Recount expected in council race

Question of voting twice also under investigation

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Preparing for a recount and checking on whether a woman voted twice in the District 1 Big Spring City Council race - decided by one vote Saturday - begins today.

Also, it was learned, a woman who said she voted in District 1 is actually in District 2. The woman voted for Councilwoman Pat DeAnda, who lost to Stephanie Horton 118-117. DeAnda says the mistake raises further questions about the election.

"We'll take it a step at a time," said DeAnda, planning to file an affidavit today requesting a recount. "We'll do this step and see what comes out of this."

Horton said she considers herself the winner and in the event a tie is declared, does not want to go through another election. "I feel like I am the winner," she said. "There's no way I could go through another election."

Mayor Tim Blackshear will have to appoint a committee of four to recount ballots, which could be completed this week, said City Secretary Tom Ferguson. "Probably the next four days."

Opinion will also be sought from City Attorney Mike Thomas concerning action to take on the reported double vote, Ferguson said. "We're going to have to look at what needs to be done, we need to see what the procedure is."

A woman reportedly was given another ballot after telling an election official at Anderson Kindergarten Center the first ballot was marked for the wrong candidate. The election official may have put the first ballot in the ballot box instead of defaulting it as it should have been.

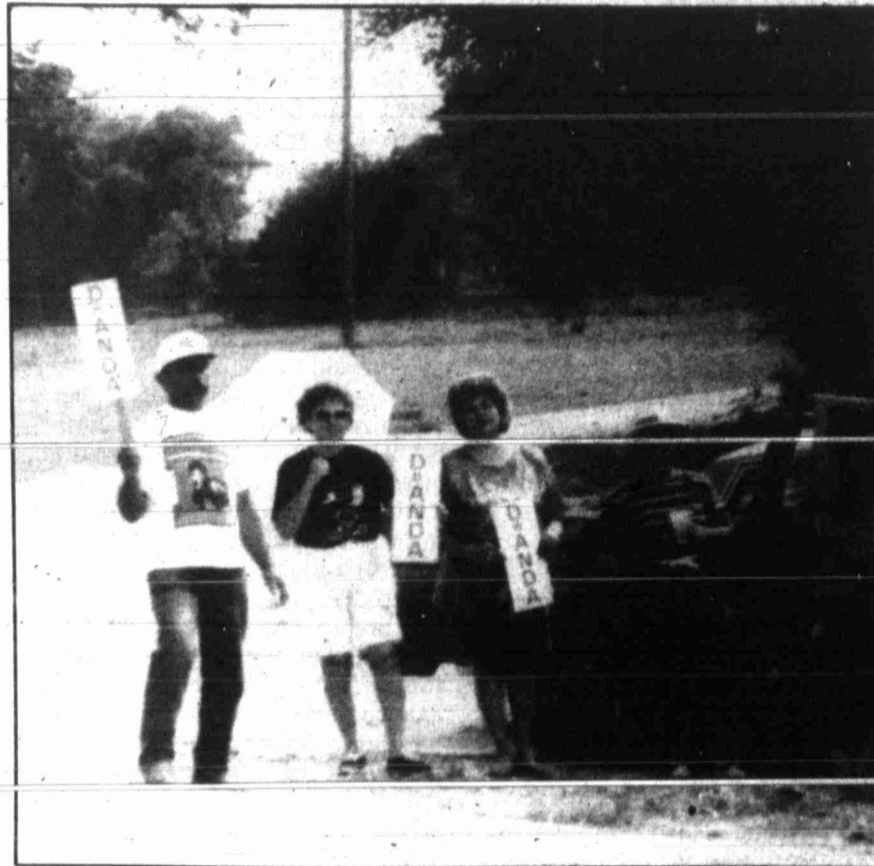

DeAnda said she also has questions about who was allowed to vote but shouldn't have and vice versa. Raising the question was a couple on the 1000 block of North Runnels who were put in separate districts during redistricting last year despite living in the same house.

"We did correct it so they could vote in the right election," said Kathy Sayles, Howard County tax assessor-collector, whose office registers voters. "They came in before the election."

However, Josephine DeLeon, put in District 2 with her husband Rudy, said she thought she could vote for a council race this year and was told Saturday by election officials at Northside Fire Station that she needed to go to Anderson Kindergarten to vote in the council race. Her sister was told the same. The District 2 council race is not up for election until next year.

"They were telling everybody to go vote over there," said DeLeon, whose name was apparently on the voter registration lists at Anderson. "I voted but my husband couldn't vote."

Ferguson said he will also check into that report as well. Mistakes like that "usually happens when you have changes," he said.

Supporters of Councilwoman Pat DeAnda wave signs Saturday at the city District 1 poll at Anderson Kindergarten Center. DeAnda lost 117-118 to Stephanie Horton but requested a recount and a check of reports that a woman voted twice. Confusion also resulted in at least one other person voting in District 1 that shouldn't have.

Krueger, Hutchison split area support

MARTHA E. FLORES
Regional Editor

There were no surprises in the way regional voters cast their ballot in the U.S. Senate race. Run-off candidates Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison and Democrat Bob Krueger split support in the four counties surrounding Howard County, each taking two counties.

In Mitchell County, Krueger received strong backing with 455 votes to Hutchison's 290. In Martin County Hutchison beat out Krueger by 24 votes, receiving 171 to his 155. In Borden County, Krueger received 54 and Hutchison 68 votes. Voters in Glasscock County gave Hutchison 92 votes with Krueger following with 57.

Appointed by Gov. Ann Richards, Krueger filled the senate seat vacated by Lloyd Bentsen when he accepted the Treasury Secretary position in President Bill Clinton's cabinet.

See related story page 6A

Hutchison became the State Treasurer in 1990 and was elected to the Texas House of Representatives in 1972 and 1974. She lost her bid for the U.S. House of Representatives in 1982.

Other candidates receiving significant support include Republicans Jack M. Fields, Joe Barton and Democratic Richard Fisher.

Fields received 210 votes in Martin County, 46 in Borden County, 117 in Glasscock County and 159 in Mitchell County.

Barton received 82 votes in Martin

County, 30 in Borden County, 36 in Glasscock County and 66 in Mitchell County.

Fisher received 41 in Martin County, eight in Borden County, seven in Glasscock County and 159 in Mitchell County.

Of the 24 candidates running, less than 40 received at least a single vote in the counties. Democrat Jose Angel Gutierrez, the only Hispanic running, had a showing in each county with the greatest support in Martin County with 23 votes.

Republican Stephen Hopkins, criticized for his graphic campaign commercials attesting to his pro-life stance, received votes in Mitchell, Martin and Borden counties, totaling 32, 41 and two, respectively.

The senate run-off is May 25.

Rejection of school bills means uneasy future

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Voters rejected controversial Proposition 1, which would have allowed the state to redistribute property tax funds directly on a statewide level, through the county education districts (CEDs).

Statewide, more than 60 percent voted against the proposition. Locally, about 65 percent voted against it.

Because Big Spring Independent School District officials had supported all three, how legislators will resolve the school finance issue has officials apprehensive, Superintendent Bill McQueary said.

"We're going to be optimistic that the solution they come up with is better than what was voted down (Saturday)," McQueary said. "We had a plan (Saturday) to keep us out of court and it was the least of all evils, and now I'm apprehensive about where we're going."

Legislators must develop an equitable plan by a June 1 deadline, or a state judge is scheduled to order withheld funds from districts across the state.

"I'm afraid consolidation may be one of the things they may come back with," BSISD school board president Donnie Baker said. "I hate to see it out in our area because our school districts are spread so far apart."

Consolidating schools would require area districts to combine into one district.

The now disbanded Howard-Glasscock CED, which had included Forsan, Coahoma, Big Spring and Garden City schools had faced much criticism from those who experienced property tax losses to other districts.

Forsan and Garden City school experienced the largest losses, almost a million dollar, to the CED, while Big Spring gained about that much and Coahoma school broke about even.

Former Big Spring CED representative and school board trustee Dan Wise said, "The legislature put all their apples in one basket. But, the people were telling the legislature and governor that they don't want any more taxes."

"I didn't like that we didn't have any options (to Proposition 1)," Wise added. "It seemed like it didn't matter if Proposition 2 and 3 were wonderful; everybody just saw them all attached to 'Robin Hood' (Proposition 1) and voted down all of them."

Educators had been split on their support of Proposition 2, which would have exempted local school districts from complying to unfunded state mandates.

"Teachers were encouraged to vote against Proposition 2, and that's the only thing we're happy about," said Suzy Combs, local president of the Texas State

Bill won't be missed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's "training wage," designed to help young people earn while they learn, has died at age 3. There were few mourners.

"How could anybody mourn the demise of it?" asked John Zalusky, an economist for the AFL-CIO, which opposed the creation of a subminimum wage. "Nobody used it."

Indeed, a Labor Department report to Congress in March found its use had been "very low."

The law permitted employers to pay youths $3.61 an hour during a 90-day training period if they did not replace workers earning the $4.25 minimum wage. Employers also could extend the period for another 90 days, but the Labor Department report said "none are known to have done so."

The wage was "a joke and a cruel hoax played on young employees, and an unattractive hiring tool for business," said Richard Berman, executive director of the non-profit Employment Policies Institute in Washington, which wanted an even wider difference between the minimum and training wages.

Julio Gallo killed in car crash

TRACY, Calif. (AP) — Julio Gallo, who with his brother Ernest founded the world's largest wine-making business, was killed Sunday when a Jeep he was riding in plunged off a road and down an embankment. He was 82.

Gallo's wife, Aileen, and another family member were injured in the crash, which occurred on the family's ranch, said fire Capt. Larry Fragoso. A fourth passenger was unhurt.

Gallo was believed to be driving the Jeep when it went out of control and plunged down the embankment and into a pond, Fragoso said. He was taken by helicopter to Memorial Medical Center in Modesto where he was pronounced dead, said nursing supervisor Elaine Day.

Gallo's 80-year-old wife, Aileen, was taken to Eden Hospital in Castro Valley, where she was treated for broken ribs and a broken sternum and was in serious condition. Gina Gallo, 26, believed to be the couple's granddaughter, suffered broken ribs and was in fair condition, the hospital said. Passenger Amie Gallo, 22, was not hospitalized.

Gallo and his brother began their wine-making enterprise in 1933, shortly after Prohibition. They rented a ramshackle building where they and their families pitched in to produce wine for 50 cents a gallon, then half the going price. They made $30,000 their first year.

