Smoky smell coming from Amarillo wildfires

By LYNDEL MOODY
 Staff Writer and Associated Press

Howard County residents woke up to a acrid smell in the air as a cold front brought smoke into the Permian Basin from large wildfires in the Amarillo area.

According to Howard County Volunteer Fire Chief Tommy Sullivan, the smoke does not pose a danger to the county but he does suggest people with respiratory issues to take precautions.

"If you have children with asthma, I would suggest if you have an air conditioner or a window unit to place it on recycle and not bring in any outside air," he said. "We are just going to have to live with it for the next 24 hours or at least until the winds shift and start blowing it away from us."

The Associated Press reported this morning wildfires are burning in multiple states — Texas, Colorado, Kansas, and Oklahoma — prompting evacuations.

A pair of fires in the Texas Panhandle burned more than 100 square miles. One of the blazes near Amarillo threatened about 150 homes, the Associated Press reports.

A cold front this morning carried in smoke from the Amarillo fire into the Permian Basin and New Mexico, according to a news release from the National Weather Service.

"Residents may smell smoke through the morning, however no fires have been reported in the Permian Basin or southeastern New Mexico," the release stated. "Northeast winds behind the cold front will persist this morning, but should veer around to the east by this afternoon, and likely allow the smell of smoke, or any visible smoke in the air, to dissipate."

According to a report from the Associated Press, in Colorado a fire in rural Logan County burned more than 45 square miles, forcing the evacuation of three schools and threatening as many as 900 homes. The Logan County Emergency Management Office said at least four structures, including three homes, were destroyed.

In Kansas, wind-blown fires, some originating in

Blood drive set for St. Patrick's Day

By AMANDA ELSTON
 Managing Editor

United Blood Services is looking for a whole lot of red in a sea of green next Friday. On Friday, March 17, St. Patrick's Day, United Blood Services (UBS) is teaming up with Big Spring Center for Skilled Care to host a community blood drive.

"This is a new blood drive in that we haven't been there before," said Linda Grace, senior donor recruitment representative. "It is a wonderful facility. We've teamed up with them and they have a lot of things donated for us. It's going to be really cool for the donors and it's on Saint Patrick's Day so I thought we could make it even more fun."

In addition to walking out with the satisfaction of helping local people in need, those donating blood next Friday will receive a St. Patrick's Day t-shirt, a free lunch at the Big Spring Center for Skilled Care, and a special St. Patrick's day prize. According to Grace, participants can choose a leprechaun, numbered one through 12, and depending on which one you pick, you win a prize.

"They win the prize associated with the number on the leprechaun — a McDonald's coupon, or Sonic coupon, or a Mighty Wash car wash coupon," said Grace. "It'll be really fun. So they get those and then they are also in the (contest) for a car wash auto detail from Flores Car Wash and they will also be put in the (contest) for the sold out March 30 Garth Brooks concert in Lubbock."

The contest is open to all of those in the San Angelo region that donate blood to

Gas prices on the rise in Texas

Special to the Herald

Average retail gasoline prices in Texas have risen 1.4 cents per gallon in the past week, averaging $2.10/g yesterday, according to GasBuddy's daily survey of 13,114 gas outlets in Texas. This compares with the national average that has increased 2.4 cents per gallon in the last week to $2.31/g, according to gasoline price website GasBuddy.com.

Including the change in gas prices in Texas during the past week, prices yesterday were 50.9 cents per gallon higher than the same day one year ago and are 3.6 cents per gallon higher than a month ago. The national average has increased 5.0 cents per gallon during the last month and stands 49.5 cents per gallon higher than this day one year ago.

According to GasBuddy historical data, gasoline prices on March 6 in Texas have ranged widely over the last five years: $1.59/g in 2016, $2.24/g in 2015, $3.22/g in 2014, $3.57/g in 2013 and $3.59/g in 2012.

Areas near Texas and their current gas price climate: Midland Odessa- $2.15/g, up 3.9 cents per gallon from last week's $2.11/g; San Antonio- $2.03/g, up 0.4 cents per gallon from last week's $2.03/g; and Austin- $2.07/g, up 0.8 cents per gallon from last week's $2.06/g.

"Gasoline prices are starting to pick up steam as a majority of states see their average rise over last week, a function of the season's theatrics coming into view: refinery maintenance and the transition to cleaner gasoline pumping up prices," said Patrick DeHaan, senior petroleum analyst for GasBuddy.com.

"Some states gas prices may slightly lag the upward trend being seen in 38 states as remaining winter gasoline inventories are purged. However, as we grow closer to Baseball's Opening Day, the nation's motorists will be more likely to strikeout when trying to find $1.99 gas prices, which remain at just 8,000 stations across just handful of states. In a sign of what's to come in some of the nation's largest cities, motorists in Southern California have become the first in the lower 48 states to see the ugly "3" showing up on gas station displays at street level," he added.

Obituaries

Arliss Gerald "Jerry" Rogers

Arliss Gerald "Jerry" Rogers, 83, of Albuquerque, N.M., formerly of Fairview, Texas died Wednesday, March 1, 2017 in Albuquerque. The Rogers family will receive family and friends from 5:00 PM to 7:00 p.m. Wednesday, March 8, 2017 at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home. Funeral Services will be held at 10:00 a.m. Thursday, March 9, 2017 at the Nalley-Pickle & Welch Rosewood Chapel in Big Spring, Texas with Rev. Pat Ray with Prairie View Baptist Church officiating. Interment will follow at Trinity Memorial Park in Big Spring.

