Gemayel seeks to cancel withdrawal pact

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — With his U.S.-trained army falling apart, President Amin Gemayel today was reported ready to scrap Lebanon's troop withdrawal pact with Israel to avert the collapse of his administration.

Beirut's leading newspapers, the independent An-Nahar and leftist As-Safir, said Gemayel's decision came after anti-government militiamen forced his army out of the coastal highway linking Beirut with Israeli-occupied southern Lebanon.

Druse insurgents capped a surprise offensive Tuesday by rolling down the hills from a mountain corridor they took from the army to link up with Shiite Moslem militia allies in west Beirut, the Moslem half of the Lebanese capital.

The overnight hookup was at a coastal highway intersection just south of the U.S. Marine base at Beirut airport and near a beachside hotel in suburban Khalde where Israel and Lebanon signed their U.S.-mediated agreement May 17. As a result, the Marine base was ringed on three sides by anti-government forces.

The newspapers said Gemayel was discussing with Lebanon's elder statesmen the political and legal process needed to cancel the accord — whether it should be done by parliament or in a conference of the nation's top Moslem and Christian leaders.

As-Safir said Gemayel would probably request a special session of parliament to vote on whether to scrapping the accord, as demanded by Syria and Lebanese opposition forces. An-Nahar said the president also would request that a United Nations peacekeeping force replace the current multinational force in Beirut.

On Tuesday, Gemayel paid an unexpected visit to northern Lebanon and met with former President Suleiman Franjieh, a Christian allied with some of Gemayel's main Moslem opponents. The president later met with his father, Pierre Gemayel, leader of the rightist Christian Phalange Party.

The May 17 accord, viewed as the major obstacle to reconciliation among the rival factions in Lebanon's civil war, provides for withdrawal of Israeli troops in southern Lebanon in return for a security arrangements designed to prevent guerrilla attacks.

Navy secretary's remarks draw fire of their own

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy Secretary John Lehman, in hot water over his remarks about the U.S. shelling of Lebanon, is one of the most outspoken of the nation's civilian military chiefs even though his job is outside the chain of command and removed from operations and strategy.

The assertive, 41-year-old Lehman was prodded Tuesday, none too gently, into repudiating an earlier statement that conflicted with the Reagan administration's current policy line on using naval firepower in Lebanon.

Lehman had told reporters "there's very definitely been a shift in emphasis" to make clear the U.S. Navy will provide supporting fire to the tottering Lebanese government forces, not just for American Marines and the U.S. Embassy in Beirut.

Not so, retorted White House spokesman Larry Speakes. He contended U.S. Navy guns had been shooting at Syrian-controlled positions only to protect Americans in and around Beirut.

Hours later, after Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger gave Lehman a sharp lecture and other administration officials also jumped on him, the Navy secretary recanted in a formal statement, bringing him back on the approved administration track.

Lehman has been one of the most outspoken and visible civilian Navy chiefs since he took over that office three years ago.

Kemp presents 'game plan' at area producers' meeting

Jack Kemp

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Jack Kemp still displays that charged-up energy he used to have before playing a football game, but now he's using it for the game of politics.

He has his game plan that calls for lower interest rates and unemployment, a block of Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker's policies, a play for more productivity with a goal of seeing the deficits eliminated and the economy on a stable footing. That plan could also include women on the political field.

Kemp, a congressman from New York and longtime proponent of the theory to cut taxes, outlined his game plan during his stop in Midland Tuesday. He was featured speaker at the Independent Producers Association of America meeting in Midland Center.

In an interview with The Reporter-Telegram prior to his news conference, Kemp blamed the country's see-sawing monetary policy — and subsequently Volcker — for the country's "artificially-induced interest rates in 1981 and '82." This brought on high unemployment, a dip in the economy, loss of revenues from reduced business activity and from people not paying taxes."

ALTHOUGH KEMP is a strong team player for President Reagan, he doesn't always agree with all the calls. The only way to reduce deficits is not by a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget — which Reagan has proposed — but by the getting the economy back on its feet, contended Kemp.

And it's happening, he said. "The deficits are coming down."

He called for a sound monetary policy as the necessary play for putting the United States back as a leader in the world.

No one can predict what the economy will be doing in four years. "Not Volcker, not Ronald Reagan, not even you," he said.

Speaking in a rapid New York accent, Kemp is forceful and direct in his manner. Looking directly iat his questioners, he uses his hands to illustrate points.

The recovery in 1983 was solid, he said. "But unemployment has to come down more, interest rates have to come down more."

And it depends not on Reagan, but Volcker and the Fed, which he contended caused the "deflation and recession of this country from 1981-82."

Chernenko pledges continuity

MOSCOW (AP) — New Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko told visiting dignitaries today he would continue the policies of his predecessor, Yuri V. Andropov, and signaled continuity by attacking U.S. policy in Central America.

Cuban leader Fidel Castro and Nicaragua's Daniel Ortega were among the first visitors Chernenko received, in what Western analysts saw as a clear signal that Moscow retains its interest in Central America.

At the meeting with Castro, Tass reported that "the Soviet side ... reiterated its invariable solidarity with the Cuban people."

Both Chernenko and Ortega were quoted by Tass as denouncing "Washington's intention to whip up tension" in Central America. Chernenko, the official Soviet news agency said, "reiterated the Soviet people's firm support for the just cause of the Nicaraguan people."

■ U.S., Soviet leaders share similarities; Related story — Page 2A

Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi also talked with Chernenko. Tass quoted her foreign minister, P.V. Narasimha Rao, as saying that, "We sensed in Moscow a firm resolve to carry on the policy the Soviet Union had pursued under the leadership of Yuri V. Andropov."

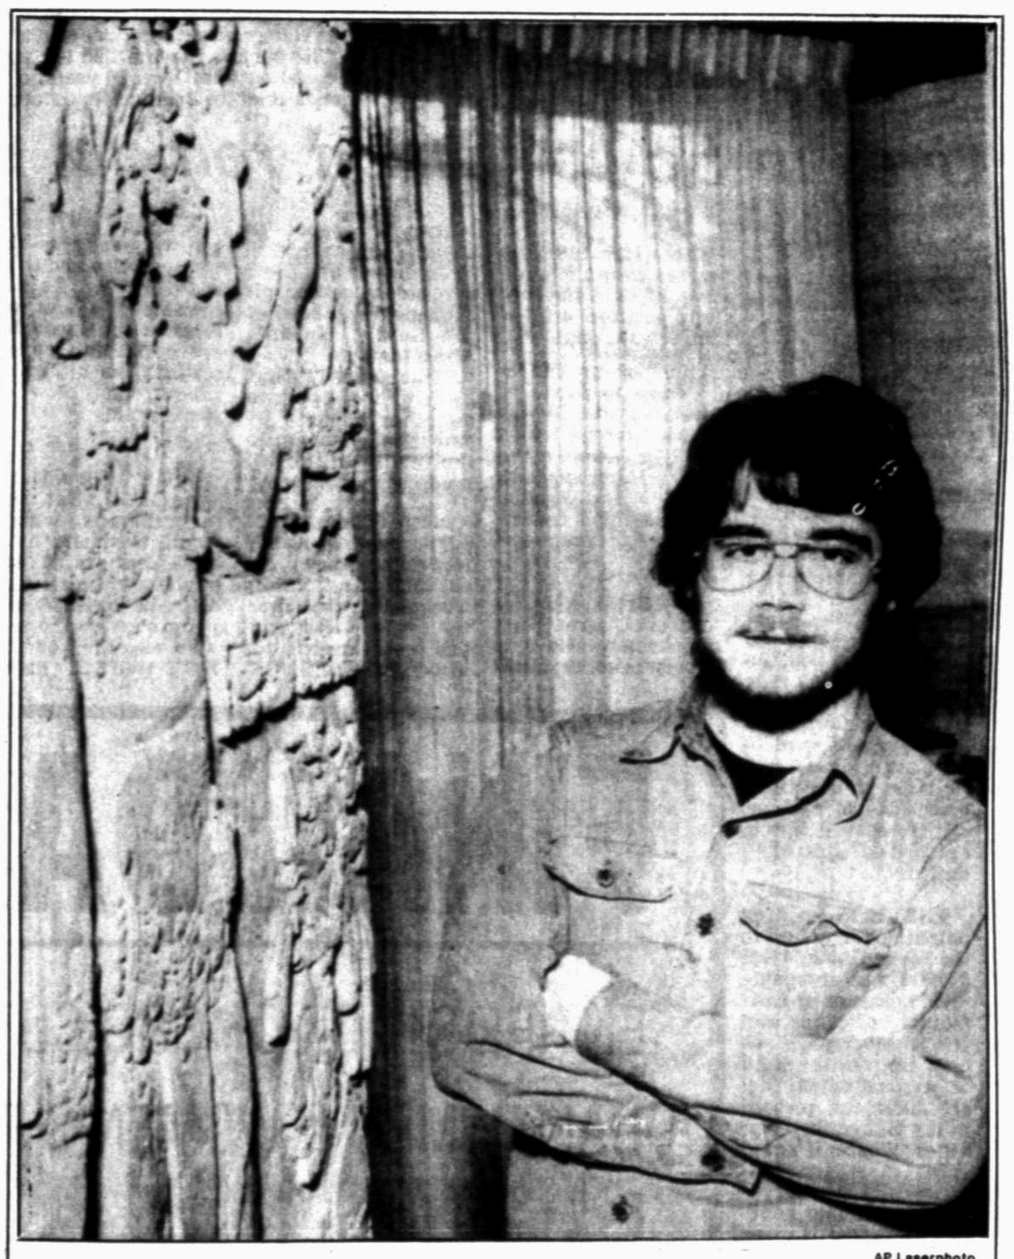

Chernenko also met with Truong Chinh, the Vietnamese premier. Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov received Cypriot President Spyros Kyprianou, and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko met with Japanese Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe.

Scrupulously matching rank for rank, Soviet First Deputy Premier Geidar A. Aliev received Deputy Premier Wang Li, the highest-ranking Chinese official to visit Moscow in 20 years.

Tass reported that both China and the Soviet Union expressed a wish to improve relations between "the two neighboring great powers," a standard pronouncement since they began talks on normalizing ties in late 1982.

Western analysts noted Chernenko saw Western leaders Tuesday immediately after a routine meeting with the assembled heads of state from Eastern Europe. They held out little hope, however, that the Kremlin would soon change its stance on the main dispute dividing East and West — the deployment of nuclear missiles in Europe.

Tass reported that the new Kremlin boss rebuked some Western leaders Tuesday for the NATO deployment of U.S.-built cruise missiles in Western Europe and re-emphasized Moscow's insistence that the deployment stop.

David Stuart, 18, of Silver Spring, Md., is the youngest recipient of a MacArthur Foundation grant. Stuart's work with pre-Colombian ihieroglypics, like the one pictured, and several published papers won him the recognition.

'Special attention' granted

A pioneer in genetics who wants to search for ancient manuscripts, a psychiatrist once accused of over-prescribing drugs to athletes and a physicist who hopes to study a simple pane of glass are among the 22 happily surprised winners of MacArthur Foundation grants.

Notification by the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, which on Tuesday announced the no-strings-attached grants of up to $300,000 to "exceptionally talented individuals," was "quite unlike any other phone call," said Michael Piore.

Piore, 43, a labor economics professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will receive $216,000 tax-free over the next five years.

The latest winners of the periodic awards range from David Stuart, an 18-year-old Mayan archaeologist who is the youngest recipient since the MacArthur Fellows Program began in 1978, to Paul Kristeller, a 78-year-old Renaissance history scholar at Columbia University.

The award money ranged from Stuart's $128,000 to Kristeller's $300,000, with amounts based on age and experience. Candidates are not told they are under consideration, and winners can use the money for whatever purpose they want without having to report progress or complete projects.

Also honored was a 40-year-old Texas man who has organized community activist groups in several Rio Grande Valley cities.

Ernest Cortes, who moved to McAllen from Houston about a year ago, called the award "a pleasant surprise."

Cortes is a member of the national staff of Industrial Areas Foundation, which coordinates its work with community groups in Houston, San Antonio, Fort Worth, Austin and El Paso.

He now works with a group called Valley Interfaith.

On the same day the grants were announced, one of MacArthur's sons filed suit in Chicago against eight directors of the $1.5 billion foundation.

J. Roderick MacArthur, who is also a director, claimed the eight have mismanaged his father's bequest of nearly 10 million shares in Banker's Life & Casualty Co., paid themselves excessive fees and salaries and failed to meet the Dec. 1, 1983, legal deadline for selling Banker's Life without penalty.

John E. Corbally, foundation president, issued a statement denying any wrongdoing by himself and the others named in the suit.

The grant winners were notified by telephone over the last two weeks.

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Severe drought. The coldest December in recorded history. And now, a long skein of mild, lazy days that seem like anything but winter in comparison.

What does it all add up to?

Atypical weather, even for a region such as West Texas where the continuing meteorological joke is, "If you don't like the weather, just wait a minute — it'll change."

The weather, indeed, seems to be changing, as hot and cold and dry and wet extremes come to the forefront more and more often. Not only was much of West Texas racked in 1982-83 by a drought unlike any seen in decades, but in December and early January it was chilled to the bone by incredible cold conditions NEVER seen here before.

Theories abound on why the extremes and records pop up more frequently, including alleged tampering by the Russians and the power of El Nino. The latter, an ocean effect noticed off the northwest coast of South America, is believed by some scientists to be related to the extended drought. But as to the possibility of it also resulting in the bitter cold of December, well....

"The cold spell seems to be related to a different situation," said Roger Mallory, weather forecaster with National Weather Service at Midland Air Terminal, "but maybe there is some relationship that we aren't aware of. There's an awfully lot of guessing going on, and a lot more research that needs to be done.

Leaders share some similarities

An Analysis

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The differences between Konstantin U. Chernenko and Ronald Wilson Reagan are as wide as the steppes of Russia.

When Chernenko, the new Soviet leader, berates Washington's "primitive anti-communism" he is talking about Reagan. When Reagan questions the Soviets' commitment to peace, he is referring to people like Chernenko.

And yet, there is much in the background of these leaders of the two superpowers to share.

It begins with their ages. Both were born in 1911 — Reagan is seven months older. And Reagan is the oldest man ever elected president of the United States while Chernenko is the oldest ever selected to head the Soviet Communist Party.

It continues with their backgrounds: humble.

Reagan's father was a sometime shoe salesman and sometime alcoholic and young Ronald's childhood was one of constant moving and poverty. He remembers it as being happy.

And so it was with Chernenko, in Siberia.

"I was born into a large and poor peasant family in the Krasnoyarsk Region," Chernenko wrote in an introduction to a collection of his speeches and articles.

"I left my mother when I was a young boy. At 12 I went to work for a wealthy master to earn my living. New Soviet life was just coming into its own and I felt its fresh winds when I joined the Young Communist League.

"That was back in 1926. We studied and held down our jobs at the same time. We were underfed and poorly clothed, but the dreams of a radiant future for all fascinated us and made us happy."

Reagan, too, got his political ideas early.

In his autobiography, he writes: "I was a near hopeless hemophiliac liberal. I bled for causes. I had voted Democratic, following my father, in every election. I had followed FDR (Franklin D. Roosevelt) blindly. The story of my disillusionment with big government is linked fundamentally with the ideals that suddenly sprouted...."

Reagan's ideas of success are rooted in the Horatio Alger legend and so, in a way, are Chernenko's.

The New York Times observed that "woven through Chernenko's published thoughts is the belief that if he could make it through hard work and loyalty, others could too...and a belief that ideology — if only it is properly served up — should be capable of inspiring young Russians the way it inspired him."

Neither man had World War II combat experience, unusual for politicians of their generation. Reagan was in the service, but his bad eyesight caused him to fight the war in California as part of the Culver City Commandos, the first motion-picture unit of the Army Air Forces.

Reagan turned to politics when his movie career turned sour, registering for the first time as a Republican in 1962 when he ended a stint as spokesman for General Electric. He was elected governor of California in 1966 and again in 1970.

Chernenko's rise was tied to that of Leonid Brezhnev; their association went back 30 years to when he was party propaganda chief for Brezhnev in the southern Moldavian Republic.

El Salvador will try five in nuns' slayings

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Five former national guardsmen have been ordered to stand trial for the 1980 killings of four American churchwomen, and an appellate judge says a jury trial could begin within six weeks.

Under Salvadoran law, the five accused men can file a final appeal with the Supreme Court. Twice previously, appeals blocked the case from going to trial, and the delays have been widely criticized in the United States.

Judge Luis Alonso Melara of the 2nd Appeals Court, who issued the new order Tuesday, said in a telephone interview: "If the lawyers make no appeal and the (lower court) judge proceeds without delay, the case will be delayed no more than a month and a half."

Earlier appeals centered on a defense claim that there are not enough witnesses to initiate a case under Salvadoran law.

The appellate judge said the lower court judge, Bernardo Rauda Murcia, "must be more studious in his handling of the case to assure prompt justice."

Rauda has presided over the case in Zacatecoluca, 33 miles southwest of San Salvador.

The five former guardsmen are charged with aggravated homicide and robbery in the December 1980 murders of three nuns and a lay worker, all Roman Catholics.

The bullet-riddled bodies of the four women were found in a shallow grave two days after they set out on a drive from the international airport to San Salvador. The victims were Maryknoll nuns Ita Ford, 40, and Maura Clarke, 49, both of New York, and Ursuline nun Dorothy Kazel, 41, and lay worker Jean Donovan, 27, both of Cleveland.

The robbery charge against the former guardsmen stems from the alleged confiscation and sale of the women's van and its contents.

Authorities have said some of the women were raped, but Melara said there was insufficient evidence to file rape charges.

The delay in bringing to trial this case and the 1981 murder of two American labor advisers has led some congressmen to request postponement of part of the U.S. military aid to this war-torn Central American nation.

Michael P. Hammer, 42, of Potomac, Md., and Mark D. Pearlman, 36, of Seattle, represented the AFL-CIO in land reform activities in El Salvador. There have been no convictions in their deaths.

The guardsmen accused in the nuns' case are confined at different jails. They are Luis Antonio Colindres Aleman, Carlos Joaquin Contreras, Francisco Orlando Contreras, Jose Roberto Moreno and Daniel Canales.

In another development Tuesday, U.S.-trained government troops began a counterinsurgency drive against leftist rebels in southeastern Usulutan province, said Col. Miguel Antonio Mendez, the army's chief of operations.

He told a news conference that rebels use the region to receive arms and medicine "coming from Nicaragua."

Peru trying to oust squatters

TRUJILLO, Peru (AP) — Embarrassed and indignant, the government is trying to oust more than 150 squatters from pre-Inca ruins in northern Peru after a pig farmer sold "his" part of the national monument for the equivalent of $521.

"It's incredible but not surprising, if you know the history of the place," says Ana Maria Hoyle, archaelogical supervisor of the National Cultural Institute. "The squatter invasion has been going on for some time."

She says that as a result there are "several strange arrangements" within the six square miles of Chan Chan, the 500-year-old former Indian capital beside the Pacific Ocean where the moon-worshiping Chimu Indians lived before the Incas overran them.

Spread across the area are bamboo shacks, wells, a regulation-size soccer field and a 10-foot-high corral for goats and pigs built by farmer Rodolfo Goicochea Huertas after he acquired title to about 7.5 acres in 1968. Exactly how he got the title remains unclear.

Goicochea's property is not hidden. A road he constructed runs right by a sign declaring the area a national monument. For 15 years he has run his pig farm virtually unmolested, usually as an absentee landlord.

Although less well known than the Inca ruins at Machu Picchu in the Andes in south central Peru, Chan Chan is considered perhaps the second most important historical site in the country because of its unusual construction alongside the sea. It is believed to contain still-unfound archaelogical treasures.

The crux of the government's position, now before a lower court and coordinated with a move by the attorney general's office to evict squatters, is that the sale giving a title to Goicochea was illegal.

The government thus contends buyer Rebeca Linares, a Trujillo school teacher, has no right to the half of his land that she bought for 1,200,000 sols, worth $521, when she sent a bulldozer in early this year to start burrowing.

Lives in Soviet Union remain private

By ALISON SMALE

MOSCOW (AP) — The lives of Soviet leaders are so private that few outside the ruling circle know if new Communist Party chief Konstantin U. Chernenko is married or has children.

Westerners and most Soviets didn't know that Yuri V. Andropov's wife was alive until she appeared in public to mourn his death.

There is no "first family" concept in the Soviet Union, and the private lives of the elite are carefully screened from the general public. They are sped to work along special traffic lanes in curtained limousines, shop in special stores and rest in secluded country dachas.

THERE IS no campaigning for office in the Soviet Union, wives don't stand alongside their husbands at ceremonial occasions and official biographies seldom contain the kind of personal details that are taken for granted in the United States or other Western countries.

Nor is there any tradition of family political dynasties in the Soviet Union — sons or daughters have never risen to top leadership positions because of famous fathers.

Chernenko's biography, published by the official news agency Tass and printed in Tuesday's newspapers, chronicles his slow rise through the party hierarchy. But the only personal detail provided is that his parents were Siberian peasants.

Andropov's official biography was the same. There were rumors that his wife was dead or that they had been divorced. But she appeared at the House of Unions when Andropov's body lay in state, and Soviet sources said her name was Tatyana.

ONE EXCEPTION was Nina Khrushchev, wife of Nikita S. Khrushchev, who accompanied him on a tour of the United States in 1959. Leonid I. Brezhnev's wife, Viktoria, appeared in public in Moscow in 1972 when President Nixon visited the Soviet capital with his wife, Pat.

Mrs. Brezhnev was so little known to ordinary Russians that many of them asked Western reporters who she was.

Sometimes details become known if a relative holds a government position or if a scandal leaks out.

Thus, when Andropov came to power in November 1982, it was known that he had a son, Igor, because the younger Andropov was in the Soviet delegation to the Madrid conference on European security.

FOREIGN Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's son, Anatoly, also is an experienced diplomat who was posted to Soviet embassies in Washington and London before getting his current job as head of the Soviet Union's Africa Institute.

Some believe that Andropov helped to engineer his rise by revealing a scandal in the family life of his predecessor, Brezhnev.

In late February 1982, Soviet sources leaked reports that a top circus official friendly with Galina Brezhnev, the leader's daughter, had been arrested in a bribery scandal.

A circus performer known as Boris the Gypsy — also said to be a friend of Galina Brezhnev's — also was arrested and a valuable art collection confiscated from his apartment, the Soviet sources said.

WESTERNERS theorized that the information, which would normally have been kept secret, was deliberately leaked to discredit Brezhnev and promote Andropov, who as chief of the KGB would have known about the arrests.

The most sensational news ever created by a Soviet leader's relative was the defection in 1967 of Josef Stalin's daughter, Svetlana Aliluyeva.

Stalin's two sons also won attention. During World War II, his son Yakov was taken prisoner by the invading Nazis, who reportedly offered him in exchange for Field Marshal Friedrich von Paulus, imprisoned by the Soviets after his surrender at Stalingrad.

Rocks named as landmark

WASHINGTON (AP) — Much to the puzzlement of local officials, the federal government has declared that 309 acres of a lava-covered mountain near Paterson, N.J., is a geological treasure worthy of being placed on the National Registry of Natural Landmarks.

The Interior Department said Garrett Mountain, owned by Passaic County, N.J., is being added to the adjoining, four-acre Great Falls natural landmark because it is "one of the country's best examples of land formation caused by massive lava flows occurring without preliminary explosive activity."

But Ronald Dooney, executive director of the Passaic County Park Commission, says local residents don't know why the cliffs of Garrett Mountain are getting so much attention from Washington.

The episode illustrates how the federal government, even with the best of intentions, sometimes moves in ways that confound even local government leaders.

The cliffs are part of 575-acre Garrett Mountain Reservation, a park 15 miles west of New York that is used for picnicking and horseback riding. The peak of the mountain is within sight of the towers of George Washington Bridge spanning the Hudson River.

Dooney said local authorities asked the Interior Department about two decades ago to name Great Falls and Garrett Mountain as a natural landmark. Great Falls received the designation in 1967, but the mountain didn't.

Then followed several years of occasional correspondence between Passaic County officials and federal authorities about Garrett Mountain.

"I've been here since 1976," Dooney said. "Around 1977, somebody called me from Washington and said, 'Well, how about making it a landmark?' Then I didn't hear anything, and all of a sudden this year, it seems like it has become a cause celebre."

Dooney says schoolchildren frequently clamber up the cliffs where geologists say lava flowed as high as a 10-story building about 190 million years ago. The area also is known for its profusion of zeolites, rock crystals that can be colorless, white, red or yellow.

Craig Shafer of the Interior Department said the natural landmark designation simply recognizes the significance of the formation. The local park commission can have the landmark status withdrawn at any time and use the land as it wishes.

Dooney says he has no idea what good the landmark designation will serve.

Whites in minority at largest black university

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — On a campus with almost 10,000 students, Kathy Howard stands out, but not because she earns honor roll marks in computer science.

Miss Howard is a white student at the world's largest black school, Southern University.

She and 292 other white students at the graduate and undergraduate levels are a growing minority at Southern. They made up 3.1 percent of the student body in the fall semester.

"I don't feel like I'm an outsider," said the 17-year-old freshman. "I like to think I'm accepted for myself, judged on what I am, and how I relate to people — 99.9 percent of the reaction from black students has been positive and supportive."

As part of a 1981 negotiated settlement to eliminate the "vestiges" of segregation in Louisiana's higher education system, public universities began "other race" recruitment programs.

The number of white students at the state's mostly black schools — Southern's three campuses and that of Grambling State University in northern Louisiana — has been on the rise, but slowly.

In the fall of 1982, whites made up 2.3 percent of the total enrollment at the four mostly black campuses.

"Our main thrust now is just getting the word out — selling the university. Letting students know what it offers in the way of programs they'd be interested in whether they're black, white, pink, yellow or green," said Glenda Breeland, the "other race" recruiter for Southern-Baton Rouge.

This academic year, the state gave $142,000 to Southern-Baton Rouge to recruit white students to the mostly black school.

Although a minority, white students aren't a rarity at mostly black Louisiana universities. Ms. Breeland said Southern has had non-black students since the day it opened in 1880.

Legendary Grambling football coach Eddie Robinson recruited a white quarterback, James Gregory, in the 1970s. Although never a star, Gregory got his degree from Grambling and now teaches in California.

Gregory's ups and downs at Grambling were portrayed in the television movie "The White Tiger" starring Harry Bellafonte and Bruce Jenner.

Most white students who attend a mostly black school are attracted to a particular academic program or for economic reasons, Ms. Breeland said.

"In these hard times, the first question a student — white or black — asks is how much does it cost to go to your school? Or, can I get some kind of scholarship or aid?" said Ms. Breeland, who is white.

Miss Howard was lured to Southern by its computer science department. She said she attended a summer enrichment program after her junior year in high school, then decided to give up her senior year to accept an academic scholarship to Southern.

Some of her friends asked why she picked Southern rather than crosstown Louisiana State University, where tuition is about the same.

"It was a good test to see if they were really friends," she said. "I just explained it was my education and my choice. Most understood, some didn't."

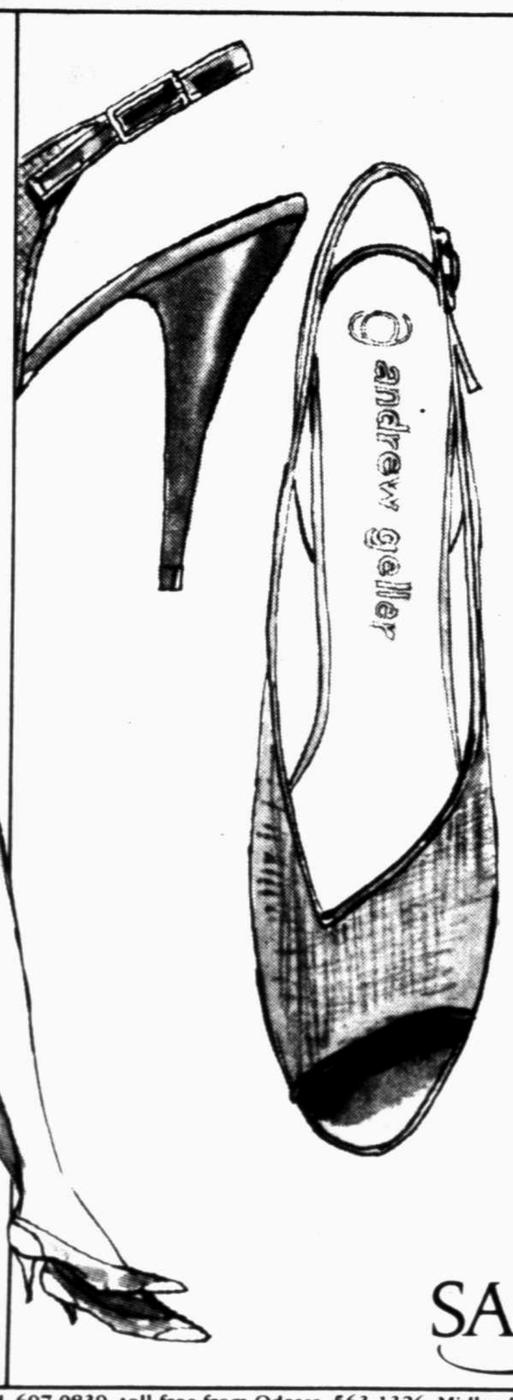

Chris Hayden, 22, of Elk Rapids, Mich., had been turned down by the University of Michigan when he accepted Southern's offer to get a commission in the Marines while he studied architecture. He said he didn't realize he was coming to a mostly black school until he got here.

Hayden said his immersion in a largely black community has been of value.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 7 a.m. EST Thursday, February 16
● Low Temperatures

Rain Snow Showers Flurries

Fronts: Cold Warm Occluded Stationary

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts rain through Thursday from the central Gulf to the Midwest and along the Pacific Coast, with snow expected from the eastern Plains to the Dakotas and Minnesota and in the northern mountains.

Weak cold front comes through Permian Basin

Believe it or not, a weak cold front came through the Permian Basin this morning.

However, its lack of strength should not appreciably affect temperatures.

The low tonight should be near 30, while the high Thursday will be in the low 70s. Winds should be northwesterly at 5-15 miles per hour tonight and westerly at 10-20 miles per hour Thursday.

Mostly fair conditions are expected in West Texas through Sunday with little day-to-day changes.

The high Tuesday of 79 was seven degrees off the alltime record for the date set in 1979, while the low of 43 was light years above the frigid 11 recorded on the date in 1951.

No precipitation is forecast. The month's total remains at 0.00 inch and the year's total at 0.41 inch.

STATE

A cold front moved into the Texas Panhandle before dawn today, bringing gusty northerly winds and cooler temperatures back into the state's weather picture.

The front was expected to trigger showers across portions of North, Central and South Texas as it moved to the south. However, most of the shower activity was expected to end tonight, leaving mostly fair skies Thursday.

Low clouds covered much of Central and East Texas from the coast to the Red River. Skies were mostly fair over West Texas.

Pre-dawn temperatures were mostly in the 50s and 60s. Readings in the 30s and 40s were noted in the Panhandle and West Texas. Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 38 at Amarillo to 69 at McAllen.

Southerly winds were reported over most of the state. In West Texas, westerly breezes were the rule.

The forecast called for cooler temperatures to spread across the state as the cold front moved to the south. Scattered showers and thunderstorms were possible over all but West Texas. Some of the shower activity was expected to be violent in Northeast Texas.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were possible through early tonight along the Texas coast. Westerly and northwesterly winds near 15 knots were forecast for tonight, followed by variable breezes near 10 knots Thursday.

NATION

Slumbering winter erupted in the Colorado Rockies today with 60 mph winds and swirling snow expected to reach 8 inches in the mountains and a foot in the northeastern Plains.

Meanwhile, mild temperatures combined with rain and thunderstorms to inflict flooding on widely separate regions from the upper Midwest to New England and across the Pacific Northwest.

While the snowstorm in the Rockies began moving into the central Plains today, most states from the mid-Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic had unseasonably warm temperatures in the 50s.

Rain dampened the Dakotas and Minnesota. Dense fog covered the northern Atlantic states, and rain and flash flood warnings were prevalent in New England and south central New York state.

Gale-force winds lashed the Pacific Northwest coast as a series of storms spread rain into northern California, Oregon and Washington.

Rising rivers drove about 100 families were driven from their homes in central Pennsylvania's Lycoming County, Western New York's Chemung River topped its 16.5-foot flood stage, and officials in Illinois and Indiana were keeping a close watch on local rivers.

Family hopeful after transplants

AP Laserphoto

Leaning on her fiance, Donnie Millsap, during a press conference concerning her daughter's heart and liver transplants is Lois Jones of Cumby, Texas. Six-year-old Stormie underwent the pioneering procedure in Pittsburgh on Tuesday.

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH — Encouraged by her "good" appearance, relatives and doctors say they're hopeful that a 6-year-old girl who "got a new heart for Valentine's Day" will recover fully from the world's first heart and liver transplant.

"She seems to be doing better than other liver transplant patients," Dr. William Donaldson, medical director at Children's Hospital, said Tuesday after the 16-hour operation.

Stormie Jones of Cumby, Texas, was moved into an isolated room in the hospital's intensive care unit after the operation ended Tuesday morning. She was listed in critical but stable condition today, considered normal for recent transplant patients.

The child was born with a rare disease that caused her blood fat to rise to life-threatening levels, damaging both her heart and her liver, hospital officials said.

She had suffered two heart attacks in the past few months and would have died without the double operation, doctors said.

The blond, blue-eyed girl's mother, Lois Jones, 27, visited her daughter after the operation. Stormie's parents are divorced.

"I'm happy with the results. She looks good," Mrs. Jones said.

"We'll make it," added Donnie Millsap, 25, Mrs. Jones' fiance.

Dr. Thomas Starzl, the liver transplant pioneer who headed the surgery along with heart transplant surgeon Dr. Henry T. Bahnson, hailed the operation as a milestone.

"It's a very important case, of course for the child, but also in that the amount of information that will be obtained from that kind of situation is really overwhelming," Starzl said in an interview at his Pittsburgh home following the operation.

Mrs. Jones, who has not yet learned whether her insurance will cover the costly operation, came to Pittsburgh with Stormie 1½ months ago to await a compatible donor. Stormie's sister, 9-year-old Misty, is staying with relatives back home, where residents have raised $7,000 for the family. Liver transplants alone average at least $70,000.

Most children awaiting transplants are too ill to get out of bed, but Stormie passed the time in the hospital playing with her mother and other youngsters, hospital spokesman Dick Riebling said. She could walk only short distances, however, and often was in pain even while at rest.

Recently Stormie made a red-and-beige valentine for her mother and pasted her own photograph on it. In the picture, she is holding a cake that reads "I love Mom."

Following the transplant, Mrs. Jones returned her daughter's gift with a special valentine greeting of her own.

"I told her I loved her," Mrs. Jones said. "I told her she got a new heart for Valentine's Day."

Physicians decided in late December to replace Stormie's heart and liver in hopes of stabilizing her blood cholesterol level. Besides the two heart attacks, she had undergone two triple coronary bypasses and had a heart valve replaced in the past few months, Starzl said.

"She was in a very tenuous situation," he said.

"There's been evidence...that if you replace the liver, the metabolism would be made correct. But the child's heart was too damaged from the underlying disease to be able to do that with any hope that the heart would be able to carry the load," Starzl said.

Kemp addresses area oil producers

Volcker's latest money tightening policies are eliciting predictions of a an increase in interest rates and slowdown of the economy in the last quarter of 1984 and '85, he said.

MORE "LIQUIDITY" should be injected into the system to keep the economy going, said Kemp. iReal interest rates, which are too high now, "can come down as people gain confidence that the monetary policy is not subject to the personal whim of Volcker, but is subjected to an intellectual guideline that is predictable over a long period of time."

Kemp prefers a gold-backed dollar, or a return to the gold standard. "I don't think we can go there right now. But, ultimately, we have to make the dollar as good as gold to build confidence in the U.S. dollar and the world monetary system. We need a measuring stick."

Leaning on the edge of a couch, Kemp stressed that he is an "internationalist, not an isolationist. We need an international monetary policy."

Under Volcker, there has been no consistent monetary policy with the interest rates fluctuating from week to week and month to month, he said.

If that monetary policy could be stabilized, interest rates should fall to single digits and possibly to 4 and 5 percent, he said. "I do see it coming down in the next couple of years. That would do wonders for oil and gas and housing and autos and basic machine tools. Think of what it would be like if interest rates were 8 percent rather than 12 to 13 percent. So, rather than the deficit causing the interest rates it's the interest rates causing the deficit."

WITH A LOOK of exasperation, Kemp said Volcker is complaining the unemployment rate is coming down too quickly and the economy growing too fast, and of tightening the money supply as a result.

It's not that he doesn't like the Fed chairman, it's "just that he happens to be wrong," said Kemp, a congressman since 1971.

The subject of Martin Feldstein, who is Reagan's chairman of Council of Economic Advisers, brought a long sigh from Kemp. "I don't want to get into it," he began. "He's irrelevant to the debate. He's all over the lot. He was for the tax cut in 1981, now he's against it. He was for easing up on the monetary policy in 1980-82; now he's against it."

But Reagan has dug in his heels in insisting there not be any tax increases, according to the congressman.

Kemp has his doubts about the feasibility of Reagan's idea for a bi-partisan commission to work out a budget compromise. He attacked the Democrats, saying they want to raise taxes to get rid of the deficit.

It won't work, warned Kemp. "Jimmy Carter tried to get taxes up and we ended up with the worst economy since World War II."

Along with no tax increase, Kemp would prefer to see a "flatter tax rate" such as 25 percent off the top with few deductions. His proposed revision of the income tax code would still allow deductions for charitable contributions, mortgage iinterest payments, IRA accounts. "But you can remove much of the garbage."

Instituting a corporate and personal income tax rate of 25 percent, the exemption could be raised to $2,000 person so single working men and women iand working families that fall under an income of $50,000 would pay only about 10 to 14 percent of their income to taxes.

Under such a tax code, "this country would be more efficient, producitivity would increase, the stock market would grow, the underground economy would shrink."

Once the interest rates drop and unemployment slides to 3 percent, Kemp said the deficits would be eliminated. Yes, the military budget could be cut some. But in his view, if the country were back to full unemployment rate of 3 percent, "you could get more defense for the same amount of money."

Because some of the industrial jobs will be eliminated forever, Kemp acknowledged some workers iwill have to be re-trained with the federal government footing part of that bill.

"It should be done in consonance with the private sector," he added.

And women should have more economic opportunities ias the unemployment rate falls, he said.

Nor should women be exempted from the highest political arena — the presidential campaign.

"I admit we need more women candidates," said Kemp of the overall picture and not just the one race. "Why should a woman stop at vice president? Why not president?"

But Kemp, who has been considered a leading candidate for president after Reagan, dodged the question of himself running for that high office and turned back to his differences with Volcker.

With a mischievous smile, Kemp replied, "I plan to run for the number one spot. I don't want the number two spot. I'm going to go all the way," he said and then paused. "And take over the Federal Reserve Board."

Weather contrasts fit historical range

Meteorology is a relatively young science."

While weather during the last few weeks have seemed extremely mild for a winter, Mallory noted that such conditions are not unusual for West Texas winters. In fact, he said, one reason the weather has seemed so pleasant is that people have a hard time forgetting the frigid conditions they faced earlier.

