Representative Tom Loeffler was awarded the "Guardian of Small Business" Award from the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB) for his outstanding voting record on small-business issues.

He was given the award because he voted in support of positions voiced by the majority of NFIB members 89 percent of the time.

On announcing the award, NFIB President John Sloan said, "The voting record of Rep. Loeffler throughout this Congress demonstrates that he is reponsive to the needs of his state, because small businesses create the majority of new jobs and, if left to flourish, will continue to be the driving force behind this country's resurgent economic growth."

House members were rated in 18 recorded votes during this session of Congress. Issues ranged from cutting the federal deficit to controlling payroll taxes to giving small firms a chance to compete for government contracts. Members of Congress who failed to vote on at least 70 percent of the issues counted in the ratings were not eligible for the award.

TSPE names new director

Former State Representative Gerhardt Schulle, Jr. was recently named the executive director of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers (TSPE).

In announcing the appointment, TSPE President H. Mark Foerster, P.E., of Midland, cited Schulle's experience as a state legislator, lobbyist and Austin businessman as factors that contributed to his unanimous selection by the TSPE Executive Committee.

Prior to his appointment, Schulle was intimately involved with almost every aspect of the political process. He served as a Texas state legislator from San Marcos while still in his twenties; he was staff director of the Texas Association of Realtor's Political Action Committee, and he was president of his own business and political consulting firm in Austin.

Kelly professionals are commited to excellence in testing, training

The professional "Kelly Girl" People are certainly living up to their reputation as the most innovative temporary service company around. Not long ago they introduced the exciting new Kee simulator which allows them to accurately access a person's word processing skills. Now, they can offer their customers even better service with their new Skill Enhancer.

The Skill Enhancer is designed to help people whose typing, shorthand, or transcirbing skills have become a littly rusty due to lack of use. This intense program utilizes both audio and visual equipment to get the new temporary's skills back up to par. That means both accuracy and speed are enhanced. Kelly is indeed commited to excellence.

Kelly's strong commitment to provide their customers with temporaries whose skills have been accurately assessed is what lead them to also start the KEE testing and training system. Until now no temporary service could send out word processing operators with a great amount of confidence, because they all had to rely on written tests to determine skills.

It was found that while 90% of all companies used temporaries, 80% of those with word processing systems did not use temporary help in that area. This was due to inadequate testing procedures.

Kelly Services is changing those statistics by utilizing the KEE training system which they had on display at the Oil Show this year. With this special word processing simulator Kelly can test word processing operators in a number of critical areas and train them in the same areas.

The simulator is designed to do three very essential things:

1. It not only evaluates overall word processing capabilities, but also differentiates among separate functions such as inputting, formatting, editing.

2. It will be capable of testing advanced functions in the future.

3. A critcal point - KEE is a hands-on simulator which allows a person to actually perform on equipment that works just like the customers' models. At the present time it imitates the Lanier, Wang and IBM word processors. In the near future, Kelly Services will also be able to do testing for Digital and Xerox equipment. This special word processing simulator is much like the simulators used by astronauts and pilots. The computer electronically checks, times, and scores every operator move through the basic word processing skills.

This is important because hands on testing could not be done by any temporary service prior to the introduction of this system. In order to get information processing up to Kelly standards, they had to create standards. Now they can do as good a job in evaluating word processing performance as they have traditionally done with secretaries and typists on conventional equipment.

With the KEE simulator, Kelly requires a person to score 85% or better in each area tested before they will certify them, and a person must be certified before Kelly will place them as a word procesing operator. So, when a customer calls for word processing help, the Kelly professionals can accurately determine what the need is and have confidence in their temporary to do the job right.

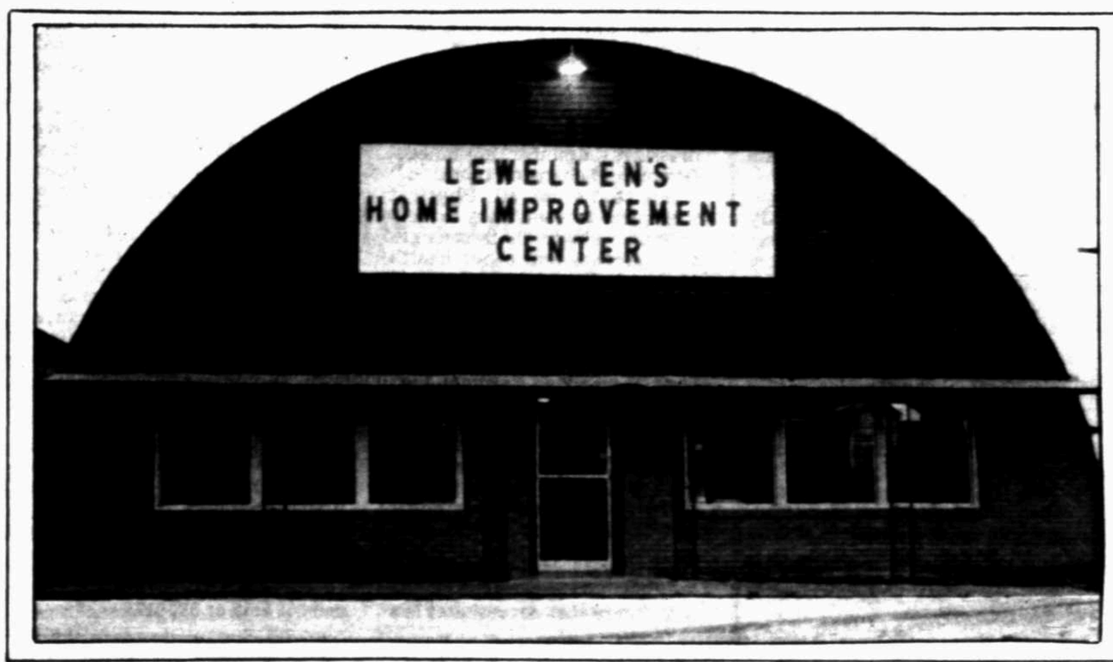

For an individual to qualify for the training which the KEE simulator also offers they must be able to type 55 words per minute and have worked a minimum of 100 hours for Kelly Services. The individual must also agree to work exclusively for Kelly for a certain period of time.

