Budget's $180 billion in red ink unsurprising

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, apparently not wanting to rock the boat in an election year, is proposing a budget that leaves a deficit of about $180 billion and offers no startling ways to trim it.

The spending blueprint, which was being submitted formally to Congress today, projects spending of $925.5 billion in the fiscal year that starts on Oct. 1, according to legislators who got an early look at the document.

The biggest increase is expected to be proposed for the military buildup, a request sure to spark controversy in Congress.

Even before the document was officially released, Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said he thought the defense increase was "higher than I think is necessary," although "significantly lower than I would have assumed last year."

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia complained, "Again, the administration will call for a tremendous increase in defense spending without saying how it is going to be paid for."

But all in all, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., asserted, "It's a good budget. It's a realistic budget."

Still, he said, the deficit will be "larger than we would like it to be, but not as large as some had predicted and many feared."

It was previously reported that the administration will show annual deficits holding steady at around $180 billion over four years, before falling to about $150 billion in 1988 and $120 billion in 1989.

Helping keep that deficit up is the administration's continuing push for more money for defense.

Congressional sources who attended budget briefings Tuesday confirmed that the administration will ask for a sharp 18 percent increase in budget authority for defense, to $305 billion. The sources would speak only on condition they remain anonymous.

The president also will likely call for more money for the Justice Department, primarily to bolster its crime-fighting duties.

The department's Immigration and Naturalization Service is expected to see its budget rise about $41 million in the new spending plan. The money would enable the agency to hire nearly 850 more Border Patrol agents to try to stop the rush of illegal aliens across the United States' border with Mexico.

Reagan disclosed last week that he wants more money for the Environmental Protection Agency, partly for the "Superfund" program to clean up hazardous waste sites.

Moreover, he said in his State of the Union address that he will seek start-up money for an $8 billion manned space station.

He also will apparently urge Congress to provide more money for education.

Dale Lestina, the chief lobbyist for the National Edcuation Association, said budget documents obtained by the group indicated the president might ask for $100 million more for the Education Department than the $15.4 billion Congress appropriated for this year.

The documents also show an increase of nearly $250 million in state education block grants in 1985. No cuts are proposed in the department's main programs to help teach handicapped and disadvantaged students.

Respiratory infection sidelining many students

From Staff Reports

Nearly one in four students is calling in sick at some Midland schools this week, most victims of upper and lower respiratory infections, a local doctor said.

Nearly 2,600 children were absent district-wide Tuesday, according to Coordinator of Special Services Payton Cook. That represents 14.7 percent of student enrollment — twice the average absenteeism rate, Cook said.

This week Midland schools have had the worst attendance of the school year.

Especially hard hit are the junior high schools. At Alamo, 25.2 percent of the students were not in class Monday. San Jacinto had 19.3 percent absenteeism. Freshmen and high schools also suffer from the bug, with Midland High in the forefront with 24.6 percent absent.

Teachers are not immune either, with 112 staff members reporting sick today — about 7 percent of total personnel.

A school spokeswoman said the district has been able to get enough substitute teachers, but "it's been hectic."

Absenteeism began increasing last week, Cook said. "The first one that was really clobbered last week was Rusk Elementary. But yesterday (absenteeism) was only 8 percent so it doesn't seem to be lasting long."

Family physician P.A. Talboys said most of his recent patients have been suffering from primary viral laryngo-tracheo-bronchitis, an upper and lower respiratory infection. Because the disease is transmitted through contact with others, he said the best prevention would be to stay at home.

That being impractical, he advised people to stay well-rested and avoid getting chilled.

Name of the game

Kyle Vernon looms above Midland Millions, a board game he and other members of a Junior Achievement company produced.

Game lives up to name

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Midland Millions is its name; giving youngsters experience is its game.

The product of Chevco-Star Junior Achievement Company, the new board game already has broken Midland JA sales records while helping a 20-member team of students learn all phases of operating a company and promoting a product.

The original brainchild of Chevco-Star member Kyle Vernon, 17, Midland Millions has transcended the realm of one person's creation to involve each company member vitally.

"The entire company has been involved in the production of the game," explained Kyle, a senior at Lee High School and president of Junior Achievement for 1982-83. "The Junior Achievement company is a collection of kids from both Midland high schools and we formed a company to learn about business by creating a project and selling it.... It helps kids to specialize; if some kid doesn't like door-to-door sales, he can go into the storeroom and help. It helps to develop a business-like approach to the business world.... In most high schools, all (students) know about free enterprise is that it gives them a paycheck. Junior Achievement learns how to work with each other and what goes into it."

Midland Millions is a game of investment consisting of a board with pieces. Similaries with monopoly do exist, acknowledged Kyle; however, the company and its sponsor, Chevron USA Inc., were careful to ensure the game differed enough to be called an original.

"It's a board game about Midland," noted Kyle. "It has businesses of Midland on the board. It's unique in that it's nothing but about Midland. Like Midland, you can purchase a local business and invest it immediately, which makes the game not only more fun to play but faster than regular Monopoly."

Policeman recounts efforts to control Larry Lozano

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Larry Lozano cried "something about 'I'm going to leave this world,'" minutes before he died after eight Odessa lawmen had barged into his jail cell to protect the "berserk" inmate from himself.

This was the testimony given by Randy Tinney, a former Ector County deputy, in federal court on Tuesday.

Tinney, now a police officer in Stanton, and Jackie Perkins, a former Ector County jailer, are being sued in federal court by Lozano's widow and her two sons, ages 12 and 8, for damages.

"I remember a lot of mumbling and anger on his part," Tinney testified of Lozano.

The six-man jury in the trial presided over by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton is to determine if Tinney and Perkins used excessive force in subduing Lozano and if that force contributed to his death. No one was indicted following federal and state grand jury investigations into Lozano's death.

LOZANO DIED on the night of Jan. 22, 1978 — 12 days after he had been jailed following a traffic mishap and after he allegedly had assaulted deputy sheriffs who investigated the incident and other deputies while being booked into jail. Lozano, who had been described as "emotionally disturbed," had been taken to Odessa Medical Center on the day of his death for sedation but was not admitted.

Shortly after Lozano's death, Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught had told the news media that Lozano had committed suicide by ramming his head against the cell's steel door and glass porthole.

Prior to the officers' entering Lozano's cell, Tinney said the 27-year-old inmate was "banging and hollering" and had blood on his arm.

"No," he said, "I didn't see him hurt himself."

Tinney said when he entered the cell, Lozano was "crouching," had both arms raised and was wielding broken glass in his hands.

"I thought he was going to attack me."

Tinney said he twice called "Larry, Larry" in an attempt to "establish communications" and took one step forward. So did Lozano. They tangled.

"I THOUGHT MY throat was going to be cut," testified Tinney, who also said he thought Lozano was "trying to cut my testicles." The glass in Lozano's hand "looked like a dagger to me...in the situation I was in."

Tinney and other officers "penned" Lozano to the floor, handcuffed him and carried him outside the cell and down the corridor to avoid placing the inmate on fragments of cell glass, he said. Lozano allegedly had broken the thick observation glass with a heavy brass ring which had been fitted on a toilet hole in the cell.

"He was still kicking and cussing at the officers," said Tinney, who said he then left Lozano on the floor with the other officers since he was exhausted from helping subdue the inmate.

"I thought that was the end of it," he said, "and they were going to carry him out to the hospital."

Philip Neuendorff, an Odessa pharmacist and a reserve deputy in 1978, was working as a relief dispatcher on the night of Lozano's death. He said he went upstairs to the jail after being asked to assist the deputies "calm a violent prisoner."

Outlook better on childhood cancer

EDITOR'S NOTE: In laboratories across the United States and elsewhere, researchers are gradually bringing humanity's most feared diseases under control. In Part Eight of a 10-part series, AP science writer Paul Raeburn deals with the steady — and sometimes remarkable — progress that has been made.

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

Cancer, a frightening disease under the best of circumstances, has always seemed especially tragic in children.

Until recently, young cancer victims faced a grim future. Several decades ago, almost all of them died.

Now the outlook is completely different. For the first time, a generation of children who have survived cancer is reaching adulthood. "There have been enormous strides in the treatment and cure of children with cancer," says Dr. Denman Hammond, chairman of the Children's Cancer Study Group supported by the National Cancer Institute. "The successes in improving cure rate (in children) probably represent the most gratifying area in all of cancer treatment.

QUIET VICTORIES:
Childhood cancer

"The bottom line is we are now curing about half of all children and infants that develop cancer," says Hammond, who is associate dean of the University of Southern California medical school.

No headline-grabbing discovery was responsible for the dramatic turnaround. "It's hard to put a finger on any two or three things that made that happen," he says. "It is not the result of any single breakthrough. It is clearly the result of research, the kind of research where you find out something and when you find it out, you go on and find out something else. That's the way research usually happens."

Treatments were improved in incremental steps. Doctors made fine adjustments in therapies, tinkered with existing treatments. Slowly, steadily, the survival rates were pushed up.

About 6,000 children under age 15 develop cancer each year, according to the American Cancer Society. About a third of them are stricken with leukemia, the most prevalent form in children. Cancer of the brain and central nervous system are the next most common. The disease also occurs in the lymph nodes, bones, and eyes. An estimated 1,600 children die of cancer annually.

When cancer strikes the kidneys, it is called Wilms' tumor. That was once almost universally fatal, but is now cured in 80 percent of the children who get it, says Dr. Giulio D'Angio, director of the Children's Cancer Research Center at Children's Hospital in Philadelphia.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Low cloudiness fogging forecast

They can't really decide "weather" or not to call it low cloudiness or fog, but forecasters at the National Weather Service said Midland can expect more of it tonight and Thursday.

Tonight's forecast calls for fair skies early in the evening with some low cloudiness developing late tonight. Cold temperatures are again expected, with lows in the low 30s predicted.

Thursday should see some early-morning cloudiness, becoming mostly sunny by late morning. Temperatures will be a little colder with highs expected to be in the upper 50s.

Southwest winds of 5 to 15 mph tonight will become northerly Thursday afternoon at 15 to 25 mph and gusty.

Tuesday's high of 52 was 28 degrees cooler than the all-time record of 80 set Jan. 31, 1963. An overnight low of 28 was 29 warmer than the -1 recorded in 1951.

Texas could reap fiscal rewards

By T. LEE HUGHES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Texas, traditionally a major beneficiary of Pentagon spending, would be targeted for more than $261 million in military construction projects next fiscal year under the budget proposed today by President Reagan.

The amount is the fourth largest of any state, behind only California, Georgia and Virginia.

In addition, the Army Corps of Engineers is proposing to spend more than $117 million in Texas for construction work on civil water projects such as reservoirs and water channels.

And the Defense Department is seeking to spend millions more on purchase of weapons systems from private contractors in Texas, such as Bell Helicopter, General Dynamics Corp. and Texas Instruments.

The defense budget proposes authorizing about $261.2 million for military construction in Texas next fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1. Though authorized for eventual use on the projects, all of the money would not necessary be spent during that year.

Those projects include housing, weapons support facilities and maintenance structures - everything from from an instruction building for $16 million at Fort Bliss in El Paso, to missile storage igloos for $11.6 million at Carswell Air Force Base near Fort Worth and a flight simulator building for $3.3 million at Ford Hood west of Killeen.

Authorization for the program still faces a lengthy process of congressional approval, during which projects are likely to be added to or deleted from the list.

The Corps of Engineers, meanwhile, is seeking $117.8 million for construction work on a dozen water projects in Texas.

These range from $10.1 million for work on the Corpus Christi ship channel to $58 million for flood control at the Ray Roberts Lake near Denton and $18.1 million for flood control at Joe Pool Lake southwest of Dallas.

Major weapons systems that would be purchased from Texas companies include helicopters, fighter aircraft and missiles.

The Pentagon wants more than $268 million for 44 sophisticated scout helicopters made by Bell Helicopter of Fort Worth, nearly $216 million for 22 attack helicopters from the same company and over $4.2 billion for 150 F-16 fighter aircraft manufactured by General Dynamics of Fort Worth.

It also wants $574 million for multiple launch rocket systems manufactured by Vought Corp. of Dallas, nearly $680 million for air-to-surface missiles made by Texas Instruments of Dallas and over $217 million for modernization of M60 tanks, with part of the work done by Texas Instruments.

Acquisition figures include costs of spares, research and development. Other companies outside of Texas are also involved in manufacture of most of the weapons systems.

Grocery prices up in early 1984

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Grocery prices rose by almost 1 percent during the first month of the new year, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey that showed meat and egg prices leading the list of increases.

The boost was the third monthly rise in a row and confirmed earlier predictions that consumers will be paying higher prices at the supermarket in 1984 because of last summer's heat and drought.

The AP survey covers 14 food and non-food items which were selected at random and priced at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. The figures are not adjusted to reflect seasonal variations. Nor are they weighted to show what percentage of a family's actual spending goes for each item on the checklist.

The latest survey showed that the marketbasket bill increased during January at the checklist store in nine cities, rising an average of 2.1 percent. The bill decreased at the checklist store in four cities, dropping by an average of 2.1 percent. Overall, the marketbasket bill rose by an average of nine-tenths of 1 percent.

The January picture was a familiar one. The marketbasket bill also went up in nine cities during November, when the over-all average increase was eight-tenths of 1 percent, and it rose in eight cities during December.

Price decreases late in 1982 and early in 1983 have helped consumers keep grocery spending under control despite the latest increases, however.

A comparison of prices today with those at the start of February a year ago showed the marketbasket bill at the checklist stores rose only one-tenth of 1 percent during the 12-month period.

Higher prices for meat and eggs are to blame for much of the rise in grocery bills. Meat and eggs make up just under 30 percent of the items in the AP survey, but they accounted for 55 percent of the increases during January and 58 percent of the increases during December.

The price of a dozen eggs went up at the checklist store in nine cities during January, center-cut pork chops rose in eight cities, all-beef frankfurters in five cities and chopped chuck in four cities.

'Midland Millions' game paying its way with JA

Few ideas leap full-blown from a person's creative processes, and for Kyle and Chevco-Star it was no different. Kyle was at the national Junior Achievement Conference last summer when he encountered a board game coined by a JA company in Philadelphia. He saw both its weaknesses and its possibilities, and he returned to Midland "with the idea you could turn it into a modern-day war game."

He contacted his sponsors at Chevron, and Chevco-Star members and advisors began putting in long hours perfecting its design and contributing to its production.

"We went to work on it about the middle of August," said Kyle, "and we spent long nights throughout the weeks of August and September designing the game, de-bugging it and getting down all the ideas."

Thereupon, company members began selling advertising space on the board to local businesses. "This, in effect, helped us raise money to start production," explained Kyle. "And from there our company members contacted companies about printing and dice and things like that."

They decided on a printer in Wisconsin, but as in most ventures, Chevco-Star met with unexpected difficulties.

"We had to make a master copy, and sent it on an overnight carrier," noted Kyle. "In effect, they dropped it in a puddle of water and ran over it in a truck. This put us off about 2½ weeks, so we got it back and worked on it and sent it off again on another overnight firm. The games got frozen-in in Dallas, and eventually they trucked it in. It was a nightmare for a while."

The finished products finally reached Midland Dec. 24. It was a close shave — the company had promised prospective buyers the games would be ready on Christmas Day.

Since then, company members have sold Midland Millions by going door-to-door and promoting it by word-of-mouth. Produced in a limited edition of 1,500, Midland Millions now is in the homes of approximately 300 Midlanders who have spent $15 apiece for the games — a price the sponsors believe is competitive with other games on the market.

Sales as of Monday for Midland Millions were $7,300, which shatters the previous Midland record of $5,363.

Midland Millions, along with other business products made by other local Junior Achievement companies, will be sold at Midland Park Mall Feb. 18. The board game also can be purchased by contacting the Junior Achievement office, 682-4966.

Officer recalls night of Lozano's death

IN THE JAIL, Neuendorff, 64, said he saw Lozano lying on the floor and that his feet and hands were beginning to turn white. He said he immediately began giving Lozano cardiac massage in an effort to revive him.

"I worked for, I'm not sure, 10 or 15 minutes, until I became exhausted," Neuendorff testified. "I think I had the heart beating again, but it fluttered out."

He said he was so tired that he turned the heart massage over to another person, who did not follow the proper procedures, and Neuendorff told him to "move over."

"I worked furiously," he said, and quit the efforts after he pulled Lozano's eyelids back.

"His eyes were completely dilated, and I knew he was completely dead," Neuendorff said.

Under questioning by the Lozano Houston attorneys, P.J. "Skip" Martin, an Ector County deputy sheriff in 1978, testified the sheriff had "no policy" on excessive force other than "whatever force was deemed necessary by the officers...to subdue and arrest someone."

Martin, who helped contain Lozano, said he was in the courthouse lobby when he heard the "banging noise" and was told "Larry Lozano was going crazy upstairs."

ONCE UPSTAIRS, Martin said he noticed glass in the hallway near Lozano's cell.

"His hands were bloodied," he said, "and he did have blood on his face as well." However, Martin said he never saw Lozano ram his head into the steel door and the glass observation window.

Another former deputy, Ricky Kennedy, now Stanton's chief of police, also testified that he had heard Lozano say "'I'm fixing to leave this world' or something along this line...and other muttering" just before Lozano's cell door was opened and the officers rushed in. Kennedy said he "didn't see Lozano kick or hit officers" and that he did not see anybody kick or hit in the inmate.

He said he and other officers were holding Lozano down.

Sheriff's Patrol Sgt. Mike Harrison said when he and Tinney rushed into Lozano's cell, Lozano was wielding a 6- to 8-inch long piece of glass. "I would say it was glass from the skylight," he said.

Within a matter of seconds, the officers had knocked Lozano to the floor and handcuffed him.

He said Lozano had said "something about going to another world, something about his mother. He was incoherent."

Harrison testified he "did not see anyone hit Mr. Lozano."

"There was no need for that — eight men on one. It wasn't that big of a chore (to subdue Lozano)," although "he was a very stout man." Harrison said he saw "no one strike or choke" Lozano.

Harrison said Lozano was dead with three or four minutes after he had been taken from his cell.

"We thought we had him under control," he testified.

Outlook improves on childhood cancer

"That's a good example of this systematic kind of progress," he says.

Wilms' tumor was first treated by surgeons, who excised the tumors with a scalpel. "Then it was found that the tumor was responsive to radiation therapy," says D'Angio. "Now, combined care — using surgery, radiation therapy and drugs — is used in these children very selectively," he says.

The pattern is essentially the same with all childhood cancers. The standard treatments — surgery, radiation and chemotherapy — have been combined and adjusted to do maximum damage to cancer cells with minimum harm to normal tissue.

"There are now pretty effective drugs for the childhood cancers," says D'Angio. "The problem is to find ways to reduce toxicity. Using old drugs in new ways is an important part of the research effort today."

Researchers have also learned to watch for subtle signs that indicate how virulent a particular case of cancer is. For example, it used to be standard practice to treat all children with acute lymphoblastic leukemia the same way, says Hammond.

"Now, by better characterizing these patients, we know they're not all the same. They represent various varieties of lymphoblastic leukemia," he says. Doctors now recognize at least five types of lymphoblastic leukemia, each requiring a different treatment.

Some 8,000 patients are being followed as part of the nationwide Children's Cancer Study Group headed by Hammond. Many of them are in what Hammond calls "continuous complete remission."

"Clearly, most of these children are cured," he says. "The other important point is that there are no limitations on their activity."

The success in treating children's cancer has sparked an entirely new concern among doctors. How will these children, the first generation to have survived cancer, get along as adults?

"We expect that an increasing number of young adults that have had cancer in infancy and childhood and have been cured will be entering college, the military, the job market," says Hammond. "So we tend to worry about some distant things, such as their insurability and the attitude of employers when they have a bright candidate with a history of cancer."

