Double-duty Deion

PITTSBURGH — Two-sport star Deion Sanders is used to double duty — but not in a single day. The pro football and baseball player jetted between Pittsburgh and Miami and back again on Sunday to make the feat possible. Sanders arrived at 4 a.m. after a National League Championship Series game the night before between his Atlanta Braves and the Pittsburgh Pirates. "He looked dead tired," said 17-year-old autograph hound Brian Grieper of Hollywood, Fla. "His eyes were almost shut." His football team, the Atlanta Falcons, played the Miami Dolphins. He was busy if unspectacular in the afternoon game, which the Falcons lost 21-17. He played defense, offense and returned kicks./1C

IBM issues warning

IBM has warned its workers and other companies that two chemicals widely used in manufacturing semiconductor chips — and in other industries — may significantly increase the risk of miscarriage. The computer maker acted after a study it commissioned by health researchers at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore found that among 30 women who worked with the chemicals at two IBM plants and then became pregnant, 10 had miscarriages — a 33.3 percent rate./5A

Clinton, Bush clash in bristling 3-way debate

From right, President Bush, Democratic Presidential Candidate Bill Clinton and Independent Candidate Ross Perot take the stage in St. Louis Sunday for the first of three planned debates.

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Bill Clinton and President Bush clashed over character and the economy Sunday night in a bristling three-way debate with Ross Perot. "I was opposed the war, but I love my country," Clinton said in reply to Bush's criticism of his anti-war activities in the Vietnam era.

PRESIDENTIAL '92 DEBATE ST. LOUIS

From taxes to crime to AIDS to foreign policy, the three men grappling for the White House outlined differing visions in a 90-minute nationally televised debate.

In his first major campaign appearance, Perot was a flamboyant participant, providing a series of one liners and offering himself as an outsider who can shake up the system.

Clinton said he was neither a trickle-down Republican nor a "tax and spend" Democrat. He said he represents hope for "real change" in a country beset by economic woes.

Turning to Bush, he said, "For 12 years you've had it your way, you've had your chance and it didn't work."

Bush answered, "Change for change sake isn't enough," and cast himself as the experienced hand who can be trusted in the Oval Office no matter what issues or crises develop.

Perot countered, "We do have to have

Attacks come quickly, but no surprises

By Walter R. Mears

■ Analysis

ST. LOUIS — The confrontation came quickly Sunday night, the breakthroughs not at all, in a standoff debate that serves Bill Clinton's campaign strategy: protect the lead, stick to the message and avoid surprises.

President Bush delivered no surprises and no major disclosures.

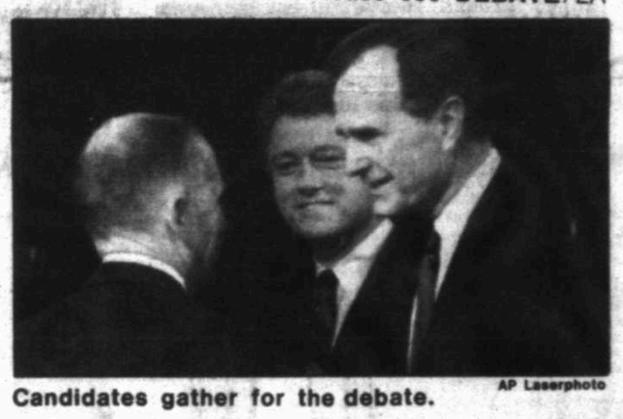

Two more debates are to be held in the three-plus weeks remaining in the campaign for the White House — and a tie goes to the front-runner.

That's Clinton.

The debates are the president's last best opening to change the odds and shake up the race. The candidates will have no audiences to match the 70 million or so estimated to watch the TV debates.

But the leadoff debate delivered nothing to produce the shakeup the Bush ticket needs. It was a debate of review and rebuttal, no major initiatives, no major blunders, no new look.

'Great Navigator' Columbus falls under revisionist siege

By Sam Dillon
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Even at Christopher Columbus High School in the Bronx, where the choir still sings the Italian national anthem at gatherings, the Great Navigator is under revisionist siege.

Though Columbus's bust still gazes proudly from a school pedestal, in its classrooms he is a tarnished figure who blundered into the New World and made a hash of its exploration. Compared with that at many schools, though, the treatment is fairly generous.

On the 500th anniversary of his landfall in the New World, students across the nation are learning everything from skepticism to contempt for the explorer's exploits. At a Brooklyn high school last week, a 17-year-old debater pilloried Columbus

Archaeologists discover ancient animal remains in Lubbock landfill

LUBBOCK (AP) — Archaeologists say preliminary digs in Lubbock's landfill have revealed animal remains and evidence of humans living there between 8,000 and 10,000 years ago.

David Brown, an archaeologist for Austin-based Hicks & Co., said experts are now conducting a laboratory analysis of the findings.

"The field work basically confirmed our suspicion that it was a significant archaeological site," Brown said. "We know that people were there. What we have is bison bones, bones from small mammals and debris from stone tool manufacture.

"What we don't know is how all these things interrelated."

Brown said the early humans who left the debris could be the same group documented as inhabiting the Lubbock Lake Landmark site as far back as 12,000 years ago. The landmark was declared a state historical park in October 1990.

"We don't even know for sure what their range in the Lubbock area would have been," Brown said. "Whether there was a resident band in the Lubbock area, or whether they just wandered around, we

Nearly 1 million Texas children face abuse, survey says

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Nearly 1 million Texas children are at risk of growing up in homes where abuse is common, according to estimates made by a Sam Houston State University survey.

The Sam Houston survey of 941 Texans, when applied to the state population, shows that child abuse has nearly doubled in Texas from 1978 and 1991.

In 1978, only 7.7 percent of parents surveyed by Sam Houston said at least one child in their family had been mistreated. In 1991, 16 percent of the parents surveyed reported at least one child had been mistreated.

Results from the survey, done in conjunction with the Children's Trust Fund of Texas, were published in the Houston Chronicle on Sunday.

Researchers did not define child abuse or neglect in the 32-page questionnaires distributed to the Texans surveyed, who were selected randomly from a list of licensed drivers in the state.

Instead, they gave survey participants a list of behaviors in four categories — neglect and physical, sexual and emotional abuse — and asked them to decide which constituted abuse.

Using the answers from those surveyed, researchers also estimated as many as 2.5 million adult Texans suffered some form of abuse when they were youngsters.

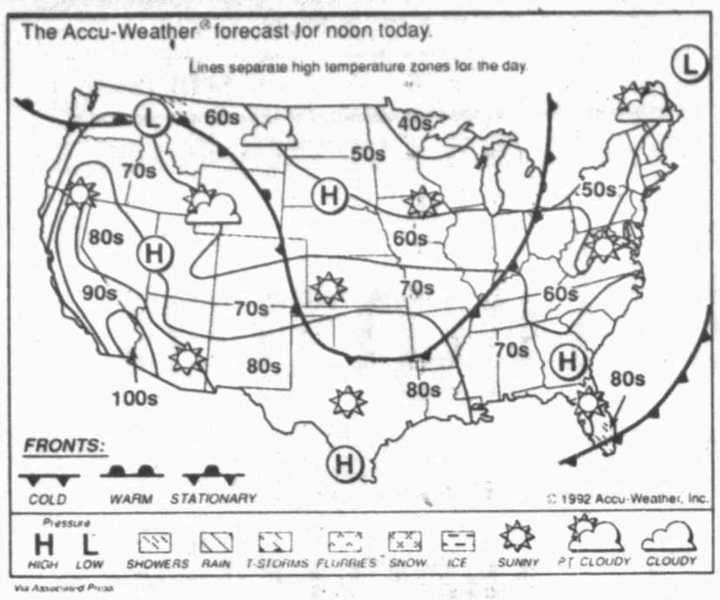

Other major findings included:

■ Emotional abuse showed the biggest increase, with 11.1 percent of adults saying they had children who had been locked in a closet, cursed, forced to sit in a corner or otherwise emotionally abused. Incidents of sexual abuse also increased, from 1.1 percent in 1978 to 5.3 percent last year.

■ Nearly 19 percent of the adults said they had been victims of abuse or neglect as children, compared with 14 percent in 1978.

"Everyone has been saying that child abuse was increasing," said survey director Raymond H.C. Teske Jr., a Sam Houston State criminal justice professor. "But we were surprised to see how much it had increased. We never expected it had doubled."

DEBATE: Candidates outline differing visions

change," saying that the first priority should be to rebuild the nation's job base and offering his experience as a hard-charging business leader.

The debate kicked off a climactic nine-day period in the campaign for the White House and the stakes were high, especially for Bush who trailed Clinton in the national polls, and for Perot, who had not yet carved a significant place for himself in the race.

There were no obvious gaffes or breakthroughs in the debate played out before an audience estimated in advance at 70 million, and each side rushed afterward to put a best face forward. Clinton's running mate, Sen. Al Gore, quipped that Bush had finished "fourth," behind Clinton, Perot and moderator Jim Lehrer. White House chief of staff James A. Baker III said the president had made "a mature presentation."

Bush bluntly criticized Clinton in the debate's opening moments for anti-war activities while studying overseas at Oxford University during the Vietnam war. Bush held out his service during World War II in contrast.

Clinton responded directly to Bush, in strong, personal remarks. "When Joe McCarthy went around this country attacking people's patriotism, he was wrong," Clinton said. "Your father (Sen. Prescott Bush) was right to stand up to Joe McCarthy."

"You were wrong to attack my patriotism. I was opposed the war but I love my country."

Bush replied that he was not attacking Clinton's patriotism, but his character and judgment.

There were relatively few light moments during the evening, a reflection of the political stakes involved. Perot provided one, when he said "We've got to collect the taxes" to solve the nation's problems. "If there's a fairer way, I'm all ears," said the man whose ears have been immortalized by the nation's newspaper cartoonists.

Clinton spoke several times in personal terms. Answering a question about family values, he noted with a smile that debate night fell on his 17th anniversary. He thanked his wife Hillary and their daughter, Chelsea, for attending.

In his closing statement, Perot touched on his outsider's candidacy. "The government has lost touch with the people. We've got to change the system," he said.

Clinton said, "I offer a new direction, invest in American jobs, American education, control health care costs, bring this country together again."

Bush had the last word, asking the voters for "four more years." He recalled the collapse of Communism and other dramatic world events of the past four years, and promised to devote his attention to domestic issues.

A five-member panel of judges who watched the debate awarded Clinton a narrow victory, with Bush a clear third behind Perot.

"Perot followed Harry Truman's admonition and gave them hell while Bush and Clinton simply seemed to give them heck," said James Unger, chairman of a five-member team that judged the debate for The Associated Press.

Off-stage dispute precedes event

By Maureen Dowd
N.Y. Times News Service

CLAYTON, Mo. — When great things are at stake, small things count.

The three presidential candidates may have discussed serious matters on stage at Washington University, but off stage, the level of discourse was deeply, awesomely petty.

Up until shortly before they walked out to their lecterns, members of the Bush camp were still arguing about how the president and his rivals should be introduced.

Since there were three candidates and two doors, the organizers wanted the candidates to be prepositioned on stage before the show started. But the Bush camp wanted the president to be announced and walk in from the wings while the cameras were rolling and after his two challengers were in place.

Finally, a coin was flipped. Bill Clinton, who was more worried about a hoarse voice than a grand entrance, won. The debate began with the three candidates already in place.

In Ross Perot's first debate, his big problem seemed to be that he did not know what to do with his hands. He had not, after all, had years of coaching from an expert like Roger Ailes in the fine art of hand gestures, as George Bush had.

In the beginning, he tried clasping his hands behind his back, like a naval man at ease. By mid-debate, he found he could get laughs from the crowd by waving his arms in a wild windmill motion.

When he made a joke about his plan to raise the gas tax — "If there's a fairer way, I'm all ears" — he was afraid the audience would not get the joke, so he put his hands up near the protruding pair, as though to say, "See, here are my big ears, folks; it's a joke."

But, for the most part, Perot stood behind his lectern with his right hand planted firmly and saucily on his hip, in the manner of another wealthy screen figure who had a way with one-liners: Mae West.

Judging by the applause and laughs in the hall, Perot was the clear winner for sheer entertainment value.

The audience loved his Washington-bashing. They laughed when he said that, if he battled the behometh of the bureaucracy, first off, "everyone in Washington would faint because they have never seen anything happen in that town."

And he trashed the "alligator-shoe crowd" of lobbyists and influence peddlers, promising that if he took over they "would wind up in the Smithsonian."

ATTACKS: Standoff serves Clinton's strategy

(From 1A)

The drama came at the outset when Bush and Clinton clashed over patriotism and the Democrat's role in anti-Vietnam War protests in London more than two decades ago. Beyond that, the 90-minute debate was essentially a summation of positions Bush, Clinton and independent Ross Perot have been describing and discussing all season.

As the third man, Perot bristled in both directions, saying establishment candidates won't do the job he would. But his harshest judgments were of Bush, simply because the president has been in charge.

They faced each other across a red carpeted stage, from three lookalike lecterns, in a Washington University basketball arena converted to a blue-curtained television theater.

Almost at the start, the most angrily argued question of the week was up for debate, the character issue Bush has been trying to use against Clinton, pointing to his involvement in anti-war protests as a student in London.

"I said something the other day where I was accused of being like Joe McCarthy because ... I think it's wrong to demonstrate against your own country or organize demonstrations against your own country on foreign soil," Bush said, repeating the charge he raised Wednesday night in a television interview. "It's not a question of patriotism, it's a question of character and judgment."

But said he also questioned whether a commander in chief could afford to have an anti-war role on his record. He said such a president would face the risk that when he made a decision to send Americans to combat he could have "some kid jump up and say, well, I'm not going to go, the commander in chief was organizing demonstrations halfway around the world during another era."

Repeating that accusation clearly was one Bush objective in the debate. Underscoring it, his campaign has just produced a new TV ad questioning Clinton's accounts of his Vietnam draft avoidance.

Debater Clinton was braced and ready.

He said that when Sen. Joseph McCarthy attacked people's patriotism, Sen. Prescott Bush of Connecticut, the president's father, stood up to him.

"Your father was right. ... You were wrong to attack my patriotism. I was opposed to the war but I love my country," Clinton said.

That attack-and-defend debate sequence probably amounted to a standoff too.

Beyond that, the debate fare was basically a repetition of what the candidates have been saying about their own policies and about each other in their campaign speeches and ads. Bush had said he wanted people to get an unfiltered account of his programs and policies. He got one. His problem is that since midsummer, Clinton has led in the public opinion polls, and the president's support in those surveys seldom has edged past the 40 percent point.

"Tonight I would say to the president, Mr. Bush, for 12 years you've had it your way, you've had your chance and it didn't work," Clinton said. "It's time to change."

"Change for change's sake isn't enough," Bush countered.

The president said he could produce constructive change in a second term.

TRC: State political battle turns into morality play apologized for falsifying her resume by claiming a college degree she never earned.

(From 1A)

"I now realize that I have been in a hurry all my life," she said when she resigned. "In my haste, I was reckless."

Though Ms. Guerrero continues to seek a full term on the railroad commission in the November election, the episode has clearly wounded her career. She is now the subject of more jokes than adulation. And her admissions have added yet another weird wrinkle to this year's presidential election.

Once expected to help Gov. Bill Clinton in Texas by drawing Mexican-Americans and women to the polls, she is now considered likely to disappoint the Democrats.

Beyond that, she has come to symbolize the promise and peril that come as political leaders emerge among a group of people once excluded from the political process.

Elected to the Texas House of Representatives in 1984, Ms. Guerrero dazzled the inbred political world of Austin with a hard-nosed style and a talent for brokering compromises.

In 1990, Gov. Ann Richards named Ms. Guerrero to fill an unexpired term as chairwoman of the Railroad Commission, which regulates the oil and transportation industries.

It was Mrs. Richards's first appointment as governor. The agency had never had a female or Hispanic head, and rarely did anyone accomplish so much there in so short a time.