Why do the professionals at Kelly Services go to so much trouble to develop systems like the Kee Simulator and the Skill Enhancer? Because they are commited to excellence for their customers! And that means commitment to testing and to training. Pam Paris, Branch Manager of the Kelly Services office in Midland, states, "In order to reach out to the marketplace, we must be able to test and to help our people enhance their skills."

There is always a demand for good secretaries, especially those with oil and gas experience, so call Kelly Services at 689-9801 to find out how you can join the professionals. If you prefer, stop by Suite 2050 in the ClayDesta National Bank Building.

Lesa Morrow (left), a Kelly Services account representative for Midland and Odessa, goes over the new Skill Enhancer program with Midland branch manager, Pam Paris. Pam is prepared to test the program out for herself. At Kelly Services they know the value of testing.

Lock out the cold, lock in heat

The last week of rain and cold weather makes it really evident that the warm summer days of 1984 are gone. Home heating units are back at work and the air conditioners have started their winter furlough. With the ever increasing cost of heating a home it is important to know that you are getting the most out of your energy dollar.

Lewellen Consturction and Home Improvement Center can help you keep your heating costs down. Bill Lewellen points out that air leaks around old doors and windows can be costly when your are trying to protect your home from the cold outside air. That's why he recommends installing storm windows and doors now so that you can enjoy the energy savings all winter long. And then when the dust storms start again next spring, the storm windows will lock the sand outside.

Even government studies have shown that both storm windows and doors can save tremendous amounts of heat energy. And storm windows only cost about half the price of replacement windows.

To make the savings even better you may have a tax credit opportunity. In order to qualify for a credit of 15% up to $300 your home must have been substantially completed by April 20th of 1977. This is an opportunity which is well worth checking out.

It is also important to check out the company you have intall your storm windows. If the windows are installed incorrectly they won't be as efective. Lewellen Construction is a local company which is well known for quality work not only with windows, but also with siding and patio covers.

One pleased customer, Dorothy Perkins, recently wrote, "I am happy to 'go on record' as one of your (Lewellen Construction) satisfied customers. The U.S. Steel siding and trim you applied to my house has improved the appearance and the snugness of the building. Your and your men did a neat, careful job of the entire project at what I consider to be a reasonable cost."

Bill will be glad to give you a list of past customers, so you can see how pleased they are with the work his company does. Call 686-8007 today or go by the new showroom, Lewellen's Home Improvement Center, at 1811. W. Industrial.

Designer Secrets is no ordinary resale shoppe

Pre-owned designer apparel, displayed in elegant boutique style in the better area of Midland is a concept with appeal for the smart, budget-wise shopper. And with Designer Secrets in the La Villita Shopping Center resale has come up to Midland's standards!

Laveda Boggs, owner of Designer Secrets, points out, "It's smart to be frugal. No matter how much money you have it only makes sense to stretch your fashion dollar." Mrs. Boggs owned a fashion brokerage business in Tyler before she opened Designer Secrets here in Midland last April.

Designer Secrets offers fantastic bargains on fashion apparel so that more customers can afford to dress like a million dollars without spending it. For instance, a Bill Blass or Halston which regularly retails for around $700 can be purchased for $120. Or perhaps you will find a $600 Albert Nipon velvet or silk dress which you like for $150 or less.

At Designer Secrets there is a beautiful array of designer blouses such as Halston, Earnest Strauss, Ann Klein (just to name a few) for as little as $26.

Ultra suede suits, dresses, skirts and blazers are also good buys at Designer Secrets along with lovely designer shoes and leather bags.

In addition, Mrs. Boggs carries a California line of new jewelry with great pieces in the new chunky look and lots of brass.

Jeff Haughton, a fur designer and master craftsman, formerly of Koslow's of Dallas, will be making two visits per year to Designer Secrets.

The furs are really in demand right now. Mrs. Boggs reports that recently a young lady brought in a lovely mink jacket which her ex-boyfriend had paid well over $2000 for when it was new. The jacket sold the same day for $900. It made a lady so happy - she bought it for her "early Christmas present".

Designer Secrets even has one customer who asks them to mail things to her in Oklahoma City between her visits to Midland. Mrs. Boggs keeps the customer's size, colors, and preferences on file. The customer has never returned anything the shoppe has sent her - just a check!

That's because Designer Secret's apparel, furs and accessories come from the finest closets and only currently-styled, better-labeled apparel is selected for consignment. Many items have original price tags still attached. Often-times the original owners have gained or lost weight or decided the color or style is not appropriate for them. Mrs. Boggs is so careful in accepting apparel that it is difficult to tell if the clothing is pre-owned.

Consignors receive 50% of the selling price for their garments. If a garment doesn't sell in 90 days, the owner can retrieve the item or let Designer Secrets donate it to a charitable organization and provide the consignor with a tax deductible receipt.

Designer Secret's consignors are middle to upper income socialites and professional ladies who can afford to turn their wardrobe frequently. Mrs. Boggs says, "We are definitely fulfilling a need. So many professional ladies are expected to (and want to) look like a million, but seldom do their salaries make that possible. This way they can dress like a million on somebody else's (million)! These ladies know that being well-dressed makes them feel good about themselves."

