Senate approves Pentagon budget plan

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate approved a $291 billion Pentagon budget early today, hours after rejecting 55-41 a proposal to withdraw nearly one-third of the U.S. troops in Europe unless other NATO allies fulfill longstanding pledges to bolster their own conventional forces.

But it did settle, 94-3, on a prohibition against boosting the number of American troops on the continent beyond the current level of 326,414. The administration has served notice it wants to send 35,000 more.

Earlier the Senate, by a vote of 77-22, demanded that Reagan submit for ratification two languishing treaties to limit underground atomic blasts, and that he resume a quest to ban "all test explosions of nuclear weapons for all time."

The showdowns on the NATO and nuclear testing issues set the stage, after 10 days — and many long nights — of heated debate, for the 82-6 passage of the record defense spending plan for next year. At that, the final vote didn't come until 3:57 a.m. EDT Thursday.

The $291 billion Senate total is virtually in line with the amount agreed to by Reagan, after Republican leaders talked him down $14 billion from his original Pentagon budget. The next fight will occur in a House-Senate conference in an attempt to resolve the Senate bill with a $284 billion House measure that shaved an additional $7 billion.

But even the version which emerged from the Republican-dominated Senate contained several unpleasant surprises for the president. The chamber trimmed his MX missile request from 40 to 21, and almost scuttled the 10-warhead weapon. Only the tie-breaking vote of Vice President George Bush prevented that.

And Wednesday's vote on the nuclear testing issue represented the fourth major step within days by the Senate to press the administration on arms control issues. It also has called for talks aimed at banning space weaponry and sea-launched cruise missiles, and asked for a general summit on nuclear weapons "without preconditions or assurances of success."

The proposed NATO withdrawal ultimatum, sponsored by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., was intensely opposed by President Reagan and other Western leaders as divisive and poorly timed. Nunn insisted the "cage-rattling" threat was necessary to force the conventional buildup needed to avert the risk that NATO would have to escalate to nuclear weapons in the face of an attack by superior Soviet bloc forces.

But Nunn lost on a motion by Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, to table his amendment after debate which lasted well into the night. The Senate then passed a Republican substitute measure which called for greater allied defense efforts, but without mandatory U.S. withdrawals if they don't respond.

The substitute, sponsored by Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine, did retain one big tooth from Nunn's measure — a permanent ban against raising the number of U.S. troops in Europe beyond the current level of 326,414. The administration has proposed increases of 35,000 or more in the years ahead.

Rarely has the sponsor of legislation been so generously praised by those about to defeat him. Republicans repeatedly told Nunn they agreed with his frustration over the poor condition of European forces, munitions stockpiles and support facilities for U.S. aircraft, and that they shared his motivation — but not his method — to do something about it.

Nunn proposed to withdraw up to 90,000 U.S. troops from Europe, starting in 1987.

College officials, students react to tuition plan

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Local college presidents and students aren't thrilled about a possible tuition increase, but admit its impact probably would be slight.

Legislation allowing for higher tuition at state colleges and universities was recently introduced to the special session of the legislature. Sponsoring House Bill 77 is Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Although the bill does not call for a specific increase, legislators have discussed the possibility of doubling the $4 per-credit fee, or perhaps charging as much as $10 per hour.

Although he doesn't favor it, Midland College President Dr. Jess Parrish feels an increase is unavoidable. "As short as money is, it's obvious the legislature intends for the student to pay a larger portion of education."

The impact, he said, depends on the size of the increase. "It might have no impact at all. Education in Texas is still relatively inexpensive" compared to other states.

Odessa College President Dr. Phil Speegle said community college students would be most affected. "I don't think there's any question. It's not the colleges it would hurt, it's the potential students. A lot of our students are not well off. One of our advantages is in saying, 'If you want an education you can get it,' and a high tuition would cause problems with that.

"The people it would hurt the most are the ones who really need the help," those students who would decide not to go to college because they didn't feel they could afford it, he said. "The only way it would be fair and feasible to have a tuition increase would be to find more financial aid for those students. But just the opposite is happening."

Tuition itself is not too costly, according to MC student council president Brian Porsch. But when combined with escalating costs of books and fees, the result is felt. Taking 18 credits last semester only cost Porsch $72 tuition, but other fees, lab charges and books brought the total to nearly $400. "It doesn't make it easy for people who don't have money to go, and that's why they go to a community college — to save money."

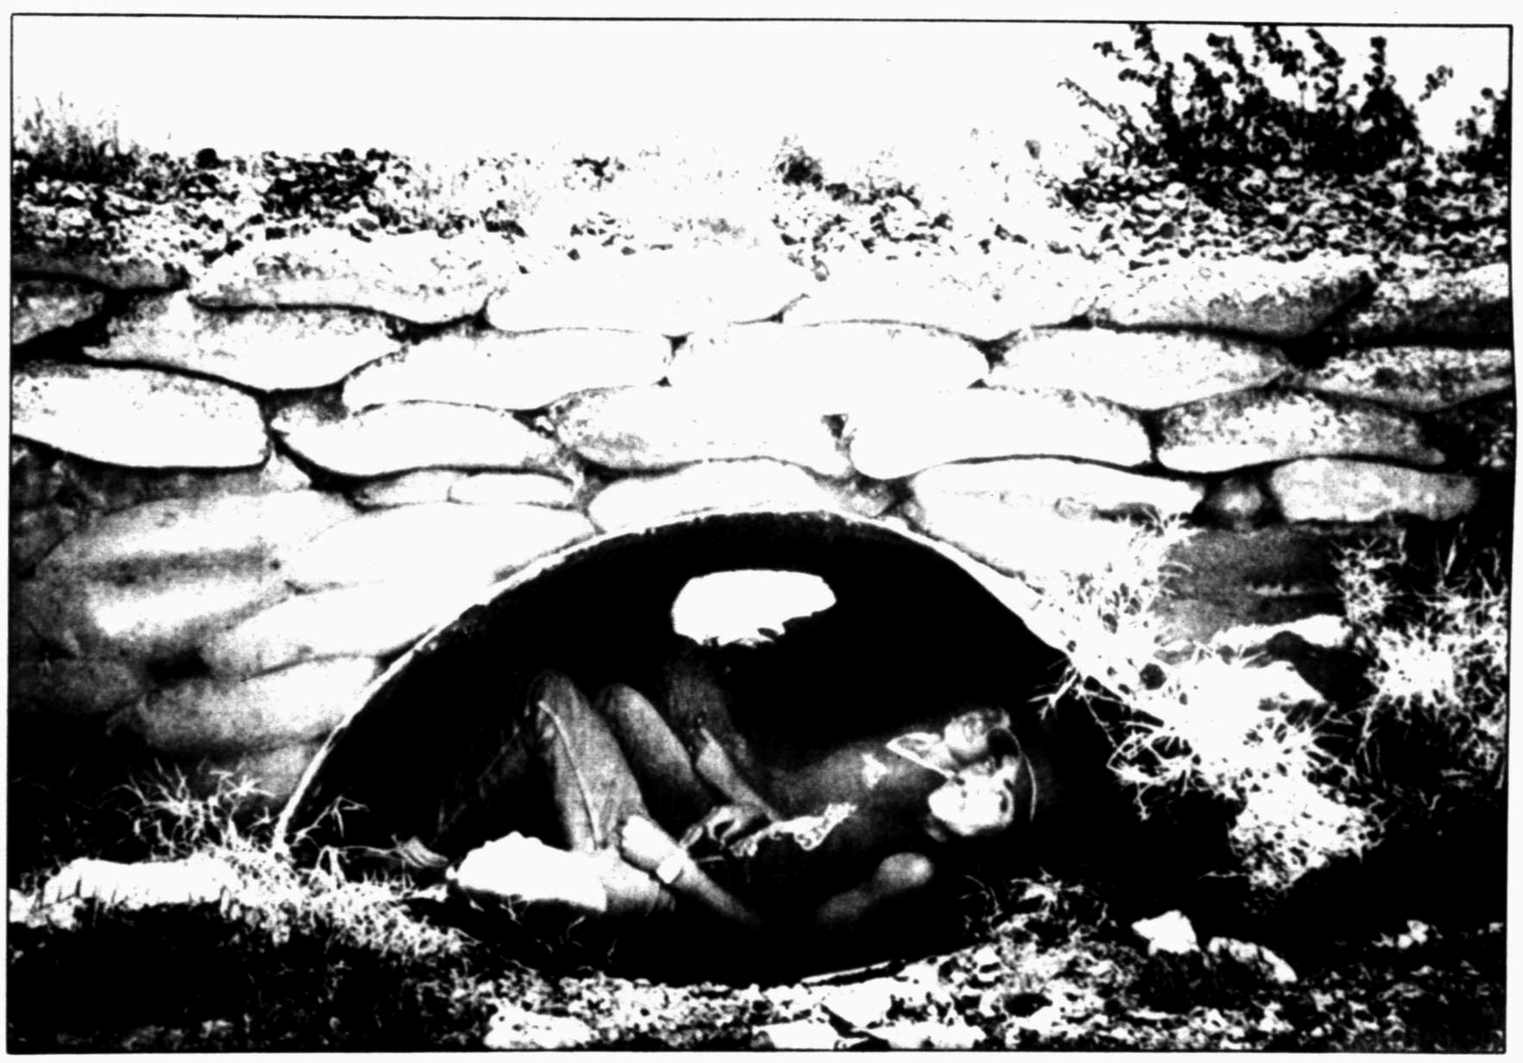

HB 77 provides for tuition rates to be set through the appropriations bill, rather than changes to the Education Code.

Rudd said when he originally wrote the bill he hoped for action during the special session, feeling the measure is included in Gov. Mark White's call for reform in education. But now the issue is "in kind of a holding position," he said, with no decision on whether or not a change will be sought during the session.

Speegle felt legislators are not likely to address HB 77 during the special session because it was called to consider public school issues.

"It will probably have a hearing during the special session," Parrish disagreed, "and I think either during the special session or during the discussion of next year's appropriations that a tuition increase is almost inevitable." But he doesn't expect it to go into effect until fall of 1985. "It could take place this fall, but I don't think it would move that fast."

He said he "wouldn't even attempt to guess" what rate would be set.

Hispanics still fighting immigration bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Encouraged by a near victory, Hispanic leaders say they will keep working to kill immigration legislation that has passed both the House and Senate.

The bill's sponsors, however, predict they will prevail and send President Reagan a bill he will sign.

Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., said he was elated by the narrow 216-211 vote in the House on Wednesday. Liberal Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., who shares Roybal's feeling the bill will lead to discrimination against Hispanics said: "The ball game's not over."

The bill still faces several hurdles — major differences must be ironed out in order to reconcile the House and Senate versions. Both chambers must vote again on final passage.

The measure seeks to stop the influx of illegal aliens by making it a crime to hire an undocumented worker, but it also provides the first mass amnesty for those who can prove they have lived and worked in this country for several years.

■ Texas congressmen join opposition — Page 2A

"It's probably a legislative miracle that we have come this far," said Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., the primary sponsor of the bill. He said he believed it will survive and be signed by Reagan.

Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif., another sponsor, said the measure contains "some things in there the administration doesn't like, but the administration wants something."

Reagan has said he would sign the more stringent version of the bill passed by the Senate last summer.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., sponsor of the Senate bill, said he was pleased by the House vote, but that several "tough issues" separate the two chambers.

The House rejected by a 233-195 vote an attempt to strip the amnesty program from the bill, which now calls for bestowing legal status on those who can prove they came here before Jan. 1, 1982.

The Senate version outlines a less generous system. It calls for granting temporary residency status to those here prior to 1980 and permanent status to those here before 1977.

Simpson said his goal "is not to have anything in the bill that would attract a (presidential) veto." He said this meant some kind of compromise on the date for providing amnesty, but that he was confident one could be worked out.

Another major problem, Simpson said, will be the "guest worker" program tacked on in the House, which envisions bringing hundreds of thousands of foreigners into the country annually to pick crops.

"I will not be part of any open-ended guest worker program," Simpson stated flatly. He said nations such as France and West Germany have set up such programs, only to find years later that they have a population of foreigners unwilling to leave.

The senator said he would prefer to place a limit on the number of such workers, or hoped that proponents of the program would agree to a compromise under which growers might be given five years to phase out their use of illegal aliens. The Senate bill would allow a three-year phase out.

The AFL-CIO switched its stand on the bill because of the guest worker program and announced its opposition one day before the vote.

Mazzoli said the move "hurt" the bill's chances. The Chamber of Commerce has also come out against the measure because of the penalities against employers who hire illegals.

The 110,000-member League of United Latin American Citizens opposed the measure, arguing that employers would be loathe to hire even legal Hispanics, for fear of the penalties.

The minimum order is 50 cards. The company charges $75 to prepare the mold and $1 per card, each weighing about 2½ ounces.

Midlander dies in honeymoon mishap

By RICHARD ORR

The honeymoon of a young Midland couple ended in the accidental shooting death of the groom in a San Diego, Calif., motel room Wednesday.

Jimmy Don McKinney, 21, of Rt. 6, Midland, died in the intensive care unit of UCSD Medical Center Hospital in San Diego, where he was taken in critical condition after the shooting.

He had been shot once in the head with a .38 caliber revolver in room 132 at the Airport TraveLodge Motel on Pacific Highway about 11:20 a.m., California time, Wednesday.

McKinney married Laura Ann Moore in the atrium of Claydesta Plaza on Saturday. She is a 1983 graduate of Midland High and an employee of Sears. He had worked as a route salesman for the Ozarka Water Co. for the past three years.

According to sketchy accounts of the incident, McKinney was unloading the gun when it discharged. A motel maid told police she heard "hysterical screaming" coming from the room and found Mrs. McKinney trying to give mouth-to-mouth rescusitation to her husband.

The bride accompanied her husband to the hospital and was later questioned by police, who said the shooting appeared to be accidental.

Areas of Midwest still flooded

By RON SIRAK
Associated Press Writer

Rains in the Midwest today fed floodwaters which already have claimed two lives and damaged more than $430 million in crops, and volunteers in Idaho stood armpit deep in water to fortify an earthen dam that gave way.

The thunderstorms spread into part of Dixie, but in Texas, nature was at the other extreme with Corpus Christi joining the city of Alice in ordering water rationing.

Storms early today in Georgia followed a day in which the mercury climbed to a record 102 in Columbus and 101 in Savannah. Temperature records were set or tied Wednesday in four other southern cities, the National Weather Service said, as spring gave way today to summer.

Two men drowned Wednesday in swirling floodwaters in Missouri. Orville L. Atchison, 73, died when his car was swept off a highway and into a creek just south of Kansas City, police said. James Goodpaster, 24, was killed when he was trapped by the current while swimming in a flooded field, authorities said.

Millions of acres of rich farmland remained under water today in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota, officials said. In Iowa, Graydon Anderson, head of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, called the flooding along the Missouri River "by far the worst I've ever seen."

Anderson said 2.3 million acres in the northwest section of the state — one-fourth of the cropland in the region — are flooded or washed out.

A "conservative" estimate puts crop damage at $350 million in Iowa alone, said state Agriculture Secretary Robert Lounsberry.

A reported 7½ inches of rain fell Wednesday near Scranton, Iowa, the weather service said, and 2 inches of rain fell in just 45 minutes on Glidden.

Flooding has forced more than 1,000 families from their homes in Kansas and Missouri. Officials in Missouri say more than $80 million in crops have been lost to the rampaging rivers.

More than 2½ inches of rain fell on parts of Kansas on Wednesday. That was not welcome news to the 245 residents of Bean Lake, many of whom have slept in the backs of pickup trucks and campers waiting for the rivers to subside.

"It's beginning to get to them — the waiting, that is," said Lenora Eirls, who runs a grocery near Bean Lake.

In Mud Lake, Idaho, an earthen dike around a reservoir gave way Wednesday night, flooding an estimated two square miles of farmland before being plugged, officials said.

A 30-foot section of the dike around Mud Lake Reservoir about 40 miles northwest of Idaho Falls failed at about 6 p.m., the Jefferson County sheriff's office said. Some 200 volunteers managed to repair the break within a couple of hours, and officials said only two families had to be evacuated.

"Even if the rain were to stop today, it would take a while for the streams and rivers to subside," Bill Sammler of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said today. But it did not appear the rain would stop today in the Midwest, Sammler said.

"It's raining there now and thunderstorms are likely to fire up across the mid and upper Mississippi valley again today," he said. "The big rivers aren't the real danger now — they're already over their banks," he said. "It's the flash flooding that causes the heartaches."

In the southeast, which has been baking under 100-degree heat, powerful thunderstorms dumped 2.55 inches of rain on Fayetteville, Ark., in a six-hour period ending early today, the weather service said. Thunderstorms were reported today from the lower Mississippi valley into Georgia and South Carolina.

Other temperature records set or tied Wednesday included 99 in Chattanooga, Tenn.; Charleston, S.C., 98; Huntsville, Ala., 96 and Greenville, S.C., 94.

City officials in Corpus Christi imposed mandatory water rationing beginning July 1. Violations of restrictions on washing cars, lawn watering and other home use could draw a fine of up to $200.

Some crops victim of too much water

By KATE POUND
Associated Press Writer

FORTESCUE, Mo. — Ray Morris and his neighbors won't have to worry about the price of soybeans, corn and wheat this fall.

Farmers in northwestern Missouri won't be getting a crop out of their Missouri River bottom land because the fields they had planted lie beneath two to three feet of water.

"Was looking pretty good until this," said Morris, sitting in the cab of his pickup truck Wednesday. The crop of soybeans he'd planted has gone to waste.

Morris and a few friends chatted near a dike keeping water from their small hometown. Without the dike, Fortescue — like a half dozen other communities around here — would be under water, they said.

On June 10, the rising Missouri River breached levees all along the northwestern edge of Missouri. The Missouri and its tributaries have flooded nearly 200,000 acres in northeastern Kansas and northwestern and north-central Missouri.

Estimates of agricultural damage top $80 million and are expected to go much higher. Officials say it could be next week before the water recedes.

In Fortescue, Morris said it would be at least a month before things dry out enough for him to enter his fields. His only option for making it through the year, he said, was "to go to the bank" and ask for another loan.

His lifelong friend, Bud Catron, added, "And cry and cry and cry."

The banks won't be eager to lend, because it would be at least 18 months before farmers would have a crop to sell, said Catron, a former banker.

Most farmers probably will plant wheat this fall in fields they normally planted with beans or corn, because they can harvest the wheat a few months earlier than other crops, Morris said.

"Be the quickest crop they can get. I'm thinking of doing that here," he said.

Forty miles to the southeast Wednesday, Don Chapman and Butch Wood rode in the rain toward Chapman's home. The pair followed a road near the town of Bean Lake, riding in a boat because the asphalt, which supported cars two weeks earlier, had disappeared under water.

The Missouri River had breeched a levee at the lake, burying its namesake town.

Chapman pointed to an antique steam tractor in water up to its wheels. "It don't look like it's in too bad shape," he said. "But it's sitting on a trailer."

Just a few days ago, flood victims could boat up for a beer at the Lakeside Tavern, which Wood owned. Finally, though, the effort of reaching the bar — now ringed by water — became too much.

"We got a lakeside tavern, but we don't know what side the lake's on," Wood quipped.

Chapman and Wood went to feed a neighbor's young pigs, penned in a livestock truck in Chapman's yard. Chapman waded through knee-deep water, climbed the truck's cab and heaved grain to the 40 squealing, soaked animals.

Cloudy, warm conditions in Basin likely to continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

Friday is expected to be a carbon copy of today with partly cloudy skies, a high in the middle 90s and southerly winds at 5-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight is expected to be partly cloudy with a low near 70 and the same southerly winds.

With a trace of rainfall recorded overnight, the gauge at the NWS stands at 2.11 inches for the month and 6.10 inches for the year.

Wednesday's high of 90 was 19 degrees cooler than 1951's blistering record high of 109. The overnight low of 72 was 19 degrees warmer than the record low of 53, set in 1973.

STATE

Mostly cloudy skies covered sections of West and South Central Texas today, but clear skies were generally the case across the state.

A high-pressure system continued to dominate the state, and no rain was reported.

Southerly winds continued to sweep across the state early today, with speeds averaging 5 to 10 miles an hour.

NATION

Persistent rains that have ruined millions of dollars in crops in the Midwest continued today as powerful thunderstorms cooled record temperatures in the Southeast, where the mercury has lingered at 100 degrees.

Thunderstorms were reported today from the lower Mississippi Valley into Georgia and South Carolina. In Fayetteville, Ark., 2½ inches of rain fell in a six-hour period ending early today.

Overnight, rains in the Midwest fed floodwaters which already have claimed two lives and damaged more than $430 million in crops, while volunteers in Idaho stood in chest-high water to bolster an earthen dam that broke.

Tower praise offered as debate comes to close

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Moments before a weary Senate passed a record $291 billion Pentagon budget at 3:57 a.m. EDT today, Republican Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Democrat Sam Nunn of Georgia rose to discuss, after 11 days of debate and scores of amendments, one last matter.

Thurmond reminded his colleagues that Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, the chairman of the Armed Services Committee — and fiesty floor manager of the massive spending package — is retiring at the end of the year.

"I've been here for 30 years, and most of that time I've been on the committee," Thurmond said. "And I've never seen more able leadership than that of the senator from Texas."

Nunn, the ranking Democrat on the panel — and next chairman if the Democrats gain control of the Senate — agreed that Tower "is going to be deeply missed. I share the great enthusiasm for his performance."

Nunn and Tower have had several memorable battles over the years, including a fiery debate late Wednesday night over the Georgian's proposal to withdraw American troops from Europe if the NATO allies don't live up to their own defense commitments. Tower technically won that one on a motion to table — kill — the measure, but Nunn may have served his purpose purely by the stir he created.

John Tower

The Democrat joked that the marathon debate over the overall spending bill, "evidenced the fact that we did not want his (Tower's) leadership to end rapidly."

When the rest of the Senate joined the salute with a standing ovation, Tower responded with a familiar line:

"Mr. President, I move to table that motion."

Later he added: "I thank you for your great generosity. But I suspect my colleagues will be dancing in the streets with the thought that old Tower won't be here to kick them around any more."

NATO leaders react to troop reduction call

The Associated Press

The outgoing secretary-general of NATO said today it would have been an "unexpected present to the Soviet Union" if the U.S. Senate had passed an amendment calling for a reduction of American troops in Europe.

The Senate voted 55-41 late Wednesday to defeat an amendment which would have pulled 90,000 American troops from Europe by the end of the decade if the 15 other members of NATO did not increase their non-nuclear forces in NATO.

Joseph Luns, speaking at a news conference at NATO headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, said he believed that Europeans should do "somewhat more" in defending themselves but said it "would have been deplorable" if the amendment had passed.

"It would have been an unexpected present to the Soviet Union and it would have had a very demoralizing effect (on the Europeans)," he said.

Luns, who soon will be replaced as NATO's top official by Lord Carrington of Britain, was the first European official to comment on the Senate's rejection of an amendment proposed by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

Instead, the Senate gave 94-3 approval to a proposal that would limit U.S. troop strength in Europe to the current total of 326,414, rejecting planned Pentagon increases.

Luns said there was "a misconception" in the United States about the American role in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Americans guarantee a free Europe, he added, and the United States itself "should be defended on the Elbe rather than on Long Island."

He said European defense spending figures seem low to Americans because of the rising value of the dollar. He also said Europeans face much more severe economic conditions than do Americans; unemployment and inflation rates are far higher.

SHOOTING

"I'm in a state of shock," said Leon Odom, an Austin Street Church of Christ preacher who married the couple. "I was very close to them. They were very faithful members who never missed services."

Odom said the bride's father, Jerry Moore of Midland, told him the couple had taken the gun with them for protection because they planned to drive to California and camp along the way. They apparently changed their minds, however, and flew there.

Odom said it was his understanding the couple was about to leave the motel for lunch and that McKinney was unloading the weapon so the maid wouldn't get hurt if she came across a loaded gun while cleaning the room.

The couple reportedly planned to return to Midland on Friday. Services for McKinney are pending at the Ellis Funeral Home.

Texans side against immigration bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Texas congressional delegation is about as diverse as they come, but 23 of them did agree on one thing — they don't like the immigration reform bill.

The bill was passed by the House on Wednesday in a narrow 216-211 vote.

Only three Texas congressmen voted for it — House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth; Jake Pickle, D-Austin; and Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, did not vote.

"It was an unpopular bill from a Texas standpoint," said Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas.

"Party lines were obscured here," said Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, who found himself in unlikely alliance with conservative Republican Phil Gramm of College Station, the Republican nominee for U.S. Senate.

"I opposed the bill because I didn't think it addressed the problem," said Gramm. "If I were in Mexico with my two little children and was having trouble feeding them, you'd have to kill me to keep me from crossing the border."

The bill would allow illegal aliens who have been living in the United States since before 1982 to seek legal status. It also would fine employers who hire illegal aliens, a provision seen by Hispanic members a inviting job discrimination.

Rep. Solomon Ortiz, D-Brownsville, said industry will be reluctant to move into his economically depressed district because the labor force is largely Hispanic and industries won't want to have to document all their workers.

"It's not because we're against immigration reform," said Ortiz. "We just felt there were some things in the bill we couldn't accept."

"The people who were in favor of this bill were from Kentucky and Massachusetts and Indiana and Wyoming. They don't know what the problem is," said Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock.

Hance whose well-publicized opposition to amnesty was credited for his first-place finish in the Democratic U.S. Senate primary, said he will continue to fight the bill, hoping to sway votes before it returns to the floor after a House-Senate conference.

"I feel sorry for those people coming in but my first compassion is for the citizens of this country," said Hance, who narrowly lost a June 2 runoff to state Sen. Lloyd Doggett.

"It was the only choice," said Wilson. "It was the status quo or the bill, and most of the people in my district don't want the status quo. I personally think the bill will work fine."

Wright's office said he was still on the floor of the House and unavailable for comment.

U.N. monitors arrives in Persian Gulf

By The Associated Press

A diplomat said today a United Nations team had arrived in Iraq to monitor an agreement with Iran against attacks on civilian areas, and the two warring countries accused each other of violating the accord by shelling major cities.

Iran on Wednesday also denied Iraqi claims that part of the Iranian-occupied Majnoon Islands had been recaptured.

The diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a four-man U.N. team arrived in Baghdad on Wednesday.

U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said in New York that one monitoring team would be stationed in the Iraqi capital and a second would be located near Iran, entering that nation when it contends Iraq has violated the moratorium on civilian attacks.