Ultimately, doctors would like to prevent cancer from appearing in the first place. "When we have a 100 percent cure rate with zero side effects, we still have failed the child because it got sick in the first place," says D'Angio.

Efforts to prevent children's cancer, however, are stymied by ignorance of the cause of the disease. Cancer in the children of pregnant women given the synthetic hormone DES has been prevented by stopping the use of DES in pregnant women. But nothing can be done to prevent the principal childhood cancers.

Studies are under way, however, to determine whether childhood cancers are caused by environmental factors or parents' occupational history. D'Angio is optimistic.

"Each succeeding study marks an advance," he says, and the current studies "will no doubt mark a similar advance."

Kermit man got bubonic plague from rabbit meat, official says

KERMIT (AP) — A Texas Department of Health official says a 46-year-old Kermit man contracted bubonic plague after handling infected rabbit meat.

William Rosser, regional veterinarian for the health department, said the man, who officials declined to identify, returned to work Tuesday.

Rosser said the man and a friend had hunted rabbits earlier this month in two different areas west and north of this West Texas city. The man was admitted to a hospital for tests and observation after plague symptoms appeared about three days later, Rosser said.

He said sudden high fever and a swelling under arms or in the groin are major symptoms.

The victim's hunting partner also was admitted to the hospital, but he was not diagnosed as having the disease, Rosser said.

He said bubonic plague was positively identified from rabbit tissue samples taken from the animal meat in the man's freezer. Rosser added that the victim contracted the disease by handling infected rabbit tissue.

Former Odessa policeman accused of assault

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Aggravated assault charges have been filed against a former Odessa police officer who allegedly beat a 21-year-old woman Jan. 24 with a shotgun.

Carl Youngblood, 32, was arrested Tuesday morning after charges were filed Monday. A personal recognizance bond of $1,500 was set by Municipal Judge Bob Garcia and he was released Tuesday night.

Youngblood is charged with beating a 21-year-old Odessa woman after taking her from her home in the early morning hours of Jan. 24. He had been in Ector County district court the afternoon before for a hearing in which his attorney, Warren Heagy, attempted to get Youngblood's 10-year probated sentence for aggravated kidnapping overturned or a new trial called.

Heagy's motion was denied by District Court Judge Gene Ater when his witness, the victim in the kidnapping, failed to appear in court to testify that she had lied in the November trial of Youngblood and John Powell, 36, in which both men received 10 year's probation.

Youngblood was treated for a gunshot wound at Medical Center Hospital after the alleged Jan. 24 assault. The woman remained in emergency condition at the hospital after the incident, but has since been released.

She told investigators that Youngblood's shotgun had discharged as he moved to strike her a third time with the stock of the gun. Reports showed she was taken from her home by Youngblood at 4:26 a.m. and beaten outside another Odessa residence.

Police responded to a call from her residence at 5:27 a.m., where she had apparently escaped when the suspect was wounded. She was treated for injuries to her arm and ribs.

The woman's name is being held by police for security reasons.

Correction

The Reporter-Telegram erred in the headline of a story published Tuesday concerning an Odessa man sought by police.

The headline should have stated that police were seeking a man accused of staging the robbery of an Odessa pizza parlor.

We regret the error.

Democrats seek withdrawal from Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and other top House Democratic leaders are lining up support within their own party for a resolution calling for the "prompt and orderly withdrawal" of U.S. forces from Lebanon.

The Democratic plan does not set a specific timetable for the pullout, but calls for a progress report from the president to Congress within 30 days on what steps he has taken to accomplish the withdrawal.

Although the resolution would not carry the force of law, it represents a major departure from congressional sentiment last fall, when both the Democrat-run House and the Republican-led Senate voted to allow President Reagan to keep the Marines in Beirut through mid-April 1985.

O'Neill said the administration has not justified keeping Marines in Lebanon. "The policies of the administration are unexplained and the American people do not know why our Marines are there," he said late Tuesday after the resolution was drafted at a Democratic strategy session on Lebanon.

O'Neill was to present the withdrawal proposal today to a closed-door caucus of all 267 House Democrats. Party endorsement of general terms of the resolution was expected.

"We want to bring those boys home as quickly and as safely as we can," O'Neill said. He said Democratic leaders shied away from any formula setting specific dates for the withdrawal, such as the 60-day pullout being pushed by Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., preferring to leave that up to the administration.

But asked by reporters what "prompt and orderly withdrawal" meant, O'Neill responded: "prompt removal is immediate or right away."

House aides said the measure would be brought up within the next few days before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The panel's chairman, Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., was a principal drafter of the 8-page resolution.

It will be brought before the full House, possibly as early as next week but more likely not until mid-February, House leadership aides said.

The resolution, in its present form, states that a prompt withdrawal of U.S. troops is a desire of Congress. Thus, it would also require Senate approval.

Democratic House leaders decided not to try to write the proposal as a law because that would require presidential assent, and would surely provoke a veto that probably could not be overridden, aides said.

Judge to decide if jurors in nurse's trial can hear doctor's 'harrowing' tale

GEORGETOWN (AP) — A Kerrville doctor in whose office six children mysteriously went limp has a harrowing story to tell. Now a judge must decide whether jurors in the murder trial of the doctor's nurse can hear the story.

State District Judge John Carter previewed Dr. Kathleen Holland's testimony Tuesday. Jurors were sent home while lawyers in nurse Genene Jones' murder trial argued whether the "extraneous" offense testimony should be allowed.

Ms. Jones, 33, is being tried in the Sept. 17, 1982, death of Chelsea McClellan, a 15-month-old girl who died after receiving two injections from the nurse. Prosecutors say Ms. Jones injected the girl with a fatal dose of succinylcholine, a powerful muscle relaxant.

Ms. Holland calmly recalled Tuesday that Chelsea was one of six children who suffered mysterious seizures during the month Ms. Jones worked for her.

"IN RETROSPECT, there was a pattern of physical signs in each of the children, similarities," the doctor testified.

There also was a pattern of occurrences, according to her testimony. Each child fell ill after either being alone with Ms. Jones or getting an injection from her.

Chelsea was the first case. She came to the office on Aug. 24, 1982, one day after Ms. Holland opened her practice. The baby went limp while alone with the nurse, but recovered.

Ms. Holland on Tuesday gave this account of the other cases in which Ms. Jones is charged with injury to a child:

On Aug. 27, Brandy Benitez, 1-month-old, was brought to the office because of diarrhea. The baby was left alone with Ms. Jones in a treatment room. When Ms. Holland returned to the room, the infant "began looking more and more lethargic."

"THEN, SHE just all of a sudden went limp," the doctor said. The child recovered, but Ms. Holland said she could not, at the time, figure out what caused the incident.

Two Army medics testified about an Aug. 30 incident in their helicopter, sent to transfer a 7-year-old patient of Ms. Holland to San Antonio. Jimmy Pearson suffered heart disease and was severely retarded and deformed.

Sgt. David Maywhort said that Ms. Jones looked at the boy, decided he was "really going downhill," and injected something into his intravenous line. Maywhort said, contrary to the nurse's diagnosis, the boy seemed stable before the shot.

He also said Ms. Jones stethoscope examination of Jimmy was pointless because of the noise of the helicopter. Maywhort said he tried to get another medic to stop her, but Ms. Jones gave the shot before he could get to her.

Jimmy reacted within three minutes, according to Maywhort.

"WE NOTED extreme reduction in his respiratory rate and his color" looked worse, he said.

The helicopter landed in a pasture, Jimmy was treated, and the flight to San Antonio continued.

Jimmy died several weeks later. Ms. Jones is not charged in the death, only in the injury.

On Sept. 3, Misty Reichnau, 21-months-old, came to the office with an ear infection. The nurse was ordered to prepare an intravenous solution to give the girl. Ms. Jones was alone when she made the preparations.

"I was holding the child," Ms. Holland testified. "Shortly after starting the IV, the child, while screaming during the procedure, suddenly stopped screaming and went limp."

Misty later recovered.

ON SEPT. 17, according to earlier testimony, Chelsea died after a similar incident in the pediatrician's office. The girl was given two shots by the nurse. The injections — supposed to carry immunizations — included succinylcholine, prosecutors say.

Ms. Holland testified Tuesday that the next mysterious case arose that same day — while she was planning for Chelsea's autopsy. A hospital official told her to return to her office. There she found Jacob Green on a stretcher in an ambulance.

"I asked Genene what the hell happened," she testified.

"Jacob had a seizure," was the reply, she added.

The boy later recovered.

On Sept. 23, the doctor told her nurse to prepare an intravenous solution for 5-month-old Rolinda Ruff, who also was brought in with diarrhea symptoms. Shortly after the IV was started the girl "began crying quite loudly," Ms. Holland said.

Automobile insurance rate increase in effect

Austin (AP) — A 3.9 percent statewide increase in automobile insurance rates became efffective today.

The increase, approved Nov. 3 by the State Board of Insurance, will mean $88 million more in premiums to Texas insurance companies.

The impact in the 40 rating territories statewide range from an annual premium increase of $39 in Dallas County to a $17 decrease for the East Texas oil field area.

The insurance industry originally asked for a statewide increase of 11.4 percent, saying the number of claims continued to increase along with soaring health care costs.

U.S. Customs inspector buried

DEL RIO (AP) — About 600 mourners gathered in a light rain for a graveside service and U.S. Customs workers throughout the nation momentarily paused to honor a Customs inspector abducted at the border and then killed.

Richard Latham was buried Tuesday afternoon while a minister told his solemn relatives, colleagues and friends they should be better people for having known and worked with Latham.

Latham's body was found Saturday in a ditch north of Eagle Pass, a border town 55 miles southeast of the checkpoint where he was abducted Friday. Investigators said Latham, who was still wearing his uniform, had been handcuffed and shot once in the back.

Commissioner of Customs William von Rabb, who attended the graveside service, ordered flags at all U.S. customs offices flown at half staff for the next week in Latham's honor.

Immediately after the 30-minute service, customs personnel across the country stopped all office activity, including passenger processing at border checkpoints, at 2:30 p.m. to observe a minute of silence for Latham.

Meanwhile, authorities continued to look for two men they believe took part in the abduction.

A 26-year-old man is being held on kidnapping charges in connection with the abduction.

Latham was abducted Friday afternoon as he checked a car crossing into Del Rio from Ciudad Acuna, Mexico. Officers said four men in the vehicle probably abducted him after he saw money and jewelry that were taken in the armed robbery of a jewelry store.

A car believed used by the abductors had been found in Mexico, across the border from where Latham's body was dumped, an agency spokesman said Monday.

In a prepared release, customs officials said Latham was the grandson of James Wallen, a Customs patrol officer, who was also killed in the line of duty in Texas in 1923.

The abandoned vehicle was found sometime Monday in Piedras Negras, on the other side of the river from Eagle Pass, said customs spokesman Charles Conroy in Houston.

Jesus Reyes Ramirez, a 26-year-old suspect in the slaying, shot and killed himself in the back seat of another car when state troopers stopped the vehicle on a remote Southwest Texas highway Saturday, said Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells.

Rafael Calderon, 26, another passenger in the car, was arrested and charged with the agent's kidnapping, Terrell County Peace Justice Jannie McDonald said. Calderon was ordered held in lieu of $250,000 bond.

CBS' Safer subpoenaed in Geter trial

DALLAS (AP) — CBS News "60 Minutes" reporter Morley Safer has been ordered by a state district judge to testify in the armed robbery retrial of Lenell Geter and to bring with him all videotapes CBS made in connection with the case as well as all unaired tapes, or outtakes.

Judge John Ovard signed a subpoena on Tuesday that was requested by Dallas County prosecutors.

The program "60 Minutes" aired a 24-minute segment, narrated by Safer, on Geter's armed robbery conviction in December.

Geter, 26, a former E-Systems Inc. engineer, had been sentenced to life in prison in October 1982 for robbing $615 from a Balch Springs Kentucky Fried Chicken.

District Attorney Henry Wade offered, after the program aired, to drop charges against Geter if he passed a polygraph test administered by a Dallas polygraph examiner.

Geter's attorneys initially accepted the plan, but later declined the polygraph offer and the case was scheduled for retrial.

In New York, a spokeswoman for "60 Minutes" said Tuesday that network officials have not been notified of the order, but will fight it in court.

"We will file a motion to quash the order," said Ann Morfogen, director of communications for CBS News. "First, we consider all outtakes or unpublished tapes to be our property and not to be turned over. We will resist turning over our outtakes."

The subpoena specifies that Safer be present when Geter's trial begins April 9 in Dallas because he and "60 Minutes" "did extensive investigative work" in the Geter case.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Several means exist for treating high blood pressure

Dear Dr. Solomon: I got myself a new doctor when I moved and the first time I saw him he told me that my blood pressure was high and that I might need medicine for it. But instead of giving me anything, he told me to come back two weeks later. When I saw him the second time, he told me to come back again. Although I like other things about him, I'm thinking of changing doctors because of this, and I would like your opinion about it. — Randolph, Macon, Ga.

Dear Randolph: You are of course free to change doctors, but you may be acting hastily based on the information contained in your letter. I have had a number of patients who have elevated blood pressures at the time of a first visit, but whose pressures were normal on subsequent visits. From what you write, I would assume that your physician wanted to make certain that your blood pressure was really elevated before he initiated treatment that would have had to be continued indefinitely.

It is gratifying to be able to prescribe medication for high blood pressure, but it is better not to prescribe it if the condition can be treated by other means, such as by salt restriction, diet and exercise.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I would like to improve my appearance and I have the money to do so, but I don't want an operation. Is there any way to get rid of wrinkles without undergoing surgery? — Mrs. C.L., Bakersfield, Calif.

Dear Mrs. L.: According to Dr. E. Gaylon McCullough, of the University of Alabama Medical Center in Birmingham, wrinkles can be eliminated through use of a chemical face peel. He warns, however, that although the procedure is simple, there are potentially serious side effects, both physical and cosmetic.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Does a vasectomy cause a man to have less of a desire for sex? One of my bowling partners told me this, but I never heard it before and I'd really like to know if he knows what he's talking about? — Vance, Macon, Ga.

Dear Vance: Follow-up studies of men who have had vasectomies suggest the reverse, that there is often improved sexual performance following the operation. This is probably attributable to the man's lack of concern about the possibility of pregnancy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Every once in a while I read about how a woman will be able to choose the sex of the child she will give birth to. Is there anything to any of these claims I read about? — Mrs. D.L., Waynesboro, Va.

Dear Mrs. L.: Japanese researchers claim to have a method that will permit parents to choose sex of their child with an accuracy of from 85 tlo 100 percent; however, proof of their contention is still lacking.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am in my 50s, and it seems that a lot of men my age have trouble with an enlarged prostate. A friend of mine says that he read that zinc can help prevent this kind of trouble. Do you recommend that men my age use zinc, and can you also tell me where zinc can be purchased? — Herbert, Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear Herbert: Zinc can be purchased in many health food stores, but I do not recommend its use for treatment of an enlarged prostate gland. There is no evidence that zinc can be helpful for this condition.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you clear up a mystery for me? If a person who has diabetes watches his diet, gets a good amount of exercise, and is careful to take his insulin regularly, why does his blood sugar jump around all the time? — Anthony, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Anthony: As you indicate in your letter, diet, exercise, and the insulin dosage are essential ingredients of diabetic control. However, other factors may also play a part.

For example, insulin absorption depends in part on the injection site.

Absorption is greatest in the abdominal area, less in the arm, and still lower in the thigh. In addition, massaging the site of injection may improve absorption. Dr. Richard Sandler, of the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, points out that an individual who varies the site of injection may therefore experience day-to-day variations in control. Moreover, a person with diabetes who exercises shortly after injecting insulin significantly increases the effectiveness of the injection.

It also is possible, of course, that the patient is a brittle diabetic, one in whom the blood sugar is highly variable and generally unpredictable.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write him at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Louisiana losing land to sea

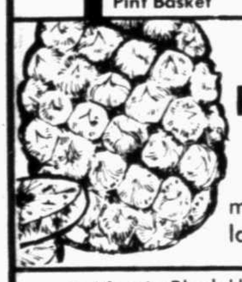

The most serious land-loss problem in the coastal United States is centered in the Mississippi River delta, where, since 1956, some 860 square miles of Louisiana have been lost. The process claims 40 more square miles annually and is accelerating.

School officials fail to notify parents of asbestos dangers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Local school officials, worried about their budgets or about "panic and hysteria," are widely ignoring a federal law requiring parents to be notified about dangerous asbestos in their school buildings, a government study says.

The study by the Environmental Protection Agency said that of 275 schools inspected by EPA, 190 were found to be violating the federal law on asbestos insulation. Of those 190, the EPA said, 134 had violated the requirement that parents be notified of the excess levels.

"Consequently, we can conclude that the parents of students exposed are in many cases unaware of the existence of such a hazard," the study said.

In many cases, the study said, school officials did not want to notify parents because of the money the school district would have to spend if forced to clean up the asbestos hazard.

School officials "are reluctant to notify parents because they believe this will result in a redirection of limited operating funds and-or create unnecessary panic and hysteria," the study said.

But whatever the reason, the EPA study added, it is undermining the program to get rid of hazards from asbestos that face millions of schoolchildren.

"The success or failure of the asbestos in schools rule, which relies heavily upon public involvement, is the degree to which information is communicated to the public," the study said. "...Poor public awareness has resulted in only slight activity on the part of the parent groups in schools."

The finding are included in an internal program review requested by EPA Deputy Administrator Al Alm and completed in December. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

Reagan runs presidential campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan, four times a candidate for the White House, is taking the tried and often successful route to a second term by pursuing "presidential" activities instead of a hectic campaign schedule.

In the spring of 1980, Reagan the candidate traveled three or four days a week and occasionally more, as he battled George Bush and John Anderson for the Republican presidential nomination. That was his third campaign, after a brief try for the nomination in 1968 and a full-fledged race against former President Gerald R. Ford in 1976.

Still, his pace four years ago was generally easygoing when compared with that of the eight Democrats seeking their party's presidential nomination this year. In 1976, it was even relatively relaxed when his opposition for the GOP nomination was the hard-running incumbent.

In 1984, no more than about six trips out of Washington are planned each month until the Republican National Convention in August.

A sand and gravel industry convention the president addressed Tuesday in Chicago is typical of the meetings without a clear-cut political purpose he will attend in the coming months, Reagan aides say.

Because no overtly political events were on the Chicago schedule, the trip was considered official travel and was being paid for by taxpayers. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the cost of the trip could not be estimated. Transportation alone aboard Air Force One and a Marine Corps helicopter cost at least $17,500, and several other aircraft were involved in the 5½-hour roundtrip.

Last week, when Reagan flew to Atlanta for a rally and reception for southern Republican Party officials, the $35,000 to $50,000 cost was picked up by the Reagan-Bush '84 re-election committee.

'Anti-tax fever' running high in Michigan

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The election of two Republicans to replace Democratic state senators recalled in a tax protest — giving the GOP control of the Michigan Senate for the first time in a decade — shows "anti-tax fever" is as strong as ever, the winners say.

"You have elected not a person, but an entire philosophy," state Rep. Rudy Nichols said Tuesday after winning one of the Senate seats vacated in November when state Sens. Philip Mastin and David Serotkin became the first legislators in Michigan history to be recalled.

"David Serotkin was kicked out of office on one issue — taxes," said the man elected to replace him, former Republican state Rep. Kirby Holmes.

Mastin and Serotkin were targeted by activists angry over a 38 percent state income tax hike which Gov. James Blanchard pushed through the Legislature last year to deal with deficits he pegged at $900 million.

Blanchard, a Democrat, and at least 15 other lawmakers also have been targeted for defeat for supporting the increase.

The election results gave Republicans a 20-18 edge in the Senate, the same margin held by Democrats before the recalls.

