SCHOOL CHILDREN ARE SEEING ART EXHIBIT

With virtually every student in the city schools and some from the rural schools visiting the art exhibit at the Senior High School auditorium this week...

The exhibit consists of 150 facsimile and sepia prints of famous paintings of modern and ancient times. The exhibit was kept open Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and talks were made on the appreciation of the pictures each evening.

Students from the Caldwell school, under John Seales, a teacher in the school, visited the exhibit Wednesday and several other rural schools probably will visit the exhibit, according to those in charge.

Twentieth Century Club Is Honored On Wednesday With Tea

Members of the Sorosis club entertained members of the Twentieth Century club with a musical tea at the home of Mrs. W. E. Bush from 3 until 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

The home of Mrs. Bush was decorated in golden calendas, carrying out the club color of gold.

Four little girls, dressed in colonial costumes, danced the minuet. They were little Misses Edabeth Trent, Jean Shelly Jennings, Rosemary Leaverton and Frances Snyder.

Guests were met at the door by Mrs. J. B. Cooper, president of the Sorosis club, and Mrs. Bush. A program was given during the afternoon.

Mrs. J. L. Cunningham had talked on the future of the Sorosis club. Almost the entire membership of the two clubs attended the tea, which had been planned by a committee consisting of Mrs. O. B. Hewett, Mrs. W. E. Bush, Mrs. H. D. Chipley, Mrs. Earl Spores, Miss Vera Murfee and Mrs. Richard Maxwell.

Club House Approved By Athenaeum Club

The life and writings of Thomas Nelson Page was the topic for discussion at a meeting of the Athenaeum club at the First Baptist church Tuesday afternoon. Because of the epidemic of influenza, over half of the membership was absent and most of the numbers on the program were impromptu.

Roll call was answered by giving an incident in the life of Page. Mrs. E. L. Robertson was to have given a resume of the writings of John Estlin Cook, the topic for the last lesson of the club, and in her absence, Mrs. Gus Ford made the talk. "In Old Virginia," a volume of short stories in negro dialect by Page, proved a delightful topic for round table discussion with the story, "Marse Chan," the most popular one discussed.

Mrs. E. L. Eanks and Mrs. J. V. Conner, of the Delphin club, presented the question of building a community club house for women. Members of the Athenaeum club expressed a desire to have such a building erected.

Interest Is Growing In Wednesday Class

Interest in the Wednesday Bible Class, which meets at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. N. Lemmon each Wednesday afternoon, is increasing, according to Mrs. Lemmon. There were 34 women present this week. The lesson, taught by Mrs. A. L. Pace, are on Genesis at present. The class will continue through the Bible, taking the books consecutively. The class is non-sectarian and both men and women are invited to join, according to those in charge.

Mrs. Kimmel Leads Child Study Club

Mrs. R. V. Kimmel was leader of the Child Study Club in regular meeting at the First Methodist Church Wednesday afternoon. The lesson for the afternoon was on the myth and the fairy tale. Mrs. W. B. Price, president of the seventh district of the State Federation of Women's Club, visited the club and made a talk on the value of studying the child. She said that this club should attempt to secure the attendance of more mothers.

During the business session, the treasurer reported that more than $56 was raised with a recent benefit party.

RESIN BALL MAKES BID TO NULLIFY EFFORTS TO STOP TRICK PITCHING

The resin ball is certain to make for an unsettled pitching condition. The National League, responsible for the return of resin as a pitching asset, says the use of it is optional not compulsory.

The American League has already gone on record against the use of resin or any other foreign substance. Resin is sure to be used as the old ball for all forms of trick pitching. The first big minor league to consider the resin ball issue has taken sides with the American. At a recent meeting of the International League magnates the use of the resin ball was banned.

"Bad policy," was the stand taken by the International in declining to accept the resin bag as permitted by the rule makers. It is a certainty that many leagues will follow the lead of the International while others will allow the pitchers to use the resin. This condition is sure to react on many pitchers when they come up to the majors, with one league permitting its use, and the other forbidding it.

