Efforts to alter marriage tax penalty continuing

Marriage is a turning point in people's lives.

They meet someone, fall in love and get the satisfaction of sharing their lives with someone special .

The also get a bigger tax bill.

Two unmarried people filing separate tax returns would have to pay significantly less federal taxes than a married couple filing a joint return. The law, according to some tax experts, is a relic from the time when the only unmarried people with incomes were men.

Now, when the two-income household has become the norm, more and more people have to pay the so-called "marriage tax penalty."

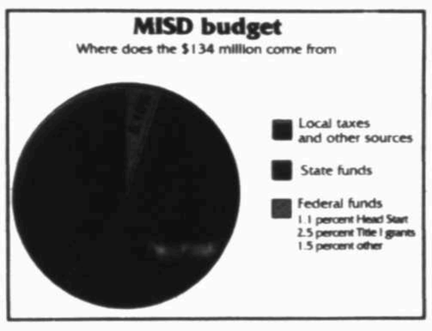
MISD eager for boost in fed funding

By Danielle Belton
Staff Writer

President Bush's proposed 11.5 percent Department of Education budget increase may not trickle down to be a lot of money for Midland schools, but with an eroding tax base and declining student population every penny helps.

According to Midland Independent School District executive director of business services Art Martin, if MISD even gets a taste of Bush's $4.6 billion budget increase, it may only be a matter of a few hundred thousand dollars.



While a couple hundred thousand dollars may be a fortune for the average Midlander, it's just a drop in the bucket for MISD's budget. Only 5.1 percent of this year's budget will come from federal funds — but it is 5.1 percent of $134 million - that's more than $6 million.

"That's quite a bit," said MISD superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. "It affects us tremendously. It allows us to reduce class size. It provides us with technology."

Although the majority of MISD's funds come from the state and local taxes, federal money plays a significant role in sev-

City may change yardage markers on driving range

City Councilman Bill Dingus, along with the Arts Assembly of Midland, is ready to take art to a new and most unusual place — the driving range.

"Art on the Range" is what the project is being called, and upon its completion, the driving range experience at Hogan Park will be one-of-a-kind.

"This will give them something unique," Hogan Park Director of Golf Price Courter said. "Any new and interesting targets that provide variety for the golfers can make practicing more fun."

"I am a golfer, and on the driving range, I'm looking for something interesting to aim at," Dingus said. "It (the art) gives you a little better focus."

And as for the art work, that will be bombarded by thousands upon thousands of golf balls, Arts Assembly of Midland executive director Linda Bond said there is no need to worry. Sculptures will be designed to take the abuse.

The Virginia woods held secrets, cash, diamonds

By Calvin Woodward
Associated Press

VIENNA, Va. — The FBI agent accused of spying for Moscow did his stealthy work along picturesque footbridges crossing serpentine streams, the government says.

Still, he did not seem to appreciate the bucolic break from the office.

"Recognize that I am dressed in a business suit and can not slog around in inch deep mud," the FBI says Robert Hanssen complained to his Russian handlers, who never seemed to tire of finding new parks for their mole.

"I am not a young man," he is said to have reminded his contacts on another occasion.

Northern Virginia, with some of the country's worst traffic congestion, is also studded with parks and nature trails that provide respite from the suburban buzz.

The FBI says they also became transfer sites for some of the nation's top secrets over the 15 years Hanssen is accused of spying.

"There is a lot of history here other than the monuments and the museums," said Paul Moore, a counterintelligence specialist who once worked with Hanssen.

"When a spy looks out at the terrain, he sees a little different picture. He sees features that he can use in his work."

At least a dozen parks are identified as dead-drop locations in the FBI's thickly detailed affidavit, which purports to quote directly from conversations between the handlers and their source.

Although Hanssen is quoted as grousing about distant sites and excessive mud, most of his alleged moonlighting went on in easily accessible, if secluded, places.

It was not an Outward Bound expedition by any means.

Key locations were just minutes by car from two homes Hanssen and his family lived in during two stints since 1981 in Virginia's Fairfax County.

Indeed, the FBI agent told Russian handlers the best places to leave classified information — and collect money and diamonds in payment — were not the most hidden ones, according to the documents.

"Can be actually more secure in easier modes," he is said to have written in September 1987.

The parks were code named: An (as if for Ann), Bob, Charlie, Doris, Ellis, Flo and so on.

A look at the parks where the espionage is alleged to have begun in 1985, with activities and correspondence as described in the government's case:

AP Photo

An FBI agent returns items to a shed at the Vienna, Va,. home of FBI agent Robert Philip Hanssen Wednesday. The FBI searched the shed and home of Hanssen who was arrested Tuesday and charged with spying for Russia.

NOTTOWAY PARK:

Code named simply Park and, later, Prime, Nottoway is half a mile down Lemontree Lane from the home Hanssen lived in during the 1980s. Soccer fields, tennis courts and nature trails abound.

After sending the KGB material by mail, Hanssen proposed the first dead drop — a delivery left for someone to pick up without the two meeting. The drop was to be $50,000 in payment for the mailed secrets.

He put a vertical piece of white tape on a signpost to signal he was ready to receive the package. The KGB put up a horizontal piece to signal the drop was made. Then him again, another vertical mark to show he had picked it up.

"Remove old tape before leaving signal," he instructed.

Some drops at the park were botched.

The KGB mistakenly placed a package under the wrong corner of the footbridge in one such incident.

On another occasion, in 1988, a KGB agent arrived at 9:03 p.m., three minutes after the end of the prearranged drop period. The agent saw a man who had removed the white tape get in his car and drive away.

On Wednesday, park employees said they do not take notice of visitors unless they are playing music too loudly or doing something obscene.

A man walking a dog came up, brandishing a bag and joking he had found more secrets. Actually, it was a bag of dog poop.

FOXSTONE PARK:

Code named Ellis, Foxstone is a narrow strip of woodland tracking a stream less than two miles from the Hanssens' current home. A winding, paved path crosses a road and two wooden footbridges, one open and a stone's throw from the road, the other, more tucked away and bordered by thick bramble.

Here, a package from the Russians containing $55,000 sat for three days, uncollected, before they retrieved it themselves.

Another drop was made five days later. Eleven days after that, Hanssen gave the signal he had picked it up.

"I say bear with me on this," Hanssen said in a "Dear Friends" letter lamenting the lonely nature of his work, "because you must realize I do not have a staff with whom to knock around all the potential difficulties. (For me breaks in communications are most difficult and stressful.)"

On Dec. 12, he drove by four times on the road that dissects the path. It was a "signal site" where white tape would indicate a drop.

On Dec. 26, he drove by three times in the evening, stopped with a flashlight to look around, and "turned and walked away, shrugging his shoulders and raising his arms in a gesture of apparent disgust or exasperation," the FBI said.

On Sunday, the FBI arrested him at the site and found a stash of classified material in a garbage bag under one of the footbridges. The FBI said he had put it there nine minutes earlier.

LONG BRANCH NATURE CENTER

About 14 miles closer to Washington, in Arlington County, the nature center is the most tucked-away of the three parks even though it is just one mile from a six-lane highway.

Popular with children, it offers nature hikes for tots year-round, family campfires and, in season, gardens for ferns, butterflies and more.

The Russians and their source called it Lewis.

On Feb. 12, the FBI found a package under the corner of the stage of an outdoor amphitheater where children scamper, hunting for nature souvenirs.

The FBI analyzed it, found $50,000 in it, photocopied material from it, and quietly put it back, keeping it under surveillance until Hanssen's arrest.

"I was sitting right next to a bag of money," a park employee said Wednesday, clasping his head with his hands.

Supreme Court pushes states' rights

By Laurie Asseo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Wednesday marched ahead on a course giving state governments more rights, ruling that state workers cannot use an important federal disability-rights law to win money damages for on-the-job discrimination.

The decision — narrowing the reach of the Americans With Disabilities Act — was the latest of a series of 5-4 rulings that have tipped the federal-state balance of power toward the states.

The disability-rights law does not trump states' constitutional immunity against being sued for damages in federal courts, the justices said. Congress did not identify a pattern of "irrational state discrimination" against disabled state workers to justify overriding that immunity, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court.

"Five justices on the court are deeply committed to protecting states' rights and limiting federal power," said University of Southern California law professor Erwin Chemerinsky.

Since 1995, the justices have limited federal authority in a number of ways, striking down the Gun-Free School Zones Act and ruling that Congress cannot let rape victims sue their attackers in federal court. The court last year barred state workers from suing their employers in federal court under the federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act.

University of Virginia law professor A.E. Dick Howard said the court may be acting out of "a distaste for excessive federal power" and added, "We haven't seen any judicial state of mind like this since the 1930s," when the court threw out New Deal laws.

The recent series of rulings have featured the same 5-4 split among the justices as in Wednesday's decision.

Joining Rehnquist were Justices Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia, Anthony M. Kennedy and Clarence Thomas. Dissenting were Justices John Paul Stevens, David H. Souter, Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Stephen G. Breyer.

Writing for the four, Breyer said the court's ruling "improperly invades a power that the Constitution assigns to Congress."

The ADA, enacted in 1990, is perhaps best known for requiring wheelchair ramps in buildings across the country. It bans job discrimination against the disabled, requiring employers to offer reasonable accommodations to disabled people who are otherwise qualified to perform a job.

The Constitution's 11th Amendment protects states from being sued against their will. Congress can override that immunity to enforce the 14th Amendment's equal-protection guarantee, but Rehnquist said Congress provided only "minimal evidence" of state discrimination against the disabled.

In contrast, Rehnquist wrote, Congress found a "marked pattern" of racial discrimination by states when it enacted the Voting Rights Act in 1965.

"States are not required by the 14th Amendment to make special accommodations for the disabled, so long as their actions towards such individuals are rational," Rehnquist wrote. "They could quite hard headedly — and perhaps hardheartedly — hold to job-qualification requirements which do not make allowance for the disabled."

AARP lawyer Laurie McCann said, "We're losing a very important aspect of enforcement" of the disabilities act against the states. The AARP, the senior citizens' lobby, supported two Alabama state employees who sought to sue the state.

Individuals still can file lawsuits seeking a court order without financial damages, and the federal government also can sue the states to enforce the ADA. But McCann said it was unrealistic to expect either avenue to be used in many individual cases.

McCann and others said Wednesday's decision might lead to challenges against enforcing another ADA provision against the states — the section that bans discrimination in the provision of government programs and services.

Wednesday's ruling reversed a federal appeals court decision that let two Alabama state employees, Patricia Garrett and Milton Ash, sue over alleged job bias.

Garrett, a University of Alabama nurse, took a four-month leave to undergo treatment for breast cancer. When she returned, she said she was ordered to take a lower-paying job or quit. Her lawsuit said her supervisor made negative comments about her illness.

Ash, a security guard for the Alabama Department of Youth Services, said his severe asthma was aggravated by the agency's refusal to enforce its no-smoking policy or repair exhaust problems on a vehicle he had to drive.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals let the two sue under the ADA, but the Supreme Court decided that court was wrong.

Breyer's dissent said Congress had found about 300 examples of discrimination by state governments. "Congress expressly found substantial unjustified discrimination against persons with disabilities," he said.

The case is University of Alabama v. Garrett, 99-1240.

University's admissions policy will be appealed

DETROIT (AP) — A federal judge's ruling upholding the University of Michigan's race-based admissions policy has been appealed to a higher court.

The Center for Individual Rights, a conservative legal organization based in Washington, filed the appeal Tuesday with the 6th U.S. Circuit of Appeals in Cincinnati.

The center is challenging the university's affirmative action policies on behalf of two white students denied admission.

U.S. District Judge Patrick Duggan on Dec. 13 upheld the university's current undergraduate admissions policy.

The center argues that such policies favor less-qualified minority applicants. The university maintains that it has the right to take race into consideration and that failing to do so would cause the student body's minority population to dwindle.

MONEY: Federal funds play significant role in key programs

eral key programs. MISD's two largest federal programs are Head Start and Title I. Head Start, which is actually a program from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, supplies $1.5 million for early childhood education. The district receives about $3.3 million from Title I funds, which goes toward economically disadvantaged students.

Right now, MISD receives nearly 40 percent of its total funds from the state. The remaining 54.9 percent comes from local taxes. MISD also receives money from state and federal grants which help provide for various programs in areas such as math and reading. According to Baressi, these particular grants supply the base money that helps develop various educational programs.

"They supplement our programming," Baressi said. "A lot of it is what you call seed money. It helps you get started on something."

Ventures like the Advanced Technology Center are an example of what grants from the government and donations from local non-profit organizations can do for a school program.

"We're working with the community to get a quality facility off of the ground," Baressi said.

Carolyn Cropper has written many grants since becoming a grant writer for the district three years ago. Ms. Cropper, who also writes grants for Midland College, has helped bring in almost $7 million in grants collectively for the school district and the community college.

"They're great," Ms. Cropper said. "They allow us to try new programs that we would otherwise not be able to afford to implement. They provide opportunities for education enrichment in students that would not otherwise be able to do."

Ms. Cropper said MISD is aggressively pursuing several grants and she will step up the grant writing pace.

"This money is supplied to the school districts mostly on a competitive basis," she said. "You've got to jump right in and go for it. You've got to be aggressive. Education is very expensive and quality education is even more expensive. And I think Midland has quality education. Midland is going after as much as we can."

Both Ms. Cropper and Baressi said they weren't surprised by Bush's push for more money for education. Bush wants to increase funds in the areas of secondary and elementary education - as well as increasing funds for reading initiatives.

"I think he campaigned on the platform of improving education," Baressi said. "It's not a surprise (that he's increasing the budget.) It's similar to what happened when he was governor."

Baressi agreed Bush's move would be a positive one for local educators and the district. He said, "We've talked about our problems with the eroding tax base ... and the more assistance we get, the better."

ALTER: Hutchison continues to oppose marriage tax law

who are planning to marry next month, voice concern over the federal tax burden they will be asked to carry.

Since both of them work, their tax bill will be larger after they marry.

"When I got my tax return last year, I remember him (Trey) saying 'don't get used to that,'" said Ms. Hilton.

For example, two individuals who lived together but were not married, and each had an income of $30,000, would receive $4,400 each in a standard reduction and would have to pay $4,995 each or about $10,000 in taxes.

However, a married couple with an income of $60,000 that files together will receive $3750 each as a deduction and have would have to pay $11,107 in taxes.

Over time, the taxes add up. A couple married for 25 years would pay about $27,000 more in taxes than the unmarried pair.

Legislators looking to win the favor of the 21 million married couples in the United States have introduced changes in the law that will give a larger tax deduction to married couples rather than to single individuals.

Spearheading the drive to change the tax laws is U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, Republican of Texas, who held a brief news conference in the Midland County Clerk's office on Wednesday.

Under the banner of bringing equity to the tax code, Hutchison's "Marriage Penalty Relief Bill" would increase the standard deduction for married couples to $9,100 or about $4,600 per individual, brining the taxing discrepancies between single and married people to within 50 dollars of each other.

The soon-to-be-married couple, like many in their situation, is planing ahead financially and had no trouble finding possible uses for the savings in taxes.

Their primary concerns is continuing their education. "We both want to get our masters degrees, and teach on a college level," Ms. Hilton said.

The savings could also be used to help the young couple find a place to live and raise their children.

"We could save it up for a few years, and that's a down payment on a house," said Wetendorf.

Similar legislation was passed in Congress before, but was vetoed by former President Clinton. Even if the bill passes this year, the effects on the income tax refunds will not be realized until the 2002 tax season.

DUO: Fans have mixed reviews

boybands like the Backstreet Boys. Generally, he is loved by youngsters and hated by adults. Many are concerned Eminem will corrupt the minds of teen-agers.

"I think he is so tasteless," Midlander Kari Cain, a 23-year-old country music fan, said. "He is just trying to get attention. I think if he really hated his ex-wife so much, he would have been arrested for conspiracy or something. I'll bet he will be held accountable if something ever does happen to his ex-wife."

Eminem's Grammy night pairing with pop king Elton John shocked many watchers. Many people think that was just plain silly.

"They are so different," Brian Daniels, a 30-year-old 1980s music fan, said. "I think Elton John was such an icon. Most people kind of blow off Eminem. I think they think he is a passing phase. Elton John lives. People still love him 20 years or more after his height of popularity."

Others think the two make a good pair.

"When I was younger and listening to Elton John, my parents wondered if I was polluting my mind," Stacie Myers, a 26-year-old rap and hip/hop fan, said. "Now the same concern is worrying parents about Eminem. They are both kind of radical for their times. Everyone thought Elton John was weird in the 80s. Now everyone thinks Eminem is sick in the 2000s. People will always hate the next generation of music until they get used to it."

That raises another question about Eminem. Is his music, which is considered tasteless by so many, just something that requires getting used to?

"I think people will get used to it," Jorge Hernandez, an 18-year-old hip/hop fan, said. "People thought the Beatles were children of Satan when they came along. He (Eminem) does have some things that might offend people. But, don't buy it if you don't like it. After a few years, something worse will come out and people won't think anything of Eminem."

So, is Eminem a permanent addition to the history of American music, or just a passing fancy?

"He's such a, well, I can't say what," said Margery Williams, a 43-year-old soft rock fan. "I think his music is just a way for some kids to get away from what is right. I've never heard one of Eminem's songs, but I have heard enough to know that he is just full of trash. If I was his mother, I would be so ashamed. He just needs to have the difference between art and slander explained to him. He will hopefully just be a thing that goes away — and hopefully quietly."

On the other hand, some hope he stays around a while.

"If they get rid of another good rapper, I don't know what will happen to the industry," Jacquoin Martin, a 19-year-old rap and hip/hop fan, said. "They already killed Tupac. Who knows — could be a conspiracy of anti-rap people. Some people are mad because they don't understand him. I think he is just using his music to tell the world he's mad."

BOOST: Bush proposes 11.5 percent increase for education

(From 1A)

"There is no more important subject than public education. We must get it right," Bush told an audience of teachers, students and parents at a rural elementary school in the Smoky Mountains, near Knoxville.

Administration aides characterized the rest of Bush's proposed fiscal 2002 budget as one that would generally hold the line on government spending in nearly all other areas.

"The president believes there is sufficient money to maintain priorities" without seeking additional increases at this time other than in education, said Bush spokesman Ari Fleischer.

Bush will highlight his budget in an address to a joint session of Congress next Tuesday, followed by formal submission of the plan Wednesday. It will cover the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Bush said his spending blueprint sets "clear priorities."

