HOUSTON (AP) — A Panamanian tanker burst into flames at the New Park shipyard on the Houston Ship Channel, the U.S. Coast Guard said Friday night.

The call was received about 6 p.m., said Coast Guard Lt. Robert Hennessy.

"We're trying to confirm exactly what kind of explosion or fire this is right now," Hennessy said. "We believe it started in the engine room."

The vessel is the 340-foot Seta, which had unloaded its cargo, Hennessy said.

There were unconfirmed reports of two injuries.

Hennessy said the ship channel was closed at the Loop 610 bridge to Buffalo Bayou as a fire-fighting team was dispatched to battle the flames and look for crew members.

Bus accident

AREQUIPA, Peru (AP) — A bus plunged into a 600-foot-deep gorge near this southern city Friday, killing 48 people and seriously injuring three, police said.

The bus, operated by the Ormeno bus line, was headed to Lima from Arequipa, 545 miles southeast of the capital. The accident occurred between the towns of Tambillo and Vitor, 20 miles west of Arequipa.

A spokesman for Ormeno said the bus was forced off the road by a truck driving in the wrong lane.

High-rollers

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A group of high-rolling baccarat players who bet $200,000 a hand at one of Donald Trump's casinos lost about $10 million after their weeklong binge.

Trump

Trump said Friday that Japanese businessman Akio Kashiwagi had been up by nearly $10 million earlier in the week before the cards turned against him and for the Trump Plaza Hotel & Casino..

"He was up $9.6 million and then we had a good run," Trump said in a telephone interview.

Kashiwagi attracted a gathering of amazed small-time players whenever he came down from his 37th-floor suite to play $100,000 a hand while two companions placed $50,000 bets. Trump said Kashiwagi tried to come back and play Thursday after surrendering early that morning $10 million in the hole.

"We said, 'forget it, that's enough,' " Trump said. "Frankly, you have to be in the mood."

Kashiwagi sat at the baccarat table Thursday with $1 million in chips while his companions had $500,000 apiece. He got up before any of the cards were dealt and did not return.

Judicial ruling reversed

■ A three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans overturns a ruling by U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton III, saying state district judges may be elected in countywide balloting.

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A federal appeals court Friday upheld the countywide election of state district judges as a three-judge panel overturned a Midland federal court ruling.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals panel in New Orleans ruled the at-large election of judges in nine urban counties, including Midland and Ector counties, does not illegally dilute minority votes.

The panel reversed U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton III of Midland, who in November 1989 agreed with minority plaintiffs that the election plan violated the federal Voting Rights Act. Bunton later ordered the state to divide the counties into electoral subdistricts, and to hold non-partisan judicial elections May 5.

Bunton ordered judges in Midland and Ector counties elected from county commissioner precincts.

The federal appeals court allowed primary elections to proceed March 13 while it considered the state's appeal.

The panel heard arguments April 30 in New Orleans and Friday, on a 2-1 vote, it ruled the Voting Rights Act covers judicial elections, but minority votes are not illegally diluted by electing as many as 59 judges at large from one county.

"While elected judges are representatives in that they are accountable to a constituency of electors, the full authority of the trial judge's office is exercised exclusively by one individual and there can be no share of such a single-member office. Consequently the countywide election of district court judges does not violate the Voting Rights Act," Judge Patrick Higginbotham of Dallas wrote in a 39-page decision, joined by Judge Carolyn Dineen King of Houston.

The panel did not role out other changes that could increase minority representation on the bench, however.

Judge Sam P. Johnson of Austin, in a 31-page dissent, said he was "totally at odds with the majority's application of the so-called single officeholder exception."

Johnson said the majority incorrectly based its decision on a New York case involving three candidates elected from three different districts.

Higginbotham had agreed with Johnson in a 1988 opinion that Louisiana appellate courts are covered by the Voting Rights Act.

The panel Friday rejected Texas' arguments that judges are not representatives and that Congress did not mean judicial elections to fall under the Voting Rights Act.

But it also rejected the central argument of attorneys for the League of United Latin American Citizens in Midland and other minority plaintiffs, that

Stock market rises to near-record level

By Chet Currier
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The stock market rose sharply to near-record heights Friday in an exuberant reaction to favorable inflation news and falling interest rates.

Trading volume picked up to its heaviest pace of the year as the market extended a two-week old rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 63.07 points to 2,801.58, its highest close since it hit a peak of 2,810.15 on Jan. 2. Over the past 10 sessions the average has risen 156.53 points, or 5.9 percent.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 7 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,282 up, 339 down and 384 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 234.04 million shares, up from 158.46 million Friday and the largest total since a 240.39 million-share day on Dec. 15.

The government reported Friday morning that the producer price index of finished goods dropped 0.3 percent in April, in contrast to Wall Street's expectations of a 0.1 percent-0.3 percent increase. Separately, the Commerce Department said retail sales fell 0.6 percent last month.

Analysts said the figures provided the markets with a double dose of evidence that the pace of the economy remained slow and inflationary pressures were subdued.

That served to allay whatever fears persisted on Wall Street that the Federal Reserve might move soon to tighten credit. Interest rates fell in the bond and short-term money markets.

Prices of long-term government bonds rose about $17.50 for each $1,000 in face value, reducing their yields to the 8.66 percent-8.73 percent range.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Express rose 1 to 28¾; International Business Machines 1⅝ to 114; Exxon 1¼ to 47⅞; Philip Morris ⅞ to 44¼, and American Telephone & Telegraph 1 to 42¼.

Midland girl rescued from radio tower

Staff Report

Paramedics and police were able to rescue a 14-year-old girl from high on a west Midland radio tower Friday afternoon.

Police and rescue units responded to a call of a "distraught individual" in the 2400 block of Elizabeth St. — in the area of the American Red Cross office, near Dennis the Menace Park — just before noon Friday.

An "agitated juvenile female" had climbed some 30 to 40 feet up the triangular metal radio tower following an altercation, according to Battalion Chief Eddie Klatt. Fire department officials would not release the name of the minor involved in the incident.

Paramedic John Pinkstaff scaled to tower after a friend of the girl on the ground convinced her to drop the paring knife she had carried up the tower and talk to the paramedic.

"We were a little leery of sending anyone up for fear of causing a dangerous confrontation," Klatt said.

Once they got the girl's "permission" for the paramedic to talk to her, Pinkstaff hooked up a safety belt, climbed to where the girl was and hooked his leg around her. Police Officer Manny Beltran assisted in the rescue once the girl was secured to the tower.

A fire department snorkel truck with a basket was raised to lower the three to the ground.

Klatt commended Pinkstaff and Paramedic Jack Williams for their "excellent job" as the first rescue team on the scene.

Police records indicate that the girl was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital, where she was listed in satisfactory condition late Friday.

The teen-ager had "some minor lacerations" and bleeding when she was brought down, but Klatt said it was undetermined if the cuts were self-inflicted, accidental or scrapes from climbing.

Bush predicts trip to Mars by 2019

■ Space exploration is among the topics President George Bush covers in his commencement address at Texas A&I University in Kingsville, Texas — the first of three such appearances this weekend.

By Terence Hunt
AP White House Correspondent

KINGSVILLE (AP) — President Bush, setting a distant deadline in space exploration, said Friday that Americans should walk on Mars by the year 2019.

"It's time to open up the final frontier," Bush said. "There can be no turning back."

Bush, who next Tuesday will begin a budget summit with Congress in an effort to cut the federal deficit, did not cite a cost estimate for a manned Mars landing or say how the government would pay for it. NASA has put a $500 billion price tag on the mission, which would include establishment of a base on the moon.

Asked how the United States could get to Mars, Bush quipped to reporters, "You have to go fairly fast. It's a long way out there."

As for the money, Bush said, "Thirty years is a long time." By 2019, Bush would be 95 years old.

Bush proclaimed the Mars deadline in a speech at Texas A&I University, opening a two-day trip of three commencement addresses.

Later, at a Republican fund-raising event in Columbia, S.C., Bush again called for a cut in the capital gains tax rate, saying, "I'm going to keep on like a broken record until I get that thing done up there."

In his speech at the University of South Carolina on Saturday, Bush will annouce formation of a volunteer "Citizenship Democracy Corps," an administration source said.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the corps would try to help the new democracies of Eastern Europe establish democratic institutions and legal systems.

In Texas Friday, Bush made a brief stop to greet flag-waving youngsters.

On Saturday, Bush will deliver commencement speeches at the University of South Carolina and at Rev. Jerry Falwell's Liberty University in Lynchburg, Va.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Summery weekend expected

Staff Report

The clouds have cleared, leading the way to a summer-like weekend with no mention of precipitation from National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport.

Partly cloudy skies are on tap today as the high reaches the upper 80s with northwesterly winds from 10-20 mph.

Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-50s.

Sunday is forecast as sunny, with the high once again near 90.

Friday's high of 93 was eight degrees short of the record 101 set in 1984. The overnight low was 58. The record low for this date is 41, set in 1931.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms prevailed across North Texas Friday night.

A deepening low pressure system in eastern Colorado helped pull a warm front across the North Texas area Friday afternoon. Showers and thunderstorms formed north of the front. Strong southerly winds poured Gulf moisture into Texas, providing fuel for thunderstorm development.

Skies remained cloudy over most of North and East Texas Friday afternoon while clouds in South Texas began to break up. Dry air pushed into West Texas, bringing mostly sunny conditions to the area. Some small thunderstorms were beginning to develop in the South Plains region.

Windy conditions dominated the state with south winds in the 15 to 25 mph range.

Mid-afternoon temperatures were in the 80s with some 60s and 70s in the east. Extremes at 3 p.m. ranged from 92 degrees at Sandedrson to 66 degrees at Sherman.

The National Weather Service said thunderstorms overnight, some of them possibly severe west and north, would create humid conditions Saturday.

Heavy rain was possible in North Texas. Partly cloudy skies were forecast for Saturday, with a slight chance of showers or thunderstorms in South Texas. Highs were expected to climb into the 80s north and west and 90s south.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms dumped more rain Friday on the already soaked ground of north Texas, southwestern Arkansas and southeastern Oklahoma, where the flooding Trinity and Red rivers have caused millions of dollars in damage.

Flash flood watches were posted through Friday night for parts of northeastern and north central Texas, where showers ranged into Oklahoma and western Arkansas.

Showers and a few thunderstorms also extended from northern Arkansas to western Alabama.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

RULING: Panel says vote not diluted each judge is part of a larger court that should have more minority representatives.

(From 1A)

The panel also said the districts approved by Bunton reduced minority influence rather than increasing it, which it argued was "surely not what Congress intended when it created the Voting Rights Act."

In Harris County, blacks could elect nine of 59 district judges. However, since cases are assigned at random, blacks are likely to appear before one of the other 50 judges. Under the current system, the panel noted, the judge knows that each person who appears before them is a constituent.

"The subdistricting remedy is at best problematic, and is likely perverse," the opinion said.

Johnson also disagreed with that argument. "Accountability is not a compelling enough reason to justify maintaining the current dilutive system." He also noted that litigants from one county often appear before a judge in another county.

Bunton, reached at his Midland office, said, "I'm not happy or unhappy. They can do what they want to. They grade my papers. There's really no other comment I can make until I have seen the papers."

The panel's decision may be appealed to the full 12-member circuit court, and later to the Supreme Court.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, whose office represented the state in the appeal, withheld comment Friday until he sees a copy of the opinion today (Saturday), a spokesman said.

Gov. Bill Clements, a critic of Mattox's handling of the appeal, said in a prepared release the ruling was "clearly good news for our judicial system and for the people of Texas.

"I am delighted that the 5th Circuit acted so expeditiously and did not see fit to disrupt judicial elections in our state," he said. "By its decision today, the panel ruled that Texans will retain the right to elect all trial judges who serve in their local county courthouse."

Secretary of State George Bayoud, the state's chief elections officer, said he was "extremely pleased." He thanked John Hill, the former attorney general and Texas Supreme Court chief justice who intervened on Bayoud's behalf in the appeal.

"I have maintained from the outset that implementation of Judge Bunton's order would not only have been totally disruptive to the Texas judiciary, but also would have been extremely disruptive to the entire Texas election process," Bayoud said.

A legislator who has been working with a task force to develop judicial selection alternatives said he hoped the ruling would bring minority plaintiffs to the negotiating table.

Rep. Henry Cuellar, D-Laredo, hopes to gain a consensus behind his plan, similar to an Illinois plan, that would require judges to run first in partisan subdistricts and later to run for re-election in countywide non-partisan retention elections.

The minority plaintiffs had insisted on a straight single-member district plan, similar to the one Bunton ordered, but Cuellar said, "I think they will be willing to look at the Illinois plan now. The only fear I have is that the other side will say 'Why do anything at all now?' "

New jail to open in two weeks

Staff Report

Construction problems with Midland County's new $3.9 million jail should be ironed out soon, with the facility opening in two weeks, a county commissioner said Friday.

The 101 W. Industrial Ave. jail initially was expected to open May 1, but state inspectors discovered problems with the smoke detector system, Commissioner Louisa Valencia said.

Sheriff's Deputy Richard Sexton said that the smoke detection system has since passed state jail standards inspection.

Another opening date was set for mid-May, but inspectors again found some minor structural problems, Ms. Valencia said.

Sexton explained the "major problems" are electronic — stemming from the door control panels, doors and locks

"It just needs a touch-up here and a touch-up there," she said. "It's not major things. I think one of the problems was that they didn't have enough people out there fixing it."

The 36,830-square-foot jail should be housing county prisoners by June 1, Sexton said.

The facility will house up to 202 inmates, with 96 single-occupancy cells, 96 multi-occupancy cells and 10 separation cells. The building's design will allow for an expansion to accommodate 576 inmates.

Man's body found in Odessa hotel bathroom

Staff Report

ODESSA — Police and Texas Rangers are investigating the death of a man whose body was found in the bathroom of a hotel on East Highway 80 about 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

The man, identified as 26-year-old Ronnie Dean Carlson of Odessa, had been dead "for an extended period of time" when police discovered his body in room 220 of the Lexington Inn, 3031 E. Highway 80.

Carlson was pronouced dead about 1:15 a.m. Friday and his body was sent to the Travis County Medical Examiner for autopsy, reports show. Cause of death is not known, a police spokesman said.

Search continues for Clovis boy

CLOVIS (AP) — The search continued for a 6-year-old Clovis boy who was seen three times by other children several hours after he was reported missing earlier this week.

Police said Friday they have no leads on the whereabouts of Matthew Roberts, who disappeared from his home Tuesday afternoon.

Clovis Police Chief Caleb Chandler said Matthew was by himself each time he was sighted Tuesday, and did not appear troubled or panicked.

The chief said the boy was first seen around 4:45 p.m. Tuesday, about an hour after he was reported missing, on Main Street across from a junior high school several blocks southeast of his home and south of the store where his mother had gone shopping.

He was next seen running in an alley behind a fast-food restaurant, a little farther south, Chandler said. The last sighting was at 6 p.m. Tuesday at a park near a large municipal lake.

"Most leads are still not producing anything," the chief said.

The search has involved up to 8,000 of the city's 35,000 people.

'Old' spaghetti companies settle name dispute

DALLAS (AP) — What's in a name? Almost a half-million dollars if you're the Old Spaghetti Warehouse.

The Garland-based chain of spaghetti restaurants will be dropping the word "old" from its corporate moniker and paying $400,000 to settle litigation brought by an "older" competitor of nearly the same name.

About three years ago, the owner of a Portland, Ore.-based chain called the Old Spaghetti Factory filed two lawsuits against the Texas chain.

The owner alleged that the Old Spaghetti Warehouse had stolen a recipe using mytzithra cheese — a Greek cheese made from goat's milk — and copied the use of trolleys as booths.

This week, Old Spaghetti Warehouse announced it would drop "old" from the signs on its stores and delete any mention of mytzithra cheese from its menu. But the Garland company, which denies taking its competitor's sauce recipe, will continue to be able to use the special cheese.

"We are pleased that the litigation is finally behind us," Robert Hawke, president of the 15-store, $28 million Texas company said. "This removes a cloud over our future and will allow us to proceed with our franchise plans."

Old Spaghetti Warehouse opened its first restaurant in Dallas' West End in 1972 and has since opened 14 other company-owned stores in eight states.

Parents reunited with kidnapped girl

NATION

BOSTON (AP) — The parents of a 5-year-old girl who was allegedly abducted and held for 39 days by an obsessed babysitter said Friday they'll never let anyone get so close to their family again.

Debra and Frank Ravesi, who were reunited with their daughter, Nicole, after she was found in Florida, spoke with reporters at Boston's Logan Airport en route home Friday evening.

They said the girl had yet to talk much about the 39 days she allegedly was held by Kenneth M. Cole II, who authorities described as being "obsessed" the girl. Mrs. Ravesi said Nicole didn't understand that she had been kidnapped.

"She thinks she was on vacation with a friend," Mrs. Ravesi said.

The girl, who had been missing since April 3, was found safe Thursday in the Florida Panhandle fishing village of East Port by FBI agents and a county sheriff. Cole was arrested without incident and was held Friday in Florida on federal kidnapping charges.

Medical examinations showed Nicole hadn't been abused in any way, her mother said.

Cole had Nicole call him "Dad," and had asked her to dress up as a little boy, Mrs. Ravesi alleged. She said Nicole's hair had been trimmed sometime during her disappearance from their home Milford, a town 25 miles southwest of Boston.

"He asked her to do that and she said yes," Mrs. Ravesi said.

The Ravesis had at one time taken out a restraining order against Cole after social workers alerted them that the sometime baby sitter's attachment toward Nicole appeared obsessive. However, the family allowed Cole to see the girl at least twice after the order expired.

Asked what the would do differently if they could turn back time, Ravesi said: "We probably wouldn't let anyone get as close to our family as we did before."

Nicole was reunited late Thursday with her parents. They arrived in Tallahassee, Fla., on a private jet provided by the Fox Network television program "America's Most Wanted." They were taken to a hotel to join their daughter.

"Has Ken been good to you?" Mrs. Ravesi asked the girl at their reunion. Nicole responded with a nod.

"Do you think I'm mad at you?" she asked her daughter.

"No," Nicole said.

"Because I'm not," Mrs. Ravesi said.

