Despite forecast, skies shine on Mex-Tex Menudo Cookoff

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

In the pouring rain Friday morning, setup crews for the 13th annual Mex-Tex Menudo Cookoff put together booths, lined up tables and counted out the chairs staring at the heavens the whole time.

The forecast called for a 50 percent chance of rain during the day, jumping to 70 percent once the sun went down.

> — Rachel Stone, of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce

As program officials went all over town hoping to find a place to host the show if the rain did not let up, and workers at Centennial Plaza were almost knee high in mud and water, a funny thing happened.

The sun came out and dried up all the rain and prospects for the weekend event were suddenly brighter.

"I knew it was not going to rain," said Rachel Stone, of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. "At one point out here (Centennial Plaza) you could not even see the curb because the water was so high. But I kept saying, 'The rain will stop, I know it will' and sure enough it did."

MHCC Executive Director David Diaz said he did not quite share Ms. Stone's confidence in the weather. He said as the rain came down Friday morning he had his doubts about the event happening as planned.

"I was a little nervous," Diaz said. "But the show is happening and I'm sure War will put on a good show."

Diaz was not the only soul watching the skies hoping for the rain to stop before Friday night. Pam Rodriguez planned to come all the way from Alpine to see War, the 70s rock band.

"I love their music," Ms. Rodriguez said. " I wouldn't buy my ticket because I was scared the show was not going to happen. All the way over here the roads were bad, but I really wanted to see the group. So here I am."

However, come rain or shine, some people, like Sonya Santiago of Midland, were going to be at the show.

"I knew about the weather but I also saw how they were going to have the show no matter what," Ms. Santiago said. "But I just like to go out and have a good time, so as long as they were going to open the gates I was going to be here."

Farmers, ranchers grateful for almost inch of rain, would like to see more

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The rains that blanketed much of West Texas from the Panhandle to the Rio Grande early Friday helped farmers and ranchers, but much more is needed to ensure crops at harvest time and tall grass for livestock, according to local producers.

"We got a good rain," said Jimmie Meeks, who noted that about an inch of rain pelted the DeWayne and Janey Lindsey Ranch south of Midland in Upton County where she tends to the ranch.

"It was wonderful," Ms. Meeks said. "It has been dry and barren and hot. We hope this rain will help improve it (the grassland) tremendously."

The rainfall was "pretty widespread," noted Greg Murdoch, meteorologist for the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Chamber sets priorities for coming year

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Staff and board members of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, joined by community leaders, met Friday to set the chamber's priorities for the coming year.

Firmly placed at the top of the list was economic development.

"What a difference a year makes," observed Buddy Sipes, chairman of the chamber's board of directors, noting that at last year's retreat, energy prices were low, jobs had been lost and the attitude was gloomy.

"Now, oil and gas prices are strong, retail sales are up, there are smiles on faces as people walk downtown or at the mall. But what did we learn in the last year? How dependent we are on the oil and gas industry. What will it take to lessen that dependence?"

He predicted that "the community will have to face the issue of an economic development tax again."

Later, Sipes said, though there has been a lot of discussion on the issue, there is no time frame because "we do not want to interfere with what the school district is doing. We'll wait and watch and see how the school district does with its bond election and then we'll see where we go."

Guest speaker Dr. Bernard Weinstein, professor of applied economics at the University of North Texas and director of the school's Center for Economic Development noted, in the 1980s, a number of Texas communities got serious about economic development. At the time, he said, he headed a similar center at Southern Methodist University and was hired by the Midland and Odessa chambers to provide an economic development study, much of which he said was covered in the Vision 2000 and Beyond process last year. At present, he is working on a project for the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, he said.

To grow an economy, he recommended finding new markets for old products, finding new products for old markets, and import substitution, or finding goods and services presently being imported and creating them locally.

If he had his druthers, he told the gathering, he would do without economic incentives, pointing out that no business decides where to locate based on incentives.

"Incentives should never be the centerpiece of economic development plans. Location, infrastructure, education and work force should be," he said. "But in this imperfect world, Midland has to be able to offer packages similar to its neighbors. It ought to be able to offer what everyone else offers. But keep in mind, no business chooses where to locate based on cash incentives."

Whatever strategy Midland chooses, he said, "focus on what is happening in the real world. A dose of realism is a must. And don't waste your resources on companies that will nev-

Louis Dreyfus high bidder for Costilla properties

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

It has been a matter of conjecture for some weeks that Louis Dreyfus Natural Gas Corp. was the high bidder for the total oil and gas properties of Costilla Energy Inc. That was confirmed Friday when Costilla announced the Oklahoma City company was the successful bidder with a top bid of $133,250,000.

The sale is expected to conclude some time in June, but it may be longer before it is known how the purchase will affect Permian Basin operations.

Guy McCrary said it was previously reported that the sale, which is still to be approved by the U.S. Bankruptcy Court, was for $100 million. He said Costilla, which has a total of 65 employees with 31 in Midland, previously filed bankruptcy proceedings with the United States Bankruptcy Court on Sept. 3, 1999.

Louis Dreyfus, one of the most active gas drillers in the Permian Basin, will acquire 387 wells in the Permian Basin, 466 in South and East Texas and 37 in other areas, representing total proven reserves of 3,505 million barrels of oil and 78,037 million cubic feet of gas.

Kevin White, a spokesman for Louis Dreyfus, said the properties were a good geographic fit for the company. "We are very active in Sonora, New Mexico and other parts of the Basin, and we have properties in South Texas. This will be a nice add on to where we already have properties."

White said Louis Dreyfus, which is balanced 85 percent for natural gas, was a very active driller. "We have drilled 125 wells per year in the Sonora areas since 1994 and have 150 planned for this year."

He said he didn't know, however, how the company would organize its operations in the Permian Basin or how many Costilla employees it might retain. "We haven't finalized our plans on that front. The time table for the acquisition to close is mid-June, and we will take a look at it then." The company currently has 400 total employees in field operations and at offices in Houston and Oklahoma City.

Mark Monroe, president and chief executive officer, commented: "This purchase, which we will fund with borrowing from our credit facility, fulfills all our key acquisition criteria. It is predominantly natural gas, located in our core operating regions and provides us with future drilling opportunities."

In addition to 42 wells successfully drilled and completed in the Sonora area, the company has enjoyed success in other areas of the Basin.

The Loco Hills 4-1 located in Southeast New Mexico recently was completed in the Morrow formation with an initial production rate equivalent to 9.4 million cubic feet a day. The company owns a 38 percent working interest in the well, which has two offset wells currently drilling.

The company also owns a 70 percent working interest in the State ETA No. 3 and No. 4 wells, which were recently completed for a combined initial production rate of five million cubic feet equivalent daily.

Altogether the Louis Dreyfus plans another 108 wells to be drilled this year in the Basin, but the addition of the Costilla properties could up this number.

President tells Europeans to open their doors to Russia

AACHEN, Germany (AP) — Standing at an ancient cathedral and honored with a prestigious diplomatic prize, President Clinton questioned Friday whether Russia's "hard-won democratic freedoms will endure" and said the West must close ranks with its former Cold War foe.

"That means no doors can be sealed shut to Russia," Clinton declared, specifically mentioning NATO, the Western military alliance, and the 15-nation European Union, which focuses on trade and security issues.

Clinton's pointed remarks took on special significance on the eve of his arrival in Moscow for his first summit with Russia's new president, Vladimir Putin.

"Only time will tell what Russia's ultimate role in Europe will be," Clinton said. "We do not know if Russia's hard-won democratic freedoms will endure. We don't know yet whether it will define its greatness in yesterday's terms or tomorrow's."

While expressing concern about Russia's direction and dismay over its crackdown in Chechyna, Clinton found "reason for hope in Russia's remarkable journey over these last few years from dictatorship to democracy."

Several thousand people sat under a hot sun in the cobblestoned square at Aachen Cathedral to watch Clinton receive the International Charlemagne Prize, one of Europe's top honors. He smiled and briefly fingered the golden medallion when it was draped around his neck in recognition of his work to promote European unity and peace.

Hoping to build his legacy with fewer than eight months left in his term, Clinton became the first American president to win the Charlemagne award. Ten previous winners witnessed the ceremony, including President Vaclav Havel of the Czech Republic, King Juan Carlos I of Spain, former British Prime Minister Edward R.G. Heath and former German President Walter Scheel.

The only Americans ever to receive the award are former Secretaries of State Henry Kissinger and George Marshall, architect of the U.S. program to rebuild Europe after World War II. The award carries a prize of about $2,500 which Clinton said he would donate to student exchange programs.

Before he spoke, Clinton toured the weathered cathedral, which dates back to the 9th century when the Holy Roman emperor Charlemagne ruled a large swath of western Europe from his palace in Aachen.

In assessing Russia, Clinton coupled his concerns with sharp criticism.

"Russia has stayed on the path of democracy though its people have suffered bitter economic hardships, political and criminal violence," Clinton said. He said "the tragedy of the war in Chechnya ... may prove to be self-defeating because of the civilian casualties."

More broadly, Clinton lamented "potentially harmful misperceptions" on both sides of the Atlantic — that Europe does not carry its fair share of global responsibilities and that America's military, economic and cultural power is overbearing.

"Europe and America should draw strength from our trans-Atlantic alliance," the president said. "Europe should not be threatened by it, and America must not listen to those who say we should go it alone."

While Clinton emphasized European unity, German Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder raised concerns that a proposed U.S. national missile defense system could "have an impact far beyond the U.S.A." by sparking a global arms race. He softened his remarks by acknowledging that America has a sovereign right to decide how to protect its national security.

Tracing his role in European affairs, Clinton said the United States and its allies lowered trade barriers, supported fledgling democracies, expanded NATO, supported Russia and stopped the bloodshed in Bosnia and Kosovo.

Developer of radial keratotomy killed in crash

MOSCOW (AP) — Eye surgeon Svyatoslav Fyodorov, — who pioneered radial keratotomy, an operation to correct nearsightedness — died Friday when his helicopter crashed in Moscow, a police spokesman said.

The three other people aboard were killed, officials said. Their identities were not immediately available.

The body of the 72-year-old doctor was identified by his wife and by staffers from his eye clinic at the crash site, an open area surrounded by tall apartment blocks in the Russian capital's northwest, the ITAR-Tass news agency said.

There was no immediate word on the possible cause of the crash, but ITAR-Tass cited witnesses as saying the helicopter was emitting black smoke just before it went down.

Fyodorov was a licensed pilot, and footage on the NTV television channel showed him climbing into one of the craft's pilot seats shortly before the helicopter took off from the city of Tambov, about 300 miles southeast of Moscow on Friday afternoon.

Fyodorov made his name in the 1970s by developing radial keratotomy, the first corneal surgery to correct nearsightedness. The procedure, in which surgeons use a knife to make small slices on the cornea, flattening it for better sight, was the precursor to laser surgery.

The procedure was highly popular in Russia and abroad. Hundreds of thousands of Americans have undergone radial keratotomy since its debut in the United States around 1978.

At his clinic in Moscow, Fyodorov created a highly profitable assembly-line operating system that treated tens of thousands of people a year. It involved patients lying on padded tables moved along steel tracks through five work stations manned by surgeons.

Police tactics criticized in hostage case; gunman recovering

A police officer carries one of the three released hostages near the kindergarten in Wasserbillig, Luxembourg, on Thursday. Journalists are criticizing Luxembourg police for posing as TV cameramen to lure out a heavily armed man who held 25 children and three adults hostage in a day care center. Police promised him an interview, then shot him twice in the head.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Luxembourg police faced criticism Friday from the world's largest journalists' group for using officers posing as a TV crew to lure a gunman into an ambush and end a hostage crisis. But a journalism professor said he would excuse the deception because lives were saved.

When the gunman emerged for an "interview" Thursday holding a child in one arm and a grenade in the other, police posing as cameramen shot him twice in the head. The tactic led to rescue of 25 children and three adults who had been held hostage for about 30 hours.

"These are disturbing tactics," cautioned Aidan White, general secretary of the International Federation of Journalists. "Cameramen are always potential targets when filming in dangerous conditions. Incidents like this may put them even more at risk from trigger-happy criminals."

The Brussels-based federation, which represents more than 450,000 journalists worldwide, asked for an investigation into the police tactics.

"Each year many journalists die reporting on incidents of violence. ... Their life is dangerous enough without adding to their difficulties," White said in a statement.

Luxembourg police defended their strategy, saying it minimized the threat to the hostages. Interior Minister Michel Wolters said the hostage-taker's demand for TV airtime gave police an opportunity to get a clear shot.

"He was very mistrustful. ... We were ready to do it (before) but he didn't come far enough out," Wolters said.

Northeastern University journalism professor Nicholas Daniloff said the tactic was "a case of deception, and journalists as a whole try not to be deceptive."

And Fred Brown, chairman of the Society for Professional Journalists' Ethics Committee, agreed.

"This just adds to the sense that journalists are not always what or who they appear to be," he said.

Still, Daniloff said the situation called for extreme measures. Since the hostages were freed unharmed and the hostage-taker arrested, Daniloff said he would be inclined to forgive this case.

"This was a question of saving lives," he said. "You can argue that the results justified what was done."

Hostage-taker Neji Bejaoui, an unemployed Tunisian immigrant, was shot at the day-care center in Wasserbillig, a village of 2,300 people in eastern Luxembourg.

Bejaoui was recovering from his injuries Friday after surgery, and police said his wounds were no longer life-threatening.

Authorities released details Friday about the 39-year-old gunman who brandished a pistol, a hand grenade and a knife as he seized his hostages Wednesday.

In a statement, the Luxembourg government said Bejaoui had a history of violence and was convicted of assault in 1998. He had been seeing a psychiatrist for several years.

It called Bejaoui "very unstable" and said he suffers from paranoia and craves attention.

The statement said Bejaoui, who lived in the nearby village of Manternach and obtained Luxembourgish nationality in 1991, was seeking to avenge a 1994 decision to deny him custody of his two children. Residents of Wasserbillig said he blamed the day care center for the loss of custody when he and his wife separated.

Prime Minister Jean-Claude Juncker said police were forced to act when Bejaoui demanded to flee in a car with three children. In a statement, the government said the decision to act also came after Bejaoui brought crying children to the telephone, then refused to speak to police negotiators.

Police then sent in the two officers disguised as journalists with Radio Television Luxembourg. Col. Pierre Reuland of the Luxembourg police said the force requisitioned cameras and other equipment from RTL.

He refused to comment on reports police had used a gun hidden in a camera, but RTL Station Manager Vic Reuter said the camera was returned with no damage.

Italian official discloses bisexuality amid Gay Pride furor

ROME (AP) — An Italian Cabinet member has shattered a taboo by publicly declaring himself bisexual amid the growing furor over World Gay Pride week.

Agriculture Minister Alfonso Pecoraro Scanio revealed his sexual orientation in this week's issue of Panorama news magazine, which hit the newsstands Friday. "Courageous," said the caption under his photo.

Very few public figures in Italy outside the fashion world are openly anything but heterosexual. Pecoraro Scanio's announcement won quick praise in some circles.

"He broke a taboo," the daily newspaper La Repubblica said Friday.

The only openly gay member of parliament, Niki Vendola, also praised Pecoraro Scanio.

"A double morality is in force in our country in which some things can be done, but they can't be spoken about," Vendola said in a television interview. "I think a lot of colleagues are afraid to come out of the dark."

But Alessandra Mussolini, granddaughter of dictator Benito Mussolini, was quick to criticize Pecoraro Scanio for going public. Mussolini is a member of parliament from the National Alliance, a party born out of the ashes of her grandfather's political movement.

"Sexuality should remain a private matter," she said.

In its interview, Panorama asked Pecoraro Scanio if he is gay. The 41-year-old lawyer replied that he is bisexual.

"I'm against choosing just homosexuality or heterosexuality in a rigid, old-fashioned style," he said. "Me, I choose absolute sexual liberty."

Pecoraro Scanio, a member of the Green Party from the southern city of Salerno, joined the Cabinet last month when Giuliano Amato became premier.

Amato's opposition to World Gay Pride week has divided his center-left coalition and helped stoke a controversy ignited by the Roman Catholic Church's attempts to get the event canceled or postponed.

World Gay Pride is a weeklong celebration in July that is expected to draw tens of thousands of people to Rome. The Vatican says Catholic pilgrims visiting Rome for the Holy Year would be offended by the sight of gays and lesbians.

The church teaches that homosexual behavior is a sin. Rightist politicians also want the event canceled.

Pecoraro Scanio said in the Panorama interview that the church is wrong to oppose the event.

ECONOMY: Officials identify methods for diversification

(From 1A)

er relocate to Midland for any reason."

As a result of last year's Vision 2000 and Beyond process, an economic development council has been formed, chaired by Ken Burgess, chief executive officer of First National Bank of Midland.

Burgess said the council has formed subcommittees, with one focusing on marketing to the community the need for economic development, and another, led by Dr. Michael Miller, that is working toward economic development through the healthcare industry.

Tourism has been identified as another method for diversification, and Shura Lindgren, director of convention and visitor development for the chamber, said that bookings for conventions, group events and sporting events through the Convention and Visitors Bureau are up, as is the amount of visitor spending, but the number of room nights spent at local hotels is down.

That tells her, she said, that the city needs to diversify even within tourism, to lessen its dependence on corporate travel and expand leisure, group and sports tourism.

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram
Bobby Norman, with First American Bank, takes notes Friday morning at the Midland Chamber breakfast.

As participants discussed their priorities for the next year, Sipes wanted to see additional support for the Midland-Odessa Health and Retirement Endeavor, which markets the two cities to retirees.

Linda Bond, executive director of the Arts Assembly of Midland, advocated emphasizing Midland as a regional shopping and medical center while Michael Trost suggested thinking in larger terms and seeing Midland as "the skeleton key to the Southwest."

Trost also suggested emphasizing Midland as a financial center.

Rich Schneider, Permian Basin asset manager for Texaco, suggested an outlet mall along Interstate 20 to help develop business along that corridor and attract traffic from Interstate 20 into Midland.

Weinstein countered that outlet malls need a huge population to succeed and that the outlet malls in San Marcos are successful because of the traffic between San Antonio and Austin.

"The traffic along Interstate 20, half of it is trucks, and the other half is probably not in a shopping mode," he added.

Sipes said that Midland City Council members researched outlet malls in the 1980s and determined they were not feasible in Midland.

Mike Potter, president of Odessa Regional Hospital, said he wanted to see ways to transfer skills learned in the oil and gas industry to less cyclical industries, such as manufacturing or finding ways geologists could transfer their skills in analysis to other industries.

Car plows into playground injuring 11, mostly children

CHICAGO (AP) — With the driver screaming he couldn't stop, a car drove into a school playground Friday as a crowd gathered for an awards assembly. At least 11 people were injured, mostly children.

Several remained hospitalized Friday night, including a 4-year-old boy in serious condition with a fractured skull.

The car went through a fence and across a playground at the Robert Fulton Elementary School on the city's South Side.

"He was coming real fast," witness Sandra Taylor said. "It was like he wouldn't stop or he couldn't stop. I don't know which one. Everybody was trying to get out the way but he was coming too fast."

The driver, Lamont Prince, 22, was cited with four traffic violations and was being held for questioning, said police spokesman Edward Alonzo.

Prince was heard "yelling out he couldn't stop," said police Cmdr. John Killackey. He said police planned to run toxicology tests to see if Prince had been drinking or taking drugs. Witnesses also said Prince tried to flee but was apprehended by people at the scene.

More than an hour after the incident, yellow and blue chairs were scattered on their sides across the playground.

Bonnie Harris, a member of the school's neighborhood parent patrol team, said one child had been dragged by the car and was still under it when it stopped. She said her son, his friend and two teachers lifted the front of the car to help free the child.

"God gave us the strength to lift that car up," Harris said. The driver "certainly wasn't trying to stop. It seemed like he was hitting the gas instead of hitting the brakes."

There were conflicting reports from police and hospitals about how many people were injured and how many were children.

In addition to the 4-year-old boy in serious condition with a skull fracture and several cuts and bruises, a 4-year-old girl was in fair condition and was expected to be hospitalized overnight. Three other children were in good condition and a fourth was in fair condition.

It's back-to-school time for summer school kids

By Matt Josefy
Staff Writer

It's back-to-school time Thursday and Friday for the Midland Independent School District summer session, and that means school zones are in order as well.

"People still need to slow down at school zones, especially on A Street," said Robbie King, four-year principal of the elementary summer school program. From June 5 to June 30, Bonham, Bowie, Crockett, Long, Milam, and South elementaries will be hosting the summer session from 8 a.m. until noon.

Lee High School will be hosting the secondary sessions. From 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday and Friday, counselors will be available to register high school students for both core curriculum and elective courses to be held in either the morning or afternoon sessions from June 15 to July 24.

Students must meet with their current counselor before that time to obtain course offerings. The cost will be $135 per semester credit ($150 for students from outside of MISD).

TAAS remediation courses also are being held free of charge for seniors taking the July 2000 Exit Level Exam. Other students will be required to put down a $35 deposit, refunded if attendance requirements are met.

The morning session will run from 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and the afternoon session from 12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

"Summer school has a multipurpose role. It helps students who want to accelerate, those who have to make up lost credit, and those who want to accommodate extra electives without taking a zero period," said Ricardo Torres, executive director of secondary education.