That's why so many area women turn to Designer Secrets for outfits for those special occassions. Recently a faithful customer had a very special occassion come up. She wanted to look really smashing so she purchased an Oscar de La Renta blue silk with gold threads - a gown which cost the first owner well over $800. The customer was elated to get if for $150 and reported that she was the "belle" of the ball.

Alongside a beautiful Bill Blass wool suit trimed with fox and originally priced at $1400, are lovely, more moderately priced, high quality garments from $14-$20-$30-$50. There's a fantastic buy for everyone and for every occassion.

Designer Secrets has gift certificates available for Christmas giving. It's such a fun place to shop that you'll be giving that special lady in your life not only beautiful clothes but an exciting shopping experience.

So, you see, Designer Secrets makes everybody happy. The consignors have an outlet for apparel which they no longer need, the customers are happy with lovely garments purchased at only a fraction of retail prices. So everybody makes everybody else happy.

Laveda Boggs (right), owner of Designer Secrets, sports a cotton, Mexican style two piece suit in beautiful lavender and pink priced at $38 at Designer Secrets. Her daughter Alicia models an Oscar de La Renta, marked at $68 and typical of the high quality you will find at the shoppe in the La Villita Shopping Center.

At Nurses Unlimited Wanda Tyler, R.N. checks Debra Hoard's blood pressure. Debra is an L.V.N. and agrees with Wanda that a home health care agency has much to offer the community. To find out more call 561-8513.

Nurses Unlimited helps patients recover in the comfort of home

It's been a while since doctors made house calls and patients got to recover at home in familiar, comfortable surroundings. Sure patients benefit from technology and equipment which only a hospital can house, yet with the rising cost of hospital stays isn't it time to achieve a balance between the old and the new, a blend of hospital care when it's necessary and home health care whenever it's possible.

Nurses Unlimited, a locally owned and operated firm, offers many patients a cost effective alternative to lengthy institutional stays. This professional staff of R.N.'s, physical therapists, speech therapists, L.V.N.'s, and home health aides can meet the needs of many patients right in their home by carefully coordinating their services with the orders from the doctor's office.

For example, if the doctor puts the patient on a particular diet, Nurses Unlimited personnel can help the patient understand how to use the diet. Such learning visits can be very important to a patient's continued recovery.

Visits for monitoring progress and the effectiveness of various medications are also very important. Since the nurses stay in close contact with their patients' doctors their professional observations and reports can save many routine visits to the doctors office.

Likewise, Nurses Unlimited R.N.s can take care of technical procedures such as changing dressings, administering innoculations, and changing tubes.

But that's not all. Physical therapists are available to help patients rebuild their strength after strokes and other health problems. Since strength is not all that has to be recovered sometimes, occupational therapists and speech therapists are ready to help patients move back toward an independent lifestyle with strong communication skills.

One of the best things about Nurses Unlimited is that they work with the whole family. By teaching all family members how to care for the homebound patient progress can be much faster. This one-on-one communication can really be the key.

For care that neccesitates less technical skill, home health aides are available. As these aides are changing linens, as well as bathing patients and shampooing hair they don't treat their work like mere routine. They are commited to seeing each patient as an individual and providing companionship along the way.

Even homemaker services are available. Preparing a meal, or shopping for groceries may seem like small things but they can be very important for a recovering patient.

Because so many insurance agencies are recognizing the benefits of home health care, Nurses Unlimited offers patients assistance with their insurance coverage. They are also approved by Medicare.

In addition to having two offices in Odessa and serving a 17 county area in West Texas, Nurses Unlimited provides supplemental staffing for doctor's offices, hospitals, clinics, and nursing homes. The staff at Nurses Unlimited is on call 24 hours, 7 days a week.

To find out more about this full-service health care agency call 561-8513 or 332-6173.

The craftsmen at Zubiate's Restoration are particularly attentive to detail work. Richard Zubiate, Gary Chizmar, Lilo Dominguez and Leo Sanchez all worked together to design and carve this beautiful door.

Restoration is more than new varnish at Zubiate's

Richard Zubiate, owner of Zubiate's Restoration is a meticulous craftsman. When Richard opened his business in Midland 2 years ago, one of his goals was to bring old world craftsmanship to the area. Because Richard recognizes the sentimental value people place on their furniture, many people have turned to him to restore worn and broken pieces to their original beauty. Richard appreciates the customers and friends he has had over the past years and is pledged to continuing his tradition of quality workmanship.

For Richard restoration involves more than just stripping and refinishing furniture; although, that is often part of the task. Moreover, patching holes with whatever material is available does not qualify as restoration. It's so much more than that.

If a leg is missing from Grandpa's favorite chair, restoration involves carefully carving and staining another leg to match the remaining three, not just using the most similar style available. After all, shouldn't the chair look just like it did when Grandpa leaned back in it and whittled whistles for the kids.

If the bevelled mirror is tarnished and a piece of wood is missing from the dresser where Aunt Mary always hid the Christmas gifts she made by hand, restoration means resilvering the mirror, as well as matching the wood and carefully fitting the new piece in place.

On the otherhand, what if Grandma's big dining table, the one that the whole family gathered around for Christmas dinner years ago, has been stained or scarred? Then, restoration involves light sanding or bleaching to restore the original beauty. Unnecessarily replacing the entire table top just isn't the same.

Remember when everyone would take a rush or cane bottom chair to the front porch, where they would reflect on the day's events and watch the sunset. Restoration means weaving new pieces of cane, rush, or rotan in the same pattern as the old material which rotted out of those chairs.

