Poland's 'militants' remain unmuzzled

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Despite official warnings to moderate its policies, the independent union Solidarity reconvened its first national congress Saturday showing no signs of muzzling the rank-and-file militancy.

A shouting match erupted when a delegate rose to angrily denounce the day-old law on workers' rights in management decisions, passed by Parliament as a compromise with leaders of the 9.5 million-member federation.

"There's going to be a storm here tomorrow," said a Western diplomat observing the restive proceedings after noting 49 delegates signed up to formally debate the issue Sunday. In the streets of Gdansk, meanwhile residents reported soldiers in battle fatigues had bolstered police patrols.

In another challenge to the authorities, the union invited organizers of a "free police officers" union to speak at the congress. There were reports in Warsaw on Friday that some policemen held a sit-in to protest the government's order that organizing efforts be stopped.

After hearing a Roman Catholic Mass and singing the Polish national anthem and a once-forbidden religious song, "God Who Watches Over Poland," the 850 delegates voted overwhelmingly to continue their ban on state-run radio and television coverage of their convention, the first such gathering in the Soviet bloc.

"For the first time after 14 months, it's not Solidarity who is asking for access to the television, but televisions news asking for access to Solidarity," a proud delegate proclaimed. Referring to the official Soviet news agency, he said, "If TV news wants to speak, let them speak with Tass language. TV news is related to information like a truncheon to a cream cake."

The union has been demanding unrestricted access to the state-run media and has accused the state's reporters of spreading lies about it. Solidarity got added support in its demands last weekend when Catholic bishops said newsprint and airwaves are public domain and should not be monopolized or misused.

The delegates also got support from American labor chief Lane Kirkland, whose AFL-CIO reports it has given $250,000 in cash and office equipment to Solidarity. Authorities would not allow Kirkland and other Western union leaders to attend the convention here, but Solidarity distributed a text of Kirkland's prepared speech.

Kirkland said the Polish union had "transformed the word 'solidarity' from a slogan to a living moral force" and faces "many difficult, even momentous questions. The AFL-CIO would not presume to advise you on the direction you should take. You alone understand the needs of Poland's workers. you alone are their authentic voice. Let Poland's history be made by Poles."

At the opening session of the two-stage convention, delegates sent alarm bells ringing through the East bloc with resolutions encouraging workers in those countries to form Solidarity counterparts and calling for Western-style free elections.

The week leading up to the final session was filled with bitter denunciations of the union in the press of the Soviet-orchestrated Warsaw Pact countries.

Solidarity was told to turn back from its path to a political force, lest the country's independence be jeopardized.

But after the opening preliminaries were over, a spontaneous, acrimonious debate on the workers' rights bill passed by Parliament on Friday was launched.

Solidarity official Andrzej Cielinski tried to defend the bill, which gives workers a share in choosing their bosses and running their factories.

"For the first time in the history of the Sejm (Parliament) since 1947, the majority of (deputies) rejected the government draft, accepted the union's and didn't give in to dictatorship," he said.

But several delegates said the compromise betrayed their vote on the issue here two weeks ago.

"We should hot have been surprised like that," an angry delegate protested. "The resolution made by the first congress was law since the congress is the highest authority of the union."

The compromise bill and other issues of labor and economic reform are to be debated later in the expected nine-day day session, after national officers are elected.

Longtime community leader and Texas Chamber of Commerce official Fred B. Tyler, 61, died unexpectedly at the family's lake home in Granite Shoals near Burnet Saturday morning.

According to a spokesman for the Clements-Wilcox Funeral Home in Burnet, Tyler was mowing the lawn about 10 a.m. when he suffered an apparent heart attack. He was found lying in the yard by his wife Marjorie.

He was pronounced dead by Burnet County Justice of the Peace Martin McLean. His body was transferred Saturday night to the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home, where services are pending.

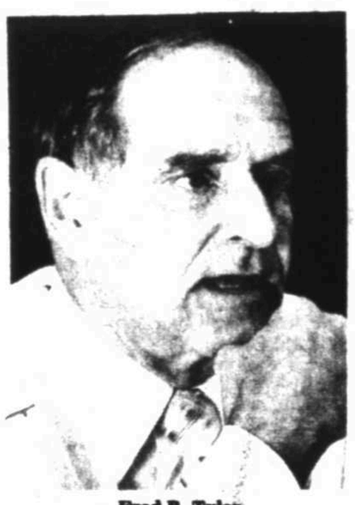
Born in Brookline, Mass., Aug. 28, 1920, Tyler was a B-17 bomber pilot in the U.S. Army Air Corps during World War II and spent most of his adult life in Chamber of Commerce work across the country, coming to the Midland Chamber as executive vice-president in 1965.

He went to Choate Prepartory School near Boston and was a graduate of Nichols College in Dudley, Mass. He attended several U.S. Chamber of Commerce institutes, including those at Yale University, Syracuse University, Texas Christian University and Colorado State University in Boulder.

His work history includes having been a staff member of the Cincinnati, Ohio, Chamber of Commerce; the Butler, Pa., Chamber of Commerce; the Orange, N.J., Chamber of Commerce; and the Lockport, N.Y., Chamber of Commerce, where he served 10 years as its executive vice-president.

He was industrial manager for the Cincinnati Chamber; president of Pennsylvania State Chamber Managers; and president of the West Texas Chamber Managers, which is now known as the Texas Chamber of Commerce Executive Association. At the time of death he was president of the TCCEA, having been elected to that post in July of this year.

Friends and associates describe him as effective and low-key. Said Bill Collyns, editor emeritus of The Reporter-Telegram and past-president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce:



Fred B. Tyler

"I worked closely with Fred on many Chamber projects and considered him to be one of the best. He was an outstanding Chamber of Commerce executive (who) was recognized throughout the Southwest as one of the best and most efficient Chamber executives.

"He was very active in all civic organizations, although he played himself down and gave credit to other people for what he had done. He headed the Midland Chamber during the city's most active period of growth.

"He was very active in organizing the Midland Industrial Foundation and in the overall industrial development of the community. He also served as secretary of the Permian Basin Petroleum Pioneers Association."

Tyler was certified as an industrial developer in 1971 by the American Industrial Development Council. He received Manager of the Year award for outstanding leadership in 1975 and also garnered a 25-year service award from the TCCEA.

He was a member of the Midland Rotary Club and the First Presbyterian Church of Midland.

They keep trying — for Lori

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — The flight up North was more than routine. It was for Lori.

"Is everybody ready?" asked the pilot, Bob Merrill, just as the Sabreliner had been cleared for takeoff at dawn. "We'll be airborne in just a moment."

The engines on the twin-jet aircraft turned from an idling whine to a powerful roar. And within seconds, the ol' bird was flying, and confidently pierced into the lower heavens toward an altitude of 42,000 feet.

The aircraft, dispatched by Frank Smisson of Tiger Charter, was on a "Lifeguard" mercy mission from Midland to Pittsburgh, Pa. "This is his (Smisson's) 'child,' " co-pilot Rees Dabbs had said of the Sabreliner. "This is a very reliable aircraft."

The cause of the flight in the mid-1960s vintage aircraft was a "child" of another kind: a 39-pound bit of serenity, who was somewhere between life and death. She bled at the nose for awhile before, during and after take-off. That was normal for Lori's abnormal condition. All the while, she was watched by two attentive nurses, was braced by the love of her mother, grandmother, and aunt, and who, for now, was being kept alive by her own innate will to live and by life-sustaining fluids, intralipid and dextrose solutions, injected into her little heart.

THIS TAWNY MORSEL of humanity, 6-year-old Lori Ann Mendez, was dying of a fatal illness. Her liver, due to a congenital condition, was barely alive. And when it ceases its burdensome duty of cleansing Lori's blood and injecting vital vitamins, iron and protein into her blood stream, she will die. That is certain.

"She's at the last stage for what we can do for her," said nurse Sue Faulkner, 22. "It's getting worse."

Lori's liver was hardly functioning, and, unless something radical changed, little Lori, at age 6, had just about lived her lifetime.

She was en route to Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh, Pa., to undergo testing and observation to determine if she might be eligible for a rare liver transplant which, perhaps, might guarantee her a normal life and lifespan. But even that was uncertain.

The hepatic fibrosis which was surely taking away her life was similar to the scarring of cirrhosis of the liver, noted Cyndy Purgason, a registered nurse assigned to Women's & Children's Hospital in Odessa.

"The damage is already done," she said, "and the liver can't repair itself."

THE HOPELESSNESS of Lori's plight possibly could be transformed to hope with an experimental liver transplant. It's a delicate, sensitive surgical procedure which, under optimum conditions, would cost about $150,000 barring complications.

"You can live with one kidney," noted the nurse, "and you can live without your spleen. But you have to have your liver."

The cost of Lori's flight up North was being borne by Smisson's Tiger Charter flight service. Other medical expenses were being absorbed by the hospitals and pediatricians, such as Dr. Edgardo Dujon of Odessa and Dr. J. Carlton Gartner of Pittsburgh.

Lori's mother, Lupe Mendez, who was 16 when Lori was born, hasn't the wherewithal medically to care for Lori. Neither does Lori's loving

London's lessons

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, the Hearst Newspapers

HEARST

PARIS — As indicated last Sunday, the directors of the Hearst Corporation went to London to hold, for the first time, a board meeting here and to get better acquainted with the executives and editors of the National Magazine Co., which publishes our nine British magazines. We therefore did some socializing and sightseeing and, believe it or not, a considerable amount of work.

We closed the week with a visit to the Tower of London where, as members of the Hearst family, we were all shown some of the medieval armor, swords and shields which belonged to my father's collection in St. Donat's Castle, Wales. An historic item from Pop's collection was a buff coat made of leather and worn by Col. Francis Hacker when he supervised the execution of Charles I.

The Tower of London, built by William the Conqueror, is, as I'm sure those of you who have visited Britain know, one of the great sights of this city. It was there that Henry VIII had Queen Anne Boleyn, the second of his six wives, beheaded so that he could marry Jane Seymour. It is there, too, that the magnificent regalia of the Crown Jewels of England are kept.

Business meetings and sightseeing aside, I promised last week to tell you about what we learned concerning the Americans to get larger paychecks

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans will start collecting slightly larger paychecks as the first installment of the largest tax cut in U.S. history goes into effect this week.

Income tax withholdings under the first stage of the three-part reduction will decrease an average of 6 percent, boosting the take-home pay of most workers by about 1 percent to 2 percent.

A married worker earning $500 a week and claiming four withholding allowances — for self, spouse and two children — will take home an extra $5, with $74.40 withheld. A single person with one allowance and a $400 weekly wage will see his tax withholding reduced by $4.60, to $82.70.

Another part of the tax bill will allow investors to shield from taxation up to $1,000 of interest ($2,000 for a couple) earned on a new type of one-year savings certificate.

But there will be a lot more than taxes cut when the government begins a new bookkeeping year — fiscal 1982 — Thursday. Hundreds of federal programs will begin feeling the effect of Reagan's effort to reduce the government's role in American life.

Congress has given preliminary assent to Reagan's drive to cut $35 billion from already-planned spending in 1982. Many of the details are not final yet because the lawmakers have not completed action on any of the 13 appropriation bills that provide the money for the programs.

Even so, less money will be available for food stamps, welfare, Medicare for the elderly, pay for federal workers, public-service jobs, student loans and a variety of programs ranging from agriculture subsidies to urban aid.

Once Congress wraps up the first series of reductions, it will take up Reagan's request last week for a second round of spending cuts totaling $13 billion and tax increases of about $3 billion.

The cuts in taxes and government spending represent half of Reagan's four-pronged approach for reducing inflation and nurturing sustained, job-creating economic growth.

He launched another element — reduction of federal regulations — immediately after his inauguration. The fourth prong, a slow but steady growth of the money supply, was begun by the Federal Reserve Board long before Reagan took office.

In passing the massive tax cut, Congress gave the president what he wanted — an across-the-board cut in personal tax rates in each of three successive years and a sweeping cut in business taxes — plus much more.

The business tax cut, involving faster write-offs and thus larger deductions for purchases of buildings and equipment, is retroactive to last Jan. 1.

Except for the smaller withholdings and the all-savers certificates, most of the changes for individuals will not become effective until next Jan. 1.

Beginning then, working married couples, millions of whom pay more taxes than if they were single, will get a special deduction.

Other changes effective next January incude liberalized tax treatment of money set aside for retirement; a bigger tax credit for child-care expenses paid by working parents; sharp reductions in estate and gift taxes and a new deduction for charitable contributions for the 71 percent of taxpayers who don't itemize deductions.

The most-radical part of the tax package — automatic yearly reductions in personal taxes to offset inflation — will not take effect until 1985.

grandmother, Linda Gomez, or her aunt, Rose Miller. All were on board for the flight.

"I don't think they even have enough money to get back," surmised Ms. Purgason, who had come to know Lori and her family's plight fairly well. She said that Lori has been in the hospital "so many times, you lose track."

LORI'S LIFE, which began in a hospital, may end there. She was born on Oct. 11, 1974, when her mother, now 22, was 16. The father is somewhere, but the mother doesn't know where.

"Her father probably doesn't even know her," the mother said. "I don't care."

"He just abandoned them when she (Lori) was a baby," said the aunt.

Lori has been noticeably ill for about two years.

"She's sick, but she is very active," said the mother. "She does her best to get around. She's very determined. It's a miracle what she can do to help herself."

The mother was resigned that the mercy fight was an alternative and that it might not be the means to Lori's renewed life.

"They said there was nothing else they could do," she said, "so they decided to fly her." She said that "a lot of people are praying" for Lori's survival and recovery.

Lori, who is aware that something is amiss in her life, is blessed with will power, stamina and optimism.

"She doesn't like for me to cry," said her mother. "She says, 'I don't want you to cry. I'll get well.'"

Lori Ann Mendez, whose life is uncertain at age 6, was recently taken to Pittsburgh, Pa., by an executive jet for medical studies to determine if she is a suitable patient for a liver transplant. At right is her nurse, Cyndy Purgason. Lori's mother, Lupe Mendez, is at center.

LORI WAS ADMITTED to the Pittsburgh hospital immediately after the Tiger Charter jet aircraft had landed at Greater Pittsburgh International Airport. The aircraft returned to Midland Regional Airport the next day, with departure delayed for radio repair. Lori's mother and grandmother stayed with her at the hospital. After her admittance there in mid-August for extensive and intensive testing, she was discharged. For whatever reasons, there was no liver transplant for Lori, and no worry about who the dead donor was or if Lori's natural immunity could be suppressed so that her own body would not reject the liver. And the family collected their suitcases and left for home in Odessa. Lori's fate now is into a new chapter.

Even while Lori was in Pittsburgh, her Odessan physician, Dr. Dujon, was gravely concerned. Last year, he had seen a "gradual deterioration of Lori's condition." But when he treated Lori, Lori's condition became "a thousand times better."

"I'm doing this for Lori," he said.

But, he fatalistically noted that without the liver transplant, Lori's condition, though somewhat improved, will worsen.

Dr. Dujon said he was aware of five persons who had survived liver transplants.

"And I suppose they are alive and well."

Editor's Report

political and economic situation in Britain.

In her efforts to restore economic stability by cutting government spending, reducing business taxes to stimulate productive investment, and maintaining high interest rates to curb inflation, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has experienced problems and resistance very similar to those which President Reagan has encountered with his economic recovery plan.

Like Wall Street's faltering reaction to President Reagan's program, the London Stock Exchange has shown a lack of confidence in Mrs. Thatcher's tough economic policies. Share prices plunged 64 points in 10 days, despite a brief rally toward the end of the week, to the lowest level since 1974. The decline was attributed to fears of higher interest rates, increased inflation and the determination of Mrs. Thatcher to stay on her austerity course.

Britain's first woman prime minister, whom Moscow once described as the "Iron Lady," made clear that determination by reshuffling her cabinet and ousting from the Conservative government those who felt she should not resort to further budget cuts. Like the president, she, too, found that her efforts to slow the extravagance express of excessive spending on welfare programs did not gain her popularity points in the public opinion polls.

Nevertheless, she has formed a new economic hardline cabinet to make further cuts in government spending programs, especially on unemployment benefits and educational subsidies.

With three million unemployed, the highest number in Britain's history, the cost of unemployment benefits are one of the major reasons why the British Treasury estimates the government deficit in the next financial year will be nearly $10 billion unless further drastic budget cuts are made.

Mrs. Thatcher, again like our president, is convinced the painful remedies now being applied will lead to economic recovery in about two years time, but only if she sticks to them.

Almost a year before she became prime minister in May, 1979, she anticipated that, if elected, she might find support for her recovery program weakening half-way through her five-year-term. She said she would not make the mistake of many past British governments of abandoning their election promises in midterm because they were unpopular. Half way through her term she is described in the British press as going "for broke" in her determination to stick to her recovery program.

One of her staunchest supporters, President of the Council Francis Pym, told us she regretted not having cut government spending more sharply at the beginning of her term.

Other critics contend she made a mistake in approving a recommendation by the previous Labor regime's commission that government workers should get a 30 percent pay raise. Now she is facing a serious showdown with the unions over her declared intent to limit wage increases in the private sector to 4 percent. While she reduced income taxes, she imposed a 15 percent sales tax which offset the benefits of the tax reduction, especially for the low income groups. She had also promised during her election campaign to denationalize industries and stop subsidizing inefficient ones, but her critics point out she has not yet done either.

If she succeeds in turning the economy around by 1983 or '84 her re-election will be assured. If she fails, the winners of the next general elections seem, at present, likely to be a somewhat left of center coalition of moderate Laborites, Conservatives and Liberals.

In fact, efforts are underway now to bring about just such an alliance between the new Social Democratic Party, composed of moderate defectors from the Labor Party, and the Liberal Party.

Roy Jenkins, a leader of the SDP who is expected to head up the moderate alliance, told us during a long chat with him that if Margaret Thatcher fails, as he thinks she will, the alliance will either win the elections or gain enough seats in parliament to hold the balance of power. The Labor Party is so badly split, and in such danger of being ruled by the radicals, that I'm inclined to bet on Jenkins — but only if Mrs. Thatcher's great gambit with the British economy and her political destiny fails.

Enroute from London on Friday, we stopped in Brussels to talk with a longtime friend, Dr. Joseph Luns, Secretary General of NATO.

This world-renowned Dutch statesman told us he had just left a NATO Council meeting which was briefed by the American ambassador on the agreement Secretary of State Haig reached in New York with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to start talks Nov. 30.

Dr. Luns said America's European allies had expressed unanimous approval of the American government's achievement in getting this agreement.

He explained that in December 1979, NATO agreed on a double plan — to modernize its short-range nuclear weapons and offer to negotiate a limitation of such weapons with the Soviets, who possess similar weapons targeted on Western Europe.

He said that for seven months the Soviets stalled on accepting the offer, waiting to see how serious the Reagan administration was about increasing American military strength and going ahead with plans to deploy Pershing II nuclear artillery weapons and Cruise missiles in Europe.

The Soviet willingness to start the nuclear missile limitation talks shows, he added, "that they now recognize America has strong leadership; that your present president will not allow them to overtake your country militarily and they know they cannot win an arms race with you. We are very gratified by what your president has done."

Joe Kingsbury-Smith, our national editor, will give you a more detailed report next week on our interview with Dr. Luns. I simply want to point out how terribly wrong were those who predicted President Reagan's hard line toward the Soviets would delay indefinitely, if not block completely, arms limitation talks with the Soviets.

Cooler temperatures forecast

The partly cloudy skies Midland has been experiencing during the past week will turn to mostly fair skies today through Monday, and Midlanders can expect to feel cooler temperatures today.

After an overnight low in the 60s, today is expected to be in the upper 80s according to the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight's low could dip into the low 60s with the high Monday reaching almost 90.

Winds should be variable through Monday traveling 5-10 mph.

Saturday's high of 95 was below the record 105-degree mark set in 1977 for the day and the overnight low of 66 was a high jump from the 1942 record low temperature of 42.

YMCA offers skier classes

Fitness for skiers will be offered at the Midland Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring St., beginning Oct. 13 with registration starting Monday.

Classes will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays at 6:30-7:30 p.m. for a six-week session. The fees for the program are $15 for members and $30 for limited members.

The ski fitness class is for beginners as well as expert skiers. Participants will strive to develop sufficient physical fitness before the ski season starts to enable the individuals to participate successfully, safely and enjoyably in the sport of skiing.

Rowland Wong, instructor, said the course will help the development of muscular endurance, strength, flexibility, coordination and cardiovascular endurance during the six week session.

For registration information call 682-2551.

Wreck victim satisfactory

A Midland man was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital Saturday night after the car he was driving collided with a 2-ton truck at the intersection of Fairgrounds Road and U.S. 80 Saturday afternoon.

Starlin Knox of Midland, no street address available, suffered a broken leg and multiple facial lacerations when his 1974 Pontiac and a 1966 truck driven by Robert Koziol, also of Midland, collided about 1:20 p.m.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Knox was eastbound on the highway and Koziol was southbound on Fairgrounds Road at the time. Koziol was not injured.

Two hurt in motorcycle wreck

STANTON — Two of three persons injured in a two-motorcycle accident near here Friday night were admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital.

Listed in serious conditon Saturday was Marcus Luna, 18, of Stanton. He suffered a broken hip and facial injuries. In good condition with chest and leg injuries was 19-year-old Dean Lawson, also of Stanton. Released following emergency treatment was Christi Turner, 19, of Stanton.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Luna was leaving a Dairy Queen parking lot on Texas Highway 137 just north of Stanton about 9:20 p.m. when his motorcycle and the one driven by Lawson collided. Lawson was southbound on the highway at the time. Turner was a passenger on Lawson's bike. She suffered cuts and bruises.

DPS investigating late-night wreck

Department of Public Safety troopers were investigating a one-car rollover accident late Saturday night that reportedly pinned one person and threw another from the wreckage.

The accident occurred five miles west of FM 1936 between Odessa and Notrees on the Kermit Highway about 9:25 p.m. No details were available by press time.

Voters have until Friday to register changes

With all the moving into the area by the new residents and moving around the county by oldtimers, some Midlanders may find they aren't eligible to vote in the Nov. 3 general election if they haven't changed their address with the voter registration office.

Janiece Builta, voter registrar for Midland County, noted that new residents and people who have changed their addresses within the county have until 5 p.m. Friday to get the change recorded in the office, located in the Tax Office in the basement of the Midland County Courthouse.

In addition, she noted that people who have moved here from other counties or states will have to register with her office to vote.

And some people who have stayed in the same house for years may find themselves with a new address due to county redistricting or new mailing assignments made by the Postal Service. Ms. Builta noted that two rural routes were added by the Postal Service, and addresses in other rural routes have been changed.

Registrations can't be forwarded to these new addresses, she said.

Residents who are signed up to vote but who have a new address may make the change by correcting the information on their voter registration card, signing the back of it and mailing it to Ms. Builta, P.O. Box 712, Midland, Texas, 7902. A corrected card will be mailed back to the voter.

Further questions about registration may be directed to Ms. Builta, 682-9481, extension 391 or 392.

Minister's past finally catches up

Dallas Times Herald

COLORADO CITY, Tex. — The Rev. Clifton David Feathers Sr.'s past caught up with him in the local cemetery. And now people here must contend with the possibility that Feathers was not so much a child of God as an agent of the devil himself.

The town of 5,200 people is 250 miles west of Dallas. It is a placid old railroad town where the sign at Eddie's Pharmacy cheers on the high school football team. Few outsiders come through.

For two years Feathers, 56, preached from the pulpit of Payne Chapel Methodist Church, where he was pastor. He never talked much about his past and no one had reason to bother him about it. They figured he had come to Colorado City because he had been assigned here, the way most Christian Methodist Episcopal ministers are assigned to their churches.

The two things people did know about Feathers were his friendliness and willingness to work. He joined the Lions Club in September 1979, just after he arrived, and made himself available for every project. He worked in a booth at the Mitchell County Fair and solicited donations on the streets to help blind children. When the church promised to pay him $60 a week but came up with only $30, he took a substitute teaching job at the high school and custodial work for the city and county.

"He was a hard worker, he set examples around here," says County Judge Bill Carter. "When you gave him a job he didn't go off and hide or lean on his rake and start talking."

Until Thursday, Feathers lived quietly here with his second wife, Blanche, and two stepchildren. Now, people here know he had a son back in California, too, 24-year-old Clifton David Feathers Jr.

On July 25, 1978, the son was found dead in a remote desert area of San Bernardino County with a gunshot wound to his head from a .38-caliber pistol. Law enforcement officials say the elder Feathers was connected to the death by various bits of evidence, including an unusual change in the named beneficiary on an insurance policy, and an arrest warrant was quickly issued bearing his name.

But Feathers disappeared.

In 1979 he showed up in Colorado City and lived here like a model citizen until FBI agents tracked him down. While performing some maintenance work in the local cemetery Thursday afternoon, Feathers was arrested and charged with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. He was taken to Abilene and placed in jail in lieu of $100,000 bond. Friday he waived extradition, which means California agents will now pick him up and bring him back to stand trial on a murder charges.

El Paso man fighting pornography

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Mike Lanier says he is God's messenger, and the message is: Clean up pornography in El Paso.

Using tactics similar to the Rev. Jerry Falwell's Moral Majority, Lanier's message-bringing has caught the attention of the local prosecutor, vice squad members, the American Civil Liberties Union and others.

The attention is understandable, Lanier said, because "the Bible says the word of the Lord is sharper than a double-edged sword."

Lanier said a vision from God triggered his anti-pornography campaign.

"Four of us came together to pray," he said. "I saw something that I could not explain away. I had a vision. I saw in my vision an aerial view of downtown El Paso.

"I saw in this certain portion of town a smaller two-story building and there was a large two-edged sword coming out of the Heavenlies sticking into that building."

After drawing what he had "seen," Lanier decided that the building was the El Paso Public Library.

At the time, the library was the center of Lanier's attention because he and other fundamentalist Christians were fighting a planned film series at the library that they felt was obscene.

"I felt our next course was to fight against pornography," he said.

Lanier quit his job as a regional executive for an automobile company, became a lay minister and launched a media campaign to call attention to the evils of flesh and crud.

He formed the Alliance of Christians Taking a Stand, or ACTS, an anti-pornography Christian group closely allied with Christians for Decency through Law and Morality in Media.

Lanier, who also has a weekly Bible study show on the religious television station, feels the time is ripe for his crusade because of the influence of those groups and the Moral Majority in secular affairs.

He began his campaign by trying to rally the support of the public through rallies and advertising on a religious television station, newspapers and billboards.

Lanier has petitions with 17,000 signatures of persons who oppose pornography and his mailing list includes 400 individuals and organizations.

But attempts at fundraising have found little success, with ACTS' budget hovering around the $30,000 Lanier had at the beginning. About $1,000 a month goes to maintain Lanier, his wife and child, their orange Volkswagen and their modern home on the outskirts of El Paso. The rest goes to the media blitz.

"Ephesians 5:11 says, 'Have nothing to do with the deeds of darkness, but expose it,'" Lanier said. "That's what I'm doing."

But others say what Lanier is doing is dangerously close to censorship and to church interference in government.

"It's fine to talk about wiping out pornography," said El Paso attorney Mike Gibson. "But they're not going around and urging people not to buy what these people sell. They're putting pressure on the cops to throw people in jail."

ACTS is urging stricter enforcement of the Texas Obscenity Law, which Lanier says outlaws many of the items that his group finds objectionable. Lanier said he meets regularly with vice squad officers to discuss the issue.

Lanier has even testified in court against operators of stores that sell pornography.

"We've used them," said County Attorney George Rodriguez Jr. "When they are in court, we call them up to testify."

In a recent case, Lanier said under questioning that he finds objectionable magazines such as Playboy, Cosmopolitan and Mademoiselle because they show nudity or partial nudity.

But the testimony hasn't made the difference in the trials. Of the five pornography cases tried this year, four defendants have been found not guilty and the other trial ended in a hung jury.

Lanier blames Rodriguez for the lack of convictions, saying "as I see it, if you want a conviction, you're going to do anything you have to do."

The CD for All Savers...From First National

Beginning October 1st, First National offers a program for "all savers" to enjoy savings with high interest yield plus a tax benefit. It's called the All Savers Certificate of Deposit. Here's how it works: Beginning October 1, 1981 and until December 31, 1982, you may invest as little as $500 in a First National All Savers CD for a maturity of one year. During that year, interest earned by the CD may be excluded from your taxable income up to a maximum $2,000 for couples filing joint tax returns, $1,000 for those filing separately. The current annual rate is 12.61%.

The interest rate on the CD will change every 4 weeks, but the rate in effect at the time you invest is fixed for the full one year term. Although the interest rate is not compounded, you may receive interest payments monthly, quarterly or upon maturity. If the CD principle is withdrawn prior to maturity, the tax exclusion is forfeited and there is substantial penalty. Deposits are insured by FDIC.

Compare First National's All Savers Certificate to other investment alternatives, consider your tax plan, then visit one of our CD representatives in our main lobby.

Armless man says jailer refused aid

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A man born without arms says he was unfairly treated by a jailer who refused to help him unfasten his pants so he could use the bathroom.

"Usually, everybody helps me go to the bathroom," said George Hunt, a graduate student at the University of Texas at Arlington. "I'd never had anybody turn me down."

He said he simply asks someone to unfasten his pants and pull them down, and "I can handle it from there."

Hunt was in city jail June 4 after being arrested for drunkenness and kicking in the glass door to a nightclub.

"I told the jailer that 'I have to use the bathroom. I need some help,'" Hunt recalled Friday. But he said the civilian employee ignored his pleas and he was forced to urinate in his pants.

"I didn't go to sleep," said the 24-year-old student. "I was smelly. I was hurt. I was feeling sick. They put me through hell."

Hunt has written city officials demanding $5,000 in compensation, and his attorney says he will go to court if necessary.

B.C. Cornish of West Texas Legal Services calls the use of restrooms "a basic right" and says the jailer violated federal regulations barring discrimination against the handicapped.

Officials of the Treasury Department's Office of Revenue Sharing, which requires agencies receiving federal funds to provide equal access to the handicapped, have notified Hunt they will investigate his complaint.

Assistant City Attorney Robert E. Diaz said he also is investigating the matter.

"I've been instructed by a supervisor not to answer any questions," he said. "This has got me upset to no end. If I said something, it would just make things worse."

Clayton orders MHMR investigation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton has appointed a House committee to investigate the Texas Department of Mental Health and Retardation, an agency under fire for the recent dismissal of a state school superintendent.

Clayton said Friday the special committee will look at personnel policy, reorganization, audits, care of clients, staff and board responsibilities and citizen complaints.

Rep. Walter Grubbs, D-Abilene, was named chairman of the committee. Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Simonton was selected as vice chairman.

DeLay and former Rep. Joe Hubenak of Rosenthal were vocal critics of the board's firing last month of James Law, superintendent at the Richmond State School. Hubenak was appointed by Clayton as a citizen member of the committee.

MHMR Commissioner James Kavanagh, who later announced his resignation, said Law was dismissed because of "differences in managerial style."

Parents of residents at the school said Law was a good administrator. They asked the MHMR board to reconsider the firing, but no such action was taken.

Walter Brooks of Quanah, a MHMR board member, called the investigation "a way of life in state government."

Clayton asked State Auditor George McNiel to do a complete audit of MHMR's central office.

"The audit report can be a basis for the committee to begin its work," he said.

Education head supports department's demise

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — U.S. Education Secretary Terrell Bell says he backs the Reagan administration's decision to dismantle his department and return control of education to the states.

The Education Department probably will be reincarnated as "an independent agency, foundation or perhaps a sub-cabinet agency in another department," Bell said Friday.

He said the federal government's role in higher education would be restricted to providing money for financial aid and research programs, and urged state officials to be more creative in meeting educational goals.

Bell, in Austin to address the University of Texas Centennial Commission, said his department is close to announcing a decision on a plan to bring UT into compliance with federal civil rights statutes.

UT and other state institutions have been criticized by the U.S. Office of Civil Rights for lackadaisical recruiting of minority students. The universities were threatened with the loss of federal money if more black and Hispanic students were not enrolled and if state financing for black universities was not increased significantly.

The cabinet member said "very good and positive discussions" have been going on between state and federal officials, and "I think that we very soon will have a good solution to this entire snarling problem."

Bentsen questions handling of funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Income to three Social Security trust funds could have been increased by more than $2 billion last year if the trustees had invested in higher-yield government securities, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Saturday.

While private investors were averaging about 13½ percent on federally guaranteed securities, the nation's Social Security money was placed into funds that earned only 8 percent, he said.

Siamese twins born in El Paso

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Siamese twins born here as part of a set of triplets were in stable condition Saturday, hospital officials said.

Doctors have not yet decided whether to separate the girls, who are joined at the chest and upper abdomen, said Dr. Jose Alva. The twins have separate hearts, but appear to share intestines and a liver, he said.

The infants were born about three weeks early and weigh an average of 4 pounds each. Doctors said it is extremely rare for Siamese twins to be born with an unattached sibling.

Alva would not release the family's name, but said the triplets were not the family's first children.

Couple killed in Dallas plane crash

William and Wanda Cole of Williamston, Mich., were killed when their Piper Cherokee crashed and burst into flames Sept. 19.

"We have determined they did land at Rockwall Airport and were going to Addison to refuel," said National Transportation Safety Board investigator Warren Wandell. He said witnesses at the suburban Addison Airport reported seeing the plane come within 200 feet of landing before it veered away.

But a shortage of air traffic controllers caused by the national strike has forced the airport to close early, and Cole "may have tried to contact Addison by radio and thought he had the wrong airport when he did not get a reply," Wandell said Friday. He said investigators speculate Cole wandered into the path of jets at D-FW while trying to find Addison Airport.

A Delta 727 passed about 500 feet above and 500 feet to the right of the small plane, he said, but the pilot had the Piper in sight the entire time. The jetliner still was close enough, however, for "wake turbulence" to render the smaller plane temporarily uncontrollable, Wandell said.

Sheriff cleared of allegations

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Sheriff Joe Steenbergen has been cleared of allegations he pocketed almost $600 in birth and death certificate fees while a peace justice.

A Collin County grand jury Friday declined to indict the sheriff, but did write a letter saying such fees should be turned over to the county treasurer by all peace justices.

But the man who made the accusations, county auditor David Roach, said the grand jury report was a "political whitewash" and said he will ask the Texas attorney general's office to investigate.

Steenbergen has admitted keeping the fees, but said he thought he was supposed to keep them.

Two arrested in Dallas slaying

DALLAS (AP) — Two men remained jailed Saturday in connection with the slaying of a silversmith last December, police said.

Robbery Sgt. Harold Rice said information from an informant led the the arrests Thursday night. He said investigators are searching for at least one more person in connection with the slaying.

John Braswell, 44, was stabbed once in the back and his throat was slashed when he was attacked at his business, police reports said. Employees arriving for work Dec. 19 found his body.

Costs of houses could double by end of decade

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of new houses in the United States could more than double by the end of the decade, a new study says. And its author says that could lead to "a politically dangerous division" between the haves and a growing number of have-nots.

The solution, according to the author: Smaller houses on smaller lots, fewer frills and better use of wood and other dwindling resources. And enlightened government help.

More attention to population growth is also necessary "to reduce housing demand in the next century," says the report, which was released by Worldwatch Institute and underwritten by the United Nations Fund for Population Activities.

Officials of the institute describe it as "an independent, nonprofit research organization created to analyze and to focus attention on global problems."

In all, the tone of the new report is sober, relieved only by author Bruce Stokes' contention that there is still time to make the choices necessary to make sure Americans are housed decently in the future.

Stokes, a senior researcher with the institute, cites dozens of other studies and reports to make his case that problems are growing, and he argues vigorously for more aggressive work toward solutions.

"Few governments have begun to plant the trees needed for lumber, to plan the public services or to develop the land-use policies essential for meeting future housing demand," he says.

If little or no action is taken to stop the trends, housing will continue to get more expensive but it will still be available to the rich and even to the moderately well-to-do if they are willing to spend 50 percent or more of their income, Stokes concludes.

However, he says, "rising housing prices in the industrial world threaten to create a politically dangerous division between a dwindling number of homeowners and all those who cannot afford their own home."

His lengthy study also covers the less-developed nations of the world, where he sees a much bleaker future including "illegal land occupations" after overcrowding makes already existing squatter settlements insufferable.

But much can be done, both here and abroad, he says.

"The house of the '80s, like the car of the late '70s, will be downsized to conserve resources," he predicts.

The present median price of new single-family American homes is about $70,000 — well above the levels of a few years ago. And Stokes says the level will keep rising unless things are changed.

His specifics:

— Land prices are soaring, now accounting for nearly one-fourth the price of an average American house compared with one-tenth a generation ago. Houses must be built on much smaller lots, even sharing one bit of clear land with several neighbors.

— Lumber prices have tripled, and lumber is growing scarcer. Other materials must be substituted, when possible, and timberland must be preserved.

— Houses in the 1970s grew larger than at any previous time in history, taking up more and more space and materials, using up more energy to heat and cool. The average size is already falling — from 1,527 square feet in 1978 to 1,464 square feet last year.

— Inner-city housing has been destroyed or abandoned. Build it back, fix it up, don't waste valuable space in an area where residents could do without energy-sapping commuter transportation.

But Stokes adds that "many of the conditions that recently increased housing demand will not continue in the years ahead."

O'Connor ready to get down to court business

WASHINGTON (AP) — Her place in American history secure, Sandra Day O'Connor gets down to work Monday, her public notoriety as the first woman on the Supreme Court giving way to the private, workaday life of her eight fellow justices.

Sworn in Friday as the high court's 102nd member, she will meet with her colleagues Monday for a week of closed-door deliberations in anticipation of the Oct. 5 opening of the 1981-82 term.

Even before she joined the court, Justice O'Connor told reporters she expected to become "very busy, very fast" in trying to master the 102 cases already scheduled for full study and decision.

In addition, the court on Oct. 5 is expected to issue orders — most of them grants or denials of review for appeals left pending last July or those that arrived during the summer recess — in as many as 1,000 cases.

Justice O'Connor inherits three law clerks who have spent most of the summer previewing those cases.

As of Friday, the three young lawyers selected nearly a year ago to spend the coming term working for now-retired Justice Potter Stewart will work for Justice O'Connor. She has hired a lawyer from her husband's Phoenix law firm to be a fourth clerk.

Justice O'Connor also inherits some direct responsibility from the man she succeeds in the lifetime post. She will serve as circuit justice for the 6th federal judicial circuit, handling emergency matters from Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio and Tennessee.

Justice O'Connor is moving into the chambers used until recently by Justice John Paul Stevens. At the same time, she is moving into one of Washington's most private public jobs, where she likely will be shielded from the more demanding aspects of being a national symbol.

Justice O'Connor appeared relaxed, perhaps even relieved, through the long day of posing and shaking hands Friday — enough so to accept an invitation to a reception hosted by reporters who cover the court.

But most of Friday offered pomp and ceremony. In the marble and mahogany courtroom, a six-minute proceeding swept away two centuries of tradition.

President Reagan, whose nomination of the former Arizona appeals court judge broke a 191-year, all-male tradition at the zenith of the federal judiciary, was among 500 guests looking on.

Joining him were Attorney General William French Smith, FBI Director William Webster and numerous judges, senators and legal scholars.

But none was more proud than Ada Mae Day, who with husband Harry traveled from the family's cattle ranch in eastern Arizona to watch their 51-year-old daughter swear her allegiance to the Constitution and promise to "faithfully discharge the duties of my office."

"It is a very proud day for me," Mrs. Day said. "And for the country, really."

As Justice O'Connor was about to take her seat as the court's junior member, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger told her: "On behalf of all the members of the court and retired Justice Stewart, it is a pleasure to extend to you a very warm welcome to the court and to wish you a very long life and a long and happy career in our common calling."

The court's current nine members have been appointed by six different presidents.

Longshoreman files $101 million suit

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — A Savannah longshoreman whose feet were torn off in a dockside accident, then reattached only to be amputated, has filed suit seeking $101.5 million in damages.

The suit, filed Friday in Superior Court, seeks $75 million in punitive damages, in addition to reimbursement for lost wages and medical expenses. Among the defendants named are the Georgia Ports Authority and the International Longshoremen's Association.

Wind-monitoring device on gondola

DALLAS (AP) — The manufacturer of an amusement park gondola that crashed here in 1979, killing one man and injuring 17 others, has agreed to place wind-monitoring devices on the rides so they can be shut off in gusty weather.

Von Roll Ltd. agreed to the measure during a $3.81 million out-of-court settlement with a woman who was paralyzed in the accident.

The incident occurred when one gondola became stuck on a tower and three others plowed into it, sending two of them crashing down. Witnesses said the ride operated in dangerously high winds on the day of the crash, that a safety switch had been purposely deactivated and that the operator did not use the emergency stop button.

Five deaths in auto, train wreck

JEFFERSON, Wis. (AP) — Five people, including three children, were killed when the car in which they were riding collided with a Chicago and North Western train at a railroad crossing that had no flashing sign or gates.

The five-car train was reportedly traveling at 10 miles per hour Friday night but could not stop in time.

Jefferson County Coroner Ewald Reichert identified the driver as Susan Schutti, 19, of rural Sullivan. The other victims, all from Jefferson, were identified as Randy Messier, 35; his daughter, Margaret, 5; Stephanie Kreuser, 10; and her sister, Sarah Kreuser, 6.

Boy looses leg in train mishap

Ronald Fazzio and three friends had been planning to ride a short distance to watch workers dismantle a bridge Friday, officials say. Police are investigating whether the boy fell or was pushed when he reached for a ladder on a moving car.

The boy was in serious condition following surgery at Erie County Medical Center.

Indians petition governor on cowhide

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — About 350 Indians from the Fort McDowell Indian Reservation marched 40 miles to the state Capitol to deliver a petition written on cowhide to Gov. Bruce Babbitt.

The petition urges him to block construction of Orme Dam at the junction of the Salt and Verde rivers. The dam, which Babbitt endorses, would flood about 25,000 acres of the reservation, displacing 350 members of the Yavapai and Pima-Maricopa tribes.

The Indians favor a plan to raise two existing dams and build the Cliff Dam on the Verde.

Interferon tests depend on FDA approval

BALTIMORE (AP) — The first tests of the effectiveness of laboratory-produced interferon on different types of cancer will be conducted here next month if the U.S. Food and Drug Administration gives its approval, a cancer researcher says.

Interferon extracted from humans has been used in limited trials on cancer patients, but this will be the first test of the laboratory version's impact on specific types of cancer, said Dr. Richard Leavitt, co-director of the interferon project at Baltimore Cancer Research Center.

The natural interferon that has been used is less than one percent pure. The laboratory-produced interferon, which will be mass produced through genetic engineering, will be 95 percent pure, scientists say.

The BCRC, an arm of the National Cancer Institute located at University of Maryland Hospital, plans to test the potential cancer fighter on patients suffering from acute leukemia, lung cancer and multiple myeloma, a bone marrow cancer, Leavitt said.

The patients must be referred by their physicians, he said.

Leavitt said Friday the center has almost completed phase one, the safety test in the first national trials of the body's natural infection fighter. In that phase, he said, five cancer centers including BCRC have been testing for side effects and working to determine proper dosages.

Patients suffering from all types of cancer have been exposed to the drug in the first stage.

Leavitt declined to disclose what side effects have been found, saying scientists involved in the study had agreed not to disclose any results until they have been reported in a scientific journal.

However, he did say that large doses could be given safely on an outpatient basis. He said BCRC patients involved in phase-one testing have been getting intramuscular injections twice daily, and that most have come as outpatients after the first week.

At a BCRC-sponsored symposium on cancer treatment research in Baltimore, a cancer researcher said common side effects are fever, chills, fatigue and loss of appetite.

Dr. Robert K. Oldham of the Frederick Cancer Research Center, another arm of the NCI, said his examples were based on clinical trials of human interferon, a naturally occurring protein extracted from human blood.

Early studies with forms of human interferon have shown the substance has some had some effect on certain cancers — such as breast cancer and multiple myeloma — but no striking results were reported.

Oldham said that in many instances the treatment would shrink tumors for a while, but that they would then grow back.

The interferon that will be used in the upcoming trials at BCRC and other cancer centers in the nation will be manufactured by Hoffman-LaRoche Inc., of Nutley, N.J., in cooperation with Genentech, a California-based genetic engineering firm.

Flexibility is key to successful arms talks

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.S.-Soviet decision to begin arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland on Nov. 30 may have been the only easy one facing the two sides on the issue. Unless they show more flexibility than they have so far, the agreement to talk may be the only one made.

It isn't yet decided, for example, what weapons in Europe they will try to control.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who agreed in a meeting Wednesday to start the talks, will deal Monday with an agenda for the talks, the first significant ones on any issue between the United States and the Soviets since President Reagan took office.

Their joint statement said the two nations would "spare no effort" in their negotiations. But it was vague on what they would negotiate, other than "nuclear arms," indicating significant disagreement remains on this point.

The U.S side insisted that the negotiations would focus on medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, also known as theater nuclear weapons.

"I obviously can't speak for the Soviet side, but we are talking about TNF," Dean Fischer, the State Department spokesman, told reporters after the Haig-Gromyko meeting.

However, informed U.S. sources said the Soviets are holding out for broader negotiations to include nuclear-armed U.S. aircraft based in Europe, in addition to missiles.

The Soviet strategy is easy to understand. The Soviet Union has an estimated 250 of its medium-range SS-20 missles in place, 180 of them targeted on Europe, each with triple-warhead capacity.

The United States plans to deploy 572 Pershing II and cruise missiles in West Germany, Italy and Great Britain, beginning in late 1983. They will be targeted on the Soviet Union to counter the SS-20 threat.

An Analysis

If missiles are counted, that gives the Soviets a 180 to zero edge. If aircraft are included, the equation changes, although still in favor of the Soviets.

There are indications of flexibility on both sides. The Soviets have said they would reduce the number of their missiles, if the United States scraps its deployment plans.

And U.S officials, who didn't want to be identified, said there might be a way to include U.S. aircraft in the Geneva talks, although the initial focus must be "on the most dangerous systems first," which means missiles.

The talks will be closely watched by a world anxious for signs that the two superpowers are seriously interested in defusing tensions between them.

"The importance and weight of the United States and the Soviet Union gives both countries a special responsibility for world peace," West Germany's foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher told the U.N. General Assembly here last week.

"There must not be another arms race," he said. West Germany hopes successful negotiations will make unnecessary the deployment of U.S. nuclear missiles on West German soil as part of NATO's European defense strategy.

The most significant result of the Haig-Gromyko meeting, besides the fixing of the negotiations, was that it was held at all, in view of all the harsh rhetoric between the two countries in recent months.

