Chuck Wagon Recalls Days Of Texas Pioneers to Club Women

Graham Provides Variety of Entertainment for 250 Guests at District Meet; Allred Gives Eloquent Address

By MRS. L. N. CASON
Record News Society Editor

GRAHAM, Texas, April 21.—Reports of officers and department chairmen featured the morning sessions and club reports the afternoon sessions of the first district, T. F. W. C. convention meeting here. James V. Allred, attorney general of Texas, in a San Jacinto day address, paid a magnificent tribute to the Texas constitution, which he defended against lobbyists.

A chuck wagon supper extended by courtesy of the chamber of commerce and the men's service clubs of the city was the unique entertainment of the afternoon. All delegates were taken for a drive to Lake Eddleman, two billion gallon capacity reservoir, then to the country club where they were seated and saw the church wagon come over a hill to the accompaniment of cowboy music and noice, firearms adding to the excitement. A real chuck wagon was drawn by eight mules. All hosts wore cowboy hats and many wore chaps. A real cowboy band furnished the music.

The evening program was "16, Rue Pigalle," a musical inprovision on the life of Chopin given at the Memorial auditorium by Mrs. Pearl Calhoun Davis and Charles Kiker of Wichita Falls, Charles Moore, Helen Emery, Charles Tabor, Helen Gertrude Sparks, Edith Ritter Moss,

HANGING CLUES HINT WOMAN

Jealousy Seen as Motive In Girls Death

SAN DIEGO, Calif., April 21. (UP)—A record of "good times," pencilled in a girlish hand in a small brown diary by Louise Teuber and guarded by a tiny gold lock, furnished the most important aid today by officers attempting to learn who hanged her on lonely Black mountain.

The brief notations made by the 17-year-old girl "who had more dates than any girl in town," were disclosed in part by authorities, but items containing the names of married and engaged men were withheld.

Sheriff Ed Cooper was working on the theory that perhaps a jealous woman had suspended the almost nude girl from a tree on the mountain Saturday at midnight.

Nails Pointed

Scratches of Louise's body, Cooper pointed out, were narrow and were made by sharp-pointed fingernails. The body, hanged by a rope over the branch of an oak tree, was lifted only a short distance from the ground, causing Cooper to believe that the killer was unable to lift the entire weight.

Meanwhile, a hinted secret marriage of Miss Teuber was being checked. Blanche Webb, a former employe of the 5 and 10 cent store in which Miss Teuber worked, reported that she believed Louise was secretly married to a sailor or a marine.

It was reported here the girl's purported husband was assigned to a war vessel in Los Angeles harbor.

Photographer Sought

An itinerant commercial photographer, believed to have seen Louise in an automobile with a man after she finished work Saturday night, was hunted for questioning. He has been missing for 24 hours and Sheriff Cooper believed the man fled rather than be questioned. Cooper said he thought the man was last except the slayer to see Louise alive.

Another photographer, Harold Newby, retired navy man, was arraigned in municipal court today on a charge of disturbing lewd pictures. Among them were nude photographs of Louise, taken in a glade here recently. Newby claimed they were art subjects. He was placed under $500 bond and his preliminary hearing set for May 7 after he entered a plea of not guilty.

Chinese Kidnapers Defy U. S. Effort at Rescue

HANKOW, China, April 21. (AP)—Bandits held Miss Esther Nordlund, Miss Augusta Nelson and Rev. Oscar Anderson, Lutheran missionaries from Chicago, captives today despite efforts of the American and Chinese governments. Although captured four days ago near Kingchow, 304 miles up the Yangtse river from here, details were unobtainable.

Wichitan Heads Hospital Group

SAN ANGELO, Texas, April 21. (AP)—The Northwest Texas Clinic and Hospital Managers association closed its annual convention here this afternoon after selecting Fort Worth as the next meeting place and electing H. R. Fuller of Wichita Falls as president to succeed C. E. Hunt of Lubbock. Other officers elected were H. L. Barner, Fort Worth, first vice president; E. M. Collier, Abilene, second vice president, and directors, Miss Ara Davis of Temple and W. V. Jarratt of San Angelo.

Three French Officers Ousted From Germany

KOENIGSBERG, Germany, April 21. (US)—Three French officers left Germany tonight "by request."

They were accused of espionage activities. They were not prosecuted because German officials explained that they did not want to bring about any international complications.

Slain Child's Father Asks Guard As 'Confession' Report Spreads

SAN DIEGO, Calif., April 21. (UP)—John Brooks, whose 10-year-old daughter, Virginia, was kidnaped and her body left on Camp Kearney mesa, asked police tonight for protection.

Brooks was in fear of his life as a result of an asserted radio broadcast to the effect that he had confessed to the murder of his daughter. No such confession has been made, police said.

The father appeared at the East San Diego police station tonight and asked that he either be locked up for the night or that a guard be placed at his home.

Newspaper reports in the East San Diego district in which the Brooks home is located, said small crowds of men had gathered at stores and various informal meeting places and voiced suggestions that they "ought to go and get the —."

Police said they would attempt to learn what radio station broadcast the report, in the chance that the actual murderer might have caused it to be broadcast as a news item.

Reports that police suspected Brooks have been current here almost since Virginia disappeared in February. When her body was found on the lonely mesa on March 11, the reports gained headway and when the last of the known suspects was eliminated, the rumors involving Brooks grew. The reports said Brooks had long suspected he was not the girl's father.

At no time have police made any statements involving the father, but the reports never have died down.

TOUR REVEALS RESOURCES OF TRADE SECTION

Wichitans Pay Good Will Visit to 10 Towns Of Area

FRIENDSHIP PLEDGED

Need of Better Roads To Texas Stressed By Okla. Speakers

By FRED L. HAKETT

WAURIKA, Okla., April 21.—To the hundred or more trippers of the first trade tour of the manufacturers and jobbers division of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce and the Junior chamber of commerce, the name of this prosperous little city of Southern Oklahoma should be been "Eureka," because finding of it climaxed the happy ending of a profitable day in which the markets of the mertopolis of Northwest Texas had been extolled to hundreds of business men and citizens of two states—Oklahoma and Texas.

The trippers left Wichita Falls a few minutes after 8 o'clock Tuesday morning and at 9 o'clock the first parade was held through the business section of Henrietta. This city had an excellent turnout of its citizenship for such an early hour. Judge J. P. Williams, secretary of the chamber of commerce, met the Wichita delegation. After the first band numbers Frank O. Moore, mayor of Henrietta, welcomed the trippers and spoke highly of Wichita Falls as a neighboring city. The response was made by J. E. Winegart.

Bellevue Prosperous

Bellevue was the next stop. This splendid little city is located about midway between Henrietta and Bowie. It is a prosperous agricultural community. The address of welcome was made by E. W. Cox, editor of the Bellevue News, who dwelt upon the high class of citizenship and the prosperous condition of the people, considering the depressed condition that had confronted the nation for so long. He said few people in the Bellevue community had required Red Cross aid. In discussing the schools he stated that the standard had been built up to 21 units with the University of Texas and the schools also had four units in English. The speaker stated their citizenship was "Wichita Falls minded" and were always pleased to visit Wichita Falls when in need of things that could not be obtained from the home town merchants.

The response to the welcome address by Editor Cox was made by J. E. Winegart, who stated that the purpose of this trade trip was not to attract business away from home town merchants but to have merchants in the Wichita Falls trade territory patronize the manufacturers and jobbers of his city.

He made it plain that every man and woman should be loyal to his home town, but when necessity forced them to go out of town for any item that the merchants of Wichita Falls would appreciate their business.

The next stop was Bowie, major city of Montague county. Here the address of welcome was delivered by Mayor T. J. Wright, who said, "I hope your visit here today will cement more closely the happy friendship that has so long existed."

Dudley B. Foy, assistant manager of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, seconded. He touched upon the man after whom the city was named, James Bowie, who died when the Alamo was captured by Santa Anna. The speaker spoke of the friendship that had so prevailed between Bowie and Wichita Falls and predicted the friendship would continue because it was the desire of the citizenship of Wichita Falls that it should.

The next stop was Montague, county seat of Montague county, and about midway between Bowie and Nocona. Montague is an old town and some of the foremost citizens of Wichita Falls got their start either in the little town or some of the towns in Montague county.

"Bowie gave to Wichita Falls the late Jos. A. Kemp," stated W. D. Smith, tax assessor of Montague

Gangsters Blamed In Kidnaping

ST. LOUIS, April 21. (UP)—With Dr. Isaac J. Kelley Jr., missing 24 hours, his large coupe found abandoned on a country road and his heiress wife hysterically offering "anything they ask" for his safe return, police announced tonight that they believed him the victim of the same gang which kidnaped a wealthy Wisconsin brewer last week.

The gang, an offshoot of the notorius St. Louis "cuckoos," has been accused of engineering most of the nine kidnapings here in the last few months and many of the similar crimes throughout the midwest in which rich business men have been held for ransom.

Search for Dr. Kelley, one of St. Louis' most prominent eye, ear and nose specialists, spread through a 100-mile radius about the city. Illinois and Wisconsin detectives who came to Southern Illinois to seek the captors of Brewer Fred J. Blumer, aided in the hunt.

TRIO FREED IN BUCKLEY TRIAL

Radio Announcer's Death Remains Unsolved

DETROIT, April 21. (UP)—The jury in the Jerry Buckley murder trial tonight returned a verdict of not guilty, freeing all three of the defendants.

The trio—Ted Pizzino, New York tailor, Joe Bommarito, alleged St. Louis gunman, and Angelo Livecchi—were accused of killing the commentator of radio station WMBC because of his opposition to Charles Bowles, recalled mayor of Detroit.

The jury had been instructed by Judge Edward J. Jeffries to return a verdict either for first degree murder or acquittal.

Pair Rearrested

Pizzino and Livecchi were rearrested immediately, the former on murder charges and the latter on an old accusation of jumping a bond in New York state.

Bommarito, after shaking hands gleefully with members of the jury, walked away to freedom after police had announced they could find no charge upon which to hold him.

Livecchi was charged with a pay roll robbery in Rochester, N. Y., in 1926 and with evading a $20,000 bond set to hold him. Pizzino was indicted by a grand jury on charges of killing James Cannon and Joseph Cullen, asserted Chicago racketeers, shot to death on July 3.

The murder case was given to the jury at 10 a. m. yesterday after seven months of grand jury investigation and eight weeks of trial.

Slaying Follows Vote

Gerald E. Buckley was shot to death in the La Salle hotel lobby a few blocks from police headquarters early in the morning of last July 23. He had been the bitterest opponent of Mayor Bowles and he was killed two hours after the people had voted Bowles out of office at a special election.

The jury disbelieved the state's chief witness, George Jackson, colored porter of the hotel. Jackson testified that he saw Bommarito and Pizzino enter the hotel lobby with drawn guns and walk toward the chair in which Buckley was sitting. Livecchi was accused of being the "finger man" for the slayers.

Oklahoma Nitro Blast Rocks Cities

SEMINOLE, Okla., April 21. (AP)—Residents in a wide section of Central Oklahoma tonight reported a brief tremor which they believed was a light earthquake. Windows were reported broken in some places in the area, and towns within a radius of 40 miles felt the shock, first reports said.

Residents of half a dozen towns reported that the tremor resembled an earthquake. The audience in a theater here felt the shock and soon calls were pouring into the telephone office for information.

Ada, Konowa, Wewoka, Holdenville, Maud and Bing were points reporting the slight shock, of only a few seconds' duration.

HOUSE VOTES ON ROAD BOND ISSUE TODAY

Favorable Ballot Would Put Amendment To People

PROPONENTS GAIN

Both Sides Claim Victory On Eve of Decisive Action

AUSTIN, April 21. (UP)—A three-year contest over a state highway bond issue for Texas will reach a climax tomorrow morning when the house of representatives will vote upon it.

Submission of a $212,000,000 issue was approved by the senate week before last. The house engrossed the resolution by a vote of 80 to 60. To pass finally, it must secure 100 of the possible 150 house votes.

On a motion to have the speaker notify all absentees that the deciding vote will be taken tomorrow, advocates of the bonds polled 84 votes. Shortly afterward a floor conference was held by leaders of bond opponents. Tonight both sides were claiming victory.

Bond proponents have a slight advantage. If they fail to get 100 votes tomorrow, the measure merely lies dormant and they can bring it up later in the session. If they muster the 100 votes, submission is definitely ordered.

If it is submitted voters will cast ballots on two separate propositions Nov. ?. One will be issuance of $112,000,000 state bonds to retire county and district road bonds. The other will be on issuance of $100,000,000 state bonds for new construction.

Today the house voted finally in favor of the Trinity river navigation project calling for a nine-foot waterway from Galveston bay to Dallas and Fort Worth. It now goes to the senate.

The afternoon was spent on the house appropriation bill for eleemosynary institutions. It totals $10,104,000. The senate bill for the same purpose appropriates $11,505,000.

The senate named its conferees on congressional redistricting but no session was held with the house conferees.

Oklahoma Woman Slain by Bandits

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 21. (UP)—Mrs. Neola Smith, 40, was shot and killed here tonight by bandits while driving north of the Oklahoma state capital with her husband, Norman A. Smith.

Smith said two bandits jumped on the running board of their car and that one of them shot the woman when she slapped him.

Police said Smith and his wife have had domestic trouble.

Trio of Congressmen Addresses Texas House

AUSTIN, April 21. (UP)—Three congressmen addressed the Texas house of representatives today—Clay Stone Briggs of Galveston, J. J. Mansfield of Columbus and Marvin Dies, who was elected but has not yet served. Briggs was loudly applauded when he declared prospects bright for the Democrats to organize the next house and elect John Garner of Uvalde speaker.

ADVERTISING 17 CENTURIES AGO

EVEN from the very earliest development of trade, there has always been some sort of an appeal made between buyer and seller. At Stourbridge Fair, England, in the third century, traders cried out their wares before booths. This was the first form of advertising. The modern method of printing developed in the fifteenth century, but it was not until 1647 that the first advertisement appeared in a newspaper, although newspapers had been in use since 1622. Today we have hundreds of advertisements appear every day. In the Classified Advertising columns of the Daily Times-Record News there are advertisements to satisfy every want. W. B. Hamilton Accepts Estes' Challenge For 'Mutual Retirement'

Anti-Proration Leader's Proposition Met by Wichitan; Rail Board Draws Orders for East Texas Curb

W. B. Hamilton, long a leader in Wichita Falls oil circles and recently successful in East Texas operations, will resign as chairman of the Henderson area's advisory proration committee in response to a proposition made by Carl Estes of Tyler that he (Estes) would forego a place on the East Texas special committee if Hamilton would quit his post.

Reports of the agreement received by The Record News Tuesday night said Mr. Hamilton had accepted the proposition of the Tyler man. Estes has been the bitter leader of the East Texas anti-proration fight, while Mr. Hamilton has urged the orderly development of the new field. Estes issued the following statement at Austin:

"By actual agreement, W. B. Hamilton, chairman of the advisory committee for the Henderson area, and Carl L. Estes, elected to the special committee of 11 members of the East Texas Lease, Royalty and Producers' association, withdraw in the interest of harmony."

Mr. Hamilton, in Dallas Tuesday night on business, declined to comment on the reports.

BOARD DRAWS CURB ORDERS

AUSTIN, April 21. (UP)—New Texas Railroad commission orders for proration of oil production in East Texas were being drawn tonight to become effective May 1. The quantities used are amounts agreed upon in a 60-day truce entered into and signed this afternoon by prorationists and their opponents. The agreement ends temporarily a fight that took on a nationwide scope.

The new production schedule, in barrels allowed daily, is:

Starting—	Joiner	Bateman	Lathrop	Total
	Fields—
May 1	60,000	40,000	30,000	130,000
May 15	64,000	44,000	32,000	140,000
June 1	66,000	46,000	33,000	145,000
June 15	68,000	48,000	34,000	150,000

Estes Suit Waits

No judicial order was entered in the injunction suit of Carl Estes of Tyler against proration of the field. It remains on the docket until July 1. No effort will be made to enforce the injunction before that date, but the agreement made today is to have no effect on rights of any parties after July 1.

Eleven central advisory committeemen were suggested to assist the railroad commission in carrying out proration. This commitee will report directly to the railroad commission and not to or through the semi-official central advisory committee of oil men whose activities were attacked by the East Texans in hearings on proration.

Field advisory committees appointed at recent meetings will continue to function but will report to the foregoing committee.

All parties to the truce agreed to cooperate with the railroad commission in enforcing the common carrier and common purchaser laws.

Pact Saved

At one time this afternoon, the negotiations, which have been carefully nursed since last Saturday morning, were about to fall through. This was when prorationists want-

Gold Teeth of Quanah Man Serve To Identify His Twin on Trial Here

Strategy held the stage before Judge Allan D. Montgomery in the 30th district court Tuesday for several minutes during the trial of Oda Tilton on charges of theft over $50 and theft from the person. The state emerged victorious through a coup engineered by Assistant District Attorney George Anderson.

Tilton, together with a woman whose case is to be called later, was charged with having taken about $350 from a man at a local hotel on the night of Feb. 6. They were arrested in Quanah early the next morning, according to the history of the case as reviewed in court here Tuesday.

'NONA' REES WOUNDED IN SAN ANTONIO

Three-Letter Man Found Shot Through Head In Store

RECOVERY DOUBTFUL

Crack Player Ended Brilliant University Career Last Spring

SAN ANTONIO, April 21. (AP)—City detectives Tuesday night were attempting to explain the mysterious shooting of F. A. "Nona" Rees, formerly a star athlete of Brackenridge senior school and the University of Texas. He was found shortly after noon shot behind the left ear with a .22 caliber bullet and was leaning against the wall of the C. and S. Sporting Goods store, of which he was proprietor.

He was found by Garrett Jackson, negro employe of the Plaza hotel garage, who called passersby who rushed Rees to the Santa Rosa hospital. Hospital physicians announced Tuesday night that Rees was not expected to live. The bullet was lodged in the center of his brain.

Detectives W. T. Carver and W. W. Thompson were investigating the case Tuesday night. No powder burns were found on the back of Rees' head, according to physicians at the hospital. A .22 caliber rifle was found leaning in a chair not far from Rees, according to detectives. It had been fired once.

Rees was released from the hospital last week after recovering from a fall at the Broadway sporting goods store where he had been working.

HAD BRILLIANT SPORT RECORD

AUSTIN, April 21. (AP)—"Nona" Rees, who was found with a bullet wound in his head today, was a three-letter man at the University of Texas where he was one of the most popular students.

Rees was quarterback on the Longhorn football team, and guard in basket ball and catcher on the baseball nine. He wound up his athletic career last spring.

Rees was a member of the Sigma Nu social fraternity.

Rees was well known in San Antonio for his work on the Brackenridge High school football team in 1925 when he was quarterback and captain. At the University of Texas he was a three-letter man, and was one of the most popular students. He was a quarterback on the Longhorn football team, captain and guard in basket ball, and catcher on the baseball nine. He wound up his athletic career there last spring and since that time has been employed by the C. and S. Sporting Goods company of Austin.

Recently he was sent to San Antonio to take over the management of the Broadway Sporting Goods company, when the company was bought out by the Austin firm.

Recovery Doubtful

The Sporting Goods company had been using the Plaza hotel garage as storage space for some of its goods.

Rees was taken to the Santa Rosa hospital when he was found there Tuesday afternoon. Physicians at the hospital said that Rees is not expected to live.

While a student at the University of Texas Rees was a member of the Friars, an honorary organization. In 1930 students picked him as the best liked athlete on the University of Texas campus.

It was in 1929 that Rees grabbed the opening kick-off of the Texas-S. M. U. game, and breaking into the clear, ran to the Mustangs' 20-yard line when he was dragged down from behind by Weldon "Speedy" Mason. In making the tackle Mason received a head injury which kept him out of school for several weeks.

