PERRYTON, OCHILTREE COUNTY, TEXAS, FRIDAY AUGUST 21, 1925

NUMBER 29.

TOMORROW IS PERRYTON'S BIRTHDAY PARTY

Tomorrow, Saturday, August 22nd, is Perryton's sixth birthday and in honor of the event, there will flock to this city thousands of people from all over this part of the southwest, who will join with us in celebrating the anniversary of "The Wonder Town of the North Plains." A full program of entertainment has been provided for the day and none will go away saying that it was not an enjoyable day.

It has only been a few years ago that the buffalo and the Indian roamed over the ground where this little city now stands. Then only six years ago it was nothing but a cow pasture. Now we find the liveliest town in the North Plains with modern conveniences. Big fine stores, garages, light, power, ice and cold storage plants, best of school and educational facilities, good churches and above all a town full of boosting citizens.

Thousands of acres of the fertile black soil surrounding Perryton is now under cultivation and every day we see more and more turned under by the plow. New people are coming in by the scores but we still have room for them by the hundreds. This fall will see thousands of acres of summer fallowed land sowed to wheat and unless all "hunches" fail, the largest wheat crop in the history of the Panhandle will be marketed here at Perryton next summer. Come and see our lot with us. Buy some of this wonderful land while you can get it at a low price.

We will soon be starting on our seventh year as a town. Let's make it the biggest year in the history of Perryton. Let's make it a year of development with every one boosting and no knockers.

McMILLAN SUNDAY SCHOOL HOLDS PICNIC

The members of the McMillan Sunday School held their annual picnic Saturday in a big grove on the Canadian River. A fine dinner was spread and of course enjoyed by the many present. After dinner, a ball game was played between Billie Beardsley's "Blues" and Sam Maloney's "Reds". The game was fast and furious for four and one-half innings and there was no dispute over the final score, the "Blues" claiming the victory. The last half inning was not played on account of the inability of the "Reds" to take the field because they were exhausted by the heavy game. The scorekeepers were Edna Wilkinson and Violet Beardsley. Earl Waide doing the umpiring. Other amusement was wild horse riding with Grant Westbrook and Cal Flowers. In the absence of horses, cart wheels were used and Mrs. Pete Wernske, Ward Redus and Lottie Flowers proved to be the most unskilful pitchers. The fourth annual picnic will be held next year and it is safe to say that many new delicious dishes of food will be furnished for the feast by the ladies of our community, and that all of us boys and kids will be there with our appetites in good repair to show them that their culinary ability is appreciated.—Contributed.

We wish to call your attention to the public sale advertisement of the P. F. Rogers Ranch which will be found elsewhere in this issue. They are selling a big bunch of sheep, hogs and mules. The ranch is located 12 miles southwest of Perryton and 10 miles northwest of Farnsworth. Ed Littleton will do the selling and P. F. Rogers will clerk the sale.

Frank Ellis returned last week from a trip to Kansas where he has some interests. Mr. Ellis reports that this section than they have on the high priced Kansas land. Mr. Ellis expects to leave soon for Kansas.

Mrs. Kate Dowers left on Thursday last week for Kansas City, Missouri where she will visit with relatives.

BACK TO SCHOOL

This is the season of vacations but soon it will end and the question will arise in many family councils as to whether son or daughter is to continue in school or return to other labors. We use the expression 'other labors' feeling there is a sound reason for the belief that every child of high school age should have some manual task to perform side by side with the educational duties, not only to reveal the propensities of the individual but to create a wholesome respect for manual labor by Young America.

Parents at times err in letting age be the determining factor as to when a school career should terminate. Our compulsory attendance laws cannot be prophetic and have no magic power; the degree of training necessary to meet the probable future aims and interests of the individual child should form the basis for the decision.

Adolescents are often tempted by the romance of the world of business or by the desire to acquire more spending money to abandon the completion of their education. They lack the foresight to see that a premature entrance into the highly competitive fields of commerce can do them no good. They are in a period of rapidly changing ideals and there is little assurance that their own plans of today will meet their needs of tomorrow. Maturer natures must extend a directing hand.

In our country the individual is largely ranked by his degree of leadership. We occupy positions at various steps of the ladder from the top rung to the lowest. A good education is today essential to a commanding place. It is because of this fact the Better School League enjoins parents to make every reasonable sacrifice to see that their children get the proper training; that they go through the secondary schools by all means and to college or university if the interests and capabilities of the child warrant. We do not raise the question of financial interference for every graduating class of college and university is enriched by young men and women who have been self-supporting during their collegiate training.

A college or university course is not universally essential. Much time and money may be wasted in an attempt to inject higher education into individuals whose capacities and inclinations forbid it.

However, parents owe it to their children to equip them with the foundation for a fruitful career. Youth should not be allowed to pull into blind alleys; to put itself into unfavorable position for making the most of life. A skimped education is a handicap—it may be a sentence of failure. The training of mind and body that our education institutions give insures the boy and girl a fair start and imparts an incentive that stirs ambition and builds self-assurance. This confidence in itself frequently determines success.

When vacations are ended let "Back-to-School" be your slogan.

Raymond Robinson of May, Oklahoma came in last Saturday to visit over Sunday with his wife and family who are visiting in the country home of Mrs. Robinson's father, F. J. Koch. Mrs. Robinson and daughter, Mary Anna, will return the latter part of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. and John Zimmerman of Harvell, Illinois were here the fore part of this week to look after the land interests near here. The Zimmermans and their family have several sections of land in this county and are frequent visitors here.

