Mourning Spreads to Jury As Story of Alcoholic Rage Is Told

CHICAGO, Nov. 22. (AP)—A wet-eyed jury in five minutes today acquitted of murder a father who confessed killing his son after a "hanging prosecutor" burst into tears and refused to continue the prosecution.

The judge, the state prosecutor, the defendant, his daughter, who was forced to testify against him, and virtually the entire courtroom including the jury, were in tears as the trial, less than three hours old, came to an ending as dramatic as any ever witnessed in the grim old criminal courts building, scene of hundreds of murder trials.

Jurors Weep

Arthur F. Falk, the defendant, a former park commissioner, slumped to the floor in a faint as the jurors, still weeping, brought in a verdict five minutes after receiving the case while the court, state and defense attorneys and even spectators endeavored to control their tears after an emotional climax such as is seldom witnessed in a courtroom.

Falk, in a drunken rage, shot and killed his 22-year-old son, Eldred, three months ago today when the youth upbraided him for coming home intoxicated. Offering his father a shotgun that Falk had given the boy last Christmas, Eldred told his father to fire, adding that he would rather be dead than be the son of a drunkard.

Falk, his brain befuddled by drink, pulled the trigger and his son fell dead at his feet. The father, sobered by the shooting, attempted to reload the gun and kill himself, but had never fired a gun before and did not know how. Instead he called the police and made a full confession. His wife and a 19-year-old daughter, Vernus, at first turned against him but a few days ago declared they intended to stand by the husband and father even though he had killed their son and brother.

Relatives in Mourning

Such was the case that opened today in the court of Judge Denis Normoyle when Falk, his face contorted with remorse, went on trial for his life. At his elbow lay the gun with which his son's life was snuffed out, behind him in deep mourning, sat his mother, his wife and his daughter.

Tears rolled down his cheeks as Harold Levy and Emmett Byrne, known as Cook county's "hanging prosecutor," outlined the state's case, declaring the state's principal witness was Falk's daughter who heard the quarrel between father and son that ended in the shooting.

At mention of her name the daughter burst into tears. William Mannion, defense lawyer, said he hoped to prove the shooting was accidental and that Falk did not know what he was doing. Then Falk's pretty blonde daughter was called as the state's first witness.

Defendant Sobs

With trembling voice she identified her father, pointing him out at the prisoner's table with a gesture that was an appeal rather than an accusation, while Falk dropped his face in his arms and sobbed audibly. Relentlessly the state forced her to tell of her father's return home intoxicated, of his quarrel with her brother, of her brother's entreaty to her father to kill him and of hearing the fatal shot.

She burst into tears as she identified the weapon her father used and

Companionate Marriage Again In Controversy on Anniversary of Pair

NEW YORK, Nov. 22. (UP) — Judge Ben B. Lindsey's famous brain-child, companionate marriage, rounded its first birthday today and discovered itself not an undernourished foundling on the doorstep of modernism, but a bouncing youngster quite impervious to the spanking of press and pulpit.

It was more than a year ago, of course, that the noted Denver jurist broached the companionate idea, but it is just 366 days since Josephine Haldeman-Julius and Aubrey Roselle, defying convention, and a worldwide storm of censure, calmly said, "I do," and set about putting the idea into practice.

Today, as they celebrated a year of perfectly happy wedded life, the controversy which followed their marriage burst forth again in American colleges and universities with the champions of the Lindsey plan assuming a triumphant mien.

Columbia university, for one, buzzed lively with companionate talk. The Spectator, its daily newspaper, appropriately utilized the Haldeman-Julius-Roselle anniversary as the occasion for an editorial which not only accorded high praise to the companionate theory, but urged all college students to

COUNTY'S LAST UNPAVED ROAD TO BE PAVED

Two Miles on Seymour Road to Be Improved With Funds

KNOX DESIGNATION

Benjamin-To-Baylor Route Authorized in Session Of Commission

Assurance that every foot of state designated highway in Wichita county will be paved within a few months was given Thursday in the announcement of a $48,601.48 appropriation from the state highway commission for the completion of the last two miles of the Seymour road within the county. When these two miles are complete, the county will have 92 miles of paved state highways without a dirt road gap, J. M. Isbell, county engineer, said Thursday night.

The highway commission in its agtion in executive session Tuesday accepted the Wichita county tender of $24,300.74 and granted, from state and federal funds, the $48,601.48 needed to complete the job. The Wichita county offer was tendered about ten days ago, Mr. Isbell said.

Contracts for the work will be let in Austin and the construction is expected to start at once. The Seymour road, or route 30, is already paved for 10.4 miles out from the city. The newly authorized strith will complete the road to the Archer county line, crossing the line about one mile from Holliday, the engineer declared. The road, as rerouted from the old dirt route, turns to the southwest just where the new work will begin.

At the same executive session the commission voted an appropriation of $32,000 for an extension of narrow roadway culverts and bridges on highways 8, 21, 35, 40, 62, 82, 76, 87, and 93 in Angelina, Jasper, Newton, Sabine, San Augustine, and Childress counties.

Construction of a road from Benjamin to the Baylor county line was also authorized, Knox county to pay 100 per cent on grading and drainage structures and receive credit on the final completion of the project. The project is to get five per cent state and federal aid.

Rothstein's Books Reveal Arch Activities

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (UP)—Arnold Rothstein's last joke on the police—who so far have failed signally to find the man who murdered him on the night of Nov. 4—came to light today.

Authorities admitted, after a casual inspection of the 50,000 letters, notations and records which the millionaire "gambler" kept in three filing cases in his Fifth avenue home, that Rothstein was "the man who"—the arch criminal that they have been looking for for years.

Lost Trails Found

The lost trails of not one but dozens of crimes of every description were found neatly indexed and filed in Rothstein's cabinets, and out of them arose a whole panorama of modern criminal "big business," in which millions of dollars in capital and palatial suites of offices formed a background.

All the data was set down with meticulous care and incredible frankness by Rothstein, for some personal reason of his own as mysterious as that which motivated Samuel Pepys in his famous diary. And, like Papys, Rothstein did not spare himself.

Atwell to Sentence Group 24 Hours After Indictment

CIVIL CASES MONDAY

Mail Robbery Case Sent To Fort Worth For Trial

Sentence will be pronounced upon a dozen federal prisoners exactly 24 hours after their indictment when Judge W. H. Atwell convenes the United States district court Friday morning.

Before 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, 12 of the 19 defendants named in the grand jury report had pleaded guilty as charged and been instructed to report for sentence at 10 o'clock Friday morning.

Court Works Fast

Except for the case against Mrs. Rickey Ketchum, reset from Thursday afternoon to Saturday, Dec. 1, and for the cases transferred for trial in Fort Worth and Dallas, the entire group of indictments brought in Thursday morning were disposed of within the day. The docket holds no setting for Friday and only one, expected to be dismissed, for Saturday. Court officials expect Judge Atwell to adjourn the court early Friday until 10 o'clock Manday when the trial of civil suits will begin. The judge is expected to leave for his home in Dallas before noon Friday. In that case the entire criminal docket, including both misdemeanor and felony charges, will have been disposed of within less than one week.

Travis Wilson, Ottie Bridges, a woman, and Mealing E. Pruett were indicted Thursday on charges of taking $58,000 from a Texas and Pacific mail car near Aledo, on Nov. 9.

Accused in Robbery

On the motion of Mrs. Sarah E. Meneses, assistant district attorney, the trial of their cases was transferred to Fort Worth. According to the indictments, Wilson is accused of overpowering Paul E. Carney, mail clerk, and seizing three packages of currency with the knowledge and assistance of Ottie Bridges and Mealing Pruett. The currency was being taken to the Federal Reserve bank in Dallas, the indictment reads. One packet of $46,000 was en route from the Farmers and Merchants bank of Abilene; another of $5,000 from the First National bank of Cisco; and the third of $2,000 from the First National bank of Seymour. The indictment charges the three with robbery of the United States mails with firearms, and includes six counts, the last charging them with conspiracy.

Efforts to obtain a continuance in the case against Mrs. Rickey Ketchum, indicted Thursday for the third offence in violation of the national prohibition act, were overruled and the case reset for Dec. 1, Thursday afternoon. After the jury had been sworn, Jack H. Lewis, charged with violation of the Harrison narcotic act, suddenly changed his plea to guilty in the afternoon session of the court. He will be sentenced with the others Friday morning.

Narcotic Cases

The defendants to hear judgment Friday include Aubrey Smith, Harrison narcotic act; James M. Carter, using the mails to defraud; Oscar Ward, theft from an interstate shipment; Eugene Beer, national prohibition act; Guy Norris, national prohibition act; James P. Stouard, Dyer act; William Buckner, Dyer act; Ray D. Ford, Harrison narcotic act, and Dewey Ross, Harrison narcotic act, and Jack H. Lewis, Harrison narcotic act.

RAID SUSPECTS FACE CHARGES

Pair Caught in Quanah Returned to Paducah

Special to The Record News

PADUCAH, Texas, Nov. 22.—Charges of burglary and felony theft were filed here today against two men suspected in the robbery of a local dry goods store here last Tuesday which culminated in a gun battle with officers and citizens when the alleged robbers made good their escape.

The men, according to County Attorney Clifford Graves, gave their names as Edgar Armstrong and Harry Ventress, the latter claiming residence in Pauls Valley, Okla.

Examining Trial Held

At an examining trial held after charges were filed, bonds for both men were set at $2,000 on each charge. Failing to make the bonds, they were placed in the county jail here to await the next session of the grand jury which meets in April.

Both were charged after their return here today from Quanah, where they were captured in a box car by Sheriff Lanier and his deputies. They had reached Quanah after abandoning an automible, which was confiscated by Paducah officers and citizens a short distance from here after a gun battle Tuesday morning. The battle followed discovery of two men in the looted store by a nightwatchman.

Bullet Torn Coats

Bullet riddled overcoats, pistols with extra magazines, 50 rounds of ammunition and $83.65 in change were among articles confiscated by Quanah officers who made the capture Thursday, it was reported. Neither of the men showed bodily wounds. Clothing, officers said, which bore the trademark of the looted store, was found.

Some of the money found, according to County Attorney Graves, was wrapped in Frisco letter heads. An inspector of the Frisco road, Mr. Graves added, arrived in Paducah today to aid in the investigation.

ELECTRA WIDOW HOTLY DENIES 'SUGAR' TALK

Aged Millionaire Hears Of Alleged Plans of His Housekeeper

OTHER 'DATES' TOLD

Boasts of Bountiful Beaux Charged By Witness In Balm Suit

PANHANDLE, Texas, Nov. 22.—One million dollars damages sought for alleged breach of promise by Mrs. Donie Van Dever of Electra, housekeeper for many years for J. A. Whittenberg, was denied here late tonight by the jury in district court.

The one question upon which the jury was instructed by the judge to base its verdict was whether a contract to marry existed between Mrs. Van Dever and Mr. Whittenberg.

The jury and defendant wept while Frank Willis of Canadian, one of the defense attorneys, delivered his final plea to the jurors.

Among those watching the trial were Mr. Whittenberg's children and 19 grand children.

PANHANDLE, Texas, Nov. 22. (AP)—A 71-year-old oil multi-millionaire, J. A. Whittenberg, being sued for $1,000,000 in a breach of promise suit, in a courtroom here today heard a witness testify that the woman suing him, Mrs. Donie Van Dever, had said she was going to "put sugar in his ear" and marry him or sue him for breach of promise.

Just before court was adjourned to allow the judge to prepare his jury charge, Mrs. Van Dever, recalled to the stand, said she hoped she would "drop dead" if she ever made that or any other statements defense witnesses had said she had made.

Pioneer Testifies

The old pioneer, who made his fortune which he testified amounts to $20,000,000, in oil on lands he claimed in 1898, previously had testified in his own behalf that his relations with Mrs. Van Dever had been those of employer and employe. In his 10 hours on the stand, he answered, "I don't remember" to 87 questions.

A Mrs. Lehrer of Electra was the witness who introduced the "sugar" angle. Mrs. Van Dever, she said, told her at the Electra rooming house where they both stayed that she was "dressing up for the old man, was going to spit sugar in his ear, get him to propose, sue him for breach of promise or marry him and sue him for alimony. I can do lots of things on what I can get out of the old man."

Other witnesses, including Mrs. Hazel Haynes of Stinnett, said that at the time Mrs. Van Dever claims she was engaged to Whittenberg she had numerous "dates" with other men.

"Beaux" Galore

Mrs. Rosa Bates of Stinnett testified that while she was in a hotel Mrs. Van Dever told her she had "six beaux and could get any of them," but her children, of which she had six, wanted her to marry an Electra butcher. She said she was going to wait until Bill Norman, Plemons, got a divorce and marry him, Mrs. Bates testified.

The suit originally was filed in Plemons, Hutchinson county seat, but was transferred to Panhandle more than a year ago. Mrs. Van Dever claims that Whittenberg deserted her late in 1926 after he had proposed to her and she had accepted the proposal in an Amarillo hotel.

In two previous trials, Davis was convicted, sentenced in the first to 17 years in prison and in the second to a 20-year term. Both cases were reversed.

Standard Oil Head Dies Victim Of Child Labor and Long Overwork

NEW YORK, Nov. 22. (US)—Victim of child labor and a life-long habit of over-work, George M. Jones, chairman of the board of directors of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, died today at the Harbor sanitarium. He was 56.

When he became one of the highest salaried executives in the realm of big business the habit of work had become so firmly fixed that he could not relax.

Until the age of 50 he had never played. Then it was only by the efforts of physicians and friends that he was dragged away from his desk to the golf links.

His boyhood experience of working in a chair factory from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. for 35 cents a day is now prohibited by law. It was not conducive to longevity.

He was born in a humble cottage at Carthage, N. Y., and the fact that his father had lost a leg in the civil war and was handicapped in his occupation of carpenter sent him early into the struggle to gain a few pennies. He knew nothing of baseball, swimming and boyhood sports.

Success made no change in his habits of living. He had a modest home in Pelham. He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Blanche K. Fry, and two daughters, Mrs. W. C. Berran and Mrs. H. A. Koechling.

'PEPY'S DIARY' OF CRIME HELD

Rothstein's, death in addition to George McManus, the "honest gambler." The two are Jack "Legs" Diamond, a gangster who rose to prominence and spats from small thuggeries on the east side, and another identified only as "Chick."

These leads, believed to have been drawn from Mrs. Ruth Keyes, the "blonde free lance" cloak model, who was brought back from Chicago to testify, were being followed by District Attorney Banton's men tonight. Police Commissioner Warren, his official head threatened by the bungling of the Rothstein investigation, seems to have somewhat thankfully stepped aside to allow Banton to run down the killer.

Banton's aides dug industriously into the files of the "criminal Pepys." The papers were being scrutinized in the offices of the Bank of America, on Broadway at Times Square, while the night life that Rothstein loved to pose in flowed noisily by on all sides.

Gang Mediator

One of the first revelations was that Rothstein was at the time of his death guaranty for almost $2,000,000 in bail bonds for crooks of every description, some of them dope runners.

Other papers revealed details of his actions as mediator between two rival New York gangs. A long and detailed notation in his own hand described a recent attempt to "take him for a ride," in which the gangsters picked up the wrong man and released him after a frightful experience in Central park.

Admitting that names, dates and places are embodied in others, the police refused to reveal their nature. A federal narcotic squad, however, was present to examine every notation bearing on Rothstein's connection with an international dope ring. Other detectives, familiar with the charges that Rothstein had received Russian gold to "fix" the police in a fur workers strike a year ago were busy thumbing the records of his labor activities.

Banton said that Rothstein's files disclosed his connection with a number of labor disputes, particularly those in which communists were involved. It was charged during the fur strike by Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, that Rothstein had "fixed" the police in this strike.

