Britons told not to despair

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — A tomato hurled from a crowd narrowly missed Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today after she urged Britons "not to despair" following 10 straight nights of rioting across Britain.

The tomato, thrown along with a roll of toilet paper, passed within inches of Mrs. Thatcher's head as she stepped into a bullet-proof limousine outside city hall at the end of a surprise visit to this northwest port. Liverpool has been hit by some of the worst rioting and some 1,000 people were milling around the city hall when the incident occurred.

Earlier Mrs. Thatcher took a 20-minute tour of Liverpool's high-immigrant Toxteth district, getting out of her car twice to talk to passers-by.

"We must never despair and try to look at the good things and build on them to get people back together again," she said at a news conference.

"There is no future for anyone unless law and order is upheld," she said. "There is obviously some mistrust, but what we have to do is to realize that this is not a time for denunciation but reconciliation."

Mrs. Thatcher, who was returning to London later today, met with leaders of Liverpool's 30,000 black minority, many of whom are of West Indian and African descent and concentrated in Toxteth and nearby neighborhoods.

Wally Brown, a black who is head of Merseyside Community Relations Council, said they had complained of police harassement, but Mrs. Thatcher "just did not grasp what we were saying."

Another community leader, David Smith, told reporters, "We told her to get the police off the streets because they were the root cause of the trouble, but she simply said that we should stop throwing things at the police."

The prime minister arrived here after mobs and young blacks and whites took to the streets overnight in London and six provincial cities and, for the first time in the current wave of urban violence, rioting spread to Scotland.

Police at Dundee, on the east coast of Scotland, reported two flare-ups late Sunday in low-income districts of the city, which — unlike most of the trouble-torn English centers — has virtually no non-white immigrant population.

In Dundee's Menzieshill District, three miles west of the city center, a gang of youths hurled three "incendiary devices," at a passing car and smashed several shop windows, police said. Sixteen youths, believed all to be whites, were arrested two miles northeast of the city center, when a police car was overturned after police were summoned to disperse a gang of youths outside a discotheque, police said.

President of ARCO killed

ARCO Oil and Gas Company President William Keeler, 53, was killed in his Dallas home Sunday. His wife, Anita, 49, was also killed. A family member is being questioned in connection with the killings.

Oilman, wife slain in Dallas; Son a suspect

DALLAS (AP) — Late Sunday morning, oil company president William A. Keeler, his wife and his 14-year-old son attended services together at Schreiber Memorial United Methodist Church. It was their turn to pass the collection plate.

Thirty minutes after church was over, Keeler and his wife, Anita, were lying in pools of blood on the floor of their spacious North Dallas home, shot several times each by a shotgun. The boy is being held in connection with the slayings.

Keeler, 53, president of ARCO Oil and Gas Co., died immediately, authorities said. Mrs. Keeler, 49, died three hours later at a hospital.

Police said the Keelers' daughter, Barbara, found her parents when she went to their house about 12:30 p.m. Sunday for a visit.

She said she heard moans when she entered the house and found her mother lying on the floor. She told police that her father, already dead, was lying a few feet down the hall.

She told police that Mrs. Keeler, barely conscious, gasped out, "David, David, David did it."

Within minutes of the incident, the Keelers' teen-age son had reported the shootings and was turned over to Dallas officers for questioning, said Dallas police investigator James Shivers.

The boy had ridden his bicycle to the suburb of Addison, about three miles from his home, stopped a police patrol car and told of the shootings, which Shivers said followed a family argument.

"It was a family situation from the start," Shivers said. "I'm not certain exactly what did take place. It's an ongoing deal (the argument), and this is the culmination of it, really."

The Keeler youth, dressed in jogging shorts and a T-shirt, was taken before a city magistrate and advised of his rights late Sunday. He was led away in handcuffs to spend the night in the Dallas county juvenile detention center.

However, Shivers said no charges had yet been filed. Under Texas law, no 14-year-old can be tried as an adult.

Shivers said officers found an automatic shotgun and seven spent 12-gauge shotgun shells on the floor of the house.

Redistricting bill may not face veto

State Legislature

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements today backed away from his implied threat to veto a congressional redistricting bill that does not provide a majority black district in Dallas County.

"I have never stood in this room and said what I would or would not veto," Clements told reporters after meeting in his office with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton two hours before the Legislature convened in special session.

Congressional redistricting is one of the five topics for which Clements called the 30-day session. He has made it clear he wants blacks packed into a Dallas County district, which would have the side-effect of improving GOP chances in two other districts in the county.

The governor told reporters his previous statement was that he "would not approve" a redistricting plan without a heavily black Dallas County districts, "and that is a different word" from veto.

Clements, Hobby and Clayton said the possibility of legislators overriding a gubernatorial veto of a redistricting bill did not come up in their 45-minute meeting.

These are the issues the governor wants settled:

—Fashioning new boundaries for Texas' U.S. Congressional districts, a move required because of population shifts reflected in the 1980 census.

— Re-enacting the Medical Practices Act, which automatically expires this year unless extended by the Legislature. Without it, there will be no state regulation of doctors or the practice of medicine.

— A constitutional amendment repealing the 10-cent state property tax dedicated to building construction at certain state universities.

— Refinements to the 1979 Peveto Bill, which ordered county-wide property tax appraisal with all taxes imposed on full market value.

— Putting half the state's treasury surplus in the bank to guarantee dams and other water projects.

Each of the first four items were approved by the Senate and the House during the regular session, and were being debated in conference committees when the term ended.

The issue most likely to strike sparks is the matter of congressional redistricting. Texas gets three more members of the U.S. House this year, because of increased population, and each of the 27 districts will require all-new boundaries.

Clements and his fellow Republicans will press for an increase in the number of GOP congressmen. State Republican Chairman Chet Upham, for example, is offering a plan to give Texas 10 GOP congressmen instead of the current five.

U.S. Rep. Martin Frost of Dallas, meanwhile, has drawn lines protecting Democrats. He says 19 of the 24 Texas congressmen support his plan. House Speaker Billy Clayton has seen it. He called it "interesting" but has not committed himself.

A bipartisan group of non-politicians called Texans for a Conservative Congress is lobbying for a plan such as the one passed by the House in the regular session. That plan tipped toward the GOP and damaged the re-election chances of Democrats Frost, Bill Patman of Ganado and Jim Mattox of Dallas.

Some residents flee medfly spraying area

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Emergency shelters were readied as some residents of lush San Francisco suburbs prepared to flee before helicopters begin spraying pesticide to wipe out destructive Mediterranean fruit flies.

Attorneys for several cities planned a last-ditch appeal today to Judge Bruce Allen of Santa Clara County Superior Court for an injunction against the spraying. The request is similar to one denied Friday by U.S. District Judge William A. Ingram.

State and federal authorities said the malathion poses no health dangers. But some local officials and a doctor urged the 500,000 residents in the target area — particularly pregnant women and nursing mothers — to leave home before the 117-square-mile area is blanketed with malathion spray to eradicate the Mediterranean fruit fly. The first helicopter is set to take off at 2 a.m. Tuesday.

Red Cross officials said Sunday that they didn't know how many refugees to expect at their four shelters — located in nearby towns outside the spraying area. The largest of the shelters would accommodate 1,000.

"This is the first time this kind of situation has occurred," said Mary McClellan, director of family services for the Santa Clara Valley Chapter of the American Red Cross. "We don't know whether to expect 10 people or 10,000.

"I doubt it would be 10, since we've been receiving a large number of calls from individuals who are concerned about the spray. But it's difficult to pinpoint the number."

Expanded spraying

Map shows expanded area to be sprayed for the Mediterranean fruit fly in California. The state plan calls for spraying to be in Zone 1 Tuesday, Zone 2 Wednesday, Zone 3 Thursday and Zone 4 Friday.

Midland men die in auto accident

Two Midland men died early this morning when their late model compact car ran off County Road 120 and overturned two and a half times.

Killed was the driver of the car, 27-year-old Douglas Wayne Baumann, and his passenger, 27-year-old Walter Carl Welch. Both men were pronounced dead at the scene of the mishap, about a half-mile east of State Highway 349 on the county road, by Justice of the Peace Charles Sprayberry.

According to Department of Public Safety reports, the men were eastbound on the county road, apparently at a high rate of speed, when the accident occurred at 1:30 a.m. today. Investigating officers said the car ran off the north side of the roadway and traveled down the ditch for 520 feet.

Then it swerved back onto the road, went out of control and overturned two and a half times, throwing out both occupants.

The accident was investigated by Trooper Matt Andrews of Midland.

Both men were employed as seismograph crewmen for a Midland company.

Hold the jokes, please: Miss Texas for 1981 is an Aggie welder

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The tools Sheri Ryman used to prepare for this year's Miss Texas competition were somewhat out of the ordinary. They included surgical tape, an elastic bandage, weight-lifting apparatus and a welder's torch.

It must have worked. Sheri Ryman, Miss Texas A&M University, is now Miss Texas for 1981.

"I'm very, very excited and I still haven't come down from Cloud 9 yet," the new title-holder said the day after she was crowned at the conclusion of the 20th annual scholarship pageant.

Miss Ryman will represent Texas at the annual Miss America pageant at Atlantic City, N.J., in September.

IT WAS HER THIRD time to enter the Miss Texas contest and her talent presentation was a gymnastics-tumbling routine done to music. Part of her gymnastics training, she said, was regular weight-lifting.

But the welder's torch came from her college classroom pursuits in the field of industrial distribution, courses that require laboratory work in welding and mechanics.

In an interview before the pageant, she talked about going to the lab, "getting 'grungy' with all the guys and not getting any special treatment.

"Not long ago I was in a campus cafeteria after I had finished working out with weights," she continued. "I overheard a person behind me saying to his friend he couldn't believe I was Miss Texas A&M.

"Needless to say, I didn't look my best."

She gave her talent performance with her right ankle taped and bandaged, the result of a sprain she suffered during Wednesday night practice.

"It's real pretty now, all shades of the rainbow," she said, but insisted it did not bother her presentation. "When I'm on stage I'm oblivious to pain. I kept bang, bang, banging it away.

"I REALLY WORKED and worked because this was going to be my last year. I put my whole heart into it and came here as prepared as I possibly could be. On Wednesday (after the sprain), it would have been easy to say 'there's no hope.' I think determination and mental attitude are so very important."

Miss Ryman, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Darwin J. Ryman of Texas City, said her goals are winning the Miss America pageant and graduating from Texas A&M from honors.

Finishing behind Miss Ryman were Gloria Gilbert, Miss Mineral Wells; Alice Kindle, Miss Duncanville; Belinda Moreland, Miss Lubbock, and Monique Woody-Zummo, Miss Beaumont.

If Miss Ryman is unable to complete her term as Miss Texas, Miss Gilbert, as first runner-up, will be asked to fulfill her obligations.

Also among the 10 finalists were Lucy Fryman, Miss Round Rock; Gina Pounders, Miss Oak Cliff; Lolly Hatcher, Miss Wichita County; Linda Davis, Miss Panola County, and Kim Acker, Miss Blackland Area.

Police probing television theft

The theft of a 12-inch color television set and a video cassette recorder from a Midland business was being investigated this morning by city police.

John Mitchell of Number 8 Plaza Center told police the television and video recorder, valued at $1,145, were taken from the Video Center at the same address Saturday or Sunday.

Ralph Gonzales of 404 Sunset Boulevard reported the theft of a camper shell valued at $500 from his residence. Gonzales said the theft occurred between 3:30 and 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Don Brown of 4000 W. Illinois Ave. reported the theft of two nail guns from a construction site at 600 N. Baird St. He valued the nail guns at $300.

Early this morning Midland firemen responded to a fire at the Garden Courts, 1920 Garden City Highway.

The fire was in Apt. 1, occupied by Paul Kirfoffner. Owner of the complex is Evyln Wallace of 2707 Barkley St.

Upon their arrival, firemen found a smoldering mattress in the apartment and quickly doused it with five gallons of water. The only result was minor smoke damage to the apartment.

Probable cause of the fire was listed as a cigarette.

Firemen also responded to a car fire about 2:30 a.m. today on State Highway 158, two miles east of Interstate 20.

When they arrived, firemen found a car belonging to Richard S. Vernes of Billings, Mont., but the driver was not at the scene.

The fire apparently had been set, fire reports indicated, but extent of damage could not be immediately determined.

Odessa police looking for bandit

ODESSA — Odessa police are looking for a man who robbed the 7-Eleven Store at 2700 N. Dixie St. of an undetermined amount of money early today.

According to the store clerk, the man came in to the store at 2:13 a.m., walked up to the cash register, pulled a pistol and demanded cash. The clerk said she gave the man cash and he left on foot.

She described the robber as being in his mid-20s, 5 feet, 10 inches, and 160 pounds, with a short Afro style hairdo. The weapon was of a small caliber, the clerk said.

Cash visits ailing Jerry Lee Lewis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star Johnny Cash stopped by to see Jerry Lee Lewis in a hospital's intensive care unit while doctors worked against infection to save Lewis' life.

"I told Jerry Lee that I didn't come down here to start praying over him," Cash said Sunday after spending about 10 minutes with his old friend from the Sun Records studio days of 25 years ago. "But he seemed to want to have a prayer."

At mid-afternoon Sunday, a hospital report said Lewis remained in extremely critical condition.

Early today, hospital spokesman Mark Sherman said, "The statement that we issued yesterday afternoon is still the standard statement. He still is in intensive care. There has been no change in his condition."

Lewis, 45, has been in Methodist Hospital South since June 30 when he underwent emergency surgery to repair a stomach perforation. He appeared to be recovering until Friday, when a high fever alerted physicians to the presence of a massive infection in his abdominal cavity.

A team of surgeons spent five hours working on Lewis Friday night, removing what a medical report called "a multitude of abcesses" and repairing additional damage to his stomach. The physicians said Lewis was being treated with a combination of powerful antibiotics.

In addition to the infection in his stomach, doctors said Lewis was suffering from a lung ailment.

As Lewis lay in the third-floor intensive care unit, the waiting room off the first-floor lobby was crowded with family, friends and fans.

Cash, who called the hospital from Indiana where he was performing Saturday, drove up in a limousine with his wife, June Carter Cash.

Like Lewis and the late Elvis Presley, who is buried at his estate just five blocks away from the hospital, Cash was one of a number of performers whose careers were launched at the old Sun Records studio in Memphis.

"Jerry Lee has been a good friend of mine for the past 25 years," Cash said. "I believe Jerry Lee has a lot more songs to sing."

Texas City nursing home settles civil lawsuits

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — A nursing home facing murder charges in the deaths of eight patients has settled two civil lawsuits for $125,000, the Houston Post reported in its Monday editions.

Autumn Hills Convalescent Center agreed to pay $100,000 to the family of an 85-year-old LaMarque woman who died in 1979 after drinking toilet bowl cleaner, and $2,000 to the family of a 79-year-old woman allegedly beaten by a nursing home employee, a source told the newspaper.

The Autumn Hills corporation and eight current or former employees were indicted earlier this month by a Galveston County grand jury on 38 murder charges.

Prosecutors said it was the first time a U.S. corporation has been charged with murder.

A lawsuit asking $405,000 in damages was filed against the home by Murray N. McCollum before the indictments were returned. McCollum's attorneys contended his mother, Emily, died because employees left a bottle of toilet cleaner where it could be obtained by patients.

UTPB offering classes

ODESSA — Women's lives in colonial, revolutionary and 19th century America will be the topic of a special history course during the second summer session at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

History 438, "Woman and Family in Pre-Industrial America," is among the courses being offered in UTPB's second summer registration, slated 9 a.m. to noon and 2 to 7 p.m. July 13 at the admissions office.

Dr. Mary Quinlivan, associate professor of history, who is teaching the course, said students will examine the family structure in pre-industrialized America. "The course will draw on recent research, particularly on demographic studies and studies of physical culture," she said.

She noted students in the class will prepare role-playing projects in which they will do sufficient research on an individual whose life was particularly relevant to the content of the course, to be able to portray that person in an oral class presentation.

"One student may be Anne Hutchinson, a religious rebel who was expelled from Boston in the 1630's. Another may be Abigail Adams, who asked her husband, John Adams, to 'to remember the ladies' in the development of the new nation. Another might be William Lloyd Garrison, who was involved in questions of women's rights and the abolition of slavery, and still another might be Elizabeth Cady Stanton, a courageous feminist and suffragist of the 19th century," Quinlivan said.

Quinlivan returned from a month's research at the American Antiquarian Society in Worchester, Mass., where she contined on work on a children's literature in antebellum America. She attended the Berkshire conference of Women Historians meeting at Vassar College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. which was devoted to topics related to the course.

UTPB Director of Admissions Robert Warmann noted students who registered for the second summer term during the first summer term registration may add courses during the July 13 registration period.

Enrollment at UTPB is open to students who have completed 60 credit hours of coursework at any accredited community college, junior college or university. An official college transcript and an application for admission should be on file at UTPB in order to avoid a long wait at the time of registration.

A special registration form is available for persons wanting to enroll in the Encore program, a no-grade options designed for persons not pursuing a degree.

Small-town paper tries big experiment

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

TIFFIN, Ohio (AP) — The "electronic newspaper" has been a dream for some time, but so far it has been an idea experimented with by only a handful of big news organizations.

That will change this fall, though, if all goes according to plan, when the little Tiffin Advertiser-Tribune begins trying its hand at delivering news via home computers.

Publisher Kaj Spencer says he feels like an explorer voyaging into an uncharted sea. He thinks he knows where he is headed, but he is not certain.