S. H. Cox and family left last Sunday for Long Beach, California where they will make their future home. Mr. Cox has leased his mill to Ernest Records who will operate same.

PEOPLES SUPPLY SEWING CONTEST AWARDS MADE

The sewing contest, which was put on jointly by The McCall Pattern Co. of New York City and the Peoples Supply Co., came to a close last Saturday when three little ladies were the delighted recipients of the three prize dolls.

The rules, under which the Judges worked, ordered the quality of the material, also all trimmings to be disregarded, excellency of the stitching and neatness were the paramount points considered.

The dresses are on display at The Peoples Supply Co. store where all are invited to call and examine the excellent sewing done by these little girls. There were twenty-five entrants; the management presented each of the twenty-five with a spring case tape measure, snap shots of the group were taken, each little lady holding her dress, and when finished a picture, also, will be given each entrant.

This contest has developed among the younger children, aged eight to twelve, a taste for sewing and many mothers report that their daughters know far more about the art of sewing than they had any idea they did. Some of the girls are now at work on school dresses for themselves, having proven to Mother that they really can sew.

Some remarkable embroidery was submitted, on a few of the dresses, this of course, coming under the head of "trimming" could not be considered for a prize but is worthy of "special mention."

The winners were
First—Katherine Sealey, age 8
Second—Clarice Allen, age 12
Third—Mary Coffee, age 11

Honorable Mention:
Ella Ray Kutch, Dorothy Hodson and Elizabeth Manning.

Much of the work was so wonderfully well done, the Judges requested nine little girls to go to the store and there prepare a sampler so that all the Judges would be sure the entrant did all the work herself. The nine thus honored were—Opal Pittman, Clarice Allen, Viola Shearer, Laura May Sharp, Elizabeth Manning, Mary Coffee, Ella Ray Kutch, Ava Dunlavy and Katherine Sealey. When the dress was brought to the store the child's name was written in a book and a number given. This number and the child's age was written on a card which was pinned to the dress, thus the Judges had no idea to whom they were making the awards.

The store management wishes to thank the little girls for the interest taken, the parents for their kindly co-operation and the Judges for the time and thought put into the decisions.

Mrs. R. L. Hanna of Hazelton, Kansas a former resident of this county, and niece, Miss O'Leola Hanna, visited friends in this vicinity on Thursday of last week. They returned to their home after a two weeks visit at Plainview, Texas. Miss Hanna, who is a missionary, recently returned from old Mexico where she has been engaged in missionary work. She taught school in this county for a number of years. Miss Hanna expects to leave soon for Los Angeles, California, where she will resume her work as a missionary at the Home Toberman Mission. She is under the supervision of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Logan Payne of Hunt County, Texas, Richmond Payne of New Mexico, Jack Payne of Wellington, Texas and Ed Payne of Canadian, Texas returned to their respective homes the fore part of this week after a visit at the part of this week after a visit at the bedside of their father, W. E. Payne, who is ill at the country home of his daughter, Mrs. S. F. Waide, who lives southwest of Perryton. Mr. Payne is still in a very critical condition.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Y. Pitts and son, Horace, of Vernon, Texas, stopped on their return trip from Colorado for a visit last Saturday and Sunday in the country home of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Spencer.

BOY KILLED UNDER DISC NEAR SPEARMAN

Hoyt Harvey, fifteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Harvey, who live twelve miles northwest of Spearman, received injuries when he was thrown under a disc harrow by a runaway team on last Monday morning from which he died six hours later without regaining consciousness. This deplorable accident occurred about ten o'clock in the morning. Physicians were summoned at once and everything possible was done to save his life but there was no chance. He was dragged about ninety-eight steps under the sharp disc. The Harvey family came from Erick, Oklahoma and had lived in Hansford County about three years. The boy leaves besides his parents, five sisters and one brother. The funeral services were held at the Hansford cemetery on Wednesday afternoon, same being in charge of Rev. Hand and Rev. Wheeler of Spearman.

ASK RECEIVER FOR BROOMCORN ASSOCIATION

We note by the Elk City, Oklahoma Democrat that sixty farmers in that locality have filed a suit asking for a receiver for the Broomcorn Growers Association, alleging in their petition that they believed that the Association had failed to function and was not able to pay the growers. The court held that the District Court of Beckham County has jurisdiction in such matters and same will come up at the September term of that court. This case will no doubt be watched with interest by many of our farmers who are members of this association. Co-operative marketing organizations are not infallible, neither are mere men, be they merchants professional men or farmers. There is two sides to every question so don't condemn the association until you know (not have heard) both sides of this controversy.

Refreshments were served to a large crowd at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony. Both of these young people are fine upright members of the Bethany circle. They will make their home on a farm in that section. The Herald unites with their many friends in wishing them a long and happy married life.

THE METHODIST REVIVAL

The Methodist revival, now in progress, continues to increase in interest. Crowds are good and one good feature is the co-operation of all Christian forces. Everyone is showing a willingness to do all they can for the advancement of Christ's kingdom. The business men are cooperating in a fine way by closing their places of business for the morning services. The leaders in the meeting appreciate this very much. The musicians of the town are consecrating their talents to the service of the Lord. Rev. R. N. Huckabee is still bringing to us soul stirring messages and a number are re-consecrating their lives to God, and others are making the start for the first time. The revival will close Sunday night and we are hoping and praying for much greater results before it's close.—Reporter

SCHOOL OPENS ON SEPTEMBER FOURTEENTH

The schools of the Perryton Independent School District will open on Monday, September 14th. All of the teachers of this district will attend the Consolidated Teacher's Institute at Canyon on September 7-11, inclusive. At the recent meeting of the board, it was decided to operate trucks from the Mears district to the Farnsworth school and from the west to the Perryton school. The latter truck has been in operation for the past year or so. The tax levy for this year's taxes has been set at 55c on the $100.00 valuation.