Diamond's mob and the gang that operated under the leadership of both the late "Kid Dropper" and the late "Little Augie" had been employed by both sides in labor troubles, and the indications pointed to Rothstein as the go-between.

Among the documents already inspected, it was said, are enough evidence to bring to trail many men whose cases are pending and who are out on bail at Rothstein's instance. It was reported that many persons, some of them politicians of importance, are involved in the records.

The police of six cities, including Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Denver were asked to search for Diamond today when the police suddenly concluded that he and "Chick" were with McManus in room 349 of the Park Central hotel when Rothstein was shot.

An immediate rebound came from Denver.

"Why don't the New York police ask Jack Diamond the questions they want to ask him. He's in New York," remarked R. F. Reed, chief of the Denver police.

Banton admitted that there may have been more men than Diamond, McManus and "Chick" in the murder room.

"It doesn't make any difference how many were in the room," said the district attorney, "they will all be charged with murder."

Poor Bodyguard

Diamond, who had acted as bodyguard for Rothstein, has a poor reputation, even in underworld circles, as a bodyguard. When the "Little Augie" gang was terrorizing the city, he was "Little Augie's bodyguard," but "Little Aucie" was shot down at his side and Diamond himself received five bullets that kept him in the hospital for weeks.

After "Little Augie's" murder, Diamond formed his own gang, selling "protection." He prospered to such an extent that he established a palatial suite of offices in the Paramount building. The police raided it a few months ago, arresting Diamond and 13 of his henchmen, all prosperous and nattily dressed. Despite circumstancial evidence that it was the uptown headquarters of a crime syndicate, they were unable to make their charges stick.

Weeping Jury Frees Father

spectators and some of the jurors already were weeping with her.

Two policemen told of being called to Falk's home by Falk himself and arresting him and the state rested. The defense introduced a few character witnesses and announced the intention of calling Falk but desisted when the defendant burst into sobs and rested its case in less than half an hour.

Prosecutor Byrne rose to his feet to begin the state's closing argument. Suddenly he burst into tears and announced that he could not continue. He reviewed five years' work as state prosecutor and said he had acted without fear or favor and had never been swayed by his emotions.

"But," he said as tears streamed down his cheeks, "If this man is sent to the electric chair or to the penitentiary, I refuse to be a party of it. When I had concluded my argument, I couldn't look into the faces of the defendant, his wife, daughter or mother."

By this time the entire courtroom was in tears and Judge Normoyle was whiping the tears from his own eyes. Some of the jurors let the tears roll down their cheeks unheeded, others openly were wiping them away.

The case went to the jury without further argument and within five minutes the jurors were back with the acquittal verdict. As it was read Falk slumped to the floor. Later in the judge's chambers Falk and his family were reunited but still were too overcome with emotion to talk. Shortly after he was acquitted he was released from the county jail and went home with his family, first thanking not only the jury but the prosecutors as well.

"The verdict," said Judge Normoyle, "was a very sensible one. It was the only one that could have been returned under the circumstances."

Hater Of Girl Children Slays Daughter In Rage

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 22. (US)—Brooding hatred of girl children came to a tragic climax this morning when Theodore Oakvid beat his 12-year-old daughter to death as she lay sleeping and ill from influenza on her cot.

Oakvid, after an unsuccessful attempt to slay his wife and a 13-year-old son with a knife, then slashed his wrists and throat with a butcher knife. He will recover.

Mrs. Oakvid told police the motive for the murder. Her husband is in a hospital prison ward charged with murder.

Stores Close

Members of the Retail Furniture association of Wichita Falls passed resolutions of condolence and voted to close their stores between 3 and 5 o'clock Friday afternoon for Mr. Bradley's funeral at a special meeting held Thursday afternoon.

The regular business meeting Friday of the business council of which Mr. Bradley was an active member, was called off Thursday afternoon as a mark of respect for Mr. Bradley.

Mr. Bradley had been the sole owner of the North Texas Furniture company here since 1910 and was one of the most enthusiastic civic workers in the community. He was one of the most active promoters in building the First Christian and Highland Heights Christrian churches, and an active member in Masonry.

Mr. Bradley is survived by his wife, one son, Dr. J. W. Bradley, of Rochester, Minn., one daughter, Miss Harriett Bradley, attending school in San Antonio; one brother W. J. Bradley of Butte, Mont., and a sister, Mrs. N. R. Lyon of Rochester, Minn.

ROTARY CLUB SPEAKERS HONOR BRADLEY'S MEMORY

A memorial to John T. Bradley, prominent local citizen who died early Wednesday morning, was held at the regular weekly meeting of the Rotary club Thursday noon. Brief talks were made by Rev. N. F. Grafton, J. C. Mytinger, W. S. Curlee, L. C. Robertson, J. M. McFall, C. W. Beavers, Dr. J. W. Cantwell, W. L. Herblin, Al Ellis, W. P. Killingsworth, R. E. Shepherd and Julian Montgomery. The club adopted the following resolutions:

"John W. Bradley passed away suddenly, at Plainview, Texas, on Nov. 21, 1928, at the age of 53 years. Leaving his home apparently in perfect health and robust manhood, his sudden death shocked the entire community. It is yet so recent that we are unable to bring ourselves to a complete realization of his passing. The sudden painful shock has given way to deep sorrow and mourning, for we all loved John Bradley.

Work Recalled

"John Bradley will long be remembered in this community as a business man, church man, public spirited citizen, Rotarian, and above all of these, the highest type of manly man.

"As a business man, he was intelligent, aggressive, honest, fair, progressive, and with all of these attributes, of course, successful.

"As a church man, he had an abiding faith, hope and charity, and coupled with a devotion to that faith and a practical exemplification of his private life of these great attributes, he was the ideal layman in the church of his faith.

"As a public spirited citizen, he saw service as a public official of his city; he identified himself with every civic and commercial organization of the city, and with every forward-looking progressive movement inaugurated in the city during the 20 years of his residence.

"As a Rotarian he has exemplified all of the high ideals and practices of the organization, and has ever shown his willingness to extend his every effort in fostering and promulgating its great principles.

Pays Tribute

"Conspicuous as he was in business, church, public service and Rotary, and without dimming the lustre he shed upon them, far surpassing all of these, were his high qualities as a simple manly man; devoted to his family (as all good men are), he exhibited in his home a love and a tenderness for his family of the highest type. Big in body, in mind, and in heart, full of love, wholesome, cheerful; good humored, courteous, always bubbling over with a fine spirit of optimism; friendly, kind, happy, he was of that rare type equally willing to give of the bounties with which nature had endowed him as he was to receive from similar sources. He loved life and his fellowmen. We would not wish to overdraw his virtues; we would only wish to remember him—to enshrine him in our hearts—as he was.

"Be It Resolved, by the Wichita Falls Rotary club, on this solemn occasion, that we pay high tribute to the high character, worth and wholesome attributes so fully and so charmingly exemplified in the wonderful life of John W. Bradley; that we express our earnest appreciation of his rugged personality, his devoted service, his genuine worth, his manly attributes, his honesty, fidelity, and faith; and to express, as far as human words may express, our deep and abiding sorrow and the loss we feel at his untimely passing, and to express to his wife, his daughter, his son, and his other loved ones our deepest sympathy and condolence in their great bereavement."

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR CALLED AT 3 O'CLOCK

All Knights Templar are requested to gather at the Masonic temple in full uniform at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon for formation as an honorary escort to the funeral of John W. Bradley, to be held at 3:30 o'clock at the First Christian church.

Companionate Idea Discussed

follow the example of the celebrated Girard, Kan., couple.

The Spectator was firm in the belief that marriage of any sort was the only rational solution for one of the major problems which face persons of collegiate age. Realizing, it said, that conventional unions are financially impossible among the majority of college students, it unhesitatingly advocated the Lindsey idea, whereby the young husband assumes no responsibility for supporting his wife, or vice-versa.

Furore at College

The editorial created a mild furore not only among Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's professorial corps, but on the campus and in Greek letter houses as well. The whole battery of arguments used against the companionates a year ago were dusted off to defend America's largest university against a new invasion of Lindseyites, and a former protest was lodged against the editors of the Spectator.

But Managing Editor Harold S. Neuberger was unmoved.

"We congratulate ourselves on starting something," he said.

The piece that caused the big howl was entitled "to wed or——" and went into some detail picturing the life of the average undergraduate. Pained by the present "promiscuity" in collegiate circles, it urged students to marry on any basis—even to deserting the marble bathroom in the paternal mansion for a sink in the Bronx, if Papa refused to pay the newlyweds' rent and grocery bills.

The ultimate result, the Spectator contended, would be to end the sway of the jazz age.

The editors even dragged in Cornell university as a witness, quoting a piece entitled "Student Marriage" from the Cornell Columns, a literary magazine. In a quite serious vein, the Spectator charged the Columbia students with "playing with love" and lectured them on its futility.

Editor's Argument

"Abstinence is an impossible dream," the editorial said. "Promiscuity undesirable. The onlysolution of the problem lies in early marriage, at first childless and supported by the parents of the young people. . . ."

While the controversy thus started all over again at Columbia, the Aubrey Roselles, in an interview out at Girard, Kan., told why they were companionately married and happy.

All the moral alarmists who forecast disaster for the romance of this 18-year-old high school girl and the 20-year-old University of Kansas sophomore would appear to have falled in their predictions.

"We have been married companionately a full year now, and we are glad to be able to say that it has been a success in every sense of the word," Josephine said.

MEANS DESTRUCTION OF NATION, HE SAYS

CHICAGO, Nov. 22. (US)—Companionate marriage was flayed today by Prof. Arthur J. Todd, of Northwestern university, in an address before the Chicago Woman's Aid, as "making marriage a farce and glorifies weakness rather than strength, tending to develop a nation of weaklings and morons which will eventually bring destruction."

Professor Todd, who is head of the sociology department, told his audience that surveys show one divorce for every seven marriages in this country, while the suicide rate among divorced persons is four times that of those happily married.

"America faces a serious social disorder," Professor Todd said, "and it is becoming rapidly worse as shown by the increasing number of divorces as compared with marriages.

"We need less hysterical sentimentalism and more scientific analysis and application of sociological remedies. Records show there is a mental instability and a mental and social maladjustment.

"Companionate marriage is typical of the change in attitude toward family life. Supporters of companionate marriage are doing nothing more or less than attempting to destroy family integrity and lower the position of woman to that of slavery.

"Companionate marriage is not genuine marriage. It emphasizes the purely physical element in marriage to the exclusion of any other factor. It depends on purely mechanical means for holding its members. It makes a farce of marriage.

"Woman pays the bill in companionate marriage. She can not escape. Man may tire of her and he is gone. She has given her all and there is no recompense. It suggests flight as the solution of all problems—it glorifies weakness rather than strength; indulgence rather than self-control; social anarchy rather than law. It will breed a nation of weaklings and morons and will finally bring destruction."

AIR SERVICE STARTS DEC. 1

Wichita Company Plans Dallas Route

Passenger and express service by airplane between Wichita Falls and Dallas will be inaugurated Dec. 1 by the Wichita Falls Air Transport company, according to announcement Thursday by Fulcher Armstrong, president of the corporation.

Ships on this new commercial line will carry mail as soon as a contract with the government has been closed.

Definite schedule of trips has not yet been completed, but a round trip each day is planned, with the ship taking off from Wichita Falls in the morning, requiring about an hour and a half for the hop to Dallas, including landing time, and returning late in the afternoon. This stopover of several hours is designed to provide passengers ample time for transaction of business in Dallas. Love Field has been chosen as the southern terminal of the new air line.

The new four-passenger cabin monoplane with which this service will be instituted was brought from Detroit this week by Mr. Armstrong, accompanied by Dudley Rider, pilot; J. E. Hall, one of the incorporators of the consern, and Earl Stilley, local geologist. The ship is 26 feet in length with a wing-spread of 41 feet, equipped with 120-horsepower Warner motor. The cabin is attractively upholstered, with dual controls placed just ahead of the two front seats.

Coolidge Would Favor Modified Shoals Bill

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (US)—If modified to avoid construction of a dam in Cove creek on the upper Tennessee river, the Madden bill for operation of Muscle Shoals would meet with approval of President Coolidge, it was revealed at the White House today.

The president had a long conference with a delegation of Alabama members of the house to whom he made it plain that if the bill came to him with the Cove creek dam provision, it would be vetoed.

The Madden measure provides for the leasing of the government-built nitrate and power plant to the American Cynanamide company, a plan with which the president is understood to be in accord.

In England one-seventh of the divorces take place after five years of marriage.

Federal Pens Hold 2,000 Dope Violators

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (US)—Widespread smuggling and peddling of drugs in the United States was reflected today in department of justice statistics disclosing that 2,117 violators of the anti-narcotic law are in federal prisons.

These violators make up between 20 and 25 per cent of the entire federal prison population, on the basis of figures compiled at the beginning of this fiscal year.

How Weak Nervous Women Grow Stronger

Feel Better, Look Younger and Have Steadier Nerves

If you only knew—you rundown, anemic women — who are dragging yourself around on your "nerve"—what a wonderful increase in strength and health Tanlac will give you, you wouldn't hesitate a moment about going to your druggist and getting a big bottle of this splendid medicine.

Mrs. A. M. Owens, of 1716 Taylor St., Rt. 5, Box 34, Little Rock, Ark., says "I was so weak I couldn't walk across the floor. I had spent a fortune trying to get well and would be in my grave if it weren't for Tanlac. Now I eat and sleep fine and have gained 22 lbs."

Tanlac is as free from harmful drugs as the water you drink—only Nature's own medicinal tonic herbs. Druggists know this and for the past 10 years have recommended it to men and women who need a quick "pick up" that will put them on their feet and give them a new interest in life.

So confident are the makers of Tanlac that if you are not helped by it, you get your money back on request.

The "Christopher Columbus" is the flagship of a fleet of transport planes, operated by the Pan American Airways, Inc., to be used to inaugurate an international air transport system linking North America, Central America and South America.

Mrs. Coolidge christened the plane from a stand, in an enclosure marked by the flags of Central and South America.

Indian Intervention in Land Suit Is Denied

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Nov. 22. (UP)—Action of the Seminole nation to recover rich Seminole oil land through intervention in the Maria Cully-S. D. Mitchell case was denied by Federal Judge Robert L. Williams.

Judge Williams, however, directed the district attorney to enter a separate case on behalf of the tribe which claims assignment of oil rights by Seminole Indians are invalid because it is the tribal land and not the property of the individuals.

Fliers Escape Death In Crash Near Mart, Texas

DALLAS, Nov. 22. (AP)—Three New York fliers, who rode into Dallas on a truck, were suffering only from minor bruises after their airplane, they said, had crashed in a fall from 1500 feet near Mart, Texas, earlier in the day.

The men, Juan de Creasy, Timothy Pat O'Reilly and Huard Jones, said they were from Mitchell field, New York, and "just flying."

Their plane went into a tail spin at 1500 feet and dropped like a plummet, they said, but righted just before it crashed. They jumped before it burst into flames. The plane was destroyed, and a passing truck picked them up, they said.

Self Defense Claimed In Slaying of Oil Man

ERIE Kan., Nov. 22. (UP)—That he killed C. P. Baxter, wealthy oil operator, in self defense was the testimony induced into the trial today of Roy Wilhite, slayer of the oil man. Baxter was slain in Chanute, Kan., following an affair that Baxter is said to have had with Wilhite's wife. The defense fought today to show that the slain man had affairs with several women.

CHIC CHERIE — Latest Fashions

Cherie's wine colored satin dress has a roll collar that ends in a one-sided double-ended quirk. Cherie's hat is a smooth black felt with no brim at all. Cherie's thoughts are long, long thoughts about budgets and how to make one dollar do the work of many more than that. Also she's wondering if you'll help.

