NAIROBI, Kenya — Three American soldiers were killed Saturday in Somalia when militiamen fired a rocket-propelled grenade that brought down their helicopter.

Jubilant crowds surrounded the downed craft, holding up pieces of the wreckage. Reporters who went to the scene several hours after the crash said some Somalis displayed what they said were pieces of flesh from the dead crew.

It was the first time a helicopter was downed during the 10-month U.N. operation in Mogadishu and the worst loss of U.S. life since four American soldiers were killed Aug. 8 by a land mine.

The deaths Saturday bring to 11 the number of U.S. servicemen killed in action in Somalia. Additionally, four other American soldiers have died in Somalia: two in a truck

Bizarre affair

HOUSTON — They met in 1977 on the Colorado ski slopes, in Aspen, the glitzy playground of the rich and beautiful. He was rich, she was beautiful and they fell madly in love. In the beginning, at least, theirs was a storybook romance. But the love affair between Barbra Piotrowski and Richard Minns eventually turned from torrid to obsessive to bizarre. And then murderous. Now, 13 years after hired gunmen attacked Barbra, a federal civil lawsuit will be filed Monday that raises new and disturbing questions about the role of Houston police in the case./3C

Yeltsin support

WASHINGTON — The United States and its allies expressed their moral support for embattled President Boris Yeltsin on Saturday but made no joint pledge to accelerate financial assistance to Russia. Finance ministers and central bank presidents from the world's seven richest countries — the United States, Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy — got a firsthand report on the latest constitutional crisis in Russia from Yeltsin's finance minister, Boris Fyodorov./2A

Clinton proposal meets opposition from city callers

Staff report

The conservative stronghold of Midland spoke out decidedly against President Clinton's health-care reform proposal in an unscientific vote conducted through the Reporter-Telegram's Community Pulse poll.

Cityline Community Pulse

Sixty-four percent of the almost 300 respondents who called were against the health plan the president presented last Wednesday night to a joint session of Congress.

Comments left were also decidedly against the president's plan, with the consensus (of those who opposed the plan) being that Clinton's plan smacks of Communism, Socialism and Marxism and will spell economic ruin for the nation.

Others said if the plan were enacted it would be "a bureaucratic monster" of "catastrophic proportions."

Of the more than 60 callers who left comments on the issue, only 11 were in favor of the health plan. One in favor of the plan is Pat Rousher.

"I do approve and applaud the courage of President Clinton to try and reform the system," she said. "I hope it

LULAC settles 6 minority lawsuits pending approval

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

State officials for the League of United Latin American Citizens announced Saturday the out-of-court settlements of six lawsuits, which they hope will result in more minorities being elected to public offices.

The announcement followed an afternoon meeting at the Community Cultural Awareness Conference.

Yolanda Flores, president of the Odessa LULAC and District 5 coordinator, and Rolando Rios, a San Antonio attorney who specializes in voting rights, discussed the lawsuits.

Ms. Flores said the six lawsuits that were recently settled were filed because LULAC thought there was not enough minority representation in these areas. The lawsuits were filed by LULAC attorneys over the past year.

William Howard looked at the pants his Little Brother, Richard Cornett, was wearing and asked, "Did I buy you those pants?"

"Yea, or well the money you gave me did," replied the 18-year-old Lee High School senior.

"Then why did I buy them so big?" William said.

"They're not," said Richard, who explained that it was the style today for young men to buy 36-waist pants when they normally wear 28-30.

Laughing as they recalled the scene, William and Richard exemplify the bond of an eight-year-old friendship that started with Big Brothers/Big Sisters, a United Way agency. That bond has grown stronger over the years, each getting more than they thought possible from a simple match.

Richard was 10 and the featured youngster on the KMID-TV "Wednesday's Child" segment. His grandmother signed him up for a Big Brother.

"I was lonely and played by myself. My grandmother wanted me to have a role model," he said.

DeZavala makes 'Dimes Worth of Difference'

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Children and teachers discovered a dime a day could go a long way toward helping fellow Midlanders.

Many teachers and pupils deposited change from their lunch money to make a "Dime's Worth of Difference" at DeZavala Elementary School during a United Way campaign that ended Friday.

The youngsters and staff amassed $525.12 in just one week of collecting money. "We were amazed," said DeZavala librarian assistant Josie Ramirez.

"For the school staff, giving a dime was change from our $2 (for a $1.90 lunch) each day," Ms. Ramirez said.

Ms. Ramirez bought several large glass pickle jars to collect the donated change. "When the week-long money collecting was over, I couldn't lift the jars," she said.

United Way board members, including Ms. Ramirez, were impressed with the student's efforts to raise funds in a short period of time.

"One girl brought everything in her piggy bank," said Lana Cunningham, United Way communications director.

More than 100 vintage warplanes are to be in aerial show.

"We are really excited about Air-Sho'93," said Barbi Woods, the CAF's public-relations coordinator. "We are looking for it being a big show for us."

Panic ensues as rebels storm city in Georgia

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Georgian officials reported panic in the streets of Sukhumi on Saturday as Abkhazian rebels reached the city center. Russian military boats began evacuating refugees from the besieged Black Sea city.

Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze was moving clandestinely about Sukhumi to avoid capture and boost troop morale, said his spokesman, Vata Djordjikia.

Djordjikia, speaking in the Georgian capital of Tbilisi, said fighting was raging throughout Sukhumi and that many people — including some troops — were panicking.

"This is the most serious (situation) yet," he said.

Abkhazian nationalists have been fighting for the region's independence from Georgia for 13 months, and 10 days ago began an offensive on Sukhumi, the regional capital. The Abkhazians said Georgia had not abided by a cease-fire agreement.

Sukhumi is Georgia's last stronghold in Abkhazia, and Shevardnadze said earlier in the day that Georgian troops had fought back the Abkhazians in many areas. He said reinforcements were expected soon.

The Russians sent two boats — backed by gunboats and air support — at Georgia's request to pick up Georgian and Russian refugees. The boats docked in the small port of Gulripsh between Sukhumi and its airport.

Residents have been trapped since the airport, Sukhumi's only link with the rest of Georgia, closed Thursday after 126 people were killed in Abkhazian missile attacks on three planes.

The Russians said about 1,000 people could be evacuated on the boats; Georgia said 1,600 were expecting to go.

More than 100 civilians have been killed and more than 1,200 wounded in the 10-day Abkhazian offensive.

The United States on Saturday condemned the offensive and reiterated support for Shevardnadze.

Meanwhile, a political rival called on Shevardnadze to resign. Zviad Gamsakhurdia made the appeal a day after returning to Georgia for the first time since he was ousted as president in a popular but bloody coup in January 1992.

Speaking to the The Associated Press in Tbilisi, Irakli Gotsiridze, editor of the pro-Gamsakhurdia newspaper Iberia Spektr, warned that Georgia is now split in two.

Political foes breathe last gasp, Yeltsin says

Troops ring Russian parliament, columns of policemen march out front. Yeltsin says he'll wait for peaceful surrender rather than issue attack orders.

MOSCOW (NYT) — President Boris N. Yeltsin declared Saturday that resistance by lawmakers isolated in the darkened and encircled parliament building was "on its last gasp," while leaders of the opposition there issued defiant appeals for mass resistance.

As Yeltsin's bid to disband the Congress of People's Deputies went into its fifth night, the scene grew more menacing at the monumental White House, as the riverfront headquarters of parliament is known.

Approaches to the building were tightly restricted, and side streets — including those alongside the U.S. Embassy, across the street from the parliament building — bristled with hundreds of troops, some with automatic weapons, fire trucks, buses and police cars.

Columns of police officers in full riot gear paraded periodically in front of the makeshift barricades danger the lives of soldiers or civilians, our response will be harsh," he said.

But even as the war of nerves intensified, there were signs of contacts between the conflicting sides. One official who said he had inside information reported that envoys from the White House were meeting with presidential aides to find a way out of the stand-off.

All talk of compromise centered on simultaneous elections to parliament and presidency. The rump Congress of People's Deputies, meeting inside the White House, raised something of a white flag Friday by voting to call for joint elections by March.

The call was joined by a growing number of politicians of all stripes. But Yeltsin gave no immediate sign that he had budged from his insistence that elections to the parliament be held in December and elections for president six months later, nor from his refusal blocking the square next to the White House, evidently in a show of force for the ragtag supporters of the parliament who were milling about the building in a mishmash of military and Cossack garb.

Government spokesmen insisted repeatedly that they had no intention of storming the parliament building and said the cordon was to prevent any attempt by armed men from leaving.

LULAC: Group settles lawsuits for minorities

(From 1A)

Several other lawsuits involving the election of judges are pending, as well as a lawsuit against the city of Andrews, Rios said.

Under the current at-large voting method, minorities claim their voting rights are hindered because they are unable to elect candidates they support.

The voting districts that settled with LULAC include Andrews Independent School District, the city of Winters, Winters Independent School District, the city of Sterling City, Sterling City Independent School District and Eden Independent School District.

In the past, officials were elected at-large, but Ms. Flores said it was difficult for minorities to get elected because of the "anglo bloc of voters."

"We came to friendly terms," Ms. Flores said of the settlement. "We hope to get more minority representation by creating single-member districts where minorities are able to get elected."

"What this means is the minority community can select a candidate by choice ... and it may or may not be a minority, but now they have the option," Rios said.

The settlements will not go into effect until they are approved by the U.S. Department of Justice, Rios said. If they are given the green light they will be implemented in the next election cycle, he said.

The announcement of the settlements came on the heels of the Community Cultural Awareness Conference, which began Friday and ended Saturday with Rios as the guest speaker.

Rios spoke to the guests regarding the federal lawsuit that LULAC filed regarding the election of judges in Midland County and indicated the case is on its way to the U.S. Supreme Court to be heard.

He gave examples of minorities being allowed into the Midland Independent School District's gifted and talented courses after a lawsuit was filed claiming discrimination.

"From the big cases to the little cases, LULAC has made an impact," Rios said. "In 1980 there was only one elected Latino official in the Panhandle. Sixteen suits later there are now 130 elected Latino officials in the Permian Basin."

"Who you elect and who you put in public office has a lot to say about public policy," Rios told the supporters.

He also criticized the state Legislature for not earmarking more funds toward education, but instead setting it aside for building more prisons.

"America is an evolving democracy and stays close to its principles ... LULAC is the only structure that allows us to organize ... and these lawsuits we keep filing keep America true to its principles," Rios said.

"Don't let anybody diminish LULAC's accomplishments," he concluded to the cheers of the crowd.

Experts: Gang-related rumors spread like flu

By Arlene Levinson
Associated Press Writer

Heard any bad rumors lately? Did they get you so excited and scared you had to tell somebody, even if the story sounded a bit foolish, maybe illogical?

You're not alone.

Like flu season, there are times when anxiety is rampant and resistance to rumors is weak. Like now.

One fiction riling people lately and spread mainly by fax and computer bulletin boards is a fuzzy story about gangs driving around at night with their headlights off, and then killing motorists who blink their beams as kindly reminders.

It's nonsense.

"It's bogus," said New Jersey State Trooper Al Della Fave, who said the baseless story appeared on the computers of New Jersey Bell and the U.S. Postal Service.

"It's nothing but a big-time rumor running rampant through modern technology."

Who started the rumor may never be known, experts say. What matters, they say, is why.

According to Ralph Rosnow, a psychology professor at Temple University in Philadelphia, we use rumors to try to relieve our anxieties and share them with somebody.

"There's a lot of stuff bothering people right now. You have a lot of change right now. And change foments a lot of anxiety," Rosnow said.

"Gang" in this particular rumor is a code word for poor, young black men, said Gary Fine, a sociologist at the University of Georgia.

He considers the story a warning signal about American's fears of violence, gangs and strangers.

"We are becoming two separate societies," he said. "And that is a very frightening thing. Now that we don't have nuclear war to worry about, we have internal war to worry about, and internal violence."

This rumor has flown silently through computers and churned out of fax machines. Nothing much has happened, however, except for some frightened people making nervous phone calls to police, TV stations and newspapers.

The tale, pooh-poohed from one police precinct to the next, has popped up in Arizona, Oklahoma, Texas, Tennessee, Ohio, New Jersey and California.

Richard Hansen, president of Silicon Engineering Inc. in Scotts Valley, Calif., said the message traveled to his co-workers within minutes.

"One guy got it here and immediately posted it. A minute after he got it, the other 18 of us got it," Hansen told the San Jose Mercury News.

The story has loitered so long, it's growing mold in some places. Way back on Aug. 14, the Memphis Commercial Appeal ran a story on a "fax-driven rumor" about a new gang initiation rite in Tennessee.

This was duly reported Sept. 15 by the Chicago Tribune after the rumor made the rounds in that city, starting with a message Sept. 1 from Chicago FBI to the local police.

NATION

The Midwest saw a reprise of rivers and streams overflowing into flood-ravaged areas Saturday, as rain fell there and in other parts of the nation.

Seven and a quarter inches of rain fell at Joplin, Mo., in the 12 hours that ended at 7 a.m., and more than 6 inches fell at Springfield, Mo.

Many subdivisions of Springfield were under as much as 4 feet of water, and trailer parks near Rockaway Beach were evacuated. Various west-central Missouri highways were closed by flooding.

Flooding was severe along the Neosho River at Miami, in northeastern Oklahoma. Evacuations were ordered and many homes were flooded.

Heavy rain during the early morning caused widespread urban and small stream flooding for much of central Iowa. This included flooding and water standing on roads at Des Moines.

Showers and thunderstorms on Saturday extended across northern Texas, eastern Oklahoma, the central two-thirds of the Missouri Valley, the lower Ohio Valley, the southern half of the Appalachians, Virginia and southern Florida.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 2 pm EDT included 2.02 inches at Des Moines, Iowa; 1.09 inches at Cedar Rapids, Iowa; .83 of an inch at Scott Field-Belleville, Ill.; .78 of an inch at Moline, Ill.; and .74 of an inch at Cape Girardeau, Mo., and Burlington, Iowa.

Redding, Calif., cooled to 47 degrees Saturday morning and tied its low temperature record for the date, set in 1981.

The low temperature for the Lower 48 states was 18 degrees at Truckee, Calif.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 46 degrees at Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming to 103 at Palm Springs, Calif.

accident, one by drowning and another by suicide, said the Defense Department in Washington.

The White House and United Nations said they would not back down from the mission to bring peace to Somalia and hunt down fugitive warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

The pilot and copilot, only slightly wounded, crash-landed the U.S. Blackhawk helicopter. They fled to safety after seeing that their three crewmen were dead.

Maj. David Stockwell, the chief U.N. spokesman in Mogadishu, could not confirm that Somalis were parading pieces of human flesh and called the reports "absolutely monstrous if true."

The pieces of what appeared to be flesh were displayed in a marketplace, Paul Watson of the Toronto Star said his translator told him. Watson said it was "impossible to say" whether the Somalis actually had remains from the crewmen.

There were no immediate reports of Somali casualties, but Stockwell said U.N. forces had returned fire and casualties were likely.

"If there were casualties and they were non-combatants, then I would hold Aidid's militia responsible," he said.

The grenade struck the U.S. Blackhawk helicopter as it circled an area held by Aidid's fighters. Militiamen regularly fire small arms and grenades at helicopters and have hit several, but this was the first one downed.

The downing of the helicopter did not necessarily mean an escalation of fighting in the Somali capital, Stockwell said.

"It was just an unlucky hit," he said at a news conference. "We're going to continue doing what we're doing.

"We will not shirk from our duty and we will continue operations in Mogadishu, both force protection and pursuing Aidid and his militia hierarchy," he said.

The Clinton administration said Saturday that the attack would not deter Washington from supporting the United Nations operation in Somalia.

But the episode, which brought to 11 the number of U.S. combat deaths there, provoked renewed calls from Congress for the immediate withdrawal of the 4,700 remaining U.S. troops there.

SHOW: CAF prepares for air demonstration

(From 1A)

The symposium is to feature:

■ Barry Goldwater, former Arizona senator, Republican presidential candidate in 1964 and a World War II aviation veteran.

Goldwater, a non-rated test pilot who has logged more than 15,000 flight hours, has flown the Lockheed U-2, sub-sonic reconnaissance airplane; the Lockheed SR-71 Blackbird supersonic reconnaissance aircraft; the Rockwell International B-1 Bomber, and the XV-15.

■ Col. Francis "Gabby" Gabreski, an ace in two wars: in World War II when he flew Republic P-47 Thunderbolt fighters for the U.S. Army Air Corps and in the Korean War when he flew North American F-86 Sabre jets fighters.

Gabreski shot down 28 enemy aircraft in the European Theater in the P-47 to become the 8th Air Force's leading ace.

■ Scott Crossfield, an aeronautical engineer, test pilot and project engineer in the early X-series aircraft.

Crossfield, hailed as the "fastest man alive," has set many speed records, including the first man to fly Mach 2 and Mach 3 — two and three times the speed of sound. In the 1950s, Crossfield, a civilian test pilot for the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics, flew the B-52-launched North American X-15 rocket-powered aircraft at 1,500 mph at 50,000 feet. In the 1960s, he became the first pilot to "reach Mach 3 and survive."

Invited speakers at the symposium include:

■ Tim Wooldridge, author of "Winged Wonders: The Story of Flying Wings" and former chairman of the National Air and Space Museum.

■ Werner Seitz, former German Luftwaffe pilot.

■ Jeremy Howard-Williams, a World War II British Royal Air Force night-fighter pilot.

■ Don Sachs, an aviation consultant formerly with the Boeing Aerospace Company.

■ Roger Bilstein, University of Houston history professor and author of such books as "Flight in America: From the Wright Brothers to the Astronauts" and "Order of Magnitude."

■ James Corum, author of "Roots of Blitzkrieg" or "Lightning War," and professor of comparative military studies at the U.S. Air Force School of Advanced Airpower Studies at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama.

Academic presentations and panel discussions will include studies on the the "Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress — A Legend in Its Time"; the building of America's "Arsenal of Democracy"; "Escape and Evasion in the European Theater of Operations"; the Women Airforce Service Pilots (WASP); "Worker, Wife and Wench: The Images of Women in World War II"; the history of warplane "Nose Art" and "Looking at World War II from a Psychological Point of View."

"Obviously, many events on both the home front and the battlefront of World War II affect today's world," said Teresa Buckley, the curator of education for the American Airpower Heritage Museum.

She said the symposium's theme, "A Sleeping Giant Awakens," was inspired by Isoroku Yamamoto, the Japanese Navy's "Iron Admiral" who planned the aerial attack of Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, and whose words were prophetic: "I fear we wake a sleeping giant."

Tami O'Bannion, museum director, said the museum is pleased to bring in high-caliber speakers for the 1993 symposium.

"I'm really excited about our education program to encourage research on this period of time. Research will inspire people to look for answers" about the origins of war, how it was executed and concluded, and the war's effects on the world's economy and order. Research seeks "complete and accurate" records of war.

The CAF's AirSho'93 will include restored World War II airplanes flying in themes suggestive of such air battles as the attack on Pearl Harbor, the Battle of Midway and the atomic bombing of Japan in August 1945.

The American Airpower Heritage Museum will feature a new exhibit, "Troops, Tanks, Food and Supplies: Military Air Transport."

Gates to AirSho'93 will open at 7:30 a.m. on the Oct. 9-10 weekend show. Tickets at the gate will be $8 for adults and $8 for children. Tickets purchased in advance will be a dollar less expensive.

CITY: Over half of respondents criticize plan

isn't scuttled by sabotage by people who can't see beyond the end of their noses."

Dick Snyder said he firmly supports "the president and his bold new health proposal, and I think we should all get behind him 100 percent."

Those who left comments opposing the plan were against it for four main reasons: It would mean economic disaster for the country, amount to a tragic increase in government bureaucracy and paperwork, doom small businesses and increase unemployment and taxes.

A few callers said they were against government getting involved in anything else.

"We have a small business," Katherine Martin said, "and if this thing goes through, it will put us out of business completely."

"It will absolutely destroy small business," another caller said. "It will cause massive layoffs which will further erode the tax base and cause additional tax increases."

Sharon Morrow feels differently concerning the subject of how small business will be hurt.

"I think if small business thinks they're not paying for health care right now, they're rather uninformed," she said. "To spread (health care) around would be for the advantage of everyone."

Another caller cited a similar national health-care program and how successful it has been.

"The method President Clinton is proposing has worked very well in Canada for the past 20 years," she said. "I have relatives there that have been very pleased with the system and they have been allowed to keep their own doctors. It certainly affords care for those people who are not poor enough for Medicaid but not able to afford insurance, therefore making them medically indigent."

Felix Wellmaker, however, would not be one to agree with that theory.

"The Clintons seem to believe they can re-introduce the ideas of Karl Marx and sell them as something new," Wellmaker said.

"They seem to think that state socialism — that is, Communism — is still alive and well instead of dead and buried," he said. "The federal government sends back less than $1 for every $8 it takes from its taxpayers. This 'new' health plan then should increase our health costs overall at least eight times."

Another caller feels health insurance should be an option for Americans.

"To the middle class of America, read the fine print," she said. "You will be required to purchase insurance. The choice is taken out of your hands. Watch your paychecks get smaller and smaller, and government get bigger and bigger."

Bill Markgraf is one of the callers in strong opposition to the plan.

"I oppose the Clinton health bill because it's just another socialistic scheme to take away our money and use a little bit of it that they give back to us to control our lives," Markgraff said. "We've got too much big government right now. And I dislike especially tying in the gun-control bill to health care in order to try to get it passed."

One anonymous caller turned the issue strictly into politics.

"I think it's time the Republicans hang it up and admit they've been defeated," the caller said. "They made a mess of things and it's killing them now because Clinton is trying to do something about it."

AGENCY: United Way brings 'brothers' together

(From 1A)

William was new in town and realized he needed to fill a void in his life, although he was working 11 hours a day, six days a week at Jack Sherman Chevrolet.

"Seeing Richard on TV piqued my interest," he said. "He had a big smile and a nice personality. It made me feel like he would be a good person to know."

William called Big Brothers/Big Sisters the next day, told them he wanted to be a volunteer and that he wanted Richard as his Little Brother. After going through the interview process, he was matched with Richard.

Their first meeting was a success. Richard mentioned he would like to learn how to swim; William said he had a swimming pool and would teach Richard (William didn't know how either). Eventually, they both learned how to swim.

The years have brought ups and downs for both. But William and Richard have shared them with each other.

There was the time when Richard had trouble coping with his "Mom and Pop. I felt neglected. So I went to William as a father figure and talked to him. He helped me a lot . . . He listened and gave advice."

"I would never discourage him from his parents," William said. "I gave him encouragement and told him I would be there to encourage him and his grandmother . . . that he didn't have to feel alone."

Richard made it through junior high and then came the ultimate milestone for both — getting a driver's license. William had given Richard a lot of tips on driving, including parallel parking. The test was a nerve-wrecking experience for both — and a time to celebrate.

A spokesman for Big Brothers/Big Sisters said, "William has gone above and beyond what our agency hopes can be achieved in all our matches. All our volunteers are special people who bring their own unique talent, understanding and compassion to their role as a Big Brother or Big Sister. The United Way dollars help make these special relationships a reality," said Colleen Pudlo, caseworker.

William and Richard claim that getting matched has changed the directions their lives would take.

"I wouldn't have the self-esteem that I do," Richard said, "and I'd probably be in trouble. Some of the decisions I've had to make, I would think about what William would think of me doing it, and I wouldn't do it. I couldn't forgive myself if I did something bad and would go to jail. I'd have no excuse to give William."

For William, Richard filled an empty place in his life. And there are times "I've not done things because I wouldn't want Richard to know I was doing them. He would have told me, 'You did that and I can, too.' And he would have done it in a heartbeat."

When the two were matched, Big Brothers/Big Sisters asked for a one-year commitment. "After that first meeting, I knew we were stuck," William said. "We're closer now than ever before. He's going to have to become a Big Brother himself some day. But he'll be my Little Brother as long as he lives."

For these eight years, William thought he was the only one benefiting from the match. Recently, Richard let him know that wasn't true.

Recalling the conversation, Richard said, "I couldn't repay you for what you've given me. I appreciate everything you've done for me. If it wasn't for you, I'd probably be on some street corner. I could never thank you enough.

You made me a better person and I know I'm going to grow up to be a better man because of it."

For once, William didn't have any advice or comment to give.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters is one of the 16 agencies that receives funding from United Way of Midland. The annual fund-raising campaign will end Nov. 9 For more information about the agencies or the campaign, call 682-4358.

DIME: Students raise $525.12

(From 1A)

"But we weren't expecting to collect a lot of money," Ms. Ramirez said. "We just wanted the students to learn about volunteerism, and giving back something to the community. We wanted them to know it doesn't take a lot of money to make a big difference in someone's life."

Ms. Cunningham said DeZavala was chosen to implement the organization's youth pilot project "because the school uses so many of United Way's services. A student would say: 'I have a Big Brother (from Big Brothers/Big Sisters) or I go to the Boys & Girls Club, or I stay after school in the on-site day care program."

Ms. Ramirez agreed.

"DeZavala students use a variety of United Way services, such as the YMCA after-school on-site program, Casa de Amigos for Homework Help, and the EPIC (Effective Parenting Information for Children) from Centers for Children and Families. This was something they could see working."

United Way board members delivered balloons, blue ribbons and treats to DeZavala pupils Friday to thank them for their donations.

The students, led by Rhonda Durham and Molly Clark, participated in a two-week campaign that began with a school assembly, continued with designing posters for the campaign, and culminated with one week of raising funds.

"Students brought pennies, nickels and dimes, whatever they had," Ms. Ramirez said. "On the last day of the campaign, the classes that raised the most money received blue ribbons."

"We decided to have only a two-week program since teachers have so much to do," Ms. Cunningham said. "But DeZavala did real well. The pilot project has set the pace for the rest of the students."

Iran seeks new alliances with China, India in wake of accord

TEHRAN, Iran (NYT) — Facing political isolation and a wave of diplomatic pressure over its denunciation of the Israeli-Palestinian accord, Iran proclaimed last week that it was seeking a strategic alliance with China and India.

"One of Iran's most natural partners is India, and given our situation with the United States and some Western countries, China is another suitable partner," Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani said in an interview published in the Hindustan Times, an Indian daily.

"We have tested their honesty. If we work together we can have the last word on international issues."

Although Iran may emerge one day as an import market for nuclear technology and textiles from Asia, analysts said Tehran's overtures seemed to be a bargaining chip to improve its chances of normalizing relations with the West.

China's view of Iran's Islamic fundamentalist politics appears to be one of distrust. And India is among the countries that have been pressing the Iranian government to join the mainstream and endorse ongoing peace efforts in the Middle East.

During an official visit to Tehran last week, Indian Prime Minister Narasimha Rao emphasized "the great specter of change in the world" in a meeting with Rafsanjani, the newspaper Salam reported.

High-ranking French and British foreign ministry officials also arrived here last week to solicit Iranian support for the Israeli-Palestinian peace accord, which Rafsajani bitterly condemned as a betrayal of Muslims.

Japan's warning to Iran was especially blunt, diplomats said.

"It is in the interest of the Iranian state to endorse the Israeli-Palestinian accord," diplomats quoted Japan's Deputy Foreign Minister Hiroshi Fukuda as telling his Iranian counterpart on Sept. 19. "Rejection will be a sign that Tehran is not worthy of trust."

Fukuda warned Tehran that it faced increasing diplomatic isolation because of its stance on the agreement between Israel and the PLO, which would allow Palestinians a measure of autonomy in the occupied Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho.

The Japanese envoy reminded Tehran that Tokyo had opposed the Clinton administration's policy of containment for Iran at a meeting of the Group of Seven industrialized nations earlier this year.

But in its official remarks, Tehran has said repeatedly that the peace pact had only increased its incentive to part ways with Europe and Japan.

Hussein Sheikholislam, a senior Iranian diplomat, traveled to Damascus, Syria, to meet with militant Palestinian groups there that oppose the pact.

In a meeting with Ahmed Jabril, secretary general of The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, he pledged "Iran's comprehensive support for the Palestinian cause," The Tehran Times reported.

"In response to the compromise of Arabs with Israel and the backing of the accord by Europe and Japan," the state-run Hamshahri newspaper said in an editorial last week, "the most rational counterattack is to build a strategic alliance between Iran, India, China and even Kazakhstan. This will lead to the creation of a strong economic and political bloc that no superpower could destroy."

Though the editorial was interpreted as promoting a nuclear alliance, political analysts and business people reacted skeptically to the possibility of a wide-ranging strategic or trade alliance with China or India.

"The Iranian economy cannot suddenly change course from a Western-dependent economy," said Reza Dadmanesh, a real estate developer. "Every year, $1 billion worth of Iranian carpets are exported to Western Europe. There is practically no market for them in India. Rafsanjani apparently employs some very unqualified advisers."

Analysts say one motivation for denouncing the Israeli-Palestinian peace accord was to bring together competing blocs in the Iranian leadership in unanimous support of state policy.

French Alpine floods claim eight victims

PARIS (AP) — Heavy rain in the Alps cut off tunnels and roads and flooded villages, forcing hundreds from their homes and claiming an eighth victim, officials said Saturday.

Officials called it the worst flooding in the Savoie region in 35 years, with damage to transport routes alone in the tens of millions of dollars.

Many villages and local roads remained cut off. Phone service was impaired and water supplies were cut or contaminated in some towns.

Police said the body of a tourist, believed to be Swiss, was found in a landslide at Mt. Cenis. He was the sixth person to die in southern France, along with two people killed in northern Italy, in several days of heavy rain.

About 500 people evacuated on Friday to Saint-Jean-de-Maurienne, 20 miles south of the 1992 Winter Olympic city of Albertville, began returning to their homes Saturday as the Arc River abated.

Repair crews cleared mud floes and repaired damage to tracks and highways leading to the Mont Blanc and Frejus tunnels between France and Italy, which were closed Friday. Both tunnels are major truck routes.

The Mont Blanc tunnel was reopened Saturday to cars only and the Frejus tunnel to local traffic. Limited rail traffic resumed Saturday.

Parts of Italy and Switzerland were also flooded.

Doubts haunt chess match after game 12

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — With doubts and controversy surrounding the future of the FIDE world chess championship, Anatoly Karpov of Russia and Jan Timman of the Netherlands drew game 12 of the match Saturday.

Karpov leads the match 7 points to 5.

The match was scheduled to move from Amsterdam to Oman for 12 more games beginning Oct. 3, but the Persian Gulf's sultanate withdrew its backing to cover the prize money and costs.

Earlier Saturday, FIDE president Florencio Campomanes published a written statement confirming the Oman leg of the match was off. He promised to announce the host city for the second half of the match by Oct. 2.

"There is a 25 percent chance the match will stay in Holland," Henrik van Buren, Dutch organizing committee spokesman said. "The 1.2 million guilders ($650,000) for the organization can be found, but the prize money is a problem."

Until funds are raised, no one is certain the match will continue at all. "It now seems we will have to live with the Professional Chess Association and Garry Kasparov," Dutch grandmaster Timman said Thursday, "and that would be a disaster for the chess world."

Kasparov bolted from FIDE to form the Professional Chess Association with his British challenger Nigel Short earlier this year following a money dispute.

On Saturday, Timman played the Grunfeld Indian Defense as black, and a game of careful tactical maneuvering began.

As the players neared the 40-move time control of 2½ hours, a cluttered board was cleared with frantic exchanges of both rooks and queens.

The game evolved into an almost symmetrical endgame with a bishop and seven pawns on each side. After move 51, the players agreed to a draw.

U.S. troops face Vietnam-like foes in Somalia

By G.G. LaBelle
Associated Press writer

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Nicole Barklind was a little bewildered to find that the smiling Somalis she was treating as a medic were clansmen of Mohamed Farrah Aidid, whose militia is attacking U.N. forces.

"They seemed pretty friendly and appreciative," said Barklind, 20, from Minneapolis.

But Pfc. Barklind and other U.S. Army soldiers serving with United Nations forces in Mogadishu are quickly realizing it's not easy to sort out the factions in Somalia's morass of clan warfare.

The Americans and other U.N. forces came to help Somalia recover from famine and civil war, which killed about 350,000 Somalis last year. Now they find themselves under attack.

On Saturday, three U.S. soldiers died when a rocket-propelled grenade hit their helicopter as it flew over an area of Mogadishu controlled by Aidid, who is blamed by the U.N. for the deaths of more than 50 peacekeepers since May.

Four other Americans were killed in a mine blast Aug. 8, and Aidid's forces regularly lob mines at the U.N. compound where most of the Americans are quartered.

In Washington, White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers condemned the helicopter attack and said it "underscores the need to reestablish security in Mogadishu" so that the international aid effort can continue.

Among a dozen American soldiers interviewed recently, most saw their work as essential to the U.N. effort to get Somalia back on its feet.

But some complained that the soldiers were caught in a complicated political situation. Instead of fighting a regular army, they have to face militiamen who can melt into the crowd.

"The same people you talk to in the day could be shooting at you at night," said Sgt. Cornell Houston, 31, a father of two from Mobile, Ala.

U.S. troops often suffered similar problems when trying to identify enemy guerrillas (Viet Cong) — from Asian friends — in Vietnam.

Houston added that the army's job was to take away the guns from "the bad guys" while U.N. officials help the Somalis.

Schism threatens mixed Bosnian defense force

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (NYT) — As Bosnia's Muslim-led Parliament prepares for a bitter debate and unpredicatable vote on an international peace plan, the country's leaders are struggling to head off a split within the ethnically mixed forces defending Sarajevo from Serbian nationalist troops.

Since the siege began nearly 18 months ago, the defense of the Bosnian capital has rested on an uneasy and often fractious alliance of professional military units and paramilitary groups, formally known as the Bosnian army. Added to these predominantly Muslim units is the HVO, the acronym for the nationalist Croatian troops that have been the third force in the Bosnian war.

The association between the Bosnian forces and the HVO in Sarajevo has frayed further in recent days, leading to armed confrontations. In one incident, U.N. troops were deployed to prevent a battle around a Croatian barracks.

After negotiations sponsored by the United Nations, Bosnian army commanders agreed on Friday to postpone for seven days an ultimatum for HVO troops to pull back from critical front-line positions along the Miljacka River in the center of the city.

But tensions remain high, and there is uncertainty whether the two sides can avoid a battle that could seriously weaken the city's defenses.

The peace plan drawn up by international mediators, which the Parliament will begin debating this coming week, has served to fuel the dispute.

The "Muslimization" or "Islamicization" of Sarajevo has long been feared by the tens of thousands of Serbs and Croats who have remained in the Bosnian capital through the 18 months of civil war.

Oil prices may collapse unless OPEC cuts production, chief says

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC's president warned divided cartel members Saturday they risk a collapse in oil prices if they don't set aside their differences and stop runaway crude production.

Jean Ping, Gabon's oil minister, opened a key strategy session of the 12-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries with an unusually blunt appeal for restraint.

"The current state of the market gives us no room for maneuver," he said. "We cannot sustain another price collapse."

Oil prices recently slid to their lowest levels in three years, skidding about $6 below the cartel's target of $21 per 42-gallon barrel.

OPEC has taken much of the blame for the fall in prices. Iran, Nigeria and other nations have been pumping more oil than they promised under an output accord for the July-September period.

Ping, the group's current presidency, said the nations must draw up — and stick to — a new agreement for the October-December quarter that restricts output.

"We have it within our power to stop the decline," he said.

Overall, the OPEC nations — Algeria, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates and Venezuela — are supplying about 1 million barrels a day over their current daily ceiling of 23.6 million barrels.

Several ministers have suggested the nations set a fourth-quarter cap of 24.5 million barrels a day as a way of pushing up prices. Saudi Arabia, the group's largest producer, would even favor a ceiling as low as 24 million barrels a day, delegates say.

Demand for OPEC oil usually rises in the October-December quarter, the start of the winter heating season in the United States and western Europe.

OPEC estimates demand for its crude will hit 25.4 million barrels a day in the fourth quarter. But some of that oil will be taken from stocks built up by oil companies in advance of winter.

Ping said the refusal of some producers to halt their excess output threatens the group's future. "The market itself perceives OPEC to be an organization under siege by its own membership," he said.

OPEC has long been plagued by a lack of discipline among its members. When oil prices rise, nations are tempted to pump more oil than allowed.

Argentina holds record number of Americans in jail

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (NYT) — More than three weeks after the Argentine police raided 10 homes of a religious group formerly known as the Children of God, nearly 60 Americans remain in custody, constituting the largest group of U.S. citizens being held by a foreign court.

Of that number, seven adults have been charged with crimes that include sexually abusing children, hiding minors, corrupting minors, violating their rights and racketeering.

As many as 50 children who are believed to be U.S. citizens have been placed in protective custody until investigations and court hearings are held. Of the adults in the group, called the Family, 12 are staying with the children in seven state and private institutions in the Buenos Aires area.

In total, 21 adults have been charged in federal court, and more than 150 children and minors have been placed in protective custody. State Department officials say the case is extraordinary, since it involves so many Americans, but add that they are unable to intervene in the court proceedings.

"Since this involves the laws and courts of another sovereign state, the most we can do is be sure the Americans charged with crimes are being treated well, not mistreated, and have access to legal counsel," a State Department official said in a telephone interview."

Members of the Family, however, give a somewhat different account, asserting that the authorities have forced them to pay for their own food while being detained, accusing the police of robbing them of their money and saying officials have deprived them of basic comforts like blankets.

They also say they have been frustrated in trying to find their children in the aftermath of the raid.

Rights group condemns U.S. policy on Haiti

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The head of an international human rights group has accused the United States of complicity in Haiti's repression, saying Washington is rushing to turn over victims to their persecutors.

The accusation by Kenneth Roth, director of Human Rights Watch, came ahead of the release Sunday of a report criticizing U.S. immigration policy toward Haitians who have sought to flee their homeland following a 1991 coup.

The 37-page report, entitled "No Port in a Storm," chronicles the effects of a decision by former President Bush and President Clinton to ship back home all Haitian refugees captured at sea without first determining whether they are fleeing economic hardship or political persecution.

The report and Roth also denounced as slow and inconsistent the U.S. effort to interview asylum-seekers inside Haiti. They recommended sending more U.S. refugee officials to help with the workload.

Americas Watch, the National Coalition For Haitian Refugees and the Jesuit Refugee Service compiled the report with information as recent as mid-September.

The Associated Press obtained an advance copy of the report and spoke with Roth by telephone from New York, where Human Rights Watch is based, on Friday.

In Washington, U.S. State Department spokeswoman Maeve Dwyer said Saturday there would be no comment on the report until it had seen a copy. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials could not immediately be reached.

Roth said Washington's immigration policy toward Haitians "makes the U.S. government complicit in the ongoing repression taking place in Haiti by essentially handing back the victims to their persecutors."

The report urges Congress to investigate the State Department management of the immigration program inside Haiti and asks Attorney General Janet Reno to begin reviewing case decisions for the Justice Department.

Program offers hope to troubled youths from gloomy homes

By George Esper
AP special correspondent

MARLBORO, Mass. — JoAnn and Barb are two children who lost their innocence too soon, two horror stories in search of a happy ending.

Barb was raped repeatedly. In fact, she says, when she was 10, her father used her body as currency, giving her to a step-uncle who had driven him to the doctor, a sort of payment for services rendered.

JoAnn's father sent her to get drugs for him. He beat her and touched her indecently from the time she was a baby. She was 9 years old, she says, when her father first had sex with her.

Is it any wonder that Barb became promiscuous, suicidal, a drug abuser? That JoAnn became violent, and swallowed 120 aspirin? That they both ended up in a facility for troubled girls, desperately trying to save their young lives?

"Their stories seem unbelievable at first because they're so awful," says Joyce Nodine, head teacher at the Germaine Lawrence Assessment & Diagnostic Program, where both girls were sent by the state.

Germaine Lawrence offers girls a 90-day safe harbor. They are taught grammar and reading, math and art; they join group discussions on everything from sexuality to AIDS awareness to job skills. And then they are sent on to long-term facilities or foster care or their own families.

"As children, they are the forgotten kids," said Elisabeth Spiotta, the program's educational director. "But as they get older and their behavior becomes so undesirable to society, they become the unwanted kids.

"No one wants to deal with helping these kids. People find it very difficult to believe and to understand that kids are being sexually abused. . . . I think people are having a very difficult time understanding the amount of violence and abuse that these kids have experienced."

From Barb's file at Germaine Lawrence:

"It seems as if the client feels a great deal of shame about the sexual abuse and is reluctant to talk about it. She feels it was her poor judgment that placed herself in precarious environments."

Of course, she was born into the first of those environments — the home where she says her parents allowed her to be abused by her 18-year-old step-uncle. Her parents deny it.

The next year, she was hospitalized — she was considering suicide. She told authorities she was sexually abused and, at the request of her parents, was made a ward of the state Department of Social Services.

She was promiscuous, they told officials. The language they used with Barb was more brutal: Her parents called her "a bitch, a slut, a whore," she says. "My father, one day, just decided to just drop me off to my social worker at DSS because he said I kept saying that foster homes were better than being home because of what was going on.

"He said, 'I just can't deal with her no more.' And he looked at me and he goes, 'Oh, you make me sick,' and just walked out the door. I was crying."

What followed was five years of foster homes and residential facilities, of drugs and alcohol, of forced and unforced sex, of suicide attempts. A partial diary of those years:

1989 — raped by two men who fled the country before charges could be filed. March 1990 — slit wrists with a razor blade. April 1990 — swallowed shampoo and slit wrists. August 1990 — slit wrists. May 1991 — slit wrists and arms.

In late 1991, Barb said, she ran away from her foster home.

Biosphere 2 crew to rejoin world today

ORACLE, Ariz. (AP) — On Saturday, after spending two years in a sealed environment, the eight crew members of the experimental Biosphere 2 project were preparing for today's exit.

"We're doing some last-minute cleaning," crew member Sally Silverstone said in a telephone interview. "Everybody's going around and packing and putting away their stuff.

"We have a lot of mixed feelings about leaving. On the one hand, it'll be great to see our family and friends again and be in the outside world. But on the other hand, we're thinking, 'Oh God, this is the last time we're going to be in here doing these things.'"

The four men and four women have lived inside the 3.15-acre terrariumlike glass-and-steel structure in the desert north of Tucson since Sept. 26, 1991.

Backers and some outside scientists say the $150 million experiment succeeded in its main mission — keeping eight people alive for two years, growing most of their own food and recycling water, waste and most of the air.

But the futuristic, privately financed project also has been accused of hucksterism, scientific amateurism and deception in the much-publicized test of the prototype space colony.

Pure oxygen had to be pumped into Biosphere 2 twice this year when the artificial atmosphere got out of balance, and the air seal had to be broken on Oct. 11, 1991, when crew member Jane Poynter needed finger surgery after a threshing machine accident.

In addition, crew members lost an average of 13.65 percent of their body weight on a diet heavy on such items as sweet potatoes, rice, peanuts, bananas and wheat.

But the experiment is still valid, Silverstone said.

"We've shown that eight people can survive for two years in what is basically an artificial world," she said.

Crew members are to meet with family and friends after leaving the Biosphere 2's airlock at 8:15 a.m. this morning.

College disavows professor's views on sex behavior

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — The faculty senate at the University of Massachusetts voted to "emphatically dissociate itself" from the views of an English teacher who said professors can help some female students lose their virginity.

"In the public's eye he was identified with the faculty and a lot of people out there thought he represented our views," English professor Jeremiah M. Allen, who sought the vote, said Friday. "I wanted to make it clear that he did not represent our views."

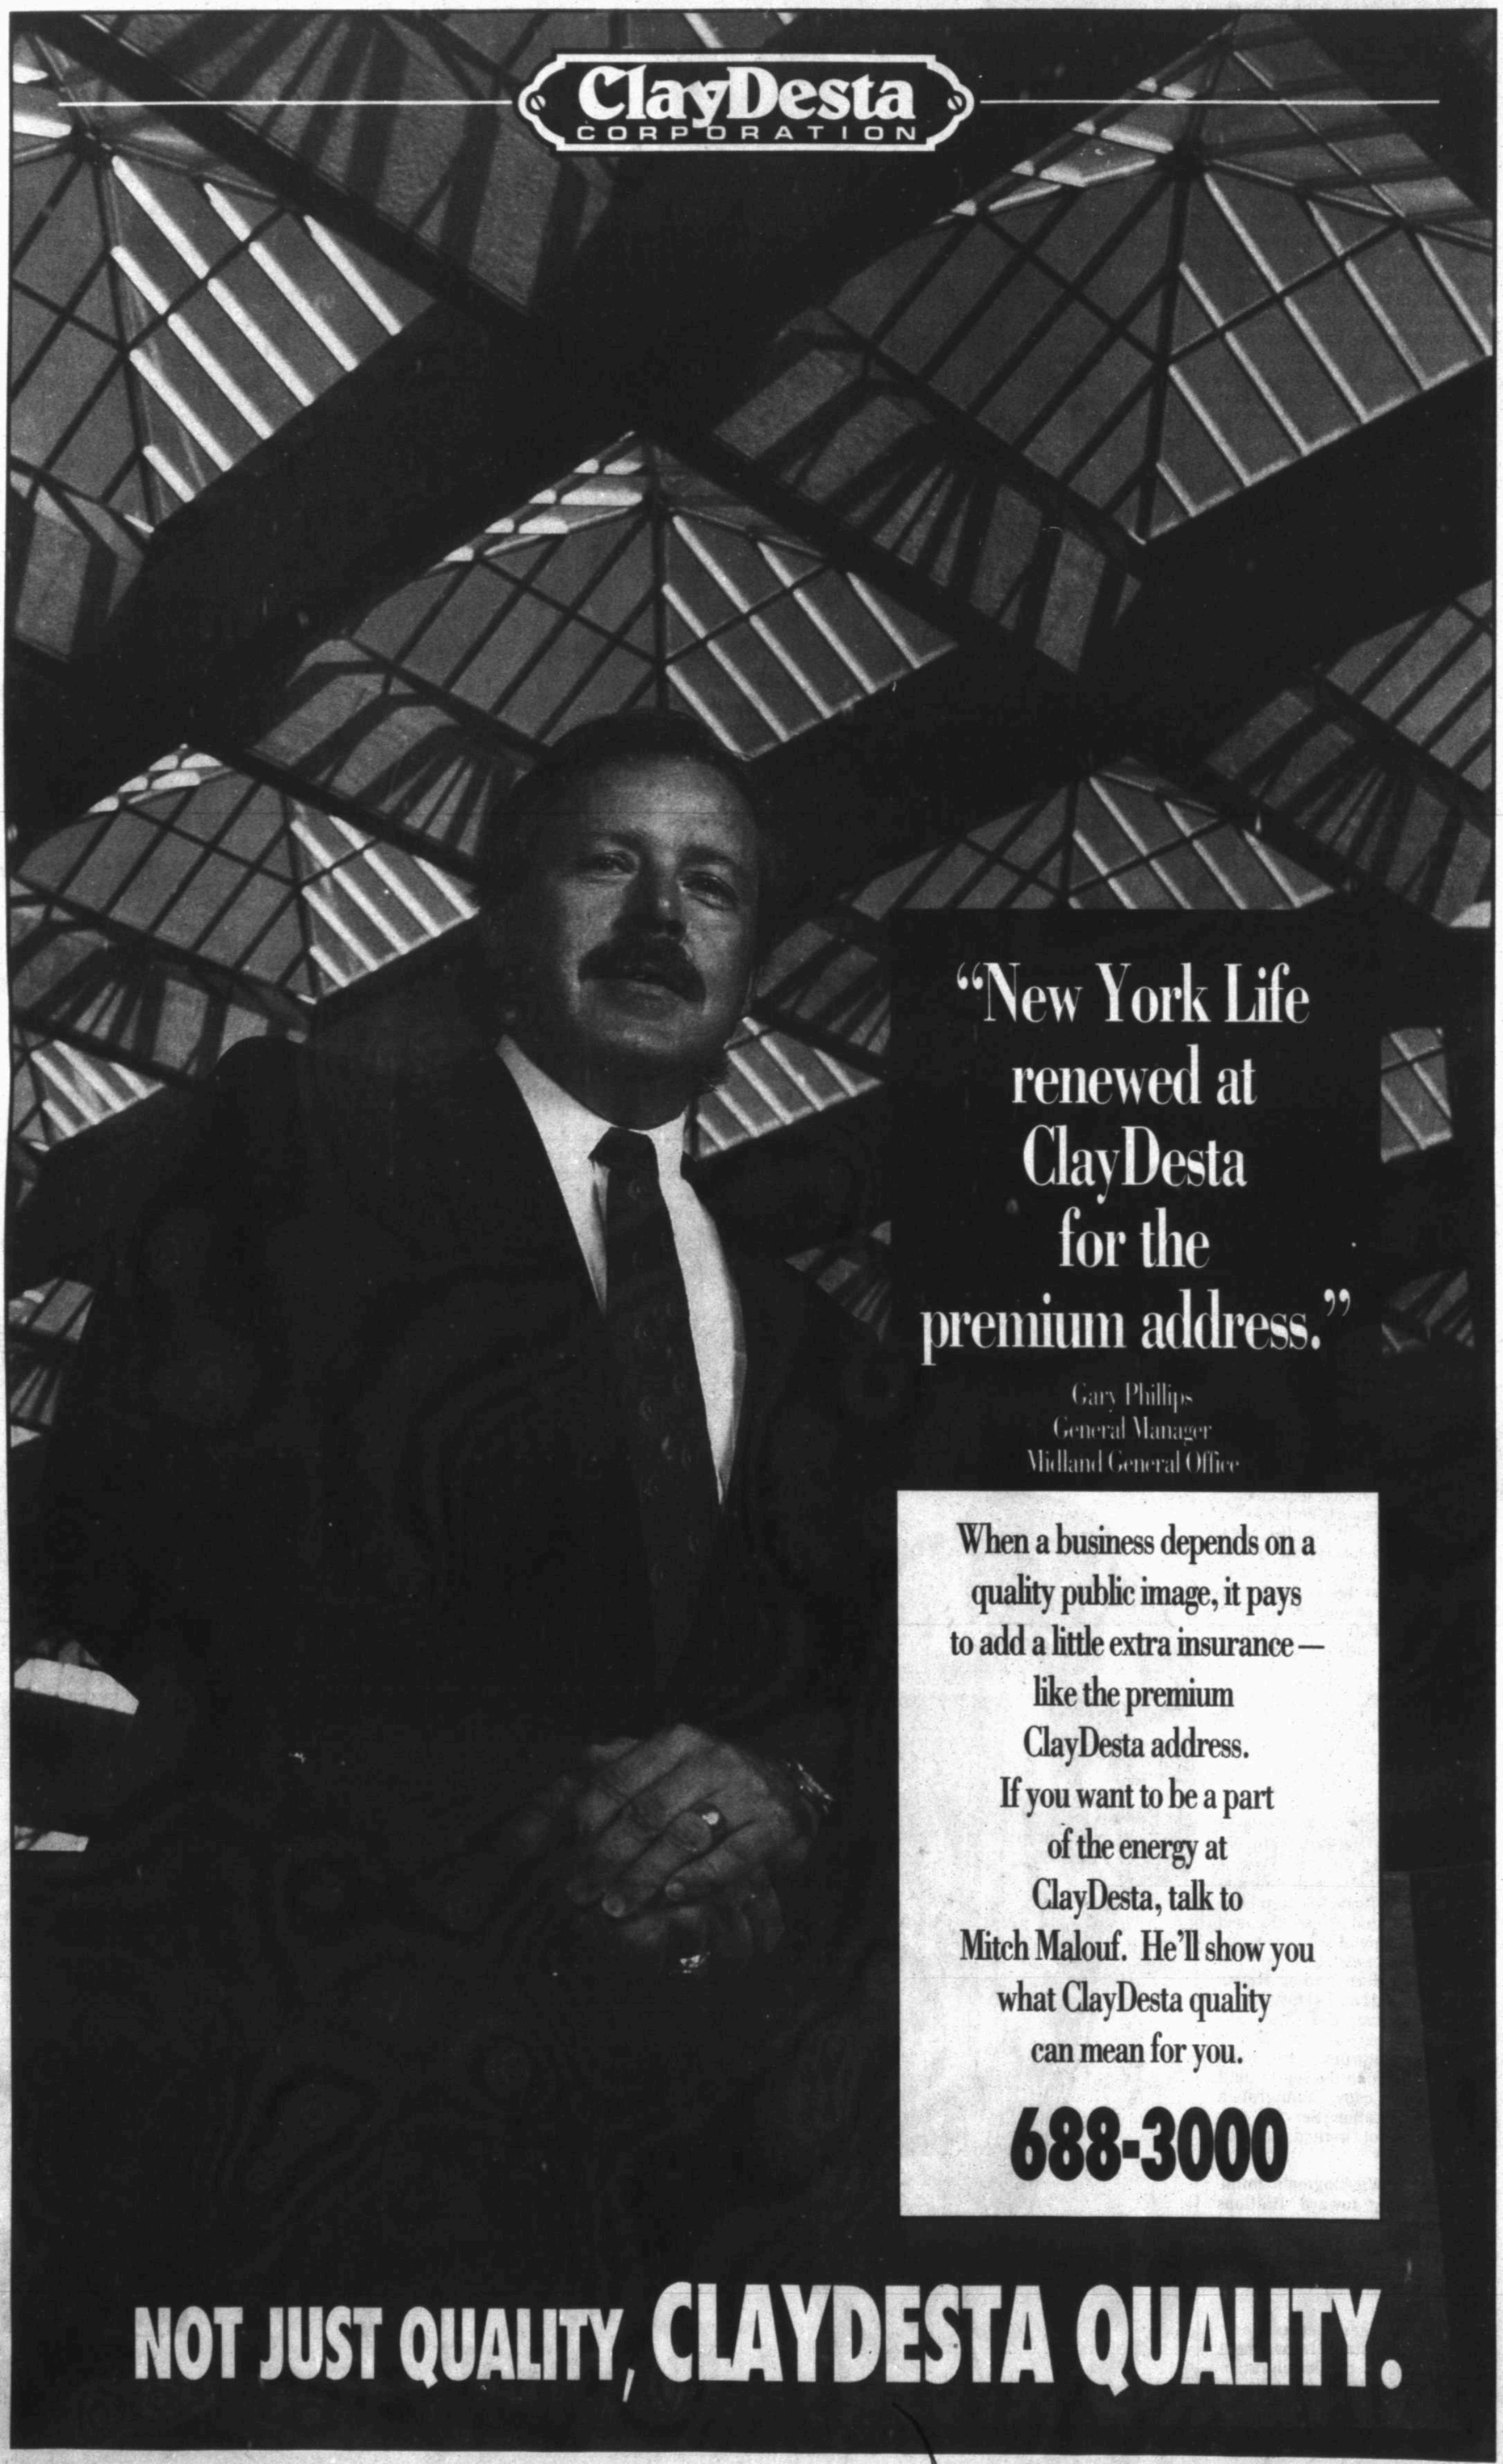
More than 100 faculty representatives approved Allen's motion, which did not refer to English professor William W. Kerrigan by name. One person was opposed and one abstained.