"Summer school has typically been a way for students to recoup credits lost, but it is increasingly serving the role of providing an outlet for students who need to take courses to free up their schedules," agreed Dennis Stratton, instructional services director at Midland High School.

Despite the increasing number of options to obtain credit, such as correspondence courses and Excel and Coleman night schools, Stratton said enrollment in the summer session has not decreased and is typically around 400 to 500 students.

The elementary session will encompass reading classes, as well as math classes for the intermediate level. More than 1,000 kids will be working with 100 teachers, funded by the optional extended year grant that the district has received for the past four years.

"The results we get are phenomenal. We give a pre-test and a post-test, so we can build on their strengths and target their weaknesses," Ms. King said.

One of the benefits of summer school is its brevity.

"It's fast-track mode because many of the students have already had the content and they just need another chance to catch it. It's six hours of instruction for 27 days. I don't know about for them, but it goes really quick for us," Torres said.

RAIN: Lake Ivie hasn't had good runoff in 2 years

(From 1A)

Midland's official rainfall in the five hours from about 5 a.m. to 10 a.m. Friday was 0.76 inches, which brings the year's total to date to 3.37 inches or about 25 percent below the normal 4.53 inch rain to date.

The Lubbock area, which is dense cotton country, got an official 3.39 inches of rainfall on Friday, Murdoch said.

The rain's runoff into the Colorado River watershed affected "some inflow" into Lake J.B. Thomas north of Interstate Highway 20, said John Grant, general manager of the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

However, the district has "not had any good runoff in two years" going to the O.H. Ivie Reservoir, which is Midland's primary water source. "It may be empty if it doesn't rain in two years," Grant said.

"Last year, (Lake) Thomas caught 40,000 acre feet" from an isolated thunderstorm, Grant said. "This year, Spence (E.V. Spence Reservoir) has already caught 50,000 (acre feet) from that rain back in March," and Lake Thomas caught about 5,000 acre feet from that rain.

Lake Ivie, in west-central Texas near Ballinger and south of Lakes Thomas and Spence, missed out on those runoffs.

North of Midland in Martin County, the Ted Johnson Ranch "got a half-inch on the biggest part of it," said ranch foreman Bobby Matthews. "And I imagine four or five sections got an inch and a quarter."

Even so, the grassland "looks terrible," Matthews said. "I guess you'd call it 'land' and not 'grassland,' because it sure doesn't have much grass on it."

While "every little bit helps," Matthews said that "it will take a bunch (of rain) to really get it (grassland) going. It looks hard."

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Andrew Hagen, 9, plays in the rainwater with his dog Dixie, Friday at Hill Park.

Friday's general rain dropped 1.2 to 2.4 inches of rain on much of the Midland-area farmland, said Mike Denny, general manager of the Midland Farmers Cooperative.

"Some of them (farmers) have just started planting" on dryland acreage, Denny said.

Roy Graham, who farms and ranches in the Greenwood area, said that his land took on a "good rain — 1.5 inches.

"I've heard better reports than that," said Graham, who has both dryland and irrigated cotton. "Of course, we've got cotton in all stages. We had to replant some. And we are still planting some. We've got some coming up. We've got some that's up that looks good."

However, some of his "dryland country north of town ... hasn't had enough rain yet to plant."

Bush: Justice Department should not second-guess local police

WASHINGTON (AP) — George W. Bush says the Justice Department shouldn't second-guess local police and should only rarely order investigations of internal practices. He didn't specify cities but apparently was referring to civil rights inquiries like those in New York and Los Angeles.

Al Gore says he supports U.S. investigations of police departments' civil rights practices but prefers negotiated settlements involving officers, police management and local communities.

The presidential candidates made their comments to the National Fraternal Order of Police as the union conducted interviews while considering whom to endorse. The union asked what each man would do as president "to curb" federal investigations of local departments.

The police union has no problem with either candidate's approach, Executive Director Jim Pasco said Friday. He said the union's big complaint is that Justice solutions sometimes overlook the positions of "rank-and-file" officers.

The union's executive committee unanimously recommended last week that Vice President Gore should get the endorsement. The union's board of trustees will consider that recommendation this fall.

In the current Los Angeles case, Justice is negotiating over changes it wants after officers there were accused of beating, robbing and framing innocent people. The department also is involved in two investigations of the New York Police Department involving excessive force in the case of Abner Louima and "stop and frisk procedures" in the fatal shooting of unarmed Amadou Diallo.

Bush, governor of Texas and the likely Republican nominee, took the position that federal intervention in local police departments should be held to a minimum.

"I do not believe the Justice Department should routinely seek to conduct oversight investigations, issue reports or undertake other activity that is designed to function as a review of police operations in states, cities and towns," Bush wrote on the union's questionnaire.

But he also said: "There are certain cases where a federal investigation conducted fairly, reasonably and without bias can assist state and local authorities in resolving issues or allegations of police misconduct. These cases should be the exception, not the rule."

Gore told the police union in a face-to-face meeting that he preferred balancing the interests of the community, police officers, police management and the Justice Department to reach a settlement, Pasco said.

"The vice president supports federal involvement where appropriate and in cases where there are serious allegations that federal law, such as civil rights law, may have been violated," Gore spokesman Doug Hattaway said Friday.

"He wants to ensure that everyone receives equal and fair treatment under the law. He wants to invest more in police training and development, encourage more minority participation in law enforcement, strengthen community policing ... and end racial profiling," Hattaway said.

"We aren't so much afraid of investigations where there are serious allegations of misconduct," Pasco said. "We're more concerned with actions the Justice Department has taken as a result of investigations."

A 1994 law allows the Justice Department to sue local law enforcement agencies over alleged patterns of civil rights abuses and other violations of constitutional rights. Justice officials say the agency has closed about two-dozen investigations since the law was passed and has 15 to 20 going on now.

"Before 1994, there was no federal law that addressed systemic problems in police departments that deprived individuals of their constitutional rights, other than the right not to be discriminated against," said Loretta King, a deputy assistant attorney general. Some cases under the current law involve racial bias, but more involve complaints of excessive force.

In 1991, the administration of President Bush, the GOP candidate's father, launched a federal civil rights investigation of the Los Angeles police after the Rodney King beating.

Federal intervention in local police agencies doesn't happen that often, but can be aggravating to local officials, said Neil Behan, a retired police chief from Baltimore County and police official in New York City, who now teaches police leadership at Johns Hopkins University.

"In some of the cases, they come in rather heavy-handed and don't seem to call the experts we would call before doing an audit of a department," he said.

Britain mounts its first permanent Holocaust memorial

LONDON (AP) — Battered tin cups and twisted eyeglasses, the last possessions of Jews murdered at the Nazi's Chelmno death camp. A rusted Star of David. A deportation rail car, its red paint peeling. Gentle Yiddish music, the roar of a Hitler rally, the voices of survivors.

All are part of Britain's first permanent memorial to the Holocaust, the centerpiece of a $25.5 million extension of the Imperial War Museum in south London.

For Freddie Knoller, 79, a survivor of Auschwitz, the sight of a huge model of a death camp is traumatic — and reassuring.

"In a few years' time, we won't be around," Knoller said. "But in 50 years' time, people will be able to come here and see what happened."

Knoller, an Austrian Jew who fled Vienna in 1938 but was arrested by the Nazis in German-occupied France in 1943, was among a dozen death camp survivors at a special viewing Friday.

The exhibition opens to the public Tuesday, when it will be inaugurated by Queen Elizabeth II.

The display is both eerily factual and emotive.

Sparsely mounted artifacts speak for themselves. There are the implements the Nazis used to measure skulls and grade eye and hair color to categorize racial differences, and a wooden cart on which bodies were flung in the Warsaw ghetto.

A big marble slab found at a German psychiatric hospital near Munich was used for gruesome experiments on Jews, Gypsies and disabled people.

Roman Halter, a Holocaust survivor now living in London, looks at pictures at the Imperial War Museum in London, Friday, of Jews who were killed by the Nazis in concentration camps. The pictures make up part of an exhibition about the Holocaust. The exhibition officially opens June 6.

There was also a tiny cyanide capsule which Oswald Pohl, an SS officer who oversaw the plundering of possessions from murdered Jews, didn't have time to swallow when he was arrested in 1946, a year after the allies defeated Adolf Hitler's Germany. Pohl was executed for war crimes.

The organizers have adopted a chronological approach — an overview of anti-Semitism in Europe, Hitler's rise to power, the outbreak of World War II, and then the persecution and genocide of 6 million Jews.

Everything — from a machine used to sprinkle crushed human bones as fertilizer or an SS officer's meticulous lists of a year's killing in Ukraine — was double-checked for authenticity, the organizers said.

The exhibition opens two months after a judge dubbed British historian David Irving a Holocaust denier and ruled against him in a libel suit.

"An exhibition has now been developed that has tremendous force and authority," said David Cesarani, professor of Jewish history at Southampton University in southern England, an adviser on the project. "It is perhaps the best way to refute the deniers."

White families prepare to abandon homes as state announces immediate land seizures

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — White families whose land is threatened with government seizure on Friday prepared to abandon their homes ahead of an expected invasion of squatters, farm leaders said.

Late Friday, the government announced that the state would immediately begin seizing 804 mostly white-owned farms.

Farm leaders urged calm in this southern African country where the government has ignored constitutional ownership rights and laws protecting private property during the often-violent occupations of more than 1,400 white-owned farms that began in February.

On Friday, farmers met at provincial offices of the Commercial Farmers Union and local farmers' clubs as their wives packed bundles of valuables in case hurried evacuations were necessary.

Some who met in the Selous district, 40 miles west of Harare, corralled cattle in case they needed to be trucked out or driven to railheads. Families were gathering paintings, silverware, heirlooms and items of sentimental value, district union officials said.

Vincent Kwenda, director of land acquisition in President Robert Mugabe's office, told the state-run Herald newspaper that the farms would be resettled by landless blacks immediately after owners received individual notices of seizure from the government, probably starting Monday.

The farms listed were among those on a list issued by the government in 1998 after their owners had fought the state's seizure plans in court. That list included 841 farms, and there was no indication given why some had been omitted from Friday's list.

Mugabe has described the illegal occupations as a justified protest against unfair land ownership mainly by the descendants of British settlers.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan expressed regret Friday at the Zimbabwe government's decision to go ahead with land seizures.

Annan "remains convinced ... the issue of land acquisition, redistribution and resettlement will not be resolved without good faith efforts by all parties to achieve a mutually agreed way forward," said U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard.

About 4,000 white farmers own about a third of productive land that supports 2 million farm workers and their family members, while 7.5 million people live on the rest. Most of them are subsistence farmers.

The Movement for Democratic Change party, the biggest threat to the ruling party in parliamentary elections slated for June 24-25, accuses Mugabe of allowing the occupations and promising more free land to rural poor to bolster his flagging popularity, and to punish white farmers for openly supporting the opposition.

Putin defends plan to fortify government

MOSCOW (AP) — Trying to reassure wary regional leaders, President Vladimir Putin promised Friday that his efforts to strengthen the central government wouldn't infringe on their rights.

Putin met with regional governors at the Kremlin and assured them that his newly appointed regional envoys wouldn't try to control all local affairs.

He said he was "thinking with concern" about his representatives getting too much power and offered to open up discussion on ways to balance their power. He added that his moves "wouldn't infringe on the regions' rights."

But he gave no indication that he was backing away from his plan to rein in provincial governments.

Putin has divided Russia into seven administrative zones, each of which would be supervised by a presidential representative. The system replaces an arrangement under which the Kremlin had a representative in each of the 89 regions, which Putin called ineffective.

"The main function of the presidential representatives would be to streamline the action of the federal authorities in the region," Putin said. "The regional level of government must not be weakened."

Putin, who was elected president in March, says the plan is necessary to fix the ailing economy and keep Russia from breaking up.

The plan would strip governors and heads of regional legislatures from being members of the Russian upper house; representation in the house would instead be given to full-time, appointed legislators. It also provides for the president to dismiss elected governors and dissolve local legislatures that violate federal law.

Mapping Israel-Lebanon frontier: exercise in Mideast geopolitics

METULLA, Israel (AP) — Sweat dripping from the end of his nose as he labored under a blazing midday sun, Moshe Bar craned his neck and squinted, trying to sight a straight line along the new fence he was helping to build between Israel and Lebanon.

"Good fences, good neighbors," he shouted over the din of a portable generator, sounding more like New England poet Robert Frost than a rough-hewn Israeli building contractor.

In the Middle East, though, neighbors have never found it a simple matter to draw a dividing line between them.

Since the last Israeli troops and tanks rolled out of southern Lebanon on May 24, defining the new frontier between the two countries has become an exercise not only in geography, but geopolitics.

Using yellowed maps and satellite technology, U.N. cartographers have been redefining the colonial-era frontier that meanders from the Mediterranean coast to the foothills of the Golan Heights, slicing its way through stony hills, bisecting backyards, halving orchards, even dividing a village.

U.N. verification of Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon, expected within a matter of days, hinges on agreement that the Israelis have fallen back to the internationally recognized border — drawn in 1923 by Britain, which administered then-Palestine, and France, which had dominion over what are now Syria and Lebanon.

As the modern-day mapmakers have gone about their task, defining the 50-mile frontier with splashes of paint and stone markers, conflicting claims have bubbled to the surface.

Geographers say some ambiguities stem from the simple fact that human beings leave their mark on the landscape — they build roads, change the direction of watersheds, fill in riverbeds, plow away hilltops, eradicate landmarks.

"It becomes a question of translating the map of then to the reality of today — a physical reality that in some areas has changed," said Amnon Kartin, a professor of geography at Tel Aviv University.

Such questions involve mainly small parcels of land. But bigger regional disputes also have come into play.

Syria, which effectively runs Lebanon, has been a dominant force in discussions about the border. The Syrians initially demanded that the United Nations not verify Israel's withdrawal unless it ceded to Lebanon a strip of land in the foothills of the Golan Heights known as the Chebaa farms.

Israel, backed by the United Nations, says the territory is irrelevant to its border with Lebanon, because it was won from Syria in the 1967 Middle East war.

AP Photo

Moshe Bar builds a fence on the Israel-Lebanon Border near Metulla, Israel Wednesday, May 31. Marking off borders is never a simple matter in the Middle East and defining the new frontier between Israel and Lebanon is proving to be an exercise not only in geography, but in geopolitics. Since Israel's pullout from south Lebanon, cartographers have been using yellowed old maps and satellite technology to redefine a colonial-era line that meanders from the Mediterranean to the foothills of the Golan-Heights.

This week, pressed by a U.N. envoy, Syria grudgingly agreed to accept the U.N. position — but the Damascus government made clear it would continue to seek sovereignty over Chebaa either for itself or Lebanon.

Also unresolved is the fate of the Israeli border village of Ghajar. Its 1,800 people, who are mainly Alawites, a fringe Muslim sect, were dismayed to learn that according to the 1923 border, part of their community apparently lies in Lebanon.

"It doesn't make sense, my sister in one country and I in another," said Adel Shimali, a 41-year-old Ghajar resident, who showed the family's crumbling and creased original land deeds, dating to Ottoman times.

In recent days, tensions have also surfaced between Lebanon and the United Nations over the demarcation. Lebanon's state-run National News Agency reported a charged atmosphere in closed-door talks this week between Lebanese officials and U.N. cartographers, with the Lebanese raising accusations of pro-Israel bias on the United Nations' part.

Israel's army is still grappling with the problem of how to defend the new border. After its incursions into Lebanon in 1978 and 1982, Israel altered the border based on military considerations.

When Israeli troops occupied southern Lebanon, they could seize strategic hilltops as they pleased. With the new demarcation line, though, the army finds itself occupying low ground at some points along the border.

Heavy Israeli troop reinforcements are in place, although mainly staying out of sight to avoid inflaming tensions. At the Israeli border community of Mishgav Am, a lone 20-year-old soldier named Amir patrolled the frontier fence.

"Yes, I'm all alone, but if anything happens, my friends will be here in a minute," he said, waving his hand-held radio.

The new fence — nearly finished in some areas, still under construction in others — will have an array of high-tech defenses, including motion sensors.

That's not enough to satisfy some residents, who pressed for Israel to keep a narrow buffer zone of a few hundred yards after the withdrawal rather than reverting to the international border.

"We are very, very vulnerable to infiltration attacks," said Ron Hazan, a former security chief for the northern communities' regional council.

Israeli leaders, though, said keeping even a small slice of Lebanese territory would have scuttled any chances for U.N. verification of the withdrawal.

In the days immediately following Israel's pullout, there was a free-for-all on both sides of the frontier, with people from either side — some armed, many angry — able to walk right up to the border fence.

After a few flare-ups of violence, both sides — Israeli troops on the one side, Hezbollah guerrillas and Lebanese police on the other — are now restricting movement along the frontier.

That may bring an end to the daily reunions of Palestinians in Israel with relatives in Lebanon. Separated by a pair of fences and a narrow strip of no man's land, relatives who have not seen one another for years toss fruit and flowers back and forth and exchange shouted greetings.

"I'm so happy," said Omar Khassem, who lives in Israel. On the other side of the fence, pressing against the barbed wire, were his uncle and aunt, who live in a refugee camp in Lebanon. Both were crying.

"I can't touch them," said Khassem, holding up his small son, Said, for his relatives to see. "But I can hold them in my heart."

Philippine hostages grow bitter, threaten suicide

ZAMBOANGA, Philippines (AP) — Anguished hostages wept while carpenters began building them a more permanent jungle shelter Friday, saying they could not take the prospect of a more prolonged stay in the hands of Muslim rebels.

The government ordered the shelter to ease the suffering of the 21 mostly foreign hostages, many of whom have become ill during their six weeks in captivity in the southern Philippines. But it also was seen as a sign the standoff won't end soon.

Several captives threatened suicide if the government doesn't negotiate their freedom soon.

"We cannot face this anymore," said Monique Strydom, a South African woman who says she is more than three months pregnant. "Next week I'm going to stop eating."

The carpenters arrived Friday along with a medical team and several journalists at the rebels' jungle camp on the island of Jolo.

"It's a very bad sign," said Risto Vahanen of Finland. "It means we will be here for a longer time."

French hostage Sonya Wendling breaks down in the arms of fellow French hostage Stephane Loisy in the southern Philippines Friday. The hostages assailed the frequent visits of mediamen whom they said is prolonging their captivity.

"We want to get out of here as soon as possible and I hope the means is not through suicide or harming oneself," Vahanen said. "This is a severe warning to the government: mentally we are getting weak."

The hostages were seized April 23 from a Malaysian resort island and brought to the Philippines. They have been moved to a series of jungle hide-outs by their captors, a small Muslim rebel group called Abu Sayyaf. They are currently living under two large tarps — one for the European hostages and one for the Asians — which don't adequately protect them from heavy rains.

The hostages consist of three Germans, two French, two Finns, two South Africans, a Lebanese, nine Malaysians and two Filipinos.

A separate Abu Sayyaf band is holding six Filipino children and two teachers hostage on the nearby island of Basilan.

Chief government negotiator Robert Aventajado said Friday the rebels want the government to fulfill one of their demands as a show of good will before a second round of talks on freeing the hostages.

In the first negotiations a week ago, Aventajado rejected two of the Abu Sayyaf's three formal demands — an independent Islamic state and a commission to investigate the treatment of Filipinos in neighboring Malaysia.

Unemployment up, business jobs down, Wall Street soars

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate rose to 4.1 percent in May as businesses cut 116,000 jobs, the biggest reduction in nine years. Friday's report triggered a rally on Wall Street, where it was viewed as the best evidence yet that the red-hot economy is slowing enough to keep the Federal Reserve from boosting interest rates further.

"This is a strong indication that the economy is throttling back from its very robust growth of the past year," said Mark Zandi, senior economist at RFA Dismal Sciences in West Chester, Pa.

The Labor Department report showed the jobless rate rose by 0.2 percentage point from a 30-year low of 3.9 percent reached in April. While private sector jobs declined, this was offset by government hiring of temporary Census workers.

Wage pressures eased during May with hourly earnings up by only 0.1 percent, compared with a 0.4 percent rise in April that had raised fears that tight labor markets might spark inflationary wage increases.

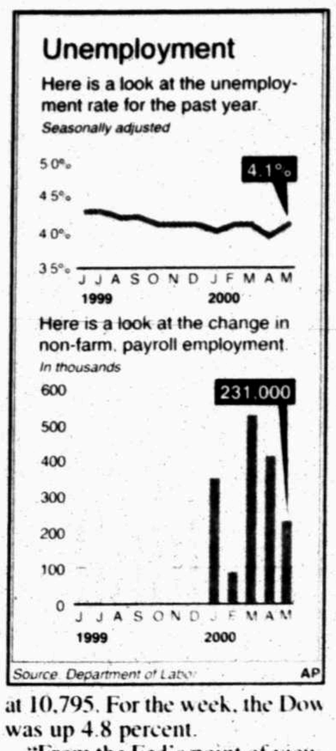

The Clinton administration, hoping a strong economy will persuade voters to reward Al Gore and other Democrats in the fall elections, quickly noted that even with the weakness in May, labor markets remained at levels not seen in more than a generation.