Two camera crews from "America's Most Wanted" were the only ones allowed inside the hotel to witness the reunion. The program provided the footage to other media. The show, about unsolved crimes, carried three reports on the case.

A spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's Office in Boston said Friday that Cole could be flown back to Massachusetts over the weekend, with a possible court appearance Monday. He was held at the medium-security Federal Correctional Institution in Tallahassee, said jail spokesman Dan Rouse.

Cole, of Holliston, a community near Milford, could face life imprisonment if convicted on a federal kidnapping charge. Massachusetts authorities have said they intend to file charges in the case, and federal prosecutors said he could file charges in any other state that he and the girl traveled through.

The youngster was reported missing after she was taken from a car where she and a sister waited for her mother to finish her work as a bus driver.

Cole was a former co-worker of Mrs. Ravesi's. He lost his job as a bus driver and began baby-sitting occasionally for the family.

When Nicole was hospitalized last year for a hip infection, Cole visited her frequently. The hospital staff reported him to the Department of Social Services because they saw him kissing her on the lips and showing affection they thought excessive.

Social workers investigated and told the family in February that Cole's attachment to Nicole seemed to be obsessive. The Ravesis obtained a restraining order against Cole to prevent him from seeing or speaking to Nicole.

However, the couple say they allowed Cole to see the child in two parking lot rendezvous after the five-day restraining order expired, because they thought he was harmless.

The girl and her accused abductor apparently had been living in a travel trailer since late last month after spending some time at the Pine Ridge Lodge in Panama City Beach.

Frank and Debra Ravesi leave their hotel in Tallahassee, Fla., Friday morning with their 5-year-old daughter Nicole on their way home to Massachusetts. Nicole was allegedly kidnapped by 24-year-old Kenneth Cole II, who was taken into custody.

Ex-wife's murder nets husband death sentence

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — A man who used the hours of a brief prison furlough to murder his former wife was sentenced Friday to die in the electric chair.

Alan L. Matheney, 39, of Granger, was condemned by Lake Superior Court Judge James E. Letsinger for the March 1989 beating death of Lisa M. Bianco.

Matheney, wearing a dark striped suit and red tie, stood silently as Letsinger read the sentence. Earlier, he had read a statement blaming Ms. Bianco and St. Joseph County Prosecutor Michael P. Barnes for supposedly conspiring to imprison him unjustly.

When granted the prison furlough, Matheney had been serving an eight-year sentence for a 1987 assault on his former wife.

"It was the illegal acts these two people did to me that led to the acts of March 4," Matheney said. Afterwards, Matheney whispered briefly to the prosecutor as he was led from the courtroom.

"He said something to me that will remain between him and me," Barnes said later.

The victim's father, Eugene Bianco of Granger, said he was pleased. "I just hope they carry it out, and I'm there to pull the switch," he said.

In his brief statement, Matheney talked vaguely of unspecified evidence never presented in court, then briefly expressed remorse, saying, "I feel sorry that it took place."

His mother, Martha Matheney, had tears in her eyes as she was led away to spend a final few minutes with her son. Matheney was immediately transferred to the Indiana State Prison at Michigan City to be placed on death row.

The conviction and death sentence will be appealed automatically to the Indiana Supreme Court.

American University president charged for making indecent calls

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — American University President Richard Berendzen was charged Friday with two misdemeanor counts of making indecent telephone calls, Fairfax County police said.

Berendzen was served with a summons by a county police investigator. He was released after agreeing to appear for trial before a judge on June 28, said Fairfax County prosecutor Robert Horan.

Police spokesman Michael Proffitt said an investigation found that obscene calls were made to two women on March 28 and 29. Police had evaluated about a dozen telephone calls, added Horan.

Gerard Treanor, Berendzen's attorney, was not immediately available for comment.

Berendzen, 51, of Washington, resigned as the university's president on April 8, citing "exhaustion." His resignation takes effect at the end of the school year.

In a statement read by his attorney last month, Berendzen said he was embarrassed by unspecified actions he had taken and apologized for any pain he may have caused.

Proffitt said Friday that "the investigation indicates that, with the exception of one additional victim who is no longer in the area, no other violations of criminal law by Berendzen were found to have occurred."

Berendzen was a patient for about a month at Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore. The hospital has a Sexual Disorders Clinic, but the hospital would confirm only that Berendzen was receiving psychiatric care.

Allegations of unspecified "improper behavior" by the 10-year university president first emerged April 23 in a letter to the university community from Board of Trustees Chairman Edward R. Carr. Carr's letter did not specify the nature of the allegations.

Law enforcement sources, who asked not to be identified, have said that the calls were placed to women advertising day-care services and were traced to Berendzen's private office telephone.

Imaginary journey takes kindergarteners to Hawaii

NAZARETH, Texas (AP) — Attention passengers: Fasten your seat belts, be sure your chairs are in an upright position and your crayons are put away. Air Kindergarten will be arriving in Honolulu shortly.

Or as close to Hawaii as a Texas Panhandle classroom can be.

Kindergartners at Nazareth Elementary School will be winging it to the islands on the power of their desk chairs and a little imagination. The first stage of their trip came when a Castro County pilot gave impromptu flying lessons in the pasture behind the school building last week.

"I was thinking on the way over, this airplane's twice as old as these kids are," Max Ellison said after landing his 1981 Cessna Ag Husky. "I love taking the little kids flying."

Actually, Ellison was the only one doing any flying, making several passes over the cheering children before landing. The kids then took turns behind the controls, learning the way the plane is controlled. At the end of the ground school, Ellison handed out certificates authorizing the youngsters to fly to Hawaii.

Ellison, a crop duster, had already shared the cockpit with several of the youngsters who trekked to the plane, having taken them up with their fathers, his customers.

But this time, he was the teacher.

"It has a stick instead of a steering wheel," Jase Merritt said after his turn behind the controls.

"You pull it back and those elevators move, and the wings, too," his friend Quinton Jones added.

The cockpit course and the make-believe Hawaiian excursion are part of the transportation unit taught by Brenda Shippy and Kim Makeever.

"We do lots of hands-on with kindergartners," Makeever said. "That's the only way they remember things. You have to have an imagination in kindergarten."

The teachers take a single mode of transportation and highlight it for a lesson. Airplanes were a natural choice for Shippy, a former airline flight attendant.

Last year, students in her class traveled to Amarillo International Airport and toured an American Airlines passenger jet.

"We went to the airport and got on the escalator — you should've seen them," Shippy said. "That was almost as much fun as getting on that jet. It was then I realized just where we live."

The trip to Hawaii, Shippy said, is designed to incorporate different lessons into the same activity. The children, through good behavior, earn the money to pay for the ticket and have to count it out at the ticket counter.

Mills alumnae act to end student boycott

Hearst News Service

OAKLAND, Calif. – Leaders of the alumnae of Mills College have pledged unanimously to make major increases in financial contributions to the all-women's school if its trustees reverse their decision to admit male undergraduate students.

The Mills College Alumnae Association governing board, after a meeting this week, announced a plan to help alleviate the financial problems which, with shrinking enrollment, led to the trustees' decision.

A blockade of classrooms and administrative offices by students who oppose making Mills co-ed has shut down the 138-year-old Oakland college since Friday, May 4.

The alumnae board offered to raise $10 million in new endowment for Mills, said association Executive Director Linda Kay, and plans to increase the annual alumnae gift to the college from $450,000 to $750,000 within three years.

Additionally, Kay said, the governors pledged to increase participation in contributions from 39 percent of the membership to 45 percent within three years and to 50 percent within five, which she said would be "extremely high" participation as those things go.

The renovation of Mills Hall, which was damaged in the October 1989 earthquake, will be postponed until the plan's monetary goals are met, Kay said.

"The governors have voted unanimously to express their appreciation to the students and alumnae for their conduct in this crisis, and to particularly thank the faculty for its willingness to make sacrifices for the continuation of women's education at Mills College," Kay said.

'The governors have voted unanimously to express their appreciation to the students and alumnae ... and to particularly thank the faculty for its willingness to make sacrifices ...'

— Linda Kay, Executive director

China reports run on Marx's Manifesto

BEIJING (AP) — More than 10,000 Beijing teen-agers are giving up their Saturday afternoons, not really through choice, to learn about the Communist Party in political study groups at high schools and universities.

Official media hail the groups as proof of revived interest in ideology among youngsters.

In fact, many of the students are "volunteered" by their schools or youth organizations. Others sign up because showing the right political attitudes can be a shortcut to a leading university or a good job.

Classes have different names — spare-time Communist Party school, Marxism-Leninism study group, communism study group — but share the goal of teaching students to love the party and fight "bourgeois liberalism."

University libraries reportedly can not meet the demand for such works as Marx's "Communist Manifesto" and "The Selected Words of Mao Tse-tung."

The Communist Youth League in Beijing has started similar classes for high school students. At Beijing's No. 4 Middle School, more than 800 students fill the auditorium each Saturday afternoon for lectures by college professors and officials of the Youth League Committee.

Zhou Shiliang, a professor at the Youth's College of Political Science run by the Communist Youth League, lectured for two hours recently on the meaning and history of communism.

Each week's lectures are taped and shown to nearly 10,000 high school students at other party schools in Beijing.

Four students from each Beijing high school attended on the day Zhou spoke. Most listened attentively, but a few boys in warmup suits tapped their feet impatiently when an enticing spring breeze entered through the open auditorium doors. One girl was seen reading a tattered novel hidden by her notebook.

NATION IN BRIEF

Fans holding vigil for Sammy Davis Jr.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Photographers and fans clustered across from Sammy Davis Jr.'s house Friday, his 20th wedding anniversary, following reports the legendary song-and-dance man was near death from cancer.

Susan Reynolds, a spokeswoman for Davis, did not return repeated telephone calls seeking an update on his health.

Among those visiting the ailing 64-year-old comedian was actress Cicely Tyson. Floral arrangements also were delivered to Davis' home on a quiet, tree-lined street.

It was the 20th anniversary of his third marriage, to Altovise Gore.

Meanwhile, some of Davis' fans established a telegram hotline that was expected to generate up to 10,000 get-well messages over the weekend, the manager of a local Western Union branch said.

Davis' health has deteriorated steadily since the cancer-stricken entertainer left a hospital eight weeks ago to recuperate at home, according to his friends.

Lujan angers activists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservationists reacted with anger Friday to Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan's suggestion that a $200 million telescope should be built despite its potential effect on an endangered squirrel. "Do we have to save every subspecies?" Lujan had asked.

Interviewed Thursday by the Denver Post, the interior secretary noted the controversy surrounding the Arizona project, which could be stopped under the Endangered Species Act.

At issue is the Mount Graham red squirrel. All that are left — about 180 — are in a colony on the mountain where the University of Arizona, the Smithsonian Institution and others want to build a powerful telescope and observatory.

Conservationists have sought to stop construction because the squirrel is on the Endangered Species List. In the interview, Lujan suggested Congress should soften the act and commented:

"Do we have to save every subspecies? The red squirrel is the best example. Nobody's told me the difference between a red squirrel, a black one or a brown one."

Ship fire blamed on leak

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A fuel leak in one of the USS Conyngham's boiler rooms touched off the fatal fire that sent smoke and flames racing through the guided-missile destroyer, the ship's skipper said Friday.

Cmdr. William R. Williams told reporters he feared he might lose his ship and had small boats in the water in case it had to be abandoned.

"But when I saw the determination of the faces of my men, all those thoughts left my mind," he told a pierside news conference at the Norfolk Naval Station.

The fire early Tuesday killed the operations officer, Lt. Cmdr. Algernon Pope Gordon Jr., 34, of Montgomery, Ala., and injured 18 sailors. Nine sailors remained hospitalized, seven in good condition and two satisfactory, the Navy said.

Gordon died after entering his cabin to awaken a cabinmate, Williams said.

Gordon's promotion from lieutenant to lieutenant commander was to have taken effect in a few weeks, but the Navy said Friday it gave him the honor posthumously. The Navy also announced that Gordon has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal for peacetime heroism.

Girl taken from hospital

CHICAGO (AP) — Police Friday sought a 12-year-old girl needing heart surgery and her mother, who authorities said abducted the girl from a hospital because the woman's religion forbids blood transfusions.

The girl, Kimberly Winfield, was believed to have left Children's Memorial Hospital about 1 a.m. Thursday, said police Lt. Edmund Beazley.

The mother, Caroline Winfield, called relatives to say she wanted to return her daughter, said Dave Schneidman, spokesman for the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services. But she was afraid to surrender for fear of being prosecuted.

Police obtained an arrest warrant for the 35-year-old mother on a charge of child abduction because Kimberly is a ward of the state, Beazley said.

"We're not real interested in catching the mother if she doesn't want to be caught, but we do want the child back so we can save the child's life," Schneidman said.

Police and the state Department of Children and Family Services said they were reasonably certain the mother was responsible for the child's disappearance.

The mother is a Jehovah's Witness, Beazley said.

Jehovah's Witnesses refuse blood transfusions as being against the teachings of the Bible.

Arizona senator calls Border Patrol 'stepchild' agency

By Dan Freedman
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Border Patrol, one of the nation's main defenders against foreign drug traffic and illegal aliens, is so badly managed that its cars are falling apart and its agents are having to use substandard weapons, a U.S. senator has charged.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., made the accusations in a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing and later in an interview with the Hearst Newspapers.

In the interview, DeConcini said the 3,800-officer agency suffers from years of mismanagement and has been, in effect, a "stepchild" of the Justice Department.

As a result of his complaint, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh has ordered the Border Patrol's overseer in the department — the Immigration and Naturalization Service — to look into charges that many agents can't go on patrol because their cars are in the shop for repairs.

DeConcini said the autos are subject to harsh driving conditions in rock-strewn fields and on dusty dirt roads in many stretches along the 1,933-mile U.S. border with Mexico. Many cars, he added, have 200,000 or more miles on them.

"The Border Patrol and the INS have never been a priority with the Justice Department and this is proof of it right here," DeConcini said. "It doesn't make any difference whether it's Democrats or Republicans; for some reason INS commissioners don't insist (on more money) or threaten to leave office if they don't get resources."

DeConcini has asked for a meeting with INS Commissioner Gene McNary on the vehicle problem as well as reports of other substandard equipment in the Border Patrol, including bulletproof vests and weapons.

The senator, a former Arizona prosecutor, said he is "very likely" to ask for a General Accounting Office review of Border Patrol's management.

"There's a negative impact in terms of efficiency, morale, safety and being able to be an effective agency," DeConcini said.

Border patrol agents in Texas, most of whom asked not to be identified, said that on any given day up to 40 percent of agency cars are in the shop.

"If we had a newer fleet, we'd have more vehicles readily available to patrol our area," said one agent in McAllen, Texas.

Patrol cars are "used 24 hours a day on some of the roughest roads you can imagine," said another agent. "On any given day you're driving a vehicle that has probably 125,000 to 150,000 miles on it."

In Washington, INS spokesman Duke Austin admitted: "There's no question that our vehicle fleet is aging and that we have some problems with older vehicles."

The fleet has 3,100 vehicles, he said, adding that he did not know how many are in need of immediate replacement, saying "that's exactly what we're looking at now."

In addition to apprehending undocumented aliens crossing into the United States from Mexico, the Border Patrol has recently played a growing role in the war on drugs.

In 1988, Border Patrol agents made 1,300 seizures of cocaine, marijuana and other drugs, valued at $185 million, Austin said. In 1989, the patrol made 5,441 seizures, valued at $1.2 billion.

For this reason, DeConcini said, agents need more sophisticated weapons than the .357 Magnum revolvers that are standard issue.

"If they don't have semi-automatic weapons along the border where (drug traffickers) are coming across with machine guns, that's just crazy," the senator said.

Agents also are issued bullet-proof vests that don't adequately cover vital areas, DeConcini said, adding: "They got them at some bargain basement."

At the Judiciary Committee hearing Tuesday, Thornburgh acknowledged that the Border Patrol had been plagued with "fits and starts" in its mission and management since the mid-1980s.

Patrol personnel grew 38 percent between 1985 and 1988. Alarmed by increasing waves of illegal immigration, Congress pumped $217.8 million into the Border Patrol in its 1988 budget — and increase of 51 percent.

That year, the Border Patrol nabbed 1.7 million illegal immigrants, the highest annual total in the patrol's 66-year history.

But then Congress slashed the overall INS budget because of federal deficit cuts mandated by law and that hampered INS efforts to beef up the Border Patrol.

Hubble Space telescope shakes as sun rises, sets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Each time the sun comes up or goes down on the Hubble Space Telescope, the the $1.5 billion instrument wobbles slightly for reasons engineers still don't fully understand.

"It extends for several minutes, 10 or maybe 30 minutes after we come from the dark to the sunlight," Jean Olivier, a top NASA telescope official said Friday. "It's only in the later two-thirds of the sunlight portion of the orbit that it begins to die down."

The telescope orbits Earth every 97 minutes and goes through the dawn-to-dusk cycle nearly 15 times a day. The stabilization problem,

■ Astronauts reunite/2E which showed up earlier this week, is one of many headaches that have put setup work on the telescope far behind schedule.

Still, astronomers at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland hope they will see the first photograph from the telescope Wednesday or Friday.

Olivier said scientists are all but certain that the telescope's solar arrays are causing the wobble. The two arrays, 40 feet by 8 feet, gather energy from the sun. The energy is converted to electricity to provide power for the telescope.

"What we haven't determined is what is exciting the solar arrays," Olivier said. "We don't know whether it's something on board the vehicle that is moving. ... It could be the thermal changes."

Olivier said the astronauts of shuttle Discovery, who put the telescope into its orbit on April 25, saw a slight twist in one of the arrays — about a 4-inch difference between one side and the other. But, Olivier said, it is not known whether that is causing the problem.

"It's not conclusive what that means, its just an observation the crew made. We're taking it, like everything else, as something to look at," Olivier said.

Missouri sustains high court

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Nancy Cruzan lies comatose in a southwestern Missouri hospital bed. Steven Goodwin, a federal prisoner in Springfield, wants to impregnate his wife by artificial insemination. Heath Wilkins sits on Death Row in Potosi, fighting execution for a murder he committed at age 16.

These three court cases, all from Missouri, have reached the U.S. Supreme Court or are headed that way.

Along with the high court's rulings last July on abortion and in April on school desegregation, they have thrust Missouri into the legal limelight to an extent perhaps unmatched by any other state today.