Few others have preceded him, and all those have resources dwarfing that of the Advertiser-Tribune, which has a daily circulation of 12,000. Among those experimenting with the home delivery of news via computer are the Miami Herald; Dallas Morning News; Field Electronic Publishing in Chicago, using the facilities of WFLD-TV; KNXT-TV, a CBS-owned station in Los Angeles; KCET-TV, the public broadcasting station in Los Angeles; and KSL-TV in Salt Lake City.

When the Advertiser-Tribune puts its system into operation, Seneca County residents who own small home computers will be able to dial a telephone number 16 hours of the day and receive the latest news, sports, stock market information and want ads. It will be fed directly into their homes and displayed in words and numbers on the computers' television-like screens.

SOME EXPERTS predict this "electronic newspaper" is the way all papers will be delivered — someday.

But it seems an unlikely course for a small paper in a town of 20,000 people. Spencer disagrees.

"We're excited about it. It is uncharted ground. But it's incumbent upon newspapers to start confronting electronic publishing and determine where they're going to fit into the scheme of things," he says.

"As a small newspaper in a relatively small group (of papers), we do not have the resources to pursue a major research and development effort. Most of the existing experiments are either too large in scope or too demanding in financial resources.

"Yet we want to be involved and have a hand in developing the future landscape."

To do that, the newspaper, which is owned by Buckner News Alliance, has joined with Tandy Corp.'s Radio Shack division to install a computer that will be used to prepare and deliver the electronic Advertiser-Tribune.

An editor will be on duty from 7 a.m. to about 11 p.m., continually updating the world, national and local news, sports and other information that will be available.

A caller with a home computer will be able to phone the Advertiser-Tribune and use his computer to ask the newspaper's computer for whatever information he desires. The newspaper computer will feed the material into the caller's computer in minutes, then hang up automatically.

Some newspapers now supply information to homes via cable televsion channels, but Spencer says the computer-to-computer system is better because the reader is in control and does not get material he does not want.

"A READER CAN get the information he wants without having to sit there and watch the screen for hours," he says. "The advantages are many. For example, a reader can call in and know in an instant what schools are going to be closed in bad weather. Sports fans can always get the latest scores right away."

Spencer says the newspaper plans to charge $5 a month for the computer service, making its cost the same as that for the printed version of the Advertiser-Tribune.

The experiment is costing the newspaper $25,000 for the equipment, plus the salaries for the editors, Spencer says. He says he does not expect the system to break even any time soon, but he is still eager to try it.

"They sought us out, we didn't go looking for them," says Martin Weinstein. "This guy (Spencer) wanted to be first."

Despite his enthusiasm, Spencer says he does not believe the glimmering images on a TV screen will replace words printed on paper. Rather, the two will complement one another, he says.

Although details have not been worked out, he says the electronic version likely will offer shorter stories that refer readers to the more detailed printed version if they want additional information.

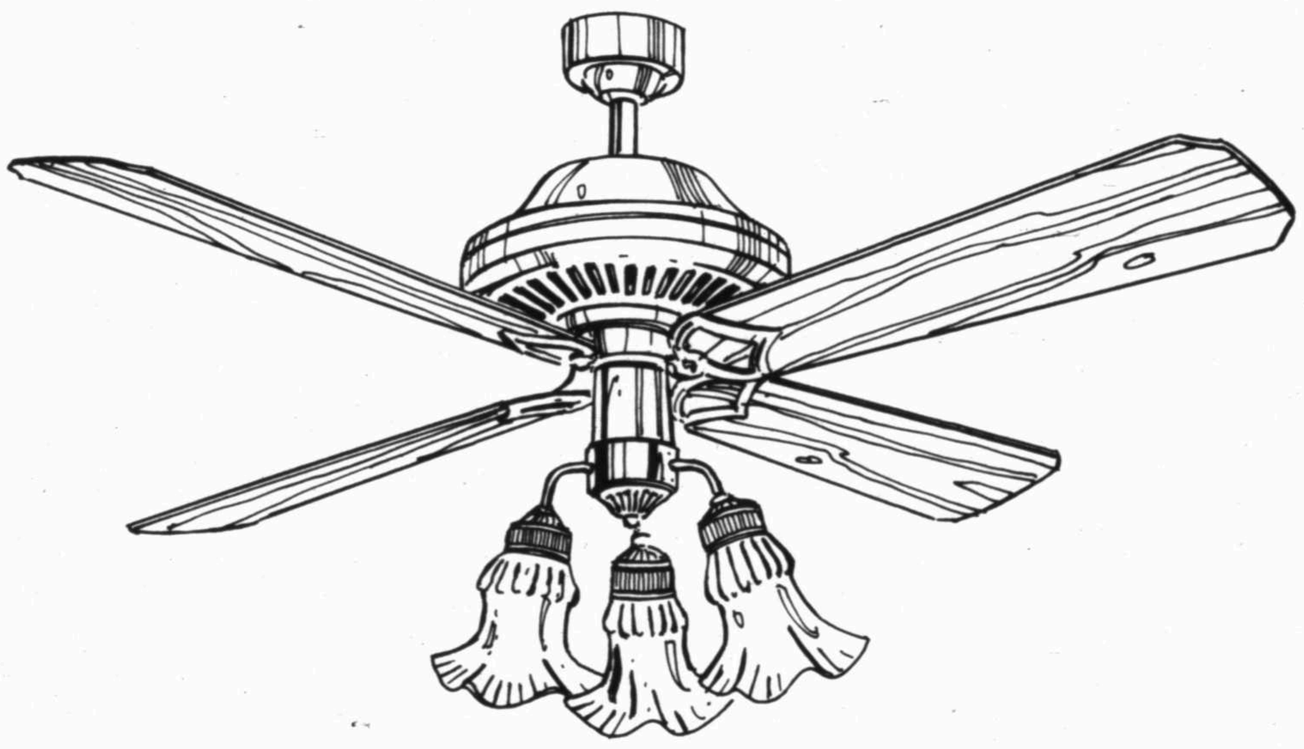

In discussing the experiment, managing editor James Dible notes that computers with display screens and keyboards already have replaced typewriters in most newspaper newsrooms.

"WE'VE BEEN IN the computer age for some time now. This is the next logical extention of what we do. We'll still be a newspaper, but there's no doubt this is going to be a factor in our lives," he says.

Modern day pioneers

Those in the Permian Basin have long recognized the pioneering spirit that built and helps to maintain the oil industry. Here in the home of the independent oilman, that's recognized as a part of our heritage.

That's why we were interested to learn the other day that the quest for oil reached another peak recently — at a new depth — in Oklahoma. The GHK Cos. "spudded in" on the deepest test well ever drilled in the United States.

Now plans call for drilling 33,500 feet of hole — nearly 6½ miles — at a cost of $18 to $20 million during the next 12 to 16 months. The drilling rig, which is owned by Parker Drilling of Tulsa, cost $12 million to construct, but is capable of reaching down to 50,000 feet.

The oil brought up will be expensive, of course. A well is a gamble at any level, but one that deep has all the potential for failure.

Still, what is being done in Oklahoma — and in the expanses of the Permian Basin - is the only insurance we have against total energy failure in this country.

It is the rich heritage of the oil industry that keeps independents drilling to new depths in the quest for petroleum. It takes a certain kind of individual to have the confidence that a few hundred feet more or a few thousand dollars more will mean the difference between success and failure.

But that's the trademark of the people who inhabit this region and devote their lives to the search for more petroleum and, thus, a more secure energy future for us all.

The future of petroleum exploration depends on the continuation of that pioneering spirit.

Public keep out

A lot of people in government just don't seem to want the public to know what they're doing. As of last month, 65 bills affecting access to information and the operations of the news media had been introduced in Congress.

A few of the bills would give citizens more information than is now available. But such proposals are the exception: Most of the bills would sharply restrict access to information, or curtail the right of the press to print information it already has, or both.

Twenty pending bills, for example, would cut gaping holes in the Freedom of Information Act — by exempting agencies like the FBI and the CIA, by letting businesses stop the Consumer Product Safety Commission from releasing information about defective products, by sealing law-enforcement records, by exempting broad categories of government records. Another group of bills would make it a crime for the press to identify CIA and FBI agents or their foreign intelligence sources — even if the agents are violating federal laws or if the information is obtained from non-classified sources.

Still another would revoke existing controls on wiretapping and permit warrantless wiretapping of the press to trace news leaks or reveal sources.

Most of the proposed laws would most directly affect the press. But it is the public that would suffer in the long run, for the bills would prevent the press from informing citizens about the workings of their government.

Keeping the public ignorant may be convenient for government officials, especially if they're doing something they're not supposed to do — or doing nothing. But it's not good for citizens, who need to know what's going on so that they can take the informed actions necessary in a representative democracy like ours.

One such action should be taken this month, as hearings start on many of these public-keep-out bills. Citizens should let their representatives know that they don't want laws that would hide the government from the people.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

ABSCAM senator loses bid for hearing

WASHINGTON — Sen. Harrison "Pete" Williams, D-N.J., who liked to call himself "the voice of the voiceless" because of the dozens of social welfare bills he sponsored, sometimes loses his own voice when he tries to talk about ABSCAM.

Jack Anderson

He was the only member of the Senate to be trapped in the FBI's "sting" operation, and he insists he got a raw deal. He now faces expulsion from the Senate because of his ABSCAM conviction; his hearing before the Senate Ethics Committee begins soon.

"They've put me in an impossible situation," he said in an exclusive interview, referring to the committee.

Williams had wanted more time to prepare for the hearing. He had also wanted former Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., as his attorney before the committee.

But Williams lost on both counts.

My associate Indy Badhwar happened to be interviewing Williams in his office when the ethics committee blow fell. Also present was Eugene Boyce, Morgan's law partner, who was going to represent Williams at the committee hearing. Morgan himself had been ruled out by the ethics committee because he had been a member of it until he left the Senate this year.

A secretary came in and handed Williams a sealed envelope. The senator's hands trembled as he opened it. He stared at the letter and his face dropped. His eyes moved across the page again and again.

Nobody spoke.

Then, in a low voice, choking back his emotion, Williams said: "They won't postpone." The letter was from ethics committee counsel Robert Bennett.

"I can't get ready for the ethics committee proceeding in three weeks," Williams murmured to no one in particular. Just the day before, a judge in New York had begun to hear arguments from the senator's attorney charging that the FBI had entrapped Williams and otherwise violated his rights to due process.

"The committee could at least have waited until the end of my due process hearing," said Williams. "One day, just one day after my due process hearings begin, I get this letter."

There was more to come. Boyce told Williams he couldn't defend him before the ethics Committee. Like the aging, arthritic deputy in "High Noon," the lawyer evidently felt he would be more of a hindrance than a help to his client.

"I can't do it," he told Williams. "I did want to help you. But if I said I could represent you, it would be wrong on my part. It would be unethical. I could not prepare for it."

Williams, a lawyer and 22-year Senate veteran, explained that an ethics committee proceeding is quite different from a court trial. "It's an adjudicatory, factfinding hearing," he said. "It needs a special kind of lawyer."

That was why he had wanted Morgan to defend him. But the committee expressed "serious concerns" over the choice of the former senator because he had been present at executive sessions where the Williams case had been discussed.

Morgan reluctantly dropped out, but not without sending the ethics committee a blistering note, in which he said Williams, "like any other citizen, should be allowed counsel of his choice without being subjected to unfounded and groundless irrelevancies in the form of a specter of attack on his lawyer's ethical standards."

What Williams wanted to do was make the ethics committee hearing "the most profound examination" of ABSCAM, he said. The senator maintains that the jury at his trial was not given all the evidence, and he had hoped the committee hearing would bring it all out.

For instance, the prosecution had charged that Williams had contacted the New Jersey Casino Control Commission on behalf of the Ritz Casino Hotel in Atlantic City — even though a Justice Department document shows that investigators had concluded there was no evidence that Williams had acted improperly. Yet the prosecution repeatedly brought up the matter before the jury.

"They planted the seed. The idea is that since we spent so much time on it there must be something to it," Williams said.

"We still have got no documents about the geographical and individual selection of ABSCAM targets," Williams said. He suspects the fact that he was a known backer of Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., for president may have targeted him under the Carter administration. Material on how the ABSCAM targets were selected is in unreleased Justice Department files, which the Ethics committee could subpoena, if it so chooses.

Despite his feeling that he has been treated unfairly by the FBI, the Justice Department and now the ethics committee, Williams still retains a wry sense of humor. Asked how it felt to be the first member of the Senate to face expulsion because of an undercover FBI operation, he said: "Well, I've been on the pioneering side of this. This whole thing is a first." Then he added, dead seriously: "It's also a first in that the executive (branch) went in to frame the legislature."

Footnote: At press time, Williams was still seeking a postponement of the Senate hearing.

WATCH ON WASTE: Ever hopeful of pay raises, the federal bureaucrats have more than a dozen costly surveys done each year comparing government pay scales with those in private industry. One, the Professional, Administrative, Technical and Clerical Survey — called PATC, or "Patsy" — costs $2.3 million a year. Two separate studies of the pay comparability system have suggested that surveys might better be made every two or three years, especially since Congress tends to ignore the surveys' findings.

CHARLEY REESE

Communists destroying family unit

Recently I raised the hackles of feminists by stating a simple truth: so far as Nature is concerned, the role of the woman is to bear children and to nurture them.

Charley Reese

I didn't say that's all a woman can do nor did I say that's all she should do. I just stated what is obvious to anyone with a rudimentary knowlege of biology. Usually, when people feel threatend by the truth, it's an indication they have a guilty conscience. The pevishness of feminists, however, is less important than what we, as a nation, have allowed to happen to the family.

The family is the basic building block of a nation. It is the main conduit through which one generation's values are passed on to the next. It is, or should be, the primary source of security and support for the individual, thus allowing the individual to defy the state when necessary. That's why collectivists, who seek to make the state supreme, always attack the family as well as religion. Their goal is to make the individual totally dependent, and therefore obedient, to the state.

Not all the pressures on the American family are deliberate. Inflation works against the family. So does materialism. It's true some wives must work out of necessity, but often both man and wife simply decide they want more creature comforts. Time with children is less important than a color TV or a vacation. This emphasis on materialism is fed by the constant flow of hedonism from the television screen and in the print media where happiness is always equated with acquisition.

An offshoot of this materialistic approach has been the recent fad of infantile egoism created by the self-improvement industry which teaches that personal happiness is the highest human value. Neither family nor nation is to be allowed to interfere with one's personal happiness. It's all for one — period. Examples are the middle-aged man bailing out on his family to pursue an illusion of youth with a younger woman and the narcissistic physical fitness type who spends more time at the health spa and on the jogging track than he or she does at home. All of these factors, and others, have combined to triple the divorce rate in only 20 years. The National Center for Health Statistics reports that 1.18 million divorces were granted in 1979, almost three times the 395,000 divorces granted in 1959.

From the standpoint of the nation, this is not good. We should make it less easy to get a divorce and we should write some very tough laws on child support and alimony. There is something wrong with a society that levies a heavier penalty for petty larceny than it does for abandoning a wife and children.

Eric Hoffer, the wise old man of the waterfront, said, "Libertarian legislators, judges, educators and doctrinaires will in retrospect be seen as the wreckers of free societies." He is right.

Communists are competent revolutionaries. In those societies they are trying to destroy, you will invariably find the communist on the side of libertarian arguing for unrestrained individual liberty. In those societies where the communists rule, individualism is ruthlessly destroyed. They know what destroys and what preserves.

It is ironic that those who want most to preserve individual freedom must be the advocate of responsibility toward the group.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, July 13, the 194th day of 1981. There are 171 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 13, 1960, Democrats picked senator John Kennedy of Massachusetts to be their presidential nominee.

On this date:

In 1787, the U.S. Congress enacted an ordinance for the government of the Northwest Territory.

In 1863, rioting against the Civil War military draft broke out in New York, killing some 1,000 people during the next three days.

In 1919, the first dirigible to cross the Atlantic Ocean — Britain's "4-34" — completed its round trip.

And in 1977, a power blackout virtually paralyzed New York City and caused widespread looting.

Ten years ago: firing squads in Morocco executed 10 army officers accused of trying to overthrow King Hassan.

One year ago: the record-melting heat wave in the United States entered its fourth week, having claimed at least 383 lives.

Today's birthdays: former boxing champ Mickey Walker is 80 years old. Broadcaster Dave Garroway is 68.

Thought for today: One doesn't need to be a cook to criticize the cooking. — Samuel Johnson, English writer (1709-1784).

INSIDE REPORT:

Rock star or politician, Walesa remains Poland's best hope

WROCLAW, Poland — After two hours of hearing Lech Walesa exhort regional Solidarity delegates here to be united and refrain from further strikes, a man in the rear shouted: "Long live Walesa!"

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

"That's my name," a grinning Walesa shouted back. This veneration for Solidarity's leader as, in an irreverent colloquial style, he calls on Poles for greater efforts and greater restraint dominates Poland's turbulent political scene. At age 37, Walesa has been transformed from Gdansk shipyard worker to the authentic leader of the Polish nation. As such, he now is burdened with singular responsibility for protecting Poland's democratic revolution, both from strangulation by the Polish communist apparatus and sudden assault by the Soviet army.

He is still treated with condescension by both intellectuals at Solidarity's national headquarters in downtown Warsaw who want to guide him and by communist insiders who want to coopt him. But since the death of Poland's Catholic primate, Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, he has become Poland's true leader. Unlike the austere cardinal, the charismatic Walesa has forged an emotional bond with the people unprecedented in modern Poland.

