Congestion and confusion

Pointing out to drivers the errors of their ways, Officer Joey Heinemann stands on Illinois Avenue to keep motorists from going the wrong way on that thoroughfare. Illinois and Texas avenues became one-way streets Sunday, with Illinois traffic going westbound and Texas Avenue's motorists going eastbound. A police officer will be posted at that spot the rest of this week to eliminate traffic problems of people driving the wrong way.

Moi clings to post as coup thwarted

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Rebel diehards held out against loyalist troops today at air force bases outside the capital, but President Daniel Arap Moi appeared to be in control of the country after crushing an attempt by junior air force officers to overthrow his civilian government.

Government sources said 71 air force personnel were killed and 300 were detained since the attempted coup was launched early Sunday. Most of the fighting occurred around the country's three main air bases at Eastleigh, Embakasi and Nanyuki.

The Eastleigh area is "littered with bodies," including those of civilians caught in the crossfire, a witness said.

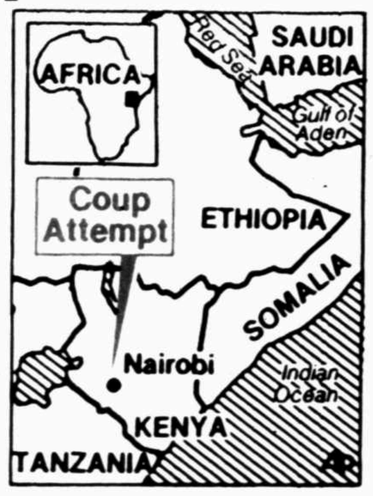

Resistance continued today at Eastleigh and Embakasi despite a military ultimatum ordering the rebels to surrender by noon, 5 a.m. EDT. Lt. Gen Abdul Mohammed, who led the loyalist forces, said in a broadcast those who didn't give up would be dealt with "ruthlessly."

Bodies of at least nine civilians were seen in the streets of Nairobi and hospital officials reported that more than 500 people — mainly civilians — were treated for gunshot wounds Sunday. About 200 of them suffered serious injuries, a doctor at Kenyatta Memorial Hospital said.

Other sources said three unidentified Americans were among the wounded.

The leader of the attempted coup, identified by military sources as a Col. Odipo of the 50th Air Cavalry Battalion based in Embakasi, eight miles south of Nairobi, was not among those captured, officials said.

Press reports in neighboring Tanzania said a military plane with four Kenyan air force officers aboard landed at Dar es Salaam's international airport.

The officers were being questioned by the police, the reports said.

Military sources said fighting continued late Sunday near the Embakasi Air Base near the capital where the rebellion was launched at 3 a.m. A clash early today was also reported at Nanyuki Air Force Base, 100 miles north of Nairobi, but informed sources said the rebels there had been subdued.

It was Kenya's first coup attempt since the pro-Western, east African country got its independence from Britain 19 years ago.

A U.S. embassy spokesman said three Americans were wounded but only one required hospitalization. She was reported to be a woman living in an apartment house in an area where fighting was heavy, who was shot in the neck, the spokesman said. Her condition was reported not critical, he said.

Several downtown streets were devastated today following widespread looting Sunday. Electrical appliance and apparel shops were cleaned out and the sidewalks and streets littered with broken glass, carboard boxes, abandoned goods and mannequins from shop windows.

The West German Embassy said Dagmar Ahmed, the West German wife of a U.N. environmental agency official, was killed when a grenade exploded outside her home. The French Embassy said a French aid worker was shot in both arms Sunday when he failed to stop at an army roadblock. He was reported in satisfactory condition.

The Voice of Kenya radio said early today that there was an "urgent" need for blood donors and called on residents to go to special donor centers in various sites of the capital.

Troops manned roadblocks around the city today checking identification papers and searching vehicles for arms and merchandise stolen during Sunday's massive looting spree.

Occasional firing could be heard in downtown Nairobi, apparently from policemen and soldiers shooting in the air to frighten pedestrians away from looted merchandize dropped outside shattered storefronts. But rebel snipers who were firing Sunday night from high-rise buildings apparently had either been captured or had given up the fight.

Dozens of automobiles, abandoned at the height of the fighting, badly snarled the morning traffic. Many were riddled with bullets and their windshields were shot out. Public transport had not resumed, and hundreds of people waited at bus stops, hitchhiked or walked to work.

Attempt may stall talks

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

TRIPOLI, Libya — The rebellion against Kenya's President Daniel Arap Moi was the second against a presiding Organization of African Unity chairman.

In April 1980 Liberia's President William Tolbert, then OAU chairman, was assassinated in a coup d'etat.

Many coups in Africa have taken place durng OAU meetings. Moi was preparing to set out for the OAU summit, scheduled to open here on Thursday.

The chances of the summit's being held as planned seemed more and more uncertain.

News of the attempted coup in Kenya caused suprise among foreign ministerial delegations here to preare the conference.

Kenyan Foreign Minister Robert Ouko declined to comment, as did OAU Secretary-General Edem Kodjo, who said it was up to member states to say anything if they wished.

The news came amid the deadlock here caused by some members either refusing to sit with the disputed Sahrawi Arab Democratic Republic (SADR), or contesting Libya's chairmanship.

Libyan Leader Muammar Kadhafy would normally take over the chairmanship for a year after the summit.

Two days ago, the Kenyan president announced his intention to come to Tripoli to hand over the chair to Kadhafy, saying it was "imperative" that all OAU member states attend the summit.

News of the attempted coup upset the already strained talks in Tripoli, and the "group of 26" pro-Saharan states among the 30 or so present had not resumed their informal meeting as expected.

It was still not known if the proposed three-day summit would be held, but some delegations had already started reserving places on flights home.

The summit was to have been preceeded last week by a meeting of foreign ministers. But this ministerial council was unable to open officially because it lacked the quorum of 34 member states.

There are 51 states, including the disputed Sahrawi Arab SADR in the western Sahara, in the OAU.

Reagan busy 'mending fences' with Midwestern farmers

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — President Reagan, on a political fence-mending trip to the Midwest, said today that despite his opposition to a long-term grain-sale agreement with the Soviet Union, "the granary door is open" and large quantities may be sold.

Defending last week's grain-trade decision before an audience of corn growers, a key Republican constituency, the president promised to be alert for signs that "martial law may be relaxing" in Poland.

He said there are some indications that may be the case and told the farmers, "We will continue to watch developments there in the hope that life will improve from the Poles, and sanctions can be removed."

Reagan on Dec. 29 called off preparations for negotiations on a long-term grain-sale agreement with the Soviets in response to the Kremlin's role in the martial law crackdown in Poland.

He reaffirmed that decision Friday but said he would extend the current agreement, due to expire Sept. 30, for one year.

"Indications are that we will sell a record volume of grain to the Soviet Union this year," the president said today. "With the extension that we are now exploring, we will be able to sell large quantities during the next year. In other words, the granary door is open and the exchange will be cash on the barrelhead."

"We have restored to the American farmer a fair opportunity to export grain to the USSR on a cash basis," Reagan said.

The president made his remarks in a speech prepared for the 25th annual convention of the National Corn Growers Association.

"This administration does not, nor will we have, a grain embargo on the Soviet Union," Reagan said, repeating his frequent criticism of the embargo the Carter administration imposed after the Soviet military move into Afghanistan in December 1979. Reagan said today that when he lifted the embargo in March 1981, the U.S. share of the grain imported by the Soviets had fallen from 70 percent to 25 percent.

"Our efforts on behalf of the American farmer suffered a setback, however, with the iron repression of the proud people of Poland," the president said. "After the Soviet Union ignored our calls to aid restoration of basic human rights in Poland, we had no choice but to impose a number of sanctions against both countries, including postponement of negotiations on a new long-term grain agreement with the Soviet Union."

"There is still no cause to celebrate in Poland. I am, however, somewhat encouraged by indications martial law may be relaxing," he said.

"At home and abroad, we are committed to assuring the American farmer a market that will reward his investment and hard work, not punish him for his incomparable success," Reagan said.

In his speecn, the president said he is sensitive to the problems of farmers, and added that "the farmers of America are very much on my mind."

Bush spends two days in Texas dealing with two 'issues'

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — Vice President George Bush made a two-day swing through Texas this weekend to do some grass roots campaigning for the state's Republican hopefuls and talk up the Reagan administration as well.

He also managed to get in quite a few digs at former President Jimmy Carter, who he called "a slow learner."

Bush's final stop before flying back to Washington Sunday was a $25-a-plate afternoon barbecue here, where he presented a hard Republican sell to about 1,000 people in this heavily Democratic part of Texas.

Bush said Carter mishandled the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1979 and promised President Reagan would not make the same mistake.

"We don't trust them (the Soviets) and we don't take their word," Bush said. "We have let the world know the price of harassment."

Reagan has "let U.S. allies know precisely where we stand," Bush said.

Bush defended Reagan's economic policies, and told the partisan audience that Carter's record was far worse in comparison.

He said that when Carter took office the prime lending rate was 6¼ percent.

"When Carter left office it had more than tripled to 21½ percent," Bush said.

"What about inflation, the thing which hits people in the lower end of the economy heavier than anywhere else? When Carter and his cohorts came in, the inflation rate was 4.8 percent. When they left, it was 12.4 percent," the vice president said.

Continuing his attack on Carter, Bush said the former Democratic president "was born the same year I was, 1924. The Soviets erected the Berlin Wall in 1961. They crushed the freedom fighters in Hungary in 1956. They invaded Czechoslovakia in 1968. By the time the Russians thrust inside Afghanistan in 1979, Jimmy Carter was 55 years old.

"I call that a slow learner," the vice president said.

Israel captures Beirut airport, fires on entrenchment

By The Associated Press

Plowing through Palestinian defenses, Israeli troops and tanks captured Beirut airport and declared a ninth cease-fire after a 14-hour bombardment of west Beirut in which the Lebanese police reported at least 200 people killed and 400 wounded.

Correspondents said sporadic firing continued into the night, but generally the cease-fire mediated by U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib was holding.

PLO spokesman Bassam Abu Sharif said the Israelis rained more than 150,000 shells on west Beirut, and Israeli jets made more than 170 bomb runs on the city. But Israeli officials insisted the attack was not the start of the long-threatened invasion to wipe out the PLO guerrillas in west Beirut.

Israel said Palestinian violations of the earlier truce prompted the massive air, land and sea bombardment that began at dawn Sunday. Observers said it was the most devastating Israeli onslaught since the forces of the Jewish state rolled to the gates of the Lebanese capital in June.

Predominantly Moslem west Beirut, besieged stronghold of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas, was wreathed in smoke from raging fires kindled by the bombardment. There was little firemen could do to quench the flames since Israel cut off water and electricity to west Beirut a week ago.

In addition to the police report of 200 dead and 400 wounded in the thunderous bombardment, the Voice of Lebanon, the Lebanese Christian radio station, said 14 civilians were killed and 40 wounded when PLO forces fired rockets, missiles, mortars and artillery into Christian-held east Beirut and the Christian port city of Jounieh, 12½ miles north of the capital.

Syria said two of its soldiers in west Beirut were killed and 14 were wounded in the Israeli shelling. Israel reported three of its soldiers killed when their armored personnel carrier took a direct artillery hit in the Beirut area. The Israelis also reported nine soldiers wounded.

There was no word on guerrilla losses and no independent confirmation of any casualty claims.

An unconfirmed report by the official Soviet news agency Tass said the buildings of 23 foreign representatives were destroyed or seriously damaged, including the Soviet Embassy and its commercial and cultural centers.

Lebanese news photographers who went to Beirut airport after the cease-fire said Israeli tanks had pushed nearly two miles north in fierce fighting and seized the airport terminal. They said PLO fighters clung to a runway on the western edge of the airport and the two sides traded sniper fire despite the truce.

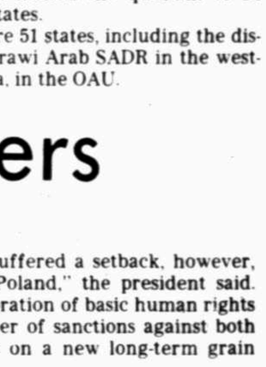

"We pushed back that bulge ... that was a nuisance, and we said that if they (the Palestinians) are permitted to enter the airport buildings to fire at us, we can do the same thing," the Israeli chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, told Radio Israel.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said the operation was designed to show the PLO fighters that "after a patient wait, the sand is running out of the glass."

Israel has grown increasingly impatient with the pace of U.S. negotiations to arrange a peaceful evacuation of the estimated 8,000 Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

The National Weather Service predicts showers for the northwest, southwest, northern Plains into the Great Lakes and the southeast.

Forecast for Tuesday hot, sunny

Although a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms lingers through tonight, Tuesday should dawn hot and sunny, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Sunday evening's scattered showers, which resulted in a gain of 0.35 of an inch of rain, varied in area towns. Andrews and Stanton reported nice rains, and there was up to half an inch in Stanton, Rankin and Big Lake didn't get a drop while Lamesa and Garden City received sprinkles. Big Spring reported "a pretty good electrical storm, but not enough rain to wet the pavement," according to a spokesman for the Howard County Sheriff's Department. Crane reported no overnight precipitation, although the town received a shower this morning.

Temperatures, which should drop into the lower 70s tonight, are expected to climb near 100 Tuesday.

Tonight's southerly winds, which are expected to breeze at a calm 5-10 mph,will shift south to southwesterly at 10-15 mph Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 98 was seven degrees below the record high of 105, set for that date in 1944. The overnight low of 68 was seven degrees warmer than the record low of 61, set in 1973.

Reagan questions likelihood of summit

By MURREY MARDER
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan last week virtually swept off the diplomatic checkerboard 18 months of maneuvering over a summit meeting with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

At his press conference Wednesday the president went further toward questioning the likelihood of a summit meeting with Brezhnev than Reagan has done since he took office, saying, "I don't know whether it's going to be this year or next or at all." That downgrading of a summit conference barely registered on the American scene, but it has significant implications in politics as well as in diplomacy.

All American presidents have been eager to deal with their superpower adversaries at first hand, and Reagan presumably shares that curiosity. Their advisers traditionally have been fearful that summit meetings will produce either unwarranted euphoria, or a stumble into crisis.

An Analysis

Only a few months ago administration political advisers were signaling that those risks were worth taking for the domestic political benefits that could flow from a Reagan-Brezhnev summit in advance of the Nov. 2 elections. The president's latest remarks indicate the opposite approach, that little political weight is currently given to the need to register a reduction of American-Soviet tension.

THE REAGAN comments also show that his administration no longer feels obliged to hold out the prospect for an early summit with Brezhnev for the sake of Atlantic Alliance unity.

Before Reagan's trip to Europe in June, he and his advisers strongly encouraged expectations about a summit. On May 9 in a major commitment to "dialogue" with the Soviet Union, the president said that if it proved impossible "to meet with President Brezhnev in New York next month," as he had proposed, "I would hope we could arrange a future meeting where positive results can be anticipated."

The prospect of a summit conference, coupled with decisions to open two nuclear arms control negotiations in Geneva, did help the administration to allay widespread apprehensions in Europe about its entire East-West policy. But now the administration's priorities have changed. The loser in the summit maneuvering is the Soviet Union, although history conceivably may register a lost opportunity for both nations in bridging the great gulf between them.

For the Soviet Union, a formal summit meeting is a means of restoring some of the international stature it lost by its invasion of Afghanistan in 1979, and by the imposition of martial law in Poland last December. It is precisely for those reasons that the Reagan administration has looked on a summit meeting as a benefit to the Soviet Union which it could grant or withhold.

The Soviet Union, therefore, never seriously considered sending its ailing 75-year-old leader to New York in June, to the kind of summit meeting that Reagan wanted — informal talks on the edges of the United Nations General Assembly's special session on disarmament. Brezhnev wanted a full-dress summit meeting with Reagan, and proposed holding it in October, suggesting Switzerland or Finland as neutral sites.

In May and June, while the Reagan administration was repairing its own strained relations with its Western European allies, it indicated it was receptive to Brezhnev's alternative. But when the president returned from Europe, his administration shifted to the opposite tack. That was publicly reflected in a Reagan speech to the United Nations on June 17, in which he assailed the Soviet Union for a record of "imperialist adventures" and a "scourge of tyranny."

AT THE SAME time, senior administration officials in private stressed the necessity of producing tangible progress in American-Soviet relations as a prerequisite for any summit conference, notably, movement toward acceptance of American terms in the new strategic arms reduction talks (START) in Geneva. The chances of producing any such results by October, or any time this year, are virtually zero. Those negotiations are still in the preliminary stage, with no sign of movement toward the American demands.

As a result, although neither nation admitted it at the time, the ascent toward a summit was stalled completely when Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Alexander M. Haig Jr., then secretary of state, met in New York on June 18, the day after the Reagan speech to the U.N.

Reagan has now publicly reconfirmed that the route to a summit is blocked, by reverting to the administration's earlier stiff terms for a meeting with Brezhnev.

Police investigate two auto thefts

A smattering of thefts and burglaries were reported to the Midland police department this weekend.

Jackie Atwood, Route 2 Box 173-P, reported an auto burglary at the Executive Lounge, 3803 W. Wall Ave., Sunday at 11:31 p.m. Taken was $710 in cash.

T.R. Hollingsworth, 603 W. Cowden Ave., reported a checkbook and two diamond rings of unknown value taken from the same residence at 6:20 p.m. Sunday.

A 1969 blue Volkswagen was reported stolen from 1211 S. Belmont St. by Leotis Patterson, 108 N. Madison St., at 6:33 a.m. today. The car was valued at $700.

Two in MMH after accident on Friday

Two passengers in a car driven by Bobby Flores, 318 Ave. F., Lubbock, are hospitalized in Midland Memorial Hospital as a result of injuries they received in a two-vehicle accident Friday night.

Armando Flores, 29, of 318 Ave. F., Lubbock, was listed in serious condition with a fractured pelvis and broken ribs: Johnny Martinez, 8, of the same address was listed in satisfactory condition with a fractured clavicle.

Police reports indicate the mishap occurred at the intersection of Eisenhower Street and U.S. Highway 80 when the Flores vehicle collided with a pickup driven by Randy Bob McDaniel, Box 7385, Odessa.

Big Spring woman struck down by car

BIG SPRING —A Big Spring woman died early Sunday morning after being struck by a car about three-tenths of a mile north of town on State Highway 350.

Dead is Senada Cassavant, 32, who according to a Department of Public Safety report was walking south in the north-bound lane about 11:10 p.m. Saturday when she was struck by a northbound car driven by Valentine Torres, Jr., of Big Spring.

She was pronounced dead about 1 a.m. Sunday by Big Spring Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin. The body was taken to Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

Medical companies may be bilking patients, officials say

DALLAS (AP) — State and federal officials say suppliers of medical equipment may be bilking insurance companies and bed-ridden nursing home patients who rent wheelchairs, hospital beds and other necessities from the firms.

Investigators are looking into allegations that companies billed Medicare for better quality products than were delivered to patients, and that some firms may be renting equipment to invalids who have paid more than the purchase price within nine months.

The Texas attorney general's office is assisting federal officials from the Health and Human Services Department in the investigation of medical suppliers in Texas, officials here said.

Jack Elrod, chief investigator for the Texas Medicaid fraud control unit in Austin, said his unit has been looking at the industry for two years and specific firms for the past six months.

"There are ongoing investigations, several in fact. It takes months to prepare for one of these cases because they are so enormously complicated," Elrod said.

"I think we will see prosecutions by the end of the year," he said.

Ralph Tunnell, associate regional administrator here for the federal Health Care Financing Administration, said investigators are focusing on the dealings of companies that rent medical equipment to nursing home patients.

DEATHS

'Bloodshed must stop' in west Beirut, says Reagan

By GEORGE GEDDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — An impatient President Reagan says "the bloodshed must stop" in west Beirut and he intends to be firm about it in talks with Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

Reagan commented Sunday hours after Israel overran Palestinian positions at Beirut's airport in the most devastating attack since Israeli troops sealed off the city in June.

Throughout the crisis, Reagan has not criticized Israel directly. But his overall tone when he spoke with reporters Sunday suggested uneasiness with Israeli policies.

Asked what he would tell Shamir at today's meeting, Reagan said, "I'll be firm...this must be resolved and the bloodshed must stop."

He declined to say whether this represented a get-tough policy toward Israel but added, "You can say that we're going to have a serious discussion and I think they'll understand exactly how we feel about this."

SHORTLY BEFORE Reagan spoke, Shamir arrived at nearby Dulles Airport and told reporters that the United States and Israel are pursuing parallel objectives in Lebanon.

Both favor the emergence of a strong central government and the removal of all foreign forces from the country, he said.

But, in Jerusalem Sunday, a senior Israeli official, who asked not to be identified, said the United States and Israel have differing perceptions on prospects for an early end to the crisis.

He said the United States had told Israel the negotiations had reached a "decisive stage" with the Palestinian guerrillas showing signs of willingness to discuss a timetable for their departure.

However, Israel believes the Palestinians are "deceiving" the United States and are playing for time in hopes that Israel will ease its blockade of west Beirut, the official said.

In his remarks at the White House, Reagan said he did not believe Israeli forces would leave until Palestinian and Syrian units depart.

WITH THE crisis almost two months old, Reagan made it clear he is unhappy with the continuing cycle of violence in which eight cease-fires have been agreed to only to be broken.

Asked whether he had lost his patience, the president said, "I lost patience a long time ago." At the same time, he said "there has been progress made" in ending the stalemate.

He said it was "absolutely imperative" that the new, U.S.-arranged ceasefire reached on Sunday "not be violated by anyone."

Shamir said the crisis was now at a "turning point," and he predicted that "some positive results" will be achieved in the near future. He did not elaborate.

After his meeting with Reagan, Shamir was to have lunch with Secretary of State George Shultz and a meeting with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Osama El Baz, counselor to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, also was in Washington Sunday, and warned that a forced surrender of PLO leaders in Beirut would "be the catalyst for radicalizing the Arab movement in other countries and the U.S. will be viewed as an accomplice."

"THE QUESTION is not to persuade (the PLO) to leave, the question is to persuade them that a political solution is possible," El Baz said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Although the United States and Israel agree on long-term objectives in Lebanon, there are disagreements over tactics and over a broad range of other issues.

These include Israel's use of cluster bombs in Lebanon and its policy of going ahead with the construction of new settlements in the West Bank.

In addition, once the west Beirut crisis is ended and PLO units are disbursed elsewhere, the United States will be looking to Israel for new signs of flexibility in its attitude toward the Palestinian autonomy talks.