Kerrigan did not attend the meeting Thursday, but he said Friday that he had no quarrel with the section of the motion that said professors should maintain a "strictly professional" relationship with the students they teach or supervise.

In an interview published in the September issue of Harper's magazine, Kerrigan said sex between students and professors was not necessarily a bad thing.

The professor said he was "not defending Don Juanism, you know, sex for grades and so forth. But there is a kind of student I've come across in my career who was working through something that only a professor could help her with. I'm talking about a female student, who for one reason or another had unnaturally prolonged her virginity . . .

"There have been times when this virginity has been presented to me as something that I, not quite another man, half an authority figure can handle — a thing whose preciousness I realize."



Train passenger saves 30 people in heroic action after wreck

By Robert Dvorchak
AP national writer

MOBILE, Ala. — In the predawn bedlam of a burning bayou, Michael Dopheide clung to a bridge timber with his left arm and lifted fellow passengers out of a window of a half-submerged Amtrak train with his right.

"He should get a medal for what he did," said Gus Maloney, whose injured wife was among 30 passengers Dopheide rescued. "He's a real hero. If there was any way to reward him, I would. We'll be forever grateful."

Dopheide, 26, of Omaha, Neb., had just removed his shoes and eyeglasses to get some sleep after the Sunset Limited left Mobile. A June graduate of the DePaul University law school in Chicago, he boarded the Superliner in Los Angeles for the 3,066-mile, eight-state journey to Miami.

A jolt knocked him from his seat and into action. The train plunged into Bayou Canot and was half-submerged; its 30 dazed occupants choked on smoke from a crew car burning nearby.

"Everybody was moaning and groaning. Someone yelled, 'Oh my God, we're all going to die,'" Dopheide said.

In the inky blackness and minus his glasses, Dopheide borrowed a fellow passenger's key ring flashlight. The thin stream of light was all he had, but it led him out.

A piece of timber from the railroad bridge protruded through a window near the emergency exit at the rear of the car. Dopheide clambored outside, and in a clear, calm voice, ordered the others to follow.

Clinging to the timber, Dopheide extended his right hand to help passengers squirm through the window and lowered them feet-first into the water — a drop of about six feet.

Each had to swim about 10 yards to a bridge piling. For those unable to swim, Dopheide placed them on flotsam perches or cradled them as he swam them to shore.

"I held their hand and kind of led them to floating debris they could hold onto. Some of them hooked onto my neck as I swam," said Dopheide, a former water safety instructor.

One of those who couldn't swim was Sister Adele Maessaro of San Antonio, Texas. Dopheide pulled her to something she could stand on and left her in the care of another passenger.

"The only thing that kept me going was his calm voice. I just followed his voice to safety," she told the Mobile Press Register.

Lorena Maloney, 59, a bank teller who boarded the train in Mobile to visit her son in Orlando, Fla., also couldn't swim.

From her bed at Providence Hospital, she recounted the story over and over to visitors, saying a man named Michael saved her.

Indictment cloud hangs over Hutchison

WASHINGTON (NYT) — She came to Congress a political celebrity, a petite giant-killer who showed the power of Republican women. Three months later, admiration for Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison is tinged with concerns that she will soon be indicted.

The Texas senator's efforts to settle into her new job have been clouded by legal troubles that could culminate this week in a decision on her case by a Travis County grand jury.

Prosecutors have said that the panel, which is scheduled to meet tomorrow, is nearing the end of its lengthy investigation into Hutchison's actions in her previous job as state treasurer. The grand jury's term expires Thursday.

While no one knows for certain whether grand jurors will take any action, even many of Hutchison's closest supporters are bracing for an indictment. The senator and her allies blame the investigation on partisan politics and predict that ultimately she will be proven innocent of any wrongdoing.

"If they don't indict her, they're going to look stupid," one Hutchison ally said. "I don't see how they can't indict."

Citing intense publicity about the case in Texas, many Republicans believe that Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle, a Democrat, will push hard for an indictment to avoid having to acknowledge that he came up empty-handed.

Earle's investigation centers on allegations that Hutchison misused her state staff for political chores and personal errands. The grand jury is also trying to determine whether she improperly destroyed government documents.

By all accounts, Hutchison is doing her best to leave the developments in Austin to her lawyer while she concentrates on her duties in Washington. The investigation comes at a time when the new senator is juggling a host of crucial Texas issues, including funding for the space station and the Superconducting Super Collider.

Senate colleagues describe Hutchison as tireless advocate for the home-state projects, despite her legal problems.

Police arrest John Denver on DWI charge

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — John Denver was sentenced to sing at a benefit concert to fight drunken driving after he pleaded guilty to driving while his ability was impaired.

Ther 49-year-old performer was originally charged with driving under the influence, but prosecutors agreed to let him plead guilty to the lesser charge. The longtime resident of this Rocky Mountain ski resort has until March 8 to complete the typical sentence of 28 hours of public service, which will include doing the benefit. A date for the performance hasn't been set.

Denver, whose country-tinged pop hits include "Thank God I'm A Country Boy," "Rocky Mountain High" and "Take Me Home, Country Roads," also must undergo an alcohol-abuse evaluation and pay a $50 fine.

"I've talked to him and he's agreed to help us out," said Pitkin County sheriff's Deputy Ellen Anderson, who oversees Tipsy Taxi, a free taxi service for those too drunk to drive.

At his request, Denver was allowed to enter the plea last Tuesday, a week earlier than his scheduled court date.

"Mr. Denver's disposition wasn't unusual," said Deputy District Attorney Lawson Wills. "It's typical of all defendants in that position. Anyone who wants their court date earlier can just call up and say, 'Hey, I want to get this over with.'"

Denver was stopped when a police officer saw his 1963 Porsche weaving on a city street just after midnight Aug. 21. He told arresting officers he drank two glasses of wine while dining with friends at a local restaurant.

He had a breath-alcohol reading of .14 percent, police said. Colorado's legal standard for intoxication is .10.

World finance chiefs support Yeltsin

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and its allies are striving to show support for embattled President Boris Yeltsin, contending he is "the standard-bearer of reform in Russia."

Finance ministers and central bank presidents of the world's seven wealthiest industrial countries — the United States, Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy — had Russia's latest constitutional crisis as a key item on their agenda Saturday.

As Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan joined their counterparts around an oblong table at Blair House. the presidential guest house, they were facing an agenda that led off with a scheduled 75-minute discussion on the current state of the world economy.

The G-7 officials were searching for ways to bolster anemic world growth rates. While the United States has been pushing for Germany and Japan to do more to get their own nations out of recession — and thus help world growth — it was unlikely that any new initiatives would be announced at Saturday's meeting.

That was primarily because both Germany and Japan, to ward off criticism that they were not doing enough, have acted in recent days.

The central banks in both countries have cut official interest rates and Japan has come forward with a $58.6 billion government spending program, the third effort it has made over the past year to jump start its economy.

Helmut Schlesinger, the head of Germany's central bank, told reporters Saturday that the Bundesbank was continually monitoring conditions but saw no immediate need to cut rates further.

The G-7 finance officials invited Russian Finance Minister Boris Fyodorov to give them a first-hand briefing on the economic and political situation in Russia. It was expected that the group would issue a statement of support for Yeltsin in his battle with hard-liners in Parliament.

Gunmen fire at crowd during football game

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 4-year-old girl was critically wounded and a man killed Saturday when three men opened fire on a crowd at a football game at a Southeast Washington elementary school, police said

The shooting was one of four that occurred within a four-hour period — and within several blocks of each other — Saturday that left three men dead and a 12-year-old girl injured. Police could not say whether the shootings were related to one another or whether they involved gang activity.

"We believe that something is going on, but we are not able to say just what except that there is a total disregard for life," said police Lt. Beverly Alfred.

Launice Smith, 4, was in critical condition after the football game shooting at about 2:30 p.m. The unidentified man shot in the same incident was taken to another hospital, where he later died, police said.

A large group of area residents were watching a neighborhood football game at the elementary school when the three gunmen approached and opened fire, police said.

Later Saturday, a 12-year-old girl whose name was not released was critically wounded when she tried to run from three men who were shooting randomly from a car, police said.

The first fatal shooting occurred just before noon when an Deangelo Howard, 18, was shot to death in a wooded area.

The shooting at the school occurred at 2:30 p.m. And at about 3:30 p.m. police found a man, whose name has not been released, shot several times on a curb. He died later at a hospital.

King beating officers prepare for life in prison

By Seth Mydans
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Officer Laurence M. Powell is terrified, unsure if he will emerge from prison alive. Sgt. Stacey C. Koon, a tougher man, has steeled himself by studying everything he can about the ordeal that lies ahead.

By noon on Monday, the two police officers convicted in the videotaped beating of Rodney G. King must report to authorities to begin serving their two-and-a-half-year sentences. They will become members of a small, tormented fraternity of imprisoned law officers, who face special dangers among a prison populalion that hates them.

By various accounts, these men are often shunned, harassed or physically attacked in prison by inmates who see police officers as their enemies. For their own protection, they are sometimes moved from prison to prison, hiding their identities, or are placed in solitary confinement or even on death row.

"I can tell you, it is a devastating experience for a police officer," said Charles Goldwasser, a lawyer who has represented many officers, four of whom have been sent to prison. "It's devastating when he has to stand on the side of the counsel table where the defendants are. It's bone chilling."

Lawrence Sherman, a professor of criminology at the University of Maryland at College Park, said: "The risk of being killed in prison is very high. For police, there clearly can be animosity, especially for officers that have been as notorious as these officers have been."

Even among imprisoned police officers, Koon and Powell are in a class by themselves, perceived around the country as symbols of racism and police brutality,

The two men are well aware of the conditions they face, their lawyers said, and have been preparing themselves as best they can, spending time in the woods or mountains with their families and getting their personal affairs in order.

Midwest folks try to cope with floods that won't quit

Associated Press

Renewed flooding in the saturated Midwest forced hundreds of people from their homes Saturday, closed roads and washed away mobile homes, even as people were still cleaning up from a summer of high water.

As much as 7 inches of rain fell overnight, on top of two previous days of heavy rain.

Many rivers in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma were forecast to crest over the weekend, but officials said that would mean little.

And at Des Moines, Iowa, where summer flooding knocked out drinking water to 250,000 people, a rain-swollen creek threatened to cause new problems.

Since Wednesday, three people in Missouri have died in the latest round of flooding.

Dozens of county roads and some state highways in Missouri were closed by high water, and a trucker was rescued after his rig was washed off a highway.

"It's just astounding," said Jefferson County Commissioner Ron Casey. "No one would have ever thought we'd be right back in the soup so soon."

In southwest Missouri, mobile homes and propane tanks floated away on the rising James River in Stone County, after up to 7 inches of rain fell in that area overnight and early Saturday, said sheriff's dispatcher Kent Doucey.

Evacuations were ordered overnight and early Saturday in the village of Abesville, Mo.

"Not in my 29-year career have I ever seen anything like this," said Fire Chief Bill Scott.

Water got as deep as 8 feet on some city streets and firefighters Friday evacuated 30 to 40 people from their homes.

In Oklahoma, 100 to 150 people were evacuated from northeast Miami after 4 to 6 inches of rain inundated nearby Tar Creek.

Self-styled Miss. America guidelines undergo make up

By Christina Connor
Associated Press writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The new do-it-yourself image of this year's Miss America pageant was not quite all it was made up to be.

Beginning in July, pageant officials touted a new policy requiring contestants to do their own hair and makeup instead of bringing in professionals.

But then they allowed professional snipping and styling to go on behind closed hotel room doors with a chaperone present, said Joe Sanders, executive director of the Miss South Carolina pageant and president of the National Association of Miss America State Pageants.

"Miss America did not do her own hair and many other contestants had hairdressers," said Sanders' wife, Gail, who is the pageant official in charge of preparing Miss South Carolina for the national competition.

Kimberly Aiken of Columbia, S.C., succeeded Leanza Cornett of Jacksonville, Fla., as Miss America on Sept. 18.

Hairdressers traditionally shared a room at the Atlantic City, N.J., convention center where the pageant takes place, but this year they were banned from the building.

But the pageant sent state directors a letter saying hairdressers were welcome to work on contestants in their hotel rooms, Gail Sanders said.

Pageant director Leonard Horn and other pageant officials based in Atlantic City did not return phone calls Saturday.

Snakes rattle teacher, pupils at rural South Dakota school

MIDLAND, S.D. (AP) — Calling off school because of heavy snow is common in rural Haakon County. But canceling classes because of heavy snakes?

"This is the first time that we've run into that type of problem," said school Superintendent Ted Kunz after a nest of rattlesnakes interrupted classes for the 14 students at the Kirley Road School.

It started when a girl reaching for her shoes in the school's cloakroom came face to face with a full-grown rattlesnake.

Boys in the schoolyard killed four more rattlers. No snakebites were reported.

The experience Monday left Mathis and parents rattled. They called off classes Tuesday and dug up a sidewalk in front of the school with a backhoe to find more than 30 bull snakes, rattlesnakes and snake eggs.

Classes met Wednesday, but the snake hunt resumed after a student saw a full-grown rattler on the playground Friday, Kunz said. An experienced snake-hunter will scour the school grounds during the weekend, he said.

Former senator harangues Dole in rare Rolling Stone critique

By George Raine
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — In an acerbic and biting critique written for Rolling Stone, former Sen. Alan Cranston excoriates Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, his colleague for 24 years, as "the Republican prince of legislative darkness" who is in position to frustrate President Clinton's agenda.

Under the headline, "Freddy Krueger Does D.C.," and the subhead, "Meet Bob Dole, nightmare on Capitol Hill," Cranston calls the Republican minority leader an obstructionist and complex personality, with a "revelatory wit and legendary temper." He mocks Dole as "the self-appointed champion of the country."

The stinging indictment is in sharp contrast to the rule of decorum members must follow on the Senate floor, and with Dole's own public assessment of Cranston last Oct. 8, upon the occasion of the retirement of the California Democrat. At the time, Dole commented on Cranston's "remarkable three decades of service" and described him as "an eloquent advocate for his party."

Dole on Thursday called Cranston's article "fiction" saying he is supporting Clinton on important issues including NAFTA, Russian reconstruction, key nominations "and seeking bipartisan cooperation on health care."

"Not many people took Alan Cranston very seriously as a senator, and fewer will take him seriously as a journalist," Dole said.

He added that his former colleague had left the Senate "in disgrace."

Cranston, the only Californian to be elected four times to the Senate, received a rare and humiliating reprimand from the Senate Ethics Committee for zealous fund-raising efforts. He collected $865,000 over two years for voter registration efforts from savings and loan owner Charles Keating and simultaneously lobbied banking officials on behalf of Keating. He retired and Sen. Barbara Boxer, a Democrat, won his seat in last year's election.

Senators have had major feuds off the floor, Donald Ritchie, the associate Senate historian, said Thursday, but he said the tone of the Cranston article is "certainly unusual, even for a former senator."

The article appears in the Sept. 30 edition of Rolling Stone and was commissioned by Jann Wenner, the magazine's editor and publisher, after he and Cranston "had talked about different ideas," said Rolling Stone spokeswoman Maureen Coakley.

In an interview, Cranston said its impetus was in "what I noticed since I left the Senate, in the way he (Dole) has been behaving since we have a Democrat in the White House." He said the behavior "is in sharp contrast to the way he operated while Republicans were in the White House."

In the article, Cranston writes, "He has swiftly become the Republican prince of legislative darkness, the Senator Gridlock of parliamentary maneuvering, able to take a proposal by the new president and — despite Democratic majorities in the Senate and the House — drop it into the black hole of procedural defeat."

Dole has an "almost Pavlovian predilection for gridlock," writes Cranston.

Cranston said he had "a reasonably friendly relationship" with Dole, both of whom were first elected to the Senate in 1968. "Sometimes we worked closely together, most of the time we were at odds, but it never got unpleasant," he said.

Man quickly learns to fly when pilot dies

PHOENIX (AP) — A passenger with virtually no flying experience crash-landed a light plane at a dark airport Thursday after the pilot died at the controls.

"Definitely an 'E' ticket ride," said Matthew Kornblum, who walked away from the single-engine Cessna 182 after his feat in Flagstaff. "It's just something you have to do when you're in a do-or-die situation."

The pilot, Billy D. Graham, 59, was pronounced dead at Flagstaff Medical Center. An autopsy was ordered to determine the cause of death, but Kornblum said he believed Graham had a heart attack.

The two were returning to Flagstaff in the dark from a business trip in the Navajo Reservation community of Kayenta, about 130 miles northeast of Flagstaff, when Graham said he wasn't feeling well.

About 10 minutes later, Graham convulsed and passed out, Kornblum said.

Kornblum, from Charlotte, N.C., said he propped Graham up and took over the controls. He said he has never had a flying lesson but Graham and other pilots had allowed him to take controls of planes several times, though never at night.

"I've had maybe 10 hours at the stick," Kornblum said. "I'm really glad I've paid attention."

He said he could see the Flagstaff skyline lit up and airport runway lights.

Kornblum, an electrical engineer, said he was too high on his first attempt at landing. The second time, he bounced the plane three times, collapsing the nose landing gear before the plane skidded to a halt.

Controversial court case involves baby with deformed brain

By Linda Greenhouse
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In a case raising timely issues of health-care policy as well as profound questions of medical ethics, a hospital in suburban Virginia is appealing a Federal District Court's ruling that it must continue to provide life-sustaining treatment for a baby born there 11 months ago with most of her brain missing.

The condition, a congenital defect known as anencephaly, is incurable and quickly fatal without medical intervention. An Anencephalic baby has a brain stem, which keeps the heart and other organs working for a time. The baby does not meet the legal definition of brain death. Lacking a cortex, it is permanently unconscious, without sensation or cognitive functions.

The mother in this case, acting out of a "firm Christian faith that all life should be protected," as the court's opinion described her position, has insisted that everything be done to keep the baby alive. The baby, who is being cared for in a nursing home, has periodic respiratory crises, requiring readmission to the hospital's pediatric intensive care unit and the aid of a mechanical ventilator to breathe during those crises.

Although many details of the case have been kept secret under a protective order issued by the court, it has galvanized medical ethics experts around the country who have learned of it. They are watching with fascination and concern to see whether the long-running debate over patient autonomy and the "right to die" is about to take a new turn.

This latest case is a mirror image of some of the most highly publicized cases of the last decade in which parents refused or sought to end treatment that doctors wanted to provide for catastrophically damaged children. As the earlier cases did, this one also poses profound questions about the appropriate limits of parental decision-making and medical intervention.

It is almost unheard of for an anencephalic baby to live as long as this one has, and doctors and lawyers familiar with the case say they know of no other instance of a parent insisting on continued treatment under these circumstances.

The mother has rejected the recommendations of doctors in the case as well as of a specially appointed panel of the hospital's ethics committee that no further treatment be undertaken. She had rejected doctors' recommendations to have an abortion when the anencephaly was diagnosed before the baby was born at Fairfax Hospital in Falls Church, Va., on Oct. 13.

The hospital, which was uncertain of its legal liability under federal law if it overrode the mother's wishes, took the case to Federal District Court in Alexandria, Va., last spring. The hospital asked for a declaration that it would not be violating any of several federal laws governing either hospital admissions or discrimination against the handicapped if it refused to provide treatment the next time the baby needed it.

The American Academy of Pediatrics filed a brief supporting the hospital, on the ground that life-sustaining treatment for an anencephalic baby was medically inappropriate.

To the hospital's astonishment, Federal District Judge Claude M. Hilton ruled on July 1 that the hospital's refusal to treat the baby's next respiratory crisis would violate not only three federal laws, including the recently enacted Americans With Disabilities Act, but would also violate the mother's constitutional right under the 14th Amendment's due process clause to "bring up children" in the way she thinks best.

Hilton's sweeping ruling, as well as the appeal to be argued next month before the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, have received almost no public attention. The judge granted the hospital's request for a protective order when the case was filed, placing all documents in the case under seal. The hospital based its request on what it said was the need to maintain the confidentiality of medical records.

Without explanation, Hilton released the opinion for publication last week in a form that continues to shield the identity of the parties, including the hospital. The New York Times learned from a person familiar with the case that the hospital is the 656-bed Fairfax Hospital, a highly regarded regional medical center that delivers some 8,500 babies a year, more than all but about 10 hospitals in the country.

Many of Johnson's 1st calls went to Texas

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — From consoling the widow of a slain policeman to advising a newspaper publisher on his White House correspondent, many of Lyndon B. Johnson's first presidential phone calls rang with Texas accents.

The calls are among 275 made public in transcripts released this week by Johnson's presidential library. They began quickly after Johnson was sworn in following the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

At 4:30 p.m. that day, Johnson phoned from Air Force One to console Nellie Connally, wife of wounded Gov. John Connally.

"Give him a hug and a kiss for me," Johnson told her. He would call her and Connally many times in the coming weeks.

The following afternoon, Johnson phoned from the White House to the Dallas home of Mrs. J.D. Tippitt, whose police officer husband was killed trying to question Lee Harvey Oswald.

"I know that words are not very useful at times when your grief is so great, but Mrs. Johnson and I wanted you to know, you and your children ... are not only in our thoughts, but in our prayers," the president told her.

Talk turned to politics in a Nov. 23 conversation with Sen. Ralph Yarborough, who told his fellow Texan, "I think we ought to close ranks and give you a solid base of operation. Especially with the governor's being injured, everyone wants to help."

"You're wonderful, and I'll be in touch with you," Johnson replied.

Other Texans also were quick to encourage the new president.

On Nov. 24, Rep. Jack Brooks told him, "You're doing beautifully."

Johnson sounded rather overwhelmed. "Well ... I ain't doing. I've got lots to do. I haven't got much of it behind me."

A week after becoming president, Johnson spoke with former Texas Gov. Allan Shivers, who had voiced his support.

"I'm terribly appreciative of your concern and your interest and I knew that that was the way you'd feel because that's the kind of fellow you are, and I just wanted you to know that I didn't ignore it and it touched me deeply and I'll try to reciprocate that friendship," Johnson said.

"Well, you're mighty nice and I think you're doing everything just right," Shivers told him. "You've handled it well ... You're a tremendous person and I think you're due every commendation ... and you're doing real good, truly."

Johnson had several talks with Homer Thornberry, the Austin congressman who was soon to become a federal judge. On Dec. 4, the president sounded nostalgic, telling Thornberry he planned to join fellow Texans for a meal.

"I'm going to come down there and have a bite to eat with the Texas delegation," Johnson said. "I'm not going to talk any legislation of any kind, but I thought I've been coming every day for 2[illegible] years and there's no reason to stop now, and I'm just coming and have a bowl of soup with them."

On his first Christmas as president, Johnson found time to call many old Texas friends.

On the phone with Waco newspaperman Harry Provence, Johnson heard some encouraging words.

"I hear everything good about you. You've really converted a lot of folks," Provence said.

"Well, much obliged," Johnson replied.

"People that haven't voted Democrat in 30 years are going to vote for you," Provence said.

Holiday or not, Johnson couldn't keep his conversation with Amon Carter Jr., then publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, off business.

After telling Carter he hoped to get some Western art to redecorate, Johnson also advised the publisher to "get the best damn fellow" to cover the White House. "'Cause I guarantee you, I'll play ball with him."

Army trains for fight in place very similar to former Yugoslavia

By Frank Viviano
N.Y. Times News Service

HOHENFELS, Germany — Deep in the Bavarian hills, at a secluded military base 90 miles north of Munich, U.S. Army officers are training American and other NATO combat troops for the possibility of wide-ranging military interventions in a fictional country that bears an uncanny resemblance to the former Yugoslavia.

The program, which has been under way since March, is part of what one U.S. official described as "a revolutionary departure for NATO — training troops to intercede in ethnic conflicts outside the NATO theater."

"Now that the Cold War is over, everyone believes that this is going to be the Army's future. And we sure as hell had better be ready for it," said Major Len Jeffrey, a graduate of the training program who is now on assignment in Macedonia.

Although Clinton administration officials continue to play down the possibility that U.S. troops might intercede in any way other than a peacekeeping role in the former Yugoslav republics, the nature of the training in Germany strongly suggests that more intrusive options remain open.

The program has involved detachments from Germany, the Netherlands, Spain and France, along with key American infantry divisions from the European command that saw action in the gulf war.

'A revolutionary departure for NATO — training troops to intercede in ethnic conflicts outside the NATO theater.'
— U.S. official

At least one American unit that completed the highly specialized training has already been sent to the breakaway Yugoslav republic of Macedonia, where many analysts believe the war may spread eventually.

On the record, NATO officials avoid any hints that the troubled Balkan states are the target of the program. But in more than a dozen interviews with U.S. Army officers on the Hohenfels base and in Macedonia, a reporter encountered constant references to the need for contingency training, at the very least, for possible combat actions in the Balkans.

"Put it this way," said Major Greg Gerovac, a senior task force analyst at Hohenfels. "The Third Infantry comes here and says, 'It would be prudent for us to be prepared to go to ex-Yugoslavia.' So we take real reports from our French, British, Canadian and Spanish allies who are down there, and we come up with something."

The conditions soldiers face on the mock battlefield at Hohenfels — and the hypothetical political environment surrounding it — "aren't something I dream up," said Lieutenant Colonel John Angell, operations commander at the base, which is known as the Combat Maneuver Training Center.

"Ninety percent of it is based on live intelligence feeds from Bosnia-Herzegovina and what we read in the newspapers," he said.

Although much of the emphasis at Hohenfels is on "low-intensity" peacekeeping missions, which is in keeping with NATO's new post-Cold War mission, the training also extends to full-scale engagements with tanks, artillery and infantry assaults backed by air power.

The inclusion of such high-intensity combat options, and the nature of the hypothetical trip wires that bring them into play in the war games practiced at Hohenfels, suggest that the Pentagon has taken seriously the need to plan and train for possible actions in regions torn by ethnic strife, including the Balkans.

The thinly disguised game plan at the heart of the training program envisions widespread NATO intervention should Yugoslavia's Serb-controlled regular army reenter the fighting in Croatia, Bosnia or elsewhere in the former republic.

Many drunken pedestrians die in streets

ATLANTA (AP) — You've heard plenty about the dangers of drinking and driving. Now federal health officials are finding that drinking and walking is a deadlier combination than they had realized.

Fewer drunken drivers are running over pedestrians, but more than a third of the pedestrians killed by cars last year were drunk themselves, according to National Highway Traffic Safety Administration figures reported Thursday by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The 5,546 pedestrians killed by cars last year made up 14 percent of all vehicle-related fatalities. About 96,000 other pedestrians were injured.

There is no legal level of intoxication for pedestrians. But 36 percent of the 4,770 pedestrians over age 14 who were killed last year had blood-alcohol levels of 0.10, enough to be cited for drunken driving had they been behind the wheel. Seven percent had consumed smaller amounts of alcohol.

Of the 2,059 who had consumed any alcohol, more than half had blood-alcohol levels greater than 0.20.

"This is a bigger problem than we had thought previously," said Jim Hedlund of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. "Most of our programs are aimed at drivers. We have not really addressed the drinking-and-walking issue."

Nationally, drunken driving has been decreasing for years. In 1982, 57 percent of all traffic fatalities involved someone who had consumed alcohol. Last year, it was 45 percent.

The percentage of drunken pedestrians killed dropped only 3 points between 1982 and 1992. Yet just 11.9 percent of drivers who struck and killed pedestrians were legally drunk last year, down from 20 percent in 1982.

Seniors find few jobs in TV world that prizes youth

By Lynn Elber
AP television writer

LOS ANGELES — The picture looks bleak not only for older actors but also for writers in a television industry dominated by the quest for young viewers, industry insiders and experts say.

"Age in itself is no handicap but ignorance and arrogance are — and they are all too prevalent in the TV and motion picture industry," Tom Pryor, former editor of the trade paper Daily Variety, said during a panel discussion.

Bob Hope, Art Linkletter, producer George Schaefer and writer-producer Hal Kanter were among those on hand for a daylong Academy of Television Arts & Sciences conference on age discrimination.

Although the lack of roles for older actors is widely known, statistics were offered showing how difficult it is for those middle-aged and older to find work behind the camera as well.

In 1991, three-fifths of TV writers were 30 to 45, said William Bielby, a University of California, Santa Barbara sociology professor who surveyed industry employment practices.

In 1982, writers in their 50s were the best paid; in 1990, writers in their 30s were making the most money, Bielby told the conference.

The 81-year-old Linkletter, long a television fixture as a host of such shows as "People Are Funny," said in an interview he was heartened that ageism was being discussed.

"But being a little cynical, I wonder if the right people are listening. This is like Republicans talking to Republicans," he said, glancing around an auditorium filled with many older people.

Clemens out

BOSTON — Roger Clemens, 11-14 this season for Boston, had his right elbow examined by team physician Dr. Arthur Pappas Saturday and will probably miss the last week of the season.

Pappas "recommended that Clemens not pitch the remainder of the 1993 season," according to a release issued by the Red Sox during the game against the Minnesota Twins.

The release said the "right elbow has improved but there is still sensitivity on the inner side of the elbow."

Ducks win

SAN DIEGO — Joe Sacco scored two goals to lead the Mighty Ducks of Anaheim to a 5-1 victory in an exhibition game with the minor league San Diego Gulls.

Anatoli Semenov gave the Ducks a 1-0 lead in the second period.

The Ducks, who outshot the Gulls 50-24 in the game and 24-8 in the second period, increased their lead to 2-0 when Sacco scored on a power play later in the period.

The Ducks have a three-year working agreement with the Gulls, a member of the International Hockey League.

WACO — The Baylor Bears keep life exciting for new coach Chuck Reedy.

For the third time this season, the Bears won a game late in the fourth quarter Saturday.

Tailback John Henry scored two fourth quarter touchdowns and defensive Lamone Alexander produced a critical turnover as the Bears outlasted the Texas Tech Red Raiders 28-26 in Southwest Conference opener for both teams.

■ SWC/6B

"The fourth quarter rallies sure keeps your heart beating fast," said Reedy. "I just told the team if we can stay within two touchdowns going into the fourth period we can win."

The Bears did and they won.

"Don't put us in the Cotton Bowl yet but I like the way this team hangs in games," Reedy said. "We get the lead in games when it counts — at the end."

Baylor improved to 3-1 for the season and Tech dropped to 1-2 in the game played in 90-degree heat before 32,690 in Floyd Casey Stadium.

Baylor also has used fourth period rallies to beat Fresno State 42-39 and Utah State 28-24.

Tech coach Spike Dykes said turnovers killed the Raiders.

"We kind of shot ourselves in the foot," Dykes said. "We couldn't make the big play when we needed to make it. We lost the ball three times and it hurt us every time we did."

Henry scored on runs of three and four yards, the latter being the game-winner on fourth-and-2 with 9:14 to play.

Tech quarterback Robert Hall, who hit 15 of 24 passes for 250 yards and two touchdowns, took Tech to the Bears 18-yard line with Baylor clinging to the two-point lead.

On 2nd-and-11, Hall was hit from behind by Alexander and Charles Horton recovered the fumble with 5:38 left, and the Bears ran out the clock.

"The play Alexander made was big," said Horton. "Hall tried to move up in the pocket and a saw the ball get knocked loose. I was in the right place at the right time."

MHS spikers beat Odessa

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff writer

The Midland High volleyball team was faced with an ominous situation — two 6-foot-plus hitters from Odessa High — Saturday afternoon in the Midland gym.

But instead of trying to go through the brick wall that Odessa's Donelle Jones and Terri Butler built at the net, the Lady Bulldogs just waited until the brick wall had rotated to the back line.

Midland senior Michel Ann Thompson took advantage of the rotation and served six straight points, including two aces, to give the Lady Bulldogs their first District 4-5A volleyball win of the season. Midland defeated the visiting Lady Bronchos 15-10, 7-15, 15-9 and improved to 1-3 in district play and 6-13 overall. Odessa fell to 2-3 and 7-10.

Michigan holds off pesky 'Cougs

■ Three Cougar turnovers result into 21 first half points for the eighth-ranked Wolverines.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Tyrone Wheatley rushed for 171 yards and three touchdowns as No. 8 Michigan punched out a 42-21 victory over mistake-plagued Houston on Saturday.

The Wolverines (2-1), who won 61-7 a year ago, jumped out to a 28-0 second-quarter lead against the Cougars (0-3). Wheatley, who ran 26 times and also caught two passes for 13 yards, scored on runs of 25, 5 and 9 yards.

Houston eventually closed within 35-21, but the Wolverines responded with an 87-yard, eight-play drive in the fourth quarter for the final score.

Lamar Smith carried 20 times for 119 yards and scored all three touchdowns for Houston. He scored on a 30-yard run in the second quarter and caught TD passes of 1 and 3 yards from Chuck Clements in the second half.

Clements, subbing for injured Jimmy Klingler, completed 25

Americans stay close to Europeans in Ryder Cup

By Bob Green

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England — John Cook and Chip Beck led a rally that pulled the United States team within one point of Europe going into today's final 12 singles matches in the Ryder Cup.

Cook and Beck, who did not play during the first three series of matches, defeated Europe's strongest team, Nick Faldo and Colin Montgomerie, 2 up, as the Americans won three of four afternoon fourball matches.

The Europeans, however, also were 3-1 in the morning foursomes and will take an 8½-7½ lead into today's decisive singles.

The United States, defending the old Cup won in the last biennial matches at Kiawah Island, S.C., in 1991, was three points down going into the four fourball matches in which scoring is based on the better ball of each two-man team.

Corey Pavin, given a new partner in Jim Gallagher, was the first to take charge in a match against Mark James of England and Costantino Rocca of Italy.

Pavin gave the Americans a quick lead with birdies on the second and fourth holes, then all but settled the match with a 9-iron second shot from 141 yards on the fifth.

With the ball in the air, Pavin began yelling, "Go in. Go in."

The ball obeyed.

It went in on the fly for an eagle-2 and a 3-up American lead. The Europeans never were in it the rest of the way, eventually losing 5 and 4.

Europe, however, had a secret weapon of its own, 25-year-old Peter Baker of

Brett ends royal career

By Craig Horst
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — George Brett, one of the most prolific hitters of all time, said today he would retire after 20 seasons with the Kansas City Royals.

"I have accomplished more in my playing days than I ever thought I would," a teary Brett said at a news conference at Kauffman Stadium. "The one thing that I'm proud of most, and I say this sincerely, is spending my whole career with one team.

Brett

"My baseball career is not ending, it's just taking a different direction."

Brett will become vice president of baseball operations for the Royals, general manager Herk Robinson said.

Brett, who joins Nolan Ryan as a longtime veteran finishing a glorious career this year, debated a long time last winter before deciding to play in 1993, the option year of a five-year contract.

His power numbers this year — 17 homers and 68 RBIs — had tempted him to play a 21st season, although his average had hovered in the .260s all season. He went into today's game against California batting .270.

Brett goes out as a career .307 hitter and a certain Hall of Famer.

He is one of four players in the history of baseball to get 3,000 hits, 300 home runs and 200 stolen bases. The others are Willie Mays, Henry Aaron and Dave Winfield.

His 3,000th hit came in the final week of last season at Anaheim before a gathering of family and friends.

"He's an amazing guy," said John Wathan, who played with and managed Brett and now is a coach with the California Angels.

"He's the type of guy you wish could play forever."

Slowpitch with northern exposure

By Mike Butts
Staff writer

Texas may have more teams than any other state in this weekend's ASA National Men's Slowpitch Softball Tournament. But softball is played in Michigan just about as well as any place else in the country.

Or at least, so says Cliff Keen Athletic's catcher Frank Shimones. And Shimones and his mates, from Ann Arbor, Mich., are out to prove to the rest of the softball world that the game does not suffer from a lack of northern exposure.

"We came down here with every intention of winning the whole thing," Shimones said after his team held on to beat Flight (Colorado Springs, Co.) 13-8 in a winner's bracket quarterfinal Saturday night at the Bill Williams Softball Complex. Shimones said Cliff Keen was 50-4 coming into the tournament and that he believes Michigan is the third highest rated region in the U.S. for Class C softball.

Other winner's bracket quarterfinal winners Saturday were A.C.I. Express, 24-10, over Dovex and Pepco, 9-5, over Harlow Brothers Lumber. Play was suspended Saturday because of heavy fog. Today's games begin at 7:45 a.m. with the winner's bracket final at 10:20 a.m. and the championship at 1:50 p.m. An if game will be played at 3:00 p.m. if needed.

Cliff Keen posted a 7-1 lead over Flight in the third inning. But the team from Colorado battled back to close within 10-8 in the sixth. Keen got a big double play to end the sixth inning and cut off a Flight rally.

"That was a huge (win)," Shimones said. "Anything to get you into the round of four. We've got one more win to get us into the championship of the winner's bracket which is at least (a number finish) in the nation."

The tournament had to postpone 17 games Friday night because of rain. Seventy-four games scheduled for Saturday beginning at 7:45 a.m. All four Midland teams — Rangers, Texas Drill-

BULLDOGS: MHS captures first district win

From 1B

Around the district, Midland Lee defeated Odessa Permian 15-13, 15-13 to continue its winning streak and move into third place in the district standings. League-leading San Angelo Central improved to 4-0 after blitzing Abilene High 15-0, 15-6. Abilene Cooper, currently in second, was open.

Midland travels to San Angelo Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. while Lee is open. Abilene High plays at Odessa while Permian travels to Cooper.

Jones, a 6-1 junior hitter, and Butler, a 6-0 sophomore hitter, wrecked havoc on the Midland defense when the two hitters were on the front row. The duo together made for strong defense against any Midland offensive attack and provided some excellent offense of their own. But when the rotation changed, the brick wall was now more and Odessa became a defensive team with little emphasis on net play.

That's when Thompson struck.

With the score tied 9-9 in the third game, Thompson served her fifth ace of the match to start Midland's run. An Odessa receiving error on the next serve gave Midland an 11-9 advantage. Then a big double block by Toya Zachery and Stephanie Pirkle and another by Zachery and Elaine Salgado stopped two Odessa attacks and gave Midland game point at 14-9.

Thompson then finished the match with her sixth ace.

"They changed their rotation so I knew that there would be a time when they (Jones and Butler) were not on the front line," Thompson said. "Jodie (Strain) and I both had a chance to serve when they were off the net and I knew I had to do everything I could to serve the ball well."

After dominating the net in game two, the Odessa offense seemed to find its groove in the third, taking a 7-4 lead on a block by Jones and a kill by Butler. However, serving again took the sting out of Odessa's attack.

Pirkle served two consecutive aces and Thompson finished a rally with a kill to pull Midland even at 7-7. Butler got another kill to give Odessa a 8-9 advantage but after Jones and Salgado rotated to the back, Butler finished her last rotation on the front line.

"On their last time out I called the team off the court and told them to look what they had on the net and what we had," Midland coach Sonja Pittman said of the alignment. "I told them this is an opportune time for us."

After winning the first game, Midland took a 7-4 lead in the second. But the luck of the rotation was about to pay off for Odessa.

With Jones on the front line, the Lady Bronchos ripped off six straight points which included a kill and a block by Jones along with two kills from senior hitter Marissa Sandoval. The serving of senior Velma Reyes also helped get the Odessa offense going.

Serving underhanded, instead of the usually preferred overhand style, Reyes kept the Midland defense jumping with several floater serves, including one ace, that were hard to read. With the run, Odessa took a 10-7 lead.

Then Jones was joined on the front by Butler on the next rotation and Odessa got one kill each from Sandoval, Butler and Jones in moving to a 13-7 advantage. A big kill by Butler and a huge double block by Butler and Cortice Nave gave Odessa the second game win.

"I think Odessa High has a lot of weapons and they certainly have the best height in the district," Pittman said.

"But we got some great defensive play against their hitters," Pittman continued. "Toya Zachery did some good things on defense and Casi Madison did a goot job of running the court and setting. And Elaine Salgado made some exceptional plays."

The Midland junior varsity held on for a barn-burner win, coming back to beat Odessa 13-15, 15-13, 15-13. The JV record is 16-3. Sara Pritchett scored 12 points from the serving line while Jennifer Allen led the team in kills and provided strong defensive play.

The Lee junior varsity fell to Permian 15-4, 15-13.

Patterson retains super bantom weight title

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — Tracy Harris Patterson, fighting in front of his hometown crowd, defended his WBC super bantamweight title Saturday, stopping Daniel Zaragoza of Mexico in the seventh round.

Patterson, the adopted son of former two-time world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson, had his third title defense when ring physician Dr. David Schwalb stopped the fight with 53 seconds left in the round.

He ruled a cut over Zaragoza's left eye was impairing the vision of the former three-time world champion.

The Zaragoza camp claimed a head butt in the sixth round caused the cut. Patterson's camp said it resulted from an accumulation of blows, particularly a sharp right hand at the end of the sixth round.

Patterson's victory avenged a 12-round draw with Zaragoza last December in France.

No. 3 Miami survives furious Colorado rally

Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. — Third-ranked Miami lived up to its reputation Saturday against No. 13 Colorado. That was good news and bad news for the Hurricanes.

Miami survived a furious rally to beat the Buffaloes 35-29, but the victory was overshadowed by an ugly, bench-clearing brawl that resulted in the ejection of 12 players near the end of the first half.

It was the fifth major fight involving Miami in the last five years. Coach Dennis Erickson and school officials have tried hard to improve the team's bad-boy image, but Saturday's melee will hurt their efforts even though it was hard to tell who started this free-for-all.

Frank Costa threw two TD passes and Donnell Bennett rushed for two scores as Miami (3-0) won its 30th consecutive regular-season game and handed Colorado (2-2) its second straight loss for the first time in seven years.

Miami took a 35-15 lead on a 26-yard TD run by James Stewart with 8:50 left in the game, but Colorado scored twice in a 90-second span, pulling to 35-29 on James Hill's 5-yard TD run with 5:04 remaining.

No. 2 Alabama 56, La Tech 3

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Sherman Williams ran for three touchdowns and David Palmer grabbed Brian Burgdorf passes for two more as No. 2 Alabama overpowered Louisiana Tech.

The Crimson Tide (4-0) extended the nation's longest winning streak to 27 games, while Tech (0-3) once again failed to score its first touchdown of the season. The Bulldogs have been outscored 140-6.

Quarterback Jay Barker got his 21st straight victory as a starter but came out for good late in the first quarter. After that, Burgdorf and freshman Freddie Kitchens directed an offense that virtually moved the ball at will.

Alabama's defense held Tech to 131 yards and outscored the Bulldogs. Chris Donnelly picked off Aaron Ferguson's pass intended for Chad Mackey and returned it 70 yards for a touchdown.

The day was all downhill for the outmatched Bulldogs after the opening kickoff.

No. 4 Notre Dame 17, Purdue 0

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Purdue finally proved it can play with Notre Dame. The Boilermakers still must show they can beat their intrastate rivals.

Defensive end Brian Hamilton returned a fumble 28 yards for a touchdown to break a scoreless tie in the third quarter as No. 4 Notre Dame beat Purdue in a rain-soaked game.

The Irish (4-0) wore down the Boilermakers (1-2) in the fourth quarter, scoring 10 points in the final four minutes on Kevin Pendergast's 34-yard field goal and a 1-yard run by freshman Marc Edwards.

It was Notre Dame's eighth straight win in the 97-year-old series, and its second consecutive shutout.

No. 6 Nebraska 48, Colorado St. 13

LINCOLN, Neb. — Tommie Frazier passed for two touchdowns and ran for one, sparking injury-riddled and sixth-ranked Nebraska to a victory over Colorado State.

The Cornhuskers (4-0) entered the game with a long list of walking wounded, but the injuries appeared to have little impact on the game. Nebraska, which had a 43-0 halftime lead in a 71-14 victory over the Rams two years ago, had a 28-3 halftime advantage this time.

Frazier, a sophomore, ran 11 times for 75 yards and was 7-of-13 for 79 yards.

Toby Wright put the Huskers on the board before the game was a minute old with a 32-yard interception return off Anthoney Hill.

No. 9 Penn St. 31, Rutgers 7

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Kerry Collins, who got the quarterback job when John Sacca was pulled last week, threw four touchdown passes as ninth-ranked Penn State beat Rutgers.

Collins, who took over last week against Iowa when Sacca was ineffective, was 18-of-25 for 222 yards.

Sacca, who threatened to quit the team, came in with 8½ minutes left to a smattering of applause from the 25,000 or so rain-soaked fans who remained from a Beaver Stadium crowd of 92,000.

Much of the crowd left at halftime after Penn State (4-0) had built a 17-0 lead.

No. 10 Oklahoma 41, Tulsa 20

NORMAN, Okla. — Cale Gundy threw three touchdown passes and No. 10 Oklahoma used a blocked punt and a fumble recovery late in the game to finally break away and beat Tulsa.

The Sooners (3-0), coming off a 44-14 victory of then-No. 5 Texas A&M, found themselves in a 20-20 tie in the third quarter before pulling away. Tulsa (1-3) outgained Oklahoma through three quarters but was undone by mistakes.

Gundy's third touchdown pass, a 2-yarder to fullback Terry Collier, gave the Sooners a 27-20 lead with 4:26 left in the third quarter.

No. 11 Tennessee 42, LSU 20

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Heath Shuler threw three touchdown passes and his brother, Benji, caught one as No. 11 Tennessee rolled past LSU in a Southeastern Conference game.

Shuler threw TD passes of 8 yards to Cory Fleming, 11 yards to Billy Williams and 24 yards to Craig Faulkner as the Vols (3-1, 2-1 SEC) scored on four straight possessions around the halftime break to take control. LSU fell to 1-3, 1-2 in the SEC.

Shuler played just two series in the second half and finished the day 13-of-19 for 166 yards.

Tennessee also got short touchdown runs from James "Little Man" Stewart and Aaron Hayden. Benjie Shuler scored on a 9-yard pass from Jerry Colquitt.

Tennesee led 42-6 before LSU's Jamie Howard threw two touchdown passes to Brett Bech in the fourth quarter.

No. 12 Syracuse 24, Cincinnati 21

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Marvin Graves shook off two costly fumbles and led an 18-point rally in the final 9:46 as No. 12 Syracuse survived a scare from Cincinnati.

David Small's third short touchdown run of the game gave Cincinnati (2-2) a 21-6 lead early in the final period, but Syracuse (3-0-1) roared back on offense and defense.

The Orangemen had talked of venting their frustrations from last week's 21-21 tie against Texas, but turnovers, penalties and a surprisingly tough Cincinnati defense stymied Syracuse most of the night.

No. 15 Arizona 33, Oregon St. 0

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Ontiwaun Carter rushed for a career-high 165 yards and Arizona's powerful defense dominated Oregon State as the 15th-ranked Wildcats opened their Pac-10 season with a victory over the Beavers.

Dan White threw for two scores for the Wildcats (4-0), who broke the game open with two touchdowns in the first 3½ minutes of the second half.

Oregon State never made it past the Arizona 35 yard line and their wishbone offense managed just 62 yards in 47 carries. Arizona's defense, ranked first in NCAA Division I, has given up minus 5 yards on the ground all season.

Carter, whose previous career best was 160 yards against Oregon State two years ago, went untouched 79 yards for a score on the first play of the third quarter to put Arizona ahead 19-0.

After holding the Beavers deep in their own territory, the Wildcats scored again on their next possession, White hitting a wide open Cary Taylor on the left sideline on a 40-yard touchdown play.

No. 16 Wash. 35, E. Carolina 0

SEATTLE — Napoleon Kaufman had 142 yards on 25 carries and ran for two touchdowns and the Washington defense did the rest as the No. 16 Huskies beat East Carolina.

The Huskies forced Pirates redshirt freshman quarterback Chris Hester into five turnovers. Andy Mason recovered two fumbles by Hester and David Killpatrick picked off two of his three interceptions.

Washington (2-1) got its first shutout since it defeated Toledo 48-0 Oct. 12, 1991. East Carolina (1-2), playing its first Pacific-10 Conference opponent, was blanked for the first time since losing 17-0 to South Carolina Sept. 17, 1988 — a stretch of 56 games.

Kaufman, a 5-foot-9, 175-pound junior, recorded his sixth career 100-yard rushing game and second this season. He scored from 1 and 3 yards out.

UCLA 28, No. 17 Stanford 25

STANFORD, Calif. — Sharmon Shah ran for 187 yards on a school-record 40 carries and UCLA won its first game of the season, holding off No. 17 Stanford.

Stanford's defense, ranked 104th out of 106 Division I-A schools, was unable to stop the Bruins' ground game, giving up 259 yards rushing, while UCLA (1-2) kept pressure on quarterback Steve Stenstrom all afternoon.