Haig had told the U.N. Monday that the Soviet Union was a treat to sovereign nations everywhere because of its intervention in Afghanistan. And Gromyko unleashed a long denunciation of Reagan administration foreign policy before the assembly the next day, accusing it of "madness" in its arm spending.

Nevertheless, behind the rhetoric were carefully worded offer to talk over their problems, and the two men were described as "relaxed and good-humored" as they started their talks, which lasted for more than four hours.

Burying the dead is a family affair

GREEN ISLE, Minn. (AP) — Pete Olson started digging graves to support his family of six. Now burying is a family affair.

Olson and sons Mike, Oswald and Oscar dig graves in a dozen cemeteries in southern Minnesota. Sometimes the 56-year-old Olson is assisted by his wife, Alice, and sometimes 3-year-old granddaughter Jackie comes along.

"The reason she's working is that women's lib thing," Olson said with a laugh, pointing to his wife as she helped fill a grave here last week. "I dig 'em. Then she helps cover 'em. And then she spends half of what I get — before we get home."

The Olsons take pride in their work. Unlike most modern gravediggers, they still dig graves with hand shovels even in winter, when it can take up to two days to chop a hole in the frozen soil. It's not that Olson believes working with his hands is superior to digging with a machine. It's just that he's a practical man.

"Well, I'll tell you," he said. "My boys are pretty tough on equipment. You can see that by how banged up my truck is. And a machine to dig graves costs $11,000. Then you need a truck to haul it. But the time you make the interest and the depreciation, you might as well stay home and drink beer."

When Olson started digging graves, about 25 years ago, he charged $35 a grave. Now he gets $115 in most cemeteries, and $30 more when he has to haul out extra dirt by wheelbarrow.

In 1975, he dug 117 graves. But a year or two after that, he buried only about 70 people.

"I think that was the year they started giving the old folks prune juice," he said.

Olson smokes a long, brown cigar as his shovel bites into a pile of dirt. The grave fills up while the cigar burns down. Only a soggy nub remains between his clenched teeth by the time he stamps down the dirt.

People may not envy their job. But, says Mrs. Olson, somebody's got to do it.

"You learn not to think about what you're doing," she said. "It's not so bad when you're burying an old person — they've had a full life. The saddest thing is when you have to bury the young people, just kids who had their full life still to live."

"This is serious business," said Pete. "I've buried a lot of people I've known since 1955 or whenever I started. And actually, that's the last favor you can do for 'em. You wouldn't want your friends laying around on the ground so the bugs and everything eat 'em up, you know."

Olson and his sons also have a small farm near Browntown and they clean and repair railroad boxcars. In their spare time, they hold down regular 40-hour jobs.

"I've got a first class engineering license," Olson says. "I'm the boiler engineer at the dairy in Winthrop. This digging is my spare money."

Has he decided how he would like to be buried? Olson laughs.

"We're just like a mechanic, you know. Seems like a mechanic never fixes his car. And we never worry about that."

Beer scalds workers

IRWINDALE, Calif. (AP) — A vat containing 30,000 gallons of scalding hot beer overflowed onto 10 workers at a Miller Brewery here, seriously burning three, officials said.

Ron West, 43, of Huntington Beach, was in critical condition at Sherman Oaks Community Hospital on Saturday, a day after the accident, said nursing supervisor Faye Deichler. He had second-and third-degree burns over 80 percent of his body.

A Whittier man, 54-year-old Frank Motell, was in serious but stable condition with burns over 47 percent of his body, she said.

One worker who was not identified was being treated for second-degree burns over 45 percent of his body at Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center, said county fire Inspector Jim Davids.

The three, and seven men who were treated for minor injuries, were repairing a conveyor when partially brewed beer heated to 170 degrees flowed into a full vat and then overflowed onto the men, Davids said.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A 12-year-old girl who became pregnant and contracted a venereal disease during a gang rape is fighting in court for an abortion her mother opposes on religious grounds.

The state Supreme Court could rule on the case as early as Monday. The child is nearly three months pregnant, and doctors say giving birth could endanger her life.

The mother, a member of the Church of the Holiness, wants the high court to uphold her contention that she is entitled to make the decision because her daughter is too young to make such decisions for herself.

Michelle G. Porta, court-appointed attorney for the mother, said the woman believes that if God wants the pregnancy terminated, the girl will have a miscarriage.

The state, however, contends the girl has the right to the abortion she desires. The girl seeks an abortion because of her age and of the pregnancy's possible impact on her health.

Last week, Special Judge Donald C. Manning made the girl a ward of the court and ordered her pregnancy terminated. However, he stayed his ruling to give the mother time to appeal and because there is no state law dealing with such a case and no court rulings on the subject.

Three of the nine justices heard arguments Friday.

Ms. Porta, asked by a reporter if the mother was concerned about medical reports that pregnancy would endanger the child's life, said, "That is not the issue. The issue is the mother's objection to the abortion on religious grounds."

Ms. Porta said the girl was "raped by three males, who apparently were of about high school age." She said the girl's assailants have not been apprehended.

Sadat warns next crackdown will be 'ten times more violent'

By LISETTE BALOUNY
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat on Saturday warned Moslem fundamentalists he will strike "ten times more violently" against them than in his recent crackdown if they try to stir up more unrest in Egypt.

His warning, in a speech at the Nile Delta town of Mansoura, was carried live by Cairo radio. It came three weeks after the government rounded up 1,536 people in the regime's biggest ever crackdown on religious and political opponents. Sadat said he did it to avert a Lebanese or Iranian-type bloodbath in Egypt.

"I am saying it firmly and clearly, I will act ten times more violently than I have if any of the misguided youths tries to make trouble again," Sadat said. "We have rounded up the heads. But I have a list of 7,000 more names."

Sadat who in recent speeches has referred to the Moslem fundamentalists as misguided, and as the "secret arm of the (ultra-fundamentalist) Moslem Brotherhood," devoted a good part of his hour-long speech at a political rally to ridiculing the preachings of the Moslem fundamentalists.

"They quote the Koran as saying that God created man to worship him only, so they argue they do not have to learn anything, or even work, just pray all day and night," Sadat said to the hearty laughs of his audience. "They say women should stay at home, and if they go out should wear a veil with slits for the eyes. And robes that makes them look like a tent. These are ways strange to us, strange to our teachings and our beliefs."

Moslem fundamentalism, a movement that sprung from Egypt's 17 universities, has been attracting more followers in the past two years as Egypt struggles with economic hardships like inflation, housing shortages and deteriorating public services. Economic disparities also have been underlined with the influx of Western commodities.

The rise of the fundamentalists generated extremism among the Coptic Christian community here, resulting in clashes in which more than 70 people have been killed this year.

In an interview with the French daily newspaper Le Figaro, excerpts of which were carried Saturday by the official Middle East News Agency here, the president said:

"The Soviets stopped at nothing to fan the flames of this confrontation. They would tell the Copts the Moslems were out to exterminate them, they would float rumors about 400 Moslems killed in a remote place in the country."

Sadat expelled the Soviet ambassador and six diplomats and terminated the contracts of more than 1,000 Soviet technicians earlier this month.

In the same interview, Sadat repeated allegations that Libya, with Soviet assistance, is trying to foment trouble in Egypt, Sudan and Tunisia.

"I just saw a map of camps around Tripoli where youth are being trained for sabotage and terrorism. They have foreign trainers too, including Carlos," Sadat said, referring to the international terrorist from Venezuela.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat waves to the crowds that gathered to watch as his presidential train passed through towns in the Nile delta north of Cairo. Sadat rode the train 120 kilometers from Cairo to Mansoura for a political rally.

IRA hunger striker gives up fast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Jailed hunger striker Liam McCloskey gave up his fast Saturday, British officials announced. He was the second guerrilla to quit in three days and the seventh since the strike began March 1.

McCloskey, 25, was in the 55th day of his fast at the Maze prison. He was serving a 10-year sentence for ambushing British troops, conspiring to steal military weapons and taking part in punishment shootings.

He is a member of the Irish Republican Army splinter group, the Irish National Liberation Army.

Britain's Northern Ireland Office said McCloskey's mother and brother were at his bedside when he decided to give up his fast. Supporters said he had been blind for a week and unable to hold down water.

McCloskey, who had been given only a few more days to live, was moved to a hospital outside the Maze immediately after giving up his hunger strike, prison officials said.

His mother, Philomena McCloskey, said in a statement that she had persuaded her son to give up the fast.

"My son reluctantly ended his hunger strike and only did so after I convinced him that I would not let him die," Mrs. McCloskey said. "I told him that I would intervene if he lapsed into a coma and it was better for him to come off the hunger strike now rather than run the risk of permanent damage to his eyesight or other vital organs."

She said her son's withdrawal from the hunger protest did not reflect a weakening of support for the nationalist prisoners' position.

"I and my family fully support the prisoners' demands," she said. "We don't want our son, nor his friends, to live in the conditions that created this hunger strike."

McCloskey had been fasting longer than any of the six other prisoners currently on the hunger strike. He had been the only INLA man refusing food.

The INLA said earlier this week that it would not contribute any more hunger strikers at present because its entire prison membership would be dead in six months.

IRA hunger striker Bernard Fox gave up the hunger strike Thursday after 32 days without food. He had been told by doctors that he had a blocked tube leading to his kidneys which would bring about his premature death.

The hunger strike was launched by IRA and INLA guerrillas in a campaign get reforms amounting to prisoner of war status, but the British government has refused their demands.

Soviets successful in Mideast

By DAVID MASON
AP Chief European Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — After years of attempting to establish a firm foothold in the Middle East, the Soviet Union has realized some significant successes, according to Western government and independent specialists. But the scorecard is not all on the plus side.

Soviet efforts to penetrate the Middle East, with its oil fields and warm-water ports, face a basic conflict in ideology between the Moslem faith and a communism that officially proclaims a policy of atheism. But some Arab states nevertheless accept massive Soviet weaponry and the presence of military advisers.

Syria, Libya and South Yemen are now the "hot spots" for Soviet military aid and the political punch it carries.

The London-based independent International Institute for Strategic Studies estimates Syria has two Soviet-equipped, surface-to-surface missile regiments and 32 surface-to-air missile batteries, plus some 3,700 Soviet medium tanks. Soviet forces in Syria are said to total 2,500 men, operating under a 1980 treaty of friendship and cooperation.

Libya, whose leader Col. Moammar Khadafy is considered by many Western officials to be the major trouble maker in the Middle East and Africa, leans heavily on the Soviets for arms and has accepoted some 1,750 Soviet advisers. He may be seeking a formal alliance with the Soviet Union, although British and other sources say they believe the Soviets are wary about firmly linking their Middle East interests to him.

The Institute of Strategic Studies, in a report published last week, said Libya has obtained a dozen SS-12 Soviet Scaleboard surface-to-surface missiles. The missiles are nuclear-capable, but there is no evidence, the institute said, that the Soviets have provided Libya with nuclear warheads. The institute added that this is the first time the SS-12s have appeared outside the Soviet Union.

Pro-Marxist South Yemen, which also has a 1980 treaty with the Soviet Union, is reported to have about 1,500 Soviets in the country, a surface-to-surface missile regiment and a contingent of tanks and artillery. Last month, South Yemen entered an alliance with Libya and Ethiopia, also a Soviet client state.

In other Middle East states, Soviet aid and influence waxes and wanes.

Oil-rich Iraq went to war with neighboring Iran with about 2,500 Soviet-supplied tanks and other equipment, but Western intelligence experts say Soviet spare parts quickly dried up. "This is something Iraq will never forget," claimed one U.S. expert. Iraq is now said to be turning to France and Italy for more military aid.

Egypt earlier this month ousted the Soviet ambassador and more than 1,500 Soviet officials and advisers, claiming they were involved in Egyptian religious disturbances. It was the most serious rift in Soviet-Egyptian relations since Egypt expelled 17,000 Soviets in 1972.

Kuwait, the only conservative Arab oil state with full diplomatic relations with Moscow, has mostly Western-made military equipment. But Kuwait reportedly favors closer ties with the Soviets and East European countries by the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council.

Treaty to prevent Olympic symbol use

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The International Olympic Committee adopted a treaty Saturday to prevent commercial use of the Olympic symbol — five interlaced rings — without the IOC's permission.

The United States was the only one of 43 countries to vote against adoption in a roll-call vote at the end of a three-day conference that hammered out the final wording of the 10-article treaty.

The treaty makes the IOC, the world governing body of the Olympic Games, the sole authorizing agent for commercial use of the blue, yellow, black, green and red Olympic rings. It must be ratified by the goverments of participating nations before going into effect.

But the American delegation argued that this conflicts with a U.S. statute that allows the U.S. Olympic Committee to license commercial use of the symbol in the United States. The U.S. Olympic Committee, which gets no government funds, derives much of its revenue from licensing fees.

U.S. officials said privately that ratification of the treaty by the U.S. Senate seemed unlikely, and that the United States would almost certainly not become a party to the pact.

The aim of the treaty, drafted last year in Geneva at the urging of Kenya and other Third World countries, is to channel some of the money made through use of the Olympic symbol on merchandise ranging from T-shirts to gym bags into the IOC coffers.

Much of the money that the IOC would get from licensing fees would then be distributed to developing nations to improve their sports programs.

IOC officials estimate that licensing fees will bring in about $12 million annually in non-Olympic years and a minimum of $30 million in years the games are staged.

Though future use of the Olympic symbol for commercial purposes would require the IOC'S permission.

The CD for All Savers...From First National

Beginning October 1st, First National offers a program for "all savers" to enjoy savings with high interest yield plus a tax benefit. It's called the All Savers Certificate of Deposit. Here's how it works: Beginning October 1, 1981 and until December 31, 1982, you may invest as little as $500 in a First National All Savers CD for a maturity of one year. During that year, interest earned by the CD may be excluded from your taxable income up to a maximum $2,000 for couples filing joint tax returns, $1,000 for those filing separately. The current annual rate is 12.61%.

The interest rate on the CD will change every 4 weeks, but the rate in effect at the time you invest is fixed for the full one year term. Although the interest rate is not compounded, you may receive interest payments monthly, quarterly or upon maturity. If the CD principle is withdrawn prior to maturity, the tax exclusion is forfeited and there is substantial penalty. Deposits are insured by FDIC.

Compare First National's All Savers Certificate to other investment alternatives, consider your tax plan, then visit one of our CD representatives in our main lobby.

Canada vows to fight U.S. oil pressure

OTTAWA (AP) — Energy Minister Marc LaLonde said Saturday Canada "will not stand for" mounting U.S. oil industry pressure on the Reagan administration to retaliate to its energy policies.

"We intend to resist (those pressures) and I think the people of Canada will not stand for that kind of undue pressure if it is continued," he said in a television news show interview taped for broadcast Sunday. "What's important is that we know what's happening and that we have staked our grounds and we intend to stand on our own feet," he said.

There has been growing pressure in Washington, D.C., for some kind of action against Canada's plan to increase domestic ownership of its oil and natural gas industry from the current 30 percent to 50 percent. The plan calls for accomplishing the 50-50 ownership by 1990 by granting exploration and tax incentives to the Canadian-dominated countries.

Some U.S. State Department officials have called the plan unjust, reportedly infuriating officials in Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's government.

"We should not take to the woods every time somebody coughs in Washington," Lalonde said. "We have a little bit of tendency in Canada...just to run scared the moment some officials start saying 'boo' in the United States."

He characterized as "uncalled for and excessive" U.S. Undersecretary of State Myer Rashish's statement that Canada-U.S. relations were "sliding dangerously close towards crisis" because of Canada's nationalist policies.

The common interests of Canada and the U.S. "are too large and too big to be seriously prejudiced by what we are trying to do," he added.

2,000 prisoners on hunger strike

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Prison officials said some 2,000 prisoners in Modelo Prison began a hunger strike Saturday demanding better living conditions.

They said the strikers were also seeking a sharp decrease in the number of inmates at the prison, which houses 2,300 prisoners. They also want authorities to speed up pending trials as well as to implement promised changes in the penal code.

The officials said there have been no disorders.

Chess player wants kicking barrier

MERANO, Italy (AP) — Anatoly Karpov wants a wooden barrier beneath the table where he defends his world chess crown to prevent challenger Victor Korchnoi from kicking him, tournament sources said Saturday.

Karpov, a Soviet, spent an hour and a half inspecting the hall where the two start the tournament on Thursday. The champion claimed that Korchnoi, a Soviet exile and his archrival, has kicked him to distract him during previous encounters, said the sources, who asked to remain unidentified.

Korchnoi, in turn, has accused the champion of using a hypnotist to distract him during the 1978 championship match in the Philippines.

The sources said Korchnoi is planning to bring two Filipino mediums to "neutralize" the hypnotist if he shows up this time. He has also demanded bullet-proof glass at the side of the chess board to prevent "external interferences" during the games, the sources said.

After inspecting the hall, Karpov also asked organizers to get a darker-colored table, to change the lighting in the room to eliminate shadows, and to find him a chair with the arms closer together, the sources said. Organizers said they would grant his requests if Korchnoi did not object, the sources said.

Korchnoi, who defected to the West from the Soviet Union in 1976 leaving behind his wife and son, again failed to show up in this northern Italian spa when his spokeswoman said he would.

The challenger was originally expected to arrive earlier in the week, but then his representative, Petra Leeuwerick, said he would come early Saturday.

Organizers said they hoped Korchnoi would arrive by Monday at the latest, when the first formal meeting is scheduled between delegations representing the two players.

The winner will be the first player to win six games. Karpov won the 1978 finals 6 to 5 after 32 matches and 93 days. This time they are vying for the a $200,000 first prize with the loser getting $125,000.

Italian organizers who invested $1.2 million to stage the match expected the championship to last from 80 to 100 days.

Six killed in Tehran battle

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Tehran Radio said six people were killed Saturday in a gunbattle between pro- and anti-government forces outside Tehran, and 22 more leftists were executed. Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, meanwhile, relinquished part of his authority.

The shootout in Tehran's northern suburb of Kan appeared to usher in a campaign by Mujahedeen Khalq guerrillas to scare people away from the polls in next Friday's presidential elections to choose a successor to slain President Mohammad Ali Rajai.

Pars, the official Iranian news agency, said the guerrillas killed three government supporters, involved in presidential campaigning, with machine guns. It said three guerrillas were killed in an ensuing gunbattle and four were arrested.

Tehran Radio later said two Mujahedeen Khalq guerrillas were killed and more than 33 arrested in clashes with Islamic revolutionary guards in several parts of Iran in the last few days.

The Mujahedeen Khlaq, which blends Marxism with Islamic tenets, has led a bloody campaign of bombings and assassinations against Khomeini's regime since ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was removed from office in June.

The 22 leftists executed Saturday were all members of the Mujahedeen and allied groups, Tehran Radio said. They were put to death in seven Iranian cities for armed rebellion against the Islamic revolution, it said.

That brings to 815 the number of officially announced executions since Bani-Sadr's ouster. Other sources in Iran say twice that number have been put to death by the clergy-led government.

Khomeini on Friday delegated the power to replace assassinated members of Iran's Supreme Judicial Council to his heir-apparent, Ayatollah Hossein Montazeri, Tehran Radio reported.

It said Montazeri will be was authorized to "take whatever measures he deems necessary" to fill the vacancies.

This is believed to be the first time the 81-year-old Iranian leader has delegated such powers to any aide since his revolution overthrew Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in early 1979.

There was no official explanation for the move, and the names of assassinated council members were not released.

Khomeini has been refraining recently from direct addresses to the nation in contrast with the almost daily speeches he made early this month. His messages in the last two weeks have been read by his son or by radio announcers.

Montazeri, 64, a close confidant of Khomeini, held the influential position of Friday prayer leader in the holy city of Qom until last June, when he stopped giving sermons because of poor health, Iranian sources said.

His son, Hojatoleslam Mohammad Montazeri, was killed along with more than 70 others in a June 28 bombing at the Tehran headquarters of the ruling Islamic Republican Party.

Khomeini appointed Montazeri to head the Assembly of Experts that drew up the constitution for the Islamic republic last year. It was that appointment that made Montazeri generally considered as Khomeini's successor.

Three approved as ladies-in-waiting

LONDON (AP) — Three ladies of impeccable background have been approved by Queen Elizabeth II as ladies-in-waiting to Princess Diana.

They were identified Friday by Buckingham Palace as Anne Beckwith-Smith, 29, the Honorable Mrs. Lavinia Baring, 30, and Mrs. Hazel West, 36.

Miss Beckwith-Smith will work full-time answering the hundreds of letters sent to the 20-year-old wife of Prince Charles, arranging schedules, running errands and traveling with the princess.

The other two women are unpaid "extras" whose duties will be restricted to accompanying the princess at public engagements.

Bull destroys china shop

ABBEVILLE, France (AP) — A bull escaped from a slaughterhouse and thundered through a china shop, smashing porcelain place settings and crystalware before crashing through the display window, police said Saturday.

The rampage ended Friday after a police officer shot the animal to death following a one-mile chase through the streets of this northwestern French town.

"He got in through a service entrance at Aux Arts Menagers," a police spokesman said. "There was considerable damage before the animal left by crashing through the plate-glass window, but nobody in the shop was injured."

Sixty Filipino sailors killed

MANILA, Philippines (AP)— Search teams pulled out 11 more bodies from a northern Philippine sea channel Saturday, bringing to 60 the number of Filipino sailors killed when a powerful typhoon beached their destroyer last Sunday, the Philippine navy said.

A navy spokesman said 19 other crewmen of the 1,200-ton Datu Kalantiao still were missing in waters around Calayan island, 340 miles north of Manila, where tropical Typhoon Clara drove the ship aground. Most of the fatalities were washed overboard by huge waves, according to navy officials.

Only 18 of the 97 officers and men aboard the ship, on a patrol mission at the time, are known to have survived the worst disaster to hit the Philippine navy since the end of World War II.

Thailand passes record budget

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand's Parliament, by a 279-2 vote Saturday, passed a record high national budget of $6.9 billion for the 1982 fiscal year.

National defense received the lion's share, with $1.3 billion — an increase of 5.7 percent over last year. Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda stressed that it was a necessary boost in view of the continuing Vietnamese presence in neighboring Cambodia.

India frees five Iraqi employees

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indian authorities freed five Iraqi Embassy employees accused of shooting Iranian demonstrators near the Iraqi Embassy, a government spokesman said Saturday.

Ten persons — six Iranians, three Indian policemen and one Iraqi— were reported injured in the Friday melee. About 50 Iranians, shouting anti-Iraq slogans to mark the first anniversary of the Iran-Iraq war, said they were fired on by Iraqis who arrived in Iraqi embassy cars.

It was unclear when the detained Iraqis were freed Friday whether they would be prosecuted on charges of attempted murder and rioting because they may have diplomatic immunity, government officials said.

Berlin seeks solution to housing crisis

BERLIN (AP) — West Berlin's mayor announced Saturday that police will not forcibly remove squatters "for the time being" while officials seek a peaceful solution to the city's housing crisis after nine months of riots.

The first death resulting from the street violence was reported Tuesday when an 18-year-old demonstrator was run over by a city bus during a clash with police following the clearance of eight occupied houses.

After meeting with politicians, clergy, businessmen and union representatives Saturday, Mayor Richard von Weizsaecker pledged maximum support from the local government in seeing that some 9,000 empty apartments in the city of 2.2 million be filled.

Nineteen police injured in 'Free City' fighting

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Nineteen policemen and an undetermined number of civilians were injured in street fighting in Copenhagen's "Free City," authorities said Saturday, the enclave's 10th anniversary.

Residents threw up barricades and hurled rocks, bottles and gasoline bombs at police during the 14-hour disturbance that began Friday afternoon in the abandoned army base set up a decade ago as an alternative society for the disillusioned, authorities said.

Ib Hansen, assistant police superintendent, said several people were arrested but there was little damage to the city-within-a-city known as Christiania. The barricades had been removed early Saturday, he added.

Witnessses said officers battled the rioters with sticks and Hansen said the 19 officers wounded were hit by stones and bottles.

"We don't know what caused it," Hansen said. "We had just made an arrest of a man who stole a bicycle, and they attacked us."

"The Christianians just went crazy," said a photographer who was at the scene. Residents had planned a non-stop party to observe the "Free City's" anniversary, but Hansen said he didn't know if that was related to the fighting.

It was Copenhagen's worst street fighting since May 1980, when residents of a poor area protested efforts to clear a vacant lot used by neighborhood children for a playground.

Named for the Christianshavn area that surrounds it, Christiania was set up by squatters declaring an "alternative society." Attracting dropouts rejecting the trappings of modern life, it has since thrived, now boasting theaters, stores, restaurants and cottage industries.

German spy exchange possible

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The spy whose capture led to the fall of Chancellor Willy Brandt's government and four other jailed agents may be swapped soon for some 60 East German prisoners, West German newspapers said Saturday. The government called the reports "pure speculation."

The reports said the top spy to be exchanged was former Brandt aide Guenter Guillaume, who began serving a 13-year term in 1975 for spying for Communist East Germany.

The revelation that an East German agent had penetrated the nation's highest office was such an embarrassment to the government that Brandt was forced to step down. He was succeeded by Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

The reports said the government was considering the move because Guillaume is suffering from a serious kidney ailment and might have to be taken from prison in any case because of the illness.

All newspapers said the reports had come from highly placed West German ecurity sources who refused to be identified.

They said the four prisoners in the exchange besides Guillaume included Renate Lutze, Gen. Heinz-Bernard Zorn, an unidentified Soviet Secret police agent jailed in South Africa, and an unidentified East German agent imprisoned in Denmark.

Lutze, a former secretary in the West German Defense Ministry, was sentenced in 1979 to six years imprisonment for supplying East Germany with more than 1,000 defense documents. Zorn, a former East German general, was arrested 13 months ago in Lille, France, with secret documents in his possession.

In the past, people in East German jails whose release has been obtained are East Germans considered by the West to be political prisoners since most are convicted of attempting to leave the country or helping others flee. Other reports speculate that those supposedly to be exchanged may have been spies for West Germany.

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale presents its Pops in the Plaza concert Wednesday beginning at noon in the downtown plaza at The First National Bank, corner of Wall Street and Big Spring Street.

Music performed includes "A Tribute to Arthur Fiedler" with the symphony playing such individual selections as "Bugler's Holiday," "Blue Tango," "Syncopated Clock," "Red Sails in the Sunset" and "Yellow Rose of Texas."

This concert kicks off the symphony's season with season tickets being sold for $45 for reserved seats, $30 for general admission, $15 for teachers and $10 for students and senior citizens.

Lunch will be sold by symphony guild members. The concert is sponsored by First National Bank.

Following the performance, the symphony guild will open its box office at Texas Electric Service Company where tickets will be sold until Oct. 13, the day of the Roberta Peters concert.

Midland College offers piano lessons for adults

"This is a chance for persons who have always wanted to learn how to play the piano to obtain their introduction to keyboard instruction at no cost," said Don Grant, coordinator of music at MC. "After two weeks of introductory instruction, the students will be able to enroll in class piano, take private lessons, or discontinue instruction. The only obligation is to attend the class and purchase the basic textbook."

The class is being offered Monday and Wednesday from 10 to 11:30 a.m. beginning Oct. 5, and Tuesday and Thursday from 8 to 9:30 p.m. beginning Oct. 6. Persons wanting to enroll may do so at the Allison Fine Arts Building in room 127 with Ellen Gonzales. Deadline for enrolling is Friday.

Preparing for a public showing and sale of their works to be held at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., are, from left, Alicean Kalteyer, Virginia Rachal and Rita Buckner Smith. The show will be held Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. The free showing includes sandcastings, silk flowers, seasonal potpourri, harvest cornucopias, Christmas items and "Happy Children" sculptures of wildlife and oriental designs made of clay, porcelain and bronze.

'60 Minutes' takes a good look at itself

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "I feel like Mike Wallace," media critic Jeff Greenfield quips after posing a tough question for Don Hewitt, executive producer of CBS' "60 Minutes."

The remark is both amusing and appropriate, coming as it does in an hour-long look at the technique of investigative reporting, particularly as practiced by the CBS newsmagazine.

It's called "Looking at 60 Minutes," and Wallace, the artful practitioner who anchors the program, makes it clear from the start — there is no consensus of opinion, and none should be expected:

"We are going to examine ourselves," he says, "at least that part of ourselves which has brought us both some commendation and condemnation."

The program, to be broadcast Sunday night as a special edition of "60 Minutes," is not the first of its kind.

ABC News, in July, broadcast "Viewpoint," an appealing exercise in self-criticism. At the local level, WBBM, the CBS station in Chicago, took ABC's "20-20" newsmagazine to task in April in an hour-long documentary called "Watching the Watchdog."

"During the decade past," Wallace says toward the end of the program, "there has been a good deal of just this kind of soul-searching, self-scrutiny in newsrooms all over America.

"Like it or not, Spiro Agnew struck a nerve with his Des Moines speech back in 1969, questioning the methods and motives of the press."

"Looking at 60 Minutes" takes the process a step further than previous programs in discussing several of the techniques that have generated criticism of the program — reporter misrepresentation, the "ambush" interview, for example — with a panel of journalists and media critics.

Greenfield, a regular on CBS News' own "Sunday Morning" program, is the moderator. The panelists include Eugene Patterson, editor of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times; Boston Globe columnist Ellen Goodman; Herbert Schmertz, a Mobil Corp. vice president and frequent media critic; Bob Greene, an investigative reporter from Newsday, the Long Island newspaper, and Hewitt.

ENTERTAINMENT

Excerpts from eight "60 Minutes" segments, most of them from the mid-1970s, illustrate the tactics most frequently questioned by news sources and the public, as well as journalists themselves. The conversation, frequently spirited, is not always predictable.

In a discussion of the confrontation, or "ambush" interview, for instance, Hewitt declares: "I think this is probably a technique that has been abused, and I have a feeling we shouldn't be trying to get people to talk to us who obviously don't want to talk."

Mobil's Schmertz probably best summarizes the commendable effort: "To my mind, this is a landmark show for '60 Minutes,' the fact that '60 Minutes' is eager to have, and sit and examine these kinds of things...is an amazing development."

'The Last Picture Show' subject of exhibit

ODESSA — "The Last Picture Show," the title of a well-known novel and contemporary movie by Texas author Larry McMurtry, will be the subject of a special exhibit at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin library Wednesday through Oct. 31.

The exhibit of a portion of the library's holdings of the McMurtry papers is being shown in conjunction with UTPB's Mindpower observance. Lectures, exhibits, art demonstrations, music recitals and other activities have been planned for the week of Oct. 4-10 as a kick off for the observance.

Big Spring author to speak at local church

Author Bruce Gilbert will speak at the Permian Church of Religious Science, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., at 11 a.m. Sunday.

He also will sign copies of his book, "Remembering," which has just been published by Unity School of Christianity. Gilbert is from Big Spring.

The public is invited to attend.

Final part of 'Texas Trilogy' opens at Theatre II

The third and final part of the late Preston Jones' "Texas Trilogy" opens its run in Theatre II, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., Friday at 8:30 p.m.

This mellow, comic, three-act play, "Luann Hampton Laverty Oberlander," takes place in Bradleyville and chronicles the life of several of its denizens. The play's action takes place over a 20 year period.

The local production is being directed by Michael Spicer, Midland Community Theatre's new children's director.

Reservations may be made by calling 682-4111.

Princess' car sports a frog

The car driven by the new Princess of Wales is sporting a new hood ornament — a silver frog, gift from her husband, Prince Charles.

The frog, spotted by the British press Friday when the princess visited the home of Duchess Anne of Westminster, adorns the hood of the princess' silver Ford Escort.

Aides said Charles had the ornament specially molded for his bride of two months.

Reporters outside the duchess' home shouted questions about reports that the princess was chafing under the restrictions of royal life. Her response was a negative shake of the head and a burst of giggles.

Diana also visited a village school Friday in Achfarrie, Scotland. Teachers said the princess, formerly a part-time kindergarten teacher, chatted with the 7-year-olds and gave two of them piggy-back rides.

ARVADA, Colo. (AP) — On Friday night, Pomona High School students danced in the hope that 16-year-old Zant Scott might walk again.

Students at the school also have sold cakes and yarn dolls to raise money for Scott, a classmate who was injured in a car accident.

"Without them, I don't know what I would have done," said Scott's mother, Ginny Maloney.

Teresa Campbell, 17, said students hoped to raise $5,000 to help with Scott's medical bills.

Scott suffered brain stem injuries and fractures of his collarbone, leg and ribs when he was hit by a car near the high school in June. He was in a coma for two months. His doctors said he was learning to walk and talk again, but wouldn't return to school for another year.

The teen-ager left the hospital Friday night to visit the dance in his honor. More than 100 cheering students greeted him as his mother and a friend guided his wheelchair into the Pomona High gym.

"Many times I thought if Zant should die...there has to be a reason," said Mrs. Maloney as she watched the dancing teen-agers. "The only reason I could think of was that these kids would come to realize that life is precious."

Dr. Timothy Leary — the former LSD guru who urged people to "tune in, turn on, drop out" — has taken up nightclub comedy.

The one-time Harvard psychology instructor recently appeared at a Cambridge, Mass., nightspot and says he's a comic in the bittersweet tradition of Lenny Bruce and Mort Sahl.

"Excitement's my business..I generate panic and hysteria," Leary told the Boston Globe. But not too much hysteria, he says; he's on parole for drug smuggling and a prison escape.

Leary says that he plans on Oct. 30 to debate G. Gordon Liddy, the Watergate figure who himself spent time in prison. They met in the same California lockup.

Leary says the two men will tour the country debating this fall and, he says, "If you're a conservative, I'm gonna shock you. If you're a libertarian, Liddy's gonna shock you."

DETROIT (AP) — Actor Richard Harris was reported in good condition Saturday at Henry Ford Hospital, where he was held overnight after suffering chest pains, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Harris, 47, is playing King Arthur in the musical "Camelot" at Masonic Temple in Detroit, and experienced pain Friday night in his dressing room in intermission. He was unable to appear for the second act.

Harris, 47, was admitted at about 11:00 p.m. Friday and was examined "to rule out a heart attack," the hospital said.

The actor will remain hospitalized at least through Saturday until tests are completed, the hospital said.

Landscape artist to be honored at reception

Ruth Duncan, well-known Southwestern landscape artist, will be honored with a reception at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave., from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday.

Sponsored by the Midland Delta Gamma Alumnae, the reception will open a month-long exhibit of Mrs. Duncan's paintings. Her most recent Midland exhibition was in 1976 at Midland College.

The display will include 32 new oils and watercolors "representative of her ability to capture the ambience of the Southwest, from its vast skies and open plains to Texas' gulf shores.

"Using a perceptive and nostalgic eye to paint on her travels through Texas, Mrs. Duncan also depicts the state's contrasts — from Spanish missions in San Antonio to the Commandant's Quarters at Fort Davis," stated a library representative.

In addition, the exhibit includes several still lifes of Texas wildflowers.

A San Antonio resident, Mrs. Duncan is a member of the Coppini Academy of Fine Arts and the River Art Group there. Her works have appeared in over 30 one-man shows, including the Smithsonian Institution, the American Artists Professional League in New York City and the Exhibition Intercontinale in Monaco.

Listed in current editions of "Who's Who in American Art" and "Who's Who in Art," Mrs. Duncan was named one of San Antonio's 10 outstanding women as "Women in the Arts" in 1971 and received the Order of the Delta Gamma Rose in 1973. Her most recent honor was being selected as the 1979 artist of the year by her peers in the Coppini Academy of Fine Arts, who awarded her the bronze Medal of Honor.

Her collection may be viewed from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday beginning this Friday and running through Oct. 29. The public is invited to attend the opening reception.

U.S. Marine Band to perform

The United States Marine Band, directed by Lt. Col. John R. Bourgeois, will perform at Chaparral Center at 8 p.m. Saturday.

This is the band that plays for all presidential functions and is commonly referred to as "The President's Own." Since 1981, when John Philip Sousa took the USMB on its first national tour, this group has toured a section of the U.S. each year. The closest the band has come to the Midland-Odessa area was some years ago when it performed in Amarillo.

Tickets may be purchased at Chaparral Center.

Theater offers acting classes

Midland Community Theatre is offering a full schedule of acting classes, designed for both the novice and the experienced actor, beginning Oct. 5.

The first class will be Principles of Acting, which focuses on how to read and analyze a script; how to determine, understand and play your character's objective; understanding the art of auditioning; and an introduction to technique and emotional recall.

This class will be taught by Elizabeth Spicer, one of MCT's new theater school directors. It will meet for five weeks every Tuesday and Thursday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Fee for the class is $25 for MCT members and $35 for non-members. For more information call the theater at 682-2544.

Lorna Luft dances in shadows of mother, sister

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

Hah!

The wallpaper laughed back. She glanced at its sketches of little French school girls and became quieter. In a whisper, almost: "Ah, they bring back memories."

Lorna Luft's eyes caressed the wallpaper She turned full circle in her chair. "My mother had that. We were livng in Paris. What was that book, now?"

She's pensive for a moment. "Babar" is suggested.

"No, no. It's 'Madeline'!" Miss Luft proclaimed triumphantly. "Those were the books Mama made us read. Oh, it brings back such memories."

A waiter arrives with a potent "soup" — a bullshot. That's beef broth, lemon and a tad of vodka. He lingers long enough to tell Miss Luft he remembers her staying at the hotel with her mother when she was a little girl.

Her mother gave the waiter an autograph, he says. He doesn't ask Miss Luft for ers.

That goes with the terrain of being Judy's daughter and Liz's sister. Lorna dances in shadows. But the lghting is good: for a kid who was raised by a"living legend," later to see her older half sister, Liza Minneli, zoom to superstardom, she's doing OK.

"I never thought about bing tossed into a shadow,"she said. "I knew exactly what was going to happen to me. I know what helped me survive as always having a sense of humor. Don't ever take yourself seriously."

Miss Luft recently finished six months on the road starring in the musicl "They're Playing Our Song." Critics from Fot Lauderdale, Fla., to Cincinnati and points in between gave her rave reviews. After 10-day vacation in Hawaii, she's off to Europe to promote her new record single, "Long Time."

till, Lorna Luft's energy level pales before the electric frenzy that was Judy Garland, and it is not as intense as Liza Minnelli's. But then she says she never wanted to be a supertar and is not consumed by career.

"I work real hard, but when I'm home, it's like a vacation for me," she said. "I dont go around and worry about my pictures being here or there or being seen at every opening."

She sips her "soup." The bullshot makes her cheeks flush to the color of the red pantaloons she wears after a particularly grueling morning auditioning for theatrical producer Joseph Papp.

"Hard work is a challenge," she says. "Doing a show, learning a song or making a record is a challenge. Always say I can do it better. I'm never satisfied.

"I'm alays a nervous mess before I go out on stage," she said. "We did 205 performanes and I was a mess every night. Right now I'm running on spit and chewing gum."

Miss Luft, whose father, Sid, produced the Garland film, "A Star Is Born," was 11 when she decied show biz was for her.

'When I told Mama thats what I wanted to do, she said, 'You'd better study because you ain't getting it on my name.'"

She studied hard and she went on stage for the first time the summer before Judy Garland's legendary Palace Thater concert. "I was terrified," Miss Luft said.

"It was the first time Mama ever let go of my hand. She stood in the wings for the first eight bars of the song — 'Don't Sleep in the Subway' — and then left.

"The teaching I mostly got was from watching her," she sad "It taught me a lot. I watched the master."

She appeared with her mother at the Palace and later at a Madison Square Garden concert. In 1972, Miss Luft was awarded the Rising Star of theYear Award for her leading role in Neil Simon's "Promises, Promises."

Her eyes wandered back to the "Madeline' drawings on the wall. She smiled sweetly. Paris. It was one of many cities in which she lived with "Mama," Liza and brother Joey Luft.

Because the family never stayed long in one place, it was hard to make and maintain friends a sa child. Today, Miss Luft treasures her friends.

"Mama was real loyal to her friends," she said wistfully. "Liza is a real good friend. She'll do anything for you. We got that from Mama."

'Laugh' is gift to an actress

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

ONLY WHEN I LAUGH is a husband's ultimate gift to an actress: a surefire shot at an Academy Award. Neil Simon has retooled his downbeat play "The Gingerbread Lady," into a funny, thoughtful, endearing vehicle for his wife, Marsha Mason. She makes the most of it, creating a full-scale portrait of a gifted, exasperatingly self-destructive Broadway star. Simon's artifice is sometimes transparent, as when three close friends experience separate disasters on the same day.

But he is the master of show-biz small talk, and his depiction of the mother-daughter relationship is insightful and touching. The word for Kristy McNichol as the daughter: terrific. James Coco is equally fine as a luckless gay actor, and Joan Hackett also scores as a beauty facing the terror of middle age. Glenn Jordan makes an impressive debut as director, resisting the temptation to descend into bathos. Rated PG because of language and adult themes.

(Motion Picture Association of American ratings definitions:

G — General audiences. All ages admitted.

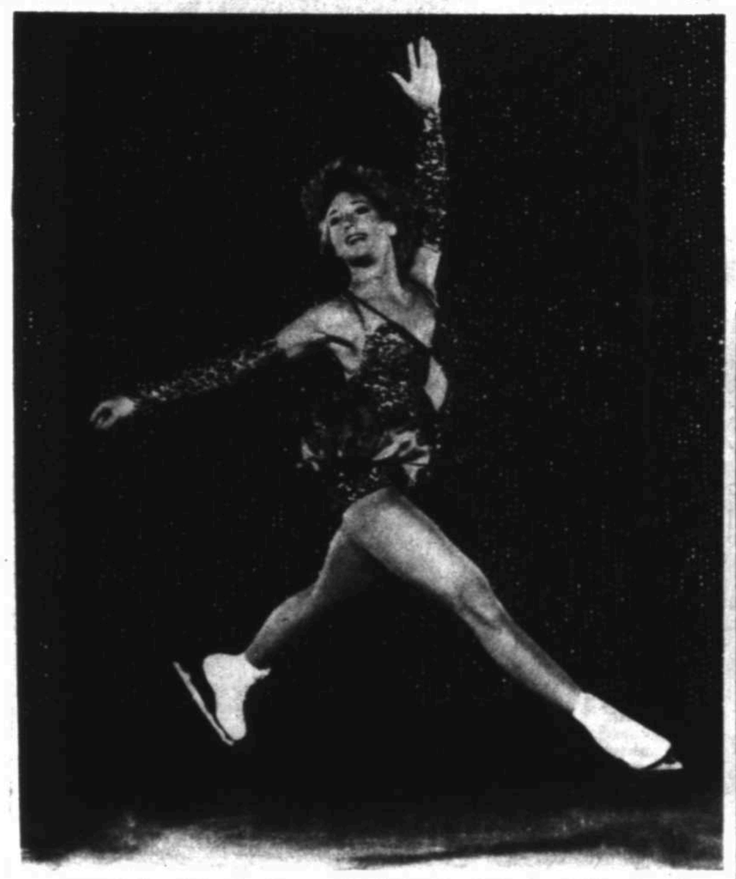
X — No one under 17 admitted. Some states may have higher age limits.



1980 National Ladies Bronze Medalist Sandy Lenz will be one of the skaters at the Ice Capades' "Hottest Show on Ice" beginning Tuesday at Ector County Coliseum in Odessa. The show runs through Oct. 4. Tickets, priced at $6, $7 and $8, may be purchased locally at Midland Park Mall.

Texas forests to be replenished

AUSTIN — More than 3 million young trees have been planted this year in a campaign to replenish commercial forests in Texas, but that crop is but a beginning, said Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown.

"We have more than 23 million acres in trees for various purposes, but the rate of reforestation is very low," Brown said. "Only one out of every nine acres is replanted after harvest," he said.

"The timber companies maintain a program of replanting," he said, "but in Texas, about two-thirds of the acreage is in private ownership, and putting in new trees is a hard decision for owners to make," Brown said.

Trees afford long-term investment.

"Once the trees are harvested, there is a 15- to 25-year wait for the investment in new trees to pay off," Reagan said. "And at 60, the average age of timberland owners, you really have to be thinking of replanting as a legacy for the children and grandchildren."

More cattlemen looking at club calf

COLLEGE STATION — With at least 10,000 show steers fed annually in Texas, more commercial cattlemen are looking at the club-calf market.

Cattlemen need to consider age, breed, color, type or body conformation, and pice.

Club calves usually are those shown by 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America youths.

Deltapine cottons hold up well

In its fourth annual show on the Delta & Pine Land Co.'s research farm near Idalou, the company emphasized Deltapine variety performance under moisture stress conditions and revealed SR-482, a new variety.

"The 1980 season pointed up how a cotton variety holds up or falls by the wayside in hot, dry weather and evidenced definite pluses for Deltapine varieties," said Jerry Carroll in conducting tours of the test plots. Carroll is research director for D&PL's Southwestern Division headquarters here.

Five Deltapine varieties developed for West Texas were highlighted, as were two projected others for 1983 and another for 1984. Their high fiber strength and spinning performance, longer staple, micronaire, smooth leaf for high grades, storm and wilt resistance, early maturity and lint turnout were pointed up along with dryland performance during hot, dry spells.

Deltapine SR-482 "gave outstanding performance in competition with a popular early-maturing Paymaster variety and the newest GSA variety release," Carroll said

Match tractor to job to save fuel

COLLEGE STATION — High fuel prices ought to make farmers think twice about riding high on oversized tractors, noted Henry O'Neal, an agricultural engineer for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Properly matching tractors to jobs as well as maintaining engine efficiency is important.

"The excess power of a 150-horsepower tractor doing a 75-horsepower job is not used, even though the diesel fuel is burned," O'Neal said. But in such cases, he recommends throttling the engine back.

"Operating in a higher gear at reduced engine speed can save up to one-fourth of the fuel consumption," he says. "For a 150-horsepower tractor, that could mean almost two gallons per hour.

He also suggested periodical servicing of diesel engines.

Deer season appears promising

COLLEGE STATION — The upcoming deer season appears promising due to good forage and better-than-normal weather conditions, according to a Texas Agricultural Extension Service wildlife specialist.

Deer should be plentiful, high in quality and well antlered.

The wildlife specialist recommended that 20 to 25 percent of the deer population should be harvested annually to compensate for reproduction and to keep the deer from increasing beyond their food supply.

Nematode damage widespread

AGRICULTURE

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

Recently, many gardeners have discovered by pulling out old plants that weren't too productive in the garden this year, that the roots were heavily damaged by nematodes. Nematodes are small, microscopic, worm-like animals that live in the soil and feed on the roots, stubby roots, enlarged root tips, sparse root systems or galls on the roots. Although several types of nematodes are found in vegetable and flower gardens, the root knot nematode which causes galls or swellings on plant roots is the most damaging. Plants infested with root knot nematodes usually are stunted, yellow in color and often die prematurely.

Nematode control is based on resistant varieties, soil fumigation and cultural practices. Whenever possible use resistant varieties in nematode-infested soil. Tomato varieties which have resistance to root knot nematode include Big Set, Bonus and the cherry tomato Small Fry.