He said he would propose spending an extra $1.6 billion on elementary and secondary education in the coming fiscal year, raising the total to $19.8 billion.

Overall, administration aides said, Bush's budget will propose increasing outlays for the Education Department from this year's $39.9 billion to $44.5 billion, up about 11.5 percent.

These figures represent programs over which policy-makers have discretion and are not programs that include mandatory built-in increases, said Scott McClellan, a White House spokesman.

The increases will include the first $900 million installment of a $5 billion, five-year proposal Bush announced Tuesday in St. Louis to help children read by third grade.

The president's plan would consolidate dozens of programs into five general grant categories, test students annually to hold schools accountable for how much they learn, and award children vouchers to attend private schools in some cases.

Bush also said Wednesday he favors moving the Head Start program for preschoolers from the Department of Health and Human Services to the Department of Education "to make sure that our youngsters get a head start on reading and math."

But aides said Bush's first budget would not reflect such a shift.

Bush has been seeking to build congressional support for both his education package and his $1.6 trillion, 10-year tax cut. Both proposals have faced difficult times, particularly from Democrats, in the closely divided Congress.

At one point Wednesday, Bush ran into a few grammatical problems of his own, telling his Tennessee audience: "You teach a child to read, and he or her will be able to pass a literacy test."

By granting education the biggest percentage budget increase of any department, Bush was demonstrating public schools remain his top priority, his aides said.

Some conservatives have criticized Bush for not seeking a big boost in defense spending as well.

The president has said he will put money into his budget for a pay raise for the military next year, but otherwise will await a top-to-bottom review of the military and defense spending being conducted by Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld.

Bush toured fourth-grade and second-grade reading classes Wednesday during his visit to the Townsend Elementary School.

In the fourth-grade class, several pupils read Bush essays they had written on what they would do if they were president.

One boy told Bush he wrote that he would "build a baseball field in the back of the White House." A girl said she would give money to her family and her church, then order pizza to be delivered at the White House.

"What would you have on your pizza?" Bush asked.

"Pepperoni," she said.

fun idea and a way to expose people to art."

Dingus added, "They will design it with this (a driving range) in mind. For an artist, it will be exciting, challenging and different to design for the condition of being A) viewed from a known distance and B) being hit by golf balls. So you have this whole condition that you can make noises, you can have a wind chime out there, you can have a mobile that floats around and behaves differently when you hit it or you could have a giant dinosaur. We are not giving them too much guidance out there, just enough."

Ms. Bond compares "Art on the Range" to another Arts Assembly of Midland project, "Art in the Park." For three years, the Arts Assembly has placed four different pieces of art around Windlands Park. The pieces stand for a year and then are replaced by a different four.

"We love art, and we love the opportunities for people to see something they enjoy or something which might spark inspiration," Ms. Bond said. "We are for art wherever."

And the golf course is where art will be seen next.

Dingus and Ms. Bond said all legal hurdles have been cleared. What's left are holding a competition to pick the designs (Dingus is expected to award each winner with a $250 honorarium out of his own pocket) and the building of the sculptures themselves.

It is expected to done within a year, and according to Dingus, be done using private financing.

tigious song and record of the year for "Beautiful Day."

Hill won three awards, including best country album. Her "Breathe" won best country vocal performance and her duet with her husband, Tim McGraw, won best country collaboration with vocals.

D'Angelo and Destiny's Child won two Grammys apiece.

D'Angelo's "Voodoo" won best R&B album and his song, "Untitled (How Does It Feel)" won best male R&B vocal performance. Destiny's Child "Say My Name" won best R&B song and best R&B performance by a group.

Steely Dan also won best pop album for "Two Against Nature," their first disc in 19 years, as well as best pop vocal performance by a group for "Cousin Dupree." (The group's album "Two Against Nature," also received a nonperformance award, for best engineered album in the non-classical category.)

Eminem — the target of 100 protesters outside the awards show — was honored for best solo rap performance, best rap album and best rap performance by a duo or group for his collaboration with his mentor and producer, Dr. Dre.

Elton John came under intense criticism from gay activists for agreeing to perform with the 28-year-old rapper during the Grammy show.

Their duet, on Eminem's song "Stan," included three expletives while others were cut.

John, who had said earlier he didn't take Eminem's anti-gay lyrics seriously, embraced his fellow performer after the song, which was the final performance of Wednesday's three-hour telecast and led up to the album of the year award.

The controversy, and the evening's diverse group of nominees, promised to drive up viewership for the annual awards show.

There were 100 Grammy categories this year. Unlike last year, when Santana walked away with a record-tying eight awards, no artist dominated.

employee, for alleged acts of discrimination.

The employee, Paul Wilhelm, claimed he was passed over for a promotion at Jacksonville State University because he had a disability.

He claimed Watts made the final decision not to hire him for the position.

Another lawsuit was filed in 1997 alleging sexual discrimination. That case was heard, but was ruled in favor of the defendant, the Board of Trustees of Jacksonville State University, and specifically, Watts, vice president of academic and students affairs at JSU, according to the Alabama District Court.

University of Texas Board of Regents Ed Sharpe was involved in the selection process that resulted in Watts being named UTPB president.

"We were aware of the situation," he told the Reporter-Telegram Wednesday afternoon, "but we did not believe it was an issue."

Representatives from the selection committee believe they chose the best candidate for the job, said Emilio Mutis, a geology professor at UTPB and a member of the selection committee.

Sharpe noted universities and their administrators are often the targets of such lawsuits.

Watts, who could not be reached for comment, is slated to become UTPB president in June of this year.

Handheld computers provide sailors a high-tech lifeline

By D. Ian Hopper
Associated Press

ABOARD THE USS CONSTELLATION — Sailors aboard the USS Constellation still look to the stars to help find their way. For a lot of other things, they gaze at their Palms.

Handheld computers are bringing a high-tech touch to all hands — or many of them, anyway — on this sprawling ship, one of two steam-powered aircraft carriers still in service.

The Navy is providing handheld computers to almost all of its new officers and giving them to graduates of the Naval Academy and other naval programs.

"It cuts my workload literally in half," said Lt. Mike "Beemer" Biemiller, handheld computer in tow as he observed a Hornet jet screaming on to the deck and snagging an arrester cable aboard the ship floating in the waters near San Diego.

In no time, Biemiller stores the data about the landing into his Palm Pilot, where he could later upload the data easily to the ship's main network.

Moving from traditional Navy tools like the sextant — still used each night aboard the Constellation to pinpoint locations by the stars as a backup to satellite navigation — to gear like the Palm is always a logistical and cultural challenge, but the sailors agree it pays off.

Before handheld computers were used, a landing signal officer would record onto a paper notebook how well an incoming pilot negotiated the 600-by-200 foot landing strip.

When he left the deck, he would have to copy the information into a large binder, then finally type the information on a desktop computer. That is streamlined now by a program one of his colleagues wrote for the Palm Pilot.

AP Photo

Lt. j.g. Alex Mabini uses a Palm Pilot handheld computer while on duty in the Damage Control Center aboard the aircraft carrier USS Constellation off the coast of Southern California. Like their shoreside professional counterparts, Mabini and dozens of other members of the ship's crew find the hand-held computing devices are saving time, improving accuracy and eliminating the need for many of the omnipresent and bulky three-ring binders littered around the ship.

The concept is sweeping the Navy. A team at the Space and Naval Warfare Systems Center in Chesapeake, Va., is developing Palm applications sailors can use at sea.

Several programs can replace forms used for tasks such as ordering supplies and performing environmental testing. A program developed by a private company can be used by land forces in conjunction with a Global Positioning Satellite receiver to plot locations of friendly and enemy troops.

The widespread distribution of handheld computers has helped boost morale aboard the Constellation and spurred ingenuity by sailors who are developing their own software to automate routine naval tasks.

"I remember (Microsoft chairman) Bill Gates once talking about the paperless office. Then I saw this Palm, and said, 'This is it,'" said Lt. Ken Schnider, who developed the program with a fellow pilot on another carrier.

The personal communications devices also are used below deck for roping in e-mail from a loved ones far away and entertaining the sailors.

"I use games when I'm waiting in line," said Lt. J.G. Alex Mabini of Carlsbad, Calif., an engineering training officer. "There are a lot of lines in the Navy."

As if preparations for real warfare are not enough, Schnider, 27, plays an infrared battleship game on his handheld computer. He also has a currency converter and time zone guide for ports.

When he noticed that all the ship's TVs were the same model, but missing their remote controls, he loaded a program enabling him to use the handheld computer like a remote to change channels.

Card games, Missile Command and Scrabble are also popular among the sailors.

"It's amazing how when a tool comes along how quickly it propagates," said Cmdr. Justin Cooper, who uses a handheld to download shipboard e-mail and read it on his own time, without tying up any of the carrier's 750 desktop computers.

The Constellation's computer security chief, Petty Officer 1st Class Curtis Sims, is exploring how to let communications technology flourish without compromising secrets and safety.

A text scanner looks over every inbound and outbound e-mail, making sure that an officer does not give away sensitive information such as the exact location of the battle group.

Users cannot download new programs while on the ship, and programs must be checked for viruses when brought onboard. The Constellation's true Internet address is not given out.

Still, the ship is not immune: The Melissa virus penetrated the Constellation's defenses in 1999, and it took almost a day to debug the ship.

At sea, the works goes on to find ever more useful functions for the technology.

Schnider is working on an application that could be used in the cockpit, integrating flight planning, fuel consumption and other functions.

"It's all going to be combined into one big package," Schnider said. "That would be really cool."

Midland must change in order to survive

This week, a consulting firm issued a sobering report on Midland's economic future.

The 34-page report, prepared by Angelou Economics of Austin, contains one sentence that would seem to sum it all up: "The American landscape is littered with once-promising cities that refused to adapt to changing conditions."

Without a doubt, we have reached a crucial crossroads here in Midland.

A few years ago, staunch Midlanders would have shrugged off this report which spells out the cold, hard truth. In the past we would have reasoned that it's just part of our boom-and-bust economy and that out-of-town consultants just don't get it.

But in the wake of the economic bloodletting of 1998, we're all a bit scarred and maybe a bit wiser. Even with oil near the $30-per-barrel level, the mood remains somber and restrained.

While there were no real surprises in Angelou's study, "Midland Assessment and Action Plan," there was plenty of stark reality. Among the conclusions:

■ Our best and brightest young people are leaving. And if population trends persist, our growth rate will continue to decline during the coming decades.

■ Midland's reputation as an educated community, earned in the best of times, must be preserved. Education is the strongest predictor of successful communities in the New Economy.

■ If Midland is to maintain its strong workforce, it will have to attract new and returning residents drawn to its strengths and prepared to make a life here. Midland must nurture and promote those aspects of community life most attractive to working age men and women.

■ West Texas communities are competing for stagnating or decreasing opportunities. Midland must compete nationally and internationally to retain its privileged place in the region.

■ For the foreseeable future, Midland wages will continue to stagnate relative to the nation. Even with great economic development success, wages like those to which Midland is accustomed will be rare.

While we certainly have our challenges, the Angelou report pointed out that Midland enjoys the strengths for which our city has been known including faith, family values, volunteerism, philanthropy, culture, pleasant climate, abundant resources and good transportation.

We can overcome the obstacles we face. The time has come to bite the bullet, admit we are facing economic challenges and move forward with an enthusiastic spirit.

We cannot allow our city to become a once-promising city that refused to adapt to changing conditions.

Today in History

Today is Thursday, Feb. 22, the 53rd day of 2001. There are 312 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 22, 1732, George Washington, the first president of the United States, was born at his parents' plantation in the Virginia Colony.

On this date:

In 1819, Spain ceded Florida to the United States.

In 1865, Tennessee adopted a new constitution abolishing slavery.

In 1879, Frank Winfield Woolworth opened a five-cent store in Utica, N.Y.

In 1889, President Cleveland signed a bill to admit the Dakotas, Montana and Washington state to the Union.

In 1892, "Lady Windermere's Fan," by Oscar Wilde, was first performed at London's St. James's Theater.

In 1924, Calvin Coolidge delivered the first presidential radio broadcast from the White House.

In 1973, the United States and Communist China agreed to establish liaison offices.

In 1987, pop artist Andy Warhol died at a New York City hospital at age 58.

Ten years ago: President George Bush and America's Gulf War allies gave Iraq 24 hours to begin withdrawing from Kuwait, or face a final all-out attack. Iraq denounced the "shameful" U.S. ultimatum, aligning itself with a Soviet peace plan the United States had rejected.

Five years ago: The space shuttle Columbia blasted into orbit on a mission to unreel a satellite on the end of a 12.8 mile cord. President Clinton announced he would nominate Alan Greenspan to a third term as chairman of the Federal Reserve. Russia and the head of the International Monetary Fund reached a deal for a loan of more than $10 billion dollars to back up free-market reforms.

One year ago: John McCain won Republican primaries in Michigan and his home state of Arizona.

Offensive art not entitled to subsidies

WASHINGTON — Here. We. Go. Again. The Brooklyn Museum of Art, like an infant squalling for adult attention, specializes in the naughtiness of the untalented. Two years ago it put on "Sensation," an exhibition of the works of young British artists — average age, 35 — including the portrait of the Virgin Mary splattered with elephant dung. The marketing campaign for the exhibit included a mock — and mocking — government health warning that the works of art might cause "vomiting, confusion, panic, euphoria and anxiety."

WHI

It was supposed to cause, and did cause, a political tempest about the use of public funds for exhibitions offensive to a portion of the public. A cutoff of funds was threatened. The "artistic community" responded with cries of "censorship." And so it went.

Now comes "Yo Mama's Last Supper," one of 188 works in an exhibit of "contemporary black photographers." The photograph features the photographer, Renee Cox, a muddle-headed and theoretically inclined — a common combination of traits nowadays — exhibitionist with a flair for self-promotion. She appears in the photograph nude, arms outstretched, in the place in which Jesus is traditionally portrayed in the Last Supper. Twelve of her friends pose as apostles. Another photographer's contribution to the exhibit is a topless woman on a crucifix. Last year at the Whitney Museum, Cox exhibited a black Jesus crucified and castrated. She calls this "flipping the script, creating my own kind of kingdom, my own universe."

By now, the indignation ritual is familiar to the point of banality. The minuet begins with one party trying to give offense. Next, the intended party takes offense. Then the first party theatrically resents that taking of offense. The unvarying subtext is that offensive artists feel entitled to public subsidies, any denial of which is censorship that proves the need to shock the bourgeoisie from its dogmatic slumbers.

Cox says she is not anti-Catholic, but she says there are "major discrepancies with the Catholic faith" and "as an artist, my role is to create a discourse" and she wants "an open discourse" about the church's retrograde attitudes about women and blacks, and 40 percent of slave owners were Catholics, and Catholics "are about business, money" and "that it is about, you know, the fact that, I mean, for instance that we have, you know, celibacy within the church" and "you know, from my research that I found out — I mean I found out it went back to medieval times, where the church basically realized that if you had celibacy you didn't have to share the wealth upon somebody's death — the wealth could stay in the church" and "I don't really understand the problem of the nudity due to the fact that, I mean, this is like the oldest thing" and "it's done in a statuesque manner" and "there is no, sort of, like, sexual innuendo" but "apparently, you know, in the United States people have a problem with the nude form" and people are so much more mature about these things in Europe.

In America, land of equal artistic opportunity and no nonsense about merit, such addlepated people always will benefit from government subsidies of the arts. But perhaps government could use subsidies to steer such people into an inoffensive genre. It can do so in the name of political populism and high artistic theory — call it the emancipation of the viewer from the tyranny of imposed form. The idea is inspired by the late Peter De Vries, a brilliant satirist, in his 1976 novel "I Hear America Swinging."

In the novel, a minimalist — a really, seriously minimalist — artist "aimed at a progressively more drastic refinement of the principle of minimal form. Thus an area of virgin space unoccupied by anything save what the viewer himself might imagine it to contain, rather than what the artist has arbitrarily imposed, came to represent to him the ultimate distillation of linear values." The artist affixed to empty pedestals and picture frames small brass plates with titles such as "Gloucester Fishermen," "Ped Xing," "Mrs. Rumplemeyer's Flesh" and "Shortstop with Glockenspiel." The point was to encourage — actually, to require — private improvisation by the viewer. So, herewith a modest proposal. Government should subsidize, generously but exclusively, such art.

Government should begin by turning the Brooklyn Museum into the Louvre of private improvisation. The museum should be lavishly furnished with empty pedestals and empty frames, each with titles on little brass plates. Cox should be the museum's curator. She has demonstrated a genius for what that office would require, maximum prattle about minimal achievement.

America needs a good history lesson

WASHINGTON — What this country needs is not a great five-cent cigar, cheaper cell phones or even a massive tax cut for the rich. It needs a good history lesson.

A new Gallup Poll ranking U.S. presidents in order of their perceived greatness says a lot about the limitations of voter opinion, the usefulness of surveys that measure such sentiments and the collapse of the present American educational system. And what it says isn't good.

President Bush is crusading this week for a $5 billion program to improve reading habits in our schools — and high time too. A useful place to start would be the teaching of American history, with an emphasis on civics and political science. We could start at the beginning, with the Founding Fathers.

Means

In the Gallup poll, Ronald Reagan, who gave us the biggest federal deficits in history and a near-constitutional crisis with the Iran-contra scandal, came out as the favorite. He got 18 percent of the votes cast by the 1,016 adults in the random survey.

This was an increase in popular esteem of 7 percentage points over last year, jumping Reagan from fourth spot to first place. The result was helped along by a timely celebration of his 90th birthday and the sympathetic reaction to his hospitalization after a fall.

The concept of Reagan as greater than, say, George Washington or Abraham Lincoln boggles the mind.

But it gets worse. The magnificent Thomas Jefferson is down at the bottom, tied at 1 percent with Richard Nixon, that unindicted co-conspirator who was forced from office in 1974 for the Watergate crimes.

Jefferson, who authored the Declaration of Independence and doubled the size of the nation with the Louisiana Purchase, has the disadvantage of not having been around for a couple of hundred years.

The current popular verdict is clearly at odds with the commonly accepted judgment of history, which sees our third president as indispensable in shaping the principles of liberty and justice that sustain our democracy. President John F. Kennedy once described a dinner honoring Nobel Prize winners as "the most extraordinary collection of talent. . . ever gathered together at the White House, with the possible exception of when Thomas Jefferson dined alone."

Reagan's fans, however, don't remember the past or care much about it. They even want to crowd Mount Rushmore by adding Reagan's head to the four great chief executives carved into its stone facade. Fortunately, Jefferson is already present — along with Washington, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt — and there's no more room. In the poll, Reagan's supporters were predominately young southern males nostalgic for that illusionary old-time conservative dogma he used to hawk.