"The economy took a breather last month but it is still robust and near record levels," Labor Secretary Alexis Herman told reporters.

Fewer jobs and slower wage advances aren't good news for workers, but investors viewed the data as strong evidence that the Fed's campaign to raise interest rates to slow growth and keep inflation in check was starting to bear fruit.

Stocks soared on the jobs data. The technology-heavy Nasdaq composite index rose 231 points to close at 3,813. Nasdaq stocks were up 19 percent for the week, the strongest performance in history.

The Dow Jones industrial average also posted a strong gain on Friday, rising 143 points to close at 10,795. For the week, the Dow was up 4.8 percent.

"From the Fed's point of view, this is a perfect jobs report. Job growth slowed significantly and there are absolutely no signs of inflation," said Bill Cheney, chief economist at John Hancock Financial Services in Boston.

A separate report Friday from the Commerce Department showed widespread weakness in manufacturing. Orders to U.S. factories fell by 4.3 percent in April, the biggest setback since November 1990.

On the Net:
Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics:
http://stats.bls.gov/newsrels.htm

The Fed has pushed interest rates up six times since last June 30, including an aggressive half-point boost on May 16 that followed five quarter-point increases.

There had been fears the Fed would raise rates by another half-point on June 28. But Friday's unemployment report, coming on the heels of other reports showing a slowdown in housing and auto sales, has made many analysts believe the Fed may decide to leave the rates alone.

"The uptick in the unemployment rate and the decline in private sector employment conclusively demonstrate that the labor markets are in no danger of overheating and that wage pressures are still contained," said National Association of Manufacturers president Jerry Jasinowski, who has criticized the Fed for overdoing its credit tightening.

Other analysts, however, cautioned against reading too much into one month of employment data.

They noted that the May report was heavily influenced by seasonal adjustment factors that exaggerated the month's weakness following two months of unusually strong gains. Many analysts said unusually warm weather in March and April had boosted hiring that normally would have occurred in May.

"One month does not a trend make," said Bruce Steinberg, chief economist at Merrill Lynch in New York. "The weakness in May was partly a correction for the exaggerated strength of March and April."

Steinberg, however, said that despite the seasonal adjustment problems he believed the weaker employment report would convince the Fed to remain on hold this month, especially if upcoming reports show that retail sales slowed in May and inflation pressures remained benign.

The overall increase in payrolls of 231,000 in May, on a seasonally adjusted basis, came totally on the government side, reflecting the hiring of 357,000 new temporary Census workers.

Private businesses cut jobs by 116,000 last month, on a seasonally adjusted basis, with the biggest declines coming at retail establishments, manufacturing companies and construction sites.

It was the first time that U.S. companies had suffered a job loss for any month since a severe winter storm disrupted business activity in January 1996. It was the largest loss of private sector jobs since a decline of 129,000 in November 1991.

Census 2000 mission: to account for final 8.6 million

By Genaro C. Armas
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Armed with stacks of blank questionnaires, census-takers head back to big-city neighborhoods, gated communities and isolated farm houses in their final attempt to find people who still haven't been counted in Census 2000. Their mission: Track down 8.6 million households by early July.

The biggest tool for census-takers may be their persuasiveness — how well they can convince the wary to answer their questions. What is your race? Do you own or rent?

It won't be easy, Census Director Kenneth Prewitt admits.

"The task of the Census Bureau is to knock on every door. The good news is we have the resources to do that," Prewitt said at a recent news conference promoting the count. A majority of the remaining cases are in urban areas — places with people harder to track down, more high-rise apartment buildings and higher concentrations of minority groups that have traditionally been undercounted.

"The tough job now is trying to get to those people," Prewitt said.

Neomi Thomas, a 30-year-old mother of four, says she is up to the task. She works as a census-taker in neighborhoods close to her Baltimore home and is the type of worker Census officials sought to attract in urban areas — determined and familiar with how to deal with her big-city neighbors.

'The biggest challenge is to talk to people and get them to realize how important it is to be counted.'
— Neomi Thomas, census worker in Baltimore

"The biggest challenge is to talk to people and get them to realize how important it is to be counted," Thomas said.

Overall, Prewitt is pleased with how the once-a-decade count is going. More than 93 percent, or about 111.4 million of country's 120 million households have now been accounted for, either through a mailed-back form or through information gathered in person at the front door.

Some households may initially get counted more than once, either because the family has more than one home, or answered enumerator questions even after mailing back a form. In that case, the Census Bureau considers the official form for that household the one with the most complete information and discards the others.

But it is the people in the missing 8.6 million households that enumerators are now concentrating on. Their targets include anti-government people, and those hesitant to cooperate out of privacy concerns.

The biggest push will be in certain urban areas like Chicago, where Census officials will bring in more staff and put new radio and TV ads on the air. Prewitt will visit Chicago, New York, Milwaukee and Columbus, Ohio, to help boost efforts there.

Some cities, like Los Angeles and Boston, are ahead of schedule to the point where some Census Bureau offices are about to close a month early. Others like Chicago and New York have a high number of high-rise apartment buildings where enumerators may have a hard time getting past the doorman, Census spokesman Steve Jost said.

Urban areas also tend to have a higher concentration of immigrant populations who may be wary of giving information to the federal government.

"Throughout Chicago, many people have not been counted. They live in our neighborhoods and downtown," Chicago Mayor Richard Daley said at a news conference Thursday. For the next month, "We are pulling out all the stops," he said.

Ultimately, though it will be up to people like Katania Hall, a Census crew leader in Baltimore to finish the task. She's confident she can in spite of the slammed doors and icy stares she might encounter.

"Almost anything you can imagine, my enumerators have heard," Hall said. "But we are confident we can reach everyone."

FAA proposes changes to Alaska Airlines' ability to do maintenance

WASHINGTON (AP) — After finding nearly 150 cases where aircraft maintenance could not be documented, the Federal Aviation Administration proposed to strip Alaska Airlines of the right to perform maintenance on its planes.

The step could eventually force the airline to park its planes and stop flying.

"We have serious concerns about critical processes, including management effectiveness," Nick Lacey, director of Flight Standards Service for the FAA, said Friday.

He said the airline has seven days to respond, showing steps it has taken to avoid losing its maintenance authority. If that response is inadequate, Lacey said, he could suspend that authority in 30 days.

John Kelly, chairman and chief executive of Alaska Air Group, the airline's parent company, told a news conference the airline would meet the seven-day deadline.

"I'm pleased to say that many if not all of the findings the FAA outlined in its news release this morning were addressed by us over recent weeks as soon as they were raised by the FAA during its audit," Kelly said. He declined to say whether any employee would be disciplined because of the FAA's findings.

The FAA's investigation is proceeding and enforcement actions — usually civil fines — could be announced in coming weeks, Lacey said.

Shares of Alaska Airlines tumbled 4 percent on the news, falling $1.1875 to close at $30.75 in trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The FAA launched an intense inspection of the airline after the Jan. 31 crash of Alaska Airlines Flight 261 in the Pacific Ocean off Los Angeles, killing all 88 aboard. Allegations of unsafe maintenance work, which first surfaced in 1998, were thrust back into the spotlight.

Lacey said the inspections found no problems in day-to-day operations but disclosed about 150 instances in which work scheduled in heavy maintenance operations could not be documented.

Re-inspections found the work had been done, he said.

But the lack of documentation indicated poor management attention to detail that concerned the regulators enough to demand changes.

"It's more than a paperwork problem. It's serious that the company did not pick up on these problems," Lacey said. "Aircraft accidents result from a series of small errors."

But he did stress that in the 150 problem cases the work had been completed.

"If we had found maintenance that was not performed, or sloppy ... we would be taking a different course. We would not hesitate to shut the airline down."

Heavy maintenance requires an aircraft to be removed from service for a time while major components are repaired or replaced. The carrier's problems centered on the documentation needed to ensure all the work was done properly so the plane could be returned to service.

Alaska Airlines has 89 planes in its fleet and at any one time between four and six are undergoing this process.

Lacey said if its authority to do the work is lifted the airline would not be allowed to contract the work out. It would simply have to park planes due for maintenance, he said.

John Kelly, chairman and chief executive of Alaska Airlines, discusses the results of a Federal Aviation Administration audit Friday, at Alaska Airlines Headquarters in Seattle. After finding nearly 150 cases where aircraft maintenance could not be documented, the FAA proposed to strip Alaska Airlines of the right to perform maintenance on its planes. The step could eventually force the airline to park its planes and stop flying.

AP Photo

An airline must follow maintenance procedures that the FAA has approved, he said. If it contracts the work out, the contractor must follow that airline's designated procedures. Since Alaska Airlines was not following its own procedures, it could not be expected to supervise the work of a contractor properly, he said.

He said the agency has sent a team of inspectors to the airline's maintenance facilities in Oakland, Calif., and Seattle and is documenting the work being done on planes now undergoing maintenance.

That means the airline can return those planes to service, and the FAA inspections will continue to make sure planes have correct maintenance procedures.

But those inspectors cannot remain there indefinitely, he said, so the agency will lift Alaska Airline's maintenance authority unless it can develop an acceptable plan and procedures to correct the problems.

In addition, Lacey said, Alaska Airlines will be required to submit a growth plan to the FAA district office for any proposed expansion of its services.

The threat of losing its maintenance authority is designed to spur the airline into correcting its problems, Lacey said, and he noted that it has hired consultants to assist in making changes.

It is just the latest in a series of problems for the carrier in addition to the January crash.

A grand jury is investigating charges that airline managers in Oakland signed off on work that was never performed, the January crash remains under investigation by the National Transportation Safety Board and this week, the airline said it would fire two pilots who continued a flight even though they had failed to properly pressurize the cabin.

Death penalty: Two governors decide to let science sort it out

By Larry O'Dell
Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Reflecting growing fears around the country that innocent people are on death row, two Republican governors this week decided to let science sort it out.

Virginia Gov. Jim Gilmore approved new DNA tests in hopes of establishing conclusively whether a former death row inmate raped and murdered a woman 18 years ago. And Texas Gov. George W. Bush blocked an execution for the first time in his career to allow DNA tests.

Gilmore and Bush said their actions should not be construed as a softening of their support for capital punishment.

But death penalty opponents saw their actions as evidence that politicians are now more willing to take a hard look at the process.

"For many years politicians thought that appearing soft on the death penalty was political suicide, and that is certainly not the case any more," said Brian Henninger, program coordinator for the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty.

Former death row inmate Earl Washington Jr. is shown in a 1993 handout photo. Washington, a former death row inmate convicted of a 1982 rape and murder, was granted his request for sophisticated new DNA testing that his lawyers say will fully exonerate him. Gov. Jim Gilmore ordered the tests Thursday in hopes they will determine conclusively whether Washington killed Rebecca Lynn Williams of Culpeper.

AP Photo

Illinois Gov. George Ryan, another Republican death penalty supporter, has gone even further than Gilmore and Bush, ordering a moratorium on executions while the state's death penalty procedures are examined for fairness.

He said the system is "fraught with error," pointing to the release of 13 death row inmates who had been wrongly convicted. Ryan said he would not allow executions to resume "until I can be sure that everyone sentenced to death in Illinois is truly guilty."

No state has repealed the death penalty since the Supreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1976. Last month, New Hampshire's Legislature passed a bill that would have done so, but Democratic Gov. Jeanne Shaheen vetoed it, saying the state has proper safeguards.

Religious broadcaster and political conservative Pat Robertson recently endorsed a short moratorium on capital punishment, which he said has been administered in a way that discriminates against minorities and poor people.

Despite his action Thursday on behalf of former death row inmate Earl Washington Jr., Gilmore opposes a moratorium on capital punishment in Virginia, which since 1976 has executed more inmates than any state except Texas. Texas has put to death 217 inmates, Virginia 76.

Gilmore said it is important to make sure that the right person is executed, and if that means new DNA testing, so be it.

"To the extent that a piece of forensic evidence — a chemical test — can produce a more reliable result, I think any governor who has responsibility over these life-and-death decisions wants the best possible information in order to make a good judgment," Gilmore said.

Washington was sent to death row for the 1982 rape and murder of Rebecca Lynn Williams, 19. In 1994, then-Gov. L. Douglas Wilder, a Democrat, commuted Washington's sentence to life in prison on the basis of DNA tests that suggested Washington did not commit the crime.

But those tests did not conclusively clear him. Gilmore said improvements in DNA technology since then should provide more definitive results.

In the Texas case, Bush delayed the execution of a convicted killer whose attorneys are fighting for new DNA tests. The Republican presidential candidate who is running as a "compassionate conservative" had never made such a move in his five-plus years in office.

Bush campaign spokesman Scott McClellan said it would be a mistake to view the governor's actions as a softening of his position on capital punishment.

"Governor Bush supports the death penalty for individuals who commit violent, heinous crimes because he believes it saves innocent lives," McClellan said. "As he indicated, if DNA evidence when considered in the context of all the evidence of the case can help determine guilt or innocence, it should be examined."

Darlene Hutchinson, a spokeswoman for the pro-capital punishment Law Enforcement Alliance, said her organization does not approve of moratoriums but is not particularly concerned about this week's actions by Bush and Gilmore.

"We should use all the technology every time we get the chance," she said.

Rain helps slow New Mexico fire

PECOS, N.M. (AP) — Firefighters tackled a 25,000-acre wildfire head-on Friday, seizing a break in the hot, dry weather as a chance to surround the fire.

"We are attacking with all our might today," fire information officer Tom Mott said. "When it's safe, it's time to strike."

The blaze was 60 percent contained. Thunderstorms Thursday and Friday gave firefighters a chance to bolster their efforts against the blaze, which had been burning since Monday.

At least a quarter inch of rain fell Friday, Mott said, and more showers and thunderstorms were expected Saturday afternoon.

The fire has forced the evacuation of hundreds of people, but permanent residents of the area, east of Santa Fe, were allowed in during the daylight hours Friday to assess their property, Mott said. The cost of battling the fire has been put at about $2.11 million as of Friday.

Elsewhere in the West, wildfires continued to rage through Arizona, California, Colorado and Utah. Firefighting efforts in those states have been hampered by dry, hot weather.

One of the largest fires had scorched more than 10,800 acres in Arizona's Kaibab National Forest. Authorities said the fire, which was sparked by lightning, was about 55 percent contained Friday.

Police departments struggle to find recruits

By Nicole Ziegler Dizon
Associated Press

CHICAGO (AP) — Calling all cop candidates: Departments in trouble, need assistance. Respond to local recruitment offices immediately.

With the economy booming and rookie police salaries relatively low, the number of people lining up for badges is dwindling.

Chicago, which tested 25,000 applicants seven years ago, has lined up just 1,900 potential recruits for the latest exam, which is given twice a year. The story is much the same in Los Angeles, New York and other cities around the country.

"All of law enforcement is experiencing the same problems we are, and that's finding qualified applicants," said Officer Frank Banuelos, a spokesman for the Los Angeles Police Department. The LAPD has seen the number of recruits in its monthly classes fall from about 100 to between 30 and 40 over the past several years.

The National Association of Police Organizations recently named recruitment one of the top problems facing police agencies. Robert T. Scully, executive director, pointed to a number of factors, including low starting salaries, poor officer morale and increasingly stringent requirements for becoming an officer.

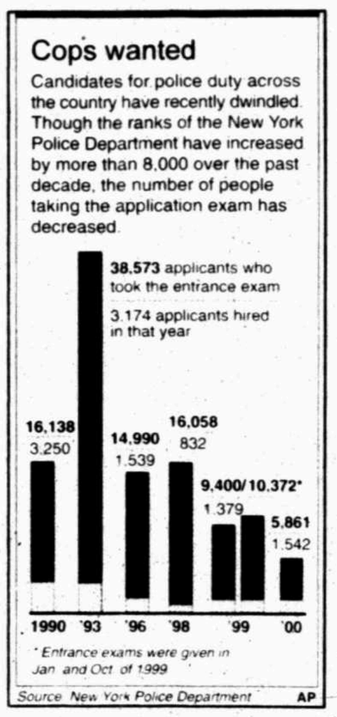

Many police departments, including Chicago's and New York's, now require at least 60 hours of college credit. At the same time, Scully said, a 1999 Census Bureau report put the average salary of a nonsupervisory law enforcement officer at $34,700.

In comparison, a technical support worker can expect to make an average $40,546, and managers or executives can expect to make an average of $51,351.

Add that to the media attention paid to corrupt officers, police shootings and department scandals, and it is no wonder people are shying from police careers, Scully said.

"Individuals are less likely to apply for a profession that always sees the worst parts of society and commands little respect for it," the former Detroit police officer wrote in a report this March.

Pat Camden, a spokesman for the Chicago Police Department, said the tougher educational requirements are worth the decline in applicants. "We're getting the best qualified that's available," Camden said.

He also noted that Chicago now tests twice a year, while the 1993 exam that attracted 25,000 applicants was the city's first in five years.

Chicago, with a force of 13,500, needs to fill about 650 positions to make up for retirements — another problem cited by many departments. A Justice Department report said some police departments can expect turnover of 25 percent or more this year.

Elaine Deck, a project coordinator for the International Association of Chiefs of Police, said President Clinton's push to put 100,000 more officers on the nation's streets has worsened the crunch. "You put that on top of everything else, and you wonder, 'Where have all the recruits gone?'" she said.

To counter the declining interest in police work, departments are accentuating the positives: solid insurance, top-notch retirement plans, long vacations and plenty of advancement opportunities.

But such long-term benefits do not have much appeal these days to many young people, who expect to switch jobs several times before they settle on a career, said Chief Michael Markman, head of the New York Police Department's personnel bureau.

"People aren't looking for the pension so much as they're looking for now," Markman said.

The 41,000-member New York Police Department, whose goal is to hire nearly 1,600 recruits by this fall, has a team of more than 30 recruiters who regularly visit the city's colleges. The department also advertises on electronic boards in Times Square and Madison Square Garden and offers classes to prepare applicants for the civil service exam.

Los Angeles, which hopes to boost its force from 9,300 to 10,000, has sent recruiters across the country — even as far as New York — to visit job fairs, colleges and military bases. The department tripled its recruitment staff to 18 in the past year.

The efforts have begun to pay off, Banuelos said. In April, for example, 2,500 people took the department's written test. But less than 6 percent will make it into the academy, he added.

"It's all a matter of advertising in a lot of ways," Deck said. "Departments must let people know what it is they do in a much more creative way."

Artists reflect on Confederate flag controversy in exhibitions

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — In the city where the Civil War began, in a state that after much anguish and debate will lower the Confederate flag from atop its Statehouse, a new exhibit gives artists a chance to reflect on race, the South and the Confederacy.

"In the Shadow of the Flag" features works inspired by the flag controversy along with others created decades ago by artists including Jasper Johns and Faith Ringgold.

"Charleston needs to bring in work that will make a difference without saying anything," said Tippy Stern Brickman, president of the Tippy Stern gallery, where the exhibit opened Friday.

"People will walk in and look and feel — especially with this Confederate flag issue," she said. "It's not all flags by any means."

Five of the 23 works on display do represent flags, including Ringgold's famous oil painting "Flag for the Moon: Die Nigger 1967-1969," an oil of the American flag in which the word "DIE" can be seen dimly against the stars and the silver stripes spell out the slur.

The Johns work, a lithograph from the 1960s featuring a white map of the United States on black paper, is on loan for the exhibit. The Ringgold work, the most expensive in the show, sells for $150,000.

The flag controversy drew national attention as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People called for a tourism boycott of the state.

Opponents of the flag call it a racist symbol that was raised atop the Statehouse in defiance of the civil rights movement. Supporters argue that it represents their Southern heritage and honors Confederate dead.

South Carolina is the only state that flies the flag.

After several demonstrations and months of debate, the Legislature decided the flag would be lowered and a similar one placed at a nearby Confederate soldiers monument. The NAACP said the flag's display still is too prominent, and the boycott will continue.

Some of the works in the exhibit reflect the controversy.

"The Whole World is Watching," by Charleston photographer John Duckworth, shows four photographs of a pro-flag rally and two of Confederate re-enactors.

Other pieces are more abstract.

New York artist Les LeVeque took D.W. Griffith's silent three-hour film "Birth of a Nation," recorded it backward and condensed it to 13 minutes. Amid the video's flashing images, viewers can make out impressions of the Ku Klux Klan and of slave auctions.

Gay Days fast becoming part of Walt Disney landscape

By Mike Schneider
Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Gay Days used to make Walt Disney World officials nervous.

One year, Disney posted signs at the entrance warning guests that there was a gathering of homosexuals in the Magic Kingdom. In other years, passes to other Disney parks were offered to guests who might be offended by large numbers of gays.

This weekend, as Gay Days enters its 10th year, Disney is no longer in the closet about the annual celebration.

The event has expanded to the company's three other parks, as well as non-Disney ones such as Universal Orlando and SeaWorld Orlando. And for the past few years, popular Disney World attractions such as the Typhoon Lagoon water park and the Pleasure Island nightclub have held related parties and performances.

Gay Days even spawned a West Coast version of itself at Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif.

"I don't know if it's a more accepting attitude, but our parks are open to everyone, every day," said Rena Callahan, a Disney spokeswoman. "We want to be hospitable to everyone who visits our parks."