Iran does not want observers based within its borders, Sills said.

Each of the teams will consist of three military observers and one civilian, Sills said. The participants will come from Ireland, Finland, Sweden, Ghana, Austria and Malta.

Iran and Iraq, at war since September 1980, agreed on June 12 not to attack one another's civilian areas. The moratorium had been proposed by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

The official Iraqi News Agency on Wednesday quoted a military spokesman as saying Iran had fired three artillery shells at Basra, Iraq's second-largest city. No casualties were reported.

Iran's official Tehran Radio later reported that Iraqi forces had broken the agreement by bringing "intense heavy-weapon fire" on the city of Abadan and nearby villages, killing two children and damaging several homes. The report was monitored in London.

Candidates won't be at LULAC meeting

STATE

"We are a community whose power has yet to be realized...(LULAC members will determine) a strategy...for implementation during the rest of this decade to ensure the continued progress of our community."
— Mario Obledo, LULAC president

EL PASO (AP) — Though all of the presidential candidates apparently have snubbed this year's meeting of the nation's largest Hispanic organization, the group's leader says it will be the politicians and not Mexican-Americans who suffer at the polls in November.

Mario Obledo, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said Wednesday there are enough Hispanics in the United States to make a difference in the presidential election and that by not showing up, the major contenders "have only hurt themselves."

As of today, when the 55th annual meeting of LULAC kicked off, none of the presidential candidates appeared to be coming to the convention.

And the no shows by President Reagan, former Vice President Walter Mondale, the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado only will reinforce to Hispanics the "insensitivity" both Democrats and Republicans show toward Mexican-Americans and Hispanic issues, Obledo said.

"We are a community whose power has yet to be realized," he said, adding that LULAC members at the convention will determine "a strategy...for implementation during the rest of this decade to ensure the continued progress of our community."

Asked at a news conference if Hispanics have the clout needed to prevent a candidate from becoming elected, Obledo said, "We'll find out in November when one of them sits at home wondering why he lost."

Last week, Reagan rejected an invitation to deliver the keynote address at the convention, which is expected to draw more than 3,500 Hispanics from throughout the country.

Obledo said Wednesday he regretted the president's decision not to attend, saying, "it would have provided him a great opportunity and a forum to present his policies, which he claims have been misunderstood by the American people."

Jackson told convention leaders he would send a representative to the meeting, while Hart had not been in contact with the organization.

Mondale had not given a firm yes or no as to whether he would put in an appearance, according to LULAC executive director Arnold Torres.

Obledo outlined for reporters the issues around which the convention would center, citing immigration reform, American involvement in Central America, bilingual education, politics and the Hispanic struggle with corporate America as the key topics.

"Corporate America has not given us a fair shake," he charged. "And I don't believe we will have much of an effort in proving our case."

Obledo said the number of Hispanics on the directors' boards of major U.S. companies is no more than "the number of fingers you can count on you hand."

"Corporations have not been responsive to us," he said. "For some reason, someone has developed the (notion) that Hispanics do not want the good life. We're human beings too. All we need is a chance."

Obledo said LULAC members would be deciding during the next four days whether "selective boycotts" of certain companies would be initiated to drive their message home.

Despite several symposiums planned on numerous subjects, immigration inevitably will be a hot issue for the convention, Obledo said.

The U.S. House of Representatives Wednesday approved the controversial Simpson-Mazzoli immigration reform measure, which LULAC has opposed strongly since its inception.

GOP rejects Democrats' offer to help at convention

DALLAS (AP) — GOP officials in Dallas have said thanks, but no thanks, to an offer by local Democrats to help host the Republican National Convention next month.

GOP Chairman Fred Meyer, head of the Republican Host Committee, said he's pretty sure the Democratic assistance won't be needed despite the fact that only 13,000 of the 20,000 volunteers wanted to help with the convention have signed up.

The Dallas Democrats said the offer of help was not meant to embarrass local Republicans or to gain converts to their party. Rather, they said, it stemmed from civic pride.

"We can fight it out as Republicans and Democrats come November but, after all, Dallas comes first," County Democratic Party Chairman Mike McKool said Tuesday.

The convention is scheduled for Dallas on August 20-23.

McKool extended the Democrats' help in a letter to Dave Fox, chairman of the non-partisan Dallas Welcoming Committee. Fox, whose committee is responsible for the 15,000 members of the news media who will cover the convention, was out of town on business and could not be reached for comment.

Linda Perryman, executive director for the welcoming committee, said some people more closely identified with the Democratic than the Republican Party already have volunteered.

"I think we have enough, but if somebody else wants to be involved, we will find a place," she said.

Meyer said it was not the first time a Democrat had offered to help.

Man kills sick wife, then himself

DALLAS (AP) — Despondent because his wife was suffering from Alzheimer's disease and unable to bring himself to put her in a nursing home, an elderly man shot and killed his wife and then turned the gun on himself, police and family members said.

"My father just couldn't live without her and he couldn't put her in a home," said Soloman Suberi, 40, after Wednesday's bloodshed at the Retirement Inn in Dallas.

The bodies of 70-year-old David Suberi and Ahova Suberi, 73, were found Wednesday morning in their apartment.

A clerk at the home told authorities that Suberi called the front desk at 8:30 a.m. and said, "I have shot my wife. I need an ambulance."

Employees of the home told police they found the couple lying on their bed. She had been shot in the back of the head and he was shot in the mouth, they said. A .38-caliber pistol was in his hand.

Mrs. Suberi had been suffering for the past three years from the disease, a neurological disorder that causes irreversible mental deterioration and senility.

Family and friends of the couple said Suberi had provided round-the-clock care for his wife as her condition worsened. But recently, he had become ill and unable to keep up the vigilance, they said.

"He only talked about not being able to go on without her. He'd been very depressed," the younger Suberi said.

Burglars break into Manges' daughter's home

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Nearly $100,000 in jewels have been stolen from a condominium occupied by the 19-year-old daughter of South Texas rancher-oilman Clinton Manges, police say.

Burglars broke into Malou Manges' residence the night of June 7, according to police reports.

Listed as stolen were a $53,000 ring with a solitaire diamond, a $45,000 four-karat ring with three diamonds, and a $500 yellow-gold ring with 36 small diamonds.

Police said they are checking several leads, but have no suspects.

"The jewelry had sentimental value to her," said Miss Manges' mother, Helen Ruth Manges. "They were gifts from her father."

Malou Manges is the youngest of Manges' three daughters.

Arrested man uses judge's name

HOUSTON (AP) — State District Judge Michael T. McSpadden sentenced a man who used McSpadden's name when arrested to one year in Harris County Jail after the man pleaded guilty to assault charges.

McSpadden sentenced Henry Lee Sanders on Wednesday when the 23-year-old admitted he slugged a Harris County sheriff's deputy while in the lunch line at the jail.

When Sanders was arrested, he told officers his name was Michael T. McSpadden.

The judge said Sanders' problems are not over. As he was being led back to jail with other prisoners who had appeared in court, Sanders allegedly pinched a female prisoner and could face another assault charge.

Prison inmate stabbed to death

ROSHARON (AP) — An inmate serving a 99-year murder sentence at a Brazoria County prison unit has been stabbed to death in a dining hall, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections says.

Ruben Morin, 33, was stabbed several times Wednesday evening and was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Walter Matthews about 1½ hours later, Charles Brown said.

Brown said officials did not know who the killer was and had not found the weapon used in the attack.

Brown said Morin had been in prison since 1970. He was serving a 99-year term for murder and assault from Karnes County, Brown said.

Man dies in two-vehicle accident

HOOKS (AP) — An Arlington man driving home from Memphis, Tenn., where police had recovered his stolen pickup truck, died of injuries received in a two-vehicle accident here, police said.

Peter Chris Heonakos, 30, died in the emergency room Wednesday at a Texarkana hospital, where he had been flown by AirLife helicopter.

Heonakos' 1980 Ford pickup truck was westbound on Interstate 30 when it slammed into the rear of a Texas Highways and Public Transportation truck.

State Trooper Ronnie Fincher said there was "no sign of brakes. He didn't touch his brakes."

Group wants to save courts' walls

AUSTIN (AP) — The Travis County commissioners' court will consider today whether to order a halt to the tearing down of plaster artwork that has adorned courtroom walls in the county for more than a half century.

The Texas Historical Commission has asked the body to block a $374,000 courtroom renovation project which includes building two new courtrooms.

The plaster artwork, considered historically and architecturally significant by area historians, was part of the ornamentation when the courthouse was built during the early 1930s. In recent years, the artwork has been hidden by false ceilings.

Many of the works were stylized fasces, the ancient Roman symbol of authority and justice. Other works, including three large pieces above the judge's bench, depicted judicial scenes.

Teens' divorce suit has turned into battle between couple's families

HOUSTON (AP) — A "nickel and dime" divorce suit involving two teen-age parents and a set of breast-fed twins has escalated into a thundering clash between two embattled families, along with a judge who makes "bizarre, far-out" decisions while running for statewide office.

The suit has twice gone to an appeals court and will yet face a jury trial. Already the costs are estimated at over $30,000 and lawyers say they have just begun.

At issue is the marriage of 17-year-old high school sweethearts and the custody of twins born seven months after the wedding. The young mother, Dina Denise Carter, left her husband's home in Big Sandy on Feb. 10, when the twins were less than three weeks old, and moved 250 miles south to her parents home in Houston.

On Valentine's Day, Stan Carter, her husband, filed a divorce petition, seeking custody of the twins, Chad Edward Carter and Chase Edward Carter.

Up to that point, says Dina's lawyer, Dale Long of Tyler, "it was just a nickel-and-dime divorce action."

"In any other court in the land, it would have been just cut and dried," said Long. "There are no special issues involved."

But when the suit went to the court of State District Judge Virgil Mulanax of Gilmer, Long said the case then took "bizarre, far-out" twists.

Dina's father, Houston police officer Manuel Ortega, said he discovered that Mulanax had been a high school sweetheart of Stan Carter's mother, Mary Leota Fuller Carter. According to Mrs. Carter, they remain closed friends. But the judge denies he has a close relationship with the Carters.

In his first action, Mulanax made the decision that each of the divorcing teen-agers would be given temporary custody of one of the twins. He ordered that the Carter was to receive Chad, the first born and healthiest of the two children.

Publicity delays trial

ABILENE (AP) — The trial of an Abilene man accused of beating and burning a 5½-month-old boy has been postponed because of the publicity given the mother's conviction for failing to get medical treatment for the child.

Bobby Hubert Haupt, 29, was granted a separate trial, which was to begin Monday on felony "injury to a child" charges.

But his attorney won a continuance Wednesday because of the attention that Terri Lynn Holder McClelland, 24, of Arlington received during her three-day trial on the same charges.

Mrs. McClelland, who remarried about one month ago, was convicted and was sentenced Wednesday to 10 years in prison.

Attorney Don L. Wilson attached to his motion copies of newspaper stories that detailed the injuries suffered by young Clint Holder, Mrs. McClelland's son. The stories also reported evidence claiming that Haupt burned the child with a cigarette lighter.

State District Judge Billy John Edwards granted Wilson's motion but set no new trial date immediately. Haupt has been free on bond since shortly after his Sept. 30 arrest.

Meanwhile, defense attorney James Paul Shanks of Baird gave notice that Mrs. McClelland's conviction will be appealed and personally posted the $5,000 appeal bond to secure her release from Taylor County Jail.

Mrs. McClelland, who said she had lived with Haupt for only two weeks when she began noticing suspicious injuries to her son, began to sob quietly as Edwards read the jury's punishment verdict.

Evidence showed the child had burns on his mouth, nose, buttocks and genitals — injuries that prosecutors said constituted "unmerciful torture and abuse."

Mrs. McClelland said she did not know until after her arrest that Haupt, who at the time was her boyfriend, had admitted burning the child with a cigarette lighter, striking him with his hands and putting ice on his back and abdomen because he was annoyed by the child's crying.

The child has been in the custody of Mrs. McClelland's father, Howard Kean of Abilene, since October. Police said Kean insisted on the child being taken to a doctor on Sept. 30 and probably saved his life.

Jury doesn't reach verdict in sheriff's case

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors deliberated about three hours but reached no verdict in the perjury trial of Walker County Sheriff Darrell White.

The panel was to continue today considering the fate of the lawman, who is charged with two counts of lying to a grand jury and one of lying to a trial jury.

White, 57, is accused of lying by saying he was not present in September 1976 when lawmen from San Jacinto County, seeking to extract a confession, poured water over a handcuffed prisoner until he began to drown.

The prisoner, Vernell Harkless, testified White hit him with a wet towel during the session.

Air Force going ahead with MX missile construction

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — While Congress continues to debate the MX missile program, the Air Force is launching construction of its MX headquarters at F.E. Warren Air Force Base in Cheyenne.

Bulldozers have already helped clear a former Army firing range that eventually will store stages of the nuclear-tipped MX missile, and Air Force officials say construction should start early in July on one of 14 new buildings planned at the air base.

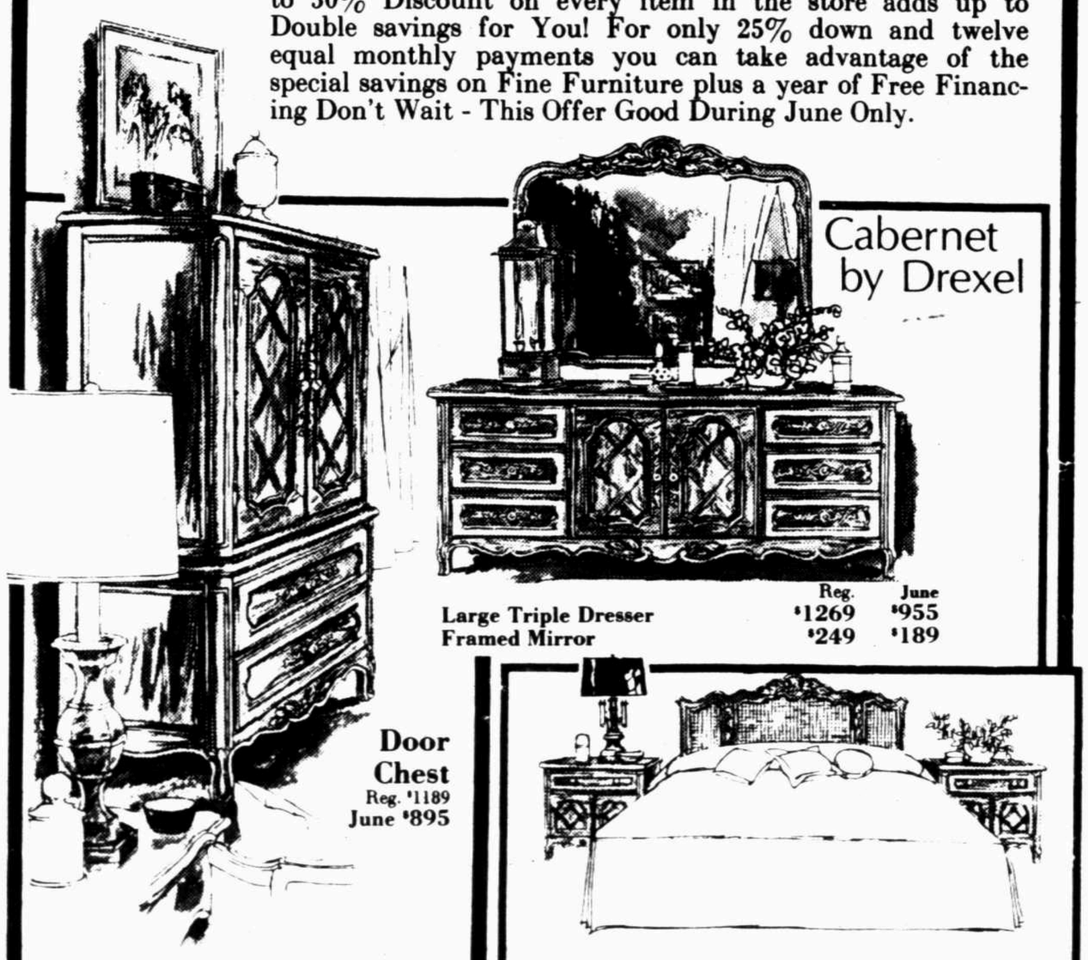

The heaviest construction will occur next year — assuming Congress continues to go along with the program.

"I cannot predict accurately what Congress will do, but I'm optimistic that it's going ahead," Col. Warren Hickman told The Associated Press on Wednesday. "We're going ahead full steam."

Hickman heads the Peacekeeper Site Activation Task Force, which is laying the groundwork for deployment of 100 MX missiles in existing missile silos controlled by Warren Air Base, a one-time frontier cavalry outpost.

President Reagan concludes his address Wednesday to the National Sheriffs' Association, holding its convention in Hartford, Conn. Listening is the association's outgoing president, Sheriff Richard Elrod of County, Ill.

Reagan favors federal agency to fight crime

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — President Reagan, whose political career has been built on the bedrock of fighting big government, now is promoting a new federal agency to fight violent crime.

In a speech Wednesday to the nation's sheriffs gathered in Hartford for their annual conference, Reagan announced creation of a National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime.

He said it would use "the latest computerized technology for detective work" to identify and track "repeat killers," murderers who kill again and again, usually preying on a particular group or community.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said after Reagan's speech the new center actually would concentrate on solving several kinds of crimes, including child abduction and molestation cases, sexually oriented homocides, rapes and arsons.

Many such crimes, he said, are committed by nomadic criminals who drift across the country, passing from one police jurisdiction to another.

"The next jurisdiction (where a crime is committed) starts all over," Fitzwater said. "The last one never follows the criminal. We've always had trouble relating a crime in one state to a crime in another state."

THE NEW CENTER, he said, will "focus on behavior patterns" and attempt to establish nationwide crime patterns that suggest a single person is involved.

"Often these are particularly vicious or repetitive crimes, and it is possible to identify patterns," the spokesman said. He added that seemingly "motiveless murders" are among the center's targets because such cases often stump local police forces accustomed to solving crimes by determining who had a motive for committing them.

One administration official familiar with the new program, asking that he not be identified, said the various local and state police authorities throughout the country "traditionally have been very protective of their turf" and reluctant to cooperate with each other. "This is an effort to overcome those problems," he said.

Fitzwater said the center, which will be located at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va., will cost about $2.5 million to set up and start operating during the next 16 months. After that, he said, it is expected to cost about $1.5 million a year.

ASKED HOW Reagan could justify establishing a new agency to do work traditionally left to state and local government when he has campaigned so long against government interference in local affairs, Fitzwater said: "Occasionally, the facts warrant it," the same rationale Reagan had used earlier in the day to justify his new-found support for legislation that would penalize states which fail to adopt 21 as their legal drinking age.

But most of Reagan's speech to the friendly audience of law enforcement officials was devoted in this election year to what he calls his administration's war on crime and to blaming unnamed liberal Democrats for holding up an anti-crime bill in Congress.

Reagan said reported crime dropped 4.3 percent in 1982, the first decline since 1977.

"Now I know there are a few people who want to attribute the encouraging downward trend in crime to a statistic, the fact that fewer members of the population are now in the crime-prone age group," Reagan said. "Well, a coincidence isn't a correlation."

Aliens found in Mississippi

FOREST, Miss. (AP) — The state Highway Patrol reports that 32 illegal aliens discovered Wednesday in Mississippi will be returned to Mexico by the Border Patrol.

Charges against the aliens, whose identities are being withheld, are pending.

Highway Patrol and Scott County officers arrested the aliens and two American drivers as they were driving through the state while en route from Texas to North Carolina.

Sheriff Glen Warren reported that Trooper Willie Craft became suspicious of a car and a van travelling along Interstate 20. A check revealed that one vehicle had a switched tag.

Craft stopped the van, with 26 people packed inside, as the car continued on. However, Deputy Willie McCurty stopped the car 10 miles farther east on the highway, near the Scott-Newton County line.

A Scott County man translated one elderly alien's comments from Spanish. The man said he and the group crossed the border near El Paso about six weeks ago, had picked squash at Houston and were en route to work planting trees in North Carolina.

DILLARD'S WELCOMES THE AMERICAN EXPRESS® CARD

Senate approves $291 billion defense bill, kills NATO protest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved a $291 billion Defense Department spending bill early today after killing a plan to pressure NATO allies to increase their military budgets by threatening a withdrawal of American forces from Europe.

Approval of the fiscal 1985 Pentagon authorization came at 3:57 a.m. on an 82-6 vote that climaxed weeks of debate. The measure now goes to a conference committee to resolve differences between it and the House-passed version.

The bill would increase the defense budget 6.9 percent, after adjustment for inflation, and give President Reagan all but two of his major weapons requests. The Senate turned down money for nerve gas and authorized only 21 of the 40 MX missiles sought by the administration.

Late Wednesday, the Senate killed 55-41 a move to withdraw 90,000 U.S. troops from Europe by 1990 unless 14 North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations kept a 6-year-old promise to increase defense spending by 3 percent. Only the United States and Luxembourg, among NATO countries, have done so.

Defeat of the pullout plan, sponsored by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., came after intense lobbying by the administration and others, who argued Europeans would view it as a bullying tactic.

The Senate did vote 94-3 to place a ceiling on U.S. troops strength in Europe at the current level of 326,414, acting to block planned increases. It also incorporated a measure urging European allies to increase military spending.

The Senate approved 77-22 a measure urging an effort by Reagan to negotiate a comprehensive nuclear testing ban with the Soviets, one of four items incorporated into the bill to prod the president on arms control issues.

Meanwhile, the House passed 216-211 the comprehensive immigration reform bill that had been debated on the floor for two weeks after refusing to knock out of the measure an "amnesty" provision that would grant permanent resident status to millions of illegal aliens.

Hispanic lawmakers, who had backed the amnesty program but fought the bill as a whole, declared that the close vote encouraged them to keep up their battle to kill the measure. Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., pronounced himself "elated" over the narrow margin, and Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., chairman of the Hispanic Caucus, said the fate of the legislation "is still very much in question."

The House rejected an attempt to delete the amnesty program by a 233-195 vote. The Senate version of the program is much stricter, but Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said he was confident a compromise could be reached.

A potentially more serious problem cropped up, however, when Simpson told reporters he would "not be part of any open-ended guest worker program" to allow aliens to enter the country to perform harvest labor. The House attached such a measure to its version of the bill, prompting the AFL-CIO to withdraw its support.

Similar programs have saddled France and West Germany with populations of "guest workers" unwilling to leave after the harvest, Simpson said.

On another front, the House ethics committee recommended a reprimand — its lightest form of punishment — for Rep. George V. Hansen, R-Idaho, convicted in U.S. District Court of failing to list $333,978 in loans and other transactions on four consecutive financial disclosure reports.

The committee based its recommendation soley on a finding that Hansen violated a House rule spelling out what transactions must be disclosed on such reports. It ignored its own report of last week which said Hansen violated other rules.

Hansen, who is appealing his conviction and running for reelection, immediately issued a statement saying he found the report "clearing me of any taint of wrongdoing ... very satisfying."

Meanwhile, Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., said he would probably have ready for House consideration next week legislation to expand the "Superfund" toxic waste cleanup program to $9 billion and order the Environmental Protection Agency to move more quickly against polluted sites.

Japanese to show film on Lucas, Toole

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — About 10 million Japanese will get to see the seedier side of America this fall in a documentary on convicted killers Henry Lee Lucas and Ottis Elwood Toole, suspected by authorities in scores of slayings nationwide.

Their story will be told in an hour-long documentary scheduled for broadcast in October by TBS, the largest of five Japanese networks, and introduced by popular television commentator Takero Morimoto.

Four members of TBS Television Films Inc. visited Jacksonville this week to film the haunts, friends and enemies of Lucas and Toole, a Jacksonville native.

"We're using Lucas as an example to show American society. That's how we're trying to show 1984 in America," director Masayoshi Takahashi said through an interpreter.

The gruesome tales of the two's self-styled murder and mayhem could hardly be called family entertainment. But they may provide a cultural lesson the Japanese won't want to forget.

"Japan is growing more and more like the U.S. every day," said Yoichi Aoki, field producer for the film. And American trends have an uncanny way of repeating themselves in Japan, he said.

"We're always about 10 years behind in the crime scene. I bet you in 1994 we have a Japanese Lucas," Aoki predicted.

The story of the pair's alleged horrors is expected to shock the Japanese and show a side of the United States that many have never seen, he said.

"This country is a dream country for Japanese people," Aoki said. "The young people's dream is to come to New York or L.A. All the media are painting this as a beautiful place.

"It is beautiful. But no one knows the other side of the coin. I think it's about time someone tells the other side."

That other side is a macabre one.

Lucas has boasted of killing more than 300 people in 17 states and his stories include details of cannibalism, rape and necrophilia.

But that is not what the Japanese are interested in, Aoki said. They're just curious.

"To us, the number of killings he's committed, the number is not as important to us. Here we have a man who's killing 360 people, but we want to show he's a man, not a monster," he said.

The most notable serial killer in Japan was Okubo Kiyoshi, arrested for killing seven women almost 13 years ago.

In an island country the size of California with a population of 110 million, places to hide are few, Aoki said.

And in Japan, evidence on similar crimes is quickly linked through a national police agency that gathers all crime information.

"The circumstances are totally different (in Japan). A body can be discovered easily and recovered," he said.

Since June 13, Aoki, director Takahashi, a cameraman and a sound man have filmed in 90-degree weather from Dallas to Georgetown, Texas, where Lucas is awaiting trial in a capital murder case.

Before heading home Sunday, they will stop in Washington, D.C.; Baltimore; and Lucas' birthplace, Blacksburg, W.Va. They will have spent about $150,000 and taped 1,000 minutes of footage before the hour-long program is broadcast.

Duarte to form security council to deal with Salvadoran leftists

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte says he will form a national security council of military and civilian officials to plan strategies for dealing with El Salvador's leftist guerrilla insurrection.

"The purpose is to confront the political, economic, social, military and international conflicts, developing a strategy to handle all the problems generated by the conflict," Duarte told a news conference Wednesday.

Duarte said he will appoint the security council's members within 10 days.

Nicaragua's security chief, meanwhile, said his forces had broken up an "internal front" of U.S.-backed rebels who had been planning sabotage operations and operating a clandestine hospital in Managua, the capital.