Cherie says it isn't how much money one has, but how one spends it—you know, matching the accessories, making one hat go with three dresses and all that sort of thing. Emily asked her what she could do with $200 for a winter wardrobe and Cherie is thinking deeply. (This coat has a cape collar of fur, please note.)

Two hundred dollars for a winter wardrobe! Cherie needs a budget. Really, she needs three budgets because she doesn't know whether she'll go to college, or go to work, or just stay at home. She offers a $50 prize for the best budget in each class. Cut the styles from the newspaper's fashion ads, paste them in a scrapbook and send your picture budget to Cherie in care of this paper by Dec. 1. She'll send the prizes out for Christmas presents! (Now, notice the glove which is a gauntlet of black and white leather, the bag which is made of green calf and the crepe de chine slippers, white, embroidered in colors, for dancing.)

The program included two readings by Nathan Lynch Jr., "Visitors" and "You're Too Young to Know;" two piano and violin solos, "Lilac Time" and "Russian Lullaby," Miss Anna Womack and Mrs. L. T. Cheering Crowd and Brass Band Meet Nasal Peanut Pushing Champ

HARLINGEN, Texas, Nov. 22. (INS)—Bill Williams of Rio Hondo, won "by a nose" today.

The world's champion nasal peanut pusher crossed the finish line of his 10-mile journey from Rio Hondo to Harlingen at noon today. He started his journey on Wednesday of last week. Slow progress was due to the fact that he had to push a peanut all the way from Rio Hondo to Harlingen, using his proboscis as a "pusher."

Williams' marvelous demonstration of nasal efficiency came as the result of his loss of an election bet. He took Gov. Al Smith and lost.

Fifteen hundred persons and a band gave Williams a tremendous ovation when he nosed the peanut across the finish line. He was carried on willing shoulders to a speakers' platform where mayors of nearby cities, county judges and others lauded him as being on a par with Columbus, Washington, Wilson and King Solomon.

O' These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Nov. 22. (US)—A woman who married rather late in life told all her women friends who had mischievous little brats for children that IF she had children she would bring them up by rule. She would do this and she wouldn't do that, and oh what little angels they would be. It made the mothers feel delinquent in the extreme, and they listened enviously.

The other day two of them called at the home of the lady, whose child is now four.

In the midst of their visit, the angel came in with a bag of salt into which she had poked a tiny hole. The salt was pouring through in a tiny white stream. She waved the bag in a circle over her head, and when her mother tried the gentle orders they failed utterly. The angel child then waved the leaking salt bag over the piano so that the salt fell between the keys, and she howled with delight over her idea.

The visitors went home pretty well satisfied with themselves.

A pretty girl on Fifth avenue in New York, leading a great black Parsian cat on a leash. The cat would stand on its hind legs, put its paws against the windows and look earnestly at the things on display.

A cat enjoying window shopping! And the animal was a riot. Crowds gathered around her at every stop, and went away laughing.

The cat and her mistress didn't miss any pretty windows, and not once when her mistress stopped did the cat fail to go through the same trick of standing up and looking in.

Bizarre but beautiful, a St. Louis girl appeared in a New York cafe the other night wearing seven heavy silver bracelets, and a short antique silver necklace with round silver balls hanging from it by the dozens. About her head was wrapped a dull silver turban, and her gown was grey. Her hair black, her eyes black and her cheeks a pretty pink, no other woman in the cafe could command attention until everybody got used to the St. Louis picture.

In San Francisco recently a girl who had evidently been rummaging through Chinatown, appeared in a bushel basket full of Chinese jewelry. Her cocktail jacket, the latest thing this season, and her satin gown was trimmed with Chinese embroidery and had buckles made of Chinese coins.

Madame Sarojini Naidu, Ghandi's successor in India, says that American women remind her of beautiful birds flying about. Neither of the above mentioned girls could possibly have flown with their weight of silver and jade. They sat still and the men hovered.

In New York women are wearing everything heavy and old and strange except nose rings. Savage jewelry is the last word in chic.

With their clothes getting fewer and shorter and thinner, and their jewelry getting heavier and more profuse, one wonders when they will get right back where civilization started.

In China men are being done away with as telephone operators because they were careless, impudent and refused to answer many calls.

In America any change would be an improvement. Maybe the men should handle our exchanges for a while.

Judge William N. Gemmill of Chicago suggested a long time ago that the ducking stool be brought back for nagging wives.

Recently a young girl in Jamaica ran away from home because she could not bear to hear her mother and father quarreling.

"Tired Business Man" Myth Best Ever Evolved in Human Mind—Dix

The Only Way in Which Men Show Themselves Superior to Women Is in Putting Over the Farce of the "Tired Business Man"—Who Is Too Worn Out to Do Anything He Doesn't Want to Do.

There is nothing that fills me with such admiration of the ingenuity and resourcefulness and far-sightedness of the American man as the fact that he has not only evolved but has actually put across the myth of the Tired Business Man, which is the best all-around alibi that human ingenuity has ever devised. It is a blanket excuse that covers every sin of omission and commission and leaves him free to do what he wants to do and leave undone those things which he does not want to do.

For instance, the Tired Business Man is too exhausted to walk the baby with the colic at night or to take care of the children on Sunday afternoon, but he is not too tired to play 18 holes of golf. The Tired Business Man is too fatigued to take his wife out to the movies of an evening, but not too fatigued to step out to a night club with a flapper. The Tired Business Man is too worn out to play cards when the neighbors drop in of an evening but when it comes to sitting up in an all-night poker game—oh, boy!

The Tired Business Man's exhausted brain does not permit him to read good books, but he can tell you the batting average of every baseball player for the last 10 years, and he reads tons of dope about Tunney and Dempsey, and knows the past record and future prospects of every promising horse on the tracks. The Tired Business Man is too weary to sit through a serious play, but he is miraculously refreshed by the Follies and the chorines who wear a set smile and a handful of beads.

To my mind the indisputable proof that men really are cleverer than women and have better brains is shown in the way they have got away with the theory that man's work is harder than woman's and that it is more fatiguing to sit at a mahogany-topped desk than it is to wrestle with a cook stove and sewing machine and vacuum cleaner.

That it takes more out of you to dictate a few letters and go into conference than it does to wash the faces, wipe the noses and settle the quarrels of a houseful of children who are up to some new development every hour of the day.

So I wish the Tired Business Man wasn't too tried to study his wife's psychology and find out how to work her, for women are simple and submissive.

That women have let men beat them to this tired stuff shows a lamentable weakness in the feminine intellect. We might just as well have the Tired Housewife who has to be coddled and catered to as the Tired Business Man.

There are times when I wish that the Tired Business Man didn't give all of his energy to his business and that he would save a little more of it to use in his home life. For I am very sure that if men would give one hundredth part of the effort they make to succeed in business to succeeding in marriage we would not lead the world in the number of divorces.

I believe that if men made one thousandth part of the effort they do to "sell" themselves to their employers or to their customers and clients to selling themselves to their wives we would have no more disgruntled, dissatisfied, discouraged wives hunting for affinities or slumping in their housekeeping, because they say to themselves: "What's the use of working yourself to death for a man who never notices what you do, anyway?" creatures who will purr under any man's hand if he will only take the trouble to stroke their fur the right way.

I wish men weren't too tried when they come home at night to hand their wives a few compliments, and, believe me, they wouldn't have to give friend wife so much money if they would give them a little more jollying.

And I wish that the Tired Business Man wasn't too tried to be an agreeable fireside companion and treat his wife to a little of the sparkling conversation and a few of the good stories for which he is noted abroad, for no woman's idea of a pleasant evening at home is sitting up in a silence so thick that you could cut it with a knife with a man who only grunts when he is spoken to.

I wish the Tired Business Man wasn't too tried to get acquainted with his children and to chum with them when they were little, for if a father misses the opportunity of getting on friendly terms with his boys and girls while they are still in rompers it is forever too late.

And it woud pay him to do so, for the best investment that any man ever makes is what he puts into his children, and the greatest fortune that he can ever give them is when he gives them himself. The one speculation that always pays a hundred per cent on the dollar is when you gamble on your children's futures.

I wish the Tired Business Man wasn't so tired that he passed the buck up to his wife and let Maris do it when it comes to rearing the children. Not one woman in a million has the strength of character to control self-willed youngsters. The very tenderness of her mother love makes her incapable of dealing firmly with them.

Nor has she the knowledge of life needed to guide them. It's the men who have been down the road, who know from experience where the pitfalls are and the hairpin turns where the youngsters are likely to skid, and are equipped to erect the red lanterns at the dangerous places and save the blundering youngsters from going over the brink.

So I wish that the Tired Business Man would wear himself out a little bit more around the house and a little bit less in the office. If he did, he wouldn't get so tired of paying alimony and there wouldn't be so many tired wives wishing their husbands weren't too tried to be the kind of lovers they used to be before they were married, and there would be fewer flapper daughters and cake-eater sons hurtling on to destruction. DOROTHY DIX.

HOOVER TO SEE ANDES TOWER

'Christ of Andes' Objective Of Good Will Tourist

ABOARD THE U. S. S. MARYland, at Sea, Nov. 22. (UP)—President-elect Herbert Hoover's plan to visit "Christ of the Andes," towering 11,000 feet on the summit of the Andean Cordillera on the Argentine-Chilean border, may prove the transcendental event of his entire tour of the Latin Americas.

This monument is recognized universally as a symbol of international peace.

The monument was erected by popular subscription in Argentina and Chile and the movement for its erection was instituted by women's organizations to commemorate the amicable settlement of Chilean-Argentine boundary disputes.

It is a 40-foot bronze statue of the Christ which stands out clearly on its pedestal, sometimes wreathed in clouds and mist.

The statue is situated a considerable distance above the trans-Andean railway line which tunnels under the mountain, and the fact that Hoover intends to leave the train to see the moqument will be universally interpreted as a gesture of sympathy with the international peace movement.

A decade ago, William Jennings Bryan declared the establishment of the "Christ of the Andes" marked an epochal step in the evolution of the peace movement and since the world war the monument has been extensively publicized and shown in photographs in the United States to intensify the spirit of international good will.

Mrs. Merrick was greeted outside the prison walls by her two daughters, the countess of Kinnoull and Baroness de Clifford, her two sons and her son-in-law, Lord Kinnoull.

M'ALISTER AT HIS WATERLOO

Veteran Oklahoma Political Boss Opposed

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 22. (UP)—The elimination of W. C. McAlister as secretary of the state senate and ex officio secretary of the state election board was considered probable by political prognosticators today.

Such an elimination had been considered likely for several years, but at no time was the apparent opposition to the state's "strong man" as rabid and solidified as at present. Apparently the edict has gone out that "McAlister must go." Whether he will or not remains to be seen.

Democratic Senate

The situation, somewhat, is this: There are 57 Democrats and 47 Republicans in the house, leaving the Democrats with two above a majority. The senate is Democratic. Favors between members of the house and senate will be traded back and forth. It will be a matter of give and take, and there are a lot that want to take McAlister, among others, out of office.

The Republicans in the house will hold the balance of power, as the Democrats are divided according to pro and anti-administrationists. Another vote against McAlister.

McAlister long has been classed as the most powerful figure in Oklahoma politics. It has been said that he has elected members to the legislature and figured in appointments to political plums more than any other person.

He has been accused of naming speakers of the house and through them naming members to major committees.

Always Winner

He has been fought in every legislature, but heretofore he has had state senate behind him. Those who opposed him were more than sorry they did, being relegated to the scrap heap supposedly through McAlister's influence. The situation is different this time. There have been too many toes stepped on, there are too many Republicans in the house that might influence some senate votes, and there are too many Democrats who simply do not want McAlister to remain as secretary of the state election board.

For the coming session of the legislature a bi-partisan house organization has been suggested. The 47 Republicans with the anti-administration forces and organization.

Current gossip around the capitol and in hotel lobbies now has it that James C. Nance of Walters will be the coalition or compromise speaker of the house, and that C. S. Storms of Waurika will make a strong bid for president pro tempore of the senate.

Chicago's Christmas for Poor Goes by Board

CHICAGO, Nov. 22. (AP)—Anton J. Cermak, president of the Cook county board of commissioners, said today Chicago's needy will not share their annual Christmas plum this year, because politics has plunged its finger into the purse for the poor.

What was once the city's leading Yuletide charity, the all-city Christmas fund, has been abandoned, said Mr. Cermak, who was recently defeated for United States senator on the Democratic ticket.

"The noble practice has been made a political football," he declared.

A recent census shows more than 693,000 motorcycles in Great Britain.

TOO CURIOUS

The dozen bottles of gin were revealed and promptly confiscated by federal authorities.

Court Hears Testimony In $30,000 Oil Suit

Testimony designed to show that vacuum pumps were installed by the Consolidated Oil company to lessen the production of wells operated by the Hardy Oil company on a 120-acre lease in Young county was introduced Thursday afternoon in the opening of the $30,000 damage suit being tried before Judge W. W. Cook in the 78th district court.

D. M. Hardy, who in 1926 was operating as the Hardy Oil company, claims a $30,000 loss from the action of the pumps, said in his allegations to have been concealed on the lease operated at the same time by the Consolidated company.

Hearing of testimony occupied all of Thursday afternoon. The case was expected to go to the jury Friday morning.

MAN SHIELDS DEAD CAPTAIN

Former Vestris Commander Represses Criticism

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—"I don't want to criticize a dead man."

This was the reply of Capt. William A. Mambra, former commander of the liner Vestris, which sank with a loss of 110 lives, when he was asked on the witness stand today in the federal inquiry into the disaster what he would have done had he been in the place of Capt. William J. Carey, the commander who went down with the ship. When would he have started to launch the lifeboats, U. S. Attorney Charles H. Tuttle wanted to know.

"I would rather not answer that. I don't want to criticize a dead man, Bambra answered.

Q.—(By Tuttle) When would you feel there was danger?

A.—When the vessel took a list of 30 degrees.

Q.—If you were master of a ship that was increasing its list and you couldn't find the cause what would you do?

(This question came from Captain E. P. Jessup, nautical adviser representing the American government.)

A.—That depends upon the circumstances. I certainly think it would be time to do something."

Captain Bambra testified he had not noticed any leaks on the Vestris on its previous voyage to South America, when he was in command. The ship was entirely seaworthy. He said the Vestris had sufficient life boats to carry one and that the British system of inspection was rigid.

Members of the "black gang"—stokers and firemen—told how they were chained together in the water-logged stokehold while feeding coal into the boilers of the Vestris. They told these stories at this inquiry and also at the one held in the customs house.

'Radio Ghost' Drives Tenants From Farm House With Eerie Voices

By SAM LOVE
United Press Staff Correspondent

BELLMORE, L. I., Nov. 22.—A "radio ghost," that haunts an untenanted and ancient farm house here, causing voices and music to come apparently from the walls themselves, has literally set this peaceful village by the ears and caused the owner to announce a conviction that she never will be able to rent the property again.

The strange phenomenon has occurred daily and nightly for months, but was kept a secret by Mrs. Lou Greenamyer, owner of the property, who hoped that the manifestations would stop.

An investigation of village rumors today revealed that the whisperings in Bellmore not only were true but that they understated the case. The Greenamyer house not only reproduced the programs from WEAF's control station, half a mile distant, but when not fading reproduced them more clearly than an ordinary radio set and absolutely without static.

From the Cellar, Too

Most of the radio voices and music seemed to come from the south wall of the living room. Then for no apparent reason they would come from the cellar.

It was admitted at the WEAF control station that experts had been sent over recently when Mrs. Greenamyer complained about the voices and that their best technicians had been utterly at a loss to solve the mystery or even to explain it after going over the old farm house from top to bottom.

Mrs. Greenamyer drove over from her home in Freeport and unlocked the house for the United Press correspondent and Charles Ellsworth, chief operator of the United Press radio station, today.

