Firefighters work to free a Pampa woman from her vehicle after it was involved in a collision with the cattle truck in the background. The accident occurred at 3:59 p.m. Thursday at the intersection of Highway 60 and Loop 171. The woman was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo for treatment after being freed from the car.

Pampa woman injured in accident

By MARILYN POWERS
The Pampa News

A Pampa woman was transported to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo after her vehicle collided with a truck tractor/semi-trailer rig driven by Ronald Benson, 51, of Amarillo, a driver for Dee King Trucking, was traveling east on Highway 60 approaching the intersection and had the right-of-way, according to a driving and had to be extracted from the vehicle by firemen using tools.

Wade was traveling north on Loop 171 and had stopped at the stop sign for the intersection. A truck tractor/semi-trailer rig driven by Ronald Benson, 51, of Amarillo, a driver for Dee King Trucking, was traveling east on Highway 60 approaching the intersection and had the right-of-way, according to a Texas Department of Public Safety report.

"Wade had stopped but had then proceeded into the intersection," a DPS spokeswoman said. "Benson attempted evasive action but struck the Nissan broadside on the driver's side."

Benson's rig stopped off the north side of Highway 60, pointed east. Wade's car came to rest off the south side of the highway, also pointed east. No injuries other than those suffered by Wade were reported by the Pampa DPS office.

Responding to the scene of the accident were Guardian EMS Ambulance, Pampa Fire Department, Texas Department of Transportation, DPS and Gray County Sheriff's Office.

Ryan named PFD fire marshal

By MARILYN POWERS
The Pampa News

Michael Ryan will begin his new duties Monday as fire marshal for the City of Pampa, filling a position that has been vacant since Keith Fisher left on Dec. 31, 2007.

Michael Ryan

Ryan has been an officer for Pampa Police Department since August 2005. He has most recently served as school liaison officer for the department.

"I'm looking forward to it," Ryan said of his new duties. "It's a great opportunity for me as well as a big challenge. I feel I can bridge the gap between the fire department and the police side of things."

The fire marshal's duties include involvement with weed violations of the city ordinance, fire inspection and investigation, arson investigation, fire codes and enforcement, helping to plan reviews for new construction, fire drills and public fire safety.

"Having a police officer with experience within the city is a wonderful asset to the community," said Pampa Fire Chief Kim Powell. "We're looking forward to having him on board."

Ryan will be required to attend the basic fire academy as well as arson investigation training.

Before coming to Pampa, Ryan worked nine years in a juvenile detention center and one year at Hemphill County Jail.

Graduation ceremony tomorrow

The graduation ceremony for the Pampa High School class of 2008 will be held at 10 a.m. tomorrow at Harvester Field. In the event of rain, graduation will be moved inside to the McNeely Fieldhouse.

Speeches will be made by the salutatorian, valedictorian and class president.

Pampa library offers summer activities

By JULIE ANN THOMPSON
The Pampa News

Inspired by Nascar, Lovett Memorial Library will host 'Driven to Read', the race car-themed summer reading program which kicks off this Saturday with a movie about cars. The movie and registration will begin at 10 a.m. and last until 2 p.m. and the program will begin the following Monday, June 2.

"I got the idea from our HUG meeting which is the Harrington User Group," Library Director Misty Guy said. "HUG connects the Texas panhandle. We get together and exchange ideas."

The library is expecting somewhere around 200 kids for the program, Guy said. Each participant will paint and put together wooden toy cars for a race at the end of the program.

"We're going to make a racetrack out of cardboard and the more the children read, they get to move their car ahead," Guy said.

The schedule for the reading program is as follows:

Library Director Misty Guy holds up a banner that participants in this summer's reading program can win. Other prizes include Nascar trashcans, cars and hats.

Monday, June 2 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. will host junior high and high school participants. Tuesday, June 3 from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. will host kindergarten through second grade. Wednesday, June 4 from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. will host toddlers and pre-kindergarten participants. Thursday, June 5 from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. will host third grade through fifth grade. The following Wednesday, July 11, there will be a tailgate party where awards will be given and the car races will take place.

"Awards will go to the participants that read the most," Guy said. "It's a point system. They can choose any of the books, fiction or non-fiction."

United Supermarkets will provide and prepare hot-dogs for the tailgate party.

"We hope we have a good turnout," Guy said. "We hope the kids like it and the parents as well."

The tale of a tail that has wagged its last

My dog died. It has been exactly a month since I found her. Permanently asleep in the doghouse — the best way to find an old friend whom I desperately didn't want to have to put to sleep myself. God answered my prayers.

Actually, it was this exact time of year, 11 Mays ago, two weeks after I moved to Pampa, Texas, that I first met my trusty companion. I walked up the sidewalk to the front door and there she was: Those adorable green eyes that only a chocolate Labrador puppy has. My heart melted.

