American mother visits hostage son

By the Associated Press

The mother and stepfather of the youngest American hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, defying President Carter's ban on travel to Iran by Americans, met alone with her son today during a five-hour visit to the embassy. Radio Tehran reported. It was the first visit by a relative allowed by the militants since they seized the mission 170 days ago.

Meanwhile, campus violence continued for the fourth day today as a crowd estimated by witnesses as numbering in the thousands outside Tehran University and students threw stones at each other. The area was littered with injured, witnesses said. Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr issued warnings against further violence.

Barbara Timm and her husband, Kenneth, of Oak Creek, Wis., visited with her son, 20-year-old Marine Sgt. Kevin Hermening, during the time they were in the embassy, the radio broadcast said. A militant spokesman inside the Embassy said by telephone the meeting with Hermening lasted one hour and no Iranian officials were present. The spokesman said Mrs. Timm also talked with Iranian officials while at the embassy.

The Timms returned to their hotel after the visit, which took place after the couple had toured a Tehran cemetery where Iranians killed in last year's revolution are buried.

"Today we have decided to permit the stepfather and mother of the hostage to visit him," a spokesman for the militants said in announcing permission for the reunion with Hermening. Asked whether Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini approved the visit, he said, "Of course."

A spokesman for the militants said Sunday they decided against allowing families of the hostages to visit the captives but might reconsider if asked by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolution.

Later Sunday, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh told a news conference Khomeini was in favor of letting the hostages' immediate families visit them. And Radio Tehran said President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and Ghotbzadeh had sent a written request to the militants to let Mrs. Timm visit her son.

Mrs. Timm arrived in Tehran Saturday in defiance of President Carter's ban on travel to Iran by all Americans except journalists. Relatives of three other hostages also were planning to go to Tehran this week, according to a group in Lawrence, Kan., that arranged Easter services for the captives by three U.S. clergymen.

Another American who defied Carter's travel ban was Dick Gregory, who arrived in the Iranian capital Saturday. Rock Newman, a member of the Howard University staff who also is in Tehran, said Gregory hoped to meet with Khomeini and the hostages and was fasting while he waited.

Meanwhile, Khomeini's revolutionary regime was beset with more fighting in rebellious Kurdistan, continuing unrest on the university campuses and the threatened loss of much of its vital oil revenue.

The 28th army division in Sanandaj, the Kurdish rebels' capital in northwest Iran, said its troops were being fired on at the officers' club, the radio and TV station and the airport. It warned people in those areas to flee, Radio Tehran said.

Kurdish rebel sources reported 60 government troops and rebels were killed in fighting Friday and Saturday in the town of Saghez, 90 miles northwest of Sanandaj, and 10 civilians were killed there Sunday.

The Tehran newspaper Kayhan said a spokesman for the Kurdish Democratic Party, which is spearheading the Kurds' drive for autonomy, told it, "Kurdistan is exploding," and that hundreds of Kurds were fleeing across the border into Turkey to escape government air attacks.

The council closed most universities in an effort to halt the violence, and Radio Tehran reported that Islamic societies and associations of Moslem students asked the council to dissolve the present university system.

Two men arrested for shotgun slaying

WINONA, Miss. (AP) — A Winona man died early today of a gunshot wound he received during a robbery at his service station, authorities said.

Police said Jerry M. Grice of Winona died at a hospital at 1:30 a.m., about 2½ hours after two men held up Box's Gulf Station in Winona and fled with an undetermined amount of cash.

A police spokesman said two men from Orange, Texas, were arrested Highway Patrol officers near Canton in Madison County following the robbery.

The spokesman said Nathaniel Crossley, 22, and Arthur Lee Gentry, 21, both of Orange, were charged with armed robbery and the murder of the attendant.

Robert Mesker arrested after brother is slain

By ANDREA COHEN

An Odessa man was arrested Saturday night in connection with the murder of his brother.

Robert Mesker, 32, was taken into custody for allegedly shooting his brother, Stephen Allen Martin, 37, twice with a .38 caliber revolver.

Mesker was released on $50,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin. Charges have not yet been filed.

Martin, born William Harley Mesker, legally changed his name in December, 1978.

According to Lt. Claude Morris, the brothers were having an argument at the residence of their father, Samuel Mesker, 1812 Main, who had died Saturday afternoon. During the argument, Mesker allegedly shot Martin.

Police were called approximately at 9:53 p.m. The Dickie Work Clothes employe was found face down on W. 19th between Scurry and Main.

Mesker offered no resistance to the arrest.

Martin was pronounced dead on arrival at the Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Cause of death is believed to be a bullet that entered his right chest area. He was also shot in the left shoulder.

Precinct lines are re-drawn

LAMESA — A precinct re-alignment approved by Federal District Judge Halbert O. Woodward in Lubbock, means that more than 750 Dawson County voters will cast their ballots in different precincts May 3.

The re-alignment was the outgrowth of a suit filed by the Southwest Voter Registration Project, a San Antonio-based Mexican-American civil rights group.

County commissioners, in effect, extended the boundary lines of Precinct One into Precinct Four. Precinct Four, in turn, was extended north into Precinct Three.

According to County Tax Assessor-Collector Leland Miller, 503 registered voters have been transferred from Precinct Four to Precinct One and 254 from Box Seven in Precinct Three to Precinct Four.

Corrected voting certificates will be in the mail sometime this week, Miller said.

Sen. Kennedy says in Pennsylvania

Democratic challenge not divisive

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ronald Reagan campaigned with a Republican rival turned ally, George Bush said he has the makings of a GOP comeback, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy insisted that his Democratic challenge is neither divisive nor done, as candidates and proxies hunted votes on the eve of the Pennsylvania presidential primary.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale campaigned for the absent President Carter, asking Pennsylvanians to "get everyone out there voting and give this president a chance to continue serving our nation."

Kennedy has spent 12 days campaigning for the pivotal Pennsylvania election, drawing sizable crowds but shying away from any forecast of the outcome on Tuesday. The pollsters rate Carter the favorite. Kennedy vowed that defeat would "absolutely not" lead him to quit the race.

The competition is for 185 Democratic nominating delegates, apportioned in line with popular vote showings by congressional district. In the Republican race, 83 delegates SUCCESSFUL BIDDER — Gary Turner sits on a tractor Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. The tractor was donated by Roundup Auction, which took place Saturday in the Taylor Implement Company.

WIZARD OF THE BOW — Fiddlin' Frenchy Burke plays a little of his fiddle for between 750 and 1,000 people at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Saturday. Burke played for the Dora Roberts Rehab Roundup, which had a barbecue, country and western dance and auction.

$65,000 net looms in Roundup

It was a plus in several ways. Larry Bristo, Executive Director of the Dora Roberts Rehab Center, said today of this year's Rehab Roundup.

"I think the success of it was in excess of our fondest dreams," Bristo said.

The roundup, which took place Saturday night in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, is a benefit for the Dora Roberts Rehab Center.

"With all the sponsorships, we are looking for a profit in the neighborhood of $65,000," Bristo said.

This compares to the November 1978 extravaganza which brought the center some $25,000.

The number of items auctioned off was some 200. These were all donated by local and area merchants.

Bristo said the roundup was a success in that a crowd between 750 and 1,000 had a "good time." Those attending were feted to a barbecue supper and then got to dance to the country and western tunes of Fiddlin' Frenchy Burke.

Burke is a star on the Alamo Production and is noted for his performance at the Texas State Fair.

Cubans want direct negotiation

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Cuba wants to negotiate directly with Costa Rica over evacuation of the 10,000 Cubans still trying to leave Havana via the Peruvian Embassy, a Foreign Ministry official here said today.

The Costa Rican government sent an official request to Cuba on Sunday offering permanent residence to all the would-be exiles who wanted to stay in Costa Rica, and appealing for resumption of the evacuation flights Castro had canceled. Costa Rica is expected to decide today whether to send a negotiator to Havana.

Costa Rica made its offer after Castro insisted the refugees go directly to the countries taking them in instead of to the Costa Rican staging point. In its offer, Costa Rica did not rule out the possibility the exiles could leave for other countries if they chose to do so.

Foreign Ministry official Carlos Aguilar said Cuba had not said resumption of the flights would be allowed. "At least they didn't say no," he said.

A Cuban communique said "Costa Rica cannot utilize the flights programmed in its statement to us April 20 (Sunday) because it has no agreement with the Cuban government," Aguilar said.

Castro did not lift the ban he imposed Friday, but he did allow 32 of the would-be exiles to fill empty seats on an Iberia Airlines flight from Havana to Madrid.

Since most of the Cubans who crowded into the Peruvian Embassy's grounds two weeks ago want to go to the United States and flights between Havana and Miami would be difficult to arrange, Costa Rica offered to give the refugees temporary haven until asylum could be arranged for them.

After about 700 had been flown to San Jose and half of those had been flown on to Peru, the Cuban government barred the use of Costa Rica as an intermediate stop and said that henceforth the Cubans must be flown directly to those countries accepting them as refugees.

Costa Rica responded Sunday by offering to accept all of those fleeing from communist rule.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Is it harmful?

Q. Does fluoride in water really do your body harm?

A. It becomes toxic only if taken in large doses. The concentration of this chemical in drinking water is so low, there are presently no known harmful effects. Children who drink fluoridated water the first 12 years of their lives have 60 percent fewer cavities than those who don't.

EARLY MORNING MISHAP — Sunday at 4 a.m., a car driven by Richard Jacobs plunged through the doors of Muskegon, Mich., Township Hall. Jacobs walked to a nearby donut shop and found some police officers, explaining he had hit a building, but wasn't sure which one. After searching unsuccessfully for the scene of the accident, they returned to the township hall to make a report, where they discovered that was the scene of the wreck.

Despite credentials

Bush still underdog

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Texans have less than two weeks to recover from a bad case of the political ho-hums and to work up some interest in the important May 3 primary elections.

Presidential campaigning should provide a quick dose of medicine as candidates shift their attention from the Pennsylvania primaries to Texas.

Ronald Reagan last week completed his third Texas trip and has two more scheduled. His only remaining opponent in the May 3 Republican primary, George Bush, frequently returns to his Houston home base and will be hitting several other major Texas cities in the week before the vote.

Though Bush is counting on his homestate credentials to carry Texas, he remains an underdog to the man who easily won the state primary in 1976. The nation's First Lady and the President's First Surrogate, Rosalynn Carter, is scheduled to promote the Carter-Mondale ticket with one or two Texas visits.

Carter's limping challenger, Sen. Edward Kennedy, will stump for votes and dollars here in late April. Andy Siegel of Kennedy's Austin office said last week that the visit will last one to three days and definitely will include South Texas.

If Kennedy is to have any chance in Texas, he must convince sometimes pollyshy Mexican-Americans to turn out in force.

Mexican-Americans are predominantly Catholic, like Kennedy, and long have had a burning love affair with his family.