Doctors say Cruzan, 32, in a coma since a 1983 car accident, could live an additional 30 years with no hope of recovery. Her parents want to remove her feeding tube so she can die as they believe she would want. The Missouri Supreme Court refused to allow it, and now the U.S. Supreme Court is deciding the issue in its first right-to-die case. The decision is expected by July.

Wilkins, 21, also known as inmate number CP47, spends his days with 69 other Missouri death row convicts at the Potosi Correctional Center while he fights to get the courts to overturn his death sentence.

At least one argument no longer is open to him. Last year, the Supreme Court used his case to rule that states could execute killers who commit their crimes at age 16. That's how old Wilkins was when he walked into a Kansas City-area liquor store in 1985 and killed a clerk during a robbery.

IN THE ABORTION CASE, the Supreme Court last July voted 5-4 to restore key provisions of a restrictive Missouri law, allowing it and all other states to ban any public employee from helping perform an abortion and to ban abortions in all public hospitals. The court also ruled that states may require doctors to determine whether a 20-week-old fetus was capable of surviving outside the womb.

The high court recently used a Kansas City case to say federal judges may order local officials to raise property taxes to pay for desegregation of public schools. Judges, however, can't impose tax increases themselves, the justices said.

The judicial pipeline from Missouri to Washington remains wide open.

Goodwin, 32, serving 14 years on drug charges at the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners in Springfield, wants to impregnate his wife by artificial insemination. The federal Bureau of Prisons has refused to allow it.

"All we are asking for is a clean container and a swift messenger," said Goodwin's attorney, Ronald Kuby of New York. Goodwin's appeal is before the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the last stop before the Supreme Court.

Observers suggest Missouri's sudden surge to the legal forefront is a combination of timing, coincidence, the court's growing conservatism and the tendency of the Missouri Legislature to pass laws that invite challenge.

"We have been at the right place at the right time," said Missouri Attorney General William Webster, "and we have a Supreme Court that is interested in hearing the issues. And that combination has permitted Missouri to be aggressive."

HE SAID THE COURT seems more willing to consider cases that have not been fully litigated in the federal circuits around the country. The Cruzan case is an example.

"Twenty years ago, it is very doubtful they would have ever reached out and said, 'We're interested.' From the federal case law, it's a brand new issue," Webster said.

He said the court took the Wilkins case, along with a Kentucky case involving a 17-year-old, after the justices in 1988 overturned the death sentence for a 15-year-old in an Oklahoma case. They said the death penalty is a constitutional punishment for murderers who committed their crimes at age 16 but not for killers younger than that.

"I think it was an attempt to draw the line," Webster said.

As for abortion, Webster, who personally argued the case before the justices, said the court chose Missouri over three other cases.

"I think there was little doubt the new court was interested in revisiting the issue of abortion," he said. "Arguably ours was the narrowest of the four. The court took this as a tentative step rather than a full-tilt reversal" of its 1973 decision legalizing abortion.

'Dogs face day of reckoning

■ The Midland High baseball team must beat Lubbock Monterey twice today to remain alive in the state Class 5A playoffs.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

LUBBOCK – When the cry "play ball" is heard here this afternoon at Lowrey Field, the moment of reckoning will be on hand for Midland High's baseball team.

After falling 7-5 in the first game of a best-of-three bi-district series against Lubbock Monterey Tuesday at Zachery Field, the Bulldogs find themselves in the precarious position of having to win back-to-back games in order to advance in the state Class 5A playoffs.

MHS, 18-9 overall, must win the first game, which begins at 2 p.m., in order to stay alive and force a second and deciding contest to be played immediately afterward.

And that by no means is a small task, considering MHS is facing the fourth-ranked Plainsmen (24-3) in their home town.

However, the 'Dogs are buoyed by a list of facts that offer emotional — if not physical — support.

First, MHS has beaten Monterey in three of the five meetings between the two teams this season — the only Monterey losses in 1990. Secondly, in four previous meetings the Bulldogs have yet to fall to the Plainsmen in postseason play. Finally, the task is not unprecedented, according to MHS coach Tim Whalen.

"We have gone up there before and beaten them two games in one day, so there's no reason to believe that we won't be able to do it this time," he said.

What the 'Dogs will surely face in one of the games, probably the second if necessary, is the looming specter of junior left-handed pitcher Junior Garza. After allowing MHS four runs in the fourth inning Tuesday, Garza proceeded to retired 12 consecutive MHS batters while the Monterey offense mounted a four-run seventh to come from behind for Garza's 13th win of the season.

Garza is not unbeatable, though, as MHS proved in the Tournament of Champions in early March, when the 'Dogs earned a 4-3 win to hand him is only loss of the season.

MHS also has enough starting pitching to take two games. Gabriel Salazar (10-5) and James Madrid (8-4), both seniors, have taken decisions over the Plainsmen in non-district play.

A testament to Monterey coach Bobby Moegle's assessment that his troops have trouble with Madrid are the 7-2 and 8-0 pastings he has this year over the Plainsmen. Salazar will attempt to make amends for his three hit batters in Monterey's seventh inning that allowed the Tuesday comeback.

"I don't know yet which one I will start in the first game. It just depends on how Gabe's arm feels before the game," Whalen said.

If Moegle does not change his mind, Jeff Chase will start the first game. Chase owns a 7-1 record, but lost the first game of a doubleheader against MHS March 6, as Madrid took a the 7-2 victory.

Whoever throws for Monterey, Whalen said the Bulldogs will need more production from the top of the order than what they got Tuesday.

In the 7-5 loss, MHS' top four batters went a combined 1-for-13 against Garza. Conversely, the last five hitters scored all five runs on five hits.

NOTES: In four at-bats Tuesday Monterey slugger Greg Cushman was walked twice, slapped a single to left field and was hit by a Salazar pitch ... counting courtesy runners and pinch hitters, Monterey used 16 players Tuesday to MHS's 11 ... No Bulldog batter earned more than one hit Tuesday ... The winners of today's MHS-Monterey and Abilene Cooper-Lubbock Coronado series will face the winners of the El Paso Burges-El Paso Socorro and El Paso Andress-El Paso del Valle series in the area round.

Steer star beats fellow 4-4A runner

By Terry Williamson

AUSTIN - For Big Spring's Chris Minter, the Class 4A portion of the state track meet here at Memorial Stadium Friday night was little more than just a backyard neighborhood scrap.

Minter won the state 4A title in the 800-meter run with a 1:55.2 and all he had to do was beat District 2-4A foe Bryan Gayoso of San Angelo Lakeview.

"Yeah, we've run against each other a few times. I guess you could say it was a bit like a district meet," said Minter. "I think I've beaten him every time we've run against each other."

It was a typical race between the two. Gayoso fell behind as usual and made a sprint to catchup. However, Gayoso almost didn't catch up to second place. He finished in a dead heat with Jonathon Robertson of Dallas Smith, both with 1:56.4. Gayoso was ruled second.

Big Spring also got a strong performances from Rye Bavin in the 110 hurdles, placing third with a 14.4, finishing behind Justin McLemore of Waxahachie (13.5) and Brian Romero of Gregory-Portland (14.4).

Bavin got another taste the Texas-bound McLemore in the 300 hurdles. McLemore was just off the division record with a 36.4. Bavin didn't fare as well as in the intermediates, placing fifth overall.

McLemore was the first day star of the state's run for glory. He also won the high jump with a leap of 7-0. And now on to the football field for the Longhorns.

While McLemore won three events, Albert Hall's 14-point performance led Bay City to the Class 4A boys' team title.

Hall placed second in the long jump and was third in the triple jump for the Black Cats.

Del Valle won the girls' title with 48 points over Corsicana with 39 points.

The majority of the state track meet is today with Classes 2A and 3A beginning at noon. Classes 5A and A start at 5:45 p.m.

Andrews' Christia Rogers had a mixed day of feelings. She placed third in the 4A triple jump with a 39-1, but then fell in the 300 hurdles.

In the hurdle event, Rogers fell when she hit the top of the fourth hurdle coming out of the turn. She got up and finished, but was last. She was in fourth place at the time of the fall.

Chap women seek No. 6

■ The Midland College women's tennis team looks for its sixth national championship at the national junior college tournament beginning Monday.

Staff Report

Seeking its sixth national title, the Midland College women's tennis team begins play Monday at the NJCAA National Tournament in Tucson, Arizona. Although they are ranked first among all community college teams, the Chaparrals are expecting a tough battle from such traditional rivals as Tyler, Cooke, and Georgia's Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College.

"We've been ranked first by the Volvo/ITCA all year, but funny things can happen at national tournaments," MC head coach Joe Williams said. "You get a bad draw, or play one bad match, and you can be fighting for third or fourth instead of the championship.

But the Chaparrals have been quite successful in the women's tournament. They began their first year of intercollegiate competition in 1975 by winning the inaugural NJCAA title and repeating again in 1976. Three more titles came through the years, the latest in 1988. Tyler won the 1989 championship with MC slipping to third. Midland College has qualified for the NJCAA tournament every year and has never finished lower than fifth.

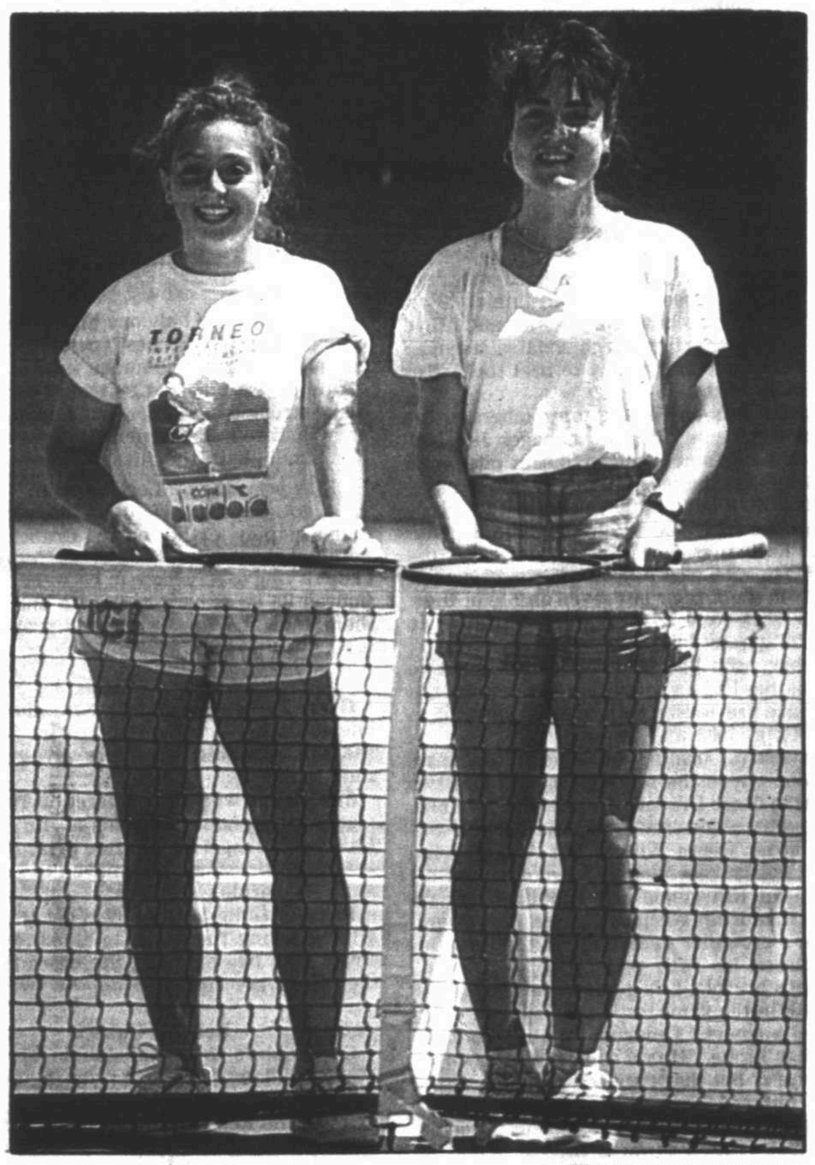
"Conditions in Tucson last year were really hot, but our team is physically strong and heat doesn't bother us much," Williams said.

The Chaparral women have ripped through an undefeated season winning 12-0 in dual matches and team tournaments. Five of their victories came at the expense of NCAA Division I squads, plus one Division II team.

Midland knocked off Cooke 5-4 last fall in their only head-to-head meeting and whipped Tyler 5-1 in an abbreviated meeting at the MC team tourney last month. At the Region V tournament two weeks ago in Roswell, Midland gained 13 points to 9 for runner-up Cooke.

Sharla Barone, a sophomore from Des Plaines, Illinois, battled her way into the No. 1 singles spot this spring.

Freshman Janneke Garos, a talented player from Holland, was injured during the National Collegiate Indoor tournament at Minneapolis in January. She previously had been dominating play, but lost almost two months due to a nagging knee injury.



Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Midland College tennis players Maria Vago, left, and Mara Lencina relax during a recent break in practice for the national tournament.

Maria Vago, a freshman from Argentina who joined the team in January, holds down second.

Freshman Alison Bradford, of Salt Lake City, is playing at No. 3, and Garos is playing No. 4.

Mara Lencina, a sophomore from Colombia, is at five and freshman Missy O'Neill from Colts Neck, NJ, has taken the sixth spot.

Barone and Garos are playing No. 1 doubles while Bradford and Vago are at No. 2.

Lencina and sophomore Maria Jimenez are playing the third doubles position.

The Volvo/ITCA rankings have Barone and Garos ranked first in the nation, while the Bradford-Vago duo is ranked third.

Barone has a 22-2 record in singles. Her losses were to a University of Minnesota player, Jenny Moe, at the University of Nebraska Invitational in September, and to Garos in the finals of the Rolex Small College Regional tournament in October.

Ameel stumbles in state semifinals

■ Midland High's Elizabeth Ameel lost in the state Class 5A semifinals after an overpowering win in her quarterfinal match.

Prep Tennis

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

AUSTIN - Midland High senior Elizabeth Ameel suffered from a split personality at the Penick-Allison courts Friday, winning her first match in the Class 5A girls tennis singles, but falling in the semifinals.

Ameel literally overpowered Mary Beth Laing of Richardson Lake Highlands, 6-2, 6-4 in her first match, making few mistakes, serving crisp volleys and always in total control.

But the afternoon semifinals against Austin High's Shannon Cain was just the opposite. Cain is a confident, no-mistake type player, but not a flashy shot maker. It almost seemed that Ameel was battling herself more than Cain with double faults (5), unforced errors (12) and blew a good lead in the second set.

What it amounted to was a 6-2 6-6 (7-4) loss to Cain, who just managed to keep the ball in play, an objective of Ameel.

"I just wanted to keep the ball in play, keep it deep and let the other one make the mistakes," said Ameel of her first round victory over Laing.

"You just can't stay tight and expect to win here," said MHS assistant tennis coach Cindy Hazen. "You just have to go out and do it."

It was a bad omen when Ameel lost the first set. She had only lost previously twice this year and those were the only times she has lost the first set this year.

But Cain still had to struggle to the victory. She won the first set rather easily with a 6-2 start. But Ameel rallied for a 3-1 start in the second set.

"I was up 6-2 after the first (set), and (Ameel) just started playing better. She won a long point on me to take a 3-1 lead in the second and that really tired me. I was just hoping she was getting as tired as I was.

"I came back for the 6-5 lead, but she broke my serve and I really didn't want to go into a tiebreaker. I knew for sure I didn't want to play her in a third set," said Cain.

In the tiebreaker, Cain took a 2-0 lead, but Ameel rallied for three straight points and a 3-2 lead, but Cain, leading 5-4, won the match with back-to-back points.

Ameel was playing with an injured right thigh she hurt in practice last Friday.

"The injury didn't really bother me," said Ameel, but Hazen said, "This is the first day it hasn't bothered her. She has been favoring it, but she didn't today."

This is the second year in a row that MHS has been represented in the state tennis tournament. Last year, Harper Essex and Luke Morrow won the boys title.

Valles signs letter with ACU gridders

Staff Report

A pair of District 4-5A athletes have signed letters of intent for athletic scholarships at West Texas universities.

Former Midland Lee wide receiver John Valles has inked a letter with Abilene Christian University, while former Odessa Permian 800-meter runner Darin Chase has signed with Texas Tech.

The 5-11, 165-pound Valles was the leading receiver for Coach Earl Miller's Rebels in 1989. Valles caught 13 passes for 334 yards and one touchdown in the Rebels' run-oriented offense.

"We're very happy for John," Miller said. "He is one of those athletes that's a tremendous over-achiever. He's a great hard worker."

Locally, Valles is perhaps best known for his 49-yard TD catch that set up a touchdown in the Rebs' 1988 win over Odessa Permian. He also competed in track at Lee.

Chase was third in the 800 at the recent Region I meet in Lubbock with a time of 1:57.17.

"We are very fortunate to have Darin join our program," Tech track coach Corky Oglesby said. "We've been looking to bolster our middle-distance corps and Darin should fit in nicely. He's exactly what we were looking for in an 800-meter man."

AMEEL: MHS star headed for JUCO action at Tyler

From 1B

Ameel, who is expected to sign with Tyler Junior College next week, has had a varied athletic background. She played Little League baseball with boys. She earned a starting position in basketball as a sophomore before quitting to concentrate on tennis. And she ended up in the state tournament.

District 4-5A failed to get anyone into today's finals, despite having three chances.

Odessa Permian's girls doubles team of Kathy and Mary Burian lost to Kimmel and Rhodes of Tyler Lee in the semifinals, 7-5, 3-6, 9-7. Abilene Cooper's girls doubles unit of Sherri Gilreath and Tracy Broyles also lost in the semifinals with a 7-6, 6-2 loss to Klein's Simmons and Chester.

Stanton's David Mendez did get into the finals of the 2A boys singles with a 6-4, 6-3 win over Eastland's John Vermillion and a 6-3, 6-3 win over Mason's Cody Martin.

Mendez has an interesting task ahead of him today since he meets defending state champion Wes Sheffy of Wall. Sheffy won the title at Irion County last year - as a freshman.