She explained that she had been unable to rent it since the last tenants, a Mr. and Mrs. Duval and their son, moved out suddenly—without mentioning anything strange, however, last February.

"Haints" Denied

Meantime grass had grown knee-deep in the yard and a tangle of bushes and dried weeds aided a cluster of fir, oak and apple trees in screening the two-story frame home from Bellmore boulevard to the east. To the south of the house is a trick woods of oak.

Mrs. Greenamyer, a matter-of-fact young matron, denied indignantly that she took any stock in village talk that the place was "haunted."

"But it is enough to give you a start," she said, "I remember last spring the first time I heard it I thought somebody near here had an extra loud speaker radio, although nobody lives within a quarter of a mile.

"I was dusting the furniture, getting ready to spend part of the summer here with my two boys. Then I found out that you couldn't hear the music in the yard—only in the house.

"I never thought much about it—that it was some sort of accident.

"But last August our house in Freeport was crowded with guests and a friend, Miss June Bell, and I came over to spend the night. We heard the music again. It seemed to be coming from everywhere, this time. I said:

"June, you go to the back door and I'll go to the front and see where it's loudest."

Inaudible Outdoors

But when we got outdoors we couldn't hear it. Finally it got loudest in the cellar. Believe me, we got scared. When it never stopped we got petrified. About 1 o'clock in the morning it stopped and we went to bed upstairs—both of us in a single bed.

"That's the last time I have slept here."

When the house was entered today it was disappointingly silent. The investigators went into the shallow cellar and crouched there. More silence.

Preparing to leave, despite Mrs. Greenamyer's protests that she had heard the noises with WEAF experts only a few days before, the party gathered around an oak table in the living room.

Then, at first faintly, swelling later in volume until every word was clear, a lecture voice was heard coming from the south wall of the room. The voice had an uncanny quality, unlike radio as received on either a tube or crystal set, but more like the tone of the earliest crude phonographs.

The voices stopped in a moment. It was 3:45 p. m. An announcer's voice was heard: "This is station WEAF. Our program continues with"—it faded—"Our first number is by—" and then a piano tinkled in the wall and a soprano voice began a song that grew stronger and then faded into nothingness.

Search Proves Futile

A hasty visit to the cellar revealed that whereas a moment before nothing could be heard in the cellar, but only in the living room, now the soprano was singing below stairs only.

A search through the house while the music was still audible revealed nothing to explain it, supplying current for the lights. An electrician went to the master switch in the cellar, cutting off the supply, without affecting the reception, which as night fell became clearer. There was no aerial on the house. The remains of an old radio ground wire were found in the cellar. This was uprooted without affecting the phenomenon.

The walls were tapped but seemed as solid as when Henry Golder, a Bellmore resident, who still lives, had them put together with old-fashioned "No. 9 out" nails 50 years ago.

As a final test, Mrs. Greenamyer, who seemed to have no room for a radio to be concealed on her slender person, was sent out into the yard. The result of this seemed to be that the WEAF program came in stronger than ever in the house.

Various groupings of persons in the house seemed to affect the reception somewhat, but when all left the living room the entire wall was sending out a musical program.

WEAF's transmitting station is in view through the trees in the yard across field land, half a mile distant. Another abandoned house and a partially burned barn are in between.

Questioned after the correspondent had visited the "radio-ghost" house, operators at WEAF's transmitting station admitted that an investigation had been made but that no evidence of a hoax could be discovered by their experts.

RADIO MEN RECALL SIMILAR "GHOST"

NEW YORK, Nov. 22. (UP)—The Bellmore "radio ghost" recalled to veteran wireless men here tonight a slightly similar case that a dozen years ago nearly frightened a farmer's family to death in an isolated house near New Zealand, Prince Edward Island, Canada.

Mysterious tappings, which eventually proved to be code from the first transatlantic radio station at Grace Bay, Cape Breton, 135 miles from the farm house, continued to afflict the family for several months of 1913 and 1914.

Scientists from Boston investigated without solving the mystery and the family abandoned the house.

BUM SCALES

Weight Figures Failed To Please This Matron

She was under middle age, a bit inclined to stoutness, tastefully attired, of dignified bearing, and evidently a woman of culture. After a quick glance assured absence of passersby, she stepped on a penny scales on Seventh street and hastily dropped in a coin. Apprehension flashed over her face as the pointer flopped quickly over a sizeable arc.

"Damn 'em!" uttered with disgust, accompanid a short sharp kick against the upright section of the offending scales.

Frisco Bohemian Club Cold Towards Will Rogers' Membership Application

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 22. (INS)—Let your voice drop, articulate softly, or perhaps it shouldn't be mentioned at all, but the fact remains that Will Rogers, the rambling ambassador, has been withdrawn for nomination as an associate member of San Francisco's Bohemian club.

How come, and likewise, what ho?

To the casual observer, the gum-chewing, rope-twirling, wise-cracking ex-mayor of Beverly Hills would seem a notable addition to the ranks of the jolly Bohemians.

But, it is reported, the board of governors of the club upon receipt of the Rogers' application, knotted its collective brow and hearkened back to that night not so long ago when the former Oklahoma cowboy was a guest at the club's high jinks.

There was much talent present on this evening, it seems, and it was such quality that Rogers was alloted five minutes in which to do his stuff from the Sylvan stage.

But, or so it is alleged, the cowboy humorist was in such fine fettle that the five minutes was nothing. He continued to crack while other waiting artists broke. There was a great grinding of teeth, but Will, when he "chews" to run, it is held, does it very well indeed.

Subsequently, in some quarters, the atmosphere became quite chilled when it is alleged Will told of the high jinks in his syndicated article. For Will is reported as saying that it required a couple of weeks for the participants in the high jinks to get back to normal, after one of those annual sessions at Bohemian Grove.

So the reports have it that Rogers' sponsor has withdrawn his application, and there seems to be much ado, although on the surface even the ripples are well in hand.

DRUGS EXCITE THE KIDNEYS, DRINK WATER

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

Better Than Whiskey For Colds and Flu

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspironal, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories: tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as 10 times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so all you have to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk 60c for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonfuls. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children, for Aspironal is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold and cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night.—Adv.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Thirty-fourth street, East, seeks its place in the sun—literally. It is demanding of Father Knickerbocker, and through some pretty consequential people, that the elevated railroad spur running from Third avenue to the Long Island ferry be torn down to let in the sunlight, the sunlight of prosperity as well as the cheerful physical rays of the sun. It feels that Father K. is keeping it poor and obscure by maintaining in its honorable and historic length the outworn and out of date elevated structure.

So that Thirty-fourth street, East, is raising its voice in no gentle tones to remind the old gentleman that it is one of his most storied and worthwhile thoroughfares, and to predict that if it is given its opportunity it will make Forty-second street and even Fifth avenue go some in the future. It argues that the dingy, darkening "L" spur absolutely chokes building enterprises and therefore is taking money right out of Father Knick's pocket in the way of bigger tax income from realty and improvements.

The history of Thirty-fourth street, East, goes back some three centuries, lacking just seven years, for it was in 1635 that Hendrick Kype came over from Holland and took up a farm of 150 acres between Twenty-sixth and Forty-second streets. His son Jacobus Kip (they changed the spelling of that old New York name away back there) built himself a great mansion for the times and settled down with his bride, Miss Montague, daughter of Gov. Peter Stuyvesant's chief adviser, in an estate which included the future East Thirty-fourth street. Kip imported bricks for his great house from Holland and sculptured the Kip arms in the stone over the doorway.

What a quaint bit of pastoral life it must have been in old Jacobus Kip's day. Sunfish creek rambled through the grounds of his estate, and along the Thirty-fourth street of today the old Dutch burghers sat along the banks of pleasant Sunfish creek under the oaks and elms and fished placidly for eels, sunfish and flounders. As late, indeed, as 1845 East Thirty-fourth street was simple country, and what there was of uptown New York was a scattered collection of little villages—Bloomingdale with its 400 people perched on the present Morningside Heights where Columbia university is now; Manhattanville, with 500 inhabitants, a mile further north; Yorkville in the district of East Eighty-sixth street, and beyond the thriving town of Harlem—all hard to visualize now in this solid, unbroken march of streets and avenues.

Police whistles blew, truckmen cursed by mouth and horn, taxicabs barked their vicious clear-the-way notes, private automobiles added their din with toot and wail, pedestrains halted and giggled. A fine traffic jam was in the making if not already made in Chambers street, just east of Broadway.

The cause was a New Jersey car, which, turning out from the curb, had hooked its forward bumper over the rear bumper of a New York machine.

The two drivers started their engines, pulled forward, pushed back, turned their engines off, thought and tried it again with no more result.

From the curb stepped a man in a green hat. He seized the fore part of the Jersey car with one hand and gave an upward tug. A three-inch lift brought the bumpers clear. With his other hand he gave the radiator a friendly shove and the car rolled back. The untangled motors were driven off and in a minute the jam had cleared and Chambers street was as quiet and calm as ever.

Steam heat as a subject of conversation would bring sophisticated smiles from most New Yorkers. It is a necessity of northern city life that is taken for granted, like the telephone and electric light. The real estate men and builders who are remodeling tenements on the lower East Side, however, have met with some strong opposition to steam heated flats.

Soon after the heat was turned on this season in one of these modernized tenements a woman came to her landlord to make her last payment of rent.

"Yes, I'm moving," she stated emphatically. "It's the steam heat. My daughter has done so much bragging about it that I can't get my work done. The house is full of neighbors all the time coming in to get warm."

Another woman regretfully informed her landlord that she was thinking of moving.

"Since we have steam heat I can't keep my butter har. in the tube," she explained.

"Why don't you just place it outside the window?" he asked.

"What? This kind of weather? And to be sure catch our death of cold? Besides," she added laughing, "my neighbors would think I was showing off—butter outside my window!"

Both families moved, but the real estate men had no trouble in filling the steam-heated apartments.

Is Happiness a Bypath?

IF YOU want to be happy, you must learn how to busy yourself with unimportant things.

This bit of advice comes from A. Edward Newton in a recent book, "This Book Collecting Game." Mr. Newton explains that by following it himself he has found happiness, and he cites instances of others who have done likewise.

There was, for instance, a clergyman who got interested in studying the natural history of his parish. He spent hours daily watching the birds, bats, frogs, squirrels, fishes and insects of the nearby countryside, and lived an exceedingly happy life. To be sure, he neglected his pastoral duties very badly, forgot to get married and took no interest in the things that were going on in the world—but, after all, he was happy.

A philosophy like that hardly fits our American temper. From the day the first Pilgrim father stepped ashore on slippery, surf-splashed Plymouth Rock we have had scant use for anything but hard work, and plenty of it. Whether our own ancestors came from England or from Lithuania, we have all been imbued with the American idea of "service"—an idea prevalent years before the luncheon clubs took it up.

Probably that is one reason why so many foreign visitors have gone home to report that "Americans do not seem happy—they are too restless." It is largely true. We are born and bred to a tradition that says that an American's first duty is to find a job that will take every ounce of his energy and ability.

In the old days this was necessary. A pioneer in a wilderness cabin who tried to interest himself in the unimportant would presently have provided the Indians with a new scalp. The early settlers had to conquer a continent, and it was a tremendous job. They did it—and most of them never even had time to wonder whether they were as happy as they might have been.

The pioneer days are over now, and we have more leisure. We can devote ourselves to unimportant things if we want to and nobody will be harmed. Yet there is small chance that any very great number of us will do it.

For the old tradition still is strong—and rightly so. We have left the old, physical frontier behind us only to reach a new one. We have taken the puzzling, incomprehensible industrial age, which burst upon the world with the invention of the steam engine, and have undertaken to develop it to its logical conclusion. We are still pioneering.

So, probably, most of us will have to defer the business of devoting a lifetime to the search for happiness. It would be a fine thing to do—but it just isn't in us. We are fated to be hard workers. And it is our hope that out of this endless struggle and devotion to duty will flower, some day, a new era in which the children of our children can hold fast to the happiness which we have not time to seek.

Million-Dollar Incomes

TWO HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-THREE Americans enjoy incomes of more than a million dollars a year, according to figures just released by the internal revenue bureau. That total represents a gain of 52 during the past year.

These figures ought to provide all sorts of people with material for comment. The radical will declare that they prove that our wealth is concentrating in the hands of the few and that the common man, as a result, is getting the muddy end of the stick. The conservative will say they prove that we are more prosperous than ever before, and that the wealth of the few reflects an added increment on the part of the many. The evangelist can doubtless build a screed on this luxury loving generation, with a few well-chosen references to the decline and fall of Rome.

All in all, the internal revenue bureau deserves our thanks for making these figures public.

Houghton Goes Back

IT IS good to learn that Alanson B. Houghton is resuming his post as American ambassador to Great Britain.

Mr. Houghton early in the summer offered his resignation, effective at the president's pleasure, in order to run for U. S. senator in New York. He was defeated; now Mr. Coolidge has prevailed on him to reconsider, and he returns to London as our envoy.

His service in that capacity has been distinguished. He sees international problems, particularly the problems centering about disarmament and world peace, with unusual clarity and common sense. The country is the gainer by his decision to resume his post.

ELECTION POST MORTEMS

Some of our citizens seem to be averse to letting the election be a closed book. Some are saying that they are going to "remember" certain ones on the other side in the recent campaign. But that sentiment is unworthy of a great people. What is to be gained by remembering for the purpose of getting what we call revenge? It only serves to keep alive old animosities. And what is worse, look what we might accomplish by devoting the same energy to some useful tasks that we spend in trying to get even with somebody.

SMITH AND THE FUTURE

Governor Smith's prompt statement after he had learned of his defeat that he would not again be a candidate for public office, if one studies the career and the character of the man, may well be taken as a statement for the welfare of his party and of the country generally, and not as the utterance of a man who was sore in defeat.

When the returns began to show something of the proportions of the landslide to Hoover, and Republican majorities in four southern states indicated a cataclysm in the Democratic party, it is not improbable that Governor Smith realized the necessity for heroic measures to heal Democratic wounds and that he wished at once to remove himself from the point of attack, in order that he might not be a factor in further dissension among Democrats.

NEED OF SOUTH PLAINS

"It is people we need," cry the people of the South Plains. "God has given us the land, the climate, the resources," they say. "We need only people and more people." Most of the towns are in hopes that the special trains next Thursday will so demonstrate this fact to railway officials and other prominent men that it will bring about great colonization movements into that region.

The INN of the HAWK and RAVEN

By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

(Copyright, 1927, Dodd Mead & Co.)

(Copyright, 1928, Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York)

During the summer, Jonifer takes Gerane and his nephew, Peter, to Edelweiss on a pleasure jaunt. They are disguised as gypsies. While there, they see Starcourt acting as the escort of the princess, on her return to the palace. One look at Gerane's face, when she sees Starcourt, tells Jonifer that she loves him. Peter arrives at the same conclusion, and is none too pleased, for he secretly loves Gerane. However he knows he can never marry her, for not only was his father, Jonifer's half-brother, of illegitimate birth, but he himself was born out of wedlock. Jonifer, being the legitimate descendant of the Duke of Droon, who was made an outlaw, many, many years ago, after his attempt to seize the throne, exercises his prerogatives as head of the family in a way that the son of his deceased illegitimate half-brother often finds distasteful. Peter instantly becomes jealous of Starcourt, who, according to a spectator, is about to undertake the extermination of the bandits in the Forest of Droon and has been made a colonel, for he has voluntarily undertaken the task.

Urged on by his mother and his brothers, who hate Jonifer, Peter contemplates a revolt against his uncle's authority.