TRADE TOUR BIG SUCCESS

Royal Welcome Given to C-C Delegation on Trip

county and the spokesman of the little town. "I remember when Mr. Kemp pleaded that Bowie make an effore to become the trade center for this vast and rich section of Northwest Texas. Mr. Kemp later moved to Wichita Falls where he opened a wholesale grocery house. The citizens of Montague county appreciate what Wichita Falls has done for our own Jimmie Allred. He is a citizen of your city now but Montague county claims him. I played baseball in Wichita Falls 40 years ago and have always liked your city. We find it an enjoyable city to visit and I predict that Wichita Falls will continue to grow and prosper because yours is a citizenship who are progressive."

Luncheon at Nocona

The response to this address was made by Judge John P. Marrs who told of many prominent men of Wichita Falls who had come from Montague county. He pledged the continued support of Wichita Falls in the upbuilding of that county.

Nocona was a luncheon stop and much preparation had been made to entertain the trippers. The usual parade was held through the business section when all the trippers, together with citizens and members of the Rotary and Lions clubs, were served a bountiful repast by the ladies of the First Christian church.

The Nocona meeting was presided over by T. J. Waggoner Jr., who introduced Rev. E. L. Moody, pastor of the First Baptist church, who gave the invocation. Judge H. S. Callaway, also mayor of Nocona, delivered the welcome address, and he spoke highly of the people of Wichita Falls and the chamber of commerce. "Friends, and it is a pleasure to call you that," said the speaker. "The citizens of Nocona, Rotary and Lions clubs are proud to entertain you today. We are glad that you came down and visit with us and learn what we manufacture in Nocona and that you can buy from us, as you do. We want to buy what we can in Wichita Falls. We appreciate what you people have done in aiding us to secure a better highway to the east and west. We are handicapped in getting to Wichita Falls but the day is coming when there will be a paved road direct into Wichita Falls.

Nocona's Wealth

"We manufacture in Nocona boots, shoes, spurs, bits and leather novelties. Our city is surrounded with gas and oil wells. We have rich agricultural lands and the finest of ranch lands. You will find here a welcome the whole city over. We practice friendship among our neighbors as well as ourselves. We have more interest, however, in Wichita Falls than either Fort Worth or Dallas."

Mayor Walter Nelson Jr., of Wichita Falls responded, and his talk was of unusual interest. Many interesting stories were told and the large number of diners were kept in an uproar. In fact a member of the Lions club said it was the best Lions luncheon he had ever attended.

Dudley B. Foy also spoke at the Nocona luncheon and said that the purpose of the trip was to learn more about the country that Wichita Falls jobbers and manufacturers desire to serve and also learn what other towns are manufacturing that is not made in Wichita Falls. He pledged the cooperation of the chamber of commerce in assisting Nocona in any of its problems.

Milton Gaines invited the Nocona citizenship and especially ex-service men to visit Wichita Falls Thursday to hear the national commander of the American Legion, Ralph T. O'Neil, speak. Wichita Falls is one of three cities that is to be visited and Wichita Falls was honored because of its record of having the largest American Legion post in Texas.

A stop was made at Ringgold where the pupils of the public schools were entertained. The pupils were called into the new auditorium by W. D. George, superintendent, who also delivered the welcome address. The response was made by Judge Marrs.

Across the Red river into Oklahoma and the first stop at Terral. Near this city a great concrete and steel bridge is finished over the river but it will be some months before the structure can be used, due to the delay in building the approaches on the Texas side. A concrete road, yet unopened, has been laid from Terral to the bridge.

Terral in Rich Valley

Terral is situated in one of the richest agricultural sections of the great Red River valley. It has a rich trade area and the lands are thickly settled. The people there are Wichita Falls minded, according to the address of welcome made by L. M. Hohstadt, superintendent of the public schools, who dismissed the pupils so they could enjoy the program. "The big free bridge brings Wichita Falls closer to us. Some day there will be a paved road from Nocona into Wichita Falls and we will not be far from it, and a concrete highway all the way if Texas will just connect with highway 5 to the new bridge," said the speaker. The response was made by T. J. Waggoner Jr.

A short drive through a beautiful countryside, beset with farms intensively cultivated, woodlands, fields of waving grain and pasture lands that were dotted with acre-beds of beautiful wild flowers gave the trippers renewed enrgy and the trip was all to short in reaching Ryan from Terral.

Ryan is a fine little city, situated near the Red river and commands a trade from a long distance. Near the town flows Cache creek, a stream that offers much to those who love the great outdoors.

Prof. G. J. Williams of the Ryan public schools delivered the address and lauded high the spirit of Wichita Falls. He said the people of Ryan would like to have Wichita Falls in Oklahoma, but as their citizenship was half-Texan that they could love the city as much as if in their own state. He stated that the present road, rather the best road into Wichita Falls, is 54 miles in length, but if the road and a bridge could be constructed via Charlie, Clay county, that the distance would be 38 miles. He also complimented highly the daily newspapers of Wichita Falls and gove them much credit in the upbuilding of the city and bringing it to its importance as a commercial center.

The response was made by Fred L. Haskett, representing The Record News and Daily Times. The speaker stated that it had been a pleasant trip and one that was really educational to many of the party. Few realized there was such a wonderful farming country that could be found along the north side of the Red river and gave as his opinion the finest farming section in Oklahoma extended eastward from Tipton down the Red river, both in Texas and Oklahoma. He also said the purpose of the tour was not to gain retail trade from neighboring cities, but to encourage the merchants, bankers and professional men of the cities visited to come to Wichita Falls and make Wichita Falls of service to them.

Tour Ends at Waurika

Waurika, connected directly to Wichita Falls by rail and highways, is one of the best little cities in Southern Oklahoma. Its clean, broad main street was jammed with hundreds of citizens and school children to greet the Wichita Falls delegation. The parade was held and the address of welcome extended by Bert Ralston, who asked that the visitors note that on every show window was a sign reading, "Welcome Boosters."

The response to the address made by Mr. Ralston was delivered by T. J. Waggoner Jr., who thanked the speaker for the many complimentary things said about Wichita Falls and hoped that the city that faith built would never be disappointing to Waurika's citizenship.

After the musical program the trippers broke up for the dinner meal and the big street dance that started shortly after 8 o'clock. It was the end of a perfect day and pronounced by every tripper the greatest in the history of the senior and junior chambers of commerce of Wichita Falls.

At each stop entertainment was provided by a quartet composed of L. R. Thurman, J. S. Minton, W. P. Lacey and Leo Underwood. J. S. Pittman played the accompaniment. Miss Catherine Sue Ralston proved very popular in her latest song numbers. Miss Mildred Anderson played the accompaniment.

Leo Underwood's band never failed to please, and especially this trip as so many schools were dismissed for the concerts. The master of ceremonies was Mayor Walter Nelson Jr. Jim Durnal was in charge of the committee on arrangements and Wilburn Page, manager of the Junior chamber of commerce, was kept busy at every city and town in seeing that the program was carried out without delay.

Death of Ed Overholser Brings Many Expressions of Regret Here

Oklahoma C-C Leader was Known as "Most Representative Oklahoman" Over Wide Section

News of the death of Ed Overholster, prominent Oklahoman and president of the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce, at an Oklahoma City hospital Tuesday was received with many expressions of regret by his friends here.

John Boswell, manager of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, announced Tuesday afternoon that a large delegation of members from here would attend funeral services.

It will be recalled, Mr. Boswell said, that Mr. Overholster headed an Oklahoma City delegation to Wichita Falls last November when a road meeting was held here to secure the paving of U. S. highway No. 277 from Lawton to the state line. At the time, Mr. Boswell added, the Oklahoman made an outstanding address to the numerous delegates from cities in Oklahoma and Texas, although he was not feeling well at the time. A few days later he was stricken with the illness that resulted in his death.

Citizens here described him as having been a warm friend of Wichita Falls for many years. He has a host of personal friends and acquaintances here and was said to have more friends in the Southwest than any other man.

DEATH CLAIMS OVERHOLSTER AT AGE OF 63

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 21. (UP)—Ed Overholser, president of the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce since 1922, died at Polyclinic hospital.

Death came at 12:23 p. m. after a long illness that became critical last Saturday. He had been suffering from a chronic stomach ailment. He was 63 years old.

For a week, Overholser had clung to life after physicians had abandoned hope for his recovery. He was kept alive for three days by stimulants.

His wife and son, Edward Jr., were at the bedside when he died.

Ed Overholser was looked upon throughout the Southwest as Oklahoma City's most representative citizen. He had a part in every forward movement in the city for many years.

He was a natural leader, adept at moulding public sentiment and galvanizing public thought into effective action through "united manpower," a force he sincerely believed could accomplish any worth while purpose.

He was recognized throughout the Southwest as an authority on community development.

Overholser was born at Sullivan, Ind., June 20, 1868. His father was Henry Overholser, Oklahoma pioneer and one of the organizers of the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce and its first president.

Overholser was a member of English Lutheran church, of the Masonic order and the Lions club.

Active Since 1890

Immediately upon his arrival here in 1890 he organized a company of militia. He was the first secretary of the State Fair association and served several years as manager of the city waterworks.

He was accredited with laying out and developing the townsite of Stroud, in 1897-98, when the Frisco railroad extended its line from Bristow to Oklahoma City. He also constructed and operated the first telephone long distance line in Oklahoma.

He served as member of the school board and as county commissioner here.

Chided by his father for lack of accomplishment—although he was then a successful business man, Overholser told his father: "I'll do everything you have done and do you one better—I'll become mayor."

He defeated Will Gault Jr., son of the man who had defeated his father for mayor.

The chamber of commerce in 1922 was $26,000 in debt. Overholser was asked to become president.

"Gentlemen, when you have placed your checks totaling $26,000 on the table before me, I'll take it," he replied.

NOT SO SCOTCH

Golfers Foot Big Part Of Cost of Operating Weeks Park

Estimates may vary as to the relative number of persons who use the grounds at Weeks park playing golf and the number who go there for other forms of recreation, but those who play golf foot most of the maintenance bill. Figures in black and white at the office of City Clerk W. E. McBroom prove that.

Upkeep of the whole 260-acre tract, including trails, playground equipment, care of grounds and golf course, during the fiscal year just ended cost $11,698.

Considerably more than half this amount—$7,112.25, to be exact—was paid with golf club memberships and green fees.

And golf is known as the old Scotch game!

BAYLOR EXES HOLD BANQUET

Bryan W. Lovelace Elected New President

Bryan W. Lovelace was named president of the Baylor Alumni association in the Wichita Falls area Tuesday night at the Woman's Forum when about 70 persons, including more than 60 Baylorites, attended the annual banquet and business meeting of the organization.

Mr. Lovelace succeeds Dr. George T. Singleton, who presided during Tuesday night's meeting and was toastmaster for the banquet. Other officers chosen by the association for the ensuing year are Dr. C. P. Standlev, first vice president; Miss Esther Williams, second vice president; Miss Lona Bell Spruell, secretary-treasurer, and Dr. J. B. Casey, publicity director.

Carey Chief Speaker

Dr. E. H. Carey, chairman of the medical board of Baylor university, was guest of honor at the affair, and also the principal speaker. He outlined briefly the growth of the medical school at Dallas which has for almost 30 years been a part of Baylor university. Doctor Carey declared that there are higher standards of medical study maintained in schools in this country than in any other nation in the world, and expressed the conviction that few, if any, are producing more adequately trained doctors than Baylor Medical school.

"We have adopted a policy which has had much to do with the excellence of our faculty," the speaker said, "and which our graduates have 'had to like.' If they want to qualify as teachers in Baylor Medical, well and good; but for such appointment, they must compete with the very best minds from all parts of the world. They must be willing to do that, and must survive such competition."

Doctor Carey discussed the importance of a medical school and a large hospital to a city, and listed some of the service given without charge to hundreds of Dallas citizens during the past year by faculty and students of the school.

Resolutions honoring the memory of Dr. J. W. Cantwell, a former Baylor student, and regretting his recent death, were adopted by the body. A message of greeting to Dr. S. P. Brooks, Baylor university president now ill at Marlin, also was voted. Mrs. Carey, also a guest of honor at the banquet, was eulogized in a brief talk by Dr. A. D. Pattillo.

Musical Entertainment

Entertainment for the evening was of a musical nature. Lead by Miss Jane McCulloch, retiring secretary, the group sang "That Good Old Baylor Line," with Miss Spruell accompanying. The Mahaffey Studios male quartet, composed of Jack McWilliams and Willard Underwood, tenors, and Ted Williams and Louis Bond, basses, sang Protheroe's "De Sandman," and a spiritual melody, "Heav'n," with Mrs. A. H. Mahaffey accompanying. William E. Huff, head of the Spudder baseball club, gave an impromptu talk relative to Baylor's athletic prospects for the current year. Arrangements for Tuesday night's banquet were in charge of Doctor Singleton and Miss McCulloch. Olney, Electra, Dallas, Burkburnett, Archer City and Wichita Falls were represented in the attendance.

Checks passed in each instance exceeded $10 in amount. The women, who arrived here last week from St. Louis, resided at a downtown hotel, and wrote a fictitious street address on the checks passed. The two were being held in the city jail Tuesday night to await the filing of charges Wednesday.

Tongue-Twisting Names Adorn Trees

Some of 'Em Also Bear Fruit, Says Expert

"On your left is a ziziphus jujuba tree, also known as the Mu Shing Hong jujube, while over here you may see the Lang jujube, covered with lucious date-like fruit."

In days to come visitors to Wichita Falls' public parks may, or may not, hear attendants describe plants in such weird Oriental syllables as that.

City Park Superintendent C. C. Bunnenberg said Monday his department is caring for 130 plants of various foreign trees and shrubs in the hope of finding those adaptable to this climate. The two varieties of jujubes are native of Tsintse, Shansi, China, and there are other cuttings from many distant parts of the world.

The park department now is caring for more than 100,000 young plants, both domestic and foreign. The nursery at Weeks park contains approximately 75,000 while the greenhouse on Fifth street shelters about 20,000.

Seed produced trees and shrubs in Texas last year were exceptionally good and the department has taken advantage of this condition to increase its nursery stock, Mr. Bunnenberg explained.

Other varieties of foreign plants include the shrub Ephedra Distachya from Peshawar, India; the flowered evergreen, Escallonia, from Surrey, England, and the Euonymus Japonicus from Algeria.

The United States department of agriculture furnishes the settings of foreign plants in exchange for reports on their progress and adaptability in various parts of the country.

Twins Puzzle Court Officers

him from their posts behind the defense attorney. After a moment's pause, he declared with assurance:

"Well, I arrested one of those two men there. The one I arrested has no gold teeth in his mouth, but the other one has a whole front row of them."

It became apparent immediately that a twin brother of the defendant had been included in the defense staff. The two were asked by the prosecution to show their teeth. They declined to open their mouths. Remembering that the defense shortly before this point in the trial had invoked the rule requiring that all witnesses in the case be kept out of the courtroom, Mr. Anderson adopted new tactics.

The court was asked to swear one Ona Tilton as a witness for the state. One of the twins arose, and was sworn in, there being really nothing else to do. Under the rule already applied, he was automatically required to leave the courtroom. Taking further precaution to establish the identity of the remaining twin as Oda Tilton, Mr. Anderson called the departed brother at once to the stand. In reply to questions, he promptly admitted that he had not been arrested in Quanah for the alleged offense. Furthermore, he admitted that his present molar equipment contains considerable gold. And to make a complete story of it, he obediently parted his lips, and there they were—all flashing in a row. He was dismissed, and Sheriff Hawkins again resumed the stand to complete his testimony.

The defendant in the case was sentenced to three years in prison when the jury reported shortly after 6:30 o'clock.

Injunction Suit Looms For Future

ed a court order entered doing away with the injunction secured by Estes on April 7.

On advice of former Gov. Dan Moody that this would "clip his wings" against future action, Estes declined to agree to such an order. He and Governor Moody started to leave the conference. They were called back and an agreement effective for 60 days with the court order undisturbed was then made.

Unless the stabilization plan has worked out satisfactorily in the 60 days, court action will still be open. Points the ani-prorationists say they have gained during the contest are:

The state central proration committee is eliminated so far as East Texas is concerned and an East Texas committee substituted with 11 members, six of whom are from the ranks of the East Texas Lease, Royalty and Producers association. Local advistory committees appointed at Longview and Henderson are subordinated to this committee of 11. Allowable production is increased. Fifty thousand barrels a day was first proposed by the state central advisory committee.

EAST TEXAS C. C. FAVORS PRORATION

MARLIN, Texas, April 21. (UP)—Regulated proration of the East Texas oil fields was favored in a resolution passed at the closing session of the fifth annual convention of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce here today.

"Unregulated proration is folly, and ruinous to East Texas land owners," the resolution read in part. The resolution recommended the oil be brought to the surface on the basis of balancing supply with demand.

Gangsters Blamed For Kidnaping

without payment of ransom in Northern Illinois, Mrs. Kelley, who inherited the oil millions of her father, the late William Cullen McBride, retained a lawyer to arrange possible negotiations and announced that she would pay "almost any ransom" for her husband's safe return.

She remained with the attorney in Dr. Kelley's mansion, waiting for word of her husband. The first clue was his black Lincoln coupe, in which he drove last night after an unknown man had asked him to treat an emergency case of earache.

The car was found six miles west of St. Louis. Dr. Kelley's medicine case was on the seat while footprints on the floor indicated that two men had ridden with him.

"I know he was kidnaped," Mrs. Kelley told the United Press in recounting how she had heard her husband arrange by telephone to meet the asserted patient. "He never failed to call me on the telephone when he was going to be out all night, no matter how important the case was. The police told me that nobody knows about my husband being called into the country. I just know he's being held by a band of kidnapers."

Dr. Kelley left his home on exclusive Portland place during a driving rain about 10 p. m., his wife said, after a man had called twice seeking his aid.

Paroled Electra Prisoner Spurns Ticket to Walk Home With Family

Bates Family Ignores Worn Shoe Soles in Enthusiastic Homecoming After Babies Win Plea

By MYRTLE RUSSELL
Record News Special Correspondent

ELECTRA, Texas, April 21.—When members of the L. L. Bates family arrived at their home in Electra late Sunday afternoon, they were footsore and weary but united and happy. Mrs. Bates and her three small children had succeeded in bringing "daddy" home from the Oklahoma state prison.

On the afternoon of Friday, April 10, Mrs. Bates, her small son, Robert Wesley, and the little girls, Buena Marcile and Rilla, left Electra, hitchhiking to McAllister, Okla., in an attempt to get a parole for the father serving a prison term.

"If you don't do for yourself," Mrs. Bates says, "other people won't do it for you," and that's why they started out walking. The fact that they had only 28 cents in cash did not stop them. When they became tired and hungry they would "think of daddy" and that kept them going, the wife said. They caught rides into McAllister and there they learned that they would have to go to Oklahoma City. Once again they started out walking.

Murray Stopped

Mrs. Bates' attempts to see Governor Murray were futile at first as she could not get by his office force. All the family could do was to wait and keep hoping. They sat on the lawn at the capitol building waiting for an opportunity to see the governor. Finally of the afternoon of the third day, when Governor Murray was leaving he saw them and stopped to speak to them.

"Are you Governor Murray?" Mrs. Bates asked him. He replied that he was.

"I want to see you about getting my husband out of prison," she told him. Upon learning that he did not discuss business after office hours, she asked if she could see him the next day. "Possibly so," she was told.

The next morning Mrs. Bates was waiting for him by 7:30 and finally succeeded in seeing him. She had no trouble in securing the parole and the governor's secretary, Dexter Taylor, made out the papers and took up a collection for her.