The teachers for all the schools of the district, with one exception have been selected and from all information that we have been able to obtain, it is the strongest faculty that we have ever had. Every member comes highly recommended and apparently well qualified. This should be the most successful term in the history of the school and it will be if all put their shoulder to the wheel of education and push with all their might, forgetting and smoothing over the little petty differences and personal matters that may arise. Let's give the teachers that our board has selected our fullest co-operation.

INCREASED DEMAND FOR FORD TRUCKS

Sales reports received by the Ford Motor Company from branches throughout the country during the past week show an increased demand for trucks and tractors with retail deliveries exceeding those of last year.

Figures from these reports, which cover the first twenty days of July and which were just given out, give the sales of Ford one ton trucks as totaling 12,168 an increase of 30 per cent over the same number of days in July last year.

While the greater portion of the truck sales cover industrial installations, there is a noticeable increase in deliveries in rural sections where harvesting of crops is under way or is just beginning. Another feature indicating that farmers are coming in to buying market in increasing numbers, comes in the reports of Fordson Tractor sales. Retail deliveries of Fordsons during the first twenty days of July numbered 3,664, an increase of 43 per cent over the same number of days in July a year ago.

In view of these reports and the business conditions they indicate sales during the remaining weeks of the summer will continue, it is anticipated on a higher level than ordinarily expected for this season of the year.

J. L. Dodson returned Tuesday from Webb City, Oklahoma where he has been visiting relatives for the past week. He returned by way of Wichita where he looked after business interests.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Grogan and family came in Monday from their home at Abilene, Texas for a few days visit in the home of Mr. Grogan's sister, Mrs. H. C. Coffee.

BREAKS ALL RECORD

All touring records from Los Angeles to Yellowstone Park were broken, park officials have just announced, when James Kane of Los Angeles and C. S. Powell of San Diego, completed a remarkable run of 2,292 miles, via Portland Oregon, in four days and a half, or 50 hours and 42 minutes running time, using a new Lincoln touring car.

Kane and Powell put the Lincoln 566 miles the first day, between Los Angeles and Sacramento, despite the fact that the machine was "brand new" and had not been driven a mile since its unloading from the factory. The second day the party reached Roseburg, Ore., after driving 467 miles and the next noon, Portland, going 225 miles during the morning hours. After a day and night with friends in Portland, Kane, on the following day drove from Portland to Twin Falls, Ida., a distance of 601 miles. The last day of the trip covered 433 miles, the men reaching Mammoth Hotel at the north end of Yellowstone loop, having entered the west entrance of the park earlier in the day. Kane and Powell were welcomed to Mammoth Hot Springs by Supt. Horace M. Albright of the National Park Service who congratulated them on the record run from California.

According to Kane and Powell gasoline consumed during the trip totaled 294 gallons, or 11 1-4 miles to the gallon.

H. L. Worthington, who has been in Elk City, Oklahoma for a visit with relatives returned to his home in this city, the latter part of last week.

Messrs. R. W. Plant and W. D. Jones of the southwest part of the county were Perryton visitors on Tuesday of this week.

NOT NEW—BUT THE TRUTH

We may have our differences of opinion in matter of politics; we may not agree on the subject of religion; some of us have notions that other folks think are crazy and other folks have ideas we think lack in sound reasoning; but on one point we are all agreed: we all want to see our home-town grow and prosper.

Some experts contend that good trading facilities build population and real estate values; others say that good stores follow population, but again, all agree that local prosperity can never come until adequate trading facilities are established.

Good stores are the life of any community. Moreover we know we cannot have good stores if they are not profitably supported. No town was ever built by its inhabitants sending their money out of town. A dollar spent in town travels from the home to the grocer, to the butcher, then to the hardware merchant, and so on around the whole wheel of home trade. Spent in the town the dollar remains in the town and adds to the town's wealth. By and by some man gathers enough of these floating home town dollars, builds another home or makes an addition to his store, and so values increase, benefitting everybody. Spent out of town the dollar has gone forever.

There are some folks who buy their spoils of cotton and now and then a yard or two of goods at home, but when they want to buy a fur coat or a piano they get out the mail order catalogue or go out of town. They use the home town merchants to fill their petty needs but when he has a chance to make a reasonable profit they forget him. It's scarcely fair, is it? And if it is, it isn't very sensible. We are all working together to make the home town brighter and better and the property of everyone, our own included, more valuable.

Mrs. J. F. Smith, who has been visiting her sister at Hobart, Oklahoma returned home last Friday. Her sister, Mrs. R. G. Cogdill and family accompanied Mrs. Smith home and are now visiting at the Smith ranch west of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Tennyson Cropper and family returned home last Friday from a visit with Mr. Cropper's mother at Mineral Wells, Texas.

Miss Berta Hooper of Wichita, Kansas came in Sunday for a two weeks visit in the home of her parents in the southwest part of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. McLarty and daughter left last Sunday for Elk City, Oklahoma, where they will visit in the home of relatives for a few days.

ON BEING A HOME-

TOWN BOOSTER.

This paper believes in Perryton and its future. It believes that Perryton is destined to be a much greater city than it is today. It believes that the great majority of people living in Perryton have an abiding faith in the city's future and in the Perryton of today. It is this faith that has made Perryton and it is this same faith that is going to continue to make Perryton a greater city.