"The contrast has been enormous," he said. "What we're going through now is relatively normal, the rapid swing of temperatures. What was NOT normal was that long and exceedingly cold period in December and January. And just on odds you've got to figure it's going to be a long time before that happens again.... I would not expect it to happen again in the next 10 years, just on odds."

He paused to reflect on the situation, then upped his figure.

"The winter was record-setting throughout 80 percent of the country, so no reasonable person has to expect that's going to happen for a long, long time. My best guess is you may never see that again in your lifetime."

So just what DOES the remainder of winter hold for West Texas?

Your guess, it seems, is as good as any.

"We don't have an inkling," said Mallory, "because our forecasts aren't that great."

The month-long forecast to which he referred indicates that West Texas' chances of having below normal temperatures through the middle of March are 52 per cent. When you consider 50 percent is the break-even point, it's virtually like flipping a coin.

The longterm forecast also notes that West Texas has a 55 percent or better chance of having below normal precipitation through mid-March. In consideration of the fact that Midland's average precipitation during that period is only 0.50 inch, "it's a pretty confident forecast of a pretty dry period for the next 30 days," said Mallory.

Mallory personally believes no great extremes are in store for West Texas during the remainder of winter.

"I don't think the difference in temperature is going to be awfully noticeable for people who have lived here a long period of time," he said. "We're in a warming trend right now. With the first days of March, the days are beginning to lengthen and the trend is usually a warming one. We can still look for warmer temperatures over the next 30 days, but the overall average may be slightly below average, but not like the shocking period in December."

Persons planning to plant gardens or who raise fruit trees should not be lulled into a false sense of security by the ongoing pleasant weather, he said.

"The median date of the last killing freeze is April 1, the earliest date is March 5 and the latest date is April 20. So you can see the range we're looking at... I would be expecting some sort of killing freeze down the road. It just happens routinely.... Another factor around here for an old gardener is the wind. The windiest time of year is late winter and early spring. I've had a lot more damage (to his garden) over the years from blowing sand than from late freezes."

Unemployment figures fall in most of nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly half of the states enjoyed substantial declines in their unemployment rates from December 1982 through last December, and only Alaska saw its rate rise over the year, according to government figures.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Tuesday that unemployment rates dropped by two or more percentage points in 23 states, paced by Michigan, where the rate plummeted from 17.3 percent in December 1982 to 11.9 percent in December 1983.

But a dozen states continued to suffer from double-digit unemployment in December, the report said.

Here are December's unemployment rates in the 50 states and the nation's capital, compared with the rates a year earlier.

West Virginia, 15.7 percent, down from 17.0 percent; Alabama, 12.3-15.5; Michigan, 11.9-17.3; Oregon, 11.2-11.8; District of Columbia, 11.1-10.8; Alaska, 11.0-10.5; Ohio, 10.5-14.1; Washington state, 10.5-13.0; Indiana, 10.3-12.8; Tennessee, 10.3-12.7; Pennsylvania, 10.3-12.7; Louisiana, 10.1-11.6; Mississippi, 10.0-11.8.

Also, Kentucky, 9.8-11.7; Wisconsin, 9.7-11.9; Arkansas, 9.4-10.8; Illinois, 9.4-12.6; Nevada, 9.4-12.6; Missouri, 9.1-9.4; New Mexico, 8.9-9.8; Montana, 8.8-9.1; California, 8.0-11.0; Idaho, 8.0-9.8; Maine, 7.9-8.3; South Carolina, 7.9-10.9; Utah, 7.9-8.7; Oklahoma, 7.6-6.8; Florida, 7.5-9.5; Delaware, 7.5, unchanged; Minnesota, 7.5-8.7; North Carolina, 7.3-8.9; Texas, 7.1-7.4; New York, 7.0-8.6; Iowa, 6.8-9.3;

Also, Rhode Island, 6.8-10.0; Georgia, 6.6-7.8; New Jersey, 6.5-8.8; Arizona, 6.3-10.5; North Dakota, 6.3-6.5; Maryland, 6.2-8.4; Wyoming, 6.2-7.9; Massachusetts, 5.8-7.1; Vermont, 5.8-7.2; Hawaii, 5.5-6.6; Virginia, 5.5-8.1; Colorado, 5.3-8.6; Nebraska, 5.3-6.7; South Dakota, 5.3-6.0; Kansas, 4.9-7.0; Connecticut, 4.5-7.0, and New Hampshire, 4.3-7.7.

December 1983 unemployment rates in Texas' metropolitan areas and cities in surrounding states, as reported on a seasonally unadjusted basis Tuesday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, include:

Basket-making goes commercial

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Sales to the non-Indian public probably will determine how long Southwest Indians continue to weave baskets, says Clara Lee Tanner, an authority on the region's native crafts.

"The miracle of it all is that basketry has survived, for in a vast majority of cases the Southwest Indians no longer use the products of their tribal basket weavers," she said.

Metal pots and pans and glassware have taken their place.

But she personally doesn't look for basket-making to die out.

"Some of the Hopis are getting marvelous prices now — as much as $2,000 for new baskets," she said. "But the Apaches have practically ceased making first-class baskets. The Papagos are producing more than they ever have and other tribes much less or none.

"However, in general, the production now is for commercial sale only, and very little is for use at home."

Mrs. Tanner, at 78, speaks from nearly 60 years' experience studying the crafts of the Southwest Indians.

She retired five years ago after 50 years of teaching anthropology at the University of Arizona and her 10th book, "Indian Baskets of the Southwest," has just been published by the University of Arizona Press.

Basket weaving historically has been the craft of women and Mrs. Tanner says she knows of only one man who did it commercially.

Virtually all of the new baskets are home-produced, just as the old ones were, she said in a telephone interview from Tucson.

"The same fundamental elements and units were used by most tribes — squares, rectangles, lines and bands, triangles, diamonds, zigzags and circles," she said.

"But what has been most fascinating to me is that no two designs are the same. There is a superstition that if two baskets are made the same, the ability to make them is taken from you. So there's always something fresh for me to see."

There are three major weaves, she said: plaiting, the simplest, which involves crossing of materials at right angles; wicker, in which the vertical elements cross the horizontal ones, and the coiled technique.

"Undoubtedly the most important is coiling, since most of the baskets have been and still are made this way," she said.

Materials varied by tribe and included cottonwood, willow, squaberry, yucca and devil's claw. Colors depended on what was available naturally.

As a generalization, most collectors feel the old Apache baskets — those of 50, 60, 70 or more years back — are the best. The Chemehuevi also were excellent.

Vice president talks to pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Vice President George Bush, en route home from the funeral of Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov, meet for an hour today with Pope John Paul II and said the discussion centered on "the desire we all hold for peace."

"I spoke with His Holiness about peace in the broadest context," Bush said in a statement released shortly after lengthly meetings with the pope and Vatican Secretary of State Agostino Casaroli. The Vatican, as is customary, released no details of the hour-long private meeting with John Paul.

Bush met with Socialist Premier Bettino Craxi on Tuesday evening after arriving in Rome from Moscow, and he said today those talks also involved "the desire we all hold for peace in all areas of the world."

African peace to be debated

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Diplomats from South Africa, Angola and the United States are to meet Thursday in Zambia to discuss an overall peace settlement for southern Africa, according to a diplomatic source.

The talks will be aimed at extending the current South African disengagement of forces from Angola, which appears to have halted fighting in the bush war over South-West Africa, also known as Namibia, said the source, who refused to be identified.

Airport may be completed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, which once viewed Grenada's partially-completed international airport as a potential security threat, is now recommending that the project be finished with the help of at least $15 million in U.S. money.

U.S. and Grenadian officials said Tuesday a study by the Agency for International Development urges that $24 million be spent to complete the facility, the most visible legacy of Cuba's previously influential role on the island.

Nicholas Brathwaite, head of Grenada's caretaker government, told a news conference an administration announcement on the subject is expected later in the week.

Sweden using depth charges

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Swedish navy is using depth charges powerful enough to cripple a conventional submarine in its search for the latest intruder to penetrate waters near a major navy base, military sources say.

Twice on Tuesday the navy dropped charges "in order to cause damage" in its intensified hunt for the suspected intruder, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

Koreans suspect spy plane

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea's official news agency claimed today that an U.S. SR-71 "high-speed, high-altitude" spy plane flew over North Korean territorial waters.

The Korean Central News Agency report, monitored in Tokyo, said the plane had "committed espionage" Korea by flying Tuesday over North Korean waters east of Kosong.

It said the senior member of North Korea's delegation to the Korean Military Armistice Commission "lodged a strong protest with the enemy side and demanded it take responsible steps to prevent the recurrence of such incidents."

Soviets developing fighter

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union is developing a supersonic fighter to intercept and shoot down the U.S.-made cruise missiles, Jane's Defense Weekly says.

The magazine said the four-engined aircraft, apparently developed from the Tu-128 Fiddler, may be able to carry as many as 30 air-to-air missiles and radar that sees "beyond visual range."

That many rockets would give the mystery jet, known in the West as Aircraft 101, the capacity to intercept waves of incoming missiles.

If the reports are accurate, the plane would be a major new counter to Western air and missile strikes.

'Black spot' families removed

MOGOPA, South Africa (AP) — Government crews removed the last 80 families today from this "black spot" village that has become a symbol of forced resettlement of blacks.

Police Maj. Alfonso Scheepers said at the roadblock guarding the entrance to the village west of Johannesburg that the removals were proceeding without resistance. Blacks have owned land here for more than 70 years.

"They are all moving," Sheepers said. "To tell the truth, I'm surprised at their attitude. They are all happy. There is no trouble."

Twenty-seven Magopa families were put on buses Tuesday for the 2½-hour ride north to Pachsdraai, where the government has prepared a new village in arid bush country.

Sikh extremists kill policeman

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Sikh extremists shot and killed a mounted policeman today, the 14th person to die in two days of sectarian violence in curfew-bound Punjab state.

The policeman was shot as he patrolled on horseback near Jandiala, about 12 miles outside the Sikh holy city of Amritsar, authorities said.The gunmen, also on horseback, escaped.

The attack followed rioting and arson in the northern state Tuesday when Hindus roamed the streets demanding shops and business close to protest the arrest of militant Hindu leaders and the alleged partisan activity of police during a Sikh protest last week.

New York's Algonquin will soon let cat out of the bag

NEW YORK (AP) — A tawny 5-month-old theatrical cat is being primed in the wings for the role of a lifetime: to be the next Hamlet of the Algonquin.

"He's extemely promising," says Andrew Anspach, managing director of the renowned Algonquin hotel, a New York institution for half a century, a literary hangout since its lounge was made a clubhouse by the likes of George S. Kaufman, Dorothy Parker and James Thurber.

An orange cat that slinks through the lobby and lets guests scratch its head has been an Algonquin institution almost as long.

Anspach said Tuesday that Hamlet III will be "ready for an official debut soon."

The Algonquin is bringing Hamlet III along in slow stages, the hotel man explained, because it doesn't want a repeat of its disappointment with the beautiful, lovable, but perhaps feckless Hamlet II.

The apricot-colored Hamlet II, a gift from a staffer at the New Yorker magazine across the street, stayed around the Algonquin for only a year. He disappeared last March. Anspach says he may have eloped with his girlfriend at the neighboring New York Yacht Club.

Before him there was the first Hamlet. He was lord of the lobby for 14 years. A touch snooty and on occasion a biter, he was the hero of the book "Algonquin Cat," and when he died in January 1982, Variety, the show business newspaper, ran his obituary.

Mandrell

LAKE CITY, Tenn. (AP) — Country entertainer Barbara Mandrell and television star Tom Wopat are in this tiny former coal mining town to start filming a made-for-TV movie called "Coal Fire."

It's the first major acting role for the 35-year-old award-winning singer and the first TV movie for Wopat, who stars in the CBS series, "The Dukes of Hazzard."

The $2 million production also stars Eddie Albert and Carol Kane. Eight Lake City and Caryville residents got speaking parts, with about 200 local folks as extras.

"It's really fun and interesting and totally different than anything else I've done...I never thought I'd do my first movie in Tennessee," said Miss Mandrell, a Tennessee native who lives with her husband, Ken Dudley, in Gallatin.

Miss Mandrell plays a geologist from Washington, D.C., who comes to town to help relocate residents who are in danger from a coal fire in a mine under the town.

She falls in love with Wopat, a fish and game agent who helps her discover the source of the fires.

Money

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — Rock singer Eddie Money, whose latest album is "Out of Control," looked very much in charge as he picked up a marriage license — wearing a New York Police Department jacket.

Besides the battered leather jacket, the 34-year-old Money was clad in jeans and tennis shoes when he arrived at the county courthouse Monday prepared to get hitched on Valentine's Day to his girlfriend of 2½ years, Margo Lee Walker.

"This is the day she wanted to get married two years ago," said Money. "We just didn't have the time to get married because of my career."

The license is in the name of Edward Joseph Mahoney, the singer's given name.

Money, whose "Two Tickets to Paradise" single pushed him to the top of the record charts, said the honeymoon would be in Bakersfield where he's performing this week.

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Police suspect that whoever took Rose Kennedy's 1961 Cadillac just wanted a joy ride.

Mrs. Kennedy's daughter, Eunice Kennedy Shriver, had taken the white, four-door Cadillac to St. Edward's Roman Catholic Church on Sunday, but when she returned from a 10 a.m. Mass the car was gone, police Lt. Philip Riley said Tuesday.

The auto was found undamaged Monday afternoon in the the parking lot of a Rivera Beach shopping center about 15 miles away, he said.

Mrs. Kennedy, the 93-year-old matriarch of the political Kennedy clan, had the car registered in her home state of Massachusetts.

She also maintains a home in West Palm Beach.

Man who lived through bitter feud dies at 99

TOLER, Ky. (AP) — Jim McCoy, who lived through one of the most bitter feuds in our nation's history, goes to the grave in his native soil mourned both by his kin and by his former arch-enemies, the Hatfields.

The last resting place of the McCoy chieftain, who died Saturday at age 99, was the family cemetery at Burnwell, Ky., not far from where the infamous Hatfield-McCoy feud began a century ago.

McCoy, who once survived a massacre by marauding members of the rival Hatfield clan, died of "old age," his family said.

He also died at peace with the Hatfields, having symbolically buried the hatchet at a 1976 meeting with the late Willis Hatfield, then the last surviving child of Anderson "Devil Anse" Hatfield.

After the historic meeting both men said they bore no grudges against each other or against any other members of the two familes, now scattered far and wide.

Willis Hatfield died three years later, leaving McCoy the last survivor of the bloody feud, which claimed more than 100 lives in Kentucky and West Virginia during a 20-year span following the Civil War.

McCoy's funeral service was to be conducted today in a mortuary operated by David Hatfield, a descendant of "Devil Anse." McCoy himself wanted it that way. Members of both clans were expected to be on hand, Hatfield said.

At the time McCoy was born the McCoys were the most powerful family on the Kentucky side of the Tug Fork, which separates Kentucky and West Virginia. The Hatfields ruled the roost on the West Virginia side and each family vied for supremacy.

McCoy, great-grand-nephew of family leader Randall McCoy, was born in 1884, two years after the first bloodshed that started the feud. The exact cause of the feud is not known.

South Korean officials alarmed by signs of student unrest

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The universities and colleges are closed for winter vacation until March but South Korean authorities are alarmed at the prospect of student disorders when classes resume and the weather warms.

Spring traditionally is a time of student activism when fair, warming weather lends itself to gatherings on campuses. This year, however, actions on the part of government and school authorities and responses from students have focused early attention on the student-state situation.

Students have played protest roles against various types of authority throughout Korea's long history.

In South Korea, they were in the forefront of activity that brought the downfall of the late President Syngman Rhee in 1960. They sought to continue their activist performance under the government of President Park Chung-hee, a former general, but firm measures kept them largely in check.

After Park was assassinated in October, 1979, students again were in the front ranks of those taking to the streets in widespread demonstrations that were ended with a harsh military crackdown in May, 1980.

Since then, under the government of President Chun Doo-hwan, another former general, student dissidents have staged sporadic rallies and demonstrations, denouncing the government. These outbursts were largely kept under control by police units on and near campuses across the country.

Hundreds of students were arrested under laws barring rallies or demonstrations without official authorization and many were expelled from their schools.

Then last Dec. 21, Education Minister Kwon E-hyock announced that the government would allow the 1,363 students expelled since 1980 to return to their schools, beginning with the term that opens in March.

Some student activists, however, voiced objections to the procedures that would put those expelled back in classes.

At the prestigious Seoul National University a meeting of ousted students was held Jan. 14 and some reports said their leaders protested the right of the school to screen them on a case-by-case basis for readmittance.

Iceland may be losing cod war as species drop

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — The lowest cod catch in 37 years spells serious trouble for this seafaring nation that earns three-quarters of its foreign exchange by exporting fish.

The Ministry of Fisheries recently estimated the 1983 cod take at 327,000 tons, a 92,400-ton drop from the 1982 catch and less than the 352,000 tons hoped for. After studying the species forecast from biologists at Iceland's Marine Research Institute, fisheries officials fixed the 1984 cod quota at 242,000 tons, which would mean the lowest harvest since 1947.

The sharp, unexplained drop in the cod population in the waters of their 200-mile economic zone is doubly puzzling to Icelanders because they once habitually blamed intruding foreign boats for any decline. Cod harvests once topped 500,000 tons, even when Icelanders and foreigners were battling for the catch.

However, after besting Great Britain in the third "Cod War" in 1975, Icelanders established their exclusive right to fish in the North Atlantic waters ringing their island. But despite the stricter catch limits and net mesh-size rules that have been implemented, the cod population started to fall in 1977.

"We are facing both a reduction in cod size and number, and it is still a mystery why," said Jon B. Jonasson, deputy secretary general of the Ministry of Fisheries. "We expected an increase, and instead have gotten a decrease. We have obviously been fishing too much, given the changing natural conditions."

According to Jonasson, the average 6-year-old cod, which should weigh more than 11 pounds, is now only 6½ pounds. Some biologists believe a concurrent drop in the population of capelin, a smelt-like species fed on by the cod, may be partly responsible.

Also mentioned as a possible cause by marine biologists is a recent one- or two-degree drop in the average temperature of Iceland's coastal waters, which never rises above 50 degrees Fahrenheit. That would slow fish growth and delay spawning.

The continued decline in the cod catch could have dramatic effects on the Icelandic economy. According to government statistics, cod accounted for more than half of the $463 million in fish products Iceland exported last year. About 15,000 Icelanders work aboard trawlers or in processing plants, making the fish sector the No. 1 employer in this nation of 238,000 people.

"We have been so dependent on fish for our national survival," the nation's president, Vigdis Finnbogadottir, said in an interview. "We now have to face the fact that we can't fish as much as we did before."

Training dogs his life work

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — Just call Cornelius Shoate "coach." For the past 53 years, Shoate has transformed thousands of green pups into adept bird hunters.

"I study them dogs like a football coach," Shoate said, his nickel-plated whistle hanging from his neck and camouflage cap cocked to the side of his head. "I prepare them for the guy out there looking for enjoyment."

Shoate, 74, learned the art of training bird dogs from his father, John Henry, who migrated from Louisiana to eastern Oklahoma around 1900.

"I've practically worked at it all my life," Shoate said in a recent interview at his farm about 10 miles west of the Arkansas-Oklahoma border south of Fort Smith. "When I was just a boy, about 10 years old, he'd take me with him. The old way sure was a slow deal. You just had to take them out and walk ... until you found birds."

With advances in training techniques — like electric collars, three-wheel motorcycles and raising one's own birds — Shoate said the task didn't take as long. "I can work a dog in about a week, where it took about two months."

Shoate stays busy. "I can't catch up," he said. "I haven't taken a vacation since 1953."

He works from his 40-acre farm northeast of Spiro, where he also raises pointers and Irish setters and quail. He said he earned a good living breeding and training dogs.

"A 3-year-old pointer will probably breed out $10,000 worth of pups a year," he said. An untrained starter dog sells for $600 to $800 and a fully trained top dog brings upward to $1,500.

Shoate gets about $200 for every green pup he trains. Usually Shoate runs one of his eight trained pointers with every two to three untrained dogs. He prefers the untrained dog to be at least a year old before he takes it because "he's still got a lot of play in him."

A normal work day for Shoate averages anywhere from two to eight hours. "It's a deal where you can work it any way you want to," he said.

Nonetheless, Shoate, who stands 6 feet tall and weighs a firm 190 pounds, said he walked his dogs about 10 miles a day, every day of the year. "Walking is some of the best medicine you can take," he said.

When he tires, Shoate mounts his three-wheeler and runs his dogs in an adjoining pasture, keeping them close with a "tweet" on his whistle.

James Burnett, of Cedar Hill, Texas, holds up a copy of the newsletter he publishes for "Mr. Ed Fan Club" members. Mr. Ed is the famous horse who talked his way through 143 TV episodes during the 1960s.

In minds of 1,100 fans, Mr. Ed lives

DALLAS (AP) — Singers have fan clubs. Athletes have fan clubs. Saturday morning cartoon heros have fan clubs. And now a talking horse has a fan club.

You remember the horse, of course, the famous "Mr. Ed."

The source of this unusual club is a 25-year-old self-proclaimed "Edhead" who publishes a newsletter for the 1,100 members of his "Mr. Ed Fan Club.

James Burnett hopes to revive the dead talking horse by returning the once-popular "Mr. Ed" television show to the airwaves.

Burnett runs his campaign to syndicate the show, which went off the air in the 1960s, from his tiny apartment in the Dallas suburb of Cedar Hill.

Although he had never actually watched the show, he founded the club in 1974 — by accident.

"I decided I needed the ultimate fake return address. So I used the 'Mr. Ed Fan Club' because I thought it would be completely absurd for Mr. Ed to have a fan club," Burnett said.

"Then in 1979 I decided to make a T-shirt with the return address on it and people stopped me on the street and said they wanted to join," he said.

Most of his 1,100 members, including Alan Young, the actor who played Wilbur Post, Mr. Ed's owner, have joined in the last year. Word of the club is spreading, Burnett says.

"Most people just love Mr. Ed. That's all there is to it," he said.

"Right now, Mr. Ed is not very heavily syndicated. He's actually shown in more foreign countries than in U.S. cities," he said.

"I have no idea why that is. But it presents an interesting challenge for me."

Burnett works at part-time odd jobs and hopes to make it big someday as a promoter. He's worked with rock musicians on concerts, handling some publicity, and believes the Mr. Ed Fan Club may lead to bigger career endeavors.

"He's something that was once very popular," Burnett said of the white talking horse, who liked bowling, driving a milk truck and sneezing "Wilburrrrr!"

"I have a chance to promote him and bring the show back," he said. "I think I've really tapped into something unusual."

The fan club, Burnett said, "Is a part-time job and a full-time debt."

The club has held two Mr. Ed parties in Dallas, where "Edheads" gather to watch videotapes of the black-and-white show.

"I had never seen Mr. Ed in my life until 10 months ago when an 'Edhead in California sent me a videotape for a party," Burnett said. "It was great. He's everything I thought he would be."

With a straight face, Burnett says the club wants to create a city dedicated to Mr. Ed, and he wants to call it "Edtopia."

A way with welfare

Given the chorus of complaints about the Reagan administration's brutal cuts in welfare, it might come as a shock to know that the total cost of the five largest public assistance programs has risen 37 percent since Reagan took office.

In 1980, the federal government spent $42.8 billion on the five so-called "safety net" programs: Aid for Families With Dependent Children (AFDC), Food Stamps, Supplemental Security Income (SSI), housing subsidies and Medicaid.

In 1983, that figure soared to $58.6 billion. Even after inflation is subtracted, that amounts to a real increase in public assistance programs of about 13 percent in three years.

While AFDC has been cut in real terms by about 9 percent, every other major public assistance program has increased from 8 percent (Medicaid) to as much as 42 percent (housing assistance) in constant 1980 dollars.

So, what's all the uproar? Mainly, it is about the way in which the Reagan administration completely reversed the nation's slide towards a "guaranteed annual income" approach to welfare. In effect, the Reagan revolution destroyed the notion that welfare should ever go to those who can work, and established the premise, however faultily applied, of the "social safety net" – that the government should help only the totally helpless.

It accomplished this revolution by two simple devices. First, it said that no one could be eligible for welfare whose family income was more than 150 percent of the state's "standard of need," a figure loosely related to the poverty line.

Second, it effectively abolished the system that allowed welfare recipients to work and still receive some welfare benefits. It did this by all but abolishing the so-called "work disregard" system which allowed AFDC recipients to "disregard" or "discount" initial increments of pay as well as "work-related" expenses, under which states were trying to create incentives to move AFDC recipients gradually back into the labor force.

Instead, the Reagan plan made all working families effectively ineligible for income assistance, a process that guaranteed a reduction in the total welfare rolls of about 350,000 to 400,000 families, or slightly more than 10 percent of AFDC. The administration also put heavy pressure on all states to adopt various forms of work and training programs such as "workfare."

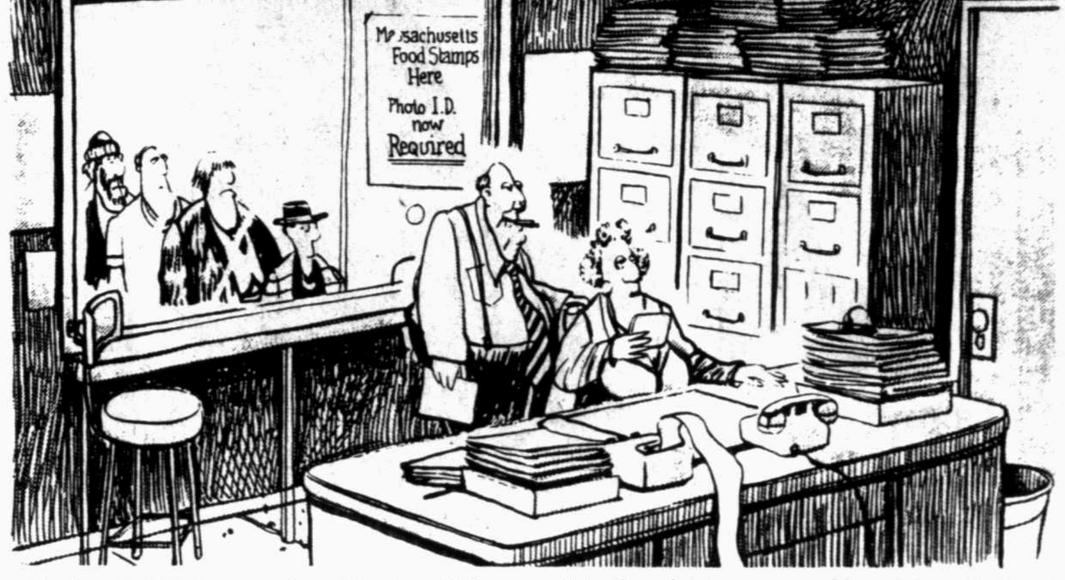

The effects of the Reagan reforms, especially in high-welfare states, were immediate and unambiguous.

For example, up through 1981, the conservative Edward King administration in Massachusetts had struggled almost in vain to curb one of the highest-in-the-nation welfare caseloads per capita. But between 1981 and the spring of 1983, primarily due to the Reagan initiatives in the 1981 Omnibus Reconciliation Act (OBRA), that caseload was slashed 28 percent from 122,000 to a little more than 88,000, the lowest Massachusetts level in more than 10 years.

Across the country, even in the face of a recessionary economy, welfare rolls were cut from August 1981 to August 1982 by about 11 percent. Even with the recession, there are now about 5 percent fewer families on welfare than in 1980.

At the outset, the Reagan plan was intensely criticized by both the left and the right because it was thought that removing the income disregards would give the working poor an incentive to go back on full-time welfare. But it didn't work out that way. In state after state, less than 10 percent of those cut off the program returned, and although the concept of "workfare" has not taken widespread hold, over half of the states now have some form of "Community Work Experience Program." Some are doing well with them. Michigan, for example, has placed 11 percent of its entire caseload in jobs, even in that depressed state economy.

Perhaps the best effect of the Reagan "safety net" policy is that contrary to public perceptions, it has targeted more of federal aid to the lowest income groups.

"I don't think we should give this guy his food stamps... He doesn't look very hungry in his picture."

ART BUCHWALD

Good advice just doesn't go cheap

A lady friend of mine from Maryland named Sally came into the office the other day and showed me a letter. "I need your advice on this."

Art Buchwald

I looked at the letterhead. It was from the "United States Congressional Advisory Board," which listed as Co-Chairmen Sen. Jake Garn (R-Utah), Sen. J. Bennett Johnston (D-La.), Rep. Jack Kemp (R-N.Y.), and Rep. Bill Chappell Jr. (D-Fla.)

The letter began, "We are writing to you today personally to invite you to join with us in the select United States Congressional Advisory Board.

"As a charter member you will advise and support the members of Congress (232 Senators and Representatives) who belong to the Coalition for Peace Through Strength. Our objective is to get today's and tomorrow's opinion leaders really involved and helping on defense, foreign policy, and internal security matters."

The letter then went on to say that the "Advisory Board" was in a fight with "well established ultra liberal organizations who have been unilaterally disarming the U.S. and are trying to keep us from rebuilding our strength."

It said that Sally could become a Chairmen's Advisor for $1,000, a Senior Advisor for $500, a Special Advisor for $250, and a State Advisor for $100, annually of course.

If Sally became an advisor to the chairmen, she would receive a "Handsome Engraved Wall Plaque to hang in her home or office. If she chose to be a senior, special or state advisor she would receive "a 9 x 12 Embossed and Sealed Membership Certificate."

She would also get a "Special Identification Tag" to wear to congressional receptions. But most important of all, Sally would "establish one-on-one relationships with Members of Congress and other leaders on the Congessional Advisory Board."

After finishing the letter I said, "It's a helluva honor, Sally. What's the problem?"

"I just have a feeling they're trying to get some money out of me."

"That's ridiculous. I'll bet they haven't sent out more than 500,000 letters like this. You should feel flattered that Garn, Johnston, Kemp and Chappell are seeking your input on the problems of this country. I know those guys and they don't take advice very easily."

"But," Sally protested, "I don't know anything about defense, foreign policy or internal security."

"Don't be modest, Sally. They apparently think otherwise or they wouldn't have written to you."

"I thought senators and congressmen held hearings and questioned expert witnesses on things like that."

"Of course they do. But then they also depend on advice from other sources. This is a great opportunity, Sally, that you may never have again. Just think of you sitting in a room with these four powerful legislators. They're up a tree on what to do about the arms talks and they turn to you in desperation and say, 'Sally, what do you think we should do to acquire a first-strike capability?'"

"Do you believe they'll really ask my opinion on things like that?"

"Of course they will. They're not going to put someone on a United States Congressional Advisory Board whose opinion they don't respect."

"How often do you think they'll want to meet with me?"

"It doesn't say here in the letter, but I would guess at least once a day. Also, I imagine when a big defense bill came up in Congress they would want to call you at home to see how they should vote."

"It's an awesome responsibility," Sally said.

"That's why they're asking you to send in $1,000 annually. This will prevent them from getting advice from deadbeats."

"Maybe I should just send in $250 and become a 'Special Advisor.' Then I'd have time for other things."

"You have to go for the big one, Sally," I told her. "No respectable United States senator or congressman is going to take advice from somebody who won't put her money where her mouth is."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

South Africans supporting junket

WASHINGTON — Seven members of Congress — five Republicans and two Democrats — recently embarked on a week-long junket to South Africa. Their way was paid, not by the taxpayers, but by the South Africa Foundation. This happens to be a lobbying group registered with the Justice Department as a foreign agent.

Jack Anderson

There are some serious ethical questions involved. The South Africa Foundation makes no bones about its efforts to halt the growing movement to get American companies to do no more business with South Africa.

Human rights groups believe that the threat to cut off U.S. investment in South Africa might force the government there to end its apartheid policy, which keeps blacks from voting and consigns an overwhelming majority of the population to the most menial jobs and humiliating social discrimination.

The South Africa Foundation claims to be "moderate" in its racial position and, in fact, has publicly opposed the South African government's segregationist policy. But human rights advocates say the foundation is really nothing more than a front for the South African government.

The seven members who took the foundation's tour of South Africa apparently see nothing wrong in accepting the freebie. When my associate John Dillon raised the question, each junketing member or his staff pointed out that the trip had been OK'd by either the House or Senate ethics committee.

"I had the opportunity to see really by and large what was going on there," said Rep. Ken Kramer, R-Colo. "The blacks can speak out, in a limited way."

Kramer conceded that "black political rights are clearly inadequate" — a masterpiece of understatement, considering that 70 percent of South Africa's people can't vote simply because of the color of their skin.

South Africa Foundation representatives have had little trouble meeting big shots in the Reagan administration, including Cabinet secretaries, high State Department officials, White House speech writers and CIA officers. The congressional junket apparently arose at a meeting between foundation lobbyist John Chettle and Republican Study Committee director Richard Dingman last year.

Besides Kramer, the travelers were Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, and Reps. Dan Burton, R-Ind.; Sam Hall, D-Tex.; Manuel Lujan, R-N.M.; Eldon Rudd, R-Ariz., and Robert Young, D-Mo.

I TOLD YOU SO: The combined miscalculations of Secretary of State George Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger have resulted in a Middle East debacle so depressing as to spoil the I-told-you-so's that console the spurned pundit.

From the beginning of the U.S. intervention in Lebanon, my intelligence sources warned that the Reagan administration was blundering into a quagmire from which there was no satisfactory exit.

These experts repeatedly warned — and I reported — that Syrian President Hafez Assad was skilled at treachery and troublemaking, that he "would be difficult for even the most determined opponents to outmaneuver," that he would pause to take the pulse of American resistance but "would not run away from a fight."

Yet the warnings, though they came from professionals who had correctly assessed Middle East developments in times past, were ignored by the Reagan administration. Here are just a few excerpts from the sorry record:

October 1982: Shultz and Weinberger assured President Reagan that the Lebanese army would be ready to take control of Lebanon in a matter of months. But I reported on Oct. 10 that the Lebanese army was in dreadful shape and that the Marines "may be in Lebanon for a lot longer than the American public has been led to believe."

November 1982: In a maneuver to reduce Israeli influence with the Lebanese government, Shultz and Weinberger urged the president to increase U.S. financial and military assistance. I warned on Nov. 15 that "Lebanon may now wind up as a U.S. protectorate."

December 1982: Shultz and Weinberger persuaded the president to make Jordan's King Hussein a strategic partner in arranging a Middle East settlement. But I reported on Dec. 22 that Hussein was "playing a cat-and-mouse game" with Reagan, that the king was "hesitant to sit down at the bargaining table," that he would prefer U.S. military aid "without the strategic honor."

April 1983: Shultz and Weinberger assured President Reagan that Assad would pull his forces out of Lebanon if the Israelis would withdraw. But I reported on April 29: "The Syrians will try to remain in Lebanon after Israeli troops and international peace-keeping forces agree to pull out."

May 1983: Intelligence agencies warned that Iranian-backed terrorists were planning suicide attacks on U.S. installations. I published the warning on May 10. I reported that "some alarming communications" had been intercepted, clearly indicating that "a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem group, fanatically loyal to the Ayatollah Khomeini," was preparing suicide missions. Yet U.S. Marine headquarters took no precautions to stop the suicide attack that cost the lives of 241 servicemen on Oct. 23.

Another View:

Khadafy's terrorism

Libya now has gone public with its terrorist campaign. For years it has served as one of the world's largest training centers for pro-Soviet terrorists, and financed guerrilla actions in many parts of the globe. But now it has said publicly that the radical factions it backs will go after allied multinational forces in Lebanon if they don't withdraw soon.

Moammar Khadafy, the junior-grade Hitler who runs Libya, long has been frustrated by his inability to realize his grandiose dreams of turning all of northern Africa into a greater Libya where he could map new conquests.

He looks upon terrorism as a means of expanding his influence and striking at those who stand in the way of his dreams of conquest.

Khadafy had better confine his plans for terrorist acts against multinational forces in Lebanon to talk. If he tries to carry them out, he could well discover that he has gotten his country into more trouble than it can handle.

A rejuvenated United States under Ronald Reagan is not going to permit Khadafy or any of his extremist friends to commit terrorist acts against American forces in Lebanon with impunity.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Costa Rica sees Kissinger report

WASHINGTON — The report of President Reagan's national bipartisan commission on Central America was received with unprecedented enthusiasm there.

William Giandoni

For example, the newspaper La Nacion of San Jose, Costa Rica, devoted 20 tabloid pages to printing the full text of the Spanish-language version of the report. Nowhere else, not even in the United States, was that done, so far as commission spokesmen know.

La Nacion decided to publish the report in its entirety in view of "the determinant repercussions that it will have on the course of events in this critical region," Central America.

The publishing company, La Nacion, S.A., Apartado 10138, San Jose, Costa Rica, is offering copies of its international edition, which also carried the Spanish-language version of the document, for $1. The English version may be purchased from the U.S. Government Printing Office.

The newspaper, Costa Rica's most prestigious, noted that at the same time that the Kissinger commission proposed channeling massive economic aid to Central America, some $8.4 billion over a period of five years, it reaffirmed U.S. hegemony in the area.

"Although in the critical cases of the (Central American) isthmus — El Salvador and Nicaragua — the report argues in favor of continuing diplomatic efforts in search of peace, rather than military initiatives, it confirmed that the strategic importance of the region demands an active and firm role of the United States without ruling out, in the end, use of force," La Nacion Internacional commented.

The document points to "the advances of Soviet and Cuban expansion in the zone and, although it backs the regional efforts of the Contadora Group to solve the political and economic conflicts, it adds that 'the United States cannot use the Contadora process as a substitute for its own policies,'" the paper said.

La Nacion mentioned that, although all 12 members of the commission signed the report, two registered points of disagreement. Mayor Henry G. Cisneros of San Antonio, Texas, and Carlos F. Diaz Alejandro, a Yale University economics professor, both objected to the covert support the U.S. government has been providing anti-Sandinista insurgents in Nicaragua.

Apparently overlooked by La Nacion and most other commentators were Diaz Alejandro's words on "the timidity of the report" with reference to expanded trade opportunities for the region.

"The most effective single policy for advancing long-term U.S. strategic interests in Central America," the Cuban-born Yale economist declared, "would be to offer complete and unimpeded access to the U.S. market to exports from Central American countries joining the development organizations proposed in the report."

Such a policy "would remain more cost-effective, over the long run, than direct economic and military aid," Diaz Alejandro affirmed. "Even with generous adjustment assistance to displaced U.S. workers and entrepreneurs," he added.

Not surprisingly, in view of commission member Robert S. Strauss' published complaint that the report has been "read by few, including those who have condemned it," there has been a minimum amount of comment on Diaz Alejandro's free trade recommendation.

However, the Washington Times, a conservative paper with particular expertise on Latin America, seconded Diaz Alejandro's idea of emphasizing trade, rather than aid.

"Ten times that $8 billion in Alliance for Progress-style welfare would not make a permanent dent in the region's economic problems," the paper said in an editorial.

"Democratic capitalism, eschewing the hokum of so-called land reform, and — along the lines of Professor Diaz Alejandro's recommendation — opening U.S. markets wider to Central American exports, would do wonders for the region and its people.

"So would getting rid of leftist and rightist terrorism; but there is going on down there, as the commission recognized, a war against communism or, as the commission calls it, Soviet-Cuban penetration," the paper continued.

"So let the Reagan administration go for the whole thing — $8 billion in economic aid as the price of increased military aid. If the liberals in Congress don't buy that, well, so much for their humanitarianism," the Washington Times concluded.

