Iraq disputes success of Iranian invasion

By The Associated Press

Iraq claimed today that its forces drove invading Iranian troops back across the border after a counterattack that halted an Iranian offensive apparently aimed at the major Iraqi oil port of Basra.

But Iran, which invaded Iraq Tuesday night, said Iraq's "feeble counteroffensive" failed and the Iraqis retreated.

"The aggressors' perfidy boomeranged on them," an Iraqi communique said. "They retreated in failure across the border, pursued by blows and curses."

Tehran radio, quoting an Iranian military communique, said: "A feeble enemy counteroffensive was defeated this morning" and that the Iraqis lost at least 10 tanks. It said Iranian jets were bombing Iraqi positions.

Earlier Iranian broadcasts today said Iran's "Operation Ramadan" invasion forces had completed a 12-mile thrust into Iraq — Iraqi admitted a six-mile penetration — and were consolidating positions near Basra, Iraq's second largest city across the Shatt-al-Arab waterway. The communiques, monitored in London, said the Iranians were preparing to drive toward the Iraqi city of Tannumah, on the east bank of the waterway opposite Basra.

Iran's interior minister, Nategh Nouri, said in an interview with the Jomhuri Islami newspaper that Iran would fight Iraq until Iranian cities were safe from attacks and "as long as our rights are not met completely."

The interview, seen in Nicosia, Cyprus, apparently contradicted earlier promises to fight until Iran's fundamentalist Moslem armies toppled Iraq's regime and marched to Israeli-held Jerusalem.

While an estimated 200,000 Iranian and Iraqi troops fought what was said to be a bloody ground battle Wednesday in the southeastern corner of Iraq, Iran sent jets to attack Basra.

Iraq said its air force retaliated by bombing Kharg Island, Iran's vital Persian Gulf oil port, and three western Iranian cities where hundreds of casualties were reported. Iraqi communiques acknowledged losing four planes in the attack on Kharg Island.

Both sides claimed to have inflicted heavy enemy losses and taken hundreds of prisoners in the clash on a narrow strip of land between the Iraq-Iran frontier and the east bank of the Shatt-al-Arab opposite Basra, 75 miles north of the Persian Gulf.

The conflicting claims could not be independently verified because foreign reporters are not allowed into the war zone, but the combat clearly was large-scale.

U.S. intelligence sources in Washington estimated Iran sent 100,000 troops into Iraq in its drive to "liberate" its Moslem neighbor and topple President Saddam Hussein, and that Iraq had a force of equal size in the battle zone.

"It looks like this may be a blood bath," said one analyst, who asked not to be named.

Iran's invasion Tuesday, code-named for the Moslem holy month of Ramadan, escalated a 22-month-old war over rights to the Shatt-al-Arab. The waterway is Iraq's only shipping outlet to the Persian Gulf and its southern end forms part of the border between Arab Moslem Iraq and Persian Moslem Iran, two of the Middle East's oldest enemies.

Shultz appears headed for speedy confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP) — George P. Shultz is headed for swift confirmation as secretary of state after two days of Senate hearings that revealed differences of style and emphasis but no sharp change in direction for U.S. foreign policy.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee wound up its questioning of the 61-year-old economist on Wednesday and voted 17-0 to recommend that the full Senate confirm him. Senate leaders scheduled action for today.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the committee, urged the unusually quick confirmation vote, saying he felt "a sense of urgency about having a secretary of state" at a time of turmoil in the Middle East.

Alexander M. Haig Jr., who resigned the office in an unexplained policy dispute with the White House, left the State Department last week. His deputy, Walter Stoessel, is acting as secretary while the office is vacant.

In his final day of testimony, Shultz spelled out a policy on East-West relations that sounded less bellicose than some of Haig's pronouncements, but was no less harsh in its judgment of Soviet actions.

"I think we should make it clear that, depending on Soviet behavior and how they conduct themselves, we are prepared to have as constructive and beneficial a relationship as possible," he told the committee.

But he went on to say, in his soft-spoken manner, that the Soviet Union "is militarily powerful and has exhibited a willingness to use its military power with brutality."

"People see this and it frightens them," he said. "It has a certain bully-like quality about it.

"We should be realistic about what is going on. While not looking for confrontation, we should be firm." He said the United States should also "have the self-confidence to undertake negotiations when they are called for."

In sum, he said, the U.S. strategy toward Moscow "should be not a strategy of aggression, not a strategy of confrontation, but a strategy of confidence, strength and realism about what they are trying to do."

While Haig's sometimes dogmatic responses occasionally nettled lawmakers, Shultz' low-key testimony won friends even among senators sharply critical of the Reagan administration.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., one of the most liberal members of the committee, said he was "enthusiastic" about the nominee's "thoughtful and pragmatic" approach to issues.

In approximately 10 hours of questioning by the senators, Shultz expressed views on nuclear weapons, the Middle East, China and Latin America that often seemed similar to those of Haig, but less flamboyantly put and different in emphasis.

He said countering guerrilla and insurgent movements in Central America "is an important thing to do," but that long-run stability in the region depends on economic development.

Haig described resistance to leftist insurgents in El Salvador as a major element in a global struggle between East and West.

When Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., asked whether Shultz favors continuing sales of defensive arms to Taiwan as long as they are needed without a cut-off date, Shultz said, "Yes, sir, I do."

Haig, in one of his last acts as secretary, submitted alternative proposals to the White House for a new U.S.-China communique. One version would give assuranes that the United States eventually would terminate arms sales to Taiwan, as sought by the Chinese.

In the Middle East, Shultz urged strengthened ties with the Arab world while supporting the U.S. commitment to the security of Israel. He approved President Reagan's conditional decision to send U.S. troops to Lebanon to escort Palestine Liberation Forces out of Beirut. But when the subject came up again, he said, "We need to think very carefully about it."

Senate panel chairman, former Carter aide push for Shultz vote

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — The drive for confirmation of George Shultz as secretary of state, which culminates today in the Senate, has been much smoother than his backers expected.

The full Senate votes on the nomination today, with virtually no opposition being voiced by members of the chamber charged by the Constitution with giving or withholding consent on major presidential nominations.

"It went better than even I expected," said Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee which Wednesday voted 17-0 to recommend confirmation by the full Senate.

Percy became unofficial shepard of the nomination soon after President Reagan chose Shultz — introducing him to fellow senators and privately trying to calm any of their concerns.

"It certainly did go very smoothly," agreed Lloyd Cutler, the distinguished, white-haired Washington lawyer who served as Shultz's adviser. Cutler had been a top member of Jimmy Carter's White House staff.

Cutler was enlisted by Carter when the Democratic president was desperate to learn how to get things done in Washington — the same skills that had Republican Shultz at his door.

Percy credited the swift comittee vote on the second day of hearings to Shultz's background as commerce and treasury secretary, plus director of the Office of Management and Budget during Richard Nixon's White House years.

"Everything today is dominated by economics and that's a strong point in his background," Percy said in a chat following the committee vote.

The panel's scrutiny of Alexander Haig, the administration's first secretary of state, lasted five full days and ended in a divided vote.

Percy had tried to get the Senate to vote last night on the nomination, but at least one senator balked at suspending the chamber's rules, which require a 24 hour delay before votes are cast.

"With the situation in the world today, we need a secretary of state in place," Percy said in explaining the nomination's swift handling.

The panel's final day of questioning, which lasted about six hours, generally involved broad issues and never saw Shultz stumble into a conflict with administration policy.

"Clearly with the Soviet Union it is important that we resolve our differences as best we can," he told one senator.

As Sen. Thomas Dodd, D-Conn., put it, Shultz was effective "even when being evasive."

Police continue investigation of Live Oak shooting rampage

LIVE OAK, Texas (AP) — Police pondered today why a woman who lived alone and attended church almost daily would go on a shooting rampage that left one neighbor dead and four others wounded in their low-rent apartment.

Less than two hours after the Wednesday morning shootings, police said they arrested Joyce Ann Vanguilder, who was found with a broken leg, lying beside an interstate highway and babbling about shooting "snakes or rats."

Chuck Boltz, a boy of about 10, said the woman rushed into his family's home and began shooting at his parents while screaming, "You killed everybody and you're going to pay."

Miss Vanguilder, 42, was charged with one count of murder and four counts of attempted murder at about 11 p.m. Wednesday, said night Magistrate Quon Lew. He said he set bonds totalling $110,000.

She was hospitalized at Medical Center Hospital in San Antonio. Hospital spokesman Ralph Cortez said Miss Vanguilder suffered a broken left lower leg and multiple contusions and abrasions.

The dead woman was identified by the Bexar County medical examiners' office as Sue Bunderman, 32.

All of the victims had moved to this San Antonio suburb of about 8,000 people from the Lebanon, Pa., area about nine months ago looking for jobs, said Sterling J. Ditzler, who was wounded in the attack.

Three other young boys were inside the apartment where the shooting took place, but were not injured, police said.

Dozens of police officers from five agencies, including the San Antonio SWAT team, laid seige to the apartment complex for two hours late Wednesday morning until they were told a woman already was in custody.

Mayor Ralph Cullip said a construction crew found Miss Vanguilder lying on the side of IH-35, talking incoherently and saying she "did some shooting at some snakes and rats in her home."

He said the woman was not carrying a weapon when she was found near the highway, where she had apparently fallen or jumped from an embankment.

The mayor said the woman was known to own a .22-caliber pistol and a .25-caliber pistol. He said police had twice before investigated disturbances at the apartment complex involving the woman.

55 become Americans in citizenship ceremony

Fifty-five foreigners from nine lands pledged allegiance to the United States, denounced allegiance to their native countries, and instantaneously became U.S. citizens Wednesday in federal court in Midland.

"I feel great," said Kum Buzzell, a 27-year-old Korea native who was numbered among the 55. "I feel more comfortable now."

Carlos Reyes, 25, also apparently was feeling good about himself and his new citizenship. His former allegiance was to The Philippine Islands.

"We can vote," he said. "We can run for politics if we want to, which I have intentions for later on." He said that he's thinking about running for constable in Odessa.

Minutes earlier, Mrs. Buzzell, wife of Midland County Deputy Constable Hugh "Buzz" Buzzell, and Reyes, a representative for a fast-food restaurant chain, had listened to Midland's 318th State District Court Judge Barbara Culver, the naturalization's ceremonial speaker, tell of the United States and its "great experiment of democracy" and of voter apathy and responsibility.

"Sometimes it seems like the American people are worn out by all this voting," Judge Culver said. "They have forgotten how important it is to vote.

Excessive force alleged in suit against policemen

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A suit filed in federal court this morning alleges seven police officers used excessive force in the May 16 arrest of two Midland brothers whom the city and county attorney later refused to prosecute.

The suit, which seeks a jury trial and an unspecified amount of dollar damages, was filed by attorney Bob Evans on behalf of Marvel J.R. Garcia and Burt Rubio Garcia, both in their 20s.

They were arrested in Hogan Park the night of May 16 and charged with resisting arrest and consuming alcohol in a restricted area of the park. The charges subsequently were dropped for lack of evidence.

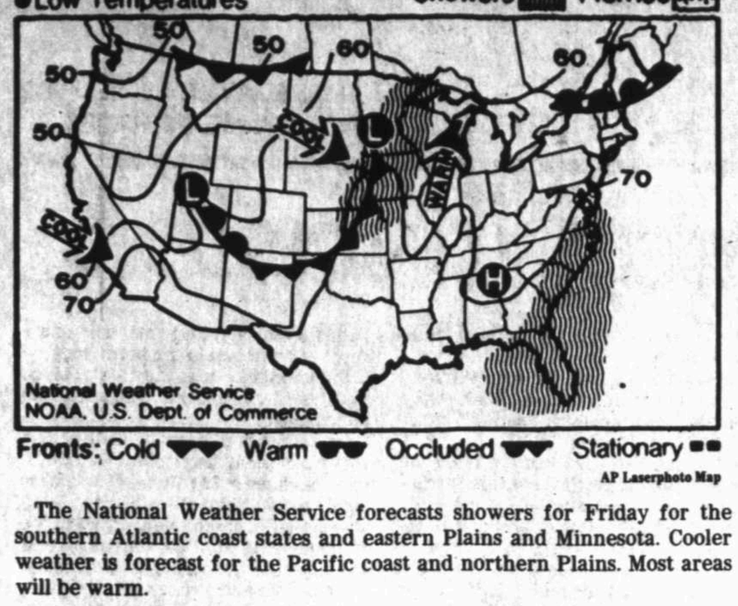

Named as defendants in the suit are Chief of Police Wayne Gideon, the City of Midland, and officers Tommy Wayne Holder, John A. Urby, Hoyt E. Fox, Theresa A.M. Gallager, Sgt. Jerry W. Morris, Sgt. H. Clint Lovejoy and former officer Francisco J. Gonzales.

Gonzales was fired June 3. Gideon said at the time, however, he was a newly hired officer serving a routine six-month probation period whose "performance (did) not meet our standards to become a permanent member (of the force)."

Friday's high expected near 100

Skies should be partly cloudy tonight as temperatures fall to near 70, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. However, temperatures should rise to near 100 degrees Friday.

It will be hot Friday but it also will be fair with winds maintaining tonight's southerly direction although increasing from 10-15 mph to 15-20 mph.

Wednesday's high of 94 was no match for the 1933 record high temperature of 107, a difference of 13 degrees. Although the overnight low was only five degrees warmer than the record low of 64, set in 1960.

Accident victim in serious condition

A Midland man injured in a westside car-pedestrian accident early Sunday morning was listed in serious condition today in the critical care unit of Midland Memorial Hospital.

Kenneth Wayne James, 20, of Route 6, Midland, underwent brain surgery following the accident, which occurred about 12:45 a.m. Sunday in the 4700 block of West Wadley Ave.

According to police, James apparently was standing near his parked car when it was hit by a 1981 Ford pickup truck driven by 25-year-old Cathy Renea Morris, 3503 Imperial Ave.

Ms. Morris was westbound on Wadley and also struck two other parked vehicles. She was charged with driving while intoxicated.

Without the vote, they have no voice in decision-making."

Judge Culver, whom the ceremony's presiding judge, U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton, had described as "one of the leading jurists in the state of Texas," noted that foreigners who go through the rigors of the naturalization process are an "inspiration to Americans who have forgotten the importance of voting."

"If only special and vested interests people vote," Judge Culver said, "then, of course, only that special and vested interests will be served."

Despite its imperfections, the country's judicial system "is something we can be proud of," she said. "It is not something that we invented in America and patented here. It is the best legal system in the world. Cumbersome, yes, time-consuming, yes."

"You are not here by the accident of birth, as I am," she said. "You are here by choice."

Though the judge noted that the American people have a "penchant for griping," she also acknowledged that they "are quick to rally around a cause" of national importance.

While the judge alluded to those "fundamental principles," including freedom of speech, worship and assembly, in America and to the people's rights to free public education and to privacy, she also cited duties of American citizenship.

"You have the duty to vote, the duty to serve on a jury and, oh yes, the duty to pay taxes."

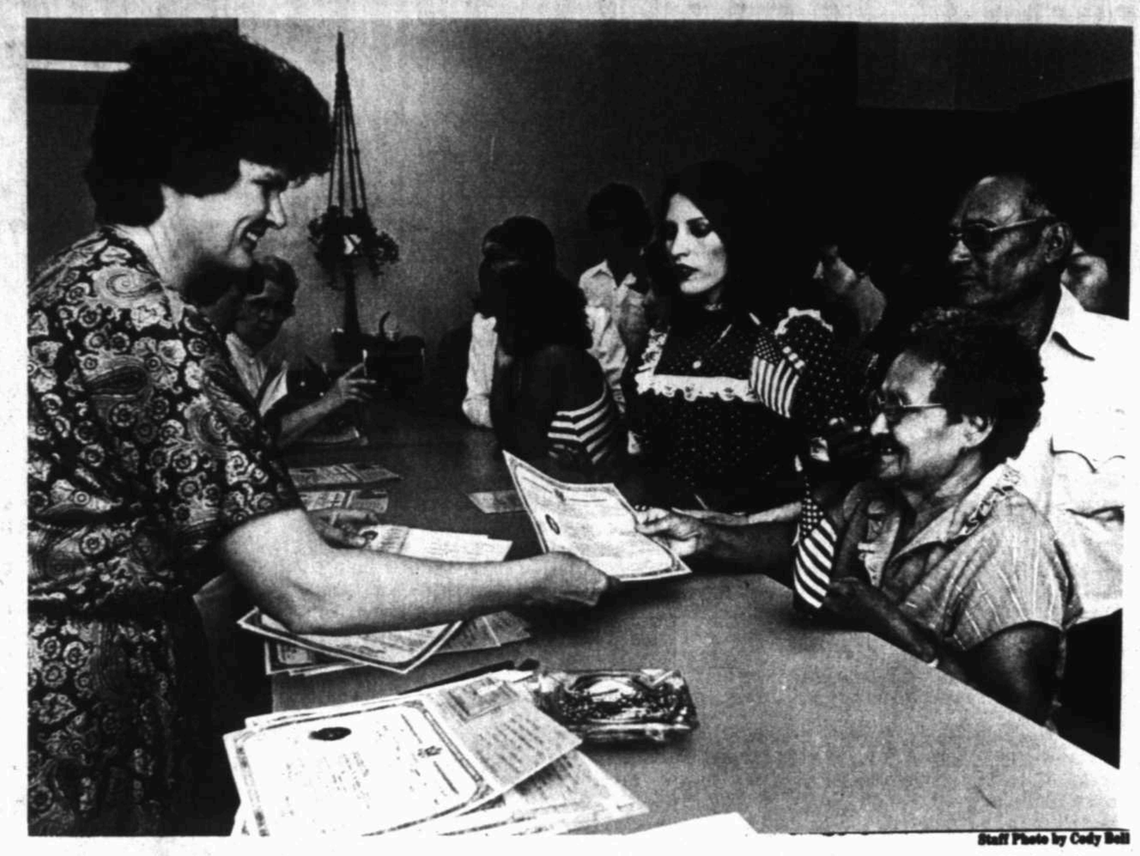

Then, she said so long.

"I wish you Godspeed and happiness in this country," Judge Culver told the 55 new citizens.

In addressing them, Judge Bunton cited their willingness to work and to study the U.S. Constitution, history and government and their willingness "to participate in our government." He said that many native-born Americans would be "too lazy to do a lot of things to become citizens. I compliment you."

The 55 converts to the United States were from Bolivia, Korea, Mexico, The Philippines, South African, Vietnam, West Germany, the West Indies and Thailand. "You can (now) call them foreign countries," he said.

After the ceremony, the federal judge told the 55 that they were invited to a reception in their honor in the George Mahon Federal Building. There, they could sign up to register to vote if they so wished and could indulge in refreshments furnished by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Rape counselor adds to trial confusion

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Rape Crisis Center volunteer who tried to console teen-age rape victims and a 15-year-old defense witness who listened to the testimony of one of those youthful victims unwittingly put a legal bug in the rape-of-a-child case in Midland's 142nd State District Court on Wednesday afternoon.

The legal mishmash came late Wednesday afternoon in the trial of 18-year-old Eric Portillo, who is charged with raping two Greenwood School eighth-grade students in a Midland apartment last March 1, when the two girls, then aged 13 and 14, had skipped school and were partying in a Midland apartment.

Both allegedly were raped in the closet of the efficiency apartment.

The case was sidetracked Wednesday after defense attorney Edward T. Garza questioned the propriety of "the lady in red" who was "in and out" of the courtroom and whom Garza said he had observed talking to the teen-age victims and to the prosecutors, David Joers and Marian Bentley.

In a hearing outside the presence of the eight-man, four-woman jury, the "lady in red" identified herself as Betty Dickerson, a volunteer with the Midland Rape Crisis Center. She said she was neither a lawyer nor an investigator.

Garza asked Ms. Dickerson what she was doing in the hallway with one of the victims.

"I was consoling her," she responded. "I'm a volunteer with the Rape Crisis," which counsels women undergoing the trauma of rape or attempted rape.

Ms. Bentley, who is joining Joers as a co-prosecutor in the case, told Presiding Judge Pat Baskin that she had telephoned the Rape Crisis Center and requested assistance from that agency "to calm them (the rape victims) down and to keep them from being so nervous" during the trial.

Ms. Dickerson testified that she had not talked to the girls about their testimony.

After that issue seemingly was settled, another issue — raised by the prosecution — emerged. It seems that the 15-year-old material defense witness on Tuesday afternoon had listened to about 50 minutes of testimony of one of the minor girls.

The prosecution noted the rule, which prohibits witnesses from listening to any of the court proceedings, had been invoked and that the witness violated that rule. Garza said he had not told the witness explicitly that he could not listen to any of the testimony.

"It (the rule) can't be enforced on a one-way street," the judge said in alluding to the incidents of the "lady in red" and the defense witness.

With the court's permission and against Joers' objection, Garza placed himself on the witness stand and testified; he counseled himself.

Joers then questioned Garza.

"It was an oversight," Garza said of his not telling the witness not to come into the courtroom until he was called by the bailiff.

"You didn't know the rule was invoked," Joers retorted, "and you invoked it?"

In his comments, the judge noted that the rule barring witnesses from the trial until they are to testify "is for the protection of all parties."

The judge this morning was to rule on whether or not he would allow the witness, who was with Portillo when he allegedly had sexual intercourse with the girls, to testify.

Joers argued against the court permitting the witness to testify, since the witness would be able "to fashion" his testimony to his own advantage. Joers also said that it "seems ironic" that the court was considering whether or not to enforce its own rule.

Garza, however, contended that "there's been no harm done" in the inadvertent violation of the rule and requested that his witness be allowed to take the stand.

Both parts of Congress looking into legislative sex, drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a House committee opened its investigation of sex and drugs on Capitol Hill, a Senate panel unveiled recommendations calling for more supervision of teen-age congessional pages.

After the first meeting of the House ethics committee Wednesday, chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, told reporters the panel would name a special counsel with broad subpoena powers to conduct "a thorough, professional investigation" into "all facets" of the charges.

The committee is exploring allegations that some congressmen have used cocaine and that others may have engaged in homosexual acts with the young pages who work as errand boys.

Meanwhile, the House administration subcommittee on personnel and police, which has authority over the page system, is planning a hearing today on the situation.

Shortly before the closed-door meeting of the ethics committee, as the panel posed for pictures, the staff director was overheard remarking to Stokes that the probe should be wrapped up in two weeks.

"In two weeks time, we should be able to finish this up," John Swanner, the committee staff director, told Stokes.

Swanner also said: "Show me 10,000 ministers and I'll show you some drugs and homosexuals. People really have a taste for morbidity. This kind of thing really brings it out."

Stokes' reply could not be heard. The chairman declined to comment on the conversation.

So far, ethics committee investigators are known to have talked with Leroy Williams, 18, a former page supervisor from Little Rock, Ark., and the only witness known to have claimed he engaged in sex with congressmen. They also have met with Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., who allowed an undercover narcotics agent to use his office while investigating cocaine use on Capitol Hill.

Dornan has said federal investigators have told him that six current House members, one senator and two former members have been accused of cocaine usage. He told reporters Tuesday that he did not give any of the names of alleged users to the ethics committee.

In other developments Wednesday:

—Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., made public recommendations by a panel of Senate officials who said the appointment of pages should be limited to those in the 11th grade — juniors in high school. Now, some are as young as 14.

Also, the panel proposed that Senate pages be housed in a single supervised unit until a dormitory is built and other special educational programs and recreational services can be provided.

—House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., announced that he will appoint an "informal committee" to "look into the whole situation of pages." That panel apparently will focus on such issues as supervision, possible age limits and whether a dormitory is needed.

—The Justice Department denied it had named a "task force" to look into cocaine usage in Congress but admitted several agencies were working together in the probe.

The issue of a federal investigation of Congress is a particularly sensitive one now because of mounting criticism in recent months over the FBI's conduct of its Abscam undercover operation, which led to conviction of seven members of Congress for taking bribes from FBI agents posing as representatives of Arab sheiks.

Emergency spending bill in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hoping to avoid a third veto by President Reagan, House and Senate negotiators have written a compromise $5.5 billion emergency spending bill that parallels a Senate-passed measure endorsed by Reagan's budget director.

The full House was expected to consider the bill today. If approved by the House, Senate action would soon follow.

Quick congressional action on the stopgap bill — and Reagan's signature — would avert the need for the government to furlough thousands of workers later this month and end an impasse that has dragged on since March.

The emergency measure is necessary to keep money flowing to more than a dozen federal agencies and major domestic programs until Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year.

Officials at the Treasury, Labor, Health and Human Services, Commerce and Education departments as well as some independent agencies have said they likely would have to furlough workers later this month if the stalemate is not ended.

The compromise measure, drafted in a negotiating session Wednesday, roughly follows an earlier Senate bill that was written with the help of White House budget director David A. Stockman, who later said he would advise Reagan to sign it.

Green to be retried in shooting death of Midlander

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Booker T. Green Jr., the 42-year-old Midlander who was the victim of a mistrial in a murder case in March, is to undergo a second trial in the Nov. 14 shooting death of Midland businessman R.J. Morris, 50.

Green, who was charged with murder by shooting Morris with a rifle in the wake of a squabble over a dice game in Marshall King's Amusement Parlor, was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter instead of murder. But the 11 jurors in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Court were unable to reach a verdict on punishment — which could have ranged from probation to a two- to 20-year term in the state penitentiary.

The state had sought a murder conviction, which carries a five- to 99-year or life sentence.

After the seven-woman four-man jury failed to agree on punishment, Judge Culp declared a mistrial.

"You can't have a conviction without punishment," reasoned defense attorney H. Thomas Hirsch, who is to defend Green in the new trial to begin Monday in Culp's court.

Green was re-indicted last month for voluntary manslaughter even though his original indictment was for murder. But since the jury last March nixed murder and settled on the lesser offense of manslaughter, Green essentially has "been acquitted of murder," District Attorney Vern Martin had noted.

Unlike murder, voluntary manslaughter denotes a slaying without premeditation and under passion.

In the second trial, defense attorney Hirsch is to challenge prosecution, represented by Martin and Marian Bentley, the chief prosecutor in the Green case.

Green was charged with murder last November after he and Morris had squabbled and scuffled over a dice game in the Amusement Parlor of King's Sandwich Shop in The Flats in southeast Midland.

Green was accused of firing five rifle shots into M&M Liquor Store, which Morris and his son had just entered following the dice-game squabble. One bullet struck Morris in the heart. Green, who claimed self-defense, said Morris was armed with a pistol and had threatened to kill him.

The 11-person jury, which lost its 12th juror when she broke her foot at the onset of the trial, had heard testimony from 28 witnesses during the week and had deliberated about 3½ hours on March 12 before returning a voluntary manslaughter verdict.

The jurors deliberated that night on punishment but could not agree; reportedly, nine jurors voted for the maximum 20-year sentence; two others voted for the minimum — a two-year probated sentence. Afterward, the judge declared a mistrial and ordered a new trial.

Green, a $27,000-a-year U.S. Postal Service supervisor who admitted to occasional gambling, was suspended from work until the case is resolved.

Morris, an affluent businessman, was most frequently associated with the RJ Real Pit Bar-B-Q restaurant and bar.

to say Gonzales' dismissal "was completely unrelated" to the Garcia incident.

The suit alleges the Garcias "were placed under arrest although never informed of the charges against them. Defendant Holder caused Plaintiffs to be charged with two criminal offenses, even though no probable cause existed for said charges.

"On the 11th day of June, Defendant Holder, while under oath and on the witness stand in the hearing on Plaintiffs' motion for a new trial, testified and otherwise admitted that he had falsified the sworn complaints against Plaintiffs."

Municipal Court Judge James Fitz-Gerald granted the new trial, but the alcohol charges were dropped by the city attorney's office June 29, and the resisting arrest charges were dropped by the county attorney's office July 9, according to the suit, which also alleges:

"In effecting this arrest, each Plaintiff was thrown to or otherwise forced to the ground, had his hands handcuffed behind his back and, while in this vulnerable and unthreatening position, was subjected to cruel, excessive and unjustified force and brutality administered him at the hands of Defendants Gonzales, Holder, Urby, Fox, Gallagher, Morris and Lovejoy."

In addition to the brutality allegations, the suit seeks damages for unlawful arrest, false imprisonment, and denial of necessary medical treatment, "all in violation of the First, Fourth, Fifth and Fourteenth Ammendments to the Constitution."

It goes on to allege that the "acts of the (above) Defendants resulted from and were taken pursuant to a de facto policy or custom of the City of Midland, which is implemented by police officers to summarily punish persons who refuse to obey police orders, whether lawful or not."

The suit charges Gideon and other city officials "as a matter of policy have not disciplined or otherwise properly supervised the individual officers who engage in said practices."

Gideon could not be reached for comment.