The question is whether Kennedy can turn this passion into votes in precincts that traditionally suffer notoriously low turnouts.

Chicano groups, such as the League of United Latin American Citizens and GI Forum, have been working hard in recent years to convince members of this growing minority to register and vote. This election will test their effectiveness.

If Reagan succeeds in drawing sufficient numbers of conservative Anglo Democrats into the Republican primary, the traditionally Democratic Mexican-American vote could exert even greater influence.

One factor in the Kennedy-Chicano equation is the tough race between State Sen. Carlos Truan and Bill Whittle in seven South Texas counties.

One capitol newsmen returned from that area last week, predicting that the challenge of the senator by an Anglo won't draw out the Chicano vote in significant numbers.

South Texas politicians convinced him that Mexican-Americans don't turn out at the polls in large numbers unless there is a hot contest between two Mexican-Americans.

Truan and Kennedy undoubtedly hope to disprove this theory.

Robert Kennedy Jr. spent most of a recent Texas visit wooing Mexican-American voters. The 26-year-old nephew of Edward Kennedy toured barrios in Austin and San Antonio with local Chicano leaders.

But several Mexican-American leaders in Texas, including national LULAC President Ruben Bonilla of Corpus Christi, are backing Carter and that support could deny Kennedy the big bloc vote he needs.

The Texas business lobby remains worried.

If minority voters turn out for Kennedy and many Democratic conservatives jump their party to vote for Reagan, some business-oriented Democratic legislators could be retired.

To prevent this, the lobby is putting special emphasis on funding conservative Democrats. Spending totals in legislative races this year probably will set records.

Brown supports Detox Center, road upgrades

O.L. (Louis) Brown, 1508 Oriole St., has issued the following statement in connection with his candidacy for re-election to the office of Howard County Commissioner Precinct 1:

"I take great pride in the county roads, which I think are the finest in Texas. A driver can go the speed limit anywhere without fear of driving on faulty pavements. It is the responsibility of the commission to see that those roads are maintained.

"I also take pride in the fire protection we offer throughout the county. We have volunteer fire departments and equipment at Knott, Jonesboro, Sand Springs, Silver Heels plus a fine ambulance service.

"I am also a big supporter of the Howard County Detoxification Center and the Counsel for the Aging. I support local youth programs like baseball, from the Little Leagues to semi-pro."

Brown is seeking his second elective term as Precinct 1 Commissioner. He was elected in 1976 and took office in 1977.

Brown is married to the former Emma Puga, a member of a long-time Howard County family. They are the parents of Clara Brown, a student at Howard College majoring in Education; and Jim Brown, who is attending the University of Texas at El Paso.

Louis was an employee of

O.L. (LOUIS) BROWN
Cabot Carbon Company for ten years before he assumed public office.

He is a member of the Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church, American Legion No. 355 and the Elite 40 and 8 Club. He also is a member of the GI Forum, the Governing Body of the Permian Planning Commission Health Systems Agency, the City Facilities Commission and a board member of the DeTox Center. He is an Army veteran, having served with the First Armored Division from 1951 to 1953.

Brown said he stands on his record as a public servant and added he would make every effort to see as many voters as possible between now and election day to solicit their support.

Curtis Ray Williams, 1517 Wood, is free on $2,500 bond set by City Judge John Coffee. He was arrested Wednesday and released Saturday.

Wreck forces evacuation

MADISON, Ga. (AP) — Crews are cleaning up the debris left by a freight train derailment and explosion that forced the evacuation of about 200 persons from their homes.

The derailment, followed by the explosion of a liquid petroleum gas tank car, occurred at about 8 p.m. Saturday in the community of Buckhead, about 50 miles east of Atlanta.

Georgia Railroad crews began clearing the wreckage Sunday after fears of leaking sulfuric acid proved groundless. Authorities estimated it would take until Thursday to complete the cleanup.

Inmates injured in jail

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seven deputies and 14 inmates suffered minor injuries over the weekend in a brief disturbance at the Los Angeles County Jail, authorities said.

The incident occurred Saturday night after dinner when 49 inmates in one cell block refused to return to their cells. When additional deputies were summoned, 15 of the inmates returned to their cells voluntarily while the others continued to struggle, officials said.

It took deputies about 10 minutes to restore order, said Deputy Jim Borland. None of the injuries required hospitalization, he said.

Street closures will be discussed Tuesday

A request that Tejas and Sioux Streets and the alleys on the north side adjacent to the above lots be closed will be considered by the City Council at the regular meeting, Tuesday, 9 a.m. in the City Council Room, Fourth and Nolan. The request has been made by Lanny Hamby and Wayne

White policeman indicted

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A second-degree murder indictment has been handed down for a white policeman charged in the April 3 fatal shooting of a black man in this Gold Coast city.

Douglas R. Williams, 22, was indicted in connection with the slaying of 20-year-old Willie McDonald who was reportedly trying to flee officers breaking up a crap game. Williams said the victim was resisting arrest at the time of the shooting. But witnesses said McDonald slipped and was covering his face with his arms when shot.

The suspended policeman faces a maximum sentence of life imprisonment if convicted.

Should you take a child to a funeral?

Attending a funeral is an emotional growth experience that normally should not be denied to a child. By attending, she shares her family's grieving. She learns that death is not secret or mysterious, just natural.

All of Texas to get warm temperatures

By the Associated Press
Clear skies and warm temperatures were forecast for all of Texas today.

Highs were to be mostly in the 80s with a few scattered readings reaching into the lower 90s.

Forecasts called for today's weather to be about the same as Sunday when El Paso set a record when the mercury climbed to 92, making it the warmest April 19 on record there.
Skies were mostly clear and temperatures rather warm before dawn today.

FORECAST		TEMPERATURES
WEST TEXAS — Fair today except partly cloudy southwest becoming partly cloudy most sections tonight and Tuesday. Widely scattered thunderstorms west of mountains today and tonight, spreading eastward over southern portions Tuesday. Highs 80s to lower 90s except upper 90s Big Bend. Lows 50s except 40 mountains. WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period, today until Tuesday morning, from the southern and central Rockies into the northern Plains. Weather will be cooler in the West and northern Plains. Warm weather is forecast for most of the country. The Northeast will be cool.

Battle of the 'unknowns'

'Who else is in race?'

(First of two parts)
By JACKIE CALMES
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The press conference drags on, marked by interminable pauses, with a television newswoman remaining silent, one newspaper reporter contributing a single query and another being led into questions by the candidate.

A local official moves forward to end their misery. But one reporter has a final question:

"Who are you running against?"

Killeen locals standing nearby, waiting to meet the candidate, exchange embarrassed glances and snicker. But Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent takes the less-than-astute query in stride.

He is, Nugent says for the umpteenth time, running against the liberal, left-wing Jim Hightower.

In Marshall, Jim Hightower sits in the office of Dr. Robert E. Hayes Sr., president of Wiley College, a private black school of 600-plus students.

He tells the gaunt, dignified black man how his populist campaign on behalf of "gougees" in Texas will benefit minorities.

"Your talk makes sense," Hayes tells Hightower. "Who else is in the race?"

Hightower tells him about Jim Nugent, and Hayes replies, "Never heard of him."

For both Nugent the incumbent and Hightower the underdog challenger, campaigning for the Texas Railroad Commission is an uphill battle against public ignorance of them and of the powerful commission that regulates the state's energy and transportation industries.

Compounding that, they often are confused with two Democrats in a second race in the May 3 Democratic primary, commission Chairman John Poerner and state Rep. Buddy Temple of Diboll.

A Railroad Commissioner, some argue, is more powerful than a Texas governor. But, unlike gubernatorial hopefuls, commission candidates rarely draw crowds, travel without retinues of aides and reporters and know that, despite their efforts, most voters will make up their minds on election day based on the sound of a name or on name recognition.

The evening after his Killeen stop, Nugent is honored at a Dallas Country Club reception attended by 40 to 50 businessmen, most from the oil and gas industries.

An oilman, standing near the bar, says he is familiar with the commission's regulatory role in his profession. "But what else," he asks, "does a commissioner do?"

If reporters and persons in regulated industries are ignorant of the railroad commission, what of the general public?

Hightower, for one, thought 1980 would be different. The two commission openings are the only statewide races other than judgeships on the ballot, and Hightower banked on unprecedented media and voter attention to boost his consumer-oriented and money-short candidacy.

Nugent is the incumbent, coming to office as an appointee in 1979. He was previously state representative from Kerrville but this is his first statewide race, just as it is for Hightower, former editor of The Texas Observer.

Nugent usually commutes from commission to campaign stops in his two-engine Bonanza. His co-pilot is Pat Nugent, former husband of the late President Johnson's daughter's Luci. They are not related.

But this afternoon, the Nugents go by car from Austin to Killeen, where state Rep. Stan Schlueter of nearby Salado has arranged for the press conference and meetings with local businesspeople and officeholders.

Nugent gives about two dozen locals at a motel reception a short stump speech — a crash course on the Railroad Commission.

First, a brief autobiography (San Angelo Native, engineer, lawyer and state legislator for 18 years), followed by a Litany of commission duties (authority over exploration and production of oil and gas; intrastate taxis, buses, trucks and trains; lignite surface mining, liquid petroleum gas and gas utilities) and ended with a description of his opponent as a left-wing radical.

Hightower is not named. In a name identification race, even a negative reference can be a plus.

Later at nearby Ft. Hood, Nugent closes his dinner spiel similarly: "I have an opponent and he has been having fundraisers in the Northeast and Washington, D.C. so that they can have a voice on the Railroad Commission."

With himself as commissioner, Nugent tells them. "The Texas viewpoint will come first... and you know where they can stuff theirs."

Such regional calls-to-arms inevitably spark applause. But one of the 40 persons here tonight acts differently. The woman, formerly of Pennsylvania, tells her husband she wants to leave.

At the County Courthouse in Marshall, Hightower sits across from two local reporters, reads that day's self-written news release and invites questions.

The first question is almost always the same. What about the Northeast financial connections?

Hightower patiently tells of two parties last year, one at New York's Texas-chic Lone Star Cafe and another at a Washington, D.C. home. Many who paid $25 to attend were native Texans, he says, their names taken from Texas Monthly magazine's mailing list.

"I'm sick of this Yankee-baiting pointing at the Northeast," he says. It's a ploy to divert attention from the fact that 90 percent of Nugent's contributions are from persons in regulated industries, Hightower says.

"I'm not taking a dime from the people I would regulate," he says.

Between press conferences in Marshall and Longview, Hightower sandwiches a meeting with the Rev. Robert Campbell. Supporter Joe Startling, a black from Tyler, chauffeurs Hightower and companion Vic Gonzalez of Austin through drizzling rain to a small roadside barbecue restaurant.

Campbell waits in one of four booths. He not only has the ear of his congregation, but also is editor of the East Texas Times, a black weekly, and president of Longview's NAACP chapter.

