Flight time

A pre-school class of deaf and hearing impaired youngsters presses against the glass as they peer at an airplane in anticipation of a complimentary Wednesday morning flight above Midland.

'Air' of excitement prevails

By VINCE GIORGI

The grins were thunderous and the anticipation deafening as five youngsters mashed their hands and faces against the glass doors leading from Tiger Charter's terminal to the airplane apron.

Eager to launch their end-of-the-school-year "field trip" Wednesday morning, Sondra Robertson's deaf and hearing impaired pre-schoolers fogged the glass as they pointed toward airplanes, chattered and signed their shared excitement.

Dressed in gingham, Misty Fitzgerald, the 5-year-old little lady of the gang, got airborne early as she chinned herself on the door handle.

Danny Garcia, the group's senior member at age 7, stared at the front of a single-prop airplane, spun about to face Ms. Robertson and signed his interpretation of the plane's mug — complete with eyes, nose and mouth.

Five-year-old Victor Madrid, who lost his hearing in December, jammed his hands inside overall pockets as he solemnly pondered the flying machines.

Sam Dunn, 5, with a trip from Korea to his adoptive parents' home in Midland already under his belt, grinned as he awaited this 15-minute, "piece-o'-cake" spin around the skies above Midland.

Meanwhile, tow-headed Steven Latzel shifted from sneaker to sneaker and wrinkled his freckled, 5-year-old nose at questions from an inquisitive stranger.

Danny Garcia, 7, and Misty Fitzgerald, 5, gaze down on their school, Bonham Elementary, during their "field trip" flight.

Ms. Robertson said the field trip was made possible in part by a contribution from a donor who wished to remain anonymous while giving the class a chance to do "something real special."

"I wanted to do something that they'll probably never be able to do," said Ms. Robertson, who along with her aide, Becky Amstutz, conducts the pre-school class as part of a regional program for the deaf sponsored by the Ector County Independent School District.

After failing to make arrangements for a hot air balloon ride, Ms. Robertson sought the aid of Tiger Charter, which donated a Piper Saratoga and the services of charter pilot Davey Jones.

"They are just tickled silly about it," she said, as Misty, Danny and Victor — chewing bubble gum to keep the changing air pressure from troubling their ears — prepared to board the six-seat plane for their flight over Midland.

As Ms. Robertson and the intrepid trio sped down the runway and lifted into the sky, Sam and Steven waved goodbye before retreating to an airplane hangar for some hands-on experience.

Ms. Robertson said the "field trip" — coming after the children completed a study unit on transportation and before they begin a unit on Midland — came at an opportune time for their spirits and education.

She said because deaf and hearing impaired children often have difficulty grasping concepts and developing language skills, the physical experience of flying and viewing Midland from aloft helps them absorb notions such as "fly" and "city."

"Children learn by hearing," she said. "The problem with a deaf child, you have to teach it and teach all of it. It is hard for them to learn words that they can't experience. Even a small concept has to be taught in a lesson format."

Halfway through Wednesday's "lesson," Steven, who commutes to school from Stanton each day, led Sam through a hangar door. Upon seeing a plane under repair with some of its engine parts showing, he jabbed a finger toward the craft and said, "He's got his clothes off."

Last-chance budget battle 'uncertain'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is beginning a last-chance debate on a 1984 budget plan with a Republican-sponsored spending and taxing proposal that keeps federal deficits near $200 billion for the next four years.

The Senate Budget Committee voted 11 to 9 Wednesday to approve a budget formula close to one President Reagan has previously supported.

The proposal would permit only minor tax increases and a defense buildup next year of 7.1 percent.

Reflecting the uncertainty of today's votes on the Senate floor, Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the budget panel, said Senate GOP leaders would "try to pass it."

"If we can't pass it, we'll change it," Domenici said.

The committee decision sets up a Senate floor fight similar to one last week in which five Republican moderates blocked an almost identical budget blueprint.

Late Wednesday, sources who spoke on condition they not be identified said the five — Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, Charles McC. Mathias Jr. of Maryland, John Chafee of Rhode Island, Robert Stafford of Vermont and Mark Hatfield of Oregon — were refusing to budge.

The only major difference this time is that the proposal approved by the committee includes defense increases slightly closer to what the moderates want. More importantly, the choice will be painted as either vote for the budget plan before the Senate or none at all.

In Wednesday's committee vote, all 11 votes for the conservative budget plan came from Republicans. There were two absent Democrats, Gary Hart of Colorado and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, both out of town campaigning for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination.

Had they been present, the conservative Republican proposal would have failed on a tie vote.

One Democrat, Joseph Biden of Delaware, said the vote was an exercise in pure political power by Senate Republican leaders.

"It is raw," he said.

The full Senate was scheduled to renew its work today on the committee's budget, which sets a 7.1 percent defense increase for 1984, allows $8 billion in taxes over the next two years and deficits running from $192.7 billion in 1984 to $220 billion in 1988.

At one point Wednesday morning, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes repeated Reagan's determination to veto any legislation carrying a significant tax increase next year.

Later, Speakes said Reagan "is reserving judgment" about the proposal.

Wednesday's vote came after five days of intensive, although unsuccessful, efforts by Domenici to forge a compromise with Democrats who want higher taxes to offset the swelling federal deficit.

At one point, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., said of the efforts to find 12 votes for a budget plan: "It's becoming sort of a circus."

Some Democrats said the attempt at bipartisan compromise failed because Reagan repeatedly accused Congress of free-spending and high-taxing budget habits and indicated it doesn't matter whether the House and Senate can agree on a budget plan for next year.

It's Reagan's view, Speakes said, that "he was elected to come here to cut government spending where ever he could, to hold taxes down, and to rebuild the nation's defense. That's what he was elected to do and that's what he's going to do.... If it takes a veto, he'll do it, and he believes the people will support him."

Senate's struggle may affect budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials are concerned the Senate's struggle over a money plan for next year will lead to a breakdown in the budget process, making it even more difficult to curb government spending.

"If we don't have a...budget resolution, it doesn't mean the legislative process stops," Budget Director David Stockman told reporters attending a recent meeting of business leaders.

"But," he added, "it means it is less likely that there will be an agreed-on fiscal plan with balances and give-and-take from all elements of the budget. And therefore, it will be more difficult to cut spending in some places or to agree to some kind of ... revenue measure (for future years)."

The Senate Budget Committee on Wednesday sent a spending blueprint to the full Senate that is nearly identical to the one that body defeated last week. The House already has approved an $863.5 billion plan for the upcoming fiscal year, which starts Oct. 1.

Once the Senate approves a budget resolution, negotiators for both the House and the Senate must work out a compromise plan that then needs to win the backing of both chambers.

No presidential approval is needed for the resolution. But it's thought that a denunciation of the compromise by President Reagan might keep it from getting final support in Congress.

NATO's future linked to arms talks?

LONDON (AP) — The future of NATO is clouded by internal disputes and may hinge on the outcome of U.S.-Soviet disarmament talks in Geneva, the International Institute for Strategic Studies said today.

Differences over American and European defense and economic policies caused one of the most difficult years in the Western alliance's 34-year history and it may even face collapse, the London-based think tank added.

"The question is becoming increasingly urgent as problems accumulate," said a study released by the institute.

The assessment, in the institute's annual "Strategic Survey," was its gloomiest to date and the first time the influential research organization has suggested NATO's problems could prove fatal to the alliance.

Public opinion in the 16 nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization still clearly supports the alliance, "but trends are not encouraging," the study said.

"Should European public perceptions of the level of Soviet threat fall, American policies sound more belligerent and economic tensions increase, the alliance would face a severe predicament, and collapse would not be out of the question."

The non-governmental IISS, founded in 1958, is dedicated to the study of international security, defense and arms control. It is supported by contributions from its members in more than 50 countries and from sale of its widely read publications.

Its "Strategic Survey," which chronicled events in the past year and judged their strategic significance, identified trade protectionism, monetary policy and technology sales to the East bloc as major areas of dispute among the Western allies.

But the key disagreement derived from "conflicting images of the Soviet Union" and how much of a threat it really represents, the IISS said.

On this subject, the U.S.-Soviet talks in Switzerland on medium-range missiles in Europe are crucial to NATO, formed in 1949 to confront the Soviet Union and its allies in Eastern Europe.

The alliance plans to deploy 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in five West European nations starting this winter. NATO leaders say the move was forced by the Kremlin's deployment of more than 335 SS-20 missiles aimed at Western Europe. But a large European peace movement is unconvinced.

"The fortunes of the alliance are therefore staked on the Geneva negotiations ... in the sense of showing that everything reasonable has been tried to avoid the need for deployment," the IISS said.

Negotiators 'down for the count' on warhead pact

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — American and Soviet negotiators met today to explore an offer by Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov to count warheads as well as missiles in an agreement limiting medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe.

The negotiators met for two hours at the U.S. arms control office in the second session of their current round of talks, and agreed to meet again next Tuesday. The Soviet negotiator, Yuli A. Kvitsinsky, turned aside with a wave of his hand a reporter's question on whether the talks were making progress.

It was learned, meanwhile, that apart from the formal sessions the two delegations have met at least once on the side to discuss prospects for an accord. There was no indication whether they had made any headway.

Last summer, during a walk in the woods, Kvitsinsky and U.S. negotiator Paul H. Nitze discussed the idea of imposing a ceiling on intermediate-range missiles. It was the only break in the deadlock, but the consideration of a possible compromise was later scotched in Washington and Moscow.

The offer by Andropov on May 3 to deal directly with warheads as well as missiles suggested a slight shift toward the U.S. position in the negotiations, now in their 18th month.

But while President Reagan said the Soviet proposal would be given "serious consideration," a firm U.S. assessment could not be made until the current round of talks, which opened on Tuesday.

At today's session, at the U.S. arms control office in Geneva, the Soviets were expected to provide some details of the Andropov proposal.

Although the Soviet leader's offer to include warhead totals in the intermediate-range missiles balance appeared to bring him closer to the U.S. position, Andropov also stuck to the previous Soviet demand that British and French strategic nuclear systems be included in the tally of NATO missiles.

France is a NATO member and Britain is part of its unified military command, but the two nations say their nuclear forces are independent of NATO, and have refused to include them in the U.S.-Soviet negotiations — a position supported by the United States.

The Andropov proposal stirred interest in the Reagan administration mostly because of its focus on warheads, several of which can be placed on a single missile. The United States has long maintained they are the most significant measure of accounting in an arms control agreement.

Beyond that, Andropov did not reiterate the longstanding Soviet demand that U.S. planes based in Britain must be included in the talks.

Nor did Andropov specify the level to which he was prepared to reduce the 351 triple-warhead SS-20 missiles now targeted on Western Europe.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 8 a.m. EDT Friday, May 20
●Low Temperatures
Rain Snow Showers Flurries

AP Laserphoto Map

Showers for the Gulf and Atlantic coasts are forecast through Friday, according to the National Weather Service. Showers also are expected from the Texas Panhandle to Kansas, with cool weather predicted for central portions of the nation.

Thunderstorm chance forecast

With the National Weather Service calling for a chance of thunderstorms, Midland may get what many consider to be some much needed rain tonight and Friday.

Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms, a few possibly severe. The low tonight should dip into the upper 50s and winds should whip from the southeast at 10-20 mph. The NWS at Midland Regional Airport is predicting a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms Friday when the high should reach the mid-70s. Winds Friday are expected from the northeast at 10-20 mph.

Wednesday's high of 79 dropped 19 degrees short of the record 98 set in 1946. The overnight low of 49 came close to the record 46 for this date set in 1971.

With some rainfall in the forecast, Midland's monthly and yearly rainfall amounts — which stand at a trace and 1.67 inches, respectively — may need some revision soon.

Sunset tonight is at 8:42 p.m.; sunrise Friday comes at 6:49 a.m.

Financier well known in Fayette

By CYNTHIA BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

FAYETTE, Iowa — David F. Bolger is not nearly as well known in his hometown of Ridgewood, N.J., as he is in this tiny town of 1,500 people, where he has lavished gifts of real estate ranging from a shopping center to a milk plant.

"If I don't do it, who will?" asks Bolger, who describes himself as an investment banker and financier, but says he doesn't like to talk about money.

Among gifts Bolger has given to or arranged for Fayette have been shoe stores in California; a supermarket and warehouse in San Antonio, Texas; a milk plant and a small shopping center in Detroit; a bank in Muskegon, Mich., and, most recently, real estate near Cleveland, Ohio, according to Bolger and city officials.

He also bailed out Fayette's principal attraction, Upper Iowa University.

The real estate is estimated to be worth millions. Mayor Roy Karlson said the northeastern Iowa city doesn't keep a list of the gifts, and their value won't be known until they are sold.

If Bolger knows the total worth of his donations, he isn't saying.

"I just don't tell how much I contribute," he said in a telephone interview from the offices of Bolger & Co. in Hackensack, N.J.

Bolger said most of the gifts are not actually from him but were arranged for clients. Saying it would "not be appropriate" for him to comment on benefits he gets from the gift giving, he would only say: "There are always business reasons."

When asked why he picked Fayette, Bolger said that he liked the town and enjoyed community work.

When he's in Fayette, all eyes follow the boyish 50-year-old Bolger as he rides a moped down Main Street, poses for newspaper pictures or sits sipping coffee at Lucy's Garden of Eatin' Cafe.

Fayette gave Bolger and his wife, Barbara, honorary citizenships. Bolger heads the homecoming parade, and one of the city's most picturesque roads is named Bolger Drive.

But the things Bolger likes to talk about are mushroom hunting in Fayette, or swapping tales at the local gas station, or about the new ambulance the city has bought with Bolger funds.

"People — human life — that's what's very important to me, that's what I support," Bolger said.

Most of Bolger's real estate gifts cannot be sold until current leases expire, but enough money already has been realized for the city of Fayette to purchase a $35,000 ambulance, a dump truck and a snow plow, and to do a good deal of road repair, Karlson said.

In addition, he said, about $165,000 in unused Bolger money is collecting interest in city coffers until it is needed.

"Without question, David Bolger has made Fayette a nicer place to live," Karlson said.

The city first came to Bolger's attention in the 1960s when Upper Iowa University was on the verge of going broke.

Solidarity supporter Barbara Sadowska, who claims her teen-age son was fatally beaten by Polish police last Thursday, speaks to reporters in Warsaw.

Beating death of student creates stir in Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Solidarity underground has assailed police for allegedly beating to death a high school senior whose funeral today is expected to draw a large crowd of sympathizers.

A Warsaw prosecutor launched "an energetic investigation" into the death of Grzegorz Przemyk, including an autopsy and extensive examination of witnesses, according to the official Polish news agency PAP.

It added that "a lawyer appointed by the mother of the dead boy will participate in the investigation."

The mother, Barbara Sadowska, is a Solidarity supporter still recovering from injuries inflicted May 3 by a gang of men who beat her at a Roman Catholic relief center that aids families of detained activists.

A bulletin issued Wednesday by underground leaders of the outlawed labor union said, "This beastly murder bears all the hallmarks of a crime committed in premeditation."

Miss Sadowska said in an interview Wednesday that her son was detained in Castle Square, near St. Martin's, last Thursday evening, and taken to a police station on nearby Jezuicka Street. One of Przemyk's schoolmates, detained along with him, reportedly witnessed the beating, and family friends said the youth then was taken to a psychiatric clinic.

"I found him there, lying on a stretcher. He was very weak, holding his belly," said Miss Sadowska, who uses her madien name. Not knowing the extent of her son's injuries, she took him home, but he complained of severe pains, vomited blood, and was unable to urinate, she said.

"He really suffered. He was sorry to keep me busy. He knew that my arms haven't healed yet," she said, showing reporters bruises on her shoulders and a broken finger — injuries she says were inflicted during the break-in at St. Martin's.

Grzegorz Przemyk

She called an ambulance, which carried him to Solec Hospital, where he underwent surgery Friday night but died Saturday morning.

Przemyk's death certificate said he died of severe damage to the spleen, liver and intestines, according to family friends, who say the beating left no external marks.

A letter signed by "Warsaw high school students" urging a heavy turnout at the funeral was widely circulated at city schools, which are in the middle of an examination period, students said.

The Solidarity bulletin, signed by fugitive union leader Zbigniew Bujak and the other two members of the Warsaw regional underground, called for "organized actions" to demand a fair investigation of the death, and the abolition of the riot police force used to disperse demonstrations.

"Recent weeks have confirmed that fascist methods of government are becoming part and parcel of everyday Polish reality," the one-page bulletin said.

Appended to the Solidarity leaflet was an emotional letter from well-known poet Wiktor Woroszylski, asking the government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski to "put a stop to bestiality."

"The surgeons who opened up the lad's abdomen had nothing more to do: inside was a bleeding pulp," Woroszylski said in his letter.

"Doctors emerging from the operating room wept over the elaborately massacred boy, and that does not happen often," Woroszylski said.

Services were scheduled at the St. Stanislaw Kostka Church, the scene of monthly masses for jailed Solidarity activists.

The state-controlled media have not reported the accusations of police brutality in the case, although the word of the allegations spread quickly through the capital.

Police said the youth was detained after participating in a drunken brawl.

Miss Sadowska was interned by authorities during the early months of martial law, which was declared on Dec. 13, 1981 suspending Solidarity.

Her apartment has been searched repeatedly since then, she said, and she and her son were detained for 48 hours on May 1 to prevent their participation in May Day demonstrations staged in Warsaw and more than a dozen other cities.

She was one of six people beaten May 3 by a gang of 20 men wearing street clothes and carrying at least one police-style radio, who broke into a convent adjoining St. Martin's Church in Warsaw's Old Town. The convent houses the relief center.

Field trip carries an 'air' of excitement

Pilot Sam and co-pilot Steven clambered into the cockpit of a tiny, green and white Cessna. There they explored the true meaning of the term "joy stick" as they twisted the dual steering wheels, exchanging giggles and glances.

When their classmates returned to earth, Sam and Steven boarded the plane. As it rumbled down the pavement and slipped into the air, Steven mouthed an inaudible "W-O-W" that even a novice lip reader couldn't miss.

Pilot Jones buzzed downtown and their school, Bonham Elementary. Steven and Sam jammed against the window as the plane skipped along on warm air turbulence, its thrumming engine sending a tingling sensation through the passengers.

Steven announced, "We're on the ground," as the plane thumped to the pavement and glided toward the charter building. Once there, the classmates reunited and Misty announced she'd fallen for a millionaire's black jet.

With everyone assembled and lunch time approaching, the students gave a roll of their palms as a sign of appreciation to Jones and their hosts at Tiger Charter.

Then the five set off a reassuring clatter as they left behind Wednesday's "something special" and scurried out the door.

Woman readied for 'hot-blooded' treatment

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A woman who won a bureaucratic fight against delays in experimental treatment of her liver cancer has begun preparations for an operation that she hopes will save her life.

Shirley Angsten, 52, of Waupaca, is scheduled for the surgery Monday, said Dr. Joseph L. Skibba, who will perform the operation.

"She's been undergoing tests for the past couple of days," said Mrs. Angsten's husband, Robert, from her room at Froedtert Memorial Lutheran Hospital.

Mrs. Angsten could expect to live only about one more year unless the surgery prolongs her life, Angsten said Wednesday night.

The operation has been performed only twice before, both times by Skibba, associate professor of surgery at the Medical College of Wisconsin.

In the treatment, called hyperthermia, blood heated to 108 degrees Fahrenheit is circulated through the liver in an attempt to kill cancer cells, while leaving normal cells unharmed.

"Or at least the damage to the normal cells is recoverable," Skibba said.

The surgery succeeded in stopping the growth of cancerous tumors on the liver of Jeff Foran, 24, of suburban Whitefish Bay, Skibba said. Foran had the operation Jan. 31.

But the second person to have the surgery, a 63-year-old Milwaukee man whose identity was not disclosed, died May 1, having undergone the surgery 12 days earlier.

The death prompted the Human Research and Review Committee at the Medical College of Wisconsin to suspend approval of the procedure, pending a review to determine whether the procedure was safe.

Mrs. Angsten, originally was scheduled for surgery May 9, but the committee said her operation would be delayed at least until after it reviewed the matter at its May 25 meeting.

She sent a letter to Lawrence Ryan, committee chairman, to protest the delay.

"With every day of delay, my chances become slimmer," she said. "If I am prevented from trying to extend my life, I would have to hold the committee responsible for failing to give me a chance."

The Medical College announced May 13 that the committee had reconsidered the decision, and, after a review of autopsy reports, agreed to allow the surgery for Mrs. Angsten.

Skibba said the patient who died suffered post-operative infection, but the man's liver contained no new cancer cells.

In the case of Mrs. Angsten, fast action may be able to stop the cancer before its fatal spread throughout the body, Skibba said.

"That's our hope, and obviously that's her hope because the disease otherwise is terminal," he said.

Habib seeks Saudi Arabian support for withdrawal pact

By The Associated Press

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, refused admission to Syria, met with Egypt's assistant foreign minister today and was heading to Saudi Arabia in an effort to win Arab support for the Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement.

U.S. Embassy sources in Cairo said Habib stopped in the Egyptian capital briefly to refuel his plane en route to meetings with Saudi officials. But the official Egyptian Middle East News Agency said he also met at the airport with Assistant Foreign Minister El-Shafei Abdel-Hammid.

American sources in Beirut said Habib originally planned to go to Damascus today to try to get the Syrian government to drop its opposition to the troop withdrawal pact between Israel and Lebanon. Israel will not withdraw until the Syrians also pull out their troops.

But the Syrian government said it would not receive the American troubleshooter because it had "nothing to discuss" with him. It called him "one of the most hostile American officials to the Arabs and their causes."

The Syrians also announced they would not negotiate with the Lebanese government on the withdrawal of the 40,000 Syrian troops and 6,000 to 12,000 Palestinian guerrillas in northern and eastern Lebanon.

Sonic booms echoed through the Lebanese capital when the Israeli jets streaked overhead on their first reconnaissance flights over Beirut since the signing of the Lebanon-Israel troop withdrawal agreement Tuesday.

The planes staged similar flights over several towns in southern and Syrian-controlled eastern Lebanon in addition to Beirut, private radios said.

The sonic booms coincided with Habib's departure to Egypt after consultations with Lebanese leaders on ways to overcome Syria's opposition to the U.S.-sponsored withdrawal accord, the broadcasts said.

They said the trip to Cairo was part of a new effort by the American troubleshooter, who returned to Beirut on Wednesday, to help the Lebanese government chart a negotiating course with Syria on withdrawing its troops from Lebanon simultaneously with an Israeli pullout.

But Syria's hardline stance promised to prolong the division of much of Lebanon into occupied Syrian and Israeli zones, since Israel will not carry out its agreement to withdraw its 25,000 troops in southern and central Lebanon unless the Syrians and Palestinians pull out simultaneously.

Col. Moammar Khadafy's Libyan government, backing Syria, recalled its ambassador to Lebanon Wednesday and asked the Lebanese ambassador to leave Libya. In retaliation, the Lebanese government told Libya to make the recall permanent.

The Libyan government also asked the Arab League to enforce a political and economic boycott against Lebanon for signing the agreement with Israel, like the boycott against Egypt after its Camp David peace treaty. But since the agreement was opposed openly by only four of the 21 members of the league — Syria, Libya, South Yemen and the Palestine Liberation Organization — a boycott seemed unlikely.

Broadway's husband expected to testify in Sharp murder trial

OZONA (AP) — Prosecutors rested their case after the teen-age survivor of a triple abduction at a Kermit car wash identified capital murder defendant Michael Eugene Sharp as the man who killed her mother.

Sharp, 29, is on trial for the June 11, 1982 killing of Brenda Kay Broadway, 31. The former Odessa oilfield worker already has been sentenced to life in prison for killing Mrs. Broadway's 8-year-old daughter, Christie Elms.

Defense attorney Glen Williamson presented two witnesses Wednesday and said he would call two more, including the victim's husband, before resting his case today.

Selena Elms, 15, testified Wednesday that she, her sister and mother were forced to accompany Sharp from a car wash into a remote area where they were sexually abused.

Alleged burglar shot with own rifle

BONHAM (AP) — A man apparently burglarizing a home was killed with his own weapon after beating a middle-aged woman who had surprised him, the Fannin County sheriff's office said Wednesday.

Dorothy Lofton was in critical condition at the Texoma Medical Center in Denison with severe head injuries, the hospital said. She also lost an eye due to the beating.

Sheriff's officials said Mrs. Lofton was driving home Tuesday afternoon when she noticed a small car with Oklahoma tags in her driveway. She passed her house, turned around and came back. The car was leaving so she went in. There she was surprised by a man who began beating her with the stock of a rifle, authorities said. He was shot in the stomach in the ensuing struggle.

Mondale campaigns in El Paso

EL PASO (AP) — The federal government should increase its role in alleviating the special problems facing border cities that must provide care and education of Americans as well as Mexicans, Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale said.

El Paso and several other Texas cities on or near the Mexican border rank near the bottom in per capita income in the United States, the former vice president noted Wednesday in a campaign swing.

"Communities like El Paso are entitled to a federal government that deals sensitively and responsibly to problems that are beyond your own capacity to handle."

Teen has more surgery on hand

GALVESTON (AP) — Doctors say they expect a 14-year-old Lake Jackson youth to regain use of his severed left hand although a second operation was necessary to stop internal bleeding.

Brian Beach, who severed his hand with a bandsaw in a high school shop Friday, was given a drug during an 18-hour operation which was used to keep the hand's arteries from clotting but the drug has a side-effect of sometimes causing internal bleeding, said Dr. Samuel Parry.

Bleeding started early Wednesday and another six-hour operation was necessary, Parry said.

Letter writer ordered to seek help

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas City man who threatened to "destroy, harass and humiliate" employes and property of Brown & Root Inc., has been sentenced to a one-year suspended sentence and ordered to seek a psychiatrist's help.

Robert Lee Hambrick, 25, was placed on probation for three years by U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor Jr.

Hambrick was unemployed when he wrote a letter threatening to declare war on the Houston-based construction firm which was managing a $1 billion project at the American Oil Company's Texas City refinery.

Loeffler discloses income, wages

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt was paid $11,100 for speeches to various trade or business research organizations in 1982, according to a financial disclosure statement which he made to the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct.

Loeffler listed gross business income outside of Congress of $3,352 for himself and wife.

Reaction mixed to proposed 'sin taxes'

TEMPLE (AP) — While Gov. Mark White was preaching his tax sermon to the willing-to-pay faithful across town, barkeep Lenhart Mraz was handling the small lunch crowd at Alice's Lounge.

The 67-year-old Democrat is not impressed with his governor's plan to hike sin taxes — such as the state's share of the price of a beer — to pay for teacher pay raises, welfare and roads.

"They're high enough like they are," said Mraz. "They're putting too damned much tax on all that stuff. I'll tell you one thing, it's drying us out, with how damned much luxury tax they're getting already.

"They shouldn't need more."

White's $1.27 billion tax plan includes adding about 20 cents to mixed drink prices, 10 cents to the cost of a six-pack of beer, five cents to a pack of cigarettes and $15 a year more from an amusement machine owner.

Mraz said he voted for White, but "he can go like the last one did."

While White was talking to students, teachers, parents and reporters at Western Hills Elementary School here Tuesday, Idella Cownover was at Temple Mall, buying boots for her son.