Man has puzzling hobby

Copley News Service

Call it intuition, call it genius, call it luck. Whatever you call it, Craig Paterson's got it.

Paterson's ability to effortlessly whip together a 3,000-piece jigsaw puzzle is a thing to behold, and it doesn't matter if it's square, round or an octagon, whether it depicts millions of marbles, jelly beans, milk and cookies or a landscape that's seemingly all blue sky, blue water and bluish-shaded landscape.

A puzzle apparently hasn't yet been cut that can best him. And as diabolically difficult as some puzzles are, nary a one has even temporarily slowed him.

The tougher the puzzle, the more Paterson likes it.

"I want puzzles that the manufacturer thinks will drive me crazy," he said. "I seek out challenges. What's the use of working on a puzzle that's not puzzling?"

NOBODY REALLY knows how many people dedicate major portions of their lives snapping jigsaw puzzles into place. But Hallmark Corp., which manufactures Springbok puzzles, estimates that 8 million Americans are jigsaw-puzzle aficionados, and that half of them work on as many as 25 a year.

More than $40 million is spent annually by the American public on jigsaw-puzzle sets, some costing $17 each.

There's even a National Jigsaw Puzzle Championship. The puzzle competition will be Aug. 21-22 in Athens, Ohio. It is sponsored by Hallmark and the Dairy Barn Southeastern Ohio Cultural Arts Center.

"It's the first national speed championship in 10 years," says Pam Parker of Dairy Barn, "and we're expecting good representation from California, where jigsaw puzzles are best-sellers."

Who's buying them?

"Everyone of all ages," reports one shop owner.

"They buy them to pass the time," she says, "to challenge their intellects, to complete them for framing and display in their homes, and as gifts for friends and family members, who then get hooked themselves.

"THEY'LL SPEND weeks working on them if they have to."

Paterson, of San Diego, doesn't have to. His knack for puzzle solving has improved with age, and he's been piecing them together a long time.

"Since I was 7 years old," he says. "I must have worked on hundreds of them."

It doesn't matter if it's the "Flat Banana," a several-thousand-piece puzzle completely and non-distinctly yellow, with only the words, "Dole Banana" in a corner; or if it's the puzzle titled "About a Million Marbles."

Puzzles depicting a glass of milk and Oreo cookies, jelly beans, peacocks, the Eiffel Tower, or even King Kong going ape over Miss Piggy are no mystery to Paterson, who uses completed puzzles as home decorations and has scores of them stacked in his closets.

His secret? Insight plays a major role in his mastery of the jigsaw puzzle, he says, but technique helps.

One method is to complete the border first, then work inward. But if he has trouble finishing the border, he doesn't dwell on it.

Acid rain issue at dead end

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A Canadian official blames President Reagan's anti-regulation philosophy for a breakdown in bilateral talks aimed at the control of acid rain.

George Rejhon, counsellor on the environment to the Canadian ambassador to the United States, said at an air quality conference earlier this week that negotiations between the two nations are "dead in the water."

Schultz signals change in policy

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's next secretary of state, George P. Shultz, has signaled his hopes for a change in emphasis in U.S. policy toward the Mideast, one that is unlikely to please the Israelis.

It's too early to say how much of a change Shultz has in mind. In part, that may depend on how much the White House agrees with him.

At a minimum, Shultz clearly wants a better break for the Palestinians from Israel than they have been receiving so far. He favors an even-handed approach to the Arab world in general.

During the tenure of former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., U.S. interests in the region were closely identified with Israeli interests. There was no criticism of Israeli actions from Haig, who felt the United States had to stand by an ally even when, in Washington's eyes, it was doing wrong.

But judging from his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Shultz appears ready to put distance between U.S. and Israeli interests in some cases and hinted at a readiness to openly oppose Israel when interests of the two nations diverge.

He told the committee he regretted Israel's invasion of Lebanon, saying it resulted in a needless spilling of "this tremendous amount of bloodshed" because Israel should have been able to accomplish its aims through negotiations.

Except for Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, nobody in the Reagan administration, not even the president, had publicly criticized Israel for the invasion.

When asked by Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn, whether he agreed with Haig that Israel is a "strategic asset" of the United States, Shultz declared, "It is not military strength that we want. It's peace that we want."

"We don't do anybody any favors by allowing this to drag on," he said of the Mideast peace negotiations, which have been bogged down on the question of how much autonomy to give to the 1.3 million Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

He pointedly said that as a good-faith gesture to Arab nations there should be "some give" in Israel's position, which has been to offer minimal self-rule to the Palestinians.

Nobody on the committee asked Shultz whether he favored a separate Palestinian state. But his message to Israel that it must get started on meaningful negotiations with the Palestinians couldn't have been more clear.

"The legitimate needs and problems of the Palestinan people must be addressed and resolved — urgently and in all their dimensions," he said.

He said representatives of the Palestinians must be included in the negotiations "for these talks to succeed.'

At another point, he declared, "We've just got to come to our senses ... shake everybody and say, 'Come on, we've got to do better about this, we've got to get active.'"

Even though he said he didn't disagree with Reagan's foreign policy to date, there was implied criticism of Haig for not giving higher priority to the Palestinian negotiations during his 17 months in office.

He criticized Israeli settlements on the West Bank, and said a proposal by Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon to settle another 70,000 Israelis in the occupied territories would be damaging if carried out. Neither Reagan nor Haig had criticized the settlements.

Asked Wednesday if Reagan agreed with Shultz' statements on the Palestinians, the deputy White House spokesman, Larry Speakes, said he did.

But talk of a strategic consensus in the Mideast — Haig's plan for joining Israel and the Arab world in a united front against Soviet aggression — likely will be forgotten under Shultz.

Shultz said he will work for improved ties with the Arab world, particularly moderate states such as Saudi Arabia, but also possibly even with more radical states such as Iraq and non-Arab Iran.

And in what could be the most bruising statement of all for Israel, he said the PLO might have a claim as the legitimate representative for the 4.3 million Palestinians in the Mideast if it agreed to lay down its arms.

Reagan suggests PLO go to Syria

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan is urging that most of the Palestinian guerrillas trapped in west Beirut be evacuated to Syria, The New York Times reported today. The president wants the rest of the Palestinians to go to other Arab countries, the newspaper said.

Reagan's recommendation came in a letter to King Fahd of Saudi Arabia in which he asked the king for help in finding a haven for the guerrillas, The Times reported, quoting unidentified officials of the Reagan administration.

A major stumbling block in efforts to negotiate an end to the crisis in Lebanon reportedly has been in finding an Arab country willing to take the 8,000 guerrillas, who are trapped in west Beirut by an Israeli invasion force. The Israelis have threatened to wipe out the guerrillas if they do not leave Lebanon.

CBS News reported Wednesday that it had learned that Saudi Arabia had offered Syria "hundreds of millions of dollars" if Syria would take the Palestinians.

State Department spokesman Joe Reap said he no information on the CBS report or on the report that Reagan had written a letter to Fahd.

White House officials say Reagan has decided in principle to dispatch up to 1,000 Marines to escort the Palestinians from Beirut if Lebanon makes a formal request for the troops and other conditions are met.

Argentine POWs returned by British

PUERTO MADRYN, Argentina (AP) — All 11,800 Argentine prisoners captured by British forces on the Falkland Islands have returned home, and many of them will have to account for Argentina's defeat on the South Atlantic islands.

The last 593 prisoners — most of them officers — arrived in this southern port Wednesday aboard the British vessel St. Edmund after sailing from the Falklands, 250 miles east of southern Argentina.

The station said the general, who surrendered to the British on June 14 at the island capital of Stanley, did not elaborate on what he hoped could be learned.

Fighting, negotiations continue

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli and Palestinian gunners exchanged fire early today around Beirut's paralyzed airport in fresh violations of a four-day-old U.S.-sponsored cease-fire, the Lebanese state radio reported.

At the same time, U.S. and Lebanese mediators scheduled conferences in Israeli-ringed west Beirut and the presidential palace in suburban Baabda in attempts to break a stalemate on how, when and where to evacuate Yasser Arafat's 8,000 Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas.

Israel invaded Lebanon June 6 to annihilate PLO forces and has ringed west Beirut with an estimated 35,000 troops and 300 tanks, threatening to blast the guerrillas out unless they agree to leave Lebanon.

Lebanese state radio quoted a PLO communique as saying forward guerrilla positions at the Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp near the airport repulsed a pre-dawn Israeli attempt to infiltrate PLO lines along the airport's eastern runway. The Israelis advanced behind a curtain of artillery and tank fire, the communique said.

In Tel Aviv, a military spokesman denied the PLO claims and said there was no Israeli artillery fire. The military command said the cease-fire arranged last Sunday by U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib was holding.

The command also said one Israeli soldier was wounded early today in an exchange of small-arms fire in eastern Lebanon near the Beirut-Damascus highway, where Syrian forces have regrouped. PLO guerrillas around Beirut also fired machine guns and other light arms at the Israelis, the command said.

The latest skirmishes came a day after the Lebanese government took its first public stand on the six-week-old invasion crisis, calling on Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces to leave the bloodied country.

In a communique Wednesday, the government, struggling to reassert its authority, asked for a multinational peacekeeping force to supervise evacuation of Arafat's guerrillas.

Betty Sheeler

County may hire resigning Housing Association officer

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Betty Sheeler, who has tendered her resignation as an officer and director of the Midland Housing Association, nevertheless may be hired by the county but at a more attractive salary to continue her dual role as coordinator of Midland County's $1.6 million federal community development and federal rent subsidy programs.

Mrs. Sheeler's resignation was noted by Midland County Judge Bill Ahders, who in Monday's Commissioners' Court meeting read a letter, signed by MHA president Lynn D. Durham Jr., which set forth Mrs. Sheeler's resignation.

"Mrs. Sheeler, as you no doubt are aware, has performed single-handedly and superbly virtually all of the services (of the association).

"And as a consequence of her announced resignation, the Association has neither any member nor employee capable of assuming the broad range of duties from which Mrs. Sheeler is taking leave," Durham wrote in the letter, dated June 29, to Ahders. "Nor is the Association aware of any person who might be qualified and so generous as Mrs. Sheeler to assume such duties on the terms for which Mrs. Sheeler has worked."

As a result, Durham said it is "with heartfelt regret" that the association also must resign and withdraw from the programs" by July 31.

In recent years, Mrs. Sheeler has been carrying out the volunteer work for a token salary, paid by federal and county governments, to carry out the programs funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

However, the Commissioners' Court is considering enticing Mrs. Sheeler to run the federal programs, to pay her a salary commensurate with the duties, and to work out other details in its July 26 meeting.

"We are assured," Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis noted, "she'll hold the fort down" until the situation is resolved.

"We need her badly," the judge said of Mrs. Sheeler.

Mrs. Sheeler told The Reporter-Telegram she will consider carrying on with the work, which she began three years ago on a voluntary, part-time basis essentially to fill her leisure hours.

By training and profession, she's a chemist. Her work with the federal programs is out of interest and concern and not for a livelihood. For that, she suggested, she would be teaching chemistry or working in industry.

"I rather enjoy it," Mrs. Sheeler said. "I would be willing to do it" if the salary, now to be paid by the county, fit the work and if she could fit the work into her schedule.

"I kind of enjoy poking around with the HUD regulations."

DOE provides home weatherization

By MERRY SCOTT
News Intern

Many people cannot afford to properly insulate their homes against cold and heat. That is why the Department of Energy (DOE) has a $143 million Weatherization Assistance Program for Low-Income Persons.

The program, which has provided assistance to Texans for the past five years, has resulted in the weatherization of more than 17,000 Texas homes.

Each state receives an allocation of funds based on population, need (the number of low-income households) and the number of heating and cooling degree days, according to Dan Deaton, DOE assistant director for programs.

New York received the largest amount of money (over $15 million) and Hawaii received the least (about $108,000), partly because of the differences in the climate of the two states and partly because of the differences in population (New York had 17,557,288 residents according to a 1980 census and Hawaii had only 965,000).

States in the northeastern United States also usually receive more funds because of the severe winters, according to Deaton.

Texas, being a southern state and having a fairly mild climate, received a grant of $1.964 million for the weatherization of homes (more than Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico or Oklahoma), although it will only receive $1,768,011 initially. Included in that money is $148,223 that may be used for training people to install weatherization materials and for staff salaries.

Midland is in a 10-county area that was alloted $68,900 of the $1,768,011 million. "That is enough to weatherize 75-80 houses since the maximum that may be spent on each home for labor and materials is $1,000," said Landre Doan, a contract manager-developer with the Department of Human Resources (DHR) sub-regional office in Odessa. According to Deaton, the average expenditure for each home is $600 to $800.

West Texas Opportunities (WTO) of Lamesa, the group promised the contract for Andrews, Borden, Dawson, Ector, Gaines, Glasscock, Howard, Martin, Midland and Upton counties, will hire one work crew to travel from county to county weatherizing houses, because it is more "cost effective," according to Janet Everheart, executive director of WTO. WTO is expected to have the signed contract on Monday.

They also will be utilizing volunteer help, "hopefully" including the Christmas in April program of Midland, she said.

WTO was to begin taking applications for weatherization this week and will then "prioritize" the list of applicants, taking into consideration age, health, income and need.

The income requirements for people receiving weatherization assistance is 125 percent of the poverty level (as set by the office of Management and Budget) or less.

For instance, the poverty level for a family of four is $11,625. That means, a family of four can have an annual gross income of $14,531.25 and still be eligible for weatherization assistance.

The work that may be done on the homes of people receiving assistance includes adding insulation, storm windows, caulking, weather-stripping or even roofing (if it is required), according to Doan.

If all goes well, work should begin in Dawson County within a week or two and then in the other counties over the next few months, according to Ms. Everheart. "If the response is like it has been in past years," she said, "it will be good."

Sen. Tower foresees aid for High Plains farmers

DALLAS (AP) — The Reagan administration will approve disaster relief that could exceed $300 million for High Plains and eastern New Mexico farmers whose crops were ruined by rain and hail this year, U.S. Sen. John Tower says.

Secretary of Agriculture John Block will announce the program as early as Thursday, Tower, R-Texas, said in a statement issued Wednesday.

The program will provide relief for western Texas and eastern New Mexico cotton and wheat growers and may be extended to producers of other crops, Tower said.

"I am very pleased with the expeditious way which Secretary Block has conducted his analysis of this natural disaster, and I think this is a positive step toward alleviating the economic emergency that now confronts the people of West Texas," Tower said.

Cotton growers could get disaster payments of about 20 cents a pound on 75 percent of their losses, Tower said.

Budget Director David Stockman assured Tower Wednesday that the Office of Management and Budget would approve the disaster aid payments, said Elvin Caraway, the senator's West Texas office director.

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Thirteen people, including Treasury Secretary Koert R. Pretorius and two air force generals, perished when two light planes collided in flight 10 miles west of here, officials said today.

Customers at a nearby drive-in movie theater also witnessed the crash. One of them, Andries Van der Merwe, said the airplanes appeared to collide just above the movie screen.

Defense Minister Magnus Malan ordered an inquiry into the cause of the accident Wednesday night, which a military spokesman said left no survivors.

EPA report on Love Canal only adds to controversy

By ED McCULLOUGH

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Current and former residents of the Love Canal neighborhood, where thousands of tons of chemical wastes were dumped, greeted with skepticism a federal report that said most of the area is safe to live in.

The findings Wednesday by the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, based on a study by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, came nearly four years after a health emergency was declared in the area.

At a briefing Wednesday night at City Hall, shouting matches broke out among 250 present and former residents of the neighborhood, where sharp divisions have formed between those who favor redevelopment and those who oppose it.

"We have been surrounded by chemicals all our lives. If it was so bad, there would be no Niagara Falls," said Loretta Gambino, a canal-area homeowner for 21 years who said she has suffered cancer, eye infections and four miscarriages. Her remark was typical of those from residents who stayed.

But Lois Gibbs, president of the Love Canal Homeowners Association and head of a Washington-based hazardous waste clearing house, said the methods of analyzing data were flawed and no conclusions could be safely drawn. She called the study a "whitewash."

Barbara Quimby, a former canal-area resident who blamed the dump for her respiratory problems and her daughter's retardation, commented: "I lived there 30 years. This is the first time we don't go to the doctors every two weeks."

Sens. Alfonse D'Amato and Daniel P. Moynihan also criticized the study, although Gov. Hugh Carey praised its findings and said they opened the way for redevelopment.

The EPA investigation, which first took soil, air and water samples almost two years ago, centered on an area around a former Hooker Chemical & Plastics Corp. dump that was abandoned in 1953 and later became a residential neighborhood.

Hooker dumped more than 20,000 tons of chemical wastes into Love Canal for 10 years through 1953, when the property was sold to the Niagara Falls School Board. A school and a housing development were built on the clay-capped dump.

As early as 1958, children playing at the dump suffered skin irritations. In 1976, it was confirmed that chemicals were migrating through the soil.

In August 1978, chemicals were found oozing into the basements of homes and people began complaining of illnesses. The state declared a health emergency, evacuated the first two "rings" of houses nearest the canal, and surrounded that area with a fence.

The EPA said homes three houses or more away from the dump are safe; that contamination linked with Love Canal is confined to storm sewers and two creeks north of the dump; and that low-level contamination in the area is no worse than contamination at other urban industrial sites across the nation.

Dr. Clark Heath Jr. of the CDC said the storm sewers and creeks must be cleaned, and steps must be taken to ensure that the canal's clay cover is maintained. He would not say whether those steps must be taken before the neighborhood is resettled.

In October 1980, a $20 million federal-state program was established to buy homes of people living several blocks farther away from the dump and move them out. By last May about 570 families had moved, and the first of 227 homes slated for demolition was bulldozed in June.

About 200 families are on a waiting list for the homes declared safe by the EPA report, many hoping to buy at a bargain price.

The state and federal governments have filed lawsuits against Hooker, demanding that the subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum carry out a long-term cleanup at Love Canal and other dump sites in the area. Residents and former residents also have filed suit.

Occidental said in a statement that the EPA report "rebuts the alleged situation at Love Canal as claimed by the New York state attorney general that there is a continuing health hazard."

Wdnesday's EPA report followed by two days the release of findings by state Attorney General Robert Abrams that high levels of toxic dioxin were found in two homes close to the canal.

Britain beginning to rehabilitate, reconstruct Falklands

By MARK S. SMITH

STANLEY, Falkland Islands (AP) — The last of the troops that won back the Falklands from Argentina will be home within a month. But Britain's job here is only beginning.

Not only is a military garrison larger than the population to be established, but explosive mines must be cleared, homes rebuilt, the Stanley airfield extended and the islands' economy revived.

"After three months of occupation, we've got a lot of rehabilitation and reconstruction to do," said Rex Hunt, former Falklands governor who returned as civil commissioner.

Of Stanley's 368 houses, 27 were destroyed or so badly damaged during the fighting as to be inhabitable. An additional 167 sustained less serious damage.

The town's water and power supplies were knocked out by shell fire, the police station had its roof blown off by a rocket and Stanley airfield, though operating, is strewn with the remains of Argentine aircraft and equipment.

Abandoned jeeps, tanks and armored vehicles line the Stanley docks. Argentine booby-traps and mines, scattered aimlessly in the panic of defeat, are sown in and around the capital and throughout the islands' battlefields.

The British military hopes to prevent any repetition of Argentina's April 2 invasion by establishing a garrison large enough to deter initial threats and an airstrip long enough to take airborne reinforcements.

Government officials estimate the garrison force at 2,500, according to British press reports. By contrast, when the Argentines invaded, there were just 42 Royal Marines here to guard a civilian population of about 1,800.

In about three weeks, the airfield will be shut down so Royal Engineers can begin lengthening the 4,000-foot runway to accommodate large transports and high-performance fighter planes.

The British-descended islanders have long sought the extension to establish a direct air link to Britain. But the British government in 1977 refused to spend the 3 million pounds ($5.2 million) then needed.

Hospitals face blood shortage

By The Associated Press

With schools out, plants idle and Americans on vacation, hospitals in many of the nation's cities are facing an annual summer blood shortage amid growing demand. One St. Louis hospital is even asking for donations from visitors.

Appeals for donors have been issued in New York and Arkansas, where blood supplies are at a "seriously low level," while officials in Seattle were to decide today whether to broadcast a plea for blood.

New York City's two-day supply — down from an optimal five-day reserve — threatened to worsen today, disrupting the Northeast blood network. Hospital workers were poised to walk out in a labor dispute that could shut down the Greater New York Blood program.

In New Jersey, 65 hospitals depend on the Greater New York blood program for supplies and would be "very badly hit," said spokesman Michael Scahill. Hospitals in New England are monitoring the threat.

"Blood supplies are tight just about everywhere now, but this situation is normal for this time of year," said Maurice Flagg, spokesman for the national American Red Cross Blood Program in Washington.

In Chicago, the Red Cross has set up 21 mobile donor sites to speed collections. Barnes Hospital in St. Louis, which uses 100 units of blood daily in its 56 operating rooms, has set up a special blood center for relatives and visitors.

In Topeka, Kan., officials said donations were "much lower than normal," although there have been no emergency appeals or limits on surgery.

"It's a nationwide thing. Nobody's got any extra. It's typical for summertime," said Roseanne Becker, the blood bank's recruitment director.

Red Cross spokesman Ralph Wright in Los Angeles said some elective surgery has been rescheduled to accommodate a 4 percent drop in blood donations this month compared with July 1981.

"Summers are notoriously a low time in collections," said Wright, whose agency supplies nearly all the blood used at 220 hospitals in Southern California.

In Nashville, Tenn., Red Cross officials said the city has a 1½-day supply following emergency appeals in June. "At this point we're able to meet the patients' needs," said spokeswoman Cathy Goodloe.

"Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia and a few other eastern places are really having some hard times now, especially in supplies of group O," said the national Red Cross' Flagg. "This is the most common type of blood."

Summer vacations, idled plants and closed schools are cited as causes for the shortages. In the Boston area, for example, college students normally contribute a third of the region's blood supply.

But at the same time, several blood banks reported increased demand. Greg McGregor, spokesman for the Greater New York Blood Program, said area hospitals were using 10 percent more blood this year.

Machine helps doctor perfect his art

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Staff Photo by Cody Bell

The laser doppler, a state-of-the-art machine used in microsurgery, is currently used by an Odessa surgeon who claims it is a major breakthrough in cosmetic and reconstructive surgery.

A state-of-the-art piece of equipment that has recently been released by the Food and Drug Administration is helping Dr. Sylvan Bartlett "push" surgery to obtain maximum results.

The laser doppler, an $11,000 machine usually used to monitor microsurgery, is one of 17 such machines in the world. And Bartlett, an Odessa cosmetic and reconstructive surgeon, is using the equipment to monitor cosmetic and reconstructive surgery.

A thin fiberoptic cable attached to the box-like machine penetrates a red laser beam one millimeter under the surface of the tissue or skin to determine circulation flow.

The procedure is based on the "doppler effect," which is the apparent change in frequency of sound, light or radio waves caused by motion.

Bartlett used an example of a train whistle's pitch which seems higher when the train approaches and lower after it passes and begins to move away to explain how the the laser doppler works.

"This machine in a non-invasive manner determines whether there is circulation or non-circulation," Bartlett said.

The word "plastic," which most people use for Bartlett's surgical procedures, is derived from the Greek word "plastikos," meaning to move things around.

The facelift is performed to make an aging face look younger. It is usually done by opening skin flaps in the region around the ears and undermining the skin of the cheeks and jaws.

Reconstructive surgery is sometimes performed on crushed hand and foot injuries, which are common in this area because of the heavy equipment associated with the oil industry.

Both types of surgery involve the movement of tissue, thus lessening the flow of blood.

"Every time you move something around, you're taking away the blood supply, and with this machine I can tell if the patient has the proper amount of circulation. Blood is king in these kind of procedures. If you don't have circulation you don't have anything — an alternative would be skin graft," he said.

"When you cut from three sides, you lose circulation," he said, referring to cutting skin tissue and moving it. "You only need 10 percent of normal circulation to make something live," he said.

In the past, Bartlett said he and other surgeons have made an educated guess or judgment whether a patient's tissue had the right amount of circulation flow.

"For example, color," he said. "Color can confuse you...blue does not necessarily mean dead. If I come up against something that I'm not sure whether or not there is circulation, I can measure the flow with this machine."

The laser doppler gives a computer read-out of the flow of circulation. It can also be used to determine the circulation flow in surgeries involving burns, muscles and internal organs.

"Conceptually, this machine is a breakthrough in the type of surgery I do," Bartlett said. "It is accurate. I'm pleased with the results."

Three teen-age bodies found

WACO, Texas (AP) — The bodies of three Central Texas teen-agers who were stabbed to death in woods near Lake Waco have been taken to Dallas for autopsies today.

Police said the 18-year-old Waco man and two 17-year-old Waxahachie girls had been bound and gagged before they were stabbed. They had disappeared on an outing, officers said.

Police sealed off a park at the lake Wednesday night after a fisherman discovered the bodies near the park entrance. The two girls were found nude 35 to 50 feet away from the fully-clothed man.

McLennan County Peace Justice Joe Johnson said the girls' throats had been slashed. The man had a slash wound to the chest and his neck also may have been slashed, Johnson said. All three bodies had numerous stab wounds, he said.

Authorities identified the teen-agers as Jill Montgomery, Raylene Rice and Kenneth Franks.

Police said the first body was discovered off a dirt road at about 6:45 p.m.

The dead man's father, Richard Franks, said his son left with the girls about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday on a trip to Koehne Park, two to three miles from Speegleville Park, where their bodies were found.

Their car was discovered today at Koehne park, Johnson said.

Franks told the Waco Tribune-Herald Wednesday afternoon that he had expected his son home at midnight.

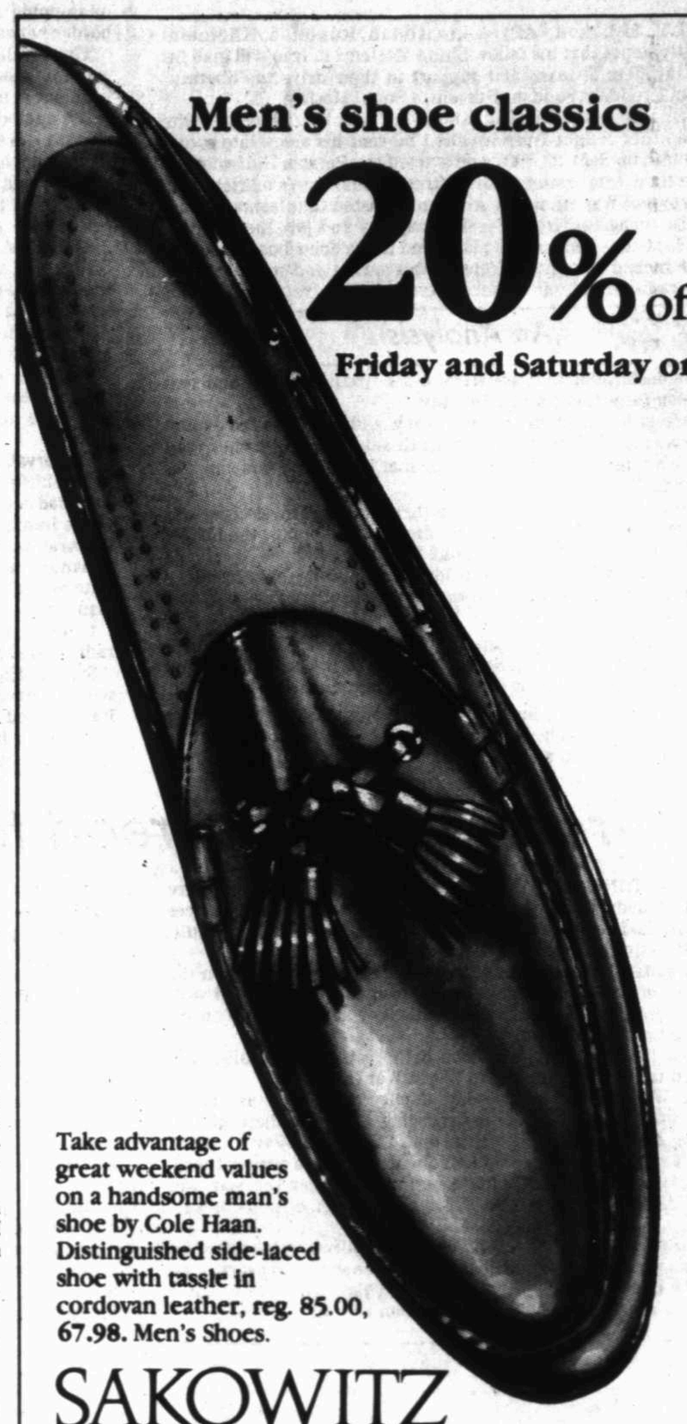

Retailers warned of stolen checks

Midland-Odessa retailers should be on guard for anyone attempting to cash forged J&J Steel and Supply Co. payroll checks, according to Midland's Better Business Bureau office.