No one need talk of "putting Perryton on the map." For, Perryton is already on the map; it has had a conspicuous place there for several years. And it is going to remain there—forever.

Perryton is already a great place in which to live. If one were to look all around the world, none better could be found. When everything is considered, no one honestly can say that any other town is a better place than Perryton.

For that reason, if you have any money to invest, invest it in Perryton. It is safer at home than it is any place else. Keep out of the clutches of the oily tongued stock salesman who comes from a distance and wants your money to invest in an enterprise, the merit of which you know nothing save what is told you by the man or men seeking to "separate you from your coin."

If you have any money to invest, think it over—and then invest in Perryton. Every resident of Perryton ought to be a booster for Perryton and Perryton enterprises. Owning Perryton real estate will go a long way toward making all citizens a booster for the home town. Build or buy a home—and grow with Perryton, and enjoy to the full all the benefits of being a Perryton home owner.

FAMOUS FORTS IN U. S. HISTORY

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Where Ruled the "Emperor of the West"

At Fort Union, N. D. Kenneth McKenzie once reigned as the "King of the Missouri"; at Bent's Fort in the Arkansas Col. William Bent enjoyed almost unchallenged sovereignty over the vast territory along the Santa Fe trail; but the greatest uncrowned monarch of them all was Dr. John McLoughlin, officially chief factor for the Hudson's Bay company in Oregon but spoken of far and wide as the "Emperor of the West," a benevolent despot who for 22 years ruled over an empire 400,000 square miles in extent, of which his post, Fort Vancouver, Wash., was the capital.

From 1670 to 1816, though theoretically belonging to Great Britain, the Pacific northwest was dominated by the Hudson's Bay company. From 1816 to 1846, under the terms of the Treaty of Ghent, this vast territory was under the joint occupancy of Great Britain and the United States but in reality the word of the H. B. C. was the law, and the Hudson's Bay did not look any too kindly upon American interlopers. The one exception was Dr. McLoughlin, to whom we owe an eternal debt of gratitude.

Fort Vancouver was the result of the merger in 1821 of the Northwest company, which had put John Jacob Astor's Pacific Fur company out of business on the Columbia, with the Hudson's Bay company, which had in turn crushed the opposition of the Northwest organization. McLoughlin was an employee of the Northwest company but after the coalition he was retained by the H. B. C. as chief factor for the Oregon country. In 1824 he began this fort on the Columbia, 60 miles above Fort Astoria.

He soon won the affection of the Indians who called him "The Great White Chief" and his power over them, as well as over all whites who came into contact with him, made him a man whom not even the officers of the Hudson's Bay company dared oppose. Time and again he saved American missionaries and American settlers from massacre or from starving when they arrived in the new country. Incidentally, his reward was the basest kind of ingratitude. In 1846, when the Hudson's Bay company forced him to resign because he would not follow its policy in regard to the American emigration, he was a comparatively poor man, made so by his loans to settlers who never repaid him. History is full of the legend that Marcus Whitman saved Oregon to the United States. But the simple truth is that that honor belongs to Dr. John McLoughlin, the "Emperor of the West" who ruled at Fort Vancouver.

An Emergency Account

A Reserve account at the bank is really an emergency account, ready at a moment's notice to render aid; whether it is to tide over a season of sickness, accident or a period of uncertainty.

No man, even though his surplus is small, can afford not to have an emergency fund in the form of a Reserve Bank Account.

TON-LITTER HOGS NUMEROUS

Ton litter contests in states throughout the hog producing areas of the U. S. are quite numerous this year. Texas has beat the country twice in succession and is being closely watched this year. Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Michigan where dairy furnishes plenty of skim milk, is expected to furnish some heavy ones. Iowa, California, Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Tennessee are coming strong. Sanitation plays a big part, as well as feeding and breeding. Spraying of quarters and lots kills vermin and germs.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Friesen and family, who live north of Wichita, Kansas, are visiting in the home of Pete Krause, brother of Mrs. Friesen.

Mrs. A. H. Schrader of Canton, Kansas came in last Saturday for a visit in the home of her sister, Mrs. Sam Hergert.

ROAD BUILDING CHANGING BOUNDARIES

Texas leads the country in roads built last year, but Illinois has the call on cement roads completed and contemplated, while Minnesota, Indiana, North Carolina, California, Missouri, Wisconsin, Michigan, Pennsylvania, and other states are all striving to get out of the mud as quickly as possible and add millions to their business earnings. Most states have gotten past the idea that roads are an expensive luxury and are attempting to "annex new empires" by opening up new trade territories and expanding the buying power of their people by giving them better markets and more buying power. Tractors, wagons, pumps, gas engines, scrapers, graders are all mobilized in busy groups from coast to coast and from the Gulf to the Canadian border in the greatest road building program and investment in future well-being ever undertaken by the hand and mind of men.

TON OF WEEDS TAKES 20 TONS WATER

Cultivate to kill the weeds and you save the moisture that would go to produce the weeds. A ton of weeds requires 20 tons of water to grow them, according to experiment station figures. The disk, the smoothing harrow, the land packer or the roller all help seal the water supply and hold it for bigger crops next year when these implements are used following harvest.

EARLY PLOWING PAYS BIG

Plow right behind the binder, or at least disk, to preserve the moisture and insure a big crop next year. Where rainfall is always a problem, the difference in moisture content of early plowed fields and late is frequently the difference between a crop and none, according to Kansas and Nebraska experiment station tests. Even in fields where the combine harvest—thresher was used, disks were attached to the big harvester and the ground left "sealed" to retain all moisture immediately the crop was off this year.