She supports the White plan for two reasons — she thinks teachers are entitled to a raise, and she thinks smoking and drinking is "evil."

"The sky's the limit" on sin taxes, she said.

"I think the school systems need to be improved and if raising taxes will do it, fine," said the Salado resident.

She has one reservation about the governor's plan, which has until May 30 to get through a Legislature that's balked at tax hikes.

"It's sad that most of the people that will be hurt are probably the people that can't afford it. The rich people will go ahead and do it anyway and they can afford it," she said.

Lenhart Mraz, a 67-year-old barkeeper at Alice's Lounge in Temple in not impressed by Gov. Mark White's plan to hike sin taxes to pay for teacher pay raises, welfare and roads. Mraz says they're putting "too damned much tax on all that stuff; they're high enough like they are."

While White was trying to get Temple residents to pressure their lawmakers into supporting his plan, Gene Connally was enjoying his retirement by sitting on a bench in the peaceful mall.

"I'm not a man that praises that fellow," he said of White, adding he thought Bill Clements was the state's best-ever governor.

Connally, 77, chides White for "making fun" of Clements' personal fortune.

"Now Mark don't have no money to correct all those lies he told those schoolteachers," said Connally, who thinks as little of White's tax plan as he thinks of White.

"He's taxing your leisure things to do it," said the man of leisure. "I don't think that's right."

Connally supports more money for teachers, but there's a limit.

"Clements made a good statement. The women are not smart enough to have too much money. That beat him right there," he said, recalling a statement that Clements might or might not have made.

"What we need is more educated women to teach," said Connally.

While White was complaining that teachers earn less than garbageman and prison guards, Gale Leidy was nodding her head in agreement. Miss Leidy is the teacher in the fifth grade class in which White spoke.

"I don't know whether the public is completely informed on what teachers make and what teachers do," she said after the governor's talk.

After nine years ot teaching, Miss Leidy earns about $16,000 a year. She said it doesn't go very far.

"I'm a single. Some months my savings account gets dipped into," she said.

Like White, Miss Leidy is looking for parents to join the teacher pay raise bandwagon. She senses a decline in the public's attitude toward teachers.

"The teacher gets to feeling, 'What have we done wrong to make the people feel this way?' " she said.

White House guards fail drug test

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine members of the Army's select White House Guard Company are being reassigned after urinalysis tests revealed traces of marijuana, according to a published report.

The results of the unannounced March 19 tests were received the first of this week, Col. Jamie Walton of the public information office of the Military District of Washington was quoted as saying in today's editions of The Washington Post.

Walton said the nine soldiers are now awaiting reassignment to other Army units and have been placed on company restriction.

Glenn richest Democratic presidential candidate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Of the six candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, John H. Glenn Jr., son of a small-town plumber, is far and away the wealthiest. Reports filed with the government show he is the only one of them who earns over a million dollars a year.

Required financial disclosure forms filed with the Federal Election Commission for the 15½-month period that ended April 15 showed that the relative pauper in the group is Sen. Gary Hart. The Coloradoan reported an income for the period of under $175,000, not including his Senate salary of $60,622.50 a year.

Glenn, an Ohio senator with middle-class roots in New Concord, Ohio, reported an income of between $1.5 million and $2 million for the period and assets of between $3.3 million and $7.6 million.

Much of the former astronaut's income came in dividends from stocks and partnerships in a large number of real estate, timber and oil and gas corporations. His 30 percent interest in a firm which owns two Holiday Inns near Walt Disney World in Florida brought him $669,912.

The other candidates are:

— Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who reported an income over the reporting period of between $555,000 and $567,000 and assets of between $266,000 and $770,000.

— Sen. Alan Cranston, Calif., with $187,000 to $299,000 in earnings, not including his Senate salary, and with assets valued between $451,000 and $1.14 million.

— Former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew with earnings of about $372,000 for the period and assets of between $147,000 and $350,000, including his personal coin collection, worth more than $5,000.

Seniors get certificate, no diploma

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Sixteen high school seniors who flunked a literacy test tonight become the state's first graduates to receive certificates of completion instead of diplomas, after the embattled exam law was upheld by a federal appeals court.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Wednesday upheld the state's right to withhold diplomas from students who fail an eighth-grade basic skills test. About 1,300 students statewide have flunked the examination.

The three-judge panel, sitting at Atlanta, voted 2-1 to uphold the no-diploma law.

THE DECISION came one day before the first of the state's seniors graduate in Santa Rosa County. County graduates who failed the test will be allowed to participate in commencement ceremonies and their certificates will resemble diplomas, officials said.

The literacy test, introduced in 1977, was intended to boost the value of a diploma by measuring how well students could apply reading, writing and mathematics to situations outside the classroom, such as figuring interest and discounts and writing checks. But the test has been bogged down in legal battles ever since.

Appeals Judges James C. Hill and A.J. Henderson voted to deny a motion for a stay, and Judge Phyllis Kravitch dissented.

Attorney Steve Hanlon, who guided the challenge through the long legal process, was clearly disappointed. Although unable to block the state from denying diplomas this year, he's convinced the diploma issue eventually will be overturned.

HANLON maintains the test is unfair to black students who fail at an 8-to-1 ratio to their white classmates. He blames poor performance on discrimination and racism persisting after school integration.

"I'm certainly encouraged that a judge such as Judge Kravitch voted to grant the stay and acknowledged there are close legal questions involved," Hanlon said.

"It ain't over 'til it's over," he added. "We're going to win this case. We'll try to expedite the appeal."

In Tallahassee, Education Commissioner Ralph Turlington said the decision upholding the tests didn't surprise him.

THE LITERACY test law "will help motivate thousands of students to read better and learn to use math in everyday situations," Turlington said at the Florida Capitol.

U.S. District Judge George C. Carr upheld use of the test in a landmark May 4 ruling.

Carr rejected Hanlon's request for a stay Tuesday, the same day Turlington announced that 1,665 high school seniors — two-thirds of them black — failed the test the last time it was administered this academic year.

OF THAT number, about 300 would not have received diplomas anyway because they failed other requirements, Turlington said.

The 120-question test quizzes students on 24 basic skills in math and communications. Students are first given the test as sophomores, and those who flunk have four more chances to pass before graduation.

Former EPA official faces criminal prosecution for failing to testify

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rita M. Lavelle, the former Environmental Protection Agency official in charge of the "superfund" toxic waste cleanup program, is facing criminal prosecution for failing to testify before Congress.

The House voted 413-0 on Wednesday to cite Ms. Lavelle, the assistant administrator who was fired by President Reagan Feb. 7, because she has refused to heed the subpoenas of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on investigations.

Committee members told the House that Ms. Lavelle was in open defiance of Congress' constitutional authority to oversee the workings of government. Rep. Bob Whittaker, R-Kan., urged the House to send "a strong message to those who would flout, ignore or repudiate the legitimate legal process of this body."

"I've always been willing to testify," Ms. Lavelle said in a telephone interview.

She complained that the subcommittee has made no attempt to schedule an appearance between her job-hunting trips to California and has "steadfastly refused to let me see all my own files."

"All we can say is, 'We're ready. When do you want us?'" she said.

Her explanations, however, ran counter to statements by subcommittee members and lawyers.

Whittaker said there has been no attempt by Ms. Lavelle or her lawyer to schedule an appearance. Subcommittee staff lawyers said Ms. Lavelle can review her files being held by the subcommittee, but has not tried.

Ms. Lavelle also said she does not expect to be indicted because "I've conscientiously tried to appear." But Stan Harris, U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia, said the contempt citation would be assigned to a prosecutor in his office when it is received.

Late last year, Harris refused to prosecute Ms. Lavelle's former boss, then-EPA Administrator Anne M. Burford, when she was cited for contempt for refusing to turn over subpoenaed documents to Congress.

At the time, Harris said it would be improper to prosecute a fellow executive branch official for following the president's orders and asserting executive privilege, as Mrs. Burford had done.

However, Harris said the Lavelle case did not present a similar problem.

The unanimous vote to cite Ms. Lavelle followed arguments that by ignoring subpoenas, she was in open defiance of Congress' constitutional authority to oversee the workings of government.

"By failing to appear, Ms. Lavelle thought the inquiry would go away," said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the subcommittee that subpoenaed her. "It cannot. It will not. And Ms. Lavelle's testimony is essential. ... There is no justification for Ms. Lavelle's refusal to testify."

Rep. Elliott H. Levitas, D-Ga., chairman of another investigating subcommittee, said the issue "goes far beyond this particular matter. It goes to the right of the American people through their elected Congress to conduct oversight and investigation of federal agencies and programs."

'Negro blood' law upheld

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Both sides are looking forward to an appeal of a court decision upholding what one lawyer called a "last vestige" of segregation — a Louisiana law designating anyone with as much as 1-32nd "Negro blood" legally black.

A state judge Wednesday ruled against white-skinned Susie Guillory Phipps, a descendant of a black female slave and a white Louisiana planter, who had sued to have the so-called "black blood" law declared unconstitutional.

Mrs. Phipps' attorney, Brian Begue, said he would appeal the ruling by State District Judge Frederick Ellis.

"This is the last vestige of a scheme of laws passed to enforce segregation," Begue said. "We feel the appeal court and the state Supreme Court will rule differently."

JACK WESTHOLZ, the attorney for the Louisiana Department of Health and Human Resources who defended the law, called the ruling "an extremely bittersweet victory ... I hope Susie authorizes her counsel to proceed to appeal her case."

The ruling failed to address the constitutionality of the law, said Westholz.

Ellis said he based his decision in part on a similar challenge in which the Louisiana Supreme Court upheld the law in 1974.

"I am just a little old district judge," Ellis said. "I can't overrule the Supreme Court."

Mrs. Phipps, 49, of Sulphur, La., considers herself white. But her birth certificate, filled out by a midwife in Fry, La., listed her parents as "colored."

IN 1978, she filed suit to have the courts declare the "black blood" law unconstitutional and classify her as white.

In defending the law, the state traced her ancestry and said she is at least 3-32nds black, with at least four black women in her family tree before 1800.

Westholz said the law isn't even used anymore because doctors fill out birth certificates based on information obtained from parents at the hospital — the same system used by other states.

THE UNIQUE "black blood" law was passed to give Louisiana a legal description of what constitutes black or white for challenges of racial designations on birth certificates.

Until its passage, "any traceable amount" of black blood was enough to warrant a designation of black.

Ms. Phipps is among six light-skinned members of her family who sued to have their birth certificates changed from "colored" to "white."

Ellis' decision said data on a birth certificate cannot be changed unless it is proven to be wrong.

"In this case, it is entirely clear that the relators have the appearance of 'white' people'," Ellis wrote. "They have fair skins and, in some cases, blue eyes and blond hair. It is also entirely clear that they are of mixed white and Negro blood."

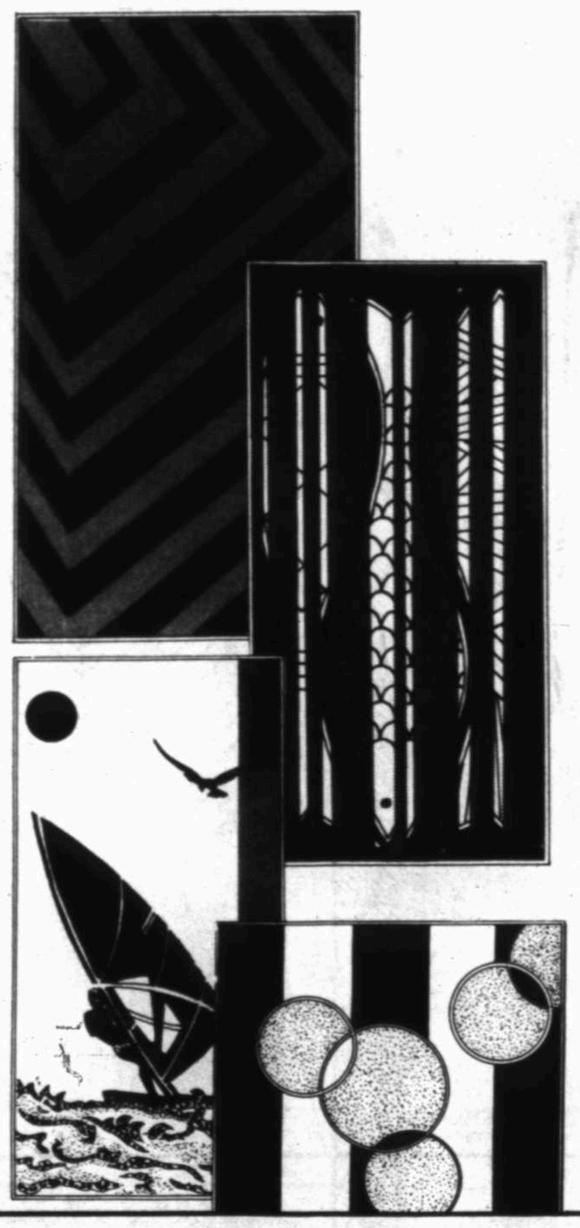

Ellis, who decided the case after the judge who heard the testimony retired, ruled that the plaintiffs would not be able to prove they were either white or colored because it was impossible to tell how "colored" Mrs. Phipps is.

Senator Moynihan wants time off to watch front of Capitol fall down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spring finally had arrived full bloom in the nation's capital, but senators were stuck working inside the Capitol in a two-week-long budget debate.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., noting that "it is such a beautiful day outside," asked the Senate for permission to leave.

"'Nothing is taking place inside," Moynihan said. "The west front of the Capitol is falling down. At least we could watch that while we wait for the time to run out. May I be excused?"

It was a reference to a crumbling section of the Capitol. Money to fix it is snarled in a battle over whether the front should be extended and the building enlarged.

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., had another proposal for killing time.

As budget debate droned on, Bryd asked Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., whether she planned to ask for a recorded vote on her amendment and how long the debate might take.

"Do I have time to go to the barber shop?" he asked.

"I don't know, come over here and let me see (how long your hair is)," she said. Byrd turned crimson as the chamber rocked with laughter.

Finally, Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the ranking Democratic on the Senate Budget Committee, took a morning off from floor debate — to go turkey hunting.

His absence prompted some floor debate on turkeys in general — and legislative ones in particular.

Two senators have announced they will not run again in 1984 — Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va. — and the two were discussing their decisions recently in an exchange on the Senate floor.

Both agreed they were glad they had made the decision.

Baker told Randolph:

"Someone asked me the other day, 'Are you sorry you have announced that your not going to run?' I said, 'No. Not only am I not sorry, but I'm now actively engaged in negotiations to try to gain time off for good behavior.'"

Freshman Rep. Bob Wise, D-W.Va., missed a vote on the House floor the other day and entered a statement in the Congressional Record to explain his absence: he was stuck in an elevator in the Longworth House Office Building.

"The door refused to open and there was no physical way to make it to the floor of the House. Others trapped with me say that such problems are a frequent occurence...and I hope the proper officials will look into it."

Wise said he was trapped with Rep. Tom Vandergriff, D-Texas, and some staff members. Vandergriff "might still be on the thing for all I know," Wise said.

The 23 freshman Republican members of the House are more conservative than the chamber's GOP membership as a whole, according to a survey by the Fund for a Conservative Majority.

The freshman voted conservative 63 percent of the time, compared with 57 percent for all House Republicans, the organization said.

Authors critical of freeze

BOSTON (AP) — While no one is expected to love the bomb, a group of Harvard professors recommends that Americans learn to live with nuclear weapons.

In an article generally critical of the nuclear freeze movement, members of the Harvard Nuclear Study Group warn that "complete disarmament would be a leap into the unknown" and might actually make nuclear war more likely.

"It is an open question whether a freeze today would enhance crisis stability or not..." the group says.

Writing in the June issue of The Atlantic magazine, the authors argue that nuclear war can best be avoided by limited measures that restrain the superpowers' arsenals in ways that build stability. In the long run, they say, important arms reductions depend on improved relations between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The article is an advance look at a forthcoming book, "Living with Nuclear Weapons," to be published by Harvard on June 1. The book, aimed at general readers, is intended to have a major impact on the nuclear arms debate.

Harvard President Derek Bok approached five of the university's experts on foreign policy and arms issues a year ago and commissioned them to write a book that would "supply the public as a whole with an objective account of the basic facts about nuclear arms control that...presented the arguments for and against each position."

In a foreword, Bok says the book carries no official Harvard endorsement and that its purpose is to help interested people "think for themselves about issues of nuclear arms rather than to promote the views of the authors."

The group criticizes the more sweeping nuclear arms freeze proposals as destabilizing, unverifiable, probably unnegotiable and possibly self-defeating.

"While complete disarmament may be a worthy long-term goal, trying to achieve it before the requisite political conditions exist could increase the prospects of war," the study group says.

"A comprehensive freeze...would require extensive and elaborate negotiations," the authors say. "It seems unimaginable that such negotiations would not require several years, unless the arms-control budgets of the superpowers were raised a hundredfold or more."

Pentagon chief knocks Trident

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's research chief says the Trident missile has not performed well in test-firings, but the Navy disagrees with that assessment of the nation's most advanced submarine-launched strategic weapon.

Richard DeLauer told reporters earlier this week there had been two failures during five test-firings of the Trident 1, a 4,000-mile-range missile installed on 14 submarines.

Acknowledging the two failures, the Navy Lt. Comdr Thomas J. Jurkowsky said "there is no indication that there is anything inherently wrong with the missile."

Disneyland gives way to guide dog

LEAVENWORTH, Wash. (AP) — When a planned trip to Disneyland fell through, members of the Leavenworth High School senior class decided to use their money to help a blind man get a guide dog.

The $2,500 they raised by washing cars, raffling cakes and selling peanuts, candy and light bulbs will be given to John Riehle, 35, so he can visit California to get the dog.

Riehle didn't know any of the 63 students personally, but he's been a devoted fan of the school's basketball team, the Grizzlies.

"I was greatly surprised," he said of the gift. "I'm real proud of the seniors for doing this, even if it wasn't me that's benefiting. You don't see this kind of thing very often."

The students originally planned a junket to Disneyland for their senior trip, but the school board denied their request. They then decided "it would be more meaningful helping someone else," said Lisa Brooks, class president.

Jim Ward, a parent and former mayor, suggested they help Riehle, who lost his sight two years ago from complications of diabetes.

"I can't recall this ever having been done before," said senior adviser Howard Cook. "Kids of this age usually aren't that humanistic in their thinking. It's an outstanding class and they'll go out showing that."

Hospital 'paws' known as 'friend's hour'

HAWTHORNE, Calif. — In a hospital here, there come paws in the day's occupation that is known as the "friend's hour."

The paws belong to what once was a stray mutt, and her friends — 99 of them — are occupants of a convalescent hospital.

This one is clean, well-managed, with decent care and food, but there is of necessity regimentation and perhaps some lack of a personal touch at times. But not at Golden West Convalescent Hospital — not anymore.

There is a resident well-wisher and cheerer-upper on the premises now, a black tail-wagger with some German shepherd obviously in her background, who has in the short span of a few weeks assumed the self-delegated role of seeing to it that each and every patient does not go through the long day without at least one nuzzle.

"We were flabbergasted," administrator Marion Hames said. "She is only a pup, maybe 8 months old or so, and without any training or coaxing on our part she visits each of our 40 rooms by herself every day and makes rounds with the nurses at night.

"If a patient's light goes on, the dog will head right for the room and wait until a nurse comes. We lock the main door from the outside at night, and if anybody shows up, the dog will growl and bark, which is the only time she does that."

It is becoming a nationwide trend to use pets as visitors to, and sometimes residents of, nursing homes and old-age homes.

"In effect, pets have become very efficient therapists, said Margaret G. Nesbitt, an authority on them. "Not only are they being used in nursing homes, but they are being used in penal institutions to aid in rehabilitation."

Country needs workers

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The United States lacks enough trained workers to fill available openings in at least a dozen vocations ranging from aero-astronautic engineering to X-ray technology, two University of Michigan researchers say.

More than two dozen other fields face a potential shortage of workers, according to a study by Malcolm S. Cohen and Arthur R. Schwartz of the university's Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations.

Occupations with identified shortages were aero-astronautic engineers, computer programmers and systems analysts, electrical engineers, industrial engineers, nurses, electrical and electronic technicians, physical therapists, medical laboratory technologists, X-ray technologists, surgical technicians, dental assistants, and mechanical engineers.

The study results, released earlier this week, were based on labor market conditions in 1981. Conditions may have changed since the study was made, Cohen said, adding that conditions during that period "are likely to resurface in 1983-84" as the economy moves out of recession.

Among 27 other occupations identified in the study as having potentially insufficient numbers of workers were financial analysts, paralegals, petroleum engineers and a variety of health technologists and technicians.

Another 18 occupations may experience shortages as the economy recovers, including cooks, secretaries, restaurant and bar managers, bakers, tool and die makers, electricians, machinists, and engineers.

The study listed 20 occupations ranked as the least likely to experience shortages. Among them were machine operators, carpet cutters, millwrights, auto body repairers, carpenters, sheet metal workers, butchers, and embalmers.

One purpose of the study, undertaken on behalf of the U.S. Employment Service, was to set criteria for determining which foreign workers are eligible to be certified as permanent immigrants to the United States, the researchers said.

Pentagon announces exercises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and nearby waters will be the scene of training exercises by U.S. Regular and National Guard forces to demonstrate and improve military capability in the region, the Pentagon says.

The two-week exercise, which will begin May 31, is the latest in a series of military drills first initiated by the Carter administration to improve security in the Caribbean and Central America.

About 3,000 Army, Navy, Marine, Air Force and Coast Guard regulars plus 3,000 National Guardsmen from Florida, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands will participate the Pentagon said.

nation in brief

Program may affect taxpayers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's Synthetic Fuels Corp. estimates it could spend $8.3 billion of taxpayers' money by 1994 to launch a synthetic fuels program.

The agency's internal study, presented to Congress on Wednesday, contrasts with its 1980 projection that loan guarantees to subsidize plant construction would result in little or no costs to the taxpayer.

But corporation officials said the projected expenditure includes $2 billion in losses from government loan guarantees and $6.3 billion that would be spent in price support payments.

Edward Miller, vice president for finance for the corporation, told the House Banking and Finance Committee that the larger spending projections result from a sharp drop in the price of oil.

New Mexico paper to fold

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The New Mexico Sun, presented by its publisher as a twice-weekly alternative to the city's two daily newspapers, is folding because it did not develop as anticipated, the Meredith Corp. announced.

The Sun published its last edition Wednesday. The company also ceased publishing the Rio Rancho Roadrunner after last week's edition.

Meredith executive Terence Donnelly said a "local group" was considering buying the Sun, but he did not identify the group.

The newspapers, which employed 45 people, had been published and distributed free in the Albuquerque area.

Company to sell commercially

NEW YORK (AP) — Western Electric Co. will sell its products commercially for the first time in the second quarter of this year, starting with a computer chip likely to spark new competition with Japanese semiconductor manufacturers, a company spokesman says.

Western Electric will begin producing the latest generation of computer memory chips — the 256K RAM — which can store more than 256,000 characters of information, enough to fill a newspaper page, company spokesman Dean McFall said Wednesday. Most widely used chips now can store only about 64,000 characters.

Western Electric, an American Telegraph & Telephone Co. subsidiary, previously sold only to Bell System companies.

Gang released after rape

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Four members of a rock band charged with the gang rape of an 18-year-old female Army private have been released on their own recognizance, according to a judge.

The four pleaded innocent Wednesday to charges of aggravated rape, kidnapping and indecent assault and battery.

Police said the four assaulted an unidentified woman soldier shortly after the band had finished a concert April 23 at a Shirley nightclub.

A spokesman for the band has denied that the men forced sex on the woman. A pretrial conference has been set for June 8.

Lawsuit by NCPAC dismissed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lawsuit accusing eight congressmen of using their influence to persuade 11 radio and television stations not to broadcast conservative political ads has been dismissed by a federal judge.

The lawsuit by the National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC) named Democratic congressmen who were either the subject of the critical ads or held party leadership positions. The lawsuit also named 11 broadcast outlets as defendants.

U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green ruled earlier this month that "no constitutional right of was violated."

Dispute may resolve soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States may soon resolve a dispute with Romania over emigration restrictions imposed by the Communist bloc nation, according to U.S. government sources.

The Reagan administration has threatened to revoke Romania's "most favored nation" trade status late next month if the country charges emigrants an education tax.

The government sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, indicated that Romanian Foreign Minister Stefan Andrei told the administration the tax may not be collected in order to preserve the favorable trade status.

Official gives substitute for war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte says economic and political reforms are the only alternative to civil war in his strife-torn Central American nation.

Duarte, the Christian Democratic Party's candidate in December presidential elections, arrived here Monday to confer with administration officials and congressional leaders on the situation in El Salvador.

An opponent of any negotiations that would allow guerrillas to share government power, Duarte said prosperous Salvadorans must give up their desire for a privileged society in order to stop the civil war. Predicting victory in the elections, Duarte said he would overcome opposition to his candidacy by the right.

Worker awarded $9 million

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A jury awarded on Wednesday a $9 million judgment to a Tucson man who lost part of his right arm as a result of a high-voltage shock he suffered while working on an electric mining shovel.

Robert K. Readenour, 31, was awarded the money after a five-week trial in Maricopa County Superior Court on a suit Readenour filed against the shovel's manufacturer, the Marion Power Shovel Co., Ohio, a division of Dresser Industries Inc., of Dallas.

The jury awarded Readenour $2 million in actual damages and $7 million in punitive damages.

William Sandweg, attorney for Marion Power Shovel, said he believed the company will appeal.

Abducted woman home, suspects sought in case

TANEYTOWN, Md. (AP) — A woman found alive after being abducted during an armed robbery more than a week ago says she was bound, blindfolded and threatened with death by her captors, according to police.

"Physically she's fine, emotionally she's a wreck," Taneytown police chief Bruce Moore said Wednesday after Patricia Hively, 42, was released by two men in Gettysburg, Pa.

Moore said Mrs. Hively told police of death threats with both a knife and gun during her abduction.

"We just want to get back to normal living, to just try to get back to the daily normal routine ... she just wants to put the thing out of her mind," said Carroll Hively, Mrs. Hively's husband.

The couple plans to take some time off work to forget about the events since the May 10 robbery at the pharmacy where Mrs. Hively worked as a clerk, Hively said.

Hively said his wife told him her captors said she wouldn't be harmed if she did what they said. Hively said he did not intend to ask his wife what happened during the eight days she was missing.

Meanwhile, investigators continued searching the area where Mrs. Hively was released, looking for two suspects they identified as Olon Hill Jr., 36, and Jimmy Edward Simpson, 39, also known as John Land. Both suspects remained at large today, state police said.

Warrants on robbery and kidnapping were issued for both suspects last week.

Tennessee police said the two suspects and a woman were seen in a town about 30 miles southeast of Nashville on Saturday.

Family, friends and co-workers at the Taneytown Pharmacy gave Mrs. Hively a warm welcome following her ordeal.

"It is a happy reunion," said Wayne Hively on Wednesday, shortly after his sister-in-law returned to her home after being questioned at the state police barracks in Westminster.

Evelyn Slaybaugh said her sister told of long rides while bound and blindfolded. Mrs. Hively had no idea her captors planned to release her, Mrs. Slaybaugh said.