A batch of blank checks — numbers 2676 through 2825 — were stolen from the Odessa company in April. Several of the green checks have already been cashed in amounts ranging from $200 to $500.

Checks are being cashed at local gas stations, grocery and liquor stores. Anyone called upon to cash a forged check is asked to call the Better Business Bureau and the police.

Khomeini may be falling into trap

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini apparently hopes that his fellow Shiite Moslems in Iraq will give his Iranian invaders at least tacit support in their drive to "liberate" Iraq from President Saddam Hussein, a Sunni Moslem.

But some analysts here say Khomeini may be falling into the same trap that caught Hussein when he sent his army into southwestern Iran on Sept. 22, 1980, and started the Persian Gulf war.

At the time, Iraqi communiques stressed that Iran's oil-rich Khuzistan province was ethnically Arab and boasted that Iranians there would rise up against Iran's Persian majority and join the invading forces. No such rebellion took place, and Iraq's drive bogged down.

Iran launched a counter-offensive this spring and summer, driving the Iraqis from their captured territory. Iran refused to honor

An Analysis

Hussein's declaration of a unilateral cease-fire last month and sent an invasion force into Iraq on Tuesday.

"If Hussein had been more clever, he would have tried to exploit the divisions inside Iran by supporting dissident groups rather than sending his army," said one Arab diplomat here. "The same applies to Khomeini."

The immediate goal of the Iranian thrust into southeast Iraq was clearly stated by Iran's official news media — to topple "the infidel regime" in Baghdad, the Iraqi capital.

For this, Khomeini is apparently counting on some help from the Shiite Moslems who make up 50 to 55 percent of Iraq's population of 17 million.

In a speech broadcast Wednesday by Tehran radio, the Iranian leader appealed to the Iraqi Shiites to "rush to the combatants and overthrow the blasphemous regime of Saddam (Hussein)."

The conflict between Sunni and Shiite Moslems, the two major branches of Islam, has been an important issue in the long-standing hostility between Iran and Iraq, which also focuses on a territorial dispute over the Shatt-al-Arab waterway. The estuary is Iraq's only oil-shipping outlet to the Persian Gulf and its southern end is the border between the two nations.

The Iranian news agency IRNA and Tehran radio have been claiming there is grumbling among Iraqi soldiers and that anti-government demonstrations have broken out in numerous Iraqi cities. IRNA quoted what it said were messages from Moslem groups outside Iran, presumably Shiites, that "urged an attack into Iraqi territory to topple the Iraqi regime.

"They said they were awaiting the Imam's (Khomeini's) order for setting foot in Iraqi territory so that they could put an end to the rule of the great satan in Iraq and establish an Islamic government," IRNA said.

However, analysts here say Iran's escalation of the war may have the opposite effect, and could rally support for Hussein from Shiite nationalists who might otherwise take steps to remove him. Although the Iraqi Shiites share the same religion as most Iranians, as Arabs they are ethnically distinct from the Persians in Iran.

If a Shiite uprising fails to materialize in Iraq, Iran's gamble may depend heavily on the resolve of its army to fight beyond its borders for a long time, despite the heavy losses already sustained in the war.

Conservative Arab states, notably Saudi Arabia, fear Iran's effort to establish its brand of Islamic fundamentalist government in Baghdad could spark a chain reaction in the Middle East.

The Iranian thrust comes at a time when Baghdad's supporters in the Arab world are divided and preoccupied by Israel's invasion of Lebanon, and in such a climate, it is questionable whether any Arab state would send Iraq the manpower it needs to fend off the Iranian army.

t the same time, Iran risks losing the support it has had from radical Arab states such as Syria, Libya, Algeria and South Yemen.

Syrian officials have contended they support the ouster of Hussein, but have repeatedly warned that if the tables were turned and Iran invaded Iraq they would "oppose the aggressor."

For them, Iran's move will likely be an embarrassment and could cost Khomeini valuable sources of supplies for his army.

Iran-Iraq war may spread to other countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 200,000 Iranian and Iraqi troops are locked in bloody battle that could have long-range consequences for U.S.-backed Arab countries in the oil producing Persian Gulf, U.S. intelligence analysts say.

An estimated 100,000 troops on each side are concentrated on the Basra area of southern Iraq, which the Iranians have invaded with the apparent aim of overrunning that key oil industry center, according to these analysts.

"It looks like this may be a blood bath," said one specialist who compared the scale of fighting to World War II combat.

At the White House Wednesday, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the United States is urging "an immediate end to hostilities and a negotiated settlement." Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee attended a briefing by a national security official and then said, "It's a very real danger the war will spread. The indications are there is a real danger of a major conflict."

According to the U.S. intelligence specialists, who asked to remain anonymous, the immediate Iranian objective appears to be to cripple Iraq's oil-based economy, with a possible drive to cut a critical military supply route into Iraq from Kuwait.

Iran's basic goals, the sources said, probably are to shatter Iraq's fighting power, already badly shaken by previous defeats, to undermine Iraqi public support for the Baghdad government and to topple the regime of President Saddam Hussein.

"The Iranians not only want their pound of flesh in revenge for Iraq's invasion of Iran 22 months ago, but they obviously want to humiliate Hussein and perhaps see him replaced by a fundamentalist regime," said an intelligence analyst.

After some initial setbacks, the Iranian army rallied to push the Iraqis back and the momentum is now with Iran, the analysts said.

They predicted the outcome will turn on whether the Iraqi troops, whose weakness in leadership and fighting qualities were exposed in previous battles in Iran, will now "pull up their socks" and fight effectively on their home ground.

Up to now, they said, the Iranians have had a clear edge in motivation, including what was described as the "fanatical fervor" of revolutionary guards who hurled themselves at the Iraqis in human-wave attacks.

Despite political divisions within Iran, the analysts said, the Iraqi invasion had a "rallying effect" which enabled the Iranians to turn the balance against the Iraqis.

This aerial photograph shows the path (upper left to lower right) of the Pan Am jetliner which crashed Friday, ravaging this usually calm suburban New Orleans neighborhood. Many of the neighborhood residents are hesitant about staying on here; some feel they can't face the visual or aural — the sound of planes taking off and landing at nearby New Orleans International Airport is a frequent backdrop — reminders of the crash which killed 154 people.

Mayor rebukes efforts to settle out of court

KENNER, La. (AP) — Mayor Aaron Broussard has criticized Pan Am's insurance company for asking ground survivors and relatives of people killed in last week's jetliner crash to settle out of court, instead of filing suit.

"There are people in this area that haven't buried their dead yet and you'd better not be coming in here and forcing them to make decisions before they put their people in the ground," Broussard said Wenesday, complaining about a letter to residents from U.S. Aviation Underwriters.

Meanwhile, the National Transportation Safety Board continued its investigation into Friday's crash of Flight 759, which killed all 146 people aboard the Boeing 727 and eight others in the New Orleans suburb in the second-worst accident in U.S. aviation history.

The flight originated in Miami and stopped in New Orleans before it was to continue on to Las Vegas, Nev., and San Diego.

The NTSB said a preliminary investigation showed the Pan Am flight sheared off treetops on busy Williams Boulevard, less than a half-mile from the end of the runway, before scorching a path three blocks long and 150 feet wide.

Wrecking crews and bulldozers finished scraping the area clean Wednesday, smashing the homes' slab foundations and carting away the concrete in heavy trucks.

The Jefferson Parish coroner's office said Wednesday that 62 bodies have been identified so far, with 32 released to relatives.

Four accident-related lawsuits have been filed already, seeking a total of $91.5 million in damages.

Wendell Gauthier, a lawyer representing a family whose home was damaged in the accident and is seeking $3.5 million, contended Wednesday that another airliner hit treetops after taking off from the airport eight months ago.

Gauthier would identify neither the carrier nor the family whose home was allegedly damaged by a falling tree branch. But he said after the carrier paid a settlement, the Federal Aviation Administration and New Orleans Aviation Board trimmed the treetops.

An FAA supervisor at the airport tower said he could say nothing and no one with the New Orleans Aviation Board could be reached Wednesday to comment.

"It may sound unbelievable, but it happened," the lawyer said. "I've talked to people on Williams Boulevard. They said the FAA and aviation board came out and said, 'Let us cut them down or we'll get a court order to do it.' "

In an unrelated mishap Wednesday at the airport, the pilot of an Eastern Airlines 727 jetliner reported hydraulic problems on a landing approach. No injuries were reported, but Eastern supervisor Durwood Barber said emergency equipment stood by while Flight 517 — from Norfolk Va., via Atlanta to New Orleans — landed with one brake locked. Passengers were required to get off the plane on the runway.

Somber crash leaves shaken residents at scene

KENNER, La. (AP) — Over the years, residents learned to ignore the roar of planes from nearby New Orleans International Airport. Now, the thunder of each takeoff is noticed — and feared.

"I will never get used to it now," said Isabel Landry, a widow who shares her house with her 84-year-old mother. "I don't know what's going to happen to me, living in a house with fear — God almighty!"

Mrs. Landry's small frame house is only about 10 feet from the first of nine houses hit in the crash of Pan Am Flight 759 on Friday. The accident killed 146 people on the Boeing 727 and eight on the ground.

"I don't know how I can stay in this house," Mrs. Landry said through tears, adding that she would move if she had the money. "I can still see that baby (one of the victims) come out of that house and she was burning. My mother is still in shock. We are living on heart pills, nerve pills, pressure pills."

But other residents of the green and pleasant Morningside neighborhood, scarred by an ugly gash almost three blocks long, say it's still home — and bad luck can strike anywhere.

"I didn't hear it coming because I don't hear planes," said Ruth Pourciau, who was stirring shrimp stew when the jet slashed past her kitchen. "I have lived here 20 years and I tune planes out. Friends say, 'How do you stand it with those airliners going over?' and I say I don't even hear them."

Mrs. Pourciau walked away from the disaster scene when told that police wanted to use carports and garages for a temporary morgue.

"I couldn't take that," she said, staying away for three days.

"You never know what you will do," she said. "But I know we won't be moving anywhere. I couldn't come closer to death than I came last Friday. That's how I feel about it."

About 150 people attended a seminar Tuesday held by the city, state and Red Cross to help victims' friends and relatives, survivors and rescue workers cope with lingering emotions from the disaster.

"If you don't go through them (unsettled feelings), though, you can't expect to go on with your lives," a social worker, C.W. Belson, told the group. "You may live the experience over and over again. It may be triggered by the sound of a plane."

Dr. Tina Zellinger of the West Bank Psychotherapy Center, a private clinic, said a fireman who was at the crash scene called to say he was having crying spells, could not sleep or concentrate, felt ill and could not relax.

The crash jolted the neighborhood — once a swamp — so violently that walls and foundations cracked in some homes and they were later condemned and demolished, even though not hit directly by the 86-ton jetliner.

Among them was the residence of George Bode, a customer service agent for Delta Air Lines. Even though his family was unhurt, Bode is unsure whether his wife, Opal, will want to stay.

"It depends on her emotional state whether we rebuild here," said Bode. "I tell her that bad things can happen wherever you live."

Living with 'the bomb'

Thirty-seven years ago from Friday — on July 16, 1945 — the first atomic bomb was exploded at Trinity Site in the New Mexico desert. Since that time mankind has experienced the awesome power of "the bomb," the number of nations possessing the destructive power has increased dramatically and protests to nuclear power have become more commonplace.

For a generation of Americans who have grown up with the reality of the bomb ever present, the destructive force commands respect. Ironically, though, many of the physicists who worked on the A-bomb project at Los Alamos, N.M., were riddled with guilt over unleashing the immense power.

J. Robert Oppenheimer probably best summed up the sentiments of the physicists when in 1948 he said, "In some sort of crude sense which no vulgarity, no humor, no overstatement can quite extinguish, the physicists have known sin; and this is a knowledge which they cannot lose."

Since the development of the bomb and its inevitable spread to nations throughout the world, including the Third World, strategy for avoiding use of the bomb has been refined and international diplomacy has been changed dramatically. Mankind has learned to live with the bomb on a daily basis because, as Oppenheimer so aptly illustrated, once acquired the knowledge to destroy the world cannot be lost.

Not that there weren't scientists in the A-bomb project who would have changed the outcome if they could have. Albert Einstein, whose letter to Franklin D. Roosevelt on Aug. 2, 1939, persuaded the president to go ahead with a nuclear bomb project, was one.

"If I had known that the Germans would not succeed in constructing the atom bomb I would not have lifted a finger," Einstein said after World War II. His last public statement before his death in 1955 was a call for an end to the nuclear arms race.

In recent months Americans have witnessed the emotion associated with the idea of nuclear warfare. Anyone who viewed the destruction in Hiroshima and Nagasaki after the bomb was dropped in those cities to end the war in the Pacific in World War II or film clips of that scene can truthfully say that the real challenge facing mankind is to learn to live in peace and to forever refrain from use of nuclear power as a weapon of war.

Development of the A-bomb altered the entire structure of world power and international relations. Nuclear power holds the potential to change the world of the future for the better. But the destructive force displayed at Hiroshima and Nagasaki must be used wisely. Pandora's box was opened 37 years ago and can never be closed. Man must learn to live with the bomb in peace.

Pope should visit Poles

It is outrageous that the Soviet Union is trying to keep Pope John Paul II from visiting Poland next month, where millions of his countrymen and members of the Catholic faith live.

The pope, whose intrepid travels recently took him to Argentina and Britain, has said he would like to help his fellow Poles celebrate the 600th anniversary of the arrival in Poland of an icon known as the Black Madonna of Czestochowa, a symbol of the country's Catholicism and national pride.

The Soviet Union recently signalled its continuing opposition to a visit. Its official news agency, Tass, quoted at length a Czechoslovakian party newspaper's attack blaming the unrest in Poland on the pope's 1979 visit to his homeland and the activities of the Catholic Church there.

It shows either the duplicity, or stupidity, or both, of the Soviets, that they would attempt to foster the illusion that the responsibility for the long, widespread unrest in Poland rests with the Roman Catholic Church and Pope John Paul rather than with repressive communist rule.

The unrest stems from the yearning of the Polish people for freedom and better economic conditions, and it seems all too typical of the police state tactics used against the Solidarity union and its supporters that the communist leaders think they can accomplish something by keeping the religious leader of the Poles from them.

Pope John Paul is a man of peace and would not go to Poland if there were a danger of his contributing to violence and bloodshed. If that doesn't appear to be the case, he should go through with his trip to provide hope and inspiration to a people who have had to live through a long, dark night of communist oppression.

Another View:

Laxity on Capitol Hill

One of the least pleasant items on the congressional agenda is the investigation into allegations — so far unsubstantiated — on drug trafficking and illicit sexual behavior on Capitol Hill. Whether members of Congress and youthful congressional pages are involved — as some pages have charged — or not, even rumors of such a scandal have already cast a nervous chill over an institution so recently tainted by the Abscam affair.

Whatever unsavory facts may yet be brought to light, the most startling revelation to date has been of the remarkably lax supervision that is exercised over the pages, some of them as young as 14 years. Outside their work and school hours, pages in many cases come and go unsupervised, some obtaining and maintaining their own living quarters as if they were adults. No doubt this laxity varies greatly, depending on whether and what kind of living arrangements are made by parents or individual members of Congress who appoint pages. Even so, it is clear that no satisfactory system exists for supervision of youngsters not yet mature enough to deal with pressures and temptations of their special circumstances. Whatever else Washington is, it is very different from the districts from which most of the pages come.

Warnings of the "potential time bomb" represented by the pages' unsupervised free time have been made periodically within Congress, but a number of bills introduced to provide a central dormitory and proper supervision have not passed. Congress did acquire a piece of land in the District of Columbia some years ago, and construction of a living facility was authorized, but again nothing was done. It's to be hoped that the present scandal, even if it turns out to be of little consequence, will provide the impetus for Congress to do something that should have been done long ago.

Pages have served in the House for more than two centuries, and in the Senate since the Civil War era. Whether the current incident required an age of permissiveness to happen, or a post-Abscam atmosphere to bring it to light, action should be taken quickly to provide a greater measure of control over the adolescents involved. Failing that, Congress should reserve the coveted page jobs for young men and women of less vulnerable age.

ART BUCHWALD

Watergate wasn't meant to wallow in!

As many of you may have noticed, recently the country celebrated the 10th Anniversary of the Watergate break-in. Unlike many people, my wife and I did not wallow in it. We decided to have a quiet dinner at home and watch TV, rather than go out to an expensive nightclub and put on funny hats and throw confetti in the air, as many of our friends were doing.

Art Buchwald

We wanted to be with each other as we were on that fateful morning when five men were arrested for illegally entering the Democratic National Headquarters' offices on the sixth floor of the Watergate office-apartment complex.

Like so many Americans, I remember the exact moment when I heard the news. It was seven o'clock on Saturday morning, and as I turned on the radio the announcer at the end of his news broadcast, made mention of the break-in.

"My God," I said, sitting up in bed. "They broke into the Watergate."

My wife opened her eyes, startled by my reaction. "Why are you getting so excited about a victimless crime?" she asked. "There is more to this news item than meets the eye. This thing could lead to the Oval Office of the White House."

"How do you know?" she asked me as I started doing my daily 50 pushups.

"I don't know for certain. But something smells about this whole thing. Why would five men risk everything to break into Democratic National Headquarters unless they were part of a much larger conspiracy that could involve the highest officials of this land?"

"But why the Watergate?" she asked.

"Why not the Watergate?" I replied, jogging in place for three miles. "This looks like something that nut, Gordon Liddy, would think up as part of a Plumbers' plan in the White House." What are plumbers doing in the White House?"

I lifted two 100-pound barbells, "I can't get a direct answer from anyone, but I think they're involved in wiretapping, break-ins and dirty tricks. Somehow they're connected with the committee to re-elect the president and John Mitchell."

"But," she said, "how will this involve Nixon?"

"It doesn't involve him at this moment. But if I know the president, as soon as he hears about it, he will call in his legal counsel, John Dean, and try to cover the whole thing up."

"That would be obstruction of justice and lead to impeachment or resignation," she said.

"Exactly. When the heat is on, Haldeman and Ehrlichman and Colson will try to sacrifice Dean, and at that point he'll start singing better than Beverly Sills."

"But," my wife said as she watched me on the chinning bar, "where is the smoking gun?"

"The tapes. Nixon records everything in his office on a voice-activated machine. When Congress hears the conversations the president had with Dean, Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Colson, they'll have no choice but to vote for impeachment. It could be one of the darkest periods in American history, but it will prove the system works, thanks to a vigilant press, and a judge who stuck to his guns."

"I can't believe you," my wife said. "You can get all of that out of one teeny news item on the radio about a third-rate burglary."

"That's what I'm paid for," I said modestly. "You never accept a news item on face value. You have to figure out what is behind the story."

"What are you going to do about it?"

"Nothing. At least nothing until the Saturday night massacre."

"Is there going to be a Saturday night massacre?"

"I feel so helpless," my wife cried. "Shouldn't we at least warn Nixon?"

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Navy's 'court painters' costing thousands

WASHINGTON — Not all the Navy's painters are engaged in the lowly drudgery of chipping decks and slapping on battleship gray. The Navy also employs a staff of skilled artists who paint portraits, landscapes and favorite ships to grace the walls of the admirals and their friends.

Jack Anderson

This corps of artists, reminiscent of court painters of the Renaissance, produces original oils of whatever subjects the admirals order. It costs the taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars a year for the Navy brass to play patrons of the arts.

I sent my associates Donald Goldberg and John Dillon over to the Navy Publications and Printing Service to check out reports of abuse. Here's what they found:

— Artists' work logs listing subjects commissioned by the Navy's high muckamucks. Among the paintings of ships and submarines were such landlubberly scenes as landscapes, wildlife, a bullfighter, a dog and a belly dancer.

— An unfinished portrait of an unidentified civilian. Sources said he was an eye surgeon who had operated on a Navy official.

— Thank-you notes over the years that clearly suggest the unofficial use of official Navy artists. Here are a few excerpts:

A rear admiral: "Thanks so much for touching up the picture of my brother-in-law. Please call on me if I can help you in any way."

Civilian official: "The painting which you have done of my home is something I will always treasure. I have placed it in the most prominent spot in my office."

Navy attorney: "Just a note to tell you how thrilled everyone in the office is over the painting of Mount Fuji. It is a pleasure to look at it and the haystacks resplendent in their snowy mantles ... We are looking forward to the others, especially the one with the dory ..."

Congressional aide: "It goes without saying that you clearly exploded your talents in the production of my dear mother's portrait ... It was shown for the first time up at my oldest sister's home ... amongst old friends, and it was nothing short of sensational."

The misuse of Navy artists should be no surprise to the top brass. Two years ago, the artists' operation was the subject of a joint command inspection. Here's what the inspectors wrote in a report that is still classified:

"The bulk of the artists' work consists of portraiture, landscapes, seascapes, ships, etc., as requested on an undocumented, unreimbursed basis ... When completed work has been delivered to the requestor, its disposition is unknown ...

"The authority for performing this function is unknown, the legality is questionable, and revelation outside the Navy is potentially a subject of public criticism."

Artists told my staff that the recommendation has been ignored. The exact cost of the court painters is hard to determine, but sources say the whole operation costs more than $350,000 a year in salaries alone.

Footnote: The official Navy response to my inquiry was: "Oil paintings or objects having significant Navy interest and-or historical value are created in response to official requests on a cost-reimbursable basis." Belly dancers? Bullfighters? Mother? In the old Navy, these would have been handled by the nearest tattoo artist.

ROGUE COPS: As part of President Reagan's "New Federalism," the states are taking over the responsibility for weeding out bad cops and brutal or corrupt prison officers. The decentralization seems to be working.

In the past, much of the cleanup was handled by the federal government through civil rights and other statutes. The new trend in getting rid of crooks and sadists is "decertification," which allows states to dump the rotten apples through administrative procedures.

In Florida, for example, the law requires certification of all law-enforcement and correctional officers after 320 hours of training. And after a hearing, the Criminal Justice Standards and Training Commission can suspend or revoke those whose conduct isn't up to snuff.

Since 1975, a total of 67 Florida officers have been decertified — enough to draw a profile of the average "bad cop." He was white, age 35, had at last a high-school education and had been on the force six years. Most were uniformed officers or deputy sheriffs, but 7 percent were police chiefs.

Larceny was the biggest cause of decertification; drugs, fraud and sex offenses comprised the next-biggest category.

About nine states have active decertification programs for police officers; only three include correctional officers in the process. Florida, which has the most rigorous system, has received an increasing number of queries from other states for how-to-do-it information.

CRACKING THE IMAGE: Interior Secretary James Watt has drawn heat for the lordly way he used government facilities for private shindigs. But his off-duty style is downright humble. When he was spotted at his favorite Washington pizzeria the other day, a small crowd gathered around a long tan limousine to watch his departure. Instead, Watt emerged from the pizzeria and drove off in a modest Plymouth subcompact.

GEORGE F. WILL

'Fine tuning' on punishment just legislation

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's flamethrower has been extinguished for the summer, but not before capital punishment again caused the Constitution to get singed.

George F. Will

The Court has hitherto said that such punishment is not inherently "cruel and unusual," but has been unable to suppress its instinct for fine-tuning. Now the Court has held, 5-4, that capital punishment would be "cruel and unusual" if inflicted on Earl Enmund, 50, who planned and participated in a robbery during which a Florida couple, ages 86 and 74, were murdered.

The couple resisted with a gun, and evidently were killed by two of Enmund's friends, his role perhaps being confined to driving the getaway car. But under Florida's felony murder rule a person can be sentenced to death if he was present at, and abetted, a robbery during which murder occurred. Enmund claimed that the death penalty would be unconstitutionally disproportionate because he personally neither took, attempted to take, nor intended to take life.

Justice White, for the majority, recalled that when the Court held in 1977 that the death penalty is excessive for rape, it cited "objective factors," including statistics about legislative actions, to discern society's "evolving standard" concerning punishment. By making various narrow distinctions, White is able to argue that only nine jurisdictions allow capital punishment for precisely the sort of participation in a felony murder that Enmund is guilty of — at least as White characterizes Enmund's participation.

For the minority, Justice O'Connor stops short of the old rebuke that White uses statistics the way a drunk uses lamp posts — for support, not illumination. But she says his method of counting states can not hide the fact that of 35 states that have the death penalty, 21 permit it for felony murders even when the defendant did not commit the homicidal act and had not intended to kill. Three additional states require some finding about mental state (such as "extreme indifference to life"), but not the intent to kill that the Court has now made a constitutional requirement for imposition of the death penalty. So in the two-thirds of the states that impose the death penalty, the person sentenced need not have killed or have had an intention of killing. Hence the majority is wrong to say the "society" has conclusively rejected capital punishment for involvement in felonies that result in murders.

White emphasizes the principle that causing death intentionally should be punished more severely than participating in a crime during which someone else kills. O'Connor accuses White of "disingenuously" characterizing Enmund as a mere "robber" playing a "relatively minor" role in the crime, whereas in fact he was initiator and planner. Thus he is at least partly responsible for the murders. Hence it is unreasonable to say that this case, like the case involving a death sentence for rape, involves punishment disproportionate to the kind of harm done.

White emphasized that the death penalty for accomplices in felonies involving murders is rare: Enmund is one of just three such persons sentenced to death in 25 years, and the infrequency of the sentence makes its deterrent effect negligible.

But White makes a startling use of a statistic to make his point. He says the felony murder rule can not be a significant deterrent because the likelihood of a killing during a robbery is not substantial. True, killings occur during only about one-half of one percent of all robberies. But in 1980 there were 548,809 robberies: One-half of one percent came to 2,361 persons killed.

That is more than have been killed in the violence in Northern Ireland in the last 12 years. If an infectious disease killed 2,361 persons in a year there would be something like panic. There was when polio was killing 300.

All the Court can do concerning the deterrent value of the felony murder rule, O'Connor says, is speculate. But that is the sort of judgment about which legislatures should be granted broad discretion.

For centuries various societies have used various versions of the felony murder rule to say to participants in armed robberies: We are serious-deadly serious — about stopping you. Now the court has — what? discovered? — that the Constitution says that capital punishment is disproportionate unless a murderer had a particular intent. But O'Connor wonders, what principle of constitutional reasoning justifies disqualifying the intent to commit armed robbery knowing that it involves risk of death for the victim?

The answer is: No constitutional principle requires what the majority did. What the majority did was not constitutional law, it was legislation.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On July 15th, 1945, Italy declared war on Japan, its former Axis partner, in World War II.

On this date:

In 1948, the U.N. Security Council ordered a truce in Palestine.

In 1963, the United States, Britain and Soviet Union opened talks in Moscow on a treaty to forbid nuclear testing.

In 1975, an American Apollo spacecraft and a Soviet Union Soyuz blasted into orbit for a rendezvous in space.

Detained Haitians may soon be allowed free

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is vowing to keep detaining newly arrived illegal aliens, but says it will no longer try to block the release of 1,800 Haitians now in custody.

The department said Wednesday it will not ask the Supreme Court to stop an order requiring the speedy release of the Haitians, who are being held in camps in six states and Puerto Rico.

The government promised to go ahead with a formal appeal of the legal issues involved in the United States' detention policies, and maintained it will detain future illegal aliens.

"The department will continue its policy of firmly enforcing the law by apprehending and detaining any aliens who try to enter the United States illegally," the government's announcement said.

On Tuesday, the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta refused to block a release order issued last month by U.S. District Judge Eugene P. Spellman in Miami.

Spellman ruled that the Haitians were illegally interned when the government failed to provide advance warning of its decision to confine them. He ordered their release "forthwith" while the Haitians await federal hearings on applications for political asylum.

Associate Attorney General Rudolph W. Giuliani told the appeals court that a stay of Spellman's order was critical to prevent a mass arrival of Haitians and other illegal aliens on American shores.

The government previously had said it would adopt an "experimental" policy to begin releasing some of the Haitians and objected to Spellman's imposition of his own plan.

Estimates of the timing of the release of the 1,800 Haitians vary, although there appears to be agreement it will start by the end of this month.

The Justice Department said:

"It is not possible to accurately estimate when the Haitians now in detention might be released. Voluntary agencies representing the Haitians have a significant amount of procedural work to do under the district court order. They earlier had indicated the first releases might come before the end of July."

A spokeswoman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service said the Haitians could be out in the next two to three weeks, noting that volunteer agencies must complete screening to place the Haitians with their sponsors.

Lawyers for the Haitians, however, say that some of the detainees could be freed by week's end.

"They should start leaving within the next several days, and certainly in the course of the next two weeks," according to Ira Kurzban of the Haitian Refugee Center Inc.