If a beautiful inlayed wood design on a buffet, which you feel in love with at an antique auction, is loose, restoration means cleaning and re-gluing each piece in its original place. Always using the original material when possible and meticulously matching the original design.

Richard Zubiate knows the meaning of restoration and is dedicated to that task. Along with the equipment, he has the craftsmen who can make furniture look like it did originally. Lilo Dominguez and Leo Sanchez are both skilled woodworkers and expert weavers. Gary Chizmar has many skills and is an expert at carving animals in doors and other objects. Mr. Zubiate is also an expert craftsman and has an extensive knowledge of wood types and furniture design. As part of the service, Mr. Zubiate researches the origin and history of the furniture he restores.

Often, the need is not just for repair, but also for additional pieces. If you have two chairs of a certain style and need two more, Zubiate's Restoration can help you. By using one chair as a pattern, they can make as many more as you need.

Richard Zubiate understands the sentimental value of older furniture. He also understands that people highly value their more contemporary furniture, which sometimes needs repair. Thus, Zubiate's Restoration is prepared to restore the contemporary along with the antique.

Maybe, you are a do-it-yourselfer that likes to refinish furniture, but find that stripping the furniture is a big chore. You can have it stripped at Zubiate's Restoration. You can also save a lot of money by having mirrors resilvered there. As Mr. Zubiate points out, resilvering is not nearly as expensive as replacing beveled mirrors.

If you have some furniture that needs to be restored, call Mr. Zubiate today at 682-5773 or go by 1611 E. Taylor. Because so many people are excited about getting their furniture restored for the holiday season, Zubiate's Restoration is working on many pieces right now. Though he can not accept any more work to be completed in time for the holidays, your pieces can be ready to brighten your home after the new year arrives.

Mr. Zubiate is diligent in his work and enjoys pleasing his customers. His motto may very well be, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all your might."

Community Service Auxiliary

Act IX

Act IX, Auxiliary to Community Theatre, was founded in 1969 with 40 active members. Today the organization has a quota of 150 members with 111 associate.

Act IX seeks to promote interest in Midland Community Theatre; to assist the theatre staff in maintaining and operating its programs; to assist the Board of Governors in carrying out its functions; and to raise funds.

Past projects include antique shows, which raised from $30,000-$40,000, and special theatre productions. Most recently the group, in conjunction with MCT, raised $66,000 on its special production of "Bells Are Ringing."

Officers are Mrs. Randy Martin, president; Mrs. Sam Bakke, vice-president; Mrs. Bill Hightower, secretary; Mrs. Bert Conly, treasurer; and Mrs. James Rasnick, publicity chairman.

MRS. RANDY MARTIN

Eagles Auxiliary No. 2982

The Fraternal Order of the Eagles Auxiliary, Permian Aerie No. 2982, was designed to enable people to work together to help others in the community.

Instituted in April, 1950, the organization supports High Sky Girls Ranch, Heart Fund, Cancer Fund, Diabetes Fund, Durante's Children's Fund, Memorial Foundation Fund and Bob Hope High School.

Special projects include Lifeline and Children's Camp at Kerrville.

Nora Whetstone is president of the order. Other 1984-1985 officers include Madge Kuykendall, vice president and publicity chairman; Beth Hunsinger, secretary; and Iva Walden, treasurer.

NORA WHETSTONE

Lioness '700'

Lioness "700" Club, organized in 1954, works to cooperate with Westside Lions Club in carrying out its activities and to provide community service opportunities for women. Projects of the club include adopt-a-classroom for school parties where no room mothers are available; fund-raisers to support Lions Club projects; and the dessert table at Westside Lions "Chili Fiesta" at Dellwood Mall.

Officers are Sandy Wallace, president; Lillie Phillips, vice-president; Mary Bowen, secretary; Florene Anderson, treasurer; and Betty Whitmire, publicity chairman.

SANDY WALLACE

Midland City Council PTA

Midland City Council PTA was organized in 1940 to unify and strengthen the city's 29 parent-teacher associations.

The council encourages associations to work to promote the welfare of all children and youth by raising standards of home life, securing laws for the protection of young people and tightening the home-school relationship.

The council works to provide community volunteer support in Midland's public schools through volunteers in public schools (VIPS) which includes programs such as Helping Hands, adopt-a-school, partners-in-reading and story-telling troupes.

The council also awards scholarships to a graduating senior at each high school who plans to attend college and major in education. The organization sponsors student cultural art contests to recognize visual arts, literary and musical talent. It also provides information and leadership training for officers, committees and members of Midland PTA groups.

Mrs. Curtis Bedrich is president of the council. Other 1984-1985 officers are Mrs. Ken Green, president-elect; Mrs. Barry Beck, vice president; Mrs. Gary Askins, secretary; Mrs. Don Cox, treasurer; and Mrs. Rodney Satterwhite, publicity chairman.

MRS. CURTIS BEDRICH

Midland Hospital Auxiliary

The Midland Memorial Hospital Auxuliary is designed to promote and advance the welfare of Midland Memorial Hospital.

Twenty-two services are offered by the auxiliary to the hospital and its patients. The group has increased its volunteers to 240, which now also includes several men.

The organization raises funds in many different projects, but the main source of income is through the auxiliary gift shop. All of the shop's profits are returned to the hospital. Last year the auxiliary donated more than $89,000 which was used to purchase new equipment. The auxiliary serves home-baked goods and hosts a Christmas party for all hospital employees. Volunteers are also involved in all blood drives in the city. One of the newer programs sponsored by the auxiliary is the Car Seat program, in which parents or grandparents may rent car seats for infants or small children.