Jerry was born December 12, 1933 in Big Spring and graduated from Big Spring High School in 1952. He went on to attend Texas Tech University to pursue a degree in Mechanical Engineering and graduated in 1957 and soon accepted a job with Boeing in Wichita, Kansas. On September 3, 1960, he married his sweetheart, Dorothy Baker, of Ackerly, Texas. In 1961, they moved to Abilene, Texas for Jerry to begin a job with the Corp of Engineers to work on completing the Atlas missile sites until they were turned over to the Air Force in 1962. Their daughter, Sherri, was born in 1962 and shortly thereafter they moved to Irving, Texas where Jerry began working at LTV specializing in hydraulic systems design for aircraft. He was instrumental in working with the team that designed an experimental aircraft to investigate the operational suitability of vertical/short takeoff and landing (V/STOL) transports. Their son, Kelly, was born in 1965 in Irving, Texas. Jerry continued to work at LTV until his father, WJ Rogers, died in 1974 and Jerry and Dorothy made the decision at that time to move back to Big Spring to return to the family farm being the 3rd generation of the Rogers Family Farm, started by his grandparents, J. Thomas and Pearl Rogers. He continued to farm for 26 years and retired in 2000. In retirement, Jerry and Dorothy spent time traveling and visiting with friends and family and Jerry engaged in his various hobbies and interests. Jerry and Dorothy moved to Albuquerque, NM in August 2016 to assisted living where they could be close to their son, Kelly and daughter-in-law, Re-

Jerry was an honorable man who had friends near and far. He had many personal interests and talents such as benchrest rifle shooting, trap shooting, radio control airplanes, woodworking, and working Sudoku puzzles. His adventures provided many unique experiences for his children growing up traveling across the country. He took immense pleasure in volunteering his time and gunsmithing skills to the Howard County 4-H Shooting Club for youth learning the sport and was honored with a special "Friend of 4-H" award. He served on the Board of Directors of the Farmers Home Administration in Stanton and also greatly enjoyed his time spent serving on the Board of Directors for the State National Bank.

Jerry's devotion to his family was always on the forefront of his mind throughout his life. He was a loving husband, caring and guiding father, and a very proud grandfather. He had a love for animals which was evident from a young age with raising award-winning steers and always having pets. He loved his pets and will be missed by their cat, Molly B. He also loved his grand-dogs and cats.

Jerry was a member of the Prairie View Baptist Church. He accepted Jesus as his Lord and Savior at Sherwood Baptist Church in Abilene, Texas.

Jerry is survived by his loving wife of 56 years, Dorothy Rogers; son, Kelly Rogers and daughter-in-law, Renee of Albuquerque, N.M.; daughter, Sherri Rogers Gonzalez of San Marcos, Texas; grandsons, Ian Gonzalez of Dallas, Texas and Adam Gonzalez and wife, Anne of Sugar Land, Texas; brother, Duane Rogers and sister-in-law, Dona, of Godley, Texas; several cousins, nieces and nephews.

Jerry was preceded in death by his parents, William Jackson and Lucy Myrlene (Camp) Rogers; and sister, Juanez Broughton.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorials be made to Prairie View Baptist Church, 1004 W FM 2230, Big Spring, Texas 79720 or Food 2 Kids in care of the First Methodist Church, P. O. Box 1229, Big Spring, Texas 79721.

GOP bill unlikely to settle passionate health care debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's passionate debate about the role of government in providing health care for citizens and paying the costs is unlikely to be settled by the legislation newly revealed by House Republicans.

With Republicans now controlling the White House and both chambers of Congress, the bill would drive government policy down routes long advocated by conservatives. The course correction would take at least two years to get rolling, and probably longer to show definitive results. If it falls short, it would give rise to a fresh set of health care grievances.

The Republican legislation would limit future federal funding for Medicaid, which covers low-income people, about 1 in 5 Americans. And it would loosen rules that former President Barack Obama's law imposed for health plans directly purchased by individuals, while also scaling back insurance subsidies.

Republicans say their solutions would make Medicaid more cost-efficient without punishing the poor and disabled, while spurring private insurers to offer attractive products for the estimated 20 million consumers in the market for individual policies.

But Democrats say the bill would make many people uninsured, shifting costs to states and hospital systems that act as providers of last resort. Individual policy holders might be able to find low-premium plans, only to be exposed to higher deductibles and copayments.

For 1st time, Casey Anthony speaks about case

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Casey Anthony knows that much of the world believes she killed her 2-year-old daughter, despite her acquittal. But nearly nine years later, she insists she doesn't know how the last hours of Caylee's life unfolded.

"Caylee would be 12 right now. And would be a total badass," she told The Associated Press in one of a series of exclusive interviews. "I'd like to think she'd be listening to classic rock, playing sports" and putting up with no nonsense.

But discussing Caylee's last moments, the 30-year-old Anthony spoke in halting, sober tones: "I'm still not even certain as I stand here today about what happened," she said.

"Based off what was in the media" — the story of a woman who could not account for a month in which her child was missing, whose defense involved an accidental drowning for which there was no eyewitness testimony — "I understand the reasons people feel about me. I understand why people have the opinions that they do."

This was the first time Anthony spoke to a news media outlet about her daughter's death or her years since the trial. Her responses were at turns revealing, bizarre and often contradictory, and they ultimately raised more questions than answers about the case that has captivated the nation.

Avalanche strikes French Alps resort of Tignes

PARIS (AP) — An avalanche struck a ski resort in the French Alps on Tuesday morning and authorities launched a search and rescue operation. No casualty figures were immediately given.

The Savoie prefecture said that the avalanche struck the Tignes resort on Tuesday morning. French media reported that several skiers have been caught up in the avalanche, but authorities haven't provided details about potential casualties.

Police in Tignes confirmed they are currently intervening and the local tourism office said the resort has been shut down. TV footage of the resort showed bad weather conditions and poor visibility on the slopes.

Weather services had warned Monday of a high avalanche risk in mountain ranges because of strong winds.

Four snowboarders died last month in another avalanche near the same resort. On Jan. 18, a devastating avalanche buried a hotel in central Italy, killing 29 people.

North Korea, Malaysia ban each other's citizens from leaving

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — North Korea barred Malaysians from exiting its borders and Malaysia followed suit Tuesday, turning ordinary citizens into pawns in the diplomatic battle surrounding the investigation into the bizarre death of North Korean leader Kim Jong Un's half brother.