It has taken practically five years to eliminate trick pitching, a menace to the best interest of the game. It seems a shame to offer a loophole for its return.

MINORS REJECT IT The International League also took another stand that is contrary to the decision made by the rules committee. It relates to the sacrifice fly.

The old rule was that the batsman received credit for a sacrifice hit when with one, or no one out, he hits a fly ball that is caught but results in a run being scored on the catch. The new arrangement of this rule gives the batsman credit for a sacrifice hit in all cases where a runner is advanced a base.

"I much prefer the old rule. When a batter delivers a long fly with a runner on third that enables said runner to score, he has delivered in my opinion a sacrifice hit. It is entitled to some credit. The sacrifice hit removing the time it has deserved. Crediting the batter with a sacrifice hit, thereby removing the time bat, any time a runner advances a base on a fly ball, makes the pitcher a rather cheap one.

The new rule will make for fattening averages. Likewise there will be a lack of uniformity in the averages since many leagues will no doubt adopt the attitude of the International.

DISLIKED BY MANY Getting back to the use of resin.

Even though the National League will permit it, there will be many pitchers in that organization who will not use it. Only the other day Grover Cleveland Alexander of the Chicago Cubs came out flat-footed against it. So did what Fred Clarke, former manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, the man who helped Bill McKechnie make the club the world champs last year say:

Interesting Facts about Gasoline This Buggy Needed Gasoline From "nuisance to necessity" is the history of Gasoline. From the Civil War until 1894, when the automobile made its debut, Gasoline was the "white elephant" of the petroleum industry. During this time petroleum was refined for its kerosene, lubricating and medicinal contents, but Gasoline was a necessary evil by-product, for which there was little or no demand. As the automobile came to the front, good roads were built and electricity took the place of kerosene for lighting, the demand for Gasoline grew by leaps and bounds until today it taxes the resources of the world to supply enough of this vital necessity. HORSEPLAY

In attempting to show girl students who make use of rouge and cosmetics too openly by applying it no matter where they may be, an instructor in the University of California told his class the young men would be warranted in coming into the school room to shave, considering the example set by the young women. He said he would be tempted to give high marks to any brave enough to do it. Three students took him at his word and shaved themselves in class the following day. He assured them they would be the recipients of high marks.

We know the college man often gets farthest in the end, but it is just such things as this that make it difficult for him to get a start. Ernest could not be able to concentrate on rural relief, but within a few days Chairman Gilbert N. Haugen and his house committee on agriculture will be hard at it. The majority party has noticed that the western farm states have been pretty cranky lately and isn't easy in its mind about it.

There's a Senate committee on agriculture, too, but it isn't so distinctly a red farmers' committee. Senator Norris, its chairman—its chairman generally makes a committee—has a great many other interests, which distract his attention. Congressman Haugen is an undiluted farmer. (To be sure, he's been a banker, but he was a farmers' banker. And he's sold machinery but it was farm machinery.) And he works his fellow committee members like so many farm hands.

INDIGNANT

A Parisian audience jumped to its feet in indignant protest when an American vaudeville team attempted to jazz the "Marseillaise," the patriotic outburst provoking hasty apologies from the manager and guilty performers.

Considerable significance must be attached to this manifestation of reverence for a national anthem. It indicated that however popular jazz may be with the masses everywhere, those selfsame jazz fans feel it to be a low form of music and that jazzing a national anthem is an insult to patriots.

But why protect only patriotic airs from this admitted form of desecration? The great music of the great master, the classic of this and past ages, are also held sacred by many, yet they have not escaped the same profanation. That, too, should be resented by those whose musical taste rises above the jazz level.

There is only one plausible explanation for the fact that the Parisian uprising has never been duplicated where classic music has been similarly blasphemed. That explanation is that such performances are patronized by patriots and not by those of more cultivated musical sense.