In an unofficial count from Mastin's district north of Detroit, Nichols defeated Democrat Stanley Kurzman, a lawyer, by a better than 2-1 margin, 18,599 to 7,838. Tisch Independent Citizens Party candidate E. Leonard Howarth received 897 votes, and Libertarian William Hollander trailed with 443.

In Serotkin's Macomb County district, Holmes, who lost to Serotkin in the 1982 election, beat Democratic state Rep. Mary Ellen Parrott by an even wider margin, 21,935 to 8,181. Tisch Party candidate Nancy Fagge received 1,046 votes, and Libertarian Virginia Cropsey had 691.

Democratic leaders said they were not surprised by Tuesday's results, blaming voter apathy and low turnout. In Mastin's district, only 18 percent of the registered voters cast ballots, and in Macomb County, northeast of Detroit, 23 percent of those eligible went to the polls.

"Going in, the odds were thin," said Sen. William Faust, a Democrat who loses the power he held as majority leader to appoint committee chairmen and control the flow of legislation.

Women battle for place in Israel's religious system

JERUSALEM (AP) — They are accepted in their native America, but in the spiritual center of Judaism where the ultra-Orthodox hold sway, they are a rarity and some would say a threat.

Kinneret Levine Shiryon, 28, and Gail Shuster-Bouskila, 31, are Israel's only women rabbis, although they are not recognized as such by the Orthodox religious hierarchy.

Both women are working quietly and separately to beat the system that shuns their Reform beliefs and denies them a place as religious leaders.

"When I came here and I started telling friends I was a rabbi, their reaction was much laughter," said Mrs. Shuster-Bouskila, who left Evanston, Ill., in 1978 to become Israel's first woman rabbi. "They just could not comprehend it. I was not a man with a beard and black coat."

Mrs. Shuster-Bouskila was ordained at the Reconstructionist Rabbinical College in Philadelphia, Pa., and interned at a small synagogue in Adelaide, Australia.

Only about 25 percent of the Jews in Israel consider themselves to be religious. But the Orthodox play a key political role. They also control nearly all houses of worship and run the rabbinical courts which have exclusive say over marriage, divorce, funerals and other religious rites.

Conservative, Reform and Reconstructionist movements that thrive in the United States are not officially recognized in Israel although there are a few small congregations.

Mrs. Shuster-Bouskila teaches at the Young Judean Jerusalem Institute and Mrs. Shiryon prepares adult education classes for the Reform congregation in a Tel Aviv suburb. Both lead tours through the Diaspora Museum in Tel Aviv, which is where they met after Mrs. Shiryon came to Israel from Los Angeles a year ago.

Mrs. Shiryon recalled in an interview the reaction of a group of Orthodox students who started shouting and berating her during a museum tour when she told them she was a rabbi.

"They told me I was destroying Judaism, and because I was a woman, the Jewish family as well. To the (Orthodox), if you are secular, you don't threaten them. But if you're progressive, you're a threat. That's the problem."

Mrs. Shuster-Bouskila sees education as a way to increase the ranks of Israel's non-Orthodox population, which accounts for less than 1 percent of the 3.4 million jews in Israel.

New lens gives hope to sufferers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A new binocular-type lens designed to correct tunnel vision has given new hope to sufferers around the world who had been told the ailment was incurable, according to officials at an eye clinic that fits patients with the new lens.

The new inch-long tube, unveiled two weeks ago under the name "New Horizon," fits on the outside of a regular eyeglass frame and "can make life almost normal for those suffering from the eye disease, retinitis pigmentosa," claims Dr. William Feinbloom, who invented the $2,000 lens.

Inquiries came from Israel, Canada, Greece, Yugoslavia, and England, as well as from coast to coast within the United States, from those who have tunnel vision as well as doctors trying to find new ways to help their patients, said Dr. Richard Brilliant, director of the Feinbloom Vision Rehabilitation Center at the Pennsylvania College of Optometry.

"It means there are a lot of visually impaired people looking for help and they are coming out of the closet as they realize they may be able to see better," said Brilliant. "They had long been told nothing could be done for their condition, and now they are finding out they might be helped."

Brilliant added that the response has been so overwhelming that the number of calls and letters hasn't been tallied yet.

Feinbloom described his device as a reverse telescope, made with cylindrical lenses, which doubles the horizontal field while retaining the vertical size.

The result is something like what can be seen through a wide-angle camera lens.

"This is the first time in history that we have anything to help people with tunnel vision, an inherited birth defect disease that is as old as modern man and even is described in the Bible," said Feinbloom.

"This lens is for people whose vision is very narrow, and in the United States alone there are about one million people with this condition," he said. "Their field of sight, instead of the normal 180 degrees, is 5 or 10 or 15 degrees, which is why it is called 'tunnel vision.'

"They may see very clearly straight ahead but when they walk in the street they bump into other people, or into objects like lamp-posts, making them very accident-prone. They cannot participate in sports or do routine household chores.

"When they go to the movies they can only see one-third or one-half of the screen, and when they watch television they usually can see less than half of the picture."

Mute gypsy resident of Los Angeles International Airport

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A year ago he was in protective custody on orders from juvenile authorities concerned over his gypsy life at Los Angeles International Airport. Today friends say he seems happy, healthy and glad to be back there.

Juan, the young mute whose residency at the nation's third-busiest airport captured national attention, "has become an unofficial member of the cast here," says Lt. John Zorn of the city Police Department's airport detail.

"He's found a niche somewhere," Zorn said in a interview.

"I'd say he probably knows hundreds of people here — not on a first-name basis because he can't speak — but he still has a kind of unofficial guardian who provides a home for him from time to time, and I wouldn't be surprised if other people take him in occasionally."

Juan's informal guardian is Mellie Thompson, an airport janitor who discovered him sleeping under a bench about three years ago. She brought him clothes, food and toiletries and when his situation became the subject of media reports and official concern, offered to adopt him.

Juvenile authorities took him into protective custody in December 1982 until a judge turned him over to Mrs. Thompson's temporary custody.

No one's ever pinned down where he came from, but a card found in his pocket bearing the name Juan Tovar Bohlete led authorities to conjecture he's Colombian. Although he communicates only through gestures, he understands Spanish and made sense of his court proceedings through an interpreter.

Mrs. Thompson was prepared to move him permanently into her home, but bone scan tests put his age at 19 — too old for formal adoption. Juvenile Court Judge Randolph Moore Jr. dismissed his case last February.

He headed right back to the airport and his former "job" — bringing luggage carts to stands that automatically dispense a quarter for each return.

Although she's on disability leave from her airport job, Mrs. Thompson still sees her young protege and maintains a room for him at her house.

A few weeks before Christmas she got a call from police in Phoenix who contacted her after Juan showed them photos and her telephone number.

She doesn't know how he got there either, but when police complied with her request to see if a local shelter would put him up, they discovered he'd already spent several nights at the one she'd suggested.

Author weaves dead dog into his works

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — It's been almost a year since old Pete, a Labrador retriever equally at home in a pub in New York's Hamptons or the South's wooded hills, wandered out into the front yard of Willie Morris' faculty row home and died.

"I lost a brother that day," said Morris, whose love for the black dog is woven into his literary works.

Morris, the former Harper's magazine editor-in-chief whose book, "North Toward Home," brings to life his childhood days in the Mississippi town of Yazoo City, is convinced Pete picked his own time to go last February.

"I think it was old age. He just went out in my front yard and died," Morris said in an interview with The Associated Press. "We buried him on a beautiful hill here in Oxford, and there's not a single day that goes by that I don't think about him."

Morris, a Rhodes Scholar and writer in residence at the University of Mississippi, said he had always had a dog, but after Pete, "I'll not get another. No, I'll get another wife first."

"Any person who has been quite close to a dog over many years understands my feelings," he said. "If a dog is really close to you, you'll spend more time with him than you do with your wife, children and friends.

"I've always had a dog," the author said. "In my boyhood it was old Skip who was very close to me. He was sort of the ranking intellectual of Yazoo County in that day.

"While Skip was the companion of my boyhood, Pete was the brother of my middle age. He was the property of no man."

Morris and Pete "hooked up" when they lived in Bridgehampton, a village on the eastern end of Long Island, N.Y.

Pete was already full-grown and already notorious.

"He was the mayor of Bridgehampton and everyone would call him 'Your Honor' or 'Mr. Mayor,' " Morris said. "He'd make his rounds, opening the doors to the bars with his nose. He would greet the trains that came from New York, always ready with the official welcome."

Morris said even after Pete agreed to move South, the people of Bridgehampton never forgot their famous native son.

"When he died they had a huge wake for him in Bobby Van's Saloon on Main Street," he said. "They even flew the flags at half-staff."

After Morris moved to Mississippi, it didn't take Pete long to gain new fame. At the time of his death, the dog held the title of deputy mayor under Oxford Mayor John Leslie.

"He took to eating collard greens and he became the same sort of presence at Oxford as in Bridgehampton," Morris said.

Morris said at the funeral someone remarked that Pete ranked with Rin Tin Tin and Lassie as the most famous dogs in America.

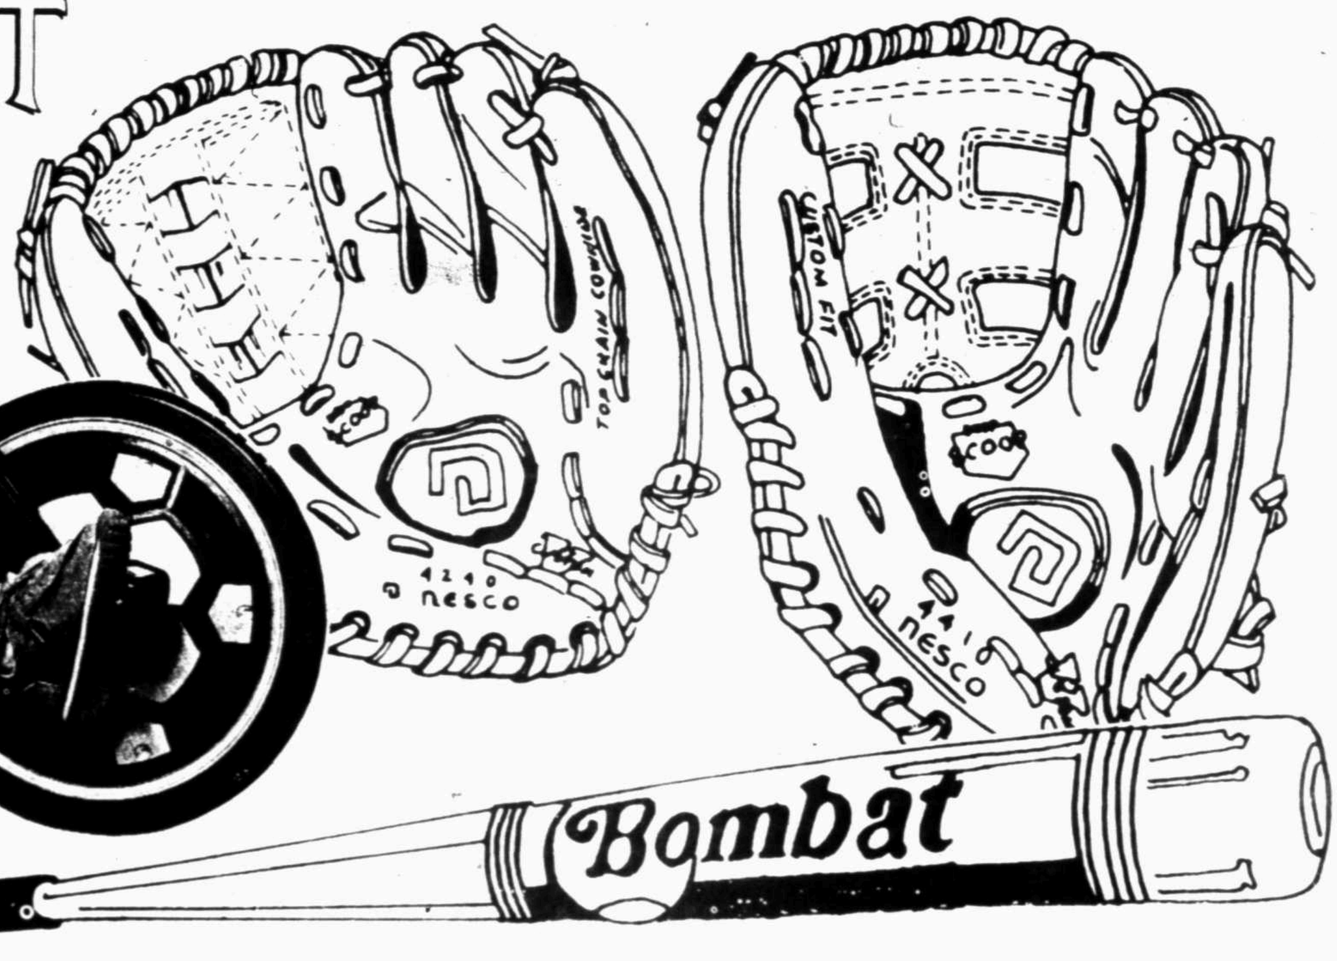

"But Pete really did not desire fame," he said. "People loved him because of his intelligence and his great worth.

History prevails

When we called Washington the other day to find out the status on a couple of bills concerning historic shipwrecks, the congressional aide we were talking with asked curiously, "Why is someone from Midland, Texas, interested in preservation of shipwreck sites?"

Fair question, particularly since the closest sea to Midland — the one that covered the entire region — disappeared eons ago. Nowadays one has to drive at least 40 miles to the east to see any appreciable surface water and then it's far from sea-class.

Maybe that's even more reason for us to be interested in the fate of the two bills that comprise the "Historic Shipwreck Preservation Act." Those bills — H.R. 3194 and S.B. 1504 — would remove historic shipwrecks from the realm of admiralty and salvage law, and place them under the protection of state laws. That's important because the increasing prevalence of salvage operations and collecting by sport divers endangers the historic shipwrecks.

We have nothing against either salvage operators or divers who are seeking fun and, perhaps, a rare relic. But shouldn't our society protect these historic shipwrecks for present and future generations rather than allow salvaged items to become the personal property of salvage operators? Aren't they worth more from the historical aspect than what little they would bring those who find them?

We think so and the act is a good way of achieving that protection. Even we "land-lubbers" from Midland realize that.

Reason returns

The National Labor Relations Board struck a blow for productivity last week with its ruling that employers can transfer work from a union to a non-union plant, provided there is not a labor contract prohibiting such moves.

Predictably, labor leaders decried the landmark ruling as being anti-union, and it certainly does represent a major change of course from a half-century of pro-labor rulings. Actually, this touch of common-sense realism confirms that President Reagan's NLRB appointments, now in the majority, are beginning to prevail.

The NLRB first dealt with the question of shifting work from union to non-union plants in 1982, when the board majority was still composed of pro-labor Carter appointees. The resulting ruling sent shockwaves through the nation's boardrooms. The NLRB decreed that Illinois Spring Co. had violated labor laws when, after failing to win wage concessions from union workers at an auto parts assembly operation in Milwaukee, the company moved the work to a non-union facility in McHenry, Ill., without union approval. The result of the ruling was predictable: The company incurred such large losses that it nearly went out of business before the union finally agreed to wage concessions.

Now, the Illinois Spring case has been reversed. Under the old ruling, labor could merely turn its back on management requests for wage concessions because it knew the company could not shift operations to a non-union facility. Under the new ruling, unions have an incentive to negotiate in good faith when the financial well-being of a company, and thus that of its workers, is jeopardized by non-productive labor costs, competition, or other factors.

Whether the work is ultimately done in union or non-union plants, the latest NLRB decision means increased productivity.

Another View:

Investing in teachers

With a shelf-full of recent reports bemoaning the state of American education, the topic has become a political excitement. But, thus far, precious few good ideas have emerged, either from President Reagan — who eschews additional federal aid in favor of restoring old-fashioned values, as if a choice between the two had to be made — or his Democratic opponents, who have contented themselves with urging "more."

Now comes a modest and sensible proposal for federal aid in one area where it can do some good: Enticing able college students into teaching careers. Legislation introduced by Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., would provide scholarships of up to $5,000 a year, awarded regardless of financial need, to would-be teachers graduating in the top 10 percent of their high school classes. Those who received scholarships would be obliged to teach a year in a public school for every year of scholarship support — or reimburse the federal government, with interest.

The need for able young teachers is evident, for the best and brightest these days are generally not being attracted to public education. The average prospective teacher scores 394 (out of a possible 800; 500 is the average for all students) on the verbal portion of the Scholastic Aptitude Test, 419 on the math portion. And these scores, lower than those recorded for almost any would be professionals, have been dropping during the past decade. Although the test scores are not determinative of teaching ability, the fact that relatively weak students are opting for the classroom reflects the prevailing — and quite wrong — attitude that the quality of public schools doesn't much matter.

Offering college scholarships sends a different and more positive signal about the national concern. The plan should attract better teachers — as many as 10,000 a year — into the schools. The success of the National Health Service Corps scholarships, which offer comparable aid to health professionals who commit themselves to stints in underserved areas, offers reason to believe that the program might work.

Not even generous scholarships will turn these recruits into career teachers, however. That will require higher salaries, better working conditions, and a commitment to excellence on the part of the schools. But at $75 million, this measure is a blue-chip investment in American education.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Syrians protect rich drug trade

WASHINGTON — The Syrians aren't clinging so stubbornly to Lebanon's Bekaa Valley just to protect their flank against Israeli attack. They're also protecting a multi-billion-dollar drug traffic involving top-ranking Syrian military and civilian officials.

Jack Anderson

High-quality hashish and heroin are smuggled out of the valley through Syria to various Western capitals. The smygglers are given safe passage by the Syrian military — in exchange for lucrative payoffs.

From intelligence sources, my associate Indy Badhwar has obtained a confidential report that details the whole sordid story. Here are the highlights:

— A pivotal role in the dope traffic is played by the feared Syrian secret service, Al-Istikhbaratt As-Souriat. It was the SS, as it is called, that brought in Turkish experts to grow opium poppies in the valley. The secret service uses the money from drugs to bankroll terrorist attacks and to recruit and control spies — as well as to line its own pockets.

— Like Chicago gangsters in the 1920s, Syrian generals have carved out their own exclusive territories to keep things on a businesslike basis. One dust-up did occur between two rival generals, Mohammed Ghanem and Ghazi Kenaan. Terms of a "peace treaty" gave Kenaan the take from smugglers in the Lebanese city of Shatura, while Ghanem exacts tribute at the Syrian border post of Al-Massna.

— The northern Lebanon truck routes are controlled by Syrian security chief Rifaat Assad, President Hafez Assad's younger brother. His minions share income from the northern drug roads with Ali Eid, an Alawite Moslem agent in the port of Tripoli. The drug convoys, under Syrian army protection, travel the bleak, sandy roads from Baalbek, Lebanon, into Syria through the remote village of Sarghaya.

— Syrian military helicopters have been used to ship tons of hashish from the town of Nihaa in the Bekaa Valley to Syria, whence it goes to Europe. Drugs bound for Alexandria, Egypt, are shipped from the Syrian-controlled Lebanese port of Anfa aboard the ship "Hassan," under the watchful eye of Syrian agent Mustafa Al Farass. Last summer, Egyptian officials seized 3,200 kilograms of Bekaa Valley dope.

— The list of officers enriching themselves from the drug trade is a veritable Who's Who of the Syrian army. The intelligence report lists names.

— Also fingered in the intelligence report were Syria's defense minister, Mustafa Talas, and Army chief Hikmat Al-Shahaby. They were reported to be dealing with Syria's top drug dealers, Ahmad Mustafa Al-Lakkiss and Hussein Abdel Ghani Tleiss.

— One top drug dealer, Jamil Abdel Karim Hamieh, from the Bekaa Valley village of Taraya, receives full Syrian military protection. "When his car passes through a Syrian checkpoint, the Syrian soldiers do not dare stop it or question him," the report states. "Hamieh also has close ties to defense minister Talas."