Walesa has so developed beyond the local strike leader of last summer that his absence from the country now raises concern. While he was in Geneva addressing the International Labor Organization, a regional strike was called (which Walesa quickly cancelled when he returned). That arouses fears of what will happen when Walesa is on a two-week American tour beginning July 3.

The overwhelming consensus in Solidarity is against strike action. But other leaders in the union were not happy about Walesa's recent declaration that Solidarity is strictly a labor union without political functions. "Walesa is not the trade union," Janusz Onyszkiewicz, a mathematician who is a member of Solidarity's national coordinating council, told us. "He often presents his voice as the only voice of Solidarity. When he speaks, the truth is, he generally speaks for himself."

Such Solidarity leaders may fear Walesa is being coopted by the communist apparatus. Indeed, communist intellectuals suggest that this technical high school graduate is outmatched in dealing with his counterpart in the apparatus, Deputy Prime Minister Mieczylaw Rokowski, a famous journalist well-known over Polish television. They feel Walesa as an ex-army PFC is absolutely overawed in sitting across the table from his former commander in chief, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the prime minister.

Communist functionaries regularly praise Walesa while attacking Solidarity's "radicals." Rakowski, talking to us and other Western newsmen in words meant for Soviet consumption, took a hard line against the militant reformers but went out of his way to praise Walesa's speech affirming Solidarity's limited scope as a trade union.

The true source of Walesa's caution, however, is neither Jaruzelski nor Rakowski but the Catholic Church, which also opposes new strikes and urges restraint. In visiting this Southwestern Polish city (formerly Breslau) on a national tour, Walesa met privately at length with the archbishop of Wroclaw after attending mass, as he does most days.

Both in addressing regional Solidarity delegates and at a monster evening rally here attended by 50,000, Walesa actually appeared less the ally of the regime than its teacher. "We have to make the government care about our needs," he said. He began his speech to the delegates by ridiculing Soviet and Polish Communist Party charges of "counter-revolutionaries" and "anti-socialists" in Poland: "I've been traveling all over the country, and I haven't found one yet."

What makes Walesa unique is less what he says than an emotional link between him and the Polish masses. His stump style, at once conversational and volcanic, has traces of Fidel Castro, George Wallace and Bobby Kennedy. But he is treated less as a modern politician than a rock star. Physically drained after his two-hour performance at the evening rally, Walesa was mobbed by adoring Poles seeking autographs and handshakes.

This link is why the Polish communist hierarchy has concluded it must support him. Nevertheless, heresy drips from Walesa's words: "Initiatives should come from the people," he said here. "No longer are we limited by government."

Such rejection of Soviet dogma and the very fact Walesa is functioning as a politician independently of the party must be hard for Moscow to take. Nor could it have been pleasant reading in the Kremlin when Walesa promised here that Poland would learn the truth about the Soviet slaughter of Polish army officers at Katyn and expressed a desire to speak in Russian factories. Although he cautions restraint to avoid Soviet intervention, the rise of Lech Walesa as his nation's de facto leader is another cause to wonder how long the Soviets can tolerate what is happening in Poland.

Poland facing new strike amid warnings of anarchy

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Communist Party Central Committee, in an unusually frank report prepared for Tuesday's party congress, warns that Warsaw's Soviet-bloc neighbors are growing anxious over "signs of anarchy" in Poland and reports a major defection from Polish party ranks.

Despite the warning, members of Poland's independent solidarity union in Kutno, 43 miles west of Warsaw, threatened a two-hour warning strike today unless food supplies to the city improved.

Branches of the Solidarity federation, which has an estimated nationwide membership of 10 million, held warning strikes last week that briefly shut down Baltic ports, the Polish national airline and public transportion in a major northwestern city.

Observers here say the renewed labor unrest may increase Soviet pressure on Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania to take a more hardline stand against the union or rsign.

Kania, who rose to power during the national strike wave that brought Solidarity into existence last summer, is expected to lead the debate on Poland's future at the party congress.

The 1,964 congress delegates are preparing to discuss sweeping proposals for social and economic reforms demanded by workers in the wake of last summer's labor rebellion.

The report by t[he] Communist Party Central Commit[tee] released Sunday cited a mass de[sertion] from the old state-controlled [unions] and a breakdown in press c[ontrols] in the aftermath of last yea[r's strikes].

The report said [nearly] 200,000 Communists have t[urned] in their party membership ca[rds] since last summer's strikes. It also said young people had turned a[gainst] the party to a degree unmatch[ed] since World War II.

The committee said Warsaw Pact countries "expres[s] their anxiety over the occurrence [of] signs of anarchy and attacks agai[nst] the socialist system in Poland.

"Anti-socialist activities have become a particularly menacing problem," the committee said, noting the distribution of anti-Soviet leaflets, "slandering" of managers and "illicit" use of printing facilities.

"This situation requires employing extraordinary and firm measures for restoring law and order," the committee said.

The process of liberalization following last year's labor upheaval has raised fears of possible intervention from the Soviet bloc.

Anti-socialist forces sought to "undermine Poland's territorial integrity, weaken our country's ties with fraternal socialist states and exploit our socio-ecohomic difficulties for their own ends," the committee said.

Delegates will elect a new Central Committee at the congress. It is generally expected that the new committee will be more liberal than the outgoing one which released the report.

Tax fight shifts into 'high gear'

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the budget battle winding down, the Reagan administration plans to shift into "high gear" in its drive to bring public pressure on Congress as the tax-cut fight begins in earnest this week.

And while Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan concedes a "bruising fight on the floor of the House" is unavoidable, budget director David A. Stockman flatly predicts that President Reagan also will win on taxes.

"I think we will move into high gear, in terms of calling the attention of the American public to what's at stake here and the point that if they are to get a tax reduction this year, which they expect, then we must have a tax bill ... signed by the president before Congress leaves for its month-long August recess," Stockman said Sunday on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

"I think it is that knowledge — and it is that sort of short time fuse — which will expedite things in the House and Senate and get us a tax bill by early August," he added.

Stockman said Reagan is through compromising and added: "I think we'll get the job done because the American public wants the job done."

The administration's battle plan targets 16 House Republicans and 63 Democrats.

Almost all the Republicans are Northern moderates who may be attracted to a substitute plan by House Democratic leaders that includes more tax relief for low- and middle-income Americans. Most of the Democrats are Southerners concerned that the three-year nature of the president's tax bill might worsen inflation.

The list was complied by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, a strong supporter of Reagan's tax plan, to identify lawmakers ripe for lobbying by business leaders. The lawmakers, scattered among 27 states, are generally the same ones on whom Democratic leaders are concentrating.

There will be time for three more weeks of such lobbying in the House, since the Ways and Means Committee is still writing its version of a tax cut. But the Republican-controlled Senate, tired of waiting for the House, plans to start debate Wednesday on Reagan's bill, as modified by the Finance Committee.

There is considerable doubt the Senate can pass the bill this week. Even though Democrats are outnumbered 53-47, they easily could delay a final vote until their dozens of amendments are considered.

The bill approved by the Finance Committee would reduce personal tax rates by an average of about 25 percent over 33 months, starting Oct. 1. The same rate reduction would go to all taxpayers, regardless of income.

The Democrats want a bill that would cut taxes in no more than two years, with an extra share of relief for workers with incomes below $50,000 a year.

There is a long list of other amendments to be considered by the Senate, including several being pressed by Republicans. But it is almost certain that the bill passed by the Senate will include the type of individual tax cut asked by Reagan; a big reduction in business taxes through faster write-offs for equipment and building purchases; and tax incentives for savings and investment.

Treasury Secretary Regan, interviewed Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation," said a compromise overture to House Democrats last week by Senate Finance Chairman Bob Dole was "a last-ditch effort to see if there was any way to avoid a bruising fight on the floor of the House. ... We didn't think it was possible. ... It didn't work and we said, 'No more.'"

Many of the 63 House Democrats who are considered undecided on which tax-cut bill [to support were] among those who [joined a solid Republican minority t[o provide the margin of victory for [Reagan's budget] cuts.

That part of the [administration's] economic program [moves into the] final phase this we[ek, with as many] as 200 House and S[enate negotiators] trying to iron out [differences in the] multibillion-dollar [budget-cutting] packages passed b[y the two chambers for the fiscal [year that begins] oct. 1.

Stockman said S[unday that the] budget conference is [a cleanup or a] finish phase ... essen[tially a ministerial task to resolve the minor differences."

He said he expects no major problems from House Democrats. "I would expect that they would look for other opportunities to contest us on, primarily, the tax bill," Stockman said.

The tax debate also could figure this week in a fight over efforts to restrict court-ordered busing for school integration. Liberal senators are filibustering the restrictions, and the Senate has agreed that if the question is not settled by Wednesday, the legislation will be shelved to make way for the tax-cut bill.

Congress is current[ly holding its] own investigation to d[etermine if the] U.S. accord was broke[n, a move that] could lead to an em[bargo against] Israel by its chief arm[s supplies.]

Washington suspend[ed delivery of] four F-16 warplanes to [Israel in retaliation for the reactor bombing.

The newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth reported that Israel will promise to "take into account" American concerns on the weapons issue matter, but other papers said Israeli would give no promise to check with the Americans before using U.S. weapons.

On the separate issue of Lebanon, it was not known whether Habib made any progress Sunday in talks with Begin.

Habib has been shuttling among the capitals of Lebanon, Israel, Syria and Saudi Arabia for the past two months in an effort to cool Israeli-Syrian tension over Lebanon.

Israel demands that Syria remove the anti-aircraft missiles it began placing in eastern Lebanon last April. Israel is being asked to cut back its support for the Christian militia forces fighting the Syrians in Lebanon.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♡A62 ◇Q9764 ♣AQ76
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—In support of clubs, your hand revalues to 19 points. Since partner's two-over-one response shows a minimum of 11 points, game should be assured and you are in the slam zone. Bid four clubs. An immediate jump raise, bypassing three no trump, is the best way to tell partner of your distributional strength.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠4 ♡AQ87 ◇KJ764 ♣A92
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—From the bidding, it is almost certain that partner cannot hold four hearts. Nevertheless, it is incumbent on you to describe your hand as best you can. Bid three hearts. By showing your second suit now, you will be much better placed to handle the subsequent auction. For example, if partner rebids clubs, showing a five-card suit, you have an easy raise, which strongly suggests that you have no more than a singleton spade.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A6 ♡AK[illegible] ◇KJ983 ♣K7
What is your opening bid?
A.—Although you have a six-card minor suit, your hand is essentially balanced. While you are not strong enough for an opening bid of two diamonds, your hand is much too good for one diamond lest that bid gets passed out. Open two no trump. That will also protect your king of clubs from a lead through should no trump be your final contract.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡K8732 ◇K105 ♣A1092
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠
Pass	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's bid is forcing to game, so we suggest you rebid three no trump. That tells partner that your strength is concentrated in the minor suits, and that you have both well stopped. Don't raise to four hearts—partner might have jump-shifted on a four-card suit.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's bid is forcing to game, so we suggest you rebid three no trump. That tells partner that your strength is concentrated in the minor suits, and that you have both well stopped. Don't raise to four hearts—partner might have jump-shifted on a four-card suit.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:

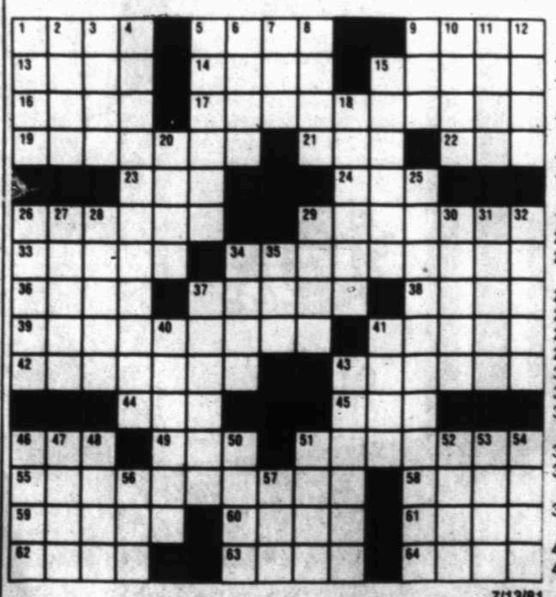

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have an opening bid and a good six-card suit that can play even opposite a singleton. Take the strain off partner by bidding four hearts. Don't bid a timid three hearts—partner might be reluctant to act again if he is looking at a singleton heart, even if his hand is rather better than minimum.

Another hunger striker dies in Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Enraged Catholics rioted today after another hunger striker died, and British authorities braced for more violence as thousands of Protestants prepared to march in memory of William of Orange's 1690 victory over Catholic forces of James II.

Martin Hurson, a 27-year-old Irish Republican Army guerrilla, died in Maze Prison near Belfast after a 45-day fast. He was the sixth Irish nationalist to die there in efforts to win political prisoner status from British jailers.

Supporters of the outlawed IRA hurled gasoline bombs, rocks and bottles at security forces in several Catholic ghettos at news of Hurson's death. Gunmen fired on British troops, but authorities reported no casualties.

In mostly Catholic west Belfast, women surged into streets, banging garbage can lids and blowing whistles in what has become a ritual tattoo marking each hunger striker's death.

Earlier, hopes of ending the strike faded when fasters rejected mediation efforts by the Catholic Irish Commission for Justice and Peace, a group of Catholic clergymen. Hurson's death left seven IRA activists fasting.

Sinn Fein, political wing of the IRA, reported Hurson's condition suddenly declined Sunday as prison authorities summoned Hurson's family to his bed, where he lay incoherent and hallucinating.

He was sentenced to 20 years in November 1977, convicted of bombings and conspiracy to kill security forces in this British province. Sinn Fein said Kieran Doherty, a 25-year-old newly elected member of the Irish Parliament, was expected to be the next prisoner to die. He is in the 52nd day of his fast.

The IRA is fighting to oust the British from Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland to reunite it with the neighboring Irish Republic, which is overwhelmingly Catholic.

The hunger strike began March 1 to force the British government to grant the IRA activists special privileges amounting to political prisoner status. The British have refused, calling the prisoners common criminals.

Hurson's death came five days after hunger striker Joe McDonnell died, which sparked four straight days of rioting in Northern Ireland's Catholic ghettos.

Today's Protestant marches mark the Battle of the Boyne 291 years ago, which assured Protestant supremacy in Ireland for 130 years. Many Catholics resent the annual celebration, and British authorities planned heavy security.

"There may be isolated incidents but I know of no plans for concerted attacks on the marchers," said the Rev. Martin Smyth, Grand Master of the Orange Order, a masonic-like organization dedicated to maintaining Protestant supremacy in Northern Ireland.

Smyth said the group planned 18 major demonstrations in Belfast and other towns in a display of Protestant strength. More than 100,000 marchers were expected.

Police uncovered a large IRA bomb factory Saturday, 150 yards from the route of the Belfast march where it passes a tense Catholic area.

Police would not speculate whether the bombs were aimed at marchers. The IRA's "provisional" wing, blamed for many past bombings, has not attacked Protestant civilians for more than two years to avoid sparking all-out religious war.

A police spokesman said more than 250 pounds of homemade explosives in bags and beer kegs were found late Saturday night in a garage in Belfast city center along with timers and bomb-making material.

"There was enough stuff there to kill dozens of people," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — American Stock Exchange Noon Index: 364.57+1.13

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose today as attention focused on merger candidates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had lost 3.33 points last Friday, rose 2.66 to 958.33 in the first two hours of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a 7-4 margin, among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Texaco, considered a possible player in the widening battle to gain control of Conoco, rose ⅛ to 35¼ in active trading. Conoco and Du Pont, which have agreed to merge in a deal valued at $6.9 billion, were delayed in opening, as was Seagram, which on Sunday raised its bid for Conoco.

Mobil, which said it was considering making a bid for Conoco, fell ¼ to 31 after a delayed opening.

Big Board volume totaled 15.9 million shares, compared with 19.4 million in the same period on Friday.

The NYSE's composite index rose .27 to 75.42.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.13 at 364.57.

AFL-CIO opposes policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's international trade policy forces the United States to buck a worldwide economic tide carrying the nation toward greater trade deficits and unemployment, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland says.

"A policy of government abdication of responsibility in the name of free trade can make the losses from trade much higher than the gains for most Americans," Kirkland said in testimony prepared for a hearing today by the Senate Banking subcommittee on trade.

"Other nations do not apologize for pursuing their national interest," he said, calling for greater government support of U.S. industries squeezed by foreign competitors often subsidized by their governments.

The labor leader said he opposed the policy set forth last week by Bill Brock, the administration's special trade representative, who took a hard line against continuing subsidies by the U.S. government.

Brock also said that "when the foreign advantage is based upon government subsidies and other trade-distorting practices, U.S. policy will be to enforce U.S. trade laws and to work to eliminate such practices."

Kirkland noted that last year, the U.S. balance of trade shifted from a surplus to a deficit of $32 billion. He said trade policies "should be restructured in a comprehensive, realistic and fair manner. It is time for this change."

Kirkland said a host of actions — besides enforcement of existing laws — is necessary to protect U.S. industries against losses brought about by foreign competition.

He said that "a fair trade policy would provide a full account of what happens in the real world, a world where free trade does not exist. ... Yet, the U.S. is under constant assault when suggestions are made to move in U.S. national interest."