Official says decision bodes well with Haitians

MIAMI (AP) — Imprisoned Haitian refugees, whose hopes for freedom have been raised and then dashed several times, are feeling "upbeat" after a Justice Department decision not to try to block their release, an immigration official says.

Beverly McFarland, a U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service spokeswoman, said Wednesday the mood at the Krome Avenue Detention Center southwest of Miami "has been consistently upbeat" for the past few days since resettlement workers began interviewing Haitians.

"While I think they're feeling very positive, I can't say they're ecstatic," said Gerry Wynne of the U.S. Catholic Conference's Washington office, who is in Miami to coordinate the resettlement. "They've been let down before."

Widespread depression at the camp had been reported last week as the government continued its efforts to seek a stay of a June 18 ruling by a federal judge that the government release the refugees "forthwith."

The Krome facility houses 450 of the Haitians. The court decision affected 1,800 held in camps in six states and Puerto Rico.

On Wednesday, the Justice Department said that although it won't seek emergency help from the U.S. Supreme Court, "the department will continue its policy of firmly enforcing the law apprehending and detaining any aliens who try to enter the United States illegally."

The Justice Department also said it will seek a formal appeal of the legal issues involved in detaining undocumented aliens who arrive in the United States.

U.S. District Court Judge Eugene Spellman earlier gave temporary permission to immigration authorities to detain any newly arriving Haitians, after the government warned that thousands more Haitians would flee to the United States if the threat of incarceration was removed.

Study says TB common among incoming Haitians

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors should be on the lookout for cases of tuberculosis among newly arrived Haitian refugees because the disease is unusually common among these people, a study says.

The review found there are 650 cases of TB for every 100,000 newly arrived refugees. By comparison, the rate is 24 cases for each 100,000 people across the United States.

ERA reenters mainstream with House, Senate sponsors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Equal Rights Amendment has been born again.

Two weeks after the amendment died because it failed to gain ratification, the measure was reintroduced in Congress.

"Fairness, decency and simple justice demand that while there is still discrimination, the struggle for equality must go on," said Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., the major House sponsor.

Rodino was joined by 204 co-sponsors when the amendment was reintroduced Wednesday in the House. A similar measure in the Senate drew 51 supporters.

It will take a two-thirds majority in both chambers to send the constitutional amendment to the states for ratification.

At a news conference Wednesday in front of the Capitol, backers vowed to fight for the new amendment.

A 10-year effort to win ratification of the same amendment ended in failure June 30 when the deadline for ratification expired with only 35 of the required 38 states passing the measure.

"We must make certain, once and for all, that 'equality of rights under the law shall not be (denied or) abridged by (the United States or) by any state on account of sex," Rodino said, quoting the central provision of the ERA.

The amendment "would simply save women the time, energy and expense of going to court to win equal treatment," said Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J. "It would end the need for piecemeal litigation and legislation."

"We're here because we think the ERA is where America is and we think it's time the political process caught up," said Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass.

State Supreme Court agrees with interest charge decision

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In a 7-2 decision, the Texas Supreme Court Wednesday upheld lower court decisions that Bob Carroll Construction Co. had not charged usurious interest to C.L. Tyra on an open account.

Carroll brought a lawsuit in Midland County against Tyra for payment for construction, with Tyra counterclaiming that Carroll had charged usurious interest.

The trial court, without a jury, found for Carroll, with the decision upheld on appeal.

The Supreme Court considered only the question of usury, and said that it found there was evidence to support "the implied finding of bona fide error" on the part of Carroll.

The court noted that prior to filing the suit, Carroll sent invoices "reflecting only the amounts due for services rendered," and that after the bills became delinquent, two demand letters were sent seeking immediate payment but not asking for interest.

Carroll's attorney also testified that he had not been instructed to add interest to the account, but that when the petition for collection of the debt was filed, a claim for interest was inserted from another petition being used as a guide and he "failed to catch" the addition.

The court concluded that evidence supported the finding of a bona fide error and upheld the lower courts.

Paraplegic climbers push closer to summit of Guadalupe Peak

GUADALUPE NATIONAL PARK, Texas (AP) — A crew of paraplegic mountain climbers cut from six to three by the rigors of their week-long assault on Texas' highest peak planned to push to within range of the summit today.

Two of the original group of wheelchair-bound climbers quit the first day. And Wednesday, painful sores and blisters forced Bobby Leyes, 30, of Raleigh, N.C. to turn back.

The three remaining climbers camped less than two miles from the mountain's 8,751-foot summit Wednesday night, park superintendent Bill Dunmire said Wednesday.

They could reach the top by Friday, Dunmire said.

Dunmire said that after talking with the climbers, park rangers were confident they could make the summit safely.

"They reinforced that they're feeling stronger as they're going along," Dunmire said. "We don't have any real concern for their safety."

Today's stretch of the rocky, 4¾-mile trail leads through a shaded canyon and will be easier than Wednesday's, Dunmire said. Rangers have expressed concern about how the men would handle the 90-degree heat that bakes the West Texas mountain.

"They've been in a pretty rough section," Dunmire said Wednesday. "They had to negotiate a pretty rocky portion of the trip today. They don't seem at all discouraged."

Johnny Carson

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson will stand trial Sept. 20 on two counts of misdemeanor drunken driving, and his attorney said witnesses would testify that the entertainer was not intoxicated.

"There are a tremendous number of independent witnesses who observed Carson over a period of five hours and they are adamant that he wasn't intoxicated," Robert L. Shapiro said Wednesday after a hearing Carson did not attend because he was vacationing in France.

Shapiro also said "there is no evidence in any of the reports that therE was impaired driving."

Carson was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and driving with a blood-alcohol content in excess of 0.10 percent.

The lawyer previously indicated he would challenge the accuracy of the machine that found the 56-year-old talk show host had a blood-alcohol level of 0.16 percent.

Shapiro had said the machine had been returned to use after undergoing repairs just before Carson's arrest.

Carson was stopped Feb. 27. He said he had been at a local restaurant with his wife, Joanna, and friends.

If convicted, Carson could face either a jail sentence ranging from 48 hours to six months or a 90-day restriction, allowing him to drive to and from work only. He also could be fined $375 to $500 and be required to attend an alcohol-education program.

Princess Anne

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — A visit to Winnipeg by Princess Anne began in a fashion no one anticipated: A $10,000 horse race named in her honor was canceled.

The princess, an equestrian enthusiast, arrived Wednesday for a four-day visit to Manitoba, and had planned to be present for the $10,000 Princess Anne Stakes at Assiniboia Downs.

The track, however, has been having financial problems for months, and announced it was closing to prevent further losses.

The British princess will end her two-week Canadian tour Saturday.

Florida deer hunt not matter of choice

MIAMI (AP) — As naturalists launched last-minute bids to halt the killing of more than 2,000 deer in the Florida Everglades, state officials said they had no choice but to allow hunters to thin out the herd.

"We don't like the alternative we have been forced to choose," said Robert M. Brantly, executive director of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission. "The hunters don't like it and the general public does not like it. But at the same time we know that this is the only acceptable alternative available."

Brantly said Wednesday at a news conference in Tallahassee that hunters have been instructed to kill only sickly and smaller deer.

The three-day hunt, scheduled to begin at 6 a.m. Friday, is to thin 2,200 deer from a herd of about 5,500, thus lessening competition for food and dry land. Both have become scarce because of heavy rain.

Game officials said it is the only way to prevent death for an estimated two-thirds of the herd, which is spread out over a 500,000-acre conservation area.

Miami attorney Michael Hacker, who represents a coalition of animal lovers, was to go before a judge in the 3rd Florida District Court of Appeal today to seek a temporary injunction in court to halt the hunt. Both opponents and proponents of the hunt would get 10 minutes to argue their cases.

On Tuesday, Dade County Circuit Judge Edward S. Klein refused to grant a stay requested by Hacker, saying he lacked jurisdiction to override the hunt organized by the game commission.

Meanwhile, a businessman who said he would donate $25,000 to relocate the deer.

Ed Grossman of West Palm Beach said he would provide his own funds to help relocate the deer in a fashion similar to that used in 1966 when the same situation developed.

Grossman, who owns a drapery business, said relocation worked well in 1966, a statement disputed by game officials.

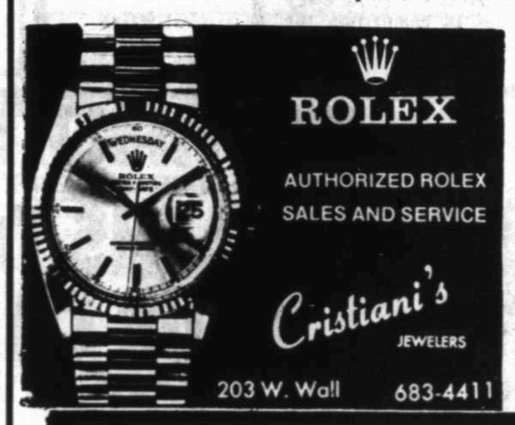

A wildlife scientist who joined Brantly in the Tallahassee news conference said food drops and relocation were tried in the 1966 deer kill, but failed to solve the problem.

Frank A. Hayes of the University of Georgia said deer reject unfamiliar food, and that relocation would result in 80 to 90 percent mortality. Doing nothing would mean death by disease or starvation to two-thirds of the herd, he added.

"You are dealing with animals that are under tremendous stress," he said, noting heat, disease, dwindling food supplies and harassment by wild hogs.

Grossman also contended that flooding in the Everglades is not as severe as the state claims, and if the dams were opened, the land could be drained in 24 hours.

Game officials have said that over a six-week period, water in the conservation area went from below ground level to 24 inches above ground. The remaining small tracts of high ground on which the deer have congregated make up less than 10 percent of the area, wildlife biologist Robert Ellis estimated.

Women in gray flannel II: On the road — women as business travelers

By MARLENE AIG
AP Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Wendy Reid Crisp spent 17 years as one of the "invisible women" in America on the road to do a job. She remembers that it was little things that made her travels a trial.

"Restaurants gave you bad tables and at breakfast, waitresses would whisper, 'I'll serve the men first. They're busy.' There was an automatic assumption you weren't really there on business," recalled Ms. Crisp, who worked in industrial public relations and computers before becoming editor of Savvy magazine.

"There were problems with room service. Hotels eyed you funny and thought you were a hooker if you went to your room late at night. Your credit cards took longer to check through. Car rentals always thought you were someone's wife."

Little things. "It wasn't anything you could raise your hand and say, it's an insult," she said.

BUT IN MUCH OF THE UNITED STATES, the days of the "invisible woman" are gone — or going. "The travel industry has been more sensitive than most about accommodating women," said Ms. Crisp. "There are more women in business suits and carrying briefcases."

TWENTY-FIVE PERCENT of the travel market is now female, according to the Air Transport Association of America, up from 19 percent four years earlier.

The numbers parallel results of a 1979 Travel Pulse survey, which found that individual women travel less frequently than men and tend to travel to meetings and conventions rather than on a regular basis.

What it means is a lot of business dollars.

AT UNITED AIRLINES, 15 percent to 17 percent of all business travelers are women, more than five times as many as a decade ago.

That's a lot of passengers. And the airline notes that women's travel is increasing at a time when air travel in general has declined.

"Stewardesses no longer treat you like a second-class citizen," said Karen Schechter, a products manager for Fieldcrest.

(United spokesman Chuck Novak says this change may have more to do with civil rights and economics than conscious airline policy. Since rules against married stewardesses were eliminated in 1966, the women who work on airplanes have gotten older.

("The average stewardess has been on the job 12 years and more than half are married. The old average was 26 months ... It used to be a flirty kind of job for young women. Now, the work force is older, more mature," he said.)

THE NUMBER OF WOMEN on the road also promises to fill a lot of rented cars, although women still comprise only 10 percent of the business.

Hertz Rent A Car courts female business travelers. Spokesman John Britton said that in 1981 women comprised 18 percent of all customers, more than double four years ago.

Britton noted the company offers several "convenience services" which are offered to both men and women, but which he says, "women find very attractive."

They include 24-hour road service, shuttle buses at major airports to drop customers off at their cars and wait for them to be safely inside, and more small cars, which women seem to prefer.

A 1980 MS. MAGAZINE SURVEY said about three million businesswomen spent 32 million nights on the road in 1979.

That's a lot of rooms, and hotels have taken the lead in understanding that while women travel for the same business reasons as men, society's attitudes toward the solo woman on the road need some updating.

Skirt hangers, irons and shower caps are now standard amenities at most major hotel chains.

"It's the small type of things you have to be sensitive to," said Michele Holter of Western International Hotels.

In 1976-77, Western set up a program to teach employees how to treat a businesswoman: Don't broadcast room numbers. Be aware that women may prefer rooms near elevators and a bed that isn't in the center of the room, where it can divert attention during a meeting. And put the check in the middle of the table, where she can grab it when she's the host.

THE CHAIN ALSO ISSUED "Tips for Woman Business Traveler."

Hyatt Corp. established the Regency Club for men and women. It's separate from the rest of the hotel and offers concierge service and extra security.

Hilton, which promotes itself as "America's Business Address," was in the forefront of catering to women when, in 1963, it established Lady Hilton rooms. "Those were the days of beige," says spokeswoman Lucy Skerston, who explained that the Lady Hilton rooms featured floral decorations, shower caps and makeup mirrors.

But, Mrs. Skerston said, because of the hotel's expansion and general redecorating, the Lady Hilton rooms have become the norm.

HILTON IS NOW EXPERIMENTING with a ladies floor at the Albuquerque Hilton. The 10th floor features a "hospitality suite" with an honor-system bar, irons, curling irons and a place for business women to meet one another, says the hotel's Assistant General Manager, David Supensky.

Each room has plants, extra plush towels, a hair dryer, a sewing kit and other amenities. The guests require a key for the elevator to the floor.

Supensky said the floor has been "very sucessful" and front desk help is trained to let female travelers know it exists. For now, the price is $2 lower than other rooms in the hotel, he said.

"It hasn't happened, but we guess if a man asked for a room on the floor, we couldn't discriminate. Women have brought their husbands and boyfriends without a problem."

WHILE THINGS HAVE IMPROVED for the woman business traveler, there are still things that make life on the road inconvenient.

"While hotels are no longer surprised to see you there any more and no longer wait for your husband to appear when you try to check in, it's not as easy as they say to get irons or skirt hangers," said Susan Breon, a spokeswoman for Gulf Oil Corp. in Pittsburgh.

There are still places where people ask Barbara Dettling, a Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. district sales manager, "What's a nice girl like you doing traveling alone?"

Spinning the 'New Girl' network — Playing the old corporate game

By MARLENE AIG
AP Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Men have been doing it for years: trading stock tips on the golf course, discussing promotions on the tennis court, sharing insider views of corporate life over drinks at the club.

It's the "old boy network," a web of social tips and advice that passes from generation to generation, company to company, and is as venerable an institution as the boys' night out.

"Men have always been taught to be part of the team and help each other," says Deane Laycock, founder of the Boston Luncheon Club and the National Alliance of Professional and Executive Women's Networks.

"Women were taught to be nice and have friends, and went their separate ways, especially after getting married."

BUT NOW MORE WOMEN are playing the corporate game — and forming their own teams. "Old" and "new girl networks" are cropping up as women begin to look at each other as a resource they never thought they had.

Connie Greaser is a founder of Women in Business in Los Angeles, an early network that grew out of a university seminar in 1974. "The initial purpose was socialization and finding one another and realizing we weren't the only ones having trouble," she says.

"The first legs of the old girls' networks had to be formalized," says Ms. Greaser, head of publications for the Rand Corp. in Santa Monica, Calif. "We didn't know who one another were. We had no place to run, like a local pub, to meet other people with the same problems."

"So many of us were isolated," says Mrs. Laycock, who works as a trust officer at Fiduciary Trust Co., and founded the Boston Luncheon Club to find other women in banking.

IN THE LAST THREE YEARS, two books on networking, one by Mary Scott Welch and the other by Carol Kleiman, have hit the market.

The National Association of Female Executives was founded 10 years ago by Wendy Rue as a "positive support system." In each issue of its publication, The Female Executive, it lists the names and phone numbers of women throughout the country who want to start a network.

"The looser the network, the more it works," she says. "It's sharing experiences and getting support. It's knowing someone else is there. It's getting contacts and sharing them and knowing what's out there."

Ms. Moore notes that the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics says 48 percent of all jobs come through personal contact, and "the higher you go in the executive tower, the more jobs are filled by word of mouth."

WOMEN FIND BEAUTICIANS and baby sitters by word of mouth, women active in networking say, so there's no reason why finding a new and better job can't happen the same way.

Many organizations, like the Financial Women's Association in New York and Women in Business in Los Angeles, make sure employers have the name of at least one woman on every list of people for every job opening and recommend women for corporate boards.

Catalyst, a multifaceted woman's organization, has been working to get women on corporate boards through its Corporate Board Resource.

Founder Felice Schwartz says, "It used to be corporations just wanted a woman who wouldn't make waves. Now, they want a woman who will make a contribution, not just be tokens."

IN 1969, Catalyst says, 46 women served on major corporate boards. Now, there are 336 women occupying 490 board positions.

Gulf Oil Corp. recently compiled a list of 1,500 business owned by women, and it became a corporate bestseller. Women in Busines in Los Angeles put together a similar list.

Ms. Greaser worries that while older women are eager to help younger women, younger women "have had it easy. They don't see the need to help other women. They have everything going for them and they don't support other women."

"We may be going backwards," she warns, "unless women realize they have to support each other for a long time. We're still not consdered equal out there."

Common query

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The most frequently asked question about appliances, reports a manufacturer, is: "What is the correct temperature for the fresh food area in a refrigerator?"

The answer, says Jean Hopwood, a consumer-affairs specialist for General Electric, is 35 to 40 F.

Ms. Hopwood says more than 100,000 questions reach GE annually.

"Sixty percent of the inquiries are written, and 40 percent are telephoned," she says.

Books and reading — A love for all seasons

By JOAN MILLS
(Special from Reader's Digest)

My teacher told my mother that I seemed to be tracing the words in my reader with my nose. And so, a few days later, I arrived at my classroom walking wobbly because the ground wasn't where it had been, and proud because now I wasn't just the littlest kid in school.

Now I was the littlest kid with spectacles!

GRANDLY THROUGH THE DOOR I went, stunning everybody; but then, I'd known I would.

The entire first grade crowded near, hollering for turns — grabby little boys in knickers and homemade haircuts, jealous little girls wearing butterfly bows and starched dresses. Miss Browne paused in distributing that morning's construction paper and paste, and smiled at the beamishness of me.

My new glasses went from hand to hand, from one befuddled set of eyes to the next. When they were returned, I thought them much improved by fingerprints, a loosened fit and the honor of it all.

CAREFULLY THEN, I hooked them over my ears, ceremoniously opened my reader, and held it at a comfortable distance. There on the page, still and crisp and bright, lay words of lovely legibility.

NOT THAT I COULD read much. We were only up to CAT, HAT, BAT, MAT and RAT. But I loved reading anyway. I loved it even when it was hard because I so loved books. I liked the heft of a book, grownup and significant. My senses faintly reeled at the scent of paper, printer's ink and glue. There was something profoundly satisfying in the shapes of letters and the neatness of words laid out exactly so upon the pages.

When I had been smaller yet, sitting tight against my mother while she read to me, I'd wondered how the inked words kept bedtime stories the same in every telling, the way I wanted them to be. I would whisper along with my mother's voice and shiver in the right places. Maybe, I thought, words held stories inside books like thumbtacks, so they couldn't slide around — which is how it is actually — thoughts and images pinned in place.

WHEN AT LAST I was reading real stories, the magical properties of words seemed even greater than before. Sometimes I held a book at arm's length, wanting to see what it was really made of. Printed paper, bound into covers! How could anything so flat and black and white fill my head and dizzy my heart?

How, just by my eyes seeing words, could I see clear visions of what I had never seen? Hear marching bands when silence filled the room?

Pulling the book closer, I leaned over to study the words one by one. In my speller, the same words had no life. Here, arranged in different order, no more than that, they swept me into miracles. Why? How could it be?

MARVELING, CERTAIN OF MAGIC, I followed the tracery of words into a story, and was transported from where I sat. I felt a deep tremor of awe and anticipation each time I opened a new book and smoothed the first page in a gesture of beginning.

Why such certainty of joy? Not every book was wonderful, surely. I'd read a few that weren't. But this one might be! And it would be different from any other I'd read in some way.

THE HABIT OF READING came as spontaneously as make-believe or the seasons. In the crotched branches of a bent apple tree, I read, and waited for a baby robin to burst his blue shell. I read in the attic, listening to the enclosing sound of rain, or out in the old packing box that served me as playhouse, cave and castle.

I read along with breakfast, wiggling my loose tooth; I read after supper, while my parents listened to the radio to hear what President Franklin Roosevelt was up to. I read on the trolley car, all the way to my music lesson.

Finally, in a bed lumpy with literature, I fell asleep as if among friends. The busiest of my days completed themselves with happy endings.

THE PLEASURE I FOUND then in books has never worn away, though my grownup days are as eventful, dutiful and various as any I spent when I was a child.

Now it's meetings, people, work and taxes. The weeds, the wash; this to paint and that to mend. It's emergencies and holidays and the telephone ringing. I drive the freeways, pedal my bike down quiet avenues, run for buses, chase after my very thoughts.

WHATEVER MY LIFT MAY HOLD — or lack — there is always an orderly mind for me to consult when my own seems less than sensible. Reading, I am spared a great deal of loneliness, ineptness and loss of faith. My private hours are fulfilled by admiration and compassion for the varieties of human experience.

Like the green plants banked in my window and the familiar dishes set out on the table, books express my life and furnish it. I like them where I can see them, ranged on shelves. They are friendly presences, beautiful and agreeable. And there's always a new one — fresh and unguessed-at — for me to know.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

No-wax floors: Pro and con

HI THERE!

My friends, here I am again with our ongoing dialogue on no-wax floors. To judge from the mail I've been deluged with, some of you love 'em, some of you hate 'em.

I've spent many hours talking with and listening to experts who represent major manufacturers of these floors to find out how long you can expect a no-wax floor to look good. Here's what I've learned about the factors that can cause problems.

WEAR AND TEAR: If you have kids and dogs that run in and out all day, the traffic on your floor eventually will take its toll.

ENVIRONMENTAL CONDITIONS: If you live in a sandy, dusty area where dirt is tracked in, a no-wax floor won't stand up as well.

Also if your floor gets a lot of direct sunlight, you can expect it to fade just as sun changes the color of draperies and upholstery.

INSTALLATION: If your no-wax floor is laid directly on a concrete slab, there is a chance that moisture can come up through the slab and discolor the flooring permanently.

CLEANING TECHNIQUE: If you clean the floor only once a week, it won't hold up well. It won't shine as you expect it to. Remember, just pushing the dirt around with a damp mop is not cleaning. You must mop, rinse out the mop, then go back over the floor with a clean mop.

VERY IMPORTANT: Before using a cleaner or dressing on a no-wax floor, it is essential to read floor-care instructions and follow them to the letter. Each brand of flooring is different when it comes to care so you must do exactly what's prescribed for your floor if you want to keep that no-wax finish intact.

This is where the hitch comes in. So many of you have written, telling me that you received no instructions on how to care for your floor when you purchased it, and are floating in the wind.

I called more than 15 stores, querying sales personnel about three different types of no-wax flooring. You wouldn't believe some of the misinformation they gave me. According to most of them, care involves damp-mopping once in a while, and perhaps applying a dressing or coating every now and then. What kind or how often, they didn't say. But that's not the point. Here's what is:

NO-WAX FLOORS ARE available in different qualities and prices, each grade with its own properties. The most expensive obviously is the best and supposed to hold up the longest. You still must sweep or mop it every day to keep it in good condition. The key to success with that no-wax floor is: Keep it clean! The less dirt and grit to scratch or wear away the shine, the longer it will last.

Personally, I'd rather skip a no-wax floor and put down something cheaper than spend a bundle of my money — and my time and energy — keeping a no-wax floor shiny. What I do is put down cheap carpeting and replace it when it gets worn or I get tired of it.

It's up to you. — Heloise

P.S. More later on this subject!

MEDICINE TIME

Dear Heloise: When my daughter had an infection and had to take antibiotics four times a day until the medication was gone (10 days worth), I had a hard time remembering when to give it to her, and whether or not I had.

I then made a game out of it. I attached a piece of paper to the refrigerator door listing the doses per day. After each dose of medicine, it was her duty to put a crayon slash mark through that dose on the paper.

It got to where she couldn't wait to take her medicine so she could write it down, and I had a constant reminder in front of me as to how many times she had taken her medicine.

Ten days is a long time! — Debbie Gregoire

'Specklaces' — Lastest fashion

By GWEN JONES
Hearst Feature Service

Remember those unsightly metal chains and black cords that kept Granny from misplacing her bifocals? Well, the latest versions of "specklaces" — in everything from hot pink plastic to rolled Italian leather — are the eye-fashion hit of the summer.

These specklaces — for want of a better name — can be attached to a variety of frames. They have popped up at rock concerts, shopping malls and the beach, but it was on the ski slopes last winter that the eyewear accessories originally took off, says David Cutler, an optician at Optical Fashion Center in Beverly Hills. "Skiers," Cutler explains, "don't want their $100 to go flying downhill."

The "in" look consists of a pair of expensive sunglasses (such as the popular Vaurnet) that dangle from the neck on an inexpensive, brightly colored elasticized cord. Cords and chains retail from $3.50 for plastic to $10 for leather.

At Too Soon To Know, the avant garde boutique in West Hollywood, clear red plastic specklaces are suspended from the most slender of sunglasses. The shop's parent firm, also called Too Soon To Know, wholesales the style nationwide, says the boutique's manager, Michelle Lamy; and trendy Bloomingdales in New York has all but depleted her supply.

DEAR ABBY

Julia Child offers food for thought

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was in Memphis doing some fund-raising cooking demonstrations for Planned Parenthood, and on every occasion I was picketed by a dozen or so Right-to-Lifers. I didn't talk to them because it was not the place to make a scene, but I did want to ask them this:

"What are your plans for these children once they are born? Are you going to help provide, for instance, for the child of a retarded 13-year-old daughter of a syphilitic prostitute? What about the child of a convicted wife-beater and child molester? Or that of a tubercular and abandoned welfare mother who already has six children?

"These are extreme cases, of course, but there are plenty of them, and these are the future citizens who, for the most part, end up in our juvenile courts and in our jails. If you insist on their birth, you must also assume responsibility for their lives."

What do Right-to-Lifers have to say on this subject? Let's hear from them — if indeed they have considered this matter at all, which I very much doubt. — JULIA CHILD

DEAR JULIA: For the world's most famous cook to have whipped up a world-famous controversy is a case of just deserts!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old boy who still wets the bed. I am embarrassed about it and would die if my friends found out. My sister (she's 10) holds this over me, and when she wants to upset me she threatens to tell my friends.

I really try not to wet my bed, but I can't help it. My mom is always complaining about the wash and I feel terrible, but I don't do it on purpose. I guess I must be a very heavy sleeper. I've been to doctors and they all say I will grow out of it. But what should I do now? — BED WETTER

DEAR BED WETTER: Ask your mother to get a Wee Alert Buzzer (it's in the Sears catalog). It's a pad that goes under the bedsheet, and when the slightest moisture hits it, the buzzer goes off and awakens you BEFORE you wet the bed. I have been recommending it to my readers for years. It's the most effective solution to bed-wetting I have ever found. In the meantime, be assured that you are not alone. Many more kids your age wet the bed than you know, and it's nothing to be ashamed of.

Forget diet, authors urge

MAPLEWOOD, N.J. (AP) — Overweight people who want to shed pounds should quit dieting, says writer Gael MacLeod.

"Diets only remind you that you are fat," explains Mrs. MacLeod who is co-author with her husband, William, of the book, "M.I.N.D. Over Weight."

She also recommends abolishing bathroom scales, calorie counters, carbohydrate measures and food scales, saying these tools only reinforce a "fat" self-image.

Flexible work hours: An option for mothers who are also employed

By ROBERT P. STUDER
Copley News Service

IRVINE, Calif. — Whether by choice or because single-income households are suffering in a declining economy, mothers by the millions are opting for the workplace.

For the first time in the nation's history the number of children with mothers who work — 31.8 million — now exceeds the number of children with mothers at home — 26.3 million.

Between 1960 and 1980, single-income families declined from 49.6 percent to 22.4 percent, and the percentage of women in the work force increased from 32 percent to 51 percent.

A sociologist at the University of California at Irvine recently studied 545 Canadian families and their daily schedules. He sees a solution to working mothers' stress in a system of flexible part-time work hours, or a shared job that offers benefits similar to full-time employment.