Cmdr. Lenin Cerna, chief of state intelligence for the leftist Sandinista government, told a news conference Wednesday that troops two weeks ago raided a hospital operated by U.S.-backed rebels 10 blocks from a major army barracks in Managua.

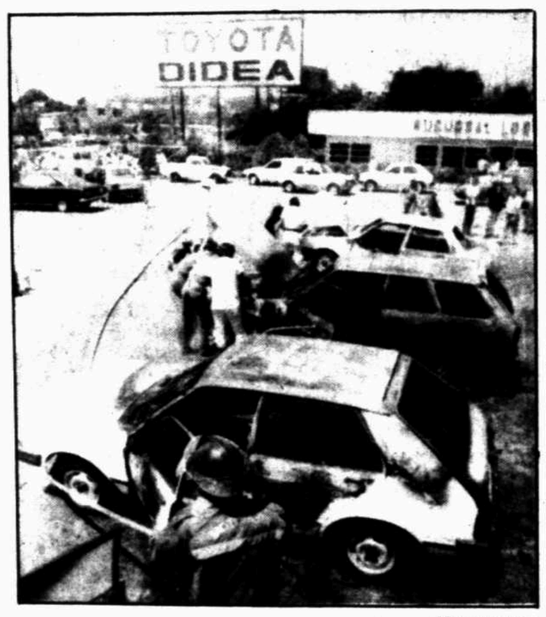

He said the rebels were part of a subversive network operated by the Honduras-based Nicaraguan Democratic Force and contended the network was in contact with opposition politicians, labor leaders and at least one Roman Catholic priest. Leaders of some of the organizations mentioned by Cerna denied the charges of collaboration, suggesting they were part of a Sandinista effort to discredit the opposition.

At the news conference, Cerna presented a prisoner who he said was the commander of the "internal front" — Pedro Hernan Espinoza Sanchez — and said Sanchez' network planned to carry out sabotage and create unrest.

Duarte, at his news conference, said that in addition to forming the security council, he is drawing up an austerity program to restrict government spending, boost agricultural and industrial production and increase exports to confront the nation's economic crisis.

El Salvador's economy is in a shambles because of the war. Guerrilla attacks have damaged roads and railways, disrupted traffic and damaged power lines and telephone installations.

Duarte said his first three weeks in office had gone smoothly. "Up to this moment, everything is going the way I want it to. I'll be demanding more and more every day to get where I want to go."

Guerrillas douse five new cars with gasoline and set them afire in San Salvador Wednesday, as part of their latest campaign to destroy property in El Salvador.

The 58-year-old Christian Democrat was inaugurated June 1 for a five-year term as El Salvador's first freely elected civilian president in 53 years.

Salvadoran officials said 10,000 troops today were continuing week-long anti-guerrilla operations in eastern Morazan and Usulutan provinces and in northern Cabanas province.

The rebels' clandestine Radio Venceremos said guerrillas attacked Ciudad Barrios, 87 miles northeast of San Salvador.

Debtors likely to appeal for more time

CARTAGENA, Colombia (AP) — Colombian President Belisario Betancur today formally opens a conference of 11 debtor nations, some of whom are warning that pressure from Western banks could endanger democracy in Latin America.

Cabinet ministers of the 11 countries, which together owe foreign banks and governments nearly $350 billion, are expected to adopt a joint declaration when the conference closes Friday night.

Despite some predictions that the countries might form a debtors' cartel that would default on loans, several participants said the declaration probably will just appeal for more time to pay the debts.

Present are representatives from Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Venezuela, Colombia, Peru, Chile, Uruguay, Bolivia, Ecuador and the Dominican Republic.

Officials of some of the countries have been arguing for weeks that austerity measures often required as a condition for refinancing loans can result in civil strife.

They point to the Dominican Republic, where belt-tightening measures demanded by the International Monetary Fund resulted in higher food prices that triggered riots in April in which 55 people were killed.

"We consider after the experience we have had that we have to adjust our economy, but at the same time preserve our democratic order," Foreign Minister Jose Augusto Vega of the Dominican Republic said Wednesday at a Cartagena news conference.

The International Monetary Fund, an organization of 146 nations, loans money to countries, often on the condition that the recipient get matching loans from other sources.

Also, the IMF usually requires countries with heavy debt burdens to cut spending sharply as a condition for loans. Private banks in turn frequently wait until a country complies with IMF austerity plans before loaning it money. Venezuela's foreign minister, Isidro Morales, said here Wednesday that his country will not seek additional help from the IMF to pay its $35 billion foreign debt.

He said the IMF rules for borrowing money were "narrow" and that the fund must face up to "political realities," an obvious reference to the belief that too much austerity causes social upheaval.

Argentina, which owes foreign creditors $43.6 billion, already has rejected IMF conditions that it cut government spending.

During the two days of work so far on the draft of the joint declaration, minor officials of the 11 conferee governments have suggested that Latin America is in a "highly dangerous position" as a result of belt tightening, the Bogota daily newspaper El Tiempo said Wednesday.

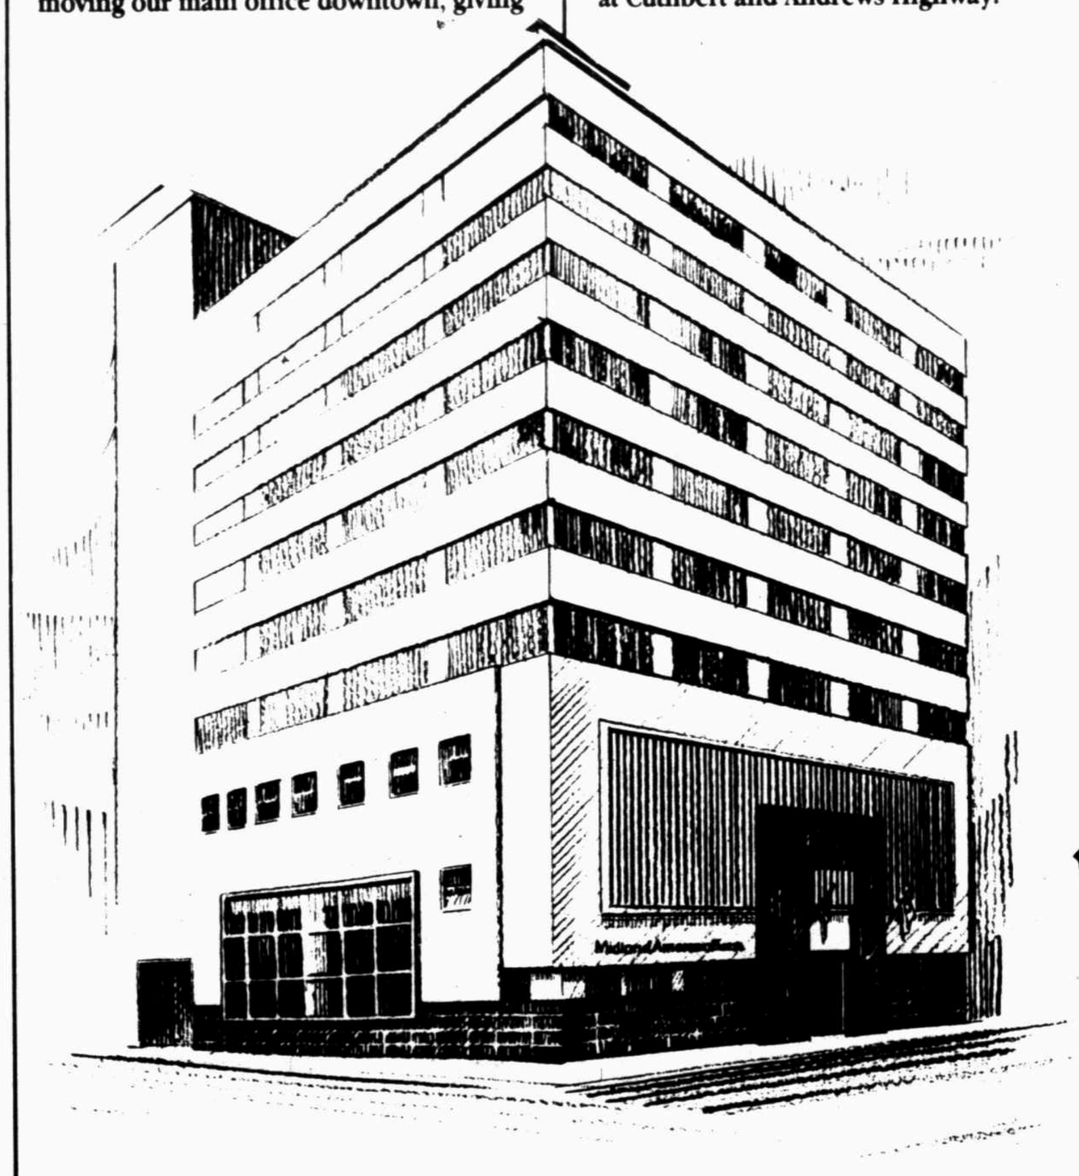

A Colombian presidential press officer, Alfonso Martinez, told The Associated Press that the report was accurate. The report apparently was leaked to the country's most important newspaper by government officials.

Summer arrives

Summer officially rolled into the Permian Basin — and the rest of the Northern Hemisphere — early today. As it did, the question undeniably resting on a lot of residents' tongues was "What kind of a summer is in store?"

Recent rains have given area farm and ranchland a sorely needed dose of moisture, but farmers and ranchers are well aware that it would only take a few weeks of scorching hot, dry weather to bring the ugly reality of the drought that has plagued West Texas the past couple of years back to the forefront.

In fact, more than a few farmers and ranchers remarked following the recent rains that while the moisture helped the local situation, a lot more rain would be needed to end the drought. We don't doubt their words.

The weather outlook for the summer of '84 should be of interest to more than just area agribusinessmen. Farming and ranching operations contribute significantly to West Texas economic vitality. When farmers and ranchers suffer because of lack of rain, their suffering filters down to every resident of West Texas.

A good place to get an idea of what the weather may hold in store is the National Weather Service. The forecast for most of West Texas and the Panhandle is promising, at least for summer's first few days. That forecast calls for temperatures, which have been below normal over the past few days, to begin returning to normal ranges, with a corresponding slow decrease in moisture.

Forecast for the remainder of June calls for "near normal temperatures and slightly above normal precipitation, primarily for the Panhandle," say the weather service employees, while the outlook for July and August is for near normal temperatures and precipitation.

Well, that may not be the summer weather forecast a lot of West Texans were hoping for, but it is more promising than just "hot and dry."

With a little luck, a few summer showers will fall on Midland and the surrounding area. That would make it a summer well worth remembering!

Another View:

Soviet isolationism

Beginning July 1, it could be considered a crime in the Soviet Union to provide even routine hospitality to foreigners without official permission. That is the practical effect of a vaguely worded new law that provides a range of punishments, from fines to possible criminal charges, for its violation. The precise acts that might be considered illicit under the law are not mentioned. Reference is made only to violations of the "rules" governing the stay or travel of foreigners in the Soviet Union. Those rules have never been promulgated in their totality. What might infringe on them is thus unclear or unknown. That is of no matter. The point of the new law is to insulate Russians from virtually all social relations with foreigners. That much everyone understands.

This marks the third major change in six months to toughen the Soviet Union's criminal code in an effort to discourage, under threat of harsh reprisals, personal contacts between Russians and foreigners. Earlier, it became a crime punishable by up to eight years "deprivation of freedom" to provide any "professional secret" to foreign organizations or their "agents." A professional secret in the Soviet Union is ipso facto any information, however inconsequential, that the authorities choose not to publicize. At the same time, it became an offense under the infamous "anti-Soviet agitation" section of the criminal code to possess any written material that is critical of the regime. That could include even the passive receipt of a letter from abroad.

Officially encouraged xenophobia has roots that run deep into Russia's past. It has always served as a method of control, a means for preventing the population from becoming exposed to foreign (meaning liberal) ideas whose power might one day help undermine the autocracy. As with the czars, so with their successors. It is not national pride or any sense of cultural superiority that prompts Russia's rulers to suspect and discourage unapproved contacts between Russians and foreigners. It is simple fear.

Nine years ago, in Helsinki, the Soviet Union joined with more than 30 other nations in an undertaking to "facilitate freer and broader dissemination of all forms of information" with other countries. That pledge of greater openness almost immediately was forgotten, and Soviet citizens who attempted to monitor official compliance with the Helsinki accords have been hounded, persecuted and ultimately crushed.

The psychological state of siege that, with brief interruptions, the Soviet regime has sought to maintain since its inception meanwhile has been intensified. Soviet citizens have been reminded in no uncertain terms that there are dangers in associating with foreigners, however innocent those associations may be. They have been reminded that their isolation has been imposed and will be enforced as a matter of state policy.

Soviet carriers to offer challenge

WASHINGTON — Deep in the Pentagon's secret planning councils, the Joint Chiefs of Staff have come to the conclusion that a nuclear holocaust is not likely. The reason for their guarded optimism is that the Soviet leaders are too cautious — and the United States is too strong.

Jack Anderson

The greater threat, according to our top military experts, would be limited military confrontations, with conventional weapons. The Soviets — who for years have been the world's greatest land power — are now challenging the United States for control of the seas.

It has been our carrier task forces that have given the U.S. Navy its power and reach. Not surprisingly, this is precisely where the Kremlin has decided to challenge us. After decades of neglect, the Soviets have seen that carriers are an effective means of extending their power.

The latest intelligence reports warn that the Soviets are building four new Nimitz-class carriers — nuclear-powered ships with conventional takeoff and landing capability that are expected to be deployed before 1990. The carriers will likely have 60 to 70 planes, including MiG-23s, an early-warning aircraft.

One secret Pentagon study estimates that by the year 2000 the Soviets may have nine aircraft carriers, including the four new ones.

The Soviet decision-making process on the carriers, and what they hope to gain with the ships, are revealed in highly classified intelligence reports and other studies reviewed by my associates Dale Van Atta and Donald Goldberg.

The Soviet navy's first proposal for an aircraft carrier came in 1925, but sank like a stone in the country's overriding necessity for defensive measures against a supposedly hostile capitalist world. The proposal surfaced again in 1936; Stalin's admirals wanted a carrier with icebreaking capability. In this period, a prestigious American company offered plans for three variations of a combined battleship-carrier.

The Soviets tried in vain to steal plans for the Nazis' aircraft carrier, Graf Zeppelin, before World War II. At the end of the war, the Russians captured the incomplete German carrier, which had been scuttled but not destroyed.

The Soviets raised the carrier and studied it closely. But it either capsized while under tow to Leningrad laden with war booty or was used for target practice and sunk in the Gulf of Finland.

Stalin eventually ordered a medium-sized carrier built, but Khrushchev halted construction after Stalin's death. Khrushchev viewed carriers as floating dinosaurs militarily vulnerable to nuclear missiles.

But with Khrushchev's abrupt departure in 1964, Leonid Brezhnev ordered full speed ahead, and in 1976 the Soviets' first carrier, the Kiev, appeared in the Mediterranean. As a Defense Intelligence Agency report interpreted Brezhnev's thinking, "an aircraft carrier would be militarily advantageous and politically useful," giving the Soviets "another of the trappings of great power status."

Although the CIA pronounced the Soviets' Kiev-class carriers "no military match for U.S. attack carriers," the new Soviet supercarriers are a different matter entirely. They suggest to the Pentagon's Kremlinwatchers that the Soviets have embarked on a deliberate policy of challenging the United States for control of the world's oceans.

UNDER THE DOME: Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, has asked the Federal Election Commission if he can designate his daughter Beth as an "aide" for a trip on which he'll be paid travel expenses and an honorarium by an organization his office declines to identify. Why does he care? Under the law, a member of Congress can get travel expenses for himself, his spouse and one aide. Stevens also asked whether his 2-and-a-half-year-old daughter Lily is eligible for travel expenses as "a dependent so young she cannot be left alone."

— The National Republican Senatorial Committee picked up the tab for $105 in registration fees for staff members of Sen. John East, R-N.C., at an anti-abortion conference in Washington some time ago. The use of political funds for office expenses was "a bookkeeping decision," according to an East spokesman.

Over the past year, the Senate's permanent subcommittee on investigations made 39 attempts to get reputed Chicago mob figure Anthony "Big Tuna" Accardo to testify on labor corruption. Accardo has spent time at St. Mary of Nazareth Hospital in Chicago and the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., for various ailments. At long last, he is scheduled to appear today for testimony before the subcommittee.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: The war between Iraq and Iran has been going on for almost four years now, and State Department sources say it is taking its toll on morale in the two countries. Grumbling is necessarily private in both dictatorships, and sources say that, despite the staggering death toll, popular support for the war is greater in Iran than in Iraq.

— The Reagan administration was embarrassed by recent newspaper photographs of Iranian troops crossing Iraqi marshlands in small boats whose motors were clearly emblazoned with the name of the American manufacturer. The motors had been approved for export as having no military use.

GEORGE F. WILL

WASHINGTON — The left has suffered sufficient disappointments to have learned equanimity. Nevertheless, when two spokesmen for that tendency are invited to voice a comprehensive arraignment of conditions and manage only to exercise a sedative effect, the exhaustion of the left is startling.

George F. Will

Puzzled by the relative silence of the left, The New York Times Magazine invited Irving Howe, editor of Dissent, and Michael Harrington, co-chairman of Democratic Socialists of America, to explain what the left thinks. The result was tepid porridge.

Howe says the left's role is "to put a little starch into traditional liberalism," meaning the Democratic Party, while keeping alive "the ideas of democratic socialism." He and Harrington begin with regrets about President Reagan's foreign policy, but are at pains to speak about national security, a concern they say was inadmissible on the left 15 years ago.

It is telling that they talk so much about U.S. foreign policy, and "north-south" redistribution of income, and the International Monetary Fund being mean to Third World governments that are on the dole. Philosophically interesting arguments are about domestic policy: how people should live together under a common sovereignty. There is no classic volume of political philosophy about relations between nations, which is a matter for prudential maxims. When the left is preoccupied with foreign policy, it is adrift from its philosophic tradition.

But when Howe and Harrington come to domestic policy, you understand why they do not seem eager to do so. The left's program turns out to be "Forward into the 1870s!" (rebuild the railroads) or "On to the 1940s — in Britain!" (economic planning).

Perhaps Harrington is, as socialists usually are, eager to shock the bourgeoisie, of which he is a member. In any case, he says the idea of economic planning "is pretty rough stuff for many Americans." Not really. What is rough is the task of convincing many Americans that planning by government would be an improvement on the sort of planning done by, say, IBM.

A more specific proposal is for a 35-hour work week — creating opportunity not by economic dynamism but by increasing pay relative to productivity. Harrington calls for "structural change" in the economy, which is like calling for night to follow day. In this country, change is not a choice; it is a constant.

Harrington says: "If a company was willing to go to McKeesport, Pennsylvania, and open up a profitable modern steel plant, then fine, I would be for giving them a big tax break for creating jobs." Forward to 1961: The investment tax credit has been with us since Kennedy (1962), and accelerated cost recovery (1981) is called, depending on your preference, "Reaganomics" or "trickle down."

It is extravagant for Howe to describe the new Eastern Airlines contract (in exchange for wage concessions, some workers get a percentage of equity in the corporation and seats on the board of directors) in socialist language. He calls it a step toward "workers' control of their economic life." In true socialist terms, such control means not just involvement in a corporation's decision-making, but government management of market forces. Eastern is more subject to those forces today than it was a decade ago.

Howe says he can give only "a few telegraphic clues" as to what he means by socialism. But even if the Swedish or British and East Bloc experiences are not clues enough about socialism, surely socialism, and the constant agenda of the left, must involve at least this: centralized state power used to promote material equality, through state direction of production, or state allocation of the product. However, what has collapsed under the weight of evidence during the last generation is precisely the belief that such measures are a reliable route to an open, progressive, dynamic and just society.

Harrington stresses "democratic, participatory, bottom-up" planning of this nation's gigantic economy. He deplores "elitist" governance by "experts" concerned with "technical details and fine print." But the policies he advocates require a regime he deplores.

It is idle sentimentalism to expect a modern welfare state to be both a powerful engine of distributive justice and a model of Jeffersonian "bottom-up" democracy, To govern is to choose. The left has made itself irrelevant to the contemporary political conversation by a refusal to choose. It is a refusal rooted in a willful sentimentalism. The result is blithe disregard of the costs of both the means and the ends of the program of the left.

ART BUCHWALD

What goes up must be shot down!

The successful test of an anti-ballistic missile against a dummy one in space could not come at a better time for President Reagan's campaign to get more funds for his "Star Wars" program.

Art Buchwald

It also vindicated the lifetime work of Professor Grindle Grindlewald, who was the first to put forward the theory that anything man could put into space he could also shoot down.

Ridiculed in the scientific community for years, Grindlewald may now go down in history as the Father of World War III.

I found the old man in his home in Falls Church, Va.

He took me into his garage and showed me sketches dating back to 1962 covered with mathematical calculations, and then told me his story.

"After the Soviets launched Sputnik, everyone in America panicked except me. I went to see Kennedy's people in the White House and said, 'There is only one answer to Sputnik. We have to launch a crash program to shoot it down.' They told me the president had a better idea. America would develop satellites of its own, and compete peacefully with the Soviets in space. Space, Kennedy insisted, must not be used as a launching pad for war.

"So he created NASA and sent manned and unmanned satellites into the sky, without giving any thought to their military value. Every time I saw one go up I got sick.

"Pretty soon there were hundreds of satellites swooping around the sky. It made me furious. While other space scientists were working to get more of them into space, I decided to devote my life to shooting them down."

"You were way ahead of your time."

Grindlewald said, "First I went to NASA and asked them if they would finance my research. No one would listen to me. They said the space program was man's last chance to improve the quality of life on earth and to unlock the secrets of the universe.

"Then I went to Congress with my dream. I asked them to let me shoot down one communications satellite to prove that it could be done. My timing was off because our astronauts had just landed on the moon and the country was brainwashed into believing this accomplishment was the dawn of a new civilization. I had to laugh.

"What finally saved me was Vladimir Richeskvy, a Soviet scientist who also had a deep hatred of using space for peaceful purposes. We met at a 'Star Trek' convention at Disneyland and exchanged views. I told him if he would let me steal his anti-satellite weapon plans I could prove the Soviets were going to use space to launch a first-strike attack on the U.S. Then Congress would give me funds to develop my program. In exchange I would let him steal my plans so he could prove to the Kremlin we were working on a top-secret strategy to shoot down their satellites. Then he could get all the rubles he needed from the Kremlin to finance his research.

"He naturally agreed, and now thanks to that meeting the U.S. and U.S.S.R. are on a collision course in space."

"Weren't you afraid of being arrested for exchanging secrets with the Soviets?"

"What secrets? Satellites are sitting ducks. All you have to do is aim a laser beam at one and it goes POOF!"

"You gave the space program a whole new lease on life," I said.

Grindlewald said modestly, "I never doubted we could do it. Once I proved the Soviets were up to their ears in space warfare research I had President Reagan's ear."

"What did he say when you showed him your anti-satellite weapons plan?"

"He just smiled and said, 'This is one small step for man and one giant leap for mankind!'"

Abrams: No blanket asylum for aliens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States cannot open its borders to refugees from El Salvador because that would demonstrate a lack of faith in the Salvadoran government, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams says.

Abrams, who heads the agency's human rights division, offered that assessment at a hearing Wednesday on a bill that would suspend deportation of Salvadoran illegal aliens for three years.

Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, asked Abrams why the government refuses to grant temporary amnesty to Salvadoran illegal aliens as it has to refugees from countries such as Iran and Poland.

"What would the implication be?" Abrams said. "That we have lost faith in the Salvadoran government?"

Abrams said human rights groups have yet to prove that deported Salvadorans face persecution when they return home.

"The large majority are economic migrants," he told a Rules subcommittee. "They are not here for political concerns."

Abrams and Immigration and Naturalization Commissioner Alan Nelson argued that the bill, sponsored by the subcommittee chairman, Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass., would give unwarranted special treatment to Salvadorans.

Nelson said that the measure "proposes to circumvent (the) system set up by the Refugee Act only three years ago and return to the ad hoc and discriminatory approach of the past."

Abrams said Polish refugees were admitted, in part, because "we don't have large-scale illegal immigration from Poland."

Frost suggested the government was being hypocritical in refusing blanket asylum to Salvadoran illegal aliens because they were too numerous while supporting a bill on the House floor to grant amnesty to millions of illegal aliens.

Church groups and human rights organizations contend that Salvadorans should be granted political asylum because they face torture or death if they are forced to return to civil war-torn El Salvador.

Refugees say Hanoi takes funds sent to kin

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's Vietnamese immigrant community sends more than $200 million a year to relatives left behind in Vietnam, but much of the money ends up in the treasury of Hanoi's communist government, a U.S. Senate panel was told Wednesday.

The money, along with packages of necessities dispatched from America, appear to be a major of source of foreign exchange for the Hanoi regime, according to testimony and documents placed before the banking subcommittee. Witnesses included detectives, customs officers and Vietnamese immigrants.

One witness, a 32-year old former naval officer of the defeated South Vietnamese government, was identified only as "Mr. X." He said he was wearing a blue mask to avoid being recognized by other immigrants. Some immigrants fear publicity about the flow of cash and goods might prompt the U.S. government to halt the community's effort to help distant families, in accordance with Asian tradition.

Other masked Vietnamese witnesses said they had received anonymous telephone calls warning them not to appear before the committee.

The subcommittee chairman, Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., said the Hanoi government apparently has organized citizens in a position to receive money from America into "small, easily-monitored groups" which periodically make "orchestrated appeals" to relatives in the United States. He quoted as his sources Vietnamese he has talked to, and said the hearing was called to determine whether a Hanoi-controlled "economic exploitation system actually exists and if so, how it works."

The panel also wants to determine whether proposed legislation totally banning export of funds to Vietnam would be justified, he said.

Mr. X and other immigrant witnesses said they were aware some of the money went into government coffers, but they kept sending it through collection centers in the Vietnamese community because part of the funds got through.

Vietnamese refugees in America "will go to any lengths to aid their family members left behind," said Sgt. John W. Willoughby Jr. of the New Orleans police dept. "They also know that many of the goods and often most of the money they send does not reach its destination, but send it anyway because a little is better than none."

Costa Rica yet to solve bombing that killed four

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Off to a slow start and diverted by false leads, Costa Rican authorities have not solved the bombing that killed four people and wounded 27 at a news conference by Nicaraguan rebel leader Eden Pastora.