Kennedy ran a close second to Reagan in the survey with 16 percent, but he was down 6 points from last year, when he ranked first. His biggest backers were people aged 50 or over, who still remember the trauma of his 1963 assassination. The myth of Camelot is tarnished now, but it was a glorious, unforgettable period of youthful hope and renewal for those of us who were alive then.

Gallup had no published explanation for Kennedy's fall from favor. We are obviously not dealing with history buffs here, so perhaps not many of those surveyed had seen the dramatic movie "Thirteen Days" touting Kennedy's courage during the Cuban missile crisis. Or it may simply be a case of more Republicans being swept up in this year's interviews than last year.

The Gallup question was an uncomplicated softball: "Who do you regard as the greatest United States president?" No room for misinterpretation there. The poll was timed to mark the February birthdays of Washington and Lincoln, jointly celebrated Monday on President's Day. If Jefferson's birthday had been included, his name might have popped up in more brains of the historically challenged. But that still wouldn't solve the problem of how to get him back in our classrooms.

ART BUCHWALD

Is it a case of 'quid pro quo' or not?

The point President Clinton made in defense of the Marc Rich pardon was that there was no quid pro quo — that is to say, Denise Rich's contributions to the Democratic party, the president's library and Hillary's senatorial campaign had no strings attached. The former president wants us to believe just because someone anted up almost two million dollars, there was no reason for anyone to believe Marc Rich was for sale.

I went to Professor Heinrich Applebaum, the leading expert on quid pro quo in the country.

Buchwald

"Did quid pro quo play a role in this affair?"

He said, "It might or it might not have, depending on the intention of the giver. I know many cases where a person has given a fistful of dollars to a candidate's campaign and never asked for a favor in return."

"But at the same time there can be an occasional case where quid pro quo raises its ugly head."

"There is always a chance that someone might give with a reason. But it's a rare happening, and because politics is such a clean profession, you hardly ever hear about it."

"How can someone prevent quid pro quo?"

"If a politician suspects he's being put under obligation, he should return the money and say something like, 'How dare you quid pro quo me?'"

"I heard that the use of quid pro quo is becoming more prevalent, not in the case of Bill Clinton, but in other political races."

"The trouble is that when it is revealed that you gave a lot of money people are always suspicious. I have known lobbyists who thought if they gave money to a person, a vote could be bought with it. But they're in the minority. Most lobbyists are too honorable to break the rules."

"In the case of Denise Rich, she became very close friends with the president."

"Exactly. And there is the rub. Did she become friends with the Clintons before she donated to the library or after she wrote out her check? Also, was there any connection between Marc Rich being pardoned and Denise being invited to the White House? I am certain there wasn't, but what do I know?"

"Why are people so darn suspicious when it comes to quid pro quo?"

"The electorate have been burned once too often and it has wound up in all the papers that money was exchanged for favors. The rule should be if someone gives a million dollars to a presidential library, then he doesn't have to return any books."

New cardinals reflect changing face of Catholic church

By Victor L. Simpson
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — To the cheers of tens of thousands of well-wishers, 44 new cardinals climbed the steps of St. Peter's Basilica on Wednesday, knelt before Pope John Paul II and followed an ancient ceremony that makes them princes of the church.

The geographical diversity of the group — which included men from five continents — was also evident: Some chose not to wear the red hat with three ridges customarily worn by cardinals, opting instead for their traditional headgear.

"Is this not also a sign of the ability of the church, already in every corner of the planet, to understand peoples with different traditions and languages?" the pope said.

The number of cardinals installed was a record, as John Paul raised the church's profile in sensitive areas of the world and expanded the group that will choose his successor.

Some cardinals popped on sunglasses against the glare as John Paul, his voice at times slurred, read their names.

"I tried not to think of my mother because I was afraid I might cry," the newly installed Cardinal Roberto Tucci, a 79-year-old Italian Jesuit who organizes the pope's travels, recalled at a reception a few hours later.

Cardinal Theodore E. McCarrick of Washington, D.C., one of four U.S. citizens elevated, had a different worry: "I was thinking, 'I hope I don't trip.' But of course I was also thinking that hopefully this moment will give me the grace to do the work I must do."

The new cardinals reflected the pope's strategy for the church of 1 billion adherents in the new millennium.

John Paul beefed up the Latin American contingent, elevated prelates from the Middle East, where the church is struggling to survive, and installed two Ukrainians, a new battleground for the church in those parts of eastern Europe traditionally under the influence of the Orthodox church.

John Paul's planned trip to Ukraine in June has drawn criticism from the Russian Orthodox.

Cardinals serve as advisers to popes, but their most important job is to elect a successor to the pontiff.

John Paul, now in the 23rd year of his papacy, turns 81 in May; his frail physical condition, with symptoms of Parkinson's disease, is evident.

AP Photo

Cardinal Edward Egan, archbishop of New York, U.S., wearing the cardinal's red hat, embraces Pope John Paul II during a ceremony in St. Peter's Square at the Vatican, Wednesday. Egan, 68, succeeded the late Cardinal John O'Connor in May as head of the New York Archdiocese's 2.4 million Catholics.

Speaking for the other new princes of the church, Cardinal Giovanni Battista Re, an Italian some see as a possible papal successor, alluded to the pope's condition while saying he hoped John Paul would remain a "long time at the helm of the church."

In naming a record number of cardinals, John Paul ignored the limit set by a predecessor, Paul VI, on the number of cardinals under 80 eligible to vote for a pope. There are now 135 cardinals eligible to vote in a conclave.

All but 10 have been named by John Paul and share his conservative views, supporting church bans on abortion, the use of artificial birth control and changes in the requirement that priests must be celibate.

There are exceptions: Among the new cardinals is Karl Lehmann, who as head of the German bishops conference unsuccessfully sought to have the Vatican lift its ban on divorced and remarried Catholics receiving communion.

Asked about his thoughts on a future pope and if there were an "Italian vocation" for the papacy, Lehmann said, "Maybe there has been an Italian vocation for the papacy over the centuries, but we live in a world with much wider horizons now and we have to look everywhere for the best man."

Rousing cheers went up when the pope pronounced the names of Fordham University theologian Avery Dulles, New York Archbishop Edward Egan and Washington Archbishop McCarrick.

Asked about dissent in the church — a major issue in the United States — Egan replied: "Do you know any religion, do you know any organization, do you know any society, do you know any club in which everybody follows every rule?

"Now I know the Catholic church shouldn't be an exception, but I wouldn't be too upset that we don't get it 100 percent all the time."

Dulles, at 82, the oldest of the new cardinals, used a cane to walk up the steps of St. Peter's. The last to kneel before the pontiff, after Dulles embraced the pope and stood up, his biretta — a cardinal's red hat — tumbled off.

The leader of Eastern Rite Catholics in Ukraine, Lubomyr Husar, also a U.S. citizen, kept his traditional black hood during the ceremony. And Syrian patriarch Ignace Moussa I Daoud kept his black, flat-topped hat.

Among the first to go up was Vietnamese Cardinal Francois Xavier Nguyen Van Thuan, 72, who was imprisoned by Communists after the 1975 fall of Saigon.

The red color reserved for cardinals represents the challenge the pope presents them before they take their oath: "Be ready to spill blood if need be to spread the faith."

"Every Christian knows he is called to a faithfulness without compromise, which can require even the extreme sacrifice," the pope said in his homily.

Behind the unchanging ritual is the changing face of the Catholic church at the start of its third millennium — less European, and more developing world, where the faith is expanding.

Europe still has 96 cardinals, but many are not eligible to vote for a new pope.

The largest number after Europeans are Latin Americans, 33, with 27 of voting age. Latin America has about 40 percent of the world's Catholics.

"Soccer and the church are the two things that really move people in South America," said the Rev. Vladimir Jaramillo, who led a parish contingent from Cali, Colombia.

Among the new Latin American cardinals is one who some observers say has a shot at being pontiff: Oscar Andres Rodriguez Maradiaga, 58, the first cardinal from Honduras.

Bin Laden links probed amid series of arrests

By Laura King
Associated Press

LONDON — Fearing terrorist attacks, authorities in Britain, France and Germany have arrested at least 10 suspected Islamic militants, put two dozen others on trial and are investigating potential links to terrorist mastermind Osama bin Laden.

Bin Laden, the exiled Saudi millionaire, is blamed for the bombings of two U.S. embassies in east Africa in 1998 and is linked to the suicide bombing of the USS Cole in Yemen in October. The bombings at the embassies in Kenya and Tanzania killed 224 people, including 12 Americans.

In Britain, a tough new anti-terrorism measure was widely expected to trigger measures against radical Islamic groups that have long used London as a haven. Even before the law took effect Monday, British police carried out a series of raids, arresting six Algerian men.

They have been charged with preparing to carry out terrorist acts and face a preliminary hearing in London's Old Bailey criminal court on Thursday, prosecutors said.

In the same three-day sweep last week, police detained four others, including Omar Mahmoud Othman Omar, better known as Abu Qutadah, who is alleged by Jordanian authorities to be a senior associate of bin Laden. Those men were released without charges, but police said they could come under further questioning.

Last year, Jordan's state security court found Abu Qutadah guilty of conspiracy to carry out terror attacks against U.S. and Israeli targets in Jordan and sentenced him in absentia to 15 years in jail.

Although the court acquitted Abu Qutadah of charges of affiliation to bin Laden's al-Qaeda group, Jordanian counterterrorism officials believe he is linked to it and has recruited several people to the organization.

Jordanian authorities have sought Abu Qutadah's extradition from Britain, but have so far been unsuccessful.

The six Algerians were charged with possessing items including false documents, forged credit cards, electronic equipment and sums of money "in circumstances which give rise to reasonable suspicion" they were plotting terrorist acts, prosecutors said.

Although few details had emerged about their activities, terrorism expert Paul Wilkinson said that judging from prosecutors' statements, "it's certainly possible that this was a group that had been authorized by al-Qaeda," bin Laden's organization.

"The bin Laden factor is one that's transnational, and therefore a real and present danger, especially with the inflamed situation in the Middle East," said Wilkinson, director of the Center for the Study of Terrorism and Political Violence at Scotland's St. Andrews University.

It was not clear whether the six were the same group referred to in a report by the Sunday Telegraph, which said British police had uncovered what they believed was a plot to release the nerve gas sarin in the London Underground. The gas was used in 1995 by a Japanese cult in an attack on the Tokyo subways.

Authorities in both France and Germany, meanwhile, have ongoing investigations in connection with the December arrests in Germany of four men believed to have ties to bin Laden.

French investigators are studying a videocassette seized at an apartment belonging to one of the suspects, which French judicial sources say is believed to show sites being weighed as potential targets for attacks.

The amateur video, filmed in the eastern French city of Strasbourg, included images of several locations in and around the city's Gothic cathedral, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

German prosecutors say the four suspects were part of an international network trained by bin Laden's followers in Afghanistan, and that they set up logistics in Germany to support attacks.

Separately, two dozen suspected Islamic terrorists are on trial in France, accused of trafficking in false documents to help Islamic militants from Turkey to Canada. Two of the key defendants, Fateh Kamel and Ahmed Ressam, are thought to be linked to bin Laden.

In Italy, too, Islamic militants have been a focus of investigators' attention. Last month, the U.S. Embassy in Rome had its first security closure for a decade in response to a terrorist threat.

Embassy officials refused to discuss the nature of the threat, but Italian media said a trio of Algerians linked to bin Laden were believed to have been preparing a possible suicide attack against the embassy.

Britain records first cases of livestock disease in 20 years

LONDON (AP) — Britain's first outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in 20 years could be a disaster for livestock breeders, farming leaders said Wednesday. The EU responded to news of the outbreak by banning all British animal meat and milk exports.

"The decision will apply immediately and shall be reviewed at the meeting of the Standing Veterinary Committee" on Feb. 27 the EU's head office in Brussels, Belgium said in a statement. The ban is in place until March 1.

The disease was discovered Monday in 27 pigs at a slaughterhouse at Little Warley, Essex, east of London.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food said the disease, which is airborne and highly infectious, had spread to a neighboring farm.

Veterinary officials were trying to determine the source of the infected pigs, a process that could take several weeks. The ministry said it had imposed five-mile exclusion zones around the slaughterhouse and two farms that delivered pigs to the slaughterhouse on Friday.

Foot-and-mouth disease affects cloven-footed animals, including sheep, goats and cows as well as pigs. It is not usually fatal but can cause weight loss and reduced dairy production in cattle.

The last outbreak in Britain occurred in 1981. An outbreak in 1967 led to the slaughter of more than 400,000 animals.

Officials discuss expanding list of sales tax-exempt items for holiday

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Texas Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander on Wednesday asked the State Legislature to consider expanding the sales tax holiday held the first weekend in August from three to five days.

She also proposed expanding the list of tax-exempt items to include school supplies, safety equipment such as baby and children's car seats, bicycle helmets, elbow and knee pads and material used to make clothing.

State Sen. Teel Bivins said, "The sales tax holiday has been extremely successful; therefore, I am sure that my colleagues and I will be willing to look positively on any fiscally responsible initiative to expand the event and add more items to the tax-exempt list."

"The three-day holiday, as it stands with the current exemptions, is intended for back-to-school shopping," observed Rick Menchaca, Midland City manager, noting that the city lost $25,000 in tax revenues by not collecting local sales taxes during the previous tax holiday.

He pointed out the Texas Municipal League, comprised of most of the state's

United Way closes book on record year, prepares for 2001

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

United Way of Midland closed the book on a year that saw its most successful fund-raising campaign ever, a $3.1 million effort to benefit the 16 member agencies of the organization.

New officers and board members were installed Wednesday at the organization's annual meeting as United Way prepares for the 2001 campaign.

As he prepared to step down as president of United Way of Midland Board of Directors, Zahir Noormohamed said, "I've enjoyed being a part of what we accomplished in 2000."

Of his work with the United Way staff, campaign cabinet and executive committee, he said, "We had some spirited discussions, some heated debates but I'm confident we made the best decisions. I'd like to thank the United Way staff for their help. It's been an honor and a privilege to serve as president and I look forward to serving in any capacity."

He is succeeded by Mary Lou Cassidy, who said she began volunteering with United Way in the early 1980s when she was assigned to an allocation panel.

Cassidy

Of her upcoming year as president, she said, "We've had a super year. To duplicate it or to do better is my aspiration. We had a record-setting campaign, our member agencies are doing a super job. If we keep that going and do even better, it will be a good year."

In addition to the election of new officers and board members, the agency recognized several corporations and volunteers with annual awards.

Long-time United Way volunteer K. Michael Conaway was presented an honorary lifetime membership, the seventh the organization has awarded.

Conaway was in Austin testifying before a legislative committee, but his wife Suzanne received the award on his behalf.

"When I first met Mike about 10 years ago, it didn't take me long to realize how important volunteering was to this man. One of our first dates was to a YMCA banquet where he was named volunteer of the decade," she recalled.

Saying how honored he was by the award, she added, "Mike loves this community and works hard for many different organizations. He has such an upbeat personality — he'll spend all day going to meeting after meeting and come home with a smile on his face saying 'Guess what we did today?' He's an inspiration to me and to everyone he comes in contact with."

Other awards were presented by Jose Cuevas, chairman of the 2000 campaign.

The Communicator of the Year award was presented to Jami Owen of Community & Senior Services.

Texaco Exploration & Production received the Pioneer Spirit Award for the company with the greatest number of GEMS of the Community donors.

Matt Josephy

A day in the life of a busy college student can run you ragged

I want to relay to you the story of "Why I have a scab on my leg." But to do so requires backing up to the day before the incident actually occurred. By the time I got out of bed, climbed down out of my loft and turned off the alarm, it had been going for a solid five minutes.

Josephy

I'm sure the "enh, enh, enh," sound it produces racked up brownie points with my roommate. Maybe I'm lucky he even still talks to me. I desperately wanted to hit the snooze and make like a fireman ... head back up my ladder and dive into a warmer setting (OK, so the analogy is weak: he is breaking windows to rescue children from fire, I merely provide my comforter with companionship and rescue my sanity).

But that was not an option.

In fact, I had a mere 20 minutes to be on West Campus for an early morning meeting. The time was 7:10 a.m. that I have explained in the past may be a normal waking hour for many of you, but for us in Never-Never Land it comes all too soon.

I had to go to this meeting because ...

Oh, but the day really began right after that meeting when I jetted back over to the main campus for my speech communications class. On my way I ran into several former Midlanders who I hadn't seen in quite some time and started to find out about how they were doing. They began to tell me about ...

Oh, so I managed to stay awake through some of the most boring six minute speeches I've ever heard — you would have thought it was the Emmys or something — and then got up to give mine, which was on an interesting topic and everything, but I probably didn't put a lot of passion into it ...

Oh, did I tell you how excited I am about the conference MSC LEAD hosted this weekend called SCONA, alphabet soup for the Student Conference on National Affairs sponsored by the Memorial Student Center Leadership Enrichment, Action and Development Committee.

The leader of my discussion group was a colonel in the Army, but more than that he was a Special Forces officer and a Green Beret. We're talking about a big dog; he told us the kind of war stories that remind you of what it must have been like to be in the Chronicles of Narnia Series, the type of stories where we, like Peter, Susan and Lucy, just listen with open mouths and open minds as Mr. Beaver talks about Aslan.

Another speaker was a chief of the New York Police Department, who discussed some of the new methods in law enforcement, such as community policing.

Speaking of new methods, in accounting, we've been practicing Activity Based Costing that is being adopted by many firms in the wake of less labor intensive manufacturing processes. Right now, I am in the process of preparing for all the tests I have this week in every class under the sun.

Actually, it's been kind of cloudy and cold here for the last week or so.

But back to my day.

After giving my speech in Scom, I went down the hall and sat back to read a chapter of my psychology book. I even began making up a bunch of little acronyms in an effort to learn the different functions of the four lobes of the brain: FPOT for frontal, parietal, occipital and temporal.

Functions. We had a function last week in place of one of the usual meetings to thank all the group leaders and chairs of one of the organizations I'm involved with. We were all dressed up and tricked them into coming into a different building, where we showered them with Valentine Cards and presents. It was really A LOT of fun.

Following my psych study break and a quick visit with my aunt, who works upstairs in the building I was in, it was time to dash over to meet some people for lunch — a little bit late.

Immediately after that I had class on West Campus again, followed by another class.