Some cultural practices help reduce losses to nematodes. Rotations involving corn, onions and garlic reduce nematode numbers as these crops are resistant.

A cover crop such as cereal rye (sold by variety name such as Elbon, Bonel, Gator) grown during the winter months helps reduce nematodes. Do not use common rye grass as it may become a weed problem. After the first killing frost, plant the cereal rye in the garden area. Rye roots act as a trap crop for nematodes in the soil. A trap crop is one in which the nematodes enter the root, but due to the physiology of the roots, nematodes cannot undergo further development and will be killed. When the cover crop is worked into the soil one month before planting the spring garden, the organic matter content is increased and an organic acid is produced which is toxic to nematodes.

Use of Vapam in flower beds and gardens is the only effective chemical treatment currently recommended by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service for controlling nematodes. Apply Vapam with a hose-on sprayer using one quart per 100 square feet of garden space. After applying Vapam to the surface, immediately wash the chemical into the soil by applying one-half inch of water to the garden area. Apply the water twice during the next 48 hours. Leave the soil undisturbed for seven days before tilling. Wait an additional two weeks to plant the garden. If the Vapam is applied during high temperatures and low humidity, additional watering during the first 48-hour period after treating increases the chemical's effectiveness and prevents excessive loss to the atmosphere. The soil temperature should be above 50 and below 90 degrees F. when treating.

Vapam is effective for only one growing season and the garden may need treating again next year. Nematode control with chemicals is based on reducing the number at the start of the season. They will, however, increase during the season if susceptible crops are grown in the garden.

Applying nitrogen for small grains this fall will be important. There are four important reasons why wheat, oats and other small grains need nitrogen at planting or a short time afterward: to aid in development of a good root system; for early grazing; to hasten decomposition of any previous crop residues; and for high production of forage and grain.

Sufficient fall growth for early grazing cannot be expected without adequate nitrogen at planting. The advantages of early planting and favorable fall growing conditions can be lost if nitrogen fertilization is delayed until late fall. Establishing a good uniform stand with good tillering requires nitrogen, and most soils are deficient in this nutriment.

To meet nitrogen requirements during the fall growing period on sandy soils, producers can apply a small amount at planting followed by topdressing soon after planting. Rates recommended range from 40 pounds per acre on dryland to 80 pounds on irrigated.

INSULATION "R" VALUE

How do you measure the effectiveness of fiber glass insulation? You can determine its efficiency by using the R-value which is listed in the brochure that comes with the insulation. The R-value refers to how well your insulation will resist the flow of heat. A higher R-value number means greater resistance and better insulation. In actuality—the "R" stands for thermal resistance; resistance to heat flow out in the winter and heat flow in during the summer.

In general R-33 should be sufficient for the attic, R-19 for walls, R-22 for floors. However, it is a good idea to choose local experts for insulation and legal requirements in your area. In colder climates, higher R-values may be called for, and builders sometimes suggest thicker insulation for homes heated by electricity.

Fiber insulation is so effective that a 3½" batt with an R-value of 11 resists heat as well as a wooden wall 9 inches thick or a stone wall 10 feet thick.

Baby born to mother on insulin pump

The box is an insulin pump, a device that, with a small needle inserted under his mother's clothes, helps control her diabetes by keeping her insulin level constant.

Colleen Adams, 30, of Seattle, is the first mother on an insulin pump to deliver a baby in the Pacific Northwest, according to her physician at the Mason Clinic, Dr. Robert Nielsen. Marshall was delivered Sept. 5.

Like about a third of the 11 million diabetics in the country, Mrs. Adams needs insulin to control her disease, which causes elevated blood-sugar levels and changes in the metabolism of fats and proteins.

Babies of diabetic mothers have a low survival rate, said Nielsen. Those who live, he said, "routinely tend to have trouble." Birth defects are another danger for babies of diabetic mothers.

Mrs. Adams knows something about a diabetic mother's pregnancy problems. Her first baby was stillborn in 1975. A second, Karrie, born in 1976, had some of the typical problems of babies born to diabetic mothers: she was puffy, waterlogged, oversized, had tremors and had to be "weaned" with sugar water.

However, some physicians have objections to the pump, noting instances of mechanical or human failure. "There are all kinds of problems with it," says Dr. Knopp, director of the University of Washington's Diabetes in Early Pregnancy project.

Some doctors believe the $1,200 device is simply unnecessary. "It appears that you can do almost as well with home glucose monitoring without the pump," says Dr. Daniel Porte, director of the Diabetic Research Center at the University of Washington.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Broadcasting giant William Paley is still calling the shots at CBS as he celebrates his 80th birthday today. Your intellectual interests will keep you on the go in the months ahead. A promotion or transfer is a real possibility at work. Count on family members playing a large role in the decisions you make. Business profits are on the rise for those who recently formed partnerships. Although you have many casual friendships, your true intimates are few. Both romantic and loyal, you believe a commitment of love should last forever. Be sure to choose a mate who shares your high ideals and lofty aims.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your creativity really comes alive this week! Use your original ideas to move forward. Set up a work schedule and stick to it. Secret transactions may help you overcome an obstacle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Teamwork should produce the kind of results that have eluded you recently. Someone bright and amusing could turn romance around. A sense of obligation may pull you in several directions at once.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your hopes and dreams could become reality as a result of something that happens today or tomorrow. Keep your eyes and ears open! An old friend's comments give you food for thought.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Secrecy is recommended when handling financial matters. Original ideas should be discussed only with those individuals who are directly involved in putting them into operation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Important business negotiations could make travel necessary. Mate or partner will understand following candid conversation. Investments are likely to bring in better returns.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Pay close attention to detail. Your impatience with old methods and customs could cause a confrontation with partner or mate. Avoid those who like to chatter; zero in on work!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The spotlight is on your career and prestige. Your hopes are raised—and for a very good reason! Overseas contacts are invaluable in boosting profits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Look forward to a change in business arrangements due to someone's unorthodox behavior. You could receive a promotion or raise. Group activities hold special appeal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone who starts a legal action may have hidden motives. Get expert advice before you respond. Let reason, not impulse, be your guide. A hasty decision could bring regrets.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A happy surprise may get the work week off to a flying start. Speculative ventures are not favored. Romance could be on a collision course with your business interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You could become involved in too many things for your own good today. Delegate some of the work before you paint yourself into a dangerous corner. Mate will be supportive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A casual conversation with a stranger could give you food for thought. Romance is prominent in your plans. Check travel costs. Mate's tastes may be too extravagant for your budget.

Unstable angina may be warning

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor is treating me for angina with drugs, but he says that surgery may become necessary if the condition becomes unstable. What does "unstable" mean in this case? — Carl, Houston, Texas.

Dear Carl: Angina pectoris may exist for several years in a stable form — that is, with only brief attacks that respond to drugs. Occasionally, however, the condition may become unstable; that is, the patient experiences chest pain more frequently and the pain becomes more intense, often with no apparent cause. In addition, drugs and rest no longer seem to have any real beneficial effect on the condition, and other forms of treatment may become necessary.

Unstable angina may be a warning signal of what is commonly referred to as a heart attack.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am a high school senior and on my school's baseball team. I have always wanted to be a professional athlete, and it really hit me hard a little while ago when I found out that I have diabetes. Is there any chance that I will still be able to play professional baseball? — Mike, Philadelphia

Dear Mike: If you're good — why not? A number of athletes are diabetics. The key is to stay in good health and keep the diabetes under control, and this includes keeping in touch with your doctor and following his or her recommendtions.

Of course, a lot of people without diabetes, who are pretty good ballplayers, can't make it as professionals. I would therefore urge you to discuss your plans with a trained counselor so that you might be prepared for some other career in case you don't make it as a professional athlete.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I occasionally suffer from ingrown toenails, and once even had to have minor surgery to correct the condition. I'd like to know what causes it, and whether there is any medication that can be applied to help relieve the discomfort. — Dave, Port Arthur, Texas

Dear Dave: In response to the first part of your question, ingrown toenails have a number of causes including cutting the nails incorrectly, an injury to the nail, and wearing tight-fitting shoes or socks.

As for the kind of remedy you seek, unfortunately there is none. An advisory panel to the Food and Drug Administration could not recommend a single ingredient that is considered safe and effective in relieving the discomfort caused by the condition.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A neighbor of mine had a heart attack, but his wife says the doctor called it a coronary occlusion. Are they the same thing? — Jerome, Salem, Mass.

Dear Jerome: A coronary occlusion is an obstruction, such as a blood clot, that occurs in a branch of one of the coronary arteries. This obstruction impedes the flow of blood to part of the heart muscle, which dies as a result. The condition is sometimes referred to as a coronary heart attack, or simply a heart attack.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Remember four things when buying firewood

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau
of the Permian Basin, Inc.

With the beginning of the fall season, many people begin to see visions of a roaring fire in the fireplace on chilly nights. But unless you understand the terminology and the risks involved when buying firewood, you're apt to get burned.

As with any purchase, it's possible to minimize the risk of trouble if you know the reputation of the seller. If you do not already have an established source, ask around for recommendations before you decide to buy.

The two most frequent complaints the BBB receives about firewood is that either less wood was delivered than was expected or the price charged was more than was agreed upon. Most wood is sold by the "cord." A cord contains 128 cubic feet and usually measures either 4x4 ft. or 2x4x16 ft.

Since few home fireplaces can burn wood that is four by eight feet long, it may be sold as a "face cord." This is a pile four by eight feet by the length of wood — usually about 16 inches, which is actually one-third of a standard cord.

Don't believe a seller who states his truck will hold a cord of wood; make him prove it by stacking the load and measuring it. A pickup truck (standard size) holds about one-third cord.

Be certain you measure the area where the wood will be stored so that when filled it will equal a cord. Then you will know whether all of the wood you ordered was delivered.

Never pay for wood in advance. Some dealers may deliver a partial load and demand full payment, promising to deliver the remainder later in the day. Pay for the wood only when all of the wood has been delivered as agreed.

Heat production depends upon the type of wood you buy. In Texas, oak is the most popular firewood because it is a "hard wood" that burns slowly and produces a minimum of smoke. Mesquite also is a good firewood for the same reason.

By comparison, soft woods, such as pine and cedar, are easier to ignite because they are resinous, but they burn more rapidly. Softwood residue creates creosote deposits in a chimney. There is a potential danger that the creosote can ignite, so burning softwoods requires more caution and diligent chimney maintenance.

Finally, the age of the wood you buy is very important. Wood that has been "seasoned," cut for at least six months, will burn evenly and well. Seasoned wood has cracks in the grain and produces a hollow, ringing sound when two logs are clapped together.

Amount, price, type and age — if you determine these four things before you purchase firewood, your chances of being satisfied with your purchase are much greater.

RINGING THE BELL

Texas College emergency fund set up

By BOB TIEUEL

Bulletin: A boy's dormitory was completely destroyed recently at Texas College , Tyler, Texas, a predominately black college at an estimated value of $400,000. Nearly 700 students attend the Christian Methodist Episcopal school that recently observed its 90th birthday anniversary.Some 40 of the students were left homeless by the blaze.

Tom Davis, 19, of Los Angeles never woke up when the fire swept through the three-stroy dormitory about 2:50 in the mofning according to Fire Marshall Jack Hawkins of Tyler. A number of students were injured, it was reported. The fire was believed to have started in a room that housed the air conditioning and heating units.

Bellringers wishing to contribute for this emergency may direct some to this column in care of this newspaper or Texas College Emergency Fund, P.O. Box 1204, Midland, Texas 79701.

Dr. W.A. Criswell, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dallas, announced recently that the church is pledging a record $1 million during the next year to the cooperative mission program of the Southern Baptist Convention. The amount is double the record pledge made last year by the First Baptist Church of Midland to the missionary ministry of the 13.6 million member SBC, the world's largest Protestant denomination. The 71-year-jold Christian warrior told his church that he had recently spent an evening reading about the troubles, hungers and desperations across the world and then watching a late movie. The 22,000 member First Baptist congregation is the largest church in the nation.

A Bellringer writes: Dear Bob; we are so bombarded with world disasters, community crises of varying proportions and personal tragedies as well as everyday responsibilities that we are losing our ability to cope with anything. Right now, we are a grief-stricken nation and are grasping for answers to problems everywhere but in the primary unit of our society, the family.

"Black Awareness" has been the key slogan of black people hungering and thristing to find their roots in a white-oriented society. But there can never be true "Black Awareness" without family awareness...We must always be cognizant of the fact that we must save our children if we, as black people, are to succeed in this troubled world, signed W. L. Smart.

Bishop College observed its 100th birthday recently. The predominantly black college moved to Dallas in 1961 from East Texas home in Marshall, Texas. In the past several years, Bishop has been involved in financial troubles that threatened its opening in September 1981 but apparently this problem has been solved according to reports.

Good news for Social Security Recipients: Senator David Boren of the U.S. Senate from Oklahoma has annonced co-sponsoring legislation to improve management of the Social Security Trust Fund and to maximize the investment return on those funds, said Boren. According to bellringer sources in Oklahoma, Borne said, "Those who have paid into Social Security should get a maximum return on their money, just like people who pay into a private pension fund. Last year's Social Security Fund could have earned $2 billion more in interest if it had been properly invested," the Oklahoma solon said.

Black city marshal came up the hard way

By LYNWOOD ABRAM
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — On a wall in the office of Edward J. Stringfellow, new city marshal for the city of Houston, hangs a painting that shows blacks, including a small boy, picking cotton.

"Look at that picture," says the 51-year-old Stringfellow. "This is where I started as a boy. From the time I was 7, my brother and I used to pick cotton.

"I think to myself: Don't ever get too cocky. You might go back there." Looking at the picture, Stringfellow says, "Makes me feel good. I have been really blessed."

It is not far from Stringfellow's birthplace in the Brazos River bottom country to the Municipal Courts Building in downtown Houston.

But for a black, the professional, economic and social distance is vast.

Stringfellow, the first black to hold his position, has risen to his new status slowly and steadily.

He spent 27 years in the Houston Police Department, 20 of them in the narcotics division. He was in a crucible of change in race relations.

When he came to the force, there were 18 blacks out of about 900 officers. The ratio of black to white in the department is little changed today, Stringfellow says, but opportunities for blacks have improved.

"When I first joined the force (in 1954), it was nothing but race prejudice," he recalls.

At the academy, the white recruits were seated in alphabetical order. Stringfellow and the two other black recruits were told to stay where they were, in the back of the room.

At the station, restrooms, water fountains, the cafeteria — everything — was segregated. Not until about 1962, when sit-ins began at Houston cafes, did the police department integrate, Stringfellow says.

Those sit-ins are a painful memory to Stringfellow.

"When they started, they would always call in the black officers to handle them," he said. "This was the most embarrassing thing in the world, to put those kids in jail for something you couldn't do yourself.

"That was the time when pride and job began to part."

He seriously thought about quitting, but needed the job, he said. Besides, he figured, racism was not confined to the police department.

Stringfellow says now he's glad for his decision.

"The department has been good to me," he said. "After those first few years, everything panned out to be all right."

Stringfellow was born in Bryan, son of a "shine boy."

His father died when he was 15, and Stringfellow and brother Floyd came to Houston to live with their aunt.

"She is the best," Stringfellow says of Maggie B. Griggs. "She really taught us the facts of life. She always said, 'A black boy gonna catch hell on the streets if he doesn't get an education.' She insisted on us going to school and she made us study."

She also made them work. Stringfellow worked through high school for the Rice Hotel laundry, doing a variety of jobs.

Leningrad dorm life much improved

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Hot water and newly painted rooms have brightened dormitory living for foreigners at Leningrad University, despite continuing complaints about inadequate food.

Thelma Lowe of Berkeley, Calif., who has just completed a year of archeology studies at Leningrad University, says life for exchange students has improved noticeably in recent years.

"Foreign students who were here three or four years ago can't get over that there is hot water all the time in the dormitories," she said. "Our rooms are being repainted. There's even a new photocopying service."

Other sources familiar with campus life in Leningrad say that meat, fresh fruit and vegetables are often in short supply at the university's dining halls, reflecting chronic food shortages in the Soviet economy.

"I lost 15 pounds in six weeks. They weren't serving any meat until we kept complaining," said an American student who attended a summer exchange program at Leningrad University this year.

"Food is not a highlight of the trip for U.S. exchange students here," said another American close to the situation. "They have to stand in line at state shops for oranges and other scarce food items just like the Russians."

Mrs. Lowe, a Ph.D. candidate at the University of California, was one of 10 American graduate scholars who spent the 1980-81 academic year at Leningrad University.

Despite frosty U.S.-Soviet government relations, she said American scholars didn't encounter any more difficulties than usual pursuing their research in Leningrad.

However, during a six-week study trip to Soviet central Asia this summer, Mrs. Lowe said she had been permitted to visit only one archeological site under excavation outside Samarkand.

"Archeologists identify closely with the sites they are excavating and are very possessive of the material," she remarked.

Other informed U.S. sources said exchange students often encountered problems getting access to Soviet research, but most were reluctant to publicly criticize the Soviets because they feared they could be denied visas for future visits.

About 80 U.S. graduate students in all attended Soviet universities during the year, and the same number of Russians studied at American institutions, U.S. sources say.

Mrs. Lowe, the only science major in the Leningrad contingent, is studying ancient technology used in producing ceramic seals in the second millenium B.C. Artifacts with similar pictographic symbols have been unearthed in Soviet central Asia and the Indus valley of northern India and Pakistan, suggesting possible links between the peoples, she said.

Archeology in the Soviet Union apparently can serve ideological as well as historical purposes. Mrs. Lowe said that in Soviet central Asia, "they are studying traces of early farmers and herders to support a theory of an early class society. The theory appears to be valid." Soviet ideology holds that societies should evolve from ones with strict class systems into more egalitarian socialist states.

GemWise Jewelry Fashions Facts, Fiction

COMPLETING YOUR FASHION WARDROBE
Fine jewelry has a way of adding a touch of class to your wardrobe. A few well-chosen pieces can go a long way, too, so you don't have to spend a fortune. Some women have developed quite a nice collection by buying (or being given) only one or two pieces of jewelry a year.
Since fine jewelry does not go out of style with the whims of fashion, you can continue to wear it for many years – and, if it eventually looks old-fashioned to you, you can have the stones reset and the gold melted down for a new piece altogether.
For the last few years different shades of lavender have been big on the fashion scene. This has brought certain gemstones into the limelight, namely amethyst and kunzite.
Amethst, a variety of quartz, occurs in many shades of violet from pale lilac to deep purple. The dark tones of amethyst were very popular in the early part of this century. And a few hundred years ago, the amethyst was more highly prized than the diamond!
Kunzite is a stone many people have never heard of. Named after G.F. Kunz, who first decribed it in 1902, this is a pinkviolet to light violet variety of the mineral spodumene.
Developing a colorful fine jewwlry wardrobe is an exciting venture. With a little guidance you can put together a classic collection that will blend with your highest fashions season after season. In economic times like ours, it's wise to put your money into quality items that will last and retain their value. Fine jewelry can last a lifetime if you care for it properly, and how many items do you know of that can match that for endurance?

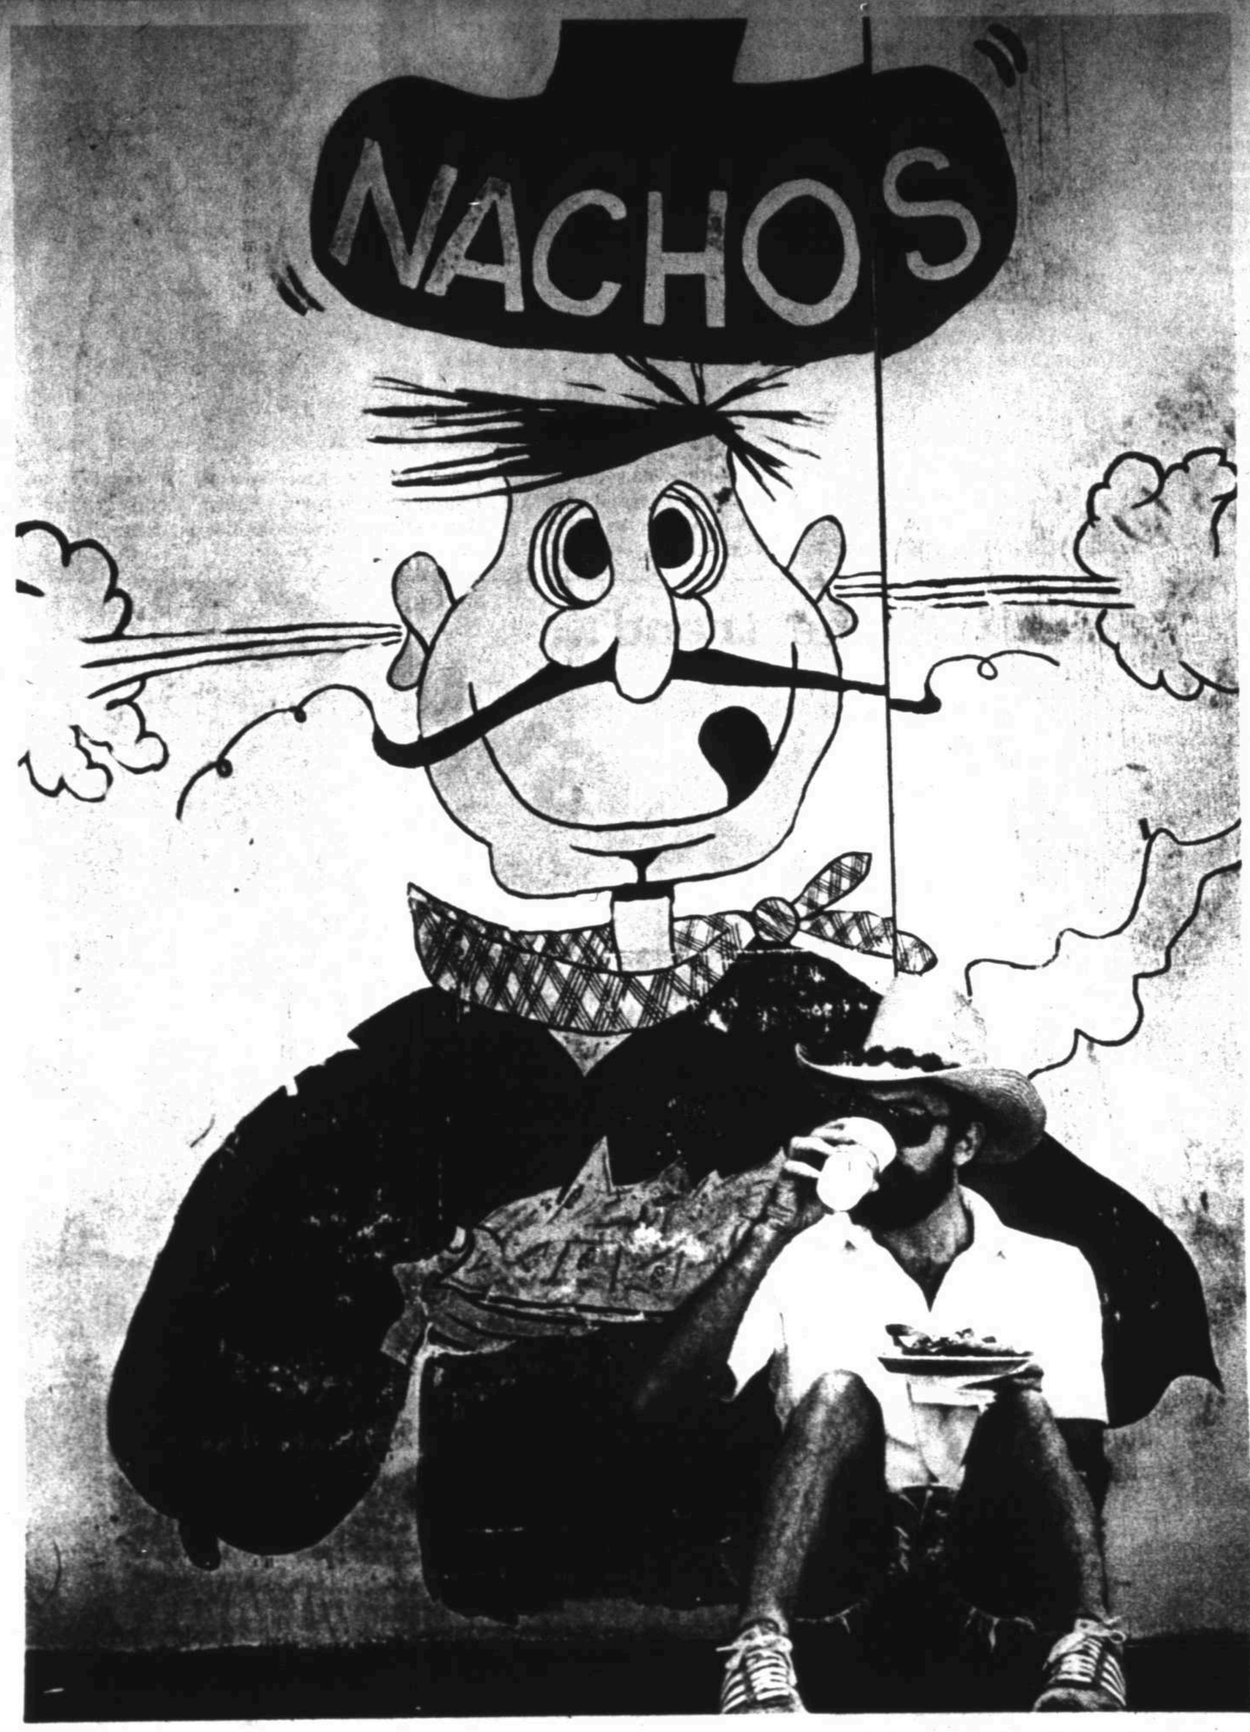
The Midland Reporter-Telegram
SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1981



The fiery quality of the pepper-loaded nachos at St. Ann's Family Fair Saturday was well evident, both in mural and in reddened cheeks, but it was up to a cold mug of beer to soothe the explosion within for Kim Metzler of Midland.

Fistsful of fun

The story of St. Ann's Family Fair in Midland Saturday was carried in anxious fingers, clenched hands, flailing arms.

The appendages gave several thousand persons opportunities to partake in games of chance, sports of skill, rides of sensuality, and few persons failed to get caught up in the carnival-like atmosphere of the fair, which had as its goal the accumulation of funds for maintenance of St. Ann's Catholic Church and School.

The dunkin' booth, complete with pretty lass poised precariously above a water tank, gave future Gibsons and Koufaxes practice at hummin' the horsehide. In full windup, youngsters cocked elbows and wrists, snapped joints forward, and red-threaded softballs staccatoed against a bull's eye 30 feet distant. A near-miss left the girl squirming; a direct hit sent her cascading downward to explode against the water, launching skyward a mushroom of white like the Hiroshima bomb.

At the mining operation, hands grasped pans as sand sifted through like the silent toll of an hourglass. And for many, time ran out, with no "gold" or silver — or more correctly, copper, considering the makeup of today's coins — to show for their efforts.

Fingers delicately grasped darts, arrowed them toward targets as feathers twirled. Occasionally, a Batman-like sound effect — Pop! Blam! Ping! — defined success, as lance pierced balloon. A few yards away, thumbs thumped coins onto tables, sought the mouths of glasses and dishes which seemed to yawn so wide from a distance. More often than not, however, glasses were left filled only with air, and pockets assumed the quality of emptiness.

Forefingers squeezed triggers at the shooting gallery, pounding out syncopated notes as cork slugs tore into awaiting dixie cups. Elsewhere, digits coiled about putters; footballs spiraled, flopped end-over-end in search of elusive tires; and the peachy complexions of youngsters' faces metamorphized into the red, white, blue snouts of clowns.

Speed ruled the midway, as radar guns timed gunning fastballs and whirring rides left stomachs queazy. Knuckles turned white as persons clung to safety bars as they were propelled into twisting, double orbits like myriad moons whirling about planets which in turn whirled endless courses about a star.

Where rides became lost in the maze of people, sounds often defined their locations: the music of a merry-go-round, the blaring of miniature car horns, the cries and screams of persons enthralled by the magic of more sensuous midway machinery.

The blazing heat of an Indian summer day resulted in long lines at the cola and beer booths, while others satisfied appetites spawned by the midway by stuffing bellies with barbecue, nachos and lasagne. Less nutritious perhaps, but certainly more fun-in-the-doing, was the ubiquitous cotton candy, which brought tongues wrapping around it like cows lapping grass.

The food booths became great social events as well, as strangers quaffed beer together, munched nachos, exchanged quips.

A woman tripped over an upraised board before a cake stand, staggered, righted herself with the help of the bar.

"No dancing in the booth, please," said an attendant.

Bell trying to catch up with growth

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Southwestern Bell got caught with its pants down in Midland, but they're slowly being pulled back up.

When forecasters for Southwestern Bell put together the budget for the Midland-Odessa area, they listed what they felt would suffice. But Midland's growth exploded like an atomic blast, and the area's only communications system wasn't prepared, according to the management team based in the Tall City.

The figures have been revised, the go-ahead given to hire more people and the money is being buried in the ground, literally.

The problem now, Bell management says, is catching up with the growth. The main hindrance is being able to hire enough people and train them fast enough. Adding to the employment problems is the tight competitive job market in a city where oil is king and the salaries for those companies are the highest. And once someone is hired, it takes time to train him or her.

Another result of the growth is the addition of three district managers to bring the total to six in Midland.

"WE'RE BUILDING a hub out of Midland," explained Clay Cody, district manager of business installation and maintenance, who also serves as the head contact with SW Bell.

From Alpine to Amarillo and Abilene, the Midland office is serving more and more as the center for the district, say the managers. And when El Paso is switched from the Mountain Bell system to SW Bell at the first of the year, Cody said he expects it will be added to the Midland district.

The telephone number for repair service still will be located in San Antonio. But Cody explained that Bell has three repair centers in Texas — Dallas and Austin in addition to San Antonio.

The person who answers types the information into a multi-million dollar computer and the message is relayed to Midland in 30 seconds, Cody said. "It used to take hours for an individual to go through trouble tickets. The office is centralized to gain cost effectiveness out of the expensive computers.

"These expensive computers can keep the maintenance records, know what piece of copper a phone is hooked up to and automatically test the line."

And to catch up with the growth, $26 million will be poured into the Midland-Terminal area during the next 18 months to provide for business and residential growth and to improve existing service.

EXISTING AND upcoming projects, according to local SW Bell managers, include a $6 million long distance lightwave communications system between Midland and Monahans, a $5 million project to provide service to the ClayDesta business park project in north Midland, a $4 million project in south Midland; a $3.5 million project in north Midland and the Green Tree Country Club area, and a $300,000 project in Big Spring.

In addition, over the next 18 months $6 million will go into the Terminal office to convert it to the modern Electronic Switching System (ESS). Another $2 million will go for upgrading and construction projects at Terminal.

SW Bell figures show that in 1979 there were 83,000 telephones — including business, residence and coin phones — in Midland. By 1985, that number should hop to 170,000.

Although Odessa is growing, its demand is somewhat less than that in Midland. In 1979, that city had 96,000 telephones. And the projected figure for 1985 is below that of Midland — 168,000 phones.

"Our problem is growth," explained Cody. Bell's plans are usually are designed to meet the next three years' demand. But he noted it's difficult for Bell to keep up "when some businessmen here exceeded their five year growth estimate in less than 12 months."

TRYING TO CONVINCE the Bell upper-crust of Midland's upcoming boom back in 1979 would have been difficult, according to Cody. "For us to be in good shape today and giving good service, we would have had to back up our forecast in 1979 with $20 million. I don't know of anyone willing to shoot craps with $20 million."

Rex Jones, district manager of outside plant maintenance, could be described as the man who sees first-hand the shortage of Bell services. And it's his department which has been tearing up the city streets to install more conduit, which eventually will hold the cable for business and residential service.

"Midland-Odessa is my biggest headache" in the entire district, he said.

Since the first of the year, he has doubled his engineering force from eight persons to 16, and the construction force has jumped from 23 to 39 employees.

So far, Bell has put $5 million into construction of new lines, said Jones, and they still have another $5 million to put into the ground by the end of the year.

"We are putting in nine maximum size cables out of the central office this year. And next year we plan to put in 25 cables. Each cable has 3,600 lines, and some can hold 4,200," he added.

Between now and the first of the year, he has to complete seven major projects that consist of 15 miles of conduit work.

Until this construction work is completed, said Jones, businesses and new residential areas can't be provided service.

"WE'VE JUST ABOUT exhausted our outside plant and cables in existence. That's our problem now," related Jones. "Our facilities are in a terrible situation."

Getting lines into a new office building hasn't been as much of a headache as supplying service to a new trailer park, according to Hart. The main reason is that Bell is notified of the office while the project is being planned. But trailer parks often don't let Bell know about the need for service until the park is half done or completed, he said.

"It takes three months for us to order a cable and get it," Hart said, explaining that each cable is made to certain specifications. Once it arrives, it then takes time for Bell to install it.

Growth for any business creates a load, according to Jones, and the problems aren't unique for the Midland area or for SW Bell. The communications firm is seeing the problem throughout Texas, he said.

The problems resulting from growth, however, have a tendency to alienate customers, Jones said. "We have had more complaints with the growth. Some are very disturbing because the person has a very legitimate complaint but we might not be able to solve it."

WITH THE CONSTRUCTION planned over the next 18 months, Jones foresees the service stabilizing by the end of 1982, but not before.

A normal interval in getting service to a customer is three to five days. "In the past, it's been eight to 10 days for a resident to get hooked up. The load since May has been phenomenal. We are having a problem servicing the new residential areas. The problem is getting a new line all the way out there from the central office," noted Jones.

Working with the orders for hookup is Rick Bautisto, district manager of outside plant engineering. Only on the job about two weeks and in a position that was recently created to meet the situation, Bautisto is in the process of organizing his department.

"We keep records that show the wires going into the house," he explained. Those records also note if the telephone can be wired at the central office or if someone will have to hook it up at a pole near the house.

The work load in his department is figured in the number of "documents," or orders for hook-ups or disconnections. The demand for service has increased in all major cities in the district, but Midland reflects the most growth in the number of documents, he said.

For example, over the past year Amarillo increased 6.1 percent in the number of documents; Lubbock, 4.3 percent; Abilene, 5.5 percent; Odessa, 6.0 percent; and Midland, 21.4 percent.

BECAUSE OF THE increase, 27 new positions for his department have

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Three 4-H'ers — Karen Green, Kelin Jones and Kim Watson — won Gold Star Awards in the recent Midland County 4-H Club banquet.

Miss Green, 17, who specialized in beef for her 4-H project, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Green. Her mother, Betty O'Neal Green, won the award in 1948.

Jones, 14, who worked with sheep, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell "Rusty" Jones. His father earned the award in the early 1960s.

Miss Watson, 15, who specialized in clothing, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watson. Her mother, Janet Chamberlin Watson, also won the award in the early 1960s.

Guidelines used in selecting Gold Star recipients include excellence in project work, participation in club and community activities, leadership and citizenship activities and how well the Gold Star candidates typified the four Hs — head, heart, hands and health — exemplified in the 4-H motto ("Make the Best Better") and pledge. The 4-H pledge embodies a willingness to strive for clearer thinking, greater loyalty, larger service and better living.

"It's the highest award our county can bestow," Cindy Triplitt, who was master of ceremonies at the annual banquet, said of the Gold Star. The fete was held in the Tall City Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 7208.

—Golden Rainbows: Glenna Mims, Jack Mims, Mary Lockhart, Carolyn Bostwick.

—Sunshine Makers: Janet Watson, Charles Watson.

The 4-H Club also recognized 4-H boosters.

"We are most fortunate in Midland County to have tremendous support from individuals, companies, firms and other organizations," said 4-H'er Kim Watson.

4-H Club work is coordinated and administered through the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Shoring up that office in Midland County and working with the 4-H youth are Midland County Agents Charlie Green, Willie Stumberg, Sharon Hillis and Cindy Mann.

The senator will speak at the noon barbecue luncheon in the Community Center. He will be welcomed by County Judge Bob Deavenport.

Cyclefest begins next weekend

FORT DAVIS — The fourth annual Davis Mountains CycleFest and Mountain Climb around the 75-mile Scenic Loop and then up the two-mile, 17 percent grade leading to McDonald Observatory atop Mount Locke will be held here Saturday and Sunday.

The ride is sponsored by the Prude Ranch at Fort Davis and is billed as the highest ride east of the Rocky Mountains.

The weekend pedaling will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday at the ranch off Texas 118 and near Davis Mountains State Park and will end when the last of the riders pedal in or are hauled in by the ever-trailing Prude Ranch Sag Wagon.

Rides of 50, 25 and 10 miles along the 75-mile Scenic Loop will be held for the "less ambitious" who can't or who elect not to tackle the loop that day. Elevations range from 5,000 to 6,800 feet.

The Fort Davis Tour was one of the races approved for qualifying Olympic Cyclists in 1974.

Prude Ranch will host a mid-day snack for the bicyclists and will throw a made-from-scratch barbecue supper at 6:30 p.m.

Riders in the CycleFest will be receive Davis Mountains CycleFest T-shirts.

On Sunday morning, the cyclists will mount their multi-geared bikes for the two-mile ride up Mount Locke. Those who make it will be awarded Mount Locke patches.

Bicycle enthusiasts interested in the making the ride may pick up offical entry forms at Peyton's Bikes in Midland and Odessa and from the Ski Skeller Sports and Bicycle Shop in Midland.

The $15-per-rider entry fee covers the T-shirt, patch, mid-day snack and the hearty barbecue supper.

Those wishing lodging may write John Robert Prude, Prude Ranch, P.O. Box 1431, Fort Davis, Texas or call him at 915-426-3347.

Horse symposium starts Saturday

ODESSA — The West Texas Horse Symposium on marketing, tending to and breeding horses will be held Saturday in Barn A of the Ector County Coliseum.

Registration fee for the 8 a.m.-5 p.m. event is $8.

Speakers in the morning session on marketing horses, horse nutrition and health will be Mike Hughes, a Sanger horse broker and producer; Dr. Doug Householder, horse specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, and Dr. Don McDonald, a Sterling City veterinarian and horse producer.

The afternoon session will include programs keyed to riders and taught by Suzanne Jones of Tatum, N.M. She will instruct on use of bits and on riding techniques, including English equitation.

Another afternoon session will be geared to producers. Speakers will discuss broodmares cycles and reproduction and the operation of a horse-breeding farm.

Speakers will include Dr. John Bowen of Texas A&M University's School of Veterinary Medicine; Jack Kreider, Texas A&M equine professor, and Leonard Blach, a veterinarian for the Buenos Suerte Ranch at Roswell, N.M.

Keys and son named top fiddlers

BIG SPRING — Midland's Clint Keys was named top fiddler in the age 50-and-under division of the Old Fiddlers' Contest at the Howard County Fair last week.

His 11-year-old son, Shane, won the second fiddler's spot.

"That's all right, as along as he beats me," Shane was quoted by The Big Spring Herald.

Chester Derrick of Odessa won the fiddling contest in the 50-plus age division.

Emergency training exercise to be held

The 403rd Military Police Battalion of the Texas State Guard will join with the Midland Civil Defense and other emergency disaster relief agencies in conducting a training exercise in Midland today from 1 to 5 p.m.

The exercise will begin at the Midland National Guard Armory on Lamesa Road. The format of the exercise is a spill of hazardous material and although no hazardous material will be involved in any part of the exercise, the assumption on the part of the TSG will be that the spill is real and the chemicals might explode and/or release dangerous fumes in the area.

Major A.G. Adair, commander of the 403rd MP Bn. TSG, said in West Texas where countless materials are necessary in finding and production of petroleum products, there exists a danger of an accident that could cause serious situations involving dangers of explosions and escaping harmful materials into the atmosphere.

Once a year, the TSG goes through a disaster exercise to train its 50-60 volunteers to handle a situation if one should occur. The role of the TSG is to protect property, save lives and provide emergency communications.

"Our role in this exercise, will be to support the Midland Civil Defense, provide crowd and traffic control, seal off and evacuate the area and provide search and rescue operations," Adair said.

He added that this exercise today will not interfere with the public or inconvenience them in any way.

A Texas Electric Service Company field representative uses the company's new portable micro-computer terminal to record a meter reading.

TESCO meter readers joining computer age

Texas Electric Service Company's meter readers have joined the computer terminal age and, according to TESCO, it's a move that will save time and money.

TESCO is the first electric utility to give its meter readers "micro-computers" to carry instead of computer cards which require pencil-marked entries.

The company estimates the system will save about $100,000 on equipment and $241,000 on manpower hours in the first year alone. It will pay for itself in less than two years.

"This new system is one more way we've found to make our operation more efficient and help offset some of the effects of inflation and higher fuel costs," said Winston Barclay, TESCO division manager.

Meter readers punch meter readings into their portable terminals and the terminals, in turn, provide them data on each residence on their route — everything from whether there is a dog in the yard to an unusual meter location.

TESCO worked with MSI Data Corp., of Costa Mesa, Calif., and DATAMATIC, of Dallas, to develop the system, which includes 150 of the hand-held terminals.

The portable terminals were tested early this year and are now being used throughout TESCO's service area, including Midland.

"I have no doubt in my mind that this is going to be a revolutionary system," Barclay said. "We've been looking for better ways to record meter readings for several years, but today's technology had finally made it possible."

Meter readers used to mark readings on a computer card. Approximately two days later, the cards were read into and audited by the computer. If unusual readings were discovered, it was necessary to make a special trip to re-read the meter. Such trips were expensive and time-consuming.

Now, when the meter reader enters the reading into the terminal, it is compared with normal usage for the customer and, if it is unusually high or low, an alarm sounds, signaling the meter reader to check again. This on-site re-check eliminates many re-read trips.

Meter readers also save time at day's end when they simply hook their terminal to a telephone attachment which carries their meter readings through phone lines to the central computer in Fort Worth. This eliminates the readers re-checking computer cards to make sure they are properly marked for computer entry.

Transmission via telephone lines also eliminates shipping computer cards back and forth between the central data systems in Fort Worth and other cities in the company's service area.

Installing conduit that will eventually hold telephone cables near the intersection of Loop 250 and Garfield Street are employees of Bond Construction Co. from Oklahoma City. Midland's rapid growth has prompted Southwestern Bell to pour more money into the area for installing more lines and equipment.

been approved, Bautisto said.

Dave Kibler, district manager of network maintenance, deals with a world of clicks, all coming from the ESS equipment. And with $6 million planned for converting the Terminal office to ESS, the clicks will increase.

Basically, he is in charge of the ESS system in which long distance calls are switched in the Midland office. Five years ago, Bell began converting the Midland area offices to electronic switching, taking out equipment that was 20 years old.

"If we hadn't invested this money since 1975, we would have been out of switching capacity a few years ago. At least we had the foresight in 1975" to realize the increasing demand on the equipment, said Kibler.

As it is, his department now is finding a problem in "adding to it fast enough. We're getting Western Electric to come in and install the equipment. The office at the airport is where we're experiencing the most problems in being able to keep up with the demand.

"We haven't failed to hook up a customer," he noted. "The problem is not having a cable installed at the time someone wants to be hooked up."

IN THE ROOM at the downtown building where the switching equipment — which makes tiny clicking noises — is located, along with the cable hookups for business and residential phones, employees are stringing wire after wire down long aisles. These are hooking up new customers as the cables are placed.

Each phone requires two wires, known as a cable pairing, to be connected for service, explained Kibler. Midland has 65,000 cable pairings now, and is expected to go to 130,000 in 18 months, according to Kibler.

The central ESS office also houses magnetic tape drives, which records the numbers dialed for long distance calls, from what number the call was made and the time involved. These tapes are pulled off once a day and the information taken off by the accounting department, he said.

Instructions to the equipment come from a computer which also can diagnose troubles in the system, he said. That machine's brain was replaced with a newer model 1½ years ago at a cost of $1.5 million, Kibler noted.

"Midland has the most electronic equipment in the district," he said.

And the Tall City is getting more as it will be the site for the second lightwave system in Texas. Billed as the "state of the art" electronics, Midland was pegged for the machinery because of its growth, according to Jones.

THE FIRST PORTION will go from Midland to Terminal, explained Neal Marshall, district manager of network maintenance and switched services. The second portion will go from Terminal to Odessa. And the third leg will run from Odessa to Monahans.

Marshall noted that the demand for long distance cables from Midland to Terminal has jumped to the point that the lines almost can't handle the load. And the same applies to the Odessa and Monahans areas.

The lightwave system, according to Marshall, "is more economical. You can serve a lot more customers with a lot less space and with better transmission."

That system should help Marshall in his department, which provides special services, primarily for business customers. "I'm responsible for anything that travels between the wires in West Texas, and that includes toll services and long distance. I just haul it back and forth; I don't switch it."

Demand for special services has increased 30 to 35 percent in the past year for the Midland-Odessa area, he noted. He first established the program in 1977, and "the increase in growth has amazed me." A number of businesses use the special setup to transmit data directly back to regional headquarters, such as in Dallas.

His department also connects competing long distance companies, such as MCI, to Bell lines.

Because special services costs more to the customer, Marshall said it receives a priority on repairs. And if a call comes in at 11 p.m. that the service isn't working, Marshall said he can get people out to fix it that night.

"I'M ABLE TO pull in people from other locations," he said, "so I'm still handling my business fairly well.

"My problem is the local facilities being blocked. We have to put in new cables and that takes a lot of time and money. This (service problems) isn't something that was created overnight. We're frustrated because we can't solve it overnight."

Solving it will take a lot of employees, more than what the Midland office now has on its payroll. Bell is willing to hire, say the managers, and has about 100 job openings.

"But in Midland, the job market is very competitive," noted Jones. "Since the first of the year, we've been impacted severely with lack of employees. And trying to attract someone from Lubbock where housing is 25 percent cheaper to Midland is difficult."

Although Jones predicted the situation will get better by the end of 1982, it won't come without some inconvenience on citizens, especially those who drive. While crews have been tearing up Big Spring Street and Midland Drive to install conduits, that work is almost done. But "we're getting ready by the end of the year to tear up a lot of streets.

"I'm very optimistic about our future," he noted. "If we can maintain for a while, we'll make it. It's uncomfortable; we're under tremendous pressure right now."

In terms of capital outlay, Bell will have to take the approach that Midland is going to be a big city in a very short time, he explained.

Dentists studying 'Sargenti Method'

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Endodontics — the root canal.

What's the first thing that comes to mind? For most people, it's pain.

The patient cringes, panics and breaks out in a sweat as the thought of sitting in the dentist's chair flashes in his head.

The root canal has always had a negative conotation.