Susceptible and Sympathetic

By J. A. WALDRON

(Copyright.)

IF A candle were tied in the middle, suspended horizontally, and lighted at both ends it would not, figuratively speaking, consume much more quickly than Reggie burned his candle.

Before he had time to realize much of anything but initial good fortune, a honeymoon, and something characteristic of "amusement" on the side, Reggie was dead. The life picture he painted was all foreground, confused by glaring colors and high lights. He never even dreamed what perspective means.

After the obsequies, as his mundane affairs were being adjusted, Constance, his charming widow—charming in spite of the life he had led her, for vital youth was hers—found that she would probably be left with little or nothing. But lacking forethought, she did not worry. Their fine country place was legally in the hands of mortgagees, though she was permitted to stay on for a time. But residence there was distasteful because creditors or their representatives were intruding to make inventories related to their claims. Reggie had roved in a motor car, with which Constance was absolutely in love; and this she wished, if possible, to keep for her very own—or, if she could not keep it, to sell it for a stunning price.

"I'll ask James about it," she said to herself one morning as she waited for him to drive her out. James was her chauffeur.

Thrilled by the speed James negotiated with skill as they struck the smooth, broad boulevard, Constance gained courage. "You must have noticed, James," she said, "that I am becoming quite poverty-stricken—that I am losing almost everything I have."

"Yes, ma'am," was James' reply. "But one thing I hope to retain in some way—this dear car."

James slowed down and turned to observe her. "But you know, ma'am, I've got to have my wages—six months, now—a tidy sum, ma'am."

"Of course! You can get your wages out of something on the place. File a lien, I believe, or something."

"Thank you, ma'am, I'm going to. And I was thinking, ma'am, of leaving when my month is up—Saturday week that'll be."

"Oh, well! Then I shall have to get another chauffeur. And I'm so fond of you, James! It's too bad!"

James was uneasy. "But, ma'am, I've decided to lay a claim on this car!"

"Oh, James! James! How could you do it?"

"But some one else would claim the car, ma'am. You shouldn't worry. There may be some way out of it. You know Merryman, the rich fellow who lives in that fine place?" James pointed at a great roof that rose out of the distance.

"Well, ma'am, whenever we've passed Merryman he has eyed this car with an envy you'd never think of a rich man."

"Yes, James, I've noticed him."

"And one day I met him alone, and he asked me the price of it."

"Indeed! And what did you tell him?"

"I told him I didn't know, though I did."

"Stop here, James. We shall wait for him to come up."

Merryman cantered up and stopped. "Anything the matter? Can I render any assistance?" he asked.

"I really would like to talk with you a moment, sir," said Constance. "Would you mind coming back with us?"

"Not at all! In fact, I should be delighted. But we haven't been very neighborly, you know. Why not keep right on to my place?"

Constance thought a moment. "Why, yes. Why not? We haven't been very neighborly!"

So Merryman turned about and cantered alongside to his stately seat.

"You can wait a few minutes, James. I shall not be long," said Constance. Merryman had dismounted and handed his horse over to a groom who had seen the return, helped her out with courtly grace and walked with her up a broad avenue.

They were admitted by a butler who had the benign face of a bishop meditating on the beatitudes.

Constance told Merryman of things which were perfectly plain to him. She had wanted so much, she said, to keep her dear car, but James was about to attach it for wages, and now she would like to dispose of it to some gentleman who knew its real value. And then she cried gently. Merryman was both susceptible and sympathetic. He was a widower.

"James tells me he has noticed that you have always looked at the car as though you wanted it," said Constance with half a sob.

"My dear young woman," replied Merryman, taking her hand, "I have had an idea all along that you loved that car. Really you should keep it."

"But I, also, have noticed that you regarded this car with a longing expression," she sobbed again. "I didn't you really desire?"

Merryman patted her hand. "It was not the car I was always admiring as we passed."

FISSURES NEAR MOUNTAINAIR BELIEVED RESULT OF QUAKE

Citizens of Mountainair, New Mexico, believe that the center of the earthquake which rocked the southwest on the morning of July 30 has been found a few miles southwest of that city.

Fissures in the earth's surface two feet wide, the bottom of some of which cannot be seen, were found fifteen miles southeast of Mountainair on last Sunday, three days after the quake.

The fissures, according to exploring parties, are arranged in zig-zag formation like a chain of lightning and run in an east and west direction. The openings start with a crack of only a few inches and in a distance of fifty feet, widen out to between two and three feet.

Each fissure branches off from another but at an angle. Some of the openings are so deep that the bottoms cannot be seen. Lighted matches were dropped into the cracks but after falling a short distance the matches disappeared to one side or the other, indicating that the cracks do not run straight down.

The fissures traverse a distance of more than a half mile. In some instances one side of the openings are said to be two inches lower than the other side.

No perceptible bulge in the ground near the fissures has been reported. —Texhoma Tribune.

WHY IS HAY FEVER

An eastern newspaper suggests that men of medicine turn their attention to hay fever. There is no doubt that a remedy for this distressing and mysterious malady would prove a great blessing for a large number of persons throughout the world. We call it a mysterious malady because it is so. What is its cause and why must its victims suffer annually in spite of all they do to prevent its recurrence? Those upon whom it has laid hold know almost to a day when they will be called upon to again endure its agonies.

Because hay fever is more prevalent in August than in any other month, it is popularly supposed that pollen from flowers is the cause. But why pollen from August's flowers and not from those blooming in other months of the year? To answer that the adherents of the pollen theory pick on the golden rod. But hay fever claims its victims in places where there is no golden rod and residents of large cities who never are within miles of that popular wild flower at any time often suffer the most severely. And if pollen is the cause of the disease why are not all who live in the country afflicted and all who live in the city immune?