Some American officials believe that with the easing of the perceived PLO threat, Israel can afford to be more generous in its terms for establishing a system of Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Last spring, the Reagan administration believed a resumption of the autonomy talks could be arranged by this summer but Egypt has ruled out that possibility so long as Israeli troops remain in Lebanon.

Senate moves toward balanced-budget amendment

By THOMAS RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is moving toward approval this week of a constitutional amendment to balance future federal budgets. But a record $98.5 million tax hike to trim more immediate deficits may hit a snag.

The tax hike, written by Senate Republicans and zipped through both chambers of Congress, has encountered stiff opposition from conservative House Republicans. They have vowed to try to defeat a final version expected to be framed this week.

Meanwhile, supporters of the balanced-budget amendment that has been under debate in the Senate for most of the past month claim they now have the necessary two-thirds majority — or 67 votes — needed to pass it.

The Senate resumes debate on the legislation today, with about two dozen amendments still pending — including a proposal by Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., to establish a two-year federal budget cycle to replace the current yearly budget.

Senate leaders believe they can fend off all the remaining amendments, with a final vote expected by Wednesday at the latest.

The House Judiciary Committee also will begin hearings this week on the balanced-budget proposal, although supporters say they anticipate a harder time in the House than in the Senate.

If ratified by three-quarters of the states, the amendment would prohibit the government from spending more than it takes in, except in times of war or if permitted by a 60 percent vote by both chambers.

Negotiators for the House and Senate will hold their first session on the tax increase bill Tuesday.

The bill would increase federal taxes on cigarettes and telephones, boost business taxes, require taxes to be withheld on interest on dividends and more sharply limit medical deductions.

The conference committee will be working on the Senate bill. At the urging of Democratic leaders fearful of becoming identified with an election-year tax increase, the House last voted 208-197 last to use the Senate version as the basis for a compromise — without doing any of its own work on the bill.

But a group of some 80 House Republicans, led by Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., an original author of the big tax cut bill enacted last year, is unhappy with the move to short-circuit the House and say they will fight to kill the tax bill.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., says the tax measure could be defeated unless President Reagan wages a major effort to line up GOP votes.

In another budget battle, the House on Tuesday could find itself debating a proposed 4 percent ceiling on cost-of-living increases for government and military retirees.

Republicans in the House had sought to avoid a separate vote on the proposal, but Democrats won a key procedural vote last week to force votes on unpopular budget cuts one-by-one.

In other congressional action this week:

—The House will debate various proposals for a freeze on U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons.

—The administration will defend its request for continued military aid for El Salvador at a hearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Tuesday.

—Proposed curtailment of state authority to regulate pesticides as part of a two-year extension of federal pesticide regulation will to the full House.

—The House, after passing a record peacetime $175.3 billion defense spending bill last week, may take up a companion, $7.5 billion military construction bill. These funds would be used to build various military facilities and operate family housing projects around the world.

—The House is also expected to vote on legislation to authorize $17 million in start-up funds for Radio Marti, a government-run station that would broadcast to Cuba.

French to probe bus crash

DIJON, France (AP) — A prosecutor opens an inquiry today that could lead to charges in the fiery highway pileup that killed 44 camp-bound children and nine adults. But investigators discounted a witness' claim that speeding buses caused France's worst road tragedy.

Police said Sunday they haven't yet determined the exact cause of the 10-vehicle crash Saturday near the town of Merceuil, about 200 miles south of Paris.

The chain-reaction crash apparently began when the driver of a West German tourist bus braked suddenly on the rain-slick highway at a point where it narrowed from three lanes to two, police said.

The tour bus was trailed by two busloads of children bound for a summer camp for the underpriviledged in the French Alps. The first of these buses plowed into the rear of the tour bus and exploded. Forty-four children died in the flames along with two camp counselors, the driver and a relief driver. Another counselor and 15 children escaped through the rear emergency exit.

Five people in automobiles also were killed in the crash and at least three were injured.

There were no injuries on the second camp bus, whose driver and relief driver denied earlier claims by a witness that the two camp buses appeared to be racing when the crash occurred.

The driver of the West German bus told authorities the camp buses were traveling at 56-62 mph at the time of the crash, police said. The speed limit for buses was 56 mph.

The Dijon prosecutor said the judicial inquiry could lead to indictments for involuntary homicide. The federal government also is investigating the crash.

At Crepy-En-Valois, the town 40 miles north of Paris that was the home of the young victims, relatives and friends were deep in mourning.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: One-of-a-kind singer Tony Bennett celebrates this birthday with you. Also born on this date: John Thomas Scopes, the teacher who inspired the famous Scopes "monkey" trial. You find half-measures unacceptable and move right ahead in spite of any obstacles.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Some permanent good will result from a setback that occurs at work today. You will become much stronger for the experience. Loved ones offer encouragement.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A very good day for those involved in research or the law. Money is easier to come by, but you must not waste it. Writers, composers enter an important period of growth.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Contact with influential people brings success. Your partner comes around to your way of thinking. Contracts signed today will prove rewarding.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take loved one off his/her pedestal. A wonderful relationship is developing, but it will not endure unless you treat each other as equals. You get a glimpse of the future.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Business complications diminish. You are able to get organized and move forward. Those in advertising and the media prosper. Romance distracts you from work.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): No one can top you when you persevere! Open up new lines of communication with family members. Your intuition is on target. Budget your money better.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Disruptions at place of employment could work in your favor today. An investment pays large dividends. Listen carefully at lunch. You get valuable advice for free.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The written word helps you achieve your goals now. Many people are not aware of your creative talents. Bring them out in the open for all to see!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Check subordinate's work carefully—you will be held responsible if there is a mistake. Self-discipline helps you negotiate a good settlement for your employer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A special message delights you. Speak straight from the heart when telling loved one about your goals. Assertiveness pays off. Keep your work standards high.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A compromise settles a family argument and reduces pressures at work. New faces and places figure prominently in your plans. Explore the possibility of forming a partnership.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make sure you understand any new responsibilities. Asking questions will save you both time and money. Keep up with the latest developments in your field.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ763 ♡A5 ◇J82 ♣754
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♡ 2 ♠ ?
What action do you take?
A.—There is nothing you can do with any degree of safety. A bid of two spades would be a virtual game force and could easily get your side too high. You don't have enough to venture a penalty double, and you need more than A-x in hearts to support partner's suit. Pass and hope that partner can reopen the bidding.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQJ3 ♡AK872 ◇83 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 2 ♠ Dble Pass
What action do you take?
A.—We have great respect for partner's low-level penalty doubles, especially when the opponents won't make game even if they make their doubled contract. However, to every rule there are exceptions, and this is one of those. You almost surely have game, perhaps even slam, in one of the majors. We would jump to three hearts. This should convey to partner that you don't think that any penalty you may extract from the opponents could be worth your prospective gain from ending the rubber.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠105 ♡A87 ◇A62 ♣A9653
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You can bet your life that, on this auction, partner has a singleton in one of the red suits and, almost surely, a six-card spade suit. Certainly, no trump is not the spot where you want to play. Bid four spades. Partner won't expect more than a doubleton from you, but your three aces should be a welcome sight to him. If a contract in spades is untenable, he can always take you back to clubs.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ3 ♡Q875 ◇A ♣Q10982
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 1 ♡ 2 ◇ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—The bidding has not developed as you might have hoped. Even though you do not have the recommended distribution, the only appetizing rebid is two no trump. To rebid your clubs just because you have a five-card suit would suggest to partner that you have a far better suit.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ542 ♡92 ◇K5 ♣KQ62
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ◇ 1 ♡
What do you bid now?
A.—There is a popular belief that, as a passed hand, you have to jump at your first turn to show that you have near opening bid values. That is a fallacy — you should jump only when you know where your side is going. Here, despite a hand which you might have opened, you should do no more than respond one spade. Partner might have a shaded opening bid with little support for spades, and you don't want to put him under pressure.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠63 ♡875 ◇AJ954 ♣AK4
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ◇ Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Since partner might have been forced to rebid spades with only a five-card suit, you can't raise with your doubleton. You don't have a heart stopper, so no trump is out, and you surely don't want to rebid your ratty five-card diamond suit. The solution is to make a temporizing bid of three clubs. That will allow partner to place the contract in no trump if he has hearts stopped. If he rebids his spades again, you have enough to raise to game.

Truman feared nuclear war

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Harry S. Truman, in a handwritten memo found recently among his post-presidential papers, expressed fear of seeing the world destroyed by nuclear weapons, The Kansas City Star reported Sunday.

The memo was written in 1958, apparently in preparation for several newspaper articles that the late president wrote for the North American Newspaper Alliance, according to the Star.

The paper said the memo had not been published before, but Truman expressed similar sentiments in other writings, according to Dr. Benedict Zobrist, director of the Truman Library.

Truman, the only man to order the use of nuclear weapons in war, warned in the memo that the world was faced with destruction "unless the great leaders of the world prevent it."

He said countries and people had produced "ideas and moral codes for the ideal of men's living together in harmony."

Bess Truman

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former first lady Bess Truman, 97, was "resting comfortably" early today after being admitted to Research Medical Center over the weekend with irregular breathing and pulse, hospital officials said.

Dr. Wilson Miller, attending Mrs. Truman while Dr. Wallace Graham, her longtime doctor, was out of town, said Sunday he was cautious about being optimistic because of the patient's age.

"But I think she'll probably go back home again, probably in just a few days, maybe a week," he said.

Mrs. Truman, who lives in nearby Independence, was listed in serious but stable condition in the intensive care unit because of her age.

Graham, who kept in touch with the case by phone, said in a prepared statement that Mrs. Truman, the nation's oldest first lady, was experiencing a condition known as hyperkalemia, a buildup of potassium caused by diminished kidney function.

Graham said Mrs. Truman had experienced a similar condition in the past.

Mrs. Truman's heart rate was slow when she was admitted about 1:30 a.m. Sunday, but it had increased by late morning, said Tom Peck, the hospital's public relations director. He said her vital signs, including blood pressure, were stable.

Her husband, Harry S. Truman, died in 1972 at age 88.

Mrs. Truman suffered a mild stroke in September and broke her right hip in a fall in May 1981.

DETROIT (AP) — Mayor Coleman Young and civil rights activist Rosa Parks are being honored for their efforts on behalf of blacks by Kappa Alpha Psi, the nation's first black college fraternity.

Some 2,000 fraternity members and 3,000 guests were on hand Sunday for the opening of the fraternity's 64th Grand Chapter Meeting, which runs today through Thursday.

"If you look around the country at those things that are happening to promote the causes of black people, you'll find Kappa's in the forefront," said Earl Clanton, a journalism professor at Norfolk State University in Virginia and editor of the Kappa Alpha Psi Journal.

The fraternity was founded at Indiana University by 10 black students in 1911. Since then, 70,000 men have been initiated at 265 college campus and 250 alumni chapters.

Princess Margaret

VENICE, Italy (AP) — The setting was historical Venice and the benefit was for London's Royal Opera House, so Britain's Princess Margaret stayed on her toes — on the dance floor.

The divorced 51-year-old sister of Queen Elizabeth II joined 300 other guests Saturday night at the Pisani-Moretta Palace overlooking the Grand Canal. The banquet and ball, costing $500 a head, was to raise funds for the restoration of London's Royal Opera House at Covent Garden.

Dressed in an emerald green dress with gold trim and a diamond necklace, the princess danced until 3 a.m. to music by Peppino di Capri and his orchestra.

The princess flew home Sunday morning.

NEW YORK (AP) — With 272 episodes of the TV series "Wild Kingdom" under his belt, Marlin Perkins still isn't worried about running out of animal subjects.

The narrator and star of the series says he and his producer drew up a list of 300 ideas for the show. "They stay on the list until they get filmed," said Perkins, 77, interviewed in the current edition of People magazine.

Perkins spends half the year away from his St. Louis home, on the road and filming shows.

He said he's appalled by negligent extermination of wildlife, although he has no objections to hunting in general.

"We don't have a moral right to eliminate any species, no matter what happens," he said, "because we don't know how they fit into that little bio-ecological area where they live. Some can be enormously beneficial to mankind."

David Brenner

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Comedian David Brenner is the proud godfather of a baby bird born to a pair of rare saffron toucans at the Philadelphia Zoo.

"David," the father, and "Brenner," the mother, were donated to the zoo by local entrepreneur Frank Palumbo in tribute to the Philadelphia comedian's prominent nose. The birds are noted for their canoe-shaped beaks.

The baby bird, hatched June 23 and first appearing outside its nest last week, is the second born in captivity anywhere in the world, according to zoo officials.

Brenner ordered the bird named "Kingy," his nickname as a youth in Philadelphia. "As soon as Kingy is 16 years old, I personally will foot the bill for a nose job," he joked.

Setting the tone

During Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's week-long visit to the United States, which began last Thursday, the challenge is for officials of each nation to strive to determine a common ground on which to build a better future relationship.

That won't exactly be easy. There have been too many past irritations between the two nations, not the least of which has been India's closeness to the Soviet Union.

But India has prided herself on remaining non-aligned, holding both the United States and the Soviet Union at arm's length. From one aspect such a position is beneficial to the United States government. It does mean that India or whatever nation is in question will not be so apt to be lured under the communist umbrella.

Yet it also means that the nation in question likely will be hesitant to honor U.S. requests. In that respect India has been something of a thorn in the side of past administrations.

In particular the United States has been unhappy with India's refusal to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and to place its nuclear facilities under international safeguards. India's opposition to the establishment of a United States military base in the Indian Ocean also has strained the relationship between the two nations.

It isn't likely that officials of the two nations will be able to strike any long-term agreements during Mrs. Gandhi's visit. Time is, after all, limited and as one U.S. official noted earlier, "There is only so much you can do in two days." Much of the remainder of the time Mrs. Gandhi will be touring.

Setting the tone for the future relationship between India and the United States may not sound like too much to seek in Mrs. Gandhi's first visit to the United States in more than a decade. But in recent years Americans have witnessed first-hand how important the tone and substance of relations between nations can be.

In that respect setting the tone for the new relationship between the United States and India is within itself a worthy goal. It can be followed by meaningful talks and, hopefully, an improvement in the relationship that will prove beneficial to both countries.

Controversial pipeline

If the Soviet Union wished that construction of a natural gas pipeline to Europe would pull Western Europe away from America, it has already succeeded. The United States doesn't want the pipeline built and the Europeans do. President Reagan banned U.S. companies and U.S. licensees from participating in the project. Leaders of France, Italy, West Germany and Britain defied the ban. From its Siberian perch, the Soviet Union grins like a Cheshire cat at the disarray in the Atlantic Alliance.

Why all this furor over a natural gas pipeline?

The Reagan administration is afraid that the $10 or $12 billion in natural gas sales will help the Kremlin finance its arms buildup. It fears cut off of the natural gas could be used as Soviet blackmail against Western Europe during an East-West crisis.

Europe says only 5 percent of its energy would come from the Soviet Union, hardly enough for blackmail. But billions of dollars of technological exports and thousands of jobs are at stake in the pipeline. And European leaders resent U.S. bullying over its sovereign economic choices.

The Versailles summit had supposedly resolved these differences with a compromise: If Europe limits credit to the Soviets, the United States will lift the equipment ban. But after the conference the Reagan administration hardened its position. Europe felt betrayed. French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson said: "We no longer speak the same language. A progressive divorce is taking place."

If so, this means tragedy for the family of Western nations and a threat to post-war security. We must look below the pipeline to deeper divisions.

The Reagan administration has pursued a policy of confrontation with Russia. Gone is detente. Hardliners favor isolating Russia and running the Soviet economy into the ground. But the administration has resumed grain exports to the Soviets, a policy that doesn't square with rejection of the pipeline.

Western European leaders, threatened by the specter of becoming a nuclear battlefield between the United States and the Soviet Union, favor a policy of conciliation. They want U.S. military protection for their democratic and capitalistic systems, but they want a bridge to the Soviet Union, which they believe can be tempered by contact with the West. Detente is not dead in Europe.

These differences cannot be papered over. They must be confronted directly. The one thing that is certain is the pipeline issue must be resolved before more harm is done to the alliance.

Another View:

One remark too many

Anyone can do a stupid thing, but it takes a man like Secretary of the Interior James G. Watt to do a stupid thing and be proud of it.

Watt says he stands by, as "properly worded," the letter he wrote to the Israeli ambassador to the United States. In it, he declared that "friends of Israel here in the United States" should "aggressively support the Reagan administration's efforts to develop the abundant energy wealth of America" and went on to say that "if the liberals of the Jewish community join with other liberals of this nation, to oppose these efforts, they will weaken our ability to be a good friend of Israel."

The White House, in an understatement, called the letter "unfortunate." President Reagan will have to do better than that. Watt's letter is bigoted, offensive and inflammatory. Watt says his letter is not a threat. Well, how about blackmail? What he is saying is that America's support of Israel is linked to the political behavior of American Jews and that "the liberals of the Jewish community" had better shape up.

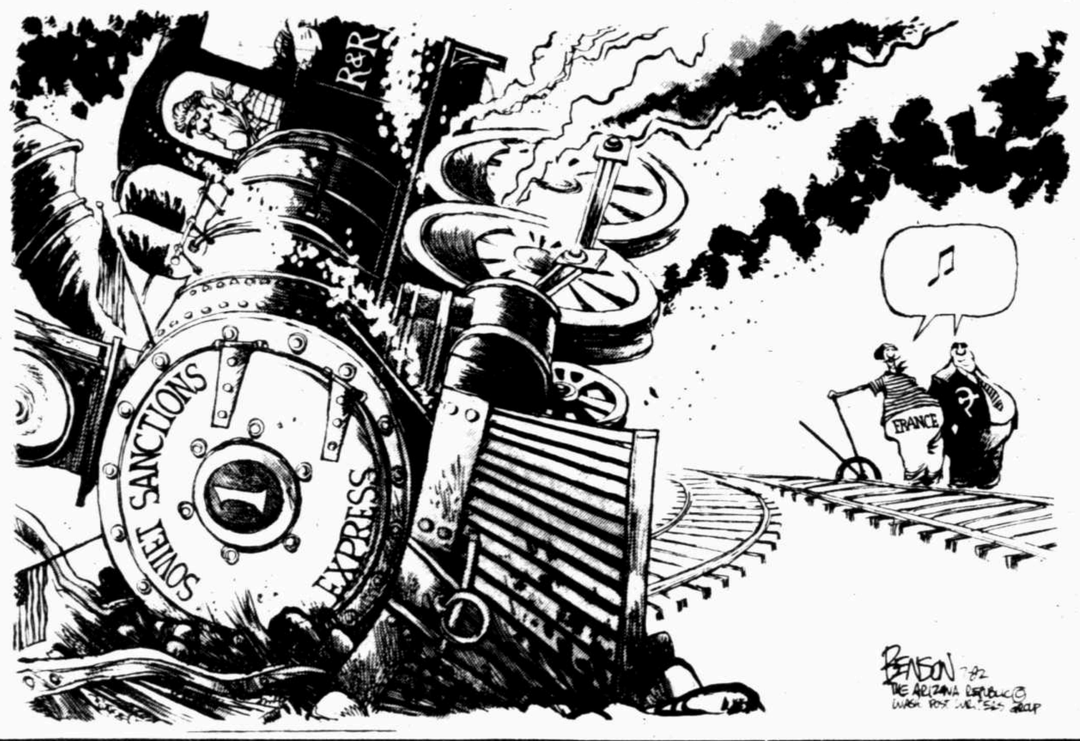

What Watt thinks about liberals is already on record. "I never use the words Republicans and Democrats," Watt said a few months ago. "It's liberals and Americans."

In fact, America's support of Israel has everything to do with America's vital interests and nothing to do with the political opinions of Jews or anyone else on the Reagan administration's energy policies, its offshore drilling plans, its sell-off of America's natural resources, its support of a balanced budget amendment, prayer in the public schools or anything else.

Watt says he is "reaching out to every identifiable group in America." Why, then, didn't he reach out to American Jews directly? Does he think they take their political marching orders from the Israeli embassy?

When, during the last Republican administration, another cabinet official who could not control his tongue, Secretary of Agriculture Earl M. Butz, made one bigoted remark too many, President Ford asked for and got his resignation. President Reagan should do no less. As Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan D-N.Y., declares, "James Watt should resign for this act of bare-knuckled bigotry. If he does not, President Reagan should dismiss him immediately."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

GSA center suffers from poor security

WASHINGTON — The three most sensitive locations in the federal government are the White House, CIA headquarters and the Pentagon's telecommunications center. They're at the top of any list of terrorist targets, and are consequently protected by the tightest security measures.

Unfortunately, there's a fourth, unlikely target that is not properly guarded: the General Services Administration's National Capital Region headquarters in downtown Washington. That's right — the outfit that provides paper clips, typewriter ribbons and window washers for federal office buildings.

In a way, the GSA building is even more sensitive than the Big Three, because it's the repository of maps, drawings and diagrams of the government's most secret areas. Yet my associate Dale Van Atta, with no security clearance whatever, was able to stroll in off the street and look at many of these documents and obtain copies of some.

I've already reported how he got to see a 19-page set of detailed engineer's drawings showing every vital electrical conduit in the White House. It's frightening to imagine what these pinpoint diagrams could be used for if they fell into the hands of a terrorist or a KGB agent, or some random nut with a grievance against the president.

Though some of the documents my associate found lying around were stamped "Confidential," others had no security classification at all. Yet they provide information that would make a saboteur's mouth water.

There was, for example, an unclassified, desk-sized "Composite Utilities Plan" for "CIA, Headquarters Utility Plan, Route 123, McLean, Va. 22101." Few outsiders are ever allowed into the wooded grounds of the CIA in suburban Virginia. Yet here, for any snoop to see, was every building, road and power fixture clearly drawn, including the specifications of all the major utility lines.

The CIA wants to build a new computer center at its Langley-McLean headquarters. The set of schematic drawings was unclassified, and a notation indicated it was only one of more than a dozen copies. Where are the rest? Who has seen them?

Also easily available were detailed drawings of the Naval Telecommunications Center near the Pentagon. It handles global communications for the entire Defense Department, and was temporarily shut down recently because of maintenance problems.

Security is difficult enough even if GSA were on its toes. Like most housekeepers, the GSA hires private contractors to do its wiring, plumbing and construction work. If the project is classified, the contractor and its employees are given thorough security investigations before they're given clearance.

A single sensitive White House project illustrates the extent of the necessary clearance. "A total of 39 companies and organizations with 360 personnel are now on the work order," an internal GSA memo states.

Of those 360 employees, 310 had been cleared and 50 were still being investigated. In addition, 10 employees had been put in "Do Not Admit" status.

"There have been several occasions requiring access to work for personnel in the 'pending' category," the memo notes, adding: "Cooperation and coordination with Secret Service has been excellent."