"You are not going to see Nugent at a meeting like this," Hightower tells him. "He is at the Petroleum Clubs... and the country clubs."

Hightower says Nugent is aloof, arrogant and more attuned to the martini-lunch crowd than those on food stamps. Campbell listens and makes notes. Afterward he says, "I'm leaning toward Mr. Hightower. I don't know the other man."

Twelve hours after returning to Austin from Killeen, Nugent lands his Bonanza at Fort Worth and goes to a morning meeting with Fort Worth Star-Telegram editors in hopes of an endorsement.

At the end, an editor asks if Nugent has any last statements.

"I think you've drained me pretty well," he says. But he offers the information that his opponent is a left-wing radical.

From there, it's a short flight to the Vought Corp., an aircraft manufacturer in Grand Prairie. Several hundred of the 12,000 Vought employees fill the cafeteria.

Nugent speaks over the luncheon din and then takes questions. The questions are blunt and tough.

Why does the commission favor industry? What is the commission doing to make sure strip mining for lignite doesn't leave East Texas an open pit? Why does the commission have such a bad reputation?

Nugent leaves without shaking hands or distributing the new brochures he'd brought along. He tours part of the massive plant with two employees in charge of political information at Vought.

Over lunch in the executive dining room, one asks him, "Who is your opponent?"

"A man by the name of Hightower," Nugent replies.

Weicker seeking aid for housing industry

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. plans to fly in the face of congressional budget cutters by offering an amendment to provide $10 billion in subsidies for the ailing housing industry.

The Connecticut Republican, one of the few politicians here to criticize the scurrying to balance the budget, wants the Carter Administration to reinstate a mortgage subsidy program.

The program, called Brooke-Cranston, enables the government to provide low-interest mortgage financing for moderate-income families.

An estimated 200,000 additional housing units would be built if the subsidies were approved, Weicker's office said.

That would save an estimated 400,000 jobs in the construction industry.

Weicker intends to offer his amendment to a congressional budget resolution scheduled to be debated in the Senate next week.

The resolution will be the center of intense lobbying by special interest groups intent on keeping favorite programs from being slashed.

Weicker's amendment faces opposition from both the chairman and ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee as they try to ward off changes in the budget resolution agreed upon by the panel earlier this month.

An amendment similar to Weicker's was defeated in the Budget Committee by a 10-6 vote, but Weicker aides are hopeful the worsening situation in the construction industry will spur congressional action.

Builders throughout the country have been lobbying for help in recent weeks as the administration's policy of tightening credit has shot up mortgage interest rates and brought new construction to a standstill in many areas.

Under Brooke-Cranston, the Department of Housing and Urban Development would make mortgage money available at below-market rates to lenders. The cost of the government would be the difference between the interest rate it set and the prevailing interest rate.

Stan Twardy, a Weicker aide, said the actual cost to the government of providing $10 billion in loans would be about $1.7 billion.

Supporters of the program feel the cost is worth assuming because a vibrant construction industry will keep tax revenues flowing into federal coffers and lessen the need for increased unemployment payments.

Opponents counter that the additional government spending would fuel inflation and most benefit existing homeowners in the market for larger homes, not the first-time homebuyer.

Brooke-Cranston was last used by the government between 1974 and 1976 to help ease the recession's impact on the construction industry.

De Broqueville is named veep

DALLAS — Election of Axel de Broqueville as vice president, Supply & Transportation, for American Petrofina, Inc., has been announced here. He previously served as assistant to the president. In that position he was responsible for the Company's supply, transportation and refinery sales, which included pipelines, refined product supply and distribution, terminal operations, crude acquisition and marine transportation.

De Broqueville, a native of Brussels, Belgium, transferred to American Petrofina's Dallas office from the Company's Big Spring refinery in March 1979. From mid-1977, he served on special assignments for the polystyrene business manager, the chemical manufacturing vice president and the refinery manager.

He joined Petrofina, S.A. in December, 1970, as a salesman before being transferred as a production manager of Synfina, a part of the Petrofina Group. He returned to Petrofina, S.A. in June 1973 in charge of coordination of refineries in the United Kingdom, France, Italy and Germany. His last post with Petrofina, S.A. was assistant manager of the Crude Oil Department, which is responsible for the Petrofina Group's worldwide supply of crude oil.

De Broqueville studied nuclear science, economics and electronics at the Catholic University at Louvain, Belgium. After receiving an MSC degree in aeronautics, he earned a DEC degree from Imperial College of London.

Shaw backed by Tex-NCap

Tex N-Cap (Texans in Nursing Coalition for Action in Politics), the political action arm of the Texas Nurses Association, has endorsed the candidacy of Larry Don Shaw, Big Spring, in the District 63 Texas State Representative race.

In a letter to Shaw advising the candidate of the fact, Claire N. Jordan, RN, administrator of Tex N-Cap, stated that the action was taken in accordance with the policies and endorsement procedures of Tex N-Cap and with the full advice and support of professional nurses in the 63rd district.

Old way of picking candidates better?

Which way do you think is best for picking presidential candidates? Would you let the professionals do it in some smoke-filled room, or would you opt for waiting on the outcome of the primaries, the system currently in vogue?

According to a recent poll, Americans are becoming disenchanted with the latter system. Many people don't think it is doing a good job of coming up with the best of the breed. They see a collision between Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan in November, a squareoff they wouldn't have picked in January. In short, the critics look back with misgivings, convinced that the people with the financial backing and the good speech writers early on do not always stand up under close scrutiny.

FOR ALL ITS FAULTS, the old way of leaving the choice in the hands of professionals at least provided for consideration of something more than how glib a candidate is, or how much money his camp can pour into a media campaign.

It must be conceded that the result would have been the same this year, even had the old system been in operation. Carter is an incumbent president and, for that reason, alone, would have been exceptionally hard to replace. Reagan, from the start, has had the support of the keepers of the Republican ideological flame. He might have had a harder row to hoe on the way to the Republican National Convention but he would likely have gotten there, if for no other reason than the fact that the party 'owed him one.'

Professionals tend to weigh 'electability' heavily, particularly when they are members of the party not in power at the moment.

Gerald Ford, by passing the word he was available, might have become the nominee. Even when Ford was 'hot,' however, he seemed to sense that the die had been cast, that the odds still favored Reagan.

THAT, HOWEVER, is not an argument for the primary system. Circumstances going into 1980 might have been different, had primaries not been scheduled. Then, prospective nominees would have spent months, even years, wooing party pros, establishing contacts and toting up political debts — instead of planning media blitzes in the all-important first primary. And there would have been 'favorite sons' holding blocs of delegates until convention time.

Now, much of the thrill has gone out of an election year. The issue is being settled months before the conventions. That allows no consideration of events which may yet occur. And the issue is being decided by a relatively handful of voters in some states, voters whose chief standard of gauging a candidate's fitness is his appearance on a 30-second TV spot.

The old way, at least, tested qualities needed to govern. The successful nominee without primaries needed political skills of a sort necessary in a president. He had to build coalitions; he had to deal in specifics regarding issues; and he needed to demonstrate a capacity for decision making and compromise. Now, all he must do is raise money, hire a media team of experts and dodge the issues with a broad smile.

That's no way to run a railroad, much less a country.

Other laws

Around the rim

Andrea Cohen

It will cost more than originally projected. It will take longer than one originally thought it would. If anything can go wrong, it will, at the worst possible time.

That is Murphy's law. Murphy was very, very, perceptive.

His law is supposed to make us feel better when something isn't going right. But Murphy missed some. I'm going to list them. I think they're all self-explanatory.

If somebody drops a raw egg on the floor, chances are you'll slip and break your neck. Along with that, a terrific cleaning bill will go with it.

When all the bills are paid and there's enough money left over for that new dress, it's inevitable there will be another bill stuffed at the bottom of the kitchen drawer that has to be paid.

The typewriter will always break down 15 minutes before deadline.

An obituary will come in two minutes before deadline. That's when the typewriter seems to work.

When you have Walt Finley for a city editor, chances are, your hair will turn gray faster.

When you tell Walt Finley about the above law, he will always say, "Don't put me in an unfavorable light. Tell them I'm the greatest."

If a cocktail waitress tells Mary, who bartends at the Lamplighter Club, somebody needs a Bloody Mary, she'll scream and holler. If the waitress tells her someone needs a Bloody Mary without Tabasco sauce, she'll probably throw the vodka, the tomato juice and the Tabasco sauce at the nearest person.

If Mary tells the waitresses she doesn't want to make any more Bloody Marys, the waitress strongly discourages people from ordering them.

If you pack away your winter clothes March 28, there will be a snowstorm March 30.

A person always becomes an expert on how a newspaper should be run as soon as one of his friends or relatives lands in a story he doesn't like.

A person always forgets how a newspaper is run when he calls at one o'clock, asking for a photographer at two o'clock.

A public official, according to himself, is ALWAYS being misquoted. That is, except for one elected officer here who doesn't think his job is to answer to the public, even though he is an elected official.

If he makes a pass at you, chances are, he's married.

TO THE WOMAN WHO CALLED LAST WEEK AND WOULDN'T LEAVE HER NAME — You never gave me a chance to reply so I'll have to do it through the column. Thank you for telling me all those marvelous things about our sports editor. Before either of us knew what was going to be said by you, he had picked up the extension, and we both enjoyed every word you said. All this time I thought he was quite dull, but your comments pushed my opinion of him way up. And when you call me next time and you have something to say about one of us, have enough courage to leave your name. A nameless opinion is worth nothing.

Brown urges arms muscle

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — After the Soviet sweep into Afghanistan, President Carter struck a heroic pose and warned the Russians to keep out of the Persian Gulf. The United States would use military force, he declared, to protect its vital interests in the oil region.

Yet he has on his desk a sober warning that the armed forces couldn't back up his brave words. In a secret "Memorandum for the President" Defense Secretary Harold Brown could promise only this much:

"We could rapidly assemble and deploy a small Marine Amphibious Brigade. This would provide some limited near-term presence and capability ashore." But he warned that the action "could be sustained for only a few weeks" without causing a severe strain on our military resources.

the authority to begin immediate negotiations to provide an adequate sea lift. He told of eight modern container ships that could be acquired from Sealand Industries, Inc., and called for their purchase "on an expedited basis."

FOOTNOTE: IRONICALLY, the Navy has tried to obstruct the sea lift build-up, preferring to spend every available tax dollar for fighting ships. This provoked Gen. E.C. Meyer, the Army chief, into writing a sharp protest which, of course, has been classified.

He complained that the Navy has "no incentive" and, therefore, that "sealift (sic) will remain dormant." He urged: "Navy should be told to procure sufficient fast sealift (sic) to deploy the Army, whether to Europe or to (another) contingency, or both at the same time."