Police officials have issued an international arrest warrant for a man who posed as a Danish photographer, but they do not know his true identity or where he might have gone. And they do not know who was behind the attempt to kill Pastora.

Authorities didn't begin their investigation until four days after the May 30 bombing. And they started on a cold trail that abruptly ended at a downtown hotel where the wanted man was last seen a day after the explosion.

The bombing occurred just inside Nicaragua on the banks of the San Juan River that divides the two nations. The bomb went off as Pastora, military leader of the Costa Rican-based Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, began talking to reporters who had traveled from San Jose to his headquarters.

The blast killed an American journalist, two Costa Rican journalists and a rebel.

Costa Rican authorities say the man probably entered the room in the wooden building with a "military-type mine" in an aluminum case and triggered it by remote control while standing outside.

The man called himself Per Anker Hansen.

About three weeks before the bombing he checked into the downtown Gran Via Hotel where he made friends with a Swedish television producer, Peter Torbiornsson. The two took some trips together before the bombing and they made the trip to the news conference together.

As it turned out, the man had a passport stolen in 1980 from a Per Anker Hansen in Copenhagen who told Danish authorities he has never been to Central America.

Torbiornsson said the wanted man spoke "very bad Danish." But Torbiornsson said he did not think anything was amiss until after the bombing when press reports began implicating the man.

Costa Rican authorities are investigating because the explosion involved Costa Rican citizens and at least part of its planning is presumed to have been done in Costa Rica.

At one time, authorities felt the man they wanted might be Spanish, based on a taped interview with reporter hours after the bombing.

Scores of women want to mother frozen embryos

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Scores of women from around the world are asking to become surrogate mothers of two frozen embryos left in legal limbo by the deaths of the millionaire couple that put them in cold storage.

Queen Victoria Medical Center in Melbourne said today that its in-vitro fertilization unit had received offers from women in Australia, the United States, Chile, Japan and other countries asking to have the embryos implanted in their wombs.

None of the women who called made any inquiry about legal rights the embryos might have to the reported million-dollar estate left by Mario and Elsa Rios when they died last summer in a plane crash in Chile, in-vitro unit spokeswoman Netta Barling said.

All the women who called were either unable to have children or wanted to give the embryos a chance at life, Ms. Barling said.

Officials at the in-vitro unit have said there is no guarantee that the embryos would survive thawing, since they were frozen in 1981, before the process was perfected.

The state of Victoria, meanwhile, announced that donated sperm from an unidentified Melbourne man was used to fertilize the two eggs of Elsa Rios instead of sperm from her husband. The hospital said it was restricted from commenting on that, but said all information had been given to a state committee investigating the issue and to attorneys for the Rios couple's living heirs.

Laura Kimche Horwitch, a Los Angeles attorney representing Rios' son by a previous marriage, said, "As far as Mr. Rios' estate is concerned, we will proceed as if my client (Michael Rios) is the sole heir of the estate in view of the fact that Mr. Rios was not the donor of the sperm that created these embryos."

Four Iranian military men seek political asylum

NICE, France (AP) — Four Iranian military men who fled Iran in a navy plane last week seeking political asylum left this resort city under heavy police escort for house arrest in Bordeaux.

Police sources close to Etienne Ceccaldi, the regional police chief, said the four were taken to Bordeaux late Wednesday and would stay there until another country agrees to accept them.

Officials said four other people aboard the Fokker-27, which left Iran Friday, would be returned to Iran as they requested. Arrangements also were being made to return the aircraft.

The plane landed at Nice Airport two days ago after futile attempts by the Iranians to gain refuge in Egypt and Italy.

French authorities negotiated for nearly 42 hours with the Iranians before deciding to send them to Bordeaux, a port city in southwest France.

Jewish terrorist sentenced

JERUSALEM (AP) — A convicted member of a Jewish terror ring was sentenced today to 10 years in prison by a judge who called on authorities to "uproot and liquidate" the underground network.

Spectators in the courtroom were silent when Judge Yisrael Weiner sentenced reserve army officer Gilad Peli, 31. Peli was taken to a cell beneath the courtroom, Israel Army Radio reported. He has 45 days to appeal.

Peli is one of three men convicted so far of membership in the organization, which is thought to be responsible for six acts of terrorism against Palestinians in the occupied West Bank. He is the first to be sentenced.

Twenty-four other men were arrested in connection with the underground group, which was uncovered in April after a plot to blow up Palestinian-owned buses failed.

Lion mauls Danish woman

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A Danish woman was badly mauled by a charging lion when she turned to face it after after dropping her 2-year-old son behind her to protect him, the Danish Embassy said today.

The attack occurred May 20 in Kenya's Aberdare mountains but apparently was kept quiet by Danish and Kenyan authorities until after the victim, identified as Helen Karlsen, was evacuated to Copenhagen on Monday for further treatment.

She suffered wounds on her face, neck, head, left shoulder and leg, but her son was unharmed.

Final 'No Mas' for Duran

Boxing legend hangs up 'Stone' gloves

PANAMA CITY (AP) — The Roberto Duran who was all but unbeatable in the lightweight division for much of the 1970s hasn't been around for some time. Now it looks like he won't go another round.

Duran, whose "Hands of Stone" carried him to successive boxing championships in the lightweight, welterweight and junior middleweight divisions, announced Wednesday at a news conference at the Panama City airport he is retiring from the ring. The development came just five days after his 33rd birthday last Friday, the day of his last fight.

"I don't think about boxing anymore. I am thinking now about having fun, good clean fun," Duran said following a flight here from Miami.

When Thomas Hearns stopped Duran in the second round of their World Boxing Council super welterweight title bout in Las Vegas, Nev., last Friday, he became only the second man to knock Duran down, and the first to knock him out.

"I was fighting a legend," Hearns said afterward. "He was the greatest fighter I've ever faced."

The retirement announcement is the second made by Duran in four years. This one almost certainly will stick.

THE FIRST time the Panamanian said he was finished fighting was the night of Nov. 25, 1980. On that night, in the Superdome at New Orleans, Duran quit in the eighth round against Sugar Ray Leonard and lost the World Boxing Council welterweight championship.

It was the "No mas" fight, a defeat that will remain a part of the Duran legend and will be discussed always along with the Panamanian's great victories, such as his lightweight title triumph over Ken Buchanan on June 26, 1972, and his WBC welterweight title victory on a 15-round decision in Montreal over Leonard on June 20, 1980.

There are two distinct segments to the 33-year-old Duran's career. He burst on the boxing scene when he knocked Benny Huertas in the first round of his 24th fight Sept. 13, 1971. From March 8, 1967, through the first Leonard fight, the one-time streetfighter was 71-1, with 55 knockouts.

His only defeat in that span came at the hands of Esteban DeJesus on Nov. 17, 1972 in New York. Knocked down for the first time in his career during the fight (a 10-round decision), Duran returned to his hotel with tears streaming down his face, beat his fists against the wall and vowed never to lose again.

It didn't look as if Duran would ever lose again until that fateful night against Leonard in one of the most baffling moments in ring history.

FOLLOWING THE victory over Leonard, Duran won five of his final 10 fights, only two by knockouts.

But those knockouts saved his career. One was a fourth-round KO over Pipino Cuevas, a former World Boxing Association welterweight champion. The other came in the eighth round at Madison Square Garden in New York against Davey Moore for the WBA junior middleweight title on June 16, 1983 — exactly one year before his demise against Hearns.

Baltimore using Yogi's philosophy

By The Associated Press

Yogi Berra may have coined the phrase "It ain't over until it's over," but Joe Altobelli's Baltimore Orioles are making it come true.

The Orioles won their third game in a row, downing the Boston Red Sox 4-1 Wednesday night. And for the the third game in a row they did it with some late-inning heroics.

Granted it wasn't as spectacular as Sunday's 6-2 victory over New York with Gary Roenicke's grand slam capping a five-run eighth-inning rally. And it certainly paled next to Tuesday night's 9-7 triumph over Boston, a game in which the Orioles trailed 7-1 after seven innings but scored four times in the eighth on Eddie Murray' grand slam and four more in the ninth.

This time, Baltimore did it with a four-run seventh, highlighted by Mike Young's three-run, two-out double, after Boston's Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd pitched six hitless innings.

"It was a ballgame he deserved to win," said Boston Manager Ralph Houk. "The kid pitched as good as you can pitch." Instead, the 4-1 setback was Boston's seventh in a row.

In other American League games Detroit outslugged New York 9-6 in 13 innings, Texas edged California 3-2, Milwaukee nipped Toronto 5-4, Chicago shaded Seattle 5-4, Oakland trounced Kansas City 8-1 and Minnesota thumped Cleveland 8-2.

Boyd retired 16 batters in a row after walking Cal Ripken Jr. with two out in the first inning and was staked to a 1-0 lead in the fourth on

American League

Tony Armas' 17th homer. But he hit Wayne Gross on the arm with an 0-2 pitch to start the seventh and the Orioles took advantage of the mistake.

"I didn't want to hit Gross; I had two strikes on him," Boyd said. "He's supposed to get out of the way on that pitch. I just wanted to move him back and then try to get him with the changeup."

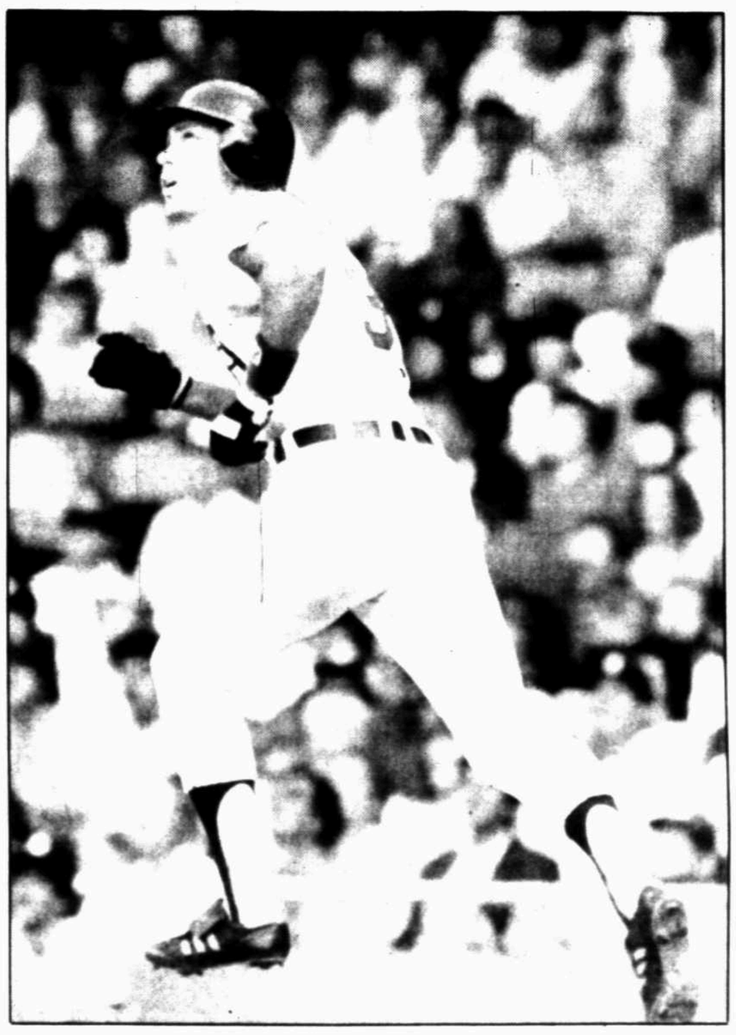

Ripken then doubled off the wall in left-center and Murray was walked intentionally to fill the bases. Boyd struck out John Lowenstein and Ken Singleton, but Young sliced a high drive — "An ordinary fly ball in most places," Houk said — that scraped the wall for a double, scoring all three runners. Young scored on Lenn Sakata's single.

Tigers 9, Yankees 6

Howard Johnson hit a three-run homer with two out in the bottom of the 13th inning, Detroit's fourth home run. Alan Trammell, Lance Parrish and Chet Lemon also connected as the Tigers boosted their lead in the AL East to 7½ games over Toronto. Dave Winfield homered for the Yankees.

After Ray Fontenot pitched five hitless innings, Jose Rijo took over in the 13th and issued a leadoff single to Parrish. Lemon, who had two singles, a double and a home run, sacrificed and pinch-hitter John Grubb was intentionally walked.

Landry defends his quarterback

McKINNEY (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry came to the defense of Danny White during the quarterback's misdemeanor assault trial, testifying that he might also slap a teen-ager if he felt his family was threatened on the highway.

Landry also told jurors Wednesday that White's job with the National Football League team is not in jeopardy because of the trial, which was scheduled to enter its fourth day today.

White is charged with assaulting Plano High School football player Jon Michael Clark. The 17-year-old says the Cowboys signal-caller tried to run him off a rural road for no apparent reason and then punched him in the nose at a stop light.

White claims he slapped Clark in self-defense after Clark instigated a dangerous game of speeding up and slowing down and almost forced White's van, carrying three of his children, into a head-on collision at 80 mph.

White faces a year in prison and a $2,000 fine if convicted.

LANDRY, CALLED by the defense as a character witness and mobbed by autograph seekers during a recess, testified that he believed White wouldn't have hit Clark without provocation.

Landry said if he and his children were "under the same type of stress situation that Danny was under, I might do the same thing."

White testified that Clark's Camaro kept accelerating as he tried to pass on the two-lane road, leaving the van in the lane of oncoming traffic.

His actions on the roadway were scrutinized Wednesday during cross-examination by prosecutor Randall Blake.

"You had at least two very reasonable alternatives — you could have slowed down and fallen in line behind the Camaro or you could have pulled off the road," Blake said to White.

White, 32, responded that there was no indication Clark wouldn't have continued to slow down with him and that there was no safe place to stop on the side of the road.

"You were in a race with him, weren't you?" Blake asked.

"No sir," White said.

WHITE TESTIFIED that he slapped the youth to impress upon him the seriousness of the incident and to prevent him from continuing to follow his van and repeating the driving gambit.

Defense attorneys called several Plano residents who said Clark has a bad reputation in the suburban community north of Dallas and was involved in at least three other dangerous driving incidents.

Two other witnesses, 16-year-old Kelly Lynn Pope and her mother Frances, testified that Clark, whose nickname is "Pyro," once left a dead cat on their doorstep after the high school student refused him for a date.

Andujar holds on until ninth before getting support

By The Associated Press

For a pitcher who doesn't get much hitting support from his teammates, St. Louis right-hander Joaquin Andujar isn't complaining. All he's doing is winning.

For two straight games, the Cardinals didn't give Andujar a single run to work with. And Wednesday night, that's the way it was until the ninth inning when David Green finally socked a two-out, two-run homer to power a 2-0 victory over the Montreal Expos.

National League

"Everybody knows we're going to score runs sooner or later," said Andujar, who improved his record to 11-6 with a four-hitter. "We don't have a great hitting team but we have good enough hitting. I don't worry about the hitting. I only think about throwing strikes and doing my job."

After a 6-16 record in 1983, Andujar has being doing his job rather well. He is tied with Charlie Lea of the Expos and Jack Morris of the Detroit Tigers in the American League for the most victories in the majors. Andujar's four shutouts and nine complete games both top the National League.

Montreal reliever Jeff Reardon, 3-2, who entered the game in the ninth after starter David Palmer tossed a six-hitter for eight innings, retired the first two batters he faced. But Tom Herr singled and Green then belted the first pitch to him for the game-winning homer.

"Galen said it was my hardest fastball," said Reardon, referring to Galen Cisco, the Expos' pitching coach. "I must have supplied the power. I thought it was just a fly ball. When the ball left Green's bat I started walking to the dugout. The pitch was a foot outside. I can't believe he even got the bat on it."

Braves 6, Giants 5

Len Barker pitched seven strong innings and Atlanta scored five times in the sixth inning with the help of wildness by San Francisco pitchers to beat the Giants.

Barker, 6-6, left the game after giving up the sixth San Francisco hit, a leadoff homer in the eighth by Johnnie LeMaster. He struck out 10 and walked four in his seven-plus innings of work.

Gene Garber and Terry Forster finished up, the latter recording his fifth save after giving up a run-scoring grounder to Steve Nicosia and RBI base hit to LeMaster in the ninth.

Rookie San Francisco right-hander Jeff Robinson, 3-8, did not allow the Braves a hit until one out in the sixth, when Rafael Ramirez singled sharply up the middle. Robinson then came unglued, leaving the game as the Braves scored five times with the help of a hit batsman, an error and three walks, two of which forced in runs.

Increase of $1.50 isn't bad

The annual greens fee golfers went home from Tuesday's open meeting at Hogan Park Golf Course happy with the prospect of retaining their $300 yearly rate with the addition of a $1.50 per round fee.

That's a lot better than the proposed hike of $300 to $600 that was to go into effect June 21. It may not be the $1.83 per round that the Parks and Recreation Dept. claims annual golfers have been paying, but in this day $3.33 a round is still a bargain.

Their recommendation will be submitted to the City Council next Tuesday for a yea or nay and councilman Jesse Hatfield assured that it will be given serious consideration.

WHILE THE annual greens fee player went home happy, it was because he took the time to show up for the meeting.

Three plans were offered by the P&R Dept. for consideration. Plan A was the doubling of the annual fees and raising the daily greens fees $1.50 across the board, bringing the daily rate for residents to $9 and the weekend fee to $11.

Plan C was the one to hold the line and add the per round tariff. It was approved.

Plan B would have done away with the annual fee and lowered the daily greens fee to $6 weekdays and $8 weekends.

One golfer claimed that the annual fee rates were discriminatory against the daily greens fee player, putting the burden for showing a profit on his shoulders.

That may be true, but when it came to a vote, only five of us were there to vote for Plan B. For all the concern shown by the daily greens fee player, they might as well have raised it to $20...he is willing to pay the freight.

That would enable the city to eliminate the $1.50 tax to which the annual greens fee player would be subjected each time he showed up for a round.

IT WAS a lively session that sometimes left frayed tempers, but the result was to leave golfers in attendance satisfied.

As to the baleful howls of protest from the daily greens fee player, the annual player observes that everyone has the same opportunity, annual memberships are not exclusive.

The daily counters that sometimes scrapping up $300 isn't that easy.

The annual responds that the city benefits from the lump sum to work with for a year.

It was revealed that last year there were some 475 on regular memberships and 92 over-65 annual fee players. Combined they played 40,800 rounds.

If annual fees were doubled, the number of annual memberships would fall, according to one argument against the hike.

One wonders whether the raising of the daily green fee will hurt the number of golf rounds appreciably. Last year $275,000 of the $350,000 taken in in greens fees came from the daily, non-membership golfer.

It was pointed out that Amarillo has a 36-hole public course with seven employees. Greens fees are $4 weekdays and $5 Sundays. "Annual rates are about the same, $300."

IN WRESTLING with the issue, some drastic proposals were made. One, "Do away with the pro. It has been done elsewhere. We can't afford Rex Worrell." The suggestion came after the revelation that the budget showed Worrell was allotted 54,500 to run the pro shop and snack bar.

A counter, proposal came from a golfer who said, "It will be cheaper for me to load up the car and drive to Stanton than it would be to play at Hogan if the annual fee is raised to $600. And firing the pro isn't the answer. We need Rex and his staff. They are the ones who taught me to play."

Rex pointed out that he hires a staff out of his allotment.

ANOTHER golfer said that the orginal 18 holes was built back in 1958 out of $185,000 of revenue bonds. "The increases proposed by the City Council are well over the 50 percent inflation rate."

Even moderator Mark Philpy, chairman of the Parks Board, got into the act. "There were no annual fees when I came and annual fees seem exclusive to me."

One golfer bristled at the attitude of the podium, "that you can pay $50 a round or go someplace else."

There was a prediction that "you will lose money with all three proposals."

It was lively for an hour and a half, but when it was over, most left the Hogan Park snack bar satisfied that at least their voices had been heard. A few others went away complaining about how Hogan had been turned into a country club.

Name the last golfer to win three British Opens in a row?

If Martin can back up his words...

Olympic Qualifying

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If high school sprint star Roy Martin of Dallas can run as boldly as he talks, watch out. The 17-year-old might become an Olympian tonight.

The high school junior won two heats in the men's 200-meter race Tuesday to qualify for tonight's semifinals. Another strong showing would put him into a field that is expected to include superstar Carl Lewis. No problem.

"I think I can (beat Lewis) if we finish the curve even because Carl likes to showboat," Martin said Tuesday. "I can't showboat a lot down the stretch. I just run."

The winner of his second-round heat in 20.28 seconds, Martin said, "I think I can do better. I think I have something left."

But when told that Lewis had won the next heat in 19.84, the fourth-fastest time ever run, Martin said, "I don't think I have that much left."

Martin, a cousin of former Dallas Cowboys football star Harvey Martin, said Lewis had offered him some advice before the competition.

"He told me to run the curve and not give out," Martin said. "And that's what I did."

And Martin's picks for the U.S. team in the 200?

"I think Carl will finish first, I'll finish second and Kirk Baptiste third," said Martin.

World champion Calvin Smith might beg to differ.

SUPERSTAR CARL Lewis isn't the only one at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials talking about winning four medals in the Olympic Games. Chandra Cheeseborough also is investigating the possibility.

Cheeseborough put herself in the running for a medal in the women's 400-meter by winning the Trials final Tuesday night in an American record 49.28 seconds. The feat also earned her a spot on the U.S. 1,600-meter relay team in the Games.

Today, Cheeseborough competed in the Trials of the women's 200. A top three finish in the final Friday would give her a third opportunity in the Games and a possible shot at competing on the U.S. 400-meter relay team.

Cheeseborough made the American team for the 1976 Games in the 100 and finished sixth.

Lewis hopes to make the men's team in the 100, 200, 400 relay and long jump. He already has earned a spot in all but the 200, where the final will be run tonight.

JOHN MARSHALL, who finished third in the men's 800 to make the U.S. Olympic team, twice proved this week that he would do just about anything to earn a trip to Los Angeles for the Games.

First, there was the ice.

When Marshall's legs tightened on him earlier in the week, someone suggested that the Villanova runner sit in a tub of ice for 15 minutes.

"I hate ice," Marshall said. "I waited an hour before I got up the nerve to go in. But if I had to do it to make the team ... "

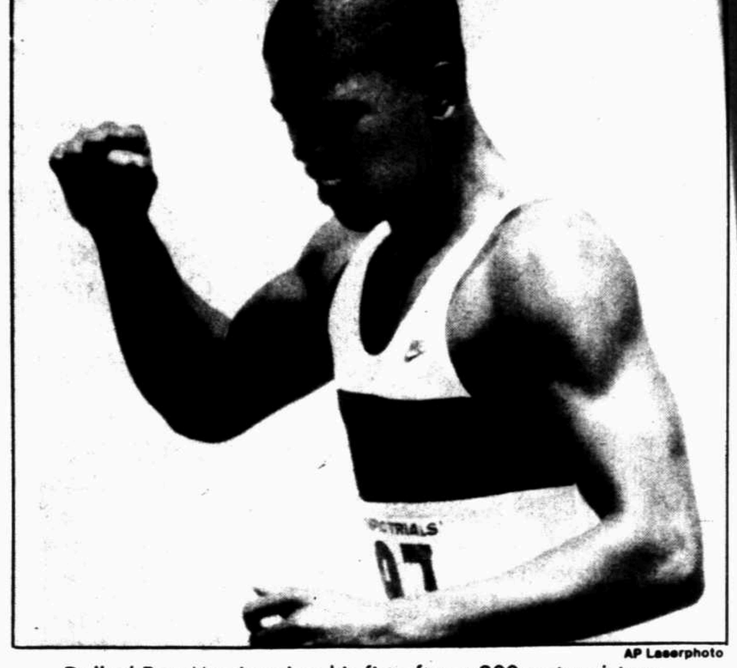

Then in Tuesday night's final, Marshall had to lunge at the finish line to ensure that he finished ahead of James Robinson. He fell to the track later, bruising a knee and elbow.

IS TRACK a young man's sport? Pole vaulter Billy Olson obviously thinks so.

While discussing his various injuries this season — including hamstring, ankle and Achilles tendon problems, the 25-year-old Olson quipped: "I'm too old to be healthy."

THREE-TIME Olympian Craig Virgin had a special reason to be excited about making the U.S. Olympic team in the men's 10,000.

Gesturing to his wife, Sandy, to whom he has been married for about a year, Virgin said: "She never knew me when I was successful. She met me during the slump period. Now I hope she'll see me during some good periods."

AMERICAN

Lou Whitaker lined out before Johnson blasted his fifth home run of the season off the facing of the right-field upper deck.

Rangers 3, Angels 2

Larry Parrish belted a one-out homer off Geoff Zahn in the ninth inning, setting a club record by driving in a run for the 11th straight game. Parrish's 12th home run erased the club record of 10 consecutive games with at least one RBI originally set by Jeff Burroughs in 1974. The streak is two short of the AL record set by Taft Wright of the Chicago White Sox in 1941. Oscar Grimes of the Chicago Cubs holds the major-league mark of 17 straight games in 1922. Charlie Hough hurled a four-hitter in handing the Angels their fourth consecutive setback.

Brewers 5, Blue Jays 4

Jim Gantner singled home a run in the ninth inning to give Milwaukee its second consecutive ninth-inning victory over Toronto. Bill Schroeder opened the ninth with a single off starter Doyle Alexander and pinch-runner Rick Manning was sacrificed to second. Jimmy Key relieved and walked pinch-hitter Mark Brouhard before Gantner delivered a soft single to center for his third hit of the game. The Brewers tied the score in the eighth when Ben Oglivie singled home Cecil Cooper, who had doubled.

White Sox 5, Mariners 4

Consecutive seventh-inning doubles by Joel Skinner and Julio Cruz snapped a 2-2 tie and LaMarr Hoyt scattered eight hits in 8 2-3 innings. With one out in the seventh, Skinner doubled high off the left-field wall and Cruz followed with a double down the right-field line. He eventually scored on Tom Paciorek's sacrifice fly. Chicago added an unearned run in the eighth and it proved decisive when Seattle scored twice in the ninth, once on Dave Henderson's homer.

A's 8, Royals 1

Dave Kingman walloped his third grand slam and major league-leading 19th homer of the season. Kingman, who leads all active players with 14 career grand slams, tied Joe DiMaggio for 30th on the all-time home run list at 361 with his towering 400-foot blast off Mark Gubicza in the first inning. The grand slam tied Kingman with Gil Hodges for seventh on the all-time list. Winner Bill Krueger allowed eight hits in 7 2-3 innings.