Keith Carlisle, a state police spokesman, said Mrs. Hively was found at 7:30 a.m. in nearby Gettysburg, about 15 miles from this rural central Maryland community where she was abducted.

Magazine editor steps down

BONN, West Germany (AP) — One of the two newly appointed editors of Stern magazine resigned under pressure from employees, who also want publisher Henri Nannen to quit for his role in printing portions of the fake Hitler diaries.

Editor Johannes Gross resigned "with regret" Wednesday night after nearly 1,000 employees occupied Stern's offices and demonstrated outside. The employees objected to the hiring of Gross and Peter Scholl-Latour to replace the two top editors who resigned because of the diary scandal, saying the new editors were too conservative for the magazine.

Stern staffers also want the resignation of business manager Gerd Schulte-Hillen, who represents the publishing company Gruener & Jahr, owner of Stern.

In a related development, the Munich-based magazine Quick said Wednesday that East German intelligence agents helped Stern research its story on what turned out to be the fake Hitler diaries.

Quick said Stern's former star reporter Gerd Heidemann met with East German agents several times while looking for the diaries and researching other stories for Stern.

A Stern spokesman said the magazine would have no comment on the report. Heidemann, who has been fired by Stern, could not be reached for comment at his home.

But in Hamburg, the chief of the state Office for Protection of the Constitution said allegations that the East German secret police were involved are "absurd." The constitution office is a branch of the Interior Ministry.

"The East German secret service had absolutely nothing to do with the Hitler diaries scandal," the Hamburg office chief, Christian Lochte, told The Associated Press.

Asked how he knew this, Lochte said the diaries were too 'amateurish' for East German intelligence.

Students, farmers protest

French reforms, subsidies opposed

BORDEAUX, France (AP) — Riot police tear-gassed student gangs who pelted them with rocks and garbage early today in clashes that persisted following a march by 1,200 students protesting proposed education reforms.

Officers arrested 15 demonstrators and wrecked barricades thrown up by 300 students and other youths in downtown Bordeaux following the march Wednesday, police and witnesses said.

In a separate protest, French farmers, angry that the Common Market's recently approved 4.2 percent increase in farm price subsidies fell short of their demands, freed 3,000 cackling hens in the streets of the Brittany town of Lorient late Wednesday. About 100 other farmers blocked highway traffic in southern France near Montpellier. The farmers claim they cannot afford to feed the hens.

In Paris, about 1,000 students demonstrated peacefully Wednesday, and about 50 of them later occupied the Sorbonne briefly. They were expelled without incident late Wednesday.

The students, many opposed to the Socialist government, have been protesting plans to reform universities to make them more competitive and reduce the 60 percent dropout rate.

Unfazed by newspaper reports that the protesters had run out of steam, leaders of Wednesday's march also called for a mass demonstration on May 23, when the National Assembly begins debating the reforms.

Alain Savary, France's education minister, refused student demands for a postponement of the National Assembly debate to allow consultations with student groups.

Security forces ringed public buildings in Paris on Wednesday, set up metal barricades along sidewalks next to the presidential palace and stood grouped on street corners in the Latin Quarter — scene of the most violent student-police confrontations of recent weeks.

The government contends that the protest movement is unrepresentative and is being manipulated by the extreme right. At least two new leftist student sprang up this week to challenge it with counter-demonstrations.

At the same time, strikes at several provincial universities were called off, the newspaper Le Monde reported.

"They (the students) seem to be out of breath," observed the conservative daily Le Figaro, which has been sympathetic to the protesters.

The reform project proposed by the Socialist government is a complex plan intended to redirect students into fields they are suited for by delaying specialized studies.

It drafted the plan in response to statistics showing 60 percent of all university students drop out after two years.

Positive signs

Two events last week in Midland are important because of what they say about the city's young people and the local "drug scene."

One was results of a survey conducted by a Midland woman concerning prevalence of drug usage by Midland high schoolers compared to national statistics. The other was the repainting of "the Wall" — long a site where Midland teenagers have congregated to drink beer, experiment with drugs and socialize. Taken individually the happenings are hopeful signs that young people may be ready, as a group, to kick the reputation acquired during the last two tumultous decades. Taken together, they are a positive indication of that.

The survey, conducted by Wanda Mohr in February of this year as her master's thesis at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, indicates that fewer young people in Midland use drugs and alcohol than in comparably sized cities elsewhere in the United States. In fact, of all the local youngsters surveyed — and there were hundreds — 62.6 percent said they have never smoked marijuana and 23.3 percent said they never consume alcoholic beverages.

Nationally, only 40.5 percent of young people surveyed say they've never smoked marijuana and 7.4 percent say they've never consumed alcohol.

Not all the survey statistics actually revealed Midland is above the national average in drug and alcohol usage by teenagers. But in those instances the margin between Midland's figures and the national average were insignificantly small. And there are those who claim — and statistics seem to bear them out — that Midland is always on the tail end of national trends.

While the statistics are cold, hard fact, last Sunday's experience at "the Wall" was warm, exciting and encouraging. Thirty to 40 high school students from Midland's two high schools gathered at the Wall, located at the north end of Whitney Drive, to paint over graffiti placed there in years past by other teenagers. What they painted to cover the thoughts of their predecessors was positive in nature; what they covered all too often was obscene or drug-related.

The event said something about what today's young people are thinking. Brenda Adams, who organized the repainting of the Wall, verbalized that something when she commented, "We want people to know that teenagers could do something good instead of something bad."

Now we know, Brenda, and frankly we're impressed. We like what we've seen in recent days. But the statistics compiled by Mrs. Mohr and the enthusiasm graphically expressed by those who repainted the Wall are the only ways the image of young people can ever be cleaned up. As in all of society, teenagers will be judged by their actions.

Quavering Voice

The Voice of America has been growing weak and increasingly less audible from lack of financial nourishment. Economies inflicted in recent years on the nation's official broadcasting station to the world have left it short of personnel and bereft of adequate technology. In the continuing contest for international attention the United States has put itself at a competitive disadvantage, diminishing its opportunities to influence the opinions of others and to broadcast the news around the world.

The world's most technologically advanced country has been satisfied to leave the Voice trying to work with obsolescent and in many cases obsolete broadcasting equipment. More than 35 percent of the agency's transmitters date from the Korean War period or earlier. The Voice has only 20 people with engineering degrees to keep this embarrassing abundance of vintage material functioning. It needs scores more, and it needs new equipment, including replacements for its antiquated antennas, to reach the audiences that it should reach.

Of the agency's 42 language services, 38 are understaffed. Broadcasting in Polish was increased to seven hours a day when martial law was declared in Poland, but staff shortages have meant that only half that broadcasting can be original material. The Voice now lacks correspondents in Rome, in Geneva and even in Islamabad, the closest site for covering the Afghanistan war. In all, the agency is seeking funding for six additional overseas reporters and for an increase of 141 in its language divisions.

Congress tends to be generous in its praise for what the Voice tries to do, but all too often it has shown itself miserly when it comes to paying the necessary bill. Currently the Voice is asking for $170 million for its 1984 budget. That includes $23 million to implement a supplemental request that was made last year for specific modernization steps.

The Voice, in its news operations, is required by law to report fully and impartially on events in America and the world. It is required, in other words, to tell the truth. The truth is a powerful weapon, but it is powerful only when it can be heard. The Voice of America deserves to be heard more clearly and widely than its present physical and personnel resources allow. Congress will be remiss if it does not act now to begin making up for the serious shortcomings in the Voice's quality that past inaction has brought about.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Plans call for 'first strike' by U.S.

WASHINGTON — Despite repeated denials over the years, there is secret evidence that U.S. military strategists are planning for a nuclear first strike option against the Soviet Union. The MX missile is an important part of this planning.

Jack Anderson

A credible first-strike force requires land-based, highly accurate missiles capable of knocking out an enemy's offensive missiles without serious retaliation. The United States could have such a capability by the early 1990s.

The story of our potential first-strike force is told in secret reports of the Defense Department and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. My associate Dale Van Atta has obtained copies of these reports.

One secret ACDA document includes a chart with the candid title, "Outcome of Hypothetical U.S. First Strikes, 1993."

The chart incorporates some crucial assumptions into its calculations. For one thing, it assumes that the Soviet Union would "not launch out from under the attack" — in other words, that the Russians would, for some reason, not launch their nuclear missiles at the first warning of a U.S. attack or while our missiles were raining down death and destruction on them.

The equation also admittedly "ignores the impact of X-rays, neutron radiation, electromagnetic pulse, thermal effectives (and) possible problems of variations in yield, (accuracy) and reliability of U.S. weapons."

But with all these highly favorable — not to say unlikely — assumptions, and an adjustment for only 100 MX missiles instead of 200, the secret projection indicates that after a first strike by our modified Minuteman III, Trident II and MX missiles, not a single Soviet missile silo would survive.

According to a recent Pentagon report, the Russians now have a total of 1,398 missile silos at various locations. Planners figure on two U.S. nuclear warheads to take out each Soviet silo. These would have to be warheads with "hard target kill capability," meaning able to destroy steel-and-concrete reinforced underground missile silos. (In macabre nuclear parlance, "soft" targets are cities — and, of course, people.)

The best U.S. hard-target missiles are 300 recently upgraded Minuteman IIIs, each carrying three warheads. That's enough — in theory — to wipe out 450 of the Soviet missile silos.

The Navy is developing a missile with the same capability, the D-5, for use in the Trident II submarine-launched missile system. The 150 D-5s planned will each have 10 warheads, for a theoretical "kill" score of 750 Soviet silos.

Then comes the MX, a super-accurate missile capable of dropping its warhead within 304 to 425 feet of a target. No known silo could withstand a nuclear blast that close. The 100 MX missiles, with 10 warheads apiece, would put the United States over the top in destructive power. A secret disarmament agency report understates it this way: "The addition of highly accurate MX missiles would give the U.S. intercontinental ballistic missile force a much improved time-urgent hard-target kill capability."

It's a matter of simple arithmetic: some 3,400 highly accurate nuclear warheads to aim at probably no more than 1,400 Soviet missile silos by the early 1990s. Those are the two missiles presumed necessary to take out each silo, with 600 left over to drop on other "hard" targets, such as the Soviets' command-and-control bunkers.

Not so simple, of course, is what the Kremlin's reaction to this threat would be. As the ACDA report warns: The "synergistic effects" of Minuteman III improvement, Trident II and MX "could put a large portion of Soviet ICBM silos at risk, and together could have significant destabilizing effects and a negative arms control impact."

In short, the report warns, the Kremlin might not wait docilely for a future U.S. first-strike checkmate. "Under extreme crisis conditions," the report concludes, "Soviet leaders might perceive pressures to strike first."

WATCHDOG OR LAP DOG?: A feud between hospital management and the surgical staff at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Leavenworth, Kan., led to an investigation by the VA's inspector general that looks suspiciously like a whitewash of management.

Dr. Mary F. McAnaw, chief of surgery for nine years, questioned an experimental drug-testing program involving psychiatric patients — and was demoted and transferred. Her charges — that she had been harassed for blowing the whistle — led to an IG investigation of 58 specific allegations of "program mismanagement, nepotism, favoritism and retribution against employees by management."

In each case, the IG found in favor of management.

Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., read the IG report and wrote to Deputy VA Administrator Everett Alvarez Jr.: "For each allegation, there are facts in dispute. In every case, the Inspector General resolves the factual dispute in favor of Leavenworth management and then baldly states that the allegation is without merit."

GEORGE F. WILL

Ann and Abe: Story of a forgery

WASHINGTON — The villain was, as you might expect, a columnist. The villainy was forgery of documents purporting to reveal the deepest motivations of a famous leader. The victim was a credulous magazine. The year was 1928, the magazine was Atlantic Monthly, the forgeries were letters from Abraham Lincoln to Ann Rutledge. The story, as told by Stanford's Don Fehrenbacher, America's foremost Lincoln scholar, is evidence that there really is nothing new under the sun.

George F. Will

Lincoln's life — his rise from humble origins, his tendency to melancholy, his tragic end in his hour of triumph — made him an irresistible subject for biographical embroidery, sentimentalism and the sort of speculative babble nowadays known as psychohistory. Hence the legend that young Abe fell ankles over elbows in love with Ann back in New Salem, and that her untimely death in 1835, when he was 24, made him especially spiritual and driven. One theory was that he submerged his private sorrow in public action, transferring his love to the Republic. As Edgar Lee Master expressed it:

Bloom forever, O Republic,
From the dust of my bosom!

In the summer of 1928, Atlantic received a letter from Wilma Minor, a San Diego columnist, claiming that Harper's wanted to publish her "true love story" based on original letters from Abe to Ann handed down in her mother's family. Minor said she preferred to publish in Atlantic. She was invited to Boston.

She had hot stuff, such as a letter written by Lincoln in the sixth year of his marriage to Mary Todd, confirming the legend that the memory of Ann ruled his life: "Like a ray of sun-shine and as brief — she flooded my life....I see this picture before me — fever burning the light from her dear eyes, urging me to fight for the right....I have kept faith. Sometimes I feel that in Heaven she is pleading for my furtherance." Minor quickly had a deal for three Atlantic articles and a book, and Hollywood was interested.

The first expert consulted for authentication saw only photostats of the documents and, reserving judgment, warned that the documents were suspiciously compatible with popular legend. The next expert saw photostats and immediately said the documents were spurious. Atlantic's editor said experts would naturally be prejudiced against new evidence. When Minor's "original" documents arrived, Atlantic's editor said the fact that they presented a coherent picture and confirmed legend was evidence against a hoax.

Ida Tarbell, a muckraking journalist and Lincoln biographer, loved the Rutledge legend and said Atlantic had "an amazing set of true Lincoln documents." Atlantic consulted no handwriting experts or manuscript dealers. Minor was receiving lecture invitations by the time the December, 1928, Atlantic arrived with the first installment of "Lincoln the Lover." Carl Sandburg, whose "Abraham Lincoln: The Prairie Years" had appeared in 1926, visited Atlantic's editor at Thanksgiving and endorsed the documents, which he said "preciously and wonderfully coordinate and chime with all else known of Lincoln."

But on Nov. 27, the secretary of the Lincoln Centennial Association in Springfield pronounced the documents forgeries. In Chicago, the leading collector of Lincoln manuscripts concurred. On Dec. 4, Sandburg reaffirmed his belief that the documents "have come to stay in the Lincoln record." The next day he recanted, saying, "When I scrutinize original source material of this kind, I let my emotions have full play. I try to do my hard-boiled analyzing later."

Suddenly skeptics were in full cry and Tarbell, the very model of a righteous journalist when judging others, denied she had vouched for the documents. Minor struck a pose of injured innocence as Atlantic published the second installment, "The Courtship." It included a letter from Ann to a nonexistent cousin whose diary, supposedly written in the early 1830s, mentioned someone not born until 1843.

When Atlantic urged Minor to defend herself in court, Minor's mother sent a handwritten letter saying her daughter's health would not permit that. Atlantic's staff instantly recognized the mother's handwriting: They had seen it in the Minor documents. Eventually Minor confessed that she had received her information with her mother, who went into trances and communicated as a medium with other worlds. Atlantic never published the confession or told how the fraud unraveled. The thirst of journalistic organizations for full disclosure has limits.

The legend of Abe and Ann, based solely on the reminiscences of Lincoln's law partner, receded. Historians could concentrate on the not uninteresting business of explaining Lincoln's career in terms of slavery, secession, a man's moral greatness, and stuff like that.

ART BUCHWALD

Anyone (with money) can be president

A young man asked me an interesting question the other day.

"Is it true that anyone born in the United States can grow up and be president of the United States?"

"Yes son," I replied. "Providing he can raise enough money to run in the primaries."

"Do you need lots of money?"

"You need lots of money just to run for Congress. But you need millions of dollars to even try for the Rose Garden."

Art Buchwald

"How do you get the money?" he asked.

"Well, first you meet in hotel suites with lobbyists and corporate dining rooms with chief executives, and golf clubs with labor leaders, and they ask you questions and you tell them what they want to hear, and hope they'll give you the money so you can become president of the United States."

"Do they give you ALL the money?"

"No, each one is only allowed to give a thousand dollars for himself, and a thousand dollars for his wife. But so many guys are splitting up these days, that you can't count on the thousand from the wife."

"If each person can only give a thousand dollars, doesn't the person who wants to be president have to see a lot of people?"

"You're not meeting in hotel suites, and corporate board rooms and golf courses to get a thousand dollars. You're talking to people who will make a lot of telephone calls to other people who have a thousand dollars. And you're hoping he or she can get those people to make calls to their friends and so on."

"What does the person who makes the calls say to his friends?"

"What's your name?"

"Archie Daniloff, sir."

"Well, what you hope for is that one of the people you talk to will call up a friend and say, 'A small group of us met with Archie Daniloff last night and he thinks the way we do.'"

"How do they know I think the way they do?"

"Because you told them the night before. Suppose you met with the sulfur burning coal guys. Before the meeting your political manager would brief you on where you stand on coal, so your position squares with their's."

"Suppose I felt different than they did?"

"Then you shouldn't meet with them in the first place, because you can't waste valuable time trying to get money from people you don't agree with. You've got just so much time to raise the dough, and if you agree to meet with the coal people you have the choice of either telling them that you support their position, or at least making them think you do."

"When do I talk to the voters?"

"Much later, after you've raised the money from the political action committees. They're becoming more and more important, because they cannot only give you money from their kitties, but they can also put out the word to their supporters to send you checks on their own. PAC money is now becoming the infant formula of politics."

"After I get the money from the PAC people do I talk about the things I believe in?"

"No, you still have to wait until you do a large direct mail advertising campaign asking for funds."

"How do I do that?"

"You take the money you raised from the fat cats and political action committees and turn it over to a direct mail house, who specializes in political fund raising."

"What do I say in the letter?"

"You say you are the best qualified person to be president of the United States. But you can't do it without the support of the little people who are tired of special interest groups and all the big guys who want to buy your vote. That's why you're appealing by mail to them. You can't restore the American dream without their contribution, no matter how small it might be. The mailing could cost you $2 million, but with any luck you'll get back $5 million, which will then make you eligible for matching funds from the government to get your campaign underway."

"Are you sure any young person can grow up to be president of the United States?"

"Of course, Archie, as long as you have the stomach for raising the money."

Kremlinologist: U.S. attitudes toward U.S.S.R. 'childish'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warning that the two superpowers may be heading toward war, former Ambassador George F. Kennan says the United States bears part of the blame because of outdated and "inexcusably childish" attitudes toward Moscow.

At the same time, Kennan issued a wide-ranging attack on the Soviet leadership, accusing it of monopolizing political power, of spending too much on weaponry and of an obsession with secrecy and espionage.

In a speech earlier this week, Kennan lamented the "dreadful and dangerous" state of superpower relations and warned that the present situation contains the "unfailing characteristics of a march towards war — that, and nothing else."

It was a rare public appearance for Kennan, 79, a former ambassador to Moscow who is widely regarded as the dean of American Kremlinologists.

While criticizing both Washington and Moscow, his most scathing comments were directed toward American conservatives who look on the Soviets as "madly rivetted to dreams of world conquest" to the exclusion of all other considerations.

The vision of the Soviet Union as a power inhibited only by superior military force might have been applicable 30 years ago but today "it is grotesquely overdrawn," he said.

It is, he said, "a caricature rather than a reflection of what really exists, and one which is highly misleading as a foundation for national policy."

Kennan spoke to a luncheon gathering sponsored by the American Committee on East-West Accord, a pro-detente group. Among those in attendance were Averell Harriman, himself a former ambassador to Moscow, and Anatoly Dobrynin, the Soviet ambassador to the United States.

Dobrynin joined in the prolonged applause Kennan received after the speech despite Kennan's long list of grievances concerning Soviet behavior.

Persian Gulf ministers meet

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia and its five partners in the Gulf Cooperation Council met here today to discuss ways to end the Iran-Iraq war and the Iranian oil slick in the Persian Gulf.

The Saudi minister was joined by his counterparts from Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman.

On Wednesday, Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sabah al-Ahmed, and the United Arab Emirates minister, Rashed Abdullah, briefed their colleagues on their recent two-day peace-seeking visit to Iraq and Iran.

Peru's leader in fourth year

LIMA, Peru (AP) — President Fernando Belaunde Terry goes into his fourth-year in office with his country beset by terrorist killings, floods, a worsening economy and a sugar shortage that has outraged many Peruvians.

The 70-year-old leader, who took office three years ago Wednesday and restored democracy to Peru, avoided formal celebration of the anniversary. Members of his ruling Centrist Party and some of its leaders who hope to succeed him when he retires in 1985 noted the occasion without him.

The president, whose popularity has slipped as inflation, unemployment and terrorism rose, flew to northern Peru for another look at the flood-ravaged region.

Costa Rican trip to continue

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Sailors on three American yachts intercepted by Nicaraguan patrol boats after a storm nearly beached them were treated cordially after being escorted ashore, and one captain said they will continue their voyage to Costa Rica.

Both the sailors and Nicaraguan authorities said Wednesday the yachts were free to leave, but the whereabouts of the sailboats was uncertain early today. Telephone communication with San Juan del Sur, the southern Nicaraguan port they docked in near the Costa Rican border, were erratic and plagued by delays.

IPI denounces governments

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The International Press Institute has denounced South Africa, Turkey, Morocco and four Latin American governments for what it calls their harassment and suppression of the press.

The institute made the criticisms in final resolutions at its 32nd general assembly, which ended Wednesday. About 300 journalists from more than 40 countries attended the three-day conference of the institute, which says it is dedicated to press freedom and improving journalistic practices.

Sub captain doesn't regret sinking of Argentine cruiser

LONDON (AP) — The British submarine captain who torpedoed the Argentine cruiser Gen. Belgrano said in a book published today that he regretted 321 sailors had died but he would sink such a ship again under the same circumstances.

The book "Our Falklands War" quotes Cmdr. Christopher Wreford-Brown as saying the cruiser threatened the Royal Navy task force, sent to wrest back the British-ruled islands Argentina seized April 2, 1982.

The HMS Conquerer sank the 13,645-ton cruiser with two torpedoes on May 2, 1982, prompting criticism because the ship was outside the 200-mile war zone Britain declared around the South Atlantic islands.

"I saw one hit amidships. I saw a fireball. I saw a cloud of dirty smoke as the second torpedo hit," Wreford-Brown is quoted as saying in the book by journalist Geoffrey Underwood.

The sub's crewmen cheered as they heard the explosions, watched by the captain through the telescope.

"Afterwards, I had a certain amount of regret about the loss of life," the skipper was quoted as saying.

The vessel was 20 to 30 miles outside the war zone, Wreford-Brown was quoted as saying, "and in everyone's eyes posed a threat to the task group.

"We had countered the threat the Gen. Belgrano offered to our task group and the loss of life they could have caused us. Now I feel we did just what we were invited to do and I would have no hesitation in doing it again. It is a fact of life that if you want to go to war, you must expect losses."

Wreford-Brown was quoted as saying his superiors first ordered him to attack the Gen. Belgrano only if it entered the war zone. But on May 2, they changed those orders to allow him to attack the Gen. Belgrano outside the zone.

Executive jet makes wild ride

LONDON (AP) — A private Lear jet with three pilots aboard but nobody at the helm flew 1,600 miles off course in an eerie ride over Europe that ended when the aircraft crashed into the North Atlantic, the British air force said today.

Dutch, British and U.S. fighter jets scrambled to intercept the mystery aircraft as it cruised out to sea Wednesday night at an altitude of 43,000 feet and plunged into the sea, its fuel tanks apparently exhausted.

The pilots on the plane, a West German executive jet on a test flight, all were apparently unconscious and possibly dead, officials said.

Pilots of the chase planes reported the Lear did not respond to their radio calls and appeared to be empty.

"Two RAF Phantoms flew up close the plane over Scotland and the pilots took a look inside," said Royal Air Force spokesman Henry Bojdys.

"They could see no one in the cockpit nor in the main body of the plane.

"The thing was flying straight, although about twice the normal height, and my guess is that it was on automatic pilot," the spokesman said.

Bojdys said a sea-and-air search for the plane was called off at 2 a.m. today after rescuers reported no sign of wreckage.

Officials said the American-built Lear was on a 450-mile test flight from Vienna, Austria, to Hamburg, West Germany. They said it was owned by Air Traffic GMBH, a Dusseldorf-based charter company.

The plane left Vienna Wednesday afternoon but failed to land in Hamburg.

Spike Dykes tells his Whites to 'catchup'

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee head football coach Spike Dykes will run his 1983 edition of the football Rebels through a scrimmage session at 7:30 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium, adding a new twist to the annual meeting of the Maroon and White.

Dykes has spiced this year's scrimmage by tossing out 28 points to Maroon team, actually seven per quarter, and has told his White team to catch up.

The so-called "handicap system" has been instituted by Dykes in order for him to look at his first team offensive and defensive units playing together.

THE MAROON team will be made up of basically the second offensive and defensive squads. At the end of the first quarter, the Maroon team will be given seven points. The Maroons will be given seven more at the end of the second period and so on.

"I think it will be a fun scrimmage. Several colleges have used this kind of format for spring games and it can be very exciting," said Dykes. "Of course, we have had to make some quick judgements, but I imagine that some of those on the White team could be starting next year."

Dykes has been reluctant to mention names this spring, but he seems pleased with what he has seen during three weeks of workouts.

"We have some people who look a year older and a year smarter and I feel like we have had a great deal of improvement during spring training as a team," Dykes said.

"It's really hard to know in the spring just how your football team looks because we are only playing against each other. Also, we are a lot different than some of the other teams in the spring since we don't do a lot of scrimmaging. We keep the kids broken down into small groups and work on fundamentals a lot. But I've been pleased so far."

DYKES HAS also missed eight players for most of the spring due to competition in track and baseball. "We've had eight kids out for most of the spring that haven't had any contact until Monday. However, they will play in the spring game and they know the plays since they have been in shorts with us during our morning sessions."

The Rebels have only three full-time returning starters from last year in offensive tackle Tracy Sherman, linebacker Reggie Ellis and fullback-linebacker Isaac Garnett. Garnett missed a lot of spring work due to track. Tightend Michael Johnson played a lot last year and defensive end Eddie Kittle started some last year when John Denton was hurt.

Nine other players lettered last year. The offensive line will inherit center Allen Bell, guard Coy Stewart, defensive end Nicky Tomlin and guard DeVoe McMillen. Rob Walker, who played both offense and defense last year, is a good receiver. The line and linebackers are rated as solid by Dykes this year.

Lettermen coming back in the backfield are quarterback Jeff Motley and running backs Walter Jones, Billy Gibbs and Sergio Ochoa. Jones is expected to be a great one, but has missed a lot of practice this spring due to track.