On matters like oil-field cleanup Texas emerged as a pioneer, and Ms. Guerrero forged policies by obliging all sides to concede something. As a result, environmentalists and the oil industry, wildcatters and big companies all supported her even though they all complained about her. She seemed certain to win a full term on the commission in the Nov. 3 election.

Throughout her rise to power Ms. Guerrero routinely identified herself as a college graduate with a degree from the University of Texas. Some official biographies said she belonged to Phi Beta Kappa. In commencement speeches she even made sentimental remarks about her own college graduation day.

None of this was true or even close to it.

In mid-September spurred by a tip from Karl Rove, a Republican political consultant working for her opponent, reporters asked Ms. Guerrero about her college record. At first she said that she had always presumed that she had graduated but was stunned to discover she had been just a few credits short.

Then she conceded she had not been in Phi Beta Kappa. Then she released a transcript that showed she was a full semester short of graduating and had failed five courses.

Twice she failed a required course in her major, broadcast journalism, and she had even failed courses on Mexican-American history and one on the Texas Legislature.

Finally on Sept. 24 she tearfully resigned from the railroad commission and in the next breath defiantly announced that she would still seek election.

"I understand your anger," she said in her final confession. "Now I hope to win back your trust."

For a week she repeated her apology in a television commercial shown around the state. But contrition has its limits: she has now moved on to commercials assailing her Republican opponent, Barry Williamson.

"Everyone knows everything there is to know about me, but they don't know anything about my opponent," she said in an interview. "Well, I've just bought a million dollars of TV time so they can find out. Now we're into good old Texas politics."

But the accusations and Ms. Guerrero's initial hedging remain such a preoccupation for many voters and politicians that this is still far from an ordinary race. "I hear people talking about Lena in elevators, at the doughnut shop, at the gas station," said State Representative Steven D. Wolens, a Dallas Democrat. "This is not some complicated financial scandal. It is the kind of thing everybody can understand and digest. So the worst of it is that people aren't just talking, they're making jokes about her."

COLUMBUS: Schools take hard look at explorer

as a pitiful fraud who cheated his sailors and lied about his discoveries.

Fourth-grade students at a private school in Greenwich Village rehearsed a play mocking Columbus as a bewildered fool obsessed by gold. In Scarsdale, N.Y., a jury of seventh-grade students voted 4-1 to declare Columbus a villain after a mock trial.

One history book popular this year in some area high schools portrays Columbus as a Renaissance Darth Vader who ushered in five centuries of imperialism by enslaving, raping and butchering the native Caribs who greeted his 1492 voyage.

"With Columbus, revisionism has carried the day," said Gilbert Sewall, director of the American Textbook Council, a New York-based group that reviews educational curricula. "Columbus has undergone what is perhaps the most dramatic reworking of any major historical figure in memory."

The assault on Columbus began in the 1970s, Sewall said, with new scholarship partly motivated by mounting interest in multicultural thinking. The debate both inside and outside schools has accelerated in the years leading up to the quincentenary; on Friday, a major revisionist Columbus film, "1492: Conquest of Paradise," opened in New York.

Today, all of America's leading high school history texts give the explorer's many failings equal billing with his accomplishments, Sewall said.

The quincentenary attacks have ignited a reaction from some indignant Columbian loyalists. One of the most vocal is William E. Simon, the former Treasury Secretary, who is scheduled to deliver a speech Monday at Adelphi University in Queens County. The speech is billed as a counter to the "Columbus bashing in the news today."

"The arrival of this glorious anniversary in the greatest democracy in the history of the world finds Columbus under siege and America divided," Simon said in an advance text of the speech.

According to the revisionists, Columbus "was a villain, a kind of seagoing Genghis Khan," Simon said in the speech. But "Columbus was above all a man of deep faith. ... He changed the fate of the whole world forever. And he changed it for the better."

Adelphi's president, Peter Diamandopoulos, who invited Simon to deliver the address, said that Columbus remains "the hero of all heroes," despite his failings.

The loyalists appear to be losing ground, however. Tonya Frichner, an Onandaga Indian lawyer who addressed 750 elementary and high school students Friday at Aaron Davis Hall in Harlem about Columbus's often brutal treatment of Indians, said she had been encouraged by the acceptance she found for her critical views during months of lecturing.

"There's still much to be done, but people have come around — more than I had hoped," Ms. Frichner said in an interview.

don't know.

"That's why we feel like this site is important — you have so many questions to ask and such a blank slate to start with."

Hicks & Co. was hired by the city to excavate a portion of the landfill after bison bones were found in a preliminary archaeology study needed for a state expansion permit.

The company is scheduled to complete its laboratory work in February, at which time officials will decide if the site should be an archaeological landmark. That would mean closing an acre of the city landfill.

Brown said archaeologists still must determine whether the artifacts represent the location of an intact gathering place or whether they were washed there.

He said the findings were buried 30 feet underground near sediment that appears to be a former riverbank.

"We suspect that it was a little bit marshy there, and, if that is the case, the deposits might have represented a kill site rather than a camp site," he said.

■ China protests U.S. policy on Hong Kong

BEIJING — The Foreign Ministry summoned the U.S. ambassador to protest Washington's support for Hong Kong autonomy after the British colony reverts to Chinese rule in 1997, an official report said Sunday.

Vice Foreign Minister Liu Huaqiu summoned Ambassador Stapleton Roy on Friday afternoon to lodge a protest against a new U.S. law on policy toward Hong Kong, embassy spokeswoman Lorraine Toly said.

She declined to give details of the meeting.

President Bush signed the law last Monday after it was passed by both houses of the U.S. Congress. It says that after 1997, the United States will treat Hong Kong as a non-sovereign entity distinct from China. The law requires the secretary of state to report to Congress on all developments in Hong Kong affecting U.S. interests.

■ Spassky, Fischer play to draw in game

BELGRADE — Boris Spassky and Bobby Fischer slogged to a draw Sunday in Game 18 of their exhibition chess match in Belgrade. The score stays the same: Fischer 7, Spassky 3. In this series with a $5 million purse, draws do not count. Three more victories would give Fischer the winner's share of $3.35 million.

Just as in Games 4, 6 and 14, when Fischer accepted the Queen's Gambit, Spassky selected the stodgy, endgame-producing 7 dc,Qd1 8 Rd1. That made sense in Game 14 because Fischer, showing the effects of his long layoff from chess, had thrown away Game 4 and botched Game 6, which he had been lucky to draw.

■ U.N. team heads for Iraq, looks for Scuds

MANAMA, Bahrain — U.N. weapons experts bound for Iraq will look at previously uninspected sites for up to 200 Scud missiles that intelligence sources believe may still be hidden, the team leader said Sunday.

Iraq had unsuccessfully appealed to the United Nations to delay the two-week inspection until after U.S. elections in November, arguing that Washington might try to provoke a confrontation to help President Bush.

The 50-member team will be the largest inspections mission yet. It is seen as a test of Iraq's assurances of renewed cooperation following a standoff with weapons inspectors in August.

Fighting in Angola, U.N. team arrives

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — Heavy fighting broke out Sunday in downtown Luanda between police and rebels, and officers stormed a hotel where 12 policemen were being held hostage.

It appeared that the rebels retained control of the hotel, however. About 20 foreign journalists, including an American, were trapped inside during the fighting, but later left the hotel.

Three rebels were reported injured.

The fighting began just hours after a U.N. team arrived to seek a solution to the country's post-election crisis. The rebels say the Sept. 29-30 balloting was fraudulent, and many people fear Angola's 16-year civil war will resume.

The elections were held as part of a 1991 plan that ended the war between the ruling party of President Eduardo dos Santos and the rebels' group, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola.

Dos Santos defeated rebel leader Jonas Savimbi in the election, according to partial returns.

On Sunday the area near the hotel used by the rebels was rocked by a bomb blast.

Anti-riot police then stormed the building, apparently in an attempt to free their colleagues, and rebel guards and police exchanged gunfire, rebel radio said.

Luis Costa Ribas, a Voice of America reporter, said from the scene that at least three rebels were injured, one seriously.

About 20 journalists, including American Sunni Khalid of National Public Radio, had gone to the hotel to interview the captured policemen. They were temporarily caught inside during the firefight.

Costa Ribas said rebel Gen. Renato Campos and police Cmdr. Gaspar da Silva were meeting in the hotel to resolve the standoff.

The rebels appeared to remain in control of the hotel, their red-and-green banner flying from an upper-floor window. But heavily armed police in navy blue uniforms swarmed the downtown area.

State radio broadcast an appeal from Luanda police headquarters appealing for calm, and government officials told citizens to stay in their homes.

Shevardnadze expects win in Georgia election

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Former Soviet Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze was set to win Georgia's highest post Sunday in parliamentary elections in the tiny strife-torn land.

Shevardnadze, running unopposed for speaker of the parliament, cast his ballot in the capital. Surrounded by about 10 body guards, he spent 15 minutes filling out the ballot.

"The turnout in Tbilisi is quite high," Shevardnadze said as he left the booth. "Thank you for your support."

A crowd surrounded the balloting station, and many people applauded as he appeared.

The elections are seen as a referendum on Shevardnadze's stewardship of the ruling four-man State Council, which he has headed since returning to his native land last March after a civil war that drove popularly elected President Zviad Gamsakhurdia into exile. Gamsakhurdia was regarded in Georgia and the West as a dictator who fueled ethnic unrest, but his violent ouster left Georgia without a constitutional government.

Georgian police reported no incidents at balloting stations in the rest of Georgia by midmorning.

Bosnian leaders pull out of talks

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian military leaders said Sunday they would pull out of U.N.-backed talks on ending the siege of Sarajevo because Serb rebels were preventing crews from restoring water and power to the city.

Intense fighting was reported overnight around the beleaguered Bosnian capital, and on Sunday government troops pounded an arc of land linking rebel Serb territories in the north.

But for the first time since the U.N. Security Council banned military flights over the former Yugoslav republic last week, there were no reports of Serb air raids on government-held cities.

Military officials of the Muslim-led Bosnian government, Bosnian Croats and insurgent Bosnian Serbs had agreed to meet in Sarajevo on Monday to discuss the section-by-section demilitarization of the city.

The meeting was to have been the first tripartite talks since June, and was viewed as a last-ditch effort to end fighting in the Bosnian capital before the arrival of brutal winter weather.

In Geneva, U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard said he had not heard that the Bosnians would stay away from the talks.

Columbus deserves credit for contribution

Five hundred years ago today, if you go by the Old Style calendar, an Italian navigator named Christopher Columbus landed his three sailing ships at Fernandez Bay on San Salvador in the Bahamas and took possession of a New World for Spain. It was Oct. 12, 1492.

That singular event is celebrated — and castigated — today by groups and individuals throughout the United States and elsewhere. Whether you are celebrating or castigating likely depends on whether your ancestors were standing in Europe, from which Columbus sailed, or with native tribes that watched him walk ashore. Or whether you subscribe to the evidence used to assert that Columbus really was not the first "discoverer" of America, but merely was the best known of this nation's discoverers.

Regardless of the campaign waged to discredit the Italian as the discoverer of America, few can deny his accomplishments as a navigator or the fact that he was a great seaman. And they cannot deny that his four voyages to the New World opened the way for other voyages by other seamen, or that he was instrumental in opening the Western Hemisphere to Christianity and world trade.

In this day when the attentions of many are directed toward rewriting our history to suit their personal agendas, Christopher Columbus should still be accorded his well deserved place in history as a great man and great sailor.

His discovery of America was critical to the development of our Western civilization and will always be recognized as one of history's most important events. It led to lasting contacts between Europe and America and prompted the great western migration.

Christopher Columbus deserves due credit for that marvelous accomplishment.

FDA had Sen. Dan Quayle seeing red

WASHINGTON — On the surface, it doesn't seem like the degree of redness in maraschino cherries in canned fruit cocktails could vie for the attention of a U.S. senator.

Anderson

But in 1988, then-Sen. Dan Quayle was upset that cherries, cake frostings, cough drops and the lip sticks of tomorrow might lose their fire-engine red glow, if the Food and Drug Administration got its way.

Quayle wrote the head of the FDA on April 29, 1988, defending Red Dye No. 3. — a coloring agent for foods, cosmetics and pharmaceuticals that had been linked to cancer in laboratory studies of rats.

"I am very concerned that a ban on this important coloring agent could be economically damaging for the food and pharmaceutical businesses in my state," Quayle wrote. He noted that it is "especially important to candy and baked goods business" because it "imports a unique pink shade that cannot be achieved with other approved color additives." Quayle said it was also "crucial for drug identification ... often only minor shade differences are used to distinguish one drug from another."

Ironically, it was the FDA under the Bush/Quayle administration that decided in January 1990 to finally ban the use of Red Dye No. 3 after nearly a decade of controversy and tests.

"The actual risk posed by Red No. 3 is extremely small," said Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan, at the time. "However, federal law in this area is clear. There have been laboratory studies which showed that very high doses of Red No. 3, administered directly in the diet, caused cancer in rats."

Though no one accuses Quayle of exerting improper influence, a review of his correspondence while in the U.S. Senate shows that this wasn't the first time he went to bat for the big pharmaceutical and drug companies that dot Indiana — and have been major contributors to his state and national political campaigns. Quayle, in turn, has long advanced an agenda in Congress, as well as in the executive branch, which has shown a clear tilt toward these industries and away from consumers, according to his critics.

Meanwhile, in some of Quayle's most vitriolic attacks on the Clinton/Gore ticket, he has accused them of toadying to trial lawyers, who have often battled in court against the drug and chemical industries.

Quayle collected more than $54,000 in contributions from chemical interests during his 1980 Senate campaign, and about $11,000 in honorarium from some pharmaceutical houses while in Congress. He made appearances at $2,000 a pop before Pfizer, Merck & Co., Bristol-Myers, Inc. and a unit of G.D. Searle & Co. Bush/Quayle and the Republican National Committee received more than $185,000 from the top-grossing U.S. pharmaceutical companies and executives from 1987 to 1991, according to Public Citizen's Congress Watch.

In a controversy over a second suspected carcinogen, Quayle wrote then-Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Lee Thomas in June 1987 when the agency was reviewing a key chemical used in the dry-cleaning process. Quayle weighed in on perchloroethylene, or Perc, whether it should be upgraded from a "possible carcinogen" to a "probable carcinogen":

"A reclassification of perchloroethylene as a 'probable carcinogen' would almost certainly lead to state and federal regulatory efforts that would require dry cleaners to install costly control technologies. I have received numerous letters from dry cleaners from around my home state of Indiana stating that their small businesses would not survive such requirements."

Quayle warned that any action "would have serious consequences for so many small businesses across the country," and noted that an EPA science advisory board thought that more research was required. Quayle had joined one of the most intense lobbying efforts ever on Capitol Hill involving a chemical under EPA review.

However, the EPA announced regulations reducing emissions of Perc from large dry-cleaning facilities. Last summer, an Italian researcher found that people who work in dry cleaners may be at risk of kidney failure because of exposure to the chemical.

OTHER VIEWS

Washington needs lesson

Former Washington Mayor Marion Barry's recent re-election to the District of Columbia City Council, four months after he got out of prison for a drug conviction, set off rancorous debate recently before a congressional vote on the district's 1993 federal appropriations.

Federal spenders should start objecting to D.C. spending for more reasons than Barry's inflated stipend or abortion funding — but they won't. After all, the district is their home away from home, and nothing is too good for Congress' municipal government.

For years many D.C. residents have lobbied for statehood. The question — as dependent as they are on Uncle Sam, and as richly fed as they are by him — is why?

If they got off the federal tank, they might have to balance a budget like San Antonio and every other city must.

— San Antonio Express-News

Tragedy must not be repeated

As concerns mount about Gulf War veterans stricken with the mysterious illness related to the bite of a sand fly, the questions about the ailment outnumber the answers.