William Michelson explains that "tension levels, both at home and at work, were noticeably reduced when women in the studies had jobs that were either flexible or part-time, or both."

Michelson, professor of social ecology at University of California at Irvine, pursued his study in Toronto, Canada, while he was a faculty member at the University of Toronto. He believes his findings are equally applicable to any Western nation.

He has been analyzing his massive pool of data for the past two years that he has been at UC Irvine. His findings have been forwarded to Canada's Ministry of National Health and Welfare, which had funded the three-year project.

ALTHOUGH THERE IS A GROWING TREND for increasing numbers of mothers with young children to have outside employment, or to be single, Michelson said, "the community has yet to recognize what adaptations may be needed to make outside employment and single parenthood more viable and less stressful."

The researcher used a "time budget" and a "busy scale" as tools to study the impact of a mother's employment on family life.

In the time budget, mothers and fathers were asked to reconstruct the previous day, itemizing every activity and recalling whether they felt relaxed or tense while doing each activity — and then noting whether each activity was "voluntary" or "involuntary."

The busy-scale, on the other hand, disclosed whether the individual believed the previous day had been too busy, just right, not busy enough.

Not surprisingly, the studies disclosed:

• MORNINGS AND EVENINGS were usually the most tense priods of the day for working mothers as obligations between work and family overlapped. Creating the most tensions were such activities as getting children ready for school and getting them there, preparing to leave for work in the morning and returning at home to a list os evening chores, preparing meals and caring for the household.

• MORE THAN A THIRD OF THE MOTHERS believed nothing could be done to relieve their time pressures, although nearly all (94 percent) tried to reduce the emotional overload by sleeping less. Others cut down on housecleaning (55 percent), bought "convenience foods" (28 percent), or prepared food in advance (20 percent).

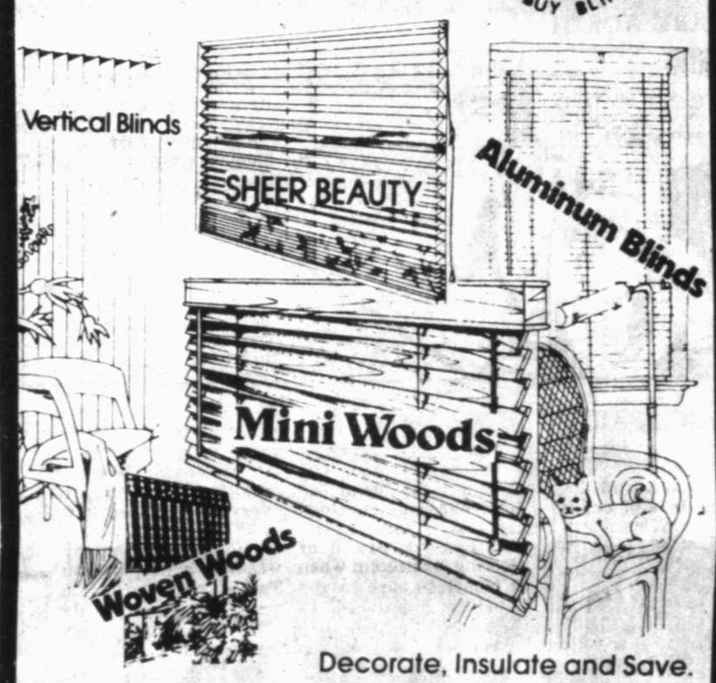

• MOTHERS WITH FULL-TIME JOBS suffered the worst from tension, and the differences between "actual and ideal time-pressures" were the greatest for employed mothers, he said.

Michelson also explored the role of husbands in the equation and found, as many a harried working mother has long ago figured out for herself, that while husbands did more of the housework and child-care when their wives were employed, the amount of time they spent on these chores was nothing near parity.

Based, therefore, on those 545 families' experience, Michelson said he is convinced that jobs that "permit flexibility, whether the flexibility concerns the work schedule or the nature of the work itself, create fewer tensions and pressures.

"It's true that most women cited money as their primary reason for working," he said, "however, many of these women might choose to exchange some of their salary for the ability to construct their days in a more satisfying way, provided part-time jobs with the same wage rates and benefits as full-time employment could be made more readily available."

HE POINTED TO JOB-SHARING, where two people share the same task, as an excellent method of reducing pressure and tension for mothers. In these cases, he said, the two workers would share the workload and the salary and both would receive benefits offered by the company.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Ginger Rogers and the still glamorous Barbara Stanwyck celebrate this birthday with you. Miss Stanwyck was awarded a special Academy Award this year for her distinguished film career. Singles find romance more stable in the months ahead. You could hear wedding bells in either December or early spring. Employment conditions improve and you are rewarded for your past contributions. Scrutinize any new offers. Something that sounds quite solid may actually be rather flimsy. Real estate can be a source of wealth. Be sure to get top dollar for anything you sell! Wise investments free you from financial worry.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unexpected financial opportunities come your way. Grab them! Share your ideas, hopes and doubts with mate. Romance moves in a new, more exciting direction.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Ignore any gossip about your neighbors. An artistic or creative project brings you a second income. Auditions should result in rave notices. New contracts are in the works.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Chance remarks could create anxiety if certain vital facts or figures are omitted. Scratch beneath the surface. Afternoon brings an unexpected meeting or romantic encounter.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Postpone asking for favors and stick to routine work. Real estate matters can be touch-and-go; consult the experts. Question what strangers tell you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Business negotiations gain momentum. You would be wise to listen intently and soak up advice. Political events at a distance could affect a personal relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An imaginative approach speeds progress at work. Original ideas receive a warm welcome from authority figure. Your best relationship is with an older person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A down-to-earth approach will be well received by client or employer. Inspired ideas can be made to fit changing circumstances. Trust your intuition.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Home and family dominate today. A lack of money presents few problems, but many challenges! Share your ideas, hopes and doubts with those who care.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your mind is razor-sharp this morning. Tackle business affairs that require intense concentration. Financial aid arrives from an unexpected quarter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Putting in overtime fattens your paycheck but complicates your personal life. A chat with mate alleviates tension. A raise or promotion is in the wind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use your latent talents and surprise both yourself and higher-ups! You could be next in line for a promotion or raise. Write letters.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Charitable work is favored. Do something for an individual who is housebound. Someone from your past suddenly reappears. Go ahead and be sentimental!

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2 ◇	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

The beginner is fascinated by the finesse, so much so that he tends to take every one in sight. The expert understands the possibilities of the finesse, but seeks to find ways of avoiding taking any, if he can.

The bidding needs a word of explanation. North's opening bid of two diamonds was the Flannery Convention. It showed a limited opening bid with precisely four spades and five hearts. South's jump to three hearts was invitational and North, who held a maximum opening bid for the convention, raised to game.

West led a club. The neophyte would have little or no problem with the hand. He would take two spade finesses and a diamond finesse, and probably end up losing two spade tricks and two diamonds for down one. He would count himself most unlucky, and indeed he would be. But the expert would make his contract, and there is nothing the defenders could do to stop him!

The winning technique is to ruff a club at trick two. Declarer returns to his hand with a trump and ruffs another club with a high trump. Now he gets back to hand with another trump, in the process drawing the last of the defenders' trumps, and leads a diamond or a spade. He simply covers any card West plays. East can win the trick cheaply, but he is in an unenviable position. If he plays another club, he yields a ruff-and-sluff to declarer, and the most his side can get is three tricks in the pointed suits (spades and diamonds). But if he returns either of those suits, he sets up a trick for declarer in whichever suit he returns. Either way, declarer will make his contract.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Muse Air 'loses' in FAA slot lottery

By SCOTT BARRETT
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Dallas-based Muse Air Corporation suffered a setback Wednesday when they failed to win high priority in a Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) inter-airline lottery to reallocate routes once held by Braniff Internaional.

Muse originally acquired the routes on an "emergency" basis when Braniff went bankrupt and the FAA redistributed Braniff's routes. The FAA is now allowing all airlines a fair crack at the routes.

Today's drawing established a priority sequence for airport arrival slots. Muse drew 15th out of 44 airlines for Dallas-Fort Worth; eighth out of 37 for Houston; 22nd out of 24 for Tulsa; and sixth out 20 for Midland-Odessa.

Once an airline has drawn it is allowed to pick three arrival times. An FAA spokeman said that the top nine draws pretty well fill up all slots.

In Dallas, Muse Chairman of the Board Lamar Muse indicated he was disappointed at the prospect of losing routes and even said he feared his company might go bankrupt. Muse was particullary upset given the fact that the FAA recently approved a loan to Muse in order that it might expand its business.

In September of 1981 the government approved a loan to Muse from Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company of Chicago. Muse used the $38 million loan towards a $42 million purchase of two 55-seat DC 9 airplanes. The Muse fleet now consists of four aircraft.

At the time of the loan, FAA administrator J.Lynn Helms said that the approval "should in no way be interpreted as an agreement on my part to accord preferential treatment to Muse Air Corporation."

Nontheless, confused by what it considers to be contradictory government action, Muse filed a petition with the FAA when it announced that the routes would be opened to all carriers through a lottery. The petition calls for Muse to continue to hold the routes it won on an emergency basis after Braniff folded. The FAA is expected to act on the petition soon.

The FAA lottery process was initiated as a result of the air traffic controllers strike last summer. Given reduced staffs at airports, the FAA responded by cutting back airport capacity by 50 percent within a week.

Once military controllers and others took over for the striking controllers and route capacity was restored, the problem of reallocating scheduling times arose. The FAA then came up with a lottery system to be implemented for different calendar segments. The current lottery will cover August through October.

How the airlines fared

Business inventories drop, but sales picture worsens

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI
AP Business Writer

A brisk sales pace helped U.S. businesses cut their inventories in May, the government says, but sales have been slipping ever since.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday that businesses cut inventories of their unsold goods 0.9 percent in May, the biggest decline in at least 15 years. Total sales in May rose 2.5 percent.

Plunging inventory levels mean relatively slow production, but economists say inventory cutbacks can be good news for the future since manufacturers are unlikely to increase production and hire back laid-off workers while facing big stocks of unsold goods.

On Tuesday, however, the Commerce Department reported retail sales for June fell 1.5 percent. The government reports retail sales the second week of the month for the preceding month, but reports on business inventories are two months behind.

On Wednesday, major domestic automakers said new car sales continued to plunge in early July, down 16.4 percent in the first 10 days of the month. An industry trade journal said the five major carmakers will produce 11.4 percent more cars this week than last week but 15.7 percent fewer than the same week last year.

"Following the May business pickup, the economy faltered in June," said Robert Dederick, Commerce's undersecretary-designate for economic affairs.

Said John Savacool, a private economist with Wharton Econometrics, "I suspect we're going to see some inventory building in the very near future. But manufacturers are not going to start to produce more goods until consumers spend more."

Meanwhile, a $1.6 billion modernization was delayed at a U.S. Steel Corp. plant in Lorain, Ohio, because of the recession. And Republic Steel Corp. announced it was shutting down its central alloy district, laying off 3,400 workers in the Ohio cities of Canton and Massillon.

The steel industry is operating at less than 50 percent of capacity. Top steel executives are blaming cheap imports for decimating their business.

Western European officials were scheduled to be in Washington today for another round of talks aimed at resolving the dispute over subsidies on foreign steel. U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige met with officials last week in Belgium and West Germany over the issue.

The Commerce Department last month issued a preliminary ruling that found nine countries, including seven in the Common Market, of unfairly subsidizing steel exports to this country.

In other economic news:

—Former Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said alcohol and drug addiction could become America's No. 1 health problem. He said they cost business and industry more than $100 billion a year.

—A study by the U.S. League of Savings Associations said homebuyers in the Northeast and the West had to stretch their household budgets further than their counterparts in other regions last year to afford housing purchases. It said 45 percent of homebuyers in the Northeast and 56 percent in the West spent more than one-fourth of their monthly income on housing expenses.

—J.L. Hudson Co. chairman P. Gerald Mills announced Wednesday that the firm will close its 28-story downtown Detroit department store after this year's Christmas holiday season. "The long-term sales trend of the downtown store over the past 20 years has been consistently downward, even during Detroit's most prosperous years," Mills said. The firm had maintained a store there for 101 years.

RRC reports June results

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent announced that Texas operators reported 122 gas and 75 oil discoveries in June 1982.

One year ago, 110 gas and 53 oil discoveries were filed with the state's energy regulatory agency.

Gas discoveries in the sixth month of the year included 51 in deep South Texas, 21 in the Refugio area, 16 in Southeast Texas, 15 in West Central Texas, five in North Texas, four in the Panhandle, three each in east Texas and the San Antonio area, two in the San Angelo area and one each in East Texas and the San Antonio area, two in the San Angelo area and one each in East Central Texas and the Midland area.

Oil discoveries included 19 in southeast Texas, ten in West Central Texas, eight in North Texas, six each in East Texas and the Refugio, Midland and Lubbock areas, four each in deep south Texas and the San Angelo area, and two each in East Central Texas, the Panhandle, and the San Antonio area.

Through the first six months of this year, there have been 730 gas and 317 oil discoveries throughout the state. For the same period last year, there were 588 gas and 332 oil discoveries.

In June, oeprators reported 382 exploratory and field tests wound up as dry holes. New applications for permits to drill oil and gas tests totaled 2,586 in June compared with 3,704 in the same period of 1981.

Applications to drill, deepen, plug back and for service wells in June amounted to 2,945 against 4,014 a year earlier.

SEPM to sponsor symposium

The Permian Basin Section-Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists will sponsor a symposium on the geological evolution of the Permian Basin in middle to late 1983. This symposium will mark 40 years of progress since the last such comprehensive symposium. At this time, the SEPM is calling for all interested persons to submit manuscripts for oral presentation at the symposium, and for formal publication.

The national SEPM and AAPG have both expressed interest in publishing these papers as a special publication. One of the national societies will print this publication.

The society is interested in receiving manuscripts dealing with any aspect of the regional synthesis of sedimentology, structural geology, history of exploration, etc., in the basin. It wishes to present an overview of the geological development of the Permian Basin, therefore papers dealing with individual fields will not be considered.

Wilson Energy announces joint venture

Wilson Energy Inc. will represent a 65 percent working interest in the drilling program, while Tenneco Oil Company and Houston Oil & Minerals Corporation will retain a 35 percent working interest.

Business comes to government's aid

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — America's business community is marshalling its immense resources to assist the federal government in improving its overall operations.

Aided by skilled volunteers drawn from the private sector, the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control, (PPSSCC), will review the executive branch of the federal government and offer ideas on how it can do things better in 35 areas of endeavor.

President Reagan is expected to announce today (Thursday) the names of some 135 chief executive officers, chairmen of boards and presidents of major corporations who will lead the 35 task forces.

The group of corporate executives is headed by J. Peter Grace, the chief executive officer of W.R. Grace & Co., 53rd on the "Fortune 500" list of 500 major U.S. firms.

The panel is setting up its offices in a downtown Washington building with staff and equipment donated by corporations involved in the project. A foundation has been set up to accept contributions for office supplies and other expenses.

Most of the task forces will concentrate on specific agencies or departments. The Defense and Health and Human Services groups, probably the two largest, each will have several task forces looking into their operations.

Other task forces will deal in such matters as pay and personnel, hospital management, procurement and contracts, user charges and other subjects which cut across departmental lines.

Retired Admiral James W. Nance, executive director of the panel, said the PPSSCC will not be determining the feasiblity of federal programs since it "doesn't have the competence to decide whether there should be food stamps or a CETA (Comprehensive Employment Training Act) program."

"But the task forces will be looking at where the money goes," he said in an interview. "The purpose is to see if we can have some major impact in the next budget."

A senior White House official said Reagan is hoping that the massive systems and management analysis job will identify inefficiencies and suggest ideas for improvement.

He admitted that there are similarities between the current survey group and the Hoover Commission which had recommended several years ago sweeping changes in the way the federal government operates.

But he insisted the survey will not be the Hoover Commission "brought up to date."

"While the objective somewhat parallels the original commission, the need is more urgent and the scope is much broader," the aide added.

A BIPARTISAN R & D BILL FILED

A bill encouraging U.S. high technology firms to engage in joint research and development has been introduced in the Senate, with such co-sponsors as Democrats Ted Kennedy of Massachusetts, John Glenn of Ohio, Paul Tsongas of Maryland and Bill Bradley of New Jersey and Republicans Charles Mathias of Maryland, Robert kasten of Wisconsin and Paul Laxalt of Nevada.

The Senate bill is similar to legislation introduced in the House in early May by Reps. Don Edward, D.-Calif., and Henry J. Hyde, R.-Ill.

The legislation authorizes the Department of Justice to examine in advance companies' plans for joint research and development and to issue certificates of review for plans which the department finds are not likely to violate antitrust laws.

HAZARDOUS WASTE

After months of waiting, the Environmental Protection Agency has finally produced its national guidelines for cleaning up abandoned hazardous waste sites across the country.

The plan determines when the federal government may use the $1.6 billion superfund trust money to respond to a hazardous substance spill, or to clean up a hazardous waste site and contains guidelines for determining the extent of response or cleanup, as well as criteria for cleanup priority of spills or waste sites.

Most of the trustfund money – 86 percent – is made up of tax collections on the manufacture or import of chemicals and petroleum products. The rest comes from general revenues.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BOND REFORM

The Senate Finance Committee's tax package contains proposals relating to industrial development bonds (idb's) which call for drastic changes in the issuance of these bonds, including elimination of most of the present qualified users. Proposed IDB legislation is designed to continue "the legitimate use of bonds while eliminating abuses and excess volume from the program. It would preserve tax exempt bonds to finance student loans, hospital, nursing home and educational facility construction, construction of low income multi-family rental housing, the purchase and installation of pollution control and abatement equipment, the construction and purchase of equipment for mass transit, the improvement of port and airport facilities, and commercial as well as industrial development.

ANOTHER TASK FORCE

A special blue-ribbon task force, made up of 16 banking, investment, financial and small business officials, has been organized by the Small Business Administration (SBA) to study ways of reducing business borrowing costs.

The task force will direct special attention to interest rates on small business loans made by private lenders and then guaranteed by SBA.

In a vast majority of cases, private lenders charge small business customers higher interest rates than those charged to big corporations. In the case of small business loans made by private lenders and then guaranteed by SBA, current agency policy permits interest rates to run as high as 2.75 percent over the prime rate.

PAPERWORK BURDEN

There is likely to be rejoicing in the energy industry following the elimination by the Energy Department of regulations which now require these companies to spend 24,000 hours a year on filling out special forms. The regulations had applied to such firms as petroleum refiners, natural gas producers and distributors, electric utilities, retail gasoline stations, and solar energy installers.

AROUND AND ABOUT

The Reagan administration has come under fire from the prestigous Cato Institute which claims that despite its free-market rhetoric, the administration has increased regulations of the transportation industry...Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston of California claims that President Reagan's endorsement of $95 billion in new taxes over the next three years is "an admission of the bankruptcy of Reaganomics..." The Senate's Consumer Subcommittee is planning to hold hearings July 22 on the Federal Trade Commission's authority over deceptive advertising...Citizen's Choice, a 75,000-member taxpayer organization, is sponsoring a meeting of the nation's top tax policy specialists here July 23 to discuss an alternative approach to the nation's present federal income tax system.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas, effective July 27, 1982, unless otherwise determined by the Commission.

It is expected that the requested rate schedule will furnish a 13.4 percent increase in the company's intrastate revenues.

A complete copy of the new rate schedule is on file with the Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with each affected municipality served by Southwestern Bell, and is available for inspection in each of the company's public business offices in Texas. The Commission staff has contended in the past that all rates are subject to change as a result of Southwestern Bell's rate application.

Notice to El Paso Area Customers

Effective January 1, 1982, Southwestern Bell adopted the Mountain States tariffs in effect for El Paso County. Southwestern Bell proposes to merge the separate El Paso tariffs with its tariffs applicable to the rest of Texas. The resulting new rate schedule is on file with the PUC and the El Paso area municipalities served by Southwestern Bell, and is available for inspection at our El Paso business office.

Notice to Customers of Other Telephone Companies

The filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for interexchange private line and foreign exchange (FX) service. Changes in such rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies because such companies provide interexchange private line and foreign exchange service in accordance with rates specified in Southwestern Bell's tariffs. While Southwestern Bell has proposed no increase in long distance rates, any change in those rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies.

Aviso Público

Southwestern Bell, en conformidad a las reglas del Public Utility Commission (Comisión de Servicios Públicos) de Texas, por la presente hace saber su intención de establecer un nuevo arancel para servicio de teléfono en Texas con vigencia a partir del 27 de julio, 1982, a menos que la Comisión haga otra determinación.

Se espera que el nuevo arancel que se ha solicitado rendirá un aumento de 13.4 por ciento en los ingresos intraestatales de la compañía.

Una copia completa del nuevo arancel se ha archivado en las oficinas del Public Utility Commission en Austin, Texas, al igual que en cada municipalidad afectada y servida por Southwestern Bell, y cada una de las oficinas de la compañía para negocios con el público en Texas tiene una copia para lectura pública. En el pasado, la Comisión ha sostenido que toda tarifa está sujeta a cambios que resulten de la manera en la cual Southwestern Bell aplique sus tarifas.

Aviso a Clientes en la Región de El Paso

Con vigencia a partir del 1o de enero de 1982, Southwestern Bell ha adoptado las tarifas de Mountain States efectivas en el condado de El Paso. Southwestern Bell propone unir las tarifas de El Paso con sus otras tarifas que se aplican al resto de Texas. El nuevo arancel que resulta de ésta union se ha archivado en la Comisión de Servicios Públicos (Public Utility Commission), al igual que en las municipalidades de la región de El Paso servidas por Southwestern Bell, y está disponible para inspección pública en nuestras oficinas de El Paso.

El registro incluye, pero no se limita a, propuestas para aumentar las tarifas para servicio de línea privada entre centrales telefónicas (interexchange private line) y servicio de central telefónica extranjera (foreign exchange FX). Cambios en dichas tarifas de servicio tambien afectarían a clientes de otras compañías de teléfono porque dichas compañías proveen los servicios ya mencionados en conformidad a tarifas especificadas por Southwestern Bell. Aunque Southwestern Bell no ha propuesto un aumento en las tarifas para larga distancia, cualquier cambio en las mismas tambien afectaría a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono.

Link Systems Inc. completes pipelines

Link Systems Inc., a licensed public utility in Oklahoma and Texas and a wholly-owned subsidiary of Jackson Exploration, Inc., Dallas-based gas and oil company, has announced completion of four separate gas pipeline systems located in Oklahoma and Texas.

Melvin W. Jackson Jr., chairman of Jackson Exploration, said that each system is located in a gas producing area and appears promising for additonal growth. He added that Link, which operates on a differential between the purchase price and sales price on essentially back-to-back contracts, should show substantial cash flow from these systems.

The Gold System, located in Harris County, Texas, north of Houston, serves wells located in the Tomball Field. The gas is marketed to Houston Natural Gas Co.

The Bitterweed System, located in Crockett County, Texas, produces gas from the East Dudley Field which is delivered to Intratex Gas Co.

The Pecos Bend System, located in Terrell County, Texas, serves the Mesa Grande and White Ingham Fields. The gas is sold to Intratex Gas Co.

The Sooner system, located in Payne and Logan Counties, Oklahoma, north of Oklahoma City, produces gas from the West Prairie View Field and sells it to Cities Service Gas Co.

Link Systems, Inc., also has a substantial ownership in a cryogenic gas liquids extraction plant located near Houston, Texas.

New car production up

DETROIT (AP) — New car production this week will increase 11.4 percent from last week's holiday-shortened schedule but remain behind year-ago levels, an auto industry trade journal reports.

Automotive News said Wednesday the five major domestic carmakers will produce an estimated 94,683 cars this week, up from 84,957 built last week.

Automotive News noted that last week most assembly plants worked only four days because of the July 4 holiday.

However, this week's production will be 15.7 percent behind the 112,309 cars produced in the same week a year ago, the periodical said.

U.S. car production so far this year was estimated at 2,888,880, down 25.7 percent from 3,887,727 last week.

Truck production this week should total 25,816, up 4 percent from 24,817 last week and up 39.8 percent from 18,466 in the week last year.

Automotive News said year-to-date truck production in the United States stands at 1,109,600, up 11.9 percent from 991,702 trucks last year.

All Ford Motor Co. plants remain down this week for the second week of vacation.

The domestic auto industry lurched into July with its lowest daily sales rate for the period in 24 years, but analysts said the annual rate was still a slight improvement over June.

The five major U.S. automakers said Wednesday they sold 108,318 cars in the July 1-10 period, down 16.4 percent from 129,572 cars sold in the same period in 1981. The daily sales rate of 13,540 cars was the lowest since 1958, when 12,038 were sold each day.

But analysts said the seasonally adjusted annual sales rate amounted to about 4.9 million vehicles, an improvement over 4.8 million in June. The annual rate projects the number of vehicles that could be sold in a year if the sales rate so far held stable.

"It's an improvement, but below what most people expected as the (federal) tax cut and Social Security increases came in at the beginning of July," said John Hammond, auto industry analyst at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

"But to be sure that the industry is trying to begin a sustained recovery, it would have to be close to 6 million (in July)," he added.

GM's sales in the July 1-10 period were down for the fourth consecutive 10-day period, off 18.9 percent from the period a year earlier. GM said it sold 61,844 cars, down from 76,296 a year earlier.

Ford's tally was 29,071, down 3.7 percent from 30,182, and Chrysler said it delivered 13,817 cars, down 15.9 percent from 16,435 in the same 1981 period.

American Motors Corp., which only releases monthly sales figures, was estimated at 2,200, down 38.1 percent from 3,555, and Volkswagen of America Inc. was off 55.3 percent, from 3,104 last year to 1,386.

For 1982, the five automakers said they have sold 3,043,140 new cars, down 11.5 percent from 3,437,601 in 1981.

GM said it sold 1,860,879 cars, down 10.3 percent from 2,073,672 from the same period last year; Ford reported 722,768 cars sold, down 7.5 percent from 781,133; and Chrysler said it sold 363,795 cars, down 12.8 percent from 417,152.

AMC was estimated at 48,185 cars, down 38.7 percent from 78,629; and VW was off 45.4 percent, from 87,015 to 47,513.

In other auto industry news:

—The United Auto Workers opened contract negotiations with General Dynamics Corp. of St. Louis and General Motors of Canada Ltd. The UAW was to open talks today with Ford's Canadian subsidiary and Chrysler's Canadian subsidiary Friday.

Coal fired plant officially on line

LIVINGSTON, Texas — The Sam Rayburn Municipal Power Agency (the "Agency") announced recently that the Nelson Unit No. 6 power plant has been completed on time and officially dedicated. Nelson 6 has been in commercial operation since May 31, 1982.

The 540-megawatt, coal-fired generating unit cost $438 million, excluding interest charges. Nelson 6, located west of Lake Charles, La., is a joint venture of Gulf States Utilities Company, which had a 70 percent ownership interest in the plant, the Agency (20 percent ownership interest), and Sam Rayburn G&T Inc. (10 percent ownership interest).

According to Dr. Paul Merrill, chief executive officer of Gulf States Utilities, the plant will save Gulf States customers an estimated $60 million in fuel cost during the first 12 months of operation.

Fewer steel workers

WASHINGTON — For the twelfth month in a row, employment of hourly workers in the domestic steel industry declined to a new record low since the American Iron and Steel Institute began tracking employment on a monthly basis in June 1933.

The average number of hourly workers in May 1982 was 210,000, down from 224,000 in April and 300,000 in May 1981.

All employees, including those receiving salaries, averaged 306,000 in May, down from 321,000 in April. In May 1981, all employees averaged 405,000.

The total employment cost per hour worked by an hourly employee was $23.30 in May.

Considering the way the once-proud Oakland A's pitching armada is listing dead in the water, Manager Billy Martin might like to have Mike King back.

"Yea, I heard a rumor to that effect a couple of weeks ago," admitted Mike, "But as far as I know, that's all it was, a rumor."

King, despite a 5-8 record, is showing signs this season of the potential that prompted Oakland to draft the lefthander No. 1 out of Morningside, Iowa, College back in the 1980 draft.

WHEN THE A's traded Mike to the Chicago Cubs for Cliff Johnson in December 1980, pitching was the least of the A's problems. It's true Martin had no bullpen at Oakland, but with his pitchers establishing modern day records for complete games, who needed a bullpen?

So Mike was deemed expendable, especially after that rookie season.

When Oakland assigned Mike to Ogden of the Pacific Coast League in midseason 1980, it was obvious the A's had great expectations for the hard-throwing southpaw who had pitched seven no-hitters in college.

The excitement over their prize prospect may have subsided a bit when Mike was 0-4 with 30 walks in 21 innings of the quickie look. But, then, what would you expect from a guy jumping into AAA ball from Morningside College.