In a New Role

The YELLOW STUB by Ernest Lynn

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Henry Rand, 55, a business man, is found murdered in a cheap hotel in Griffon. Police find a woman's handkerchief and the yellow stub of a theater ticket.

Jimmy Rand, his son, goes to Cleveland, where the theater is. The stub is traced to Thomas Fogarty, who says he gave it to Olga Maynard, a cabaret singer. Jimmy meets and falls in love with Mary Lowell. She faints when she learns police want her for murder. Mary, out with Samuel Church, a wealthy lawyer, sees Jimmy lift Olga into a taxi and misunderstands.

Olga tells police the stub and handkerchief might have come in to possess a man who "picked her up" two nights before the murder. Jimmy receives several mysterious warnings to leave Cleveland but ignores them. Later he is attacked at night by two men. He escapes after seizing a blackjack from one of them.

With Jimmy and Mary estranged, Church crosses his advantage and get Mary's promise to marry him. Mary tells Jimmy this when they meet in a park. Jimmy, trying to hurt her, accuses her of marrying for money. He goes back to his room and calls up Olga, asking her to meet him.

That evening with Olga he sees the man they are looking for—the man who is supposed to have got the ticket stub—in an automobile. It is one of the men who had attacked Jimmy. They follow the car, but the man and his companion escape. At the police station Olga recognizes his picture in the Bertillon gallery. In the Bertillon records as that of IKE JENSEN.

That same night Jimmy goes home to his room to find another warning letter. "Now you look like a pretty bright fellow," Jimmy smiled, and the man

King. Perhaps you won't feel comfortable if I continue to stay here. I'll move out if you are afraid."

"Oh, I wouldn't think of asking you to move, Mr. Rand. It's so pleasant to have you here. You're no trouble and you're so neat and clean—not sloppy like so many roomers." She sighed. "I'm not afraid, Mr. Rand. There's a policeman around all the time now. I'm only afraid you'll run into some trouble some time while you're out."

His jaw set grimly. "I'll try to take care of myself. I just don't want to be a worry and a bother to you. About this boy who brought the note. What did he look like? Had you ever seen him before around the neighborhood?"

"No, I hadn't."

"And you say he came shortly after I left last evening?"

"It wasn't more than five minutes. It looks as if somebody had been keeping his eye on the house and waiting for me to leave. He waited until I had gone, so I couldn't question the boy about who had given him the letter."

"If I had suspected anything wrong, Mr. Rand, I'd have asked him myself. But goodness knows I didn't even give it a thought."

Arrived at the laundry office, he found that the man named Porter had left work with the delivery clerk that a new driver would report. The clerk in shirt sleeves and vest, a pencil stuck behind his ear, asked a few questions and issued some brief instructions. "Your main job is to deliver these packages of laundry and collect new batches to be washed. A smart fellow, however, goes a little beyond his job and tries to drum up new trade. Our drivers are our best means of selling this company to the people. They're the only ones who get the personal contacts outside."

"Now you look like a pretty bright fellow," Jimmy smiled, and the man laughed as he brought the delivery truck to a stop. "Let's see." He glanced again at the sheet of papers. "Smith—that's right."

He searched through his bundles, found the right one and started up the driveway to the back door. It suddenly occurred to him that this new job of his, laughable as it had seemed at first, might not be a bad thing.

"If I'm looking for Mr. Jensen," he said, "I'll surely have more chance of running into him if I'm driving around all the time than if I were working inside some office."

The problem of finding Jensen, he thought, might be a matter of pure luck. This job of his would take him into odd places and a fellow could always keep his eyes open. He mounted the back porch and knocked at the door.

It was opened by a little woman with black hair. A curly-headed boy of perhaps two and a half years tugged at her dress; another and younger baby sat in a high chair, eating cereal.

"Laundry, ma'am," he said, offering the bundle. "Three dollars and a quarter."