Twins 8, Indians 2

Kent Hrbek slammed a triple and two doubles and Gary Gaetti hammered a pair of doubles and drove in three runs. Winner Frank Viola, celebrating the birth of his first child on Tuesday, blanked the Indians on four hits until the eighth when Pat Tabler rapped a two-run triple.

Mets 7, Phillies 4

Darryl Strawberry hit a three-run homer and Mookie Wilson a two-run shot as New York beat Philadelphia to move within a half-game of the East-leading Phillies.

Ron Darling, 7-3, gained his first victory over the Phillies after three defeats with relief help from Doug Sisk, who gained his eighth save. Darling worked 6⅔ innings, allowing eight hits and three earned runs. He struck out six and walked four.

Reds 4, Dodgers 2

Jeff Russell knocked in the winning run with a fourth-inning single and scattered six hits for his first victory since May 11 as Cincinnati beat Los Angeles.

Padres 6, Astros 2

Triples by San Diego pitcher Tim Lollar and Tony Gwynn and two errors by Houston highlighted a three-run sixth inning that boosted the Padres over the Astros.

Lollar, 6-5, tripled to start the rally and scored on second baseman Phil Garner's error.

Pirates 5, Cubs 1

Jose DeLeon held Chicago hitless for 5⅔ innings before settling for a three-hitter as Pittsburgh, with the help of a key run-scoring double by Dale Berra, beat the Cubs.

DeLeon retired the first nine batters he faced until Bob Dernier drew a lead-off walk in the fourth inning.

DURAN

"I was born again," said Duran. "After last night, I forget whatever happened in the past. I'm thinking of the present and the future."

The victory over Moore was important because in the eyes of Duran and his fans it provided redemption for his quitting against Leonard.

Then came a 15-round fight against Marvelous Marvin Hagler, the undisputed middleweight champion. Duran's bid to become the first man to win world titles in four weight classes ended in defeat, although it was a close but unanimous decision. Duran fought cleverly, but many observers thought Hagler was overly cautious.

Against Hearns, the tricks of the trade learned over the years were not enough to save Duran. The end came at 1:07 of the second round as he lay face down after a third knockdown in the desert heat at Caesar's Palace. The referee didn't even bother to count.

Packers sign top draft pick

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Defensive end Alphonso Carreker, the No. 1 draft choice of the Green Bay Packers, signed four one-year contracts Wednesday with the National Football League team.

The terms of the contracts were not released, but it reportedly includes a signing bonus of $850,000 for the former Florida State star.

"From my standpoint, I'm extemely pleased to have Alphonso as a member of this football team," Packers Coach Forrest Gregg told a news conference. "I think he's important to us in a lot of ways ... important to us every Sunday this fall."

Carreker, who considered an offer from the Tampa Bay Bandits of the United States Football League, said, "It's a big relief. I've been waiting a month and a half now. I'm glad to get it over with now."

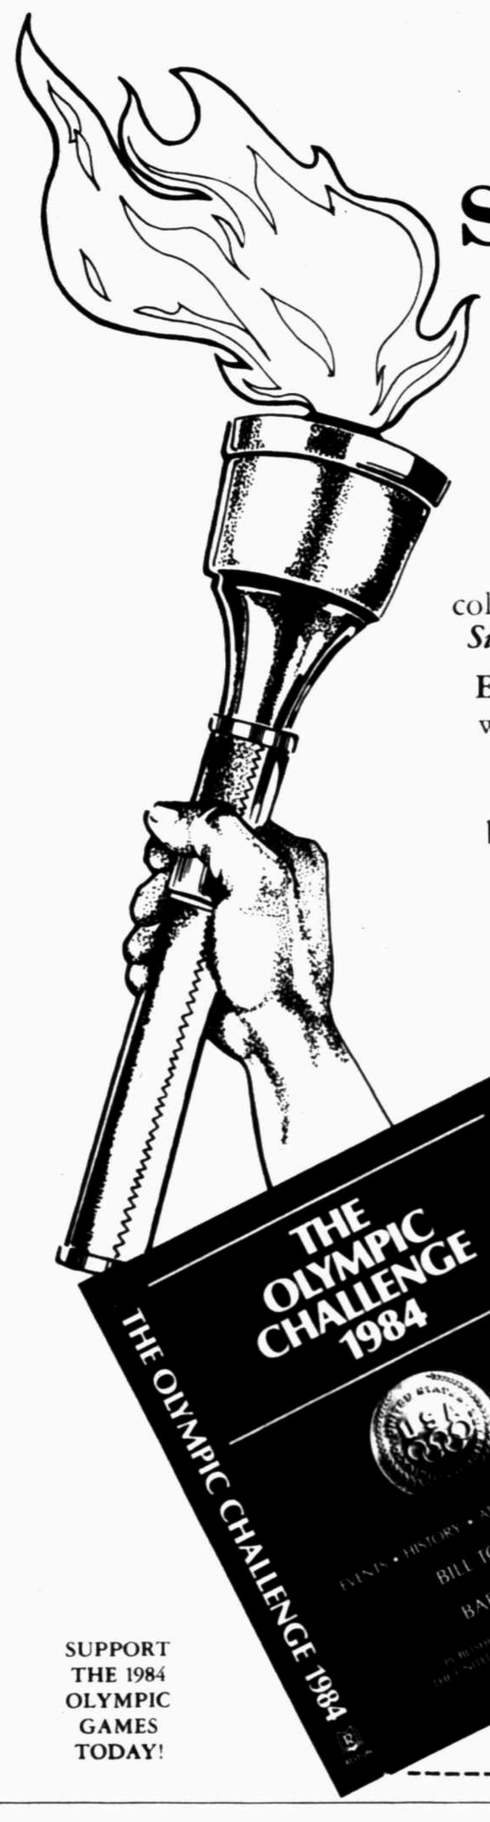

The 6-foot-6, 260 pounder said he had wanted to play in the NFL "since my freshman year in college.

GOP beats Democrats in annual House game

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Carl Pursell's bases-loaded single and Manager Silvio Conte's insults propelled Republicans to a 13-4 comeback victory over the Democrats Wednesday night in the annual House baseball game.

The Democrats, who now trail in the series 16-6 with one tie, held a 4-1 lead when Republicans exploded for five runs in the bottom of the 5th inning.

Although he never made it to second base on the hit, Pursell, of Michigan, cleared the bases for the GOP with his team trailing 4-2. Michael Oxley of Ohio followed with a double, Dan Coats of Indiana singled and Rod Chandler of Washington singled to cap the GOP rally.

The Republicans, with a 6-4 lead, then tallied seven runs in the 6th to end the scoring.

Conte of Massachusetts, chomping on a cigar, kept up a constant chatter, urging on his own players and often needling the Democrats.

"You're swinging like a rusty gate," he yelled at Democrat Larry Smith of Florida. "I used to have a gate like that on my old farm."

"Put your foot right here," Smith yelled back, pointing with his bat to home plate.

Both sides brought their supporters to the stands of this community ballpark, and they weren't shy about hurling their own insults.

"Put in Tip O'Neill," a Republican fan screamed when the GOP began pounding Democratic pitchers Dave McCurdy of Oklahoma, and two Californians, Ronald Dellums and Mel Levine.

The House speaker sat in the front row in the stands behind the Democrats' dugout, wearing a white hat, a blue sweater and smoking a cigar.

Most of the players wore uniforms given them by their favorite major league teams, but admitted they must be returned after the game.

There were no women players, although several female House members were in the stands.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has filed a tariff with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to make end user common line charges associated with Centrex CO service equal to those to be billed to Private Branch Exchange service. The Commission has suspended the proposed tariff until October 1, 1984, or before, and assigned the matter to Docket No. 5686.

The equalization of end user common line charges for Centrex CO service is to be accomplished by a reduction in Centrex service charges. The net effect of the Centrex service charge adjustment and an interstate end user common line charge will be an increase in total billing.

NBA drafts four from Texas Schools in first round

By The Associated Press

The University of Houston produced the first and last players taken in the first round of Tuesday's National Basketball Association draft.

As expected, Akeem "The Dream" Olajuwon of Lagos, Nigeria was picked by the Houston Rockets as the No. 1 overall selection.

The 24th and final selection of the first round was Michael Young of the Cougars who went to the World Champion Boston Celtics. Young is from the city of Houston.

"I think I'm very lucky to stay in Houston," Olajuwon said. "That's the best thing that could have happened to me."

Asked about being in the lineup with last year's No. 1 pick, Ralph Sampson, Olajuwon said,"I think that will be a good combination. He's a good player and I'd like to play with him."

The Celtics, who need outside shooting, hoped Young would be just what they need with his soft, deadly outside jumpers.

"I believe Boston will probably use me at guard although I can play the wing," said Young.

Young said,"I was kind of surprised I didn't go earlier in the first round but it's nice to be going to a world champion team. I feel I can produce for them. They have some great players but I think I can contribute."

The Southwest Conference also produced another first rounder in Arkansas guard Alvin Robertson, the No. 7 selection who went to the San Antonio Spurs.

Robertson is a tremendous defensive player whose shooting skills improved his senior season with the Razorbacks.

Also chosen in the first round was Lamar University guard Tom Sewell, picked 22nd by the Philadelphia 76ers.

IN THE second round, the University of Texas at El Paso's Fred Reynolds was picked by the Washington Bullets as the 44th player chosen.

In the third round, Nigerian Yommy Sangodeyi of Sam Houston was taken by New Jersey.

The Dallas Mavericks picked John Horrocks, a 6-9 forward from North Texas State in the fourth round.

In the fifth round, the Chicago Bulls picked another Lamar player, guard Lamont Robinson.

Young said, "I had heard rumors that I would go higher in the draft. But I talked to Clyde (former teammate Clyde Drexler) and he told me that anything could happen so I was prepared for the unexpected."

Young said he was pleased to be going to a team with the Celtics' tradition.

"There's a lot of tradition down there," he said. "They've won 15 world championships so I'm looking forward to playing pro ball there. It's something I've wanted to do since I was a little child."

Robertson, in Bloomington, Ind., for workouts with the 16 players trying out for the U.S. Olympic basketball team, said, "I'm very happy to be a member of the San Antonio Spurs. Hopefully I can go down there and contribute. You always try to play your strengths. I'll try to play aggressive man-to-man defense and try to be successful."

Robertson, 6-foot-3, said he has been aiming for the NBA since he was a youngster. "I was always emulating NBA players," he said.

Sewell, who averaged 22.9 points per game last season, shooting 53.9 percent from the field, expressed surprise at his early selection.

"I was a little surprised but I'm very happy to go in the first round," he said. "The first round means a whole lot. It means at least a one yar guaranteed contract and if I work hard and get to play, I will prove that I belong in the NBA."

"It's his strength, no question," Lamar Coach Pat Foster said of Sewell's shooting ability. "It's brought him to this point and I think with hard work he's got what it takes for the NBA."

Reynolds, a 6-foot-6 forward-guard who lead the Miners the Western Athletic Conference championship and a berth in the NCAA playoffs, said Tuesday that although he was surprised to be picked by the Bullets, he was looking forward to playing with the team, which he described as "very physical."

Reynolds averaged 13.9 points per game last season and was selected to the All-WAC's first team.

"I had no idea (I'd go to Washington)," Reynolds said. "I thought anyone else but the Bullets. But I think I'm in pretty good shape. I think I'm going to be playing a swing (position)."

The Houston native said he was somewhat surprised by how late in the draft he was picked. He was the 44th pick overall and said, "I thought I would have went sooner. But I can't really say I'm disappointed. It's a blessing in disguise I think because I'm going to a good program where I think I can fit in."

Pizza delivery: Hogs served in Japan

HONG KONG (AP) — While Chinese chefs prepared oriental delicacies in a hotel kitchen, William Sherwood of Fayetteville, Ark., baked an order of pizzas to go for his beloved Arkansas Razorbacks.

Sherwood traveled 8,000 miles to bring his King Pizzas to the Arkansas basketball team who had just finished an exhibition tour of Japan.

"It's real good," said 6-foot-7 Charles Balentine as he took the first bite of the globe-trotting pizza. "The bite makes me feel more homesick."

Sherwood decided last week to bring the pizzas from his restaurant in Fayetteville after reading in the Arkansas Democrat complaints the team members made about Japanese food. The players talked about the fast-food outlets in Japan and then Balentine remembered that King Pizza delivered anywhere.

That was enough for Sherwood, a devoted Razorback fan."Everybody read that and it was sort of a group decision to treat the team to pizza," Sherwood said last week.

He packed some half-baked pizzas in dry ice and set off for Hong Kong. He first drove to Tulsa, Okla., then flew to New Orleans for the flight to the Far East.

"Everbody at home loves the Razorbacks," he said. "The team members frequent my restaurant in the campus. I am their fan and I will support them in every way."

"People don't understand that we're one big family in Arkansas," Bill Kennedy, general manager of King Pizza in Fayetteville, said last week. "Bill Sherwood even has it in his will ... that if anything happens to him and his wife, everything goes to the University of Arkansas."

The Razorbacks compiled a 3-3 record in Japan and then toured Hong Kong. They return Friday and Sherwood will come home the next day.

Atlanta has been good to Peete

ATLANTA (AP) — Calvin Peete says it's the stop on the PGA Tour that seems to whip his game into shape each year.

"For the last three or four years, this is where I normally start playing well, so I just hope that tradition continues," Peete said Wednesday.

Peete, forced to drop out of last week's U.S. Open because of dehydration, said he's ready to defend his championship in the $400,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Golf Classic beginning today on the 7,018-yard, par 72 Atlanta Country Club course.

"The Atlanta tournament normally gets me started for the summer," he said.

Peete posted a 10-under-par 206 total to win last year when the event was reduced to a 54-hole test because of inclement weather.

He also played well in the three previous Atlanta tournaments, finishing in a tie for 12th in 1982, a tie for third in 1981 and alone in fourth place in 1980.

Peete dropped out of last week's Open early in the first round because of the loss of fluid in his body.

"I was fine 30 minutes later after I got some fluids in me," he said. "I guess I got dehydrated the week before at Westchester in all that heat we had. That's the hottest I've been since the PGA in Tulsa a couple of years ago."

Peete said he was disappointed over withdrawing from the Open "because I had been off four weeks before Westchester and I felt fresh and ready to play."

Peete, who stands 35th on this year's money list with $107,572, has a history of making his move as the hot weather approaches.

He won four tournments in 1982, the first coming in July, and made his triumph here in late May last season his first of two 1983 triumphs.

Peete faces a 156-man field in this chase for the $72,000 first prize.

"This is probably one of the strongest fields that I've witnessed since I've been coming to Atlanta," he said. "It feels great to be the defending champion because you know you've done well before, so why not again."

The field features Fuzzy Zoeller and Australian Greg Norman, who battled to a 72-hole draw in the U.S. Open before Zoeller ran away with the title by eight shots when he fired a 67 in Monday's 18-hole playoff.

Also competing on the hilly Atlanta layout will be Hale Irwin, who led the Open for three rounds last week; Andy Bean, Masters champion Ben Crenshaw, former champion Larry Nelson, Tom Kite, Raymond Floyd, Great Britain's Nick Faldo and Gary Koch, a two-time winner this year.

Portions of the final two rounds on Saturday and Sunday will be televised by CBS.

JIM MURRAY

Anti-climatic playoff typical for U.S. Open

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

MAMARONECK, N.Y. — If you were to cut open golf's Great White Shark, you almost surely would find in there not a passel of old inner tubes and life preservers from sunken ships but a little gold-headed bull's-eye golf putter, in splinters.

When last seen, the game's erstwhile terror of the deep was busy taking a bite out of that weapon on the fringe of a green at Winged Foot Golf Course, where it had just cost him the playoff for the U.S. Open golf championship and the shark's share of a purse of $141,000.

The Great White turned out to be just a papier-mache prop to scare people on the lot at Universal Pictures or turn into a ride at Disneyland. Sand is no place for any self-respecting shark, and this one would have been better off as a camel because he was in more sand that soggy afternoon than than a desert caravan.

In fact, the way the Great White Greg Norman was going, a few more holes and he would have missed the cut.

The U.S. Open playoff last Monday was as one-sided as a flood and as dull as a fox hunt. If you considered this a contest, you would enjoy a hanging. It was the most lopsided 18-hole playoff in U.S. Open history, or since Bobby Jones beat Al Espinosa here 141 to 164 in 1929. Winged Foot is in a rut. It specializes in massacres. Open playoffs are as anticlimactic as old dance cards and this was no exception. They should be abolished.

THE ISSUE was in doubt clear through the second hole. As usual in golf, it turned on a shot a guy wasn't even trying to make. Player No. 1, F.U. Zoeller, faced with a 68-foot putt off the second green, decided to see if he could bite off at least 60 feet of it. He considered the hole academic and of minor interest at the moment. He was just jockeying for position.

The ball double-crossed him: it rolled in the cup. Meanwhile, back on the green, player No. 2, nicely on the green with the ball 18 feet from the hole, suddenly saw his 18 feet go to 80. He three-putted.

From then on, it wasn't a tournament, it was a parade. When you three-putt from 18 feet and the other guy makes it from 68, God is trying to tell you something. Look at it this way: it's no time to press the back-nine bet.

"I tried to force my putt into the hole. You can't do that at Winged Foot," Norman said ruefully, later.

The rest of the round was just a solo by the artist, Maestro Zoeller. Norman was just part of the scenery, the French horn accompaniment. Zoeller hardly noticed him the last 16 holes. For one thing, he was seldom in sight. Zoeller was playing Winged Foot. Norman was touring the suburbs.

FRANK U. ZOELLER is a throwback anyway to the past masters of this kind of match play. He's not of the new breed of golfers, the grim-faced, serious-minded youngsters who attack the game with the elan of a guy doing windows or laying sidewalk.

Fuzzy's attitude is more like the storied Walter Hagen's. He smokes. He jokes. He drinks a little, stays up late. He thinks he's lucky golf is around so he doesn't have to show up at the factory. He's glad to be in a business where you don't have to be able to count to more than 80 or do any heavy lifting. For one thing, he's got a bad back.

He whistles on his way around a golf course. He doesn't act as if it's high Mass or a meeting to elect a Pope. It's a game, for crying out loud! You get paid for playing, while other guys work all week so they can golf on weekends. And you're lucky enough to have a guaranteed starting time.

THEY SAY Hagen used to come on the tee in top hat and dancing pumps with a white scarf and champagne bottle sticking out of his pocket.

Fuzzy didn't quite do that. But he pulled a telephone out of his golf bag on the first tee and asked Norman if he wanted to make a call to the warden or his lawyer or somebody.

Fuzzy also had a game plan. You see, modern-day golfers like to play the game at a pace where their clubs get cobwebbed before the shot. You could play chess by telephone faster than some of them go through 18 holes.

So, Fuzzy speeded up the projector and the sound track till it looked like one of those 1914 newsreels, or early Chaplins. Fuzzy likes to make the game a jerky blur. He doesn't have to agonize over a shot like a constipated chicken. He just hits it and starts to whistle. Fuzzy's style is the fast break.

Norman didn't catch on till it was too late. "It was difficult to get yourself to slow down at the pace we were playing," he said. "I kept saying to my caddy, 'We got to change the momentum here.' I kept saying to myself, 'Once I got the honor, I'm going to change it.'"

IN GOLF, to get the honor (be first to tee off on a hole), you've got to win a hole.

Norman did that only twice in 18 holes. By the time he got the honor on the 17th hole, Zoeller was nine shots ahead and Norman wanted to play on the dead run. "I just wanted to get the hell out of there," he grinned. He came up to 18 waving a white flag.

"Did I speed up play?" Zoeller said in response to a question. "Well, just say we wanted to beat TV, to finish before they came on the air." The supposition is, he also wanted to beat Norman.

The playoff didn't succeed in beating TV. But the real game was so long over when it came on camera they had to be content to do reruns. They gave history, not news. The live tournament was yesterday's roses by the time its lights came on.

The Great White Shark was beached, Fuzzy was whistling a medley of Elmo Tanner's all-time favorites and golf was reminded once again that, if you have to go into extra innings, you do it then and there like baseball, football, basketball and hockey.

Otherwise you got a show about as exciting as watching a guy beat his brother-in-law out of $2 in a club Nassau. You don't stay over a second day to watch Fuzzy Zoeller take a walk in the park. Or, more correctly, a trot in the park.

Griffith agrees to sell Twins for $32 million

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Twins President Calvin Griffith has agreed to sell his family's controlling interest in the baseball club to Minneapolis banker Carl Pohlad for $32 million, according to published reports Wednesday.

Sources close to the deal told the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch and Minneapolis Star and Tribune that Griffith signed a letter of intent Tuesday agreeing to sell the American League club to Pohlad.

While a number of details still must be worked out, Pohlad is expected to add his signature to the agreement during a pre-game ceremony Friday night at the Metrodome.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

Pohlad also apparently is continuing negotiations for the 42 percent minority stock that a group of Tampa, Fla., businessmen purchased in April from Washington, D.C., insurance executive H. Gabriel Murphy. Pohlad has said that while he would like to acquire the minority stock in order to realize tax savings, purchase of the stock is not essential.

A brief statement issued by Pohlad Tuesday indicated only that Griffith had received the letter of intent.

"We have presented to Calvin Griffith and (his sister) Thelma Haynes our letter of intent reflecting the substance of the continuing discussion which we have had regarding our proposal to purchase their interest in the Minnesota Twins baseball club," Pohlad said in the statement.

"All parties have agreed that it is not in our best interest, at this time, to publicly disclose the content of the letter of intent," the statement continued.

"We understand that our proposal will be seriously considered and we look forward to receiving a positive response by Friday, at which time a formal signing will take place at the Metrodome baseball diamond prior to the game."

Pohlad declined further comment on the matter.

The statement, which implies that Griffith, not Pohlad, still must sign the agreement, was followed immediately by a flurry of confusion over who had signed what.

At first, Griffith, who described Tuesday as "a great day," would say only that he and his sister received the letter of intent from Pohlad and that it was being analyzed.

"One or two words need to be changed," said Griffith, the 72-year-old Twins president. "We had a very positive meeting and there were all good intentions."

Sixers never serious about trading Erving to Clippers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers discussed trading perennial All-Star forward Julius Erving to the San Diego Clippers but never seriously considered the San Diego offer, according to Coach Billy Cunningham.

"There were talks, but they are the one who called us concerning that, and the bottom line is that we said, 'No,'" Cunningham said.

General Manager Pat Williams said the Clippers wanted the 34-year-old Erving, who does not have a no-trade clause in his contract, and Philadelphia's No. 10 and No. 22 picks in the first round of the draft held Tuesday in exchange for 23-year-old power forward Terry Cummings.

"What they wanted from us was just too much," said Williams, who denied the Sixers were offered $1.5 million in cash in the deal.

Howver, sources in the San Diego franchise told the Philadelphia Inquirer that a deal was so close the Clippers notified the league office in New York to expect a transaction before the pre-draft deadline.

National Basketball Association spokesman Brian McIntyre refused Wednesday to say whether the league had been contacted about the trade.

Cunningham, who agreed the offer was too one-sided, said the Sixers would not have accepted even a modified offer without obtaining Erving's approval.

"It goes deeper than just trading a player," Cunningham said. "When you think of him and what he's done for this franchise, and for the NBA, well...."

Williams said Erving adamantly refused to leave Philadelphia.

Minnesota teen new Junior Miss

Kvanli

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Blue-eyed, freckle-faced Amber Kvanli, of Willmar, Minn., shed no tears after being chosen the 1984 America's Junior Miss — a title she said was best enjoyed with calmness.

"I'm a very calm person. I don't get upset very easily. If you get upset, you can't enjoy what's happening." But she admitted, "Inside, I'm a little upset."

Judges picked the Minnesota Junior Miss contestant from among 52 high school seniors from the 50 states, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia who competed Wednesday night in the nationally televised pageant hosted by former Olympic decathalon champion Bruce Jenner.

Ohio Junior Miss Laura Liu of Canfield was first runner-up, winning $11,000 in scholarships.

Oklahoma Junior Miss Christi Dannemiller of Yukon was second runner-up, winning $9,000 in scholarships.

The other top-five finishers were Colorado Junior Miss Joan Simms of Pueblo, who got a $5,000 scholarship, and Vermont Junior Miss Debra Lewin of South Burlington, who got $6,750 in college aid.

LONDON (AP) — Prince William today got what just about any 2-year-old boy would like for his birthday — a red car.

But the present — one of several given to the son of Prince Charles and Princess Diana — was a bit special. It's an electric-motored miniature replica of a Jaguar XJS Cabriolet sports car, built just for Prince William by three apprentices at the state-owned Jaguar factory in Coventry.

Prince Charles owns a Jaguar Daimler Sovereign limousine.

William's birthday party was being celebrated at Highgrove, the family's country home in Gloucestershire in western England. Buckingham Palace said it was an entirely private family event and there were no details about who was on the guest list.

Rotten

LONDON (AP) — Johnny Rotten, whose now defunct group the Sex Pistols helped propel punk rock music to popularity, let loose with a stream of four-letter words after a brush with customs officials at Heathrow airport.

Other travelers looked shocked and parents ushered their children away as the singer, sporting green sunglasses and orange hair, stormed out of a baggage search area on Wednesday.

Rotten was reportedly in a jovial mood on the flight from Los Angeles, where he now lives. His mood apparently turned sour when custom officials on the lookout for drug-smuggling celebrities rifled through his luggage.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Talk show host Alan Thicke and soap opera star Gloria Loring are filing for divorce after 13 years of marriage, a spokeswoman for the actress said.

The divorce announcement came only two weeks after the couple was named International Parents of the Year by the Juvenile Diabetes Association.

The couple cited "irreconcilable differences" for the breakup, spokeswoman Susan Patricola said Wednesday.

They have two sons, Brennan, 9, and Robin, 7.

Miss Loring stars as Liz Chandler on the NBC daytime show "Days of Our Lives." As a singer she's made more than 300 appearances on such shows as "The Tonight Show," "The Carol Burnett Show" and "The Dean Martin Show."

Thicke is host of the syndicated late-night talk show "Thicke of the Night" which is currently out of production and awaiting a decision on whether it will be renewed.

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher says the new painting of her hanging in the National Portrait Gallery has a noticeable squint and she'd like the canvas touched up, the artist said.