Kirkland said the U.S. government should monitor imports and exports and their impact on the American economy and end incentives which U.S. firms now have to invest abroad "in order to take advantage of multi-million-dollar tax subsidies and insurance for overseas investment." He said this only costs jobs at home.

"Discussions of world trade barriers in Washington in 1981 lead the uninformed observer to believe the United States has many barriers to world trade and the world has very few," he said. "The facts are the reverse. The world's economies have planning, import regulations of all kinds, export requirements and export subsidies, as well as requirements to produce within their own borders.

"No such protection exists for U.S. industry, which can only move abroad ... or become importers," Kirkland said. "Much of U.S. industry already has moved. That is not fair.

"But reciprocity, equivalency of access to markets, is a fair trade concept that the U.S. policymakers do not consider," he said.

Kirkland also called for greater U.S. government promotion of exports, particularly farm commodities.

"Government participation in trade must therefore be recognized as an ongoing reality," the labor leader said, "not something to be avoided at all costs."

INVESTORS GUIDE

Commercial paper can be purchased at banks

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Four years ago, I worked for a man whose son was in the brokerage business. Although I had no experience in the stock market, I invested $1,000 with my employer's son. For about a year that young man traded for my account often and had my investment going up and down.

For about the last three years, however, I have had only one stock. The monthly statement I get from a New York brokerage firm shows I have 100 shares of that stock and $146 in a "cash balance." I don't know where the young broker I dealt with is now located. I don't work for his father anymore.

Doyle

What procedure should I follow to get out of the market?

A. Phone the brokerage firm from which you receive monthly statements and ask to speak to the broker assigned to your account. Tell that broker to sell the 100 shares of stock you now own. And give instructions that the proceeds from that sale, plus the $146 cash in your account, be sent to you by check.

Since your address shows it will be a long-distance call, make it collect. Identify yourself by name and as a customer who wants to sell some stock,. The brokerage house should accept your call, because of the commission you will pay on your sell order.

Because brokers must follow the "know your customer" rule, you might have to answer some questions to establish your identity. And, you might be asked to send written and signed instructions to sell that stock and close your account. If that's the case, do it by registered or certified mail —return receipt requested.

●

Q. I placed a verbal order with my broker to sell 100 shares of stock I own at $22 a share. That was about five weeks ago, when the stock was trading around "21" — $21 a share,. The following Wednesday, the stock tables of the two newspapers I read showed that stock had traded at "22 1/8" — $22.12 ½ a share.

I assumed my stock had been sold, because my order had been confirmed as "good till cancelled" by the broker. But my broker says no and that the stock never traded as high as 22 1/8. He says, "This was an erroneous entry in the stock sheet." Your comments?

A. I'll try to keep the comments mild, so that my blue-eyed finance officer doesn't have to put on asbestos gloves to open letters from some thin-skinned members of the brokerage fraternity who feel the misdeeds of their brethren should never be mentioned in print.

The stock you named in your letter did trade at 22 1/8 about a week after you placed your sell order. I landed my first newspaper job in 1948 and am well aware that the papers aren't right all the time. But newspaper stock tables aren't wrong nearly as often as some brokers claim. When quotation errors are made, they are corrected. That 22 1/8 price stands as the "high" for that stock for the past 12 months.

Your sell order should have been filled. Your broker and/or his brokerage firm goofed. Take your complaint to the Office of Consumer Affairs, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, 500 N. Capital St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20549.

●

Q. How do I go about buying "commercial paper?" Is a bank or broker involved? What do the commissions come to?

A. Commercial paper — short-term notes, issued by corporations and finance companies — can be purchased from many commercial banks and brokerage houses. They have maturities ranging from a few days to nine months. These unsecured debt obligations are best described as short-term corporate IOUs. They normally come in minimum denominations of $25,000, although smaller "pieces" are sometimes available.

The bank or brokerage house through which you buy commercial paper normally "marks up" commercial paper — by selling to you at a higher price than the bank or brokerage firm paid. So, you won't see an itemized commission on your purchase statement.

Company doesn't tell that it made a mistake

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When a large company acquires another it inevitably tells shareholders that the move was entirely in their best interests.

And when, as often happens, the acquired company is sold off a few years later, the same explanation is dusted off and used again.

Which is to say that almost never does management concede that it made a mistake, or that its motives were anything but what was best for the shareholders. But errors often are made, and divorces often are quick.

Why? Goals of acquired companies conflict with those of the parent. Assets are found to be less than was believed. Markets change, making a once profitable product a drag on the parent company's earnings.

Whatever the reason, some of those mergers — and there were close to 2,000 mergers of large public companies last year — weren't nearly as well thought out as management would like shareholders to believe.

Otherwise, why the big divorce rate? W.T. Grimm & Co., a Chicago-based broker recognized as an authority on merger-divestiture statistics, estimates that for every three marriages there was a divorce last year.

International Telephone & Telegraph Corp., a giant conglomerate that grew through acquisitions, divested itself of 8 companies in 1980. Itel, Esmark and RCA dropped seven units each. Kennecott, McGraw-Edison and Union Carbide each rid themselves of five operating companies.

Recent merger activity has centered around oil companies, which have two special characteristics these days: 1. They have the cash to buy up other companies; 2. that cash also makes them very attractive to buyers.

Seagram Co., which recently sought to become a factor in oil through acquiring Conoco, last year sold Texas Pacific Oil Co. to Sun Co. for $2.3 billion. Occidental Petroleum, already a factor in oil, became one in plastics by paying Firestone Tire & Rubber $200 million for its Firestone Plastic Co. And Standard Oil of California, well established in oil, decided it also liked phosphates and fertilizers and therefore paid Stouffer Chemical $130 million for such holdings in Utah.

And now Du Pont, which stock analysts thought was moving away from petroleum-based products, has jumped kneedeep into the petropool with an apparently successful bid for Conoco, ninth largest U.S. oil firm.

Will it be a successful move? Obviously Du Pont management thinks so. learly, oly time will tell. It is fraught with all the hazards of any other marriage.

Grimm blames high capital costs, reflected by high interest rates, for the high number of divestitures.

Seeking to economize, it says, firms seem eager to rid themselves of operations that require large amounts of capital, that are slow to grow, and that show only marginal profits.

For instance, a report issued early this year states, Esmark, Inc. sold its oil business because it lacked the capital to operate it successfully. And Richardson-Merrell, Inc. sold its ethical pharmaceutical business to Dow Chemical because it did not have the financial power to effectively compete in the ethical drug industry.

Both seller and buyer always are able to offer explanations of why their moves are correct.

It is only later, when the moves have been analyzed in the light of results, that you can judge and evaluate the explanations. And those evaluations have sometimes lead to top executive firings.

Fort Worth hospital open

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Administrators at John Peter Smith Hospital prepared the county-run owned facility for full operations today, after limited operations the past week because of a flooded basement.

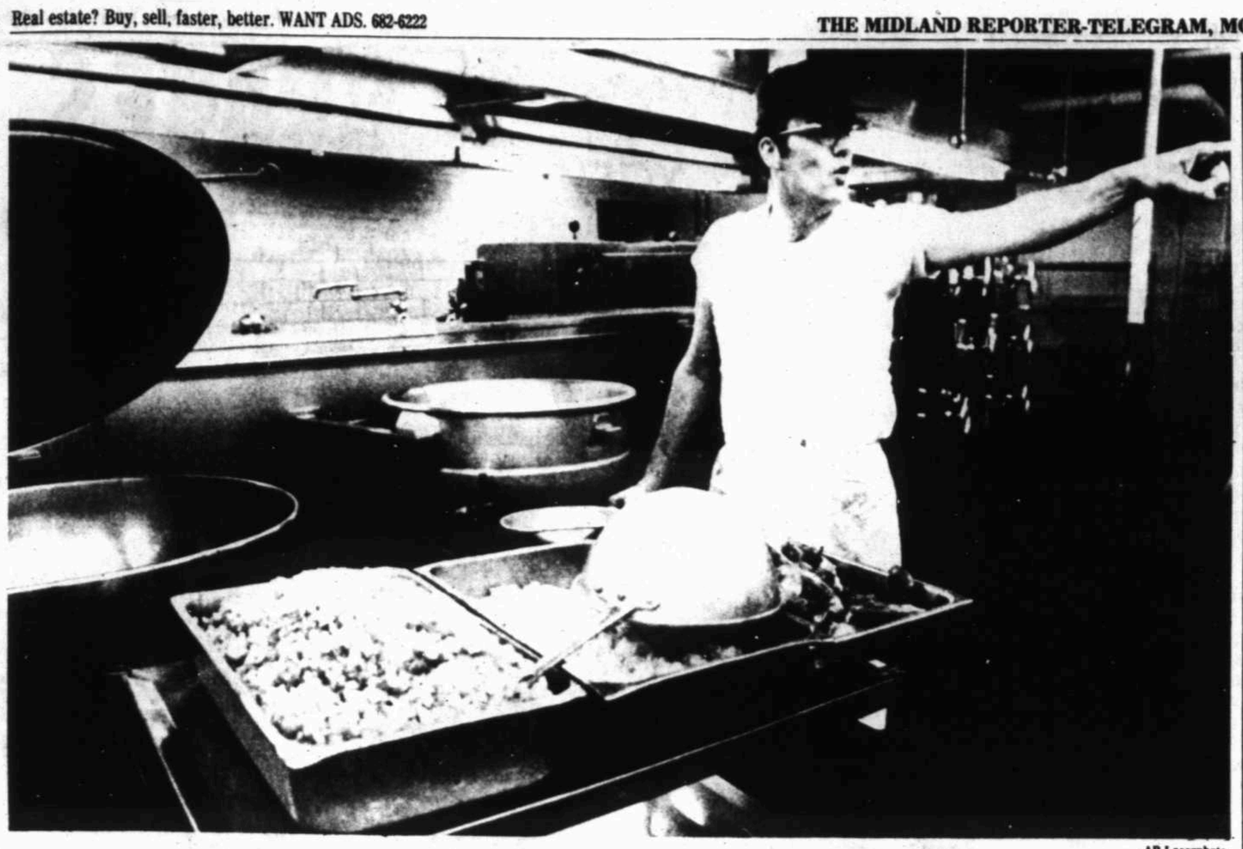

More than two inches of rain July 4 damaged the hospital's electrical system, doing about $500,000 in damage and forcing the transfer of some patients and the limiting of admissions, hospital administrator Tim Philpott said.

The hospital's emergency generating system provided limited power, but the hospital cafeteria and laundry were forced to close. Food and clean linens were brought in from outside sources, he said.

A lack of air conditioning sent temperatures in the surgical wards above 90 degrees and some elective surgery was cancelled, said Philpott.

Philpott said the hospital's occupancy dipped to about 160 beds during the power shortage, compared to a normal rate of about 350 beds. John Peter Smith is Tarrant County's charity hospital and is Fort Worth's major treatment center for accidents.

Legislators report agreement on budget

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — As 3,000 National Guard troops staffed mental hospitals and filled in at other jobs, a joint legislative committee agreed on a $6.3 billion state budget designed to end a strike by state workers.

Both houses were expected to act on the budget today and send it to Gov. Edward J. King, who under law has 10 days to review it.

Union leaders said more state workers, including employees at state colleges, would join the strike today and stay out until they start getting paychecks again.

"Ninety percent of our 25,000 members will be on strike tomorrow," John Harvey, spokesman for Council 93 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said Sunday.

THE UNION'S MEMBERS at state mental hospitals walked off the job early Friday. About 60 percent of the 2,448 state employees scheduled to work during the weekend at mental institutions failed to show up, according to Mental Health Commissioner Mark Mills.

An additional 2,000 National Guard troops were ordered to duty this morning, bringing to 3,000 the number called out since the strike began.

Kenneth Lyons, president of the rival National Association of Government Employees, representing more than 16,000 state workers, said he expected NAGE members to remain on their jobs.

Lack of a budget has halted all state spending and cut off paychecks to employees, about 100,000 people on welfare rolls and pensioners since July 1.

"Checks to state employees, welfare recipients and pensioners would be sent out almost immediately," said Democratic Sen. Chester G. Atkins, co-chairman of the joint Ways and Means Committee which met late Sunday. "We have a budget that is now 100 percent complete."

KING'S SIGNATURE on the bill would end weeks of wrangling between the House and Senate over budget size, the number of workers to be laid off in the wake of a property-tax-cutting proposal and the amount of state aid to communities.

Atkins said local aid amounted to $265 million, and from 3,000 to 5,000 state employees would be laid off under budget cuts.

He said he hoped the aid would permit communities hit by the property tax-limiting Proposition 2½ to rehire some of the teachers, firefighters and police officers laid off because of loss of revenue. The statewide proposition, approved in a November referendum, limits property taxes to 2.5 percent of fair market value.

Guards at state prisons, members of AFSCME, voted Sunday against a walkout, said Larry W. Gratto, chairman of the penal committee of Massachusetts correctional officers and president of the guards local at the Norfolk Corrrectional Institute.

HE SAID GUARDS feared that fellow officers and the public safety would be endangered during a strike at overcrowded prisons in 90-degree temperatures. He said a second strike vote was scheduled Tuesday.

"We also have no paychecks," Gratto said. "But we feel we have to act responsibly. However, patience is wearing thin."

The Newspaper BIBLE

BITE THE DUST, DIANA!

Inside, the people were all shouting, some one thing and some another -- everything was in confusion. In fact, most of them didn't even know why they were there.

Alexander was spotted among the crowd by some of the Jews and dragged forward. He motioned for silence and tried to speak. But when the crowd realized he was a Jew, they started shouting again and kept it up for two hours: "Great is Diana of the Ephesians! Great is Diana of the Ephesians!"

At last the mayor was able to quiet them down enough to speak. "Men of Ephesus," he said, "everyone knows that Ephesus is the center of the religion of the great Diana, whose image fell down to us from heaven. Since this is an indisputable fact, you shouldn't be disturbed no matter what is said, and should do nothing rash. Yet you have brought these men here who have stolen nothing from her temple and have not defamed her.

"If Demetrius and the craftsmen have a case against them, the courts are currently in session and the judges can take the case at once. Let them go through legal channels. And if there are complaints about other matters, they can be settled at the regular City Council meetings; for we are in danger of being called to account by the Roman government for today's riot, since there is no cause for it. And if Rome demands an explanation, I won't know what to say."

Then he dismissed them, and they dispersed.

Troubled airline planning employee, service cutbacks

MIAMI (AP) — Pan American World Airways will reduce its workforce and trim service under a cost-cutting program to be announced Tuesday, officials of the troubled airline say.

A Pan Am official who was briefed on the plan says the cutbacks will be substantial, The Miami Herald reported on Sunday.

"There will be some cotracting of the system worldwide," said the official, who asked not to be identified. "Florida will have some changes. You will see some upgrading of the East-West (routes) and some slimming of the North-South (routes) as they touch Florida."

A company spokesman confirmed that William Waltrip, president of Pan Am's airline division, will announce "strategy and restructuring for the balance of 1981," at a Tuesday news conference. But spokesman Mike Clark refused further comment.

"I feel it's the president of the airline division's prerogative to talk about what he's going to do. Until he makes it public, I don't have anything to say about it," Clark said.

When Pan Am acquired Miami-based National Airlines last year, corporate officials were interested in the lucrative New York-to-Florida market. But since Pan Am took over, service on that route has been cut.

For weeks, airline industry observers have been speculating that Pan Am, which sustained operating losses of $126.9 million in 1980 and a net loss of $114.5 million in the first three months of this year, would impose severe cutbacks in an effort to eliminate unprofitable routes.

Educated smokers vary

Dear Dr. Solomon: At a recent college reunion I attended, I was surprised to see a number of my former classmates smoking. I can't imagine that a well-educated person would deliberately commit slow suicide in this fashion. Did anyone ever try to determine whether there is a relationship between educational level and smoking? — Pamela

Dear Pamela: The available evidence of an association between educational level and smoking shows different patterns for men and women. In regard to men, those with more education smoke less; with women, however, both those who smoke more and those who smoke less include persons from opposite ends of the educational spectrum.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother is being treated for high blood pressure and is taking a diuretic. Since during the summer months the average person loses a lot of body fluids as the result of perspiring, would it be advisable for her to discontinue the diuretic? — Mrs. N.R.

Dear Mrs. R.: Persons for whom a diuretic (or water pill) has been prescribed should continue to take it until and unless the doctor says it should be discontinued. A person who begins to feel weak or dizzy should check with his or her doctor to see if there should be a change.

Anyone taking medication for either high blood pressure or heart failure should make certain to drink extra fluids during the hot summer months. Check the amount with your doctor. The drugs prescribed on conditions often include a diuretic, which removes excess body fluids.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine who travels extensively on business was telling me about the degree to which cigarette smoking has spread in some of the non-industrialied countries. He remarked only half jokingly that it won't do any good to try to improve the nutritional levels of the populations of these nations, if they're going to die of lung cancer anyway.

I believe that some United Nations agencies deal with health problems around the world, and I wonder if anyone there is concerned about the health effects of cigarette smoking in the developing nations. — Aaron

Dear Aaron: The World Health Organization (WHO) is well aware of the increase in cigarette smoking in the developing nations and its adverse health effects, and it is no laughing matter. In fact reports from some African nations indicate that diseases associated with smoking are becoming as important public health problems as infectious diseases and malnutrition.

Ex-migrant worker now a teacher

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — Maria Alicia Gonzales has a bachelor of arts degree, a teaching job, and a sense of belonging. All were far-off dreams a few years ago.