IT REALLY wasn't much of a look, but with a young pitching staff in which no near-foreseeable vacancies seemed likely, King became the bait for Johnson, an established major leaguer who could supply immediate help in a pennant drive.

Last year, assigned to Midland, King didn't exactly take a torch to the Texas League. His record was 4-2, but his ERA was 7.06 and he walked 70 in 65 innings. Just another wild young thrower, it seemed, who might make it to the majors eventually, but only if he discovered in which direction the plate was. And how often does that happen? Still, the Dodgers were patient with Sandy Koufax.

ACTUALLY, KING'S pro statistics are a contradiction to those compiled in college, where his ERA was 1.09, he fanned 304 and walked 102 in 174 inings and gave up only 49 hits.

In addition to the seven no-hitters, he had five one hitters and six two-hitters.

"Three of the no hitters came in one season," Mike relates. "I pitched one in Texas, another against Michigan State and another against South Dakota."

It's understandable how someone with Mike's statistics could be drafted No. 1, but how did they ever find him at Morningside and how did Morningside, located far enough north so that the college baseball season hardly starts before it is over, play enough games to compile such figures?

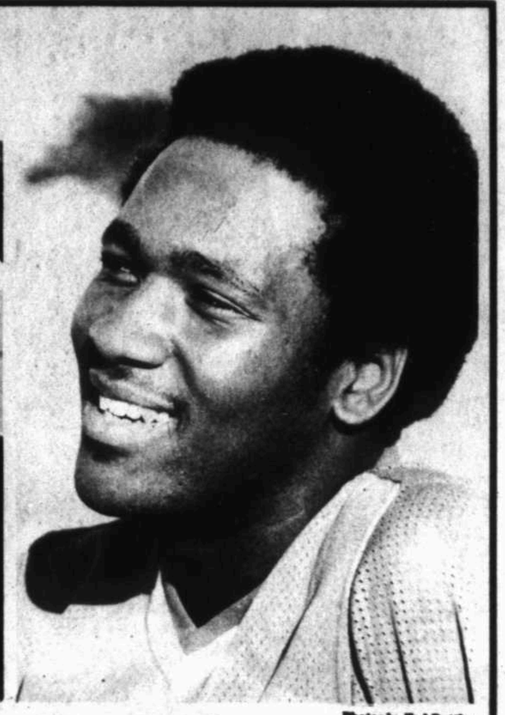

"We came to Texas every spring and played a lot of games in the Edinburg area," Mike clarifies. While Morningside doesn't play as many games as Texas, Arizona State, or Floria State, "We'd get in about 40 a year."

Cubs belt Caps, 8-5

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

With Carmelo Martinez and Joe Carter hitting home runs and Manager Brian Murphy's pitching gamble paying off, the Midland Cubs ended a three-game slump with an 8-5 win over the Shreveport Captains before 1,159 fans at Cubs Stadium Wednesday night.

With the Cubs pitching staff shorthanded, Murphy started Randy Clark, who hadn't won since May 8 when he beat San Antonio 4-1, and hoped for the best.

What he got was eight innings of 12-hit pitching as the San Diego native notched his second win in six decisions with his longest effort since that May 8 game. Clark missed three weeks with tendonitis of the rotator cuff and said he felt this was the first time he had his rhythm since he came back.

CLARK DIDN'T exactly dominate the game, but with the big hit support behind him, he didn't have to.

Shreveport, which leaves for El Paso with a 3-2 edge here, jumped in front 2-0 in the first when Greg Baker opened the game with his seventh homer. Then a walk to Doug Wabeke eventually came home to haunt Randy before the inning was over.

The Cubs led 8-2 when the Captains rallied for three runs in the sixth and that's when Murphy gambled and stayed with Clark. Don Mazzilli singled off Javier Fierro's glove at second, but two were out when Rob Deer approached the plate and dumped a two-run homer into the mesquite beyond left. Then followed three straight singles for another run.

"We are down to an eight-man staff with Thompson (Mike) and Smith (Tom) both out, so I can't lift a pitcher as early as I would like sometimes," Murphy explained.

Actually, the three singles were seeing-eye hits. "I didn't think any were hit hard," said Clark. "They just found the holes."

"The homers? Both were bad pitches," Clark added.

THE CUBS got one back in the first when Henry Cotto singled, stole his 38th base of the season, which leaves him only 12 short of his goal for the season, and raced to third on the overthrow before scoring on Mike Kelley's grounder to short.

Shreveport starter Scott Gerralts, 5-6, got away with walking the lead off man in the second, but the free tickets caught up with him in the third. Dave Owen singled and Cotto walked. Two passed balls let Owen score and after Kelley walked Gerralts' pick off throw to first got away from Kelvin Torve as Cotto scored. Joe Carter drew his second of three walks and Carmelo Martinez whacked his 17th homer of the year over the left field fence.

It was Carmelo's second homer in two nights. The way Carmelo finished last season and started this, 13 homers through June 12, it looked like he might be heading for a 30 homer season. But then the dingers stopped coming.

"I was going for the fences, trying too hard for the homer," Carmelo said. Now I am being more patience, keeping my left shoulder back longer and trying to hit up the middle. I forget the homers and they come again."

CARTER'S BLAST in the fourth came with one on and gave Clark an 8-2 lead, which enabled Murphy to stay longer with his starter when the Caps rallied in the sixth. It was Joe's fifth and in his last seven games, counting that tie Sunday, and upped his total to 17.

Kite hasn't reached his golfing goal yet

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

TROON, Scotland (AP) — Tom Kite has a goal.

"I'd like to be remembered as one of the greatest, if not the greatest, player of my time," he said before teeing off today in the first round of the 111th British Open Golf Championship.

But the little man from Austin, Texas is the first to point out "I've got a ways to go" before reaching that goal.

"I think I can achieve it. But I'm not there yet.

"My career might not be all that I would want it to be at this stage. But I'm getting there. I must improve this year, and I must improve next year and I must improve the year after that.

"If my career flattened out now, if I stayed at my same level, if I stagnated at the level I'm on now, I'd be very disappointed."

"Of course, 90 percent of the guys on the tour would give anything in the world to stagnate at that level," he said.

AND IT is a very high level, indeed. But it is a puzzling plateau, a puzzling and frustrating plateau Kite has reached; more puzzling to Kite than anyone else.

He is, perhaps, the most consistently high finisher in the game. He is in title contention on a near-weekly basis. Last year, he led the American PGA Tour in money winnings. And he captured the coveted Vardon Trophy for the low stroke average.

But he rarely wins.

"I know I can make a living out here, make a lot of money, and a lot of guys would be very satisfied with that.

"But winning is what it's all about. That's what we're playing for. And I just don't win as much as I should.

"I can't explain it. I can't explain it to you because I can't explain it to myself," said Kite, whose record since the start of 1981 shows he has finished 10th or better in 31 of 44 tournaments.

In that period, however, he has won only twice, last year at Inverrary and in the Bay Hill Classic this season.

"That doesn't get it," he said. "One a year doesn't do it. Leading money-winner, or the Vardon Trophy, that doesn't get it.

"To be a great player, you have to achieve three things," he said, then raised a hand and began ticking them off on his fingers.

"First, you have to win in the majors, and win more than once.

"Second, you have to win often enough in other tournaments to support those major tournament wins; 10 or 12 or 15 or 20 or whatever the number is.

"And third, you have to be consistent.

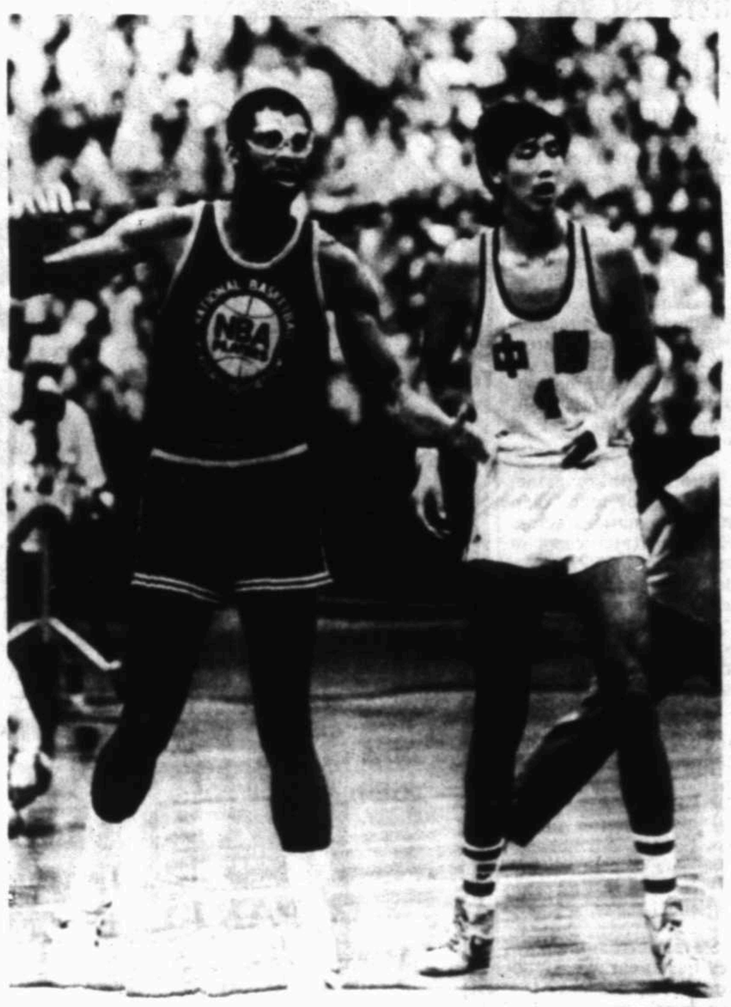

"I've got one of the three, consistency. But I have a long way to go in the other two."

WHILE HE may be disappointed in his lack of victories (four official triumphs in a 10-year career), Kite is not discouraged.

"I won the European Open in the fall of '80 and last year I won the Mixed Team. Those helped. They're not tour wins, but they help. That means I've won four times in about a year and a half. That helps the confidence. But that doesn't do it.

"I'm 32. I think I'm just reaching my prime, my big winning years, as a golfer. But the time is now. Right now. I have to start winning now. I have to start winning in the majors. And I MUST start now.

"I think I'm capable of it. I think I have the game to do it. I think my record shows I have the ability and the game. Now I have to do it."

NBA stars post victory over Chinese, 100-76

PEKING (AP) — China's national team, with deadly outside shooting, played even with a National Basketball Association squad for 13 minutes Wednesday night but the U.S. players kept driving through the weak defense for a 100-76 victory.

The Chinese had a center even taller than the Americans' 7-foot-2 Kareem Abdul Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers, but the Americans used force or finesse to move up the middle for dunks or layups.

The Chinese followed a pattern of feeding the ball to Ji Zhaoguang in the corner for jump shots, and the 6-4 forward scored 16 points in the first 10 minutes as China took a 27-24 lead.

But with the score tied 32-32 after seven minutes of play, the Americans jumped to a 50-38 lead and were ahead 54-44 at halftime.

Ji, who scored only six points in the second half and finally came out for a rest, ended up with 22.

Maurice Lucas of the Phoenix Suns scored 17 for the Americans, mostly in the first half, and David Thompson of Seattle, Marvin Webster of New York, Mike Bantom of Philadelphia and Tom Owens of Indiana each had 12.

Jabbar ended up with nine points and China's tall man, Han Pengshan, had 13, mostly on long shots. The Chinese program listed him as 7-1, but he clearly was taller than Jabbar, even though the American outjumped him.

Thompson remained a favorite of the Chinese crowd. Early in the game, he repeated the maneuver that had won him a long ovation at an exhibition by the Americans on Tuesday night. In one giant leap, he caught an arching pass at the edge of the basket and dunked it.

But a little later, a powerful missed dunk by Webster bent the rim, requiring time out for repairs and costing the Americans a technical foul.

The team, put together by the National Basketball Players Association, includes 25 players from 20 different teams. The 10 who played Wednesday night were not the same players who beat the Chinese national team 93-66 in Shenyang in northeast China on Sunday night.

You can always tell a Davis team

The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

You can always tell an Al Davis team.

An Al Davis team is never one to on a lead. They throw deep, they run wide, they go for the Bomb, the "touch," for "6", the goal line, the big one.

They don't punt on third down, throw the ball out of bounds, kill the clock. They kill you.

They don't fall down on the ball, they ram it down your throat. Why fall down on a ball when, if you throw it high and long enough, Cliff Branch might run under it?

They don't draft for guys who can hold the score down, they draft guys who can run it up. They pick guys who will intimidate you. They don't tackle you, they mug you. They go for the jugular.

That's the way they play. They don't play for a tie. They don't go into a "prevent" defense. They keep your defense spread. They want you looking over both shoulders at once, listening for footsteps. They keep you off-balance. They keep your secondary so deep, it's just a dot on the horizon.

IT'S THEIR whole philosophy. If they were an army, they'd attack through the Low Countries, not sit in the trenches. They're like that French general who said, "My right is surrounded, my left is flanked, my center is not holding, good! I will attack!" They are no more interested in defense than a hungry grizzly.

They treat the NFL, the city of Oakland or anyone else that gets in the way exactly as they would threat the Green Bay Packers or Cincinnati Bengals. They go right for the end zone.

Al Davis teams know the judges' calls will go against them. The "Zebras," the guys in the striped shirts, penalize them on the field just as the "zebras" in the court rooms, the guys and gals in the long robes, may blow the whistle on them in the corridors of jurisprudence. That's built into the game plan.

AL IS still splitting the ends wide, dropping deep, and hoping to get the opposition into a man-for-man. Any coach in the league could tell you an Al Davis team isn't going to sit there and wait to see what YOU do.

Davis teams never fold a hand. They bump the pot. They wouldn't lay up to putt, or take a count, or hit a lob. They go for winners.

This is what they're doing in this legal Super Bowl they're involved in now. Al Davis' teams are always in playoffs and this one is handled no differently.

The city of Oakland, the Supreme Court of California, the NFL may have thought they had mined all the approaches to the L.A. coliseum, but Al Davis teams never sue for terms; they don't negotiate. If the opposition listens, it can probably hear the tank treads coming. Al Davis' team feels it has the heavier guns — the anti-trust laws of the United States of America. The NFL is seeking to get itself exempt from these, retroactively, no less, but if they do that, Al Davis' team feels they're going to have to let the Standard Oil Trust put itself back together again or give J.P. Morgan back all his railroads.

Al Davis' team, hemmed in, pinned down in its own coffin corner, where prudence would seem to dictate keeping the ball in the ground for awhile so as not to risk a turnover, nevertheless came out passing from behind its own goal line last week when it was announced Al's team "reached an agreement to began playing home football games in the (Los Angeles) Coliseum" this year. Al's team had gone to the Bomb, as usual.

IT REMAINS to be seen whether it will be intercepted or batted down. For sheer audacity, it's like a guy in a lifeboat opening fire on the submarine that sank his ship. But Al's team never takes the prudent course. Prudence gets you fourth in the division, Al believes. "Prudence" is just a girl's name to Al.

When you go down in the alley with Al Davis, you bring your brass knuckles, and the piano wire with the handles on the end. On the face of it, it would seem that Al, facing 27 competitors, commissioners, a Supreme Court, and a city, armed only with 25 mere football players would be in a third and long-yardage situation with a sore-armed quarterback. But that's what an Al Davis team likes best. They wvn't even go for the field goal.

Cogan tired of living under a cloud

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

The handsome 26-year-old driver is absolutely certain he is getting a bad rap in being blamed for the wild accident that delayed the start of the Indianapolis 500 in May.

Cogan, one of about 40 entries preparing for a qualifying attempt for Sunday's Norton Michigan 500 Indy car race, has watched the videotape of that accident enough times that he has it indelibly etched on his brain.

What he sees is his sleek blue and white Penske PC-10 racer, sandwiched by teammate Rick Mears and A.J. Foyt on the front row, accelerating slowly toward the start-finish line.

Suddenly, his car jerks hard to the right, striking Foyt's car in the rear, then veers 180 degrees and flashes back across the track, making hard contact with second-row starter Mario Andretti.

The accident eliminated both Cogan — second only to Mears in qualifying for the race — and Andretti. The angry and frustrated Andretti pushed Cogan away when he tried to talk to him after the accident and publicly castigated the younger driver for causing the crash.

"I'll eat my helmet if that was my fault," Cogan said Wednesday as his crew worked on an almost identical PC-10 in the garage area at Michigan International Speedway.

"There was nothing damaged on the right rear of the car except the CV valve (constant velocity valve, which drives the wheel). That was broken," Cogan said. "What I saw happen on the film is exactly what would happen if the CV valve broke suddenly.

"That would make the left wheel drive the car and leave the right wheel free-wheeling. In that situation there's nothing you can do. The car would just go right."

SEVERAL OLDER drivers, including Andretti, Foyt and Johnny Rutherford, speculated after the race that pole-sitter Mears brought the field to the starting line too slowly and Cogan's car went out of control because the turbocharger kicked in when he tried to start the race in too low a gear.

"I just don't believe that," Cogan said. "I took this car out there (on the two-mile Michigan oval) Friday and jumped on it (accelerated) hard in first and second gear and nothing happened.

"It just bothers me because I know it isn't going to die out until after Indy next year.

Holmes being sued by former manager-trainer

CLEVELAND (AP) — The former manager and trainer of World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes has filed a $20 million lawsuit against the boxer and promoter Don King.

The suit by Richard C. Giachetti alleges that Holmes has failed to honor a contract that gives Giachetti 20 percent of all Holmes' fight purses. The suit also alleges that King "maliciously and intentionally induced" Holmes to force Giachetti out of his contract as the boxer's manager and trainer.

FOOTBALL

The Houston Oilers have signed starting safety Mike Reinfeldt and veteran linebacker Ted Thompson, but negotiations have hit a snag on a contract for Penn State's Mike Munchak, the team's No. 1 draft choice.

Oiler General Manager Ladd Herzeg announced Wednesday that the Oilers have reached verbal agreements with starting tight end Dave Casper and rookie linebacker Robert Abraham, a third round draft choice from North Carolina State.

Reinfeldt and Thompson signed a series of one-year contracts, Herzeg said. Terms were not announced.

Herzeg had announced earlier that the Oilers had reached a verbal agreement with Munchak, but the talks hit a snag Wednesday, he said.

Reinfeldt has started 89 consecutive games for the Oilers, dating back to 1976 when he was claimed from Oakland on waivers.

Casper, also obtained from Oakland, caught 33 passes last season, including a team high eight touchdown receptios.

Oiler rookies and free agents are scheduled to report to training camp at Angelo State University July 22, with veterans due July 28.

In another highlight, Mary Decker-Tabb, bettered her own American record over 800 meters by .09 seconds with a time of 1:58.34.

Mamede of Portugal won the 5,000 meters in 13:15.19, defeating Kenya's Peter Koech by .83.

Wilander rallys to beat Gunnarsson in three sets

BASTAD, Sweden (AP) — Top-seeded Mats Wilander, down a set and trailing 0-2 in the second, rallied to defeat compatriot Jan Gunnarsson 2-6, 6-2, 6-3 Wednesday in first round action of the $75,000 Swedish Open Tennis Championships.

"I never thought I would be able to win the match when he jumped ahead 2-0 in the second set. He's tough, I've lost to him before," Wilander said after the match.

But the 17-year-old Swedish star, who became the youngest winner ever of the French Open last month, captured six straight games to knot the score at one set apiece.

Wilander overcame an early challenge by Gunnarsson in the decisive set and then coasted to an easy victory on the slow clay court.

"I was struggling in the first set," Wilander said. "I hit the ball too short and I was forced to play defensively. I was lucky that he got tired in the second set."

Wilander arrived with the Swedish Davis Cup team to this west coast seaside town Tuesday after losing a 6 hour, 32 minute duel to John McEnroe in St. Louis last Sunday. McEnroe's five-set victory gave the United States a 3-2 triumph over the Swedes and a berth in the Davis Cup semifinals against Australia.

Swedish part-timer Carl-Axel Hageskog upset Australian Davis Cupper John Fitzgerald 7-5, 6-3 in another first-round match.

Fitzgerald, seeded No.7, played on Australia's winning Davis Cup team against Chile in Brisbane, Australia, last weekend and was also bothered by jet lag.

Knetemann wins 11th leg of Tour

VALENCE D'AGEN, France (AP) - Gerrie Knetemann of The Netherlands won the 11th leg of the Tour de France cycling classic Wednesday, a 36-mile (57.3-kilometer) individual race against the clock, and France's Bernard Hinault took over as overall leader.

The race against the clock was run under extremely hot conditions, with temperatures over 90 degrees causing the wide differences in time.

Hinault finished 18 seconds behind Knetemann for second place, and Daniel Willems of Belgium, who placed third, was one minute, 24 seconds off the pace.

Phil Anderson of Australia, who had led the race for nine of the first 10 legs, was 3:05 behind the leader, giving up the yellow leader's jersey to the French cyclist, who is highly favored to win this 69th edition of the Tour de France.

It was only the second time in five tours that Hinault has been defeated in the individual race against the clock. In 1980, while suffering from a knee injury, he bowed to Joop Zoetemelk in the same contest.

But in losing the yellow jersey, he collected another - the white jersey worn by the top young rider on the tour. The white jersey is for cyclists 24 or younger.

"I gave it everything I had," Anderson said after the race. I decided voluntarily to start fast in order to limit my defeat, because I wasn't kidding myself. Nearly 60 kilometers of solitary efforts was too much for me.

"After 30 kilometers, I felt the first failure. I couldn't go any faster. In any case, I have a clear conscience and I only lost because Hinault was truly better."

He said wearing the white jersey was indeed a satisfaction, and what he was really after in this year's Tour de France.

Hinault had praise for the young Australian.

"Anderson was a loyal adversary," the Frenchman said. "For more than a week, he made my life difficult.

Aaron blast lifts NL to All-Star win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Hank Aaron, major league baseball's all-time career home run leader, ended the Greatest Game Never Played Wednesday night with a solo homer as the National League rallied to a 5-4 triumph over the American League.

The imaginary game, broadcast by more than 200 radio stations across the country, was the brainchild of BFV&L Productions of St. Louis, which worked with Apple Computer Inc. and The Sporting News, which handled nationwide balloting for the teams.

Baseball greats, past and present, made up the 30-man rosters, which included such players as Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Ted Williams for American League and Roberto Clemente, Lou Brock and Willie Mays for the National League.

Statistics from the players best year were fed into a computer and a the computer's programming possibilities determined the outcome.

The American League took a 2-0 lead in the first off National League starter Sandy Koufax when Ted Williams hit an RBI single and Ty Cobb scored when Babe Ruth grounded into a double play.

Honus Wagner tripled with two outs and scored on a double by Roy Campenella in the second to pull the National League to within one. But the AL increased its lead to 3-1 in the third on a RBI single by Ruth following an error by right fielder Stan Musial.

Pinch hitter Bill Terry tied the score in the seventh with a two-run homer off Lefty Grove. The leagues traded runs in the eighth to set the stage for Aaron's heroics in the ninth.

Grover Cleveland Alexander picked up the victory after retiring the American League in order in the ninth. Walter Johnson was the loser as seven National League hurlers combined for a six-hitter.

Aaron was named the game's Most Valuable Player.

FOOTBALL — Promoters of the Olympia Gold Bowl, a college all-star football game, have approached the Convention and Visitors Authority about moving the January event from San Diego to Las Vegas. Bowl spokesman Robley Sundmacher said last year's game, the first for the event, drew 22,000 people in San Diego. He said Olympia wants to relocate the bowl game because there is too much competition in San Diego. Sundmacher said the game would be held Jan. 22, eight days before the Super Bowl in Pasadena, Calif. The game features the top picks of pro football scouts and that the Convention Authority would have to guarantee the sale of 26,000 tickets in the 32,000 seat Silver Bowl to bring the game to Las Vegas.

The Cincinnati Bengals have made their "final offer" to first-round choice Glen Collins, their last unsigned player from the 1982 draft. Mike Brown, Bengals' assistant general manager, said the club was making its "last, best and final offer" in a meeting Wednesday with Collins' agent, Harry Henderson. "They'll either buy it or they won't," Brown said. "If we get it done, we'll feel good about it. If we don't, we'll go forward without (Collins)." Brown could not be reached for comment late Wednesday afternoon. It was not known how long the negotiating session with Henderson would last...

AL on a long-term All-Star heel cooling

Last AL victory predates Watergate, Holmes

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

If you fidget on lines and can't stand waiting around for anything, stay away from the American League. Those guys are on a long-term heel cooling that is beginning to make Rip Van Winkle's nap seem like a 40-wink job.

The last time the Americans remembered to win an All-Star Game was 1971. Would you like to know how long ago that was?

Well, Richard Nixon was president — still in his first term — and the Watergate was nothing more than another Washington building. Gasoline was going for 35 cents a gallon and people carried portable radios instead of wearing tape deck headsets.

Larry Holmes was somebody's sparring partner and George Steinbrenner was a shipbuilder who was still two peaceful years away from baseball.

Times change, but the American League doesn't. It's still losing All-Star games, after all these years — 11 in a row, now.

And the Americans aren't getting any closer. Oh sure, the score was only 4-1 the other night in Montreal, but the AL hitters seemed farther behind than just three runs. Ten of them struck out. Eleven of them were left on base.

Watching them, it seemed like the Americans were sleepwalking against the Nationals. When they scored a run in the first inning, there were the required high fives for Reggie Jackson, who drove it in, and Rickey Henderson, who scored it. But when Dave Concepcion homered in the NL second, he had a regular reception committee waiting for him as the Nationals spilled out of their dugout to celebrate.

Maybe the Americans were staying laid back because they expected so many more runs and didn't want to use up all their exuberance on an early sacrifice fly. That turned out to be a mistake and maybe now they know they had better take their celebrations when they can get them.

In the third, Ruppert Jones produced the third NL run, legging out a pinch triple and then dashing home on Pete Rose's sacrifice fly, evading Carlton Fisk's lunging tag with a hook slide.

It was just another sacrifice fly, but the NL players seemed much more excited about it than the Americans had earlier. Rose clapped his hands furiously, happy about achieving one of baseball's basic functions — getting the runner home from third base.

What's more, the lead was now two runs and the Nationals play so much surer of themselves when they're in front than the Americans do. The AL seems to play more tentatively, waiting for something bad to happen because, after all, something bad almost always does happen. It is like a self-fulfilling prophecy.

Al Oliver, who has played for both leagues in All-Star competition, offered an opinion on the difference in the teams.

"I think maybe the personality of the NL players is more outgoing," he said. "There's no question about it. There was more enthusiasm on the National League squad. Every time somebody did something, there was nobody sitting down on our bench."

One of them is Rose, who plays baseball like a man possessed, and whose spirit and zest for the game is catching. The other is Manager Tommy Lasorda, who has been on five NL squads as pilot or coach and hasn't lost yet.

When Fisk, the AL catcher, suggested the other day that winning the All-Star Game wasn't so very vital in the cosmic scheme of things, Rose positively bristled. That kind of talk just doesn't sit well with him. He'd be depressed if you beat him at anything, including marbles, and not many folks do. That's why Ty Cobb is in big trouble right now.

Lasorda is a professional cheerleader, a pepperpot who keeps all his players on their toes. He happily hugs home run hitters and his enthusiasm is genuine.

The identity of the two leagues was more sharply defined 50 years ago when the All-Star concept was born. Now, players and managers pass from one league to the other almost routinely. So All-Star wins or losses hardly stand as evidence of one league's superiority over the other.

Maybe all the AL needs to win a game is for Rose and Lasorda to cross over. It may keep right on snoozing until that happens.

Vilas has to do better to win U.S. Pro

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — After rough starts in his first two matches, top-seeded Guillermo Vilas admits he'll have to do much better to win the 55th U.S. Pro tennis championship.

"I haven't adjusted yet to the surface here," Vilas said Wednesday after rallying to take the final two sets and defeat Craig Wittus, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2, in second-round action.

"It takes me one set to start playing and get into the match," the veteran Argentine said. "I have to start playing well sooner because I can't keep doing this the whole tournament."

Vilas dropped the first set in his opening match to Brad Drewett and trailed in the third set, 3-1, before pulling out a victory Tuesday.

Vilas found his serve and started hitting the sidelines to capture 12 of the final 15 games. But Wittus' never-say-die attitude kept Vilas on his toes and helped provide the best match of the day on the clay courts at the Longwood Cricket Club.

In other action, Ivan Lendl, John Alexander, Eliot Teltscher, Mel Purcell and No. 4 seed Yannick Noah of France, all won their second-round matches while sixth-seeded Eddie Dibbs was beaten by Jim Delaney.