Likes "Bill"

"What do you think of Governor Murray?" she has been asked a number of times since her interview.

"He is a nice man," she always answers, but can not decide whether or not she was "afraid" of him.

By 1 o'clock the next day the prisoner was freed. He was given a ticket back to Electra by prison officials. He tried to get Mrs. Bates to use it but she refused as she would have had to wait several hours for a train, and Mr. Bates also refused to use it.

"If you and the children were game enough to stick it out and hike for me, I can do the same," he told his wife.

They started back, catching rides occasionally but walking long distances; so long, in fact, that one of the small tots walked out of her shoes.

Welcomed Home

A number of friends were waiting for them when they arrived in Electra Sunday and congratulations were offered to them. Mr. and Mrs. Bates also visited the police station where they received the hearty congratulations of J. T. Taylor, chief of police, and Mayor E. E. Wheeler, who offered them any assistance possible.

If Mr. Bates only had a job the happiness would be complete. "He may be slow getting work," Mrs. Bates says, "but we'll wait and keep trying; maybe he can find work." Mr. Bates is an experienced garage hand.

"I never knew people could be so good and kind," Mrs. Bates continued. "Every one in Oklahoma was just wonderful. The Electra people have been awfully nice, too. Mr. Davis at the capitol cafeteria was unusually nice. He furnished meals and fixed up a lunch for the children when they left and others furnished sleeping quarters for them.

TEXAS GIRLS' QUEST FAILS

Gainesville Hikers Ask Aid In California

LOS ANGELES, April 21. (AP)—Lois Southworth, 19, and Lois Loy, 20, both of Gainesville, Texas, were being cared for today by police who sought relatives here of the girls.

The girls appeared at the police station saying they had hitch-hiked from the ranch home of the Southworth girl near Gainesville, coming here expecting to find the Southworth girl's brother, a mechanic. The Southworth girl explained she did not have the brother's address because she thought Los Angeles was "just a little bitty town like Gainesville and I thought I'd find my brother right away."

Both said they hoped to get into the movies but were told Hollywood already had about 40,000 extras working only part time.

Card Mailed Seven Years Ago Turns Up In Sender's Box

Special to The Record News.

NOCONA, Texas, April 21.—The prolonged rambling of an innocent and modest postal card was revealed here today. As the story goes, Mrs. Tom King, who resides 10 miles north of Nocona, wrote a postal card to her daughter whose home was only about 15 miles away, in the year of 1924. Card was never received from Mrs. King, but one day last week, it was found in her rural mail box where it had been returned to her.

No information as to the whereabouts of the postal card has yet been received—only that it has been in seculsion for the past seven years, and bobbed up, right back in the mail box.

BANKER RAPS FARM BOARD

'Sapping' Policies Branded In Big Spring Meet

BIG SPRING, Texas, April 21. (AP)—John Q. McAdams of Winters, president of the Texas State Bankers association, declared in addressing the South Plains Bankers association convention here today that policies of the federal farm board were "sapping the life blood from American agriculture and are purely socialistic."

He asserted the board should turn its energies to creating broader foreign markets and more uses for crops rather than dealing with them at home.

Winters declared installment buying in the last decade had created present-day problems of bankers.

Edwin A. Kelly, Big Spring utility manager, welcomed the bankers, with a response by O. P. Thrane of Snyder and O. B. Norman of Lamesa, president of the association.

By EMILE GAUVREAU

King Alfonso, having taken his own personal fortune out of his country, leaves Spain to her own resources. He will watch what happens with interest. Read your history and learn that other Bourbons were not as fortunate. Some would say it is the end of a great racket. The Bourbon monarchy has lasted, except for a brief interval, for 15 centuries. It sent Columbus to America and Magellan around the world. It produced a Phillip the Fifth. It expelled the Jews. That is when it made its first great mistake.

The Bourbons nourished the Inquisition. They ruled with an iron hand what was once the proudest and richest realm in the world. Now it is no more. Don Alfonso XIII has abdicated. Spain now hopes to be a republic. First, there will be bloodshed.

Alfonso was no Louis XIV who thought he was the state. Nor was he a Louis XV, who lived to the hilt and let the devil take the hindmost. Afonso has been a modern man, a sport, with the conservative number of mistresses to which a king limits himself in these days of depression. He was a democrat essentially. He will probably like his straw hat better than the crown. It will look better in photographs.

The only reason Alfonso clung to his throne as long as he did was the homage he owed to his Bourbon pride. He owed some obligation to his blood relatives who hated to be reduced to the status of plain citizens. They had paraded around for centuries in the velvets of grandees and couldn't forget it.

Since the ex-kaiser of Germany is now a wood chopper in Doorn, and the Archduke of Tuscany became a grocer, the fate of Alfonso as a real estate operator is not as fantastic as it sounds. And perhaps the career of distinguished "extras" in Hollywood might be just the thing for the infante and the infantas.

With Spain a republic, England is now the only first-class power besides Italy that has a king over it. England, like Spain, tried other forms of government, but returned to monarchy. France, like Rome, became an empire after it was a republic, and then became a republic once more. Albania tried being a republic, and is now ruled by a king. Italy tried a republic in 1849, without success.

It is hardly likely that Spain will ever go back to monarchy. The trend, good or bad, is away from hereditary rule, whether it is over nations, government of institutions. Today the man who achieves his own place and proves his superiority over his fellowman is master. Who his forebears were—sultans or slaves—does not matter.

A glance at a history-map of the world will show at once that the white race's world dominance, though often threatened, has endured and expanded since the dawn of recorded time. Therefore, the prediction of Dr. S. P. Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education, of a continued decline in prestige of the white man, which began in 1905 with the defeat of the Russians by the Japanese, is hardly tenable.

The browns are still in the primitive stages of civilization. The bulk of the Africans is, too. The Mongolians have been static, imperially since Tamerlane checked the advance of the Turks at Angora. The Hindoos are Aryans, members of our own race. Japan is the only threat on the horizon, and Japan has a population of only 60,000,000.

Dr. Duggan's prophecy need not alarm anybody. His Adamite ancestors probably envisaged the same doom for their race.

Buried Talents

HE IS only in early middle-age, but his waistline in inches already exceeds the years of his age. The other evening he was inveigled into playing marbles with the neighborhood youngsters, kneeling, "knuckling down," following his "taw" on its journeys back and forth across the ring. The next morning rebellious muscles made his rising a mean and painful task.

On the Junior college and high school campus on any fair morning may be seen hundreds of boys and girls enjoying privileges which this man probably did not have 25 years ago—regular and supervised recreation. Setting up exercises, competitive games, designed to balance the development of muscles and to keep them supple.

There are others, allocated by age between the scholastic and the middle-aged business man, who are keeping themselves fit. Young men who recall the benefits of early morning exercise which was a feature of army camp life. And women, too, for more and more they are approaching that phase of liberation from formerly accepted restrictions.

Considering the pleasant advantages of being "in condition," the little time and effort required to maintain a fair degree of physical fitness, and the increased encouragement which it now receives, there should in the future be a marked decrease in the number of men who can't play a game of marbles with the boys without being too stiff to get up the next morning.

Business is admittedly exacting in time, thought and effort; but the business of keeping the body in "going condition" certainly is worth the little time it would require.

Sterling Heads Conservation Committee

SPEAKING of oil, the newly created Texas oil, gas and natural resources conservation committee elected Gov. Ross S. Sterling as its chairman; Chairman C. V. Terrell of the railroad commission, vice chairman; and Representative Howsley of Albany, secretary of the organization. The committee is composed of Governor Sterling, Attorney General James V. Allred, Senator Pollard of Tyler, Woodward of Coleman, Woodul of Houston, and Parrish of Lubbock; and Representative Howsley of Albany, Lassiter of Henderson, McDougald of Beaumont, Hardy of Breckenridge and Johnson of Carrizo Springs. A majority of the lawmakers on the committee are from the oil sections of the state. Governor Sterling told the committee that he had gathered data from various sources concerning oil, among them being a report from the Washington oil conference. He said the data would be mimeographed for use of the members of the committee.

There will be a conference at Austin May 4. A new congress will organize in December. Independent operators from 10 oil producing states are going to push their program calling for a tariff on foreign crude. This regardless of the Kilbur committee, the committee representing the 10 oil producing states and all concerned.

There is a Republican president. He is the apostle of high tariff protection for all American industries and workers. On the face of the returns the Republicans will control both houses of congress. If the tariff is the thing the independent oil producers will continue their demand that a tax of a dollar a barrel be placed on foreign importations. If the tariff is not the thing, then the old guard leaders of the Republican party will be compelled to "face the music."

Sterling Signs the Insanity Bill

GOVERNOR STERLING signed the bill designed to eliminate the frequent insanity trials of convicts condemned to death. This bill was offered by Senator Walter Woodward of Coleman and covered all the ground. It permits insanity affidavits to be made only by two physicians, a county health officer, the prison warden or physician, or the superintendent of a state hospital. In the great state of New York, superintendents of state hospitals are the official referees made so by a statutory law. Within the prison system the criminal insane should be confined for the protection of society. They should be closely guarded. This for the protection of society.

Kansans Demand Tariff on Crude

KANSAS independent petroleum producers held their state-wide conference after being advised to abandon their fight for an embargo in favor of a tariff on crude. Senator Geo. H. McGill, Democrat, urged the association to concentrate upon the tariff measure. Senator McGill said:

"One finds members of both houses of congress who see nothing evil in the theory of tariff in international relations but who are wholly opposed to an embargo." Senator McGill is the Jeffersonian fighter who defeated a White House idol in the general elections of November last year.

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

As if Lillian Roth will lose any sleep over what the newspapers are saying about her sudden marriage to that Pittsburgh lad...She found love—and she married it—so more power to her...The rags titter a little because when Lillian played at the Palace two months ago (is it that long?) she received the news of her young sweetheart's death back stage and grieved so—even while she was singing her sad songs...Lillian's moans gave you the shudders and most of us kept our undressing room doors closed to stifle her hysterical putting on a show—then she is a better actress than Hollywood thought...Now she is gay, again, and why shouldn't she be?...Hey! Hey!...Love is the bunk!...Dryden chirped that love is not in our choice, but in our fate...Spring has Sprung, anyhow...It is a woman's privilege to remember and a man's to forget.

What a lotta horsefeathers came out of the air waves about 8 o'clock Monday night...The major stations must have been desperate for diverting entertainers...You got a cramp in your fingers twisting the dial searching for something that didn't give you an earache...Most of it seemed like so much of a speech by Borough President Levy...Somebody recently summed up the air sitch-ee-ay-shun beautifully...By saying that the broadcasting directors were glorifying mediocrity...The grandest of the capsule criticisms...The rags are saying that the Dempseys haven't been dwelling together for two years...When that was first published two years ago Dempsey wanted to slug the "fellow" who wrote it...Say, a good news beat is worth one of Dempsey's slugs...Too bad about Belle Baker's "Morrie" going like that...Nearly every one of the Broadway boys who have passed on lately were the nicest guys...The good die young, is right...That's why Broadway is so congested.

It is damb decent of Mr. Tyler, the producer, and Mr. Hampden, the actor, to fill up all that space in the papers belittling the dramatic critics...For a while, it seemed as though nobody was taking us seriously—or to heart, anymore...Mr. Tyler says that most of the first-nighters go to the play to see what is the matter with it...Well, of course!...Woollcott once amusingly said that the critics should be thanked instead of spanked...That the critics were a lot like the slaves in the olden times—who, before the noblemen and their guests dined or drank—the slaves had to sample the stuff—and if they lived—then goody, goody—the others would sit down and feast and never worry about poisoned wines or fowl...And if the slaves died—then what the hell?...It is Goldsmith's polite advice that the critic should always take care to say that the picture would have been better if the painter had taken more pains...What the Tylers and Hampdens overlook is that the critic represents a newspaper—a newspaper represents the people—and that critics are assigned to shows to keep showmen from misrepresenting presentations.

The next time I see Jimmy Walker I must show him some of the letters sent by cranks...Because I found something nice to say about him..."So you, too," go some of the stupid letters, "are on his pay roll?"...And Heywood reminds me that the applause given politicians in Broadway theaters must not be taken seriously...With that I have to agree, come to think of it...Broun must have had his recent campaign for Congress in mind...For when he was introduced to great crowds at a few Broadway theaters the applause was deafening...Yet, these same applauders forgot him at the polls—or they forgot to register...I thought Jessel was a superb toastmaster at the dinner to Walker, but Jessel, for want of something sentimental to say, poked the newspaper men "who throw stones at you from their windows and we can't throw stones back"...It was good showmanship, of course, and there were numbers of listeners, who shook their heads in approval...But Jessel couldn't have been serious...Without newspapers how could he read his bad notices?

Wonder what a girl thinks about who has just been jilted...When she is sitting at the same table with the fellow she was going to marry...and the girl he married?...The other night, frixample...The scene in the gay place puzzled me...The shelved one, escorted by another stiff-shirt wearer, was a guest of the newlyweds!...When I asked her later if the bride knew that she was almost the veiled partner up the aisle, she replied: "Oh, yes, she's my best friend!"...Discretion, of course...Seneca declared that a woman either loves or hates—there is no third possibility...Women can bear pain more gracefully than men, anyhow...Reminds me of the gal last year, who called me over to her table and said: "Over there across the way is the fellow I went around with five years. He married that girl with him yesterday and called me up to tell me about it."..."Yeah?" I said, "who is she?" "She's the girl," was the devastating answer, "I used to room with—and every time he took me out—I always suggested she come along—so she wouldnt get lonesome."

The word "crack" probably will be claimed someday by a "stylist," if a controversy is made about it...The current expression appears to be: "What kind of a crack is that?"...I must make a note of the fact, so that Dr. Vizetelly, of the dictionaries, will be saved the research trouble...In 1771 Oliver Goldsmith in "She Stoops to Conquer" used it in this manner: "That's a damned confounded crack!"...The loudest laughter in the Friars Club these days is aroused by a lad who has struck something new in dialect...Nearly every one you meet offers a story in the Irish brogue, the Joosh dialect, the Scotchman's lingo or the negro's...The "show stopper" offers a routine in the Greek manner and it is very comical...The highest salaried comedians flock about him and implore him to keep gagging...And he leaves them limp...He is the funniest of the lot, it appears, and they worship at his shrine...His name is George Givot, a singer, out of a job!

That story about the adorable Renee Adoree in the movie mag is too sad...It would have her admirers believe that she strands her purses and doctors out there at the sanitarium in the prairies, whenever she feels a little sippy—and hastens back to Hollywood to go gay, again.

SYNOPSIS

When Helen Heather becomes engaged to Tommy Delamater there is quite a stir in the social circles of Kingsway. Helen is by far the most popular girl in town. And Tommy, has an assured social position, as his father is president of the bank in which Helen is a typist. Helen lives with her cousin, Nina Higginson, a young and wealthy widow, who had married a man much her senior, after throwing over the courtly Ethan Gingsway. Free again, Nina sets her cap for Ethan once more. She even follows him to Europe. Tommy's father has secured a place for him in a bank in Wisconsin. Helen prepares to join her future husband. She gets a letter from Tommy breaking the engagement. It is plain that Mrs. Delamater has encouraged Tommy's action. Doris Milliken, who is secretly engaged to Nina's stepson, Ronny, tries to comfort Helen. Half sick, Helen wanders into the Kingsway grounds, not knowing Ethan has returned from Europe. Ethan and his little cousin, Patricia, sit on a bench near Helen. In trying to get away, Helen strikes the limb of a tree and is stunned.

In trying to get away, Helen strikes the limb of a tree and is stunned. The Kingsways take care of Helen.

She becomes governess for little Patricia.

Nina returns from Europe.

INSTALMENT XVI

Doris, waiting in the stiff parlor at Marietta's gate house, was walking up and down restlessly.

"I wish I was working for a living the way you are," she said as Helen entered. "With nobody to tell me what to do. Sometimes I feel as if I'd go crazy, pushing myself down out of sight all the time, and trying to turn myself into something my people want me to be. And I'm not. I never can be."

Helen looked at her, surprised. Doris, like many inarticulate people, once she had opened her heart to someone, went on recklessly. Her thin pointed face was tense with the excitement of actually talking things out.

"I know I have pretty clothes and jewelry, and expensive parties. But they're not my clothes or my jewelry or my parties. Everything is picked out for me by Aunt Louisa. And if I ask father for a little freedom, he just says, 'You're too young to know what you want.' Oh, Helen, some day I think I'll go crazy or run away!"

"But why do you stand it?" Helen asked curiously. Her own life had been so different; she would so have liked to have people care enough to dictate, even, she thought sometimes.

Doris' pallor changed to a hot painful flush.

"I'm a coward. That's why. I've thought of going off and getting a job a hundred times. But I'm just plain scared. You know I don't have any allowance, only things bought for me. Aunt Lou has told me what to do since I was a baby. And it's sort of like having grown up with handcuffs on. When she says things, I just have to obey!"

Helen looked at her pityingly. It must be dreadful to be chained like that. Doris' aunt, stiff, old-fashioned woman that she was, with her air of rigid certainty, ruled her brother, and through him Doris. Doris' mother's elopement, of course. They kept the stable door locked on Doris.

"But I haven't told you yet what I want," Doris said, quieting down a little, and standing still, a tremulous young figure, extinguished instead of enhanced by the heavily embroidered white silk sport-suit she wore. "I came to ask you if you'd come over tonight and help us cut and title the gay young oysterman."

Helen stared at Doris in surprise, for a moment. Didn't Doris have any sympathy for Helen, after pouring out her own troubles to Helen in a certainty of sympathy? And then, seeing the girl's childish sad little face, she realized that Doris was not, as yet, old or wise enough in her feelings, whatever she might be by reason of age, to reach outside herself and be sorry for other people. She felt older and wiser than Doris suddenly, and very pitying.

"I'd love to come," she said.

"Oh, thank you, Helen. Becky Purdon said you wouldn't want to, but I told her I knew better. I told her you were just as gay and happy as ever, and delighted you weren't going to have to marry Tommy!"

"So I am!" Helen said truthfully.

"Then you think you'll write and tell Allen—"

"No, nor Bill!" said Helen teasingly. "You're so in love yourself, Dorrie, you can't imagine anybody being comfortable without wanting to get married and live happily ever after."

"Then you're really over Tommy?" Doris persisted wide eyed, peering over her fur neckpiece.

"Really—over—Tommy," said Helen, spacing the words emphatically...Like a child's book she had read and loved long ago. Like a game she had liked to play when she was a very little girl. Far off—dimmed—only a remembrance that Tommy had charm.

She laughed a little and put her arm around Doris as if she were her own little sister in Baltimore.

"Tommy could charm your eyelashes off, but I'm over the hypnotism," she said. "I'll love to see the old crowd, and I have some grand ideas about titling."

A great happiness and relief swept over her. Relief, and self-respect, and happiness. Why, she didn't! She was telling the truth! Tommy—wildly gay, horribly depressed Tommy—Tommy, with his quick unreasonableness and wild words of worship—Tommy, and all Tommy stood for, suddenly showed themselves for what they were. Wonderful, but dim, somehow. Far off. Something that didn't really matter, now. She took a long happy breath. She was free! All the values changed. She laughed a little, putting her arms around Doris. "I don't a bit," she repeated.

"You always have wonderful ideas," repeated adoring Doris. "I'm so glad you're coming—"

"Where's she coming to?" demanded Patricia, appearing from nowhere, swift and assured in her brief straight smock and knickers, leaping at Helen and twining, not only her arms, but her slim brown legs, around her.

"Here, I'm not a tree," said Helen, bending down to kiss the child as she detached her. "I'm going to Miss Milliken's house tonight, to title a picture. And I'll tell you at length what titling a picture is, but not now—"

"Do you love her more than you do me?" Patricia demanded.