We named her Hannah. Hannah Beth Bailey. Yes, my dogs have middle names, and yes, saying I'm a dog-lover is an understatement.

Dog-haters should turn to the next page now.

The days that soon followed were both precious and challenging. Getting to know each other. Potty training. But my puppy was brilliant, despite being the runt of the litter. Hannah was going outside to "do her business" on her own in a matter of a days. And that's pretty much the way things went until the day she died. Brilliance always sparkled in those loving eyes.

My husband taught her to sit. Come. Lay down. Roll Over. Pray. Shake. Oh, she loved to shake. She was one of a kind. Never destroyed anything. Fetched every ball thrown her way, and then some. We started taking her on walks down the street to Frasier Park when she was 8 weeks old and she learned to run up the stairs and go down the slide by herself.

Each summer we go to a cabin in Colorado, and every year our Hannah dog would swim the Rio Grande. No matter how many sticks we threw into the rushing, frigid waters, she would fetch and swim her heart out back to us.

This was one beautiful, smart dog.

But that's not what I loved best about her. I loved her best because despite life's challenges, she trudged on. And I loved her most because she loved me more. This really became most evident in her later years.

As my puppy turned into an adult, we found out she had lupus. I guess being the runt had its downside after all. My beautiful, sleek chocolate lab turned into a scaly, scab-worn, ugly dog. Her nose was always peeling and bleeding.

Here eyes were continuously seeping and red. The once dark chocolate coat she adorned turned light brown, dry and flakey.

She looked bad, but felt fine. So we went on with life. My husband and I didn't let a little ugliness get in the way of loving our "first-born." The first pet of many we would go on to own, she was definitely the alpha dog and the leader of the pack.

However, as she got older, and her legs began to tire out, her patience with small children began to wane. This became a big concern when we found out that we were going to have a baby boy two and a half years ago. How would our labrador handle that?

With style and grace, of course. No, the dog didn't particularly care for the baby. But she adapted. And that's when I REALLY got to know this animal. Staying home from work, Hannah became my co-worker and a dear friend. She helped me take care of the baby, following me all hours of the day and night to check on him, even though she would groan every time she sat her old legs down next to me with the nearest shoe in her mouth. She had a thing for carrying shoes.

As my baby turned into a little boy, Hannah became more and more comfortable with him. She even got to where she liked him. Which was good, because out of six pets, "Anna" was the only one my baby loved. He crawled all over that old, scrappy labrador. And she tolerated it, despite the obvious pain my toddler put on her arthritic joints.

Every year that Hannah

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, May 30, the 151st day of 2008. There are 215 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 30, 1958, unidentified American service members killed in World War II and the Korean War were interred in the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery.

On this date:

In 1431, Joan of Arc, condemned as a heretic, was burned at the stake in Rouen, France.

In 1854, the territories of Nebraska and Kansas were established.

'There are two statements about human beings that are true: that all human beings are alike, and that all are different. On those two facts all human wisdom is founded.'

— Mark Van Doren
American poet
(1894-1972)

In 1883, 12 people were trampled to death when a rumor that the recently opened Brooklyn Bridge was in imminent danger of collapsing triggered a stampede.

In 1908, "the man of a thousand voices," Mel Blanc, was born in San Francisco.

In 1911, Indianapolis saw its first long-distance auto race; Ray Harroun was the winner.

In 1922, the Lincoln Memorial was dedicated in Washington by President Harding, Chief Justice William Howard Taft and Robert Todd Lincoln.

In 1937, 10 people were killed when police fired on steelworkers demonstrating near the Republic Steel plant in South Chicago.

In 1943, American forces secured the Aleutian island of Attu from the Japanese during World War II.

In 1971, the American space probe Mariner 9 blasted off from Cape Kennedy, Fla., on a journey to Mars.

In 1986, 21 elderly passengers were killed when a tour bus went out of control on a mountain road and plunged into the Walker River near the California-Nevada border.

Ten years ago: Northern Afghanistan was rocked by a powerful earthquake believed to have killed up to 5,000 people. A tornado tore through Spencer, S.D., killing six people. Pakistan set off another nuclear blast.

Five years ago: President Bush left for a weeklong tour of Europe and the Middle East. The U.N. Security Council unanimously authorized the deployment of a French-led international force in northeastern Congo, the scene of ethnic fighting.

Nation suffering from lack of leadership

It all boils down to leadership, or the lack of it. You win or lose according to the quality of your leadership. That's true in sports and in government and in life. That's what America needs right now more than anything else.