Lendl wasted little time in defeating Juan Aguilera of Spain, 6-3, 6-4. But the Czech star seeded second behind Vilas, complained that his game was not up to par.

"My shots were not hard and deep enough and I was making errors," said Lendl, who has today off before taking on Van Winitsky on Friday. "I guess it's better to start slowly than play better later."

Alexander received a scare from Mike Leach, a local favorite and the reigning U.S. Collegiate champion. After dropping the first set, the 22-year-old Leach rallied to capture the second set 7-5 and forced a 5-5 tie in the third set.

But the young Weston, Mass., resident was felled by cramps and was forced to surrender the match.

"The muscles went and I just didn't function," said Leach, a member of the Longwood club. "It's too bad obviously for me because at 5-all anything can happen."

Dibbs, who won the tournament in 1980, looked extremely sluggish against Delaney, an eight-year veteran of the tour. Dibbs dropped the first set 7-5 and Delaney ran away with the second, 6-2.

Teltscher, who had a slow start before coming on strong to beat Zan Guerry in straight sets opposes Alejandro Ganzabal of Argentina, while Noah plays Gilles Moretton in an all-French match.

USFL's Gold could take legal action against Denver

DENVER (AP) — Legal action may be necessary if the Denver Gold franchise of the new United States Football League isn't allowed to play in Mile High Stadium, Gold owner Ron Blanding said Wednesday.

Blanding said he has spoken with Bronco representatives several times in the two months since the birth of the USFL, but hasn't been able to get an answer.

"The time has come where we've got to do something about the stadium issue," Blanding said Tuesday. "Talking amicably is nice, but if we don't get the blessing from the Broncos, we'll go get it done."

Blanding said he already has received legal opinions which indicate the Broncos' veto power might not be enforceable.

"We think the stadium is available for use by the city and county of Denver, and we don't think that if you use it 10 dates, you should have the right to control it the rest of the year," said Blanding.

"If you do, it's restraint of trade. It's against the law. We think how the stadium is used should be up to the city and county of Denver, the mayor and his people.

"We can't wait any longer. We've got 32,000 applications for tickets (based on requests from 8,000 people). One way or another, we've got to get it settled."

Bronco officials indicated the matter was being studied and didn't say when a decision would be made.

O'Grady's facing law suit from Halstead

DENVER (AP) — Jay "Champ" Thomas, founder and president of the World Athletic Association, announced today he is stripping boxer Sean O'Grady of his WAA welterweight title and removing his father, Pat O'Grady, from his executive position in the organization.

In an apparent power struggle within the fledgling organization, Thomas said two other fighters associated with O'Grady, heavyweight Monte Masters and junior light heavyweight Jerry Halstead, have been stripped of their WAA titles because of "irregularities in established procedures for sanctioning WAA championsip bouts."

Thomas also said he was taking legal action against Pat O'Grady and his wife, J.T., for a letter they allegedly sent to WAA members.

Thomas alleged the O'Grady's wrote letters containing statements that were "libelous and damaging to my reputation and character, including the allegation that I was being removed as WAA president. This is not possible under existing rules."

Thomas said he was "removing the O'Gradys from executive positions in the WAA and I am filing a $50 million lawsuit for defamation of character against them."

The O'Grady's were not immediately available for comment.

close enough to find out?"I got to know Billy when I was with the Oakland organization and I like the guy. When I was with the A's, we went out for a beer three or four times after practice in spring training and got along fine."

This spring, Mike is 5-8, but he leads the Cubs in shutouts and also pitched a four-hitter in another game, beating El Paso, 5-1. In another game, he parted trailing San Antonio 2-1 in the eighth.

In his third season as a pro, Mike is beginning to live up that potential and if the A's ever did want him back, it might take more than Cliff Johnson to get him.

Several top rookies have until midnight to sign NFL contracts

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen, quarterback Jim McMahon and several other top rookie prospects have until midnight to sign contracts or face being locked out of National Football League training camps.

The NFL players union, meeting with team owners' representatives Wednesday to discuss a new contract, refused to extend a waiver to their current agreement that expires at midnight. That waiver would have allowed all unsigned players to continue individual negotiating with teams past the July 15 expiration date.

Union representatives also officially rejected the NFL Management Council's contract package presented Tuesday, and assailed a letter sent to teams telling them they could conduct spot checks of players — including urinalysis — to indicate drug use.

The contract included raising minimum salaries by as much as 56 percent, increased playoff and injury pay and reduced compensation for free-agents, which players claim has drastically reduced movement within the system.

Garvey claimed team owners would actually spend less in 1982 than they did in 1981 if the proposed pay raises went into effect.

Talks, which have been stalemated for two days, were to continue this morning.

As it stands now, no contract negotiations can be conducted past July 15, and no unsigned players may report to camp. The Baltimore Colts will open their camp Friday, with the rest of the teams scheduled to start within the next two weeks.

Unsigned free-agent veterans are allowed to accept at any time a team's last written offer made before midnight, or sign for 110 percent of last year's pay.

But Ed Garvey, head of the players union, said rookies who do not sign before midnight will not be allowed to sign after then, regardless of whether a written offer had been made by July 15.

"We couldn't protect the rookies," Garvey said. "What if they get hurt?"

Currently, 13 first-round draft choices remain unsigned, including Allen of Southern California, drafted by Oakland; McMahon, taken by Chicago; running back Walter Abercrombie of Baylor, drafted by Pittsburgh; Stanford tailback Darrin Nelson, taken by Minnesota; running back Butch Woolfolk, selected by the New York Giants, and offensive guard Roy Foster of Southern California, taken by Miami.

Management Council Executive Director Jack Donlan, however, said Wednesday that he was sending a letter that afternoon to all 28 NFL teams, saying they could sign rookies after July 15, if an offer had been made by then.

"It's our position the rookies could sign after July 15," Donlan said.

Dick Berthelsen, general counsel to the union, said any contracts signed by rookies after July 15 "would be voidable by law."

"If the teams signed the rookies, they would be bypassing us," said Doug Allen, a former Buffalo Bills player and now an assistant to Garvey. "We want contracts to be signed under a collective bargaining agreement."

Union members could be heard shouting behind closed doors following Donlan's announcement of the letter sent to the teams about spot checks for possible drug use.

A recent tour of white-winged dove habitat in Tampaulipas, Mexico, by Texas and Mexican wildlife officials indicated the birds are doing well, with reservations.

"Although we found high nesting densities in the southern part of Tampaulipas, agricultural clearing in the northern areas near Rio Grande are wiping out most of the nesting habitat there," said Ron George, dove program leader from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept.

"During the past decade, most of the land from the Rio Grande south about 100 miles has been cleared of the native brush used by whitewings for nesting," said George.

A nest of some 4 million whitewings near Abasolo, east of Lake Guerrero, probably won't have that much impact on the season in South Texas, but the TPWD will have a better idea after the banding program results are in.

The whitewing season in 16 South Texas counties will be Sept. 4-5 and 11-12.

ONE REASON accidents at trap and skeet clubs are rare is the gun club safety program that has by now become a ritual.

Safety and good shooting skills go hand-in-hand. Top shooters try to break targets at each station the same way. The way the shotgun is mounted, angle of muzzle in relation to the house, foot position and like are part of a style that the shooter attempts to duplicate.

—Always be sure the trap boy is safely inside the house before you shoot.

—Should a delay occur while you are in shooting position, open your gun, extract the shell and do not reload until ready to resume shooting.

—Never place your hand over the muzzle or lean a gun against your body.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Six-foot-eight pitcher J.R. Richard has taken another giant stride in his remarkable comeback from a near-fatal stroke.

Wednesday night, the former Houston Astros ace posted his first complete game since the stroke two years ago that threatened his life and seemed certain to end his career.

In his fourth start for Houston's Class A Florida State League affiliate, Richard fired a five-hitter to lead Daytona Beach to a 6-2 victory over the Fort Lauderdale Yankees.

The 32-year-old hurler, whose determination and courage was held up as a national example this week by President Reagan, struck out eight batters, including the last two.

Richard, now 2-0 after four FSL starts, is expected to pitch at least one more game for the Daytona Beach Astros. Houston officials have indicated they may soon promote him to their Class AAA farm club.

"J.R. had consistent velocity tonight. No walks, eight strikeouts. That's a great game. His slider was around the plate all night, and his fastball was above average," Swanson said.

'I feel satisfied with my game tonight. But give God the credit," he said.

"Being behind the plate tonight was a great birthday present," he said.

Schembechler bars USFL from Michigan campus

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) — University of Michigan football Coach Bo Schembechler says he sees the fledgling United States Football League as a nemesis with little regard for his players.

The Wolverines' coach said Wednesday that USFL coaches and scouts will be barred from the campus if the league goes ahead with plans for a December draft of college players. He said the draft and a USFL season scheduled to begin in March would destroy a player's chance to graduate on time.

Schembechler, who is beginning his 14th season at Michigan, always has pushed hard for his players to receive their degrees before trying their hand at professional football.

"I have several reservations about the new pro football league. They didn't have much foresight when they said they were going to draft in December," Schembechler told the weekly luncheon meeting of the Detroit Sports Broadcasters Association. "If they persist, we will not allow them on our campus. We will not allow them to view our films and they will not be welcome at our workouts.

"The second thing is the fact that they are going to camp in February. If the USFL was smart, it would operate with players already out of college a year, castoffs from the National Football League."

Schembechler, whose 1981 team finished 12th in the final Associated Press college football poll with a 9-3 record after a convincing 33-14 victory over UCLA in the Bluebonnet Bowl, said he would counsel his players not to sign with the USFL.

"I would tell them to go with the National Football League, because it allows you to graduate," Schembechler said. "You've got to remember that only one player in 10 makes it in professional football. Yet, the the U.S. Football League's last consideration is what impact it will have on the players.

Schembechler, whose 1981 team included three first-team All-Americans — wide receiver Anthony Carter, tackle Ed Muransky and guard Kurt Becker, plus tailback Butch Woolfolk on the second team — said the NFL always has been fairly good for colleges to deal with.

"You can say what you want to about (NFL Commissioner) Pete Rozelle, but I feel he understands the colleges' problems," Schembechler said. "We are educating these kids and trying to get them a degree.

"I'm going to push hard to force these (USFL) people to sit down and consider these things."

Martinez, Carter hit homers as Midland wins

Showing off for his parents who are visiting Midland? "It's the first time I've ever enjoyed any success hitting homers when they've been watching. But as far as doing anything differently, no, I'm just being patient. Three walks tonight indicates that. And right now I'm in a groove."

With the two rbi, the 1981 College Player of the Year now has 55 as well as 10 more homers than a year ago. "I'm satisfied with my production, but I'm not satisfied teamwise. I think we can do better. I want us to have a winner here."

The Cubs were living lucky in the eighth when both catcher Mike Diaz and first baseman Martinez went after a foul pop down the first base line. Diaz was set to take it and Martinez snatched it away at the last second and somehow a collision was avoided.

"It was Carmelo's ball, but they both wanted it," said Murphy.

Fortunately, communications were improved by the ninth. Rob Blyth relieved Clark after Baker singled for his fourth hit to open the inning. With one out, another pop up by Torve brought Diaz and Martinez on another collision course, but Blyth yelled for Carmelo to take it all the way.

BRUINS BREWIN'S—Jon Perlman, 8-5, will pitch the opener tonight when the Jackson Mets arrive for a five-game stand. It will be Chamber of Commerce Pack the Park Night...Lefthanded reliever Mike Thompson, who sprained an ankle coverig first in the series at San Antonio, is due off the disabled list in a day or two and should ease things in the bullpen. Smith threw on the sidelines Wednesday, but Murphy hopes he doesn't have to use him until after the All-Star break...

Male doctors anxious about future

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors have become more pessimistic about the future of their profession, but female physicians generally are more hopeful than men about dealing with anticipated changes, says a new survey.

The attitude study by Louis Harris and Associates said the nation's doctors believe medical practice will change substantially in the coming decade, but most think the changes would not be for the better.

The report, done for the Kaiser Family Foundation in Menlo Park, Calif., and released today, said doctors mostly fear a loss of their autonomy and independence.

Anticipated restraints by government and health insurance suppliers on fees and how they practice seem to worry the physicians most.

For example, 83 percent of the doctors agreed that private health insurance suppliers will set some type of ceiling on fee reimbursements in most states in the next decade.

Fully 48 percent thought this would be a change for the worse, while only 22 percent said it would be for the better and 25 percent said there would be no effect.

In all, the study noted, "The most frequent type of change noted by physicians involves various forms of external regulation with emphasis upon government controls and interference."

The report said 50 percent of male doctors, but only 40 percent of females, "feel sufficient doubts about the future of medical practice (that they) said they would not recommend it as highly today as they would have 10 years ago."

The Harris organization interviewed a total of 1,814 physicians nationwide for the study, including 193 medical residents who had just started their careers and about 100 women doctors.

Women doctors tended to be in primary care more than men, with 57 percent of women in such areas as emergency medicine, family practice and internal medicine, compared with 47 percent of men.

The study attributed this difference to a higher concentration of women in pediatrics and obstetrics-gynecology, and their low proportion in the surgical specialties.

Women tended to accept the idea of salaried positions more than men, with 39 percent of women physicians in such positions compared with 16 percent of men.

In the general survey, 51 percent of physicians said that in the coming decade more physicians will opt for salaried positions rather than self-employment or partnerships. But only 13 percent thought this would be a change for the better, versus 46 percent who said it would be for the worse.

The doctors also believed there would be an oversupply of physicians nationwide in the next 10 years, which could limit some options for practicing in such specialties as neurosurgery, ophthalmology and dermatology.

New York hospitals prepare for strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiators for 37,000 unionized hospital workers caucused this morning to consider a mediation team's request that they "stop the clock" on a threatened strike against 40 hospitals in New York City and its suburbs.

However, the negotiators for District 1199 of the National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees, who said their members would strike the nonprofit hospitals at 6 a.m., had not responded to the mediators' request hours past the deadline.

Workers in at least one facility, Southside Hospital in Bayshore, Long Island, failed to report for duty as scheduled at 7 a.m. Southside administrator Jack Robinson said "several hundred" employees were involved.

District 1199 represents 37,000 workers — including X-ray technicians, nurses' aides, kitchen workers, orderlies and social workers — in 55 institutions with a total of about 18,000 patients. But the union said it was giving a 24-hour reprieve to seven nursing homes and the nursing home units of 10 hospitals.

Stanley Brezenoff, president of the Health and Hospitals Corp., which operate's New York's public hospitals, said some patients from the private hospitals would be transferred and city ambulance workers would be put on 12-hour shifts.

Brezenoff said a blood drive was being conducted among the corporation's employees to bolster a two-day supply of blood, and elective surgery had been curtailed at the municipal hospitals in preparation for the inflow of patients from other hospitals.

You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivas lent to a rate of 10 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8%. for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be changed at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage bases upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 16.575%.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

No stage of Hodgkin's considered incurable

Dear Dr. Solomon: Doctors thought at first that my aunt had leukemia, but it turned out she has Hodgkin's disease. Is this better, or is it a case of out of the frying pan and into the fire? Also, can you tell me what the treatment is for Hodgkin's disease? — Stacey, Charleston, S.C.

Dear Stacey: In its early stages, Hodgkin's disease has a better than 90 percent cure rate; overall, its cure rate is about 80 percent. Moreover, no stage of the disease is considered to be incurable.

Patients in the early stages of Hodgkin's disease usually receive radiation therapy, while those with advanced stages of the disease are generally treated with chemotherapy or a combination of radiation and chemotherapy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father's doctor is recommending that he undergo hemodialysis even though my father is 65 years old. I want him to get the best of everything, but I don't want him to go through the motions of getting treatment that's not going to do him any good. I've always been up front with my father, and I don't intend to stop now. What can I tell him? — Lennie, Sarasota, Fla.

Dear Lennie: You can tell your father that the resuts of hemodialysis in patients over 60 years of age compare favorably with those in younger patients. A review of 42 patients with renal failure showed that 60 percent survived for at least five years while on hemodialysis. Rehabilitation was rated as fair to good in 67 percent, and poor in 33 percent.

By comparison, the five-year survival rate for 54 patients 20 to 40 years of age was 75 percent.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My brother is scheduled for heart surgery, and he tells me he's getting training on how to breathe after the operation. I don't understand why someone has to be taught how to breathe. It seems to me you either do or you don't. And if you don't, you have nothing left to worry about. — Kenny, Charlotte, N.C.

Dear Kenny: The recovery period following cardiac surgery is a critical time for the patient. Proper breathing techniques can reduce the possibility of post-operative complications, thus reducing the treatment time and the need for an extended period of hospitalization.

By teaching proper breathing techniques before the operation, medical personnel avoid the problem of trying to get through to a patient who is sedated and otherwise limited by the effects of the surgery.

For Mr. P.H. (Cincinnati): My anti-smoking shot is given in Baltimore; the program is coupled with my diet that cleanses the nicotine from your body and instruction in behavioral modification to help you with the psychological part.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Shark scare comes to end

STINSON BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A shark scare has ended, and swimming is allowed again in the waters off Stinson Beach, a popular playground for San Franciscans.

National Park Service officials, noting no killer sharks had been seen in a week, on Tuesday said it was safe to go back in the water.

Inmate wants to go to parents' funeral

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A convicted murderer whose parents were killed in the Pan Am plane crash near New Orleans has requested a furlough to attend their funeral in North Carolina.

The request by Sonia Jacobs, until last year the only woman on Florida's Death Row, would have to be approved by the governors of Florida and North Carolina, said her attorney, William Sheppard.

Police in North Carolina also would have to agree to take custody of her during the visit, Sheppard said.

Sheppard, of Jacksonville, said Tuesday he had "set the wheels in motion" for Ms. Jacobs to attend the funeral of Herb and Belle Jacobs, who were among the 146 people aboard the Boeing 727 that crashed Friday in Kenner, La., during a thunderstorm.

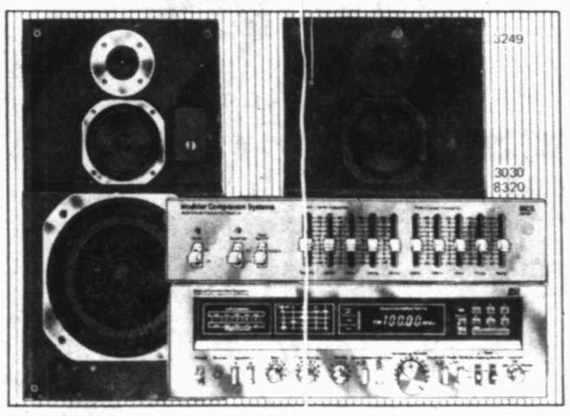

Ms. Jacobs, 34, and her boyfriend, Jessie Tafero, were sentenced to death for the Feb. 20, 1976 shooting deaths of a state highway patrolman and a visiting Canadian constable in South Florida.

The Florida Supreme Court ruled March 26, 1981 that her sentence should be reduced to life. She is imprisoned in the Broward County Correctional Institution.

Sheppard said no funeral arrangements had been made. The Jacobs couple had lived in Charlotte, N.C.

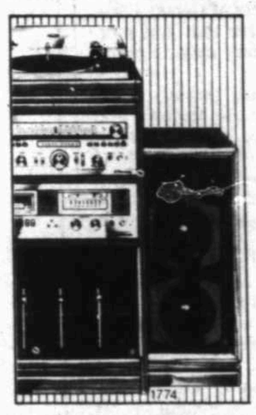

He said Tuesday he had not heard from any of the authorities he had contacted about the release.

Study advocates increasing sea power over ground forces

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — The United States should withdraw most of its ground forces from Europe and concentrate on sea power to cope with rising military challenges throughout the world, declares a prestigious foreign policy analysis group.

As one of the challenges, the group cited a possible Soviet invasion of Iran, which it said is now viewed as a serious prospect by commanders of the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force. A computerized projection, it added, showed that 325,000 U.S. troops would be needed to counter such a move.

"The time has come for the U.S. to begin withdrawing most of its ground forces from Europe and to adopt a global strategy based on sea power and the ability to project power from sea to shore," said the recommendation, made by the Institute for Foreign Policy Analysis Inc., a body based in Washington and Cambridge, Mass.

THE INSTITUTE SAID its recommendations, if adopted, would constitute a "revolution in America's strategic outlook" dictated by "new threats" to U.S. interests in the oil-rich Middle East and other non-European areas "where the U.S. does not enjoy politically-secure access."

The institute thus urged America's West European allies to assume greater responsibilities for their defense "to enable the U.S. to restructure its armed forces for military contingencies outside the North Atlantic area," with special emphasis on greater maritime capabilities.

"If NATO Europe is not capable of creating a credible nuclear deterrent or of participating in a defense of Southwest Asia (the Middle East), it certainly possesses the manpower sufficient to assume full responsibility for its defense on the ground," the institute asserted.

The recommendation was made in a report entitled "U.S. Strategy at the Crossroads," published by the institute, a conservative, academic body specializing in national security affairs. The report was prepared by Jeffrey Record, a senior fellow of the institute and former national security adviser to Sen. Sam Nunn, D-GA., and retired Rear Admiral Robert J. Hanks, senior political-military analyst for the institute and former commander of the U.S. Middle East Force.

THE U.S. PRESENTLY maintains more than 350,000 military personnel in Western Europe, mainly in West Germany, where they form the principal segment of the NATO command. Most are in combat-operational armored and infantry units. The commander of U.S. forces in Western Europe is also the commander of all NATO forces in Europe.

U.S. Army units in West Germany constitute about 10 of the U.S. Army's 16 operational divisions. In addition, 30 U.S. Air Force tactical fighter squadrons are based in Germany, backed up by 60 reserve squadrons in the U.S. The European theater, too, ties up about one-half of the U.S. Navy's combatant and amphibious ships.

The U.S. also deploys in Europe about 6,000 tactical nuclear warheads, representing about one-third of the U.S. nuclear arsenal.

"The commitment to NATO is by far the most costly function in the U.S. defense budget," the report said.

The report quoted Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger as saying "Our defense policy has...become obsolete because of new threats to our security...hence we have to break with some past thinking and develop new policy and concepts."

The report also made the radical charge that NATO, America's most durable alliance, is "disintegrating" and that the Middle East and the "Third World" must now replace Europe as areas of principal U.S. security concern.

"ALTHOUGH EUROPE HAS been the locus of the greatest concentration of U.S. and Soviet military capabilities, it has been elsewhere...that the wars of the mid-to-late 20th century have taken place," noted Robert L. Pfaltzgraff Jr., president of the institute.

Is plastic-encased beer hovering on the horizon?

Copley News Service

But now that plastic containers are growing far faster than glass bottles or metal cans — and brewers are running tests to see if they can utilize plastic bottles — will people around the United States sidle up to the bar and ask, civilly, for a "plastic container of beer, please?"

FOR INVESTORS, such a question is moot. Investors want to know how to make money in packaging. H. Edward Schollmeyer, packaging industry analyst for Wall Street's Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins, the research arm of Paine Webber Jackson & Curtis, believes there is money to be a made in makers of plastic containers.

Schollmeyer is bullish on the shares of Dorsey Corp., a Chattanooga-based container maker that gets more than half of its sales from a subsidiary making plastic containers.

"The can business has been growing recently at 1 to 2 percent a year in units, but will be flat to down over the next three to five years. The glass business has also been growing at 1 to 2 percent, but will be flat to down for the next three to five years. The plastic container business, however, should grow at more than a 10 percent annual rate for some time," said Schollmeyer in an interview.

Of course, plastic has a very small share of the market now, so is coming from a much lower base. In the soft drink business in 1980 (the most recent data available), there were only 2 billion plastic bottles sold, said Schollmeyer. By contrast, there were 8.8 billion glass bottles and 25.3 billion cans sold.

But historical trends are enlightening. In 1975, volume of plastic bottles had been just 50 million in soft drinks. In bottles, 1975 volume had been 9.3 billion — so bottle usage had actually fallen in the period. Cans had grown from 16.3 billion in 1975 to 25 billion in 1980.

IN BEER, GLASS had the faster growth in the half-decade period: Glass bottles grew from 11 billion in 1975 to 17.7 billion, while cans went from 25.9 billion to 29 billion.

Brewers are testing to see whether plastic containers are compatible with beer's pasteurization process. "Plastic wine bottles are in test markets now. Small wine bottles are already used on airplanes," said Schollmeyer. "General Foods' 'Tang' is likely to come out in a plastic container."

Plastic containers are suitable only for products that are packaged cold, said Schollmeyer. Also, plastic is unsuitable in some other cases. For examples, aromas escape from plastic containers: "The fresh aroma of coffee which you get is implanted upon packaging. If plastic were used, it would escape."

Similarly, glass will always be used when elegance is required: "You won't be seeing champagne in plastic bottles, or perfume," said Schollmeyer.

Plastic's advantage is lighter weight and non-breakability. Its disadvantage is shorter shelf life. There are also complaints about taste, "but I wonder who is planting all those stories," harrumphed Schollmeyer.

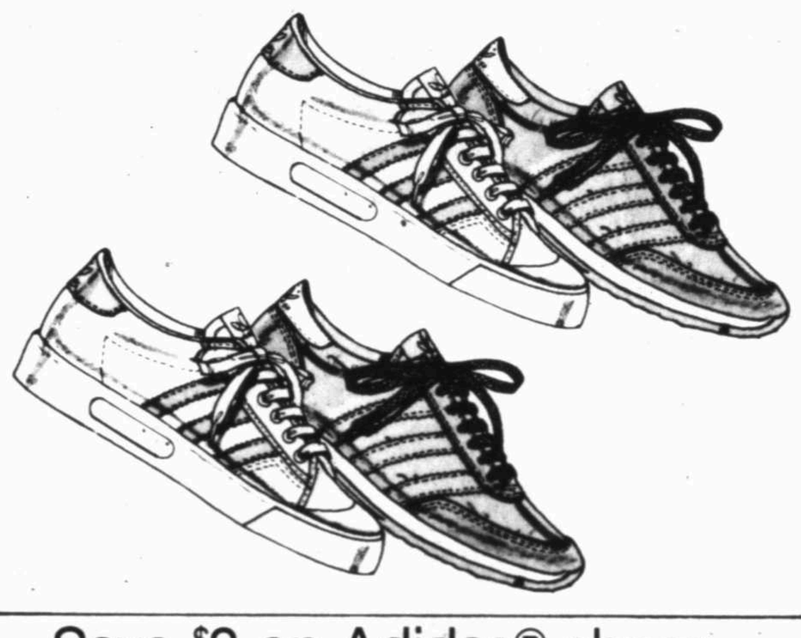

Schollmeyer can see Dorsey's earnings growing at 20 to 25 percent annual rates for the next several years. The stock, up almost two points in the last two trading sessions, sells for less than $25 a share and less than five times earnings.

Schollmeyer is not recommending the shares of most can and bottle makers — which now are scrambling to diversify. Among the stocks he does not recommend are American Can, Continental Group, Owens-Illinois, Anchor Hocking, Brockway and National Can.

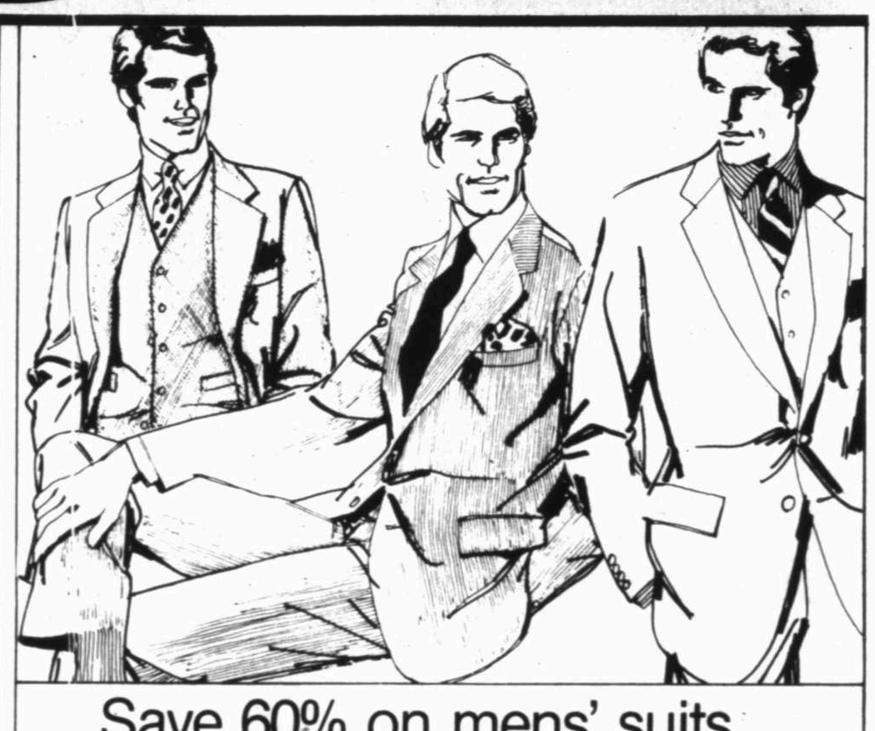

Both Owens-Illinois and Continental Group are into plastics, but Schollmeyer believes Dorsey has too much of a head start, given the high capitalization and highly skilled employees that are required for manufacture. "I estimate that Continental Group lost $60 million before plastic containers became profitable for them. About $20 million to $30 million of that was for research and development," he said.