The auxiliary awards several four-year scholarships to students pursuing a bachelor of science degree in nursing. Scholarships are also awarded to students enrolled in the two year nursing program at Midland College.

The group of volunteers was organized in 1950 when the hospital opened with 75 beds and 65 employees.

Anelle Mack is president of the auxiliary. Other 1984-1985 officers include Nancy Stafford, vice president; Sue Roberts, secretary; Carolyn Thompson, treasurer; and Carol Hall, publicity chairman.

ANELLE MACK

Opti-Mrs. Club of Midland

Opti-Mrs. Club of Midland works to provide support for the Optimist Club of Midland and its youth activities in the community. Projects include fund raising to buy Christmas baskets for needy families and donations to the Center for Battered Women and Children; and assisting in the sales at the Christmas tree lots, proceeds of which go to youth projects.

Officers are Loretta L. Carson, president; Dilly Nance, vice-president; Wanda Phillips, secretary and treasurer.

LORETTA L. CARSON

Las Manos

Las Manos was organized to promote community interest in the museum of the Southwest.

The organization each year sponsors Septemberfest which benefits the museum. The group's ongoing project is docent tours of the museum.

Rosemary Wright is president of Las Manos. Other 1984-1985 officers are Ann Dunbar, vice president; Kathy Shannon, secretary; Kay Jons, treasurer; and Cynthia Patterson, publicity chairman.

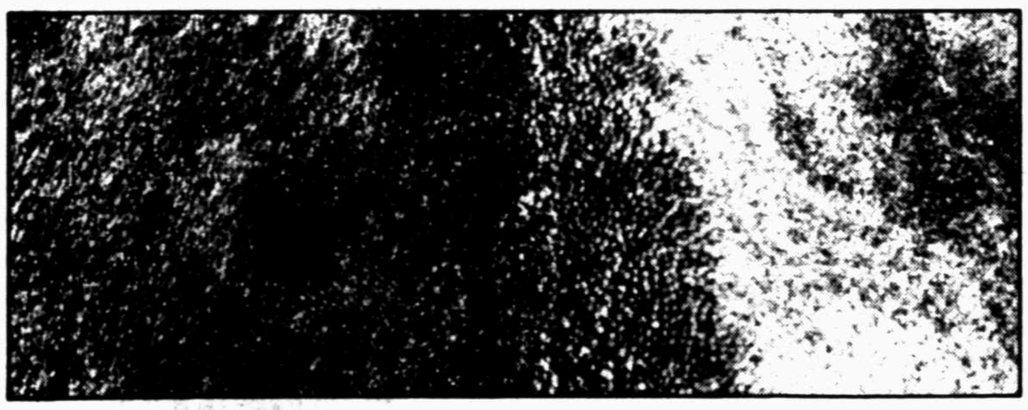

Fabrics' history extends back millennia

Copley News Service

Pieces of twined cotton fabrics, an early weaving technique, have survived in the dry air of Peru from 2000 B.C.

Silk manufacture is also quite ancient. It remained a closely guarded Chinese secret for some 3,000 years.

Chocolate vs. cavities

NEW YORK (AP) — Recent studies at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the Forsyth Dental Center in Boston indicate chocolate can help fight tooth decay, reports Chocolatier magazine.

Findings indicate that chocolate contains a heat-resistant, water-soluble protein team component that inhibits the activity of the mouth enzyme, dextransucrase. This enzyme is a key element in the formation of plaque.

In addition, the magazine says, the cocoa butter present in chocolate helps clear foods quickly from the mouth.

'Functionary' philanthropist establishes national network

By KATHLEEN TELTSCH
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — When David R. Hunter discovers a worthy but struggling charity seeking money, he sends out a string of memos alerting dozens of small foundations or philanthropists across the country.

Frequently, the memos lead to a donation. "I'm just a functionary," said Hunter, who directs two small family philanthropies in New York.

But others insist Hunter's influence has been persuasive, particularly in shaping the philanthropy of a generation of young people who inherited wealth and are interested in helping minority groups, low-income families and the antinuclear movement.

"He's the father, or grandfather, or, if you are conspiratorially minded, he's the godfather of progressive philanthropy," said George Pillsbury of Boston, a 34-year-old philanthropist.

The two met in 1973 when Pillsbury was looking for a way to use an inheritance he had received from the Pillsbury family's flour interests.

Since then, Pillsbury, who was guided by Hunter, has given away virtually all of the $400,000 he received when he turned 21, and continues to work for the Funding Exchange, a rapidly growing national network of nine small, community-based foundations.

One foundation in the network, North Star of New York, which assists tenant groups and minority organizations, marked its fifth anniversary last week with a dinner in Manhattan honoring Hunter for his 25 years in philanthropy. He was given the first Frederick Douglass Award, named for the former slave who became an abolitionist and a supporter of women's rights.

Hunter, who is 68 years old, operates from a modest Manhattan office. The doorplate identifies the tenants as the Stern Fund and the Ottinger Foundation, two philanthropies he manages that have supported liberal causes for decades. But there is a third listing: "etc."

The "etc" refers to a number of other small charities he helps, as well as philanthropists and hundreds of other individuals Hunter advises — typically by sending them a steady stream of memos.

"I have files filled with David's memos," said Obie Benz, a New York film producer who is heir to a baking fortune. He calls Hunter "my oldest friend in philanthropy."

Hunter recalled their first meeting, in 1972. "I was in San Francisco talking to a bunch of kids with long hair, sitting around on the floor," he said. "I was the only one sitting on a chair and wearing a tie. This one kid stayed behind and wanted to talk, saying he wanted to find some way of giving away money, not to a museum or hospital or some such thing."