— Drug arrests involving the Syrian-controlled traffic have been made over the last two years in Egypt, Spain and Greece. Canadian and French Interpol agents have nabbed drug smugglers in Lebanon in an effort to stem the flow of dope to their countries.

BLUNDER OF THE WEEK — More than a year ago, three F-16 fighter planes crashed and the cause has never been nailed down. One reason is that the planes were not equipped with flight data recorders — the black boxes that are required on commercial airliners and help crash investigators figure out what happened.

The crash prompted the inspector generals of the Air Force, Army and Navy to recommend development of a standard flight data recorder to be installed in all military planes. But some of the Pentagon brass are resisting this eminently sensible move, on grounds that it would be too costly.

My sources suggest a different reason: that some military officials would rather not know if a crash was caused by defective equipment. That would embarrass not only the plane's manufacturer, but the Pentagon people who were supposed to make sure it was in A-1 condition.

The case of the missing black boxes will come up at hearings by the House Government Operations Committee.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Marxists protesting panel report

WASHINGTON — Latin Marxists are raising their voices against the Kissinger commission plan to stop the spread of communism in Central America.

William Giandoni

Protests were heard from the government-controlled media in Cuba and Nicaragua and from the leftist newspaper Unomasuno of Mexico City.

In other Latin quarters, though, the economic and military aid program that the bipartisan national commission on Central America recommended to President Reagan met with general approval.

Salvadorans and Guatemalans were upset that the commission specifically criticized their human rights violations. Both governments insisted that they are improving their human rights records.

However, President Alvaro Alfredo Magana of El Salvador was particularly appreciative of the commission's recommendation that increased military aid be provided his country as quickly as possible. The commission endorsed Defense Department estimates that $400 million be spent to break the stalemate between the government and the Marxist-led guerrillas there.

In Magana's opinion the 12-man group that former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger chaired gave "maximum priority to security and defense" of embattled El Salvador which has been fighting guerrillas for more than four years.

On the other hand, Unomasuno, a Mexico City daily that usually is critical of the United States and the Reagan administration, criticized the Kissinger report on two counts.

"First of all, it mistakenly assumed that the problem is part of the East-West confrontation," Unomasuno commented. Rather, the paper said, "the conflict (in Central America) is an inevitable consequence of age-old problems compounded by economic and social inequality in countries where the ruling classes, supported and coddled by U.S. administrations, have not even been able to turn those societies into nations.

"The commission also errs when it proposes that military assistance be coupled with massive economic aid in the amount of $8 billion. ... The key problem in Central America lies in achieving a political solution first and then formulating plans for economic development, not the opposite — proposing economic aid as part of a strategy based on military aspects," Unomasuno added.

Radio Sandino complained from Managua that "in the report, Nicaragua emerges as the first base for Cuban-Soviet expansionism on the American continent and as the main promoter of the Marxist-Leninist revolutionary processes of El Salvador and Guatemala."

Radio Havana said that the Kissinger commission report "merely supports President Reagan's position on Central America," and "emphasizes Ronald Reagan's views on the presumed East-West confrontation within the Central American conflict, a conflict considered to be a threat to U.S. interests."

The Marxists' appraisals would not be too far wide of the mark had they included mention of the fact that the commission was composed of six Democrats and six Republicans and that the report represents a bipartisan consensus.

President Reagan emphasized that point.

"They agreed that the United States has a vital interest in preventing a communist Central America because if our own borders are threatened, then our ability to meet our commitments to protect peace elsewhere in the world — in Europe, the Middle East and Asia — would be significantly weakened," the president said.

"The members also agreed that Nicaragua's regime has violated its promise to restore democracy," the president added. "And they warned that Nicaragua's export of subversion could undermine the stability of neighboring countries, producing waves of refugees — perhaps millions of them — many of whom would seek entry into the United States."

Mr. Reagan also repeated what the commission had said: "There may be an argument for doing much, and perhaps an argument for doing nothing. But there is no valid argument for doing too little," which was one of the commission's complaints about current U.S. aid programs in Central America.

"Well, I opt for doing enough," Mr. Reagan said. "Enough to protect our own security and enough to improve the lives of our neighbors so that they can vote with ballots instead of bullets."

Although the 132-page report provoked considerable criticism by Democratic members of the House and Senate, Robert S. Strauss, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, affirmed that "its basic thrust is sound."

Strauss added that "fundamental U.S. interests are at stake in Central America; that we must continue to be deeply engaged; that we need to develop a basic strategy that includes diplomatic, economic and military elements, and that, to be sustainable, any U.S. approach must first earn and then command broad bipartisan support."

Strauss and AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland were the two most prominent Democrats on the committee. Both signed the report, as did the 10 other members of the group.

Incomplete journalism

To the Editor:

Again, readers of the Midland Reporter-Telegram have been exposed to the product of biased journalism and incomplete research. A prime example of biting the hand that feeds. I refer to two related articles in the MRT of Jan. 22, 1984, entitled, "To Merrill Family, Backyard Well Means 'Nightmare'", and "State Law Favors Mineral Rights."

By actual measurement, 41 column-inches were devoted to these two articles (not counting the accompanying picture). Less than one column-inch cited an example proving drilling can be done without undue violation of rights of nearby residents; the balance was devoted to negative, sensationalized statements. Is this an example of fair presentation of all aspects of an issue?

Also, to compare oil field operations in the Midland area with the tragic event which occurred near Denver City is an absolute travesty. A discussion with any knowledgeable oilman would have revealed the error in attempting to make such an analogy.

I don't doubt that the Merrill family has endured some inconvenience and discomfort, but in the name of reason, let's not use this incident to condemn all oilfield operations nor to unnecessarily inflame the emotions of those who have to rely on articles in your paper for "the facts."

Join fight

To the Editor:

Our religious freedom of teaching our children definitely is under attack.

There are many schools like Faith Baptist Church School across our nation that don't have government control.

Thousands of babies are murdered in abortion, but ironically if you think you live in a free country, take your child out of the government school.

Because of love, much concern, hard work and sacrifice, many parents have decided against the humanistic materials of the state — not out of convenience but out of conviction of their faith.

My sister, for one, is enjoying her sixth year of freedom teaching her children at home. No, she is not a licensed certified teacher, but her children exceed any other child's grade level in the quality of education they are receiving on a one-to-one basis.

Whether or not your legal right is challenged depends on how you go about your school, as all states honor all other states' legally-established schools.

Join us in the fight for God-centered home school education. Parents don't have to hide, but can be proud of their school. After all, the government was set up to protect its people, not for educational purposes.

DWI need

To the Editor:

Police Chief Gideon has been quoted as having said that charging drunk drivers with "public intoxication" has been done as a time-saving measure.

It's been my past experience working as a hospital registered nurse that the police who also deal with the carnage caused by drunk drivers quickly become motivated to make DWI arrests, and see them prosecuted.

What's happened in Midland? How have our priorities gotten so mixed up? Surely there is nothing more important than making a DWI arrest and following up. More lives can be saved by this one area of law enforcement than anything else the police department does.

I really don't care how much anybody drinks. But when he drinks and drives, it must become a public concern. I, for one, want strict enforcement of our DWI laws.

How about it, Chief Gideon?

More Americans going HMO way

BOSTON (AP) — By the millions, Americans are abandoning traditional pay-as-you-go health care and taking their aches and ills to the medical supermarkets of the future: health maintenance organizations.

Already, 12½ million people in the United States belong to these pre-paid group plans. And one expert predicts this will grow to 50 million within the next 10 years.

"I think 90 percent of the population will be in plans of this type over the next couple of decades," says Dr. Paul M. Ellwood Jr., president of InterStudy, a health policy research group in Excelsior, Minn.

People who join these plans, known as HMOs, give up their freedom to go wherever they want and see whomever they please for whatever ails them. They must accept the doctors on the HMO's payroll.

But in return, there are big advantages: HMOs are cheaper than ordinary insurance. And they provide one-stop care for everthing from sore throats to childbirth, allergies to open-heart surgery.

In exchange for their flat fees, subscribers get as much care as they need. Everything within reason is covered, and there are no deductibles. Even annual physical exams are included at no extra charge.

The HMOs say they can provide more care for less money because they are more efficient than traditional, fee-for-service care, and they strive to keep their patients out of the hospital. In fact, HMO subscribers spend 30 to 50 percent less time in hospitals than do people covered by ordinary health insurance.

In 1973, there were just 72 HMOs in the United States. That year, a federal law made it mandatory for large employers to allow their workers to choose between HMO coverage and ordinary insurance, such as Blue Cross-Blue Shield. It offered grants and loans to get HMOs started and abolished state laws that prohibited them.

Now there are 280 plans across the country. They enroll 1 in 10 people in Boston, 1 in 7 in California and 1 in 3 in Minneapolis-St. Paul.

The national enrollments are doubling about every five years. Non-profit organizations, hospitals, private insurers, group practices, Blue Cross plans and investor-owned companies are getting into the business.

And it's big business.

The Boston area is one of the nation's most competitive HMO markets with 12 different plans. Eight have been around for three years or less. The biggest and oldest is the Harvard Community Health Plan.

The Harvard plan costs $184 a month for a Boston family, while Blue Cross-Blue Shield Master Medical insurance costs $242. This means that if an employer contributes $184 toward each worker's health care, the HMO patient pays nothing extra, while the Blue Cross enrollee must make up the difference — $58.

The potential big losers in the HMO boom, obviously, are the nation's independent Blue Cross plans.

HMOs offer choices

BOSTON (AP) — People interested in joining health maintenance organizations are often bewildered by a baffling assortment of competing plans that are set up in different ways.

All these health maintenance organizations, or HMOs, provide comprehensive care for a set fee.

Here are the major varieties:

—Staff model. The HMO owns clinics and sometimes even a hospital. It hires full-time doctors and pays them salaries. The HMO also contracts with outside specialists and hospitals for non-routine care.

—Group model. The HMO contracts with a large group practice to provide basic care. The group often owns a hospital, where the HMO patients are usually treated.

—Network model. The HMO contracts with two or maybe even five or six group practices to take care of patients.

—Independent practice association model. The HMO contracts with a variety of doctors, many of them in private practice, throughout the community. They see HMO patients in their private office and may also provide traditional fee-for-service care to non-subscribers.

Health care better than apple

WILLOW GROVE, Pa. (AP) — The shiny red apple given to every new subscriber to United States Health Care Systems is not meant to keep the doctor away.

Instead, the symbol used by USHCS and the health maintenance organizations it runs in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Florida illustrates the system's slogan: "Better than an apple a day."

"In our program you don't have to be sick to get the benefits," said USHCS President Leonard Abramson. sitting behind a big desk lit-

"We want to keep people out of the hospital, so we encourage them to see the doctor to stay well," he said in a recent interview. "We pay for regular checkups. We encourage them.

The system's current enrollment of 215,000 — 190,000 in Pennsylvania and 25,000 in New Jersey — could double in a year with successful penetration in the two new Florida markets of Orlando and Jacksonville.

He said his firm's profits almost quadrupled in 1983, compared with 1982's figure of less than $1 million, and revenues doubled to approximately $100 million.

Dr. Jeffrey Weiner, USHCS senior vice president for medical delivery, said HMOs were spreading because the cost of health care was becoming a national concern.

Castro turns 'prison' into school

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

LA FE, Cuba — On a forlorn island that was once his prison, Fidel Castro has built one of his boldest revolutionary projects — a vast "city of schools" where thousands of youngsters from around the world are drilled in math, mechanics and Marxism.

Before a recent physics lesson here on the Isle of Youth, three dozen teenagers from Mozambique jumped to their feet and recited the island's philosophy.

"The school is the center for forming new cadres!" the young Africans boomed out, and then sat back down for five hours of classes taught mostly by Cubans.

Thirty years ago, when this sandy place 30 miles off Cuba's south coast was called the Isle of Pines, Castro was imprisoned here for rebel activities.

Later, as his revolution neared its 1959 triumph, he told comrades he had a dream of someday establishing an "academic city" for 20,000 children in education-poor Cuba. But for years after the revolution, the Isle of Pines was a notorious prison for anti-Castro Cubans.

The Cuban Communist leader, however, has outdone his own original vision for the island.

Renamed for its new mission, the Isle of Youth today has 56 schools and 30,000 pupils — 17,000 Cubans and 13,000 others from seven African countries, Nicaragua and South Yemen.

The facilities are spread over 700 square miles among the neat green rows of citrus plantations where the students, aged 10 to 17, work half the day.

This massive experiment in international education, whose budget (the equivalent of $18 million) is almost entirely Cuban-financed, complements Cuba's "socialist solidarity" ventures overseas, including the stationing of more than 20,000 Cuban troops in Angola to help that African nation's Marxist government battle insurgents.

"These schools are needed because these countries were exploited in the colonial era, and were left with poor economic and social situations," Juan Fernandez, a spokesman for the island administration, told a visiting reporter.

"We're trying to give these students the training they can't get at home."

Mathematics, sciences and technical subjects dominate the curriculum. But it also includes history and political education courses taught by the students' countrymen and colored with the ideology, generally Marxist, of the home nation's dominant political group.

"We could be a country like Cuba," Nicaraguan student Javier Banegas Zuniga, 17, whose leftist-led land is heavily supported by Cuba, told the reporter. "Seeing how in Cuba the people work for the people — that's what I would like for Nicaragua."

In upper grades, some foreign students also receive military training — marksmanship, automatic rifle disassembly, drill formations, first aid — at their governments' request.

The schools and their intensive work-study programs have fed the Isle of Youth's spectacular growth, from a population of 10,000 in Castro's prison days to 90,000 today.

The arrival of planeloads of worker-students — the first off-island Cubans came in 1971 and the first foreigners in 1977 — has supplied the labor force for expanding the island's grapefruit industry. The citrus groves now cover more than 30,000 acres among the tropical island's steep-sided hills and feathery pines.

In alternating teams, the students spend half the day in classes, then change from red-neckerchiefed uniforms to workclothes and blue rubber boots for 3½ hours of digging, tending and picking in the sun-baked fields.

In the evenings, they have study periods, cultural or sports activities, and about an hour's free time before lights out in their large, crowded barracks-like dormitories.

Each country has its own schools — standardized, two-story concrete-block structures. The biggest foreign contingents are the 4,000 youths from Angola, 3,000 Mozambicans and 1,000 from Nicaragua. Other students come from the Congo, Ethiopia and Ghana in Africa, the Arab nation of South Yemen, and the revolutionary movements trying to establish new nations in South-West Africa, also called Namibia, and the old Spanish Sahara territory.

At the 25th of September School — named for the date in 1962 when Mozambique's independence struggle against Portugal began — the faculty for the 580 Mozambican students consists of 31 Cubans who teach sciences, languages and other subjects, and 10 Mozambican teachers who hold classes in geography, history, political education and Portuguese.

The 5,000-volume library's shelves are packed with tomes on Marxism-Leninism. But they also offer "Jaws," "Catcher in the Rye" and Edgar Allan Poe stories.

The pupils generally spend three or four years on the Isle of Youth, and most do not return home for vacations. Some — 10 percent of a recent Mozambican graduating class of 200, for example — go on to university or technical school in Cuba.

When they finally return home, students told the reporter, they want to work as mechanics, agronomists, electrical engineers and doctors, among other fields.

"It depends on what choice they make — what my country needs," said a 16-year-old Nicaraguan girl, Flor de Maria.

The youths also will take home some strong opinions about the United States.

"The U.S. government wants to dominate the world, and maintain the U.S. people under a system of poverty," 15-year-old Alejandro Romero firmly lectured the American visitor in a classroom at the Nicaraguan school, where lessons begin with the shouted slogan, "From the frontiers, they shall not pass!" — a reference to the Nicaraguan government's current battle against U.S.-supported guerrillas.

Though already huge, Castro's vision of a "city of schools" is not completely fulfilled.

Children from the small African nation of Cape Verde are scheduled to arrive soon, four new schools are being built, and the Isle of Youth master plan calls for 20 more.

Shultz helps Venezuela mark democracy

CARACAS, Venezuela, (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz arrived here today to help celebrate 25 years of democratic rule after telling leaders in El Salvador the same path is open to them if they defeat "barbaric extremism."

Shultz will attend the inauguration Thursday of President-elect Jaime Lusinchi, a ceremony that will mark the fourth consecutive peaceful transfer of power here from one party to another.

Shultz's visit to this bulwark of Latin American democracy followed a day-long stay in El Salvador. There, he declared Washington's neutrality in the March 25 presidential elections, despite long-standing U.S. hostility to one major candidate, Roberto d'Aubuisson, the country's leading rightist politician.

D'Aubuisson was among six candidates who attended a lunch Tuesday hosted for Shultz by the provisional president, Alvaro Magana. Shultz told reporters afterward he had a "straightforward" discussion with d'Aubuisson. Asked whether he was reassured by the encounter, Shultz replied that he was.

His conciliatory tone contrasted sharply with the way the State Department has dealt with d'Aubuisson since 1980.

Helicopter parts shipment readied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is preparing to ship $2 million in military helicopter parts to Guatemala's rightist government, moving ahead on a sale delayed last year because of an upsurge in human rights abuses.

State Department officials said Tuesday the sale will go through even though the Guatemalan government's human rights performance has not shown any clear improvement. It was not certain, however, exactly when the UH-1H "Huey" helicopter parts would be sent.

One U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Guatemala's human rights situation has "not gotten any worse" since President Efrain Rios Montt was ousted in a military coup last August, and that the administration felt it was "legally committed" to the sale, initially approved a year ago.

Meanwhile, two private human rights groups, Americas Watch and the American Civil Liberties Union, claimed that recent U.S. pressure has failed to curb government-sponsored killings in El Salvador. They charged that human rights abuses there are "as bad as ever."

"November and December 1983, when that (U.S.) pressure was particularly strong, were among the worst months of the year if measured by the numbers of political murders tabulated by the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of El Salvador," the two groups said in a 74-page report.

Last November, the State Department delayed final permission for the Guatemala helicopter parts sale to signal displeasure over the suspicious deaths of two employees of a U.S.-funded educational program and the disappearance of another. The period had also seen an upsurge in right-wing death squad activity allegedly linked to the government.

But a department official said that despite the two-month sale delay, the Guatemalans have not curbed death squad activity or conducted a "good-faith" investigation into the killings of Guatemalan nationals employed by the U.S. Agency for International Development.

'Dogs roast Steers

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

What started out as a close first quarter encounter quickly broke down into a one-sided District 4-5A meeting Tuesday night as the Midland High Bulldogs pounded the hapless Big Spring Steers, 81-51 at Chaparral Center.

Midland High's Chris Rooker hit a 15 foot jump shot just before the first quarter buzzer to break the first and final tie of the ball game. His two-pointer gave the Bulldogs a 16-14 lead.

That small margin quickly grew in the second quarter and spread like a bad rash until the final fourth quarter seconds elapsed. The Bulldogs went up by a 40-26 count at the half and led 56-37 after three.

With 5:30 remaining in the game, Chris Herbert hit one of two free throws to give the Bulldogs their biggest lead, 71-37.

EARLY IN the ball game it didn't seem like a typical Midland High team. The press defense, though effective, didn't seem to have the hustle or pressure of games past. The offense looked like it was crawling instead of its usual all out run.

It seemed that way to MHS coach Jack Stephenson too.

"We've been fighting, like everybody else in West Texas, the flu and colds," said Stephenson. Chris Rooker is the only player who hasn't been sick this week."

Among the ill was Fred Franklin, but you couldn't tell it by his shooting eye. The 6-foot-3 senior hit 7-of-10 from the field and continued shaking off his free throw problems with a 5-of-7 performance from the line for a game- and season-high 19 points.

"Fred has been sick," said Stephenson. "Yesterday he was down with a 103 fever and he comes out and shoots 7-of-10."