BROWN MADE AN URGENT APPEAL for the muscle to carry out his assignment. "The Joint Chiefs of Staff and I agree," he wrote, "on the strategic necessity for major improvements in the U.S. capability to project military power rapidly into the Middle East-Persian Gulf-Arabian Sea region."

The desperate need is for a sea lift to deliver the fighting equipment to the critical area. "Our airlift capability is significant," Brown reported. But he stressed that "airlift by itself can provide only a small part of the lift capability needed."

"People can be moved quickly and in large numbers," he explained, "but there are limits on the amount of land-force fighting equipment, munitions and other sustaining cargo that can be moved rapidly by air, even with enhanced airlift."

The Pentagon's plight can be summed up in these stark statistics: During the past two decades, the Navy has shrunk from 900 ships to fewer than 500. The reserve fleet is down from 2,277 ships to 317, many of them fit only for the scrap pile.

LATEST ODDS: Let the political pundits spin their wordy webs. "Jimmy the Greek" puts his odds where the money is, offering guidance on the going rate for the quadrennial horse race that puts the winner in the White House next January.

As a service to those who'd like to capitalize on election-year politics with something more than philosophical satisfaction, here is Jimmy's latest morning line:

For the Republican nomination: Reagan is a runaway 1 to 20, with George Bush at 20 to 1 and John Anderson an even longer shot at 50 to 1.

For the Democrats: Jimmy Carter, 1 to 4; Teddy Kennedy, 4 to 1.

As for the likely runoff in November, Jimmy rates Carter and Reagan a tossup.

WATCH ON WASTE: The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration is really reaching for ways to spend the taxpayers' money these days. Worried about the physical fitness of the nation's policemen, LEAA bureaucrats gave the Jacksonville Beach (Fla.) Police Department a $20,304 grant to develop a model gym class. The money was used for body-building equipment and, of course, the services of a consultant.

Spending money like Arab oil sheikhs, the Department of Energy shelled out $343,834 for a "comprehensive analysis of issues" concerning resource development on Indian reservations. The DOE spenders defended the expenditures as an aid in "policy development." But a wide gulf developed between hope and reality. Now that the results of the study are in, DOE officials admit they haven't found any use for them.

When public money is at stake, Washington's bureaucrats have no reluctance to illuminate the obvious.

LET THE NEED FOR SEA POWER has increased dramatically, as U.S. bases around the world have dwindled from more than 100 to less than 30 and as the Russians have assembled the world's largest Navy.

Brown informed the president, therefore, that "we badly need some near-term options." He recommended rushing a seven-ship force, loaded with combat equipment, into the Indian Ocean where it would stand by "afloat in the vicinity of Diego Garcia."

He explained: "After being alerted at Diego Garcia, this logistical force could sail to a designated Persian Gulf area port in about five days. There, it would be met by the combat troops who would have arrived by airlift."

The defense chief stressed the "urgent need to increase our power projection capability" and requested

Power of Weakness

Joseph Kraft

JERUSALEM — Menahem Begin presents the case of a paradox familiar in political life but often misunderstood. He possesses the power of weakness.

Personally, politically and in international matters he stands so close to the edge, that the merest shove could send him over. But the troubles apt to dog those who shove are so great that they prefer to let him expire.

Physically, Mr. Begin shows few signs of the heart disease and stroke that have assailed him in the past few years. He rises early and works a full day. His reading capacity, once slightly impaired, is back to normal. Though his voice has weakened to the point that puts great oratory beyond him, he remains quick in the cut and thrust of debate.

INTELLECTUALLY, though, something has happened. Mr. Begin speaks of peace with Egypt as if it were over and done. He talks in the narrowest way of the other part of the bargain — "full autonomy" for the Palestine Arabs. He plans settlements — even though there are no settlers — to divide the territory inhabited by them into unmanageable bits and pieces. He closes off avenues for a deal with King Hussein that would fit a Palestinian entity safely under the wing of Jordan. He courts the enmity of the world in a way that threatens to make Israel a pariah state.

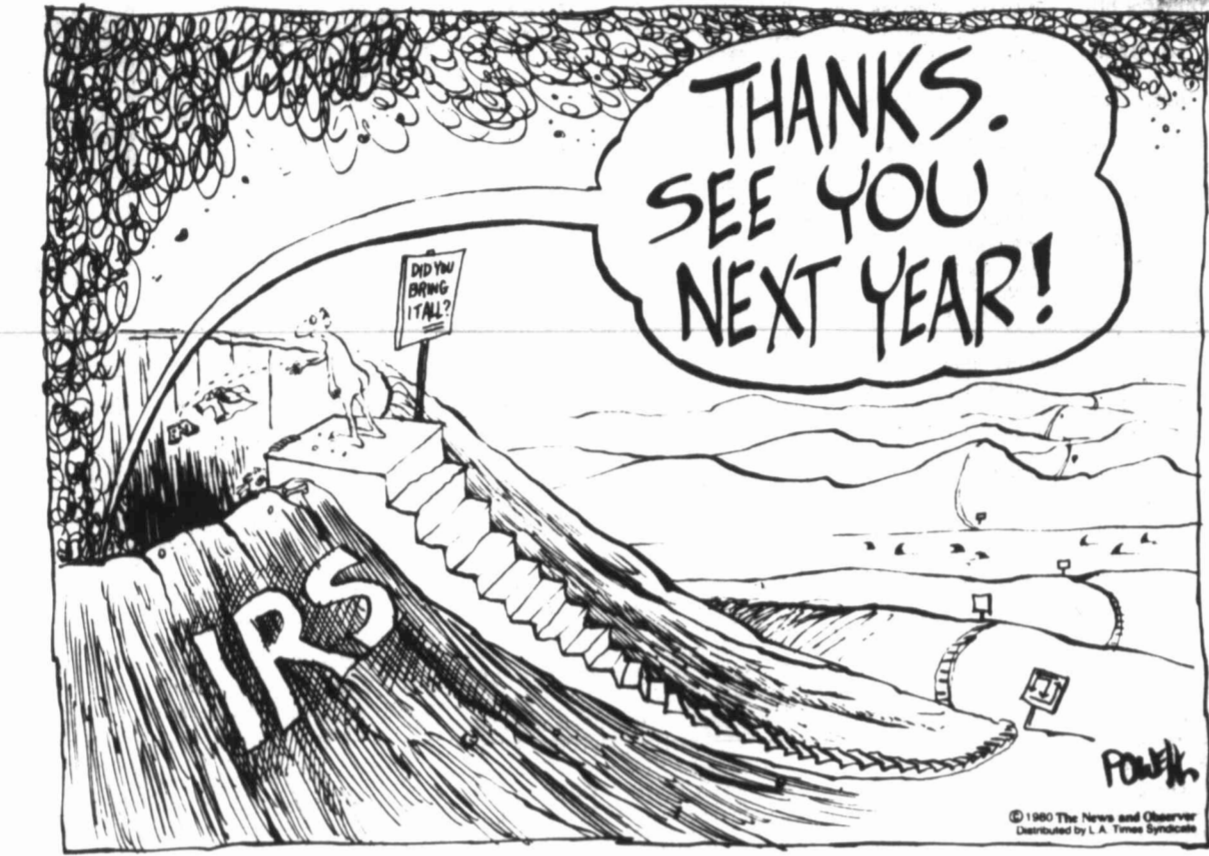

Why? My impression is that he is only belatedly awakened to the full implications of the deal he cut at Camp David. With his end in sight, he struggles all the harder to maintain the Egyptian peace treaty while holding back on the autonomy part of the bargain. The more so as he is persuaded that those most likely to follow him — Defense Minister Ezer Weizman of former Prime Minister Shimon Peres of the Labor opposition — would sell the pass.

Politically the transfer of authority looks like child's play. Of the 120 seats in the Israeli parliament, only 65 are in the hands of Begin's governing coalition. At least two of the coalition parties — the Liberals, including Weizman, with a score of votes; and the Democrats, led by Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Yadin, with five votes, are hostile to Begin's policies.

But except for Weizman, the Liberals are all afraid to jump ship. They fear they would be saddled with the blame for Israel's desperate economic plight, and suffer horrendous losses in the elections precipitated by the ouster of Begin. As to the Democrats, they have argued that their presence in the government softens the prime minister's harsh line. If they quit, they would have no rationale to put before the voters in the new elections. So the very fragility of the coalition sustains it in office, and it is hard to see Begin voted from office — except under the force of outside pressure.

The U.S., as the great supplier of weapons and money to Israel, is the obvious candidate. Virtually everybody affected by events in the Near East is now urging Washington to put pressure on Begin. But Jimmy Carter finds himself in awkward position to crack down to the point of forcing the Begin government from office. Not just because of the votes from supporters of Israel which he needs for re-election, either.

MORE IMPORTANT still, he needs marks of success in foreign policy. The affair of the Iranian hostages has been a highly visible disaster. He has been unable to muster significant pressure against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. Radicals look as though they might take over in Central America.

How foot drop occurs

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Three weeks after stomping about 40 aluminum cans for an aluminum drive I felt a pain in my hip. The pain disappeared in about 10 days, but I found my left foot was turning in when I tried to walk and I almost fell over.

My doctor calls it "dropped foot" and said stomping cans flat had nothing to do with it, but that crossing the legs would. I am 66 and have never heard of dropped foot before. Is it rare and what are the chances of recovery? — A.J.C.

There are muscles on the front of the lower leg that allow us to bend the foot upward. If the nerve that tells those muscles to work has been damaged, then it is impossible to bend the foot and it will drag while walking. People with dropped foot have to lift the leg extremely high to allow it to clear the ground. There is also a slapping sound as the foot hits the floor.

The nerve serving the muscles mentioned curves around one of the bones of the leg. It is so located that crossing of legs or prolonged kneeling can damage the nerve on its way to the muscles. The muscles are cut off from the power supply and cannot function. The foot drops. This is a more likely cause of your foot problem than the can-stomping session.

With physical therapy and avoidance of further pressure on the nerve the muscle function should return in reasonably short time. If improvement is not seen then other causes should be investigated. Permanent damage to the nerve can take place, in which case the outlook for recovery is not good. A brace might have to be used to keep the foot up. Your case sounds like it is only a temporary condition.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My husband and I are having an argument about the diet he is on. He is 25 and just had his eye operated on for a detached retina. He thinks the diet he is on will make his eyes get better. He got it from a lady who owns a health food store. She told him the blood vessels to his eyes are small and he may not be getting enough nutrition to them. She said he might have an intolerance to glucose and lactose in bread and milk. So she told him not to drink any milk or eat any bread, also to eat raw vegetables, and they can't be frozen. He also bought a lot of pills to take. I've listed for you. Can you settle this? — K.N.G.

My God, what a list! Your husband has my sympathy, but I am confident that he will be fine. My cousin had a detached retina at the same age as your husband. He has not missed a day of work since, and that was 20 years ago.