From that I immediately biked back to main campus to catch a supplemental instruction session, where an older student went into further detail about what to study for our impending psychology exam. From there, I went straight to an organization meeting where we nailed down the final details for that conference we hosted.

Then, it was time to catch a late dinner in order to generate enough energy to do research for my management class.

Hopefully, you haven't already control-tabbed (Windows slang) over to a different section of the newspaper, because the point of my interrupted ramblings is to illustrate the highly imperative, if not successful, requirement for college students and members of today's society in general, to be able to multi-task. Gone are the days when you can simply set about accomplishing one main objective in a day's time.

Oh, the initial point of this story was that the next morning I was a little exhausted. So exhausted in fact that when the alarm went off, I snoozed it and hopped back into bed five times. On the sixth descent from my loft, which is suspended a little less than six feet off the ground, I sort of fell.

Rather than using our little stepladder, I was trying to land on either my chair or my roommate's chair, that were both conveniently positioned. But somehow I forgot to make the decision of which one I was going for.

Indecisiveness will get you every time, especially if you're a multitasker.

And that's the story of the scab on my leg.

Patel's docket call postponed in federal court

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Federal-court docket call for Midland physician Dr. Dipakkumar "Dipak" Patel, who is charged with 59 counts of health-care fraud, has been postponed until 2 p.m. Friday before U.S. Magistrate Judge Stuart Platt in the U.S. Courthouse in Midland.

The hearing, which had been set for Wednesday, was postponed at the request of El Paso lawyer Joseph "Sib" Abraham Jr., one of Patel's four defense attorneys.

At docket call, Patel's defense attorneys and the government's prosecutor are to discuss progress of the case and go into discovery action in disclosing factual information related to the charges.

Abraham, who indicated he was "recently retained" by Patel, said in his motion for continuance that the defense attorneys on Wednesday were to be "conducting a defense meeting to discuss defense issues and whether or not they are ready to proceed with (the) trial."

Patel, 44, pleaded not guilty to the charges before Platt on Jan. 29 when he waived arraignment and posted a $2 million cash (via bank money orders) bail to get out of jail and to resume his medical practice in Midland.

He had been indicted on Jan. 24 on 59 counts of allegedly defrauding federally funded and private health-care insurers out of $1.6 million between 1995 and mid-1999.

According to court officials, Patel defense attorneys in the case are Abraham; San Antonio attorney Alvin Berry, a former Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) agent and a former federal prosecutor; Dallas attorney James Rolfe, a former federal prosecutor; and Midland attorney Max Wright.

In his motion to Platt to continue the docket call on Friday, Abraham said the postponement was "not sought for the purposes of delay" and was not "due to the procrastination, bad planning, or bad faith" on the part of Patel or the defense attorneys. Rather, the postponement became "necessary for the defendant to have a full and fair opportunity to present his case at the proceedings and so that justice may be done."

Prosecuting the case is Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Roomberg of Midland.

Indictments against Patel include health-care fraud, mail fraud and money laundering.

His patients included Medicare and Medicaid patients, federal employees in the Federal Employees Health Benefit Program and privately insured patients, according to the indictment.

Of Patel's alleged "patient mill," the indictment said the physician "typically saw from 50 to over 100 patients per day for only a few minutes each" but submitted "false claims" stating the examinations were longer.

Based on Patel's medical records, occasionally his "billings exceeded 100 hours in a single day," the indictment said. "The daily billings would invariably exceed the time period that the clinic was even open for business."

The indictment claimed Patel would "justify unnecessary medical testing and treatment" on his billings and in cases would bill for services not performed.

The government's case against Patel includes "false diagnosis as a basis for necessary service."

The indictment included seven money-laundering transitions totaling $410,000. Patel allegedly transferred funds, gained from "unlawful activity," from Midland banks to investment accounts.

Were he convicted on all 59 counts and got maximum punishment from five years to 10 years on each count, Patel could be sentenced to 305 years in prison.

RECORD: United Way presents Westwin Energy with coveted Eagle Spirit award

(From 1B)

The Eagle Spirit Award for the company with the greatest percentage of GEMS donors went to Westwin Energy.

The Rising Star award for most improvement in participation was given to Key Energy Services and the Excellence in Non-Profit Leadership award went to Denise Malm, executive director of Camp Fire Boys & Girls.

Henry Petroleum received the Paul Rea award.

As he stepped down as campaign chairman, Cuevas issued a challenge to those in the audience and to the community.

"Serving as campaign chairman was truly a pleasure. It was truly a team effort. Everyone had the same goal — to go out and raise a lot of money to make Midland a better place. I think it's important to go out and encourage more participation from the minority community — the African-American community, the Hispanic community. Everyone in this room is somebody. Everyone in this community is somebody. People will say they don't have anything to offer, but everyone's been somewhere, done something. You bring to the table those experiences. I know what it's like to come from humble beginnings and what it's like to build a company," he said. "The minority community has a responsibility to participate and make a stronger community for us all."

Station out

Local radio station B93 transmitters are out due to an electrical short. The station abruptly went off the air at 10 a.m. Monday. The short caused a small fire which corroded a line that connected to the transmitter. Station engineers said the local station should be on the air again by Friday.

TAX: City plans to continue participating in tax holiday municipalities, opposes any expansion of the holiday or changes to the tax-exempt list.

"What the Comptroller hasn't said is, 'has the person who saved that amount turned around and spent it on other things?'" he continued, adding that the League found Lotto ticket sales rose dramatically during that three-day period.

While the city intends to continue participating in the holiday, Menchaca noted that the first holiday in 1999 came as the city was recording its worst-ever sales revenue collection, losing $1 million in sales tax revenues and suffering a population decline as the economy weathered a 12-year low in energy prices.

"It has merit but it's tough on cities," he said of the holiday.

Mike McClanahan, manager of Midland's Wal-Mart Supercenter, said he favors expanding the list of tax-free items to include school supplies but sees little merit in expanding the number of days from three to five. In the two years Texas has had a tax-free holiday, he said, he's observed an increase in what shoppers buy, especially in apparel.

"I don't normally see a customer buy 10 packages of underwear. They may buy a couple to get by," he said.

The tax holiday has also brought a lot of confusion to customers, he said, who don't always clearly understand what is tax-exempt and what is not and don't understand why school supplies are not exempt.

"I don't see any benefit to expanding the number of days," he said. "What's more important is helping folks with tax relief for getting their kids back to school."

Local economist Dr. Jerry Jones urged caution in making drastic changes to the holiday

"Government has a tendency of taking a good idea and letting it get out of proportion," he said. "By extending the number of days, we risk having the whole thing abolished. I can understand expanding the list of items to school supplies and material for those who make their clothes. But I'd have reservations about expanding the number of days. Expanding the number of days and any items listed as tax-exempt should be examined very carefully. I think they should place a moratorium on changes because any changes cause confusion and we haven't done this very long. I'd be reluctant to make changes until we have more experience."

Jones said the concept is sound and does stimulate additional purchases.

"In reality, it helps the people in most need of help. The sales tax is a very regressive tax and the holiday gives relief to those who otherwise might not be able to afford them. Over time the revenue loss to the city is a factor to consider, but in reality the benefits are much greater," he said.

He sympathized with the plight of Menchaca and other cities across Texas who have become, he said, unwilling partners in the state's attempt to provide tax relief to Texans.

Rock the Vote honors Jesse Jackson, Carlos Santana for work

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Rock the Vote honored the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Grammy-winning singer Carlos Santana for their work on behalf of civil rights and social causes.

Jackson received the Rock the Nation award on Tuesday for his work with the Rainbow Coalition, Operation Breadbasket, Operation PUSH and other initiatives.

He dedicated the award to Hosea Williams, one of Martin Luther King Jr.'s first lieutenants, who died Nov. 16 of cancer.

Santana was honored for his work on behalf of the Milagro Foundation, which he started in 1998 with his wife, Deborah, to help at-risk children and youths.

"We learned a lot from Cesar Chavez, from Martin Luther King," he said. "This is not show business, this is human business."

Santana told The Associated Press that of all the honors he has received in recent years, "the award I want most is father of the year."

Rock the Vote is a nonprofit group that members of the recording industry founded in 1990 to protect freedom of expression and to empower youths, in part by getting them to vote.

LOS ANGELES — The former lead singer for the heavy metal band Ratt sued two band members and their manager, claiming breach of contract and dissemination of false information on the Internet.

Stephen Pearcy filed suit in Superior Court on Tuesday, seeking unspecified general and punitive damages against former bandmates Robert Blotzer and Warren DeMartini and manager Tim Heyne.

There were no Los Angeles telephone listings for Blotzer, DeMartini or Heyne.

The lawsuit claims the two band members withdrew thousands of dollars from a corporate checking account the trio opened under the entity WBS Inc.

A toll-free telephone number for WBS Inc. in Vernon rang unanswered on Wednesday.

Pearcy claims Blotzer and DeMartini posted information on the Internet that he had quit the band, causing cancelation of a proposed January 2000 tour.

GETTYSBURG, Pa. — Women, minorities and the poor are stifled by hidden assumptions in American education and politics, Lani Guinier said in a speech at Gettysburg College.

Guinier, the first black woman to become a tenured professor at Harvard Law School, is best known for being nominated to be assistant attorney general for civil rights at the beginning of the Clinton administration. The president withdrew her name after her views on minority voting rights caused an uproar.

Guinier likened the problems women, minorities and the poor face to the canaries that were once carried underground by coal miners. If the birds died, "it signaled that the atmosphere was problematic not only for the canary, but for the miners," she said, adding that the nation prefers "to fix the canary rather than the atmosphere."

She said standardized tests are problematic because certain groups tend to score lower, and female students consider answers carefully before giving them, which puts them at a disadvantage in standardized testing and classroom discussions that reward "strategic guessing."

JERUSALEM — Former world chess champion Anatoly Karpov will tour the Middle East to raise money for the YMCA in the Palestinian areas, which face financial difficulties after five months of Palestinian-Israeli violence.

Karpov will visit the West Bank and the Gaza Strip next week to study the organization's needs, his agent, Shiloh Quinn, said Tuesday.

In May, Karpov will embark on a 60-day tour of Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, the West Bank, the Gaza Strip and the Israeli Arab city of Nazareth, with a goal of raising $5 million. Karpov plans to play 20 games, selling sponsorship of each match for $250,000, Quinn said.

The YMCA provides accommodations for pilgrims and tourists to the Holy Land. It also offers cultural, social and sports facilities and vocational training for Palestinians.

Since fighting began on Sept. 28, tourists have stopped visiting Palestinian areas. The YMCA had to close its hotel in east Jerusalem, a major source of income, said the organization's director, Judeh Majaj.

NEW YORK — Bono doesn't like talking about his religious beliefs, and until now he's avoided doing so for the past 20 years.

"The problem is, when I do these kinds of things, the way it turns out in the tabloid papers here and in England is, 'Bono Pontificates on the Holy Trinity,'" the U2 lead singer said in an interview posted Tuesday night on the Web site beliefnet.com.

Bono talked about God and music, referencing the Grammy Awards.

"When those people get up at the Grammys and say, 'I thank God,' I always imagine God going, 'Oh, don't — please don't thank me for that one. Please, oh, that's an awful one! Don't thank me for that!'"

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, Feb. 22, 2001:

Try to use laughter as a form of relaxation this year, as dealing with demands and stress will become intrinsic to your well-being. Take good care of your health. You will need every ounce of energy you can muster. You might take on way too much, even for you. Sometimes, you might inadvertently provoke quarrels. Use diplomacy. If you are single, mid-July brings a new cycle in which meeting people becomes even easier. In the following period, Mr. or Ms. Special knocks on your door. If attached, a new home or a change on the home front draws the two of you closer. Romance marks the latter part of the year. PISCES understands you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ You might be pushed beyond your limits. As a result, you could lose your temper. Count to 10. Your words might be unusually sharp, and they could cause a problem. Try a cool, calm and collected conversation. You'll make your point better that way. Tonight: Think about recent developments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Work pulls you in several directions. You have many ideas. Test them carefully. You might be called on to spend money. If you are uncomfortable with what is happening, hold back. Tonight: Where your friends are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Extend your perspective by seeking out other opinions. You might not have as firm a grip on a personal matter as you think. Putting space between you and a personal issue ultimately brings resolution. Your personality wins the day. Tonight: Willingly work late.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ He might not mean to, but someone manages to cause trouble. The two of you have different ideas about how things should work. Discuss what you want more often with a dear friend. Explore different options. Surf the Internet. Tonight: Rent a movie.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Others reach out. You might be hard pressed to cover all your bases. Work demands your attention, as does a partnership. Use your creativity. Be careful about using a flirtation as an emotional outlet. Pay attention to a child. Tonight: Schedule quality time for someone important.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Plunge into work or a project. Concentration helps alleviate stress and tension from other areas of your life. You might be overwhelmed by what is happening at home or with a family member. Relax. Solutions come if you give yourself space. Tonight: Out among the crowds.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Let your ingenuity emerge. Unexpected developments occur. Discussions evolve in a new direction if you are willing to accept someone's sometimes forceful opinions. An opportunity from a distance might be too good to turn down. As a result, doors open. Tonight: Prepare to work late.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Build on established ground. Don't push another away. You could be fed up with this person's demands. Can you handle the situation differently and turn it into a win-win? Carefully sort through financial implications. You need to take care of yourself. Tonight: Let your flirtatious nature come out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Speak your mind and express your ideas. Others go out of their way for you. You might be more demanding than you realize. Fatigue and boredom play into your attitude. Anything can change — and quickly, at that. Let others take charge. Give up control for a while. Tonight: Happy at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ Your strong handling of money matters might be your reaction to a feeling that you are losing control. Look within and see what is really bothering you. Tempers flare, and you might not be sure of yourself. Do something special for a friend or loved one. Tonight: Act rather than talk.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ A friend might incite a mini-riot around you. Don't take this personally. Relax. Become more active and take a stand. Seek out those you enjoy. Allow your sense of humor to reveal itself. Laughter heals and helps everyone relax. Tonight: Your treat.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Take your time with those you must deal with. Others might be tired or gruff. A boss or authority figure challenges you. Know which side of your bread is buttered. Think about the long term. Check out real estate or an investment. Tonight: You beam. Others respond.

Opening lead: Jack of ♣

Show the North-South cards to one of your friends and ask how six spades should be played, and the most likely reply would be: "What's the problem? Draw trumps and there are tricks to burn." Strangely enough, you would just have been given the problem, not the solution! How should you draw trumps?

Once North announced enough for a jump-raise in spades, South wasted no time launching into Key-Card Blackwood, where the king of trumps counts as an ace. North's response indicated two aces and the queen of trumps and, since a control was missing, South had no ambitions beyond the small slam.

After the club lead, declarer was delighted with the dummy that hit the table. What could go wrong? South soon found out. After winning the opening lead in hand with the queen, a low trump was led to the queen, and East's club discard meant that declarer had to lose two tricks in trumps, and a large profit was instantly converted into a small loss.

The 4-0 trump split was unfortunate and, indeed, had East held all the missing trumps there would have been no way to avoid losing two tricks. But about 5 percent of the time West will turn up with the four trumps, and that holding can be neutralized.

At trick two, the correct technical play is to lead the jack of spades from hand! Assume West wins with the ace and leads another club. Declarer wins with the ace and leads a low trump, and West must insert the nine or ten. Declarer wins with dummy's queen, returns to hand with the king of hearts and leads another spade, taking the marked finesse of the eight. The last trump is drawn and declarer can claim the rest of the tricks.

DEAR ABBY

Father urged to take offense in blocking ex-wife's boyfriend

DEAR ABBY: "A Dad in a Dilemma" wrote that his ex-wife informed him she's moving in with a registered sex offender, and he's concerned about sending his girls to stay overnight with her. Your advice to not let his daughters stay at their mother's house was correct.

Van Buren

I am a police detective in a sex crimes unit. Probably 90 percent of our sexual assault victims are children. Sex offenders, especially those who victimize children, have a very high rate of recidivism. Additionally, many child sex offenders are prohibited from having ANY contact with children under the age of 10 and can be arrested if they do so.

"Dad" can contact his local law enforcement agency or the man's probation officer to determine whether the man is allowed to have contact with minor children. Even if there is a custody arrangement which states that his ex-wife gets to see their daughters, he should contact the attorney and do everything possible to keep the girls from having any contact with this man. He should not rely on his ex to provide the proper supervision, as she has already shown a severe lack of judgment in exposing her other child to this risk. — POLICE OFFICER IN COLORADO

DEAR POLICE OFFICER: Thanks for adding your expert opinion to my original advice. "Dad in a Dilemma's" letter generated a flood of mail from alarmed readers. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I work with an attorney who handles the legalities when children are removed and detained by child protective services. We have a number of cases where children were removed from one parent because of socialization with sex offenders.

"Dad" should research this person's criminal background. If he can't get the full history, he needs to get the local law enforcement or child protective services agency involved. — A WORD TO THE WISE, CRESCENT CITY, CALIF.

DEAR WISE: A helpful suggestion. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: You were right telling "Dad" not to let his daughters visit his ex-wife. No sex offender should have such easy access. Even though the mother might be present in the house, sex offenders need only a moment to satisfy their twisted urges.

"Dad" would be wise to notify the court that issued the custody award for the daughters of the changed circumstances and to seek an immediate modification of the visitation. (This is in case the ex-wife wants to exercise her visitation rights despite the obvious risks.) A modification of the decree would prevent such a problem.

If "Dad" can't afford a lawyer to get the change made, most state bar associations have a list of attorneys who will work "pro bono" (for free), and many attorneys, once aware of the circumstances, will help because they are parents also. — AN ATTORNEY WHO CARES

DEAR ATTORNEY: I am sure your advice about "pro bono" legal services will be of interest to many people. Thank you for it. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: As a survivor of child sexual abuse, I know what can be lost if "Dad's" daughters end up in the clutches of this registered sex offender who was convicted of aggravated assault on a 10-year-old.

The fact is, the ex-wife's new boyfriend is a danger to "Dad's" girls. He should insist that his ex sign a legally binding document that visitations NEVER occur in the company of her boyfriend. Period. If she refuses, he should take it to court. "Dad's" daughters must be protected from their mother's bad choices. — STILL SURVIVING IN L.A.

DEAR SURVIVING: How true.

Edgewood parents wage anti-voucher campaign

AUSTIN (AP) — Urging that no taxpayer money be diverted from public schools, parents and teachers from the well-known Edgewood School District lobbied Wednesday against state-funded school vouchers.

Though there is no big push for vouchers this legislative session, the parents said they wanted to warn about the privately funded voucher program in their district.