'Kiddie porn queen' pleads guilty in distribution case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A mother of five, dubbed the nation's "kiddie porn queen" by prosecutors, faces up to four years in prison and a federal trial that could bring another 85 years behind bars after pleading guilty to distributing child pornography.

"Guilty," Catherine Stubblefield Wilson, 44, murmured Tuesday in the surprise plea before state Superior Court Judge Diane Wayne. The judge set sentencing for April 12, about a week after Ms. Wilson's retrial on separate federal charges is to begin.

"We felt we had a strong case all along," said Deputy District Attorney Lael Rubin, who added tht she was delighted by the defendant's decision to plead guilty, because it would save the state the cost of prosecuting her.

Prosecutors alleged that Ms. Wilson's mail-order pornography business controlled 80 percent of the U.S. market for movies of explicit sex involving children. She made $500,000 a year from the business, they said.

The films and literature, about a decade old and apparently made in Scandinavia, showed children as young as 6 engaging in sex acts with one another, adults and animals, Ms. Rubin said. Ms. Wilson was not accused of making the films.

Although three misdemeanor counts of possessing obscene materials will be dropped, Ms. Wilson could face up to 85 more years in prison and $85,000 in fines if convicted on federal charges of unlawfully using the mail system and violating the Child Exploitation Act.

Ms. Wilson entered the guilty plea on the day her trial was to begin, after a series of conferences between attorneys and the judge.

In October, a U.S. District Court jury deadlocked 11-1 in favor of conviction. A mistrial was declared and retrial set for April 3.

Ms. Wilson also faces state charges that she violated probation and illegally received $12,000 in welfare payments between 1980 and 1982. When arrested in May 1982, she was on probation from a 1980 child pornography conviction for which she had received a two-year suspended sentence, three years' probation and a $3,750 fine.

AP Laserphoto

Catherine Stubblefield Wilson avoids the press after pleading guilty Tuesday to one felony count of distributing child pornography before trial on the charge could begin at Superior Court in Los Angeles.

Ms. Wilson solicited business by writing people known to have previously bought pornography and inviting them to join her "club" by mailing $3 to a Danish address for a brochure on films and literature, Ms. Rubin said.

Payments were sent to another address in Denmark. Danish contacts forwarded orders to Ms. Wilson and sent her money through banks in Switzerland and the Cayman Islands, Ms. Rubin said.

The banks sent her weekly checks of $990, small enough that they were unlikely to trigger authorities' curiosity, Ms. Rubin said.

Trawlers' collision kills at least 14

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Fourteen bodies and seven survivors were recovered from the icy Bering Sea after a Japanese fishing trawler collided with another boat and sank in gale-force winds and 25-foot seas, the Coast Guard said.

Three people remained missing today, and all the victims were from the sunken 186-foot stern trawler Kyowa Maru No. 11, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Kathleen Boatman.

Crewmen on the other boat, also a Japanese fishing trawler called the Anyo Maru No. 15, were unhurt in Tuesday's collision, and that vessel was not taking on water, she said.

The Coast Guard cutter Mellon reported that it remained at the site overnight and planned to launch a helicopter search for the missing crewmen today.

Ms. Boatman said the Kyowa Maru went down Tuesday morning about 15 minutes after transmitting an SOS from a point about 120 miles north of the Aleutian Islands settlement of Atka, 1,200 miles southwest of Anchorage.

The collision apparently occurred as the two vessels maneuvered so an observer from the National Marine Fisheries Service could be transferred from the Anyo Maru to the Kyowa Maru, said Dan Dewell, another Coast Guard spokesman. He said the observer was not yet on the Kyowa Maru when it sank, he said.

The Anyo Maru apparently picked up most of the bodies, although three other fishing vessels and the Mellon were in the area, Ms. Boatman said.

Dewell said the Mellon would help transfer bodies and survivors from other fishing vessels to the Anyo Maru before that ship headed to Adak so the survivors could be treated.

Five of the survivors were uninjured, but one had a broken arm and another had broken ribs, Dewell said. The Anyo Maru was to carry the survivors and the bodies back to Japan.

Winds were at gale force, with a 200-foot cloud ceiling and 25-foot seas, when the Kyowa Maru went down, said Dewell.

The Japanese Maritime Safety Agency in Tokyo said the 349-ton Kyowa Maru was owned by the Fishery Association in Onahama in northern Japan, and the 279-ton Anyo Maru is owned by Anyo Fishing Co. in Shiogama, near Onahama.

Both trawlers left Japan late last year to fish for pollack, the agency said.

Airlines would rather 'fight than switch' smoking rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — During 18 years as a flight attendant, Joyce Young has grown to hate people who smoke on airplanes.

She remembers the intoxicated man who scorched his seat and then went to the restroom and accidently set some tissues on fire; the dozing passenger who "burned a hole deep into his pillow;" and smokers and non-smokers continually getting into confrontations at 30,000 feet.

So she went to the Civil Aeronautics Board on Tuesday to urge the panel to ban smoking on jetliners. Her plea followed a caution that she was speaking for herself and not her employer, who remained unidentified.

The decade-long debate over smoking on airplanes remains one of the touchiest and most controversial subjects in the airline industry. The carriers have lined up united against any tampering with the current smoking regulations, but few want to be too visible for fear of alienating non-smoking passengers.

The CAB also has equivocated. Three years ago it rejected a proposal to ban smoking on shorter flights. But after being prodded by a federal court ruling, the board soon, probably next month, will decide whether to impose for the first time a ban on smoking on flights of less than two hours.

The move would turn many airlines into virtually "no smoking" carriers. US Air, for example, says more than 90 percent of its flights would come under such a ban.

While there are only two airlines that have prohibited smoking — a small New England commuter line, Air North, and the Texas-based Muse Air — most airlines would like to see the issue go away.

"This is a very emotional subject," Kathleen O. Argiropoulis, a representative of the Air Transport Association, told the board Tuesday, leading off a list of nearly 40 witnesses who argued either for or against the CAB's proposed smoking ban.

"We are the party in the middle" between smokers and non-smokers, she told the board, but "smoking is a fact of life. It is something we must accommodate."

Representatives from a number of airlines said they fear that a smoking ban would force customers to go elsewhere — either to foreign carriers that would not have to comply with the rule or airlines that have longer, perhaps more indirect flights, that would not be subject to the two-hour rule.

FCC probes cable franchises

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission, after receiving evidence that some of its cable TV rules are being ignored, is investigating whether local governments are illegally collecting millions of dollars in cable franchise fees.

The probe, launched last week and acknowledged Tuesday by top FCC officials, was prompted by a survey conducted by the National Cable Television Association. The survey indicates that as many as 8 percent of the nation's 5,800 cable TV systems may be paying their local government a large franchise fee that has not been approved by the FCC.

James C. McKinney, the chief of the FCC's Mass Media Bureau, said he ordered his staff to immediately investigate 67 cities identified by the cable television association as collecting improperly high franchise fees. Depending on the results, the probe's scope could be significantly expanded, he said.

Both McKinney and the cable television association declined to identify the 67 cities. McKinney said it was clear, however, that "millions of dollars could be involved."

According to the association's president, Thomas E. Wheeler, an estimated $150 million in franchise fees was paid nationwide by cable operators in 1983.

"We now suspect that a lot of money is passing hands between cable and the cities that consumers don't know anything about," McKinney added.

Workers race to overhaul second U.S. battleship

WASHINGTON (AP) — While U.S. officials differ on how the mighty guns of the battleship New Jersey will be used in Beirut, workers at a Mississippi shipyard have been on the job round the clock to overhaul its sister ship, the Iowa.

The Iowa will be commissioned in mid-April and rushed to the Lebanese coast two months later to relieve the New Jersey, Navy Secretary John Lehman said Tuesday.

It will be the first time since World War II that a ship will remain on station until its replacement can be commissioned, Navy officials said.

The rotation also will end the year-long voyage of the New Jersey, one of the longest deployments since World War II, said the officials, speaking on condition they not be named.

When the Reagan administration took office three years ago, a centerpiece of its build-up of the Navy from 450 to 600 ships was the recommissioning of the four mothballed World War II battlewagons — the New Jersey, the Iowa, the Missouri, and the Wisconsin.

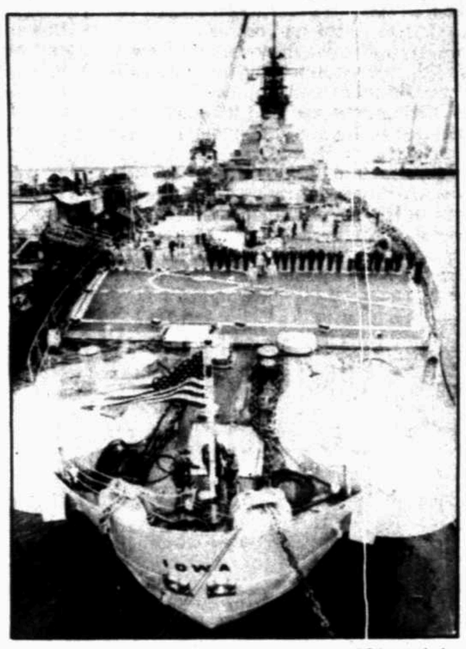

While critics said the ships were floating dinosaurs liable to be easily sunk by modern "smart" weapons such as missiles, Lehman and other battleship defenders said they would come in handy for projecting power in the Third World.

The New Jersey, recommissioned last year in Long Beach, Calif., was put to sea in June on a voyage to the eastern Pacific. It was later rerouted to Central America as part of exercises to demonstrate American resolve there and was rushed to Beirut in mid-September to support U.S. Marines as part of a multinational peacekeeping force in that war-torn nation.

Workers at the Ingalls Shipyard in Pascagoula, Miss., began round-the-clock shifts in December, trying to finish the Iowa recommissioning before its scheduled mid-June finish. When the Iowa is off Beirut, the New Jersey will return home to Long Beach.

The extra shifts will add $17 million to the original $326 million cost of the Iowa job, Lehman said.

He also said work on the Missouri will be speeded up, if Congress approves. The battleship, now at Bremerton, Wash., will be towed to Long Beach so work can begin next fall rather than next winter, Lehman said.

Reagan delays ordering security rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under pressure from Congress, President Reagan is delaying orders for using lie detectors in national security investigations and requiring some public employees to get their writings approved, even after leaving government service.

Reagan's decision, made in the past four days, will hold off indefinitely implementation of the order that would have included employees throughout the government who handle classified information.

"The two provisions are to be held in abeyance pending consultations with Congress aimed at strengthening and improving our ability to safeguard national security information while at the same time protecting the rights of individuals," said an administration official, who spoke on condition that he not be identified by name.

He said the delay itself would go into effect after Reagan signs an amendment to the original "decision directive" that imposed the limits and notification about the changes is sent to the various government departments.

Reagan had planned to put the limits into effect April 15. They originally applied to the Defense Department.

The president's order would have extended the limits to government officials elsewhere including the State Department, Justice Department and a number of agencies where classified information is handled.

One administration official, also requesting anonymity, said the administration was engaged in negotiations with Congress over implementation of the extended coverage.

He said efforts were being made to work out ways to "meet our goals satisfactory to Congress."

He said as a result of the new delay, it was uncertain when the regulations would go into effect.

Congressional critics said the provision would cover about 128,000 current federal employees once they retire and the figure would grow annually.

The Republican-controlled Senate voted 56-34 last Oct. 20 to delay the plan by six months. Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., plans to hold subcommittee hearings on the order later this month.

In the House, Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, the influential chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, has submitted legislation to block the order permanently and plans to move his bill quickly.

Reagan's order, entitled the National Security Decision Directive No. 84, was issued last March. It reflected his concern about a number of articles and books that he was said to feel could compromise national security. But it had two sweeping and unprecedented provisions which immediately drew fire from members of Congress and civil liberties, press and legal groups.

Former USIA official says director knew of blacklist

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leslie Lenkowsky, acting deputy director of the U.S. Information Agency, knew of a "blacklist" excluding people from a government overseas lecture program last November, a former USIA official says in a Washington Post interview published today.

W. Scott Thompson, who resigned last month as the agency's associate director for programs, said he warned Lenkowsky about the speakers blacklist during a meeting in Lenkowsky's office. Thompson described as a "flat lie" Lenkowsky's statement that he did not know about the blacklist until last week. Lenkowsky said he ordered it killed immediately.

The list was drawn up by senior USIA officials to exclude people perceived as liberals from the overseas speakers program. Among others, it included former CBS News anchorman Walter Cronkite, civil rights activist Coretta Scott King and Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y.

"The list only showed up in reaction to Lenkowsky's pressure," Thompson told the Post.

Dan White living with producer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Convicted assassin Dan White is living rent-free in a movie producer's Bel-Air mansion and has received a $50,000 advance for a book about his experiences, an attorney says.

The producer has the movie rights to the book, said Orange County attorney Jeff Walsworth, who represents a group of businessmen who last month offered $25,000 for information on White's whereabouts.

Walsworth said Tuesday that a member of the group, the Orange County Citizens Protection Association, had met with White twice since his release from prison last month. In the meetings, White expressed remorse for the 1978 shootings of San Francisco Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk, he said.

Walsworth declined to name either the producer or the man who met with White at the Bel-Air mansion and at a Los Angeles restaurant.

White, a former San Francisco supervisor, was convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the deaths of Moscone and Milk after his lawyers argued he had suffered "diminished capacity," partly because of his junk-food diet.

White spent five years in prison. When paroled Jan. 6, he was ordered to stay out of San Francisco for one year. One of White's victims, Milk, was openly homosexual, and White's move to Los Angeles sparked demonstrations by homosexuals who said he was a threat to that city.

White said he was "regretful about the incident, that a lot of people didn't realize it, but this would be something that would be chained to him the rest of his life and that he would have to live with it — it would always cause him inner turmoil," Walsworth said.

White acknowledged that his sentence "was very lenient, but he said it was because of loopholes created in the system — and that any citizen would have taken advantage of those loopholes if they were in the same spot as he was," Walsworth said.

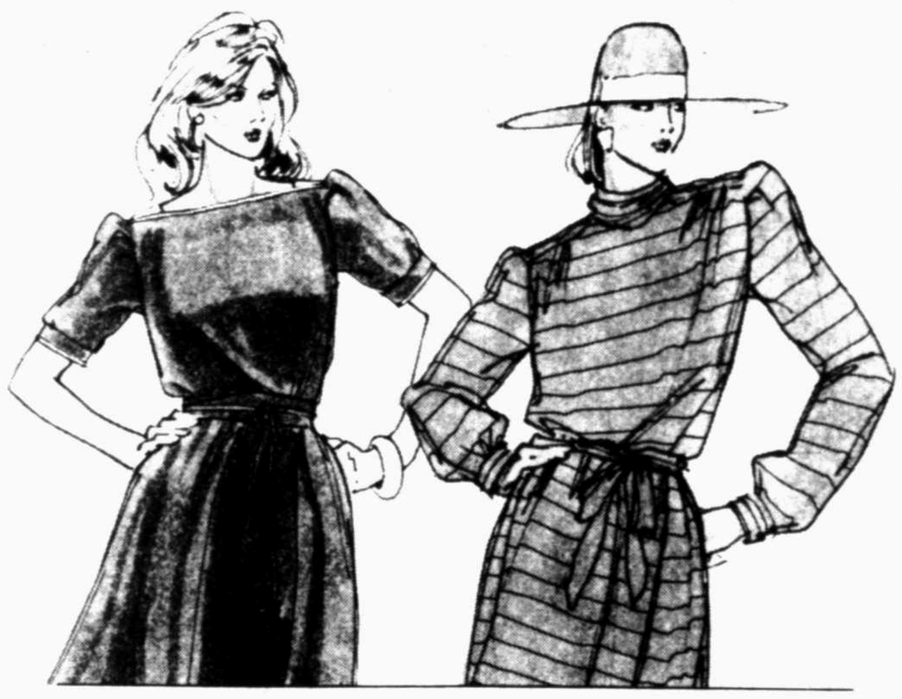

White told the association member that "he intends to ultimately return back to his home, and that nobody would stop him from returning...but he was going to wait until he felt that it was safe to do," Walsworth said.

White contacted the Citizens Protection Association and arranged a meeting after verifying his identity.

Lee girls get Palo Duro here

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — To the victor go the spoils! Well, sometimes — but not Tuesday.

San Angelo defeated Midland Lee 48-40 in a District 4-5A girls basketball playoff game here Tuesday at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. That's about all the Bobcats won.

At the conclusion of the game, both teams met their opponents for the upcoming bi-district playoffs to determine site and time and it was Midland Lee that came out on top.

The playoff victory makes San Angelo the No. 1 team from 4-5A in the playoffs and the Bobcats will meet Amarillo High, No. 2 in District 3-5A. In a coin flip for home-and-home, AHS came out the winner, sending the Bobcats on a long road trip for the Saturday bi-district meeting in Amarillo at 7:30 p.m.

Meanwhile Lee coach Shirley Stephenson and Amarillo Palo Duro coach Pearl Tremble couldn't agree on a home-and-home situation or neutral site so they flipped for it. Tremble won the toss and chose home-and-home. The coin was tossed a second time and this time Stephenson won, giving her Rebels the home court advantage Saturday night, also at 7:30 p.m.

Girls Playoff

So much for advantage to the winner.

IN GAINING the No. 1 position in district 4-5A, after a 12-2 tie and co-championship with Lee during the regular season of play, San Angelo took advantage of the Rebels at the foul line, hitting 18-of-29 free throws for the 48-40 victory.

Bonnie Smith, alone, did more damage to the Rebels than the rest of her team combined. In the first half she hit 8-of-11 charity tosses, 13-of-19 for the game and missed only two field goals in 10 tries for her game-high 29-point effort.

"She can shoot the ball. No doubt about it," said Stephenson. "They beat us on the free throw line and not just because of the free throws but when they missed they got the rebound and and made it or got fouled again."

Also, San Angelo's shot selection, which produced a 58 percent field goal percentage, was a lot better than Lee's. The Rebels, shooting only 33 percent from the field, couldn't keep the Bobcats away from their back door.

In a 13-6 first quarter, San Angelo scored from five feet or less every time and didn't drop one in from long range until there was only 2:54 remaining in the half when Smith hit a 10-footer. She followed that shot with a steal for a layup and then added three free throws and a second 10-footer for San Angelo's largest lead of the game, 28-14, going into the lockerroom at half time.

"In the first half we didn't play," said Stephenson. "Our press was not effective. In the second half we came to life. We missed some shots in the game that ringed around the rim. We'll be playing both halves on Saturday, I can promise you."

IN THE second half, the Rebels gave themselves a chance to win the ball game by cutting the lead to nine points, 34-25, going into the final quarter. Lee kept putting on the pressure defense, forcing 18 second half turnovers against only four and slowly cut the point spread down to striking distance.

With only a minute gone, Stacy Harmon and Felicia Farias hit field goals to cut the margin to 35-29 (Smith had a free throw for SA) only to let Smith loose again for a pair of buckets and a 10-point margin, 39-29.

Midland Lee's Tyrone Thurman (10) is about to pick the back pocket of Abilene Cooper's Joe Melson (41) for a steal and two points for Lee during District 4-5A game at Chaparral Center Tuesday night. Lee lost, 65-63, and was eliminated from any playoff hopes in 1983.

Bulldogs stay alive

MHS beats Abilene, 82-78, on road

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — Midland High bit the bullet here Tuesday night with a big 82-78 road victory over Abilene High to remain in the thick of the District 4-5A playoff battle.

The Bulldogs entered the contest facing elimination with a loss, but turned what could have been a nightmare trip against a team that had already beaten the Bulldogs in Midland this year into a wild scoring celebration.

With only one district game left, MHS and Abilene High are tied for second place in the league standings with identical 9-4 loop records. Odessa Permian, by virtue of Tuesday's 61-46 win over Big Spring, leads the league with a 10-3 mark.

NONE OF THE three leaders face each other Friday. MHS meets Midland Lee while Permian tests Odessa High and Abilene High meets Abilene Cooper. If all three teams win Friday, Permian will be in the state playoffs while MHS and AHS will have to meet again in a one-game playoff to see who gains state playoff entrance.

Should Permian lose while both MHS and AHS win, a three-way tie would result for first place and there would have to be a combination of coin flips and playoff to determine the district representatives. Should either MHS or AHS lose Friday, things would be simple since you would have two clear cut playoff powers.

But the important thing Tuesday was that the Bulldogs put themselves in position to think about the playoff possibilities.

Darrell Davis scored 25 points to lead the charge while Chris Rooker poured in 24 points. Kenneth Johnson added 14 in the scoring explosion.

The Eagles' got 14 points each from Tom Simmons and Kirt Robinson while five other Abilene players each scored eight points.

The Bulldogs trailed 45-42 at the half after the Eagles exploded for 31 second quarter points. The 31 points by Abilene was the most points scored in one period by a district team this year.

But Midland High had a 20-14 advantage in the third period to take a three point lead and went on to its big victory push.

PERMIAN got 16 points from Rodney Hendrix, 12 from Orlando Ontiveroz and 10 from Paul Logan against Big Spring as the Panthers maintained control of the league race.

In the only other 4-5A games Tuesday, Midland Lee was eliminated from the race in a 65-63 loss to Abilene Cooper and San Angelo stopped the hot streak of Odessa High with a 66-62 victory. Zane Hoppe led San Angelo with 16 points and Ottoway Perryman had 13. Joe Terry, the league's leading scorer, had another 21-point night for the Bronchos.

Lee football fete tonight

The Midland Lee football banquet will be held at 6:30 p.m. tonight at the Midland Center. Bill Sarpalius, state senator from Amarillo, will be the guest speaker at the fete to honor the Rebels' state Class 5A football finalists.

Lee lost to Converse Judson, 25-21, in the state finals at Texas Stadium in Irving, a game in which the winning touchdown was scored immediately after a controversial call in which Judson retained possession of the ball on a fumble.

Coach Spike Dykes' Rebels became the first Class 5A team from Midland to advance beyond the second round of state playoff competition.

Tickets for tonight's banquet are on sale at Lee High School.

Healthy Cougars terminate Midland Lee playoff hopes

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

One thing the Midland Lee Rebels didn't need to see at Chaparral Center Tuesday night was a sickless band of Cougars from Abilene Cooper.

The last time Lee faced Cooper, the Cougars had their top two scorers Bob Estes and Joe Melson suffering from a flu bug. They were both well Tuesday to help hang a 65-63 defeat on the Rebels, eliminating Lee from any District 4-5A playoff hopes in 1983.

The sad part of the loss was dealt after the Lee-Cooper game was over when Lee learned that Midland High had beaten Abilene High. That means if Lee could have found three more points, they would still be in the playoff hunt today.

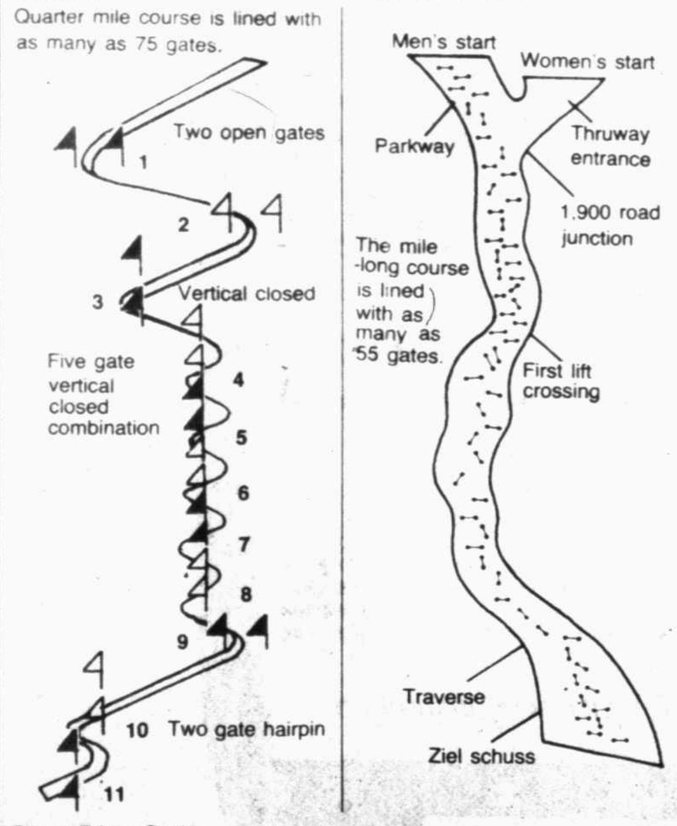

But now it's a mere three-team race with Odessa Permian leading the pack with a 10-3 record while Abilene High and Midland High are locked at 9-4 with one game left to play and two playoff berths to divide.

Lee is now 7-6 and out of the running — and wishing they hadn't been witness to Cooper's hot shooting revival. The Cougars ripped the cords with a 52 percent shooting eye from the field (23-44) and hit 19 of 25 from the charity line. It was a supreme shooting lesson.

Lee hit only 39 percent from the field with 26 of 67 shots and still lost by only two points. Lee shot 30 times alone in the fourth period during a furious effort to erase a 10-point

New coach, new philosophy

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Doug McCutchen walked into the job of head football coach at Midland High Tuesday afternoon clad in a grey suit of pinstripes and a tie that had hints of both purple and gold. The new era at MHS had begun.

McCutchen is a mere coaching babe at the age of 34, but owning a Southwest Conference playing heritage of a labeled star. And now the job — the challenge of turning around the Midland High football program.

McCutchen inherits a team that is coming off a 4-6 season and 17-23 over the last four years under Pat Culpepper, who resigned to become coach and athletic director at Lufkin last month. The Bulldogs have not had a winning tradition to hold to. It is now from McCutchen that the Purple and Gold seek fortune.

Considering his age, many expected Midland's newest citizen to be wrapped in diapers, but what was found was a man who seems to know where he is going. He made it known quickly that the chore of making MHS a winner will be done his way.

"I'm sure we won't be as rowdy and rambunctious as some of those in the past," said McCutchen. "I don't know Pat Culpepper very well, but I do know we are different.

"We will stress fundamental football at Midland High and we will run the Veer offense. I believe in the Veer as an offensive weapon and it is up to us to sell it to our kids. Of course, we are hoping for immediate success for Midland High, but being realistic, we know that it will take a while with the change in philosophy.

"We are going to work to get every teacher, administrator and fan behind our program. This is a strong suit in Midland because a lot of that is already in place."

McCutchen brings a four-year coaching record of 22-19 with him to Midland High from two head coaching jobs in Liberty and Forest Klein. Both of those teams had 1-9 seasons before he took over and made winners out of both schools. It was this trait that landed him the job at MHS.

"We think we have one of the finest young coaches in the state," said Midland athletic director Gil Bartosh. "He's up and coming and we think he is perfect for Midland High."

McCutchen met with media representatives Tuesday afternoon following the school board meeting that officially gave him the football reigns of Midland High. Later, he held a private meeting with his team members before catching a plane back to the Houston area. He plans to return to Midland Tuesday to start his job full time.

Doug McCutchen
....Midland High's new coach

BUT WHAT is the lure to bring him back to West Texas?

"I consider myself a West Texan. I grew up in West Texas, going to school at Bronte and Texas Tech," said McCutchen. "My first coaching job was at San Angelo and I always wanted to come back and be a part of this district.

"This is the greatest district in the state. It has been the same for years on end and has developed rivalries and traditions. In South Texas, the districts seem to change every couple of years and they don't have what this district has."

McCutchen is aware that Midland High has some travelling to do before it is a 4-5A power, but he is ready for the challenge.

"Of course, I'm not that familiar with the kids, but this isn't like a college. We can't recruit. We're all going to have to come together at the same time," said McCutchen.

He takes over the MHS program at a time that cross town rival Midland Lee has risen to its highest station in football life, playing for a state championship. McCutchen is not threatened by the fact of a two-school community.

"Actually, I see Lee's season last year as a plus. It was a great thing for the whole community to be involved in," said McCutchen. "It's my understanding that many Midland High fans followed Lee last year in the playoffs. Our kids should be able to see that and it should have a carryover effect. I would hope that if we made the playoffs, the Lee fans would jump on our bandwagon. The playoff experience is good for the community as a whole and does nothing but help everyone."

Arkansas State coach censured

From wire reports

BASKETBALL—Arkansas State coach Marvin Adams was censured by the Southland Conference and suspended for one game. Adams, an eight-year veteran with the Indians, was punished for remarks he made to reporters after a game last month against Lamar University. Adams was quoted as saying that game officials were intimidated by the crowd before the Arkansas State-Lamar University game in Beaumont in mid-January, and that it affected their judgment for the first eight or nine minutes of the game. The comments were made prior to the return game in Jonesboro last week, and were intended to generate crowd reaction above that which is expected voluntarily, according to Oliver...

Michael Cage, San Diego State, was named WAC Player of the Week for the third time this season. This time the 6-9 junior scored 92 points and grabbed 41 rebounds in wins over UTEP, New Mexico and a loss to Wyoming...

Maryland senior guard Steve Rivers quit the team in the wake of his conviction in a drug case. Coach Lefty Driesell said Monday that Rivers could have rejoined the team if he had so desired. The 21-year-old government and politics major said he is scheduled to graduate in May, and wanted to spend more time studying...

Sam Houston State has purchased a 27.7-acre site next to its Huntsville campus for a $7.5 million stadium, to be completed August 1985. It will replace Pritchett Field, built in the 1930s and used by both the university and Huntsville High School...

Charles Osborne, 77, father of University of Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, died in Hastings, Neb.,after suffering a heart attack while driving on a city street...

BASEBALL—Pittsburgh's Pirates, who renegotiated their 40-year lease at Three Rivers Stadium, now are being asked to re-evaluate the long-term lease signed for their Bradenton, Fla., spring training camp. Bradenton officials hope they can persuade the team to renegotiate a lease that calls for the city to mainain the Pirates' four-diamond training complex in the eastern Florida city.

"We're in the same boat the Pirates were in," said councilman Fred Runnells. "We can no longer afford the Pirates. We've got a contract we can't live with."...

Loren Babe, 56, who played a pivotal role in the Chicago White Sox organization since 1975, died Tuesday of cancer. Chama comes alive

CHAMA, N.M.—Chama comes alive again for the 12th annual Chama Chile Cross-Country Ski Classic on Sunday. The race begins at 11 a.m. at Cumbers Pass, 15 miles north of Chama. Courses of either five or 10 kilometers can be run.

Each year this event draws a mixed blend of young and old, experienced and beginner skiers. Entrants will be categorized according to age and may enter either the five or 10-K events.

There will be a pre-Chile Dance at the Chama Recreational Hall at 8 p.m. Saturday. The weekend event will conclude with an awards ceremony at 3 p.m. at the hall. Prizes range from a ristra of chile to a special award for the last skier to cross the finish line. Each entrant will receive a commemorative ski pin.

Participants should pre-register to avoid long lines on race day. For more information, contact: Mountains and Rivers, 2320 Central S.E., Albuquerque, N.M., 87106 or call 515-268-4876.

Mahre twins frustrated

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Mahre brothers are thus far the Frustrated Brothers of the Winter Olympics.

The World Cup season has been a long nightmare for Phil and Steve. And Tuesday's Olympic competition in the men's giant slalom proved to be more of the same.

Phil, the three-time World Cup overall champion, finished eighth. Twin brother Steve was 17th.

"I wanted to win medals here," said Phil, 26, of Yakima, Wash. "I came in really relaxed and confident. I thought I was going to ski very well here. It just didn't pan out that way.

"This whole season has basically gone this way for me. My timing is not right. I'm in a rut and I can't get out of it. It's hard to understand why."

Phil's best result in a World Cup race this season is a fourth. He ranks a distant 20th in the overall standings. There won't be a fourth title for him, not this year and perhaps never if he goes ahead with his retirement plans next month.

Steve is having an even worse season. He ranks 49th overall.

"That first run today I skied one of the best runs I've had all year, and then I fell," he said. He recovered, but it cost him time. "From then on, it just went downhill for the day. I tried too hard on the second run and didn't let my skis run."

The Mahres were in agreement on what they thought of the course-setting and course preparation:

"They put water on the giant slalom course and you don't need that," said Steve.

"The Austrians and the Swiss like the hard snow — the Yugoslavs, too — that's why they watered it," said Phil. "It should not happen.

"And there were a ridiculous number of gates on that hill. The guy who set the gates on that first run doesn't deserve to be setting gates in the Olympic Games."

And they were in agreement on what they expect to do in the men's slalom on Sunday:

"I usually ski my best slalom on this kind of snow," said Phil.

"I feel really good about my slalom and feel I can win on any day," said Steve.

McCutchen named

McCutchen will receive around $40,200, the same as was awarded new Midland Lee coach Jack Tayrien last month when he replaced Spike Dykes, who left Lee to join the Texas Tech coaching staff.

Bartosh said that McCutchen would be allowed initially to bring in three new assistant coaches, which is normal procedure with new coaches in Midland. Lee's Tayrien is searching for one coach at the present time as he elected to keep all of the Lee staff who wanted to stay. So far, there has been no defections in the coaching ranks at Lee.

"My first priority is to get the staff set," said McCutchen. "I've talked to two people already, but nothing has been set in blood yet. I plan to interview the current staff at Midland High early next week and see which ones I would like to stay. There are some fine coaches already here from what I can see."

Of course, McCutchen was greeted with a blustery greeting from the West Texas wind Tuesday. It didn't phase him. "I can come out here and breathe the dust or I could stay down around Houston and rust."

School board member Joe Golding gave McCutchen his first orders, saying, "We don't expect a state championship for two years."

McCutchen replied, "Good. Then there's no early pressure."

The new era was underway.

Doc opposes more fights for Sugar Ray

BOSTON (AP) — The doctor who operated on Sugar Ray Leonard's right eye said Tuesday it will be two weeks before the boxer can start training again for his postponed comeback match. But Dr. Edward Ryan also said he doesn't think Leonard should fight at all.

"I wouldn't recommend that he fight, but if the eye heals up properly I could not prevent him from fighting" said Ryan, a retinal specialist at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary.

Ryan operated on the former welterweight champion Monday, after a checkup showed the retina in his right eye was becoming loose.

"Sugar Ray tolerated the procedure very well," said Ryan, who had never examined the boxer before. "His eye will be a little sore."

Ryan said Leonard's left eye, operated on in 1982, is fine but noted that without the surgery in his right eye, the boxer could not have fought safely against Kevin Howard on Feb. 25. The match has been postponed and no new date has been announced.

"There could have been further damage," Ryan said. "We decided right away that he should not fight."

The fighter was resting in the Washington area. Efforts to reach him and his attorney Mike Trainer were unsuccessful.

The 27-year-old fighter had surgery on his left eye in May 9, 1982, to repair a partly detached retina and retired from boxing the following Nov. 9. He had a 32-1 record and was undisputed welterweight champion at the time.

Last Dec. 10, Leonard announced his comeback against Howard at the Worcester Centrum.

"If his eye is bad and he can't fight, then God bless him," Howard said night. "I have to step on. If we don't fight, give me another opponent."

Ryan said the routine procedure involved freezing part of the eye to form scar tissue that would make the retina adhere better. The surgery, performed under local anesthesia, took five or six minutes.

The doctor said he expected Leonard's eye to heal well, but added that Leonard would have to be examined before every fight to ward off trouble.

"Fighters should be screened for this prior to boxing," Ryan said.

Asked when he thought Leonard could fight again, Ryan said "We'll have to see how his eye responds."

Syracuse wins against Friars

By Associated Press

It was a great night for Providence center Otis Thorpe . . . but a better night for the Syracuse basketball team.

While Thorpe scored 28 points and collected 15 rebounds Tuesday night, most of his damage was done in the first half. When Syracuse finally adjusted the defense after intermission, the game belonged to the Orangemen, 89-64.

"Once we got the lead, we took Thorpe away," said Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim. "When you're down eight to 10 points it's tough to make the 18-footers from outside."

Thorpe scored 21 of his points in the first half before the Orangmen went from a man-to-man defense to a three-two zone. The zone helped to shut off Thorpe inside, while Syracuse ran away to a hefty lead behind their own sharp-shooting Rafael Addison.

The Big East game between the 16th-ranked Orangemen and Providence was the only one involving a Top Twenty team Tuesday night.

Led by Addison, who scored 24 points, the Orangemen exploded away from a 41-36 halftime lead to a 57-42 margin just 5:48 into the second period after three consecutive baskets by Gene Waldron.

Sean Kerins contributed 16 points in the winning effort, while Waldron and Dwayne Washington had 12 apiece as Syracuse beat Providence for the eighth straight time.

Providence forward Ray Knight scored 11 points for the Friars and Donald Brown added 10.

"Nobody scores 80 points against Providence," said Boeheim. "Nobody, not in our league. (But) we just moved the ball super, we missed a lot of easy shots — it could have been higher."

Others

In other action, Devin Durrant scored 33 points, including a field goal with three seconds left in the second overtime, to lead Brigham Young to an 87-85 Western Athletic Conference victory over Hawaii.

The Rainbows' Andre Morgan tied the game with 42 seconds left in regulation play when he connected on two free throws. Jack Miller's field goal tied it with 1:48 left in the first overtime.

Durrant scored both of BYU's baskets in the second overtime, as both teams tried to play patient basketball and get the high-percentage shot.

College drug-testing on way

NEW YORK (AP) — John Toner, president of the NCAA, said Tuesday that drug testing for athletes competing in college championship events is under consideration and that he would favor such measures.

"The consensus is we must do something other than educational messages," said Toner.

He made his remarks in answer to a question at a news conference hosted by the Metropolitan Basketball Writers Association.

"Many individuals can't conceive that substance abuse could happen on their campuses, but it is here and in all forms," said Toner, University of Connecticut athletic director now in his second term as president of the NCAA. Toner said the NCAA would observe the drug testing procedures used at the Olympics in Los Angeles this summer, and then review the subject in the fall.

Lee loses, wins

With 1:42 remaining, Lee came back to within five, 43-38, but failed to convert on three one-and-one situations down the stretch. The Bobcats continued hitting their bonus shots, scoring their last nine points from the line for the win.

San Angelo started than final string of free throws with 5:10 left in the game, the same time Tunya Mayberry, Lee's leading rebounder with six, picked up her fifth personal foul. She also left the game with eight points and a pair of steals.

Harmon led all Rebels scorers with a 14-point effort, three steals and a blocked shot while Farias added 12 points and four steals.

Val Schlaudt was the game's board queen with 12 rebounds but added only six points.

SPORTS WITH A LIVING ROOM VIEW

ABC recovering from hockey flop

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — He sits at a long U-shaped table in the control room, flanked by aides and looking at 84 television screens, most of them alive and dancing before his eyes. He must take bits and pieces of each and weld them into a harmony of scenes and sounds that will delight TV viewers around the world.

Roone Arledge is a busy maestro, orchestrating what at the moment is the Greatest Show on Earth — the XIV Olympic Winter Games in this snow-draped Balkan citadel.

"I haven't been out of the office to change a dollar into Yugoslav currency yet," said the president of ABC News and Sports, dressed casually in cowboy boots, a shirt opened at the neck and a sweater. "A friend took me out the other night and I had to borrow money for the tips."

ABC estimates that 170 million people in the United States are watching some part of these Games with hundreds of millions in other parts of the world enjoying them as a result of ABC's technical facilities.

"Some people say viewers could number 2 billion," Arledge said skeptically. "I'm not sure there are that many sets in the world."

There are enough to make him as nervous as an expectant father.