Helen laughed, answering the child, as she always did, as if she were grown up.

"That's a very embarrassing personal question. Not the kind people ever get answers to that are true, so there's no use asking them," she assured Patricia. She said it absently. Her mind was swirling with this new discovery. She was over Tommy. She didn't mind about him. Over Tommy—

She laughed aloud. Suddenly, standing there in Marietta's low-ceilinged old room with the late fall sunshine about her, she was alive and radiant. Doris and Patricia looked at her in admiration, warmed by the sudden vibration of color and happiness she gave out, golden and rose and strongly alive. Doris, weaker and more timid, looked at her almost with awe. Little Patricia, herself a force, threw herself against Helen again, hugging her hard.

"Oh, I love you, Helen! I do love you! What makes people love you so?"

She spoke with an odd unchildlike intensity. Helen was a little troubled. She answered her lightly.

"The reason the lamb loved Mary so, darling. Remember 'Mary's Little Lamb,' that funny old poem your cousin Ada was telling you the other afternoon?"

"It was sort of silly," nodded Patricia, "but I remember."

"What makes the lamb love Mary so?

Cause Mary loved the lamb, you know."

"Oh, that's a very nice reason. G'bye Helen. I got to finish what I was doing."

She was out, a graceful flash of yellow and brown, before Doris could do more than stare at her.

"She's a queer child," she said, as people inevitably said about Patricia.

"She's strange, but she's a wonderful one," Helen defended her. "She has an amazing mind. She had an odd upbringing. I wonder if you would do me a favor, Doris—let me take her over to meet your little cousin Lucy, tonight. She ought to have playmates, and she simply won't. Lucy being a mermaid—"

Doris laughed tremulously, as she so often did at Helen's simplest phrases.

"You do say the funniest things!"

Helen smiled too and went on. "What I mean is, seeing Lucy have a part in the picture she'll respect her. I love Patricia, but she's a little pirate. She has to be awed a little. And Lucy having to go home to bed early, of course, I can send Patricia too."

"Do you really like it," Doris asked doubtfully, "having a child to take care of, instead of being a secretary?"

"I adore it," Helen said honestly. "A child is fun! And—don't think I'm sentimental, Doris, but if I don't have people to love and make a fuss over, honestly, I'm—well, I'm uncomfortable!" She laughed as she finished her confession. "And there is nothing in the world as exciting as watching things grow, even if they're children. The orange seeds I used to plant in pots when I was little were nothing to it."

Doris looked at her with half-comprehending, admiring eyes.

"I guess I never had time enough from being unhappy about myself to want to watch things grow," she said sadly. "I've had to put in all my time trying to evade Aunt Louisa."

She looked so frail, so frightened, that Helen's heart went out to her.

"If there's anything I can ever do for you, Doris," she promised, "I will. You'll let me know, won't you?"

It did not occur to either girl that according to the world's standards Doris had everything and Helen nothing. Helen, in her strength and charm, bent over Doris, frightened and little and unhappy, and offered, and Doris accepted gratefully.

"I will—I will!" she promised, coloring high. "And—it may be sooner than you think, Helen. And I'll love to arrange to have Patricia play with little Lucy. I'll see you tonight."

With the last words she froze into her shyness again, but Helen kissed her warmly, and the two girls parted, Helen to follow Patricia into the grounds, for those last words of the child's still rang in her ears, Patricia and her necessity for digging a hole sounded as if she needed watching. The old story about "see what Johnny was doing and tell him to stop it" applied fatally to Patricia.

D. Dix Advises Aged Mother Of Selfish Son

Dear Miss Dix—I am a woman nearly 70 years old and have brought up a large family of children. I owned, through my own and my husband's labor and thrift, a house which we bought before our children were able to work. My husband died, but I managed to cling to the house with the aid of all the boys except the oldest, who married when he was in his early 20s and who, of course, had to support his own family.

Now I have sold the house at a good profit, and the oldest son, who hase never helped me in any way financially, demands part of the money, saying it is his right. The toher children refuse to take a cent, telling me to keep all I have for my old age. What shall I do about giving the oldest son the money he demands? He is after me all the time about it, and it will make the other children so angry when they find out about it if I do give him the money. Please help.

—AN OLD-FASHIONED TROUBLED MOTHER.

Answer—Stiffen your backbone, Troubled Mother, and say "No" good and hard to your greedy, selfish son. Tell him that he will have to wait until you are dead before he gets his clutching fingers on your little bank roll. Of all your children he has the least claim upon you, and you will be unfair to them as well as to yourself if you give him the money out of which he is trying to wheedle you.

Surely the angels must weep at the spectacle of a son, a husky grown man, who is trying to graft from his poor old mother the money that her one-piece of property brought her, who is willing to rob her of the few dollars that she has depended upon to make her last days comfortable and independent and who torments her tender mother heart with his importunities.

Human nature can show nothing baser than that. Robbing one's mother is the most despicable of all crimes, yet it is one not infrequently committed. Grasping children take their mother's all, promising her to take care of her and cherish her as long as she lives. They are very affectionate and solicitous for her happiness until they get her money and then she finds herself thrust aside, made to feel a burden, often actually turned out of the house she has given them.

Any mother may be very sure of this—that if her children want her money it is not safe to give it to them. For if they loved her they would not be willing to take it. They would want her to spend it on herself, not on them. They would want her to have the blessed assurance of independence. They would want her to be able to indulge herself in the little luxuries she denied herself while she was struggling to rear them.

So the mother whose children are urging her to give them her property does well to get a death grip on her pocketbook. As long as she has money they will treat her well. The minute she has none they will send her to the poorhouse.

Just bear this in mind, Troubled Mother. Refuse to be held up by your avaricious son. He is trying to take advantage of you and of his worthier sisters and brothers. Be just to your self and to them by refusing to give him the money for which he hounds you.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Our Children

By ANGELO PATRI

To Much Good

It is easy to impose upon a willing child. A teacher or parent finds that he accepts each task given him cheerfully. He does so well that each finished task brings another and greater on its heels. Soon the child is burdened to the earth. His spirit is crushed with too much goodness.

A child is an evolving creature. His growth is, by nature, erratic, spasmodic, yet rhythmical. He needs a program of living that allows much leeway. If he wants to spurt ahead on a job he should be allowed to do so. When the spurt is over, he should be allowed to rest.

We are likely to make a mistake here. When the child is speeding along full tilt, we cheer him on, greedy for accomplishment. We prolong this period of high endeavor past the time when it should subside. We deprive the child of the span of rest that nature ordained he should have. When we see signs of his falling off in speed or amount of work, we ask, "What's the matter? Not going to fall down on this job, are you?" We might better keep still. Give the child who has been working along at high speed a chance to rest, to recover his spent energy, to take on fresh growth.

Nature is wiser than we in this method. She sets a child at work. For a time he is engrossed in his task. On fire with interest, a dynamo of energy, he works miracles. Then the climax is reached. He stops. He has achieved the growth that was to come from this phase of work. Now he is to rest and store up energy for the next stride forward. The new growth may take him in an entirely different direction over a new route. We cannot tell. But we can keep our hands off and let the child follow his own course of growth instead of keeping him eternally at it. This child training, this education of ours, must be in partnership with the children. We too often err in overlooking their share in the process.

It is next to impossible to overwork some children. They move slowly. They respond indifferently. Yet they grow. Sometimes I think they have a better chance to grow their best because it is so hard for us to interfere with them. They make it so hard for us that we have to let them alone. So the good child, the intelligent, keen-minded, responsive child gets too much good. Does too much good.

If you have such a child, and many of you have, take thought about his schedule of work and play. Does it provide for free time for the child? Is there somewhere in the list of lessons and duties a little space where he can go apart with self and make friends with his mind? Is there a little space of time where he can lie on his back under a tree, or in the bottom of a boat, and drift on the bosom of his thought? Have you left a little doorway for his soul to slip through now and then?

In our greediness for our children we are likely to do too much. We would live for them, if we should. We would cheat them, all unknowingly of much that makes life worth while. Give a little space to the good child so he may expand a little as his nature indicates.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

Modern Gardener Demands Variety In His Edgings

By BERTHA M'KEE DOBIE

In the South of older days, in Texas of even 30 years ago, roses and violets went into the garden together, as they went into the sweetheart rhyme. No one thought of making a garden without both. The bricks that bound the flower beds were half concealed with successive mounds of violets, and the walk from the front gate to the gallery, whether of plank or brick, was edged with them. Corsages were of violets. Booth Tarkington makes his Alice Adams, too poor to buy violets to wear at her rich friend's dance, gather wild ones into a great bouquet and then feel ashamed when she compares them with the hothouse violets worn by the other girls. I have never quite liked Mr. Tarkington for bringing wild violets into a company that disparages them. But the incident illustrates the esteem in which cultivated violets were once held. Latterly flowers of garish hue and large size have expressed the time-spirit, and there has been scant notice for

"A violet by a mossy stone,
Half hidden from the eye."

Perhaps now that the world "old-fashioned" is losing its connotation of dowdy dullness, violets will come back along with flower-wreathed hats and victorian furniture. But they will never again hold the field as an edging plant. The modern spirit, craving variety, finds satisfaction in a multitude of species. In this article some good edging plants will be called to mind and their more particular uses suggested. The word "border" will be avoided in the sense of edging, since in garden language it has come to mean the wide planting of perennials and annuals along property margins and walks.

Points to Consider

The qualifications of good edging plants vary with particular uses. But there are points to be considered: low stature, compact form, tidy habit, color harmony, a long blooming period, and pleasing foliage to carry on after blooming has ceased. Some plants that occupy the foreground are not, in a strict sense, edgings. Perhaps they sprawl too much, like petunias, or run too far, like verbena. Certain others are dwarf forms of larger plants, and should stand in front of their taller brethren only. Tom Thumb varieties of snapdragon only eight inches high, Lilliput zinnias (zinnia Mexicana, Pompon zinnia, and the fiery Red Riding Hood, with tight flowers hardly more than an inch across), and dwarf marigolds are all useful in facing down beds of tall varieties. But they are not set apart and dedicated to the business of delineating the verge of a bed or border as are those plants with which this article specifically deals.

Shrubby evergreen edgings having evergreen foliage are manifestly desirable. In the 18th century and the early part of the 19th most flower beds in Virginia, Pennsylvania and New England were marked with boxwood. Boxwood, with its growth of from half an inch to a whole inch a year, is hardly for this hurrying age. Yet it is sometimes set out even now in gardens that are made to endure. The variety for edgings is Buxus suffruticosa. A dwarf evergreen shrub, Dahpne cneorum, named for a nymp, makes a perfect edging. Twice a year it covered with clusters of pink flowers, delightfully fragrant. Its perfection is, however, difficult to attain. In the first place, it is expensive; and only a lover cares to multiply a few purchased plants by rooting the tips in sand or by cutting a trailing branch nearly through and pinning it firmly underground at the cut point. In the second place, the garland flower—for the plant is also called by this name—does not take kindly to Texas. Here it should be used only to edge shady borders and should be given a gritty, rather acid soil. A third edging of shrubby habit—the word is here used of plants hardening their wood and has no reference to size—is santolina, or lavender cotton, which is much used in West Texas. It is gray, dense, low, and drouth-resistant. P. G. Northrup of San Angelo, who uses to edge a cactus bed, says that the flowers appear when the cactus blooms and that the repetition of the dominant yellow in their tiny forms is very pleasing. Lavender cotton, though fine for castus and shrubbery borders, is not to be used where a dainty effect is desired.

Foliage plants not shrubby are to be found in various colors. Dutsy miller, one variety of which is only 10 inches high, has long been a favorite for edging beds of pink or red geraniums. Alternanthera is the plant, sometimes red and sometimes yellow, with which the name of a town is spelled out on railway station grounds. Pyrethrum aureum is a low plant with yellow foliage.

Perennial Edgings

In listing perennial and annual edgings according to color classification, I ran afoul of the fact that many edgings are in several colors. Readers must therefore bear with some repetition. In the North a perennial dies down in winter and comes up again from the root; in the lower South many perennials are evergeen.

A few good white perennial edgings are rock cress (aragis), both single and double; evergreen candytuft (Iberis sempervirens); English daisy, the "we, modest, crimson-tipped flower" the crushif of which beneath his plowshare caused Burns' immortal grief; spice pinks; and a daisy that looks like a Shasta but grows only one foot high and blooms all season.

Blue, though a much desired color in the garden, is seldom used as an edging plant except in combination with other colors. Grape hyacinths, of a heavenly blue, are good in combination with something that will remain after they take themselves off; they do well in Texas. A fairly tall-growing form of plumbago is common in yards from one end of the state to the other, but plumbago larpentae, growing from eight to ten inches high and having flowers of cobalt blue, is little known. Campanula carpatica, blue and white, is an eight-inch perennial belonging to a large family of which Canterbury bells and chimney bellflower are the best known representatives. Anchusa myosotidiflora, 12 inches high, is to be planted in shade only; the second name means "having flowers like forget-me-nots."

Some yellow perennial edgings are Alyssum saxatile compactum; Alyssum citrinum, of a less sulphurous hue; Corydalis cheilanthifolia, much like the "scrambled eggs" of our prairies; and hedge mustard, good with grape hyacinths. All these bloom early.

Among edgings from pink to rose are the English daisy (for white is not its only color); spice, or clove, pinks, so popular that when they get a start in a town they run its length; moss pink (phlox subulata), which is, however, so vivid that it does not combine with many colors; Ionoxalis drummondii, a native rose-colored wood-sorrel finer than that offered by plantsmen;

HARD WATER PLUS MEL'O MAKES SOFT WATER

Such greasy hands!
Hard water won't clean them

Hard water can't do much with greasy hands. Of course, you use lots of soap. You try to get a thick lather. But the water is too hard; it combines with the soap and forms a scum. How can you expect to clean greasy hands in that water?

There is a way. Use Mel'o. Sprinkle a little in the basin. Water softened with Mel'o makes a wonderful cleaner with or without soap. Soft water and soap and lots of lather; grease won't stay long on your hands. Get a can of Mel'o at your grocer's today.

By EMILE GAUVREAU

King Alfonso, having taken his own personal fortune out of his country, leaves Spain to her own resources. He will watch what happens with interest. Read your history and learn that other Bourbons were not as fortunate. Some would say it is the end of a great racket. The Bourbon monarchy has lasted, except for a brief interval, for 15 centuries. It sent Columbus to America and Magellan around the world. It produced a Phillip the Fifth. It expelled the Jews. That is when it made its first great mistake.

The Bourbons nourished the Inquisition. They ruled with an iron hand what was once the proudest and richest realm in the world. Now it is no more. Don Alfonso XIII has abdicated. Spain now hopes to be a republic. First, there will be bloodshed.

Alfonso was no Louis XIV who thought he was the state. Nor was he a Louis XV, who lived to the hilt and let the devil take the hindmost. Afonso has been a modern man, a sport, with the conservative number of mistresses to which a king limits himself in these days of depression. He was a democrat essentially. He will probably like his straw hat better than the crown. It will look better in photographs.

The only reason Alfonso clung to his throne as long as he did was the homage he owed to his Bourbon pride. He owed some obligation to his blood relatives who hated to be reduced to the status of plain citizens. They had paraded around for centuries in the velvets of grandees and couldn't forget it.

Since the ex-kaiser of Germany is now a wood chopper in Doorn, and the Archduke of Tuscany became a grocer, the fate of Alfonso as a real estate operator is not as fantastic as it sounds. And perhaps the career of distinguished "extras" in Hollywood might be just the thing for the infante and the infantas.

With Spain a republic, England is now the only first-class power besides Italy that has a king over it. England, like Spain, tried other forms of government, but returned to monarchy. France, like Rome, became an empire after it was a republic, and then became a republic once more. Albania tried being a republic, and is now ruled by a king. Italy tried a republic in 1849, without success.

It is hardly likely that Spain will ever go back to monarchy. The trend, good or bad, is away from hereditary rule, whether it is over nations, government of institutions. Today the man who achieves his own place and proves his superiority over his fellowman is master. Who his forebears were—sultans or slaves—does not matter.

A glance at a history-map of the world will show at once that the white race's world dominance, though often threatened, has endured and expanded since the dawn of recorded time. Therefore, the prediction of Dr. S. P. Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education, of a continued decline in prestige of the white man, which began in 1905 with the defeat of the Russians by the Japanese, is hardly tenable.

The browns are still in the primitive stages of civilization. The bulk of the Africans is, too. The Mongolians have been static, imperially since Tamerlane checked the advance of the Turks at Angora. The Hindoos are Aryans, members of our own race. Japan is the only threat on the horizon, and Japan has a population of only 60,000,000.

Dr. Duggan's prophecy need not alarm anybody. His Adamite ancestors probably envisaged the same doom for their race.

Buried Talents

HE IS only in early middle-age, but his waistline in inches already exceeds the years of his age. The other evening he was inveigled into playing marbles with the neighborhood youngsters, kneeling, "knuckling down," following his "taw" on its journeys back and forth across the ring. The next morning rebellious muscles made his rising a mean and painful task.

On the Junior college and high school campus on any fair morning may be seen hundreds of boys and girls enjoying privileges which this man probably did not have 25 years ago—regular and supervised recreation. Setting up exercises, competitive games, designed to balance the development of muscles and to keep them supple.

There are others, allocated by age between the scholastic and the middle-aged business man, who are keeping themselves fit. Young men who recall the benefits of early morning exercise which was a feature of army camp life. And women, too, for more and more they are approaching that phase of liberation from formerly accepted restrictions.

Considering the pleasant advantages of being "in condition," the little time and effort required to maintain a fair degree of physical fitness, and the increased encouragement which it now receives, there should in the future be a marked decrease in the number of men who can't play a game of marbles with the boys without being too stiff to get up the next morning.

Business is admittedly exacting in time, thought and effort; but the business of keeping the body in "going condition" certainly is worth the little time it would require.

Sterling Heads Conservation Committee

SPEAKING of oil, the newly created Texas oil, gas and natural resources conservation committee elected Gov. Ross S. Sterling as its chairman; Chairman C. V. Terrell of the railroad commission, vice chairman; and Representative Howsley of Albany, secretary of the organization. The committee is composed of Governor Sterling, Attorney General James V. Allred, Senator Pollard of Tyler, Woodward of Coleman, Woodul of Houston, and Parrish of Lubbock; and Representative Howsley of Albany, Lassiter of Henderson, McDougald of Beaumont, Hardy of Breckenridge and Johnson of Carrizo Springs. A majority of the lawmakers on the committee are from the oil sections of the state. Governor Sterling told the committee that he had gathered data from various sources concerning oil, among them being a report from the Washington oil conference. He said the data would be mimeographed for use of the members of the committee.

There will be a conference at Austin May 4. A new congress will organize in December. Independent operators from 10 oil producing states are going to push their program calling for a tariff on foreign crude. This regardless of the Kilbur committee, the committee representing the [illegible] producing states and all concerned.

There is a Republican president. He is the apostle of high tariff protection for all American industries and workers. On the face of the returns the Republicans will control both houses of congress. If the tariff is the thing the independent oil producers will continue their demand that a tax of a dollar a barrel be placed on foreign importations. If the tariff is not the thing, then the old guard leaders of the Republican party will be compelled to "face the music."

Sterling Signs the Insanity Bill

GOVERNOR STERLING signed the bill designed to eliminate the frequent insanity trials of convicts condemned to death. This bill was offered by Senator Walter Woodward of Coleman and covered all the ground. It permits insanity affidavits to be made only by two physicians, a county health officer, the prison warden or physician, or the superintendent of a state hospital. In the great state of New York, superintendents of state hospitals are the official referees made so by a statutory law. Within the prison system the criminal insane should be confined for the protection of society. They should be closely guarded. This for the protection of society.