Big Spring's Rocky Tubb won his first round 4A match, 6-3, 6-0, against Athens' Corky Nix, but then fell to Holt Vaughan of San Antonio Alamo Heights, 6-3, 6-1.

Andrews 4A girls doubles team of Rogers and Hines lost in the first round to West Colombia's Shannon and White.

TENNIS NOTE: Former Midland High state tennis qualifier Jeff Bramlett is now coaching at Alamo Heights. He has four players in the state tournament.

Drabek helps Bucs slam Astros

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Doug Drabek has always been a quality pitcher in September. Now, he's a pretty good one in April and May, too.

Drabek, off to a 6-1 start, pitched a shutout until allowing three runs in the ninth and Barry Bonds had two hits, scored twice and drove in a run as the Pittsburgh Pirates survived Houston's final-inning rally to beat the Astros 4-3 Friday night.

"I think he's one of the top pitchers in the league right now," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "He's not a big strikeout pitcher so he doesn't get the recognition the power pitchers like Mike Scott. But you have to include him in the real good pitchers in the league."

The East Division-leading Pirates (20-9), the first National League team to win 20 games, have won six of their last seven and 12 of their last 15. They were 12-17 and were in last place after 29 games last year.

Drabek, who had 29 victories the last two seasons, has had a winning early-season record only once previously. He was 2-4 in 1986, 1-5 in 1987, 4-2 in 1988 and 1-5 last year.

The Astros, trailing 4-0, loaded the bases with one out in the ninth on a walk and two singles to chase Drabek, who allowed five hits.

Bob Patterson relieved and struck out pinch-hitter Glenn Wilson, but Alex Trevino got a two-run pinch single. Caminiti then delivered an RBI single and Bill Landrum relieved. Landrum got pinch-hitter Ken Oberkfell on a grounder to second for the final out and earned his fifth save.

"That's his role, he's going to be their No. 1 guy late in the game, especially against right-hnaded pitchers," Landrum said of Oberkfell, a former Pirate. "He's a contact hitter with a good eye ... but that's my role, too, to get the tough hitters."

Landrum never figured to get in the game as Drabek cruised through the first eight innings, extending his scoreless streak against Houston to 24 innings dating to 1988. Drabek didn't allow Houston to score in 15 innings last year.

"I thought Doug had a CG (complete game)," Landrum said. "He looked like he was in a total groove."

"We didn't give up, that's for sure," Astros manager Art Howe said. "We've just got to start sooner. (Drabek) pitched ahead in the count all night."

Drabek allowed only one hit in the first five innings, Franklin Stubbs' line-drive single off the pitcher's right shoulder in the second.

Drabek was checked by team trainers after being struck by the liner, but remained in the game and retired the next 10 before walking Ken Caminiti in the fifth.

"That was scary," Leyland said.

"It got me solid, right on the shoulder, I didn't get any leather on it," Drabek said. "It definitely hurt. (The shoulder) stiffened up but I kept trying to stay loose in between innings. I figured I'd go as hard as I could and them let them know if I was having any problem with it."

NL Roundup

Padres 5, Expos 3

Garry Templeton hit a two-run homer with one out in the eighth inning to give San Diego the win, snapping the Expos' five-game winning streak.

Templeton, who also homered in Thursday's victory at St. Louis, hit a home run off Drew Hall (2-4) to snap a 3-3 tie after Benito Santiago led off with a single and moved to second on Mike Pagliarulo's sacrifice.

Reliever Craig Lefferts (2-1) got the victory after entering the game to strike out Spike Owen with two outs and the bases loaded in the top of the eighth.

Reds 7, Cubs 5

Chris Sabo's three-run double off reliever Mitch Williams with two outs in the eighth inning rallied Cincinnati past the Chicago Cubs as the Reds overcame three first-inning homers.

Williams — the Cubs' self-proclaimed "Wild Thing" — gave the lead away with his wildness. Williams (0-3) came in with Paul O'Neill on first by way of a single and one out. He gave up a single to pinch-hitter Ken Griffey, then walked Jeff Reed after getting ahead two strikes to load the bases.

After Luis Quinones popped out, Sabo lined a double to the left-center gap to clear the bases.

Norm Charlton (2-0) got the victory by retiring one batter, and Rob Dibble pitched the ninth for his fifth save.

The Cubs took a 5-0 lead in the first inning when Scott Scudder gave up homers to Ryne Sandberg, Andre Dawson and Shawon Dunston.

Mets 9, Dodgers 4

Dwight Gooden struck out 15 in seven innings, hit a bases-loaded triple and drove in four runs, leading New York over Los Angeles and extending the Dodgers' losing streak to five games.

Gooden's strikeouts were the most in the National League this season and his best since fanning a career-high 16 on Aug. 20, 1985, against San Francisco. He gave up three runs, all in the third inning, and nine hits.

Gooden (2-3) improved his lifetime record against Los Angeles to 10-1 and beat the Dodgers for the seventh straight time. He struck out the side three times and, with a chance at Roger Clemens' major-league record of 20 strikeouts, was pulled after throwing 127 pitches.

Mike Morgan (4-2) took the loss.

Phillies 10, Giants 6

Len Dykstra and Von Hayes drove in three runs each to pace a 16-hit attack in Philadelphia's victory over San Francisco.

Dykstra's two-run single capped a four-run third inning off John Burkett (2-1) as he went 3-for-4 with three RBIs to raise his average to .400, tying Cincinnati's Mariano Duncan for the National League batting lead. Dykstra has 19 hits in his last 32 at-bats and has hit in eight straight games.

Pitcher Ken Howell (3-3) drove in two runs for the Phillies with a double and a single but left in the sixth after giving up a three-run homer to Mark Bailey and his third walk of the inning.

Cardinals 5, Braves 2

Denny Walling doubled home a run and Ozzie Smith hit a two-run single in a four-run first inning as St. Louis beat Atlanta.

Bryn Smith (4-3) allowed five hits in eight innings and Lee Smith retired the side in the ninth for his first save since being traded to St. Louis last week by Boston. The victory improved Bryn Smith's lifetime record to 13-3 against the Braves.

Smoltz, whose record is 2-9 since last year's All-Star game, allowed five hits in six innings and fell to 1-4.

CHAPS: Women feature nation's top doubles team

From 1B

Barone and Garos are playing No. 1 doubles while Bradford and Vago are at No. 2.

Lencina and sophomore Maria Jimenez are playing the third doubles position.

The Volvo/ITCA rankings have Barone and Garos ranked first in the nation, while the Bradford-Vago duo is ranked third.

Barone has a 22-2 record in singles. Her losses were to a University of Minnesota player, Jenny Moe, at the University of Nebraska Invitational in September, and to Garos in the finals of the Rolex Small College Regional tournament in October.

Barone and Garos are 21-5 in doubles, with losses to Arkansas, a professional team, Bradford-Vago, UCLA, and a three-set battle they lost against Cooke at the regional finals. The two won the Small College Indoor title and became the first junior college players to win a match in the Rolex ITCA National Indoor tourney.

Vago has a 14-1 record in singles, with her only loss to Garos.

Bradford is 22-7 in singles.

Garos has a record of 29-6, Lencina is 15-8, and O'Neill is 17-5.

Bradford and Vago have a nifty 16-1 record in doubles, losing only in the quarterfinals of a professional satellite tournament in Midland.

Lencina and Jimenez are 6-5 in doubles. With Jimenez suffering from tendonitis in her wrist, there's a chance that O'Neill may be her replacement in doubles.

Kiwi golfers win own tournament

Molitor ignites Brewer victory

Associated Press

With "The Ignitor" healthy again, baseball's most efficient quick-strike machine should be even more dangerous.

Paul Molitor had four hits — including a game-opening home run — scored twice and drove in two runs as the Milwaukee Brewers returned to their we'll-score-first ways and beat the Minnesota Twins 6-3 on Friday night.

"It just takes so much pressure off the pitching staff," Molitor said. "They feel like a run or two is not going to beat them. Our trend of scoring first has been a big plus."

Even with Molitor on the disabled list with a broken right thumb, the Brewers scored first in their first 14 games. They did it in their next seven, too, and took the American League East lead with a 14-7 record. Opponents scored first in the next four as Milwaukee went 2-2.

But Molitor wasted no time putting the Brewers ahead against the Twins, hitting Allan Anderson's 0-2 fastball over the fence in left-center for his third homer of the season. It was the 26th career leadoff home run for the St. Paul native and former University of Minnesota star.

"I wanted to go inside and off the plate but it went over the plate," said Anderson (1-4), who saw his earned-run average swell to 5.06.

Anderson, who won 33 games the last two years and led the AL in ERA in 1988, said it was "the strongest I've felt all year.

"But when you have your catcher set up inside and the pitch goes outside, or vice versa, something's wrong," he said. "Maybe I was too strong."

Strong is a good word to describe Milwaukee's Bill Wegman (1-0). He just found out at noon that he was going to start in place of Ted Higuera, who recently returned from Mexico after attending his mother's funeral.

Athletics 5, Orioles 0

Bob Welch pitched a five-hitter for his second shutout in three starts and Mark McGwire hit two solo homers as the surging Athletics won their fifth straight game.

Welch (4-2) lowered his ERA to 1.41, best in the American League. He struck out eight, a season high for an Oakland starter, and walked two.

Oakland pitchers have allowed only three earned runs in the five-game winning streak, and five of their last 10 wins have been shutouts. The A's, who swept three games in Baltimore two weeks ago, have won eight straight over the Orioles and 10 of their last 11 overall.

Indians 4, Rangers 4

Cleveland scored twice in the top of the sixth inning, costing Texas' Nolan Ryan his 294th career victory, before rain forced the game's suspension.

The game will resume Saturday at 5:35 p.m. CDT with the Rangers coming to bat in the top of the sixth inning, and will be followed by the regularly scheduled game.

Rain began falling at the start of the sixth inning, with Ryan and the Rangers leading 4-2. Ryan retired the first two hitters he faced, giving him 15 consecutive outs, before Mitch Webster's second triple of the game.

Ryan left with a muscle spasm in his lower back and Cleveland quickly tied the score against Mike Jeffcoat on pinch-hitter Chris James' RBI single and Candy Maldonado's run-scoring double.

Jeffcoat walked Brook Jacoby intentionally to load the bases but reliever Jeff Russell got Keith Hernandez on a fly to center to end the inning. The umpires quickly stopped play and the game was suspended after a 54-minute wait.

Blue Jays 4, Tigers 2

Manny Lee hit a two-run home run and Junior Felix added a solo shot to lead Toronto to a victory over Detroit.

Lee's two-out home run in the second inning scored John Olerud, who started the inning with a single off Brian DuBois.

White Sox 6, Royals 4

Ivan Calderon doubled in the go-ahead run in a five-run eighth inning as Chicago rocked Kansas City relief ace Mark Davis.

Davis entered the game after Robin Ventura hit a two-out homer off Steve Farr and Ozzie Guillen followed with a single. But pinch-hitter Ron Kittle greeted Davis by hitting a 2-2 pitch over the left-field fence to tie the score.

Freda Robinson cheers for her son David.

Spur star depends heavily on parents

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Larry Brown isn't David Robinson's only coach in San Antonio.

The Spurs' rookie star has two others. And they're both named Robinson.

Freda and Ambrose Robinson, David's parents, attend every Spurs home game, critique their son's play and help guide the 24-year-old's booming NBA career.

"He needs to improve on just about every aspect of his game, and having a lot of outside things to distract him is unnecessary," Mrs. Robinson said, then smiled, "Sometimes I get accused of being bossy."

During the Spurs' Western Conference playoff game Thursday against the Portland Trail Blazers, Mrs. Robinson said she likes for David to play tough.

"I like to see him be aggressive because he is an aggressive type player, and it shows," she said.

That night, in the Spurs' 121-98 victory in Game 3 of the series with Portland, Robinson scored 28 points, blocked eight shots, and had eight rebounds.

Ambrose Robinson, who, like his son, played basketball for Navy, keeps a videotape library of all the televised San Antonio games, which David likes to watch to prepare for particular teams or referees.

His father also studies the tapes and tries to help his son sharpen his skills. But Ambrose Robinson is quick to add that he's just offering a fan's viewpoint. He recalled once this season when he noticed something wasn't quite right with one of his son's on-court moves.

"He wasn't executing the pick and roll, and I said, 'This is what I saw. This is the fan's perspective. The coach will tell you what I'm talking about,' " said Ambrose Robinson, now retired from the Navy.

The Robinsons moved to San Antonio last September and quickly found that helping their All-Star son is a full-time job. They arrange David's hectic schedule of personal appearances, oversee many of his investments and track the financial work others do for him.

The 7-1 center, who sat out of pro basketball two years while finishing a Navy stint, has a $26 million multi-year contract with the Spurs, not to mention lucrative endorsement deals.

After winning a mountain of awards this season including NBA Rookie of the Year, Robinson joked that he chunks all his plaques and trophies in a big pile at his house.

"He told a partial truth with that," said Ambrose Robinson, who said his son brings an award to his parents' house, shows it to them, then sets it in a corner.

Robinson hopes to dominate

NBA Playoffs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers have discovered the downside of the NBA playoffs without 7-foot center Kevin Duckworth.

David Robinson, the San Antonio Spurs' 7-1 center, dominated underneath in Thursday night's 121-98 victory that trimmed Portland's lead to 2-1 in the best-of-7 Western Conference semifinal series.

Robinson, the Rookie of the Year and the Pivotal Player of the Year, had 28 points, eight blocked shots and eight rebounds. He also had six dunks in his big show before a sellout crowd of 15,910 in HemisFair Arena.

The Spurs outrebounded the Trail Blazers 51-35 and got 23 second-chance points.

Duckworth, who broke a bone in his right hand in the final game of the first-round sweep over Dallas, wasn't missed as the Blazers won the first two games at Portland.

But now with an injury to second-string center Wayne Cooper, the Blazers are worried. Cooper played only nine minutes Thursday night because of back spasms.

"It's hard to play without two of your centers," said Portland coach Rick Adelman, who said Cooper would be back for Game 4 Saturday if his back spasms disappear.

Cooper didn't participate in Friday's light workout.

"Our concern is how to keep him ready because when he comes out of a game he stiffens up," Adelman said.

"I think Coop will probably play Saturday, but we'll give him different minutes and spot him in there. The Spurs and Robinson were very active inside."

Mark Bryant and Cliff Robinson couldn't stop David Robinson Thursday night. David Robinson scored a total of 40 points in the two previous games, but answered a challenge from Coach Larry Brown to get more physical.

"The coach asked me why I couldn't elevate my game in the playoffs like Charles Barkley and Michael Jordan do," David Robinson said. "You know how it is with modern coaches. They watch a lot of TV.

"I do know I hadn't responded like I was capable of responding. So, I answered the challenge."

Brown said it was David Robinson's best game of the year.

"He was as good as he's been," Brown said. "He challenged everything and ran more on the break."

David Robinson said San Antonio played like it had during the regular season.

"Those were the real Spurs out there," he said. "We were getting the loose balls and rebounds.

"Now that we know we can beat Portland, hopefully we'll be able to turn this series around."

Only four NBA teams have come back from 2-0 deficits to win a best-of-7 series — the 1969 Boston Celtics, the 1969 Los Angeles Lakers, the 1971 Washington Bullets and the 1977 Trail Blazers, who went on to win the NBA title.

San Antonio guard Rod Strickland said the Spurs were humiliated by what happened to them at Portland.

"We learned from what happened in Portland," said Strickland, who had a career-high 17 assists and 13 points.

The Blazers defeated San Antonio 122-112 and 107-94 at home.

Spurs reserve Frank Brickowski, who contributed 14 points, said, "They embarrassed us twice. Once was tough, but twice got us going. We woke up."

Portland's Clyde Drexler said the Blazers are not about to panic despite their loss in Game 3.

"This doesn't worry us, we're still up 2-1," Drexler said. "We'll find a way to win on Saturday."

Jordan stars, 76ers win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The fourth quarter belonged to Michael Jordan. The game, however, belonged to Charles Barkley and the Philadelphia 76ers.

Barkley had 34 points, 20 rebounds and eight assists and the 76ers withstood a furious Jordan-led rally to beat Chicago 118-112 Friday night and cut the Bulls' lead to 2-1 in their Eastern Conference semifinal series.

The Bulls trailed by 27 points in the first half, 20 after three quarters and 16 with 6:11 left in the game. But Jordan, who scored 24 of his 49 points in the final period, sparked a rally that brought the Bulls to within three points with 54 seconds remaining.

But that's as close as they got.

Jordan's basket with seven seconds left made it 116-112. But Hersey Hawkins, who finished with 27 points, made a pair of free throws with five seconds left to clinch it for Philadelphia.

"We didn't play well in the second half," Barkley said. "But we won the game and that's what counts."

Jordan said the Bulls finally got going when they got aggressive.

"I had to go all out and just try to do something to get everyone into the flow," he said. "But the defense really initiated everything, getting loose balls and taking them out of sync. Everybody fed off everyone else. We didn't back down."

But the Bulls couldn't catch the 76ers after falling way behind in the first half. Philadelphia dominated the boards in the first half 24-11, with Barkley alone matching the Bulls' total of 11.

"I posted up more and got some offensive boards," Barkley said.

The 76ers, who lost the first two games at Chicago, will try to even the best-of-7 series Sunday at the Spectrum.

"We'll have to come out more aggressive and take charge," Jordan said.

Barkley was 10-of-18 from the field and made 14 of 21 free throws. Jordan hit 19 of 34 field-goal attempts, including 4 of 11 from 3-point range.

Chicago's Scottie Pippen puts up a shot against Philadelphia's Charles Barkley.

Ron Anderson scored 17 points and Johnny Dawkins 16 for Philadelphia, with Mike Gminski and Rick Mahorn getting 10 each.

Scottie Pippen scored 20 points for Chicago.

Playing before a vocal sellout crowd of 18,168, the 76ers raced to a 33-14 lead after one quarter, increased the margin to 57-30 with 2:28 left in the second period, and remained safely in front, 63-41, at halftime.

Chicago pulled to 77-60 in the third quarter when Jordan hit a technical foul, but Philadelphia responded with an 8-2 run and took an 87-67 lead into the final period.

Anderson made two baskets and a pair of free throws in a 25-second span to give the 76ers a 93-69 lead before the Bulls started coming back.