The writer who suggested that physicians turn their attention to hay fever may or may not be a sufferer but in any event he puts up to them a puzzle worthy of their fullest consideration. That it is not ordinary a fatal malady does not make the hay fever problem less important. That fact that it seemingly is such a simple and more or less harmless affliction makes it seem that the answer to the problem should be easy to discover. Seemingly of a similar nature to influenza, it is not so often fatal, but it causes a great amount of suffering each year.

The very mysteriousness of the disease should be a sufficient motive to cause some physician to determine to conquer it.

LEONARD'S LOST DOG

Leonard had a lovely dog. Leonard was very proud of his dog, as well he had every reason to be.

She Pulled All She Could.

His dog was a collie, and what a playful dog it was. As a pet name Leonard called his dog "Girle."

They used to play together and the dog would play with others in the neighborhood.

But one day Girle was lost.

Girle had been out playing and Leonard had been called in the house. Girle had been all right. But along came a mother with two children. There was a dog, a lovely, playful dog, and the dog greeted them politely, and in a nice, friendly fashion.

The two children had always wanted a dog. "That's a stray dog, mother," they said. "Do let us have that dog."

To be sure the dog wore no collar, for Leonard had taken Girle's collar off when they had been playing.

And they urged Girle to follow them. Now Girle was ready to play with other children, but of course these were not children of the neighborhood, so when they came to the end of the block Girle started to go home.

But one of the two children dragged Girle into an apartment house where they lived and the other child helped pull, too.

It was a dreadful thing to do when Girle showed by her actions, even though she was without a collar, that she was not a stray dog.

She looked too well-kept, she was too happy to be a stray dog.

There is a sad, pitiful look in the eyes of every stray dog, as though he craved affection but could not be at all sure what would be his good luck or bad luck.

And she couldn't get out. The next day she was taken for a walk on a leash and though she pulled all she could those wretched two children were so strong they pulled her back with them.

And Leonard? Well, if Girle was miserable it was nothing more than was the feeling Leonard had. He just seemed to feel as though he could not stand it.

Oh, the loneliness in anyone's heart when one's pet dog, one's animal companion, has gone!

It was dreadful. Nor did Leonard know what had happened to Girle.

When he had returned and found her gone he had thought she had taken a run and would be back soon.

That first night without Girle was pitifully lonely and wretchedly quiet. No friendly bark, no wagging tail, no watchful eyes, no cold nose stealing quietly into his hand ready for a pat. Just loneliness—loneliness for a devoted dog.

Nor had the other nights been any better. Leonard was so worried, too. He asked about Girle. Everyone looked for Girle. The other children had not been out when Girle was by herself.

Then came good news. But Leonard was not sure; he did not yet dare to be sure. He could not stand being disappointed over anything like this.

But the man who delivered the newspapers brought him far better news than was to be had in the papers he carried. He said he thought he had heard Girle's bark and had caught a glimpse of her as someone had opened an apartment door when he had left the paper that morning, up the block and around the corner.

Leonard went off with the man to the apartment. They did not let Leonard in. He spoke, as they opened the door just a crack. "How do we know it's your dog?" they said, in reply.

But Girle had heard Leonard's voice and was scratching on the door so that the door would have been ruined if they had not let Girle out.

And no one could say, after having seen Girle and Leonard greet one another, that Girle was not Leonard's dog.

Just Loneliness.

Just Loneliness.

Chickens and Cattle Tested at Same Time

Veterinarians Combine Tuberculin Inspection.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Veterinarians engaged in the tuberculin testing of cattle in Green Lake county, Wisconsin, have found it possible to inspect the poultry flocks on the farms visited without slowing up the regular cattle-testing work. This is significant, says the United States Department of Agriculture, when it is realized that there is no special federal appropriation for conducting a campaign against avian tuberculosis, and that the poultry flocks of the county must be cleaned up along with the herds of cattle if the eradication of the disease is to remain permanent.

Operating in the regular way, the veterinarians in Green Lake county inspected 1,032 flocks on the farms visited for cattle testing. They found 153 flocks infected, and the remainder apparently free from the disease. Two hundred and eighteen post-mortems, slightly more than one in each infected flock, were held. Altogether, it was estimated, more than 72,000 fowls were inspected.

An estimation of the extent of tuberculosis among the poultry flocks of the country shows the disease varying from 1 to 15 per cent.

A definite effort to inspect poultry was begun in February. In the various states during the first two months of the work 46,955 flocks were inspected, 2,565 of which were found to be infected. It is estimated that nearly 3,000,000 fowls were inspected during this period.

Young Alfalfa Plants

Hurt by Nurse Crops

Many a good stand of spring sown alfalfa is ruined by allowing the nurse crops of oats or barley to mature for grain.

"The young alfalfa plants are literally choked to death for want of water," says George W. Musgrave, agronomist at the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment station. The ripening grain, he explains, draws an enormous amount of water from the soil, thus famishing the feeble young alfalfa plants.

Though this moisture robbery is the chief objection to letting the nurse crop mature for grain, it is not the only one, according to Professor Musgrave. There is also the possibility of fatal injury to the alfalfa, through lodging of the ripening fruit.

Successful alfalfa growers cut the grain for hay just as soon as it heads out. Not only may a satisfactory quality of grain be secured at this time, but the crowding effect on the alfalfa seedling is removed and the alfalfa is given the opportunity to develop properly.