The episode led to the establishment of Vanguard, the first of a string of community-based foundations that include North Star. A report on Vanguard's activities impressed Pillsbury's mother, Sally, who passed it along to her son. Pillsbury then helped establish a second, similiar foundation in Boston called the Haymarket People's Fund. His sister, Sarah, a West Coast film maker, was a founder of another member philanthropy, Liberty Hill, in Los Angeles.

Two other young people, Toby D'Oench and Martin Bunzl, approached Hunter for help in 1977 when they decided they wanted to set up a community-based foundation in New York.

They were joined by other young people and together established North Star. They took the name from an antislavery newspaper Douglass had founded and named after the star that guided runaway slaves north on the underground railroad.

The foundation, which has its offices at 135 East 15th Street, has prospered, providing 250 local organizations with grants totaling $750,000. It has helped tenant groups resist gentrification on the Lower East side, assisted in unionizing Chinese restaurant workers and helped win legal status as American residents for some Haitians in Brooklyn who had entered the country illegally. It has also worked with Hispanic-rights groups and supported street-theater organizations.

In a speech to the Council on Foundations in 1975, he told members that the primary reason for the existence of foundations should be "extending democracy in the world of economics as well as politics." He also listed conditions he said needed change — including racism, abuse of power by the state against individuals, denial of women's rights to control their own bodies, shrinking help to the needy while aid to corporations is expanded, and interference in other governments.

'Functionary' philanthropist establishes national network

By KATHLEEN TELTSCH
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — When David R. Hunter discovers a worthy but struggling charity seeking money, he sends out a string of memos alerting dozens of small foundations or philanthropists across the country.

Frequently, the memos lead to a donation. "I'm just a functionary," said Hunter, who directs two small family philanthropies in New York.

But others insist Hunter's influence has been persuasive, particularly in shaping the philanthropy of a generation of young people who inherited wealth and are interested in helping minority groups, low-income families and the antinuclear movement.

"He's the father, or grandfather, or, if you are conspiratorially minded, he's the godfather of progressive philanthropy," said George Pillsbury of Boston, a 34-year-old philanthropist.

The two met in 1973 when Pillsbury was looking for a way to use an inheritance he had received from the Pillsbury family's flour interests.

Since then, Pillsbury, who was guided by Hunter, has given away virtually all of the $400,000 he received when he turned 21, and continues to work for the Funding Exchange, a rapidly growing national network of nine small, community-based foundations.

One foundation in the network, North Star of New York, which assists tenant groups and minority organizations, marked its fifth anniversary last week with a dinner in Manhattan honoring Hunter for his 25 years in philanthropy. He was given the first Frederick Douglass Award, named for the former slave who became an abolitionist and a supporter of women's rights.

Hunter, who is 68 years old, operates from a modest Manhattan office. The doorplate identifies the tenants as the Stern Fund and the Ottinger Foundation, two philanthropies he manages that have supported liberal causes for decades. But there is a third listing: "etc."

The "etc" refers to a number of other small charities he helps, as well as philanthropists and hundreds of other individuals Hunter advises — typically by sending them a steady stream of memos.

"I have files filled with David's memos," said Obie Benz, a New York film producer who is heir to a baking fortune. He calls Hunter "my oldest friend in philanthropy."

Hunter recalled their first meeting, in 1972. "I was in San Francisco talking to a bunch of kids with long hair, sitting around on the floor," he said. "I was the only one sitting on a chair and wearing a tie. This one kid stayed behind and wanted to talk, saying he wanted to find some way of giving away money, not to a museum or hospital or some such thing."

The episode led to the establishment of Vanguard, the first of a string of community-based foundations that include North Star. A report on Vanguard's activities impressed Pillsbury's mother, Sally, who passed it along to her son. Pillsbury then helped establish a second, similiar foundation in Boston called the Haymarket People's Fund. His sister, Sarah, a West Coast film maker, was a founder of another member philanthropy, Liberty Hill, in Los Angeles.

Two other young people, Toby D'Oench and Martin Bunzl, approached Hunter for help in 1977 when they decided they wanted to set up a community-based foundation in New York.

They were joined by other young people and together established North Star. They took the name from an antislavery newspaper Douglass had founded and named after the star that guided runaway slaves north on the underground railroad.

The foundation, which has its offices at 135 East 15th Street, has prospered, providing 250 local organizations with grants totaling $750,000. It has helped tenant groups resist gentrification on the Lower East side, assisted in unionizing Chinese restaurant workers and helped win legal status as American residents for some Haitians in Brooklyn who had entered the country illegally. It has also worked with Hispanic-rights groups and supported street-theater organizations.

In a speech to the Council on Foundations in 1975, he told members that the primary reason for the existence of foundations should be "extending democracy in the world of economics as well as politics." He also listed conditions he said needed change — including racism, abuse of power by the state against individuals, denial of women's rights to control their own bodies, shrinking help to the needy while aid to corporations is expanded, and interference in other governments.

Clothes may not make the man but crafts can make a room. Greatly adding to the homey ambiance of this room are handmade articles of wicker, iron, wood and clay.

Craft items make rooms 'homier'

Crafts are becoming more popular, possibly as a relief from our increasingly mechanized, computerized, systematized society in which the human element sometimes seems to get lost.

People enjoy both making craft items and having them around. And craft items seem to make homes homier.

For example take the "Great Room" (combinaton family room-dining area-kitchen) created by interior designers at one large home furnishings company. To give warmth and the human touch to this wide-open space, they not only filled it with comfortable furnishings accessorized it with many kinds of crafted objets d'art, including items in wicker, wrought iron and ceramic.