Since the Games started, Arledge has worked 16 to 20 hours a day, sometimes getting as little as three hours' sleep.

WITH A STAFF of more than 900, including seasoned producers, broadcasters and technicians, he is not content to sit in an ivory tower, writing out orders and letting his aides do the job.

TV broadcasts of Olympic Games since 1968 have borne the thumbprint of this low-key, New York-born, Columbia University-educated communications genius who has become synonomous with sports broadcasting.

His genius was severely tested last week.

After paying $91.5 million for the right to produce 63.5 hours of coverage of the Sarajevo Olympics for U.S. audiences, most of it taped and in prime time, the bottom almost fell out.

The U.S. ice hockey team, the gold medal "Miracle Workers" of four years ago at Lake Placid, foundered, losing its first two games and getting no better than a tie with weak Norway. Then weather conditions forced postponement of one of the glamor event's — men's downhill skiing — on Bjelasnica Mountain.

"It was analageous to having the first game of a World Series rained out and having to try to keep the audience interested for three hours," Arledge said.

"At least if you have a regular event washed out, you postpone it or give the people's money back. We could do neither. We were committed and had to produce a creditable show regardless.

"Our worst day was Thursday. The hockey team lost its second game to Czechoslovakia. The men's downhill was postponed. Except for hockey, with the score already known, we had only the luge and cross-country skiing, two events of which most Americans are unfamiliar.

"That was the night we yielded an hour of our time to the news program '20-20.' "

RATINGS DROPPED temporarily but began perking up when the sister-brother team of Caitlin and Peter Carruthers won the silver medal in the figure skating pairs Sunday night and those two Alpine surprises, Debbie Armstrong and Christin Cooper, finished 1-2 in the women's giant slalom Monday.

Arledge expressed pride in the way his staff met last week's obstacles.

"I don't want to sound self-serving or ...." he seemed to grasp for a word, maybe syruppy or sentimental, "but I don't think another organization in the world could have done as well making something out of nothing. It was a logistical nightmare. Everybody was dead tired."

"Our worst day was Thursday. The hockey team lost its second game to Czechoslovakia. The men's downhill was postponed..."

Arledge has responsibility not only to his network and audience but also to commercial advertisers, who pay $500,000 a minute for a spot on a prime time Olympic show.

"The six-hour time difference poses special pressures," he said. "People get a lot of the results at breakfast time. If it's the result of a game, they may not be interested in watching. Our job is to provide them an exciting, interesting show despite the time element.

"This we are doing."

ABC HAS BEEN associated with the great international sports spectacle, both Summer and Winter, for 20 years and has no plans to abandon the marriage. It is paying $225 million for the Summer Games this year in Los Angeles and an astronimical $309 million for the 1988 Winter Games in Calgary, Canada.

"In both of these cases, the clock will be on our side — we can do almost everything live," the ABC executive said. The bidding is still going on for the rights to the 1988 Summer Games from Korea.

Arledge is the "Boy Wonder" of the industry, at age 52 still a round-faced, copper-haired man who seems incessantly on the run without ever getting out of breath. It's almost impossible to break into his schedule at the Sarajevo TV-Radio Center for a private interview.

After graduating from Columbia, he worked briefly for the Dumont Network and six years with NBC in various capacities before joining ABC in 1960.

In 1964, at age 32, he was named vice president of ABC Sports and elevated to president in 1968. He became president of ABC News in 1977.

He has carried into news the same innovative policies that earned him numerous awards in sports. It was he who originated "ABC's Wide World of Sports," later copied by his rivals, introduced "Monday Night Football" to prime time TV, found an award winning anchorman in Jim McKay and opened the opportunity for Howard Cosell to become a household name.

AS HEAD OF the news department, he marshalled the network's resources for the coverage of such events as the Middle East war, tha Falklands, the Polish and Iranian crises, the shootings of President Reagan, Pope John Paul II and President Sadat, Democratic and Republican primaries and elections

"Presidential elections are 90 per cent computer technology," he said. "They require fast and accurate reporting. Events such as the shootings of the Pope, President Reagan and Sadat are instantaneous, requiring quick response. People want to hear all deatils instantly and it's up to us to provide them.

"But none of these events has the same scope as the Olympics Games, watched by so many people for so long a time, a gruelling two-week process with no breaks.

Lee eliminated

Cooper cushion. They almost did it, but time was the killing factor.

"We shot nearly 50 percent in the first half (13 of 27) and still trailed by 32-28," said Lee coach Paul Stueckler. "We just ran into a hot shooting team and there is not much more you can say. They hit nine of 10 shots in the second period against us.

"When we had a chance to win at the end, Cooper's Tim Jackson hit six of eight free throws. But you have to give the Rebels some credit. We were down by 10 points with three minutes left and we still almost pulled it out."

The Rebels pumped in an amazing 25 points in the fourth period as Derek Westbrook hit 10 of his game high 22 points. Alvin Henry added seven points, but it wasn't enough. Westbrook scored 18 of his points in the second half, but he had little scoring help from his teammates, especially in the third period when the junior got eight of Lee's 10 points.

Lee led three times in the game and Cooper led seven times to go along with five ties before Estes put Cooper into the lead at 28-26 with 1:23 left in the half. Lee never caught up as they trailed by four at the half.

Estes scored 14 of his 21 points in the first half, including four-of-four from the field in the second period to guide Cooper's nine-of-10 shooting effort in the period. Derrick Turnbull, who had 13 points, came up with the only missed shot in the second period, but he was good on two other shots.

Jackson had 11 points, seven at the free throw line, and Joe Melson added 10 points, despite ruining the Cooper shooting totals by missing four-of-four in the third period.

Henry had 15 points for Lee while Anthony Dickens had 10.

Lee must now forget this setback. They face Midland High Friday at the Chap in an 8 p.m. spoiler roll. MHS can still win a playoff berth with a win over Lee and the Bulldogs will be out to avenge a loss to Lee earlier this season.

Jake Young scored 14 points to guide Lee's junior varsity to a 67-54 win over Cooper. Fred Brooks had 15 points and Les Graves 14 for Cooper.

Torvill-Dean just perfect

British couple solid Gold on ice

Olympics

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — In an exhibition fit for a king and played before a princess, British ice dancers Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean produced solid gold with an unprecedented string of perfect scores.

Never before in Olympic history had such perfection been reached. When they were through Tuesday, all nine judges awarded them the ultimate — nine perfect 6.0 scores for artistic impression.

Add three 6's for technical content and the 12 perfect scores were something for history.

"We couldn't believe it, really," said Torvill.

Skating before 8,000 mesmerized spectators at the Zetra Arena, including Princess Anne, the former insurance clerk and former policeman staged their interpretation of Ravel's "Bolero" — a sultry dance of passion and death.

TODAY, TWO women went for their third gold medals of these Games. East German speed skater Karin Enke, the gold medalist in both the 1,000 and 1,500 meters, was favored in the 3,000 meters, while Marja-Liisa Hamalainen was on Finland's 4 x 5-kilometer cross country relay team. Hamalainen earlier won the 10 kilometer and 15k races.

The final two runs of the double luge and the women's downhill ski race also were to be contested today.

In hockey, Sweden faced the Soviet Union in its bid to reach the medal round. The Swedes, even with a loss, could advance out of the round-robin portion of the tournament.

The United States' hockey team wrapped up its disappointing Olympics with a game against Finland.

Torvil and Dean's riveting performance came on the eighth day of the Winter Games, a day of firsts.

Yugoslavia reveled over its first-ever medal in the Winter Olympics, a silver by Jure Franko.

Canada's first gold medal, and first in the 1,000-meter speed skating event, came from Gaetan Boucher, a runnerup to Eric Heiden in 1980 at Lake Placid.

And the United States got emotional support in a telephone call from President Reagan.

Meanwhile, America's Scott Hamilton remained in command in men's figure skating, although he was runnerup in the short program Tuesday to Canada's Brian Orser.

IN THE medals battle, the Soviet Union, with a silver and bronze in the ice dancing, overtook East Germany for a 16-15 overall lead. The East Germans, however, lead in gold with six to the Soviets' three.

Finland is third with eight total medals and Norway had six. Tied for fifth was the United States and Sweden with three each.

Nick Thometz of Minnetonka, Minn., narrowly missed adding a bronze to the U.S. total. He was fourth in the 1,000-meter speed skating event, just one-tenth of a second out of third.

Gold in the men's giant slalom went to Switzerland's Max Julen, with Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein finishing third behind Franko.

Jubilant Yugoslavs chanted "Ju-re, Ju-re" during the medals ceremony and sang his name in the streets long into the cold night.

Eirik Kvalfoss of Norway erupted with a Bavarian yodel after winning the 10-kilometer biathlon, adding to the silver he won in the 20-kilometer biathlon on Saturday.

The gold medal by Torvill and Dean set off a round of cheers in London's House of Commons.

Neither of the Nottingham pair could recall any special moments in the magical act.

"I can't even remember it. Everything just clicked into place," said Torvill.

"It just happened. It came and went," said Dean.

SOVIETS NATALYA Bestemianova and Andrei Bukin won the silver medal, beating out teammates Marina Klimova and Sergei Ponomarenko.

Third after the first day, but slipping to fourth was the American couple of Judy Blumberg, 26, of Tarzana, Calif., and Michael Seibert, 24, of Washington, Pa.

Another disappointment came in the men's giant slalom where the Mahre twins, Phil and Steve, finished eighth and 17th, respectively.

Both complained that the course had been tampered with.

"They put water on the course and you don't need that," said Steve.

"The Austrians and the Swiss like the hard snow — the Yugoslavs, too — that's why they watered it," said Phil, winner of three consecutive World Cup overall titles until slumping in the past year. "It should not happen.

"And there were a ridiculous number of gates on that hill. The guy who set the gates on that first run doesn't deserve to be setting gates in the Olympic Games."

Hamilton, world champion for the past three years, admitted to some Olympic jitters after being edged out in the short program, which counts for 20 percent of the final score.

"I got on the ice and all of a sudden — bam, Olympics, short program, do or die, and people are yelling my name. So I started to get excited.

"It's kind of a test of nerves," he said.

Hamilton has never lost the freestyle event in 15 consecutive championships.

Sarajevo Games produce memorable moments

By BARRY WILNER

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Some memorable scenes from hockey action at the XIV Winter Olympics:

The most moving moment so far occurred in the final minutes of Canada's 4-2 victory over Finland. The Canadians had played a superb game before a packed house at Skenderija. As the outcome became clear, about 1,000 Canadian fans stood and sang "O Canada." Midway through the song, they were joined by perhaps another 1,000 people, many of them Americans.

"It seems like we've been adopted by North America," said Team Canada center Dave Gagner. "Hearing 'O Canada' then gave me a chill."

Only hearing it at the medals ceremony could be more chilling and thrilling for the Canadians.

THE DOMINANT style of play here is, of course, European, with its emphasis on puck control and speed. But one major element of the more physical North American game has snuck into every team's repertoire: hard hitting.

Where once a European team — most notably the Scandinavians and Czechoslovakia — could be expected to fold under constant physical abuse, heavy hitting has now become a staple of their game plans. The Czechs have been involved in the two most penalty-filled contests, against the United States and Finland. And they handed out much of the punishment.

"They seem to have discovered they need to avoid backing down," said U.S. Coach Lou Vairo. "They hit as much as anyone, especially the Czechs."

Since many European players now are free to pursue careers in the National Hockey League, they have to get used to a rougher brand of hockey. They seem to be doing that.

ANOTHER AREA which normally has been lacking in Olympic competition is in goal. But these Games have been an exception.

The most scintillating performances have been by Jaromir Sindel of Czechoslovakia, Mario Gosselin of Canada and Cveto Pretnar of Yugoslavia.

Sindel, 24, wasn't even in his country's Olympic plans last fall. But he played so well during the club season that he surpassed veterans Jiri Kralik and Karel Lang and has played all of Czechoslovakia's important games.

His most impressive outing was against Finland, when he displayed a quick stick and the kind of classic standup style that coaches usually can only dream about.

Gosselin, who is headed for the Quebec Nordiques when the Olympics end, is a scrambling kind of netminder reminiscent of Chico Resch.

Canadian Coach Dave King said Gosselin is playing the best hockey of his career.

"In the last month, our goaltending started to sort itself out," said King. "Darren (Eliot) was playing well but Mario was playing very, very well.

"And he's gotten even better in the Olympics."

Then there is Pretnar. At 27, he has no hopes of playing anywhere but in Yugoslavia. But he couldn't ask for much more than what has happened here.

First, he made 61 saves against the Soviets and drew praise from USSR Coach Victor Tikhonov. Then he stopped 27 shots in leading Yugoslavia to a 5-1 decision over Italy that had the fans shouting "YU-GO-SLAV-IA." Even though the Yugoslavs are one of the weaker hockey entries here, they have produced a national hero in Pretnar.

Kirk Douglas just another zero to restaurant owner

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Actor Kirk Douglas is popular in this Winter Olympics city, but he was just another zero for the owner of a downtown restaurant.

But because of that extra zero — on the bottom line of the bill — the owner now finds his restaurant closed for five months, the newspaper Vecerjne Novine reported.

According to the Sarajevo daily:

Fahrudin Sahic, the owner of the Una restaurant, was enthusiastic when he saw Douglas and seven friends walk into his restaurant last Thursday.

When the check arrived at their table, however, the total was 54,000 dinars — about $443 — a little bit more than is customary in this country where good dinners usually cost $10-$20 a person.

The bill should have been 5,400 dinars, according to a copy of the check presented to authorities.

Fahrudin asked that the bill be paid in dollars, but such hard-currency payments are illegal here.

A Yugoslav hostess who was in the party reported the incident. A city inspector ordered the restaurant closed down the following day, and a magistrate court slapped a five-month ban on the restaurant's operations.

Fahrudin also faces a fine, once he appears before the magistrate court as ordered.

Douglas was not at his hotel and unavailable for comment.

Town Council aldermen said they would continue to take "energetic steps" to prevent such overcharging from recurring.

Two other Sarajevo restaurants were closed down earlier this month for similar offenses.

More static from Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Lee MacPhail, who had his hands full of the New York Yankees during 10 years as president of the American League, has another of their protests to rule on in his new position as director of baseball's Player Relations Committee.

Triggered by what was described as "an overwhelming number of calls from fans," the Yankees Tuesday filed a formal protest with MacPhail over the loss of prize pitching prospect Tim Belcher to the Oakland A's in the free agent compensation pool.

The A's grabbed the 22-year-old Belcher from the Yankees as compensation for losing pitcher Tom Underwood, a Type A free agent, to the Baltimore Orioles in the re-entry draft. The Yankees are basing their protest on the fact that they didn't sign Belcher, their first choice in last month's amateur draft, until Jan. 17, four days after they were required to file a list of 26 players to be protected from the compensation pool.

Mel Southard, the Yankees' general counsel, claimed that since there can be no changes in the original list of protected players, only members of the organization on the Jan. 13 deadline should have been eligible as compensation.

Belcher said he had been tentatively scheduled to report to the Oakland training camp on Friday but would hold off pending the outcome of the Yankees' protest.

"There may be an opportunity for me to file a grievance if they don't reverse the decision," said Belcher during a radio talk show on WOUB in Athens, Ohio. "I signed a contract to play for the New York Yankees and I haven't been given the opportunity to do that. There may be some action I can take with the help of the players' association."

The Yankees signed Belcher on Feb. 2 after the pitcher told them he would return to college. On Feb. 7, the Orioles signed Underwood, allowing the A's to select a player from the compensation pool stocked by those teams participating in the re-entry draft. Oakland selected Belcher the next day.

FDIC moves to sell local property

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. is recruiting Midland's real estate agents to help sell its residential and commercial properties in the Permian Basin.

Speaking Tuesday at the monthly meeting of the Midland Board of Realtors, Thomas R. Procopio, FDIC liquidator in charge of First National Bank of Midland, told area Realtors the FIDC had almost 200 properties to sell.

When the FDIC was named receiver of failed First National Bank of Midland Oct. 14, it assumed not only the $1.2 billion loan portfolio but also 195 commercial and residential properties mostly in Midland, Procopio said.

Of the property currently listed on Midland's the real estate market, Procopio estimated the FDIC owns between 7 and 10 percent.

However, before the FDIC can effectively begin to sell its properties, it must complete a marketing plan.

According to Procopio, the FDIC marketing plan will contain several phases. The first phase is expected to begin this week with advertisement listings of some FDIC residential property valued less than $250,000.

Later this month, more properties will be added to the open listing available to all area real estate agents, he said.

The final phase of the plan will consist of specialized marketing programs for large blocks of commercial real estate which will be marketed in Texas and throughout the country.

Procopio said the FDIC will rely on area Realtors to market FDIC real estate.

"The majority of our owned real estate is going to be sold under the controlled marketing program with the help of area Realtors. We have three methods we can use to sell real estate: the liquidator can sell it himself; we can have a sealed bid sale; or we can turn it over to brokers. My recommendation is to use real estate agents as much as possible."

After a brief overview of the FDIC's operation in Midland, Procopio opened the meeting for questions. Of the more than 130 Realtors in attendance, many were concerned about the time delay in settling a contract on FDIC property.

Under present FDIC guidelines, its standard contract states that a 45-day waiting period is required after a contract is received on FDIC property. Once the marketing plan has been approved, the waiting period should be reduced, Procopio said.

"(During the waiting period) We have to prove to the people in Dallas (FDIC area office) and Washington (FDIC headquarters) that we have had sufficient marketing efforts to establish what the real value of that property is. So that's the reason for that rule but as with any rule there are exceptions obviously.

"If we feel, after talking with Realtors and appraisers, that a particular price is fairly stable, we'll ask for an exception to get out from under the property," Procopio said.

"We have the authority to list property at a certain price and with that authority to list, will be the authority to sell. So we should be able to close a sale in the normal amount of closing time."

Safety no accident for Dowell

Dowell currently enjoys the best safety record in the industry–and it's no accident!

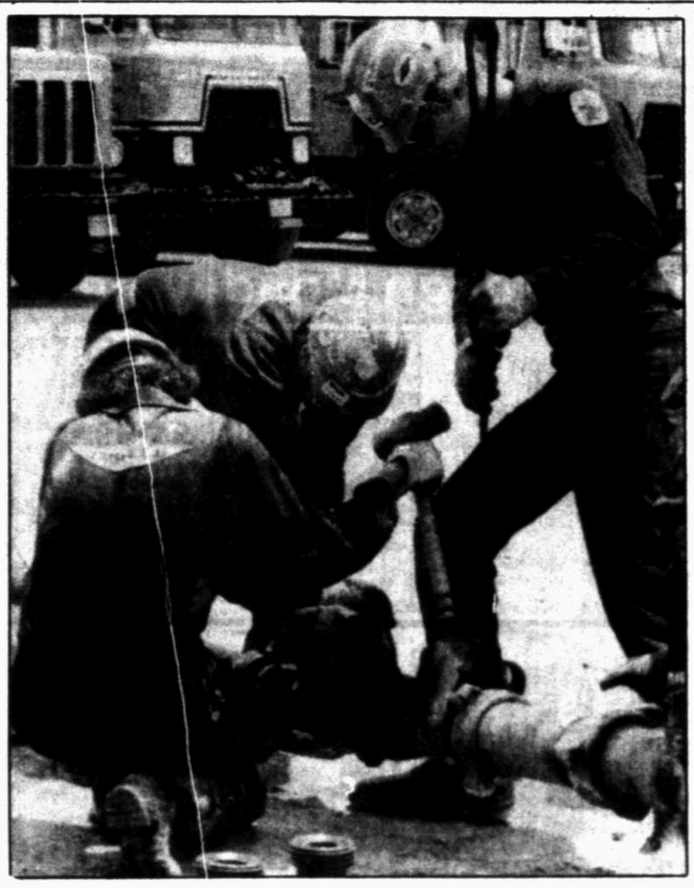

When January 16 of this year rolled around, Dowell's South District, which comprises West Texas and New Mexico, had logged 11 million manhours or four and half years of successful operations without a single accident.

D.J. Ivan, regional operations manager, attributes much of the credit for the super safety record to the company's annual safety week.

Starting next week, Dowell will have its sixth National Safety Week in which every Dowell employee nationwide from the president to the newest employee will be required to spend one full day in safety training.

The theme of this year's program is I am the one, according to Lynn Tolley, manager of Safety and Loss Prevention.

"We believe that safety starts with the individual," says Tolley. "We concentrate on how to identify and eliminate unsafe working conditions...to identify and correct problems before they become accidents."

Dowell employees such as the ones shown here have helped achieve the best safety record in the petroleum industry. All Dowell employees will devote an entire workday to safety activities during Dowell's annual Safety Week, February 19-25.

IPAA:Drilling to increase

The nationwide rig count could be up almost 20 percent this year, according to Jon Rex Jones, IPAA president.

Speaking to an IPAA membership meeting here Tuesday, Jones told the gathering of over 100 who had turned out to hear New York Congressman, Jack Kemp and eat a free barbecue lunch, that barring unforeseen events the national rig count could soar to 2,600 in 1984. This would be 400 over the 1983 count.

Jones said that two pitfalls which could put a damper on oil and gas activity are the price of crude oil and the economy.

"We are victims of world crude prices," he said. "But one tanker bombed in the Mideast could change the price overnight."

The Houston independent urged the oilmen to continue to push for natural gas deregulation and said there was a 50-50 chance that the industry could be deregulated this year. He said such a bill would be a "clean up" bill for natural gas legislation.

Jones said America was not out of resources. "We found as much gas in 1981 as we produced in the 16 years previously," said Jones.

He stated that there was a need for the industry to inform the public and politicians on natural gas prices. "Gas prices may be increasing," he said, "but only 13 percent of that increase went to the producer."

"The public also needs information on the acid rain question," he continued. "If the acid rain people knew what a clean fuel natural gas was, I think we could have that whole crowd on our side."

The IPAA President cautioned that the next nine months would be critical politically for the energy industry. Says Jones: "If we elect the wrong people we could see the oil and gas industry dismantled. It has not been that long ago that we were worried about nationalized oil. It could happen again."

Dorchester announces stock buy

DALLAS — Dorchester Gas Corporation (Dorchester) has announced that it is commencing a cash tender offer on Monday, February 6, 1984 to purchase up to 5,000,000 shares of Dorchester common stock at $24.00 per share net. Pursuant to the Company's offer, the Company will, subject to the availability of financing, purchase shares if Damson Oil Corporation (Damson) purchases 50.3 percent of Dorchester's common stock pursuant to Damson's tender offer of Jauary 26, 1984. Futher, Dorchester reserves the right to purchase additional shares if it is able to arrange financing.

The action was approved at a meeting of the Dochester Board of Directors which unanimously determined to advise Dochester stockholders that the offer made by Damson for slightly over 50 percent of Dochester's outstanding shares at $24.00 per share cash, without specification of the consideration for the remaining shares, is unfair to Dochester stockholders. The Board determined that the Damson offer is unfair and inadequate because only a portion of Dorchester's shares would be bought for cash and it is impossible to determine the real value of the proposal. This determination was based in part on the opinion of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Incorporated, financial advisors to Dorchester. The Board considered that the Damson offer is particularly unfair to the holders of shares remaining after the first step purchase. Moreover, the Board has been advised by counsel that the Damson offer raises serious questions under Federal securities laws. Dorchester has commenced appropriate litigation. Dochester's purpose in making the offer is to defeat the attempt by Damson to acquire control of Dorchester for inadequate consideration or, in the alternative, if Damson does take control, to provide Dorchester's stockholders with the opportunity to receive as much cash as possible for the remaining shares instead of the securities of indeterminate value proposed.

The Company is currently arranging financing for its offer.

The Board reaffirmed that the recently announced agreement to take Dorchester private and pay all common stockholders a price of $22.50 per share is fair and equal to all such stockholders. Financing for such transaction is currently being sought.

Hughes wins drill bit patent suit

The United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas in Fort Worth recently entered its opinion in Hughes Tool Co. v. Dresser Industries Inc.

According to a statement released by Hughes Tool, the case involves the validity and infringement of Hughes Tool's "O-Ring Seal" and "Pressure Relief Valve" patents on its journal bearing bits, and is a companion case to litigation pending against Smith International Inc. for infringement of the same two patents.

The court held that the o-ring seal patent is valid, that Dresser infringed it, and that a reasonable royalty on such patent would have been 25 percent of the gross sales.

Gulf loses in first takeover attempt

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gulf has lost its first attempt to block what it calls a planned takeover attempt by the investor group led by T. Boone Pickens Jr., but it is not giving up.

On Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Walter K. Stapleton in Wilmington, Del., denied a request by Gulf for a temporary restraining order barring the Pickens group from pursuing a possible takeover bid. Pickens denies he plans any such bid.

Gulf then asked for a preliminary injunction, and Stapleton set March 1 as the date for a hearing on the request.

In a related development, the chairman of Atlantic Richfield Co. has disclosed that he held separate meetings with the chief protagonists in Gulf Corp.'s struggle against an investor group that poses a threat to Gulf's independence.

Robert O. Anderson, the Arco chairman, made the disclosure in a formal statement from Arco's Los Angeles headquarters in which he denied a published report that he had informally offered to acquire Gulf for as much as $11.6 billion.

Anderson said he met "several weeks ago" with Gulf Chairman James E. Lee and T. Boone Pickens Jr., the leader of the investor group, "to assess the Gulf situation." He added, however, that he had not made an offer to buy Gulf stock or assets. Gulf also said Tuesday that no such Arco offer had been received.

Anderson did not elaborate on his meetings with Lee and Pickens, and other Arco officials declined to provide more details.

DETROIT (AP) — Domestic automakers reported their best early February selling period in five years, with sales up 32.5 percent from the same period last year.

"These figures confirm that we are in a firm period in car sales," David Healy, an industry analyst, said after the figures were released Tuesday.

In the 10 days, the six major manufacturers sold 181,694 cars, up 32.5 percent from the 137,098 sold in the period a year ago.

For the year, 765,123 U.S.-made cars were sold in America, up 39.1 percent from the 549,971 sold by Feb. 10, 1983.

Ford Motor Co. led the way with a sales increase of 65.5 percent in the Feb. 1-10 industry reporting period compared with the period a year ago.

Sales for the Big Three were up 32 percent.

Chrysler Corp. sales were up 35.1 percent. General Motors Corp. sales were up 18.9 percent.

The showing continued a string of increasing car sales that began in late fall.

Spectrum Energy, Bush Exploration announce merger

The Board of Directors of Spectrum 7 Energy Corpoation, of Cincinnati, Ohio and Midland, Texas, and Bush Exploration Company of Midland, Texas, jointly announced today that the two companies had agreed in principle to a merger effective February 29, 1984. The merger remains subject to Bush sharenholder approval. Following the consolidation, Bush will be a wholly owned subsidiary of Spectrum 7 with the Bush shareholders to receive Spectrum 7 stock in exchange for their Bush shares.

Both Spectrum 7 and Bush are in the oil and gas exploration business and since 1979 have organized and managed private and public drilling programs with total funds in excess of $50 million. The two companies have an interest in over 160 producing oil and gas properties, the majority of which are located in the Permian Basin of Texas and New Mexico.

George W. Bush will become Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Spectrum 7 following the merger and Paul C. Rea, formerly Spectrum 7's Vice President of Exploration, will be elevated to President. William O. DeWitt, Jr. and Mercer Reynolds, formerly Spectrum 7's President and Chairman, respectively, will become Vice Chairmen of the Board of Directors. Other officers will include Joseph Beech 111, K. Michael Conaway, John D. Peckskamp, Jr., Vice Presidents, and Dennis P. Wilburn, Treasurer. The consolidated entity will have over thirty employees and consultants, including five geologists, once geophysicist, three engineers, one geotechnician, and two landmen. Marketing and legal matters will continue to be centered in Spectrum 7's Cincinnati office, with exploration, well operations and administrative functions to be managed from the combined Midland office.

FDIC to sell realty

Another question asked was about FDIC's standard contract "shopping bids" policy.

"The normal instructions we have now are that if there hasn't been sufficient efforts made by the bank (FNB) or by the liquidation staff, we will take that bid and establish it as the lowest acceptable bid on a sealed bid procedure. However, if it is a very good offer, something we can live with, and if it is agreed that we cannot get anything more out of a sealed bid, then we'll ask for an exception on it."

Procopio also said the FDIC will not give exclusive listings to any real estate agents but will keep an open listing of FDIC properties.

He told Realtors FDIC properties will not have fixed prices; but realtors will be given a price range that must be met.

Synfuel project blasted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan group of 12 House and Senate members today urged President Reagan to freeze spending on the nation's troubled synthetic fuels program.

Led by Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., the lawmakers urged Reagan in a letter to keep the federally financed Synthetic Fuels Corp. from making any further financial commitments until Congress reviews and approves the company's long-term strategies.

Calling the fuels program "highly questionable and very costly," the group asked Reagan to use his authority under federal budget laws to put a hold on the $14.8 billion that the corporation has at its disposal.

The quasi-government corporation was created by Congress in 1980 and given $15 billion to develop the fledgling synfuels industry.

Foes of the program say it needs closer scrutiny because falling oil prices have made synfuels unfeasible. Wolpe has gained 129 co-sponsors for a bill that would ban the corporation from making more financial commitments until its strategy is approved by Congress.

The corporation has survived previous criticism with help from powerful friends such as Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee Chairman Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, and House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas.

Car sales, retail sales jump in January

By The Associated Press

Buoyant reports from domestic carmakers and news of a 2.2 percent jump in overall retail sales provided fresh evidence that consumers are still in a buying mood.

The gain in overall retail sales for January, as reported Tuesday by the Commerce Department, was the largest for any month since a 3.1 percent rise last May.

The key performers in the January surge were auto dealers, who enjoyed another record month, and department stores, where sales were up 5.5 percent over December.

Earlier this week Ford chairman Philip Caldwell warned that while auto company sales and profits are surging, the current high level of interest rates is still a threat to the industry. He urged the government to reduce the size of its budget deficits as a means of bringing down interest rates.

The latest reports on domestic auto sales provided no evidence of a slowdown.

On Tuesday, the nation's major auto manufacturers reported a 32.5 percent jump in sales during the first 10 days of February over the same period a year ago. It was their best early February selling period in five years. Ford led the way, with a 65.5 percent increase.

Auto sales for the year to date as of Feb. 10 were 39.1 percent ahead of last year's pace.

In its report on January results, the Commerce Department said auto sales rose 1.2 percent from December, to a monthly record $21.3 billion.

David Ernst, a private economist who has been more pessimistic about the continued strength of the recovery, said the surge in overall retail sales in January could mean "we might not see quite as much of a slowdown as we feared."

In another report Tuesday, the Federal Reserve said outstanding consumer debt rose a record $6.61 billion in December. While the Fed did not say how much of that was due to increased borrowing — as opposed to a slower rate of repayment of existing debt — such a large increase generally is seen as a sign of consumer confidence in the economy.

Other developments:

—The Conference Board research group said foreign companies invested in 280 new manufacturing projects in the United States last year, up from 271 in 1982. The increase ended three years of declining foreign investment in new U.S. manufacturing.

—Gulf lost its first attempt to block what it calls a planned takeover attempt by the investor group led by T. Boone Pickens Jr. U.S. District Judge Walter K. Stapleton, in Wilmington, Del., denied a request by Gulf for a temporary restraining order barring the Pickens group from pursuing a possible takeover bid. Pickens denies he plans any such bid.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, February 16, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Tennis star John McEnroe, actor LeVar Burton, golf's Maureen Bauer Hagge and Sonny Bono celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: ventriloquist Edgar Bergen and acting great Katherine Corneil. You enjoy the respect of your colleagues who know that your word is your bond. Be sure that a prospective partner shares your high standards. A business venture begins to show a profit. Be careful not to expand too quickly. Something that looks like a sure thing may not pan out. Loved one is eager to help you obtain your goals.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have a chance to catch your breath between projects. Romance is exciting but expensive. Guard against negative thinking. An official announcement is a happy surprise. Celebrate with someone special.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You receive a phone call about a wonderful job. Do not expect to get something for nothing. A travel or scholarship decision must be made immediately. Consult mate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Promises will be kept. Keep the faith. Do not be drawn into projects or disputes you know nothing about. Let others solve their own work problems for a change.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Aggressive action will move you closer to an impo tant goal. Those in politic get a lucky break. A wonderful day to begin a self-improvement program. Intellectual pursuits hold special appeal.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Something you start today will be a big success. Purchase new equipment. Romance grows out of a long-time friendship. Keep a delicious secret to yourself a little while longer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A teacher gives good advice. Listen carefully! Weigh all the pros and cons before making a change in your lifestyle. Artists and free-lance writers get new assignments and extra cash.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Messages can go astray. Do not count on promises being fulfilled. Cooperating with your partners or associates has certain financial benefits. Be certain to sign a contract by nightfall.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have a golden opportunity to display a special talent. Use good judgment when it to comes to passing along confidential information. If you play your cards right, a certain person will become aware of your charms.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Self-improvement projects begin to pay off. A new job offer is part of the picture. Your popularity grows. A social event leads to a wonderful introduction.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone who lives overseas offers valuable career information or financial advice. Follow it to the letter! An excellent day to meet and mingle with newcomers. Just reserve the evening for reading, relaxing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Handle differences of opinion with diplomacy and progress is certain. The news from afar promises fresh financial gains. Keep social activities to a minimum this evening. You need to unwind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An element of good fortune weaves through your business and financial affairs. Influential people seek you out! What takes place behind the scenes has a direct effect on your success.

'Smithsonian' to air on PBS tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — Tonight's second installment of public television's "Smithsonian World" has several interesting tidbits on mankind's insatiable desire to get from here to there — even if the program does say so itself.

"Crossing the Distance" includes a rare interview with Anne Morrow Lindbergh, who was co-pilot, navigator and radio operator for her globe-trotting husband, Charles Lindbergh; an on-location profile of the Panama Canal, and a piece on "animal detente," with Siberian tigers from the Moscow Zoo traveling to the United States to improve the breed in American zoos.

These segments, however, are diminished by incessant back-slapping and boosterism. It's grating — and undignified — for "Smithsonian World," which utilizes the resources of Washington's Smithsonian Institution, to frequently congratulate itself about the museum's research and acquisitions.

After hearing so many gratuitous remarks about the Smithsonian's good works, viewers might think public TV has gone commercial.

For example, during the segment on Mrs. Lindbergh, the broadcast says her husband was greeted in Paris, following his famed solo trans-Atlantic flight, by 100,000 people and a telegram from the Smithsonian: "It wanted his plane."

Time and again, the program bends over for the Smithsonian link: The National Zoo, "incidentally, is part of the Smithsonian." The Panama Canal "holds a vital research outpost of the Smithsonian."

And, how about this piece of pretentious narration from the show's host, David McCullough? "Why is 'Smithsonian World' starting out on a tramway in New Mexico? First of all, this is an amazing place, and the Smithsonian Institution is interested in every fascinating place, person and thing in the world."

With the vast resources of the Smithsonian, as the brodcast is wont to say, "Smithsonian World" should have been better. For instance, a superficial interview with a trans-Atlantic balloonist should have produced more insight than he does it for "the challenge."

The best segment is on Mrs. Lindbergh, an engagingly passionate woman, who has not consented to interviews in recent years. This interview, by McCullough, sticks to her exploits as an aviator, and does not touch on the celebrated kidnapping and death of her son.

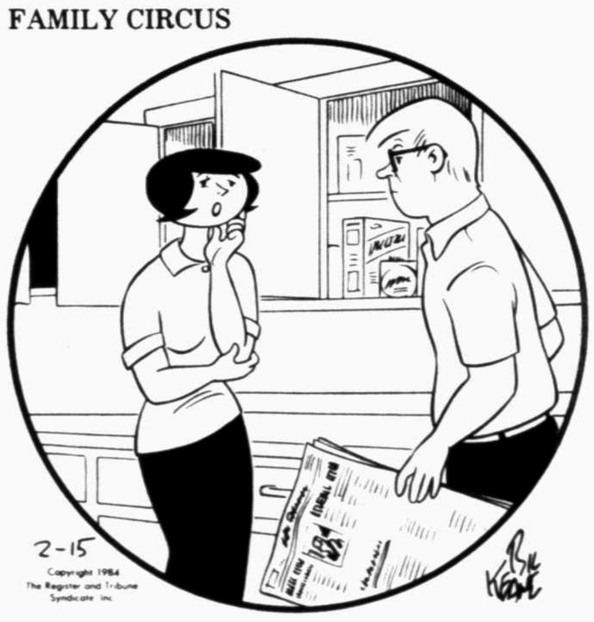

She comes across as a willful woman who put great pressure on herself to become a flyer worthy of sharing the controls with her husband.

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

There is nothing more exciting than the thrust and parry between a good declarer and an experienced defender. This hand is from the China-Australia match in the recent Far Eastern Championships in Hong Kong.

In one room the Chinese East-West pair reached four spades and went down one trick when declarer managed to get rid of a losing club on a diamond. In the other room, the Australian East-West pair sold out to four hearts. East-West were playing a forcing club system, so West could not have opened one club even had he wanted to — his hand was not good enough.

West led the ace of clubs and another. Since there was no way for declarer to avoid losing a spade, his problem was to limit his diamond losers to one — no easy task. He won the club continuation and drew two rounds of trumps, ending in his hand. Now he led a low spade.

To prevent a possible throw-in later, West grabbed the ace of spades and exited with another club. Declarer now prepared for an end play by cashing the king of spades. He returned to his hand with the ace of diamonds and led a low diamond.

Had West carelessly played low, or even had he gone in with the jack of diamonds, declarer would have been home free. East would have been forced to win the queen and, with nothing left but spades, he would have been forced to yield a ruff-and-sluff, allowing declarer to get rid of his losing diamond.

West, however, had seen this tactic before. If declarer had the ace-queen of diamonds, he would have finessed, for even if the finesse lost, he would have still make the contract if West held the jack of diamonds as well. So West rose with the king of diamonds — the "crocodile coup" to swallow his partner's queen — and he could take the jack of diamonds for down one.

ENTERTAINMENT

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Phyllis Diller excused herself, saying she'd been tied up teasing her hair.

She was right. It looked furious!

In rainbow hues with curls exploding in every direction, the horrendous headgear rested atop a plastic foam wig holder in front of her dressing room mirror at the MGM Grand Hotel where she was performing.

The angry looking hairdo was a far cry from that March evening in 1955 when, as a debonair 38-year-old mother of five, she ventured onto the stage of San Francisco's Purple Onion and began belting out arias in a sophisticated soprano voice.

Her outlandish hairstyles have given new meaning to the term fright wigs, but they happened by accident — like many of the hallmarks in her 29-year career as one of America's classic comics.

Born in 1917 in Lima, Ohio, she spent her early years developing her voice and playing the piano. Her parents insisted she go to a Chicago music conservatory "where I found out I wasn't Melissa Mozart," then to a teacher's college in Bluffton, Ohio, to train as a music teacher.

She traded teaching for marriage and settled down to raise five children, spending much of her time singing classics such as "The Messiah" or "The Creation" because choir robes were ideal for hiding "my incessantly pregnant tummy."

By 1955, Miss Diller had her own California split level stucco, station wagon, children ages 6 through 16, parakeet, white rat, dog and cat.

Her former husband, Sherwood, said her comic talent was being ignored and it should be out in the public where it could be appreciated — and remunerated.

She began at the Purple Onion at a magic time when clubs in the area were producing talent such as the Kingston Trio, the Smothers Brothers, Jim Nabors, Mort Sahl, Dave Brubeck, Johnny Mathis and a teen-ager named Barbra Streisand.