The Cardinal (2-2) committed four turnovers and never led in the second half. Stenstrom, who was sacked five times, completed 22 of 24 passes for 313 yards with one interception.

He threw for three touchdowns, the last a 30-yarder to Justin Armour with 2:16 remaining. Stenstrom found Tony Cline in the end zone for the 2-point conversion, cutting the lead to 28-25.

The Cardinal stopped the Bruins on their next possession but ran out of time on its final drive.

No. 18 North Carolina 35, No. 19 N. Carolina St. 14

RALEIGH, N.C. — No. 18 North Carolina ended a five-game losing streak against No. 19 North Carolina State in a big way, jumping on two Wolfpack turnovers in the second half.

The Tar Heels (4-1, 2-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) came into the game after an emotionally draining 33-7 loss to No. 1 Florida State last week and quarterback Jason Stanicek was questionable until Friday because of a bruised throwing shoulder.

But Stanicek, coming in when Mike Thomas was knocked from the game on the first series, completed 10 of 12 passes in the first half, then ran the option attack with precision.

The Tar Heels were waving fists after scoring 28 unanswered points to crush the Wolfpack (2-1, 1-1).

No. 20 Cal 46, San Jose State 13

BERKELEY, Calif. — Lindsey Chapman scored twice to lead a devastating running attack as No. 20 California rolled over winless San Jose State.

Dave Barr, knocked out of the game briefly by stomach cramps, threw a 22-yard touchdown pass to Mike Caldwell while completing 23-of-28 for 242 yards in helping Cal (4-0) control the ball for 36 minutes, 16 seconds to the Spartans' 23:44.

Jeff Garcia, who entered leading the nation in total offense, could get very little going against a smothering Cal defense as the Spartans (0-4) continued their worst start since 1965.

No. 21 BYU 30, Air Force 3

PROVO, Utah — John Walsh threw three scoring passes, two to record-setting Eric Drage, as the No. 21 Cougars beat Air Force.

Walsh completed 28 of 37 passes for 370 yards and had one interception as BYU improved to 4-0 overall and 3-0 in the Western Athletic Conference.

Drage reached 27 career TD receptions with catches of 6 and 69 yards, erasing Phil Odle's record of 25 set in 1967. Drage's 12 catches for 213 yards also gave him 2,675 career receiving yards, bettering Matt Bellini's 1990 record of 2,635.

Air Force (1-3, 0-3) boasted the nation's third-ranked rushing offense coming into the game, but was held to just 193 ground yards by a BYU defensive unit facing its third option foe in four weeks.

Ranked 100th out of 106 Division 1-A schools against the run, the Cougars surrendered only Chris MacInnis' 52-yard, first-quarter field goal out of four Falcon drives inside the BYU 30 yard line.

No. 22 Virginia 35, Duke 0

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Symmion Willis threw for 246 yards and three touchdowns as No. 22 Virginia rolled to its 500th victory.

The game continued the recent bad blood between the teams, with 10 penalties called on Duke and nine on Virginia. For the first three quarters, the trouble was mostly confined to several personal fouls called on both teams and numerous finger-pointing and shoving incidents. But four players were ejected after Willis' lone interception triggered a benches-clearing brawl early in the fourth quarter.

Willis, the Atlantic Coast Conference passing efficiency leader, did most of his damage in the first half, completing 17 of 21 passes for 186 yards and three scores.

The sophomore, in his first year as a starter, was 24-of-34 and his yardage total was 41 more than his previous best.

No. 23 Wisconsin 27, Indiana 15

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Brent Moss rushed for 198 yards and Darrell Bevell ran for one touchdown and passed for another as No. 23 Wisconsin repeatedly burned Indiana on big plays.

Bevell completed passes of 39, 35 and 42 yards to Lee DeRamus, Moss set up a TD with a 56-yard run and Terrell Fletcher scored on a 57-yard run for the Badgers (4-0, 1-0 Big Ten).

Wisconsin, off to its best start since 1978, took a 20-2 lead at halftime, held off Indiana's third-quarter rally and clinched the game with the 42-yard completion to DeRamus that set up a 4-yard TD pass to Matt Nyquist in the final period.

Indiana (3-1, 0-1), which came in ranked sixth in the nation in total defense, was unable to stop the Badgers on a field soaked by a constant rain.

No. 25 Auburn 35, S. Mississippi 24

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — No. 25 Auburn rebounded from a shocking third-quarter rally by Southern Mississippi and beat the Golden Eagles for the school's best start in five years.

Auburn (4-0) led 21-7 at halftime and appeared to be firmly in control. But Southern Miss, a 15-point underdog, stunned the home crowd of 83,476 by scoring two touchdowns and a field goal in the first nine minutes of the third quarter to go ahead 24-21.

The Tigers began a comeback of their own late in the third period after the Golden Eagles (1-2) punted. The drive started at midfield, and it took only three plays before Stan White hit Thomas Bailey with a 40-yard touchdown pass that put Auburn ahead to stay.

Auburn has not won its first four games since 1988, when the Tigers also began 4-0 en route to a 10-2 season and a share of the Southeastern Conference championship. The Tigers are on probation this season and ineligible for the league title.

Memphis State holds off Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Joe Allison kicked first-half field goals of 37 and 35 yards and Memphis State's offense committed one meaningless turnover as the Tigers defeated Arkansas 6-0.

The Tigers (2-2) had thrown six interceptions and lost four fumbles in their past two games, both losses. Their only turnover against Arkansas was an interception at the Razorback 5.

Arkansas (2-2) started every possession at least 72 yards from the goal and rarely was able to move the ball against a defense that was giving up an average of 432 yards per game. The Razorbacks, who were shut out for the first time since a 14-0 loss to Texas A&M in 1987, finished with 201 yards.

On the other side, Memphis State made at least one first down on eight of its first 10 possessions. The Tigers started from their 11 in the fourth quarter and chewed up almost seven minutes with three first downs, all on running plays. John Martin got the Tigers out of a jam when he made 13 yards on third-and-9 from the Memphis State 3 late in the first half.

The Tigers produced 317 yards.

Allison upped his point production to 217, 1 shy of the Memphis State record set by Dave Casinelli.

His first field goal came after the Tigers put together three first downs; the second after a string of four first downs. Both drives ended when Steve Matthews threw incomplete on second and third down.

Matthews completed two passes to Mac Cody for 28 yards in the first drive. In the second drive, Isaac Bruce made a nice sideline catch for 13 yards on second-and-15 and Cody held onto a 12-yarder on third-and-7.

The Razorbacks, who managed only 36 yards in the first quarter, strung together three first downs in the second quarter. Barry Lunney Jr., who missed on his first five attempts, started the drive when he found Oscar Gray in the flat for 13 yards. The Razorbacks had third-and-7 at the Tigers' 30, but suffered two straight procedure penalties and punted.

Memphis State reached the Arkansas 20 late in the third quarter but Henry Ford and Steven Conley converged for a 12-yard sack of Matthews.

Owls' Edmonds blows past Cyclones

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice running back Byron Coston has been prominent in the Owls' last two games against Iowa State.

Coston's fumble in 1991 sparked an Iowa State rally that beat Rice. He held onto the ball Saturday for three touchdowns as the Owls rolled to a 49-21 victory.

"It really hurt me two years ago," Coston said. "I'm just happy Coach (Fred) Goldsmith gave me the chance to come back prove to myself that what happened two years ago was a fluke."

Coston scored on runs of 1 and 15 yards and caught a 42-yard touchdown pass. He rushed three times for 29 yards and caught three passes for 69 yards.

In the 1991 game, he fumbled with 3:10 left in the game and the Cyclones rallied to a 28-27 victory in the closing seconds.

"I can still remember the date when I fumbled," Coston said. "I read about it in the paper and I remember it well. Today I just wanted to concentrate on whatever I had to do. This is real sweet."

The Owls (3-1) started taking control with 6:02 to go in the third quarter when Bert Emanuel hit Coston for a 42-yard TD and a 28-14 lead. Rice got two more fourth-quarter scores on Coston's 15-yard run and a 5-yard run by Yoncy Edmonds.

Rice's defense contributed to the victory by stopping a fourth down pass early in the fourth quarter. Nathan Bennett's interception stopped Iowa State later in the fourth quarter and set up Edmonds' 5-yard touchdown run.

Rodney Guggenhein scored Iowa State's only second-half TD on a 3-yard run with 4:45 to play. Reserve running back Spencer George scored for the Owls on a 4-yard run with 2:02 left.

"We kept digging holes for ourselves all day," Iowa State coach Jim Walden said. "We kept taking one step forward and two steps back. I think every mistake that we made, they took advantage of."

On his 42-yard catch, Coston was knocked down before the catch and then caught the ball all alone near the 25-yard line and outran two defenders to the goal line.

Emanuel threw a 39-yard touchdown pass to Emerson Allen in the first quarter and directed drives that ended in touchdown runs of nine yards by Yoncy Edmonds and one yard by Byron Coston for a 21-14 halftime lead.

"I feel like our offense is on the rise," Emanuel said. "We've proven we can win without Trevor (Cobb). This gave Coston a chance to redeem himself. That fumble has been haunting him for two years."

Iowa State's Bob Utter ran one yard for a touchdown and completed a 72-yard touchdown pass to Calvin Branch in the second quarter to stay close.

On his 72-yard touchdown, Branch materialized behind Rice cornerback Bobby Dixon and then outran him to the end zone with 2:55 to go in the half for a 14-14 tie.

But Emanuel completed five straight passes, including his 39-yarder to Allen, and he scrambled 23 yards to the Cyclone 1-yard line to set up Coston's touchdown with 44 seconds left in the first half.

BEARS: Baylor wins at the wire

From 1B

The SWC's most explosive offensive teams had trouble finding the end zone in the first half as the Red Raiders claimed a 9-7 lead.

The Raiders jumped ahead 6-0 on a 19-yard scoring pass from Hall to sophomore tight end Jerod Fiebiger, who made the first catch of his career. The extra point was blocked by Scotty Lewis.

Tech made it 9-0 on a 22-yard field goal by John Davis after Hall scrambled 59 yards.

The Red Raiders were driving again but running back Alton Crain fumbled to Malcom Hamilton at the Baylor 36.

The Bears then played beat the clock as they drove 64-yard in six plays with the payoff coming on J.J. Joe's 36-yard touchdown pass to Tyler Junior College transfer Ben Bronson, who made his first scoring reception for Baylor.

Hall hit Roger Corn on a 3-yard scoring pass in the third period but Joe responded with a 44-yard scoring strike to Bronson.

A 44-yard scoring run by the Raiders' Byron Morris, who had 174 yards on 23 carries, and a 21-yard field goal by Davis gave Tech a 26-14 lead.

But Baylor rallied with the two Henry touchdowns. The last one was setup when Loyd Hill fumbled at the end of a 45-yard pass and Chris Lewis recovered. A 24-yard Joe to Bronson pass positioned Baylor for the winning score.

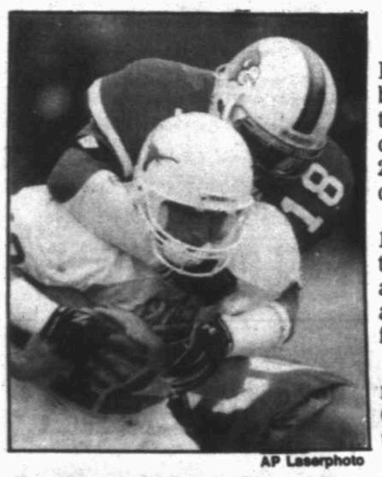
Louisville uses big play to route Texas 41-10



AP Laserphoto

Texas quarterback Shea Morenz is sacked by Louisville defensive back Kevin Gaines in the 'Horn's 41-10 loss.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jeff Brohm connected with running back Ralph Dawkins on an 80-yard touchdown pass on the second play of the game, setting the tone in No. 24 Louisville's 41-10 rout of Texas on Saturday.

Dawkins finished the game with 117 rushing yards and three receptions for 95 yards. Brohm, who had a career-high 331 yards last week against Arizona State, was 14-of-24 for 293 yards.

Running back Anthony Shelman rushed for two touchdowns for the Cardinals (4-0), who are off to their best start in 21 years.

The Cardinals, who gained 560 yards on offense, have been tough to stop this season, especially near the end zone. They are 14 of 17 with 11 touchdowns and three field goals inside the 20.

One of those touchdowns came late in the first quarter. Dawkins ran 24 yards to set up Louisville's second score, Chris Fitzpatrick's 14 yard run.

Texas (0-2-1), which started freshman Shea Morenz at quarterback, never was close. On their first possession the Longhorns drove to the Cardinals' 33, but Scott Szeredy's 50-yard attempt was wide right.

The Cardinals didn't allow a first down and held Texas to 18 yards in the second quarter. It was Louisville's defense that gave the Cardinals a 24-0 halftime lead.

At the Texas 25, Morenz dropped back to pass but defensive end Joe Johnson tackled him, jarring the football loose.

The Cougars were forced to start their first drive from their own 1 and Michigan started its first series from Houston's 35. Relying solely on Wheatley, Michigan went 35 yards in four plays for a 7-0 lead.

On their next possession, the Cougars drove 77 yards to the Michigan 8 but botched a field goal snap.

Flanigan passes for two TDs to lead SMU

FORT WORTH (AP) — Redshirt freshman Ramon Flanigan passed for two touchdowns and scored another as Southern Methodist beat Texas Christian 21-15.

Nursing a 7-6 halftime lead, the Mustangs struck through the air for two quick third-quarter scores and used two timely interceptions to record their first victory in three outings.

The Horned Frogs (1-2) got their offense untracked too late and suffered their second straight embarrassment at the hands of their longtime church rivals.

A year ago, SMU ended a 25-game SWC losing streak at TCU's expense.

Flanigan threw scoring passes of 4 yards to running back Kevin Shepard and 43 yards to wide receiver Brian Berry for a 21-6 third-quarter lead.

The 6-foot-1, 170-pound quarterback ran 50 yards to set up that first touchdown and then tossed a perfect pass to Berry at the 2-yard line to cap an 85-yard scoring drive.

Texas Christian quarterback Max Knake drove the Frogs 91 yards in 13 plays for a fourth-quarter touchdown, covering the final 16 yards with a pass to flanker Richard Woodley.

But a pass for a critical 2-point conversion was rushed by a swarming defense and fell incomplete.

With five minutes left, TCU got the ball at its own 20 and rode Knake's passing on a long-distance drive that ended with a 27-yard field goal by Kevin Cordesman, his third of the game.

But SMU recovered the on-sides kick with under two minutes remaining and ran out the clock.

The Mustangs torpedoed an early scoring threat when cornerback Michael Artmore intercepted Knake at the 14. SMU free safety Richie Butler stole another pass at the Pony 21 in the third quarter.

SMU moved only 33 yards for its first touchdown after a 61-yard punt by Larry Israel put the Frogs in a hole.

Case passes for four TDs in win

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Quarterback Stoney Case feasted on his favorite defense with four touchdown passes and New Mexico found another offensive weapon in redshirt freshman halfback Abe Ghoston in a 42-7 win Saturday over rival New Mexico State.

The win was the first for New Mexico (1-3) this season and 21st over the Aggies (2-2) in the last 25 meetings between the two teams in the series that began in 1894.

Case, who had four touchdown passes against New Mexico State last year in a 42-39 loss, teamed up with wide receiver Turhon O'Bannon on scoring throws of 30 and 8 yards. Case also found tight ends Chris Griffin and David Sloan on passes of 14 and 7 yards and also scored on a 3-yard run off the option.

SOFTBALL: Tourney ends today

er, The S.W.A.T. Team and Young's Auto-Building System — were eliminated from the competition by Saturday. Young won two games before bowing out in the double-elimination tourney.

Keen got four runs in the first inning of their game with Flight. Braina White had a run-scoring double and John Hindle hit a sacrifice for another run. Mel Edmundson and Tom Dishman also had RBIs in the frame.

"We've had a lot of adversity," Shimones said. "Our fourth batter got hit in the face in the last game and broke his nose. Our third baseman has a bad back and our short stop has a bad leg."

A.C.I., out of Baltimore, exploded for 11 runs in the sixth inning of their win to end the game on the 12-run rule.

In a losers' bracket game Saturday, Al' Guttering-Tom's Body Shop (Fredericksburg, Va.) drubbed Club Cadillac 20-1 in five innings. Al's assistant coach Skeeter Lutes said all three teams from Virginia made it to the final 16. He said this is the second trip he's made to Texas for a national softball tournament. His team has been together two years and won the Virginia championship both years.

"It (the tournament) has been an adventure," Lutes said. "This is a good facility down here and everybody should be commended."

Dallas receivers Harper, Irvin hope to team up for pair of NFL titles

By Mike Fisher
N.Y. Times News Service

IRVING — In their desire for what might be called "self-statisfaction," Michael Irvin and Alvin Harper are looking forward to competing against each other.

But they should look backward, too. Because as wideouts from the same team each hoping to win 1993 National Football League crowns (one for receptions, one for receiving yards), the Dallas Cowboys' Irvin and Harper are also competing with the New York Jets' George Sauer and Don Maynard, the only pair of same-team wide receivers in the 60-year history of the NFL to ever capture the dual titles.

In fact, Sauer and Maynard are joined by the San Diego Chargers' John Jefferson and Kellen Winslow (a tight end) as the only teammates to ever win the two receiving titles in the same year.

In the 32-year history of the Cowboys — a history featuring standouts from Bill Howton and Frank Clarke to Bob Hayes and Lance Rentzel to Drew Pearson and Tony Hill — only three pairs of wide receivers have captured the team leaderships in the two categories, something Irvin and Harper certainly have a shot at achieving.

"Leading the team is one thing," Harper said. "Leading the league? I don't see it happening."

Said Irvin: "Alvin's got to quit thinking that way. Now, the problem with two guys from the same team doing anything like that is that there aren't enough balls to go around. But we really could do it. We really might have what it takes to do it."

So far, there have been enough footballs to go around. After three games, Harper is first in the NFL in receiving yardage with 289 yards. Irvin is tied with Atlanta's Andre Rison for the league lead in catches with 20.

Irvin and Harper are not entirely aware of the Sauer-Maynard legacy.

"Who?" Harper said.

"I don't think I remember them," Irvin said.

But the Cowboys receivers are very aware of what the numbers mean.

"Both of us love the game and have fun playing it," said Irvin, a two-time Pro Bowler renowned for his fascination with personal accomplishments. "But when it comes to stats, we both take them very seriously."

And, Irvin added, "Looking at the stats this week, (Harper) is starting to be a pain in my side."

The 6-foot-2, 200-pound Irvin has established himself worthy of mention with the legendary receivers who have come before him. This season, the Cowboys' 1988 No. 1 pick has 277 yards, good for second in the NFL.

The 6-3, 207-pound Harper entered this season with 888 yards (and 55 catches) in his previous two NFL seasons. He's on pace to catch 64 passes for 1,541 yards. As difficult as those numbers might be to achieve, Harper has already elevated his game well above his heralded '92 postseason, when he caught five passes for 203 yards in helping Dallas win two playoff games and the Super Bowl.

Harper, aware of his NFL-best 24.1-yard average per catch, said, "The room for me on this team is to keep that part of it up. The other stat stuff I take with a grain of salt. But it would be nice to keep up the 24-yard thing."

Irvin and Harper would also love to become the first Dallas wideout tandem to earn Pro Bowl berths. Irvin, Bob Hayes, Drew Pearson and Tony Hill have represented the Cowboys in Hawaii but never teamed with their receiving partner.

"If we keep doing what we're doing, everything and anything can happen," Irvin said.

But Irvin and Harper might want to set their sights on Sauer and Maynard — as soon as they figure out who Sauer and Maynard are.

In 1967 Sauer caught a league-high 75 passes for the Jets, and Maynard gained a league-high 1,434 receiving yards. (Sauer added 1,189 yards, Maynard 71 catches). Some traditionalists contend that the American Football League provided inferior competition for Hall of Fame quarterback Joe Namath and his teammates.

But as Irvin said, "Seventy-five catches and 1,400 yards, especially in a 14-game season that they had back then, ain't nothing to laugh at."

There are two other combinations that have challenged history.

In 1980, Winslow and Jefferson were the featured receivers in "Air Coryell." Chargers coach Don Coryell's passing offense, triggered by another Hall of Fame quarterback, Dan Fouts, allowed Jefferson 1,340 yards (on 82 catches) and Winslow 89 catches (with 1,290 yards).

They did combine for the double titles. The asterisk here is that Winslow was a tight end.

In 1990, the Houston Oilers' Run-and-Shoot offense was getting off the ground, with Haywood Jeffires and Drew Hill among the reasons. Each of the receivers caught 74 passes, tying them for the American Conference title. Jeffires' 1,048 yards were also an AFC high.

Jeffires and Hill fell short of matching the feat Irvin and Harper now aim for because San Francisco's Jerry Rice had a monster year in '90, catching 100 passes for 1,502 yards and winning both NFL titles.

Can Irvin and Harper keep up their present pace and make history?

"Jerry Rice makes it difficult for any other receiver to win any title," Irvin said. "Andre Rison makes it difficult. (Green Bay's) Sterling Sharpe makes it difficult. All the guys in Houston, where it's a passing offense, are there to make it difficult. You're talking not only about me keeping a lead over all these guys in receptions, you're also talking about Alvin keeping a lead in yards. It's like two guys getting enough action to beat one guy who might be getting all the action for his team."

Community caring should be united

Midland's citizens enjoy an enviable reputation around the state and nation in regard to their generosity. We are known for our compassion in extending a helping hand to others less fortunate than ourselves. And nowhere has that charitable spirit been more in evidence than in the annual campaign conducted by the United Way of Midland.

Midlanders have helped other residents of the community for years by contributing to United Way's member agencies which, in turn, provide much-needed services to individuals who would otherwise go without help.

The United Way's 1993-94 campaign kicked off last week with a goal of raising $2,604,000 — dollars that will help Midlanders in need receive assistance in the form of medical or dental care, basic education through English As A Second Language classes or simple friendship through such programs as Boy Scouts or Camp Fire.

Providing such assistance is no small task. It takes the work of literally thousands of individuals whose expertise can improve the lives of others through the assessment of needs, coordinating the efforts of campaign workers or telling the United Way story to prospective contributors. Yet it all begins with the United Way volunteers who give their own time and skills to soliciting the funds that provide the relief.

Making the United Way work in Midland — or any community — depends directly on the thousands of people who recognize the needs within that community and who open their hearts and their pocketbooks to helping those people. For years Midlanders have shown time and time again that they recognize the need and that they are willing to help. Due to their assistance, life is annually made better for some 36,000 of our citizens by 16 affiliated agencies.

That's a wonderful testament to the caring spirit of Midlanders. It's a tradition that should be continued this year because it makes a difference in the lives of so many of our own.

Cisneros' HUD 'rescue' leaves echo of jackboots

Something strange here. It's supposed to be neo-Nazi and fascist types who are the bad guys in this Vidor public housing desegregation situation.

So why did Henry Cisneros' ride to the rescue here Tuesday leave the faint echo of jackboots lingering in the air?

The secretary of (U.S. Department of) Housing and Urban Development for the Clinton administration, a certified media superstar, took it upon himself to come down here to this troubled bastion of racial strife and hatred and make everything right.

Cisneros' way of doing this was to implicitly — and very nearly explicitly — characterize all the local officials associated with the Orange County Housing Authority as obstructionist racists, kick them out of office and announce a direct HUD takeover of the authority.

This apparently will be accompanied by the spending of however much money is needed to turn the Vidor public housing complex into state-of-the-art middle-class apartments that anyone would want to wait in line for.

. . . Cisneros said Tuesday that his office has been studying the Vidor situation for some time. What's pretty clear in the wake of Tuesday's events is that the HUD braintrust studied things with two questions in mind: How do we cover HUD's butt? and How can we make Henry look good?

From this perspective, the visitation was a spectacular success.

From another perspective, that of people who might once have thought that a liberal Texas Democrat now in high office might be interested in justice rather than headlines, it was a severe disappointment. More precisely, a hard slap in the face.

Economic revival depends on more than NAFTA, cuts

The U.S. economy dominated the news and the presidential elections last year. Although progress has been marginal at best, the issue seems to have faded from the consciousness of Americans.

President Clinton has promised that his deficit reduction plans, coupled with passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement, will give new impetus to the economy. He may be right, but economic revival hinges on more than a trade pact with Mexico and Canada and a trimming of government spending.

— Austin American-Statesman

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Sept. 26, the 269th day of 1993. There are 96 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 26, 1789, Thomas Jefferson was appointed America's first Secretary of State; John Jay the first chief justice of the United States; Samuel Osgood the first Postmaster-General; and Edmund Jennings Randolph the first Attorney General.

On this date:

In 1777, British troops occupied Philadelphia during the American Revolution.

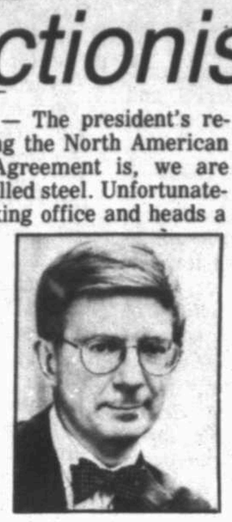
In 1892, John Philip Sousa and his newly formed band performed publicly for the first time, at the Stillman Music Hall in Plainfield, N.J..

In 1914, the Federal Trade Commission was established.

GEORGE WILL

Protectionists should study history

WASHINGTON — The president's resolve regarding the North American Free Trade Agreement is, we are told, at long last like chilled steel. Unfortunately, he occupies a shrinking office and heads a cringing party in a nation displaying a contradiction of modern capitalism.



Will

The man who ran for president chanting "change" as a mantra and lamenting the "gridlock" of divided government finds NAFTA in jeopardy because there are too few Republicans in Congress and too many Democrats afraid of change.

The post-Cold War deflation of the presidency was predictable. What is astonishing is the marginalization of the office when it is occupied by a Democrat and the legislative branch is controlled by Democrats. Congress passed his budget package, but just barely. Now neither personal affection nor political calculation inclines congressional Democrats to do anything else for him.

Sen. Bill Bradley exaggerates when comparing NAFTA's importance to the Louisiana Purchase, but he rightly says it probably is the most important foreign policy measure of Clinton's term. Yet the Democratic majority leader and the whip in the House are opposing NAFTA. Try to imagine two such Democrats in 1965 doing something like that to Lyndon Johnson and living to tell about it.

Members of Congress think about jobs — theirs — constantly, and they believe this: The pains of NAFTA may be actual at a point when the gains may still be merely hypothetical. That is, jobs lost because of NAFTA may be more conspicuous and easy for an opponent to point to than jobs that did not exist until created by forces unleashed by NAFTA.

Furthermore, NAFTA is jeopardized by a change in the political culture described by Clive Crook, deputy editor of The Economist. He says capitalism is afflicted by a "contradiction" quite unlike the chimeric contradictions Marx imagined.

Social change and economic growth are linked. But developed democratic societies are deeply ambivalent, fearing change almost as much as they desire rapid growth.

Democratic governments are held responsible, Crook notes, for any process that produces casualties, as economic dynamism invariably does. Furthermore, as capitalism makes nations increasingly wealthy, those nations become decreasingly tolerant of the discomforts of change. They crave stability. Therefore, the coming of capitalism to underdeveloped countries, by generating competitive pressures on developed nations, diminishes those nations' support for liberal trade policies.

Chris Patten, governor of Hong Kong, writing in the same edition of The Economist, issues a relevant warning:

"A Martian visitor traveling from the mud and disease of Tudor London via the tepee settlements of North America to the Ming mandarinate of 16th-century Beijing would have guessed without a millisecond's hesitation that China would lead the world for centuries to come. Where Europe was made up of warring cities and domains, China had an efficient government to preside over a sprawling but united country. China knew the power of the pen and the sword; it had invented both printing and gunpowder. It had invented the compass, too.

But it did not work out like that. The Martian got it wrong. The Middle Kingdom retreated behind its great wall, and history told a different tale."

Protectionists, frightened by a Mexican economy one-twentieth the size of ours, and anxious to cower behind tariff walls, should study history's stories of vanished supremacies.

RUSSELL BAKER

Does diversity really equal competence?

Everybody talks about diversity, but what do we know about it except that it's good? That's why President Clinton wants a government made up of people as diverse as America. A government as diverse as all America would be good: so runs the season's wisdom.

Baker

Yet how many know that one of the early advocates of diversity in government was mocked and ridiculed, especially by progressive people, for speaking out in favor of this principle now so widely admired, especially by progressive people?

I refer to Sen. Roman L. Hruska, a Nebraska Republican during the Nixon administration. When President Nixon nominated Judge G. Harrold Carswell to the Supreme Court, liberal Democrats objected that, among other things, Carswell was too "mediocre" to deserve a seat on the highest court.

Hruska titillated all humanity by asking why mediocrity should be a disqualification for high government position. In a nation that cherished "the average man" — another way of saying "human mediocrity" — mediocre people were entitled to have one of their own on the Court, he argued.

Poor Hruska. The hoots and jeers of all good people — as good people were defined in that blighted America of a generation ago — were deafening. Such is the fate of all who are right too soon. (Carswell's nomination, incidentally, was defeated, and the Supreme Court seat finally went to Harry Blackmun.)

Why doesn't President Clinton try to enrich the diversity of his government by choosing a few mediocre people for high office? It's hard to say. He may assume that many among the diverse variety he has appointed will, without much fuss, just naturally contribute mediocrity galore.

That's what usually happens among most presidents' appointees, so maybe Clinton thinks, "Why waste energy making a house-to-house search for appointees mediocre enough to be role models for every C student between Hawaii and West Musquash, Maine?"

Still, by making no showoff effort to install a single mediocrity in his official family, the president leaves himself open to the suspicion that he still clings to the discredited belief in "excellence."

The worship of "excellence" began even before Hruska was humiliated for urging diversity in government. It was an idea sold by Adm. Hyman Rickover after Soviet science put a satellite in Earth orbit ahead of the United States. Rickover, famous for promoting the nuclear submarine, poured it on American education for graduating a lot of ninnies and goaded everyone to pursue "excellence." That's why it's been practically impossible ever since to survive the day without hearing somebody talk about "excellence."

In the three decades since Rickover quite sensibly urged our educators to march under the banner of "Excellence!" public education has . . . Well, never mind that, we're not talking calamity today, just diversity. About education, simply note that it reached its present condition while being inspired by three decades of public oratory about the nation's solemn devotion to "excellence."

Had Clinton made a conscious effort to include mediocrity in his diverse government, civilized people would surely sleep a little better. It might have been a signal that somebody in power finally recognized that we were deceiving ourselves all those years by paying lip service to "excellence" while the kids were buying pistols for the schoolroom.

"Diversity," alas, has the faintly false ring of another fashionable cant word. Can it be just another, more up-to-date way of saying "excellence"?

"Diversity" — the word invites us to suppose that by searching the full American spectrum for government talent, the president has picked from a richer pool than his predecessors. In short, that there will be more "excellence" than ever.

Here in the ruins of several institutions that once worked at least passably well, maybe we are justified in wondering if Rickover wasn't wrong from the outset about excellence. Excellence can be brutally hard to achieve for all but the blessed few. Maybe it wasn't excellence the country needed. Maybe it was just competence.

Imagine listening to baseball game at opera

A number of my uncultured friends have been giving me the business about attending the opera recently, the same evening of a Braves-Giants baseball game the sportswriters called the most important regular season Atlanta game since the beginning of time.

Naturally, I have not allowed this criticism to bother me. I would not have thought of missing the opening of the Atlanta Opera Company's "La Boheme" for something as pedestrian as a baseball game.

Besides, I couldn't get tickets to the ball game. A couple of $48 back-row seats for "La Boheme" were a cinch.

"The game was on TV," said my friends, who think opera is for people who call spaghetti pasta.

I even had to drag my lovely fiance, Deidre, to the performance. She wanted to stay home and read the latest John Grisham legal novel, "The Bill."

"You'll love the opera," I said. " 'La Boheme' is very romantic."

"That's what you said about the Citrus Bowl," she argued.

Some people, like me, are born to culture. Others have it thrust upon them. That's what Richard Gere said to Julia Roberts, by the way, when he took her to see the opera in "Pretty Woman," where she wet her britches. I mean, she liked it better than "Rags to Riches." (Ed. note: A TV comedy/ drama series that ran from Mar. '87 to Sept. '88.)

"Le Boheme" is about a sick girl who dies. She coughs a lot in the first three acts and then dies in the fourth.

The thing about opera, however, is a cough can last 15 minutes.

This wasn't my first opera. I attended the opera once in Vienna. That opera was about everybody wanting to go to bed with the plump chambermaid.

There were differences between the Vienna opera and the Atlanta opera.

In Vienna the hall wasn't air conditioned. The plump chambermaid looked like she'd been through two IRS audits by the end of the performance.l

It was quite comfortable, however, in Atlanta's Symphony Hall. Put on an opera in Atlanta in early September in a building that isn't air conditioned and the joint would smell like Ron Gant's socks after a doubleheader.

What else was different was there was a screen above the stage in Atlanta that offered English subtitles. That's how I learned an operatic cough could last 15 minutes.

A man sang and sang and sang to the sick girl. The screen flashed what he said in English, which came out, "You OK?"

She replied for 15 minutes, hitting notes that could have thrown Delta flights landing at Hartsfield off course, and, at the end, the screen flashed "Haaaaack!"

To be perfectly honest about it, I was a bit embarrassed for my hometown. I thought showing English subtitles at the opera was saying to us, "We know you rubes have no idea what's going on here, so we'll make it easy for you."

I, of course, didn't need them.

In the "Godfather," for instance, somebody rambled on for 15 minutes in Italian, and I knew what he had said was, "Cut off the horse's head and put it in the creep's bed."

Something else embarrassed me, too. There were many Atlanta opera-goers who sat there with plugs in their ears listening to radios.

Just before the sick girl died, a lot of them cheered.

"They shouldn't cheer anybody dying," said Deidre.

"They're not," I said. "I think the Braves just scored."

Imagine people sitting at an opera listening to a baseball game. Especially when they paid $48 to see what amounted to a Vicks commercial.

Chapter appreciates Constitution editorial

On behalf of the Lt. Wm. Brewer and Col. Theunis Dey chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution, I thank you for the help the Reporter-Telegram gave in observing Constitution Week. The coverage of Mark Leaverton's very fine speech on "Religious Freedom: Protected or Prohibited" was greatly appreciated. The editorial covering Constitution Week as well as the bicentennial of the laying of the cornerstone of the U.S. Capitol building was very nice.

I would like to point out one discrepancy. The Constitution of the United States of America was signed on Sept. 17, 1787 — not on Sept. 13 as stated in your editorial.

It was the Daughters of the American Revolution who were responsible for Constitution Week (Sept. 17-23) being recognized by Congress. The commemoration was made official by Public Law 915 in 1956.

Our Constitution is the oldest such document still in active use and remains the only beacon of hope for the oppressed around the world. It is up to each citizen of the U.S. to guard the freedoms protected by the Constitution. We must also be ever alert to the many attempts to subvert the Constitution by placing the rights and privileges left to each individual state under the jurisdiction of the federal government.

Opinion of Outcome Based system is bunk

In response to Brian K. Murphy's opinion of Outcome Based Education, I offer one word — BUNK!

I sincerely hope Murphy remains an independent landman and does not aspire to become an educator. His shortsighted research does not belong in any academic environment. Such drivel is an insult to the well-educated people of this community.

It is scary to think that this committee exists. I hope it never has any impact on any part of my children's education.

County budget pays staff of empty center

Regarding the Sept. 21 edition of the Reporter-Telegram concerning the Midland County budget, our commissioners have made it seem like they've done such a great job with the budget once again, keeping taxes down and the county running on a shoestring. Well let's look at some good hard facts:

For over 11 months the county paid for upkeep and renovations to the Midland County Restitution Center that has been closed to residents (at a cost of over $35,000) just for renovations. And what about the center's fully paid staff for 11 months? It seems our commissioners have an "open door policy for a chosen few even when the money is so tight."

Let's look at another proposal: A regional jail facility here in Midland County. I attended an open meeting on Sept. 13 staged by the "guess who" commissioner's court. As usual the grandstanding on their behalf was grand to say the least. What they failed to tell anyone is that Howard County, 43 miles away, has already made plans to build just such a facility to house the same prisoners. My, how we seem to forget or just ignore these things. I do, however, fully agree Midland County Sheriff's Department needs more beds to house prisoners.

Why couldn't the money used for renovations to an "all but staff"-empty Restitution Center be given to the jail needs, and the salaries for some 25-plus people given to staff for much-needed jailers? I ask just what our great commissioners are going to do next with the Midland County budget? The facts are facts folks, great budget yes — but for who?

National health care will require rationing

Yes, the U.S. does need a national health plan for the general population. For such a plan to succeed three major questions will have to be resolved:

1. How much is the public willing to pay? Cost over the past few years have exploded because of many factors: technology, aging population, legal costs, increased indigent care, expensive drugs, excessive administration and etc.

2. What level of care will be covered by the plan? Modern medicine saves and prolongs many lives but often the quality of life is questionable. How long should a body in a vegetative state be kept alive via feeding tubes?

3. How will the care be allocated to the sick? This is the key to containing the overall cost of any plan. If costs are ever to be contained there will have to be some way to allocate our health care funds so they are much more effective. The only way that this will ever occur is there has to be a system to ration health care. Without some type of rationing the health industry will bankrupt the nation. Canada rations their health care with waiting lists and limiting the availability of high cost procedures. One doesn't hear much about rationing because it means that critical life and death decisions have to be made. Who will make those decisions? Before modern medicine Mother Nature made those decisions.

For a National Health Plan to be effective and affordable the following could be considered:

1. A plan similar to Medicare using the current Medicare administration would cover everyone paying Social Security or income tax. To cover the cost of the new plan there would be additional Social Security withholding or payment with one's income tax. Medicaid patients would receive the same basic coverage.

2. To reduce abuses the insurance would never pay 100 percent and individuals with no claims would receive annually a small refund or added coverage. To make everyone aware of the cost and to relieve our industry of this continually increasing expense, all health insurance costs would be borne directly by the individuals. This expense could be tax deductible by the individuals. Individuals who want additional health insurance would have to purchase that insurance from private insurance companies.

3. The level of care from this basic government plan would be continually adjusted and rationed to keep costs within the collected revenue.

SPEAKING OUT

United Way campaign returns to the 'future'

By Tom Sikes

Sikes

Tom Sikes is 1993-94 campaign chairman of the United Way of Midland. He also is vice president of Eastland Exploration.

It's "Back to the Future" for the United Way of Midland as the 1993-94 campaign gets underway. What does that mean for Midland?

It means going back to the years when the United Way conducted successful campaigns and raised more than the goal. It means raising enough money this year to ensure a brighter future for thousands of Midlanders. That means we need to raise at least $2,604,000.

"What's in it for me? Why should I support United Way?" Those are questions I often get as campaign chairman. Let me give three reasons why I support United Way.

First, the United Way of Midland is an investment in the community.

It is the perfect group for business to support. On-campus after-school child care programs allow adults to work full-time jobs and not worry about where their children are when school is over. Medical and dental programs provided at two agencies act as preventive measures to alleviate the strain on our local health care facilities, and that translates into lower taxes for us. Of the dollars raised for United Way, 99 percent stays in the city of Midland. Every dollar invested in the United Way of Midland improves the quality of life here, and it's a dollar of services your taxes are not having to provide (and is tax-deductible!).

The "English As A Second Language" classes are helping hundreds of Midlanders to get better-paying jobs, and many are going on to college. High school drop-out rates are being addressed through summer reading programs, tutors, and programs involving teachers, parents and children.

Second, the United Way of Midland is very well managed. Total cost to run the United Way is only 12 cents of each dollar raised, approximately half of which goes to campaign costs and the other half to administrative and agency support services. United Way's fiduciary responsibility to the donors is supported by more than 100 volunteers who review local agency programs and budgets. Hours worked by the staff are impossible for all but the most dedicated of workers. When last year's campaign failed to meet its goal, the administrative budget was trimmed and the staff took a cut in pay and benefits.

Third, the United Way of Midland helps people who really need help.

Through Midland Introspective, the United Way conducts community-wide needs assessment surveys to determine where those needs are. The 16 affiliated agencies assist 36,000 Midlanders each year, whether it be a Boy Scout or Camp Fire kid, a parent that needs counseling on how to deal with the children, a battered mother and her children, or a senior citizen that receives a hot meal.

Why should anyone give to United Way? To make a change for the better in someone's life. That's why the organization was founded in 1947 and that's the premise it still follows today.

The future of United Way depends on all of us. Join me in going "Back to the Future."

More babies than soldiers have died

I was deeply moved by the opening ceremony at the "Cemetery of the Innocents" on Sunday evening, Sept. 12. As the storm clouds parted, hundreds arrived and opening comments began. I noticed two middle-aged men dressed in camouflage army jackets walk off, their curiosity satisfied as to what this field of crosses meant. I can only guess as to what they thought this was all about, but likely they were Vietnam veterans wondering if this was a veterans memorial. The rows of crosses do remind me of Arlington Cemetery.

In a way I wish it were a military cemetery. If it were for Vietnam veterans there would only be 58,655 crosses, for the Korean was 54,246 and for World War II 407,316 crosses. For the unborn killed by abortion there would need to be a "Cemetery of the Innocents" made every day of the year — 30,000,000 since 1972, 1,600,000 every year. Every two weeks, there is an aborted child for each and every name on the national Vietnam Memorial. Looking out west across the plains there would be fields of crosses as far as the eye can see to remember the unborn.

Why do we think we can solve women's problems by killing their babies? Can't we love them both?

Ad money could be used in better ways

It is my understanding that the full-page advertisements damning Midland's Planned Parenthood Clinic cost about $2,500 each. They may have been a little less costly if the Reporter-Telegram allowed a non-profit organization discount inasmuch as various churches purchased the advertisements.

If memory serves me, there were about 10 full-page advertisements run, as well as several smaller ones.

That comes to $25,000, plus or minus, spent by good people trying to control other good people.

That kind of money could have done so much towards alleviating the problems contributing to abortion. It could have gone for more effective sex education — whether it be abstinence or contraceptive based — and family planning. It could have paid for pre-natal care for hundreds of poor women. Or it could have been used by the United Way to provide counseling for abused and unwanted children through MHMR. Or it could have even have gone to the Permian Basin Food Bank for people who have too many mouths to feed.

What a waste — $25,000 to mind other people's business! Don't you folks have enough to worry about in your own lives?

Position on pro-life doesn't mean all life

Many of those who would outlaw abortion say they are pro-life. They say that abortion is wrong because human life is sacred and "abortion stops a beating heart." It seems to me that many who adopt this position are, in reality, pro-life for some lives only; they don't seem to realize that their position is not as absolute as they think it is. Many "pro-lifers" are willing to allow abortion in cases of rape and incest; they are willing to allow those beating hearts to be stopped because the fathers were rapists or relatives.

Many "pro-lifers" were strong supporters of the Gulf War; they supported the use of bombs which stopped the beating hearts of Iraqi men, women, children, and soldiers because Saddam annexed Kuwait. Many "pro-lifers" are in favor of capital punishment; they favor allowing lethal injections to stop the beating hearts of criminals because the criminals' crimes were heinous. My point is that those who speak out against abortion because they believe in the sanctity of human life must speak out whenever human lives are taken by other humans.

Abortion is a terrible thing. So is war. So is capital punishment. So is poverty. So is abuse. So are many of the things that happen to people every day. Those who bring their faith to the discussion of abortion also need to bring it to the discussion of other issues which bear on human life. There are many people in our society who have beating hearts but not much else. We keep them alive (or rather, we allow them to live) yet don't speak out against the kinds of injustice which produce poverty, abuse, neglect, and all that empties a human life of meaning. I would like to hear pro-life groups adopt positions on such issues based on the sanctity of human life. I would like to be part of such a pro-life group, but I want no part of a "pro-life" group that sees the sanctity of human life only in the debate over abortion.

Those who would outlaw abortion because they believe human life is sacred need to speak against the many ways human life outside the womb is taken away and devalued or they must justify their stand on abortion on some other ground.

Cemetery represents reality for everyone

I am writing in response to the gentleman who was so appalled that the cemetery memorializing the babies killed each day through abortion would be seen by school children. I am in total agreement that such a graphic display of the horrors of abortion is shocking to all of us, but unfortunately it is the reality of the society we live in. As parents, we are no longer able to shield our children from the things our culture is condoning. It makes me very sad that we have to inform them about such things as condoms, homosexuality, "gays," divorce, promiscuous sex, drugs, and many other subjects that we would rather save for more mature ears. Unfortunately, all we have to do is turn on television or open a magazine and it becomes very apparent that parents must address these issues at younger and younger ages with much sensitivity. All of the issues named above are addressed openly and explicity on a daily basis in our media.

The "Cemetery of the Innocents" sheds light on some of these sensitive issues. It brings up a subject that unfortunately needs to be addressed along with all the others. I think that perhaps what we may be afraid of is that our children will be shocked and express more sensitivity than a "pro-choice" position is comfortable with. Children often see things more clearly than adults. What that little cemetery represents should make us all squirm.

As parents, we all need wisdom from above to talk to our children openly and honestly about what is going on in our society today. Abortion and all that it represents is one of the subjects we can no longer ignore with our children. They are smarter than we think.

Religious freedom can be persecution

Our first settlers came to this new world to escape religious persecution and to practice religion according to God's Will, as they understood it.

Some of us believe it is God's will for us not to prevent conception by the use of contraceptives, while some of us believe it is God's will that we plan our families carefully by the use of those same contraceptives.

When one belief is inflicted upon the person holding the other belief, that is religious persecution!

Some of use believe it is God's will for a woman to be responsible for her own reproductive life, while some believe it is God's will that a woman's reproductive life be controlled by another person's interpretation of that will.

When one belief is inflicted upon the person holding the other belief, that is religious persecution!

Don't forget, folks, your religious freedom is only as safe as you let the other person's be.

Cemetery reminds us 'It's a baby, y'all'

I want to personally express my thanks to the people of this community who have worked so hard to bring us the awesome cemetery on Loop 250. Although I knew that abortion was taking little innocent lives in our country, I had no idea the extent of it until I saw those little white crosses — 4,400 of them — representing the deaths that take place in just ONE DAY in our country.

I was stunned and moved to tears. I was also ashamed that we (me) have stood by and said nothing while this has been going on.

I want to say thank you to the Bethel Methodist Church and all the others involved for bringing me, and hopefully others, to our senses. It truly is a tragedy. They are right — "It's a baby, yall!"

Abuse wrongs don't make abortion right

They still don't get it! As my mama used to say, "Two wrongs don't make a right!" I am referring to the letter and the little ad in Sunday's paper against the "Cemetery of the Innocents." They seem to imply that because there are children being abused, neglected, and starved, that it is OK to kill babies through abortion.

I might remind you that although we have killed off more than 29,000,000 babies since abortion was legalized in 1973, we now have more abused and mistreated children than ever before in our own country, and not one single death has helped feed a starving child in Africa. Two wrongs don't make a right!

I would also remind these people that there are people waiting with open arms to adopt these little babies, including registries of hundreds of families waiting for "special needs babies" such as babies with spina bifida and Down's syndrome. Those crosses do not represent "unwanted babies."

Women need to be shown compassion

It would seem that certain groups are not going to be happy until a woman's body becomes public property and abortion is criminalized.

Your wives, mothers, sisters and daughters will die if you pursue this end!

Mr. Editor, I too, write to you in support of Planned Parenthood and, in particular, the Midland Clinic. Thank God there are people in this wonderful community who can be compassionate to women who must make this decision, for whatever reason.

I salute the brave women and men who operate Midland's Clinic and all Planned Parenthood clinics throughout the world.

Waltrip tries to avoid winless season at Goody's

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip is beginning to talk that talk again — a sign the three-time Winston Cup champion believes he is ready to win a race.

With only six races remaining in 1993, the 46-year-old Waltrip is faced with the possibility of a winless season.

■ Goody's 500

It would be his only one since 1974, with the exception of an injury-shortened year in 1990.

But he has two things going for him in Sunday's Goody's 500 at Martinsville Speedway.

First, Waltrip has won 11 times on the nearly-flat .526-mile Martinsville oval.

Second, his Chevrolet Lumina has been running better in recent weeks than at any time this year, nearly winning last week at Dover, where a controversial late caution flag gave Rusty Wallace the opportunity to gain his second straight victory, while Waltrip finished a respectable third.

"Richmond was good," Waltrip said of the race two weeks ago. "We qualified fourth and finished seventh there. And then at Dover, that reinforced what I thought was about to happen with our team — we were finally finding the right things; the combinations, car-wise, engine-wise and crew-wise.

"If you look at the total picture from Richmond and Dover, it's not just the car or driver, but also the fact we're making fantastic pit stops."

Waltrip, who has earned only five of his 84 career victories since starting his own team in 1991, is embarrassed by the way things have gone most of this season, with only seven top-10 finishes in 24 starts. He is an unaccustomed 16th in the point standings.

"I know I sound confident all the time, maybe overconfident," Waltrip said. "But what I've said all the time is that as a team we have been a lot better than we've looked. Many times we have had a great race car, but something has happened. ... Hopefully, that is changing. We have to get up front more often and run good so people can realize we are a lot better than we were early on.

"It just took longer this year than I ever thought it would to get things going."

Meanwhile, the season points battle has gotten interesting with Wallace slicing into five-time champion Dale Earnhardt's big lead in recent weeks, cutting his margin from 304 points to 181.

Earnhardt, who crashed at Dover, failing to finish for only the second time this season, said, "Racing for the championship is a lot more fun now that Rusty has caught up some."

"We liked having the big points lead, but now we've got a contender," he added. "Rusty is running strong now. His team is in good form. He had a tough time during the middle of the season and we had a tough time last week at Dover. But maybe we won't have a tough time anywhere else for the rest of the season."

Wallace shrugged off Earnhardt's comments, saying, "Earnhardt calls it fun now that I've caught up a bit? I don't know what to call it. I'm not going to pay attention to what anyone else says about it. Our strategy is to pay attention to what we are doing and do our own deal. They don't have to catch us, we have to beat them."

With Ernie Irvan on the pole, Wallace will start fourth, with Waltrip sixth and Earnhardt seventh for the 500-lap event.

Cubans whip American in amateur boxing

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Cuba's experience overcame the youth of the United States on Saturday in an 11-1 amateur boxing romp at the Mississippi Coast Coliseum.

Cuba entered the matchup as the No. 1-ranked Olympic-style team in the world.

"This is the youngest American team to fight Cuba. Our guys are 17-20 year olds and the Cubans are 24, 26 years olds," U.S. coach Al Mitchell said. "In three years from now at the Olympics, we will be 20-23 and they will be 27-29 and slowing down. They brought eight world champions in here."

The United States avoided a shutout when Mark Burse took a split decision over Daniel Regaldo in the 119-pound class.

U.S. heavyweight Derrell Dixon thought he had an argument that he beat Felix Savon, the six-time world champion and 1992 Olympic gold medalist.

The 5-foot-9 Dixon, of Chicago, was at a tremendous height disadvantage to the 6-8 Savon.

Savon thought he won the fight, but thinks Dixon showed some potential.

Giants, Braves stay on pace

■ NL Roundup

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds, out of his September slump, hit two home runs for the sixth time this season as the San Francisco Giants beat the San Diego Padres 3-1 Saturday behind the strong pitching of rookie Salomon Torres.

The Giants have won eight of their last nine games to keep the pressure on first-place Atlanta in the NL West. San Francisco is only one game down in the loss column with eight games left.