China, Taiwan agree to talk

SINGAPORE (AP) — China and Taiwan did not exactly kiss and make up, but the once bitter foes have at least agreed to talk about many of the differences that keep them apart.

At their first formal meeting in 44 years, senior officials arranged for systematic negotiations on a wide range of topics.

However, there was no clear sign after Thursday's signing ceremony where the process might lead.

Both say that eventual reunification is a worthwhile goal but there is little hope of that taking place anytime soon.

"The talks have opened the door for high-level contacts between the two sides and may even pave the way for future political talks on reunification," said Wu Chao-hsieh, as researcher at Taiwan's semi-official Institute for International Relations.

"As hostilities continue to reduce, we can expect the two to stop their arms buildup against each other in three to five years."

But Wu estimated it could take another 10 years or longer before political talks on reunification could get under way.

Bad weather ends protest

MARJ AL-ZOHOUR, Lebanon (AP) — Rain-soaked Palestinian deportees trudged back to their tent camp Sunday, ending a weeklong sit-in to protest resumption of Middle East peace talks.

The exiles' spokesman, Abdul-Aziz Rantisi, said strong winds and heavy rains made it impossible to continue the outdoor protest. But he said the 396 deportees were "thinking of a new escalation" of their protest.

Wrapped in wet blankets, the deportees carried drenched mattresses and other belongings on their backs as they walked the 1 1/2 miles to the camp from the sit-in site facing Israel's self-declared security zone.

Israeli troops, fanned across hills overlooking the sit-in location, watched the retreat through binoculars.

The Palestinians have denounced Arab participants in the peace talks for reversing their pledges to boycott the meetings until the south Lebanon deportees are returned.

U.S. contemplates military action in Bosnia

Plan to divide Bosnia decried

By The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs reacted to the new peace accord by shelling Sarajevo, and the speaker of their self-proclaimed assembly denounced the plan to divide Bosnia into 10 semi-autonomous provinces.

The plan was approved at an international meeting in Greece on Sunday by Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic on the condition that it be ratified by the assembly, which unanimously voted it down just a week ago.

But when Bosnian Serbs meet on Wednesday they will be under new and intensified pressure from diverse sources: Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and the Clinton administration.

Milosevic is the Serb rebels' patron. They would be hard-pressed to keep fighting without the economic and military support of Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

The Clinton administration is holding firm on its threat of military intervention — likely air strikes — if Serbs break their promise of peace.

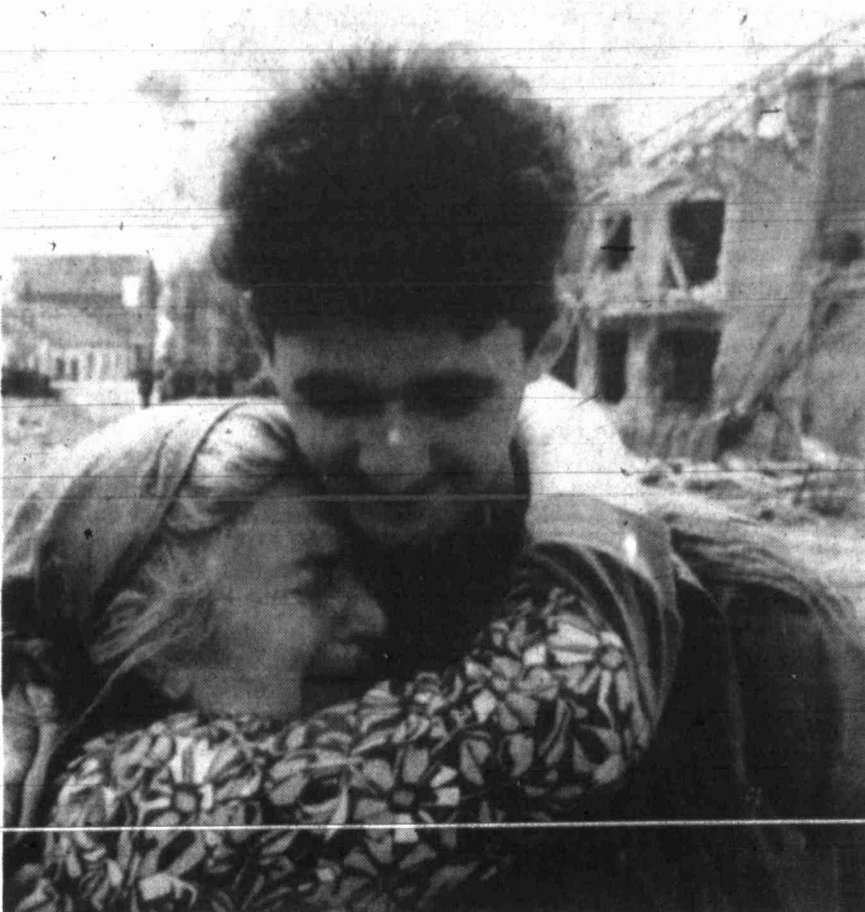

Administration officials are concerned Karadzic's signature on the international peace plan is just another empty gesture to avoid Western military involvement.

Many Bosnian Muslims also doubt that Serbs intend to abide by any agreement that would force them to give back land they now occupy.

"I would prefer them not to sign, and be up front for once," said Miro Purivatra, a prominent Sarajevo artist. "They are going to keep those territories they conquered forever."

Serbs have seized about 70 percent of the republic since fighting erupted last year when the republic's majority Muslims and Croats voted for independence from Yugoslavia.

The peace plan, drawn up by U.N.

A Muslim woman weeps on the shoulder of a Bosnian Muslim soldier in the destroyed downtown area of Vitez, Bosnia Sunday. Vitez, where British U.N. soldiers are based, has been the site of intense fighting in recent weeks.

envoy, Cyrus Vance and European Community mediator Lord David Owen, would reduce Serb territory to 43 percent.

"Nobody is happy with the signing of this document because people do not believe in Karadzic's signature," said Gordana Knezevic, editor of the local daily newspaper Oslobođenje. "I personally hope that the Americans do what they promised, that they won't be satisfied with the Serbs' word but with actual deeds."

Secretary of State Warren Christopher was seeking to persuade European allies to back air strikes on Serb artillery positions and lift the embargo on arms to the outgunned Muslims.

After a lukewarm reception from British leaders, he was meeting in London today with the foreign ministers of Spain and Greece before flying to Paris.

France and Britain have been reluctant to endorse any plan for the West's use of force against Serb rebels for fear their peacekeeping troops in Bosnia would come under attack.

Sarajevo residents were skeptical Sunday that Karadzic's acceptance of the peace plan would bring peace. So were U.S. leaders.

Both Christopher and President Clinton said they would judge Bosnia's Serbs not by what they say but by what they do.

Peace plan might be another 'empty gesture' by Serbs

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bosnian Serbs' promise of peace in Yugoslavia is not enough for the Clinton administration, which is preparing for military action if the pledge is broken.

"We will judge intentions by action," Clinton said, shortly before Serbians cast doubt on the peace agreement by lobbing four shells into Sarajevo, killing at least two people.

Administration officials are concerned that Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic's signature on the international peace plan Sunday was another empty gesture to avoid military action from the West.

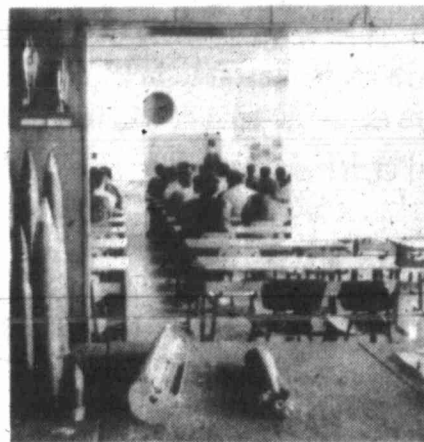

Clinton said the signing was "a positive step," but he ordered Secretary of State Warren Christopher to continue consultations in Europe "on the measures we will take if the Serbs do not act in good faith."

An administration official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that Clinton tentatively decided Saturday on a combination of limited air strikes against Bosnian Serb positions and lifting the embargo on arms to the outgunned Muslims.

Clinton made no mention of what steps he wants the Serbs to take, but Vice President Al Gore was more specific.

Appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," he said they must obey a cease-fire, lift sieges against cities such as Sarajevo and allow the delivery of humanitarian assistance.

"We've seen a pattern for quite some time on behalf of the Serbians to try to convince the world community that they are really negotiating, and then all the while the ethnic cleansing goes on and the violence continues," Gore said. "The violence has to stop."

The president consulted over the weekend with congressional leaders, Russian President Boris Yeltsin, British Prime Minister John Major, German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, French President Francois Mitterrand, Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and Italian Prime Minister Carlo Ciampi.

According to Ciampi's office, Clinton called the prime minister Sunday and said the agreement was "a first result ... of the firm line that was adopted by the international community and will be reinforced with whatever further initiatives are necessary."

Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole said Clinton informed him by telephone early Sunday of the peace agreement.

"He thinks we ought to proceed as though nothing happened and let Christopher make the rounds, get the allies on board just in case this turns out to be a sham," Dole said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Three reports missing in U.S. Customs Service smuggling investigation

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former Treasury Department agent Teresa Price got a surprise recently — allegations she came across two years ago about possible Customs Service involvement in drug smuggling were never investigated.

The reason? Three reports she wrote describing possible drug smuggling mysteriously were missing from the official case file her superiors used to close down the investigation.

Prompted by the reports, obtained recently by The Associated Press, the Treasury Department has opened an internal review to find out what happened.

"The fact that the information isn't in the files and wasn't investigated is disturbing, and I hope they get to the bottom of it," said Price, now an investigator at the Small Business Administration.

The case began in 1990 when Price was assigned by the Treasury Department's Office of Inspector General to investigate allegations of favoritism by Customs officials toward a warehouse operator in Long Beach, Calif.

In several meetings with informants, she heard allegations of Customs Service involvement with drug smugglers. She detailed the allegations in three separate memos in December 1990.

"Everything I wrote I passed along to my immediate superior," Price said in an interview.

But according to the case ledger and officials, none of the three reports reached the official eight-volume case file that the Treasury inspector general's office in Washington used to close down the probe in 1991.

"At this point, we're still trying to determine how the material didn't get into the file," said James Cottos, the Treasury Department's assistant inspector general for investigations.

Since learning about Price's memos, Cottos said the smuggling allegations have been forwarded to the Customs Service for investigation.

He said his own agency is conducting an internal review into why the reports didn't reach Washington.