The tit-for-tat directives come as relations between the two countries disintegrate over the poisoning of Kim Jong Nam in a crowded airport terminal in Kuala Lumpur on Feb. 13.

"This is way out of normal diplomatic practice," Lalit Mansingh, a New Delhi-based scholar and longtime top Indian diplomat, said of North Korea's decision. He could not recall anything similar in recent years, where so many everyday citizens were pulled into a diplomatic standoff.

Although there is growing speculation that North Korea orchestrated the attack, Malaysia has never directly accused Pyongyang. Still, North Korea has slammed the investigation as flawed and called into question Malaysia's autopsy report that found VX nerve agent — a banned chemical weapon — killed Kim.

The North's official Korean Central News Agency said Tuesday that Pyongyang was banning Malaysians from leaving the country "until the safety of the diplomats and citizens of (North Korea) in Malaysia is fully guaranteed through the fair settlement of the case that occurred in Malaysia."

US moves parts of controversial missile defense to SKorea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — U.S. missile launchers and other equipment needed to set up a controversial missile defense system have arrived in South Korea, the U.S. and South Korean militaries said Tuesday, a day after North Korea test-launched four ballistic missiles into the ocean near Japan.

The plans to deploy the Terminal High-Altitude Area Defense system, or THAAD, within this year have angered not only North Korea, but also China and Russia, which see the system's powerful radars as a security threat.

China responded quickly, saying it will take "necessary measures" to protect itself and warning that the U.S. and South Korea should be prepared to bear the consequences.

Washington and Seoul say the system is defensive and not meant to be a threat to Beijing or Moscow. The U.S. military said in a statement that THAAD can intercept and destroy short and medium range ballistic missiles during the last part of their flights.

"Continued provocative actions by North Korea, to include yesterday's launch of multiple missiles, only confirm the prudence of our alliance decision last year to deploy THAAD to South Korea," Adm. Harry Harris, head of the U.S. Pacific Command, said in the statement.

Trump's new travel ban comes without the chaos of first one scant warning and little planning seven days into his presidency, he meant to signal he was a man of action. After the lawsuits, chaos at airports and international criticism, Trump's rewritten travel ban sent a different message: The White House has learned some lessons.

The Trump administration's unveiling of its revised restrictions on travel and refugees was deliberate and cautious, an implicit acknowledgement of some of the unforced errors from the first rollout. The executive order was announced by Trump's Cabinet officials, some of whom felt cut out of consultations on the earlier version. It does not go into effect immediately, giving the world time to assess its impact.

The White House took weeks of consultation with agency heads about how best to withstand expected legal challenges.

The scaled-back order will still face fire from critics. It bars new visas for people from six Muslim-majority countries and temporarily shuts down America's refugee program, affecting would-be visitors and immigrants from Iran, Syria, Somalia, Sudan, Yemen and Libya.

Department of Homeland Security intelligence analysts have questioned the rationale behind it, concluding that citizenship is an "unlikely indicator" of terrorism threats to the United States.

Midland man dies in one-vehicle roll over

Herald Staff Report

ACKERLY — A 48-year-old Midland man was killed in a one-vehicle accident Thursday evening in Martin County.

According to a release from the Department of Public Safety (DPS), Isiaka Falana, 48, was pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Pam Mcanally at the scene of the accident which was located on FM 2002 in Martin County approximately 8 miles west of Ackerly.

The DPS reports that Falana was driving a 2007 Mack Truck Tractor towing a semi-trailer east on FM 2002. The vehicle entered a 90 degree turn at an unsafe speed, lost control and rolled.

Weather conditions were reported clear and dry, the DPS reports

The accident was investigated by Trooper Matthew Rucker and assisted by Sergeant Shawn Baxter, both of Big Spring DPS office.

Currently, United Blood Services is looking for O- and O+ blood types, but all blood types are welcome, according to Grace. The drive will be held in the BloodMobile in front of the Big Spring Center for Skilled Care facility, 3701 Wasson, from 9 a.m. to noon. To sign up ahead of time, which is encouraged, those interested can call 877-UBS-HERO or go to bloodhero.com. Grace encourages those who are signed up ahead of time to complete the UBS questionnaire the day of their appointment for a quicker donation.

"To speed up the donation process, they can fill out the Fast Track questionnaire on the day they donate," said Grace. "It's virtually done. They can do it on their computer or cell phone. It has to be done on the same day. They can print out the bar code when they finish if they are on the computer or if they do it on their phones, they can screenshot the barcode. That'll help save time."

Grace and the staff at the Big Spring Center for Skilled Care are aiming to have at least 30 people donate.

"It'll be great to see people out there," said Grace. "It's pretty spectacular."

Donors must be at least 16 years old, weight at least 110 pounds, and be in good health to donate. Donors between 16 and 22 must meet additional height and weight requirements. 16 year old donors must present a minor donor permit formed signed by a parent or guardian. The permit can be found online at www.unitdbloodservices.org.

Body found in rubble of Dallas condo complex razed by fire

DALLAS (AP) — Searchers have found a body in the rubble of Dallas condominium complex that was destroyed in a weekend fire.

Dallas Fire-Rescue spokesman Jason Evans says in a statement that the body was found early Monday. It was discovered in the area of an apartment where a woman missing since the fire had lived.

Evans says the body hasn't yet been positively identified by the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

Authorities had previously said an elderly resident of the complex was unaccounted for in the aftermath of the fire that destroyed the four-story structure.

A search was conducted over the weekend for the woman.

More than 100 firefighters battled the blaze that broke out around 11:30 p.m. Friday in the 60-unit complex.

The cause of the fire has not been revealed.

New owners of Houston home find human remains in attic wall

HOUSTON (AP) — The new owners of a Houston bungalow have discovered human remains in an attic wall that may belong to the previous owner who went missing at least two years ago.

The residents were moving into the home Saturday when they found a gap in the wall and discovered bones.

Authorities are trying to determine if the remains are those of 61-year-old Mary Cerruti.

A bank foreclosed on her home in 2015 after mortgage payments had stopped. Liens on the property were settled, the house was cleaned out and it was later placed on the market.