Alicia, as she prefers to be called, is the eighth child of a farm-working family of 17. Her early childhood was spent following the family throughout dusty migrant camps of Oregon, California, Idaho and Arizona.

Now she is a schoolteacher.

"It wasn't until the seventh grade that I had spent one whole year in one school," she recalls. "The migrant way of life means moving on. Often there would be just a few weeks or a couple months in one school and then a move to another camp, another farm, and another school."

But when she completed the seventh grade without moving, she found "continuity and stability, and I wanted to change my way of life."

It wasn't easy, she admits, explaining that she has strong family ties and helped provide guidance to younger siblings at home and in the fields. Her family was putting down some roots in Dayton, Ore., but some members were continuing the migrant life in the Northwest, leaving her as one of the older ones responsible for the family members remaining behind.

She continued her own education, graduating from Dayton High School in 1975. Then she spent a year out of school, mainly "doing nothing." But she knew she didn't want to "just drift" and started to look at educational opportunities. She became interested in physical therapy and enrolled in nearby Pacific University in Forest Grove.

"It was hard getting used to college," she says, looking back. "It took a lot of discipline and I had to discipline myself." But, she adds, her parents encouraged her.

During her sophomore year she switched from physical therapy to education, and this spring she received her bachelor of arts degree in bilingual education, and became a certified elementary teacher.

Now, at age 26, she is starting her teaching career in the Migrant Education Program at Hoover Elementary School in Salem, working with kindergarten and primary children.

"I'm excited," she says of her work. "The migrant children need the special programs because they miss so much school when their families pack up and go to a new location. They see lots of different classrooms in one school year.

"I enjoy teaching — especially in two languages," she says. "It's really fun to switch back and forth."

Her classes include a regular curriculum taught in English and-or Spanish as the children require. Much of her work now is on a one-to-one basis with individual children. In the future she expects to teach regular public school in English and-or Spanish.

"The other day I tried to pick strawberries, and I really couldn't do it," she laughs as she remembers past days in the fields and realizes how her life has changed. "Other migrant kids should try it," she says of her education and now her teaching career.

When Maria Alicia Gonzales received her bachelor of arts degree, there was another type of recognition for her. She was given the Pacific University Voice of Experience Trophy, an award made since 1938 to the graduate overcoming the greatest adversity in reaching academic goals.

Dr. David R. Malcolm, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, commended her on receiving the award, saying, "Through her ability to persevere, she has turned her dreams into reality."

The first recipient of the trophy, who came from the nearby farming community of Dilley during the Depression years, was Dr. Thomas Thompson, recently retired as president of Morningside College in Sioux City, Iowa.

DEAR ABBY: I read some time ago that Benjamin Franklin wrote a letter to a young man advising him to take an older woman for his mistress. I haven't been able to find it in any of Franklin's writings. Are you familiar with it? — LIKES OLDER WOMEN IN TUCSON

DEAR LIKES: Yes. And here it is, from "A Treasury of the World's Great Letters": June 25, 1745

"My dear friend: If you persist in thinking sex is inevitable, then I repeat my former advice that in your amours you should prefer older women to young ones. This you call a paradox, and demand my reasons. They are these:

"1) Because they have more knowledge of the world, and their minds are better stored with observations; their conversation is more improving, and more lastingly agreeable.

"2) Because when women cease to be handsome, they study to be good. To maintain their influence over man, they supply the diminution of beauty by an augmentation of utility. They learn to do a thousand services, small and great, and are the most tender and useful of all friends when you are sick. Thus they continue amiable. And hence there is hardly such a thing to be found as an old woman who is not a good woman.

"3) Because there is no hazard of children, which irregularly produced may be attended with much inconvenience.

"4) Because through more experience they are more prudent and discreet in conducting an intrigue to prevent suspicion. The commerce with them is therefore safer with regard to your reputation; and regard to theirs, if the affair should happen to be known, considerate people might be inclined to excuse an old woman, who would kindly take care of a young man, form his manners by her good councils, and prevent his ruining his health and fortune among mercenary prostitutes.

"5) Because in every animal that walks upright, the deficiency of the fluids that fill the muscles appears first in the highest part. The face first grows lank and wrinkled; then the neck; then the breast and arms; the lower parts continuing to the last as plump as ever; so that covering all above with a basket, and regarding only what is below the girdle, it is impossible of two women to know an old from a young one. And as in the dark all cats are gray, the pleasure of corporal enjoyment with an old woman is at least equal and frequently superior; every knack being by practice capable of improvement.

"6) Because the sin is less. The debauching of a virgin may be her ruin, and make her for life unhappy.

"7) Because the compunction is less. The having made a young girl miserable may give you frequent bitter reflections; none of which can attend making an old woman happy.

"8th and lastly. They are so grateful!!!

"Your affectionate friend, BENJ. FRANKLIN"

Whether "the dear friend" ever took the above advice remains unknown. But in 1776, at age 70, Franklin was sent to Paris to serve as minister to France. There he had ample opportunity to consort with women of all ages, but he always preferred older women. Perhaps it was one of the younger ones who told Ben to go fly a kite.

DEAR ABBY: How does one introduce stepparents gracefully? My parents are divorced, and they are both married again to wonderful people. Using the terms "stepmother" or "stepfather" seems too unfeeling.

I love my parents very much, and I truly love their new mates, but introductions are so awkward for me. Can you help? — STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: Why not simply introduce them as "my parents"?

CONFIDENTIAL TO R.F.N.: There is a solution for every problem. Sometimes the solution is to accept that which cannot be changed. In other words, if you pick a lemon, make lemonade.

Inmate finds way to pen sermons, jokes

By GEOFFREY GEVALT
Associated Press Writer

JESSUP, Md. (AP) — Amin Nabil Abdullah has had his share of notoriety, but his latest endeavor marks a definite change in direction.

The 38-year-old Abdullah gives advice. All sorts of advice. He counsels people on the best way to cope with marital problems. He offers people suggestions on dealing with over-bearing superiors.

Abdullah believes that those who have problems can best understand how to solve those of others.

Amin Nabil Abdullah, you see, is not of the afternoon bridge set. If you needed some advice on proper placesettings for a debutante ball, Abdullah is not your man.

Amin Nabil Abdullah, once known as William White, is serving life plus 155 years at the House of Corrections.

Writing an advice column in the prison's newspaper, he has been dubbed the Dear Abby of the "Cut," the not-so-flattering term for the sprawling, crowded facility.

Under the "nom de plume" of "Dear Bill," Abdullah answers letters on marital struggles, love problems, any kind of thorny dilemma his readers can come up with. And his readers — murderers, rapists. muggers — have a few.

"Everybody in here has a problem," says Abdullah. "I thought it would be kind of interesting to sit down and give them a little help."

He does it in his own special way, however, and tact is not his greatest grace.

"I'm a black male, 4-feet-5-inches tall," wrote 'Life-&-Ten' " Although I'm not too handsome, I can rap all day long (over the phone, in letters, etc.) to a girl and usually can get her to come visit me.

"After the first visit, however, I never see them any more. What's up?"

"My man," answered Bill, "it's obvious your physical appearance isn't exactly a turn-on, but since you have the ability to express yourself, I suggest you complement that by getting some dermatology and cosmotolgy books to see what they can teach you. ... "

Abdullah says he enjoys writing the column, quickly adding, "it's good that I do. I'll be here for a while."

He faces his sentence with little hope of ever getting parole. The sentence was one of the severest penal punishments ever handed down by a city court. Abdullah was charged in connection with an armed robbery in which one person was killed and another wounded.

Abdullah was never accused of pulling the trigger, and another city judge gave the man who fired the shots a much lighter sentence.

Abudullah claims he is a victim of his class and says he is innocent. An appeal was unsuccessful.

He approaches life differently because of his sentence, and he is careful to follow his own advice. Hanging on to the "possibility" of someday re-entering society, he vows to keep his sense of humor and his strength.

"You've got to have patience. If you have nothing else you've got to have patience."

"Dear Bill," wrote one reader, H. D. "Yesterday I called home to my wife, and a man answered her phone. Puzzled, I asked to speak to my wife. ... Returning a few moments later, he said she was asleep and he could not wake her.

"I got so mad I wanted to kill them both. Man, look, tell me what I can do."

"Dear H. D.," came Bill's answer, "let's face it, if a guy answers your wife's phone and goes into her bedroom to wake her, we both can assume he's living there.

"But killing either of them is out of the question," he added. "For one thing, you can't get to them. Another, in Maryland, murder is punishable by death."

"People will read this if they think it's humorous," says Abdullah. "And if it really is, they'll go back later and read it again.

"And just maybe it will help them. And will help them grow."

Abdullah, and one of the paper's editors, Jack Johnson, maintain the paper, which comes out monthly, should be a positive note in an otherwise dismal environment.

"We don't want to turn this into a gripe sheet," says Johnson. "We want to get an overview. We want to tell people generally what's going on. ... And we want to give them something that would be interesting.

"There are a lot of artists in here," he adds, pausing for a moment and then laughing. "No, really, there are. And a lot of musicians, too."

Inexpensive 'Big Apple' is a tasty treat for tourists

By HARRY DEDERICHS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Without a wallet brimming with bills — and not just one-dollar bills — a tourist in New York misses the choicest bites of "the Big Apple."

Tiffany's. A suite at the Plaza. Dinner atop a skyscraper. The latest smash on Broadway. A nightcap at the Carlyle.

But not all of the 17.1 million people who visited New York last year spent that kind of money. The average tourist spent $128 here, so for every mink-wrapped sightseer, there were several counting their funds closely. With a buck and a bit of ingenuity you can see a lot.

So you can't afford $25 for a Broadway show? Hang around Rockefeller Center, and there's a good chance of finding a network employee handing out tickets to television shows.

So you can't afford $55 for a front-row seat at the Metropolitan Opera? Come in the summer, and hear the Met for free in Central Park. This June, 150,000 people spread blankets and picnic dinners on the lawn and heard vocal superstars Renata Scotto and Placido Domingo in "Tosca."

The New York Philharmonic also gives free concerts in the park. At Lincoln Center — home of the Met and the Philharmonic — there is free entertainment most nights at the outdoor shell in Damrosch Park.

In the winter, many churches offer free concerts of high quality.

You can't afford to savor the twinkling skyline from Windows on the World, the fancy restaurant atop the World Trade Center? Then see it from the Roosevelt Island Cable Car, a commuter ride which swings high over the East River. The nighttime view from the car's wide windows is stunning.

Can't afford the tour to the Statue of Liberty? Invest 25 cents to ride the Staten Island ferry, which sweeps past Miss Liberty on its 20-minute voyage between lower Manhattan and Staten Island. The ferry offers incomparable views of the financial district, a close-up look at bustling New York harbor, and a cool ocean breeze on a hot day.

Put off by the admission charges at the museums? Set your own price. Those prices posted at the entrance are "suggested donations." If you have the nerve to endure a withering stare from the cashier, pay as little as you wish to enter the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Cloisters, the Guggenheim, the Museum of Natural History, the Frick Collection and the Morgan Library.

If you don't have the nerve to crash the Metropolitan that way, sit on the steps on a Sunday afternoon. Usually there is a juggler or a mime or some musicians entertaining the throng and passing the hat for donations.

If an invitation to a diplomatic reception is unlikely, you can see diplomats at work at the United Nations, where the tickets for the public discussions in the General Assembly and the Security Council are free of charge.

You can watch other people making piles of money — or losing it, for that matter — on the free tour of the New York Stock Exchange. Visitors also get souvenirs — their names punched in ticket tape.

The Convention and Visitors Bureau has information on many events, plus discount and half-price tickets for some shows.

If the cheap way of seeing New York palls, you might gamble 50 cents on a New York state lottery ticket. You could become a millionaire — and then see that other New York.

Be careful when replacing roof supports

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — One of the posts supporting the roof of our back porch is starting to rot and I intend to replace it soon. I have thought of several ways of supporting the roof while I take out the old post and put in a new one, but I can't decide which one to use. If I put up a temporary post of a 2 by 4, will that be strong enough to hold up the roof?

A. — Before I answer your question, be advised that the first thing you should do is to find out what caused the post to rot. If you don't, you soon may find that one of the other supporting posts also is rotting. It is difficult to predict how strong the temporary support must be without knowing something more about the kind and weight of the roof. To be sure, use a 4-by-4 rather than a 2-by-4, even though the latter might be sufficient.

Q. — I am always buying chisels and then, a year or two later, buying new ones because the cutting edges are dull. What is the best way to protect the edges of chisels?

A. — Are you using them exclusively as chisels? Many get ruined because they are used as screwdrivers, wedges, prying bars or can openers. When they are not in use, put a little oil on the cutting edges and — most important — hang them up. Keeping them in a drawer with other metal tools is a sure way to dull their edges.

Q. — About a year ago, you advised someone about using a commercial bleach to take the color out of wood from which the finish had been removed. By a commercial bleach, I assume you meant the kind that comes in two containers. Recently, I had a similar job to do and I found that the wood bleach is fairly expensive. My grandfather used a wood bleach that he mixed himself. I don't know the formula, but I know there was what is called photographer's hypo in it. Would you happen to know what this mixture is?

A. — The only homemade bleach known to me with hypo in it is really three separate solutions. One is 3 ounces of sodium hyposulphate (the hypo) in a quart of water. One is 3 ounces of oxalic acid in a quart of water. And the third is one ounce of borax in a quart of water. The oxalic acid solution is first applied with a stiff brush. This must be done with great care to avoid a severe burn or worse. When the acid is partly dry, apply the hypo mixture. When this is completely dry, use the borax to destroy all traces of the acid. The finish should not be applied for at least a day. It is difficult to determine whether this procedure matches that used with the commercial bleach, which is scientifically prepared by experts. As for the cost, it is doubtful whether there is much diffhappen to have the homemade ingredients on hand.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, bleach, remover, stain, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which is available by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Candy power

WACO, Texas. (AP) — Munching isn't the only way to convert candy bars into energy.

A solar-powered still, designed by Dr. Merle Alexander of Baylor University, turns candy by-products and scraps supplied by the local M&M-Mars, plant into highly flammable ethanol. Dr. Alexander markets the ethanol for mixing in gasohol and believes it can be an alternative to gasoline.

"There is an inevitable amount of waste in any food manufacturing process," a company spokesman said. "We're delighted that Dr. Alexander has found a productive use for our unmarketable candy." A new 1,000 gallon-per-day still will begin operating this summer.

Careful buying can cut wardrobe budget, costs

NEW YORK (AP) — Prudent shopping, taking advantage of sales, and creative buying can cut a man's clothing budget substantially, according to Art Blumenfeld, head of a merchandising consulting firm which represents more than 180 men's stores throughout the country.

"Men whose budgets are especially tight but who do not want to be seen in anything that looks inferior, can compromise by spending less on the 'invisible items' such as socks, underwear and pajamas," says Blumenfeld, president of April-Marcus Inc. "The money saved will be better spent if it goes toward buying a better quality suit."

He suggests that whenever possible men should buy items that can be cleaned in the washing machine, including such garments as wash and wear shirts, sports items such as slacks and jeans, and even some suits.

"Unless you're in the public eye and wearing the latest styles is a must for your image, you're better off sticking with the more conservative cuts because they'll be around much longer," he advises.

"For instance, anyone who bought several suits with 5-inch lapels a few years back, either has a closet full of unstylish outfits or else had to spend a small fortune cutting down the lapels."

If you don't plan on being a peacock, with many different suits, you're better off resisting the temptation to buy that loud plaid or green suit, the clothing expert cautions.

"Instead, choose a navy blue or charcoal gray," says Blumenfeld. "Few people ever really notice if you're wearing your dark suit often, but your more flamboyant ones worn too frequently won't go unnoticed."

Learn how to improvise and mix and match, he urges. This can be a major factor in keeping clothing costs down. He suggests that anyone shopping for budget-minding clothes should consider at least one "wardrober."

A wardrober, which is sold in many types of stores and called by different names, is simply a suit with a vest and an extra pair of lighter shade slacks. When you buy this type of outfit you are essentially buying four different ensembles, he explains:

First, you have a suit; second, you have a suit with a vest; third, you have a jacket with a pair of slacks; fourth, you have a jacket with a vest and a pair of slacks.

"Of course, this same type of mixing and matching can work well with any dark suit jacket and a lighter shade of slacks," he adds.

If your clothing budget is really low and you can't afford new suits and sports jackets, you can still convey an aura of affluence or elegance if you spend a little more for shirts and ties, Blumenfeld points out.

Water here, but what to drink?

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — A bottle of beer usually awaits Jay Powell when he climbs from his water supply ship, the Jim Jack, onto the deck of a tanker or freighter to hook up the hoses. But not always.

Once, a few years ago, he mounted a 20-foot ladder he'd set on top of the Jim Jack's pilot house and scrambled aboard a South American ship anchored off nearby Dundalk to find that all was not right.

"The men were in the middle of a mutiny," Powell recalled. "They had the officers locked in cabins."

By the time he realized what was happening, the two ships had shifted slightly, knocking the ladder away. He yelled down to the Jim Jack — no reply. He turned back to the mutinous sailors.

"Guys in the crew were coming toward me, and they had hammers," Powell said.

After another shout below and more silence, he remembered, he leaped and landed in a sprawl on the pilot house roof.

More often in Powell's six years aboard the Jim Jack, the only fresh water pumper in Baltimore harbor where many midsize ships aren't equipped with seawater converters, the pace has been more like that on a Mississippi barge.