But one thing that is known is that the military hasn't had a stellar record in the last couple of decades on solving veterans' health problems related to conditions of their active duty.

As we entered the Gulf War, vows were made that we would not repeat the mistakes of the Vietnam War. Those promises should be recalled now so that we do not let history repeat itself and allow an Agent Orange saga to happen again.

— Austin American-Statesman

CHARLEY REESE

Columbus shows both triumph, tragedy

I don't blame any Indian for not wishing to celebrate the voyages of Christopher Columbus. On the other hand, no Indian should blame a non-Indian for celebrating them.

Reese

After all, to put the matter bluntly, the Indian's loss was the European's gain.

Those Americans of European descent who, while enjoying the fruits of conquest, profess to weep bitter tears of grief and regret on behalf of lost Indian paradises are either hypocrites or nut cases or both.

The past cannot be undone and no one in the present is responsible for it. If Columbus had not come, another European would have. Since Europe in 1600 was technologically far advanced over the Indian civilizations, the outcome was inevitable.

Furthermore those Americans who get their history lessons from television shows and movies do not seem to realize that the mass migration of Europeans into the Western Hemisphere was not a unique event. There have been a number of mass migrations of people in recorded history and in every case the indigenous people were overwhelmed. There may be more in the future. When a great herd of people start to move and the herd is large enough, they can't be stopped.

The wise old Sioux chief, Sitting Bull, who toured a year with Buffalo Bill's show, is said to have remarked that he wished he had had the opportunity to travel when he was younger. If he had, he said, he would never have advised his people to fight because clearly there were just too many whites to kill them all.

He was right. It didn't matter what the Indians did or didn't do. Nothing they could have done would have saved them from the human tidal wave coming out of the east. Every triumph also involves a tragedy. The triumph of the Europeans was the tragedy of the Indians.

But it's stupid to regret the past or to spend too much time mulling it over. It can't be undone. Modern people, especially Americans, like to think of themselves as masters of their fate and captains of their soul, to borrow words from the poet, but that is not the case.

Human beings are born in a time and place not of their choice. Our lives are shaped by events far beyond our control. Just where and when one is born make a heck of a difference in terms of what kind of life one has. Each of us is dealt a hand of cards by God. We have some leeway in how we play the hand, but it's a game of stud and we can't discard it or get new cards.

From this we should learn compassion. It is unjust to judge people of the past by today's standards and knowledge, the same as it to judge people in one land by the standards of another. Someone pointed out once that history is lived forward but written backwards. Nobody alive today can truly understand how it was not to know the future in 1492.

I have lived long enough to know that most futurists are full of beans, that hardly anything turns out the way people expect it to. Columbus's voyages and life certainly did not turn out as he had planned. He found new lands, but not the lands he was seeking. He found temporary glory, but also a heap of trouble. He was a complex man full of virtues and vices.

He deserves to be admired for his skill as a sailor, for his courage, for his tenacity, and for his accomplishments. There is no need to dwell on his vices, for they were commonplace, no different than the vices of anyone else. It was his accomplishments as a sailor and navigator that were unusual and remarkable.

They were then and are now worth celebrating.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Oct. 12, the 286th day of 1992. There are 80 days left in the year. This is Columbus Day in the United States, as well as Thanksgiving Day in Canada.

Today's highlight in history:

Five hundred years ago, on Oct. 12, 1492 (Old Style calendar; Oct. 21 New Style), Christopher Columbus arrived with his expedition in the present-day Bahamas.

On this date:

In 1861, the Confederate ironclad Manassas attacked the northern ship Richmond on the Mississippi River.

In 1870, Gen. Robert E. Lee, the Confederate military commander, died in Lexington, Va., at age 63.

In 1892, 100 years ago, the original version of the Pledge of Allegiance was first recited in public schools to celebrate the 400th anniversary of Columbus' landing.

In 1915, English nurse Edith Cavell was executed by the Germans in occupied Belgium during World War I.

In 1915, in a speech in New York, former President Theodore Roosevelt criticized U.S. citizens who identified themselves by dual nationalities, saying, "There is no room in this country for 'hyphenated Americanism.'"

In 1942, 50 years ago, in one of his so-called "fireside chats" on radio, President Franklin D. Roosevelt recommended the drafting of 18- and 19-year-old men.

In 1942, U.S. Attorney General Francis Biddle announced in New York that Italian nationals living in the United States would no longer be considered enemy aliens.

In 1960, Soviet premier Nikita Khrushchev disrupted a U.N. General Assembly session by pounding his desk with a shoe during a dispute.

In 1973, President Nixon nominated House Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan to succeed Spiro T. Agnew as vice president.

Ten years ago: Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki unexpectedly announced he was resigning after two years in office.

One year ago: Testifying for a second day on sexual harassment charges leveled by law professor Anita Hill, Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas told the Senate Judiciary Committee he'd "rather die than withdraw," and repeated his denial of Hill's charges.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Television turns into vast garbage dump

Last week, I was flipping through the paper and I noticed a headline that said, "Hemingway to Bare All on 'Civil Wars' Episode."

Hemingway? Ernest? I thought he was dead.

Then, I read the article under the headline, which explained it was Mariel Hemingway, the actress, who would soon appear in a nude scene on an ABC program called "Civil Wars."

Grizzard

I don't watch much network television and I have no earthly idea what "Civil Wars" is about, and I don't want to know.

The less a person knows about network television the better off that person is. Ignorance of what's doing with the networks keeps one's intelligence from being insulted, and affords one the opportunity to seek entertainment on a higher plane — like on the new all-cartoon network.

I'd rather watch Fred and Barney any day than some mindless network sitcom. You get to see a lot better acting and writing.

But I did know network television eventually would come to this. As the value system weakens in other forms of entertainment such as music and the movies (cable too), the networks don't want to be left out, so actresses have children out of wedlock on comedy shows — and, now, nudity.

It really didn't matter which actress was going to appear nude or on what series such an occurrence would take place.

The headline should have read "Woman to Get Naked on Network Television," signalling a new era in the continuing march of sleaze.

A long time ago a man called network television "a vast wasteland."

If it were a wasteland way back then, now it's a garbage dump. The language has gotten racier, the plots steamier, and nudity was a natural to follow.

The article quoted an ABC spokesflack as saying of the Hemingway nude scene, "We consider it tastefully done and in keeping with the series."

How can there be anything tasteful about an actress appearing naked on network television?

By tasteful did the ABC flack mean that nudity wasn't frontal? OK, we get to see Mariel Hemingway's naked butt. Naked butts are tasteful?

And what is this thing about "in keeping with the series"?

What have I missed by not watching "Civil Wars"? If a nude shot is in keeping with the series, what else have they done or talked about on this show?

The government long ago decided the airwaves belonged to the public, and nobody could abuse it.

That led to Standards and Practices and there was a time television sought never to offend.

You couldn't even say the word "pregnant" on network television. The only thing you got to see nude was Mr. Ed.

Married couples even slept in separate beds and a darn or two was about as racy as the language could get.

But slowly the reins have been loosened. Perhaps making married couples sleep in separate beds and not allowing the word "pregnant" was taking it a little too far, but now the Standards and Practices departments are like the office of the baseball commissioner. They are there as symbols only.

Imagine all this 30 years ago, when the headlines might have read:

- Ethel Mertz Takes It All Off on "Lucy"
- Jim and Margaret Anderson Push Beds Together on "Father Knows a Lot More Than Anybody Thought"
- Lois Lane Finds Out What Else Is Super about "Superman"

IBM warns workers about two chemicals used in chip-making

By John Markoff
N.Y. Times News Service

IBM has warned its workers and other companies that two chemicals widely used in manufacturing semiconductor chips — and in other industries — may significantly increase the risk of miscarriage.

The computer maker acted after a study it commissioned by health researchers at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore found that among 30 women who worked with the chemicals at two IBM plants and then became pregnant, 10 had miscarriages — a 33.3 percent rate.

Despite the small number of pregnancies affected, the researchers believe there is a significant relationship between contact with the chemicals and women worker's miscarriages.

The two chemicals, diethylene glycol dimethl ether and ethylene glycol monethyl ether acetate, are used as solvents in a portion of the chip-making processing that involves etching away some of the material deposited on a silicon wafer.

"The warning is a reflection of our increased understanding of the hazards of these chemicals," said James Cone, an expert in toxic chemicals and an assistant clinical professor at the University of California in San Francisco. "People have touted these as a safe alternative to chlorofluorocarbons and other chemicals, but we're finding out that there may be problems here as well."

Based on the study's findings, a number of other technology companies have issued similar warnings in recent weeks. The chemicals are also used in other industries, like aerospace and printing, where thousands of workers may have come in contact with them.

None of the companies have stopped using the chemicals, but several chip makers have decided to offer alternative jobs to workers concerned about exposure.

"This is a confirmation of what has been known for some time," said Amanda Hawes, director of the Santa Clara Center for Occupational Safety and Health, a community research organization in California's Silicon Valley. "They're acknowledging something that people have had very serious concerns about and have been trying to do something about."

International Business Machines Corp. commissioned the Johns Hopkins study in 1987 in an attempt to prove that its semiconductor manufacturing operations were safe. It acted after an earlier study by the University of Massachusetts for Digital Equipment Corp. developed evidence of significant health risks in chip-making operations, an IBM spokesman said.

The spokesman, Jim Ruderman, said the company did not believe there was reason for alarm.

"We want to be careful," he said. "We're not trying to be alarmists. There hasn't been a mass panic nor should there be."

IBM issued the warnings last month after it received preliminary data from the study, which is not scheduled to be completed until next year. Because of the nature of the findings, the company also reported them to the Environmental Protection Agency. Although it made no public announcement, IBM acknowledged its actions over the weekend.

Gay activists throw ashes of AIDS dead on White House lawn

By Marcia Stepanek
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Some 2,000 angry gay activists, led by David Robinson of San Francisco, marched arm-in-arm Sunday to the White House, where some of the protesters hurled the cremated remains of friends who had died of AIDS onto the White House lawn.

The demonstrators encountered the U.S. Park Police, clad in riot gear, but there were no clashes and no arrests as the emotional, chanting marchers approached the south side of the White House.

Some of the protesters, including Robinson, climbed onto the White House fence to empty their containers of ashes — which ranged from silver urns to plastic baggies. Others squirted mock red blood on the sidewalk and made obscene gestures.

"We are carrying the actual ashes of people we love in a funeral procession to the White House to show the president the physical results of his lack of action," Robinson shouted. "We are protesting 12 years of a genocidal AIDS policy."

Along a two-mile march that began at the U.S. Capitol, demonstrators hoisted mock coffins, carried urns or wore photographs of the deceased around their necks. Others pleaded with startled tourists to support stepped-up government action to fight the spread of AIDS.

Greg Ross, 27, of San Jose, Calif., smeared fake blood on his face and hands to symbolize what many of the protesters said was the "murder-by-inaction" of the Bush administration.

"While Bush and the politicians of this country ignore us, thousands of us are dying of AIDS," said Ross, who was diagnosed with AIDS in July. "Before I die, I hope to help make people more aware of the urgency and seriousness of this problem."

The White House had no comment on the march.

Eric Sawyer of New York City carried the remains of friend Larry Kert, an actor who played Tony in the original Broadway production of "West Side Story." Kert died of AIDS last year at age 60.

Sawyer said a scheduled White House concert to be given by Kert had been canceled when officials learned that Kert planned to announce that he was gay at the event.

"I brought Larry here today so he could have his final performance at the White House," said an emotional Sawyer.

"These ashes are all of ours, and all of us today, in spirit, are throwing them," said Mark Schoops of New York City, who scattered the ashes of Mike Hippler, a journalist for the San Francisco-based Bay Area Reporter.

Several onlookers were moved to tears, while others watched quietly. But one elderly couple, Mabel and Fred Stone of Bedford, England, said they felt no sympathy for the demonstrators.

"AIDS is what happens to people who act against the Bible," Stone said.

The sponsors of the march, the New York Chapter of the AIDS activist group ACT UP, urged onlookers to "add your grief and rage about AIDS to our political funeral."

The organization sponsored the event at the urging of Robinson, a member of ACT UP-Golden Gate in San Francisco. Robinson said he got the idea to stage the rally shortly after his 37-year-old lover, Warren Piece of San Francisco, died last April of AIDS.

The White House protest came during a weekend display here of the huge AIDS Memorial Quilt near the Washington Monument. Some of those who participated in Sunday's ACT UP rally, however, criticized the Quilt.

NASA starts search for life on other planets

PASADENA, Calif. (NYT) — The most comprehensive search ever mounted for intelligent life on another planet begins today when NASA scientists turn on radio telescopes in Southern California and Puerto Rico in a effort to tune in alien radio signals.

Beginning exactly 500 years from Oct. 12, 1492 — the date that Christopher Columbus first set foot on the New World — the Search for Extra-Terrestrial Intelligence, known as SETI, is truly the search for another world.

"This is a giant quest," said Michael Klein, a radio astronomer at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, who is in charge of the Southern California effort. "We're looking for a needle in a cosmic haystack. We're looking for other life, on other planets, circling other stars."

The city of Pasadena is approximately 10 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles.

Klein likes to compare the SETI project to Columbus' historic voyage, particularly because both quests were launched more on faith than on scientific certainty.

Bush gets two endorsements; Clinton one

DALLAS (AP) — President Bush picked up endorsements in two major Texas newspapers on Sunday while Democratic rival Bill Clinton got the nod in one publication.

The Dallas Morning News and San Antonio Express-News both said Bush was the voters' best choice. The El Paso Times recommended Clinton, saying Bush's response to the nation's economic problems has been "slow and reluctant."

"President Bush has had his chance at the helm," the Times said. "Today, Bill Clinton offers us the best hope for getting the country moving again."

The News editorial criticized all involved in the campaign process for being too slow in addressing important issues.

"But when all is said and done in this peculiar presidential campaign, the candidate best equipped to lead and serve the country is George Bush," The News said. "We recommend his re-election."

The Express-News gave several specific reasons for its endorsement.

"Why? The North American Free Trade Agreement; Desert Storm; the fall of the Berlin Wall and the Communists who propped it up for 30 years; respect among world leaders; and a willingness to work with Americans of every stripe," the Express-News said.

The News touted Bush's economic plan, which it said would offset modest tax reductions with spending cuts, including $294 billion in reductions from capping entitlement programs.

"With this kind of restraint, the economy can grow in a safe sustainable way," The News said.

Clinton, however, proposes spending another $220 billion, the Dallas newspaper said.

Bush also was endorsed Sunday in the Detroit News, while Clinton picked up endorsements in the The Washington Post and The Charlotte Observer.

Iraqi arrest release relieves Texas wife

WEBSTER (AP) — The anxiety ended Sunday for a woman who had waited for days to hear from her husband, an American bomb-disposal expert arrested by Iraqi authorities in a border dispute.

Chad Hall, 50, was returned to Kuwait on Sunday, a day after he was released by Iraqi authorities.

And his wife, Susie Hall got the telephone call she had been awaiting Sunday morning.

"I didn't even look at what time it was," Mrs. Hall said from her suburban Houston home. "The phone rang, and somebody said, 'Hang on.' Then his voice came over the phone and I was very pleased."

Mrs. Hall said her husband "was doing great." However, she declined to discuss any details about what her husband had told her about his captivity.

Hall was arrested Thursday afternoon in a disputed section of the Iraq-Kuwait.

The retired U.S. Army major was released Saturday after two days in Iraq. The United Nations took custody of him in Baghdad on Saturday and flew him to their border headquarters at Um Qasr for a medical examination Sunday before flying him to Kuwait.

On Sunday, Hall blinked back tears as he described his terrifying ordeal to reporters at the U.S. embassy.

Computer bulletin board messages get explicit

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Sexually explicit programs are still available on certain computer bulletin boards in Wichita Falls, despite publicity earlier this year about possible access by minors.