Healthy Rooker dropped in 7-of-16 field goal attempts and was perfect from the line in four tries for 18 points while Darrell Davis added 12 points and Kenneth Johnson 11. Johnson led the Bulldog rebounders with six while Davis and Willis Ratliff hauled in five each. Rooker was the leading thief with four steals.

"That was our 23rd win and if you had told me that when we started this season with not one starter back I'd have said, 'do you want to bet a new car,' or something like that. They've just come a long way," said Stephenson about his 23-6 Bulldogs.

THE ROAD the Bulldogs have left to travel for a berth in the upcoming playoffs became a bit shorter Tuesday night. MHS is alone in third place at 6-3, but only one game out of first.

Going into the Big Spring meeting, the Bulldogs trailed Abilene High by two games and Odessa Permian by one. However, the Panthers knocked off the Eagles in Abilene, 72-58, to move back into a tie for first place at 7-2. It was Midland High and the 21-point, 65-62 come-from-behind victory over Permian Friday night that dropped the Panthers out of first place. Midland Lee, a 61-48 winner over San Angelo, remains in the hunt at 5-4.

The Bulldogs travel to Abilene Friday to take on Cooper at 8 p.m.

IN JUNIOR varsity action, Big Spring came away a 78-69 winner over MHS while the Bulldog sophs posted a 51-37 victory.

Elvin Mackey led the Bulldog JV with 26 points followed by Mike Lyon with 12 and Anthony Deande with 10.

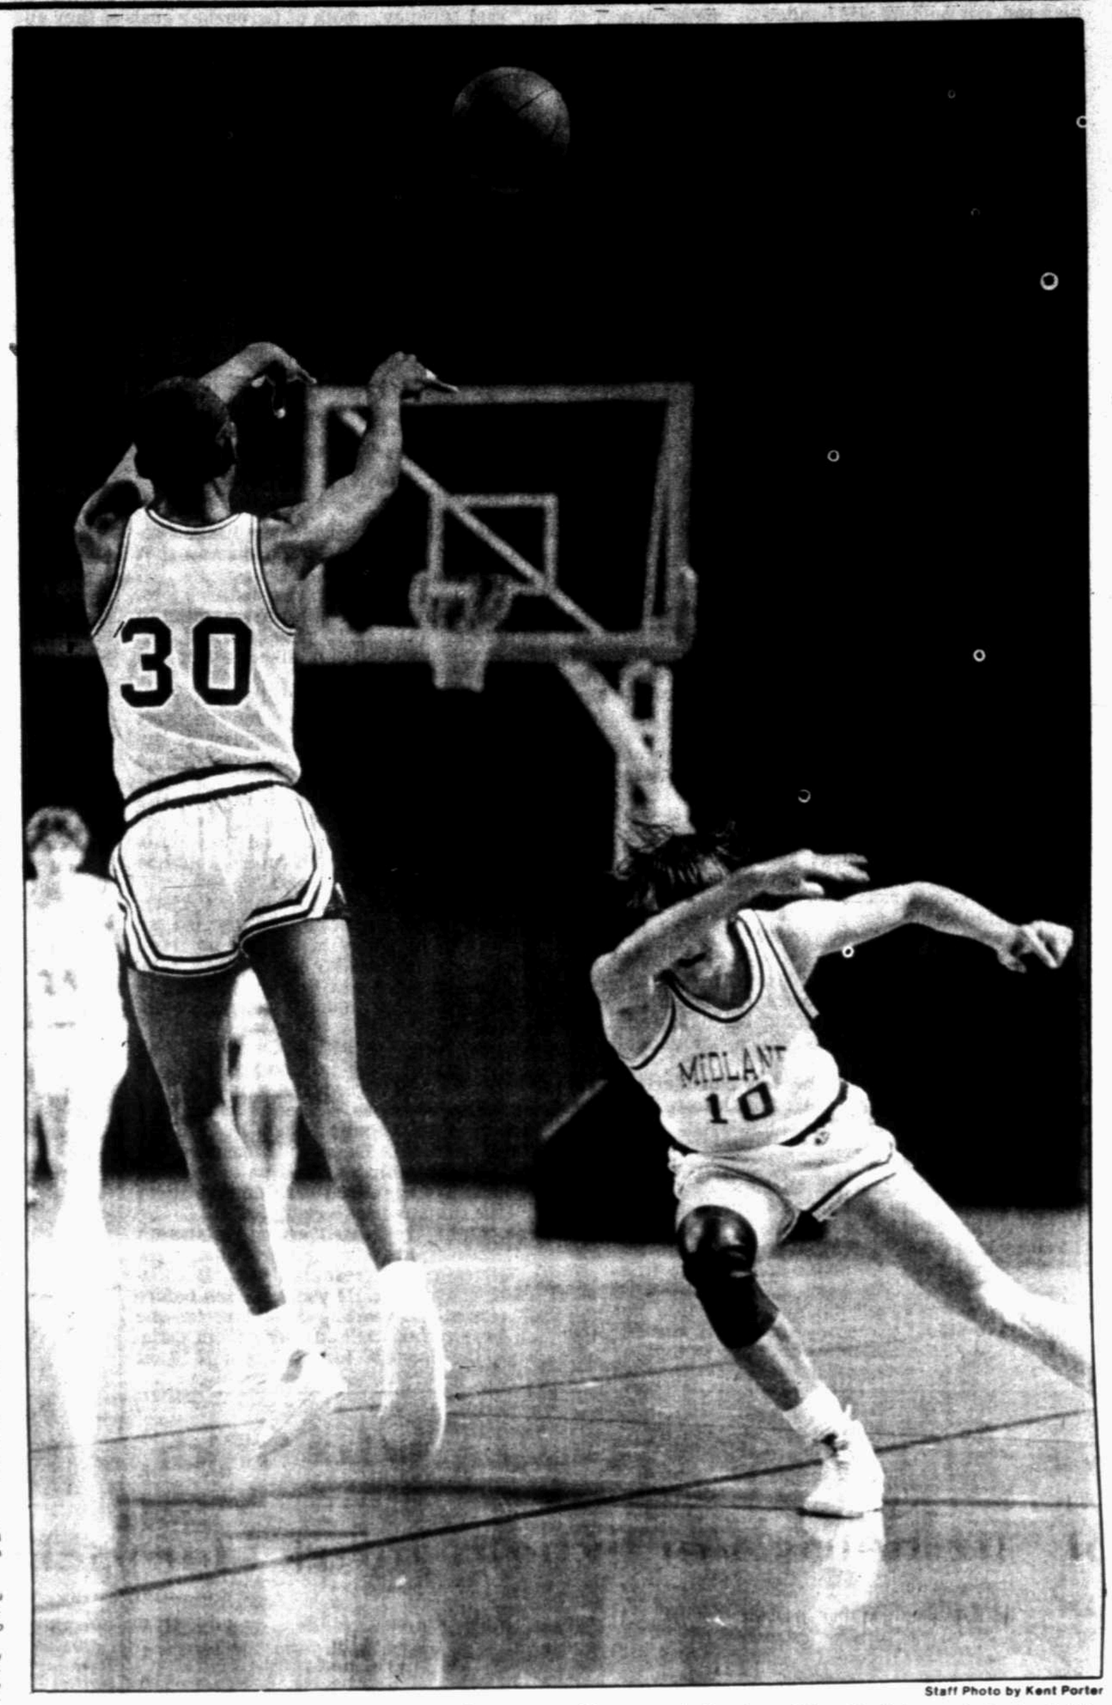

For the sophomores, Jaime Salazar scored 23 points for Midland.

Rebs stay alive, rip 'Cats

SAN ANGELO— With 1:08 left to play in the fourth quarter and San Angelo cutting into Midland Lee's 10-point third quarter lead, a little fracas broke out between Rebel Tyrone Thurman and Bobcat Greg Thomas.

The referees called a jump ball on a Thomas steal attempt and what could have been a Rebel turnover turned into five technical foul free throws and a Lee ball out of bounds.

Thomas was hit with the first of three technical fouls in the game when he pushed Thurman after apparently catching a Thurman elbow in his side. When the refs made the call, San Angelo assistant coach David Moody started yelling and two more technicals were called.

Derek Westbrook missed the technical free throw called against Thomas so Alvin Henry was called upon for the next four. He hit them and it turned a six-point game into a 61-48 Lee victory.

It also kept the Rebels hopes of a playoff berth alive while severely damaging those of the Bobcats. Lee is now 5-4 in District 4-5A play while San Angelo fell to 4-5.

Lee took a 14-13 lead in the first quarter of the game and upped it to 28-21 at the half. The Rebels finished the third quarter on top by 10, 41-31.

Westbrook, who hit 8-of-12 field goals, led the way for Lee with 19 points while Henry scored 13 and Thurman 10.

For San Angelo, Brian Ross was even hotter with a 9-of-11 field goal spree for 19 points while Zane Hoppe scored 14.

ELSEWHERE IN the 4-5A, Odessa Permian returned to the top of the league standings with a 72-58 victory over Abilene High. The two teams are now tied at 7-2 and lead 6-3 Midland High and 5-4 Lee in the standings.

Odessa High also came out on top Tuesday night as the Bronchos came away with an overtime victory over Abilene Cooper, 69-68.

The Eagles jumped out to a 15-12 lead over Permian in the first quarter of play only to see it evaporate by halftime. The Panthers won the second period 24-15 and outscored AHS in both second half quarters to gain the victory.

Terry Williams and Troy Nini topped the Permian scorers with 16 points each while Orlando Ontiveroz added 12 and Paul Logan 11. AHS was led by Cliff Johnson with 13 points.

With OHS leading 59-55 with 16 seconds remaining in regulation, Cooper's Derek Turnbull hit a jump shot to cut the margin to two.

The Cougars came up with a steal after the in-bounds pass and Turnbull drove the lane and hit a layup with six seconds left only to have it negated by a charging foul. The Cougars stole the ball a second time and Turnbull went back into the lane and hit the tying layup.

Odessa High built up a 69-66 lead with 12 seconds left in overtime on a pair of Bill Davis free throws. The Bronchos then gave up an uncontested layup to Greg Martin and let the clock run down to zero to hold on for the win.

Odessa's Joe Terry led all scorers with 25 points while Boyd Cowan chipped in 15. Turnbull scored 20 for the Cougars and Joe Melton added 17 and Martin 11.

When Bob Gibson set a World Series record by striking out 17 Detroit Tigers in the opening game of the 1968 World Series in St. Louis, he fanned the side in the ninth inning.

Three-pointer lifts Cavs

By The Associated Press

Cliff Robinson was the "last option." He turned out to be the hero.

"When Lonnie (Shelton) was taking the ball out, I said I'd be the outlet," Robinson said. "The play was supposed to go to World (Free) or Paul (Thompson). But they were covered."

Instead, Robinson took an inbounds pass, whirled and threw up his first three-point attempt of the season.

"I was hoping it would go in," said Robinson. "God brought that one home."

The three-pointer, which came at the buzzer in overtime, lifted the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 114-112 National Basketball Association victory over the Detroit Pistons.

"We had the game won," said Detroit Coach Chuck Daly, who saw his team lose for the fifth time in its last six games. "We were in the four corners, — that's hold the ball until you get fouled, and you try to avoid going to the free throw line."

Detroit had the ball with a 112-111 lead and 24 seconds left in the extra session. But John Long shot — and missed — with Cleveland grabbing the rebound with one second to go.

Robinson's winning three-pointer gave him 32 points for the night along with 21 rebounds. Kelly Tripucka led Detroit with 24 points.

Bucks 123, Warriors 119

Sidney Moncrief sank two free throws with eight seconds left in overtime to boost Milwaukee past Golden State. The victory snapped a three-game Milwaukee losing streak and handed the Warriors their fifth straight loss.

Moncrief finished with 31 points, and had sent the game into overtime when he hit a reverse layup with 12 seconds to go in regulation.

Purvis Short had 31 points for the Warriors.

NBA

Jazz 98, Sonics 94

Darrell Griffith scored five points in overtime, giving him 21 for the game, to help lead Utah past Seattle. Andrian Dantley led all scorers with 34 points, including a 15-footer that gave the Jazz a 97-90 lead with 40 seconds remaining.

Jack Sikma led Seattle with 20 points.

Lakers 129, Trail Blazers 124

Five Lakers scored 20 or more points — led by 23 each by Jamaal Wilkes and rookie Byron Scott — as Los Angeles defeated Portland.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 21 points, scoring in double figures for the 500th consecutive game in his 15-year career, while Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Bob McAdoo each added 20.

Portland's Calvin Natt led all scorers with 33 points.

Rockets 122, Kings 107

Rookie Ralph Sampson scored 33 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to pace Houston over Kansas City.

The 7-foot-4 Sampson scored the Rockets' first six points and finished the first period with 12.

Mike Woodson had 26 points for the Kings, who fell behind by 17 points in the third period and could get no closer than nine the rest of the way.

Knicks 117, Spurs 113

Bernard King tied his NBA career-high regular-season game total of 50 points as New York fought off San Antonio.

The Spurs were paced by George Gervin, who had 41 points, including his 23,000th career point. But the Spurs were able to score only three points in the final 4½ minutes of the game as the Knicks' defense stiffened.

Golden Gloves under way

ODESSA — In the first two nights of boxing in the 38th annual Golden Gloves at Ector County Coliseum, there are no Midlanders on the cards. In fact, there are only two in the whole show.

Thursday night, flyweight Amos Taylor of Midland will seek his bid for a Regional Golden Gloves title and a bid for state when he faces last year's light-flyweight, Robert Corrillo of Pecos Barstow in the Open division.

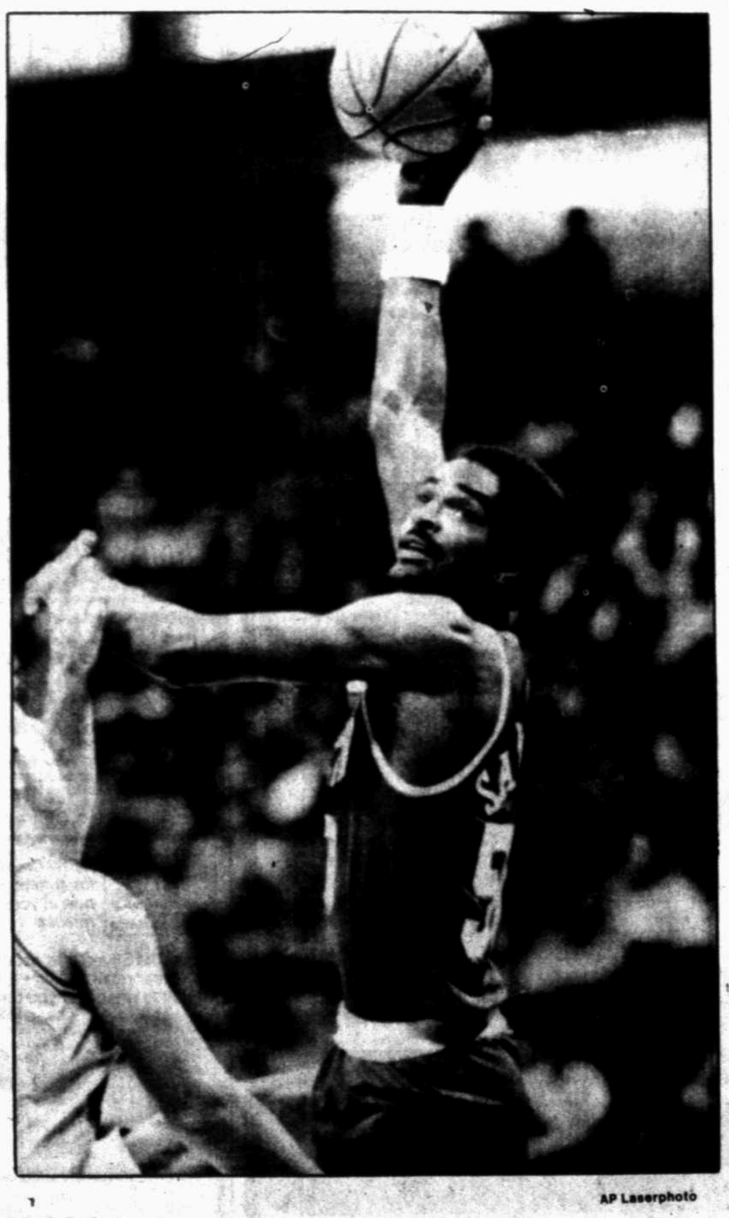

If he wins, Thursday, Taylor will advance through the draw until Monday's finals.

The only other Midland rep is 119-pounder Tom Dwyer, representing Midland Lee in the high school division. He'll be facing Joel Padilla of San Angelo Aztec in the finals Monday night. The two were the only entrants at the 119 level.

Normally, the fights would run from Tuesday through Saturday, take Sunday night off and resume with the finals on Monday. However, this year, due to a scheduling foul up, Ector County Coliseum isn't available on Saturday so Friday night's card will be the last before the weekend.

The junior high football division finals will be held Friday night before the weekend break. Fights begin each night at 7:30 p.m.

The State Golden Gloves for Open Division winners will be held in Forth Worth's Will Rogers Coliseum, March 13-17. The winners at State will advance to the national tournament in St. Louis on April 16-21.

Houston's Ralph Sampson exploded for 33 points in the Rockets' win at Kansas City.

Terps edge 'Hoos, 67-66

By The Associated Press

Without Adrian Branch, the Maryland Terrapins weren't the same team. But as far as Terry Holland was concerned, it didn't matter.

"It was another tough loss for us," the Virginia coach said after Tuesday night's 67-66 loss to the nation's 10th-ranked college basketball team. "We can compete with anyone — but we just can't get over the hump and beat anyone. The toughest part is getting so close and still not beating people."

Actually, the Cavaliers have a 12-5 record overall, but all five losses have come in the Atlantic Coast Conference. With a 2-5 record, the Cavaliers are a far cry from the Ralph Sampson-led teams of the previous four years.

The Terps, meanwhile, managed to win despite the absence of Branch, their starting guard who was suspended Monday by Coach Lefty Driesell along with substitute Steve Rivers after the two were arrested Saturday on a misdemeanor charge of possession of $10 worth of marijuana.

"I thought it was a good win under the circumstances," Driesell said. "The kids played with a lot of poise."

Jeff Adkins led Maryland with 15 points, including the game-winning free throws with three seconds left, while Keith Gatlin, starting in place of Branch, scored 14 points for the Terps.

"He had a good game," Driesell said of Gatlin. "He got some key baskets for us."

Mark Fothergill's short hook from five feet gave Maryland a 65-64 lead. Rick Carlisle then missed a jumper from the right corner for Virginia, and Adkins hit a pair of free throws to wrap up the Terrapins' 14th win in 17 starts.

Virginia, losing its third straight game for the first time in four years, was paced by freshman forward Tom Sheehey with a career-high 27 points.

Top Twenty

Wayman Tisdale scored 28 points and Tim McCalister had 27 to lead Oklahoma's rout of Kansas. The Sooners built a 59-37 halftime lead over the Jayhawks and never led by fewer than nine points the rest of the way as they improved their record to 17-3.

Kansas was paced by Carl Henry with 18 points and Kelly Knight with 17.

Maloney ties record; Wales wins NHL All-Star 7-6

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Don Maloney held a silver platter in his hand, but nothing was handed to him on it.

Maloney put in a busy Tuesday night as he led the Wales Conference to a 7-6 victory over the Campbell Conference to become the Most Valuable Player in the highest scoring All-Star Game in National Hockey League history.

The New York Rangers' left wing scored a goal and had three assists to tie All-Star Game records for points and assists.

Maloney, aided by Ranger teammate Pierre Larouche's two goals and three assists by Hartford's Mark Johnson, likened his MVP award to "winning the lottery."

"You buy your ticket, but you never expect to win," said Maloney, given the silver platter as a gift for playing in the game. He received a new car for being selected MVP.