Fully loaded with 125,000 gallons — or five short tons — of water, the Jim Jack plows along at five knots, and in summery weather, crew members said, there's time to get some sun.

When they reach one of the 700- to 800-foot ships whose thirst they quench, the task of connecting hoses and pumping takes a few hours after skipper Lee Freeman performs the delicate job of steering the 126-foot Jim Jack alongside.

"The Chief," as the white-bearded, 61-year-old Freeman is called, has been on the water, someplace or other, since he lied about his age and joined the Navy at 16.

Assigned to a destroyer at Pearl Harbor, he said he was off the ship when the Japanese attacked Dec. 7, 1941. "We were spectators," he said.

Later, on a destroyer-escort called the USS Rall at Okinawa, he survived when a kamikaze struck and killed 26 others.

Life aboard the Jim Jack is comparatively serene, and "The Chief" said, "I'm ready for it."

Chesapeake Bay winters bring harsher times for the water supply ship, actually a self-propelled barge which James Fesmire bought from the Navy's Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, command. Fesmire, a former Coast Guardsman who owns the firm that operates the water supply vessel, is Powell's father-in-law. Powell's wife, Christa, keeps the company's books, as she's done since she was 16. Powell himself is vice president of the firm.

In winter, said the 35-year-old Powell, water hoses can freeze if an air pocket in a ship's tank backs them up. And a miscue while disconnecting hoses can create a skating rink in seconds. Powell once broke an ankle on the ice.

"Every night, I come home with ice in my beard," he said.

With the soft coal industry strike over and shipments returning to normal through the port of Baltimore, the Jim Jack is making more runs to foreign coal ships waiting at anchor.

Communcation wih the crews, who rarely speak English, is the biggest problem, said Freeman, but Powell noted there's almost always at least one bilingual sailor aboard.

Powell, who holds a business administration degree and used to work for a clothing manufacturer, said he wouldn't leave the water supply ship now.

"Nope," he said. "I love it. Every ship, we go aboard and have a few beers with the captain. You meet a lot of interesting people."

Annual airing

WILTON, Conn. (AP) — An estimated 10,000 American companies are scheduled to hold annual meetings this year, but the time and expense involved in getting to the meeting sites will prevent many shareholders from attending.

Emery Air Freight came up with an electronic solution to include as many as possible interested stockholders, as well as a large segment of the public, in its report on the past year's operations.

The company is said to be the first to air a national cable TV broadcast of its annual meeting here.

Authors at home

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry L. Mencken, Edgar Allan Poe, May Sarton and Maxine Kumin all have one thing in common — they often did their writing in attic rooms.

The strange working habits and quirks of these famous authors and others are included in "Writers in Residence" by Glynne Robinson Betts whose book takes the reader on a tour of the history and geography of American writing.

Flannery O'Connor, for example, turned her desk away from an enticing window view, while Edna St. Vincent Millay had a one-room cabin in the woods where she retired to write her poetry, according to Mrs. Betts.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Bags for blanching veggies

DEAR HELOISE:

I would like to share with your readers my method of freezing fresh vegetables.

I make up several nylon net bags approximately 8"x16" (Use white nylon net for this job. — Heloise). These are large enough to hold up to two quarts of vegetables very loosely.

I put the vegetables in the bag, close it with a twistie, and drop them in the hot bath.

When blanched, remove with tongs and plunge them, still in the bag, into an ice cold bath.

After that, I drop them in my dish drainer to drip a few minutes, then lay them out between layers of terry towels.

Now they are ready to be taken out of the bags and placed in freezer containers.

As one bag of vegetables is taken from the hot bath, another one is ready to go in. If you have several bags, you can make a continuous process of it.

Sure does the job fast with very little muss or fuss. — Marjorie Bull

+ + +

No scorched fingers, either. Helps get those vegetables into the freezer in jig time, thus retaining quality and nutrients. Thanks for sharing a super-duper hint. — Heloise

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR

Dear Heloise: Judging from the number of people who have them, wind chimes are very popular now. But I am a very light sleeper and lose much sleep and rest from the sound of the wind chimes xy neighbor has in his yard.

Please, if you live close to someone, think about the other fellow. — B.M.

QUICK POTATO SALAD

I recently discovered how good canned white potatoes are for making potato salad that tastes as though you'd spent hours making it.

I dice the potatoes, add hard-boiled eggs, dried onion flakes, mayonnaise and pickle relish.

Spiced with celery seed, salt and pepper, I have a totally delicious salad which has taken only minutes to make.

Besides, cooking has been kept to a minimum, which can greatly help to keep the kitchen cooler on hot days. — Mrs. Pearl Bushell

LETTER OF WARNING

Dear Heloise: With the hot summer weather here, now is the time to urge everyone to leave the dog at home rather than taking him in the car when shopping, etc.

A parked car becomes an oven within minutes, even with the windows opened a fraction. For examples, if it is 85 degrees outside, the inside of your car will reach 102 degrees in 10 minutes. In 30 minutes, the temperature inside the car can get as high as 120.

Just think how hot it would get if you left your pet while you shopped around for even an hour! No one wants to return to their car to find their pet has suffered terribily, perhaps even died.

So, please, remember how much better off your pet is left at home with plenty of cool, clean water. — A Reader

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: When storing partly used caulking, place a large nail in the end of the tube.

This will prevent its drying out until the compound is used again. — Bill

STEERING WHEEL COVER

Dear Heloise: Just another little hint for that untouchably hot steering wheel...

I purchased an inexpensive commode cover with elastic around the entire perimeter. I keep it on the front seat of the car at all times, then just pull it over the steering wheel when parking the car during the daytime.

It stays in place and really works, whereas a towel may sometimes slip off. — Mrs. B.

Panning with plastic

PINE GROVE, Calif. (AP) — With panning for gold a popular pastime in these parts, miners here are benefitting by the plastics age in their search for the precious metal.

At the Roaring Camp Mining Company, the rusty, dented pans used by the miners of the gold rush days have been replaced by hardy maroon-colored versions made of cycolac thermoplastic.

Their light weight makes the new pans handy for the thousands of back-packers who are combining their hobby with gold-panning.

Resilient floor tiles ease installation

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Whatever once made the installation of a floor rather intimidating to the do-it-yourselfer disappeared some years ago when resilient floor tiles made their bow.

Here was a product that molded itself to the contour of the floor, required no carpentry skills and was easy to handle, since only a single tile need be dealt with at one time.

Those who might still feel that tiling a floor is a herculean task they would rather not tackle need only be reminded that if they had to tile an area that required only four tiles, they would not hesitate to undertake the job.

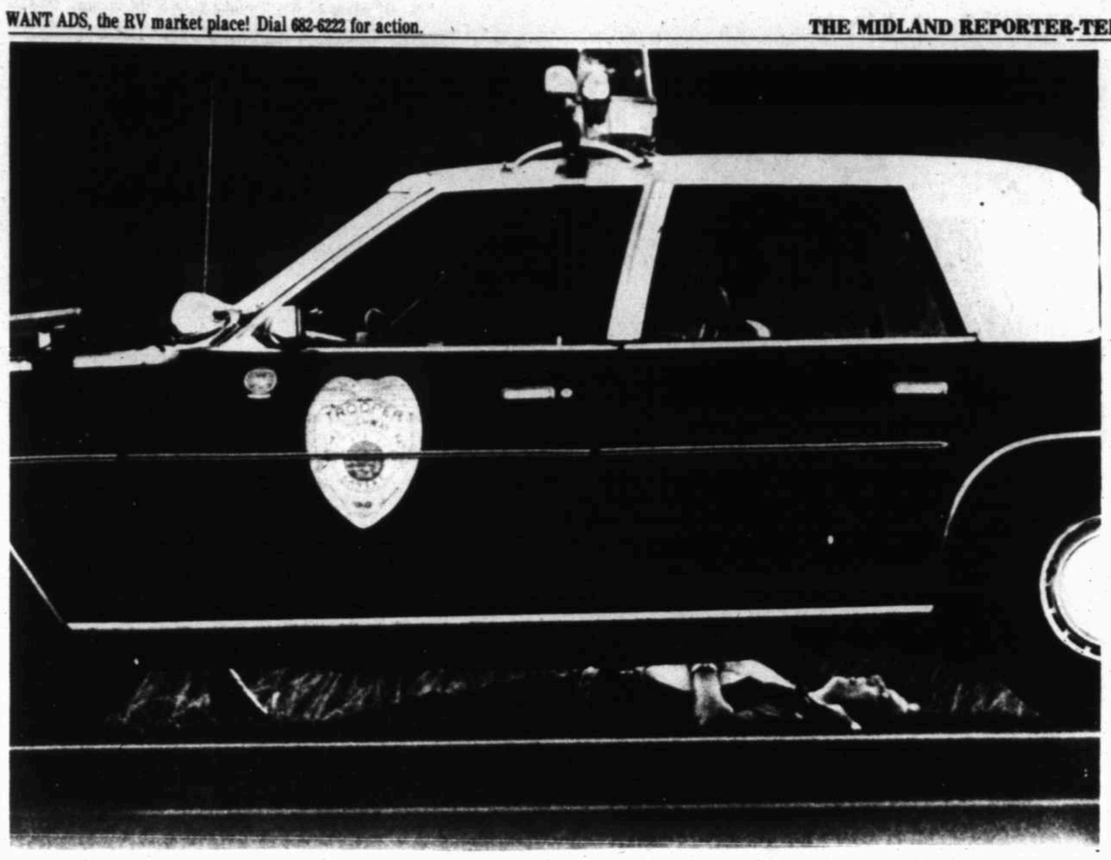

Yet installing a floor, no matter how large the room, is a simple matter of putting down four tiles in a small area. Think of it that way and the big job becomes a lot of small jobs.

Perhaps the surest road to certain success is in the proper preparation of the surface to be covered. If it's a wooden floor of double construction (that is, a top floor and a subfloor) and the boards are 3 inches or less in width, the tiles can be laid directly on it.

If it's a single floor or the boards are more than 3 inches wide, cover it with a hardboard or plywood underlayment. Ask your lumber dealer for the proper underlayment and the special coated nails for attaching it. In nailing down the underlayment, space the nails about 6 inches apart and allow about 1-16th of an inch between sheets of hardboard or plywood.

New Yorker plans world's tallest building

NEW YORK (AP) — Real estate developer Harry Helmsley, who once owned the world's tallest building and wants to again, says he will revive this city's high-rise rivalry with Chicago by building a skyscraper to top the Windy City's 110-story Sears Tower.

Helmsley said Sunday that he plans to build a $500-million, 112-story office building in mid-Manhattan.

"We're the greatest city in the world," said the 72-year-old owner of the Empire State Building. "So we should have the tallest building, too. It's an idea I've had for a number of years.

"It's better to have one tall building than two small buildings," Helmsley explained in a telephone interview.

Helmsley said it would take three-to-four years to acquire a site and finish planning for the structure and another three-to-four years to build it. The office building would have an observation area and rooftop restaurant, he said.

Although he and other developers have encountered opposition in recent years from groups opposed to further development in Manhattan, Helmsley predicted popular support for his plan.

"I think that generally they'd like to see the project go ahead, because it would bring the world's tallest building back to New York, where it belongs," he said.

He also said that the booming Manhattan real estate market could absorb such a huge increase in rental office space.

Although architects of the "Chicago School," led by Louis Sullivan, developed and refined skyscraper design in the late 19th and early 20th century, New York took the initiative with the Woolworth Building in 1913.

It was followed by the Equitable Building in 1915, the Chrysler Building in 1930, and, a few months later, the 102-story Empire State Building, which held the title until construction of the World Trade Center.

Since 2:35 p.m. on May 4, 1973, the world's tallest office building has been the 110-story, 1,450-foot Sears Tower. It is 100 feet higher than the twin towers of the World Trade Center and 200 feet higher than the Empire State Building, which Helmsley bought in 1961.

Atlanta parent's committee seeking larger role

By CAROLYN S. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A parents' group that helped focus attention on a string of slayings of black youths and came under criticism for its handling of contributions is expanding its efforts in an attempt to become an advocate for children's rights.

Camille Bell, head of the Committee to Stop Children's Murders, said the group wants to "raise the public's consciousness" about the problem of missing and slain children across the country.

The group was formed in the spring of 1980 to provide support to families of the victims of murdered and missing young blacks. The group's campaign contributed to the formation of a special police task force, which now is investigating 28 slayings of young blacks in the Atlanta area since July 1979. The task force is also investigating one disappearance.

A black free-lance photographer, Wayne Williams, is being held on murder charges in one of the slayings.

In recent weeks, the committee has established ties with the Coalition for Children's Justice and with foreign organizations involved in the United Nations' Rights of the Child Effort, Mrs. Bell said.

The committee currently is raising money to send Atlanta youngsters to summer camps. About 40 children left during the weekend for a camp in Pennsylvania, and another 40 are scheduled to leave next weekend. All 80 are due back in Atlanta on Aug. 15.

Mrs. Bell said the 80 camp slots were donated by the operators of the facility in South Gibson, Pa. The committee is raising the $12,000 needed to charter buses to get the children to camp, she said.

Once the camp is over and children are back in school, Mrs. Bell said, the committee is planning rallies and conferences to draw attention to the problems facing families of young murder victims and of kidnapped or runaway children.

Mrs. Bell, whose 9-year-old son, Yusef, was one of the first victims, said her committee's work won't be finished "until people make children a top priority."

The committee was criticized this year for not registering with the state as a charity and for not reporting how it handled its funds. There also were charges that some mothers were profiting from their children's deaths.

Financial reports filed with the state in June showed about $16,500 of the $39,000 collected during the first six months of the committee's financial operations had been given to the families of the slain children.

The committee's attorney, Don Keenan said perhaps twice the $39,000 had been donated since the reporting period ended March 31.

Tim Ryles, head of the governor's office of consumer affairs, who publicly demanded the group register with his office as required by law, said the committee's records would be doublechecked closely — with particular attention paid to travel expenses.

Ship sails to defend whales from Soviets

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Sea Shepherd Conservation Society plans to head out to sea Tuesday in an effort to protect the California gray whale from the Soviet whaling ship Zevedny, and they say they would welcome a direct showdown with the Russians.

"If the Russians want to shoot at us, that's OK," said veteran whale-saver Paul Watson, who will head a crew of 25 aboard the trawler Sea Shepherd II when it leaves Los Angeles Harbor. "The publicity we would gain from that would make it worthwhile."

Spokeswoman Janet Bridgers said 1,000 visitors attended a pier-side fundraiser Sunday and donated $3,000 to the expedition.

The conservation society has sunk at least three foreign ships in its fight to save the whales, Watson said.

The battle gained attention in 1979, when Watson rammed his first ship, the Sea Shepherd, into the Portuguese whaling vessel Sierra. When the Sierra was repaired, other whale supporters planted a magnetic mine on its hull. The resulting explosion permanently crippled the ship.

LOSING 49 lbs. and 79 INCHES GOING FROM SIZE 18 TO SIZE 5!

Truly a dream come true for Cindy Hernandez.

AFTER PAT WALKER'S

CINDY SAYS:
Being overweight most of my life I used to dream of how I would look were I thin. Well, my dream came true when I decided on Pat Walker's.
I had tried different fad diets and was able to lose weight but never inches. In using the Pat Walker's exercise unit I lost 11 inches the first week. Altogether now I have lost over 79 inches and went from a size 18 dress to a size five.
I ate the foods I liked on the program and still lost weight. I learned how to combine my foods, never got bored with menus and I even ate good desserts!
The greatest thing is how I now feel about myself . . . I bought myself a swim suit and now lounge around the pool with confidence. Shopping is no longer an embarrassment since there is a variety of clothes from which to select my new size.
Pat Walker's program taught me good eating habits which now make it possible to keep the weight off. Pat Walker's really works!

Bumbling Cubs force Mets 10 before losing

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

For a team that played like Little Leaguers on a bad day for three innings, it wasn't surprising that the Midland Cubs lost. What was surprising was that it took them 10 innings to do it.

After the Cubs scored twice in the last of the ninth to tie it at seven and force extra innings, Jackson's Mets struck for two in the 10th to pull out a 9-7 win at Cubs Stadium Sunday to square the series at 1-1.

Al Pedrique opened the 10th with a liner down the left field line that went for two bases when Randy LaVigne's desperation dive failed. Shake Moore grounded out to first moving the runner to third and with lefthander Rick Poe coming up, Manager George Enright replaced Henry Mack with lefthander Norm Churchill. Naturally, Jackson Manager Dave Johnson countered by sending Rusty Tillman to the plate.

"NO, IT didn't bother me coming up cold. Not with a man on third. Now if the man had been on first, it would have been different," said Tillman, who has been fighting a slump the last few weeks, slipping to .256 after hitting between .313 and .320 in the first half. "All I needed to do was hit a fly ball or get a grounder in the hole."

Tillman, a third year pro out of Jacksonville, Fla., said he was looking for the fast ball, which is what he got. "He (Churchill) was behind and he had to come in or put runners on first and third with a righthander coming up."

Tillman laced a liner to the hole in right center that went for three bases when Mel Hall's swan dive failed to get to the ball and it bounded to the wall.

Sergio Beltre, who had been big trouble for the Cubs all night, then added the clincher by greeting Rob Blyth with a single to right, plating Tillman. It was Beltre's fourth hit.

THE CUBS, trailing 7-5 going into the ninth, appeared doomed with John Semprini, the league's leading relief pitcher on the mound. Semprini had retired the Cubs in order in the eighth and had one out in the ninth when he walked Jack Upton. Carmelo Martinez doubled to left with Upton racing home from first. Then, Joe Carter's rhubarb-producing doubled that skipped down the third base line tied it.