Torres (3-3) snapped a personal three-game losing streak and limited the Padres to three singles in eight innings, retiring the last 10 batters he faced. He struck out five and walked six.

Rod Beck worked the ninth for his 43rd save, allowing a home run to Craig Shipley with one out.

Bonds hit solo homers in the second and fourth innings off Andy Ashby (3-10), giving the left fielder 43 homers and 111 RBIs. He has 19 career multiple-homer games.

Bonds had hit only one homer in September before connecting in the Giants' 4-3 victory Friday night on Will Clark's solo homer in the 10th inning.

Torres, who had a 5.71 ERA in three consecutive losses, survived early trouble as San Diego stranded seven runners the first three innings.

The Giants added a run off Wally Whitehurst in the seventh on Kirt Manwaring's leadoff single, Torres' sacrifice and Darren Lewis' one-out single.

Braves 9, Phillies 7

PHILADELPHIA — Atlanta kept its 1½-game lead over San Francisco as Ron Gant's 36th homer capped a three-run eighth inning in the Braves' hard-fought victory over Philadelphia.

The Giants beat San Diego 3-1 to stay one game behind the Braves in the loss column. The win was the 99th of the season for Atlanta, breaking the franchise record set last year.

The first-place Phillies entered the game with a six-game lead over Montreal in the NL East and a magic number of four.

Otis Nixon had three hits and an RBI for the Braves.

With the score 6-6, pinch-hitter Deion Sanders started the rally in the eighth with an infield single off reliever Roger Mason (5-12). Nixon then singled to left field, and when the ball bounced past Pete Incaviglia for an error, the speedy Sanders scored and Nixon went to third.

Jeff Blauser hit a popout to shallow right field and Nixon tagged up and scored on the short sacrifice fly. Gant followed with a line drive over the left-field fence.

Steve Bedrosian (5-2), the fourth of five Braves pitchers, worked one-third of an inning for the victory. Greg McMichael pitched two innings for his 16th save, allowing a run in the ninth on a wild pitch with Dave Hollins at third base.

The Phillies took a 3-0 lead in the first inning off John Smoltz on a two-run double by Hollins and a run-scoring single by Darren Daulton.

The Braves scored twice in the third inning on RBI singles by Smoltz and Nixon, and tied the score in the fourth on an error by starter Danny Jackson.

Reds 6, Rockies 0

DENVER — Jose Rijo pitched his first career one-hitter and Reggie Sanders hit a two-run homer as Cincinnati beat Colorado.

Rijo (14-8) allowed only a broken-bat single by Charlie Hayes in the second inning. He struck out eight and walked none.

It was his second complete game of the season, but his first nine-inning complete game since last year. On May 12, Rijo won a five-inning, 3-2 decision over San Diego.

Greg Harris (11-16) took the loss for Colorado, giving up four runs on eight hits in six innings. He had two strikeouts, one walk and a balk.

Reliever Mo Sanford gave up the other two runs in his one inning.

Astros 12, Dodgers 4

LOS ANGELES — Greg Swindell ended a personal four-game losing streak and overcame two solo homers by Mike Piazza as Houston routed Los Angeles.

Swindell (11-13) allowed seven hits in seven innings, including Raul Mondesi's third homer. The Houston left-hander, pitching for his third team in three seasons, struck out six and walked one intentionally as he ended the Astros' three-game losing streak to move Houston back into third place.

Craig Biggio and Steve Finley each had three hits and two RBIs. Kevin Bass and Scooter Tucker added two RBIs apiece and Chris Donnels also had three hits.

Pedro Martinez (10-5), dropped his his second start in a row. The right-hander allowed three runs, one earned, in five innings.

Piazza's 32 homers are one shy of the LA record set by Steve Garvey in 1977 and tied by Pedro Guerrero in 1985. The only rookies in NL history to homer more times than Piazza were Wally Berger (38 in 1930), Frank Robinson (38 in 1956) and Earl Williams (33 in 1971).

Piazza needs one RBI to become the first NL rookie with 100 since 1953, when Ray Jablonski had 112 for the Cardinals and Jim Greenglass had 100 for the Reds.

Expos 4, Mets 1

NEW YORK — Montreal moved within five games of first-place Philadelphia as Tim Spehr drove in two runs with a homer and and a single to help the Expos beat New York.

The Phillies lost 9-7 to visiting Atlanta in an afternoon game and their magic number for clinching the NL East remained at four.

It was the Mets' 102nd loss of the season, their most since going 50-112 in 1965.

Marlins 2, Cardinals 1

MIAMI — Florida rallied for two runs in the eighth inning to defeat St. Louis to hand starter-turned-reliever Allen Watson his sixth consecutive loss.

Watson, who arrived at Joe Robbie Stadium late for his scheduled start, relieved fill-in starter Paul Kilgus in the sixth inning with the Cardinals holding a 1-0 lead. Kilgus was making his first start since 1989.

The eighth-inning rally was started on an error by first baseman Gregg Jefferies that allowed Chuck Carr to reach base. Henry Cotto followed with a single and a throwing error by center fielder Ray Lankford put runners at second and third.

Sacrifice flies from Jeff Conine and Orestes Destrades made a winner out of Jack Armstrong (9-15), who was on in relief of Charlie Hough.

Jays on brink of AL East title

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

TORONTO — The Toronto Blue Jays moved to the brink of their third straight AL East title, beating the New York Yankees 3-1 Saturday behind Al Leiter's six innings of one-hit ball.

The Blue Jays cut their magic number to two over Baltimore, which played Detroit at night. Toronto won for the 12th time in 13 games, sent New York to its fifth straight loss and reduced its magic number over the Yankees to one.

Toronto has clinched all four of its division titles at home, and can do it again Sunday in the last game of the season at the SkyDome. The Blue Jays need to beat New York, and have Baltimore lose once during the weekend.

Rickey Henderson, who homered and scored three times in Toronto's 7-3 win Friday night, again tormented his former team. He doubled, singled, stole a base and scored twice, giving him 19 runs against the Yankees this year in stints with Oakland and Toronto.

Indians 6, Brewers 2

CLEVELAND — Mark Clark won his third straight decision since coming off the disabled list and Sam Horn homered as Cleveland beat Milwaukee.

Clark (7-4), acquired in the March trade that sent Mark Whiten to St. Louis, improved to 3-0 with a 1.15 ERA in four starts since returning from a torn back muscle on Sept. 9. The run began two days after Whiten hit four home runs and drove in 12 in a game at Cincinnati.

Clark yielded seven hits and two runs — both on Greg Vaughn's 29th home run — in his second career complete game, walking one and striking out six. His only other complete game came for the Cardinals against San Diego on July 6, 1992.

Twins 9, Red Sox 7, 10th inning

BOSTON — Pedro Munoz delivered a go-ahead RBI single and Chip Hale's pinch-hit, two-run double capped a four-run 10th inning that lifted Minnesota over Boston.

With one out in the 10th, Kent Hrbek and Dave Winfield drew consecutive walks off reliever Greg Harris (6-6). Munoz followed with an RBI single, scoring pinch-runner Denny Hocking to give the Twins a 6-5 lead.

After Ken Ryan relieved, Dave McCarty followed with an RBI single. One out later, Hale lofted a drive off the left-field wall, scoring two more.

Rick Aguilera (3-3) earned the win with two shaky innings, giving up two home runs in the eighth and ninth innings, tying the score. Andre Dawson had an RBI double and John Valetin a run-scoring single in the bottom of the 10th for Boston.

Angels 6, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Eduardo Perez hit a ground-rule double with the bases loaded in the eighth inning and the umpires allowed all three runners to score as California beat Kansas City.

Perez hit a line drive to the top of the left field wall and a fan attempted to catch the ball, but dropped it. Left fielder Kevin McReynolds had positioned himself to play the carom, but then had to run the ball down at the base of the wall.

Chad Curtis hit a pinch-hit single to start the inning and scored on Luis Polonia's triple. Polonia was thrown out at the plate by right fielder Kevin Koslofski on Stan Javier's fly to right-center, but starter David Cone walked J.T. Snow and Chili Davis and hit Greg Myers to load the bases.

Phillip Leftwich (4-6) gave up five hits and one run in seven innings.

Ballpark focus works for Kennedy

By T.R. Sullivan
N.Y. Times News Service

This is a time that can try a manager's soul, not to mention his patience, resolve and overall sanity.

Kevin Kennedy often stares to the heavens and wonders what malicious force is guiding his team's fortunes this year, what malevolent being keeps zapping his key players and inflicts upon them one bizarre injury after another.

"I don't think I've ever been tested more than I have been this year," Kennedy said. "I've never seen a team go through so much as far as injuries. I don't know what force is testing us like this, but you couldn't have tested a team more than we have been this year."

Kennedy uttered those remarks after Sunday's 9-8 loss to the California Angels, a game in which the Texas Rangers held a 7-3 lead in the seventh inning. It was as crushing a loss as the team has experienced all year.

Afterward, the Rangers boarded a chartered jet and flew to Seattle. By all accounts, it was a quiet ride with the manager sitting disconsolately in the front of the plane, mulling his team's fortunes.

Few take losses harder than Kennedy, and this one also included losing outfielder Juan Gonzalez with more back problems.

"I got to the hotel and I couldn't sleep," Kennedy said. "I was thinking about the lineup, who I was going to start. I got up at 6 a.m. and started writing down a few more lineups. It's been that way since we got Chris James. It takes a long time to figure out the lineup. I even wrote a few down at lunch."

Such are the life and times of Kevin Kennedy, enduring his rookie season as the Texas Rangers' manager. He has seen his Hall of Fame pitcher, Nolan Ryan, hit the disabled list three times, and his blunder in using his prize slugger, Jose Canseco, as a pitcher threatened to make him the subject of scorn and ridicule throughout the country.

But he has had the last laugh. His team persevered through the bad times and at least made a run for a division title before the Chicago White Sox outran them to the finish line.

His approach to baseball mirrors Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson. His degree in accounting helped train him in the single-minded approach. His interests outside the game are few, other than driving fast automobiles. Local car dealers have given him a few beauties to test.

Off-days are spent by the swimming pool. Postgame is at the hotel bar or a smoky dive where the jukebox plays country-western music. He is single and lives in seclusion at an apartment in Las Colinas.

"I don't have a family and I don't have any children," Kennedy said. "If I had that, my focus would be elsewhere when I wasn't at the park. But I'm alone and that helps me to learn the game and focus more on it. I have friends, but my priority is at the ballpark. My job is No.1 right now."

He let his focus wander as a player. As a top prospect in the Baltimore Orioles' organization, he took it for granted that he would be a major-league player. He got overconfident, and it never happened.

"I was humbled by it," Kennedy said. "Now I've gotten a second chance and I'm not going to let anything stand in my way."

That the Rangers haven't collapsed long before arriving in Chicago speaks well for Kennedy. "What I'm about is winning," Kennedy said when he was hired, and so far, he has given the Rangers no reason to think that won't eventually happen.

"Kevin Kennedy is the reason this team didn't fall apart a long time ago," managing general partner George W. Bush said. "He's done an excellent job."

"He was born to manage," Los Angeles Dodgers farm director Charlie Blaney said. "We saw it happen in the minor leagues. He's done it before and it's not surprising he's done it again."

"I've always been impressed with his leadership skills and his baseball knowledge," said Montreal Expos general manager Dan Duquette, who had his eye on Kennedy as a possible future Expos manager. Those are not opinions universally held in the clubhouse, but Kennedy hasn't been afraid to ruffle a few feathers or worried about personal feelings when making out the lineup card.

Most notable was the off-day workout he called on June 25 after a disastrous 2-8 road trip. There was grumbling and mumbling among the players, but the bottom line is the Rangers immediately turned their season around.

That was also the day that Kennedy ceased being so accommodating to his players — the policy that led to Canseco's ill-fated pitching appearance.

That was the day he told Canseco and Julio Franco they must play or go on the disabled list. Canseco eventually went on the DL, but Franco hasn't been out of the lineup since then and has been the Rangers' best hitter during the pennant race.

"I gave the players the benefit of the doubt for the first 60 games. I said the last 90 games would be ours," Kennedy said. "But I found out on June 25 that I had to do it the same way as I did in the minor leagues. If something's not right, you have to address it. You've got to chew some tail when you have to and praise them when it's appropriate. If I had come in on April 9 and done that, if I had been a dictator, if I had been overaggressive, the players wouldn't have learned about me and I wouldn't have learned about them. It's a credit that they responded, but that's the way it's going to be around here from now on."

Kennedy is not confrontational. He prefers to call himself a communicator. When Juan Gonzalez smashes a helmet rack, doesn't run out a ground ball or misses treatment on his back, the matter "is handled internally," Kennedy says.

When Gonzalez failed to run out a ground ball in a game against California, it was Franco who got in his teammate's face, not the manager.

The style has worked, particularly with shortstop Manuel Lee ran afoul of his teammates last month by sulking when Mario Diaz took over his playing time.

Kennedy had Lee behind closed doors and approached the situation in a positive manner, telling his shortstop he didn't want him alienating himself from the rest of the team. Kennedy got Lee to leave the meeting with a smile and a handshake. He has been productive, if not spectacular, down the stretch.

Kennedy has left the clubhouse to the players, saying "the best teams police themselves." He does not make his presence felt unless he thinks a team meeting is necessary.

"If it's a team issue, I'll address it as a team," Kennedy said. "But I won't berate one player in front of a whole team, unless they push me into a corner. I'll always give them a chance to come into my office."

If there is grumbling, Kennedy isn't interested.

"Now isn't the time for guys to be concerned about playing time or their miserable stats or how tired you are," Kennedy said emphatically.

Andretti backs out of Formula One curcuit

N.Y. Times News Service

In less than a week, Indy car racing regained a prodigal son and lost a major corporate backer.

On Sept. 16, Michael Andretti confirmed he was ending his Formula One career after less than one full season, and the next day it was announced that he would return to Indy cars in 1994, replacing Arie Luyendyk as a driver at Chip Ganassi Racing.

That was welcome news to a series that two days earlier had learned that Chevrolet was dropping support of the Ilmor V-8 Indy engine after this season.

As European invasions go, Andretti's assault on Formula One was more Dunkirk than Normandy. Although he drove aggressively to third place in his final race, the Italian Grand Prix on Sept. 12, he had only a fifth-place finish, a sixth and a few accidents in 12 previous races.

Andretti's replacement, Mika Hakkinen, a 24-year-old Finn, quickly seized his opportunity. He qualified third fastest, ahead of his teammate, Ayrton Senna, the man regarded as Formula One's fastest driver, for Sunday's Grand Prix of Portugal in Estoril.

Organizers of the Formula One tour will probably point to Andretti's dismal season — along with 1992 world champion Nigel Mansell's immediate success in his first Indy-car season — as proof that the American circuit is far inferior to international grand prix racing.

■ More Sports/11C

But it's a chauvinistic view — as ill-conceived as Andretti's prediction before this season that he might win a race or two.

Andretti was immediately handicapped by new Formula One rules limiting test sessions and restricting each driver to no more than 23 laps (including warmup and slowdown laps) in each practice session on race weekends. Because Andretti was almost always racing on unfamiliar tracks, he was denied adequate laps to learn each track's intricacies.

There's no doubt, too, that a Formula One car is superior to an Indy car in its acceleration, braking and cornering capabilities.

Nine injured in speedway accident

SAPULPA, Okla. (AP) — A race car flipped through a reinforced fence near the grandstands at Creek County Speedway on Saturday night, and at least nine people sustained minor injuries, authorities said.

A spokeswoman at St. Francis Hospital in Tulsa said all the victims probably would be treated for bruises and minor cuts and released.

Donna Ward, whose family owns the speedway, said a driver's throttle stuck and he failed to negotiate the first turn of the track. His car hit a retaining wall and crashed through a fence reinforced with steel cables.

Those hurt were standing right behind the fence. Ward said the car did not go further into the grandstands and the driver was not seriously hurt.

"Oh, yeah, it was very obvious" the driver would not make the turn, Ward said. "Some of them were jumping out of the way. They could see it coming. They were just standing along that fence."

A sheriff's dispatcher said at least nine people were hurt. Tulsa-based Life Flight said it transported two victims by helicopter to St. Francis Hospital in Tulsa.

A spokeswoman there said a third victim was brought by ambulance. All would be treated and released for cuts and bruises, she said.

At least two people were treated for minor injuries at Bartlett Memorial Hospital in Sapulpa.

The driver was racing a modified street car, Ward said.

Golden State to play away from Oakland

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Golden State Warriors will have to play away from Oakland for at least two seasons while the team's planned new arena is built on the site of their current home.

"We don't have any choice," Warriors president Dan Finnane said.

The likely venues for the Warriors would be the Cow Palace, in Daly City just south of San Francisco, or the brand new San Jose Arena. The construction could conceivably affect the 1995-96 and 1996-97 seasons, the San Francisco Examiner reported Saturday.

Finnane announced on July 29 that team officials were putting together a plan to build a new arena in the same location as the current one. The team is working with the city of Oakland on the plans.

"We're very satisfied with the progress," Finnane said of the lengthy talks. "We're talking to Oakland very, very regularly and very, very actively. I can't put a time frame on it, because the process dictates the time frame and it's a very difficult process. We will ultimately have a place for the Warriors."

There had been speculation that the Warriors would build a new arena right next to the old one. The Oakland Coliseum Arena is a sprawling complex that includes an indoor facility for the Warriors and a ballpark for the Oakland A's.

"I don't think it would be right to put (the new arena) in the parking lot," Finnane said.

Finnane refused to speculate where the best temporary home for his team might be.

Alleged assault

Midland police are investigating an alleged sexual assault on a 5-year-old girl, according to police reports. The girl's mother told officers Saturday that a 16-year-old male had been sexually abusing the girl in an unknown manner since Sept. 15, according to the report. Police declined to release any further information regarding the incident.

Teen shooting

DALLAS — A 14-year-old Dallas boy accidentally killed a friend with a gun he reportedly bought for protection at school.

Killed Friday was 13-year-old Pedro Ramirez Jr. His friend told police he thought the safety was on when he pointed the gun at Ramirez as they played at the victim's north Oak Cliff apartment.

The youth was shot once in the chest and died at Parkland Memorial Hospital. Police said charges aren't expected.

The boys attended Boude Storey Middle School, where 29 students were taken into custody Thursday following a conflict between black and Hispanic gangs. Students said rumors were circulating that the fighting would continue on Friday.

A 13-year-old girl said she thought several students brought guns to school, then hid them across the street because a metal detector was being used at the entrance.

Political enemies

AUSTIN — Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Judge Chuck Miller told Republican leaders Saturday that he has collected a lot of enemies since joining the GOP.

Addressing a meeting of the State Republican Executive Committee, Miller said many Democrats became angry after his recent conversion.

Miller, a former Dallas judge, said he joined the Republican Party after noticing that he consistently voted with conservatives on the Court of Criminal Appeals.

He said he has worked hard on behalf of securing rights for crime victims. State Republican leaders adopted a resolution welcoming Miller to the party.

Community and Senior Services

Agency caters to Midland's senior citizens

When a local volunteer called to check on the welfare of a 77-year-old Midland woman, the elderly woman stopped talking and the telephone receiver could be heard hitting the ground.

The volunteer promptly called 911, and the elderly woman received help.

"In that particular situation, the emergency happened when she (the elderly person) was on the phone, and she passed out," said Carla Curtner, director of home-bound services for Community and Senior Services.

The volunteer was part of Telephone Reassurance, a program that consists of daily calls to check on the welfare of older residents.

A national telephone reassurance program began in the 1950s when a group of elderly women regularly called one another to check on each's welfare. One woman who didn't answer her telephone one day was discovered in a coma three days later. Her friend subsequently started the program.

Midland's Telephone Reassurance is among various programs run by Community and Senior Services that seeks to respond to the needs of the America's fastest growing age group — the elderly.

One group of services is aimed at home-bound seniors.

That includes Grocery Express, which provides volunteers to shop for the home-bound elderly; Friendly Visitor, where volunteers visit isolated and lonely seniors; and the Handyman program, where volunteers perform health and safety related repairs at the homes of the elderly.

One program that epitomizes home-bound services is Meals on Wheels, which serves about 375 meals each week day.

Recipients, who receive meals at home, must be at

Director: Larger number of elderly affects society

In 1900, the average life expectancy for Americans at birth was 47.3 years. As we average greater longevity today — more than 25 years longer — the elderly population continues to increase.

Today the fastest growing age group are people 85 years and older.

"It's not business as usual. It's a changing world," said Steve Edwards, executive director of Community and Senior Services.

That change also can be exemplified by the number of Americans 65 years and older. At the beginning of the century, that group accounted for only 4 percent of the population compared with 14 percent today.

CSS volunteer 'just came down from heaven,' resident says

Debbie Sevin chats with her friend, 92-year old Minnie Mae Thorne. The two women met when Debbie was a volunteer for Meals on Wheels.

When someone drops by Minnie Mae Thorne's house, she's likely to add to her goodbyes a social invitation to return.

That's what happened when Debbie Sevin would stop in for a few minutes to drop off lunch a couple of years ago.

"I met her because I used to deliver Meals on Wheels and she used to always pull on my sleeve and say 'Come visit sometime,'" Debbie said.

"I came over and found out she didn't have too many people taking care of her . . . And she ran out of cookies, and I asked who got her cookies for her and she said no one," Debbie said.

"I didn't like you being out of cookies," Debbie, 30, said turning to 91-year-old Minnie Mae. Both smiled like friends who keep secrets.

These days, someone else delivers lunch to Minnie Mae.

And Debbie just visits — about an hour every day.

"She just drops in pretty often. She just kind of adopted me," said Minnie Mae, who has lived alone since the mid-1970s.

"She just came down from heaven and dropped in my home," Minnie Mae said.

Debbie said she considers Minnie Mae a blessing as well. "You can get a lot out of someone older than you, a lot of wisdom," she said.

Conversations between the two women runs the gamut, and stretches across decades.

"Sometimes we talk about the 1920s, sometimes we talk about the 1930s, and sometimes we talk about 1995," Debbie said.

Sometimes the talk turns to Minnie Mae's long life.

Man in his 40s is at 'age of uncertainty'

How many times have you heard someone say, "I wish he would act his age"?

Same here. Hundreds of times. Ocassionally, those words are uttered about an overly mature child who, for whatever reason, behaves like an adult. More times than not, though, they are said about an older person — usually a middle-aged man — who insists on trying to turn back the clock so he can be a kid again.

Ott

The reason I bring this up is that I'm at that awkward in-between stage right now. I don't know if I should act 30 or 50. Neither seems quite right, which is one of the unfortunate things about being in your 40s. A part of you wants to be a carefree child who just sorta floats through life, while the other part acknowledges a need to be mature and responsible.

As a result, you remain in a constant state of confusion, behaving as an irresponsble child one day and as a mature adult the next. As you can imagine, it can be terribly frustrating, both for the person experiencing the identity crisis as well the folks who must deal with him on a daily basis. No one knows for sure which version is going to show up on a particular day: Howdy Doody or Walter Cronkite.

You might call it the "age of uncertainty," or, in layman terms, "Do I button my shirt all the way to the top this morning or do I expose as much chest hair as possible in a childish attempt to impress women who are half my age and, as a result, have absolutely nothing in common with me?"

It is one of those brutal decisions that is addressed each and every day by men in their 40s. They look in the mirror and say, "How old do I want to be today?"

If they reply, "oh, about 50 I guess," then they button their shirt all the way to the top and make mature comments like, "I need to close the Jefferson deal by 5 p.m. today." If, on the other hand, they are feeling a bit feisty they might say, "To heck with Jefferson. I'm off to the beach." Then they would unbutton their shirt to the navel and slap on another heaping helping of foul-smelling cologne.

It is not an easy time for men to endure. Nor, for that matter, is it a particularly pleasant experience for those who must co-exist with them . . . be it family or friends.

Indeed, the best thing you can probably do is to avoid these men altogether. That way you don't have to deal with their — shall we say — unfortunate mood swings.

And what, in addition to unbuttoning one's shirt to one's navel, constitutes such a mood swing? I'm glad you asked.

Here are 10 sure-fire signs that a man has entered the dreaded "in-between phase of life."

1. He wears a "Dead Head" T-shirt underneath his $500 three-piece suit.
2. He trades in his four-door sedan for a $25,000 sports car, which he insists on driving with scraf wrapped around his neck.
3. His drink of choice is scotch and water, but if the female he is attempting to impress is young enough, he will unashamedly switch to rum and coke, and if necessary, order it with a cherry on top.
4. He alternates listening to Perry Como albums and Led Zeppelin tapes.
5. He tries to sneak out of a tanning salon in the middle of February without being seen.
6. When he attempts to be "cool" on the dance floor, he invariably looks stiff and just a tad awkward, not unlike Al Gore at the inauguration.
7. He wears his jeans so tight his eyes bug out.
8. When entering a room, he snaps his fingers and points at people, apparently unaware that "hip" men quit doing that in the early '70s.
9. On occasion his mind slips and he refers to women as "chicks" and "broads."
10. And, most importantly, of course, he artificially colors his chest hairs a golden brown. After all, if you're going to show 'em off, they gotta look good.

Panel investigates rise in fourth-graders' scores

DALLAS (AP) — A panel of parents, teachers and community leaders has decided to withhold a $60,500 bonus from a Dallas school pending its investigation of a dramatic rise in fourth graders' test results.

Students at Carver Learning Center scored 90 out of a possible 100 on the reading section of the Norm-referenced Assessment Program for Texas. Last year's fourth graders at Carver scored a 33. The jump helped the students at Carver improve from 67th to second in the district's effectiveness ranking system.

Dallas Independent School District officials couldn't account for the childrens' sudden success, so the panel that oversees the district's accountability system will investigate the improvement.

Edgar Prince Jr., the school's principal, didn't immediately return phone calls placed by The Associated Press Saturday.

District officials stressed that the education agency or the test maker, Riverside Publishing, may have made mistakes reporting the initial scores.

The school district will consult with the Texas Education Agency about the incongruities because the Norm-referenced Assessment Program is a state test. If cheating is proven, educators can be punished by the education commissioner.

Former speaker clashes with prosecutors in friend's trial

SHERMAN (AP) — Former Dallas developer Thomas Merrill Gaubert, once a prominent thrift owner and Democratic Party fundraiser, has been sentenced to 5 years in prison for bankruptcy fraud and money laundering.

Jim Wright, former Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, was among character witnesses for Gaubert, calling him "somebody who is deeply patriotic. My opinion of him is that of an altogether honorable and decent human being."

Gaubert was convicted on 10 felony counts in a jury trial that ended June 24.

Wright testified Friday that the prosecution of his old friend and fund-raiser "may have been a miscarriage of justice."

But U.S. District Juge Paul Brown ordered Gaubert to report to federal prison Oct. 24, giving him a month to prepare for prison life. The judge also ordered Gaubert to pay $333,698 in restitution on behalf of creditors of his bankrupt Sunchase Village of Irving Inc.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Linda Groves said Gaubert pulled off a classic case of bankruptcy fraud by transferring money out of Sunchase on the eve of bankruptcy. She said the funds were sent to other companies under Gaubert's control.

Gaubert, who owned Independent American Savings Association of Irving before its collapse in 1987, said he transferred money out of Sunchase only to protect the company's stockholders.

Ms. Groves noted that the shareholders were members of Gaubert's family.

During his testimony in Gaubert's behalf, Wright became involved in an venomous exchange with John Scott, a senior trial attorney for the Justice Department.

Wright refused to give a one-word answer when asked whether his opinion of Gaubert was altered by his felony conviction. Wright bristled at Scott's suggestion that Gaubert once raised $1 million in contributions for him.

"He did not raise a million dollars for me," Wright thundered.

Gaubert has complained that his conviction and two other felony indictments still pending are the result of a Republican vendetta aimed at destroying his ability to raise funds for Democrats.

As Wright left the witness stand, he went to Gaubert, hugged him momentarily, then slapped his back loudly.

The 5-year sentence for Gaubert is 11 months less than the maximum permitted under federal guidelines. There is no provision for early release on parole.

CATERS: Volunteers are valuable asset

at least 60 years old or disabled. Most are home-bound and the majority are of low income.

"It's one of the most-needed programs. It addresses one of the most basic needs — hunger," said Kelly Ives, director of operations for Community and Senior Services.

Without the program, many of the elderly served would go hungry or not eat a well-balanced meal, Ms. Ives said.

Minnie Mae Thorne, 91, praised the service.

"Meals on Wheels have been very helpful because I can't stand very well, and if you're going to cook you can't do it very well sitting down," she said.

"It allows me to stay in my own home as long as I can wiggle," Ms. Thorne added with a smile.

The person who delivers the meal to Ms. Thorne, and others who perform similar services for CSS, are volunteers.

"Volunteers are not only our more critical means of service delivery but they are also valuable because they have a whole new knowledge, perspective, of senior needs," Ms. Curtner said. "We have a whole force that recognize the needs and can report it back to us."

If agencies such as CSS aren't notified of a senior's needs, he or she may go unaided.

"We don't know about those (elderly who need help) until someone gets involved, until a concerned citizen makes that referral," Ms. Curtner said.

Another program that accommodates home-bound seniors is the Visiting Nurse Service, which is independent from CSS but works closely with that agency.

The VNS of the Permian Basin provides comprehensive home-based health care for individuals of all ages, although many are elderly, according to Hilda Hassett, community representative for VNS.

The non-profit organization provides skilled nurses to assist patients who suffer chronic and acute illnesses.

VNS provides lower medical costs than hospitalization while having the patient in the comfort of his or her home surroundings.

For more active seniors, CSS manages two senior centers in Midland.

Kingsway (formerly called Dellwood) and the Southeast senior centers offer active people 55 years and older a place to socialize, participate in various activities both recreational and educational, have a free lunch and receive health and wellness services and education.

About 180 people visit the Kingsway Center each day, and another 80 go to the Southeast Center daily.

Cindy Whiteside, director of Kingsway Senior Center, said, "The senior center is for people who are very active."

"We are trying to break out of the mode of what you think of as the typical senior center. They think of it as a place where 90-year-olds come and everyone's in a wheelchair — a nursing home," Ms. Whiteside said.

The center offers traditional senior services such as art and ceramic classes, and more active activities such as line dancing, aerobics, even a volley-ball team.

Ellen Smith, director of the Southeast Senior Center, said three things make for a good quality of life for seniors: interaction, nutrition and exercise. The center provides all three, she added.

Seniors enjoy the center for that reason, "to improve the quality of their life, and they can interact with their peers," she said.

Other than church, the Southeast center acts as the primary gathering place for community seniors, Ms. Smith said.

Some activities there include quilting, ceramics, and exercise classes, singing groups, inter-generational programs with local schools, GED classes for seniors and field trips.

The free membership at the centers also entitles seniors to other community benefits such as the Permian Gold card, which provides discounts from participating merchants.

For information on the Kingsway Senior Center, call 686-1627, and for the Southeast Senior Center, 685-7231.

For information on any of CSS' programs, call 689-6693.

For information on help provided by the VNS, call 689-0094.

ELDERLY: Longer life-spans affects rest of society

(From 1C)

Because Americans are living longer than ever before, society must accommodate to those changes, Edwards said.

"It impacts the family and all parts of society," he said.

Elderly individuals are most likely to require assistance with daily living, and the majority either live by themselves or with a relative. Less than 22 percent of seniors will require institutionalization sometime in their lives.

Most care-givers — such as children of the elderly — must adjust their lives to accommodate the responsibility.

And many Americans have aging parents. In fact, 90 percent of 40 year olds have a living parent.

Midlander Robert Owens is one example of someone faced with the care decision of an elderly relative.

Recently, Owens has been looking into services to help in the care of his wife's 83-year-old grandmother.

"Basically we're the only ones that can take care of her and she doesn't have any funds," he said.

She currently lives in Coleman, while her family, which includes three grandchildren, resides in Midland.

"We're not sure if she's going to move here. We're trying to figure out what's best for her," Owens said.

An advantage to having her in Midland is "so we can check on her more often," he said.

In addition, Owens said, based on his research, he was pleased with senior services offered in Midland.

Beyond Owens and other family members of seniors, America's longer life-spans affect society at large, Edwards said.

"There needs to be a massive reform in health care, education and social services . . . and a reform of the whole American attitude with acceptance to aging," Edwards said.

Americans need to be educated in terms of aging, how to maintain quality of life and care.

Perhaps the most recently noted deals with health care.

"The Clinton health-care (plan) is based on people living longer," Edwards said.

Helping meet the needs of the elderly is the goal of Community and Senior Services.

But the agency cannot accomplish the task alone, administrators said.

The organization relies heavily on volunteers to carry out the programs, such as helping home-bound seniors.

"They have become home-bound with chronic illness, disabilities, sometimes depression from losses and old age, and they are unable to perform these services themselves," said Carla Curtner, director of home-bound services for Community and Senior Services.

And unless the public acts as a go-between to make referrals, some seniors may go without needed services, she said.

Sometimes an elderly person may receive one service, such as Meals on Wheels, and be found to have other unmet needs.

Volunteers, who see the seniors regularly, many times detect these needs.

Community and Senior Services is sponsoring a Seniors Not Forgotten campaign, today through Oct. 10.

MINNIE: Women's conversations stretch across decades

(From 1C)

the doctor had no hope for Minnie Mae.

"I wasn't suppose to live because I weighed only 3 pounds," she said.

Minnie Mae recalls the early days of Midland, where she and late husband moved in the early 1940s from Wichita Falls.

"We watched it (Midland) grow just like you watch a plant grow," said Minnie Mae, who remembers 1800 W. Texas Ave. as "just plain country."

Sometimes the memories go even further back — such as when the two women found a handmade dress that Minnie Mae wore for her 1920 high school graduation.

Debbie shows off a graduation picture of Minnie Mae in the same white dress that now hangs nearby.

"She keeps telling me she's going to put it on some day," Debbie said.

"I think I could wear it," Minnie Mae responded.

"It sure is pretty," Debbie added.

Part of the reason that the two women, more than 60 years in age difference, get along appears to be Minnie Mae's youthful attitude.

"I try not to act my age. If you're around young people act like one. I don't act like an old person, I just look like one the way I walk," she said.

Minnie Mae acknowledges the gap between today's youth and the elderly. More responsibilities and busier days don't permit younger people to take time out with older citizens, she said.

"I think they'd enjoy it if they would," Minnie Mae added.

"It peps me up," Debbie said.

The same goes for Minnie Mae.

"It's been real refreshing to me to meet a young person that's interested in the aged," she said.

Debbie plans on throwing a party on the porch for Minnie Mae's upcoming 92nd birthday.

Furthermore, Debbie said she's going to take her friend on a hot air balloon when she turns 100.

"It won't be long it seems the way time passes," Minnie Mae said.

Former model's attorneys to sue police, city over shooting attack

HOUSTON (AP) — They met in 1977 on the Colorado ski slopes, in Aspen, the glitzy playground of the rich and beautiful.

He was rich, she was beautiful and they fell madly in love.

In the beginning, at least, theirs was a storybook romance. But the love affair between Barbra Piotrowski and Richard Minns eventually turned from torrid to obsessive to bizarre.

And then murderous.

Now, 13 years after hired gunmen attacked Barbra, a federal civil lawsuit will be filed Monday that raises new and disturbing questions about the role of Houston police in the case.

Barbra's lawyers, newcomers to the long-running legal battle, contend that the Houston Police Department should have — and could have — prevented the crime.

And they are seeking $50 million in damages from the City of Houston.

A police spokesman said Saturday he could not comment.

The pending lawsuit stems at least in part from revelations in a book by Los Angeles author Suzanne Finstad. Published in 1991, the book was entitled "Sleeping With the Devil."

The devil, the author maintained, was Minns.

As a young California blonde, Barbra was a model with a bent for beauty contests, some of which she won. Older but just as flashy, Minns was a Texas health spa tycoon, and looked it.

He founded the President's — First Lady spas and they made him millions.

Minns also was married, which he somehow neglected to mention until long after he persuaded Barbra to drop out of UCLA and join him in Houston.

They lived together off and on for more than three years, although Minns's wife Mimi caught on to her husband's shenanigans in 1978 and filed for divorce.

She reportedly left the marriage with $5 million in community property.

But even while juggling a wife and a lover, Minns found time to enhance his image as a man-about-town, one whose friends and associates were socially and politically prominent.

At least until October 1980. That was several months after Barbra walked out on him and took all his furniture with her. They had begun to quarrel, she said, and on one occasion he became angry and threatening, throwing things and shaking her.

When she left, he had her arrested and jailed for theft.

She responded with a palimony lawsuit.

On Oct. 20, as she was leaving a Houston doughnut shop, two men caught Barbra alone in her car and shot her four times in the back. She survived, but one of the bullets shattered her spine.

She was paralyzed from the waist down.

After the bungled murder attempt, the story of Barbra and Minns appeared daily on the front pages of Houston's newspapers and nightly on the news at 6 and 10 p.m.

Eventually, four men were convicted in the murder-for-hire scheme and sent to jail. Minns was not among them. He was never charged with a crime.

Police indicated their evidence against him was skimpy.

However, Barbra accused him in a civil lawsuit of hiring the men who shot her and sought $220 million in damages.

In July 1987, after repeatedly failing to show up for court appearances, Minns was ordered by a state district judge to pay Barbra $28.6 million in damages.

By then, he had fled Houston and was living in Switzerland.

Barbra's attorneys, Dick DeGuerin and G.P. Hardy III, told the Houston Chronicle they intended to do a title search to see if Minns owned property in Houston or elsewhere.

"If he's got anything anywhere on the face of the earth, we'll find it," Hardy vowed.

Minns appealed the judge's ruling in absentia.

In February 1991, a civil jury concluded that Minns was in fact responsible for the attack and the same judge ordered him to pay $32 million to his former lover.

With interest, the judgment was close to $60 million. But she has yet to collect a penny.

"I don't know how much he has, but whatever he's got, we're going to try to find and appropriate," Hardy vowed again.

Minns' son and attorney, Mike Minns, told the Chronicle his father had recently joined the Israeli army after scratching out a living for years as a cartoonist for European newspapers and magazines.

"He has no money," young Minns insisted. He denied that his father orchestrated the attempt on Barbra's life.

"She destroyed him," he said.

"This is an incredible story," says Dallas lawyer Steve Sumner, who, with associate Marilyn Lahr, prepared the lawsuit against the Houston Police Department and the City of Houston.

"The more you get into it, the more it grabs you."

They allege that Houston police knew five weeks before the shooting that a man named Dudley Bell had solicited at least three men to kill Barbra on behalf of the elder Minns.

It was a $10,000 contract, they said.

"Upon receiving this information," the petition says, "HPD took the unconscionable step of preventing their police officers from protecting Barbra Piotrowski, investigating consummated criminal acts of solicitation of capital murder, and/or arresting Bell and Minns."

The suit suggests no motive for such action, or inaction, but maintains police were aware even earlier that Barbra's life was in grave danger.

"Barbra Piotrowski herself had repeatedly informed Houston police officers that Richard Minns was trying to kill her," the petition contends.

Dudley Bell was eventually convicted. He and a car thief, Robert Jess Anderson, are serving 38-year prison sentences for helping arrange the shooting.

Two others were assessed 35-year prison terms for the actual shooting.

Rick Hartley, the police spokesman, told the AP on Saturday any lawsuit would be referred to the city attorney's office.

"It's hard to comment on something that hasn't happened," Hartley said.

He said any other response would be speculative.

"This is really like living a nightmare," Barbra said Friday in a telephone interview from California, where she has changed her name and works with paralyzed children.

She said she refuses to even think about the police issue.

"Because if I did, I'm sure I'd be emotionally shattered. These are the people that we grew up believing are there to protect us. When they're not there, who do we turn to?"

Barbra said she has not spoken to Minns in years but that she fears he will try again to have her killed.

"I have been informed by certain authorities ... that I need to be cautious," she said.

After all these years, how does she feel about Minns?

"I don't feel anything. He is a nonentity in my life."

A reporter reminded her that she once was quoted as saying: "I was so in love with him. I can't imagine being that in love again."

That's correct, she said.

"Yes, there was an intensity that I don't think I will ever be capable of having again. I do believe I love very deeply ... the children I work with ... my pets ... my family ... my loved ones.

"But there was something unexplainable about that love. And I just have never seen myself as being capable of feeling that way about anyone again."

Officials arrest Detroit police officer on cocaine charge

CARTHAGE (AP) — A Michigan law enforcement officer was in an East Texas jail today after a police dog detected about 15 pounds of cocaine hidden in both back panels of his vehicle.

The man identified himself as Carl Webster of Detroit and produced a badge and identification from the Detroit Police Department, a spokeswoman for the Panola County sheriff's department said today.

Joyce Waldrop, a dispatcher, said Sgt. David Jeter, a sheriff's deputy, was watching traffic on U.S. 59 north of Carthage when he pulled over Webster at 11:24 a.m. Thursday.

The deputy said he clocked the motorist's speed at 65 mph in a 55 mph zone. The car, which had Michigan plates, was northbound.

The department's drug-detecting dog was summoned to the scene "because of an odor coming from the back of the vehicle," and the dog alerted both back panels of the vehicle, according to a prepared statement from the sheriff's department.

Inside the panels were several packages of a powdered substance that officers said they believed to be cocaine.

The total weight of the packages was approximately 7 kilograms (15.4 pounds), and Webster was arrested on a charge of aggravated possession.

Medical facilities work together to provide care

FORT WORTH (AP) — As health care costs rise and the availability of providers falls, Tarrant County medical officials say they are looking at a new approach to success — each other.

A new era of collaboration among medical facilities is sweeping the area, benefiting both doctor and patient, officials say.

Tarrant County health care providers say a lack in funding and increasing competition for outside grants and research money is forcing them to work together on such projects as cancer research.

"For us to all survive, it's necessary to start looking at collaborations," Judy Sladek, senior vice president of patient care services at Saint Joseph, said.

Officials cite as examples of the new cooperation the Tarrant County Cancer Consortium, the Tarrant County Oncology Network, a communitywide Institutional Review Board to monitor cancer research, and Saturday's screening efforts as part of Prostate Cancer Awareness Week.

More than 500 men are expected to show up for free prostate cancer screenings at several Tarrant County hospitals Saturday. Officials say such screenings are direct yields of medical collaboration.

But the cooperation and interdependence didn't occur overnight or come easily.

Dallas County officials dispense federal funds for Tarrant County projects. For that reason, gaps were forming in cancer screening programs for Tarrant County's poor. In trying to change that approach, area public health departments and the American Cancer Society applied for grants to screen the indigent for cancer.

Officials soon realized, however, that no single hospital could handle the project.

"We had a large indigent community that none of us was reaching individually," said Linda Schickedanz, coordinator of the oncology programs at All Saints Hospital. "I think the foundations that fund health care and social projects are saying, 'Hospitals, get a grip.'"

Today, the consortium's work is funded largely by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and includes breast and cervical screenings for poor women.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Senior citizens can enroll in College Classics

By H.A. Tuck

Reaching a mature age isn't all bad. For local residents, one of the advantages is being able to enroll in College Classics. You must be at least 50 years of age and willing to pay the $25 enrollment fee.

Tuck

For that sum, you'll be able to take from one to all 11 classes starting this week as Session I of College Classics ... plus an additional nine courses during Session II, which starts Oct. 25. That figures out to as little as $1.25 a class for someone adventurous enough to take all 20 classes. And it can be done since there's no scheduling overlap.

Even for just one class, the fee is still a bargain. The low cost is because all the instructors are volunteers drawn from the community and the college. The classes meet in the afternoon, usually for an hour or two once or twice a week.

Classes being offered in Session I include: Creative Memories, Crime Prevention, Mexican American Cultural Studies, Current Economic Issues, Flying Machines, How to Write a Journal or Diary, Piano, Plumbing, Travel Trends, United States History Begins, and You and Your Money.

Session II course are: Budget, Deficit, Taxes and the Economy, Crime Prevention, Current Economic Issues, Domestic Politics and the News Media, Genealogy, Opera, Piano, The Honey Bee in our Lives, and United States History Begins.

Since some of the classes begin Monday afternoon, you need to register quickly by calling the Continuing Education Office at 685-4518.

Ann McCoy is president of the MAA this year. With at least $1,000 in prize funds being offered, the show attracts a number of local and regional artists in many different media.

You may see this show through Oct. 22. McCormick Gallery is open daily without charge. Its normal operating hours are: 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

VocalPoint, the college's talented vocal performance group, is performing at ClayDesta Atrium on Tuesday from 11:45 a.m.-12:45 p.m. Commercial Music Instructor Rob Hunt directs VocalPoint. If you happen to drive around Chaparral Circle after 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday, you'll find a crowd of youngsters enjoying the fall Flag Football season.

The games are played just north of the Chaparral Center and near the dormitories. Rivalries get intense and the level of performance is quite high as a lot of recent high school athletes continue to compete.

The season begins Monday and continues until time for intramurals to move indoors for basketball and volleyball competition.

It's nice to have your own air force to call upon. That's what we did last week when Bud Stapleton piloted a couple of us to take aerial photos of the campus. Stapleton, who is director of the Midland College Aviation Maintenance School, also is a licensed flight instructor. He usually keeps at least one of the planes renovated by the students available for college use.

This was the first time we'd done aerial photos of the campus since 1987 and the changes were remarkable. Appearing in the latest photo was the addition to the Student Center, six more tennis courts, a sand volleyball court, 48 more acres of land, and a new north entrance-exit. But the growth of the trees was quite noticeable, especially when compared with the photos made in 1975 when the campus opened and in 1978 when the Chaparral Center and Fine Arts Building had just been completed.

The South Facilities at 201 West Florida aren't nearly so impressive, but we did record them, complete with an addition to tie the two buildings together.

It's getting late, but you still have time to purchase tickets for the two concerts coming to Chaparral Center almost immediately. Alan Jackson is performing at 8 p.m. Saturday, along with special guest Clay Walker. Tickets are $22.50 and $19.50, with all seats reserved. These tickets may be purchased at Chap Center (cash or credit card only), Midland Sound, and Endless Horizons in Odessa.

Moody Blues, with the Midland-Odessa Pops Orchestra, is performing at 8 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 4. This concert is priced at $25 and $19.50, again with all seats reserved. Tickets are available at the same ticket outlets.

The campus will be buzzing on Saturday evening since the Thouvenel String Quartet also is playing its Midland concert at 8 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. You'll need to call the symphony office for ticket information.

First meeting of the 1993-94 year for the Chaparral Booster Club takes place at 7 p.m. Monday at the Roadrunner Room, Student Center. If you'd like to get better acquainted with the basketball players and golfers, learn more about the MC sports programs, and get information first-hand from the coaches, then this is for you.

The booster club also arranges "Adopt-A-Chap" matches so the athletes have a local family as a host and support group. Some of the athletes still need a host family, so this is a good way to get involved.

Consider this your invitation to join. When you arrive, you can get details about the small membership fee and the planned activities for this year.

Jazz enthusiasts can enjoy a short, free concert at the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium at 2 p.m. on Friday. Some of the performers for the 16th season of the Midland Jazz Classic, Sept. 30-Oct. 3, generously come to the campus to give a short concert and talk about their craft. Seating is first-come and limited, so arrive early. Bassist Milt Hinton, a legend in the music world, usually serves as MC for the event.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

Sandra Wegner

Nothing in Library Management 301 at North Texas ever prepared me for some of the days Midland County Public Library has experienced lately. At the same time we had a basement drying from flood waters, windows and walls were being knocked out on the first floor for remodeling, volunteers were shifting books in a just-moved department and it was business as usual with the public coming and going in another part of the library.

In answer to your many questions: we are dry in the public areas and still drying in the basement. Renovation is nearing an end and we have been moving more departments. By the time you read this the Periodicals Department should have moved around the corner into the old Children's Room.

Petroleum, Genealogy and Interlibrary Loan should be moved and, we hope, open. Audio Visual, if open, will be limited in its service. If you are want to check out a film or video, call 688-8991 for the latest status report.

Stock up on your fiction needs. General fiction is next in line to move.

The Children's Department is preparing to display a new prized possession: The Book Worm. I'm convinced that a more appropriate sculpture couldn't be found than Gary Price's rendering of a little boy and his books. We are grateful to Mrs. Mary Frances "Chan" Driscoll for giving the library this charming piece. The Friends of the Library are providing a pedestal. We also thank Bob Anson, the sculptor, and Meyer Galleries for facilitating this gift.

Already on display is a gift from Mr. & Mrs. Robert Nash. This happy, colorful oil painting with a South American flavor seems made to order for our new Children's Room.

While admiring the Book Worm and painting you may also appreciate the fanciful soft fabric sculptures by Janie Hofer, Hillander art teacher. Mrs. Hofer was recruited by Friends board member Shirley Gist to add color and excitement to several areas of the new library.

As you walk in the library's front entrance, look up and enjoy the mural by Able Saldana, former Midland College art student of John Edgar.

The computers at the library entrance had barely been installed by County Data Processor Bill Finch when the public began using them. With little assistance and no instruction sheets, people were trying their hands at operating the new computer catalog.

All the entries are listed as available. Don't believe it. Until the library is checking out books using the computers, all the books will be listed as available.

Fifty thousand shiny new library cards have been ordered for distribution to our library patrons. These are the key to our automated circulation system. The bar code on the library card and the bar code on the book are linked in the computer records until the books is returned.

How long will it take the library to issue 50,000 cards? We guess, at least, two years. That's quite a few cards for a county with a population of 106,000. We estimate now that we have somewhere between 30,000-40,000 card holders. Since our cards are good for four years, it is difficult to know how many card holders are still residents of the county.

New facilities traditionally draw new patrons. We expect to see a lot of faces that we haven't seen before and we look forward to serving them all.

I recently accessed the library's computer catalog at home using my personal computer, a modem and communications software. I hope it won't be long before you can, too.

Is your name on the wall? It isn't too late to get yourself listed as a special benefactor of the library expansion fund. Please notice the handsome display of donors in the new library foyer. Max Perry, library fund-raiser, left some empty slots just in case you'd like to join the group. Max is still raising funds to furnish the meeting room.

Sandra Wegner is county librarian.

America has been waiting for the Clinton Administration to reveal its health system reform proposal. That moment is here.

Soon, the legislative debate will begin. Debate that will produce laws which will affect your relationship with your doctor.

America's health care system has already begun to change. Insurance companies and hospital networks are forming giant alliances that are altering the way health care is being delivered in your community — often without any input from physicians who deliver the care.

Our fear is that doctors' hands — hands that have always provided the human touch — may be tied by large companies whose primary focus is on profits.

The member physicians of the American Medical Association (AMA) hope that the Clinton Administration's proposal will put you first. And we ask you to consider these fundamental questions:

1. Will you continue to be free to choose your own physician and health care plan?
2. Will you and your physician be free to make medical decisions that are in the best interests of you and your family without interference from government bureaucrats, insurance companies or your employer?
3. Will health plan administrators assume the physicians' responsibility for establishing medical treatment policies and standards of care?

Talk to your doctor about health system reform. And, we invite you to send for additional information. Write AMA, Dept 4202, 515 N. State Street, Chicago, IL, 60610 or call 800 348-3047.

It will only take a moment.

Greathouse has great needs, lacks landscaping, books

The newly-opened Greathouse Elementary School building is eye catching, but its grounds are barren, a situation parents hope is soon changed.

While some parents would love to see some local nurseries donate plants and trees for landscaping, Greathouse Principal William "Bill" Maurer said stocking the new library with books is his first priority.

"It's true, we have no landscaping, just sprinklers and empty beds, but the library is a priority," Mauer said. "The Texas Library Association recommends we have 10 titles per student. So, we should have more than 6,800 books. We have approximately half that at this point."

State budget cuts are impacting all Midland public schools in the district to the tune of $74 per student. "That amounts to $50,000 for our campus alone," Maurer said. "Being a new campus, budget cuts impact us more, because it takes some years to build up a library collection."