"Don Maloney needed that car, but he's going to have to drive me around," Larouche said.

Maloney, Larouche and the rest of the Rangers are in the driver's seat in the Patrick Division, where they overtook the four-time Stanley Cup champion New York Islanders for first place Sunday night.

"I'm going to run out tomorrow and buy a lottery ticket," Maloney said. "I got my first good thing Sunday. Today I got a car. They say everything comes in threes."

Maloney and Johnson assisted on both of Larouche's goals as they and Toronto's Rick Vaive of the Campbell Conference joined five others in the All-Star Game record book for assists.

Larouche's second goal gave the Wales a 5-0 lead in the first period. But the Wales had to withstand a furious three-goal outburst in the third period to clinch the victory at the Brendan Byrne Arena, where the second largest crowd in All-Star Game history, 18,939, was in attendance.

Maloney scored the decisive goal, on an assist from Johnson, to give the Wales a 7-3 lead with 7:24 to play.

The Campbells got back into the game on goals by Winnipeg's Dave Babych, Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky and Brian Bellows of Minnesota.

Gretzky, far ahead as the NHL scoring leader with 61 goals and 92 assists for 153 points, played despite a sore shoulder. He was the star of last year's game, when he scored four times in the third period to pace the Campbells to a 9-3 victory.

But it was apparent that his right shoulder ached. He left the ice several times, his arm hanging limply. But each time he returned and was on the ice as time ran out.

Gretzky said after the game that he will have his right shoulder X-rayed to make certain it is not separated. He injured it late last month but continued playing while seeking to extend a record-setting, consecutive-games point-scoring streak that was finally stopped Saturday at 51 games.

Oilers coach Glenn Sather, who directed the Campbell stars, said he constantly checked with Gretzky during the game before he returned to the ice on each shift.

"I asked him every time he went on the ice and he wanted to keep on playing," said Sather.

Asked if Gretzky's appearance was a risk for the Oilers' star, the coach said: "Every day is a risk.

"He thinks he owes it to hockey and he thinks he owes something to New Jersey. That's why he wanted to play here."

"I had a responsibility. I wanted to play," Gretzky said. "We almost did it. We made it exciting. That's what people pay money for. If I was paying $28 a ticket this is the kind of game I would want to see. That's entertainment. I don't think a 2-1 game is entertainment."

The Wales erased any chance of a low-scoring game when New Jersey's Joe Cirella, Denis Potvin of the New York Islanders, Boston's Rick Middleton, Montreal's Mats Naslund and Larouche exploded for goals in the first period.

Troubled Dupree drops out again

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Talented running back Marcus Dupree, barred by the NCAA from playing football until 1985, has dropped out of college for the second time this year, this time from the University of Southern Mississippi.

"He is dropping out for financial ... personal reasons," Kenneth Fairley, a Hattiesburg businessman and longtime friend of the one-time Oklahoma star said Tuesday after the announcement that Dupree was out of school. "He wants to get a job for this semester and try to work out these personal problems."

Dupree Tuesday night said he hopes to enroll in an NAIA school or Milsaps College, a Division III school near his home. Since neither is an NCAA school, he would be eligible to play next fall.

"I want to stay in college and play ball and enjoy the college life. That's my first love, but right now I've got four semesters before I'll be able to play again (for an NCAA school)." he told USA Today.

Dupree said he was waiting to see if he would get feelers from teams in the National Football League or United States Football League. He said his "very last option" would be to wage a court fight against NFL rules which bar undergraduates.

He also told USA Today he was considering court challenge of the NCAA regulation that keeps him ineligible until 1985.

Dupree said his immediate plans were to withdraw from 14 hours of classes at Southern Miss and take a construction job or a job at a local funeral home owned by Fairley. Dupree said his family in Philadelphia, Miss., needs the money.

Fairley said that NCAA rules bar athletes who are receiving scholarships from holding part-time jobs.

"That rule was tough on Marcus because he wanted to help out his family financially and he couldn't. At the same time, he wasn't eligible to play," Fairley said.

Fairley said that Dupree's brother has a disabling illness and needs an operation and that Dupree wanted to help.

"His mother is holding down two or three jobs. It's too much," Fairley said. "This has nothing to do with Marcus wanting to play pro ball. We got together this weekend and talked it over and this is what he decided."

Jim Heffernan, NFL director of public relations, said Dupree is "not eligible for the draft and won't be until a year after his class graduates, (1987). We have our rules and we have no plans to change them."

Doug Kelly, coordinator of information for the USFL, which signed Herschel Walker last year after his junior year at Georgia, said "any statements or questions regarding his future would be purely speculative on anyone's part."

After Dupree dropped out of Oklahoma, USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons said the league would adhere to its policy of signing no more undergraduates, and Tuesday he declined comment. Kelly said Dupree's USFL rights belong to the New Jersey Generals under the league's territorial system.

Jay Seltzer, president of the Generals, said, "We have not heard from Dupree and we have not heard from any of his representatives."

Seltzer, whose team has Walker as its top running back, told RKO Radio Sports he felt "no great need to contact Dupree concerning the 1984 season at this moment," and he added that no other team had contacted the Generals about acquiring the running back's rights.

Dupree, highly recruited after a standout career at Philadelphia, Miss., High School, drew national attention his freshman year at Oklahoma, gaining 905 yards. He was heralded before the 1983 season as a leading candidate for the Heisman Trophy but walked away from Oklahoma after the Sooners' lost to Texas 28-16 on Oct. 8.

Dupree had been plagued by injuries and had been criticized by Sooner Coach Barry Switzer.

He spent several days at his home in Philadelphia before enrolling at Southern Mississippi on Oct. 19.

"Marcus has had difficulty coping with the fact he cannot play college football until 1985 and has talked of the possibility of playing professional football," Southern Mississippi Coach Jim Carmody said in a statement. "He is not sure of his plans at this time but it is obvious he will not be playing football at USM."

But Fairley said he had talked with Dupree and that the decision to leave Southern Mississippi had nothing to do with any plans to play in the professional ranks.

"Marcus is not depressed and his decision to drop out of Southern is nothing like what happened at Oklahoma," Fairley said. "This is something that he thought out."

Carmody had hoped Dupree would be able to play for Southern Mississippi next season. But the NCAA, in response to a query from school officials, told the school that its rules require that an athlete sit out a year after transferring from one school to another.

Dupree, as he did after leaving Oklahoma, dropped out of sight Monday. Family members in Philadelphia said they had not heard from him and were unaware of his plans.

Brett still big hitter

SEATTLE (AP) — George Brett of the Kansas City Royals bent over and traded baseball lore with the bedridden boy, who had been struck by a truck.

"You know, I've been in the hospital a bunch of times," Brett, 30, said to 10-year-old Billy Shirley, whose left leg hung by a sling above the bed.

"Were you hit by a baseball?" the child asked.

"No, but everything else has happened, and I get bored just like you and ... " said Brett, who was confiding to Billy in whispers now during an hour-long visit by the third baseman to Children's Orthopedic Hospital.

Jeff rolled his bed to a nearby jukebox and punched in "Flashdance." Brett picked up the back of the bed and started dancing.

Brett was in town promoting vitamins at the Show Me How Fair and was escorted through the hospital's "teen" and rehabilitation units by representatives of the company sponsoring the fair.

"I really like to do this kind of thing during the season," said Brett. "A lot of times I go 0-for-4 and think I have a problem, then you see these kids."

A thin 11-year-old girl named Angie challenged him to a foosball game. She took a 6-2 lead, leaving Brett baffled at his poor showing.

"Angie's not sick, she's not sick," he said in mock protest. "If she is, how come she doesn't spend more time in her room. Angie, I'm going to tell your doctor."

She beat him 10-6 and went off in a corner to giggle.

Twelve-year-old Mark walked up, pulling his intravenous hookup like someone else his size might pull a wagon. He challenged Brett to another foosball game, only this time the major leaguer buckled down and won.

"Come over here," Brett told Mark, leaning over to autograph a photo. Mark draped his stick arm around the big shoulders.

"I don't feel comfortable but I try to do the best I can," Brett said later. "Just like you can make their days, one kid can make your day."

Slama Jamas lift blackball

HOUSTON (AP) — Braxton Clark, who left the University of Houston basketball team last month along with Benny Anders, returned to practice Tuesday without comment, university officials said.

Anders and Clark quit the team Dec. 26 in Hawaii shortly before the Cougars lost to Fresno State in the finals of the Chaminade Classic. Both players complained of a lack of playing time.

Anders returned to the team last week and Clark took part in workouts for the first time Tuesday.

Clark, who led the nation's junior college scorers a year ago, started six games for Houston, averaging 2.6 points and 2.4 rebounds. He hit 35 percent from the field in 93 minutes of playing time.

Floyd seeks 'Clambake'

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Ray Floyd, at age 41, says he has set "some pretty lofty goals" for himself this year.

"I fully expect to reach them," added the veteran of 21 years on the PGA Tour.

"And this is as good a place as any — better than most — to get started on it," Floyd said of the 43rd Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

The unique gathering of pros and amateurs, many of them show business celebrities and stars from other sports, gets started Thursday on the three courses on the picturesque Monterey Peninsula.

While the annual affair, more affectionately called "the Crosby Clambake," has a party-time atmosphere for the amateurs and spectators who flock to this beautiful place, it is serious business for the 168 touring pros.

None is more serious than the no-nonsense Floyd, winner of the 18 Tour titles, including a pair of PGA national championships and one Masters green jacket.

Although he failed to get a victory last season, he captured the coveted Vardon Trophy for the low stroke average on the Tour.

Now, he said, he has his sights set on the money-winning title.

"I've come close, second two years in a row," he said. "That's the main target this year.

"To do it, I think I'd have to win about $500,000, maybe more. And if I did that, some of the other goals would fall into place. To win $500,000, I'd have to win three or four tournaments.

"When I'm playing well, I seem to do well in the majors. So if I win three or four tournaments, I'd expect to win one or two majors.

"I'm in the prime of my career. But I know I don't have too many prime years left.

"So this is the year to go out and get the job done."

Floyd, who will have movie star Clint Eastwood as his amateur partner, faces the strongest field of the year in the tournament that has the pros playing one round on each of three courses before the field is cut for the final 18 holes at the Pebble Beach Golf Links.

Chief among the challengers is Jack Nicklaus, who is opening his 23rd Tour season in one of his favorite events. He's a three-time Crosby champion and also won the U.S. Open here. Former President Gerald Ford will be his amateur partner.

Coetzee plans defense

NEW YORK (AP) — A fight with Larry Holmes, generally regarded as the world's premier heavyweight, is Gerrie Coetzee's hope for 1984.

But a World Boxing Association title defense against Alfredo Evangelista, who is no stranger to defeat, appears to be a fact.

Coetzee, in town en route from his native South Africa, to his home at Huntington Beach, Calif., said Tuesday he will fight the 29-year-old Evangelista, of Spain at Johannesburg May 5 in the first defense of the title he won on a 10th-round knockout of Michael Dokes last Sept. 23 at Richfield, Ohio.

Don King, who has a promotional contract with Coetzee, who became WBA champ at age 28 on his third attempt, will step aside for the scheduled 15-round bout at the 80,000-seat Ellis Park in Johannesburg.

"King was paid a nominal fee to make the fight for me and a co-promoter in South Africa," said Cedric Kushner, a New York-based promoter, who is a South African. He identified the co-promoter as Marcus Nkosi, a black South African.

Kushner said he was negotiating with U.S. television.

It will be Evangelista's third bid to become a heavyweight champion. He lost a 15-round unanimous decision to Muhammad Ali for the undisputed title May 16, 1977, at Landover, Md., and he was knocked out in the seventh round by Holmes in a bid for the World Boxing Council title Nov. 10 1978.

Sarajevo set for 'Big Mek' attack

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — The arched "M" is unmistakeable, but it's red instead of golden. The menu features a "Big Mek," and the hamburger-slinging staff of one offers fast, friendly service.

Welcome to fast food, Balkan style.

Long lines are nonexistent. Beer and wine are available, but don't ask for french fries, Chicken McNuggets, ketchup or a sesame-seed bun.

Tucked in between a beauty salon and a movie theater advertizing a Yugoslavian-made war movie, the Grill sits near the busy intersection of Marshall Tito and Maksim Gorki streets in downtown Sarajevo.

"This is my beginning," said Asim Mujic, the 35-year-old owner of the tiny restaurant.

Capitalizing on capitalism, Mujic opened the restaurant two months ago, in time to feed the appetites of hamburger-craving tourists arriving from the West for the Winter Olympics, which open Feb. 7.

Hamburgers, of various varieties, are available at several locations throughout Sarajevo. But the Grill is the only one with a visual taste of home.

Inside the small stand, 23-year-old Rasema Delalic, costumed in a traditional national dress and white apron, stood behind a counter, waiting on her only customer.

Fur-capped Kemo Sokolija, a professor in electrical engineering, was sipping Coke and leaning on his black attache case when his hamburger arrived.

Looking more like a homecooked American hamburger tucked into a crusty, oversized bun, it was garnished with thick onion slices, a white Yugoslavian cheese and a pink "special" sauce.

"I don't think it compares to the real thing, but it's close," said Sokolija, a burly man with a brown mustache dressed in a heavy blue overcoat made of camel hair and wool.

Sokolija has been hooked on the West's favorite fast food for about 10 years. It was love at first bite after his initial encounter during a trip to London for a lecture.

"You can't find hamburgers in Italy or Hungary. In Austria, maybe," he said.

"I stop here about once a week. It is fast, never busy, and convenient because my wife works down the street. I think the owner thought he might have a big hit. People in Sarajevo may be ready to try something new," said Sokolija.

Mujic said he got the idea to open a hamburger stand after a visit to West Germany.

Because his last name starts with M, Mujic decided to adopt a familiar arched "M" as a logo, resembling McDonald's, the world's largest fast food chain, which proudly advertises hamburger sales in the billions.

A German-made radio behind the counter on a shelf lined with bottles of wine, beer and soft drinks, blares the lyrics of a Yugoslavian love song about a girl named Zumra with "a sweet mouth and black eyes."

Above hangs a sign in Serbo-Croatian carrying the day's specials: "We offer you hamburgers, sausages and liver."

Hamburgers are the hottest-selling item, followed by sausages stuffed into a pita-like bread, hot dogs and grilled chicken, Mujic said.

On a good day, 35-40 hamburgers will be sold, he said. At 70 dinars each, or about 60 cents in American money, they are a bargain.

Hot dogs cost the equivalent of about 25 cents and a Big Mek goes for about 75 cents.

Jacoby-Campbell deal falls through

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Redskins attempted to obtain All-Pro running back Earl Campbell, but backed off when the Houston Oilers asked for All-Pro tackle Joe Jacoby in return, according to a published report.

The Oilers wanted the left tackle as well as an unidentified defensive lineman in exchange for Campbell, The Washington Post reported Tuesday.

"They made it easy for us to say no," said Redskins' General Manager Bobby Beathard. "We told them there was no way we were going to give up Jacoby."

Beathard said he had several discussions about the possible deal with Ladd Herzeg, the Oilers' general manager. Both Campbell and Jacoby, a third-year player, appeared in the Pro Bowl game Sunday in Honolulu.

Campbell, 28, rushed for 1,301 yards and 12 touchdowns this season. In 1979 and 1980 he was named the National Football League's Most Valuable Player.

Puerto Rican Luger a first

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — At the 1980 Olympics, George Tucker of Meands, N.Y., watched the luge races and decided that hurtling down an icy chute strapped to a sled traveling better than 90 miles an hour would be a intriguing way to spend some spare time.

After the Games, Tucker took his interest in the sport to the United States Luge Association at Lake Placid, N.Y. For a fee of $25 he was outfitted with helmet, sled and pads, and taken out on the course for lessons.

And that is why, for the first time in its history, Puerto Rico will be represented at the Winter Olympics when the Games start next week.

Tucker, a 36-year-old doctoral candidate in physics at Wesleyan University, will proudly lead the commonwealth's single athlete delegation at the opening ceremonies. And he will carry the flag of the land where he was born to American parents and spent his first "five or six years."

"I feel close to the people of Puerto Rico," he said. "I will be proud and happy to march for them. Even if I were good enough to make the United States team, I would compete for Puerto Rico. If I were very good, I would rather see Puerto Rico win one medal and the United States have one less. I'd be just another face in the crowd with the U.S. team."

He knows that his Olympic adventure is an accident of birth. "I feel lucky and a little guilty," he said. "But I know I am not taking a spot from anybody. I feel sorry for U.S. lugers better than I who didn't make the team. I had another option and they didn't."

Although he packs 225 pounds on a 6-foot frame, his early adventures on the twists and turns of the luge's labrynth course, which routinely dumps newcomers into its icy walls, were difficult.

"I am well-padded," he said.

It was a good thing.

"I crashed the first three times. I had to go over the first section four times before they let me advance up the track."

He kept at it though and eventually was comfortable enough with the sport to contact Puerto Rican Olympic officials and offer to represent the commonwealth at these Games. Now Tucker is something of a hero there.

Like learning the luge, getting accreditation to the Games was not easy for Tucker. There was a delay in clearing his credentials at Sarajevo and he missed vital practice time. A week before the start of the Olympics he was adjusting slowly to the course. He had not yet gone to the top of the chute and his practice was limited to the lower part of the track, where the women's races begin.

There is no real chance for a medal. He knows that. It is unimportant to him. His concern for the underdog is what led him here.

"At Lake Placid, I remember there were a couple of speed skaters from Outer Mongolia. They had come all that way, did not speak the language, had no chance for a medal. They were out there skating for maybe a half hour and the rink was dead silent. I didn't enjoy that at all. I didn't think that was right. So I got about 20 people to start cheering for them."

Orioles sign MVP Ripken

BALTIMORE (AP) — Shortstop Cal Ripken Jr., the American League's Most Valuable Player, has signed a contract with the Baltimore Orioles, according to a published report.

The Baltimore Sun reported today that Ripken has signed a four-year agreement with the world champions, eliminating any possibility of salary arbitration.

The deal, which is estimated to include a salary close to $1 million a year, was negotiated between Orioles General Manager Hank Peters and Ron Shapiro, Ripken's represetnative, according to the newspaper. In addition, such a salary would make the 23-year-old shortstop the youngest player in baseball at that salary level, the report said.

While the Orioles have not confirmed the signing, the organization has scheduled a news conference for later today to make a "major announcement."

The signing would leave only one Orioles player eligible to participate in salary arbitration. A hearing for Tito Landrum has been scheduled Feb. 10 in New York.

Jal beats MCS

JAL, N.M. — Midland Christian's boys basketball team dropped a 72-50 decision to the Jal Panthers here Monday night despite a 25-point effort by the Mustangs' Cary Wallace.

Midland Christian is now 12-13 on the year while Jal climbed to 16-2.

The Mustangs will travel to Abilene Friday for a 7:30 p.m. game with Abilene Christian.

Stadium track out for week

Ed Nixon, Midland's assistant athletic director, has announced that Memorial Stadium will be closed to the public through Monday.

Work crews are putting the finishing touches on Memorial Stadium's new artificial track and no one will be allowed to use the track during this time.

"The new surface has to have time to cure and we are asking that the public not use the track through Monday, Feb. 6," said Nixon. "We are asking that the public cooperate with us during this time. If anyone gets on the track at this time, there will be no way to get the footprints out."

The Memorial Stadium track is used daily by recreational runners. The Memorial Stadium gates will be locked through Monday.

Work on the new seven-lane, all-weather track has been going on since November. The new latex surface is the final step in completing the track.

Bullets ramble

Bullets 118, Hawks 94

Jeff Ruland scored 30 points and grabbed 15 rebounds as Washington pulled away in the second half to bury Atlanta. Trailing 56-54 at halftime, the Bullets outscored the Hawks 50-18 to begin the second half to turn the game into a runaway.