Our system of government is fine. Even the circumstances we find ourselves in — huge public and private debt, a deteriorating economy, a stressed environment and two wars — are manageable with the right leadership. That's where we have failed so far. We have elected men and women not up to the task of leadership. A good first step in correcting this is to read "A Time to Fight" by Jim Webb.

I don't make any bones about it: Webb is the best political leader on the American scene. I wish he were president. He is fearless, honest, honorable and smart. He was a genuine hero in the Marine Corps, earning his medals as a platoon leader and commander of a rifle company. He's a successful novelist. He served as an assistant secretary of defense and as a Navy secretary. Now he is a U.S. senator from Virginia. His election renewed my faith in the American people.

Charley Reese
Columnist

The new book is about leadership. Its subtitle is "Reclaiming a Fair and Just America."

He writes: "Entrenched aristocracies, no matter how we may want to define them, do not want change: their desire instead is to manage dissent in a way that does not disrupt their control. But over time, under the right system of government, a free, thinking people have the energy and ultimately the power to effect change."

Webb takes a sweeping view of all the problems we face — economic, political and military. I think you will be intrigued by his insight. He is that rarest of all beings, a scholar-warrior.

It's no surprise that our leaders have declined in quality. What happens when a man wins the heavyweight boxing championship? He tends to ease up, to not train as hard, to put on weight. We came out of World War II the undisputed champion of the world. Our land was practically untouched by the war. Europe, China, the Soviet Union and Japan were all devastated. We could sell practically anything we made. It certainly looked like happy days were here

GPS: What you need to know, part two

In my last column, I covered the basics of the GPS (Global Positioning System). This week, we'll look at the wide variety of receiver choices.

With the size and cost of GPS receivers dropping daily, more and more people will be finding these little gizmos under the Christmas tree and in birthday boxes. But, as their popularity rises, so do the number of manufacturers. So, where do you look for the best price/performance balance?

Basically, at this stage in the game, I am sold on one company, Garmin (http://www.garmin.com). In my opinion, and the opinion of many others, their products continue to be the most reliable and respected in the industry.

The Garmin Etrex models are some of the most popular receivers on the market. My six favorite models are the basic Etrex, Camo, Venture, Legend, Summit, and Vista.

The basic Etrex is the entry-level receiver for the true hobbyist. Price is the biggest selling point here. With an MSRP of $105, practically any enthusiast can afford one. The basic Etrex can show your current location and up to 500 waypoints.

Note: A waypoint is a place-marker, like a stick pin on a map. As you travel, you can set waypoints along the way so that you can follow it back if necessary. People typically set waypoints when they change directions (ie. turning at a street corner).

The next model, the Etrex Camo, is for hunters and fishermen. It basically has all the capabilities of the basic Etrex along with a useful calendar for displaying the best hunting and fishing times. It's also more resilient to the elements. Expect to pay around $115 for this unit.

The Etrex Venture ups the ante in a number of ways. First, it is truly submersible, so boat enthusiasts should strongly consider this receiver. Also, unlike the two previous models, the Venture has 1 megabyte of memory, allowing the uploading of basic territory maps. It also has a very useful "Click Stick" (think micro-joystick), allowing easy movement around a map. Expect to shell out up to $150 for the Venture.

Good Sam's announces next meeting not until July

Good Samaritan Christian Service, 309. N. Ward, will convene its next board meeting at 5 p.m. Thursday, July 24, according to the charity newsletter. The previous meeting saw 10 churches represented by a total of 17 members. Good Sam's has approximately 17 member churches. The charity has received $13,000 from the David D. and Nona S. Payne Foundation, Inc., a portion of a blanket grant including eight other agencies. A canned food drive sponsored by Letter Carriers of Pampa netted 1,001-pounds of food for Good Sam's. Elaine Brookshire coordinated the effort. The newsletter announced the board has approved establishing a Web site for the organization at www.goodsamaritanpampa.org.

"NEW IN AMERICAN REVOLUTION"

This weekly series brought to you by these area businesses.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Please answer a question that has me perplexed. Why do people collect autographs? I do not understand the need for a collection of signatures, regardless of how famous — or infamous — the person may be. I have never had the need to brag or show proof that I encountered "someone." In fact, I feel it's a breach of a person's privacy to approach and ask for a signature. I realize that some may collect autographs for their monetary value, but what's the reasoning behind it? Book signings, I get. Movie posters, promotional items, baseball cards and sports memorabilia, I get. But I don't understand adults (and sometimes children) approaching someone famous and asking them to sign something. Can you explain what's the big deal? — NO AUTOGRAPH HOUND, PONTOTOC, MISS.

DEAR NO AUTOGRAPH HOUND: While I can't speak for every autograph collector, I suspect that many people ask for autographs because it provides them an opening to speak to someone whose work they admire or whom they think is attractive. And most celebrities — although not all — enjoy having that kind of contact with their fans.

DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing "Kevin" for two years. I love him very much. But when we are at home together I have to beg to make him hug or kiss me. I know he loves me; he just doesn't like affection. In the past, girlfriends have broken up with him over this. Abby, I need more physical contact! Is this normal, or is there something wrong? — CRAVING IN DENVER

DEAR CRAVING: It's not normal. While some men are more affectionate than others, you should not have to "beg" for affection. Eventually Kevin's behavior will make you begin to question your attractiveness. Please understand that you cannot change another person. If this is how you want to live the rest of your life, keep seeing Kevin. If not, take a clue from his former girlfriends and find someone who can give you the affection you crave.

DEAR ABBY: I have a relative who is spoiled, immature, disrespectful to her parents and has done nothing productive in her life. I have spent time with this person because I had to; however, I do not love her. The fact is, I don't even like her. My question is, what would I say to someone who asks me if I love that relative? What can I say that is not hurtful — but not lie either? — PERPLEXED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR PERPLEXED: Frankly, I find it odd and somewhat intrusive that someone would ask you that question. However, if you are confronted, be honest (up to a point) and say that although you are related, you are not close. Then change the subject.

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "Livonia, Mich., Reader" (April 27) was ALMOST correct. Please allow me to clarify. Every law school graduate is awarded a J.D. (Juris Doctor) regardless of his/her performance on the bar exam. However, only graduates who PASS the bar exam can be called Esquire (Esq.). Simply put, J.D. is the degree; Esq. is the qualification to practice law. — STELLA SALMEN, FORMER LEGAL SECRETARY

DEAR STELLA: I had relied on my dictionary for the answer to that question. Thank you for educating me — to a "degree."

Lakers beat Spurs to earn first NBA finals berth since 2004

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was exactly a year ago that Kobe Bryant demanded a trade, ultimately saying he'd prefer playing on Pluto rather than return to the Los Angeles Lakers.

But the Lakers kept him, and all parties are delighted with how things worked out.

Bryant scored 17 of his 39 points in the fourth quarter, and the Lakers rallied from an early 17-point deficit to beat the defending NBA champion San Antonio Spurs 100-92 on Thursday night and win the Western Conference finals in five games.

The Lakers get a week off before opening the NBA finals next Thursday night at Boston or Detroit. The Celtics led the Pistons 3-2 in the Eastern Conference finals entering Game 6 on Friday night.

"Feels great," Bryant said. "I think it started for us in training camp, when there was a lot of talk swirling around. We were always together, eating together, on the bus, joking around together. We built that unity from the first day and we carried that on throughout the season."

Bryant and Shaquille O'Neal teamed up to lead the Lakers to three straight championships starting in 2000, but O'Neal was traded a month after they lost to the Pistons in the 2004 NBA finals. The Lakers didn't win another playoff series since until last month, and that drought was the genesis of Bryant's anger last spring.

But the improvement of several young players and the acquisition of Pau Gasol from Memphis four months ago made a huge difference.

"I think it is a tremendous accomplishment," Bryant said of winning the conference championship. "I think the West is extremely tough. We're all extremely excited and proud about it. Now, it's time to go on and see if we can't finish it off."

The Lakers are 12-3 in the playoffs, including 8-0 at Staples Center, where they haven't lost in two months. They have won 14 straight home games and 21 of their last 24 postseason games at home.

"We came out here, played our game, and won," said Lamar Odom, who had 13 points and eight rebounds. "It's satisfying, but one more step."

Odom will be playing in the NBA finals for the first time.