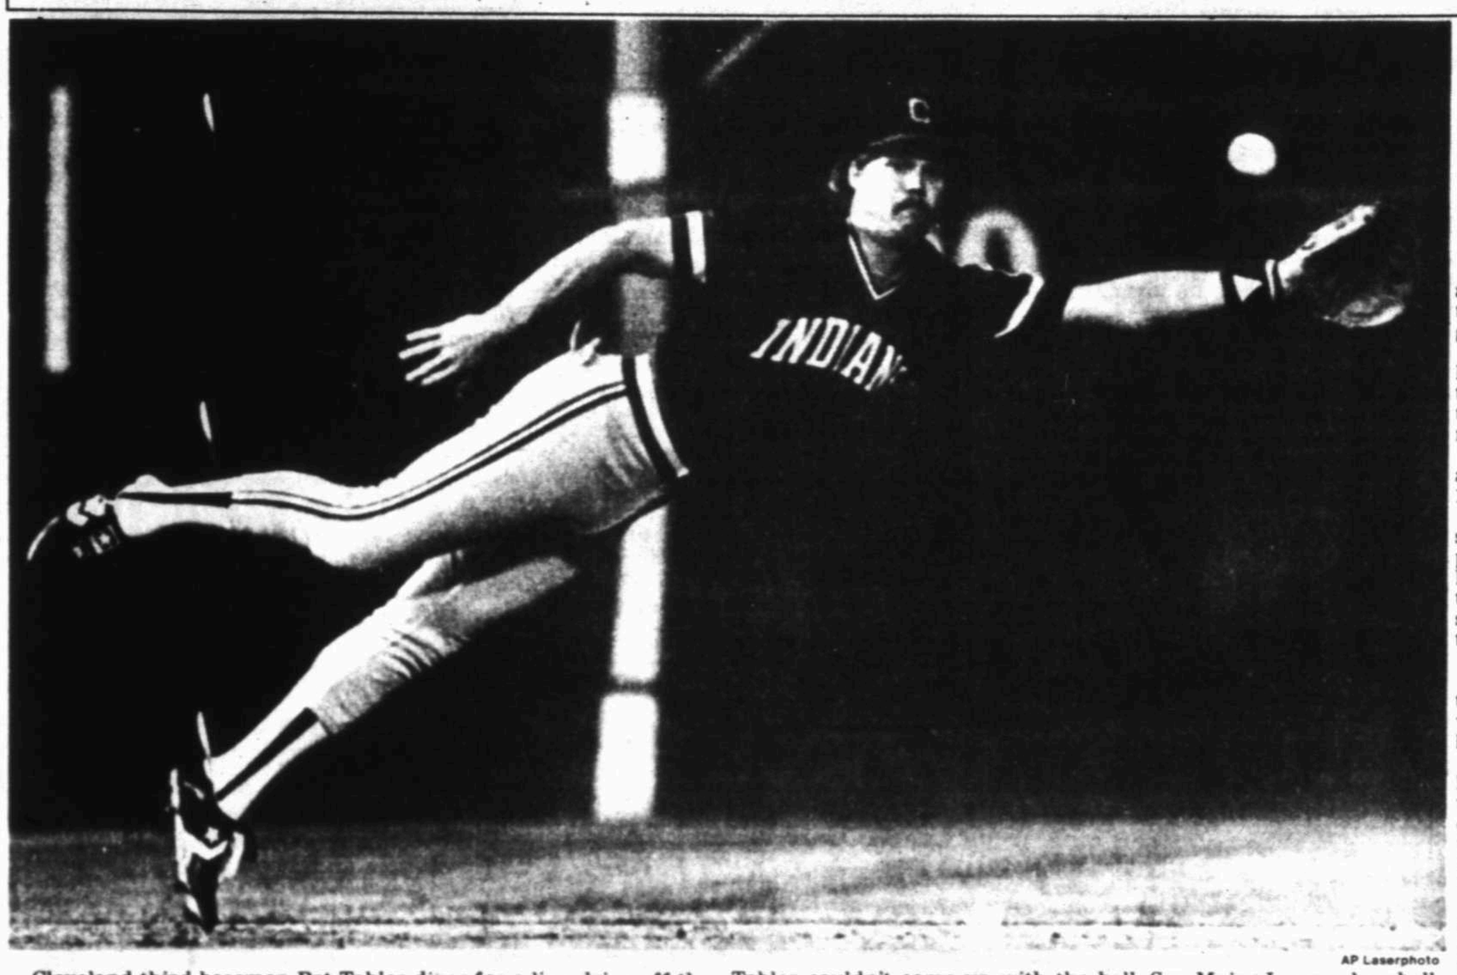

DYKES WILL be taking a close look tonight at the play of the people in the defensive secondary where there is no one with varsity experience.

Motley has been tabbed to guide the White team at quarterback tonight and Dennis Matta will general the Maroon team. Matta missed a lot of practice due to baseball, but appear to be the top two QB prospects.

Dykes has a veteran team with over 50 seniors. Last year's junior varsity lost only one game and the sophomores were unbeaten. Dykes also had around 65 freshmen out this year. The freshmen will scrimmage at 5:30 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium.

IN A sideline, Ed Clements of KCRS will be the head coach of the White team tonight while Terry Williamson of the Reporter-Telegram will coach the Maroon team. Clements owns a 1-0 record in spring games while Williamson is 0-1, but owning a 28-point cushion to work with tonight.

"The end of every quarter will be just like the end of a game since seven points are going to be awarded to the Maroons," said Lee assistant Jack Tayrien. "The Whites are going to have to score at every opportunity to win the game."

Ringless Sixers eliminate Bucks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers are convinced that this is the year they get to wear the gold rings.

The 76ers beat the Milwaukee Bucks, 115-103 last night to advance to the National Basketball Association championship series for the fourth time in seven years.

The Sixers lost to Portland in 1977, and to the Los Angeles Lakers in 1980 and last year.

Andrew Toney with 30 points and seven assists, Moses Malone's 28 points and 17 rebounds, and Julius Erving's 24 points led the Sixers to the clinching victory in the best-of-seven series against the Bucks for the Eastern Conference title.

PHILADELPHIA won the first three games, lost the fourth (in Milwaukee Sunday) and took the fifth last night for a 4-1 triumph.

The 76ers open the title series here Sunday (2:30 p.m. CDT) against the winner of the Western Conference series between the Lakers and the San Antonio Spurs. The Lakers lead the series 3-2 after losing Wednesday night 117-112.

The Sixers broke open the deciding game against the Bucks in the third period. They led 63-62, and then scored 10 straight points in a 13-2 rally. The Bucks never recovered, never got closer than five, and in the final period trailed by as many as 16.

Coach Billy Cunningham of the 76ers said it was the best game his team has played in the playoffs, including the four-game sweep of the New York Knicks in the Eastern semifinal.

"We controlled the tempo as well as we have at any time," said Cunningham, whose team posted the best record in the league, 65-17, in winning the Atlantic Division crown.

Coach Don Nelson of the Bucks, Central Division winners, said of the Sixers, "This is the best team I've seen in 10 years. They are the next world champions in my opinion. They play a different style in the West, but I can't see anybody touching the Sixers."

Nelson said Philadelphia has everything.

"There's not a missing link. They have no weaknesses. Some people have said they are weak at power forward, but (Marc) Iavaroni is a solid player and when Clemon Johnson comes off the bench they are even more solid. They do the dirty work..."

ALL, THE 76ers attributed the blowout of a good Milwaukee team to the running game, and the rebounding of Malone.

Toney, who averaged more than 20 points a game in the series despite a heavy pad over a deep thigh injury, said, "We wanted to get our fast break started. We played together with intensity and consistency."

Toney said he wanted to be aggressive on offense to take the pressure off Malone inside.

Malone, the 6-foot-10, bull-like center, said the 76ers were determined to get the running game going.

"We are a much better team when we run. We didn't want a close game ... We wanted to get the ball off the boards and run.

"We didn't want to come down to the last two minutes with a two-point lead (it was 10)," said Malone. "When we run we're really tough. We had a better team (than Milwaukee) and showed we had a better team."

Spurs keep playoff hopes alive

LOS ANGELES (AP) — San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck said his team knew it was now or never. And the Spurs responded with a 117-112 victory over Los Angeles Wednesday night to narrow the Lakers' playoff lead to one game.

"I believe we came out with the big effort because our guys realized this might be their last game of the year," Albeck said after the Spurs cut the Lakers' advantage in the best-of-seven National Basketball Association Western Conference championship series to 3-2.

"WE WERE fierce competitors," added Albeck. "We seem to play better against the Lakers here than in San Antonio. I don't know why."

Mike Mitchell scored 26 points and Artis Gilmore had 25 to pace the San Antonio triumph over the defending NBA champions.

"The Lakers had us on the hook, but now they've put some pressure on themselves," said Mitchell. "We feel real good about winning this one."

Albeck commended San Antonio forward Gene Banks, who suffered a severely sprained ankle in Sunday's fourth game at San Antonio and was on crutches as late as Tuesday.

Banks scored 16 points and had 10 rebounds while playing 39 minutes in the victory.

Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said his club might have been thinking ahead.

"We had two great wins in San Antonio last weekend and a lot of people were projecting ahead," said Riley. "Maybe we were looking ahead to playing the (Philadelphia) 76ers...I'm not sure.

"I do know we didn't play one of our better games," added Riley. "But I'm sure we can win down there (in San Antonio) if we're ready to play."

THE SPURS' triumph sends the best-of-seven series back to San Antonio for Game 6 Friday night. A seventh game, if necessary, would be in Los Angeles on Sunday.

The winner of the Western Conference final will meet Philadelphia in the NBA's Championship Series. The 76ers whipped Milwaukee 115-103 Wednesday night to win the Eastern Conference crown.

The Lakers-Spurs contest at The Forum was close almost all the way, with the Spurs leading 95-91 heading into the final period. After Los Angeles pulled ahead 100-99 3½ minutes into the fourth quarter, the Spurs ran off an 8-0 string to build a 107-100 lead, an advantage they never relinquished.

The Lakers narrowed the gap to 113-110 with 2½ minutes left, but they were held to just two points the rest of the way.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar paced Los Angeles with 30 points and Jamaal Wilkes added 27. Johnny Moore added 23 points for the Spurs and George Gervin had 20.

Ironically, both the Spurs' victories in the playoff series have come at The Forum, while the Lakers swept a pair of games in San Antonio last weekend.

LOS ANGELES' Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 16 points, 19 assists and 11 rebounds in the loss.

Moore, in addition to his scoring, dished out 17 assists for the Spurs.

With Abdul-Jabbar scoring 16 first-half points for Los Angeles and Gilmore pumping in 16 for the Spurs, the Lakers led 63-62 at the intermission. They were ahead 34-31 after the first quarter of the tightly played contest.

It was a game of spurts for the Spurs as they fell behind 35-45 in the second quarter, but ran off an 11-0 string to go ahead 46-45.

In the third quarter, San Antonio fell back 83-87, only to outscore Los Angeles 10-0 to mount a 93-87 advantage late in the period. Then, in the final quarter, an 8-0 spurt with Mitchell scoring four points and Gervin the other four, gave them enough pad for the victory.

The Spurs had whipped Los Angeles in four of the five games between the teams during the 1982-83 regular season.

New Indiana owner 'calls' for a rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — Herb Simon is wasting little time making his presence felt as an owner of the Indiana Pacers.

It's only been 10 days since the acquisition of the Pacers by Simon and his brother Melvin was approved by the National Basketball Association. Today Herb Simons was in position to make a decision that could affect the team for 10 years or more.

Simon designated himself as the man who would call a flip of a 100-year-old silver dollar if a preliminary toss by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien determines that the Pacers can say "heads or tails."

The lucky winner of the coin flip at the NBA offices in New York gets the top pick in the June 28 draft, a choice that both Houston and Indiana say will be 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson, a three-time collegiate Player of the Year. The loser will have to choose between a number of less-touted prospects or trade the No. 2 pick for a proven veteran.

The two teams got into the coin flip by finishing last in their respective conferences this season.

"It's a telekinetic experience," Houston General Manager Ray Patterson said of the heads-tails decision. "I think you're better off not thinking about it ahead of time. Anyway, most of the luck has been with the teams not making the call."

Patterson was general manager at Milwaukee in 1969 when the Phoenix Suns made a losing "heads" call, allowing the Bucks to choose Lew Alcindor, now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, No. 1 in the draft that year.

The team making the call was wrong 11 times in the first 17 years of coin flips.

Although the two sides statistically had a 50-50 chance of winning the flip, both were optimistic beforehand.

"We're going there to win," said Ray Compton, the Pacers assistant general manager. "We're on a roll and feel that everything's going our way."

Compton based his optimism on a recent campaign that saw the Pacers sell more than 4,200 season tickets, 3½ times the total of last year.

In Patterson, the Rockets had history on their side.

When Phoenix called heads in 1969 and the coin came up tails, that started a string of 12 tails results in 14 years. The only times heads came up between 1969 and 1982 were in 1976 and last year, when the Los Angeles Lakers won the toss and chose James Worthy in a draft a month later.

Crash may cost J.R. Indy 500 bid

Meanwhile, Desire Wilson's bid for official approval to try to become the second woman to qualify for the world's richest automobile race was delayed when she failed to complete her required rookie refresher test.

Wilson will be given another chance on Thursday, weather permitting. If she does not complete the required 20 laps then, "another decision will have to be made at that time," a U.S. Auto Club spokesman said.

Rutherford, who suffered minor injuries when he crashed another car 10 days earlier in turn one, lost control of his Wildcat racer while exiting the third turn. He did a half-spin and skidded 440 feet, slamming into the concrete with the left rear of the car, then slid another 680 feet along the wall, hit the concrete again and came to rest another 240 feet down the track, at the entrance to turn four.

The 45-year-old driver from Fort Worth, Texas, was taken to Methodist Hospital, where he underwent surgery to repair the broken bones. His injuries also included lacerations to both feet.

Rutherford, who won here in 1974, 1976 and 1980, has been struggling since practice began May 7 to get his new car up to qualifying speed since for the May 29 race. His best lap during practice on Wednesday was 194.197. Sixteen drivers have had their cars over 200 mph this month in preparation for qualifications.

It appeared unlikely Rutherford would be able to drive when the rain-delayed times trials open Saturday. But, even if he is physically able, it was uncertain if the Patrick Team, which also fields cars for defending champion Gordon Johncock and second-year driver Chip Ganassi, would have a third car ready for Rutherford.

Johnny Rutherford injured...

It was possible he could drive with a cast on one foot — Johncock and Steve Krisiloff have done that in past years — but it was doubtful any driver could control a powerful race car with both feet in casts.

The Patrick team, based in Jackson, Mich., reportedly came to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway with four of its new Wildcat IX cars, and now has only the cars for Johncock and Ganassi on hand.

Wilson got some help Wednesday from an unidentified sponsor, who supplied a rebuilt Cosworth engine for her March racer.

"Somebody very kindly donated an engine," said Wilson, who last year failed to qualify for the race despite setting a record for the fastest single lap by a woman at the Speedway. "Up 'til then I didn't have an engine at all."

Wilson, who went through six engines in trying to qualify last year, refused to disclose the name of the benefactor who came up with the $35,000 engine for the May 29th race.

A part of a two-car team owned by Herb and Rose Wysard, she had fallen victim to the team's lack of a big sponsor.

The team had three engines, said Wilson, a native of South Africa now living in New York City. And, when teammate Derek Daly, of Ireland, blew two of his, the third also was placed his car.

Wilson and the Wysards tried to find a sponsor for her car, No.54, Tuesday, but none emerged, she said.

Time was also against Wilson. She beat the Wednesday deadline for starting her refresher rookie test — but managed to complete only one of the required 20 laps at 180 mph or better.

"That shouldn't be a problem (finishing the test)," said Wilson, who has been driving since the age of 5, starting in micro-midgets built by her father. "I've got faith in the equipement and mechanics."

Janet Guthrie, who first competed at Indianapolis in 1977, is the only woman driver so far in Indy history.

Also at the Speedway on Wednesday, veterans Danny Ongais, Bill Whittington and George Snider turned in their fastest laps of the month with just two days of practice left before the start of qualifications.

Dodgers forget Steve Garvey

By The Associated Press

He replaced Steve Garvey as the Los Angeles Dodgers' first baseman. Now, there are asking, Steve who?

"I kept saying in spring training, 'Take a look out at first base — you're looking at the fifth consecutive Dodger to be rookie of the year,'" said Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda.

Taking over for Garvey at first base and at the plate is Greg Brock, whose latest contribution to the Dodger cause was six runs batted in Wednesday night with a pair of home runs, including his first career grand slam, as the Dodgers buried the Montreal Expos 13-3.

"It felt good," the low-key Brock said when asked about his most productive night in the majors. "But what made it even better is that we bounced back after a tough 15-inning loss last night. That's been the mark of this team all year.

Batting .267 with nine homers, 28 runs batted in, 24 runs scored, three stolen bases, seven doubles and two triples, Brock is making a bid as the top rookie in the senior circuit. It's an award he's not even looking at right now.

"That's an award that comes at the end of the year," Brock said.

"Sure, it's great if it happens, but I'm certainly not thinking about it. There are a lot of good rookies out there."

The Dodgers led 3-1 in the fifth when Brock drilled his grand slam off Bill Gullickson. His two-run homer in the eighth inning came off Chris Welsh and capped the scoring.

Dave Stewart, 4-0, got the victory after hurling hitless ball for 2⅓ innings after relieving starter Burt Hooton in the fifth.

Cardinals 9, Astros 5

Tommy Herr led off an eight-run seventh inning with a single and capped the explosion with a three-run homer, his second-ever in the majors. St. Louis sent 13 batters to the plate against four Houston pitchers in the big inning.

Cubs 5, Braves 3

Keith Moreland slugged a two-run homer and Ron Cey homered and had a run-scoring double to lead Chicago to its seventh victory in its last 10 games.

Steve Trout, 3-5, got the victory, although he left in the sixth inning when Atlanta scored three times to make it 5-3. Bob Watson singled in two of the Braves' runs and Terry Harper singled in the other.

Giants 8, Phillies 1

Jack Clark belted a grand slam and drove in six runs as San Francisco won for the 11th time in its last 13 games.

Mets 2, Padres 1

Darryl Strawberry's RBI single drove in the winning run in the eighth inning. It was the second game-winning hit in two nights for the 21-year-old rookie.

Pirates 2, Reds 1

Rick Rhoden hurled a strong six-hitter and Dale Berra scored both Pittsburgh runs.

Rhoden, 2-3, lowered his ERA to 2.24. He did not allow a Cincinnati runner past first in the final six innings.

No-hitters get away

By The Associated Press

A Ford and a Dotson had it out over 60 feet, 6 inches. As a result, a near no-hitter went the way of the Edsel.

Dan Ford broke up a no-hit bid by Chicago's Richard Dotson with a one-out home run in the eighth inning for Baltimore's only hit Wednesday night, but it was enough for the Orioles to defeat the slumping White Sox 1-0. Ford sliced an opposite-field drive inside the right-field foul pole near the 309-foot mark for his third homer of the season.

"What good is a no-hitter if you don't score some runs?" Dotson said. "He hit it to the shortest part of the park and I suffered the consequences."

And the White Sox suffered their third consecutive defeat — the last two by shutouts — and eighth in their last nine games.

Cleveland's Lary Sorensen also flirted with a no-hitter for 6⅓ innings but the Indians lost to the Texas Rangers 3-2 in 14.

Rangers 3, Indians 2

Pinch hitter Bill Stein singled with the bases loaded and none out in the bottom of the 14th to give the Rangers their fourth straight victory and hand Cleveland its fourth consecutive setback.

Twins 16, A's 5

Gary Ward homered, doubled and drove in five runs, leading a 20-hit assault against four Oakland pitchers, including infielder Wayne Gross. The victory went to Minnesota starter Frank Viola, who snapped a personal eight-game losing streak over two seasons.

Brewers 7, Blue Jays 6

Ted Simmons drove in six runs with four hits, including a game-winning two-run single with one out in the bottom of the ninth.

Mariners 2, Angels 1

Bob Stoddard, Mike Stanton and Bill Caudill combined on a five-hitter. Seattle scored an unearned run off loser Geoff Zahn in the second inning on a three-base throwing error by shortstop Tim Foli and Pat Putnam's sacrifice fly.

Royals 2, Red Sox 1

Dennis Leonard scattered seven hits as the Royals won for only the third time in their last 11 games. In the first inning, Pat Sheridan singled and scored on George Brett's double.

Yankees 6, Tigers 4

New York scored five first-inning runs and Dave Righetti scattered nine hits in 8⅓ innings as the Yankees completed a three-game series sweep and climbed above the .500 mark for the first time this season.

WEST TEXAS OUTDOORS

How about vacation with purpose

BY RODNEY RIEHLE

Wondering what to do for summer vacation? How about something in the back-to-nature category?

The National Wildlife Federation plans such outings for children, teenagers and entire families.

Instead of a straggling, gawking, "well, that's nice trip" to a popular tourist-trampled scenic area, get something out of it. Travel to some of North America's most scenic vacation areas and combine outdoor adventure with conservation education and exploration.

The NWF's summer vacations are for all ages. The Earth Treks are for teenagers, and Ranger Rick's Wildlife Camp is for children nine to 13.

Conservation summits, for adults or entire families, are six days of conservation-related activities in unique settings. This year summits will be held at four locations:

—June 25-July 1: Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina.

—July 3-9: Rocky Mountains of Colorado.

—July 31-August 6:Adirondack Mountains, upstate New York.

—August 14-20—Canadian Maritimes, Antigonish, Nova Scotia.

Summit participants can register for workshops on birds, wildlife, wildflowers, map reading, geology, or flycasting, just to hit the surface of possibilities. Teachers and college students can arrange to receive college credit for these workshops. Free time activities include tennis, horseback riding, swimming, hiking, sailing, square dancing—depending on the summit.

Baby sitting and day care facilities are available at most locations. Costs for a family of four range from $850 to $1,150.

Earth Treks, for boys and girls 13-17, are adventures in environmental exploration, backpacking, hiking and outdoor skills. Cost: $385.

The Colorado Rocky Mountain Earth Trek offers teenagers an opportunity to develop backpacking skills and an understanding of the mountains and their life forms.

Programs offered include wildlife biology, geology, forestry, environmental law and Indian prehistory. The four Rocky Mountain treks are: June 23-July 4; July 7-18; July 21-Aug. 1; Aug. 4-15.

The Blue Ridge Mountains Trek offers teenagers an opportunity to develop outdoor and leadership skills. The 12-day sessions offer outdoor cooking, camping, wildneress management, folk history and folklore and stream biology. The dates are: June 19-30; July 5-16; July 22-Aug. 2; Aug. 7-18.

Ranger Rick's Wildlife Camp, ages 9-13, is in North Carolina's Blue Ridges and stimulates an awareness and knowledge of their environment.

The cost ranges from $375 to $435. Dates are: June 12-13, 12 days; July 4-18, 15 days; July 21-Aug. 1, 12 days; and Aug. 4-18, 15 days.

For information, contact the NWF vacations (703 790 4363) or write National Wildlife Federation, Dept. PR2, 1412 16th Street, NW, Washington, DC 20036.

FISHING REPORT: Striped bass weighing 20,19, 14,13 and 23 pounds were yanked out of Lake Spence last week and takes in the intermediate range were quantitatively as impressive. What's more, the black bass were biting. Chuck Graton, Midland, took a 23-pound, 14 ounce striper while Lucky Graham and Boyce Davis, Midland, hauled in 64 white bass, all fishing out of Paint Creek Marina...Darrell Scorey, Midland, took a 13-11 stripe and Gratton a 6-5 while Jimmy Hodges had a 3-13 blue catfish, 1½ black and six white basse to 1½....At Lake Thomas, Bruce Hatfield, Big Spring, landed a 7¼ walleye while trolling and white bass were increasingly active. Catfishing was rated good to excellent, but crappie and bass action had eased off...

Another record in works

The state smallmouth bass record set at Canyon Lake last winter may not last too long, says Texas Parks and Wildlife biologist Wade Butler.

Butler estimated the six-pound, two-ounce fish caught by Austin's David Vorwerk was eight year's old. "While smallmouth of seven or eight is getting on in years, fish over 10 years old are not uncommon in more northrn waters. I think there's a chance that the larger fish in Canyon could attain another pound or so, depending on their life span."

"We can't discount the possibility that the first smallmouths stocked may reach larger sizes than those produced by spawns."

FALCON: Water clear, 25 feet low; black bass good in good numbers to two pounds on cranks and worms; crappie slow; white bass good on cranks and jigs all over lake; catfish good to four pounds on frozen shrimp in two to four feet of water.

HUBBARD CREEK: Water clear, 58 degrees, level down six feet; black bass good to five pounds on worms; striper no report; crappie good in 18 inches of water; catfish good to 45 pounds.

POSSUM KINGDOM: Water clear, 70 degrees, normal level; black bass slow to four pounds; striper, hybrd striper and white bass excellent on slabs with good stringer; crappie good in three to four feet at moss lines; catfish good to 49 pounds on trotlines.

RAY HUBBARD: Water murky, 8 degrees, lake full; black bass fair to four pounds on spinners and worms; hybrid striper slow; white bass excellent with stringers to 423 fish in two days; crappie slowing down, moving back into deep water; catfish fair to two pound while drifting.

SPENCE: Water clear, in main lake, muddy upriver, 17 feet low; black bass fair; striper slow trolling at 30 feet; white bass and crappie slow; catfish fair.

TOLEDO BEND: Water clear, 63 degrees, one foot low; black bass fair; striper good to 20 pounds; crappie good; catfiwh good to 27 pounds on trotline.

Hi honey!

Just got back from Fairgate and I couldn't be more pleased! They have a townhome that's 'perfect' for us! You're gonna love the location too! It's in Northwest Midland close to lots of shopping, schools and Loop 250. I love the 3 bedroom, 2 bath floorplan. It's more than 1600 square feet! It's a beautiful home and just what we've been looking for. I'll let you handle the financing. Call 697-4151 and ask about Fairgate's "Nothing-Down" plan.

IF YOU'RE PAYING MORE THAN THIS IN TEXAS, YOU'RE NOT GETTING THE LOW-DOWN.

When you rent from Hertz, you get great rates and a great gift.

When it comes to rent-a-car rates, there's one place in Texas that can give you the lowdown. And that's Hertz.

With our Low-Down™ rates, you can rent any subcompact or compact for just $19.96 a day on weekends. Or a fuel efficient standard shift subcompact for only $139 a week. Or pay a few dollars more, and get a larger car. Low-Down rates are available at all Hertz corporate locations in Texas and there's never a charge for mileage.

And now through June 30, 1983, you can get a certificate for your choice of a top quality gift each time you rent a compact or larger car. Select anything from Cartier leather accessories to an RCA 19" color TV or a Texas Instruments home computer depending on the number of times you rent. This offer is good at all Hertz corporate airport, major downtown and participating licensee locations, no matter what day of the week you rent.

HERTZ'S LOW-DOWN™ RATES
$19.96 A DAY WEEKENDS For a Compact or Subcompact
$139 A WEEK For a Standard Shift Subcompact

You don't need advance reservations to take advantage of Low-Down rates, but all cars are subject to availability. So don't wait. Call your travel agent and make reservations. Or call Hertz at 1-800-654-3131. And get the lowdown on Low-Down rates.

These rates are non-discountable, and on weekends there are minimum day rental requirements, depending on the day of rental. Gifts are not available through tour packages or special promotional rates. There may be a drop-off charge on some one-way rentals and gas is not included.

#1 for Everyone.™ Hertz rents Fords and other fine cars. Hertz

USFL ratings still dropping

By The Associated Press

The television ratings on which the future of the United States Football League depends keep going down, down, down. All the way to 4.2 on May 8, the first time ratings have fallen below ABC's projected weekly average of 5.