"Oh yes. Wait a minute and I'll get the money. Won't you come in?"

"What's your name, little man?" he asked the boy as the woman went into another room.

"Harry? That's a nice name. Harry what?"

"Harry Smith."

"Well, that's just fine. You're a regular little man, aren't you?"

"No, Harry big man like Daddy."

Harry's mother laughed as she handed over the money to Jimmy. "Ma'ma pay the man," observed Harry.

"That's right, Harry. You ask Ma'ma if she has any laundry she wants to send back."

She laughed. "If you can wait while I gather it together, I don't like to keep you waiting."

"Glad to wait. No trouble."

While she gathered up the clothes

STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

G. O. P. IS AGAIN READY TO TAKE UP FARM TROUBLES

By CHARLES P. STEWART, NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON.—Congress is about ready to look into the farmers' troubles. Tied up with tax legislation, it has not been able to concentrate on rural relief, but within a few days Chairman Gilbert N. Haugen and his house committee on agriculture will be hard at it.

The majority party has noticed that the western farm states have been pretty cranky lately and isn't easy in its mind about it.

It was then that Jimmy saw it was Mary with him.

CHAPTER XXVI JIMMY, studying the letter, frowned. It was written in the same large, scrawly hand as the first one.

"This is your last chance," it said. "Either leave town in three days or they'll be carrying you out in a pine box."

He shrugged his shoulders, laughing. "Parasitic cuss, whoever it is. Rising from his chair, he peeled off his coat and vest, lit a cigar and threw himself down on the bed to smoke and reflect.

"It couldn't very well have been this Ike Jensen or the man who was with him tonight," he said. "Unless, of course, they brought it or sent it here early in the evening. Who was it? Who is it that's writing this stuff?"

He jumped up from the bed and extinguished his cigar. "And how in the devil did the darned thing get there? No stamp on it or anything. It's spooky—actually spooky. I'll have to ask Mrs. King about it in the morning."

He turned out the light and hopped into bed.

Mrs. King was in the kitchen when he came downstairs—it was just a little past six-thirty—and he thought, "What a hard working woman she is. Gets up with the birds and works till all hours at night. I wonder when she finds time to sleep."

"Good morning, Mrs. King," he said. "I found a letter in my room last night. How did it get there—do you know? It didn't come through the mail."

"Why, yes." She turned from the gas range and out of habit thrust her hands in her apron pocket. "A boy brought it shortly after you went out last evening."

"A boy, eh?" This was quite unexpected. "Yes, a little fellow of perhaps ten or eleven."

"Did you ask him who sent it?"

"Why, no. I didn't consider it any of my business, who sent you letters. All he said was that a man gave it to him to deliver. Don't you know who it was from?" Again that eager curiosity on her part.

"No, I don't, Mrs. King. I'm puzzled about it. It's an anonymous letter from someone who seems intent on having me leave town. It's the second one I've found in my room. You remember that evening I came home and you told me you thought you heard me moving around in my room upstairs?"

"Yes, I remember."

"Well, I found one that night. I think you probably did hear someone up there, but it was the man who left that note. I bumped into someone coming out the gate as I came in."

"Why, Mr. Rand? Don't tell me that! What does it mean?"

"I don't know what it means, Mrs. King. Perhaps you won't feel comfortable if I continue to stay here. I'll move out if you are afraid."

Harry delighted his new visitor by reciting "Little Boy Boo, tum' bow you horn." Jimmy was vastly entertained and received a grave handshake and an invitation to come again when he told Harry goodbye.

The job, he thought, had started out auspiciously. If many of his calls were as pleasant as this, it was going to be interesting.

Time sped swiftly. He covered his route and went back to the laundry, where he received a compliment from the shirt-sleeved clerk and was started out on another trip.