However, according to Dr. Thomas Gaines, Midland dentist, the reason for this association is that the patient goes to the dentist when the tooth is abscessed and he is in pain.

"It's (root canal) one of the most painless procedures, but it is time consuming," Gaines said.

Essentially, endodontics is the branch of dentistry that deals with the diagnosis and treatment of an infection in the pulp of the tooth.

And now, a treatment that has been around for about 40 years is becoming more widespread in the United States and in West Texas — in fact, right here in Midland.

About 40 dentists with the Permian Basin District Dental Society along with other dentists throughout West Texas and New Mexico gathered for an information seminar Friday to listen to the internationally renowned Dr. Angelo Sargenti from Switzerland lecture about his alternative to the convential root canal — the N2 Sargenti Method.

Working on the technique since 1958, when Sargenti was in dental school, he said about 30,000 dentists in the U.S. are using his technique. He noted the first seminar on the procedure was given at a dental convention in Dallas in 1958.

Basically, the principle behind his method is to preserve the tooth with a chemical property called N2, which sterilizes the contents of the tooth, allowing the infected area to biologically heal itself.

Dr. Andrew Kamenar, Sargenti's friend and escort in this country, explained that the tooth has three basic parts — the nerve, artery and vessels (pulp). At one time the dentist had two options, to extract the tooth or remove the pulp, Kamenar said. The Sargenti Method is similar to "putting in a cork to seal a bottle or sterilizing the contents inside the tooth to enable it to seal naturally," he said.

Sargenti said he was happy to be in the U.S. to have the "opportunity to bring this method I've developed to present a better perception of what was not thought to be possible."

He added that dentists in this country were not sure the treatment would catch on.

"I'm considered a revolutionary, common in the medical profession, particularly in the establishment, but now after 10 years a majority of the dentists in your country use this method," Sargenti said.

"People, at one time, had to go to New York to get the treatment, but now it is available all over the country," he said.

Moreover, one of the attractions to this method is that the treatment can be completed in one sitting with the same qualitative results as a conventional root canal, according to Sargenti. As a result, the patient benefits financially.

But Gaines, who uses the Sargenti technique exclusively, said he can cut down the appointments for the treatment from four or five for the conventional method to two with the Sargenti method.

"I have nothing against the conventional method," Gaines said, "but it (Sargentics) seemed to make good sense and scientifically it seemed sound."

In the 1940s, when Gaines was in dental school, "every tooth with decay reaching the nerve was extracted — literally thousands of teeth were wasted."

He interjected that Midland is a "progressive community in the field of dentistry" and there are some very good dentists in the city; therefore, the dentists are open to different techniques.

And if the Sargenti "technique is done properly and the conditions are right, the success is comparable to the conventional method," Gaines said.

He noted although he basically uses the Sargenti technique, he will combine the technique or use the convential method if the circumstances call for such decisions.

Similarly, Dr. Kenneth Kimbrough, a Midland dentist, said that dentistry is still a young, growing and progressive profession.

"If we (dentists) thought there was only one way to do things, we would become stagnant — there has to be controversy in science," he said.

However, Kimbrough does not use the Sargenti method.

"I feel more comfortable with the conventional technique," he said, "however, there is no question that both techniques work. Sargentics is not new to dentistry, it's just a matter of preference. The main concern is keeping the teeth in a healthy state."

The goal of Sargenti's lecture this past week was to give the correct, concise information on the technique.

Dr. Paul H. Johnson, an Odessa dentist, said, for him, this goal has been attained.

"What was taught to me in dentist school about this method bears no resemblance in this presentation today," Johnnson said, "and this method has been discredited by many in the business, but this is the first time I've heard his technique — it was not Sargentics I was hearing before."

Deborah Mashburn, 17, a senior at Midland High School, has been named Junior Lioness of the Week by the Downtown Lions Club. Miss Mashburn, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Mashburn of 2521 Stanolind Ave., is a member of the president's cabinet, feature writer for the MHS paper, chatter writer for The Reporter-Telegram, student council, squad leader for Packbackers and a member of the Junior Council of the Youth Center.

Henry Hernandez, East El Paso. "A.E.R.'s representatives were very professional — no pressure. Our system was installed in April, in only 3 days. Since then, I haven't even had to call for service! And our gas bill has been significantly reduced."

Enrique Hernandez

Mrs. Stewart Powell, West El Paso. "Our water heating cost is down to $4.50 a month. A.E.R. is great, from the people who answer the phones to their servicemen. I don't hesitate to recommend A.E.R."

Mrs. Stewart Powell

Mrs. Terry Otten, El Paso. "Our gas bill is down to $1.82 a month, and we have a gas stove! We've never dealt with people like A.E.R. before. They're super! I was against the idea of solar water heating before, but now I wouldn't do without it!"

Deanna Otten

Luis Olivas, East El Paso. "I was afraid to open our electric bill. Now it costs only about $3.00 to heat our water. My system will pay for itself in a year, maybe less. A.E.R. has been very responsive. I'm very satisfied."

Luis J. Olivas

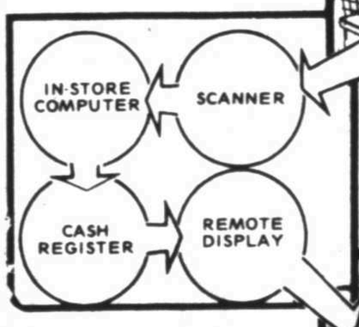
...LEADS THE WAY IN... CHECKOUT SCANNING!

CHECKOUT SCANNING... THE FASTER, MORE ACCURATE CHECK-OUT SYSTEM OF THE FUTURE... HERE TODAY, AT ALL THREE MIDLAND 'M'SYSTEMS!

HERE'S HOW 'M'SYSTEM'S CHECKOUT SCANNING WORK....

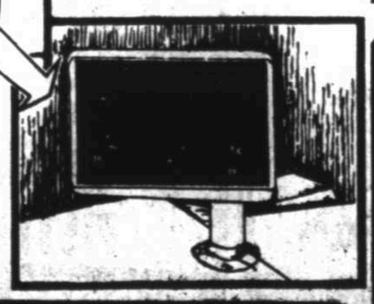
Almost all supermarket products have been assigned a ten-digit UPC number . The first five digits identify the manufacturer, and the second five digits identify the product, size and flavor. These numbers are represented on the package by a series of bars and spaces which 'M' System's electronic scanner can read. These bars and numbers only identify the item...They do not represent the price. Each item has been assigned a price in our in-store computer.

AS 'M' SYSTEM'S CASHIER MOVES THE UPC MARKED ITEM ACROSS A WINDOW ON THE CHECKOUT COUNTER, A LIGHT BEAM SCANS OR READS THE SYMBOL AND TRANSLATES IT BACK INTO A NUMBER.



THIS NUMBER IS TRANSMITTED TO 'M' SYSTEM'S IN-STORE COMPUTER WHICH LOOKS UP THE ITEM AND THE PRICE STORED IN ITS MEMORY.

THEN THE PRICE IS FLASHED BACK TO OUR CHECKOUT COUNTER. THERE, IT IS DISPLAYED ON THE VIEWER FOR OUR CUSTOMERS TO SEE AND ALSO PRINTED ON A TAPE FOR THE CUSTOMER'S FUTURE REFERENCE.

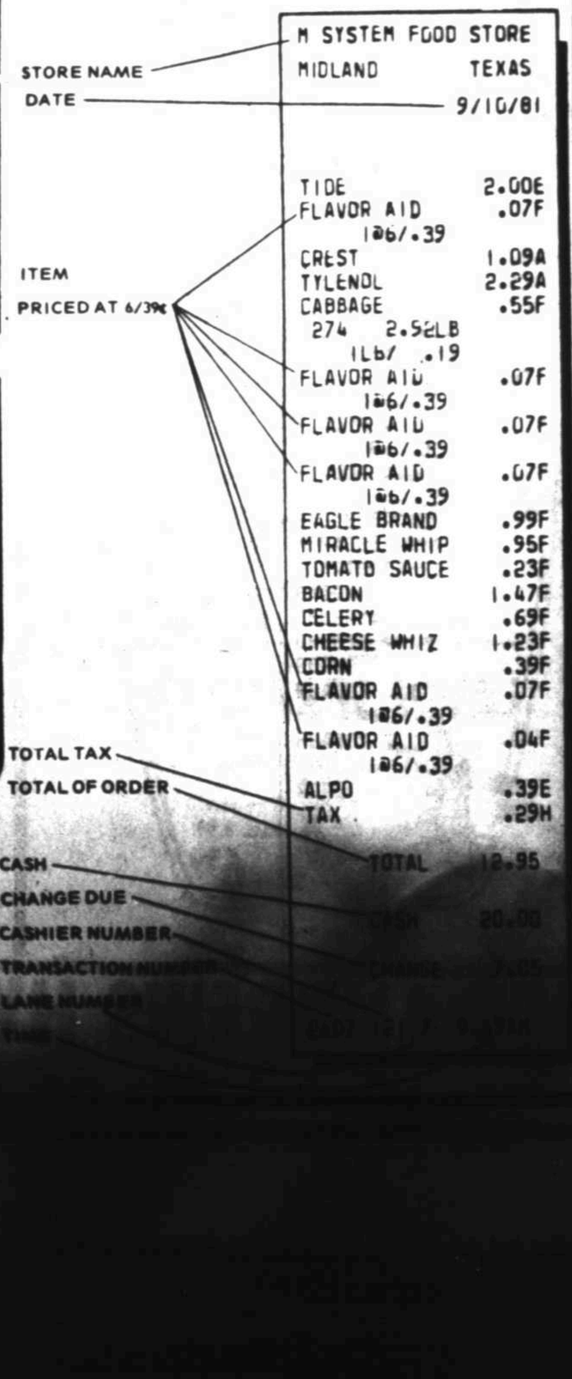


WHAT BENEFITS DO 'M'SYSTEM'S SCANNING OFFER YOU, THE CUSTOMER?

GREATER ACCURACY
There is much less chance of human error at 'M' System's checkout counter. Mistakes due to smugged prices are eliminated, and the computer can't miscalculate multiple priced items. On items priced 3 for 29¢ for instance, the computer will change 10¢ for the first two and 9¢ for the third, even if the three items are separated.

EVEN FASTER CHECKOUTS
Orders can be processed more rapidly with scanning. The computer automatically figures food stramps, taxes and more. A more efficient operation that helps us hold the line on prices.

A MORE DETAILED REGISTER RECEIPT
The print-out register receipt gives you complete information on each item by name rather than just listing the price and department. The tape presents a record of the complete transaction, including date, time, payment by cash, check or food stramps. Returnable bottle deposits, money-off coupons and sales tax.



WHAT HAPPENS TO A PRODUCT WITHOUT A UNIVERSAL PRODUCT CODE OR SYMBOL (UPC)?
If there is no symbol, for example, fresh produce and meats, the cashier will ring up the item just as they have always done. The same is true if the symbol is not scannable for some reason. The cashier keys the numbers on the UPC code and the scanner gets the price from this.

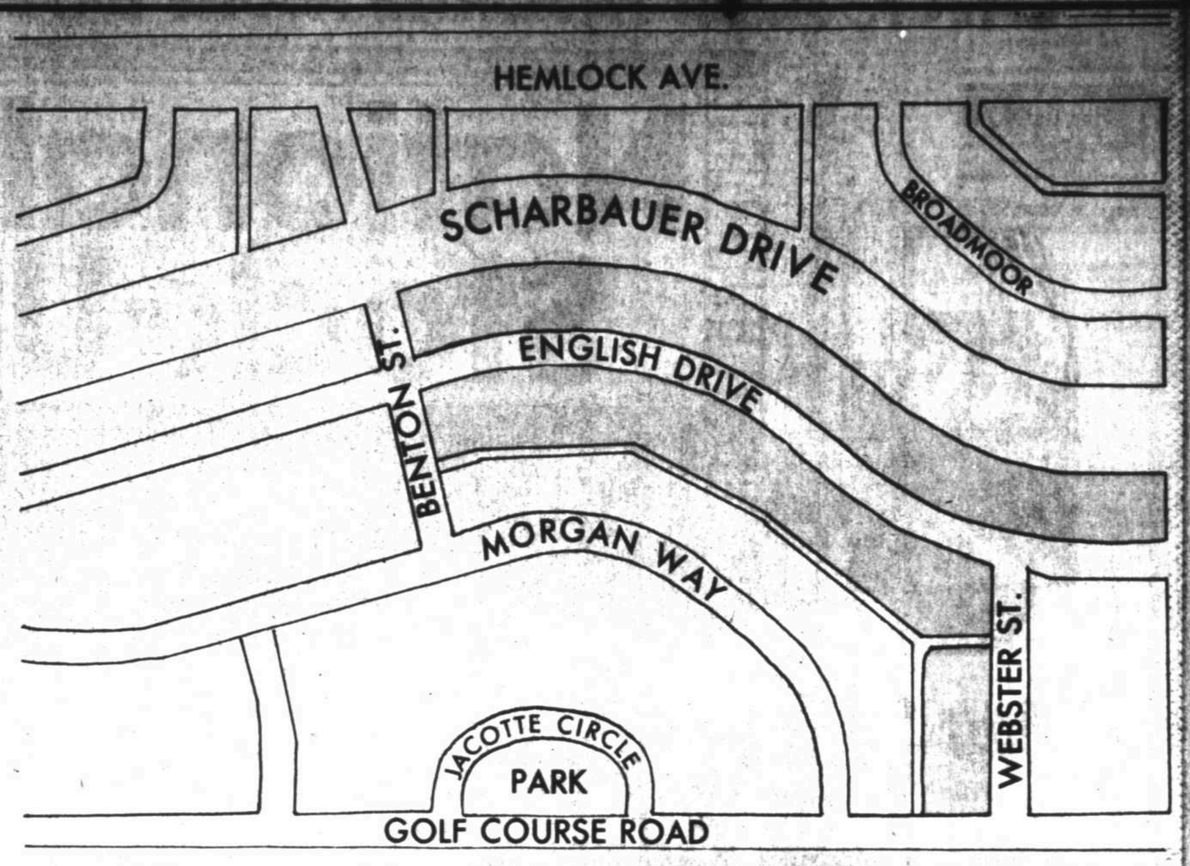
The model home, above, for the new Hall Builders, Inc., housing project in northeast Midland, is located at 1805 Webster St. The homes, selling for $38,500, will be located as shown in the shaded area — along either side of English Drive and part of Webster Street.



Sales 'brisk' as builders begin housing project

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Announcement of a housing project in northeast Midland is barely two weeks old, but already more than 65 houses in that area have been sold, according to Neal Hail, president of Hail Builders, Inc., developer of the plan.

The model home at 1805 Webster St. has been completed, he said, and foundations have been poured for about 25 new homes along Webster Street and English Drive. These should be completed in 60 to 75 days, according to Hail.

"Buyers are running the gamut," he said. "There are a lot of young people, many of whom had been mainly renters. A lot are professional people. We've sold to doctors, lawyers, CPAs, teachers, singles, couples, families. We've been inundated with calls."

The announcement was made Sept. 10 by Hail Builders of a housing development for lower income buyers in which the two- and three-bedroom homes would sell for $38,500 with a down payment of $2,500 required to move in. Estimated monthly payment would range around $500 a month. These 1,042-square-foot houses are planned with a basic design and few amenities.

The model was open last Sunday, said Hail, "and we had over 250 people go through it. A lot of civic leaders and some presidents of companies have come out to see what we had to offer. Some had expressed a desire to buy two to three homes to attract employees to the city."

Originally, the Hail builders said they planned on putting up over 300 homes. However, Hail said last week that the firm has purchased more land and is upping the number to more than 400 houses.

Additionally, Hail Builders has bought some land adjacent to Ranchland Hills Country Club for an apartment complex.

"I'm thrilled" with the response, said Hail. "We see it as a rejuvenation of northeast Midland."

Residents in that area have complained for years about no commercial development. With the influx of housing and people there, Hail said he feels commercial developers may look more closely at that area.

Nature hikes among activities for UTPB Mindpower observance

Area youngsters will have the opportunity to sharpen their powers of observation while learning about wildlife as The University of Texas of the Permian Basin sponsors nature hikes Oct. 6 and 8.

The nature hikes are part of UTPB's Mindpower observance, a week of exhibits, demonstrations, lectures and other activities scheduled Oct. 4-10.

Dr. Edwin B. Kurtz, chairman of life science at UTPB who will be conducting the nature hikes, noted girl scout and boy scout troops, as well as other youth groups and individuals, are invited to participate in the hikes, which will begin at 4:30 each afternoon.

"We will be hiking on some of the university's undeveloped land, looking for tracks and traces of various forms of wildlife," he said.

"Since these hikes will take place in October when cooler weather sets in, many of the animals will be hidden, and much of the new plant life will be dormant, so hikers will have to be even more observant of the remnants which tell that some kind of animal life is present," he added.

Kurtz said that more than 100 different species of birds, mammals, reptiles and amphibians now make their home on the UTPB campus among more than 1,000 different insect species.

"Thus far, we've identified more than 200 species of plants," Kurtz said. "Many of these plants are seasonal and not all of them can be recognized at the same time of the year," he added.

Kurtz has assembled 40 of the plants in a display in the university's life science laboratory. There are also mosses, liverworts and fungi which show up during moist times of the year.

Among the most obvious animals on campus are jackrabbits, cottontails and ground squirrels.

Dozens of birds also call the campus their home. Blue quail, bobwhite quail, mourning doves, sparrows and several kinds of larks regularly nest on the tract of land. Scissortails, king birds, nighthawks and burrowing owls can also be seen. Ducks and cardinals are visitors during migratory seasons.

Perhaps the most abundant of allanimals are the members of the Arthropoda group, according to Kurtz. These include insects, crustaceans and spiders. Kurtz said that over 1,000 insect species could be found on the UTPB campus.

He said, however, that the university campus has been undergoing landscaping during the past few months and some of the natural habitat is changing. New trees have been planted and other areas are being mowed and grass has been seeded.

Although some animals seem to thrive in urban areas, some will move on, he said. Even though there may be persons who regret the loss of one animal or plant and the natural environment, this process has been going on for a long time, he said.

"It just depends on how far back you want to look. No doubt several thousand years ago there were giant mammoths and prehistoric horses wandering around the campus," he said, adding, "and we haven't seen any of them around here lately."

UTPB's Mindpower week is part of a nationwide campaign in support of higher education. It is endorsed by 25 educational associations nationwide.

Can you settle this argument?

My friend says no autopsy is required in the case of a completely obvious suicide, with notes, etc. I say, even then, Texas law requires an autopsy.

Who is right? — A.B.

ANSWER: Vern F. Martin, district attorney, reports that Article 49.01 of the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure requires a Justice of the Peace conduct an inquest in any case, such as a suicide, or where circumstances of a death indicate the person committed suicide. An autopsy can be ordered at the discretion of the Justice of the Peace to determine the cause of death. The decision for an autopsy can be a joint decision by legal representatives involved in the case.

ANSWER: The Telephone Reassurance Service program is sponsored by the First Christian Church Senior Services, 682-7527.

Brief daily telephone calls are made to the elderly or handicapped who live alone. Calls are made Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

This daily check on the well-being of the person living alone provides peace of mine for friends and relatives who cannot check on the individual as often as they would like.

If an owner sells rental property for other construction, how much notice must he give tenants? Is he required to help them relocate?

Also, if the rental units are to be destroyed, will security and cleaning deposits be returned despite the condition of the property? — J.E.G.

If the owner sells the property, for any reason, he must give 30 days notice, if the tenant pays his rent by the month. He can give two weeks notice if the renter pays every two weeks. If there is a written agreement, such as a lease, it would be subject to negotiation.

No, Ms. Lasater says, the owner is not responsible for relocation of the tenants.

There should be no reason for not returning the deposits, if the property is to be demolished, and the tenant is not in arrears with his rent.

Could you give me some information about the Home Owners Warranty I have been reading and hearing about in real estate advertisements? — J.K.

ANSWER: The Home Owners Warranty (HOW) is a plan offered by some builders which is the first 10-year nationally-insured protection for new home buyers.

Qualified HOW builders offer the following protections.: For the 10 years your home is protected against major structural defects. (This is the builder's obligation for the first two years. The next eight years are covered by a national insurance plan.

During the first year the builder guarantees that materials and workmanship meet HOW's Approved Standards.

During the second year, the HOW builder continues to be responsible for the wiring, piping and duct work.

And, during the first two years, the national insurance coverage provided through HOW assumes the builder's responsibilites if, for any reason, the builder cannot or will not meet the warranty's obligations.

The HOW program offers a built-in system for complaint handling, assuring fair and inexpensive settlement of disagreements through formal conciliation.

Surgical glue speeds healing

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new type of surgical glue that seals tissue, stops bleeding and promotes healing may one day change many operating room practices for binding body parts, a physician-researcher said Friday.

Dr. Helene Matras said the glue, derived principally from blood components, can reattach everything from bone to nerve tissue, and make the wound heal faster.

"What we have done is develop a sealing technique that is applicable to many kinds of surgery," she said in an interview.

"Other surgical glues, made of artificial components, don't promote wound healing and can cause a large, unwanted mass to form around a wound because they are foreign material," she continued.

Ms. Matras, a professor at the University of Vienna Medical School in Austria, gave a report on the glue here at the annual meeting of the American Association of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeons.

She said the glue, called Fibrin Seal, is approved for use in Austria and Germany, but is still is experimental in the United States. Work with the substance has just started at several American medical centers, she added.

Ms. Matras said the glue is a two-component system obtained from human blood plasma. The first component, a sealant-adhesive, attaches the parts, and the second substance hardens the bond and stops the clotting process.

The glue causes fibrin, an insoluable protein essential to blood clotting, to form around the wound. This stops bleeding and accelerates healing, she said.

The components also can be mixed and applied together under certain conditions to promote a precalculated amount of healing in a certain area, she added.

The glue can be mixed with bone chips to fill in structural depressions, making it especially useful in facial reconstructions, she said, and has been extensively employed in attaching skin graphs.

The physician said the glue also has been used successfully in general surgery, vascular surgery, neurosurgery and most other surgical specialties.

"This means that in many cases, you don't have to use sutures or other foreign substances in the body which can disturb the wound and interfere with healing," she said.

Ms. Matras began her research on the glue 11 years ago when she got the idea of using a clotting substance to unite peripheral nerves. She found that the idea had been tried in the 1940s on animals, but was abandoned.

NO. DR-12,650
IN THE INTEREST OF: JERRY LYNN WARD, A CHILD
STATE OF TEXAS TO: SAMMY RAY WARD
GREETINGS:

YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to appear and answer before the Honorable Court, 318th Judicial District, MIDLAND COUNTY, Texas, at the Courthouse of said County in Midland, Texas, at or before twenty (20) days from the date of service of this citation, then and there to answer the petition of CAROLYN JO McCULLOUGH, Petitioner, filed in this Court on the 23rd day of SEPTEMBER, 1981, against SAMMY RAY WARD, Respondent, and the said suit being No. DR-12,650 on the docket of said Court, and entitled "In the interest of JERRY LYNN WARD, a Child," the nature of which suit is a request to terminate the parent-child relationship. Said child was born on the 18th day of May, 1971 in Brownfield, Terry County, Texas.

The Court also has authority in this suit to enter any judgment or decree in the child's interest which will be binding upon you, including, but not necessarily limited to, the termination of the parent-child relationship.

ISSUED AND GIVEN UNDER MY HAND AND SEAL OF SAID COURT, at Midland, Texas, this 23 day of SEPTEMBER, 1981.

ARAMCO

MATERIALS SUPPLY & PLANT MAINTENANCE PROFESSIONALS

Aramco's multimillion-dollar materials supply and plant maintenance organizations help support the vast search for energy going on right now in Saudi Arabia. You can be part of it and get paid up to 40 percent more than you're presently making. You'll also get 40 days' vacation and many other excellent benefits.

Interested? See our ad in the sports section of this newspaper to find out how you can take on the career challenge of Aramco in Saudi Arabia.

ARAMCO

GEOPHYSICISTS

Aramco will be interviewing in Midland/Odessa on Monday and Tuesday, September 28th and 29th.

Aramco needs outstanding people on the energy frontier. We're offering outstanding incentives to get them: up to 40% pay premium, 40 days' paid vacation every year, and a chance to work with the latest of seismic techniques with the world's largest oil-producing company.

Our geophysical department is expanding its Research, Interpretation and Data Processing groups with openings in both Croydon, England, and Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

The EXPEC Complex will provide researchers and explorationists with the newest computer and support systems, personnel, facilities needed to tackle Aramco's difficult and challenging geophysical problems.

Processing Geophysicists

Processing Analysts. Requires 3 to 5 years' experience for work within a seismic processing team. You'll be responsible for parameter selection and quality control of results.

Senior Processing Geophysicists. 5 to 10 years' experience required. You'll lead a processing team, and be responsible for analysis of seismic problems and processing solutions.

Geophysical Processing Supervisors. You'll need over 10 years' experience, including responsible supervisory work in seismic processing. You'll be responsible for integrating/coordinating the work of several processing teams.

Interpretation Geophysicists

General requirements include a degree in geophysics, or an equivalent combination of related degrees and experience.

Candidates should have a strong technical and geological orientation, plus good knowledge of seismic data acquisition, and the basic principles and techniques of processing.

Seismic Interpreters. Requires 3 to 5 years' major oil company type experience, with a capability to assume responsibility for independent analyses.

Senior Seismic Interpreters. Need 5 to 8 years' responsible independent interpretation experience, utilizing all types of exploratory data. You should be proficient in applying the most recently developed interpretational and seismic data quality enhancement technology.

Senior Geophysicists—Interpretation Supervisors. Requires at least 8 years' experience in same areas as Senior Seismic Interpreters (above), but with supervisory experience. You should have demonstrated capability to supervise technical and imaginative geological/geophysical interpreters.

Senior Geophysical Specialists. We need experts in seismic velocity measurement and analyses; seismic-stratigraphic interpretation; or data base analysis and mapping technology and application.

Research and Development Geophysicists

We seek geophysicists, physicists, electrical engineers and computer scientists with proven competence in one or more of the following: elastic wave propagation, wave equation methods, signal and image processing, forward and inverse modeling and interactive graphics.

You'll work on development and implementation of an integrated system of seismic data acquisition, data processing and interpretation designed to solve the most difficult and complex geophysical problems. There is close cooperation of geological, geophysical and R&D functions, with early field testing of newly developed R&D technology.

Candidates should have an advanced degree in geophysics, physics, or related discipline, with at least 3 years' relevant work experience.

Competitive compensation and benefits

Aramco pays a competitive base salary and a cost-of-living differential that equalizes living expenses between Saudi Arabia and the United States. In addition, Aramco pays an expatriate premium of 40 percent on the first $30,000 of base salary and a 20 percent premium on the next $20,000. And there is an outstanding combination of benefits: long vacations, comfortable housing, abundant recreation and an excellent school system.

Saudi Arabia bonus and new voluntary "bachelor" status for married employees

Newly hired North Americans for Aramco in Saudi Arabia receive a special bonus. It equals 10 percent of your annual base salary, up to $5,000.

All of the attractive compensation and benefits are available for married employees who may want to work overseas on a temporary "bachelor" status for the first year. This program includes three free repatriation trips by air during this one-year period, and the option to request family status during that same year.

To set up an interview call our 24-hour line today: (713) 750-6965. If you wish, call toll-free: 1-800-231-7511 between 7 A.M. and 4 P.M. Central Time. Ask to speak with Jon Calloway.

If you prefer, send your résumé in full confidence or write for more information to: Aramco Services Company, Dept. MRT0927TE15B, P.O. Box 53607, Houston, Texas 77052.

MECHANIC

For over 40 years, The Western Company has been providing the kind of service to the energy industry that has earned us the nickname..."The Pacesetter". In order to maintain our leadership role, we need hardworking, dependable, promotable people.

Right now, we have an opening for an experienced mechanic to maintain our well servicing equipment. You must have at least 2 years experience in diesel, auto or agriculture mechanics, or have a certificate of completion from a trade school. You should also have your own tools and be able to pass a physical exam.

Western has excellent salaries and benefits including a complete dental plan. If you would like to become a "Pacesetter" then we urge you to come by the Holiday Inn located at 3001 E. Highway 80 in Odessa on Tuesday, September 29, at 7 p.m. to see our representative Jerry Sims. An equal opportunity employer, m/f.

OIL & GAS PROFESSIONALS

Find out why we call ourselves SUPERIOR

...IN MIDLAND INTERVIEWS
FRIDAY-SUNDAY, OCT. 9-11

There are many reasons why we're called SUPERIOR and generally regarded as the largest independent oil and gas producer in the U. S. Perhaps the most evident is the quality of our people. Aggressive, innovative people applying advanced technologies have brought us accomplishments that are the envy of the industry. A significant wildcat success ratio and hydrocarbon replacement greater than total production were no accidents. Want to join an expanding leader? Talk to us in Midland. We have immediate opportunities for experienced supervisors and professionals in the disciplines listed below:

- PRODUCTION, DRILLING, FACILITIES, RESERVOIR ENGINEERS
- PRODUCTION GEOLOGISTS & GEOPHYSICISTS

Please call Jeanne Buchanan, (713) 751-4598

- EXPLORATION GEOLOGISTS GEOPHYSICISTS/LANDMEN

Please Call Jim Tobin, (713) 751-4598

- ACCOUNTANTS/FINANCIAL ANALYSTS AUDITORS
- PROGRAMMERS/SYSTEMS ANALYSTS

Please call Susan Vingoe, (713) 751-4211

- PERSONNEL REPRESENTATIVES

Please Call Marcia Kellber, (713) 751-4588

For advance appointment, call one of the numbers listed above (no agencies please)

Openings are available in Midland, Houston, The Woodlands (30 miles north of Houston), Denver, New Orleans and Lafayette, Louisiana. All offer excellent salaries, a competitive benefits package and clear prospects for advancement in a company large enought to provide wide avenues for growth and small enough to make your contributions visible.

If you can't meet with us in Midland October 9-11, please send your resume with salary history and location preference to the attention of one of the persons listed above.

Today I work in a bank.
Tomorrow I work at an advertising agency.
That's how Kelly Services works for me.

Working for Kelly Services, the temporary help people, means having an opportunity few people have...real variety in working experience. On Kelly's temporary assignments, you'll be able to work in more than one kind of business.
That can be valuable experience whether you're making up your mind about choosing a career or reentering the job market.

And, of course, working for Kelly means you'll be working for a leader in the industry and making good money. Kelly is not an employment agency, so you sign no contracts and pay no fees. Why not stretch your job experience in one of Kelly's more than 100 job classifications. Let Kelly Services, the temporary help people, work for you.

SALES
Pharmaceutical Sales Representative

with this expanding Johnson & Johnson Company
2 years in sales, and a college degree or equivalent can enroll you at Ortho Pharmaceutical Corporation in its Lubbock-based territory.
Ortho's specialized sales training program lasts eight weeks. It is both intensive and thorough...so that our "graduates" enter new territories with a knowledgeable sales approach, a positive attitude in service... and the stature of a true professional.

We're a Johnson & Johnson Company, specializing in prescription products... and our clients are doctors, hospital staff members, and pharmacists. And we're gratified to know that our products and our representatives are very important elements in providing a vital service to people and communities across the country. It gives us all a sense of purpose.

Our compensation is generous...we offer an attractive salary, incentive bonuses, expenses, company car, a complete fringe benefit package... and, if you choose to continue your education outside of Ortho, we'll reimburse you 100% for each successfully completed course.

A college degree is preferable but not required, as long as your sales experience has been solid and productive.

If you're qualified, amenable to 6 to 8 nights overnight travel per month, and genuinely interested in Ortho,

KZ1000CSR
Sale
$3549
Reg. $3699

Here's something incredible: the all-new 1000CSR for '81. It's a purist's bike in the extreme; not an ounce of fat or a trace of gadgetry. this motorcycle moves you two ways: fast and smooth, with its new high-power, low-maintenance 998cc engine. And lean and low, with style that's highlighted by our exclusive new UltraSpoke wheels. The KZ1000CSR. For Kawasaki, it's the crowning achievement.

Open House

This Weekend

See how Capp Homes beats the high cost of housing.

- This home is not for sale; it isn't even finished yet. But, we want you to look at a concept — the Capp Homes "Finish-It-Yourself" home building program.
- Learn how you can personally design and contract for your own dream home.
- Find out about available construction financing — and how you can custom build today with only a small deposit.
- See more! Learn more this weekend...rain or shine.

Time:1:00 to 6:00 P.M.
Date: SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 27th TODAY
Directions:

In Midland, go north on Big Spring Street 2 miles north of Wadley Street. Turn east on the first street past Midland Country Club. Then follow the Capp Homes Open House signs. The house is at 349 Ranch Estates.

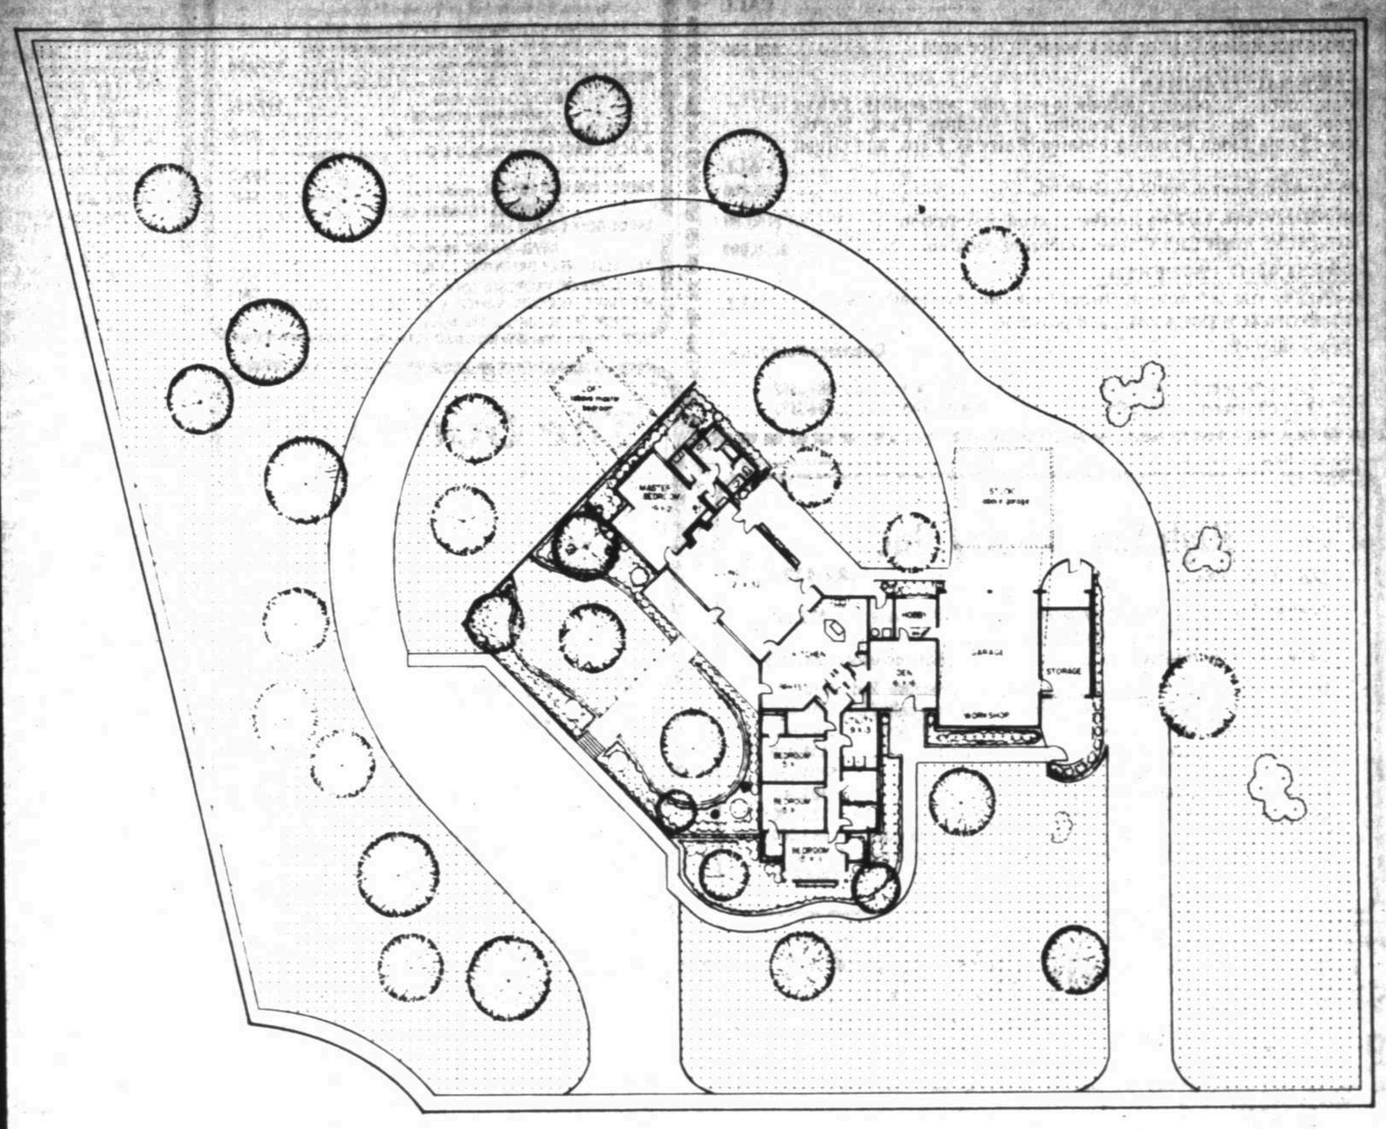
Selective Offering from Permian Real Estate



Weeping Willow Lane (off Solomon Lane)

This unusual home has lots of extra features. A vaulted ceiling and Austin stone fireplace accent the main living area. French doors provide access to the living area and high gloss red brick floors are throughout the residence.

The master bedroom is carpeted in beige, and has double walk-in closets and full bath. A spiral staircase in the bedroom leads to a loft sitting room above, with an attractive hardwood floor. An upstairs studio above the garage has a southern skylight -- perfect for the family artist.

The kitchen features built-in appliances, including a wet bar, and has a dining and sitting area. Three carpeted bedrooms and two baths are in a separate wing. Zoned gas heating and air conditioning provides comfort control.

KAREN MOORE
Salesman of the Month

August was another banner month for Residential sales at Ramcon of Midland/Odessa with sales in excess of $2,205,000. The award winning Sale Agent for the month was Karen Moore with sales in excess of $428,000. Runner up was Terry Davis, with outstanding sales of $296,728. Marketing Director, Harry Hilgers, in announcing Karen's achievement, noted the dedicated effort and outstanding "positive attitude" demonstrated by her. We're very proud to have a lady like Karen on our staff because she is so dependable. Ramcon's staff of professional Sales Agents now numbers 11 and is involved in training sessions once each week to better prepare themselves for the challenges of the industry's new Professional standards.

Ryan no hits LA Dodgers

Fifth no hitter sets major league record

AP Laserphoto

Houston Astros' pitcher Noland Ryan gets a ride from his happy teammates Saturday after he pitched a no hitter against the Los Angeles Dodgers in the Astrodome. It was the fifth no hitter of Ryan's career as he broke the major league record he shared with Sandy Koufax.

HOUSTON (AP) — Nolan Ryan got the record he wanted, even though he really didn't expect it would ever come.

The 34-year-old fireballing right-handed pitcher of the Houston Astros became the first man to throw five career no-hitters when he set down the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-0 Saturday, surrendering just three walks. It has been six years since Ryan's last no-hitter, the last of four he pitched for the California Angels.

"It's hard to believe I got the no-hitter," said Ryan, who struck out 11. "It's the one thing I wanted. I've had a shot at it for a long time. At my age, I thought I wouldn't get it. I don't have the stamina I used to have. I didn't challenge guys in the later innings.

"I really didn't feel like I had good velocity today," added Ryan, 10-5, who leads the National League with a 1.74 earned run average out 11, "but I got ahead on my curve balls.

"THE KEY was my curve ball. You can't win with one pitch. It doesn't matter how fast you can throw, but with a curve they had to think about the breaking ball."

Ryan was tied with Sandy Koufax for the most no-hitters in a career. In 1973, while with the Angels — whom he left to sign with Houston as a free agent in 1980 — he no-hit Kansas City 3-0 on May 15 and Detroit 6-0 on July 15. The next year he no-hit Minnesota 4-0 on Sept. 28, and recorded the last of his four no-hitters with the Angels on June 1, 1975 against Baltimore, winning 1-0.

Ryan also has thrown seven one-hitters.

A crowd of 32,115 cheered with Ryan's every pitch as he approached the historic achievement of his fifth no-hitter. In the final inning, Ryan, 10-5, fanned pinch-hitter Reggie Smith on three pitches for his 11th strikeout of the game. Ken Landreaux grounded out to Denny Walling at first base, then Ryan completed the masterpiece by getting Dusty Baker to ground out to Art Howe at third base.

"I KNOW there were several times I'd have a no-hitter in the late innings and I didn't have the stamina to get the rest of the hitters out," added Ryan. "But today I felt stronger in the late innings than I have in some time."

"I really didn't think about the no-hitter. I knew I had one going. When the catcher hit the ball and it was caught, I thought I might have a shot at it.

Speaking of Koufax, Ryan noted: "He's the most overpowering pitcher I've seen since I been playing the game and probably the best left-hander ever."

"I'm excited it's finally over with. I'm the only one since Koufax who has had a shot at the record. I really don't compare myself to him. I thought it was a great honor when I broke his strikeout record and I've got that same feeling now.

"This is by far the most important of my no-hitters. I went into the game feeling like I had to do a good job and this turned into one of the biggest games of the year. My others were with ballclubs that weren't doing well and I was still young and trying to get established.

"When it's all over, this will probably be the one I favor most, being we're in a pennant race, being on national TV, being at home and having my mother here."

"EARLY IN the game, Nolan didn't have a good fastball," said catcher Alan Ashby. "It's just an awesome feeling. Right next to Nolan and his family, I think I felt it the most."

Ryan's biggest problem was his own control in the second and third innings. Steve Garvey drew a leadoff walk in the second and stole second base. Ryan struck out Pedro Guerrero and Scioscia but uncorked a wild pitch to move Garvey to third. Ryan got Ron Roenicke on a pop foul to Howe to end the threat.

In the third, Derrel Thomas led off with a walk and again Ryan came up with two strikeouts, fanning Ted Power and Davey Lopes. Landreaux walked but Ryan got Baker on a grounder to second.

In the sixth, Ryan notched his 135th career game in which he struck out 10 or more batters by setting down Baker on three pitches.

It was the first no-hitter for a Houston pitcher since Ken Forsch threw one against Atlanta on April 7, 1979.

The last time the Dodgers were no-hit was Aug. 9, 1976 by John Candelaria of Pittsburgh.

SMU stops rival TCU 20-9

Moten interception prevents cardiac finish

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

FORT WORTH — Southern Methodist and Texas Christian seemed headed for the type of finish that made this game one of the Southwest Conference's crown jewels for so many years until Mustang linebacker Gary Moten intercepted a Steve Stamp pass to avert a cardiac finish.

Stamp had just bailed the Frogs out of a third-and-24 disaster at the TCU seven with a 37-yard pass to Greg Arterberry and with the Frogs behind 13-9 with less than two minutes gone in the final period, it looked like the barn was burning.

But Moten swiped Stamp's pass and SMU methodically marched some 61 yards to the score that locked up a 20-9 win, the Mustangs fourth of the year before 25,862 fans here Saturday night.

"I'm as proud of this victory as I was the win over Texas last year," coach Ron Meyer said. "With the kind of offense TCU has we had to keep the ball away from them, particularly when they had the wind. In the first quarter they had just six or seven snaps."

Meyer went on "if it weren't for our offense we would have played shutout football. A fumble set up the field goal and an inerception the touchdown. TCU is going to win a lot of games. It's the best Frog team we've played in my six years here."

SMU got its customary 200 yards from the tailback tandem of Eric Dickerson (113, the sixth straight time he has gone over 100 yards) and Craig James (90), but quarterback Lance McIlhenny's first half passing (96 yards on four of eight attempts) and his game total of 11 carries for 80 yards were a little more than the Frogs could handle.

TCU, plagued by horrible luck in the first half, tied it at 6-6 when defensive back Anthony Allen returned a tipped interception 40 yards SMU seven and Stamp, rendered ineffective in the first half, hit Stanley Washington with a six-yard TD pass 2:59 into the third period.

SMU responded, sweeping 67 yards in six plays to send Dickerson in from the three after McIlhenny went 52 yards on a keeper around on left to put the ball on the TCU 15.

Stamp, snuffed out with 23 yards passing in the first half, completed seven passes as TCU retaliated with an 81-yard drive in 14 plays from its six-yard line to set up a 30-yard Greg Porter field goal with five minutes left in the third period, trimming the SMU advantage to 13-9.

And Stamp, despite the first half, wound up with 15 completions in 28 attempts for 261 yards.

Little Eddie Garcia's field goals of 22 and 27 yards gave SMU its 6-0 halftime lead. The first came after SMU had driven from its 18 to the TCU three. Linebacker Joe Hines then nailed McIlhenny for a three-yard loss on third down, which brought on Garcia. The big plays came with second-and-20 at the Frog 24 as McIlhenny passed to James for nine and Jackie Wilson for 14 to keep the drive alive.

The first half for TCU was one of muffed opportunities. The first coming when Spencer Sumstrum punted 38 yards to the SMU seven and the Frogs let the Mustangs escape when McIlhenny went to Bobby Leach on a quick pass that developed into a 42-yard gain.

That drive was stopped and TCU countered by moving from its 39 to the SMU 35. Stamp found Bob Fields alone over the middle for a pass completion to the six, but it was wiped out by a holding penalty. The Frogs reached the 18 but Stamp was intercepted at the goal line.

The Frogs soon were back at the SMU 12, but Porter missed a 29-yard field goal attempt.

Only 2:33 remained in the half, but it was enough for the Ponies to move from their 20 to the TCU 10 as McIlhenny hit Lee Jeane for 31 yards to the TCU 36 and then James bolted off the left side for 22 yards to the 14 on the next play. Again the drive bogged down, but Garcia salvaged three points with 48 seconds left in the half.

Dickerson-James had accounted for 129 yards as expected at the half, but McIlhenny, the option quarterback, had outpassed Stamp by hitting four-of-eight for 96 yards which, along with Garcia's toe, was the difference.

Jackson has warning for San Diego's Dan Fouts

By The Associated Press

Tom Jackson isn't sure whether Denver's Orange Crush defense is back. But just in case, he has a message for San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts — look out.

Jackson, Denver's All-Pro linebacker, said the Broncos won't be able to shut down the undefeated San Diego Chargers offense in Sunday's game in Denver. But the Broncos can make life miserable for Fouts, the National Football League's top-rated passer.