She started her career with her natural dark hair but felt it wasn't working in the act, "so I bleached it myself; just ruined it!

"I stripped it every seven days, which just wrecked it," she said.

"Later I would tease my hair, but I was always too busy to comb it."

The wild look caught on, as did the gaudy clothes.

"I was dressing like the housewife next door," she said. "My body jokes weren't working. I realized it was because they could see my figure, which was terrrrrific in those days. I decided I'd wear shapeless things. Then, when the minis came in, I kept them because my legs are, well, sorta funny."

'Ole J.R.' will be on hand to explain 'Dallas' episodes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don't fret when "Dallas" goes into syndication this September, 'cause ole J.R.'s gonna be on hand to explain it all.

Larry Hagman, who stars as J.R. Ewing on the hit prime-time soap opera, is taping 150 television spots that recap the previous and the upcoming episodes. These spots will be called "Inside 'Dallas'" and will be used as promos for the series when it goes into syndication on more than 100 stations.

The folks at Lorimar Productions are also worried that viewers who miss an episode or two will lose track of the story. Or that some stations may run the serial out of sequence. So the trailer from the previous day telling what's coming up will be telecast at the introduction of each show.

The CBS series, in its sixth season, telecasts its 150th episode on Friday, Feb. 10.

Break dancing bedazzles Belafonte

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Belafonte boogeyed down to the Roxy one night to check out those energetic dancers falling on the floor in outrageous spins and gymnastics.

He was immediately bedazzled by that funky fad known as break dancing.

"It was absolutely mind-boggling," the legendary entertainer said in a recent interview. "I thought somebody should do something about it. I had no idea it would be me."

Belafonte is producing the movie, "Beat Street," an Orion release about break dance. Filming was being done recently at the westside night spot and roller skating rink where break dancers gather on Saturday nights.

Have women lost their box-office pull?

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Have female stars lost their pull at the nation's movie box offices?

The evidence is forthcoming in the recent poll of theater owners by Quigley Publications, the trade-paper firm that has been reporting the top moneymaking stars since 1932.

The winners for 1983 are: 1. Clint Eastwood; 2. Eddie Murphy; 3. Sylvester Stallone; 4. Burt Reynolds; 5. John Travolta; 6. Dustin Hoffman; 7. Harrison Ford; 8. Richard Gere; 9. Chevy Chase; and 10. Tom Cruise.

Notice what's missing? Women.

"Maybe it's because actresses aren't as consistent in making films," suggests Bo Derek. "I've been gone for three years; 'Tarzan' was my last picture. Brooke Shields didn't have a picture last year. A lot of us have been staying away."

Mike Medavoy, a production chief of Orion Pictures, agrees.

"Many of the top female stars have been doing their own thing," he said. "Meryl Streep had a baby. Barbra Streisand has been tied up for years with 'Yentl.' Goldie Hawn is another who spends a lot of time working up her own projects."

Producer Richard Zanuck, who did "The Sting" and "Jaws," said the type of films now being made is in part responsible for men being the big moneymakers. "Most of the big pictures are adventures or comedies that are patterned for male stars," he said.

"If Jane Fonda had been out in a picture last year, she could have made the list."

Catholics advertise priesthood

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — For men who have missed God's calling, the Roman Catholic Church has started a message service.

It consists of a rented billboard in Bridgeport along southbound Interstate 95, aimed at motorists headed toward New York City.

The message in large, gray letters is simple: "God Calls To Priesthood At Any Age."

It is the church's first billboard in the United States aimed at attracting new priests, a church official says.

"The Roman Catholic church is experiencing a vocation crisis," said the Rev. Francis J. Fasella, director of the Second Career Vocation Project, which is seeking the recruits.

The advertising space was rented two weeks ago and will be used until the end of this month. The billboard has a picture of Pope John Paul II and a telephone number to call.

If it's successful, more signs will go up, Fasella said.

"I'd like to put the next billboard in the middle of Times Square," he said.

The 46-year-old priest said there are approximately 58,000 priests serving about 51 million American Catholics. If current trends continue, there'll only be 25,000 priests by the year 2000, because many priests are elderly and fewer people are entering seminaries.

Fasella says the billboard is part of an international campaign to attract "adults who are presently in secular careers."

The sign appears to be working, since Fasella already has had several inquiries about entering the seminary.

"How else do you compete with Gucci and Camaros?" he asked.

Council OKs beer permit for Texas Red's barbecue

From Staff Reports

One councilman almost swerved from his one-way road of voting on beer permits in restaurants because of the city's economic problems. But Texas Red's barbecue passed the blockades erected in getting a permit granted Tuesday, even though the councilman didn't detour on his vote.

Although the permit was opposed by several adjacent and nearby residents, the council in a regular session at City Hall voted to give the restaurant a permit to sell beer. This was the restaurant's second run at the city panel.

The council also appropriated funds for two historical celebrations, changed the sidewalk ordinance and accepted a bid for another phase of the sewage disposal plant.

Texas Red's, a restaurant at Wadley and Garfield, had tried to get a specific use permit a year ago to sell beer and wine. But residents objected then and the council voted according to that preference.

Texas Red's attorney Jack Ladd said the lack of a permit was putting the restaurant at a disadvantage when other barbecue specialty places could serve beer.

But Karen Martin of 2301 Apperson contended those residents' general welfare would be violated. She objected to broken beer bottles in the alley and noise made by delivery trucks.

Under the current law, although the restaurant had no permit to sell beer, customers could go next door to Dunkle's, buy an alcoholic beverage and take it to the restaurant for consuming.

Several other nearby residents voiced their concern about people driving after drinking too much. But Councilman Tom Sloan said that people probably are drinking a whole six pack instead of one or two beers that would be sold by the restaurant.

"That doesn't control a drunk driver from going down our streets," said Mrs. Martin.

"They can walk 10 feet now and buy it," said Sloan.

Councilman Jesse Hatfield said he had eaten at the restaurant seven times in the past year to check it out. "Ninety-nine percent of the time, I've voted against alcohol. But I found the restaurant to be very clean. They're trying to make a living," he said in noting he might vote in favor of it. As a businessman, he said he was encountering the same cash flow problems as the people who manage the restaurant.

But Mayor G. Thane Akins, who also always votes against granting a permit to sell beer, said he would still vote against it.

After amending the ordinance to allow sale of beer but not wine, the council passed the request without the aid of Hatfield on a 4-2 vote.

The council voted to allot $10,000 for the city's Centennial and Sesquicentennial celebrations.

The Homebuilders Association saw the sidewalk ordinance amended to allow sidewalks be put in next to the curb at homesites where utilities already are in place. The ordinance previously had sidewalks placed several feet back from the curb as a safety precaution for children.

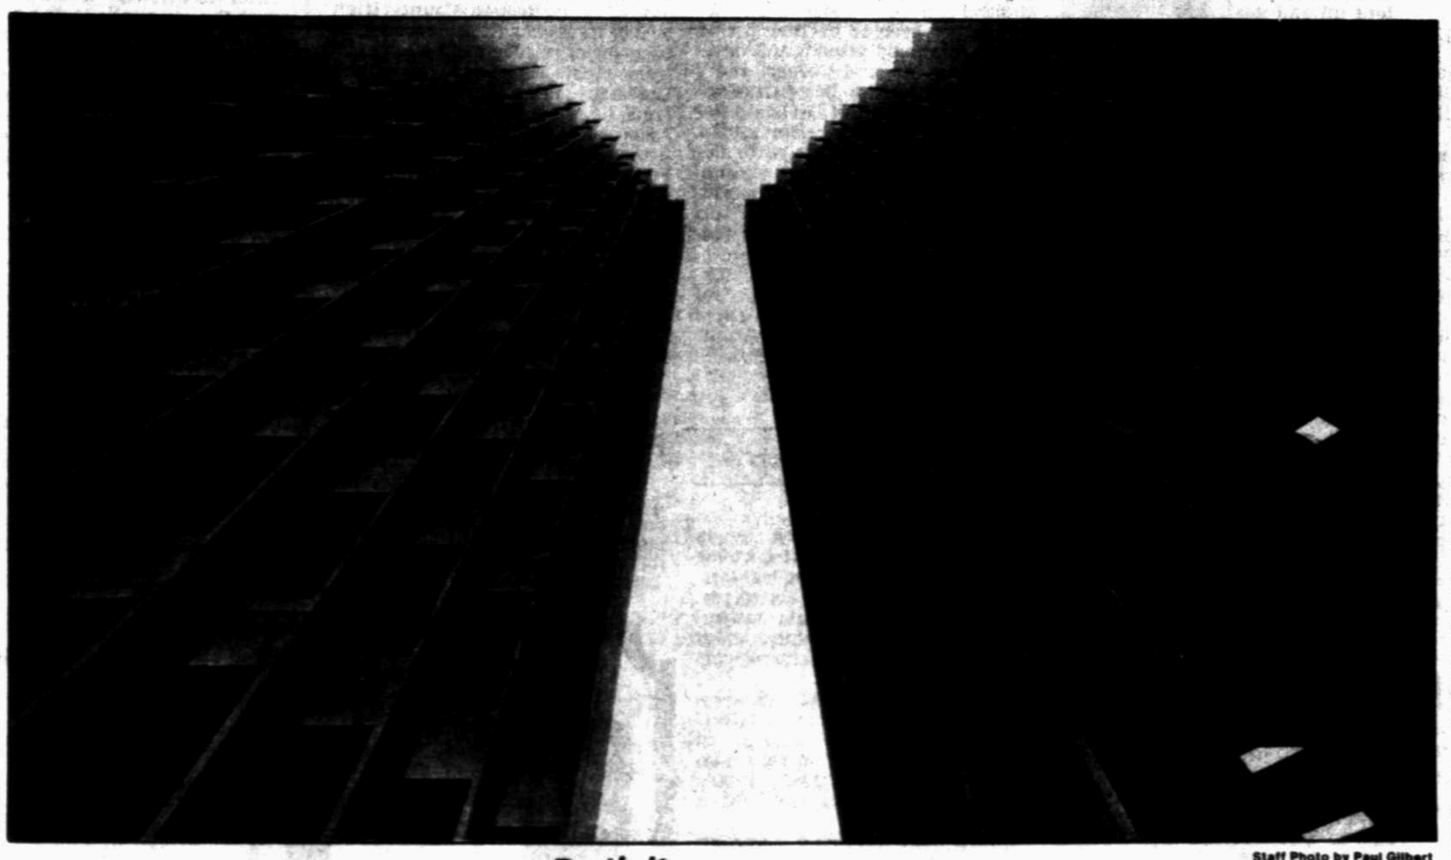

The bid of $796,535 from the Seminole firm of AVI, Inc., for irrigation equipment at the sewage disposal site under contruction southeast of the city was approved. It fell about $24,000 below the bid from the Odessa company of Stewart and Stevenson, which objected to the council's decision, saying they were closer to the job site.

But Randy Armstrong of AVI said, "We don't consider the job to be that far away. We are the largest irrigation dealer in Texas and in the top 10 in the United States."

Homebuilder Association representatives said homebuyers were rebelling at the idea of a sidewalk so close to their front doors.

The council also deferred a decision on signing closing documents on swapping 92 acres of Midland Air Park and Midland Regional Airport land for 2,600 acres northeast of the city, and agreed to advertise for bids a tract at A Street Community Center.

Teledyne Exploration was allowed to conduct a geophysical survey along Fairgrounds Road with the stipulation it will be done during the day.

Odessa company promises to give better cable service

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — It took some threats and heated words, but Odessa cable subscribers were promised better service in a report the local franchise presented Tuesday to the city council.

Community Cablevision of Odessa's report outlines a complete plan to improve service to its 22,000 cable viewers, many of whom have been jamming the phones of the cable company and city council with complaints for much of the 18 months the Capital Cities Cable-owned franchise has been in Odessa.

Capital Cities Cable President Bill James, Regional Manager Harold Wells, local General Manager Terry Arnold and other Capital Cities people were in attendance, although the issue was not on the council agenda.

More phones, a sophisticated answering system and a professional operator will be or has been added so that complaints, services calls and other business can be taken care of over the phone. By the end of the week, Arnold said 16 phone lines will be in operation where seven were last week.

Hours were added to the cable franchise's work week, one hour each weekday and three-and-a-half hours on Saturdays in response to complaints about Community Cablevision not being available when subscribers call.

Customer service workers will get special training in customer relations and stress management. Night dispatchers will be manning the phones during evening hours.

While these changes will make the cable company more responsive to the commmunity, the completion of installation of 400 miles of new cable by April 1 is expected to solve many of the problems viewers have been experiencing. Football fanatics in parts of the city have gone without any televised gridiron action two Thanksgiving weekends running.

"Terry and his people have had a very big job with the rebuild," said James in his speech before city council. He explained the rebuild amounted to "effectively tearing down the old plant and putting up a new one."

Arnold pointed out that service should improve, as those working on rebuilding will be switched to service.

Same-day service is promised for indididuals with "snowy" service or a "totally unwatchable picture on all channels," provided "there is reasonable time to respond." Otherwise the calls will take no longer than 48 hours, still much improved over stories of service being out for entire weekends over the holidays.

Arnold did not promise that the extended hours would continue when the rebuild was finished, but said "If the demand is there, they'll stay open."

James suggested "we're providing to our customers everything that is available in cable."

"Every company is accountable to its customers or they'll find a new company," said James.

Council members accepted the report and some offered sympathetic remarks. "You and I can be very mislead by a vocal few," said Councilman Dick Sivalls, suggesting that TV guides mislead viewers into thinking that all the offerings in the guide can be offered by the cable company.

A community survey is be completed in two weeks to help determine whether new channels should be added. Several councilmembers criticized the lack of variety offered on the basic cable.

The report explained that copyright laws and FCC regulations restrict the number of stations that can be offered on the basic cable, with extra channels meaning higher rates. Community Calbevision charges $8.50 per month for the basic cable, below the state average of $9.30 per month.

But others continued to criticize Arnold and Community Cablevision. Councilwoman Melissa Hirsch wondered why pressure had to be applied for the cable company to improve its service. "I resent that we had to do this," she said, suggesting that if Odessa is the company's third-largest franchise "we shouldn't have to be here this morning."

"If you were attuned to the job you have to do, " said Mayor Bob Bryant, "we wouldn't have to be calling you down here."

Referring to the lack of service phone lines and problems with customer service, Bryant said "it just creates the impression that you really don't care."

MADD to address DWI vs. 'lesser charge'

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Expressing shock and disbelief, a spokeswoman for Mothers Against Drunk Drivers said the group will meet with city officials about the issue of Midland police continuing to file public intoxication charges against drunk drivers — despite prounouncements that the practice would stop.

"We'll go before the city council en masse to address the continued irresponsibility of this act," said Midland-Odessa MADD chapter president Cynthia Grubb, adding:

"We will not let this matter die. We'll take it as far as need be to get it corrected. The public needs to know what the police department is doing to protect us from drunk drivers. This is not our idea of protection."

Mrs. Grubb's reaction stemmed from the case of a 23-year-old Lubbock man with two DWI arrests on his record who was charged with public intoxication after being stopped for a traffic violation near the intersection of Wadley and Big Spring shortly before 3 a.m. Tuesday.

The Lubbock man's case marks the second time a motorist has been charged with public intoxication, instead of DWI, since City Manager James Brown's Feb. 6 public statement that the practice would stop.

Two days later, a 27-year-old Midland man was charged with public intoxication after he was stopped for a traffic violation near Air Terminal at 9:30 p.m. His record shows three minor traffic offenses and no DWIs.

Chief of Police Wayne Gideon said the reason the Midland man wasn't charged with DWI was that the officer "felt sorry for him" because he had lost his job and had just had a fight with his wife.

In addition to the two DWI charges — one in Midland on Nov. 5, 1982, and the second in Dallas County last June 9 — the Lubbock man's record includes a speeding charge, two red light violations, one accident with a parked vehicle and a charge of driving without insurance.

With two DWIs in his past, he could have been charged with felony DWI for the Tuesday morning offense.

For several years now city police have routinely filed the "lesser offense" of public intoxication against drunk drivers — except where accidents or other extenuating circumstances are involved.

While the practice is legal, both City Attorney Joe Nuessle and County Attorney Scott Henderson have publicly said it undermines the state's felony DWI law.

Other critics maintain that a major reason behind the practice is that it keeps the fines in city hands. But Gideon has denied that allegation, saying it's done to save officers the two hours or so it takes to process a DWI charge. A public intoxication charge takes about 15 minutes to process.

The Lubbock man wasn't charged with DWI, according to Gideon, because the arresting officer "had been on vacation and didn't know the policy had changed."

A check of the officer's schedule, however, disclosed that he has worked at least five days since the city manager made the Feb. 6 statement.

The officer also apparently wasn't aware of a department memo Gideon issued Jan. 26, in which he reaffirmed "the existing policy" of checking the background of suspects before lodging charges.

The memo resulted from publicity over a 26-year-old Lamesa man charged Jan. 13 with public intoxication — in spite of a lengthy driving record that included four DWI arrests, one of which resulted in a 60-day jail sentence by Crosbyton authorities last July.

The Lamesa man's case also sparked the city manager's statement that the practice would stop. Asked about the two latest cases, Brown said Tuesday:

"I'm going to check with the chief to see what the problem is. If some officers aren't aware of the (new) policy, we'll have to figure out a way to ensure that everybody knows what it is. I want the law enforced as DWI. The council wants it, too."

Proposed curriculum has 'serious flaws,' says school official

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

After a brief and routine board meeting, Midland school trustees again focused their attention and disappointment on a public school curriculum proposed by the State Board of Education.

The revised proposal, which is one step away from final approval, is an improvement but still has serious flaws, according to Director of Secondary Education Maridell Fryar. Ms. Fryar attended the state board meeting last week and reported to trustees on the revisions made.

Those most restricted by the proposed changes would be the high achievers, Ms. Fryar said. College-bound students who would graduate under an advanced transcript and those students who participate in more than one extracurricular activity would suffer.

"I believe the strongest negative impact (of the advanced transcript) is the taking away from students and parents the choice to design a high school plan that is best for them," she said.

The advanced transcript would require 19 mandatory credits of 22 classes needed to graduate. The original proposal called for 20 required courses.

"Students in the advanced transcript are being forced to be uniform. The academic transcript tries to make every outstanding student the same kind of outstanding student," she said, adding it would discourage many students from taking the advanced transcript.

"If it's so restrictive that there's no advantage to being involved in it, what has it accomplished? It's an exercise in futility, and we will lose some good things along the way," she later commented.

Ms. Fryar stressed that most aspects of the proposed curriculum are positive and would have little impact on the Midland Independent School District. MISD requirements have been substantially higher than the state minimum.

Trustees discussed the possible effects of a proposed policy which states a student must earn at least a 70 (C) or above to get credit for a course. The possibility of inflated grades and higher number of dropouts was a concern.

"We have a group of students in our schools who graduate on the strength of the passing D," Ms. Fryar said, estimating about 15 percent of secondary students fall into this category. "I don't know what will happen to those students."

If the proposal passes on third reading in March, and most authorities seem to think it will, it will go into effect in the fall. The differentiated transcripts will apply to next year's freshmen.

The school district will probably have to lower some of its current graduation requirements, Ms. Fryar said. MISD requires some courses that are not mandated by the state proposal. If those remain mandatory, students would not even get three electives.

"Any requirements that we have locally on top of state requirements are literally eroding the few choices available to students," she told trustees.

Ms. Fryar pointed out, however, that most MISD students graduate with 24 credits, because they are required to take six classes each semester. The only exceptions are those students who flunk a course or who have met graduation requirements and wish to take courses at Midland College part of the day. This means even students taking the advanced transcript will have five electives under the current proposal, she explained.

MISD board president Bill Jackson expressed a belief that this proposal will force many small school districts to consolidate. Increased requirements in math and science, coupled with a shortage of math and science teachers, would be one problem.

Another would be that these districts would be forced to offer in one way or another, classes needed to graduate under the advanced transcript, even if only a handful of students require or want the classes.

"In the long run the impact on our programs will not be as much as the impact on our students and their lives," Ms. Fryar summarized.

In other action trustees:

—Expelled a Midland High School student for the remainder of the term for "inflicting violence on a fellow student."

—Accepted $20,000 in matching donations for the district's computer program. Texas Electric Service Co. donated $5,000, Wagner and Brown gave $10,000 and Elcor Corp. donated $5,000.

—Accepted $13,730 worth of gifts from the parent-teacher associations at Bonham, Santa Rita and Long elementaries.

—Approved the expansion of the Lee High band hall.

—Approved special education and library policies and procedures.

—Tabled a request by the North Central Little League to use school property near Lee High for a practice field.

—Granted a request by the city's Parks and Recreation Department to use Lee Freshman school facilities for a summer recreation program.

Man convicted in grocer's murder seeks release from penitentiary

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Lee Roy Jackson, who in 1981 was sentenced to life in prison for the murder of a Midland grocer, is seeking release from the penitentiary on grounds that his constitutional rights were violated.

In a petition for a writ of habeas corpus filed in federal court in Midland, Jackson, 36, is alleging he was denied a speedy trial and his confession to police was involuntarily given.

Jackson claimed he was twice denied a speedy trial after the prosecution had asked 238th State District Judge Vann Culp for postponements of the trial and that he had served 179 days in jail before his case went to trial.

Further, Jackson said he gave a confession after Midland Police Detective Lt. Earl Luckey had told him that he (Luckey) was offering his assistance for Jackson's mother's sake.

Jackson, who said his statement to police effectively was given involuntarily, however, did not allege coercion in his petition to the court. He is contending that his interview with Luckey "coupled with the timing of the filing of the charges clearly evinces bargaining on the part of the police."

Jackson said that "without such voluntariness," his confession should have been inadmissible at trial and that his "conviction consequently must be reversed."

Luckey this morning declinced to comment on Jackson's petition, "because I don't know what he's saying."

Jackson is asking U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton to discharge him "from all such illegal confinement." In the alternative, he is asking the judge to send his case back to state court for new proceedings."

Jackson was convicted in September 1981 by a six-man, six-woman jury in 238th State District Court of shooting the grocer, William Isaac "Bill" Dennis, at the counter of Bill's Drive Inn Grocery on Midland's east-side on March 12, 1981.

In his testimony, Jackson said he accidentally shot Dennis in a grudge-induced squabble. Jackson said he and the grocer, 61, had earlier conflicts stemming from suspected shoplifting on Jackson's part and that Dennis had told him to "stay out" of the store if he didn't like the way it was being operated. Jackson said both engaged in name-calling, that Dennis struck him with a club and that a .38-caliber pistol Jackson was holding accidentally discharged.

In the trial, Jackson did not indicate at what point in the squabble he had removed the pistol from his waistband. Stacks of money on Dennis' counter were untouched.

Jackson, who has previous convictions for burglary, theft, escape, robbery and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, fled to Arkansas, where he was arrested.

Akins seeking re-election of third term as mayor

From Staff Reports

G. Thane Akins

G. Thane Akins is seeking a third term to the office of mayor, he announced Tuesday prior to a City Council meeting.

A petroleum engineer, he has served four years as mayor and four years before that as a councilman. In opting for another term, Akins said he wanted to continue working on a number of projects that were initiated and problems that have come up in the past two years.

"I am particularly concerned with our financial planning as we recover from a very difficult time in our local economy. Some hard decisions will be required in the budget process and I feel a responsibility to see the resolution of that situation with the least amount of impact on the public or our city employees," he said.

The 1984 fiscal year budget included no pay raises for city employees. Akins said the council in March will review the city's financial status for the first four months. "We'll do everything we can with the resources available," he said in reference to a possible pay raise.

Street repairs also will be a major issue in the next two years, Akins said. The city had budgeted $800,000 in 1983 for street reconstruction, but that was eliminated last spring when sales tax revenues slumped by almost 50 percent.

In the 1984 budget, Akins said the council has budgeted a considerable amount for streets, "but not as much as we'd like to. We're going to pay more in the long run if we don't do something about it. It's not cost effective to keep delaying it. It's a serious problem we have to deal with in our budget."

As mayor, he's hoping the sales tax revenues will rebound and that money can be directed to streets. But if the sales tax rebates don't increase, then the council will consider raising property taxes, Akins said.

The mayor said the city started several "massive" projects in the past two years that he would like to see completed:

—Construction of the sewage effluent disposal facility.

—Construction at Midland Regional Airport.

—Relocation of Midland Air Park.

"In cooperation with other local institutions, we have initiated planning and preparation for Midland's Centennial celebration in 1985 and I would feel privileged to have a part in that as mayor."

Two projects he would like to initiate include setting up a citizen commission to deal with DWI and to promote safety belt usage and another commission to do long-range water planning for the city.

It's difficult for the city to write and enforce an ordinance to prohibit people from letting water run down the streets, he said. "We need to get the public aware of it and concerned about it. This citizen commission could be a big help in that regard," Akins said.

In closing, he noted that a stronger sense of teamwork between the council and city administration is developing.

Oil man announces MC board candidacy

From Staff Reports

Ralph L. Way

Ralph L. Way, Midland independent oil and gas producer, has announced he will seek re-election to the Midland Junior College Board of Trustees, Place 8. The post is one of three on the board to be filled at the April 7 elections.

Way was elected to the position in 1978 and is completing his first six-year term. He also serves as one of the board representatives on the Midland College Foundation Board.

"This has been an exciting period in the continued growth and development of Midland College, and I have been pleased to be a part of it," Way said. "It is one of Midland's finest resources, with excellent educational programs responsive to the needs and wishes of this community. I would welcome the opportunity to represent the people of this district in continuing Midland College's development as one of the state's finest community colleges."

A resident of Midland since 1964, Way was born in Texon and was graduated from Reagan County High School in Big Lake. He received a bachelor of science degree in petroleum engineering from Texas Tech University. Prior to coming to Midland, he was associated with Pan American Petroleum Corporation in Brownfield. He is now director at First Bankers Trust and Savings.

He and his wife, Barbara, have five daughters.

Two persons arrested on felony drug charges

From Staff Reports

Police, Fire Round-up

Two persons were arrested on felony drug charges and six pounds of marijuana — along with eight grams of cocaine — was seized after a narcotics raid on an eastside residence late Tuesday afternoon.

In the city jail this morning were 28-year-old Miguel Madrid Quiroz and his wife, 27-year-old Sonja Concepcion Quiroz, both of 1612 E. Hickory.

They were named in warrants signed by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine after a lengthy investigation by city narcotics agents.

The raid was conducted at the Hickory Avenue address about 5:30 p.m. In addition to the drugs, officers said they seized various pieces of narcotics paraphernalia.

The total street value of the drugs was placed at $5,400. Bond is expected to be set against the suspects sometime today.

In other police activity, a 20-year-old Anetta Drive mother of three children told officers she was sexually assaulted in her home early this morning.

The woman said a black man in his early 20s entered the house through a rear door about 1:40 a.m., grabbed her and forced her to perform oral sex. The assailant was further described as weighing about 160 pounds. An investigation is continuing.

Kenny Boyer, 20, of 1214 Century, has been released from custody after posting $10,000 bond on an indictment charging him with murder in the November 1983 stabbing death of 20-year-old Jeral Scott Burns, 2712 Delano.

Burns' body was found in an alley in the 2500 block of West College Avenue the night of Nov. 29. Boyer was arrested Monday after being indicted Feb. 8, according to authorities.

A vacant house at 2402½ W. Kentucky was destroyed in a fire that broke out shortly before 11 p.m. Tuesday. The owner was listed as L.C. Slaton.

Motivation class being offered

Science of Mind Class I, a motivation course with a different twist, will be at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Center and Book Store, No. 11 Town and Country Shopping Center.

The Rev. Nina Douglas, minister of the Permian Church of Religious Science, will instruct the course, designed to improve one's quality of life.

Whether the dream is a better job, increased earnings, higher school grades, increased efficiency or concentration, athletic prowess, more love, good health, better relationships or even spiritual quest, those attending learn techniques that help them realize their goals.

Although the class includes positive thinking and psychological training, it also will explain what is behind proven methods of changing attitudes to change life for the better.

Each class during the 15-week course will meet for 2½ hours. Fees are $150 plus a $25 registration fee. In addition, students will attend a special weekend workshop with Dr. Lee Gibon at a reduced rate of $20 rather than the $50 charge for those not enrolled in the course.

Enrollment is limited to 100 people. To register or for more information, call The Book Store at 697-4188.

Pollution cutting cotton?

Plant pathologists think air pollution may be depressing production of cotton, the nation's No. 4 crop, whose yields have stagnated at mid-1960s levels.

Presidents an exception

Under present rules, you won't live to see your picture on a U.S. postage stamp. And the only person portrayed shortly after death are former presidents; all others must wait at least 10 years.

Better service promised

After the meeting, Arnold attributed the problems to the the rebuild, a high number of outages and lack of preparation with the phone lines and customer relations. "They've all been condensed in a small time frame," he said of the operating during the 18-month rebuilding which he said normally would take three years.

The city theoretically could drop Community Cablevision by showing it has not lived up to the terms of the franchise's contract. But City Manager John Harrison explained at an earlier meeting that "performance indicators" which could be used to show the company breaking terms of the agreement were not written in.

Sivalls has pointed out that dropping the cable company would leave TV viewers without a cable option. He had threatened to put the cable company on probation if the report had not been satisfactory at an earlier meeting.

Physicist to speak on Orwell's errors

ODESSA — What George Orwell did not know about 1984 will be considered as nuclear physicist Stanton Friedman addresses students and area residents Thursday at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Scheduled at 7:30 p.m. in the student lounge, the Friedman lecture will center around the error of Orwell's predictions concerning life on the Planet Earth in the latter part of the 20th centruy.

Among the failures in Orwell's thesis, Friedman points out several facts. "He missed easy, cheap travel across oceans for the masses. He missed private television as opposed to state-controlled television. Space has spy satellites, but Orwell missed the fact that anyone with the right dish can tune in communications from all over the world."

Friedman, a Canadian scientist who has been involved in numerous American space technology projects, worked on instrumentation for the Poineer 10 and 11 spacecrafts.

Admission to the Friedman lecture is $5 general admission. It is free to all high school, junior college and university students in the Permian Basin.

Choirchimes group plans meeting

An organizational meeting will be held at St. Luke's United Methodist Church for the adult Choirchimes Group Thursday at 7 p.m.

All adults interested in becoming a member of this group are invited to attend.

The music department at St. Mark's UMC received the chimes shortly before Christmas. Within several weeks four choir members presented a short concert for the congregation. A group of fourth, fifth and sixth grade students, one for junior high and another for high school have already been organized.

For more information call the program's directors Donna Stacy, 694-3374, or Becky James, 682-6029.

Ms. Stacy is director of the choral music program at St. Mark's UMC. A member of St. Mark's UMC, Ms. James has been working with English handbells for six years and is a member of The Rejoicers, St. Luke's UMC's handbell choir.

Odessan requests reduced sentence

Richard Dennard, a 35-year-old Odessa car-wash businessman, has petitioned U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton to reduce his three 1-year prison terms for failure to file business and employee tax returns from 1978 through 1980.

Dennard, who pleaded guilty to the charges, was sentenced Jan. 12, when Bunton told him that he might reconsider the consecutive sentences were Dennard to pay a substantial amount of the $100,000 due the U.S. Internal Revenue Service.

Since then, Dennard said in his request to the court that he has paid the IRS $55,000 toward the indebtedness.

Dennard is alleging that the sentence imposed by Bunton "is excessive and should be reduced."

Planned Parenthood banquet slated

ODESSA — The 19th Annual Meeting and Banquet of Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin (PPPB) will be held at the Odessa Hilton Thursday night.

Jean Mahoney, chairperson of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, will be the guest speaker.

The public is invited to attend. Cocktail hour will begin at 6:30 with dinner, at a charge of $14, served at 7:30. The program, at no charge, is scheduled for 8:15 p.m.

Reservations for the dinner and/or program are required. For more information or to make reservations, call the PPPB executive office at 333-4133 or 563-2530.

Nurse's trial goes to jury

GEORGETOWN (AP) — The Genene Jones murder trial goes to the jury today, a panel that must decide if the defendant is a nurse whose skills were used to kill a baby.

State District Judge John Carter planned to give each side 90 minutes to offer closing arguments today. Jurors, who will be sequestered for deliberations, are expected to get the case around mid-day.

Both sides wrapped up rebuttal testimony Tuesday. The testimony, which included 44 prosecution witnesses and seven for the defense, ended with disagreements on whether traces of a muscle-paralyzing drug were found in Chelsea McClellan after death.

The 15-month-old girl died on Sept. 17, 1982, after getting two injections from Ms. Jones. The licensed vocational nurse was working for a Kerrville pediatrician, who ordered routine immunizations.

Prosecutors say the shots carried succinylcholine. Chelsea suffered a mysterious seizure, similar to attacks that hit five other children treated by nurse Jones.

Unlike the other five, Chelsea did not recover. She died during a frantic ambulance ride toward San Antonio.

Defense lawyers Jim Brookshire and Burt Carnes hammered at the prosecution's expert testimony — especially a new test devised to detect succinylcholine in embalmed tissues.

Dr. Fredric Rieders, a Philadelphia toxicologist, said his tests — at the Stockholm laboratory of the man who developed the process — proved the drug was given to the girl.

But a defense expert, toxicologist Joseph Balkon of New York, challenged the result of Rieders' work.

The defense also tried to show that Chelsea was not a murder victim. Four of the seven defense witnesses were medical experts who had never seen Chelsea. Dr. William Goldie, a Houston pediatric neurologist, said Chelsea's records showed a sick girl prone to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

But Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton pointed out to Goldie that some of the records he studied weree written by Ms. Jones.

The state's strongest shot at showing a motive came through nurse Mary Morris, who talked to Ms. Jones in Kerrville shortly after the defendant moved there from San Antonio.

Ms. Jones said she moved to Kerrville to help start a pediatric intensive care unit, according to Mrs. Morris. Ms. Jones also said she planned to "find" enough sick children to justify the new unit, the witness said.

Genene Jones

Dr. Kathleen Holland, Ms. Jones' former boss, said she found two unexplained holes in the top of a succinylcholine bottle in her office. Ms. Jones said she found the vial after she had reported it lost. The drug bottle also turned up after the mysterious seizures, according to Ms. Holland.

And a state chemist testified here that the solution in the bottle had been heavily diluted with salt water, a possible attempt to make it look full.

During rebuttal testimony Tuesday, Sutton tried to quash the defense's effort to show that any succinylcholine found in Chelsea could have come from someone other than Ms. Jones. A defense witness had testified that Petti McClellan, Chelsea's mother, was given the muscle relaxant during the emergency Cesarean section done to deliver Chelsea.

Jim Garriott, chief toxicologist for the Bexar County medical examiner, testified Tuesday that there was no chance the drug given to the mother showed up two years later when the baby's body was exhumed.

"I don't think that is worth considering," he said. "I don't think that is possible."

But defense lawyer Carnes got Garriott to admit it is "possible" for a drug injected into a mother's blood to pass to an unborn child.

Margarite Rodriguez bends to kiss the box that holds her son's Purple Heart. Lance Cpl. Rodolfo Hernandez, 28, who died a week ago from injuries suffered in Beirut, was buried Tuesday.

Family buries slain Marine

EL PASO (AP) — Lance Cpl. Rodolfo Hernandez did not live long enough to learn his fellow Marines would be pulled out of Lebanon but at least he will not "suffer any more," says a priest who gave the slain serviceman's funeral mass.

"He's better off than we are," the Most Rev. Jaime Madrid, vicar general of the El Paso Catholic Diocese, told about 100 of Hernandez' relatives and friends who gathered Tuesday for a traditional mass and brief military burial for Hernandez.

The funeral came one week after the 28-year-old El Paso man died of wounds he suffered Jan. 30 in a skirmish with Shiite Moslem militiamen at the Beirut airport.

Hernandez died at a West German hospital the same day Reagan announced U.S. Marines would be pulled out of Lebanon, where they were sent as a peace-keeping force in September 1982.

No eulogy was given for Hernandez Tuesday. But during the mass, Madrid told his mourning family, "Rodolfo will not suffer any more."

At the burial at Fort Bliss National Cemetery, Hernandez' family weeped as his flag-draped coffin sat before them.

The Marine's family has found "it hard to forgive" Reagan for involving American troops in the Middle East, an uncle of the slain serviceman said earlier this week.

"The family finds it hard to forgive this man (Reagan) because he has sacrificed all these lives for political reasons," said Fred Hernandez. "Rudy did not question it personally, but I feel he should never have been there, that we should never have lost Rudy."

Hernandez' mother, Margarite Rodriguez, has been described by other family members as "bitter" over her son's death.

She sat quietly through Tuesday's ritual, speaking only to Maj. Andrew Charlson, who presented her with the U.S. flag that covered her son's coffin and with a small black box that contained the Purple Heart awarded Hernandez.

Mrs. Rodriguez softly kissed the box after Charlson handed it to her.

Hernandez was the 264th U.S. serviceman to die from violence in Lebanon.

He was on his second tour of duty and was only seven months away from his discharge, Mrs. Rodriguez said.

Autopsy shows minister died of strangulation

PALO PINTO (AP) — A Methodist minister found slain in the back of his van died from strangulation, according to the results of a preliminary autopsy report.

The body of the Rev. John H. Basham, of Dublin, was discovered near Gordon on Thursday, three days after he disappeared en route to Dallas, authorities said. Basham, 55, was traveling from Dublin to Dallas, where he was to have received an award from the Methodist church.

Palo Pinto County Sheriff John Turpin said Tuesday that the autopsy had not yet revealed how long Basham had been dead.

De la Garza to attend farm forum

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas and chairman of the U.S. House Agriculture Committee, has confirmed that he plans to attend a four-state farm policy forum in Texarkana, Ark., on Monday.

The forum is sponsored by the Democratic National Committee's Agriculture Council, and Hightower is the chairman.

Hightower said the meeting is the fifth of 12 around the country, and will give the Agriculture Council a foundation to write the agriculture plank in the 1984 national Democratic Party platform.

Professor: Twisters can hit any time

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Winter tornadoes are unusual, but weather experts say last weekend's twisters in Normangee and Palestine shows they can strike swiftly at any time of the year.

John Griffiths of the State Climatologist's office says studies show April, May and June are the most likely months for tornadoes in Texas. "But March, July, August and September also account for a significant number of twisters" and the cooler months of December, January and February also carry a risk, said Griffiths, a Texas A&M professor.

Griffiths said at least 3,750 confirmed tornadoes were recorded statewide between 1951 and 1982, the period for which complete information is available.

Researchers said the tornado Saturday that struck Normangee was part of a larger pattern of violent weather that struck several Southern states, in keeping with unseasonably warm weather.

Awarding of damages delayed

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has ordered a delay in the awarding of $38.3 million to eight lawmen injured in high-speed crashes while riding Kawasaki motorcycles.

U.S. District Judge George Cire Tuesday granted the temporary restraining order sought by the Kawasaki Motors Corp., then remanded the case to state District Judge Kenneth Harrison, who was asked to issue a new judgment based on the jury's decision.

The decision temporarily prevents eight motorcycle police officers from collecting the award given them Oct. 31. A jury found the officers were injured because of defective construction of the machines they were riding.

Jurors awarded $7.6 million in actual damages against Kawasaki. That figure was tripled because the case was filed under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act. Jurors also awarded punitive damages against the company.