He said budget cuts also resulted in less computers. The campus needs at least 19 more computers in order to meet his goal of one in every classroom.

"We do have 26 computers," Maurer said. "State mandates require computers be provided in grades 4, 5 and 6. We have two in each fifth grade classroom. However, we want all students to have access to writing and language development on the computer. Our students will also be writing and publishing their own books."

The principal said all landscaping funds were cut out of the bond issue to bring construction costs and building costs in line to an amount voters would approve.

Although students may face a lot of mud when it rains, or dust on windy days, the school's "programs are in place and traffic is flowing much better," Maurer said.

The city of Midland is constructing sidewalks along Mathis Street and is putting in a traffic light at County Road 60.

"They are also putting in a school crossing zone and we have a crossing guard," Maurer said.

The school, which comfortably serves 600-650 pupils, has a current enrollment of 681. Because of the overflow, two portable buildings have been added to expand classroom space.

Lacking some books, computers, shrubs and trees, Maurer said the school's Parent Teacher Association "has been very supportive and shares in our concerns and priorities to fill our needs with fundraising activities."

State prison officials plan to unite facilities

HOUSTON (AP) — For the first time in Texas prison history, state officials are working on plans to build units to house male and female inmates.

Texas prison officials say the plan is not a social experiment but a question of economics. Officials also doubt there would be little mingling allowed between the sexes.

Carol Vance, chairman of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice board, said last week than an increasing female prison population and tight prison budgets are forcing the state to house men and woman in the same facilities.

"No one's ever talked about it," Vance told the Houston Chronicle.

"With us, it's a matter of money. We can't afford to build separate facilities for men and for women," he said.

State officials plan to build more than a dozen jails to house 10,000 inmates as approved by the Texas Legislature last spring.

Another 12,000 inmates would be housed in more facilities to be built if a $1 billion bond issue is approved by voters in November. A third of the money would be used for state jails.

Those new state jails are being designed to hold nonviolent prisoners convicted of fourth-degree felonies and serving sentences of six months to two years.

Vance said construction contracts for some of the jails already are being put out for bid. Some of the jails will have a wing built to house women, he said. Adjacent wings will house men.

"I'm not sure to what degree they're going to be co-ed," Vance said.

Men and women may be allowed to eat together at the same cafeteria, he said. But they would have separate cells, showers and toilets.

Carl Jeffries, deputy director for program services with the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, said the state hasn't worked out details involved in housing men and women in the same units.

But Jeffries doubts there would be any mingling.

Jeffries said state officials would study county jails to see how they handle housing women and men together.

"Much of what we do we're going to have to research, because obviously we have no experience with this," he said.

Most of the state jails designed for men and women inmates are being planned in urban areas such as Houston and Dallas, where the number of female felons tends to be higher, he said.

About 4 percent of the state's 66,000 inmates are women, and most of them are housed at the women's prison in Gatesville, Vance said.

The new jails are expected to help relieve crowding at county jails around the state that are keeping prisoners destined for state lockups.

Lawmen's softball team wins fourth place in tournament

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

A group of area lawmen recently brought home a fourth-place finish at the National Law Enforcement Softball Tournament in Oklahoma City.

The team, comprised of officers from the Midland and Odessa police departments, the Midland County Sheriff's office and the Department of Public Safety, played against 18 teams from around the nation at the tournament, which was by invitation only.

"We placed fifth out of 28 teams at the Texas Police Olympics this year," said Midland Police Officer Adolfo Baesa. "We got invited to the tournament because we placed so well."

The current team, called the Midland Police Softball team, has been in existence since 1985. Before that, the department had a team from 1971-76 called the Red Chiefs, which was no team to be messed with, according to officers.

"I used to watch the Red Chiefs play when I was a bat boy for my dad's softball team," Baesa said. "They were some tough old men, man. You didn't mess with them."

The current softball team plays about 177 games every year between February and September in the local National League, which is the top league for softball, Baesa said.

The officers battled against teams from Nebraska, Missouri, Michigan and several other Texas teams to bring home the fourth-place trophy from the Oklahoma tournament.

Other team members are Midland County Sheriff's Deputy Joe Watters, Odessa Police officers Terry Barnhart and Larry Torres and Department of Public Safety Trooper Leo Arrieta.

The team's coach is Midland Police Officer Richard Canderlara.

Gang members tell panel of hopes for futures

MANSFIELD (AP) — Nineteen-year-old Presilla Romero has two vows in life: to select her friends more carefully and to care for her 3-year-old son.

She plans to make good on both — as soon as she's released from the Tarrant County Community Correction Facility in Mansfield.

Romero, a former top lieutenant in a gang, is serving time for felony theft.

On Friday, she was among several former gang members who shared stories of their murky pasts with a panel of officers and prosecutors assembled to try to find ways to stem the growth of gang violence in Dallas-Fort Worth.

"I plan to change friends," a teary-eyed Romero told the panel. She also promised to stay sober and take better care of her son when she is released from the "boot camp" in February.

"I sensed a lot of frustration in that room," said U.S. R[illegible]. Joe Barton, who assembled the panel.

Members of a blue-ribbon panel of police experts on gangs, as well as members of Barton's Law Enforcement Advisory Committee, argued about what might work to fight gang violence. Some urged stricter laws; others said social and economic reform is needed.

They all agreed, however, that the problem is getting exceedingly worse in Tarrant County and across the country.

The Tarrant County gang task force has identified between 150 and 250 gangs in the area, with a total of 3,000 members, said Barton, R-Ennis.

And Tarrant County Sheriff David Williams said about 20 percent of the inmates in the county jail are associated with gangs.

"The problem is growing very rapidly," Williams told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Some in the group had doubts that former gang members could change their lives, even after spending time in prison.

"They're going right back to the same system, the same neighborhoods that will dismantle their best dreams and intentions," said FBI agent Bob Siller, who grew up in the inner-city projects of Chicago.

Siller, assistant agent-in-charge of the FBI regional office in Dallas, said he could relate to the former gang members who spoke. He said he believes they are earnest in their promises to stay out of trouble, but he does not believe they will succeed.

Grand jury indicts 4 in alleged crop loss scam

LUBBOCK (AP) — A federal grand jury in Lubbock has indicted four defendants in two cases involving alleged conspiracies in which area farmers and insurance company claims adjusters submitted false claims for crop hail damage.

The indictments were related to their involvement in an insurance fraud scheme conducted by Cyrus D. "Dee" Wickson III, who operated Wickson Insurance Agency Inc. in Seminole.

Wickson was named in one of the indictments as a co-conspirator but not a defendant. The indictment alleged he began a conspiracy in 1984 that defrauded six insurance companies of more than $3 million.

Wickson pleaded guilty on May 27 to making a false income tax return for 1988 in which he did not report $316,000 he had received that year from his involvement in false insurance claims. He also pleaded guilty to one count of mail fraud in connection wit 156 false claims worth more than $3 million. He has not been sentenced.

The claims either were for inflated amounts of crop damage or were totally false, Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert McRoberts said.

The indictment that mentioned Wickson named as defendants Julius R. "Pete" Ballew, 37 , a farmer from Andrews, and Dorman Riddles, 54, a claims adjuster from Kennedale, near Fort Worth.

Ballew and Riddles allegedly generated more than $400,000 in false hail crop insurance claims from Ballew, according to the indictment.

Wickson paid kickbacks totaling more than $500,000 to Riddles and three other adjusters in several cases, according to the indictment.

Between 1990 and 1992, Wickson gave Riddles a Cadillac and paid him $34,261.62 in cashier checks and $15,000 in cash for making fraudulent loss statements, the indictment said.

Ballew agreed to have the false claims submitted, with the proceeds split among him, the adjusters and Wickson, the indictment said.

Ballew received $140,000 from Wickson between 1987 and 1990 for his part in the scheme, according to the indictment.

Both Riddles and Ballew were indicted for conspiracy. The indictment also alleged eight counts of money laundering and eight counts of mail fraud against Ballew and six counts of money laundering and six counts of mail fraud against Riddles.

A second indictment named farmer Lannie R. Marshall, 41 , and crop hail adjuster Homer L. Morse, 43 , both of Lubbock.

The two men conducted a scheme between 1991 and 1992 to defraud Old Republic Lloyds of Texas, which is the company that employed Morse, of $76.779.60, the indictment alleged.

Officer's commendation-filled career ends with dismissal

DALLAS (AP) — Senior Cpl. Michael Dikovitsky, who has 50 commendations and once took a bullet in an apartment complex shootout, is the second Dallas officer accused within a short period of misusing the power of his badge.

Dikovitsky was dismissed after a finding by the Dallas Police Department's special investigations unit that he allegedly steered officers away from the topless bar's manager who employed Dikovitsky's underage girlfriend.

Dikovitsky, 32, was fired Friday and charged with governmental record tampering.

"He convinced his chief to dismiss the case by using facts which we later discovered were not true," special investigations Capt. Eddie Walt said.

Dikovitsky, a 11-year veteran of the department, was released on $1,500 bail bond, but faces two to 10 years in prison and a fine of up to $10,000 if convicted.

Within the past two months, an acquaintance of Dikovitsky was accused of employing a 16-year-old girl who was having an affair with the officer over the past seven months, Walt said.

The case against the man has since been refiled, Walt said.

Dikovitsky's arrest Friday capped a two-month investigation by the department's internal affairs division and the special investigative bureau's public integrity unit, said Sgt. Jim Chandler, a police spokesman.

Another officer resigned Friday while facing a charge of stealing from motorists.

Investigators found that Dikovitsky violated several department policies, including entering the bar while in uniform, interfering with a criminal investigation and releasing police information to an unauthorized person.

No conclusion was reached whether the officer's involvement with the 16-year-old girl constituted sexual assault, Walt said.

Forsan, Westbrook ISDs vote on funding options

Associated Press

Polls opened Saturday in two Big Spring-area school districts where residents must decide how to cut their property wealth.

The elections in Forsan and Westbrook are part of the Legislature's mandate to make public school funding more equal. The state will funnel property tax dollars surrendered by its richest districts, to other schools across Texas.

Forsan will hand over about $1.3 million, Superintendent George White said.

"We've been gearing up for this for years, cutting back and trying to get our costs down for years because we've known it was coming," White said.

The oil-rich district has an enrollment of 674 students. Ballots propose Option 3, which would send money to the state, and Option 4, which would benefit the Big Spring school district 15 miles to the north.

In Westbrook, 30 miles east of Big Spring, voters are being asked to approve the Option 3 choice of money to Austin. Ballots also offer Option 4, which would pay to educate transfer students from Colorado City.

RYDER: Final round begins this morning

From 1B

England, who played with Ian Woosnam of Wales against Paul Azinger and Fred Couples.

Like Pavin, Baker was unbeatable this cool, blustery day.

From 1-down, he birdied four of five holes beginning on the fifth with an uncanny putting exhibition that included birdies from about 50, 20, 20 and 15 feet.

That put the Europeans 3-up at the turn and they went on to a 6 and 5 win.

While Ray Floyd and Payne Stewart were slogging out their second victory of the day, 2 and 1 over Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain and Joakim Haeggman of Sweden in the final match, Beck and Cook took their struggle down to the wire against Faldo and Montgomerie.

The non-playing members of both teams, the captains, officials and most of the gallery, flocked to their sides in a tense run over the back nine at the Brabazon course at the Belfry.

The Americans went 1-up on the eighth when Faldo took two to get out of a bunker and Montgomerie could not get up and down from short of the green.

Then, with the lead riding on every stroke, nine holes were halved, one the 10th, with par after both Americans had driven into the water.

Cook and Beck remained 1-up going to the 18th, a dogleg that requires two shots over the water.

Montgomerie missed the green far to the left and, essentially, was out of it. So was Beck.

Cook got his approach to about 12 feet, but Faldo got inside of him, to about 10 feet.

With the match on the line and needing a birdie for a half, Faldo's putt touched the cup on the low side but slid by. After Montgomerie's desperation try for a pitch-in birdie failed, the hole was conceded.

It was a psychological blow to the Europeans, a lift for the Americans.

"We've got to regroup," Faldo said. "The (American) team is very strong."

American team captain Tom Watson "needed us to come through with something," Cook said, "and we were ready."

Europe took a 7½-4½ lead by winning three of four morning foursomes, in which each two-man team plays alternate shots on the same ball.

Floyd and Stewart scored the only American point, playing without a bogey in a 3 and 2 decision over Baker and Barry Lane of England.

But the other three matches were exercises in frustration for the mistake-prone Americans.

Lanny Wadkins and Pavin played the 11th and 12th holes bogey-double bogey, went 2 down to Faldo and Montgomerie and eventually lost 3 and 2.

From an even position, Azinger and Couples bogeyed the 12th and 13th on the way to a 2 and 1 loss to Langer and Woosnam.

Some putting mistakes on the back — including a critical 3-putt on the 16th — foiled the comeback attempt of Tom Kite and Davis Love III against Spanish stars Olazabal and Seve Ballesteros.

The 267-yard, par-4, water-guarded 10th was the turning point in Europe's 2 and 1 decision, however.

The Americans, 3-down after seven holes, won the eighth and ninth and were within one when Kite chose to attempt to drive the green on the 10th.

He got his tee shot pin-high in a bunker to the right and well above the green.

After considerable debate, Olazabal also pulled a wood and went for it. His shot threaded through trees to the middle of the green.

Love, in an extremely difficult position in the bunker, was unable to stop his sand shot on the green and watched it trickle into the water.

The Spaniards easily won the hole, went 2-up and took it from there.

Trevino builds big lead at Nationwide tourney

ALPHARETTA, Ga. (AP) — Lee Trevino shot his second consecutive 6-under-par 66 Saturday and built a three-shot lead after two rounds of the 54-hole Nationwide Seniors Championship.

Trevino reversed his method in the second round, playing bogey-free with six birdies on the front side. In Friday's opening round, he had six birdies on the back nine of the 6,856-yard Country Club of the South course in the Atlanta suburbs.

Trevino held his lead over defending champion Isao Aoki and Al Geiberger, who had 36-hole totals of 135. Aoki shot a 65 and Geiberger 68.

Jack Nicklaus, who had a 68 in the opening round despite playing with a turned right ankle, rode in a golf cart during his round Saturday and fell back in the pack with a 73 for 141.

"Trevino's not out of reach," Geiberger said. "Several of us can make a race out of it. We're going to have to play well."

"I don't know what I'll have to shoot tomorrow," said Aoki, who won last year when the final round was rained out.

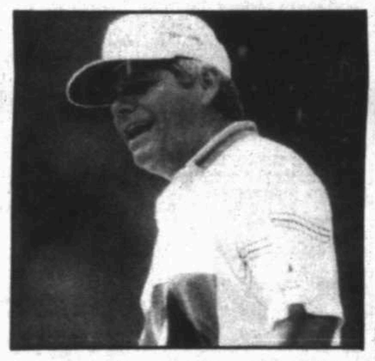
Three others were tied at 136 — Larry Gilbert, 65, George Archer, 66, and Tom Wargo, 69.

First-round leader Mike Hill skied to a 73 and was at 138 with Rocky Thompson, who had a 67.

Dave Stockton and Jim Dent each shot 66 and Kermit Zarley 67 and were at 137.

Trevino is seeking his second victory of the season, having won the Cadillac NFL Classic in May.

Jim Ferree claimed the $14,000 first prize in the Vantage Classic, a 36-hole competition for players over 60. Ferree had a 73-68 for 141.



Lee Trevino fired a 66 Saturday for a three stroke lead.

Fort Stockton native McCallister leads BC Open

■ BC Open

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Blaine McCallister shot a 6-under-par 65 Saturday and held a one-stroke lead over bogey-prone Jim McGovern after three rounds of the $800,000 B.C. Open.

McCallister was at 9-under 204 after 54 holes in the running for the $144,000 winner's share.

McGovern, who started the day with a one-stroke lead, had an erratic round that included five birdies, a 35-foot eagle and five bogeys. McGovern's final bogey on 18 dropped him into second place.

First-round co-leader Bill Glasson and David Ogrin were another stroke back. Ogrin's 64 was the day's lowest score over the 6,966-yard En-Joie Golf Club course. Three of Ogrin's eight birdies were on his first three holes.

Chris Smith also stayed in the hunt with a 66 that left him at 6-under, tied with Denis Watson, Brad Bryant, Mark Lye and Peter Jacobsen.

Four golfers were at 5-under.

Play was delayed at the start of the third round for 75 minutes because of a heavy fog. The skies were blue by the time McGovern and McCallister teed off in the afternoon.

Despite starting his round with a bogey on the first hole, McGovern found his putting touch on the front nine, making birdies on Nos. 3 and 6 before dropping in a 35-foot eagle putt on the par-5 8th. It was just the fifth eagle of the tournament, which was plagued by rain in the first two rounds.

McGovern moved to 10-under with a birdie on 9, but lost the stroke two holes later when his drive landed behind a stand of trees off the fairway, forcing him to pitch out to get a clear shot at the green.

He birdied 12, coming up an inch short on a second eagle. But consecutive bogeys on the next two holes dropped McGovern back into second. He birdied the par-4 15th, the course's most difficult hole, to regain a share of the lead, but fell back with the final-hole bogey.

McCallister started the round with birdies on 1 and 3 and added consecutive birdies on 7 and 8 to go 7-under and momentarily tie McGovern for the lead.

McCallister trailed McGovern by three strokes at the turn, but birdies on 10 and 13 moved him into a tie at 9-under. He pushed out a short par putt on 14 and took a bogey that dropped him back into second. He moved back into a first-place tie with McGovern on 16 with his final birdie of the day.

Monaghan leads Sheehan by three at LPGA Inamori

■ LPGA Inamori

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Kris Monaghan, whose only tour victory was in this tournament in 1990, shot a 3-under-par 69 Saturday to take a one-shot lead over Hall of Famer Patty Sheehan after three rounds of the LPGA Kyocera Inamori Classic.

Monaghan, who was tied for the lead after the first two rounds, took a 12-under 204 total into the final round over the 6,200-yard Stardust Country Club course, which is hosting its first LPGA tournament since 1974.

When Monaghan won the Inamori in 1990, she finished with a 276 at StoneRidge Country Club.

Sheehan, who shared the lead with Monaghan and Gail Graham after two rounds, had a 70. Donna Andrews, tied with Monaghan for the lead after 18 holes, and Juli Inkster were at 206. Andrews shot 68 Saturday and Inkster 69.

It was four shots to the nearest pursuers, Florence Descampe and Barb Mucha, at 210. Descampe shot a 66 and Mucha a 71.

Graham had seven bogeys in a 77 and fell to 212.

Monaghan had a steady round, dropping to 11-under with three birdies and one bogey on the front nine.

Sheehan has won this tournament three times, most recently in 1986.

German, Aussies advance to finals of Davis Cup

LONDON (AP) — It's Germany vs. Australia for the championship of the Davis Cup. Both teams took insurmountable leads in their semifinal matches Saturday and will play for the title in December.

Australia, advancing to the final for the 43rd time, went up 3-0 over India in the best-of-5 series when the world's top doubles team rolled to victory in straight sets.

Reigning Wimbledon champions Mark Woodforde and Todd Woodbridge routed India's Leander Paes and Ramesh Krishnan 6-2, 7-6 (7-3), 6-1. The Australians never dropped their serve.

Germany, playing this year without the nation's top player, Boris Becker, will make its fifth appearance in the final after taking a 3-0 lead at Sweden.

Michael Stich and Patrik Kuhnen beat Swedes Henrik Holm and Anders Jarryd 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 (9-7) to clinch the victory.

The Australians have yet to lose a set to the Indians, who chose the grass courts at Chandigarh to stage the series. Wally Masur and Jason Stoltenberg beat Krishnan and Paes in the singles matches Friday.

"We've accomplished our mission," said Australia's captain Neale Fraser. "This was one tie where the rankings showed the difference. The true talent of the two teams showed up."

Australia, which has won the title 26 times, was heavily favored from the start. Playing with three men ranked in the top 50 computer ratings, they faced a pair ranked 195th and 251st.

Germany, which will play host to the final Dec. 3-5, weren't fazed by Sweden's decision to hold the match on the indoor clay courts at Borlange, or by the presence of former world No. 1 Stefan Edberg.

Edberg lost to Marc-Kevin Goellner in Friday's singles and Stich beat Magnus Gustafsson.

Becker led Germany to its only two Davis Cup crowns in 1988 and 1989, but decided to skip the competition this year. But Stich and Goellner, who is unbeaten in Davis Cup play, have proved to be a solid one-two singles combination in Becker's absence.

"If Boris wants, he's welcome to play," Stich said of the upcoming final. "But it would not be fair because some other guy on this team will have to step down."

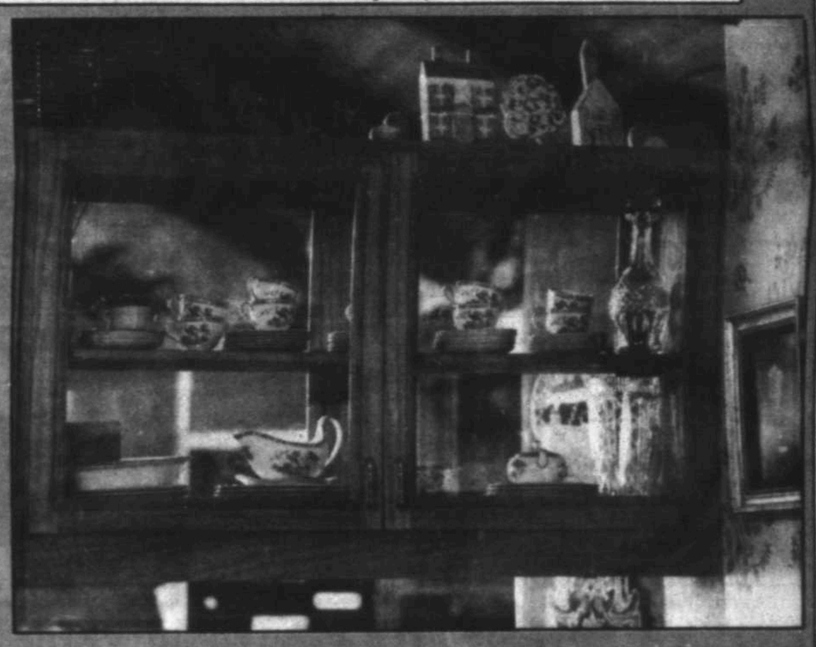
HOMES & CLASSIFIED

Photos by Joe D. Williams | Text by Kes Gilhome | Design by Mark Stroker



Sun Filled Elegance

Situated on a quiet, elegant street in Trinity Meadows, this wonderful custom built three bedroom house boasts many stunning features within its peaceful setting.

Reminiscent of an alpine chalet with its glorious use of hardwood floors, doors and ceilings, this is a home that is perfect for those who appreciate the finer things in life.

The heart of this superb house is the kitchen: pine and oak mix their subtle hues with brick walls and tiled floors to produce an elegant and practical environment, perfect for any occasion.

Equipped with all the latest modern conveniences, the kitchen leads into the solarium which runs the length of the house and overlooks the large landscaped lawn.

Wood is very much the theme of this house. It is to be found both inside, in the beautiful hardwood floors and solid wooden doors which appear through out the building, and in the redwood deck outside.

This is a very unique house, full of rich details, and no room displays this to its full advantage more than the family room. Warm hues abound through the use of tile, brick and wood. Recessed lighting adds to the charm and feel of the room which is distinctly continental.

Details such as the built in wet-bar, oak bookshelves, the angular ceiling with large skylights all come together to produce a room of exceptional style.

The master bedroom suite looks out over the lawn and occupies its own peaceful corner of the house. Its bay window faces south for the most wonderful light that brings out the best in this delightful suite of rooms. The accompanying bathroom is not only very well designed, with its separate vanity areas, shower and sunken tub, but it is also very pretty with its wood detailing and carefully placed window.

For more information about this gorgeous house, please call Lori Lanier of Lanier & Co at 682-1144 to arrange an appointment.

GENESIS SELECT delivers relocation services at substantial cost savings

Joanne Langston

Joanne Langston, President of Langston Realtors, and Richard Langston, VP Relocation, were recently appointed National Account Executives for GENESIS SELECT Relocation Services.

GENESIS SELECT is one of the most innovative and unique relocation programs to come on the market in years, according to John More, GENESIS president and CEO. "It includes the complete range of relocation services, and delivers them at substantial cost savings, even to the smaller corporations who transfer as few as 5 to 10 employees a year," Moore said.

"It is also the first time that a full relocation operation has been able to successfully combine the local contacts of independent real estate firms with the national connections of a major national relocation network and with major national suppliers," Moore added.

GENESIS SELECT offers a complete menu of relocation services: Homemarketing Assistance (also called premarketing), a Home purchase program, Home finding assistance in the transferee's destination market, a wide range of mortgage options, and substantial discounts on the costs of moving a transferee's household goods. "A corporate client can choose any or all of the services offered by GENESIS SELECT, thereby creating a custom relocation package that is the most effective, essential and cost savings plan for that particular client," Joanne Langston said.

One of the programs most unique aspects is its "fee sharing" feature according to Langston. "for every transferee who buys a home through GENESIS SELECT, the corporate client will receive a referral fee. For even smaller corporations, this fee sharing can add up to significant revenue, thereby defraying some of the company's costs of transferring employees", Langston added. She cautioned that companies must be licensed to receive this fee; however GENESIS will assist clients in filing license applications if requested.

GENESIS SELECT programs are a result of strategic partnerships between the GENESIS Relocation Services and its members and recognized national leaders. "The Home purchase program is available through the organization's alliance with Commonwealth Relocation Services, the group named as @1 in 13 service categories of third party home purchase companies," Langston said.

Home mortgages are available through GENESIS' partnership with fleet Mortgage Services, the nation's second largest mortgage banking firm. "These mortgages have many features that would make them especially attractive to transferees, including mortgages 1% below the market rate for the first year, consideration of the trailing spouse's previous income for loan qualification purposes even though that spouse is not yet employed in the new location, loan amounts up to $600,000, no application fees, direct billing of closing costs to the corporation, and an expedited preapproval loan program.

GENESIS' business connections with both Mayflower Transit and Allied Van Lines have created many savings advantages and discounts in the costs of moving a transferees household goods. "Service is also enhanced for GENESIS SELECT corporate clients by the assignment of #1 and #2 rated drivers, guaranteed pick-up and delivery dates, and priority claims processing" Langston said.

Richard Langston

Homemarketing Assistance is managed directly by the local GENESIS SELECT account executive for the corporation. "This account executive for all corporate clients headquartered in West Texas and the Permian Basin would be Richard or me", Langston Explained. "Homefinding would also be managed by the account executive in cooperation with one of the GENESIS Relocation Services members in more than 5400 communities around the country," she added.

Corporations interested in the GENESIS SELECT Relocation Services are invited to call Richard or Joanne Langston at 1-800-231-2483 or 915-685-0400

A roof in good shape can enhance your home's "SALE APPEAL"

Kay Sutton
President/Midland
Association of Realtors, Inc.

If you are seeking to enhance the curb appeal of your home, remember: don't neglect your roof! Take a tip from the Midland Association of REALTORS: A roof in need of repair could be a serious deterrent to a quick sale.

"Don't be tempted to limit roof repairs to cosmetic work," says Kay Sutton, president of the Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc. "Cutting corners in this manner could be disastrous if a home inspection finds the roof to be worn and old."

Cracked, curled or missing shingles signal that the roof is past its prime, Sutton says. To spot problems, circle the house with a pair of field glasses for a closer look, she advises. However, for your safety and to protect the shingles, it is wise not to go up on the roof. If you see signs of trouble, contact a professional roofing service.

The Midland Association of REALTORS offers the following information on selecting a reputable roofer:

- Select a company that is established in the community and is willing to provide names of previous customers. Take the time to check with these references about their level of satisfaction.

- Obtain more than one written estimate for comparison. Make sure everyone is bidding on the basis of the same materials, p[lans and quality of workmanship. Remember: quality is equally as important as price.

- Before signing a contract, be certain it specifies the work to be done, materials to be used, completion dates, warranties and guarantees of the contractor and shingle manufacturer, removal of waste materials, final price and method of payment.

- An experienced roofer should be willing to offer advise on the advantages of different types of shingles, as well as how long each type should last.

"Investing in roof repair is a wise decision that can significantly boost your home's salability," Sutton says. "It is a key home improvement that must not be postponed. Putting it off will only make the problems more costly to repair and could ultimately delay the sale of your home."

To determine whether it makes financial sense to proceed with outdoor home improvements before placing your home on the market, consult your real estate or home appraiser professional to find out the estimated value of such improvements.

The Midland Association of REALTORS, Inc. is one of more than 1,800 local board and associations of REALTORS that comprise the national Association of REALTORS. As the nation's largest trade association, NAR is ":The Voice for Real Estate," representing nearly 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

ANOTHER SELLER SAYS
"I put my confidence in K.C. and it paid off."
I knew from seeing K.C. at ropings and around the country environment that she really likes the country life so I choose her to sell my home including horse barn and acreage out in the country. She knew what to point out to country folks looking for a place for their kids to ride and home like mine to enjoy. Boy when K.C. saw our pipe fence and all the area for storing hay in the barn she lit up just like I did when I had it built. Of course our home is a nice one and she had it under contract just six days after we listed.

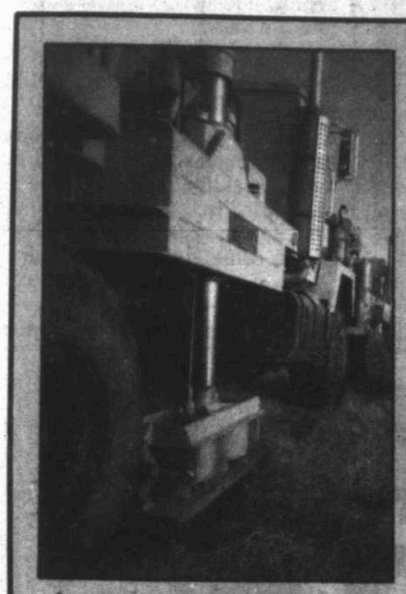
BRIEFING



An up close view of a seismic energy source.

How it works

Everyone knows about 3-D, but not everyone knows how it works. Two local instructors tell about the mechanics and science of 3-D, which has been described as the photography of sound. They discuss seismic reflection and velocity and design of 3-D shoots.

Interpretation

The cost of interpreting 3-D data has been a costly and inconvenient process involving the purchase or rental of expensive workstations. However, a new computer program could change that.

3-D takes over in the oilpatch

■ The science of 3-D seismic is changing the structure and condition of the oilpatch for the better

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

There is finally a consensus in the Permian Basin oilpatch and it is a consensus that is characterized by this crito: "2-D is dead! . . . 2-D is dead! . . . long live 3-D!"

No technology in the past five years, except maybe for horizontal drilling, has taken the oil industry by storm like 3-D (three dimensional) seismic. It is the abolutely hottest technology going and the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico is the hottest spot in the country for 3-D activity.

The reason 3-D has become so popular is its phenomenal ability to reduce the risk of drilling an oil well. In the hottest play in the hottest 3-D area of the nation, the Horseshoe Reef Atoll in the Northern Permian Basin, oil operators are drilling small pinnacle reef structures with 75-80 percent success. This is a success average unheard of in an industry where odds traditionally run closer to 10 percent.

Such success, says Trend Technology — a Midland-based company that specializes in geophysical data processing and processes 3-D data from projects throughout the United States — has made the basin by far the biggest area of activity.

"Eventually, we will reshoot the entire Permian Basin"...Decker Dawson

An interview with the Dean of Basin 3-D

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Considered by many as the Dean of 3-D in the Permian Basin, Decker Dawson remembers well the day he came to the Permian Basin. It was New Year's Day of 1947, and the ground was covered with snow, and as a new party chief with Republic Geophysical he was assigned to shoot a geophysical line near Fort Stockton.

"The snow was on the ground for three weeks, the longest snow has ever stayed on the ground in West Texas and after that was the mud. It was miserable."

Dawson went on to survive many more miserable shoots, drafty hotels and boarding room meals, as he worked for a variety of geophysical companies in the Permian Basin. Then, in 1952, he organized his own company, and in 1981 took Dawson Geophysical Inc. public.

When the 3-D technology hit, Dawson jumped into the new science with both feet, and was one of the

U.S. record 3-D shoot completed

■ Two Basin companies have completed the largest U.S. onshore 3-D shoot, and say it will yield more prospects than expected

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

The biggest onshore 3-D shoot to date has just been completed in the Permian Basin and while data is still being interpreted it appears to have been a tremendous success from the quality of data and the number of prospects the area is yielding.

The area, a 250-square-mile portion of Martin County, was jointly shot by Collins & Ware and Santa Fe Energy Resources of Midland, both of which owned extensive acreage in the shoot area. To get the vast acreage shot according to schedule, crews literally worked around the clock, said Ted Collins, sometimes shooting at night.

"We have seen only about 40 percent of what we shot," said Collins, president of Collins & Ware, "but we are very excited about what we have seen so far."

The $4.25 million survey was begun in April and finalized in Mid-July, and since then both companies have been working to interpret the data on hand. "We are very happy," said Tim Parker, division vice president for Santa Fe Resource Inc., "because we are seeing far more propects than what we thought we would find. I think we will be developing prospects in this area for years to come, as we work and re-work our data."

For now the two companies are focusing only on structural anomalies such as faults, but later they may look at detrital possibilities in the area of interest.

The target of the survey was the for-

Warning: 3-D may be healthy for Basin

Pitts

Hot oil and gas plays with leasing intrigue and competition were supposed to be over for the "worn out" Permian Basin, but the hottest play in the lower 48 states is now going on in the northern part of the Permian Basin, and it's all because of 3-D.

It's a play that could signal the approach of new economic health for the Permian Basin. Over 100 wells have now been drilled in the Horseshoe Atoll, with success rates of 70 to 80 percent, and that has created such excitement that many are predicting it is just the beginning of things to come.

But in the world of oil and gas, all the hype in the world makes little difference unless it can be measured on the bottom line. The Horseshoe Atoll is significant in exploration terms in that it clearly demonstrates how quickly a good play can make a large number of oil companies healthy and happy.

The Horseshoe Atoll is the first major 3-D play in the Basin, and there is every reason to believe that many more will follow.

A few weeks back Wiser Oil reported substantial improvement to its bottom line and gave a big plug to the reef play in the process.

A Pennsylvania Age reef that sweeps across parts of eight counties in the northern part of the Permian Basin, the play is making a financial improvement to the bottom line of a number of companies. Among those in the play are: Enserch, Howell Exploration, Patrick Petroleum, Hillin-Simon, Plains, Union Pacific Resources and Parallel, to name a few. So good are the economics that even the major oil companies are now beginning to become involved in the play.

It is economics that one petroleum research firm pegs at 184 percent on a single 250,000 barrel well. Wiser Oil Co. reports that the 7,000 to 9,000 foot wells can be completed for $300,000 to $400,000 and that reserves per well can easily exceed 150,000 barrels.

The exploration targets are small pinnacle reefs that have an areal extent of 40-100 acres and can be drained by one or two wells.

Exploration of the Horseshoe Atoll originally began in 1990 on the eastern flank of the Atoll, in Scurry County, where the Kelly-Snyder, a reef field, has produced over one billion barrels.

Now, however, excitement and economics have spread the search for pinnancle reef fields to the western flank. While the eastern side of the "horseshoe" has received the most drilling and attention, some are predicting that the western side will yield fields and success rates as good as or better than the Scurry side.

Operators in the play say it probably would not be possible if not for the seismic option. In this process the participant of a shoot will acquire a six to nine month option for $10 and up earliest to do 3-D shoots in the Basin. While no giant corporation by any means he has managed to go head to head with the biggest and command a large portion of the 3-D business in the Basin. Today, Dawson Geophysical and Decker Dawon, a former president of Society of Exploration Geophysicists are two of the most respected names in 3-D technology. Dawson reflects here about the advent of 3-D and its impact on the industry.

Q: What has 3-D done for Dawson Geophysical?

We are a completely different company than we were before, with an entirely new science. We are not the same company we were five years ago.

It has significantly improved the value of our stock. At the end of 1990 it was trading for $3 per share. It is now $9 per share, and has traded as high as $10.25. This has allowed us to invest in the state of the art equipment and transform the company from a 2-D to 3-D company.

Q: What does it cost to put together a 3-D geophysical crew, and what kind of economic impact do they make in an area?

It costs about $7 million to put together a 3-D crew and $500,000 per month to operate with wages, permits, leasing, and fuel included. 3-D crews are extremely expensive to operate, and with 40 men needing food and a place to sleep and 25 vehicles needing fuel they make an economic impact wherever they go.

Q: What is the Permian Basin looking at when it comes to 3-D geophysical?

Everything that's been done before in 2-D will be redone in 3-D. We are looking at re-shooting the entire Permian Basin — eventually the entire world.

Q: What will that mean in terms of new activity?

It means that 3-D seismic activity will be continuing in the Permian Basin for a long time. And, it means that thousands of new drilling prospects will be uncovered and that the wells drilled on those prospects will have a higher chance of success.

Q: How has 3-D changed the risk factor of oil and gas exploration?

The annual meeting of SEG is set for later this month, and about 300-400 papers will be presented. Many of them will deal with the economics of 3-D. We don't know much about economics and risk, but I think we have reached the point where the risk has finally been shifted from the drilling rig to the seismic data. More money will be spent on the quality of geophysical data, because it will tell operators where to drill and not to drill. There are studies going on right now, in which 3-D data can not only locate a structure, but determine if it is oil saturated or not.

Q: What about the search for natural gas, especially in the deep Basins?

In the deep basins 3-D will help us unravel some of the mysteries. Seismic reflections in those basins, the Delaware and Val Verde go in every direction. It is an interpretative nightmare, but with 3-D we should be able to get a better picture of what's down there.

We may not be able to see any more with 3-D than we did with 2-D but we will be able to put it in place.

There will be 3-D in these basins, but how much will depend on the price of natural gas. With the right gas price there will be a lot of looking to do in the Val Verde and Delaware Basins and Southwest Lea County and Western Ward County.

Q: How rapidly is 3-D technology growing; is it perfected yet?

Both technology and efficiency are changing rapidly. Five years ago you could only do about a half-mile per day on a survey. Today, we can do up to two miles per day. Also, five years ago, we had only 240 data channels. Today, we have over 1000 data channels. That means we can now gather four times the data at two times the speed. No, it is not perfected yet. It continues to improve each year, and that means that some of the areas we are shooting now, may need to be reshot sometime in the future.

Q: What about the cost of 3-D seismic surveys; are they getting cheaper?

No, costs are about the same as they were five years ago, but quality has improved significantly. The operator is paying the same price for much more quality.

Q: Some landowners are worried that 3-D will condemn their land once it has been shot. Any truth to that worry?

That was the same fear ranchers had about 2-D, that once it was shot and didn't reveal any prospects it would be condemned as far as oil and gas leasing went. I don't think 3-D will condemn land any more than 2-D did. As 2-D technology improved we went back and reshot the same leases. I suspect we will do the same with 3-D.

mations directly below the Woodford, typically the Devonian and Fusselman, and Collins noted that the quality of the data, which was shot by Halliburton Geophysical, was superior.

Parker said promising structures range from possible small one and two well fields up to one square mile in size. "It will be interesting to see how they drill out."

Parker said Santa Fe and Collins & Ware agreed to the shoot after realizing both had extensive land assets in the area.

"We had extensive acreage acquired from Amoco through options," said Collins, "but we had to go out and buy more acreage to be a 50-50 partner with Santa Fe, who had acquired acreage in the area when it bought Adobe Oil & Gas."

Both Collins and Parker agreed that the survey would result in an increase in drilling in Martin County, but did not go so far as to predict a mini-boom for the area.

"We pretty much have the area under control, so we will not be under the gun to hurry up and drill," Collins said.

Parker projected that with the tremendous number of anomalies to be explored, the quality of the data and improved structural picture of the area, Santa Fe was hoping to enjoy a 50 percent or more success rate on drilling.

If the survey does result in a break out of drilling fever in Martin County, and a healthy infusion of capital into the Permian Basin oilpatch, it will be welcome. But Parker added that the survey alone has already resulted in a healthy infusion of capital and jobs into the Basin.

"At one time we had as many as 70 people working on the shooting crew," he said.

A well set to be spudded some time next week could be the first indicator of how fast the prospects will be drilled. "This well is being drilled on a different survey, but its the same stuff," Collins said.

BASIN: 3-D seismic brings new life to old areas

(From 1E)

"We have done about 600 projects in the last five years, and I would say that about 80 percent of them have been done in the Permian Basin. This is a very hot area for 3-D seismic says," said Woody Woodside, president of Trend.

A few years ago only a handful of companies were shooting 3-D seismic in the Permian Basin, now nearly every seismic company in the United States and a few from Canada have converged on the Permian Basin to get a share of the action. Dawson Geophysical, which once commanded 40 percent of the projects in the basin is now down to only 15 percent of the work, but is still booked six to eight months in advance.

While 3-D has been around for about 15 years as an offshore tool for the oil industry, its onshore debut is around five years old. But during that brief time it has managed to all but obliterate a science that had been around since the early '30s and '40s.

"As for 2-D, it's almost gone," Woodside said.

That is a view echoed by Decker Dawson, president of Dawson Geophysical. "It is very rare that we get a call to do a 2-D shoot anymore," Dawson said. "The 2-D technology was the standard for the industry for many years and we found a lot of oil and gas with it, but this is a new era — the era of 3-D."

Dawson said 2-D was useful in finding big structures, but that 3-D is the tool for finding more subtle traps. "Today, 2-D is used only as a reconnisance tool, to locate areas to look at more closely with 3-D."

This new way of looking for oil and gas, which allows producers to look at a prospect from many directions instead of just two, is literally transforming the oilpatch. And as many are saying, it could be the technological ticket to save the domestic oil industry from a slow and painful death by depleted production.

The seismic process, which relies on thousands of geophones laid out on a grid across an area, is able to spot with great accuracy such geological phenomenon as small pinnacle reefs, fault structures, detrital areas, stratigraphic traps such as old river channels and sand bars and other features where oil might be trapped underground.

And as the search for natural gas becomes more intense and deeper, 3-D is expected to play a very large role in defining deep natural gas structures in the Delaware and Val Verde basins of the Permian Basin.

Seismic crews in the Permian Basin are working long hours to keep up with the demand for 3-D seismic surveys, as evidenced by this lonely Dawson Geophysical recording truck at sunset.

Not only is it finding new fields, overlooked by conventional exploration methods, it is also good at finding oil by-passed by traditional producing techniques within a field. Oil sometimes gets bypassed or shoved into a pocket within a field and when these sweet spots are drilled they result in thousands of barrels of additional oil.

For that reason 3-D is being used to design and implement enhanced oil-recovery projects, such as Unocal's Dollarhide Project. The company is using 3-D data there not only to justify new drilling locations but to better understand reservoir communication between injector and producing wells.

Phillips Petroleum Co. is so sold on the process that it has just completed shooting all of its major producing fields in the Permian Basin in hopes of finding additional drilling locations. Phillips says it was not disappointed in the project that was started in 1989, and expects to drill a substantial number of new wells as a result of the study. Phillips, after drilling 15 wells based on 3-D data, has drilled only one dry hole.

Trend Exploration, a Midland-based independent oil company, says that thanks to 3-D its finding costs for a barrel of oil has dropped to the unheard of low cost of $1.50 a barrel, far below the average acquisition cost of under $5 a barrel.

There is no way of telling how much more oil and gas could be added to Permian Basin reserves through 3-D seismic, but wild guesses run as high as 30-40 percent of what is now in place. That's the increase roughly refleced in the current rig count. Some, however, say the present number of rigs working as a result of 3-D is much higher. "Soon every well drilled will be drilled on the basis of 3-D data," said one operator, "it is just too costly to drill without it."

There are also other 3-D applications outside the basin that will have a direct bearing on the oil and gas industry here. In Michigan and Pennsylvania, the seismic technique is being used to locate depleted pinnacles that could be suitable for natural gas storage.

"Increased storage could have an impact on the stabilization of natural gas prices," said Woodside of Trend Technology, who has worked on 13 storage projects this year in the Northeast and expects to do nine more before the end of the year.

Other applications talked about for 3-D seismic include taking a geological look at nuclear shot holes in Nevada to determine the extent of geological damage.

WeCTOGA meeting set for Monday

West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association President Jim Polk announced the Annual Fall Meeting with be held at Fairway Oaks Country Club, Abilene, Texas, on Monday, September 27, 1993. The golf tournament will begin with a shotgun start at 12:00 noon. The directors and membership meeting will start at 5:00 p.m. with a social hour to precede dinner served at 7:30.

an acres. During this time, he will shoot the area, collect and interpret data, then exercise an option to lease acreage on a prospect.

Many participants in the play are now saying, however, that a six to eight month option is not long enough to put together a deal, shoot the seismic and interpret the data. The option term that has been tossed about is two years.

Parallel, which does not use the seismic option and has put 5,000 acres under lease, has opted to go to straight leasing and is one of those companies getting healthy in the new 3-D play.

On 5,000 leased acres it has identified 12 "A-plus" prospects and about 10 more "B" and "C" prospects. Now drilling its second well, Parallel's first well, the Nora Jones, was the best well that has been drilled on the Atoll. It completed for 1,200 bopd, but is being produced at only 100 bopd. A year and half after being drilled, it is still flowing 100 bopd with no water.

To put that in perspective: 100 barrels daily at $18 oil totals $54,000 per month. Subtract $10,800 per month to the royalty owner and that leaves $43,200 per month to Parallel and its partners. With 80 percent of the Nora Jones, Parallel will gross $34,560 per month from that one well before operating costs.

Multiply that scenario by another 10-20 wells that Parallel will drill and you can see how an oil company can get very healthy very fast with a good play.

Multiply Parallel's success by 10-20 independent oil companies involved in the play, and one can see how one good play can bring a healty prosperity to the Basin.

Keep in mind that the Horseshoe Atoll is only the first 3-D play and that many more are likely to follow, and one can see that this 3-D thing is for real and deserves all the hype it is getting. In the long run, 3-D will probably be better than anyone dreamed.

Some 500 petroleum industry leaders are expected for the two-day meeting. They will hear from Mary Scott Nabers of Austin, a member of the Railroad Commission of Texas; Bill White, deputy secretary of the Department of Energy in Washington, D.C. and Harry J. Longwell of Houston, president of Exxon Company, U.S.A. Other speakers include two other members of the RRC, Chairman Jim Nugent and Barry Williamson; Jane Hoffman, a staff attorney in the RRC's Oil & Gas Division; Beverly Hartsock, deputy executive director of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission's Office of Air Quality, and Laura Koesters, deputy executive director of the TNRCC's Office of Water Resource Management, and George Christian, Inc.

The Penetrator System: Technology, experience and performance

It is virtually impossible to drill a well without causing some kind of damage to the surrounding oil and gas formations. Often caused by the introduction of liquids, such as cement and drilling/completion fluids into the formation, this damaged area can become a permanent barrier to hydrocarbon production.

Conventional stimulation is not always the answer and this is where Penetrators Inc. can help to boost production by using their patented liquid jet drill technology.

The original tool, the "Lance Penetrator Tool" (LPT) was conceived in 1983 by a team of engineers which included Penetrator's engineering manager, Alan Peters.

Penetrators Inc. has taken the technology from the conception stage to its current commercial level and it has proved that deep penetration completion techniques can be undertaken with dramatic increases in production.

The lance Jet Tool is a liquid jet drill that is run in the well on a turbine work string. The tool is positioned and orientated at the correct depth and non-contaminating fluid is pumped at high pressure, from a service unit, to the Lance System. As the pressure increases (typically up to about 10,000 psi), a punch is forced out of the tool and through the casing. This forms the path along which the armored lance travels. The Lance is equipped with a jet drill that uses high pressure/low volume, non-contaminating fluids to cut a channel up to 10 feet rapidly from the wellbore through the surrounding cement and into the formation.

This liquid jet technology has proved very successful in dealing with the challenges of difficult wells such as those that have:

- Damaged oil invaded zones,
- Large, smooth entry holes,
- No damage to casing or cement,
- Allows selective placement of acids or solvents,
- Multiple penetrations during a single trip in the well.

Other benefits include the facts that the LPT is non explosive and non damaging and it does not cause debris. All of these benefits mean that the LPT helps to reduce downtime while increasing production.

Penetrators has spent a lot of time doing research and development into the uses of liquid jet technology. The heart of this research is based around the highly trained and qualified staff who have designed the equipment and put it to highly successful use not only here in the Permian Basin, but all over the United States and Canada.

For more information about the LPT and its associated tools call Stephen Henson (District Manager) or Alan Peters at the midland Office, 682-4703, 1000 Goode Street, Midland or Ron Cherry, (the Executive Vice President) at the Houston Office, (713) 984-1773.

Halliburton pioneered 3-D seismic technology

■ Halliburton Geophysical pioneered 3-D seismic and much of its equipment.

By Ellen Hopkins

Although 3-D seismic didn't come to the Permian Basin until 1974, seismic exploration in the United States began fifty years earlier in 1923. The origin of Halliburton Geophysical Services and its predecessors dates back to that first refraction crew, and the company's innovative technology is constantly evolving.

Halliburton Geophysical Services, now a division of Halliburton Energy Services, pioneered 3-D seismic surveys and much of the equipment used in the industry. From the earliest geophone and basic analog data acquisition systems, Halliburton has set many standards for the seismic industry in equipment and processing.

Among its technical achievements are the miniature geophone, the Common Depth Point (CDP) method, laser plotters, the Sleeve Gun* Pneumatic Energy Source, digital acquisition and processing of seismic data, fiber-optic transmission systems, reservoir monitoring, and 3-Dimensional seismic methods.

Halliburton introduced 3-D seismic to the Permian Basin in 1974 in Southeast New Mexico. Although there previously had been a number of pseudo 3-D attempts, Halliburton conducted the first true production oriented 3-D survey on the Bell Lake Field in Lea County. Several of the major oil companies were involved in this survey and participated in the ongoing development of "successful" methods.

A few years later the first Marine 3-D was conducted offshore. By the late 70s Halliburton had several field crews collecting 3-D seismic data in the Western U.S., and had a number of data processing sites. By 1979 3-D seismic constituted 5 to 10 percent of the total geophysical work worldwide.

In Midland, Halliburton's personnel were very involved in the beginnings of 3-D and made many contributions to the improvement of technologies, procedures, design, and economics. Some of the current recommendations about the best way of collecting 3-D data and what to avoid were learned the "hard way" in the late 70s.

From this time period and for the next decade, surveys were mainly requested by the majors for two reasons: they were aware of the value of 3-D seismic, and they could afford it.

This pattern of limited use continued, and during the early 80s only one 3-D seismic survey on the average was run in the Permian Basin every two years. On the other hand, the use of 2-D seismic was commonplace and more affordable.

Around 1986 the local seismic picture began to change. The frequency of 3-D seismic increased to about four or five surveys per year.

By 1989-90 the independents had entered the 3-D seismic arena. Recording systems had become large enough to change the economics of a survey, so many independents found that joining forces afforded them an opportune and cost-effective means to run 3-D.

Thus began the snowballing workload of 3-D in the Permian Basin. The high demand for 3-D currently means that seismic crews are booked up months in advance. And it can take many months to fully evaluate an area's survey results.

Interpreting the thousands of bits of seismic data takes a massive memory and many hours and days of computer time. Advances in software packages to compare, map, colorize and overlay multiple levels of data are among the most innovative in the oil industry. Interpretation software is handled either by a workstation or PC format.

The type version run on a PC costs about $10,000 to set up, is limited in the volume of survey information it can handle, and is often used basically for structural interpretation. Software which runs on a workstation costs between $70,000 and $150,000, describes clearer indications of reefs and porosity zones, and uses sophisticated math to interpolate between the seismic signal points.