Five o'clock in the afternoon found him driving back again to the plant his day's work done. Traffic again was heavy, the homeward flow of the workers of Cleveland. He stopped at an intersection. A large roadster, headed in the direction opposite to his, attracted his attention by its handsome, racy lines.

He gave a sudden start. It was Samuel Church at the wheel, and Church was looking at him, his lips curled in a sneering smile. Traffic started again, and Church turned to his companion. It was then that Jimmy saw it was Mary with him, and she was facing him directly, but looking through him—not at him.

PROGRESS

Yale university announces that it is sending its dean-elect on a tour of the South and West to study educational methods in force in universities and colleges in those regions. Among the institutions he will visit are the University of Virginia, the University of North Carolina, Tulane university, Leland Stanford university, the University of California and the University of Washington.

It hasn't been such a terribly long time since eastern educators would have scoffed at the suggestion that Yale could learn anything from colleges not in its immediate vicinity. The rest of the country has progressed marvelously in educational advances.

DEATH CALLS TO ENGINEER AFTER FIGHT FOR LIFE

H. P. SHELBY, INJURED IN TRAIN WRECK MONDAY, ANSWERS SUMMONS

H. P. Shelby, locomotive engineer of Slaton, who has been hovering between life and death in the Lubbock sanitarium since Monday as a result of burns and bruises received when Santa Fe passenger train No. 94, from Amarillo to Sweetwater, plunged into the ditch at Posey switch Monday at noon, died Wednesday night about 10 o'clock.

Some hopes had been held out by attending physicians to the family and friends of the injured man, but on account of the condition of the patient's lungs, through which has passed several draughts of steam, this hope had gradually become weaker. The patient rallied Tuesday, the second day after the accident, and issued assurances to his friends that he would recover, but Wednesday he began to sink as his steam ravaged lungs could withstand the strain no longer, with the consequence that his heart beats gradually became weaker.

The body was taken to Slaton this afternoon by the Rix Undertaking company, where it will be held until tomorrow, or pending the arrival of a child from the Pacific coast. From there the remains will be shipped to Newton, Kansas, former home of the deceased, where burial will be made.

Mr. Shelby is survived by his wife and eight children, all of whom were here when he died, except one son. He with his family has been living at Slaton for several years, and the esteem in which he was held by his friends and neighbors there is attested by the fact that several hundred of them visited him, and inquired about his condition while he was confined in the sanitarium.

GARY'S COMPANY CELEBRATES ITS BIRTHDAY TODAY

BIG STEEL CONCERN HAS 25TH BIRTHDAY AND BUSINESS GOES ON

(By Associated Press.) NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The United States Steel corporation, world's largest industrial enterprise, was twenty-five years old today. Elbert Gary, chairman of the board also completed today a quarter of a century as chief executive of the two and a half billion dollar corporation.

The executive office, still plainly furnished with the fittings which have served for twenty-five years, witnessed an special birthday decorations.

"Just Another Day"—Gary. "Just another day's work to do," was Mr. Gary's announcement for the dual anniversary.

The industry's history since its incorporation of fifty subsidiaries in 1901 has been one of steady expansion. Its total output during its career has reached approximately $22,000,000,000—more than the national debt or the Interstate Commerce Commission's tentative appraisal of the value of the railroads of the United States. Its total assets are $2,500,000,000.

It has paid out nearly six and half billions in wages, with a current annual payroll of about $45,000,000 paid to nearly 250,000 men. Dividends to stockholders have amounted to $2,170,000,000.

Preferred stock of the company is considered a gilt edged investment due to the conservative policy of the board of directors. The company from the first, has been a lender, never a borrower—even in such panics as that of 1907 it has been able to exercise this stabilizing influence.

TEACHERS CLOSE AFTER ELECTION OF R. J. CONDON

TENNESSEE LAW SCORED AS SCHOOL MEN QUIT CONVENTION

(By Associated Press.) WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Its new staff officers elected, the convention of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education association near its close today, with delegates disposing of business matters and hearing an address by Secretary Hoover.