"Vouchers is not the answer," said Diana Herrera, a parent and president of the Edgewood Classroom Teachers Association.

"I don't care if the words are going to be tax credit, opportunity scholarship, parental school choice. Vouchers by any name will not be accepted," Herrera said.

The CEO Foundation is operating a $50 million private school scholarship program in Edgewood, the low-income San Antonio district that led successful court battles to change the state's school finance system.

So far, 800 to 1,100 students have enrolled, but not all students are accepted by private schools because of special needs, the parents and teachers said.

The loss of those students to private schools costs the Edgewood district from $2 million to $4 million annually in state funding, said Superintendent Noe Sauceda.

Mary Havel, a spokeswoman for the CEO Foundation, said if Edgewood does not have to educate a student, it doesn't need state funding for that student. She also said there are 1,241 students in prekindergarten through high school enrolled in the voucher program.

"We have lots of parents who are happy with it," she said.

Havel disputed the suggestion that private schools routinely deny entrance to handicapped or special education children. Some do enroll them, she said, but added that in some cases the public school system is the best option for a particular child.

"It really forces the parent to find out what does the school have to offer," she said.

Gov. Rick Perry and other state politicians who have supported a state-funded voucher program in the past have said they won't work toward one this session because the makeup of the current Legislature isn't conducive to passing one.

Still, the Edgewood activists and their legislators said they want to be prepared for any unexpected attempts to push one through.

"In a legislative session, there are no guarantees," said Sen. Leticia Van de Putte, D-San Antonio. "You never know about surprise attacks."

On the federal level, President Bush is proposing a voucher program to allow parents to pull their children out of academically troubled schools and send them elsewhere. The Edgewood parents said they are also against any federal voucher plan.

Security concerns over recent escapes silence prison newspaper

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Published by inmates for inmates, a prison newspaper has ended publication over security concerns heightened by the escape of seven prisoners from a maximum-security lockup in the nation's largest correctional system.

The Echo for more than 70 years was newspaper of record for the Texas prison system, officials said.

Sharon Keilin, the Texas Department of Criminal Justice's management liaison over the newspaper, said she learned last week that prison officials considered the office at the Walls Unit in Huntsville, where the newspaper is published, to be a security risk.

"The staffing was not adequate to cover the publication of The Echo," said Keilin, an assistant director for operational support in Huntsville. "It was decided they would temporarily put the guys to other jobs and search for a more secure location."

A staff of five inmates, including a former journalist serving a 60-year sentence for aggravated robbery, produced The Echo each month. They used correspondents from throughout the Texas correctional system to publish 130,000 copies of a 12-page newspaper, distributed free at the prison units.

A paralegal with a law firm that represents inmates said prisoners would suffer without the newspaper from which they gained valuable information. Chuck Hurt, a former convict, said he suspects a desire to curtail communications between inmates — not security — is the issue.

"If it were simply a Walls Unit problem, you would think that in 72 years, they would have determined any problems and resolved them long ago," Hurt said.

Keilin said she was told that once a more secure location for the newspaper's office was found, publication could resume. But others were doubtful of those prospects.

"If they just closed (The Echo) down to fix security, that's fine," said attorney Donna Brorby, who has spent decades in federal court battling the state over treatment of prisoners. "If they end up using this to shut down The Echo, that would be really sad."

George Rivas and six other inmates at the Connally Unit in Kenedy County overpowered civilian workers and a guard and escaped on Dec. 13. Authorities say the inmates then robbed an Irving sporting goods store on Dec. 24, leaving a police officer dead of multiple gunshot wounds.

The escapees then drove to Colorado, where four were captured and one killed himself on Jan. 22. The other two surrendered two days later.

Brorby said she was concerned The Echo may go the way of other prison programs that have been temporarily suspended, like the work program for death row inmates that was implicated in an attempted escape.

State prison officials suspended the death row work program in 1998 after seven inmates used the time together to plan an escape attempt. Brorby said it has not been reinstated.

The prison publication, which included letters to the editor from inmates and summaries of articles from other newspapers around the state, had frequently won honors in the American Penal Press Contest.

Relatives of inmates and others who could subscribe to The Echo relied upon the newspaper, which contained no advertising.

"The Echo is very important for inmates and their families because it is the only newspaper in the small town that is the Texas prison system," said Ray Hill, host of The Prison Program, which is broadcast on Houston public radio.

Keilin, who reviewed articles' content before publication, said the inmates adhered to a code of ethics, including printing only balanced and true information, and clearly identifying their sources.

"I'm told an appropriate place will be found and it will start back up," she said. "It's had bumps and things in its 73-year history. It has survived them. It will survive this one."

Group protests national forest timber sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conservation group is asking the U.S. Supreme Court to reverse a lower court's decision that allowed timber sales to resume at four national forests in Texas after a three-year hiatus.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in September that a lawsuit filed by three environmental groups should not have gone to court because it didn't cite a specific example of forest mismanagement by the U.S. Forest Service.

The nonprofit conservation group, Texas Committee on Natural Resources filed a request to the Supreme Court on Tuesday to reverse the decision.

In 1997, U.S. District Judge Richard Schell in Beaumont issued an injunction that effectively halted timber sales in the Davy Crockett, Angelina, Sabine and Sam Houston national forests. He issued the injunction in the lawsuit filed by the Texas Committee on Natural Resources, the Sierra Club and the Texas Wilderness Society.

The three groups contend that the clear-cutting methods used and allowed by the U.S. Forest Service in Texas do not protect soils and watersheds, as mandated by federal law. In 1999, a partial panel of the 5th Circuit upheld Schell's decision, but the full panel reversed that decision.

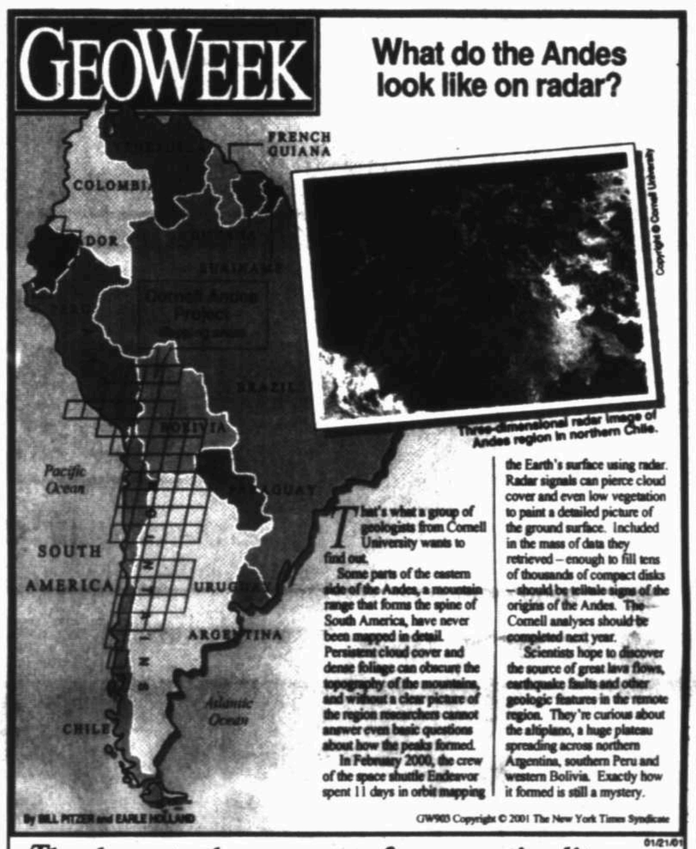
GEOWEEK — What do the Andes look like on radar?



Three-dimensional radar image of Andes region in northern Chile.
That's what a group of geologists from Cornell University wants to find out.
Some parts of the eastern side of the Andes, a mountain range that forms the spine of South America, have never been mapped in detail. Persistent cloud cover and dense foliage can obscure the topography of the mountains, and without a clear picture of the region researchers cannot answer even basic questions about how the peaks formed.
In February 2000, the crew of the space shuttle Endeavor spent 11 days in orbit mapping the Earth's surface using radar. Radar signals can pierce cloud cover and even low vegetation to paint a detailed picture of the ground surface. Included in the mass of data they retrieved – enough to fill tens of thousands of compact disks – should be telltale signs of the origins of the Andes. The Cornell analyses should be completed next year.
Scientists hope to discover the source of great lava flows, earthquake faults and other geologic features in the remote region. They're curious about the altiplano, a huge plateau spreading across northern Argentina, southern Peru and western Bolivia. Exactly how it formed is still a mystery.

Smokin' Winston

■ Lee's rugged post has caught fire on court but doesn't limit his talents to just one sport.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee's Eric Winston is a lot like the Energizer Bunny. Wind him up and he's good for the year.

Even though the 6-foot-7 junior post is a big reason why the Rebels are making a run in the state basketball playoffs, most people in Midland will recognize Winston as an all-state tight end on Lee's state championship football team.

And Winston's future isn't basketball. It's football where colleges from across the country will be knocking on his door. Anyway, for Winston, basketball follows football — then baseball follows basketball.

In Winston's mind, it's the order of the perfect world.

"I know football is most likely my future," Winston said. "But I play basketball and baseball, too. I consider it fun. My left knee aches a little from playing three sports, but I love the competition and the competitiveness of playing. That doesn't change from one sport to the next."

Besides, it's the way Winston grew up.

"My brother, Matt, played everything," Winston said. "I just thought that was what you were supposed to do. Just growing up, after football, I went to basketball; after basketball, I went to baseball. I never thought about it. I loved all three sports."

And Winston may be a football player, but he's doing a magnificent imitation of a basketball player.

Making a splash at state meet

Midland High has qualified five swimmers for the state meet in individual events this weekend, including (left to right) Tommy Brown, Mallory Keathley, Stephanie Brown, Keleigh Wentworth and Tyson Taylor.

Five individuals give high hopes to Midland High

By Lee Passmore

Although three individuals of the Midland High girls swim team have been there before and neither of the two MHS boys individuals have ever been, this year's Class 5A state meet should be a new adventure for all of them.

With three girls having qualified in a total of five individual events (and as part of two relay teams), that gives Midland High a chance to score plenty of points in the girls team standings. On numbers alone, this gives MHS a chance to have the best team finish of a Midland team since Midland Lee's girls finished third in the 1996 state meet.

"I guess my goal for the girls side is to see us break into the top 10," said Midland High and Lee coach

Cultreri dives past pain, makes state

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

For the past month, Katie Cultreri hasn't so much been thinking about making the state meet as she has been trying to keep herself together physically.

The Midland High junior 1-meter diver started her school year with high hopes, but aches and pains intervened. Cultreri has had to deal with shin splints, a sinus infection, a sore wrist and a shoulder which only recently has gotten better with cortisone injections.

Cultreri could have recited that line popularized by Rosanne Rosannadanna on Saturday Night Live: If it's not one thing it's another.

"About a month ago I quit," said Cultreri of the status of her diving season. "It was a week before (the District 4-5A meet) and I hadn't been in the water. I wondered what the point was."

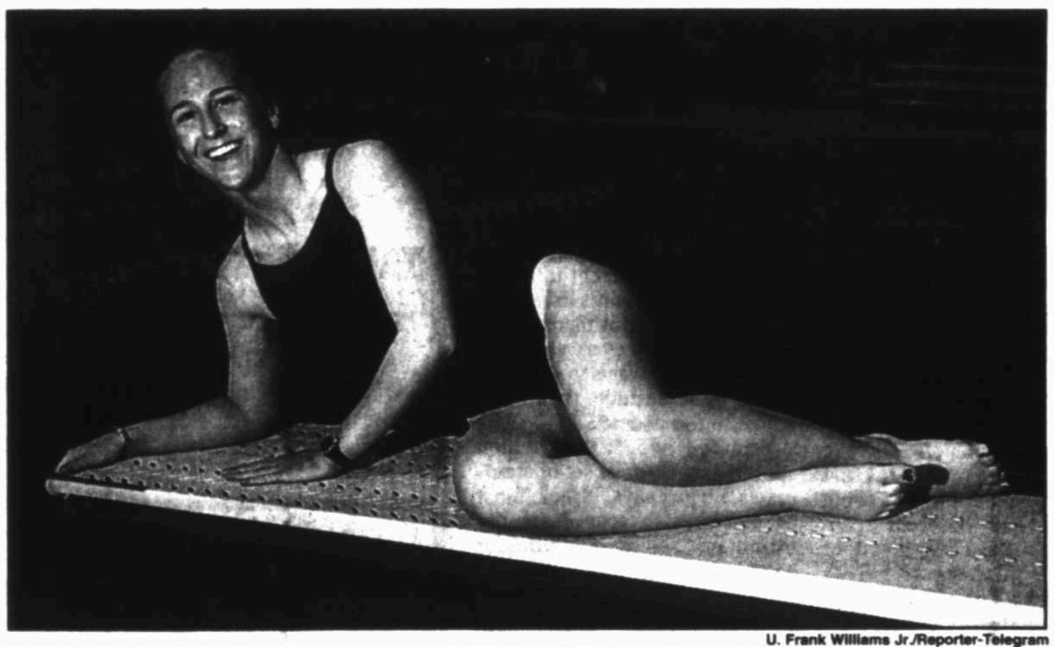
Thanks to some prodding from parents and coaches, though, Cultreri changed her mind and entered the district meet. And all of a sudden, she felt better.

At the Region I-5A meet in Lubbock two weekends ago, Cultreri finished second, which was good enough to earn her a spot at the state meet in Austin starting Friday. Now a season which seemed in doubt only a few weeks ago, looks like it's on the brink of a happy ending.

"I was very proud of myself," said Cultreri, who is the first Midland diver to go to the state meet since Sarah Vaughan of Midland High in 1995. "There were a couple of dives (at regionals) I could have done a little better, but I was very happy."

Cultreri had a right to be optimistic at the outset of the season based on what she did as a sophomore. Last year she won the district title in the 1-meter, so the next logical step would be to make the state meet.

It seemed natural that Cultreri's arc should be headed upward and that the only time it would slope down would be when she finished one of her dives.



U. Frank Williams Jr./Reporter-Telegram
MHS junior Katie Cultreri has overcome a series of health mishaps this season to qualify for the state diving meet this weekend. Cultreri is the first Midland diver to qualify for the state meet in six years, since Midland High's Sarah Vaughan in 1995.

"Last year at the end of the season, I said to myself I'd make state," said Cultreri. "My freshman year I was eighth (at the region meet) and last year I was fifth. I figured I should move up enough to make state this year."

To make the state meet, Cultreri felt she needed to expand her diving repertoire. She told MHS diving coach Jennifer Mangum that there was a trio of dives she wanted to learn, including a front 2 1/2, a back 1 1/2 half and a front 2 1/2 full.

But as ambitious as those plans were, Cultreri's health didn't always cooperate. As the district meet at Odessa approached in January, Cultreri didn't have time to refine her approach.

"I had only two days of practice before the meet and that's usually not good," said Cultreri. "I didn't really get to add to the list (of dives)."

Cultreri didn't end up defending her district title. In what would be an odd twist of fate, she would fin-

Young Midland Classical teams shoot for crown

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

When some high school basketball coaches say they've got a young team, it means they've got a few more juniors in the starting lineup than they'd like.

But at Midland Classical Academy, girls basketball coach Kelly Beattie isn't kidding when she says her team is young. Her leading scorers are sophomores, and her point guard is an eighth-grader. Boys' coach Ron Miller has a seventh-grader as his sixth man.

Such is life at a small private school. However, despite having only about 50 students in grades 9-12, MCA has qualified both its girls' and boys' basketball teams for the TCAL Class 2A state tournament this week in Irving.

"We're really excited," Beattie said. "It's what we've worked for all year."

After three years of existence, the school and its athletic programs are growing. The school now shares space with Midland Bible Church on North A Street, but plans are in the works for a new campus north of Loop 250 to open around next Christmas, Miller said. Next year, the basketball teams will move up to the larger, better-organized TAPPS, Miller said, joining their bigger Midland cousins — Midland Christian plays in TAPPS Class 4A, Trinity is in 3A and MCA will start in 2A.

The basketball programs at MCA try to instill the virtues you'd expect from a private school.

"We're determined to build a basketball program that has quality," Miller said. "Everything we do is based on character and effort. We define what we do through that."

Sure, MCA's teams determine success through showing character on the court more than through a win-loss record. But while winning isn't everything, it is something.

"Winning is pretty doggone important, too," Miller said.

Both MCA teams have done their share of winning despite being near the bottom of the basketball food chain. Both teams have wins against some UIL Class A teams like Buena Vista.

The boys (12-10) split a pair of games with Trinity, and the girls (13-8) lost by 11 to a Trinity team that advanced to the second round of the TAPPS 3A playoffs. The girls won the Rankin junior varsity tournament by beating the JV team from Ozona, which boasts a strong Class 2A program.

The MCA girls finished second last season when they competed in TCAL's Class A, and Beattie says they can have success this year in the 2A bracket.

"I feel like we can beat anyone on any given night if we pull it together," Beattie said. "I think we've got a shot. We've got the talent if we put it together."

The TCAL playoffs are different. In the UIL and TAPPS, a team has to win several playoff games before going to the state tournament, which includes the final four teams. In TCAL, MCA had to beat the only other two teams in its region to qualify for the state tournament, but there are 12 teams at state.

By winning their regional tournaments, both MCA teams will receive first-round byes, so they are already in

Tall City's battles to continue

■ Midland High soccer teams have position over Lee heading into today's games.

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

Even though the Midland High soccer teams finished the first half of District 4-5A play in good position to make the playoffs, they're not taking the second half of district play for granted.

It's especially easy to stay focused on the first game of the second half, since it comes against crosstown rival Midland Lee. Both games will start at 4:30 p.m. today, the girls at MHS' Boneyard and the boys at Lee Soccer Field.

"As far as I'm concerned, we're 0-0," said MHS boys coach Ernani de Aragao, whose team is actually 6-0 in district and 12-1 overall. "We're set up good for the second half, but in order to make the playoffs, to do well in district, we have to win more than our opponents. The guys are pretty grounded. They know there's a lot of soccer to be played."

The girls game has the most playoff implications. MHS lost the first meeting against Lee, 1-0, on Jan. 23, but the Lady Dawgs quickly passed the Lady Rebels in the standings.

MHS is 4-2 (10-4 overall) and in a tie for second place with Abilene High behind Odessa Permian (5-1). Lee is in fourth place at 3-3 (10-7 overall).