Does that mean the USFL is literally going down the tubes?

Not necessarily.

ABC officials, who warned that ratings would drop as the weather got warmer, remain openly optimistic, pointing out that the yearly average is still at 7. Even more important, other television people are taking notice.

"The way the USFL looks now, I wouldn't mind having it," says a senior executive at another network. "That doesn't mean we'll bid for it when the contract comes up — that's up to the advertising people — but it's doing better than anything else ABC could have put on at this time of the year."

It's not really how many people watch the USFL — although numbers are nice — it's who they are.

Advertisers like affluent males, the normal football audience. If market research determines they are who's watching the USFL, ABC will not only be back, but others will bid for the rights, providing a lot more cash for the league than the $18 million ABC is now paying for two years.

The USFL's biggest problem still seems to be identification. To wit:

— Are people talking about Sunday's game in bars or on commuter trains?

— Are women's weekend's defined by their husbands' USFL viewing habits? — Do people anticipate the Express and the Panthers the way they do the Cowboys and Redskins or Chargers and Raiders?

With local exceptions, the answer is no. Most football fans who watch the USFL seem to apathetic toward the anonymous teams and their mostly anonymous players.

Moreover, television policy seems to be working at cross-purposes.

In Philadelphia and Chicago, ratings are relatively high but attendance is low — the rules against local blackouts seem to cut into the gate.

Arizona has lips sealed

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — University of Arizona officials' lips were sealed after they received the National Collegiate Athletic Association's findings on alleged infractions and possible sanctions.

"The matter is under study," university spokesman Frank Soltys said Wednesday, reading a brief statement on behalf of President Henry Koffler.

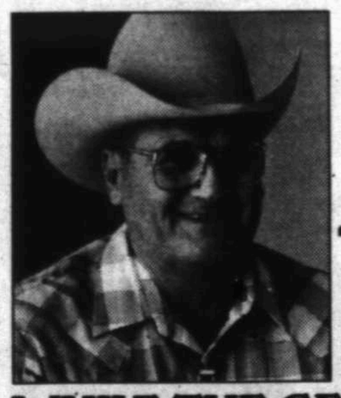

The NCAA last December accused Arizona of 18 rules infractions between 1971 and 1980.

Under NCAA rules, Arizona has 15 days to review the findings of the Infractions Committee and determine whether to appeal or to accept its report.

Midlanders' hopes sailing

Midlander Allen Brown will captain his boat, the Jan Marie II, in the Catalina 22-foot National Sailing Association Texas State Championship at Lake Arlington in Arlington, Tx. May 22-23.

Joining Cpt. Brown on deck will be Ellis Gray, Jib Sheet hand, and Dewitt Carnes at Foredeck.

The championship is based on five races held over a two-day period with the top ten boats advancing to the U.S. Championships in Niagra Falls.

Midland Junior Tennis schedules tourney

The Midland Junior Tennis Association will hold a tennis tournament for boys and girls 16 and under and 13 and under May 28-29 at the Midland Lee courts.

Entry deadline is May 25 and play will start Saturday, May 28, at 9 a.m. To enter call Yvonne or Cary Garton at 683-1529.

Balls and trophies will be furnished by MJTA and the tournament is made possible through the Midland Mixed Doubles which is sponsored by First City National Bank.

TL sluggers go at it again

By The Associated Press

John Gibbons hit a grand-slam homer with two outs in the ninth as Jackson completed an incredible comeback and beat El Paso 15-13 in a wild Texas League slugfest.

The final scores of two other TL contests Wednesday night also resembled football more than baseball.

Tulsa's Chuckie Canady drove in three runs as Tulsa posted a 13-10 win over Beaumont. Mark Salas hit his ninth and 10th homers of the year to propel Arkansas to a 15-5 win over San Antonio.

Midland and Shreveport were rained out.

Jackson, which overcame an early 8-0 deficit, still trailed 13-11 going into the ninth. That's when Gibbons uncorked his last-out grand slam.

El Paso wasted a 4-for-5 performance by Carlos Ponce, including a double, a homer and three RBIs.

John Semprini, 1-0, was the winning pitcher. Phil Heinrichs, 0-3, was tagged with the loss.

Tulsa scored six runs in the third on seven walks and two singles.

The Drillers' Bobby Balls went 2-for-3, walked three times, scored three runs, drove in a run and swiped two bases.

Larry McLane, 1-2, picked up the win in relief for Tulsa.

New conference may be forming

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Southwest Texas State University and four other colleges in Texas and Louisiana have begun talks that could lead to a new NCAA Division I conference, an Austin television station has reported.

Bill Miller, athletic director of Southwest Texas State University here, initiated the talks, KTBC-TV reported Wednesday night.

Miller declined to name the four schools with whom he discussed the idea, but KTBC said it contacted officials at Stephen F. Austin State, Southeastern Louisiana, Northwestern Louisiana and Nicholls State who said they could see the need for such a league.

The proposed new conference would compete in Division I-AA in football and Division I in other sports, Miller said.

Major schools such as those in the Southwest Conference are in Division I.

"I've been exploring the possibility of becoming a Division I school with some other institutions. I made a fact-finding trip," Miller said. "Five schools got together to discuss common things, to see if we are compatible with each other."

Miller's "fact-finding" visits Monday and Tuesday followed the recent rejection by the Southland Conference of Southwest Texas State's bid for membership in the NCAA Division I-AA league.

"We were counting a lot on getting in the Southland Conference, and when we didn't, we started exploring other possibilitities," Miller said.

Southland Conference officials said admitting Southwest Texas State could jeopardize the conference's automatic berth in post-season playoffs since the Texas school did not compete in Division I this year.

Boxing trainer shot after win

Seven people in Mexico City have been arrested for questioning in the death of a boxing trainer Roberto "Tio" (Uncle) Jimenez, 73, as he entered the ring Saturday night to congratulate one of his fighters for winning the main event and to remove his gloves. Police believe the killer was an angry bettor who did not agree with the referee's decision that Arturo "Cuyito" Hernandez had won the fight by a technical knockout. "I think the bullet was directed at me," referee Jesus Arias told reporters...

Baseball

Richie Phillips, chief counsel for the umpires' union, said he will meet with American League President Lee MacPhail, to discuss the rehiring of minor-league ump Bill Emslie. Emslie, a strong supporter of the major-league umpires when they went on strike in 1979, was fired by the International League after the 1981 season and again after the 1982 season. The union filed a complaint on Emslie's behalf with the National Labor Relations Board, charging the major leagues discriminated against him. He was rehired a second time by the IL last Friday after an appeal to the league by MacPhail...

Hockey

An embarrassed John Tonelli, star of the New York Islanders, pleaded guilty Wednesday to a reduced charge of speeding after being stopped by police and charged with driving while impaired after the all-night celebration of the National Hockey League team's Stanley Cup victory...

Basketball

University of Kentucky basketball player Sam Bowie will spend much of the summer rehabilitating his left leg. Bowie is trying to regain flexibility in his left knee and ankle, which were immobilized during treatment of the fracture that was found in his shin bone nearly two years ago. The fracture required a bone graft last October at the Campbell Clinic in Memphis, Tenn. The leg has been in five casts since the fall of 1981. But Etcheberry said he didn't doubt that Bowie would play next season...

Soccer

Pele, soccer's all-time great, and Franz Beckenbauer were expected to join former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger as a star-studded American delegation will try to beat the odds and convince the International Soccer Federation (FIFA) to bring the 1986 World Cup to the United States...

Tennis

Unseeded Guy Forget, an 18-year-old Frenchman, eliminated defending champion Andres Gomez, seeded fifth, 6-2, 6-3 in second-round play Wednesday at the $375,000 Italian Open Tennis Championships, while top-seeded Jose Higueras staved off an upset at the hands of Pat Cash, a 17-year-old Australian, winning 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

Second-seeded Jose Luis Cler struggled in the first set against 19-year-old Italian Francesco Cancellotti but then breezed to a 7-5, 6-4 victory.

Third-seeded Eliot Teldscher spotted Diego Perez of Uruguay a set before coming back to win 5-7, 7-6, 6-4.

In another upset, 19-year-old Swede Thomas Hogstedt beat ninth-seeded Pablo Arraya of Peru 6-3, 7-5 and 11th-seeded Paul McNamee of Australia had little trouble against Italy's Paolo Bertolucci, winning 6-2, 6-3...

Second-seeded Andrea Jaeger of the United States and third-seeded and defending champion Bettina Bunge of West Germany easily won their second-round matches Wednesday in the $150,000 women's German Open Tennis Championships. In other second-round matches Wednesday, Kathy Horvath ousted sixth-seeded Bonnie Gadusek 1-6, 6-2, 6-3 and Ivanna Madruga of Argentina downed ninth-seeded Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa 6-1, 4-6, 6-1...

Tech raids Paris

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech baseball coach Kal Segrist signed his second and third pitchers to letters of intent when Paris Junior College righthanders Daryl Decker of Plano and Mark Puckett of Allen signed with the Red Raiders.

Decker, 6-foot-1, was injured throughout most of last spring's season but was the Atlanta Braves' sixth-round selection in the regular phase of the 1982 winter draft.

Adding a few finishing touches to his "walk-on" art is 5-year-old J.P. Hilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hilton. Both youngsters were competing in the kindergarten through third grade division in the Chalk Drawing contest sponsored Wednesday afternoon by the Museum of the Southwest. The event also celebrated International Museum Day.

Maps of county to be prepared

By ED TODD

Maps to detail property for appraisal and taxation purposes in Midland County are to be prepared for the Midland County Appraisal District by Ferguson Map Co. Inc. of San Antonio.

The district's five-member board on Wednesday authorized Ferguson to prepare the cartographic maps, based on property deeds, of rural Midland County for $95,200. An additional $21,520 would be authorized for aerial maps, would are to be on a scale of 1 to 400.

"There's no (such) map existing of Midland County," said Chief Appraiser Roland Wilkinson.

Maps of the northwest and northeast quarters of the county are to be prepared by January 1984, while maps of the southeast and southwest quarters are to be completed by April 1984.

The maps, which would be updated and revised, would be available for use by the six taxing entities in the county, the public and private concerns, Wilkinson said. The annual "maintenance" fee will be about $14,280 or 15 percent of the initial mapping costs.

"This in no way can be considered frivolity on part of the appraisal district," Wilkinson said of the mapping. "Maps are essential. That's your inventory, shape of property. You're truly taxing what each individual owns by recorded deeds."

"This will be a valuable source of information to all taxing entities, as well as private concerns, in Midland County. Abstract and title companies will greatly benefit from it."

Board member Charlie Welch noted the one set of maps could well serve the six taxing entities: City of Midland, Midland County, Midland College, Midland County Hospital District and Midland and Greenwood Independent School Districts.

The initial sectional maps will take in Midland County's unincorporated areas, including farm and range land, land under mineral development, housing and suburban areas and Greenwood.

The second phase would call for a block-by-block mapping of the city of Midland on a scale of 1 to 100.

In electing to contract with Ferguson Map Co., the board rejected United Aerial Mapping, which Wilkinson said was less sophisticated than Ferguson in its mapping. "This firm (Ferguson) truly has computerized mapping," Wilkinson said.

UAM's bid was somewhat lower than Ferguson.

"I would have been more popular to go with the cheaper firm," Wilkinson surmised.

Commented board member C. Wallace "Wally" Craig: "Popular for a short time."

Bell discusses disputed annexation

He answers conflict of interest question

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

"All of a sudden, I'm the bad guy — and I don't understand that," Larry Bell said.

As president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and HBF Corporation, Bell has been the subject of a conflict of interest question.

He said there is none.

"Since when did it become a sin in Midland, Texas, for a local businessman to be in a project to develop a profit?" he asked.

HBF Corporation owns some 2,000 acres of undeveloped real estate located in far west Midland County. Along with the 500-acre Ridgewood Estates and some 1,500 acres of the Faudree-Parks Ranch, the HBF section is seeking to be detached from the Midland Independent School District and annexed into Ector County Independent School District.

"I'm developing Mission Dorado because I think it will be good for HBF," Bell said. "I'm doing the same thing in Houston — and it's not because I think Houston needs another office building."

THE ANNEXATION situation has nothing to do with a feud between the two cities, Bell said. Instead, it's simply some residents wanting their children to attend schools in the city in which they reside. Most of the area is or soon will be annexed into the Odessa city limits, he said.

Although MISD officials are fighting the loss of the tax base, Bell said, "It's a break-even deal. It's a wash. They're giving up part of the tax base and they're giving up the obligation to spend money to educate those kids."

He admitted, however, the property should develop more quickly and fully if the annexation is approved because of its affiliation with the City of Odessa.

The 2,000 acres of HBF property has a tax base value of $17 million, he agreed with MISD officials. Estimates of the property reaching a value of hundreds of millions of dollars are "appreciated."

"I'm thrilled to death they think it's going to succeed," Bell said, with a laugh. However, he added, development may take up to 20 years.

EVEN IF THE property does reach that value, Midland County, hospital and college districts would receive the taxes. Odessa city and — if the annexation is approved — schools also would receive funds "for providing services."

According to Bell, the 2,000 acres of land would bring in about $114,000 of school tax revenue. However, MISD, which spends about $1,400 in local funds to educate each student, would be free of the cost of educating the estimated 80 students in the area.

"When they give up $114,000 worth of income, they also give up $112,000 worth of expense," Bell said, adding transportation costs to run buses out there also would be eliminated.

"That's the economics we eva luated before we agreed to get involved."

Residents of Ridgewood who transferred their children to ECISD were told they would have to pay tuition by ECISD trustees last spring.

"The question (of tuition) never came up before because, basically, there has always been a balance (of students transferring from one school district to the other)," Bell said. "There reached a point the last few years, because there were so many new families moving into that area, there was a substantially larger number of students going from Midland to Odessa. Ector County (school trustees) decided it was getting too expensive."

Bell said the residents first approached MISD to see if those trustees would pay the tuition because they were getting the taxes. MISD refused.

"Since when did it become a sin in Midland, Texas, for a local businessman to be in a project to develop a profit?"
—Larry Bell

ECISD TRUSTEES waived tuition for a year to give the residents time to work out an alternative.

The residents hired an attorney and, after research began, found a method under the Texas Education Code which allowed a portion of a school district to detach and annex into another school district if a process, pertaining to the ratio between the tax base and the number of students, was met. It was.

Another requirement calls for the land to be located adjacent to the district in which annexation is being sought. Because Ridgewood was separated from the Ector County line by Mission Dorado, HBF's master plan which includes Mission Country Club and Mission Estates, the residents approached HBF.

"They called us and asked if we'd be willing to join their efforts," Bell said.

Mission Dorado, built on the 35,000-40,000 acre Faudree-Parks ranch straddles the Midland-Ector county line.

In October 1981, HBF asked the Midland and Odessa city councils to decide which town would have jurisdiction over the development.

"Originally, we had hoped to create our own town and our own school district," Bell said. "But we realized what was involved was not worthwhile."

The 2,000 acres of HBF development includes 4,000 home sites plus an additional 2,000 multi-home sites. Bell said the project ("we're talking 20 years") provided, in the master plan, for three elementary school sites, a junior high and possibly a high school.

"We're talking 15,000 people living out there."

Because Odessa city services were already established less than a mile away, the idea wasn't realistic, he said.

SCHOOL DISTRICTS weren't an issue until the councils decided which town would have jurisdiction.

In a November 1981 joint meeting, both councils were told serving the subdivision would cost Odessa $2.3-2.4 million to extend utility lines. Cost for Midland to extend lines to the airport would cost more than $12 million and depend upon passage of a bond issue.

"The school (districts) didn't come up until we knew where we were going to be," Bell said. "Our whole 2,000 acres is in the City of Odessa — it has been since last October. Until then, we didn't have a direction as to what school district it would be."

Bell noted that, with the exception of Greenwood Independent School District, "there has never been a school built outside of the incorporated (Midland) city limits. Speaking as the chamber of commerce president, that has not been irresponsible on (MISD trustees') part. (Inside the incorporated city limits) is where the concentration (of students) is."

In previous hearings on the annexation, the MISD attorney said 200-300 students should live in the area before construction of a closer school would be reasonable.

Bell said he didn't think Midland voters would approve building a Midland school inside the City of Odessa.

"It wouldn't be an easy project," he said. "We'd have to convince the voters. But if half of the land is already in the (Odessa) city limits and the rest will be, it doesn't seem unreasonable that children who live in Odessa could go to Odessa schools."

Although the concentration of Midland students is located inside the incorporated city limits, Bell said: "That's beginning to change."

He pointed out Midland city limits are within a mile of Martin County north of town. "With the growth of the comunity to the north, there is an excellent possibility the City of Midand will extend into Martin County. When people buy homes out there are they going to want to bus their children to Stanton or have them attend Midland schools? Do you think there will be a major controversy?"

A few years ago, HBF was looking at that area, Bell said, adding they contacted Stanton to see if there would be a problem between the school districts.

"THEY WERE NOT concerned about the situation," he said. "They felt something could be worked out very easily.

"As communities grow and areas develop, from time to time they need to make a shift from jurisdictional bodies to meet the needs of those particular people," Bell said, adding it's happened in Amarillo, Dallas-Fort Worth and South Texas.

"Midland is going to be facing some similar problems also," he said. "I would fight for Midland children going to Midland schools just as hard as I'm fighting about Odessa children going to Odessa schools.

"That's why Texas enacted (the Texas Education Code)," Bell said. "So people would have a legal, democratic process to go through to deal with their problems."

Auditors praise county appraiser's bookkeeping

Auditors who scrutinized operations of Midland County Chief Appraiser Roland Wilkinson's office on Wednesday were complimentary of the office's recent bookkeeping and collection records.

"Ron (Stegall) did a great job, and so did Laurie (Schmidt)," said Main Hurdman auditor John Marsh. Stegall is collections director for the Midland County Appraisal District; Ms. Schmidt is bookkeeper.

The audit covered the 1982 calendar year in checking out the operations of the office and the Oct. 1, 1981-Sept. 30, 1982, period in examining the office's tax-collections procedures.

Except for the latter part of 1982, the office was directed by former Chief Appraiser Virgil Jones Jr., who resigned to enter the insurance and tax consultant fields.

"We were painfully aware that we had problems...in trying to get the best system possible," said Gil Tompson, board chairman.

After the board meeting, Wilkinson said he and the board apparently feel "very, very comfortable. They (the auditors) gave us a glowing report in that (record-keeping) area."

Since Wilkinson took charge of the office, he had been "trying to restore a measure of accountability," he said. "I think we've made tremendous strides."

Midland man sues MPD, city

A suit seeking an unspecified amount of dollar damages has been filed in connection with an incident two years ago in which a Midland man allegedly was pulled from his house and beaten by police.

Filed in state district court Monday by the law firm of Torres and Shackelford, the suit names the Midland Police Department, the City of Midland and "unknown officers" as defendants. The plaintiff is Ricardo Baeza, no age or address street address available.

Baeza claims in the suit that on May 17, 1981, police "entered (his) home unlawfully and (dragged) him outside and began to strike him" while he was handcuffed.

Police reportedly were called to the residence on a complaint involving a child custody dispute.

The suit asks for exemplary damages and recovery of medical expenses and lost wages "in excess of the minumum" requirement of the court. It also seeks damages for physical pain and mental anguish.

Responding to the suit, Chief of Police Wayne Gideon today said:

"The suit was filed on the last day of the statute of limitations. After reviewing reports of the incident, I find the suit completely absurd. We welcome our day in court."

Upset taxpayers may appeal to review board

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Taxpayers who may be upset over valuations of their property for taxation purposes may appear before the Midland County Appraisal Review Board beginning June 13 to air their complaints.

The five-member board will meet for a three-week period in the Midland County Appraisal District's board room in Dellwood Mall at Illinois Avenue and Cuthbert Street. It consider any disputes which remain unsettled between Chief Appraiser Roland Wilkinson and the property owners.

By next week, many Midland County taxpayers may find out just how satisfied or dissatisfied they are with the new or adjusted appraised values. The chief appraiser will mail about 10,500 notices to owners whose property has increased in value or has just been added to the tax rolls. Those "certified estimates of total taxable values" are to be mailed out by May 26, Wilkinson said.

All told, the appraisal district has about 80,000 accounts.

Among the new accounts would be new construction and developed projects. In addition, owners of private airplanes and recreational vehicles, which this year are listed on the tax rolls, may contest valuations of their aircraft or RVs if they disagree with the chief appraiser's valuations.

By law, the appraiser must abide by the decisions of the Review Board, which is made up of Jack Mogle, chairman; Ed Vogler, secretary, and Jim Rhotenberry, Carl "Hoot" Leonard and Sara Carr Newsom.

Falling under the Review Board's jurisdiction will be the $3.6 billion in countywide property valuations, which convert to more than $58 million in taxes levied for the county's six taxing entities: City of Midland, Midland County, Midland College, Midland County Hospital District and Midland and Greenwood Independent School Districts.

Wilkinson's office collects about 85 percent of the taxes levied and is responsible for bringing in revenue for operating the city, hospital, college and Midland public schools. Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield collects the remaining 15 percent of taxes levied for operation of Midland County and Greenwood ISD.

While taxpayers are mulling over property valuations, representatives of the six taxing entities in early June can review the proposed 1984 budgets of Wilkinson's dual operations. His current budgets are about $607,000 for the appraisal side of his office and $384,000 for the collections part.

The proposed budgets will be somewhat higher than 1983's but Wilkinson opted not to say by how much until the budgets are presented to the taxing entities.

The Appraisal Board, chaired by Gil Tompson, on Wednesday hiked Wilkinson's personal budget by 9 percent in raising his salary from $46,000 to $50,160.

HBF's Bell discusses disputed annexation

As to allegations of taking valuable property from MISD, Bell pointed out the total tax base of MISD is $3.3 billion. The $17 million is just under half of 1 percent of the total tax base, as required by the Texas Education Code.

"We could have put almost $35 million of tax base into that area and still met the Texas Education Code," Bell said. "There's a lot of ranch out there. We could have thrown in a ton of it. But that land is not in Odessa and, in our opinion, did not need to be included in the Ector County school district."

If the 2,000 acres does develop to a population of 15,000 people, Bell said, "It sounds like a lot of tax base. But also, there will be lots of kids to educate."

He figured about $6,300,000 would be spent to educate those students in Odessa. "They'll need the tax base," he said, questioning if it would be fair for MISD to have it when ECISD would have the expense of educating the students.

Accusations that the residents excluded a trailer park from the area seeking annexation because of a low tax base is unfounded, he said.

"The more students without a substantial part of the tax base would have helped the ratio," he said.

The trailer park residents were contacted, but there was no interest expressed in joining the effort. Also, while that trailer park is located outside Odessa's extra-territorial jurisdiction line, another trailer park located immediately adjacent to the area is included in the annexation.

"Those parents have tried the best they can to only include those that want to be part of the annexation," he said.

AS TO THE conflict of interest charge, Bell said: "I have a hard time getting a handle on what this has to do with my being the chamber of commerce president."

HBF has developed and built more than $100 million worth of projects in Midland during the last seven years, he said. While the office buildings, shopping centers, land developments and medical complexes contribute to the tax base, the schools HBF has built in Midland do not.

"This particular situation has no impact on my efforts to promote tourism in the city," he said. "It has nothing to do with my efforts to expand air service to our airport, to promote and encourage new companies to come and locate out here, for new industrial sites and new buildings.

"It doesn't alter my enthusiasm for the new Clean Midland, Inc., or the new Midland Arts Association and its efforts..."

"I'm just as enthusiastic about the prospects of growth and expansion of services in the city to meet the needs of growing subdivisions and the new parts of our city.

"I don't see how this impacts it."

Tower says bishops' stand could hurt U.S. position

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, says the anti-nuclear stand taken recently by America's Catholic bishops will weaken the United States negotiating position in arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

"I am sorry that the bishops...and the hierarchy of the church, which does have enormous influence in the country, did decide on this course," Tower said Wednesday.

"I believe that it does contribute toward the weakening of the American negotiating position with the Soviet Union, because the Soviets watch developments of this kind in our country" Tower said. "And they are likely to drag out negotiations if they think forces at home are going to undermine our will and determination to stay in the ballpark with them in terms of capability."

By a 238-9 vote, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops early this month adopted a pastoral letter calling for a halt in the growth of nuclear arsenals.

The letter also condemned first use of nuclear weapons and all but ruled out use of such weapons in retaliation.

Tower, a staunch supporter of President Reagan's defense policies, was asked during a luncheon meeting of the National Press Club, where he was speaking, about the possible impact of the letter.

Tower said the influence of the letter was "very difficult to measure."

But he said that "people who are not even Catholics have seized upon the pastoral letter to support their arguments."

Electronics company picks Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — A multimillion-dollar electronics consortium picked Austin as its home because of promises to prevent "tick-tacky growth" and develop world-class high-technology programs at two area universities, the company's president says.

Low state and local taxes were another drawing card, said Bobby R. Inman, a retired Navy admiral and former CIA executive who is now chief executive officer of Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp.

Odessa man jailed on drug charges

An Odessa man remained in Midland city jail this morning under $200,000 bond after his arrest on drug charges Tuesday night.

U.S. Magistrate Mike Cunningham set bond Wednesday on 28-year-old Bryce Alden Frazier of 1317 N. Tom Green, Odessa.

According to a Midland FBI spokesman this morning, Frazier was arrested at his home shortly after 8 p.m. Tuesday.

His arrest followed execution of a search warrant that netted a large amount of either amphetamines or methamphetamines, a form of "speed."

Agents from the Midland Police Department, the Ector County Sheriff's Department and the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency — along with the FBI — were involved in the arrest and investigation, which is continuing.

Bed and Bath robbed of $150

Police today reported no new developments in the armed robbery of a store in Midland Park Mall Wednesday morning.

Betty Ivy, an employee of Bed and Bath, told officers she arrived for work about 9:30 a.m. and had unlocked the rear door and was turning on the lights when she was accosted by a black man who apparently was hiding in a hallway leading to the door.

She said he was armed with a bread knife and pushed her to the front of the store, where he took about $150 from a cabinet in back of a desk.

He then forced her to the rear of establishment, but she managed to break away and call for help as he escaped out the back door with the money in a yellow shoe box.

He wore a stocking mask over his face and white gloves. No injuries were reported.

Man reports burglary of two TVs

In burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, Chostel Clark of 302 W. Estes Ave. said assorted items — including two television sets, stereo equipment and $75 in change — were taken in a break-in at his residence sometime in the past three or four days. Total loss was placed at $1,265. Entry was gained through a bedroom window.

And Christine Byron of 2091 W. New Jersey Ave. told officers her home was broken into through a kitchen window about May 6. Taken was $350 in currency and change from a dresser.

Bill amending water code passes

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill sponsored by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, aimed at helping the Texas Department of Water Resources to enforce environmental laws, has passed the House without debate on the local and uncontested calendar.

HB 1585, which now goes to the Senate for consideration, amends the Texas Water Code by broadening the definition of "person" to allow criminal prosecution of publicly-owned treatment plants.

Current law defines "person" as an individual or private corporation.

Wine bill to be debated

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill which legislators claim will end "legal bottlenecks that are stoping up the free flow of Texas wine into the stream of commerce" by allowing wineries to sell directly to retail stores and give away free wine for tastings has pased the Senate by a 29-1 vote.