The missing reports are the latest twist in an investigation in which:

—An informant, James Kendrick, was gunned down eight months after he began providing information to Price. Los Angeles police believe the killing stemmed from a robbery but federal investigators received some information suggesting a link to the case.

—Investigators discovered that the Customs Service was inexplicably diverting some cargo at its Long Beach, Calif., checkpoints to a single warehouse. No action was taken but Customs agreed to stop the diversion.

—17 U.S. Customs Service officers were reprimanded for socializing at a Christmas party paid for by the same warehouse operator who benefitted from the diversions.

Kendricks, a business consultant, was a key source of the drug allegations and photos proving the reprimanded Customs inspectors had socialized with the warehouse operator, documents show.

Sri Lankan police try to identify suicide bomber

By The Associated Press

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Police circulated a picture of the severed head of President Ranasinghe Premadasa's assassin today in hopes of identifying the suicide bomber.

The man approached Premadasa on a bicycle during a May Day parade on Saturday and triggered explosives strapped to his chest. Twenty-four people were killed, including the assassin and the president, and 36 people wounded.

Mourners streamed past the casket of the slain president today as 350,000 people waited their turn outside his home.

Shops and government offices opened for the first time since the president was killed, and streets were as crowded and noisy as usual.

The government has blamed the killing on the Tamil Tigers, a guerrilla faction fighting for an independent Tamil homeland in the north and east. The Tigers have denied it.

Detectives took the photograph of the killer through Tamil neighborhoods of Colombo to see if anyone could recognize the man. The picture showed a virtually unmarked face, with eyes closed and mouth open. The head appeared to be resting on the street or against a wall.

Police superintendent Lionell Gunatilleke said the assassination bore the trademarks of a Tiger operation and was similar to the killing of former Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in May 1991.

Premadasa's assassin was found with a broken cyanide capsule embedded in his neck. Tigers are sworn to commit suicide rather than be captured, and all recruits are issued poison capsules.

Dear Beakman, Why is a knife sharp? Katie Krause Staples, Minnesota

Dear Katie, Knives provide many challenges. First there's the weird way you spell their name. Then there are the dangers. After all, the whole idea of a knife is to cut things. And you do not want to cut yourself.

Knives are about force and concentrating force. The reason a knife is sharp is that a very fine point concentrates force — enough force to slice things apart.

The opposite of how a knife works is a bed of nails. It has nothing to do with being in a trance. It does have to do with spreading the force out.

WHAT TO DO: Lay the boxtop flat on the butter. Now push down. Next, stand the boxtop on its edge and push down. What happened?
WHAT IS GOING ON: The flat boxtop would not cut into the butter. Your force was spread out over the whole width of the boxtop. On its edge, the boxtop concentrated your force and sliced the butter. The smaller the edge, the more it concentrates the same force.

We asked:

What is your analysis of President Clinton's first 100 days in office?

It took Bush four years to do nothing, it took Bill Clinton 100 days to do the same. Nothing. Personally, I think they ought to give him more time. He's had too many in-house problems, like Waco.

Tom Ament

All I can say is he broke his promises, just like all of them. I'm not for taxes or gays in the army, but I like the way he greets people. He's friendlier. He'll accomplish some of his goals over time. Nancy Annen

He hasn't lived up to his promises, but I think that's because he's a bit ambitious. Of course it's easy for a politician to promise, but to deliver.

Bob Ramsey

I like the things Hillary has done with health care. But as far as Clinton's concerned, he's giving the middle class a bad time with the taxes and the economy, and it's frightening to think we have to have 3 1/2 years of this person will the taxes and all that.

Jill Cox

Is it possible to stay safe in America?

She meant to kill him. She shot him point blank four times in the chest with a .357 magnum. He'd argued with her boyfriend Harold and everyone knew he had a gun in the car. I guess she didn't trust the policemen to protect Harold because they were standing 20 feet away when she shot him. She went to the state pen and Harold found himself another girlfriend.

Brenda Brooks

I had never witnessed a shooting before and it made as big an impression as the four holes in his chest. The area where the shooting took place is commonly known as the "other side" as it came to be called in that hot summer of 1978, "Dodge City" (you know cause you had to dodge bullets all the time). Mostly everyone carried a weapon to protect themselves from...well everyone else.

eries in the trunk of her car, started to drive off. A young black male ran up to her car and started shouting at her. She said she was terrified, thinking he was going to harm her. She said she stopped anyway, and as the teenager approached her car he gestured toward the top of the car where she had left her purse. She said she thanked him and he replied "no problem" and walked off. The point of her letter was that you normally don't hear those kinds of stories. My point is that a Paranoid would have KNOWN this teenager was about to mug her and shot him. You know the saying "shoot first and ask questions later."

Then there are the Cowboys. You know them. Law-abiding folks, just barely. The wanna be Rambo types. How many of you have heard one of them say, "They had better be glad I didn't have my gun or I would've..." Now I might be the one who's paranoid, but I do believe some of these low level fools would really hurt someone over what I consider trivial matters. Things that in the past resulted in a cussing out or fist fight; cutting in line, staring too long at someone's date, or just to prove they're not a wimp.

So how does one stay safe in America in the 1990's? I don't know, but I've been to Dodge and I didn't like it - not one little bit.

It's a matter of conscience

Editor's Note: While Lewis Grizzard is recovering from heart surgery, previously run columns will be used.

I have decided to boycott the movie "White Men Can't Jump," currently the No. 1 box office hit. Boycotting movies is fashionable these days. Note the gay community is angry with the manner gays are portrayed in "Basic Instinct."

The reason I'm boycotting the film is that I think the phrase "White Men Can't Jump" is overtly racist.

What if a movie came out called "Black Men Can't Swim"?

Didn't baseball executive Al Campanis lose his job with the Los Angeles Dodgers for saying black men lacked buoyancy?

Sure he did. So what am I supposed to think when I see a movie called "White Men Can't Jump"? I'm supposed to think if "Black Men Can't Swim" is racist and insensitive, then so is "White Men Can't Jump," and why isn't David Duke raising hell?

But then we get into a sticky area that has to do with truth. Truth is especially sticky these days, because even if it is true, you're not supposed to say it, if it's politically incorrect.

Lewis Grizzard

The truth is most white men have the vertical leaping ability of an anvil. Everybody on my high school basketball team, for instance, was white and nobody could dunk the ball.

Buddy Barnes could come the closest. What he would do is put Sticks 'Em all over his hands so he would have an easier time holding on to the ball with one hand.

Thinking he could get high enough to dunk with two hands was like thinking pigs would one day fly.

Buddy was about 6 feet 3 inches. He came close to dunking the ball a few times, but he never quite made it.

I was 6 feet 1 inch, but it never occurred to me to try to dunk the ball. Simply getting both feet off the ground at the same time was a considerable accomplishment for me.

Some white guys can dunk a basketball now, of course, but as far as I know, none have won prizes for it, as has the former Atlanta Hawks Spud Webb, an African American who wouldn't come up to my neck (he's 5 feet 7 inches).

So, it's true white men can't jump. Larry Bird, perhaps the best white basketball player in history, doesn't even jump very well. He's just quite tall (6 feet 9 inches) and is a great shooter.

Still if I've got to be politically correct at all times, why doesn't everybody else?

And, in case anybody is wondering, I do not think black men can't swim or lack buoyancy.

When I was growing up there was no swimming pool in Moreland, Ga. We swam in various ponds and lakes.

One day I was swimming with a black friend of mine named Nathaniel, who also was a great basketball player.

We decided to race across the pond. I was about three-fourths across when Nathaniel was already headed back from where we started. I firmly believe Nathaniel could have given Johnny Weissmuller a swim for his money.

A white high school basketball coach once explained to me, "The reason white kids can't jump is that they've been driven everywhere they went while black kids have had to walk. As a result, they've just got better legs."

What I would like to see happen is for everybody to forget political correctness and be able to think or say anything they please.

That would mean if Al Campanis wants to say black men lack buoyancy, he could say it. It's a stupid thing to say, but if we'd put a tax on all the stupid things people say—remember George Bush said for a long time there was no recession?—we could make some headway with the federal deficit.

But as long as there is political correctness and the speech police to answer to, I'll just have to play the ball game like everybody else.

"White Men Can't Jump," indeed. The truth shall make me extremely p.o.'ed.

USDA's hardy perennials

Scrapps Howard News Service

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's multitudinous field offices will soon test President Clinton's resolve to cut non-military spending. Now operating in 85 percent of America's counties, including some urban ones, these offices have settled upon the federal budget like locusts. Or, in some cases, locust husks—their reason for being having long departed.

This will not be a case of the president's having to fight it out with congressional swineherds devoted to defending their pork. The fact is, almost nobody wants to defend many of these offices, created to link farmers with federal programs. Why not? Because, short of their resident bureaucrats, they have no constituents. Since the New Deal, when most USDA programs were launched, the number of U.S. farms has fallen from 6.3 million to 2.1 million. Yet the USDA has pulled the blinds in scarcely any offices, now numbering about 7,000.

Spurred by a 1991 General Accounting Office report estimating that superfluous ag offices cost taxpayers $90 million annually, Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., and Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., proposed closing many of the facilities. Edward Madigan, George Bush's secretary of agriculture, left a list of 1,200 USDA outposts that could be consolidated. The pumpkin is now in the patch of Madigan's successor, Clinton appointee Mike Espy.

So far Espy hasn't started carving. Offices remain open, though the only traffic they might get is a few streetball players in search of a water fountain. Yet it would be premature to accuse Espy of stalling.