In the ensuing argument, third baseman Mike Davis got the thumb, but the scored was tied and the stage set for the 10th.

But the Cubs could look to the early innings when they made four errors and some bonehead plays as Jackson scored five runs. On one snooze, two runs scored on a ground out to first.

Jon Perlman, who started, must have been tempted to throw down his glove and stomp off the mound in disgust at the way things were going.

Davis opened the four-run second with a good bunt, but one that could have been an out if third baseman J.W. Mitchell had been able to make the barehanded pickup one of those you-do-or-you-don't bang-bang plays. Morvell Wynn then got the end of his bat on an outside pitch for a single to center. But those things happen. Ed Cuervo's bunt moved the runners to second and third and Perlman loaded the bases by walking Perdique.

That's when life became complicated. Moore grounded to Martinez, playing first for the first time this year, who hit Perdique in the back with the throw in attempting to get the force at second. Two runs scored. Poe grounded to Martinez who threw to Perlman covering for the out on a close play as one run scored and another followed when Perlman had to delay his throw because of Martinez' proximity.

IN THE third, Davis doubled off the fence in left but was thrown out at third by LaVigne. Wynne singled and came home on Cuervo's grounder to third after reaching third on two Cubs errors.

Jay Haas post easy golf victory

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The word on Jay Haas has been that only a balky putter had separated him from the elite of golf.

But he showed Sunday that he may be preparing to challenge for position among the game's best.

Displaying remarkable consistency — until he took a meaningless double bogey on his last hole, Haas shot a final-round 1-over-par 73 at Tuckaway Country Club for a 3-stroke victory in the $250,000 Greater Milwaukee Open tournament.

Haas, who began the final round with a 5-stroke lead over Rex Caldwell and Mike Smith, finished with a 72-hole total of 274, 14 under par and four strokes ahead of veteran Chi Chi Rodriguez.

Lyn Lott, having started the day six strokes off and in third place, bogeyed his last hole to settle for a tie for third with Danny Edwards at 278.

Defending champion Bill Kratzert was at 279, along with Caldwell, Jeff Mitchell, Tim Simpson, and 1972 GMO winner Jim Colbert.

Haas, a 27-year-old resident of Charlotte, N.C., has won only one other tournament, at San Diego in 1978, in five years on the tour.

But he consistently has finished high in the money, having ranked 35th last year with $114,102.

He climbed to 18th on this year's list at $111,316 with his $45,000 Milwaukee check.

Sunday trouble

Debbie Austin looks like she might cry after missing a putt, but in the end all turned out right when she won the Mayflower Classic. Below, Arnold Palmer studies shot from rough. Arnie also came out smelling like a rose to move into a Seniors playoff today.

Gap widens in baseball strike

NEW YORK (AP) — The gap between the players and owners in the major league baseball strike widened considerably over the weekend when Ray Grebey said Marvin Miller was Kenneth Moffett's ghost-writer and Miller said Grebey was a liar.

The three are the principal players in the strike which entered its second month today. Grebey is the chief negotiator for the owners, Miller is the head of the players' union and Moffett is the harried federal mediator trying to bring both sides together.

"It's getting very nasty in there," Moffett said outside the Doral Inn meeting room after the most recent breakdown in talks last Saturday. No further meetings have been scheduled.

LAST THURSDAY, Moffett gave both sides a plan designed to settle the sole issue — for now — of free-agent compensation which has wiped out 392 regular-season games and put off the All-Star game, scheduled for Tuesday night in Cleveland.

Moffett's plan was accepted by the players. But the owners rejected it. And Grebey, said of Moffett's plan: "Marvin wrote it. It's a setup."

The incensed Miller later replied: "That is the worst lie he (Grebey) has told and he has told many during these negotiations ... The attempt to cast doubt on the impartiality of the mediator's recommendation is not appreciated by any of us. It is a low and scurrilous tactic, a tactic that is deplored by everybody."

Moffett said his proposal was the result of data collected by himself and Nancy Broff, general counsel of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. "We've been gathering information to put together a format that would induce bargaining," Moffett said. "It was our work."

He also said ittis not unusual that one side — the rejecting side — makes a charge similar to Grebey's when the other side accepts the proposals.

The rejection brought a note of dismay from one owner. "This is a masterful public relations ploy for the players," said Eddie Einhorn, boss of the Chicago White Sox. "Now we are the villains again."

GEORGE STEINBRENNER, principal owner of the New York Yankees, said in view of management's rejection of Moffett's proposal, it was important that the owners bargainers advance a new proposal early this week. Steinbrenner said he was optimistic, adding, "I think it (the strike) will be over in a week."

Herman Franks, general manager of the Chicago Cubs, said, "It looks like we're going to get into the 'white nats-black nats' thing again ... This is pretty sad."

Under the plan offered by Moffett:

—An eligible player in the top 20 percent at his position, based on a statistical formula covering the most recent two seasons, would be classified a "premier" player.

—Players 35 and over, those with more than seasons in the majors, and those who have previously gone through the free-agency system would be excluded from the "premier" label.

—Premier players would be excluded from the re-entry draft and permitted to negotiate with any number of clubs. All other players would go through the current re-entry draft ad be limited to negotiating with 13 teams.

—Compensation in the form of a professional player would be limited to the top 12 ranking free agents. Compensation for any other ranking free agents would be a special amateur draft choice. Compensation for nonranking players would be a regular amateur draft choice.

—The degree of compensation for the top 12 premier players would be based in part onthe team' overall standing in the previous two seasons, with the league divided into three groups — the top nine, middle eight and bottom nine clubs. If a player moved up two levels, the signing team would be able to protect 24 players and the losing team then choosing an unprotected player. If the player moved up one level, the signing team protects 30 players.

McEnroe wants to forget tennis

NEW YORK (AP) — For the next two weeks, John McEnroe would like to be John Doe.

"I'm taking a vacation. Maybe people will forget who I am for awhile," said McEnroe, who capped three weeks of tennis history and histrionics by overpowering Tomas Smid 6-3, 6-1, 6-4 in the clinching match Sunday as the United States defeated defending champion Czechoslovakia 4-1 in the Davis Cup quarterfinals.

JIMMY CONNORS completed the best-of-five Davis Cup series before a crowd of 16,008 (11,718 paid) by beating Czechoslovakian ace Ivan Lendl 7-5, 6-4 in a match shortened to best-of-three sets because it did not have any impact on the team competition.

The United States will next face Australia in the semifinals in Portland, Ore., Oct. 2-4.

"Australia has potential and their doubles team (Paul McNamee and Peter McNamara) plays well together, but I think we should be favored against anyone," declared McEnroe.

U.S. team captain Arthur Ashe agreed.

"On paper, this may be our best Davis Cup team since World War II, or at least since the early 1950s when we had Tony Trabert and Vic Seixas," said Ashe.

WHILE McEnroe's two-week charge to the Wimbledon title was marred by temper tantrums, disputes with officials and the British press and a final snub by the All-England Club, which broke with tradition by not making him an honorary member despite his victory over Bjorn Borg in the finals, he behaved much better this weekend in his hometown.

But that doesn't mean he's changed his mind about the quality of tennis officials. He was clearly displeased by several line calls in his lopsided victory over Smid, as well as his opening loss to Lendl on Friday.

With McEnroe leading Smid 4-2 in the third set and the score tied 30-30 in the seventh game, the Czechoslovakian player hit a serve that appeared to be good. The linesmen called it good, but were overruled by the umpire who called a fault.

The Czechoslovakians complained, but to no avail — so McEnroe took matters into his own hands. He signalled to Smid to hit his second serve, and rather than trying to return it he simply waved at it, giving away the point.

The crowd loved it, treating McEnroe to the loudest ovation of the day.

AUSTRALIA, meanwhile, won its matches with Sweden Sunday as Paul McNamee outlasted 16-year-old Swedish rookie Mats Wilander 2-6, 6-4, 6-0, 6-4. McNamee's victory in Baastad, Sweden, gave the Aussies an unbeatable 3-1 lead in their best-of-five non-zonal quarterfinal series.

In Bucharest, Romania, Guillermo Vilas defeated Florin Segarceanu as Argentina edged Romania 3-2 to advance to a semifinal meeting with Great Britain.

Debbie Austin scores four-stroke triumph

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — With her father and brother looking on in the gallery, Debbie Austin survived four bogeys in her final round Sunday to defeat Hollis Stacy and Myra Van Hoose by four strokes in the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Mayflower Classic.

"My brother telephoned last night and said he was coming," said Austin, who brought a 9-stroke lead into the last round at the 6,101-yard par 72, Country Club of Indianapolis course.

Austin shot a 2-over-par 74, her only sub-par round of the tournament. That gave a final score of 9-under-par 279 for the 72-hole tournament.

It was the seventh victory in a pro career the 33-year-old Haines City, Fla., resident began in 1968, but it was her first since 1978. The triumph, which came after Austin set a 54-hole record for the tournament with a 205, was worth $22,500.

Austin, who earned only $41,302 last year as she battled tendinitis in her shoulder and suffered an ankle injury, began the tournament No. 21 on this year's money list with $38,559.

"I kept telling myself all day to get aggressive," said Austin, who nearly quit the tour in 1978 when she was having tendinitis problems in her shoulder. "That's when I went to travel agent school, so I would have another business if the golf didn't work out."

Palmer, Casper, Stone tie for first

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — It was understandable that Billy Casper was recalling the 1966 U.S. Open at San Francisco today while Arnold Palmer was trying to block it completely from his mind.

However, for Bob Stone it was just "another day off."

Casper, Palmer and Stone finished in a three-way tie at the close of the U.S. Senior Open golf tournament at Oakland Hills Country Club Sunday. Under United States Golf Association rules, the trio had to settle the championship in an 18-hole playoff today.

The three finished 72 holes at 9-over par 289, one stroke ahead of Art Wall who earned $6,736 for fourth-place. Today's winner will pocket $26,000 while the other two each will earn $9,586.

"It seems like we've been here before,' Casper said of the playoff. "My swing came a little unglued at times, especially on the back nine, but I was able to produce when I needed to."

During the 1966 U.S. Open, Palmer led Casper by seven strokes but let it get away during the final round and Casper beat him by four in a playoff.

It was a similar story at the 6,798-yard South Course here Sunday where Palmer had it all but locked up before bogeying two of the final three holes to let victory slip away.

However, rather than dwell on his own faltering finish, Palmer gave credit to Casper and Stone for hanging tough.

"I thought Billy played pretty well," Palmer said. "He's always been a tough competitor and he still is.

"I remember Bob (Stone) quite well from the early days on the tour. I played with him a few times, but I can't give an analysis of his game."

That Palmer remembers little else about Stone is understandable. The 51-year-old Stone is the pro at a public course in Independence, Mo., who appeared only briefly on the tour before a bad back forced him to give it up.

"So far I haven't been nervous," said Stone, who earned the third and final slot in his regional qualifying round at Kansas City. "I expect that will change on Monday, although I'm going to try to approach it as just another round of golf, another day off."

Lancia grabs win at Watkins Glen

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — For the second year in a row Italian auto maker Lancia has won the six-hour endurance race for sports cars at Watkins Glen and the world endurance championship.

Lancias finished first and second at the Glen's twisting 3.377-mile road racing course Sunday, nosing out German-made Porsches by 2.5 points for the world title.

RICCARDO PATRESE, co-driver of the winning car with fellow Italian Michele Alboreto, said they had little trouble with the car except at the start.

"It was misfiring early in the race, and we had to change the fuel injection. But I can't say that we had any real problems with the car. Just the usual little things."

The Watkins Glen race was the last of the season in the endurance series. Porsche actually won four of the six races, but because of the scoring system Lancia wound up with more points.

The 400-horsepower Lancia is under two liters in engine displacement and finished first in that class in all races, thus garnering more points than the 750 horsepower Porsches that ran in the over two liter class.

But Lancia finished one-two overall Sunday, just as it had last year when it won at the Glen.

Coming in two laps behind the winning car was a Lancia driven by Andrea de Cesaris of Italy and Henri Pescarolo of France.

Next came eight Porsches. The best performing Porsche, which finished third, was co-driven by Bob Garretson of Mountain View, Calif.; 1979 Indianapolis winner Rick Mears; and three-time Indy king Johnny Rutherford.

Rutherford said "we did have minor problems" with the car.

Mears was more specific, explaining that they lost the turbocharger, or boost, that gives extra power. "When we wanted to push hard in the straights, we just didn't have it," he said.

THE PORSCHES led the first half of the race, then fell by the wayside one-by-one.

Another early leader was a prototype Lola T600 that rolled over on a curve while in front. Driver Guy Edwards of England escaped injury.

A BMW driven by David Hobbs of England and Marc Surer of Switzerland also was a front-runner until overtaken by the winning Lancia on lap 133. The Lancia got the checkered flag at the six-hour mark while on lap 173.

Saturday's 185-mile Can-Am race was won by veteran Al Holbert of Warrington, Pa., who went into the lead on the 50th lap of the 55-lap race after a wheel broke on Danny Sullivan's car. Sullivan finished second.

US dominates Jewish games

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — American swimmers swept four gold medals with record times and United States and Israeli athletes dominated track and field Sunday in the 11th Maccabiah Games.

Mike Saphir of Los Angeles broke the Maccabiah record of 4 minutes, 39.31 seconds, when he won the men's 400-meter individual medley in 4:38.36.

Andrew Saltzman of Bloomington, Ind., bettered the meet record of 52.9 set by Mark Spitz in 1969 in the men's 100-meter freestyle with his winning time of 52.33.

The U.S. men's 800-meter freestyle relay team of Saltzman, Saphir, Chris Weissman of Westport, Conn., and Rick Fields of Scarsdale, N.Y., shaved nearly 14 seconds off the meet record of 7:59.07 with their time of 7:45.28.

In track and field, Brenda Kazinek of South Euclid, Ohio, won the women's 100-meter dash in 12.39 seconds. Britain's Gary Wilson won the men's 100 meters in 10.83.

Muncy snaps win drought

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Bill Muncey, driver of Miss Atlas Van Lines, says he's a patient man. His patience finally paid off this season and he won Sunday's $63,000 Thunder On The Ohio unlimited hydroplane race.

Mack checks Jackson

Bill Haselrig's fifth homer of the season, making it 6-4 with one out in the fifth, finally finished Perlman, who left allowing only two earned runs. Henry Mack came in and pitched five-hit ball for the next five innings.

"HENRY threw good in a couple of games down at San Antonio, too," Enright commented, "But we lost tonight because of the big inning. The big inning in this park will kill you."

The five innings were the most Mack has pitched since last year after a spring of surgery and muscle pulls. "I made a bad pitch. I got a slider up (on Perdique in the 10th), but I really wasn't tired. I'd lost a little velocity, but I still felt good."

Martinez tripled in the fifth and Carter singled to cut the Jackson lead to 6-5, but the Mets added in the sixth on Beltre's run-single after a walk to Moore.

For Midland the game may have hinged on the seventh inning when they loaded the bases with one out on a single by Upton, an error and a walk. Randy LaVigne, who had singled twice earlier, came up and scorched a liner up the middle. Somehow Dave Smith, who had relieved starter Rob Simond in the fourth, got his glove in front of the ball and tossed to third for the easy double play.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—The win made the Mets 9-2 in extra inning games this year while Midland is 4-8...Tillman was signed by the New York Mets out of Florida Junior College and hit .327 with seven homers and 78 rbi at Lynchburg, Carolina League, last year...Rick Ownbey, who starts for the Mets tonight, is from Anaheim, Calif., and attended Santa Ana Junior College...Martinez is swinging a torrid bat with 6 hits in 10 trips this series...Fritz Connally is out with a jammed thumb suffered in Saturday's game...Going into Sunday's game the Mets had lost 4-of-5 and the Cubs had won 5-of-6...

Gold Sox whip Travs

By Associated Press

John Stevenson slammed a based-loaded double in the ninth inning to lead the Amarillo Gold Sox to a 4-3 Texas League win over Arkansas Sunday night.

Amarillo scored four runs in the ninth, including three on Stevenson's hit, after Arkansas had led 3-0.

Jerry DeSimone led off the inning with a single. After one out, Ron Tingley walked and the Travelers installed reliever Rafael Pimentel. Pimental walked Aaron Cain to load the bases, then forced in the Gold Sox first run with a walk to Frank Castro.

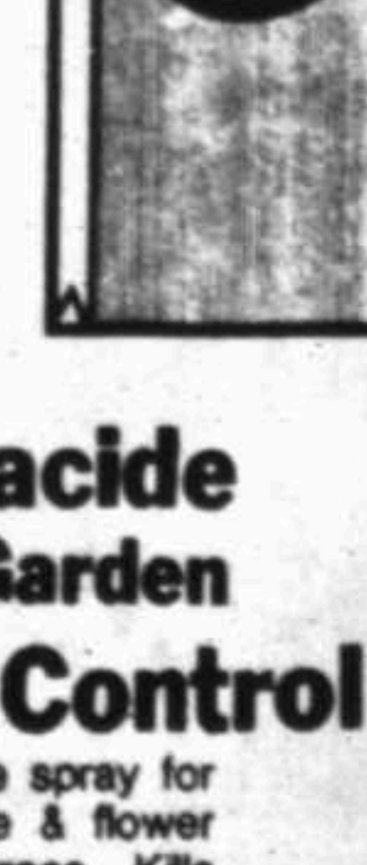

Troy Dixon, 6-8, took the win for Amarillo. Pimental, 7-3, was handed the loss.