SB 1361, sponsored by Sens. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, and Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, passed without debate and now goes to the House for consideration.

Under current law, Texans with farm winery permits cannot sell their wines directlyto retail stores and establishments, and cannot offer free wine for judgings and similar events, but SB 1361 would authorize such activities.

"The state needs to pull the cork on the barriers that are bottling up the Texas wine industry, in order to allow Texas wines to breathe naturally," according to a Senate analysis of the bill, which also states "legal impurities will have to be strained out" before West Texas becomes the next Napa Valley.

The measure was amended by Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, to include a $75 permit fee. The original bill called for a $20 permit fee, but no one objected to Leedom's amendment.

Oaklawn graduation Friday

Dr. Donald Howard will be in Midland Friday as guest speaker for the Oaklawn Park Baptist School graduation and awards ceremony. The ceremony starts at 7 p.m. in Midland Center and the public is invited.

Howard is the founder and president of Accelerated Christian Education. ACE currently supplies curriculum to more than 5,000 schools across the nation. He has represented Christian education on television shows, such as the Today show and the Donahue Show several times.

David Piearcy is administrator of the school; Michael King is principal.

Rate increase to be OK'd

AUSTIN (AP) — A $32.5 million rate increase recommended by a Public Utility Commission hearing examiner was scheduled for routine approval today by the PUC, agency officials said.

The rate increase was accepted by GTE and all the intervenors in the case.

Teachers to go to 'education march'

A bus will be leaving at 5 a.m. Saturday from the parking lot of the Midland Independent School District administration building, 702 N. N St., for an "education march" in Austin.

The march by members of the Texas State Teachers Association down Congress Avenue is planned to demonstrate to Legislators the importance of a significant pay increase for teachers this year.

The bus for District 18 will leave Odessa at 6:30 a.m. Saturday. Teachers from Ector County, Midland and Seminole are expected to participate in the march and return Saturday evening.

Other individuals interested in participating in the demonstration should contact Dorothy Johnston at Burnet Elementary School, 694-5880.

According to TSTA President Barbara O'Neal, thousands of Texas teachers and education supporters are planning to attend the march.

LFHS students to get English awards

Sixteen Honors English students at Lee Freshman High School have been selected by the United States Achievement Academy to receive National English Merit Awards.

The award signifies exceptional achievement in English. Less than 10 percent of American high school students receive this award each year. The students' pictures and biographies will be published in the 1983 National Awards Yearbook.

Honors English is taught at LFHS by Mary Stephenson.

Selected from LFHS were: Brandon Brunson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Brunson; Brennan Carmody, son of Dr. and Mrs. Seamus Carmody; Belle Chen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tu Kao Chen; Jenni Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jon Clark; Jeffrey W. Edman, son of Mr. and Mrs. W.D. Edman; Eric Fisher, son of Dr. and Mrs. Kirby Tarry; Don Forsyth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Forsyth; and Chris Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. R.B. Kennedy.

Also Mamta Khandelwal, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. B.K. Khandelwal; Jay Laengrich, son of Mr. and Mrs. A.R. Stokes received a Main Hurdman Scholarship.

Legalized pari-mutuel betting 'killed by a nose'

AUSTIN (AP) — Horse race backer Rep. Hugo Berlanga got the "photo finish" he expected, but in the end legalized pari-mutuel gambling was beaten — killed by a nose.

"It's dead," the Corpus Christi lawmaker said after Wednesday's 75-73 vote to table his horse race bill.

Senate sponsor Craig Washington, D-Houston, refused to write an obituary for the bill, but Berlanga said he would not try any parliamentary maneuvers to revive it.

"I've expended every piece of energy humanly possible. I'm all drained out. I'm exhausted," said Berlanga. "I said all along it would be a photo finish."

The photo finish included a recount that beat Berlanga. The first vote gave horse race backers a long-awaited victory by a 74-72 count. But as usual in close votes on major issues, House members asked for a roll call "verification" of the vote.

During the verification, three House members said their votes in favor of Rep. Frank Tejeda's motion to table were not recorded by the electronic voting device. That gave Tejeda 75 votes.

Also during the verification, Rep. Sam Hudson, D-Dallas, did not answer the call to confirm his vote against tabling. That made the final vote 75-73 to kill the bill.

Speaker Gib Lewis ruled that the votes of the three who said the machine didn't work — Reps. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, Erwin Barton, D-Pasadena, and Milton Fox, R-Houston — would be counted.

"I will not question the integrity or honesty or any member of this body," Lewis said.

Berlanga, assistant presiding officer in the House, had no complaints about Lewis' decision. He called the vote "fair and square."

The Senate-approved horse race bill called for a 1984 statewide referendum. If approved by voters, horse racing would than have been left up to local option elections.

Horse race gambling has been banned in Texas since the 1930s. Willis, a 74-year-old veteran lawmaker, recalled that it was banned after merchants in Arlington — site of a major track — came to Austin to complain that "people couldn't pay their grocery bills" because of losses at the track.

"The same thing will happen again," Willis predicted.

But Berlanga argued that horse race gambling — now legal in all states surrounding Texas — would mean 50,000 jobs and "billions" of dollars for the state and business.

"The issue here is economics. It's not gambling," he said.

The House bill called for tracks to give the state 6 percent of their income. Five-sixths of the state share would go to Aid to Families with Dependent Children. The rest would be poured into a state water fund.

The Senate-approved version gave 3 percent of the track's revenue to the water fund and 5 percent to AFDC.

A fiscal note on the bill said pari-mutuel wagering would mean $126.3 million in state revenue in 1988.

Tejeda, D-San Antonio, said it's not right for the state to encourage "20 people to go to the track so 19 may lose and one may win so we may take our pound of flesh."

Rep. Randy Pennington, R-Houston, said bill-backers planned to win approval of the measure and then go to court and argue the statewide referendum was illegal because Texas does not allow initiative and referendum by citizens.

"I am sure after (Gov.) Mark White had signed this bill, before the ink was dry, they would be in court to have the referendum severed out," he said after the vote. "I don't think there was ever an intention to have an election."

Lewis, who supported legalized horse race betting, praised the House for handling the bill.

Soft-hearted catcher brings culprits home

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — City dogcatcher Deborah LeRoux makes a point of knowing when the garbage collectors come around. After all, trash bags are a favorite gathering place for many of her wards.

"They especially like the housing projects and apartments where there's a big trash collection," she said.

And when found cavorting on the loose and nosing for delicacies, the mutts are gently persuaded to leave their good times, for a trip to the city pound.

"We sit down and talk about it," said Ms. LeRoux. "Sometimes on the curb, sometimes in the street. Almost always, they volunteer to come with me."

While she enjoys the job she assumed in August 1982, Ms. LeRoux, 30, thinks it unfair that she's often the target of unprintable remarks from dog owners and the public at large.

People think dogcatchers are animal haters, she said, but in most cases it's just the opposite.

And for Ms. LeRoux, the work entails more than just snagging strays and hauling them off to the pound on her $11,000-a-year salary.

She has, on numerous occasions, used her apartment as a foster home until new families could be found for some of her wards. And just as often, she has personally paid the medical expenses for wounded animals, said Jeff Smith, a veterinarian with a private practice in the Forest Avenue pound.

Smith said Ms. LeRoux had brought in enough patients to warrant a discount on costs of treatment and medicine.

"If I've got the money, or I can make payments, I'll get the animal some help," she said.

"We're only supposed to be responsible for strays. That's why I need to do it on my own sometimes," she added.

Ms. LeRoux finds the dogs through complaint calls to the police, or while driving the garbage routes. Most dogs are cooperative about coming with her. There are a few that could only be caught with the use of a tranquilizer gun, but Ms. LeRoux says she doesn't have one and probably wouldn't use it if she did.

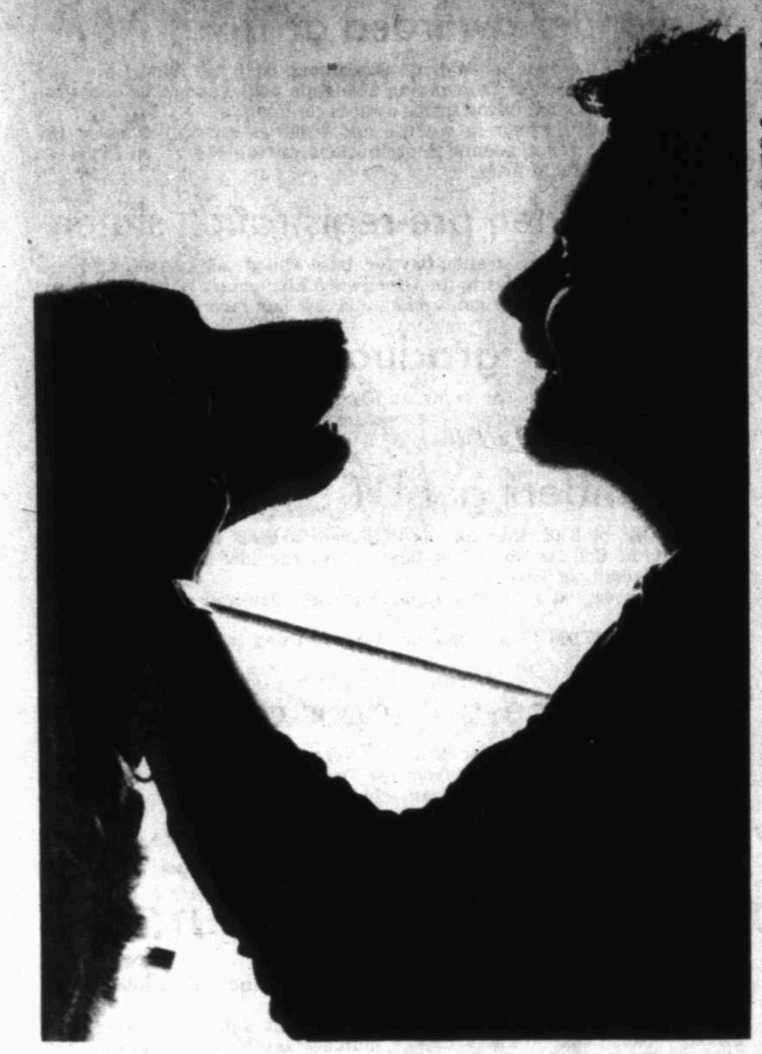

Though her superiors frown on it, she usually lets the dogs ride up front with her in the cab, rather than cage them in the back of the truck. "I wouldn't want to be put in that little cubicle," she said.

Originally from Racine, Wis., Ms. LeRoux came to Maine via the Navy as an aircraft mechanic at Brunswick Naval Air Station. After her discharge in 1979, she worked part time as a bartender and later as a line worker at a baked bean plant in Portland. It was in the spring of 1980 that she took a job as a weekend kennel tender at the shelter.

Ms. LeRoux said irresponsible owners were to blame for most strays. She and pound manager Stacy Manwaring figure the shelter takes in about 85 dogs a month. Of that number, about 25 percent are claimed by owners, another 25 percent are adopted into new homes, and the rest are "put down," he said.

Ms. LeRoux doesn't know how long she will remain as Portland's dogcatcher. She's enrolled as a psychology student at the University of Southern Maine and may seek work in the city's school system.

But for now, she's content to safeguard the city's 20,000-plus dog population.

Merthiolate use warning

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Pharmacists should warn customers to limit use of aqueous Merthiolate in treating children's ear infections, the Ohio State Pharmacy Board says.

Wickham said a board advisory will warn that ear infections in children shouldn't be treated with Merthiolate for more than two weeks. Meghan had been treated with Merthiolate for nearly six weeks. Merthiolate is used as an antiseptic and germicide.

Papaya enzyme possible remedy in lieu of surgery

Hearst Feature Service

After more than a decade of debate, the injection of a papaya enzyme to treat ruptured discs is gaining widespread popularity and could dramatically lower the frequency of back surgery in this country, doctors believe.

Chymopapain, a papaya-base drug, proved effective in alleviating lumbar disc pain in 82 percent of the patients tested, the results of a major study published this month indicate. Following years of inconclusive results, it was the first time the drug had been shown to work in clinical tests.

The Food and Drug Administration approved use of chymopapain – which is injected directly into the ruptured or herniated disc -- in November, based on preliminary findings from the study. Thousands of doctors are being trained in the procedure that had been banned in the United States until recently, except on an experimental basis.

"I would anticipate that we could eliminate about 75 percent of the laminectomies (ruptured disc surgery) now performed in this country," said Dr. Manucher Javid, chief of neurosurgery at the University of Wisconsin and principal author of the study that appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association. About 200,000 people undergo such surgery each year, the article states.

Javid predicted chymopapain would become the most common method for treating the often-excruciatingly painful ailment. About 6,000 doctors have been trained in the procedure at the seven clinics used in the study, Javid said.

One of the major training sites is in Long Beach, Calif., where Dr. Leon Wiltse -- one of the first doctors in the country to test the drug and a co-author of the study – and his associates have already trained about 3,000 doctors. More than 4,000 patients have been treated with the injection, with about a 75 percent success rate, said Dr. Curtis Spencer, an orthopedist who works with Wiltse.

Advocates of the new procedure say it will save millions of dollars in health-care costs by sharply reducing the length of hospital stay. Javid said the average patient only needs to be hospitalized for one day, compared with one week following surgery.

"The surgery also left scar tissue that often led to other back problems in the future," Javid said. "This is where I think the biggest savings will be."

The procedure calls for injecting a refined chymopapain enzyme called Chymodiactin directly into the herniated lumbar disc to dissolve the portion of the disc that has "leaked out" of its sack and is rubbing against the spinal cord. It can only be used once on a ruptured disc, and the injection is not generally recommended for patients who have already undergone surgery.

Arrogant cover letters can lose job

The cover letter you send with your resume introduces you to a prospective employer. Lots of people send me sample cover letters to look at, along with their laments that they don't get the jobs they want. What's going wrong?

A few of these letters stand out because they are too long or too arrogant: "I am great. I can do everything." Some letters are too self-effacing: "I am desperate. I will do anything." Others are too formal: "To whom it may concern. This person is competent. Find qualifications herewith." A few stand out because they are too breezy, even cute: "Hiya! Thought I'd let you in on helping me." And a few manage to combine all these negatives.

I'd like to print one to demonstrate how some of us hurt our job search unintentionally. (The name has been changed.)

Good Morning, P.W.:

In preparing a list of professional people whose opinion I respect, you are one of the first that comes to mind.

It is my objective to more fully utilize my management expertise than has heretofore been the case.

However, since for the past several years I have been confined to the area of small business and self-employment in the apartment management field, I am therefore seeking the valuable advice and guidance of a friend and successful businessman like yourself so that I may evaluate the potential market for my skills and determine whether or not I qualify for that market.

Please understand that in requesting your counsel, I do not presume that you have a job opening or even know of one. Rather, perhaps you know someone who might be interested in my qualifications.

I would appreciate hearing from you regarding my campaign, and, in the meantime, if you know someone who could give me additional advice regarding my approach, it would be warmly appreciated.

Let's get together for a cocktail.

Regards,

Pat.

First, I must say that I admire Pat's sheer determination to advance and to connect to experienced businesspeople. Yet she doesn't succeed in this letter because her presentation is so mixed up.

The greeting "Good morning" instead of the traditional "Dear — " is wrong because it tries too hard to be breezy when that's anything but the case. Then calling him PW: It's only OK if Pat has addressed him that way in the past.

Paragraph 1 immediately undercuts what Pat wants to accomplish. She sets P.W. up as one of the many she is asking for help. But no one wants to be singled out to be only one of a group. So, she should drop the "preparing a list" idea even though she wants to sound important in knowing successful people. This kind of self-aggrandizement is what most of us do when we are desperate. And it shows.

Paragraph 2 launches into a too-formal style. Notice how Pat slides into her mask: "my objective to more fully utilize... " Directness, especially if she knows him, wins more favor.

Paragraph 3 undoes whatever business expertise Pat has tried to establish. "Whether or not I qualify" means that Pat is unsure of herself, and she shouldn't be. Her resume shows that she learned apartment management on her own and now wants to learn something else.

The next paragraph undercuts Pat's original request. Heaven forbid she should ask for a job when, of course, it is her deepest wish!

Paragraph 5 throws the ball in P.W.'s court altogether, revealing Pat to be passive, even timid, about getting his answer. She should call him, not ask him to call her to do her a favor.

Paragraph 6 is out of bounds for this kind of letter. Suggesting a breakfast or lunch meeting is better than a drink after work.

DEAR ABBY

'Precious' hands: Defend yourself

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my fiance's mother. She's an outdoor-type woman who has spent most of her married life on a ranch. I happen to be a professional "hand" model and must take good care of my hands and fingernails to keep working.

When I visit the ranch with my fiance, his mother ridicules me for protecting my "precious" hands.

Recently when she and her daughter were canning beets, my fiance volunteered my help (thanks a lot, Richard)! I'm sure he meant well, but when I asked "Mother" for a pair of rubber gloves so I wouldn't stain my hands, she said, "If common household duties are too much for you, Richard will surely starve, and his home will be a pigpen after you two are married."

I waited for Richard to say something in my defense. Nothing. Later, all he would say about his mother's insult to me was, "Well, Mother always says what's on her mind."

What can I do? - HANDS DOWN IN DENVER

DEAR HANDS: You can stop expecting Richard to fight your battles. And you can start telling your future mother-in-law what's on your mind. For openers: "Your put-downs hurt me and make me feel unwelcome."

And for the grand finale, tell her that you want very much to have a good relationship with her, but if she continues to insult you, you are going to be very hard to find.

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and I've had this problem since eighth grade. In gym one day, a girl said to me, "Hey, do you know that one of your breasts is bigger than the other?" At first it didn't bother me because I thought every girl had one bigger than the other. But, the older I got, the more noticeable it became to me and to others.

When I go shopping, I have to be very careful not to buy anything that fits me too tight. I can't even wear a bathing suit or T-shirt without stuffing my left side to match my right side.

I can't take it any longer. I was thinking of plastic surgery, but I can't afford it and neither can my mother. Please help me, Abby. I am tired of crying so much over this. I hate my body, and the older I get, the worse I feel about it. Sign me ... LOPSIDED AND MISERABLE

DEAR MISERABLE: Please don't give up on the idea of plastic surgery. Perhaps you can find a generous surgeon who will help you now and let you pay over time. (You never know until you try.)

Until then, go to a hospital supply store that sells prostheses. Foam rubber "cups" can be purchased to insert into your bra. They look (and feel) like the real thing.

Diseases: At all-time low

ATLANTA (AP) — Many childhood diseases are "almost entirely under control," but health officials should establish systems for follow-up vaccinations, says Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret Heckler.

Childhood immunization programs in the past two years have led to record lows in reported cases of diphtheria, measles, mumps, polio, rubella and tetanus, Mrs. Heckler said recently

"Many childhood diseases have been brought almost entirely under control," she told about 350 federal, state and local health officials at the 18th annual Immunization Conference sponsored by the Atlanta-based U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

Immunization levels were at more than 95 percent for children entering school for the first time during the 1981-82 school year, she said.

"And yet, some of our population remains needlessly susceptible to these diseases," Mrs. Heckler said.

State surveys show more than 25 percent of all children have not received all recommended doses of vaccines by their second birthday, Mrs. Heckler said, adding that newborns are most susceptible to the six most common childhood diseases.

College students are the newest group in which high incidences of measles and rubella have been reported, Mrs. Heckler said.

From January to March, college students accounted for more than half of the reported measles cases in the United States, and 5 percent to 20 percent of college-age Americans are susceptible to the disease, she said.

The problem resulted partly because of fewer vaccination programs for preschool-age children during the early 1960s, said Dr. Alan Hinman, director of the CDC's immunization division.

"The main problem is complacency," Hinman said. "As the incidence of disease goes down, people forget. Young parents never saw polio. They don't remember when there were 22,000 cases of paralytic polio (nationwide) in 1954."

Casual patio furniture is designed for rugged good looks that will withstand bad weather and hard wear. With minimal care, outdoor furniture will usually last longer and look better, providing many years of use and enjoyment.

Patio furniture requires care

Copley News Service

Outdoor furniture is carefully designed to withstand five or more years of rugged use: welded frames, baked-on plastic finish, vinyl with mildew inhibitors and ultraviolet stabilizers, tough acrylic & tabletops that withstand up to 20 times the impact of glass.

A little care will ensure that your outdoor furniture lasts longer and looks better, advise the experts at Tropitone, makers of casual furniture.

The No. 1 rule is to avoid abrasive cleansers on all parts of your furniture. Instead, use a mild soap or detergent on a regular basis to avoid buildup and remove grease and stains. Periodic waxing of furniture frames, or use of commercially prepared protectants, will help prevent stains from suntan lotions, etc., and will make cleaning your furniture even easier.

Despite the baogd-on plasti finishes on aluminum furniture, scratches and chips are unavoidable. Most casual furnituremakers have touch-up paint available for perfect match-up in handy spray cans. If you decide to touch up your furniture, be sure to thoroughly wash and dry any areas to be painted (use mild detergent). Then lightly sand the furniture with a fine grade of sandpaper, until it feels smooth to the touch. Brush off any particles of sand and spray according to the directions on the can of paint.

Straps and webbing will stay more supple if you use a vinyl cleaner regularly. But, occasionally, a strap will be burned or cut and will require replacement. Most manufacturers recommend having a professional replace the type of straps that are made with continuous lacing. Other styles are easy to rewrap, however, and straps are usually available from the dealer or manufacturer. Instruction pamphlets are generally included with replacement materials. If not, ask your salesperson for a copy.

The only tool needed to replace webbing and straps is a small hammer. You will also need a pail of hot water. Dunk each strap into the hot water to heat it, then stretch and weave it into place.

Old window shades saved by sewing

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

There are some things I don't like to buy — a new refrigerator, for example. What fun is that?

Or new tires for the car — cheeez, what a waste.

I keep breathing new life into all my old shades until death is absolutely irreversible. Then I give in.

The first sign of wear on a shade is usually along the bottom edge where that little stick goes through the casing. It gets soiled, rubbed, pulled and otherwise mishandled. Your shade will never miss a couple of inches. Cut off the worn area, re-hem and reinsert stick.

If the worn portion is more than a couple of inches, cut off worn portion; re-hem, add wide fringe (not for every room decor, of course).

Another face-lift idea: Stitch braid or embroidered trim to shade, hem, reinsert stick.

Pretty fabrics (or ugly ones, for that matter) can be fused or glued to shades for a real pick-me-up — one that eliminates the need for curtains at some windows.

Petroleum museum focuses on 'Texas West of the Pecos'

"Texas West of the Pecos" is now on display through May 31 at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and Library Hall of Fame, I-20 East.

The exhibit features color photographs by Texas native Jim Bones which portray the drama and beauty of a region often thought of as desolate and barren. The 34 dye transfer prints depict landscapes containing colorful vegetation, rushing streams and sheer canyon walls.

The photographs also appear in the book "Texas West of the Pecos," published by Texas A&M Press. The exhibit, originally organized by the Dallas Museum of Natural History, is being circulated by the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth.

The Midland petroleum museum is the first stop for the traveling show. Museum hours are Monday-Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m. Admission is $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children under 12 and free for preschoolers.

Art show to open to public

The 17th annual Southwestern Area Art Show opens to the public Saturday with a barbecue and awards presentation at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Juror for the show is Laurence Miller of the Gloria Art Museum in Austin.

After reviewing 307 slides from 110 artists, Miller selected 59 works by 32 artists for the show, which closes Aug. 14. The artists selected use a variety of materials from watercolor to mixed media, from serigraphs to pastels.

Tickets, priced at $9.50, for the barbecue may be purchased by calling the museum, 683-2882.

'Time Tunnel' set for Friday

"The Time Tunnel," a mini-musical based upon a spiritual trip back to Biblical times, will be presented Friday at 7 p.m. at Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, 2800 Mogford St.

The public is invited to attend this one-hour musical journey performed by first through sixth grade members of The Musicmakers and The Young Musicians. It will feature a stop in ancient Babylon, where conflict between King Nebuchadnezzar and three subjects, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, comes to a fiery finale.

Refreshments will be served following the performance.

The Oak Ridge Boys — Joe, William, Duane and Richard — will perform at Ector County Coliseum Thursday. The 1977 release "The Ya'll Come Back Saloon" established the Oaks as a country group, while "Elvira" moved them into superstar status. Special guest for the evening will be Michael Murphey. Advance tickets, priced at $11, may be purchased at Endless Horizons in Midland and Odessa. All seats are reserved. To date, about 2,500 seats have been sold.

Woody Herman celebrates birthday with huge cake

By PHILIP ELWOOD
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A huge cake was rolled out earlier this week on the Fairmont Hotel's Venetian Room dance floor — a big "70" capped the layers of frosting.

With a look reflecting both surprise and bemused contemplation, the cake's recipient, bandleader Woody Herman, could only laugh and comment, "You know, the last birthday I can remember in San Francisco was when I was 17. I don't recall anyone paying any attention."

Herman played a number of the oldies from his vast repertoire: "Autumn in New York," "Four Brothers," even his classic "Sonny Boy." And there was the revamped "Woodchopper's Ball," plus a few special numbers.

But there he was last night at 70, playing the ol' licorice stick. His young bandsmen, dedicated, devoted, very hip and competent, rolled with Herman's punches, playing some charts they'd not done in quite a while, if ever. Herman was in a nostalgic mood.

Woody Herman: "The Band That Plays the Blues," they called his first group in the mid-'30s; then he launched the modern big-band era, dropping his old-timers and hiring be-boppers.

Herman read a telegram from President and Nancy Reagan — a significant document. Herman has played the White House.

MC to begin two-week watercolor workshop

A two-week watercolor workshop will be held at Midland College beginning June 2.

Conducted by Charles A. Stewart, chairman of Midland College's fine arts department, said the class is open to watercolorists on all levels of experience from the beginner to the professional.

Three professionals will join the group as visiting teachers.

Juanita Tittle Pollard of Buffalo Gap will present a lecture and slide demonstration entitled "Watercolor — Pushing its Limits." Dr. Nancy Lee Stewart will discuss "Watercolor, the Subjective Approach" and Warren Taylor will lecture and demonstrate on "Watercolor, the Contemporary Idiom."

Ms. Pollard is a retired professor of painting from Texas Tech University with a long record of exhibitions and commissions. Dr. Nancy Lee Stewart is an art consultant for public school systems and a former public school and university art teacher. She has studios in Midland and Red River, N.M.

Taylor, a MC art instructor, is on the 1983 summer school staff at Chautaugua, N.Y. He is a member of the American Watercolor Society.

"Each student will be encouraged to work in his or her own idiom of expression whether it is traditional, illustrative, impressionist or contemporary. The three consultants were chosen to assist in this goal," Stewart said.

The workshop will run from 8 a.m. to noon. Labs will be held each afternoon.

Information and reservations may be obtained by calling or coming by the fine arts office in the Allison Fine Arts Building at MC.

Actress laments lack of intimate questions

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jennifer Beals had prepped herself in advance for the gossipy questions the press is supposed to ask of young actresses.

Miss Beals was making the publicity rounds to promote her first movie, "Flashdance."