Randall J. Condon, superintendent of schools at Cincinnati, was elected as president of the department, and the retiring president, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of the District of Columbia schools, automatically became first vice president. David A. Ward, of Wilmington, Del., was elected second vice president, and E. E. Lewis, of Flint, Mich., was chosen a member of the executive committee.

Discuss Many Subjects. The convention had before it today the report of resolutions committee draw to incorporate the views of the educators on a number of subjects. These included a repetition of the department's demand for enactment of a federal child labor law, advocacy of a federal department of education, immediate improvement in the rural school, which speakers have described as the most acute educational problem, and a statement urging law observance.

Tennessee Law Rapped. Among the resolutions was one forbidding the teaching of evolution and declaring that legislation restricting curricula may impede educational progress and it cannot alter or set aside any law of nature, science or God. The power to think and reason is God-given, it said, and must not be restricted.

In his address Secretary Hoover declared the men and women of the school rooms are entrusted with the "major part in handling on the traditions of our republic and its ideals. Our greatest national idea is Democracy. It is your function to keep Democracy possible by training its children to its ways and its meaning."

FIRE TRUCK TEST ABOVE NORMAL ON PRESSURE

Tests made Wednesday afternoon on pressure pumps of two pieces of Lubbock's fire fighting equipment revealed that the two pieces more than meet the requirements stipulated in the contract under which they were bought.

Truck No. 2, the newest piece of house and chemical equipment registered a pressure from three connections through the pump of 315 gallons per minute.

No. 3, which is a service truck hauling hook and ladder equipment as well as the usual hose cart, registered a pressure of 323 gallons per minute. Both trucks are guaranteed to net 750 gallons per minute through the three connections that are on each.

Truck No. 1, the oldest piece of rolling equipment, which has a history all of its own since it was first put into service several years ago following the organization of Lubbock's first fire department, probably will be put out to rest this afternoon.

TODAY'S MARKETS

Cotton Markets

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 25. (AP)—The cotton market opened easy although Liverpool was about as due. First trades showed losses of 1 to 4 points. Settlement was bearish, however, in the case of old crop months and prices eased off after the call on the renewal of long liquidation, March trading down to 18.92c, May to 18.32c and July to 18.04c, or 10 to 11 points below yesterday's close.

The market continued to decline during the morning of further long liquidation of old crop months and on a fair amount of hedge selling. As a result March eased off to 18.75c, May to 18.48c and July to 17.85c or 26 to 28 points below yesterday's close. Towards the last part of the morning selling quieted down and trade buying developed at the lower levels, causing prices to rally 8 to 10 points from the lows. New crop months did not decline as much as old crops and October at the lowest of the morning showed a decline of only 17 points from the previous close.

The market turned easy again during the afternoon with brisk selling and although March did not make a new low the later months did, May dropping to 18.30c and July to 17.85c, or 31 to 33 points below the previous close. October eased off 17.12c or 21 points net lower. Bearish sentiment appeared to be growing, helped by the slight demand for spots.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Feb. 25. (AP)—The cotton market opened barely steady at a decline of one to 4 points under continued selling, which developed late yesterday. In sympathy with lower Liverpool cables, rumors that shipments of cotton were expected here for tender next month, was a factor in the decline. Trade interests were buyers at the lower prices, however, and the market was a shade up from the lowest at the end of the first hour, although the tone was rather unsettled.

Slight rallies from the early decline were followed by renewed weakness. The forenoon market was unsettled under continued pressure of liquidation in the old crop positions and selling by New Orleans, Wall Street, local and Southern interests.

March broke to 19.55c, old crop positions showing net losses of 27 to 28 points at midday; new crop months sold off to 17.85c for October, a net decline of 18 points.

The decline was accompanied by reiterated rumors that cotton was coming here from the South for delivery next month and talk of an easing spot basis in some of the Southern markets.