"Fouts throws for 300 yards against us every time we face him," said Jackson. "But that's OK as long as it's for 5 or 10 yards at a time. We must put pressure on him. He's been sacked only once in three games, but you can pressure him into throwing interceptions or to throwing that dink pass or the quick pass for short yardage."

THAT'S EXACTLY what the Broncos did to Fouts last year in San Diego. Although Denver yielded 459 yards in total offense, they sacked Fouts six times, forcing one interception, and kept the Chargers out of the end zone until the fourth quarter en route to a 20-13 victory.

The Broncos, 2-1, come into the game as the league's No.1 defense, allowing 212 total yards a game, including just 94 through the air.

"I don't know if you could say the Crush is back, but we are playing awfully well — probably the best I've ever seen us play," said Jackson, who starred on the Broncos Super Bowl team in 1978.

THE DALLAS Cowboys, Philadelphia Eagles, Atlanta Falcons and Miami Dolphins also will try to stretch their records to 4-0 this Sunday. The Cowboys host the New York Giants, the Eagles entertain the winless Washington Redskins, Miami meets the Colts in Baltimore and Atlanta travels to Cleveland to meet the Browns.

The Monday night game features Los Angeles at Chicago.

Dallas, led by Tony Dorsett, boasts the league's No.1 rushing offense. Dorsett, who suffered bruised ribs and a twisted ankle last Monday night, has rambled for 423 yards, averaging 7.6 yards per carry. The Giants, 2-1, have not beaten Dallas in Texas since 1974.

The Eagles will put Louie Giammona on the spot again when they meet Washington. Giammona, Coach Dick Vermeil's nephew, will be replacing No.1 halfback Wilbert Montgomery, out with a pulled hamstring.

Cleveland, 1-2, got its offense back in gear last week, downing Cincinnati 20-17, while the Falcons, off to the best start in their 16-year history, thrashed San Francisco 34-17.

The game between Miami and Baltimore, 1-2, will mark the first time in NFL history that a son will play against his father. Don Shula is head coach of the Dolphins and his son, David, is a wide receiver and kick returner for the Colts.

SAN FRANCISCO'S Joe Montana, the NFC's No.1 passer with 62 completions for 756 yards and six touchdowns, will be firing his passes at young New Orleans secondary. Saints Coach Bum Phillips, who spent a couple of days in the hospital this week because of high fever, is back but starting quarterback Archie Manning is questionable with pulled hamstring. Both teams are 1-2.

Oakland, 2-1, will be facing Detroit, 1-2, without five starters from last year's Super Bowl game. Out with injuries are wide receiver Bob Chandler, linebacker Bob Nelson, nose tackle Reggie Kinlaw, safety Mike Davis and running back Mark van Eeghen.

Seattle's Jim Zorn, who became only the third quarterback in NFL history to pass for 15,000 yards in his first six seasons with 327 yards against Oakland last week, could engage Bill Kenney in aerial battle. Kenney passed for 303 yards against San Diego a week ago.

Matt Cavanaugh, who led the University of Pittsburgh to the national collegiate title in 1976, returns to Pittsburgh Sunday at the helm of the winless New England Patriots. The Steelers, 1-2, woke up last weekend, crushing the Jets 38-10, while rolling up 566 in offense.

THE JETS, 0-3, are hoping to recapture some of the magic from last year's contest against Houston, a game New York won 31-28 in overtime. The Oilers, 2-1, will try to sew up the holes in their offensive line that allowed quarterback Ken Stabler to be sacked eight times by the Dolphins last week, one shy of the club record.

Buffalo, 2-1, has won its last three meetings with Cincinnati, but the NFL's stingiest defense, with just 23 points allowed this year, will have to look out for Cincinnati's high-powered offense. The Bengals have scored 75 points.

Green Bay, 1-2, unveils its new double-trouble offense in Milwaukee when the Packers meet the Tommy Kramer-led Minnesota Vikings, also 1-2. The double trouble comes from wide receivers James Lofton and recently acquired All-Pro John Jefferson.

Minnesota, which will also have to contend with Green Bay's newly acquired running back Del Williams, edged Detroit last week as Kramer returned from an injury and threw for 333 yards and two touchdowns.

Longhorns escape Hurricanes, 14-7

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas quarterback Rick McIvor lofted a 45-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Donnie Little — Texas' starting quarterback last year — as the Longhorns defeated Miami 14-7 in an intersectional game matching two Top 20 college football teams.

Texas' other wide receiver, sprinter Herkie Walls, caught a 58-yard pass from McIvor to set up the first Longhorn touchdown, which came at the end of a 99-yard march.

The victory extended No. 4 Texas' record to 3-0. The 14th-ranked Hurricanes lost their first game in three starts.

Defenses and punting dominated a scoreless first half as Texas had only 96 yards total offense and Miami 106 at intermission.

Texas scored first, late in the third quarter, after cornerback Vance Bedford intercepted Miami quarterback Jim Kelly at the Texas 1-yard line. The 'Horns moved 99 yards for the touchdown with McIvor passing from the end zone on a third down play to hit the 58-yarder to Walls.

A.J. "Jam" Jones scored from the 9, ripping through a big hole on the left side and dragging Miami safety Fred Marion into the end zone with him.

The junior hit Robert Neal for 11, Mark Rush for 18, Neal again for 12 and then threw a perfect toss to Larry Brodsky for 32 yards and the touchdown.

Texas' winning drive, on its next possession, also carried 80 yards. On third and 3, McIvor threw to Little at the Miami 25 and he cut to the left sidelines, sidestepping Marion at the 2 for the score.

Bobcats win Odessa meet

ODESSA — District 5-5A cross country favorite San Angelo posted a low of 42 points to win the Odessa College Invitational Cross Country meet here Saturday with Big Spring second with 61 and Andrews third with 90 points.

Midland High was fourth with 108 points and Midland Lee was seventh with 159. Chuck St. Germain led MHS with a fourth place finish at 15:41 while James Beverley was 12th and Jesse Diaz 20th. Lee was paced Carl Piccolo with seventh and Orlando Padilla was 22nd while Jim Chauncey was 33rd.

In the girls run, Abilene Cooper took top honors with 56 points and was followed by San Angelo with 94 and Midland High with 99. Sandy Rodriquez led MHS with a fourth with a 13:13 and Trudy Arrequin was ninth with a 13:28. Lee's Kelly Allen was 11th and Lois Hall 31st.

San Angelo also won the boys JV division with 21 points, beating Midland High with 48. Mike Betteridge led the Bullpups with a second place and Auturo Arciga was sixth. Lee's Tim Chauncey was 12th and Richard Germany was 27th.

The cross country tour moves to San Angelo next Saturday, the site of the district run later this year.

Bomb highlights Aggie win

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M quarterback Gary Kubiak accounted for three touchdowns, including a 92-yard bomb to Don Jones, and the Aggie defense slowed pass-happy Louisiana Tech quarterback Matt Dunigan on Saturday night en route to a 43-7 victory.

The Aggies, striking back with a vengence after last week's 13-12 upset loss to Boston College, scored three times on their first four possessions.

Kubiak hit Jones with a 31-yard touchdown pass on the third play of the game, handed off to Johnny Hector on a 45-yard touchdown run, and the Aggies went ahead 17-0 on David Hardy's 43-yard field goal.

Kubiak ran three yards for a second quarter touchdown and a 23-0 halftime lead against the Bulldogs, who dropped to a 1-3 record.

The Aggie defense, meanwhile, sacked Dunigan four times in the first half for 36 yards in losses and allowed the Bulldogs into Aggie territory only once.

The Aggies, 2-1, stunned Tech again in the third quarter with three touchdowns on a 10-yard run by Thomas Sanders, Kubiak's 92-yard bomb to Jones and a 2-yard run by Ernest Jackson, running the score to 43-0.

Hogs rally to trip Mississippi, 27-13

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Gary Anderson, held in check in the first half, helped set up Bruce Lahay's 24-yard field goal and Tom Jones' one-yard run in the third period and Danny Walters scampered 87 yards with an intercepted pass as Arkansas came from behind Saturday night and defeated Mississippi 27-13.

A throng of 63,522 in Mississippi Memorial Stadium, the largest crowd ever to witness a sporting event in Mississippi, saw Walters' interception kill a late Ole Miss threat and seal the Rebels' first setback in four games. The winners were supported by 15,000 fans from the neighboring state of Arkansas, who watched the Razorbacks boost their record to 3-0.

Arkansas' second-half rally negated a record-setting night by Mississippi quarterback John Fourcade, who smashed Archie Manning's career total offense.

FOURCADE COMPLETED 15 of 28 passes for 213 yards and carried 10 times for 44 more, including a 10-yard touchdown run. His total of 257 yards gave him 5,677 yards, erasing the mark of 5,576 set by Manning from 1968-70.

Fourcade, a 6-foot-1 212-pound senior from Gretna, La., had returned to the game after suffering a rib injury near the end of the third period and took the Rebels from their 24 to the Arkansas 18.

On the next play, however, he threw blindly into the right flat and Walters stepped in front of James Harbour, the intended receiver, swiped the pass and sped down the left sideline for the sixth longest interception return in Arkansas history.

A 22-yard field goal by Lahay gave Arkansas a 3-0 lead after the Razorbacks kept possession of the ball for 15 plays and 6:46 following the opening kickoff. A 10-yard run by James Tolbert for an apparent touchdown was nullified by an offsides penalty and Arkansas settled for Lahay's first field goal four plays later.

OLE MISS, which had come from behind each of its three previous games, took a 13-3 lead in the second period on a one-yard run by Andre Thomas and Fourcade's 10-yard keeper.

Arkansas closed within 13-10, stopping the clock time after time on a 10-play drive in the final two minutes of the half before Jones fired a 13-yard touchdown pass to Darryl Mason with just six seconds remaining.

Ole Miss, which piled up 184 yards in the first half, was held to 20 in the third quarter and Fourcade got nine of those after rolling up 138 in first two periods.

Meanwhile, Anderson carried five times for 50 yards in the third period after going 5 for 16 in the first half. He reeled off a pair of 15-yard runs to set up Lahay's game-tying field goal and darted 16 yards to the Mississippi 9 three plays before Jones' one-yard run put the Razorbacks ahead for good.

FOURCADE SMASHED Manning's record with a 17-yard pass to Malvin Gipson with nine minutes left in the game. Three plays later, he scrambled 32 sensational yards to the Arkansas 23. But three plays after that, he threw his only interception and Walters, who was starting because a midweek injury to cornerback Kim Dameron, made his game-breaking theft.

It was the first regular-season meeting between the two schools since 1961, although Ole Miss has won two Sugar Bowls from Arkansas during that stretch.

Houston buries Utah St

HOUSTON (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Lionel Wilson ran for two touchdowns and passed for another as the University of Houston rolled over Utah State 35-7 Saturday night in a college football game marked by penalties and pass interceptions.

Houston was penalized 208 yards — a school record — and officials walked off 147 yards against Utah State.

Houston intercepted six of Utah State's passes, tying a school record accomplished twice previously. Cornerback Butch LaCroix intercepted four passes for the Cougars.

Wilson ran 61 yards for one touchdown, scampered four yards for another and threw a 3-yard scoring pass to Mark Ford. Allen Polk added two touchdowns on 1-yard dives.

Utah State's only score came early in the game on a 12-yard pass from Chico Canales to Fred Fernandes. But Canales, playing with a bruised back suffered last week, left the game in the second quarter and Houston was able shut down Utah State's passing attack.

BYU bobs Buffs, 41-20

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Jim McMahon passed for 263 yards and three touchdowns before leaving the game early in the third quarter with a knee injury, leading 11th-ranked Brigham Young to a 41-20 rout of Colorado in college football Saturday.

McMahon, who completed 15 of 30 passes and added a pair of NCAA records to the 35 he previously owned, suffered a hyperextended left knee when hit by blitzing Colorado safety Ellis Wood with 13:41 left in the third quarter. He did not return to action as trainers applied ice to the injury, but the full extent of the injury was not immediately known.

Kurt Gunther kicked a 40-yard field goal in the second quarter, and McMahon boosted the lead to 24-0 with a 3-yard scoring pass to freshman wide receiver Glen Kozlowski early in the second half.

Second-string quarterback Steve Young tacked on a pair of second-half scoring passes as the Cougars raised their season record to 4-0.

Southland rips Mustangs

Southland held a 24-0 lead in the first half and outscored MC 38-20 in the final two quarters. Johnny Belcher, Jim Crawford and Cary Brown each scored touchdowns for Midland Christian and Joe Gould caught two passes from Kirk Hobbs to score the points after.

With the loss, Midland Christian fell to 2-2 on the season while Southland remained unbeaten at 3-0. Next week, MC hosts Paint Creek Saturday at 2 p.m. at Simon Field.

Huskies trip Oregon, 17-3

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Sophomore Stewart Hill blocked a punt and Vince Newsome returned it for the only touchdown Washington needed Saturday as the 16th-ranked Huskies downed Oregon 17-3 in the Pacific 10 Conference football opener for both schools.

Goddard Black, Alamo Red win basketball tournaments

Goddard Black and Alamo Red were the big winners in a seventh and eighth grade girls basketball tournament this weekend.

In eighth grade action, Alamo Red posted a 30-28 victory over Goddard Black for the title while Goddard White defeated Alamo Grey 36-28 for third and fourth place. San Jacinto Green stopped San Jacinto White 36-13 for fifth and sixth place.

For the seventh grade title, it was an in school battle as Goddard Black faced and defeated Goddard White in the championship game. Black came away with the victory. No score was reported.

In other seventh grade results, Alamo Red defeated San Jacinto White 28-22 for third and fourth while Alamo Grey downed San Jacinto Green 47-19 for fifth and sixth.

On Tuesday, the ninth grade girls basketball program is scheduled to open its season while seventh grade plays its next games on Wednesday and eighth grade on Thursday.

Baylor struggles past Red Raiders, 28-15

WACO, Texas (AP) — Freshman wingback Horace Ates rambled nine yards for a go-ahead touchdown late in the fourth quarter Saturday night and the Baylor Bears opened defense of their Southwest Conference football title with a hard-earned 28-15 victory over the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

The Red Raiders, hoping to give new Coach Jerry Moore his first SWC win, led 15-14 going into the fourth quarter thanks to a 22-yard scoring run by tailback Anthony Hutchison.

Hutchison chewed Baylor alive most of the night before 40,000 Parents Day patrons, gaining 117 yards on determined slashes.

However, what proved to be the game winning touchdown came midway in the fourth period when Tech punted then roughed returner Gerald McNeil.

With the ball at the Tech 45, quarterback Jay Jeffrey passed 19 yards to Alfred Anderson and Dennis Gentry gained 17 yards on the next play.

The seldom used Ates then scored his first varsity touchdown when most of the Red Raiders thought Walter Abercrombie had the ball on what proved to be a wingback reverse.

Gentry gained 112 yards and Abercrombie 152 yards against the Red Raiders who are now 1-2 for the year and 0-1 in league play. Baylor is 3-1 and 1-0.

John Greve kicked three first half field goals for Tech and Baylor led 14-9 on a 47-yard touchdown pass from Jeffrey to Bruce Davis and Anderson's scoring 6-yard run.

The touchdown underdog Red Raiders jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first quarter as Hutchison tore huge chunks of yardage out of the Bears' defense.

Tech had punted but got new life because of a costly Baylor offside penalty, setting the Red Raiders up at the Bear 29. Baylor finally held on the 9 and Greve kicked his first field goal from 27 yards out.

LSU roughs up Rice, 28-14

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Running back Jesse Miles sprinted for 100 yards and quarterback Alan Risher threw for a pair of touchdowns as Louisiana State University rolled over Rice 28-14 in an intersectional college football game Saturday night.

Risher hit 13 of 16 passing attempts for 139 yards.

Included were touchdown tosses of five yards to backup tight end James White and starting tight end Malcolm Scott.

Risher sat out the fourth quarter after the game was already decided.

Rice, a two-touchdown underdog, marched on a crisp 77-yard drive on the games's first series, with quarterback Michael Calhoun hitting towering tight end Robert Hubble on a six-yard scoring pass.

Miles registered a second-quarter touchdown on a one-yard plunge for LSU. Rice got a face-saving touchdown on a 15-yard pass from Calhoun to Jose Fortune with just under three minutes remaining in the game.

Calhoun was 4-4 on the touchdown march, with 6-foot-8, 250-pound pound Hubble his target on all of his completions.

The game was marred by numerous roughness calls in its early going.

On one seven-play first quarter series, penalty flags were dropped five times.

LSU was assessed yardage twice and three of the calls were offsetting roughness penalties.

LSU was penalized 11 times for 134 yards. Rice was penalized three times for 15 yards.

Of the penalties against LSU, 45 yards came on two pass interference calls as Rice drove for its final touchdown.

Bear nears record

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Alabama's Benny Perrin returned an interception 78 yards for one touchdown and Russ Wood scooped up a fumble and rambled 33 yards for another as the Crimson Tide's defense stymied Vanderbilt 28-7 Saturday night in a Southeastern Conference football game.

The win brought Alabama Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant's career coaching victory total to 309 in 37 years, just five wins short of Amos Alonza Stagg's record 314. Alabama is now 3-1and 1-0 in the SEC, while Vanderbil is 1-2and 0-2.

All of 10th-ranked Alabama's first-half points came courtesy of the defense, including a safety scored midway in the first quarter when Jackie Cline blocked Jim Arnold's punt, sending the ball rolling out of Vanderbilt's end zone.

Two series later, Wood, a defensive end, grabbed the stripped from the arms of freshman quarterback Ardell Fuller and carried it unmolested into the end zone, bringing the score to 9-0 for Alabama.

New MSA soccer facility officially opened Saturday

Two years of waiting for construction to be completed came to an end Saturday morning when the Midland Soccer Association officially opened a new 10-acre soccer facility west of the Cubs Stadium parking lot in Hogan Park.

The ground breaking ceremony began at 10 a.m. and was highlighted by the traditional cutting of the ribbon by Tom Rhea of the MSA and Em Carnett of Midland Parks and Recreation.

The soccer facility consists of seven fields with portable goals donated by Ortloff Corporation and was constructed through a joint effort by MP&R and the MSA with funds donated by the community.

Iowa takes 20-7 upset over UCLA

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Freshman Tom Nichol kicked two field goals and tackle Mark Bortz recovered a fumble in the end zone for a touchdown to boost Iowa to a 20-7 upset of sixth-rated UCLA in college football Saturday.

Quarterback Pete Gales ran 16 yards for Iowa's other touchdown as the Hawkeyes stunned a team from the nation's Ten Ten for the second time in three weeks. Iowa, now 2-1, defeated Nebraska 10-7 two weeks ago when the Cornhuskers were ranked seventh.

Gales scored on a keeper around right end after faking a handoff to give Iowa a 7-0 lead with 5:02 left in the first quarter. His touchdown capped an eight-play, 45-yard drive after UCLA had to punt from its own 12.

UCLA tied the score in the second quarter after defensive tackle Martin Moss recovered a fumble by Iowa's Norm Granger at the Hawkeye 20. Quarterback Tom Ramsey, who was sacked five times in the first half, ran 19 yards to the 1, then scored from there on a sneak with 10:47 left in the second quarter.

Purdue shades Irish

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Quarterback Scott Campbell passed for 246 yards Saturday, including a 7-yard touchdown pass and two-point conversion to flanker Steve Bryant with 19 seconds to go, lifting Purdue to a 15-14 college football upset of 13th-ranked Notre Dame.

Trailing by seven points before the touchdown, Coach Jim Young said he decided to go for two points and the victory instead of a possible tie on a kick because "I felt we would make it. You just have that feeling sometimes, and I felt we had it."

Notre Dame Coach Gerry Faust said the Irish, "just had some real tough breaks. It's tough to take.

"You've got to give their quarterback a lot of credit. He did a heck of a job," Faust said of Campbell. "And give Jim Young credit for going for the two points and making it. I thought we had the makings of a pretty goal-line stand when it was fourth down. The two-pointer was a perfect pass, because I thought we had it pretty well covered. Bryant just made a heck of a catch."

Golphers pound Beavers

Hohensee, a junior college transfer from California, completed 11 of 22 passes for 168 yards before leaving the game late in the third quarter.

His scoring passes covered 8 and 14 yards to tight end Mike Curtis, 1 yard to Jay Carroll, 38 yards to Chester Cooper and 27 yards to Ron Weckbacker.

Orange trips Indiana

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Dave Warner and Jack Gilligan scored on short touchdown runs late in the football game Saturday as Syracuse University won its first game under coach Dick MacPherson by beating Indiana 21-7.

Tailback Joe Morris powered the Syracuse offense by running for 164 yards in 26 carries and taking four passes from quarterback Warner for another 73 yards.

Syracuse took the lead early when Gary Anderson kicked a 23-yard field goal after the Orangemen's opening drive bogged down two yards short of the Indiana goal line. Anderson also kicked a 45-yard field goal in the second quarter to give Syracuse a 6-0 halftime lead.

Wisconsin nips WNU

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Chucky Davis raced for first quarter touchdowns on runs of 30 and 28 yards, and Wisconsin held on to defeat Western Michigan 21-10 in college football Saturday.

Davis scored on Wisconsin's first and eighth plays from scrimmage, and the Badgers, 2-1, played conservative offense and relied on field position to protect their lead most of the rest of the way.

Western Michigan, 2-1, drove to the Wisconsin 5-yard line early in the second quarter, then had to settle for a 22-yard field goal by Mike Prindle.

The Badgers came back to make it 21-3 on a 27-yard touchdown pass from Jess Cole to Marvin Neal with 7:53 left in the game. Western Michigan scored with 9 seconds to play on a 14-yard touchdown pass from backup quarterback Scott Smith to Bob Phillips.

Navy sinks

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan sophomore quarterback Steve Smith ran for one touchdown and passed for another and the seventh-ranked Wolverines held on for a 21-16 victory over upset-minded Navy in a non-conference football game Saturday.

Michigan tailback Butch Woolfolk, who turned in his fifth successive game of 100-plus yards, gave the Wolverines a 7-0 lead with a 4-yard touchdown run in the first quarter.

Smith had a 2-yard touchdown plunge in the second period before Navy placekicker Steven Fehr, who had three field goals for the day, made good on boots of 46 and 31 yards to narrow it to 14-6 at the half.

Late TD lifts Kansas over 'Cats, 21-16

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Tracy Mack bulled into the end zone with 25 seconds remaining, capping a 65-yard drive and a furious comeback that saw Kansas score two touchdowns in the final 5½ minutes and beat Kentucky Saturday 21-16.

Garfield Taylor, subbing for the injured Kerwin Bell, picked up 46 yards in the winning drive and scored Kansaxe fourth period on a 3-yard run.

Tom Griggs kicked two field goals and Rick Strein tied a Kentucky record with a 52-yarder as the Wildcats seemingly out-played the Jayhawks, but were never able to pull away.

Kansas, now unbeaten in three games, recovered a Kentucky fumble late in the fourth quarter to set up Taylor's 3-yard touchdown burst, but, for the second time in the game, missed an attempt for a two-point conversion.

Griggs' 24-yard field goal early in the second period gave Kentucky a 3-2 lead, then the Wilcats went up 10-2 on Randy Jenkins' 18-yard touchdown pass to tight end Jim Campbell.

KSU falls to Drake

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Gary Yagelski's 6-yard touchdown pass to tight end David Borsh with just 34 seconds remaining capped a dramatic rally by unbeaten Drake and gave the determined Bulldogs an 18-17 nonconference victory over Kansas State Saturday.

Yagelski, who also passed for a third-quarter touchdown which got Drake back in the game, took the Bulldogs 77 yards in the final five minutes to notch the touchdown which sent the Big Eight Wildcats down to their second defeat in three games.

Drake, 4-0 for the season, now owns three straight victories over Big Eight opponents.

Penn State clips Huskers

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Brian Franco kicked a school record five field goals and Curt Warner rushed for 238 yards to lead third-ranked Penn State to a 30-24 victory over 15th-ranked Nebraska in nonconference college football Saturday.

Franco provided the winning margin with second-half boots of 20 and 32 yards. The kicks offset touchdown passes of 9 yards to Jamie Williams and 16 yards to Scott Woodard by Nebraska's Mark Mauer.

The Nittany Lions, trailing 24-20, scored on a 2-yard run by fullback Joel Cole and on Franco's record-setting fifth field goal to regain the winning margin in the fourth quarter.

Penn State took advantage of two fumble recoveries to set up Franco's field goals of 48 and 39 yards in the second quarter. Franco also drilled a 29-yarder on the Nittany Lions' first possession of the game.

Nebraska's Roger Craig hurdled in from 3 yards out and Eddie Nell added a 20-yard field goal to give Nebraska a 10-9 lead.

Todd Blackledge brought Penn State back with two big pass plays on a late first-half touchdown drive. He hit Kenny Jackson with a 35-yard scoring toss with 30 seconds remaining, capping an 80-yard march that took 52 seconds. Blackledge then targeted Cole on a two-point conversion to give Penn State a 17-10 halftime lead.

Pokes fall to SD State

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Matt Kofler's second touchdown pass and a 1-yard scoring run by Craig Ellis within three minutes of each other in the third quarter pulled San Diego State from a 10-7 halftime deficit and boosted the Aztecs to a 23-16 intersectional college football victory over Oklahoma State Saturday.

The Aztecs scored in the second quarter after grabbing a fumble deep in Oklahoma State territory. The Cowboys got a field goal from Larry Roach to take the 10-7 lead into the locker room.

Oklahoma State drove 27 yards early in the final quarter and scored a comeback touchdown with Shawn Jones going over from the six to pull within four points before Dave Meyer put the game out of reach with a 47-yard field goal.

Missouri routs Louisville

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Flanker James Caver set up three touchdowns with punt returns, helping unbeaten Missouri crack Louisville's stubborn defense and roll in the second half to a 34-3 college football triumph Saturday.

The host Tigers, working against a five-man Louisville line, netted only 4 yards on 22 rushing tries in the opening two quarters. Two of the carries were from inside the 1 by quarterback mike hyde, who converted both into touchdowns on fourth down.

Caver raced 56 yards with the ensuing kickoff, but the Tigers stalled. Caver then scampered 54 yards on a punt return to the Louisville 5, and Missouri went ahead on Hyde's first sneak.

Strong safety Kevin Potter's interception of a Pat Patterson's pass and 26 yard dash to the Louisville 2 set up Hyde's second touchdown.

In the third quarter, Caver broke loose with a 35-yard punt return to the Louisville 41. Running back Bobby Meyer scored three plays later from the 1, and a 16-yard Caver return preceded Bill White's touchdown from the Louisville 7 later in the period.

Kenny Redfin
Outdoor Columnist

Strong quail populations across most of the state prompted Texas Parks and Wildlife Commissioners to approve higher than normal bag limits for the upcoming quail season.

The commission had delayed setting the bag limits until late August quail counts were completed by Parks and Wildlife Department personnel. A rainy spring and early summer over most of the Lone Star state caused the bumper crop of birds.

Most of South Texas, the Eastern Panhandle-South Plains and a portion of North Central Texas will have a bag limit of 20 quail per day and a possession limit of 60.

Other sections of Texas will have daily limits of 16 or 12, depending on quail population estimates.

The 1981-82 quail season for most counties in the eastern half of the state will be Nov. 14 through Feb. 4, 1982. In the Panhandle, Trans-Pecos and South Texas the season will be Oct. 31 through Jan. 31, 1982. To determine the season in the county to be hunted, consult the department's free 1981-82 hunting regulations leaflet, available at department offices and hunting license outlets across the state. Complte listings of bag limits by county will be distributed to department offices and license outlets by early October.

Bass Expedition: Not since the days of Zane Grey and the search for Dr. Livingston have publications mounted expeditions. But now Outdoor Life magazine is bringing back that spirit of adventure. Officials of the magazine announced that the publication was sponsoring the Great American Bass Expedition.

Leading the expedition will be Fishing Editor Jerry Gibbs, assisted by Associate Editor Lefty Kreh. Also appointed to the magazine staff for the time of the expedition is Ray Easley of Fullerton, Calif. Easley is the man who has caught the largest bass in 49 years.

Clare Conley, Editor-in-Chief of the magazine, explained the purpose of the Great American Bass Expedition as follows: "It has long been the dream of American fishermen to catch a largemouth bass bigger than the world record, which is 22 pounds, four ounces. We thought it would be exciting to see if some of the greatest fishermen in the world such as Gibbs, Kreh and Easley could beat that record if they were given time and the very best equipment. Every fishermen in America will be watching to see if they can do it, so if nothing else it will make a great magazine story for us.

"But there is more to it than that," continued Conley. "These experts will be testing all kinds of tackle and equipment on the big fish, so we'll find out what works and have that to report on, too."

The current world record largemouth was caught by George W. Perry in the summer of 1932 from Montgomery Lake, Geo. The all-out effort by the Outdoor Life editors to break Perry's record was announced at the American Fishing Tackle Manufacturers Association's annual show.

The largest bass caught since that time was taken by Easley. It weighed 21 pounds, 3 1/5 ounces. But it was caught 3,000 miles away in Lake Casitas in California.

When asked where the major fishing effort would take place, fishing editor Gibbs explaned that the exact location will not be announced until very close to the time of the actual fishing. "We don't want to put undo pressure on the water ahead of time," he said. "But we have made an exhaustive study of the best possible places for the expedition to succeed. We came to the conclusion that the best chance we will have is in Southern California."

Gibbs declined to be more specific as to whether only one lake would be fished or several of the famous bass waters in Southern California would be tried.

The fishing editor did explain, however, that the expedition would be concentrated into a 30-day period, which at this time is planned for the last week in February and the first three weeks of March.

What are the chances of the team catching a fish over 22 pounds, 4 ounces? "The odds are against us," Gibbs admitted. "A fish that size has to have seen every lure and bait possible. It's got to be old and very wise. But I think the fish is there and we stand a better than average chance to get it.

NY mile to Maree

NEW YORK (AP) — Sydney Maree, bolting away from the pack with about 200 meters left, scored a decisive victory Saturday in the inaugural Fifth Avenue Mile in the sizzling time of 3 minutes, 47.52 seconds.

It was the second fastest mile ever run, only .19 of a second behind the world mark of 3:47.33 set this summer by Britain's Sebastian Coe.

MATERIALS SUPPLY AND PLANT MAINTENANCE PROFESSIONALS

Enjoy a more challenging career and get paid up to 40 percent more. Join Aramco in Saudi Arabia.

Aramco, the principal oil company helping Saudi Arabia develop its energy resources, is constantly expanding oil sources and developing new fields.

You can make a personal contribution to this effort—and be well rewarded for it.

We have immediate openings in jobs which offer opportunities for rapid professional advancement in the areas of materials supply and oil and gas project maintenance.

Materials Supply

The materials supply organization supports the multibillion-dollar construction program of Aramco. Its widely dispersed operating facilities provide purchasing, traffic, inventory management, and warehouse services worldwide.

If you have the qualifications, we have the following openings now.

System Designer Required: 8 years of diversified materials experience and a degree in Economics, Business Administration or Engineering.

Traffic Planner Required: 8 years' experience in traffic or transportation and a degree in Traffic Management, Economics or Business Administration.

Buyers Required: 5-7years' purchasing experience and a bachelor's degree.

Construction Material Specialist Required: 5 years' diversified materials experience (i.e., procurement, handling, inventory control, traffic forecasting or scheduling) and a bachelor's degree.

Project Material Specialist Required: 5 to 8 years' diversified materials experience and a degree in Engineering.

Project Purchasing Representatives Required: 8 years' experience in project purchasing, project engineering or construction.

Materials Supply Controlman Required: 3 to 5 years' experience working with a variety of materials.

Standardization Engineer Required: 8 years' experience in Engineering Design, Materials or Maintenance Engineering and a bachelor's in Engineering.

Materials Handling Engineer Required: 5 years' experience performing design and/or industrial engineering and a degree in Engineering, preferably mechanical or industrial.

Standardization Analyst Required: 10 to 12 years' experience as a skilled craftsman (electrical, mechanical or instrument), preferably with an oil-producing, refining or petrochemical company.

Plant Maintenance

We require experienced maintenance engineers and technical support specialists. You will help implement large-scale overhaul and repair programs for vast oil and gas processing facilities and the various support systems—for this reason the following openings require an oil and gas background.

Rotating Equipment Engineers—Required: 10 years' experience and a bachelor's degree.

Gas Turbine Engineers—Required: 7 to 10 years' experience and a bachelor's degree.

Contracts Engineers—Required: 5 years' experience and a bachelor's degree.

Vocational Analysts—Required: 7 to 10 years' experience and a bachelor's degree.

Long-Range Planners—Required: 10 to 15 years' experience and a bachelor's degree.

Materials Engineers—Required: 7 to 10 years' experience and a bachelor's degree.

Area Maintenance Engineers—Required: 7 to 10 years' experience and a bachelor's degree.

Repair Shop Personnel—This includes engineers, supervising technicians and machinists.

Required: Engineers need a degree and 5 to 10 years' experience. Technicians need a high school diploma or its equivalent and at least 5 years' experience.

Competitive compensation and benefits

Aramco pays a competitive base salary and a cost-of-living differential that equalizes living expenses between Saudi Arabia and the United States. In addition, Aramco pays an after-tax expatriate premium of 40 percent on the first $30,000 of base salary and a 20 percent premium on the next $20,000. And there is an outstanding combination of benefits: Long vacations, comfortable housing, abundant recreation and an excellent school system.

Newly hired North Americans for Aramco in Saudi Arabia receive a special bonus. After taxes, it equals 10 percent of your annual base salary, up to $5,000.

All of the attractive compensation and benefits are available for married employees who may want to work overseas on a temporary "bachelor" status for the first year. This program includes three free repatriation trips by air during this one-year period, and the option to request family status during that same year.

Walker guides Bulldogs to win

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — All-American tailback Herschel Walker pounded out 176 yards and scored two touchdowns Saturday as the 17th-ranked Georgia Bulldogs rebounded from their first defeat in 22 months to overwhelm South Carolina 24-0 in college football.

Georgia, 3-1, which lost to Clemson 13-3 last Saturday to snap its 15-game winning streak, erupted for three second-half touchdowns after managing only a 3-0 edge at intermission on freshman Kevin Butler's 22-yard field goal.

Walker, however, broke loose for scoring runs of 3 and 8 yards only 5:41 apart in the third period to break the game open. Quarterback Buck Belue added a 28-yard TD strike to Norris Brown, who was alone in the end zone midway through the final period, to close out the scoring.

South Carolina, 2-2, managed only 117 yards and six first downs until the final five minutes as the tough Georgia defense recorded its second shutout in four games.

Walker, who ran the ball 36 times and now has 615 yards for the season, capped an 80-yard drive when he blasted up the middle from three yards out to give the Bulldogs a 10-0 lead with 8:52 gone in the third quarter.

The 6-foot-2, 220-pound sophomore then scored on a sweep around left end with 27 seconds remaining in the period, capping a 47-yard drive set up when linebacker Nate Taylor intercepted a Terry Bishop pass.

MSU flips Florida, 28-7

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Michael Haddix, Mississipi State's leading rusher carried only three times in the first half Saturday but scored on runs of 10 and 4 yards after perfect pitchouts from quarterback John Bond and the 12th-ranked Bulldogs went on to gain a sloppily played 28-7 Southeastern Conference football victory over Florida.

Glen Young, the nation's leading punt returner, iced the game with a 49-yard return of Joe Borajkiewicz's kick at 11:56 of the third quarter. Young had a 100-yard kickoff return wiped out by a clipping penalty just after Wayne Peace threw a 6-yard touchdown pass to Spencer Jackson with 2:47 left in the second period, putting the Gators with in 14-7 at halftime.

And the Bulldogs finally avenged their only SEC loss of 1980, one which cost them a trip to the Sugar Bowl, when Dennis Zinnimon blocked a Borajkiewicz punt and Bobby Junkin returned it 3 yards for a touchdown with 5:55 left in the game.

Vols trip Auburn

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee quarterback Steve Alatorre ran for a touchdown and Fuad Reveiz kicked a field goal Saturday to lift the Volunteers to a 10-7 victory over Auburn in a Southeastern Conference football game.

Alatorre directed Tennessee's offense after freshman starter Alan Cockrell injured his left knee on a hit 2:23 into the first quarter.

Tennessee's first conference victory raised the Vols' record to 2-2. Auburn, under first-year coach Pat Dye, fell to 1-2 overall.

Duke rallies for win

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Ron Sallay, a sophomore quarterback making only his second start, passed Duke's Blue Devils to a come-from-behind 29-24 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Virginia's Cavaliers Saturday.

With Duke trailing, 24-15, with 10 minutes to play, Sallay capped an 80-yard drive with a 25-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Ron Frederick.

Then, after Virginia saw an interception return for a touchdown by by Keith Lee nullified by an interference penalty, Sallay set up the game-winner with a 58-yard bomb to split end Frederick Jones to the Virginia 7. Two plays later, running back Mike Grayson ran in from the 2 with 1:06 showing.

Sallay also completed a 30-yard touchdown pass to Jones and set up a pair of 37-yard field goals by Scott McKinney as he completed 18 of 26 passes for 336 yards. McKinney had a third field goal from 21 yards set up by a Virginia pass interference penalty in the end zone.

Wolfpack rips BC

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Tailback Kelvin Bryant scored four touchdowns and quarterback Rod Elkins passed for three more as unbeaten and ninth-ranked North Carolina crushed Boston College 56-14 in a nonconference college football game Saturday.

A crowd of 48,000 watched as Bryant raised his season's touchdown total to 15. He scored on runs of 2, 2, 4 and 39 yards.

With eight games remaining, Bryant needs six touchdowns to tie the Atlantic Coast Conference record of 21 set in 1970 by the Tar Heels' Don McCauley. In three games he is more than halfway to the NCAA season record of 29 touchdowns set by Lydell Mitchell of Penn State in 1971.

Elkins, who was shaken up on a run in the second quarter, completed four of eighth passes for 89 yards. He threw touchdown passes of 8 and 10 yards to Victor Harrison and a 63-yarder to Mark Smith.

Army nicks Brown

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Army scored two touchdowns and a field goal in the first half Saturday and clinched a 23-17 victory over Brown with a third touchdown in the final minutes in Michie Stadium.

Larry Pruitt, the Army flanker, exploded a 57-yard punt return for the first score and took a 23-yard pass from sophomore quarterback Bryan Allem for the second, with kicker Dave Aucoin adding a 37-yard field goal.

But the Cadets had to put down a second-half uprising by the battling Bruins before registering their first victory of the season and their sixth in a series with the Rhode Islanders extending back to 1894.

With quarterback Hank Landers pitching and tailback Vince Stephens ripping apart the Army defenses the Bruins moved 62 yards in 11 plays. Landers threw 16 yards to flanker Steve Gorriaran to cut Army's lead to 23-10 with 12:18 left in the game.

Schlichter pass Ohio St by Cards

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Art Schlichter passed for two touchdowns as Ohio State built an 18-point lead, and the eighth-ranked Buckeyes held on for a 24-19 victory over Stanford Saturday.

The game matching two of college football's best quarterbacks, Schlichter and Stanford's John Elway, turned into a thriller as Elway tossed a pair of touchdown passes early in the final quarter. But Elway re-injured an ankle which he sprained two weeks ago and missed two series.

Elway returned to the game with 1:33 remaining and immediately completed a 22-yard pass. But Vincent White caught a short pass at midfield, fumbled when tackled by cornerback Jeff Cisco, and the Buckeyes' Marcus Marek recovered the ball with 44 seconds left to clinch the victory over the Cardinals.

Schlichter, who threw both of his scoring passes to tight end Brad Dwelle, finished with 240 yards passing, only 16 of them coming in the last period. Elway hit on 28 of 42 passes for 248 yards, hitting Don Lonsinger and Mike Tolliver for touchdowns.

The Buckeyes, 3-0 this season, led 24-6 in the third quarter after Dwelle's second touchdown. Jim Gayle ran 1 yard for a second-period score which sent Ohio State ahead 7-3, and Bob Atha kicked a 45-yard field goal just before halftime.

BYU bobs Buffs

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Jim McMahon passed for 263 yards and three touchdowns before leaving the game early in the third quarter with a knee injury, leading 11th-ranked Brigham Young to a 41-20 rout of Colorado in college football Saturday.

McMahon, who completed 15 of 30 passes and added a pair of NCAA records to the 35 he previously owned, suffered a hyperextended left knee when hit by blitzing Colorado safety Ellis Wood with 13:41 left in the third quarter. He did not return to action as trainers applied ice to the injury, but the full extent of the injury was not immediately known.

Kurt Gunther kicked a 40-yard field goal in the second quarter, and McMahon boosted the lead to 24-0 with a 3-yard scoring pass to freshman wide receiver Glen Kozlowski early in the second half.

Second-string quarterback Steve Young tacked on a pair of second-half scoring passes as the Cougars raised their season record to 4-0.

Colorado, stymied by turnovers and penalties, got three second-half scores on a pair of Randy Essington touchdown passes and freshman halfback Lee Rouson's 7-yard run. The loss dropped the Buffs to 1-2.

Memphis jolts Tech

ATLANTA (AP) — Sophomore Tom Smith, a scout team member on Monday, came off the bench and engineered three long drives, scoring twice himself, as Memphis State knocked off Georgia Tech 28-15 in college football Saturday.

Smith scored on runs of 9 and 1 yards, the last with 2:50 remaining in the third quarter, to end an 83-yard drive and put the Tigers ahead to stay 21-15.

Memphis State added another touchdown three minutes later on a 13-yard run by Mike Dion after Marvin Chapman had recovered a fumble on the Tech 19.

Cougars stun ASU

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Kevin Morris booted a 29-yard field goal with 5:18 left to give Washington State a 24-21 upset victory over No.18 Arizona State Saturday in the Pac 10 opener for both teams.

Pagel and the Sun Devils couldn't dent the Cougar defense for more than 2 yards in three plays, and on fourth down, the ASU's quarterback's pass was picked off by cornerback Nate Bradley on the WSU 9-yard-line. Bradley returned 36 yards upfield.

A Lee White victory over Hood 21-0 Saturday combined with a Nimitz win over Midland Gold 35-6 has left the ninth grade football league with a pair of unbeaten leaders after three weeks of play.

In other ninth grade action, Crockett scored a 19-0 win over Lee Maroon; Midland Purple defeated Bonham 12-0; and Bowie downed Ector 33-12.

In eighth grade football in the Midland-Odessa Conference Nimitz has sole possession of first place with a 2-0 record. Saturday Nimitz defeated Bonham 25-0. Goddard, which defeated Alamo 40-0, and Crockett, an 18-6 winner over Blackshear, are tied for second at 2-0-1. Also, San Jacinto defeated Bowie 48-0.

Trinity defeated Goddard 6-0 Saturday to keep its record unblemished at 2-0 for the eighth grade Midland City Conference lead. San Jacinto recorded its first win of the season by beating Goddard B 14-0.

In seventh grade action in the American Conference, Goddard Red defeated San Jacinto White 8-0 and Goddard White blanked Alamo Grey 26-0 to remain tied for the league lead. San Jacinto Green posted a 6-0 victory over Alamo Scarlet.

Duran wins

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Roberto Duran continued his way back on the comeback trail Saturday by pounding out a unanimous 10-round decision over a tough but outclassed Luigi Minchillo.

Duran, winning his second consecutive fight since abruptly quitting in the eighth round of his welterweight title defense against Sugar Ray Leonard last November, looked sharp against Minchillo and dominated the fight throughly.

There were no knockdowns in the fight although Duran stunned Minchillo several times in the late rounds.

Duran was cut under the right eye by an apparent butt in the third round but the cut was never reopened by Minchillo.

Cards trip Bucs with three in 7th

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Garry Templeton smacked a game-tying single, and Keith Hernandez drove in the go-ahead run with a triple in a three-run seventh inning that lifted the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday.

The Cards, snapping a four-game losing streak, remained 2½ games behind Montreal in the National League East with each team having eight games left.

Bob Forsch, 10-5, starting with three days' rest, hurled seven innings for the victory and Bruce Sutter stopped Pittsburgh in the eighth and ninth innings for his 24th save.

Pinch-hitter Steve Braun began the seventh with a leadoff walk off loser Mark Lee, 0-2. Forsch sacrificed and Templeton followed wih a run-scoring single to tie the game. Hernandez then lofted a deep fly ball. Center fielder Omar Moreno got a glove on it, but couldn't hold on as Hernandez was credited with a triple, his third hit of the game. George Hendrick followed with an RBI single.

St. Louis jumped to a 2-0 lead in the second as Dane Iorg blasted his second homer of the year, and Ken Oberkfell, Darrell Porter and David Green followed with consecutive singles off starter Luis Tiant. It was Green's first major league hit and RBI.

Pittsburgh tied it in the fourth as Dave Parker lashed a two-out single, and Mike Easler and Johnny Ray belted consecutive RBI doubles.

Bill Madlock delivered a two-out, RBI single in the fifth to snap the 2-2 tie. The hit came after Moreno was hit by a pitch and stole second.

Expos dump Mets

MONTREAL (AP) — Ray Burris and Woodie Fryman combined on an eight-hitter while rookie Terry Francona had three hits and scored two runs as the Montreal Expos defeated the New York Mets 4-2 Saturday for their seventh consecutive victory.

The Expos began the game 2½ games ahead of St. Louis in the National League East.

Burris, 8-7, allowed the Mets a first-inning run after walking leadoff batter Lee Mazzilli. Frank Taveras' sacrifice advanced Mazzilli before Dave Kingman scored him with a two-out single.

The Expos rebounded with a run in the first against Greg Harris, 3-5. Warren Cromartie doubled and Larry Parrish singled for the run.

Homer lifts Reds

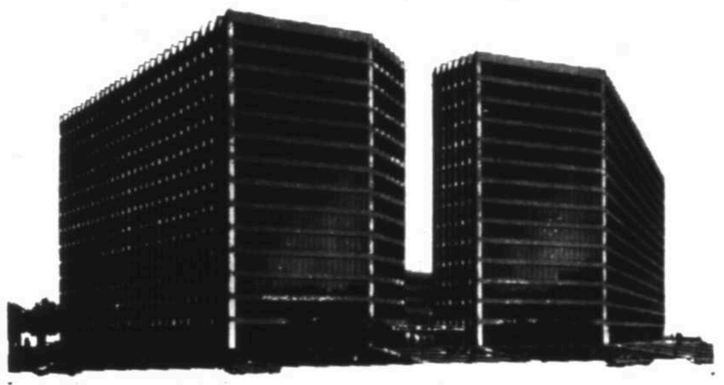
ATLANTA (AP) — Paul Householder broke up a scoreless duel between Bruce Berenyi and Phil Niekro with a two-out, two-run home run in the fifth inning to give the Cincinnati Reds a 2-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves for their 10th win in the last 12 games.