"There wasn't a single intimate question," she said with a sigh. "I'd read about an old interview with Marilyn Monroe where someone asked her what she wore to bed. She answered 'Chanel No. 9' without blinking. I was hoping someone would ask me the same thing, but no one even bothered."

Miss Beals, 19, is a freshman at Yale University and lives in the same doritmitory as actress Jodie Foster.

OK, what does she wear to bed?

"Rive Gauche, of course," she says.

"How much would it cost to replace everything in your apartment...?"

'Best Little Whorehouse' slick, professional show

It's sure bet for 'mass volume and repeat business'

A Review

Midland Community Theatre's production of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" is a sure bet for what Miss Mona's house of ill repute depended upon — "mass volume and repeat business."

Undoubtedly the slickest, most professionally choreographed and staged musical production this reviewer has seen presented by MCT in the past three years, "Whorehouse" is a bargain at $8.50, $10.50 and $12.50 and a must for those out for an evening of rollicking good fun.

It is an adult production. When viewed as such, it contains no surprises. The business of a whorehouse is, after all, rather explicit. And for those who are totally opposed to profane language and explicit scenes (although tastefully done when accepted in context) this is one to miss. Otherwise, call 682-4111 and make a reservation.

Don't wait. The house has almost sold out for the regular run. To date three additional performances have been added to accommodate the new and repeat business — May 29, June 1 and 5.

LITTLE DID Marvin Zindler (who was on hand for the gala opening night) imagine that his story about the Chicken Ranch just outside La Grange in July 1973 would lead to a musical which would receive such popular applause. He wasn't alone.

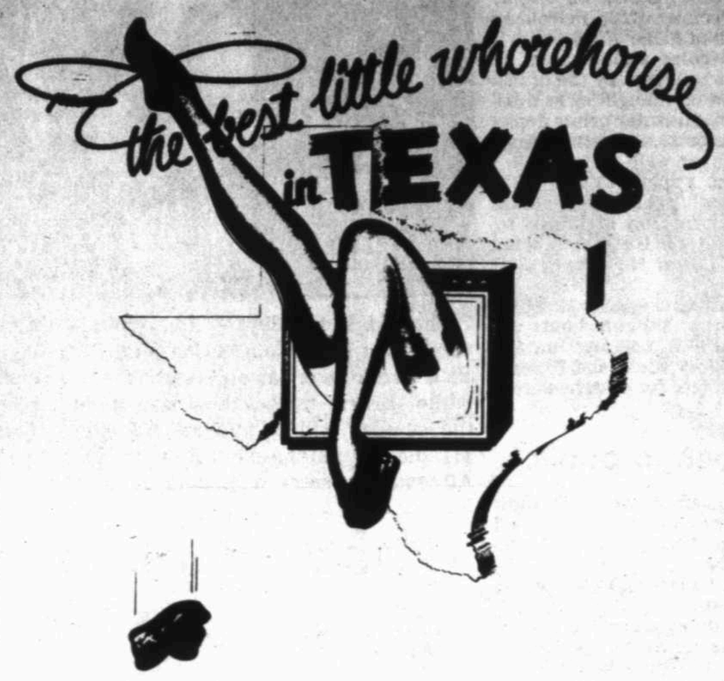

Former Midlander Larry L. King never dreamed a Playboy article, one he didn't want to pursue because he was tired of being cast as a Texas writer, would several years later find its way into the hands of another former Texan, who would see in it the makings of a musical. But it did.

MCT has reason to be most grateful to Peter Masterson and another Texan, Carol Hall. The two, as King has said, "drug" him "to fame and riches kicking and screaming all the way."

Together the three have created a most endearing play, one which allows MCT to stage a high energy, fun packed evening while filling its building fund coffers for the Yucca Theatre renovation.

It was hard Saturday to tell who was having more fun — the audience or the cast.

The two leads are played by Coila Morrow as Miss Mona, whose girls do not refer to her as a madam because, they say, "She has more pride than the U.S. Marines. We call her Miss Mona;" and Michael B. Trost as Sheriff Ed Earl Dodd, the irascible yet loveable sheriff of Gilbert, Texas, who in doing everything he knows to keep from closing down Miss Mona's operation winds up feeling "like a country dog in the city. If I stand still they'll screw me, if I run they'll bite me in the —."

BOTH TURN in stellar performances. They aptly portray their respective roles and their relationship — two people whose lives together involved a brief, romantic liaison when they were younger that evolved into a warm friendship.

They capably handle their singing. Ms. Morrow's voice is most haunting in the number "Bus from Amarillo."

Trost is convincing as an old-fashioned western law man, articulate in his profanity, but unable to express his finer feelings toward Miss Mona.

Also delivering a stellar performance is Trudie Thomason as Doatsey Mae, the person who is as much a fixture in downtown coffee shops everywhere as the formica and chrome countertop.

The outstanding cameo performance goes to Rick Wannall, Joe Woolsey and Jim Galyean, the governor, governor's aide and Senator Wingwoah, respectively, in "The Sidestep."

And Senator Wingwoah (Galyean) provides the action for one of the evening's largest applauses when he gets caught indisposed. The scene, dramatically staged for maximum impact, works well.

THE LONGEST applause Saturday evening for a musical number went to the Aggies in "The Aggie Song."

Effectively executed, the Aggies — Gary Swisher, Mark Wilkins, Rogers Tilley, Mark Olson, Jeff Horn, Paul Christiani, Jim Brazell and Ben Glenn — earned every minute of it.

And Rochelle Rabouin as Jewel performed a high energy, soul singing rendition of "Twenty-four Hours of Lovin.'" However, from my seat in the balcony, I could see she was singing into the mike; I just couldn't always hear her.

But then several of those who used a mike had the same problem. Since the problem was not consistent, but rather came and went, it seems likely the mike was not being used properly.

For example, in the "Angelette March" number, the reporter's question was understood, but not the Angelette's answer. Also, the Bandleader, Tim Ryan, could not be clearly understood all the time.

The band — Ryan, Tom Eakins, Jerry Fox, Chuck Hazlewood, Stephen Fitch and Shirley Hansen — did an excellent job, except when enthusiasm carried it away causing it to drown out the singers on several occasions.

MINOR POINTS all, but the kind which nonetheless jar the audience back to reality, momentarily shattering the illusion.

Responsible for breaking sleepy little Gilbert wide open is Watchdog News' own white wigged crusader — Melvin P. Thorpe.

Perhaps the broadest drawn character in the play, Drew Anderson as Thorpe does an adequate job of parodying the man who in actuality brought the roof down on the Chicken Ranch.

What makes his role work so effectively is the entourage around him — the soundman, cameraman and the Melvin P. Thorpe Singers.

None (Thorpe and his henchmen) appreciates Mona's girls — Heather Olson, Heather Wilson, Barbara Buckley, Jan Matthews, Kay Higgins, Dana Morris, Carole Christiani, Janet Hestwood, Bonnie Chambers and Victoria Smesny — as do the Aggies or the audience.

Bill Shaner as Mayor Rufus Poindexter, Gilbert's neurotic mayor who worries about his automobile sales; Courtney R. Clark as Edsel Mackey, the town's ineffectual newspaper editor; and Andy Salcedo, as one of the Dogettes and in the roles of photographer and cowboy "guest" at Miss Mona's, do competent jobs in their respective roles.

The company works well as an ensemble, utilizing the stage and playing off one another effectively.

Congratulations to Don Bachmann, MCT's executive director and director for this production; Jerry Yoder, choreographer; Dr. Stanley Engebretson, musical director; Stuart John, set designer; John Michael Warburton, lighting design; and Max Howard, stage manager; for putting together such an outstanding production.

People die; Music doesn't

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Good people die, but good music doesn't. That's why the Glenn Miller Orchestra is still going strong almost 40 years after the bandleader's tragic death.

David Mackay, Jr. is another reason why the orchestra is still performing. Mackay's father, David Sr., a close friend of Miller's, represented Miller in all his business dealings, continuing to do so for his widow Helen until her death in 1966. Mackay then became sole owner of Glenn Miller Productions, while maintaining his devotion to Miller's music and the quality of the orchestra's performances.

When his father died in 1980, Mackay Jr. took over the corporate reins and has brought the Glenn Miller Orchestra into the '80s with "In The Digital Mood," a new album on GRP Records of the original Miller arrangements recorded on a 32-track digital audio system. Though it seems impossible, the cleaner, sharper sound of digital recording makes Miller classics like "In The Mood," "Chattanooga Choo-Choo," and "Moonlight Serenade" sound even better than before.

The album features Julius LaRosa playing the '80s Tex Beinecke on "Chattanooga" and "Kalamazoo," along with backing vocals from Mel Torme and Marlene Ver Planck. LaRosa is thrilled with singing the old Beinecke solos:

"I was asked if I wanted to have some fun one afternoon and I said I'd love to, and when I got there, they told me exactly what the fun was," recalls LaRosa. "It was beyond any expectation. I grew up listening to that and knew all the licks of many of the songs on the album. So when they said that's what we're going to do and you're going to do the Beinecke solos, I was like a 14-year-old kid again."

Composer tries to finish opera on artist's life, start new festival

NEW YORK (AP) — Composer Gian Carlo Menotti is trying to finish an opera on the life of the Spanish artist, Goya. He's also busily resurrecting Samuel Barber's opera, "Antony and Cleopatra."

And he wants to escalate the Festival of Two Worlds in Spoleto, Italy, and Charleston, S.C., to a Festival of Three Worlds.

"I've received an official invitation from the Australian government to start a third Spoleto Festival in Melbourne, completely funded by the government, to start in 1985 and be a yearly affair," he said. "It would have productions both from Spoleto and Charleston. I've not accepted, but I'm considering very seriously and probably will carry out at least one year and see how it goes."

Menotti started the Festival of Two Worlds in Spoleto in 1958. In 1977, he started another Festival of Two Worlds — called Spoleto Festival U.S.A. — in Charleston. Both are annual.

Black hole

An artist's conception of a double star system

A black hole is the final stage of evolution of very massive stars. After total gravitational collapse, the infinitely dense remains of the star produce a gravitational field so intense that not even light can escape. The invisible black holes can be detected from the emission of X-rays and gamma rays resulting from the extremely rapid collision of objects pulled into them.

Scientists, artist rebuild King Tut's face

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — From the mystery of the pyramids to the curse of the mummy's tomb, romantic legends about the days of the pharaohs abound, many of them based on artifacts from the tomb of the pharaoh Tutankhamen.

Many a schoolchild has stared at a picture of Tutankhamen's death mask and dreamed of those faroff days, and even practical-minded adults have found their imagination captured by the thought of an ancient civilization buried under thousands of years of sand.

Norman's artistic and scientific talents have added another piece of information to the wealth of knowledge gleaned from King Tut's tomb. A newly created reconstruction of the boy king's face has been unveiled for the Miami, Fla., Egyptology Society.

Tutankhamen was pharaoh of Egypt for nine years, from about 1361 to 1352 B.C. Since he was not a particularly important monarch, his name probably would have been lost in antiquity but for the discovery of his nearly unrifled tomb in 1922.

DR. PATRICK BARRY, a Miami orthopedic surgeon, commissioned anthropologist Clyde Snow, physical anthropologist Joe Young, and medical artist Betty Pat Gatliff, all of Oklahoma, to build the face. They used X-rays taken in the late 1960s and measurements of the skull taken shortly after the tomb was excavated 61 years ago.

Construction of the skull began with an analysis of X-rays and measurements, with an eye toward known anatomical points and their relationships to one another, Young explained.

"You have to be well-acquainted with surface anatomy," he said. "You have to know the dimensions' head length, head breadth, total face height, height and breadth of eye orbits, height and breadth of nose and how they are related to each other proportionately."

Because X-rays are usually not life-size, one of the first steps is to take the prints and optically enlarge or reduce them to absolute scale. Young used the head length measurement as a guide for determining the scale, because the mummy's head length had actually been measured.

"ONCE IT IS to scale, you can project off of front and side views in real dimensions," he said. "We take both the A.P. (front) view and the lateral view."

After identifying known anatomical points from X-rays, Young drew a blueprint of the king's skull and translated the points into three-dimensional space. The next step was to construct a three-dimensional clay model using those points.

"Then, you simply rely on your experience of surface anatomy to fill in the surface between points," he explained. "It's strictly a judgment, based on experience."

Judgment and experience were particularly important with Tutankhamen's skull, Young explained, because although a physical anthropologist will usually use in the neighborhood of 200 anatomical points, only about 100 points were clearly identifiable from the X-rays.

After the clay model was finished, the next step was a mold of the model which was used to cast several skulls out of dental stone, which is much harder and more durable than plaster.

ALTHOUGH SOME authors have hinted that birth defects could be responsible for the youthful king's death, Young's work with the skull did not reflect abnormalities, he said.

"Unless you were looking for traits that would be atypical, there is no reason to suspect anything like that," he said. "That's why pathologists in many cases in research work are not aware of the circumstances of an injury or disease, because if you are familiar with the thing, you have a tendency to bias the unclear parts of the evidence.

"We make an educated guess based on available information," he added. "It's much better not to know if there are some proposed genetic defects with the skeleton youre working on, because it could bias your judgment on the contouring of anatomical features."

In general, gross anatomical features of the human skeleton have not changed much since the time of King Tut, Young said.

After the dental stone skull was completed, Ms. Gatliff's mission was to take the skull, and "do what I would do in any forensic case," she said.

Bank branch becomes video arcade

ISLA VISTA, Calif. (AP) — A Bank of America branch that was burned down during student anti-war riots in 1970, then rebuilt, has been turned into a video game arcade.

The stone and masonry building is being leased to Food and Fun, a local firm. The bank closed the office last August and transferred deposits to a nearby branch.

Bank officials cited duplication of services and a lack of business during summer months as reasons for closing the branch in this Santa Barbara suburb, where many University of California-Santa Barbara students live.

From February 1970 to April 1971, anti-Vietnam war protesters bombed Bank of America branches 10 times in California, including three times in Berkeley. They set seven arson fires, plus one fire at the bank's San Francisco headquarters, bombed its New York and Taiwan offices and planted one bomb that was found before it exploded at the San Francisco headquarters.

At one time, street vendors near the Santa Barbara campus sold wax replicas of the Isla Vista bank with candle wicks so students could burn their own bank.

Bank of America, which had branches in Saigon and on five military bases in Vietnam, was dubbed "Oink of Amerika" by the anti-war protesters.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Smoking reduces blood oxygen

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm a pack-a-day cigarette smoker and have been for the past 20 years, but I'm not asking you whether I should stop. I'm due to go into the hospital for some surgery and my doctor told me not to smoke the day before the operation. Can you tell me what difference one day will make when I've been smoking for 20 years? I like to follow my doctor's advice but this just doesn't make sense. — Carl, New York City

Dear Carl: While you have a perfect right to raise question about any aspect of your treatment, I suggest you do not have the knowlege to decide what does or does not make sense from a medical standpoint. Studies have shown that stopping smoking as little as 12 hours before surgery may be beneficial because of the effect it would have on the oxygen-carrying capacity of the blood.

Cigarette smoking increases the possibility of surgical complications, partly because it results in a diminished supply of oxygen reaching the vital organs and other tissues. Even 12 hours without smoking has been shown to increase the amount of hemoglobin available for carrying oxgen.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A few of my friends have started letting their hair remain gray because they have heard that the use of hair dyes can cause cancer. I remember hearing something like this several years ago, but I thought it had all been taken care of. Is there something new about hair dyes and cancer that I haven't heard about? — Lucille, Charlotte, N.C.

Dear Lucille: Dr. Patricia Engasser of Kaiser Foundation Hospital in Redwood City, Calif. says that animal studies have not linked hair dyes with skin cancer. However, such studies are not conclusive because it is difficult to detect a low-level cancer-causing substance in animals. Unless additional tests are performed, the potential for hair dyes to cause cancer will have to remain an open question.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If a man can't have children even though he can have good sexual relations with his wife, is he considered to be impotent? — Max, Raleigh, N.C.

Dear Max: Impotence refers to the inability of a man to engage in sexual relations because he cannot achieve or maintain an erection for a sufficient period of time. It does not relate to his ability to father a child.

Many men experience temporary periods of impotence after drinking to excess or when they are under a great deal of emotional stress. Damage to the nerves or blood vessels that control blood flow to the penis are other possible causes of impotence.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have pain in my lower back, but so does almost everyone else I know. How serious is such a problem and what kind of treatment would you suggest? — Del, New York City

Dear Del: You may as well ask how high is up. Low back pain is usually a benign condition and conservative treatment is sufficient in most cases. However, a serious underlying disorder may also be involved. I suggest you let a physician make the diagnosis so that appropriate treatment can be initiated.

THE BETTER HALF

"The EPA says your breath is in violation of regulation No. 587!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, May 20, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Jimmy Stewart, Cher, comedian George Gobel, golf's Dave Hill, "Capitol" soap star Constance Towers, New York Yankee slugger Bobby Murcer and hockey's Stan Mikita share this birthday with you. Today also is the anniversary of Charles Lindbergh's first solo transatlantic flight to Paris in the "Spirit of St. Louis." Family affairs enjoy especially favorable influences now. You might find it necessary to be a bit stricter with youngsters however. Better teamwork makes it possible for you to attain career goals that have eluded you in the past. You need to socialize more. Ask mate about entertaining on a regular basis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A relationship that recently hit a rough patch can now be strengthened. Investment proposals require careful scrutiny. Do not get carried away by someone else's enthusiasm.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A very good day for projects that require heavy concentration. Your coworkers will leave you to deal with important tasks as you see fit. A romantic interlude boosts your spirits.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Reversals are short-lived. You may lose a battle or two, but you eventually win the war. Loans come through if you persist. Be firm with a rebellious teenager.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are on the winning track all day. Make sure to cover yourself if you go out on a limb at work. A romantic relationship turns serious this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone may not show up for an appointment or date. Do not take your anger out on your co-workers or family. A romantic quandary will be solved by time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Loved one is prepared to make sacrifices if you will be honest about what is happening. Bills must be paid. Late taxes will grow larger with penalties and interest.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A wonderful day for making business improvements. Showcase your special talents. It is time to reveal your true feelings to romantic partner. You could be pleasantly surprised.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Seek professional advice if planning to launch a new business venture. A career success gives you a fine excuse to celebrate. Guard against spending too much.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get in touch with overseas contacts you may have neglected recently. Small social groups have more appeal than large ones today. Avoid voicing agreement with someone if a difference of opinion exists.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Better organizational skills are the secret to business or career success. Look forward to a productive day at work. Make the most of an opportunity to meet new people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Push hard to boost a creative project. Success looks certain. A cash shortage will require self-discipline. Set a good example for your loved ones. More input is needed from romantic partner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Set aside more time to tend to your personal affairs. You need to make amends to a partner or friend. Keep the evening free. A last minute invitation could be great fun.

'Prisoner' real-life thriller

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — "Jacobo Timerman: Prisoner Without a Name, Cell Without a Number," on NBC Sunday night, is about the Argentinian publisher who was imprisoned and tortured by the totalitarian military regime. It's a good movie that should have been a great one.

If first-time director Linda Yellen had stuck to the facts, done a more convincing job staging some scenes and refrained from making artsy statements, this would have been a pulsating film. Instead, "Prisoner Without a Name," which has its riveting moments, particularly in the second hour, mires too long in the family tear-jerker genre.

All the elements of a real-life thriller are here — action, terror, suspense and one man's dogged commitment to journalistic freedom in the face of intimidation and torture. But the whole of this movie turns out to be less than the sum of its parts.

Based on Timerman's book, the script was written by Budd Schulberg ("On the Waterfront") and Stan Silverman. Miss Yellen, who also produced the film, rewrote the teleplay to "humanize the story." Schulberg objected, and only his pseudonym, Oliver P. Drexell Jr., is carried in the credits.

NBC wasn't too happy with Miss Yellen, either. After the first edit of the film, the network canceled the broadcast's May 22 air date. But a second cut improved the movie's pedestrian pacing problems somewhat, and "Prisoner Without a Name" was given a reprieve for Sunday.

The film opens in Argentina in 1977. Timerman, the Jewish publisher of an influential paper, is enjoying the good life that stature and wealth brings. A party in his home is attended by some of the nation's leaders. This scene must have looked better on paper. It comes across as the year's most boring bash.

Timerman, passionately portrayed by Roy Scheider, initially counsels in his editorials that the nation should give the new military government more time. He's resistant to the charge that the military is imprisoning people without cause. "It's a civilized country," he says.

Two incidents galvanize him into a more radical stance. A friend of the family is beaten and whisked away by government agents. Then, a woman demonstrating against the government tells Timerman her son had been returned to her — in a box.

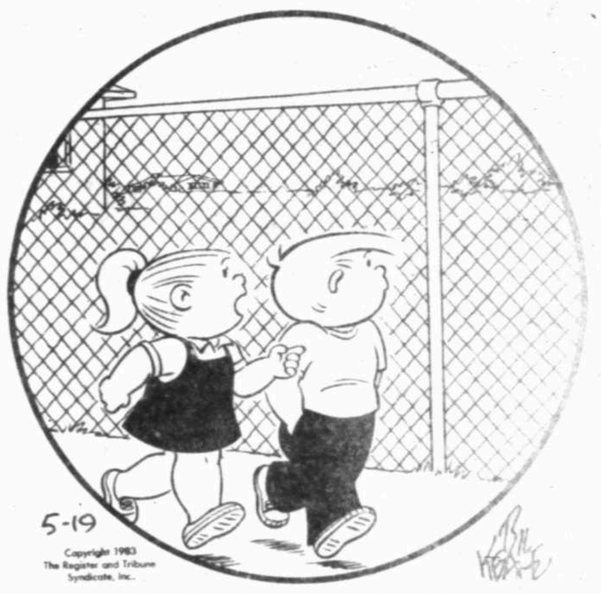

Timerman's response is a blistering editorial, claiming "the reign of terror is the order of the day. Time has come to tell the story."

Here's a chance to match your technique against Toronto's Sammy Kehela, one of the world's master technicians. Just cover the East-West hands with your thumbs and plan the play at six no trump after a diamond lead.

Note that Kehela carefully avoided playing in a suit contract. At a suit slam he might have been at the mercy of a break in his trump suit. At six no trump he might get home if either major suit behaved kindly. Note that six spades requires an inspired guess in the trump suit, and that six hearts might fail if the defenders' hands were reversed.

Kehela won the diamond lead in dummy and cashed the king-ace of hearts. When West showed out on the second heart, declarer unblocked dummy's ten. He crossed to the table with the high diamond and took the marked heart finesse. After cashing the queen of diamonds, he ran the heart suit.

A careless declarer might have discarded dummy's club in the hope of making an overtrick, but not Kehela. Since he needed only four spade tricks to make his slam, he discarded two of dummy's spades. West, meanwhile, was forced to come down to four spades and the ace of clubs.

Declarer cashed the queen of spades and queen of diamonds and, had he been gifted with second sight, he would have continued by finessing dummy's ten of spades. However, he made the normal play of a spade to the king, but when East showed out declarer still had another string to his bow. He led a club to his king and West's ace. On West's forced spade return declarer took the marked finesse in dummy, and the slam was home.

Fans to 'trek' on Shatner's 'star'

Shatner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor William Shatner, famed for his role as Capt. James T. Kirk in the "Star Trek" television series and films, will be getting a star of his own on Hollywood Boulevard.

The brass star will be the 1,762nd embedded in Hollywood's sidewalks paying tribute to show business personalities, said Monique Moss, spokeswoman for the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

Shatner's star was to be implanted in the sidewalk near Mann's (formerly Grauman's) Chinese Theater, she said Wednesday.

Shatner, 52, who now plays a cop in the ABC series "T.J. Hooker," is best known as the fearless starship Capt. Kirk in the 1966-69 NBC-TV series. The show continues to air in syndicated reruns.

Shatner also portrayed Kirk in the movie version and its sequel, "Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan."

PALMA, Majorca (AP) — Temple Hornaday Fielding, 69, a Bronx-born world traveler who authored bestselling guides to Europe read by millions of Americans, died Wednesday at his home on this Spanish island, U.S. consular agents confirmed today.

A prolific writer, Fielding was best known for his "Fielding's Travel Guide to Europe," a series that caters to American tourists who speak only English.

Conners

MIAMI (AP) — The 3-year-old son of tennis star Jimmy Connors told his mother, "Daddy has a new girlfriend," according to testimony at a custody hearing.

At the hearing Wednesday, Dade Circuit Judge Edward Klein ruled that Brett David Connors remain in his mother's custody for 30 days while attorneys negotiate his parents' divorce suit.

When young Brett returned from a visit with Connors' mother in Illinois in March, he told his mother, Patti Connors, "Daddy has a new girlfriend," said the tennis star's wife, a former model for Playboy magazine.

"I replied, 'Mommy is Daddy's girlfriend,'" Mrs. Connors said. "And he said, 'No, Daddy has a new girlfriend and he hugged and kissed her.'"

During the hearing, Mrs. Connors said her husband had been ignoring her and Brett since the beginning of the year, but she didn't realize the marriage was deteriorating until the boy's announcement.

Connors did not attend the hearing.

Police search for stolen antiques worth $25 million

AYLESBURY, England (AP) — Police said today they believe the burglar who stole $780,000 worth of antiques, including a jewel-encrusted snuff box once owned by Marie-Antoinette, will try to smuggle them out of the country.

A press officer said Thames Valley police have asked authorities at ports and airports to be on the lookout for the treasures stolen Wednesday from Waddesdon Manor, 35 miles northwest of London.

The Victorian mansion was left by the Rothschild family to Britain's National Trust in 1957. Trust spokesman Warren Davis described it as the foundation's "greatest treasure house."

The National Trust exists to preserve historic buildings and areas of natural beauty for the nation and owns land and property around Britain.

Davis described the 25 stolen items as "irreplaceable." The 18th century treasures included gold snuff boxes studded with diamonds and pearls, a pair of model horsemen in ivory, ebony and enamelled gold, figurines and rings.

Marie-Antoinette's snuff box had a lid with miniature scenes of her journey from Vienna to Paris in 1770 to marry the Dauphin, who later became France's King Louis XVI.

Davis said the items were not insured for theft because it was National Trust policy not to insure its treasures for replacement value precisely because they could not be replaced. He said they were only insured for repairs.

Davis said the stolen items would be "beyond price" if sold openly but would probably be worth one-half million pounds — $780,000 — on the black market.

Art experts said the stolen items were part of a collection that was well known in the art world.

Fifteen art works bring $37 million to auction

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifteen art works by Degas, Corot, Cezanne, Manet and Monet commanded a record $37 million in the world's richest art auction, where Edgar Degas' "L'Attente" sold for $3.7 million, the most ever paid for an Impressionist work of art.

The Degas was one of six paintings that went for more than $1 million Wednesday night in feverish bidding at a standing-room-only auction at Sotheby Parke Bernet.

The six paintings were among 15 Impressionist works offered for sale from the Havemeyer collection. Many of the art works had never been seen by the general public, or they had not been seen by the public since they were bought by the Havemeyers in the late 1800s.

The Degas was purchased jointly by Norton Simon Inc. in Pasadena, Calif., and the Getty Museum in Malibu, Calif., said Sotheby spokeswoman Debbie Nadler.

The 1882 work depicts a ballet dancer fixing her slipper while waiting to be called for an audition. A woman, dressed in black and holding an umbrella, sits on a bench beside her.