'Bubble boy' has stomach ulcer

HOUSTON (AP) — It was a joyous moment when David, the "bubble boy," emerged from his germ-free world last week and kissed his mother for the first time. But the news since has been less happy — flu-like illness, graft-vs.-host disease and now a stomach ulcer that keeps him from eating.

Despite the reversals, the sixth-grader is showing the same pluck he displayed during 12 years confined to a sanitized plastic prison, a hospital spokeswoman said Tuesday.

"David is in good spirits. He's joking with his nurses. He's helping the doctors in his treatment," said Susannah Griffin, spokeswoman for Baylor College of Medicine.

David, whose last name has never been disclosed, was born without immunity to disease, and until Feb. 7 had spent his entire life inside a series of sterile room-size plastic bubbles.

In October, he underwent a bone marrow transplant with marrow from his sister Katherine. When he became ill for the first time last week, suffering from flu-like symptoms, doctors allowed him to leave the bubble so he could be treated.

By Tuesday the combination of the newly diagnosed stomach ulcer, along with vomiting and diarrhea, had left David in "serious but stable" condition, Mrs. Griffin announced.

In revealing the ulcer, she said doctors had no explanation for what caused it.

The boy was unable to eat Tuesday after several days of being able to take at least some food normally, and was being fed intravenously, she said. David had been receiving blood transfusions as doctors searched for the source of internal bleeding, she said, but now the bleeding has been stopped.

The news of the ulcer followed the revelation Monday by Dr. William Shearer, David's personal physician, that a test showed the boy has potentially deadly graft vs. host disease as a result of the Oct. 20 bone marrow transplant. In that operation, specially treated marrow was used in an attempt to awaken his immune system.

Shearer said the graft vs. host reaction was at least proof the transplanted tissue is still functioning.

During the operation, considered David's only hope of surviving in the dirty outside world, the boy received 1½ ounces of his sister's marrow.

The marrow had been treated with monoclonal antibodies, micro-organisms designed to kill mature T-cells, which are part of the body's protection against outside organisms. If transplanted into another person's body, mature T-cells can attack their new environment, mistaking it for a threat. That condition is called graft-vs.-host disease.

The treatment with monoclonal antibodies is designed to leave only immature T-cells, or stem cells. Doctors hope the embryo cells will grow up accustomed to their new body and act as an effective defense.

"Ultimately in some patients, we're unable to control" graft-vs.-host disease, says Dr. Joel Rappaport, clinical director of the bone marrow transplant program at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, an expert in the field.

Mrs. Griffin said David will continue receiving ulcer medication and corticosteroids for several weeks. Corticosteroids are used to rebuild destroyed tissue.

Besides doctors and nurses, his parents and sister are allowed to visit him, although all must don sterile clothes and masks, Mrs. Griffin said. Doctors say David will never be able to return to his bubble, and he is now staying in a two-room hospital suite that has been sterilized as much as possible.

"His mother or father is there all the time," Mrs. Griffin said. "One spends the night."

Lucas, officials secretly visit El Paso

EL PASO (AP) — Law enforcement officials say a secret visit self-confessed mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas made to El Paso to lead police to two of his alleged victims' bodies has turned up nothing.

El Paso Sheriff's Capt. Alfred Bonilla said Lucas, 47, was flown into El Paso Monday about 11:30 a.m. "to show us where he had hidden these bodies."

However, at the two spots Lucas located, no bodies were found, Bonilla said.

Lucas, who says he is responsible for the slaying of more than 150 women nationwide, was taken back out of El Paso by two Texas Rangers Tuesday about 8 a.m., Bonilla said.

"He was returned to Georgetown, where he's being held right now," Bonilla said.

"We found nothing at the two scenes where he claims to have dumped the bodies," Bonilla said. "We'll be looking at the areas again within the next couple of days to make sure. But we got nothing yesterday (Monday)."

Bonilla said one of the sites where Lucas claims to have buried a murder victim was east of El Paso, while the other was to the west of the city.

Bonilla said local authorities have found three skeletons to the west of El Paso during the past three years. But he said they are not believed to be the bodies to which Lucas alleges a connection.

"They weren't found in the area that he showed us yesterday (Monday)," Bonilla said.

He said Lucas' trip to El Paso was not announced at the request of Lucas.

"He indicated to us that if there was any news media at all that he would get back on that plane and that he wouldn't talk to us at all," Bonilla said. "We were sort of at his mercy."

Lucas is scheduled to go on trial in Georgetown March 5 in the death of an unidentified woman whose nearly nude body was found near Georgetown on Halloween 1979.

He already has pleaded guilty to the slaying of 80-year-old Kate Rich of Ringgold and on Sept. 20 was sentenced to 75 years in prison for that slaying. He was tried at Denton and was assessed a life sentence on Nov. 9 in the fatal stabbing of his teen-age companion Frieda "Becky" Powell, 15, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Yugoslavian food won't win any Olympic medals

By DENIS COLLINS
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — The three Olympic athletes had finished lunch, and dropped their forks on half-filled plates when the Yugoslavian television crew ambushed them from behind.

"How do you like Yugoslavian food?," asked the interviewer, beaming a Ted Knight smile at Frank Masley, a 23-year-old American luge racer who looked more worried by the question than by the ice chute he had tackled that morning.

"Once you start eating it, it's pretty good," said Masley, blinking into the bright camera light. "But I do miss the cheeseburgers back home."

If medals were awarded for culinary achievement at the Winter Olympics, Yugoslavia's chefs would be long shots as far as many American athletes are concerned. Ironically, American cooks wouldn't be among the favorites either. After all, the Yugoslavs contracted with ARA Services Inc., of Philadelphia, to help in the kitchen.

Many of the the American athletes, such as vegetarian luger Bonny Warner, complain that there are not enough fresh vegetables for salads and most of the cooked vegetables taste as if they've been boiled overnight.

"The food is definitely below par," pronounced Erik Henriksen, a 25-year-old speedskater from Illinois with a reputation as a willing complainer. "Some of these meats are indiscernible. I have a personal rule. I don't eat food unless I know what's in it."

ROSALYNN SUMNERS, America's reigning World Champion figure skater, called home to catch her father before he left the United States for these games. Just wanted to say hi, Pop. And how about bringing over some tuna fish, chicken and Carefree gum?

Americans have a notoriously chauvinistic reputation when it comes to chewing other folks' food. French cuisine is too creamy. English cooking is too bland. And you can't get a bottle of ketchup in a German beer garden.

Truth is, if you like meat, thick soups, sweet desserts and cheese, Yugoslavia can be a four-star stop. Sarajevo, with its mix of Turkish, Roman and Slavic influences, has a particularly varied menu.

There is a small, no-name restaurant a few blocks from the press center in downtown Sarajevo that serves a mean pieskavica. That is a spiced beef and pork mixed grill and it is probably as close to the national dish as any.

With dinner you can get half a dozen varieties of smoked cheese, including kajmak, a rich goat cheese. For dessert, my favorite is tufahije, baked apples stuffed with nuts, honey and cream.

Because the language barrier in this country is thick as steel, odd transformations occasionally occur between the time you order and the moment it is placed before you. It can be disconcerting to ask for pork chops and receive sheep's brain in bread crumbs.

AND THIS IS the only place I've ever been where pizza normally comes with a fried egg on top, though I'm told it's common in Italy, too. But certainly not at Pizza Hut.

There are no McDonald's in Yugoslavia, but there is a place called Big Mec, which serves something resembling a hamburger and has red arches advertising it on the street.

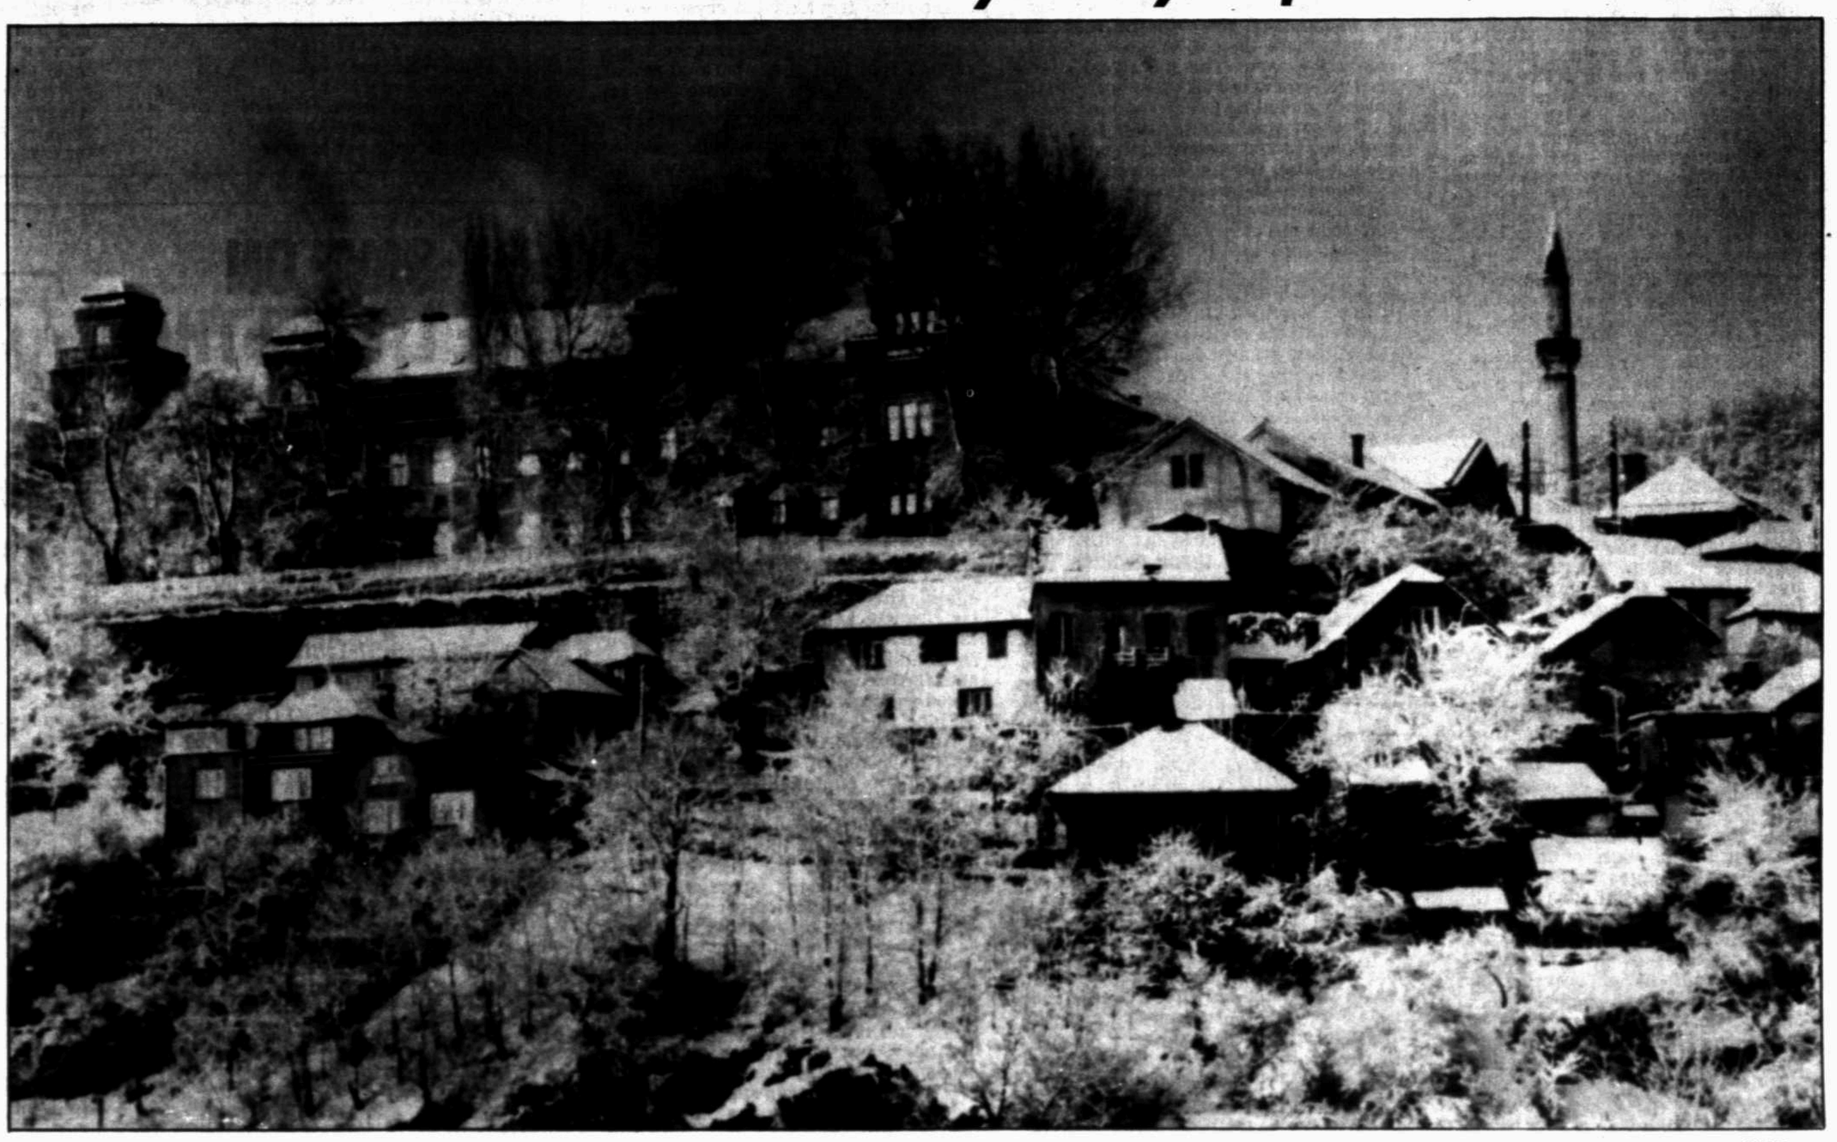

The best fast food comes from small stands that serve cevapcici, which is spiced and skewered ground meat with fried onions served on pita bread.

While American athletes are complaining about the food in their cafeteria, athletes from other countries seem amazed by the variety supplied by ARA and Yugoslavia's United Agriculture and Industrial monolith — more correctly Uje Dinjena Poljoprivredia Pro Met Indosavro, or UPI (rhymes with whoopee).

AMERICAN REPORTERS, on the other hand, seem to agree with the American athletes. The reporters have been doing what they excel at when gathered in large groups. Bitching. About nearly everything. The food has been the subject of numerous jokes.

Al Morganti, a junk food addict with the Philadelphia Inquirer, said last week, "Every house here has a chicken in the back yard. So why can't you get a decent chicken club sandwich?"

And, at breakfast recently, faced with a variety of meat spreads, Tony Chamberlain of the Boston Globe mused, "I wonder what they do with the good parts of the animals?"

A single minaret from a Moslem mosque, rising among the Yugoslavian homes nestled in the foothills surrounding Sarajevo, identifies the city's strong Eastern roots, dating back to the 14th century when the Ottoman Empire ruled the land. The city's food reflects its history with Turkish, Roman and Slavic influences and is not very well liked by most of the American athletes now in Sarajevo competing in the 1984 Winter Olympics.

Armenian cooking tradition lends itself to American innovation

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

As long as Janet Saghatelian can remember, her mother kept a plate of wet cracker bread, covered with a towel, on the kitchen table. Saghatelian, or any of her five siblings, could help themselves to odd pieces of the bread, broken before they were soaked from crackly dry 15-inch rounds. When the children wanted lunch or a snack they would spread a softened piece of the bread with peanut butter, wrap one around a piece of cheese or leftover meat or sweeten it with sugar and fer, the thick skin of their mother's homemade yogurt.

That was in the house on M Street alongside her father's bakery in Fresno, Calif. Saghatelian was born there. She lived there when she started working in the bakery at age 10. In fact, she lived there for 26 years.

NOW, MORE than 60 years after Gazair Saghatelian, a third-generation baker from Armenia, fired up his new ovens, the house is gone, as are the elder Saghatelians. But the original bakery, now with daughter Janet as president, still produces the flat 15-inch round cracker breads known as lahvosh as well as the raised round loaves of slightly sweet peda, both ancient traditional breads in the Armenian diet.

But if tradition is Saghatelian's heritage, innovation is her future. While she bakes the breads according to her father's recipes, she has by no means stuck to her mother's traditional ways with lahvosh.

"The idea really is the same as when Mama left the plate of jagged pieces of wet bread for us kids. I've just used the whole rounds and organized the fillings a little more," Saghatelian explained.

Because of the cracker bread's neutral flavor, just about any ingredients will work for a filling, according to Saghatelian. She and her bakery staff have thought up recipes for other "wraps," as they call them. They have devised a curried chicken filling with peanuts and sprouts, one of beef with mustard, hot peppers and red onion, another of refried beans with sour cream, salsa, shredded beef and cheese and one combining lox with cream cheese, red onion rings and tomato slices.

THEY HAVE even wrapped berries and yogurt, apple pie filling and puddings in the softened bread.

There is no need to worry about cracks or chips in the large rounds because they mend themselves after the bread has been softened, Saghatelian said. Neither is freshness a worry. "I tell people cracker bread keeps for six months," she said, "but really, you can keep it for years, and it will still taste fine."

When making sandwiches Saghatelian suggests using a spread that is fairly firm at room temperature, such as cream cheese, as the base for the filling. "It will help the sandwich hold its shape when chilled and sliced," she said, adding, "It is best to have ingredients at room temperature both when assembling the sandwich, for easier rolling, and when serving, for better flavor."

She suggests chilling the rolled sandwich at least an hour before serving. To slice, use a very thin sharp knife. "Those cheap ones you can buy in the supermarket work best," she said.

But wrapped sandwiches are not the only sidesteps this baker has taken with cracker bread.

SEVERAL YEARS ago she introduced 3-inch and 5-inch rounds, which can be used to make appetizer-size wraps. Last year she created small crackers shaped like hearts, her mania.

For more ideas using Armenian cracker bread and some of the recipes mentioned above, send a long self-addressed envelope to Janet Saghatelian at Valley Bakery, 502 M St., Fresno 93721. In the meantime, here are a few recipes for her sandwich wraps.

BEEF-HORSERADISH WRAP-UP

1 (15-inch) cracker bread
1 (3-ounce) package cream cheese, softened
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 teaspoon horseradish, or more to taste
5 ounces thinly sliced roast beef
6 ounces thinly sliced Cheddar cheese
1 large tomato, thinly sliced
2 cups shredded head lettuce
¼ cup chopped green onions

Wet cracker bread under cold running water about 10 to 30 seconds on each side. Place between damp terry or other cloth towels. Set aside 45 minutes to 1 hour until soft.

In bowl combine cream cheese, mayonnaise and horseradish. Spread mixture over softened cracker bread to within 1-2 inch of edge. Cover with layer of roast beef, then cheese and tomato slices. Sprinkle with lettuce and green onions. Roll up tightly, jellyroll fashion, enclosing filling. Wrap tightly in plastic wrap. Chill at least 1 hour. With very thin sharp knife, cut slices in desired widths. Makes about 4 sandwich servings, 12 to 16 appetizer servings.

SERAPE WRAP

1 (15-inch) cracker bread
1 (10.5-ounce) can jalapeno bean dip
¾ cup sour cream
1 large avocado
1 (4-ounce) can green chiles
2 teaspoons lemon juice
8 ounces shredded Cheddar cheese
1 large tomato, diced
½ cup sliced green onions
½ cup sliced black olives

Wet cracker bread under cold running water about 10 to 30 seconds on each side. Place between damp terry or other cloth towels. Set aside 45 minutes to 1 hour until soft.

Famous Paris restaurants toured

By MICHAEL BAUER
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

PARIS — Many people dream of taking a culinary tour of France. It is, in fact, one of the most popular pastimes for tourists. French food is probably just as famous as the Louvre and Versailles. Therefore writing about a culinary trip to France is about as unique as writing about the Mona Lisa.

Yet there seems to be something about dining in the best restaurants in the world that fascinates people. After a three-week eating trip to Europe people kept asking me such questions as "L'Archestrate, did you go there? What about La Mere Blanc? Michel Guerard?" Many whose questions I fielded have been to France many times and can talk about Pierre Troisgros or Paul Bocuse on much more intimate terms than I.

"What did you eat?" they ask. "Was it as divine as I remembered it?" Then they want every detail about the experience.

Those friends who had never been to these three-star palaces were just as interested, but more to the tune of asking "What did it look like? Did you feel intimidated?"

I learned that no matter how much already has been written on these restaurants, people will continue to devour all the information they can get their hands on.

THEREFORE I will present my reminiscences from the road: a look at the notable restaurants that lured me to France and some of the dishes that will live on in my memory.

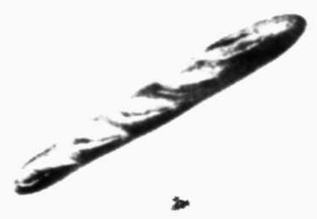

With the French franc going for nearly eight to the dollar, you can get a wonderful meal for two for around $50 or $60 a person, service included (without wine). Because of that, these restaurants are fully booked. As early as mid-September, L'Archestrate and Taillevent were full through the entire month of October and into November.

Therefore it is a good idea to write well in advance for reservations. All of the restaurants below are in Paris.

TAILLEVENT

Of all the restaurants I went to in France, this was probably my favorite for food, service and atmosphere. My thoughts at the end of the meal were "simple, yet wonderful. How do you describe perfection?"

It isn't easy. You could write odes to just about all the dishes. Like all the other three-star restaurants I visited, the waiter brought tidbits of food immediately after we were seated, as we ordered an aperitif or purused the wine list.

We started the meal with warm sweetbreads on a bed of escarole. Alternating with the sweetbreads on the plate were perfectly sauteed mounds of mushrooms. The dish was topped with a full-flavored, smooth mustard sauce, profusely flecked with green dots of parsley.

THE BLEND of the creamy sweetbreads, the meaty fresh mushrooms and the slightly piquant sauce, contrasted with the warm sweetbreads and crunchy salad greens made an inspiring combination. We also ordered mushrooms in puff pastry. The melange of mushrooms flowed out of the rectangular puff pastry, cornucopia style. The mushrooms were balanced with a light sauce made of mushroom and meat stock.

The main course was pigeon served on a bed of cabbage, seasoned with bacon. The picturesque pigeon liver was sauteed and presented on top of the pigeon. We also tried what might have been a plebian dish in other restaurants — tenderloin with a red wine sauce. The rare meat was sliced into medallions, studded with marrow in the center and fanned on the plate. The vegetables were chopped tomatoes and mushrooms, bound by a light buttery sauce.

The dessert was a gratin of orange, pear, raspberries and peaches that was served warm and browned on top with a sprinkling of fine slivers of candied orange peel. But not to stop there, we also had wonderfully smooth and silky fondant of chocolate, served in a green pistachio-flavored creme anglaise. Most fondants I've tasted in the United States were cloyingly sweet, but this was perfectly balanced with the pistachio-perfumed sauce.

We also had a third dessert, a medley of sorbets in raspberry sauce. This consisted of four perfect tear drops of sorbets — pear, black currant, passion fruit and raspberry. The flavors were very clear, with not too much sugar to hide the natural sweetness of the dessert. The plate was garnished with a perfect mint leaf.

The meal ended, as it did at all the three-star restaurants, with complimentary chocolates.

The restaurant's decor was spectacular. The walls were stone, with a huge center chandelier and a gracefully winding staircase leading to an upstairs room. Paintings in the Old Masters-style graced the walls. The table was exquisitely set with silver service plates and oversized starched white napkins that were replaced every time a diner excused himself from the table. The three rooms of the large restaurant seat only 80, so there is plenty of space between chairs to allow for private conversation.

The service was friendly, not the least bit intimidating, we got the feeling that the staff truly wanted us to have a nice dining experience. Service here was unsurpassed. The waiters actually anticipated patrons' needs and did their job with understated efficiency.

TAILLEVENT IS located in a building that was build by Napoleon III and once housed the Paraguayan Embassy residence. It has been open since the mid-1940s and received a third Michelin star 10 years ago.

The restaurant, named after a famous French chef of the 14th century, is located at 15 rue de Lammenais not far from the Arc de Triomphe. Just before getting to the arc take Avenue de Friedland to Rue Balzac. On the corner is a statue of Lammenais, and the restaurant is located halfway down the block in a long line of graystones. Telephone number: 561-12-90. Closed weekends. No credit cards accepted.

L'ARCHESTRATE

After the experience at Taillevent, the cramped quarters of L'Archestrate are really noticeable, but the food was so exquisite that flaws in the decor didn't matter.

The chef and owner, Alain Senderens, specializes in nouvelle combinations, and his work has inspired a host of imitators around the world. Each day he changes the menu, offering several tasting menus where you get a sampling of many different specialties, based on local seasonal products.

(See FRENCH, Page 2D)

We ordered the more elaborate one (at about $40). Our meal started with a warm sweetbread salad, entirely different but just as delicious as the one we had the day before at Taillevent.

SENDERENS VERSION was a little more up-front in flavor. The sweetbreads were sauteed very crisp and served on the lettuce bed with julienne carrots and sliced white mushrooms. Instead of a mustard sauce, the chef used a vinaigrette perfumed with the flavor of red onions and fresh mixed herbs.

We also tried the smoked salmon in a dill butter sauce, brought to the table on a silver tray decorated with a tiny purple orchid. The moist salmon was presented on a bed of celery and fine julienne of lime peel. The sauce was perfectly studded with jewel-like salmon roe and black caviar.

The subtle flavors — at first the sauce seemed almost bland — blended perfectly. A myriad of flavors permeated the dish, but combined in such a way that you had to taste carefully to pick them all out. The flavors in the sauce produced the ultimate blending of flavors a chef can hope to achieve. The sauce complemented the salmon while raising it to new heights.

Senderens is known as an innovator, so when we received a bowl of what looked like wontons we weren't totally shocked. What we actually ate was ravioli — pasta blanketing bay scallops and a sliver of zucchini peel. The sauce was simply melted butter topped with two perfect julienne of zucchini. Senderens is aware of the health aspects of food, and it showed in this dish like it did in the others. It was light, clear in flavor and not overly drowned in rich sauces.

THE BEST part of the meal, to me, was the foie gras wrapped in a cabbage leaf moistened with butter. It was served with rock salt and white pepper, to make a simple dish that let the delicious delicacy of the liver carry the show.

Because one in our party didn't like foie gras and left it uneaten on the plate, the waiter volunteered to send a substitute dish: slices of medium-rare lamb with grapes, raisins, plums, tomato, eggplant and zucchini. Green chilies studded the sides of the well-arranged plate to create a clash of flavors that miraculously blended. The unlikely combination proved that the chef has a genius grasp of his products, and produced a balanced dish that didn't overwhelm the lamb or the palate. Also on the plate were cilantro-studded tomatoes that were slightly sweetened.

The main course was rare slices of duck with a natural juice sauce spiced with a hint of orange zest. Even though this dish has been served many times in U.S. restaurants, it was worlds apart. Most chefs don't have the feel for the ingredients that Senderens does. Others can copy the combinations, but they simply can't capture the essence.

ALSO ON THE plate was a perfectly formed timbale of eggplant with the deep-purple leather look of the eggplant skin. The bits of duck inside the timbale married the main course and vegetable. As a contrast, the plate also contained a roasted fig with peppercorns, resting on a thin sugar-cookie-like crouton. The extra dose of salt in the cookie, along with the sweet fig and peppercorns was magnificent. The duck liver was also presented on the plate atop a corn cake flecked with zucchini and carrots.

Again many flavors worked on the plate, but the flavors were clear and not muddled like in so many other combinations.

The cheese tray at L'Archestrate is one of the most spectauclar anywhere. A wicker tray, more than 3 feet long, houses more than 25 cheeses arranged on green leaves. The fresh goat cheese is then served with specially made breads, including a raisin-walnut bread.

Dessert was a plum tart featuring yellow, red and green plums on a sugar cookie base. We also received a tray of wonderful candies and pastries, including chocolates, truffles, chocolate-covered citrus peels and wafer thin almond cookies.

BREADS AND preparation are done twice a day by a kitchen crew of 14 (at each shift) for the 50-seat restaurant. In the dining room a mirrored back wall helps to give the illusion of a larger room, and a massive bouquet of flowers gives the room elegance and life, but two silk plants cheapen the effect. The walls are covered with cane and behind the drapes are hanging panels of natural wood that gives a Japanese feel to the windows.

The table is elegantly set with a crystal vase holding three orchids. The orange Limoge plates were set with delicate lace doilies and another plate in an orange flower design.

The service at L'Archestrate spotty — some of the worst at any of the three-star restaurants. We waited 15 minutes for a second cup of coffee and the tables were so close together that it was hard to lean back.

L'Archestrate, which received its third Michelin star in 1978, is at 84 Rue de Vareen. It is a block east of Les Invalides and less than a block down from the Rodin Museum. Telephone 551-47-33. Closed weekends. No credit cards accepted.

LASSERRE

This restaurant has gained a world reputation, not only for its food but for the room that slides back in the dining room to reveal the Paris sky. The food is strictly classic, which has kept the chef in good stead with Michelin since 1962.

HOWEVER, THE Gault-Millau Guide last year lowered it from a four-toque to three-toque status, saying "we know of at least 20 houses in France where one can eat better than at Lasserre."

The restaurant remains one of the more celebrated, however, because the very look and presentation embody the classic French dining experience. Waiters in black tails quietly mill around the room — we counted more than 21 of them in a room that seats a little more than 100. Food is presented tableside in grand style. It is done as tableside service should be (but never is in America) with style and elegance. Tallow and food sculptures decorate the serving platters. Each table was graced with the impeccable tablesetting of silver creamers (and other silver containers) filled with flowers.

When you approach the door, a curtain covering the inside entrance slides back and you are escorted into a Louis the XIII parlor and then accompanied to the upstairs dining room in a silk-padded elevator. You enter an amazing room. The chandeliers, hanging from the ceiling and on a post in the center of the room drip hand-cut crystal, walls are covered with gold and white brocade, the heavy draperies and the hand-painted roof that slides back to reveal Parisan stars, all combine for an extraordinary experience.

A WAIST-HIGH white railing, ablaze with color from potted flowering plants, separates the upper dining room from the lower dining room, which is a few steps down and directly under the sliding roof.

When you are seated at the gold-clothed table, the waiter immediately brings green olives and fresh-made potato chips, a classic combinatation for a champagne appetizer.

For our first course we ordered a ragout of lobster and langoustines served in a wonderful lobster sauce that had a creamy butterscotch flavor. It was one of the best lobster sauces I remember tasting. We also ordered the standard salad of truffles, a generous portion of truffles topping salad greens and vinaigrette.

Since foie gras seems to be on every Paris restaurant menu, I ordered it again. This time it came encased in boneless chicken, that was breaded and sauteed. When cut, the tender chicken revealed the rich liver that oozed juices and flavored the sauce, intensely flavored with morels.

Since filet of sole in puff pastry is a restaurant classic we had to order it. It consisted of wonderful slices of sole on top of duxelles, cream sauce and asparagus. A puff pastry handle completed the dish, to make it resemble the copper skillet that is the restaurant's trademark. The dish was wonderful, except for the asparagus, which tasted canned. Both entree courses were simply garnished, without any vegetables.

FOR DESSERT we ordered the timbale of strawberries and ice cream served in tulipe. The dessert was fairly ordinary, but the presentation was extraordinary. Over each portion was a perfect dome of brown spun sugar with a dollop of whipped cream on top. The sugar shimmered and was truly too pretty to break open to get to the dessert. We also sampled a chocolate cake layered with thin-sliced almonds. The effect was light as air, but the choclate flavor was intense.

Unlike the other restaurants, the staff brought no after-dinner treats, although women traditionally get a miniature hand-painted casserole as a rememberance.

Cassoulet hearty French cuisine

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

The provinces of France are known for many memorable dishes, one of the most notable of which is that mixture of beans and meats known as the cassoulet.

There are a number of versions of this robust dish named after the earthenware casserole in which it is baked.

The meats and other ingredients used in the dish vary according to taste, but it always contains white beans, onions, garlic and tomatoes or tomato paste.

Slow cooking is the secret of the cassoulet, and some cooks simmer it up to five hours.

Cassoulet has become increasingly popular in the United States, so here is a recipe that I have found delicious.

CASSOULET

2 cups dried white navy beans
8 slices bacon
1 carrot, cut in quarter-inch slices
1 medium onion stuck with 2 cloves
3 cloves garlic, each cut in two
Salt and pepper to taste
¼ cup diced salt pork
1½ pounds pork loin, cut in ¾-inch cubes
1 garlic sausage, sliced
¾ cup butter or salad oil
2 large onions chopped
1 cup diced celery
2 tablespoons tomato paste
3 cups beef bouillon
3 cups dry bread crumbs

Soak beans overnight and drain. Line large casserole with bacon. In bowl, mix beans, carrot, whole onion, 1 clove garlic and salt and pepper.

Pour mixture into pot and cover with water. Bake in 275-degree oven 2 hours. Meanwhile, brown meats in ¼ cup butter. Stir in chopped onions, celery, remaining garlic, tomato paste and bouillon. Simmer over low heat 1½ hours, stirring occasionally. Empty meat mixture into bean pot, stir well and top with 1 cup crumbs dotted with butter. Increase heat to 375 degrees, bake about 15 minutes and stir in crumbs. Top with remaining crumbs, add butter dots and serve when brown. Serves 6.

New image sought for sunflower root

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

This is a story about a vegetable with an image problem, a farmer with a dream and a publicist with a mission.

The vegetable is the jerusalem artichoke — a gnarled tuber that is neither from Jerusalem nor an artichoke, but is actually the root of a sunflower.

The farmer is Doug Ness, a Minnesotan recently transplanted to Idaho, the tuber capital of the country. With his company of five, Ness is hoping to make the jerusalem artichoke as common as the carrot.

The publicist is Willetta Warberg, an Idaho marketing consultant who is determined to rid the jerusalem artichoke of its misnomer.

Warberg and Ness have given an old vegetable another name: Sun Roots. They have applied to register Sun Roots as a trademark and are plugging their product as the latest "new" food.

The Ness-Warberg campaign has resulted in Sun Roots' being sold in the specialty-produce sections of some supermarkets.

And Ness wants the Sun Root to reach the tables of the middle class — "a much larger group" than the higher-income specialty-food consumer.

This species of sunflower produces tubers like the potato, but since the jerusalem artichoke is a flower, it supports a tall stalk with yellow, daisy-like blossoms on the top.

As the food-history books tell it, Samuel de Champlain and his band encountered the vegetable — a staple of North American Indians — during Champlain's explorations.

Champlain took the roots back to Europe, where cultivation spread to, among other countries, Italy. There the tubers were called girasoles, meaning "turning to the sun." Somehow, the English corruption turned girasole into jerusalem.

And as for the "artichoke" part of the name, some historians say Champlain found its flavor similar to the globe artichoke, that thistlelike green vegetable.

To Champlain, the tubers may have tasted like globe artichokes, but the French explorer wasn't necessarily a food maven. Eaten raw, their texture is not unlike the crunchy water chestnut, although they taste somewhat nuttier. Cooked, they become moist and somewhat like a regular chestnut.

As for appearance, they look more like a cross between a ginger root and a potato. Like potatoes, they can be boiled, baked, sauteed, or substituted in recipes that call for other root vegetables such as turnips.

But whether the jerusalem artichoke will make it onto the dinner plates of mass America really comes down to a matter of taste. Here are some recipes to decide for yourself:

PREPARATION AND SERVING

— When preparing jerusalem artichokes, wash them well and place in acidulated water (water with lemon juice squeezed into it) to prevent discoloration until ready to use. They can be eaten either peeled or unpeeled.

— To boil or steam, cook about 15 minutes, longer if the tubers are large. Be careful not to overcook or the flesh will turn to mush. Or they can be baked in a 400-degree oven for about 20 minutes, longer if they are larger than average. Serve with salt, pepper and butter, if desired.

— To store, keep in plastic bag in the refrigerator. They should keep for at least 2 weeks before softening. Do not can or freeze.

— Jerusalem artichokes can be made into hash browns or french fries.

— Use raw as scoopers for dip, as you would carrots or celery.

— Combine in recipes with other root vegetables.

— Melt cheese over sauteed slices of jerusalem artichokes or combine in a cheese casserole.

JERUSALEM ARTICHOKE AND SPINACH SALAD
(4 servings)

1 large carrot
1 pound spinach, washed and drained
¼ cup scallions, chopped
⅓ cup radishes, sliced
½ cup sunflower seeds
½ pound jerusalem artichokes, peeled and sliced
2 tablespoon lemon juice

For the vinaigrette:
5 tablespoons olive oil
5 tablespoons vegetable oil
Salt and pepper to taste
4½ tablespoons wine vinegar
½ teaspoon dijon mustard

Peel outer skin off the carrot and discard. Continue scraping until you reach inner core. Use the shreds for the salad and discard the cores. Combine other salad ingredients except the jerusalem artichokes and sunflower seeds in a bowl. Peel artichokes and place in water acidulated with about 2 tablespoons lemon juice until ready to use.

To make the vinaigrette, combine all ingredients well. Drain jerusalem artichokes, add them to the salad and coat with dressing. Sprinkle with sunflower seeds.

LACY JERUSALEM ARTICHOKE PANCAKES
(Makes 8 3-inch pancakes)

There's no flour in these delicious German-style pancakes, and they have the fullest possible Jerusalem artichoke flavor. Grate artichokes with a fine grater just before cooking, do not shred them, and serve immediately, for they lose flavor and texture if they stand around.

½ pound jerusalem artichokes
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper
Butter
Vegetable oil
1 cup sour cream (optional)
Homemade applesauce (optional)

Wash and peel chokes and place in 1 quart water to which the lemon juice has been added. Beat together eggs, salt and pepper. Drain and dry chokes and grate directly into egg mixture. Heat equal amounts of butter and vegetable oil over medium-high heat, in a saute' pan, preferably non-stick. (The amounts of butter and oil depend on how many pancakes are cooking at a time. A 6-inch pan would call for a tablespoon each of butter and oil.) Stir grated choke and egg mixture and ladle out approximately 1-4 cup per pancake, which will spread to about a 3-inch diameter. Cook until browned on each side, 8 to 10 minutes in all. Serve immediately with sour cream or homemade applesauce.