After the Wichita Falls Times Record News featured two articles on the bulletin boards earlier this year, most of the operators whose boards contained the sexually explicit files "panicked" and took them out of their system, a board user and former board operator told the newspaper.

The articles were written after a reporter logged onto a bulletin board and was able to obtain sexually explicit material within 15 minutes, without anyone asking how old he was.

The programs included still photographs of nude people alone and having sex, sexually explicit cartoons and animated photographs of sex acts that have the appearance of 8 mm films.

Bestiality and homosexual sex also were among the subjects portrayed in the programs.

Now, several months later, the newspaper says, those programs are available on two bulletin boards only, and both have a complicated system for verifying the age of the user requesting them.

The user must provide a copy of his Social Security card and driver's license, and the operators require them to sign forms stating they are at least 18.

A computer board user identified by the newspaper as "Nathan," says there are still sexually explicit material on boards outside the city limits.

The out-of-town boards don't require proof of age, he said. All of which is legal, since no one regulates the use of computer modems, said a spokeswoman with the Federal Communications Council's Common Carrier Bureau, which regulates the use of telephones. Computers are not monitored either by the FCC.

Gospel singers John and Mary Tomlinson, left, and Lavell Herring follow along during the groups rendition of, "There Is Power In The Blood."

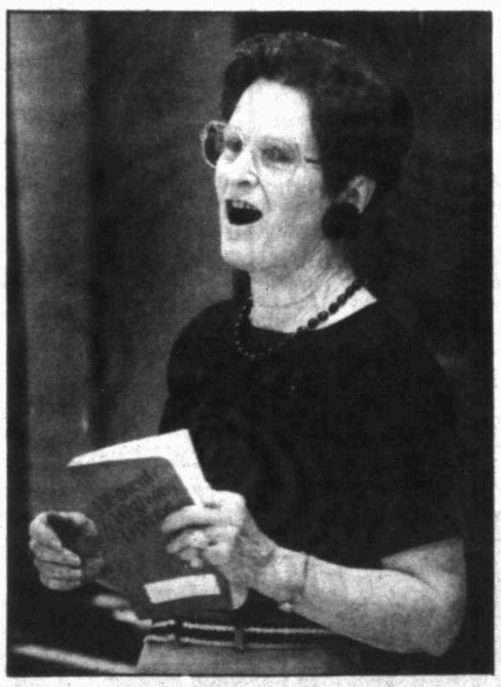

"I just went to church all my life so it's just natural that I like singing gospel music."

"It's a blessing to me to know that I have helped some one feel good by singing to them."

- Lavell Herring

Above, Peggy Staggs, in the middle, puts her heart and soul into, "Lord, Build Me A Cabin In Glory." Members of the Dellwood Senior Citizens Center gather every Wednesday at ten o'clock in the morning to sing gospel music.

Right, Peggy Staggs leads the group through a song. The group is flexible and whoever feels lead can jump up and lead the group through a song.

Below, Bea Bias sings, "Lord, Build Me A Cabin In Glory."

Heavenly Hymns

Helen Jenkins provides the piano music as Mary Tomlinson leads the group of singers in a gospel song.

Senior citizens entertain others with gospel music

Lavell Herring is a vocal person, and at times she gets kind of loud, but people don't seem to mind much. Herring likes to sing.

Herring, who says singing "just comes natural" to her, is a member of the Gospel Aires, a group of senior citizens who enjoy singing gospel music.

Herring, who moved to Stanton with her parents when she was two-years-old, gets to use her natural ability, along with other senior citizens every Wednesday at the Dellwood Senior Citizens Center singing 'good old' gospel hymns.

At ten o'clock in the morning every Wednesday seniors gather at the Center; warm-up their vocal cords; and enjoy the 'gospel' hour.

For the people who participate in the sing-a-long the words and music of the gospel songs they sing often carries them back to their childhood to memories of moments with family and friends past.

Texas A&M becomes Republican U.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Most analysts figure George Bush has to win Texas to regain the White House.

Recent polls say Bush has a slight lead, and if he does narrowly grab the Lone Star State's 32 electoral votes, credit may land squarely in Aggieland, where Texas A&M University College Republicans have helped register thousands of voters.

"I'm very thrilled with the numbers there," says Tony Zagotta, national chairman of the College Republicans. "I believe if Texas is a close state, it's going to be Republican students who give the margin of victory to George Bush."

A&M is "definitely the crown jewel for us," Zagotta said. He said Republicans have registered more students at A&M than at any other school he knows of.

Aggie Republicans claim they have helped register some 20,000 of A&M's about 43,000 students this summer and fall.

"Everyone here is very staunch Republican," says sophomore Philip Peter, one of those conservative students who registered to vote when he returned to campus this fall.

"Everyone is a little worried that maybe their vote's really going to count this time. I know that's the way I feel," he said after attending a recent Dan Quayle rally that drew 8,000 students.

Bush challenger Bill Clinton's MTV appearance and his sunglass-wearing saxophone serenade on the Arsenio Hall show may have won him fans among American youth at other colleges. But at A&M, where tastes often run more to crew cuts and uniforms, many were unimpressed.

The university, originally a military school, long has been a conservative stronghold. In 1988, the boxes that held predominantly student votes went more than 80 percent for Bush, said Rodger Lewis, Republican Party chairman for Brazos County.

A&M has been selected to house Bush's future presidential library. And the College Republican chapter — with 700 members, the biggest campus organization save the 1,800-member Corps of Cadets — has worked hard for years to register students.

The Republicans were the driving force behind the registration of some 17,000 students in 1990, a comparable number in 1988 and even more in 1984, said Phil Meuret, president of A&M's College Republicans.

This year's Aggie registration claims are difficult to verify.

De Parker, deputy registrar for Brazos County, said nearly 13,000 people have been registered in the county since a mid-August purge of voting rolls. However, the registration applications are not classified by party preference or whether the voter is a student, she said.

The total number of eligible voters countywide stood at 60,915 as of Oct. 8, with about 1,000 applications left to process, Ms. Parker said.

Whatever the final tally, scores of College Republicans have been handing out registration forms since the summer: at football games, grocery stores, the student union, even door-to-door.

"If you look through the whole community, we were the major ones putting out the effort" to register voters, Meuret said.

"Here at Texas A&M, the conservatives are activists, which is different than most universities," he said. "They get involved in the political process. That's what makes this campus different."

Democrats also recognize the effect GOP student voters could have on down-ballot races.

Some local Democratic candidates already have made a pitch to the Republican club, explaining their stance and trying to convince the Bush-Quayle supporters not to vote a straight ticket.

"They're concerned. If we're able to register that many student voters, that totally changes the outcome of any election in this county," Meuret said.

Students made the difference in electing the local sheriff during his first campaign, a narrow win in 1984, Brazos County GOP chairman Lewis said. And state Rep. Steve Ogden, a Republican from Bryan, said Aggies took him to the Capitol for his first term in 1990, too.

"I think the students at Texas A&M are a major force in any political race in Brazos County, period. Their support of my candidacy had a lot to do with the margin with which I won," said Ogden, who is unopposed this fall.

Author to perform at Theatre Midland

Staff report

The Midland adventure of "Hank the Cowdog" begins at 7:30 p.m. Saturday Oct. 17 at Theatre Midland, 200 W. Wadley Ave.

Erickson

At that time, author John R. Erickson will perform readings and songs from his 29 published books. His books have won him the Oppenheimer Award and Audio World Magazine's "Best Audio Track for Children Award." Erickson also has appeared on "CBS Storybreak."

His Midland performance will benefit the Recording Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped. Tickets, priced at $8 for adults and $5 for students, are available in Midland at the Recording Library, 202 N. C St., and Pages and Prints Books, and in Odessa at Airmaster Equipment, 3001 Kermit Highway.

Born Oct. 20, 1943, Erickson began writing seriously in 1967 while a student at Harvard Divinity School. In 1970, he and his wife, Kristine, moved back to the Texas Panhandle, where he spent the next 12 years working as a ranch cowboy, farm hand, bartender and handyman, while continuing to write in the early morning hours.

In 1982, impatient with the lack of interest he was getting from established New York publishers, he started his own publishing and marketing business, Maverick Books, which now specializes in selling to schools and libraries.

Erickson also has established a reputation as a speaker and performer. He has appeared at conventions, conferences and banquets in 17 states. He has spoken at the Library of Congress, the Institute of Texan Cultures, the Houston Children's Museum and the Witte Museum, San Antonio. He has appeared before half-a-million children.

He has published 30 books, 18 books on tape and some 500 articles. He now lives in Perryton, the town where he grew up, with his wife and their three children.

GOSPEL: seniors reflect

(From 1B)

"I just love it," declares Herring, speaking of images the gospel music resurects in her mind. Images of when she was a young girl sitting on her father's lap.

"My father was a singer and I used to sit on his lap in the evening and we would pass the time singing," recalls Herring.

The songs that Herring and her father would sign were gospel hymns.

Regular church attendance also gave Herring the opportunity to sign.

"I went to church all my life and gospel is what we sang," Herring said, so I've been, "singing gospel songs ever since I was a young girl."

Herring teams up with five others Dellwood seniors to form the gospel group - the Gospel Aires.

The group of six performs gospel music for other seniors in retirement homes in Midland, Odessa, Stanton and Big Spring.

When Herring is singing some of her favorite gospel songs she claims she is carried away to another place.

"When I'm signing, all I think about is Jesus," she said, "and being with Him."

Herring says her reward is seeing the people she performs for light up when the group starts singing an old favorite hymn.

"It's a blessing to me to know I've helped someone to feel good with my singing," she said.

Adding, that her favorite gospel song is "How Great Thou Art."

Midland/Odessa representatives return from welcoming convention

Staff report

Claire Gregory and Laura Fink, owners of Newcomers Unlimited, Inc. recently returned from the national convention for Welcoming Services International (WSI) in Aanchorage, Alaska, where they represented Midland and Odessa.

Sixteen welcoming services representing eight states met to discuss the economic outlook for each community and the impact the economy has had on the relocation of new residents. The overall concensus, according to those attending, indicated that "people are consistently moving or accepting transfers and welcoming services will always be a vital part in the community."

Various other discussions introduced new and successful programs to help in the expansion of a welcoming service.

"We are very excited about the opportunities presented to us and plan to study the feasibility of introducing new services to this area," Ms. Fink said. Ms. Gregory added, "The benefits of meeting with other independent welcoming service owners and sharing ideas and goals are immeasurable."

DEAR ABBY

Daughter wants to say nay to gift horse

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: For the last three years, my husband, our 16-year-old daughter and I have received expensive Christmas gifts from one of my father's lady friends. (I'll call her Libby.) Dad lives in Connecticut and Libby lives in Florida. Mother died four years ago.

Van Buren

At first, I was only uncomfortable with Libby's gifts. Now I am irritated by them. I have never met this woman — she is 30 years younger than Dad and is only one of the many women he's dated. Dad is quite well-to-do, and Libby apparently considers him marriage material. (He has told us that he will never marry again.)

I don't want Libby's gifts, and I dislike writing thank-you notes to someone I've never met. My husband and daughter share my feelings. Two years ago in my thank-you note to Libby, I told her as graciously as I could that it wasn't necessary to send us gifts, as I know how busy she must be. (She's a part-time model.) She didn't get the hint because she sent gifts again last year. I have sent her only cards.

Now what? — ON THE SPOT

DEAR ON: Well before Christmas, write to Libby and ask her to please send no more gifts to you, your husband and daughter. You might suggest that with so many homeless and starving people in the world, she should consider helping them instead of sending gifts to those who have far more than they need.

DEAR ABBY: I was at home — exhausted from caring for my two sons, who had both been sick. They are 15 months and 3 1/2 years old. I put my 3 1/2-year-old down for a nap, and thought I would take one, too.

Half an hour later, I smelled smoke! At first, I thought a neighbor was burning garbage, but as I went down the hall toward the bedrooms, the smell became stronger.

My 3 1/2-year-old had turned on his night lamp and hid it (still lit) under his blanket! The blanket was smoking!

I quickly yanked the lamp plug out of its socket, gathered up the bedding, threw it in the bathtub and turned on the water!

We were very lucky. Had I taken that nap, I don't know what would have happened. I never thought a lamp could be so dangerous. — WISER MOM, MAPLE RIDGE, B.C.

DEAR MOM: Thank you for giving me this opportunity to warn those with young children to care for: Lamps and other electrical appliances should be kept out of their reach.

DEAR ABBY: Is it too late for another limerick? If not, this one is my favorite:

And returned on the previous night.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing the article concerning safety belts. You said that 33 states have enacted safety belt laws.

The correct number of states with such laws is 43. Nebraska just passed that law during the 1992 legislative session! — ROSE A. WHITE, TRAFFIC SAFETY DIRECTOR, AAA NEBRASKA

DEAR ROSE WHITE: Thanks for the update. Hats off to Nebraska's legislators!

COLUMBUS' VOYAGE 1492-93

THE MAN AND THE IDEA

It was history's most glorious mistake.

A young merchant from the Italian city-state of Genoa became convinced he could sail nonstop to legendary Japan and China by heading west across the "Sea of Darkness" — the Atlantic.

Educated men in late 15th-century Europe knew the Earth was round. But they knew, too, that wise explorers didn't sail west into the wild unknown sea, but south and east, hugging Africa's coast, in the search for a route to the Orient and its rumored riches.

The western route obsessed Christopher Columbus, the Genoese seafarer. The very craft of navigation, he wrote, "incites the man who devotes himself to it to want to know the secrets of this world."

Columbus' quest for knowledge led him on history's most important voyage, a gamble bold and blind that in the end united the Earth, making two worlds one.

THE WAY WEST

By Charles J. Hanley
Associated Press Writer

Around 1480, in Lisbon, Columbus first gazed upon the nautical charts and documents of his late father-in-law, a Portuguese explorer in the eastern Atlantic. They fired his imagination.

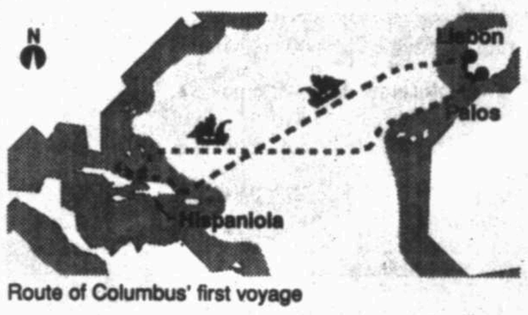

The papers are believed to have included a proposal by a geographer from Florence, Paolo dal Pozzo Toscanelli, that ships sail west to reach "the East." Another scholar calculated it would take only a few days to cross the ocean.

From his own experience traveling in the eastern Atlantic, Columbus formed a theory: One could sail west from the Canary Islands on the reliable trade winds that come from the northeast, and return with the westerlies at a higher latitude.

In 1485, he began a long, frustrating campaign to win the sponsorship of Spain's Queen Isabella and King Ferdinand for his project. In 1492, the monarchs were finally ready.

THE SHIPS

The town of Palos, on Spain's Atlantic coast, was Columbus' base. He returned there in May 1492 with a decree confiscating two local vessels for the expedition, in settlement of an old royal claim against the townspeople.

Route of Columbus' first voyage

The Nina and Pinta were tiny caravels — light, fast-running ships barely 70 feet long. For a third vessel, Columbus rented a bulkier cargo ship in port, renamed it Santa Maria, and made it his flagship.

THE CREW

The monarchs offered pardons to any criminals who joined the daring venture as seamen. But because he had enlisted the support of Martin Alonso Pinzon, Columbus did not have to rely on ex-convicts.

Pinzon, a respected Palos shipmaster, brought both wide seafaring experience and scores of skilled, courageous local mariners to the expedition.

The 90-man company included officers and seamen, carpenters and ship's boys, two royal officials and an "interpreter" who spoke Arabic, supposedly a universal tongue. About 40 shipped on the Santa Maria. The rest were divided between the Pinta, captained by Pinzon, and the Nina, captained by his brother Vicente Yanez Pinzon.