Jonifer, who, on learning that Gerane is in love with Starcourt, makes some secret plans that involve the soldier, takes a trip to Moscow. On his way home, near the Axphain border, the stage-coach is held up by a band of bandits, however. The arrival of a troop of soldiers results in the capture of the robbers. The incident serves to inform Jonifer that Starcourt, with 500 picked men, is in the Forest of Droon to run down the Davos band, no matter how long the task keeps him there. Jonifer and his companion.

John Crispo, quietly disappear that night and MAKE their way home, realizing that the situation is too serious to permit of their running the risk of capture.

Jonifer's return puts an end, for a time, at least, to Peter's thoughts of rebellion. The chief's next move is an attempt to capture Starcourt in a surprise attack at night. He is defeated, however.

Later, coming upon Starcourt while he is swimming in a mountain pool, Jonifer captures him. The colonel's men believe him to be drowned.

INSTALLMENT XVII

For days thereafter, scores of soldiers hunted for the body of Gavan Starcourt and not for the robbers of Droon forest. Edelweiss, shocked and grieved, offered up prayers for the soul of the gallant young officer who had lost his life in the treacherous stream, and his mother, Lady Starcourt, went into the deepest mourning and was not to be consoled.

The dripping figure of Jonifer Davos, supporting an unconscious burden, struggled up the bank after being dragged from the water by eager hands. Off into the dark forest scurried the silent; shadowy band, elated by the success of this bloodless coup. Starcourt's body was slung over the shoulders of the robber chieftain. Not a word was spoken until they were some distance from the river. There the fired Jonifer halted and lowered his burden to the ground.

"Your sash, Julius," he panted. "We must cover his head. He will be coming to his senses before long. Any blood? Good! It was a well-placed blow. I hated to do it. He was aiming to save my life. Heigh-ho! I wonder what he would have done, if he had known who I was. Strangled me, I've no doubt—or tried to, at least. And then Fahould have had to kill him. He is a lucky dog. Do not tell me there is no such thing as luck! And consider all that dame fortune still has in store for him! Come! Up with him, you two. We have no time to spare."

Starcourt was not long in regaining consciousness. His sensations are easier imagined than described. . . . Suffice it to say, his hands and feet were bound, a thick cloth covered his mouth, leaving his nostrils free, and he was being borne through the darkness by means of a conveyance that completely baffled all conjecture. He could only realize that he was powerless to do more than wriggle his body, which, added to the jerking, undulating motion, caused him to experience the nausea peculiar to sea-sickness.

A long time elapsed before his brain cleared sufficiently to admit of even the slightest notion as to what had happened to him, and, which is more to the point, what was happening to him now. He was aware of being lifted high and deposited gently across the saddle of a horse, his feet hanging on one side, his head on the other. Some one mounted the animal back of the saddle—and again he was conscious of moving swiftly through the air. Now he could hear the thud of many hoofs on the soft turf. He was strangely cold.

Long afterward he heard a voice issuing a command to halt. By this time he knew precisely what had transpired. He was a prisoner in the hands of the robbers of Droon forest!

His head was paining him terribly. He felt he was smothering. Ten, at last, strong hands lifted him from the saddle and deposited him on the ground. His legs gave way and he would have fallen but someone held him up. There was no light, but he was able to make out the figures of men and horses. Then a voice he remembered spoke(

"Unbind his legs. We must get some clothing for him. Here, you, Peter, take off your coat. Jahn, your breeches. Your boots, Gorgas." A moment later the speaker was addressing Starcourt. "You are in no danger, Colonel Starcourt. Possess your soul in peace. No harm can possibly come to you, so do not be alarmed. You have been looking for Jonifer Davos for several months. It is my pleasure to inform you that you have found him at last."

Starcourt struggled at his bonds; strange, inarticulate sounds came from his lips. Jonifer went on:

"Control yourself! You but waste your strength. There are 20 of us. Come, man, take things as you find them. Now, if you will but give me your ear for a moment or two, while these good fellows cover your nakedness with their— Alas, you must not expect a perfect fit, my friend. I fear me you will not know yourself by daylight, but do not blame your tailor. Ah, now, that is better. You are worrying over the fate of your men. Console yourself, sir. Not so much as a hair of their heads has been touched. They are as safe—well, as safe as you are at this moment."

And with this, Jonifer Davos proceeded to give him a terse, but, at the same time, boastful account of his seizure. In conceluding he said:

"The more I think of it, the better pleased I am with my strategy. You will be missed, but they will believe you were drowned. If we had attacked and killed your party, the whole blessed army of 20,000 men would be after us. As it is, no one suspects us, and—well, you see for yourself, Colonel Starcourt, how fortune smiles on us. You are safe, your soldiers are alive, and Jonifer Davos is perhaps safer than he has been in years. Your untimely death will surely put an end to this very annoying interference with our business. The soldiers will decamp. The highway will be what it used to be. We will thrive once more. And you, my dear colonel, may yet find that life is sweet. So do not hang your head, my friend. Was it not an Englishman who wrote a play called 'All's Well That Ends Well?' Ah! Are we ready to be on the move? Assist the colonel into the saddle, men, and secure his legs with a rope under the horse's belly."

For hours the party rode through the black forest, up hill and down, slowly at times and briskly at others, and never once did poor Starcourt lift his head. His shoulders drooped. At times he cried like a child. Choking sobs broke from his lips. And Jonifer Davos did not laugh at him. He was sorry for him. He knew why this strong, gallant soldier was crying.

At last they halted. Starcourt, faint with pain and the shame that was breaking his heart, submitted without a murmur when a bandage was tied tightly about his eyes. This sort of precaution, alone told him that daylight was near. Then, after a long interval, they were on the move again, descending a steep hill. Ten or 15 minutes later they crossed over a bridge. Starcourt did not know it, but it was the floor of the Digman's, stable, and then they were in a cold, damp gorge (the cavern) through which the horses clattered as if they were on a cobblestone pavement.

Starcourt now began to take notice of a decided change in the conduct of his unseen companions. They no longer spoke in undertones. Instead they appeared to have cast off all reserve, all caution. They began talking loudly. It dawned upon him suddenly that he had at last penetrated to the long-sought sanctuary of Jonifer Davos and his robbers. He groaned. What next?

At a sharp command from some one up ahead, the noisy chatter died down to a subdued growling, and then there was silence, except for the thud of hoofs on turf. After what must have been half an hour's time, his horse was brought to a stop, his feet untied, and he was lifted from the saddle. He could hardly stand. While two men held him up another removed the sash that had served so long as a sort of gag. But the blindfold was not disturbed.

"You are free to yell and curse as loudly as you please," were the mocking words that fell from the leader's lips.

"Take this beastly thing off my eyes," stuttered the prisoner, speaking with great difficulty. His lips were thick and stiff. "Let me look upon your dastardly—"

"All in good time," interrupted the other, placatively. "Be patient. You have been wanting to see our domain for a long time, Colonel Starcourt, and your curiosity is soon to be satisfied. But not at present. Now, will you condescend to walk with me for a short distance, without making a fool of yourself, or will it be necessary for us to truss you up again and carry you?"

Again Starcourt's chin sank until it almost touched his breast.

"Do what you will with me," he muttered hoarsely. "I am in your power. But if you have a grain of humanity in your rotten soul, give me water to drink."

"A hundred paces from here you will find water and wine and food."

"Food!" fairly snarled the dragoon. "Do you think I can ever eat again?"

"Aye, that I do," remarked his captor, with a confident laugh. "And drink, too, for that matter. We have a rare Tokay that came from the cellars of a grand duke in Russia—"

"Oh, close your trap!" grated Starcourt, inelegantly but forcibly.

"Trap?" queried Jonifer, and fell to thinking perplexedly, as he took the prisoner's arm. "Curse me, you need not waste advice on me, sir. You will find the trap most securely closed. Come! Will you walk, or would you prefer being dragged by the heels?"

"I'll walk, curse you," said Starcourt, steadying his knees.

After walking for a short distance, they came to a house and entered, after Jonifer had warned his captive to "lift your feet." The door closed behind them. A moment later the stout rope that bound his arms to his sides was untied and the bandage removed from his eyes.

"You are free, Colonel Starcourt," spoke the voice of Jonifer. "Consider yourself a welcome guest in our midst."

(To Be Continued)

For hours the party rode through the black forest, up hill and down, slowly at times and briskly at others, and never once did poor Starcourt lift his head.

TRIBUTE

I salute you, little newsy, first to give me my hello
On these frosty winter mornings, 'tis my fate to have to go
To my labors at the office; problems I have waiting there.
And the way you say, "Good Morning" makes a dismal day seem fair.

It is hard to get up mornings when the air is full of ice;
Just to lazy 'tween the blankets would be very, very nice,
But 'tis true that life's a cycle—mostly things that must be done;
Of the hardships fate has cast me, getting up at dawn is one.

Many times I reach your corner ere the sunbeams start to creep;
But you're always drumming business; do you ever, ever sleep?
Ragged pants, and tattered sweater—guess they're all that you possess,
But to find success in business doesn't call for fancy dress.

When I've bought and read my paper, and have settled down to work,
Recollections of your hardships keep me plugging at my work!
You are just an alley urchin, rough and tough as you can be,
But you have a backbone in you that I wish I had in me!

"As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you." Jno. 20:21.

The church is not a religious restaurant nor an educational superfluity, nor a political kite-tail. However, the church satisfies spiritual hunger, educates the spiritually illiterate and teaches righteousness to politicians. Her one mission is to seek and to save that which was lost. This is primary; all else is secondary. The recovery of the lost is the grand mission of Christ and His church.

"O living church! Thine errand speed,
Fulfill Thy task, sublime;
With bread of life earth's hunger feed,
Redeem the evil time!"

MORAN AND MACK

Moran—I certainly would like to get back them TEN dollars I lost in Wall Street, Big Boy.

Mack—The only way to do that is to be a BROKER.

Moran—What's a BROKER do?

Mack—He don't do WHAT. He does WHO.

Moran—What's his bizness?

Mack—He buys SOMETHING from a man what AIN'T got it and sells it to a man what DON'T want it.

Moran—Is that a good bizness?

Mack—There's only one better. And that's selling rowboats to French convicts on Debbil's Island.

Moran—Is it better than a permit to BEG?

Mack—Oscar, it's BETTER than a license to STEAL.

Moran—Let's me and you go into that bizness.

Mack—Is you got ten dollars? Give it to me.

Moran—Here's my LAST sawbuck, Big Boy.

Mack—Now you is an investor, Oscar. You is rich so long as this money lasts. You is making MIND bets and you can't go WRONG. If you LOSES, all you LOSE is you MIND.

'FAKED' BABY LOSES GOLD

Court Decides Boy Is Not Heir to Millions

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 22. (UP)—Little Dode Alfred Boyer, ate his dinner tonight at usual, not knowing the golden spoon, placed in his hand shortly after birth, had been taken away today by a stroke of the pen.

Dode's birth record which was stricken today had shown he was the son of Myron L. Boyer, chairman of the board of Burroughs Adding Machine company. As such he was the heir apparent to Boyer's millions, represented in a trust fund, established by Joseph Boyer, for his son, Myron, and his issues, excepting adopted or step children.

Mrs. Myron Boyer admitted in circuit court today that she had "faked" the boy's birth, telling her husband it was his own. At the time of the discovery of the deception several months ago, Mrs. Boyer said her sole purpose was "to satisfy her husband's desire for a baby." Dode is five years old.

The Boyers since have separated although there is a friendly feeling between husband and wife. The action in court today was perfunctory on Boyer's insistence the records be corrected.

"I am perfectly satisfied," Mrs. Boyer said after the order which decreed the boy an imposter. "I love my boy and will keep him. He will be well taken care of."

Mrs. Boyer, attractive woman of 35, who was head saleslady at the Burroughs company before marrying, has been working since the separation and receives $50 a week in addition to an allowance from her husband.

Dode and his mother live in a nice home. The boy is attending an exclusive kindergarden and no change in his daily life from recent months will take place.

"He will continue to go to school," Mrs. Boyer said tonight.

"We have not attempted to tell him of his position although no effort will be made later to hide it from him."

The boy still has a chance of becoming wealthy some day. Boyer and his wife are not divorced, and, it is understood, they sometimes meet and have dinner together.

She still retains a dower right in the husband's estate, equal to one-third of his real estate and, in case of no will, one-half of his personal property.

The budget for 1929 was set at $21,200 by the church officials in their meeting last night.

A special vote of thanks was given to the retiring officers who are Harry Hines, chairman; R. B. Wolford, vice chairman; O. Abernathy, secretary, and M. A. Bundy, treasurer.

Wichita Man, Boyhood Friend Of Macmillen, Recalls First Ovation

Music Lovers Raise Fund to Allow Children to Hear Master Violinist; Night Concert at Woman's Forum

W. D. Rowland, a boyhood friend of Francis Macmillen, violinist who is appearing here in two concerts Friday under the auspices of the Woman's Forum, told Thursday of hearing Macmillen play a concert in 1904 on the courthouse steps at Marietta, Ohio, on his return from a number of years spent in study in Europe.

Mr. Rowland, an oil man living at 2914 Tenth street, said he believed Macmillen is a cousin of Charles Dawes, vice president of the United States, who also hails from Marietta.

Ovation at Courthouse

"Macmillen left Marietta when he was a boy of eight years and went to Europe to study," Mr. Rowland said. "I remember distinctly that day when he returned to his native town, a young man of perhaps 21 years.

"Friends carried him to the courthouse and he played there for several hours on the courthouse steps. The old time tunes were called for and played. I remember distinctly the strains of 'Home Sweet Home' and 'My Old Kentucky Home.'

"That was a great day in Marietta, and a day that I shall never forget.

"After that, Macmillen played a concert in the opera house and then went to Chicago where he lived for about 20 years.

"He is one of the greatest artists in the land, and I hope that every Wichitan who can possibly hear him will take advantage of this opportunity."

Mr. Macmillen will give his first concert this afternoon at 3:15 o'clock at the Memorial auditorium with the program especially designed to appeal to the children of the city. The program was drafted by music leaders of Wichita Falls.

Fund For Children

Many children will be able to hear the master violinist at the matinee through a fund raised by a group of Wichitans, headed by Stanley Raub, himself a well known violinist. Contributors to the fund, which will send children to hear Macmillen's concert, include Mrs. J. J. Perkins, Mrs. Flora Greenwood, Mrs. W. P. Ferguson, Mrs. L. Humphrey, Mrs. Josette Bonner, Mrs. O. B. Kiel, Mrs. C. H. Clark, Mrs. Ben G. Oneal, Mrs. B. F. Caldwell, Mrs. C. Joline, Mrs. R. R. Robertson, Mrs. O. E. Nichols, Mrs. J. T. Harrell, Miss Mildred Unsell, the Music Study club, Mrs. F. R. Collard, Mrs. Roy I. Carter, Mrs. J. D. Bright, Mrs. J. E. Hall, Mrs. Horrace Robbins, Mrs. J. V. C. T. Christensen, Mrs. C. T. Tully, Dwight Hobbs, Walter Jensen, Horrace Robbins, Ernest Katz and Mr. Raub.

The matinee concert is also open to the public, although the program is not so heavy as that for the night performance. Tickets to the matinee will be on sale at McConnell's furniture store until 2:30 Friday afternoon, and at the auditorium ticket office thereafter. Doors will open at the matinee concert at 2:30 o'clock. Tickets for the night program will be on sale at the furniture store until 6 o'clock.

Night Program Changed

The place for Macmillen's night program was changed Thursday from the Memorial auditorium to the auditorium of the Woman's Forum building in the Country Club Estates. The forum auditorium was considered better suited for the difficult night program by the violinist, it was said, although the seating capacity of the building is little more than 800. Persons who have previously purchased seats to the night program will be given the same location at the Woman's Forum, it was announced. The auditorium of the building is expected to be filled for the concert, while nearly 3,000 school children are expected to hear the violinist at the matinee in the Memorial auditorium. Tickets for the night will be on sale at the Woman's Forum after 6 o'clock.