"We're excited because we're in good position," MHS girls coach Scott Hodkinson said. "Everybody was talking ab... four teams before the season got started, so being in a tie for second place is good position. And the team is playing better soccer every time we step out there."

Lee coach Mike Simpson hopes getting his players healthy will result in a turnaround in the second half of district play.

WT Classic is hosting 45 schools

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Forty-five high school softball teams will battle for two division championships in the West Texas Classic over the next three days at the MUGS Complex in Ulmer Park.

This is the largest field in the six-year history of the tournament, which is hosted by Midland Lee and Midland High. The Lady Rebels of Lee are playing the role of defending champion, having won the last two titles. Lee defeated Class 4A Snyder in the finals last year.

But the road to a title could be much tougher this year. For one thing, Brenham, which lost in the Class 4A state finals to Weatherford a year ago, is in the field. Brenham has drawn a first round bye and will not play until 9 a.m. Friday against Thursday's winner between Odessa Permian and Greenwood.

Also, Coahoma is in the Division I field. Coahoma lost to Troy in the Class 2A state semifinals a year ago, just one step away from the state 2A title game.

Coahoma will meet San Angelo Lakeview at 7:30 p.m. today. Coahoma is on the Midland High side of the bracket and those two teams could possibly meet at 3 p.m. on Friday.

There will be 13 first round games today, beginning at 6 p.m. with a second set of games slated for 7:30 p.m.

Lee will open with Hobbs, N.M., at

SWIM: Three girls are top 5 seeds

(From 1C)

Ted Carson. "This is like taking a new step.

"I think one of the reasons that the girls have the believability that this can be done is that they've seen some who have. They came up through (the City of Midland swimming program) just like the girls from Lee."

In recent years, though, the Tall City delegation to the state meet, which begins Friday with preliminaries at 4 p.m. and continues with Saturday's finals at 3:30 p.m., has taken on a Midland High feel. Senior Stephanie Brown and sophomores Mallory Keathley and Keleigh Wentworth are responsible for a big part of that.

Brown and Wentworth have both qualified in two individual events while Keathley is the No. 2 seed in hers. Qualifying individually for the Midland High boys are junior Tyson Taylor and sophomore Tommy Brown.

Numbers alone indicate that the MHS girls could make an impact this weekend. Brown and Wentworth are both seeded as high as fifth in their events, with Brown earning that distinction in the 100-yard freestyle and Wentworth making it in the 200 individual medley.

"They're all experienced enough at bigger meets where they realize we're talking tenths and hundredths of seconds which make a difference," said Carson of the highly seeded girls. "In these meets you've got to be willing to come out and put it on the line Friday night."

Stephanie Brown is the one most familiar with what it takes to swim at the state meet, as this is her third straight year making the trip to Austin. Brown went with a pair of relay teams in her first two years, and was also twice picked up in the 100 backstroke, an event which former MHS teammate Erin Irons dominated in the Region I-5A meet.

This will be the first year Brown goes to the state meet as a region champion. With Irons graduated, Brown won the 100 back at the region meet, and is seeded 10th in the event at the state meet.

"It's kind of exciting for me to set really personal goals," said Brown. "I know being seeded fifth it's realistic for me to do well. You're not high enough to feel pressure."

Brown almost set a record at the region meet in Lubbock in the 100 free with a time of 52.69 seconds, and is only .16 seconds out of the third spot and a potential medal. Only one swimmer, Houston Lamar's Hayley McGregory, has cracked 52 seconds, so Brown thinks she can move into the medal picture.

"There's one 51 then there's a bunch of 52s," said Brown. "Personally I think second place is up for grabs."

Brown is the 10th seed in the 100 back with a region time of 59.19. Ironically, that was probably her strongest individual event until this season.

Emerging as a threat in the 100 free has been a pleasant surprise for Brown.

"It's an event for me which has always been there but has just improved a lot this year," said Brown. "I can't really explain it."

Like Brown, Wentworth is a double qualifier who made it in one individual event last season. Wentworth returns in the 500 free, where she's the sixth seed.

Going as a freshman last season, Wentworth learned some valuable lessons.

"It was really exciting and it was very, very, very competitive," said Wentworth. "The girls who are winning state are making Olympic trial cuts and winning nationals."

The 500 free appeared to be Wentworth's best event, and she won the region with a 5:03.51, barely missing a regional record. But the 200 IM might represent an even better chance at a medal for Wentworth, since she swam a 2:06.51 at the region meet, which set a record.

Wentworth now thinks she has a new goal to focus on.

"I'm really going for it in the 200 IM," said Wentworth. "Of the times which are posted, my goal time is about third in that event."

Keathley's seed might bring the highest expectations of all. At Lubbock, she swam a 57.13 in the finals which broke her own region mark of 58.55 in the prelims. Keathley had to have a lifetime best since she barely beat El Paso Coronado's Aimee Dunavant (57.35) for the region title.

Dunavant's time wasn't only fast enough to get picked up for state, but it's good enough for the third seed behind Keathley. Rachel Koelker of San Antonio Reagan is the top seed at 56.52.

"I think I can win state," said Keathley. "I've been working hard all season for this and tapering for the last three weeks so I feel pretty good.

Keathley went to the state meet last year in a pair of relays and also admits to being intimidated when she saw the times her competitors were swimming. Now she's a target for other competitors who might see her as one to beat.

"It's good to have people look up to you but I always try to go as fast as I can without worrying about what other people might think about my times," said Keathley.

MHS has swimmers in both 100 flys since Taylor won that event in the boys competition of regionals and is the No. 10 seed at the state meet. Like some of the girls swimmers, Taylor has excelled in more than one event and has been forced to choose.

Taylor also won the 100 breast at the District 4-5A meet so he had a decision to make on where to focus.

"I was being pulled in a lot of different directions, but after district it started looking a bit better," said Taylor.

As a 10th seed, Taylor is in the bottom half of the pecking order for his event. However, with less than a second separating the third seed from the 13th seed in the field, he thinks making finals is possible.

"I think that's an acceptable goal," said Taylor. "That's a mouthful to say but you have to swim it to the bone."

Unlike the other individual qualifiers, Tommy Brown (Stephanie's younger brother) didn't know he'd earned a ticket to the state meet until several hours after the regional meet ended. At regionals, Brown finished third in the 200 free (1:45.12) and second in the 500 free. He was also on a pair of relay teams which finished second.

As it turns out, Brown will be a double entry in Austin. Not only did Midland High's boys 200 medley relay team get picked up, but Brown's performance in the 200 free was good enough to get him to the state meet as a 13th seed.

"I though it would take a 1:44 so I really wasn't expecting it," said Brown. "I still think I can go fast enough to make finals."

WINSTON: Junior opens playoffs big formances in the state on Tuesday as the Class 5A playoffs began. Winston torched Amarillo Tascosa for 29 points and 22 rebounds, both career high school bests for the junior.

"Eric is getting better and better the longer he plays," says Lee first year coach Mark Coffman, who has been more than willing to wait for the football season to end to get Winston on the hardwood. "He's been a dominating figure inside. He gives us a scoring option inside as well as someone who can control the boards. He's averaging 15 rebounds per game with us."

Winston didn't join the team until late December while he was taking care of some other sports business on the Lee state championship football bus. Lee is 11-5 since he joined the basketball team and the Rebels have won 11 of the last 14 since he was on the losing end of his first two outings.

"Playing basketball is not a different mind set for me. It's just a different type of condition. I play everything the same way," Winston says. "In football, you have to go hard about five seconds at a time. In basketball, you probably stretch that to 30 seconds."

Coffman insists that missing the early part of the season didn't hurt Winston at all.

"It probably hurt us more than him missing the start of basketball," Coffman said. "He picked it up really quick. It took some time for him to get into basketball condition, but it took us more time to figure out how to use him. He changed our game."

Baseball will have to wait, too. Winston is playing in his second season for the second time this school year. He played junior varsity baseball last year, but will be on the varsity when he joins the team after basketball.

That means he could be in the state playoffs in three different sports this season alone.

Even though he's just a junior, he now has 11 state playoff games under his belt — and two state championship rings in football. He has 10 playoff games in football and experienced his first in basketball on Tuesday with big numbers. The baseball team should also have some sort of playoff run this year.

But baseball, like football, will have to wait. When the playoff run is over, Winston will climb aboard.

"I'll have to get the most out of every workout," Winston says of when it's time to put on the baseball cleats. "Every baseball workout will have to mean more to me than anyone else on the team. And then it will take some extra work on the side."

Winston also has to adjust to a different set of teammates as he moves from sport to sport.

"In every sport, the guys are just naturally different in a way I can't explain, but it's different," Winston said. "But there is one thing I've noticed everywhere and that's everyone wants to win. And if that's the attitude, then I can adjust to the people."

Winston won't say which sport offers the best set of teammates, he just says, "Heck, most of the guys in school are my teammates — at one time or another."

DIVE: Cultreri rallies to reach state

ish second between the Spry sisters of Abilene High, as Amber Spry won the district crown and Brittani Spry finished third.

"I was really mad with myself," said Cultreri. "I went home and cried for two hours. Then I went out and bought $100 worth of clothes."

Perhaps thanks in part to mall therapy, Cultreri got a second wind when it came to the region meet. After the first day, it was apparent that Lubbock High's Meghan White would have the score to beat and she finished with 313.95 points, well ahead of the rest of the pack.

But the real battle would be for second place and the final spot in the state meet. Once again, it came down to a battle between Cultreri and one of the Spry sisters, this time Brittani. The two exchanged positions several times over the final day.

"They had a running score displayed the entire meet and I kept my back to it the whole time," said Cultreri.

After completing her final dive, Cultreri had cumulative total of 276.20 points, which was good for second place at the time, but Brittani Spry had one final dive. She came up short, as her total was 274.10 points, which sent Cultreri to the state meet.

"It was pretty much open for the taking and it was just Katie who wanted it more," said Mangum.

Cultreri hasn't taken the most conventional path to the state meet, so it's understandable that she's not setting any outlandish goals.

"Not making a fool out of myself," is what Cultreri said her main objective is in Austin. "I'd like to make finals."

MHS girls have four picked to 4-5A team

Staff Report

When somebody looks back at this year's All-District 4-5A girls basketball team, it would be easy to conclude that 2000-01 was the best season ever for Midland on the hardwood.

And the Midland High girls in particular will have a lot to brag about.

MHS, which finished 12-0 in winning 4-5A and 26-5 overall, had four players honored with first team selections along with the district MVP, senior Edrea Rogers, capping her third straight selection to the all-district team. The other individual honor went to coach Terry Gray, who in his second year at the helm of the Lady Dawgs, took them to the regional quarterfinals.

Joining Rogers on the first team were fellow MHS seniors Laura Koch and Jenny Jones and junior LaQuori Harris. But the Lady Dawgs weren't the only ones from Midland to make an impact on the first team, as Midland Lee had two players who were selected in senior Shamera Bryson and junior Wykia Wallace.

Rogers concluded one of the most impressive careers in the city's girls high school history Tuesday night at Chaparral Center in Midland High's 87-65 loss to Lubbock Coronado in the regional quarterfinals. She was the leader of the team for the second straight year, but her 14.2 points a game tell only part of the story of her value to the team.

Rogers, at 5-foot-9, often drew the task of defending players two or three inches taller than her, and more often than not held her own. She perhaps came up the biggest in a 47-45 win over Abilene Cooper in the first half of district, as she led a rally from a 10-point deficit with nine of her 19 points in the fourth quarter, and she set up the game-winning basket with a steal in the final seconds.

Like, Rogers, Koch is a repeat selection to the first team, and she was also part of the previous Midland High team to go unbeaten in district in coach Jim Raughton's final season two years ago. Koch proved to be a viable second option, averaging 10.9 points a game, and even though at 5-9 she didn't have the height of many post players, she was capable of big rebounding games, such as against Coronado when she had a game-high 11 rebounds.

While Rogers and Koch provided inside scoring, the third senior, Jones, got the majority of her points from the outside. Jones averaged 10.2 points a game, and led the Lady Dawgs with 42 3-pointers. Jones averaged in double figures despite not starting every game in district.

Harris ran the Midland High offense at point guard, and showed her growth from the previous season as a sophomore, when she was a second team all-district pick. She often created offense with her drives to the hoop despite standing only 5-4. Harris, who averaged 7.8 points a game, came up especially big in the playoffs, hitting a pair of 3-pointers in the fourth quarter of Midland High's 43-40 area round win over El Paso Coronado, and scoring a game-high 19 points against Lubbock Coronado.

Rogers and Koch weren't the only Midlanders to repeat as first team picks. Bryson made it for the second straight season as she led the Lady Rebels with 13.1 points a game.

In her first year on the varsity, Wallace provided Bryson with plenty of support. The 5-8 Wallace established herself as a legitimate post player, averaging 10.5 points a game.

Midland High sophomore Lauren Lucas was named to the second team. Lee had two players named to the second team in senior Shandi Neatherlin and sophomore Lauren Hinsley.

MHS senior Page Price was an honorable mention selection as were two other players from Lee, senior Kim Strambler and junior Ashley Riggs.

Lady Raiders slip by No. 16 Colorado

Associated Press

■ Texas Women

BOULDER, Colo. — The road back from arthroscopic knee surgery has been slow and tedious for Natalie Ritchie. But the freshman guard showed little if any affect of her Nov. 10 surgery on Wednesday, hitting a 3-pointer and two free throws in the final two minutes as No. 15 Texas Tech erased a 12-point second half deficit to beat No. 16 Colorado 68-61.

"Natalie has been working her way back through the last 10 games," Texas Tech coach Marsha Sharp said. "This was by far the most minutes (16) she's had in a while and she really hit a big shot tonight."

Plenette Pierson had a game-high 25 points and 13 rebounds for Texas Tech (20-5, 11-3 Big 12) in beating Colorado (19-6, 10-4) for the sixth consecutive time. The Red Raiders haven't lost to Colorado since Jan. 11, 1997 and with the victory posted its 20th consecutive 20-win season.

"The shots were designed for me," said Ritchie, who scored all nine of her points in the second half. "The ball movement was good and I had wide open looks."

No. 8 Oklahoma 86, No. 24 Baylor 76

NORMAN, Okla. — Caton Hill scored eight points during a game-ending a 11-0 run that carried No. 8 Oklahoma to a victory over No. 24 Baylor.

MCA: Teams head for TCAL tournament

the state quarterfinals.

The boys will play at 9 p.m. today against the winner between two schools from the Houston area, Brook Hills Christian and Cypress Christian. They'll play that game at Mountain View College in Irving (tournament games will be held at several different sites in Irving).

"I really don't know what to expect," Miller said. "We could get up there and have an easy time, or we could there and really get beat."

The MCA girls will wait until 10:30 a.m. Friday to play the winner between San Jacinto and San Antonio Sunnybrook, which was the TCAL 2A champ last year, Beattie said. She isn't bothered by not knowing much about her potential opponent or by not knowing who her opponent is until the day before the game.

"(Not knowing) doesn't concern me, because we'll have to play the best to win," said Beattie, who played college basketball at the University of Montana. "We're a young team. Sometimes it's best if we don't know much about them.

"You've got to learn to go with it," she said.

The MCA girls are led by sophomore guards Hilary Posey and Rachel Tuck, who average 13 and 12 points per game, respectively.

"They're our backbone of our team," Beattie said. "That 10th grade class is just phenomenal."

There are no seniors on the MCA girls' roster. Kendall Doan is the eighth-grader who starts at point guard. Juniors Emily Minor and Megan McLane fill out the starting five, and Ruth Steele is the best player off the bench.

Steele, McLane, Posey and Tuck all earned all-state status last season in TCAL's Class A, Beattie said.

The MCA boys have one senior, post Tyler Gillit, who averages about 10 points per game, Miller said.

"Two juniors are really our scorers," Miller said. "David Dunn shoots 40 percent from 3-point range and averages right around 19 points a game. Our other scorer is Matt Power, our point guard. He averages around 17 a game and shoots 45 percent from 3-point range."

Two more juniors round out the starting lineup. Dustin Barker provides rebounding, Miller said, and Ryan Bartholomee is the team's best defender at guard.

Wally Dunn is the aforementioned seventh-grader who is the team's sixth man, but at six feet tall, he's hardly an average seventh-grader.

"If you came to a game, you'd never know he was a seventh-grader," Miller said.

Wally Dunn will have to make his minutes off the bench count, because the TCAL tourney will be his last varsity action for a while. Unlike TCAL, TAPPS has a limit on eligibility of four years, effectively keeping junior high players off rosters. Dunn will have to play junior varsity next year.

But that's just the price MCA will have to pay to move up and keep growing.

"We've been successful (in TCAL)," Miller said. "We hope to continue that next year in TAPPS."

SOCCER: Lee teams need victories today

(From 1C)

"We need to win the games that we lost in the first round," Simpson said. "We need to turn some of those games in our favor and put them in the win column. One of the factors is keeping everybody healthy. We've been hit pretty hard with the flu virus. Hopefully that's over. If it is, then we should start on the road to improvement."

Besides the flu, which Simpson said seems to move around to different players, the Lady Rebels have been hit hard by one injury. Senior Raffi Belizaire injured her knee when she scored the winning goal against MHS on Jan. 23.

She's only played sparingly in two games since then. She won't play today either, because she'll be out of town on a college recruiting trip, Simpson said.

The Lady Dawgs are eager to get another shot at the Lady Rebels, Hodkinson said.

"We don't need to talk (with the players) about any revenge," he said. "We know it was a close game and things went their way. We're looking forward to getting them here at the Boneyard."

Midland Lee's Barbara Butts dribbles against Abilene High earlier this season. Butts and the Lady Rebels are a game behind Midland High, whom they'll play today at 4:30 p.m.

The MHS girls are undefeated on the main field at the Boneyard.

MHS began using the Audrey Gill Sports Complex at Loop 250 and Big Spring Street for soccer and softball last spring.

When it first opened, the west field wasn't ready, and some games were played at the east field, including a loss to Lee. But since moving to the west field, the Lady Dawgs haven't lost.

The MHS boys have lost on the west field, and they've lost at the site of today's game, Lee Soccer Field — twice last season, in fact. But this year represents a turnaround. MHS is winning, while Lee has struggled to a 1-5 record, 2-8 overall.

"We play in a great district," Lee coach Shane Barden said. "Everybody has improved. I told everybody before the season that the top three would be Midland High, San Angelo (Central) and (Odessa) Permian."

They are the top three. Central is 5-1, just behind MHS, and Permian is tied for third with Odessa High, both at 3-3.

"We've improved every game," Barden said. "If you ask the coaches we've played, they'd say we've improved."