Halliburton Energy Services has built its own interpretation software known as "MDS-18" and is a workstation format. As one screen is updated by a geophysicist who is, for example, marking a zone on a time slice screen, the update is simultaneously made internally so it will show on all other screens.

It is this interpolation and analysis of data that makes 3-D seismic a valuable tool. As more companies realize the data value, and as more areas are evaluated using a combination of 3-D, 2-D and well control, the workload for Halliburton and others will continue.

As with so many aspects of the oil industry, the technology -- only 20 years in the making -- has advanced rapidly and continues to improve. Halliburton has been credited with some of the most significant developments in the geophysical industry, and as a result received two awards from the Society of Exploration Geophysicists (SEG).

In Midland, Halliburton's personnel were very involved in the beginnings of 3-D and made many contributions to the improvement of technologies, procedures, design, and economics. Some of the current recommendations about the best way of collecting 3-D data and what to avoid were learned the "hard way" in the late 70s.

The first distinguished achievement award in 1986 recognized Halliburton Geophysical Services for "the advent of digital recording and digital processing in seismic exploration." This referred to the widely used technologies that were pioneered by HGS employees, breakthroughs that basically changed the geophysical industry's methods.

Another SEG award in 1989 honored Halliburton Geophysical Services' distinguished achievements in 3-D seismic technology. It was noted at the time that the SEG had never offered such recognition to a geophysical company.

Further recognition came at the 1990 Offshore Technology Conference in Houston where Halliburton was honored for "the development and implementation of Marine 3-D."

The chairman of the OTC Awards Committee, Ross Kastor of Shell Oil Co., said of 3-D seismic, "While many companies contributed to the perception that this type of technology would be valuable, it remained on the theoretical plane until extensive effort at HGS made it practical in the field."

Phillips sold on 3-D seismic

■ Phillips Petroleum has developed a major 3-D seismic program in the Permian Basin.

By Ellen Hopkins

Phillips Petroleum Company began shooting 3-D seismic over its main producing fields in the Permian Basin in 1989. With an over 90 percent success rate on wells drilled based on the 3-D data, the company continues evaluating prospects, candidates for waterflood projects, and is even looking to reshoot some of their original 3-D.

This year alone, Phillips has shot over 200,000 sq. miles of 3-D. The area of interest is mainly Lea, Andrews and Ector Counties according to Neil Judge, principle geophysicist with Phillips.

"We're also shooting seismic for possible wildcatting in a few other counties," said Judge.

He mentioned some joint seismic work Phillips has engaged in, including two shoots with Chevron at Puckett and Goldsmith. The company is also involved in a DOE funded project.

"The Department of Energy has offered grants to stimulate interest in old oil fields," said Judge. "We're in one of those in the South Cowden Field."

He added that the company has shot a lot of held-by-production leases, and is looking at some complex plays. He also mentioned two waterfloods for which Phillips is actively trying to use 3-D seismic.

"And we've drilled 15 wells in the Permian Basin based on 3-D seismic data," said Judge. "Only one was a dry hole, so we feel we've had a very good success rate."

Judge explained the reasoning behind the company's interest in shooting so much 3-D seismic.

"We're looking at 3-D from an economic point of view," he said. "We look at a field, at leases, review the geologic and engineering studies that have been done, and look at the potential reserves left in the field. Then we look for some potential below and above the producing reservoir, consider any field extension potential and any additional unidentified reserves in the field."

Judge said in areas where wells are on 20 acre spacing, chances are not much has been missed.

"But we feel most fields have additional potential," he said. "And nine times out of ten with 3-D you can find additional potential. We know that because we've shot so much of it. But sometimes there is nothing left and it's evident the area is drilled up."

Recording technicians inside a Dawson Geophysical recording truck. Dawson helped Phillips reshoot with 3-D its major reservoirs in the Permian Basin.

Judge described the company's overall 3-D evaluation of the Permian Basin as a constantly evolving process.

"Compared to when we started this, we now have better acquisition technology and out crews are better," he said. "So we're looking at reshooting some of the 3-D we did several years ago. It's tough to justify, but the constantly improving technology may make it worthwhile."

He said Phillips had a good lead over other companies in that it had its own 3-D seismic crew.

"We used them initially to get us started and we still use them. Based on their availability, we also had to contract out some of our seismic to Dawson Geophysical."

He said they process their own data on a Cray YMP "Super-computer" at the company's Bartlesville, Oklahoma office.

"It's a super-computer because we can compute in 20 seconds what it takes others days to do," Judge said.

Phillips, like many majors, subscribes to the team concept of assigning and accomplishing work.

Dollarhide prime example of 3-D use in tertiary projects

■ The Dollarhide field in Andrews County is a prime example of how 3-D seismic can help maximize tertiary recovery projects.

By Ellen Hopkins

Innovations in 3-D seismic have increased its use for drilling exploration and exploitation wells, and for gaining insight into tertiary recovery projects. The Dollarhide Field in Andrews County, Texas is a prime example of the latter use.

Unocal North American Oil and Gas Division and Halliburton Geophysical Services joined forces in 1988 to survey a 24 sq. mile area of the Dollarhide Field. The primary purpose was to accurately image the faults within the Devonian.

Before a 3-D survey was begun, the geophysicists from both companies worked closely to design the survey. The design included the size of the survey, the source and receiver arrays, migration aperture and sweep bandwidth. This information was modeled with offset geometry.

The readily available well control included 2-D seismic data and logs from which the depth of the main objective, velocity, maximum dip to be recorded and reflection data quality were determined.

With this knowledge it was determined that the cost of the 3-D survey, which would yield 1140 miles of 3-D data over the 24 sq. miles, would be approximately $1.3 million. However, because of dip parameters revealed through well control, Halliburton Geophysical Services suggested two innovations that would reduce the cost.

Economies were realized in that not as much sampling criteria was needed, due to the dip in one direction being less steep than in the other. The sharp changes in bed angles east to west were not present in the north-south direction, so the geophones could be spaced out. Subsurface lines in the north-south direction were spaced at 330 ft. instead of the common 110 ft. This reduced the amount of acquired data by 66 percent, and subsequently reduced the data processing required by 66 percent.

This innovative 3-1 interpolation technique along with simultaneous source recording (using two vibrators to simultaneously sweep two lines) reduced the cost of the survey by nearly two-thirds to $400,000. This cost was almost half the cost of a half-mile grid of 2-D seismic, and only slightly more than the cost of a dry hole.

The cost was also compared with the after-tax profit of $1 million for a primary Devonian development well in this field. It was determined to run the 3-D survey, not only because adding one producing well could recoup the cost of the survey, but also to give Unocal's geologists and engineers additional information which would enhance the location of wells for the CO2 flood.

Unocal's review of the seismic data at a point of known porosity (from well control) was compared with seismic data of unknown areas. According to John Gogas, geophysicist with Unocal, they used geostatistics to determine the relationships between porosity distribution and the seismic amplitudes. The seismic amplitude results indicated a porosity estimate of the Devonian at the producing level.

This type data is not only used by companies to justify drilling locations, but also to understand the reservoir communication or lack thereof between injectors and producers in tertiary projects.

The structure map constructed from 3-D data was far more detailed than the original map which had been determined by 40 acre spaced well control. Seismic data point spacing was equivalent to approximately four wells per acre, and the resulting structure map contouring is more detailed and the faults more complex.

With 3-D data loaded on an interactive workstation, interpreters generated a composite amplitude map. The amplitudes are interpreted as relating to the thickness of the producing zone. The larger amplitudes on the map, in most cases, corresponded with the better wells in the field.

The major cross faults appeared to divide the structure into four major fault blocks. Gogas said the northern fault block is the only one that is undergoing CO2 flooding, and that is in the Clearfork -- a horizon above the Devonian which has no faults. He added that the study didn't aide them in this endeavor, however, Unocal will use the 3-D study to enhance modeling of future CO2 projects.

To execute a proper 3-D study, in productive fields such as the Dollarhide or other fields, miles and miles of data such as seen here in the Dawson Geophysical inventory, must be processed and then interpreted by skilled computer explorationist.

PHILLIPS: Likes 3-D

(From 4E)

Judge said Phillips has numerous teams of employees who work on 3-D seismic projects. Each team consists of geologists, landmen, engineers and geophysicists who combine their knowledge and expertise to evaluate the projects.

"We're at the point where we want to see 3-D before we drill anything," said Judge. He said it's become a company standard for Phillips.

"We're committed to 3-D and feel we have a good portfolio of prospects in the Permian Basin," he said. "That will keep us busy out here for a while."

Texaco creates stir on Wall Street

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Texaco, which after years of notoriety had slipped back into the doldrums on Wall Street, is creating a stir again. Only this time the news is positive.

Last week, it announced that it had agreed to sell its petrochemical business for $1.06 billion to Huntsman Chemical Corp., based in Salt Lake City, Utah, a move that will free up considerable money for oil and gas exploration.

Three weeks ago, Texaco disclosed that it was the beneficiary of a fund put together by the United States and Russia to encourage American companies to invest in Russia. Texaco has an $80 million project to restore the production of 150 dormant wells in the huge Sutormin field in western Siberia.

Though the project is small by big oil company standards, it is the kind of venture that some are using to gain experience in dealing with the Russians for future exploration.

Two weeks ago the company, based in White Plains, N.Y., won a big legal victory when a state court judge in Utah set aside a jury verdict awarding a small Utah gold mining company damages of $404.2 million against two subsidiaries of Texaco.

The spate of good news is in sharp contrast to the days in the late 1980s when a long legal battle with Pennzoil Co. over an $11 billion award by a Texas jury and a takeover attempt by Carl C. Icahn kept Texaco in the news and had analysts chortling over its every bungle.

Texaco shares hit a low of $30 in 1986, and it filed for bankruptcy protection the next year. Wall Street concluded that its management, which had a reputation for arrogance, got what it deserved.

But by 1989 the company had settled with Pennzoil, emerged from bankruptcy and bought out Icahn. Alfred C. DeCrane Jr., the chairman, and James W. Kinnear, the president and chief executive who has since retired, led Texaco's climb back under the often skeptical eye of investors.

Many analysts said the management team had done its job well. "They have done a much better than average job in turning the business around," said Frederick P. Leuffer, an oil analyst with Bear, Stearns & Co., who has a "hold" on the stock because of the uncertainties of falling oil prices and a view that the stock may have peaked.

That quiet turnaround has been hard to see in a year when Texaco's stock has been a bit disappointing. While the stocks of competitors such as Chevron, Mobil and Royal Dutch/Shell have risen an average of 16 percent this year, Texaco's 10 percent climb seems modest. Analysts said the other oil producers were being rewarded — unfairly, perhaps — for cost-cutting and restructuring moves that Texaco tackled in the 1980s.

Amoco to boost North Sea gas

CHICAGO (AP) — Two major natural gas projects operated by subsidiaries of the Amoco Production Co. are expected to increase Amoco's North Sea natural gas production by 75 percent in the near future, company officials said.

"These two projects — on in the United Kingdom and one in the Netherlands — represent a substantial capital investment by Amoco in the North Sea during the last three years," said J.C. Burton, group vice president of international operations for Amoco Production Co.

"They are valuable additions to the North Sea infrastructure that will increase Amoco's cash flow."

In the United Kingdom sector of the North Sea, 300 million cubic feet of gas now is being transported through the recently opened Central Area Transmission System from two Amoco-operated fields, named Everest and Lomond. The Amoco-operated pipeline, which is 250 miles long, has a capacity of 1.6 billion cubic feet of gas a day, officials said.

In the Dutch sector of the North Sea, about 25 miles from Rotterdam, Amoco Netherlands Petroleum Co. will begin operating a new central processing platform next month. The facility will have a capacity of 500 million cubic feet a day, with gas from several Amoco-operated fields.

Exxon, Tejas Gas sign pipeline deal

HOUSTON (AP) — Exxon Co. U.S.A. and Tejas Gas Corp. say they have signed agreements under which Tejas will buy "substantially all" of Exxon's Texas and Louisiana intrastate natural gas pipeline systems for $380 million.

Under the agreement, Houston-based Tejas will buy all the outstanding stock of Exxon Gas System Inc., Monterey Pipeline Co., Humble Gas Transmission Co. and Humble Gas System Inc. Tejas also will buy Exxon's West Clear Lake gas storage field near Houston.

Tejas will supply and transport natural gas under long-term arrangements to Exxon's Baytown and Baton Rouge refining and chemical plant complexes, the companies said. Exxon will keep its gas production and processing operations that connect to the pipeline systems, and Tejas will buy some natural gas from and provide long-term transportation services to Exxon.

The companies said more than half the 136 employees of the Exxon affiliates to be sold to Tejas will keep their jobs. Most of the rest will move elsewhere in Exxon, while the others will be offered severance.

Trend Exploration Vice President and geologist Scott Dufford, seated, and Kent Gaultney, land and operations manager, study seismic data on a 3-D system. The company has thrived with the use of 3-D seismic technology.

Trend Exploration finds success in 3-D

■ 3-D seismic has helped Trend Exploration greatly improve both its success in finding oil and its profitability.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Not only has 3-D seismic technology helped locate hard-to-find oil deposits, the technology has helped Trend Exploration locate success.

According to company Vice President Scott Dufford, the company has been involved in a little over 40 miles of 3-D seismic shoots in the Wolfcamp and Fusselman formations of Glasscock County and the Strawn-Canyon Reef of the Horseshoe Atoll in Howard and Mitchell counties, all at a cost of approximately $1 million. To date, Dufford reports, the company has drilled 21 wells in these areas with a 65 percent success rate.

Trend has primarily concentrated on the Wolfcamp and Fusselman formations in Glasscock County, completing two Wolfcamp wells last year that produced well over 1,000 barrels each.

The company still has roughly 30 locations left to drill on prospects generated by its 3-D seismic shoots. Trend is in the process of keeping two rigs busy drilling its wells until the end of the year and perhaps well into next year.

Dufford and company President Terry Holland had left Marathon in 1987 to form Trend, hoping to take advantage of low oil prices that they felt were sure to recover, and three years later decided to try 3-D seismic, then an emerging onshore technology. "As far as the Midland area went, we were one of the first companies to do a big 3-D shoot, 14 square miles in Glasscock County," Dufford said.

It is a decision that has paid off. Before Trend used 3-D seismic, its success rate was 14 percent. The company had drilled or participated in 14 wells, of which two were completed for an ultimate recovery of 1 million barrels of oil. And the company's finding cost was $4 per barrel before royalties.

Since 3-D seismic was shot for the company, its success rate has climbed to 63 percent out of 21 wells, which will yield an estimated ultimate recovery of 4.5 million barrels of oil while finding costs have fallen to $1.50 per barrel before royalties.

The company has gone from 200 barrels a day of operated production to 2,100 barrels of operated production after 3-D and from 40 barrels per day of non-operated production to 2,700 barrels per day of production.

"Our dismal success rate is what got us looking at 3-D," acknowledged Dufford. "There weren't many companies involved in 3-D at the time, but we decided we needed to do something different; if we didn't do something different, we wouldn't survive."

About the time the decision was made to try 3-D seismic, the cost of the technology — primarily for the computers and software needed to process and analyze the data — had fallen, making surveys on a smaller scale more affordable.

Dufford said Trend Exploration had 3-D shot in Glasscock, Howard and Mitchell counties "because those were areas we were involved in before 3-D."

Now, the company's success has helped create a mini-boom in Glasscock County and in the Horseshoe Atoll area of Howard and Mitchell counties. Dufford said Trend is planning to do 3-D seismic surveys in other areas. He declined to specify where, but said the company plans to concentrate on the Midland Basin and in Texas.

Since the Permian Basin is a mature producing area, Dufford said that new discoveries will primarily be small two and three-well fields, deeper production and in stratigraphic traps. What 3-D seismic does, he said, with the help of powerful computer workstations is give geologists and geophysicists more tools to work with in manipulating the data different ways and discover these smaller finds.

RMF upgrades its computers

By Ellen Hopkins

RMF DESIGN AND INSPECTION owner Mike Wilson said the company is constantly upgrading its state-of-the-art computer equipment to assist the oil industry in meeting government regulations. RMF Design provides oil and gas companies with written documentation and schematics of facilities such as gas plants. The company also designs drilling rigs. Wilson said they have to upgrade map chips, monitors, memory, and graphics cards almost monthly because the computer industry continually develops new hardware and software. Company personnel also stay abreast of government regulations and requirements so they can provide customers readable and interpretable documentation in a format that can be grasped by non-engineers.

Pro Inspection, in which Mike Wilson is also part owner, provides quality control inspection of facilities. Wilson said the two businesses go hand-in-hand as inspections and documentation are both needed on the same facilities.

What has been needed for wells with paraffin problems could be found at REACTION CHEMICAL ENTERPRISES. Company President David Wallender said he has received good response to a fairly new paraffin solvent called "Paract 428". He described it as a water soluble paraffin solvent and he is pleased that it is catching on quite well. The chemical turns producing fluid into paraffin solvent inhibitor. Wallender cited the example of well in which 25 to 30 gallons of Paract 428 was injected. The well, which had been producing around 1.5 bopd began producing 100 bopd after the treatment.

Finding solutions is why KEY ENTERPRISES owner Ted Stewart has shifted the company's emphasis the last six months by deciding to reenter the pipeline and utility construction market. The company previously owned Hobas USA, Inc. in Houston, a pipe and equipment manufacturing company which Stewart owned since 1987. Vice President Max Thomas said Key Enterprises has been in business since 1965 and, until the purchase of Hobas USA, was a major contractor concentrating on sewer, oil field and other types of construction. He said the company is once again actively seeking and bidding on construction contracts and currently has a lot of projects going.

UNION SUPPLY CO. also has a lot going on as indicated by the opening of a sixteenth store earlier this year on Garden City Highway in Midland. The Midland office on North Big Spring has been the administration/purchasing headquarters for Union Supply, and Bob Brewington, vice president of administration, said the store location is doing well. He said that store is handling a lot of valve repair work where s ome of the other locations repair subsurface pumps. The other store locations are in Andrews, Aspermont, Big Lake, Forsan, Kermit, Lamesa, Odessa, Orla, San Angelo, Snyder, Sundown and Wink, Texas; and in Artesia, Eunice and Hobbs, New Mexico.

SURVEYING AND ENGINEERING SERVICES

Midlander writes interpretation program

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

A major cost associated with 3-D seismic exploration has been interpretation, but that is getting cheaper thanks to a Midland geophysicist and computer-whiz.

Once 3-D has been acquired by recording trucks in the field and processed by geophysical companies the next step is to interpret it by playing it several ways in a computer.

Normally, interpretation has required the use of $100,000-plus work stations that had to be purchased or rented on a time share basis. But now that has changed, because Robert "Bob" Vest of Midland has written a program that allows a geologists to interpret 3-D data on a regular 386 or 486 PC.

To date Vest has sold 70 of the programs which are in use by many of the largest independents in the Permian Basin including Santa Fe, Marathon, Oxy and Wagner & Brown. Those using it are quick to sing its praises for its low cost, convenience and efficiency.

"We are using the software on our Martin County shoot and we are very pleased with it. I think it will soon be the industry standard," said Tim Parker, division vice president Santa Fe Energy Resources. "What Vest has done in bringing 3-D to the PC is one of the major stories to come out of the 3-D movement, and one of the biggest breakthroughs in 3-D technology in the past five years."

"We don't have all the bells and whistles that some $100,000 systems like Landmark have and we can't quite do all the things they can do, but we are almost there," said Vest, who noted that his eventual goal is to have a PC-based system that will be able to do everything that a Landmark system can do.

Vest, a native of Hobbs and a former geophyscist for Texaco and Getty, has been on his own as a consultant since 1984, and says he spent almost a year writing the 3-D interpretation program.

Vest says he originally wrote the program for consultants, and independents, but many of the major oil companies have now show an interest in the package.

"Many of the major oil companies are getting away from mainframes and going back to PCs. This program will fit right in with that shift."

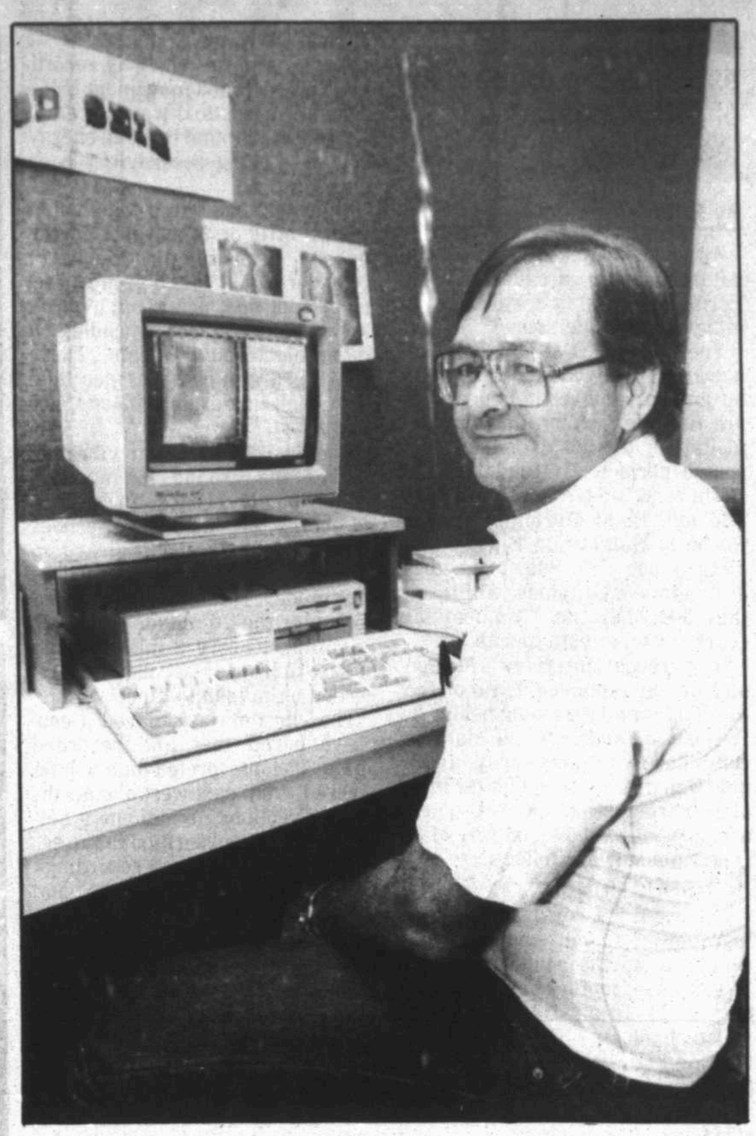
The program will operate on any PC that has an ATI Graphics Card, which can be added to the hardware if it doesn't already come with the card.

The program sells for $5,000 and for a $30 per month maintenance fee, program purchasers are entitled to all new additions to the program and assistance calls, which he says are not that many.

"The beauty of this program is that despite the complex job it does, it is quiet simple to use. When I install a program, I spend about four hours giving the new owner instruction and that is about all that is required."

Vest says that his vision for the program has increased significantly since he wrote it.

"I once envisioned a small contingent of consultants who would buy the program, but now with the spread of 3-D and the interest of major and independent oil companies in the program, I see a huge worldwide market for the computer program."



Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Bob Vest of Midland has designed a 3-D seismic interpretation program that can run on a regular PC.

Course explains how 3-D works

■ A PBGC course explains the mechanics of 3-D seismic technology.

By Ellen Hopkins

Although 3-D seismic is second nature to many producers in the Permian Basin, it's still new to many industry personnel.

The mechanics of how the technology works, what knowledge can be gained, and what innovations are used for exploration and exploitation, are all explained in a course periodically taught at the Permian Basin Graduate Center in Midland. Peter Morton and Steve Roche of Halliburton Energy Services, along with Susan Mastoris of Landmark Graphics, will teach the 3-D Seismic Applications course October 18th to 20th.

In a recent interview, Morton and Roche explained some of the mechanics and reasoning behind 3-D seismic, and how the data is combined with previously available well data to give a better idea of substructure shapes. A quick overview of the how and why of 3-D seismic surveys follows.

INTRODUCTION

It's been described as the photography of sound. And it's been compared to the sonagram view an expectant mother has of her unborn child. In all cases, 3-D seismic technology -- through the recording of deflected sound -- provides a three-dimensional look into what lies below the earth's surface.

For years scientists and geologists have used the information gathered from drilled wells, namely core samples and logs, to visualize and estimate the existence of particular rocks, fluids and gas. The advent of 2-D seismic brought the picture more into focus, but the margin of error related to drilling dry holes was still significant. Subsurface features such as faults and reefs are indicated by 2-D seismic, but an ambiguity exists as to their exact location. With 2-D, a structure could lie offset of where it appears from data interpretation.

Reflective horizons are more clearly defined with 3-D seismic. Reflecting sound waves actually pinpoint "x", "y" and "z" dimensions of subsurface structures. The depth, structure and position relative to other reflecting horizons are accurately depicted with 3-D seismic.

Since 3-D seismic surveys have been run during the last 20 years, the success rate of drilling economical producing wells has dramatically increased. The detail afforded by 3-D seismic is considered by most to more than offset the cost of the survey...much more.

MECHANICS

Seismic data is a measure of reflectivity. Sound waves are measured in time -- the time it takes a sound wave to enter the earth, bounce off the subsurface features, and return to a pattern of carefully laid out detectors.

The detector magnets, or geophones, are comprised of a copper coil inside a magnet mounted on a spring. Movement generates an electric impulse which is recorded. This recorded movement is the result of acoustical waves -- emitted into the ground from an energy source -- being received by each detector.

Detectors are wired together in groups of 12 or 24 and the individual signals are summed to make a stronger signal. Each group of detectors, or box, is laid out over an area of 40 by 50 feet depending on the project requirements. There can be 96 groups/boxes per line, with each line usually placed 1320 feet apart.

The energy source, or vibrator, shakes the ground for approximately 8 to 10 seconds. The reflected energy, or sound wave, echoes back to the surface. It is picked up by each detector and recorded as amplitude. Through an on-board computer the amplitude is digitally sampled every 2 milliseconds, or 500 times per second, and recorded on magnetic tape.

The vibrators are moved a couple hundred feet and recorded again. The interpreted data will be layered, from east-west and north-south directions, to indicate a better picture of subsurface features.

The pattern of these recordings is carefully thought out and planned before the survey ever begins. The repetition of recordings is deliberately built into the design of each survey.

DESIGN

3-D seismic surveys are designed according to geology and the client's end use of the data. Before a survey crew ever reaches location, geophysicists carefully design the shoot to maximize the data obtained taking into account the well control -- or already known well data such as logs, cores and previously determined gas-water contacts.

A design will vary considerably depending on the type formation. A survey design for a San Andres or other shallow reservoir would be completely different from a design for a deeper Devonian or Ellenburger.

The depth of the objective, any other horizons of interest, and an indication of the velocity of the formation are all factored into a survey design. The relationship of velocity, time and depth are all needed to correctly interpret the data. Knowing the velocity of the rock, for example, is critical to converting the time of the reflected horizons to their proper depth.

An estimate of velocity is obtainable from sonic logs on previously drilled wells. Depth may be known from the geology of the area and time is calculated from the amplitude recordings of the 3-D survey. Often a marker formation, such as the Yates which is known across the Permian Basin, is used to indicate depth in wildcat areas.

Other indications needed for the survey design include surface conditions. Vibrator trucks weigh 40,000 pounds so surveys are designed to minimize damage to agricultural areas. Surveys may be planned around crop seasons, and must consider known obstacles such as pipelines, production pads and terrain. The kind of resolution needed is also a deciding factor. Resolving thin sands requires a special approach.

Above, in line profile within the 3-D data volume. The Devonian structure at depth is at 1.6 to 1.7 seconds and appears in dominant red and blue. Below, a horizontal time slice bisecting a Permian Age formation. The stronger seismic amplitudes represented by the blues and reds are areas of higher reflectivity.

INTERPRETATION

It is vitally important to the correct interpretation of 3-D data to know where everything was when the survey was run. The exact location of the source point, i.e. the vibrator trucks where energy is put into the ground, and where the detectors were placed to receive the sound, is a must.

The data points indicating the time of the reflecting acoustical waves are mapped through workstation or PC software. Because different rock types reflect sound at different speeds, 3-D results give an indication of the geology. Sound waves travel faster through limestone and slower through a less dense rock like shale, so 3-D can be used to infer geologic layers. However, the differences between similarly dense rocks such as limestone and dolomite are difficult to distinguish.

The reflectivity can also be used to measure porosity in a relative sense under certain conditions. Faults, even small faults, are more apparent and detailed with 3-D seismic.

The image produced with 3-D seismic, then, is an image of the reflectivity of the subsurface structure. It is not a direct analysis of rock types, porosity or the presence of hydrocarbons.

Well logs indicate rock type, porosity and potential hydrocarbon presence within a few feet of the wellbore. When this information and any 2-D seismic is added to 3-D seismic, the results are an indication of the subsurface structure between wells. Where wells are assumed to produce from the same reservoir, 3-D seismic shows whether that is the case and if drilling additional wells will benefit.

Where a previous estimate indicated a producing formation in a particular area, 3-D seismic helps pinpoint a more exact location of the pay zone. Where a tertiary recovery project is planned, 3-D seismic shows non-communicating portions of the reservoir so the locations of injector and producer wells can be better planned. Multiple pay zones, anomalies trapped between faults, and discontinuous reservoirs all become clearer with the use of 3-D seismic.

Drilling venture set for southern Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A preliminary agreement has been reached to begin a horizontal drilling joint venture in the Sho-Vel-Tum field in southern Oklahoma, the president of an Oklahoma City company says.

Aubrey McClendon, president of Chesapeake Energy Corp., said Chesapeake has reached the preliminary agreements with Texaco and Mobil Oil. McClendon said the joint venture could lead to more than $100 million of investments in southern Oklahoma.

The Sho-Vel-Tum field is in parts of Stephens and Carter counties.

"If the application of horizontal drilling is successful in the Sho-Vel-Tum, we believe the venture could lead to the drilling of more than 100 horizontal wells during the next five to seven years at a gross cost of approximately $125 million," McClendon said.

The preliminary agreement was announced last week by Chesapeake.

McClendon said the project is so speculative it is hard to know what will happen. But he said he knew two wells are going to be drilled.

"I think the focus ought to be that this is an important test of the concept and, if successful, could lead to a lot of drilling," he said.

The southern Oklahoma field has produced more than 1 billion barrels of oil since it was discovered more than 80 years ago. Chesapeake, Texaco and Mobil all have significant operations there.

McClendon said formal exploration agreements are being worked on now.

Chesapeake said each of the three parties will contribute their land in the area.

SMILEYS

EXPRESSING YOURSELF SIDEWAYS

A new trend has hit the keyboards — a form of computer-mania that lets you express your feelings via symbols made with each keystroke.

It's called "Smileys" and David Sanderson, billed as the "Noah Webster of Smileys," has even compiled a "dictionary" of over 650 smileys (with text by Dale Dougherty) to express your moods.

A smiley is defined as "a sequence of ordinary characters you can find on your computer keyboard. Smileys are used in e-mail and other forms of communication using computers. "Emoticons" is another term used for smileys, meaning icons representing emotions.

The most popular smiley is a smiling face that people use to say 'don't take what I just wrote too seriously.' "

However, there is a slight catch to being able to read a smiley. If at first you can't see the image of a smiling face, try tipping your head to the left and looking again. The colon represents the eyes, the dash represents the nose and the right parenthesis forms the smiling mouth.

While not all smileys are turned counterclockwise, most are. They are all formed by characters on a computer keyboard, typed on a single line, usually following the punctuation mark at the end of a sentence.

These smileys also have a slant in their meaning. They are often used to indicate that what the writer just wrote isn't really what was meant. An example offered in "Smileys" is: "Well, having no vacation simplifies my life quite a bit. :-("

The book, "Smileys," is written not only to inform the reader of what a smiley is, but also to entertain, with bits of humor and wit thrown into many of the examples used.

Some examples of more common smileys — with their definitions are:

■ The Standard Smiley.

:-) You are joking. You are satisfied. This is the only smiley you know.

■ The Sad Smiley.

:-(You aren't joking, sadly. You are not satisfied. This is the only other smiley you know.

■ The Winking Smiley.

;-) You don't mean it, even if you are joking. "Surely you know what I mean." You are being sardonic even if you don't know what that means.

■ The Crying Smileys.

;-(You want to cry. You could cry if you had to. Or:

:'-(You are actually shedding tears.

■ The Apathetic Smiley.

:-I You say so because you were told what to say. You don't care what it means.

Several hundred women attended a tea hosted by 28 longtime Midlanders at the Midland Woman's Club in Hogan Park last weekend.

The yearly event, which traditionally begins the club's fall season, is anticipated by friends, who enjoy catching up on one another's summer activities and family news.

Always beautifully decorated, the clubhouse this year featured a burgundy color scheme. The serving table in the Great Hall was centered by two-tiers of white wrought iron, decorated with huge burgundy-colored magnolia blossoms and pomegranates. Madeira layered table cloths topped a floor-length, pleated satin skirt. Napkins were color co-ordinated in burgundy and pale pink. Arrangements of burgundy and white magnolias decorated the grand piano on the stage and also the Tea Room serving table. The floral designs were provided compliments of Forever Green.

Guests enjoyed a variety of tea time delicacies.

An added feature of the event was the display of art work by Midland realtor Helen Pogue, a floral and landscape artist. Her exhibit is on display at the clubhouse through the month of September.

The hostesses were Dollie Ballenger, Frances Brown, Allis Chapman, Margaret Coleman, Marty Conine, Minnie German, Virginia Gilbert, Hilda Hines, Suzanne Clevenger Martin, Lucile McCree, Evelyn Minear, Gladys Mitchell, Ferne Moore, Martha Moore, Dorothy Perkins.

Also, Frances Ratliff, Beverly Riley, Patricia Ann Roberts, Fran Schutte, Dell Shettle, Hazel Smith, Leona Smith, Violet Smyres, Madge Wallis, Jane Ward, Eileen Welch, Patricia Wettstein and Lydia Wilkinson.

LONGTIME MIDLAND Community Theatre supporters Nancy and Buddy Anguish hosted a delightful party recently at Theatre Midland. Co-producers of the play, "Smoke on the Mountain," they entertained friends at a special performance.

The evening of Americana humor and gospel singing began with a cocktail buffet in the theatre lobby at 7:30 p.m., and the curtain was at 8:30. Dessert and coffee were served during the show's single intermission

Among those who helped fill the house almost to capacity were Karen and Tim Thompson, Mitzi and Jay Purvis, Wilda and Maurice Bullock, Sue (Mrs. Sam) Conner, Elizabeth (Mrs. H.W.) Davidson, Patti and Watson LaForce, Peggy Bales, Sara and Dr. Norman Fry, and Lena and John Ochsner.

THE MINUET CLUB held its traditional fall dance recently at the Petroleum Club.

Members gathered for a cocktail hour prior to the dance. Immediately following, dinner was served buffet style, and the band, Nite Life, provided the music.

Among those enjoying the festive event were Mary Katherine and Johnny Mills, Margaret and Bill Ortloff, Tommie and Dean Strack, Debbie and Sam Bakke, Alma and Mike Thompson, Theresa and Bill Woodruff and Bettie and Dow Hamm.

The club's next dance will be its Presentation Ball on Dec. 22 when 13 young women will make their debuts.

DARLENE RENFRO, granddaughter of Midlander Louise Cleary, was honored with a display bridal shower recently in the home of Ruth (Mrs. Ed) Aldridge.

The other hostesses were Patti (Mrs. Lyle) Galbraith, Mary Maude (Mrs. R.J.) Hickman, Edith (Mrs. Frank) Stahl, Irene (Mrs. Charles) Southard and Wanna (Mrs. Bob) Bickerstaff.

Trays of finger sandwiches, dainty quiches, fresh fruit, miniature pecan pies and a bowl of fruit punch were served from a table centered with an arrangement of snapdragons, lilies, roses and Gerbera daisies in a silver bowl.

Darlene is the bride-to-be of David Bennett Atkinson II. After a Nov. 6 wedding in the bride's hometown of Houston, the couple will live in Dallas, where both are employed. She is the daughter of Shirley Renfro of Houston and the late Bryce Wayne Renfro. Her grandparents are Mrs. Cleary and the late Joe M. Cleary.

Out-of-town party guests included the bride's mother; Mrs. Sally Kine of Dallas, mother of the groom, and bridesmaid Lee Ann Hunt of Houston.

Chili cult winning converts

By David Karp
N.Y. Times News Service

Most Americans would sooner kiss a rattlesnake than bite into a fiendish-looking chili pepper, but each year, more people take the dare and are converted to the cult of the pungent pods, which are now at their peak of abundance. They are attracted by peppers' raw firepower, nutritious profile and intriguing variety of forms and flavors.

"There is an unparalleled shift in American cooking to hot and spicy foods," said Dave DeWitt, the editor of Chile Pepper magazine, a leading resource for aficionados. "Interest in ethnic and regional cuisines is exploding, and chilies are used in over 75 percent of the world."

There are no comprehensive figures for chili consumption, but according to the American Spice Trade Association, consumption of New Mexican chilies has almost doubled in the last five years, from 37.6 million pounds in 1987 to 64.2 million pounds in 1992. And those figures are only for dried peppers, not fresh.

"I see more cooks using fresh chilies as a major food ingredient, as in stews of New Mexican peppers," DeWitt said. "And there is a trend toward hotter peppers. The habanero is the current chili of choice."

SUSAN BLEW, who sells more than a dozen types of fresh peppers at her stand at the Union Square Greenmarket in Manhattan, said customers have to arrive early in the morning to find the scorching but aromatic habanero chili. "We plant more each year, and still we don't have enough," she said.

She and her husband, Ted, grow more than 70 varieties of hot peppers using organic methods on their farm in Pittstown, N.J., with the help of exotic seeds from customers' travels. Besides the common jalapenos and serranos, the stand often offers unusual peppers like the pili-pili from eastern Africa, the peter pepper and potted tepin and piquin plants for raising your own fiery devils.

New Yorkers pride themselves on toughness, and many have a macho I-can-eat-anything bravado, said David Jenkins, the owner of Hot Stuff, a spicy-food store (227 Sullivan Street, at West Third Street).

Similarly, Rochelle Zabourkes said that women often go to her shop, Adriana's Bazaar (2152 Broadway, at West 75th Street), for incendiary products to show up boastful boyfriends.

But there are also those who genuinely revel in megadoses of capsaicin (pronounced cap-SAY-iss-in), the chemical in the membranes of peppers that makes them hot. The chili head grins as his mouth stings, eyes tear, nose runs, face flushes and stomach quivers. Why would anyone subject himself to such torture?

By irritating nerve endings in the mouth, some scientists believe, capsaicin stimulates the brain to release endorphins, the natural painkillers that produce a sense of well-being. The heat in one's stomach radiates and suffuses the body in a mellow yet invigorating glow.

THE CHILI eater delights in walking the line between pleasure and pain, much as others are thrilled by sky diving or mountain climbing.

Mark Miller, the chef and author of "The Great Chile Book" (Ten Speed Press, 1991), said, "We live in a world that's so deprived of natural sensations, people search out hot peppers as a way to ground themselves existentially."

Miller frowns, however, on any excessive focus on chilies' firepower. "Eating chilies just because they're hot is like listening to music just because it's loud," he said. "As Americans become more educated about chilies, they're becoming more aware of their many nuances in flavor, especially in dried chilies, which represent a whole world of complexity and intensity."

Josefina Howard, the owner of Rosa Mexicano (1063 First Avenue, at East 58th Street), said she uses chilies mainly for their flavor, color and texture. She provided a simple recipe for guajillo salsa, whose sweet piquancy makes it a fine accompaniment for broiled poultry or meats.

Other dried chilies, like the ancho or pasilla, could be substituted for the guajillo. For those who don't have the time to go to Mexico, a culinary tour is as close as the spice shop.

GUAJILLO SALSA
(Adapted from Josefina Howard)

8 guajillo chilies (ancho or pasilla chilies can be substituted)
2 ripe tomatoes (about 1 pound)
½ medium white onion, coarsely chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
Salt to taste

Toast chilies on a griddle or skillet until fragrant, turning frequently so they don't get burned, about 5 minutes. Remove the seeds, devein, and let chilies soak in hot water for 10 minutes. Save the water.

Meanwhile, toast tomatoes over an open flame until the skins blacken. Remove the skins, and chop coarsely.

Put the chilies, tomatoes, onion, garlic and salt in a blender, along with 1 cup of the chili water, and puree.

Heat oil in a heavy skillet, and fry the puree over moderate heat for 5 minutes, stirring constantly.

Yield: 2½ cups.

You say 'chili,' I say 'chile'

By David Karp
N.Y. Times News Service

There are almost as many ways to spell "chili" as there are to cook it. When the Spanish arrived in Mexico, they adopted the Nahuatl Indian word for the pod, spelling it "chilli." Over the years the standard Spanish orthography became "chile," which is preferred today by many authorities. The most common Anglicized version is "chili" (plural: "chilies"), which is the spelling used by The New York Times, but most dictionaries offer "chile" as an alternative.

"Chili" frequently refers to chili con carne. The spelling "chilli" is also seen, often to refer to the commercial spice powder. In the Far East, "chillie" and "chilly" are yet more names for the plant and pod that scientists term "capsicum."

To confuse matters further, when Columbus sailed west, he was looking for India and its black pepper, or peppercorns (genus Piper). When he landed in the Caribbean, he tried to make the best of things by calling the inhabitants "Indians" and their favorite spice "peppers." Some purists frown on calling chilies "peppers," but in popular use, "chili" (however-you-spell-it) and "chili pepper" are interchangeable.

People have taken to using smileys as a form of self-expression. With a smiley you can say things you could never express in words, and smileys can mean whatever you want them to mean.

They are primarily used in electronic mail (e-mail) messages, but thy can also be found in other communications.

While the book is filled with a variety of smileys, the intrigue of the endless variety almost defies anyone to resist the urge to create some of their own.

Most smileys are used to express emotions, but there are some in "Smileys" that are simply clever caricatures. For example:

=):-) Uncle Sam
-=#:-)/ A wizard
:-)B Dolly Parton
:-.) Madonna
:/7) Cyrano de Bergerac
=I:-) Abe Lincoln
8(:-) Mouseketeer
B-) Batman

"Smileys" warns that overuse of smileys, like any punctuation mark, marks you as a beginner. Like those who over use exclamation marks, overuse of smileys will make the reader tend to ignore the marks entirely.

A few other caricatures include:

d:-) Happy face with a baseball cap
:-#I with a bushy moustache
':-) with one eyebrow raised
=:-H football player
!-(unhappy about a black eye

Peppers spice up landscapes

By Deborah A. Benge

Without question Mexican food is the fastest growing food cuisine in the United States, and Texas is no exception. There are several factors contributing to the flavor and uniqueness of Mexican food; one in particular is peppers.

Benge

Peppers are versatile in flavor, use and types. There many types of peppers you can grow and use in the Permian Basin with the right cultural practices.

The jalapeno pepper is a favorite among pepper connoisseurs, but don't overlook some of the other types that are different but just as good. An excellent pepper to try is referred to as a chile — the long green chile. This chile is excellent for fresh, frozen, canned and dried uses.

Long green chile is most commonly established from transplants in the spring after the danger of frost has past and soils have warmed. These warm season vegetables grow well in our hot, dry summers with good watering, fertilizing and mulching practices.

This pepper forms a thick-walled, flattened pod six to eight inches long and about two inches in diameter, and except for the seeds, the fruit is hollow. This shape lends itself to a favorite dish known as chile rellenos.

Long green chile as well as other hot peppers get their heat from an alkaloid called capsaicin. Capsaicin is concentrated in the tissue surrounding the seeds and appears as yellow or orange pustules. If you've a tender mouth, you'll want to share that part of the chile with someone else.

Some excellent varieties of long green chile types include Nu-Mex Big Jim, Nu-Mex R. Naky, Sandia, NM No. 6-4 and commonly available Anaheim.

Green chile can be harvested either green mature or red mature. Harvest green when the pods reach mature size, pods should be smooth and firm, not yielding to pressure easily. Left on the plant the chile will turn a brilliant red which can be used fresh or dried.

An excellent and beautiful way to dry your red child is to tie it into a ristra. Ristra is a Spanish word meaning "a string of..." These gorgeous strings of red chile are often used as decoration on porches, entries, patios and even inside homes. They can be accented with ornamental corn, yucca pods, dried plants and corn husks.

Tie and take home your own beautiful red chile ristra by attending the Chile Ristra Workshops, hosted by the Permian Basin Master Gardeners and TAEX Oct. 6-7. Mail or deliver your pre-registration to the Midland County Extension office by Sept. 30, and you'll be reserved seating and materials at the work shop of your choice. Workshop times are 6:30 p.m. Oct. 6; and 9 a.m., 1 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Oct. 7. Pre-register by sending $20 to Midland County Extension Service, P.O. Box 1070, Midland, Texas 79702. Make checks out to Permian Basin Master Gardeners.

Registration fee will cover a bushel of red chile, string, ornamental corn and other decorations. Workshops will be presented at Midland County Extension Office, 2445 E. Business Loop 20, next to Midland County Exhibit Building. For more information call 335-3071 or 687-1351.

'Kissing up to boss' may actually work

By Mitchell Schnurman
N.Y. Times News Service

It can be demeaning. It can be obvious. It can be juvenile. But "kissing up" to the boss still works; maybe that's why so many people do it.

In a business world where layoffs are common and promotions are rare, corporate climbers are looking for any edge. Almost intuitively, they know that kissing up can tilt the tables their way.

And now an academic study confirms what most of us realize by the time we're in kindergarten: Teachers' pets usually get the stars.

"Performance is what matters most when you want to get ahead," says Ron Deluga, a psychology professor who recently studied the subject. "But kissing up can make a real difference. People can be rewarded without it, but it won't be easy — and it won't be as often."

After surveying more than 300 supervisors and subordinates in New England, Deluga concluded that flattering bosses, and agreeing with them most of the time, increases your chances of advancement by about 5 percent.

The most effective stroke you can give: praising the boss to her boss.

Next best: complimenting your supervisor on how he handled a tough project or business meeting.

MOST CAREER experts don't recommend such tactics, unless you genuinely believe a compliment is due. Even then, they say, you may need grace and subtlety to pull it off, to not appear patronizing.

But even obvious ploys have an effect, at least in the short term, Deluga says. Laughing at the boss's jokes, dressing the way he or she does, echoing the boss's intensity about the workplace — they all help, on some level, to separate the "in" group from the "out" group.

"Even when both sides know it's going on, kissing up still works," says Deluga, who teaches at Bryant College in Smithfield, R.I. "Even executives want to feel good about themselves."

Career experts say they aren't surprised by Deluga's findings. Workers with good people skills — the ones most likely to develop a rapport with supervisors — are also the ones most likely to advance. The study, they say, simply underscores another reality of the workplace: Just doing the job isn't enough.

"Anybody who thinks they can get ahead by just working hard is beyond naive — they're living on another planet," says Fort Worth psychologist Richard Citrin. "Kissing up to the boss, brown-nosing, boot-licking — they're all descriptions of how we interact.

"From my experience in organizations, the people who were willing to kiss up also were willing to take on extra projects. They had more energy and enthusiasm. They took the time to develop relationships with their supervisors and peers. They were plugged in, so of course they moved ahead."

AS CITRIN sees it, there's nothing wrong with kissing up; in fact, it's one key to getting along. That doesn't mean offering up endless flattery, he says. That will backfire anyway, alienating peers who may undercut you in the future.

The goal, he says, should be to develop strong interpersonal relationships with supervisors and colleagues. Most supervisors want to talk about their lives, too, so take a genuine interest, says Citrin, who works at the Iatreia Institute for the Healing Arts in Fort Worth.

"People who are artful at brown-nosing are doing it in a larger context — they really care about the organization, or a project or even the boss. And it pays off for them in the long run," he says. To many people, that's called politicking. And even those who don't practice it still recognize its value.

But kissing up, to most, represents crossing the line — practically selling your soul to please the boss.

"What I've seen the most is what I call the 'young puppy' syndrome," says Russ Pate, vice president and general manager of Hill and Knowlton in Dallas. "It's when somebody acts like a young puppy, always wagging his tail and eager to please. No matter what the boss says, he nods in agreement.

"It's transparent to anybody whose eyes are open, but I've seen people build their career around it. It gets pretty pathetic, though, when you're 40 years old and you're still a young puppy."

Pate recalls a banker who climbed the ranks at a large institution, in part by endlessly praising his supervisor. But that tactic is never a sure thing.

COLLEAGUES OFTEN scorn workers who are blatant about kissing up, locking them out of the corporate grapevine. And managers who are most susceptible to it often get stuck on the corporate ladder, experts say.

The issue can create a dilemma for ambitious subordinates: How do they build a rapport with their supervisor and not cross the line?

One rule: Don't fake it. Too many people will see through false compliments and, rightfully, end up questioning a person's motives.

But it's not always easy to know what's acceptable at the office and what crosses the line. One person's kiss-up may be another's common courtesy.

How an action is perceived often depends on the company's culture and the supervisor's approach.

Paul Lazzaro, who heads a Fort Worth advertising agency that bears his name, doesn't care for flattery or "yes" men. Too obvious, he says. Yet he has been impressed when employees clipped news articles that recognized the company, or sent notes of congratulations for winning an industry award. He also was moved by an anniversary gift from a worker.

"Everyone appreciates recognition, no matter what stage they're in," says Lazzaro.

The actions also tell him something about the workers: "I think of business as a game, and to get ahead, you have to know how to play it. I'm always interested in people who've figured that out."

ONE FACTOR many climbers overlook is the importance of cultivating ties with their colleagues. That usually pays more dividends than kissing up to the boss, says Marilyn Moats Kennedy, who writes and lectures about careers.

"In the end, as you move up the ladder, most people show their leadership qualities with their peers and subordinates, not their supervisors," says Kennedy, who writes the monthly newsletter Career Strategist, in Wilmette, Ill.

Her advice for getting ahead: Focus on achieving things that can be objectively measured, and always deliver what you promise.

Although results still matter most, she also believes that most employees should work on improving their people skills. Start by participating in community groups, trying out leadership techniques. As you learn to relate to volunteers and motivate them, it will be easy to transfer those skills to the workplace, she says.

'What I've seen the most is what I call the 'young puppy' syndrome. It's when somebody acts like a young puppy, always wagging his tail and eager to please. No matter what the boss says, he nods in agreement. It's transparent to anybody whose eyes are open, but I've seen people build their career around it. It gets pretty pathetic, though, when you're 40 years old and you're still a young puppy.'

— Russ Pate,

general manager
Hill and Knowlton in Dallas

But it often takes practice and experience to develop a knack for office politics, and to understand the subtleties. Consider, for instance, how to deal with a "secret." Sometimes bosses tell workers something they want shared with the rest of the staff, she says. Other times, they don't want it mentioned.

"Not everyone picks up on this magically," Kennedy says. "Don't be afraid to ask for clarification, or to verify what you think you know."

Her suggestion: "Say, 'If this a secret, it goes no further. Is that what you had in mind?' "

Knowing how to relate to people is not only a factor in promotions; it can make a difference in getting a job. Carolyn Ulrickson, who directs the career placement center at Texas Christian University, tells seniors to follow the school's sports teams — even if they're not fans.

Why?

Because corporate recruiters often read about the teams before they come to campus and mention the subject when the interview begins.

"SPORTS ARE always a good ice-breaker," says Ulrickson. "You may not give a hoot about how the Horned Frogs did on Saturday, but you don't have to say so. Why start the interview on a negative note?

"That's a dead giveaway about how you deal with people."