Kansans Demand Tariff on Crude

KANSAS independent petroleum producers held their state-wide conference after being advised to abandon their fight for an embargo in favor of a tariff on crude. Senator Geo. H. McGill, Democrat, urged the association to concentrate upon the tariff measure. Senator McGill said:

"One finds members of both houses of congress who see nothing evil in the theory of tariff in international relations but who are wholly opposed to an embargo." Senator McGill is the Jeffersonian fighter who defeated a White House idol in the general elections of November last year.

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

As if Lillian Roth will lose any sleep over what the newspapers are saying about her sudden marriage to that Pittsburgh lad...She found love—and she married it—so more power to her...The rags titter a little because when Lillian played at the Palace two months ago (is it that long?) she received the news of her young sweetheart's death back stage and grieved so—even while she was singing her sad songs...Lillian's moans gave you the shudders and most of us kept our undressing room doors closed to stifle her hysterical putting on a show—then she is a better actress than Hollywood thought...Now she is gay, again, and why shouldn't she be?...Hey! Hey!...Love is the bunk!...Dryden chirped that love is not in our choice, but in our fate...Spring has Sprung, anyhow ...It is a woman's privilege to remember and a man's to forget.

What a lotta horsefeathers came out of the air waves about 8 o'clock Monday night...The major stations must have been desperate for diverting entertainers...You got a cramp in your fingers twisting the dial searching for something that didn't give you an earache...Most of it seemed like so much of a speech by Borough President Levy ...Somebody recently summed up the air sitch-ee-ay-shun beautifully ...By saying that the broadcasting directors were glorifying mediocrity ...The grandest of the capsule criticisms...The rags are saying that the Dempseys haven't been dwelling together for two years...When that was first published two years ago Dempsey wanted to slug the "fellow" who wrote it...Say, a good news beat is worth one of Dempsey's slugs...Too bad about Belle Baker's "Morrie" going like that ...Nearly every one of the Broadway boys who have passed on lately were the nicest guys...The good die young, is right...That's why Broadway is so congested.

It is damb decent of Mr. Tyler, the producer, and Mr. Hampden, the actor, to fill up all that space in the papers belittling the dramatic critics...For a while, it seemed as though nobody was taking us seriously—or to heart, anymore...Mr. Tyler says that most of the first-nighters go to the play to see what is the matter with it...Well, of course!...Woollcott once amusingly said that the critics should be thanked instead of spanked...That the critics were a lot like the slaves in the olden times—who, before the noblemen and their guests dined or drank—the slaves had to sample the stuff—and if they lived—then goody, goody—the others would sit down and feast and never worry about poisoned wines or fowl...And if the slaves died—then' what the hell?...It is Goldsmith's polite advice that the critic should always take care to say that the picture would have been better if the painter had taken more pains...What the Tylers and Hampdens overlook is that the critic represents a newspaper—a newspaper represents the people—and that critics are assigned to shows to keep showmen from misrepresenting presentations.

The next time I see Jimmy Walker I must show him some of the letters sent by cranks...Because I found something nice to say about him..."So you, too," go some of the stupid letters, "are on his pay roll?" ...And Heywood reminds me that the applause given politicians in Broadway theaters must not be taken seriously...With that I have to agree, come to think of it... Broun must have had his recent campaign for Congress in mind... For when he was introduced to great crowds at a few Broadway theaters the applause was deafening...Yet, these same applauders forgot him at the polls—or they forgot to register...I thought Jessel was a superb toastmaster at the dinner to Walker, but Jessel, for want of something sentimental to say, poked the newspaper men "who throw stones at you from their windows and we can't throw stones back"...It was good showmanship, of course, and there were numbers of listeners, who shook their heads in approval...But Jessel couldn't have been serious...Without newspapers how could he read his bad notices?

Wonder what a girl thinks about who has just been jilted...When she is sitting at the same table with the fellow she was going to marry...and the girl he married?... The other night, frixample...The scene in the gay place puzzled me ...The shelved one, escorted by another stiff-shirt wearer, was a guest of the newlyweds!...When I asked her later if the bride knew that she was almost the veiled partner up the aisle, she replied: "Oh, yes, she's my best friend!"...Discretion, of course...Seneca declared that a woman either loves or hates—there is no third possibility...Women can bear pain more gracefully than men, anyhow...Reminds me of the gal last year, who called me over to her table and said: "Over there across the way is the fellow I went around with five years. He married that girl with him yesterday and called me up to tell me about it."..."Yeah?" I said, "who is she?" "She's the girl,' was the devastating answer, "I used to room with—and every time he took me out—I always suggested she come along—so she wouldnt get lonesome."

The word "crack" probably will be claimed someday by a "stylist," if a controversy is made about it ...The current expression appears to be: "What kind of a crack is that?"...I must make a note of the fact, so that Dr. Vizetelly, of the dictionaries, will be saved the research trouble...In 1771 Oliver Goldsmith in "She Stoops to Conquer" used it in this manner: "That's a damned confounded crack!"...The loudest laughter in the Friars Club these days is aroused by a lad who has struck something new in dialect...Nearly every one you meet offers a story in the Irish brogue, the Joosh dialect, the Scotchman's lingo or the negro's...The "show stopper" offers a routine in the Greek manner and it is very comical...The highest salaried comedians flock about him and implore him to keep gagging...And he leaves them limp ...He is the funniest of the lot, it appears, and they worship at his shrine...His name is George Givot, a singer, out of a job!

That story about the adorable Renee Adoree in the movie mag is too sad...It would have her admirers believe that she strands her purses and doctors out there at the sanitarium in the prairies whenever she feels a little zippy—and hastens back to Hollywood to go gay, again.

INSTALMENT XVI

Doris, waiting in the stiff parlor at Marietta's gate house, was walking up and down restlessly.

"I wish I was working for a living the way you are," she said as Helen entered. "With nobody to tell me what to do. Sometimes I feel as if I'd go crazy, pushing myself down out of sight all the time, and trying to turn myself into something my people want me to be. And I'm not. I never can be."

Helen looked at her, surprised. Doris, like many inarticulate people, once she had opened her heart to someone, went on recklessly. Her thin pointed face was tense with the excitement of actually talking things out.

"I know I have pretty clothes and jewelry, and expensive parties. But they're not my clothes or my jewelry or my parties. Everything is picked out for me by Aunt Louisa. And if I ask father for a little freedom, he just says, 'You're too young to know what you want.' Oh, Helen, some day I think I'll go crazy or run away!"

"But why do you stand it?" Helen asked curiously. Her own life had been so different; she would so have liked to have people care enough to dictate, even, she thought sometimes.

Doris' pallor changed to a hot painful flush.

"I'm a coward. That's why. I've thought of going off and getting a job a hundred times. But I'm just plain scared. You know I don't have any allowance, only things bought for me. Aunt Lou has told me what to do since I was a baby. And it's sort of like having grown up with handcuffs on. When she says things, I just have to obey!"

Helen looked at her pityingly. It must be dreadful to be chained like that. Doris' aunt, stiff, old-fashioned woman that she was, with her air of rigid certainty, ruled her brother, and through him Doris. Doris' mother's elopement, of course. They kept the stable door locked on Doris.

"But I haven't told you yet what I want," Doris said, quieting down a little, and standing still, a tremulous young figure, extinguished instead of enhanced by the heavily embroidered white silk sport-suit she wore. "I came to ask you if you'd come over tonight and help us cut and title the gay young oysterman."

Helen stared at Doris in surprise, for a moment. Didn't Doris have any sympathy for Helen, after pouring out her own troubles to Helen in a certainty of sympathy? And then, seeing the girl's childish sad little face, she realized that Doris was not, as yet, old or wise enough in her feelings, whatever she might be by reason of age, to reach outside herself and be sorry for other people. She felt older and wiser than Doris suddenly, and very pitying.

"I'd love to come," she said.

"Oh, thank you, Helen. Becky Purdon said you wouldn't want to but I told her I knew better. I told her you were just as gay and happy as ever, and delighted you weren't going to have to marry Tommy!"

"So I am!" Helen said truthfully.

"Then you think you'll write and tell Allen—"

"No, nor Bill!" said Helen teasingly. "You're so in love yourself, Dorrie, you can't imagine anybody being comfortable without wanting to get married and live happily ever after."

"Then you're really over Tommy?" Doris persisted wide eyed, peering over her fur neckpiece.

"Really—over—Tommy," said Helen, spacing the words emphatically...Like a child's book she had read and loved long ago. Like a game she had liked to play when she was a very little girl. Far off—dimmed—only a remembrance that Tommy had charm.

She laughed a little and put her arm around Doris as if she were her own little sister in Baltimore.

"Tommy could charm your eyelashes off, but I'm over the hypnotism," she said. "I'll love to see the old crowd, and I have some grand ideas about titling."

A great happiness and relief swept over her. Relief, and self-respect, and happiness. Why, she didn't! She was telling the truth! Tommy—wildly gay, horribly depressed Tommy—Tommy, with his quick unreasonableness and wild words of worship—Tommy, and all Tommy stood for, suddenly showed themselves for what they were. Wonderful, but dim, somehow. Far off. Something that didn't really matter, now. She took a long happy breath. She was free! All the values changed. She laughed a little, putting her arms around Doris. "I don't a bit," she repeated.

"You always have wonderful ideas," repeated adoring Doris. "I'm so glad you're coming—"

"Where's she coming to?" demanded Patricia, appearing from nowhere, swift and assured in her brief straight smock and knickers, leaping at Helen and twining, not only her arms, but her slim brown legs, around her.

"Here, I'm not a tree," said Helen, bending down to kiss the child as she detached her. "I'm going to Miss Milliken's house tonight, to title a picture. And I'll tell you at length what titling a picture is, but not now—"

"Do you love her more than you do me?" Patricia demanded.

Helen laughed, answering the child, as she always did, as if she were grown up.

"That's a very embarrassing personal question. Not the kind people ever get answers to that are true, so there's no use asking them," she assured Patricia. She said it absently. Her mind was swirling with this new discovery. She was over Tommy. She didn't mind about him. Over Tommy—

She laughed aloud. Suddenly, standing there in Marietta's low-ceilinged old room with the late fall sunshine about her, she was alive and radiant. Doris and Patricia looked at her in admiration, warmed by the sudden vibration of color and happiness she gave out, golden and rose and strongly alive. Doris, weaker and more timid, looked at her almost with awe. Little Patricia, herself a force, threw herself against Helen again, hugging her hard.

"Oh, I love you, Helen! I do love you! What makes people love you so?"

She spoke with an odd unchildlike intensity. Helen was a little troubled. She answered her lightly.

"The reason the lamb loved Mary so, darling. Remember 'Mary's Little Lamb,' that funny old poem your cousin Ada was telling you the other afternoon?"

"It was sort of silly," nodded Patricia, "but I remember."

"What makes the lamb love Mary so?

Cause Mary loved the lamb, you know."

"Oh, that's a very nice reason. G'bye Helen. I got to finish what I was doing."

She was out, a graceful flash of yellow and brown, before Doris could do more than stare at her.

"She's a queer child," she said, as people inevitably said about Patricia.

"She's strange, but she's a wonderful one," Helen defended her. "She has an amazing mind. She had an odd upbringing. I wonder if you would do me a favor, Doris—let me take her over to meet your little cousin Lucy, tonight. She ought to have playmates, and she simply won't. Lucy being a mermaid—"

Doris laughed tremulously, as she so often did at Helen's simplest phrases.

"You do say the funniest things!"

Helen smiled too and went on. "What I mean is, seeing Lucy have a part in the picture she'll respect her. I love Patricia, but she's a little pirate. She has to be awed a little. And Lucy having to go home to bed early, of course, I can send Patricia too."

"Do you really like it," Doris asked doubtfully, "having a child to take care of, instead of being a secretary?"

"I adore it," Helen said honestly. "A child is fun! And—don't think I'm sentimental, Doris, but if I don't have people to love and make a fuss over, honestly, I'm—well, I'm uncomfortable!" She laughed as she finished her confession. "And there is nothing in the world as exciting as watching things grow, even if they're children. The orange seeds I used to plant in pots when I was little were nothing to it."

Doris looked at her with half-comprehending, admiring eyes.

"I guess I never had time enough from being unhappy about myself to want to watch things grow," she said sadly. "I've had to put in all my time trying to evade Aunt Louisa."

She looked so frail, so frightened, that Helen's heart went out to her.

"If there's anything I can ever do for you, Doris," she promised, "I will. You'll let me know, won't you?"

It did not occur to either girl that according to the world's standards Doris had everything and Helen nothing. Helen, in her strength and charm, bent over Doris, frightened and little and unhappy, and offered, and Doris accepted gratefully.

"I will—I will!" she promised, coloring high. "And—it may be sooner than you think, Helen. And I'll love to arrange to have Patricia play with little Lucy. I'll see you tonight."

With the last words she froze into her shyness again, but Helen kissed her warmly, and the two girls parted, Helen to follow Patricia into the grounds, for those last words of the child's still rang in her ears, Patricia and her necessity for digging a hole sounded as if she needed watching. The old story about "see what Johnny was doing and tell him to stop it" applied fatally to Patricia.

HARD WATER PLUS MEL'O MAKES SOFT WATER

Such greasy hands!

Hard water won't clean them

HARD water can't do much with greasy hands. Of course, you use lots of soap. You try to get a thick lather. But the water is too hard; it combines with the soap and forms a scum. How can you expect to clean greasy hands in that water?

There is a way. Use Mel'o. Sprinkle a little in the basin. Water softened with Mel'o makes a wonderful cleaner with or without soap. Soft water and soap and lots of lather; grease won't stay long on your hands. Get a can of Mel'o at your grocer's today.

D. Dix Advises Aged Mother Of Selfish Son

Dear Miss Dix—I am a woman nearly 70 years old and have brought up a large family of children. I owned, through my own and my husband's labor and thrift, a house which we bought before our children were able to work. My husband died, but I managed to cling to the house with the aid of all the boys except the oldest, who married when he was in his early 20s and who, of course, had to support his own family.

Now I have sold the house at a good profit, and the oldest son, who hase never helped me in any way financially, demands part of the money, saying it is his right. The toher children refuse to take a cent, telling me to keep all I have for my old age. What shall I do about giving the oldest son the money he demands? He is after me all the time about it, and it will make the other children so angry when they find out about it if I do give him the money. Please help.

—AN OLD-FASHIONED TROUBLED MOTHER.

Answer—Stiffen your backbone, Troubled Mother, and say "No" good and hard to your greedy, selfish son. Tell him that he will have to wait until you are dead before he gets his clutching fingers on your little bank roll. Of all your children he has the least claim upon you, and you will be unfair to them as well as to yourself if you give him the money out of which he is trying to wheedle you.

Surely the angels must weep at the spectacle of a son, a husky grown man, who is trying to graft from his poor old mother the money that her one-piece of property brought her, who is willing to rob her of the few dollars that she has depended upon to make her last days comfortable and independent and who torments her tender mother heart with his importunities.

Human nature can show nothing baser than that. Robbing one's mother is the most despicable of all crimes, yet it is one not infrequently committed. Grasping children take their mother's all, promising her to take care of her and cherish her as long as she lives. They are very affectionate and solicitous for her happiness until they get her money and then she finds herself thrust aside, made to feel a burden, often actually turned out of the house she has given them.

Any mother may be very sure of this—that if her children want her money it is not safe to give it to them. For if they loved her they would not be willing to take it. They would want her to spend it on herself, not on them. They would want her to have the blessed assurance of independence. They would want her to be able to indulge herself in the little luxuries she denied herself while she was struggling to rear them.

So the mother whose children are urging her to give them her property does well to get a death grip on her pocketbook. As long as she has money they will treat her well. The minute she has none they will send her to the poorhouse.

Just bear this in mind, Troubled Mother. Refuse to be held up by your avaricious son. He is trying to take advantage of you and of his worthier sisters and brothers. Be just to your self and to them by refusing to give him the money for which he hounds you.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Our Children

By ANGELO PATRI

To Much Good

It is easy to impose upon a willing child. A teacher or parent finds that he accepts each task given him cheerfully. He does so well that each finished task brings another and greater on its heels. Soon the child is burdened to the earth. His spirit is crushed with too much goodness.

A child is an evolving creature. His growth is, by nature, erratic, spasmodic, yet rhythmical. He needs a program of living that allows much leeway. If he wants to spurt ahead on a job he should be allowed to do so. When the spurt is over, he should be allowed to rest.

We are likely to make a mistake here. When the child is speeding along full tilt, we cheer him on, greedy for accomplishment. We prolong this period of high endeavor past the time when it should subside. We deprive the child of the span of rest that nature ordained he should have. When we see signs of his falling off in speed or amount of work, we ask, "What's the matter? Not going to fall down on this job, are you?" We might better keep still. Give the child who has been working along at high speed a chance to rest, to recover his spent energy, to take on fresh growth.

Nature is wiser than we in this method. She sets a child at work. For a time he is engrossed in his task. On fire with interest, a dynamo of energy, he works miracles. Then the climax is reached. He stops. He has achieved the growth that was to come from this phase of work. Now he is to rest and store up energy for the next stride forward. The new growth may take him in an entirely different direction over a new route. We cannot tell. But we can keep our hands off and let the child follow his own course of growth instead of keeping him eternally at it. This child training, this education of ours, must be in partnership with the children. We too often err in overlooking their share in the process.

It is next to impossible to overwork some children. They move slowly. They respond indifferently. Yet they grow. Sometimes I think they have a better chance to grow their best because it is so hard for us to interfere with them. They make it so hard for us that we have to let them alone. So the good child, the intelligent, keen-minded, responsive child gets too much good. Does too much good.

If you have such a child, and many of you have, take thought about his schedule of work and play. Does it provide for free time for the child? Is there somewhere in the list of lessons and duties a little space where he can go apart with self and make friends with his mind? Is there a little space of time where he can lie on his back under a tree, or in the bottom of a boat, and drift on the bosom of his thought? Have you left a little doorway for his soul to slip through now and then?

In our greediness for our children we are likely to do too much. We would live for them, if we should. We would cheat them, all unknowingly of much that makes life worth while. Give a little space to the good child so he may expand a little as his nature indicates.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

Modern Gardener Demands Variety In His Edgings

By BERTHA M'KEE DOBIE

In the South of older days, in Texas of even 30 years ago, roses and violets went into the garden together, as they went into the sweetheart rhyme. No one thought of making a garden without both. The bricks that bound the flower beds were half concealed with successive mounds of violets, and the walk from the front gate to the gallery, whether of plank or brick, was edged with them. Corsages were of violets. Booth Tarkington makes his Alice Adams, too poor to buy violets to wear at her rich friend's dance, gather wild ones into a great bouquet and then feel ashamed when she compares them with the hothouse violets worn by the other girls. I have never quite liked Mr. Tarkington for bringing wild violets into a company that disparages them. But the incident illustrates the esteem in which cultivated violets were once held. Latterly flowers of garish hue and large size have expressed the time-spirit, and there has been scant notice for

"A violet by a mossy stone,
Half hidden from the eye."

Perhaps now that the world "old-fashioned" is losing its connotation of dowdy dullness, violets will come back along with flower-wreathed hats and victorian furniture. But they will never again hold the field as an edging plant. The modern spirit, craving variety, finds satisfaction in a multitude of species. In this article some good edging plants will be called to mind and their more particular uses suggested. The word "border" will be avoided in the sense of edging, since in garden language it has come to mean the wide planting of perennials and annuals along property margins and walks.