Knicks, Pistons tussle

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — The New York Knicks and Detroit Pistons both will have history going for them when their NBA series continues Saturday at Madison Square Garden.

The Pistons, seeking to become only the third franchise in league history to repeat as champions, haven't lost a game to the Knicks this season, sweeping them 4-0 during the regular season and leading 2-0 in their best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinal playoff series.

The Pistons also are bidding to tie the NBA record of 13 consecutive playoff victories, held by the Los Angeles Lakers (1988-89).

But the Knicks have shown they can overcome adversity. In the opening round, they fell behind the Boston Celtics 2-0, before rallying to win the next three games — becoming only the third NBA team to overcome such a deficit and win a five-game series.

"In New York, they're going to be sky high, like they were against Boston," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said.

The Pistons overwhelmed the tired Knicks 112-77 in Tuesday night's opening game. The Knicks were much more competitive Thursday night in Game 2. They led twice in the fourth quarter, before James Edwards made a three-point play and Isiah Thomas hit three of his five 3-point field goals as the Pistons won 104-97.

"It's not going to be easy, but we're not going to look at it like that," New York coach Stu Jackson said. "Let's hope that for Isiah, the rim's tilted in Madison Square Garden."

That might be the only way to stop Thomas.

Navratilova trounced sixth-seeded Conchita Martinez of Spain 6-2, 6-0, Seles beat No. 5 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-0, 6-2 and Kelesi beat No. 13 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden 6-4, 6-3.

On Saturday, Sabatini will play Navratilova and Seles will face Kelesi.

Capriati lost to Sabatini for the second time since turning pro in March. The Argentine won 6-4, 7-5 in the final of the Virginia Slims of Florida, Capriati's first pro event.

Sabatini, the two-time defending champion in this tournament, kept Capriati on the run throughout the match with heavy, high-bounding topspin groundstrokes.

The match was marked by long baseline rallies. Sabatini usually forced the pace, moving Capriati from side to side and waited for her to make an error.

"She was awesome," Capriati said. "She did everything right."

The match, played in a light but steady drizzle, was interrupted for 35 minutes at 1-1 in the first set when a power outage knocked out the lights in the Foro Italico center court stadium.

"These interruptions can always happen," Sabatini said. "You have to be mentally tough. I had very good concentration. I never thought I was going to lose. I just fought for every point."

Jennifer Capriati strokes a backhand Friday.

The match drew a near-capacity crowd of 8,000, evenly divided between supporters of the popular Argentine and the American eighth-grader of Italian parentage. Shouts of "Vai Jenny" alternated with cries of "Vai Gaby."

After the players returned from the power outage, Sabatini came out strong. She broke serve for a 2-1 lead and won four of the next five games for the set.

Capriati was bothered by Sabatini's topspin, often forced to backpedal behind the baseline to lunge at shots bouncing above her shoulder.

"She kept me pinned to the baseline," the American said. "I really didn't have many chances to attack."

Capriati looked stronger in the second set, losing just one point in three service games to lead 3-2. But Sabatini won the next three games, dropping only point, for 5-3.

After Capriati held at love, the Argentine served for the match. She squandered one match point, sailing a backhand long. Capriati then won the next two points to even the set at 5-5.

"I thought I might have a chance in a third set," Capriati said. "I thought that maybe she wouldn't be able to keep it up."

Capriati had two chances to go up 6-5 but failed to convert and Sabatini hit a forehand pass for the break. The Argentine then served out the match at love as Capriati made four unforced errors.

"I didn't believe it was going to go to three sets," Sabatini said. "That was the key tonight. I never thought I was going to lose."

Navratilova, the oldest player in the tournament at 33, played her best tennis of the week after struggling through two three-set matches against relatively unknown opponents.

From 3-2 in the first set, Navratilova ran off nine straight games to win the match in only 45 minutes. The smooth-stroking Martinez had no answer for Navratilova's aggressive, all-court game.

Arkansas dominates all-conference team

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Conference champion Arkansas placed seven players, including Player of the Year Phillip Stidham, on the 1990 Associated Press All-SWC baseball team announced Friday.

Razorbacks' head coach Norm DeBriyn, whose team is 45-10, including 16-5 in league play, was named Coach of the Year.

Canadian wins New York stage

NEW YORK (AP) — Ed Kaczmarczyk of Canada outsprinted Michel Lafis of Sweden by four second to win the 11th stage on Friday, while race leader Vladislav Bobrik rode conservatively in Central Park during the Tour de Trump bicycle race.

Kaczmarczyk, who broke away with four other riders after about 1½ miles of the 49.7-mile New York City Circuit Race, was timed in 1 hour, 43 minutes, 41 seconds for eight laps of the course. Lafis finished second, 2:04 behind.

Mike McCarthy of New York, who was raised and still lives one block from the race site, recovered from a flat tire with less than than 10 miles remaining to finish third in 1:43:53. McCarthy, a time-trial specialist, caught the lead pack with an impressive three-mile solo effort after losing an estimated 22 seconds while his tire was being changed.

Kaczmarczyk and Lafis left the leading group of five less than two miles from the finish, and weren't seriously challenged the rest of the way.

Mears tabbed to win pole

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rick Mears, the cool "Rocket Man" who has won more Indianapolis 500 poles and set more speed records at Indy than any driver, is a nervous favorite heading into the first of four days of qualifications for the May 27 race.

"If I have to pick something that gets my attention, or gets my heart started, or gives me butterflies ... or that is most nerve-wracking, qualifying at Indianapolis is that," Mears said.

"I may not look it, because I get sleepy when I get nervous, and I look like I'm calm, cool and collected, but inside it's working on me pretty well."

Last year, Mears, 38, of Bakersfield, Calif., won a record fifth Indy pole by setting one- and four-lap records of 224.254 mph and 223.885, respectively.

If the weather cooperates, Mears is expected to lead another record assault Saturday, when the pole, worth about $170,000, is scheduled to be decided.

Going into Friday's practice, Mears had the fastest lap of the week at 224.389, but all the teams were hampered by high winds.

There was a 90 percent chance of rain that could push the opening of time trials back to Sunday. Such a delay would only add to the nervous situation.

Indianapolis 500

At Indianapolis, qualifying is particularly difficult.

"Most places, you only have to hold your breath for two laps in qualifying," Mears said with a smile. "At Indy, it's four laps and that's a long time not to breathe.

"The race is easy compared to qualifying," the three-time Indy winner said. "I always approach Indianapolis as just another race and that's what I've always tried to do. If you start psyching yourself up and letting all the hoopla and pressures get to you, you can make mistakes.

"But qualifying, that's another story. Qualifying itself is a race ... If we can win the first race, in qualifying, it's a tremendous deal for the team and the sponsors, like Pennzoil. They can utilize that for a couple of weeks before the race.

"So there is a lot of emphasis on qualifying here, and it makes it very important. That's where the pressure comes in."

Couples retains lead at Memorial tourney

PGA

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Gale-force winds subsided somewhat and scores improved, but Fred Couples remained the only man under par Friday at the halfway point of the Memorial tournament.

"There was some wind and it seemed to be gusty — blow a little, stop, blow a little — and it was a little warmer, a lot more playable," said Couples, whose bogey-bogey finish on Friday dropped him to a 74 and a one-shot lead over Don Pooley.

"A 74 is nothing to be ashamed of," Couples said. "It's nice to be able to shoot 74 and still be leading."

Couples, who won at Los Angeles earlier this year, finished two rounds over Jack Nicklaus' Muirfield Village Golf Club course in 143, one under par. He said that one under might be good enough to win the tournament if weather continues to be the factor it was the first two days.

Owens overcomes blustery day to lead

Seniors

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Charles Owens overcame blustery conditions Friday to shoot a 5-under-par 67 and take the first-round lead in the Southwestern Bell Classic.

Owens held a three-stroke lead over Terry Dill and put himself in a position to become the first player to win a Senior PGA tournament and the Classics portion of the event. The Classics is for players 60 and older and winds up after two rounds.

Don January led a group of five players at 71. Mike Hill, the second-leading money winner this year, was at even par along with two others. Arnold Palmer finished at 5-over 77 after playing the front side in even par. Defending champion Bobby Nichols shot 78.

On the comeback trail, Mochrie seizes early lead

LPGA

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — Dottie Mochrie continued her comeback from a shoulder injury with a 5-under-par 67 that gave her a two-shot lead after Friday's opening round of the LPGA Crestar Classic.

"I've spent a good deal of time in rehab, so I'm thrilled with today," said Mochrie, who returned to the tour last week after being sidelined since early April.

Mochrie got all five of her birdies on the back nine of Greenbrier Country Club's 6,275-yard layout. Following her bogey-free round, Mochrie's closest pursuers were Rosie Jones, Kathy Guadagnino and Dee Dee Lasker.

Jones was the only one golfer to shoot 70 or better who didn't play in the afternoon, when the winds had calmed after gusting to 25 mph earlier in the day.

Guadagnino, who is seven months pregnant, is leaving the tour after this week to have her baby.

"I get tired after a while out there.

Customers scan purchases on automatic lanes

Some supermarkets already experimenting with new concept

AP Laserphoto

Scott Sloan demonstrates the CheckRobot grocery checkout system Wednesday at the Supermarket Industry Convention at McCormick Place in Chicago. The device lets customers scan their groceries and weigh produce before going to a central cashier. If the customer tries to slip one past the computer, the conveyor will reverse and a recorded message will announce the error.

CHICAGO (AP) — Check it out. The latest at the supermarket will let customers become do-it-yourselfers at the checkout lane. Not only for bagging.

They will be able to run packaged products over a scanner and weigh their own produce before going to a central cashier.

But don't try to slip an extra can of peas or bunch of bananas past the computer. A security system in the CheckRobot Inc. lanes reverses the conveyer if any unscanned, unweighed or switched product is placed on it.

And a gentle electronic voice says "please set the last item aside and continue scanning."

The lanes were on display Wednesday on the final day of the Washington, D.C.-based Food Marketing Institute's Supermarket Industry Convention at McCormick Place.

And Scott M. Sloan, vice president of marketing for CheckRobot, said the benefits of the system, and a new cooperative marketing agreement with IBM, should make it popular.

"It's rare that you'll find a piece of equipment in the food industry that will address the retailer's greatest concern — and that's the labor shortage — as well as address the single greatest concern that their shoppers have — and that's speed of checkout," Sloan said.

The systems, on the market for about a year, are already installed in 11 supermarkets, including locations in Ontario, Canada, New Jersey, Virginia, Florida and Wisconsin. Other installations are planned soon.

'It's rare that you'll find a piece of equipment in the food industry that will address the retailer's greatest concern — and that's the labor shortage — as well as address the single greatest concern that their shoppers have — and that's speed of checkout.'

— Scott M. Sloan, CheckRobot vice president

Sloan said the lanes are easy to operate.

"You can go to a number of our sites and you can see ... children ... scanning groceries while their mother's at the other end bagging," he said.

Stores can still provide baggers, and can decide how many cash registers they want to use, but to get the financial benefit from the machines, it's recommended that each cashier handle at least three lines, Sloan said.

A computer screen and two rows of buttons face the shopper bringing groceries to the line. Prices of scanned products appear on the screen, while anything that needs to be weighed is put on the scanner surface, which is also a scale.

Buttons have pictures of different kinds of produce, such as grapes. Put the grapes on the scale and hit the button, and the price is recorded.

For more detailed lists, a button might say "Fruit Screen," and a checkerboard of several varieties appear on the screen. A touch of the right one registers the weight and price.

All of this is done with or without a computer voice stating the prices — at the customer's discretion — and with recorded video of a woman to give some messages — including "Help is on the way" for those who touch the "Help" square on the screen.

A receipt at the end of the line is taken to the cashier for payment.

While saving labor costs is a selling point of the machines, Sloan said the devices really will fill a void created by a shortage of 16- to 24-year-old workers.

Al Zack, spokesman for the Washington, D.C.-based United Food and Commercial Workers union, which represents retail food employees, said there's only a shortage because stores want too many part-timers.

He also predicted customer dissatisfaction with self-checkout, and slow lines due to baffled shoppers.

"I don't think many customers consider it convenience to do the work for the store," he said.

But Richard Honerkamp, chief financial officer of Deerfield Beach, Fla.-based CheckRobot, said most customers have liked the system, and checkout would be faster — especially in non-peak hours when stores often shut down most lanes.

At each site, conventional lanes also operate.

That's the way it must be, at least for now, said Kim Contos, director of special projects for Pay Less Super Markets Inc., which operates nine stores in Anderson and Lafayette, Ind.

The chain's flagship store in Anderson is getting five automatic lanes installed.

"We wouldn't convert a store entirely," Contos said. "I don't think any of us are ready for that in the immediate future."

Adjusted census battle may be in courts for years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political power and billions of dollars are at stake in a battle over which final census numbers will be better: the raw or the cooked.

It's an argument that's been obscured by the early problems plaguing the census count.

But a year from now, the question of "adjusting" the results of the census could be the center of a crucial and bitter debate among the states and cities, in Congress and in the courts.

"They can't beat us out, so they want to count us out," John D. Rogers, a Republican floor leader in the Kentucky Senate, charged in a letter to the Commerce Department.

Democrats and other advocates for minorities see the refusal to adjust as a method of disenfranchising their voters.

New York City Mayor David Dinkins charged that the undercount of minorities will cost cities hundreds of millions of dollars and many seats in Congress.

"They have gotten away with statistical malfeasance for 200 years and figure they can get away with it for another 10," Dinkins said.

"A decision against adjustment is a decision against a more accurate census," Javier P. Guajardo, an assistant attorney general in Texas, wrote the Commerce Department.

"A decision against a more accurate census is a decision against fair representation of the American public, in particular those who need to be counted most — minorities, the poor and the homeless."

The sides already are staking out their positions in terms of language, with opponents referring to adjustment as "fiddling" with the numbers, while those in favor prefer the term "correcting" the count.

Rep. Thomas C. Sawyer, D-Ohio, who heads the House subcommittee that supervises the census, seems to be leaning toward the idea of adjustment.

When the billions are spent and the counting is all done, will we know how many Americans there are, he was asked.

"I hope so, when we add in the known error," Sawyer said. "The question is, will we take that into account."

The time, he said, may have come when the nation is just too large for current methods of counting.

"We may be seeing the point where we need to consider more modern statistical methods to bring the basic numbers closer to the truth."

Why adjust the census?

Because it isn't perfect.

The bureau has never claimed it could count everyone.

In 1980, a bureau analysis estimated that 1.4 percent of the population was missed. But the error wasn't uniform.

Most white, middle-class folks got counted, while the poor and minorities were more likely to be missed. Young black men were undercounted by as much as 6 percent, officials have estimated.

A decade ago the decision on adjustment was left to the Census Bureau: Statisticians there decided they weren't confident enough in their methods to make changes in the final numbers.

By 1987, many census workers thought an adjustment could — and should — be made in 1990.

The Commerce Department stepped in and, in late 1987, ruled that no adjustment would be made in 1990. The ruling cited statistical questions and contended that adjustment would erode confidence in the census.

Barbara Bailar, who headed the census office studying adjustment, resigned.

Some politicians and officials charged the decision was political, because the minorities who are undercounted are more likely to be Democrats.

A group of local governments led by New York City filed suit.

That suit was settled with a promise by the Commerce Department to reconsider, but was later reinstated.

The Commerce Department has set a group of criteria that will be used to make a decision by July 15, 1991 — several months after the numbers have to be delivered to state and local governments for reapportionment.

Those criteria, opponents argued in reinstating their lawsuit, are so stringent that they virtually prohibit adjustment.

If a decision is eventually made to adjust, it will not be until mid-1991.

Because the first census reports will come out Dec. 31, that means there would be two sets of numbers — providing easily identifiable winners and losers.

The fact that there is a limited amount of money and only 435 seats in the House of Representatives means that every gain by one state requires a loss by another.

While the 1990 census will likely mean movement of a dozen or so House seats from one state to another, the difference between raw and adjusted numbers should affect only two to four seats, Sawyer said.

It will also mean a difference of billions of dollars in federal and state money distributed over the next 10 years based on population numbers.

Harassment reports affect college choices

By Isabel Wilkerson
N.Y. Times News Service

Recent cases of racial harassment on the nation's campuses and a general atmosphere of racial tension have become increasingly important factors in the decisions made by many black families about where to send their children to college, according to high school counselors and black students and their families.

The perception of racial hostility is inducing more families to send their children to historically black colleges to avoid the issue altogether, while others are scrutinizing predominantly white schools more carefully to weed out those that appear less racially tolerant.

"Our schools are getting more and more applications from students who are disgruntled," said Alan Kirschner, vice president for programs and public policy at the United Negro College Fund.

"These students want the chance to develop without the threat of harassment that looms over many of those campuses."

Kharis McLaughlin, a Boston guidance counselor who works with black college-bound students, remembers the apprehension a group of black students felt when she recently took them to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, where a racial melee occurred after the 1986 World Series.

"SOME STUDENTS were a bit fearful," Mrs. McLaughlin said.

"Whether it's right or wrong, these things will sway people if they perceive a danger. If you hear that someone had a horrible experience at a school, you're not likely to go. That's how decisions are made."

But the choices seem to be getting narrower for blacks looking for predominantly white schools not touched by racial turmoil.

In the last five years, incidents of racial harassment or violence have been reported at more than 300 colleges and universities across the country, according to the National Institute Against Prejudice and Violence, an independent non-profit policy research group based in Baltimore that tracks racial violence on college campuses.

All types of campuses are involved, a including the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, The Citadel, Smith College, Brown University, Wesleyan University, the University of Michigan, the University of Wisconsin and the University of Florida.

THE INCIDENTS range from racist graffiti and hate notes to the formation of white supremacy groups and allegations of racially motivated brutality by campus police.

And at hundreds of other campuses where there may be no reports of overt acts of bigotry, black students describe a general sense of polarization and hostility.

Last week, more than 1,000 students, most of them black, halted traffic with a sit-in on Broad Street in the middle of Temple University's Philadelphia campus, after members of a white fraternity, armed with baseball bats and sticks, chased three blacks they believed had broken windows of their fraternity house.

Eleven students were injured in the melee, eight of them black, and students said the campus police had used excessive force and handcuffed only black students.

At Emory University in Atlanta last March, a black woman found racist epithets scrawled in her dormitory room and her stuffed animals ripped apart.