Diet will not affect your husband's condition unless he had a disease that causes eye changes. Diabetes is the best example of that. Your husband is in a particularly vulnerable period psychologically. I think he is being taken advantage of. Although there is nothing wrong with the changes in the diet he has made or with all those vitamin products he is taking, they will not help his visual problem. At the risk of appearing to be a puppet for organized medicine, I really think he should seek advice from more scientific sources.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My girlfriend and I are trying to find a new contraceptive and are considering a new method in which a capsule is inserted. What do you know about it? I am enclosing a magazine ad for it. — R.B.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: With all the terrible things happening in the world today, don't you feel that the second coming of Christ is very near? — C.W.

DEAR C.W.: It is interesting that I am asked this question with increasing frequency today. I believe it is because many people realize how hopeless the human situation is apart from the intervention of God.

We are warned in Scripture against making specific predictions about the return of Christ. We are promised that some day He will return to establish His rule. This is what the Bible calls "the blessed hope" — the glorious appearing of our Great God and Savior, Jesus Christ" (Titus 2:13). However, we are also told that He will come when many people least expect Him. "The day of the Lord will come like a thief" (2 Peter 3:10). Or again we are warned, "No one knows about that day or hour, not even the angels in heaven, nor the Son, but only the Father" (Matthew 24:36).

At the same time, however, the Bible does tell us there will be certain signs which should alert us to the nearness of His coming. For example, the Bible speaks of "wars and rumors of wars...Nation will rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom. There will be famines and earthquakes in various places" (Matthew 24:6-7). Certainly that description could well apply to our own age. The Bible also tells us that "this gospel of the kingdom will be preached in the whole world as a testimony to all nations, and then the end will come" (Matthew 24:14). This is increasingly true today, with modern missionary movements reaching many parts of the world and Christian radio extending into virtually every corner of the earth.

Whether Christ comes soon, or delays His coming for many generations, our lives should be the same. We should always be living for Him: "You ought to live holy and godly lives as you look forward to the day of God and speed its coming" (2 Peter 3:11-12).

Dear Editor: I read the article in your paper last evening about Mike Ezzell being uncommitted in the House Speaker race.

Mike Ezzell voted for and supported Bill Clayton in the last race. I think he will do the same this time around. If not, let him tell the voters flat out that he will not support Bill Clayton.

I cannot vote for anyone who has any truck with the present speaker of the House.

Supreme Court begins hearings

Abortion issue surfaces again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is grappling once again with the passion-laden issue of whether the government should pay for "medically necessary" abortions for poor women.

The justices set aside 2 1/2 hours today to hear the legal and constitutional issues raised by attorneys in companion lawsuits from New York and Chicago.

Trial judges in both cities ruled it unconstitutional for Congress to forbid federal welfare payments for abortions considered necessary to protect a mother's health.

All sides in the controversy have called the case of the two suits significant, and dozens of organizations have offered their views to the court in legal briefs. The justices are expected to issue a decision by the end of June.

"At issue is the fundamental right of reproductive freedom. The court's decision will affect the very being of American women," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women.

NOW planned a "standing vigil" across from the court grounds during the arguments.

The matter reached the high court when the Justice Department and other defenders of the federal restriction appealed decisions by U.S. District Judges John Dooling of New York and John Grady of Chicago.

Solicitor General Wade McCree was to present the government position to the court today.

Rhonda Copelon, an attorney with the Center for Constitutional Rights in New York, was to argue in support of the trial court ruling striking down the federal restriction.

The center, along with the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, the American Civil Liberties Union and the New York City Health and Hospitals Corp., initiated the New York suit on behalf of poor women who were seeking abortions for medical reasons.

The debate concerned the constitutionality of the federal statute allowing Medicaid financing of abortion only if a pregnancy threatens the mother's life or if it resulted from rape or incest. The restriction, first enacted in 1976 and renewed every year since, is known as the Hyde Amendment for its originator, Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill.

Medicaid is the federal health insurance program for the poor.

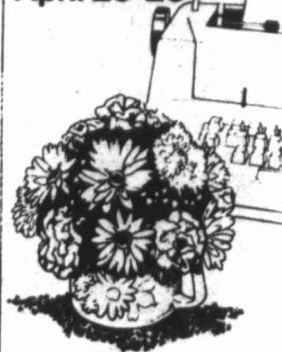

Dooling, writing the more comprehensive of the two trial court decisions, ruled that the Hyde amendment violated the constitutional rights to due process and equal protection of the law.

Although the government has no inherent duty to pay for abortions, once it has established a medical assistance program, it cannot arbitrarily deny aid for "medically necessary" abortions, he wrote.

The Supreme Court in 1973 ruled that abortion, especially during the early stages of pregnancy, is a matter between a woman and her doctor and that states cannot constitutionally forbid the operation.

ELLA VONNE WEST
NSA President

Boss' right hand woman honored

"Secretaries are Forever" has been designated as the theme of this year's Secretaries Week, April 20-26.

Secretaries Week is a time when tribute is paid to those devoted and dedicated women who are more than just memo typers, letter filers, coffee makers and break takers.

Behind every good boss, you can bet there's a top-notch secretary. A secretary is a boss' right hand woman.

One such woman is Mrs. Ella Vonne West, current president of the Big Spring Chapter of the National Secretaries Association (International).

Mrs. West is employed in the Director's Office at the Veteran's Administration Medical Center as a management assistant, having entered this position in January of 1979.

Prior to that time, Mrs. West was secretary to the Chief of Surgery, Chief of Medicine and Chief of Staff at the medical center.

She is married to Henry West, an employee of Couden Refinery. They have two children, Ronny, who lives in Arlington and is associated with American Airlines, and Teresa, who will graduate from Lubbock Christian College on April 26.

Mrs. West will take the sixth portion of the Certified Professional Secretary (CPS) examination on May 2.

Mrs. West encourages all secretaries and office workers to attend the seminar which will be held at the VA Medical Center Friday.

The Big Spring Chapter of the National Secretaries Association (International) is sponsoring this event and Dr. Paul Preston, associate professor of management at the University of Texas in San Antonio will be the featured speaker.

For further information about attending the seminar or becoming a member of the local chapter of the NSA, contact Mrs. West, 263-7361, ext. 222, or any member of the Big Spring chapter.

Mrs. West is just one of many dedicated secretaries working in Big Spring.

Bosses, show your appreciation to your right-hand woman this week.

Altursa seminar is great success

The Altursa Club of Big Spring will hold its regular semi-monthly meeting Thursday at the Holiday Inn.

The business of the day will be a discussion of the Leadership Training Seminar which was held at Howard College on April 12.

With the Governor of District Nine, Altursa International as its guest, Mrs. Glydene Shelton, Chairman of Area III, welcomed Altursa members from 15 cities to the Big Spring event.

A reception was held on Friday evening at the Holiday Inn for early arrivals under the chairmanship of Mary Lynn Welch and Helen Cobean.

Registration began Saturday morning at 8:30 and this was followed by formal opening ceremonies. Mrs. Clyde Angel, the first lady of Big Spring, welcomed the visitors and they were greeted by Virginia Morriss, the Governor of District Nine, and Sue Power, the District Program Coordinator.

Following a program of Leadership Development, luncheon was served in the Cactus Room of Howard College. The luncheon program consisted of introductions for District and Area III officers and dignitaries. Door prizes were distributed to many in attendance.

The afternoon was filled with workshops to underline the theme of the seminar, "Accentuate the ates of the 80s." Workshops to motivate, generate, regulate, educate, participate, appreciate, evaluate, and anticipate were conducted before the final reconvening for adjournment.

Seventy-three Altursa members attended this seminar, one of the most successful ones in the state.

Connie Marie Hall weds Gregory Mason

Connie Marie Hall and Gregory Lee Mason were married Feb. 16 at the First Baptist Church of Port Aransas.

Officiating the ceremony was the Rev. Eldon Johnson.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth C. Hall, Port Aransas. Parents of the groom are Truman L.

Mason and Marilyn Mason, both of Big Spring.

Witnesses attending the couple were Gwen Headrick, Oklahoma City, Okla., maid of honor; and Gordon Birrell, Big Spring, best man.

The couple are making their home in Port Aransas.

MR. AND MRS. GREGORY LEE MASON

Credit Women's Club meets for luncheon

The Big Spring Credit Women's Club met April 17 at Alberto's Crystal Cafe for a noon luncheon. Eleven were present.

Reports were made by the treasurer and secretary. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Papers prepared on

"Young People and Credit" by the students of Mrs. Billye Grisham of Big Spring High School were judged. Checks will be presented to the top three winners.

The Capsule Fund was won by Reba Baker. The meeting was adjourned by Marguerite Wooten.

Johnnie Lou Avery will speak at dinner

Girl Scout Leaders from Glasscock, Howard, and Martin counties will be the guests of honor at a Leader-Appreciation dinner at the Big Spring Country Club, April 29 at 7:30 p.m.

Rev. Carol Kohl will lead the invocation, and Johnnie Lou Avery will speak on "A Portion of Thyself."

Special guests at the dinner will be board members, John Fish, Carol Ann Ivey, and Rev. Kohl; Robbi Crow, Big Spring

Herald; and Peggy Sturrock, Executive Director of the West Texas Girl Scout Council.

The dinner and awards will be given in appreciation for the time and talents given by leaders to the Girl Scouts in Big Spring and the surrounding communities.

The West Texas Girl Scout Council is a participating agency of the United Way.

Contact Jackie Hancock, Girl Scout office, 263-1749, for awards to be given.

TWEEN 12 and 20 Relationship is bad news

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I have a very unique problem. I am physically attracted to my first cousin. He is 16 and I'm 14 and I'm sure he is interested in me because of the things he has told me. I don't know what to do. Please help. — J.J., Sulphur Springs, Texas

J.J.: Do yourself and your cousin a big favor by cooling your relationship with him. If you don't, you both could be headed for disaster. Relationships don't need the extra burden of having the partners first cousins.

Dr. Wallace: I have several good friends and one of them happens to be Sue.

Last Monday another good friend, Liz, asked me why I wasn't at Sue's birthday party which took place on Saturday. I really felt stupid and told Liz that I was sick but actually I wasn't invited. Now I'm really hurt and don't know what to do. Please help me. I feel Sue should have invited me. — Tracy, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Tracy: Sue can invite anyone she chooses to come to her party, but it is strange that you were not invited.

I would suggest that you talk alone with Sue and share with her that you considered her a good friend and are disappointed that you were not invited to her party. Ask her why.

You may not like her answer but at least you will know why.

Dr. Wallace: I was reading your column and a letter from two girls in San Diego caught my eye. They wanted to travel in Europe after graduation, and their letter brought back pleasant memories.

My best friend, Carrie, and I decided to do the same thing. We earned every penny of our 10-week European trip and we had a fantastic trip (summer 1977). We stayed with relatives but mostly in youth hostels which are inexpensive and usually located close to main points of interest.