Niekro, 7-6, departed after allowing only three hits in the six innings he worked. He gave up a one-out, infield single to Ken Griffey in the first, a leadoff single by Joe Nolan in the second and Householder's homer.

Berenyi, 9-5, allowed five hits and struck out nine before giving way to Tom Hume, who started the eighth and hurled the final two innings to gain his 12th save. He struck out all threee batters in the ninth.

The Reds got all the runs they needed when Householder, who came up from Indianapolis Sept. 1, connected for his second homer. After Ray Knight flied out, Ron Oester walked and moved to second on a sacrifice by Berenyi. Householder then blasted a drive over the right field wall.

Tax-Free Savings Interest From Midland National. Coming October 1



The President's new tax bill will soon be in effect. This means that beginning October 1, we can offer you our Tax-Free Interest Savings Plan. With our plan, you'll be able to earn up to $1,000 (individual return) or $2,000 (joint return) of tax-free interest.

Our one-year savings certificate will pay interest equal to 70% of the average investment yield of the most recently auctioned 52-week Treasury Bill. And, the interest rate applicable at the time you open your account is guaranteed for one full year.

Certificates purchased on October 1 and 2 will earn 12.61%. (A new rate will be effective October 5.) To equal the 12.61% tax-free rate, you would have to earn 18.01% if you're in the 30% tax bracket, 21.01% in the 40% tax bracket, and 25.22% in the 50% tax bracket.

To open your account, all that's required is a minimum deposit of $500 for a one-year period. However, you'll probably want to invest more in order to take advantage of this great tax savings.

Our new Tax-Free Interest Savings Plan is just one of the many services available to you at Midland National, where you'll find professionals dedicated to serving your banking needs.

So stop by on or after October 1. And we'll show you how to put our Tax-Free Interest Savings Plan to work for you.

Brewers gain first

DETROIT (AP) — Ben Oglivie's two-run homer in the eighth inning helped carry the Milwaukee Brewers into first place in the American League East with a 4-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers Saturday.

It was the second game in two days the Brewers beat Detroit with late-inning home runs.

Robin Yount's three-run homer with two out in the ninth inning lifted the Brewers to an 8-6 triumph Friday night.

Yount began Saturday's rally in the eighth with a single off pitcher Milt Wilcox, 11-9. Cecil Cooper's single moved Yount to third. Ted Simmons knocked in Yount with a grounder, and Oglivie followed his 13th home run of the season, to right field, giving Milwaukee a 4-1 lead.

Tribe nips Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Toby Harrah, Ron Hassey and Rick Manning drove in two runs each Saturday, and the Cleveland Indians knocked Boston from a share of the lead in the American League East with a 7-5 victory over the Red Sox.

The Indians rapped Boston starter Dennis Eckersly, 9-7, and reliever Tom Burgmeier for 15 hits, all singles.

Jorge Orta led the Cleveland attack with three hits, scoring after each. Harrah, Mike Hargrove, Von Hayes and Duane Kuiper had two hits apiece.

The Indians scored four runs in the first inning and added single runs in the third, fifth and seventh innings, hanging on to hand Boston only its fourth loss in 13 games.

A's roll over Chisox

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Steve McCatty threw an eight-hitter and Mickey Klutts smacked two home runs as the Oakland A's beat the Chicago White Sox 5-1 Saturday to move into first place in the American League West by three percentage points over Kansas City.

McCatty became the second 14-game winner in the AL. Only Lamar Johnson's first homer of the season kept McCatty, 14-6, from posting his fifth shutout. The victory was his sixth straight and his 15th complete game.

McCatty's performance and timely hitting by the A's spoiled a fine outing for losing pitcher Britt Burns, 9-6. Burns yielded six hits and struck out nine, tying his career high, before being relieved by Dewey Robinson in the eighth inning.

But the A's got all the runs they needed from him in the bottom of the second inning after Johnson had homered off McCatty for the first homer by any White Sox first baseman this season.

Angels thump Jays

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Bobby Grich continued enjoying a powerful second half of the season Saturday afternoon, but for the California second baseman his average is the most important statistic.

"I'd love to be able to tell my grandchildren I hit .300 one year," said Grich, who powered his 13th homer of the second season and 19th of the year to lead the Angels to a 6-3 win over Toronto.

That was Grich's only hit in two official at-bats and raised his batting average to .299. His high mark was .294 in 1979.

Murcer's home run gives Yankees win

NEW YORK (AP) — Pinch-hitter Bobby Murcer clubbed a three-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the New York Yankees a 6-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday night.

With the Yankees trailing 4-3, Rick Cerone opened the ninth with a walk off Tippy Martinez, his fifth walk in four innings of hitless pitching. Bobby Brown sacrificed Cerone to second and 1980 Cy Young Award winner Steve Stone, 4-7, relieved.

He got Willie Randolph to hit a grounder, but Doug DeCinces booted the ball for an error, setting up Murcer's homer into the right-field seats off Tim Stoddard. It was Murcer's sixth homer of the season and third as a pinch hitter.

Royals fall in 9th

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dan Meyer scored from third base on Terry Bulling's one-out grounder to highlight a two-run ninth inning rally that gave the Seattle Mariners a 4-2 victory over the error-plagued Kansas City Royals Saturday night.

The loss was the sixth in eight games for Kansas City and dropped the Royals into second place in the American League West, a half-game behind first-half winner Oakland.

It was the fifth straight victory for the Mariners, who remained 3½ games behind the A's.

Meyer opened the ninth-inning rally with a single and moved to third when right fielder Darryl Motley kicked the ball. After Paul Serna was hit by a pitch, Bulling drilled a hard ground ball to Dave Chalk, who juggled the ball and then threw late to catcher John Wathan.

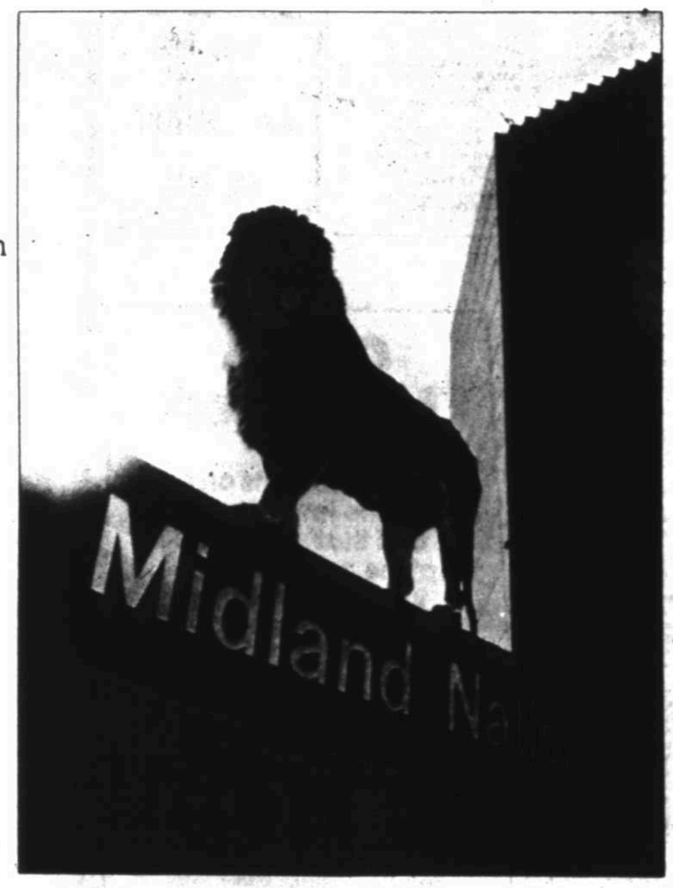
Taking a strong financial stand in Midland.



On July 3rd, 1903, Midland National opened its doors in the old Llano Hotel, on the northwest corner of Wall and Main.

We were just starting out, but we already had an unwavering commitment to sound, healthy growth. And we were eager to lead the way, searching for new territory to explore.

For thirty years, we kept pace with Midland's ranching, agricultural and mercantile interests; as they grew, so did we.

With the discovery of oil here, our pace quickened. We took strides to introduce new banking services. We were the first bank in the Permian Basin to add a petroleum engineer to our staff.

Today, our Oil and Gas Division is staffed entirely by petroleum bankers who are also petroleum engineers; bankers who personally analyze collateral, using our in-house computer and the latest petroleum evaluation techniques.

Our Commercial Loan Officers are highly trained professionals who can give quick answers on short-term working capital loans, lines of credit or term loans for a growing business.

Our Trust Department specializes in personal trusts and estate planning, and also in setting up corporate profit sharing and pension plans.

Today, Midland has come of age, and so have we. We have $11 billion in assets behind us. And ahead of us is a future dedicated to helping Midland reach her full potential.

Whatever your financial needs, bring them to Midland National. Contact us at (915) 685-5000.

Longshot leads Fame Classic

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Longshot Morris Hatalsky, a career struggler on the pro golf tour, fired a 3-under-par 68 Saturday for a 1-stroke lead in the third round of the $250,000 Hall of Fame Classic.

Hatalsky, a non-winner in six years of tour activity and 111th on the money-winning list this year, put together a 54-hole total of 204, 9 strokes under par on the famed No.2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

"I can't explain it," said the bright and chipper Hatalsky, who played the front side in a spectacular 31. "It's just that all parts of my game seem to be coming together right now. But there's no secret to it. I'm playing better. I feel confident out there. I feel secure out there."

"I'd love to play like that tomorrow," he said, looking ahead to Sunday's final round of the chase for a $45,000 first prize.

While Hatalsky was establishing the surprise lead, the hopes of two of the game's more established stars, Jack Nicklaus and Ray Floyd, suffered mild setbacks.

Nicklaus, seeking to end a season-long winless string in his last start of the year, had to work hard to salvage a round of par 71 in the warm, sunny weather and slipped another stroke back at 209.

Floyd, hoping to make up ground on some absent rivals in the chase for leading money-winner and Player of the Year honors, could do no better than another 70 and was at 210.

Jerry Pate, the second-round leader, double bogeyed the 13th hole and had to put on a fast, birdie-birdie finish to salvage a 71 and close to within 1 stroke at 205.

"I didn't feel very well today, but we're not in a position where we can say we don't want to go to work today," Pate said. "I don't know what it is, flu, stomach virus, whatever.

"I felt, starting out, I'd be glad to shoot par, and that's what I got. I'm glad I was able to birdie 17 and 18."

Those two birdies, on putts of 15 and 10 feet, kept him close.

"I feel very much into it as a threat tomorrow," he said. "I feel like I'm hitting the ball well enough to put some pressure on him."

D.A. Weibring, with a 66 that ranked as the best round of the day, vaulted into a tie for third place at 207. Also at that figure was Tim Simpson, who matched par 71.

Nicklaus got to within 2 strokes of the lead with birdies on two of the first four holes, but fell well back with a couple of bogeys and a double bogey on the 12th before the made a mild rally.

MHS is 3rd in Key City meet

ABILENE — The Midland High volleyball team came away with a third place finish in the Key City Volleyball Tournament held here this weekend.

The Bulldogs opened the tournament with a victory over Breckinrige 15-3, 15-6 and followed with a loss to Abilene Cooper 6-15, 7-15. In the final match of the weekend, MHS posted a 12-15, 15-13, 15-4 victory over Lubbock Monterey for third place honors.

The Bulldogs return to their district schedule Tuesday night against the Bronchos of Odessa High in Odessa after the junior varsity game scheduled for 6 p.m.

United Way agencies don't just spring up overnight, and becoming one is not simply a matter of filing an application. Since the mid-1970's only one group, Camp Fire Inc., had joined the list of non-profit human service organizations that make up the United Way, until earlier this year when two new agencies were admited.

Those agencies, the Midland Rape Crisis Center and the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, began working with the United Way in 1980 in preparation for applying to become member agencies.

Basically, they were required to meet two criteria: that they offer essential services to the community which (1) could not be provided more efficiently by another agency or organization, and (2) would serve unmet needs of individuals or families in Midland.

Bill Morrow, chairman of the Admissions Study Committee of the United Way Planning Division, was part of a task force that studied admissions criteria last year.

"The thing we have tried to stress for the last two years," he explained, "is financial responsibility at the admission level." As a result, agencies seeking admission to the United Way are now required to submit as part of their application current and future budget information, data on the operation of their board of directors, descriptions of the programs or services they offer, and accounting and auditing data.

In addition, study committee members request evaluations of the applying agency from other groups with which they cooperate. For example, in reviewing the Rape Crisis Center's application, the study committee solicited input from the Midland County district attorney, Sheriff's Department, Midland Police Department and Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room personnel.

When the study committee's assessment of the agency was complete, the planning division confirmed that the agencies' applications were in order, and the United Way board of directors voted on May 28 to admit the agencies for funding in 1982.

Not all groups which approach the United Way seeking admission are accepted. Morrow pointed out that two groups discussed the possibility of agency status with the United Way last year, but failed to provide the financial data required to complete their application.

But for the agencies that have been admitted, the United Way provides the support of the largest voluntary organization in Midland, reaching beyond a unified fund-raising effort to include such support as management assistance and coordination of community resources, all of which help ensure the efficient use of the community's financial support.

Midland Rape Crisis Center

Midland Rape Crisis Center began operation in 1979 in response to a growing awareness of the need to assist the victims of rape and sexual assault. In addition to its 24-hour hotline manned by trained volunteers, the Center provides crisis intervention counseling, public awareness programs and rape prevention programs, and comprehensive volunteer training.

Under the direction of a 10-member board of directors, a director and assistant director administer these programs.

In its first year of operation, the Center logged 38 cases, representing a higher number of rapes than was reported to the police and sheriff's departments during the same period. RCC director Nan Gordon explained that the service provided by the Center to those clients reached from meeting the victim at the hospital or police station through what often turned into months of legal proceedings and trial of the attacker.

Many time, too, she added, members of the victim's family benefitted from counseling available to them as well as to the victim herself. Also, the Center has received many calls from women who are victims of assaults whih occurred several years in the past and who still need counseling. Other calls, she said, come from female victims of domestic violence and other people seeking various sorts of emergency help.

What's new in United Way

Since its beginning, most of the Rape Crisis Center's funding has been provided by a five-year grant from the Criminal Justice Department under the Law Enfocement Assistance Administration program. Other sources of funding for the Center include individual donations, clubs, churches and civic organizations.

The LEAA program was developed to assist human service organizations (such as the Rape Crisis Center and Big Brothers/Big Sisters) that work with law enforcement agencies. The funding was made on a declining basis and was designed to assist the agency until it could become self sufficient or identify other sources of funding.

When the RCC applied for United Way agency membership, it had been notified that the LEAA funding would be terminated before the five-year period ended. The duration of the grant is now uncertain, but by accepting the RCC as a member agency the United Way has assured it of an ongoing source of funding.

Permian Basin Center For Battered Women and Their Children

Like the Rape Crisis Center, the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children was started as a community effort in 1979. A group of ministers and other concerned citizens determined the need for some sort of emergency hotline, which initially was operated in the home of a volunteer. Later that year, the need for a shelter was realized, and the center moved to a series of increasingly larger apartments.

In 1980, under the direction of Sally Brammer, the center moved into a larger home, which can accommodate as many as 30 women and children. Ms. Brammer explained that most of the cost of the home was donated, with $5,000 per year for the next four years still being owed on its cost. Some structural repairs on the home are needed, Ms. Brammer explained, and the Center's board has determined to take care of them as money is available.

And the availability of money for the Center has been a determining factor since its beginning. Ms. Brammer explained that a priority of the Center's board is that it be community-based. For that reason, its leaders have looked carefully at any funding they accepted to ensure that they did not find themselves under obligations and restrictions that might not be best for their particular program. Consequently, the Center does not utilize any federal funds

Under a law recently passed by the Texas Legislature, the Center will begin in 1982 receiving 1/20 of the alcohol taxes collected in Midland Conty. But, Ms. Brammer explained, since they don't know just what amount that percentage represents, they haven't earmarked the money.

Operated by Ms. Brammer and an assistant director/volunteer coordinator, and a house manager, the Center strives to assist battered women in developing self esteem through self reliance. Last year the average stay at the Center was 19 days, and this year many women, unable to find other housing, are remaining at the Center for up to 30 days.

When a call for help comes in on the Center's hotline—sometimes from a home, sometimes from a hospital, or sometimes from the police—Ms. Brammer or a volunteer meets the woman at a location other than the shelter and takes her there. If she and her children have left home wih no extra clothes, donated clothing is available for them at the Center.

Ms. Brammer added that school officials and employers usually are very cooperative in concealing the location of the children and women.

By offering this kind of non-judgmental support to women and children whose homes are no longer safe, the Center, through the continuity of United Way funding, will assure that those threatened by domestic violence have some place to turn.

All the sparkling silver

Joel Langford sells fine silver. But his silver is different. Instead of the machine-manufactured pieces sold by many silver dealers, Langford sells only hand-crafted silver pieces—and every piece in his collection is at least 100 years old.

Langford, who is from Houston, is a fourth generation antique silver dealer and is considered an international authority on fine silver and silver plate. He was in Midland recently to show part of the Langford Collection, which contains some 170 pieces and is valued at around $320,000, at Kruger Jewelers.

He represents Langford's Silver Galleries of London, which is operated by his father and grandmother. The family business was started by his great-grandparents who he said came to the United States from London about four years ago because "Americans are our most consistent clients and are also the most appreciative clients."

Langford plans to stay in America and has since become an citizen of the U.S. He was married to a native Texan earlier this year. "This is the country that is providing my income, so this is where my allegience lies now," he noted.

Langford said he chose to show his collection in Midland because "There's a lot of wealth in this city." He also said that he believes that Midlanders are the type of people who like to spend their money on quality products.

Included in his collection are pieces by Paul Storr, a royal English silversmith who is considered to be the master silversmith of all time. Storr was silversmith to English kings George III and George the IV, and continued into the Victorian era of England. The collection also features works by Hester Bateman, who Langford called the "best known female silversmith of all time."

Also featured are a number of curio pieces, such as a cream boat made from a cowery shell with sterling silver serpentine legs and handies, dated 1813. Some of the most beautiful items are silver inlaid with enamel. Langford called this technique plique-a-joure.

All pieces for sale in the collection are accompanied by a certificate of authenticity. Some of the pieces, however, are from the Langford's personal collection and are for viewing only.

Although there are pieces from Russia, India, France and Sweden, most of the silver in the collection is English. "English silver is the best in the world," Langford explained, "It's the thing we do best."

The reason for this, according to Langford, is because of the tight governmental control England has always exerted over its silversmiths. "The quality control (in England) was the strictest in the world," he said. Every piece of English silver made since 1400 has been required to be checked by an assayer's office. The assayer's office then gave each piece a "Hallmark," which provides such information as the date it was made, the city in which it was made and the name of the maker.

Langford added that antique silver makes a good investment. "I think that just buying the metal itself is foolish," he explained, "but with antique silver items, people are buying a work of art."

He stressed the importance of using the items rather than just owning them for investment purposes. "These things are not just for looking at, they are for using," he said. "They are things you'll get pleasure from and that you will be able to pass on to your children."

He also said that most antique silver items are enduring, whereas the machine-made pieces available today are not. "They (antique silver works) are as good today as the day they were made," he noted. "You get what you pay for."

New treatment for diverticulosis available

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: I've had diverticulosis for many years and my doctor always told me I should be on a bland, low-residue diet. Now, the old doctor is dead and a new young man has taken his place.

I am scared to death because the new doctor wants me to be on a high roughage diet and eat raw fruits and vegetabls that I haven't eaten for years. I don't want to upset myself, but he says this is the newest way.

Could you please tell me what you think of this new diet? — Mrs. C.M.J.

Dear Mrs. C.M.J.: Your old doctor was giving you the best advice he knew at the time, but newer research has shown that a high roughage diet may help, rather than hurt, diverticulosis. It is thought that a bland, low-residue diet may even contribute to the development of diverticulosis.

Listen to your young doctor and start enjoying foods that you have missed for many years. My advice is to start slowly, however. Add only one new food for every two or three days. Fruits ansd vegetables with edible skins are excellent. Use whole grain breads and cereals, and relax.

You may want to try a teaspon of Miller's Bran, sprinkled on salads, cereals and other(foods. It can be purchased in a variety of markets and stores. More can be added to foods as you increase your fiber intake.

A word of caution — excessive fiber, added too quickly, can cause flatulence and diarrhea, so be careful.

Dear Shirley: I saw an add in a magazine for a new vitamin "F" that said it is a new discovery and is an essential nutrient for the skin. I had never heard of it before. Can you tell me what it is, and do you recommend it?

I live in Arizona and my skin is very dry. Would this vitamin help me? — D.K.

Dear D.K.: There is no such thing as vitamin F. The manufacturers are using an old name or abbreviation for "essential fatty acids," —hardly a new discovery! You will get ample essential acids when you eat properly from the four food groups—meat, fish, fowl, fruits and vegetables, bread and cereals, milk and dairy products.

Use a good moisturizer and sun screens every day. Exercising your body also helps keep skin healthy, by increasing blood flow.

Dear Shirley: When is the best time to lose weight? I am gaining even more, because I keep postponing going on a diet.

There have been so many reasons lately, that I can't loseweight. First, I changed jobs and had to move to a new city. Then I won a free trip, and now my sister is getting married, so I can't diet now either.

What am I going to do? There is no time that I can do it, and I have gained 23 pounds this year. Do you have any suggestions for people who do not have time to lose weight?—A.N.

Dear A.N.: Yes — change your attitude! There will never be a "right time" because there are always things coming up that can be used as excuses for not losing weight, if you permit it. The best time to lose weight is right now, no matter what. Never posptone getting rid of unwanted fat because it will only get worse.

Take yourself in hand. Set a goal. Cut your quantities of food in half, and make yourself exercise every day — even a few minutes will help, and remember that no once can do it, but yourself.

Make the most of any quiet times you have to increase your exercise, and avoid your food booby traps. Watch yourself constantly and eventually your weight will drop.

Avoid fad diets because they are depressing and the weight always returns, with often more than you had before you started. A change to positive attitudws, consistent exercise and monitoring fod quantities is the only way it really works.

If you desire my pamphlet "Changing Bad Habits and Behaviour Modification" and information on my "Home Study Weight Control Program," send $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Shirley Bright Boody, Box 1038, Rancho Mirage, Calif. 92270.

Make learning to play piano fun

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Some people express themselves with words. Richard Bradley expresses himself in music.

Bradley, 38, sits behind his cluttered desk at the offices of his New York City-based music publishing business. It is impossible for him to explain his piano-teaching method without springing from his desk to a nearby piano.

"Did you ever play the piano?" he asks. "No? Well, here, you play this one key and I'll play the rest, OK?" And he plays a little melody.

Bradley is energetic and enthusiastic. His approach to teaching the piano is to find a student's interest, whether it's playing country and Western music or church hymns, and then to make it fun to learn.

"I think a teacher has to focus in on music that a person is going to relate to, and because of our experiences in life, we all relate to different things," Bradley said.

"If you came to me and I said, you're going to learn Bach and you've never heard Bach before in your life, and you said, gee, I'd really like to play Willie Nelson, most teachers would say, well, you learn your Bach real well and eventually you'll be able to play Willie Nelson. Well, I think that's kind of backward," he said.

Bradley has developed two lesson books. The first, published about four years ago, is for preschool children and is titled, "Bradley's Color My Piano Lesson."

"My book gives a child all the basic knowledge required to play the piano, starting with counting numbers and learning the musical alphabet," he said. "It will help a child by familiarizing him with lines, spaces, the staff, notes, charts, et cetera, all introduced by coloring, games, and fun pieces to play on the piano."

For the adult beginner, Bradley recently developed "The Instant Virtuoso: How to Succeed at Piano Without Really Trying," emphasizing ear training, technique, rhythm, sight-reading and theory.

In developing his teaching materials, Bradley says he always tries to find the key that will unlock his students' interest.

"What does a 4-year-old relate to, for example? What songs? Not Bach and Beethoven. They don't even know the Beatles, they don't know Billy Joel. But they do know commercials. The kids hear commercials and they know them and they're thrilled to play them," he said.

So, Bradley has put together a songbook of commercials for young students.

For the adult beginner, it is more or less a question of providing some form of "instant gratification," he said.

"What we tried to do for the adults was to come up with a way where they could actually read and play things of legitimate music immediately," Bradley said. He said many adults, if they can't learn something in a certain period of time, will quit and go on to something else, such as tennis, sailboating or canasta lessons.

He expressed dismay at the number of students, taught by the more traditional methods, who become frustrated and quit their lessons before they've really had a chance to enjoy themselves.

"Music is an art, it's a way of self-expression," he said. "I think everyone should have some form of music in his life."

Children should start taking piano lessons "when they ask, when their interest is there," Bradley believes.

"A child may never ask," he says. "But I think if a parent will show them, take them to a concert, watch Liberace on television or Peter Nero or whoever it is, and then expose them to as much or as many different types of music as possible, the interest will be there."

Bradley, a graduate of Chicago's Conservatory of Music, has been a concert organist, organ editor for Hansen Publications, and music director for Columbia Pictures Publications. About four years ago, he formed his own music publishing company.

Doll-making hobby becomes big business in gift items

By CYNDI MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — What started as a small, one-woman business out of a Franklin home has burgeoned into a million-dollar gift-making industry.

Bubby Chubs, so named because Sandy Zeiler has a friend who nicknamed her children that, started when Mrs. Zeigler made a doll out of a child's sock, "just on a whim," she said.

Six years and hundreds of dolls later, Mrs. Zeigler and her husband, George, own and run a plant in Franklin which distributes a variety of handmade children's gifts throughout North America and Europe.

Mrs. Zeigler, 43, said she had sent a doll to a New York friend who was a sales representative for several gift firms. Instead of replying by letter, her friend just started sending orders, she said.

Zeigler, 46, who was a stockbroker at the time, gave her $400 and told her to go for it.

Mrs. Zeigler continued the business on her own for several years, enlisting the help of Franklin homemakers who would sew and paint the items from their homes.

But in 1980, Zeigler entered the business full time.

"I decided it had definite potential," he said. "We both enjoyed it, and it was getting to be a real business, where it had been just a hobby."

After the business took over two houses they owned in Franklin and a small industrial building, Bubby Chubs moved to a larger plant in 1980.

Now, the 7,500-square-foot buiding is the working site for 25 or 30 workers, depending on the season, Mrs. Zeigler said. And, about 70 persons are employed in their homes, sewing and stuffing dolls and painting other gifts.

Mrs. Zeigler does most of the designing for the line of about 45 items. One of her favorites is a stuffed "Russian rabbit ballerina," named Olga Rabbitnikov. The 14-inch-tall rabbit "is fat and chubby, with a tutu and all," she said. The dolls are hand-stuffed, with hand-embroidered faces.

"At first it was just a hobby," Zeigler said. "But when you start competing in major markets, it's another ballgame."

Pets' cosmetic surgery is controversial issue

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Louis L. Vine's four-legged animal patients come from across the nation to have their ears cropped, their tails trimmed and, on occasion, to have orthodontic braces fitted to rein in protruding incisors.

But veterinarians are divided over whether the fashionable cosmetic procedures are safe or desirable.

Vine, a veterinarian in Chapel Hill and author of several pet-care books, said he saw nothing wrong with clipping a dog's ears or tail or declawing a cat as long as it was done with anesthesia and "the utmost care. There's no undue pain or suffering."

Vine helps a major department store in New York, which breeds Doberman pinschers as security guards, transform the floppy-eared police pups into ferocious-looking fighters by cropping their ears.

Others disagree with Vine's philosophy. A group in Connecticut is lobbying for a ban on the "unacceptable mutilation" of animals through cosmetic surgery and Great Britain has already banned ear cropping.

Dr. Michel Fox, a Chicago veterinarian writing in a recent issue of a national magazine, argued that ear-cropping unnecessarily harms the animal to give the owner a sense of fashion. He said such dogs and cats who'd had their claws removed could face serious post-operative complications, such as collapsed and deformed ears in the dogs and infections in both animals.

"A minority of vets — perhaps 15 or 20 percent — won't do it," said Dr. Stephen Crane, head of the department of companion animal and special species medicine at the new North Carolina State University School of Veterinary Medicine. "If it's properly done, if the best surgical techniques are followed, if the client is seeking it, it's not inhumane or unethical."

But he said there were few, if any, medical reasons for such cosmetic surgery. Crane estimated that about 5 percent of the surgical procedures performed by veterinarians are cosmetic.

Prices for cosmetic surgery range from $4 to $25 to clip dog tails, $50 to $300 to crop dog ears and $50 to $75 to remove cat claws. Most vets prefer to operate on dogs before they are 12 weeks old.

Canned wine?

GEYSERVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Six-pack wine?

Canned wine, he said, will remain "equal to glass bottling in quality up to 12 months."

Another winery test-marketed canned wine to airlines as a fuel-saving measure recently. According to a spokesman for the winery, a case of wine in aluminum cans weighs just under 23 pounds, less than half as much as a 48-pound case of bottled wine.

La Paloma featured in Parade of Homes

Kelsi Homes, Inc. will present La Paloma for the upcoming 1981 Parade of Homes. The brick veneer exterior is trimmed with cedar and the home features two fireplaces and a 20-foot vault ceiling.

The house also has a spacious family room with fireplace and wet bar that serves out onto the patio. The formal dining room is octagon-shaped and has a built in hutch. There is a planter in the entry way, complimented by skylight.

Earth tones dominate the large master bedroom which also features a fireplace, vault ceiling, ceiling fan and a separate entrance to the patio.

Two other bedroom and 2½ baths carry the earth tone color scheme throughout the home. The master bath features dual dressing areas, a steeping tub, skylight and a sit down shower.

Specialties of the roomy kitchen include Whirlpool appliances, ash cabinets, a breakfast area, a built in hutch, walk-in closet and a see-through window to the family room. The floor is Italian tile which is carried into the utility room and the ½ bathroom.

All windows are double insulated and the home has energy-efficient insulation.

The Kelsey entry is one among 22 homes in the Midland Homebuilders Association Parade of Homes. Ticket sale proceeds will benefit Christmas in April, Midland's housing repair program for the elderly and handicapped. Tickets are $1.

The Parade is scheduled Dec. 12-20 in the Skyline Terrace West addition, west of Midland Park Mall and east of Midland Drive.

Tickets will be available in October.

Group observes 12th anniversary

After 12 years and 11 successful fund-raising events, Act IX, auxiliary to the Midland Community Theatre celebrated its anniversary at its first meeting of the year.

Act IX was organized to assist the theatre in carryng out its service and programs. The name Act is taken from the first letters in the words Auxiliary to Community Theatre; and nine is taken from 1969, the year it was formed.

The group's first meeting was held on Sept. 22, 1969, and a slate of officers elected. Committees formed included dressing rooms, props storage, wardrobe, sewing room and office volunteers. Act IX began operations with less than 40 members.

Today, Act IX boasts that its quota of 112 active members has been filled with 94 associate members. Thirty-one new active members were welcomed in early September at an orientation and coffee. Officers and committee chairmen were present to brief the new members of their duties as active members.

Although Act IX members have done everything from conducting tours of the theatre for community groups to "cleaning house" when fire broke out in Theatre One, its primary purpose is to promote interest in Midland c[illegible] unity theatre, to assist the theatre staff in maintaining and opeating its programs, to assist the board of governors in carrying out its functions and to raise funds.

Promoting interest is publicity director Kathy Martin, writing articles for the "Cues," MCT's newsletter, the "Prompeter," MCT's program handouts, newspapers and magazines.

Assisting the theatre in operations is Jamie Anderson, house manager chairman. Mrs. Anderson coordinates Act IX members to take tickets, distribute programs and handle refreshments for every performance at MCT. Mailing chairman Debbie Wilson and her committee handle all theatre mailings, including the massive membership drive in November.

Last year, Act IX members mailed over 24,000 "Cues" and 17,000 mass mailers. Gallery committee chairman Linda Gilmore is in charge of finding artists to hang their work in the theatre gallery. Act IX members also help hang and take down displays.

Assisting the board of governors is Jill Heith, hospitality chairman, who, along with her committee, serves a buffet luncheon at the board's monthly meeting.

Raising funds finds Jim Waterman, projct chairman, and her committee already working on the second Act IX charity antiques show to be held at the Chaparral Center April 30-May 2. "The 1981 Antiques Show was a tremendous success. It enabled Act IX to give $20,000 to MCT and was the initial show of what should prove to be a very successful continuing project," says Susan Wilson, 1981 projects chairman of the show.

Other committee chairmen for Act IX are Bridget Gossett, newsletter; Linda Anderson, yearbook; Dawn Collins, programs; Shari Koziol, nominating; Marion Liedtke, telephone; Betty Lou Garrigan, finance; and Rhonda Braun, membership. Committee heads and officers are the board of directors of Act IX.

Axt I regular meetings are on the second Thursday of each month in Theatre I. Coffee is served at 9 a.m. and meeting begins at 9:30 a.m. Guests are welcome at any regular meeting.

To London on the Concorde

By Carolyn Fitz-Gerald

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Well-traveled Midlander Carolyn Fitz-Gerald takes another trip, this time on the famed Concorde.)

Superman is not the only thing faster than a speeding bullet—take the Concorde from New York to London and you will travel up to twice the speed of sound which is even faster than a bullet's 3,000 miles per second.

While it sounds adventurous, passengers who don't look out the window or touch the friction warmth on the curved walls created by speeds over 1,400 miles per hour would never know they were playng Superman until they set down at London's Heathrow Airport after 3 1/2 hours instead of the usual 7 or 8.

For the intrepid, a look out the window reveals a violet colored sky with the lower atmosphere hazily defined in shades of grey, all of which is vaguely reminiscent of television's "Twilight Zone."

Already feeling a little eerie, imagine my shock when I stepped into the cockpit where the panel was lit up with an array of blinking controls like something out of "Star Wars" and found that the captain looked and sounded a lot like Rod Serling introducing a late night episode from The Beyond.

But the captain's voice held not a hint of the mysterious and though I didn't understand some of his more complicated explanations, I noticed very quicky that he was one of British Airways bright young men, in love with his machine and capable of handling all of the variables that piloting the world's fleetest passenger airplane entails.

For those who are would-be flight engineers, the Machmete attached to the cabin wall tells you when the plane moves from Mach I (speed of sound) to Mach II (twice the speed of sound.)

The lone Machmeter is silent and unobtrusive as opposed to an original idea of stewardesses in abbreviated silver space suits accompanied by a detailed taped commentary on the hurtle through space.

Deemed too unnerving for the avarage passenger, that plan was dropped early-on before the first Concorde flight in 1977.

The Concorde doesn't fly out of Dallas or Houston anymore, but it's well worth the trip to New York or Washington to enjoy the thrill and fringe benefits on an airline that's all first class from waiting room to individually served caviar and your own ice bucket for the Mumms Champagne.

If you feel leisurely on the way back, take British Airways six-hour flight from London to New York's Kennedy and you'll receive the same Old World courtesy at a slightly slower pace and a lower cost.

Lingerie fashions keep pace with lifestyles

By HEIDI NOLTE

NEW YORK (AP) — From restrictive white cotton undergarments in the 1920s to sensual primrose peepers in the '80s, lingerie has reflected social change throughout the decades, says a woman who has been associated with the industry for almost a quarter of a century.

"It's interesting how the movement in intimate apparel from function to fashion mirrors changes in our society," says Ruth Hirschberg, senior vice president and fashion director of Kayser-Roth Corp.'s Intimate Apparel division.

"Real fashion, as a whole, happens in today's living world," she says. "What people are wearing, what the economic conditions are like, whether there is peace or threatening war clouds — all have something to do with what will happen in the intimate apparel fashion world in the future.

"Economics, in particular, have dictated a major change in fashion trends," she points out. "One can't afford to buy a new wardrobe every season. Prices are just too high. Today you can wear what still looks good and add something new to your wardrobe. There are the more important or additional looks, instead of a complete reversal of style as in olden days.

"And we have to make the right things to go under the clothes that'll be in style next year. That's where the fashion industry is at now."

Changes in intimate apparel have followed changes in social attitudes, notes Ms. Hirschberg, who has monitored fashion and design for the past 24 years.

"The Jazz Age of the 1920s brought the demise of the traditional corset," she says. This was the first step in a series of fashion trends designed "to release the body from unnatural restraints; to let the body relax and breathe. The new designs allowed women to discover their own natural shape," she explains.

Subsequent years saw other intimate apparel fashion changes as well. The lacy, ornate look of the previous era gave way to "scandalously flattering" items such as the sexy nightgown.

"Wives selected sleepwear in patterns and designs they would not have permitted their husbands to see only a few years earlier," she points out.

Color-coordinated lingerie arrived in the 1950s and lighter, softer, easy-care fabrics came into vogue in the 1960s, she says.

"The sexual revolution of the late 1960s, however, brought the intimate apparel industry into sharp focus," Ms. Hirschberg notes. "Women's liberation was the age of body liberation as well, when women rejected the formal look of many undergarments. They began to shop for clothes that were body flattering and the new designs began to reflect the growing sexual awareness of women."

The 1970s found large numbers of former "hausfraus" emerging on the professional work scene, and lingerie kept in step with the changing concept of women's roles.

"Today there seems to be a most definite feeling that women have arrived at the work scene and are here to stay," she says. "They feel more comfortable and more secure in the professional world. Women no longer need the tailored executive suit to show their male coworkers that they mean business."

And as for advertising — "it isn't until you see a fashion item, that you want it," she says. "It is our job and the store's to keep tempting the customer with new looks. If they don't want new looks, we don't have a business."

And to bring those new looks to the public, the industry has to advertise. Just as intimate apparel fashion trends changed, their advertising did as well. At the end of the last century, figures weren't seen in advertisements.

"Undergarments were unmentionable then, and the industry had to be discreet when it advertised," says Philip Simon, president of the Kayser-Roth Intimate Apparel division.

"During the 1950s and '60s, however, advertising in general became more expressive, more daring," Ms. Hirschberg explains. And today, she says, you can't look at any advertisement, whether it be for soft drinks or suntan lotion, without seeing some sexual connotation.

'Partially housebroken' dogs have never existed

By ERMA BOMBECK

I saw a for-sale ad for a dog the other day. Listed among his assets was a promise that he was "partially housebroken."

That is like being "partially pregnant."

We have a dog who has lived with paper so long, we bought him a subscription to The N. Y. Times for Christmas. He loves the book section.

He is six years old — and if you can visualize a 42-year-old man in a shaggy fur coat who watches television for six hours each evening and never leaves the room for a commercial, you got it.

Frankly, I worry about the dog. He knows nothing of nature. He has never seen a tree, a blade of grass, a curb, a pillar, a low chair leg or a car tire.

He has no curiosity as to why the velvet on the chair is so hard for him to reach or why they would make a shag carpet so difficult to balance yourself on three legs.

And don't tell me we haven't tried. We did the whole number when he was a puppy. We praised him when he went where he was supposed to, and we punished him when he missed the paper. I don't understand it. It worked for the kids.

We installed a doggy door for his convenience. We now have a $300 door with a hole in it that lets the heat out in the winter and the air-conditioning out in the summer.

One day I was in the kitchen when I heard a dog authority on a talk show. The host was asking him what to do when a dog wet on the same chair all the time. I dropped the dish towel and ran in just in time to hear the dog authority smile and say, "Throw away the chair."

I've learned a lot, too. I've learned to close all the doors to the rest of the house when I leave and I've discovered white shoe polish applied directly to the spots on the sofa and dim lights will make the house seem less like a kennel.

The dog is not stupid. The other day he received a catalogue from a dog boutique in the East.

I know in my heart he ordered it from the book section of The New York Times.

Oklahoman artist to appear at local watercolor workshop

The Midland Palette Club has scheduled a watercolor workshop, conducted Robert A. Gartland, artist and author/illustrator from Lawton, Okla., for Oct. 15 in the Midland Palette Club Art Center, 604 N. Colorado.

Gartland has been a professional in the arts since 1952. His paintings are in approximately 300 private collections as a result of one-man shows in such diverse areas as Spain, Mexico, New York and Oklahoma.

The artist works in both watercolor and oil, as well as in black and white mediums. He began his early studies in pinting under the late George Ford Morris, noted American horse painter, and under Frank Reilly at the Art Student's League in New York City.

Gartland added author to his credentials in 1962 when he wrote and illustrated "Cowboys and Cattle," a book for young people published by Coward McCann Company in New York City. Prior to writing this book, he worked as a staff artist at the American Museum of Natural History in New York for ten years. While at the museum, he did several murals, illustrations for the Natural History Magazine, freelance work for Life Magazine and illustrations for children's books.

Since coming to the Oklahoma-Texas-New Mexico area in a rented pickup filled with paintings for three exhibits, Gartland has won approximately 100 first place and best of show awards. He is most proud of his large oil painting "Wichita Morning" which depicts several longhorns in the Wichita Mountains. The painting won the Best of Show award at the July 4, 1976 Bicentennial Exhibition at the state capitol in Oklahoma City.

Professionally, Gartland is an active member of the American Watercolor Society and the Lawton-Fort Sill Art Guild. He is also a member of the Rodeo Historical Society.

An open house will be held at 2 p.m. Oct. 12 at the Midland Woman's Club in honor of Gartland. He will have several of his paintings and prints on display. The public is invited to this free event.

There are a few openings for the workshop. For additional information, contact Ova Smith at 694-8298 or LaVerne Jones at 684-4213.

Visual excitement for a plain-jane hall

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We have a boring entry hall that needs some personality.

The space is rather limited for much furniture, but I would like to have the entry set a pleasant tone for our home. What should I do? — B.N.H.

A. In an entry hall interesting colors and textures can go a long way in introducing drama and personality.

A very slender console table covered in cane or imitation skin or antiqued lacquer would fit your limited space. Contrast this piece against more texture — perhaps a patterned wallpaper or grass cloth or even heavily plastered walls.

On the wall over the table consider hanging a handsome mirror which can be important for its light-reflecting quality. And don't overlook the need for attractive, soft lighting in an entry.

Accessorize with plants, crystal, and candles — a few important pieces rather than many small ones.

Q. Are there rules for furniture arrangement? I keep trying to change my furniture around to find the most pleasant effect, particularly in my living room. — M.C.

If you are a regular reader of housing magazines you see a wide variety of furniture arrangements. Some, of course, are slightly bizzare, but enough to be convincing that there aren't many rules today.

However, there are a few rules of thumb that in the past have been used as guides. For example, initially, place your large heavy furniture against the wall, not in the middle of the room.

If the arrangement against the walls isn't to your liking, try arraging sofas and low chairs at right angles to the walls or fireplace or picture windows — all focal points.

Whichever way seeems most workable is a good rule. But do balance a heavy piece of furniture on one wall or in one part of the room with nearly equal visual weight on the opposite wall or part of the room. This prevents your room from visually listing to one side — an uncomfortable feeling created in some rooms.

Also plan your furniture so traffic can flow around, not through, your conversation area or areas, if at all possible. And create the seating for easy conversation, close enough for comfort.

Use variety in the placement of your furniture — don't place all leggy tables on one wall, heavy chests on another and all upholstered pieces on another. Varying a tall, heavy secretary with a pair of upholstered chairs is better than pairing the secretary with another wood piece such as a consoletable.

Q. Our carpet is sculptured in olive tones and has the effect of one color. What color would you suggest for the upholstery for sofa and love seat?

We found an attractive tweed in medium brown and beige tones (appearing as a solid color from a distance). There is a fair amount of white in the pattern, so it is actually brown and white upholstery with the brown dominating.

If, in your opinion, this would go with the carpeting, what color should we do our walls in, also the draperies? There are no windows — only a rear patio sliding door.

We have a black leather recliner. Would this go with the rest? — K.J.H.

A. If you do select the medium brown and beige fabric for your sofa and love seat, perhaps you could tie the colors of the room together with a lively print of brown, white, olive and black at the siding door.

Energy food systems

A breakdown of the 16.5 percent of the energy used in the U.S. food system indicates that 29.1 percent is utilized in food processing or manufacture, 26 percent for in-home food preparation, 17 percent for out-of-home food preparation, 4.9 percent for retailing and 3 percent for the wholesale trade, with only 17.6 percent for production.

1884 fungus largest

The largest fungus ever found was a giant puffball discovered in New York state in 1884 — 5 feet 3 inches long, 4 feet 5 inches wide and 9.5 inches thick.

Blooms a foot across

The white and rose flowers of the rose mallow (Hibiscus grandiflora) measures up to 12 inches across and are the largest native U.S. wildflower blooms.

This Scottish castle stands majestic against the beating forces of weather.

An English Tour

Text and photos by Lana Cunningham

For romanticists, it is the location of lovers' entanglements, complete with castles and intrigue.

For architects, it houses some of the world's best examples of cathedrals and other structures.

For political theorists, the foundation of democracy which formed the U.S. basis of government can be studied in the halls of universities founded before this country was discovered.

For literature lovers, some of the world's best writing has come from this small island.

For vacationers, England and Scotland provide something for almost everyone — those who want to seek further education along their special interests or those who just want to relax and enjoy what the two kingdoms in Great Britain have to offer in the way of entertainment, and the ways are many.

AT LEAST the natives speak English, albeit somewhat different than Texanese. People in both countries have a sense of humour, with the Scottish being somewhat drier than the English.

Take, for example, the joke about a tourist who goes into a newsstand in a small Scottish town to buy a newspaper. The old woman who owns the store asks if he wants yesterday's news or today's.

"Today's," he replies.

"Well, in that case," the woman says, "you'll have to wait until tomorrow."

A group of 25 Midlanders, calling themselves the Texas Travelers, visited the land which spawned America, spending two days in London and six days on the road, going up one side of the island and down the other.

Escaping the West Texas summer heat was one reason for going there in mid-August. Temperatures in London were pleasant with cool nights and 70-degree days. In northern Scotland all memories of 105 sweltering degrees in Texas were forgotten as wool sweaters, coats and heavy pants were required to stay warm. The mind slipped into winter — minus the harsh winds and snow.

London, a city of 7 million people, has more to offer than a tourist can see in a week and more varieties of food than can be eaten in that time.

The famous combo of fish and chips, also known as french fries, can be found throughout the city.

And the homesick traveler can get his fill at one of the numerous familiar-looking McDonald's or Wendy's hamburger places scattered around the city.