Th color scheme is butterscotch set off by touches of navy blue. The upholstery on the two overstuffed love seats is in those colors. The floor is butterscotch while the hand-loomed area rug under the butler's-tray coffee table is navy.

The fireplace in the family room is bordered with stock molding painted navy and butterscotch. The beveled-edge plank walls received a couple of coats of off-white paint.

The crafts "make" the room, including a table lamp with woven wicker base; a wooden chandelier with gracefully curved wrought-iron arms and a butterscotch, navy and cobalt blue quilt, both in the dining area; a Shaker wall clock; Shaker hurricane lamps with heavy iron wall fastenings, flanking the fireplace; and a stoneware bowl and American Indian earthenware candle holders on the coffee table.

Although the furniture is new it consists of carefully contrived replicas of authentic 18th century American pieces.

Apples can be put to multitude of tasty, unusual uses

Associated Press

Here are a few of the lesser known but very tasty uses for both Golden Delicious and Red Delicious apples:

— Fold peeled, diced Delicious apples into a carton of vanilla yogurt. Sprinkle with wheat germ for a snack.

— Combine chunks of the apple alternately with cubes of sharp Cheddar cheese on skewers as an appetizer.

— Add grated apple to a mint relish to accompany beef or lamb at dinner.

— Diced apple and sauerkraut make a sweet and sour condiment for barbecued hot dogs.

Clothes designed by Kenyan

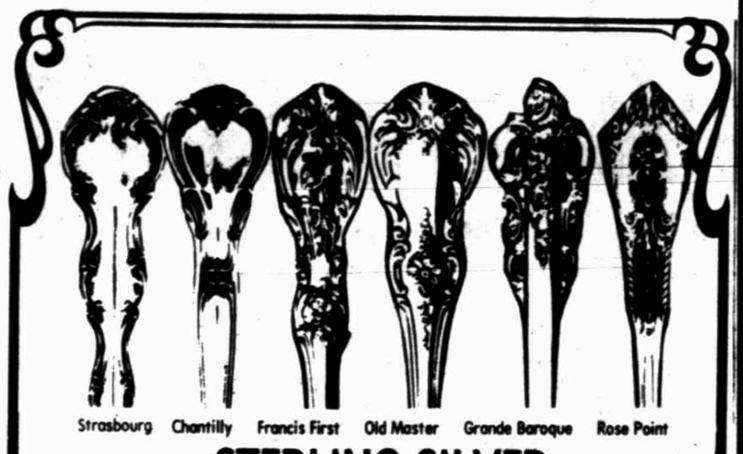

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — In Africa, where women tend to wear garishly printed acrylic frocks and shun traditional handwoven materials, a Kenyan designer is ready to revolutionize the fashion scene.

"I want to help bring a renaissance of pride in our rich African heritage that, combined with my Western training, will stimulate the senses of people all over the world — not just on this continent — not by shocking, but by surprising," said 24-year-old Namulanda Kumola Khuluchi, who designs under the name Kumola.

But Kumola has an uphill task selling her creations to women who generally believe that shoddy, imported synthetics are better than homegrown cottons, wools or leather.

"They'd rather spend 1,200 shillings (about $80) on a cheap dress made of imported acrylic, that doesn't let their skin breathe in our equatorial climate, than 400 shillings ($27)," she said, on one of good local cotton.

Cosmetology has long history

Associated Press

Turquoise hair was popular with the courtesans of imperial Rome long before it was flaunted by punks in the streets of London and New York.

Other echoes of the past can be found in current beauty routines and fashions, according to an article on ancient cosmetics and beauty aids in the October issue of Connoisseur.

For example, today's jetsetters are not so different from Tutu, wife of the Egyptian scribe Ani (New Kingdom, circa 15th century B.C.). She never traveled without her beauty case — well stocked with an ivory comb, five different kohl vials with applicators, a pumice stone, alabaster and terra-cotta vases for perfumes and unguents, as well as a change of fine red-leather sandals.

And the sallow pancake makeup of TV-age politicos cannot compare for impact with that of Cyrus the Great of Persia, whose heavily outlined eyes and skillfully shaded complexion made him look like a living statue to awed beholders.

One can see the cosmetics fashions and fads of the ancient world in an exhibition at Villa Malpensata, in Lugano, Switzerland (October 15 through November 15). The beauty aids of ages past appear amazingly similar to our own.

Permian Basin Landmen's Auxiliary

AAUW

The American Association of University Women, founded in 1882, was organized to enable women college graduates greater opportunities by working together.

Midland branch AAUW was organized in 1940 with 30 charter members.

The group sponsors an annual "Lunch with Santa program" and a scholarship program.

Joan Sutherland is president of the organization. Other 1984-1985 officers are Ritzie Williford, vice president; Joyce Hauke, secretary; Ginny McAneny, treasurer; and Colleen Scury, publicity chairman.

JOAN SUTHERLAND

Midland Writer's Association

Midland Writer's Association was organized in 1972 by Mrs. Herschel Nixon, an instructor of a creative writing course at Midland College. The club works to encourage, help and critique members' work in all areas of writing. Meetings are the first Tuesday evening of each month.

Officers are Joan Threlfall, president; Mary J. Goodwin, vice-president and publicity chairman; and Dolores Gunn, secretary/treasurer.

JOAN THRELFALL

Progressive Study Club

The Progressive Study Club, founded in 1941, is dedicated to mutual improvement through cultural development, philanthropic and civic welfare. The group strives to present interesting programs which will enrich members' lives.

Members of the club have assisted in several civic projects including the maintenance of Midland Woman's Club.