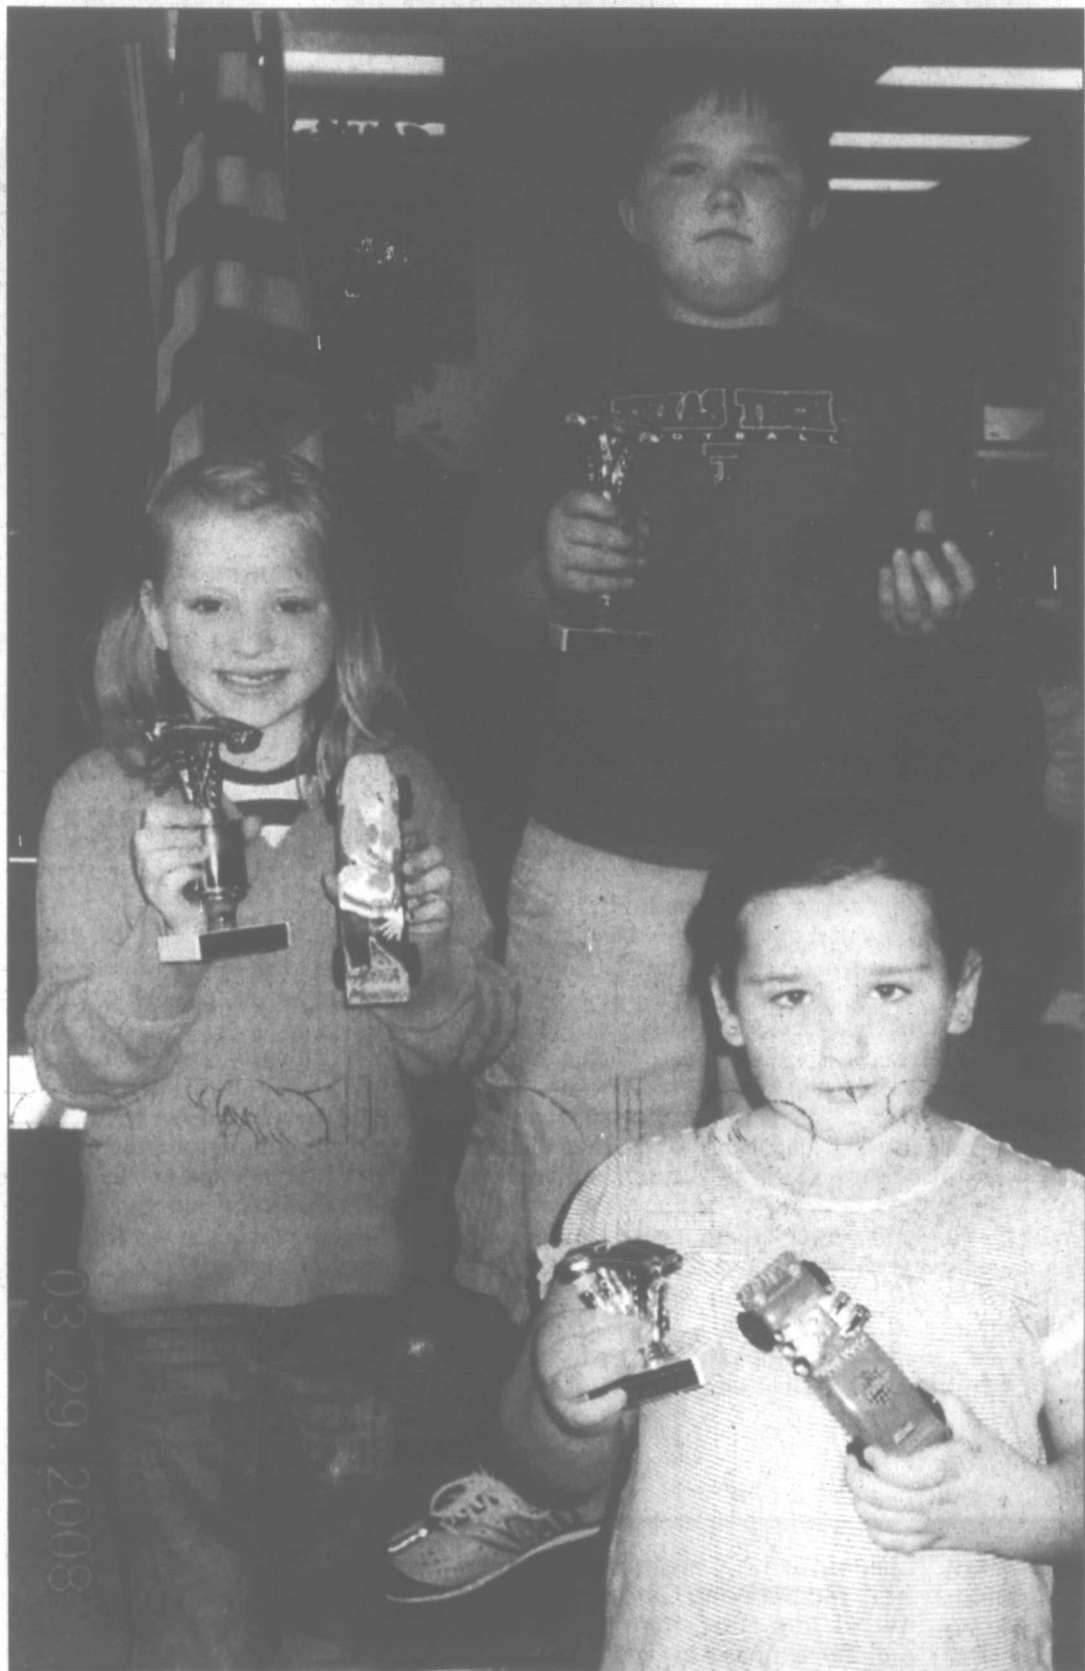

"I can remember when I was 6 years old, watching the games, watching Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar) and Magic (Johnson)," he said. "To have this opportunity is great."