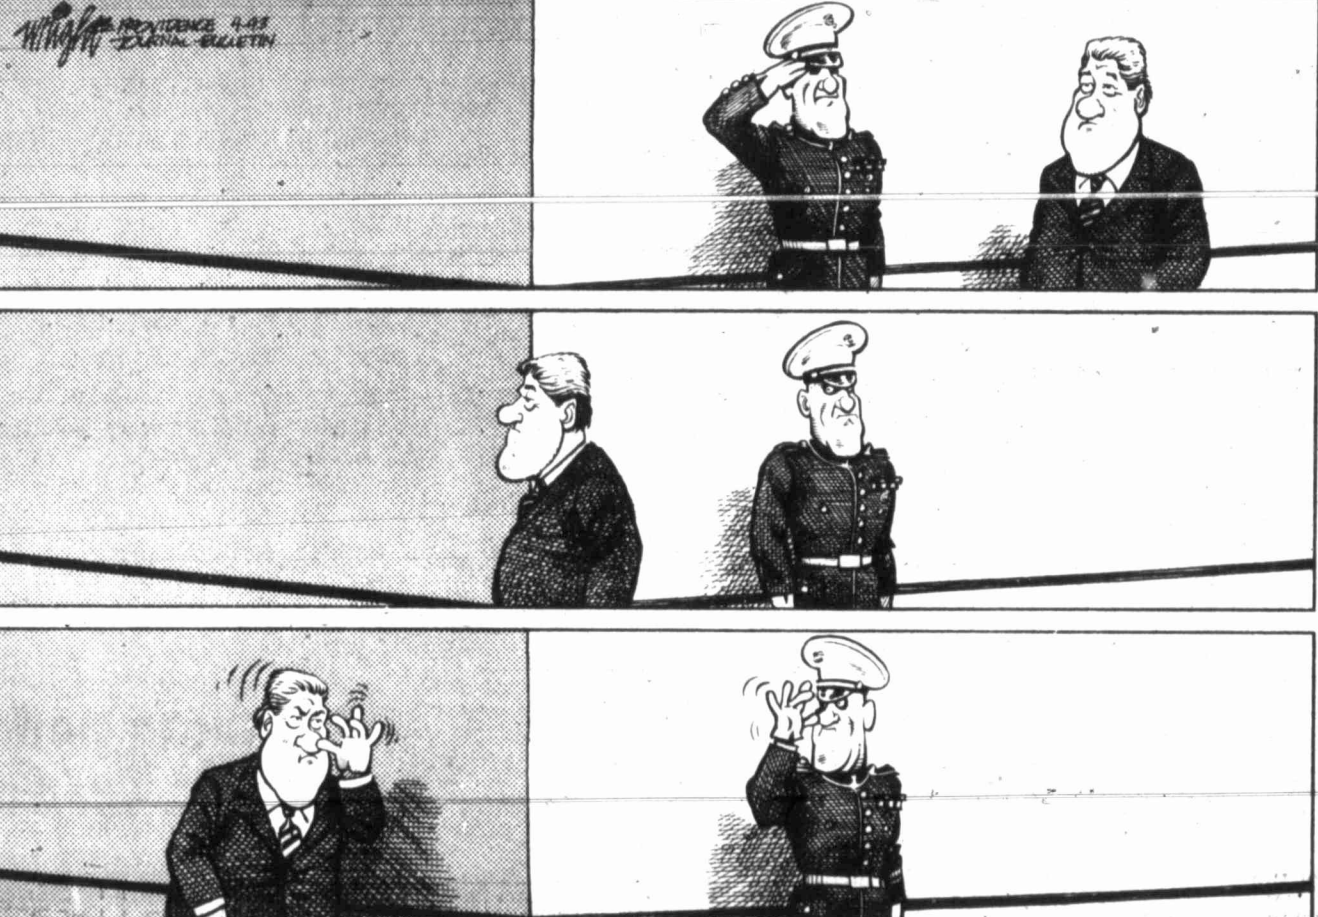

Indeed, the new secretary claims that he wants to go beyond merging branch offices to streamline the entire agency. He has mused about combining the Soil Conservation Service, Agricultural Stabilization Service and similar outfits to meet Clinton's goal of reducing USDA costs by $400 million in FY 1994. Reform the top, Espy suggests, and the bottom will follow.

Maybe so. But we wish the secretary would plow under a few of those sleepy offices—just to prove his intentions are serious.

Absolutely no use for snakes.

FISHTRAP HOLLOW, Miss. — It is a big moment when the first poisonous snake of the year is killed.

All the neighbors come out to see, and the length and width of the carcass grows as news of the reptile travels. Neighborhood dogs stop by and give a respectful sniff, until a hawk or possum makes a meal of the snake and the gawking is done.

This year it was a water moccasin, common in the hollow. A truck ran over it, but the snake writhed in a defiant road dance for a long while after death, and I gave it wide berth.

I'm not proud of my fear. Readers and friends often lecture me about considering all snakes the enemy. One woman wrote from Texas recently and asked in a polite but pointed tone if I killed "all snakes or just the ones that pose a threat to you?"

The answer is that seldom do I get close enough to a snake to kill it, but my philosophical stance is far deadlier. I would kill them all, if I could. When I garden, I go armed with a hoe and a make-my-day attitude.

It's said that my literary hero, Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, had a like phobia, one she tried to conquer by going on snake hunts and forcing herself to handle any prey taken alive.

I admire her pluck but cannot imitate it. I once looked up "Snakes" in the World Book and made myself study the pictures. That's as far as I go without a hoe.

Marjorie Rawlings killed a bad snake in her bathroom with a copy of her most famous book, "The Yearling," causing a Florida cracker neighbor to remark: "I guess writing them books comes in handy for something."

The root of my fear must be in childhood summers spent in steamy South Georgia, where rattlesnakes were common as gnats. My grandfather often returned from the fields with a snake draped over his hoe like a flag of man's superiority. His desk drawer was full of trophy rattles, and on a dare from a cousin I would open the drawer to hear that horrible, clicking sound, as alive as ever in its bleached, dusty state, at home with the insurance policies and crop ledgers.

People around here tell snake stories. I heard a good one at the nursery the other day, about a snake that electrocuted itself on an electric fence. The snake was trying to worm inside a bluebird house at the time and deserved to die.

Though not wild about them, I can be reasonable about certain snakes. Even most of my close friends don't know I once shared a house with one, a majestic king snake that lived off the fat of the attic.

We both inhabited a spectacular if aging hacienda-style mansion in Monroeville, Ala.; I was a caretaker for the estate, which meant my presence kept thieves from stripping it clean of antiques. At night I could hear my fat upstairs neighbor moving about, patrolling for rats. I didn't particularly like the close quarters, but the snake had seniority and kept a low profile.

The Monroe Journal, where I worked during that period, often published what's known in the highly technical newspaper business as Big Snake Pictures. A man would come into the office and demand a photographer.

As half of the staff, it would fall my lot to follow him to the parking lot, where the carcass would be draped across a pickup tailgate, limp as a carnival prize.

Nobody smiled on those pictures. I remember a gruesome story a dozen years back that slithered across the wire service from North Mississippi. Rattlesnakes had taken up in a house and would not be moved, no matter what. Eventually the human tenants were forced to burn the dwelling.

The story gave me nightmares. If ever I found a snake, say, in my kitchen, I'm not sure I could cook again. Or if it was found in the bedroom, would I ever sleep?

The worst place of all would be to discover a snake where Marjorie Rawlings found hers—the bathroom.

No wonder she threw the book at him.

Krueger, Hutchison come out swinging in runoff

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — It's a two-person race today, and both U.S. Senate candidates are on the attack.

State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison, a Republican, and appointed Democratic Sen. Bob Krueger wasted no time Sunday in launching their runoff campaigns.

In Howard County, Hutchison received 989 votes; Krueger 901; Joe Barton, 473; Jack Fields 556; Richard Fisher, 250; and Jose Angel Gutierrez, 65.

At the Teamster. Hall in Dallas, Hutchison blasted Krueger as a Washington insider. She said she expected him to wage a negative campaign, pointing to a heated exchange the two had on television Saturday night.

"I was positive, talking about the issues and my view for America, and he was down in the gutter. Krueger is an insider and I think he's going to be repudiated," she said.

At an Austin news conference, the interim senator scoffed at her "outsider" claims, noting that Hutchison won a state House seat in 1972 and has held appointed positions. "She's only been in government for about 20 years ... She went to office before I did."

Krueger also referred to charges — strongly denied by Hutchison — that she had used treasury employees for personal chores and struck one employee with a notebook.

"The people of Texas over these next five weeks will clearly want to assess questions of integrity," Krueger said.

Hutchison was the surprise first-place finisher in Saturday's election, edging Krueger by 497 votes, 593,479 to 592,982. Each received about 29 percent of the total.

No other candidate in the 24-person field even came close in the race to determine who serves the final 1 1/2 years of the term originally won by U.S. Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen.

Although the runoff date hasn't been set, aides said Gov. Ann Richards is expected to call it for June 5.

Richards appointed Krueger to replace Bentsen and had campaigned for him.

With the state's other senator a Republican, Phil Gramm, Richards said Texans need to keep the second seat in Democratic hands since a Democrat also is president.

"This race is going to determine whether or not Texas has influence in Washington, whether we keep the space station and the (superconducting) super collider, and keep jobs," Richards said.

Hutchison's showing was particularly impressive, since two Republican congressmen also ran. Combined, the three GOP contenders got about 57 percent of the vote. One candidate needed 50 percent or more to win outright.

Reps. Barton and Fields, received 14 percent apiece.

Fisher, a former adviser to Ross Perot, was a distant fifth with 165,671 votes, or 8 percent. Dallas lawyer Gutierrez got 3 percent, and the 18 others split about 3 percent among them.

Krueger said he wasn't worried about his showing or the combined totals received by the top GOP candidates.

"I don't think those were Republican votes," Krueger said. "I think they were votes for a lot of different candidates who were out there."

Hutchison said the margin surprised her and showed how weak the appointed senator is.

"I expected to trail Bob Krueger by six to seven points. When I came in first with two strong Republican challengers, I was surprised I admit," she said.

During his news conference, Krueger cited what he said are differences between himself and Hutchison that he hopes to show voters. Krueger said he is pro-choice on abortion rights, while "Kay, as we know, is multiple choice."

He said he favors family leave, childhood immunization, Head Start and other programs important to average Texans.

And he pointed to February news reports that Hutchison had selected the company of her campaign finance chairman as the exclusive dealer to sell $300 million short-term notes last year. Hutchison said the investment banking company's political support played no role in her decision to award the contract to it and that the deal saved millions.

In her campaign appearance, Hutchison continued to air her outsider themes, saying she wanted to change business-as-usual in Washington.

She called her appearance at a labor hall symbolic of her efforts to "reach out to all the people of Texas. I am a grassroots person. That's the reason I won yesterday."

Hutchison also voiced confidence.

"It's going to be a tough four or five weeks, but the people have already spoken," she said. "We have a choice between continuing the old bygone era ... and a new generation of leadership for America."

Teachers Association (TSTA). Teachers would have a better chance of getting something like raises if the legislature mandates it, partially funds it and requires school districts to fund the rest.

"If it would have passed, the districts would have had the option to turn down a mandate if the state did not fully fund it," Combs added.

Administrators and trustees were in favor of the proposition because they said it put less stress on districts to come up with funds for mandates, consequently increasing local taxes. Voters narrowly disapproved Proposition 3, which would have allowed the Legislature to issue $750 million in bonds for making loans to or purchasing the bonds of school districts for construction or improvement of facilities, including furnishings.