LUCKO LAMESA BIG SPRING "The House of Satisfaction"

Grain Markets

CHICAGO REPORT

CHICAGO, Feb. 25. (AP)—Despite an early show of strength, the wheat ket today soon underwent a decided set-back. New crop deliveries displayed the most weakness, plentiful moisture for domestic winter wheat being a bearish factor.

Damp weather and scantiness of corn receipts led to higher prices for corn. After opening unchanged 1/4 c up, May 79 to 79 1/2, the market scored material gains.

Out sympathized with corn. Starting unchanged to 1-4 higher May 41 1/4, prices continued to harden.

Influenced by lower quotations on hogs the provision market was weak.

Grandmother Rushes To Bedside By Rail

from Texas to her bedside here has so interested Betty Jo Bloodworth, five year daughter of Rev. Lloyd Bloodworth, Decatur minister that she is much improved. The child has diphtheria.

Mrs. B. M. Halbert of San Angelo, the grandmother, started the flight from Fort Worth but rain and darkness forced a landing near Mokane, Mo. yesterday afternoon. From the landing field Mrs. Halbert hurried to Butler, Mo. to catch a train to St. Louis. She was expected to reach Decatur today.

When informed that anxiety had been expressed over failure of the plane to reach its ultimate goal, Mrs. Halbert declared there had been no cause for worry. After riding through the rain for three hours, "we just picked a nice field and came down," she said.

Murder Charges Are Dropped Against Man

MARIETTA, Okla., Feb. 25 (AP)—Charges against Sam Carpenter, one of four persons accused of complicity in the killing of Dr. J. V. Jenkins, Gainesville dentist, were dismissed today. He will be held, however, as a state witness.

Others facing charges in connection with the case are Mrs. Jenkins, widow of the dentist, Tom Choate, Indian foreman of the Jenkins ranch near Burneyville where Dr. Jenkins was shot last December, and Tom Jefferson, a former employe on the ranch.

Mrs. Jenkins was released yesterday on $15,000 bail, $5,000,000 being scheduled on the bond by prominent men here and in Gainesville. Bond of $15,000 was set for Choate, but has not been made.

NEW CASES FOR SNIPER MANIAC

Officers Believe Sioux City Slayings Perpetrated By Crazed Farmer

(By The Associated Press) OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 25.—Omaha police announced today that microscopic examination of two 22 calibre shells found at the scene of a double slaying in Sioux City, Iowa, last September revealed the same firing pin imprint as those found on shells used by Louis Clark alias Frank Carter, confessed Omaha "band" sniper.

Inspector Ben Danabon, who received the shells from Sioux City officers yesterday said they coincided in marking with shells found at the scene of the slaying of William McDevitt and Dr. A. D. Searies, Omaha victims of Clark.

Clark pleaded not guilty and waived preliminary hearing before Judge Dineen in police court today. The crowd which filled the court room for the first glimpse of the sniper bandit was locked in when Clark was led to a patrol wagon for removal to the county jail. He was held to the district court on charges of first degree murder and murder while attempting to rob.

Littlefield's Band Uniforms Purchased LITTLEFIELD, Feb. 25.—The Littlefield concert band has recently purchased uniforms. At the present time the organization consists of twenty-five members. Although it is very early in the year, the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce has made arrangements to send the band to Amarillo to the W. T. C. C. convention, along with a special train of delegates.

The Littlefield band has been highly commended for the class of music it is able to render and upon the style in which it is rendered. It is predicted by several of the best musicians and band men in the state that Littlefield will see the day in the near future when she will have a band that will rank with any municipal or town band in Texas.

NAVY PLAN FOR AIRSHIPS GIVEN

Huge Dreadnaughts of Air To Be Built If Congress Will Give Plan Its 'O. K.'

(By The Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Navy plans for great dreadnaughts of air, bristling with guns to ward off airplane attacks, underlie action of the house naval committee in providing for construction of two 6,000,000 cubic foot rigid airships in the $105,000,000 naval expansion program, it recently reported to the house.