Atlanta was led by Dominique Wilkins, who had 18 points — 14 of those in the first half.

Celtics 106, Bulls 83

Larry Bird scored 22 of his game-high 28 points in the first half as Boston crushed Chicago. It was the Celtics' 26th victory in their last 30 games, while the Bulls lost for the eighth time in their last nine games.

Bird also had 12 rebounds, five steals and five assists.

Reggie Theus, who played for only the fourth time since Dec. 3, played 26 minutes, the longest he has seen action this season, and led Chicago with 15 points.

Pacers 111, Clippers 97

Herb Williams scored 14 of his game-high 28 points in the fourth quarter as Indiana pulled away to defeat San Diego. After Williams gave Indiana the lead for good, 57-56 with 10:05 left in the third quarter, the Pacers outscored the Clippers 12-4 in the next three minutes.

James Donaldson led San Diego with 21 points, while Terry Cummings added 19 points and 15 rebounds for the losers.

Tigers top UM

Charles Barkley scored six of his game-high 22 points in the final 94 seconds and Auburn withstood a late Mississippi rally to down the Rebels.

Ole Miss, which had trailed 43-27 with 12:33 remaining, got two baskets apiece from Don Royster, Eric Laird and Ken Coghlan during a spurt that chopped the Auburn lead to 45-40 with 5:57 to play. Two free throws by Andre Laird trimmed the lead to 52-48 with 2:41 to go before Barkley went to work.

Barkley, a burly 260-pounder, scored off a missed free throw with 1:34 to play and came up with two free throws and another rebound basket to put the Tigers in front 58-48 with 25 seconds left. Barkley also had a game-high 15 rebounds.

Rangers roll

The Greenwood Rangers swept a pair of games from Borden County, and as a result the girls cagers have clinched district and the boys need only a win Friday at Klondike to do the same.

The Rangerettes survived a two-point second quarter and an off shooting night from Belinda Duke to hand Borden County only their second loss of the year, 47-41. Both setbacks for Borden have come at the hands of Greenwood, now 20-3 and 6-0 in District 11-A.

The boys obliterated Borden 73-35 to raise their mark to 18-5. Coach Roger Goldsmith's crew can clinch the district title with their next district win.

It was a big night for the Wallaces. Kay lead the girls with 16, while Ken netted 13 for the boys and Troy scored 17.

Government to resume oil, gas lotteries after new rules written

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a 16-week moratorium, the government is resuming lotteries that give John Q. Public a chance, albeit a slim one, to become an overnight oil or gas baron.

But to discourage speculators and companies who prey on gullible investors, the Interior Department is requiring a larger stake to play the game.

Interior Secretary William Clark announced Tuesday that the lotteries, which attracted about 2.5 million players last year, will resume as soon as officials can write new rules decreasing the odds of making a big kill.

The program was suspended last October after auditors found that tracts with known petroleum reserves were being offered for lease through the lotteries instead of through competitive bid auctions as required by law.

Critics charged that taxpayers may have been cheated out of $50 million to $100 million because 18 tracts in Wyoming were mistakenly sold through lotteries instead of through competitive bids.

Interior officials said Tuesday that the department's Bureau of Land Management has taken "corrective measures" to ensure that acreage with known reserves is offered competitively instead of through the lotteries.

"The improvements ..., together with the regulatory changes I am proposing, will once again enable us to make land available for oil and gas explorations ... to contribute to the nation's security by increasing our proven reserves of petroleum," Clark said.

Interior officials also have looked upon the lotteries, normally held every other month, as a money-maker. Last year, the lotteries netted about $115 million for the government's coffers.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., who wants the lotteries abolished, criticized Clark's decision Tuesday to resume them.

"The legitimate interests of the American people will never be served well as long as the resources of the United States are leased and sold by a gambling lottery," Bumpers said. "Not only is it basically illegal, it will continue to invite fraud and abuse."

Tracts offered for lease in the lotteries range from 40 acres to 10,000 acres but 1,100 acres is the average size. To acquire drilling rights, an applicant had only to submit a $75 filing fee and then pay a dollar for each acre representing one year's rent if his or her name was drawn.

Winners could then resell the leases to anyone willing to pay for them. Since most of the land offered for lease in the lotteries is worthless those offers are few and far between. But in the Wyoming sale, one woman whose name was drawn as a winner was paid $7.66 million by an oil company for her lease.

"That doesn't happen often, but it happens enough so that people want to take a chance," Mark Guidry, an Interior Department spokesman, said Tuesday. "Most of these people are not in the oil and gas business; they're speculating."

Those occasional instances in which oil and gas lottery participants become overnight millionaires has spawned a whole industry of so-called "filing service" companies.

Securities officials investigating the filing services in several states estimate that Americans lost more than $200 million last year by using the companies, which charge about $300 per lottery chance for their service.

To discourage speculation and so-called "filing service" companies, future lotteries to resume in the next three to six months will require players to put up the $1 first year's rent for each acre, in addition to the $75 fee, when they file their applications, Interior officials said Tuesday. The money will be refunded if an applicant's name is not drawn in the lottery.

"That might make it a little less easy for some of these boiler room operators to get money from the widows and orphans," Guidry said.

The dollar-an-acre advance fee will not apply to lotteries held last May and July or for the drawing yet to be held for 2,200 tracts offered for lease last September, Guidry said.

However, he said about 90 of those tracts have been withdrawn because the corrective measures instituted during the moratorium showed they were near known oil and gas deposits.

Republic First lays off 20

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

RepublicBank First National Midland, as anticipated, further reduced its staff Monday.

Thomas J. Wageman, bank president, said 20 employees had been terminated in an effort to reduce the bank's "head count."

So far this month, 40 bank employees have been laid off, bringing the total number of employees down to 636.

At a press conference Jan. 17, Wageman said more staff reductions would be necessary during the first quarter of the year because the new bank was a smaller bank than the old institution.

When First National Bank of Midland failed Oct. 14, it had more than 850 employees.

Wageman would not say what specific positions had been eliminated but he did say the employees were from different departments within the bank.

As before, Wageman said, the 21 affected employees have been offered jobs with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. He did not, however, know if any of the 21 were interested in the FDIC jobs.

"It's really up to them. The jobs are there for them. If they don't want to take that job they don't have to take it," Wageman said.

Thomas R. Procopio, liquidator in charge of FNB, confirmed the FDIC's offer.

"We have been going through their profiles and it looks like we will be able to use the majority of these employees. There are several who we will be unable to hire at their present salary. However, we can offer them jobs at lower salaries."

Procopio said the group consisted mostly of clerical support staff positions which, he added, were in high demand by the FDIC.

"We need these people desperately. We're short of secretaries, we're short of clerks, we're short of people who can do investigative work. We're very thankful to RepublicBank for giving us the opportunity to hire these employees. I don't know how the employees feel, but we're grateful," he added.

Procopio said that most of the employees had indicated they would be accepting the FDIC job offers.

Wageman said he anticipates making more staff reductions during the next two months.

Non-union wages increased over union wages last year

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

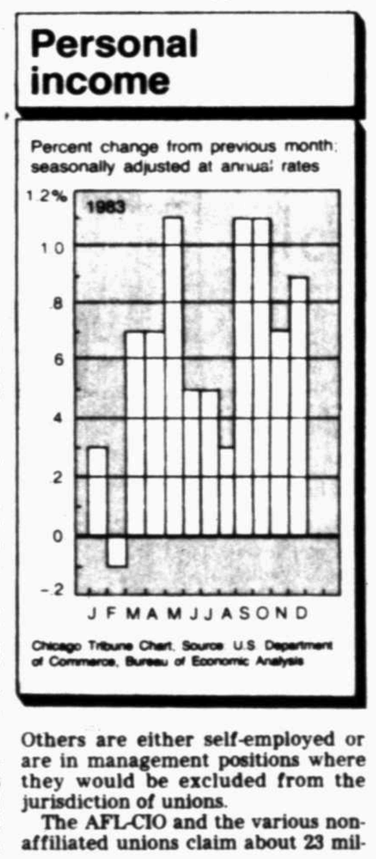

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time since 1978, non-union workers across the country got heftier pay raises than their union counterparts, government figures show.

In a report that provided further evidence of the trend toward wage cuts and other concessions in the areas of the economy that have been union strongholds, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said Tuesday that wages and salaries paid to workers covered by union contracts advanced 4.6 percent last year, while the gain for non-union workers was 5.2 percent.

It was the first time non-union worker wage increases have exceeded those of union workers since Congress increased the federal minimum wage by 15 percent. The minimum wage, currently at $3.35 an hour, has been frozen since Jan. 1, 1981.

The bureau's overall Employment Cost Index, a measure of the money employers spend on wages, salaries and worker benefits, increased 5.7 percent last year, which was 0.9 percent below the 6.6 percent gain recorded in 1982.

Of the roughly 103 million Americans with jobs, approximately 88 million are on company payrolls and covered by the unemployment insurance compensation system.

Others are either self-employed or are in management positions where they would be excluded from the jurisdiction of unions.

The AFL-CIO and the various non-affiliated unions claim about 23 million members, more than a quarter of all workers.

The latest government report said the Employment Cost Index for wages and salaries of union and non-union workers, excluding fringe benefits, showed that in the manufacturing sector, the index for union members rose 3.6 percent, while the increase for non-union people working in the same industries was 4.7 percent.

Union and non-union workers in non-manufacturing sectors of the economy, however, fared equally as well, with each group of workers recording a 5.5 percent increase in wages and salaries, the report said.

Last week, the Bureau of Labor Statistics released figures showing that some 3 million workers whose wages were negotiated by unions in 1983 accepted average first-year pay hikes of 2.6 percent, the lowest settlements in the 16 years the government has kept these records. Over the course of the pacts, ranging in duration from two to three years, the average annual pay increase totaled 2.6 percent, also the lowest since 1967.

That report did not calculate the money unionized workers would be getting as a result of cost-of-living adjustments negotiated in their labor contracts, however. The bureau said it does not include that money because such payment depends on what happens on the inflation front, and this is an unknown quantity.

Reagan budget giving attention to 'soft energy technologies'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is giving attention — and money — in his fiscal 1985 budget to conservation, so-called soft energy technologies and environmental programs he tried to diminish or scuttle the past three years.

Acquiring more land national parks and wildlife refugees, doubling funds for acid rain research and seeking money to help poor people insulate their homes for the first time are all part of the administration's election-year budget unveiled today.

Producing nuclear weapons, however, still claims more than half the Energy Department's $15.1 billion budget. And despite a 4.8 percent increase for the Environmental Protection Agency, its proposed $1.17 billion budget for next year is still 14 percent less than when Reagan assumed office.

Conservation and soft energy technologies such as solar cells and windmills in Reagan's proposed 1985 budget total $591 million, more than triple the $175 million the administration sought for them this year but still below the $639 million Congess appropriated.

But the administration wants to pay for insulating hospitals, schools and low-income houses — programs it has tried unsucessfully for three years to scuttle — with money from a trust account of yet-to-be-refunded oil overcharges from the 1970s when oil was under federal price controls.

The Energy Department is still dominated by both its military and civilian nuclear programs. Weapons production — budgeted at $7.8 billion, a 16 percent increase over last year — consumes 62 percent of the DOE budget.

And despite the refusal by Congress to completed the $4 billion Clinch River breeder reactor after spending $1.5 billion on it, nuclear energy — both fusion and fission — account for more than $1.1 billion of the total $2.3 billion in funds for enery research and development.

By comparison, research on coal and other fossil fuels gets $273 million, a 17 percent decrease from last year; conservation, $148 million, a 2 percent decline; and solar and other renewable resources, $191 million, an 11 percent drop.

Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Energy conservation and power subcommittee, called the Energy Department budget "obscene."

Diamond Shamrock to sell properties

DALLAS (AP) — Diamond Shamrock Corp. has agreed to sell nearly all domestic oil and gas properties of its subsidiary Natomas North America Inc. to Apache Petroleum for $160 million in cash.

Proceeds from the sale of Natomas North America will be used to pay some of a $1.8 billion debt.

The agreement in principle calls for Apache Petroleum to purchase Natomas interests in more than 1,000 gross producing wells, 168 net producing wells and leases covering approximately 300,000 net acres in 17 states.

Excluded from the sale are Natomas' federal offshore leases in the United States, which Dallas-based Diamond Shamrock said amounts to less than 5 percent of its oil and gas reserves.

The companies did not release the amount of oil and gas reserves covered in the sale, but Natomas' interest in the properties included reserves of 16.6 million equivalent barrels of oil at the end of 1982, said oil analyst Alan Edgar.

Gulf's chief says changes have saved reserves

DETROIT (AP) — Stockholder approval to reincorporate Gulf Oil Corp. has prevented further American dependence on foreign oil and gas supplies and has saved the company's energy reserves, said Gulf Chairman James E. Lee.

Lee told a meeting of the Detroit Economic Club on Monday that a dissident movement had attempted to funnel about half of Gulf's oil and gas reserves into a trust that would have paid profits directly to shareholders.

If Gulf had set up the trust, reinvestment in new reserves would have been discouraged, leaving the United States open to increased dependence on foreign oil supplies, Lee said.

Gulf opposed the movement, because the royalty trust "dries up producing wells, and it dries up capital needed to search for the new oil and gas supplies," he said.

The movement had been spearheaded by T. Boone Pickens, chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co. of Amarillo, Texas, who maintained the trust would enhance the value of Gulf stock, avoid corporate taxes on the oil and gas profits and increase shareholder income, Lee said.

Dollar off

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell on European exchange markets early today in low-volume trading. Gold bullion prices rose.

Currency traders said the dollar's retreat, in line with its weaker performance in New York Tuesday, was apparently due to technical factors.

They said interest rates on Eurodollars, dollars on deposit with European banks, were steady.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to 234.56 Japanese yen, from 234.74 yen Tuesday. Dealers described trading as slow.

Later in London, the British pound was quoted at $1.40585, up from $1.4007.

Stock market mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today as traders studied President Reagan's budget proposals.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 66.06 points from Jan. 6 through Tuesday's close, fell another 4.19 to 1,216.39 by noontime today.

But gainers held a 4-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers said no big surprises were apparent in Reagan's budget message, which was sent to Congress today.

In it he projected an $180 million deficit for the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1. The stock market's recent weakness has been blamed on concern about the wide gap between the government's income and outlays.

In today's other economic news, the Commerce Department reported that new factory orders rose 1 percent in December, following a 2 percent increase the month before.

Commodore International fell 1½ to 34½ on top of a 5⅞ drop Tuesday, when the company confirmed that four other top executives have resigned since the departure last month of Jack Tramiel, its founder and president. Commodore also said it expected to delay shipments of its new line of home computers.

Manufacturers Hanover led the active list, unchanged at 40⅝. A 641,000-share block traded at 40½.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .03 to 94.29. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .02 at 216.89.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 45.16 million shares at noontime, against 47.76 million at the same point Tuesday.

Mondale best of Democrats at fund-raising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic front-runner Walter F. Mondale raised $3.4 million in the last three months of 1983, easily topping his party rivals with his best fund-raising effort thus far, but still only second best to the Republican who wasn't even a candidate.

Documents filed with the Federal Election Commission on Tuesday showed that President Reagan's campaign committee raised nearly $3.6 million from Oct. 17, when it was set up, through Dec. 31.

While Reagan authorized the committee, he did not make his candidacy official until last Sunday.

The Reagan-Bush '84 Committee reported net contributions of $3.55 million, with the contributions starting to flow by Oct. 19, only two days after it began work. The GOP group spent $1.7 million in 1983 and ended the year with nearly $2.1 million in cash on hand.

Mondale reported total 1983 contributions of $9.4 million, easily the tops among all contenders.

His chief rival, Ohio Sen. John Glenn, raised $1.6 million for the last quarter and a little less than $5.8 million for the year — just short of his announced goal of raising $6 million. The last three months of 1983 were Glenn's best fund-raising period, but his campaign has recently reported difficulty in generating contributions.

Mondale spent $3.6 million in the fourth quarter and nearly $9.6 million for the year, not including loan repayments. On Dec. 31, he had $386,257 cash in the bank and debts of $775,301. In the fourth quarter, his committee took out a $1 million loan and repaid at least part of it.

Glenn's campaign had only $99,674 cash on hand and owed more than $1 million at the end of 1983.

The cash-flow situation has already improved for several candidates, when the first federal matching funds flowed from the U.S. Treasury into their campaign coffers. Six Democrats split more than $10.3 million in matching funds in January, including $4.3 million for Mondale and $2.3 million for Glenn.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California raised $782,497 in the final quarter of 1983 and $2.6 million for the year, but appeared to have debts of more than $1.1 million on Dec. 31. His committee did not include debt figures in its year-end report.

Cranston spent roughly $3.8 million — not including loan repayments — in 1983 and ended the year with $27,001 cash on hand.

Two late-starting candidates, the Rev. Jesse Jackson and former South Dakota Sen. George McGovern, were far behind the pack in money. Two Jackson committees reported raising more than $331,000 since his November announcement, while McGovern said he collected $217,559 in contributions since September.

McGovern raised nearly $218,000 and spent $147,793. That left him with $102,034 cash in the bank and debts of $44,857, including a $30,000 loan from the candidate.

The candidates' 1983 reports were due at the FEC by the close of business Tuesday, but reports are considered on time if they are postmarked by Tuesday.

Reports for Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew had not been filed with the FEC by late Tuesday.

The Reagan-Bush committee started operations in October with a $200,000 loan from the Riggs Bank, assistant press secretary John Buckley said. The loan was secured with money left over from the Reagan-Bush 1980 Committee. It was listed on the FEC forms as a loan from the candidate, but neither Reagan nor Bush actually loaned the committee money, Buckley said.

Among those who gave the maximum $1,000 individual contribution to the Reagan re-election drive were David Rockefeller, former head of the Chase Manhattan Bank, and Donald Rumsfeld, head of the G.D. Searle drug company and Reagan's special envoy to the Middle East. Rumsfeld's wife also contributed $1,000.

Lyndon LaRouche, the former head of the U.S. Labor party who is seeking the Democratic nomination this year, reported raising $137,774 and spending $105,198 in 1983. LaRouche is currently entangled in a legal fight with the FEC over penalties he has refused to pay arising out of his 1980 bid for the presidency. The FEC has refused to certify LaRouche for matching funds because of the unpaid penalties.

Tax-protester calls lawsuit 'frivolous'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A leader of one of the nation's largest tax-protest groups has branded as "frivolous" a Justice Department lawsuit charging the group's incorrect advice cost the government up to $80 million.

The suit, filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court, seeks preliminary and permanent injunctions against Your Heritage Protection Association, which contends that dollars are not taxable income but merely pieces of paper that needn't be reported to the Internal Revenue Service.

In a statement, the Justice Department said that because of the association's activities between 1978 and 1980 "there has been an underreporting of federal taxes of approximately $60 million to $80 million."

The government offered no estimate of revenue losses from the group's activities since 1980, but said "underreporting, understatement or underpayment continues to the present time."

Thomas Pat Creech, acting communications director of the Garden Grove-based group, who is also named as a defendant, denounced the suit as "frivolous nonsense" but said he was "pleased we finally get to go into court."

Creech said the $60 million to $80 million figure "has to be way wrong...Actually, I think they (the IRS) have overcollected."

A government statement outlining the complaint called it "the first of its kind against a tax-protest organization."

The statement was issued jointly by U.S. Attorney Alexander H. Williams III in Los Angeles and Assistant Attorney General Glenn L. Archer Jr., who heads the Justice Department's Tax Division.

"The complaint alleges that the defendants are providing false and misleading tax advice to YHPA members and impeding the administration of the internal revenue laws" by helping members file "frivolous and spurious action" in court, the statement said.

The statement said the group's tax-protest plan is based on the "false proposition" that Federal Reserve notes (currency) "are not taxable income" that must be reported to the IRS.