"Proposition 3 was something we could have definitely taken advantage of," BSISD school board President Don Baker said. "It could definitely hurt our school district because of the possibility of looking at a bond issue in the future."

Life's hard lessons

Athletic director wants local youth to rely on themselves, others

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Dwight Butler, the Big Spring High School athletic director, offers local youth insight on balancing independence and teamwork — a goal for which he has strived in his own life.

"What I can offer them is I've been down the same road a lot of these kids have," Butler said. "There's something these kids should learn — you can't always depend on others, but you can't always do it on your own."

Butler, the father of two boys, Bowa, 10, and Tye, 8, has been the director and varsity head football coach since 1991. He came to BSHS in 1987.

The oldest of three, he was born in Hobbs, N.M., in 1955 and raised in the Southwest, including time on a Navajo reservation. His parents were an educator and a homemaker.

Before finishing his high school career in Artesia, N.M., Butler had collected letters in sports such as track, basketball and baseball. It wasn't until his junior year that he played football.

"I was an very aggressive young man; a very defiant youth," he said. "(Being in sports) was a way to keep me in school and out of trouble."

Not only did football keep Butler in school, it won him a scholarship to Texas Christian University after high school.

"I had learned to really love the game," he said. "I didn't go to college for the right reason, though. I went to play."

Hunger in the heartland is growing

By The Associated Press

NEWTOWN, Mo. — Seven days a week, Al Reger tends to his land, growing the corn and raising the cattle that feed other Americans. Once a month, though, he stops to seek help — to feed his own family.

The fourth-generation farmer knows that sweat and sacrifice alone won't guarantee his family three meals a day. So he and his wife, Carolyn, devised a swallow-your-pride solution: They help run — and rely on — a food bank.

"It's a lifesaver for us," said the 42-year-old father of two. "The grocery bills are the highest bills any of us have, except heat in the winter. Without this to stretch our food budgets, there would be hunger, true hunger."

Here in the heart of America's heartland, the farm crisis is a memory for some, but an aching reality for others who are finding it harder to eke out a living, pay the utilities and meet one of life's most basic responsibilities — putting food on the table.

Hunger in the heartland is, by some accounts, a growing problem. Last fall, Tufts University experts analyzed one report that estimated up to 30 million Americans don't get enough to eat. It concluded the biggest increase in recent years appeared to be in the Midwest, including rural areas.

"In the breadbasket of America ... growing numbers of people from farms and cities, perhaps for the first time in their lives, are bringing their children into emergency feeding facilities," said Larry Brown, director

Butler had sustained knee injuries during his high school basketball stint that, after two years, ended his college football career.

"I went back home (to Artesia) and worked in the oil field, and my parents didn't allow me to live at home," he said. "It was a tough decision for my father, but I know he wanted me to realize it's a hard, cruel world."

Butler said he found hard lessons in life, and now is passing those along to youth in the local athletics program.

"Sooner or later, kids have to learn to get out there, and know they've got to stand on their own two feet," he added. "Being in athletics not only teaches these kids self discipline, but some sort of teamwork."

Perhaps his favorite team in town consists of his wife and college sweetheart, Kathy, a First Baptist Church leader; and his two boys, who are active in community sports such as soccer, basketball and baseball.

"I've grown up playing them all. If God gives you a talent of doing more than one thing, you should just go and do it," he said. "It's such an important part of kids' lives."

Butler said he influences the lives of not only his own children, but the children of 831 parents in the district. The athletic director said he gives the same amount of importance to all sports he oversees.

"The misconception is that (a director who is a head football coach) is only interested in football players, but that's not my way," he said. "When you're in charge of it all, you get excited about (the accomplishments of) all the participants."

He said he strives to create opportunities for young people in the local athletic program.

"It takes an exceptional coaching staff to share athletes. I really encourage the kids to do more than one thing," he said. "I feel I am just a minute part of this thing because I'm a very 'we-oriented' person. "There are tough decisions I have to make for the benefit of the majority of participants in athletics, not just one kid, and some may not feel a decision is very positive," he added. "The only thing for me to do is take the responsibility for the heat, and, more importantly, try to keep the kids going in a positive direction."

Love nest

Bird drama becomes cable presentation

By The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Amelia is back home. But will she stay with Andy? Or will he fly off with that ruthless gal trying to move in on the love birds?

Thousands of cable TV viewers are staying tuned to find out as a camera fixed on a peregrine falcon nest on a downtown office building catches a rare glimpse of love in high places.

For the past five springs, Continental Cablevision has broadcast the activities on the 21st-floor window ledge around the clock to its 500,000 subscribers. The company even maintains a hot line viewers can call to learn more about the endangered birds from biologists following them.

This month, a second female appeared, creating a bloody love triangle. And in true daytime drama tradition, the dose of sex and violence has boosted ratings for what already was one of the cable company's most popular programs.

"I think everyone's sympathetic toward the first female," said one viewer, Sue Theroux, 43, of Chicopee.

"This has really caught the attention of the viewers," Tom Cruc, community programming director, said Tuesday. "It's reminded people they have something really great here and almost lost it."

The trouble began after the female, Amelia, laid her first egg on April 12.

Soon, Amelia was fighting off the intruding female in bloody aerial battles high above the downtown streets. The falcons, the world's fastest fliers, dove and swooped on each other in screaming arcs, talons locked.

Amelia "came back to the nest hurting three days later, her feathers all fluffed up and bleeding from one armpit and laid a second egg," said Thomas French, director of the state's endangered species program. "Then she disappeared."

Andy stepped in and sat on the eggs. But he wasn't up to demands of work and single fatherhood.

As days passed, the weather turned colder and Andy had to leave the eggs to hunt and feed. French reluctantly decided to take and incubate the eggs in hopes the chicks would be saved and Andy would get back in the dating game.

Would he be so fickle after five faithful years with Amelia?

"Peregrines mate for life, but mourn not a moment," French said. "But in true romance tradition, Amelia returned home Monday and settled back on her eggs."

"Without this, we wouldn't be able to eat," says Gwenn Grapes, of Sedalia, Mo., about the food pantry she and her husband run in that city. Her husband, Ron, was injured in a work-related accident and has regular medical bills.

of Tufts' Center on Hunger, Poverty and Nutrition Policy.

The irony isn't lost on Dave Ostendorf of Prairiefire, an Iowa-based rural activist group.

"It's a tragic commentary that many of those who produce the food are themselves not really well-fed," he said, noting that unlike the South, "hunger and poverty in the rural Midwest are out of sight and out of mind."

Not everyone agrees with these dire assessments.

Some experts say the 30 million estimate is far too high. Others say the problem is malnutrition — not hunger — because no one is starving. Indeed, there are no babies here with bloated bellies, no skeletal-like adults staggering in the streets as in Third World nations.

"The picture of hunger in the U.S. is more subtle," Brown said. "A child may be five, six pounds underweight."

... Most people would not even notice it. ... From a health perspective, it's a very serious problem."

Some statistics support his claims about food shortages.

The Missouri Rural Crisis Center, which operates 10 food pantries including the one run by Reger, served more than 25,000 people in 1992 — almost twice as many as two years earlier.

Food stamp numbers are up, too, in several largely rural Midwestern states. Indiana posted a 59 percent increase in recipients from 1988 to 1992; Missouri, a 44 percent jump in the same period.

Experts attribute the increases to the economic turmoil of the '80s and the aftermath of farm troubles and factory closings in the Midwest.

Some activists also contend these numbers reflect just part of the problem because many folks are intimidated by red tape or too proud to seek help.

"Having a farm, you're supposed to be a rugged individual, a self-starter," said Roger Allison, director of the Missouri crisis center. "Here you are, coming to us for a handout. There's a whole mental stigma associated with that."

Reger confronts that, especially among farmers using the food pantry that serves about 30 families in this desolate hamlet in north-central Missouri, 20 miles south of the Iowa border.

"They feel it's a failure of themselves to do well," he said.

Suns will have to make history to stay alive

By The Associated Press

The Phoenix Suns, on the brink of one of the biggest upset losses in playoff history, must do something that's never been done before to avoid that embarrassment.

The Los Angeles Lakers, the only one of 16 NBA playoff teams with a losing record, shocked the Suns for the second time Sunday, holding them to 11 points on 19 percent shooting in the fourth quarter of an 86-81 victory.

In postseason history, only three teams have come back from a 2-0 deficit to win a best-of-5 series. In none of those cases did the team with the 2-0 deficit lose the first two games at home.

"I played as hard as I could," said Charles Barkley, who had 18 points and 21 rebounds, but missed all seven of his shots in the Suns' miserable fourth quarter. "I just didn't play well."

The Suns have history on their side in one respect: in the previous nine years of the current 16-team NBA playoff format, the top seeds in the two conferences are 18-0 in the first round.

The Lakers were the NBA's most successful team in the 1980s, with five championships, but they have been the Western Conference's eighth seed the last two seasons.

"James Worthy and A.C. Green and Byron Scott. You know, those guys have been in the playoffs almost 10 years," said Vlade Divac, who had 19 points and 11 rebounds, including two big baskets, down the stretch. "They know how to play under pressure."

In other playoff games Sunday, New York defeated Indiana 101-91, Chicago routed Atlanta 117-102 and Utah downed Seattle 89-85. The Knicks and Bulls lead 2-0 and Seattle and Utah are 1-1.

Tonight's only games have Boston at Charlotte and Houston at the Los Angeles Clippers in series tied 1-1.

NBA PLAYOFFS

The New Jersey-Cleveland and Portland-San Antonio series also are 1-1.

The Suns, who outscored the Lakers 27-20 in the third quarter, but made only 32.8 percent of their shots in the other three periods, led 78-72 with 5:56 remaining. But Phoenix didn't hit another basket.

"Our offense was so out of sync," said Phoenix point guard Kevin Johnson, who had 16 assists. "The team was not playing with confidence at the offensive end."

Worthy tied it 80-80 with 2:31 remaining, hitting a 3-pointer that just beat the 24-second buzzer.

"James hit that big 3," Barkley said. "You know, if he misses that and we score, we've got a five-point lead, but that ties it up."

Divac then hit a jump hook and a dunk for an 84-80 lead, and Scott completed the scoring with a jumper.

"We did the things to make the game close in the final few minutes. That was our plan going in," Scott said.

The next two games are at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., followed by one more in Phoenix if the Suns can win twice on the road. Phoenix was 62-20 in the regular season, with a 35-6 record at home.