A glimpse of new monsters that have been designed, given to the committee by Admiral William A. Moffett, air chief, shows seven of the new 10 calibre guns, eighteen 20 calibre and one of the post war, one pounder automatics, together with 9,700 rounds of ammunition for these weapons as a part of the regular military load of each ship.

Fire is Concentrated "The guns are so situated that an enemy aircraft cannot approach from any direction of the angle without permitting a concentration of fire," Admiral Moffett said.

Instead of armor, the air dreadnaught will rely on the non-inflammability of helium gas for protection from hostile airplanes.

To illustrate the endurance of the big airships against gun fire from attacks planes, Admiral Moffett said it would take hours of gas leakage from bullet holes from the cells in the ship to bring it down. The ship's crew could stop these small leaks before there was any appreciable loss, he said.

Plans for a 6,500,000 cubic footer drawn by an American commercial concern, the navy office said, had been calculated to show the value of such a ship as an aerial troop-carrying ship. She would have a capacity of 750 men with their individual fighting equipment, he explained, and could take that force 500 miles at a speed of 85 miles an hour and still retain a 50 per cent fuel reserve.

CHAIN GROCERIES TO INCREASE STOCK

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 25 (AP)—Increase of capital of the Piggly-Wiggly Corporation from 50,000 to 100,000 shares of common stock and the exchange of the present stock of the corporation and 200,000 class A common stock of the Piggly-Wiggly Stores, Inc. for the new issuance, was recommended by corporation directors yesterday. This plan will be submitted to a stockholders meeting to be held on March 16.

Under the plan common stock holders of the Piggly-Wiggly corporation would receive 2 1/2 shares of the new stock for each share of the present outstanding common stock and the class A stockholders of the Piggly-Wiggly Stores Company would be given an opportunity to exchange their stock, share for share, for the new stock.

The preferred stock of the corporation would remain unchanged. MILWAUKEE — Authorities are searching for a "Mr. O'Grady from Chicago" who is credited with a hold-up record—six in 26 minutes. He secured $440. In each store he announced "I'm O'Grady from Chicago, I'm wanted all over the United States. I want your dough."

Scene Of Santa Fe Wreck Shown At City Drug Store

A window display that is considered one of the most original and unique ever exhibited here has been assembled in the west show window of the City Drug Store, and much favorable comment has been heard, both on the originality and appropriateness of the display.

The display was inspired by the wreck of the Santa Fe passenger train, which went into the ditch at Posey switch at noon Monday. A toy train was used to depict the scene of the smashup, and the cars and locomotives are laid in exact duplication of the wreck scene. Around the area today views of various portions of the accident, with explanatory cards telling of the wreck.

As a background to the scene is the front end of a locomotive drawn especially for the purpose by the Jones-Mead Sign company, on which is the number 1473, which was the number on the wrecked locomotive.

ONE OF THREE CARS STOLEN TUESDAY RECOVERED

The Ford touring car belonging to Ira Robertson, employe in the Santa Fe freight office here, which was stolen from the curb of the business district Tuesday night, was found late Wednesday by a party of rabbit hunters in a desolate portion of the Yellowhouse canyon southeast of this city, it was announced Tuesday at the Sheriff's office. The car had been stripped of every piece of equipment that could be easily removed, including tires, and left to serve out its day in the far-flung reaches of the narrow canyon.

Two more cars also taken from the curb here the same night, have not been found, the announcement said. One of these was a Ford touring car, 1926 model, belonging to Boyd Moore, local man and the other was a 1925 Model Ford Coupe which belonged to Charlie Adams, of the Guarantee Abstract and Title Company.

Officials are of the opinion that a ring had been organized to negotiate the petty thievery, and that the only purpose of the thugs was to obtain the equipment for sale. The other two cars still missing probably will be found in a manner similar to the former, officers said.