New drawings for the hush-hush project were ordered done by the National Park Service "and turned over to U.S.S.S. (Secret Service) for secure filing." But sooner or later, the plans will have to be seen by dozens of workers — and copies will probably wind up with the butterfingers at GSA.

THE SBA STRANGLER: A high official of the Small Business Administration has protested to his boss that new rules put into effect by the Reagan administration have clamped a "stranglehold" on minority firms trying to stay alive with government contracts.

Under the SBA's so-called "8(a)" program, businesses owned and operated by minorities get favored treatment in bidding on government contracts. Then, when they're big enough to fly on their own, they lose their favored status. The determination used to be made after a specified hearings procedure.

But in May 1981, the SBA ordained that some of the 50 largest 8(a) beneficiaries could lose their preferential treatment through a special waivers process. The result was described in an internal memo to SBA Administrator James Sanders from Robert L. Wright Jr., associate administrator for minority small business.

"Havoc has been wreaked within the procurement system," he wrote. "While arguably the havoc only affects a vocal few, the plain fact is that the ill will and disruption which are rampant have a chilling effect on the entire program."

While the streamlined waiver process may expedite things for the SBA, it does just the opposite for the federal agencies who hire small business contractors. They now have no way of knowing when a firm will lose its 8(a) status and the contract process will have to be done over.

Describing a question-and-answer session with representatives of several agencies, Wright said the questions "focused immediately upon the stranglehold the SBA has placed on the procuring agencies as a result of the 'waiver' process."

Some of the agency reps, Wright warned, "are beginning to feel that the time delay caused by the waiver process is a concerted effort to kill the program."

INSIDE REPORT:

Bush relieved brother won't challenge

WASHINGTON — Although Vice President George Bush's fingerprints were nowhere to be seen, he breathed a sigh of relief when other members of the Bush family talked his elder brother, Prescott Jr., out of contesting Sen. Lowell Weicker in Connecticut's Republican primary.

The vice president was concerned that his brother's possible loss, either to Weicker in the primary or Democratic representative Toby Moffett in the general election, would tarnish his own future presidential prospects. George was careful to say not one word to his brother, but the intervention by other family members was overt.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

A footnote: One day before the ferociously anti-Reagan Weicker defeated Bush for the party designation at the state convention, he was invited to the White House for a bill-signing ceremony and photographed with President Reagan. A day earlier, he was the only Republican senator to vote against Reagan's third-year tax cut.

TSONGAS LEAVES TEDDY

Sen. Paul Tsongas's strong continuing criticism of Israel's invasion of Lebanon has left his senior colleague, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, far behind in terms of political reaction by Massachusetts voters to the Middle East conflict.

Kennedy, up for re-election this fall, is getting Mideast mail from back home that is running a steady 2-to-1 against Israel. One-quarter of those telling Kennedy that Israel should be disciplined add that the U.S. should stop sending military aid under present circumstances.

Tsongas's outspoken condemnation of Israel started in June when Prime Minister Menachem Begin defied the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. In contrast, Kennedy has said nothing remotely critical of Israel. That raises this question: Is Tsongas closer to public sentiment than the undisputed champion of Bay State Democrats?

BOB BYRD AND THE NFL

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd is no football fan, but he has received $7,000 in contributions to his West Virginia battle for re-election from National Football League owners, with more on the way.

The reason: Byrd's support is wanted for a bill granting the NFL retroactive exemption from antitrust laws, thereby blocking the Oakland-to-Los Angeles franchise shift. So far, $1,000 gifts have come from owners Georgia Frontiere (Los Angeles Rams), Hugh Culverhouse (Tampa Bay Buccanneers), Joe Robbie (Miami Dolphins), Gene Klein (San Diego Chargers), Bud Adams (Houston Oilers), Rankin Smith (Atlanta Falcons) and Leonard Tose (Philadelphia Eagles).

Rep. Jack Kemp, a former quarterback who keeps close ties to the NFL, has scolded club owners for backing Byrd against the Republican challenge from Rep. Cleve Benedict.

FEUDING REPUBLICANS

The ideological tempest in the Republican Party blew hot at a recent meeting in San Francisco of the Eagles, the party's high-rolling financial contributors, when Deputy National Chairman Richard Bond tried to shout down Rep. John LeBoutillier.

LeBoutillier, an outspoken Reagan conservative, had complained to the Eagles that supporters of Vice President George Bush had won all the choice slots in the Reagan administration. That was a basic cause of Reagan's problems, LeBoutillier suggested, amid fairly heavy applause.

Bond, a Bush protege and key operative in his 1980 presidential campaign against Reagan, shortly thereafter chewed out LeBoutillier in words audible to many Eagles. "I thought John gave back about as good as he got," one Eagle told us. The upshot: Bond made clear that LeBoutillier is no longer welcome at Eagles meetings.

GRAMM'S GRAPESHOT

Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas, a leader of the Boll Weevil conservative Democrats, will spend most of October putting his mouth where his votes have gone: squarely behind President Reagan's beleaguered economic program.

Gramm's schedule will take him to every major Texas city and a lot of towns on a speechmaking defense of Reaganomics just before the Nov. 2 election. The prospect of a pro-Reagan Democrat on Texas hustings where many Republicans fear to tread will help Gramm if he should ever decide to change parties. He easily won Democratic renomination in a contested primary in May and has no serious Republican opponent in the November election.

Although Reagan's economic program has been deserted by many Reaganites, Gramm remains faithful. If the Democratic leadership decides to punish him by kicking him off the House Budget Committee next year, Gramm might switch parties.

CHARLEY REESE

Reagan you elected just reading script

Last year, President Reagan was fighting for tax cuts and reduced government spending. This year, he's fighting for the biggest peacetime tax increase in history and a record $100 billion deficit.

Charley Reese

From a purely partisan political point of view, he's saved the bacon of the Democrats and cut the legs off conservative Republicans. From a philosophical point of view, he's contradicting his own speeches in the past. From an economic point of view, he's offering the same liberalism he was supposed to be against.

There's no way taking $98 billion out of the private sector with taxes and another $100 billion to finance a deficit is going to help cure the recession. It will make it worse. Interest rates will go up, not down.

Furthermore, there is no excuse for adding taxes to the working man's burden while leaving the big corporations untouched with what Rep. Jack Kemp correctly calls "corporate welfare."

I started to write a column about the fact that he has allowed George Bush to people his administration with the same old Wall Street Republicans and left-over Democrats who ran the Nixon and Ford administrations. That is true.

But the fact is: Ronald Reagan is to blame. He is the president. He is responsible for deciding what he wants to do.

So don't make excuses for him. Accept the fact that he is not the man all his speeches indicate he is. Accept the fact that there is a growing gap between his rhetoric and his actions. Accept the fact that you do not have a conservative administration in the White House.

Reagan had a choice between the principles he enunciated and the Wall Street gang's interests. He went with the Wall Street gang.

The Wall Street gang is that interlocking nexus of the Rockefeller-Morgan groups which control most of the 100 corporations which in turn control 60 percent of all the corporate assets in the United States in oil, banking, insurance and manufacturing.

Supply side economics — Reaganomics, if you will — could not succeed while interest rates remained so high. To attack that problem, he should have attacked those megabanks and the Federal Reserve. Instead, he chose to lay $98 billion in new taxes on the American people.

To help stop this recession, Reagan should have sought trade sanctions to protect American industry, but the Wall Street gang, which is heavily multinational, nixed that idea.

To help gain America's energy independence and to protect the domestic oil business, Reagan should be seeking import taxes on foreign oil. Instead, he's toying with the idea of more taxes on American oilmen.

In the foreign areas, Reagan has an opportunity to detroy OPEC, to end the Israeli-Arab squabbles, and to put the screws to the Soviet Union. You just watch. He'll back off from all three objectives. Before the leaves turn, he will weasel out of that embargo on the Soviet natural gas pipeline and will be playing the old game of one-sided detente.

Many people on the right believe Al Haig, the former secretary of state, was a soft-liner and are glad he's gone. I think they are dead wrong on that point. I believe Haig was the hard-liner and now that he's gone, you'll see Reagan's foreign policy do the same reverse turn his domestic policy has taken.

There's no way the Wall Street gang is going to give up the so-called Atlantic Alliance or pass up an opportunity to make a buck selling to the communists.

So say goodbye to the Ronald Reagan you elected. He no longer exists. He's been given a new script — the same one Nixon, Ford and Carter were given.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, August 2, the 214th day of 1982. There are 151 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On August 2, 1934, Adolf Hitler became dictator of Germany.

On this date:

In 1610, English navigator Henry Hudson entered the North American body of water now known as Hudson Bay.

In 1824, one of the nation's most famous thoroughfares was opened — New York's Fifth Avenue.

In 1971, the United States said it would support seating Communist China in the United Nations but would oppose the expulsion of Nationalist China.

In 1980, a powerful explosion ripped through the main railroad station in Bologna, Italy, killing at least 55 people.

Thought for today: A rich man's joke is always funny. — Thomas Brown, English writer (1830-1897).

Publicity, surveillance to be reviewed

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Extensive publicity and the admissibility of FBI electronic eavesdropping are the focus of a hearing today for defendants indicted after a massive investigation into a federal judge's slaying.

Defense attorneys argue the FBI electronic surveillance should be suppressed because it violated the Fifth Amendment rights and client-attorney and marital privileges of their clients.

U.S. District Judge Williams S. Sessions scheduled a pre-trial hearing today on about 45 remaining motions filed by lawyers for six people indicted by the grand jury that investigated the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

The motions include, among other things, requests for Sessions to disqualify himself from the scheduled Sept. 28 trial and to move the proceeding out of San Antonio, and possibly out of Texas because of extensive pre-trial publicity.

Wood, 63, was shot in the back on May 29, 1979, outside his San Antonio townhouse. At the time of his death, Wood was scheduled to preside over the drug-related criminal enterprise trial of Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, 39, of El Paso.

Chagra is accused of paying convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson, 43, to shoot Wood. Both men are charged with murder of a federal judge, conviction would carry a mandatory life sentence.

Harrelson, Chagra, his wife, Elizabeth, 29, and his lawyer-brother, Joseph Chagra, 35, are charged with conspiracy to murder Wood and with obstruction of justice. Harrelson's wife, Jo Anne Starr Hararelson, 43, is charged with perjury and conspiracy to obstruct justice. Mrs. Chagra's father, Leon Nichols, 51, is accused of income tax evasion.

Joe Chagra's attorney, Billy Ravkind of Dallas, has said the FBI tapes are the most critical issue.

If the tapes are barred, said Ravkind, the rest of the government's case would "tumble like dominoes."

Dallas television station KDFW aired a series of reports last week based on copies of transcripts it said it obtained of conversations, secretly recorded by the FBI, between Jimmy Chagra, his wife, brother and former cellmate.

The station said the transcripts quote Jimmy Chagra talking about arranging the killing of Wood and hiring a man to kill former U.S. Attorney James Kerr.

The station said the transcripts also show Chagra plotting to escape from prison and quote him discussing an idea to kill Harrelson so he could not talk to authorities.

Second trial process begins without DA

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Walker County District Attorney Mark Ward said he wanted to prosecute Texas prison inmate Eroy Edward Brown a second time before leaving office in January.

Jury selection in Brown's trial begins here today, but Ward will be in a Houston hospital recovering from amnesia.

Brown, 32, of Waco, is charged with capital murder in the April 4, 1981, drowning of Ellis Unit Warden Wallace M. Pack. He also is accused of fatally shooting farm manager Billy Max Moore.

Brown has contended the slayings of Pack and Moore were self defense.

The case was transferred here from Huntsville, site of five Texas Department of Corrections units. Last March, a jury deadlocked 11-1 in favor of acquitting Brown.

Ward was not planning to seek reelection this year and vowed, "That's one case I don't want to leave in the new district attorney's lap."

Now, four months later, Ward can only remember what his family tells him about Brown's first trial.

The 35-year-old prosecutor is suffering post-trauma amnesia from an April 9 car accident in Montgomery County.

"I don't remember a thing about it (the trial)," Ward told the The Huntsville Item in an interview from his room at Houston's Del Oro clinic. "All I remember is what I've been told."

When told that jury selection begins today, Ward replied, "Jury selection? I wish I could be there. It's my responsibility."

This time, however, the task has been left to Frank Blazek, one of Ward's associates and the Democratic nominee for district attorney, and Mack Arnold, the former chief trial lawyer in the Harris County district attorney's office.

Ward, who is confined to a wheelchair, said he feels the need to go back to work.

"It's a very important job, and I take my job seriously. I'm in touch with my office on daily basis. Here I am sitting on my can when I ought to be at home working and earning my money," Ward said.

No one, including Ward, knows what caused the pre-dawn accident shortly after the district attorney left the Walker County fair auction.

Authorities said his car ran off the road and struck a tree. The wreck left his right leg crushed in three places, his brain damaged and his left arm without motor function.

Ward was rushed to a Conroe hospital and later flown by Life Flight helicopter to Hermann Hospital in Houston, where he was comatose for three weeks.

Testimony continues in poisoning trial

HOUSTON (AP) — Prosecutors planned to call the final witnesses today in the trial of William Chanslor Jr., a prominent lawyer accused of plotting to buy a hard-to-trace poison to kill his invalid wife.

Prosecutor Jim Lavine said he was prepared to call four rebuttal witnesses and predicted the case would go to the jury later today.

Chanslor is charged with solicitation of murder and conspiracy to commit murder. If convicted, he could be sentenced to 20 years in prison and fined $10,000.

The 50-year-old defendant was arrested April 21 at a Houston hotel, carrying two specially marked capsules he believed contained the deadly poison, ricin.

Chanslor, a former University of Texas football player and past president of the Houston Trial Lawyers Association, testified last week he only agreed to make the poison available to his wife, Sue, after her pleadings for death became "a constant thing."

He insisted he did not plan to administer the almost untraceable toxin and never intended to kill her.

"I could have divorced her. I could have put her in a nursing home or I could have given her an overdose of prescription drugs if I had wanted to get rid of her," Chanslor told the 12-member jury.

Chanslor's 42-year-old wife is paralyzed on her left side and has been confined to a wheelchair since suffering a stroke three years ago.

Testifying for the defense last week, Mrs. Chanslor said she "begged and pleaded" for her husband to help end her misery.

Mrs. Chanslor, the mother of a 9-year-old son, admitted she signed statements shortly after her husand's arrest April 21 that she made no such request. But she claimed she made the statements because she didn't believe authorities when they said her husband was in jail.

Norse residents prepare for visit of Norse king

NORSE, Texas (AP) — The rugged farmers and ranchers who comprise most of this Central Texas hamlet are dusting off their roots and polishing up their heritage to be fit for a king.

Nestled in oak- and cedar-covered rolling hills just northwest of Waco, Norse is the largest Scandinavian settlement in Texas.

And it's here Norway's King Olav V will journey this fall to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the birth of the "father" of Norwegian immigration to North America, a man buried in Norse.

"Local merchants are going all out," said Gene Aars, the director of the Bosque Memorial Museum in nearby Clifton. "Some plan to order Norwegian products and to serve Norwegian coffee and cookies."

In the 1850s, Kleng Peerson led a band of about 100 Norwegian immigrants from the religious persecution and poverty at home to New York, then Illinois and finally Texas, said Carl Sorenson of the Dallas-based Norwegian Society of Texas.

When King Olav comes to town, residents expect as many as 15,000 fellow immigrants to congregate in Norse. Norse has a population of 110.

"There's quite a bit of excitement. Most small towns would give their right arm to get a king to visit," Aars said. "There have been more than 200 inquiries about the king's visit."

"Some people are worried that there might be a traffic jam in Norse and that certainly would be a first," he said.

Aars said people from as far away as Canada will visit Bosque County during King Olav's visit Oct. 10.

"We're a very small town. I don't think we realized what an impact it would have," said Sharon Bernhardt, office manager of the Clifton Chamber of Commerce.

"Now we're just realizing what's involved. It's really tremendous. I don't think we've ever had as many people in the county as we're going to have (at the event)," she said.

Residents say the king will visit Peerson's grave for a ceremony, and they hope he will attend services at Our Saviour Lutheran Church, the only public building left standing in the dwindling town.

Plans for the visit began five years ago when King Olav, who assumed the Norwegian throne in 1957, visited the United States. The Norwegian Society of Texas extended the invitation three years ago and in December, the Norwegian Embassy in Washington confirmed that the king would accept.

King Olav will visit Dallas for the opening of the State Fair of Texas, then travel to Norse by helicopter, and continue on to Houston.

The king will only spend about six hours in Norse.

Terminally ill inmates fight pain of another 'death row'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Inmates on Death Row in Texas prisons "know their deaths will be swift and painless," says inmate Andrew Bogden, who is suffering from terminal cancer.

But inmates on another "death row" — the terminally ill inmates who struggle against a cumbersome bureaucracy to gain medical reprieves — never know what thier fate will be, Bogden says.

"Our death row of cancer patients have not been sentenced to death by the courts, we have no hope for reversals nor will our deaths be swift and painless," Bogden said.

Of 110 inmates identified by prison doctors in the past year as terminally ill, only five have won medical reprieves and 17 others won release under normal parole reviews, records show.

Seventeen others died from cancer in prison.

Terminally ill inmates say a corrections system cluttered with red-tape forces many inmates to live their final days in dingy cells by causing delays that prevent them from winning medical reprieves.

Prison director W.J. Estelle said the Texas Department of Corrections can grant medical furloughs for only a prescribed period of time for a specific illness to inmates who need special operations or treatment not available in the prison medical system.

Estelle said medical furloughs are referred to the state's prison board.

But Charles Sullivan, a spokesman for the prison reform group Citizens United for the Rehabilitation of Errants, said the TDC is just cluttering the system with red tape and delaying help for terminally ill prisoners.

"I think they (TDC) are passing the buck to the governor and the parole board," Sullivan said.

"It seems, especially when all reports have shown their medical care leaves a lot to be desired, that they are giving weak and lame excuses," he said.

Estelle does not agree.

Five convicted in Midland area paroled by Texas governor

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Five persons convicted of crimes in the Midland area have been paroled by Gov. Bill Clements on recommendations of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Another person convicted in the Midland area has had his parole revoked by the board.

Curtis Lloyd Ray, convicted of theft of property over $200 and burglary of a building in Midland County Jan. 28, 1982, was released on mandatory supervision to Midland County after serving and earning all of a two-year sentence.

Levi Duson, convicted of burglary of a building in Midland County July 24, 1979, was paroled to Midland County after serving and earning six years of a 10-year sentence.

John Michael Evans, convicted of theft by taking in Midland County Oct. 4, 1979, and escape in Hansford County Jan. 28, 1980, was paroled to Missouri after serving and earning five years and eight months of a 10-year sentence.

James Mourning, convicted of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in Ector County Nov. 13, 1981, was paroled to the custody of the Odessa Police Department after serving and earning one year and seven months of a four-year sentence.

Gene Shields, convicted of burglary of a building in Ector County Jan. 22, 1982, was paroled to Ector County after serving and earning one year and three months of a four-year sentence.

Amador B. Rodriguez, convicted of possession of heroin in Ector County in 1971, had his parole revoked because of a new conviction. Rodriguez, who is serving a 20-year sentence, had been on parole since March 17, 1977.

Badge emblems have little meaning

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

You may have walked into a store or business office recently and noticed a sticker resembling a sheriff's badge or other law enforcement emblem stuck to a window or door. Upon closer examination, you may have read an official sounding name similar to "Peace Officers Quarterly" or "Law Enforcement News."

While the emblem may give you (and the business) the impression the business is supporting law enforcement, in most cases the emblem's only value is to identify advertisers in the magazine.

Independent magazines which trade on the police name are continually soliciting advertising from local businesses. At one time the independent operators rarely attempted to publish or distribute any semblence of a magazine. Today the magazines are often adorned with first-run articles on drug abuse, women in law enforcement, rights of police officers, and the like. Circulation may be miniscule, perhaps only to the sponsors and advertisers, but at least the publications exist.

Many inquiries and complaints have been received recently by the Better Business Bureau concerning indepedent law enforcement magazines. Those businesses who are solicited on the telephone often complain that they are led to believe the magazine is associated with a law enforcement agency and the donation will be supporting law enforcement. It is not until they receive an invoice that they discover they are only placing an ad in a magazine published by a profit-making organization and the money does not help support any law enforcement agency.

Other businesses have complained that they received unauthorized invoices for advertising. The invoice will often imply that the business previously bought aadvertising in the magazine and someone authorized future advertising. Those sending the unauthorized invoices hope the bookkeeper will not question the bill and pay the amount asked for.

For those businesses contacted by a salesperson soliciting for a law enforcement magazine the BBB suggests:

—that these solicitations be evaluated as purchases of advertising and not donations.

—you demand written proof of how and to whom the publication has been distributed before you pay for the ad.

—before you advertise in a publication of this nature, make sure you have been shown a copy of your ad in the publication, before you pay for the ad.

For a report on a specific law enforcement publication or any other company, call the Better Business Bureau at 563-1880.

Philadelphia police officers James Hanlon, with camera, and Leoda Topa, collect evidence at the scene of the shooting of Salvatore Testa, 25, Saturday night. Testa is the son of the late Philip Testa who was killed by a bomb in March 1981. The FBI connected the senior Testa with the mob operation in Philadelphia and southern New Jersey.

Donovan may again be investigated

By MERRILL HARTSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan, dogged for the past 18 months by allegations that he is linked to mobsters, is again under investigation by a special prosecutor, a Reagan administration source says.

Leon Silverman, a New York attorney who five weeks ago concluded an investigation of allegations against Donovan, is looking into new assertions that the labor secretary had been involved with organized crime figures, the source said Sunday night.

Donovan was not immediately available for comment, and a spokesman said the Cabinet officer would probably have nothing to say on the subject. Repeated attempts to contact Silverman by telephone were unsuccessful.

An FBI spokesman would neither confirm nor deny that the FBI or Silverman had reopened the probe.

However, the administration source, who spoke on conditions he not be identified, said Silverman was looking into fresh allegations that Donovan, as executive vice president of Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J., had ties to organized crime figures in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

There was no indication of who the source of the new accusations might be, but in the earlier investigation, FBI informants with criminal records testified that the labor secretary had dealings with underworld crime figures. Donovan said the informants lied.

Silverman apparently never closed the books on the matter even though he concluded on June 28 that there was "insufficient credible evidence" to warrant prosecution on allegations the labor secretary had connections with mobsters, witnessed payoffs to union officials to buy labor peace, and participated in New Jersey highway construction bid-rigging schemes.

When Silverman released the 1,000-page report on the findings of his investigation and the deliberations of a 23-member federal grand jury in Brooklyn, N.Y., he said there were "a disturbing number of allegations from more than one source."