Points to Consider

The qualifications of good edging plants vary with particular uses. But there are points to be considered: low stature, compact form, tidy habit, color harmony, a long blooming period, and pleasing foliage to carry on after blooming has ceased. Some plants that occupy the foreground are not, in a strict sense, edgings. Perhaps they sprawl too much, like petunias, or run too far, like verbena. Certain others are dwarf forms of larger plants, and should stand in front of their taller brethren only. Tom Thumb varieties of snapdragon only eight inches high, Lilliput zinnias (zinnia Mexicana, Pompon zinnia, and the fiery Red Riding Hood, with tight flowers hardly more than an inch across), and dwarf marigolds are all useful in facing down beds of tall varieties. But they are not set apart and dedicated to the business of delineating the verge of a bed or border as are those plants with which this article specifically deals.

Shrubby evergreen edgings having evergreen foliage are manifestly desirable. In the 18th century and the early part of the 19th most flower beds in Virginia, Pennsylvania and New England were marked with boxwood. Boxwood, with its growth of from half an inch to a whole inch a year, is hardly for this hurrying age. Yet it is sometimes set out even now in gardens that are made to endure. The variety for edgings is Buxus suffruticosa. A dwarf evergreen shrub, Dahpne cneorum, named for a nymp, makes a perfect edging. Twice a year it covered with clusters of pink flowers, delightfully fragrant. Its perfection is, however, difficult to attain. In the first place, it is expensive; and only a lover cares to multiply a few purchased plants by rooting the tips in sand or by cutting a trailing branch nearly through and pinning it firmly underground at the cut point. In the second place, the garland flower—for the plant is also called by this name—does not take kindly to Texas. Here it should be used only to edge shady borders and should be given a gritty, rather acid soil. A third edging of shrubby habit—the word is here used of plants hardening their wood and has no reference to size—is santolina, or lavender cotton, which is much used in West Texas. It is gray, dense, low, and drouth-resistant. P. G. Northrup of San Angelo, who uses to edge a cactus bed, says that the flowers appear when the cactus blooms and that the repetition of the dominant yellow in their tiny forms is very pleasing. Lavender cotton, though fine for castus and shrubbery borders, is not to be used where a dainty effect is desired.

Foliage plants not shrubby are to be found in various colors. Dutsy miller, one variety of which is only 10 inches high, has long been a favorite for edging beds of pink or red geraniums. Alternanthera is the plant, sometimes red and sometimes yellow, with which the name of a town is spelled out on railway station grounds. Pyrethrum aureum is a low plant with yellow foliage.

Perennial Edgings

In listing perennial and annual edgings according to color classification, I ran afoul of the fact that many edgings are in several colors. Readers must therefore bear with some repetition. In the North a perennial dies down in winter and comes up again from the root; in the lower South many perennials are evergeen.

A few good white perennial edgings are rock cress (aragis), both single and double; evergreen candytuft (Iberis sempervirens); English daisy, the "we, modest, crimson-tipped flower" the crushif of which beneath his plowshare caused Burns' immortal grief; spice pinks; and a daisy that looks like a Shasta but grows only one foot high and blooms all season.

Blue, though a much desired color in the garden, is seldom used as an edging plant except in combination with other colors. Grape hyacinths, of a heavenly blue, are good in combination with something that will remain after they take themselves off; they do well in Texas. A fairly tall-growing form of plumbago is common in yards from one end of the state to the other, but plumbago larpentae, growing from eight to ten inches high and having flowers of cobalt blue, is little known. Campanula carpatica, blue and white, is an eight-inch perennial belonging to a large family of which Canterbury bells and chimney bellflower are the best known representatives. Anchusa myosotidiflora, 12 inches high, is to be planted in shade only; the second name means "having flowers like forget-me-nots."

Some yellow perennial edgings are Alyssum saxatile compactum; Alyssum citrinum, of a less sulphurous hue; Corydalis cheilanthifolia, much like the "scrambled eggs" of our prairies; and hedge mustard, good with grape hyacinths. All these bloom early.

Among edgings from pink to rose are the English daisy (for white is not its only color); spice, or clove, pinks, so popular that when they get a start in a town they run its length; moss pink (phlox subulata), which is, however, so vivid that it does not combine with many colors; Ionoxalis drummondii, a native rose-colored wood-sorrel finer than that offered by plantsmen;

Can't PLAY
Can't REST
—child needs Castoria

WHEN a child is fretful and irritable, seems distressed and uncomfortable, can't play, can't sleep, it is a pretty sure sign that something is wrong. Right here is where Castoria fits into a child's scheme—the very purpose for which it was formulated years ago! A few drops and the condition which caused the trouble is righted; comfort quickly brings restful sleep.

Nothing can take the place of Castoria for children; it's perfectly harmless, yet always effective. For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an every-day aid. Its gentle action will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. In more liberal doses it will effectively help to regulate sluggish bowels in an older child.

All druggists have Castoria; it's genuine if you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature and this name-plate:

Adhesions May Prevent Cure

Patients who suffer from long existing disorders have often tried every possible remedy without success. They have tried many different doctors, medicines, surgery, Christian Science, baths, massage, chiropractic and diet. Often through the use of treatments or remedies they undergo a temporary relief and yet the trouble returns, and casual examination will not usually disclose why these patients do not improve.

I have examined thousands of such cases who came to me apparently as a last resort. In examining these patients under the fluroscope of the X-ray I am able to find in practically every case definite adhesions, which are binding down or interfering with the functions of important organs in the body. When it is possible to loosen these adhesions the patient immediately makes a change for the better.

There comes to my mind the case of a prominent motion picture star who had been ailing for years with gall bladder attacks and jaundice. He tried every remedy as suggested to him if he thought that it would be of any value, but the attacks continued with unfailing regularity. The examination under the X-ray did not disclose any gall stones, but his doctors were convinced that his gall bladder was the seat of the trouble. Finally, after much persuasion, the actor consented to an operation for the removal of the gall bladder. The surgeon, in performing the operation, finally, after some difficulty, reached the gall bladder and loosened it from its adhering tissues so that he could examine it. The gall bladder was found to be a perfectly healthy organ. This being the case, and the surgeon being conscientious, the gall bladder was replaced in its natural position and the incision closed. Now the surprising result was that this patient had no further gall bladder attacks. He has had a perfectly healthy gall bladder through several years which have intervened since the operation.

The correct explanation is that the adhesions which had formed around the gall bladder were separated when the doctor pulled the gall bladder into such a position that he could examine it. The adhesions had been frequently interfering with the discharge of bile. When they were severed the bile flowed normally. The result is that the gall bladder attacks disappeared.

We find many other types of adhesions. In epilepsy it is quite common to note peculiar kinds of the intestines which are bound together by adhesions. Where the adhesions are bad the patient may try drugs or diets with only temporary relief until the adhesions are loosened. Adhesions also often bind down prolapsed organs, producing a permanent pressure upon vital structures in the lower part of the abdominal region. Since the adhesions bind the organs out of their proper places and limit their amount of movement, it is easy to see how adhesions of the intestines and colon would be a direct cause of chronic constipation which does not yield to any remedies.

If you can imagine two of your fingers grown together you can realize how the functioning and the movement is interfered with.

Women, especially, are likely to have adhesions, and many cases of female weakness can be traced to sagging organs which are bound out of their normal positions by adhesions.

In examining thousands of patients under the X-ray it is quite apparent that some of the strongest adhesions from around prolapsed or sagging organs.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mycosis Fungoides

Question—B. G. asks: "Will you please give me some information about mycosis fungoides? What causes it? One of my brothers is thought to have this disease?"

Answer—Mycosis fungoides is a very serious skin disease marked by development on the face, scalp and chest of firm, reddish tumors which are painful and which have a tendency to spread and ulcerate. The disease causes a serious poisoning of the system and is very dangerous. It seems to be caused by a bacterial infection of a fungus nature. Of course, this explanation could not determine whether or not your brother has this disease, as there are a number of less serious disturbances which may closely resemble it. Only a careful bacteriological examination would make the distinction possible.

Raw Spinach

Question—Mrs. H. K. asks: "Is not the oxalic acid in spinach injurious when this vegetable is used as a raw salad?"

Answer—The amount of oxalic acid in spinach could not be considered injurious to the average person. It is one of the richest in iron of the leafy vegetables, and those who have a deficiency of hemoglobin or red corpuscles in the blood should use a plentiful supply in the raw form.

Normal Pulse Rate

Question—F. H. asks: "What is the normal pulse rate? Also breathing and blood pressure?"

Answer—The normal pulse rate is 72 beats per minute. The normal breathing is 18 per minute, and the normal systolic blood pressure is 130 M.M. These may fluctuate considerably with exercise or emotional conditions without being the indication of any disorder.

TROOPS SEEK SANDINO'S HEAD

Rival Forces Near Battle In Honduras

WASHINGTON, April 21. (UP)—Confidence that the Nicaraguan government would suppress Augustino Sandino and his band was expressed by President Hoover today in a statement which declared the insurgent leader had placed himself beyond the "civilized pale by cold blooded murder of eight of nine American civilians."

Meanwhile, reports indicated the United States' other Central American problem—the Honduran revolt—is nearing solution. American Minister Julius G. Lay reported "the government seems to have the situation under control." Further fighting was expected, however, around San Pedro Sula and Lay sent his naval attache to investigate the safety of Americans in that section.

The president said: "Our advices are that the Nicaraguan government has now placed in the field a total of over 1,300 men of the newly created national guard in a drive to clean up Sandino and his fellow bandits."

AMERICANS TAKE REFUGE BEHIND NAVY'S GUNS

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, April 21.—Three thousand Honduran federal troops today moved into the Puerto Cortes region on the north coast of Honduras where they were expected to at once engage in the rebel forces under Genral Roman Diaz.

Heavy fighting is expected in the region, which includes the towns of San Pedro Sula, Buffalo, La Ilma and Villa Nueva. All American women and children residing at La Lima have eben evacuated. These numbered several families.

The U. S. S. Marblehead arrived at Puerto Cortes harbor today to protect American interests and evacuate American nationals if necessary. The cruiser Trenton is at Trujillo and the Memphis at La Ceiba. American Minister J. G. Lay has asked the declaration of a neutral zone near San Pedro Sula, where many foreigners live.

Unemployed Kings of Portugal And Spain Confer in London

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
(Copyright, 1931, Universal Service, Inc.)

LONDON, April 21.—There was an interesting meeting of "unemployed" tonight in the foyer of claridges at 7 p. m. when Don Emmanuel, ex-king of Portugal, greeted Don Alfonso, ex-king of Spain.

Alfonso, wearing a green hat and a brown overcoat, pushed his way through the police guards and on entering the foyer the first person he greeted was the sallow-faced Don Emmanuel, who has been so long in exile he has almost forgotten what being a king means.

The tired face of the Spanish sovereign, Europe's latest royal traveler, lighted with surprise as he heartily grasped Emmanuel's outstretched hand and then threw his arm around Emmanuel's shoulder. The Portuguese don insinuated the Spanish don into the elevator, and together the two ex-kings disappeared to the royal suite.

The Duke of Miranda, Alfonso's cousin who accompanied his sovereign from Paris, later sent down a note:

"His majesty's visit is purely concerned with business and family affairs. There is nothing official connected with it. There will be no statement further than this."

That no official of the British government met Alfonso at ictoria station when he arrived at 6:35 o'clock was quite to be expected, since Whitehall today announced the official recognition of the Spanish Republican government.

Nevertheless, there was some surprise that not a single representative of the royal household of King George was at Victoria station or Claridges to convey a welcome. The impression is gaining ground that Alfonso will receive only formal courtesies from Windsor palace not only because of political but also because of family reasons.

MURRAY HINTS EXTRA SESSION

Committee's Work to Decide Question

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 21. (UP)—A special session of the legislature might be called, but it will not deal with taxation, Gov. W. H. Murray said today.

The governor said the question of a special session depends upon the accomplishments of the special committee of 21 studying proposed amendments to the state constitution.

"I want the judiciary system of this state straightened out and I believe this committee now at work will be able to do it," the governor said.

Changes Due

"When the judicial system of a nation goes to rot, then its civilization begins to slip. This committee may be able to correct this fault in our state government and save Oklahoma."

The governor declined to say what date a special session might be called.

The constitutional committee, which held its first session yesterday, was expected to make definite recommendations for several law changes soon.

Four basic problems were considered today. These included tax reforms, judicial reorganization, amendments to the workmen's compensation act and shortening of the state ballot.

A proposal to consolidate a number of counties into one district was suggested by Federal Judge R. L. Williams.

Likelihood of a special session was considered obscure by observers who believed that the governor's sole purpose in calling a special session was for tax reform, the subject of his initial plan.

The governor late yesterday vetoed a $15,000 appropriation for a recess legislative committee to study taxation, to prepare a report for a special session. This, with removal of records from the legislative chambers, was believed to have been indicative for abandonment of the plan for a special session.

BRISTOW, Okla., April 21. (AP)—Police Chief W. H. Herman said this afternoon a suspect in the holdup of the Community State bank here had been arrested and was being brought to the city for questioning.

Cashier of the bank said the greater part of the $3,200 stolen from the bank at noon had been recovered with the arrest.

BRISTOW, Okla., April 21. (UP)—A masked bandit robbed the Community State bank here of $3,000 this afternoon and escaped.

The bandit entered the bank shortly after noon. He theratened Cashier Joe Britten and John Christian, a bookkeeper, and forced two customers to lie on the floor while he looted the cash tills.

He forced the four into a vault and walked leisurely from the bank. It was believed he escaped in a car parked near the bank, although none saw his departure.

Britten escaped from the vault and called the sheriff's office. A posse was organized but no trace of the bandit had been found an hour after the robbery.

Trinity River Bill Passed by House

AUSTIN, April 21. (AP)—Another step in the long hard fight to canalize the Trinity river was taken today when the house passed a bill proposing creation of the Trinity river conservation and reclamation district in Dallas and Tarrant counties. The vote was 78 to 44. As passed the bill would not become effective until 90 days after adjournment of the legislature.

The bill would authorize voters of the district to levy a two-cent tax per $100 valuation on property in metropolitan Dallas and Fort Worth, and on a small strip of land along the Trinity river between the two cities, to raise funds to pay for preliminary surveys.

If surveys made proved the canalization project practical, efforts would be made to procure approximately $40,000,000 in appropriations from the federal government with which to complete the project.

STUDY OF RINGWORM SHOWS WAY TO STOP "ATHLETE'S FOOT"

Perhaps you are one of the ten million people in America today who are victims of the infection commonly called "Athlete's Foot"—and don't know what ails you!

Known by several different names, this vexing disease is an insidious form of ringworm. When first contracted it produces a general itching condition. The toes blister, the skin between them turns red or sometimes white. It may become moist and thick or develop a scaly dryness.

If you notice any of these symptoms, take no chances of serious infection. Apply ABSORBINE JR. at once and freely, as recommended by specialists.

For after careful tests of this strange disease, a famous New York laboratory found that this mild, soothing, yet powerful, antiseptic is especially deadly to the tinea trichophyton germs which cause "Athlete's Foot."

It is wise to use ABSORBINE JR. after every exposure to wet surfaces—in public places and even in your own bathroom. For the tiny parasites breed and lurk simply everywhere, and are always ready to attack. At all drug stores, $1.25. W. F. Young, Inc., Springfield, Mass.

Cooking School Note by Mrs. Frances Northcross

In the cooking school I conducted recently under the auspices of the Times and Record News, I stressed modern methods of cooking. Naturally, then, I use and recommend CRISCO—for it's a modern shortening. MRS. FRANCES NORTHCROSS.

How an Irishman glorified the Irish potato

JUST the other evening I ran across this interesting recipe for Potatoes O'Brien and the story of its origin:

O'Brien, so the story goes, was chef at Jack's, a restaurant famous for its good food back in the days when New York was small enough that you sometimes met a friend on the street. And he originated Potatoes O'Brien—a favorite dish in hotels everywhere today.

If you've thought that Potatoes O'Brien were too complicated to make at home, you'll be glad to know how easy they are—and how good! Fried in Crisco, a fat so sweet and fresh that it tastes good all by itself, potatoes really taste like potatoes.

POTATOES O'BRIEN

Dice cold boiled potatoes. Mix them with chopped raw bacon, onion and pimiento. Fry in Crisco in a frying pan as you would hashed brown potatoes. Stir occasionally until partly brown over the bottom, double over like an omelet and serve on the platter in omelet shape.

The secret of an omelet's rise

Here's an omelet that has a success hint wrapped up in it: It's browned on top of the stove and then popped into the oven to finish cooking, so that there's no chance of its falling. And, of course, the delicate, fresh-laid flavor of the eggs is preserved when you fry in Crisco—a cooking fat that tastes good just as it comes from its air-tight can.

SUCCESS OMELET

5 eggs (separated) — Few grains pepper
1 teaspoon salt — Few grains cayenne
5 tablespoons hot water — 1 tablespoon Crisco

Beat egg yolks until thick and add salt, pepper and cayenne—and hot water. Mix well. Fold in lightly the stiffly beaten whites until thoroughly blended. Melt Crisco in an iron frying pan or omelet pan. Pour in the egg mixture and spread evenly. Cook over a slow fire, moving the pan occasionally so as to distribute the heat evenly. When a delicate brown underneath, put in a moderate oven (350° F.) and bake 10 or 15 minutes or until top is firm. Fold and serve on a hot platter. Garnish with parsley. As a change from plain omelet, just before serving, fold in the omelet, jelly (or hot green vegetables such as peas or asparagus).

ALL MEASUREMENTS LEVEL. Recipes tested and approved by cooking authorities. Crisco is the registered trademark of a shortening manufactured by The Procter & Gamble Company.

SPUDDERS WIN BOTH GAMES OF DOUBLE-HEADER WITH SPORTS

TEAMS CLOSE SERIES TODAY

Williamsmen Nose Out Foes, 9 to 8 and 4 to 3

The Spudders came out on top in their first double-header of the season Tuesday, defeating the Shreveport Sports in both games by the skin of their teeth. The scores were 9 to 8 and 4 to 3, and both contests were as thrilling as the scores indicate. In nosing out the Sports the Spudders assisted Skipper Jake Atz to retain his doleful record of not a single victory this season.

The games were played despite a bitter cold wind, and the extra players on the bench, a gang in the knot hole section and a score or so of others were the only spectators.

Both contests were featured by a constant parade of pitchers to the mound, young Bob Cooney of the Spudders and Oscar Tuero of the Sports seeing more service than any of them.

Cooney Opens First

Bob Cooney opened the first game for the home cause and had the Sports eating out of his hand for five innings, the first four of which he allowed not a single blow. In the fifth he gave up two hits, neither of which resulted in runs, but in the seventh three hits, including Cashion's triple, and two bases on balls allowed four runs to scamper across. Cooney went out in the eighth with the bases loaded and two out and Lester White relieved him. Vorhoff's double cleared the bases but the rest of the game White subdued the rally which threatened to overtake the nine Spudder counters.

The Spuds meanwhile had scored but one run off Underhill, Sports starter, in four innings, but they got to him in the fifth for five hits and four runs. His successor, Ross, gave up the same number of runs in the sixth, but the veteran Joe Pate controlled things thereafter.

Tuero went the route for the Sports in the seven-inning nightcap, but Roland Flinn, Spudder starter, lasted only two and one-third innings, long enough to allow the Sports their three runs. Florrid and Pressnell finished, Florrid going out for a pinch hitter in the fourth.

Garms Leads Attack

Getting off to a lead on Garms' double and the Sport second baseman's error on which Garms scored, the Spudders then went scoreless two innings before tying the count in the fourth. Singles by Badgro, Scharein and Bryant and Bradbury's infield out pushed over the two runs. The game went scoreless then until the last of the seventh, when Garms, first up, doubled, went to third on Kelly's infield out, and scored when Stanton hit a bounder to the box which Tuero failed to recover in time to get Garms at the plate.