LIFE IN THESE UNITED STATES

Special from Reader's Digest

When we moved to California, my husband and I spent the first day unpacking and arranging furniture in our new home. Then he went out to get hamburgers. We ate at the coffee table and sat gazing out the living-room window. "I wonder what kind of people our neighbors are," I remarked, not really expecting an answer.

My husband stood up and pointed toward the house across the street. "You'll be happy to know that those neighbors voted the same way we did," he said. "And the family on the corner has a child at State College...and the people in the brown house go surfing and, oh yes, the couple next door believe that 'love is a waterbed.'"

"Wait a minute," I interrupted. "You haven't even met our neighbors yet. How come you know so much about them?"

"When I went out for hamburgers," he replied, "I drove around and read everybody's bumper stickers."

Giving up cigarettes was extremely difficult for my husband. After many attempts and as many failures, he took up knitting in an effort to keep his hands occupied during the crucial period immediately following meals, when his urge to smoke was greatest.

I was unaware of how he regarded his self-imposed occupation until he happened to be home for lunch one day. After eating, he carefully closed the living-room drapes before taking up his needlework. Well aware of the neighborhood penchant for gossip, I asked, aghast, "What will the neighbors think?"

"I don't care what they think," he answered, "as long as they don't think I'm knitting!"

Having recently changed banks, I requested that my former bank close my account and send me the balance. Upon receiving the check, I noticed that on the top line was written the correct amount; but on the line below was a different figure, several hundred dollars too high. I promptly returned the check to the bank with a note saying simply: "Lead me not into temptation."

I thought no more about it until several days later, when I received a corrected check with a note saying: "Blessed are the pure in heart."

Since I have three children under age 5, I take precautions to save myself unnecessary work. For instance, I never fill their cups more than half full, hoping to avoid spillage.

One evening, my husband invited his fellow salesmen and boss for dinner. Things of this sort make me nervous, but to my surprise everything turned out well. The meat was done on time and the gravy wasn't lumpy.

After the guests had left, my husband kissed me and said, "Honey, you did just great! But why did you give everyone only half a cup of coffee?"

Recently, while I was chaperoning at a school dance which featured a loud hard-rock group, two parents standing near me were trying to talk above the throb of the music. Finally, one of them began making her way determinedly toward the stage where a singer gyrated close to one of the amplifiers.

As the woman neared the stage, the group's manager walked over to her expectantly. "Look, son, we can't hear a thing back there," she shouted above the din. "Can't you do something?"

"Yes, ma'am, and I'm sure sorry about this," replied the youth. "Hey, Neil, turn up amps 5 and 6 — those ladies can't hear us back there!"

My son and I were riding the overhead tram at a jungle compound one afternoon while the guide pointed out the various animals roaming the simulated African veld. Suddenly we heard him say, "As we round the next corner, we will be directly over the most unusual compound of all where cougars, falcons, barracudas, mustangs and even bugs are gathered in one enclosure."

"As passengers craned their necks to see this phenomenon, we started coming in over the parking lot.

We had stopped at a gas station in the West Virginia mountains when we noticed a battered pickup truck coming rapidly down the hill. As the truck approached, it became evident that the driver wanted to pull into the station but was having trouble slowing down.

We watched helplessly as the vehicle rolled past the pumps and disappeared down an embankment. We ran to help, but the driver had already climbed out, unharmed, and was walking toward us.

Questionable ad to remain on air

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says it will not withdraw a GOP television commercial which says President Reagan "kept his promise" on this year's Social Security increase.

"The President knows the ad is not true," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said earlier in the week in calling on Reagan to ask the Republican National Committee to remove the ad from the air.

The advertisement features a postman delivering Social Security checks containing the 7.4 percent cost-of-living increase that went into effect on July 1 — an increase which was in keeping with federal law, which O'Neill says Reagan tried to delay and which congressional officials of both parties say the administration earlier this year tried to reduce and delay.

Weinberger asks for more negotiation time

Hearst Feature Service

LONDON — Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger Wednesday cautioned Israel against "some sort of massacre" of Palestinians in west Beirut, strongly urging Prime Minister Menachem Begin to give the U.S. at least another two weeks to negotiate a final PLO withdrawal.

"It's going to take about that long to get all these pieces together," Weinberger said in a telephone interview from Washington. He said August 1 is "quite a realistic appraisal" of the target date for PLO forces to leave Lebanon. But he said "it will be a very complex operation" if it comes off.

Using tougher language to warn against any military action than he has used before, Weinberger said:

"Everybody's very worried about some sort of massacre taking place. There are a great many civilian casualties now...and if there is an attempt to move right through west Beirut and solve the whole problem militarily, why there would be enormous casualties."

Weinberger cited a statement Tuesday by an unidentified Israeli cabinet spokesman that Israel would give U.S. envoy Philip Habib as much time as he needs to complete his mission.

"The Israelis insist they (the Palestinians) are not facing a deadline. I very much hope that is the case." But the defense chief added that the Reagan administration has not received any commitment from Israel that it will not attack.

He explained that Syria, even though it has publicly refused to provide a sanctuary for the PLO army, has not slammed the door on some compromise that would allow several thousand Palestinians to remain in Damascus for an interim period.

Weinberger said Syria still is the most logicl place for them to go.

"They (the Syrians) always add the words 'under the present circumstances,' to their negotiating position," Weinberger said. "It doesn't seem a final refusal but it's a long way from a final acceptance."

He also said he is puzzled about why the PLO wants to leave Lebanon overland via the Beirut-to-Damascus highway. "That would certainly be a much riskier escape route than going out by sea," Weinberger said.

"We don't quite understand why they want to go through the Bekaa Valley where they would be under Israeli guns for a large part of the trip," he added. Israeli forces "so far have shown no interest in any pullback" from the highway, he said.

The new 11-point PLO plan reportedly includes a demand that the army of 6,000 Palestinians leave in a convoy of buses unescorted by any foreign or multinational force. The PLO also is demanding a five-mile Israeli withdrawal from the Beirut-to-Damascus highway.

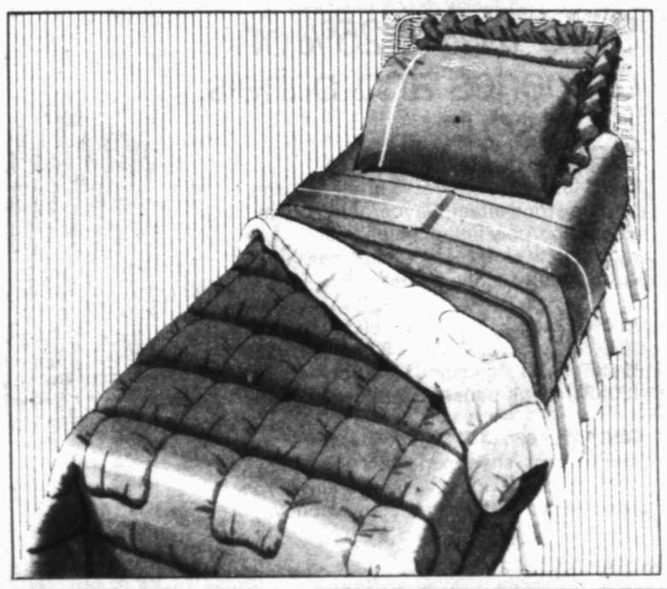

Weinberger said the chief function of the U.S. Sixth Fleet would be to help land a battalion of Marines to form the buffer force to separate Israeli and Palestinian troops. If the PLO agreed to leave by sea, he said a fleet of ships chartered by the international Red Cross would carry them out.

"Our forces are ready," Weinberger said "but we will have to establish liaison between our forces and the French. That takes time. The longer the situation goes on the more worrisome it seems to be."

Hairy problem has some stylists upset over move

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Great Barbershop Controversy at the White House resulted in a decision to build a new $9,000 beauty salon so President Reagan can have the barbershop to himself.

But the decision apparently has not ended what White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III described as a "raging controversy" between the barber and the beauticians, who currently share the same quarters on alternate days.

Milton Pitts, the presidential barber who occupies the small room in the White House basement on Tuesdays and Thursdays, told The Associated Press recently that he thought it was a wise move. Now he gets the room to himself.

The beauticians, Yves and Nancy Graux, who currently use the salon on Wednesdays and Fridays, are upset about being moved to separate quarters in the Old Executive Office Building adjacent to the White House.

John Rogers, director of administration at the White House, said the new quarters should be ready in a couple weeks. He said there were no plans to allow anyone but the Grauxs to occupy the new salon, even though the beauticians said they had not been notified that they could do so.

In a recent interview, Baker said the new salon was being built "because we think it's important that the president's barbershop be the way it was through all presidencies up until the Carter presidency." That means he wants the shop reserved for the president, although Pitts also cuts the hair of Vice President Geoge Bush, the Cabinet, and several senior staff members.

Even though the Graux' customers include many men who prefer hairstyling to the more traditional haircut, Baker added the new shop was being built because "there ought to be a place where women in the White House can have their hair done if there's a place where men can have a haircut."

The whole subject "has been a point of contention," Baker said.

Pitts had the barbershop to himself when he served Presidents Nixon and Ford. But President Carter switched to a new barber and, at the same time, allowed the Grauxs to come in twice a week to style hair for women and men who did not use Pitts.

Both Pitts and the Grauxs are in business for themselves and do not work for the government. Pitts operates out of the Sheraton-Carlton Hotel when he's not at the White House. The Grauxs have a private salon and a shop in the U.S. Capitol.

Pitts, who charges $15 for a cut and $9 for a trim, said he "couldn't care less" who works at the White House.

But, he added, "I feel in all due respect there should be one shop for the president and one alone. They've never used that shop for a beauty shop except when Carter came in."

The Grauxs do not want to leave the White House — even to go next door — and cannot understand why they are being moved.

"It just seems unnecessary to spend the money," said Nancy Graux in a recent telephone interview.

Mrs. Graux said she was convinced they were being forced out by Rogers, and quoted him as having said he wanted to re-establish hierarchy at the White House. Rogers denied having made the comment. He also denied that he wanted the Grauxs out.

According to Mrs. Graux, their White House customers include deputy press secretary Larry Speakes, political directer Ed Rollins, personnel director Helene A. von Damm and the daughter of deputy Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver. Their prices range from $15-$25 depending on the service.

Falklanders not upset to see Argentines go

STANLEY, Falkland Islands (AP) — Although residents of the Falkland Islands say they suffered no physical maltreatment during the 10-week Argentine occupation, they lived under a climate of fear that got worse as their British rescuers approached.

However, their situation was not as bad as that of some panicky Argentine conscripts who begged and stole food, looted and burned homes and shot blindly at noises in the dark as the British forces neared Stanley.

"At first their behavior was very good," said Rex Hunt, who was Falklands governor when Argentine troops invaded April 2 and who returned as civil commissioner after British troops recaptured Stanley on June 14.

"But as the British fleet moved south, they got rather more fraught. A number of the Argentine conscripts behaved badly," Hunt said. "There was quite a bit of looting. Islanders returning to their homes were absolutely aghast at the state the Argentines left their houses in."

Several houses, a recreation hall and a public works maintenance building were burned down. Islanders say many homes were raided for food and some for valuables. Some residents reported finding excrement in their homes, and British military men said excrement was smeared on the walls of the Stanley school.

"After what they did, I hope I never see the bastards again," said Harold Rowland, the islands' financial secretary and the top civil official left in Stanley after Hunt was exiled to Britain.

"Basically," said Rowland, "the Argentines hid behind the population. They set up their gun emplacements right next to people's houses. They stopped people at random on the street. I suppose they hoped to intimidate us. But eventually, even the elderly people went smiling past the guards."

Stuart Wallace, an employee of the Cable and Wireless communication company and former member of the islands' legislative council, recalled that on April 3, three jeeps carrying Argentine soldiers drove up to his house. An officer stepped out and warned Wallace that his anti-Argentine views were known and, in Wallace's words, "They had ways of dealing with people who made any trouble."

On April 27, the day after the British recaptured the Falklands dependency of South Georgia, Wallace was hauled away from his office by an Argentine officer who announced: "By order of the military governor, you are being taken to a rural destination and held there for your own safety."

That night, soldiers showed up at the home of Gerald Cheek, the islands' director of civil aviation.

"They said 'get packed; you're going' — I didn't know where," he said. "They came in with pistols drawn. They threatened my two children, my wife. Really nasty, those people."

Cheek, Wallace and 13 other people were put on a helicopter and taken to Fox Bay, West Falkland, 70 miles west of Stanley, where they were held until the surrender.

This time it was Abilene National Bank that got egged. And I am mad.

That's the phrase I keep thinking over and over when I think about this business with the Dallas Morning News. Why would they or anyone choose to be that small?

I know you can't totally escape slander if you're in the public eye, but knowing that doesn't make me any less angry right now.

This time it was Abilene National Bank that got egged. And I'm mad.

The Dallas Morning News printed an article July 9 in their morning edition that's done their credibility absolutely no good. They've chosen to be small as a newspaper.

I've never been more proud of our vision at Abilene National Bank, I've never been more proud of our size and stability, and I've never been more proud of our endorsement by the National Bank examiners and the Federal Reserve. It is total support.

I am making public all information pertaining to the error by the Dallas Morning News. The following is a blow by blow account of events, false accusations, and the factual information that refutes all charges and is part of our public records.

I submit this out of respect for our constituents, our bank and myself. I also feel real gratitude for the support we've seen from Abilene.

Now, I would like to discuss in detail the Dallas Morning News article.

Number one. The headlines in the paper stated "Officials probe bank in Abilene" and "FBI investigates bank in Abilene." This was a blatant lie. The reporter, Earl Golz, chose these headlines even though the FBI told him the bank was not under investigation.

Here are the facts. Federal banking regulations require a bank to notify the FBI and the Comptroller of Currency of any and all allegations made against a bank officer or employee. In March of this year, we discovered that a loan customer had furnished us with a "bogus" audited financial statement. An investigation of this customer by the bank revealed other discrepancies in his reported financial condition. Based on this information and the customer's failure and inability to remedy the situation, I made the decision to foreclose on the loans which totaled approximately $5 million. Shortly thereafter, the customer made accusations that this loan officer had requested and received kickbacks.

As required, I reported the incident to the proper authorities, including the FBI on March 30, 1982. Since that time I have not heard from or had any additional contact or communication with the FBI. At this point we are in possession of most of the collateral which secured the loans and we are in the process of selling it and will take a loss on any unpaid balance. We will have sufficient funds in our loan-loss reserve to cover any loss we may have on the loan.

Number two. Golz conveniently refers to the collapse of the Penn Square Bank in Oklahoma City, and that Continental Illinois Bank is estimated to lose $240 million in bad energy-related loans. He further states Abilene National has "laid off a tremendous amount of paper (loans) to Continental Illinois Bank of Chicago and Mercantile National Bank of Dallas."

Here are the facts. We do not have one single participation loan sold to the Continental Bank. We have six participated loans sold to Mercantile for a total of $9.5 million; and each loan is secured, paying as agreed, and both Abilene National Bank and Mercantile are proud to have the loans. They are excellent loans of the highest quality.

Here is the record of our loan losses for the past five and a half years.

Year	Loan Loss	% of Total Loans
1978	159,767.00	.37%
1979	118,106.00	.17%
1980	381,689.00	.33%
1981	470,206.00	.23%

In the first five months of 1982 we have charged off $647,590.00 in loans which is a .0017% of our total $361,000,000 in loans, and our pre-tax profit through July 9 is $7,771,208.98. I challenge any bank of our size in the state to match this record.

Number three. Golz said in his article that Abilene National faces a possible loss of $550,000.00 loaned to Tommy Ballard to buy control of the Bank of Woodson in Throckmorton County, west of Abilene.

Here are the facts. Abilene National Bank loaned the money secured by the stock in the Woodson Bank. Mr. Ballard already had control of the bank. The loan was charged off the bank's books over 90 days ago; and in fact, Ballard has since collateralized the loan with a 450 acre farm. I think we will recover all our money. Also, it is not necessary to mention it, but I will, Woodson is northeast of Abilene, not west.

Number four. Golz mentions AWECO, Inc. and says they filed bankruptcy and the DOE is seeking to recover $195 million in oil miscertification overcharges.

Here are the facts. AWECO, Inc. filed bankruptcy 17 months ago. Abilene National Bank had some loans with them at the time but they were all paid in full including interest and we didn't lose a dime.

Number five. Golz quotes a Dallas attorney as stating that the Abilene National Bank financial statement showed more than $160 million in letters of credit and if called at one time, they would exceed the bank's loan limits, and that the bank would then be forced to sell to other banks. The implication was that this would create insolvency.

Here are the facts. This is a ridiculous and totally false implication. Abilene National Bank has $54,328,391.79 in letters of credit as of the date of Golz's article, and as of this date. Those letters represent 239 separate transactions and almost as many separate customers of the bank. A portion of these letters are in fact to guarantee payment of crude oil; however, many are to guarantee the payment of state sales taxes, telephone bills, utility bills, subdivision completion costs, costs of plugging oil wells, gasoline credit cards and other common and ordinary transactions just as any bank's letters of credit would cover. If all letters of credit were called at once, every single one would be paid; the bank would not be overline; and not one cent would be lost.

Number six. Golz mentions West Texas Marketing having filed bankruptcy. In May they did file. We had outstanding letters of credit secured by cash, backup letters of credit or accounts receivable from major oil companies or very large and reputable independent oil companies.

Here are the facts. All West Texas Marketing letters of credit were paid as agreed and not one cent was lost. Presently, this company does not owe the bank anything at all, and we suffered no loss.

Number seven. Golz mentions Brio Petroleum. Brio filed bankruptcy approximately two weeks ago, and they presently still have outstanding debts at the bank.

Here are the facts. The loan is secured and in my opinion we have a good chance of not suffering a loss.

Number eight. Golz seems to imply that my decision to withdraw my multi-bank holding company application was done without explanation. And that must indicate something sinister.

Here are the facts. If Golz had asked I would have told him the multi-bank application was part of an overall plan to take the bank stock public. Everyone knows that the stock market has been down; and I simply decided that in view of the market conditions it would be unwise to "go public" at this time.

Number nine. Golz also states that I hold 55% of the stock in the holding company; and three oil traders own 7% each. Elsewhere in the article he implies that oil traders are crooks.

Here are the facts. I own 155,292 shares of stock in Consolidated Bancshares, Inc. which own Abilene National Bank. This is 7.18% of the total shares. The rest of the stock is owned by 642 separate shareholders.

On June 30, 1982, Abilene National Bank had total assets of $468 million. We had deposits of $428 million, loans of $355 million. Our pre-tax profit through Friday, July 9, 1982 was $7,771,208.98.

It is obvious to me, to our stockholders, to our directors, to the Comptroller of Currency and the Federal Reserve that Abilene National is a strong, growing and profitable bank.

Even before he saw "Annie," Hoffman described it as "an overproduced spectacular." "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" won't come out until Friday; it'll be a debacle, he says — again without having seen it.

It's not that this guy pans everything. He'll allow that a movie has "good demographics," is "a break-even prospect" or, like the latest Disney movie, "Tron," "on the edge of reasonable risk."

Hoffman is a Wall Street stock analyst. He's no critic. He doesn't care whether he likes a movie or not. All he cares about is: Will it make money?

Wall Street's buttoned-down analysts are increasingly finding themselves cast as critics of Hollywood's creative offerings. Their opinions, while of little interest to the movie-goer, can influence a substantial audience in the financial community — and, as a result, the price of a movie company's stock.

"The question I have to ask is: Are the regular movie-goers going to get excited about this film? And will it bring out the people who only occasionally go to movies?" says Hoffman, of A.G. Becker Inc.

BUT HE SHRUGS off the title of critic. "The whole business of us being film critics is ludicrous," he says. "If a film had to depend on drawing people from my demographic group, it'd be in trouble."

Securities analysts all pore through trade journals, but Hoffman and about a dozen others like him even search the gossip columns for tidbits about film production problems (could mean higher costs, lower profit) and box office stars.

Last week some negative words from investment analysts about "Tron" sent Disney stock spinning down $2.50, to $56.37, in one day of trading.

Theodore James Jr., of Montgomery Securities in San Francisco, advised clients to sell Disney stock until the price dropped to $52 a share because the $20 million film told a "seriously flawed, disjointed story."

Several other analysts predict the film won't do well. But they say it won't hurt Disney's overall financial condition.

"I didn't think 'Tron' was all that great, but I never thought it was going to be a major contributor to the company's overall financial situation," says Harold Vogel, of Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc. Vogel cut his profit estimate by a nickel, to $3.45 a share, after the screening.

"I'VE BEEN saying to buy this stock aggressively if it comes down, and I still feel that way," he adds.

Although analysts often attend other studios' screenings, it was the first time Disney had invited them — and perhaps the last. "What does a securities analyst know?" complained Mike Bagnell, senior vice president of finance at Disney.

The creative merits of "Tron" is not what bothers other analysts. They say the movie is geared for a narrow audience, ages 12 to 19, and is unlikely to be very profitable.

"The most important thing is what the numbers are after a film is released," says Dennis Forst, of Bateman, Eichler, Hill Richards Inc., in Los Angeles. "That's where these things are judged — not on whether an analyst or critic likes it."

"If I were following a maker of computers, I'd want to know as much about their new computer product as I could learn. It's the same with a movie. I want to see the new product and make a legitimate business judgment."

Most analysts say one film is unlikely to make or break a company. But the stratospheric costs of a few movies make them iffy investments. A film must earn about double its cost in domestic revenue to be called profitable.

COLUMBIA PICTURES' "Annie," for example, cost about $40 million. Universal's "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," with Burt Reynolds and Dolly Parton, opens Friday with even more invested, analysts say.

"If 'Whorehouse' had cost $20 million, I'd say it was guaranteed a profit," says Hoffman.

"But now some people say it will cost close to $50 million to finish ...there's just no way that can be anything but a major financial debacle — even with Burt Reynolds in it."

The top U.S. box office hit of all time — "Star Wars," had recorded $185 million in domestic revenue before its re-release this summer. No. 2 is "The Empire Strikes Back," $135 million, followed by "Jaws," $133 million.

A film like "Tron," that costs $20 million, "is not necessarily foolhardy, (but) it is on the edge of reasonable risk," Hoffman says.

Analysts would prefer that movie makers offer a selection of 20 feature films every year, for about $10 million each. "If you do that, the chances are good that you'll have a breakaway hit once in a while," Hoffman says.

It cost $10 million and pulled in $106 million in one month.

By FRED YAGER

NEW YORK (AP) — How would you like to be tossed around a bedroom ceiling, hurled into a muddy pool full of decaying bodies and then slither down a rope covered with pink slime?

"All in a day's work in a Steven Spielberg film," says actress Jobeth Williams, who goes through those antics and several others in "Poltergeist," a contemporary horror story about ghosts in suburbia.

Despite the physical difficulties and some confusion over who was in charge, Miss Williams says she actually found the experience very pleasurable.

"I always thought Spielberg was just a special effects man," she said. "Boy was I wrong. He's very responsive to actors and never rushed us when we had a difficult or emotional scene. Not all directors are like that."

Tobe Hooper is given director credit, while Spielberg is listed as producer and co-writer. But according to Miss Williams and other industry insiders, the directing job was more of a collaborative effort.

"Steven (Spielberg) was there every day," said the Texas-born actress. "He had very clear and strong ideas about what he wanted done and how he wanted it done.

"Even though Tobe was there and participating," she added, "you felt Steven had the final say on everything."

The actress says that in the initial days of shooting there often was confusion with two people giving conflicting directions.

"Sometimes Steven would tell us one thing and Tobe another," Miss Williams said. "But they soon realized that was doing us more harm than good, so they stopped.

"LATER ON, whatever discussions Tobe and Steven had, they held in private and then came to us with their decisions."

With a film such as "Poltergeist," with so many scenes containing special effects that are not present when the actors are performing, proper direction is crucial to the scene's credibility.

"I had no idea what these special effects or ghosts would look like," Miss Williams said. "Steven would hold up a stick and say, 'this is your eye line — follow this.'

"Then he'd say, 'now you're really scared.' And I'd say, 'what am I really scared of?' And he'd say, 'we don't really know what it's going to look like, but it's really scary.' So we really had to use our own imaginations."

The decision to cast Miss Williams as the mother who battles ghostly forces in "Poltergeist," was made after Spielberg saw her in a London showing of the film, "Dogs of War."

Fortunately for Miss Williams, Spielberg saw the film in England, because by the time it reached the United States, the scenes that had impressed him most about her had been cut out.

Jobeth Williams

HER FILM debut in "Kramer vs. Kramer" with Dustin Hoffman also was a twist of fate.

One of her co-stars on the soap opera "The Guiding Light," Cindy Pickett, had read for the role and knew that the producers didn't think she was right for it. So she told Miss Williams she should try out. She did.

"I have to believe in fate, especially when it comes to my career," Miss Williams said. "Even getting the role in my first film after 'Poltergeist' was unusual."

Nancy Allen had been hired to star in "Endangered Species," a mystery-adventure about cattle mutilations. But just before shooting began, Miss Allen became too ill to handle a vigorous production schedule.

'Jesus Christ Superstar' auditions slated

Auditions for Midland Community Theatre's production of "Jesus Christ Superstar" will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. and Monday at 7 p.m. in Theatre I at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Audition material is available in the theater's business office.

Roles are available for 25 men and 10 women with a singing chorus of 50 additional voices. Besides the strong vocal requirements, on-stage actors will need to possess the ability to work in ensemble. Dancers will also be needed in the production. They will be required to sing, though not to the same degree as the soloists.

"Jesus Christ Superstar" will be the next show in Theatre I. It is scheduled to open Sept. 10 and continue for a nine performance run. Rehearsals will begin in mid-July and continue until the play's opening date.

Auditions also will be held this summer in August for MCT's Theatre II production of "Tintypes," selected by the MCT board of governors as the play to fill the "Best Available" slot.

"Tintypes" is a musical revue of American music from 1895 to 1918. The three-woman, two-man cast portrays such notable as Teddy Roosevelt, Anna Held and Emma Goldman.

Director for the production is Michael Spicer. Spicer is looking for five talented, energetic people from 20 to 35 years old who are willing to make a long commitment to this production since it will probably be MCT's entry in the Festival of American Community Theatres. Audition dates are set for Aug. 22, 23 and 24. "Tintypes" opens Oct. 1.

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — If television is going to drag us through the swamps of Vietnam again, it should at least take us places we've never been before.

It's not enough that ABC News' documentary, "Vietnam Requiem," goes inside prison walls for interviews with five heroic veterans who became criminals back home.

Just to have these men recount their war experiences, intercut with graphic war footage, is easy television, guaranteed to raise our emotions and unsettle our sensibilities. PBS' "Frank: A Vietnam Veteran" did this better last November.

But there's a big gap between war and prison, which "Vietnam Requiem," surprisingly, never addresses. Why did these men take the criminal path when many other vets wre able to find the straight and narrow? Just to say these prisoners are all veterans of a brutal Vietnam doesn't necessarily explain it.

If a program purports to "capture a powerful portrait of Vietnam veterans," shouldn't it have looked into their lives before Vietnam, after Vietnam and then to the crimes themselves. Was there something in their makeup that made them successfully violent overseas and also illegally violent over here?

"Vietnam Requiem" never talks to psychological or sociological experts, nor does it provide any feel for the kinds of people these prisoners were.

There is a worthwhile story in how America tossed aside the welcome mat for its emotionally burdened Vietnam vets, making their adjustment that much harder. But we only get bits and pieces of that story here. Instead of an aftermath piece, "Vietnam Requiem" is just another documentary about war.

In that vein, tonight's program has its moments, particularly whenever Peewee Dobbs is on the screen. Dobbs, serving a 7½-year sentence for armed robbery, speaks deliberately and dramatically about his war experiences.

Dobbs was 17 when he volunteered for Vietnam, two years younger than the average Vietnam soldier and nine years younger than the typical World War II fighting man. Short in stature, Dobbs says he "wanted to do something macho and I saw being a paratrooper as the manifestation of macho."

With that psychological need as a tiny glimpse into the Dobbs character, might there be other reasons — besides Vietnam — why Dobbs took up armed robbery? Is it fair to presume the link between Vietnam and his conviction?