Gasol had 12 points, a career playoff-high 19 rebounds, five assists and four blocked shots, and back-up guards Sasha Vujacic and Jordan Farmar added nine and eight points respectively for the Lakers.

A basket by Odom gave the Lakers an 83-76 lead with 5:40 remaining, but a 3-pointer by Brent Barry and a basket by Tony Parker drew the Spurs within two points. Manu Ginobili missed a 3-pointer that could have given San Antonio the lead before Bryant's jumper with 3:33 to play made it 85-81.

A foul shot by Tim Duncan drew the Spurs within three, but two more baskets by Bryant made it 89-82 with 1:47 to play, and the Spurs weren't closer than five points after that.

Parker scored 23 points and Duncan had 19 points, 15 rebounds and 10 assists for the Spurs. Michael Finley scored 13 points, Barry and Kurt Thomas added 11 each and Ginobili was held to nine, shooting just 3-for-9.

Forty contestants competed in the FBC Pinewood Derby Race, held once a year in which the participants make their own cars. Above, the winners hold up their winning cars and trophies. First place went to Mason McKay, second place to Tori Dalton and third to MaKenna Henderson.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, May 31, 2008:

You make waves this year, and others notice. You might change the very nature of a partnership. Although one of you might not be happy at first, it will work out for the better. Listen more often to what is being shared. Be sensitive to the group. You are a natural leader — knowing what to do and when could define your success. Remain goal-oriented, and network. Success could appear by your next birthday. If you are single, you understand what it takes to make a relationship work, but finding the right person will take talent. If you are attached, frequently stop and relate as a couple. You might need to defer slightly more often. TAURUS reads between the lines.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Curb a tendency to go overboard. Excess frequently marks your actions. You exhibit a flair for the dramatic. Your creativity flourishes. Plans show this type of ingenuity. Be spontaneous. Tonight: Split early.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ Plan on a quiet day, perhaps lunch or a hike with a friend. A talk presents many options; the biggest problem will be deciding in which direction to go. Think positively about a new friend. Tonight: Nap and then decide.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ You could be overwhelmed by others who want this or that or simply your company. You might bring others together. Choose a movie, adventure or a day trip to relax your mind and open new doors. Tonight: Where you want to be.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★ Bring family or friends together for a spontaneous happening. Whether catching up on someone's news or perhaps investing time in a key partnership, you set the pace. Trust your judgments. Tonight: Go for what you want.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ Hop in the car with a friend, explore a favorite spot or go to a flea market or perhaps an art show. Let your mind wander in this very different setting. You'll discover just how much fun you can have if you let go. Tonight: Oops — do you have to be somewhere?

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ You might be surprised by what heads down the path if you allow a partner make the call. Plans might not suit you 100 percent, but on the other hand, there is nothing wrong with what is happening. Learn to flow with this person. Tonight: Follow the music.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ You might want to try another approach or do something very different. If you let others make the decision, you could be surprised by what happens. Put 100 percent into what goes on. You will have many reasons to smile. Tonight: Someone appears to be far more interesting than before.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ You might want to do a better job of listening or handling a project. Your ability to relate emerges when dealing with people who are quite different. Smile at an unseen opportunity that knocks on your door. Be prepared to live differently. Tonight: Nap and then decide.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Let your full personality express itself. Others are drawn to the magnetic Winged Horse. Humor, wit and creativity merge together. A child or special friendship piques your interest. Let it happen. Tonight: Play until you can't anymore.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ Stay close to home. Add that vital spark to whatever you do, even if it is as simple as painting a room. With imagination and a sense of fun, you can make any chore an adventure. A child or roommate cannot help but join in. Tonight: Enjoy the moment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Catch up on news. Return calls. You might be surprised by what you hear. Allow more vitality into your life by being more responsive to a new acquaintance or a casual friend. Your instincts go on overload. Tonight: Get together with friends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★ Curb a tendency to spend. Some goal or special purchase might cost a lot. See how you might be able to trim the costs. A friend could demand a lot of attention. Your instincts or intuition guides you with a purchase. Tonight: Go with a mood change.

lived was a victory. She looked like she was on death's door for more than half her life. In the end, I almost began to think she would live forever. Eleven years is a great lifespan for a sickly lab.

But as is always the case, something had to give. I went out of town a month ago, and came home to my doggie brood. "Hannah? Hannah? Hannah!"

"Oh great, my dog is going deaf now," I thought to myself in the dark, as I walked around the house to the doghouse. There she was. Asleep. And gone, before

I could properly say good-bye. But I'm certain that was for the best. I know it was.

So, I'll just say good-bye today ... to a dear friend who taught me many lessons about life and love. My first dog as an adult. The animal that made my little family a family before it even was. Woman's best friend.