THE CASE IS being investigated by the police and the Georgia Bureau of Investigation.

Recently at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., billiard balls were thrown through a window at a black cultural center, setting off a protest march by black students the next day.

Because of such incidents, racial harassment has become a standard question facing college representatives trying to recruit black students to predominantly white campuses, and with each racial incident comes a battery of calls from concerned black parents of current or prospective students, college officials say.

The officials are less inclined to say whether black applications to their schools have risen or decreased, and without access to such data at all campuses where incidents have occurred, it is impossible to quantify cause and effect.

Despite the recent incidents, a big majority of the nation's 1 million black college students — about 80 percent — remain enrolled at the nation's predominantly white colleges, as against about 20 percent at historically black colleges, said Dr. Reginald Wilson, a senior scholar at the American Council on Education.

"THERE'S NO question in my mind that black kids are leaving white schools or not going to them in the first place because of the chilly climate," he said.

"But it's not the parting of the Red Sea. There is not a flood of people leaving white schools."

Actor Omar Sharif makes a move during a world bridge tournament in Atlantic City's Showboat Casino and Hotel this week. A master bridge player, Sharif was playing a consolation round after losing on Tuesday. A total of $400,000 in prize money will be bestowed upon the tournament winners.

Prudish TV producers, where are they now?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was 1987, and there was the soft-spoken and fatherly Dr. Donald Westphall of "St. Elsewhere" baring his bottom in a showdown with the fictional hospital's new owner.

But that really was actor Ed Flander's bottom and it really was naked. And it really was broadcast to millions of television sets during prime time.

This season, "L.A. Law" broke ground by breaking wind. A young man suffering from Tourette's syndrome uttered racial slurs on the witness stand. The insufferable Douglas Brackman was the recipient of a sexual favor delivered by a female bailiff crouched under his desk.

During a recent impromptu lovemaking session on "thirtysomething," Michael promised an undiaphragmed Hope that he would, er, stop early. In the same series, two gay men were shown in bed together.

All of this on network television? In prime time?

You bet. And there's more.

It used to be that you couldn't say the "p" word on television. As in pregnant, as in when Lucy was carrying little Ricky and everyone referred to her as being "in the family way."

But now, as networks struggle to compete against independent stations, cable networks and home video rentals, shows on the Big Three in the 10 p.m. time slot break taboos with each broadcast. Fox Broadcasting pushes the envelope earlier on Sundays with the raunchy sitcoms "The Simpsons" and "Married ... With Children."

So if you're sitting on the couch, flipping through the dial, you will see cursing, sex, societal no-nos, plenty of double entendres and even some nudity.

But although the networks have lightened up and audiences have become more sophisticated, there still are taboos.

Yet, the producers of two of television's more adventurous shows say it is an arbitrary and weird bargaining system that decides what makes it onto television and what doesn't.

"It's like arms negotiations," said William Finkelstein, supervising producer of NBC's "L.A. Law."

"I think it's all money," Finkelstein said. "I don't think morality enters into it at all. If they thought the market would do well, they'd put nudity on TV."

Austria keeping hammer and sickle as coat of arms

By George Jahn

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Communist symbols are vanishing from Eastern Europe, but Austria is keeping its hammer and sickle, which had nothing to do with communism in the first place.

Because neighboring nations in what used to be called the Soviet bloc have been stripping wheat sheaves, red stars and other Communist symbols from their coats of arms, the question also arose in Austria.

In 1919, Austrian legislators met in Vienna to create a republic from the ruins of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. They adopted a coat of arms in which the Austrian eagle expressed commitment to the common man by holding a hammer, for workers, and a sickle, for farmers, in its claws.

In 1945, Parliament voted to add broken shackles dangling from the eagle's legs, symbolize release from Nazi domination.

The debate about what to do now has been spirited, both in Parliament and outside.

Popular sentiment appears to be against removing the implements from the eagle's claws. Of 24 letters from readers printed by the mass-circulation tabloid Kurier in March, only five were in favor.

Josef Riegler, one of the five, said: "Even during my first visits abroad after World War II ... I was often asked whether the Soviet occupiers had forced us to include the hammer and sickle in our state emblem. I heard similar questions later from visitors to Vienna."

Some of those opposed to change expressed anger at what they considered an attempt by politicans to magnify a small issue.

Others, like Brigitte Michalko, were defiant. "Those who considered us Communists up to now because of our coat of arms can continue to do so as far as I care," she wrote.

The broken chains added in 1945 added to the existing confusion. Some saw them as an echo of the Communist Manifesto, which exhorts the proletariat to rise because "you have nothing to lose but your chains."

In February, the right-leaning Freedom Party began efforts in Parliament to discard, at least, the hammer and sickle.

They are "symbols for contempt of humanity, death camps and suppression," the party's resolution declared. If they remained on the national emblem, it said, Austria would be the only non-communist country in Europe "whose state symbol symbolizes communism."

Although the measure received wide publicity, it initially was considered more symbolic than serious. The Freedom Party has only 18 members in the 183-seat chamber and few people thought the motion would receive the necessary two-thirds vote.

The issue gained extra weight when a group of legislators from the Austrian People's Party, partner with the Socialists in the governing coalition, presented a similar motion.

Sides were taken. The People's Party split on the issue and the Socialists opposed any change.

Felix Ermacora, a sponsor of the People's Party motion, said in an interview that changing the emblem "could avoid misunderstandings abroad."

"There is the occasional misconception when people look at our coat of arms on our passports, for instance, and see the hammer and sickle," he said.

People's Party spokesman Anton Wressnig said the action by Ermacora's group was independent. Changing the emblem is "not an official concern" of the party, he said in a telephone interview, and described the issue as "relatively unimportant."

Heinz Fischer, a senior Socialist Party official, said: "If we didn't change it in 1956 and 1968, there is no no need to do it now."

Soviet invasions crushed an anti-Stalinist uprising in Hungary in 1956 and a reform movement in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Mandela's wife is in limelight

N.Y. Times News Service

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A murder trial in a courtroom here is focusing unsolicited new attention on Winnie Mandela, the apartheid foe and wife of the African National Congress leader, Nelson Mandela.

Mrs. Mandela has not been charged as an accessory to the crimes or listed as a witness, and she appears unlikely to testify although she has been accused by witnesses at the trial of initiating the beating and torture of a 14-year-old boy at her home before he was found dead a week later with his throat cut.

Mrs. Mandela has previously said she was not home the night that the beatings allegedly occurred.

Jerry Vusimuzi Richardson, the former coach of the Mandela United Football Club, a soccer team that served as Mrs. Mandela's bodyguards, is standing trial for the killing of James (Stompie) Mokhetsi Seipei, a 14-year old youth who became a militant street fighter against the white authorities, then died in January 1989.

Seipei's three companions have come forward to testify in the Rand Supreme Court that they were taken to Mrs. Mandela's house by her bodyguards and beaten to make them falsely accuse a Methodist minister of sexual abuse.

On Wednesday, as the trial entered its sixth day, Gabriel Pelo Mekgwe, who is 21, joined Kenneth Kgase, 30, and Barend Thabiso Mono, 20, in testifying that Mrs. Mandela was the first to beat them.

All three young men have charged that she hit them with a stiff whip, called a sjambok, and her fists. Kgase and Mono testified earlier that she told them that "you are not fit to be alive."

Mekgwe said Seipei suffered the severest beatings. The 14-year-old boy's head, eyes and body were badly swollen from the beatings, Mekgwe said. Testimony in the trial has said he was finally taken away by Richardson and his decomposing body was found later in a field near the black township of Soweto.

Kgase said Nelson Mandela, who was still in prison, dispatched his lawyer, Ismail Ayob, to try to get two of the boys out of his wife's home. The bid was unsuccessful as was an appeal from Oliver Tambo, the African National Congress leader in Lusaka, Zambia. The young men were finally released after a township crisis committee interceded.

According to one account of the affair, President F.W. de Klerk, in talking with Mandela before his release on Feb. 11, promised that the authorities would not humiliate him by bringing charges against his wife.

Richardson, who is 41, has pleaded not guilty to 11 charges against him, which include murder, kidnapping, assault and the attempted murder of another man, Lerotodi Andrew Ikageng.

The murder trial opened last week while domestic and international attention focused on the opening of talks in Cape Town between the African National Congress and the government. Nelson Mandela headed the Congress delegation.

The incident began on Dec, 29. 1988, when the four boys were abducted from the home of a Methodist minister in Soweto who had taken them in and driven to Mrs. Mandela's home in Soweto.

The boys were ordered to say that the Methodist minister, with whom the bodyguards had quarreled, sexually abused them. The Methodist Church later announced that it investigated the allegations and found no truth to them.

The motives for the abductions are still not clear. But Mrs. Mandela's bodyguards had strained relations with the local community, where some residents viewed them as high-handed bullies.

In February 1989, leaders of the anti-apartheid movement told supporters to distance themselves from Mrs. Mandela in protest against what it described as the "reign of terror" by her bodyguards, who have since disbanded.

Megkwe said Seipei was put in a bathtub filled with cold water and a plastic bag was pulled over his head while the beatings continued.

Kgase said others joined in beating the boys until Richardson stopped the assault.

By then, Mono testified that he was bleeding through his nostrils and mouth. But, he indicated, Seipei was worse off.

Seipei was last seen with Richardson on Jan. 1, according to court testimony. He is believed to have died later that day or the next.

17:5-19

A mother's love begins before she feels the first faint flutter of life. It grows as she awaits this new individual who is developing as a unique person with his or her own distinct qualities.

A mother's love continues through endless diaper changes and sleepless nights, through report cards and puppy love. She rejoices in each triumph and grieves with each tragedy... always there... nurturing and loving.

God is like that... always there... watching over us as we learn and grow... or stumble and fall. He has created each of us as a unique individual. Yet, we share one common need... God's strong and loving care which can guide us along the paths we encounter as we travel through our lives.

Reach out to God with faith as we pray for His guidance and as we thank Him for mothers everywhere.

Moon's church in union with Kirov Ballet

Odd 'marriage' will produce lavish ballet academy in American capital this fall

By Shann Nix
N.Y. Times News Service

The Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church has staged a major cultural coup by engineering a partnership with the prestigious Kirov Ballet company to create a lavish ballet academy in Washington, D.C.

It is the first time the Kirov has entered into such an agreement with an American organization. The partnership between the ballet and the church, whose members are sometimes referred to as Moonies, is raising eyebrows in the ballet community.

The faculty of the new Universal Ballet Academy, which will include members of the Kirov, Leningrad, Moscow and Perm Ballet institutes in the Soviet Union, is currently touring the United States to recruit students ages 8 through 20. The academy is to open September 5.

The director of the academy is Oleg Vinogradov, director of the Kirov Ballet. Vinogradov, who is not a member of the Unification Church, reportedly will divide his time between the two positions.

Yelena Vinogradova, wife of Oleg Vinogradov and assistant artistic director of the new academy, speaking through a translator, confirmed that Vinogradov has signed a directing contract with the academy.

"When we saw the marvelous facilities of this school, and the wonderful working conditions, we couldn't imagine a better situation for what we wanted to accomplish," she said.

Vinogradova said she was aware of the academy's connection with the Unification Church but added: "I am not so knowledgeable about this church. I am a ballet professional. I came here to do a particular job. The fact that the finances for this project come from the Unification Church does not faze us in the least."

The announcement is making waves. W. McNeil Lowry, president of the San Francisco Ballet, said he was surprised to hear of Vinogradov's connection with the new academy.

"It's not for me to say what the artistic director of an important ballet company may do in propriety. It's between Vinogradov and his conscience — between him and the Moonies. I'm just glad the San Francisco Ballet is not in that position."

Although Jeffrey Benson, director of operations for the Universal Ballet Academy and a member of the Unification Church, has authority over the academy, he said: "This is not a project of the Unification Church. The funds do not come from congregational contributions."

The academy is financed by the Universal Ballet Foundation, a not-for-profit organization that receives money from U.S. corporations affiliated with the Unification Church. The foundation is seeking tax-exempt status.

The new academy's auditioning tour began in Boston on May 6.

The auditions come soon after Moon made a little-publicized trip to Moscow in mid-April, during which he met privately with President Mikhail Gorbachev and 500 delegates from 60 countries. The occasion of the meeting was the 11th World Media Conference, sponsored by Moon's organization.

Moon, known for his right-wing views, has been quoted in the past by followers as calling communism "Satan's strongest weapon." He remarked at the meeting last month that perestroika had made it possible to hold the conference.

The minister's daughter-in-law, Julia Moon, now the principal ballerina of the Moon-founded Universal Ballet Company in Seoul, made her debut with the Kirov Ballet last December. Moon called Julia's debut "an important moment" in his personal quest to improve relations with the Soviet Union.

Members of the Unification Church believe that the South Korean minister is the second messiah.

Moon has said that when he was 16, Jesus appeared to him and told him he had been chosen by God to complete Jesus' mission, which had been interrupted by the crucifixion. This mission, spelled out in Moon's lectures and in his text, "The Divine Principle," consists of creating an "automatic theocracy to rule the world."

Ford Greene, a former member of the Unification Church and a Marin County lawyer who has been involved in litigation in state and federal courts with the church, calls the development of the Universal Ballet Academy a "brilliant scheme" that will "appropriate global legitimacy, credibility and influence for the Moonies as well as develop a conduit for recruiting minors into the church without their parents' knowledge or consent."

Benson said that he "categorically denies" any allegations that the ballet academy is intended to act as a front group or recruiting agent for the church.

"There is no intent to create any conversions here. Our purpose is not to proselytize. The academy is a contribution to the cultural well-being of Washington, D.C., and the world in general.

"The Unification Church has a natural interest in the arts, not unlike the Mormons' interest in their choir."

The academy's dormitory in Washington, D.C., a renovated Catholic seminary with room for 60 residents, will offer students rooms with private baths.

Midland congregation stresses role of Adventist relief agency

Staff Report

Midland Seventh-day Adventists are emphasizing the work of their Adventist Development and Relief Agency this weekend.

"ADRA annually responds to countless disasters and operates projects to help the poor in more than 60 developing countries worldwide," says a release from the local church. The agency is underwritten in part by the local congregation.

Last year alone, ADRA provided assistance after northern California's earthquake and Hurricane Hugo's devastation in both the Caribbean and South Carolina. Food, clothing, tents, medicines and other emergency supplies were distributed to victims of Hugo, and in California, ADRA cooperated with the local Adventist community service groups to distribute aid to people affected by the earthquake.

ADRA is involved in other relief projects as well. In El Salvador, a country torn by civil war, ADRA provides shelter for refugees and operates a clinic to help those injured in the crossfire.

"In Mozambique, a country hungry because of drought and civil conflict, ADRA provides food for 35,000 each month," the release says.

Relief, however, is only part of ADRA's work.

"Most of ADRA's work is focused on long-term projects, benefiting families in poor communities," the release says. "ADRA does this through a variety of projects including working on behalf of mothers and children, developing clean water resources, training people to develop skills to be self-reliant, improving agricultural techniques and building and supplying clinics, hospitals and schools."

Among those projects are more than 700 gardens in Arequipa, Peru, a city at the base of the Andes Mountains where seeds and cultivating know-how are shared, the release says. And in Thailand, ADRA has drilled more than 400 wells in dry deserts since 1987.

"Through the activities, ADRA is able to help thousands of people who struggle each day for survival," the release says.

For more information on ADRA call the church.

Nine Midlanders among those as UMW assembly

Nine United Methodists from Midland were among the 10,000 United Methodist women who attended the 1990 Assembly of the women's mission organization held in Kansas City this month.

Those attending were Karen Watkins, Alice Freidline and Verna May Abel, St. Luke's United Methodist Church; Cleo Obercamp and Dorothy Smith, First United Methodist Church; Cardelia Adams and Margie Titus, Hollowell United Methodist Church; Joan Cunningham, St. Paul United Methodist Church; and Pauline Gwyn, Asbury United Methodist Church.

The Assembly featured internationally known speakers, musical events, exhibits, workshops, Bible study and worship events. Concerns for the environment and for chuldren were major themes of the four-day event. Speakers included Marian Wright Edelman, Washington, D.C., civil rights activist and advocate for children; Lois Gibbs, evironmentalist who became internationally known after successfully organizing her community in having the waste dump at Love Canal shut down; and Dr. Noel Brown of Jamica, a leading United Nations environmental official.

"Wittnesses for a New World" was the theme of the Assembly. Mor ethan 50 focus groups explored a wide range of topics from prayer and spiritual disciplines to ways fo precenting further damage to the earth.

The Women's division of the United Methodist General board of Global Ministries sponsors the event held every four years. UMW are engaged in a campaign for Children. Th3 Assembly offering goes to work with children and youth. Grants will be made to projects in this country and throughout the world.

Women from many countries of the world were present along with missionaries, deaconesses and other mission workers.

"Only a redeeming love centered in christ, rooted in community and responsive actions, compelled by conscience, can transform our fragile planet into a new world, faithful to God," states the call to the Assembly from Sally Graham Renst, national president, and Theressa Hoover, deputy general secretary.

Religious prizes presented in Buckingham Palace rites

LONDON (AP) — The 1990 Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion, one of the richest prizes in the world, was presented by Prince Philip to Indian lawyer Baba Amte and Australian biologist Charles Birch.

Amte, 75, a Hindu whose work for the sick crosses India's religious divisions, and Birch, 72, a retired Sydney professor who has explored links between science and religious faith, shared the 410,000 pounds ($684,000).

Amte founded hospitals and centers for lepers, blind children, the deaf and other handicapped of all India's religions. He also founded centers for Untouchables, the lowest Hindu caste called Harijans.

Birch, a member of the Uniting Church of Australia composed of Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists, was at Buckingham Palace for the brief private ceremony.

He was accompanied by Sir John M. Templeton, the U.S.-born investment counselor who founded and funds the annual prize. It was first awarded in 1973 to Mother Teresa of Calcutta.

The Templeton prize money is adjusted every year to keep it ahead of the Nobel prize, worth 200,000 pounds ($334,000), said the Rev. Wilbert Forker, Templeton's press spokesman.

Amte was unable to travel and Philip handed the check to his son, Dr. Vikas Amte, a leprologist.

The son said Amte has not decided what he will do with the prize but in the past has given about $100,000 in money from prizes "to causes for saving the environment."