The main object in planting the grain is to secure a successful alfalfa stand; one should take no chances on losing his investment in inoculation, seed and labor, through losing sight of this fact. It is a mighty poor economy to try to use the oats or barley as a grain crop as well as a nurse crop.

Careful With Pullets.

to Avoid Molt in Fall

Farm poultry producers who hatch chickens early in order to get a fall egg production from their pullets while their hens are molting, must handle the pullets carefully to avoid a molt in the fall, according to H. W. Fitting of Purdue university in reply to questions on this subject.

The pullets should have been hatched so they will mature and start laying around October 1. This means about six months for the lighter breeds such as Leghorns and seven months or a little over for the heavier breeds such as Rhode Island Reds, Plymouth Rocks and others.

A good plan that prevents too rapid development is to feed the grain as well as mash in a self-feeder after the cockerels have been marketed. When pullets' combs are reddening materially, it is well to remove some or all of the animal protein from the mash. However, if this is done, more minerals should be added to take the place of that which was contained in the animal protein. Once a pullet is mature, egg production cannot be delayed.

FARM FACTS

Market all broilers as early as possible.

Keep brooding baby chicks until they are fully feathered.

Turkeys are seed and insect eaters and do not thrive on sloppy mash.

It does not pay to grow low-priced crops on high-priced land, nor vice versa.

Stale bread soaked in milk and squeezed nearly dry is a good first feed for poult. This is followed with fine chick scratch feed and larger grains as the poult develop.

Don't make the hens eat quack grass in the summer. Swiss chard is a fine summer green feed when plenty of tender grass is lacking. A 100-foot row of Swiss chard will keep 20 hens in green feed all summer.

Two Men and One Woman

By JOHN MATTER

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE yellow sun slid out of the green ocean; the girl stirred in her sleep and faintly moaned; and so began another day in the lifeboat.

"Say, you," muttered the red-faced man, "slide that woman overboard. Gets on my nerves, her groanin'."

"Gets on my nerves, you're yappin'," replied the pasty-faced man, "and don't you go to orderin' me 'round. You can do your own murder, you can."

The girl sat upright. She gazed first upon the two men, who dropped their eyes at once and quickly looked away, and then her glance went around the horizon.

"I beg your pardon," she smiled. Silence followed for several minutes.

"Would it be a kindness," she inquired, "to—ah—to murder me?"

Another silence lasted for minutes. It was finally broken by the pasty-faced who squirmed and asked: "Feelin' better, ma'am? You've been off your nut, now an' then."

The woman studied him before she answered. "My head aches. I can't remember everything." Her eyes went to the face of the other man. "Who are you two?" she asked.

"Bill Thatcher—stoker," said the red-face, sourly.

"Henry E. Wiggins—steward, an' at your service," added the pasty-face and grinned for no apparent reason.

"Who put me in this boat?"

"Oh! I remember now. I was tramped under the first rush on deck, and one of the ship's officers picked me up and placed me in a boat. Were many people?" she hesitated.

"Reckon nobody was. Ship struck makin' half speed 'count the fog." Thatcher drummed moodily on a thwart and scowled. "Should have stayed by the ship. Better off. That cabbagehead yonder with his chattering teeth stampeded me. Me! Bill Thatcher—stoker!"

She studied their countenances again and then remarked: "I'm thirsty."

Thatcher raised the water bottle. "Here's a swig apiece," said he. "You can have yours now if you want it."

"I'll take my share now," the girl decided. "You scum of earth and ships," she flashed. "I heard your talk when you thought I was—ah—off my nut. You've another water bottle hidden beneath the coat under that seat and another tin of biscuits."

"We has, eh?" sneered Wiggins. "Well, what of it?"

"Nothing. But I haven't been off my nut, as you call it, all the time; in fact, Henry, I've heard some talk of murder."

"You'll hear more, likely," growled Thatcher.

"Likely, you will," added Wiggins. The girl whitened but did not flinch. "You rat face!" she laughed. "Henry, you amuse me."

Wiggins arose, shrilling to his feet. "You—quit collin' me Henry!"

"It would be a pleasure," she turned to the other man. "Do you mind if I call you Bill?"

"What the devil do I care?"

"Then perhaps you won't care if I ask you why you stole biscuits from the extra tin last night while Wiggins was asleep?"

Thatcher arose to his feet with a bellow. "It's a lie!" he cried.

"What do you think?" the girl asked of Wiggins.

A transformation had taken place with the steward. He was kneeling, crouched as though to spring. Already one hand held a knife. "Just a moment, Henry," pursued the girl, "I have a question to ask of you, if you don't mind."

"Ask it," commanded Thatcher.

"Why did you drink from the extra water bottle last night when Bill was asleep?"

"A lie!" screamed Wiggins. "A lie!"

"Is it?" roared Thatcher. "Is it? I'm not so sure of that, you slimy dried herrin'!"

And now a change came over the stoker. He was crawling aft toward Wiggins, and in one hand was a knife.

The girl scrambled to the bow to give the combatants room. She took with her, from under the seat, the tin of biscuits, and proceeded to scatter them upon the water. Then she flung the empty tin toward the two men in the stern and sat back to await developments.

It rolled between them as they feinted for an opening for attack. Their knives, ludicrously, dropped from their unclenched hands as the two men leaned forward open-mouthed to stare into the empty biscuit tin.

Wiggins spoke first. "She's done us in, the wench!" he screeched. "There goes our biscuits floatin' off astern! An' now I does her in!"

Thatcher pulled him back. He grappled Wiggins around the waist and flung him overboard, and plunged in after him.