KNICKS 101, PACERS 91

New York salvaged its 22-game winning streak at home, rallying from a 16-point deficit to defeat Indiana.

The Pacers, whose 41-41 regular-season record was 19 games worse than New York's, led 48-32 in the second quarter and 59-44 early in the second half before the Knicks pulled within one at the end of the third quarter. Then John Starks scored 12 of his playoff career-high 29 points in the fourth period as New York outscored the Pacers 30-19 in the final 12 minutes.

"This game was played in two separate halves," coach Pat Riley said.

"For some reason, we don't have the intensity that we need at the beginning of games. I don't have an answer for it. It wasn't until things

By The Associated Press

Canseco had a two-run single for his 1,000th hit.

RED SOX 4, ANGELS 3

Boston, off to its best-ever start at Fenway Park, completed its first three-game sweep at home against California since August 1978.

Mike Greenwell and Billy Hatcher each drove in two runs for the Red Sox, 9-1 at home. Boston has won four in a row after losing six straight on the West Coast.

TWINS 6, TIGERS 3

Kirby Puckett hit a go-ahead home run in the eighth inning at Tiger Stadium. The Twins won their second straight following an eight-game losing streak.

Puckett's fifth home run came against David Haas (1-1) and made it 4-3. Brian Harper hit a solo homer in the seventh for the Twins.

Mike Trombley (2-0) got the win and Rick Aguilera worked the ninth for his seventh save.

INDIANS 10, ATHLETICS 2

Cleveland got into a bench-clearing brawl with Oakland before sending the A's to their seventh loss in nine games.

After a foul ball in the eighth inning, Carlos Martinez and Oakland pitcher Kelly Downs began arguing. Both were ejected, and Martinez headed toward the mound.

Third baseman Kevin Seitzer then became the first non-pitcher to pitch for Oakland since Vance Law in 1991, and he struck out pinch hitter Glenallen Hill.

BLUE JAYS 6, WHITE SOX 1

Pat Hentgen outpitched Jack McDowell and Toronto ended Chicago's six-game winning streak.

Hentgen (4-1) teamed on a five-hitter with Danny Cox, who got his fourth career save and first in the AL. McDowell (5-1) gave up four

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Nen (1-1) did not allow a hit until two outs in the sixth inning when Greg Vaughn had a run-scoring double. Kevin Reimer then doubled home Vaughn. Nen lasted six innings, allowing two hits, walking three and striking out four.

Nen, a 32nd round pick in the June 1987 free agent draft, is the son of former major leaguer Dick Nen. He was 13-26 in the minor leagues with a 4.54 ERA before joining the Rangers. Nen will return to the bullpen late this weekend if Ryan is healthy enough to pitch.

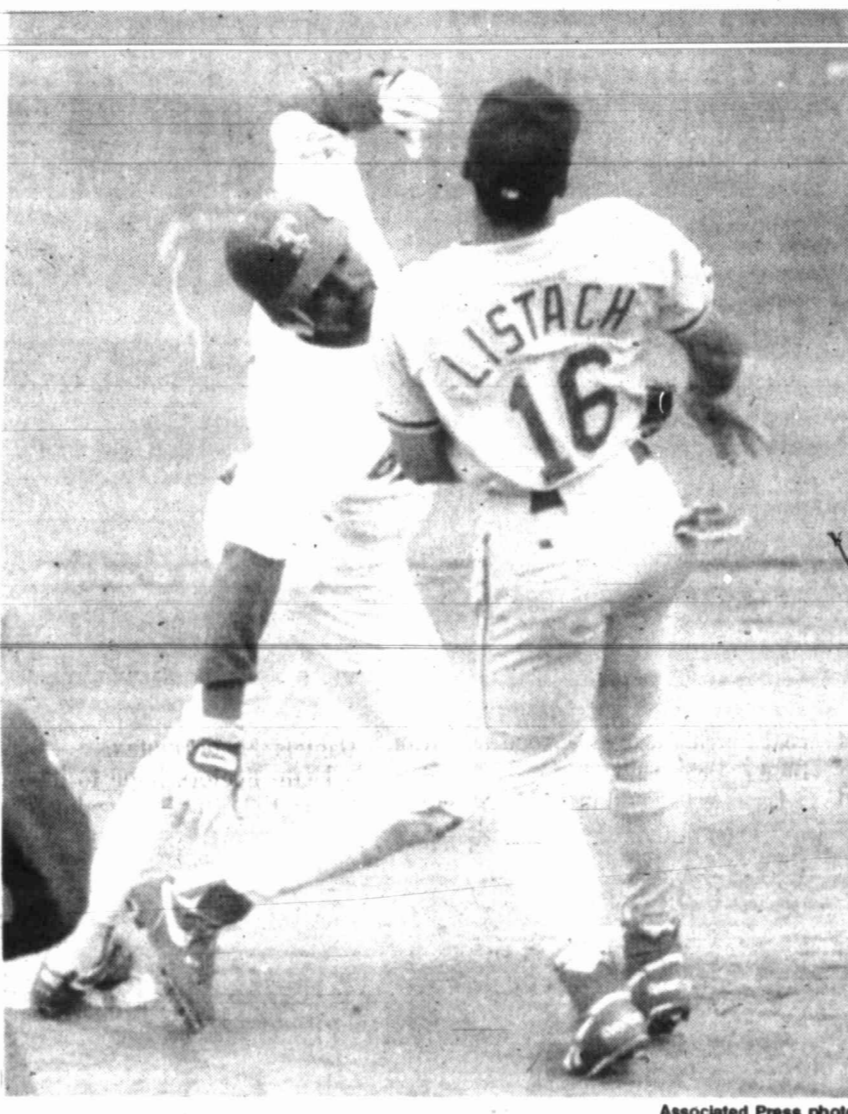

Jeff Bronkey pitched three innings for his first major league save.

The Rangers built a 7-0 lead through four innings against Bill Wegman (2-4).

Canseco hit a two-run homer in the third inning, his fifth of the season. Palmer hit his eighth homer in the fourth inning.

Ivan Rodriguez tripled in the fourth and scored on Manuel Lee's sacrifice fly. David Hulse doubled and Julio Franco singled for the seventh run.

Texas scored five times in the fifth inning off reliever Josias Manzanillo.

earned runs and nine hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Paul Molitor homered for the visiting Blue Jays, who averted their first sweep since September 1991.

YANKEES 3, MARINERS 2

Bernie Williams drew a bases-loaded walk from Norm Charlton with two outs in the bottom of the 10th inning, finishing New York's three-game sweep of Seattle.

Paul O'Neill got a one-out walk in the 10th from Rich DeLucia (1-1) and took third on Mike Stanley's single. Charlton relieved and walked Mike Gallego, struck out Pat Kelly and walked Williams.

John Habyan (1-1) pitched a perfect 10th for the victory. Seattle tied it in the ninth against Jimmy Key on a leadoff homer by Tino Martinez.

The Mariners played their second straight game without All-Star center fielder Ken Griffey Jr. He sprained his right wrist making a diving catch Friday night.

The YMCA's new swimming pool will be ready soon, and the Big Spring High School swim team is raring to be among the first to put it to good use.

The 25-yard-long, six-lane pool, which is standard size for University Interscholastic League swimming events, will be ready sometime in July.

Big Spring swimming coach Harlan Smith says the facility will give his team a "level playing field" as it strives to become more competitive.

Until now, Big Spring swimmers have had to use the current YMCA pool, which at 20 yards in length is five yards shorter than UIL regulation.

Smith says using the non-regulation pool hampered the team's efforts to become more competitive, especially considering UIL rules that group all teams together regardless of classification.

"This will be a good facility for us, because it's legal," Smith said.

As the team awaits its new pool, it is preparing for next fall's swimming season in a rather unagagatic matter — by pumping iron.

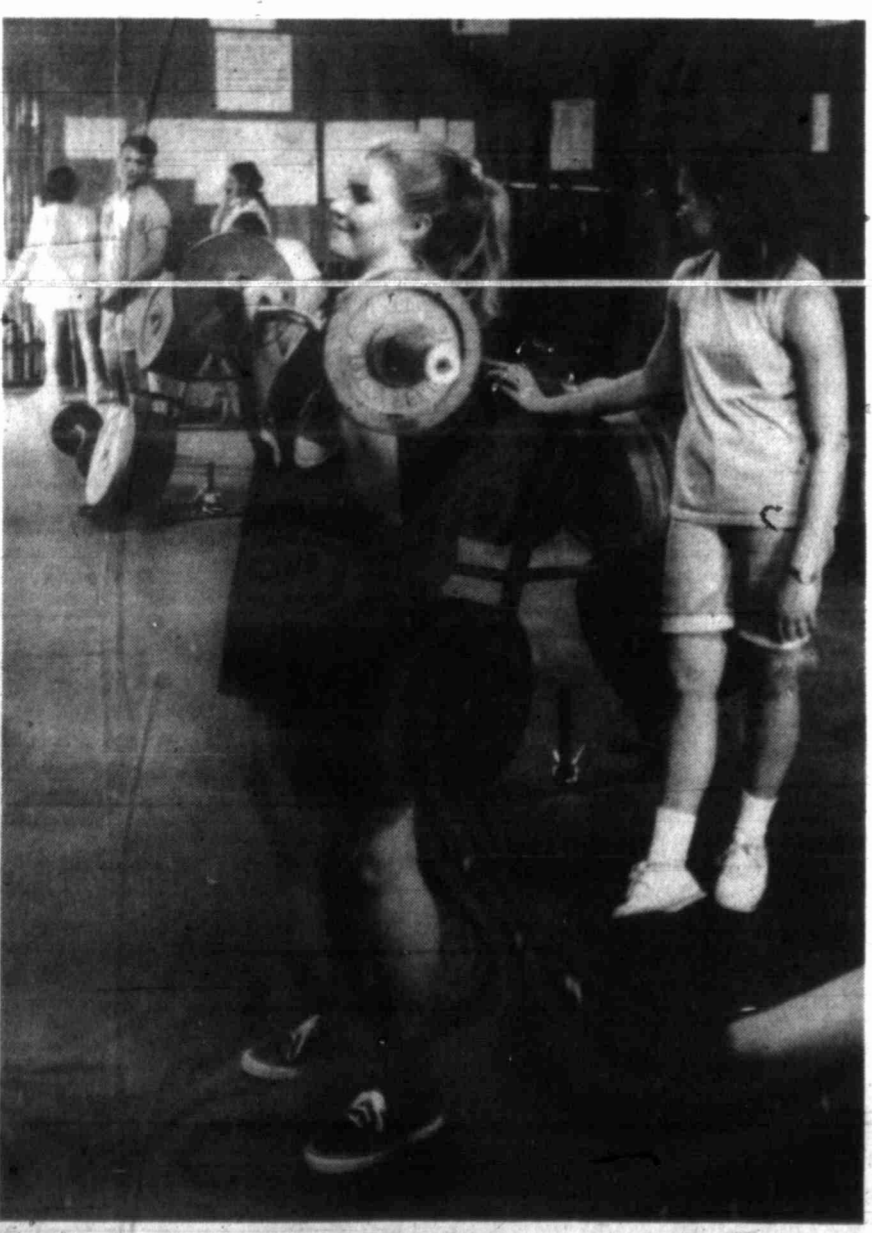

Since March, Smith's charges have gathered several times a week in the Blankenship Field weight room to perform lifts and presses instead of strokes or dives.