In those 10 weeks we really matured. We had to do everything for ourselves — food money — travel and sight-seeing.

It certainly was a great responsibility but our parents backed us 100 percent.

Presently, I'm in college and Carrie will soon be married. As we look back, our timing was perfect.

I hope my letter will encourage them to go. It was such a great experience. — Dorothy Nielson, San Mateo, Calif.

Dorothy: Thanks so much for taking the time to share your marvelous, enriching experience.

Style show presented

The Forsan Study Club met April 7 in Forsan High School Cafeteria. A salad supper was given for the Senior girls and their mothers.

A scholarship will be presented to one of the girls for the college fall term at a later date.

Mrs. J.F. Poyner, owner of "Pretty Things," presented a style show of new spring fashions. Models were Rubye Wooley, Sue Holguin, Donna Carey, Suzanne Haney, Lisa McMillian and Carrie Poyner.

The study club programs committee for the 1980-81 year is in the process of selecting programs and completing yearbooks.

Hostesses were Mrs. Garner Thixton, Mrs. Jessie Summers, Mrs. Johnny Mills, Mrs. Bobby Evans, Mrs. Delmar Hartin, and Mrs. Rubye Woodley.

Pick up forms by April 26

Silhouettes of America will hold a pageant May 2 and 3 in the Howard College Auditorium.

Talent competition will be conducted May 2 at 7:30 p.m. Pageant fashion modeling will begin at 9 a.m. May 3.

Entry forms can be obtained at the Kid's Shop, Spoiled Rotten and the Cherry Orchard. For more information call Debbie Bryans at 263-865. Deadline for entry is April 26.

Rx for Marriage: Mates be Lovers

DEAR ABBY: Thirty years and six great kids ago, my wife, like MAGGIE, was a "never-before-mass-gal." She also believed that sex was dirty and sinful.

An old priest put a stop to all that nonsense. He pulled a book from the top shelf of his library and handed it to my wife with instructions for her to call him after every chapter. He also instructed me never to let two weeks go by without bringing my wife a rose.

When the kids were little, our family doctor wrote on a prescription pad, "One weekend, every six weeks, get a sitter for the kids, buy a bottle of wine, check into a motel with your wife, and treat her like a hooker. And don't say you can't afford to. You can't afford not to."

Today our children are educated, well-adjusted and independent, and I am left with a lovely, exciting wife. Thank you, Father Joe and Doctor Bob!

CHRISTIANS SHOULD BE LOVERS

DEAR CHRISTIAN: Right on. And so should Jews, Buddhists, Moslems, Hindus, etc.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to referring to bullfighting as "the brutal, bloody business of torturing animals for sport and entertainment." This is your own personal opinion, and you have no right to tear down something you don't understand. And you obviously didn't research the subject or you wouldn't have told the young woman that since bullfighting is illegal in the U.S., she would have to go to a country where it is legal to be trained as a bullfighter.

I am an ex-lady-bullfighter who received two years' training in the U.S. There actually was a bullfighting school in Los Angeles. It was not taught as a "sport" because it is an art.

After I retired from bullfighting, I became very much involved in humane work, and believe me, I should have stuck to bullfighting. I am the president of Feline and Canine Friends, Inc. — dedicated to the humane treatment of animals, and this is the most heartbreaking work in the world.

The cruelty that man imposes on animals is unforgivable. Laboratory animals are tortured and caged until the only peace they know is death. Do you think about what animals must endure so you can walk in leather shoes? Or when you eat baby veal? Or wear a fur coat? Check it out, if you have the nerve.

ROSE H. IN ANAHEIM

DEAR ROSE: What you say may be true, but does man's inhumane treatment of other animals justify man's inhumane treatment of the bull for sport, entertainment or art?

DEAR ABBY: My father was 72 when he died last month. He had an operation, and after being in surgery for over four hours he died on the table, so I would say the operation was a failure, wouldn't you?

Well, his doctor had the nerve to send us a bill for the surgery! Abby, do you think a doctor should be paid for an operation that failed?

HIS DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Yes. The doctor put forth as much skill, effort and time on an operation that failed as he would have for an operation that succeeded.

DEAR ABBY: For quite some time I have wanted to ask your opinion regarding the practice of some people who turn their left hand backward in a so-called "friendly" handshake, rather than extend their right hand in the conventional manner.

I vaguely recall having read somewhere that this is a "token" handshake which says, "I don't care for you, but nevertheless here's my left hand to indicate to folks nearby that we know each other." (It's just a cut above a snub.) I would prefer to be ignored rather than accept this fishy left handshake. How do you feel about it?

RIGHT HAND, PLEASE

DEAR RIGHT: On occasion I've been offered a left hand to shake and I shook it; I'm sure there were times when I have offered my left hand, too. Why look for some hidden meaning? It simply could indicate that one's right hand is otherwise occupied, that the left hand is handier or the right hand is wearing a large ring which invariably cuts into the flesh when grasped too tightly. Or some reason other than a putdown.

CONFIDENTIAL TO STUNNED BUT SILENT IN ROCHESTER: Tell your hostess. If a very good friend of yours had had money taken from her purse while a guest in your home, wouldn't you want to be told about it?

Whether you want a formal ceremony, a wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Fitness may lead to other ails

By the Associated Press
Millions of Americans are trying to exercise their way to better health, but fitness fans who aren't careful can end up with ailing wallets.
Exercise equipment and facilities can be expensive. The benefits may make the cost worth while, but you also may be able to get the same results without spending nearly so much.
"Some exercise facilities are ... more expensive than you anticipate from the initial fees," warns the New York Heart Association Inc. "There may be surcharges for lockers or for court use for tennis or squash. Tips and transportation to and from the facility can add to the cost."
There are many types of exercise; among the best are those that benefit your heart and circulation. They are called cardiovascular fitness exercises and their aim is to increase the blood flow to the working muscles. Examples include swimming, skating, jogging and bicycling.

Cardiovascular fitness exercises are sometimes referred to as aerobic — requiring oxygen — because the blood is rich in oxygen.
Visit your doctor before starting any regular exercise program. If you are over 35 and have a potential health problem, the doctor may recommend a stress test to check the performance of your heart and cardiovascular system during exercise.
The heart association says consumers should visit several testing facilities before selecting one. Among the questions to ask:
—Does the center have a medical director and what is his or her background? The director should provide overall medical supervision and should be available for consultation.
—Who will conduct your test? If you are over 35 and sedentary or if you have had any unexplained pains that could be related to your heart, it is a good idea to have a physician do your test.

—What is measured during the test? Checklist items include blood pressure, pulse rate and the shape of your electrocardiogram.
Once you have a medical OK, you will have to decide whether you want to join an exercise facility. Advantages include companionship, a regular place to change and shower, trained instructors and the availability of exercise equipment. Disadvantages include the cost and the fact that you have to exercise at a set time and in a fixed place, which may be inconveniently located.
The heart association says you should keep these things in mind when selecting an exercise center:
—The availability of facilities like treadmills, exercise bicycles and a swimming pool for aerobic exercises.
—The qualifications of the instructors. "If the instructor has had only a short crash course at the facility, it probably was oriented to sales rather than to cardiovascular fitness," says the heart association.

EASY DOES IT — Seattle Supersonic Lonnie Shelton, (8), is restrained by teammate Dennis Johnson, left, and coach Lenny Wilkens as he begins to argue with officials over a foul they have just called against him during the fourth quarter of the Seattle-Milwaukee NBA playoff game Sunday afternoon. Sonic James Bailey looks on, right. Seattle beat Milwaukee, 98-94.

Boston's Bird preys on 76ers

BOSTON (AP) — Billy Cunningham sat and frowned as he studied the statistics sheet, a piece of paper the Philadelphia coach hardly needed to identify the flying object that had done such damage to his team.

"It was Larry Bird, plain and simple," said Cunningham. "He hit shots that were just incredible. He was out at the three-point line, coming off screens and burying everything he shot."

Bird, Boston's brilliant rookie, connected on 15 of 30 field goal attempts, scored 31 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to lead the Celtics to a 96-90 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Sunday, tying their National Basketball Association playoff series at one victory apiece. The next two games of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference finals will be played in Philadelphia Wednesday and Friday nights.

"We had to win today," said Bird, who was still besieged by newsmen in the Boston locker room an hour after the final buzzer sounded. "Our backs were to the wall. If we had lost and gone to Philadelphia two down, it would have been very tough to come back."

So, faced with what at least approached a must-win situation, Celtics COACH Bill Fitch changed his strategy a bit. He kept his reserves anchored to the bench and went with his starters for as long as possible. Bird and center Dave Cowens played 46 minutes apiece. Nate Archibald 42, Chris Ford 40, Cedric Maxwell 38.

"It's the playoffs," Fitch explained. "There's going to be a time for our bench — when I'm behind. I don't like to throw subs in when everything is cooking. If I'm ahead and things are going good, I don't like to break momentum."

The Celtics didn't build much momentum Sunday, but they did do enough to win. They dominated the first half, taking a 33-38 lead with 2:37 left in the second period behind 21 points by Bird. A 12-1 Philadelphia spurt made the halftime score 54-50, and three baskets by Sixers center Darryl Dawkins tied it at 62-62 with 6:21 to go in the third period.

But Philadelphia couldn't get a basket for the rest of the quarter, was outscored by Boston 12-2 and could come no closer than the final six-point margin. Julius Erving led the Sixers with 24 points, while Maxwell contributed 17 points and 15 rebounds for the Celtics.

"Getting even was important," said Fitch. "We played a lot better defensively than in the first game (won by Philadelphia 96-93). And offensively we went to Larry, as long as it was working for him. They put everyone on him except Billy (Cunningham) himself."

Cunningham started with Erving against Bird, then tried Bobby Jones, then 7-foot-1 Caldwell Jones. None was able to do the job. Bird always seemed to have the ball — shooting, rebounding, passing.

"I can't do anything if I don't have the ball," Bird explained. And what about playing 46 minutes? "When things are going like they did today, you don't want to come out."

Watson's free advice costs him

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Jim Colbert was saying all the right things, all the gracious things.

"The best player in the game won this tournament," Colbert said. "There is no question about that."

But unknown to Colbert there was a very considerable question about the margin of victory in Tom Watson's front-running defense of his title in the Tournament of Champions.

While Colbert was speaking, that margin was being trimmed from five shots to three. Watson was assessed a 2-shot penalty after he had completed his final round Sunday. It merely changed his score from 71 to 73, his total from 274 to 276, his winning margin from five shots to three.

It was only an exercise in arithmetic. It didn't change the outcome of the tournament, but it could have.

"If I'd been leading by one, it would have changed things," Watson said. "I wouldn't have won."

The penalty arose from some television-relayed advice Watson passed on to Lee Trevino during their final-round play. Trevino was struggling, Watson told him, on the 13th hole, that he was playing the ball too far forward in his stance.