Thank you, Hannah, and good-bye.

again, and not a cloud on the horizon.

The first modern and bad leader was Jack Kennedy, a playboy and a philanderer. He was, like all martyred leaders, quickly elevated to sainthood, but in fact, his administration had been a disaster, especially in foreign policy. The Bay of Pigs never should have happened. He got us into the war in Vietnam. In the Cuban missile crisis, he gave up all of our intermediate-range missiles and guaranteed the permanence of the Fidel Castro regime.

It went more or less downhill from there. The federal government greatly expanded its powers not only in the area of national security, but in the economic and social areas, also. Debt, public and private, began to mushroom, and phony free-trade policies began to bleed off American manufacturing jobs. Morals began to decline. Today, we not only have armed guards in many public schools, we have the highest incarceration rate of any country in the world. We are the drug-consumption capital of the world.

How did we move from a society in which people in small towns and large cities once slept with the doors unlocked and their windows open to a nation of deadbolts and private security systems?

Poor leadership. Congress should have managed our budgets, and it failed to do so. It should have protected our manufacturing base, and it failed to do so. The courts should have backed discipline in the public schools, and too often they undermined it. There was a failure of leadership in academia, in government, in business, in journalism and in the military.

It is time to fight to restore leadership to every aspect of American life.

Mother in Web bullying case turns her grief into activism

DARDENNE PRAIRIE, Mo. (AP) — When Tina Meier's 13-year-old daughter committed suicide after being bullied on the Internet, her grief was so encompassing she felt at times she couldn't breathe. She had trouble being around loved ones who reminded her of her child. Even today, recollections of those first holidays after Megan's death are foggy at best.

But in recent months, the Missouri woman has focused on ways to protect other children from bullying, even leaving her job as a real estate agent to dedicate herself to the Megan Meier Foundation.

"Megan is still my daughter, no matter what, and I am going out there and fighting for her still because she is still my daughter," Meier said.

A group of friends and relatives helped Meier create the foundation, which seeks to educate and encourage positive changes to prevent bullying and cyberbullying. Meier and the volunteers are working to improve laws. They speak at schools and to parent groups. They hope to begin offering scholarships to children who help other children in some way.

Megan hanged herself in her closet on Oct. 16, 2006. Her tragic story became public only last fall following an article in a suburban St. Louis newspaper that prompted widespread interest in her case.

Megan had a history of attention deficit disorder and depression. Her suicide came soon after she received mean messages through the MySpace social networking Web site.

Earlier this month, a federal grand jury indicted 49-year-old Lori Drew, a neighbor of Megan and her family. She is accused of one count of conspiracy and three counts of accessing protected computers without authorization to get information used to inflict emotional distress. The charges were filed in California where MySpace is based. MySpace is a subsidiary of Beverly Hills-based Fox Interactive Media Inc., which is owned by News Corp.

Etrex Legend. After you've played around a bit with various receivers, you will discover one thing: Memory is gold. You can only load as many maps as your device can hold. The basic difference in the Legend is an eight-fold increase in memory. Make sure your wallet has $160 for all this added space.

The Etrex Summit costs about the same as the Legend, but contains no memory. The space is instead taken up by a barometric altimeter. And yes, you guessed it, this unit is meant for mountain-climbers. Not only can they know where they are, but also how high they've climbed.

The Etrex Vista is the Cadillac of the line. It contains every feature I've mentioned (including the altimeter) PLUS 24 megabytes of memory. Cost: $215.

For the majority of us, I recommend the basic Etrex. If you get bored with it, you're only out $105. For avid hikers and outdoor sportsmen, I recommend the Legend. I really like the 8 megabytes of memory for maps.

While you're at Garmin's Web site, take a look at their new Rino walkie-talkies. They combine a GPS and long-range radio into one package. What makes the Rino radios amazing is their "peer to peer" positioning technology. Not only will you know where you are at all times; you can also see the exact location of the other radio! I consider this an excellent device for parents and kids when visiting malls, theme parks, and other large venues. Hunters will also find it useful (especially if their partner forgot his orange vest ...)

More and more devices will incorporate GPS technology. Expect most cell phones to have this capability soon. But why wait? Buy a GPS receiver now and never get lost again!

See you in Cyberspace!

Company looks to natural gas as 'common sense approach' to energy problems

By David Bowser
The Pampa News

It all started with Jack B. Kelley almost a half century ago. Now it involves Jack B. Kelley's grandsons, Bryan and Taylor, who have GTM, a company that builds tanks to handle gas under high pressure for transportation and storage.

"My father started building tube trailers in Amarillo in 1960," said Ken Kelley, Jack Kelley's son, "and we got into the helium business and the trailer business and the leasing business. We've always felt like if there was a new technology that was going to come along and that was going to make our trailers obsolete, we wanted to be a part of it."