They made the Canary Islands in a swift six days, but were waylaid there for repairs. On Sept. 6, they set out anew, prows pointed west, and after three listless days their sails finally billowed before steady trade winds.

The mysterious sea — its strange new fish and birds, its huge mid-ocean swells, its brightening colors — soon became as much a wonder as a terror for Columbus' sailors.

On Sept. 16, they first spotted the Sargasso Sea's vast sheets of seaweed and thought they must be nearing land. But none appeared, and they began to worry that the constant wind from the east would keep them from ever returning home.

They were reassured on Sept. 20 when the winds turned variable, but it slowed their progress. Day by day, the crews grew more restless.

THE SEA

A half-hour before dawn on Friday, Aug. 3, 1492, the three vessels weighed anchor and set out from Palos. Columbus was navigating by "dead reckoning," factoring compass readings with the direction and strength of wind and current, and with the ship's speed, to tell him his position day by day. But he hid the truth, understating the daily mileage sailed, so the great distances would not frighten his men.

On Sept. 25, "land" was sighted. But it was a mirage. The ships still groped along, the sea almost dead calm. The trade winds finally picked up in October's first days, and a flock of petrels — a sign of land? — picked up the men's spirits. But then still another sighting proved false.

On Oct. 10, Columbus wrote, "the men could no longer stand it." He pledged to turn back if land was not found within three days.

The next day, signs of land floated by: a reed, a carved stick, a flowering shrub. At last, at 2 o'clock on the moonlit morning of Oct. 12, the lookout on the Pinta, sailor Juan Rodriguez Bermejo, shouted out: "Tierra! Tierra!" — "Land! Land!" It was an island, six miles away.

The New World: What Columbus found and brought back

THE LANDING

At daybreak, the seamen saw naked people on the beach. Columbus and his captains went ashore in launches, planted the royal banner, claimed the island for the Spanish monarchs, and named it San Salvador — Holy Savior. The island's inhabitants looked on, uncomprehending.

The explorer, believing he was in the outer reaches of the Indies, called the natives Indians.

They were tall and handsome, with straight black hair. Some had painted their bare skin with black, white and red pigments. They carried spears tipped with fish teeth, and paddled large dugout canoes. They were friendly and curious about their visitors, who they apparently believed came from the heavens.

Columbus found that the islanders, a people later dubbed Tainos, lived in palm-thatch huts, cultivated strange new food plants, wove cotton and made pottery.

An instant trade sprang up: red bonnets and small glass beads in exchange for the Indians' parrots, cotton thread and spears. Columbus decided that these intelligent people would be "good servants and of good skill."

Traditionally this first landfall was believed to be Watling Island in the eastern Bahamas. Recent studies suggest that Samana Cay, 60 miles to the southeast, is the more likely site.

Columbus explored five islands in the Bahamas and then, on Oct. 28, reached the north coast of modern-day Cuba. At first he believed it was Japan, then the Chinese coast. But no fabled cities of gold could be found, although Columbus and his men marveled at giant lizards, the rich green forests, the rainbow of tropical fish.

On Dec. 5, the Santa Maria and the Nina crossed to what Columbus called "a most beautiful island" — Hispaniola. By then, Pinzon had taken the Pinta off on a separate course.

At times, as many as 1,500 Indians paddled or swarn out to the big white-sailed ships, bearing gifts and barter. Then, on Christmas Eve, misfortune struck. The anchored Santa Maria drifted onto a coral reef on the north coast of modern-day Haiti. All hands escaped, but the ship was a loss.

Columbus left 39 men behind in a rough settlement built with the wood of the Santa Maria, and boarded the Nina for the journey home. Disease and hostilities with the natives would kill all 39 by the time Columbus returned on his second voyage 11 months later.

SIX INDIANS, GAUDY PARROTS AND SWEET POTATOES

The voyage home by the Nina and Pinta, through two terrifying ocean storms, took almost seven weeks. But finally, on March 15, 1493, the native sons of Palos sailed into their home port, heroes.

The triumphant explorer set out across Spain in an exotic procession, a road show exhibiting green and yellow parrots, Indian masks, bits of gold ornaments and, best of all, a half-dozen loincloth-clad Tainos, brought home by Columbus as trophies.

"Not only did everyone in the towns along his route turn out to see him," a contemporary chronicler wrote, "but many towns far from his route were emptied."

Reaching the royal palace in Barcelona on April 20, Columbus was given the rare privilege of sitting beside Ferdinand and Isabella to report on his success.

Columbus' four voyages, ending in 1504, introduced Europe to maize, tobacco, sweet potatoes and other discoveries and devices of the native Americans. But to Columbus, the Indians themselves were the "great treasure."

It was a treasure he profited from. He sent hundreds of Taino Indians back to a life of slavery in Spain.

The exchange was tragic in unseen ways, too. Scholars conclude that syphilis was brought back to Europe from the Caribbean. And Europe's infectious diseases, such as smallpox, measles and tuberculosis, spread among the Indians.

Within 40 years, the Tainos were extinct, wiped out by brutality and epidemic, and Columbus' new world was embarked on its complex history of exploitation and accomplishment, of old ways lost and new paths explored.

To the end, when he died in 1506 at age 55, Columbus clung to the notion that he had reached "the Indies."

Prices climb

NEW YORK — Prices of oil and refined products rose Friday after Iraqi police seized an American bomb-disposal expert, Chad Hall, near the Kuwaiti border.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $22.37 per barrel, up 38 cents per share, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Crude rose 45 cents for the week.

The news came out late Friday morning in New York and prices started moving higher. And though Hall was freed unharmed Saturday, the seizure appeared to make it less likely Iraq would be allowed to resume selling oil on world markets again soon. Iraq has been barred from exporting oil by the United Nations since it invaded Kuwait more than two years ago.

Prices were already up somewhat after news of an explosion at Texaco's second largest U.S. refinery, which handles about 100,000 barrels of crude per day. The particular unit affected is used to make gasoline.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in November settled at $19.87 per barrel, up 38 cents Friday and 45 cents higher from a week ago.

NEW YORK — The dollar settled mostly higher in moderate foreign exchange trading Friday, but its gains for the week were impressive.

In New York the dollar settled at 121.80 Japanese yen, up from 121.70 yen on Thursday.

In New York it cost $1.6945 to buy a British pound, more expensive than Thursday's $1.6828.

Market sinks

NEW YORK — The stock market dropped sharply Friday and closed at a new low for the year as uneasy investors unloaded shares in the face of weak earnings estimates and continued turmoil in the bond market.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 39.45 points to 3,136.58, the lowest level since Dec. 27, 1991. For the week, the index lost 64.03 points.

Maxus settles with Kidder, Peabody

■ Defendent to pay Dallas energy company $125 million to settle insider trading, fraud charges.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Kidder, Peabody & Co. will pay Maxus Energy Corp. $125 million to settle insider trading and fraud charges from its handling of a 1983 takeover, Maxus said late Saturday.

The Dallas energy company had asked for $2.2 billion from Kidder, Peabody and other defendants in a suit that went to trial in Dallas last week.

Maxus said Kidder also has agreed to pay $40 million for five-year warrants to purchase eight million shares of the energy company's common stock at $13 per share.

"This is a fair settlement for Maxus and its stockholders," Maxus chairman Charles Blackburn said in a statement. "The new capital we get in this transaction will enhance our ability to fund an aggressive oil and gas exporation and development program."

The settlement will add significantly to Maxus' balance sheet. The company had 1991 revenue of $790.8 million.

"It is going to be $165 million in cash," said company spokeswoman Linda Covington. "Beyond that, where the money is going to be used we don't have any comment on."

Maxus has struggled with losses every year since 1985 except one. In addition, the company is pressured by a $796 million debt and is seeking to finance an exploration program in Bolivia, Ecuador and Colombia.

In the lawsuit, Maxus accused Kidder, its well-known merger strategist Martin Siegal and investor Ivan Boesky of defrauding its predecessor, Diamond Shamrock Corp., when it tried to buy Natomast Co. in 1983.

In its statement, Maxus said both parties to the agreement continue to believe they would have been vindicated in court.

"The uncertainties of litigation, the cost and distraction involved, and the time that would be require to obtain a final result on appeal all made a compromise desireable for both sides," the company said.

Maxus' claims against Siegel and Boesky remain intact, the company said.

"The trial against Boesky and Seigal continues on Monday," Ms. Covington said.

Maxus has based its case on a carefully constructed web of circumstantial evidence since Boesky said he has "no recollection" of having received insider information from Siegel on Diamond Shamrock's plans to acquire Natomast, a San Francisco-based oil and gas firm.

Although Boesky and Siegel have admitted to running an insider-trading scheme, Maxus attorneys must prove that the conspiracy included the Diamond Shamrock acquisition of Natomas.

If not for the settlement, Maxus would have had to convince jurors that Kidder Peabody was liable for Siegel's actions and that Diamond Shamrock and Maxus were injured.

Women move into car-sales driver's seat

By Lisa Holewa
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — When it comes to new car sales, women are moving into the driver's seat.

Women bought 49 percent of all new cars sold in the United States last year, compared with 36 percent a decade ago, according to figures compiled by Ford Motor Co. and supported by industry analysts.

Auto experts say that upward trend likely will continue, extending to higher sales of trucks and luxury cars, where women still only account for about a third of the market.

"There's only one way the numbers are going — and that's up," said Mimi Vandermolen, Ford Motor Co.'s first female designer.

To make sure they do, automakers have been consulting women's committees and recruiting more and more women as designers or dealers. Some are focusing on design changes that deal with the physical differences between women and men.

"The basic concept is women, like men, still look at the major points of a car: performance, styling and drivability. But there are subtleties that make the difference," said Chris Cedergren, an industry analyst with AutoPacific Group Inc. in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Some of the subtle changes made over the years include: lower trunk lifts, easier lifting hoods, better adjusting seats and more comfortable seatbelts.

Mimi Vandermolen, 46, has worked for Ford Moter Co. since 1970 when she became the company's first female designer.

Chrysler likely to buck Big 3 quarterly loss

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp., whose minivans and sport trucks are favorites among consumers who shun passenger cars, is likely to be the only American Big Three automaker to show a third-quarter profit.

Both Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp., are expected to report third-quarter losses later this month, largely because of weak foreign sales.

Ford, the No. 2 automaker after GM, is gaining U.S. market share but is being hammered by Europe's recession and currency problems in Britain. In a stock registration last week, Ford acknowledged it lost money in the third quarter, but did not say how much.

GM's myriad problems include labor trouble at home and the weak European economy.

The July-September period traditionally is a time of weaker earnings — plants shut down to get ready for new models and the spring-summer buying season is passed.

According to estimates compiled by Zack's Investment Research in Chicago, Chrysler was expected to earn at least $50 million, Ford was expected to lose at least $34 million and GM was expected to lose between $580 million and $1.03 billion.

The estimates were based on an average of 16-17 analysts who cover the Big Three.

In the third quarter last year, GM lost $1.1 billion, or $1.88 a share; Ford lost $574.4 million, or $1.20 a share; and Chrysler lost $82 million, or 36 cents a share.

Computer fraud concerns largest corporations

DALLAS (AP) — The FBI office in Dallas has established a white-collar crime unit devoted exclusively to computer fraud.

A staff of three, headed by Special Agent Bill Eubanks, was created in August in response to complaints by company executives who say their computer systems are becoming more susceptible to attacks from computer hackers.

The squad is targeting fraud including industrial espionage, theft, destruction of product information and stealing long-distance codes.

Hackers include not just the stereotypical "computer nerds" wo get their thrills simply by gaining access to a corporate computer system, Eubanks said, but sophisticated criminals whose goal is profit.

"We sense there's a problem out there. Just about everyone now has a computer," Eubanks said.

Under several federal statutes, the acts of illegally entering government or private computer systems and tampering with, stealing, damaging or misusing information are punishable by prison terms and fines.

No such cases investigated by the FBI have yet been prosecuted in Dallas. But FBI agents say they are conducting several investigations here spurred by complaints from corporations.

"We're definitely concerned with people trying to hack into our computer networks," said Detlef Eurich, head of corporate security for Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems Corp., a computer and information services company.

"With the expansion of the use of information technology, the opportunity for abuse for criminal purposes is on the rise," Eurich told The Dallas Morning News.

USAir returns to full service

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Some USAir machinists returned to work Sunday to help return the airline to full service after striking workers agreed to make wage concessions in return for job security.

A full complement of 2,712 flights were scheduled to begin Monday morning, said John Bronson, an airline spokesman. The company had been flying roughly 60 percent of its schedule since more than 8,000 machinists went on strike Oct. 5.

Union and USAir officials concluded a 24-marathon session shortly before noon Thursday to reach the tentative agreement.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Savings bond owner can't shift tax liability

By Bill Doyle

Q: I have a large number of $100 face value Series E U.S. savings bonds, dated from 1966 to 1979. The bonds are registered in my name, P.O.D. (payable on death) to my late wife. I would like to give the bonds to my daughter, who has two young children, so that she can cash the bonds as needed.

Doyle

Should I have the bonds reissued in my daughter's name and the children's names, P.O.D. to me, or in the children's names, P.O.D. to my daughter?

My intent is to reduce or eliminate any tax liability.

A: You can't do that. Having the bonds reissued in either your daughter's name or your grandchildren's names would be a "taxable event" and you would be stuck for federal income tax on the accrued interest.

Many folks who have longtime holdings of U.S. savings bonds would dearly love to transfer the bonds' ownership and tax liability to younger family members. But there is no legitimate way to shift that tax liability from one living person to another living person.

You can have the bonds reissued in co-ownership form — in your name "or" your daughter's name, or in your name "or" a grandchild's name — without incurring an immediate tax liability. Or you can have the bonds reissued in beneficiary form — in your name, POD to your daughter or a grandchild. By doing that, the name of the original owner — you — would not be removed from the bonds.

However, if the bonds are redeemed before you die, you'll be responsible for the tax. Keep in mind that your Social Security number is on each bond as a taxpayer identification number.

The surviving co-owner or beneficiary would be responsible for tax on the interest from bonds cashed after you leave this vale of tears.

Q: Early this year, I bought a $50 Series EE bond for my wife as a gift. It is made out in her name. She passed away June 2. How can I have the bond changed to my name or to cash it?

A: You can do either through the district Federal Reserve Bank serving your part of the country. You'll have to provide a copy of your wife's death certificate and proof you are her heir, then fill out the necessary form.

Your local bank should be able to provide those forms, help you complete them and send everything along to the Fed bank.

Note my use of the word "should." Lately, more and more letters have come to this column from readers who run into blank walls when they ask local banks for help in having savings bonds reissued.

If you have that trouble, ask your bank for the name and address of the Fed bank. Then, phone the Fed bank and ask for the savings bond division, which can provide the necessary forms and instructions.

Q: My wife and I have about 125 Series EE bonds, mostly $100 face value bonds, purchased at $50 each through our payroll savings plan.

Can we consolidate some of these bonds into $1,000 face value bonds, without incurring an immediate tax liability? This might be a crazy question, but the quantity of bonds is becoming a nuisance because of their bulk.

A: You can do it through your district Federal Reserve Bank. When small E or EE bonds are reissued as larger denomination bonds, the new bonds you receive will bear the issue dates of the bonds you surrender. As a result, the new bonds continue to accumulate interest from the old bonds' issue date.

No income tax on that interest will be due until you redeem the new bonds.

Jays' comback stuns A's

AP Laserphoto

Oakland's Mark McGwire throws the ball back while Toronto's Roberto Alomar looks up in disbelief after being picked off base at first by pitcher Bob Welch.

■ Toronto comes back from a five-run deficit to win 7-6 in 11 innings and take a commanding 3-1 lead in the ALCS.

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Never let it be said again that the Toronto Blue Jays are chokers.