No religious groups plan to protest this year's event, unlike in past years. However, members of the Christian Action Network plan to videotape what goes on at Pleasure Island during Gay Days and show it at the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia.

"We're looking for bad behavior among the homosexuals in the area where kids are going to show up," said Martin Mawyer, president of the Lynchburg, Va.-based group.

While Disney doesn't sponsor Gay Days, which includes several events planned around the weekend under no single organizer, the theme park is the center of its activities.

"During the first couple of years, their greatest fear was what other guests would think," said Tom Dyer, editor and publisher of Watermark, a gay newspaper in Orlando. "Their view has shifted to caring about how their gay and lesbian guests are treated."

AP Photo
Michaél Braden, center, of Los Angeles, registers Gay Days visitors to the Gaywired.com website at a hotel in Orlando, Fla. Friday. This year marks the 10th anniversary of Gay Days at Walt Disney World. The event has expanded to Disney's three other parks, as well as non-Disney ones such as Universal Orlando and SeaWorld Orlando. And for the past few years, popular Disney World attractions such as the Typhoon Lagoon water park and the Pleasure Island nightclub have held related parties and performances.

Gay Days started out as a single day in 1991 when then-Orlando resident Doug Swallow and friends from a gay computer bulletin board service informally decided to have an outing at the Magic Kingdom.

Traditions began: Gays Days is held on the first Saturday in June. Participants wear red shirts to identify themselves. And everyone meets at 3 p.m. in front of Cinderella's Castle for the afternoon parade.

What began as a gathering of several hundred people in 1991 has grown into a four-day weekend that attracts more than 100,000 people, corporate sponsors and, this year, headline entertainers such as comedians Sandra Bernhard, Harvey Fierstein and Scott Thompson of "Kids in the Hall."

"I think it was about the fifth year or so that I was starting to become awe-struck about the numbers of people coming here," said Swallow, who now lives in New Jersey.

Religious groups were apoplectic that a company that made its fortune on traditional family entertainment would allow Gay Days on its property.

Last year, religious groups tried to buy air time during Gay Days to encourage gays to change their sexual orientation, but Orlando TV stations other than Christian channels rejected the ads.

In 1998, hundreds of Operation Rescue activists protested outside Walt Disney World during Gay Days. The Southern Baptists cited Gay Days in calling for a boycott of all things Disney three years ago.

Coincidentally this year, the Southern Baptists are holding their annual meeting in Orlando the week after Gay Days. Gay rights activists plan to protest outside the religious gathering.

Retiring, Army's highest-ranking woman praises gender policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army's highest-ranking woman bade an upbeat farewell Friday with praise for progress on women's issues and not a word about a sexual harassment investigation she triggered by accusing another general of making an unwanted sexual advance.

At a retirement ceremony held 31 years to the day after she entered the Army as a second lieutenant, Lt. Gen. Claudia Kennedy said the institution she grew up with has made "measured and steady" progress toward fairer treatment of female soldiers. She held out hope that a woman one day will become secretary of defense.

"Our Army is filled with women and men who care and who are in a position to change and improve the conditions under which we serve," Kennedy, 52, attired in her dark green dress uniform, told an audience of hundreds of friends, colleagues and family members in the sun-filled center courtyard of the Pentagon.

"Today, more than ever, women are a powerful force" in the U.S. military, she said.

Neither Kennedy nor Army Secretary Louis Caldera, host at the ceremony, mentioned her sexual harassment case. Army investigators have substantiated Kennedy's claim that Maj. Gen. Larry G. Smith made an unwanted sexual advance in 1996, but Smith has been given time to challenge the determination.

Last month the Army quietly rescinded an assignment for Smith as the service's deputy inspector general. It was the public announcement of that assignment last August that spurred Kennedy to tell superiors about the alleged 1996 incident. Smith has been held in administrative limbo in the intervening months.

Among senior officials at Friday's ceremony was Gen. John Keane, the Army's vice chief of staff, who will decide whether to take disciplinary action against Smith. Keane is expected to give Smith a letter of reprimand, a move that would all but assure a quick end to Smith's 34-year Army career.

In her remarks, Kennedy said she had more than fulfilled the aspirations she held when she was commissioned a second lieutenant on June 2, 1969 — at a time when women served in a separate Women's Army Corps.

"The Army ad says, 'Be all you can be.' Today I can honestly tell you I've been all I could be," she said. "I've risen further than I ever dared to hope. All I wanted to do was be a leader and serve my country. I never dreamed there would be stars on my shoulders."

Kennedy had served since May 1997 as the Army's deputy chief of staff for intelligence. With her departure, the Army has no three-star female generals.

"The change has been measured and steady," she said. "But all of this occurs within the context of societal change. The position of women in politics, sports, religion, academia and corporate America is expanding. I am proud to have been the first woman in the Army to have achieved lieutenant general, and I know I will not be the last."

Cowboys make it official: Dallas releases Sanders

By Stephen Hawkins
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Deion Sanders, who helped Dallas and San Francisco win Super Bowls, is again one of the NFL's top free agents.

In a long-anticipated move, the Cowboys cut Sanders on Friday and avoided the $23.5 million the cornerback would have been guaranteed had he been on their roster another day.

"Because of salary-cap reasons, we just can't afford to keep him under his current contract," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said in a statement.

In another cap-related moves, the Minnesota Vikings cut Randall Cunningham, who quarterbacked them to a 15-1 record and a berth in the NFC title game two years ago.

Linebacker Bryce Paup, the NFL's defensive player of the year in 1995 when he was with Buffalo, was released by Jacksonville.

Miami released guard Kevin Donnalley, clearing more than $2 million. Donnalley, who was due to make $4.05 million next year, could re-sign with Miami for far less. Indianapolis cut defensive lineman Tony McCoy, an eight-year veteran.

Deion Sanders ... Is Washington next on his list?

Orlando Brown, accidentally struck in the eye by an official's thrown penalty flag during a Dec. 19 game, couldn't practice with the Cleveland Browns after failing a physical, and his future with the team is in doubt.

And fullback Charles Way of the New York Giants retired at age 27 because of chronic knee problems, opening the way for New York to attempt to sign Sam Gash, cut by Buffalo because of cap concerns.

The next stop for Sanders, 32, could be in Washington with the Redskins, the NFC East champions a year ago and one of the Cowboys' biggest rivals.

MIDLAND ROCKHOUNDS RETURN

A Sweet Homecoming

U. Frank Williams Jr./Reporter-Telegram
Midland's Dionys Cesar dives back to first on a pickoff attempt during the Texas League game between the RockHounds and the Wichita Wranglers Friday at Christensen Stadium. The 'Hounds won the game, 6-5.

Mensik's blast helps 'Hounds down Wranglers, snap streak

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

A home sweet home run in the bottom of the eighth inning by Todd Mensik might have erased some of the bad memories from the Midland RockHounds' road trip to San Antonio.

Mensik's solo blast over the left field wall off Wichita reliever Robbie Morrison (0-1) proved to be the difference in Midland's 6-5 win over the Wranglers Friday night at Christensen Stadium. The win ended a four-game slide — all of the losses coming in a sweep by the San Antonio Missions.

"I was really just trying to put the ball in play," said Mensik, the RockHounds' designated hitter. "With the way the guys behind me were swinging the bats, if I could get on base, a double could score me. The objective there was just to try to get on base and help the team out. Luckily, I got it well enough to get it out of here."

Midland manager Tony DeFrancesco has been looking for the timely hits to win ball games all year long. On Friday, he got a big timely hit from Mensik.

"Todd has been swinging the bat pretty good, he's driven in a few runs, and that was a key hit for us right there," DeFrancesco said.

By getting the win in the first game of an eight-game homestand, which includes a pair of four-game series against Wichita and Tulsa, the 'Hounds hope to get some momentum to close out the first half of Texas League play.

"This is a big home series for us because we're trying to get back to .500 and hopefully get some momentum for the second half.,"

Nix, Rogers headline 4-5A All-District team

Staff Report

The evidence that the high school baseball teams in Midland have reached equally lofty footing can be found in the voting for this past season's District 4-5A most valuable player.

Midland High's Laynce Nix and Midland Lee's Jon Rogers were named co-MVPs on the 2000 4-5A All-District team. Nix and Rogers, who have been prime time performers throughout their high school careers, headlined five Tall City selections to 4-5A's first team.

Nix was joined on the first team by his younger brother Jayson, a shortstop, and another senior, first baseman Cotey-Joe Cswaykus. Joining Rogers from Lee on the first team was third baseman Jeff Cramer.

For the second season in a row, both MHS and Lee made the playoffs, as they both tied with Abilene Cooper atop the district with an 8-4 mark. Midland High beat Lee 9-2 in a one-game playoff at Christensen Stadium which gave the Bulldogs the No. 1 seed in the district.

Laynce Nix and Rogers were huge factors in getting their teams as far as they did this season. The two seniors had similarities in that they both also quarterbacked their football teams (in the case of Rogers, to a second straight state championship)

Macchi's homer paces San Jose past Houston

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Brandon Macchi's 3-run homer in the third inning helped San Jose State defeat Houston 5-3 Friday night in the first game of a best-of-three super regional NCAA series.

Houston starter Shane Nance (9-2) walked two batters and Macchi hit a 2-0 fastball well over the leftfield wall.

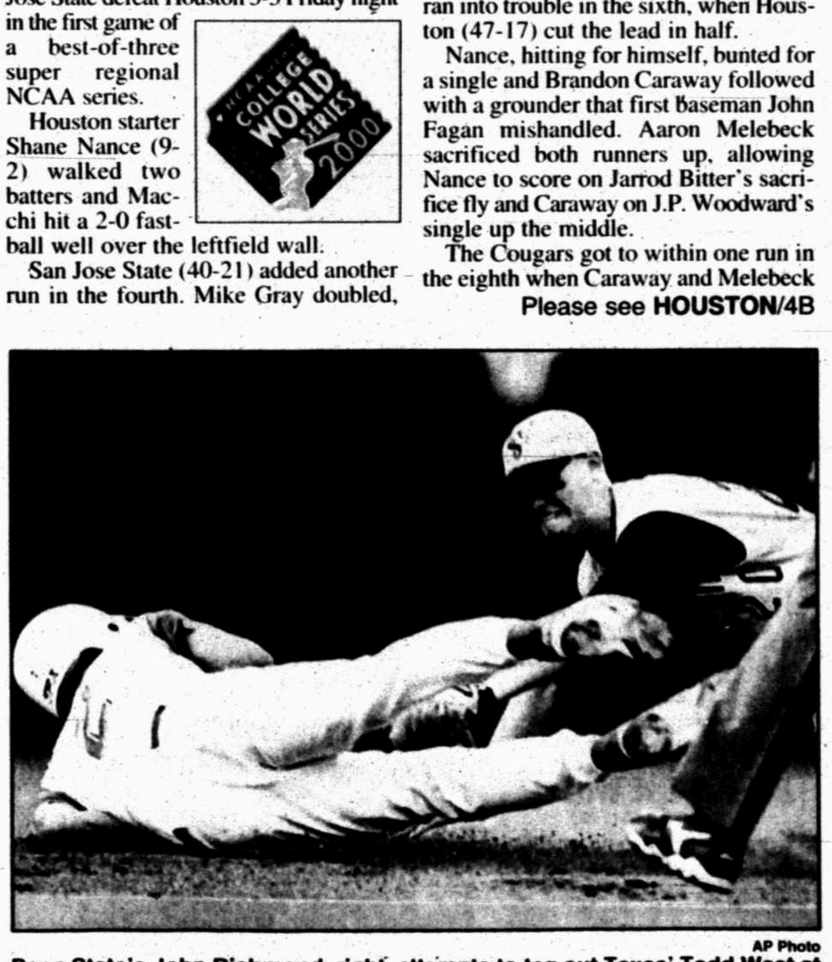

San Jose State (40-21) added another run in the fourth. Mike Gray doubled, went to third on Gary Patchett's infield hit and scored on a groundout to second.

Spartans' starter Chris Key (13-3) rolled through the first five frames but ran into trouble in the sixth, when Houston (47-17) cut the lead in half.

Nance, hitting for himself, bunted for a single and Brandon Caraway followed with a grounder that first baseman John Fagan mishandled. Aaron Melebeck sacrificed both runners up, allowing Nance to score on Jarrod Bitter's sacrifice fly and Caraway on J.P. Woodward's single up the middle.

The Cougars got to within one run in the eighth when Caraway and Melebeck

Portland extends Western series

By Bob Baum
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — When it counted most, Portland finally beat the Los Angeles Lakers at home, sending the Western Conference finals to a deciding Game 7.

Steve Smith scored 26 points and Bonzi Wells had 20, 14 in the fourth quarter, as the Trail Blazers took the lead halfway through the first quarter and never gave it up in a 103-93 victory Friday night.

Kobe Bryant scored 33 points for Los Angeles and played the entire game despite a sprained right foot, but it wasn't enough.

The Trail Blazers, the team Los Angeles coach Phil Jackson said was "at death's door" after the Lakers won twice in Portland a week ago, can become the seventh team to come back from a 3-1 deficit to win a series, and the first to do it in the West finals.

Portland's second consecutive victory, and first at home in four tries against Los Angeles, tied the series 3-3. Indiana's opponent in the NBA Finals will be determined in a showdown Sunday in Los Angeles, where the Blazers have won two in a row.

Shaquille O'Neal, averaging 29.2 points in the playoffs, had 17 points and 11 rebounds but was only 7-for-17 from the field and 3-for-10 at the line. In the third quarter, O'Neal missed his first six shots and was called for a flagrant foul for flattening Scottie Pippen on a drive to the basket.

After lying on the floor for several minutes, Pippen got to his feet and made one of two free throws to put Portland ahead

'Horns make most of Penn State mistakes

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas turned three Penn State fielding miscues into a big early lead and held on to beat the Nittany Lions 7-3 Friday night in the opener of a best-of-3 NCAA regional series.

Penn State (45-18) loaded the bases in the top of the first inning but couldn't push a runner past home against Texas starter D.J. Jones.

In the bottom of the inning, Matt Rosenberg got on when Penn State shortstop bobbled his grounder. Nittany Lions starter Peter Yodis (7-4) walked Todd West, then threw a wild pitch that let both runners advance.

Tommy Nicholson attempted a suicide squeeze play, but bunted right back to Yodis as Rosenberg charged home.

Instead of an easy out, though, Yodis threw the ball past catcher Chris Netwall, allowing Rosenberg to score. West then scored on Jeff Ontiveros' fly ball that fell in shallow center.

Texas (45-19) was again able to take advantage of poor defense in the bottom

Pacers finally make NBA Finals

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK — Reggie Miller couldn't have picked a better time, a better place or a better way to finally put the Indiana Pacers into the NBA Finals.

Returning to the scene of some of his greatest playoff performances, Miller played the villain again with a vintage display of sharpshooting.

Scoring 34 points and making five 3-pointers — four in a span of 6 1/2 minutes late in the game, Miller led the Pacers past New York 93-80 Friday night in Game 6 of the Eastern Conference finals.

"This is our home away from home, and what better way to do it than on the road," Miller said. "Game 7 would have been, to tell the truth, too much pressure for us. We wanted to end it here. Tonight was our Game 7."

Miller, whose Garden stardom resume includes 25 points in the fourth quarter of a game in 1994, eight points in 8.9 seconds of a game in 1995 and a series-turning 3-pointer from in front of Spike Lee's courtside seat in 1998, can call this episode Chapter Four.

New Jersey Devils defenseman Scott Stevens (4) tries to control Dallas Stars right winger Brett Hull as he zooms in to redirect the puck past goaltender Martin Brodeur, right, for the game-winning goal during the Stars' 2-1 victory over the Devils in Game 2 of the Stanley Cup Finals in East Rutherford, N.J. on Thursday. Hull scored both goals in the win.

Everything Hull touches turns to goals for Dallas

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Last spring, the Buffalo Sabres couldn't keep him out of the crease. So far in the Stanley Cup finals, the New Jersey Devils can't keep him out of the net.

Nothing has changed for hockey's golden boy — Brett Hull of the Dallas Stars still is scoring goals, creating havoc, swinging momentum, altering game plans. Yes, still winning big games, the biggest of the season.

If it's the postseason, everything that Golden Brett touches seems to turn to goals.

Hull rescued the defending champion Stars from yet another precarious predicament, scoring both goals in a must-win 2-1 victory at New Jersey on Thursday. As a result, the Stars return home for Game 3 Saturday with a 1-1 split, rather than the task of trying to become the first team in 29 years to rally from a 2-0 deficit in the finals.

The Stars are one team with a discernible home-ice advantage, winning nine of 10 in Reunion Arena this spring and 11 of their last 12 home playoff games.

Sure, the Devils usually play as well on the road, where they are 7-2, as they do at home. But those earlier road wins weren't played out on the NHL's center stage, where the pressure is thicker, the goals harder to come by, the audience bigger, the losses harder to bounce back from.

"How big was that game?" Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said after Hull's second goal, with 4:16 remaining, decided Game 2. "Huge."

Now, the Devils must feel the tightness in their throats that the Stars felt after losing 7-3 in Game 1. The feeling that the next bad mistake, the next goal allowed might cost them hockey's biggest prize.

"There is no doubt they have the momentum now going into their building," Devils goaltender Martin Brodeur said Friday. "We have to be afraid of their record and the way they showed character in Game 2."

Fearful, too, of Hull, who has 88 career playoff goals, only a handful of them bigger than Thursday's. One bigger, of course, was his third-overtime goal in Game 6 in Buffalo last year — where his skate clearly was in the crease — that won the Cup for the Stars.

His latest two goals, which represent the 15th multigoal playoff game of his career, might have kept the Stars from losing this Stanley Cup.

"Winning this (Game 2) was a big boost to us," Hull said. "We knew we had to come out of there with a split, but that it would be tough after we played the way we did in the first game."

This wasn't the easiest of times or the softest of seasons for the 35-year-old Hull, whose 21st game-winning goal in a Stanley Cup playoff game left him three behind leader Wayne Gretzky's 24.

Hull experienced two extended scoring slumps during a season in which Dallas didn't climb comfortably above .500 until well into December. He finished with 24 goals, the fewest of his career in a full season.

However, he has 11 goals in the playoffs, five in his last four games.

"He's probably the best pure shooter in the game," Devils coach Larry Robinson said.

Stars center Guy Carbonneau said, "Maybe a lot of people thought Hull was overpaid and didn't have a good season. Maybe that's his answer."

While Dallas' top line of Hull, Mike Modano and Jere Lehtinen was scoring both goals, New Jersey's top line of Petr Sykora, Jason Arnott and Patrik Elias quietly went scoreless in Game 2 after running up four goals and 11 points in Game 1.

Look for the two top lines to keep going head-to-head, just as they did Thursday. Robinson, who had the final line change at home, kept matching the two lines, and Hitchcock plans to continue the matchup in Dallas.

"They got two goals with that matchup, so I am sure he (Hitchcock) is going to like it," Robinson said. "We got four goals the game before, that is why I liked it."

Hitchcock also liked how goaltender Ed Belfour, off the cold medicine and on his game again, turned aside 27 of 28 shots in the kind of dominating performance that was largely responsible for the Stars winning the Stanley Cup last season.

Was it the Stars regaining their focus — and Belfour his equilibrium — or the Devils simply having a letdown?

Meanwhile, the Stars may again be without forward Jamie Langenbrunner, who hasn't played since injuring a knee in Game 5 of the Western Conference finals against Colorado.

Hitchcock seems irritated that Langenbrunner, who had 18 goals during the season, is taking so long to return. Langenbrunner said he didn't skate at the Stars' optional workout.

Langenbrunner, who has not revealed the extent of the injury, said, "I feel better, and I want to play, but it takes time."

Gretzky comes back to hockey, joins Coyotes ownership group

By Mel Reisner
Associated Press Writer

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Wayne Gretzky returned to hockey sooner than he expected, although his role with the Phoenix Coyotes comes with clear limits.

"I am a partner. I'm not going to be coaching," he said Friday. "I'm not going to be a general manager. I'm not going to be working day to day."

Gretzky, speaking at a news conference, joined the ownership group headed by Phoenix developer Steve Ellman last week. He came on board just as Ellman was facing a deadline to put a $10 million down payment on the team, which the group is buying for $87 million.

Ellman, who is also developing the team's new arena in Scottsdale, said Gretzky will be the team's managing partner in charge of hockey operations. Current president Shawn Hunter will stay on, Ellman said.

Gretzky, who holds every major career scoring record in the NHL, is comfortable with Ellman's plans for the team, but he did not elaborate.

Gretzky's participation was thought to be a major part of the deal, and he agreed to it only at the last hour.

Ellman made the May 26 down payment four hours ahead of a midnight deadline after a day of speculation that the deal would fall through and that Burke would sell to billionaire Paul Allen. Allen was said to have wanted to move the Coyotes to Portland to share the Rose Garden with the Trail Blazers, his NBA team.

The sale to Ellman and Gretzky's group assures the team will stay in Arizona. The group must make a $6.5 million payment this month and has until Dec. 31 to pay off the rest.

PACERS: Miller finally gets NBA finals ticket started his shooting spree with a 3-pointer late in the third quarter to send the game into the fourth tied at 62.