Mr. Macmillen has an international reputation as a violinist, having received his first recognition abroad. Many musical critics of the north and east have declared him to be the greatest violinist of today. Ralph Angell, his accompanist, and other members of his party are registered at the Kemp hotel.

Shriners Postpone Journey To Bowie

The good will trip scheduled to be made Sunday to Bowie by members of Maskat temple has been postponed, according to Marshal Franklin, chairman of the ceremonial committee.

Preparations for the fall ceremonial here on Nov. 29 and 29 and the Shrine minstrel which will be staged at the Memorial auditorium early in December have been too heavy to allow sufficient time for making a trip to Bowie, Mr. Franklin asserted.

15 MILLIONS FOR NEW SHIPS

275,000 Tons of Liners To Be Constructed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (US)—More than $115,000,000 is to be immediately expended for the construction of upwards of 275,000 tons of modern liners to fly the American flag, it was learned at the shipping board today.

Of this sum the United States is to advance three-fourths from a construction loan fund. Most of the loans for the prospective building program have been either tentatively or definitely approved.

Plans for all the proposed ships have been submitted to the board and approved. They vary from two express liners of approximately 60,000 tons each and designed to be the fastest ships afloat, to a number of smaller combination freight and express ships of about 12,000 tons.

All the vessels are to be operated by private concerns, but under the law will be required to fly the American flag on routes designated by the shipping board, and the United States will hold a mortgage on the ships until payment is completed.

The outstanding ships are two which the board has decided must be added to the United States lines, if that line is to survive. They are to be of 40,000 tons, not quite so large as the Leviathan, will do better than 23 knots and cost between $18,000,000 and $20,000,000 each. The board believes that offers to build these ships will be made early in the new year.

The Dollar Steamship line has obligated itself to build immediately five 20-knot ships ranging in tonnage from 20,000 to 30,000 to be used in "round the world" cruises and the shipping board has approved a loan which, it is estimated, will approximate $35,000,000, the sum to be determined when the contracts are let.

KGKO Plant Still Draws Radio Fans

Station KGKO in its third month of activity is still interesting as an innovation to scores of people who are not satisfied with just hearing the programs come into their own homes over the air, but go in great numbers to the broadcasting rooms to see just how it is done. Directors of the station state that many are peculiarly fascinated by the experience of listening to the loud speaker in one room while looking at the performers through the glass partition, separating them from the broadcasting room. Almost any night, between 7 and 9 o'clock, the part of the Perkins-Snider building in which station KGKO is located may be found more or less crowded with fans.

Friday's program was announced as follows: 7 to 8 o'clock, Little Rovers orchestra; 8 to 8:30, Honey Boy and Sassafras; 8:30 to 9, Mrs. Cortez Slaughter, Mrs. J. F. Cammack, Joseph Rabinowitz; 9 to 10, Zack and Glenn.

Probe Of Fatal Auto Accident Transferred To Electra Today

Representatives of the county attorney's office will go to Electra Friday morning to personally investigate circumstances surrounding the accident which resulted in the death of David Price Beaty of Wichita Falls Wednesday evening.

Mr. Beaty was struck and fatally injured Wednesday morning by a truck driven by a negro employe of an Electra oil company. The driver is being held in the Wichita county jail pending the results of the investigation.

An effort will be made to ascertain whether or not the negro was violating any law at the time of the accident, according to Sam Spence, district attorney-elect, now assistant county attorney. If the speed, position and equipment of the truck are all found to have been within legal limits, the prisoner will be released, Mr. Spence said.

Funeral services for Mr. Beaty were held Friday at Crowell, former home of the Beaty family.

City Plans No Immediate Action On Plans For Scott Avenue Bridge

Official action by the city of Wichita Falls probably will not be necessary on the proposed Scott avenue bridge before late next summer, in the opinion of George D. Fairtrace, city manager.

When asked concerning the probability of city participation and aid in building the bridge, Mr. Fairtrace said that it was a matter the council must consider and decide upon.

"The fills at either end of the bridge have been discussed with me by representatives of the county and the chamber of commerce," the city manager said. "These approaches really mean the extension of passable city streets to the bridge.

"I believe that it will be possible to reduce the cost of the approaches considerably by having the city engineer mark off the ground and then use the places marked as a dumping ground for dirt. As the months go on, a considerable part of the filling in may thus be accomplished."

J. M. Isbell, county engineer Thursday told of tentative plans for the new bridge which probably will be 30 feet wide and 300 feet long. The probable cost will be $75,000, he said.

Hale Center Dentist Free On Bond in Shooting

LUBBOCK, Texas, Nov. 22. (AP)—Dr. C. L. Barnes, Hale Center dentist, was released under $5,000 bond today at Plainview after the death of Miss Jeannette Long, from wounds received in a shooting affray yesterday at Hale Center. He was charged with murder.

Dr. Barnes and R. A. Maddox, employer of Miss Long, were said to have been arguing just outside Maddox's office when Miss Long attempted to placate them. She stepped between them just as a shot was fired. Dr. Barnes was placed under $2,500 bond immediately after the shooting but this was doubled when the woman died today.

Miss Long was the daughter of Mrs. James A. Long of Levelland, widow of the late Rev. James A. Long, Baptist minister.

Orgatone Has No Equal, Says Wichita Man

Geo. H. Steele, Well Known Motorman on the Factory Line Run, Tells His Own Experience With Remarkable New Medicine.

GETS RELIEF FROM VERY FIRST BOTTLE

Amazing Health-Building Powers of Orgatone Is Talk of Entire Town — Demand Is Tremendous.

Unqualified praise for Orgatone, the sensational new medicine put on sale in Wichita Falls recently at Allison's Drug store, is now heard all over town. People are talking about Orgatone and its amazing health-building powers throughout this entire section of Texas.

No medicine has ever before received the endorsement that is now being accorded Orgatone. Almost without exception those who have taken report the most astonishing and gratifying benefits after its use. The demand here for the new medicine is tremendous.

Among the hundreds who are praising Orgatone is Geo. H. Steele, the well known street car motorman on the Factory line. W. F. T. Co., living at 2700 Kemp Blvd., Wichita Falls, Texas. Mr. Steele is a man whose word is considered as good as his bond and any statement he makes is above reproach. He says:

"It is certainly a wonderful thing for the people of Wichita Falls to be able to get Orgatone whenever they want it, but knowing what I do now about this medicine, I would be willing to send to Alaska for it if necessary.

"For a long time I have been suffering with my stomach. My food would sour and bloat me up until I was in misery. I had pains all through my stomach that sometimes would almost double me up and I felt good for nothing generally.

"I couldn't seem to find anything I could eat without suffering afterwards and so it got to where I just ate the lightest kind of food, even coffee, would hurt me. All things I enjoyed most, I simply couldn't eat. Naturally I grew weak and thin, and was getting discouraged.

"A few weeks ago I was reading in the Wichita Falls paper about this remarkable medicine, Orgatone, so I got a bottle. Well, I had only taken it for about a week when it started to giving me relief and by the time I had finished the first bottle I was feeling like a new man.

"Now, I eat anything I want without any distress. My appetite is fine, I feel like a brand new man all over, and look it, too. Why, it is the most amazing thing I ever saw. This Orgatone hasn't an equal on earth, when it comes to making a man feel like himself again, and I just think I owe to everybody to tell what it did for me. I certainly recommend Orgatone."

Genuine Orgatone is sold in Wichita Falls, exclusively by the Allison's Drug store, 716 Indiana avenue, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative who is meeting the public daily. All mail orders filled promptly by mail, upon receipt of price, $1.25 per bottle or six bottles for $6.25. — Adv.

TEXANS NAMED AS AMONG OUTSTANDING LINEMEN OF SEASON

LONGHORN AND MUSTANG STAR

U. P. Sports Editor Praises Brown and Sanders

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—High quality of play on the part of the oft-overlooked forward lines has caught the attention of football critics in all parts of the country this season.

Too often, in the past, credit for a team's success has centered upon its backfield stars; the grimy linemen who make possible the dashing, spectacular plays have turned back to their school books at the season's end, unhonored and unsung.

It is the purpose of this article to invite attention of football fans to some of the outstanding linemen of 1928, players who have contributed consistently to the success of their teams, and, at that, it will be possible to mention only a few of the forwards who have made their mark this year, and it will be necessary to omit many who well deserve that measure of popular recognition which is just about the only reward a college football player receives.

The great centers of the season are Captain Pund of Georgia Tech and Monyihan of Notre Dame. The former stands out in the South, while every team which has met Notre Dame this season has come out of the game with high praise and respect for the fiercely roving center of the Irish.

Sanders Great Guard

In the East, Captain Chuck Howe of Princeton is about the best, while coaches and critics on the Pacific coast speak highly of Barragar of U. S. C. Randolph of Indiana is the great roving center of the Big Ten, while James of Nebraska stands out among the snapbacks of the Big Six. Hall of the Army, who will face James Saturday, is an outstanding center, while up in New England they think very well indeed of Andrew of Dartmouth.

Some great guards stand out as the 1928 season draws to a close; Brown of Vanderbilt, Hezler of Alabama, and Drennon of Georgia Tech in the South; Gibson of Minnesota in the Middle West; Carlson of Washington State on the Pacific coast; Sanders of S. M. U. in the Southwest. The East is weaker in guards this year than for some time.

But if the East is weak in guards, it boasts some mighty tackles; Eddy of Yale, Lassman and Grant of N. Y. U., Mooney of Georgetown; Ghetto of Pitt, Sprague of the Army and Gannon of the Navy, not to overlook McGuirk of Boston college's unbeaten and untied team.

Brown Star Tackle

Pommerening of Michigan and Westra of Iowa are highly recommended. Spear of Georgia Tech is one of the South's best. Brown of Texas is a great tackle. There are a couple of fine tackles in the Rocky Mountain region, Carman of Utah and Prince of the Colorado Aggies.

For several reasons, the ends have not stood out this season as they did in former years. It may be that the quality of end play has fallen off, or it may be the changing game which now gives the wing men less chance to shine. Covering kicks is becoming somewhat of a lost, or at least a thankless art, since the fashion of allowing the ball to bounce about until grounded came into vogue. Punting the greatest possible distance and having the ball go out of bounds has become the aim of many kickers.

Moreover, the forward passing game has developed to such an extent that backfield men are the receivers more often than the ends; while on the popular off-tackle plays, the duty of the defensive end is to take out the interference rather than to bring down the man with the ball.

Rosenzweig of Carnegie Tech is the outstanding end in the East, while others deserving of mention are Messinger of the Army, Smith of Boston college and Barna of Hobart. In the Middle West, there are Fesler of Ohio State, Brown of Missouri and Colerick of Notre Dame; in the Far West, Phillips of California.

Here's More Smoke About Mr. Dempsey

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Nov. 22. (UP)—A conference with Tex Rickard in Miami, Fla., shortly after Christmas, will determine when, if at all, Jack Dempsey is to fight again, the former champion said today upon his return from New York.

"You shouldn't be surprised if I go back for one more battle," was the nearest Dempsey came to a definite statement about his plans.

The Tia Juana race track will claim part of Dempsey's time during the winter. His wife, Estelle Taylor, expects to do some motion picture work.

St. Edwards, Simmons Play At Abilene Today

AUSTIN, Nov. 22. (AP)—A final thrust into the west, during which the St. Edwards Saints hope to insure their having a better than .500 average in the Texas football conference race, will be made by Coach Meagher and his men Friday, when they play the Simmons university at Abilene.

Coach Meagher has not decided on the makeup of the squad he would take with him nor on the probable starting lineup he would send against the Cowboys. Some of the new men, especially Sullivan and Ranson, halfbacks, and Quirk, guard, were regarded as probable starters.

They're Ready For "City Championship" Battle

Out at Zundelowitz and Reagan junior high schools they are finishing training this week-end for their "city championship" game next Monday afternoon at the ball park. The Zundelowitz lads, under the tutelage of Coach Golden, have played excellent football this season and are ready for the annual battle with their rivals.

Middle row: J. N. Adair, Phillip Hunter, Eugene Peacock, Bill Jenkins, Ed Campbell, Frank Bradley.

Memphis Ready For Perryton Go

Leading Conference Teams To Clash Today

Special to The Record News

MEMPHIS, Texas, Nov. 22.—On the eve of the deciding game in the race for football honors in this section, Coach Blake Bolton of the Cyclones of Memphis high school, announces that his squad is well primed for the fray with the Perryton team Friday, when they meet on the Perryton gridiron.

Coach Bolton has been giving his players all they could stand in the practices this week and has tried to round out his machine to the point where they will be on their toes and "rarin' to go" when the referee's whistle sounds the call to battle at Perryton Friday afternoon.

New Cyclone Plays

The muddy engagement with Claude last Friday gave the locals an excellent practice, and helped get them in form for the game Friday. Some entirely new plays will be tried in Perryton for the first time, the nature of which will remain a mystery until they are uncorked on the gridiron.

Coach Bolton has been doing his best to develop a kicker. There has been a weak spot in the team throughout the season. In the practices the boys have kicked field goals at will, but when a game looms their toes go back on them and they make a poor showing in this department.

Aerials Are Perfected

A passing attack has been developed that is expected to function well against Perryton. Memphis has shown a weakness in completing passes and about all that has resulted from the attempts so far have been penalties. If the boys continue to show the improvement that was noticeable this week, they will give their foes an interesting session from the overhead.

Both Memphis and Perryton have not been defeated by a conference team this year. A big upset was recorded when Perryton downed the strong Pampa eleven. It had been taken for granted that it would be Memphis against Pampa, but the latter team was put definitely out of the running.

Oil Belt District Grid Dates Are Set

ABILENE, Texas, Nov. 22. (AP)—An agreement between Cisco and Ranger high schools not to replay their football game unless the district championship depends upon it, was indorsed by the Interscholastic league executive committee here today.

Should Ranger defeat Breckenridge next Tuesday, and should Cisco defeat Abilene next Wednesday, the second game will be played. Ranger defeated Cisco 13 to 0 last week, but the game was ruled no contest when Lee Hammett, Ranger quarterback, was held ineligible.

Plainview and Lockney Play 12-12 Grid Draw

Special to The Record News.

LOCKNEY, Texas, Nov. 22.—Lockney and Plainview high school football teams played a 12 to 12 tie in a hard fought game here today. Lockney scored touchodwns in the first and second quarters by long forward passes. They held the lead until the last period when Plainview scored twice, also via the overhead game. Schroeter of Plainview and Spence of Lockney were stars.

VERNON MEETS QUANAH TODAY

Game on Lions' Gridiron Feature of Week

Few important games are scheduled this week-end by state prep football teams. In this section, the only outstanding contest of class A elevens will be the clash of Vernon and Quanah on the Lions' gridiron. Vernon is a contender for second place, with Lubbock the occupant of the runnerup position, and today's game has bearing on the final standing.

Memphis plays at Perryton today in the game that will decide their district class B title. Both teams are unbeaten.

Many high school games are scheduled for Thanksgiving day.

Corsicana Scores 26-6 Win Over Waxahachie

CORSICANA, Texas, Nov. 22. (AP)—Corsicana high school's Tigers who sprang into the spotlight by defeating the champion Waco eleven two weeks ago, continued their drive toward the district title by beating the Waxachachie Indians, 26 to 6, today. Corsicana did not employ all of its first team.

McNutt's passing was the feature of the Tiger attack.

NEW YORK U. FACES SKIBOS

Violets Out to Halt Carnegie's Record

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK, Nov. 22. (UP)—"Carnegie Tech has got to beat us!"

That's the psychology Chick Meehan is using in preparing the New York university eleven for Saturday's game with the conquerors of Notre Dame.