Vikas Amte said his father was not religious, but he believed in God and saw God in human beings.

"He has often said it isn't hard to establish a relationship with God who is invisible and unknown but it's often very difficult to establish a relationship with your neighbor," the son said.

The prize citation for Birch called him an "original thinker (who) uses modern discoveries in natural science to expand man's understanding of God as designer and creator of the universe and its creatures."

Templeton, 77, a Presbyterian elder from Nashville, Tenn., is a British citizen living in Nassau, Bahamas.

Lawmakers negotiate school finance

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A state sales tax increase is a dead issue in the ongoing school finance debate, but Gov. Bill Clements apparently will accept hikes in other levies, lawmakers said Friday.

"They've blinked a little bit, and that's encouraging," said Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, of Clements' oft-repeated "no new taxes" stance.

House and Senate lawmakers Friday entered their second day of direct negotiations with Clements' chief of staff, Mike Toomey, and other key gubernatorial staffers, including Secretary of State George Bayoud.

The governor was in East Texas Friday making an aerial survey of flood damage and not participating directly in the talks.

"We're just beginning to work," Toomey said. Most discussions are focusing on education and administrative reforms, he said, with "no mention of taxes at all."

But Berlanga said revenue generating measures also are a topic on the table, including "the possibility of increased fees" and "some formulation on the sin taxes."

The governor's negotiators believe an increase in cigarette and tobacco taxes would not constitute "a general tax increase," said Berlanga.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said Friday, "There will be taxes other than a general sales tax."

The second special legislative session on school finance climaxed earlier this month with a Clements veto of a half-cent sales tax hike.

Lawmakers are about two weeks into their third 30-day special session and facing a June 1 deadline from a state district judge, who has pledged to implement a court-imposed solution should efforts at legislative compromise fail.

Hobby said the court-imposed plan would mean "catastrophic losses" in state aid to major urban school disticts. So would implementation of House- and Senate-approved measures at below a $555 million recommended level of spending next school year, he said.

"If we don't do anything ... we will have the most dramatic, skyrocketing property taxes the state has ever seen," said Berlanga.

"We will have a tax revolt that in my opinion will cause even greater harm to our educational systems across the state," he said.

A special master appointed to draw the court's plan, former Texas Supreme Court Justice Bill Kilgarlin, has said he believes he is empowered to redistribute money generated by local property taxes from richer districts to poorer ones.

"I think, if necessary, we could abolish for purposes of local taxation local districts and have a lot fewer districts — maybe 10 or 13 areas in the state," Kilgarlin told a Dallas television station Thursday.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and Senate co-chairman of a joint education conference committee, said the talk of taxes so far has been "only in vague terms."

The main focus of talks is on the details of education excellence programs.

Clements would like appointment of the commissioner of education as a gubernatorial perogative.

STATE IN BRIEF

Woman found decomposed

HOUSTON (AP) — A 64-year-old woman whose decomposed body was found in her dilapidated home this week probably froze to death last December — forgotten by neighbors and family members, authorities said.

Ruby Dove's body was discovered by police Wednesday after a neighbor complained of a foul odor coming from her house.

Social Security checks dating back to January were left unopened in the woman's mailbox. The house had no electricity, gas or water for at least a year, leading police to speculate she may have died during December's bitter freeze.

Autopsy results have not yet been released.

Police said her body had been badly gnawed by rodents and other animals that entered the house through holes in the wood floors or open windows.

She apparently was not missed, neither by neighbors nor by at least two children, one of whom lives about 10 miles from his mother's house.

Neighbors said they only occasionally saw her shuffling to a local grocery store, where a clerk said she bought tuna fish, crackers and Thunderbird wine. Empty wine bottles littered every room in the house.

Students need help

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 80,000 students dropped out of grades 7-12 in the 1988-89 school year — 6.1 percent of those enrolled — the Texas Education Agency reported Friday.

The loss of 82,325 students, from a total of 1.36 million in those grades, was called a "tremendous waste" by State Board of Education member Will Davis.

"If you multiply that by 10, in a decade we've dumped 800,000 kids who are functionally illiterate, unprepared really to be in society, and those 800,000 are going to cost society millions and millions of dollars, primarily in excess of what it would cost to educate them," he said.

Dropouts, as "victims of society," are more likely to turn to crime, said Davis, of Austin.

"They rob you, they break in your house, they run over you in the street," he said. "If they were educated and productive, we wouldn't have those problems."

The dropout total is down from the 91,307 reported for the previous school year.

But school districts attributed the decrease to improved record keeping and tracking of students as they move from school to school, the agency said.

Fifty-five percent of the dropouts were male and 45 percent female.

Fire destroys school

DEKALB, Texas (AP) — A fire destroyed much of DeKalb High School Thursday night, causing up to $1 million in damage.

Superintendent Allen Cooper said the fire, which destroyed the main high school building, was detected around 11:30 p.m. Several additions added to the existing structure survived serious damage, he said.

Cooper said all of the district's students were excused from school Friday. While the elementary and junior high students will resume classes Monday, Cooper said it would be Tuesday or Wednesday before arrangements could be made for the high school's 350 students.

"We have some other buildings there that we're going to try to utilize," Cooper said. "We have a large multipurpose building we may use ... for the rest of the year. We have access to a church that's fairly nearby we may be able to utilize," he said.

Cooper said the fire destroyed all of the equipment in the high school, including the computer and science labs and all textbooks.

"It's hard to estimate right now exactly how much damage that we do have," he said.

Fortunately, he said, firefighters were able to save most of the school records. And, a library completed earlier this year was unscathed.

Fish farm flooded

DALLAS (AP) — An unlikely candidate for flood damage — a fish farm — has been hard-hit by the high waters that have drenched Texas in recent weeks.

Leann Doss of Southwest Fish Hatchery near Terrell, about 25 miles northeast of Dallas, said a wave of water came over a levee Thursday, sweeping most of the fish away.

"We lost most of our brood fish," said Mrs. Doss. "They are scattered everywhere. I'd estimate only 25 percent of the fish stayed on the farm."

She said 22 of the hatchery's 55 one-acre ponds were destroyed. With them went schools of channel catfish, bluegills and hybrid bluegills, bass, croppie and shad.

Road flooded

Robert Riesner takes the children home by boat in Dayton, Texas, Thursday because rising waters have blocked the main road to his neighborhood. Riesner's children are Leanna, Danielle and Angela. Jenifer and Rebecca Riesner are his nieces.

Girl's death investigated

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The father of a 10-year-old girl who drowned while on a fishing trip purchased a $50,000 life insurance policy on his daughter less than two weeks before she died, police said.

The Tarrant County Medical Examiner's office ruled Wednesday that the death of Jeanette Lindsey was a homicide. She died Feb. 27 at Lake Worth while fishing with her father, Wendell Lindsey and her sister, 9-year-old Darlene Linds

SATURDAY, MAY 12, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your health improves when you change your eating habits and engage in a regular exercise program. September will bring business decisions that make success highly likely in December. New trends affect your private life. A mid-winter vacation puts you in touch with many fascinating people. Handle practical matters with dispatch. A promising romantic alliance adds excitement to your life. Wear your heart on your sleeve.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Wilfrid Hyde-White, composer Burt Bacharach, baseball's Yogi Berra, comedian George Carlin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Domestic responsibilities could get you down. Enjoy all you see and hear when socializing today. A quiet conversation should add to your financial holdings. Save money for investment purposes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Set the ball rolling and then stand by and see what happens. Any attempts to change the course of events could backfire. A voice from the past gives you new hope for romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): This could be a red-letter day for you. Be on the lookout for unusual business and financial opportunities. Second thoughts have more value than you realize. A spirit of give-and-take is favored.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A fine day to stick close to home and avoid questions you would rather not answer. Accepting a difficult assignment will help you achieve your ends. Your steadiness will be richly rewarded.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get out and socialize today. Mingling with optimistic people will do you a world of good. Be philosophical if you find that you cannot force the changes you desire. Life goes on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be satisfied to stay home today. A personal analysis should prove quite revealing. Avoid both impulsive behavior and wishful thinking. Reckless choices only cause grief.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You receive a welcome boost from an unexpected quarter. You find yourself in a position of prominence. Polish a special skill. Press forward with your efforts to reach a long-cherished goal.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not stint on doing everything expected of you today. Your chances of making great headway are excellent. Accept a last-minute invitation and look forward to a fun evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Rewards you earn personally are more fulfilling than those offered by mate. Others applaud your climb to new heights. You relish the feeling of accomplishment. Those who are alone risk boredom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Limit yourself to one special goal and concentrate on achieving it. Too many pursuits will scatter your energies. Subtle forces gradually push you forward. Enlist mate's cooperation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Once everything has been clarified to your satisfaction, you should still solicit an opinion from your spouse or partner. Patience will help you improve domestic relations. Romance is on your mind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It is better to work at something than to end the day without accomplishing a single thing. Even domestic chores can be absorbing. Enlist the cooperation of family members.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have a powerful imagination and great curiosity. They enjoy working with their hands and may be ambidextrous. Their quick wit is a highly effective tool in business. Although these Taureans appear friendly and outgoing, they are shy underneath. They select their friends with great care and treasure them. Spectator sports will hold more appeal than active competition. These Taureans love to curl up with a good book or cook a special feast for close pals.

West Virginia governor, symphony leader to wed

Rachael Worby and Gaston Caperton

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Gov. Gaston Caperton, whose messy divorce from his wife of 23 years made headlines last year, today announced his engagement to Wheeling Symphony conductor Rachael Worby.

"This is a really special day for us," Caperton said at a news conference at Oglebay Park Amphitheater, where the orchestra appears during the summer.

The announcement comes less than a year after the first-term Democratic governor and his wife, Dee, divorced and she sued him for fraud.

Ms. Worby said she didn't think her first lady role would affect her conducting duties.

"I hope that it will only enhance my relationship with the Wheeling Symphony," Ms. Worby said. "I intend to be music director for the Wheeling Symphony for as long as everyone in the Ohio Valley wants me."

She said she plans to keep her Wheeling home as well as her name. The governor's mansion is in Charleston, 160 miles from Wheeling.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor suffered complications including new infections in her fifth week of hospitalization for pneumonia, and will remain hospitalized for about six more weeks, doctors said Friday.

The recovery of Miss Taylor, near death two weeks ago with viral pneumonia, was dealt a setback by bacterial pneumonia and a yeast infection, her doctors said.

During the next 1½ months, she will require intravenous therapy in the hospital, they said in a statement released by St. John's Hospital and Health Center.

Bacterial pneumonia is generally considered less serious than the viral pneumonia Miss Taylor initially contracted. That's because antibiotics are effective against bacteria but not viruses.

"She is tolerating this therapy extremely well and her doctors are pleased with her progress," Miss Taylor's publicist, Chen Sam, said after talking to doctors.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The designer Mr. Blackwell, best known for his annual worst-dressed celebrity lists, had his face redesigned Friday.

The 60-something-year-old designer underwent a $20,000 "complete face sculpturing," including cheekbone augmentation, eye restoration, removal of silicone from previous cosmetic surgery and regluing of his nose, said publicist Michael Sands.

Regluing of his nose?

Blackwell, whose real name is Richard Sylvan Seltzer, had a nose job previously and it got out of line recently when he bumped his schnoz, Sands said.

Blackwell, who won't reveal his age except to say he's "under 100," said in a telephone interview from the plastic surgeon's office: "You take in a dress if it's a little big, don't you? Well, it's a little big."

The six-hour surgery was videotaped for airing on a medical show, Sands said. "We will have an unveiling later. He will look like he did when he was young."

The caustic Blackwell, who in the past designed clothes for Marilyn Monroe and Zsa Zsa Gabor, has heaped disdain on celebrity fashion frumps for 30 years.

• • •

LONDON (AP) — Comedian John Cleese and his second wife, Barbara Trentham, were divorced Friday.

Publicist Theo Cowen quoted the former Monty Python star as saying the couple's two-year trial separation "had gone so well they decided to make it permanent."

Cleese, 50, did not contest the petition filed by Ms. Trentham, 44, according to the news agency Press Association. The couple had no children.

The two wed in 1981, three years after Cleese divorced Connie Booth, his co-writer and co-star on the television series "Fawlty Towers." Both of his ex-wives are Americans.

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Sportscaster Brent Musburger says journalists should bypass public relations people and go directly to the source of stories.

"To me, the entire notion of ballclubs or individual players issuing statements through public relations people is laughable," he told about 350 people at the University of Montana on Thursday night.

Government threatens to fire striking workers

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — About 60,000 government workers staged sit-in strikes Friday, demanding 200 percent pay increases and paralyzing the new administration as it struggles to rebuild Nicaragua's shattered economy.

In a showdown with the Sandinista-dominated civil service, President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro's government threatened to declare the strike illegal and fire those who do not return to work.

The strikers also are demanding the restoration of a repealed civil service law that protected public employees from firing and gave fringe benefits that Mrs. Chamorro said her government cannot afford.

"We have inherited a country that was virtually sacked and in complete bankruptcy and it is our responsibility to get it going again," she told a news conference.

Mrs. Chamorro, inaugurated April 25, announced her government would review all laws passed by the leftist Sandinistas their last two months in office.

At the time, the Sandinistas had control of the National Assembly, but Mrs. Chamorro's 14-party United National Opposition took a majority in the parliament with its victory in elections Feb. 25.

Public employees — a majority of them Sandinistas — occupied almost all ministry buildings Thursday night and early Friday, virtually paralyzing her government.

The 300 employees at the presidential office building where she talked to reporters sat around idle.

Labor Minister Francisco Rosales told the news conference: "Workers on strike should return to their jobs, otherwise we will declare the strike illegal and apply the Labor Law and those who do not show up will be fired."

"We are revising all the laws and decrees enacted by the previous government from Feb. 25 to April 25, since what constitutes the nation's capital cannot be appropriated in an arbitrary manner," she said.

Mrs. Chamorro said some of the earlier laws passed by the Sandinistas will also be revised, including some that confiscated private businesses and turned them into state enterprises.

They include laws forcing big landowners to rent their land to state-run cooperatives. She said a return to privately run farming was needed to revive farm production for the next planting season, which begins in about two months.

Food production dropped so sharply under the Sandinistas — and during the U.S.-imposed economic embargo — that Nicaragua was forced to import crops it used to export and shortages occurred of such staples as rice and beans. The Bush administration lifted the embargo on the day the U.S.-backed candidate was inaugurated.

Another law being revised allowed senior Sandinistas to confiscate homes of the wealthy.

Rosales said the government will negotiate wage increases "but it will not do this under pressure." He said the civil service law, which organized public employees, was unconstitutional.

He talked to reporters as he struggled with his keys to open the door of the Labor Ministry, which the strikers had locked shut.

Government employees rejected a 60 percent pay increase Mrs. Chamorro had ordered this week when she announced a 9 percent devaluation of the cordoba, Nicaragua's currency. The cordoba has been devalued four times in less than a month.

The devaluations make imports more expensive and encourage exports by making them cheaper. The moves have sent consumer prices soaring.

A subsidy for public transportation was withdrawn, water rates were doubled, electricity rates tripled and telephone service increased 1,300 percent.

Soviet tale rekindles 'Fifth Man'

LONDON (AP) — The KGB is in town, tormenting the British with boasts about yet another top traitor in the Kim Philby mold, possibly the long-sought "Fifth Man."

This latest caper includes a Soviet TV movie on the affair and a KGB public relations man who was in London on Friday to help answer reporters' questions.

Some scholars of espionage have long suspected that Soviet penetration of the British secret service did not end with the unmasking of Guy Burgess, Donald Maclean, Anthony Blunt and Harold "Kim" Philby, and that there was probably a fifth man.

Others maintain the KGB has deliberately fostered the theory to keep Western intelligence in doubt.

Until now, the hunt for the Fifth Man has leaned heavily on conjecture, dragging several illustrious British names through the mud. Now comes the KGB, almost gleefully claiming the speculation is true.

Yuri Modin, one of Philby's handlers, says in a Soviet film about the spy's exploits that "the fifth one is not known to our ex-enemy, ex-opponent, so I am not in a position to tell you anything about that."

So a Fifth Man really existed? "Yes, that's a fact." Has he met him? "Yes, I know him personally."

Is he an interesting man? "Well, now I'll try to avoid your question. He is an interesting man with his own peculiarities, etc., with his own ideas..."

At a preview of the film at a London televison studio, KGB press officer Col. Igor Prelin gave more details, claiming the Fifth Man is "of Philby's generation" and retired from espionage work.

Philby died in Moscow in 1988 at 76. He implied that the KGB had asked the Fifth Man if he would like to be identified, and the answer was no.

Eight die when jetliner explodes

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An explosion and fire tore through a Philippine Airlines jet Friday as it prepared to leave Manila, killing eight people and injuring 82. Officials said a bomb may have caused the explosion.

Panic-stricken passengers trampled one another rushing for the exits, survivors said. Survivors and witnesses gave conflicting accounts of how many explosions there were before the fire, with some saying as many as three.

"They were still demonstrating the safety equipment when it occurred," said Isidro Retaso, 33, of Iloilo, the flight's destination. "There were three explosions, loud explosions, and the ceiling shuddered. On the second explosion, I immediately opened the emergency exits."

Another survivor, Sony Villareal, 30, also of Iloilo, said she heard one loud explosion.

"After the explosion there was fire and thick smoke billowed. Everybody panicked after that. People were stumbling over each other trying to get out of the plane," she said.

Flight PR143, a Boeing 737-300, was bound for Iloilo, 290 miles south of Manila. It carried 119 passengers and crew members and was being towed onto the runway at about 3:20 p.m. when the explosion occurred.

Oscar Alejandro, director of the government's Air Transport Office, said the planes engines had not even been turned on yet. Police were examining the aircraft to determine the cause of the explosion.

"We're looking into the possibility that a bomb was placed there," he said without elaboration.

Eduardo Carrascoso, the airport manager, said no bomb threat was received.

None of the Philippines' insurgent groups has a history of random terrorism, such as bombing airliners.

The last time any such incident occurred was in 1976, when a bomb carried by a would-be hijacker exploded in the toilet of a Philippine Airlines aircraft flying from Manila to Cebu. The hijacker was sucked out of the aircraft, and it was not determined if his motive was political.