The teams conclude the series today, the game starting at 4 o'clock. The scores:

AIREY STRICKEN

Spudder Secretary Joins Vincent in Appendix Ward

When Fred Vincent, Spudder pitcher, suffered an acute attack of appendicitis Monday he started something. Tuesday afternoon during the double-header with Shreveport, Guy Airey, secretary of the Wichita Falls Baseball club, suffered an attack and shortly after was operated upon at the Wichita Falls Clinic hospital for the removal of his appendix.

Airey, feeling ill, left the game and went to the hospital for a consultation. An operation was advised and he went under the knife about 5:30 o'clock.

He went through the ordeal successfully, physicians said, and Tuesday night his condition was favorable.

Across from his room in the hospital lies Vincent, who is rapidly recovering.

PENNOCK TURNS BACK CHAMPS

Yanks Pound Three Hurlers For 12-1 Victory

NEW YORK, April 21. (AP)—The combined wildness of three Philadelphia pitchers enabled the Yankees to pile up 10 runs in the first two innings today and then coast to a 12 to 1 victory over the Athletics. Herb Pennock pitched a fine game for New York, allowing only seven hits.

Mahaffey started for the A's but gave way to Carter in the second. The second youngster gave four walks and a single before retiring in favor of Ed Rommel, who finished the game.

SENATORS WIN

WASHINGTON, April 21. (AP)—Walter Johnson's Senators made it two out of three in the series with the Boston Red Sox by romping away with the final game today by a 12 to 3 count.

Batting hard behind the seven-hit pitching of Fred Marberry, who was making his first start of the year, the Senators staged a form reversal to avenge yesterday's drubbing.

The home team clouted 16 hits, including homers by Bluege and Myer.

Two errors by Joe Cronin, Washington shortstop, proved costly. Score:

INDIANS DOWN TIGERS

CLEVELAND, April 21. (AP)—The Cleveland Indians won a 5 to 4 decision over the Detroit Tigers today, after Stone, Tiger outfielder, had tied the score in the first half of the ninth inning by hitting a home run over the fence with two on base. It gave the Indians a 2 to 1 margin in the series.

Wesley Ferrell got credit for his second victory by stopping the ninth inning Detroit rally. Stone's home run was his third in the three games. Score:

Runyon 'Hopes and Trusts' That Uncle Wilbert's Robins Win Flag

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, April 21.—I hope and trust that your Uncle Wilbert Robinson and his Brooklyn Dodgers win the National league pennant this year.

It isn't that I have any civic pride in Brooklyn, although it is a nice place, at that, and could use a National league pennant very well. It is because I am sentimentally interested in your Uncle Wilbert Robinson.

In years your Uncle Wilbert is up in the paints, as the boys around the Volney club might say. He is no older, if as old as Mr. Cornelius McGillicuddy, who is supposed to win the American league pennant again this year, but your Uncle Wilbert is no springer, though his heart beats as young as ever.

I think the enjoyment of winning the National league pennant would add another semester to your Uncle Wilbert Robinson's span of life, and I am highly in favor of keeping him around a long time to come. He adds so much to the joy of living. Moreover, I would like to see your Uncle Wilbert in a world's series against Mr. Cornelius McGillicuddy, who is supposed to win the American league pennant this year.

I have not heard your Uncle Wilbert's own personal estimate of the ball club he has brought out of the South this spring. I mean his private estimate, which is always a little different from your Uncle Wilbert's public estimate. Your Uncle Wilbert's public estimate is apt to be that his club is first rate, while his private opinion is sometimes something you cannot print out of a sense of delicacy toward your readers.

He's Picturesque

Say what you please, win, lose or draw, your Uncle Wilbert's management of the Brooklyn baseball club is the most picturesque thing left to the game. Your Uncle Wilbert takes his office as a public trust, one that he may freely discuss and debate with all and sundry of the inmates of Brooklyn.

It is an experience to be remembered to ride away from the ball yard in Flatbush with your Uncle Wilbert, through the teeming streets of Brooklyn, and hear him argue his functions with his fellow citizens.

"Hey? Robbie!" a taxi driver will cry, laying his juggernaut alongside the Robinson gasoline catamaran, "Whuddy u' mean by leavin' that bum in there pitchin' today when he didden have as smuch as a prayer?"

"Well, now, I'll tell you," your Uncle Wilbert will say, pleasantly, jockeying his sampan within yelling distance of the taxicheater, "it was this way."

Or maybe that way.

Thus your Uncle Wilbert Robinson takes part in the community spirit of Brooklyn. He has no secrets from his fellow citizens. Nor would Brooklyn, accustomed for many years to having its baseball dealt out to it above board, understand a secretive management of the Dodgers.

'Way back yonder when the late Charley Ebbets was president of the club, he would often get on a soap box and address his complaining constituency when the Dodgers, then popularly known as the "Soopolbas," were in a slump. It was the late Ebbets who brought a real Rotarian spirit of get-togetherness into the conduct of baseball in Brooklyn, and no man could say that he held anything out on him.

Style Was Cramped

The style of the late Ebbets with reference to soap box oration was somewhat cramped when he moved his baseball club into what was then the ornate structure in the Lee of Crow Hill, just elaborated to encase a few more clients. The late Ebbets couldn't well get out on the field there, and make his people see eye to eye with him on baseball questions, as had been his custom in the narrower and more intimate confines of old Washington park.

So the late Ebbets got a high stool, and planted it back of the topmost row of seats in the lower grandstand, from which point of vantage he could view the baseball game, and also be found by any of his constituents who might wish to argue with him. There, with a rose in his lapel, and a smile on his rubicund countenance, the late Ebbets sat for some years, and finally got so he scarcely missed the old soap box.

Of a piece with the regime of the late Ebbets, under whom he started managing the Brooklyn Dodgers, is your Uncle Wilbert Robinson, a pleasant survivor, in fact, of the good old days.

Britisher to Aim at Welter Title If He Licks Canzoneri

By CLAIRE BURCKY
NEA Service Sports Writer

CHICAGO, April 21.—The last of Britain's world lightweight boxing champions ascended the throne 15 years ago. He was Freddie Welsh, born Fred Hall Thomas in Pontypridd, Wales. He outpointed Willie Ritchie for the championship in a 20-round fight under British scoring rules in London.

The next aspires to step into office Friday night, April 24. He is Jack (Kid) Berg, born Judah Bergman in London, England. He would outpop champion Tony Canzoneri in a 10-round bout in Chicago stadium.

If ambition and aggressiveness count in the prize ring—and, even in this dark day, they do—the Berg boy can't be halted. He's on fire with the idea that he can build up his championships to three—first by winning the lightweight title from Canzoneri; then by trouncing Jimmy McLarnin, and eventually capturing the welterweight crown currently resting precariously on the dark brow of Young Jack Thompson. Berg now is the official junior welterweight champion—if such things be.

Kid Berg reasons that his customary unceasing, untiring flurry of leather will relieve Canzoneri of his title. There are many others who thing the same, although I confess that Tony and I are not included in that group yet. Berg beat Tony before in a January, 1930 bout, which, he claims, is assurance that it can be done again. Canzoneri backers offer the information that Tony was not in the best of health when he lost to the Whitechapel whirlwind.

At any rate, there is nothing to indicate that there will be a continuation of the recent practice of knocking out the champion in the first round, as Singer did to Mandell and as Canzoneri did to Singer. Berg doesn't throw that brand of punches. Neither does it appear likely that the left hook to the mouth that flattened Singer in one minute and six seconds of round one will settle the impending fray. The Berg chin is known to be of more substantial material.

Record books reveal that Canzoneri is the only fighter to win both the featherweight and lightweight championships. A few others hold two titles in other divisions. Berg could join that group by a victory over Canzoneri.

Meanwhile, Hawks continued to receive letters protesting his action last week in discharging 44 other highway department employes. Hawks said the move was economical rather than political.

COURT RULING UPHOLDS LANDIS' POWER AS BASEBALL CZAR

BENNETT CASE IS SETTLED

Judge Rules in Favor Of Commissioner

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
United Press Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, April 21.—Kenesaw Mountain Landis' power as the supreme authority of professional baseball was upheld today in federal court when Judge Walter C. Lindley rendered a decision in the Fred Bennett case.

Judge Lindley, in refusing to restrain the high commissioner of baseball from interfering with the transfer of Bennett, an outfielder, from the St. Louis Browns to the Milwaukee Brewers, ruled that Landis had acted clearly within his legal authority when he declared the ball player a free agent.

The decision was made in a suit brought by the Milwaukee American association club against Landis, with Bennett as the intervening petitioner. It was the first litigation attempted by any club or player challenging the commissioner's authority.

Browns Defy Landis

Judge Landis ruled Bennett a free agent last July when the St. Louis Browns attempted to transfer the player for the third successive year to a minor league club without asking major league waivers on him.

Phil Ball, owner of the St. Louis and Milwaukee clubs, questioned Landis' power to declare any player a free agent. In making his decision, Judge Lindley ruled that the situation resulting in the loss of player Bennett's services was clearly one of the St. Louis club's own making by violating the rules of baseball.

It was brought out by Landis that Phil Ball has completely controlled the St. Louis Browns, the Tulsa Western league club and the Wichita Falls Texas league club since Feb. 16, 1928, and that he has owned 50 per cent of the stock in the Milwaukee club since July, 1927, and since January 19, 1929, has completely controlled the latter club.

"The question for decision," Judge Lindley's decision read "is whether under the code governing organized baseball any individual controlling a major league club may so manipulate his control of minor league clubs to achieve a situation whereby a player originally acquired by purchase by the major league club may be sold and transferred back and forth from the major to the minor clubs and and vice versa for an indefinite period of time in excess of two years under apparent outright sales agreement without disclosing to others major clubs the secret control mentioned and without furnishing opportunity to them to claim the player's services.

Power Is Strengthened

In upholding Landis in the case, Judge Lindley strengthened the commissioner's position in waging a war against "chain store baseball." Landis has always maintained that baseball "farms" as operated by the St. Louis Browns, St. Louis Cardinals and other major league clubs are detrimental to the future of the national game. With the ruling of the federal court to stand on, Landis can now deal more severely with the transfer of players back and forth between major and minor clubs controlled by the same interests.

Bennett is not playing professional baseball, having been held in status quo pending the injunction proceedings. David Stansbury, Bennet's attorney, telephoned news of the decision to the player at Memphis. He quoted Bennett as saying:

"I always had faith in Judge Landis and the ruling declaring me a free agent is a fair one. I shall now try to attach myself to some major league club."

VALLEY VIEW, Texas, April 21.—Nosing out the Cashion High school nine here Tuesday afternoon, 6 to 5, Valley View won its second game of the season to maintain its 1.000 per cent standing. Their first win was at the expense of Geraldine Thursday with a 10 to 8 score.

Whether Valley View can maintain its record of no losses for three in a row will be demonstrated here Saturday when the locals pit their strength against the bats of Bomarton.

Tuesday's batteries were: Valley View, Rayburn and Tumbleson; Cashion, Swenford and Owens.

Drawings for Junior College Tennis Tournament to Be Held Today

Drawings for a junior college tennis tournament will be held at the Junior college Wednesday afternoon immediately after school. Tournaments will be held in boys' singles and doubles, and girls' singles and doubles. This will mark the opening of the first athletic activity to be held for the Junior college students this year. Most of the collegiate students will compete in this meet, and enthusiasm can already be discovered in the halls.

Medals for first and second places have been offered by some unknown donor. These medals will be given to each of the contestants that advance to the final round, and it is expected that these medals will be the inspiration for some superb tennis and for a great amount of hot competition. The matches will be held on the high school courts with the exception of the finals, which will be held on the Country club courts.

Salmon Entries Win at Races

NEW YORK, April 21. (AP)—The silks of Walter J. Salmon ruled the turf today as Ladder, candidate for the Preakness and Kentucky derby, and Dr. Freeland, winner of the 1929 Preakness, came through with smashing triumphs in the feature races at Havre de Grace and Jamaica.

Ladder was asked to meet a small but select field of 3-year-olds in the Pagebrook purse and just managed to gain a head decision over George D. Widener's Panetian and A. C. Bostwick's Mate. Mate, third choice to win the preakness and the derby, got away to a poor start but at the end was full of run, indicating he would be a powerful factor in the $50,000 stakes. C. V. Whitney's highly regarded magnifico, finished fourth and last.

The fast stepping little Dixon Sign company baseball team of the Commercial league held the 1930 champion Texas Electrics to a 3 to 3 tie Tuesday afternoon on Debus diamond. It was a play-off of the postponement of Monday's game, and Tuesday's result was not satisfactory. The teams will play off the second tie Sunday.

Dutch Reisen started for the Kilowatts, but four bases on balls and a double by Rusty Cunningham drove him to the showers in the first inning. Earl Keith stepped into the game and hurled winning baseball the rest of the way. A last inning rally by the Kilowatts was started by Keith who scored the tying run on a long single by the hard hitting Everett Blue, 1930 batting champion of the league.

Willard Hillin hurled some wonderful ball, allowing only five hits while he whiffed nine of the Kilowatts in the five innings. Hillin and Keith were both given almost air-tight defense by the two speedy infields. Norman Pressley, Sign company centerfielder, featured the fielding of the day with two neat running catches in center field, turning almost sure hits into outs, making one a double play.

Rusty Cunningham, flashy little Dixon shortfielder, and big Everette Blue led the batting attack. Both collected two for three. Both of Cunningham's bingles went for two bases. Blue seemed to start right where he left off last year, his second hit saving the day and giving Paul Whatley's nine a tie game.

Reisen started the game by walking Birchfield, Mundy and Powell. Cunningham then came through with his first double of the game which drove Birchfield and Mundy across with the first two runs. Their third run came in the fourth when Birchfield singled after one was out. Pressley laid a perfect bunt down toward third and beat it out. Larry Mundy then delivered a long double to score Birchfield.

A walk to Shepherd, a passed ball, stolen base and infield out by Whatley scored the first Kilowatt run in the first inning. After one was out in the second, Classell singled to left and scored when Sid Stanfield, rookie catcher for the Kilowatts, lifted one far into left field for two sacks. Keith started the fifth inning rally with a single to right and took second on a wild pitch. After Shepherd and Whatley had gone out, Big Everette Blue came through with a single past third which drove Keith across the rubber with the tying run. Score:

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, April 21. (AP)—Cotton was generally lower today under liquidation combined with some commission house and local selling which appeared to be inspired by relatively easy Liverpool cables, weakness in the stock market and the early break in wheat. There may have been a little buying on reports of cold rains in the western belt and prices were steadied momentarily by afternoon rallies in wheat, but the demand was limited and supplied on moderate bulges. July contracts sold off to 10.45 and closed at that figure with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 13 to 15 points.

The opening was steady, 9 to 12 points lower in response to the weakness in Liverpool and the active months sold about 13 to 15 points lower under the early pressure. Offerings were absorbed by some trade buying or covering on the less favorable weather reports and the firmer tone in the wheat market brought in a little spurt of covering early in the afternoon, which sent May up to 10.23 and October to 10.84 or about 4 points above the low level of the morning.

Prices soon eased off again, however, under renewed liquidation and scattered selling promoted by the action of the stock market. May sold off to 10.18 and October to 10.79 in the late trading and the close was within a point of the lowest.

Liverpool cables reported local and continental liquidation in that market owing to weakness in Alexandria and a restricted business in cotton cloths and yarns. Egyptian futures in Alexandria were 5 to 36 points lower. The early developments in wheat seemed to have an unsettling effect on sentiment here at the start, but the market later was evidently influenced by the near month liquidation and the decline in stocks. Exports today 2,715 making 5,923,714 so far this season. Port receipts 7,888. U. S. port stocks 3,560,525.

Futures closed barely steady; 13 to 15 points lower; spot quiet; middling 10.20.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, April 21. (AP)—A quieter tone prevailed in cotton here and prices worked lower due to unfavorable cables and to an easier stock market. Following an opening drop of 10 to 13 points, prices eased off a point or two more and then rallied 3 to 4 points on prospects for unfavorable weather, including a cold wave. The market soon turned easier with stocks and before the offerings had been absorbed prices showed losses compared with the previous close of 17 points.

The market rallied a few points in the early afternoon and trading was quiet until near the end when prices eased off again, making net lows 18 points down from the previous close and closed at the bottom with the general market showing net losses for the day of 17 to 18 points.

Port receipts 7,888; for week 13,921; for season 8,573,312; last season 8,212,252. Exports 2,715; for week 25,286; for season 5,762,062; last season 6,040,203. Industrials Near Low Records As Slump Rate is Quickened

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, April 21. (US)—Slump in prices continued on the stock exchange today at an accelerated rate. Volume also increased somewhat, though totalling only 2,000,000 shares.

At no time during the day did the market evidence any great desire to reverse its trend and bear pressure was again concentrated against the leaders, with Steel common slumping to another new low price.

Concrete additional news of bearish import were rather lacking, but there was an ample supply of rumors of the character usual while prices are declining on the exchange. These had mainly to do with foreign financial difficulties and wage adjustments said to be pending in important industries, particularly Steel and railroading. Investment buying of stocks was only on a moderate scale.

Judging by the averages, Industrial shares today sold within a point of their extreme low of December, 1930; Railroad stocks were down to October, 1924, prices; Utilities are still almost two points above their previous low for 1931.

Some of the bear forecasts on individual stock prices have now been confirmed or are close to attainment. Thus, Steel common was universally expected to sell down to 125. It closed at 127½, so that even bears were hardly warranted in making new commitments on the short side if only this modest profit is in store for the present.

International Telephone shared with Steel common the brunt of the bear attack and a new low on the present setback was registered in the Telephone stock, although it still is considerably above the 1931 low of 18¾.

Not an issue among the most active group closed with a net gain. New lows for the year or for several years were registered throughout the list and in all groups except the Public Utilities. The bear effort now apparently is to force the latter group into new low ground, so as to confirm the "trend" line so dear to chartists but more or less meaningless to investors.

The Oil stocks continued under constant pressure, not only on account of discouraging reports from Washington with respect to the cooperative measures, but also on realization that earnings reports even of the largest enterprises will be distinctly disappointing, with many units unable to earn dividends.

Perhaps the most encouraging phase of the day's market was the extent of the decline, and the tendency for volume to increase somewhat, thus suggesting that with a continuance of the decline an early temporary climax may be attained. The professional element in the market is exceedingly blue and the short interest certainly is no smaller than a week ago.

General Electric's report for the first quarter showing only 38 cents a share earned, against 40-cent dividend requirement, emphasized the kind of statement to be expected from the biggest enterprises.

Ingersoll-Rand broke an additional 17 points, part of the selling coming from bear sources, but the remainder was outright liquidation induced by the poor 1930 report which showed dividends were not earned. The short interest in the stock has been its chief support for months.

Mexican Seaboard yielded almost a point, but the buying was reported to be very persistent, and for the account of strong interests.

American & Foreign Power yielded with other utilities, but support buying was also reported in the issue. Packard dropped to a new low on nervousness over its dividend.

In a few stocks, long-term buying is again making its appearance, but chiefly on a scale down. The technical position of the market is the chief argument for expectation of price betterment.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, April 21. (AP)—Grains recovered late today from world-wide bearish effects of a jolt given by rumors of a radical change in United States farm board export plans.

Helping to bring about rallies in prices was an explicit statement from James C. Stone, chairman of the farm board, that no decisions had been made in regard to wheat stabilization operations except those previously announced. He also denied outright that the farm board at this time contemplated any other action. Freezing temperatures southwest causing anxiety as to possible crop damage counted also as a late stimulating factor.