The steward came to the surface, gasping and sputtering. "I can't swim! I can't swim!" he wailed.

The girl laughed unsteadily and quickly snatched the oars to point the boat toward the men astern. She glanced over her shoulder to observe how much closer the distant liner had drawn during the half hour since she had glanced around the horizon.

Results of Soft Pork Experiments

Government and State Representatives Agree on Certain Findings.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

At a meeting held in Atlanta, Ga., recently, representatives of the United States Department of Agriculture and of a number of state experiment stations agreed to certain conclusions on the soft pork problem. Their announcements made below are based upon the evidence accumulated in recent years, including additional data made available during the past 12 months. The states represented at the conference were Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Indiana. In addition there were men from the United States Department of Agriculture, including those from the department's Coastal Plain experiment station in Mississippi and its Iberia live stock experiment farm in Louisiana.

Effects of Rice Bran. The first results regarding the effects of rice bran on the softness of carcasses were incorporated for this year for the first time.

The conclusions agreed upon are as follows:

1. Peanuts grazed or self-fed in dry lot with or without minerals to pigs starting at weights ranging from 85 to 115 pounds and making gains of approximately 40 pounds or more on that feed through a period of approximately eight weeks will not produce firm carcasses at the usual market weight of 200 to 225 pounds attained by subsequent feeding of corn with tankage after the peanuts.

Results have shown, in fact, that gain on corn with tankage up to approximately 120 pounds, this maximum being produced during a feeding period of approximately 16 weeks' duration, following gains of 40 pounds or more on peanuts, usually will not produce hard or medium hard hogs. As the gain on peanuts increases the subsequent gain on corn with tankage necessary to produce a certain degree of firmness likewise increases.

2. Soy beans grazed alone or with minerals self-fed to pigs starting at weights ranging from 85 to 100 pounds and making at least a moderate rate of gain through a period of from six to eight weeks will not produce firm carcasses in the usual case even though a subsequent gain in weight has been made by the pigs on corn with tankage double that previously made on soy beans.

3. Soy beans grazed with a supplementary ration of 2½ per cent of shelled corn with or without minerals self-fed to pigs starting at weights ranging from 85 to 115 pounds and making gains of approximately 20 to 60 pounds through a period of from six to eight weeks will not produce firm carcasses in the usual case even though a subsequent gain in weight has been made by the pigs on corn with tankage equal to that previously made on the soy-bean 2½ per cent corn ration.

The Heavier Pigs.

4. Soy beans grazed with a supplementary ration of 2½ per cent of shelled corn with or without minerals self-fed to pigs starting at weights of 115 pounds and over and making gains of approximately 40 to 90 pounds through a period of from six to eight weeks will produce firm carcasses in the usual case provided a subsequent gain in weight is made on corn with tankage one and one-half times that previously made on the soy-bean 2½ per cent corn ration.

5. Rice bran and tankage self-fed free choice on rye pasture or in dry lot and with or without a supplement of five pounds or less of skim milk per animal daily to pigs starting at weights under 100 pounds and making gains up to 100 pounds through a feeding period of from eight to sixteen weeks produce soft carcasses.

6. Rice polish and tankage self-fed free choice on oat or rye pasture or in dry lot to pigs starting at weights under 100 pounds and making gains of 35 pounds or more through a period of from five to eight weeks will not produce firm carcasses in the usual case even though a subsequent gain in weight has been made by the pigs on corn with tankage equal to that previously made on the rice polish ration.

Getting More Money for Eggs in Summer Season

Without a little effort the quality of summer eggs is likely to be so low that prices will decline rapidly. The poor quality of the eggs laid in hot weather is largely to blame for the low summer price of eggs. Several precautions are necessary to keep up the quality of the summer egg. The following are important:

1. Segregate all males, even the spring cockerels. An infertile egg keeps better.

2. Gather eggs twice daily, if possible, during hot days, and store in a cool, well-ventilated place, free from strong odors.

3. During hot weather, market eggs twice a week.

4. Keep broody hens off the nests.

5. Sell no eggs from stolen nests. Use them, as well as small, dirty and cracked eggs, at home.

6. Supply at least one nest with clean straw for every six hens.

Where these precautions are adhered to, a reliable dealer should pay a premium for the better quality of eggs produced.—Extension Service of Purdue University.

DEARBORN INDEPENDENT TO ACCEPT ADVERTISING

A change in the policy of Henry Ford's publication, the Dearborn Independent, was announced recently. Advertising will be accepted beginning with the October 3, 1925 issue of the Magazine.

The Dearborn Independent has not carried a line of paid advertising since it has been the property of Mr. Ford and the change in policy reflects a growing feeling on the part of the public to expect as a buying guide a certain amount of advertising in magazines of its choice.

However, advertising in The Dearborn Independent is to be kept within certain definite limits. Under the new policy the magazine is to be increased in size from 32 pages to 48 pages, but the amount of space available in each issue will be only thirty-three and a third per cent of the total space inside, or, in the 48-page magazine only 16 pages will carry advertisements exclusive of covers. This rule is said to be unique in the publishing field, other requirements are made relative to the kind and nature of advertising which will be acceptable.

The Dearborn Independent, then a small country weekly newspaper, was acquired by Mr. Ford in 1918. All paid advertising was dropped and the paper changed to a sixteen-page magazine. In May of this year, with the installation of new presses, the magazine was increased to 32 pages of standard size. The Dearborn Independent, since becoming a Ford property, has become one of the most widely discussed publications in the world. It is distributed to over 600,000 paid subscribers.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Beardsley of southeast were trading here last Friday.