Police Detective Jason Fay tells the Houston Chronicle that it's not clear if the victim was killed and placed in the wall, or may have tripped and fallen into the space.

Transgender student complains after remark by teacher's aide

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A North Texas transgender student has filed a complaint with her school district saying a teacher's aide was insensitive when the aide questioned the student's use of a women's bathroom.

KDFW-TV reports (<http://bit.ly/2m8i2AH>) that 16-year-old Isly Valdez and her mother have spoken with Castleberry school district officials about Wednesday's confrontation.

Valdez, who's transitioning from a boy to a girl, says she and other students were at Tarrant County College for a class when she was approached by the aide.

The teen says the aide made clear she disapproved of Valdez using the women's bathroom because the teen was born a boy.

A district administrator declined to comment.

President Donald Trump has revoked a prior directive by former President Barack Obama advising public schools to let transgender students use bathrooms consistent with their gender identity.

4 Bandidos gang members arrested in 2006 death of Texas man

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Four members of the Bandidos motorcycle gang have been indicted on charges they conspired to kill a man who was attempting to launch a Texas chapter of the Hell's Angels in Austin.

Federal authorities say the four include 47-year-old Johnny Romo, who holds a national position with the gang. The charges against him include murder in aid of racketeering.

Authorities say Romo and the others conspired to kill Anthony Benesh in a 2006 sniper attack as he stood outside an Austin restaurant.

Prosecutors say the Bandidos didn't want a rival gang to diminish their power and territory, and had threatened Benesh against starting a chapter.

The four men were indicted and taken into custody Thursday. It's not known if Romo has an attorney to answer the charges.

New Exxon chief enters the market, cautiously

In this Wednesday, March 1, 2017, photo, Exxon Mobil Chairman & CEO Darren Woods sits for an interview on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange. New CEO Woods is a veteran of the more cautious refining side of the oil business who is likely to focus relentlessly on controlling costs.

By DAVID KOENIG

AP Business Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Darren Woods, the new CEO of Exxon Mobil, is a veteran of the more cautious refining side of the oil business who is likely to focus relentlessly on controlling costs.

Woods may take a more hesitant approach to deal-making than his predecessor, Rex Tillerson, who hailed from the more swashbuckling exploration side and famously did business with Russian President Vladimir Putin.

It's unclear whether Woods will be any more successful than Tillerson in achieving peace with environmental critics. The early signals are mixed.

Woods was little known outside the company even after emerging as Tillerson's heir apparent. Two months after taking over, Woods is making his first public rounds, meeting with investors last week and speaking Monday at a major energy conference in Houston.

Woods, 52, joined Exxon in 1992 and has spent most of his career in chemicals and refining, the so-called downstream part of the business.

"There is a different psychology in downstream than there is in oil and gas wildcatting," said Cowen analyst Sam Margolin. "Downstream is very much about managing costs and trying to get the most out of the least effort."

Tillerson left Woods plenty to work on. Exxon Mobil Corp. earned a record $45.2 billion in 2008 and nearly matched that in 2012. With oil prices slumping, profit has tumbled, falling to $7.8 billion last year — the company's smallest gain since 1998.

Along the way, Exxon lost its coveted AAA credit rating. Lower oil prices forced it to write down assets. At Exxon's size, replacing oil reserves is always challenging.

Woods also faces pressure from shareholders to protect the dividend and revive share buybacks. At last week's investor event in New York, he vowed to grow dividends and buy back stock when possible.

Woods detailed a growth plan that relies heavily on drilling in the Permian Basin of Texas and New Mexico and the Bakken shale formation in North Dakota, balancing that with big, long-term projects around the world.

After spending $19 billion in 2016, Exxon plans to invest $22 billion in the business this year and raise that to an average of $25 billion a year from 2018 through 2020. Still, those budgets look disciplined in comparison to the freewheeling years of 2010 through 2015, when spending topped $30 billion every year.

Woods spoke to investors only briefly about the company's Russian operations, which became a controversy for Tillerson during his cabinet-confirmation process. Woods indicated Exxon is confident about the prospects for its huge Sakhalin project on Russia's eastern coast. Other work, which was stopped by sanctions imposed after Russia annexed Crimea, will be re-examined if sanctions are lifted, he said.

It's difficult to judge the style of a new CEO right away. Most grow into the role over time. In New York, Woods was careful and scripted. He looked down as he read a long speech, remembering occasionally to look up at the audience.

Wolfe Research analyst Paul Sankey contrasted Woods' "owl-ish" demeanor with the "imperial and intimidating" force of Lee Raymond, the longtime CEO who preceded Tillerson.

Raymond could be gruff and abrasive. He would seem dismissive of analysts, reporters or shareholders who asked questions that he considered ill-informed or combative. In contrast, Woods answered a range of questions in a soothing, matter-of-fact tone, which was easier because none of the questioners were particularly critical or skeptical of the company's actions.

That won't be true in May, when Woods presides over the annual shareholder meeting that is often notable for activists who denounce Exxon for, as they see it, obstructing action against climate change. The activists say they're still trying to figure out the new CEO.

"He is an Exxon Mobil lifer who flew under the radar, but he seems to be following in the footsteps of Rex Tillerson," said Kathy Mulvey, an official at the Union of Concerned Scientists. "His line on climate change seems pretty similar."

In a blog last month, Woods acknowledged that climate change poses risks and that business, governments and consumers should address them, and he has repeated Exxon's support for a carbon tax. Then in an interview with Forbes, he said that fossil fuels bring great benefits and are needed to raise living standards for poor people around the world.

Mulvey, whose group is aiding state investigations into Exxon, said Woods is perpetuating a false choice — we can either continue burning fossil fuels or leave many people in poverty.

Voters await economic revival in a part of pro-Trump America

By CLAIRE GALOFARO

Associated Press

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, Wis. (AP) — She tugged 13 envelopes from a cabinet above the stove, each one labeled with a different debt: the house payment, the student loans, the vacuum cleaner she bought on credit.