His next 3 gave the Pacers the lead for good, his next made it a seven-point game and his last restored a seven-point lead with 6:08 left. He added eight more points on free throws the rest of the way for what was easily his best game of the series. It was his best single moment at Madison Square Garden in two years, even though the teams also met last year in the conference finals.

"I might hate, dislike, whatever word you want to use for New York, but I needed that fire last year. I never talked trash. I gave them all the respect, and I think that killed my game because I wasn't aggressive for the whole series," Miller said.

It was that deep-seated hatred, nurtured over seven years of battles between the teams, that gave Miller the extra edge this year.

So many years of coming so close, so many years of never winning the big one — something had to inspire Miller to lead his team where it has never been before.

"I had to start as soon as they won in Miami. I had to start," he said. "You have to hate someone. There's no way you can play against a team if you like them, and through years past I always hated New York. Last year, I didn't hate them because I thought it was going to be easy."

This year, though, he professed his hatred the day before Game 1 and was the only player from either team to talk up the rivalry.

This was the fifth time in seven years that the Pacers had an opportunity to get to the finals with just one victory, all five chances coming on the road. And after losing all those games — twice to the Knicks in 1994, once each to Orlando in 1995 and Chicago in 1998 — the Pacers finally won one.

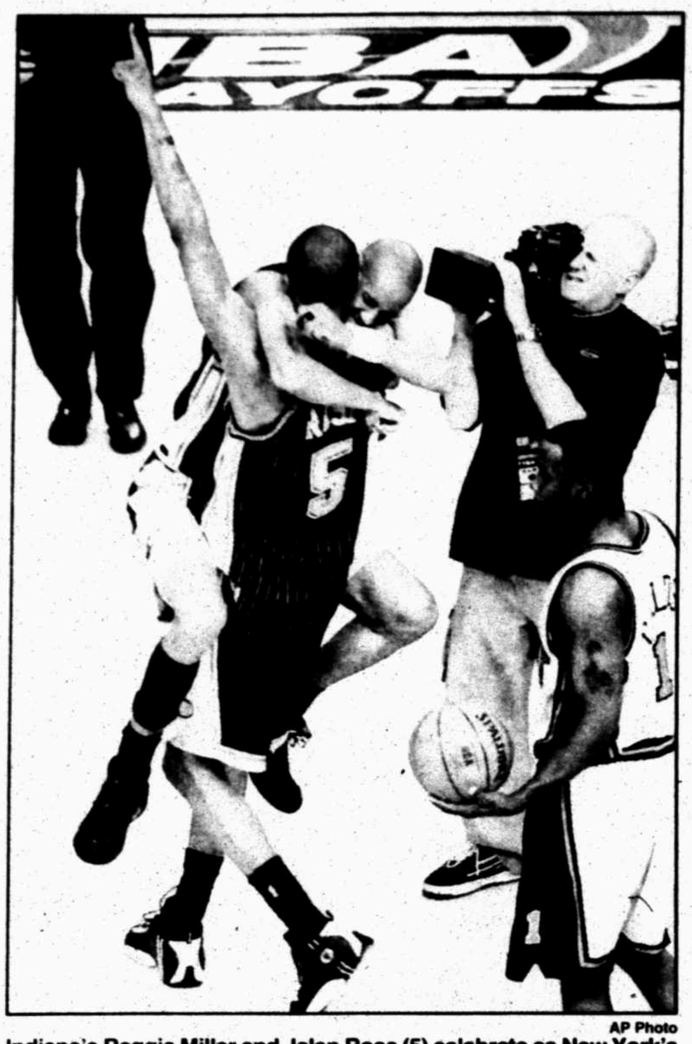

"Unbelievable feeling," Pacers guard Mark Jackson said. "Reggie Lee stood on his feet, an orange towel draped around his shoulders, and joined the Garden crowd in a polite applause.

There was simply no fight left in the Knicks at the end after so many episodes of playing their best when things looked their worst.

"We talked a whole lot about the noise and what we were going to do if we won, but New York was very gracious last year in upsetting us," Miller said. "Yeah, they were jumping up and down, but we would have, too.

"You never want to rub it in no one's face. No one likes losing. We know the feeling."

After Miller made his final 3-pointer with 6:08 left, the Knicks never got closer than seven again. As the clock ticked inside 20 seconds, the Knicks permitted Miller to dribble out the 24-second clock as he stood near midcourt.

4-5A: Five Midlanders earn spots on 1st team as well as pitched and played the outfield. Where they differed was in the nature of their impact.

Fewer players in the Permian Basin have carved as prestigious career on the diamond as Laynce Nix has. The centerfielder set MHS career marks with 38 home runs and 175 RBIs in becoming the first player in school history to complete four full baseball seasons.

This season, Nix became a more complete hitter. Although he didn't hit the ball out of the park any more frequently, he had three homers and 20 RBIs in district while hitting .500. His numbers in the latter two categories surpassed last season's district totals.

Nix capped his career with three selections to 4-5A's first team.

Unlike Nix, Rogers hadn't played any varsity baseball prior to this season, although it was hard to tell by the way he performed. The senior emerged as a major force on the mound and was also the team's leading hitter in district from the clean-up spot.

Only two days after Rogers beat eventual Region I-5A champion Duncanville 3-2 (in which he pitched a complete game and drove in all three runs, including a two-run homer), Lee coach Jesse Benavidez called on Rogers to start the district opener at Midland High, which was then ranked No. 5 in the state. Rogers responded with a gutty, complete game 9-5 victory in which he also stood out with his bat, driving in four runs.

The right-hander finished district with a 4-2 record and 2.75 ERA, averaging over a strikeout an inning. Rogers was also a viable run-producer, leading the Rebels in 4-5A with a .452 average and drove in 12 runs.

Rogers still wasn't the most productive clean-up hitter in the district. That honor went to Cswaykus, who like Nix was a repeat choice as a first team pick.

Although Nix — who has signed with LSU and is expected to be picked in the upcoming major league draft — was the most celebrated hitter in the MHS lineup, Cswaykus matched him in district, and in some cases surpassed him. Cswaykus also batted .500 in 4-5A, and led the district with six homers and 24 RBIs.

While the rest of 4-5A has to be relieved that Laynce Nix is finally leaving, there's still going to be another Nix to deal with next season. Jayson, a junior, anchored the middle of the infield as the one defensive constant for the Bulldogs. He also came around as a hitter, driving in 12 runs in district, third on the team behind Cswaykus and his brother.

Cramer, a senior, emerged as a top run producer for the Rebels this season, despite hitting sixth. He led the Rebels in 4-5A with 17 RBIs.

Making the second team for Midland High was senior outfielder Aaron Hamblin (a first team pick at second base last season) and freshman pitcher Casey Zachry.

Lee had five selections to the second team in seniors Josh Haney at second base, Joe Frazier at catcher, pitcher Collin Gilliam (a first team pick last season) and outfielder Jordan Cooper. Junior outfielder Cedric Benson was also named second team.

Both MHS and Lee had a pair of juniors earn honorable mention. For Midland High, third baseman Matt Bose and catcher Madison Edwards were named, while for Lee, shortstop Tyler Webb and outfielder Joey Guerrero were recognized.

ROCK: Mensik slams 10th home run

(From 1B)

DeFrancesco said. "We've got 16 games left and we play Tulsa and Wichita in those 16. It's a good time to step up, finish strong and hopefully get something going for the second half."

"Hopefully we can put it all together," Mensik said. "If you look at the box score, it's just the little things that we haven't been doing that have cost us games. We have to do the little things if we want to make a run at it in the second half. We know we have the talent to do it."

Friday night wasn't the easiest of victories for the 'Hounds as both starting pitchers had a rocky first inning, which took 38 minutes to complete.

Midland's Tim Manwiller struck out three but also walked three in the top of the first. Manwiller allowed just one hit but that was a two-run single by Nick Ortiz.

Wichita's Enrique Calero didn't fare much better as he walked three and allowed four hits, including a two-run single by Chris Norton and a two round double by Jacques Landry as the 'Hounds took a 4-2 lead. The 'Hounds had opportunities to add more in their half of the first but Dionys Cesar got thrown out trying to steal second base and Eric Byrnes also got tagged out at second trying to stretch a hit into a double.

"Who knows, if those guys reach second, we might still be out there," DeFrancesco said.

Midland got another run in the third as Jason Hart doubled home Byrnes, while Wichita got a single run in the third from a Pat Hallmark solo home run and tied the game at 5-5 with two unearned runs in the fourth. Then, it all went quiet for the both offenses as the bullpens took over.

Standing out among the relievers Friday night was Midland's Eric Thompson who got called up from Class A Visalia to fill in for the injured Michael Maurer. Thompson (1-0) may make his stay in Double-A baseball a lengthy one as the right-hander pitched 4 1/3 scoreless innings for the 'Hounds.

"Thompson does a great job for us," DeFrancesco said. "He pitched four scoreless innings after getting his feet wet and kept us in the game. You have to take your hat off to him because that's his first outing in Double-A (baseball)."

ROCKHOUND BITES: Tonight's promotion is the first 1,000 kids (12 and under) receiving a free RockHounds replica jersey... Against San Antonio, the RockHounds had only six extra-base hits in four games. The RockHounds had three extra-base hits against Wichita on Friday... Tonight's starter for the 'Hounds, fireballer Jesus Colome, turned 20 on Friday... It is still unknown whether Midland Lee graduate Jason Baker will pitch for Wichita on Monday. Baker is still listed as Monday's probable starter for the Wranglers. Baker was suspended Thursday because of an altercation he had with Tulsa's Ryan Lane a few weeks ago. It is hopeful that Texas League President Tom Kayser will delay Baker's suspension until after he pitches in Midland...

WEST: Portland holds O'Neal to 17 points

(From 1B)

60-49 with 5:21 to play in the quarter.

Pippen scored a series-low nine points and was just 1-for-6 from the field, but the deep, talented Blazers had more than enough offense elsewhere with five players in double figures. Rasheed Wallace scored 18, Damon Stoudamire 14, 10 in the first half, and Arvydas Sabonis had 10 points and 11 rebounds.

Glen Rice and Brian Shaw scored 12 apiece for Los Angeles.

The Blazers clinched the victory by going 15-for-16 at the foul line in the fourth quarter.

O'Neal was 1-for-1 from the field and 2-for-2 at the line in the fourth quarter. Bryant was 4-for-6 on 3-pointers in the fourth quarter and 6-for-9 for the game.

The Blazers took an 83-68 lead on Wells' two free throws with 6:56 to go, but Los Angeles mounted one last challenge.

Brian Shaw hit a 3-pointer and O'Neal made two free throws, after going 1-for-8 up until then, to cut it to 83-75 with 5:31 to play.

Then coach Mike Dunleavy put Smith back into the game. Bryant committed his fifth foul on Pippen's drive to the basket, and the two free throws put Portland ahead 86-75, then Smith sank a 3-pointer from the corner to a deafening roar and the Blazers were up 89-75 with 4:49 to go.

Bryant's 3-point barrage cut it to eight on several occasions, but Portland responded with free throws to hold off any late threat.

Down 49-39 at the half, the Lakers outscored Portland 8-2 to start the third quarter and cut the lead to 51-47 on Rice's 3-pointer with 9:07 left .

But Smith, acquired from Atlanta in a crucial offseason trade for Isiah Rider and Jim Jackson, scored the next six points, the first two on a steal and layup and Portland led 56-47.

Bryant's 3-pointer just before the buzzer left the Blazers up 71-63 entering the final quarter.

Even though Pippen was scoreless in the first half and didn't take a shot until 34 seconds before the break, the Blazers led by as many as 15 in the second quarter and were up 49-39 at the half.

O'Neal had eight tough-to-get points in the first half but was 0-for-6 at the foul line.

Portland, which has shot out to early leads in every game of the series, used a 16-2 burst to take a 24-13 lead on Sabonis' 20-footer with 1:29 to play in the first quarter. The Blazers led 26-15 after one.

Consecutive baskets by Brian Grant capped a 6-0 spurt that put Portland up 32-17 with 8:37 left in the half.

Stoudamire, averaging 7.0 points in the series, scored eight in the first quarter, including three drives to the basket.

Notes: Among those in the crowd: Tiger Woods, Bill Gates, Steven Speilberg and Clyde Drexler, who got a huge ovation when shown on the giant video screen.

Rangers, Astros fall in interleague action

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Jay Bell had four hits, including a tiebreaking home run in the seventh inning Friday night that led the Arizona Diamondbacks over the Texas Rangers 5-4.

Bell, the starting second baseman for 52 of the 53 previous games, was the designated hitter in Arizona's first interleague game of the season. After grounding out in the first inning, he had four straight hits.

After Texas came back from a 3-0 deficit to tie it, Bell led off the seventh with a solo homer off Rick Helling (7-3), who allowed nine hits in seven innings.

In addition to the go-ahead homer, Bell had three singles and scored twice. It was his first four-hit game this season.

White Sox 7, Astros 4

HOUSTON — Frank Thomas hit a three-run homer over the cozy left-field wall and the Chicago White Sox beat the Houston Astros 7-4 in the first interleague game at Enron Field.

Houston was 14-6 in interleague play at the Astrodome before moving into its new park this season. The game drew 39,028 to put the Astros over 1 million in attendance this season, the quickest they've reached the mark.

The Astros failed to hit a home run for the first time in 18 games, , stopping their franchise record streak. There have been 96 homers in 26 games at Enron, just 22 short of the entire 1999 total in the Astrodome.

of the third to run its lead to 5-0.

West walked to lead off the inning, and attempted to steal second base. The throw was on time, but Richmond missed West on the tag. Nicholson followed with an RBI single.

Ben Emond's followed with a sacrifice that Yodis fielded and threw past first base, and Chris Houser and Sam Anderson added with RBI hits.

"Our defense really let is down in the first few innings," said Penn State acting head coach Randy Ford. "I think we were a little bit tight coming out of the gate. If we don't make those early mistakes, we're right in the game at the end."

Head coach Joe Hindelang didn't make the trip. He suffered a mild heart attack earlier in the week.

Penn State got runs in the fourth and fifth innings on RBI hits by Brian Bishop and Chris Wright, but Texas countered with Ontiveros' RBI double in the seventh and Emond's RBI single in the eighth.

Jones pitched four solid innings for Texas, before giving way to Ray Clark (4-1), who pitched into the ninth inning to pick up the win for the Longhorns.

Chang's loss to Kuerten means Americans are finished in Paris

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

■ French Open

PARIS — American men's tennis has hit bottom at the French Open.

Not even a gutsy performance by Michael Chang for three hours into the waning twilight at Roland Garros on Friday could prevent the earliest wipeout of American men in 33 years of Grand Slam play.

Midway through the third round, all nine American men who started the tournament were gone — from Pete Sampras in the first round to defending champion Andre Agassi in the second to Chang in the third.

Chang, the youngest French Open champion in 1989, played with his old indefatigable spirit but couldn't quite keep up with 1997 champion Gustavo Kuerten in a 6-3, 6-7 (9), 6-1, 6-4 defeat.

Chang was the last American standing two years ago at the end of the third round when he departed the French — the only other time the entire U.S. men's contingent failed to reach the fourth round in a major tournament since the open era began in 1968.

But the depth of the American fiasco this time was underscored by the small number of U.S. players who qualified for a Grand Slam event that U.S. men have won four times since 1989.

"Generally speaking, the French is the one that the Americans tend to struggle with the most," Chang said. "We didn't really have that many Americans to start with. We do have some talented players. I think it's going to take some time to see what happens with their games. It is a little bit difficult to see if there is another group to follow the group we had. The group we had is very exceptional."

That group included two-time French champion Jim Courier, who recently retired. Sampras and Chang are 28, Todd Martin is 29, and Agassi is 30.

"I don't know if you're going to be able to see that for a long time," Chang said.

No. 4 Yevgeny Kafelnikov, who played five-setters the first two rounds, wasted a chance to finish a match quickly when he was up two sets and a break against Sebastien Grosjean. Kafelnikov then blew a 5-1 lead in the fourth set before finally closing it out 6-3, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4.

No. 10 Alex Corretja beat former Wimbledon champion Richard Krajicek 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

"It was really important to keep my serve, not to get crazy with his serve because he was serving huge, great," Corretja said.

Unseeded Mark Philippoussis, a first-round winner against No. 2 Pete Sampras, beat Hicham Arazi 6-2, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.

Chanda Rubin knocked off No. 7 Nathalie Tauziat 6-4, 7-6 (3), while Asa Carlsson beat another seeded Frenchwoman, No. 10 Sandrine Testud, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

The upsets left 10 of the 16 seeded players in the women's draw, including two from France — Mary Pierce and Amelie Mauresmo. The sixth-seeded Pierce beat Virginie Razzano 6-4, 6-0.

The last Frenchwoman to win the French Open was Francoise Durr in 1967.

Top-seeded Martina Hingis lost only eight points in the second set and swept Tathiana Garbin 6-1, 6-0. Hingis, seeking her first title at Roland Garros, is the lone seeded player left in her quarter of the draw.

No. 3 Monica Seles, who won the French three straight times from 1990 to 1992, also advanced easily, 6-1, 6-2, against Rita Kuti Kis. Seles is off to her best start to a year on the tour since 1992, winning three titles, most recently the Italian Open, after being sidelined for five months with a right foot stress fracture.

On the warmest day of the tournament, with temperatures in the 80s, Rubin reached the fourth round at Roland Garros for the third time.

Agassi, the top-seeded defending champion, was fined $10,000 for leaving without talking to reporters after his loss Thursday to Karol Kucera. Stefan Koubek, disqualified for throwing his racket in anger and accidentally hitting a ballboy, was fined $6,500.

Martina Navratilova, playing in a Grand Slam event for the first time in four years, teamed with Mariaan de Swardt to win their opening doubles match.

NFL: Cowboys release Deion

(From 1B)

Under new owner Dan Snyder, the Redskins have shown a propensity to sign name players.

"Certainly, it's been talked about a great deal and we'll see what happens over the next week," Redskins coach Norv Turner said Friday. "He's a talented, talented player."

Vinny Cerrato, Washington's director of player personnel, planned to talk with Sanders' agent, Eugene Parker, over the weekend. Sanders, an 11-year NFL veteran, is reportedly looking for a multiyear contract with a signing bonus of at least $8 million.

Cerrato wouldn't say how much the Redskins, who have already signed several prominent free agents, are willing to pay for Sanders.

"We'll set a structure and framework for what we are willing to do and see if that works," Cerrato said. "We are not going to be stupid. We are going to do what we feel comfortable doing and what fits within the structure of our team."

When Sanders arrived in Dallas at the start of the 1995 season, his five-year, $35 million contract was the richest in free-agent history.

Last year, Sanders signed a five-year, $51.5 million contract. But the Cowboys decided not to exercise their option on the remaining four years of the deal.

In addition to Washington, Denver and Tampa Bay have expressed interest in Sanders.

"From what I understand there are a few other teams that are interested ... probably teams that you know and usually a darkhorse will come in," Cerrato said. "I'm sure there will be competition."

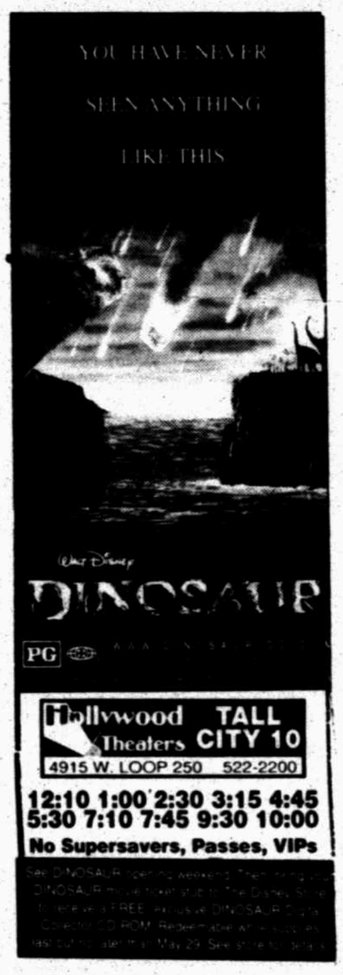

Though it seems very unlikely, Jones hasn't ruled out the possibility of keeping Sanders in Dallas with a restructured contract.

"We'll keep our options open regarding Deion's immediate future as it pertains to the Cowboys," Jones said.

Sanders, who played in four Pro Bowls during his five seasons in Dallas and the Super Bowl his first year, will still count $2.2 million against the Cowboys' salary cap this year, and $3.2 million against the 2001 cap.

Dallas has already prepared for his departure, selecting three cornerbacks in the April draft, signing free agent Ryan McNeil and re-signing Kevin Smith.

Grace Presbyterian members help Nicaraguans rebuild

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

"Brother let me be your servant, let me be as Christ to you. ..."
"The Servant Song," from the "Sing For Joy" songbook

Hurricane Mitch laid a swath of destruction across Honduras and Nicaragua in September 1998, leaving more than 10,000 people either homeless or with severely damaged houses. Since then, Midlanders of all faiths have been involved in a global version of neighborly barn-raising, helping rebuild houses, schools and churches.

Five of them, the Rev. Bill Clark of Grace Presbyterian Church, and four of his parishioners — Dana Rowan, Ron Christian, Roger Artley and Manny Ribera — recently discussed their experience and how it has changed their perspective as Americans and as Christians.