The special prosecutor refused to characterize the findings as an exoneration of Donovan. Instead, he said his investigation failed to provide sufficient evidence to warrant an indictment of the labor secretary.

But four hours after the report was made public, Donovan told cheering Labor Department employees he had been cleared and said the special prosecutor's report proved his contention.

When asked about the allegations against Donovan at a June 30 news conference, President Reagan replied: "That case is closed."

Since then, the Senate Labor Committee has decided to conduct its own investigation into the FBI's handling of its checks into Donovan's background. Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said he hoped the panel's investigation would be completed by the end of August with a written report following soon afterward.

Some committee members have said the FBI withheld from them information that could have proved decisive in the question of whether the panel would recommend Donovan's nomination to the Senate.

Donovan, 51, was confirmed on Feb. 3, 1981, the last of Reagan's Cabinet officers to win clearance by the full Senate.

Veal, poultry some foods low in saturated fats

Dear Dr. Solomon: Fish is low in saturated fats, but I hate fish. Do I have to become a vegetarian in order to cut down on my saturated fats? — E.M.

Dear E.M.: Not necessarily. You might enjoy veal or poultry as an alternative. When you buy beef, be certain it is lean. The less expensive meats are leaner than the prime luxury cuts which have a lot of marbling. Read ingredient labels for clues to hidden saturated fats. Coconut and palm oils are high in saturated fats. In margarine, the first fat listed should be liquid vegetable oil.

Here are a few hints to help you cut down on saturated fats: Buy skim milk cheese, Jarslburg and skim milk cottage cheese. Use ice milk instead of ice cream, skim milk instead of whole milk. If you prepare soups, stews, sauces the day before you use them, you can remove the layer of congealed fat before reheating.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother is 78 years old. She has started taking vitamin pills because a neighbor recommended them. Is there any harm in this? — Adele, Syracuse, N.Y.

Dear Adele: Vitamin supplements should not be taken unless prescribed by a physician. If your mother is in good health and has an adequate diet, she should not require such supplements. If she is not in good health, she should see a physician; and if her diet is not adequate, steps should be taken to correct it. The supplements may not be doing your mother any harm, but the recommendation of a neighbor is not sufficient grounds for taking them — unless, of course, the neighbor happens to be a doctor.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I usually become tense and irritated before my period. Now I am going to have a hysterectomy. Does that mean that I won't have these symptoms any more? — Mrs. K.D., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dear Mrs. D.: A study by Dr. C. T. Backstrom, of the University of Edinburgh in Scotland, suggests that premenstrual symptoms may continue following hysterectomy. Dr. Backstrom and his colleagues therefore conclude that premenstrual tension appears to have a hormonal basis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother and grandmother both had diabetes. So far I've had no problem in this regard. However, a friend of mine who is a nurse says I should stay off the Pill because it could cause diabetes. Is this true? — Mrs. G.N., Easton, Pa.

Dear Mrs. N.: Oral contraceptives do tend to reduce glucose tolerance, but there is no evidence that they increase the likelihood of diabetes. The Pill does seem to have some effect on vitamin C and some minerals, but the significance of this is not known.

For D.S. (New Orleans, La.): From the photographs you have sent me, I suspect that you have a human growth hormone secreting pituitary tumor and I would suggest that your doctor do an X ray of your sella-turtica. It appears that you have acromegaly. This shows up in about 90 percent of the cases that I have seen on sella X rays. There are about 250 to 300 new cases each year in the United States. Treatment is available.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Son of former reputed mobster gunned down

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two men accused of gunning down the son of a reputed mob boss were freed on $50,000 bond apiece within hours of their arrest in what a local official called an "outrageous" decision.

Meanwhile, 26-year-old Salvatore Testa remained in critical condition at Pennsylvania Hospital after nearly nine hours of surgery following his gangland-style shooting Saturday afternoon.

He was shot eight times as he sat in front of a house near the Italian Market, which includes several blocks of stores and open-air produce and meat stalls in south Philadelphia. The gunmen fled in a car.

The Philadelphia Inquirer today quoted a member of District Attorney Edward G. Rendell's staff as saying no prosecutors were present early Sunday when Municipal Judge Arthur S. Kafrissen set bail at $50,000 for Victor DeLuca and Joseph Pedulla. They were released upon posting one-tenth that amount.

Christine Allen, the assistant district attorney on duty, was appalled when she learned of the judge's action and said $200,000 bail would have been more appropriate, said the staff member, who was not identified. She missed the hearing because she was attending another arraignment at the time, said the staffer, calling the bail "outrageous."

Police said they arrested DeLucca, 44, and Pedulla, 34, both of Philadelphia, about 15 minutes after the shooting when their vehicle slammed into a utility pole after a chase. They were charged with attempted murder, criminal conspiracy, aggravated and simple assault and other assault and firearms counts, police Lt. Richard DeLise said.

The attack appeared to be the latest episode in the Philadelphia gang violence that over a two-year span has claimed at least 15 lives, including Testa's father, Philip.

Philip Testa was believed by authorities to have taken control of the Philadelphia crime family after the assassination of reputed longtime mob boss Angelo Bruno. However, Philip Testa was himself killed 16 months ago by a bomb that ripped him apart as he prepared to enter his south Philadelphia home.

Salvatore Testa vowed at the time to kill whoever murdered his father.

The Inquirer quoted the judge as saying he did not require higher bail for DeLuca and Pedulla because "nobody made any request for high bail."

Of the suspects, Kafrissen said, "There's nothing in their records to indicate they ever split (jumped bail) before in similar circumstances. They just don't look like bad bail risks."

The Pennsylvania Crime Commission said Pedulla and DeLuca are "associates" of the city's crime family.

Union Pacific abandons line in parts of Idaho

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (AP) — Time ran out today for a railroad line that once whisked celebrities and wealthy patrons to ski slopes at this mountain resort — but fell victim to a mining slump and competition from planes and cars.

The 54.2-mile section of Union Pacific track was built 98 years ago to serve silver mines in Wood River Valley. Later on, it made nearby Ketchum the sheep-shipping capital of the world.

The mines eventually played out, and federal grazing restrictions curtailed sheep ranching. But after 1936, the branch line hummed with passenger trains when W. Averell Harriman, then UP board chairman and later governor of New York, developed the Sun Valley resort. In part, he wanted to boost passenger traffic along the railroad's main line from Chicago to the West Coast.

"Up until 1964, we were a kind of private club for wealthy people," recalled Dorice Taylor, the resort's former publicity director.

Gary Cooper, Clark Gable, Ingrid Bergman and the Shah of Iran were among dozens of celebrities who made frequent rail trips to the base of towering Bald Mountain. Novelist Ernest Hemingway made Ketchum his home.

In 1964, Union Pacific sold the resort, and the surrounding area soon underwent a development and population boom. The valley still attracted the rich and famous, but they came by car and plane.

Passenger traffic ended in 1971, and the last train to Ketchum was a single carload of insulation in November 1980.

"We have been considering abandonment for the past 10 years," said Dick Tincher, Union Pacific spokesman in Salt Lake City.

He said railroad officials had waited in vain for mining to pick up and revive traffic on the line, which costs the railroad $772,000 a year to operate.

The Interstate Commerce Commission decided June 28 to allow Union Pacific to abandon the line, but told it to continue service on a demand basis until today. Actual cutting of the line won't occur until later this month.

"They'll probably just take out a short piece of the track and put up a barricade," said UP spokesman John Bromley.

The branch line runs some 70 miles from Ketchum south to Shoshone, where it connects with the main line, but only the 54-mile section from Richmond to Ketchum is being abandoned.

Stunt pilot crashes

SCOTTS VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A stunt pilot died in front of 10,000 horrified spectators when his biplane crashed into a pond after a dive, authoritie said.

John "Mac" McDowell was flying his single-engine Great Lakes biplane on Sunday as part of the Scotts Valley Days celebration, according to police, who said the pilot was in his early 40s.

Youth fatally beaten because cellmates bored, tapes show

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The fatal torture-beating in May of a youth jailed for failure to pay traffic fines began after bored cellmates took a dislike to his attitude, according to newly released testimony.

Joseph Krahn testified that he and fellow Ada County Jail inmates Andy Anderson, Randall McKeown, Sean Matthews and Richard Engie wanted to "mellow out" 17-year-old Christopher Peterman.

Copies of tapes from a June preliminary hearing in the case were released last week by 4th District Judge Robert Newhouse. Excerpts of the testimony in Ada County Magistrate Court were published Sunday by the Idaho Statesman.

Charges against Krahn have been dropped, and he testified on condition that his testimony would not be used against him. The other teen-agers are facing charges of first-degree murder for Peterman's death May 31. The last defendant to be arraigned, Sean Matthews, is scheduled to appear Thursday before Judge J. Ray Durtschi.

Krahn said Peterman was "instantly" disliked because he "didn't fit in" when he was placed in the cell May 28 for failure to pay $73 in traffic fines.

"He was kinda mad because he was in jail," Krahn said, adding that Peterman was crying and "acting like a little kid."

Krahn testified Peterman's suffering began after he called his five cellmates names when they wouldn't pass him a cigarette they were smoking the evening of Sunday May 30.

When Peterman was asleep that night, toilet paper was placed on his feet and set afire, Krahn testified.

The torture escalated early the next day, Krahn testified. Peterman was frequently beaten and attempts were made to force his head into a toilet bowl to make him "blow bubbles," Krahn said.

Dark walls produce dramatic effect

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. I am particularly tired of white walls in my house and am considering painting the living room walls a deep color just for a change.

I see deep reds or blues or even eggplant on walls in magazines and I rather like the result. Are there some factors I should watch out for if I choose to darken the walls? — B.C.

A. There are some obvious and not-so-obvious attributes of dark walls.

Of course, a deep color on walls can be dramatic but it also demands careful attention to to artificial and natural light to bring off the drama to advantage. Because deep colors absorb light, you'll need plenty of lamps, tracks of light or built-in illumination at ceiling level — probably for both daytime and nighttime.

Lighting experts suggest that white walls have a percentage of reflected light of about 89 while deep green walls would have about a 22 percent reflection.

When designers use dark walls you may see large amounts of white or light colors in other elements of the room, such as light furniture or white ceiling and woodwork to provide an interesting contrast.

The stark differences of light and dark can produce dramatic effects. However, some designers urge that not only light and darks should be mixed but that in-between colors should be added to soften the effect. Middle values which can be provided in furniture and rugs and window treatment can provide a transition and avoid harshness.

Q. The height and depth of chairs seem to vary greatly, I am finding, as I search for some to buy for our new home. Other than simply ffnding some that are comfortable, are there some guidelines for maximum comfort? — R.P.

A. The comfort of a chair will be a highly individualistic matter and so sitting in the chair is the only sure way to determine if it is best for you. Chair designers do, however, suggest that the height of a chair seat should be somewhat less than the length of your lower legs so you can rest your feet on the floor and your legs can be relaxed.

When judging depth, look for something that is slightly less than the length of your upper leg so you avoid putting a pressure point under the knees. Most chairs are designed for people from about 5-feet 5 inches to 6 feet tall. If you are shorter or taller, you need to do lots of searching for just the right fit.

Q. We're acquiring an old grand piano that has been in our family for years.

I know that a fine piano should be protected from sun and extreme cold. But in arranging a place for our piano are there other considerations?

A. You are correct that a piano should be protected from sudden changes in temperature that might affect its strings and hammers adversely.

Musicians are concerned also about the acoustics of a room and the placement of a piano. Acoustic experts classify a room's materials as dead (if the materials such as draperies, rugs and books soak up the sound) and live (if the materials such as glass and plaster allow the sound to bounce back). All live walls can cause too much reverberation and too much absorption can dull music, they say. So experts recommend a live surface opposite a dead one.

In addition, sound quality is enhanced when opposite surfaces are not parallel to each other. For example, an angled wall will theoretically break up the space an produce an acoustically superior room.

Future homes generate own electricity

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Houses which generate their own electricity from sunlight may not be too far off.

In fact, three of them already are in existence. The first, located in southeastern Massachusetts, has 2,300 square feet of space, with the main living quarters on a concrete floor and with two bedrooms and a bath on a second level.

How does it generate its own electricity? Via photovoltaic cells, already in use in various places in the world, including a radio station in Ohio, a lookout tower in a California forest, water pump stations along the Nile in Egype, and two villages in Saudi Arabia.

Photovoltaic cells are solid-state devices which generate electricity instantly when they are hit by sunlight. They are silent, non-polluting, have no moving parts to wear out or maintain and can be mounted on a roof, only a few feet away from the point of use. They are made of silicon, which is refined, then made into slices no bigger than fingernails. The silicon is treated to have positive and negative poles, like a battery.

Invisible particles making up sunlight are called photons. These photons strike the positive side of a cell and dislodge electrons in the silicon. The electrons flow through a wiring system as electric current and then return to the cell through the negative side. The electric current continues automatically as long as the sun shines. When there is no sunlight, other factors take over to conserve and distribute the stored sunlight.

Steven Strong, president of Solar Design Associates of Lincoln, Mass., which designed all three photovoltaic houses, says 500 square feet of the cells produce a peak output of 4.5 kilowatts of electricity on a sunny day. That is more than the house requires, so the surplus electricity is sold to the local utility and then bought back at nights and on cloudy days.

What makes the system work are energy-conscious features and efficient appliances. Earth-sheltering conserves heat in cold weather and helps cool the house when it is hot. The north side of the house is earth-bermed, except for the front entry area, and there are 18 inches of earth on the roof. The earth, 12 inches of fiber glass and six inches of rigid foam insulation give a total R value of 50. A special system combines exterior insulation and a maintenance-free exterior finish to produce R-30 walls. Four-inch concrete floors, finished with quarry tile, store excess heat during the day and re-radiate it at night. Add the super insulation to the earth-sheltering and continuous floor-to-ceiling glass on the south, as well as overhangs to block out the summer sun, and the house is said to maintain 70 degrees the year round with little or no backup heating or cooling.

The photovoltaic cells and solar domestic water heating system are mounted on the south-facing roof of a service wing that houses a two-car garage, laundry room, pantry, mudroom and workshop. In addition, the house has a solar greenhouse for food production and a waste recycling system.

Why isn't this type of house springing up all over the country? Because of price, which already has dropped drastically from $1,000 a peak watt to $10 a peak watt today. Experts in the field say that within 10 years the price might dip below 41 a peak watt, which they say would put it within the practical range and cheaper than conventional sources.

New surgical technique repairs tendons, ligaments

By YVONNE CHILIK
AP Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — For a 47-year-old construction worker, an innovative carbon fiber surgical implant means the difference between wearing a brace and returning to work on a girder 30 stories up.

"I would have been crippled if they didn't do the operation," Bob Lax said of the implant developed by engineers and physicians at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey.

The technique soon may be available to provide long-term relief for thousands of people suffering from crippling tendon and ligament injuries, doctors from the university said at a news conference Tuesday.

The implant has stimulated new tissue growth in all 100 patients who have undergone the surgery so far, the physicians said.

Dr. Andrew Weiss, an orthopedic surgeon, said the Food and Drug Administration has broadened its funding of the experimental surgery and he expects it to be approved for widespread use within a year.

It "may be especially important to athletes, who suffer painfully torn ligaments and tendons, and to victims of crippling injury or illness, such as vehicular accidents and arthritis," Weiss said.

A team including Weiss, Dr. Harold Alexander, a mechanical engineer, Dr. John Parsons, a materials engineer, and Dr. Irving Strauchler, an orthopedic surgeon, began performing the implant on people about 15 months ago.

Under the technique, surgeons place a carbon strand coated with polylactic acid into the injured tissue. The coating is dissolved by the body within about two weeks of surgery, leaving the carbon strand which acts as a scaffolding for new tissue growth, said Alexander.

Because carbon is an element normally found in the human body, "the cells do not react to it as a foreign body," Alexander said. "It mimics the normal fibers" of the joint.

The surgical technique has been demonstrated in Newark, Los Angeles, Chicago, Dallas and London, he said.

Alexander said the first patients to receive the surgery were amateur athletes, and researchers hope the procedure eventually will help athletes recover from serious sports injuries.

Lax said he was unemployed for 14 months after he injured his Achilles tendon while at work. Since the operation a year ago, he said he is "back on the girders 30 stories high."

Lax, of Ridgefield Park, said he was at work when he stepped on a ladder, "heard something pop," and his foot "went limp." Several previous attempts to repair the tendon failed, said Weiss.

The medical school's patent is licensed to Hexcel Medical of San Francisco, an orthopedic manufacturer that will produce, market and sell the device upon FDA approval, officials said.

Based on data provided by orthopedic manufacturers, the new implant technique one day could be employed in 100,000 to 250,000 operations a year, Parsons said.

Question: Who would be best to be first woman president?

By GEOFF HARRIS
Hearst Feature Service

Who's the best candidate to be the first woman president? When several prominent male leaders were asked that question, the name Janet Brown came up — though she's still five years shy of the minimum age of 35.

David Broder, a national political correspondent and an associate editor of the Washington Post, extolled Brown's virtues in his recent book on the power and leadership in America, "Changing of the Guard." He wrote that her impact will be felt in Washington because of her energy and ability to stick to and carry through with the difficult work of government and politics.

Author Jeffrey Archer asked former Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and the late Vice President Nelson Rockefeller to list the women they thought might have the best chance of making it to the White House. Both men jotted down the name "Janet H. Brown" — and, as Archer pointed out, it was the only name on both lists.

When asked if she had aspirations for the job on Pennsylvania Avenue, Brown remembered a story her former boss Richardson once told her. "Reporters had asked him about running for president," she recalled. "And he replied, 'In my line of work, that's the top job!' " And, she added on her own, "the biggest challenge."

Having worked in the federal bureaucracy, Brown calculates that she must hold an elective position in government on a lesser level — not just an appointive one as she has had in the past. This may lead to a small complication. As a fourth-generation Washingtonian, she wouldn't have a large enough constituency to gain the national exposure needed for nomination. She must relocate to one of the states and hope to be elected in order to hone her policy-making skills in preparation for the ultimate job.

Brown graduated from Williams College in Massachusetts and received a master's degree in public administration from Harvard. In Washington, she has worked as a paralegal for a short time, assisted Richardson on his book, "The Creative Balance," helped draft President Ford's 1976 State of the Union address, served under Rockefeller on the White House domestic policy staff and was press secretary for Republican Sen. John C. Danforth of Missouri.

Her latest federal position on the task force on regulatory affairs puts her in the Old Executive Building, which is adjacent to the White House. If everything falls into place, Brown will take the few small steps over to the White House — but giant steps for women.

Genetically engineered interferon may prevent some colds, doctors say

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some types of the common cold may have met their match as researchers say interferon made by gene splicing can prevent one kind of cold without harmful side effects.

A team of British doctors said in a preliminary report in the current issue of The Lancet, a British medical journal, that interferon given in a nasal spray prevented the development of colds in all 19 volunteers subsequently given potent cold viruses.

When the viruses were given to 22 others who had not received interferon, eight developed colds, the researchers said.

In a telephone interview Thursday, Dr. Geoffrey Scott of the Medical Research Council Common Cold Unit in Salisbury, England, where the research was done, said no harmful side effects developed.

Colds, though they are rarely serious, can lead to more serious illnesses and are a severe drain on the economy. The National Center for Health Statistics said that Americans missed more than 31 million work days in 1980 as a result of catching 93 million colds requiring them to seek care or restrict their activity.

The British researchers tested interferon only against a type of rhinovirus, an infectious agent that causes 25 to 30 percent of all colds in adults, according to the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md.

"We don't know the answers for other viruses yet, but we've got very hopeful results," said Scott, the principal author of The Lancet report.

Dr. Thomas Merigan of Stanford University, a leading interferon researcher, said the new report was "very exciting."

"I think we can anticipate that if interferon can be shown to be therapeutic — that it will work after the first symptoms have appeared — we might see it eventually as an over-the-counter drug," Merigan said.

The British team said that interferon given before exposure to cold viruses would prevent the cold. They have not yet explored what would happen if the substance is given to people who have already caught colds.

Interferon is produced naturally by the body in very small amounts to fight infections. It is being studied intensively as a possible cancer weapon and for its effectiveness against influenza and other viruses.

Merigan, the chief of Stanford's infectious diseases division, and Dr. David Tyrrell, the principal investigator on the British team, determined 10 years ago that natural interferon would prevent colds, but they did not know until now whether synthetic interferon would do the same thing.

Because the natural product is so difficult to extract from the body, it would cost tens of thousands of dollars to protect one patient.

The genetically engineered interferon is made by splicing the human interferon gene into the genes of bacteria, which then unwittingly produce human interferon.

Leather look 'in' for Fall '82

By MARY STANYAN
Hearst Feature Service

Leather will be high fashion this fall. A number of' avant garde international style setters have elevated it from utilitarian-countrified and-or motorcycle-modish to chic and citified.

Separates in smooth skins and suedes are in such abundance and in such trendy styles that there could be the possibility of overkill.

Is a head-to-toe leather outfit the ultimate in contemporary looks, reflecting the ideas of Europe's and America's more daring and innovative talents? Or is just a touch of leather all that's needed — a pair of suede button earrings, a kidskin bow tie for a blouse, a suede neckerchief or a St. Laurent poncho-cape of wool, piped profusely in shiny leather?

The answer is neither. While small leather accents certainly are attractive, it takes a little more display to achieve the leather look. But too much not only can be overwhelming, it can give exactly the opposite result than the one a fashion-aware woman might be seeking.

Let's face it: Since you can't always take the Hells Angels look out of some of the new fashions, moderation is the answer. Oddly enough, although motorcycle aficionados aren't ideal fashion role models and probably wish the fashion folks wouldn't horn in on their chosen image, the subtle hint of clothes associated with bikers is what's making them popular. They offer the same old separates, but in an adventurous new medium.

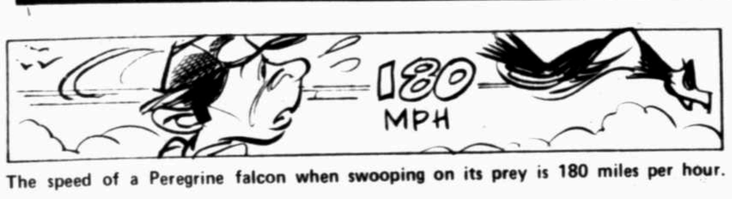

That's why, sales personnel say, a lot of comparatively prim people are snapping up these hottest of new fall fashion items. The wise ones are limiting their selections to one leather garment per outfit, pairing it with appropriate wool or knitted skirts, pants, blouses, shirts, vests, sweaters or whatever. That gives them the best of both fashion worlds — the daring and the more dignified.