In Shreveport, San Antonio right fielder Myron White was 2-for-4, including a triple and a solo home run that gave the Dodgers the lead for good in their 4-2 win over the Captains.

Chris Malden was the winner for San Antonio while Ron Pisel took the loss.

In Tulsa, El Paso split a doubleheader with the Drillers, taking the first game 10-1 and dropping the second, 2-0.

In the first game, El Paso's four home runs, including two by Bill Schroeder, did in the Drillers. One of Schroeder's home runs was a solo shot in the third. Schroeder came back in the fourth with a grand slam to give El Paso a 7-1 lead.

Board urging writers to accept 4-year contract

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The end of the three-month strike by motion picture and television script writers was in sight today after the board of directors of the Writers Guild of America recommended approval of a four-year contract.

"If the general membership ratifies the contract Tuesday night, the writers will be back to work on Wednesday," said union spokeswoman Shannon Boyd. "Some of them may even be back at their typewriters late Tuesday night."

Under the tentative agreement, writers would receive substantial boosts in minimum pay, plus a share of home-video profits, said WGA President Melville Shavelson.

The board of directors urged approval of the new agreement Saturday night, a few hours after guild negotiators hammered out the pact with major film and television producers.

A vote to ratify Tuesday would end the third show business walkout in 12 months — labor disputes that threw tens of thousands out of work and threatened to severely delay the fall television season for the second straight year.

But Shavelson says he expects only about a week's delay for the coming fall TV season, scheduled to begin in September, "if the networks put their mind to it and go into overtime."

He also feels writers can speed up, adding, "I've written scripts overnight."

The writers had finished some TV scripts before their April 11 walkout, so the impact of their strike was not as severe as the 10-week actors strike last year, which caused some TV shows to be postponed until January.

The tenative agreement came at 3 a.m. Saturday, after a marathon bargaining session that started Friday at 10 a.m., Ms. Boyd said.

One key part of the pact concerns pay TV residuals for writers. That issue also was at the heart of the actors and musicians strikes last year and of the threatened directors strike this year.

The contract, said Ms. Boyd, would give writers 2 percent of the gross of shows made for pay TV after the producer recouped his investment at a set rate of $1 million per hour for videotaped shows, including videocassettes, and $1.25 million per hour for filmed shows.

The Directors Guild of America, after threatening a strike over the pay TV issue, reached an eleventh hour settlement with producers late last month. Musicians, who struck for nearly six months over pay TV last year, failed to achieve pay TV residuals.

Minimum pay scales also had been a sticking point, and the tentative agreement, retroactive to March 2, offers pay increases for writers from 52 to 57 percent over the four-year term of the contract. Currently, writers earn $9,434 for a one-hour prime-time TV program and $26,236 for a major movie script.

An agreement had been reached earlier in the strike between writers and a group of independent producers. Writers for such independently produced shows as NBC's "Tonight" and "Saturday Night Live" worked out a package that included 2.75 percent of the gross earned on made-for-pay TV shows after producers had recouped certain costs, an increases in minimum pay ranging from 44.4 percent to 52 percent.

But Saturday' agreement with the major producers will supersede the independents' contract.

Town hoped name would bring fame

GENE AUTRY, Okla. (AP) — When this little town renamed itself in honor of the singing cowboy 40 years ago, townsfolk were hoping for a memorable spot under western stars.

Now, they have mostly memories of fleeting prominence, a listing in "Ghost Towns of Oklahoma" and a fascinating postmark.

But news of the town's demise is greatly exaggerated, they insist.

"We're sure not a ghost town," says Allene Haney, who runs Haney's Gro. & Mkt., the only business left in town. "We've still got people here. ... The official 1980 census showed 179 people in Gene Autry."

And Autry, "everybody's favorite cowboy," also of "Here Comes Santa Claus" fame and now owner of the California Angels, says he'd like to come back someday for a little fishing.

The southern Oklahoma town used to be a bustling little whistlestop in the foothills of the Arbuckle Mountains. Back during World War II, "there were several thousand people around here," says Mrs. Haney, who is also the town's clerk and historian. "That was when they had the air base over at Ardmore. People were moving in and out all the time."

Among the newcomers was Gene Autry, now 75.

On Mrs. Haney's wall is a yellowing photograph of Autry, astride his "Wonder Horse" Champion, inscribed: "To Allene, Best wishes always, Gene Autry."

The town's name was changed from Lou to Dresden to Berwyn and then to Gene Autry after the famed performer-cowboy bought 1,200 acres just west of town and announced plans to turn the property into a showcase ranch. He said he would spend $250,000 to create "Flying A Ranch," making it headquarters for his traveling rodeo and other production enterprises.

Autry, reached by telephone at the Gene Autry Hotel in Palm Springs, Calif., said that although his Oklahoma plans were scuttled, the name change was "one of the greatest events of my life."

On Nov. 16, 1941, just about everyone who could jammed the little town for the official renaming celebration.

"I've never seen anything like that in my career," said Autry, who did the nationwide broadcast of his radio show, "Melody Ranch," from the town.

"Here was this little town of maybe 250 or 300 population, and you just can't imagine the people. There were a number of estimates of the crowd — all the way from 40,000 or 50,000 to more than 100,000.

"It was one of the big thrills of my time."

But just three weeks later, the United States entered World War II, and Autry joined the Air Force.

"I was in the service from 1942 to 1945," he said. "During this time, I merged my Flying A Rodeo with the Lightning C Rodeo out of Dublin, Texas. The ranch at Gene Autry really wasn't big enough."

But one of these days, Autry said, "I'm going to go to Gene Autry and spend a few days and do some fishing. I used to like to fish down at Lake Murray. They've got good fishing there."

The town's name still attracts the curious, and Postmaster Effie Hutchins hand-cancels every card and letter with the Gene Autry postmark.

"I could send them on over to the mail center at Ardmore, but then we'd lose all our indentity," she said. "I even get letters and cards sent here to be postmarked with our special postmark and them mailed out from here. I'm glad to do it."

Actor Keefe Brasselle dies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Keefe Brasselle, actor, author and television producer, has died at the age of 58.

Best known for his leading role in "The Eddie Cantor Story," Brasselle also played in many minor films and wrote a novel about Hollywood in an erratic career that was accompanied by a stormy personal life.

Brasselle had been hospitalized several times during the last few years for treatment of a progressive liver ailment.

His death, reported Tuesday, occurred in Rancho Los Amigos Hospital of Downey, a suburb about 10 miles southeast of downtown Los Angeles. His death followed a month-long hospital stay.

Born John J. Brasselli in Lorain, Ohio, the actor first gained prominence in 1953 with the leading role in "The Eddie Cantor Story." Brasselle was given the part of song and dance man Cantor, after playing a series of roles in minor films.

The movies, which included "A Place In the Sun," "Bannerline," "Skirts Ahoy" and "Three Young Texans," earned him a reputation as a promising talent.

The actor also gained attention because of his troubled personal life.

In 1956 Brasselle made headlines when he became involved in a bitter divorce battle with his first wife of 14 years, Norma. He was also convicted of shooting a man in 1972 during an argument involving his second wife at a Studio City restuarant, north of Los Angeles.

In the 1960s the actor made a try at television production, selling three TV series to CBS. The network picked up "The Reporters," "Baileys of Balboa," and "The Cara Williams Show," but all were canceled in their first season in 1964.

Four years later Brasselle published "The Cannibals," a thinly disguised expose of controlling figures in the entertainment industry and behind-the-scenes intrigue.

After the 1972 shooting conviction Brasselle made little news. His victim recovered and he was put on three years probation.

He was buried at Holy Cross Cemetery in Culver City on Thursday.

Captain Kangaroo hospitalized

AP Laserphoto

Bob Keeshan, 54, who has been television's "Captain Kangaroo" to millions of children for more than 25 years, was reported in stable condition Sunday after suffering a heart attack minutes after his arrival at Toronto's International Airport.

NEW YORK (AP) — Production on a revamped "Captain Kangaroo" television show will be delayed until at least mid-August while longtime host Bob Keeshan recovers from a heart attack, according to spokesman Steve Reichl.

Keeshan, 54, who has been "Captain Kangaroo" to millions of children over the past 26 years, remained in stable condition today at Etobicoke General Hospital in Toronto.

Keeshan was stricken minutes after his arrival Saturday at Toronto International Airport. He had come to the city to accept an award for his service to children.

"He's comfortable, and he's in stable condition," said Steve Reichl, director of information for Robert Keeshan Promotions.

Right now, "Captain Kangaroo" is in reruns on CBS, but Reichl said Keeshan's illness "presents a problem for us." The show is supposed to be revamped Sept. 28, when its Monday-through-Friday morning slot will be reduced from an hour to a half-hour.

Keeshan created the Captain Kangaroo character in 1955, after five years as Clarabell the Clown on the old "Howdy Doody" show and stints as Corny the Clown and Tinker the Toymaker on other programs. "Captain Kangaroo" went on to become the longest-running children's series on network TV.

Reichl said he was not aware that Keeshan had any past medical problems. Normally, he said, Keeshan tapes 100 programs a year on a schedule that stretches from June to December. But the strike by writers — now tentatively settled — delayed production, and no half-hour shows are ready.

"The program is going to be a totally new show — we're going to aim for a slightly older audience," Reichl said. He said that in light of Keeshan's heart attack, the earliest production could start was probably mid-August.

"We'll probably go ahead and work on the program as if he was able to be there, and then adapt to what happens," Reichl said, noting that Keeshan had "a heavy schedule ahead of him," including a role in "Up To The Minute," a CBS-TV afternoon news show to begin Sept. 28.

"Bob was to participate in that on a daily basis — as Bob Keeshan, not as Captain Kangaroo — addressing problems of the American family," Reichl said.

Turner gets day in court

ATLANTA (AP) — Attorneys for Cable News Network headed to court today for a hearing on the news agency's suit against the three major television networks and President Reagan.

Ted Turner, the Atlanta sportsman who founded CNN, filed the suit in May in an effort to break up what he termed the "predatory and illegal practices" involving the pooling of TV news coverage.

"For at least 15 years, ABC, CBS and NBC have been the principal participants in the market for the production of TV news programming and they have enjoyed a monopoly over this market," Turner said in announcing the suit.

Seagram raises its offer for interest in Conoco

NEW YORK (AP) — Seagram Co. Ltd. has upped its ante in what could become a high-stakes bidding war for control of Conoco Inc., offering $3.8 billion in cash for 51 percent of the nation's ninth-largest oil company.

The offer, up from Seagram's original offer of $2.55 billion, was an attempt to break up an agreement struck last week between Du Pont Co. and Conoco that would result in the largest corporate merger in U.S. history.

Seagram, the big Canadian liquor distiller, offered Sunday to pay stockholders $85 a share — or a total of $3.8 billion in cash — for 44.4 million Conoco shares.

Seagram's original offer of $73 a share — or a total of $2.55 billion in cash — for a 41 percent interest in Conoco sent the oil, natural gas and coal concern scrambling to find a more congenial merger partner.

Conoco said Sunday it was studying the latest Seagram move but declined further comment. Du Pont officials could not be reached for comment.

Last week Du Pont, the country's largest chemical company, offered $87.50 a share in cash for 40 percent of Conoco's stock and 1.6 Du Pont shares — now valued at $75.00 — for each remaining share. The total value of that offer is about $6.9 billion.

While the cash price of the new Seagram offer is slightly lower than Du Pont's, the number of shares to be bought for cash is higher, and that could appeal to some Conoco shareholders.

With Conoco shares now quoted at $73.38 on the New York Stock Exchange, shareholders stand to make a handsome profit if their shares are accepted. Because Seagram will pay cash for more shares than Du Pont, many could perceive that they stand a better chance with Seagram.

Besides Du Pont and Seagram, Texaco Inc. also is considered a possible bidder for Conoco — a company with reserves of two billion barrels of oil, 7,000 billion cubic feet of natural gas and 14 billion tons of coal. Conoco's subsidiaries include Consolidation Coal, the nation's second-largest coal company.

Texaco, which ranks No. 4 among industrial companies, engaged in merger talks with Conoco before the Du Pont deal was reached. According to banking sources, it is arranging a $5.5 billion line of credit, and there has been speculation that it might make an offer for Conoco.

Other potential bidders that have been named include Mobil Corp., Standard Oil Co. of California, Shell Oil Co. and Standard Oil Co. (Indiana).

Conoco, the nation's 14th-largest industrial company, also could enter a bidding war on its own behalf.

The company announced Friday that it had arranged a $3 billion line of credit with a group of banks, and analysts speculated that it might be preparing to offer to buy some of its stock at a higher price if necessary to fight off Seagram.

If Du Pont, now No. 15 among the Fortune 500 list of industrial companies, were to take over Conoco, the resulting company would rank No. 7. A Texaco-Conoco merger would produce a new No. 2 company, just behind Exxon Inc.

Gasoline taxes rise as wholesale prices decline

By FLOYD NORRIS
AP Business Writer

Wholesale gasoline prices are declining, but a lot of Americans aren't noticing. Prices at the pump are rising because many states are raising gasoline taxes.

And the increase in taxes could reduce or eliminate the surge in summer driving that oil companies have been wishing for.

Seventeen states have boosted taxes this year, all but one of them in the last six weeks. Legislatures in an additional eight states are thinking about taking such steps this year, an Associated Press survey shows.

For the states, the increases are usually justified by the need to maintain roads and bridges. But such proposals have aroused strong opposition and have been defeated this year in 13 states.

Gasoline prices charged by the oil companies have been dropping since March, thanks to the world oil glut and cutbacks by drivers stunned by higher prices. Prices had risen to an average at retail of over $1.38 a gallon after members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised prices and President Reagan ended price controls on domestic crude oil.

The oil companies hope the price cuts will reassure drivers and get them back on the road, and there is some evidence that driving is increasing. Gasoline inventories registered their largest drop of the year in the last week of June, and gasoline demand in that month was slightly ahead of the 1980 pace.

But the tax increases mean a lot of drivers are paying more, not less. "There are more tax increases than wholesale price cuts," says Dan Lundberg, an analyst whose newsletter monitors gasoline prices.

A major reason for the growing pressure to raise gasoline taxes is that those taxes were set years ago at a certain number of cents per gallon. As oil prices rose, tax receipts stayed level or fell as gasoline consumpition dropped. But costs of fixing roads soared, and gasoline taxes typically were supposed to cover such costs.

Michigan's transportation department says its revenues were down 23 percent in the first three months of 1981 compared to last year. "We just don't think we can go much longer," said state Rep. Mary Brown, who is pushing for a tax boost this fall.

A number of states, including Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio have adopted systems that will allow gasoline taxes to rise with inflation. Most popular is one that sets the tax as a percentage of the price, rather than on a cents-per-gallon basis. Some simply tax the gross receipts of oil companies, which rise along with prices — the companies pass those taxes along to customers.

But proposals like that can run into opposition. Iowa Gov. Robert Ray suggested a percentage tax, but it lost when opponents labelled it the "ayatollah tax," a reference to the way gasoline prices rose after the Iranian revolution led by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. They asked why the "whim of OPEC" should force Iowans to pay more taxes.

Massachusetts has found that percentage taxes can go down as well as up. Its gasoline tax, based on wholesale gasoline prices, dropped to 11.4 cents per gallon from 11.6 cents on July 1. That is the only reduction this year.

States where taxes have increased since June 1 are Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Minnesota, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont and Washington. South Dakota raised taxes April 1 and New York's legislature imposed a gross receipts tax this past week that is expected to raise gasoline prices by 2 or 3 cents a gallon.

The largest of the increases was in Nevada, where the tax was raised 4.5 cents a gallon, to 10.5 cents on July 1. An additional 1.5 cents is to be added in a year.

While drivers in those states are paying more, officials in others are warning of disaster. The West Virginia legislature has balked at such taxes twice this year, but Gov. Jay Rockefeller says he will call another special session. He says the state's road repaving program will be virtually eliminated in the current fiscal year.

Other states where efforts to raise gasoline-related taxes failed were Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Kansas, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, Montana, Texas and Wyoming.

Action to boost such taxes is still pending in Arizona, California, Delaware, Iowa, Michigan, Oregon, South Carolina and Wisconsin.

Increases, so far in 1981, include:

—Colorado: Gas tax rose from 7 cents to 9 cents per gallon on July 2.

—Idaho: Raised gas tax from 9.5 cents a gallon to 11.5 cents on July 1.

—Indiana: Raised tax by 2 cents a gallon to 10.5 cents on June 1 and adopted a new floating system, to take effect Jan. 1, that could allow the tax to rise as high as 14 cents a gallon.

—Minnesota: Raised tax from 11 cents to 13 cents a gallon on June 1.

—Nevada: Raised gas tax from 6 cents to 10.5 cents a gallon on July 1 and voted to raise tax to 12 cents a gallon next July 1.

—New Hampshire: Gas tax was increased from 11 cents to 14 cents a gallon on July 1.

—New Mexico: Gas tax rose from 8 cents a gallon to 9 cents, under a 1979 law calling for annual increases of one cent until the tax reaches 11 cents.

—New York: Imposed several taxes as part of tax plan to support mass transit package, including an 0.75 percent gross receipts tax on oil companies and a tax on transportation of oil. The tax, approved late last week, has not yet taken effect.

—North Carolina: Raised gas tax to 12.25 cents per gallon from 9.25 cents on July 1.