Criticized for years as the best team in baseball that could not win the big game, the Blue Jays matched the biggest comeback in playoff history Sunday, stunning Oakland 7-6 in 11 innings.

Pat Borders' sacrifice fly in the 11th was the official game-winner and gave Toronto a 3-1 edge in the AL series. But this one will forever be remembered for Roberto Alomar's shocking, two-run homer off Dennis Eckersley in the ninth that tied it and completed a sensational, five-run rally against the A's and perhaps the most dominant reliever of all-time.

"I wasn't here when they didn't win in the past," Alomar said. "I just want to be here in the present when we win the big one, so we won't have to hear anymore about the past."

Alomar's homer accounted for the biggest turnaround in a major-league game since Kirk Gibson's homer in the 1988 World Series, also off Eckersley. And, more importantly, it put Toronto one game away from the World Series.

"I don't know if this will bury all that talk of the past, but maybe it will silence it this year," Borders said.

The Blue Jays, three-time losers in the playoffs, also held a 3-1 advantage in the 1985 playoffs against Kansas City. But they blew that one with three straight losses, and began the history of failure that has followed them ever since.

"I think this should dispel any talk about the Blue Jays being losers," Toronto's Dave Winfield said.

Tonight, Game 2 winner David Cone will start against A's ace Dave Stewart.

"You look back and you think a 6-1 lead is pretty healthy," Eckersley said. "Who blows 6-1 leads? It's against reason."

A rejuvenated Rickey Henderson revitalized the A's early as they knocked out Jack Morris in taking a 6-1 lead after seven innings. Only once before had a team overcome a five-run deficit

Saul Injury

LUBBOCK — Free safety Tracy Saul, a preseason All-America and senior co-captain at Texas Tech, underwent arthroscopic knee surgery Sunday to repair a cartilage tear in his right knee. He will miss two to four weeks.

Saul suffered the injury in the third quarter of Saturday's 48-13 loss to No. 21 North Carolina State.

"The prognosis is extremely good for Tracy," Tech coach Spike Dykes said.

Dykes hopes to have Saul's services back by Oct. 24 for a game against Southern Methodist or by Oct. 31, when the Red Raiders play Texas.

Shinn out

SAN FRANCISCO — The group formed to buy the San Francisco Giants, led by Charlotte Hornets owner George Shinn, announced Sunday it would not collectively make a formal offer for the team.

Spencer Stolpen, president of the NBA team and Shinn Enterprises, Inc. said the group broke up because "in final analysis it did not make business sense to go forward with the purchase."

"We didn't decide to part ways, we decided collectively not to go forward and make a bid," said Stolpen.

Pittsburgh stays alive with 7-1 win

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Barry Bonds is back, so are the Pittsburgh Pirates. And the National League playoffs are going back to Atlanta.

With Atlanta on the brink of clinching its second straight NL pennant, Bonds ended his 0-for-forever postseason slump with runners on and helped the Pirates to a 7-1 victory Sunday night in Game 5.

Bob Walk, who wasn't even in the rotation when the playoffs began, pitched a three-hitter for the best effort yet by a Pirates' starter. It was his first three-hitter since his rookie year with Philadelphia in 1980.

"Kind of strange for me being out there in the ninth, right?" said Walk, the only Pirate left from the pre-Jim Leyland days of the mid-1980s. "I'm just glad we're going back to Atlanta."

But the night belonged to Bonds, who drove in the second run in Pittsburgh's four-run first. He had two hits and made an exceptional running catch as the Pirates kept the Braves from winning the

Deion's hectic day

Associated Press

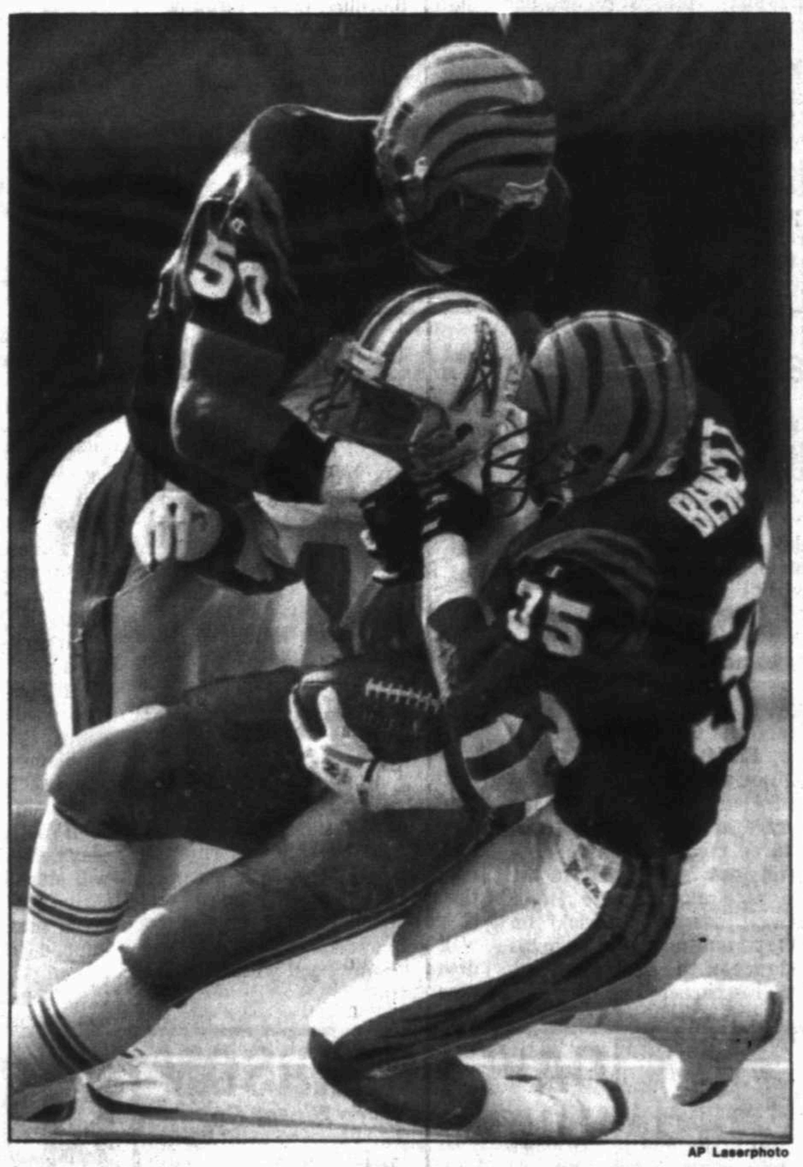

PITTSBURGH — Prime Time arrived just in time — exactly 17 minutes before the first pitch did.

Deion Sanders got out of a stretch limousine at Three Rivers Stadium at 8:26 p.m. Sunday, ending a 20-hour, 2,000-mile odyssey that saw him play baseball and football then suit up for baseball again.

Sanders emerged wearing shorts, windbreaker, baseball cap and sunglasses and was hustled into the Atlanta Braves locker room just before Game 5 of the National League playoffs with the Pirates. As has been his custom recently, he declined comment.

But his attorney, Eugene Parker, who made the round trip that began shortly after the end of Game 4, said

Win puts Oilers alone at 1st in AFC Central

■ Warren Moon ties his career best of five TD passes in a game as Houston decimates Cincinnati 38-24.

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Warren Moon's five touchdown passes felt as easy as they looked. Then again, just about every quarterback makes it look easy against these Cincinnati Bengals.

Moon matched his career high with five touchdown passes — three to Haywood Jeffires and two to Ernest Givins — as the Houston Oilers dismantled the NFL's worst pass defense for a 38-24 victory Sunday.

Moon was at his best as he led the Oilers (4-1) to sole possession of first place in the AFC Central Division. He avoided the rush, made all the right decisions and put the ball exactly where it had to be all afternoon.

The Bengals used extra defensive backs, played zone defense, went man-to-man, stunted at the line, blitzed ... and found nothing that would work against Moon.

"They did some things we took advantage of," Moon said. "They tried to mix it up a lot. They kept me guessing a few times, no question about it. But I guessed right most of the times, and that helped."

After giving up four touchdown passes to Rich Gannon in their last game, a 42-7 loss to Minnesota, the Bengals (2-3) decided to take away the long pass. Moon compensated by finding the open receivers underneath.

Moon wound up going Gannon one better with the second five-touchdown game of his career.

"That's what makes him a great quarterback," Bengals safety David Fulcher said. "We knew what we had

Cowboys swamp Seahawks, 27-0

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys bounced back from a Philadelphia pratfall with their most dominating defensive game in club history.

return for a touchdown Sunday in a 27-0 victory over the hapless Seattle Seahawks.

Dallas gave Seattle only 62 yards offense. The Cowboys best previous record for yardage allowed was 63 yards against Green Bay in 1965.

Dallas increased its mark to 4-1 while the Seahawks dropped to 1-5. Philadelphia's 24-17 loss to Kansas City dropped the Eagles back into an NFC tie with Dallas.

"We wanted to get back on track after what happened to us in Philadelphia," said Dallas linebacker Ken Norton. "Our defense was awesome."

It was the ninth consecutive victory in Texas Stadium for the Cowboys, their longest home winning streak since 18 in a row from 1980-81.

"It was just a tremendous defensive game," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson. "We were very disappointed about the way we lost to Philadelphia on Monday night. We just had to bounce back and we did."

Dallas allowed Seattle only six first downs and 24 yards passing in its first regular season shutout in 14 years.

"We got thoroughly whipped," said Seattle coach Tom Flores. "There's not much you can say. We couldn't run and they got after us when we tried to pass."

At the end of the game Seattle was running the clock instead of passing.

"We just wanted to get out of town," Flores said. "This one was over."

Emmitt Smith scored on two short touchdown runs and Ray Horton returned a Stan Gelbaugh pass 15 yards for a touchdown. It was the first regular season shutout since Dallas defeated Baltimore 38-0 on Sept. 4, 1978.

Washington, Miami share No. 1 again

Polls split on Huskies, 'Canes

Associated Press

Miami and Washington, last year's co-national champions, share the No. 1 spot again in this week's college football polls.

Washington edged Miami by one point in Sunday's Associated Press writers' poll, while the Hurricanes led the Huskies by one point in the USA Today-CNN coaches' survey.

Washington (5-0) led both polls by a comfortable margin last week, but Miami (5-0) gained ground by beating Penn State 17-14 Saturday. It was the Hurricanes' second consecutive victory over a Top 10 opponent, following a 19-16 win over Florida State the previous week.

Washington's 35-16 victory over California was the Huskies' third straight over a ranked team, but none of those opponents is currently in the AP Top 10. Nebraska is 11th, Southern Cal is 18th and California, which was 24th last week, dropped out of the Top 25 this week.

Miami and Washington each received 30½ first-place votes in the AP poll. But the Huskies got one more point (1,517½-1,516½) because one voter listed Alabama first, Washington second and Miami third. Another voter split his first-place vote between Washington and Miami.

In USA Today-CNN, Miami outpolled Washington by two first-place votes (31-29) and one point (1,467-1,466).

The results are the opposite of last year's final polls, when Miami was No. 1 in AP and Washington was No. 1 in USA Today-CNN.

Washington coach Don James said Sunday that he was "pleased we're still recognized as No. 1 in the AP poll." But, he added, "I don't think coaches get as caught up in the polls as other people do. I think all this stuff will sort itself out in time."

Miami coach Dennis Erickson agreed.

"There will always be a comparison until one of us loses," he said. "The players can't worry about this. ... There's nothing we can do but play well and win games. The rest is in the hands of others."

The one-point margin in the AP poll isn't the closest ever for No. 1. There have been two ties for first, in 1939 and 1941. On Nov. 27, 1939, Texas A&M and Southern Cal tied with 939 points each. On Oct. 27, 1941, Minnesota and Texas shared first place with 1,161 points apiece.

The closest final AP poll was last year's four-point difference between Miami and Washington.

Miami, which has the nation's longest winning streak (23), plays Texas Christian next Saturday at the Orange Bowl. Washington, which has won 19 in a row, visits Oregon.

Michigan remained third in this week's AP poll. Rounding out the Top 10 are Alabama, Texas A&M, Florida State, Colorado, Stanford, Penn State and Georgia.

Nebraska is 11th, followed by Notre Dame, Tennessee, Syracuse, Mississippi State, Georgia Tech, Virginia, Southern Cal, Clemson, Boston College, North Carolina State, Washington State, Florida, West Virginia and Kansas.

Tennessee plunged nine notches to No. 13 after losing to Arkansas 25-24, and Virginia dropped seven spots to No. 17 after falling to Clemson 29-28.

Washington State, West Virginia and Kansas moved into the Top 25, while Oklahoma, UCLA, Ohio State and California dropped out.

ALCS: Alomar home run reminiscent of Gibson's in the playoffs — Oakland trailed Boston 5-0 in the second inning before winning 10-6 in 1988.

(From 1C)

But for the second straight day Eckersley was ineffective, and this time it cost Oakland the game.

"I think Eckersley wasn't the Eckersley we've seen before," Alomar said.

Alomar had four hits, including a double that began the rally in the eighth inning, and his homer in the ninth. He also cut down the potential winning run in the ninth with a throw from second base.

"I don't have any muscles," Alomar said. "Sometimes the little guys are the ones who contribute to the big wins."

Toronto scored three times in the eighth before Eckersley ended that threat by striking out pinch-hitter Ed Sprague with runners on second and third. Eckersley celebrated that strikeout by looking at the Blue Jays' bench and clenching his fist. The next inning, though, Alomar gave the Blue Jays a reason to go wild.

"Ol' Eck stuck it to us, and gave us a good reason to stick it to him," Morris said. "The poor guy wouldn't look over at us when he didn't strike that guy out. Little League stuff."

Then in the 11th, Derek Bell drew a leadoff walk from loser Kelly Downs, took third on Candy Maldonaldo's single to right and scored easily on Borders' fly ball to Henderson in left. Duane Ward was the winner and Tom Henke pitched the 11th for his third save of the series.

Aside from batting left-handed, Alomar, who had four hits, bears no resemblance to Gibson. But to the Blue Jays — and to Eckersley — what he did almost was the same.

Devon White led off the ninth with a single that skipped past Henderson in left for a two-base error. That brought up Alomar, and he launched a drive high and deep to right, as did Gibson in the ninth inning of Game 1 of the 1988 Series for a Los Angeles victory, for the tying home run.

Alomar hit only eight homers during the regular season, although he connected in Game 3. The Blue Jays made a big deal of this blow, spilling out of the dugout to congratulate him.

Two outs later, a single by John Olerud forced Eckersley from the game. He walked off to a few boos, but was saved a loss when Jim Corsi retired Borders on a bases-loaded grounder.

The A's had the potential winning run thrown out in the ninth. Harold Baines opened with a single off Ward, and pinch-runner Eric Fox stole second and took third on slugger Mark McGwire's first sacrifice bunt of the season.

Terry Steinbach followed with a grounder to Alomar at second, and Fox hesitated before breaking home. The delay cost as Alomar's throw to Borders was in plenty of time for the tag.

"A play was on. It almost worked," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said.

A sensational catch by shortstop Mike Bordick thwarted Toronto in the 10th. With two out and two on, Bordick raced across the Coliseum's ample foul territory to catch Winfield's pop-up just before he ran into the short retaining wall.

That Toronto was even position in the ninth to win it was weird. Bob Welch shut down the Blue Jays on six hits for seven innings, and held a 6-1 lead. He left after Alomar led off with a double, and reliever Jeff Parrett surrendered singles to Joe Carter and Winfield, scoring a run.

The A's needed to win this game, so La Russa made an uncharacteristic move and brought in Eckersley early. It didn't get any easier, however, as Olerud and Maldonado hit RBI singles on Eckersley's first two pitches, making it 6-4.

Eckersley was perhaps the most dominant pitcher in the majors this season, converting 51 of 54 save chances, not including one in the first game of the playoffs.