Though there are choices, there really isn't much variety — a leather skirt, to be in the right mood, must be at least knee-baring short or usually shorter. If higher hemlines aren't a woman's style, she'd best forget the whole thing.

Leather pants were introduced a couple of seasons ago by Claude Montana of Paris and Mario Valentino of Milan. Several of the livelier Seventh Avenue designers quickly picked up the idea. They made them in jodhpur and straight-leg styles, and they were such a hit that promptly the look was picked up by mass manufacturers of fake leather clothes.

DEAR ABBY

Family's cruelty is crime of child abuse

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column for years, and never have I been so furious with you as I am now!

"His Uncle" wrote to say that at a family reunion his 6-year-old nephew was caught playing "doctor" with a 5-year-old girl cousin, so the boy's mother painted his genitals with Mercurochrome and made him sit naked in front of his relatives while they made fun of him!

Abby, if that is what the boy was made to suffer in PUBLIC, God only knows what kind of abuse that helpless child is subjected to at home! The uncle felt "guilty" allowing the boy to be put on public display and ridiculed, and asked, "Is there anything I can do beyond some sincere praying?"

I fully expected you to chew that uncle out but good, telling him in no uncertain terms that those who participated in the jeering were guilty of child abuse! Instead, you nonchalantly said, "All kids play doctor. Just be sure your nephew knows he committed no serious crime, and should not repeat the deed." Then all you had to say about the boy's mother was that she was both "cruel and unfeeling."

I hope you get thousands of letters protesting your inadequate answer. — LONGTIME READER

DEAR READER: The number of letters I received from outraged readers set a new record. You are right; my answer was inadequate. Incorporating suggestions from readers, how is this for a second try:

DEAR UNCLE: The boy's mother should be reported to your local child-protective agency. She's obviously ignorant, sadistic and unfit to raise a child. Furthermore, if not one person present (including you) realized that a child should not be punished and ridiculed for doing what every child does naturally (exploring out of curiosity), you all need counseling in sex education and parenting.

But why was the boy alone "punished"? The girl was also a party to the incident. (She may have even instigated it.) By assuming that the boy took advantage of her, you perpetuate the "bad boy — good girl" stereotype.

Children depend on adults to protect them, and adults who would stand by and permit a child to be abused are as guilty as the abuser!

DEAR ABBY: I have been divorced for eight years. When I was married I lived in another state. After the divorce I moved back to New York, which is 3,000 miles away from my ex-husband.

In the eight years since my divorce, my ex-husband has never once visited our child. He doesn't even call to talk to the boy. My son has no idea what his father looks like!

In the beginning I asked him many times to come and see his son, but he refused with different excuses. He has visitation rights, but never uses them.

My question: Should I just take my son to see his father? What effect do you think it would have on the boy? — BETWIXT AND BETWEEN

DEAR B. AND B.: Do not just "take" your son to see his father, knowing that he has chosen to completely ignore the boy. To force a rejected child on his father could be a devastating experience for the boy, and ruin any chance for a future relationship.

For the sake of both of your son and his father, suggest that your "ex" get professional help in order to at least face seeing the child he fathered. If he flatly refuses, write him off.

DEAR ABBY: If someone mispronounces a word, and in the course of the conversation the word must be used by both parties, is it rude to pronounce that word correctly? — GOOD MANNERS INTENDED

DEAR GOOD: Rude? Not in my book. To repeat the mispronunciation in an effort to be "polite" would be more phony than helpful.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's excellent booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Great luxury look previewed in Paris

By SUZY PATTERSON
AP Fashion Writer

PARIS (AP) — French fashions for next winter gave an opulent touch to the nation's current austerity wave, and there was a lot to choose from last week if you had a few thousand dollars to spare for couture clothes.

Some designers showed long looks but most stayed with the current Paris trend of skirts somewhere around the knee.

Madame Gres wound up the shows as the doyenne of French fashion — with her usual great mohair poncho coats or sexy draped dresses.

The suit is right back in, but looks best if the jacket has huge contrasting lapels, or is a solid to mix with another solid color or plaid skirt. The most popular silhouette is late 1940s with emphasis on small waists and full skirts. These skirts are shorter, more in tune with the times, however.

Most striking suit looks are at Saint Laurent or Ungaro. Saint Laurent showed black or red and black in the same outfit with a wide, swirling skirt or a smart spencer top over a short skirt. Ungaro's white suits with a crescent-shaped black moon effect as piping on the jacket were applauded for ingenuity.

Black is back in force but it's far from funereal with all the colorful touches and details like sparkly strass and beading. Soft tartans show up as well — very nicely done at Scherrer, who definitely appreciates the British royals. Many couturiers also enjoy mixes of forest green, sharp contrasts of poppy red or royal blue and purple to lighten things up.

Suits may be in soft flannel or broadcloth, tweed and checks, even versions of embroidered mohair. Velvet is invariably the luxury touch, on lapels or cuffs. Another new look is whole outfits in delicate chenilles.

While most suits are feminine, with puffy or shaped shoulders, smaller waists and straight or swirling skirts around the knee, some blouson-topped or masculine-tailored types look handsome, and straight pants put in a perfunctory appearance.

"Gimmickry is not in this year," says one observer, perhaps forgetting outsiders like Paco Rabanne and Andre Courreges, who always emphasize fun more than staid fashion.

Coats are important, with some good redingote styles, also wide and tiered numbers at Givenchy. There were elegant three-quarter coats at Saint Laurent, and some very big furs like black and white fox, mink or ostrich-feathered long jackets with a few capes here and there.

Dressy cocktail or short evening numbers swept the field for evening in these collections. They were mainly in black, but also in color and sparkling embroidery. Jean-Louis Scherrer's were so lacy, strapplessly revealing and re-embroidered that they prompted critics to write about the bordello style.

Saint Laurent and Givenchy both went for tight and low-waisted ballerina styles with puffed-out skirts and sleeves or a feathered burst at the shoulder. But while the slim waist was in, it was also beautifully out. For those preferring the waistless hip-draped flapper look or a dressy tubular chemise, that look was shown by many houses in luminous printed silks or panne velvets.

Genes, not stress, ulcer cause

By F. ALAN BOYCE
AP Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Recent research indicates that a stressful job is far less likely to cause ulcers than heredity, a Duke University Medical Center specialist says.

Genetic factors associated with high acidity in the stomach are the most important cause of ulcer development, said Dr. Malcolm P. Tyor, chief of Duke's Division of Gastroenterology, where researchers are testing several new anti-ulcer drugs.

Scientists are finding an increasing number of genetic markers associated with high stomach acidity and perforations of the stomach lining, he said. One of those markers is a chemical called pepsinogen I, Tyor said.

"It's clear there are patients who appear to have this as a family marker — an increased level of pepsinogen I — who are more prone to develop ulcer," he said.

Although the exploration of such markers is still in its infancy, elevated levels of the hormone gastrin and a tendency for food to move rapidly from the stomach after eating have also been associated with an increased likelihood of developing ulcers.

Until scientists have enough information about the disease to begin preventative measures, however, drugs are the best way to relieve ulcer sufferers, Tyor said.

Romania may lose trade status

By LARRY GERBER

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — After 12 years of trying to emigrate to Israel, a general's daughter and her Jewish husband are gambling on a hunger strike they hope will win the support of the U.S. Congress.

Taking only tea and fruit juice since July 12, Sergiu and Ruxandra Ratescu are trying to draw domestic and international attention to their case at a time when the U.S. Congress is debating whether to continue most-favored-nation trade status for Romania.

American law calls upon Congress each year to review human rights and emigration policies of Communist countries that enjoy the status, which grants preferential import tariffs. Debt-ridden Romania, the first Communist country to get it, needs it badly, but human rights groups have asked Congress to suspend it, alleging mistreatment of Christians and Jews in the country.

"If things do not take a turn in one or two weeks, I will die here if I have to," vowed Mrs. Ratescu, a 34-year-old translator.

She said she has lost 10 pounds and her husband 15.

Ratescu, a 36-year-old architect, is Jewish. His wife is not. Her father, an army general, is a personal physician to President Nicolae Ceausescu's wife.

The general opposes his daughter's emigration, a formidable obstacle in a country where personal influence often weighs heavily in political decisions.

"We married against my parents' will," said Mrs. Ratescu. "They are anti-Semites."

She appeared nervous as she greeted a Western visitor. Her husband, after more than two weeks without food, had just received a summons from the police and was off to answer it.

When he returned, he said the authorities had changed their minds and did not want to speak with him.

Western diplomats report frequent harassment of people who begin the complicated, months-long process of applying to emigrate.

"Nobody wants an emigration case in the family," one diplomat said.

The government-run media carry frequent reports of disillusioned emigres who return to tell of unemployment, poverty and other problems in the West. The campaign to discourage emigration is aimed not only at Jews but also at members of the Hungarian and German minorities as well as at Romanians.

The government closely controls religious and political expression. Persistent shortages of food and other goods are also a factor in pushing many to seek a new life abroad.

But Mrs. Ratescu said her husband wants to go to Israel "because he is a Jew."

She said she was expelled from school after they filed their first application to leave in 1970.

In 1975, she said, "they called us. They remembered that the Ratescu family wanted to leave."

Permission was granted for the couple and their 9-year-old son to leave, then withdrawn, she said. The procedure was repeated in 1977.

"I am so angry at what is being done here," she said. "It is like a prison...".

Romania is the only Soviet bloc country that has diplomatic relations with Israel. Romanian officials say about 1,000 Jews are allowed to emigrate each year, and that most of the estimated 35,000 Jews in the country don't want to leave.

"You can't ask me to allow 5,000 Jews to go each year when I don't have them," said Mircea Raceanu, the Foreign Ministry's counselor for North American affairs.

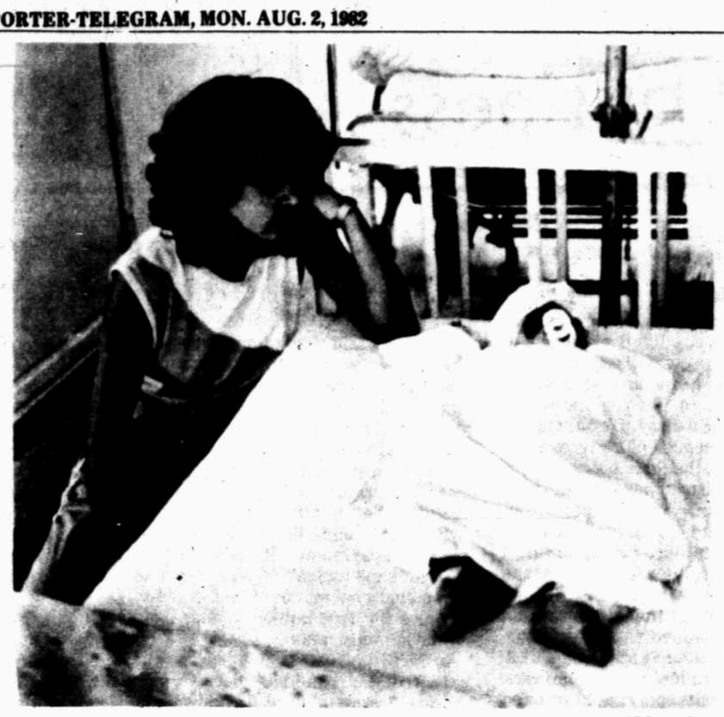

The Reagan administration has proposed extending Romania's most-favored-nation trade status as a means of encouraging independence from the Soviet bloc. U.S. figures show that 78 percent of the nation's $500 million in annual exports to the United States are covered by the special status. Without it, U.S. officials say, Romanian oil, textiles, canned ham and other goods would be subject to high tariffs and would not be competitive in the U.S. market.

Raceanu said U.S. trade relations with Romania are mutually beneficial and "not a gift because of Romania's independent policy."

He described the Ratescu case as "difficult" but said it was not representative of Romania's emigration policy.

"What about the thousands and thousands who left and are leaving every year?" he asked.

A Western diplomat said most people wanting to leave Romania eventually get exit visas, "but the authorities hassle them badly because they just can't afford to let the word get out that it is easy to emigrate."

Protestant soldier injured in Belfast car bombing

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A booby-trapped car exploded in central Belfast early today, seriously injuring a soldier, police said.

The victim, a member of Britain's locally-recruited Ulster Defense Regiment, was trapped inside the wreckage for a time. Police said he suffered severe leg injuries.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the attack.

The explosion came three days after police warned of a new type of Irish Republican Army bomb, a length of slim, black plastic tubing packed with explosives that can be attached with magnets to a car chassis.

Reagan officials construct new Middle East policy

BOSTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is drawing up a new, comprehensive policy for the Middle East and Persian Gulf and may name a new U.S. negotiator as part of the plan, a newspaper reports.

The Sunday Boston Globe quoted a well-placed administration official as saying President Reagan has asked Secretary of State George P. Shultz to come up with the new policy, and that the administration is looking to name a man of stature to negotiate parts of the policy with Israel, Egypt, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Syria and other parties.

It was unclear when this would take place and how it would affect the current mission of U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib, who has been negotiating for an end to the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty said she had no immediate comment on the story.

The Globe quoted the unidentified official as saying: "It would not be productive to choose someone who has already made a run at it. Generally speaking, it should be someone who has not broken his shovel out there."

Kenya unique African success story

By The Associated Press

Here are some basic facts and figures about the east African nation of Kenya:

THE COUNTRY

The size of Colorado and New Mexico combined (224,960 square miles), Kenya has a population of 15.3 million people and has been regarded by Westerners as one of the few economic, social and political success stories in Africa. It has been governed since independence from Britain only by civilians.

The country of the Serengeti Plain and Great Rift Valley is a wildlife viewer's dream, immortalized in "Born Free," the best-selling book the late naturalist Joy Adamson wrote of lions she raised and then freed.

Ernest Hemingway loved to hunt in Kenya's safari country. The late actor William Holden was involved in wildlife projects there.

Kenya is a strong U.S. ally, its port of Mombassa considered vital for the U.S. Navy's operations in the Indian Ocean.

The country's southwestern quadrant, much of it above an altitude of 4,000 feet with a relatively reliable rainfall, supports nearly 75 percent of the population. Mt. Kenya, 17,058 feet, is the highest point. The capital is Nairobi, population 950,000.

RECENT HISTORY

Kenya came under British control in the late 19th century.

Following World War II, pressure for independence began to build. The Kikuyu tribe, resentful that most of the best land in the country had been taken by whites, staged the Mau-Mau uprising against the British from 1952 to 1956 in which 32 whites and 13,000 blacks died.

Tribal and political rivalries delayed agreement on independence, which was ultimately set for Dec. 12, 1963. Jomo Kenyatta of the Kikuyu tribe, imprisoned and exiled on suspicion of having directed the Mau-Mau uprising, led the Kenya African National Union to victory and became the first prime minister, then president.

Other parties subsequently were banned, and political opponents of Kenyatta were detained.

When Kenyatta died Aug. 22, 1978, there were fears the country would rapidly deteriorate. But Daniel Arap Moi, Kenyatta's vice president, handled the transition smoothly and released detainees.

ECONOMY

Britain and the United States provided large development aid, and the government pushed an aggressive education policy, providing universal free education.

Tourism has been the country's second-largest source of foreign exchange, after coffee exports.

Despite a population density of 585 people per square mile of arable land, Kenya was generally able to feed itself. But the world's highest birth rate — which raised the population 40 percent from 1969-79 — and drought forced the country to use its scarce foreign exchange to import corn and wheat in 1980.

The world-wide recession, rising petroleum prices and declining coffee prices helped bring real economic growth to a virtual halt.

In September 1981 there were an estimated 4.4 million unemployed Kenyans, compared with 2.83 million with jobs. Malnutrition was widespread.

German neo-Nazi groups gain members

By SUSAN J. SMITH

BONN, West Germany (AP) - Crimes against foreigners and membership in neo-Nazi organizations and other right-wing extremist groups are on the rise in West Germany, the Interior Ministry reports.

Attacks on foreigners by right-wing extremists are also increasing, figures from the ministry show.

Interior Minister Gerhart Baum warned several weeks ago of "clearly growing agitation against foreigners."

He said "growing support of the use of force" and the old Nazi principles of racism and nationalism are being used to agitate against the large foreign population who came to West Germany in the postwar years looking for jobs they could not find at home.

Among the extremists, racism "is being been elevated, so to speak, to a national principle," Baum said.

Most of the foreign workers are Turks. During the boom years of West Germany's "economic miracle," most Germans were glad to have them to do the less skilled, poorer paid jobs the Germans didn't want.

Now that unemployment is climbing here as it is elsewhere in the West, out-of-work Germans want those jobs.

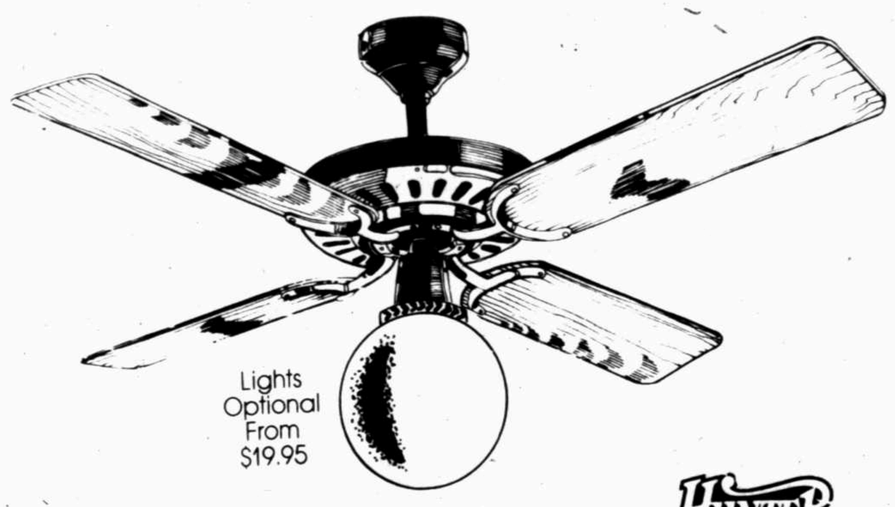

The government recorded 297 crimes against foreigners last year, a 150 percent increase over 119 such crimes recorded the year before.

Indications are that the trend is escalating this year, Interior Ministry spokesman Klaus Westkamp said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Membership in right-wing extremist groups increased by 500 people to a total of 20,300 in 1981 although the number of the groups dropped by two to 73, according to the Interior Ministry's figures. Of these, 18 acknowledge they are neo-Nazi groups.

The number of crimes with connections to members of right-wing extremist organizations is greater than at any time since the end of World War II, according to the Interior Ministry. There were 1,824 such crimes in 1981, the ministry said, an increase of 181 over 1980.

One such crime this year, in June, was the murder of two black Americans and another foreigner by a neo-Nazi, Helmut Oxner, in a Nuremberg discotheque. Oxner, 26, who had connections with the right-wing Nationalist Democratic Party, also wounded three other foreigners with gunfire before killing himself.

GAO critical of Reagan's plan to dismantle DOE

By MILTON BENJAMIN
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post New Service

WASHINGTON — The General Accounting Office, in a report highly critical of President Reagan's plan to abolish the Department of Energy, says a four-month study turned up no evidence to support the administration's claim that the action would save more than $400 million a year — or any lesser sum.

In fact, the GAO says, the administration has failed to take into account "numerous" expenses that shifting most of DOE's functions to the Commerce Department would involve and has "not performed the detailed planning necessary" to effect a major reorganization efficiently.

The report, scheduled to be made public Monday, seems likely to doom any lingering hope of the Reagan administration to get legislation to abolish the Energy Department enacted in this session of Congress.

Introduced in the Senate two months ago, the administration's plan ran into reactions ranging from skepticism to outright hostility at the only hearing held. The White House has yet to find a sponsor to introduce the bill in the House.

In recent months the administration has variously claimed that the reorganization would save $1.3 billion, $1 billion and $250 million over three years. But the GAO, in its report, said it found that "sufficient evidence has not been developed" by the administration to support any of the savings estimates.

The GAO said that when it reviewed the figures with administration officials, they agreed most of the envisaged reductions in personnel were "primarily related" to cutbacks in federal energy programs and were not linked to the proposed reorganization.

As to claimed efficiencies from merging the operations of the two Cabinet departments, the GAO said Commerce Department officials "had no specific explanation" of what types of automated systems could be merged to produce the $200 million savings cited by the administration.

In fact, the GAO concluded, "to the extent that it would be necessary to integrate systems, the difficulties of combining Energy's systems with those of Commerce would likely be substantial."

While the consolidation of these systems could eventually lead to economies, officials from both departments told the GAO they had not considered the "difficulties and expenses" associated with merging the systems in their savings estimates.

The GAO was even more skeptical of the administration's claim that the reorganization would save $50 million by tightening up the manner in which DOE audits private contractors' activities.

This figure, the GAO found, was based on Commerce's belief that DOE's "contractor-operated activities do not receive sufficient audit coverage." Commerce officials assumed that if these activities were more frequently and thoroughly audited, 1 percent of the $5 billion the Energy Department spends in this area could be saved.

"Commerce officials agreed this estimate is speculative and that a change in the methods of auditing contractors is not dependent upon a reorganization," the GAO said. Energy Department officials also expressed "concern about the accuracy of such a highly speculative estimate because it could give the incorrect impression that there is a significant amount of serious fraud, waste and abuse" in their programs.

The GAO also faulted planners of the reorganization for failing to take into account a wide range of costs — higher overtime costs, along with increased training and support-services expenses — that the administration's proposal would entail.

In sum, the GAO concluded that "the expenses of reorganization have not been assessed, and the current savings estimates are poorly documented and are based on inadequate implementation plans."

The GAO said, moreover, it had found that "the administration's preparations for making an effective transition" for Energy had been insufficient.

"The Department of Energy has not developed plans adequate for identifying and resolving potential reorganization problems and for ensuring that the proposed reorganization would be implemented as efficiently and effectively as possible," the report concluded.

Mobil home trade good nationwide, shipments up

By JACK MILLER
Hearst Feature Service

Unlike the conventional home building industry today, the mobile home business is thriving, with nationwide shipments of its products expected to be up about 5 percent over last year. And the outlook for continued gains for the immediate years ahead is bright.

The 5 percent increase predicted for this year would bring the total to about 255,000 units, according to a report on the mobile home industry in Advance Mortgage Co.'s publication, U.S. Housing Markets. Compared with two years ago, the report says the hike amounts to 15 percent.

With the number of new "stick-built" homes shrinking with the well-publicized slump in home building, the 255,000 figure gives the mobile industry a larger bite of the nation's total shelter pie. Mobiles are expected to gobble up 20 percent of the housing market this year, "the highest since the industry's glory days of the early 1970s," says the report. For the last seven years, its market share has been averaging 15 percent.