While lifting weights might strike some as an unusual way to conduct swimming practice, Smith insists it is the only way to go.

"You've got to have strength to pull yourself through the water," he said. "And weights help you gain that strength faster."

"What they're trying to do is gain strength, so when they get in the water, they'll have the endurance they need to get through the water," he added. "The more strength you have, the faster you'll go, and the more endurance you have, the longer you can go."

Smith, who says the swim team has lifted weights in the off-season for at least the 18 years he has been at the school, claims the days of the long, lean "torpedo in the water" type swimmers is over, and that the emphasis now is on more muscular swimmers.

Big Spring High swim team member LaAnn Campbell, a junior, works out in the Blankenship Field weight room last week.

Heart condition puts Lewis out of playoffs

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — Reggie Lewis, the leading scorer for the Boston Celtics, will miss the rest of playoffs because of heart problems.

Lewis, 27, collapsed Thursday during the playoff opener with the Charlotte Hornets and was admitted to New England Baptist Hospital on Friday. He underwent tests during the weekend.

"Cardiac abnormalities have been identified that are likely to have contributed to his loss of consciousness," hospital spokesman Jim Rattray said Sunday.

Rattray was unable to elaborate on the abnormalities but said Lewis will be sidelined for the playoffs. He did not know if the condition will threaten his career.

"It's very important to remember we're still in an evaluation mode here," he said.

Dave Gavitt, the team's senior executive vice president, said Lewis is resting comfortably.

"His spirits are as good as you could expect they would be," he said. "I'm sure he wants to get out of the hospital, but he now knows he's got to go through this, and obviously, he will not play basketball until this is resolved and that means clearly, he won't play this week."

Rattray said he expected Lewis to remain in the hospital at least for this week and further tests will be required over the next several weeks to determine treatment.

Celtics team doctor Dr. Arnold Scheller is managing Lewis' care. Along with Dr. Thomas Nessa, a cardiologist at the hospital, Scheller has formed an advisory committee of 12 specialists to monitor Lewis. The team is to report to Scheller, Nessa and Gavitt.

Lewis, a 6-foot-7 swingman and five-year veteran, was the Celtics' leading scorer this season, averaging 20.8 points a game.

"Obviously, we're stunned by it, a little hurt, a little worried as to what's going to happen to him," Celtics forward Alaa Abdelnaby said.

The Celtics and Hornets are tied 1-1 in their best-of-5 first-round series. Game 3 is Monday night in Charlotte.

"I think our thoughts and prayers are with him to recover as an individual, not as a basketball player," Abdelnaby said. "We don't worry about him right now shooting baskets and running up and down the floor. We're worried about him just being able to function as a human and enjoy a healthy life."

McGovern nabs 1st PGA win in Houston

By The Associated Press

THE WOODLANDS, Texas — He passed on the wedding cake, the champagne toasts and a dance with the bride.

Jim McGovern is not complaining, mind you.

There was a golf tournament to play, and after two winless years on the PGA Tour, McGovern finally can call himself a winner.

McGovern birdied the final regulation hole of the Houston Open on Sunday to force a playoff. He then ran in a 25-foot birdie putt on the second playoff hole to beat John Huston.

McGovern is the Houston Open's fourth straight first-time winner, joining Fred Funk (1992), Fulton Allem (1991) and Tony Sills (1990). Mike Sullivan got his second tour victory in 1989.

"I almost didn't come here this week," McGovern said. "I had two of my best friends get married yesterday, and they'd invited me. (They said) 'You do what you want. It's your job and who knows, you might win.'"

McGovern's best finish before Sunday was fourth place in last year's St. Jude Classic.

"They may not have known me, but they cheered on every hole," McGovern said. "The golf fans here are great. I felt comfortable all day."

McGovern and Huston each shot a 4-under-par 68 Sunday for a 199 total over 54 holes of regulation play for the rain-shortened tournament.

McGovern more than tripled his year's earnings with a $234,000 paycheck and Huston won $140,400.

Huston sank a birdie putt on No. 17 to take a 1-shot lead, but he missed a 12-foot birdie try on No. 18. McGovern's 8-foot birdie on the final hole forced the playoff.

Both players parred the first playoff hole and then faced off with 25-foot putts on the par-4 No. 10.

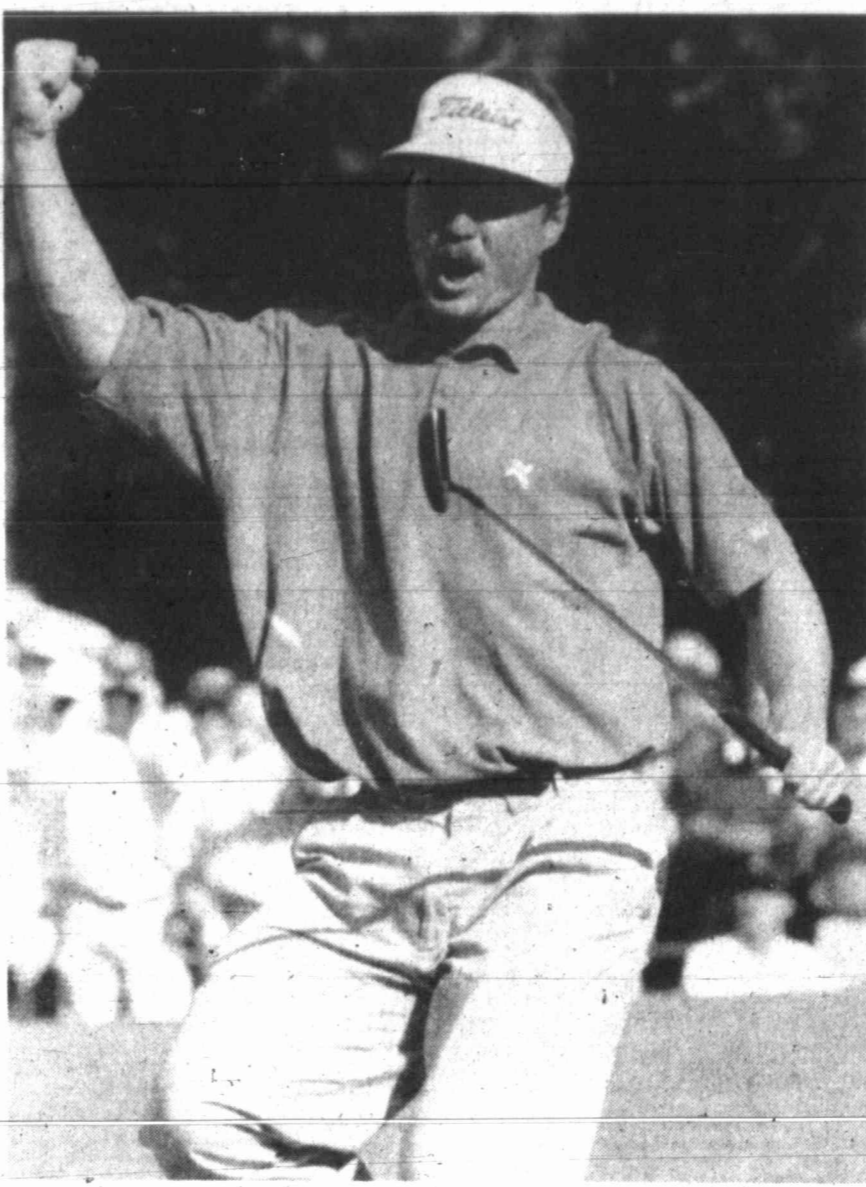

"I mean, it was just one of those putts," McGovern said. "I was trying to make it, but I wasn't going to be too stupid. I knew John had a tough putt, as well. He had a pretty good putt there. He just ran out of steam."

Huston's putt stopped about one inch from the hole.

"He got a good putt and I hit a decent putt and just left it short," Huston said. "I'm glad for him, but I just wish he could have waited for another day."

McGovern had bogeys on Nos. 13 and 14 that put him two shots off the leaders.

Payne Stewart, Donnie Hammond and Blaine McCallister, who were part of a five-way tie heading to No. 17, finished at 200 to tie for third, winning $67,600 each.

Jim McGovern celebrates on the second hole of sudden death after holing out a 25-foot birdie putt giving him the victory at the Shell Houston Open Sunday in Houston.

Gooden wins, Bucs topple Houston, 6-2

By The Associated Press

Dwight Gooden took control of a bad situation for the New York Mets.

Gooden pitched a seven-hitter and added an RBI double and a single as the Mets snapped a seven-game losing streak by beating San Diego 3-2 Sunday at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Gooden (3-3) struck out seven and walked two en route to his second complete game of the season. The right-hander improved to 13-5 lifetime against the Padres.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

It was as close to a must win as a team can get this early in the season, and Gooden stepped up in a big way.

"It's good for the guys," Gooden said. "The guys got some key hits and made some nice plays defensively. We've got to continue to play more consistent ball, or today's win means nothing."

Relief pitcher Jeff Innis said Gooden had a look of "angry determination" before the game. "He was sick of it," Innis said. "He wanted to stop it, he was the one to do it, he knew it and he did it."

The Mets scored twice on four hits in the second. Dave Gallagher doubled and scored on Todd Hundley's two-out single. Gooden, the NL's best-hitting pitcher last year at .264, hit a fly ball to the base of the fence in left-center to score Hundley from third.

Gallagher's eighth-inning sacrifice fly broke a 2-2 tie and kept the Padres from sweeping the three-game series and reaching .500 for the first time this year.

Andy Benes (4-2) allowed three runs on nine hits, struck out eight and walked none.