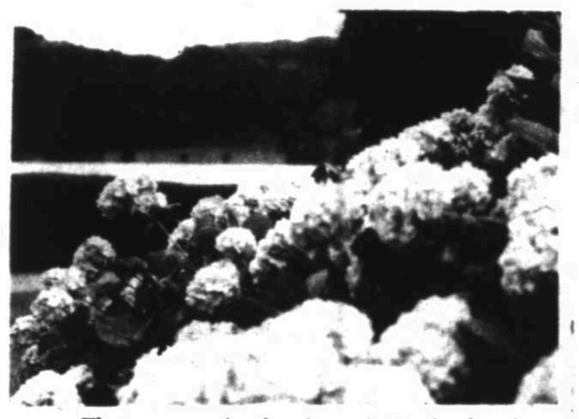
GETTING AROUND London is easy as the traveler has a choice of taxi, double-decker bus or Underground. Instructions on how to ride the subway are posted in every terminal. Average fare was 60 pence, or $1.20.

Taxis are easy to find and the sparkling, highly-polished black 1940 models can hold four to five people. Two fold-down seats on the back of the front seat allow room for the additional passengers.

The only problem encountered with the buses is that the tourist must know where his stop is and be ready to hop off as the vehicle slows down for the stop. Otherwise, the passenger is left hanging onto the bus as it scoots on down the street to the next stop.

If there's anything London does well, it is parks. Acre after acre of rolling green land with tall, thick-trunked trees dot the inner city. On a warm Sunday afternoon, it's the place to go for relaxing and soaking up the sunshine.

Both England and Scotland are sticklers for tradition and ceremony, which keeps them a class apart from the democratic-minded U.S. Tourists throng to Buckingham Palace in London daily for the changing of the guard. And the Englishmen don't disappoint anyone as the bright red uniforms, furry black hats and measured marching step lure hundreds of people each day to the palace.



Flowers grow in abundance in England and Scotland, such as on this bush at Grasmere, England.

TOURS BY licensed — and schooled — guides are available through numerous agencies. These guides could be likened to walking history books, rattling off events and humorous anecdotes with each passing block, or mile if in the country.

Museums, statues, plays, concerts, restaurants, flea markets, antique stores — the list for entertainment goes on and on.

Once out of London, the scenery turns into soft, velvety hills with ridges of dark hedges. Life in the rural areas of both countries is unhurried and peaceful. Each city, no matter how small, contains buildings older than the U.S. and far more elaborate than most in this country.

Cambridge University, located north of London, was founded in the 1200s and consists of 24 colleges. The oldest colleges are situated near the banks of a river, and students use boats to go from one college to the next. The ancient buildings reflect stone carvings, stained glass windows and designs rarely seen on the U.S. campuses.

York is famous for its York Minster, or cathedral, with the double spires overlooking the city. Tiny shops, some still the original structures, line narrow stone streets. And portions of the stone wall, built by the Romans to keep intruders out of the city, are visible in patches as one nears the inner city.

Natives of each country take "friendly" verbal jabs at each other, and the Scottish are still seething over England tearing down their castles and monasteries over a period of several hundred years.

SYMBOLIC OF THAT on-going rivalry is a game called "Uppies and Doonies" that has been played by members of the two countries for many years. The playing "ball" used to be the head of a dead Englishman and the game was played in a style similar to racquetball. Uppies and doonies still is played today, said an English tour guide, but the head has been substituted by a ball.

Just as Texans view their cowboy dress as normal, so do Scotsmen with their full kilt attire. Especially during this Year of the Scot, kilts on men are normal dress on the streets of Edinburgh. It also seemingly reflects their fierce pride in the country.

One Scottish tour guide, speaking with the area's distinct brogue, briefly outlined the conflicts over the century as he led a group of tourists through Holyrod Palace in Edinburgh:

"The Scots built it up, and the English knocked it down. The Scots built it up again, and the English knocked it down. And

Consumer confidence motivates top designs

By SHERYL FITZGERALD
(c) 1981, Newsday

NEW YORK — Regina Kravitz has reason to be pleased with herself. Business is going really well, she said, as she sat smiling behind her brand-new, custom-built, lacquered desk. So well, in fact, that she's been able to double the amount of space she occupies in the Seventh Avenue building that houses other fashion "names" like Perry Ellis and Jack Mulqueen.

Her name has become practically synonymous with the sort of design that gives you high style and good fabrics but doesn't require a mortgage to own. Kravitz' clothes — simply separates that mix and match; dresses that can go to work then out to cocktails; and the jumpsuits that some people say fit better than anybody else's — are all sought after by department stores.

Hers is the sort of clothing that once a woman buys a piece, she keeps coming back to the label again and again.

They tried hard to keep her out of the rag business, Kravitz, 33, said of her family. Most of them were involved with clothes — her grandfathers were tailors, her dad owned a retail store and her mother had been a model — and they wanted something different for their child. Thus, she didn't learn to sew as a youngster.

Far from starting by sewing at home, she said, "I started in the grand style with being a directress. As a kid my memories were of seeing my mother direct my grandfather — who worked in the old style with a pattern made from a paper bag — so it wasn't until I was much older that I remember seeing store-bought garments. Instead, I was seeing the kind of execution that really has to do with your hands. There were no patterns, you just cut it out. But they discouraged me from sewing. In part, there was that taint of being from another country and being laborers. It was, nevertheless, in my blood. Even as a kid I would design my own clothing, and my grandfather would make them. I just love clothing."

So, after being voted "best dressed," in her graduating class in New Jersey, she went off to college at Russell Sage College in Troy, N.Y., then studied at New York University where she majored in English literature and theater and earned a graduate degree in costume design. "I didn't study at F.I.T. (Fashion Institute of Technology) or Parsons or anything like that," she said.

Her first job was as a writer, but her real love was theater, Kravitz said.

"I had a very theatrical bent and I think that in the souls of all designers is the theater," she said. "I think you have the conflict, at least I did, of not being willing to put in all the work involved in theater; the sense of theater in clothing was what attracted me. But I was working as a writer, and I was known as this clothing lunatic, and I wore whatever I was thinking in my head. And I started making things, and I sold them on my lunch hour."

The part-time work became so lucrative that she started designing full-time, doing rain capes that sold in places like I. Magnin and Bloomingdale's. From that venture she went on to a partnership in a menswear firm and later designed men's sportswear.

While doing that, Kravitz was designing womenswear on her own time: selling blouses, sweaters and drawstring pants to Bendel's and Bloomingdale's. When offers from major manufacturers began to arrive for her women's clothing, Kravitz knew it was time to strike out on her own.

"Clothing that suits a modern woman's life," she explained. "I think of myself as that modern woman, so I think I'm something of an expert in speaking on the topic. She goes to work, she has so many things happening to her during the day. She might have a family; she has commitments at home; her life is busy. If she isn't busy, it has to do with the adaptability of her moods and the several occasions and things that are open to her to do during the day. . . . It's not just dresses, I like to think of it as creating a mood."

She's not into "meat and potatoes" clothing, Kravitz is quick to point out. What she is into is a kind of elegance and sophistication attainable by the average woman. "We add a certain type of feeling, sparkle, elegance. . . . The average woman can afford my things," she said.

At the same time, affordable doesn't mean ubiquitous. She's not a designer whose very dress will meet you a dozen times per block on the streets. Nor does it mean off-the-wall.

"Designing clothing is a great philosophical problem. That's what makes a designer great. They've analyzed the needs of their customer, and they are able to translate what's going on in the world, in the mood changes, in the needs of their customers and philosophy and thinking of customers. You really have to have your feelers out in a visual way. I don't want to do things that make women into fashion victims, I want to give them things that produce an ultimate sense of confidence."

Fashions for busy women

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Pattern companies are not dumb. They keep an ear to the ground and know just what's coming. What has come in the last few years is an ever-increasing need for fashions that are quick and easy to make, yet stylish.

As women become more involved in jobs and other activities, their time becomes more limited. A garment they can make in a hurry, yet be proud to wear, is a necessity.

If you are looking for something you can "whip up," look for patterns that:

— Do not have set-in sleeves (raglan or kimono are easier).

— Do not have zippers or tons of buttonholes.

— Do not have welt pockets.

— Do not have serious fitting to be done.

— Do not have too many pieces (the more pieces, the more time).

— Do not have linings.

In fabrics, stay away from:

— Plaids or stripes that must be matched.

— Fraying fabric that must be finished.

— Real stretchy fabric that must be tamed.

No such patterns, you say. Not true. There are any number of stylish fashions just made for the busy woman. Check them out.

Those women in pink!

Women's Auxiliary of Midland Memorial Hospital is celebrating 31 years of existence. The organization, which began as a sewing group, has grown to include 174 active members, 85 contributing members and six honorary members.

The auxiliary has compiled an impressive list of statistics, having contributed $107,831 worth of equipment to the hospital so far this year. Over the past 31 years, it has donated approximately $450,000 worth of equipment.

The club has raised funds for these contributions through revenue from its hospital gift shop, collection of dues, money made through the vending machines at the hospital and memorials.

In addition, the auxiliary has compiled 33,237 hours of volunteer work from Feb. 1, 1980, through Aug. 31, 1981. This is an average of 2,453 hours per individual.

In the past 18 months, five scholarships have been presented to a graduating senior who intends to pursue a nursing career.

Outgoing officers are Mrs. Jimmy Davis, president; Mrs. Reg Lyles, first vice president; Mrs Mickey Cappadonna, second vice president; Mrs. Tom Wilkerson, corresponding secretary; Mrs Dick Baxter, treasurer; and Mrs. Philip Whealdon, recording secretary.

New officers include Mrs. Lyles, president; Mrs. Baxter, first vice president; Mrs. Ed Hooper, second vice president; Mrs. Thomas Ingram, recording secretary; Mrs. Flake Thompkins, corresponding; and Mrs. Robert Ketter, treasurer.

Services provided by the group include sponsorship of blood drives, providing of pictures of newborn babies, hosting of the annual Christmas party for hospital staff and donation of equipment.

The Auxiliary will hold its annual awards luncheon at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday at Green Tree Country Club.

Mrs. Glen Aaron, left, works at the surgery office desk. The pink uniform worn by auxiliary members is familiar to most visitors at the hospital. The auxiliary also does posting of books and runs errands for the surgery department. At bottom , auxiliary members operating the nourishment cart are Mrs. Jim Mack and Mrs. Wendell Smith. They give service to Shane Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dewayne Howard.

Mrs. C. C. Tull, right, is buyer for the Auxiliary Gift Shop, a primary source of funding for the auxiliary. In addition to donating money and equipment to the hospital, the auxiliary also serves as an escort service to transport patients to and from rooms, and the Allison Cancer Clinic. Each member must go through orientation and training.

PRECEPTOR ALPHA OMEGA CHAPTER, BSP

Jo Beverley gave a report on the area convention to be held at Midland Center Oct. 2, 3 and 4. Plans were finalized for the forums the chapters will have. Forums to be held are social, service, ways and means, and parliamentary procedures.

A city council report given by Ms. Dersch said that the city-wide council meeting will be Nov. 2 at First National Bank building, a Harvest Ball Nov. 7 at the Veterans of Foreign War building and the Valentine Ball Feb. 13, also at the VFW building.

The chapter will hold a covered dish supper for second floor residents at Trinity Towers Oct. 15.

It will again sponsor a girl at Girlstown, USA, in Whiteface, Texaxas. Dedication of a new dormitory at Girlstown will be held Oct. 25 at 2 p.m. and a new dormitory will be named Beta Sigma Phi to honor the sorority.

A wine and cheese party will be hosted by Jo Beverley at 7 p.m. Monday, and will be followed by the regular monthly meeting.

Program presented by Myrtle Russell was on the sorority's flower, the yellow rose. She gave information and history on the flower in relation to the duties of officers. She also read an article written by Jack Ross regarding "Leaves of Absence."

XI PI KAPPA CHAPTER, BSP

The Xi Pi Kappa chapter held its first September meeting in the home of Sandy Hanson, member.

Linda Faulkner, ways and means chairman, announced the annual Boutique auction will be Nov. 5 at the Energas building, 511 W. Missouri, at 7 p.m.

Benefits from the auction of homemade crafts will go to Girlstown, USA.

PI BETA PHI ALUMNAE CLUB

Pi Beta Phi Alumnae Club held its September luncheon meeting in the home of Mrs. C. S. Hunter. Co-hostesses were Mrs. Robert Hinson, Mrs. Charles Snure, Mrs. Dan Moriarty and Mrs. William Wallace.

Guest was Mrs. Joe H. Foster of Dallas, alumnae president of Pi West Providence. She spoke on the role of alumnae in rush as seen by the active chapters across the state.

Mrs. Edwin Watts announced that the new Pi Phi pledges from Midland are Laura Hickey at The University of Texas at Austin; Cathy Hickman and Stacy Lewis at Texas Tech; and Joni Brittain at Texas Christian University.

Next luncheon meeting will be Nov. 19 in the home of Mrs. William P. Trotter, 1800 Huntington. New alumnae members in the area may contact Mrs. Bryan Gossett at 697-1066.

Water witch conveys unlikely figure

By RICHARD COLVIN
Associated Press Writer

GREEN FOREST, Ark. (AP) — Tanned, rawboned, and stolid, Steve Work is a witch who juggles inventories and time sheets as adeptly as he handles the Y-shaped rubber rod he uses to find water.

Work's 1,500 neighbors find slightly laughable the image of this brawny man striding across the Ozarks, his grease-stained hands delicately holding a dowsing rod.

To some he is a crackpot; to others he's a saviour who has found good water close to the surface in the rocky surroundings. In the past 10 years, Work says he has found water 40 times in 40 tries.

Held in both hands, the rod is bent apart to create tension. Where there's water the rod jerks down. But the rod doesn't find water, Work says, the dowser does.

"Like anything psychic, dowsing is an unused muscle," he says. Before gardens and kitchen taps, that intuitive muscle was essential for finding food or water, he says.

Work doesn't rely solely on the shudders of his dowsing rod. He uses a rudimentary knowledge of geology for clues to water among the layers of shale, limestone and dolomite cracked into huge chunks millenia ago.

"There's water around, but it's not all at the same depth like a smooth water table," Work says. He tries to find cracks where water percolates through the rocky layers.

To dowse, one must concentrate, learn to read the rod's signals, and avoid being fooled by fantasies, he says. Experienced dowsers narrow a large target area by watching the movements of a pendulum over a map drawn to scale. That's called map dowsing.

Orville Wise, a geologist with the state Geological Commission, says dowsers "can do a very reasonable job if they don't let the business of the peach stick go to their heads."

But Wise says there's no scientific evidence to show that dowsing is anything other than tomfoolery.

The 2,200 members of the American Society of Dowsers, based in Danville, Vt., are accustomed to geologists and others doubting them. The society says dowsing works but that there's much research to be done before it can be explained.

A society member, Work says he also believes in research but is more concerned about his success rate and how much money his wells have saved. He doesn't charge to dowse a well, because the talent cost him nothing.

He dowses wells that are 40 to 200 feet deep, although the water table closest to the surface is 500 feet down. At $5 per drilled foot, skepticism comes dear.

Work says employing a dowser makes more sense than building a $75,000 home and then looking for water.

DEAR ABBY

Man's crowded quarters cramp girlfriend's style

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 21-year-old single female in love with a 26-year-old male (I'll call Freddy) whom I hope to marry one day. Freddy and I have been dating for a year and have talked about marriage, but there is nothing definite yet.

The problem is Freddy's roommate, Ralph. Ralph's girlfriend, Debbie, moved in with him and Freddy. I'm not exactly jealous, but I hate the idea of the three of them living together in that little apartment. It's only big enough for two, and it must be very crowded and uncomfortable. Freddy says Debbie is only staying there until she and Ralph get married, but no date has been set yet, and they don't seem in any hurry.

Abby, if Ralph and Debbie want to live together, don't you think they should get their own place? All my friends think it's the pits, and they keep asking me how I can let it go on. I'm really upset and don't know what to do. Is there some way I can get Debbie out of there? Or should Freddy move out? Please advise. — IN THE MIDDLE IN MIDLAND

DEAR IN: As I see it, you are not in the middle. You are more appropriately on the outside — Freddy is in the middle. If he's crowded and uncomfortable, HE should move out. The decision is his, not yours.

DEAR ABBY: I am a college freshman. I drew a girl's name for the freshman mixer. When I called for her at her dorm, I was pleased to find a nice-looking girl with a friendly personality. After one dance she suggested we go somewhere and "talk." We spoke hardly 10 minutes when she was all over me.

I spent most of the evening trying to talk her out of what she was trying to talk me into. Abby, I want to be pure for the girl I marry, but if this one is any example of what I have to put up with, I am going to have some fight on my hands. How can a fellow act like a gentleman with college girls without getting the reputation for being a square or a cold fish? — SAVING MYSELF

DEAR SAVING: Don't identify all college girls with the miss you got mixed up with at the mixer. Hang on to your gentlemanly instincts and your reputation will take care of itself.

DEAR ABBY: I'm getting married soon and have a problem with the seating of a certain guest. She is my father's girlfriend. After my mother died, she moved in with my father.

Where should she be seated at the wedding dinner? Should she sit next to my father at the head table? Or should we put her with the rest of the guests? Perhaps I should mention that she isn't very well-liked by family members. — WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: The fewer hurt feelings, the better. Ask your father where he wants his live-in lady to be seated, and abide by his wishes.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning inappropriate questions asked of a widow at the funeral of her husband, I think mine tops them all:

At the funeral of my 67-year-old father, my poor grieving mother was approached by an officer of the burial society to which my parents belonged, and instead of offering her solace, he asked, "Would you please give me a deposit on the grave next to your husband so I can reserve it for YOU?" — VIVIAN OF BAYSIDE HILLS, N.Y.

DEAR VIVIAN: Your story takes the prize. In spades.

so it went six times until King James of Scotland was named King James I of England after Queen Elizabeth died with no successor," shaking his head in disgust.

The International Festival in Edinburgh attracted tourists from all over the world, along with entertaining acts. Plays were being performed throughout the city, and the sidewalks during the day were filled with street performers.

NORTHWARD INTO the Scottish countryside, and the famous Highlands took over the scenery. The air turned chilly, misting clouds churned through the mountain tops, and purple heather ran rampant over the hills. Dotting the hillsides were fields of yellow flowers, known as "rape in the fields." Oil from these plants is used for margarine or can be fed to horses, according to a tour guide.

Pushing farther toward Inverness, the capital of the Highlands, the one-lane paved road through the woods serves two-lane traffic. There's a constant battle when two vehicles meet as to who wins the right of way. Invariably, the bigger always wins.

Then black-faced woolly sheep took over the road, and one bus driver called out, "Mint sauce, mint sauce," as he anticipated one of the favorite dishes of Scotland — lamb with mint sauce.

The road wound past the River Dee and the wooded Balmoral Castle, where the Queen, son Charles and daughter-in-law Diana were in residence.

The Highlands are becoming a well-known, year-round vacation spot for Europeans. The area serves as a cool resort in the summer, and skiing is taking over as a popular winter sport.

Scotland also is renowned for its woollens. Numerous mills scattered over the country give the tourist an inside look at how the wool is transformed into sweaters and cloth while the finished products are sold in nearby stores.

A FERRY AT the Kyle of Lochalsh takes the traveler to the isle of Skye off the northeastern tip of the country. The island has played an important role in Scotland's history, providing a haven for escaping royalty, one of them Bonnie Prince Charles who was disguised as a woman to elude his would-be captors.

The lochs — ah, well, what can be said about the clear blue lakes surrounded by mountains that hasn't already been said by Scotland's writers?

There's Loch Ness, with its never-seen monster; Loch Lomond, where the singer who takes the low road will never see his love again; Loch Leven, which Sir Walter Scott mentioned in his novels.

Fishing is a major industry in the country, and also draws tourists for the excellent fishing waters.

Out of the Highlands and down into the Lake District in northern England where the poet William Wordsworth resided in Dove Cottage at Grasmere. Even in August, it's easy to imagine the yellow daffodils waving their heads in the spring air — the subject of one of Wordsworth's poems.

Farther south and the road runs through Stratford-upon-Avon, home ground for one of England's greatest writers, William Shakespeare. His birthplace still stands, as does the family home of his wife, Anne Hathaway.

TINY SHOPS line the main street, and many from the Elizabethan days are still standing, however wobbly they may appear.

A quick drive through Oxford reveals another town similar to Cambridge with the various colleges in ancient cathedral-like structures.

A 1,500-mile drive crammed into six days is too quick to become familiar with any one part of the island. For such a small place, every footstep, every mile speaks of an event in history. Even King Arthur's castle is easy to conjure up, using only a wee bit of imagination.

Despite the brief glimpse, 'twasn't hard to leave a bit of the heart in the Highlands and dream of a return trip.

Roloff seeks $10 million expansion

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A fundamentalist minister who has been to jail twice in an eight-year battle to prevent the state from licensing his "child care centers" says he is asking God for $10 million more to expand his operation.

The Rev. Lester Roloff, a fiery 67-year-old Baptist preacher, said a state district court ruling in his favor last April won wide support from judges, probation officers and law enforcement authorities.

Roloff, claiming his methods of dealing with troubled children are less costly and more effective than programs administered by the state, said he wants to accomodate as many as possible of 15,000 to 20,000 children he said are turned away each year for lack of space.

Roloff, who says he numbers Texas Gov. Bill Clements and U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra O'Connor among his "friends," saw his operation shut down by court order for three months in 1979. Bible-toting preachers and parents formed a human chain to block state welfare authorities for four days before the shutdown.

THE STATE has sought to inspect and license the homes since 1973 when some parents visiting their daughter at Roloff's Rebekah Home for Girls complained to the Nueces County Attorney that they saw a girl being whipped by a house parent.

A misdemeanor charge against the Roloff employe led to news stories and attempts by welfare workers to inspect the homes, but Roloff refused to allow them to enter and said he would go to jail or close the homes rather than allow the state to set guidelines for his operation.

Since then, escapees from the homes — which are circled by a high restraining fence — have complained that beatings, mistreatment and withholding of food were common and that children were "brainwashed."

Roloff denies the mistreatment allegations, saying the children are treated no differently than he was when being reared on a farm at tiny Dawson, Texas. He said his homes minister only to "terminal cases" of adults and young people addicted to drugs and alcohol.

Most new arrivals, many facing criminal charges, are literally dragged to Roloff by their parents and would lie or do anything to get away, the minister said.

ROLOFF solidified his argument of separation of church and state by switching operation of the facilities from a nonprofit corporation to his People's Baptist Church before reopening the unlicensed homes on Sept. 15, 1979.

Texas Attorney General Mark White has appealled the April ruling by District Judge Charles Mathews of Austin that Roloff does not have to have a license because of freedom of religion guarantees of the U.S. and Texas Constitutions.

Roloff said that Mathews, who visited the homes and came away "impressed," had afforded him the first fair trial after years of news reports that Roloff termed "slime and slop."

During an interview, Roloff gave the Associated Press a copy of a letter that Clements, a Republican, sent to White, a Democrat, criticizing the attorney general for appealing the ruling.

"It is my understanding, based on what I have read, that you have gone back on your promise to Brother Roloff that if he reorganized the homes under the auspices of the church and had no-license stance approved by the court, the court battle would be over," Clements wrote the attorney general on Sept. 8. "It appears that you are no longer willing to keep your promise to Brother Roloff."

Roloff said White made the promise to him during "a secret meeting" in Corpus Christi while Roloff supporters held state authorities at bay at the People's Church in June 1979.

WHITE DENIED making such an agreement, saying, "We've had a consistent policy for many years to appeal any finding by a district judge of unconstitutionality of any law. I never suggested that this policy would be changed for anyone."

White called Clements' letter, "silly" and "child-like."

Referring to Clements as "Brother Bill," Roloff said he and his supporters helped make Clements the first Republican governor of Texas since Reconstruction against former Attorney General John Hill, a Democrat and Roloff foe, in the 1978 election.

Roloff, who raises money for the $15,000-a-day operation through broadcasts on 180 radio stations across the country, said his "Bible discipline" achieves success with errant children and adults when state-run facilities fail.

He estimates he saves taxpayers at least $40 million a year for the 700 people now housed, at no charge to them or their parents, on his 557-acre farm and nearby boys' home.

Computer now playing cupid in quarter horse breeding

By TOM BOVEE
Associated Press Writer

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Call it a race-track dating service or an equine version of "Roots" — the computer revolution is coming to the art of breeding the nation's 2 million quarter horses.

A quarter-horse bloodlines computer service based in central Oklahoma, where some of the greatest racehorses have been bred, will be the first in the nation to list quarter horses exclusively, says Walton Wiggins, research editor of Speedhorse Inc., whose three publications reach about 20,000 professional horse breeders.

For $50 a would-be horse trader can get a 4-foot printout giving the pedigree and record of a quarter horse he wants to breed or buy, in a league where prices sometimes run to seven figures.

"We will have information on every start a horse has ever made in racing," Wiggins says. "On the brood mares and sires, we will have all the data on every one of their foals."

Some lines will stretch back eight generations, Wiggins says, and the job of collecting the records from various sources and loading them into the $500,000 computer will take up to 16 man-years, although the company hopes to hire enough hands to complete the job in eight months.

Wiggins says "the art of breeding a racehorse is probably the most scientific form of genealogy that ever existed, the best have been bred to the best for years."

Speed on the racetrack is often a matter of choosing the right ancestors. Breeders "look for a horse that was extremely fast and had a very nice race record, but you also look for horses that are fashionably bred and have superior genes throughout their generations," Wiggins says.

"That tells you the chance of getting a superior runner out of that family is more likely because of what the computer tells you the past generations of that family have done."

Speedhorse began work on the project four years ago, says Connie Golden, editor and publisher. "Somebody has needed to do it. Considering we have a very powerful industry investing hundreds of thousands of dollars, not to have access to this information is a tragedy."

She expects 400 subscribers to hook directly into the Speedhorse computer and perhaps 20,000 others in the horse business to make queries by phone or mail.

Some things can't be quantified for the computer — disposition and overall configuration are two — but she and Wiggins believe the computerized service, when it goes on line next spring, will revolutionize racehorse breeding by cutting from days to minutes the time required to match the right sire to the right mare and the right horse to the right buyer.

'Saving children's lives'

"Saving Children's Lives" is the theme of a country and western dance to be held Friday at the American Legion Hall, 501 Air Park Road. Sponsored by the Beta Eta and Beta Omega chapters of Epsilon Sigma Alpha International, the dance will benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

ESA nationally has raised more than $5 million for the hospital since 1972. This year's goal is to raise $1 million to support research in Neuroblastoma, the most common malignant solid tumor seen in children.

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital is among the nation's top ten cancer research centers and provides research and treatment of children's catastrophic disease.

Workers' rights in the dark

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Most Americans know of the existence of workers' compensation — known in some states as workman's compensation — but they know little about how it works and what it does for them, a recent survey indicates.

Researchers found that eight of every 10 respondents in a national study had some general awareness of how the insurance system operated in their state. But the study also established that:

—Just under half didn't know their employers paid the costs for the system. Many thought taxpayers were footing the bill, and some thought employees paid.

—Almost half were not aware that workers' compensation covers all medical bills.

—About half didn't know workers' compensation covers a substantial portion of lost income resulting from job-related accidents and illnesses.

"In fact, employers pay the entire cost of the program in all 50 states and the District of Columbia, valid medical claims are completely covered, and income protection is guaranteed under state systems, which have existed since the 1900s," says John C. Richman, vice president of Fireman's Fund Insurance Companies, which commissioned the survey.

Given the low awareness level of benefits and of the system's operation in general, Richman says, "It's not very surprising that only half the respondents in our study felt they would receive a fair level of workers' compensation payments without litigation. When you just aren't sure what you're entitled to receive, one of the easiest things to do is get a lawyer."

BASIN BRIEFS

Jack R. Birchum has been named division exploration manager of MGF Oil Corporation's Permian Basin division, with headquarters in Midland.

Formerly District Geologist for Mitchell Energy Corporation and Coastal States Gas Corporation, Birchum will coordinate MGF's exploration program for the Permian Basin Division and direct the activities of the geological and geophysical departments.

Birchum received his Master of Science degree in geology from Mississippi State University and his bachelor's degree in geology from Millsaps College in Jackson, Mississippi. A five-year resident of Midland, he is a member of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, the American Institute of Professional Geologists, the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists, and the West Texas Geological Society.

****

Haviland (Twig) Strode-Jackson has recently accepted the position of director of employee relations for Sii Drilco Industrial. This position is a promotion from his previous job as Employment Manager for Sii Smith Tool in Irvine, California.

Strode-Jackson received his B.S. degree in Psychology from the University of Wisconsin in 1968. He continued his post graduate studies at the University of Wisconsin and at Western State Law School in Fullerton, California.

Prior to his employment at Sii Smith Tool, Strode-Jackson served as Employee Relations Manager for a large manufacturer in Colorado Springs, Colorado. He has also been Personnel Manager for three divisions of FMC Corporation in Wisconsin and California.

****

Vester

In his new position, Vester will be responsible for the management of engineering and construction activities for Ortloff process plant projects. He will also be responsible for liaison with clients.

Vester has worked for 22 years in the petrochemical and manufactured products industries. In addition to experience in process engineering and design, he has also performed plant and project management responsibilities.

Prior to joining Ortloff, Vester was employed with Elk Corporation of Texas, a subsidiary of Midland-based Elcor Corporation.

Vester received his bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering from the University of Houston in 1966. After graduation, he was employed with Rexall Chemical Company of Odessa, Texas.

How to drill an oil well

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Oil Editor

Without a doubt, 90 percent — maybe more — of the people living today in Midland and the surrounding area are living here because of oil. As the drill bits cut deeper and deeper into the earth, the Tall City reached higher and higher. New people came to town. They created new businesses, new services, which lured still more people. Oil boomed again and the cycle started anew. Woosh! Just like you poured gas on a fire, more people come surging to the Permian Basin.

Yes, darned near all of us are here because of oil. It has fueled an economic blaze that is, perhaps, unique in all the world. But, relatively few understand the origins and nature of the blaze. Midland is the ultimate oil town, but genuine, insightful oil people are but a fraction of the population. Most of the rest have relativiey little understanding of the force that pulled them into this town. Many know nothing at all of it.

We, in the Reporter-Telegram oil news department, have decided to attempt to explain the industry to our many readers who aren't oil people, and to those in the business who may not get to see the "the big picture" — to that army of clerks and secretaries, for example, who keep the oil companies rolling, but who often don't understand much of what they see and hear.

The oil industry began with a single hole in the ground. We will begin our explaination at the same point. Begining with this report, we are going to do our best to follow the drilling of an oil well with a series of brief feature stories explaining the operation. From time-to-time we will throw in stories on related subjects. We explect the series to run about six weeks.

The well we have chosen is the No. 1 Houpt, a wildcat oil well being drilled just south of Midland, off Fairgrounds Road. Dorchester Exploration Inc., Midland, is having the well drilled. Gene Sledge Drilling Corp., also of Midland, is the contractor actually doing the work.

There is nothing special about the Houpt, or the companies involved. We picked the Houpt to cover simply because it is close to town, and the operators agreed to help us out.

The Houpt-1 started out as a "location," a spot on the ground, selected as a site for a well. Wednesday, the rig was moved in and readied for drilling. "Rig up day," oil men call it.

About 9:30 a.m. Thursday, drilling began. "Spudding in," it is called, when the hole is started. The crew drilled to 365 feet, with a 20 inch bit, then they "set surface," that is they ran a "string" of 16 inch pipe in the hole and cemented it in. Ten "joints," or individual lengths of pipe made up the string.

The surface pipe is put in place to protect fresh water contained in near-surface formations. The cementing required 500 sacks of cement to complete. The job was done about 1:30 a.m. Friday.

Later Friday, the crewmen "nippled up." A nipple is generally any short length of pipe. Nippling up is istalling a short length of pipe to the top of the surface pipe, to conduct the bit and drill pipe into the hole. In Kansas oil fileds, and elsewhere, that is all that is done. But in the Permian Basin, additional precautions must be taken, so nippling up has become an all inclusive term that covers the installation of safety equipment as well.

At No. 1 Houpt, a HyDrill was installed atop the surface pipe. It is a hugh, cylindrical piece of equipment containing a large rubber donut. Should natural gas, or deadly hydrogen sulfide, or fluids force their way up the hole, the rubber donut can be forced with hydraulic fluid to squeeze around the drill pipe, or anything else suspended in the hole, and control the reverse flow.

A "rotary head" is mounted on the HyDrill. It will divert any sudden surges from below into a "flow line," which carries drilling fluids into "pits" in the ground beside the rig. Without a rotary head, fluid surges would shoot straight up onto the rig, until the HyDrill is activated it is called a rotary head becasue it rotates with the drill pipe.

Late Friday evening, drilling resumed. A 14 3/4-inch bit was "run" in the hole, and started "turing to the right," or drilling. Sometimes it is refered to as , "making hole."

The bit will drill another 1,500 to 1,800 feet of well bore before being worn out and replaced. Until that time comes, there will be little going in at Houpt-1.

Decline ends, rig count is up

After a sagging slightly in recent weeks, the Permian Basin rotary rig count is up again, according to a survey by Reed Rock Bit Co. At the end of last week the total was 506. It was 484 a week before, and 489 two weeks ago.

The all time high rig count for the region was 515, recorded in 1957.

The national rig count is climbing too. The total as of September 21, was 4,249, up from 4,224 one week earlier, The International Association of Drilling Contractors reports.

In the Texas/New Mexico area, there were 1,456 land rigs making hole on the 21st. One year ago, Reed counted 331 Permian Basin rigs turning to the right.

Dollars required to float deepwater 'superport'

By ANDREW M. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Now that the Department of Transportation has granted a license, the main obstacle to building Texas' first deepwater offshore oil port is money.

Estimates are it will take $191 million to construct the scaled-down "superport" — which will not be a port in the traditional sense of the word, but instead a large, floating "monobuoy."

"The big question mark remaining is the financing," said C.A. Brace, president of Texas Offshore Port Inc., a consortium of companies that have banded together in hopes of building the nation's second superport.

"I don't see any problems, but until we get it, you never know for sure," Brace said. He said he hopes the consortium will raise a 10 percent cash downpayment and finance 90 percent of the rest.

If his group is successful, the Texas superport will allow the world's largest tankers to pump as much as 500,000 barrels a day to tanks on shore by hooking onto the monobuoy 12 miles off Freeport, Texas.

When the superport was first envisioned, planners were talking in terms of unloading as much as 2.5 million barrels a day.

The smaller version will nevertheless be able to accommodate supertankers so big that if they tried to use a conventional port they would drag the bottom. The buoy will float in water 71 feet deep. Without such a port, supertankers must transfer their cargo to smaller ships.

Brace said until funding is approved, new members will be accepted in the consortium, which now includes the Texas division of Dow Chemical Co., U.S.A.; Phillips Investment Co.; Continental Pipeline Co., a Conoco subsidiary; and Seaway Pipeline Co., which is owned by seven oil companies.

"If everything goes as I think it will, we should be on stream between the first quarter and midpoint of 1984," Brace said. "We have been negotiating with the federal government on this since we applied for a license on Dec. 30, and in my view we have come up with a good license."

Another hurdle the project faces is getting approval from each member of the consortium, which must be accomplished by June 21, 1982. Two previous attempts failed because of lack of member approval.

A consortium of 12 major oil companies backed away from Seadock Inc., the original deepwater port proposal, in 1978 when license agreements were not to their liking.

The second proposal, the Texas Deepwater Port Authority, died later the same year when oil firms withdrew from user agreements for fear that declining crude oil imports did not warrant building the $1.25 billion facility.

At least one other member of the present project expects fewer problems this time around.

"It is as good a license as the Transportation Department could give us and still stay within the deepwater laws," Dow spokesman Charles Kroll said.

"We generally advocate offshore ports as an alternative to dredging (existing ports) because the environmental effects are much less damaging," said Rick Middleton.

Lopez Portillo names suggested successor

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Miguel de la Madrid, a Harvard-trained economist and a shoo-in to be the next president of Mexico, says he will strive for a greater distribution of his country's new oil wealth among the poor.

In foreign affairs, de la Madrid says, he will follow Mexico's traditional Third World policy of "non-intervention, a peaceful solution to disputes and a new, more just and balanced world economic order."

Friday's nomination of de la Madrid, 46, as the presidential candidate of Mexico's ruling party was hailed by businessmen. The Bolsa, Mexico's stock market, jumped sharply at news of his selection.

De la Madrid, the current minister of planning and budget, has 16 years of experience in government economic posts. He is considered certain to succeed President Jose Lopez Portillo for a six-year term starting Dec. 1, 1982 because the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) hasn't lost a presidential election during the 50 years it has been in power.

"We will advance along the path of democracy. We will strengthen popular participation in political, social and cultural decisions," de la Madrid said in an acceptance speech Friday evening to more than 12,000 cheering supporters.

"We will amplify, I repeat we will amplify popular participation in the the production and distribution of wealth with greater social justice."

A number of opposition groups have accused Lopez Portillo of failing to distribute Mexico's new oil wealth equitably. Mexico turned from an oil-importing country to the world's fourth richest oil nation, with reserves totalling 73 billion barrels, during the five years Lopez Portillo has been in office.

Mexico's export earnings jumped from $8 billion to $28 billion during that time. But even some PRI and government officials admit the wealth is not seeping down to the poorer classes as fast as the government would like.

Nevertheless de la Madrid indicated in his speech that, with certain modifications, he plans to continue with Lopez Portillo's policies — especially an ambitious plan using oil money to turn Mexico into an industrial power by the year 2000.

Like Lopez Portillo, who was his teacher of government administration at the National University of Mexico, de la Madrid has a firm background in both law and economics. The two have also been close friends for more than a decade, and Lopez Portillo has been his quiet mentor in PRI's intricate, closed-door politics.

Both men are widely considered moderate political conservatives who are very pragmatic decision makers. One banking source said de la Madrid has "a clear idea of the economic realities of Mexico," and another called him as "pro business and pro banking."

Hercules pumping unit

Yellow Rose Energy, Dallas, presented eqipment made by Hercules Energy Corporation, of Oklahoma City. Hercules is s subisdiary of LSB Industries, an American Stock Exchange firm, engaged in manufacturing for over 50 years.

The Hercules iron, Yellow Rose spkesmen explained, is essentially a copy of the well known Lufkin units, but built about 25 percent stronger. Of all pumping units built in the United States, the Hercules machinery, it was claimed, have the largest gear boxes per unit.

Yellow Rose representatives claimed two big selling points for their goods. First, immediate availability — you shouldn't have to wait for delivery — and second, a full year warranty on the product — about double that provided by most manufacturers.

Yellow Rose Energy is the sole marketer of Hercules units in Texas, Louisiana, oklahoma and new Mexico. Midland area oilmen should contact James C. McVay Jr., Hobbs, N.M. for more information. His address is P.O. Box 924, Hobbs, 88240. Phone 505-397-3311.

Oil company to merge with Australian concern

DALLAS (AP) — Delhi International Oil Corp. has agreed to merge with CSR Ltd., a Sydney, Australia-based firm, and will become a CSR subsidiary after a common stock purchase offer is made Sept. 29, company officials said Wednesday.

Under the merger agreement, a CSR subsidiary make a cash tender offer of $78 per share next week for all outstanding shares of Delhi common stock. Delhi also has approved the proposed sale to CSR of 1.47 million shares of authorized but unissued common stock at the same price.

Electrical Geophysics:
Increase Your Drilling Success Ratio.

Extensive research has given Indesco a complete package of highly sophisticated electrical geophysical data acquisition tools and techniques for oil and gas exploration.

Originally proven in geothermal exploration, electrical studies work in poor or no-record seismic areas. Indesco's electrical methods are especially effective in volcanic areas and areas of low seismic energy and severe weathering. Total costs can range as low as one third the cost of seismic exploration. Other benefits include the absence of heavy equipment and shot holes, and smaller, efficient crews.

Operating in profile using standard seismic cable and roll-along, Indesco obtains rapid field coverage. With specialized software for understandable analysis and expert interpretation, Indesco is the full service geophysical company with proven wildcat success.

Progressing Cavity Downhole Pumps from Centrilift-Hughes

- Low cost. You get quick payback even in low volume wells.
- Immediate delivery.
- Simple installation.
- Variable speed drive.
- Clean low-profile appearance.
- Lifting capacity to 100 BPD from depths to 1500 ft.
- Ability to lift sandy or gassy fluids. No gas locks.
- 24 hour turnaround on parts and repairs.
- Operations with standard NEMA Type B. electric motors.
- Use of existing rod and tubing strings.

Even though progressing cavity pumps have been used in industry for many years, they are new to the oil patch. And Centrilift is the only company that can offer you the new idea and back it with oil field and submersible equipment experience.

And not only that, you'll be getting the promise of future developments in the progressing cavity pump. The Hughes Tool Companies will take the idea to its limits.

Contact us today. We'll bring out your progressing cavity downhole pump tomorrow.

OIL INDUSTRY NOTES

Drilling for oil and gas continues strong in Texas. The Texas Railraod Commission recently reported that through the end of August, a total of 16,270 new holes had been drilled in the state. During the first eight months of 1980 a total of 13,599 holes were drilled.

In the RRC's District 8, Midland, and surrounding counties, there were 171 wells completed in August. Of these, two were oil discoveries, and 153 were field wells. Two gas discoveries were also completed, along with 10 gas field wells.

A total of 174 new holes were drilled during the period. Two of these were classed as oil discoveries, 148 were oil field wells. Two were gas discoveries, 10 were gas field wells.

There were eight dry holes drilled in August, all of them field wells. There were no dry wildcats in District 8 during the month.

Additional scholarship funds were made available at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin recently with a $5,000 gift from the Gulf Oil Foundation. The gift was made to provide scholarship funds for students needing financial support.

B.J. Gallagher, manager of engineering for Gulf; Dr. V.R. Cardozier, president of UTPB; F. H. Martin, technical manager for Gulf; and George Puscas, manager of production geology for Gulf, were present at the check presentation.

Sparkman Energy Corporation has announced its wholly owned subsidiary, Yale E. Key, Inc., Midland, has completed its previously announced acquisition of two oil field service companies for $9.5 million.

The acquisition of Hoffman Oil Well Service Company, Inc., and Bonner Lease Service, Inc., will add 16 workover rigs and 18 hot oil units to Yale E. Key's fleet, bringing it to a total of 43 workover rigs and 29 hot oilers. In addition, seven rigs are on order for delivery in 1981 and one in 1982.

Hoffman and Bonner are based in Seminole, Texas and have operated in the area for several years. They will operate as divisions of Yale E. Key and will continue business under their original names and prior management.

Nortex Gas & Oil Company, a subsidiary of InterNorth, Inc., has completed a significant wildcat oil well in Borden County, Texas.

Production tests of the Zadie Miller 46 No. 2, yielded 524 barrels of oil per day and 160 thousand cubic feet of gas per day without stimulation through 23/64-inch choke from perforations between 8,352 and 8,360 feet. Nortex owns 100 percent working interest in the Strawn Formation completion.

Offset wells on acreage also owned 100 percent by Nortex are scheduled to be drilled as soon as a rig is available.

Texas notes

DALLAS — Cary M. Maguire, president of Maguire Oil Co., Dallas, has been named convention chairman for the 62nd Annual Meeting of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association. The convention is scheduled Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 7-8, at Dallas' Fairmont Hotel.

Arthur J. Wessely, board chairman of the Wessely Energy Corp. in Dallas, will serve as vice-chairman of the General Arrangements Committee for the meeting, according to Edwin L. Cox of Dallas, president of the Association.

In his announcement about Maguire and Wessely, Cox said 500 to 600 oil and gas industry executives and their guests are expected to attend the meeting. The Association's membership includes independent producers as well as representatives of all major energy companies with operations in Texas.

Cox, an independent oil and gas operator completing his second one-year term as president, also announced the appointment of several other Dallas residents to convention committee posts:

Ashley H. Priddy, chairman of the board and president of Sabine Corp., will serve as chairman of the Reception Committee. This committee, which is comprised of all Dallas members of the Association, will have Larry L. Heim, senior vice-president of the First National Bank in Dallas, serving as vice-chairman.

Jean M. Barrett, manager of the Dallas sales office of The Western Co. of North America, will head the Registration Committee. Vice-chairman of this committee will be James E. Chenault, Jr., president of Lone Star Steel Co.

Interamerican Oil Corporation has announced the recent formation of an ongoing program to acquire producing and associated undeveloped oil and gas properties.

The participants to the program will be Patrick Petroleum Company, Coquina Oil Corporation, and the Monsanto Company.

As manager of the program, Interamerican will search for and acquire producing reserves and related nonproducing acreage for the three participants and for its own account.

The participants intend to spend an amount in excess of $45 million per year on the Interamerican acquisition program, which represents a portion of their planned acquisition effort.

National notes

TULSA, Okla. — Terra Resources, Inc., Tulsa, has completed a new field wildcat in Scurry County, Texas.

The No. 1 L. Williams, located 20 miles southwest of Snyder, Texas, on section 73 block 20, Lavaca Navigation Co. survey, flowed 206 barrels of 45 gravity oil in a 24-hour test through a 14/64-inch choke with 500 pounds of flowing tubing pressure.

Producing interval was in the Pennsylvanian lime between 7,488-7,520 feet. There was no associated water or natural gas production.

Terra owns a 100 percent working interest and has 853 acres adjacent to the well under lease. The company is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Farmland Industries Inc., Kansas City, Mo.

Continuing a steady climb upward, the total number of seismic land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. and U.S. waters set another record during August. According to a report recently released by the Society of Exploration Geophysicists, the August total was 735, surpassing July's previous all-time record by twenty-four crews and vessels.

The August total (735) represents an increase of 3 percent over last month, a 30 percent increase over August, 1980, a 73 percent increase over August, 1979, a 101 percent increase over August, 1978, a 125 percent increase over August, 1977, a 167 percent increase over August, 1976, and a gain of 154 percent over the same month in 1975.

Wyoming lease lottery is no sure thing

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Advertisements appearing around the country say that by risking $30 a person can buy a chance to win an oil or gas lease from the state of Wyoming potentially worth hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Officials who run the Cowboy State's lease lottery, the only state operation like it in the nation, say that while the claims are true, the chances of striking it rich are slim.

Some of the filing services seeking business through the ads also acknowledge that the investment is no sure thing.

"Basically, it's like a sweepstakes. If it's money you can't lose, don't play," says Steven Kester, a spokesman for Public Lands Oil and Gas Services of Denver.

Kester says his company has been filing hundreds of lease applications for clients each month. But it has not had a winner.

The lottery is a drawing in which applicants are selected to receive leases that allow them to produce minerals on state-owned land in Wyoming. The leases used to be awarded on a first-come, first-serve basis. But bouts of fisticuffs in waiting lines during the 1950s convinced Wyoming officials of the need for another method.

Since leases for desirable parcels of land often attract numerous applications, the development rights are awarded through a drawing from a barrel filled with competing applications.

Bernard Snyder of B. Ryan Snyder Co., a company based in Santa Ana, Calif., said eight of his clients who won leases have sold them for prices ranging from $5,000 to nearly $100,000. Snyder said he knew of another instance where a lease was sold for $300,000 plus a percentage of all minerals ever produced.