The previous record for a Degas and an Impressionist work was $2.2 million for "Portrait of Manet" in 1981.

Another Degas, "Au Cafe-Concert: La Chanson du Chien," done in 1875-77 was purchased for $3.4 million by an anonymous American private collector, who bid by telephone.

Another small business conference wanted

VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In 1980, more than 5,000 of America's businessmen gathered here for the White House Conference on Small Business. Meeting for five days, the men and women were given a chance to decide for themselves the significant problems they faced and to recommend solutions.

The group approved 60 specific recommendations for reform of tax and monetary policy, regulatory and government purchasing procedures and 10 other areas, all aimed at improving the lot of small business.

The conference was so successful that four years later, 52 members of the U.S. Senate believe it ought to be reconvened. In a letter to President Reagan, the senators this week recommended that the small business community be given the opportunity once more to take another look at itself and its relationship with the federal government.

"We believe strongly that the small business owners of this country hold the key to solving the crippling problem of unemployment, to getting America back to work again, and to bring about the increases in productivity, innovation and expansion so necessary to our economic recovery," the senators wrote the president.

The senators noted that "many of the legislative recommendations of the (1980) Conference have already been enacted into law." Given the progress to date, the added, "it is our opinion that the small business community should be given the opportunity to take another look at itself and the problems it faces."

The three principal signators of the letter were Sens. Lowell Weicker Jr., R-Conn., Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Sam Nunn, D-Ga. Weicker and Nunn are the chairman and ranking minority member of the Small Business Committee while Dole is the chairman of the Senate Finance Commmittee.

That others view small business as a vital cog in the nation's economic recovery was evidenced this week with the announcement that the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) will sponsor a series of local forums to help small business raise capital.

The SEC Government-Business Forum on Small Business Capital Formation, a congressionally mandated inquiry, will hold a round of informal hearings in Washington, D.C. area the week of June 6; Houston, the week of June 13; St. Louis, the week of June 20, San Francisco, the week of June 27 and Boston, the week of July 11.

Executives of smaller companies based those communities, along with bankers, financial advisers, venture capitalists, institutional investors, accountants, attorneys, academics and others involved in seeking or providing capital to small business, are being sought to testify.

According to government statistics, small business provides more than two out of three new jobs and accounts for 38 percent of the Gross National Product in the United States. It is also the well-spring of technological innovation. In 1980, Congresss directed the SEC to conduct a program annually that would further the dialogue between government and the private sector with regard to difficulties faced by small businesses in raising capital.

SUNSET THE ICC

The House Republican Task Force on Congressional and Regulatory Reform, a group of 37 Republican members, thinks Congress should consider setting a timetable to abolish the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) before its 100th birthday in 1987.

Task Force Chairman Jerry Lewis of California said in a report that the deregulation experiment in the trucking, bus and rail industries has been successful, despite grim predictions made by those favoring strict government controls and that continued economic regulation "can only perpetuate inefficiencies, raising the ultimate costs of goods to consumers."

The group acknowledged that parts of the rail industry may require residual federal regulation — but rather than retaining the ICC or creating a "superagency" for transportation — the ICC should be abolished and leftover functions parcelled out to other agencies.

Specifically, the group recommended creating an executive board within the DOT to oversee rail service and suggested that the Federal Trade Commission assume consumer protection responsibilities for motor carriers.

U.S LEADERSHIP DECLINES

The decline in U.S. leadership in the high-technology industries is dramatized in four studies issued by the Department of Commerce. The studies discuss problems in maintaining U.S. competitiveness in telecommunications, computers, robotics and semiconductors and report on meetings between industry and Commerce to discuss access to foreign markets, better U.S. government response to foreign governments' targeting practices, use of fiscal and tax policy to provide incentives for high technology research and development, present antitrust regulations, export controls and licensing, government support of research and development, better export promotion and support of Eximbank and a more assertive U.S. role in multilateral and bilateral trade negotiations. The four industries were selected because thy are key sources of future growth and productivity for the U.S. economy, an introduction common to the four papers states.

RULES BARRIER TO WOMEN

A Heritage Foundation study claims that despite federal rules and regulations intended to promote the economic advancement of women, government has in fact been more a part of the problem than the solution.

Written by economist Catherine England and researcher Robert Valero, the study says that it is not business but the government which is making it difficult for women to enter certain professions.

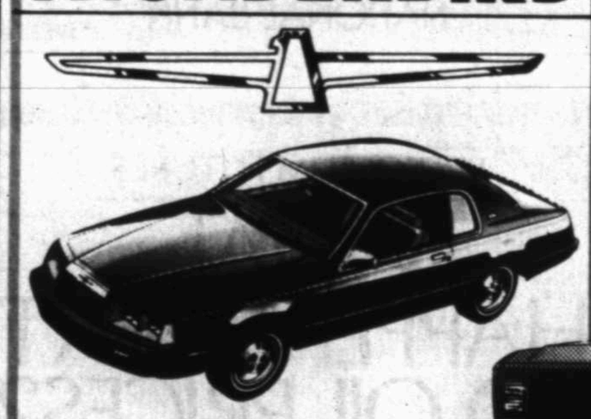

The greatest barriers to women lie in the regulations promulgated by various government entities. In addition to making it more difficult for women to start in business, some regulations involve outright prohibition. One such ban involves a 40-year rule prohibiting the manufacture of women's garments in the home. Department of Labor regulations forbid women from working at home and selling their handiwork in six industries: embroidery, sewing women's clothing, making handkerchiefs, buttons and buckles, jewelry and gloves and mittens. Knitting outerwear was recently removed from the list of prohibited activities.

DATES TO WATCH

A plea that "Buy American" regulations, which currently apply to purchase of major components of ship hulls and superstructure, be expanded to the Navy's purchase of any component exceeding $10,000 in the shipbuilding program, will be the subject of a hearing by the House Armed Services Committee this summer...The House Steel Caucus, a 130-member strong coalition, also is telling the Federal Highway Administration to expand its "Buy America" requirement to all highway and construction projects, not just those over $450,000...Seven members of the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition will hold hearings this summer on the problems of displaced workers throughout the region, starting with a May 23 session in Lansing, Mich. on "Displaced Workers: Meeting Their Special Needs"...The Joint Economic Committee of Congress hopes to mold a new farm policy for the nation since, Sen. Roger W. Jepsen, R-Io., says, the prolonged, depressed economic condition of U.S. agriculture demonstrates the inability of traditional farm programs to lead the agriculture sector into a sustained recovery. The first hearing on the needs of agriculture is slated for May 19...Hearings are being held this week by the House Committee on Science and Technology on federal materials research and development policy.

Industrial giants get behind natural gas decontrol bill

By CHARLES W. ROSS
Copley News Service

The biggest user of natural gas in the United States — big industry — believes that President Reagan's congressional effort to deregulate natural gas will benefit residential and small commercial users as well as the big plants that use it to fire their furnaces.

"Natural gas deregulation will lead to benefits similar to those achieved when oil prices were deregulated: the price of oil and gasoline dropped dramatically for everyone," said Patrick McNamara, chairman of a group of industrial giants "tired of government fixing of high prices."

Industry uses about 40 percent of the natural gas sold in the United States and — under federal laws that industry contends are badly skewed — pays a premium price to support lower residential rates.

"We are consumers, too, and we all need deregulation to correct the pricing problems, market distortions and supply inequities that have resulted from the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978," said McNamara, an officer of Dow Chemical.

McNamara and Ronald S. Wishart, an officer of Union Carbide Corp., are soliciting support of industrial gas users for the president's deregulation bill now being considered in Congress.

The two are also officers of the Natural Gas Consumer Information Center, a trade group representing cattle, mining, oil, farming, petrochemical, paper, highway building and plastic industries who support full gas deregulation.

"The argument has been advanced that residential gas prices will skyrocket with deregulation," said Wishart, "but the bill itself puts a lid on that until the market begins to function. And afterward, the biggest market factor of all, the biggest consumer of all — industry — will not let prices rise. If they go too high, then industry switches to another fuel and an immediate oversupply brings the price down again.

"We believe that with present-day market conditions everyone would pay less for gas under deregulation, not only in the long term, but also in the short term."

McNamara said the president's proposal removes obstacles in current gas pricing and supply laws that restrict competition and a free market.

"Under this (current) law the price of natural gas has more than doubled since 1978, even though the nation now has a surplus of natural gas," he said. "Much of this higher cost stems from the bureaucratic maze of prices and regulations it imposed. It created 25 different price categories. Imagine the difficulty of a producer trying to attach 25 different price tags to the same product and attempting to develop a rational marketing strategy."

Under the president's proposal, a ceiling would be put on all consumer natural gas prices through Jan. 1, 1986, allowing increases based only on inflation unless a government agency approved higher fees. On the first day of 1986, all price controls would be removed.

Long-term contracts between producers and pipeline companies, now blamed for much of today's high prices, could be broken after Jan. 1, 1985 under the proposed law.

But, more significantly, said the two executives, under the Reagan bill local utilities could buy the cheapest gas available anywhere in the United States and pipeline firms would have to transport it for them. Under today's laws, the only suppliers to these utilities are two pipeline firms which buy gas from producers and sell it to the utilities.

"This is probably one of the best aspects of the bill," said McNamara. "It introduces competition into the transportation aspects of the natural gas industry."

PBPA chief predicts future

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — An oil association executive says it could be five years before the Permian Basin's ailing oil and gas industry regains its health.

Ken McPeters, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, speaking Tuesday to the Carlsbad Potash Section of the American Institute of Mining & Metallurgical Engineers, attributed problems to falling wellhead prices, oversupply, dropping demand and industry inefficiency during the boom year of 1981.

But he said the oversupply of oil and gas is temporary and possibly will last another two years.

After that, he said, the price should "firm up."

McPeters also said the industry will ever see another peak like 1981, but will survive.

"A lot of people will go broke. A lot of banks that invested heavily in the industry to make a fast buck will suffer. But the people who have (a solid foundation) in the industry, the people who survived in the past, will come out of this OK," he said.

Crude oil sold for about $3 a barrel in 1970, skyrocketed during the Arab oil embargo of 1973 and peaked at $35 a barrel in 1981, but has since fallen to about $28 a barrel, McPeters said.

"It looks like it may stay there a while," he said.

Natural gas during the same period started at about 15 cents per thousand cubic feet, followed roughly the same path as oil to peak at over $2 per mcf in 1981, but has now dropped to about $1.80 per mcf.

"Right now, there just aren't any new gas wells being drilled. If you drilled a well today, you couldn't sell it," he said.

McPeters said the gas business is worse off than oil because of 1978 decontrol measures which freed the price of deep gas and new gas, creating a surplus.

Demand for oil and gas products followed roughly the same curve as production, but peaked three years earlier, he said.

Total demand in 1970 was about 15 million barrels a day, but that after the Arab embargo, "demand went crazy," peaking at about 19.2 million barrels a day in 1978, he said. Today, he said, conservation efforts have dropped demand to about 16 million barrels a day.

McPeters said industry was slow to respond to falling demand because people in the industry weren't looking at the demand curve. He also said the industry was very inefficient during the boom.

"Salesmen weren't really selling in 1981, they were just taking orders," he said. "Today, if you've got a door, two salemen will be knocking on it."

He added that today it costs 30 percent to 40 percent less to drill a well than it did in 1981 because of increased efficiency.

Everything's not up to date in KC

By EDWARD NICHOLS
Copley News Service

Everything's not up to date in Kansas City, Kan., but they have gone about as far as they can go — its citizens, that is, who are up in arms over the high price of natural gas. They have some justification — Kansas keeps gas that sells for 80 cents per thousand cubic feet in the ground and imports from Wyoming gas that costs $5.

Pretty much the same situation exists in Ohio. The state has locked in gas that could be sold to pipeline companies for about $1.50 to $2 per thousand cubic feet. Instead it buys gas that pipeline companies buy for $7-$8 in the Gulf of Mexico region, says Charles Gray, assistant counsel for the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners.

These are but two of the glaring examples of how well-intentioned members of Congress who react with urgency to a national crisis often create larger problems later on.

The crisis that brought about today's natural gas problems occurred in the winters of 1976-77 when the fuel was in such short supply in the United States that schools and factories were forced to close. Political pressures generated by the shortages forced Congress to pass the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978. Its goals were twofold — to increase gas supplies by encouraging exploration and to have the cost of gas reflect its actual value.

The strategy embodied in the measure seemed logical at the time and was the best political compromise possible. To keep price of gas down Congress imposed controls on "old gas," or gas being pumped from wells in production before April 20, 1977. To spur exploration, Congress approved phased decontrol of "new gas," or gas pumped from wells drilled after that date. The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission was authorized to set dramatically higher prices on gas from the new wells because exploration costs were much higher. Some new wells are more than three miles deep.

AT FIRST the plan seemed to succeed. A dramatic burst of new drilling followed passage of the bill and, in 1981, the volume of gas added to reserves in the United States exceeded production for the first time in 14 years. Then the shoes began to fall as events beyond the control of Congress or the gas industry conspired to make glaringly obvious the contradictions and injustices of the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978. The events included a worldwide recession, energy conservation and new oil discoveries that together produced a massive glut of oil and an overabundance of natural gas. Yet, despite the energy glut, the prices of natural gas soared — six-fold in the last 10 years and 25 percent in just the last year.

To understand why, it is necessary to know how the Natural Gas Policy Act drastically altered the dynamics of gas production and marketing. The story begins in the 1970s when there were critical shortages of energy and pipeline operators were worried that they couldn't get enough supply to amortize their expensive transmissions systems or meet demands of consumers. About 40 percent of the consumers are home owners or renters; the remainder are industries.

Consequently, pipeline operators signed contracts with producers, agreeing to take a fixed quantity of gas over a long period of time. In parlance of the trade, these are known as "take or pay" contracts because pipeline operators have to pay for 90 percent of the gas the contract calls for, whether they need it or not.

"We signed because the contracts were perfectly logical at the time because we never thought we would have to worry again about selling gas," said Jerry G. Verkler, senior vice president of the Interstate Natural Gas Association of America. "Suddenly, we had large quantities of gas and we were stuck with the 'take or pay' contracts."

Understandably, producers, faced with a falling demand and fixed overhead, pumped the most expensive new gas — some priced at more than $8 per thousand cubic feet at the wellhead — rather than the old gas — much of it priced under $1 and some as low as 20 cents. Pipeline operators, bound by the "take or pay" contracts, suddenly found themselves committed to pay for a lot of very expensive gas that they couldn't sell. Consequently, gas prices soared, although cheap gas was locked in the ground.

"AN OUTSIDER looking at how the system is structured probably can't believe it. He could ask how can any rational people develop a system that's so complex and works so poorly," said Rod D'Armant, a staff member of the Senate Energy subcommittee.

"It's a lawyer's dream. They could have named it The Energy Attorney's Full Employment Policy Act of 1978," said Gray, the regulatory utilities commission counsel.

More than 20 bills have been introduced in the House and Senate to correct the untenable inequities, but the major vehicle under consideration is the Reagan administration's controversial proposal to deregulate cheap, old gas by Jan. 1, 1986. The measure is extremely complex and nobody professes to know all of its ramifications, but basically it has these provisions:

— If the bill is enacted, the price of gas in any new or renegotiated contract would be deregulated. Any price could be set through negotiations between producers and pipeline operators.

— For the contracts that are not renegotiated, the ceiling price, roughly corresponding to average price in the market, would be established by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

— On Jan. 1, 1985, any contract not renegotiated by either the producer or the pipeline could be broken by either party.

"TAKE OR PAY" contract provisions that require pipeline companies to take 90 percent of the gas they agreed to buy, whether or not they need it, would be immediately reduced to 70 percent.

"Escalator" clauses in contracts, which provide for automatic increases in gas purchase prices, would limit the rises to average market price.

Interstate pipeline operators could no longer automatically pass through to customers the cost of gas they buy if the increase is more than the rate of inflation.

The rationale of the bill is that in an oversupplied market, the price of deregulated gas should find a median between the cost of new and expensive gas from deep wells and the cheap and locked-in old gas. Department of Energy testimony estimates that the price would settle down at about 40 cents more than the current average of about $3.50 per thousand cubic feet. The department believes this would be a very modest increase compared to what would happen if nothing is done. If the status quo is maintained, industry sources say, escalator clauses in the 1978 law would push prices of the "new gas" to unacceptable levels.

On the other hand, opponents of the administration's measure, personified by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, think prices of gas would "go through the roof" if the old gas is deregulated. "One estimate is that total decontrol would cost the American people an extra $60 billion a year...The rate of unemployment would increase. Farmers would be driven out of business," Metzenbaum says.

HIS AIDE, Douglas Lowenstein, adds: "We say prices will go up because there is no competition in the marketplace for gas. You have absolutely no competition once you get past the wellhead. Each customer is served by one pipeline. The argument that decontrol lowered oil prices is specious. Oil prices, with the exception of gasoline, have gone way up since 1976. Gasoline was decontrolled in 1981. Not until 1983 did gasoline prices come down. The prices of oil have nothing to do with domestic decontrol. They have to do with the international structure of the oil market, the reduction of demand by 15 percent and they have to do with the recession."

New shopping center planned on west side

On the list of Midland building permits issued May 9-13, the largest of them is for a $350,000 strip shopping center that will be built at 350 N. Midland Drive, near Storey.

Midland company Williams and Associates will be the contractor for the 13,450 square-foot, one-story center. John Williams is the owner for this new commercial project.

Of the fairly small total permits for the week, $1,017,912, most of the building is for home remodeling or for new houses. Twelve new homes, including some single-family townhomes in Adobe Heights, on Crockett, were permitted.

The townhomes were valued above $35,000 each. New homes on Gulf, Lehigh, Brookdale, and other streets cost from $45,000 to $95,000 to build.

Commercial alteration permits were granted to Casbeer & Associates, for an office in Liberty Square, and to H.B.F. Construction, so they can ready two ClayDesta Plaza offices to be occupied by tenants. These commercial alterations ranged from $3,000 to $30,000 in value.

The total for monthly permits for construction is now at $4,242,582 in value. The aggregate figure for 1983 is now $70.6 million.

A total of 42 permits were issued during the period.

Creditors vow to fight Braniff plan

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A key creditor of Braniff International says he and his colleagues will actively work to scuttle a plan between the grounded airline and Hyatt Corp.

"We will do everything in our power to defeat it," said Anthony Walsh, chairman of the court-appointed secured bondholders committee, which is owed about $100 million of Braniff's approximately $1 billion in debts.

"The public bondholders have not received their interest (about $15 million) in more than a year," said Walsh, contacted at his home in Boynton Beach, Fla., by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"The only way we feel we can save our principal, the $100 million, is by selling the planes, not accepting the Hyatt deal."

Walsh said the latest plan involved a total of $70 million, and called for Hyatt to invest $10 million in the new airline. Out of the $10 million, half would be in cash and half in secured loans.

Money doctor treating financially uptight patients

By DAVID DIETZ
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Judy Barber is not one of those money doctors who see you when you're tormented by a tax problem or seek help for a sagging stock portfolio. Barber deals with the psychological problems of money. You might call her a counselor to the financially uptight.

"Many people who come to me feel their money lives are out of control," says Barber, a family therapist who specializes in money management consulting. "They aren't sure how to take charge."

Her clients include businessmen too occupied with their work to consider financial planning, couples with divergent attitudes about the handling of family finances and singles troubled over debts run up from aggressive living.

"Some feel they won't ever get out of financial difficulty," Barber says. "Some are paralyzed — they don't know what to do about it."

Through a lengthy questionnaire on client money handling and in a series of consultations, Barber looks for psychological roadblocks and ways in which clients can find financial satisfaction. She does not recommend or sell financial products, but can offer references to investment and other advisers. Barber, who also has a psychotherapy practice, typically charges about $250 for three money-counseling sessions. Consultation by letter after each session is included.

IN GLIMPSES from her files, the following — with circumstances changed slightly to protect identities — are examples of how Barber works:

Unhappiness over family money management brought Tom and Mary to Barber. The couple, both in technical fields with a combined income of $50,000, wanted to buy a home but had been unable to save for a down payment.

According to Barber, Mary handled the finances, following a system used in both their families under which the husband brought home the paycheck and the wife managed the money.

"On the surface," Barber said, the procedure "seemed agreeable to both." But Barber said she was "immediately aware of the tension between them.

"Mary felt burdened by the responsibility of doing the deposits, paying the bills, balancing the checkbook and making sure all the tax information was together for the accountant. She was angry that Tom seemed disinterested in their finances." And Tom, said Barber, "resented that the money had become Mary's domain and was resigned to being excluded."

THEY HAD BOTH been angry about the other's role, but "really hadn't given the arrangement much thought" and "hadn't had the time to talk about money" because of busy work schedules. As for the inability to save toward a home, Barber found that the couple was "spending a lot" on entertainment, clothes and cars.

Once discussions began, "what came out was that both wanted to share the responsibility for money management and they decided to divide the tasks between them," Barber said. "They even did a budget for the first time."

The couple was able to save most of Mary's take-home pay and found they could buy a home in a relatively short period. "They began to talk about long-term goals and to research investments," Barber said. "They began to talk to each other about sharing the responsibilities and to work together as a team.

"Although they had both been raised in similar backgrounds, they learned that the way their parents had operated was not best for them. They realized they needed their own money style."

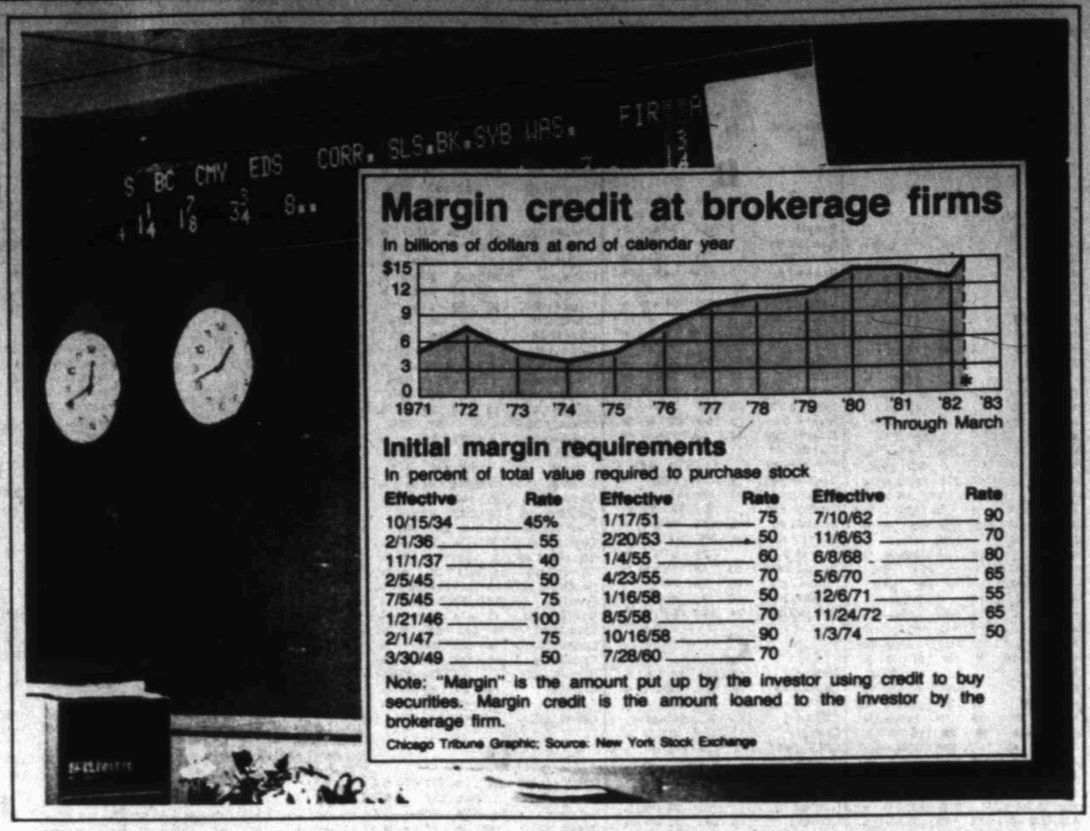

Ellen, a $65,000-a-year middle manager, was helping support the various enterprises of her three grown children and found herself lacking cash to make personal investments.

"HER ROLE as mother and caretaker was confused with the reality of now having to put herself first financially," Barber said. "Doing an income and expense sheet and a financial statement caused Ellen to realize she was not going to have enough money to support herself in retirement."

Barber convinced her that she could still be "a good mother and limit the amount of money she made available to her children. Most of it was saying, 'It's my turn. That's it, I'm not going to be your banker anymore.'"

According to Barber, Ellen "got excited about investing" and even took a plunge in commodities. "That's not done as well as she hoped, but she's otherwise doing fine. She really sees herself now as an independent person."

Dan and Leslie are professional people with a total annual income of around $75,000. They own a home and have two small children. Their problem was strained relations over how family income was put to work.

Computer show exhibitors hot

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Several hundred angry, screaming exhibitors at the National Computer Conference here bitterly complained to convention sponsors Wednesday after sweltering for hours under 100-degree temperatures in the exhibition tents at the giant computer show. One exhibitor began organizing a class-action lawsuit and quickly attracted several dozen supporters.

The stormy session, and the heat triggering it, prompted conference officials to respond that the Anaheim Convention Center is currently too small to handle the show adequately and that the conference would not return to the site.

The show, considered the premiere showcase for the fast-growing computer industry, was so large this year that 277 exhibitors were put in six tents set up in a parking lot adjacent to the permanent convention center. Many computer companies count on the annual conference as a source of contacts for future business.

However, the ventilation system inside the tents was overwhelmed by this week's high temperatures in Southern California, thus ruining business and potentially damaging sensitive computer equipment, exhibitors said during a meeting with the show's management.

Inside the tents, computers and other electronic equipment at a majority of booths had to be shut down because engineers feared that the high temperatures might damage the delicate multimillion-dollar equipment. That left exhibitors unable to demonstrate their products, they said.

Paul J. Raisig, executive director of the American Federation of Information Processing Societies, told the group that he is attempting to resolve the problem, but he stopped short of addressing the exhibitors' demands for monetary compensation.

Raisig offered to provide the exhibitors with free ice and soft drinks inside the exhibition tents, which prompted angry jeers from the crowd. He also said the tent exhibits would open earlier Thursday than they have so far this week.

WTGS to hear Collier

William W. Collier, exploration manager, Exxon, Midland, will be the featured speaker at the West Texas Geological Society meeting Tuesday. Collier will talk about "Oil and Gas Developments in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico in 1982."

The meeting will be at 11:30 a.m. in Midland Center. The cost is $6.50. Reservations should be made by calling the Society at 683-1573 before 4 p.m. Friday.

Collier holds a B.S. degree from Michigan University in Meteorology and Oceanography and an M.S. from Michigan in Geology. He has been with Exxon since 1971.

WE'VE SET NEW STANDARDS ON THE USED CARS WE SELL.

Not too long ago, we could accept trade in cars and place nearly all of them for sale in our used car department. But today...people are keeping their cars a lot longer, putting on thousands more miles before trading for a new model.

This means we have to be extra careful in choosing those trade ins that measure up to our standards. Our reputation for offering good value for the money is your best assurance...buying your used car.