Grace Presbyterian became involved through Church World Service, which had coordinated teams through CEPAD (which roughly translates as the Evangelical Committee for Aid to Development). CEPAD offers logistical support, places to stay, provides a coordinator to act as guide and interpreter and arranges for bottled water, food and supplies.

The Grace Presbyterian parishioners were members of two groups of 15 each from the West Texas Presbytery.

Artley was in the first group, which helped for a week in March.

"We landed in Managua and spent the night, and the next morning we headed out in the back of a truck like migrant workers," said Artley. "Our group went to Casa Blanca, about five hours north of Managua; the last 1 1/2 hours (was on) a rough dirt road.

"We didn't go to build houses for them, but to help."

Rowan went with the second group in April to the village of LaCalera, about five kilometers from Casa Blanca. He said that at a meeting before the mission trip, the group had been warned of attitude traps.

"We had a meeting with a mission coordinator who warned us not to go over and begin showing them how to build, how to manage, how to fix their lives. Nicaragua has a long political history of U.S. intervention all the way back to the 1800s and we didn't want to go convey the feeling that 'I'm from North America, I can solve your problems; let me take over.'"

The houses they helped build were about 20-by-20 feet and made of concrete block construction reinforced with steel to withstand seismic activity and had corrugated metal roofing.

"Everything was done by hand," said Christian. "Cement was mixed on the ground and aggregate was brought in by ox carts with wooden wheels and axles. Water was carried from the river in five-gallon containers, on the heads of the men and women."

Christian said he suspects that the Nicaraguans went out of their way to ease the load for the out-of-shape Texans.

"I was working with a fellow from San Angelo, and it was our job to pass tin sheeting up on the roof to the Nicaraguans who were walking the two-bys on the rooftop and carrying the tin like there was nothing to it.

"We had to get used to reusing nails — pulling them out of boards and straightening them, then using them again, sometimes two or three times," Rowan said.

The owner of the house he worked on was a 16-year-old single mother with two children.

"She was slender, but very strong," he said. "She carried those 100-pound bags

Vacation Bible School

Learning about Jesus can be fun and games

Children can stay at home and see the world at Midland's myriad of vacation Bible schools, with the various churches offering themes and slices of life from first century Palestine, the mission field, a movie studio, the ocean and the kingdom of Narnia.

For some, the transition from school to Bible school was immediate, giving families a chance to come together for some intensive and fun Christian reinforcement before the kids have a chance to scatter.

Christian Church of Midland has already had its VBS, a recreation of the first century Palestinian market place, complete with brick makers, metal makers, beggars, magicians, vendors of all kinds and story tellers to transport children and adults back to the sounds and sights, culture and commerce Jesus saw when he walked this earth. Christian Church's youth minister, Jason Price, said the marketplace theme is a repeat of a theme they tried five or six years ago.

"It turned out to be one of the most popular programs we've ever had. It's something everybody can enjoy and they do."

Trinity Presbyterian Church is also bringing back a confirmed favorite: the C.S. Lewis classic, "The Lion, the Witch, and the Wardrobe." Trinity has a lamp post that really lights and a wardrobe — constructed by members of Trinity that fits comfortably in the oversize Trinity narthex — through which everyone must pass to get to Narnia. It is filled with fur coats donated by parishioners and friends and honest-to-goodness Turkish delight, the sweet that proved to be an irresistible temptation to Edmund.

The story tells of the travels of four British children, Lucy, Peter, Susan and Edmund, who encounter talking fawns and beavers, an evil queen and the mighty lion, Aslan.

Associate pastor, the Rev. Mary Beth Anton, said Trinity had first decided to have a vacation bible school based on the C.S. Lewis allegories simply to encourage children to read the series of seven Narnia stories. She said the stories are "a wonderful way to learn the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

"For those who haven't read the Narnia stories, 'The Lion, the Witch, and the Wardrobe' is the story of a wonderful adventure, where the mythical land of Narnia is accessed through a huge wardrobe where fur coats are hung and which plays a pivotal role in the story.

"I wanted people to have to go through a wardrobe and I wanted them to brush against real fur," Ms. Anton said.

She said that immediately after putting out the appeal for props, the men of the parish built a wardrobe and her office began to fill up with fur coats. Because Trinity has an extra large narthex, the wardrobe was placed there. There was also plenty of room to place the tall lighted lamp post, another pivotal prop in the story. It was also provided by Trinity parishioners.

"We have had so many people involved in producing this. Our primary prop designers are Bet-

Churches use VBS as way to reach out to neighborhood kids

Vacation Bible school is more than a century old, according to information on the Web site of Double Springs Baptist Church in Double Springs, S.C.

It all began when Mrs. Walter Aylett Hawes of Epiphany Baptist Church noticed untended children playing in the streets of New York City's East Side. Mrs. Hawes became concerned for their physical welfare, as well as their spiritual needs, and she was determined to act.

In 1889, she started the Everyday Bible School, with curricula for children from toddlers to 14 years of age. The classes, which lasted two hours each day for six weeks each summer, included worship, music, Bible studies and memory work, nature study, marching, games and a salute to the flag.

In 1901, the New York Baptist Missionary Society adopted the work of the Everyday Bible School, and began to spread the concept to other Baptist churches. In 1910, the Presbyterian Church was the first denomination outside the Baptist church to take up the program.

By the 1930s, vacation Bible schools had spread throughout the spectrum of denominations from coast to coast, with most of them designed around a one-week schedule.

When asked why they had vacation Bible schools, local youth leaders and Christian education directors almost

Ministry hopes to spread the Word via radio

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

Midland's Blessing for Obedience ministries hopes to become involved with a radio satellite network for missionaries.

The Nehemiah Network, an interdenominational ministry that spreads the Gospel electronically, has satellite stations linking missionaries around the world. It broadcasts Christian music for a prescribed number of hours each day from a station in Wilmington, N.C.; this leaves a window of time for missionaries to use the stations to broadcast their own messages in the languages of the areas they serve.

Sharalee and Alan Sherman, spokesmen for the Nehemiah Network, will be in Midland next week to bring their message of God's love through song and preaching.

Kelly Coleman, head of Blessing for Obedience ministries, said the Shermans agreed to come to Midland "as a blessing for the community to have a time of worship and to tell people how they can become involved in sponsoring a radio station for missionaries or workers in foreign lands."

'In the book of Nehemiah, the walls of Jerusalem had been destroyed and without this wall, the lives of the people were in jeopardy. Nehemiah prayed and fasted and prayed to the Lord for help and eventually was able to rebuild the wall of Jerusalem and revive the people. The idea is to build an electronic wall, much like Nehemiah's wall.'
— Kelly Coleman

Another aim of the praise and worship meeting is to gather support for a planned FM Christian radio station broadcasting in Spanish.

"The FCC has come out with a new 100-watt license, so we plan to put a station in Midland," he said.

Coleman, the Rev. Joe Chaves of Piedro Templo Angular in Midland and others have been working since September to raise the funding — an estimated $100,000 — to put the station in place. However, the low-power station's limited broadcasting range would be augmented by the Nehemiah satellite network.

"The original plan was to take KYMI in Lamesa and boost the power to 100,000 watts," Coleman said. "It would cover Lubbock, Midland, Odessa, even as far as Snyder. But going under the umbrella of the Nehemiah Network will enable us to promote unity and the body of Christ throughout the world.

"In the book of Nehemiah, the walls of Jerusalem had been destroyed and without this wall, the lives of the people were in jeopardy. Nehemiah prayed and fasted and prayed to the Lord for help and eventually was able to rebuild the wall of Jerusalem and revive the people. The idea is to build

LESLIE WILLIAMS

Spending quiet time with God is required to refresh the soul

Williams

Recently, I put my husband on the plane for Cambridge, England, where he is relaxing and spending time on a well-earned sabbatical, studying New Testament for several weeks.

Within 36 hours of his departure, my van's engine fell apart. Two hours and $293 after the garage managed to get the "Service Engine Soon" light off, the front brakes went out.

Before my husband left, people would come up to me and say, "Oh, I envy you getting to go to Cambridge."

Giving them the best pastor's wife smile I could muster, I'd respond, "No, you have me confused with the tall guy wearing a funny collar. He is going to Cambridge. I am staying here on the home front."

I have milked my martyrdom to the max. Not only do I miss my husband, but, like the people who've come up to me, I, too, am envious of his time at Cambridge. When do housewives get a sabbatical?

After God created the universe and the earth and all the plants and animals and humans, He rested. Likewise, He commanded us to take some holy time out and rest. I'm grateful my husband is in a profession that allows some time off every six or seven years. He's on call 24 hours a day, including Sundays, and the burn-out rate is high for those who cannot get away for a breather.

The rest of us may not get such an exotic break; nevertheless, God has spoken. This sabbath rest is not just a good suggestion. It is a commandment.

So how do housewives and the rest of us do it?

First, let me cover what doesn't count as sabbath time. A trip to Wal-mart after church — even without the pint-sized helpers — isn't restful. It may be the only time you have alone for the week, but it doesn't count. Also, putting the children down for a nap, then locking the bathroom door and soaking in a bubble bath doesn't count if the children (who have radar for these moments) crawl out of bed, wriggle and ooch their tiny fingers under the door, and wail, "Mommy!" until you emerge, dripping, to tend to them. You need more than three consecutive minutes of contemplation before it counts as sabbath time.

Trading kids with other moms works great, if you can resist the temptation to run around town like a madwoman doing errands by yourself. If work is what's corroding your battery, taking a personal day and pulling the plug on the phone is a great re-charge.

In Houston, I turned car time into mini-sabbaths. With an hour commute to school, I carried a suitcase filled with praise tapes, and turned the Interstate 45 parking lot nightmare into a bubble of holy time.

In Germany, housewives can get a doctor's note saying that they're tired, and the state will pay for a maid to come in for two weeks. Germany, anyone?

Time alone with God is a must. The airlines remind their passengers: if the air pressure drops, put your orange oxygen mask on yourself first, then your child. We are no help to anybody when we're frazzled and ready to pass out from exhaustion.

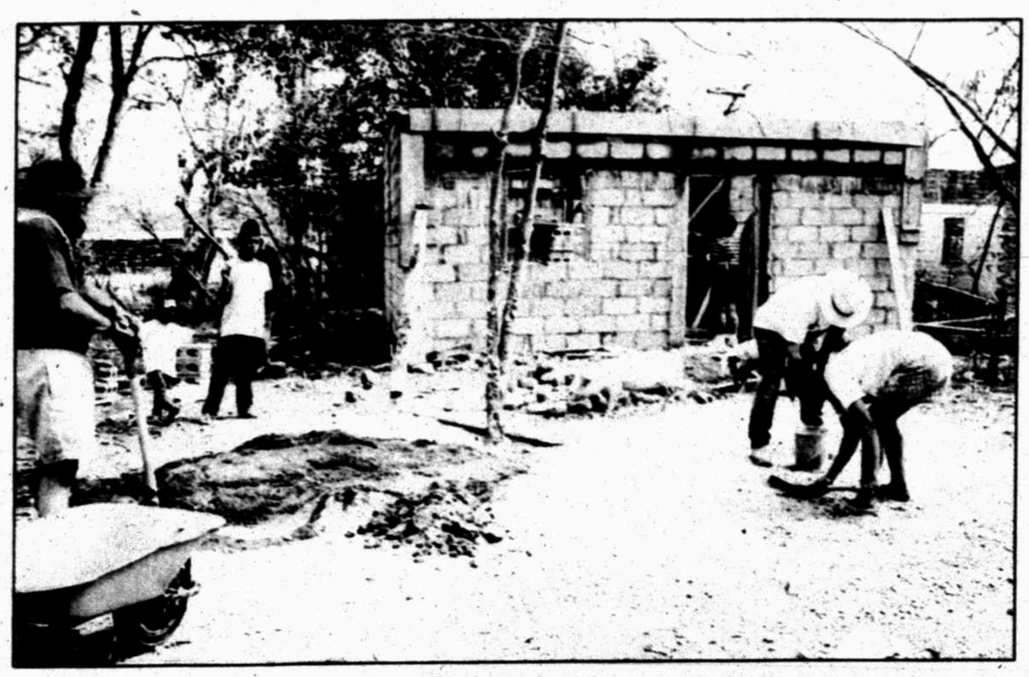

Now that school's out, I can wake up at the same time and have an hour or so all to myself before the natives get restless. By the time we meet Stockton in England, I should be thoroughly refreshed ... if only the tires on the car don't blow.

REBUILD: Nicaraguans don't have access to medical care of cement and it didn't seem to bother her."

After the work was finished for the day, the crews would gather to sing and have devotional times. Rowan had brought his guitar and he would join the Nicaraguans with their guitars. Ribera, who speaks Spanish, was also able to translate the devotions.

Clark said the prayer concerns revealed the stark differences between the United States and Nicaragua.

"The matters for which they prayed were often (illnesses) that we would have been able to treat so quickly and easily, and never even think about. They (don't have) aspirin. A doctor comes to LaCalera about once a month and now and then a Peace Corps worker rides her bicycle up there from a neighboring village and gives them information about hygiene.

"When I got home, my wife — who had stayed home and taken care of our three children — told me that our son had had to go to the dentist because of a tooth problem... such a simple thing. For the people of LaCalera, going to the dentist is not an option."

The men said there were children everywhere.

"We slept in the schoolhouse, and every morning there would be all these children looking at us through the windows," said Christian.

He said the children didn't have any toys.

"The one thing I saw was a boy who had an old bicycle wheel and he was rolling it with a stick. That was his toy."

They said the village's recreational competition of choice was "beisbol," which they played with a vengeance.

"They were playing Rock-Hound-style baseball, with 90-foot bases and a pitcher who hurled the ball at about 80 mph," Rowan said. "The catcher had a mask and glove, but that was all. Of course, there were no batting helmets. When I got up to plate, I was petrified.

"But for us, they would come in half way and pitch the ball gently. Then a Nicaraguan would be at bat and the pitcher would back up, wind up, and let him have it."

Christian said that even getting to first base had its perils.

"I didn't realize they had extended the bases to 400 yards. It must have taken me five minutes to get to first. Thank God the next guy struck out, because there was no way I was going to be able to make it to second."

Ribera said that since bats were in short supply, he decided to make a bat out of a tree limb.

"They showed me how to use the machete and at first I was really awkward, but I kept working at it and finally got the wood cut enough so that I was able to do some more carving with a pocket knife. Then to smooth it, I needed sandpaper. Of course, they (didn't have) sandpaper, but one of the kids showed me that I could use a piece of broken glass to shave and smooth it.

"I was doing pretty well, until I accidentally slipped and cut my arm. And a little girl went running down the path and came back in a few minutes with a handful of leaves that she told me to put in my mouth and chew, then to put on the bleeding cut. I placed them on the cut and the bleeding stopped. Now I don't even have a scar."

He said he signed the finished bat "Ribera y Dios" — Ribera and God.

The men said the trip to Nicaragua has left an imprint — a shift in viewpoint.

"It totally redefined my understanding of poverty," said Christian. "Those people live in cardboard and mud shacks and they seem happy. They seem to respect each other regardless of how much or little material wealth they have, and that too has caused me to change my priorities."

Rowan said that shortly after he returned from the trip, he was watching CNN and saw a story that brought him up short.

"In New York, a group of women were attaching U.S. currency bills to their fingernails and lacquering them," he said. "Some were using $5s, some other bills, and I remembered that the average Nicaraguan in LaCalera makes about $1 to $1.50 per day. To rebuild their houses, which cost about $1,500, they had to have a down payment of $400, which they borrowed. They will have to work five years just to pay back that $400."

"We talk and sing a lot in church about the family of God, and now when I think of the family, I think of us and of the people of LaCalera," Clark said. "We're the family of God."

FUN: Several programs have nautical theme this summer

(From 1C)

ty Ruth Smith, Margaret Kepple and Sandy Robinson, but the effort that has gone into this has really been fantastic, even down to a search for a recipe for Turkish delight."

She said this year's Narnia adventure will begin 5:30 p.m. Tuesday and continue each night through Thursday. Registrations are still being received and Ms. Anton she expects about 100 to 120 people.

"The evening will begin with dinner, followed by an opening in Narnia and then classes for children and adults. The first year, we had more adults than children."

The Rev. Dick Braun, parish associate at First Presbyterian Church, will lead the adult class. Classes for children age 3 through sixth grade will be assisted by Trinity Presbyterian young people in seventh through 12th grades.

Nautical VBS themes were a heavy favorite among Midland churches. First Baptist, Bellview Baptist, CrestviewBaptist and Northwestern Baptist all said that their theme is "Fantastic Ocean Odyssey — Diving into the Depths of God's Love," distributed by the Southern Baptist-sanctioned Lifeway Christian Resources.

Lifeway Christian furnishes posters and other visual art, audio cassettes, craft materials, lesson plans and optional amenities such as T-shirts.

Cindy Leach, director of First Baptist VBS, said the prepackaged materials save headaches and preparation time, while ensuring that volunteers can concentrate their efforts on making the experience meaningful.

"Last year's enrollment was about 1,800, about 400 children per day," she said. "There's no way we could have prepared for that many children without Lifeway's materials."

FBC's school is set for 9 a.m. to noon June 12 through June 16.

Holy Trinity Episcopal is also using a nautical theme: "VBS 2000: Anchored in His Name, Exploring the Names and Nature of Jesus."

Director Alison Porter said the nautical theme makes activities easy and fun and lends itself well to scriptural references. Holy Trinity workers chose to put together the materials themselves.

Also water-based is "2000 Ark Avenue," a package bought both by St. Anne's Catholic Church and the VBS' jointly sponsored by Midland Lutheran and Hope Lutheran churches.

Bertha Enriquez, director of St. Anne's VBS, said she chose the water theme because of the universal popularity of water games, and the close tie-in with Scripture.

"And this is something the kids can really get into, while they're learning a lot."

Other themes include Group Publishing Co.'s "Holy Word Studios," "Where kids star in God's story," according to promotional materials.

St. Mark's UMC and Our Savior's Lutheran Church are both using "Holy Word Studios."

The one-stop package approach doesn't come cheap. The Rev. Jo Gay, pastor of St. Mark's, said their bill for Group Publishing's materials would run more than $700.

"But we feel it's worth it for what we get. We serve lots of neighborhood kids who look forward all year to this experience and this program will serve unlimited numbers. The snacks are built around Scripture, (as are) the toys, the music and all the activities. There is constant scriptural reinforcement."

Melissa DeKeratry, director of Our Savior's program, agrees.

"One thing that's different is that the kids travel in crews with different ages of kids in each crew. They learn from each other."

St. Marks's VBS includes one activity that is not part of Group Publishing's package.

Participants gather supplies for health kits for the United Methodist world-wide relief agency, UMCOR, Ms. Gay said.

"We all buy bandages, aspirin, disinfectant and other items to put into individual sacks for people in emergencies around the world. It's a way we can put what we learn into practice."

First United Methodist is working around a mission theme: "Club Can-Do — Kids' Call to Care," which is a Cokesbury curriculum.

Director Phyllis Walker said FUMC has expanded its VBS — scheduled for 9:30 a.m. to noon June 12 through June 15 — to include fifth- and sixth-graders, who will put their beliefs to work in neighborhood ministries such as the Midland Soup Kitchen and Hospice of Midland.

"It's important for them to see that what they do for others can make a real difference, and to learn that we need to help each other."

She said their registration is about 400.

Almost unanimously, directors of the Bible schools said they would draw in not only their own congregations' children, but children from the surrounding neighborhoods as well. Many will go through the summer, going from one VBS to another. The directors said that while some parents will use Bible school as free baby-sitting, there also will be opportunities to reach parents with the message of Jesus.

Pam Friday, director of Crestview Baptist VBS, said Crestview will send a bus to apartment complexes to pick up kids who don't have transportation.

She said that a number of older adults from Crestview get involved in the program, planned for June 26 through June 30.

"We have retired men who come and get down on the floor, and it's wonderful, especially because there are children who don't have male role models around in their daily lives. Those seniors are so patient and the kids love them."

Westside Church of Christ is also offering transportation to and from their VBS, "How Shall the Young Secure Their Hearts."

A number of churches are holding Bible school in the evening. There is heavy adult involvement, with an average adult-to-child ratio in most programs ranging from 1-4 to 1-9, and all of them end with a family celebration, such as St. Anne's picnic on the grounds, First Baptist's family dinner and worship service and Bellview Baptist's open house.

And when VBS is over, it really isn't over, said Jeanne Thurmon, director of Bellview VBS.

"We often recycle our materials to other churches who will be having Bible schools later in the year and may not have been able to buy the program."

REACH: Teens have opportunity to give unanimously reasoned that VBS is one of their churches' greatest evangelistic tools.

Cindy Leach, director of First Baptist's VBS, said that while there is the perennial idea that many parents use the program as free baby-sitting, the blessings are too awesome to be ignored.

"We have families every year who come to church at no other time," she explained. "This is a chance for a child to learn the saving love of Christ — and sometimes it's the only chance that child will have."

Alison Porter, director of Holy Trinity Episcopal's VBS, said this is also a chance not only for the recipients but for the volunteers who are blessed to be able to give.