Plan ahead for wedding

N.Y. Times News Service

When picking a dream spot for the big day, make sure you pick somewhere that has reasonable requirements for couples who plan to marry, recommends Sally Kilbridge, travel editor of Bride's magazine. For example, France has a two-month residency requirement. And the Caribbean island of Aruba doesn't allow tourists to get married at all.

Once you have selected a location, Kilbridge suggests taking advantage of a package deal or hiring wedding planners who can coordinate the event for you. They can help advise you about any paperwork you will need before departing for your wedding. Or, to find out blood test and other marriage requirements, call the individual state's office of tourism. For overseas destinations, contact the tourist board or consulate of that country.

Also, don't wait until the last minute to book a bridal package. "You don't need to plan this two years in advance. But Disney World, just like the country club in the next town, gets booked up in advance," Kilbridge said.

Men take lessons in love

'Relationships trainer' advises guys how to find cupid

By Alice Kahn
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — You may wonder what is wrong with a 25-year-old guy if he needs to pay another 25-year-old guy $100 an hour to be his "personal relationships trainer." Unless he is doing an impressive imitation of a major dweeb, that is exactly what self-confessed relationships spaz John Ghio Eugene has done.

Eugene has not gone to a psychiatrist or a dating service or had a personality transplant. Eugene has hired bartender Jonathan Yarnold, author of the book "The Art of Attracting Women" to tell him how to meet babes (or as they are now called, women).

When Yarnold is not serving up advice to the relationship-lorn, he is serving up everything from Sex on the Beach to Screaming Orgasms to Slow, Comfortable Screws and other popular big-bar-/young-crowd cocktails at Max's in Burlingame.

PEOPLE LOOK at Yarnold and say: Hey, it's easy for you to talk about attracting women. He's 6-foot-6 with a carefully buffed body and long, flowing blond hair that he says inspires guys to say, "Hey, get a haircut," and women to say, "You look like Fabio," which means fabulous to women with romance novel imaginations.

But for Yarnold, advice is more blessed to giveth than to receiveth. He has no need to attract women, being happily married himself and out of the relationships game since that day when he was 22 and first saw his wife-to-be walking out of Margaritaville, a bar in Sausalito, with two men.

"She had — if you will allow a Marin expression — this aura about her," says the Sausalito-based hunk-turned-heart-doctor.

The first advice Yarnold gave to Eugene was: Bars are the worst places to meet women. When Yarnold saw the woman of his dreams just walking down the street, he just went up to her and said, "Where have you been?"

His inamorata, today a 30-year-old hairstylist, took leave of her two friends and followed Yarnold. Within a year the knot was tied at the Casa Madrona hotel. It was his wife who suggested that Yarnold pass on his wisdom in book, tape and consultation form.

After seven years of tending the psyches of the lovelorn from behind the bottle, Yarnold published his book, a compendium of cliches, common sense and pep talks.

Yarnold, a former St. Ignatius High School basketball player and San Francisco State advertising major, has been slam-dunking his message and his availability for private consultation.

HE SAYS 35 to 50 men have so far availed themselves of his service as a "personal trainer for relationships," paying him $100 an hour to teach them how to become attractive. He says one man paid him $850 for a whole day of metaphorical hand-holding.

Yarnold referred us to satisfied client John Eugene, who at the begining of September was John Ghio, working in Phoenix, Ariz., for Lucky Stores. By Friday, he had changed his name, left his job and was preparing to move back to the San Francisco area. All of this was unrelated, he says, to his improved relationships outlook after only one hour with his guru, Yarnold.

"I'm not saying I'm a geek," Eugene said by phone from Phoenix. "I'm good-looking. I'm respected at work, but I was looking for someone to love me, not looking for someone to love."

Eugene says the simplest thing Yarnold did for him was teach him "the whole 'Who cares?' attitude. Pre-Jon, my whole week was geared toward Friday and Saturday night when I'd go to bars to meet women."

YARNOLD POINTED out to him that every moment of every day was potentially time for that love connection. Pre-Jon, Eugene would go out on weekends to bars with a bunch of guys. When they were good and drunk, they would approach women with some line "that was stereotypical, very scripted, like on 'The Love Boat.'"

He says he would talk loud, be crude and say things like, "Didn't I see you at the Macy's cosmetics counter?"

Since paying Yarnold $100 a month ago to remind him that he needn't go into every situation thinking it was his last chance at love, he has met a bold, wonderful older woman. He met her at the grill in the Phoenix housing complex that he is currently exiting.

How did he approach her? Although he would have "freaked out" before, he just went up to the grill next to the woman, threw down his orange roughy and said, "Isn't that a nice piece of fish?"

Obviously, it's just a matter of time before the relationship grows to, "Hey, baby, wanna try my halibut?"

Experts say relocation hardest on children

Tips can help make moving less stressful

By Betsy Bates
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Dr. David Wood, a pediatrician, researcher and father of three, said moving always will be stressful for children, but there are ways to help them cope.

- Talk to your kids about your move. "This may provoke a lot of questions, but that's good," Wood said. "Otherwise, you won't know what they're worried about. My son was afraid the TV wouldn't go with us."
- Be forthright about why you are moving, even if the circumstances are troubling. Children sense anxiety in their parents and often will blame themselves if they don't know the real reasons for a change.
- Try to introduce your children beforehand to their new surroundings. Walk through the new house before moving day; explore the neighborhood. Point out where the beds will go and what closet is for their toys.
- Bring your kids actively into the moving process. Let them pack some of their own belongings and help carry a few things they can handle.
- If sleeping arrangements will be different, try to make the changes well before the move. Don't wait until the move to move your toddler into a twin bed or put kids who used to have their own rooms into a bunk bed.
- On moving day, prepare the child's room with familiar things before worrying about such things as unpacking the kitchen boxes. If possible, have a grandparent or other supportive person around whose job it is to focus on the child while you focus on the chaos.
- Before bedtime, let the children see you walk through the house, making sure the doors are secure and the closets monster-free. Allow extra time for bedtime stories and good-night hugs. Expect them to take longer than usual to settle down.
- Help your children meet new families rather than just sending them out to play. Introduce yourself and your child to neighborhood children to bridge awkward first moments.
- Take steps to help your child begin a new school. Try to schedule time to meet with the teacher ahead of time. Bring examples of your child's work from the old school.
- Recognize the risks facing your child as you move. Make extra time to help with homework and to give social support. As everything else changes, make your child secure in the knowledge that your love and encouragement endure.

Many wedding customs ancient

NEW YORK (AP) — Many ancient customs and traditions surround the institution of marriage. Wedding veils, for instance, were first worn by brides in early times to ward off the "evil eye" of jealous rivals. Wedding rings are placed on the third finger of the left hand because our ancestors believed this finger and the heart were directly linked by the "vena amoris," or vein of love. The word "honeymoon" supposedly originated when brides were forcibly abducted from neighboring tribes. To avoid the brides's vengeful parents, the couple would hide out for 30 days, through the phases of the moon, drinking a mead wine made from honey, according to legend.

Flossing good for dental health

CANTON, Mass. (AP) — Dentists and hygienists recommend daily flossing to help maintain strong and healthy teeth and gums — but only 10-15 percent of Americans actually do. This is not surprising, say dental professionals, since compliance is the biggest problem. "Flossing picks up where toothbrushes leave off, removing food debris and sticky plaque in between teeth, which might otherwise lead to periodontal disease and possibly tooth loss," says Dr. Christopher Fox of Colgate Oral Pharmaceuticals. Fox says professional dental care, brushing and flossing should be part of a regular oral health regimen for everyone, including children and young adults as well as baby boomers and aging adults who are retaining their teeth longer.

By Diana E. Lundin
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Whether it's in a sleek moving van or a pickup truck packed one step ahead of the repo man, moving takes a bitter toll on American children, according to a study published today in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

After studying data from nearly 10,000 children, researchers found that those whose families moved frequently were much more likely than others to be held back a grade and suffer from serious behavior problems.

"People who move a lot feel displaced. They don't really get a feeling of belonging," said Dr. David Wood of the Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, principal investigator of the study. "We tend to seriously underestimate the impact of these feelings on kids."

Wood and colleagues from the University of California found that 23 percent of children from highly mobile families had failed a grade in school and 18 percent had four or more chronic behavior problems.

Examples of behavior problems included running away; being fearful or anxious; destroying personal property; stealing, lying and cheating; feeling worthless; and having no sense of remorse. A child was considered to have behavior problems only if parents told the National Health Interview Survey that he or she often displayed four or more of the behaviors.

SIGNIFICANTLY, moving created problems for children even when researchers eliminated other factors such as poverty or being raised in a one-parent family, Wood said.

Independent of such problems in the childrens' lives, those who moved were 77 percent more likely to suffer behavior problems and 35 percent more likely to fail in school, he said.

"All by itself, moving was a potent predictor of problems," Wood said in an interview. "It is not an insignificant thing in the life of a child."

Wood said moving's impact on children has taken on an urgent tone, since nearly one in five American families moves each year, making ours one of the most highly mobile societies in the world.

When a family moves, it "disrupts the routines, relationships and attachments that define the child's world," the study said. "Almost everything outside the family that is familiar is lost and changes."

Even when a family moves across town, preserving job ties and social relationships for the parents, children usually find themselves in a new school and among a new group of friends, Wood said.

WOOD STRESSED that children who had the greatest difficulty with moving were those who had moved six or more times — 10 percent of those included in a nationwide federal health study.

Children of low-income, minority, poorly educated families were at particularly high risk of school failure and troubled behavior when their families moved often.

The nomadic moves of such families are the "shadow side" of what the researchers called a glorified depiction of relocation in American history as a sign of adventure and the pursuit of success.

"Throughout our history, poor and minority families have been forced to move for nefarious reasons such as economic deprivation, eviction and racism..." the study said.

Moving under such circumstances significantly increased the likelihood of childhood dysfunction, the study found.

"A family move is especially stressful if it is not wanted or if the family has limited resources to deal with the move," the study said. "Unfortunately, those families that move most frequently are also most likely to have other characteristics (e.g., single parenthood, poverty) that compromise their ability to help their child adjust."

POOR FAMILIES move 50 to 100 percent more often than families who are financially stable, the study said. It also found that poor white families moved most often, followed by poor Latino families.

Homeless children, and those living in institutions or on military bases were excluded from the National Health Interview Survey, Wood said.

But he said a recent announcement — promptly reversed — that would have prohibited Marine recruits from marrying demonstrates that the military lifestyle has been found to be a significant stress factor in families.

"Rarely is the child the focus of military studies, but research done for other reasons clearly shows they are stressed (by frequent moves)," Wood said.

The study's authors urged physicians to ask parents how many times their children have moved as an indicator that they may need extra support in coping with school changes and social adjustments.

"It's a common-sense conclusion," said Wood, assistant director of primary-care pediatrics at Cedars-Sinai's Ahmanson Department of Pediatrics and an assistant professor of pediatrics at the University of California, Los Angeles.

"We want physicians to be aware of this problem. If they have families who move a lot, they can help parents to be aware of their childrens' stress and support these families in any way they can," he said.

THE STUDY also hailed school-based resource centers as places where the children of frequent moves could receive support in their new surroundings.

Wood's co-authors on the study included Dr. Neal Halfon of the UCLA School of Medicine; biostatisticians Debra Scarlata and Sharon Nessim of the UCLA School of Public Health; and Paul Newacheck of the Institute of Health Policy Studies at the University of California, San Francisco.

'A family move is especially stressful if it is not wanted or if the family has limited resources to deal with the move. Unfortunately, those families that move most frequently are also most likely to have other characteristics (e.g., single parenthood, poverty) that compromise their ability to help their child adjust.'

DEAR ABBY

What's in a name? Better not to ask

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have never written to you before, but I have enjoyed reading your column for many years. After reading about all the unusual names — most recently, the "Virgins" — I had to write and share my own experience.

Van Buren

My second husband was a Virgin. When we first met, he was playing in a band with his brothers; they called themselves "The Virgin Brothers from Cherryville, Missouri." (Yes, there is a little town by that name.)

Now, about the Virgin brothers: Their mother's name was Mary. The Virgin I married was named James. We had one son. We named him David — after the biblical David. David also became a musician. He has lived with his girlfriend for six years and they are planning to marry soon — then his wife will become a Virgin.

I am now 62 years young, divorced some 20 years ago, and I am still a Virgin.

By the way, I live on St. Matthews Street, and if you use this in your column, you have my permission to use my name. — JEANNINE VIRGIN, JONESBORO, ARK.

DEAR JEANNINE VIRGIN: As you know, I telephoned you to verify that this letter was not a put-on. Thank you for permitting me to use your name. An item such as this is more believable when it bears a signature.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Ms. Future Doctor," I felt the need to write and give another view on career sexual stereotypes.

I am 27, a registered nurse for four years, and I am a MALE. I am frequently asked, "When will you become a doctor?" Or, "You're doing this just to put yourself through medical school, right?" Also, "What's the matter, couldn't you get into medical school?"

When I first started my schooling to become a nurse, I considered medical school, but the further I got into nursing, the more I enjoyed being a nurse. I enjoy comforting a patient in pain, teaching my patients about their diseases, and holding the hand of someone who is frightened and hurting. These feelings are experienced by every nurse, and being male did not exclude me from doing them. (Most doctors are too busy.) I still work hard being a competent and compassionate nurse.

More males are choosing nursing as a career, and we need to shed our preconceived notions about who nurses are and what they look like.

Also, you used the term "trained nurses." May I remind you that physicians are EDUCATED in medical school, and nurses are EDUCATED in nursing schools. Monkeys are TRAINED to perform in circuses. — MR. NURSE IN TAMPA

DEAR MR. NURSE: Excuuuze me! I've heard the term "nurses' training" since Hector was a pup, so it was only natural for me to use that term. I apologize to anyone whom I may have offended.

DEAR ABBY: Your column in the Belleville (Ill.) News-Democrat added "Helen Paradise" to the list of people with odd names.

I have another one for you — mine. I married a man named Church, and no sooner had it become my legal name than my father announced that he was probably the only man in the world who had ever dared to raise Helen Church. — MRS. LEON H. CHURCH, LEBANON, ILL.

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Migrating furniture catches family off guard

By Erma Bombeck

Every time our family visits one another, we have the feeling we are coming home. It isn't that we are a reincarnation of the Walton clan. It's because all of our old furniture is somewhere in some relative's house.

Bombeck

We pride ourselves on the fact that in more than 40 years, there has never been a week that some piece of furniture has not been in transit. The two chairs that my mother had in her TV room are en route to one of her grandsons. The table I replaced is off to a cousin's house. A grill no longer being used has been sent off to a niece. As soon as we think everyone in the family has had the same lamp and there's nowhere to go with it, someone moves to a new apartment or gets married and needs furniture.

The men in our family say if they had known they were going to be shoving small refrigerators in an even smaller station wagon for the rest of their lives, they'd have added an orthopedic clause to the marriage agreement. We marry no one who cannot lift twice his body weight.

We've played musical furniture for so many years, sometimes we forget who had what. My mother said the other day, "If you're ever going to get rid of that lounge chair, let me know."

"It came from you," I said.

"Never," she said emphatically.

I flipped it over and thumbed through three layers of slipcovers. "Look familiar?" I asked.

"I don't believe it," she said. "Where did you get it?"

"Aunt Louise. She got it from Dede."

Not only has our furniture traveled more than Charles Kuralt, incest has permeated our cars and our wardrobes. I have been known to walk up to a cousin and say, "Where did you get that dress? It looks great."

"You got rid of it in a bag of old draperies."

"I want it back."

We pass maternity clothes, heating pads, luggage, books and lawn furniture back and forth.

Our son just bought a new house. When it is furnished, it will look like he never left home. His sister is contributing a chair she got from another brother's dorm, who got it from us, who got it from Grandma, who got it from her sister.

As he was looking around our living room the other day, he said, "When are you going to get rid of that stone table?"

The men in the family just looked at him in horror. My husband said quietly, "When it gets a motor, four wheels and a license plate."

Survivors of job loss can win by keeping their minds on future

By Dr. Hap LeCrone
N.Y. Times News Service

One of the biggest problem areas that I see in my practice is the result of people who are struggling to live in the past. The 1980s were, for many, a time of milk and honey. Jobs were more plentiful, credit was given more freely, economic forecasts were rosy and we seemed to be living on an ever-expanding bubble that would never burst.

For many, things have changed. For some, quite dramatically. I see individuals struggle to maintain the same lifestyle that they had and the strain is beginning to show in many ways. Many have lost their homes, their businesses, their dreams and even their health.

The psychological impact of these changes has given coping and adapting a new meaning. Lifestyles were built on debt that simply couldn't be met any longer as property values depreciated, financial institutions collapsed and profits sank. Many very self-reliant individuals who had known nothing but growth, expansion and optimism came to question their own capabilities and self-worth as the "good times" for many came to a screeching halt. Hard work, long hours, and "frayed-nerves" have taken their toll, resulting in medical and psychological difficulties for some.

I have spoken to many businesses and organizations on the topic of transition and change and have begun to notice one group of individuals emerge. I call them survivors. Some of their characteristics are:

- The belief that they and their families can and will deal with these transitions and changes. They see relationships as more important than things. They see jobs as vehicles to help them keep their marriages and families intact. Where they live, what they drive and the clothes they wear are far less important to them than the love that they have for each other and the strong belief that they and their families will survive no matter what.
- The initial shock, anger and disbelief associated with the economic changes thrust upon them are quickly replaced by thoughts and actions associated with survival and adaptation. They spend relatively little time looking back and instead look toward what a new future can bring them.
- They depersonalize the events leading up to the necessary changes and abstain from feelings of guilt, fault, blame and personal shortcomings.
- They maintain a sense of humor. They quickly begin thinking about possibilities and begin to put psychological distance between themselves and their economic misfortune.
- They maintain healthy habits of eating, sleeping and exercise, carefully avoiding unhealthy patterns of escape, such as alcohol or drugs.
- Most have a strong spiritual belief system that they use to help overcome feelings of loss of control.
- They rely heavily on friends and family support. They talk about their concerns rather than bottling them up inside and become isolated.

The Glass MENAGERIE

Theatre Midland presents Tennessee Williams classic

Tom Wingfield reminisces about his sister, Laura, and mother, Amanda, in Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie" opening Friday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

"Tennessee Williams calls 'The Glass Menagerie' a 'memory play,' " said director John Cimics, who moved to Midland several weeks ago after accepting the position of theater instructor at Midland College.

"That's the way it's going to be for me. This is going to be one of the nicest memories I will have of theater. Long after it's over, it will be resting very gently in my thoughts because of these cast members. They're wonderful."

Cast members for the Midland Community Theatre-Midland College production are Daniel Smith as Tom, the narrator; Jo Richards as Amanda, Tom's strong-willed mother; Chyree LeMaster as Laura, Tom's shy, crippled sister; and Shane Manley as the gentleman caller Tom brings home at his mother's request.

Scene design is by Paul Fiorella. Edward W. Taylor is in charge of lights and sound. Mae Dawson is the costumer.

Cimics, who has directed between 45 and 50 shows, has had little time to get settled in his Midland residence.

"I got here at 6 o'clock on a Sunday night and I had to be at a meeting at 8:15 the next morning on the Midland College campus for the start of the new school year. And I got a lunch time call from the theater to get over and talk with them about starting 'Glass Menagerie.'

"When I came down here, I had a Uhaul truck with my boxes of stuff in it, and I had suitcase that I was using when I was in the motels driving down. I'm still living out of the suitcase. I haven't unpacked my boxes yet. It seems very funny. I smile when I look around."

He's anticipating the time to unpack will come in December and by then, he said, "It will have been so long since I've seen my things, it will seem like Santa brought them."

"Glass Menagerie" was selected by Cimics for the joint MCT-MC production.

"It's very educational in itself," said Cimics. "For example, Tennessee Williams has music that he wanted to underscore the show so it has period music. The narrator of the play, Tom, continually talks about the sociological, governmental background of what is going on in the world against what is happening in the play.

"Students in English classes are reading it. I'm teaching it in my theater classes. It has so much integrity and is so much a part of our 20th century American culture that it really has something of interest for everybody almost regardless of what your particular interest is."

MC students with a valid MC student identification card are admitted free to the drama, which is on stage in Mabee Theatre II through Oct. 16.

The Moody Blues are to perform at Chaparral Center at 8 p.m. on Oct. 4. Providing backup will be the 47-piece Midland Festival Orchestra, conducted by Larry Baird, who arranged the rock group's music for symphony orchestra and is serving as conductor for the 1993 World Orchestral Tour.

Legendary rockers combine classic rock with symphony

The legendary Moody Blues rockers soar to new horizons on their current world tour by combining their classic rock with live symphonic sound.

"I'd like to let everyone know the World Orchestral Tour is one of the most rewarding tours we've ever been on," said Moody Blues member Justin Hayward. "There's no doubt that the music is conducive to orchestral kind of

"We are pleased and proud of the integrity of the orchestral musicians that we are working with.

"I learned at the beginning of this tour, the people that come to see this show maybe 75 or 80 percent have never seen a symphony orchestra before. They've seen it on TV, but they have never seen it live. And so I hope that we are spreading the word."

Hayward hopes fans will "come to see the Moody show because it's a great combination."

Midlanders will have the opportunity to find out for themselves when Benchmark Productions brings this classic rock band to Midland College's Chaparral Center for a concert at 8 p.m. on Oct. 4.

Tickets, priced at $19.50 and $25, are available at Chaparral Center's box office, Midland Sound and Endless Horizons in Odessa. For more information call 685-4584.

On stage with the rock group will be the 47-piece Midland Festival Orchestra, directed by Larry Baird, who originally arranged the Moodies' songs for a concert featuring the Colorado Symphony Orchestra at Denver's Red Rock amphitheater.

The success of this concert led the Moodies to choose Baird as the conductor for the world tour.

From the group's first full studio album, the 1967 release "Days of Future Passed" — which stayed on the Billboard charts for more than two years — until now, the British rockers have maintained their popularity. The group's remarkable consistency has generated the sale of more than 55 million albums.

"What makes the Moodies different really is that we've gone our own way, and we've never really followed any trend or fashion," Hayward said. "We found that to get satisfaction from our music, then we have to be really true to ourselves and our own emotions and just share our own experiences of life and our own things through our music. Then it would work."

The Moody Blues

Hayward, now 47, began singing when he was 5. He traces the beginnings of his love for music back to the age of 6 when he inherited a record collection of old 78s from his grandfather.

"That collection really opened a world of imagination to me that was quite wonderful," Hayward recalled.

He had a few piano lessons when he was 7, learned to play the ukelele when he was 9, and bought a guitar on hire-purchase when he was 10.

"I just loved music from then on," Hayward said. "It really became my whole life, and my parents were very supportive of me. I became a professional musician when I was 16 years old."

Educated at Shrivenham School, Berkshire and Commonweal Grammar School in Swindon, Hayward also received his education at the youth clubs and in this production of an American theater classic. Both Smith and Miss LeMaster are interested in careers in theater.

"I don't have a preference," said Smith, when asked if he wanted his career to be in front of or behind the lights. "I think I want to gear my career toward set design, but I don't really care. I'll do whatever."

"I'd love to but I'm not sure whether I will make it," Miss LeMaster said about acting professionally. "I sure will try and work my way up.

"Teaching's probably in line for me — I love to work with different people — it's sort of in my family and in my blood. My father and my mother and my uncle and my brothers all are teachers. Each one has a different field which they enjoy teaching. And mine happens to be theater and speech."

Smith, who has performed on stage since he was in the fifth grade, became involved in community theater in his hometown of Mansfield, Mass., a suburb of Boston, Mass., and Providence, R.I. His father was doing some work for the neighborhood community theater and took him to an audition. In May, Smith graduated from Hartwick College, Oneonta, N.Y., with a bachelor of arts degree in theater. While in college, "he did as much acting as tech work."

"My intentions are to move around nationally and internationally as much as possible," said Smith, who spent the summer working at Glimmerglass Opera, Cooperstown, N.Y.

Miss LeMaster is majoring in speech at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and minoring in theater because UTPB does not offer a theater major. She decided a career in theater was what she wanted when she was 14 and saw "Les Miserables" in New York City.

"There's a magic about theater, a mystery to it," Miss LeMaster said. "It's a beautiful experience to be behind the scenes, and it's just as beautiful to be a member of the audience and to watch. As I watched theater, I became more involved and wanted to be behind the scenes.

"It feels nice to bring people together through the emotions of a play, and 'Glass Menagerie' sure does that. It's a memory play. Hopefully, everyone will be able to identify in some way with one of the characters whether it be Laura, or Amanda or Tom or the gentleman caller, Jim."

Miss LeMaster plans to graduate in three years then pursue back rooms of pubs around Swindon when he played with a number of different groups from the time he was 11.

At that time he never dreamed music would catapult him into international fame.

"You don't think about what you're going to be doing when you're young," Hayward said. "Maybe some kids do, but I don't know any.

"When I wrote 'Nights in White Satin,' I was 19 years old. I was just really concerned with living for that moment and making the most of it really. And also there was a kind of naivete about that whole era, the '60s, and even about the music that we were doing that was very appealing."

Of all the songs he has written for the Moody Blues, he lists "Deep" as his favorite.

"I think it really expresses very truthfully my own feelings as a person. It's just about my own emotions. It kind of exposes them. I just found it very truthful."

Many singers move this 6-foot, 1½-inch tall, fair-haired, blue-eyed Englishman.

"Nat King Cole, when I was a kid, always did things to me. Buddy Holly. And I was a Bobby Darin fan as well. He was really wonderful."

Through the years, Hayward said growing older "never hits you. Then it begins to dawn on performers that they have outlived other groups that began when they did."

In concerts today, "It's a privilege to still have people, particularly in these kinds of times, spend their money and come and see you," Hayward said. "When you're young, you take it for granted as your right to be on stage. As you get older, you take it as a privilege."

When he reviews his career, he has few if any regrets and would not change much if he could live his life over.

"Everything worked out pretty well. I know sometimes the best-laid plans never quite work out, and some of the most successful and interesting things I've done have been pure accident. Some of the songs I've written — 'Your Wildest Dreams' — second biggest hit. It's amazing, so I'd rather let things be as they are. Let it flow."

He isn't a man who makes rigid plans when he makes plans at all.

"Often what I think would be successful hasn't, and the things I never gave a thought to have been wildly successful," Hayward said.

"You never can plan. The music business is one that people think we all sit around planning each move, like a great chess game. Of course, you don't. You just take things day by day and see what happens. Some things work and some things don't."

In addition to performing and writing music, Hayward finds film and television work "very rewarding and very interesting.

"The first time I worked with film it surprised me how you can change the image on the screen with the music that's underneath it. You can turn an image that's very innocent into something that's very sinister and vice versa just by the music that you put underneath it."

For years Hayward has had the desire to write the music for a Stanley Kubrick film.

"I'm still waiting for him to call me. I've loved all of his movies. I suppose there are a number of great English directors. He's the greatest."

During the mid-1970s, Hayward and the other Moodies — Ray Thomas, John Lodge and Graeme Edge — took a break from their collective efforts as a group. They did not appear together on stage for five years. During this time, Hayward, who collaborated with Lodge on the "Blue Jays" album in 1975, also recorded such solo albums as "Songwriter" and "Night Flight" in addition to working with Jeff Wayne on the "War of the Worlds," which contained the single "Forever Autumn."

Hayward is fond of music, books, cars, Lime Flowered Tea and his "very smart" dog, Peggy, whose father was a Yorkshire terrier and whose mother was an American springer spaniel.

He enjoys walking, running every day, working out to stay fit and riding horses. In fact, in the 1980s, Hayward, a racing fan, purchased a farm in Wiltshire, located in England's west country.

"I had a farm, a private stud farm through the '80s. An ambition of mine was really fulfilled through that. It was a marvelous experience. I took a run-down farm — the ground was perfect for horses, I had it tested — and slowly turned it into one of the nicest horse studs in England."

He sold his "private stud farm," which housed horses in what the British call "American barns."

"Basically, I ran out of money," Hayward said. "It had kind of run its course. It had taken off and developed a life of its own which was very time consuming for me, so I moved on."

Hayward finds an advantage in performing now as opposed to when he was younger.

"I think there was a kind of intensity when I was younger," Hayward recalled. "I was very serious and very intense about the performance, and I was very ambitions as well.

"I think now I've really learned to relax and enjoy it. I enjoy it now much more than I did before, and the band is so good now. We have some young people working with us on stage who are just brilliant, and of course a different orchestra every night is just magnificent."

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Concentrate on one project at a time and you will pull ahead of the competition. There is no time like the present to pursue your career and financial goals. Early in 1994, children add substantially to your happiness. It may be time to step back and give them greater independence. There are certain lessons they must learn for themselves. Travel and business success go hand-in-hand next spring. Vacation in August of 1994.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: composer George Gershwin, country singer Lynn Anderson, poet T.S. Eliot, actress Melissa Sue Anderson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Develop those skills that will make you feel more confident both in public and at family gatherings. A trip you take today will bring good luck.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not bite off more than you can chew in an attempt to impress someone. Handling practical matters lovingly will bring you and that special person closer together.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are on the right track. Do not be swayed by what other people think. Keep your thoughts and actions positive. To win converts, use quiet diplomacy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Realize that other people have rights, too. Curb an urge to be selfish when making recreational plans. Your generosity to family members will be richly rewarded.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have been too concerned with the past. Look to the future! A reputation for reliability will help you get top dollar for your efforts. Choose a business partner with great care.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may have to give in to an older relative in order to restore domestic peace. Try not to act resentful. Take things one small step at a time. A new friendship intensifies.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your desire for a special relationship grows stronger today. Curb a tendency to be extravagant. You need to put more cash in the bank. Save up for that special trip or vacation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can have your say next week if you let others present their views now. A romantic relationship continues to deepen. Curb your impatience and a tendency to overspend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Reread your mail. You could have missed something. Opportunities for fun and pleasure abound! Put your work aside and spend time with those who adore you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep your hopes to yourself for a while. A walk in the park or countryside will boost your spirits. Reading thought-provoking books will make you a better conversationalist.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A small business could be made more profitable with the right management. Learn to eat and exercise right if you are out of shape. Gulping food on the run is a big mistake.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Go out of your way to please others and you will be the one who reaps the real rewards. Outdoor activities boost your spirits. A romantic encounter will be everything you hoped.

TODAY'S CHILDREN will always analyze a situation before stepping forward. This can be a big plus so long as they do not hesitate too long. Strongly interested in art, these Libras have a clear preference for the color apricot. Organized and practical, they dislike messes of any kind and only feel at ease when things go according to plan. Their powerful imagination can be a tremendous asset in both business and romance.

Imagine that you're playing in the European Championship. With the result of your match riding on this deal, you and your partner reach a good contract of four hearts. How would you play if you receive the lead of a trump? What about if West attacks with the king of clubs.

The auction is routine, so all that remains is for you to make your contract. For those declarers who received an unfriendly trump lead, Sweden's Anders Morath showed how to make short shrift of the hand. He won in the closed hand and immediately led a low diamond to the ten. After that the defenders could do no better than take the queen and cash two spades to hold declarer to 10 tricks.

The club lead posed more complex problems. If declarer tries to ruff a spade, the defenders can prevail. After winning the first spade the defenders cash a club and play a third round of the suit, forcing declarer to ruff and removing the exit card from dummy. The defenders win the next spade and lead a trump and declarer will eventually be stuck on the table after ruffing a spade and West will score the jack of trumps en passant for the setting trick.

The solution is to win the club lead, cash the ace of trumps and then play A K J of diamonds. If East ruffs, declarer overruffs and will be able to ruff the third spade in dummy. If East covers, declarer ruffs high, crosses to the queen of trumps and discards a club on the ten of diamonds—the defenders can get, at most, one trump and two spades. If East follows low, declarer simply discards the club loser and all's well.

PLAY: Theatre presents Williams' works

a master's and doctorate in theater.

"I would like to get some professional experience, but I will probably end up teaching theater," said Miss LeMaster, who was active in interpretative work in high school, winning 42 trophies in speech competitions, over half of which were first place awards, her senior year.

Smith, like Cimics, is new to Midland. He met Jeff Lander, MCT's shop foreman, while both were working at Glimmerglass Opera.

"I'm extremely impressed with MCT as community theater," said Smith, who is employed part time in the MCT shop. "I would judge it to be professional, and I feel the same way about the cast that I'm working with."

After moving here Aug. 28, Smith decided "doing a play would be a good way to meet people" so he auditioned for "The Glass Menagerie."

Manley, last seen at Theatre Midland in "A Few Good Men" and a member of this summer's Summer Mummers, auditioned because of the director. A former member of Pickwick Players, Manley has been in three MCT main stage shows and four Pickwick productions including the one which went to Turkey for the International Theater Festival.

"I wanted a chance to work with this new director, to see what he was like," said Manley, a freshman theater student at MC this year.

"The role is more challenging than any other character I've ever played,'" Manley said. "I auditioned for Tom and when I got Jim, I looked into the character more. I had never read 'The Glass Menagerie.' The whole play revolves around Jim and Laura. It's a very challenging role."

Miss LeMaster auditioned for this particular drama because the role of Laura is one she particularly wanted to play.

"I love the play. I love the character of Laura. She's a great character to play. She's much like the glass the she adores. She's very breakable and very gentle. Williams is, of course, an excellent author, and I was just attracted to it."

Ms. Richards, who was last seen by MCT audiences in the 1991 production of "Fiddler on the Roof," was attracted to auditioning for "The Glass Menagerie" because of the quality of the play and the playwright.

"It's a classic role, and I knew it was well written," Ms. Richards said. "And I knew it would be well worth my time and energy to memorize Tennessee Williams' words."

She sees Amanda as the "quintessential mother. All of her motivations come from mothering whether it's good for you or not."

And like the director, Cimics, she is pleased with the cast.

"I'm thrilled to be working with this cast. They are very dedicated and very professional in their attitude."

New Director has her sights set on the future

By Amarante Cordova

After a period of discord and controversy, there's a new Executive Director of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, whose vision is fixed firmly upon the future of the organization and it's mission, rather than upon the recent past.

"Our top priority is looking at our goals, looking at our mission, to see exactly where the Chamber is headed," explained Charlene Romero Wurtz, who assumed the office of Executive Director on September 13th. "I'm looking at restructuring some of the committees we have. There are some very strong committees, such as the Economic Development Committee, that we need to enlarge."

"Another committee that we need to start working on is the Convention and Tourism."

According to Romero Wurtz, this fine-tuning of the Midland Hispanic Chamber must extend from the committees to the very top of the organization and it's leadership.

"We need to look at coming in and doing a little better on training our leaders," she said. "We have a lot of new board members coming in. And sometimes we need to take time out and show them exactly what the chamber wants to do, give them a broad view of that, and how they can help in developing that end."

This emphasis is perhaps especially important in light of the recent controversy that struck the Hispanic Chamber during the short, but turbulent tenure of Mary Martha Arana Cook as Executive Director, a period darkened by charges of unfair treatment and discrimination, and threats of legal action.

"I think there was a lot of misunderstanding, probably. Unfortunately, it got to the point that it did," said Romero Wurtz. "But the Chamber has handled it very well, and there's no need to look back. We must continue to go forward, making sure that we do what we want to do, and not be hindered by what's happened."

It is this emphasis upon the future of the community that explains Romero Wurtz' commitment to education.

"Well, education has always been important to me. We'd like to see the Chamber really excel itself in the Partners in Education, really get rolling with that," she said. "I would love to see us enlarge and create a bigger Step Up To Success. You know, that has been an on going project that is working very well."

"We have to increase our scholarship program. And that's all done through fundraisers. But that is the one thing that I would really strive for, is stressing the need for education."

According to Romero Wurtz, success in educational endeavors, as in many others, is possible only through cooperation between community organizations, particularly between minority and mainstream chambers.

"We'd want to see our Chamber work together with the other chambers on educational issues. There are so many things that we, as a whole, can do together on education," she explained. "We should do it together. We shouldn't exclude each other.

"Of course, there are some areas that we could probably do a little bit better, and they can also. But if we pull together on certain issues, it would be good. One is dropouts. The dropout issue is not only a minority issue, it's an issue for all. Also the standards of education. You know, a lot of our leaders, a lot of the business community, are not happy. They're not happy with what we're producing. We need to find out why, and we need to know what we can do, together, to get that taken care of."

It is an observation she makes from extensive personal experience. Romero Wurtz is no stranger to the community of Midland or to the leadership of the Hispanic Chamber. An active participant in Chamber activities for many years, she became Chairman of the MHCC Board of Directors in 1989. In the business community, she was cited for outstanding achievement in her management of Webco Printing.

In 1992, she directed the creation of NuevaVista, which has enjoyed dramatic success, and growth, in just 16 months of operations. In fact, she believes her experience with that publication will enable her to better serve as Executive Director of the Hispanic Chamber in Midland.

"It has definitely given me one jump ahead of everybody else that's been here. And that is because I not only know my community, which is the Midland community, I have an idea of what Odessa and the other communities are doing," explained Romero Wurtz, who will continue to work with NuevaVista in an advisory capacity.

"I have met the individuals that we have interviewed, and talked to them."

"But the one thing that I have enjoyed the most, is learning about the other communities. The cultures and the pride that they have is wonderful. And I never knew this! I never saw it since I wasn't there. Some of the events that they have, some of

La nueva Directora tiene su visión puesta en el futuro

Por Jeffrey McDonald

Después de un período de discordia y controversia, hay una nueva Directora Ejecutiva en la Cámara de Comercio Hispana de Midland, cuya visión esta firmemente fija sobre el futuro de la organización y su misión, en vez de lo que a pasado en estos últimos meses.

"Nuestra prioridad fundamental es ver nuestras metas, ver nuestra misión, ver hacia donde va exactamente la Cámara," explica Charlene Romero Wurtz, quien tomo posesión como Directora Ejecutiva el 13 de Septiembre. "Estoy viendo la manera de reestructurar algunos de los comités que tenemos. Hay algunos comités bastante fuertes, como el Comité de Desarrollo Económico, el cual necesitamos engrandecer.

"Y hay otro comité que veo que tenemos que comenzar a trabajar en el, y este es el de Convenciones y Turismo."

De acuerdo con Romero Wurtz, este afinamiento de la Cámara de Comercio Hispana debe agrandar a los comités a lo mas alto de la organización y a su liderazgo.

"Quiero ver de cerca a los entrantes y hacer las cosas mejor en lo que respecta al entrenamiento de nuestros líderes," ella comenta. "Tendremos nuevos miembros en la mesa directiva. Y algunas veces necesitamos detener las cosas y enseñarles que es lo que la cámara quiere hacer, dándoles un extenso panorama de lo que se propone hacer, y como pueden ellos ayudar en el desarrollo de tal propósito."

Este énfasis es tal vez especialmente importante en aclarar la reciente controversia que boicoteo a la Cámara Hispana durante el corto, pero turbulento ejercicio de María Martha Arana Cook como Directora Ejecutiva, período que ensombreció por cargos de trato injusto y discriminación, y amenazas de acción legal.

"Pienso que fue causa de muchos malos entendidos, probablemente. Desafortunadamente, llego hasta el último punto," dice Romero Wurtz. "Pero pienso que la Cámara a manejado las cosas muy apropiadamente, y no hay necesidad de ver hacia atrás. Tenemos que continuar viendo hacia adelante, estando seguros que haremos lo que pensamos hacer, y que no impida para nada lo que ya pasó."

Es este énfasis sobre el futuro de la comunidad que explica Romero Wurtz compromiso a la educación.

"Bueno, la educación siempre a sido importante para mi. Nos gustaría ver a la Cámara sobresalir en el área de la Educación, realmente empujar fuertemente a la Educación," ella dice. Me agradaría ver engrandecer y crear un Paso Hacia el Éxito. Usted sabe, este a sido un proyecto que a trabajado muy bien."

"Quiero que las becas escolares aumenten. Y todo se logra por medio de la recaudación de fondos. Pero eso es solo una cosa, realmente

Land grant heirs pin hopes on NAFTA for windfall

By Patricia Guadalupe

A group representing Latino families in 33 U.S. states expects to learn this month whether they will receive compensation from the Mexican government for Texas lands now worth $7.5 billion.

Mexico accepted responsibility to settle the families' claims 52 years ago but has failed to honor its promise of restitution for lands lost during the U.S..Mexico war. That at least is the view of the Asociación De Reclamantes, a 20,000-member group based in Edinburg, Texas.

Descendants of the original Spanish and Mexican land owners in what is now South Texas, ADR representatives met with Jorge Montaño, Mexico's ambassador to the United States, in Washington, D.C., on Aug. 10 and will meet with him again on Sept. 27.

ADR President Yolanda Zárate, daughter of founders Julián and Aminta Cavazos Zárate, quotes Montaño as telling the group that the claims are a "just cause" and that he would have an answer for them at the upcoming meeting. "Montaño didn't want NAFTA to be tied up because of this," she says. She acknowledges that Mexico isn't likely to pay the full $7.5 billion. "We have to negotiate."

Teresa Leger, a Santa Fe, N.M., lawyer and ADR,s lead counsel, comments, "Mexico wants to enter into a free trade agreement with the United States. Honoring our claims would demonstrate good faith to live up to their obligation in a new era of cooperation between the two countries."

Formed in 1978, ADR claimants include such prominent figures as Jaime Ramón, a Dallas lawyer who was director of the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs in the U.S. Department of Labor during the Bush Administration, and Raúl Yzaguirre, president of the National Council of La Raza. But most members are from the ranks of the poor and the working class.

Bracing for an epidemic of bigotry

By Raúl Yzaguirre
President, National Council of La Raza

By the end of this decade, the U.S. Hispanic population is projected to grow at the rate of nearly a million a year. The Census Bureau estimates that 24.1 million Hispanics now reside in the 50 states of this nation, with another 3.4 million in the U.S. commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

Over a year ago, Congressman Elton Gallegly from California added to the an-

Herederos de concesion territorial cifran esperanzas en NAFTA para obtener ganancias

Por Patricia Guadalupe

Un grupo que representa a familias latinas de 33 estados de los Estados Unidos espera conocer en este mes si recibirán compensación del gobierno Mexicano por terrenos de Texas que valen ahora $7,500 millónes".

México aceptó la responsabilidad de ajustar las reclamaciones de las familias hace 52 años, pero no ha cumplido su promesa de hacer restitución por las tierras perdidas durante la guerra entre los Estados Unidos y México, según mantiene la Asociación de Reclamantes, un grupo de 20,000 miembros con sede en Edinburg, Texas.

Los representantes de la ADR, descendientes de los terratenientes originales españoles y mexicanos en lo que es ahora el sur de Texas, se reunieron con Jorge Montaño, embajador de México en los Estados Unidos en Washington, DC., el 10 de agosto último y volverán a reunirse con él el 27 de septiembre.

La presidenta de la ADR, Yolanda Zárate, hija de los fundadores Julián y Aminta Cavazos Zárate, cita a Montaño como que dijo al grupo que las reclamaciones eran una "causa justa" y que él tendria una contestación para ellos en la reunión próxima. "Montaño no queria que NAFTA estuviera retenido por razon de esto," dice ella. Ella reconoce que no es probable que México pague todos los $7,500 millones. "Tenemos que negociar."

Teresa Leger, abogada de Santa Fe, Nuevo México, y asesora legal principal de la ADR, comenta: "México quiere concertar un tratado

Por Raúl Yzaguirre, Presidente del Consejo Nacional de La Raza

Hace más de un año, el Representante Elton Gallegly, de California, agregó al brote anual de legislación extremada y ridicula contra los inmigrantes, al presentar un proyecto de ley tan ofensivo para los valores de este país, que nadie lo tomó en serio.

Después, con velocidad espeluznante, el sentimiento contrario a los inmigrantes que habia estado enconándose en California, cambió tanto el clima politico que, escasamente un año más tarde, los demócratas y republicanos por igual están tratando ahora calmadamente esta propuesta que antes habria sido "inconcebible": la de enmendar a la Constitución para negar la ciudadania de los Estados Unidos a los niños nacidos en este pais de padres indocumentados.

El hecho de que los dirigentes electos hayan decidido que pueden ganar puntos politicos con esta propuesta — que llevaria a los Estados Unidos de regreso a los dias en que el esforzarme por esto, es de vital importancia la necesidad de educación."

De acuerdo con Romero Wurtz, el éxito en el esfuerzo educacional, es posible únicamente a través de la cooperación entre las organizaciones de la comunidad, particularmente entre las minorías y las prinçipales corrientes de las cámaras.

"También quiero que nuestras Cámaras trabajen juntas con otras cámaras en asuntos educacionales. Hay tantas cosas que nosotros, unificados, podemos hacer por la educación," ella explica. "Debemos hacerlo juntos. No debemos de eliminarnos unos de otros."

"Claro que hay algunas áreas que probablemente podamos hacerlas un poco mejor, como ellos también. Pero si nos unimos en ciertas áreas , lo haremos mejor. Una es cuando jovenes abandonan sus estudios. La cuestión cuando abandonan sus estudios no es solamente algo que atañe exclusivamente a los grupos minoritarios, es un problema que a todos les sucede. También los niveles de educación. Usted sabe, que muchos de nuestros líderes, muchos de nuestros negocios de la comunidad, no están contentos. Necesitamos buscar el porque, para poder resolver este problema."

Es una observación que ella hace por su extensa experiencia. Romero Wurtz no es una extraña para la comunidad de Midland o para el liderazgo de la Cámara Hispana. Participante activa en asuntos de la Cámara por muchos años, ella fue Directora de la Cámara de Comercio Hispana de Midland en 1984. En los negocios de la comunidad, ella fue mencionada por su excelente realización en la administración de la Imprenta Webco.

En 1992, dirigió la creación de NuevaVista, la cual a gozado de un dramático éxito, y crecimiento, en solo 16 meses de operaciones. En efecto cree que su experiencia con esa publicación permitirá servir mejor como Directora Ejecutiva de la Cámara de Comercio de Midlnad.

"Definitivamente me a dado un paso hacia adelante sobre todos aquellos que han estado aquí Y esto es porque no solo conozco a mi comunidad, la cual es Midland, tengo una idea de como Odessa y otras comunidades operan," explica Romero Wurtz, quien continuará trabajando para NueveVista en capacidad de consejera. "He conocido e intercambiado impresiones con todos los que hemos entrevistado."

"Pero pienso que cosas que mas he disfrutado, es el aprender de otras comunidades. Las cultura y el orgullo que ellos tienen es maravilloso. Nunca supuse esto! Nunca supuse, y nunca vi hasta que no estuve en estos lugares. Algunos de los eventos que ellos tienen, algunas de las diferentes tradiciones que tienen. Es maravilloso observar y disfrutar esto!"

Pero ahora llama el negocio de la Cámara de Comercio Hispana de Midland, y requerirá cada porción de los conocimientos y experiencias de Romero Wurtz que a adquirido en los años de servicio a la comunidad. Esta por ejemplo, el Parque Unity (Unidad), el cual es parte de todos los esfuerzos para desarrollar y embellecer a la vecindad de la calle Lamesa. En una nota relacionada esta el '202 Grant' de HUD lo cual permitirá el desarrollo de vecindades para los ancianos.

Continuar el proyecto para atraer una Aerolínea Mexicana para que comience sus servicios ordinarios con el Aeropuerto Internacional de Midland. Adicionalmente, hay planes para abrir un nuevo departamento de la Cámara Hispana el cual será responsable para el desarrollo de múltiples acciones, tales como las del Tratado del Libre Comercio con México.

Y la propuesta del Centro Cultural Hispano de Midland tampoco sea olvidado.

"Solamente queremos estar seguros, primero, obtener nuestras metas en orden, y que reaseguremos a nuestros miembros que, estamos listos para comenzar, estamos listos para proseguir con nuestras metas que nos hemos trazado,'" dice Romero Wurtz. "Estamos contentos que ellos entienden que han sido un poco difíciles estos últimos meses."

"Pero todo eso se acabo. Ahora es tiempo de seguir trabajando. Y nosotros vamos hacerlo agresivamente. Seremos una Cámara agresiva. La puerta esta abierta para todos. Ayudaremos todo lo que podamos. Denme un par de semanas para organizarme aquí! Una vez que hagamos esto, nosotros estaremos listos!"

the different traditions that they have. It's wonderful to see, and I have enjoyed that!"

But now the business of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce calls, and it will require every bit of the knowledge and expertise that Romero Wurtz has gained in her years of service in the community.

There is the Unity Park, for example, which is part of the overall effort to develop and beautify the Lamesa Road neighborhood. On a related note, there is the '202 Grant' from HUD, which would allow the development of housing for the elderly.

The project to attract a Mexican airline to begin regular service to Midland International Airport continues. In addition, there are plans to open a department of the Hispanic Chamber which is devoted to developing a variety of issues, such as trade, with Mexico.

And the proposal for a Hispanic Cultural Center in Midland has not been forgotten.

"We just want to make sure, number one, that we get our goals in order, and that we reassure our members that, 'Hey, we're ready to roll, and we're ready to get going,'" said Romero Wurtz. "And we're glad that they have been patient with us. We're happy that they understand that it's been a little difficult the past few months."

"But that's over. Now it's time to get going. And we're really going to be aggressive. We're going to be an aggressive Chamber. The door is open. The door is open to everyone. We will help as much as we can. Give me a couple of weeks to get organized in here! Once we do that, we will be ready!"

de libre comercio con los Estados Unidos. El hacer honor a nuestras reclamaciones demostraria buena fe para cumplir con sus obligaciones en una nueva época de cooperación entre las dos naciones."

Los reclamantes de la ADR, que fué organizada en 1978, abarcan a figuras tan prominentes como Jaime Ramón, abogado de Dallas que fué el director de la Oficina de Cumplimiento de los Programas Federales en el Departamento del Trabajo de los Estados Unidos durante el gobierno de Bush, y a Raúl Yzaguirre, presidente del Consejo Nacional de La Raza. Pero la mayoria de los miembros son de entre las filas de los pobres y de la clase trabajadora.

"Recuerdo que mi bisabuela. decia: "Mijita, puede que algún dia recuperemos nuestras tierras," dice la reclamante Elidia Garcia, dueña de un negocio de "catering (abastecimiento de comidas) de McAllen, Texas. "Muchas personas han muerto esperando que el gobierno (mexicano) hiciera honor a sus reclamaciones." El caso está siendo revisado por los departamentos de Relaciones Exteriores y de Hacienda del gobierno de México.

Baltazar Baca, asesor legal de la ADR en Washington, DC., señala que los reclamantes tienen apoyo en el Congreso. "Tanto las fuerzas de trabajo de los republicanos como de los demócratas sobre asuntos Hispanos en el Senado están escribiendo cartas a México, animándole a resolver este asunto," dice él. También, agrega él, lo están haciendo varios miembros del Grupo Congresional Hispano en el lado de la Cámara de Representantes.

La ADR argumenta que las tierras de sus miembros fueron confiscadas ilegalmente entre 1848 y 1900. Según sus cifras, las reclamaciones pendientes representan 27 millones de acres, que valen actualmente $7,500 millones. Las mismas fueron evaluadas en $194 millones en 1923.

El Tratado de Guadalupe-Hidalgo, firmado en 1848 entre los Estados Unidos y México después de la guerra, contenía garantías de que se protegerían los derechos territoriales de las familias mexicanas que vivian en los nuevos territorios estadounidenses del suroeste, pero no contenía disposiciones por las pérdidas individuales. En 1923, el gobierno mexicano presentó reclamaciones a nombre de los ciudadanos mexicanos actuales y anteriores, protestando de las confiscaciones de tierras, mientras que los Estados Unidos presentaron reclamaciones semejantes contra México.