Robert J. Mylod, president of the Detroit-based mortgage firm, admits the vigor of the mobile home business "is too good to explain," especially after the mild gloom that settled over the industry in the final quarter of last year, when sales suddenly slumped.

But by February, he says, there was a sudden turnaround. "Placements rebounded to the 250,000-plus level and have held there. Inventories are averaging about a three-month supply, just slightly more than a comfortable level."

The study by Mylod's firm explores some possible reasons, including financing, which the report contends "has not deteriorated as much as in the conventional housing market." Many savings and loans, the report asserts, "would rather make a mobile home loan at 18.5 percent or 19 percent than other home loans at 17."

In addition, the Advance Mortgage study contends that the brisk upturn in mobile homes has encouraged lenders to offer other terms that frequently are more favorable than available for stick-built homes. "The typical mobile home loan still is at a fixed-rate for 12 1/2 years in many areas where conventional home mortgages either are adjustable or five-year balloons."

The price differential also has become more substantial between mobile and stick-built units. Mylod contends the former have trimmed the sizes of their product "even more aggressively than stick-home builders." Double-width mobiles, which had been accounting for about 30 percent of shipments, are down to 20 percent this year. A single-width stripped-down model priced at the factory for under $9,000-$11,000 retail is this year's best seller, Mylod points out.

The study notes that almost half of the industry's annual volume is replacements. "Before the end of this decade, this part of the market should at least double its current size," the report says, adding that the number of converts is rising, too.

"There appears to be some conquest of potential conventional house buyers. This does not normally happen. Traditionally, mobile homes serve a distinct market -- rural areas where there is limited conventional presence and in urban areas, retirees and blue-collar young who like the mobile home park life style"

Acquiring sites, the study observes, is a sticky problem. Figuring about seven units to the acre, lot costs can amount to half the sales price of the home. As for park rentals, it notes that charges have been pushed up "beyond the reach of the traditional retiree and blue-collar buyer."

Underwriters chapter meeting tomorrow

The Permian Basin Chapter of Chartered Life Underwriters will have its next meeting August 3. The chapter is an organization made up of area CLUs. Mr. Carvel Mills, CLU, of Midland will be the guest speaker. He will speak on Split Dollar, which is a method of purchasing needed life insurance by splitting the premiums with an outside entity.

Mills, a leader in industry organizations, has been in the life insurance business since 1956 and is a current member of the Million Dollar Round Table's Top of the Table.

Stone opens Midland office

Young

Stengl

Cunningham

The Stone Petroleum Corporation has opened its Permian Basin Division Office at Energy Square, 505 N. Big Spring, Midland, Texas. The office, a division of the Western Region, will generate and evaluate prospects in the West Texas, eastern New Mexico area. Heading the exploration effort is Gerald E. Stengl, Division Exploration Manager. Stengl has 28 years of experience in the oil industry. Appointed as Division Landman is Gary M. Young, formerly District Land Manager for Southland Royalty Company. Also joining Stone as senior geologist is Brenda K. Cunningham, formerly employed by Cotton Petroleum Corporation.

The Stone Petroleum Corporation is one of The Stone Companies, a privately owned oil and gas exploration and production group based in Lafayette, LA with Western Region headquarters in Oklahoma City. Stone Petroleum also has offices in Denver, CO, Houston, TX., Jackson, MS., and New Orleans, LA.

Ford chief says popular notion of economic shift is false

By PHILIPP HARPER
Copley News Service

The popular notion that the U.S. economy is shifting rapidly from a manufacturing to a services orientation not only is false but potentially dangerous as well, the president of Ford Motor Co. says.

"There can be, will be and must be a desire to retain (America's) basic strength in fundamental manufacturing, if for no other reason than defense," Donald E. Petersen said in an interview.

Petersen is head of the nation's second largest automaker since March of 1980. The company has reversed a series of disastrous losses by posting a healthy profit for the second quarter of this year.

While conceding that the high-technology and services sectors have been ascendant in recent decades, Petersen said the trend away from the "smokestack" industries has not been nearly as dramatic as some have made it out to be.

Over the past 20 years, he said, the percentage of the national work force occupied by manufacturing has been declining, but at an annual rate "in the one-tenths of a percent" range.

Claims of a dramatic changeover are "nonsense," Petersen said. "It won't happen. There will be a continuing trend of change, but it will all be very gradual."

Instead of writing heavy industry off as defunct, the executive said, it is time to perceive the country as being on a "dual track," with one rail representing traditional manufacturing and the other high-tech and services.

Petersen said the proposed sale of a 75 percent interest in Ford's Rouge Steel plant to Nippon Kokkan, Japan's largest steel producer, is not antithetical to the rejuvenation he was talking about.

"We would be bringing in a partner totally devoted to the steelmaking industry," and which has plans to invest "hundreds of millions of dollars" in the plant over the next 10 years.

In fact, he argued, the acquisition would be a "marvelous" answer to complaints that Japanese industry benefits from the U.S. market but never does anything to provide jobs in this country.

Petersen said the automobile industry, which has undergone marked change in order to survive, is a good candidate to lead the rebirth of American manufacturing. His assertion is timely since the second quarter this year turned out to be the most profitable three months for the U.S. auto industry in the last three years.

"We at Ford think a very significant change can take place" on a national level, Petersen said, noting the "massive change" Ford recently has effected "throughout its whole approach" to automaking.

The shakeup at Ford — a two-year process involving plant closings, layoffs and union concessions — is behind the $205 million, $1.70 per share, after-tax profit recently reported by the company, Petersen said.

The profit was the first since Ford earned $60 million, or 50 cents a share, in the same quarter last year. However, because of first quarter loss of $302 million, the company had a first-half deficit of more than $96 million.

Ford lost a staggering $1.06 billion for all of 1981.

With net worldwide sales for the quarter down 3 percent from last year to $10.9 billion, and unit sales up a paltry 13,000, Petersen attributed the profit largely to Ford's success at reducing ongoing operating costs and "associated fixed costs." Through last year, the company had reduced costs by $2.5 billion, and another $1 billion in expenses is scheduled for excision this year.

Ford also benefited in the second quarter from the $56 million sale of its Pico Rivera plant, and a change in accounting conventions which permitted the company to write off a $69 million foreign-exchange loss against equity instead of earnings.

Offsetting these pluses somewhat, Petersen said, were the "tremendous marketing costs in the North American market. With everybody trying to get something going, we really had an increase year to year."

The executive declined to predict whether Ford would finish the year in the black. "Things are very uncertain all over the world," he said, adding that only the Pacific Rim — excluding Japan — presently is exhibiting any economic vitality.

Commenting on the domestic market for cars, Petersen said, "What we badly need now is just any kind of improvement in the basic economy in this country."

While he pointed to a number of encouraging economic signs — the latest 10 percent tax cut, increased Social Security benefits and a lower prime rate — he said the ultimate health of the market depends on the federal government's ability to deal with deficit spending.

If the "gory" predictions on Capitol Hill of runaway deficits gain adherents, Petersen said, "you have to believe the financial markets will ignore the lower inflation" and keep interest rates high, a situation that is anathema to a recovery of the auto industry.

To strengthen its competitive position in the current tight market, Petersen said the 12 months ending next spring will see Ford "introducing more new products and spending more money on product introductions than ever before in its history."

He promised a dramatic departure in the new models — particulary in the design of the Thunderbird and Cougar — and said that "Ford is going in a direction quite different from the introductions by General Motors and Chrysler."

In addition to radical changes in aerodynamics and design, Petersen said fuel efficiency also is a hallmark of the new generation of Fords.

Remote sensing conference planned

The first international conference to be held in the United States concerning the use of remote sensing for exploration geology will convene Dec. 6-10 in Fort Worth. Sponsors will be both Texas Christian University's Center for Remote Sensing and Energy Research and the Division of continuing Education along with the Environmental Research Institute of Michigan (ERIM).

The conference, to be held at Fort Worth's Hyatt Regency Hotel, will be industry oriented with the presentation of research papers, discussion panels, workshops and industrial displays. Focusing on the theme of "Remote Sensing for Exploration Geology," tropics to be discussed will include the application of remote sensing for oil, gas and mineral exploration in the United States and abroad.

TCU's Center for Remote Sensing and Energy Research began operation in June of 1981.

Additional information is available from Dr. Ken Morgan, TCU geology department, Box 30798, Fort Worth, TX 76129, (817) 921-7270, or Dr. Donald Morris-Jones, Environmental Research Institute of Michigan, kox 8618, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48107, (313) 994-1200, Ext. 344.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

Another look at oil

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN
King Features Syndicate Inc.

Assuming you are one of the blessed and can afford to tootle about the country in your Oldsmobile on a summer vacation you will note that what this Fool told you last February has come to pass: Gas prices are on the rise.

Bullish whispers abound. The new secretary of state is said to be a solid pro-oil person, but political speculations to one side, the long term contracts that the Saudis had locked a number of oil companies into do not look as disadvantageous as they did some months ago. OPEC is controlling production so that the price of crude is oozing upwards; those who have fixed price contracts that seemed high a year ago look pretty good now.

It's always good for our side when we can charge more for the finished product without paying more for the raw material. A number of oil companies have rationalized their refinery operations by closing old clunkers and modernizing others, so that helps. Fewer companies are trying to sell gas at retail nationally. They're tending to concentrate in the regions where they are set up to do the best job and that helps too.

All in all, it's time to have another peek at oil company stocks, but these are not stocks that you put money in and, like old wine, leave in the cellar until maturation. Check out your company every day.

So what to look for when trying to pick a stock in one of the large oil companies? Assets is the answer you get most of the time, meaning a company that owns satisfyingly large chunks of proven oil and gas reserves in some revolution-proof place like the state of Louisiana or Alaska.

But such is the perversity of the buyers and sellers of stock that sometimes when they have a company that exactly fits that description, they don't like it anyway. Standard Oil of Ohio has pots and pots of the black sticky stuff safe in Alaska but the price of its stock has done nothing for two years but flutter downward from over $91 a share to around one-third that figure ($33.50).

There is reason to clear one's throat when Sohio's name is mentioned; it suffers from the successful oil corporation's disease, the acute desire to spend the profits on buying companies in industries oil executives know nothing about.

A few years ago the guys got it into their heads they should go buy copper companies. Sohio ran out the door and bought Kennecott Copper just in time to see the bottom drop out of the price of copper and, if the company is having trouble doing a Prudhoe Bay, Alaska, encore, it had no difficulty repeating with the Kennecott caper. With perfect timing they bought themselves a parcel of coal mines just when that market swooned.

Buying an oil company that owns copper and coal properties it doesn't know what to do with at $91 a share is imprudent; buying the same shares at a bargain basement sale price of two- thirds off may not be a bad deal. Or you can buy an oil company with a string of department stores: Mobil. It is estimated by some that the oil company has lost upward of a billion dollars on its purchase of Montgomery Ward. The signs and portents are good for Mobil and at around $20 a share it's a plausible way to spend your money, but brace yourself for management's next excursion into fantasy.

That is nothing compared to what goes on at Exxon. A few years ago they announced they were going into the electronics business and beat IBM at its own game. As a result the Exxon tiger is peddling electronic typewriters from door to door but nobody's buying. Then there was another billion blown on buying Reliance Electric to market a miracle widget that didn't work and even vaster sums have been expended on shale oil projects in Australia and Colorado which went kerplunk and have been closed down. If you can get top management to promise to make the tiger stay in the gasoline business, the Fool says you can buy the stock, even though it's not exciting and you won't get rich off it.

Stay away from Occidental, which has gone and bought itself the nation's biggest meat packers, Iowa Beef Processors, just as America decides beef makes you fat and gives you heart attacks and cancer. For this Fool's money a much more interesting play is Amerada Hess, a firm that has had troubles with a high cost oil refinery and other difficulties, but has one natural resource that is the equal of a large, new, virgin oil field and that is its chairman and founder, Leon Hess. He is the kind of entrepreneurial spirit you put your money on, especially if the stock dips down around $15 a share as it did not too long ago.

Company effort chief factor in mine safety, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A company's effort to improve mine safety is the chief factor in lowering death and injury rates among coal miners, according to a National Academy of Sciences report.

The report, prepared by a committee of experts and released Sunday, said large and consistent differences in safety rates among major coal companies are reflected in their commitment to safety.

"Such differences could not be explained by physical, technological or geographical factors that we analyzed," the committee said in its report. "They are due, rather, to factors internal to the companies.

"We found the most important of these factors to be management's commitment, as reflected by the attention and resources it devotes to improving safety," the panel said.

The committee of the academy's National Research Council said other important factors are cooperation between management and labor in safety programs and the quality of training provided employees and managers.

In the study, the panel examined each of almost 40,000 coal mine injuries and deaths that occurred between 1978 and 1980 involving the 19 largest underground coal producers. The committee also visited mines and interviewed safety experts, managers and laborers.

It noted that mines are safer today than 10 years ago and that injuries tend to be less severe than they used to be, although there still are about 100 fatalities annually.

However, the panel added that "no compromise or dilution of the government's regulatory role is justified" based upon the evidence it examined.

The committee said the safety improvements stem from better laws and stricter enforcement, especially by the federal government; better safety technology, such as roof supports and ventilation devices; and more knowledge of geological conditions in underground mines.

"But these factors operate in mines that have high injury rates as well as in those that have low injury rates," said the report. "We must look elsewhere to understand the differences."

The report was commissioned by the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines.

YOUR INVITATION TO A SPECIAL OIL & GAS SEMINAR

This is an invitation to attend a seminar on how an in-house computer system can benefit your company in lease and well management.
Primary areas of discussion and demonstration will be Joint Interest Billing (with pre-payment option), Revenue Disbursement (well revenue check writing), AFE Reporting, and general Oil and Gas Accounting.

Date: Aug. 3, Tuesday afternoon
Aug. 4, Wednesday, all day
Aug. 5, Thursday morning
Location: Midland Hilton Inn

EPA tightens rules reducing lead content of gasoline

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is preparing to strengthen rules requiring a reduction in the amount of lead in gasoline, handing environmentalists one of their biggest victories since the Reagan administration took office.

The EPA, which earlier had planned to weaken the lead standards, is expected to propose regulations mandating removal of an additional 31 percent of lead in gasoline over the next eight years.

The recommendations were contained in a memo sent to EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch by Kathleen Bennett, head of the agency's air program. Officials at EPA, who asked not to be named, said Mrs. Gorsuch is expected to give her approval to the changes soon.

The package represents a dramatic policy reversal for the administration which had put the lead rule on a regulatory "hit list" because of complaints from small refiners that it was driving them out of business.

While the rule does provide some relief to small refiners, it is not as much as they had wanted and it clamps tighter controls on refineries producing 96 percent of the nation's gasoline.

When the EPA gave notice in February that it was considering weakening current standards, environmental and health groups charged such a change would be disastrous to small children, who are most susceptible to lead poisoning.

The EPA received a total of 700 comments on its proposal to weaken the standards with the great majority opposing any change. One of EPA's own consultants submitted a study predicting there could be an additional 500,000 cases of lead poisoning nationwide in pre-school children in 1983 if the standards were relaxed.

A recent government study said 675,000 American pre-school children — 4 percent — currently have excessive levels of lead in their blood. The study said the number went to one in five among black children from low-income families.

Lead poisoning can cause kidney and brain damage as well as anemia, mental retardation, and in extreme cases, death.

In her memo, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, Ms. Bennett said, "Relaxation of the regulations is not warranted. New studies support the concept that lead emissions should be minimized."

The key change being recommended is a switch in how the lead limit is set for each refinery. Currently, refineries can average no more than 0.5 gram of lead per gallon of gasoline. But the rule permits averaging of the refinery's production of both leaded and unleaded to arrive at that level.

The use of unleaded gasoline is projected to continue increasing because more and more cars on the road cannot use regular fuel, which damages their pollution control devices.

The current limit, based on an average of both leaded and unleaded, allows refiners to put more lead in their regular gasoline. Lead is used as a cheap octane booster in gasoline.

Under the rule change being considered, only the content of leaded gasoline would be considered in setting the limit for a refinery. That level would be placed at 1.1 grams of lead per gallon, the current rate being used by most large refineries.

EPA officials said that between 1983 and 1990, their proposal would cut by 31 percent the expected 326,000 tons of lead that current regulations would allow refiners to use in gasoline.

Dr. Ellen Silbergeld, chief toxic scientist for the Environmental Defense Fund, said her group supported most of the changes but would fight one feature which would allow refineries who use less lead than allowed to sell their excess lead capacity to other refineries.

DETROIT (AP) — Relaxing federal standards on exhaust emissions would save U.S. carmakers as much as $760 per vehicle, a new study says.

The move also would improve car sales about 8 percent and put about 152,000 people back to work, said a report to be issued Tuesday by the Heritage Foundation in Washington, D.C.

The study, reported in Sunday's editions of the Detroit News, says "reasonable" reform of pollution regulations in the U.S. Clean Air Act would save consumers up to $15.2 billion in 1983.

The foundation, a conservative research center, said auto pollution controls "work well only on paper or in an artificial laboratory environment."

The issue is being debated in Congress, where a pending bill offers weaker revisions than the foundation is advocating.

Mexican government imposes price increases on bread, tortillas, gasoline

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government today imposed sweeping increases in the prices of bread, tortillas and gasoline, saying all Mexicans must accept sacrifices at a time of economic crisis.

The Ministry of Commerce, in a surprise announcement late Sunday night, said the increases, effective immediately, would double the cost of both corn tortillas and white bread rolls, and would increase gasoline, other fuel and electricity prices as much as 66 percent.

The government acknowledged the increases would hurt consumers, but said the measures were necessary to cut costly government subsidies.

The new prices set the cost of tortillas at 10 cents a pound and rolls at two cents each. Both are staple items in this nation of 70 million people, where the minimum legal wage is the equivalent of about 95 cents an hour.

An estimated 45 percent of the nation's labor force is either unemployed or underemployed.

Gasoline prices in this oil-exporting nation were hiked 66 percent from the equivalent of 46 cents to 77 cents for a gallon of regular gas and from 77 cents to $1.15 for a gallon er) of premium. Diesel fuel went up from 19 cents to 31 cents a gallon.

The nation is rich in crude oil reserves, but is suffering a deep monetary crisis because of sagging international crude oil prices and a foreign debt expected to close the year at $80 billion.

The ministry said price subsidies on all the products were depleting the nation's weakened coffers. Even with the increases, it said, subsidies to tortilla and bread producers would not be totally eliminated.

"During the last five years, production cost increases for bread were absorbed by growing subsidies," the ministry statement said.

It also said energy costs were growing with skyrocketing demand, forcing the new price structure.

"In contrast with the more developed countries, where a clear tendency toward decreased energy demands has been observed, in Mexico the disproportionate consumption of gasoline has continued," the ministry said.

"Following the present pace, the demand for refined fuel in Mexico would force the petroleum industry to double its gasoline production every five years," the ministry said.

Investment advisors see wrong numbers ahead for "the phone company"

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's largest investment advisory service sees some potential wrong numbers in the financial future of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

"AT&T stock may no longer be a haven for widows and orphans," the Value Line Investment Survey declared in a report that reached subscribers on Friday.

"Our projections through 1985-87 allow for the distinct possibility that by 1984 AT&T will have to end its dividend reinvestment plan, at least in its present form," wrote Value Line analyst Allan S. Lyons. "There is even a slim chance that it may be forced to cut its dividend as well."

Those are strong words about a company with a blue-chip record, built up over more than 100 years in which it has always paid a dividend and never reduced it.

AT&T's reputation as one of the most solid investments available has helped it to attract 3 million shareholders, more than twice as many as any other company.

There will doubtless be many people who disagree strongly with Lyons' assessment. Ernest Liu and Kathryn Follett, who follow AT&T for the investment firm of Goldman, Sachs & Co., issued a report last week in which they described themselves as "aggressively" positive on the company's stock for the near term.

"Longer term, the new AT&T (which will ultimately result from the government's move early this year to split the company into at least two parts) represents an interesting investment opportunity," they added.

Value Line estimates AT&T's 1982 per-share earnings will be about the same as 1981's, with a slight drop next year. Goldman Sachs, by contrast, projects profit gains for both years.

How could Lyons' position differ so radically from that of such other well-respected analysts? "AT&T's problems stem from the government's decision to end its monopoly," he wrote.

New competition from other companies, he asserted, has caused it such an "abrupt" loss of business "that AT&T could reach a point where it simply can't replace lost revenues fast enough to sustain earnings and dividends."

Lyons said it may be this prospect that has caused AT&T shares to fall several points since the proposed breakup was announced in January. They traded Friday around $52.50, having ranged between $50 and $60.87 so far in 1982.

Lyons argued that the stock's performance, in turn, raises a potential problem for the company's popular dividend reinvestment plan, under which holders can have their dividends automatically invested in new AT&T stock instead of receiving them in cash.

When the stock price drops, Lyons argued, "dividends reinvested through the dividend reinvestment plan buy more shares. That not only further dilutes share earnings, but also increases the cash dividends that must be paid subsequently, which puts further pressure on earnings, a vicious circle."

The Goldman Sachs analysts saw several different factors behind the sluggish recent performance of AT&T's stock — among them high interest rates, which tend to reduce the competitive allure of the company's dividend yield, and "lingering disappointment over AT&T's not raising its dividend since February 1981."

The company's next dividend meeting is scheduled for this month. "Although prospects are not good for an August dividend increase," said Goldman Sachs, "we believe the board of directors may take action by yearend or in early 1983."

Another piece in the puzzle of AT&T's future is expected to fall into place soon, when Judge Harold Greene of the U.S. District Court in Washington rules on the breakup agreement the company reached with the Justice Department in January.

U.S. truck production at high levels

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. truck producers plan to build 151,000 trucks in August, the highest total for the month in four years, an industry journal reported today.

This month's output will be the highest for August since 281,000 trucks were built in 1978, Ward's Automotive Reports said. The higher August production is planned despite an increase from July in the number of plants closed for vacation and model changeover as well as an estimated 9 percent decline in the daily production rate, Ward's said.

An estimated 159,000 trucks were built by U.S. manufacturers in July, an average daily rate of 7,571 vehicles, Ward's said. The number was up 60 percent from a July 1981 total of 119,000 trucks, or 4,286 vehicles per day.

In the first six months of 1982, U.S. companies built 1,062,000 trucks, an increase of 11 percent from 956,000 in the first half of 1981, according to Ward's.

Acid rain not a burning issue for Europeans

By STERLING NOEL
Hearst Feature Service

The acid rain problem in Europe is nearing a satisfactory settlement. In the U.S. and Canada the debate goes on and on, with little hope of a final resolution within any reasonable time.