The painting unveiled Wednesday was done by Rodrigo Moynihan, 74, a former professor of painting at the Royal College of Art.

Mrs. Thatcher did not attend the official unveiling.

Hagerty

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dan Haggerty, who starred in movies and on television as Grizzly Adams, is the first actor "of import" busted on drug charges by the newly formed entertainment unit of the narcotics division, police said.

Haggerty, 41, faces arraignment Friday on charges of selling cocaine to an undercover officer, police said Wednesday. He was arrested at his Beverly Hills home on June 13 and freed on $5,000 bail, Lt. Dan Cooke said.

Haggerty is accused of selling the officer 18 grams of cocaine with an estimated street value of $2,160, Cooke said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Lee Krasner, an artist and widow of painter Jackson Pollock, died Tuesday at age 75.

Miss Krasner studied in the late 1930s under Hans Hofmann, who influenced her work, as did Matisse, Picasso, Mondrian and other European painters. Miss Krasner exhibited her paintings for the first time in 1940.

Some newspapers won't run 'public service' ticket ads

The Associated Press

The Michael Jackson concert tour may be the hottest ticket in the country this summer, but several Midwest newspapers are refusing to run the tour promoters' "public service" advertisements containing ticket applications.

"My feeling is that this is an opportunistic venture to try and get free advertising...to make more millions for the Jacksons and their promoters," said Bob Haring, executive editor of the Tulsa World, which refused to run the half-page ad.

Asking newspapers to run the coupons free was the only way to give "a cross section of America" an opportunity to attend the concerts, the tour's promoters said Wednesday.

The Jacksons Victory Tour, which includes the pop music superstar and his five brothers, opens in Kansas City's Arrowhead Stadium, July 6-8, and will continue with 39 more concerts in 11 cities. So far, only two other concert sites have been announced — Texas Stadium in Dallas, July 13-15, and the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., July 21-23.

"There is only one way to buy tickets. And this is it," say the ads newspapers are being asked to run. It says tickets are $30 each, they'll be sold in lots of four and those getting tickets will be selected at random by computer.

Applications must include a $120 U.S. postal money order and the coupon, which promoters have said would be available in most major newspapers. Ticket-buyers will not be allowed to request dates, only cities. Those applicants not selected will have their money refunded four to six weeks after the concert.

In Kansas, the Wichita Eagle-Beacon and the Topeka Capitol-Journal refused to run the advertisement. Mary McCoy, retail ad manager for the Eagle-Beacon, said she thought the request "was pretty presumptuous. Under no circumstances would we run a promotion like this."

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch refused to run the ad because an accompanying letter said the ad must be run exactly as sent, said Nick Penniman, assistant general manager of the Post-Dispatch. "We will not run the ad free and printing only the coupons would seem to be a disservice to our readers if they were not honored," he said.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat ran the coupon, calling it "a public service to our readers." In Nebraska, the Omaha World-Herald printed the advertisement because "we'd already commited to readers that we would be printing it," said Terry Ausenbaugh, a spokesman for the paper.

Ausenbaugh called the promotors' methods "somewhat unethical. I mean, their gate will be near $5 million and they aren't paying for their advertising."

Foxboro selectmen refuse permits for Jackson concerts

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Deciding they don't want nearly 100,000 Michael Jackson fans descending on this town, selectmen voted unanimously to refuse permits for two August concerts by the singer and his brothers.

The selectmen, who a week ago approved a concert with singers Tony Bennett and Rosemary Clooney, rejected by a 3-0 vote Wednesday night the Jackson performance in Sullivan Stadium.

Charles Sullivan, head of Stadium Management Corp., operator of the stadium, reportedly has advanced $40 million to promote the Jacksons' summer tour. Sullivan left the meeting without comment immediately after the vote.

The tour, expected to cover 40 cities, begins July 6 in Kansas City. A full schedule has not been disclosed.

Under Sullivan's proposal, Foxboro would receive 52 cents for each ticket sold, meaning the town rejected a payment of almost $50,000, since capacity crowds of 48,000 were expected for each concert night.

Selectman Stephen Hickox complained the concerts would attract an "unknown element" to this town of 14,500 about 30 miles southwest of Boston and north of Providence, R.I.

Chairman Richard Thompson moved to deny the permit because the concerts would disrupt business, attract vandals and create a safety problem.

ECISD board will consider tri-ethnic panel

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A tri-ethnic committee originally opposed by the U.S. Justice Department, but added to the Ector County Independent School District's desegregation order in March, will be contemplated tonight by the ECISD board.

Formation of the committee is set for discussion and action during the meeting. While the committee would not have any policy-making powers under the proposed plan, it would act as an adviser to the school board on the district's needs in continuing integration.

The Justice Department omitted this committee from stipulations it suggested to the court order adopted by Judge Fred Shannon in May 1982, though both the ECISD and the Committee for Redress, Unity, Concern and Integrity at All Levels (the southside group representing minority interests) had agreed to the group's formation.

CRUCIAL appealed Shannon's decision and a New Orleans appeals court sent the suit, filed by the federal government against the ECISD in 1970, back to Midland federal court. A similar suit was also filed against the Midland Independent School District in 1970, but the MISD, local minorities and the federal government settled on a cluster concept to integrate this district.

While the decision reached by Federal Judge Harry Hudspeth (Shannon having retired) left intact the bulk of the 1982 order, one change he did make was to order the formation of a tri-ethnic committee advocated by CRUCIAL during the March hearing.

Norma Cantu, the Mexican-American Legal Defense Fund attorney representing CRUCIAL, claimed the Justice Department's opposition came directly from sentiments of the Reagan administration against parental involvement in schools.

Joe Rich, the Justice Department's attorney at the March 1984 hearings that resulted in the altered order, explained his agency had balked before the 1982 order because of questions about excess costs and growth of the committees.

"If you turn it loose, it can grow on you," said ECISD attorney Bob Cox, adding, "It can be very effective with very little money."

The committee the staff will propose to board members would be composed of 11 members appointed by the board.

"We would not agree to the district selecting all the representatives," said Ms. Cantu, insisting membership is traditionally determined by the court.

Cox pointed out the order did not specify that Hudspeth select the committee members. "There are various ways the committees are appointed," he said, recalling that other districts have selected their tri-ethnic committees' members.

Six Anglos, three Hispanics and two blacks would make up the committee. This would approximate the percentage breakdown by ethnicity in the ECISD for Anglos and Hispanics, but would overcompensate for blacks.

Cox explained two blacks are being proposed so that, even if one black member missed a meeting, all three groups would be represented.

The proposed committee would:

— Advise the board on future steps taken in the ECISD desegregation plan.

— Propose changes in the plan "that appear to be necessary in light of changing circumstances."

— Provide another communication link between the community and the district.

— Assist the district in "promoting community awareness and understanding" of the plan.

Hudspeth supported establishing the committee in his order, listing "several standpoints" from which the group could aid the district:

— The school's magnet-school program relies on volunteers, so the committee would encourage parents of minority students to participate.

— Magnet-school programs often need changes, and the committee could provide input on program adjustments.

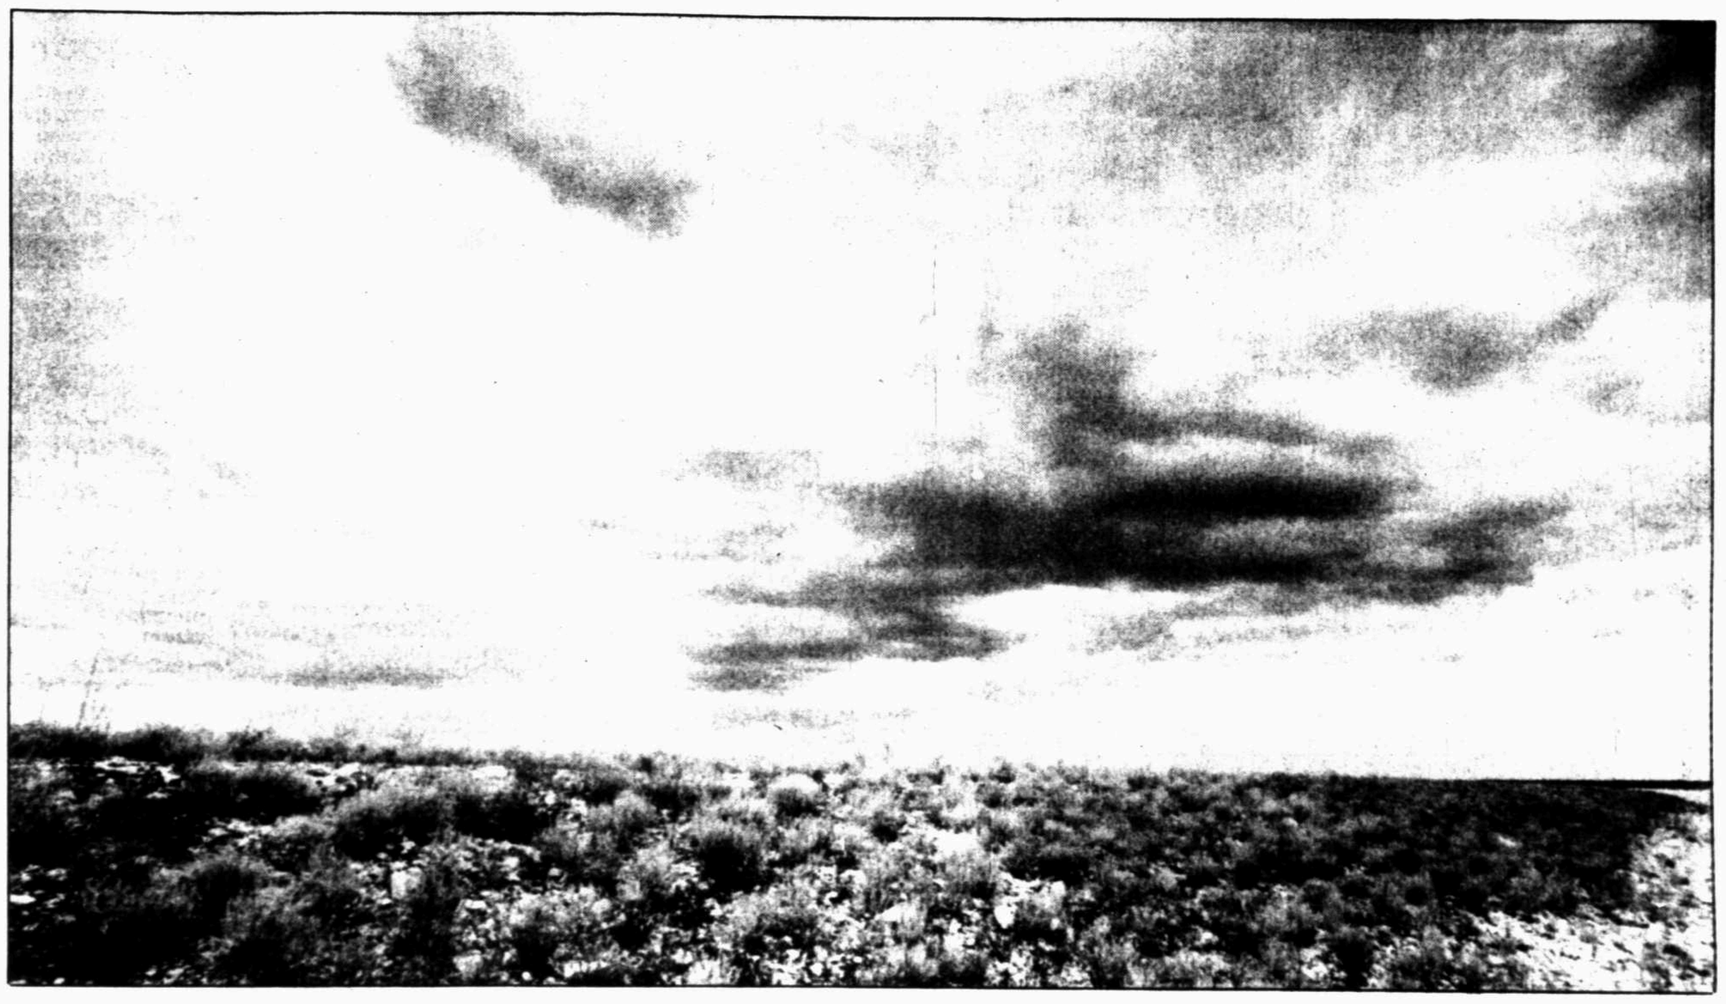

— Population shifts will likely make it necessary to change programs.

Cox said the Hispanic population is currently shifting in a clockwise direction northwest from South Odessa, where the bulk of this group now resides.

Stormy weather

Even though clouds have darkened skies in the Permian Basin in recent days, they have only teased farmers and ranchers with light, scattered rainshowers. And forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport are not expecting any rain in the next few days.

Former bank teller pleads guilty to embezzlement

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A former teller for the defunct National Bank of Odessa (NBO) pleaded guilty in federal court in Midland to embezzlement and an ex-high school basketball player was sentenced to two consecutive five-year prison terms for theft of mail.

Janet Faye Southerland, 34, of Odessa tearfully admitted on Wednesday her guilt to U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

"I took some money," the obviously nervous woman told Bunton.

The judge asked her to be specific. "A lot of people take money."

Mrs. Southerland, who was a commercial teller at the bank, now First State Bank of Odessa, admitted to embezzling $3,000 from the bank on Nov. 21, 1983.

NBO was declared insolvent last year, and First State Bank then bought NBO's assets.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck of San Antonio told the judge that another bank teller, who had surplus cash in her drawer, gave Mrs. Southerland $5,000 to transfer to her register. Instead of crediting the $5,000 transfer, Mrs. Southerland kept $3,000 in cash for herself, changed the teller number inside a machine to reflect the other teller's identifying number on the transfer, and "tried to cover it up (but) unsuccessfully," Speck noted.

"She did take the $3,000 she needed to pay some debts," the prosecutor said.

Since her indictment last month, Mrs. Southerland has made restitution.

"With the help of her stepfather," Speck said, "she has paid all of that money back."

"So, the bank is not out any money," noted Bunton.

The judge is to sentence Mrs. Southerland, who could be imprisoned up to five years and fined $5,000, at 12:21 p.m. July 10.

At that time, the judge will allow Mrs. Southerland to say "anything you feel in your heart I need to know" for possible mitigation of the sentence.

Local GOP volunteers will sign up new voters

From Staff Reports

Midland County Republicans will be trying to rope in at least 1,000 unregistered voters here Saturday when they go door-to-door to sign up new voters and attract volunteers.

Midland will be one of 83 cities in 50 states which will participate in the one-day national Reagan Round-Up, which is aimed at rustling up some enthusiasm in the presidential campaign.

According to a spokesman in the state Reagan-Bush '84 office in Austin, organizers are hoping to get 225,000 new voters added to the registration lists.

Midlanders will gather at 9 a.m. Saturday at the Lexington Motor Inn, 1003 S. Midkiff Road. They will be assigned areas of the city to avoid duplication, according to a local spokesman.

In Texas, other major Reagan Round-Up events are scheduled in Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Austin, Abilene and Amarillo. Vice President George Bush will attend a rally in Houston Saturday morning. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole will appear in San Antonio, Austin, Dallas and Abilene. U.S. Senator John Tower will go to Texarkana, Longview, Lufkin and Beaumont. Both Tower and Mrs. Dole plan to do some door-to-door campaigning.

More information on the Midland Round-Up can be obtained by calling 686-8007 or 694-7308.

Constituents rank deficit most important issue

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The federal budget deficit is far and away the most important issue of the day to people living in the 21st U.S. Congressional District, which includes Midland County, judging from the results of a questionnaire sent out by Rep. Tom Loeffler.

The 20,000 people who replied to the questionnaire they received in January named budget deficits (12.3 percent), federal spending (12.0) and the national debt (7.9) as the three major issues of concern.

But the results, which were mailed to Loeffler's constituents earlier this week, also show that the district is divided about how to reduce those deficits — 34.8 percent would reduce federal spending, and 34.8 would reduce both federal spending and military spending. Predictably, raising taxes was a less popular solution — 13.1 percent would raise taxes and reduce spending, and only 2.3 percent favored reducing the deficit just by raising taxes.

Another 12.5 percent suggested reducing defense spending. But while the district was very concerned about federal deficits, it wasn't nearly as worried about the dangers that are supposedly caused by those deficits. Only 3.4 percent named inflation as a prime concern, and ever-fewer people (2.6) mentioned interest rates (though it should be remembered that these responses were made last winter, before interest rates started to climb).

One source of budget deficits has been the built-in growth in entitlement programs, including not only welfare but Social Security, Medicare, farm price supports and other programs valued by middle-class voters. Politicians are usually wary about cutting these programs, but 77.3 percent of the 21st District favored reducing the growth of these programs in order to control the deficits.

The district clearly preferred cutting spending — even for programs like Social Security — to raising taxes, or even keeping them at present levels. While only 3.4 percent named taxes as a major concern, 66 percent were against repealing tax indexing, scheduled to take effect in 1985.

Several issues which have been receiving a lot of attention rated surprisingly low in importance with the respondents. School prayer was a major concern of only 2.5 percent, and such major national issues as energy (which would include deregulation), the environment, and the Equal Rights Amendment each were mentioned by 1.6 percent of the respondents — less than the 2.0 percent rating for civil service retirement issues. And unemployment was a major concern of only 1.3 percent.

One interesting contrast was provided by the district's opinion on two proposed constitutional amendments. Changing the constitution to permit school prayer was favored in this conservative Republican district by 73.3 percent — but an almost identical 73.4 percent opposed an amendment banning all abortions.

On other issues, the district:

— Opposed, by 53.5 to 41.2, a immigration bill which included employer penalties for hiring illegal aliens and amnesty for some aliens. Illegal aliens were a major concern of 4.9 percent of respondents.

— Favored continued military and economic support of El Salvador by 46.6 percent to 41.8 percent, and continued covert activities against Nicaragua by 55.9 percent to 33.6 percent. But Central America was mentioned as a major concern by only 2.8 percent.

— Would make up shortfalls in Medicare funding by limiting payments to doctors and hospitals (39.2 percent) rather than by raising payroll taxes (3.9). Another 16.4 percent of respondents favored replacing Medicare with a National Health Insurance program.

— Opposed the U.S. withdrawing from the United Nations, by 51.2 percent to 42.9.

— Favored reducing foreign aid (57.3 percent).

Make game out of diet, or you will be miserable

I never once thought I would succumb to the pettiness of counting calories or back counting my age. But I'm flirting with both games, as fat creeps on and age wears me down. I'm 39 forevermore.

It's a woeful state to be obsessed with the physique and the creeping years, which only lead me nearer to Thee, Oh, Lord, or at least to the grave.

I just don't want to be miserable here or hereafter. And that's the main reason why I, like a horseshoe-pitcher or a grenade thrower, made rough guesses at my intake of calories. (Close enough is only good in horseshoes and grenades, or so they say.) My reasoning is that if I'm happy on Earth with my life and affairs with others, then there's a chance the hereafter won't be miserable. Samuel Butler, the 19th century English author, wrote, in retrospect, that happiness is the absence of misery. He said that, in all places, "The Way of All Flesh." We're happy when we're not consciously miserable. Hindsight will tell you that.

But, unless you can make a fanciful game out of calorie counting or, as I do, just guesstimating, you can make yourself uncomfortable in your diet — by savoring certain foods or denying yourself others.

Don't be cruel to old No. 1.

I believe in self-entertainment alone or in a crowd.

In the grocery store, read labels. It's fun. You'll be appalled at the volume of sugars, salts, fats, preservatives, coloring and non-nutritive junk in many foods. First, though, you'll need to read up on what's what in good nutrition. Read credible, sensible authors who practice their preachments, which have been demonstrated. Common sense — acquired or innate — should tell you that we reap what we sow, so beware of what foods you put into your body and what information you put into your mind. One affects the other. Attitude affects both mind and body.

By discerning shopping, your enjoyment further will be enhanced by your reduction of choices. There is, to my notion, so much undesirable foods in grocery stores, restaurants and other eating emporiums that I find delight in ferreting out what I deem to be wholesome and rejecting the "bad."

Now, I don't claim to be pure. If I did, my credibility would bespeak of yellow journalism. Now, when I was just a young fellow, I ate, appreciatively enough, certain foods which I now avoid like spoiled cans of green beans and chili: lard-fried foods and the flesh of pigs. Bacon still smells good. Fried chicken, skin and all, often was the center dish at dinner time. Then often came fried okra, fried potatotes, and good old cream gravy, heavy biscuits, syrup, grease-dripping "whole hog" sausage, and cream-laden homemade ice cream.

I've changed my "country style" of eating and today go for foods which are not apt to hasten my departure from this life.

It's all in fun and enjoyment, just like bicycling, jogging, doing aerobics, or playing around in other sports.

And I fully intend to enjoy life and wish you happiness. Just don't make yourself miserable.

Stanley Marsh leans on the roof of one of the 10 Cadillacs stuck nose first in the ground at his ranch west of Amarillo.

Millionaire 'planted' old Cadillacs as work of art

AMARILLO (AP) — The row of bruised and battered Cadillacs popping out of the ground near U.S. 66 west of Amarillo have left a decade of motorists gawking. And that's just what Stanley Marsh "3" wanted.

The eccentric Texas millionaire created what he calls a work of art back in 1974. Today he is throwing a giant beer bash to mark the 10th anniversary of his Cadillac Ranch creation.

Marsh, who uses "3" instead of III after his name, decided the anniversary would be a good excuse to get together with 400 or 500 of his closest friends.

The three artists from the Ant Farm, a West Coast artists group, who helped Marsh design the "artwork," will be there for the celebration. They are Chip Lord, Hudson Marquez and Doug Michels.

Marsh, who has made millions in natural gas and broadcasting enterprises, and his three companions planted the 10 Cadillacs — ranging from 1949 to 1963 models — back in 1974.

To a lot of highway motorists west of Amarillo, the Ranch is just another roadside attraction, in between the "10,000-Pound Prairie Dog" and Stuckey's. But to Marsh, it's a work of art.

"I have a theory of art. The most significant art is the art we never see. The art we dream about. When I saw the Mona Lisa, I was disappointed. See, I like art that comes as an abrupt surprise. Art that's not in a museum, that's not on a wall. I like being able to make my own mind up on what art is," he told the Dallas Morning News.

The cars, planted in a row and tilting out of the earth, are barely standing the ravages of time. They are weatherbeaten and have been vandalized. Tires have been slashed, windows broken, and graffiti is layered upon graffiti.

But Marsh is probably just as famous for his pranks as for his Cadillacs.

Take his trip to east central Africa two weeks ago, for instance. When he was deep in the jungle gorilla watching, he suddenly donned a gorilla mask and took a few people by surprise.

Nice dog...

Kaylee and Kenzie Bartley of Sulfur Springs find retreat in their playhouse from their dog Dear, who seems to want to share the girls' chocolate ice cream.

COURT

In the case of the former basketball player, Bunton sentenced Elvin Stewart Jr., 26, to two consecutive five-year prison terms for stealing his father's Social Security checks on June 10, 1983, and again on Aug. 15, 1983, by intercepting the postman and talking him out of the checks.

Since Stewart declined to speak in his own behalf prior to the sentencing, the judge brought up Stewart's background, which Bunton apparently considered before setting punishment for the offenses.

"You have a child, do you not?" Bunton asked.

He also noted that Stewart had a "pretty bad" drug problem and has been held in the Midland County Jail on burglary charges since the fall of 1983.

"You not only took the money, but you took it from your own relations," Bunton said.

Stewart remained virtually mute but didn't appear to be distressed. He seemed relieved and even smiled moments after the sentencing.

"You're a great basketball player?" asked the judge.

"Not great anymore," said Stewart.

Stewart's attorney, Mike Borland, noted that the defendant had been involved in "numerous burglaries," which have been cleared up.

In meting out the sentence, Bunton also ordered Stewart to undergo drug treatment while he's in a federal corrections institution.

"You need a lot of counseling and a lot of guidance," the judge told him. "I hope this problem you have — the monkey on your back — can be lifted."

After the noon sentencing, Stewart was returned to the Midland County Jail and that afternoon appeared before 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin on two burglary indictments. Stewart pleaded guilty.

Baskin sentenced him to two 10-year prison terms which are to "run concurrently with each other and with the federal sentence," said Michael Williams, chief prosecutor for the 142nd State District Court.

After the sentencing, Stewart was transferred from Midland County Jail to federal custody in the Midland City Jail.

"Since he's been in jail," said Williams, "he has helped the Sheriff's Office in Crime Prevention (efforts), in conducting workshops for homeowners in how to de-burglarize houses...(and) has been helpful in the disposal of numerous felony cases in Midland County."

Senate panel rejects appointed Board of Education

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislative supporters of an appointed State Board of Education hoped what Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby calls a "miraculous process" would turn up enough votes today to advance that proposal.

A committee of the full Senate on Wednesday rejected a measure that would replace the 27-member elected Board of Education with a temporary, 15-member appointed board. The vote was 18-14.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who voted for the appointed board, said, "There's several more stages in the process."

Asked how the Senate vote might be changed, Hobby smiled and said, "It's a miraculous process."

The Senate on Hobby's motion quit until today after four hours of debate on educational reform proposals, many of which bear the imprint of H. Ross Perot's Select Committee on Public Education — SCOPE.

House members were on notice today to expect a marathon session on two versions of a school reform bill, either one of which would cost taxpayers' more money.

Economic growth still strong

By The Associated Press

Credit markets gave a chilly reception to a government report of continued strong economic growth, but President Reagan hailed it as "remarkably good news."

Interest rates rose sharply and bond prices tumbled after the Commerce Department said Wednesday the economy — although slowing from its explosive 9.7 percent annual growth rate in the first quarter — is expanding at a strong 5.7 percent pace this quarter.

Stocks also took an early drubbing following the report Wednesday. But they later rallied and the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed with a 15.80-point gain to 1,131.63.

Credit analysts are concerned that the brisk expansion cannot be sustained without pushing inflation and interest rates higher. They note the economy's growth is raising private demands for credit at a time when the Treasury already is borrowing heavily to finance the massive federal deficit.

But the Commerce Department said a measure of inflation tied to the gross national product is rising in the current quarter at a rate of only 2.8 percent, the slowest in 17 years, after rising at 3.9 percent rate in the January-March period.