Lydia Holt and her husband tuck money into these envelopes with each paycheck to whittle away at what they owe. They both earn about $10 an hour and, with two kids, there are usually some they can't fill. She did the math; at this rate, they'll be paying these same bills for 87 years.

In 2012, Holt voted for Barack Obama because he promised her change, but she feels that change hasn't reached her here. So last year she chose a presidential candidate unlike any she'd ever seen, the billionaire businessman who promised to help America, and people like her, win again.

Many of her neighbors did, too — so many that for the first time in more than 30 years, Crawford County, Wisconsin, a sturdy brick in the once-mighty Big Blue Wall, abandoned the Democratic Party and that wall crumbled. The rural county lent Donald Trump 3,844 votes toward his win. More came from formerly blue counties to the north and to the south, and on and on. Some 50 counties stretching 300 miles down the Mississippi River — through Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois — transformed in one election season into Trump Country.

They voted for Trump for an array of reasons, and the list of grievances they hope he now corrects is long and exacting: stagnant wages, the cost of health care, a hard-to-define feeling that things are not getting better, at least not for people like them.

Here in Crawford County, residents often recite two facts about their hometown, the first one proudly: It is the second-oldest community in the state. The next is that it's also one of the poorest.

There are no rusted-out factories to embody this discontent. The main street of Prairie du Chien butts up to the Mississippi River and bustles with tourists come summer. Pickup trucks crowd parking lots at the 3M plant and Cabela's distribution center where hundreds work. Just a few vacant storefronts hint at the seething resentment that life still seems harder here than it should.

In this place that astonished America when it helped hand Trump the White House, many of those who chose him greeted the frenetic opening acts of his presidency with a shrug. Immigration is not their top concern, and so they watched with some trepidation as Trump signed orders to build a wall on the Mexican border and bar immigrants from seven Muslim countries, sowing chaos around the world.

Among them is a woman who works for $10.50 an hour in a sewing factory, who still admires Obama, bristles at Trump's bluster, but can't afford health insurance. And the dairy farmer who thinks Trump is a jerk — "somebody needs to get some Gorilla Glue and glue his lips shut" — but has watched his profits plummet and was willing to take the risk.

There's a man who owns an engine repair shop and struggles to keep the lights on, and a bartender who cringes when he sees "Made in China" printed on American goods.

There's also Holt, who makes $400 a week as a lawyer's assistant and whose husband doesn't do much better at a car parts store. She is enthusiastic that Trump started quickly doing the things he said he would, because she worries that by the time their sons grow up there will be nothing left for them here.

In this corner of middle America, in this one, small slice of the nation that sent Trump to Washington, they are watching and they are waiting, their hopes pinned on his promised economic renaissance. And if four years from now the change he pledged hasn't found them here, the people of Crawford County said they might change again to someone else.

Katherine Cramer, a political science professor at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, coined a name for what's happened in her state's rural pockets: the politics of resentment.

She spent years traveling to small towns and talking to people at diners and gas stations. And when she asked which political party best represented them, their answers almost always sounded something like, "Are you crazy lady? Neither party is representing people around here."

President Donald Trump is sworn in during a live broadcast of the inauguration as Denny Riebe, from right, Doug Dickman, Scott Reilly, and Bill Winter, play cards at the Sawmill Saloon in Prairie du Chien, Wis., Friday, Jan. 20, 2017. The men who meet here for cards every morning and call themselves the Corner of Superior Knowledge are made up democrats, Trump supporters and another described as agnostic. The campaign vitriol that has cleaved apart the country has not left the same scars here, a place where talking politics is considered impolite, where wives reported not knowing how their own husbands voted and husbands said they never asked their wives.

"People have been looking for a politician who is going to change that, going to listen to them, do it differently," she said. "People a lot of times don't have specifics about what that means. They just know that however government is operating currently is not working for them."

In Crawford County, with just 16,000 residents, that dissatisfaction stems from feeling left behind as other places prospered.

There are plenty of jobs in retail or on factory floors, but it's hard to find one that pays more than $12 an hour. Ambitious young people leave and don't come back. Rural schools are dwindling, and with them a sense of pride and purpose.

Still, much of the economic anxiety is based not on measurable decay, but rather a perception that life is decaying, said Jim Bowman, director of the county's Economic Development Corporation.

There are higher-paying jobs — in welding, for example — but companies can't find enough workers with the right training, Bowman said. The county's $44,000-a-year median household income is $9,000 less than the state's, but the cost of living is lower, too.

Just 15 percent of adults have college degrees, half the national average, and yet the ratio of people living in poverty is below the country as a whole.

Crawford County and all the other places in the county cluster along the Mississippi River that switched from Obama to Trump rank roughly in the middle on a scale of American comfort in one economic think tank's county-by-county appraisal of community distress.

Yet for many here, it doesn't feel that way.

"If you ask anybody here, we'll all tell you the same thing: We're tired of living like this. We've been railroaded, run over by the politicians and run over by laws," said Mark Berns, leaning through the service window in the small-engine repair shop downtown that he can barely keep open anymore. He drives a 14-year-old truck with 207,000 miles on it because he doesn't make enough profit to buy a new one.

Berns watched Trump's first days in office half-hopeful, half-frightened.

"He jumps on every bandwagon there is. It's a mess," he said, bemoaning what he described as a quantity-over-quality, "sign, sign, sign" approach to governing. "I just hope we get the jobs back and the economy on its feet, so everybody can get a decent job and make a decent living, and have that chance at the American dream that's gone away over the past eight or 10 years.

"I'm still optimistic," he said, sighing. "I hope I'm not wrong."

Marlene Kramer gets to work before the sun comes up and spends her days sitting at a sewing machine, stitching sports uniforms for $10.50 an hour.

Kramer, who voted twice for Obama, used to watch Trump on "Celebrity Apprentice." "I said to myself, 'Ugh, I can't stand him.'" When he announced his candidacy, she thought it was a joke. "Then my husband said to me, 'Just think, everything he touches seems to turn to money.'" And she changed her mind.