Ken Kelley, sitting in an air-conditioned office at the new GTM plant on Spruce Street, said he ran across that new technology about three years ago.

"We saw its potential, and we licensed the technology and did the research and development to get DOT approval for our transporting high pressure gases over the road," Kelley said.

The U.S. Department of Transportation required a series of tests that included running the tanks over a cliff and firing .50 caliber bullets into the new tanks to see if they'd explode.

"We've done rollover tests," Kelley said. "We pushed one off a cliff, off of Soncy, at that old quarry out there."

They ran a 1,400-degree fire in a tank for 45 minutes for the fire test required by the Department of Transportation.

"That was two years ago," Kelley said, "and it was so dry here, there was a burn ban here so we couldn't do that test here."

The fire test had to be done in the desert in California.

"We had a cycle test," Kelley said. "We have a cycle tester back here where we will take that cylinder from zero all the way to working pressure 10,000 times."

That takes about two days.

"The we have a burst pit where we just pressurize it until something happens to it," Kelley said.

Rather than explode, the wall of the pipe will split open, he said.

"It's not a catastrophic failure," Kelley said. "There's no explosion. There's no boom."

The tanks didn't explode, or as Congressman Mac Thornberry said when he toured the new GTM plants recently, there is no boom.

Kelley got DOT approval and has started manufacturing the steel tanks wrapped in fiberglass in Amarillo thanks to a $2 million grant from the Amarillo Economic Development Corporation.

"We started looking for a manufacturing facility in North Carolina and Lubbock and the AEDC convinced us to stay in Amarillo," Kelley said.

The City of Amarillo had just bought a 100,000 square foot building on the east side of the railroad track south of Interstate 40 last year when Ben E. Keith moved their food distribution operation to a new, larger facility east of Amarillo.

"We spent the last year turning this building from a food freezer into a manufacturing facility," Kelley said, "which wasn't an easy task."

He said they are now in production. They started the first piece of pipe down the line on Memorial Day.

Kelley said the new tanks will handle any high pressurized gas. They are not gas specific.

"We're certified up to 4,000 psi," Kelley said.

While Thornberry, who is on the House Armed Services Committee, toured the factory, he asked about defense applications.

"You could forward deploy a GTM full of natural gas to run a generator at a MASH hospital, for instance," Kelley said. "It's less of a target than a gasoline tank."

Kelley said natural gas is inherently safer.

Ken Kelley stands by the new cylinders his sons' company, GTM, is manufacturing to hold highly compressed gas.

"Because of the wall thickness of our cylinders and our fiberglass over wrap," Kelley said, "we're safer than a diesel tank."

The cylinders are essentially steel pipes with half-inch thick steel walls over wrapped with fiberglass.

"When we're fully operational, they will be about 200 employees," Kelley said. "Today, we're at 25, but we're just starting."

Oddly, their market to date is overseas.

"Our first customers for these products are all outside the United States," Kelley said. "The first units are going to the Dominican Republic, Nigeria, South Africa, Peru, Mexico, New Zealand, Australia, and we have inquiries from 20 other countries."

Kelley said that natural gas is not the answer to the oil crisis, but it is one of the answers.

"There's not going to be a single fuel in the future like we've had for the last 100 years," he said.

Kelley said he thinks natural gas is a common sense answer to the energy problems in the near future.

"It's here today," Kelley said. He says it's a domestically sourced fuel that burns cleaner than gasoline or diesel and produces less pollution.

"And it's cheaper," he says.

The nationwide retail average for compressed natural gas at the pump, Kelley said, is $1.80 for a gasoline gallon equivalent.

"Gasoline is pushing four dollars," he noted.

Kelley said GTM can be a key part of the infrastructure as well as the transportation mode.

"You need storage and transportation of the gas," Kelley said. "The answer is right here."

Data indicates that the trucking industry burns 20 billion gallons of diesel every year.

"What if we converted the trucking industry to natural gas?" Kelley asked.

Natural gas is half the price of diesel on a diesel equivalent basis, he said.

"We would save the trucking industry $50 billion a year in fuel costs," Kelley said. "We would keep 60 million tons of pollution from entering the atmosphere because natural gas gives off 60 percent less nitrogen oxide and 90 percent less particulates."

He says it would also reduce imported oil by 1.3 million barrels a day.

United Supermarkets wishes to congratulate the graduating class of 2008 – especially these United Supermarkets team members. At United, we put our hearts and souls into supporting education in our communities. Whether it's through providing part-time jobs to students, helping employees save for college through our College Savings Plan, or giving generous support to schools and universities, United is glad to be a part of the quality education in our community.