He did it with a 1.91 ERA, an 8½-to-1 strikeout-to-walk ratio, and a .211 opponents' batting average. Even so, he was nothing special in Game 3, when Toronto got two hits against him in only one-third of an inning.

NLCS: Series moves to Atlanta for final 2 games

(From 1C)

pennant at Three Rivers Stadium for the second straight year.

"It's like my dad always told me, 'If the big guy wants to fight you, at least let him know he's been in a fight,'" Bonds said, referring to his father and ex-big leaguer Bobby Bonds. "The Braves have a great club, but we feel good about where we're at."

So do the Braves, who still lead the series 3-2, and can wrap up the franchise's first back-to-back pennants since 1958 by winning either Tuesday or Wednesday in Atlanta.

Pittsburgh will try to duplicate Atlanta's comeback of last fall, when the Braves reversed a 3-2 deficit by winning the final two playoff games on the road.

If the Pirates needed some inspiration for a comeback, they got it from Walk, who threw his second complete game of the year and second in two seasons — and the history book.

Walk, making his first postseason start in two years and his fourth over a 13-season span, appeared badly outmatched against Atlanta starter Steve Avery, the owner of a record 22 1-3 inning postseason scoreless streak.

Hardly. Avery never got out of the first inning and the Braves never got to Walk, the same pitcher they released eight years ago after deciding he'd never mature into a consistent major-league pitcher.

"I just took it batter by batter," Walk said. "I couldn't throw a strike sometimes, but they managed to put the bat on the ball and hit it to one of our guys."

The effort of 35-year-old Walk was remarkably similar to that by 37-year-old Pirates lefthander Jim Rooker in the 1979 World Series against Baltimore.

Down 3-1 to the favored Orioles, Pirates manager Chuck Tanner pulled a huge surprise by starting Rooker, who had spent much of the season on the disabled list. Rooker pitched five strong innings in a 7-1 Pittsburgh win and the Pirates swept the final three games, and the Series.

None of the Pirates are predicting a comeback like 1979, but their chances are much better now that Bonds seemingly has exorcised his postseason demons. And the Pirates have proved that Avery, unlike teammate Deion Sanders, is human after all.

The Pirates had never scored against the 22-year-old lefthander in three playoff starts until a four-run seventh in Atlanta's 13-5 romp in Game 2, but only after the Braves already led 8-0.

This time, Avery was gone before the game had hardly begun. The Pirates, hitting only .205 as a team in this series and .209 in the last three NL playoffs, had a playoff record-tying four doubles in the first, and Avery never made it to the second.

Gary Redus, double. Jay Bell, single and an RBI. Groundout. Bonds — a double, an RBI and an end to his 0 for 28 postseason slump with runners on. The near-sellout crowd of 52,929 on a drizzly Sunday night almost rocked Three Rivers Stadium into the nearby Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio rivers.

How bad had Bonds been? He was 1 for 11 in the series, and 8 for 56 (.143) in the postseason until his double — with one extra base hit and one RBI in 18 postseason games. Not any more.

Jeff King, only 2 for 16 in this series, doubled in Bonds, and Avery and the Braves were in big trouble. It got even worse as Lloyd McClendon doubled to push it 4-0, and Avery was gone. For the Braves, the game was, too.

Bonds said he got the motivation to turn his series around from a 90-minute talk after Game 4 with Jim Leyland.

SANDERS: Odyssey appears to take toll against Miami

(From 1C)

Deion's drama ended at that point. He didn't play in Game 5, a 7-1 Pittsburgh victory.

Shortly before noon, Sanders left his Florida hotel with his Atlanta Falcon teammates as fans rhythmically chanted his nickname, "Prime Time! Prime Time!" But around 5 p.m., he limped out of Joe Robbie Stadium after taking glucose intravenously to combat the lingering effects of fatigue brought on by the heat and humidity in Miami.

Parker said Sanders was not tired now "that he's got some fluids in him." Regarding a limp that was evident after the football game, Parker said Sanders had problems with his foot recently, adding, "He's no more hurt than he's been.

"If he gets an opportunity to play," he added, "the adrenalin will start flowing."

On the return flight, Sanders ate a meal, told some jokes and napped briefly. His long-time girlfriend, Carolyn Chambers, and their 2-year-old daughter, Diondra, remained behind in Miami with family and were to return to Atlanta.

Asked whether Sanders had expressed any regrets about the grueling trip, Parker said, "Once he makes a decision, one thing about Deion, he doesn't look back."

Parker, however, admitted the trip was grueling. The chartered jet made the 2-hour, 20-minute flight from Florida and arrived at Allegheny County Airport in nearby West Mifflin at about 7:45 p.m. From there, Sanders traveled by helicopter to a landing pad atop a downtown Pittsburgh television station and made the last mad dash to the park in the limousine.

In the football game, Sanders caught a 9-yard pass on offense, was flagged for a 47-yard interference call on defense, returned a punt for 1 yard, made two fair catches on punts, and returned two kickoffs for a 21-yard average — not exactly Prime Time's most spectacular game.

But his teammates were impressed, nonetheless.

"I have a newfound respect for Deion," fellow cornerback Tim McKyer said after the game. "We really appreciated him coming out here and doing it."

"Everybody knows of his athletic ability," coach Jerry Glanville said. "What's inside him is even bigger."

Sanders' attempt at the unprecedented baseball-football-baseball triple began when he left Three Rivers Stadium in another stretch limousine at 12:18 a.m. Sunday. He went straight to the Allegheny County Airport and arrived at a small jetport near Miami about 4 a.m.

As he left the plane, he told reporters he had been warned "there'd be days, but never like this." He was then shuttled to the hotel where the Falcons stayed and one onlooker said Neon Deion appeared to be dimming.

"He looked dead tired," said 17-year-old autograph hound Brian Grieper of Hollywood, Fla. "His eyes were almost shut."

After playing left field from the seventh inning to the end of the Braves' 6-4 win over Pittsburgh and making the flight, Sanders got only about five hours sleep.

At 10:50 a.m., he raced out of the Sheraton Hotel to the Atlanta Falcons waiting bus.

He was asked how he felt after his all-night travels.

"Pretty good," he muttered under his breath. During his plane ride, he told CBS Sports how he felt about his jet-setting day.

"This is the sort of thing kids dream about," he said. "In the morning, they're Michael Jordan on the basketball court and in the afternoon they're Deion Sanders on the football field. I'm a kid, still."

He was at Joe Robbie Stadium by 11:15 a.m. and on the field by 12:14 p.m., warming up to return kicks and cover the likes of Mark Duper and Mark Clayton.

Martin jumps into NASCAR scuffle

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Mark Martin placed himself solidly in the closest five-way championship battle in NASCAR stock car history with a record-setting victory Sunday in the Mello Yello 500.

Martin, who trailed series point leader Bill Elliott by 352 points after the Dover, Del., race on Sept. 20, moved into fourth place, 88 points behind the faltering leader who was frustrated by his third straight disastrous finish.

In fact, the combination of bad days by Elliott and runnerup Davey Allison and a 1-2 finish by Martin and Alan Kulwicki turned the point race into something special with three races remaining.

Martin took control late in the 334-lap race at Charlotte Motor Speedway, passing Kulwicki on lap 303 and pulling away to win his second race of the season and seventh of his career.

He won the battle of Ford Thunderbirds by 1.93 seconds, with Kyle Petty, who faded after leading four times for 130 laps, placing third, followed by surprising Jimmy Spencer, Ricky Rudd and Ernie Irvan.

The focus, however, was on the point race, which tightened considerably after Elliott, who has consecutive finishes of 30th, 26th and 31st, ran into problems 50 laps from the end of Sunday's race.

Elliott, who came into the race leading Allison by 67 points, Kulwicki by 141, Harry Gant by 167 and Martin by 193, was running comfortably in seventh place on the 1½-mile oval when he suddenly slowed on lap 285, tagged the wall going through turn two and drove onto pit road with a broken rear spring.

Cook wins at Vegas

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Move over Freddy. You, too, Davis. Make room for John Cook.

Cook, a disappointed runnerup in the British Open and PGA, scored a front-running victory Sunday in the Las Vegas Invitational and joined Fred Couples and Davis Love III in two top-of-the-tour categories.

Cook's two-stroke triumph, secured with a bogey-free final round of 68, was his third of the season and tied Fred Couples and Davis Love III for the most on the PGA Tour this year.

The victory, engineered over five days, 90 holes and three courses, was worth $234,000 from the $1.3 million purse and enabled Cook to join Couples and Love as a $1 million winner this year. Couples leads with $1,268,188 and Love has $1,157,630.

Cook, with $1,119,971, is only the eighth player to reach that figure in season earnings, and suddenly finds himself in the race for the season's money-winning title and Player of the Year honors.

"That's too much for me," Cook said. "I just want to keep going and see what happens for the rest of the year."

Cook, who won the Hawaiian Open and the Bob Hope Classic earlier this season, acquired the sixth title of his 13-year pro career with a 334 total, 26 under par.

South African David Frost, who has won twice this year, put the pressure on Cook with a 9-under-par 63 over the final 18 holes at the new TPC at Summerlin and was second alone at 336.

Love, also in the hunt until an errant tee shot on the par-5 16th set up consecutive bogeys, was in a tie for third at 338 with Bob Estes, Nolan Henke and gritty John Adams.

Estes and Love each had a closing 67, Henke shot 68 and Adams 69 in the bright desert sunshine.

Charles tops at Senior Gold Rush

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Bob Charles had his second straight 65 for a seven-stroke victory at the Senior Gold Rush tournament Sunday.

Charles, never seriously challenged in the final round at the Rancho Murieta Country Club, finished with a 54-hole total of 201, easily surpassing the tournament record of 204 set by George Archer in 1990.

Gary Player, with a 67, and Chi Chi Rodriguez, with a 69, were tied for second at 208. Dave Stockton closed with a 67 to tie for fourth at 209 with Dick Hendrickson, who had a 69.

The victory by Charles, who's finished among the top seven money winners every year since he joined the Senior PGA Tour six years ago, was his first of the year. The $70,000 first-place check moved him from 22nd to 14th on this year's earnings list with $332,063.

The left-hander from New Zealand carded only one bogey during his 54 holes, and his 65s in each of the last two rounds tied the competitive course record.

Charles' only mistake Sunday, a bogey on No. 10, allowed Stockton to move within three strokes after a birdie on No. 14.

But Charles quickly atoned for his mistake with birdies on three of the next five holes.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your positive attitude and sincere manner will attract many supporters. With their help, you move closer to a cherished goal. December brings good news and a blissful reunion. Golden business opportunities will arise next March; move quickly! May will bring travel or an expanded communications network. Romance envelops you in June. Keep your mind on business and you could score a major financial victory by late summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: sportscaster Tony Kubek, comedian Dick Gregory, tenor Luciano Pavarotti, actress Susan Anton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You draw extra close to a co-worker today, even become secret pals. Be a confidant for children, too; they have a lot to share. See the world from their eyes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It is difficult to tell where a relationship is going; emotions sway to and fro. Financially, you would be wise to maintain the status quo. Stay upbeat when around a loved one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your friendships are particularly rewarding now. A dream may be fulfilled if you finalize your plans. A quiet evening at home will suit you to a T. Avoid dwelling on missed opportunities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your social instincts are excellent and can serve as a reliable guide — you need not be wedded to tradition. The emphasis now is on sensitivity and long-range planning.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You need to keep your eyes open when making purchases today. Count your change and be certain to get your money's worth. See people as they really are, not as you wish they were.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone may be trying to put "the squeeze" on you. Take time to re-examine work procedures and organizational duties. An older person plays a key role in your career.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Diversify and stress your versatility. Graciously accept the help of an older or more experienced person who wants you to succeed. Consider radical solutions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Give stubbornness or greed a knockout punch. Make flexibility your watchword. As business picks up, your finances improve. A letter breathes new life into your plans.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get busy with the phone calls and errands that will make your plans fall into place. Be sure romantic partner gets special treatment. Private, revealing conversations generate powerfully good vibes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A promise may not be kept. This could put you in a difficult situation. If you have grown children, it might be better to write than phone them today. Learn more about real estate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not give up hope regarding a big project. You receive a lot of support in this and must be grateful for help. A cleanup crusade is back in the spotlight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A conference may point out the fact that you could make more money elsewhere. Review your options. Now is an excellent time to make overdue changes.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have a keen sense of color and form. On a rainy day, expect to find these youngsters painting with water colors or creating paper sculptures.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q96 ♡A74 ◇KQJ10963 ♣Void
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♣	?

What action do you take?
A.—There are a number of things you want to do—show your club void, your spade support and the source of your tricks in diamonds. A cue-bid now could result in enemy pre-emptive action, leaving you badly placed. A forcing response of two diamonds now is the more prudent course—you can get aggressive later.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K64 ♡Q976 ◇Q6 ♣AQ84
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Dbl

What action do you take?
A.—You have reasonable support for partner's suit, but a dead minimum opening bid. There's one action that describes this hand perfectly—pass. We frown upon anything else.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q976 ♡K64 ◇Q6 ♣AQ84
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Dbl

What action do you take?
A.—Almost an identical hand to the second problem, except that the major suits have been reversed. Here your four-card fit for partner's suit improves your hand enormously. Even the Law of Total Tricks strongly dictates that you should raise to two spades.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠5 ♡A7653 ◇QJ932 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 ♡*	Dbl	?

(*—weak)
What action do you take?
A.—Your opponents can certainly make game, perhaps even slam, so it's simply a matter of whether you should interfere with their auction and, if so, at what level. Our choice would be to act aggressively, and we feel five hearts makes life most difficult for the enemy.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠87 ♡AJ94 ◇A109543 ♣8
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump and East passes. What do you bid now?
A.—The problem with a jump to three diamonds is that partner might rebid three no trump with a four-card heart suit—a bid of any suit in this sequence would be a cue-bid confirming diamond support and a maximum. The way to probe for a suit contract is to start with two clubs, to check on the possibility of a 4-4 heart fit, and then proceed with three diamonds, which would be forcing.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A873 ♡K ◇10765 ♣J854
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Dbl	?

What action do you take?
A.—Had there been no takeout double, you would, of course, have responded to partner's opening bid with one spade. However, the double has told you that's East's suit, and you don't want to jockey the opponents out of spades. To up the ante a little, we suggest you respond one no trump, although we won't quibble mightily with a pass.

'Fashion cop' Blackwell picks 10 best-, worst-dressed on TV

RADNOR, Pa. — Leeza Gibbons of "Entertainment Tonight" and Jay Leno of "The Tonight Show" are the best-dressed stars on television, according to self-appointed fashion maven Mr. Blackwell.

Burke

Blackwell, a dress designer better known for dressing down celebrities whose wardrobes he finds wanting, noted in his fourth annual article for TV Guide magazine that both of this year's favorites once were targets for his barbs.

"Gibbons, once a fashion disaster, grabs the best dressed gold with glamorous gusto," he wrote.

As for Leno: "Once his wardrobe had the appeal of a soggy corn chip — today, he's the cream-of-the-caviar-crop in late-night winners."

Other best-dressed women: Mariel Hemingway, "Civil Wars;" Robin Givens, "Angel Street;" Candice Bergen, "Murphy Brown;" Tea Leoni, "Flying Blind;" Diana Rigg, "Mystery!;" Oprah Winfrey, "The Oprah Winfrey Show;" Vanessa Williams, "The Soul of VH-1;" Susan Dey, "Love & War;" and Barbara Walters, "20-20."

The rest of the best-dressed men were: Jerry Seinfeld, "Seinfeld;" Arsenio Hall, "The Arsenio Hall Show;" Andrew Shue, "Melrose Place;" Peter Jennings, "World News Tonight;" A Martinez, "L.A. Law;" Bill Cosby, "You Bet Your Life;" Morris Chestnut, "Out All Night;" Bob Costas, "Later with Bob Costas;" and Branford Marsalis, "The Tonight Show."