Herman Mitchell, Trevino's caddy, was wearing a live television mike. NBC announcers heard the comment and rather casually passed it along to the viewing audience as a sidelight, an illustration of how players aid each other.

But it's illegal. A viewer in Ojai, Calif., telephoned to question the legality.

Jack Tutill, Tournament Director of the PGA Tour, questioned Watson about it in the scorer's tent. Watson readily admitted he'd done it. And he was penalized two shots.

"I was wrong. I wasn't thinking," Watson said. "I violated the rules. It's a violation of the advice rule. I accept the penalty. The rules are there to be followed. I violated them. If I'd been leading by one, if it had changed the outcome of the tournament, I still would have accepted the penalty."

Even with the penalty, Watson won easily. He started the day in front, stayed in front and finished in front.

The veteran Colbert was second in the elite event that brings together only the winners of pro golf tour titles from the last 12 months. He had a closing 70, 2-under-par on the La Costa 2x2 y Club course, and a 279 total.

Tied for third at 281 were George Burns and Curtis Strange. Burns had a closing 66 in the warm, breezy weather. Strange shot a 67. Seve Ballesteros, the brilliant young Spaniard who won the Masters last week, completed his brief swing around the American tour with a 73-290. U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin was 73-294. PGA titleholder David Graham of Australia shot 74-286.

The official name of the tournament is the MONY Tournament of Champions. It was sponsored by Mutual of New York.

Sonics burial is premature

SEATTLE (AP) — After escaping burial over the weekend, the defending National Basketball Association champion Seattle SuperSonics don't have much time to pat themselves on the back.

The Sonics, who won the Western Conference semifinals Sunday with a 98-94 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks, face the Pacific Division champion Los Angeles Lakers in a best-of-seven playoff series which opens Tuesday night in Los Angeles.

"Every sportswriter in the country and CBS-TV was in Milwaukee Friday night to bury us," said veteran Seattle forward John Johnson, "but we had a few tricks for the Bucks."

"Don't be surprised if we have a few more for the 'Big Fella.'"

Johnson was talking about the Lakers' 7-foot-2 center, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who led Los Angeles to four triumphs in six regular-season meetings with the Sonics.

Down 3-2 in a best-of-seven series, Seattle came back to beat the Bucks 86-85 at Milwaukee Friday night to set up Sunday's meeting.

"I have an idea who will win the Los Angeles-Seattle series," volunteered Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson, "but I'm keeping it to myself."

They're running in Boston today

BOSTON (AP) — Some of the nation's top marathoners took their places at the starting line today in the 84th running of the Boston Athletic Association Marathon, a substitute Olympics for many who had hoped to compete for medals in Moscow this summer.

Bill Rodgers, the 32-year-old former school teacher, was bidding for his fourth victory in the 26-mile, 385-yard run from Hopkinton to Boston's Back Bay.

Some of the top runners in the field of 5,481 men and 449 women had planned to skip the nation's most prestigious marathon to train for the U.S. Olympic trials one month later in Buffalo.

Rodgers, angered by the U.S. withdrawal from the Summer Olympics, said: "I'll probably run hard for the next four years to try for the next Olympics."

Although he has criticized the boycott, Rodgers discarded plans to wear a black armband in protest.

Cox and Stewart repeat victory

The team of Royce Cox and Howard Stewart did it again.

The pair repeated last year's feat, winning the Champion Flight of the Big Spring Golf Association Partner's Tournament over the weekend. Their two-day team total was 131.

Nipped by just one stroke were the second-place finishers, Bruce Carroll and Gary Howell. Just one stroke behind them was the third-place team of George Murphy and Loy Carroll.

Gene Gross and Jimmy Roger took first place in the First Flight Division, shooting a 142. The teams of Bob Hecker and Clay Harris, and Joe Sharpnack and Jerry Barron tied for second with a score of 143. Hecker and Harris emerged as the winners in a playoff. Taking top honors in the Second Flight Division was the team of Bill Chrane and James Petty. Winning score was 156.

L.A. Webb and Earl Cota took second with a 157. They were followed by Larry Conway and Lee Harris, who shot a 158.

Trope wants to control NFL union

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Trope has been negotiating million-dollar contracts for pro football players for the past few years, but he thinks they're still getting the short end of the stick when it comes to basics.

Now he's done something about it. The Associated Press has learned a new National Football League Players Union (NFLPU) and will try to wrest the player association control from Ed Garvey.

Trope, a 28-year-old player agent, accuses Garvey, founder in 1963 of the National Football League Players Association (NFLPA), of serious irregularities in the voting on the basic player agreement signed with the league in 1977 and of using the association for the purpose of expanding his own power.

By law, an attempt to replace the NFLPA as the sole bargaining agent of the league's 1,400 players could not be made within three years of the signing of the basic agreement. That deadline passed in March. Now, Trope says, he and a number of other agents — he declined to name them — will try to sign the 420 players (30 percent of the NFLPA membership) required to force an election, conducted by the National Labor Relations Board, to determine which union will represent the players.

"The fact is that the collective bargaining agreement in 1977 was not ratified by a majority,"

Trope said. "It received votes from only 453 players out of 1,400. And more than 50 percent of the players in the league never received a ballot. I have this all in a deposition form from Garvey." It was taken in a players' suit against the league which never came to trial, Trope said.

He also said that despite court decisions which declared the draft and Rozelle Rule illegal, Garvey "gave the owners the draft and gave them compensation in exchange for the Rozelle Rule." Many players believe compensation has restricted the movement of free agents.

"A former vice president of the association told me that Garvey does not want free agency for the players,"

Trope added. "That would give too much power to player agents. He wants autocratic control."

"The players need to have the opportunity to voice their opinion as to what they want in the future, not to have Garvey negotiate with owners, then send players something to study for two days, then three days later say it's been ratified."

Trope, contrasting Garvey with Marvin Miller, head of the baseball players' union, said Miller's philosophy is to get as much freedom as possible for his players. "Garvey's is to get power for himself. I think the (NFL) owners say (of Garvey), 'We don't want him; we don't want him; but he's the best thing that ever came down the road for them.'"

Europe to follow German's lead?

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Everybody was wooing the Germans as Olympic leaders began three days of vital talks Monday on the growing threat to the Olympic Games in Moscow.

If West Germany follows President Carter's lead and boycotts the Games because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, most other Western European countries are expected to do likewise. Ignaty Novikov, a deputy Soviet premier and president of the Moscow Olympic Organizing Committee, had an appointment in Lausanne with Willi Daume, president of the German National Olympic Committee and a senior member of the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

Lord Killanin, IOC President, had talks with Berthold Beitz, the other IOC member in West Germany, before coming to Lausanne for meetings of his executive board and the international sports federations.

Observers could only guess at the subjects under discussion in these conversations. But these are some of the basic facts of the Olympic drama now unfolding:

—The Soviets, through their two IOC members, are seeking to get the U.S. Olympic Committee suspended because it has bowed to Carter and is boycotting the Moscow Games. Under the Olympic charter, national Olympic committees are forbidden to yield to any kind of political pressure.

—If USOC were suspended, the 1984 Games in Los Angeles would be in danger, because the committee has signed a contract with the IOC for staging the Games.

—The Russians are reported strongly opposed to any changes in the format of the opening ceremony, scheduled for July 19 in Moscow.

STRAIGHT LINE NOT ALWAYS BEST ROUTE — Johnny Subia watches his putt snake toward the hole in a practice shot taken during the annual Big Spring Muny Partnership Golf Tournament held over the weekend at Comanche Trail Park here. Holding the flag is Sam Subia. Other players on the green are Gary Howell and Bruce Carroll. Howard Stewart and Royce Cox repeated as champions of the 36-hole event.

Something is up, mum's the word

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Everyone in the San Antonio Spurs organization is keeping quiet, but speculation is running rampant here about today's "major" press conference.

The National Basketball Association team called the news conference on Friday, immediately prompting speculation that it involves either a new coach or unhappy NBA scoring champion George Gervin.

The Spurs, mired in a season-long slump, fired Coach Doug Moe with a month left in the season. General Manager Bob Bass took over for the remainder of the season.

The team finished at 41-41, its worst record since coming to San Antonio from Dallas in 1973. San Antonio lost to Houston in the first round of the playoffs.

The Spurs have talked to numerous assistant and head coaches within the NBA. But it is believed they won't hire a new coach until the NBA playoffs end.

Most of the speculation centers around Gervin, who won his third consecutive scoring crown this year, but is unhappy with his contract. Gervin said during the season that he wanted the $350,000-per-year contract renegotiated, pointing out that he makes a third of what some other NBA superstars are paid. That contract has three years remaining.

Spurs President Angelo Drossos refused to negotiate during the season, but met with Gervin's agent, Pat Healy, just after the season ended.

That squabble has not yet been solved. Healy, of Tacoma, Wash., left town April 12 without a new contract and hasn't returned.

There was also speculation that the Spurs might be announcing a trade of Gervin, or some other major trade.

But nobody's talking.

ALL IN A DAY'S WORK — Boston Red Sox Captain Carl Yastrzemski watches as the ball slips past Texas Rangers first baseman Pat Putnam to drive Sox Rick Burleson home for the winning run in the bottom of the 11th inning Sunday afternoon at Fenway Park. The Sox edged past the Rangers 6-5.

Kern's choice: snakes or alligators

BOSTON (AP) — Hey, Jim Kern, maybe 40-year-old Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox is more dangerous than snakes and alligators — at least on the baseball field.

Kern, the American League's "Fireman of the Year" with the Texas Rangers, got off a witty line Friday after walking Boston's Fred Lynn to pitch slugging Jim Rice in the ninth inning.

single off the left field wall. Texas Manager Pat Corrales strolled to the mound to talk to his ace reliever. It was agreed to walk Rice intentionally and try to get Yastrzemski to hit into a double play.

"It showed the old man (Yaz) no respect, also." "When I walked up there, I thought they'd bring in (Sparky) Lyle," Yastrzemski said. "When they didn't, I was looking for a fast ball all the way. When they walked Rice, it gave them more options, a play at the plate or any base."

Kern had good stuff, but they had a couple of breaks." Tom Burgmeier, a 36-year-old left-hander, picked up the victory, his first decision of the season. With two saves, he suddenly has blossomed as Boston's ace in the club's 5-4 record.

Rookie ruins day for Astros

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rudy Law won the Los Angeles Dodgers' center field job in the spring, over veterans Rick Monday and Derrel Thomas.

American League action

Who's on third?

By the Associated Press Bill Castro was determined to go to third base, at all costs. All it cost was the ballgame.

With New York Yankees on first and second and no outs in a 5-5 game Sunday Castro relieved Jerry Augustine for the Milwaukee Brewers. When Bob Watson bunted, Castro pounced on the ball, whirled and fired to third.