Wheat closed irregular ⅜c lower to ⅝c advance, corn ¼@⅝c up, oats at ⅛c decline to ⅛c gain, and provisions unchanged to 12c down.

Corn and oats swayed with wheat. Corn equaled the season's low price record, and oats established a new one.

Provisions averaged lower, reflecting the course of hog values.

PIT NOTES

CHICAGO April 21. (US)—Uncertain market action is looked for in wheat during the next few days, with chief items of news rather conflicting. The bitter tone to the foreign situation continues, but rains have relieved some of the apprehension over dryness northwest. However, the latter has been replaced by fears of damage southwest from freezing temperatures.

It will be several days before the amount of damage from low temperatures can even be guessed at. It was generally agreed in the late trading today that there were possibilities of important damage with wheat jointed and the temperature as low as 15 degrees.

Corn receipts dropped off moderately, but bookings were fairly substantial and consignment stuff is still arriving in volume. Sentiment toward this grain continues bearish and the recovery today was ascribed entirely to the rally in wheat.

There was excellent precipitation in southwest sections and fair amounts of moisture in the domestic northwest, but Canadian sections received little rain.

MIDWESTERN LIVESTOCK REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, April 21. (AP)—(U.S.D.A.)—Cattle trade around the eleven market circuit was rather spotted due to the uneven distribution of the supply. Packers at points having normal receipts were bearish toward any price upturns on fed steers and yearlings but several points had meager supplies and reported unevenly higher values. Demand continued to center upon light weight fed steers and yearlings. Choice quality steers and yearlings at Chicago and Omaha sold up to $9.25 while at Kansas City $9.00 was realized on choice 1,055 pound and 1,365 pound steers. Three loads of good 1,196 pound Colorado steers at Kansas City brought $8.25. Stocker and feeder classes held fully steady with choice light weight stockers selling up to $8.50. Aggregate receipts estimated at 33,700 were around 3,000 short of a week ago.

Hogs found a slow outlet at prices unevenly steady to 15c lower, some points showing heavier losses on strong weight butchers. The day's extreme top of $7.75 was paid both at Chicago and St. Louis. Total offerings were around 71,500 as compared with 69,991 last Tuesday.

The supply of sheep approximating 55,500 was 9,000 less than a week ago. Fat lamb trade was more active with prices unevenly steady to 25c higher. Aged stock was little changed. Choice fed wooled lambs in Chicago cashed up to $9.85 while at Kansas City Arizona springers realized $10.35 on shipper accounts.

Olney Operators Get Irion Well

Special to The Record News.

SAN ANGELO, Texas, April 21.—Drilling to 1464 feet, 15 feet in the pay sand, F. E. Webb & Son, Brazelton Bros., and C. C. (Buck) Williams' No. 1 Nutt in Irion county's shallow, high gravity, sweet oil pool filled 1000 feet with oil in seven hours Monday. It topped the pay six feet higher than did Carl Cromwell's No. 1 Nutt, a producer, which it offsets on the north.

Work was suspended until tubing connections, flow lines and storage tanks are received. Mr. Williams and T. W. Brazelton left Monday afternoon for Olney for part of the equipment, W. F. Brazleton remaining to direct the pulling of the 8, 10 and 12-inch pipe, beginning Tuesday. These operators, all from Olney, last fall purchased from F. E. Webb and son, Roy Webb, of San Angelo a half interest in 1120 acres checker-boarded through six subdivisions of Gonzales county school land. Part of the consideration was the completion of one test, then shut down at 250 feet, and the drilling of the well that has just struck oil.

The well struck a shallow showing of live oil at 1327 feet, the same point at which the Cromwell well had its first oil, but drilled to 1449 feet and underreamed 6⅝-inch casing to that point from 1397, shutting off a bailer of salt water hourly from 1410-18 feet in sandy shale. As the pay sand was entered oil rose 400 feet in about 30 minutes. Gas was breaking through the column of oil and was estimated at around 200,000 cubic feet daily.

Loving County Deep Oil District Extended

SAN ANGELO, Texas, April 21.—Flowing 132 barrels of oil by heads during the first 24 hours after it was shot with 190 quarts from 4343-48 feet, Eppenauer Drilling company's No. 1 Salisbury has extended the Wheat deep, high gravity, Sweet oil field in Loving county approximately three-quarters of a mile north. When 50 feet of cavings were cleaned out it was believed that production would increase materially.

No. 1 Salisbury is 330 feet from the northwest and southwest lines of section 89, block 1, W. & N. W. Ry. Co. survey, diagonally across 160 acres plus 465 feet north of Eppenauer No. 1 Allen, heretofore the farthest north producer in the pool. It has an elevation of 2786 feet, topped the Delaware lime at 4343 feet, drilled in it to 4384 feet, then plugged back two feet, as is customary in the area, although no water had been struck.

EDGINGS FOR GARDENS GIVEN

Mrs. Dobie Lists Plants For Texas Use

Tunica saxifraga; and armeria, or thrift.

Annuals

Among perennials ranging in tone from lavender to violet are, besides the violet, phlox divaricata, a fragrant species growing 10 inches high and bearing lavender flowers; and the dwarf crested iris.

The annual edgings to be named are much more generally known in Texas, where few perennials have been attempted until recently. Some white ones are portulaca, both single and double, which, though it lacks the precision of a true edging plant, is much used in front of other flowers; Swan River daisy, sweet alyssum, maritimum being more effective than Little Gem; and candytuft, both the umbellata and the hyacinth-flowered.

A few trustworthy blue annual edgings are Swan river daisy; a dwarf bachelor's button, only nine inches tall, and ageratum in several named varieties.

There are many good subjects in yellow and orange shades. Nasturtiums come first to mind; cheerful gaiety and a long season are their virtues. Portulaca appears again, a genuine sun plant, as it is sometimes called. A cream-colored alyssum, compactum lutescens, serves nicely to edge a yellow-to orange bed for those who like a flower bed or borded in related shades. Yellow flax (Linum flavum) and nemesia, which flowers in heads like verbena, are two little known annuals good for edgings. A new dwarf calliopsis edges borders in yellow, orange and mahogany shades.

Well up among red annuals also is portulaca. The gardener of a large place in San Antonio told me that last summer portulacas were the most endearing flowers in the garden. He advised not covering the seed with soil but merely pressing them in. There are not many good red edging plants, and it is just as well.

Pink and rose are another matter. Portulaca appears for the last time, and with it nemesia. Candytuft may be had in flesh pink and in rose, being prettiest when combined with white. Planted in the fall, candytuft flowers early, and leaves a bare space, to be set perhaps with petunias or baby zinnias. Rosy morn petunias are a fine pink. Pink Swan River daisies are good alone or combined with the white and blue.

Lilac colors in edgings are supplied by Alyssum compactum lilacinum and candytuft of the umbellata type. Dwarf-growing, large-flowered petunias range from violet to lavender.

Hall Contestants Win School Honors

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, April 21.—Hall county brought home six first places from the district meet held at Childress Friday and Saturday. The boys debating team composed of Eugene Clements and Cearley Read Kinard won first. Francis Wright, girls single tennis player, won. Cora Fox won the Latin tournament. Harry Womach captured the 220-yard dash and George May came out first in the 220 low hurdle. Laryl Davis of the Salisberry school won the honors in rural senior boys declamation.

Bees Christen Pilot

SACRAMENTO, Calif.—Lieut. S. J. Simonton doesn't care for bees any longer. Climbing into his plane recently he discovered a million, more or less, had settled on his plane's wings and showed no inclination to get off. His commanding officer had to have another plane put in front of Simonton's and direct the air from the propeller onto the wings. It blew the insects off.

THE SQUEEZE PLAY

IN Auction Bridge, the squeeze play is seldom seen because the average player usually fails to recognize the chance for it. It consists simply in compelling the adversaries to discard a good card when dealer holds second best or to unguard a suit stopped so that it may be captured, and one or two extra tricks made. Of course, it is at the end of the play of any hand, and the name "squeeze play" suggests its working.

GIRL TO MAKE ATLANTIC HOP

Ruth Nichols Will Follow Lindbergh Trail

NEW YORK, April 21. (AP)—Ruth Nichols within two weeks will attempt the first woman's solo flight across the Atlantic, Col. Clarence D. Chamberlain, her aeronautical adviser, said today.

In the red Lockheed-Vega monoplane which she flew at a speed of 210 miles an hour at Detroit a week ago, she will take off from Harbor Grace, N. F., to follow the Lindberg trail to Paris.

The Airplane, which belongs to the Crosley Radio corporation, Cincinnati, is being overhauled at the New Jersey aircraft factory of Colonel Chamberlain, who, it is said, vainly tried to dissuade her from the attempt.

Its wasp motor is being tested at the plant of the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft company, Hartford, Conn.

Miss Nichols, tall, slender and in her middle twenties started flying less than five years ago. Before that she was known only as a society girl.

She and Miss Eleanor Smith now are regarded as the two outstanding women pilots in the United States. Miss Nichols has set four records.

Parachute Jumper Repeats Brody Leap

NEW YORK, April 21. (UP)—Peter Douglas Verbonus, attached to the naval air station at Lakehurst, N. J., was revealed today as a second Steve Brody.

He nonchalantly climbed to the highest point of the pathway on Brooklyn bridge and dived to the East river many feet below to win a bet with a sailor from the U. S. S. Wyoming. Unlike Brody, his deed was unheralded and no one knew of the leap until it was revealed by companions.

"It was just a little hop for me," remarked Verbonus, who is a parachute jumper as well as a machinist at the air station.

CITY OPERATES WITHIN BUDGET

Departments End Year With $125,799 Margin

Every department of the Wichita Falls city government stayed well within its budget during the fiscal year ended April 1, it was revealed by the annual financial report filed Tuesday with City Manager George Fairtrace by City Clerk W. E. McBroom.

The budget called for the expenditure of $1,136,601.01 but economies effected by the various department heads held the money spent to a total of $1,010,801.49, leaving an unexpended balance of $125,799.52.

Emergencies Raise Expenses

Emergencies were responsible for heavier expenditures during the year by three departments, but in spite of unforeseen drains the operations cost less than the budget had allowed even in these departments.

The sanitary department required approximately $10,000 more because of serious sewer cave-ins. Street improvements undertaken late in the year to help meet the unemployment situation caused that department to overstep its 1929-30 expenditures by about $19,000. Repairs to the Lake Wichita dam during the recent floods were responsible for an increase of $9,000 in the water department's total.

OFFICIALS DRAFT NEW YEAR'S BUDGET

Budget for 1931-32 operations probably will be submitted to the city council at next Monday's meeting, Mr. McBroom said. The first draft of figures for the new year have undergone a severe pruning during the last few weeks and a lower total is in prospect, he said.

The city's total income for the year was $871,520.41, about $115,100 less than had been anticipated because of tax extension. Miscellaneous income was as estimated.

Department Reports

Mr. McBroom's report showed the following detail:

General administration—Budget, $84,570.13; expenditures, $84,150.67; unexpended balance, $419.46.

Police, fire and street lights—Budget, $256,284.33. expenditures, $222,666.26; unexpended balance, $33,618.07.

Health and sanitation—Budget, $95,574; expenditures, $86,710.39; unexpended balance, $8,863.61. (Includes General hospital appropriation).

Street maintenance and improvement—Budget, $127,452.98; expenditures, $113,406.35; unexpended balance, $14,046.63.

Parks and cemeteries—Budget, $72,294.02; expenditures, $65,704.19; unexpended balance, $6,589.83.

Library—Budget, $15,320; expenditures, $15,238.53; unexpended balance, $81.47.

Water works—Budget, $152,663; expenditures, $132,245.98; unexpended balance, $20,417.

Bonds, interest and principal—Budget, $308,647.55; expenditures, $273,286.31; surplus, $35,361.24, which goes into a sinking fund for payment of term bonds.

Airport—Budget, $20,705; expenditures, $14,471.79; unexpended balance, $6,233.21. These expenses were for operation and supplies purchased for resale.

Refunds of receipts in error—Budget, $850; refunds, $685.02; surplus, $164.98.

Court costs and settlements—Budget, $2,240; expenditures, $2,236; unexpended balance, $4.

For Shopping, Recreation or Instruction—Try Wichita

Movie Fans Write About City for Tickets to Theater Here

For shopping, for entertainment, for worship, for education and instruction, and for outdoor recreations Wichita Falls is the capital of Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma!

This was the expression of one writer in The Record News contest for the best letters regarding this city or any of its activities. The contest is open to any resident of this section, living outside Wichita Falls, and the attention of contestants is directed to the closing of the first week's contest Thursday night. Friday the second week's contest will open.

The Record News is giving away tickets to the Strand theater as prizes in the contest, with 10 tickets allotted to each town of this area. The contest will run for three weeks, opening each Friday and closing the following Thursday, during which a total of 30 tickets will go to each town.

Those who are participating in this week's contest will have opportunity to see two of the most popular and finest actors of the talkies in Wallace Beery and Lewis Stone. The two are the principal stars in "The Secret Six" which opens a four-day run at the Strand theater Friday. There will be the usual special features, news reels and comedies in addition to the feature picture.

Letters in this contest may vary from 10 words in length up to 200 or more, but The Record News requests that they be kept within the 200-word limit if possible. Any resident of Northwest Texas or Southern Oklahoma is eligible to enter, Wichita Falls excepted. The contestant may select any subject concerning Wichita Falls or this city's activities. Comment in the letter may be favorable or unfavorable. Most of the letter so far received have had one of two subjects: "What I Like About Wichita Falls" and "What I Don't Like About Wichita Falls." Either is suitable.

Legion National Commander to Greet Texas' Largest Post in Visit Here

West Texas and Southwestern Oklahoma to Send Big Delegations to Wichita to Hear O'Neil

When Ralph T. O'Neil of Topeka, Kan., national commander of the American Legion, is introduced to Wichita Falls at the Memorial auditorium next Thursday night, he also will be introduced to the largest American Legion post in Texas, and one which has a membership record with parallel.

Pat Carrigan post, given a quota of 500 members by the state department last year, has now 1,146 active memberships on file in the state organization's offices for this year. In addition to that, a fat sheaf of new memberships will be handed to the national commander Thursday night for transfer to Texas Legion officials, setting the active enrollment in the local post at a much higher figure.

Many Visitors Expected

Communications received by Post Adjutant Floyd Friberg indicate that ex-service men and the public generally in Wichita Falls will have much help in giving Mr. O'Neil an impressive welcome. At least three full squads of ex-doughboys will be on hand from Abilene for the occasion, it was said; and other posts throughout this section of Texas and Southwestern Oklahoma have served notice that they will have sizable representations here. A large delegation is expected from Frederick, Okla., which has one of the liveliest posts in the Southwest. Several hundred ex-service men will be here for the national commander's brief visit, according to estimates made by officials of the local post.

Mr. O'Neil will be accompanied by Congressman Wright Patman, by whom the soldiers' bonus loan relief measure was sponsored this spring; Hal Brennan of Laredo, state department commander; R. O. Whitaker, district adjutant; and Read Johnson of the Dallas veterans' bureau. Two cars from Wichita Falls will bring the party from Fort Worth Wednesday afternoon, arriving here at 6:30 p. m. They will be met at Tenth and Lamar by the American Legion drum corps and the firing squad, these units acting as an escort to the Holt hotel, where the national commanders' party will be entertained for the night.

Guest at Dinner

An informal dinner is to be held at the Wichita club at 6:45 p. m. for all ex-service men, for which the plate charge will be $1, it was announced.

The public meeting at the Memorial auditorium, which will be addressed by Mr. O'Neil, is scheduled for 8 o'clock. From 7:30 to 8 p. m. music will be furnished at the auditorium by the Lions Club boys' band, directed by Leo M. Underwood, a member of Pat Carrigan post. Other members of the visiting party will be introduced, and will speak briefly, it was announced.

The national commander, who is a practicing attorney of Topeka, has been described as a forceful and eloquent speaker, thoroughly versed in national and world issues of the day, and expertly advised upon the affairs of the American Legion. The general public is urged to hear his address Thursday night, local Legion officials said.

Legion Head

Ralph T. O'Neil, national commander of the American Legion, will visit Wichita Falls Thursday, April 23, and will address a public meeting at the Memorial auditorium at 8 p. m. on that date.

CLUB GIVEN BEAUTY TALK

Physicians to Prescribe Cosmetics, Says Expert

Members of the Ad club were told Tuesday noon that "the day is coming when physicians will prescribe cosmetics" in a talk by Miss Theo Bennett, beauty specialist whose field of activity is nation-wide.

Miss Bennett's general theme was the work of those who give their efforts to the promotion of beauty. Extending the discussion to the field of advertising, she described the types of letters and newspaper advertisements through which beauty is merchandised to a select clientele.

Among other answers given to questions from the floor, the speaker declared that "bobbed hair is here to stay—for certain types." Discussing individualized coiffures, she said that certain athletic women of her acquaintance retain short boyish bobs for outdor sports, and wear transformations for evening.

Miss Bender is in the city for a few days for conferences with beauty shop operators and hairdressers, having come here for the W. L. Buck company, 612 Eighth street.

Approximately 20 persons from Wichita Falls, including about 15 members of the Lions club, left at 5:30 p. m. Tuesday to attend the intercity meet of Lions clubs for the ninth district at the First Methodist church in Chillicothe.

With Lions clubs of Vernon, Electra, Iowa Park, Burkburnett, Byers, Wichita Falls and Chillicothe participating in the meet, it was predicted that the total attendance would approximate 150 persons. Frank Cripliver, president of the Wichita Falls club, was on the program to give the response to visitors to the address of welcome.

The Vernon club was assigned to provide entertainment features for the evening, and drew upon the Knickerbocker studio here for all but one of its entertainers. Those appearing on the program included Misses Faith Galmische, Virginia Green, Beverley Nan Witherspoon, Anna Marie Menke of Wichita Falls, and Miss Sybil Marie Coffey of Vernon, all dancers. Kenneth Spell, of this city, and Miss Coffey also were to give readings on the program. Dance numbers were to be accompanied by Mrs. G. Galmische, pianist.

Members of the Lions club party, according to those in charge, were O. B. Allbritton, James King, Dr. W. P. Bolding and Mrs. K. C. Spell, F. L. Storey, C. J. Coffey, Frank Cripliver, Roy E. Carter, C. E. Metzger, W. B. Taylor, J. W. Lyle, Jim Robinson, R. S. Fidler, Robert Trotter and J. L. Eggleston. The trip was made in cars.

MAJESTIC: Gary Cooper and Sylvia Sidney in "City Streets." Short subjects and sound news.

STRAND: Helen Twelvetrees in "Millie." Short subjects and sound news.

GEM: Jack Oakie, Jean Arthur and William Boyd in "The Gang Buster." Comedy.

"Millie" is a trifle reminiscent of the good old mellerdrammer days but Lilyan Tashman manages to save the sniffles nearly every time Helen Twelvetrees gazes too long and too ardently at her baby's photograph, and I even overlooked those "eight years pass" subtitles in my delight at the splendid cast.

Those subtitles, incidentally, look about as appropriate in a 1931 talkie as one of those wax-flower arrangements formerly kept under glass on mantels in the parlor would look in a modern apartment. There, that's off my chest.

Miss Twelvetrees really does a good job of "Millie," especially at the last in the courtroom scene. The honeymoon business at the first isn't so good except for a few meaningful guffaws from the tired business men who make up most of the matinee crowd.

Anita Louise, who plays the daughter, is the most beautiful person seen in any talkie since there have been talkies. She can't be more than 16, and with the proper training in the next few years could do wonders in dramatics.

There are other bouquets—to Robert Ames, who is playing his best part in this picture; to Lilyan Tashman and her dumb girl friend, who bring in all the comedy; and to the fat newspaper reporter whose name wasn't heralded in the big letters in the cast.