She's 54, and she's worked since she was 14, all hard jobs: feeding cows, pulling weeds, standing all day on factory floors. Now it's the sewing shop, where she's happy and gets to sit. But there's no health insurance.

Her bosses, brothers Todd and Scott Yeomans, opened the factory 12 years ago. They said they're trying to do the right thing by making sportswear with American-made fabrics and American labor. But they compete against factories overseas.

They'd like to offer insurance. The other day, a trusted worker quit for a job with benefits. But they've run the numbers and it would cost $200,000 a year — far more than they can spend.

Kramer said she's glad the Affordable Care Act has helped millions get insurance, but it hasn't helped her.

She and her husband were stunned to find premiums over $1,000 a month. Her daughter recently moved into their house with her five children, so there's no money to spare. They opted to pay the penalty of $2,000, and pray they don't get sick until Trump, she hopes, keeps his promise to replace the law with something better.

Kramer thinks Obama did as good a job as he could in the time he had. She admires him, still, but went with Trump. That doesn't seem incongruous to her, just a simple calculation of results.

"His things aren't going the way we want them here," she said, "so we needed to go in another direction."

Across town, Robbo Coleman leaned over the bar he tends and described a similar political

"That's not true if we develop alternatives," she said.

State officials in New York and Massachusetts are investigating whether Exxon hid its knowledge of climate change for financial gain. The company denies the accusations, which it says are politically motivated, and it has fought back aggressively in the courts.

Environmentalists credit the company for adding a climate scientist to its board in January — activist shareholders had pushed for the move. That was offset, however, when a human-rights scholar resigned last month from an Exxon advisory panel — she was angered by Exxon's tactics against critics after Woods became CEO.

Over the weekend, the Forsan Lady Buffaloes powerlifting team, composed of two women's Toni Munoz (left) and Jaden Wilson (right), competed in the Region 1 women's powerlifting meet where both girls earned medals. Munoz had a fourth place finish in her weight class, and Wilson placed second in hers. This performance by Wilson qualifies her to compete in the THSWPA State Powerlifting Meet in Waco, Texas which will take place Friday, March 17th.

Forsan falls short in back-and-forth battle against Stamford

By MARISSA LOFTIN
Sports Editor

The Forsan varsity baseball team passed the lead back and forth with Stamford last night in a hard fought battle, but came up short losing to the Bulldogs 8-6.

The Buffaloes were able to start the game out strong at the plate and by the end of the first inning, Forsan had a 4-1 lead over Stamford.

"We started out hitting the ball pretty well," said head coach Stephen East. "Stamford's first pitcher was throwing the ball hard and we were able to make some good contact."

The Bulldogs scored three runs in the sixth inning, taking a 5-4 lead over Forsan.

In the bottom of the seventh, the Buffaloes were able to tie the game up 6-6, sending the game into extra innings to determine a victor.

"After that inning, our bats went cold," said

East. "It is hard to beat Stamford if you are not putting the ball in play."

In the top of the 8th, the Bulldogs added two runs to their score, but Forsan was not able to respond, bringing the final score to an 8-6 Bulldog Victory.

"Stamford is a good team," said East. "We had our chances to win, but it just didn't go our way tonight."

Through the struggle to stay ahead of the Bulldogs, the Buffaloes were still able to do some great things. They racked up a total of seven hits for the night, while the Bulldogs got off ten in this high scoring match up.

Brycson Pineda led Forsan with one double and a single in two at bats.

Forsan tore up the base paths as two players stole at least two bases each.

The Buffaloes next game will be at Hamlin this Saturday at 1:00 p.m.

AMENDED SUMMONS (FAMILY LAW)

NOTICE TO RESPONDENT (Name):
Deborah Fenicle

You have been sued. Read the information below and on the next page

Petitioner's name is:
Mark Fenicle

Case
FL11-008296

You have 30 calendar days after this Summons and Petition are served on you to file a Response (form FL-120) at the court and have a copy served on the petitioners. A letter, phone call, or court appearance will not protect you.

If you do not file your Response on time, the court may make orders affecting your marriage or domestic partnership, your property, and custody of your children. You may be ordered to pay support and attorney fees and costs.

For legal advice, contact a lawyer immediately. Get help finding a lawyer at the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp), at the California Legal Services website (www.lawhelpca.org), or by contacting your local county

NOTICE-RESTRAINING ORDERS ARE ON PAGE 2: These restraining orders are effective against both spouses or domestic partners until petition is dismissed, a judgment is entered, or the court makes further orders. They are enforceable anywhere in California by any law enforcement officer who has received or seen a copy of them.

FEE WAIVER: If you cannot pay the filing fee, ask the clerk for a fee waive form. The court may order you to pay back all or part of the fees and cost that the court waived for you or the other party.

The name and address of the court are

Nevada County Superior Court
201 Church Street
Nevada City, CA 95959

The name, address, and telephone number of petitioner's attorney, or the petitioner without an attorney, are:
SUSAN M. CORCORAN
1740 East Main Street, Suite 101
Grass Valley, CA 95945
(530)264-7014

STANDARD FAMILY LAW RESTRAINING ORDERS

Starting immediately, you and your spouse or domestic partner are restrained from:

- removing the minor children of the parties from the state or applying for a new or replacement passport for those minor children without prior written consent of the other party or an order of the court;
- cashing borrowing against, canceling, transferring, disposing of, or changing the beneficiaries of any any insurance or other coverage, including life, health, automobile, and disability, held for the benefit of the parties and their minor children.
- transferring, encumbering, hypothecating, concealing, or in any way disposing, of any property, real or personal, whether community, quasi-community, or separate, without the written consent of the other party or an order of the court. Before revocation of a nonprobate transfer can take effect or a right of survivorship to property can be eliminated, notice of the change must be filed and served on the other party.
- creating a nonprobate transfer or modify a nonprobate transfer in a manner that affects the disposition of property subject to the transfer, without the written consent of the other party or an order of the court. Before revocation of a nonprobate transfer can take effect or a right of survivorship to property can be eliminated, notice of the change must be filed and served on the other party.