But enough of that. Blackwell, whose pen is sharper than pinking shears, really gets going when he skewers those on his "worst-dressed" lists:

■ Delta Burke, "Delta:" "She's a truck-stop tragedy in Country Western kitsch."

■ Suzanne Sommers, "Step by Step:" "Somers should forget that Thigh Master and concentrate on her wardrobe."

■ Whoopie Goldberg, "The Whoopie Goldberg Show:" "The dreadlocked diva takes a fashion dive in a mass of layered dreck."

■ Will Smith, "The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air:" "A hip-hop horror in an ersatz denim disaster."

■ Bob Newhart, "Bob:" "Looks like a bored basset hound swimming in sweater vests."

■ Tim Allen, "Home Improvement:" "Looks like he bought a do-it-yourself fashion kit — and lost the directions."

ST. PAUL, Minn. — With a lament about losing his hair, Garrison Keillor returned to his radio roots.

The soft-spoken humorist began the fourth season of "American Radio Company" at the World Theater, where he did "A Prairie Home Companion" until he left his native Minnesota in a huff in 1987.

"So good to be back in Minnesota, bring this show back here," Keillor said Saturday at the start of the live, two-hour broadcast on the American Public Radio network.

Minnesotans, he said, have tried to make him feel better about his hairline.

"They come up to me after a show. They say, 'That was about as good a show as you ever did and you're hair looks really nice, too. . . .People are nice, and it's not true. My hair has gone downhill and this radio show is declining like everything."

He left the state after local media publicized his address and the purchase price of his home. He'll do about half his radio shows from Minnesota and the rest from New York and elsewhere.

JERUSALEM — Arthur Miller had a warning for Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin: Choose a chair carefully.

The playwright arrived on Saturday for a performance of his "Death of a Salesman." He told reporters of his visit to Tel Aviv's Habima Theater 15 years ago for a showing of the play.

In April 1977, Rabin resigned amid a scandal over a foreign bank account held by his wife. The right-wing Likud bloc won the next election and held power until the victory of Rabin's Labor Party in June.

Asked about his failure to visit Israel during the 15 years of Likud rule, Miller said he wasn't comfortable with the right-wing government, but he added only "negligence" kept him away.

LOS ANGELES — Hollywood's latest look at Christopher Columbus' voyage to the New World examines his human side, director Ridley Scott said.

Scott acknowledged that "1492: Conquest of Paradise" is based on educated supposition on the explorer's motives and attitudes about the harsh and oppressive European civilization he carried across the Atlantic.

"You take all the facts you can, then, out of this kind of mush, you try to distill it into what you think happened," Scott said in an interview in Saturday's Daily News of Los Angeles.

The film, starring Gerard Depardieu, depicts a Columbus who respects native cultures and the environment while disdaining the religious and intellectual oppressiveness of Spain.

Chiefs outsmart Eagles, 24-17

Miami becomes last unbeaten team in league with win over Atlanta

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Dave Krieg scorched a confused Philadelphia secondary for 272 yards and three touchdowns and Kansas City sacked Randall Cunningham six times en route to a 24-17 victory Sunday over the NFC's last unbeaten team.

The Eagles (4-1) came into the game with the NFL's No. 3 defense against the pass, yielding 148.3 yards per game. But Willie Davis exceeded that all by himself with five catches for 167 yards.

The Eagles also has been leading the NFL in scoring defense with 8.5 points per game and total defense with an average yield of 208.5 yards.

But the Chiefs (4-2) led throughout the sunny afternoon before 76,626 and seemed on their way to an easy win before Cunningham hit two quick scoring passes in the fourth period.

The Chiefs, who blew a 19-6 lead at Denver in the last two minutes the week before, were leading 24-3 with 12:47 remaining. But Cunningham hit Pat Beach with touchdown strikes of 10 and 3 yards.

Junking the Chiefs' usual conservative approach, Krieg passed on his first five plays and gave them a 7-0 lead on a 43-yard touchdown strike to J.J. Birden, who beat Izel Jenkins. Then, in the final seconds of the first half, Birden was left absolutely uncovered by a defensive mixup and hauled in a 24-yard scoring pass for a 14-3 lead.

That touchdown made Krieg, a 13-year veteran, the 15th quarterback in league history to throw 200 scoring passes.

Raiders 20, Bills 3

LOS ANGELES — Todd Marinovich threw two first-half touchdown passes and the Los Angeles defense stymied the NFL's No. 1 offense as the Raiders overpowered the Buffalo Bills.

The win was the second straight for the Raiders (2-4) after an eight-game losing streak which started last Dec. 8, when the Bills rallied for a 30-27 overtime victory.

Meanwhile, the loss was the second one-sided setback in a row for the two-time defending AFC champion Bills after they opened the season with four wins in which they averaged over 38 points.

Buffalo came in trying to rebound from a 37-10 loss to Miami, but failed miserably, mainly because of the Raiders defense.

Marinovich threw a 2-yard scoring pass to Eric Dickerson in the first quarter and a 52-yarder to Tim Brown in the second period to give the Raiders all the points they'd need.

NFL Roundup

Marinovich completed 11 of 21 passes for 188 yards with one interception and was sacked four times.

Dickerson rushed for 52 yards on 16 carries, leaving him with 12,720 yards in his career — 19 behind Tony Dorsett, the NFL's No. 2 career rusher.

Jim Kelly completed 26 of 45 passes for 302 yards with one interception and was sacked five times — twice each by Anthony Smith and Howie Long.

Bills running back Thurman Thomas, hampered by spasms in his neck, finished with 52 yards on 16 carries and three receptions for 27 yards.

Dolphins 21, Falcons 17

MIAMI — Deion Sanders came from Pittsburgh, and Dan Marino came from behind — again.

Marino hit Tony Martin for a 46-yard gain to set up the winning touchdown with 5:01 left, and the unbeaten Miami Dolphins overtook Atlanta.

Marino brought Miami (5-0) from behind to win in the fourth quarter for the third time this season and the 21st time in his 10-year career.

Sanders, sandwiching football between playoff games for the Atlanta Braves at Pittsburgh on Saturday night and Sunday night, reached his hotel at 4 a.m.. He started at cornerback at 1 p.m. and helped the Falcons contain Marino until about 3:45.

Then Miami mounted its winning drive, which covered 77 yards in seven plays. Martin beat former Dolphins cornerback Tim McKyer on a long pass to the 15-yard line, and Mark Higgs scored four plays later on a 1-yard run.

Atlanta (2-4) reached Miami's 12, but lost the ball on downs with 35 seconds left. Liffort Hobley broke up Chris Miller's pass to Keith Jones on fourth-and-7.

The victory gave Miami its third 5-0 start in team history. The Dolphins also won their first five games in 1972 and 1984, and went on to the Super Bowl both seasons.

Giants 31, Cardinals 21

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Even when things are going bad, the New York Giants still can find a way to do a number on the Phoenix Cardinals. Especially with Jeff Hostetler at quarterback.

Hostetler threw a touchdown and scrambled for another starting in place of injured Phil Simms, and Rodney Hampton ran for a career-high 167 yards as the Giants defeated Phoenix for their eight straight win over the Cardinals.

The win was the Giants (2-3) ninth straight over Phoenix (1-4) at Giants Stadium, and it prevented New York from hitting rock bottom — last place in the NFC East — under embattled second-year coach Ray Handley.

Hostetler, who has six straight wins over the Cardinals, made the two big plays. He avoided a blitz and hit Ed McCaffrey on a 25-yard touchdown pass midway through the second quarter to give New York a 21-7 lead. And he made a 16-yard dash to the end zone early in the third quarter for a 28-14 margin.

Hostetler, who lost his starting job to Simms mainly because of preseason injuries, finished 9 for 17 for 142 yards. He also carried eight times for 41 yards.

Browns 17, Steelers 9

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Browns rediscovered their wide receivers and stopped league-leading rusher Barry Foster cold on a critical fourth-down play, beating the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Browns (2-3) sent the Steelers (3-2) to their 10th loss in their last 11 trips to Cleveland.

Kevin Mack put Cleveland ahead for good 10-6 with a 1-yard run in the third quarter. After Pittsburgh closed to 10-9 on Gary Anderson's third field goal, Mike Tomczak threw the clinching 47-yard touchdown pass to wide-open Michael Jackson with 10:44 left in the game.

On the Steelers' ensuing possession, Pittsburgh coach Bill Cowher — who began both his coaching and playing careers with the Browns — went for it on fourth-and-1 at his 40. But Foster was met hard at the line for no gain.

The Steelers never recovered. They made it into Browns territory late, but Merrill Hoge fumbled with 1:24 left.

Pittsburgh hasn't scored a touchdown in two games.

No Cleveland wide receiver had caught a pass in the previous eight quarters, but Jackson, Keenan McCardell and Rico Smith all had receptions Sunday. McCardell's was his first as a pro.

49ers 24, Patriots 12

FOXBORO, Mass. — Steve Young rescued San Francisco from the brink of humiliation, commanding fourth-quarter scoring drives that gave the 49ers a victory over the winless New England Patriots.

Young's pinpoint passing and stunning running saved the 49ers for the second straight week. He ran for two fourth-quarter touchdowns the previous Sunday as they erased a 17-10 deficit and beat the Los Angeles Rams 27-24.

This time he teamed with Ricky Watters, who scored two fourth-quarter touchdowns, for the victory.

The Patriots (0-5) came into the game as huge underdogs. They were the NFL's lowest scoring team and hadn't scored in the first half all year.

But they took a 12-10 lead over San Francisco (5-1) on Hugh Millen's 11-yard pass to Ben Coates with 4:56 left in the third quarter. Charlie Baumann missed the extra point, but the Patriots still had their first lead of the season.

The Patriots had scored nine of their points after punt returner Ron Lewis lost fumbles. He was replaced by Don Griffin on New England's next punt, which Griffin held onto.

Colts 6, Jets 3, OT

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Colts won in spite of themselves. In spite of the offense, that is.

The Colts wasted a huge advantage in yardage with penalties, missed opportunities and a costly turnover. Yet Dean Biasucci, who earlier missed three of four attempts, gave Indianapolis a victory over the New York Jets with a 47-yard field goal three minutes into overtime.

New York's Cary Blanchard tied the game with 30 seconds left in regulation on a 35-yard field goal. Then Indianapolis moved 52 yards in eight plays after the overtime kickoff before Biasucci won the game.

The Jets (1-5) never got inside the Indianapolis 30 until their tying drive in the closing minutes of regulation, while the Colts (3-2) threatened on almost every possession the entire game.

In overtime, passes to Anthony Johnson and Reggie Langhorne, along with an offsides penalty by New York and a 9-yard run by Johnson took Indianapolis to the Jets' 30, where Biasucci kicked the winning field goal on fourth down.

Saints 13, Rams 10

NEW ORLEANS — Rickey Jackson had three sacks, Morten Andersen had two field goals and the New Orleans Saints had just enough running room to hold off the Los Angeles Rams.

New Orleans, as it's done all season, used a tough defense and ball-control offense to make up for a lack of firepower. The Saints (4-2) are second in the NFC West, one game behind San Francisco. Los Angeles (2-4) is tied for last in the division.

The Rams struggled until a second-half rally led by quarterback Jim Everett. Their longest drive of the game, a 75-yard trip downfield, tied the score at 10 and killed eight minutes, seven seconds.

New Orleans held the ball for 19:26 of the first half to Los Angeles' 10:34. But the Rams used up 11:11 in the third quarter.

OILERS: Esiason bruises passing arm in 2nd half to do. We took away the deep pass and made him throw the short routes. You'll notice he didn't have 500 yards, but he had five touchdowns. That's tough."

(From 1C)

It was a devastating defeat for the Bengals, who lost quarterback Boomer Esiason to a bruised passing arm in the fourth quarter. He hit his left forearm on Al Smith's helmet after releasing the ball and had to leave the game. X-rays found no fracture, but he's listed as questionable for next week.

Esiason's injury didn't play a role in the game — the Oilers were leading 38-17 with 13 minutes to play — but it made a bleak future even worse for a team that's lost three straight. The Bengals aren't moving the ball on offense or stopping anybody on defense.

"This football team has to regroup and see what we can do," coach Dave Shula said. "We've all seen what we can't do, which is compete against a good football team at this point. We're going to look hard at everything we're doing, and that includes who's out there."

The Oilers are on a roll, having won four straight with a balanced offense that was virtually unstoppable Sunday. Moon completed 21 of 32 for 216 yards and wasn't sacked, Lorenzo White ran for a career-high 149 yards, and Jeffires had his first three-touchdown game.

"That's the best we've played all year," Jeffires said. "We took it straight at 'em."

Right from the start. Al Del Greco kicked a 39-yard field goal and Moon threw touchdown passes of 8 and 14 yards to Jeffires and 2 yards to Givins to put the Oilers up 24-0 after Houston's first four possessions.

The Oilers defense made the decisive plays of the game late in the second half. Esiason threw a 21-yard touchdown pass to Tim McGee, and the Bengals recovered a fumble on the kickoff, but had to settle for Jim Breech's 29-yard field goal.

The Bengals hit Moon as he tried to pass two plays later, resulting in one of their two interceptions. But the Oilers held again, and Breech's 43-yard field goal was wide right, ending their comeback chances.

The Oilers put it away with a pair of touchdowns in a 68-second span of the third quarter. Moon threw a 7-yard touchdown pass to Givins, and Sean Jones intercepted Esiason's deflected pass at the Bengals' 7-yard line to set up a 3-yard scoring toss to Jeffires.

Moon's five touchdowns moved him ahead of George Blanda for the team career record of 169 TD throws. He's thrown five touchdowns one other time, during a 48-17 victory over the Bengals in 1990.

It's the third time the Bengals have given up five TD passes in a game. Buffalo's Jim Kelly also did it last year.

White's rushing total was the most by an Oilers back since Oct. 11, 1981, when Earl Campbell ran for 186 in a 35-17 victory over Seattle.

COWBOYS: Seahawks commit seven turnovers

(From 1C)

The Cowboys, taking advantage of several Seahawk mistakes, rolled to a 20-0 halftime lead on a football perfect 71-degree day.

Seattle quarterback Dan McGwire's fumbled snap was cashed in as Smith got a two-yard scoring run four plays later to put Dallas ahead 7-0.

"That set the tone for the day," Smith said. "It was a big factor. We got on top early and they got down early.

"After the Monday night game, we weren't going to have trouble getting up for this one. Now we get Kansas City next week. That will be a big game."

McGwire replaced starter Kelly Stouffer who suffered a shoulder injury last week. McGwire suffered a left shoulder injury and a pulled groin in the third period and was replaced by Gelbaugh, who led the London Monarchs to a World League title.

"I'm not sure if McGwire will play next week. We'll just have to see," Flores said.

Smith scored again from a yard away after Aikman had completed passes of 24 and 20 yards to Michael Irvin.

A lost fumble by John L. Williams positioned the Cowboys for a 31-yard field goal by Lin Elliott.

Elliott kicked a 51-yarder just before halftime after Aikman had completed passes of 13 and 24 yards to Irvin.

Horton's interception return came in the third period after a pass from Gelbaugh tipped off Williams' hands.

Seattle failed to convert its biggest break when safety Eugene Robinson intercepted an Aikman pass and returned it 49 yards to the Dallas 18. The Cowboys held and John Kasay missed a 47-yard field goal attempt.

Smith rushed 22 times for 78 yards. Dallas is 19-1 when Smith carries the ball 19 times or more.

"The day belonged to the defense," Smith said. "It was great to see 'em play like that. It was very important to us to bounce back from the Philadelphia game."

Dallas has an all-time record of 4-1 against the Seahawks.

"It was important for us to show that the loss in Philadelphia was just a bad ball game," said linebacker Robert Jones. "We were a lot better than we showed up in Philadelphia."

Dallas may have lost special teams star Bill Bates for several weeks. Bates suffered possible ligament damage in a knee and his exact status won't be determined until Monday.