The economy's growth figure was the Commerce Department's "flash" estimate for the inflation-adjusted, or real, gross national product in the still-unfinished April-June quarter. The GNP is the nation's total output of goods and services.

In addition to the "flash" estimate, the department revised upward its first-quarter growth figure to 9.7 percent from the earlier estimated 8.8 percent rate. The new rate marked the strongest quarterly growth in six years.

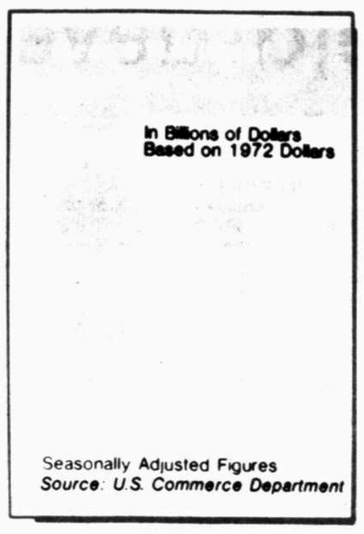

Reagan, talking briefly with reporters at the White House, said the report showed "we have a solid recovery that is going forward without a renewal of inflation."

Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman-American Express Inc. in New York, said that in relation to such important concerns as jobs, income, production and the prices people pay, "If you look at the guts of the economy ... the (Commerce) report is superb."

He said he still felt "the economy remains too strong for its own good over the long run," with already-high interest rates bound to rise. But he said he expected no signs of significant weakness before the middle of next year.

The Commerce report sent the dollar up sharply in foreign exchange trading. Rising rates lift yields of investments denominated in dollars, and low inflation helps maintain the currency's purchasing power — both of which make the dollar attractive to dealers.

The dollar hit a record high against the British pound in London trading. Overall, Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. in New York said its index measuring the value of the dollar against 15 leading currencies reached an all-time high.

The pace of the U.S. economic recovery is slackening in the nearly finished April-June quarter, the Commerce Department has reported.

Striking pilots pledge to appeal court ruling

HOUSTON (AP) — Striking pilots say they will appeal a judge's ruling that Continental Airlines acted properly in throwing out their contract, but an official of the carrier called the decision a "victory for everybody."

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge R.F. Wheless issued a one-page order Wednesday saying the contract threatened the carrier's attempts to recover from its financial troubles.

"We're very, very pleased that the court has confirmed what we had said," Continental President Phil Bakes said. "What Continental has done, it has done out of necessity."

He called the decision a "victory for everybody. It is a victory for the employees of Continental — the nearly 9,000 men and women."

Byron Whitehead, a spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association in Washington said the union "regrets" the judge's decision.

"We intend a prompt appeal from the court decisions and fully expect that our position will be upheld in the appellate court. At the same time, we repeat our willingness so often expressed in the past to conclude a revised collective bargaining agreement with Continental Airlines," Whitehead said.

"To this day, the IAM has not showed a glimmer of understanding" of Continental's financial plight during the negotiations, Gallagher said.

Surging dollar drives pound to new low; Gold steady

LONDON (AP) — A surging dollar drove the British pound to a record low in early trading today and hit monthly highs against most other major currencies for the second straight day. Despite the dollar's strength, gold prices were steady.

The dollar's strong performance followed sharp advances Wednesday by the U.S. currency, boosted by the unexpected strength of the U.S. economy and expectations that American interest rates will continue high

In London, the dollar hit a record high against the British pound which cost $1.3640, bettering its previous all-time high of $1.3700 late Wednesday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar rebounded to finish at 234.30 Japanese yen. That was 1.47 yen up from Wednesday when the dollar had eased in Tokyo. The dollar was quoted at 234.93 yen later in Europe.

—2.3157 Swiss francs, up from 2.3023.

—8.5585 French francs, up from 8.5175.

—3.1397 Dutch guilders, up from 3.1250.

—1,717.75 Italian lire, up from 1,710.00.

Officials seek tougher bank law enforcement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials, saying organized crime may be laundering as much as $40 billion in cash a year, are asking Congress to strengthen the nation's banking laws.

"Money laundering has grown tremendously since 1972," says John M. Walker Jr., assistant Treasury secretary for enforcement. "To some extent, this growth appears to have paralleled the increase in drug trafficking."

Appearing Wednesday before the general oversight subcommittee on banking, Walker and other officials urged approval of legislation that would toughen the 14-year-old Bank Secrecy Act. That law requires financial institutions to report cash transactions involving more than $10,000 to the government.

Walker said that although bank compliance with the law and prosecutions have increased in recent years, amendments are "urgently needed" to "remedy particular weaknesses."

He testified that "many criminal organizations are moving large amounts of cash directly out of the country," bypassing banks and the required U.S. Customs Service reporting forms.

John C. Keeney, deputy assistant attorney general from the Justice Department's criminal division, said it is estimated that organized crime hides and launders as much as $40 billion a year in offshore banks.

"For example, money launderers may purchase cashiers' checks in assumed names, create phony corporate bank accounts and send money out of the country to foreign banks, only to have it re-enter the United States as purported return on legitimate investments or disguised as foreign loans," Keeney said.

He said the maximum criminal penalty for violating the Bank Secrecy Act should be increased from one year in prison and a $1,000 fine to five years and a $250,000 fine.

Keeney also said that attempting to move money out of the country illegally should be a crime. He said that now, officials can act only after the money has actually been moved abroad.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

New multipay field developing

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

A new multipay field appears to be in the making in Crockett County, according to Railroad Commission filings and confirmation from Superior Oil Co., who is the operator.

To date it appears that production in the new multi-pay field will be from the Ellenberger, Leonard and Pennsylanian detrital in the Condo field area 10 miles northeast of Iraan.

Superior Oil Co. has three wells in the area producing from the mentioned zones and is now preparing to drill another 7,425 ft. wildcat to test the Ellenberger.

Superior's Ellenberger discovery, No.1 Shannon Estate "33" finaled earlier this month for 204 bopd of 46 API, with a GOR of 490:1 and no water on a 19/64 in. choke from perforations at 7,138-7,150 ft.

The Leonard discovery, No.2 Shannon Estate "37" potentialed in March of this year for 372 bopd of 34.7 API and a GOR of 234:1 with no water through 14/64 in. choke. Perforations were at 4,236-4,250 ft.

The opener in the area was Superior's No.1 Shannon Estate "37" which was first drilled as an Ellenberger discovery which pumped 21 barrels of 38 API and a GOR of 381:1 from perforations at 7,143-7,152 ft.

The well was later recompleted in the detrital to pump 138 bopd of 43.9 API and a GOR of 297:1 from perforations at 7,105-7,115 ft.

The location for the new proposed wildcat is 467 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 34, Block 1, GC&SF.

King County wildcat finals for 80 bopd

TAUBERT, STEED, GUNN & MEDDER, Wichita Falls, has completed its No.22 WM S.B. Burnett Estate, pumping 80 bopd of 36 API with a GOR of 150:1 and 2 bwpd from perforations at 2,770-2,788 ft. after being drilled to a TD of 2,970 and setting 4 1/2 in. casing to 2,969.

The well is located 495 ft. from north and 1,467 ft. from west lines of Section 9, Block F , H&TC survey, 16 miles southeast of Guthrie, in King County.

Field activity report

A total of seven new producing wells have been added to the Yates field Y unit, with completions ranging from 27 bopd to 438 bopd.

The Means field gained a 271 bopd producer and Mobil completed a well in the Scott (Delaware) field flowing 89 bopdd and 151 bwpd.

SAN ANTONIO — Valero Hydrocarbons Co. and NGL Production Co. of Salt Lake City, Utah, have initiated a major natural gas purchase and gas processing progrm in the Liberty Prospect area of Backham County, Okla.

Firm tests crude oil from wildcat in Spain

HOUSTON — Union Texas Petroleum, a subsidiary of Allied Corp., has announced it has tested crude oil at a rate of 3,800 barrels daily from an exploratory well recently drilled in the Mediterranean Sea offshore Spain.

Located some 22 miles south of Tarragona, Spain, in 374 feet of water, the Angula No. 1 well tested the 43 degree API gravity crude through a 3/4 inch choke from perforations between 11,998 feet and 12,104 feet. Total depth of the well is 12,763 feet. Testing is continuing to evaluate additional potentially productive zones. Future drilling plans will be formulated after additional testing is completed.

Drilling applications up in Texas

AUSTIN — A total of 4,376 drilling applications were processed by the Railroad Commission in May, according to RRC Chairman Mack Wallace. In April, the commission processed 3,735 applications, and 3,855 were handled in May 1983.

The May 1984 total included 3,355 applications for permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 102 applications to deepen existing holes, 315 applications to plugback existing holes, and 100 applications for service (non-producing) wells. Operators also filed 495 amended drilling applications.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Ginnie Maes will provide steady income

By BILL DOYLE

Q. When I retired in 1983, I invested $150,000 in Government National Mortgage Association "modified pass-through securities," better known as GNMAs or Ginnie Maes. Needing guaranteed income, I was assured I would receive 12.2 percent. Also, I was told all my principal would be available with no loss, if I needed to liquidate.

I'm getting monthly checks, as promised. But, because the value of my Ginnie Maes has declined, I would lose approximately $15,000 by selling now. What do you advise? I have several friends in the same trap.

A. You invested for steady income. Your Ginnie Maes are providing just that. The natural advice is stay with what you have.

Each Ginnie Mae is backed by a pool of FHA or VA mortgages. Payment of principal and interest on Ginnie Maes is guaranteed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. government. So, you have absolutely no worry about getting monthly checks for your share of the payments on mortgages in the particular pool.

However, if you were told that you would be able to recover all the money you put into the Ginnie Maes with no possibility of loss, somebody lied to you.

You can always sell your Ginnie Maes, but the price you will get might be more or less than the unpaid balance of your share of the mortgages in the pool. Because the mortgages in the pool pay a fixed rate of interest, the market value of your Ginnie Maes goes up when interest rates go down and down when interest rates go up.

Interest rates have risen over the past years. As a result, the resale values of Ginnie Maes and other fixed-income securities have fallen.

• • •

Q. I invested in a Ginnie Mae mutual fund and arranged to receive the interest payments on mortgages in the Ginnie Mae pool in monthly checks, while reinvesting the mortgage principal repayments to buy more fund shares. Isn't this a better program than receiving both interest and principal by monthly check?

A. It certainly is, assuming you want your investment to remain intact — or reasonably so. There's no assurance that interest rates won't go up, taking the value of your investment down. But, by reinvesting the principal repayments, you're not automatically liquidating part of your investment each month.

• • •

Q. Interest received from debt obligations of the U.S. government is subject to federal income tax, but not to state tax. Does that mean interest from Ginnie Maes is free from state income tax?

A. Nope. Our federal government guarantees payment of principal and interest on Ginnie Maes. But Ginnie Maes are not direct federal debt.

Q. IRS Publication 590, which explains individual retirement account rules, says you may not have two IRA rollovers within one year. I have my IRA in bank certificates of deposit, two of which will mature this year. I had planned to roll over those CDs into new certificates at the same bank.

Doesn't this rule prohibiting two IRA rollovers in the same year make it impossible to use CDs as IRA investments?

A. Not at all. You have two very different things mixed up — sort of like apples and oranges.

When you roll over a maturing CD into a new CD, you are simply renewing your deposit. Even though you have your IRA money in CDs, that is not a rollover IRA.

One form of rollover IRA is the transfer of money from a qualified retirement plan to a special rollover IRA. When you make that move, you keep your money sheltered from income tax until you withdraw it from the IRA.

Another form of rollover IRA is when you already have an IRA and take the money out. You then have 60 days to put it into another IRA with a different trustee or custodian. If you don't put the money into the new IRA within that time span, you're hit with income tax and a 10 percent penalty tax.

However, you can transfer your IRA from one trustee or custodian to another as often as you like — providing it's a direct transfer and you don't handle the money, or even the check. That's called a trustee-to-trustee transfer.

My suggestion is that you read IRS Publication 590 more carefully. If you still don't understand it, get a really good accountant to explain it to you.

• • •

Q. You advised a reader, age 62, whose IRA savings certificate is due to mature soon to keep the money in certificates but cautioned in favor of short-term certificates, so he "won't be stuck with a low-yielding, long-term certificate if interest rates go way up."

The savings and loan association at which I have my IRA allows anyone 59½ or older to redeem IRA certificates, without penalty, if interest rates go up, and put the money in high-yielding IRA certificates. Shouldn't you point this out to your readers?

A. Yes. Some S&L and banks do what you outline. Some don't. Under the rules, S&L and banks are not required to levy an early withdrawal penalty when an IRA certificate is redeemed before maturity by a person 59½ or older. However, some do slap on that charge.

Your S&L happens to be one that allows IRA participants 59½ or older to cash in low-yielding certificates for higher yielders when interest rates go up. That's a good deal for you and shows your S&L is on the ball in the matter of good customer relations.

Yester-year products bring back memories

By LINDA ANDERSON

I'm probably telling my age with this, but here it is:

Ever notice how some products or brands of products are popular for a few years and then fade away? For instance:

Ipana toothpaste — Remember commercials for Ipana? "Brusha-brusha-brusha with the new Ipana". The jingle was used in a scene in the movie "Grease" or I never would have remembered.

Fizzies — Sometimes known as "fruit-flavored Alka-Seltzer," Fizzies, when dropped in water, fizzed and bubbled until the tablet dissolved and Presto! a soft drink was created. Cola, root beer, strawberry, cherry, lime, etc., were just a few of the available flavors. My favorites were lime and cherry. I loved Fizzies when I was a kid.

Chum gum — My personal favorite gum when I was in elementary school. Three sticks of Chum Gum were in a package and had a unique flavor. One package cost a penny.

Sugar Jets cereal — My brother lived on sugar Jets when he was 7 years old. I think they were sugar-coated puffed corn. He thought they would make him run faster or something.

Stripe toothpaste — And whatever happened to Stripe? The first toothpaste with red racing stripes, Stripe was the "in" toothpaste with the 8-year-olds. For a while we refused to brush our teeth with any other brand.

Hersheyettes — The Hershey chocolate company's answer to M&Ms, Hersheyettes looked like two elongated chocolate chips, placed base to base and covered with a candy coating. Where are they now?

Vegetable-flavored Jell-O — I may be the only person in the world who remembers when the Jell-O folks marketed a new line of Jell-O gelatin in vegetable flavors. The ads tried to tell us these new flavors would be perfect for vegetable gelatin salads, but we all knew better. The thought of actually tasting this product was too terrible for words.

Libbyland TV dinners — Marketed in the early- to mid-70s, Libbyland TV dinners were the first (and possibly only) frozen TV dinner made specifically for children. Each dinner had about six different foods, all in tiny portions and all chosen for their appeal to children. I remember tiny hot dogs, bitsy hamburgers, miniscule chicken pieces, and almost always corn, fruit cocktail and chocolate pudding. My kids loved them. I haven't seen Libbyland dinners in the stores since 1975.

Pablum — Although Pablum baby cereal is still available in the supermarkets, it isn't found as often as it once was. The word Pablum used to be synonymous with the term baby cereal. I guess it was the first of its kind.

Band-Aids with stars, hearts, etc. — When I was much younger, we used to love to get a little scrape or cut so we would have an excuse to wear some of these fancy Band-Aids with stars and hearts and other designs on them. If one friend was wearing a Band-Aid with hearts, the other friend would choose another pattern so all the designs could be seen. I think these bandages were available in different colors, too.

Great American Soups — Even with razzle-dazzle commercials starring Ann Miller tap-dancing on the top of a giant soup can and a chorus line of leggy beauties, Great American Soups disappeared from supermarkets after only a few years.

Milk Nickles — According to my memory, these ice cream bars-on-a-stick were the first vanilla-ice cream-coated-with-chocolate. This type of ice cream treat is still very common, but I remember Milk Nickles and they only cost a nickel.

Tenant, landlord rights: Setting it straight

By LINDA TRUITT

"My air conditioner is broken and with 95 degree weather, my apartment is insufferable. I have explained to the manager that it needs to be fixed immdiately since I can't cook or sleep, but he doesn't seem to be interested. What can I do?"

A tenant called the Better Business Bureau recently with this problem wanting to know what his rights are when a landlord refuses to make repairs. According to a law passed by the Texas Legislature action can only be taken against a landlord who refuses to make repairs that materially affect the physical health or safety of the ordinary tenant.

If the tenant feels his carpet needs replacing yet the condition of the carpet was caused by ordinary wear and tear and does not materially affect his health or safety, the landlord is not responsible for replacing the carpet. If the tenant caused the damage by negligence he is responsible for correcting the problem.

If the needed repairs do affect the tenant's health or safety, according to the law the tenant must follow a specific complaint procedure. The tenant should carefully follow these steps:

— A written explanation of exactly what repairs are needed and a request that the matter be taken care of as soon as possible should be delivered personally or sent by certified mail.

— A second notice should be delivered if the repairs are not made within a reasonable period of time. It is important the tenant state his intentions in the second notice because he can terminate the rental agreement without being penalized after informing the landlord of his decision and allowing seven additional days for the repairs to be made. The tenant should also request a written explanation of why the repairs are being delayed since the court will probably assume the delay was unjustified if no explanation was given. And the notice is actually received by the landlord.

— The tenant is responsible to continue to pay rent.

— In special instances such as hail or explosions, the damage may be covered by an insurance policy. If this is the case the tenant must allow the landlord enough time to be reimbursed by the insurance company.

If the tenant desires to stay, and has followed the above procedure and no action has been taken by the landlord, he should see a lawyer. The tenant has the right to sue for one month's rent, $100, actual damages resulting from the delay, plus court costs and attorney's fees. The suit must be filed in the district or county court.

Evicting a tenant in retaliation for following the above procedure is illegal. If a landlord files a suit for eviction within six months of receiving the tenant's repair notice the tenant can have the suit thrown out of court. The tenant will need to prove the needed repairs materially affect his health and safety and the eviction is a result of his repair request.

If a tenant signs a rental agreement that inclues a waiver statement voiding the landlord's responsibility for any repairs the tenant forfeits his rights under this law. As with any contract, it is important to read the contract thoroughly before signing.

Day center program keeps Alzheimers patients active

MEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Two days a week, Margaret, Louise and Esta attend programs, take walks and nibble cookies and sip apple juice until their families pick them up.

Though often childlike, they are elderly women who are suffering from the degenerative brain disorder Alzheimer's Disease, which strikes the short-term memory and makes even the simplest tasks of daily living impossible to recall.

"To them, the most upsetting thing is that they can't remember what's going to happen," said Ellen Rothberg, who oversees the Medford day care center, one of about 10 centers nationwide exclusively for victims of Alzheimer's Disease. "We try to make them feel safe and secure."

The disease, which has no known cure, now afflicts about 2 million people. It was discovered in 1906 by Alois Alzheimer but did not become well recognized until the 1970s, said Marian Emr, a public affairs specialist for the National Institute on Aging in Bethesda, Md.

Most of its victims are over 65 and many have relatives who suffered from the disease, but little else is known about its cause.

Diagnosis is difficult and can be confirmed only by an autopsy, when the neurons in the brain appear tangled like spaghetti.

Historically, victims of the disease have been classified under the sweeping label of "senility" and consigned to nursing homes and institutions, where they require even more constant care as the disease progresses.

"Most day care programs don't like to accept Alzheimer's patients because they are so much trouble," Ms. Emr said.

The Medford center, which recently opened, is run by The Community Family, a private, non-profit agency based in nearby Everett.

For $35 for a six-hour day, clients will be kept busy in a variety of ways designed to keep their brains stimulated while causing them a minimum of frustration, said Ms. Rothberg, director of the organization.

In addition to caring for the patients, staff members of The Community Family plan to meet regularly with members of their family to teach them more about the disease.

"Most of the family members are having a difficult time bringing them here at all," said Ms. Mulligan. "I think there's a lot of guilt. 'Am I abandoning my mother? What's wrong with me?'"

Fast food dinners' calories, salt calculated

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. Would you kindly settle something for us? My husband and I both work and therefore we eat out practically every night at one of three fast food places — McDonald's, Kentucky Fried Chicken or Pizza Hut. We usually eat the same things in each place, but we're always arguing about which meal is the most fattening and which has the most salt. From the list I'm sending you of the meals we eat, please give us some figures.

A. When you go to McDonald's and have a Big Mac, regular fries and a chocolate shake, this adds up to 1,166 calories and 1,419 milligrams of sodium.

At Kentucky Fried Chicken, you have a dinner consisting of two pieces of chicken, mashed potatoes, gravy, cole slaw and a roll, along with a large cola. This amounts to 806 calories and 1,536 milligrams of sodium.

Your night at Pizza Hut, where you have a medium cheese pizza and a large cola, nets you 820 calories and 1,800 milligrams of sodium.

Q. A few years ago I bought an electric bug light. We would put two pellets on the bug light and would have no spiders, or anything, for two weeks. Now I'm out of pellets and no one can tell me where I can get some. I hope you can help me. Gary, Ind.

A. This letter came to me from Gary, Indiana, without a name or return address, otherwise I would have written to this reader to ask what the name of the bug light was. Then I could have written to the manufacturer for advice. I called several hardware stores, but no one seemed to know what I was talking about. Write me again, and maybe we can find those pellets.

In the meantime, if any of my readers know where we can find pellets for electric bug lights, please write.

Q. I have four cats and two dogs and we have an annual problem with fleas. I spend half the day vacuuming, trying to get rid of them. My husband says this is useless because the fleas probably hold on tight when they hear the vacuum coming. If some do manage to get in the vacuum cleaner bag, he says, they probably all sneak out at night. Am I wasting my time?

A. "Although vacuuming may remove some of the fleas which are on the surface of the carpeting, they are a rather difficult pest to remove when alive," reports L.D. Calder, a supervisor of consumer affairs at the Hoover Company.

"They will cling to the carpet fiber and burrow down into the base of the carpeting against the backing. Also the eggs which they deposit are being laid both in the carpeting and in furniture and other nooks and crannies, and once they hatch will reinfest any areas from which they have been removed previously."

As to getting out of the bags, Calder says: "The disposable filter bag is made of a porous paper material which will filter particles as small as 50 microns. This is smaller than a flea and would contain this pest with no difficulty.

"However, the system whereby debris is deposited into the filter bag may be escapable. In other words, a flea by chance may manage to hop through the opening in the disposable bag and pass down through the fill tube and out the nozzle opening."

"We would be surprised," states Calder, "if more than a few would manage to stumble onto this escape route. But since the number of escaping fleas would increase as time went on, we would suggest that after vacuuming, the disposable bag be either burned or removed from the house."

Calder advises that the best way to combat these pests is to have an exterminator kill the pests and nullify the eggs, which can then be swept up and disposed of by the vacuum cleaner.

Q. On a vacation trip to Cape Hatteras I bought sweet potatoes and baked them at the beach house. They were perfect. When I got back North I bought five of them at a local supermarket and baked them for dinner.

When we opened them at the table, they were riddled with what looked like greenish-black pockets of mold inside. Four out of the five were this way. I tried again a month later, buying them at a different store. Again, they looked perfect on the outside but had these moldy chunks inside. Can't sweet potatoes be reliably shipped from the South?

A. Michael Canon of the Fruit and Vegetable Division of the Department of Agriculture said, "It appears the sweet potatoes may have been affected by Internal Cork, a virus disease. Such sweet potatoes would have single and multiple dark spots that may occur throughout the fleshy tissue. Other than cutting each sweet potato, there is little a consumer or produce manager can do to detect the problem."

Canon advises consumers who experience such a problem to return the produce, cooked or raw, to the produce department for an exchange or refund. Returning the produce will alert the manager that a problem exists. The manager, in turn, can notify the wholesale supplier.

DEAR ABBY

Husband says he's in love with another man

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: It makes me blush to write this, but I have to unload on someone. I can't talk to a minister because I am my own pastor.

I have a wonderful wife and family. The problem is me. I am in love with someone besides my wife. The person I am in love with is another man. He lives in a town nearby, and he is also married. We see each other once a week. I can't understand my feelings — I only know that this man makes me feel more loved than I've ever felt in my life. I suppose that makes me a homosexual.

My wife is a fine person, but I doubt that I was ever really in love with her. Sex was never very important to her, and when we did have sex, she didn't seem at all interested. Could that be the reason I have turned to another man for love?

I know the rights and wrongs of what I am doing, so please spare me the lectures. Thank you for letting me get this off my chest. — FEELS BETTER IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR FEELS BETTER: If "unloading" on someone has helped you to feel better, then your letter has served its own purpose. You did, however, ask a question that deserves an answer. You turned to another man for love not because your wife seemed disinterested, but because of an unfulfilled sexual urge. You, my friend, are not a homosexual — you are a bisexual.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to "Needs Answers in Alabama." (She said her son had dated three different girls in the last two years and all three had babies and each claimed her son was the father.)

Just because her son "dated" these girls doesn't prove their babies were his. I'm sure he wasn't the only guy they ever dated. You told that lady that her son needed to learn self-control. I'll bet he didn't force those girls to have sex with him!

Come on, Abby, if someone was giving out free milk, wouldn't you be glad to accept a free gallon or two? — UPSET IN TEXAS

DEAR UPSET: Not necessarily. I'd wonder what was wrong with it.

DEAR ABBY: I am another mother-in-law who never dreamed she would be writing to you. My problem is my son-in-law. He is a fine young man who is extremely casual in his dress. When I invite him for Sunday dinner, on a warm day he comes to the table with bare feet and no shirt. My daughter, who knows how I feel, says, "Mom, leave him alone — he's comfortable that way."

So for the sake of peace, I say nothing, but it certainly is unappetizing to eat at a table with a man who is naked from the waist up.

Please tell me how to handle this. Or am I overly sensitive? — FRUSTRATED IN MAINE

DEAR FRUSTRATED: You are not overly sensitive; your son-in-law is overly insensitive. Handle it this way: Say: "Charlie (or whatever this 'fine' young man's name is), will you please wear some kind of shirt when you have dinner with us? I know it's warm, but everyone else is fully dressed, and I'd appreciate it if you were, too."

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Homemade fireworks kits called 'dangerous'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission has issued an alert on what it calls a growing danger — mail-order chemical sets used to make fireworks at home.

A 14-year-old youth was seriously injured by an explosion while mixing the chemicals recently, the commission reported.

The sets are sold for the purpose of making fireworks, and the amount of chemicals included allows buyers to construct very powerful and dangerous items, the commission warned in a statement.