"We're not going to play a defensive game—not by a long shot," Meehan said, "but the burden of proof is on Carnegie Tech, not New York university."

Meehan isn't worrying about the outcome of the game and his players have assumed his attitude of "just another game—all to gain, nothing to lose—let Carnegie Tech worry; we're not."

It's Up to Tech

"If my players can go into the game without any mental strain," Meehan said, "I have no fear over the outcome. Carnegie Tech has a lot of things to worry about—their undefeated record, their last game, etc. They're the favorites, we're the underdogs. They've got to lick us and it will be a great football game while they're doing it—if they do."

Despite the high scores rolled up by New York university in seven of its eight games, the Violets' defense is on par with the offense. Since the Violets reached top form no team has been able to pierce the big, bruising N. Y. U. line with any success.

Georgetown handed N. Y. U. its only defeat on a muddy field, when a player picked up a fumble and ran 90 yards for a touchdown. The score was 7 to 2. Colgate scored a touchdown late in the game after N. Y. U. had run up a high score and then had withdrawn its regulars. Missouri scored on a forward pass.

N. Y. U.'s plan of battle revolves around two giant tackles, Al Lassman and Gallahad Grant, and a 190-pound halfback who has power to waste and speed to burn, Kenneth Strong.

Giant Linemen

Lassman, who weighs 210, and Grant, who weighs 209, will be counted on to stop Harold Harpster, Johnny Karcis and Letzelter. After, or before, Meehan is particular as to that detail. Strong will be hurled at the "red brick wall" and dispatched around the flanks.

Strong has never been stopped this season and has gained 1,689 yards. Even in the Georgetown game, Strong ran wild on a muddy field and several times carried the ball within striking distance of the last chalk line. Strong has the strength of a bull, the speed of an antelope and the stamina of an armadillo.

Scoring 19 touchdowns and kicking 25 goals after touchdown, Strong has accounted for 139 of the 276 points made by the N. Y. U. eleven this season. He leads the country in individual scoring. He runs, plunges, passes, kicks and tackles with almost equal skill.

What Strong is to the Violets' offense, Lassman and Grant are to the team's defense. No team has made any progress against either of the pair.

Roughly speaking 400,000,000 people speak Chinese in its various dialects.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

A NEW BILL is in circulation in St. Louis. And Rochester receives, in exchange, a somewhat worn and battered Bill. Still, the old Bill may prove the best; the new one that St. Louis has may be too quickly spent and indeed, may for that matter, be counterfeit. It happens that way in baseball, and the exchange of managers of the St. Louis and Rochester clubs may be a disastrous move by the Cardinal powers and Billy Southworth, the new Red Bird skipper.

◇ ◇ ◇

Southworth, a member of the 1926 world champion Cardinals, is something of an idol in St. Louis. He showed he possesses some managerial skill by leading Rochester to the International league pennant this campaign. But except for a couple of seasons as boss in the International loop, where incidentally he was handed a tailor-made team composed largely of veterans, Southworth's managerial experience is nil. He faces a hard task at St. Louis.

◇ ◇ ◇

THEY TEAR DOWN their idols speedily, do baseball fans, and St. Louis is no exception. Southworth goes there as manager after they have had winning clubs for three years. He finds a team that will require no little rebuilding. He must make changes in his club's personnel. But will St. Louis fandom be patient with him? Aside from that angle, it also is true that Southworth is working for a boss who is a very, very difficult gentleman to satisfy. Or perhaps it should be written bosses. Anyhow, Sam Breadon, Cardinal president, and his right-hand man, Branch Rickey, have made changes of managers annually for four years—WITH WINNING TEAMS.

◇ ◇ ◇

HORNSBY SUCCEEDED Rickey as field leader in 1925 in mid-season and won the pennant and world championship in 1926. His sale to the Giants that winter was his reward. Bob O'Farrell piloted the Cards to within a game of the flag in 1927, with a club that lost Thevenow in mid-season and was forced to struggle along with Heinie Schuble, a rookie, at shortstop the rest of the campaign. He was traded to New York that winter. McKechnie won the pennant for the Cardinals this campaign, and he is now demoted to the minors.

◇ ◇ ◇

There is a third, and a highly important consideration, also to effect Southworth's debut as a big league manager, and the patronage accorded the Cardinals by St. Louis. Dan Howley's colorful team of Brown juveniles made a corking race last season, finishing third in what really was the surprise of the season. If the Browns show the improvement expected of them next season and are contenders for the flag or in the race for a high position, they are going to attract much of the support that naturally went to the Cardinals in recent years. The National league club, showing it could not win a world championship last season, the fans will turn to the Browns at the first indication of greatness from that club.

◇ ◇ ◇

M'KECHNIE IS NOT a "master mind" of baseball. Still, he seems to have won his share of championships. Indeed, he led the Pittsburgh Pirates to league and world titles in addition to his pennant-victory at St. Louis this year. McKechnie, affable, splendid gentleman that he is, doubtless feels no envy toward Southworth nor malice for his employers, though he probably nourishes a natural resentment that he is shunted off to the minors after he has been successful. But Mr. McKechnie's lot is an easy one compared to what the youthful Billy Southworth faces.

TWO PREP FOOTBALL teams played a game Wednesday at Burkburnett and major collegiate elevens may well look to the record they made in scoring points after touchdown. Five touchdowns were made in that game, four by Burkburnett and one by Zundelowitz junior high of Wichita Falls, its foe. And four points after touchdown were made, Burkburnett adding three and Zundelowitz its one. In many big collegiate games this season victory or ties have been lost on failure to kick or score, in some manner, the point after touchdown.

Spike Stewart and Country Boy Owens, leading boxers of Wichita Falls, will meet in the ring feature, a six-round mill. This bout is a return go following their close and disputed bout a few months ago. Much interest of boxing fandom here is attached to their go Wednesday.

Henry Adams and Kenneth Adams (no relation) will step in a four-round prelim.

Burk Intermediate Five Beats Fairview, 28 to 6

Special to The Record News.

BURKBURNETT, Texas, Nov. 22.—The Burk intermediate five which is composed of Brown, Ragsdale, Burke, Exley and Campbell, outpointed the Fairview Cats by a score of 28 to 6.

Brown, forward, was high point man for Burk with four field goals and one free throw for a total of nine points. Ragsdale and Campbell each accounted for seven points.

OLNEY GRIDDER HELD ELIGIBLE

Cosby Ruled Under 20 By District Commitee

Protests over the eligibility of Elbra Cosby, lefthalf of the Olney high school football team, were finally settled Thursday afternoon when the district executive committee ruled that Cosby is only 19 years old and therefore eligible to his place on the winning organization for the southern section.

R. E. Brewster, superintendent of Iowa Park schools, Butley Westerfield, superintendent of the Burkburnett schools, and W. J. Stone, superintendent of Nocona school, members of the executive committee, met in the office of Burl Bryant, county superintendent, Thursday afternoon, and on the evidence of the boy's mother, the Cosby family Bible and allegations of discrepancies in the census records, upheld the decision of the sectional committee which last Saturday held Cosby under 20 years of age.

O. R. Childress, superintendent of the Archer city schools, two weeks ago filed a protest against Cosby, claiming that he is too old to play on a high school team. They presented the evidence of the census records. Mrs. Carrie Cosby, mother of the boy, told the sectional committee and the executive committee to which the question was appealed, that Elbra will be 20 on Jan. 7, 1929. B. C. Shulky, superintendent of the Olney schools, was one of the chief supporters of Cosby's claims here Thursday.

The Olney team, as the undefeated champions of the southern division of section 3, will play the Megargel team, undefeated in the northern division, at Olney on Thanksgiving day.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Diabetes

Question: Mrs. K. writes—"My brother has diabetes of several years' standing. He had the toe of his right foot amputated for diabetic gangrene. What is the best diet for him to use? His doctors have advised gluten bread and no potatoes or sugar, but he is allowed meat, eggs, coffee, saccharin, green vegetables, but no fruit. My sister was cured through following the directions you sent her for asthma and I do hope you will be able to do something for my brother."

Answer: I have sent you a special diet for your brother which you will see includes meat, eggs and green vegetables but no coffee, saccharin or any kind of starch or sugar foods. Gluten bread usually contains almost as much starch as wholewheat bread, and one who is in as serious a condition as your brother should not use even gluten bread.

Headaches.

Question: R. M. writes—"My sister a high school girl, uses lots of headache tablets. She complains of headaches, sleeplessness, and being easily tired. She is rather pale and underweight. Do you charge for answering these letters?"

Answer: If you will send me a large self-addressed stamped envelope I will be glad to send you some special articles I have written on the subject of headaches which may assist your sister in finding the cause of her trouble. There is no charge, whatever, for this service which is given to you as a service from this newspaper, but the information sent must be quite general, as I do not attempt to diagnosis cases by mail but try to help readers in as safe and sane a manner as possible through transferring to them a knowledge I have gained through my studies and also through close personal contact with patients in my own office practise.

By HELEN FORD

Helen Ford, star of Helen of Troy, N. Y., Peggy-Ann and Chee-Chee, is one of the leading young actresses in musical comedy.

HELEN FORD

"Why let the 18th amendment prohibit the telling of alcoholic stories?" Helen said. "We signed an armistice in 1918, but we're still telling war stories and seeing war movies. I think some of the most amusing stories ever created had to do with liquor drinking, as is the story of Deacons Smith and Jones, stanch pillars of the negro church.

"One day they were walking through a hay field on their way home from church. Suddenly Deacon Smith called out excitedly: 'What's dis I done foun' in his here haystack?'

"After a close scrutiny, Deacon Jones said, gravely: 'Looks ter me lak a jug of whisky!'

"Both deacons pondered, and presently Deacon Smith spoke, with all sincerity: 'Brother Jones, don' you allow we all better drink up dishere likker fes' some po' weak brudder fin' hit an' fall by de wayside?'

Coolidge's Message to Congress Is Completed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (UP)—President Coolidge's last scheduled message to congress was virtually completed in draft form today and only required polished phraseology before being sent to the printer. Mr. Coolidge is not expected to confine himself in this message to mere recommendation of legislative action.

Agricultural relief, Boulder dam, naval limitation, naval construction, the anti-war treaty and flood control appear assured of emphasis in the president's message. There will be the customary stress upon economy and Mr. Coolidge has indicated that the short session will be warned against undue expenditure lest there be a deficit on June 30, 1929.

Trust Co. Officials On Conspiracy Trial

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Nov. 22. (AP)—Four senior officers of the bankrupt Adair Realty & Trust company of Atlanta went on trial in federal court here today, to answer indictments which charged conspiracy to convert to their own and their company's use $2,875,000 bonds sold on hotel projects in Knoxville, Tenn., Birmingham, Ala., and Little Rock, Ark.

The men who went on trial were Frank Adair, president; Forrest Adair Sr., chairman of the board; Forrest Adair Jr., first vice president, and Evans A. Erwin, executive vice president of the Adair Realty and Trust company.

DIVIDEND CHECKS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 22.(UP)—Dividend checks will be mailed to depositors of 25 or 30 failed banks about Dec. 15, Charles Alexander, assistant state bank examiner, said today. No estimate of the amount to be distributed was made.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Nov. 22. (AP)—The cotton market was active and firm again today. A continuation of yesterday's buying movement sent prices into new high ground for the movement. January contracts selling up to 20.31, or 33 points net higher and 306 points above the low level touched on the decline last September. They closed at 20.26. The general market closed steady at net advances of 26 to 30 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 1 to 6 points on buying encouraged by the steady showing of Liverpool. Southern selling and realizing was absorbed, with the market showing net advances of 24 to 27 points before the end of the morning. The demand tapered off around the 20¼-cent level for winter or early spring months and there were reactions of 10 to 15 points from the best under realizing. The volume of business fell off quite markedly on this setback. No Southern selling pressure of consequence developed and prices firmed up again during the afternoon on a renewal of trade and commission house buying. Brokers with Wall street and Western connections were prominent on the buying side, and the trade was credited with fixing prices on considerable cotton during the day.

The highest prices of the day were reached in the late trading when December sold at 20.36 and May at 20.25, and the general list showed net gains of 33 to 38 points. The close was a few points off from the best under realizing.

Private cables reported trade calling and general buying in Liverpool and according to one of the reports reaching the trade here, Manchester is probably doing the best business it has had for the past few years.

Port receipts today 45,368. U. S. port stocks 2,203,568. Exports 53,573 making 3,279,309 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 22. (AP)—Cotton prices worked towards higher levels today in active trading. Trade and speculative demand was broader than it has been since the stock market started its rampage. January contracts sold up from an opening low of 19.32 to 19.65 and closed at 19.63, or 29 points higher for the day. The general list closed steady at net advances of 29 to 30 points.

With Liverpool cables relatively unfavorable the market opened easy at net losses of 1 to 2 points. There was a momentary period of hesitation after the start during which active positions lost a point or two additional but offerings were quickly absorbed by good trade and speculative buying which kept prices on the upgrade for most of the morning session. December sold up to 19.50 and March 19.67, or 25 to 28 points above the opening lows and 23 to 26 points over yesterday's close.

The demand appeared to be supplied around mid-session and early buyers took profits causing a recession of 7 to 10 points, but in the afternoon reports of a better spot demand at interior markets, particularly for exports, stimulated further buying and prices traded to new highs for the day. At the top the market showed recoveries of almost $2 a bale from the opening with December trading at 19.58, January 19.65 and March 19.77, or 33 to 38 points over the lows and 31 to 34 points above the previous close.

Trading continued active toward the end and although there was considerable buying enough offerings appeared to supply the demand and final prices were within 2 to 4 points of the best. December closed at 19.53 and March 19.73, or 29 to 30 points net higher.

Stocks Demonstrate Recuperative Ability As Issues Soar Rapidly

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Nov. 22. (US)—Stocks today exhibited remarkable recuperative ability.

The broadest and most spectacular advance of either the Coolidge or Hoover markets developed after a short period of uneasiness at the opening. No only were the recessions of Wednesday overcome but numerous stocks were carried to record heights. Average prices climbed over nine points to unprecedented levels.

More than a dozen issues scored gains of over 10 points each, under the leadership of Wright Aeronautical which soared 49 points to the highest price in its history. Never before have as many large-sized advances been witnessed in a single market session.

Particularly impressive was the fact that only a very small number of stocks failed to join the upward procession.

Brokers' Loans Gain

The only unfavorable development of the day was the $176,000,000 increase in brokers' loans. But this did not appear until after the close. Widely divergent views were expressed as to the new record total. A "staggering" expansion, with estimates as high as a quarter-billion, had been anticipated by some.

The increase reported was attributed in large part to the many new issues which have been listed on the stock exchange recently after having been carried only for cash in other markets. Nor did the total take into account the sharp recession of Wednesday. To offset the loans, in any event, the weekly federal reserve system's report was quite favorable.

Bills discounted declined over $57,000,000 while holdings of U. S. government securities were somewhat increased and the ratio of reserve improved from 67.4 per cent a week ago to 68.4 per cent the report indicated that fears of drastic federal reserve action were unfounded, the banking situation showing a decided tendency to right itself without artificial stimulation.

Wright Is Leader

Wright's sensational flight was a reflection of the small floating supply of the stock still available. Powerful financial interests have been absorbing the issue in the belief that it is destined to remain one of the leading factors in the aviation industry.

Earnings of the company this year probably will run about $9 a share, whereas next year, due to expanded plant facilities and larger demand, they are expected to approximate $20 a share. There is also a report that control of Wright is desired by a large automobile company.

Curtiss is sharing in the tremendous expansion in use of planes. Radio continued its advance as additional signs were disclosed that this corporation has probably a dozen or more different deals on, all of which will enlarge its scope of activities and its profits. Fantastic figures are named as the ultimate valuation of the stock. Next year will probably reveal large earning-power, which this far has been kept under cover by the extremely conservative accounting.