In 1986, a bomb exploded aboard a Thai Airways jet flying from Manila to Japan, killing one man. Police concluded the man had bought explosives in the Philippines and was returning to Japan when he accidentally detonated a grenade in the aircraft's toilet.

Enrique Santos, vice president of Philippine Airlines, said the plane in Friday's incident was being towed to the runway when it was rocked by a single explosion.

Dante Santos, the airline president, said flames swept through the plane in only four minutes. One blast apparently occurred near the center of the passenger cabin, near where the bodies were found, he said.

The cabin filled with smoke. Most of the people escaped by sliding down emergency chutes before flames spread, survivors said.

Airline employee Alvin Rieta said he was a few yards from the plane and heard only one explosion. "Immediately the door opened and people scampered out," he said. "We suspect it's a bomb, but we can't confirm it."

The bodies of six adults and one child were found inside the burned-out cabin. The child, a girl, was found clutched to the chest of an adult woman, presumably her mother, rescuers said.

Santos, the airlines vice president, said the eighth body was found early Saturday after the plane was towed to a nearby hangar. It could not be determined whether the casualty was male or female because the body was charred.

At least 82 passengers were treated for injuries at the airport clinic, according to a airline employ e Alfredo Estrella. Twenty-two of the injured were hospitalized, one of them in serious condition.

Australian plane hits mountain

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — A chartered jet carrying 11 people crashed on a steep slope Friday near Mount Emerald in north Queensland state, officials said.

An army helicopter spotted the wreckage of the Cessna Citation 10 miles south of the town of Mareeba during a break in fog and rain early Saturday, said Richard Smith, spokesman for the emergency center at Brisbane Airport.

The helicopter crew could not get a close look and was unable to say if the pilot or any of the 10 passengers survived, Smith reported.

He said the weather closed in again almost as soon as the wreckage was found and the helicopter had to return to base.

The plane, owned by the Air North Queensland charter company, was reported missing Friday in a heavily forested area between Atherton and Mareeba, sugar milling communities 875 miles north of Brisbane and 35 miles southwest of Cairns.

Soviet floods kill 11

MOSCOW (AP) — Floods have killed at least 11 people, wrecked hundreds of homes and forced the evacuation of more than 18,000 people in the Bashkiria region of the southern Ural Mountains, officials said today.

Three people were reported missing.

The Soviet press has been largely silent about the flooding, which began about a week ago when the Belaya, or White River, overflowed its banks due to heavy rains and melting snow.

Alexei I. Kharlov, deputy prime minister of the Bashirian Autonomous Republic, said by telephone that the flood submerged 130 villages and 13,000 houses. Eleven people were killed and three were missing, he said.

Palace duck returns

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's most famous waterbird, a traffic-stopping duck, returned to her Tokyo pond Friday after being scared away by a horde of photographers and a wildlife worker hoping to mend the bird's bad leg.

For at least a decade, the spot-billed duck has returned each May to a decorative pond in front of the headquarters of trading giant Mitsui and Co. and hatched a brood of ducklings.

A few weeks later, after the young birds are strong swimmers, the mother has herded them across an eight-lane road to spend the summer in the Imperial Palace moat.

The operation requires a squad of police to stop traffic, and usually there are five times as many photographers as ducks.

This year the rite seemed in danger. The duck had a bad leg, and city authorities tried to capture it for medical treatment Thursday night. But the bird flew away, apparently scared by a photographer's camera flash. Photographers had promised not to use flashes.

Mitsui reported the bird returned early Friday, still with a bad leg, and press reports said another attempt might be made to capture it.

Dog, cat meat opposed

GENEVA (AP) — Switzerland's most prominent animal rights campaigner Friday denounced government plans to allow sales of dog and cat meat as "monstrous and obscene."

Franz Weber, in a column in Lausanne's Le Matin newspaper, charged the proposed law endorsed "a kind of cannibalism" and would "lower us to the level of the disparaged monsters of the Philippines and Korea."

Desecration of graves renews sordid memories

AP Laserphoto

A young couple check the damage done to their relatives graves at the Jewish cemetery at Carpentras, France, Friday. More than 30 graves in the cemetery were desecrated Thursday, creating an outrage throughout France.

PARIS (AP) — For French Jews, flourishing more than at any time in their history, the desecration of tombstones in a southern town was a brutal reminder of France's long, sordid history of anti-Semitism.

From the conviction of army officer Alfred Dreyfus nearly 100 years ago to roundups of Jews by French police during World War II to the bombing of a Paris synagogue in 1980, anti-Semitism remains a major fear among French Jews.

"Anti-Semitism is a dormant volcano whose eruptions are never predictable," wrote political analyst Robert Sole.

This week's vandalism and mutilation of a recently buried corpse in Carpentras came in an era of renewed Jewish pride in France.

It also coincided with the steady rise of the extreme-right National Front, a party that has rallied an estimated 15 percent of voters around an anti-immigrant, racist platform that also targets Jews.

Its leader, Jean-Marie Le Pen, prides himself on "saying out loud what everybody is thinking to themselves." He has joked about the Nazis' crematoriums and called the gas chambers "a detail" whose existence was still "being debated by historians."

He regularly rails against "Jewish lobbies," and frequently accuses the media of being dominated by Jews.

His followers deny their policies fuel racial hatred and anti-Semitism, but French Jews aren't so sure.

Traumatized by World War II, which saw the deportation of some 117,000 Jews from France to Nazi concentration camps, a community of guilt-ridden survivors harbored fears of new persecution.

After the war, many renounced their Jewish identities, changed their names, refused to circumcise baby boys or to give their children Jewish educations.

Today, Jewish life is thriving. In the past 15 years, the number of synagogues in the Paris area has jumped from 30 to 70. In 1950 there were three kosher butchers. Today there are more than 100.

Pope appeals to Mexican Indians to fight for improved lifestyles

TUXTLA GUTIERREZ, Mexico (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Friday comforted the families of pilgrims who died in an airplane crash, then urged Mexico's downtrodden Indians to fight to improve their lives.

"Don't be seduced by vices, like alcohol abuse, which causes so many ravages, and don't cooperate with drug trafficking, which causes destruction to so many people in the world," he told more than 150,000 people at an outdoor prayer service.

John Paul also expressed concern for refugees fleeing political persecution and death squads in Guatemala. Tuxtla Gutierrez is about 100 miles northwest of the Guatemalan border and 425 miles southeast of Mexico City.

Behind the altar were misty green mountains in the heart of Mexico's Indian country. Massed marimbas played and thousands of Indian women wearing traditional black dresses and red-embroidered blouses cheered as the pope arrived.

Before the outdoor service John Paul stopped at the whitewashed colonial San Marcos Cathedral to pray for 28 pilgrims who died Thursday in a plane crash while flying in to see the pope.

"Death is not the last word, because for those who have faith, life does not end, it transforms itself," the pope said. "Illuminated and aided by that truth, we raise our petition to the Lord for those who died and invoke consolation for those who mourn their loved ones."

He kissed a bronze cross on the coffin of Luis Miguel Canton Marin, bishop of Tapachula, who worked closely with Indian groups. He then comforted family members, many of whom burst into tears and kneeled to kiss John Paul's ring.

At a Mass in Villahermosa, 90 miles north of Tuxtla Gutierrez, the pope lamented the expansion of U.S.-based evangelical churches in Mexico, especially strong in Indian areas, and pleaded with converts to return to the Catholic faith.

"I think again about those people who have distanced themselves from the Catholic Church ... I would like to meet with each one of you to say: return to the breast of the church, your mother!" the pope cried at a Mass for nearly 100,000 people.

The pontiff's homily reflected growing alarm in the Vatican over the success of non-Catholic churches in Latin America and particularly in Mexico. The number of Protestants grew more than 500 percent in Mexico from 1950-80, to 2.7 million. An estimated 90 percent of Mexico's 85 million people remain Roman Catholic.

As the pope began his homily, a brief earthquake shook Mexico City, 400 miles away to the northwest. It was not felt in Villahermosa.

Mexico's native Indians suffer widespread poverty and discrimination, and despite land reform laws many have lost their communal lands to private farmers. Alcoholism is a serious problem; others have turned to drug trafficking.

Protestant sects have translated the Bible into native languages, finding fertile ground in the hopeless poverty of landless peasants and those who have moved to neighborhoods of shacks in the cities.

In Tuxtla Gutierrez, the pope encouraged Indians not to "lose hope in the face of poverty or the continuous assalt on your cultural traditions."

Judge says lawyers need better communication skills

By John Caher
Hearst News Service

Bloopers from the bar and bench long have been fodder for jokes, but to legal scholars intent on saving English from legalistic lingo, the wisecracks are no laughing matter.

"Lawyers have always been criticized for using overblown language and being incomprehensible in their speech and writing," said U.S. Circuit Judge Roger J. Miner of Hudson, N.Y.

Sadly, Miner said, many of the cracks about legal mumbo jumbo are deserved. As an adjunct professor at New York Law School and a judge on the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in Manhattan, Miner said he has been astounded by the oral and written blunders of students and lawyers.

"The name of the game is persuasion," he said. "The law is basically about words, and unless we do something about the ability of lawyers to express themselves, we are going to have a problem."

Writing recently in the New York Law School Law Review, Miner listed offenses he found in briefs he has reviewed: excessive quotations; inaccurate citations; typographical and grammatical errors; outdated authorities; disorganized arguments; lack of clarity; overuse of adverbs; slang; sarcasm; personal attacks; illogical conclusions; unnecessary footnotes. The list goes on.

Two Supreme Court justices — William J. Brennan and Anthony M. Kennedy — complained recently about a deterioration in legal communication skills. Kennedy said attorneys frequently fail to understand that a good argument should more resemble a "quiet inquiry" than a "pyrotechnic performance."

The concern is that lawyers are not only antagonizing judges but also befuddling clients, witnesses and suspects. There are times when the legal process demands extraordinary precautions in communicating with people for whom the vocabulary of law is virtually a foreign language. Sometimes the results are ridiculous.

Consider these actual cases:

■ A woman who had been stabbed in the abdomen testified at a trial in Albany County Court. The prosecutor asked her if she had been knifed in the "fracas," a noun which means disturbance or fight.

"No," the witness answered. "It was a little above that."

■ A man accused of stealing frozen poultry from a refrigerated truck was in court for his arraignment. The judge asked him if he was the "defendant."

"Oh, no sir, your honor," responded the suspect. "I'm the guy who stole the chickens."

■ An attorney questioning a witness wanted to know how she had come to testify. He asked: "Is your appearance this morning pursuant to a deposition notice which I sent to your attorney?"

She responded: "No. This is how I dress when I go to work."

Miner said there is no excuse for muddling client communications with gobbledygook.

"The widespread use of legal jargon in discourse with clients sometimes is attributed to bad motives on the part of the bar — escalation of fees, self-promotion and deception," Miner wrote in his article. "My own experience has been that only inertia and incompetence drive the excessive use of lawyerisms and legalese in counseling clients and drafting legal instruments."

He bemoans the fact that the legal communication crisis has "brought us to the point where law firms must hire public relations counsel — media advisers or image makers — to speak to the public for them and to advise them on how to deal with the press."

William Stoneman, an account executive with Sawchuk, Brown Associates, an Albany public relations firm whose clients include law firms, said attorneys too often clutter their communications with phrases like "aid and abet" and "null and void" when a simple "aid" or "null" would suffice.

"I don't think lawyers' communications skills are necessarily worse than anyone else's, but they should be far superior to the average," Stoneman said.

Nor is New York's highest court immune from contorted communications. In an unsigned decision last summer, the Court of Appeals said: "We declare no evisceration and certainly no 'total evisceration,' in the words of the dissent, of the Fourth Amendment's protections nor do we address, one way or the other, the dissent's implied importation of the state's distinct constitutional protection, because that issue is not preserved before us."

In other words, the police didn't violate the suspect's rights despite what the dissenting judge thought, and the state constitution was not a factor in the case.

Although many law schools include writing courses, Hether C. Macfarlane, who directs a mandatory, two-semester writing and research program at Albany Law, said the root of the problem is that students sometimes arrive in her program lacking rudimentary communications skills.

Mercury astronauts launch Hall of Fame

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Five of the Mercury Seven astronauts, America's first and perhaps most beloved space explorers, returned to their history-making roots Friday to help dedicate the Astronaut Hall of Fame.

They reminisced about some of the more light-hearted moments of three decades ago, praised those who have followed in their footsteps and stressed the need for science and space education.

"None of us need a memorial," said John Glenn, 68, now a U.S. senator. "We don't need an exhibit. We all have these days so firmly, indelibly imprinted on our minds and our memories, that we don't need that.

"But if this can help inspire someone to better education and to inspire some of our young people to do some research ... then this will all be worthwhile," Glenn said at a Hall of Fame news conference.

None of the six surviving Mercury astronauts "sit around getting nostalgic," Donald "Deke Slayton, 66, said. "We're trying to make things happen for the future."

The United States Astronaut Hall of Fame, 13 miles from where the men rocketed into history three decades ago, is a tribute to their exploits.

There is an "umbilical" plug from the Freedom 7 spacecraft that carried Alan Shepard on a 15-minute suborbital flight in 1961, making him the first American in space. There is a chunk of the Atlas rocket that propelled Glenn into space in 1962, America's first manned orbital mission.

There is Walter Schirra's Mercury spacecraft, the late Virgil "Gus" Grissom's spacesuit, L. Gordon Cooper's spacecraft heat shield, Malcolm Scott Carpenter's camera with which he photographed Earth, and Slayton's food tubes from the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz mission.

There are more personal items, too, salvaged from attics and garages: medals, patches, flight helmets, goggles, gloves, jackets.

"This is the first time that astronauts of the first group have exhibited things that are personal and sentimental to them. We hope it will encourage youngsters to follow in our footsteps," said Shepard, now 66 and a Houston businessman and aerospace consultant.

"By and large, the spaceman image has been a good one for youngsters, and this will help it remain a good image," agreed Carpenter, 65, an aerospace and oceanography consultant in Palmer Lake, Colo.

An honor roll lists the crew members of 64 U.S. manned space flights; the last two flights have yet to be posted. The more noteworthy astronauts eventually will be enshrined in the Hall of Fame alongside the Mercury Seven, chosen in 1959.

The Mercury Seven "are the first, but not necessarily the best" of the bunch, Carpenter said. In fact, he and the others said, today's astronauts are better educated.

Landlady battles drugs, foreclosure

ATLANTA (AP) — Sandra Hartman, a pistol-packing landlady, banged on the open apartment door with her .380-caliber automatic and peered in at the litter of cocaine bags and razors lying among broken toys.

Hartman

"Maintenance. Anybody here?" she called, crunching broken glass underfoot as she made sure no one was hiding in the apartment.

"Look at this, they've been burning in here," she said, pointing to carpet burns and blackened aluminum cans, more evidence of cocaine. "But I could fix this place up, this apartment, real easy — the cabinets are still here and the floor's OK — for about $5,000."

Gordon Valley is 200 bullet-riddled, low-cost apartments in a seedy section of Martin Luther King Jr. Drive. It's also the newest stop on Ms. Hartman's daily — and nightly — patrols of her 11 low-cost apartment complexes.

Wearing her bulletproof vest, Mrs. Hartman evicts drug users and pushers, disperses loiterers and punishes litterers. She says it's the only way to keep the "good tenants."

During a visit in December, U.S. Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp praised Mrs. Hartman's anti-drug approach to housing. But she says she will lose all her properties unless someone in the government lends a hand.

In a city where 20 percent of low-cost housing is substandard and more than 700 people are on the Atlanta Housing Authority's waiting list for openings, Ms. Hartman has a reputation as a firm but just landlady.

"Ms. Hartman, she'll work with you," said Ann Parks, who has lived at Oak Valley Court, a complex that won a federal Rental Rehabilitation award, for a year. "I help, though. When they fight out here, I talk to both sides to try to stop it. I say this neighborhood ought to get along together."

Ms. Hartman spends about $10,000 a month on 24-hour security for the complexes. She has fenced in the largest, Overlook Atlanta.

"One time, a lot of young kids would be hanging around the corner all day, and you know what they were doing, with their gold chains on and their cars with the gold trim," said Donna Dawson, who has lived at the complex two years. "Now, the tenants are real proud at how clean it is."

PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE DESIGNATION OF A CRITICAL AREA

A representative of the Texas Water Commission will conduct a public hearing on:

May 15, 1990, at 7 p.m.
Midkiff Community Center
Farm Road 2401
Midkiff, Texas

This hearing will be held pursuant to Sections 52.051 - 52.054 of the Texas Water Code to receive public comment on the proposed designation by the Water Commission of the Reagan, Upton, and Midland County Critical Area in 31 Texas Administrative Code Chapter 294.

The purpose of this critical area designation is to assure the availability of a clean and adequate supply of underground water, to adequately control land subsidence problems and waste of underground water, and to assure that local areas will determine the best methods for handling underground water problems either through the creation of underground water conservation districts or other means. If the Commission designates this area as a critical area, it may call a hearing to consider whether a district should be created over all or part of the critical area, or whether all or part of the land in the critical area should be added to an existing district. Creation of the district would be pursuant to an election within the boundaries of the proposed district.

The Water Commission will consider adoption of this rule designating the Reagan, Upton, and Midland County Critical Area on June 13, 1990, at 9 a.m. in Room 118 of the Stephen F. Austin Building, 1700 N. Congress Ave., Austin, Texas. This is a change in time for this meeting as this Commission meeting was originally noticed as occurring on June 6, 1990.

Persons who are interested in obtaining copies of the proposed rule designating this critical area may call the Texas Register at (512) 463-5561. Also; a copy of the critical area report prepared by the Commission staff appraising the hydrogeology of the area may be examined at the Water Commission offices at 1700 North Congress Ave., Austin, Texas, or at the Reagan County Library in Big Lake, Texas, the Midland County Public Library in Midland, Texas, the Upton County Public Library in McCamey, Texas, the Rankin Public Library in Rankin, Texas, and the Midkiff Public Library in Midkiff, Texas.

Persons who have questions concerning these hearings or who wish to submit written comment should contact Robin Smith, Staff Attorney, Legal Division, Texas Water Commission, P.O. Box 13087, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711, (512) 463-8069. Written comment will be accepted until June 4, 1990.