"At first you think that when kids get out (of school) for the summer, there is this blank slate and parents are left with the challenge of filling that time productively and keeping their kids out of trouble.

"We have 200 kids who can spend three hours a day with us, for five days, really enjoying learning about God and learning about community.

"There are friendships formed, some that last for a lifetime, while at the same time they're being exposed to a wealth of Christ-centered material.

"We also have 50 adults and 50 teen-agers — who are, after years and years of being the recipients — can now start to give.

"Each of us, I think, has an innate need to know that we're doing something that matters every day. And VBS can be one of these young people's first and most satisfying ways to fill that yearning to give."

Christian Church of Midland's youth minister Jason Price said there are two main reasons for doing VBS.

"First, we do it because the kids love it and we want the kids to enjoy their time in church. There's no greater way to get the kids to understand biblical times, biblical principles unless they can really get their hands dirty.

"When kids get to take part in something, such as getting to see how bricks are made, getting to hear a story teller, it's really imbed their in their minds.

"And second, it's a great outreach," he said. "It's getting to share about our church, about our Lord Jesus, and the things that kids need to understand. And this is just a great avenue to do that."

Woman believes God had a hand in liver healing itself

By Todd Glasscock
Associated Press

TEMPLE — Imogene Newman's house stands on a lot surrounded by pasture land thriving with dandelions. The gray brick house dispels any image of Appalachian shacks where pompadoured preachers might wander, and for a price, might lay hands on a sick child.

Instead the image is that of a typical country home. To the side of the house is a gray minivan. A gravel driveway curves through the edge of the yard, and on warm days children play out back.

And outside, appropriate to a summer afternoon, partly cloudy skies dapple with sunshine. It is spring.

Also appropriate to spring, healing has taken place. But it is not faith healing like the wild, frenzied healings parodied in movies such as Steve Martin's "Leap of Faith."

In this small community west of Temple, no tents are here for the faithful to gather and have a charlatan in a flashy suit smack a believer's forehead to heal them. No crippled men throw away their crutches and walk.

But some residents still sincerely pray for healing and they have support for it from the Bible. From the Old Testament to the New, healing is a consistent theme.

"So Abraham prayed unto God: and God healed Abimelech, and his wife, and his maid servants; and they bore children," proclaims Genesis; and Matthew says: "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of disease among the people."

Margaret Guzman, Mrs. Newman's daughter, sits on a green love seat in the home's living room. She is dressed in a white flowered scrub shirt with maroon pants; she has just gotten off work as a lab technician at Scott and White Memorial Hospital.

Recently she received some great news. A mass doctors had discovered near her liver was not cancerous, and, she wouldn't require surgery on her liver. Her liver seemed to be healing itself.

To her mind, this was a miraculous healing performed by God.

A month earlierl, she woke up early in the morning.

"I would just wake up," she said. "I could count on two or three in the morning."

The interruption in her sleep continued for several days. She took this as a sign that she needed to pray. So the next time she woke up, she said a prayer.

"I ended up praying for my health," she said, though she didn't know why. She felt that God was simply sending her a message and that message was about her health.

"I know that God wakes you up," her mother, Mrs. Newman, said.

In turn, heeding the message, Ms. Guzman made a doctor's appointment at the hospital. Initially she wanted to get checked out about neck pains and stomach troubles she had been experiencing periodically for several weeks.

"I think it's an ulcer," the doctor told her regarding the pain in her stomach.

But to be certain, he wanted to make further tests. A more thorough exam revealed that she had gall stones and sludge in her gall bladder.

There was also another concern: the doctor also discovered a mass on her liver about four centimeters round.

The mass would need immediate attention, the doctor told her.

"They set me up with a surgeon," she said. "They did an ultrasound and CAT scan and upper GI and the visit with the surgeon in the same week."

The trouble with the mass, the surgeon told her, was that it was located near the blood vessel that pumped blood to the liver from the heart and there also were two other smaller masses on the liver.

A biopsy would be needed to determine if the masses were cancerous, but the surgery would be difficult, the surgeon told her.

"I was speechless," she said when she heard this diagnosis. Her mind was on her responsibility to her three children, Jessica, 14; Michael 11; and Matthew, 9. "I was thinking, 'I'm the primary caregiver of three.'"

Her mother, who sat with her in the doctor's office, added that Ms. Guzman looked away from the doctor in disbelief. "I guess it was just too much for her."

With the diagnosis that she had a mass, it was clear that prayer was necessary. She came to understand the God had awakened her so many nights because of the mass.

She opened up to God and prayed for healing. But her prayers weren't the only ones. Members of her church — Macedonia Fellowship in Belton — the people she worked with, and even friends of theirs that she didn't know were also praying for her.

RADIO: Ham operators help missionaries, Coleman says an electronic wall, much like Nehemiah's wall," Coleman said.

"Praise and worship through music has a universal appeal and helps to build a wall of protection around the hearts of believers listening to the sound of (God's) presence."

This is not the Blessing for Obedience ministry's first venture into electronics. For several years, Coleman, a ham radio operator, has been involved in a worldwide network providing communications between missionaries and their families.

"We have more than 25,000 ham radio operators helping 800 missionaries," he said. "We act as the needle and thread to sew communities together.

"We've worked with mercy ships that take food, clothing, medical supplies, Bibles and other necessities to wherever they're needed throughout the world."

The Shermans' praise and worship service is 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Thursday and Friday at Midland Center.

Coleman said their appearances are free, but "there will be a love offering taken. And we would encourage people to bring extra Bibles if they have them for us to distribute to students in Nigeria. They can be new or old, just as long as they don't have any pages missing."

He said the Shermans are excellent speakers and singers. "Sharalee is an international Christian recording artist and is the former co-host with Pat Robertson of the 700 Club.

"If you have never heard Sharalee sing, you are really in for a treat."

In addition, the Shermans will be preaching at St. Paul's United Methodist Church at the 8:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. services on June 11 and at a community-wide outdoor service 7:30 p.m. June 11.

Temple Baptist Church

Summer Bible Conference

Wednesday, June 7th thru August 30th at 7pm

Come Hear Some Great Preachers

Temple Baptist Church has established itself as a church dedicated to proclaiming the Word of God. Because of this commitment, we have arranged a schedule of twelve speakers who will challenge you with Biblical messages relevant to your everyday life.

We extend a personal invitation to attend our 12th Summer Bible Conference. The men who will be speaking are some of the most prominent and effective communicators of the Word of God in our nation. They are effectively exercising their spiritual gifts in successful ministries and I am delighted that we have the privilege of hearing them.

I hope you will make a special effort to be present for as many Wednesday evenings as possible. This will be a great opportunity to extend an invitation to those who do not attend church as well as for personal spiritual growth.

Dr. E.K. Bailey — June 7

Dr. E.K. Bailey is the founder and senior pastor of the Concord Missionary Baptist Church in Dallas, Texas. He established the church in 1975 and today has a membership of 3,000. Cynthia Clawson has been traveling for two decades singing in concerts and churches across the country and around the world. Her 'style' is difficult to classify since she is a consummate singer who is at home with church hymns, jazz, country and pop. She has been called a 'singer's singer' by Vestal Goodman and Wayne Watson. Billboard Magazine called her "the most awesome voice in gospel music." Cynthia Clawson has been awarded a Grammy and five Dove awards. She has 19 recordings to the credit of her Lord and Savior. This will be an incredible evening of worship and praise. Make sure you experience it.

Speaking around the country on topics such as business communication, relationships, marriage and family, personalities, and powerful living, Dr. Lower has become a renowned communicator. The largest church in that state, Hoffmantown is one of the fastest growing churches in America.Dr. Lowery encourages, motivates, and inspires people with an unpretentious style seasoned with a generous dose of humor.

It is one of the largest churches in America with a membership of 22,000. In 1971, Dr. Falwell started what has become an accredited institution of higher learning that now enrolls more than 14,000 students — Liberty University. In 1983, U.S. News & World Report named him one of the "25 Most Influential People in America." He has published 13 books, established the Moral Majority in the 80s, and has appeared on national television as a spokesman for conservative political activism.

Dr. Bailey Smith — July 12

TIME magazine describes Dr. Smith as "a formidable figure, a fiery, red-haired, old style prairie stemwinder..." The Los Angeles Herald stated, "His oratorical skills have proven him to be one of the Baptists' more popular preachers. . ." He was the youngest man ever to serve as president of the Southern Baptist Convention, baptized 2,000 people in one local church in one year, and after successful church pastorates he entered Crusade Evangelism and has seen thousands accept Jesus Christ as their personal Savior. Southeastern Seminary in Wake Forest, North Carolina has established the Bailey Smith Chair of Evangelism for teaching and development of evangelists.

It is one of the largest congregations in the city and hosts multiple worship services on Saturday night and Sunday. Since Pastor Chapman assumed leadership of the church, attendance has grown from 700 to over 1300.

Dr. Paige Patterson —August 2

While being an ambassador to the churches that comprise the largest Protestant denomination in the world, Dr. Patterson has continued his duties as President of the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary. Under his leadership that institution has become one of the fastest growing and largest theological seminaries in the world. His vision is for the ministers who leave that campus to be fully equipped and energized to impact this nation and the world for the cause of Christ.

Dr. Ike Reighard — August 9

Dr. Dwight "Ike" Reighard's purpose statement reflects his own life story. Helping people [illegible] for an extraordinary life. He grew up in an unchurched family, being the "different" kid in school, and dealing with the difficult issues of adolescence while growing up in inner-city Atlanta. His life was transformed when he accepted Christ as his Savior at the age of 22. He returned to college and the same [illegible] graduated [illegible] Laude from Mercer University. He has also earned a Doctor of Ministry degree from Luther Rice Seminary. He currently pastors NorthStar Church in Kennesaw, Georgia. As the model church for the North American Mission Board's Mega Church Focus, NorthStar is the fastest growing church started in the history of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Dr. Harold Ivan Smith — August 16

It would not be a Summer Bible Conference at Temple Baptist Church without Dr. Harold Ivan Smith. He has preached in every conference since 1990 as well as special occasions such as Teacher Appreciation Sunday. In recent years, Harold has turned his focus to ministering in local churches, hospitals, and hospice organizations, as well as speaking and writing. On the heels of great success in his home church and the St. Luke's Hospital in Kansas City, Missouri, as well as through this author, Dr. Smith conducts Grief Gatherings which incorporate storytelling for groups dealing with grief. His enduring grief recovery, such as Grieving the Death of a Child and Reflections On the Death of a Father have had a profound impact on readers.

Dr. James Merritt — August [illegible]

Dr. James Merritt has pastored the First Baptist Church of Snellville, Georgia since 1986. Under his leadership, membership has grown from 2,000 to 10,000 and the Sunday School averages 3700 in attendance. During the 90s, the church averaged over 500 baptisms a year. Dr. Merritt holds Masters and Doctorate degrees from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky. He has published two books: God's Prescription for a Healthy Christian and Friend, Foes, and Fools. In 1995, he was President of the Southern Baptist Convention's Pastor's Conference and he presently serves as Chairman of the SBC Executive Committee.

[illegible] Duncan — August 30

[illegible] Bible Conference concludes this year with a [illegible] Temple. Dr. John Duncan has pastored the [illegible] Church in Granbury, Texas, since [illegible]. John earned a [illegible] of Ministry degree at [illegible] Seminary in 1990 and is currently working [illegible] Texas through Oxford University in [illegible] personal ministry. Dr. Duncan states, "As a [illegible] committed to God's Word, prayer, and [illegible] corresponds directly with people's and [illegible] challenge to us for the remainder of 2000!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 3, 2000:

Keep a rein on strong feelings this year. Process them before acting out or saying things you could later regret. A learned ability to step back could be an enormous gift you give yourself. Communicating is one of your greatest assets, enhancing your ability to make money and gain professionally. If you are single, your feelings often seem out of control. Pick your special person carefully. You enter a new lucky cycle that could benefit you emotionally. If attached, don't get into control games with your mate. Nothing is black-and-white. Opt for peace. CANCER indulges you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Feelings intensify, and if there ever was a problem, it is likely to come out now. Stay centered and caring. Be willing to work through problems one at a time. Good communication allows a clean slate. Family matters must take priority. Tonight: At home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ What another blurts out is the way he feels. Nevertheless, keep communication flowing. It might be tough to get past a problem, but your endurance and excellent questions open up discussion. Return calls. Be responsive. Tonight: Out and about.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Intensity and emotions come out way too easily with a friend or partner. Extremes mark moods. Deal with funds in a positive, direct manner. Establish limits. Know what you need to do when confronted. Tonight: Treat yourself and a loved one well.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ What comes up this morning could cause you to step back and think. Certainly everything wasn't the way you thought it was. You have a lot to say, but another might not want to hear it. Stay light and easy with friends. Tonight: Whatever makes you smile.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Stay even-tempered with a child, loved one or friend. You have your hands full as you attempt to find answers and solutions. Things are likely to be the way you think they are, but the smart thing to do is to say little. Tonight: Low-key.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ A parent's or boss's last-minute demand makes you feel slightly uncomfortable. Understand what motivates an associate, and talk through his reaction. A friend feels left out; make the additional effort to help him feel more comfortable. Tonight: Where the party is.

Cruise bows to pressure, sings in public

Tom Cruise was goaded into a performance by a reporter at a news conference.

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Tom Cruise knows his limits, but he sang in public anyway Friday, bowing to the pressures of this karaoke-mad island.

Cruise was goaded into the performance by a reporter at a news conference where the actor promoted "Mission: Impossible 2."

Cruise chose the last song he sang on film: the Righteous Brothers hit "You've Lost That Loving Feeling," from 1986's "Top Gun."

"You never close your eyes anymore when I kiss your lips, and there's no tenderness," he sang in a low, hesitant voice.

He didn't finish the line.

"I couldn't sing then, and I can't sing now," Cruise said.

CORPUS CHRISTI — City cleanup crews can hardly keep up with the graffiti and messages of love and grief left at a statue of Selena, the Grammy-winning Tejano singer slain in 1995.

"It's an emotional message center that we are unable to deal with," said businessman Dusty Durrill. A foundation named for his daughter paid for the memorial.

City workers have to clean up the bronze statue at least once a week. The city is considering several ideas, including surrounding the statue with a galvanized steel cage.

The 23-year-old singer was shot by Yolanda Saldivar, who ran Selena's clothing business. Saldivar was convicted of murder and is serving a life sentence.

NEW YORK — The editor of O, The Oprah Magazine, is resigning after just one issue had hit the newsstands.

Ellen Kunes said her decision was prompted by "work-family issues" and had nothing to do with how the magazine was run, with the editorial staff based in New York and Oprah Winfrey working out of Chicago.

"I wasn't sure, given my personal situation, that I could continue to put out this enormous magazine," Kunes said. "I felt a sense of responsibility to give it my complete attention, and I felt that I couldn't do it at this time."

Winfrey's company Harpo puts out the magazine — billed as a personal growth guide for women — with publishing giant Hearst Corp.

The first issue was a blockbuster, selling 1.6 million copies on newsstands. The follow-up issue, which Kunes just finished, will appear on newsstands June 19.

MINNEAPOLIS — The artist formerly known as an unpronounceable symbol is holding a weeklong party to celebrate his switch back to the name Prince.

The party begins Wednesday at his Paisley Park studio in Chanhassen, and he will perform June 13 in Minneapolis.

"Paisley Park is pretty much representative of everything I am musically," he told KMSP-TV on Thursday. "I love Minnesota. I've lived here all my life, and I plan to stay."

Prince said he kept his local studio so that he wouldn't have to run back and forth to Los Angeles or New York.

"I've found that you tend to reflect whatever it is that's around you," he said. "I wanted peace around me, so I stayed here so I could reflect peace. I needed a place like this to create."

CHICAGO — Get your checkbook ready, Donald Trump.

A developer who wanted to build the world's tallest building in downtown Chicago has run into financial problems, so the $500 million project may be up for grabs.

Trump had offered to join the $500 million project last October, but developer Scott Toberman rebuffed him.

Then Toberman stumbled on the financing for the residential-office building, and he finally had to return the property deed to his lender, the Chicago Tribune reported Friday.

The site is a few blocks from the Sears Tower, which held world's-tallest honors from 1973 to 1996, when it was topped by the Petronas Towers in Malaysia.

Calls to the New York-based Trump Organization were not immediately returned Friday.

Hispanics see Cisneros as a good choice to head L.A. schools

By Jeanne Russell
Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — The only Hispanic member of the Los Angeles Board of Education cannot hide her glee at the possibility of recruiting former Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros to run the nation's second-largest school system.

But Cisneros says he does not want to be recruited.

Cisneros, who now heads the Univision, the nation's largest Spanish-language television network, has been considered for what many see as an impossible job. He admits he may have the perfect background to salvage the Los Angeles Unified School District, a poor inner-city system so large it spans four telephone area codes.

Cisneros repeated Wednesday that he was flattered but uninterested.

In a brief interview outside the hotel where Univision shareholders were gathered for a meeting, Cisneros said he twice had asked school district officials to remove him from their short list. Maybe he needed to ask them again, he mused.

He then pointed out why he might excel at the job.

"They've got a big school district with huge problems," Cisneros said. "They've got a man who was mayor of a big city, a former Cabinet officer, who has shown he can solve problems of poverty issues."

Cisneros, was the mayor of San Antonio before he became secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development in 1993, a post he held during President Clinton's first term in office.

During his seemingly unstoppable political rise, Cisneros was the first Hispanic seriously considered as a vice presidential candidate, but a costly and messy independent counsel investigation into his payments to a former mistress derailed that ascent.

Cisneros pleaded guilty on Sept. 8, 1999, to a single misdemeanor charge of lying to the FBI about the payments during routine background checks on nominees for Cabinet posts. Cisneros paid a $10,000 fine. In exchange for the guilty plea, a federal judge dropped 18 felony counts that could have sent him to prison.

Cisneros opted for a lucrative and relatively private life as a Southern California business executive. As Univision's public face, however, Cisneros has charmed Los Angeles and is no stranger at school board meetings, said Victoria Castro, a former junior high school principal and the only Hispanic on the school board.

"I can just speak from my perspective and that of the Latino community," she said. "He is revered."

Some who know Cisneros well say he remains tempted by the allure of working to solve massive social problems. He might even see a risky public service challenge as a route toward political redemption, they say.

The Los Angeles school district is now undertaking a reorganization into 11 smaller units under interim Superintendent Ramon Cortines.

With 711,000 students, the Los Angeles district ranks second behind New York City schools in size.

More than 70 percent of its students are Hispanic, and the Latino community remains wary about the ouster by a newly elected board majority of popular Superintendent Ruben Zacarias in November, Castro said.

Cisneros is seen as someone who can also appeal to the business interests that backed the new board members.

Several other potential candidates, including Houston Superintendent Rod Paige, have said they are not interested in the Los Angeles job. Only one candidate on the list has lobbied for the job: former Colorado Gov. Roy Romer.

The L.A. school system wants to pay its new superintendent in the $190,000 to $250,000 range.

Cisneros, through his position at Univision, has been involved in parental participation and literacy initiatives with the L.A. schools.

But after earning $600,000 in bonuses and $3.3 million off the sale of stock options on top of his $600,000 base salary at Univision for a total of $4.5 million in 1999, taking the school job would be a considerable step down financially.

Cisneros can cash in additional stock options for about $5.2 million, according to the Univision proxy statement filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

Elderly Panhandle man pursues late dream of becoming a barber

By Shana Foust Peoples
Amarillo Globe-News

AMARILLO — He doesn't really know how many times he drove past the school before he decided to go inside and apply, but when Mearle Swanson made up his mind last year, he made it up for good.

He ignored his heart trouble, his shaky second marriage and the fact that at 78, he was probably way too old to be doing what he was doing. Too much time had already been lost. For 60 years he had wanted to do one thing and one thing only with his life.

Swanson wanted to be a barber.

"I've wanted to be a barber for a long time. But, I just kept doing other things," he said.

Throughout his life he's been an electronics parts salesman, a piano and organ repairman, a nursing assistant, a pastor, a chaplain and a music minister in various places around Washington state and Texas.

He's always kept himself busy, whether it was making furniture, taking pictures, playing keyboard or even sewing. But even though he's been able to roll along with whatever life's given him, he wasn't 100 percent sure that he'd make it through barber college.

"Both of the gentlemen at the school were sure I could make it," he said.

Usually, it takes nine months to finish the whole course at West Texas Barber Styling College. And Swanson was well on his way, pretty much sailing through most of the exams. Then he got sick.

"I had to have heart surgery. That slowed me down."

Swanson's angioplasty, coupled with the fallout from the end of his second marriage, did such a number on him that he had to take a break from school and most everything else.

Being alone reminded him of how much he still missed his first wife, Joyce.

The two of them had done everything together after they got married in 1939. They both loved church and loved the old hymns. He would play the organ and sing "In The Garden" while Joyce accompanied him on piano. The Swansons never had children, but taught Sunday School to hundreds of kids.

"We always wanted children, but there never seemed to be a right time. And then, it was too late," he said. "Teaching helped us fill that void, and so did all of our nieces and nephews."

Joyce had a stroke that weakened her; a second one paralyzed her left side and sent her into a nursing home. He went to see her twice a day, every day on his way to work and on his way home.

"I took her out to dinner a lot. We always ate dinner together."