You must notify each other of any proposed extraordinary expenditures at least five business days prior to incurring these extraordinary expenditures and account to the court for all extraordinary expenditures made after these restraining orders are effective. However, you may use community property, quasi-community property, or your own separate property to pay an attorney to help you or to pay court costs.

NOTICE-ACCESS TO AFFORDABLE HEALTH INSURANCE: Do you or someone in your household need affordable health insurance? If so, you should apply for Covered California. Covered California can help reduce the cost you pay towards high quality, affordable health care. For more information, visit www.coveredca.com. Or call Covered California at 1-800-300-1606.

WARNING-IMPORTANT INFORMATION

California law provides that, for the purposes of division of property upon dissolution of a marriage or domestic partnership or upon legal separation, property acquired by the parties during marriage or domestic partnership in joint in joint form is presumed to be community property. If either party to this action should die before the jointly held community property is divided, the language in the deed that characterizes how title is held (i.e., joint tenancy, tenants in common, or community property) will be controlling, and not the community property presumption. You should consult your attorney if you want the community property presumption to be written into the recorded title to the property.

MATHIS

Sensitive Cancer
Moon

We often make the kind of mistakes that wouldn't even be counted as such under different circumstances with other people. Just because someone takes offense doesn't mean we're being offensive. This (overly?) sensitive Cancer moon suggests that we smooth things over regardless of who is to blame, only because it will make life easier.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You will love the work you're doing and may actually choose to work perpetually as a result.

Your loved ones who are similarly happy at work will understand. The others, not so much!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). If you were to summon all your powers of creativity (and they are mighty strong today, to be sure) to redesign yourself, who would the new you be? Don't let the ones who knew you before hold you back. They'll adjust.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Progress and struggle go together. Some would argue that they must -- that there is no progress without struggle. Then again, an inspiring influence can make the struggle seem mild, even satisfying!

CANCER (June 22-July 22). The love experts have spoken: Don't fall in love with someone who flirts with everyone. If you disregard this advice (or have received it too late), then at least take comfort in the fact that whatever happens next, it's nothing personal.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your life will be better through the magic of delegation. But this only works if you do it the right way: Joyfully hand over the task; let go; walk away; don't look back.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). When fantasy relationships become reality, illusions soon dissolve. The bubble of specialness around the situation may pop. And if you still like each other after that, this relationship has real potential.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). When you can be your less-than-ideal self with someone, it means you are closer with that person than you are with the people you feel the need to constantly impress. The question today is: How close do you really want to be?

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Containing passionate feelings is, as a rule, hard for humans. You're the exception to this rule. You can stay cool even when there's a volcano going off in your emotional body. It's an amazing trick you'll practice today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You wonder if you may have under-loved someone who deserved a better quality of attention from you. You may not get the chance to rectify this with the same person, but you'll pay it forward.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Maybe there really is a time for everything, and yet you can count on the fact that it's seldom a (SET ITAL) convenient (END ITAL) time or one that's under your control -- another argument for doing instead of waiting.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Being the different one in the group isn't bad, but it does mean you'll have to acquire more credibility and skills than the others. It won't be hard. The hardest part is accepting the injustice. Once you do, the rest is cake.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Since most of the relationships in your life are involuntary (family, neighbors, co-workers, etc.), it makes sense for you to be very choosy about the ones that are voluntary (friends and more). Exercise your right to be picky

Annie's Mailbox

Stay With a Deceiver?

Dear Annie: I'm torn and hoping an objective voice will help me reach a decision.

I recently found out that my girlfriend of three years has been seeing another guy behind my back for the past couple of months. I had been growing suspicious for some time; she has been distant and has not been physical at all lately. Then the other day, when she was in the shower, I gave in to temptation and snooped through her cellphone. I found that she'd been texting with some guy the night before about meeting up at a bar. She had told me she was going out for a girls night. I immediately confronted her. At first, she was furious with me for going through her phone, but she finally broke down and admitted that she'd been hanging out with this guy from work one-on-one. She says it wasn't anything physical, although he's been flirtatious with her. She begged me to forgive her for keeping a secret from me, and she promises never to do so again. I don't know whether to believe the part about their not being physical, but I do believe she really regrets the relationship. She says she wants to work things out between us. I love her a lot, and I am really torn up. I don't feel ready to end things. Would I be nuts to stay with her? -- Aching in My Chest

Dear Aching: I'll answer your question with another question: Why do you want to stay? If you really see a future with this woman, then OK, give her another shot. You'd both have to work together to build a strong foundation of honesty and trust. You'd need to stop snooping on her; she'd need to stop giving you reasons to feel as if you have to snoop. (And if she were to break your trust again, that would be it. I'm a big believer in second chances, but not so much in third chances.)

But I've a feeling that the real reason you're avoiding a breakup is you're afraid to let go. If that's the case, it's time to end things so you can start the process of beginning again. You cannot simply wish that pain in your chest away.

Dear Annie: I have actually found comfort in reading the letters from grandparents and others who have shared their dismay in never receiving thank-you notes. At least I'm not the only one who has had this problem.

I tried talking to the kids and the parents, to no avail. The parents even tried to "explain" that their kids were too busy with activities. I was appalled. So I went to plan B. During one visit, when everyone was at one dining room table, I passed out thank-you cards to all the grandkids. The envelopes were pre-addressed to my husband and me and stamped. I also gave them an additional box of thank-you notes to be used for other gift givers. I shared the importance of sending thank-you notes whenever they receive a gift. I then advised that they were all on permanent probation. No "thank you" means no future gifts -- end of story. I give them five days after receipt of a gift to send a note. This has worked.

Of course, their mother thinks I am a nag and old-fashioned. I think I'm teaching my grandkids an important life lesson, and shame on their parents for not doing the same. But now I enjoy notes from my grandkids, and some of them are even being more thoughtful and giving in other ways. -- C.A. in Sarasota, Fla.

Dear C.A.: You are indeed teaching them an important life lesson, one they'll thank you for when they're older.