Each year, the group sponsors a project to help needy families at Christmas.

Mrs. Michael Cristiani is president of the club. Other 1984-1985 members are Mrs. Paul Green, vice president; Mrs. Ed Vogler, recording secretary; Mrs. Vernon Pettis, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Vincent Scurry, treasurer; and Mrs. Aida C. Dunlap, publicity chairman.

MRS. MICHAEL CRISTIANI

Midland Study Club

Organized in 1956, the Midland Study Club is the oldest study club in the city.

The group was formed to enable members to share ideas to develop self-improvement.

Topical programs are presented regularly to members by guest speakers.

Special projects of the club include Christmas and May luncheons.

Members meet monthly at 1:15 p.m. on the first Monday, September through May.

Thelma Bloch is president of the study club. Other 1984-1985 officers are Mary Lou Hogan, vice president; Bonnie Hubbard, secretary and treasurer; and Genie Bailey, publicity chairman.

Childbirth with Preparation

Childbirth With Preparation of Texas Inc., founded in 1974 as member group of CWPEL and reorganized as CWP of Texas Inc. in 1979, seeks to provide childbirth education. Projects of the organization include presenting educational programs at Midland and Lee High Schools; early pregnancy classes; film night; and Lamaze classes.

Officers are Marsha Dameron, president; Elisa Goodwin, education vice-president; Michelle Feavel, vice-president in charge of review; Lori Hicks, vice-president in charge of programs; Kathy Coughlin, secretary; Carla Stark, treasurer; and Nancy Lattu, publicity chairman.

Twentieth Century Study Club

The Twentieth Century Study Club's motto is "Service through study." The group was organized and federated in 1938.

Organized and federated in 1938, the group serves the Permain Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Allison Canter Center, Midland Hospice Program, Midland County Families in Action, Midland Crime Prevention, and VIPS program (Adopt-a-school) as their regular projects. The club also supports child protection legislation.

Billie Halstead is president of the study club. Other 1984-1985 officers are JoAnn McClurg, vice president; Sa; Kelly, secretary; Jane Pope, treasurer; and Theta Redding, publicity chairman.

BILLIE HALSTEAD

Woman's Wednesday Club

Woman's Wednesday Club was organized in 1903. The group was instrumental in forming the Midland Library Association; club members served on the board of that organization for many years. Through efforts of club members the Memorial Book Shelf was established at the library. Members helped raise funds for the Woman's Club building and made gifts of furnishings for it.

Woman's Wednesday Club is a study club with planned programs and projects. A share-holding member of the Woman's Club, members support that organization and present one of its programs each year.

Officers are Mrs. C. Wallace Craig, president; Miss Helen Giffert, vice-president; Mrs. Warren L. Faller, secretary and publicity chairman; and Mrs. J.P. Wilkinson, treasurer.

Midland Society of Parlimentarians

Formerly Midland Association of Parliamentarians, the Midland Society of Parliamentarians was reorganized under its present name in 1975. The society works to further interest in the study and practice of parliamentary procedure.

Projects include promoting study of parliamentary procedure by the youth chairman, offering instruction and advice and furnishing judges for area youth competition.

Officers are Mrs. Harold G. Clark, president; Mrs. Edwin Unger, vice-president; Mrs. Robert A. Hobbs, secretary; Mrs. W.C. Osborne, treasurer; and Mrs. John P. McKinley, publicity chairman.

Clothing care cuts expenses

Copley News Service

Fashion can be expensive. It takes an investment and commitment each season to add garments that keep your wardrobe stylish. But some of those additions, such as replacing damaged garments, are unnecessary.

Often clothing that could remain stylish and wearable for several years is damaged or so poorly constructed that it doesn't last more than one season.

So how can you avoid such expenses and make clothing last longer? Following is some advice from Armand Birkens, who oversees the care of clothing from all over the world as laundry-valet manager of The Ritz-Carlton hotel in Chicago.

"It starts with buying your clothing," Birkens says. He suggests that looking for garments with sewn-in labels is the best protection against improper handling after purchase. Look for labels that tell about colorfastness, shrinkage, fiber content and warnings of any problems that might occur.

He also emphasizes the importance of buying clothing that fits properly. Instead of relying on size tags alone, try on a garment before buying. Clothing that is too small will be uncomfortable and wear out faster because of strain on the seams.

Corporate culture still under question

Copley News Service

The dispute was about whether women should wear open-toe or closed-toe shoes to work.

Kate Rand Lloyd, the editor-at-large of Working Woman magazine, listened with courtesy, perhaps a bit amused as the two women in the auditorium politely battled out the shoe war.

One of them, an accountant — wearing sensible navy (closed-toe) pumps, a navy skirt and a beige-and-white blouse with a mock men's tie — said that on the days she wore open-toe shoes, male clients who came to see her, but had not yet met her, thought that she was the secretary — not the boss.

The days she wore closed-toe pumps she didn't have that problem, she said.

The other woman, dressed in white pants, blue blouse, yellow blazer, red belt and purse — and open-toe shoes — thought it was silly to worry so much about the exposure of one's toes as a factor in being a successful business or professional woman. The woman had recently sold her equipment rental business for a cool $100,000 — much of that net profit.

"Men don't really tend to notice women's clothes unless they're embarrassed by them," Lloyd said, after the women had left. "They may be embarrassed because the women's clothes look sexually provocative or too costumey or too bright. They really don't notice it until it's a matter of discomfort for them."

Lloyd sat down in one of the metal chairs in the department store auditorium. She was a little weary. She had spent most of the last week talking to women, firing them up about their professional potential. The shoe discussion must have been a little disheartening.