The reason for North American foot-dragging is that scientists, many in the employ of industry, have unearthed conflicting data about acid rain and its causes. Prolonged studies are deemed appropriate.

The same conditions exist in Sweden, for instance, as in eastern Canada and New England. Acid from the skies has killed off the fish in waterways and affected agriculture and forests.

These facts are not denied but, in Europe, the United Kingdom has accepted blame as principal producer of sulphur dioxide and nitrogen oxides, which caused the acid-rain blight in Scandinavian countries, and has agreed to reduce emissions from fossil fuel burning.

At an international conference on the problem, the British claimed that they already have cut sulphur dioxide emissions by more than 20 percent, mainly as a consequence of the economic recession and the use of low-sulphur North Sea oil and natural gas.

Sweden was host at the meeting in Stockholm of the signatories to the 1979 Geneva Convention on long-range air pollution. A report on the state of knowledge on acid rain was accepted, and it now seems likely the convention will come into force by the end of the year, according to the British science magazine Nature.

In contrast to this cooperative effort, the only agreement the Canadians have been able to get from the U.S. is that the matter will be given further study.

One question here is the source of acid rain. The widely-held conviction is that the burning of coal by public utilities and industries in the Ohio Valley is responsible. Sulphur and nitrogen oxides from those plants combine with water in the upper atmosphere to form sulphuric and nitric acids; these are carried to eastern Canada and New England by prevailing winds, to fall as rain.

There are many scientists who dispute this, and also dispute the alleged effects of acid rain.

Clouding the issue generally are these points: Acid rain has been around for hundreds of years -- long before coal-burning; most rain is acetic, to a degree, no matter where it falls; volcanoes emit vast tonnages of sulphuric oxides; low levels of acid in rainfall are harmless.

The National Atmospheric Deposition program and the Environmental Protection Agency produced rainfall figures in 1955-56, 1972-73 and 1979 showing that the average acidity over the eastern U.S. and Canada was 10 times higher than acceptable.

But in no case have scientists, government agencies or industry traced the sources of the high-acid rains. All you can say is that Ohio Valley smokestacks seem to be likely culprits.

That gives plenty of room for scientists engaged by the Edison Electric Institute, the trade organization for public utilities, to deny it all and to demand further studies.

Canada's environment minister put it this way: "The U.S. is suggesting we need to know a lot more before we apply specific remedies. Our view is that that's a little like saying you're not going to clear out a swamp until you know exactly which mosquitoes are carrying the malaria."

Frank Robinson, left, and Hank Aaron look at the crowd Sunday as Baseball Hall of Fame ceremonies begin. Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who gave the new Hall members their plaques, is at right.

Robinson finally finishes in first

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — On the day they both were inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame, Frank Robinson said he finally was through chasing Hank Aaron.

"It seems like I've been chasing him for a long time," said Robinson. "It seems like I've always been one step behind or one year behind him.

"When I broke in, all the talk was about Hank Aaron, and I must say we've had a long and friendly rivalry on the field," Robinson said.

Robinson, an MVP in both leagues and now manager of the San Francisco Giants, made his acceptance speech on the steps of the Hall of Fame library Sunday. His induction followed those of former New York Giants shortstop Travis Jackson and A.B. "Happy" Chandler, post-World War II commissioner of baseball, and preceded that of Aaron.

Jackson and Chandler were selected for induction by the Veterans Committee, while Robinson and Aaron were elected by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in their first year of eligibilty, having been retired as players for five years. They were the 12th and 13th players inducted in their first try.

"So many times I stood in the outfield and watched Hank Aaron hit balls over my head," Robinson said. "I think I felt that if I got up in the next inning, I had to prove myself as good as Hank. I think it made me a better ballplayer.

"It's been said that Hank Aaron didn't get his due as a ballplayer," Robinson said, "and I agree. He wasn't a flashy ballplayer. He just did the job.

"And now I thought I had finally caught up with him until I read in the paper that he's the 12th and I'm the 13th. One step behind again.

But I finally caught up with him. I'm hitting third," Robinson said, looking toward Aaron, still awaiting his turn to address the crowd gathered for the inductions. "And he's on deck. I'm going into the Hall of Fame before he does."

Aaron was named on 406 of the 415 ballots cast by 10-year members of the baseball writers group, while Robinson received 370 votes. Only Willie Mays, who was inducted in 1979, received more votes than Aaron with 409.

"It's been a long, winding road," said Aaron, who was the last man to make it to the major leagues from Negro League baseball. "I've been extremely blessed in my lifetime."

Aaron, whose 755 career home runs erased the revered record of 714 by Babe Ruth, said he wanted to pay particular respect to Jackie Robinson and Roy Campanella, two of the men most responsible for breaking baseball's color barrier in post-war America.

"A man's ability is limited only by his lack of opportunity," Aaron said, addressing the crowd of several thousand. "Twenty-three years ago, I took the talent God gave me and developed it to the best of my ability, but I never dreamed I would be standing on the same steps where Robinson and Campanella stood."

Aaron, now director of player personnel for the Atlanta Braves, joined the Braves as a player in 1954 in Milwaukee. He remained with the club when it moved to Atlanta in 1966 and played the final two years of his career, 1975 and '76, with the Milwaukee Brewers.

Among the many lifetime major league records he holds are career runs batted in (2,297), at-bats (12,364) and games (3,298).

Robinson, who became the first black manager in the major leagues when he became player-manager of the Cleveland Indians in 1975, started with the Cincinnati Reds in 1956. In 1966, he was traded to Baltimore, where he played for six years before short stints with the Los Angeles Dodgers, California Angels and Indians.

He was named MVP of the National League in 1961 with 37 homers and 124 RBI for Cincinnati, then was named MVP in the American League in 1966 with 49 homers and 122 RBI for Baltimore, becoming the only man to earn the honor in both leagues.

Jackson, 78, was one of the best shortstops of his era, revered especially for his powerful throwing arm and vast range. Jackson also had a career batting average of .291, including a .339 average in 1930.

Chandler became the oldest man inducted into the Hall at age 83. He succeeded baseball's first commissioner, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, after Landis' death in 1944 and served six years. He fought for the desegregation of baseball and championed Brooklyn Dodgers General Manager Branch Rickey's signing of Jackie Robinson. Chandler also helped institute the players pension and was voted out of office in 1951 by owners who felt he sided too staunchly with the players.

"I saw Grover Cleveland Alexander and Dazzy Vance playing for the House of David to get enough money to live on," Chandler said in explaining his fight for a pension. "It just wasn't right."

Lundquist blessed with gold fingernails

Wins only U.S. first in World Swimming Championships

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (AP) — East German Petra Schneider said Sunday night she swam a perfect race to break her own world record in the 400-meter individual medley at the World Swimming Championships.

Steve Lundquist of Jonesboro, Ga., meanwhile, said he has to rely on long fingernails to set a meet record and win the 100-meter breaststroke gold medal.

"The race went absolutely perfectly for me," Schneider said after re-establishing her claim as the best all-around woman swimmer in the world. "I was pretty sure after 200 meters that I would win." Schneider easily outdueled archrival Tracy Caulkins of Nashville, Tenn., who shares Schneider's birthday of Jan. 11, 1963. The East German was timed in 4 minutes, 36.10 seconds to lower her own two-year-old world standard by .19 seconds.

"I expected that Tracy would be a much tougher competitor and much closer," Schneider said. "I think that this time is my limit for the time being. I could not have gone any faster."

Lundquist was second in the morning prelims as Victor Davis of Canada set a meet record of 1:03.06. In the final, Lundquist got an excellent start, then barely held off Davis.

Lundquist broke Davis' hours-old meet mark with a clocking of 1:02.75, just .07 faster than Davis, while John Moffet of Costa Mesa, Calif., copped the bronze medal.

"I knew I had to finish strong, because if I didn't someone else would,' said Lundquist, a Southern Methodist University student. "At the end, I was fortunate to have long fingernails."

East Germans won the other woman's final on the first day of the swimming competition, while in the other men's final, Michael Gross of West Germany upset world record-holder Rowdy Gaines of Winter Haven, Fla., in the 200 freestyle.

Caulkins, winner of a record 39 individual titles in U.S. championship meets since 1977, never challenged Schneider. She held second place until the freestyle, the final 100-meter leg of the four-stroke event, but Kathleen Nord of East Germany passed the Tennesseean to take the silver medal in 4:43.51. Caulkins got the bronze medal in 4:44.64.

Gross out-touched Gaines to win the 200 freestyle in 1:49.84. Gaines seemed to have the upper hand going into the final 25 meters, but the West German finished well to nip the American by .08 seconds. Jorg Woithe of East Germany was the bronze medalist, another .79 behind.

Birgit Meineke, who set a meet record of 55.34 seconds in her preliminary race Sunday morning, won the women's 100 freestyle gold medal with a time of 55.79 in the final.

Meineke, 18, edged silver medalist Annemarie Verstappen of The Netherlands by .08, while Jill Sterkel of Hacienda Heights. Calif., captured the bronze in 56.27.

The morning preliminaries were marred by a protest by the United States and Sweden after Rich Saeger of Mission Viejo, Calif., an 18-year-old newcomer to international swimming, and Pelle Holmertz of Sweden stopped just after the start of a 200-meter freestyle heat.

They claimed there was a malfunction in the starting horn, but the protest was disallowed by the International Swimming Federation.

"We feel that neither Rich Saeger, Pelle Holmertz nor the other athletes in the heat in question were given a fair opportunity to qualify for the finals," said Ray Essick, executive director of the U.S. Swimming Federation.

Essick said there had been 'considerable evidence of a mechanical malfunction,' but the protest committee said Saeger and Holmertz, who both finished the race more than 10 seconds slower than they normally swim, should not have stopped.

Two-timer Waltrip hero at Talladega

Midlander Bobby Hillin Jr. finishes in top 20 again

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — "I was going to be a hero or you-know-what," Darrell Waltrip said of the strategy that brought him his second straight victory at the Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Waltrip picked up a $58,770 paycheck by holding off a charging Buddy Baker at the finish Sunday of the 14th Talladega 500 NASCAR Grand National stock car race.

He had won the Winston 500 here May 2 and with his three-foot victory Sunday became the first driver to win two Talladega 500s. Waltrip also won in 1979. There have been 12 other one-time winners.

Bobby Hillin Jr. of Midland finished 19 in the 40-car field after starting in 22 position. It was the third time in his five races this summer that the Midland High Senior has finished in the top 20.

With Baker and Richard Petty dogging him, Waltrip said he decided that if he was leading at the third turn on the last lap, he could win.

With two such veterans on his trail, he said, "You have to cinch your belt up, put a smile on your face and go on."

Baker tried to slingshot on the final stretch but could not pull it off.

"I thought I could take Darrell," he said. "I moved to the outside and when I did, the car broke traction and slipped a bit. I couldn't gather it back up in time. It was a hard race, but a fun one."

Petty, after one of his strongest showings in weeks, said he was where he wanted to be but that Baker "never pulled out. The man running in second place has to make the move first, but he just waited too late. For us to run this good at Talladega is like winning."

Baker got $34,350 and Petty $26,975 for his third-place finish.

Seven other drivers, Cale Yarborough, Terry Labonte, Bill Elliott, Tim Richmond, Morgan Shepherd, Ricky Rudd and Bobby Allison, were in the lead lap to give the 2.66-mile, high-banked oval one of its strongest finishing fields ever.

Although the lead changed 39 times among 11 drivers, Waltrip showed he was the one to beat, riding on the point on 108 of the 188 laps.

"I never drove a car anywhere that ran the way that car ran, and I'm glad I was in it when it did," he said.

Allison was a hard luck-driver. Early on, he lost a windshield and then had to make an unscheduled stop to change a bad tire but still was in the lead lap with the final miles looming. However, with only five laps left, he had to coast in for gas and lost his chance.

The pole winner, Geoff Bodine, finished 15th, three laps back, after tire and windshield troubles.

Waltrip, winner of seven races this year, said, "Everything is working good. The team is functioning well. We've got our heads together."

Lietzke finds marriage much better than golf

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — While he was in the process of winning the Canadian Open, Bruce Lietzke was thinking of retiring from golf.

"I had many thoughts, and my thoughts were about retirement," Lietzke said after he'd nursed a diminishing lead into a two-stroke victory in this national championship.

"I don't enjoy playing under the pressure I was under," he said.

"I really doubt that I will play more than three or four more years on the PGA Tour," said Lietzke, one of the game's most successful players. He now has won nine tournaments, including two Canadian Opens, and has won at least once in each of the last six seasons.

The latest victory, secured on a final round of 73 Sunday and a 277 total, seven shots under par on the Glen Abbey Golf Club course, was worth $76,500 from the total purse of $425,000 and pushed Lietzke's season's earnings to $206,303.

But, at age 31, he's thinking of quitting the game.

"My enthusiam for golf has dwindled," he said. "I have found something much better than golf — being married," said Lietzke, who wed last year.

"We want to have a family. And I want to be a better father than a golfer.

"So I don't think you'll see Bruce Lietzke out here after three or four more years.

"I admire people like John Havlicek, who retire when they're in or near their prime. And you see other people, Muhammad Ali, baseball, football players, who hang on too long. You can see they don't enjoy it just by looking at them.

"Once, I used to love being under intense pressure on the golf course. I don't know if I've grown tired of that pressure, but it doesn't thrill me as it once did. And if the thrill is gone, then it's time to look for greener pastures.

"I don't think I'll play really competitive golf much past 1986.

"I know it may sound strange, and I may have to eat these words in the near future. I'm still very young. But my enthusiasm for golf has dwindled. It may be time to go on to something else."

At the moment, however, he has reclaimed a position among the game's top players and ranks eighth on the year's money-winning list. He now has won $1.3 million in eight years as a touring pro.

He had to work hard for his latest victory, despite holding a five-shot lead with seven holes to play.

"I wanted to make it a a runaway, but I don't have the killer instinct," he said. "I don't quite have the mental toughness to break away."

Instead, he began to back off, with the lead dropping to two strokes with four holes to play.

He turned it around, however, with a brilliant approach shot that set up a tap-in birdie on the 16th which effectively sealed the victory.

"At that point," said Hal Sutton, who eventually claimed second place, "I discarded any thought of winning."

The rookie pro closed with a round of par-71 and had a 279 total. Veteran Charles Coody, with a last-round 67, and Tommy Valentine, with a 74, tied for third at 280.

The group at 281 included Lou Graham, Johnny Miller, Nick Faldo of England, Andy Bean, Vance Heafner and Larry Nelson, who will defend his PGA title in Tulsa, Okla., this weekend.

Unconscious Daniel wins LPGA Classic

DENVER (AP) — Rifling her approach shots close to the pin and rapping home 10 birdie putts, Beth Daniel appeared "unconscious" — the term golfers apply to one who plays both effortlessly and flawlessly.

But after her 2-stroke victory Sunday in the $200,000 Columbia Savings LPGA Classic, Daniel made it clear it wasn't just a Sunday strol for her.

She talked of a 3½-foot downhill putt for bogey on the 17th hole as the "biggest putt of the tournament."

Daniel, en route to a sizzling -under-par 64 in the final round and a $30,000 payoff, insisted the outcome might have hinged on 17.

Leading Patty Sheehan by 3 shots, Daniel knocked her drive into a fairway bunker on the par-4 17th. Blocked by a tree on her second shot, she attempted to hook the ball and wound up on a bare spot off the green. Her chip shot was only adequate, her first putt stopped 3½ feet away, and she was in jeopardy of a double bogey and a possible 2-shot swing because Sheehan managed a par.

"If I missed, there would have been only a 1-shot difference, and anything can happen on 18," said Daniel.

But she sank the putt, then hit her approach on 18 within 7 feet, ensuring a par and wrapping up her second title on the Columbine Country Club course in three years.

Wielding a hot putter, Daniel birdied six of the first eight holes moving past Sally Little, the leader after each of the first three rounds, and recording a 6-under 30 on the front side.

She had four more birdies on the back, but bogeys at No. 11 and 17 forced her to settle for tying both the single-round tournament scoring record and the 72-hole record of 12-under-par 276, which she herself set in 1980.

Little, normally a strong final-round performer, had fallen out of the lead with a double bogey on the fourth hole.

Midland rained on

The San Antonio Dodgers scored two runs in the first inning and made it hold up for a 2-0 Texas League baseball victory over the Arkansas Travelers.

In other Texas League action Sunday night, Tulsa swept a doubleheader from Amarillo, 7-3 and 6-0. Midland's scheduled doubleheader at Jackson was postponed because of rain.

All Texas League teams will be idle tonight for interleague travel.

Lemmie Miller started the scoring for San Antonio with a game-opening homer and later in the inning Ed Amelung singled home Tom Beyers to complete the scoring.

Steve Beuchele had two hits in three plate appearances and drove in three runs as the Tulsa Drillers defeated the Amarillo Gold Sox, 7-3, in the first game of a doubleheader.

Dave Stockstill was 2-for-3 and drove in two runs for the Drillers.

George Hinshaw had a two-run homer for Amarillo in the fifth inning. It was his 15th homer of the season.

The winning pitcher was Al Lachowicz, 9-7. The loser was Joe Plesac, 0-1.

Dan Murphy drove in a run and had two hits in three trips to the plate as the Drillers completed the doubleheader sweep with a 6-0 victory in the second game.

Pat Casey had two of Amarillo's seven hits.

Oilers' Campbell puzzles newsmen says he's "just like Tanya Tucker"

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Houston Oiler running back Earl Campbell lost his rushing title and his favorite blocking back last season and endured questions about his ability and rumors of being traded.

It was a season of discontent for the former Heisman Trophy winner and three-time National Football League rushing champion.

But he survived the slings and arrows of a 7-9 season and appears ready to reclaim his position atop the NFL rushing statistics — and doing it for the Houston Oilers.

"I'm just like Tanya Tucker," Campbell said to a puzzled group of newsmen. "I'd walk across hell and half of Texas just to hear Willie Nelson sing his song."

The line from the country-and-western singer's recording was Campbell's way of saying he likes Texas and country music and wants to play football in his home state.

Rumors last season had Campbell going to the Denver Broncos, and Campbell said he was concerned.

"I was wondering how I would be able to breathe in Denver," Campbell said. "But then I decided I am a grown man and should be able to handle those things so I didn't worry about it anymore."

Campbell adopted a no-worry posture throughout the off-season and it has carried over into training camp, allowing him to sift through last season's problems and plan for a better 1982 season.

After winning the NFL rushing title three straight years, Campbell gained "only" 1,376 yards and scored a career-low 10 touchdowns last season. He caught 36 passes, the most of his career, but averaged only 4.3 yards per catch.

"When you have the type of season we had, they start blaming things on people," Campbell said. "They blamed a lot on me and they blamed a lot on 'Snake' (Ken Stabler). But ... we are going to put last year in the bag and head on down into the '80s."

Campbell confirmed what was rumored last season — that he had communication problems with starting running back Rob Carpenter, who replaced Tim Wilson at the start of last season.

Campbell is having to adjust to Adger Armstrong this season, with Carpenter traded to the New York Giants and Wilson shifted to tight end.

"It's not that hard to do when you have someone you can communicate with," Campbell said. "Rob wasn't a talker that much but he helped me when he could. I'm glad we're making the adjustment in training camp. Adger can get used to me and I can get used to Adger."

Campbell says he's also getting used to catching passes.

LA sweeps Atlanta for four

While Hank Aaron was having his day in Cooperstown, N.Y., Dusty Baker was having his in Atlanta.

"That's sort of my tribute to him on the day he was inducted into the Hall of Fame," Baker said after hitting two home runs in Aaron's old stomping ground at Atlanta Stadium to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 9-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves Sunday.

Ironically, Baker's game-winning blast in the seventh inning almost landed on a sign commemorating the spot where Aaron hit his 715th homer in 1974 to break Babe Ruth's record.

"I wasn't trying to hit a home run, but it's funny I almost hit his sign," Baker said. "Hank's a close friend and he was like my father figure when I was with the Braves."

The Dodger victory, by the way, completed a four-game sweep of the Braves and put Los Angeles within shooting range of the National League West leader, 6½ games behind in third place. It left San Diego six games back in second after the Padres beat Cincinnati 8-6.

"I liked what I saw in the four games here, the hustle, the togetherness," said Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda.

Asked if he believed the Braves might now be hearing footsteps, Lasorda replied, "Let's hope so. I think they feel a little bit different now, but we have a slogan: 'What you did yesterday don't mean a thing today.'"

In other NL action, the Montreal Expos trimmed the St. Louis Cardinals 5-4, the Chicago Cubs whipped the Philadelphia Phillies 7-2, the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the New York Mets 5-4 in 10 innings and the San Francisco Giants topped the Houston Astros 4-2 in 10 innings.

Baker's seventh-inning shot off Carlos Diaz, 2-1, gave the Dodgers a 5-4 lead and Pedro Guerrero immediately followed with another homer to provide Los Angeles with a two-run cushion.

Baker came back with his second homer of the game and his 20th of the season in the eighth, a two-run shot that followed Ken Landreaux's RBI single. The victory went to Dave Stewart, 6-6, who worked the final four innings without yielding a run.

Padres 8, Reds 6

Terry Kennedy cracked three hits and Sixto Lezcano doubled home two runs, highlighting an early scoring spree that carried San Diego over Cincinnati. The Padres scored seven runs in the first three innings off Charlie Leibrandt, 3-7, and coasted to their third straight victory.

John Curtis, 7-6, pitched 51-3 innings for the victory and Luis DeLeon posted his 10th save for the Padres after coming into the game with a no-out, bases-loaded situation in the ninth and giving up three runs, two on an error by third baseman Luis Salazar.

"We're bouncing back," said San Diego Manager Dick Williams, whose team won its third straight game after losing four in a row at Atlanta. "We played all right — a little ragged at the end, but good enough."

Expos 5, Cardinals 4

Al Oliver capped a three-run rally in the seventh inning with a run-scoring single as Montreal came from behind to beat St. Louis.

The Expos trailed 4-2, but tied it on a two-run triple by Jerry White. One out later, Oliver delivered his big single off reliever Jeff Lahti, 2-2.

The Cardinals had gone ahead 4-2 in the sixth on Ozzie Smith's sacrifice fly.

Reliever Jeff Reardon, 4-1, earned the victory but needed help from Woodie Fryman, who pitched the final 12-3 innings for his seventh save before a crowd of 51,353. The four-game series in Montreal drew 190,472, a record for Olympic Stadium.

"No question, it was one of my bigger RBIs this season," said Oliver, who has knocked in 69 runs. "It feels great to take three of four from the Cardinals because obviously they're one of the teams we have to beat."