Seeing Joyce became the bookends of his days for eight years. Then, her heart gave out, and she died in 1995.

"My whole life changed when she died. You don't just drop that overnight. I still miss her greatly."

And, he said, if she were still alive, she'd be tickled at the thought of him going to school at his age to become a barber. After his body healed, he headed right back through the doors at the college.

"Whenever I got here, burrs were all he knew how to do," said James "Bo" Simmons, West Texas Barber Styling College's owner and instructor. "We just had to teach him how to do regular haircuts. Most of them (other students) like him; he's of a different generation."

To get his diploma, Swanson had to be able to memorize 12 hair styles that appeal to men and women. He had to know the chemistry of hair dye and the coiffure physics of the permanent wave. And his hands learned the gentle art of shaving, manicure and pedicure.

"They teach you to be an all-around barber so people won't stump you when they come in," he said.

Eventually, he cut 984 heads of hair.

"He's a typical barber student, only his age makes it harder for him to stand up for long periods of time," Simmons said. "He's got a sciatic nerve problem, so we just have to work with him on that. He's real good. He learned the book real fast."

And finally got his diploma in February.

"I was elated. It was such a sense of accomplishment," Swanson said, his blue eyes twinkling.

Then it was on to the state examination.

"His practical (exam) he passed real high, and the written (exam) he got an 81," Simmons said. "He's going to go to work at Rita's Barber Shop on Grand."

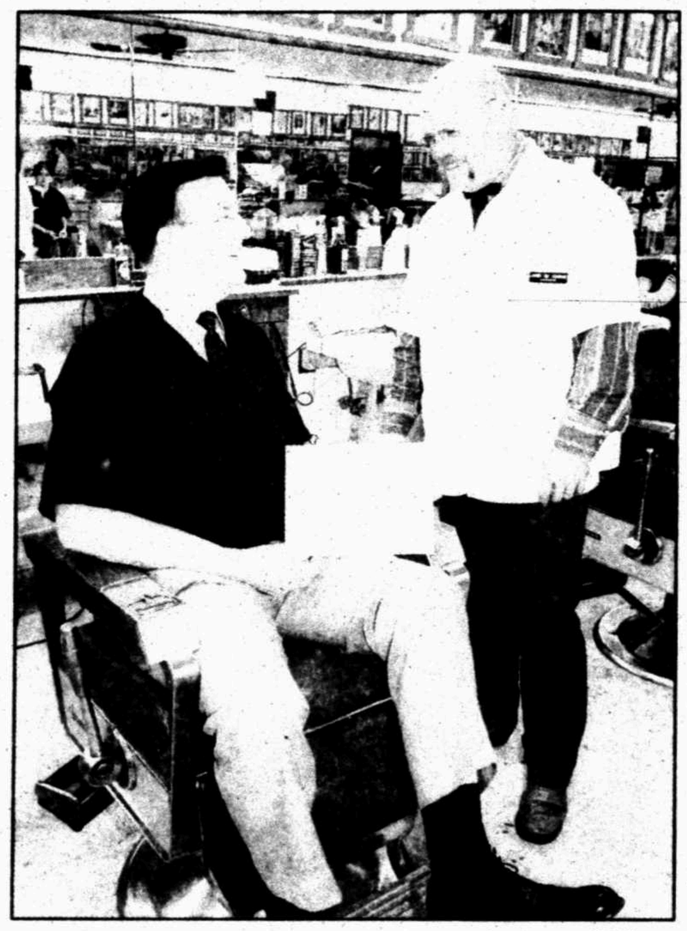

Rita Futrell, owner of Miss Rita's Best Little Barber Shop in Texas, said she decided to offer Swanson a job after the barber board inspector came into her shop and talked about how well Swanson did on the state test.

"I thought he'd fit in real well," Futrell said. "I really respect the fact that he's as old as he is and went to school. It's very unusual. I believe he's the oldest person they've ever had graduate from there."

On a slow Wednesday, Swanson leaned on his barber chair at Miss Rita's and talked about the last two years of his life.

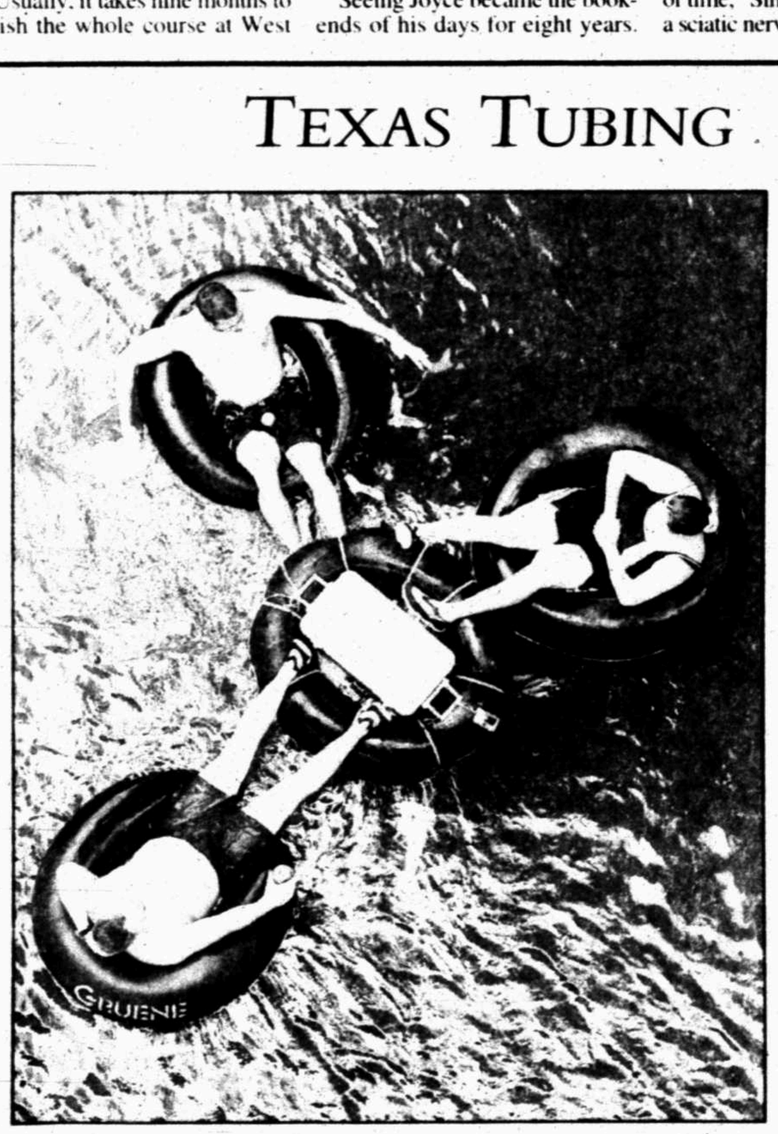

"I really do feel a sense of accomplishment. I'm happy about it. I put $6 in my pocket every time I cut hair. It's working out real well," he said.

Bush visits U.S.-Mexico border

By Scott Lindaw
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — GOP presidential contender George W. Bush made a brief appearance at a gathering of U.S.-Mexico border governors Friday, participating in a work session and posing for photographs.

The Texas governor spent about 90 minutes at the gathering at the Capitol here. He took part in a brainstorming session on border issues including education, the environment and the economy.

The meeting was closed to the news media, and reporters were admitted to a subsequent photo session on condition they not ask questions.

Asked later by The Associated Press about the substance of the meeting, Bush said, "We talked about friendship and respect," before walking away to greet Capitol visitors.

Bush, who has been visiting the nation's largest state about every two weeks, kept a low profile here Thursday and Friday.

He appeared at the opening ceremony of the Border Governors Conference, but, like most of the other governors, said nothing publicly.

Bush appeared via satellite at a CNN conference in Atlanta. He answered foreign policy questions, but his answers will likely never be seen by California viewers. The appearance was not meant to be broadcast, but was for an annual gathering of journalists and world leaders.

He attended the meeting with the governors, but was flying back to Austin as they delivered speeches and fielded questions from reporters.

Bush did some hand-to-hand stumping in the Capitol here — home to Democratic Gov. Gray Davis, the most important ally in California of Bush's rival, Vice President Al Gore.

Flashbulbs popped as Bush worked a crowd of schoolchildren right outside Davis's office.

Austin jury convicts Karr of extortion in O'Hair case

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN — An ex-convict was convicted of extortion but found innocent of kidnapping in the disappearance of atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair, her son and granddaughter. The three disappeared in 1995 and are believed to have been killed and dismembered.

Gary Paul Karr, 52, was acquitted of conspiring to kidnap the family, but found guilty of extortion, traveling interstate to commit a violent act, committing a criminal act to gain financially, and interstate transportation of stolen property.

He faces life in prison under the so-called federal three strikes law because of prior convictions. Sentencing was set for Aug. 4.

The jury deliberated for four days. On Friday, it sent a note to U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks on Friday indicating it was divided on some of the charges, but the judge sent the jurors back. Three hours later, they returned with the verdicts.

O'Hair, her son Jon Garth Murray and her granddaughter Robin Murray O'Hair disappeared from San Antonio in 1995 along with $500,000 in gold coins. Government investigators say they were dismembered and put into 55-gallon drums to be buried, but no bodies have been found.

During the two-week trial, prison inmates testified that Karr told them he was involved in the slayings. As evidence, federal agents also presented hundreds of telephone calls, car rentals, airplane trips and other financial transactions they said implicated Karr.

Karr also gave authorities a statement in which he acknowledged acting as an errand boy and bodyguard for the missing family during the last few weeks the three were known to be alive.

He did not testify in his defense.

O'Hair reveled in calling herself the most hated woman in America and was involved in successful court battles in the 1960s to remove prayer and Bible-reading from the nation's public schools. Suffering from diabetes and heart disease, she was America's most prominent unbeliever — a combative foe of all organized religion — when she vanished at age 77.

O'Hair wasn't reported missing for a year, not until her estranged son, William Murray, called Austin police. Authorities questioned whether all three were victims of foul play or merely ran off with the money from their atheist organization, United Secularists of America.

Others suggested that O'Hair, who was ailing, had gone off to die quietly so Christians wouldn't pray over her.

Investigators suggested the mastermind behind her disappearance was David Waters, the O'Hairs' former office manager and a former cellmate of Karr. A convicted murderer, Waters pleaded guilty to stealing $54,000 from O'Hair's organizations and is now serving 60 years in prison on weapons charges.

Waters' attorney has denied that Waters was involved in the disappearances, and he has not been charged. Danny Fry, the other alleged co-conspirator, was found dead in Texas in 1995 with his head and hands cut off.

During the trial, Karr's ex-wife and his former boss both said he told them he was going from Florida to Texas to play in a high-stakes poker game in 1995. He allegedly returned with $15,000 worth of fine clothing and three Rolex watches he tried to give to ex-wife, Charlene Karr.

Charlene Karr testified that she refused to take the watches and that Karr told her "they were won in a card game and came off the bodies of the O'Hairs."

"He told me David had killed them. He told me it was Madalyn O'Hair, that she had taken the prayer out of schools and David Waters hated her," Charlene Karr said.

Karr also told his ex-wife he drove Waters to a rural area so Waters could examine where the bodies were buried. He told her in a taped telephone call from jail, however, that he didn't see any bodies.

In May, authorities said for the first time that the O'Hairs were killed and theorized that their remains were buried in barrels.

When confronted in March 1999, Karr drew authorities a map to a ranch near San Antonio where about 100 officers conducted a 72-hour search without finding any bodies. Authorities think the bodies may have been washed away in floods or even eaten by wild hogs and coyotes.

During the trial, two people testified for the defense that they saw O'Hair alive during the time prosecutors say she was kidnapped or killed — once during the summer or fall of 1995 in a San Antonio bar and once in a restaurant in Romania in November 1997.

Timeline of the O'Hair family disappearance

A chronology of events leading to Friday's conviction of Gary Karr in the disappearance of Madalyn Murray O'Hair

1960 — Madalyn Murray sues the school district in Baltimore to stop Bible reading and daily prayer at son William's school. She loses in state court but appeals to the Supreme Court.

1963 — The Supreme Court rules 8-1 to ban prayer and Bible reading in public schools. Murray celebrates her new position as the "most hated woman in America."

1965 — She settles in Austin with new husband Richard O'Hair and begins structuring a national atheist movement.

1980 — William J. Murray says he has converted to Christianity and apologizes for his part in the school prayer suit.

1985 — David Roland Waters is convicted of forgery in Peoria, Ill. While in prison, he meets Gary Karr, serving time for aggravated kidnapping and armed robbery.

1986 — O'Hair resigns as president of American Atheists and is replaced by son, Jon Garth Murray. She remains active in the organization.

February 1993 — Waters is hired by O'Hair as a typesetter at $7 an hour. He later becomes office manager but quits in April 1994 after money disappears from atheist accounts.

May 1995 — Waters pleads guilty to stealing $54,400. He is sentenced to serve 10 years probation and is ordered to repay the money and stay away from the O'Hairs.

May 31, 1995 — Karr is released from Illinois prison, having served more than 20 years. He moves to Florida and then to Texas.

July 1995 — Danny Fry comes to Texas from Florida. He stays at Waters' Austin apartment during August and later moves to San Antonio.

Aug. 27, 1995 — Abruptly O'Hair, Jon Garth Murray and granddaughter Robin Murray O'Hair leave Austin for San Antonio.

Sept. 21-22, 1995 — Jon Murray and Karr travel to Newark, N.J., to meet with bank officials over a wire transfer of $600,000 from New Zealand to a San Antonio jeweler.

Sept. 29, 1995 — Jon Murray takes delivery of $500,000 in gold coins purchased with those funds. After a phone call, the O'Hair family vanishes.

Sept. 30, 1995 — Fry makes a call home from Waters' apartment, promising to return to Florida. Two days later, his headless, handless body is dumped alongside a river east of Dallas. It remains unidentified for more than three years.

September 1996 — William Murray files a missing persons report.

March 24, 1999 — FBI agents and Dallas sheriff's deputies raid Waters' apartment, arrest him after ammunition is found.

March 25, 1999 — Karr is charged with a weapons offense after agents find two loaded handguns in his apartment.

April 4, 1999 — Three dozen FBI and IRS agents unsuccessfully scour a Hill Country ranch for the remains of the O'Hair family. Four weeks later, they conduct another fruitless search.

May 26, 1999 — A federal judge unseals an affidavit, filed March 23, 1999, detailing a circumstantial case against Waters, Fry and Karr and accusing Waters and Karr of killing Fry.

Aug. 20, 1999 — Waters is sentenced to eight years in federal prison after two guilty pleas of possession of ammunition and firearms.

Dec. 7, 1999 — A federal grand jury in Austin indicts Karr on five counts related to the O'Hairs' disappearance, including kidnapping, extortion and robbery.

June 2, 2000 — After a two-week trial, a jury in Austin convicts Karr of four charges. He is acquitted of conspiracy to kidnap.

Viagra seen as potential treament for vision

By Cindy Tumiel
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Viagra has become firmly imbedded in the American vocabulary since the drug debuted two years ago as a treatment for men with sexual dysfunction.

But debate continues among doctors and researchers, who have cautioned that not much is known about its effect on other systems in the body. Eye specialists, in particular, have warned high doses of Viagra can affect the delicate chemistry of the eye in some patients and cause temporary visual problems.

Now, researchers from the University of Texas Health Science Center say their work suggests Viagra, or sildenafil, should be studied as a potential treatment for patients with macular degeneration, the leading cause of blindness in older individuals.

Other experts warned it is far too soon to make even that qualified suggestion.

"We have a long way to go, but so far we have nothing but good cause for guarded optimism," said Dr. William Sponsel, an associate professor of ophthalmology and lead author of the study.

PLACING AN AD:

Call 682-6222, Monday through Friday, from 8a.m. – 6p.m.

A friendly Advertising Consultant will help you word and schedule your ad for best results.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!

❶ Promote Your Merchandise - The more descriptive you are the more likely your merchandise will appeal to someone.

❷ Check The Market Value - The most common mistake that occurs is over or under pricing your goods.

❸ Always Include The Price - People are more likely to respond when they know the price range.

❹ Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item, such as 'Stove' or 'Guitar' rather than 'Kenmore' or 'Gibson'. 'Ford 1997' instead of '1997 Ford', or by its key reference point, such as location or area in real estate ads.

Born to be wild: 2000 Chevrolet Camaro SS Coupe

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Message to lesser coupes: Don't even think about it. With that warning, Chevrolet throws down the gauntlet to all comers with the take-your-breath-away SS package option for the Camaro Z28.

Built at the General Motors assembly plant in Ste. Therese, Quebec, Canada, the Camaro SS blasts into the new millennium as the embodiment of its performance heritage. Evolutionary improvements throughout the coupe in 1997 and 1998 place Camaro at the top of its game and the SS at the head of the pack.

Available in hardtop coupe, T-top and convertible body styles, the Z28 is a stealth performer in its own right. The SS Performance/ Appearance Package is a $3,950 option on the Z28 that adds: a 320 hp engine upgrade, forced air induction hood, specific SS spoiler, 17-inch aluminum wheels, 275/40ZR17 Goodyear Eagle F1 GS tires, High Performance Ride & Handling Package, low restriction exhaust and SS badging.

Consumers can choose between the smooth shifting 4L60-E four-speed automatic transmission standard on the Z28 or a six-speed manual transmission for no extra charge.

On the road, the SS delivers an incredible balance of power and performance. The six-speed manual transmission makes the most of the wide power band the de-tuned (LS1) Corvette engine produces. Numerous improvements have been made to the powerplant for the 2000 model year in order to maximize the benefits of the available power.

The suspension does not disappoint, delivering a smooth ride over great expanses of Midwestern Interstate while still exhibiting "the right stuff" in the twisties. The major rubber at the four corners of the coupe works well with the chassis and suspension to yield a solid yet responsive ride – stable without being heavy.

The truly amazing part of this car is its bank vault-like construction. No moans, groans, rattles or squeaks. Just the right amount of balance and poise.

Inside the cabin, settling into the driver's seat is much like climbing into the cockpit of a fighter jet. Displays are easy to read, while controls for just about everything fall easy to the hand almost by instinct.

New this year are steering wheel mounted controls for the audio system in order to reduce driver distractions while driving. The dashboard contains two power points for portable electric equipment, while the ($595) optional 12 disc CD changer is mounted in the back of the coupe – low and out of the way.

By the numbers

Engine performance numbers for the optional Camaro SS 5.7L LS1 V-8 are: 320 hp at 5,200 rpm and 335 lb/ft of torque at 4,000 rpm. EPA fuel economy ranges from 19 city/ 28 highway for the six-speed manual to 17 city/25 highway for the four-speed automatic transmission using premium unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are easy to reach but not clearly marked.

Standard safety/security features include: dual front air bags, four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock, rear limited slip axle with Zexel Torsen differential, side-door beams, daytime running lamps, and GM's PASS-Key II personal security system. Optional safety equipment includes Acceleration Slip Regulation ($450).

The base Manufacturers Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the Chevrolet Camaro SS ranges from $25,215 for the coupe to $32,665 for the convertible. The T-top roof option is $995. Destination charge adds $575.

Dealers report a handful of the lethal SS Camaro models in stock, so a bit of patience working with the local dealer can reap big rewards. There are no rebates on this model.

Serve & Protect: 2000 FORD CROWN VICTORIA

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

It is no accident that over 85 percent of the police pursuit vehicles sold in the United States and Canada are Ford Crown Victoria sedans. A full heavy-duty frame combined with balanced performance, comfort and plenty of storage for equipment makes sense for consumers as well.

The Ford Motor Company is the only domestic manufacturer of the large, traditional rear drive American sedan. General Motors discontinued production of its last rear-drive sedans – Buick Roadmaster, Cadillac Fleetwood/Fleetwood Brougham, and Chevrolet Caprice/Impala SS – in 1996. The folks at the blue oval saw fit to continue the improvement and evolution of the Crown Victoria into a class act.

Built in St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada, alongside its mechanical twin, the Mercury Grand Marquis, the large Ford received freshened sheetmetal and a host of improvements during 1998 model year. The handsome Crown Victoria is available in base and LX models, powered by a refined 4.6L SOHC V-8 engine mated to the AOD-E four-speed automatic transmission.

Specialty models include a natural gas propelled version. The Crown Victoria Police Interceptor continues to be popular with law enforcement agencies throughout the country.

On the road, the large Ford is nimble and responsive due in part to the Watt's linkage rear suspension with a stabilizer bar. This new system is specifically designed to provide more direct, and therefore stiffer, lateral location of the rear wheels. The result of this improvement is the increase of lateral stiffness nearly 300 percent – greatly reducing the sedan's body motion in cross winds and over jarring roads. On center feel is also improved, reducing the amount of steering corrections necessary to maintain a straight, stable path. The Crown Victoria exhibits world class handling and control – even without the optional all speed traction control for slippery conditions.

Inside the cabin, layout of displays and controls are excellent and the driver's view of the road is one of the best. At speed, the cabin is very, very quiet, coddling driver and passengers in a secure and safe environment. Seating front and rear is very comfortable as well, with plenty of room for all. The trunk is huge, with 20.6 cu. ft of cargo carrying capacity, with a with a low lift-over height.