Las reclamaciones eran una deuda de los Estados Unidos para con los terratenientes originales, pero en 1941 México y los Estados Unidos acordaron un intercambio de reclamaciones y México asumió la responsabilidad de pagar las reclamaciones individuales que habia presentado contra los Estados Unidos.

Las reclamaciones individuales de la ADR fluctúan desde 4,000 hasta 600,000 acres. Están ubicadas de Este a Oeste, en un trazado de diamante desde la zona del Rio Nueces, en San Antonio, hasta el Rio Grande, en Laredo, y hacia abajo hasta Brownsville.

Los miembros de la ADR pagan cuotas anuales de $35. Otros herederos pueden unirse con un pago de $423 por una sola vez.

En contraste con la Alianza Federal de Pueblos Libres, una entidad más militante con sede en Nuevo México dirigida por Reies López Tijerina, la ADR ha apremiado sus reclamaciones a través del sistema legal, y muchos de sus miembros proceden de los seguidores desilusionados de Tijerina. En 1967, los partidarios de Tijerina atacaron con armas de fuego la corte del condado en Tierra Amarilla, Nuevo México.

La presidenta Zárate recuerda que, en las negociaciones de la ADR, "Fueron a través de tantos presidentes mexicanos, que cada vez que enterábamos a uno ya era hora de que se marchara." El mandato del actual presidente, Carlos Salinas de Gortari, terminará el año próximo.

La Licenciada Leger agrega: "México ha dicho siempre que arreglaria este caso una vez que estuviera en mejor situación económica. Sabemos que su economia ha mejorado hasta el punto de que ahora es la hora para nosotros."

La proveedora Elidia Garcia ve al propósito de la ADR como algo más que recibir compensación.

"Queremos enseñar a las generaciones futuras lo que sucedió en realidad. Los estadounidenses les han metido en la cabeza a sus hijos que ellos, y no los mexicanos, eran los terratenientes originales. Estoy más interesada en rectificar el registro histórico que en cualquier cantidad de dinero. Con el favor de Dios, eso sucederá."

"I remember my great.grandmother saying, "Mijita, maybe one day we will get our lands back," says claimant Elidia Garcia, a McAllen, Texas, caterer. "So many people have died waiting for the (Mexican) government to honor their claims." The case is being reviewed by Mexico's foreign relations and treasury departments.

Baltazar Baca, ADR's Washington, D.C. legal counsel, points out that the claimants have support in Congress. "Both the Republican and Democratic task forces on Hispanic affairs in the Senate are writing letters to Mexico encouraging it to resolve this matter," he says. So, he adds, are several members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus on the House side.

The ADR contends. that its members, lands were unlawfully seized between 1848 and 1900. According to its figures, outstanding claims represent 26 million acres currently worth $7.5 billion. They were assessed at $194 million in 1923.

The Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, signed in 1848 between the United States and Mexico after the war, contained guarantees that land rights of Mexican families living in the new United States Southwestern territories would be protected, but it did not provide for individual losses. In 1923, the Mexican government filed claims on behalf of present and former Mexican citizens, protesting the land seizures, while the United States filed similar claims against Mexico.

The claims were a United States debt to the original landowners, but in 1941, Mexico and the United States agreed to an exchange of claims and Mexico assumed responsibility for paying the individual claims it had filed against the United States.

The ADR's individual claims range from 4,000 acres to 600,000 acres. They run east-west in a diamond pattern from the Nueces River area in San Antonio to the Rio Grande in Laredo and down to Brownsville.

Members pay $35 annual dues. Other heirs can join with a one.time payment of $423.

In contrast to the more militant New Mexico-based Alianza Federal de Pueblos Libres, led by Reies López Tijerina, ADR has pressed its claims through the legal system, with many of its members coming from disenchanted Tijerina followers. In 1967, Tijerina's supporters shot up the county courthouse in Tierra Amarilla, N.M.

Zárate recalls that in ADR's negotiations, "We went through so many Mexican presidents, every time we would educate one it would be time for him to leave." Current President Carlos Salinas de Gortari's term is up next year.

Attorney Leger adds, "Mexico has always said they would settle this case once they were better off financially. We know that their economy has improved to the point that now is the time for us."

Caterer Elidia Garcia sees ADR's purpose as more than receiving compensation.

"We want to educate future generations about what really happened. The Americans have drummed into their kids' heads that they, not the Mexicans, were the original landowners. I'm more interested in setting the historical record than in any money. God willing, that will happen."

The 49th Annual Reeves County Fall Fair — Four days of family fun

The city of Pecos will be filled with the sights, the sounds, and the tastes of the traditional county fair, when the 49th Annual Reeves County Fall Fair, Livestock Show, and Concert comes to town.

The event will be held Thursday, September 30th, through Saturday, October 2nd, at the Reeves County Civic Center. It will run in conjunction with the 20th Annual World Championship Bar-B-Que Beef Cookoff, which takes place Friday and Saturday, October 1st and 2nd, at the Sherrif's Posse Arena, adjacent to the Civic Center.

"The official start of the events is the 'Mother Goose & Friends Parade', which is set for Wednesday afternoon, September 29th, in downtown Pecos," said Tom Rivera, president of this year's fair. "This parade features the children of Pecos, dressed in their favorite costumes, and several of our school bands."

"There will also be a carnival held in the parking lot outside the Civic Center, from Monday, September 27th, through Sunday, October 3rd."

The main event kicks off on Thursday. The livestock show will feature display and competition in lambs and steers. Additions and improvements in the facilities have organizers looking forward to a bigger and better steer show, this year. But livestock is just a part of the fair's attractions.

"Inside the Civic Center, we will have display booths from our schools, clubs, and organizations from our community, as well as vendors selling a variety of commercial and handmade items," explained Rivera. "We will also feature a Homemaking Division, with judging on many handmade items, food, and art made by the people of Reeves County."

The 20th Annual World Championship Bar-B-Que Beef Cookoff will be held at the Sheriff's Posse Arena, which is adjacent to the Reeves County Civic Center, and begins on Friday, October 1st.

"The meat will be handed out Friday evening, and the cooking will go on all night, with the judging Saturday afternoon," said Rivera. "You are welcome to walk around the cook-off area on Saturday."

Cook-offs are traditionally a place where fun is as important as taste, and the Pecos event is no exception. Entrants will compete for prizes in the best - and the worst - in a variety of categories.

"The World Championship Team will receive a $500.00 cash prize and a silver plated trophy," said Rivera. First place in each division will re-

La Primera is ready for West Texas

By Leonela

As far as mailcarriers go, neither rain nor snow will stop the mail from being delivered. Oh yes, mailcarriers are noted as being the most dedicated of all to their job. And although they may be famous for their dedication, they are certainly not the only ones dedicated to their jobs or profession.

Sure, rain and snow are elements of nature that can't help but happen so therefore it shouldn't stop the mailcarriers since they are forewarned about the weather by reports and should be prepared for it.

But what if the unexpected happened? Something as unexpected as a flat tire, or even two flat tires? Or, how about an auto accident even? You know, one where the auto has to be towed away? Would the mailcarriers still be willing and able to do their job? Of course, one would hope so right?

Well West Texas, here's some news about dedication. In Big Spring, Texas there is a band that has all the dedication and drive needed to be the best at their profession, they are La Primera Band. Neither rain nor snow not even flat tires or accidents will stop La Primera Band from their commitments.

On their way to perform at Los Amigos Outdoor Park in Fort Stockton, Texas where they were to open for La Fiebre, they had the unexpected happen to them, not one but two flat tires and an auto accident.

Fortunately for everyone, no one was injured in the accident, just shaken up a bit. Now as far as the van was concerned, well, it had to be towed away. Thank God no one was hurt and now lets put it all behind us and go on," Jr. Moreno tells the band just before show time.

Even though trouble paved the way to their gig in Fort Stockton, La Primera Band made it to Los Amigos and gave an astounding opening performance for La Fiebre.

They gave it their all, smoke effects, special lights, horns, accordion, guitars, drums and the show itself, well, you had to see it to believe it. This band played their music with such energy that no one in the audience could have noticed the struggle they went trough to get to Fort Stockton. The choreography of the band members invited the participation of all. The music they played made people sit up and take notice. La Primera Band can play it all, from Tejano to Country to Jazz to Hard Rock. They'll show you how to enjoy La Primera Band!

The sound La Primera Band has is nothing less than quality itself with a lot of heart in it. The band members themselves are either educated in music or a have previous experience with other bands.

"Everybody's got music in their blood," declares Moreno, manager of La Primera Band. "They all have a musical background and are like 2nd, 3rd or 4th generation musicians."

This band performed together for the first time on November of '92 for a benefit of the State Hospital in Big Spring. It was supposed to be a one time thing according to Moreno, but after the band received numerous compliments on the way they sounded, they started kicking around the idea of actually getting together. "After picking up a song here and a song there," recalls Moreno, "It just mushroomed from there."

It's no wonder why La Primera Band has been so successful around the area, it's band members do have very unique backgrounds.

First, there's Jr. Moreno, this is his first try at managing a band and says it will be his only band, He is totally devoted to his 'Primera Band'. Tom Olague is the lead vocalist and a 4th generation musician along with his brother Jimmy Olague, drummer of the group. Jimmy received his degree in music from Texas Tech. "He's the eyes and ears of the band as far as the quality of the music goes," said Moreno. "He is our own critique."

You see West Texas, little kids who bang on pots and pans do grow up and go to college. They may even become drummers like Jimmy.

Johnny Saldaivar, lead guitarist also has a college education in music. He attended Texas Tech in Lubbock, Texas majoring in music.

Roman Ortega, alto-saxophone and Johnny Lozano, saxophone are both current music majors at Howard College in Big Spring.

Manuel Hilario, on keyboards and back-up vocalist, along with his cousin Richard Hilario, on the accordion, are both 4th generation musicians. They came to the band after Los Terregales, a local Big Spring conjunto, broke up. Their previous experience on stage benefits La Primera Band along with Raymond Fierro's, bass player, experience and know how with other bands.

Since Primera's debut in November of '92, they have performed in Odessa, Midland, Colorado City, Big Spring, Lamesa, Sweetwater, Snyder, Fort Stockton and Clovis, N.M. with plans of spreading further.

They currently have three original songs of their own. 'Patas, para que son?' written by Manuel Hilario, 'Deme un cigarro y una cerveza,' written by Jimmy and Tommy's dad, and also 'No lo vuelvo hacer," by Johnny Saldaivar. These originals are soon to be released as demos so keep your ears open for them West Texas.

Whenever you hear that La Primera Band will be performing, you can bet your last dollar that La Primera Band will show up and give you a performance that will make a lasting impression. The variety of music and the show itself is unbelievable, you really need to see them to believe it."

This band will not be categorized. They will give you Salsa, Jazz, Tejano and Rock. All they want to do is please everybody and enjoy themselves with the music all at the same time. "West Texas, we're ready for it, I just hope it's ready for us," stated Moreno.

To book La Primera Band or to find out where they are performing next, call Jr. Moreno at 915-267-5177 in Big Spring, Texas.

"Get ready West Texas, cause there's a big storm coming on the horizon. And when you see it coming across, it's going to be called 'La Primera' right across the front."

La Primera esta lista para el Oeste de Tejas

Por Leonela

No importando que tan lejos tengan que ir los carteros, sin importarles el que este lloviendo o este nevando nada impide que la correspondencia sea entregada. O sí, los carteros son reconocidos de ser las personas mas dedicadas en su trabajo. Y aunque son tal vez los mas famosos por su dedicación, ellos ciertamente no son los únicos que son dedicados en su trabajo o profesión.

Seguro, que la lluvia y la nieve son elementos de la naturaleza que no ayudan pero que pasan así es que por lo tanto no puede parar a los carteros puesto que ellos son advertidos acerca del tiempo por reportes y deben de estar preparados para estos casos. Pero que si lo inesperado pasa? Algunas veces lo inesperado puede ser un neumático desinflado, y hasta dos neumáticos desinflados? O que si pasa un accidente automovilístico? Usted sabe, un accidente cuando el automóvil tiene que ser remolcado? Los carteros estarán dispuestos y capaces de desempeñar su trabajo en estas circunstancia

Bueno Oeste de Tejas, aquí están algunas noticias acerca de la dedicación. En Big Spring, Tejas hay una banda que tiene toda la dedicación y su transportación por carretera es necesaria e importante para poder desempeñar su profesión, ellos son La Primera Band. Ni la lluvia, ni la nieve, ni un neumático desinflado, y ni un accidente detendrá a La Primera Band de su compromiso.

En el trayecto para presentarse en Los Amigos Outdoor Park (Parque al aire libre Los Amigos) en Fort Stockton, Tejas donde ellos abrirían por La Fiebre, a ellos le paso lo inesperado, no solo uno pero dos neumáticos desinflados y un accidente automovilístico.

Afortunadamente, ninguno resulto lastimado en el accidente, solo un poco temblorosos. Pero a lo que respecta al estado en que quedo la van, bueno, esta tuvo que ser remolcada. "Gracias a Dios todos quedaron ilesos y ahora dejamos todo esto en el pasado y continuemos," Jr. Moreno les dijo a los de la banda poco antes que comenzara la función.

Aunque lo que les paso en el camino hacia su presentación en Fort Stockton, La Primera Band logro llegar a su compromiso en Los Amigos ejecutando una sorprendente presentación de apertura por La Fiebre.

Dieron todo lo que tenían, efectos de humo, luces especiales, saxofones, acordeón, guitarras, tambores y una función espectacular, bueno, usted tenía que verlo para creerlo. Esta banda toco su música con tal energía que ninguno en la audiencia pudo notar por todo lo que pasaron para poder estar en Fort Stockton. La coreografía de los miembros de la banda invitó a todos a participar. La música que ellos tocaron hizo que la gente estuviera de pie y siempre atenta. La Primera Band puede tocar todo, desde Música Tejana a Country a Jazz a Rock Pesado. La Primera Band le mostró a su publico como gozar!

El sonido de La Primera Band es pura calidad y mucho corazón dentro de su música. Los miembros de la banda son educados en música o han tenido previa experiencia en esta con otras bandas.

"Todos tienen la música en su sangre," declara Moreno, manejador de La Primera Band. "Todos ellos tienen antecedentes musicales y son como la segunda, tercera o cuarta generación de músicos."

Esta banda se presentó por primera vez en Noviembre de 1992 para beneficio del Hospital Estatal en Big Spring. Se suponía que sería una presentación de una sola vez de acuerdo a Moreno, pero después que la banda recibió numerosas felicitaciones de la manera que se escuchaban, ellos comenzaron con la idea de continuar presentándose juntos. "Después de promover una canción por aquí y otra por allá," recuerda Moreno, "Solo prospero desde ahí."

No es extraño el porque La Primera Band a sido exitosa alrededor del área, los miembros de la banda tienen un muy original antecedente.

Primero, esta Jr. Moreno, esta es la primera vez que el maneja una banda musical y dice que será la única. El esta totalmente dedicado a su 'Primera Band'. Tom Olague es el vocalista principal y es cuarta generación de músicos junto con su hermano Jimmy Olague, baterista del grupo. Jimmy recibió su titulo de música del Texas Tech. "El es los ojos y los oídos de la banda, así como la calidad de la música," dice Moreno. "El es nuestro único critico."

Usted ve Oeste de Tejas, como se desarrollan los muchachos que golpean ruidosamente en ollas y cacerolas y cuando menos uno espera ya están en el colegio. Ellos tal vez puedan ser bateristas como Jimmy.

Johnny Saldivar, es el guitarrista principal y el también tomo educación de música en el Colegio. El asistió al Texas Tech en Lubbock, Tejas especializándose en música.

Roman Ortega, alto-saxofón y Johnny Lozano, saxofón son los dos titulados de música del Colegio Howard en Big Spring.

Participen todos juntos es uno de los proyectos de los Caballeros de Colón del Concilio de Midland #9215

Una velada de música y baile esta próxima a celebrarse, cuando el Concilio #9215 de Midland, los Caballeros de Colón, presenten su Baile de Beneficencia en su octavo Aniversario.

El baile, el cual se celebra cada año del cual se recaban fondos para las actividades de los Caballeros de Colón, tomara parte el Sábado por la noche, del 2 de Octubre, desde la 9:00 p.m. hasta las 2:00 a.m., en el Salón de baile Alamo, en Midland.

"Trataremos de atraer a todas las áreas del concilio de los Caballeros de Colón, de todas las ciudades circunvecinas," dice Bobby García, Gran Diputado de los Caballeros de Colón del Concilio #9215, el cual esta afiliado con la Iglesia Católica de Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe, de Midland. "Y por supuesto, con el publico en general. Queremos que estén todos juntos."

Música en vivo estará amenizando en esta velada por los Desperadoz, los cuales no son unos extraños para la audiencia del Oeste de Tejas. La admisión al baile será de $10.00 dólares por persona, y los ingresos que se recaben del baile serán para beneficio de una extensa variedad de actividades en las cuales los Caballeros de Colón están comprometidos.

"Esta el desembolso de la Iglesia, y la educación religiosa. Nosotros apoyamos a los sordos, y a los que tiene los oídos dañados de la diócesis de San Angelo," dice García. "Y a la tienda de San Vicente de Paul (una tienda en Midland) la cual provee alimentos y ropa para los necesitados."

"Hay tres individuos en la vocación religiosa. Dos de ellos son monjas, y otro es un caballero en el seminario. Nosotros los apoyamos en su vocación religiosa."

El baile es una de las actividades que se hacen a través de todo el año, en la cual los Caballeros de Colón dan alcance a la comunidad de Midland, y recaban fondos para sus proyectos.

Esta por ejemplo el evento anual de las fajitas, y una serie de ventas de garaje. Los fines de semana a través de todo el año, ellos también son anfitriones de desayunos a beneficio de la Iglesia.

Todo esto mantiene a los miembros de los Caballeros de Colón ocupados, especialmente desde que el tiempo y el esfuerzo que va dentro de sus servicios es en adición para lo que se consagran a sus familias, y para su trabajo. Pero los servicios cumplen una necesidad que cada miembro siente.

"Quiero alcanzar al publico en general," dice García, Director de la Funeraria Ellis Funeral Home, quien a estado activo con el concilio local por dos años. "En mi negocio, conozco a toda clase de gente. Esta es una manera para mi de darle alcance a la gente."

El Baile a Beneficencia de los Caballeros de Colón en su Octavo Aniversario, presentado por el concilio de Midland #9215, tomara lugar el Sábado por la noches, 2 de Octubre, desde las 9:00 p.m. hasta las 2:00 a.m., en el Salón de Baile Alamo, en Midland.

Admisión a este evento es de $10.00 dólares por persona. Los boletos los podrá adquirir anticipadamente en la tienda de mandado Al's #1, 411 N. Mineola, en Midland, o en el Video Lechuga, en el 423 S. Grant, en Odessa. O usted puede adquirir sus boletos por adelantado con cualquier miembro del concilio de los Caballeros de Colón. Los boletos también estarán a la venta en la puerta la noche del baile.

Bringing everyone together is one of Midland Council #9215 Knights of Columbus projects

An evening of music and dancing is in store, when Midland Council #9215, the Knights of Columbus, presents their 8th Annual Charity Dance.

The dance, which is an annual fundraiser for Knights of Columbus activities, will take place Saturday night, October 2nd, from 9:00 pm to 2:00 am, at the Alamo Ballroom, in Midland.

"We hope to bring together all the area councils of the Knights of Columbus, from all the surrounding cities," said Bobby Garcia, Deputy Grand Knight of Council #9215, which is affiliated with Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, of Midland. "And of course, the general public, too. We want to bring everyone together."

Live music that night will be provided by Desperados, which is no stranger to West Texas audiences. Admission is $10.00 per person, and the proceeds raised from the dance will benefit a wide variety of activities in which the Knights of Columbus are engaged.

"There is the disbursements to the church, and the religious education. We support the deaf, and the hearing-impaired of the San Angelo diocese," said Garcia. "And the Saint Vincent de Paul Store [a thrift store in Midland] which provides food and clothing for the needy."

"There are three individuals in the religious vocation. Two of them are nuns, and one is a gentleman in a seminary. We support them in their religious vocations."

The dance is one of several activities throughout the year, in which the Knights of Columbus reach out to the community of Midland, and raise funds for their projects.

There is the annual fajita cookoff, for example, and a series of garage sales. On weekends throughout the year, they will also host benefit church breakfasts.

All of this keeps the members of the Knights of Columbus busy, especially since time and the effort that goes into their service is in addition to what they devote to their families, and to their jobs. But the service fulfills a need that each member feels.

"I wanted to reach out to the public," said Garcia, a funeral director at Ellis Funeral Home, who has been active with the local council for two years. "In my business, I meet all kinds of people. This is a way for me to reach out to the people."

The Knights of Columbus 8th Annual Charity Dance, presented by Midland Council #9215' takes place Saturday night, October 2nd, from 9:00 pm to 2:00 am, at the Alamo Ballroom, in Midland.

Admission to the event is $10.00 per person. Tickets can be purchased in advance at Al's Grocery #1 in Midland, or at Lechuga's Video in Odessa. Or you can purchase advance tickets from a member of that council of the Knights of Columbus. Tickets will also be on sale at the door, the night of the dance ceive a trophy and $200.00 cash, and second place in each division will receive a trophy and $100.00 cash."

Special awards will also be given for 'Showmanship', 'Best Camp', and 'Worst Bar-B-Que'. Rivera points out that the 'winners' in that last category rarely come forward to accept their prize.

Of course, music is also an important part of an event like the county fair.

"The grand finale will be our huge concert featuring Los Huracanes del Norte, Fandango U.S.A., Fama, Jimmy Edwards and Campanas de America. This event will be held in the Pecos Rodeo Arena, which is just north of the Civic Center," said Rivera. "The gates will open at 6:00 pm on Saturday, October 2nd, and the concert will be held from 7:00 pm until 2:00 am. The ticket cost will be $12.00 in advance, and $15.00 at the gate. As you can see, we have some quality entertainment in store for you."

"Also at the concert, we will have a drawing for a new, 1993 Chevrolet Full-sized Truck. The advance ticket sales for both the concert and truck drawing will be available at many locations in Pecos, as well as Chamber of Commerce offices in most West Texas and southeast New Mexico cities."

The Mother Goose & Friends Parade takes place Wednesday afternoon, September 29th, in downtown Pecos. The 49th Annual Reeves County Fall Fair and Livestock Show takes place Thursday, September 30th, through, Saturday, October 2nd, at the Reeves County Civic Center, in Pecos, with a Saturday night concert at the Pecos Rodeo Arena, just north of the Civic Center.

The 20th Annual World Championship Bar-B-Que Beef Cookoff takes place Friday and Saturday, October 1st and 2nd, at the Sheriff's Posse Arena, which is adjacent to the Civic Center, in Pecos.

"You are cordially invited to the largest West Texas fall event. The 1993 Reeves County Fall Fair will bring many people from all over West Texas and southeast New Mexico," said Rivera. "As you can see, we have many exciting and fun things to do in Pecos, and we would like to encourage you to join us!"

Cancer Health Tips

HOUSTON — For the families and friends of cancer patients, open communication is often the key to coping with the disease, says a psychologist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

"The word 'cancer' conjures up very frightening images for most people," said Dr. Lois Friedman, assistant professor of psychology at Baylor. "Patients, feelings of isolation and low self-esteem may be accentuated if their supporters have difficulty talking about the disease."

According to Friedman, people deal with cancer the same way they handle other major life stresses. Some family members may avoid talking about the illness or withdraw from the patient, while others react by maintaining a cheerful facade.

Friedman says encouraging a "positive attitude" too soon after diagnosis can have dangerous consequences such as terminating the grieving process prematurely. "People need to understand that cancer patients are suffering a loss," she said. "Sadness and grieving are natural, appropriate responses for both patients and their loved ones."

The American Cancer Society estimates more than one million new cancer cases will be reported this year. An important first step for the many families affected by cancer is to allow for this period of sadness. Since the time required for dealing with grief varies for each patient, Friedman says it is essential for families to keep the lines of communication open.

Although many supporters want to offer advice, give medical tips, or tell cancer "stories" about other people, patients typically dismiss such information unless it is provided by professionals. For most patients, physical and emotional closeness is the best support loved ones can offer.

"Illness often brings families together," Friedman said. "Patients have a strong desire to be close to the people they love."

Friedman offers the following suggestions for coping with cancer in the family:

* Include the patient in all family activities.
* Inquire about the patient's illness.
* Use the word "cancer" around the patient.
* Avoid being too overprotective of the patient.

"The majority of patients make an adequate adjustment with time," Friedman said. "Family and friends should let the patient be the guide."

Aviso de Salud sober el Cáncer

HOUSTON — Para las familias y los amigos de pacientes con cáncer, la comunicación franca frecuentemente es la clave para hacer frente a la enfermedad, dice una psicóloga en el Baylor College of Medicine en Houston.

"La palabra 'cáncer' provoca imágenes muy aterrorizantes en la mayoria de las personas," dijo la Dra. Lois Friedman, profesora de psicologia de Baylor. "Los sentimientos de aislamiento y falta de amor propio de los pacientes pueden ser acentuados si a sus amados les cuesta hablar de la enfermedad."

Según Friedman, las personas tratan con el cáncer de la misma manera que se ajustan a otras crisis de la vida. Algunos miembros de la familia se niegan a hablar de la enfermedad o se alejan del paciente, mientras que otros presentan la apariencia falsa de buen humor y esperanza.

Friedman dice que si se trata de fomentar una "actitud positiva" poco tiempo después del diagnóstico pueden haber resultados dañinos, tales como el terminar prematuramente el proceso de lamentar. "Las personas tienen que comprender que los pacientes con cáncer sufren una pérdida," dijo Friedman. "La tristeza y la pena son reacciones apropiadas tanto para los pacientes como para sus amados."

La Sociedad Americana del Cáncer estima que se reportarán más de un millón de casos nuevos de cáncer este año. Un paso importante para las muchas familias que serán afectadas por el cáncer es el de permitir este período de tristeza. puesto que el tiempo requirido para ajustarse a la pena varía con cada paciente, Friedman dice que es esencial que se mantengan libres las vías de comunicación.

Aunque los amigos y los familiares quieran ofrecer consejos, dar recomendaciones médicas, y relatar cuentos de la experiencia de otras personas con cáncer, los pacientes tipicamente descuentan tal información al menos que se ofrezca por profesionales. para muchos pacientes el contacto fisico y emocional es el mejor apoyo que se puede ofrecer.

"La enfermedad muchas veces promociona mayor intimidad entre la familia," dijo Friedman. "Los pacientes tienen un deseo fuerte de estar cerca a sus amados."

Friedman ofrece las siguientes sugerencias para ayudar a la familia a hacer frente al cáncer:

* Incluir al paciente en todas las actividades de la familia.
* Preguntar acerca de la enfermedad del paciente.
* Usar la palabra 'cáncer' en la presencia del paciente.
* Evitar proteger excesivamente al paciente.

"La mayoría de los pacientes se ajustan adecuadamente con el tiempo," dijo Friedman. "La familia y los amigos deben de permitir que el paciente sea el guia."

Bracing for an epidemic of bigotry

nual outbreak of extreme and ridiculous anti-immigrant legislation by introducing a proposal so offensive to this country's values that nobody took it seriously.

Then, with breathtaking speed, the anti-immigrant sentiment that had been festering in California changed the political climate so much that, barely a year later, Democrats and Republicans alike are now calmly discussing this previously "unthinkable" proposal: amending the Constitution to deny U.S. citizenship to children born in the United States to undocumented parents.

The fact that elected leaders have decided that they can earn political points with this proposal — which would take the United States back to the days when the Supreme Court decided in the Dred Scott case that persons of African ancestry were not considered "persons" under the Constitution — is an indication of just how far the disease of immigrant-bashing has progressed.

And the patient — nothing less than the national values that have made the United States a beacon to immigrants for more the 200 years — is in grave danger.

Although the proposed constitutional amendment has virtually no chance of passing Congress and has been resoundingly denounced in editorial pages, an equally extreme and dangerous proposal is very much under consideration. The same individuals pushing for constitutional reform are attracting the attention of their colleagues with proposals for some form of identification card aimed at curbing undocumented immigration.

They argue that a new, secure national ID card, probably based on Social Security numbers, will help the United States secure its borders by making it more difficult for undocumented workers to find jobs with forged papers.

Some in Congress and even in the White House, desperate to propose something to convince the public that they are serious about immigration control, are warming up to this proposal.

Not only are these proposed ID cards unlikely to be effective, they pose a grave danger to the basic rights and liberties of which the United States is so rightfully proud.

First, to the extent that a market for fraudulent documents exists under the current system, an ID card may change that market, but it will not eliminate it. Even the most secure document imaginable will require individuals to present supporting documents to acquire a card. If the new card itself cannot be easily forged, the underlying documents are vulnerable to fraud. In short, we will have spent billions of dollars to end up exactly where we are today.

Second, the existence of such a card is likely to lead to civil rights abuses against many legal U.S. residents, particularly Latinos and Asians. For example, when Joe Smith and Julio Méndez show up to apply for their cards, one of them is more likely to have his supporting documents questioned than the other. Can you guess which one?

Similarly, even if the uses for such a card are strictly regulated, when Smith and Méndez are pulled over for speeding tickets, one of them is likely to be asked to show his ID card, just to make sure he's "legal," and it probably won't be Smith.

Many Latinos in the Southwestern United States already carry cards to prevent harassment from the Border Patrol. We know that the effect of such policies is further harassment at the hands of the police and other authorities.

It is entirely legitimate for Congress and the Clinton Administration to look for effective ways to control the borders of the United States. Latinos have a duty to help formulate and support responsible policies which advance this goal.

It is equally legitimate to insist that such policies not endanger the rights of Hispanic Americans, and that the immigration reform debate be both thoughtful and balanced.

As Hispanic Americans, we have enough faith in the United States to believe that the nation can engage in this difficult debate without resorting to the disease of bigotry, and without enacting policies that ultimately will shame us all.

Preparandose para una epidemis de intolerancia

continuea de la pagina 1

Tribunal Supremo adoptó una decisión en el caso Dred Scott, en el sentido de que las personas de ancestro africano no se consideraban "personas" a tenor de la Constitución — es una indicación de cuánto ha adelantado precisamente la enfermedad de atacar a los inmigrantes.

Y el paciente .. nada menos que los valores nacionales que han hecho de los Estados Unidos un faro para los inmigrantes durante más de 200 años — se halla en grave peligro.

Aunque la enmienda constitucional propuesta no tiene virtualmente ninguna oportunidad de ser aprobada p r el Congreso y ha sido denunciada resonantemente en las páginas editoriales, una propuesta igualmente extremista y peligrosa se halla en gran medida bajo estudio. Las mismas personas que impulsan la reforma constitucional están atrayendo la atención de sus colegas con propuestas sobre alguna forma de tarjeta de identificación dirigida a frenar la inmigración indocumentada.

Ellos arguyen que una nueva tarjeta de identificación nacional segura, basada probablemente en el número del Seguro Social, ayudará a los Estados Unidos a hacer que sus fronteras sean más seguras al dificultar el que los trabajadores indocumentados hallen empleo mediante el uso de documentos falsificados.

Algunas personas del Congreso y hasta de la Casa Blanca, desesperadas por proponer algo para convencer al público de que hablan en serio sobre el control de la inmigración, están acogiendo cálidamente a la última propuesta.

No sólo estas tarjetas de identificación tienen pocas probabilidades de ser eficaces, sino que plantean un grave peligro para los derechos y las libertades fundamentales de los cuales se enorgullecen los Estados Unidos con tanta razón.

Primero, hasta el punto en que existe un mercado para los documentos fraudulentos bajo el sistema actual, una tarjeta de identificación puede hacer cambiar a ese mercado, pero no lo eliminará. Hasta el documento más seguro que pueda imaginarse exigirá que las personas presenten documentos de apoyo para adquirir una tarjeta. Si la nueva tarjeta misma no puede ser falsificada con facilidad, los documentos subyacentes son vulnerables al fraude. En resumen, habriamos gastado miles de millones de dólares para terminar exactamente donde estamos hoy.

Segundo, la existencia de dicha tarjeta tiene probabilidades de llevar a los abusos de los derechos civiles contra muchos residentes legales de los Estados Unidos, especialmente los latinos y asiáticos. Por ejemplo, cuando Joe Smith y Julio Méndez comparezcan para solicitar sus tarjetas, uno de ellos tiene mayores probabilidades de que sus documentos de apoyo sean puestos en tela de juicio que el otro.

¿Pueden ustedes adivinar cuál de ellos?

De igual modo, aún cuando los usos de dicha tarjeta sean reglamentados estrictamente, cuando Smith y Méndez sean detenidos por exceso de velocidad, uno de ellos tiene mayores probabilidades de que se le pida mostrar su tarjeta de identidad, sólo para asegurarse de que es alguien "legal," y probablemente no será Smith. Muchos latinos de los estados del Suroeste han tenido que llevar tarjetas a fin de evitar el hostigamiento por parte de la Patrulla Fronteriza; sabemos que el efecto de dichos cursos de acción es el hostigamiento adicional a manos de la policia y otras autoridades.

Es completamente legitimo que el Congreso y el gobierno de Clinton busquen modos eficaces de controlar a las fronteras de los Estados Unidos. Los latinos tienen el deber de ayudar a formular y apoyar a los cursos de acción responsables que hagan adelantar a ese objetivo.

Es igualmente legitimo el insistir en que tales cursos de acción no pongan en peligro los derechos de los hispanoamericanos y que el debate sobre la reforma de la inmigración sea tan bien pensado como equilibrado.

Como Hispano-Americanos, tenemos suficiente fe en los Estados Unidos como para creer que la nación pueda empeñarse en este dificil debate sin recurrir a la enfermedad de la intolerancia, y sin promulgar cursos de acción que en último término nos avergüencen a todos.

Texas Rangers played a big role in Midland's first Hispanic County Deputy

By Amarante Cordova

A childhood spent in the chaos that often crossed the border, into the United States, during the Mexican Revolution of 1910, and a chance to see the men responsible for restoring law and order, inspired Joe Russell to pursue his own career in law enforcement.

"I'm part Spanish. My mother was Spanish and French, and my father was an Englishman. My grandfather was one of the first Englishmen to emigrate into Presidio County," recalled Russell, who now lives in Midland. "There was the Russells, the Spencers, the Dailys, and the Humphreys, and there were a few more. I was born and raised in Marfa, the Marfa country, and Presidio. My dad had a ranch there, and we still have it, about thirty miles this side of Presidio, between Marfa and Presidio."

"But anyway, when I was a kid, my dad had a big ranch in Chihuahua, and I spent lots of time in Chihuahua, till the Revolution broke out for a second time. Well, he lost everything. He got a little out, but he lost most of it to Pancho Villa. Well, soon after that, Pancho Villa was killed. I was just a young kid."

But while revolutionaries and bandits may have made some impression on the young Russell, an even greater impression was made by those trying to restore order to the border country.

"I tell you what. When I was a little boy, the Texas Rangers? They were real Texas Rangers in those days! Pancho Villa and the Revolution were going on along the Mexican border. I was born there, along the Mexican border, and there was lots of fighting back and forth," said Russell. "Pancho Villa would come and steal our horses, mostly horses. He never stole any cattle."

"But I was kind of raised where, in those days, everybody in Presidio carried a gun. The law was the gun in those days. I know that we had a Revolution going on, and World War One was about to break out."

As an adult, Russell would hold a variety of positions, but nearly all of them were related, in some way to law enforcement.

"I had a lot of experience with enforcing the law, to a certain extent. During the Second World War, I was in the Customs Service for five years, in Laredo," said Russell. "After that, I went to Mexico City with the embassy for another five years, as an investigator."

"I came back, and that's when they opened up this 'bracero' deal. I worked with the Labor Department, as an investigator, in Lubbock. Then I opened up my own labor association in Stanton. When we closed the association, I went to Huntsville."

Russell's service in the state penitentiary in Huntsville, working the State's Department of Corrections, may have taken him out of sight in West Texas for a while, but not out of mind.

"I was in Huntsville, an officer there. I worked there awhile, in the prison system. Then I came back for a visit, and I ran into a very close friend of mine, Louie Koonce," Russell recalled. "He wanted to know where the heck I'd been, because I hadn't been around for a long time. I said, 'Well, I've been in Huntsville.' And he said, 'Well, what the hell did you do?' And I said, 'well, nothing. I was one of the corrections officers there!'"

At that time, the Midland County Sheriff's Department (like many local, state, and federal law enforcement agencies across West Texas) did not have a single officer who could speak Spanish, which posed a problem whenever an individual who spoke only that language was taken into custody.

"He said, 'You know, 'Big Ed' (Midland County Sheriff Ed Darnell) is looking for a fellow that can speak Spanish.' He said, 'Why don't you go out there and check with him, and tell him that I recommend you,'" said Russell, still recalling that conversation with Koonce. "I said, 'Well, yes, I'd like to get back here. I don't like it there.' I was in Sugarland, and I never did care for that humid weather. The job was interesting, but the pay was not good.

"I went to work with him (Darnell) in June of 1966. And I worked for him about, let's see, I quit in '77. That's when he lost the election to Dallas Smith."

Russell's hiring was a first for the Midland Sheriff's Department, and it wasn't long before he was working nearly every facet of department operations.

"Well, I went to work as a night deputy. I was very, very lucky that I went to work with a real nice fellow" said Russell. "His name was McDaniel, and we worked together for a while at night. And he kind of broke me in, and showed me the town and the county."

Russell was later transferred to the day shift, which included not only patrol duty, but also transporting mental patients to the Big Spring State Hospital. His services as an English/Spanish interpreter also continued.

"I was the only one. There were four (City of Midland) policemen that could speak Spanish. That was Trevino, Montemayor, and Lalo (Camarillo). And Flores, who quit and went to Immigration," recalled Russell. "Except for me, the Sheriff didn't have anybody that could speak a word of Spanish."

Russell believes that his ability to speak in both English and Spanish, coupled with his experience in law enforcement and his rapport with the minority community, contributed to his advancement in the department.

"One day, he (Darnell) called me in. I'd been there about three years," said Russell. "He called me in one afternoon and said, 'You know, our night chief - in those days, we called them chiefs - he's going to retire. He's getting old, and sick, and he's going to retire. And I want you to be my man.'"

"And I said, 'Well, I'll do the best I can.' Because there had been a lot of guys that had been there longer than I had. But I guess, on account of my ability to speak Spanish and all, I was it. I went ahead and accepted it. And for the last six years I was there, I was in charge of the whole thing at night."

After his retirement from the Sheriff's Department, which followed the election of Dallas Smith to the office of County Sheriff in 1977, Russell returned to the life of ranching he knew as a young man. But he remembers his service as a law enforcement officer fondly. And he recommends it as a career to young people, provided they have what it takes to serve their community well.

Well, I tell you what. It's a great job, if you've got good sense, if you've got the good horse sense to enforce the law and, at the same time, get along with people," Russell advised. "That's one of the reasons why I got promoted over the older deputies, is because I was able to get along with people, as well as enforcing the law."

"People in Midland had a lot of respect for me, and they still do. When I go to Trevino's [Granada] and eat, and visit with him, a lot of people still remember me, and they still got a lot of respect for me. It's a very interesting job. I really enjoyed it!"

Mobile home sales rolling again

The prediction of 18,000 new mobile home sales in 1993 greatly surpasses the 3,905 units sold in 1991. After seven straight years of declining sales, the projected numbers show that the industry is coming out of a slump. About 95 percent of mobile homes are sold as permanently-based housing, with new manufactured units selling for $15,000 to $50,000.

Ventas de casas abulantes agarran velocidad

Predicciones de que se venderán 18.000 nuevas casas ambulantes en 1993 sobrepasan por mucho a las 3,905 unidades que se vendieron en 1991. Despues de siete años consecutivos de ventas bajas, los números proyectados demuestran que la industria se está recuperando. Casi el 95 porciento de casas ambulantes se venden como hogares permanentes, y las nuevas unidades llevan precios entre $15,000 y $50,000.

Los 'Texas Rangers' jugaron un papel muy importante en el primer Condado Hispano de Midland

Por Amarante Cordova

Una niñez vivida en el caos que muchas veces cruzó la frontera, dentro de los Estados Unidos, durante la Revolución Mexicana de 1910, y una oportunidad de ver al hombre responsable por la restauración de la ley y el orden, inspira a Joe Russell para perseguir su propia carrera de ejecución de la ley.

"Soy parte Español. Mi madre era Española y Francesa, y mi padre fue Inglés. Mi abuelo fue uno de los primeros Ingleses que emigro dentro del Condado de Presidio," recuerda Russell, quien ahora vive en Midland. "Allá estaban los Russell, los Spencers, los Dailys, y los Humphreys, y habían algunos más. Nací y me criaron en Marfa, en Marfa y Presidio. Mi padre tenía un rancho, y todavía lo tenemos, 30 millas de este lado de Presidio, entre Presidio y Marfa.

"Pero de todos modos, cuando era solo un muchacho, mi padre tenía un rancho en Chihuahua, en el cual yo pasaba mucho tiempo, hasta que la revolución se interrumpió por segunda vez. Bueno, el perdió todo. El rescató muy poco, y todo lo demás lo perdió por Pancho Villa. Bueno, poco tiempo después de que perdiera todo, Pancho Villa fue asesinado. Yo solo era un pequeño muchacho en ese entonces."

Pero por mientras los revolucionarios y bandidos dejaron una impresión en el joven Russell, y aun mas impresión dejaron aquellos que trataron de restaurar el orden en la frontera del país.

"Déjenme decirles una cosa. Cuando era solo un pequeño muchacho, los Rangers de Tejas? Ellos eran realmente Rangers de Tejas en esos días! Pancho Villa y la Revolución se iban por toda la frontera Mexicana. Y yo nací allí, a lo largo de la frontera Mexicana, y había batallas de un lado y del otro," dice Russell. Pancho Villa venía y se robaba nuestros caballos, normalmente caballos. El nunca se robó una sola cabeza de ganado."

"Pero yo fui criado donde, en esos días, todos en Presidio cargaban pistola. La ley era la pistola en esos días. Sabía que estaba en su apogeo la revolución, y que la Primera Guerra Mundial estaba por estallar."

Como adulto, Russell tenía una variedad de posiciones, pero casi todas estaban relacionadas, de alguna manera con la ejecución de la ley.

"Obtuve mucha experiencia con la ejecución de la ley, hasta cierto grado. Durante la Segunda Guerra Mundial, estuve en los Servicios Aduanales por cinco años, en Laredo," dice Russell. "Después de eso, fui a la Ciudad de México con la embajada por otros cinco años, como investigador."

"Regrese, y fue cuando ellos abrieron este trato de 'braceros'. Trabaje con el Departamento de Trabajo, como investigador, en Lubbock. Luego abrí mi propia asociación de trabajo en Stanton. Cuando cerré la asociación, me fui para Huntsville."

Los servicios de Russell en la penitenciaria del Estado en Huntsville, trabajando en el Departamento Correccional del Estado, tal vez lo tomo fuera del punto de interés en el Oeste de Tejas por un tiempo, pero no le borro de su mente.

"Era un oficial en Huntsville. Trabaje un tiempo, en el sistema presidiario. Luego regrese por acá como visita, y me tope con un muy buen amigo, Louie Koonce," recuerda Russell. "Y quería saber que había pasado conmigo, por que por mucho tiempo no me había visto. A lo cual le respondí, 'Bueno, estoy en Huntsville.' Y el me pregunto, 'Bueno que demonios haces en Huntsville?' Le respondí, 'Bueno, nada. Soy uno de los oficiales de la correccional allá!'"

En ese entonces, el Departamento de Alguaciles del Condado de Midland (como muchas agencias de la fuerza de la ley locales, estatales, y federales por todo el Oeste de Tejas) no tenían a un solo oficial que hablara Español, lo cual era una postura problemática siempre que un individuo que habla solo ese idioma era llevado en custodia.

"El dijo, 'Usted sabe, 'Big Ed' (el Alguacil del Condado de Midland Ed Darnell) esta buscando gente que hable Español.' El dijo, ' Porque no vas a verificar con el y dile que yo te recomiendo,'" dijo Russell, todavía recuerdo esa conversación con Koonce. "Yo respondí, si, me gustaría regresar. No me gusta allá donde estoy.' Estaba en Sugarland, y a mi nunca me gusto ese clima húmedo. El trabajo era interesante, pero el salario no era muy bueno."

"Fui a trabajar con el (Darnell) en Junio de 1966. Y trabaje para el mas o menos, déjenme ver, renuncie en 1977. Fue cuando el perdió las elecciones contra Dallas Smith."

Contratar a Russell fue lo primero para el Departamento de Alguaciles, y no fue mucho después cuando el estaba trabajando casi cada faceta de las operaciones del departamento.

"Bueno, regrese a trabajar como alguacil en el turno nocturno. Fui muy afortunado porque trabaje con un gran compañero" dice Russell. Su nombre era McDaniel, y trabajamos juntos por algún tiempo en las noches. Y fue el quien de alguna manera me enseño la ciudad y el campo."

Russell mas tarde fue transferido para los turnos diurnos, los cuales no solamente incluían las tareas de patrullaje, pero también transportar a enfermos mentales al Hospital del Estado Big Spring. Sus servicios como interprete de Ingles/Español también continuaron.

"Yo era el único. Habían cuatro (Ciudad de Midland) policías que podían hablar español. Eran Treviño, Montemayor, y Lalo (Camarillo). Y Flores quien renunció y se fue para Inmigración," recuerda Russell. "Y salvo a un servidor, el Alguacil no tenía a nadie que pudiera hablar una sola palabra de Español.

Russell cree que su habilidad de hablar en ambos idiomas Ingles y Español, le doblo su experiencia el departamento de la ley y su armonía con la comunidad minoritaria, contribuyó para su promoción en el departamento.

"Un día Darnell me llamó. Yo tenía tres años," dice Russell. Me llamó una tarde y dijo, ' Tu sabes, nuestro jefe nocturno en esos días, le llamábamo jefe el se va a retirar. El se esta haciendo viejo, esta enfermo, y se va a retirar. Y yo quiero que seas mi hombre.'"

"Y yo respondí 'Bueno haré lo mejor que pueda.' Porque hay individuos que han estado mucho mas tiempo que yo. Pero pienso, que contando con la habilidad de hablar Español y todo lo demás, estoy preparado. Y fui hacia adelante con todo y acepte. Y por los siguientes seis años estuve en ese cargo, estuve a cargo de todas las cosas en el turno de la noche."

Después de su retiro del Departamento de Alguaciles, siguió la elección de Dallas Smith a la oficina de Alguacil del Condado en 1977, Russell regreso a la vida de rancho que el conocía desde que era un pequeño muchacho. Pero el recuerda tiernamente sus servicios como oficial ejecutor de la ley. Y el recomienda como una carrera para la gente joven, proporcionando lo que ellos tengan y lo que tome para servir a la comunidad lo mejor que se pueda.

"Bueno, yo les digo que. Es un trabajo estupendo, si uno tiene buen juicio, si usted a tenido buen juicio para hacer valer a la ley, y al mismo tiempo, se lleva bien con la gente," Russell aconseja. "Es una de las razones que fui promovido sobre los antiguos alguaciles, es porque era capaz de llevarme bien con la gente, como con mis compañeros de trabajo."

"La gente de Midland tuvo mucho respeto por mi persona y todavía. Cuando voy a comer al Granada, a visitar a Treviño, mucha gente todavía me recuerda, y ellos me respetan. Es un trabajo muy interesante. Realmente lo disfrute!"

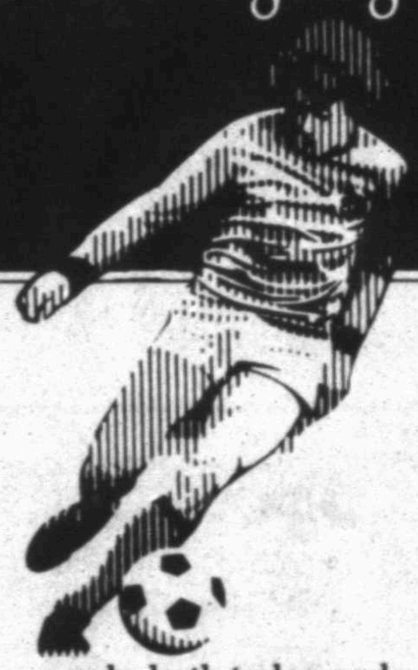
"In health care, as in a fast-moving soccer game, you've got to run to where the ball is going to be."



In coaching we tell kids they've got to run to where the ball's going to be in order to score. The same principal applies in health care delivery – our field is changing rapidly.

"At Physicians and Surgeons, our goal is to understand where those changes are occurring and be ready with the services and facilities to meet the needs, both today and tomorrow. With current medical capabilities you can often have surgery in the morning, go home in the afternoon, and heal completely in a few days.

"As we develop a new medical center, these changes are pointing us more in the direction of outpatient care.

"We have an excellent group of employees and physicians, and look forward to continuing our quality service at a reasonable cost."

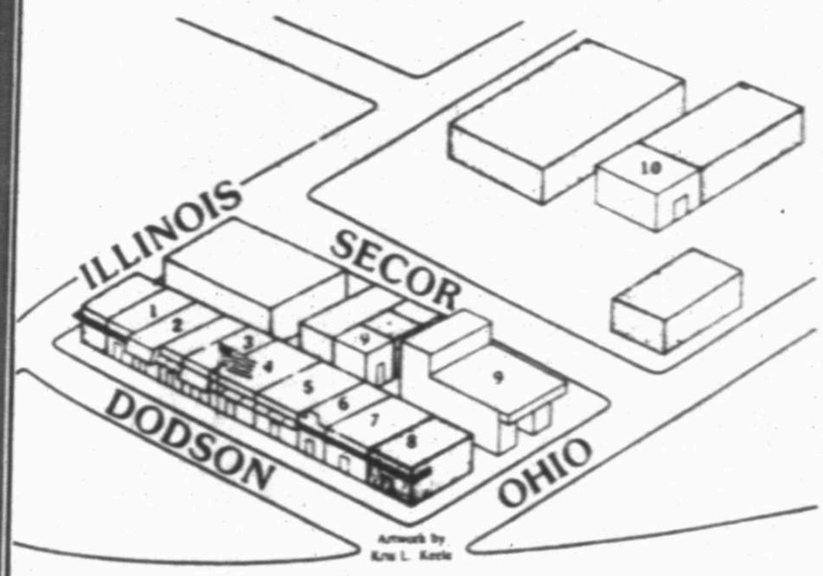
OLD TOWN MIDLAND



40 Years Back in Time

In the late 1940's, Midland was a thriving oil and cattle town, with a busy and bustling Main Street. In the Dodson Street area, the Midland Indians baseball team was still playing ball in their Pagoda park stadium located just south of Illinois at Dodson. Victory Village, a World War II housing project of quonset huts and plywood had just been dismantled, and the El Campo Tourist Court still rented their rooms just across Wall Street. Streets in the area were not yet paved.

In 1952, Dodson street was developed as an alternative shopping area to Main Street downtown because Midland was growing west. The new Midland Memorial Hospital still smelled of wet paint and there was talk of tearing down the baseball stadium and building a new and much larger shopping center.

Forty Years later, in 1992 an association of merchants was formed, designating the area as "Old Town Midland", as the old shopping area downtown no longer existed. it is a charming and unique group of shops which includes:

1. Frank Hawk Jewelry
2. Geri's Antiques
3. The Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop
4. Adock's Ideal Cleaners
5. Graham Pharmacy, Inc.
6. The Blue Gem Shop & Gallery
7. Folger Galleries
8. Career Girl
9. Creative Schoolhouse, Inc.
10. Miz B's Books

As well as the businesses listed above, also in the area are antiques, women & children's clothing, gifts, western wear, restaurants, auto repair, a locksmith, flower shops, shoe repair, beauty salons and minor emergency center.