Sale of the kits is illegal under commission regulations and firms in New York state and Pennsylvania have signed agreements to stop the sales, after being contacted by the commission.

But other firms remain in the business with at least two more investigations under way, said Bob Poth of the commission's division of regulatory management.

"We believe it's a very dangerous practice. Not just providing banned fireworks, which are dangerous in and of themselves, but having lay people compounding explosives from the powders. We are quite concerned about the practice," Poth said.

He said the kits have arrived on the market in the last couple of years, and sales seem to have been increasing.

The firms offer catalogs of chemicals in kits, with instructions for compounding explosives for use as fireworks, he explained.

Commission regulations ban fireworks using more than 50 milligrams of powder and kits and components intended to produce larger devices, Poth said.

But he noted that it takes a while to stop sales of kits, because investigators have to order them by mail to get samples and then begin legal proceedings against the company.

The kits can be used to produce fireworks devices which are even more dangerous than illegally sold fireworks such as M-80s and Silver Salutes, which have been banned, the commission said.

The 14-year-old was hurt when an explosion occurred as he tried to mix two of the chemicals in a ceramic bowl, the consumer agency reported.

It said a two-inch fragment of the bowl was embedded in his abdomen, his upper body and arms were burned and hearing in one ear was impaired.

Despite federal restrictions on fireworks sales, in force since 1976, approximately 8,300 persons suffered injuries related to fireworks last year, the commission reported.

Over half of the injuries were burns and most involved men under the age of 25, officials reported.

With Independence Day nearing, fireworks sales will be increasing in states where they are legal — and in others too, no doubt — so the commission has issued its safety reminders for people who choose to use pyrotechnics:

—Parents should supervise the purchase and use of all fireworks.

—Never allow young children to use fireworks. Even sparklers can be dangerous. They burn at very high temperatures and can cause burned skin or ignite clothing.

Tips given for selecting rhubarb

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Rhubarb is, to some extent, an acquired taste. It is also a contrary food in many ways. Although used as a fruit, it is botanically a vegetable. No matter how you prepare it, rhubarb needs sweetening.

The beautiful big red-ribbed dark green leaves can be toxic and should be discarded. Truthfully, one wonders how it came about that someone discovered that the ruby stem of this bushy plant is edible, especially when it is very young.

Selecting good rhubarb is easy. It should be firm and crisp and have a pinkish-red color. If it is rubbery, it is over the hill and should be quickly passed up.

Be sure to discard any leaves and remove any tough strings from the stalk. If your rhubarb is young, the latter will not be necessary.

One way to assure yourself of young and tender rhubarb is to grow your own.

But you had better be sure you are really fond of it, for rhubarb tends to proliferate once it is planted in a garden.

Government information available

WASHINGTON (AP) — What happens in Washington affects every American, but trying to learn the details behind a news item may seem a major burden to people living outside the capital. It needn't be.

A bill in Congress or a regulation being considered by this agency or that can be very important to the people affected, and often they need to see the exact language in order to comply, or complain to their congressional representative or respond in some other way.

Getting that information doesn't require a trip to Washington or special sources or other means — the material is probably right at a nearby library.

About 1,400 libraries across the country have been designated as Government Depository Libraries. They receive copies of bills introduced in Congress; the Federal Register, a daily publication which lists all the rules and regulations of government agencies.

There are at least two official depository libraries in every congressional district in the nation, and they are also located at land-grant universities, many law schools and main state libraries.

A list of these official depositories may be obtained, at no cost, by sending a post card to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 588M, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. Ask for the booklet "Government Depository Libraries."

SNL off to good start

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Maybe the "Saturday Night Live" form of sketch humor has been all wrong. It might be funnier just to put the five new cast members on stage and let them field questions.

That's what happened recently when Billy Crystal ("Soap"), Martin Short ("SCTV"), Rich Hall (HBO's "Not Necessarily the News"), and Christopher Guest and Harry Shearer of the movie spoof "This Is Spinal Tap" did improvisations for the press.

One of the first questions came from a loud television reporter, who wanted to know what each new cast member would contribute to the 10th season of "Saturday Night Live."

"Soft drinks and chips," said Hall.

"I'm bringing the cake," said Crystal.

"I got a Buckwheat imitation I'm working on," said Short, referring to former cast member Eddie Murphy's electrified impression of the slow-witted kid from "The Little Rascals."

The latest new, improved "SNL" seems off to a good start.

The sketch writing on this past season's "SNL" often was sharp, incisive and, let's not forget, funny.

Yet "SNL" was laboring under the weight of its successful older brother and the public perception that, since the golden days were over, that left only tarnished Saturday nights.

Executive producer Dick Ebersol knew that for the show to survive another season, he had to find some familiar TV names — not like Steve Martin and Buck Henry who were from a past TV generation and failed to revive NBC's "New Show" last season — but comedians who were identifiable to today's young, multi-channeled videophiles.

Said Ebersol: "We went after five established funny people." They will join returning "SNL" players Jim Belushi, Mary Gross, Gary Kroeger and Julia Louis-Dreyfus. One additional female regular will be added before the end of August, Ebersol said.

For his ability to sign an All-Star team of cable and stand-up comic entities, Ebersol was dubbed "the George Steinbrenner of comedy" by NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff.

Ebersol's most difficult problem, though, may come right from Steinbrenner's Yankee playbook: too many stars, too few positions and not enough role players.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

Don't let an apparently easy hand lull you into a false sense of security. Even seemingly laydown hands can run into a foul lie of the cards or bad distribution.

South thought fleetingly about slam prospects over his partner's jump to game. However, he was wise to dismiss those thoughts — North's double jump showed good distributional features but limited high-card assets.

West led the jack of clubs and the contract looked so simple that declarer relaxed involuntarily. He captured the king of clubs with the ace, cashed the ace of spades and then ran the nine of diamonds. East won the ten and shifted to a heart.

It was time for declarer to try his second finesse. The queen of hearts lost to the king, a diamond came back and declarer had to lose two more diamond tricks for down one.

South bemoaned his lack of luck — four cards had to be wrong to assure his defeat. Actually, his trouble was that his hand was too good — had his queen of hearts been a low card, he almost certainly would have landed the game.

Suppose, after winning the king of clubs and drawing the outstanding trump, declarer were to cash the queen of clubs and then simply play the ace and queen of hearts. If East wins the king, he is end played there and then.

As the cards lie, West wins the king of hearts. Now, his only safe return is a diamond. Declarer simply covers any diamond that West leads on the board. East must win, but he is end played. The defenders will collect another high diamond, but the contract is safe.

Globe Theatre sponsors old-fashioned box supper

ODESSA — Preparations are under way for an old-fashioned box supper auction and social in the Globe Theatre's courtyard at 6 p.m. June 30. The social is being held in conjunction with the Globe's production of "Whenever it Rains."

Some of Odessa's and the area's leading citizens are preparing box suppers for the event. Box suppers will be sold to the highest bidders during an auction hosted by J. Gordon Lunn. Winning bidders will have the opportunity to share their meal with the cooks.

Couples will prepare a box supper for themselves and one other couple. The couple buying the box supper will be able to meet the couple who prepared the meal.

Proceeds from the auction will benefit the Globe.

"Whenever it Rains" will be staged following the event. This musical by Rick Smith with music and lyrics by Timothy M. Ryan, traces the history of Odessa from the coming of the railroad in 1881 through the beginning of the oil boom in the 1930s. Production dates are June 29, 30 and July 6-8.

Participation in the Globe's Box Supper Auction and Social is open to the public. Reservations are necessary. Admission to the box supper is $2.50 per person. Bidding on the box suppers begins at $5 a piece.

Tickets to "Whenever it Rains" are $7 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. For additional information and reservations call the Globe, 1-332-1586.

Michener avoids film adaptations

By JERRY BUCK

ENTERTAINMENT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Michener was here to launch publicly the filming of a CBS miniseries based on his novel "Space," but says he keeps a respectful distance from film adaptations of his books.

One reason is simply professional courtesy. But Michener, 77, the author of numerous best-selling books, many of which have been made into movies, admits he has little talent for screenwriting.

"I'm not good at dialogue," he says. "I don't have that skill. But I do love movies and I take them seriously. I think if I were younger I would work in television."

He adds: "The decisions about 'Space' are made within the framework of the industry. I think the producers would be appalled if I tried to impose myself. I don't think the layman understands this. They think the writer is in there breathing down their necks."

Although nine movies and five television projects have been made from his books, he says he has never seen a script.

Michener's massive novel on the history of the American space program was adapted as a 13-hour miniseries by Oscar-winning screenwriter Stirling Silliphant ("In the Heat of the Night") and producer Dick Berg. It stars James Garner, Beau Bridges, Bruce Dern, Michael York, Susan Anspach, Blair Brown, Melinda Dillon, Harry Hamlin, and Barbara Sukowa.

"Space" covers a much wider area than Tom Wolfe's "The Right Stuff." It goes extensively into the lives of the central characters, who cover a much broader range than just the test pilots and astronauts, and it delves into the events of World War II that shaped Garner's character and brought the German rocket scientists here. The politics of space is given more prominence.

His book "Centennial" was made into a 24-hour miniseries in 1978, and such books as "Sayonara," "The Bridges at Toko-Ri," and "Caravans" have been made into movies, as well as "Hawaii," which was the basis for two films. Michener also created the TV series "Adventures in Paradise," which ran on ABC from 1959-62.

By far his most famous output was his first book, "Tales of the South Pacific," which won the Pulitzer Prize and became the long-running Broadway musical (and movie) "South Pacific."

"I was brought out to Hollywood once to see if I had the talent," Michener says. "I worked with a Hungarian writer of the old school and out of it came 'His Majesty O'Keefe,' which starred Burt Lancaster. We did 18-20 versions of the script and finally at the end we agreed my contribution was so minimal we wouldn't even mention it."

Michener says he has been happy with most of the adaptations, except "Return to Paradise," made in 1953 with Gary Cooper. He said he considers the best movie ever made in the so-called "South Pacific genre" to be the 1937 version of "Hurricane."

The painstaking research Michener, a former college professor, puts into each book is illustrated by the fact that in one week recently, he was honored by groups representing geographers, geologists, astrophysicists and the computer industry.

He currently lives in Austin, where he is completing work on "Texas," a new book taking the state from the time of the landing of the Spaniards to the present. ABC has taken an option on it for a miniseries.

"I've been working on it for three years," he says. "It's a big state and there are a lot of problems. I work in blocks, then go back and re-write. But I've drafted it all. It's in good shape, thank God. I have another seven or eight months work left."

The book will follow several families through many generations, but he wasn't revealing too many secrets. "Many other people have done the oil scene very well and I did the cattle scene in 'Centennial,'" Michener says. "So you eliminate those. You can't focus on a family of Dallas oil millionaires who have trouble with their sons.

"I've had a good run," Michener says. "I've had the money to undertake these great projects. It's an enormous challenge and lots of fun."

Lovers find '13 Rue de l'Amour'

The French farce "Rue de l'Amour" by Georges Feydeau is onstage in Theatre One at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The play centers around two favorite French subjects — love and liasions.

Almost all of the characters in the play end up at the infamous 13 Rue de l'Amour for a night of hilarity and mix-ups.

Duchotel is played by Michael Trost, who was in "Arsenic and Old Lace" and "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas;" Moricet is played by Michael Stannard, who played Henry in "Lion in Winter;" Leontine is played by Elizabeth Batterson, who played Blanche in "A Streetcar Named Desire;" Mykel Menget, last in "Annie," will portray the nephew Jean-Pierre; and the concierge of 12 Rue will be Chrysti Scoville, who played Amy Lee in "Laundry and Bourbon."

Poor, confused Birabeau will be played by Gregg Ellsner, who was in "Lion in Winter" and "Arsenic and Old Lace." The inquisitive police inspector will be played by Jess Kozman, last seen in "Taming of the Shrew;" and the quintessential French maid will be Jodi McElligott, who appeared in "Tartuffe" and Summer Mummers. The two policemen will be played by Mark Slattery, a newcomer to Midland Community Theatre's main stage, and Jim Martin, who played Phillip in "Lion in Winter."

Casting committee for this production was Wanda Mohr, Betty Edgar and Ted Kruger. Director for "13 Rue de l'Amour" is Michael Spicer. Sets for the production were designed by MCT volunteer Michael Huslage. Costume design is by Mae Dawson.

"13 Rue de l'Amour," which is cosponsored by Dresser Titan and Dresser Magcobar runs through June 30. Reservations may be made by calling Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

Gallery 1114, located at 1114 Big Spring St. and owned by 13 local artists, is Midland's only contemporary co-operative art gallery.

Collections home to 850,000 coins

The National Numismatic Collections, one of the world's most extensive assemblages of coins and medals, contain more than 850,000 examples, which trace the history of various currencies from the 7th century B.C. to the present. They are housed in the National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Spotted fever, rabies share number of same symptoms

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recently recovered from a case of Rocky Mountain spotted fever, and I have no lasting effects. For a while, however, the doctor thought that I might have rabies. I'm not complaining or anything, but I'm just wondering how a doctor could mix up two diseases that are so different. — Leonard, Hyattsville, Md.

Dear Leonard: Rocky Mountain spotted fever and rabies share a number of the same signs and symptoms, such as fever, headache, sore throat, and a general feeling of ill health. In view of this, it is not surprising that the diagnosis might be confused.

I assume, of course, that you suffered some sort of animal bite at about the same time that you developed the Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My older brother had to have surgery because he had osteoarthritis. Now I am getting symptoms that are very much like the ones he described before his operation. If I am going to have to have an operation, I would like to have it now and get it over with. I would appreciate your recommendation. — Mark, Little Rock, Ark.

Dear Mark: Not everyone who has osteoarthritis requires surgery, and I would not recommend that you have an operation just "to get it over with."

There are nonsurgical approaches to the treatment of osteoarthritis, including the reduction of inflammation of the joint and of the forces exerted on it. You do not say whether you are taking medication for the condition, but some patients find that the use of aspirin is helpful; however, the dosage may have to be rather high and this may result in stomach upset or similar side effects.

The use of a cane to relieve pressure on the joint may be beneficial, and I have used weight loss with good results in some of my own patients.

Surgery may become necessary in any patient who continues to experience pain despite nonsurgical treatment. But I would not rush into it until there was additional evidence that these nonsurgical approaches were insufficient.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that you have written a lot about epilepsy but what is the aura? — Mr. I.S., San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Mr. I.S.: Seizure activity sometimes begins with a brief sensation in the stomach or head, such as a sinking or rising feeling, a buzzing sound, an unpleasant odor, or spots before the eyes — an "aura." Those persons who can train themselves to recognize the start of seizure activity before it spreads to other parts of the brain can use it as a warning to take protective measures to prevent injury during the seizure itself.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies, but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Nation's population growing older

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's population will be significantly older and will include more non-whites a century from now, new population projections from the Census Bureau indicate.

If what the population experts anticipate comes to pass, the median age — already at a record 30.6 — will rise to nearly 43 in 100 years; non-whites will make up a quarter of the population and more than one-fourth of Americans will be aged 65 or over.

Most future population growth will occur in the next 50 years, slowing sharply after that and perhaps even turning to a decline, said the study released on Wednesday.

Starting with a 1982 population of 232.1 million people, the bureau developed three sets of projections, based on a wide variety of estimates of birth, death, immigration and other factors.

The middle group of projections anticipates that the nation's population will rise to 304.8 million by the year 2030 and then growth will slow sharply, with the total in 2080 only 310.8 million people.

The lowest series of assumptions would see a rise to 257.4 million in 2030 and then a drop to 191.1 million in 2080. The high series would result in growth to 369.7 million in 2030 and 531.1 million in 2080.

But all the figures predict fewer young people, more older people and changes in the makeup of the population because different groups have different fertility rates.

"If the middle series of projections comes to pass, the nation's "median age ... would reach 36.3 years at the turn of the century, 40.8 years in 2030 and 42.8 years in 2080," the report said.

Meanwhile, studies of birth rates indicate that in the future "the white population never increases more than about 40 percent as rapidly as does the black-and-other-races population," the report says.

The result of that is continued increase in the non-white proportion of the population to 16.9 percent of the total at the turn of the century, 20.7 percent in 2030 and 25.5 percent in 2080.

That group comprised 10.7 percent of Americans in 1950 and 14.5 percent in 1982.

The non-white growth is expected to be higher than that of whites in all sets of assumptions, even if immigration were halted, the report says.

The study also projected that the share of young and old people dependent on the working population will fall in the next few decades, and then increase again, but not to the levels of the 1960s.

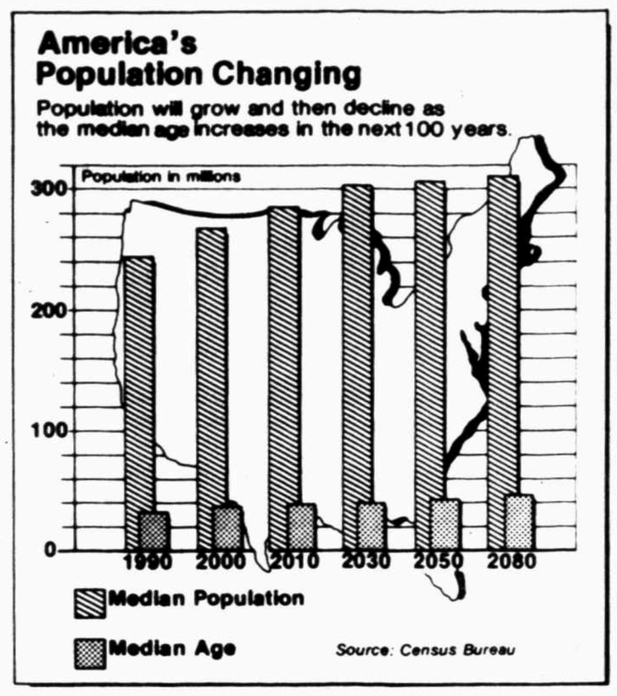

Declining birth rates have seen the number of dependents per 100 working-age Americans fall from a peak of 83.1 in 1965 to 62.9 in 1982. That decline is expected to continue through 1990 and then rise as the number of retired persons grows.

But the total number of dependents per 100 workers will still only reach 74.8 in the year 2030 and 78.1 in 2080, the report anticipates.

The makeup of the dependent population will differ sharply, however. Traditionally, the dependent population has always been primarily young people, as it is now. As of 1982 there were 44.1 persons under 18 and 18.8 over 65 per 100 working age Americans.

But by the year 2030, the two groups are expected to just about balance at 37 dependents each per 100 workers, and 50 years later it will be 41.9 elderly and 36.2 youths per 100 workers.

That change will be reflected in the total number of elderly in the population. That group is expected to grow from 28.8 million in 1982 to 34.9 million in 2000, 64.5 million in 2030 and 73.1 million in 2080.

Space woman no ordinary sailor

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Like a sailor at sea, Judy Resnik, America's second space woman, will spend a lot of time raising and lowering a sail during the next space shuttle mission.

No ordinary sail, however. It's a solar sail that is folded during launch into a canister just four inches high, but which, under Miss Resnik's guidance, will unfurl to the height of a 10-story building in space.

The sail, 13½ feet wide and just millimeters thick, is a prototype of a device that one day may capture energy from the sun to provide power for permanent space stations or to extend the orbital life of a space shuttle.

"The primary objective of the test is to understand how a very large, very lightweight, very flexible structure behaves when it's attached to a moving spacecraft," Miss Resnik said in a recent interview.

Over a period of four days, she is to raise and lower the sail several times to gather data on its structural, electrical and dynamic performance. She will control the device, located in shuttle Discovery's open cargo bay, from a inside the cabin, observing it through a window.

"I'll basically operate it at two levels — at 70 feet and at full extension of 105 feet," Miss Resnik said.

"To extend the solar array, a boom is driven by motors out of the canister, and as it comes out it becomes a rigid form and it pulls with it the sail blanket and unfolds it," she explained.

"To retract the array, the mast motors are run in reverse, which pulls the mast down. The blanket comes down with it and folds into bunches until, when we get to the bottom, the blanket panels will be compressed neatly into their box."

She said it takes 9½ minutes to unreel to 70 feet and another 3½ minutes to reach 105 feet.

Several times while the sail is raised, pilot Michael Coats will fire some of Discovery's small jet thrusters to check the affect on the array. Miss Resnik said she expects the firings will cause the sail to sway or twist slightly.

"If the wobbling is greater than we think, we'll just sit there and let it damp," she said.

Gary Turner, manager of solar array programs at Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., which made Miss Resnik's sail, said it is less costly, three times lighter and 10 times more compact when folded than solar panels which have been flown to date, such as those on the Skylab space station.

He said weight is saved by using a lightweight material called Kapton which contains printed circuits that allow wrap-around solar cells to be welded directly to the blanket.

Turner said a sail this size could produce a steady 12.5 kilowatts of power, enough to supply the power needs of four average households. But because the focus of the first flight test is on structure and dynamics, only three of 84 panels are equipped with silicon solar cells, and only one of those is a full electrical module. It is capable of generating 250 watts.

Security will continue on bus routes

BOSTON (AP) — Rock-throwing attacks on four city buses are probably not related to two assaults on bus drivers, but beefed up security will continue indefinitely on certain routes, police said.

The stonings Tuesday night came despite the presence of police on buses serving inner city routes and increased patrols along the routes. The windshield of one bus was smashed and one passenger was treated for a cut, a transit authority spokesman said Wednesday.

Two drivers have suffered injuries since Saturday in skirmishes with unruly passengers, authorities said.

Astronomers will travel on shuttle

BALTIMORE (AP) — Three astronomers picked to travel with sophisticated telescopes on the space shuttle will use the equipment to view Halley's comet and about 100 other heavenly bodies during each of three flights, the space agency says.

NASA announced Wednesday that Ronald Parise, 33, of Silver Spring, Kenneth Nordsieck 38, of Madison, Wis., and Samuel T. Dorrance, 41, of Baltimore, will rotate in two-man teams on each of the three missions which start in March 1986.

The three astronomers helped develop the sophisticated ultraviolet telescopes that they will use on the missions.

'Yellow trucks have fewer accidents'

OWEGO, N.Y. (AP) — Tradition and not safety has kept most fire departments using red equipment, according to the author of a study that says that yellow fire trucks have half as many accidents.

The study by Dr. Stephen Solomon was published in the June issue of Firehouse magazine, a New York City-based industry journal. Solomon studied accidents in nine major cities and found 32 accidents by red trucks in one year compared to 15 for yellow trucks, he said.

"Every fire department with a red fire truck will deny this," said Solomon, an expert on firefighting apparatus and an optometrist.

Ex-queen charged with following man

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A judge set a July 26 trial date for a former beauty queen charged with following a man who in 1977 accused her of kidnapping him and keeping him in sexual bondage.

An attorney for Joyce McKinney, who did not appear at arraignment, entered a plea on her behalf Wednesday of "extremely not guilty."

Miss McKinney was arrested Saturday near where Anderson works on misdemeanor charges of disturbing the peace and falsely identifying herself to a police officer. Anderson told police he was scared she may be planning to kidnap him again.

Miss McKinney claimed that Anderson was with her willingly in 1977.

Black police commissioner appointed

BALTIMORE (AP) — The man chosen to be the city's first black police commissioner says "the job is not color" and says he was chosen for the post because of "competency and qualifications."

Bishop Robinson, a deputy commissioner and 32-year veteran of the force, was appointed Wednesday by Mayor William Donald Schaefer to replace Frank Battaglia, who will step down July 1 to become an aide to Schaefer.

Schaefer, who is white, was criticized during his 1983 re-election campaign by a black opponent for not having a black police commissioner in the predominantly black city.

Agent admits mistakes in De Lorean trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A drug enforcement agent, insisting he did not lie to the grand jury that indicted John Z. De Lorean, has admitted there were "mistakes" and "inaccuracies" in his testimony.

Agent John Valestra, one of the architects of the government's "sting" operation against De Lorean, also conceded during cross-examination that he lied when he backdated official documents in the De Lorean case "so I wouldn't look bad."

That statement brought a sharp attack on Valestra's truthfulness by defense attorney Donald Re, who suggested the agent would say anything — even lie to a grand jury — "not to look bad."

"I did not lie to the grand jury," Valestra said repeatedly as the attorney fired accusations at him.

"This appears to be a mistake," Valestra said, looking at a transcript of his grand jury testimony.

"This is not correct, right?" asked Re.

"As I look at it now, it's not correct."

Re pinpointed a line in which Valestra, recounting the history of the De Lorean case, recalled facts surrounding De Lorean's first meeting with the government's key informant, former drug smuggler James Timothy Hoffman.

In the grand jury transcript, he said: "This meeting was not recorded. There was no indication of any wrongdoing at this point."

On Wednesday, Valestra conceded this was "inaccurate," and said he must have gathered some indication of wrongdoing from Hoffman, who had been reporting to him on De Lorean's alleged desire to participate in a drug deal.

Valestra said he was "inaccurate" in his recollection.

"I don't consider it a lie. I consider it a poor choice of words."

But Re suggested the words were chosen to justify Valestra's regretted decision not to have Hoffman tape record that first, controversial meeting with the automaker.

"Isn't it true you told the grand jury there was no indication of wrongdoing to try to explain why no recording was made of the meeting?"

"That's very possible," said Valestra.

De Lorean, 59, founder of a sportscar firm in Northern Ireland, is charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine in a bid to save the company from bankruptcy.

He contends he was seeking legitimate financing and was "set up" by government agents posing as drug dealers.

If convicted on all counts he could receive 72 years in prison.

The dark-haired, bearded Valestra, who was Hoffman's control agent during the De Lorean investigation, acknowledged another flaw in both the grand jury testimony and his case initiation report regarding key dates.

Valestra wrote in his report that De Lorean flew to California to meet with Hoffman July 11, 1982, five days after the men discussed a potential drug deal by phone on July 6, 1981.

But Hoffman has said he and De Lorean talked by phone July 1, and there was a delay of 10 days before De Lorean came west for a business meeting and arranged to see Hoffman at the same time.

Re suggested Valestra and Hoffman initially changed the dates to make it appear De Lorean was eager to get on with the drug deal when he really wasn't. Valestra denied this.

Re outlined for jurors the law of entrapment, noting the key is "whether a person is eager or predisposed to commit a crime."

"The question is was he an eager participant or was he induced," the attorney said.

"Did you write your report to make it look like John De Lorean came out five days after he talked to Hoffman?" asked Re.

"I wrote it that way because that's the way I thought it happened," said Valestra.