Opening lead — ten of diamonds.
A conscientious declarer always searches for ways of increasing his chances to make the contract without increasing the risk of defeat. Anytime declarer is able to add, say, 10 or 20 percent to a 50 percent chance, he is doing his job properly.
Take this deal where East wins the diamond lead with the ace and returns a diamond to South's king. Declarer must now determine how best to try to make the rest of the tricks.
On the surface, the slam appears to depend entirely on guessing which of two finesses to take. If East has the queen of spades, the winning play is to lead a spade to the jack. But if West has the guarded queen of spades, the only chance is to finesse the queen of clubs instead, hoping West has the king. If he does, South can then park his losing spade on the ace of clubs.

Which finesse should declarer attempt? The answer is that since a second finesse will not be necessary if the first succeeds, South can give himself an extra chance by first trying to drop the missing high honor in one of the two suits.
Obviously, the best chance of dropping the critical honor lies in spades, where only six cards are missing. There is about an 18 percent probability that the queen will fall doubleton or singleton when the A-K are played, and this additional opportunity should not be ignored.
Accordingly, after winning the diamond return at trick two, declarer should draw trumps and then cash the A-K of spades. If the queen does not fall, South plans to eventually try the club finesse as his last resort. In the actual case, though, West's queen appears on the second round, and the slam comes rolling home.
Observe that if declarer attempts either finesse without first cashing the A-K of spades, he goes down.

Tomorrow: A vital defensive principle.

TRUMP

about-face. He held up an ink pen, wrapped in plastic stamped "Made in China."

"I don't see why we can't make pens in Prairie du Chien or in Louisville, Kentucky, or in Alabama or wherever," said Coleman. "Trump brought something to the table that I haven't heard or seen before. And if it doesn't turn out, then, hey, at least we tried."

Coleman doesn't love Trump's moves to build a wall or ban certain immigrants — all Americans descended from immigrants, he said, including his own relatives, who migrated from Germany too many generations ago to count. But he's frustrated that other politicians stopped listening to working people like him.

"We've got to give him some time," he said of Trump. "He's not Houdini."

Even some rural Wisconsin Democrats agreed with Coleman's assessment, and think their party's leaders are among those who stopped paying attention to those just trying to get by. On the same day that Trump took the oath of office, a group of them huddled in the back room of a tavern, still trying to grasp how the election went awry.

Bob Welsh met Hillary Clinton at a rope line in Iowa and asked her to visit Wisconsin. But she didn't come a single time during her campaign against Trump, and Welsh thinks that confirmed in the minds of many that Democrats are disinterested in white working people.

Welsh wears flannel shirts and suspenders. He grew up on a farm, worked as a herdsman, and drove a school bus until he was 76 years old. He's 78 now, and knows his neighbors as kind, hard-working people, and could barely believe they voted for a man he finds reprehensible. But the left-right, blue-red vitriol that has cleaved apart the country has not left the same scars here, where wives reported not knowing how their own husbands voted and husbands said they never asked their wives.

Welsh said he hopes Trump finds a way to keep his promise to build his friends better lives.

"If he does that then he'll change my mind," he said. "And I'll be the first to admit it."

Bernard Moravits hosed the mud and cow dung off the boots pulled up over his jeans and headed for his truck, to drive to town to talk to a banker about keeping his farm afloat.

Moravits — everyone calls him Tinker — works on his farm outside of town at least 12 hours every day, and usually a lot longer. He diversified to minimize risk and has dairy and beef cows, and acre after acre of corn, beans, alfalfa.

"You don't hit a home run that way, but you don't get your ass kicked either," he said. "But this year could be the ass-kicking year."

The price of milk and agricultural goods has plummeted, and it's hard to keep things running.

Change is what he looked to Obama for and now expects from Trump. He wants the president to reduce red tape and renegotiate trade deals to benefit American farmers. And he hopes people make more money and spend more money, which eventually trickles down to him.

"I think he's a shrewd businessman," he said. "He's been broke several times. He keeps bouncing back, and he knows how big business works."

He has several choice words for Trump's move to build "his stupid wall." Moravits employs Hispanic workers who have been with him 15 years. He built them apartments. He trusts them to do a dirty, difficult job that he says white people aren't willing to do.

"A lot of people don't treat them like people," he grumbled.

Unlike many transfixed by Trump's presidency, Moravits doesn't stay up-to-the-minute on the news. In the morning, he checks the agriculture prices and the weather. As protests over Trump's immigration ban raged for days, Moravits wasn't paying attention.

"The play-by-play don't mean bullshit," he said. "It's like watching the Super Bowl. What counts is how it ends."

He took over this farm at 18 years old, when his father died of an aneurysm while milking cows. He said he plans to die here, too. He'll retire when "they close the casket lid."

But if nothing changes and changes soon he might have to borrow against his equity.

Moravits isn't sure Trump is going to "Make America Great Again" for farmers. But he feels he had to take the gamble.

"He might have us in a war in two weeks," he said. "We'll come back here in six months, drink a 30-pack of Busch Light and talk, because no one knows now what's gonna happen."

He laughed, then shrugged and pantomimed rolling the dice.

Homes damaged as severe storms, tornadoes hit Midwest

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A severe storm system pummeled parts of the Midwest overnight with tornadoes, huge hailstones and powerful winds, damaging dozens of buildings and injuring at least 10 people in Missouri.

The Storm Prediction Center in Norman, Oklahoma, received reports of 32 tornadoes in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Illinois late Monday and early Tuesday. Powerful winds extended as far south as the Ozark Mountains in Arkansas, where a post office and church were damaged, and as far north as Wisconsin, where trees were downed.

The Kansas City area sustained widespread damage, and crews planned to survey and assess the damage early Tuesday.

Dan Hawblitzel, a National Weather Service

meteorologist based in Pleasant Hill, Missouri, said there were corridors of significant damage in Oak Grove east of Kansas City, Smithville north of Kansas City and the Kansas suburbs of Leawood and Olathe.