Victor Soars

Victor Talking Machine soared to a new record on realization that this company, too, will share in the Radio corporation development program. As a mater of fact, the two enterprises have been cooperating for years. It is likely that official announcement of even closer relationship between them will be made in the next few days.

Copper shares continued to reflect the optimism of the leading interests, Anaconda advancing several points as two of its subsidiaries, Greene-Cananea and Inspiration, voted favorable dividend action. Kennecott also was heavily taken, the buying being attributed to the most powerful banking-group which has selected this issue as the leading copper stock.

Shorts in the motor group were stampeded when Chrysler and Nash assumed leadership on heavy buying. Important developments are pending in Chrysler and people who have been closely identified with its every upward swing are again reported the largest buyers. Directors of Nash are expected to enlarge the dividend rate or declare an extra cash payment in the near future.

Motors Stationary

General Motors remained stationary for the day, reflecting the changes planned in some of its models. Railroad shares did not participate in the advance as wildly as the industrials, but the best of buying was noticeable in various rails. It was stated that the biggest and most active speculative group had selected Erie as an outstanding issue.

Good buying came into American Safety Razor on expectation that the company will shortly effect close affiliation with an important merchandising enterprise. This company is also planning to close a deal with a leading shaving-cream manufacturer which is expected to prove highly profitable.

The new system of omitting volume on the ticker received varying comment. One of the biggest speculators in the present market expressed himself as being highly pleased by this step. He declared that he expects the upswing to continue now under the new system until the ticker falls as far behind as it did under the old system.

Grain

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, Nov. 22. (AP)—Lively but transient upturns in wheat values today resulted from Argentine reports of crop damage by hot winds. Enlarged selling which came in particular from the Northwest proved to be fully an offset, together with corn market weakness that was occasioned chiefly by assertions of exporters backing out of corn purchases aggregating more than 1,000,000 bushels.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅝c lower, with corn ⅛c@⅜c off, oats unchanged, and provisions unchanged to 17c down.

Nervousness pervaded the wheat market, and was given emphasis by the fact that although Liverpool quotations were lower than due, foreigners were purchasing future deliveries here. Moreover, the action of the Chicago market was made more or less irregular through spread trading in which December wheat was bought and May sold. There was also considerable simultaneous purchasing of wheat futures against selling of corn.

Estimates of Australian wheat yield were larger. On the other hand, a good deal of notice was taken of talk in some quarters that wheat is likely to advance because of heavy consumer use owing to the relative low price of bread and the high price of meats. One suggestion was that domestic use of wheat this season might reach a total of 700,000,000 bushels.

Better weather for hastening the movement of the corn crop did much to ease the corn market, even aside from messages saying exporters were relinquishing contracts. An opposite influence, however, was figures indicating that shipments of feeder cattle into the corn belt this season had increased 21 per cent. Oats offerings were light, and both March and May oats showed a new high price record for the crop.

Provisions reflected a decline in the value of hogs.

Five-Year Record

The Florsheim Shoe company was formed about six years ago to take over a business organized in 1892. The concern makes men's shoes under the trademark "The Florsheim Shoes." Its output is distributed in the principal cities of the country through 9,000 dealers and 32 subsidiary companies which sell direct to the consumer through retail stores. The company owns three plants, all in Chicago, which have a combined capacity of between 11,000 and 12,000 pairs of shoes a day.

Gross profits have increased moderately in each of the last four years but little change has taken place in net income which amounted to $2,272,229 in 1927, $2,353,931 in 1926 and $2,367,066 in 1925. For the six months ended April 30, 1928, it was $1,116,662.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding following a change in capitalization early this year amounts to $7,250,000 in 6 per cent cumulative preferred shares of $100 par, 236,293 shares of class A no par common and 327,414 shares of class B no par common. All issues have one vote for each share held Class A stock in dividends and liquidation is entitled to twice the amount paid on class B. Class B is convertible into class A at the rate of two shares of B for one of A.

Dividends have been paid on the preferred since June 30, 1928. None has been paid on the class A or class B so far since the issue of those shares. On the old stock issues dividends were paid varying rates.

As of April 30, 1928, total current assets amounted to $9,956,310, current liabilities to $520,527 and net working capital to $2,435,785. Book value applicable to the common stocks amounted to $8.70 a share of class A and $4.38 a share on class B.

Phillips to Build Casinghead Plant

Special to The Record News.

ABILENE, Texas, Nov. 22—Phillips Petroleum company will start construction on a four unit casinghead gasoline plant in southwest Jones county within the next thirty days, according to information received here this week.

The new plant will cost at least $50,000 and likely more, it is said. Full details of the construction and location of the establishment have not been announced here. Gas from oil wells in the Noodle Creek, Tiner and Shaheen fields, all in southwest Jones county, will be used by the plant in making gasoline.

Jones county gas has a gasoline content of three gallons to the 1,000 cubic feet, oil men say.

Almost two years ago, soon after production was discovered at Noodle Creek, Phillips Petroleum company announced plans for building a gasoline plant in that area, but before the actual work started the plan was abandoned for the time being on account of the general depressed condition of the oil business.

ABILENE, Texas, Nov. 22.—Midwest Exploration company has, during the past week, acquired one-fourth of the royalty on a 1,600 acre block in eastern Fisher county on which Hucony Gas company and John H. Winnemiller corporation are drilling a wildcat test, the No. 1 Frank Maberry, located in the north part of the E. Bell survey No. 327.

In adidtion to buying the royalty on which no consideration was announced, Midwest purchased a lease on 215 acres offsetting the test now drilling to the south.

NIGHT CLUB SHOW RED HOT

Friedland "Out-Carrolls" Earl Carroll

(By The Record News Critic)

Anatole Friedland and his "Night Club Revue" are at the Majestic theater on the Keith-Orpheum-Interstate bill.

Earl Carroll would roll over, sit up and blink like an owl if he were here to see himself "out Carrolled" in the art of putting hilarity on the stage in night club fashion.

Wichita Falls Junior college boys won't study Friday night. They may "date," but they won't do anything very serious if any of them attended the Thursday performances, for the whole crew will be at the theater.

Hot, live, speedy, well done and especially for those who know their way about, the night club vaudeville at the Majestic is unusual and also is about the best Wichita Falls has seen this year.

As master of ceremonies, Anatole keeps up a running line of chatter with his company as it speeds around the stage to night club tunes. The stage itself is dressed up with tables, waiters and the customers come in.

The audience watches life at a night club as it watches the show.

The waiter, whom Anatole does not name, is dumb and good. He doesn't say a word. Mel Elwood does some good singing.

Girls, doggonem, for those who like them (and who doesn't) are here, there and everywhere in the show. Lucille Hays is good as a jazz toe dancer. Songs of original composition are presented.

Jack Waldron is billed for honors second to Anatole. He does a little of this and that and also sings. Others in the cast include: Leblanc and Ducharm, Al Jockers, Thelma Harris, Belle Davev, Miriam Heider, Muriel Harrison, Joy Findlay, Peggy Fay, Evelyn Kearney and Allan Sterling and Gus.

On the screen is "Phyllis of the Follies" with Alice Day and Matt Moore. A Hal Roach comedy and the Paramount newsreel complete the bill.

Duce's Paper Censored; He Congratulates Censor

ROME, Nov. 22 (UP) — Premier Mussolini tonight wired congratulations to the Milan prefect of police who placed the premier's own newspaper, Poplo d'Italia, under censorship rules. The censorship was imposed because the newspaper, which is edited by Arnoldo Mussolini, the premier's brother, published a sensational crime story such as had been ordered given only passing attention by the government. Arnldo Mussolini agreed that the censorship was just.

Baby Part of Cargo On Airmail Plane

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Nov. 22 (UP) — A seven-months-old baby was part of the regular air mail cargo from Buenaventura, Colombia, to Guayaquil today. The infant, with a tag tied to his arm, was carried as parcel post. The tag was marked "Perishable, Please Rush." It was laughing happily when postoffice officials handed it to its father through the regular postoffice parcel window.

◇ ◇ ◇

In cold weather, folks are apt to sit and talk or else just talk. They hunt a warm spot and start in talking about cold weather and they warm their hands over the radiator or stove. This time of the year they talk about shows of today and yesterday.

◇ ◇ ◇

And with that the argument is on. Possibly there is a difference, but a difference is all it is or ever can be for the different generations are not here to compare, and if they were here to compare the public couldn't agree on any basis of comparison.

◇ ◇ ◇

So, instead of looking back, here's a look ahead for a week at some of the stars and plays billed for Wichita Falls. You can think what you want about them and they can't put you in jail for thinking.

◇ ◇ ◇

Norma Talmadge is coming to the Strand next Friday in "The Woman Disputed." In the meantime the Strand will present Vilma Banky, a regular little vamp and Ronald Colman in another vitaphone picture, "Two Lovers."

◇ ◇ ◇

"Rio Rita," the greatest of Shubert's newer musical shows will be here Dec. 3, and it is, without dispute, the outstanding show that Wichita Falls has any chance of getting this year. "Rose Marie" and the "Vagabond King" may come along later but if they do, they will be older shows than many have seen. All eyes are now centered on the coming of "Rio Rita."

◇ ◇ ◇

Then there is Bob Custer in "Silent Trails," a new Western picture, and John Barrymore in "The Beloved Rogue." Bob Custer is at the Mission Sunday and Monday, while Barrymore struts his stuff Tuesday and Wednesday at the same place.

◇ ◇ ◇

The Majestic will present Syd Moorhouse and Alma Neilson on the vaudeville program next Thursday and Friday. Leatrice Joy will be on the same bill in the movies in "Man Made Woman." Mary Philbin in "Drums of Love" is coming to the Majestic Saturday immediately after the present vaudeville show closes.

◇ ◇ ◇

The Olympic will present Lillian Murry and Elmer Wright with their Zippity Zip company in musical comedy, and Jack Holt and Tom Mix will be featured movie stars in two of the week.

All in all, it looks like quite a galaxy of stars and shows for the theatrical stove league to chatter about. What say?

Officers of the amusement concern spent several days here last week in the interest of their local plans, and declared the equipment of the new fun center at Lake Wichita would provide unexcelled facilities for recreation for children and adults alike.

$2,000 GIVEN TO RED CROSS

Roll Call Receipts Expected To Go Higher

The actual counting of cash in the annual roll call of the Wichita Falls chapter of the American Red Cross got under way Thursday with a total of $2,000 being reported by Mrs. T. B. Smith, executive secretary of the organization.

Several hundred Wichita Falls men and women were at work Thursday, soliciting memberships in the cause of humanity.

"Few people have turned us down," Mrs. Smith said. "The work of the Red Cross is known. The great disasters have found large corps of trained workers on the ground with relief that saves lives and relieves suffering. The nearest large disaster in which the Red Cross has recently given major relief was the tornado in Oklahoma a few miles north of us a few months ago."

Reports from industrial groups, stores, refineries and other places where large numbers are employed continued to come in to the campaign headquarters in the Perkins-Snider building office of Walter S. Curlee.

Women were on the streets, in the bank and office building lobbies Thursday while men solicited in business houses. The workers were untiring in their efforts and reported to Mrs. Smith that they were almost invariably greeted by pleasant words as well as donations.

A much larger sum is expected to come in Friday as the supplies left at the larger plants are expected to be returned to the drive office, and other group subscriptions are due.

The drive will close Saturday, Mrs. Smith said, so that everything would be out of the way for the Community Chest drive.

MOTOR CAR DEMOLISHER SELLS PARTS FOR PROFIT

GLASGOW (AP)—The motor trade has developed a new industry—the motor car demolisher. The business which is spreading over the country, comprises the selling of vital parts of old cars which have been dismantled.

Many small firms are doing a good business in this department of the motor trade, and they make much more money on the vital parts than they give for the old cars. For many years this business was the monopoly of the professional car thief, but the vigilance of the police has given it over to the legitimate demolisher.

JUST TOO BIG

Huge Turnip Displayed Here Baffles Those Who See It

"They just don't make 'em that big."

Observers made this and other comments Thursday when G. W. Harlington, farmer living about a mile southeast of Allendale, came to Wichita Falls exhibiting a six-pound turnip.

The monster turnip, of the purple top variety, measured about 20 inches in diameter. It's toughness "in the flesh," was demonstrated when it did not burst when dropped to a hardwood floor, but, after being cooked, it makes a tender dish, the owner said.

Five of them will fill a bushel, Mr. Harlington said. On the quarter acre patch he has planted in the vegetable he expects to make more than 100 bushels.

Reunion Planned For Texas 'Exes'

Reception For Former Students Next Week

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 22.—Students at the University of Texas are planning a reception for ex-students of the university who attend the Longhorn-Aggie game in Austin Thanksgiving. In connection with the ex-students' reception, there will be a dance held for the "exes" and the invading Aggies from College Station. Preparations for the two-day reunion are being carried forward by student leaders.

Due to the increased interest in football with the chance of capturing the conference title, and the increased interest of the alumni in student affairs in the last few years, expectations of a general hegira of "exes" from all parts of the state are entertained.

Student officials and administrative officials hope to make this year a banner year for old students visiting their alma mater. Several student groups have signified their intention of holding special reunions at this time. The class of '27 especially is planning a "get-together" for the first time since graduation.

Data from the office of the Ex-Students' association shows that the attendance this year is likely to be a decided increase over former years. Letters have been sent to ex-students in all parts of the country, a large number of which have been answered.

Special music is planned for the ex-student reception Thursday night, with a receiving line of professors who have been in the university for the last 25 years, student officials, ex-student officials, and administration officers.

Alton Luckett of Austin and Thea Goldschmidt of San Antonio have charge of decoration and arrangement for both dance and reception. Members of Te-Waa-Hiss, girls' athletic organization, will decorate the gymnasium for the dance, using the colors of the two schools. Two orchestras will furnish music for the ball.

Alabama Football Slaying Steeps College Campuses in Tragedy

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 22. (INS)—The campuses of two local colleges were steeped in tragedy today, the result of a fatal climax to rivalry over their annual clash for Birmingham football supremacy.

Montes Freeman, Birmingham-Southern freshman tackle, was dead and O. H. Westbrook, Howard college junior, was held charged with the killing.

The shooting took place when a group of Birmingham students called on Westbrook last night in the drug store where he clerks, and announced their intention of shaving his head. Westbrook objected.

The rival students persisted, and Westbrook, after warning them, opened fire. Freeman dropped, and died in an ambulance which Westbrook called to take him to a hospital.

President John C. Dawson of Howard, and President Guy E. Snavely of Birmingham-Southern, refused to make statements regarding the tragedy until after an investigation has been made.

Fashion Parade Of Old South Given

HOUSTON, Nov. 22. (AP)—The 35th annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy reached its climax with the historical evening activities tonight in the city auditorium.

Standing out in a program filled with color and impressiveness was the fashion parade of 1860.

Delegates to the conclave resurrected from their cedar chests the tight fitting bodices, hoop skirts and lace trimmed pantalettes which had been the cherished possessions of their mothers or grandmothers.

They dusted off and donned these relics of bygone era and reproduced the South of ante-bellum days as they passed in review before the audience and danced Virginia reels and polka.

The evening festivities came after a morning so crowded with business that part of it had to be postponed until tomorrow.

Only two new officers were elected at the business session. They were Mrs. Rudolph Frederick Blankenburg, San Diego, Calif., second vice president general, and Miss Marian Sally, Orangeburg, S. C., hostorian general. The other officers, including Mrs. W. C. N. Merchant of Chatham, Va., president general, were reelected.

Four women were added to the select roll of honorary presidents which embraces less than 50 names. They were Mrs. Charles R. Hyde, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Mrs. J. C. Foster, Houston; Miss Annie Wheeler, Wheeler, Ala., and Mrs. Henry P. Field, Greenwich, Conn.