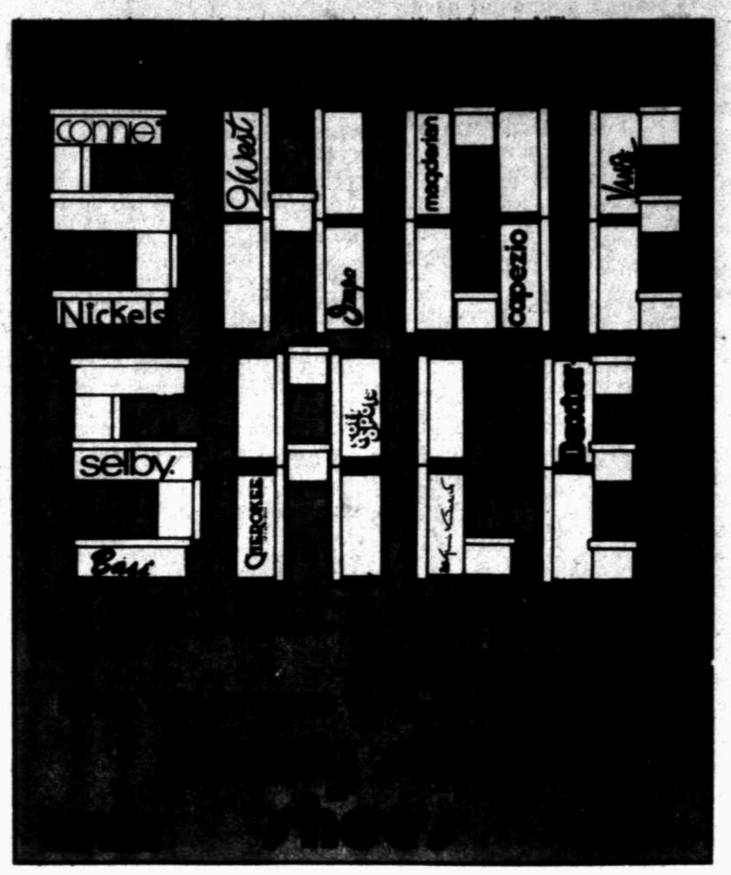

STIR-FRIED CHICKEN BREASTS WITH JERUSALEM ARTICHOKES
(6 to 8 servings)

2 or 3 boneless chicken breasts, about 1 to 1¼ pounds
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon Chinese rice wine or pale dry sherry
2 tablespoons soy sauce
¼ cup peanut oil
1 medium green pepper, deribbed, seeded and cut into 1-2-inch squares
½ cup jerusalem artichokes, cut into ¼-inch cubes
¼ cup fresh mushrooms, cut into ¼-inch cubes
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon dry red pepper
2 tablespoons hoisin sauce
¼ cup roasted cashews or almonds

Cut the breasts into roughly 1-2-inch squares. Place chicken in a bowl and toss with cornstarch to coat the chunks lightly. Add the wine and soy sauce and toss again.

Assemble the other ingredients so you will be able to work quickly. Set a 12-inch wok or 10-inch skillet over high heat for about 30 seconds; add 1 tablespoon of the peanut oil, swirl it around and heat for another 30 seconds. Turn heat down if the oil begins to smoke. Add the green pepper, jerusalem artichokes, mushrooms, salt and red pepper; stir-fry briskly for 3 to 4 minutes. Scoop out the vegetables with a slotted spoon and set aside on a plate. Pour the remaining 3 tablespoons of oil into pan, heat almost to the smoking point and then add the chicken mixture. Stir-fry over high heat 2 to 3 minutes until chicken turns firm and white, then add the hoisin sauce and the reserved vegetables. Cook 1 minute longer.

Finally add almonds or cashews and stir just to heat through. Transfer to a heated platter and serve immediately.

THE BUTCHER

Breast of veal versatile

By MERLE ELLIS

It isn't that often one finds veal — any cut of veal — selling for under a dollar a pound. More often it goes for nearer ten times that. But, one does "luck out" on occasion. One market in my neighborhood had a "Milk Fed Veal Sale" not long ago and the prices made it impossible for me to pass up. "Breast of Veal — 99 cents a pound," now that's a bargain!

There are so many wonderful dishes to be made from a breast of veal. And while it may not always be available for 99 cents a pound, it nearly always is the least expensive cut of veal available. It may be boned and rolled, pocketed and stuffed, cut into cubes for saute dishes or stews, sauced with any of many delightful sauces. Use your imagination.

When you run across a breast of veal at a reasonable price, don't pass it up. Buy it and take it home and do something with it. Put a pocket in it and stuff it — that's a possibility.

Simply make a pocket in between the meat and the rib bones by cutting against the bones to form an envelope, leaving the meat and bone attached on three sides. Fill the envelope with a good stuffing mixture, close it with a few skewers and you've done it.

Here is a recipe that has become a favorite around our house for stuffing a breast of veal. It comes from the kitchen of one of the great ladies of California cooking — Chronicle Food Editor Jane Benet.

STUFFED BREAST OF VEAL

3- to 4-pound breast of veal
1 cup seedless raisins
½ cup cooked rice
3 slices rye bread soaked in milk
¼ pound finely-diced salt pork
1 10-ounce package chopped spinach, thawed, drained
2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon basil
Nutmeg
2 bay leaves
1 cup dry white wine
Salt and pepper

Cut a pocket in the veal. Mix raisins, rice, bread, salt pork, spinach, egg yolks, and seasonings in a bowl; stuff the pocket with the mixture and skewer the opening. Brown on both sides in a little oil in a roasting pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and top with bay leaves. Add wine and cover. Bake in a 350-degree oven for about 2 hours, or until tender. Serve hot or cold with sauce of sour cream mixed with raisins. Serves 6.

Boning a breast of veal is another possibility. This is no more difficult than putting a pocket in one, and the marvelous things that may be done with a boneless breast of veal are limited by little but your imagination. To bone one, put it on the cutting board with the meaty side down. On top of the rib bones you will see a long, thin flap of lean meat that extends nearly the length of the breast. This is the diaphragm muscle (the skirt steak). Lift up on the flap and cut under it along the rib bones to loosen the meat from the bone all the way down to where the bone becomes soft, white cartilage connecting the ribs, one to the other. Turn the breast over so that it is resting on the rib bones and continue trimming along the bones, lifting the meat away from the bones as you go.

When you're finished, you'll have a huge slab of boneless veal breast that may be made into all manner of marvelous meals. With a breast of veal it is possible to feed a small army rather elegantly for far less than a fortune.

BRAISED VEAL ROLLS IN BRANDY

2 or 3 pounds boned breast of veal
1 clove crushed garlic
1½ cups water
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
½- to ¾-pound pork sausage
4 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons brandy
12 small white onions, peeled

Bone out the veal breast. Cut up the bones and put them in a pot with the garlic. Add water and simmer for 30 minutes while you make the veal rolls.

Spread out the boneless breast and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Spread on a thin layer of the sausage. Roll up and tie at one-inch intervals. Then cut between the strings into one-inch-thick veal rolls. Melt butter in a heavy skillet, brown the veal on both sides in it. Pour off the fat. Heat the brandy; flame it and pour it over the veal rolls when the flames die. Add the onions and reduce the heat to low, cover, and simmer for 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, back to the bones. Remove the cover and increase the heat to cook the stock down to about ¾ cup. Add the stock to the veal rolls. Cover and continue cooking another hour. Thicken the sauce slightly, if needed, with a bit of arrowroot mixed in cold water. Serve with rice pilaf or sauteed potatoes.

French wine region often overlooked

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Very few American wine lovers and tourists ever reach the sandy shores and vineyards of Domaines Viticoles des Salins in the Midi, a French wine-growing region known more for quantity than excellence.

The Domaines may be the largest single owner of vineyards there and in France too, and one of its largest quality wine producers, responsible for the everyday vin ordinaire of the sophisticate as well as the less-than-$1 bottle "Sunday wine" of the Gallic blue-collar laborer.

It is not a tourist mecca because of extreme summer heat, but more important, the region's wines are not well known to Americans nor as yet greatly appreciated. Also, this land of Languedoc-Roussillon wine is not high on the touring list even for the French.

Area anonymity is not deserved here. The vineyards are some of the world's most fascinating in that the vines do not grow on traditional classic soils but rather on sand bars that reach out to the Mediterranean.

Much of the wine here is labeled Listel from Ile de Stel, indicated as an island of sand on 10th-Century maps. According to Listel executive Jean-Pierre Cauderc, a Dartmouth MBA, Listel produces more wine than any other single French wine entity, with a mighty 20 million wine bottles.

SNACKTIME FARE
Cookie Rounds & Tea

COOKIE ROUNDS

Updated from a butterscotch refrigerator cookie recipe of the 1940s and given by request.
2 cups well-stirred all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
¼-pound stick butter, cut into 8 equal pats
1 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
1 large egg
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts

On wax paper stir together flour, baking soda and cream of tartar. In a medium bowl cream butter and sugar; beat in egg and vanilla until blended. Stir in flour until blended. Stir in walnuts.

Pack firmly into 3 empty 6-ounce containers (from frozen juice concentrate), cover tightly with saran and chill until firm — several hours or overnight. Work with 1 can at a time and keep others chilled.

Remove can bottom and use it to force out dough. With a sharp knife, cut each roll into 20 rounds — each about ⅛-inch thick. Place, a few inches apart, on lightly greased cookie sheets.

Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until lightly browned — 8 to 10 minutes. Makes 60 cookies, each about 2½ inches in diameter.

Veal's popularity growing in U.S.

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press

Veal is featured much more in cookbooks in France than in the United States, where the meat is not as popular as it is among the French.

A Frenchman recently explained this to me. In many European countries, he said, the pastureland is so limited that farmers slaughter their calves to save fodder and make a quick profit.

On the great cattle spreads of America, however, where grass and grain are plentiful, the rancher lets his cattle become fullgrown, since the meat yield is far higher and the profit correspondingly greater.

The quality of most veal in this country is considered inferior to that in Europe, even though it costs more. In fact, first-rate veal is generally not available in America because of the cost involved.

This is because the flesh of the calf ceases to be veal after 14 weeks and turns dark. During those 14 weeks, calves must be milk-fed and require a considerable amount of care. Thus it is more profitable to let the animals mature into beef.

The finest quality veal is known as plume de veau. It is hard to find in America, except in French and Italian specialty stores. "Plume" is recognized by its creamy color and glossy surface.

Veal of darker hue is really young beef and is a hybrid. It has neither the tenderness of veal nor the rich flavor of true beef.

Probably because of its high cost on this side of the Atlantic, veal has never been a favorite in America. But times are changing. It has long been popular in New Orleans with its French and Spanish cuisine. Now, in New York and other Eastern cities where French and Italian restaurants abound, people are acquiring a taste for veal.

Since veal is a young meat, it has very little fat and must be broiled with care, lest it become dry and tough. Loin chops are the only cut suitable for broiling, but they also make a tasty baked dish, as in this recipe.

VEAL LOIN CHOPS

6 loin veal chops, about ¾ inch thick
1 egg beaten
2 tablespoons milk
¼ cup cracker meal
¼ cup cooking oil
Salt and pepper
1 medium onion, chopped
1 medium green pepper, chopped
1 tablespoon paprika
1 can condensed tomato soup (10½ ounces)
½ cup water
½ cup dairy sour cream

Dip chops into egg and milk combined and then into cracker meal. Brown both sides in three tablespoons oil in skillet. Remove chops to shallow casserole and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Put 1 tablespoon oil in skillet, then add onion and green pepper, brown slightly and place on chops. Mix remaining ingredients and pour over top of chops. Bake in 350-degree oven about 45 minutes. Serves 6. Good with a chilled rose wine.

Best English oysters threatened

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

COLCHESTER, England — Oyster lovers who turned up here for the recent oyster feast, a tradition that goes back 600 years, found little to cheer about.

For Colchester, an old Roman garrison town that has a reputation for fine oysters, has a serious problem. Its oyster beds in the North Sea off eastern Essex are infested by a deadly parasite, the oyster-killing bonamia.

Colchester oysters command the highest prices in London and Paris markets, and their future is very much in question.

Down at the oyster wharves, Douglas A. Mussett who, with his wife, Marie, supplies oysters to London restaurants, complained, "It's getting harder and harder to find good oysters locally. We've been importing oysters from Cornwall and other places along the channel. We can fatten them up very well in our inlets here. But this parasite has turned up in the area, and there's not much we can do about it."

There seems to be no remedy for the bonamia, which scientists describe as a "virulent, blood-cell parasite." About all the oystermen can do is let their oyster beds lie fallow for several years — and that would put them out of business. So far, bonamia has not been found in any humans.

Oysters are a traditional fare in Britain. They were eaten by Roman soldiers billeted in Colchester. Shells discarded by the Romans are still found.

Few names as famous as 'Dom Perignon'

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

The name Dom Perignon rolls off the lips rather easily at times like New Year's and Valentine's Day.

It is a sign of the highest quality — showing the impeccable taste of the buyer and the restaurant that stocks it. For decades, it has been a visage not to be buried in an ice bucket, but to spotlight.

Yet ordering it means shelling out a hefty wad of dough. Although Dom Perignon has been seen discounted below $40 a bottle, its full price is still listed at $55 a bottle, and many restaurants who stock it charge more than $100.

Yet the demand increases, as the status-conscious yield to the desire to be seen as living the good life.

Without quite the flair — or the price, Perrier-Jouet has made a more recent yet just as winning impact on the astute Champagne buyer. Although "The Dom," as it's called by merchants, commands more attention, Perrier-Jouet's line of wines may be the hottest property on the block in the last few years.

The reason is consistency.

This Epernay-based house is best known for a clever marketing device called the flower bottle — Fleur de Champagne. Each of the vintage-dated bottles has flowers painted by hand (through a stencil), and the bottles have become collector's items. Many magnum- and double-magnum-size bottles are converted into lamps.

But because some people figure that the flowery bottle is "gimmicky," it indicates to some that the wine inside is only average.

This, however, is one of the few times where the product inside the bottle justifies the extravagance of the package. Fleur de Champagne — the flower of Champagne — is as good and consistent a sparkling wine from France as there is.

The infinitesimal bubbles, the delicate floral aroma and the remarkable balance make this Perrier-Jouet product one of the finest French Champagnes. It sells for $40 — $15 less than Dom Perignon.

However, I did a test a few weeks ago, then duplicated it a week later, and proved to myself that as good as the flower bottle Champagne is, Perrier-Jouet's cheaper wine called Grand Brut is the virtual equal to it, at half the cost (and without the flowers).

My test was to taste the 1976 flower bottle side by side with the non-vintage Perrier-Jouet Grand Brut. My conclusion: there wasn't twice as much quality in the more expensive wine.

"Well, we try to make the Grand Brut as good as we can," said Michel Budin, the second-generation director of Perrier-Jouet, in an interview. "We always use what my father called a 'happy blending' of the grapes to make it."

The complexity in the Grand Brut is what is so striking. Usually in French Champagnes selling for less than $20 the aromas are clean but not very intriguing. But the Grand Brut is quite complex and full, yet the balance of the wine is what makes it a marvel.

Budin said the Grand Brut can be more variable, because the best grapes are used to make up the vintage and prestige wines. (The prestige designations include Belle Epoque, rarely seen in the United States, and Blason de France.)

The vintage wine — made only in good harvest years — is a blend of between 40 and 45 percent chardonnay, 30 to 35 percent Pinot Noir and the remainder Pinot Meunier. ("I take my father's advice, never to make a Champagne from a 100 percent blend of one variety," said Budin.) Grand Brut has a bit more pinot noir, a bit less chardonnay.

Many people think aging a wine improves it, but Budin says that when Perrier-Jouet ships a wine, "it is about ready for drinking."

Perrier-Jouet, as do all quality French Champagne houses, makes vintage wines only in years when the weather conditions produce perfect fruit, and each harvest varies. I asked Budin to evaluate the quality of the last few vintages. Here are his comments:

1976 — "A year where the wines had much body, fullness. Very good vintage."
1977 — "No vintage Champagne was made."
1978 — "It was a lighter year, with very refined, delicate wines."
1979 — "Fuller wines than the '78s, but they do not have the body of the '76s."
1980 and 1981 — "No vintage wines were made."
1982 — "There was a nice, yeasty aroma in the fermentation room, and I was rather pleased. The wines will be good."
1983 — "It was a large harvest, and the wines are good, but I have the feeling it will not be a vintage year. We may be able to make a very good Grand Brut."

Perrier-Jouet also produces a ros Champagne made from a blend of Chardonnay and Pinot Noir. The blush of color in the wine comes from the red wine that is added before the second fermentation, when the bubbles are formed. The tannin in the ros gives the wine a little extra staying power, and when it is five to six years from harvest date, the richness is wonderful.

Perrier-Jouet 1976 Fleur de Champagne Ros is not a sweet wine, as are most American ros sparkling wines. It has a hint of the strawberry aroma found in such wines, but its overriding character is richness and complexity.

Coconut Chicken easy

COMPANY DINNER
Coconut Chicken & Rice
Tossed Salad
Strawberry Cream Cake

COCONUT CHICKEN

It's an easy oven dish.

3-pound (generous) frying chicken, cut up
1 large egg
1½ cups loosely packed flaked coconut (from a 7-ounce package)
¼ cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
¼-pound stick butter, cut in 8 pats

Wash and dry chicken. Beat egg until foamy. With a sharp knife or in a food processor chop coconut very fine — there should be 1 cup.

Stir together flour, salt and pepper. Dip chicken, 1 piece at a time, in egg; roll in coconut and then in flour mixture.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. In the oven, in a 3-quart baking dish (13⅛ by 8¾ by 1¾ inches), heat butter just until it melts.

Arrange chicken, skin side down, in butter in baking dish. Bake in the 400-degree oven for 30 minutes; turn chicken skin side up; continue baking until tender — 20 to 30 minutes longer.

Scrape up drippings with a spatula and, if you like, serve with chicken accompanied by rice. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Vegetarian food can be made fast, easy for busy schedules

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

Many vegetarian foods, especially our beloved dried beans, can take hours to prepare.

What if you're on the job all day and don't even get home until sometime after 5? You and your family certainly don't want to wait hours for your dinner every night and you might be too tired to prepare anything very elaborate.

Some cooks manage to get the whole week's menu planned out in advance, and have dinner ready and waiting in the crockpot when they get home from work. If you happen to be one of these modern marvels, you deserve a medal. Most of us just aren't that organized.

A workable solution is to save the more time-consuming dishes for weekend dining, and to choose easier recipes to serve during the week.

One source of recipes especially designed for busy vegetarians is a booklet entitled Vegetarianism for the Working Person: Quick and Easy Vegetarian Recipes. Featured in this handy pamphlet are over 50 fast and easily prepared meatless dishes, ideas on time-saving canned and frozen foods, lists of suggested vegetarian meals and snacks, and a vegetarian spice chart. Also included is a small poster highlighting cooking and food storage tips.

Authors Debra Wasserman and Charles Stahler of the BALTIMORE VEGETARIANS also offer advice on packaged convenience foods, and how to eat a hearty vegetarian meal when dining out.

Today's recipes are from Vegetarianism for the Working Person. To order a copy, send $3 to BALTIMORE VEGETARIANS, P.O. Box 1463, Baltimore, MD 21203.

TOMATO-EGGPLANT BAKE

2 tbsps. oil
1 small eggplant, cubed into small pieces
1 can stewed tomatoes
1 onion, finely chopped
1 green pepper, finely chopped
Grated cheddar cheese

Place eggplant, tomatoes, onion and green pepper in oiled baking dish. Cove with cheddar cheese. Bake at 350 F till done, approximately 20 minutes.

CURRIED TOFU WITH PEANUTS

¾ cup peanuts, whole or chopped
1 lb. tofu, drained and cubed
3 tbsps. oil
1 onion, chopped
1 tsp. salt
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tsp. curry powder
1 cup peas (fresh, frozen or canned)
1 carrot, diced

In oiled frying pan, saute onions and garlic. Add remaining ingredients andcook over medium heat for 10 to 12 minutes. Add a little water if needed.

Variations: Use garlic powder or ginger instead of garlic. Use different nuts and vegetables.

SCALLOPED CORN AND TOMATOES

2 tbsps. oil
4 tomatoes, thickly sliced
1 large can of corn (or box of frozen corn)
¼ cup margarine
1 cup bread crumbs

In oiled baking dish spread tomatoes on bottom and mix the corn in. Top wit bread crumbs and dot with margarine. Bake in oven at 350 degrees about 20 minutes until crumbs are toasted.

Hollandaise substitute

Copley News Service

MOCK HOLLANDAISE SAUCE

1 cup dairy sour cream
1 cup mayonnaise
1½ tsps. prepared mustard
3 tsps. lemon juice
¼ tsp. paprike
Dash white pepper

Combine all ingredients in a small saucepan. Cook and stir over low heat until heated through. Makes 2 cups sauce.

Pudding updated

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

SCANDIA PUDDING

Updated version of a favorite dessert.
8¾-ounce can fruit cocktail in heavy syrup
1 large egg
½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup unbleached all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
⅛ teaspoon salt
¾ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
¼ cups walnuts, chopped medium-fine

Drain off ¼ cup syrup from fruit cocktail and refrigerate for another use. Reserve remaining fruit cocktail and syrup.

In a medium bowl beat egg until foamy; add granulated sugar, flour, soda and salt; beat until smooth. Stir in the reserved fruit cocktail and syrup.

Turn into a lighlty greased 8-inch pie plate. Stir together brown sugar and walnuts; sprinkle over top.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean of batter — 25 minutes.

Cut in wedges and serve warm with vanilla ice cream. Makes 4 servings.

Carrots fit in many menus

Copley News Service

A root vegetable to cash in on is the carrot. Fresh carrots are a soup-to-dessert vegetable.

From crunchy-crisp carrot sticks on an hors d'oeuvre tray to moist and spicy carrot cake, fresh carrots offer delicious versatility.

To enjoy 24-carrot color and crunch in the raw, chop fresh carrots into slaw, salads and sandwich fillings.

When cooked to crisp-tender perfection, carrots make an eye-appealing and flavorful side dish.

Fresh carrots may be candied like sweet potatoes, creamed, diced or marinated in sweet-and-sour sauce.

Puree leftover cooked carrots and freeze in ice cube trays for later use as a flavoring in soups.

Carrots make a rich contribution of vitamin A to the diet and are a good source of fiber, potassium and other minerals. One cup of carrots contains 42 calories.

In most grocery stores, carrots are usually sold in plastic film bags, although they may sometimes be found in bulk with tops attached.

Buy firm, smooth, well-spared carrots of good orange color. If tops are attached, they should be fresh and green.

Keep carrots cold and humid and use as desired.

CARROT PATTIES

¼ cup flour
1 tbsp. brown sugar
2 tbsps. chopped parley
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. grated lemon peel
Dash pepper
2 eggs, lightly beaten
3 cups shredded carrots

In medium bowl, combine flour, parsley, sugar, salt, lemon peel and pepper.Stir in eggs and carrots, mix well. Drop mixture by heaping tablespoons onto lightly greased griddle or skillet.

Cook over low heat about 5 minutes until patties are brown; turn, brown other side. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Dried beans not glamorous food, but satisfying

By BETSY BALSLEY
By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

The lowly dried bean may not be a glamorous food, but it sure does hit the spot at times. Around our household, beans are considered comfort foods, whether we choose to serve them in the form of a rich black bean soup or a steaming pot of old-fashioned baked beans redolent of brown sugar, onion and salt pork.

Dried beans have the reputation of being commonplace foods, but their popularity never diminishes. True, some varieties are more popular in different locales than others. By and large, nearly every one of this country's so-called "regional cuisines" now being ballyhooed and dissected extensively by food writers has a bean dish that is "typical" of the area.

If you are among those who like beans, but never think about serving them, perhaps the following suggestions will whet your appetite and inspire you to find the time needed to prepare them.

OLD-FASHIONED BAKED BEANS WITH PINEAPPLE

6 cups dry small white beans
Water
¾ pound salt pork
1 cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
½ cup molasses
½ cup maple syrup
1 cup brown sugar, packed
¼ cup vinegar
1 (1-pound 4-ounce) can pineapple chunks
1 medium onion

Rinse beans. Place in large pot and cover generously with water. Heat to boiling and boil rapidly 3 minutes. Remove from heat. Cover and let stand 1 hour. Cover salt pork with boiling water and soak 10 minutes. Dice about ¼ of pork and slice remaining piece of pork almost through to rind, but leave in one chunk. Set aside.

Drain beans. Add onion, mustard, salt, pepper, molasses, maple syrup, brown sugar, vinegar and undrained pineapple chunks. Place layer of bean mixture in large bean pot or deep casserole. Add diced pork, then remaining beans. Push piece of salt pork, rind side up, into beans. Bury onion in beans. Cover pot and bake at 250 degrees 6 to 8 hours. Remove cover during last hour of baking to brown top of beans. Makes 15 to 20 servings.

CHALUPA

1 pound pinto beans, soaked and drained
3 pounds uncooked pork roast
7 cups water
½ cup chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon salt
2 tablespoons chili powder
1 tablespoon cumin
1 teaspoon oregano
1 (4-ounce) can chopped green chiles
Corn chips
Chopped tomato
Chopped avocado
Chopped onion
Shredded lettuce
Shredded cheese
Taco or hot sauce

In Dutch oven or heavy kettle combine pinto beans, pork, water, onion, garlic, salt, chili powder, cumin, oregano and chiles. Cover and simmer about 4 hours, or until roast falls apart and beans are tender. Add more water during cooking period if needed. If mixture is too thin, uncover and cook about ½ hour longer, until desired consistency is reached. Shred pork with fork. Serve over corn chips and pass choice of toppings, including tomato, avocado, onion, lettuce, cheese and taco sauce or hot sauce. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

MEATBALLS WITH LIMAS

2 cups dry lima beans
3 cups water
1 pound ground lean pork
½ cup soft bread crumbs
1 egg
½ cup minced onion
¾ teaspoon garlic salt
Salt, pepper
1 tablespoon oil
1 (16-ounce) can whole tomatoes, undrained
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
2 tablespoons brown sugar, packed

Place beans and water in large saucepan. Cover and bring to boil over high heat. Reduce heat to medium and boil beans gently 2 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand, covered, 1 hour. Return to heat and simmer 30 minutes. Drain, reserving 1 cup bean liquid.

Combine pork, bread crumbs, egg, 2 tablespoons minced onion, 1-4 teaspoon garlic salt, ½ teaspoon salt and dash pepper. Shape into 1-inch balls.

In skillet or Dutch oven slowly brown meatballs in oil until lightly browned. Remove and set aside. Pour off all but 2 tablespoons drippings and saute remaining onion until tender. Add tomatoes, including liquid, vinegar, bean liquid, brown sugar, remaining garlic salt and meatballs. Bring to boil over medium heat. Add limas, cover and simmer about 20 minutes or until done. Adjust salt and pepper, if desired. Makes about 6 servings.

GARBANZO APPETIZER PATE

2 cups cooked garbanzo beans, drained
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
6 tablespoons olive oil
¼ teaspoon cumin
Salt, pepper
¼ cup minced green pepper
¼ cup minced red pepper or pimiento
2 tablespoons minced green onion

In food processor fitted with steel blade or in blender combine garbanzo beans, vinegar, oil, cumin and salt and pepper to taste. Blend until well pureed. Transfer to mixing bowl and stir in green and red peppers and green onion. Chill 4 hours or overnight. Serve with assortment of chilled raw strips of peppers, cucumbers and pita bread wedges, if desired. Makes about 2 cups.

MOORS AND CHRISTIANS

1 pound dried black beans
Water
½ pound salt pork, diced
2 large green peppers, coarsely chopped
2 medium onions, coarsely chopped
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ cup olive or vegetable oil
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1 tablespoon vinegar
Hot cooked white rice
Finely chopped onion

Cover beans generously with water and soak overnight. Drain and place beans in large kettle with 1-4 pound salt pork, 1 green pepper, 1 onion and 3-4 teaspoon salt. Cover generously with water. Cover and bring to boil. Simmer 1 to 2 hours or until beans begin to burst, stiring occasionally, adding water as needed. In skillet combine oil and remaining 1-4 pound salt pork. Cook until pork begins to brown. Add remaining green pepper, onion, salt and garlic. Cook until onion is tender but not browned. Add mixture and vinegar to beans. Mix well. Cover and simmer additional 45 minutes, adding more water, if needed. Beans should have enough liquid to provide sauce for rice. Serve over white rice and sprinkle with finely chopped onion. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

CALIFORNIA CHILI BEANS

1 pound dried red kidney beans
Water
¼ salt pork
1 small onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
½ pound ground beef
1 tablespoon chili powder
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper

Cover beans generously with water and soak overnight. Drain and place in large kettle. Cover with water and bring to boil, covered. Turn heat to low and simmer until beans are almost tender, 1 to 2 hours.

Meanwhile, dice salt pork and fry until lightly browned. Add onion and garlic and cook until tender but not browned. Add ground beef and cook, breaking up with fork, until meat is browned. Add meat mixture, chili powder, salt and pepper to beans. Simmer, covered, 45 minutes or until beans are tender. Add water as needed. Chili beans should not be too soupy but should have some liquid. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

SANTA MARIA BEANS

1 pound dried small pink beans
Water
1 strip bacon, diced
¼ cup diced ham
1 small clove garlic, minced
¾ cup tomato puree
¼ cup canned red chili sauce
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon salt
Dash MSG

Cover beans generously with water and soak overnight. Drain and cover with cold water. Simmer 2 hours until tender.

Meanwhile, saute bacon and ham until lightly browned. Add garlic and saute 1 or 2 minutes, then add tomato puree, chili sauce, sugar, mustard, salt and MSG.

Drain most of liquid off beans and stir in sauce. Keep warm over very low heat or in low oven until ready to serve. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Stew recipe old

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Fred Waring's Beef Stew recipe was first published in 1946, back in the days of the Waring weekly radio shows. These days Fred Waring still tours with his musical group, the "Pennsylvanians" and oversees his Choral Music Workshop. When Mrs. Waring — a strong advocate of good nutrition — heard of our interest in the Beef Stew, she suggested I urge cooks to substitute 3 tablespoons of safflower oil for the 3 tablespoons of lard called for in the recipe.

FRED WARING'S BEEF STEW

2 pounds beef rump, chuck, round or stew meat
2 medium-size onions
3 tablespoons lard
3 cups hot water
1 bay leaf
3 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1½ teaspoons caraway seeds
¼ cup vinegar
1 medium-size red cabbage
½ cup broken gingersnaps

Cut beef in 2-inch cubes. Brown beef and sliced onions in melted lard in a heavy saucepan or Dutch oven. Add water, bay leaf, salt, pepper and caraway seeds. Cover tightly and cook slowly for 1½ hours.

Add vinegar to stew, place cabbage wedges on top, cover and cook about 45 minutes to 1 hour more or until tender.

Meanwhile, soak gingersnaps in ¼ cup warm water. Lift out cabbage and meat; add gingersnaps to liquid and bring to a boil, stirring to make a smooth gravy.

Add meat to gravy and reheat. Serve on a bed of plain boiled noodles. Surround with red cabbage wedges.

Makes 6 servings.

CREAMY CORN SOUP

Simple to prepare in a food processor.

2 tablespoons parsley leaves
1 small slice (25-cent size) onion
17-ounce can cream-style corn
1¼ cups half-and-half
Salt and pepper to taste

In a food processor with the metal blade mince parsley, then onion. Add corn and process until very finely chopped.

Turn into a 1½-quart saucepan; add half-and-half. Stirring often, heat to serving temperature. Stir in salt and pepper. Makes 3 scant cups.

Creative breakfasts made easy

Microwave makes hot alternative for cold cereal

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

When I was younger, I hated standard breakfast fare. Even as a child I couldn't stand cold cereal — those bowls of sugary puffy stuff that got soggy before you could finish it — blech!

My favorite breakfast was a slice of cold leftover pizza. But unfortunately we didn't have pizza every night. And even when we did, with four children in the family, leftovers usually were non-existent.

Then when I was a little older I breakfasted on a cup of coffee and a slice of toast. Not very nutritious, you'll say and you're right.

Most nutritionists agree that a good breakfast habit is essential to a healthful diet, and that your morning meal is the most important one of the day. Since I began cooking with a microwave oven, I've found that breakfast can be a delightful meal. I still don't like cold cereal, but there are so many other breakfast goodies which take not much more effort to prepare.

My old complaint, that there just wasn't time to fix anything more than toast, is no longer heard. Even coffee cake can be prepared in 20 minutes or less, scrambled eggs are ready in a jiffy, and bacon takes just minutes to cook.

Don't throw out leftover waffles and pancakes! These can be reheated in the microwave, two to a plate, in 25 to 35 seconds.

A hearty breakfast can prevent "the blahs" later on in the day. If you own a microwave, there's no longer any excuse for skipping this vital meal. I still like leftover pizza in the morning, but now I warm it up instead of eating it cold. It's great with a cup of hot coffee!

If you're not fond of traditional breakfast foods, remember that leftover anything can be reheated quickly, right on the serving plate. Economical too. Who says you have to eat eggs and cereal for breakfast? Be creative!

Here are some traditional and some not-so-traditional breakfast ideas:

HOT DEVILED HAMWICHES

1 can (2¼ oz.) deviled ham
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1 tsp. sweet pickle relish
1 tsp. prepared mustard
Dash pepper
4 tbsps. mayonnaise
4 slices toast

Place all ingredients except mayonnaise and toast in small mixing bowl; bled well. Spread each slice of toast with 1 tablespoon mayonnaise. Place toast on paper napkins or plates and spread with ham mixture. Microwave 1 to 1½ minutes, or until cheese is melted and bubbly. Serves 4.

CHEESEY HERBED OMELET

1½ tbsps. butter or margarine
4 eggs
4 tbsps. milk
¼ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
½ tsp. parsley flakes
¼ tsp. basil leaves, crumbled
½ cup shredded cheddar cheese

Place butter in 10-inch glass pie plate. Microwave about ½ minute, or unti melted. In small bowl beat together eggs, milk and seasonings. Pour into pie plate and cover with plastic wrap. Microwave 1 minute; stir lightly and re-cover. Microwave 1 minute longer, or until just set in center. Sprinkle cheese over half of the omelet and fold over. Cover and let stand 1 minute. Then microwave 45 seconds to 1 minute longer, and let stand 1 minute before serving. Serves 2 to 3.

NUTTY SPICED FARINA

4½ cups boiling water
½ cup farina
½ tsp. salt
2 eggs, beaten
¼ cup brown sugar
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
½ cup chopped walnuts
1 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. nutmeg
Dash cinnamon

Pour 2½ cups of the boiling water into a 2½-quart glass casserole. Stir in farina and salt; microwave 30 seconds. Blend in beaten eggs, sugar and butter, stirring until sugar dissolves. Then stir in remaining ingredients. Add remaining 2 cups boiling water and stir well. Microwave 8 to 9 minutes, turning dish one-quarter turn every 2 minutes. Serve with milk. Serves 6.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens. Foods are cooked on HIGH.

Seminar: Sewing tips

By SHARON A. HILLIS

Clotilde Yurick, national clothing specialist, is presenting three seminars with information about designer techniques, manufacturers' tricks of the trade, and tips and shortcuts not found on pattern instruction sheets.

Some of the techniques discussed will be three methods of seam construction, collar, cuff, band and zipper techniques, lining procedures, selection and application of interfacing, buttonhole and pocket techniques and suggestions for ways to use leftover scraps.

Sew Smart Seminars teach the the easy way to sew all kinds of fabrics so the "loving hands at home" look can be eliminated and give garments the professional look of the finest ready-to-wear.

— Seminar I, "Ultra Suede," 7—10 p.m. Thursday
— Seminar II, "The $500 Look," 9 a.m.-noon Saturday
— Seminar III, "Tailoring," 1-4 p.m. Saturday

The seminars are sponsored by the Midland County Extension Service Home Economics Associations and are provided to the community. For registration information, contact the Midland County Extension Service, 682-9481, ext. 437.

Stuffing turkey made convenient

Looking for an easier way to stuff a turkey?

Try placing turkey stuffing in cheesecloth before loosely inserting it into the bird before roasting, according to Family Circle.

That way the stuffing can be removed intact and the bird left clean inside, making it easier to store leftovers.

DEAR ABBY

Couple's love affair gone to dogs

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, Jim, and I live together, and my problem is his three dogs. They are with us 24 hours a day! We don't go to movies or restaurants because he can't take the dogs. If he leaves them locked in the car, they bark and howl.

He used to insist that the dogs be in our bedroom all the time. When we made love, one dog would sit on the floor with his chin on the mattress, WATCHING! It really turned me off, so I said, "No lovemaking with the dogs in the room." Now he puts them out, but they scratch at the door and whine the whole time. And the first thing he says after lovemaking is, "Let the dogs in."

These dogs are with Jim constantly. The minute he sits down, one dog sits beside him, the other one jumps on his lap and the third one lies at his feet. There is no room for me. It's almost as though the dogs have a conspiracy to keep us apart.

What do you think of this situation? My mother says I should give Jim an ultimatum: me or the dogs. — COMPETING WITH DOGS

DEAR COMPETING: It's no canine conspiracy; Jim has trained his dogs to come between you and him. Don't give Jim an ultimatum. The dogs will win — paws down!

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. I am 51 and my husband is 52. We have a very good marriage, which includes a satisfying and active sex life.

My periods ceased two years ago, but I still insist we take contraceptive precautions. My husband objects to this, saying it is reducing his desire for me.

I don't want him to grow cold. Am I being silly? If there is even the slightest chance of getting pregnant, I don't want to risk it.

Please advise me. I trust you. — TAKING NO CHANCES IN IRELAND

DEAR TAKING: Would you trust another Irishman? Dr. John A. Haugen, my gynecologist of many years, says, "The rule is: No periods for 12 consecutive months means pregnancy is not possible, so the lady is doubly safe."

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. I met this man through a mail club last summer. The first time we met in person, he talked me into going to bed with him. I'm not usually that easy, but he was such a fast talker, before I could think of a good argument against it, he had won.

He lives in Jacksonville and I live in Palm Beach, and we have been together almost every weekend since we met. I still don't know much about him. I just know he's the best salesman I've ever met.

I guess I don't really trust him 100 percent. I don't like the way he looks at other women when he's with me. I think he's still shopping, even though he says he loves me.

I need to tell this turkey my true feelings, but I don't have the nerve. What do I do now? I'm a nice-looking, 64-year-old widow and I'm not hard up for anything. He says he's 65, but I don't believe that either. — BEING RUSHED

DEAR RUSHED: I think your instincts are good. Go with them. If you don't have the nerve to tell him that you don't trust him, don't like the way he looks at other women and don't like being rushed — write him a letter, and write him off.

Pumpkin cake made easier

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Several months ago I wrote about a reader who baked our Walnut Pumpkin Cake 50 times and sent the results to friends around the country. Now readers who missed that recipe have asked me to repeat it.

Here it is. The ingredients and proportions are exactly as in the original recipe, but the method is a new and easy one.

A note: canned pumpkin is in markets in late fall and during the winter. It has a way of disappearing during spring and summer. Because of this, while it is available I stock up by buying a few small and large cans. Then, if I want to try a recipe with canned pumpkin, it's on hand. Through years of experience, I have found it keeps well in a cool dark cupboard.

FAVORITE WALNUT PUMPKIN CAKE

3 cups sifted (12 ounces) all-purpose flour, see Note
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2½ teaspoons ground cinnamon
2 cups sugar
4 large eggs
1½ cups corn oil
1-pound can solid-pack pumpkin
1 cup walnuts, broken or cut the size of large green peas

In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and sugar. Make a well in the center and add the eggs, corn oil and pumpkin to it; at high speed beat until smooth. With a spoon, stir in the walnuts. Turn into an ungreased 10-inch cake pan.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the crack in the center comes out clean — 1 hour and 10 minutes. Let the cake stand in the pan on a wire rack for about 20 minutes. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges and around tube. Turn out on the wire rack; let stand until cold. Invert onto a serving plate and, if you like, sprinkle the top with a little confectioners' sugar. If you keep the cake longer than a few days, store it in the refrigerator.

Note: If you do not want to sift the flour, or haven't a kitchen scale, measure it this way: With a large tablespoon stir the flour extremely well in its container; lightly spoon the flour into the measuring cup until overflowing; level the flour with the edge of a small metal spatula to avoid pressing it down.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Diabetics should drink juice in moderation

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is orange juice good for diabetics? I used to have a pitcher of orange juice on the table at every meal, but a friend of mine has told me that that's not a good idea. — Terry, Baton Rouge, La.