Cubs 7, Phillies 2

Leon Durham's two-run homer highlighted a three-run first and Chicago went on to beat Philadelphia and snap an eight-game losing streak before a crowd of 57,652 at Veterans Stadium.

Chicago starter Dickie Noles, 7-9, worked 72-3 innings and, with the help of reliever Lee Smith, ended Philadelphia's four-game winning streak. Smith relieved in the eighth after Philadelphia scored twice.

The victory was Noles' first over the Phillies in two starts since being traded by Philadelphia to Chicago last December.

Durham's homer off Dick Ruthven, 8-9, provided the Phillies with a 3-0 lead in the first and gave the Cubs all the runs they actually needed.

Pirates 4, Mets 3

Bill Madlock's tie-breaking home run with two out in the 10th inning lifted Pittsburgh over New York.

Madlock's 11th homer of the season came off reliever Terry Leach, 1-1, and made a winner of Kent Tekulve, 7-5, who pitched 11-3 innings. Rod Scurry got the last two outs for the Pirates, gaining his eighth save.

The Pirates had tied the score 3-3 with two runs in the seventh. One run scored on Dale Berra's second double of the game and another on an RBI single by pinch-hitter Willie Stargell.

Giants 4, Astros 2

Jack Clark hit his 20th home run of the season, a two-run shot in the 10th inning, to lift San Francisco over Houston.

Joe Morgan drew a walk from loser Frank LaCorte, 0-4, to lead off the 10th. Milt May sacrificed Morgan to third and Clark followed with his homer, making a winner of Greg Minton, 7-4.

Houston's Nolan Ryan allowed five hits, walked four and struck out six in nine innings to move within six strikeouts of second-place Gaylord Perry on the all-time list. Ryan has 3,407 strikeouts.

AL Roundup

Hostetler pounds Yankees

Center fielder Ron LeFlore returned to action and had a head in Chicago's 4-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox. Luckily for the White Sox, he had a hand in it, too.

After sitting out two weeks because of (1) a suspension for reporting late to the ballpark and (2) his wife's illness, LeFlore was back in the starting lineup Sunday and made his presence felt.

"I contributed," he said after driving in two runs with a double and a sacrifice fly in a 4-2 victory over the Red Sox.

But what had the crowd in Chicago's Comiskey Park buzzing was ohe ball Boston's Gary Allenson hit in the sixth inning which appeared to bounce off LeFlore's head and roll to the wall as Allenson circled the bases on the four-base error.

"See, you guys don't even know what happened," LeFlore explained. "It didn't bounce off my head, it bounced off the bill of my cap. I drifted back when I should have run. When I stuck my glove up, I lost it in the sun."

"I felt comfortable at the plate," said LeFlore, whose last start was July 17. "I was shaky on defense. It's not easy. It's very difficult to play out there for the first time in a couple of weeks.

"I've been the center of attention around here for a couple of weeks, and with that play I'll probably wind up on 'This Week in Baseball's' blooper plays."

Rangers 4, Yankees 2

Rookie Dave Hostetler drove in all the Texas runs with a solo homer in the fourth inning and a tie-breaking three-run shot in the sixth while Rick Honeycutt and Jon Matlack held the Yankees to nine hits. Matlack, demoted to the bullpen just after the All-Star break, earned his first save in 10 relief appearances although he was nicked for a run in the ninth before retiring Willie Randolph on a fly ball with the bases loaded.

Royals 4, Orioles 2

Lee May's pinch single triggered a four-run eighth-inning rally that enabled Kansas City to sweep a four-game series. Baltimore's Jim Palmer took a 2-0 lead into the eighth but was relieved by Tippy Martinez after Amos Otis singled and Hal McRae doubled. May, a former Oriole, singled Otis home and Jerry Martin followed with a single that tied the game, with pinch runner Greg Pryor taking third.

Tim Stoddard relieved Martinez and Frank White greeted him with a sacrifice fly that put the Royals on top and Steve Hammond's pinch single scored another run as the Orioles, who had a seven-game winning streak when this series began, lost their fourth in a row and the ninth in their last 10 games in Royals Stadium, where they are 19-36 since it opened in 1973.

Indians 4-2, Brewers 1-7

Don Money drove in three runs with a double and single and Gorman Thomas added a two-run single as Milwaukee broke out of a hitting slump in the nightcap. The Brewers had dropped eight of their previous 13 games and had scored only 11 runs in the last five. The Indians won the first game as Ed Whitson and Dan Spillner combined on a four-hitter and Rick Manning rapped a two-run double. Jim Slaton came out of the bullpen to start the second game for Milwaukee and scatter seven hits over seven innings. The split enabled Milwaukee to take a one-game lead in the AL East over the Red Sox.

Angels 9, Mariners 4

Fred Lynn drove in four runs with a single and double and Doug DeCinces slammed a three-run homer California maintained its one-game lead over Kansas City in the West Division. The Angels scored five runs in the first inning against Rich Bordi, making his first major league start, on consecutive singles by Rob Wilfong, Reggie Jackson, Don Baylor and Lynn and DeCinces' 15th homer. Lynn rapped a three-run double in the second.

Tigers 8, Blue Jays 5

Lou Whitaker highlighted a 17-hit attack with a three-run homer and Lance Parrish hit a solo shot as Detroit snapped a four-game losing streak. Winning pitcher Jack Morris allowed 10 hits in 82-3 innings, including solo homers by Hosken Powell, Ernie Whitt and Willie Upshaw. Morris has yielded 25 home runs this season.

Twins 8, A's 7

Home runs by Tom Brunansky and Gary Ward in the seventh inning and Gary Gaetti in the ninth helped Minnesota end a five-game losing streak. Brunansky's two-run homer and Ward's solo shot came off Dave Beard after the A's scored four times in the sixth for a 4-3 lead. Gaetti hit a two-run homer off Tom Underwood in the ninth for the decisive runs, offsetting a two-run shot by Oakland's Tony Armas in the bottom of the ninth off Ron Davis.

NASA considers orbiting laboratory

By HOWARD BENEDICT

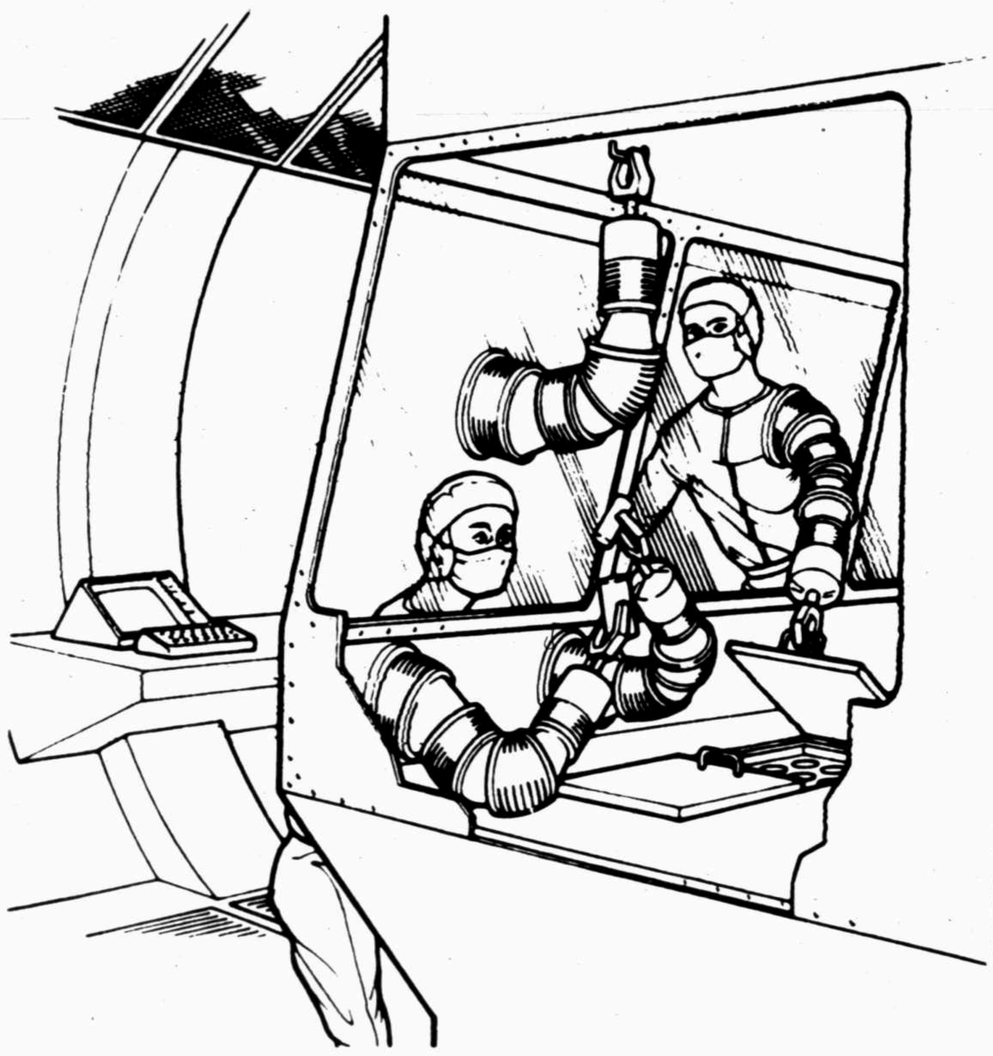

WASHINGTON (AP) — The space agency, hoping to collect matter from Mars and other distant worlds by the end of the century, is plotting how to stop potentially dangerous extra-terrestrial microbes from contaminating the Earth.

One possibility: Depositing the alien material in an orbiting laboratory where it would be examined by a team of biological specialists. They would certify it as safe for transport to Earth or rocket it back into deep space if it posed a threat.

There is precedent for preventing possible planetary plague. The first three American moon-landing crews and their lunar booties were quarantined in an airtight facility in Houston for periods up to two weeks until analysis proved the rocks and dust were biologically safe.

When the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in 1978 addressed the problem of how to handle samples from deeper space, it considered three options: Sterilize the material with extreme heat while in transit to Earth; hold it under quarantine in a remote maximum containment facility on Earth, or perform the hazard analysis in an orbiting lab before it is introduced to the terrestrial biosphere.

Agency experts were familiar with the advantages and disadvantages of the first two, but little was known about the orbiting lab option. So NASA and the American Society for Engineering Education selected a group of 20 specialists to conduct an engineering design study.

AP Laserphoto

This artist's concept shows scientists in an Orbiting Quarantine Facility analyzing Martian soil samples in a sterile container. Stainless steel hand manipulaters prevent contamination of both scientists and samples. NASA is considering such a facility for examining material collected from Mars and other distant worlds as a means of preventing deadly microbes from contaminating earth.

EXPLAINED NASA'S Donald L. DeVincenzi, project co-director: "The purpose of the design study was to examine for the first time the feasibility of constructing a unique space-based laboratory — one dedicated, at least initially, to the isolation and analysis of potentially hazardous samples returned from Mars.

"It does not argue that analysis of Mars samples should be done in space," he said. "Rather, it defines the characteristics of an orbiting laboratory should this be an option for active consideration."

The result of that study has just been released in a 134-page report titled: "Orbiting Quarantine Facility: The Antaeus Report."

In Greek mythology, Antaeus was a giant who forced passing strangers to wrestle with him and killed them when he won. The Earth was his source of superhuman power and as long as he could touch the ground he was invincible. Hercules defeated Antaeus by holding him in the air and strangling him.

"Like Antaeus, an organism from space might thrive on contact with the terrestrial biosphere," said DeVincenzi. "By keeping the pathogen contained and distant, the proposed Orbiting Quarantine Facility would safeguard the Earth from possible contamination."

A pathogen is a cause of disease, such as bacterium or virus.

THE STUDY concludes that the orbiting facility is feasible and would "offer a strong margin of protection against the possibility that a Mars sample would contain hazardous agents. It also offers a powerful hedge against the unknown, and against the fears that could easily develop if organisms showing signs of a pathogenicity were detected in a sample undergoing study in a laboratory on Earth.

"With such a sample held in orbit, its disposition could be determined on the basis of analysis rather than emotion," the report said. "With space as a buffer between such organisms and the terrestrial biosphere, the risk of terrestrial contamination is far lower."

The study envisions the lab as a giant pinwheel, with four cylindrical modules connected spoke-fashion to a central docking module. The modules would be for the lab itself, crew habitation, power and logistics. There would be five crew members: commander, medical doctor, geobiologist, biochemist and general biologist.

The structure would be transported up in sections by the space shuttle fleet and assembled about 300 miles above the globe.

In the laboratory module, the scientists would remotely examine the samples, using stainless steel hand manipulators extending into a sterile container. Instruments would include scanning electron microscopes, cameras, spectrophotometers, centrifuge and vacuum devices and refrigerators.

Personnel entering or leaving the lab would pass through a decontamination chamber, where they would disrobe and take an air shower. All equipment and materials leaving the lab would be sterilized and packaged in leak-proof containers.

THE CREW would have four options after examining samples: unqualified release for Earth study; sterilization before release to Earth laboratories; indefinite retention in orbit for prolonged study; and, if there is a hazard, boosting to a higher orbit or far into space.

In addition to collecting material from Mars, NASA also hopes within a few years to dispatch unmanned craft to pick up samples from asteroids and comets to help scientists learn the origin of the solar system.

When not being used to analyze alien matter, the orbiting facility could serve as a laboratory for scientific programs. "The superior containment afforded by an OQF could make it attractive as a site for the pursuit of currently prohibited DNA research or other research on hazardous systems," the report said.

Coast Guard leasing lighthouses to preserve them

By JANE ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Coast Guard has rediscovered the old idea of lighthouse keepers as a last resort in its effort to preserve the nation's 450 unmanned lighthouses.

To prevent the nautical landmarks from deteriorating beyond repair, the Coast Guard is asking district commanders to consider leasing them to agencies and individuals.

"The romance of the lighthouse keeper has faded as the lights have become automated, but we really have to preserve the lighthouses for our kids and their kids," said Rear Admiral Richard A. Bauman.

Bauman, chief of the Office of Navigation, said the picturesque beacons are irreplaceable landmarks important to the country's maritime history and architectural heritage.

So far, the Coast Guard has leased nine lighthouses to historical societies and other agencies, five lighthouses to states and about 14 lighthouses, mostly in New England, to individuals.

"I DON'T want to give anybody a false sense of hope that they may wind up living in a lighthouse just by writing to the Coast Guard," said Lt. Walter Johnson, who oversees lighthouses.

Even so, Sterling Bemis successfully persuaded the Coast Guard to lease him the spectacular nine-story Chicago Light, which has a view of the Chicago skyline and is accessible only by boat. He was married in it.

People lease the quarters as museums, youth hostels, bed-and-breakfast inns and homes. They heat the buildings, take care of the grounds, and discourage vandalism just by their presence.

"We're not looking for people to occupy all the lighthouses, and we do not employ people other than Coast Guard personnel as lighthouse keepers, but we have been encouraging district commanders to look at the possibility of leasing them," Johnson said.

When possible, the Coast Guard uses its lighthouses as barracks for its personnel, but many lighthouses are in remote places or so far offshore that living in them is impractical.

From time to time, when a Coast Guard ship that tends buoys has a lull in its schedule, the crew is assigned to tie up to a lighthouse and do major repairs. They take "before" and "after" photographs.

AMONG THE refurbished lighthouses are Peck's Ledge Lighthouse on Long Island, Culebrita Lighthouse on the island of Culebra off Puerto Rico and Ashtabula Harbor Lighthouse in Ashtabula, Ohio.

The Coast Guard has always had the authority to lease lighthouses, but it's an alternative Johnson said the service has been forced to resurrect because of the increasingly shabby appearance of many lighthouses.

"I wish they could ban the selling of black spray paint within 100 miles of a white lighthouse because kids use the paint to spray their initials on the outside," Bauman said.

The Coast Guard does not make much money by leasing the lighthouses, but in 1982 it has had no money at all to spend on maintaining them, much less restoring them.

Johnson said many people who love lighthouses complain to the Coast Guard when they see one falling into disrepair.

"In every lighthouse, the light and the fog signal are in tiptop shape, but in many of them, the buildings and the tower are falling down," Bauman said.

IN THE leased lighthouses, the Coast Guard maintains the light and fog signal at the top of the structure.

Bauman, who has a photograph in his office of Block Island Southeast Lighthouse on Block Island, R.I., admired lighthouses at the seashore when he was a youngster in Fitchburg, Mass.

The country's most photographed lighthouse is said to be Portland Head Lighthouse on Maine's rockbound coast. Bauman said the most romantic is Minot's Lighthouse in Boston with a sequence of one, four and three flashes, symbolizing "I Love You."

The worst-looking lighthouse Bauman ever saw was a red-painted, box-like building nicknamed "Big Red" in Holland, Mich.

"You can't believe the architecture. Nobody would want to keep it except a lighthouse lover. We were tickled when the city of Holland was willing to take it over. We put a roof on it, painted it bright red and I handed over the key to the light," Bauman said.

Urban League to try to form coalition with Hispanics

By RON HARRIS
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Faced with dwindling financial resources and an administration it sees as unfavorble to its programs, the National Urban League is trying to strengthen its hand in the upcoming year by forging coalitions with the nation's growing Hispanic population.

Part of the evidence is the constant references to the problems of "blacks and browns" in the flowing rhetoric and speeches during this year's annual conference at the Convention Center here.

Urban League national director John E. Jacob says the organization has for some time been sensitive to the problems of Hispanics, but admits that this year it is trying much harder to develop closer ties with that community.

"Minority people must begin to do things that increase their strength," he said. "One of the things that this current situation has done is integrate all of us through poverty. Race and class are becoming less important."

Last year, Jacob said, the organization diverted funds to several cities in the West and Southwest with sizeable Hispanic populations — like San Diego and San Antonio — in which Urban League affiliates were charged with forming bonds with Hispanic organizations around various issues, particularly those of education, housing, employment and the criminal-justice system.

The San Diego Urban League, for example, maintains an office in the heavily Hispanic city of San Ysidro, which is staffed with Mexican-Americans. And in Los Angeles, The Mexican American Legal Defense Fund and the Urban League came together this year to lobby for extension of the Voting Rights Act.

"In the past, both communities have regretfully been so preoccupied with their own day-to-day survival that there has been a tendency to be narrow in our perspectives and attitudes toward each other," said John Mack, director of the Los Angeles Urban League. "We hope to improve on that."

Forging those coalitions, however, will be touchy. Blacks and Hispanics have clashed in the past, particularly in the 1960s during the War on Poverty under President Johnson when "some members on both sides were manipulated into fighting over crumbs instead of looking at the larger picture," Jacob said.

"The most realistic way for us to work together I believe is on a case-by-case basis, dealing with specific issues that we both agree on, such as education, employment and health services," he said. "It is unrealistic to think we will have one grand coalition and agree on everything.

"Immigration issue is a touchy one," Jacob said. "High unemployment in black communities and the constant flow of Mexicans across the border clearly creates tensions among some brothers and sisters who accurately or inaccurately see them taking jobs. If the two communities are not careful and thoughtful, it could pose some problems.

"On things that we have different agendas, we can at least declare a truce and agree to disagree."

F-14 to be Navy's premier jet, Times says

NEW YORK (AP) — Defense Department officials have decided to make the Grumman F-14 Tomcat the Navy's premier fighter, a move which will mean $8.4 billion for the Grumman Aerospace Corp., the New York Times reported today.

The Times quoted Pentagon and industry officials as saying a final decision on an attack bomber, which could bring Grumman an additional $4 billion, has not yet been made.

Grumman, of Bethpage, N.Y., will construct 144 of the F-14s in the fiscal years 1984 through 1988 if Congress approves each of the administration's annual aircraft requests, the Times said.

Congress was almost certain to approve the purchase of 24 F-14s for fiscal 1983, the newspaper reported.

Grumman and McDonnell Douglas of St.Louis are still competing for the bomber contract, the Times said. The Defense Department has not decided if it will use the Grumman A-6 Intruders exclusively or in combination with the McDonnell Douglas F-18 Hornets, the Times said.

Unidentified officials quoted in the newspaper said the Defense Resources Board, the Pentagon's top executive committee, accepted the recommendation of Navy Secretary John Lehman in choosing the F-14 Tomcat.

The purchasing decisions came during a review of the Navy's five-year plan to spend more than $30 billion on aircraft, the Times said. The review was reported ordered by the Defense Resources Board as it prepared the 1984 military budget.

In another military development, an audience of military and government officials gathered in Hawthorne, Calif., on Sunday to see Northrop Corp.'s $9 million Tigershark, the first fighter jet financed solely by private funds.

The tactical defense fighter was unveiled in a ceremony at the Northrop plant. A debut test flight is planned for September at Edwards Air Force Base.

The jet, also called the F-5G, carries two 20mm guns and is designed to carry up to six Sidewinder missiles on air-to-air missions. It can carry more than 6,500 pounds of ammunition, Northrop says.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS
Sealed proposals, addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for Street Sweeping Services will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 2:30 p.m. on the 17th day of August, 1982 and publicly opened and read aloud at 3:00 p.m. on the same day.
Any bid received after closing time as stated above will be returned unopened.
Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Project No. 217."
Complete copies of specifications, and contract documents may be examined and/or obtained at the office of the Public Works Director, City Hall, Midland, Texas.
A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid (on an annual basis) and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance and payment bonds. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.
The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalitites, and to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, to award this bid by items and to accept what in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.

04 Card of Thanks

The members of the Roe Etta Bedford Eaton, Willie Saddler, and Annie Bennett familes wish to express their deepest heartfelt thanks. To all of their friends for all the acts of kindness, through cards, visits, food and words of concern and consolation given us during this try time. It made the burden of sorrow just a little lighter to know so many cared. Thanks again for everything.

OS Programmer

What can you contribute to our Computer Center in Midland?

ARCO Oil and Gas Company can benefit from your technical resourcefulness in installing and maintaining a large-scale IBM system at our Permian District's Computer Center. You'll be highly visible...and essential -- and we'll offer career growth prospects to match--as your significant contributions help provide vital DP support to our domestic oil and gas exploration/production.

Specifically, you'll maintain an IBM 4341, as well as coordinate the installation of all computer hardware in the district. You will also provide support and consultation to a large user community, and will be responsible for performance measurement and planning, and operator training.

Your excellent oral and written communication skills will serve you well when working closely with several of our Plano, Texas DP groups. On occasion, you'll perform special studies and write up applications.

You must have a degree in Computer Science or the equivalent. Experience with VM and MVS operating systems, CMS, TSO, JCL, keymaster, CICS , and VTAM software, as well as 4300 configurations, highly desired. Two years experience as an operating system. programmer preferred.