Doug DeCinces of the Orioles was thrown out of the game in the sixth inning for charging the mound after being hit by a pitch from Mike Proly.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"IT'S NOT SAFE TO WALK THE STREETS IN THIS NEIGHBORHOOD NO MORE! I RAN INTO MARGARET THREE TIMES TODAY!"

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

"Mommy always ties them double. Have you learned to do that yet?"

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, APR. 22, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Despite minor annoyances in the morning, as the day progresses you will be able to handle whatever mental or business problems that come up in an effective manner.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning may bring minor delays but later you can engage in creative work and accomplish a great deal. Be charming with others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) There are likely to be some problems at home early in the day but later they clear up nicely. Think constructively.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Join with allies who want to help you improve routines and make life easier in the future. Handle business matters wisely.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Gain the help of a higher-up and solve a problem easily. Come to a better understanding with family members.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Good day to obtain the data you need so that you can make fine progress in career matters. Take no chances with your credit.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Hit on the right system for getting bills paid on time. Take pains to handle regular routines in a most efficient manner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Your associates are very cooperative where any plans you want to put across are concerned. Be more active and get ahead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make plans so you know exactly where you are going in your career. Be more willing to agree with mate about changing conditions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are inspired just how to gain your cherished aims, so full speed ahead. Your hunches are accurate now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Handle your work well so that higher-ups will be impressed and you gain more benefits. Guard your reputation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take an active part in new interest that could bring benefits to you and allies. Avoid unnecessary expenditure of money.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Keep busy at routine tasks that could bring added income in the future. Plan repairs to property that are needed.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who understands how to operate in a novel fashion and get better results in chosen endeavor. Be sure to give praise for any work well done, so your progeny has the incentive to do even greater work.

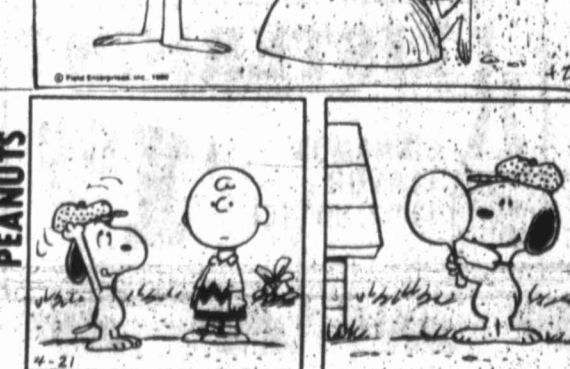

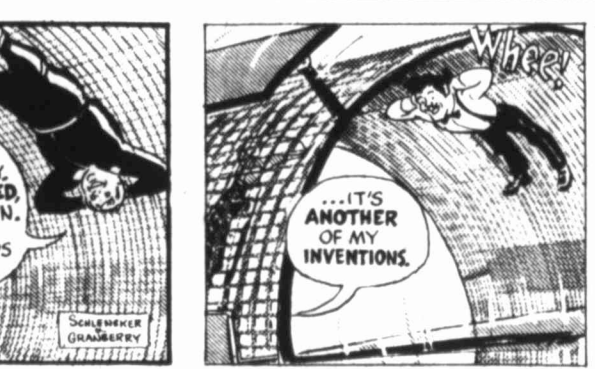

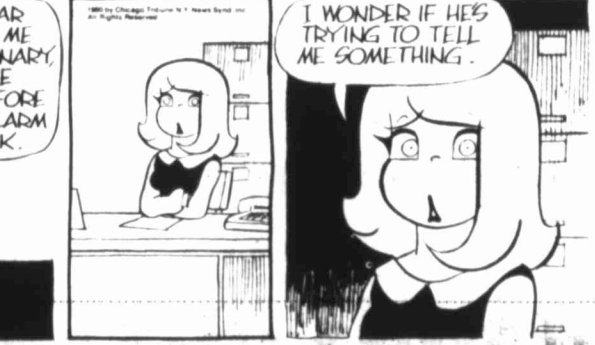

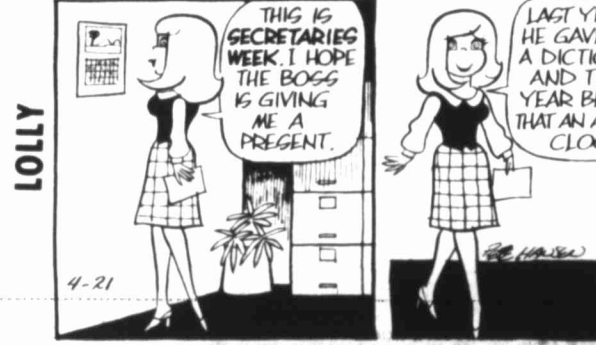

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Early attitudes about America, both pro and con, began taking shape as the first visitors from abroad, curious about the new democratic experiment, arrived here to observe and pass judgment on the young nation.

Common Market meets on sanctions

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — Common Market foreign ministers meet here today to discuss President Carter's call for strong unified action by the U.S. allies to help win the release of the American hostages in Iran.

Carter hopes the meeting will result in a European Economic Community decision to impose economic sanctions on Iran and a break in EEC diplomatic relations with the Tehran government.

Britain has been urging its Common Market partners to give strong backing to Carter's request for tough measures. There has been resistance from some governments, notably France.

But there were reports over the weekend that French leaders pressured by Britain, West Germany and Belgium had agreed to go further than a mere verbal condemnation of Iranian actions.

The possibility of EEC backing for Washington was enhanced after Japanese Foreign Minister Saburo Okita decided to come to Luxembourg and work with the EEC on a common strategy.

Japan has refused to accept Iran's announced increase in the price of its oil from $32.50 to $35 a barrel and faced a cutoff by the Tehran government today.

However, 200,000 of the 530,000 barrels of Iranian oil Japan imports daily will be supplied by Qatar and Mexico under new deals. Japan also has a three-month stockpile and will ask the United States for help.

Iranian oil shipments to Portugal were cut off last week when the Lisbon government stopped trading with Iran in support of Carter's moves.

Other Europeans have been reluctant to impose trade sanctions on Iran because they don't want a cutoff in the 650,000 barrels of Iranian oil they get a day.

Names in the news

MARILYN MONROE SUSAN STRASBERG

Social activist in Iran

BOSTON (AP) — Social activist Dick Gregory is fasting in Tehran and hoping to meet with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on the Americans held hostage there, his wife and a friend in Iran say.

Gregory is impatient with President Carter's handling of the hostage situation, Gregory's wife Lillian said Sunday from her Plymouth, Mass., home.

"I feel for the families of the hostages. I think it's wonderful that my husband went. He's a man of peace, and he feels he can do something for the hostages," she said.

Black singer speaks out

BALTIMORE (AP) — Singer Roberta Flack says black women in America must not only fight sexism and racism but also "the black man who has made it. He will say anything, do anything, if he feels his position is threatened."

Miss Flack, who spoke at Saturday's conference of the Black Women's Consciousness Raising Association, Inc., told her audience, made up mostly of black women, that they would find the going particularly tough in show business.

"Most black women in show business are given the business," said the popular recording artist who is also a former music teacher.

Actors take break in bar

NEW YORK (AP) — The brutal fight scene was over, so what did the actors do? They went into the neighborhood bar to watch a real brawl on television.

Sweat still running off their faces, actors Paul Newman and Danny Aiello dropped into the Valencia Bar in the South Bronx after filming a scene for "Fort Apache: The Bronx." The front of the tavern has been changed to read the "Emerald Bar," which, in the script, is where police hang out after hours.

Newman and Aiello were treated as regulars by the regulars, but turned down offers for a beer. Instead, they watched the Boston Bruins and New York Islanders fight it out on TV in the National Hockey League playoffs during their 15-minute break.

Marilyn Monroe pitied

NEW YORK (AP) — Susan Strasberg offers a view of the magic and sadness of Marilyn Monroe in the second installment of her autobiography in "People" magazine this week.

Strasberg writes that Miss Monroe often stayed with her parents, drama coach Lee Strasberg and his wife, in New York.

Miss Strasberg said that while she "was instantly jealous of her ... body, her blondness, the ease with which she commanded attention," she grew to feel sorry for Miss Monroe.

"One day I awakened to see Marilyn standing nude by the window, bathed in the morning sun, ... I was mesmerized ... She turned as if sensing my gaze. Caught off guard, I blushed and blurted out, 'Marilyn, I wish I were like you.'"

The late actress's response, according to Miss Strasberg, was "Oh, no, Susie. I wish I were like you. I'd love to have your family. People respect you."

Thousands attend shrine dedication

SAN JUAN, Texas (AP) — More than 40,000 persons visited the new shrine to Our Lady of San Juan over the weekend, drawn by the shrine's history and the return of a popular church leader.

Roman Catholic Cardinal Humberto Medeiros of Boston, who was Bishop of Brownsville for five years, celebrated a mass of thanksgiving for more than 5,000 worshippers Sunday.

On Saturday he dedicated the new shrine, replacing the original structure which was destroyed in 1970 when an unemployed teacher committed suicide by smashing an airplane into it.

The priest who rescued a statue of Christ's mother from the burning shrine after the wreck, Father Patricio Dominguez, placed the statue in the new shrine during Saturday's dedication.

Medeiros had returned to South Texas Saturday to help with the dedication and lead Sunday's mass.

Speaking in Spanish, Medeiros received a standing ovation when he told the Sunday congregation, "I feel as if I had never left you."

"This is a day of Thanksgiving to God," he said. "This shrine is a beautiful silent witness in stone to the living."

The new shrine, one of the largest in South Texas, cost more than $5 million.

Several Roman Catholic bishops attended the dedication and mass, including Archbishop Jean Jadot, papal legate to the United States.

"This shrine is a sign of fidelity to the seeds of faith," Jadot said Sunday. "In this solemn hour Pope John Paul II calls upon all here present to be ever more faithful to the church of today."

Iran refuses to load Japanese oil tankers

TOKYO (AP) — Iranian authorities today ended oil shipments to Japan because the six major Japanese oil traders refused to accept a $2.50 price increase, said a spokesman for one of the companies, the Mitsubishi Corp.

The National Iranian Oil Co., the government oil monopoly, informed all six that its Kharg Island loading port would no longer supply them with oil because they had refused the demand to raise the per barrel price to $35, the Japanese Broadcasting Corporation reported.

The Mitsubishi spokesman said the Iranian oil company had refused to authorize the loading at Kharg Island of a tanker chartered by Japanese company.

On Saturday, Iranian Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinefar was quoted by Tehran Radio as saying Iran would not sell oil to any nation that refused its prices. He also told a news conference Iran had recently signed oil contracts with Eastern European countries at the demanded prices.

The Japanese government, which said it had advised the oil companies to reject the price hike for purely economic reasons, today repeated its opposition to paying more for Iranian oil.

U.S. officials, told over the weekend of reports in the Japanese press that the companies would reject the prices, said they would welcome such a decision as an important step in ending the Iran hostage crisis.