Dear Terry: Orange juice contains 10 percent sugar, and patients with diabetes may drink it in moderation. However, patients should also bear in mind that orange juice contains calories and they should not drink it like water.

Orange juice is a good source of sugar for a patient who is having an insulin reaction.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine tells me he is taking vitamin A pills because he says they will keep him from getting cancer. Do you recommend these pills for your patients? — Steve, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Dear Steve: Taking supplemental vitamin A can be dangerous. Dr. Vincent T. DeVita, director of the National Cancer Institute, says that very high doses of vitamin A would be required to produce any protective effect against the development of cancer; however, large amounts of vitamin A can lead to stroke and have been known to result in death.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If you lose calories by exercising, but then you gain calories because you eat more because you exercise, what good have you done? Exercise seems like a losing proposition, and I don't mean that it will help a person lose weight — Stanley, Macon, Ga.

Dear Stanley: Your letter contains an implied assumption that people who exercise tend to eat more. This is not the case.

For example, the results of studies conducted in England have shown that obese women do not necessarily compensate for a loss of calories as the result of exercise by eating more. Exercise is an important adjunct to a program of weight reduction, and I recommend it for my patients.

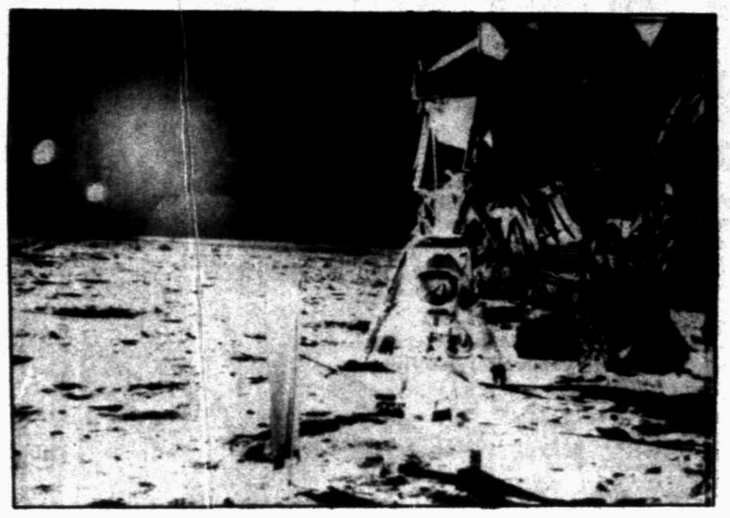

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can the lack of vitamins cause a child to have a seizure? My sister-in-law says that's what happened with one of her children. — Ms. E.L., Easton, Pa.

Dear Ms. L.: Seizures may occur in infants who lack vitamin B6 (pyridoxine), but this occurs very rarely. When it does occur, the condition may be the result of an actual lack of the vitamin or an increased need for it.

As you might expect, the treatment of this disorder consists of providing the missing vitamin; the usual anticonvulsant medication is not required. Vitamin B6 is found in fairly large amounts in meat, vegetables, whole-grain cereals, and egg yolks. Treatment must be started early to prevent irreversible neurologic damage ot the infant.

For Max, Los Angeles, Calif: Dr. Robert K. Kritzler, of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, says that the overwhelming majority of obese children have an excessive intake of calories. He attributes obesity to an endocrine disorder in fewer than 1 percent.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write him at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin, stands beside a lunar experiment outside the Apollo 11 lunar lander "Eagle" in 1969 during America's first lunar landing. Aldrin says NASA is wrong in wanting a space station as its next major goal. Americans, he contends, should go back to the moon and build a permanent base there.

'Americans should build permanent moon base'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buzz Aldrin, who walked on the moon with Neil Armstrong, says his old employer, NASA, is wrong in wanting a space station as its next major goal. Americans, he contends, should go back to the moon and build a permanent base there.

"The solar system's most desirable space station already has six American flags on it," he said in an interview. "That's the moon. Let's use it and not turn it over to foreign pioneering frontiersmen."

Aldrin and several individuals and aerospace organizations are trying to drum up support for a lunar base as the White House nears a decision on an expanded national space policy for the remainder of this century. Some groups are supporting a letter-writing campaign to President Reagan.

The president may announce the new policy in his State of the Union message Jan. 25. Details would follow in his proposed fiscal 1985 budget to be presented Feb. 1.

There is sharp division within the administration on what course America should take in space. But there are indicators that Reagan will strongly endorse an orbiting station, which for years has been the No. 1 priority of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

NASA officials, noting Reagan's recent call for a "grander vision" in space, said he also may support start-up money later in this decade for a scientific station on the moon, perhaps as an embarkation point sometime in the 21st century for a manned expedition to Mars.

Preliminary 1985 spending projections given earlier this month to Republican congressmen by Budget Director David Stockman show the admininistration wants to add $6 billion to NASA's budget over the next five years. That's a huge increase for an agency that has seen several lean years and just about the right figure for space station development.

Reagan wants to "recapture the vision of Apollo" and is seeking the best way to do that, said the White House science adviser, George A. Keyworth.

The president hinted at his direction in a speech last October on NASA's 25th anniversary. He challenged the agency to develop more visionary long-term goals instead of just focusing on winning approval of a permanent manned space station.

"We're not just concerned about the next logical step in space," Reagan said. "We're planning an entire road, a 'high road' if you will, that will provide us a vision of limitless hope and opportunity."

The president has been influenced considerably by Keyworth, who said last September that NASA had not been imaginative enough in its long-range planning. He said the agency should be thinking beyond a space station — on how to use such a platform to return humans to the moon and then on to Mars.

Since then agency thinkers have been working on just such a plan, but they have kept details under wraps.

Aldrin and others have seized upon the president's challenge to urge a moon base. Some, like Aldrin and George E. Mueller, who headed NASA's manned spacecraft effort during the Apollo moon program, and James Muncy, president of Using Space for America, want to skip the station as the next goal and go directly to the moon.

Organizations like the National Space Institute, the L5 Society, the Citizens Advisory Council on National Space Policy and Spacepac would like to see both a space station and a lunar base by the end of this century. Some would like to see both in place by 1992, the 500th anniversary of Columbus' voyage to the New World.

Such organizations, which are privately funded, were formed to advocate greater emphasis on the national space program. The L5 society is named for the fifth "libration point" between earth and moon, where gravity is balanced and where a space stations conceivably could be parked.

NASA's concern is that it can't do two expensive programs at the same time. Developing an operational space station for eight people by 1991 will cost between $6 and $8 billion. Building a moon base in that same period would cost another $10 billion.

The agency favors constructing a station first, ferrying up sections with the space shuttle, and then using that platform as a launching pad to the moon.

A station would be used at first as a scientific observation point above Earth's obscuring atmosphere, to search for resources on our planet and as an orbiting factory to make pure and exotic pharmaceuticals and materials for commercial use.

Aldrin, the second man to walk on the moon — on July 20, 1969 — said the nation would benefit more by developing an Orbital Transfer Vehicle to transport humans and materials from the space shuttle to the moon, leaving a space station until later.

United Way campaigns top 1982 by 9.5 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's United Way campaigns increased their fund raising by 9.5 percent to nearly $2 billion last year, the largest growth in more than a quarter-century, campaign officials anounced today.

"Given the fact that many communities in our nation's breadbasket, mid-America, are still in the throes of economic uncertainty, I characterize this year's campaigns as extraordinary — the best ever," United Way Chairman Robert A. Beck said in a prepared statement.

The increase to $1.95 billion donated represents growth of nearly three times the nation's inflation rate, or an infusion of $170 million new dollars for the 2,200 local United Way campaigns across the nation, Beck said. That was the largest growth in 27 years, he said.

The results "demonstrate that Americans are the most caring and generous people in the world," Beck said. He estimated that more than 75 million people contributed

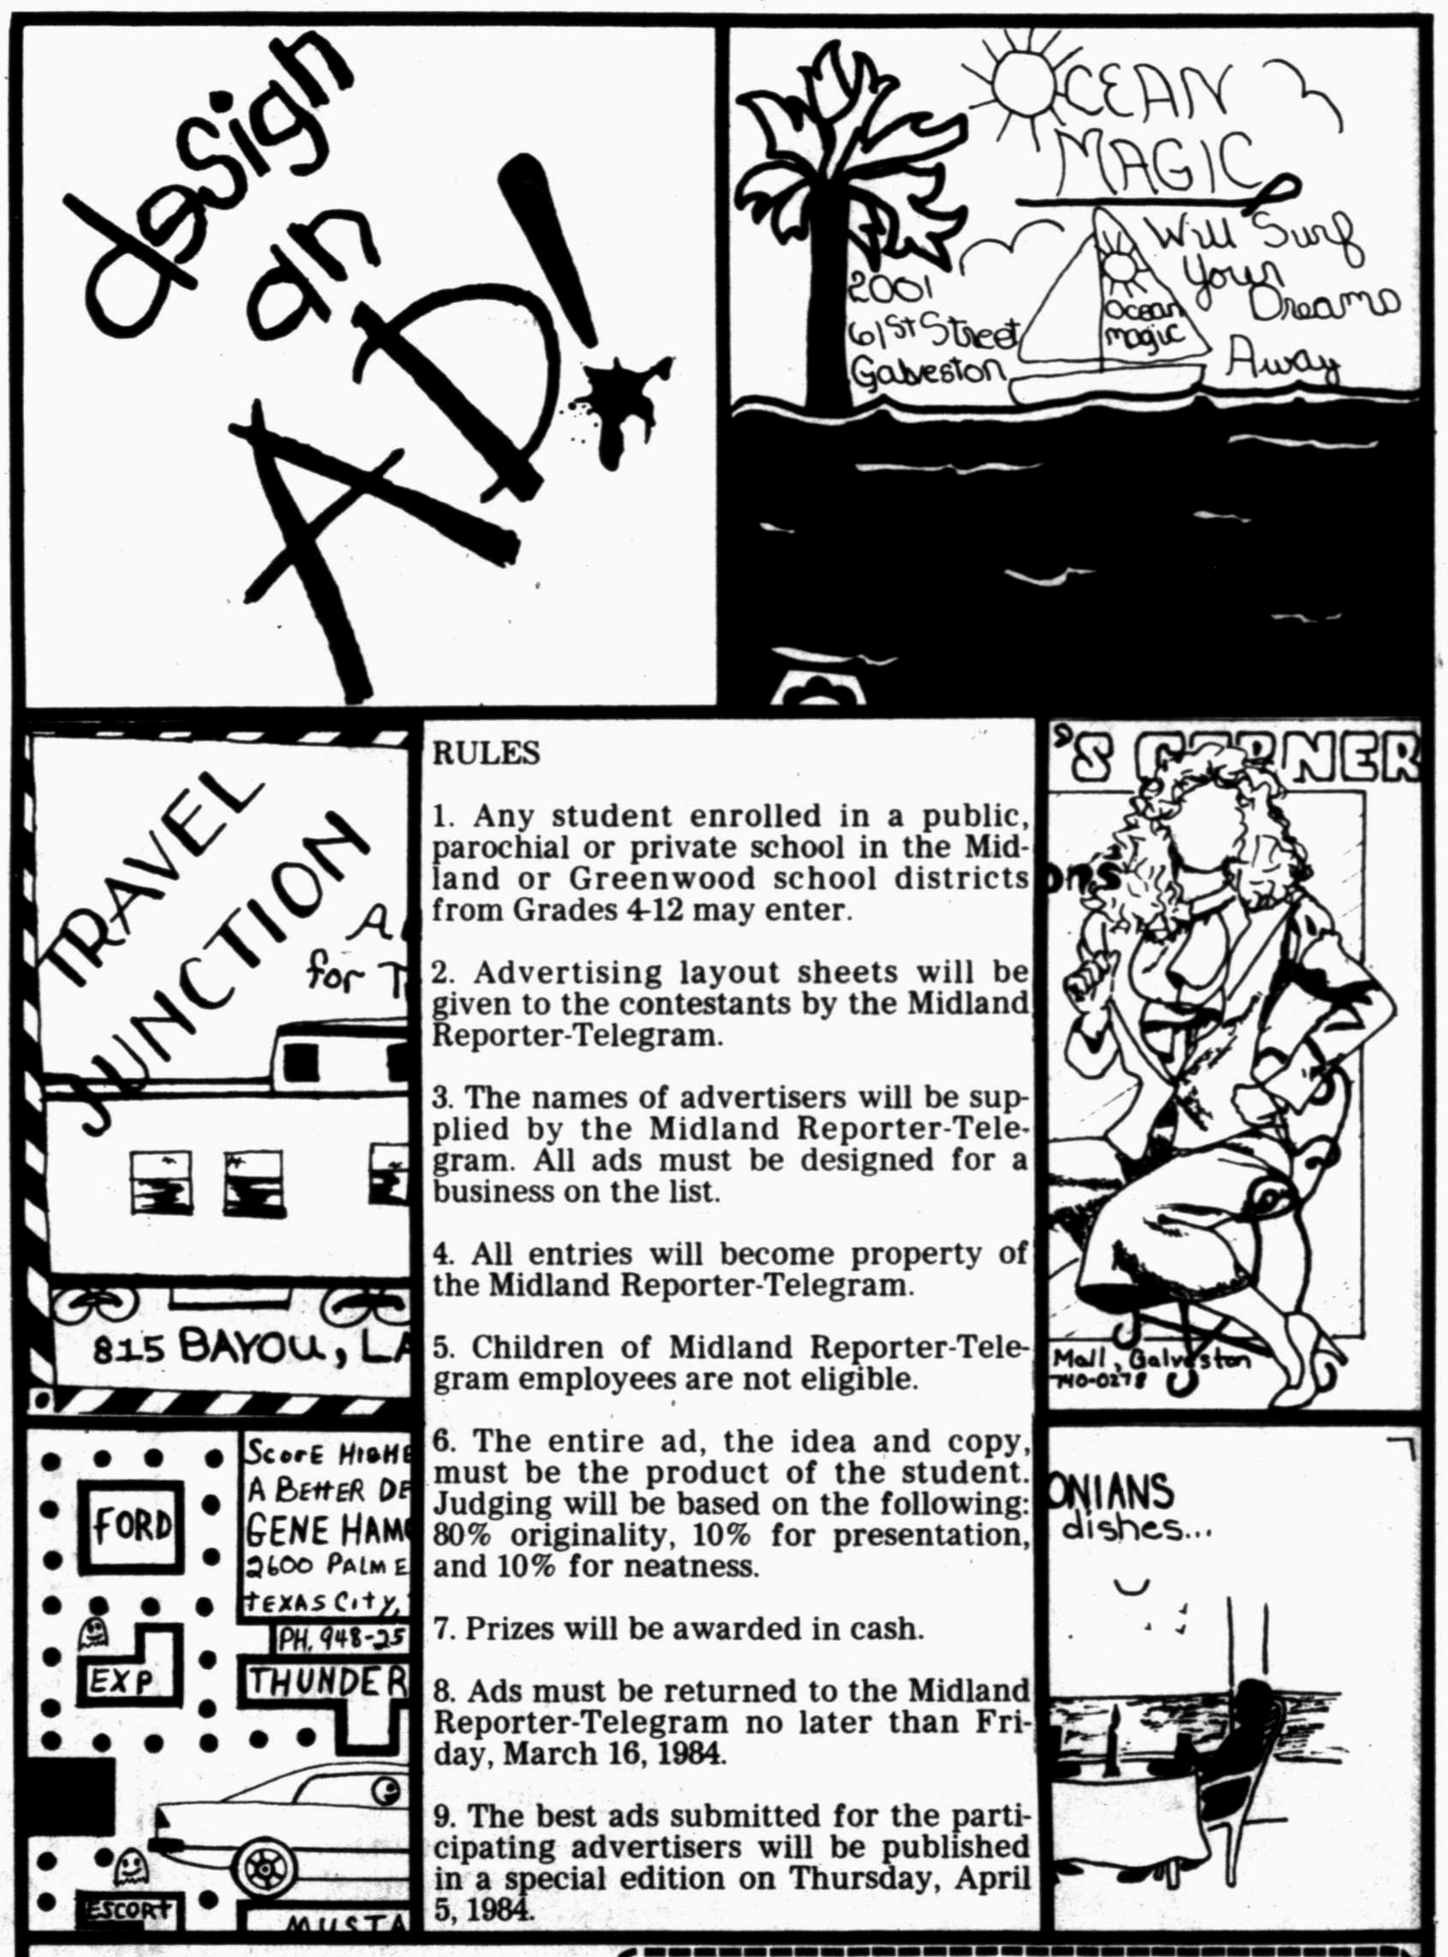

Many cities hard-hit by economic problems sharply increased their donations nonetheless, Beck said. He singled out such cities as Detroit, Cleveland, Decatur, Ill., and Youngstown, Ohio, for attention.

More than one fourth of the money raised (26.8 percent) is used to support a variety of services to families, Beck added. This includes emergency aid to the unemployed, programs for family members with drug and alcohol problems and counseling and crisis centers.

And, health services such as breast cancer detection, home health services and sickle cell anemia research receives 18.5 percent of the money, he added.

A rundown of the contributions from southern and southwestern states follows:

Alabama, $21,695,779, up 9.5 percent; Arkansas, $5,870,083, up 12.2 percent; Arizona, $6,065,910, up 17.5 percent; California, $103,417,756, up 15.8 percent; Colorado, $24,289,459, up 12.0 percent; Florida, $34,135,471, up 9.3 percent; Georgia, $37,096,065, up 13.3 percent; Kentucky, $15,417,101, up 10.6 percent; Louisiana, $21,150,857, up 9.3 percent; Mississippi, $2,349,237, up 9.3 percent; North Carolina, $36,974,357, up 16.0 percent; New Mexico, $6,571,670, up 9.2 percent; Oklahoma, $16,287,452, up 4.7 percent; South Carolina, $16,478,989, up 13.0 percent; Tennessee, $26,693,696, up 12.2 percent; Texas, $116,968,746, up 9.0 percent; Utah, $11,988, up 18.4 percent; Virginia, $31,695,495, up 13.7 percent; West Virginia, $1,412,776, down 2.2 percent.

Gardener plows on in war of roses

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The battle has been joined in the war of the rosebushes and Centenary College has sustained 1,200 casualties at the hands of a confused gardener at a California nursery.

"It is just so horrible," college spokeswoman Janie Flournoy said. "Our vice president kept asking them, 'Are you sure they were all plowed under?'"

Sadly, the answer was the same each time: Yes.

It seems the Centenary rosebushes, which are named for the college and bear maroon flowers matching one of the school's colors, were to have been delivered last week for a fund-raising project.

A gardener at Armstrong Nurseries in Ontario, Calif., had been told to plow under some other nearby bushes and just made a mistake, said nursery official Tom Carruth.

The tragedy came to light when it was time to prepare the bushes for shipment.

"Our field manager called us, saying, 'Oops ... uh, oh, this is on the list and it's not showing up'," Carruth said.

Hope now rests with 500 Centenary rosebushes still at the nursery. They're just a year old now, too young for shipment, but should be ready for next Valentine's Day.

But Centenary officials had already seen the bushes and knew the flowers were just what they wanted, said Vice President Darrell Loyless.

"It's a beautiful, beautiful rose," he lamented.

Letter from Wyatt Earp in filing cabinet

AP Laserphoto

Marci Donovan, an administrative aide with the Pima (Arizona) County Recorder's Office, holds the letter of resignation from Wyatt Earp dated Nov. 9, 1880, found while going through old documents.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — When Marci Donovan started going through an old filing cabinet in the Pima County Recorder's Office, her boss kiddingly told her, "If you find anything from Wyatt Earp, let me know."

You can guess the rest.

"I let out a big whoop and jumped three feet in the air," Ms. Donovan said, when she found an 1880 letter of resignation from Earp that read, "I have the honor herewith to resign the office of deputy sheriff of Pima County. Respectfully, Wyatt Earp.".

Ms. Donovan, an administrative aide, made the discovery last week, amid possibly 1,000 documents from Arizona's territorial days "just cubbyholed in the back" of a metal cabinet thought to date from the 1920s.

"It's really great stuff," Ms. Donovan said. "Some of the maps and articles of incorporation can really give you a picture" of what the Tucson area was like in the late 1800s, she added.

Material was still being inventoried, and likely will be appraised by historians, Ms. Donovan said, but the key find seemed to be the letter from Earp — "one of my heroes."

"The historic value would be tremendous," said Phil Hart, director of education for the Arizona Heritage Center. "That is very valuable. Anything about Wyatt Earp is worth a lot of money."

Recorder Richard Kennedy said the material probably will be given to a local museum, noting, "It belongs to the public."

The handwritten Earp letter was dated Nov. 9, 1880 and addressed to Pima County Sheriff Charles A. Shibell.

It gave no reason for the resignation, but Earp moved to Tombstone where his brother Virgil was town marshal. There, on Oct. 26, 1881, Earp joined Virgil and his brother Morgan and a friend, John H. "Doc" Holliday, in the gunfight at the OK Corral — which actually occurred in an alley, not the corral.

Three long-time enemies of the Earps were killed, and the Earp brothers and Holliday were charged with murder but acquitted after a preliminary hearing.

In late December 1881, Virgil was shot in the back and crippled, and three months later Morgan was gunned down from behind.

Frank Stilwell, the man believed to be his killer, was shot to death in a Tucson railroad yard, presumably by Wyatt Earp and friends.

Earp, who was born in Monmouth, Ill., in 1848, was a buffalo hunter in Kansas, a deputy marshal in Dodge City, Kan., a stagecoach driver, saloonkeeper and rancher. He died in 1929 in Los Angeles.

Baker wants panel to establish wages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr. is leading a Senate effort to change the Constitution to strip Congress of a power he claims it wields poorly: the authority to set its own salary.

The Tennessee Republican renewed his pitch for his constitutional amendment the other day as lawmakers once again found themselves embroiled in a battle over their paychecks.

This time the issue was an effort to repeal the automatic $2,400 cost-of-living increase Congress got last month, to $72,200 a year.

"Congress is institutionally incapable of establishing its own salary and I think we have demonstrated that time and again," Baker groused.

His proposal: establishment of a presidential commission that would set the pay of members of Congress every two years.

The commission could raise salaries, lower them or freeze them.

It would act by July 1 of each even-numbered year, and the new pay level would then take effect the following January.

Members of Congress could not vote to raise their salaries, or to block a pay raise from taking effect. Critics of a salary boost would have only one option: they could individually return the money to the Treasury.

Nothing ties the Senate and House in knots like pay fights.

Chocolate lovers feasted at festival

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — An estimated half-ton of chocolate, featured in salads and cocktails as well as desserts, was on the menu at the "Great American Chocolate Festival."

The five-day festival that started Sunday was to "educate and entertain people who love chocolate" and to promote the products of Hershey Food Corp., said company spokeswoman Deborah Ryerson.

"Chocolate is really a trendy thing right now," said Kyle Nagurny, manager of Hershey Test Kitchens.

The festival, which is put together by the company and the Hotel Hershey, is full of opportunities to taste sweet culinary creations.

Highlights included a "fashion show," on Monday, in which models will display chocolate desserts.

After the judging, the audience was allowed to sample the chocolate wine cream slices, chocolate almond cake, chocolate pecan croquette and poached apples in chocolate.

And if that's not enough to sate one's craving for cocoa, the "Great American Chocolate Festival Bake-Off and Country Fair" on Thursday will include ravioli with chocolate and chestnuts and chocolate-crusted pistachio cream pie.

"People come to something like this prepared to really indulge themselves," said Ms. Ryerson.

Paperwork even extends to bomb threats

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government seems to have a form for everything and everyone, and now it has one for those who threaten to blow up federal buildings.

As part of the general tightening of security at the Capitol following last November's blast near the Senate chamber, congressional staffers have been given a checklist for bomb threats.

"Place this card under your telephone," it states.

Listed are these "questions to ask" the would-be bomber: "1. When is the bomb going to explode?; 2. Where is it right now?; 3. What does it look like?; 4. What kind of bomb is it?; 5. What will cause it to explode?; 6. Did you place the bomb?; 7. Why?; 8. What is your address?; 9. What is your name?"

If the caller is still on the line after that set of questions, the person answering the phone is supposed to determine the phoner's sex, race and age.

The checklist goes on to request information on "caller's voice," in categories that include: calm, angry, excited, slow, rapid, soft, loud, laughter, crying, slurred, nasal, stutter, lisp, raspy, ragged, clearing throat, deep breathing, accent, familiar.

"If voice is familiar, who did it sound like?" the questionnaire asks.

And, bomb threat recipients are asked to characterize the "threat language." Checkoffs are listed for: well-spoken, foul, irrational, incoherent or taped.

A second form passed out to congressional staffers gives pointers on how to recognize letter and parcel bombs.

Some of the giveaway hints: "handwritten or poorly typed addresses," "oily stains or discolorations," and "protruding wires or tinfoil."

It wasn't intended that way, but color-coded badges being issued by security-minded Capitol Police to those who work in the Capitol and surrounding office buildings have become signs of status.

There are red badges, yellow badges, green badges and blue badges.

Red badges were first issued only to those who worked in the Capitol building itself and deemed to need 24-hour access to the building, while yellow badges were given to congressional staffers who worked in House and Senate office buildings and didn't need round-the-clock Capitol access.

That brought howls of complaints from those given yellow badges. Officials modified the order: those who worked in office buildings and who were lawyers could qualify for the more-desirable red badges. More howls of protest.

Finally, officials modified the code again.

"The red (badges) have unfortunately become status symbols and those people with the yellow (badges) apparently feel like second-class citizens," said a memo from Senate Sergeant-at-Arms Larry Smith. "None of these intentions were intended on our part and we sincerely regret that this has occurred."

Henceforth, those with yellow and red badges alike will be allowed full access to the Capitol, Smith wrote.

Green badges are being issued to reporters and blue badges to registered lobbyists. They all carry lesser degrees of access to the Capitol than the much-sought-after red badges and the now-equal yellow badges.

"They made a mistake in the colors," suggested one bemused Senate staffer. "They should have given the green badges to lobbyists. The color could have varied in tinge depending on how much money the lobbyists had."

Under the new arrangement, separate doors have been designated in the Capitol complex for different color badges. And public access has been severely restricted. "Official visitors" can use certain doors, run-of-the mill visitors must use others. And it isn't always clear which doors are open to which visitors.

The situation has created considerable confusion at the entrances to the Capitol as police officers try to learn the new codes. One officer stationed on the House side was reprimanded by his superiors — after he began denying access to wives of congressmen.

"Sorry, wives can no longer come into the Capitol," he was reported to have told some irate spouses.

Another officer at another entrance looked at a newly issued green press tag with confusion. "Who put that green stuff around your badge?" he asked.

The hassles that have accompanied the new security procedures inspired Senate Chaplain Richard C. Halverson to offer a prayer on the Senate floor for "the police, the doorkeepers, the plainsclothes people...

"Give them grace when people are hostile and help us never to forget that their lives are on the line," Halverson intoned. "We pray that they may be given patience as complaints pour in and grace to respond in love and kindness to those who are angry, who grumble and growl."

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., who recently was stopped by a Capitol police officer who didn't recognize him, thanked Halverson for the prayer but added:

"I am not sure whether I am recognized as a grouser or a grousee."

Sight loss hasn't been hurdle for scholar

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When Stephanie Dangel's doctor told her she probably couldn't run the hurdles, she proved him wrong. When the boss of a pipeline company doubted she could dig ditches, she proved him wrong, too.

"I've always been brought up to believe there was nothing I couldn't do," said the 22-year-old senior at the University of Pennsylvania, named last month as the school's first Rhodes scholar in 15 years.

The desire to excel came early for Miss Dangel, and adversity scarcely slowed her. At age 13, she lost the sight in her right eye when doctors removed a tumor on the optic nerve. Her doctor warned her that poor depth perception and eye strain would probably hinder her desire to play tennis or run the hurdles. She disagreed.

"I knew the doctor had said the wrong thing," recalled her mother, Catherine Machionsky Dangel. Determined that no one was going to tell her "you can't," Stephanie signed up for track and tennis.

Now a senior at the university pointing toward a career in law, she still runs the 400-meter hurdles and two years ago was named the most improved athlete on the track team.

"After the first few times, I found I got a little more confidence every time I did it," she said. "I just really set my mind to it."

The 5-foot-9 Miss Dangel worked four summers with the Laurel Pipeline Co., cutting bushes, digging ditches and painting equipment for a oil pipeline running from Philadelphia to the Ohio border.

"They said they'd never hired a woman before, but I asked them to give it a try," she said. "They realized I could pull my own weight, and it worked out."

She also worked as an intern in the office of Chief Justice Warren Burger at the U.S. Supreme Court, tutored criminals and juvenile delinquents and set up soup kitchens and adopt-a-grandparent programs at nursing homes.

"I've always been brought up to believe there was nothing I couldn't do...After the first few times, I found I got a little more confidence every time I did it (jumping hurdles). I just really set my mind to it."

"Whatever she does, she puts a lot of work into," said her mother. "She enjoys life. No matter what she's doing, she finds a way to have fun with it."

Miss Dangel is from Hollidaysburg, a town of 8,000 in south-central Pennsylvania. Her mother is a court stenographer and her father, Alfred, who was drafted as a professional football player by the Miami Dolphins and played briefly in the Baltimore Colts' farm system, is a high school coach and physical education teacher.

"I have two younger sisters — there were no boys in our family," she said. "We built our own home, and I've never seen manual labor as any unique thing."

After attending trials with her mother as a teen-ager and working with a local public defender, she decided to pursue a career in law, with an eye toward becoming a judge.

"I remember going to trials with my mother when I was in 10th grade. I was very fascinated by it," she said.

In May, she will graduate with three degrees: a master's degree in political science and bachelor's degrees in accounting and economics.

"She's one of the best students I've ever taught," said Leon Higginbotham Jr., a judge on the 3rd Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals and her teacher in a sociology of law class. "I've seen third-year law students who've done work that was not as thorough as the work she did."

Miss Dangel wrote a 150-page paper for a political science course on the 1938 civil rights case of black singer Marian Anderson, who was denied permission to sing in Constitution Hall in Washington, D.C. She hopes to expand the project as her master's thesis.

Next fall, as one of 32 Rhodes scholars from the United States, she'll begin two years of study at Oxford, where she plans to concentrate on history.

"I think coming from a small town gives me a certain openness and a trust in people," she said. "But at the same time, I'd like more exposure to other cultures and attitudes. I hope to get that by studying history, before I go back to law."

She'd also like to do the traditional things, like marriage and children.

"Sometimes it's hard to imagine how it's all going to fit in," she admitted. "But everybody says, 'You've done it so far, you can do it again.'"

Woman who claimed to be czar's daughter dies at 82

NEW YORK (AP) — On July 17, 1918, Czar Nicholas II, his wife Czarina Alexandra and their five children filed down the stairs to the basement of a house in the Ural mining town of Ekaterinburg, now Sverdlovsk.

The four daughters sobbed as Bolshevik riflemen herded the dethroned imperial family to doom. Shots rang out. Bayonets sliced through the air and ripped into flesh.

Nicholas, Alexandra and the children — Alexis, Tatiana, Olga, Marie and Anastasia — all perished, historical accounts say.

Or did they?

Nineteen months after the executions, a young woman, her body wasted by tuberculosis, was pulled from the icy water of the Landwehr Canal in Berlin after trying to kill herself. Two years later, she told the world she was the Grand Duchess Anastasia Nicolaevna Romanov.

ANNA ANDERSON Manahan died Sunday in Charlottesville, Va., at the age of 82. She had spent almost 60 years fighting for recognition as the youngest Romanov daughter.

Her odyssey sparked one of the most enduring and romantic royal controversies. Viveca Lindfors starred in the 1954 Broadway play, "Anastasia." Ingrid Bergman won an Academy Award for her performance in the screen version. There's been a ballet about the grand duchess and a TV drama. A musical is planned for Broadway.

"I believed her," author Peter Kurth said in a recent interview. "Nobody who lived with her and got to know her didn't believe her."

Kurth's "Anastasia: The Riddle of Anna Anderson" was published last year. Now 30, he began his research after seeing the Bergman movie when he was 13. "I was very surprised to know it was based on a true story," he said.

Mrs. Manahan was not the only pretender to the throne. Others surfaced over the years, claiming to be the mischievous child who was nicknamed "Schwibsik" (Imp) by her family.

And rumors swarmed: that the Romanovs were never really killed but fled to the West and hid their true identities; that the czar had $20 million in gold rubles in British banks; that the woman claiming to be his youngest daughter was really the out-of-wedlock child of his mistress.

Eugenia Smith of Newport, R.I., published "Anastasia, the Autobiography of the Grand Duchess of Russia," in 1963. An Oct. 16, 1963, article in Life magazine said polygraph examiner Cleve Backster had reported that results of a lie detector test indicated Mrs. Smith could be Anastasia.

OTHER EVIDENCE could not be substantiated.

Mrs. Smith refused to discuss her claim with the Associated Press.

Her publisher, Robert Speller, said he was "99 percent convinced that she's for real. I'm 99 percent convinced that Mrs. Manahan was not.

"We looked at films by the hundreds and if you examine Mrs. Smith's body very carefully, she has foreshortened arms — she was on the dumpy side, which the genuine Anastasia was," he said. "Mrs. Manahan had a dancer's figure."

Anna Anderson Manahan, nameless at the time, had scars on her forehead and behind her right ear when she entered a Berlin hospital after jumping into the Landwehr Canal.

She was melanchonic and would not discuss her past. Another patient, who had heard rumors that a member of the imperial family had escaped execution, saw a resemblance between the young woman and an old magazine photo of Tatiana.

The patient announced she had found Tatiana, then corrected herself -- the woman was really Anastasia.

MRS. MANAHAN TOLD "Anastasia's" story to Berlin police. She said a guard, loyal to the czar, found her still alive when he came to remove the royal corpses, and took her to safety in Romania, where she bore his child. The guard was later killed and the child placed in an orphanage.

"Anastasia" went to Berlin to her aunt, Princess Irene of Prussia. But out of shame, she instead plunged into the canal.

European royalty remained divided about "Anastasia" while authorities sought evidence. A Swiss criminologist compared skull measurements and said Mrs. Manahan was not the grand duchess. A German police laboratory made a study of the ears and concluded the same.

Death penalty given for economic crimes

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Authorities here are dealing out death sentences or long prison terms to Romanians who take advantage of the nation's economic crisis to line their own pockets.

Leading jurists say increasing reports of "economic crime" and punishment in the official press are intended as a deterrent to wrongdoers. At least 58 people have been sentenced to prison or death recently for such offenses, an informal survey of local newspapers showed.

The economic crisis has led to daily power blackouts and long lines to buy scarce supplies of meat, cheese and other goods as the government exports food supplies to earn foreign currency to pay its debts.

Romania Libera, the leading government newspaper, reported the most serious corruption case last December: Three men were sentenced to death by firing squad in the city of Tirgoviste for stealing meat from a local processing plant and selling it for profit to restaurants and stores. They were formally charged with "undermining the national economy."

Former railroad engineer convicted in derailment case

LIVINGSTON, La. (AP) — A former railroad engineer could be sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $10,000 after being convicted of recklessly handling a train that derailed and spewed toxic fumes, forcing 2,700 people from their homes for two weeks.

Edward Peyton Robertson was found guilty Tuesday, a day after he took the stand to deny charges that he was drunk on the job and had turned the controls over to a clerk riding in the Illinois Central Gulf locomotive.

Janet Byrd, the clerk, testified she was at the controls when 43 cars of the 101-car train derailed Sept. 28, 1982, but she and Robertson blamed the derailment on the equipment and tracks.

Terriers stolen from breeder

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven Yorkshire terriers, including two world champions, were stolen from the home of a well-known dog breeder while she was showing other dogs at a major competition, police say.

"It appears the person who took them knew of the dogs or the value of the dogs," police Sgt. Raymond Pucci said Tuesday.

Helen Stern, 73-year-old president of the Yorkshire Terrier Club of Greater New York, estimated her stolen dogs' value at $35,000.

'Heart' breaks cable's circuit

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — The Pacific Gas & Electric Co. is blaming a power outage on Valentine's Day.

A heart-shaped aluminum balloon got loose and caused a short circuit in a jumper cable, cutting power to 75 commercial and industrial customers near Fresno Air Terminal, utility spokeswoman Frances Squire said Tuesday.

"It tangled with our lines much like birds do from time to time," she explained.

Power was restored to about half of the customers within 45 minutes, and all power was due back within about three hours of the 12:17 p.m. outage, Ms. Squire said.

INS agents break smuggling ring

OKEECHOBEE, Fla. (AP) — Immigration agents posed as labor camp drivers to help crack an Arizona-to-Florida smuggling ring that brought illegal Mexican aliens to citrus groves, authorities said.

The five-month investigation culminated Tuesday with raids on three farm labor camps, where 11 citrus harvesting bosses were charged with conspiracy to transport the aliens to Florida for a price, George Waldroup of the Immigration and Naturalization Service said.

Agents also arrested 73 illegal aliens, 37 of whom they plan to use as witnesses against the alleged operators, authorities said.

AIDS baby leaves hospital

MIAMI (AP) — The state will continue to pay hospital bills for an abandoned 16-month-old who suffers from AIDS but was finally deemed strong enough to move to a foster home, a health department spokesman says.

The baby girl, whose mother died of acquired immune deficiency syndrome in November 1983, on Tuesday left Jackson Memorial Hospital, where nurses called her Pumpkin. Doctors expect her to die of the disease before her third birthday.

Her foster parents, who live somewhere in the Miami area, will receive $225 a month to care for her, but her medical bills will be paid by the state.

School records' seizure sparks grand jury probe

SUMMIT, N.J. (AP) — A special grand jury is being called to investigate the unexplained police seizure of confidential student records, a sweeping search that outraged parents and was termed "frightening" by the school board president.

Union County Prosecutor John Stamler announced Tuesday he was ordering the inquiry into the seizure of records dating back to 1976, some involving students as young as 8.

"The seizure and uncontrolled examination of records of junior high school students...is the exact type of government excess the founding fathers sought to prevent," Stamler said.

The documents seized concerned disciplinary actions against the students and any crimes committed by them. Police officials wouldn't say why they chose to apply for search warrants — rather than ask school officials for information — and what they were looking for.

Meanwhile about 150 residents of this affluent northern New Jersey suburb packed a council meeting Tuesday night to express their anger, with one calling the seizure "a blatant constitutional violation."

School board President D. Anne Atherton said she didn't know whether the confiscation was a case of "poor judgment or something more sinister."

A municipal judge issued search warrants allowing police Thursday to cart away records from the offices of the school superintendent, business administrator and a junior high school principal.

During the raid, officers read Schools Superintendent Richard Fiander his rights, although he was not arrested, said Steven Hoskins, the school board attorney.

On Friday, Superior Court Judge Edward Beglin ordered the records sealed until the school board can seek their return.

Residents and school board officials indicated they believed police were looking for information on drug and alcohol abuse among the students.

School officials said they are worried the raid might destroy students' faith in the district's ability to keep material confidential and jeopardize a new program to combat drug abuse.

"The program is based on confidentiality and I am so concerned that these imprudent actions, as intolerable as they were, will jeopardize this entire program," Mrs. Atherton said.

Mrs. Atherton said angry parents of the district's 2,900 students have deluged school board members with telephone calls.

"I was outraged and I continue to be outraged," she said. "I am very perplexed as to why this has happened. I find the incident frightening."