But it's not easy to pick the right parcel of land to seek, and that is where filing services come in.

Wyoming Land Commissioner Oscar Swan, who oversees the lottery, says that for the uninitiated citizen to enter without help, "the Irish Sweepstakes gives you better odds."

Filing services, he said, rely on the advice of geologists and mineral experts and make those specialists available to clients to decide the potential of a parcel.

The leases give individuals the right to produce minerals, usually oil and gas, and sell them to the highest bidder. The producer must pay a 12.5 percent royalty to the state.

The fee for the filing service is generally about $15 for each application. Then there is the cost of submitting the application, which increases to $25 from $15 for the next monthly drawing in November.

Investors may enter the leasing competition on their own, and the land commissioner's office offers a packet of information on how to do it.

But Swan said anyone who wanted to pay to enter without knowing anything about the parcels would be a "damn fool."

A brochure from the U.S. Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management on a similar program run by BLM offices in 11 Western states even offers tips on how to select a filing service.

The federal government oversees about 18 million acres in Wyoming and offers more land for lease in that state than anywhere else. Its leasing entry fees and regulations are similar to Wyoming's.

One filing service ad proclaims: "Turn Your Tax Dollars Into Liquid Gold." A BLM brochure, however, is titled: "Can You Really Strike It Rich In the Government Oil And Gas Lottery?"

"Be wary of filing services that paint an overly optimistic picture of your chances of making money," the BLM cautions. "Consider that these firms may file for hundreds and even thousands of clients on the limited number of desirable parcels, and the more interest these firms can generate in drawings, the less chance each individual has of winning."

Pat Korp, a BLM spokeswoman in Cheyenne, said her office offers about 250 parcels a month for lease. Swan said Wyoming offers about 50 parcels from among the nearly 4 million acres of state land under lease.

Swan also said getting the lease is only the first half of the problem, because winners must pay $1 per acre a year for the lease and must develop the minerals themselves or sell the leases to those who can.

But he said filing services can help by providing an idea of what a parcel is worth. One man, he said, had an inflated opinion of the parcel he won and would not accept less, so it never was developed and the man lost his investment.

The number of applications have increased dramatically as interest in energy production has risen. In 1971, about 1,500 applications were processed each month, Swan said.

In 1980, when the federal lottery was suspended temporarily by allegations of fixing, the number zoomed to 30,000 applications a month.

Nugent says Texans deserve safe natural gas system nothing less

DALLAS (AP) — Chairman Jim Nugent of the Railroad Commission says Texans "deserve nothing less" than the safest natural gas system in the nation.

Nugent said in 1978 safety inspectors "were finding one crisis situation after another" as the result of gas leaks.

"Indeed, one out of every five city-owned systems loses 30 percent of the gas it purchases. The lines, installed many years ago and inadequately maintained, are simply deteriorating," he said.

To correct this problem, Nugent said the commission has asked its staff to prepare stricter safety standards for natural gas systems with a history of problems.

"I support the concept of special, stricter maintenance programs for systems which continue to have problems, even though they may be in nominal compliance with existing rules," Nugent said.

Any company that refuses to comply should be referred to the attorney general for legal action, he said.

Ten fields, however, were assigned lower legal rates of flow to avoid possible waste. The large East Texas field, for example, was restricted to an 86 percent allowable.

Nugent displayed a map spotting the location of 91 systems where gas lost or otherwise unaccounted for had exceeded 20 percent. He said a recent report showed "substantial improvements and progress toward compliance" had occurred on 76 percent of those systems.

He said the commission's eighth safety district office has been opened in Abilene, which will be in charge of gas inspections in 31 counties in North Central Texas.

Nugent noted in announcing the allowable that nominations for Texas crude oil next month totaled 2,511,226 barrels a day, a decrease of 3,493 barrels daily from September.

Here are the major buyers' nominations for Texas crude in October, in barrels per day, with any changes from September in parentheses:

Reagan's bitter pill

President Ronald Reagan's Thursday night televised address to the nation probably accomplished its goal of reminding Americans that the nation is going to have to endure some rough going before achieving economic revitalization.

Like it or not, we're backsliders. We all have good intentions when it comes to such things as cutting our personal budgets — or the nation's — but it's human nature to take the easy road and avoid that which is unpleasant when at all possible. So, it's important from time to time that someone, in this instance President Reagan, gives us a gentle reminder of the gravity of the situation with which we are dealing.

Economically, in ringside conversation the U.S. government would be described as "on the ropes." But President Reagan and company, armed with a large pair of budget-cutting shears, have taken it on themselves to put the government's financial house back in order. He told us a few months back that the task would not be an overnight process and that we all would suffer through the cutbacks. But that's the only economic cure available. We cannot have our cake and eat it.

Well, in recent weeks some of us have weakened and we've backslid to the point of saying we must not curtail the government's spending or too many will suffer too harshly. Nonsense! We are at the point where tough decisions have to be made if the nation's economic heartbeat is to be revived.

There are those who will not go along with the President's request to trim another $16 billion from the soaring federal deficit through various cutbacks and tax revisions. Likely he will not have as easy a time garnering the support he received for his first round of tax and budget cuts.

Yet this most probably will not be the only time that Reagan has to seek additional support from the American public for his economic proposals. As U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler of Hunt noted following the Thursday night address, "repairing the economy is like shooting at a moving target. A well-placed aim does not mean the target — in this case the budget figures — will not move.

"We in the Congress have the President's new target. So we must reload, take careful aim, and go after that bull's-eye."

Reagan has promised not only to revitalize the nation's economy, but also to restore its military preparedness. His Thursday night presentation indicated he is sticking to that game plan, a vital decision judging from the Soviet buildup in recent years.

The buildup in defense proposed by the President and the cutback in social programs may be a bitter pill to swallow. But is there really any viable alternative? We don't see one.

Soviet costs going up

It's a lucky thing most Russians don't own cars, because the price of gasoline is going up to about $2 a gallon. The average Russian's $229-a-month income doesn't allow much joy riding.

If Ivan does own a car and he's brooding about the increase in gas prices, he won't get ahead by trying to drown his sorrows. The price of vodka is going to about $8 a pint.

Things could always get worse, and they most likely will. Amid rumors that the price of bread and other basic foods would also be going up, the commissars put out the official word that this is a dirty, rotten, filthy capitalist lie.

The price of food will NOT be going up. The only catch is, there's a food shortage and there's not enough to eat.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On September 27, 1779, John Adams was named to negotiate the Revolutionary War's peace terms with Britain.

On this date:

In 1939, Warsaw, Poland, surrendered to the Germans after 19 days of resistance during World War II.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Terpil's past more horrifying than macho

WASHINGTON — To judge by his early press clippings, renegade CIA agent Frank Terpil was a swashbuckling desperado in the romantic tradition of James Bond. Terpil cherished these accounts of his derring-do and often recommended them to acquaintances; he thought they made him look good, and in a perverse sort of way, they did.

Jack Anderson

But the truth about Terpil is wholly devoid of redeeming social value. After he left the CIA, he became a freelance terrorist and sycophant of dictators. His activities in their service were disgusting. The man is a living contradiction of every American principle of decency and courage. He is a disgrace to his country and to the agency that spawned him.

Police investigators in London, Europe and Kenya have been gathering evidence, for example, that points to Terpil's responsibility for the assassination of a respected Kenyan official in May 1978.

The victim was Bruce McKenzie, the only white to serve in the cabinet of Kenyan President Jomo Kenyatta; he was Kenyatta's agriculture minister from 1963 to 1970. After an official visit to neighboring Uganda, McKenzie was killed as he was taking off from Entebbe airport.

The plane in which he was flying suddenly exploded. Investigators determined that a bomb, hidden in a lion's head trophy in the cargo compartment, had been detonated by a sophisticated electronic device.

Uganda was still under the murderous rule of Idi Amin at the time, and the dictator had particular reason to hate McKenzie: The onetime British intelligence officer had provided crucial information to the Israelis for their incredible raid on Entebbe in July 1976. The raid, which freed 103 hijacked Jewish hostages from Palestinian terrorists, was an acute embarrassment to Amin.

Sophisticated explosive devices are one of Terpil's deadly specialties — the very kind of expertise he is now providing to Libyan dictator Muammar Qaddafi. But in May 1978, Terpil's boss was Idi Amin.

Competent sources told my associate Dale Van Atta that the evidence in McKenzie's murder has been piling up — until his widow became convinced Terpil was the man who engineered her husband's assassination. The anguished Mrs. McKenzie flew to Washington about two months ago to share information on Terpil with a Justice Department official. Since then, her Scotland Yard contact has been unable to locate her. She has disappeared.

What really nails shut the coffin on Terpil's glamorous image, though, is his own boastful confessions, secretly taped by U.S. undercover agents he met four times in New York during November and December of 1979. Even allowing for a certain macho braggadocio on his part, the picture that emerges unmistakably is that of a cold-blooded, inhuman monster.

He laughed as he described instances of torture, murder and even ritualistic cannibalism by the bloodthirsty Amin. In words too graphic to repeat here, Terpil bragged of being present when unspeakable tortures were committed on Amin's political opponents. He chuckled as he described the effects of the torture on his victims.

Terpil recognized that Amin was unbalanced. But the cynical ex-CIA man seemed amused by this, rather than appalled. Amin was "paranoid about bein' waked off by stuff being added to the food," Terpil told the undercover agents, explaining that the dictator had good reason to be worried: He knew that Terpil "used to supply him with all that s---" for use against Amin's enemies.

Terpil seemed quite proud of one poison that he used. It took effect 36 hours after being administered; then it brought chest pains and death of an apparent heart attack within 20 minutes — and was undetected in an autopsy.

The professional poisoner complained about the subordinates he had to deal with in Uganda. "These jerks I had down there, they put it in the soup," Terpil told the detectives. "But the soup, they're cookin' it on the stove, so the fumes come up like that. There goes one guy."

He described a state dinner at which the minister of finance was to be given poisoned soup. Amin sampled his soup first, and everyone thought it was safe. But the victim's portion had been doctored by Terpil himself, he said. "I gave it to the guy," he said. "That minister got the spoon in his mouth, and whop."

The others at the table dropped their spoons, Terpil recalled, expressing regret only that he had not been able to record the incident on film for future amusement.

Terpil regaled the undercover agents with other tales of gore, in obscenity-laced language. He proudly recalled putting liquid explosive, tinted green to look like anti-freeze, into the radiator of a target diplomat's car, then detonating it by radio.

The car, Terpil boasted, "went about 40 feet in the air ... just little bits and pieces." He called it "a beautiful sight."

After describing other sophisticated explosive devices he had concocted, Terpil said: "We trained all the Libyans on how to do this ... They've been very successful at it."

Federal prosecutors observed of the fugitive Terpil and his nauseating recollections: "These were not things that were made up out of whole cloth. Whereas they may sound a bit (as if) they came out of a twisted and perverse character from an Ian Fleming or Inspector Forsythe novel, they are things that Mr. Terpil represented to undercover agents in New York, and which unfortunately, at least to the extent that they can be checked out and have thus far been checked out, have some substantiation."

GEORGE F. WILL

David Stockman is chisel in Reagan's economic work plan

WASHINGTON — The President dipped his pen in his enchanted ink and called the nation to order Thursday night. He did not again turn the public's bones to water — such raptures are for newlyweds, and hence are things of the past. But he did four useful things.

George F. Will

At a moment of national nervousness, not to say neurosis, about economic arcana, the President came front and center to show (as E.M. Forster said) that "keeping calm and cheerful is one of one's unshakable functions."

Second, he cauterized the Social Security issue, which could have turned the 1982 election into a referendum on the Republican "attack" on Social Security. The proposal to put off painful choices until after a bipartisan study is mandatory politics (there being no moral obligation to walk off a cliff). It also is a venerable Washington tradition. It is a combination of the Scarlett O'Hara Doctrine of Government ("I'll think about it tomorrow") and the "Annie" Hypothesis ("Tomorrow is always a day away").

Third, the President reaffirmed his determination to press for reductions in a range of other entitlement programs. An understandably skeptical financial community is watching for evidence that government can modify promises that were made improvidently. And the financial community is watching for evidence that this President can avoid the paralysis that has afflicted most recent Presidents. (The proposed AWACS sale is a threat to economic health because it may end with a presidential defeat that would be seen in financial as well as diplomatic circles as evidence that the United States still is not led by its President but by Congress, a fractious committee of 535.)

Fourth, the President focused attention on something the public understands and likes: cutting government payrolls. In this regard, it was interesting that the AFL-CIO, while staging "solidarity" rallies, does demonstrate class division — division within the labor movement. The division is between blue-collar workers and the "new class" white-collar workers of the public employees' unions. The latter are left-wing, shrill — and directly threatened by the President's program. Blue-collar workers know they pay taxes that pay for white-collar workers, with whom they feel something less than "solidarity." Tennyson said Browning would die in white-tie and some people may think Reaganites wear black-tie when cutting the budget. But the public is a lot angrier about "bureaucrats" than about Betsy Bloomingdale's parties.

It is reported that many congressmen are not so much angry at David Stockman as they are "sick and tired" of him. That does them no credit. Perhaps never in American history has an executive branch appointee been so indispensable to so much. Had he not been available for his job, the President's program would not have begun moving until May, and would not have moved far by next May. If the markets are jittery about Reaganite action, imagine how they would be in the face of inaction — in a fifth year of drift.

Some congressmen resent Stockman not because he is a constant bringer of bad news and poser of hard choices, but because he has risen above his — or their — station. Washington is a steep social pyramid, and many congressmen have little engines fueled by envy of a few who rise from anonymity — especially those whose rise is the merited result of industriousness in the service of imagination.

Stockman is guilty not only of precocity but of coherence. He understands that a great nation's economy is like a Rubik's Cube. It has six sides and you have to fix all six simultaneously. Congress is almost systematically incoherent, unable (when not just unwilling) to consider how one thing leads to, or is connected to, two thousand others.

Stockman is the sharp chisel the President needed for sculpting new politics from the granite of government inertia. Like a chisel, Stockman is sharp because he is narrow at the cutting edge. That is not to say he is intellectually narrow. He has reflected more profoundly than most about broad questions of social policy. To say he is narrow at his cutting edge is just to say he is, of necessity, tightly focused. Cutting is his job.

A chisel takes a pounding, and wears out. But that outcome is, I pray, a long way off, and before it happens Stockman will have set a standard of public service at which most subsequent servants will shoot in vain.

"Everything," said Dostoyevsky, "seems stupid when it fails." Reagan's program will seem stupid if (which I do not expect) it fails. Meanwhile, some of Stockman's critics resemble the British cavalry officer who was said to be so stupid even some of his fellow officers noticed.

"So the Prince rode up on an XM-1 tank. Then what, Grandpa?"

ART BUCHWALD

Being 'Great American' not too great!

My friend Walter VanderBeek is a lifelong Republican. This year he contributed five dollars to the 1981 GOP Victory Fund. He thought nothing more about his donation, until he received a large "Certificate of Recognition," suitable for framing. The certificate had two gold seals on it. He was also given a plastic card he could carry in his wallet, identifying him as a "1981 GOP Victory Fund Sponsor."

Art Buchwald

Accompanying these priceless documents was a "personal" letter from Congressman Guy Vander Jagt, Chairman of the Fund, telling Mr. VanderBeek the decision to award him his certificate was by unanimous vote of the National Republican Executive Committee, in appreciation for all Walter had done for the party.

Vander Jagt continued in his letter, "I wish I could deliver this certificate to you personally in Palmyra, New York. This would give me an opportunity to tell you in detail how your financial support etc., etc..."

The letter also spelled out how the Democrats, who were to blame for the most serious crisis since World War II, were now sabotaging President Reagan's plans to resolve it.

How do I know all this? Walter came into my office the other day and showed me the documents. He looked slightly crestfallen, and I asked him why.

"When I arrived on the Eastern shuttle, there was nobody there to meet me. I didn't expect the President, but he could have sent Vice President George Bush or Al Haig to be at the bottom of the ramp when I got off the plane."

I agreed.

"After a letter like this, they should have at least sent Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker's limousine. What brought you to Washington in the first place?"

"Well, I heard the Executive Committee of the NATIONAL Republican Party was holding a meeting, and I thought they might be looking for an ambassador for the Court of St. James. I wanted to be there in case they had any questions to ask me."

"Did they interview you?"

"I didn't get into the meeting. I showed my plastic 'Victory' card to the guard at the Republican National headquarters, and he escorted me to the door. He thought I was some kind of nut."

"I'll bet when Congressman Vander Jagt hears about it, that guard will have egg on his face," I said.

"I'm not too sure. I went up on the Hill to see Vander Jagt to complain about the treatment I had received since arriving in Washington, and even when I produced his letter they said he couldn't see me."

"You would think the congressman's staff would know who you were, after what you've done to defeat the Democrats."

"They were too busy stuffing 'Certificates of Recognition' into envelopes to notice I was even there."

"So what did you do next?"

"I heard there was a big dinner for Menachem Begin at the White House, so I called up Nancy Reagan's social secretary and told her I was free that night."

"Did she invite you to the dinner?"

"Not exactly. She told me to hold the line, and the next thing I knew I was talking to the Secret Service, who wanted to know where I was calling from."

"Well," I said, "for a guy who has been unanimously recognized as a Victory Fund sponsor by the Republican Party, I would say they were more interested in your five bucks, than they were in you."

"I'm starting to come to the same conclusion. And you know something else? I don't believe Congressman Vander Jagt ever did want to come to Palmyra, New York, to give me my certificate personally."

Will Texans change handling of state fiscal matters?

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Voters will be asked Nov. 3 to approve a constitutional amendment creating a state finance committee — a proposal which marks a major change in the way Texas handles its fiscal matters.

Proposition No. 3, which was carried in the Legislature as HB 30 by Rep. Bob Simpson, D-Amarillo, would allow the Legislature to authorize the committee to manage the expenditure of appropriated funds, except for constitutionally dedicated funds.

The committee would consist of the governor, lieutenant governor, speaker of the House of Representatives, and the chairmen of the Senate committees on Finance and State Affairs, and the House committees on Appropriations and on Ways and Means.

By statute, and by riders in the general appropriations bill, lawmakers could set conditions and limits on the committee actions.

The idea of giving the governor additional powers to manage the State's budget isn't a new idea, nor is opposition to it.

Limitations on the governor's authority were built into the 1876 Texas Constitution in part as a reaction to what were perceived as abuses of gubernatorial powers, and over the years, Texans have indicated they're more willing to trust the collective judgment of the Legislature in determining spending matters than to trust the judgment of one man (or woman).

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

But, as the poet wrote, new occasions teach new duties — and if the ancient truth of keeping the governor away from much of the spending process isn't exactly uncouth, it is becoming more difficult.

Lawmakers, in the normal course of events, are called in once every two years to figure out how much money state agencies will need for as far as two and and a half years ahead.

Unfortunately, the normal course of events is that things don't run as normally as the Legislature would hope — and some agencies end up with more money than they really needed, and some end up with less.

Critics of the process have argued, with some justification, that agencies tend to seek more money than they really anticipate needing, in order to avoid the problem of being caught short — with no prospects of any relief until the Legislature returns for its biennial meeting.

That desire for a "cushion" has led, the critics contend, to unnecessary spending by agencies in instances where too much money has been appropriated.

Part of that difficulty has been answered by the zero-based budget system begun by Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

But it's also true that few multi-billion dollar businesses would attempt to decide on expenditures on the basis used by the state.

Texans also have shown at the polls on several occasions that they have no desire for lawmakers to convene in Austin on an annual basis — even for the limited purpose of drawing up budgets.

With fast changing economic conditions, and with the changes in Federal policies under the Reagan Administration, additional uncertainties have come into the budget process.

Lawmakers took that uncertainty into consideration in drafting the State's new $27 billion two-year spending bill by providing authority for the proposed finance committee to allocate block grants to agencies.

Former Rep. Don Cavness of Austin, who is promoting passage of the amendment on behalf of the Sound Financial Management for Texas Committee, notes that it's still not certain in what form Federal funds will be arriving in Texas.

Some block grants are expected to go directly to an agency administering a program, while others may combine former categorical grants — which would make it more difficult to determine where the funds should go, Cavness explains.

That duty would be carried out by the proposed committee.

Cavness says that would remove the need for the Legislature to return for a special session to carry out that task, and could remove the need for some special sessions in the future on other financial matters.

The question, Cavness insists, isn't a liberal/conservative issue — but has support from groups such as the League of Women Voters, Texas Research League, Texas Association of Business and Common Cause.

Nov. 3s adds, is the amendment like that which was defeated in 1978 — when 56 percent of the voters turned down budget execution powers for the governor.

That proposal would have allowed the governor to transfer some funds with approval of the speaker and lieutenant governor.

Part of the reason that proposal went down, opponents say, is that it would have led to more political back-scratching among those officials — and they argue that same thing could occur under the new proposal, but with a few additional players.

So it will be up to Texans Nov. 3 to decide whether to experiment with allowing those officials to exercise more powers over state spending — or to reaffirm their century-old decision against that.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letters may be on any subject, but should not be slanderous or defamatory. They must be signed by the writer and must bear the writer's correct mailing address and a telephone number at which the writer may be contacted during the day, either home or office.

For valid reasons, at the discretion of the editor, the name will be withheld but must be included in the original letter.

Writers should be as concise as possible and the right to condense letters is reserved.

Letters must be received by noon Thursday for Sunday publication. If necessary, the latest received may be held for publication the following Tuesday or Thursday.

They should be addressed to: Letters to the Editor, The Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702.

To The Editor:

Remember the Liberty Amendment? It will help to restore the Constitution to full force and effect.

It will result in winning a number of battles such as: Stop inflation, permit the worker to take home a full paycheck, end the involuntary servitude of the "withholding" system, restore the people the right to have their local officials run affairs without federal dictation, put people in control of energy instead of having federal interference for the benefit of special interests, transfer to the states and the people the millions of acres of land now held by the federal government, cut off "foreign aid" to foreign tyrants, balance the budget, repeal the federal personal income tax, let the people put an end to the energy "crisis" instead of having the government make it worse, make it so that young couples will be able to own their own homes. There are many more blessings of the Liberty Amendment.

These states have already endorsed the Liberty Amendment, which is pending in Congress as House Joint Resolution 23: Wyoming, Texas, Nevada, Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi and Arizona.

Note of thanks

To The Editor:

On behalf of everyone involved in the creation and staging of the First Annual Septemberfest Jog-n-Grog Roadrace, I would like to thank the community for their participation and for helping Midland to host a first-class run for a very worthwhile organization.

The Midland Jaycees will now be able to conduct many civic projects throughout the year with a little larger treasury.

It is my hope that the community will contribute the time and energy in the future to insure the success of many more Jog-n-Grog Roadraces. Thanks again to everyone involved.

All I want...

To The Editor:

The last home delivery of The Reporter-Telegram I've received was Sept. 5 — which means I have not received a Sunday paper the last three weeks. Most exasperating!

I have made numerous calls to the circulation department and have written — the harassed clerks say they'll report it, and Wayne apologizes to me for having had to call — still no paper.

My check dated Aug. 24, 1981, for $12 has been returned, and next to the memo portion where I had written "Sept. Oct. & Nov. subscription" someone on the receiving end has made the notation "3-34". (I learned not to give cash money to the delivery people — that never gets recorded.)

I would really like to receive a paper daily, but if that is not possible I want my $12 refunded.

Is this a family squabble?

By WILLIAM J. QUIRK and JOSEPH TOVEY
Newsday

When Republican leaders start attacking Wall Street, it is time for the rest of us to pay attention. Is this a family squabble or does it have meaning for the ordinary person?

Howard Baker, sounding more like a commissar from Tashkent than a senator from Tennes ee, said earlier this month that he expected the Street to shape up, not within months or weeks, "but days." It's time, said Baker, that the financial community stopped playing "dangerous games" and "pulled on their oars." The previously subdued Rep. Robert H. Michel, House Republican leader from Illinois, followed up: "We can't live with a 20 percent prime rate and expect to see any economic recovery."

Wall Street seemed to lack gratitude for past administration favors; it happily took the pro-business tax and budget cuts, but now it said the trouble was deficits. Business needed to see a balanced budget (something it had not seen since the Eisenhower presidency), before it could have real faith in the future. The stock market sank to a 17-month low while the bond market lay on its back and played dead.

What would the administration do if Wall Street didn't shape up? There was talk, calculated to send chills up capstalist spines, of price controls, interest-rate controls and capital allocations (that is, the government would decide which businesses, communities, and projects would get money).

Wall Street's first response to the surprise attack was a half-hearted up-tickof the Dow Jones average, not enough to gladden the heart of a stockbroker, let alone a dashing commuter. Then the market went back to its downward plunge, alleviated only by an occasional tremor. In fact, said Wall Street, we have no power over interest rates, we just reflect the collective judgment of thousands and thousands of investors. High interest and a declining stock market were the investors' vote of no confidence in the administration. Wall Street was just the scorekeeper.

The stock market has always been a great mystery. Its smallest blips are dutifully reported daily on radio and TV and in newspapers.

Most people's reaction to this squabble is, "So what?" Few understand how all this ties into their rising utility bills and tax bills, their jobs and their kids' education. "How do Wall Street headaches and the administration reaction affect me?" they ask.

High interest rates are similar to the high fever of a malaria patient. They are a symptom of the disease, but also have their own serious side effects. Why this is so is of interest to economists; certainly not to the patient and his friends. The practical consequences are reflected almost immediately.

Item: A large part of your local tax bill is the cost of debt service. Municipal bonds sold 20 years ago at interest rates of 4 per cent or less. Today, the highest-rated municipal bond yields more than 15 percent interest; municipalities with lower ratings have to pay evgher interest. For an investor in the 50 percent tax bracket, a municipal bond provides a lucrative return which he could only match in a taxable bond by getting 30 percent interest.

But what happens when your local town and school district bonds come up for refinancing? Your real-estate tax rate on your home could increase by one-third for that reason alone. A $5-million schoolhouse will cost the taxpayers an additional $5 million each five years.

Item: Your daughter gets married and you loathe your son-in-law. You better learn to love him, because he will probably be living with you.

Why? The home you bought for $25,000 in 1955 on a 5 percent mortgage will now cost your daughter and son-in-law $150,000. If they can get a 20-year, $100,000 first mortgage at 14 per cent, and if they can put up a $50,000 down payment (plus more than $5,000 in closing costs), they will need about $1,500 per month for mortgage payments alone (before paying for such incidentals as taxes, heating, utilities, or dinner, a peanut-butter sandwich).

Item: Your utility bill includes a built-in factor for the interest costs of your local utility, as well as for its real-estate taxes. Your utility's interest cost rises, as old bond issues are refinanced, and its tax bills rise, as your town's bonds are refinanced. Do you want to bet that you can conserve yoruself into a lower bill?

Item: Your consumer interest rate cost has gone from 12 percent to 20 percent during the past five years; your employer's interest rate cost has gone from 6 percent to 22 percent. Your boss needs a new machine to keep operating costs competitive or he will have to cut operations. Do you think your job is safe, or will you have to agree to lower wages in order to preserve your job (as workers have already done in the tire and rubber industry)?

Let's say you look at all these horrors and decide to pack it in, sell your house, move to the Sun Belt and start your own business, with some help from your pension and savings plans. You now become acquainted with one of the facts of life — you have been, all along, a capitalist with a big stake in the stock market.

Item: You invested half your pension fund and all your savings fund in the stock of your employer. The decline in the stock market since you began investing, combined with the effects of high interest rates on the long-term bonds, bought by your plan in the days of stable, low interest rates, has reduced your payout from the $200,000 you'd planned on to $100,000. When inflation is taken into account, your annual real return has been about -5 percent for the past 10 years, even taking your tax benefits into account.

Item: You can't just give up and hold still. Your firm has been taken over by a foreign firm that thinks American firms are overmanned, and is eliminating your section of the employee-relations department. This take-over was only possible because low stock market valuation made buying your firm, as compared with the cost of building up a firm, a bargain to foreigners loaded with dollars. Many of these dollars initially went abroad to buy oil and otherwise pay tribute, as the price of Saudi crude rose from $1.60 in 1971 to $32.00 in 1981.

President Reagan thought he deserved Wall Street's praise for reducing inflation, 18 percent under Jimmy Carter, down to 8 percent. With inflation at 18 percent, an interest rate of 21 percent would give a tax-exempt lender (like a pension plan) a return of 3 percent. Indeed, a lender taxable on the 21 percent interest (like a bank) would lose money — about 8 percent annually. But 21 percent interest, with 8 percent inflation, is unnecessarily high compensation to the lender. One would expect rates to come down.

At this stage, the market is reflecting uncertainty about whether inflation is in fact licked — whether the administration will be able, politically, to maintain a strong and constant anti-inflation policy while proceeding with its defense and other needs. The printing press policies of past administrations are not easily forgotten.

If the president does succeed, and his policies are perceived as succeeding, a benign circle (the opposite of a vicious circle) will ensue, marked by lower interest, lower inflation and increased economic growth. More important, you will not need to put up with your son-in-law. Until the uncertainty is resolved, and investors, both in the United States and abroad, perceive the inflation rate as diminishing, high interest will persist.

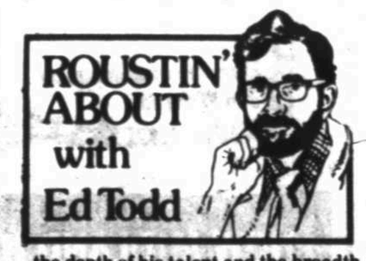
Man's fear of failure: Life's deadly dead end



Everybody's got potential. But not everyone is willing to conjure up the courage, wherewithal, knowhow or enterprising spirit to find out what that potential could yield.

The fear of failure has been the downfall of many an earnest soul. It is a cul-de-sac.

Everybody has got to crack the shell of fear and self-doubt, fire up that potential, allay those fears and be willing to fail in pursuit of fulfillment.

Success, after all, is not guaranteed and certainly is impossible to achieve without a willingness to try and try again even if failure wins first. Eventually, failure will be the loser if you persist in defeating it. Ask for help from the Power that rules the Universe.

All of that sounds like good advice, which is just ink on paper and, in a sense, is just like blowing into the wind.

Potential.

Having potential may be likened to having talent and good intent. Without direction and development, it's a resource that will die with the bearer. And in that regard, no one should want this epitaph on his tombstone:

He had potential
or
He had talent
or
He once was alive but liveth not

No one's life should be bleak and without fulfillment. No one, whatever the depth of his talent and the breadth of his love and caring, should be a void wasteland.

Oh, no.

Potential.

How many times have you heard: "He has potential but...look at him." On the other side of that "but" is a bud that never flowered. The bud had potential to become a work of art, but faded before it blossomed. It's like a handful of seed cast into the wind and strewn over a barren desert. Only a miracle from heaven could cause substance and beauty to spring forth from the ill-cast seed.

A fear, an apprehensive, gnawing away at ol' E. Todd is the prospect of lying on the funeral bier and, if the dead have consciousness, realizing that life was without meaning and substance. That it was incomplete, that the self had neglected to strive toward full potential, and that time had run out before striving for perfection, however unattainable, had begun.

That is the fear: Not daring to reach.

POSITIVE THINKING

Make new friends of old enemies

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

I received a wonderful letter from a young married woman who has a terrific new attitude toward life. From the picturesque old town in the Midwest where she lives she wrote: "I've developed a great new outlook on life and have a better attitude. For as long as I can remember I have been defeating myself with feelings of inferiority and nervousness. Now I have begun to practice what you suggest and I too have found that it really works.

"I have replaced my usual grim expression with a smile and I find it much more satisfying to have good things to say abut people instead of derogatory remarks. I have again taken up prayer and I truly believe that it has already begun to work for me. I never knew before," she admits, "the effective use of faith.

"Now I find myself practicing my beliefs. As a result I have a more cheerful outlook. I have finally learned and accepted the fact that no one is against me but myself. I have been able to make new friends out of old enemies."

Then my correspondent goes on to illustrate her new-found attitude with this down-to-earth incident: "Last night, just for fun, I ran a little experiment at the laundromat. As you may know, there's not much fun in doing laundry. Well, I cleared my mind of any previous dislike of laundry and told myself that it simply had to be done and that I must make the best of the situation." (And, may I interrupt, that is just plain common sense, isn't it? If there is something you have to do, like it or not, you may a well make the best of it while you do it.) "So," the young woman continues, "with my new-found smile firmly and pleasantly in place, I started out. I smiled at everyone, and in turn peope smiled back at me. When one of the washing machines I was using quit, a lady came up and helped me fix it.

"Then I noticed a man having trouble with the candy machine. Thinking that the coin he was using might be defective, I offered to trade coins with him. The machine still didn't work, but while I wasn't looking this man picked up my empty soda bottle and returned it to the rack for me." (One thing leads to another, you see, and there was still more to come.) "Then a young father sitting there with his nine-month-old daughter struck up a conversation with me. Time passed quickly." By the time she left the laundromat she ws so happy that instead of cursing all the obnoxious drivers on the road she just hummed a song, marveling at how much better she felt.

"I have forgotten about myself and the problems I had imagined myself to have," she concludes. "I have put in their place a sincere interest in others and a desire to show them every kindness. I have come out of my shell at long last. I cannot adequately describe the happiness I now feel, instead of the self-pity and self-hate that once was me. I have interested my husband and he too is beginning to find a change coming over him. I nag less and find more things to be thankful for."

Now that she has made progress with herself, this woman's story makes it sound easier, of course, than it actually was. Basic changes in oneself cannot be achieved without arduous self-discipline. A person who runs from the challenge of persevering efforts ends up by being the same old person living the same old unsatisfactory life.

How then an you ever do it? It is accomplished by linking your self-disciplinary determination to another and greater power of the mind. And that is the mental faculty which through all experience and difficulty steadily practices faith coupled with the desire to change your attitudes and thoughts to creative and positive ones.

That is the combination which brings victory over toughest obstacles time and time again. And it is important to change for not only will it make you happier and more effective in living but it transforms relationships. As the woman who wrote said, it transforms enemies into friends. It also has the power to change yourself — which, if you are like me, is the toughest proposition of all.

How much will competition cost?

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With All Savers certificates and other new competition on the horizon, is the boom in money-market mutual funds about to end?

That's the $156 billion question being debated in financial circles. And as they are wont to do, the experts disagree widely about the answer.

The story of the money funds' surge in assets — from about $74 billion at the start of the year to $156 billion at mid-September — is a familiar one by now.

The funds offer easy-in, easy-out liquidity and access to the high yields available in short term interest-bearing investments such as corporate commercial paper.

For months now, money-market trends have helped give them an edge on such competing investments as six-month money market certificates offered by banks and savings institutions.

At the moment, the maximum interest rate on six-month MMCs is about 14.38 percent. Money-fund yields, by contrast, have been averaging about 17 percent lately.

Next week, however, a new vehicle enters the race — the All Savers certificate created by the 1981 tax law, paying tax-free interest at the rate of 70 percent of the investment yield of Treasury bills.

For the first four days of October, All Savers certificates will be available carrying a rate of 12.6 percent — equal to an 18.9 percent taxable return for a person in the 33-percent tax bracket.

Married taxpayers filing joint returns are permitted up to $2,000 in tax-free income a year from All Savers certificates. At a 12.6 percent interest rate, that means an investment of $15,860 — pretty close to the size of the average money-fund shareholder's account.

The relative appeal of the two choices depends to a large degree on an individual's income. The higher the tax bracket, the greater the value of the All Savers tax exemption.

But a good many investors in the highest tax brackets have far more than $15,860 in savings, and thus would presumably be likely to keep at least some of their assets in money funds.

In addition, many sophisticated investors set great store by the liquidity money funds offer. Thus, they might be put off by the requirement that All Savers money remain on deposit for a year, at an interest rate that doesn't change no matter what open-market interest rates do.

On the plus side for All Savers plans, they are covered by federal deposit insurance. Money funds, while their short history has brought them a reputation for safety, carry no such guarantees.

However successful All Savers is, some experts point out that there are other powerful forces working to keep the money-fund business growing. Sears Roebuck, Mastercard, Visa, and other organizations with massive customer bases are laying plans to offer their own versions of money funds.

And the same law that created All Savers also extends to all workers the right to establish individual retirement accounts, IRAs, starting in 1982, thus creating a potential huge new market for money funds as well as other financial organizations.

Since taxes on IRAs are deferred, the kind of tax break offered by All Savers is irrelevant for them.

For such reasons, some people expect the money-fund boom not only to continue, but also to gather even more momentum.

Stained glass instruction offered

Lampshade construction, one of the most popular classes at Midland Stained Glass Center, is scheduled during October. Meeting from 6:30 to 9 p.m. for three sessions, October 12, 19, and 26, this class is for intermediate level hobbyists who have already learned basic stained glass construction. Each person taking the class will choose the pattern and glass desired for either a Tiffany or lead construction lampshade.

For those interested in glass etching classes, there will be one Monday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. and another on Saturday, October 10, from 1 to 3 p.m. This is a fascinating process with very professional results, so if you haven't already learned how to etch glass, call Midland Stained Glass Center and inquire about these or future classes.

Morning classes for beginners are scheduled to coincide with Mother's Day Out programs in local churches. A call to store manager Valerie Lee, at 697-0322, will give you the latest dates for beginning classes. Intermediate classes using both lead and copper foil construction are also available; again, call Valerie for class times.

Keep Midland Stained Glass Center in mind when making up your Christmas gift list. Both small and large gifts of glass are very special because each is designed for a particular person and displays his or her interests, colors, monogram, etc.

Ducommun in operation

Ducommun's new metal service center, now if full operation in Midland County, features a 6-foot-deep plate pit. Metal is easily identifed for quick distribution of customers throughout the Permian Basin. The facility is one of sixteen in a chain of metal service centers in the nation.

Ducommun Metals' new metal service center in Midland County is now in full operation. The new division is the sixteenth in a chain of metal service centers throughout the United States. The announcement was made by company president, Paul Berney.

Located on a seven-acre site in Midland County the new facility has 30,000 sq. ft. of plant space for storage, metal processing and administration. The service center is expandable to 50,000 sq. ft.

The new facility serves the oil, gas and energy industries and has some of the most sophisticated special pre-production processing equipment available including a CM-250 automatic flame cutting machine, a 26 inch automatic HE&M bandsaw, a Do-All bandsaw and a 10-ton double hoist radio controlled cab bridge crane.

The Midland/Odessa division will also feature a plate pit, a 44 x 70 ft. area, 6 ft. deep for handy storage and quick identification of the metal wanted.

INVESTORS GUIDE

Getting good advice

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We are retired and selling our house, at an expected profit of at least $100,000. We will move to a different state, where we have relatives. We will eventually buy a house there. But, for about a year, we want to rent and look around.

What should we do with our money, between the time we sell and buy? My thought was to put it in 182-day savings certificates. One of our children thinks we should split the money between savings certificates, U.S. Treasury bills (T bills) and a money market mutual fund — to put our eggs in different baskets.

We mainly want to be sure we would have money available, if we find a home we want to buy. What do you think?

A. That you're getting good advice from your child and that you should keep enough money in a money market mutual fund to cover the down payment on any home you might buy.

Assuming either you or your husband is 55 or older, you won't have to pay any capital gains tax on the profit from the sale of your present home. The new federal tax law allows you to escape tax on up to $125,000 profit from the sale of a principal residence sold after July 20, 1981. That "once-in-a-lifetime" exclusion previously was $100,000.

Until you need it, you'll naturally want all the money from the sale of your present home in safe, high-yielding investments, such as your child suggests. The yield on 26-week T bills is higher than the yield on 182-day savings certificates. And, right now, the yield on most money market funds is even higher.

The interest rates on both T bills and savings certificates don't change between the dates they are issued and their maturity dates. The yields on money market funds can rise or fall, depending upon ups and downs of interest rates. So, with T bills and savings certificates you can "lock in" interest until maturity. You can't do that with money market funds.

But you can get your cash out of a money market mutual fund, simply by writing a check against your account. If you want the money in a T bill before it matures, you have to sell it in the marketplace and you might take a loss. If you redeem a 182-day savings certificate before maturity, you sustain an early withdrawal penalty equal to three months' interest.

Q. I would like to know if a money market certificate is the same thing as a money market mutual fund. If not, what is the risk in each?

A. No, they are not the same things.

A money market certificate (MMC) is the popular name for a savings certificate issued for a term of 182 days by a bank, savings and loan association or credit union. Federal agency insurance covers each depositor up to $100,000. In effect, that makes a MMC risk-free.

A money market mutual fund ("money fund," for short) is a mutual fund that invests in short-term "money market instruments," such as U.S. Treasury bills, certificates of deposit, bankers' acceptances, commercial paper and letters of credit. When you put money into a money fund, you become a shareholder — not a depositor.

The risk in money funds is mighty small. To date, shareholders of only one money fund have taken a loss on their investments. In that case, they lost only seven cents on the dollar.

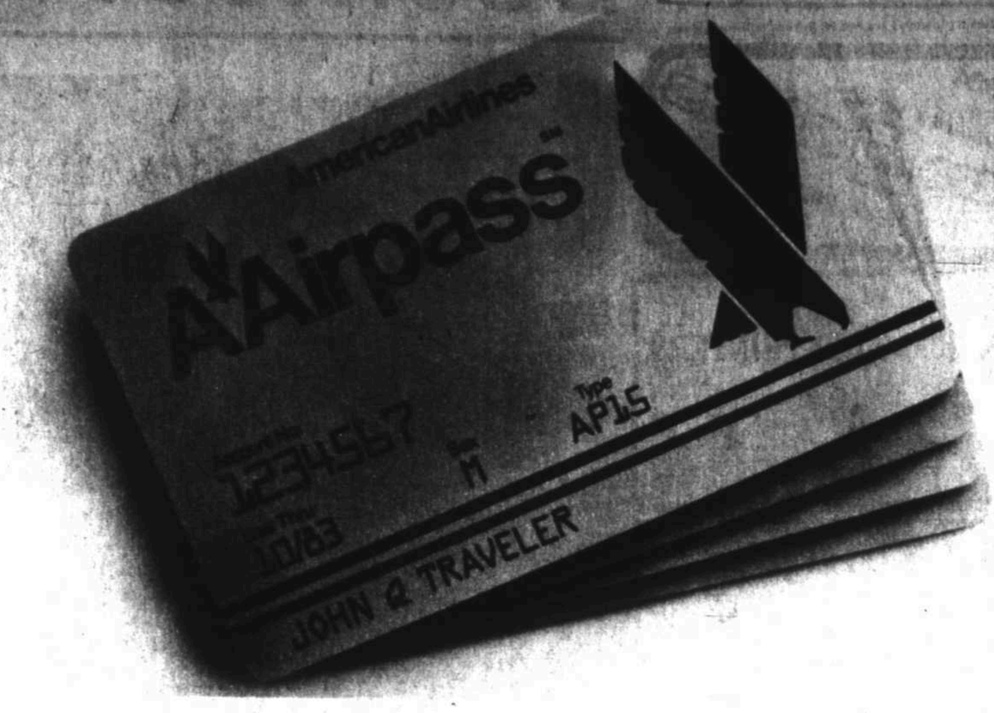
Nestle asks task force to monitor compliance

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — The United Methodist Church Infant Formula Task Force says the Nestle Corp. has asked it to monitor the company's compliance with an international baby formula code adopted by the World Health Organization.

J. Philip Wogaman, dean of the Wesley Theological Seminary in Washington and chairman of the task force, said Nestle representatives made the request during a private meeting here Friday.

Wogaman said the task force had made no decision on the proposal.



American announces AAirpass

American Airlines has unveiled a new travel plan in which a frequent passenger can purchase a card entitling him or her to five, 10, 15 years or a lifetime of travel at one price.

American Airlines unveiled early last week an unprecedented fare plan that guarantees pre-determined personal and business air travel costs for a period of from five years to a lifetime.

The plan, called AAirpass, "is a simplified approach to planning travel expenses and using air transportation that at the same time constitutes a practical hedge against inflation," said Robert L. Crandall, American's president, who made the announcement.

"For a one-time payment, AAirpass exempts its holder from all future American Airlines fare increases over whatever term is selected — five, 10, 15 years or lifetime," Crandall said. "It offers both special service features and economic benefits."

The plan, to be offered until March 31, 1982, includes five options:

—Five, 10 and 15-year AAirpass good for 25,000 coach miles a year. Cost is $19,900, $39,900 and $58,900, respectively, for the passes.

—A Lifetime AAirpass for those 52 years of age and older allowing 25,000 miles a year. Cost is $66,000.

—A Leisure Lifetime AAirpass for those 62 and older allowing 12,500 miles a year. Cost if $15,500.

—A five-year Leisure Aairpass for travelers 65 and older good for 12,500 miles a year. Cost is $8,000.

—An Unlimited Lifetime AAirpass valid for unlimited miles in any class of service. Cost is $250,000.

"All of the options permit the traveler to lock in air travel costs at a very favorable rate per mile," Crandall said. "It now costs about $180 to $200 to fly 1,000 coach miles on our domestic routes," he pointed out, adding that with the basic five-year plan "the cost per mile works out to about 15.9 cents and, depending on future air travel inflation rates, savings will increase in each year of participation in the plan.

"Assuming a 12 percent air transportation inflation rate, and current costs of $200 per 1,000 miles, the five-year plan offers the purchaser a pre-tax return of 22.9 percent on the initial payment," he said.

Assuming that a customer flies at least 25,000 miles a year on American at 20 cents a mile, he or she would expect to pay about $5,000 for that transportation.

With an expected 12 percent a year increase in fares, the cost per mile would be 22.4 cents a year from now, or $5,600 for the same 25,000 miles. By 1986, the customer would be paying about $8,800 for those same 25,000 miles.

The five-year plan keeps the cost at 15.9 cents per mile. Expected savings over five years is estimated at $5,100, if there was no inflation, according to Crandall. Figuring in 12 percent inflation, the purchaser would save $15,677.

Customers will carry an AAirpass card and will receive a regularly monthly itemized statement of mileage used. On the anniversary of enrollment in the plan, all unused mileage will be carried forward and added to the basic allowance for the following year.

However, if more mileage is used that year than what is allowed, the customer will be billed on a cents per mile basis.

Additional amenities that come with the cards include complimentary membership in the American Airlines Admirals Club for the term of the program, use of first class check-in desks, a simplified write-your-own-ticket system that gives AAirpass customers a supply of ticket coupons, free cocktails and entertainment headsets and use of a special 24-hour reservations hotline number.

"This program is the latest in a long line of pricing and service innovations developed by American," Crandall said.

Jack McAdams Jr., general manager for American Airlines in the Midland-Odessa region, can be contacted for further information about the AAirpass at 563-4680.

McAdams commented that it has taken a year of planning to get this system set up. Even if other airlines follow suit, he expects it to take several months because of the work involved in programming the computers.