Improvement is the goal for the Midland High boys in the second half. To be precise, the goal is more goals.

"We know we have to score a lot more goals in the second go-round than we did in the first go-round," said de Aragao, whose team has five one-goal wins in its six district games. "Too many of our games have been close. We need to distance ourselves from our opponents."

Lee has allowed a lot of goals (17) while scoring only one in six district games. Still, de Aragao doesn't expect an easy game.

"We know Lee is very good, and they're going to play their hardest," de Aragao said. "This will be the last time they'll play against guys that they have played against since they were five or six years old. That's why this is so big. You throw everything out the window. Forget the records."

Hodkinson, standing nearby, nodded repeatedly as de Aragao spoke those words.

"Lee is definitely not out of it," said Hodkinson, referring to the Lady Rebels. "They'll be fighting for it."

Tech breaks losing streak in final seconds

LUBBOCK — The celebration didn't last long after Texas Tech's 65-64 victory over Nebraska Wednesday night, which ended the Red Raiders' seven-game losing streak.

Andy Ellis and Andre Emmett did a high five at center court after Ellis sank a basket with just over four seconds left to clinch the win for the Red Raiders. That was about it.

"We haven't had a lot of positives this month," Tech coach James Dickey said. "We are going to try and build on this. We're just going to enjoy this very briefly. There was not a lot of jumping around because we have to go on."

Tech's last victory came when the Red Raiders upset No. 21 Oklahoma, 60-59, at home. After the celebrations died down Jan. 16, the Red Raiders went on a seven-game losing streak.

"We had a little bit more emotion tonight," Ellis said. "We finished the game. We put ourselves in the position to win it, and we went out and won it."

That hasn't happened for Tech in a while.

It did on Wednesday when Ellis, a Lamesa High graduate, sank the basket with just over four seconds to go. Nebraska had led 64-63 with just under a minute to play.

The Cornhuskers had trailed for most of the game, but moved ahead of Tech on four Cookie Belcher free throws.

With 11.5 seconds to go, Tech's Jamal Brown missed a layup and the ball was knocked out of bounds. Rodney Fields tried to inbound the ball for Nebraska, but Tech's Brown slid in front and scooped up the pass. The Red Raiders were then able to get the ball to Ellis, who put it up and in.

"That's what conference games come down to: one or two plays," Dickey said. "Those are the types of plays we've been in the position to make and we haven't made them."

Ellis finished with 14 points.

Tech led throughout most of the second half, increasing its 38-36 halftime lead to 48-41 before Nebraska (13-12, 6-6) went on a 17-11 run allowing the Cornhuskers to take a one point advantage, 60-59. Tech battled back to a 63-60 lead on an Ellis free throw and an Emmett 3-point shot with 3:31 to go.

But the Red Raiders didn't capitalize on Ellis' next visit to the free-throw line and Brown missed another 3-point shot before Belcher was fouled twice.

Cliff Owens added another 12 for Tech and Emmett 10. The Red Raiders scored 24 points off of Nebraska's 17 turnovers, compared to the Cornhuskers' 14 points off of 13 turnovers.

"We are who we are and we're consistently inconsistent," Nebraska coach Barry Collier said. "I think we got outplayed."

Texas 69, Baylor 59

WACO — Maurice Evans scored a game-high 18 points and helped hold Baylor's Terry Black to seven points as Texas topped the Bears.

The Longhorns (20-7, 9-4 Big 12) got clutch free-throw shooting down the stretch to protect what was a one-point lead at the 3:14 mark. In the last 1:18 of the game, Texas went 8-for-10 from the line, while forcing Baylor to miss its last three field-goal attempts.

Baylor (16-8, 5-8) overcame a 33-27 halftime deficit by outscoring Texas 19-7 in the first 7:30 of the second half. Matt Sayman hit three foul shots to give Baylor its first lead at the 14-minute mark, then sank a 3-pointer to push the Bears ahead 46-40 with about 12 minutes to go in the game.

Oklahoma State 82, Texas A&M 76

COLLEGE STATION — Maurice Baker's perfect 4-for-4 performance on the free-throw line in the final two minutes gave Oklahoma State a victory over Texas A&M. Baker finished the night with 19 points.

The Cowboys (16-7, 7-5 Big 12) claimed their first road victory since Jan. 17 while shooting 59 percent from the floor despite committing 22 turnovers.

Fredrik Jonzen scored 13 points and had nine rebounds and seven assists for the Cowboys. Antoine Broxsie scored 15 points and Victor Williams added 12.

Houston 81, Tulane 76

NEW ORLEANS — George Williams had 22 points, and Patrick Okafor and Alton Ford had 16 each as Houston beat Tulane.

Houston (7-18, 4-9 in Conference USA) took a 43-34 halftime lead, but the Green Wave pulled to 77-76 with 54 seconds left. But Dominic Smith hit a pair of foul shots for Houston, Brandon Spann missed a 3-point shot that would have tied the game for Tulane, and Marcus Oliver hit another two free throws for Houston.

Last action: Midland College had no problem against Clarendon with a 102-50 home win against Clarendon on Monday. South Plains dropped an 80-75 decision at New Mexico Military Institute.

Notes & Quotes: Midland College coach Junsie Cotten doesn't want his team to get caught up in thinking too much about what's going on with the rest of the conference. He wants his players to focus on themselves and trying to get better. Of course that may be easier said than done considering the Chaps are in a neck-and-neck race with Odessa College for the conference championship. "We have to take care of our business," Cotten said. "We can't worry about anybody else."... On Jan. 29, MC handed the Texans a 66-50 loss in SPC head coach Steve Green's return to Midland. Green was coach of the Chaps in the early 90s. Cotten expects Green to have his troops ready for tonight's battle. "Going to play up there will be a tough task for us," Cotten said. "They have some talent and they're a scary team. If we get too high on our horses and we forget where we come from, then they could beat us. On the flip side, if we continue to defend like we've been defending and get a lot of guys some minutes then we could present a big problem to them."

Rockets beat Timberwolves to throw hat in West contention

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The Houston Rockets are getting balanced scoring and are slowly creeping into the Western Conference playoff race.

NBA Roundup

Maurice Taylor scored 17 of his 21 points in the second half as the Rockets beat Minnesota 89-83 Wednesday night, extending the Timberwolves' losing streak to five games.

Houston won for the seventh time in eight games and moved within three games of the Timberwolves in the hunt for the final playoff spot in the West. The Rockets also snapped a six-game losing skid against Minnesota.

"If you would've told me we'd hold (Cuttino) Mobley to 10 and (Steve) Francis to 12 and lose, I wouldn't have believed you," Minnesota coach Flip Saunders said.

Mobley and Francis, the league's third-highest scoring backcourt, were just 6-for-30 from the field. But Hakeem Olajuwon had 13 points and 13 rebounds and Taylor helped neutralize the Wolves' Kevin Garnett underneath.

Olajuwon is averaging 15 points and 11 rebounds over the last eight games. Taylor had 23 points in 29 minutes Tuesday against Boston.

"It's a real good sign," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "I'm pleased with how we won it — with defense and rebounding. It was the kind of game where we wouldn't draw up a play and score on it. We had to scramble."

Minnesota had an 11-game winning streak heading into the All-Star break but has sputtered since, thanks to poor shooting.

Garnett had 23 points and 15 rebounds but shot just 9-for-20. Wally Szczerbiak had 20 points and eight rebounds but was 7-for-18. Terrell Brandon had 16 points, but just four after halftime.

The Wolves shot 24 percent and were outscored 28-12 in the second quarter. The 12 points were a season-low in the second period for Minnesota, which closed within three points three times in the fourth quarter but failed to convert several short shots and wide-open looks.

Minnesota shot just 21-for-63 (33 percent) over the final three quarters.

"I don't think it was their defense, it was just us not being aggressive," Szczerbiak said. "There is a fine line. We needed to make a couple more shots."

Walt Williams added 12 points in a reserve role for Houston.

"We've been waiting for this to happen," Mobley said. "Steve and I shot really bad, but we played defense and everyone else stepped it up."

Francis, who turned 24 Wednesday, left the game with a bruised rib on his left side late in the first quarter. He returned midway through the second period and said his injury didn't affect his shooting.

Francis was more eager to talk about the Rockets' improving on-court chemistry.

"It's not if we can play together, I think we can play together," Francis said. "I think we're all starting to fall into our roles."

Lakers 101, Spurs 99

SAN ANTONIO — Shaquille O'Neal scored 22 points as the Lakers beat the Spurs.

The Lakers won despite missing Kobe Bryant, the NBA's third-leading scorer with 29.6 average. Bryant sat out the game after spraining his right ankle Tuesday night when he stepped on O'Neal's foot during the Lakers win over Dallas. On Sunday, he strained his left ankle in a loss to Indiana.

Los Angeles overcome a San Antonio defense that had limited opponents to 42 percent shooting. The Lakers, who received double-figure scoring from seven players, shot 55.4 percent, topping their average of 46 percent.

The Lakers took their biggest lead of the game, 96-84, with 2:59 left in the fourth quarter on a 3-pointer by Robert Horry. San Antonio's Terry Porter then sparked a 7-0 run with a 3-pointer, a steal that led to Derek Anderson's dunk and two free throws to cut the Spurs' deficit to five points, 96-91, with 1:15 left.

But the Lakers used four free throws by Brian Shaw and another by O'Neal in the final minute to seal the win.

76ers 107, Grizzlies 91

PHILADELPHIA — Allen Iverson scored 36 points as the 76ers beat Vancouver, snapping the Grizzlies franchise-record five-game winning streak.

Iverson shot 13-for-17 from the line as the Sixers won their fifth straight.

George Lynch had 16 points and 10 rebounds, and Eric Snow had 11 points and seven assists for Philadelphia, which improved to 21-2 when scoring more than 100 points. Matt Geiger added 10 points and a season-high 10 rebounds, and Tyrone Hill finished with 12 rebounds.

Shareef Abdur-Rahim had 27 points for the Grizzlies, who are 0-5 in Philadelphia and 1-10 against the Sixers. Michael Dickerson scored 16 and Mike Bibby added 14 points and six assists.

Suns 100, Heat 85

MIAMI — Cliff Robinson scored 25 points and Shawn Marion had 16 points and 18 rebounds as Phoenix won for the eighth time in 11 games.

Rodney Rogers added 22 points and eight rebounds for the Suns, who improved to 2-1 on their road trip.

Brian Grant scored 21 points and reserve Anthony Carter added 19 as Miami lost its third straight game. The Heat, who had won 11 of their last 12 home games, had not lost three consecutive games since November.

Pistons 90, Knicks 85

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Jerry Stackhouse scored 32 points as Detroit survived a fourth-quarter rally by New York.

The Pistons led by as much as 23 and entered the fourth quarter with a 77-58 lead only to see it almost disappear.

Detroit's Joe Smith scored 20 points and Chucky Atkins added 16. The Pistons blocked a season-high 12 shots.

New York's Marcus Camby had 24 points and 11 rebounds.

Nets 113, Raptors 111

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Stephon Marbury had 35 points and a season-high 14 assists and New Jersey made 13 3-pointers — tying its most since joining the NBA in 1976.

Keith Van Horn added 28 points for the Nets. Lucious Harris added 16 and Kenyon Martin 15.

Vince Carter finished with 39 points for Toronto, which lost for the third time in four games. Morris Peterson added 17 points and Mark Jackson 16.

Clippers 100, Cavaliers 94

CLEVELAND — Lamar Odom scored 23 points, including a key 3-pointer with 2:14 remaining, as Los Angeles snapped a nine-game losing streak against the Cavaliers and won in Cleveland for the first time since Dec. 8, 1992 — when the Cavs played at Richfield Coliseum.

Quentin Richardson added 19 points, including 12 in the fourth period, and rookie Darius Miles had 16 points and 10 rebounds for the Clippers, who won consecutive road games for the first time since 1997.

SuperSonics 127, Nuggets 98

SEATTLE — Gary Payton scored 30 points as Seattle snapped a three-game losing streak and won for the first time since the All-Star break.

Payton had 15 of his points in the first quarter and shot 14-for-20 against the Nuggets' porous defense. He also had 12 assists and four rebounds.

Ruben Patterson scored 21 points, Rashard Lewis 20 and Vin Baker 16 for the Sonics.

Nieuwendyk scores 900th point as Stars finally defeat Wild, 6-2

By Stephen Hawkins
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — With Mike Modano out of the game with a concussion, Joe Nieuwendyk reached a milestone and delivered a victory for the Dallas Stars.

Nieuwendyk had two goals and an assist, becoming the 73rd NHL player to reach 900 career points, as the Stars beat the expansion Minnesota Wild 6-2. The Wild had won the first two games against the team they replaced in Minnesota.

"I didn't think that they changed their game, but we were a lot hungrier and got some good looks at the net," Nieuwendyk said. "We went after them hard. We're getting contributions from a lot of people right now."

The Wild, whose first NHL season comes eight years after the Stars moved South from Minnesota, beat Dallas 6-0 and 2-1 in the first two meetings.

Brenden Morrow, who assisted on Nieuwendyk's first goal, put Dallas ahead to stay when his power-play goal with 1:27 left in the second period made it 3-2. He scored his 13th goal of the season when he pushed in a puck that bounced off Jaime Langenbrunner after Darryl Sydor's slap shot.

"We put a lot of emotion into it, we played with an edge," Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said. "To get six goals and be able to spread it around, that feels good. As the game went on, we got more feisty."

Less than a minute after Minnesota went ahead 2-1 on Sylvain Blouin's unassisted goal at 7:17 of the second period, Nieuwendyk and Brett Hull set up the game-tying goal by Jere Lehtinen. Nieuwendyk scored 7:31 into the third after he got control of a pass from Kirk Muller, that was deflected by John MacLean, to make it 4-2.

Nieuwendyk has 23 goals and 21 assists this season, his sixth in Dallas. In 1,195 games over 15 NHL seasons, he has 463 goals and 438 assists.

"They came out harder. Beating a team like that two times, they're going to be ready to go," Minnesota captain Brad Bombardir said.

Modano, one of three Dallas players who also played for the Stars franchise in Minnesota, was injured when he was tackled by Antti Laaksonen about eight minutes in. The Stars said the concussion was "very mild" and that Modano's status was day to day. The center will be evaluated again Thursday.

Hitchcock said Modano was feeling fine after the game.

"We think he'll be ready Friday for the Boston game," Hitchcock said. "(Modano's) left arm and shoulder slammed into his face. That did all of the damage."

The initial Dallas lead came on Nieuwendyk's rebound goal 2:33 in. Grant Marshall's back-hander was stopped and Morrow got a stick on the puck before Nieuwendyk slapped it past Manny Fernandez for a 1-0 lead.

Dallas goalie Eddie Belfour stopped 24 of 26 shots and is 6-1-1 in his last eight starts.

Fernandez, Belfour's backup in Dallas last season, stopped 52 of 53 shots against his former team the first two games. He gave up six goals in 32 shots this time.

"They definitely played smarter," Fernandez said. "If I'm going to give up that many to anybody, I don't want it to be Dallas. But you just have to turn the page."

The Stars added two more goals late in the third, on Benoit Hogue's wrist shot from the slot and MacLean's power-play goal. Minnesota had tied the game at 1 on a power play goal from Lubomir Skeras 11 minutes after Nieuwendyk's first goal.

Toombs, Ferguson say family led them to depart A&M early

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION — Ja'Mar Toombs and Robert Ferguson had their reasons for going against trusted advice and leaving the security of the Texas A&M campus for the National Football League.

It's all about family.

Toombs, a bone-jarring fullback, and Ferguson, a circus-catching wide receiver, had just started to tap their talents when they both decided after the Aggies' snowbound Independence Bowl loss to declare for the NFL draft in April. Their next step begins Thursday at the NFL combines in Indianapolis.

"My whole family is revolving around me right now and not just my mom, my aunts too," Toombs said following a workout Wednesday. "They are all waiting for me to make it. My mom made a lot of sacrifices for me. It will be good for the family."

Ferguson attended Tyler Junior College two seasons before signing with the Aggies. He didn't stay long enough to get the full star treatment in the media guide: His only appearance was in the "newcomers" section.

Still, he got plenty of attention on the field in less than one full season with the Aggies. He was the Big 12 leading receiver despite missing one game and playing another injured.

Like Toombs, family considerations led Ferguson to skip his senior year with the Aggies. His grandmother, Louise Ferguson of Houston played a role in Ferguson's decision.

"I have some things to take care of," Ferguson said. "She is definitely a part of it but I don't want to make it look like she's the only reason. I don't want to say I'm being rewarded for a lot of hard work.

"My reward will come when I get to the Super Bowl and this is just another step in accomplishing that. I just want to become a piece of the puzzle for a team."

Toombs and Ferguson both likely will get their chances. Although they were advised by coach R.C. Slocum and others they could improve their draft status by playing another season in college, both charted their own courses.

"Everything I heard was kind of random and different, not anything concrete about which round," Ferguson said. "But when I heard that I had a chance and basically it was up to me, that's all I needed.

"I respect Coach Slocum and I respect his opinion. It was something to think about. It's true if you stay in school longer you can get better. I understood that but it just came down to me deciding now is the time."

The 6-foot, 257-pound Toombs rushed for 1,360 yards in three seasons with the Aggies. He gained 355 and scored 14 touchdowns last season but his best performance was the Independence Bowl at Shreveport, La., when he plowed through the snow for 193 yards.

Ferguson caught 58 passes for the Aggies last season, the third best total in school history, and set a school record with 885 yards. He scored six touchdowns.

"We talked about it (turning pro) almost every day during the season, about all the 'what ifs,'" Toombs said. "Before the bowl game, we told each other this might be our last game at A&M so let's make it a good one."

Slocum understands more than some fans, the lure of the pros on a player wanting to make an impact on his family's financial situation

"I see the big picture but it's easy for outsiders to pass judgment on their decision," Slocum said. "I think waiting until the following year, a guy can play up in the draft and that's good financially. But if you are in a need situation right now, that's doesn't always matter."

Woodruff upsets Sampras at Kroger St. Jude

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Top-seeded Pete Sampras lost to Chris Woodruff 7-6 (4), 6-2 Wednesday night in his first match at the Kroger St. Jude tennis tournament.

Woodruff took control of the match early in the second set. Sampras, who won the tournament in 1996, failed to score a point until the third game of the set. Woodruff broke again in the seventh game for a 5-2 lead and served out the match.

"He was coming up with some great returns and seeing the ball great," Sampras said. "I was kind of caught off guard."