PIRATES 6, ASTROS 2
Jeff King hit his first two homers of the season and drove in four runs as visiting Pittsburgh snapped the Astros' five-game winning streak.

Rookie Steve Cooke (1-1) pitched 7 1-3 innings, giving up two runs on eight hits for the victory. Stan Belinda finished.

Pittsburgh took a 3-0 lead in the first inning against Greg Swindell (4-2). After singles by Lonnie Smith and Andy Van Slyke, King hit a drive off the left-field foul pole.

Chris James and Jeff Bagwell homered for the Astros.

PHILLIES 9, DODGERS 1
Lenny Dykstra had three hits, including two in a six-run third inning, and Terry Mulholland (3-3) scattered six hits as red-hot Philadelphia beat Orel Hershiser at Dodger Stadium. Milt Thompson and John Kruk also had three hits each for the Phillies, whose 18-6 record is the best in the majors.

The Phillies, who lead the NL East by 4 1/2 games, have won five of six against the Dodgers, whose 9-16 record is one of baseball's worst.

Hershiser (3-3), who pitched a three-hitter against the Mets in his last start, didn't survive the third inning, when the Phillies sent 11 batters to the plate in scoring their six runs, making it 8-0.

GIANTS 4, EXPOS 3 (11 INNINGS)

Barry Bonds, who hit a home run earlier, delivered a run-scoring single in the 11th inning to lead San Francisco over visiting Montreal for its sixth consecutive victory and a three-game sweep. Bonds has eight homers and 28 RBIs.

The Giants, first in the NL West, started their winning rally on Willie McGee's one-out single. He advanced to second on a grounder to shortstop by Darren Lewis before Bonds won it against Jeff Fassero (1-1).

BRAVES 4, CARDINALS 2

David Justice, batting .183 entering the game, hit a two-run homer with two outs in the eighth inning to lift Atlanta past visiting St. Louis. It was only the Braves' second win in eight games, and improved their record to 13-14.

Mike Perez walked Ron Gant with one out in the eighth and went to second on an infield grounder by pinch-hitter Damon Berryhill. Justice's fifth homer came on an 0-1 pitch from reliever Rob Murphy (1-3).

Kent Mercker (1-0) pitched one inning for the victory and Mike Stanton retired the Cardinals in the ninth for his ninth save.

CUBS 4, REDS 3

Mike Morgan scattered three hits in seven innings as Chicago beat Cincinnati at Riverfront Stadium to keep John Kruk winless.

The left-hander signed a four-year, $18.4 million contract with the Reds last November.

Morgan (2-4), pounded for nine runs in 3 1-3 innings against Colorado in his last start, walked six and gave up two runs.

ROCKIES 2, MARLINS 1

Alex Cole hit a two-out, two-run single off Jack Armstrong (2-3) in the eighth at Joe Robbie Stadium.

Dave Magadan hit a long fly to right-center field in the bottom of the eighth, and replays showed the ball hit a railing beyond the wall before bouncing back onto the field.

Albers' birdie prevents disaster, wins Sprint

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Everything was falling apart for Kristi Albers, who knew that only a birdie would prevent disaster.

"It came in at the right time," Albers said Sunday after watching a 5-foot putt catch the left lip of the cup and drop for birdie, preventing a playoff and one of the biggest collapses in recent LPGA history.

"I didn't know what I was going to do," added Albers, who had started thinking about a playoff after 17, where she bogeyed for the third straight hole after missing another 5-footer. "I was kind of in shock. I couldn't believe I missed that putt."

Albers had six birdies, six bogeys and six pars in an up-and-down par-72 finish that required the final birdie to avoid a playoff with Rosie Jones at the $1.2 million Sprint Classic.

"I battled myself a lot, especially coming in," said Albers, who hung on for her first career win after a second straight par round gave her a 9-under 279.

"I was out there trying to make birdies, but I guess you never know. I don't know what really went my way, but I won."

Albers, who had been winless since turning pro in October 1985, collected $180,000 with her first winner's check — more money than she had made in any of her previous years on the tour.

She also catapulted from 43rd to first on the LPGA money list with $203,000 this season and became the first wire-to-wire winner this year. Julie Inkster was the last LPGA performer to lead all four rounds in her victory last July at the Big Apple Classic.

"She played the last hole great," said Jones, who watched Albers' game-winning putt from the gallery. "I thought she had hit it too soft."

Jones, who won a career-high $111,711 for second-place, had finished nearly two hours earlier after posting Sunday's best round with a 5-under 67.

Kris Tschetter, Elaine Crosby,

Michelle McGann and Deb Richard finished three shots back and each collected $59,629.

Hall of Famer JoAnne Carner and 21-year-old Brandie Burton began the day just one stroke behind Albers, but faded in Sunday's windy playing conditions.

The 54-year-old Carner, seeking to become the oldest player to win a regular tournament event in professional golf, was 3-over Sunday and finished with a 5-under 283.

Burton, the 1991 Rookie of the Year, soared to a final-round 78 and finished seven back.

Defending champion Danielle Ammaccapane recorded a 72 Sunday to finish at even par 288.

Mavericks' Davis shatters elbow in auto accident

By The Associated Press

SOUTH BOSTON, Va. — Dallas Mavericks forward Terry R. Davis, who has long credited his success to being left-handed, has shattered his left elbow in a car accident.

"My elbow, that's minor compared to what could have happened," Davis said Sunday from his hospital room.

Davis, 25, was driving when his 1993 BMW ran off a road and struck a tree early Sunday, killing a passenger in the vehicle, state Trooper Ed Tuck said. Davis was trying to turn onto Virginia 832 from U.S. 360 in Halifax County, Tuck said.

Marlin C. Moody, 28, of South Boston, was found dead at the scene about 12:30 a.m., Tuck said. "It's real tough. He was a good friend of mine," Davis said.

Davis was listed in stable condition Sunday night, said Shirley Briley, a supervisor at Halifax Community Hospital. Two other passengers were evaluated and discharged. Police identified them as Rodney C. Scott, 27, of South Boston, and John Daniels, 25, of Halifax.

Team doctors hope to have Davis return to Dallas by Monday for treatment, Mavericks spokesman Tony Fay said. Club officials are reluctant to comment on the effect the injury could have on Davis' career until team physician T.O. Souryal examines the elbow.

"I had a long conversation with the orthopedic surgeon in Virginia early this morning," Souryal said in a statement. "Based on the information he has given me, this sounds like a very serious injury to his elbow."

Dave Robbins, Davis' coach at Virginia Union from 1986-89, said he spoke to Davis Sunday night by telephone.

"He sounded fine, and he wasn't worried about himself. He was mostly concerned about young man killed in the accident. He hated that the young man was killed," Robbins said.

Robbins said he did not know how Davis' performance on the court would be affected by the injury.

Davis once said being left-handed was an advantage on the court because "most guys want to play you to the right, so being left-handed helps. I hate to guard someone who is left-handed."

were desperate that we got into it." "The crowd was rocking," said Starks, who also bettered his playoff career high with 11 assists. "There's no place like the Garden during the playoffs. I felt the energy going through me. It was electrifying."

Rik Smits scored 29 points and Reggie Miller 25 for the Pacers, who are still looking for their first series victory in the NBA playoffs. They are playing in the postseason for the sixth time.

Patrick Ewing scored 25 points for New York despite being limited to 31 minutes because of foul trouble.

BULLS 117, HAWKS 102

Any chance the visiting Hawks may have seemed to have effectively was wiped out at the halftime buzzer when Michael Jordan hit a 45-footer for a 56-49 lead. Jordan finished with 29 points, none bigger than the 3 just before halftime.

"The momentum shifted after Michael hit that 3-pointer," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "That helped us, because we kept shooting ourselves in the foot."

"I think it gave us some breathing room and the momentum we needed," Jordan said. "I think we're focused and we're taking care of business."

The Hawks return home knowing they at least cut into Chicago's domination on the boards. The Bulls out-rebounded the Hawks 50-41 Sunday, a lot closer than the 62-28 difference in the opener.

"The one thing we had to accomplish was to get to the boards," Hawks coach Bob Weiss said. "We did that, but in order to win, you have to hit on all cylinders. We just didn't have enough guys shooting or protecting the ball well enough."

Dominique Wilkins led Atlanta with 37 points while Kevin Willis had 26 and 13 rebounds. Scottie Pippen added 25 for the two-time defending champion Bulls.

JAZZ 89, SUPERSONICS 85

Karl Malone rebounded from what he called a bad opening game with 26 points, eight in the final six minutes when he was playing with five fouls, as the visiting Jazz evened the series and gained the homecourt advantage.

The Jazz got crucial final-minute baskets from Mark Eaton and Malone.

Gary Payton led the Sonics with 19 points. Shawn Kemp, who outscored Malone 29-24 in the opener, was held to 13.

The Jazz, who trailed 74-71 with 6:13 left, led 85-83 after Seattle's Sam Perkins made a 3-pointer.

Irvan wins Winston 500

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Ernie Irvan drove his Chevrolet Lumina from fourth to first on the final lap Sunday to beat Jimmy Spencer in the Winston 500.

Irvan averaged 155.411 mph in the 188-lap race on the Talladega Superspeedway's 2.66-mile, high-banked oval. Dale Jarrett finished third and Dale Earnhardt was fourth.

On Saturday, Al Unser Jr. held off Dale Earnhardt and Jack Baldwin to win a record seventh International Race of Champions event.

Seles released, returns to U.S.

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — Monica Seles was released from Hamburg University Hospital and flew to the United States on Sunday, two days after a man leaped from the stands and stabbed her in the back during the Citizen Cup.

Seles, 19, sustained a half-inch deep wound in the back which did not damage any vital organs. She's expected to be sidelined one to three months.

Hamburg police said the suspect was Guenter P., 38, a late operator from Nordhausen in east Germany. His last name was not released. They said he faced charges of attempted murder.

In Sunday's final, third-seeded Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain beat second-seeded Steffi Graf of Germany 6-3, 6-3.

Howard signs Alvin post

Howard College women's basketball coach Royce Chadwick recently announced the signing Susan Orsak to a national letter of intent to play for the Lady Hawks next season.

Orsak, a 6-foot-3 post from Alvin High School, averaged 11 points and 10 rebounds per game this past season. She was named to the all-District 24-5A and all-Brazoria County first teams, as well as the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches' all-academic team.

"Susan has the opportunity to become a solid college post player," assistant women's coach Terry Gray said. "She has good size and I feel that she will be able to learn our system from some of the best college sophomore post players in the country in Angel Spinks and Annette Robinson."