Sampras, who entered the tournament after losing in the fourth round of the Australian Open, said he felt fine but needs to play more to sharpen his game.

No. 4 Nicolas Lapentti also lost, falling 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 (2) to Sebastien Larue.

P&G, Coke deal

NEW YORK (AP) — Care for a Minute Maid fruit juice to wash down your Pringles potato chips? Procter & Gamble and Coca-Cola sure hope so.

The consumer-products giants are forming a jointly owned company to sell their drinks and snacks, The Wall Street Journal reported on Wednesday. The new company, with about 40 brands, 6,000 employees and 15 manufacturing plants, would have annual sales of around $4.2 billion.

An announcement of the deal was expected Wednesday.

Coke brings its global distribution system to the table, while P&G boasts research expertise.

Coke will contribute to the new company its Minute Maid juice division, which includes Hi-C and Five-Alive beverages, plus its Fruitopia drink. P&G will contribute Pringles chips and Sunny Delight juice drinks.

The new company, yet to be named, will have its own management and two directors from each parent company. Veteran Coke executive Donald Short will be the chief executive officer.

The company will develop and market new juice-based drinks and snacks.

Energy buyout

NEW YORK (AP) — In the latest of a wave of energy company combinations, Energy East Corp. has agreed to acquire RGS Energy Group Inc. for $1.4 billion, the companies announced Tuesday.

The deal would create an energy provider serving nearly 3 million customers in upstate New York, Connecticut, Maine, Vermont and Massachusetts. It will have annual revenues of about $5 billion and have nearly $10 billion in assets.

Inflation surge triggers sell-off

By Lisa Singhania
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Nasdaq composite index fell to its lowest level in nearly two years Wednesday after an unexpected surge in inflation intensified investors' fears about the future.

The Dow Jones industrial average also plunged more than 200 points in heavy trading after the government reported the biggest increase in consumer prices in 10 months.

Analysts said the data made already nervous investors even more reluctant to take strong positions in a market that might not recover for a while.

"These inflation numbers were something that was not supposed to happen, and when you're in a tenuous market ... investors get scared," said Barry Hyman, chief investment strategist for Weatherly Securities. "There's just too many unknowns in front of the market at this point."

The tech-focused Nasdaq dropped 49.41 to 2,268.94, a decline of 2.1 percent and its lowest close since March 3, 1999. It is now 55 percent below its all-time closing high of 5,048.62, reached last March.

The Dow closed down 204.30 at 10,526.58, a loss of 1.9 percent and its weakest finish since Jan. 12.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 23.67 to 1,255.27, a 1.9 percent drop and its lowest close in 16 months.

All three indexes are all down for the year. The Dow is off 2.4 percent for the year, the Nasdaq down 8.2 percent and the S&P off 4.9 percent.

Wednesday's losses came on a Labor Department report showing a 0.6 percent gain in its Consumer Price Index for January — chiefly because of increases in natural gas and electricity prices, which have since eased.

Those numbers caught some market watchers off guard, although many believe that, at least for now, the data is an aberration rather than the beginning of a trend.

"In the current circumstances, these numbers are not as big a deal," said Merrill Lynch chief economist Bruce Steinberg. "The economy is weak and you just don't get inflation developing in these circumstances."

Investors were not reassured, however. A broad stock sell-off intensified late in the day after fluctuating earlier in the session.

Financials were pulled lower by banker J.P. Morgan Chase, down $2.60 at $47.35. The Dow fell on losses in its manufacturing sectors: 3M dropped $1.98 to $111.26 and Boeing lost $1.65 to $60.20.

Technology also weighed down the markets as bargain hunters pushed the battered sector's stock prices higher only to be replaced by sellers seeking to preserve their profits.

Oracle fell 13 cents to $23, while Intel, which is also a Dow component, dropped 69 cents to $30.75. IBM's $3.99 slip to $107.51 also hurt the blue chip index.

Utility stocks, which are viewed as safer investment in a weak economy, fared better. Edison International rose 35 cents to $13.45 and PG&E was up 7 cents at $13.06.

Health care stocks were also strong, led higher by Merck, up 81 cents at $78.71.

But Wall Street was primarily in a selling mood — a reflection, analysts said, of investors' doubt about whether the economy and whether the Federal Reserve Board is doing enough to stimulate growth.

The Fed is expected to cut interest rates for a third time this year when it meets again next month. But investors are no longer sure the action will be enough to improve corporate profits anytime soon.

"People are starting to get concerned that things are really bad. Even if the inflation is not a long-term story, it's still going to hurt market sentiment," said Hyman, the Weatherly Securities analyst.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange. Consolidated volume came to 1.43 billion shares, ahead of the 1.34 billion reported Tuesday.

The Russell 2000 index dropped 7.63 to 483.51.

Overseas, stocks were weak. Japan's Nikkei stock average fell 1.1 percent. Germany's DAX index was down 1.6 percent, Britain's FT-SE 100 dropped 0.1 percent, and France's CAC-40 tumbled 1.3 percent.

Mint director wants people to spend more Sacagawea dollars

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON — The director of the U.S. Mint wants to put more of a jingle in your pocket and less paper in your wallet.

Jay Johnson came to Texas on Wednesday to tout an effort by Houston-based Randalls Food Markets Inc. to boost public use of the year-old coin the Mint has dubbed the "Golden Dollar."

"It does take time to change people's habits," Johnson acknowledged. "And basically that's what this is all about — changing people's habits."

Over 1 billion of the gold-colored coins have been manufactured carrying the likeness of Sacagawea, a Shoshone Indian who accompanied explorers Meriwether Lewis and William Clark when they trekked across the continent two centuries ago. Johnson says some 700 million of those are in circulation.

Despite the seemingly big numbers, finding the coins in everyday use is another matter.

"They haven't been able to find them, frankly," Johnson said. "People, I'm telling you, save them. Every man, woman and child ought to be able to find one and get them but they're saving them and they're liking them."

So the Mint this month began a program with San Francisco-based Safeway Inc., parent company of Houston-based Randalls, to get the dollar coins more into daily use.

The coin is not really gold. It's mostly copper inside with a manganese and brass finish. Slightly larger than a quarter, which costs about 4 1/2 cents to make and is the most-used coin, Johnson said it costs about 12 cents to make the new dollar coin, about the same cost of the familiar greenback $1 bill. But while the average bill lasts only about 13 months, mint officials figure the dollar coin has a life span of 30 years.

"Over the years, the government would save money if we had dollar coins versus dollar bills," Johnson said.

Agency seeks consumer input on gas issues

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Many Midlanders who experienced recent price shock with natural gas bills two to four times higher than normal now have a way to let the Texas Railroad Commission know how they feel about it, and perhaps make a difference.

The commission, which regulates oil and gas in Texas, has invited Texans to let them know what they think about natural gas prices and other natural gas issues and to offer suggestions via the Internet.

The commission will use the comments in a daylong hearing on natural gas issues set for Monday. Among the natural gas issues to be discussed at the hearing are: incentives for utilities to minimize the gas costs passed through to consumers; methods to better notify consumers of anticipated price fluctuations; and the impact of natural gas price fluctuations upon Texas industry and agriculture.

The purpose for gathering the comments and the hearing is to provide information and specific short-term recommendations to the Texas Legislature on natural gas issues. Commissioner Charles Matthews said the comments could help the Texas Legislature in creating laws to help consumers. "We are working to make sure all voices are heard."

"The Internet provides an opportunity for all Texans to be part of this very important process," said Michael Williams, chairman of the commission. "Comments from consumers who have been impacted by gas prices are not only welcome, but encouraged."

Said Commissioner Tony Garza: "With Texans facing some of the highest natural gas bills in recent memory, who better to ask for suggestions than consumers?"

An online comment form can be found at the Railroad Commission Web site at (www.rrc.state.tx.us). All online comments must be submitted by Monday, Feb. 26, the day of the hearing on natural gas prices.

Wide open spaces still make Lone Star State the place to be

By M. Ray Perryman

There's a saying that everyone is either a Texan or a wannabe Texan. Whether that's true or not would be unfair for me to say since I'm a native of the Lone Star State.

Perryman

However, it sure seems that a lot of people are wanting to move here. Conversely, due to the mobility of our society today, a lot of people also leave the state. It just so happens that the in-migration is typically significantly more than out-migration. For example, from 1996 through 1999, the net difference was almost 186,300.

Years ago, back when Texas was a young Republic, people across the United States and many parts of the world considered it the "promised land." Wide open spaces, cheap land and plenty of fresh opportunities. The letters "GTT" were often printed on doors of houses from which people moved when they headed this way. The letters stood for "Gone To Texas."

While people no longer leave GTT notices on their doors, they still pack up and move here in droves — 1,100 per day during the four-year period from 1996 through 1999.

The largest number of people making Texas their new home during those years came from California — some 175,700; about 125,100 left the Lone Star State for the Golden State. The net difference was about 50,000 on the plus side for Texas, or 27 percent of the total migration to the state.

Nearly half of the 1.62 million people who moved to Texas from 1996 through 1999 came from 10 states. From the most to the least, they are (in order by number of immigrants): California, Florida, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Illinois, New Mexico, Colorado, Georgia, Arkansas and Virginia.

Every single state in the Union, plus the District of Columbia, is always well represented among the immigrants who come to Texas each year. In 1999, the fewest number of folks came from Rhode Island (2,400). Three states — Minnesota, South Carolina, and Maine — had just about as many of their own residents leave and move to Texas as the total number from other states who went to them.

During the 1996 to 1999 period, approximately 113,000 people moved from foreign countries, principally from our Southern neighbor, Mexico. The net increase of internationals within the borders of Texas during these years was just over 32,000. This number represents 17 percent of the total net Texas migration for the year.

The vast majority of international immigrants, including both legal and estimated illegals, made their homes in the large metropolitan areas. In 1999 alone, nearly 23,000 settled in Houston, where one out of every seven persons is an immigrant and most are of Hispanic origin.

Dallas attracted about 17,000 from foreign countries in 1999. El Paso became the new home of about 6,000 immigrants the same year. The majority of this group came from Mexico. The McAllen-Edinburg-Mission and Fort Worth-Arlington areas round out the top five destinations of new immigrants.

The Texas population was approximately 20.9 million last April. Expectations are for the number of Texans to reach 21.5 million in 2003. The long-term forecast for the state's population is about 29.8 million residents by 2025.

Preliminary reports from the US Census Bureau indicate because of the substantial increase in population over the last decade (caused by net domestic migration and a birth rate that exceeds the national average), the number of Texas representatives in the U.S. House will probably increase from 30 to 32.

And that's good news to Texans and probably to all wannabes as well.

New Texas Rangers infielder Alex Rodriguez concentrates in the batting cage Wednesday after reporting to spring training in Port Charlotte, Fla., for his first day in a Rangers' uniform. Rodriguez signed for a record $252 million this past winter.

A-Rod hopes a championship will be payback for his fortune

By Fred Goodall
AP Sports Writer

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — Alex Rodriguez isn't sure anyone is worth $252 million.

Baseball's highest-paid player reported to spring training Wednesday, saying he felt overcompensated even before the Texas Rangers gave him the richest deal in sports history. He hopes to repay owner Tom Hicks by winning championships.

"I've always said the happiest I've ever been is when the Mariners signed me and gave me my first million dollars. At 17 years old, I thought that was pretty scary," Rodriguez said after joining his new teammates for a late-morning workout at Charlotte County Stadium.

"I'm almost embarrassed and ashamed of this contract, because my personality is to go out and play baseball. I've always been the underdog who's gone out and played well and tried to show everybody that I'm worth being the No. 1 pick or a 40-40 guy. Now, there's this 252 tag over my head. What I enjoy is the responsibility that goes along with it, both on and off the field."

A local county fair was in full swing across the street from the Rangers' complex, however there was no bigger attraction than Rodriguez, whose arrival brought more than 100 reporters and photographers to this small community on Florida's southwest coast.

Rodriguez took batting practice and fielded grounders before answering questions for about 25 minutes at an afternoon news conference. He said he felt a lot like a rookie driving to work after spending the past six spring trainings with the Mariners.

"It still hasn't hit me. When I was out there taking ground balls and hitting balls, it felt like I was dreaming," Rodriguez said. "It's been a very short winter. It's been a big learning experience for me. But I guess until the umpire says 'Play ball!' it's not going to hit home."

The Rangers, who lost 91 games last season, also added Andres Galarraga, Ken Caminiti and Midland native Randy Velarde to a formidable offensive attack that included Ivan Rodriguez and Rafael Palmeiro.

A-Rod said no one expects more of him than himself and he's not concerned about being able to handle the pressure that goes along with having a huge contract.

"I just hope people don't think because I signed that contract that I'm going to hit 90 home runs and drive in 200 runs because that's probably unrealistic," said Rodriguez, who hit .316 with 41 homers and 132 RBIs last season.

"I never dreamed in my wildest dreams that I would be making this type of money. Like I say, it's almost embarrassing to talk about it. I don't know if Michael Jordan or Bill Gates or Alexander the Great or anyone is worth this type of money. But that's the market that we're in today. That's what Mr. Hicks decided to pay me and now it's time to go pay him back and win him a few championships."

The shortstop settled into the Rangers clubhouse in a locker between Caminiti and Ivan Rodriguez, who said the team welcomes the attention the four-time All-Star will bring to the club. Pitcher Rick Helling said from everything he's seen and heard, A-Rod won't have any trouble fitting in.

"Will he be able to go hang out at the mall with guys? Probably not," Helling said. "But as far as going to dinner on the road and doing things like that, I don't see why not."

Manager Johnny Oates conceded that team chemistry will be important if the Rangers are going to transform into a championship team. But like the players, he's confident the size of A-Rod's contract won't become a distraction.

"If we have a million problems this year, that would be No. 1,000,000 ... I'm not so naive to think this is just another contract. But in talking with the players I don't see us having a problem. Everyone's tickled for him. It can't do anything but help them when their time comes," Oates said.

Truby's now a known quantity as Houston's third baseman

HOUSTON (AP) — Once seemingly destined to be a low-minors washout, Chris Truby enters the 2000 season as the Houston Astros' likely starting third baseman after showing impressive pop in his debut season.

"How unbelievable is that?" Truby asks.

Very, considering he went into 1998 spring training as a five-year veteran of Class A known as a good fielder with no power and a career .255 batting average.

"He came into spring training in 1998 in the category of, 'If we've got room for him, fine. If not, we'll let him go,' " Astros general manager Gerry Hunsicker said from Houston's Kissimmee, Fla., training camp. "He came that close to being released.

"At that point, he was 24 years old and still trying to get out of A ball. He always had good defensive skills, but he hadn't distinguished himself offensively. He had no power."

The Astros found room and Truby responded with power that elevated him to among the best sluggers in the club's farm system. Truby hit .292 and averaged 30 homers and 100 RBIs in 1998 and 1999 as he rose in the ranks.

"When you play in the minor leagues as long as I did, you're going to get that feeling that you might never make it to the big leagues," Truby said. "I spent parts of four seasons in the (low-level Class A) Midwest League, and usually when that happens, that's your cue that you're not going to make it.

"But I love the game. I was going to play until they told me I couldn't."

Truby credits weight training and time spent with Class A manager Manny Acta and hitting coach Jorge Orta, who worked out flaws in his swing.

Truby's big break last year came at the expense of Ken Caminiti, who suffered a season-ending wrist injury last June. Truby hit safely in 11 of his first 13 starts and ended the year with a .260 average, 11 homers and 59 RBIs in only 78 games.

Caminiti signed with the Texas Rangers after the Astros did not renew his contract.

Truby will try to improve his selectivity after walking only 10 times in 258 at-bats in 2000, easily the lowest walks-per-at-bat ratio among Astros regulars. Right now, though, Hunsicker says the positives are far outweighing the negatives.

"These are the kids you really root for privately because they've had so great a struggle and overcome so much adversity," Hunsicker said. "They could have easily quit along the way, but they persevered. They kept battling and found a way to get to the big leagues. It's extra rewarding to see the efforts of somebody like Truby."

Notes: A little less of outfielder Daryle Ward reported to spring training. He came in weighing about 220 pounds, about 10 pounds lighter than last season, an improvement manager Larry Dierker credits to improved diet in addition to already good workout habits. "It has to be a combination of the two things, and I think he knows that." ... The Astros began their first full-squad workouts Wednesday after five days of focusing on pitchers and catchers.

Stolen base king Henderson insists he can still contribute

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

Rickey Henderson sits at home in the Bay Area, watching the spring training highlights on TV and waiting for the phone to ring.

"It's strange," he said Wednesday. "You're supposed to be there, and I'm not."

No job yet for the greatest leadoff hitter in baseball history. No possibilities right now, either.

Instead, he's back in San Francisco. Working out daily — and wondering.

Could the stolen base king's career be finished at age 42? Will he ever achieve the major milestones that would further ensure his future place in the Hall of Fame?

"I don't know what to say. I don't know what's the catch or what's wrong," he said. "I don't know what I have to do to get the opportunity to go to camp and win a job."

Henderson needs 86 hits to reach No. 3,000. He's three walks short of breaking Babe Ruth's career mark (2,062) and needs to score 68 times to top Ty Cobb's major league record of 2,245 runs.

"There's some neat numbers out there, sure, but that's not why I play," he said. "I know I still enjoy the game, being on the field and competing."

Henderson is coming off a difficult season in which he stole 36 bases while playing for the Seattle Mariners and the New York Mets.

Henderson hit .219 in 31 games for the Mets, was released and signed with Seattle. He batted .238 with four home runs and 30 RBIs in 92 games for the Mariners, then scored the winning run that finished off a first-round playoff sweep of the Chicago White Sox.

Admittedly, his time with the Mets was turbulent. It did not help him when it was revealed he was in the clubhouse playing cards when the Mets lost the 1999 NLCS at Atlanta.

"I went through some things last year that players shouldn't have to go through," he said. "It was odd. It threw my whole season off."

There had been talk the Cincinnati Reds considered Henderson this month, but nothing materialized. His agent is surprised at the lack of interest.

"If Deion Sanders and Sid Fernandez can get jobs, I don't see why Rickey Henderson can't," Jeff Borris said.

Expos ask for more money from partners

MONTREAL (AP) — Montreal Expos president Jeffrey Loria has gone to his partners for more cash, asking them to give the team $17.3 million before March.

Montreal La Presse reported the cash call, saying the Expos had reached a maximum debt limit.

"We recently made a capital call upon our partners for the sole purpose of keeping our team together this year and making it as attractive to our fans and corporate sponsors as possible," Loria said.