"Accordingly, YHPA instructs its members that they do not have to file income tax returns," it added.

In exchange for an initial fee of $10, plus monthly dues of $10, the group helps its members file false W-4 and W-4E forms with their employers to avoid income tax withholding. The group also teaches members how to deal with employers and the IRS if the forms are not honored, the statement said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Universal life better than whole life

Q. When my insurance agent learned I was going to cash in my whole life policy and buy term life insurance, he said he has a better product — universal life. Is it really better?

Doyle

A. Universal life is better than whole life. Although sold as a package, the protection and savings portions of a universal life policy are kept separate. Upon death of the insured person, a universal life policy pays both the death benefit and the cash value; whole life pays only the death benefit.

Most universal life policies pay higher interest on the savings portion and have various other provisions, making them more attractive than whole life policies.

However, universal life premiums are higher than term insurance premiums. Which is better? That depends on whether the savings portion of universal life or money invested elsewhere earns more. There's no way of determining that in advance.

Universal life is a relatively new product. Until it has a longer track record, I'd be inclinced to "buy term and invest the rest."

Q. I want to cash in my whole life insurance policy, which has a cash surrender value of $12,500. I am single. How badly will I be clobbered by income taxes on the money I take out of the policy?

A. It's most unlikely you will feel even one blow. When you cash in a whole life policy, you owe income tax only on the amount by which the cash surrender value exceeds the premiums you paid — minus any dividends taken out, policy loans and a few minor items.

Because the policy's cash surrender value will probably be lower than the premiums you paid, you shouldn't owe the revenuers anything.

Q. My $20,000 life insurance policy is "paid up," as I completed all premium payments some years ago. In 1980, I borrowed $10,000 of the policy's loan value at an annual interest cost of 5 percent. I invested that $10,000 in a money market mutual fund, which earns much more than 5 percent.

I am 55. Under the policy's terms, I must continue paying interest on the loan in order to keep the remaining $10,000 insurance coverage. Would it be advantageous to do this, for the benefit of my estate?

A. Sure. The death benefit of that $20,000 policy was reduced to $10,000 by the $10,000 loan. So, if you die while the policy is in force and the loan is outstanding, your beneficiary will collect $10,000.

At 5 percent, that loan costs you $500 a year interest. Different life insurance policies have different terms and wrinkles. As you explain your policy, that $500 effectively is the cost of keeping $10,000 insurance in force. At age 55, you couldn't buy a new $10,000 permanent life insurance policy for $500 a year.

Q. I have about $40,000 in a mutual fund. My broker advises me to transfer this investment to another mutual fund run by a different management. He says the switch would be tax free. Is that true?

A. It will be true if the price you paid for the $40,000 worth of mutual fund shares you now own is less than $40,000. In that case, you would have a capital loss as a result of the transfer. When you switch from one mutual fund to another, you redeem the shares of the first fund and buy shares of the second. The difference between your cost and your redemption price is either a capital gain or a capital loss.

If you have a capital gain by redeeming the shares of the first fund, you're required to report it on your income tax return and pay the tax due. This rule would not apply if your fund investment is in an individual retirement account, Keogh plan for the self-employed or some other tax-sheltered retirement plan.

Besides the capital gains tax, you almost certainly would have to pay a commission by following your broker's advice. Almost all mutual fund organizations allow you to switch from one fund to another in the same management group without paying a sale charge. But when you switch to a fund in a different management group you're hit with a commission — unless the second fund is a "no-load" fund on which there is no commission.

However, brokers normally don't handle no-load funds. My suspicious mind comes up with the thought that your broker is suggesting that switch so that he could collect a commission.

• • •

Q. A broker is trying to get me to invest in an option income fund. However, the fund he is pushing charges a 9.3 percent sales load. Are there any no-load option income funds?

A. The Wiesenberger Investment Companies Services manual lists two: Analytic Optioned Equity Fund, 2222 Martin Street, Suite 230, Irvine, Calif. 92715, and Gateway Option Income Fund, 1120, Carew Tower, Cincinnati, Ohio 45202.

An option income mutual fund invests in common stocks and sells options — usually covered call options on stocks it holds. Handled properly, this can be a conservative investment technique. The fund collects premiums on the options it sells. That can increase the fund's payments to its shareholders.

Procrastination CAN Lead to Performance!

How?

By deferring income taxes on a portion of your income until retirement — with an Individual Retirement Account at Petroplex Savings. You can begin your IRA at Petroplex with as little as $100 and deposit at least $100 as often as you like up to a maximum of $2000 per year for each eligible person.

That could mean as much as $4000.00 each year — tax deductible — you file a joint return! Even better, the daily compounded interest your IRA earns at Petroplex also accumulates tax-free until you retire.

You can open an IRA at Petroplex at any time. We can even lend you the money to start your account. But, to claim the deduction on your 1983 tax return, the IRS gives you until April 15th.

THIS WEEK'S RATE:
RATE: 10.50
YIELD: 11.23

Substantial Interest Penalties are applied for early withdrawal of IRA's.

The difference is performance.

U.S. Steel chief predicts 'major turnaround' after record losses

By EARL BOHN
AP Business Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp. Chairman David Roderick predicted a "major turnaround" would follow the company's worst year on record, when the nation's largest steel producer lost $1.6 billion.

In its report Tuesday on 1983 earnings, U.S. Steel also said it suffered its worst quarterly loss — $983 million for the last three months of 1983, for the largest quarterly deficit in U.S. corporate history.

"Last year, the corporation took a series of painful but necessary steps to strengthen its business segments, especially steel," Roderick said in a prepared statement.

"As the economy continues to strengthen, we anticipate that our three major business components, and the corporation in total, will be profitable throughout 1984," he said. "We are looking forward to a major turnaround in financial results in 1984."

Late last year, Roderick announced U.S. Steel would close six plants, trim operations at 24 others and eliminate 15,400 jobs in an effort to become more profitable.

The annual deficit included a $1.15 billion pre-tax write-off from the plant closings and cutbacks.

Karlis Kirsis, steel analyst for Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins Inc. of New York, said Roderick had reason to be optimistic.

"Steel has turned the corner not only in increases in demand but also in their philosophy. They're implementing major cost-reduction programs and they'll continue to do so," he said.

Kirsis predicted domestic steel shipments would increase to 84 million tons in 1984, up from 67 million tons in 1983, as the capital-goods sector uses more steel and replenishes inventories that declined by 5 million tons last year.

Town weighs effectiveness of television ban

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — The trial is over but the verdict is still out on whether this town's month-long effort to kick the TV habit was successful in creating a community of discriminating viewers.

Backers claim that up to a third of Farmington's 16,000 residents survived January without television. Now they are waiting to see if many — or any — permanently reduced their dependence on the tube.

School Superintendent William Streich said Tuesday he would measure the experiment's success "by the number of children and adults in this community that will turn on their televisions in February and be more discriminating."

Those among the town's 2,600 schoolchildren who charted their families' January viewing patterns will turn in their data this week, with results to be announced by Feb. 9.

Members of the local Library Council, which sponsored the project, are planning an awards ceremony for children and adults whose pledge cards show they shunned television for the entire month.

Television will nose in at the ceremony, where a news anchorman from Hartford's WFSB-TV will present the awards.

In fact, sponsors say, television itself was a major contributor to the project's success because of the publicity it provided.

TV news coverage "immediately brought national and international attention on this community and virtually everyone in town was aware of it," Streich said.

"When we started the experiment on Jan. 3, we were literally inundated by telephone calls from Canadian television, British television, American television, television network programs, local television, Boston television and New York television," he said Tuesday.

Streich estimated that at least one-third of the families with school-age children participated in the TV turn-off in this affluent Hartford suburb.

"In one elementary school 27 percent were still involved at the end of last week," he said.

Many who went along with the blackout said they made an exception for the National Football League playoff and Super Bowl games.

Continued TV restraint could be challenged by telecasts of the Winter Olympics this month.

But Betty Kelly, librarian at Wallace Elementary School, said most children have told her that after a month without television they are not going to watch as much in the future.

"They've found that they have survived," she said. "Not many people have gone cold turkey, but a lot have cut way down."

Fourth-grader Mary-Grace Vendola, in an essay for her class at Wallace Elementary School, wrote that "When I turned off the TV, I could do many more exciting things. I would do my homework without rushing. I made several get-well cards for my aunt."

Reagan helps raise money for artist

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moved by news of a fire that destroyed the studio of an artist who gave lessons to underprivileged children, President Reagan has ordered aides to help drum up donations to help rebuild the gallery.

Reagan directed the White House's Office of Private Sector Initiatives to line up local businesses to help Eddie McKinnon rebuild the converted boiler room where he taught children painting, pottery and sculpture.

A number of Washington businesses have already pledged to donate art supplies, equipment and construction services.

Fire destroyed the studio Friday night while McKinnon and 21 other city residents were being honored for their community service by the Downtown Jaycees and Washingtonian magazine. Damage was estimated at $100,000.

McKinnon said Reagan's efforts to help him were "fantastic."

"I never thought this would get this far," he said. "Mayor (Marion) Barry and Councilman (H.R.) Crawford and now the president. Maybe this is what is needed to get art back in D.C."

But McKinnon said he had mixed feelings about reopening the studio, where 60 to 80 children learned painting, pottery and sculpture.

"My plan now is to get a job, I have so many debts," McKinnon said. "All of my art and my prints are burnt out. I was going to sell them and get money for the kids. Everything is gone now...all my clothes were burned up."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Charlie Daniels, known for such country hits as "The Devil Went Down To Georgia," "Long-Haired Country Boy" and "In America," says he supports taxing his concerts if it will help the state's schools.

Daniels endorsed a proposed amusement tax for education in Tennessee.

"Let's do it," said the 47-year-old Daniels on Tuesday, endorsing the proposal of Gov. Lamar Alexander. "I think a lot of our ills in this country are caused by substandard education."

Koch

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New York Mayor Edward Koch has proved to be an effective book salesman, especially when the book is his own.

In Albany for meetings Tuesday, the mayor spotted his autobiography, "Mayor," on display in a bookstore window at the Empire State Plaza.

He went in to see if it was actually in stock or if only the cover was being displayed, and as a crowd gathered Koch agreed to autograph some copies.

The store had received only 10 copies — and they were quickly sold out at $17.95 per.

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — Henry Winkler, television's "The Fonz," has donated $1,500 to an 11-year-old badly burned while rescuing an 83-year-old neighbor in a fire the night of Jan. 21.

Timothy Diakis of Newport News, whose family does not have insurance to cover the costs of the skin grafts he will need, already has undergone one operation and is facing more surgery.

Planning deductions

This is the fifth in a series of "tax tips" articles provided by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Q. I support one daughter in college who is working part time. My widowed father who has some income from stocks and a savings account also lives with me. Can I claim either of them as a dependent?

A. You can claim an exemption of $1,000 for your daughter if she is a full-time student no matter how much she earns, as long as you provide more than half her support. However, if you want to claim your father as a dependent, he cannot earn more than $1,000 per year. Also, you must provide more than half of his support.

If you see that your father will earn over $1,000 this year, you might advise him to transfer some of his investments to a child in the family who has no tax liability. Then you will be able to claim the exemption and your father will not have to pay any tax on the income. This way, you both get a break.

If you and your brothers or sisters together pay more than 50 percent of your father's support, but no one individually pays more than 50 percent, make sure you all have agreed on who will claim the exemption. The IRS requires this agreement on Form 2120.

Q. My husband and I invested in a 10-year trust for our young children. The income from that trust will be taxable to them. Are they required to file a tax return if this is their only income?

A. If the annual income for each child from the trust is $1,000 or more, each will have to file a tax return. However, a dependent child with taxable income triggers a double deduction situation. If the children can be claimed as dependents on your return, you're entitled to a $1,000 dependency exemption for each. Each child may also claim a $1,000 exemption on his own return. In this way, up to $1,000 of the child's income is sheltered from tax. Income above that amount is taxed at rates beginning in the lowest tax brackets. The result for the family as a whole is double exemptions for each child and a portion of income taxed at substantially lower rates. The dependent must file a Form 1040 and itemize deductions.

This and other tax questions will be answered during the Taxpayers Education Program at 9 a.m. Feb. 11 in the Midland College Allison Fine Arts Building. Members of the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants will help individuals who plan to complete their own tax return for 1983. Program content will concentrate on questions relating to the 1040 and the 1040A tax returns. To register for the course, send $1 with your name and address to The Permian Basin Taxpayer Education Program, c/o Donald S. Johnson & Co., Inc., Midland, Texas 79701. Pre-registration is encouraged but walk-in registration will be accepted.

MIT students forgo 'Memories'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — There will be no "High School Memories" for students at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Bowing to pressure from women students and administrators, a student-run organization decided Tuesday not to present a movie by that name. Those opposed to showing "High School Memories" called it pornographic and degrading to women.

Odessa museum aided by grant from city

ODESSA — Movers had just finished unloading a $200,000 exhibit that had traveled from Indiana.

It was a landmark Tuesday for Odessa's Presidential Museum, which opened in 1965 in a small basement room of its present location — until 1981 the Ector County Library.

But questions about future financial support of the facility have added a touch of irony to the event. At least one county commissioner favors withdrawing support by Oct. 1 and the 1984 budget was trimmed of two employees and $30,000.

"The irony has not been lost upon us," said Valerie Christensen, acting director since the executive director was terminated during November budget sessions. Ms. Christensen, who had been curator before the cuts, will lose her building engineer Feb. 15 to the latest round of cost savings.

Thomas Levine was going retire in September anyway after 18 years tending to county buildings. But commissioners forced him into early retirement by cutting his $14,000 job from the budget — leaving two to staff the improved museum in 1984.

Two exhibit rooms, virtually unused since the library was moved to the renovated Headley Medical Building in July 1981, will house approximately 3,600 square feet of exhibits that will trace the development of the presidency and the country which the chief executives managed.

Ralph Rhodes Associates Inc. of New Harmony, Indiana, which lists among its credits Smithsonian Institution exhibits in memory of George Washington's and Franklin Delano Roosevelt's birthdays, has designed and will construct the exhibit customized for the Odessa museum.

A city grant financed the exhibit, using revenues from a hotel/motel tax. The grant totaled $237,000, with the remaining funds used for other temporary exhibits.

One room will recognize the 40 presidents in 39 special cases (Grover Cleveland served non-consecutive terms as the 22nd and 24th president) and the other will trace occurrences in the United States during and between election years.

Visitors who have seen the museum's permanent collections in the basement or traveling exhibits in the upstairs front gallery can return in late February to more than double the viewing space.

Rhodes' plans detail the placement of every button, portrait and poster in the two rooms: "The Hall of the Presidents" and "Every Four Years." Picture panels will focus on the campaigning leading to election of the president, effects of third parties, changing technologies' effects on the process and the expanding electorate.

Various phases, from the "Aristocratic Choice" to "Emergence of the Common Man" to the "Rise of the Politico" will be depicted using the panels and accompanying memorabilia, placed exactly according to plans Rhodes said took two months to conceive and will take four weeks to construct in Odessa.

Much of the museum's permanent collection of more than 25,000 artifacts will be displayed. An Alf Landon tie (he was FDR's unfortunate opponent in 1936), original lithographs of the first six presidents, old political cartoons, posters, photos and buttons will complement Rhodes' creations.

When John F. Kennedy was assassinated in 1963, private citizens began the idea of a memorial. From this idea came the original museum two years later which was housed in a small basement room of the county library.

"They're (the original exhibits) outdated and we decided it was time to create a new image for the museum," said Ms. Christensen.

While the museum moves forward with the expansion funded by the city grant, the county is considering dropping it, along with other services not required by state law, in response to the Jan. 21 rollback which cost the county over $900,000.

Commissioner Julian Pressly Thursday called for the facility to be "phased out" by Oct. 1, with private interests expected to see to future funding. The county could lease the museum for $1 per year to keep it operating, while dropping any financial responsibility.

"It's a concern," said Ms. Christiansen, who has not been contacted by the county about the museum's future. "We haven't been told the county is going to stop funding."

"That's an eventuality we hope doesn't happen," said Rufus Harris, treasurer of the museum board of trustees, suggesting that private funding would be sought through membership drives and other promotions if the county pulled out its financial backing.

Superintendents opposed to proposals

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Like Midland school officials, superintendents of small area schools say proposed state curriculum requirements will hurt their elective and extracurricular programs. But they will have additional problems of class size and space, scheduling and teacher shortages.

In an attempt to standardize and upgrade public education in Texas, next week the State Board of Education is scheduled to approve the second reading of new school curriculum requirements. Midland school officials and students have criticized some aspects of the proposal because they will cut down on electives and participation in extracurricular activities.

Superintendents from Rankin, Stanton and Andrews pointed out additional disadvantages. Added requirements in mathematics and science, coupled with a nationwide shortage of math and science teachers, will create a difficult if not impossible situation, they said.

"It's physically impossible, under the conditions today, for the schools in Texas to implement that program the way it is," asserted James Pennington of Andrews Independent School District. "Smaller schools cannot implement it until there are more math and science teachers available."

Under the proposal, students have a choice of taking a general or advanced program. Both require 22 credits to graduate, but the advanced transcript, designed for college-bound students, has 20 required classes.

The disadvantage, superintendents said, is not only the limited number of electives, but that schools will be required to offer those students several advanced courses for which there is currently no demand.

One example is foreign language. Two of the superintendents said they have had no requests for foreign language in several years, while the other has had a few. Under the advanced program, students must take two years of foreign language.

The advanced transcript also requires several additional courses in English, math and science as well as a course in computer science.

This could result not only in offering several advanced courses with few students enrolled, the men said, but problems with scheduling and finding additional classrooms to accommodate students.

Pennington said there was no question in his mind that the limited number of electives would result in cuts in extracurricular programs and would discourage students from taking the advanced transcript.

He said the district plans to recommend to the state board that students be allowed a minimum of six electives.

"I don't think there'll be many students opting for advanced transcripts," Wayne Mitchell of Stanton agreed. "As far as making them take more math and science and English, I can't see anything wrong with that. We have been a long time needing something statewide. But some of the ways they're going about it may not be good.

"The only thing that concerns me about more required courses is at the public school level we should be allowing students to get a more well-rounded study. I think this will be a detriment to some youngsters."

"It is going to hurt our fine arts and vocational programs because the kids won't have as many electives as they've had in the past," predicted A.C. Copeland of Rankin. "In small schools your bands and such are small anyway. When you eliminate some electives it'll hurt those programs." Rankin has 519 students.

MMH Auxiliary to rent car seats

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

With the beginning of a new month, the Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary has assumed a new program.

Effective today, the Kids 'N' Cars Rent-A-Car-Seat Program, formerly directed by Childbirth With Preparation, is under the direction of the auxiliary, Volunteer Director Kim Modisett announced at a news conference this morning.

Because car accidents are the largest preventable killer of children under the age of five years, the program was established to increase public awareness as well as furnish car seats at a reasonable cost, Ms. Modisett said.

Infant seats rent for $1.50 per month. A $25 deposit is required with the remainder refunded at the time the seat is returned. Toddler seats can be rented on a trial-before-you-buy basis for $1 per week. A $40 deposit is required on these larger seats.

More than 3,300 infants and small children riding in motor vehicles were killed in traffic accidents across the nation during the last five years, according to literature distributed by the auxiliary. More than 250,000 were injured.

Texas, which leads the nation in infant and small child traffic fatalities, does not have a mandatory seat belt law as do 33 other states and the District of Columbia.

Almost 400 children through the age of 4 died from injuries suffered in traffic accidents in Texas during the last five years.

Tennessee, the first state to pass a law protecting children up to the age of 3, reduced fatalities in that age range by 70 percent after the law went into effect.

While some adults feel buckling their child up in a safety car seat is too time-consuming, others feel the child is safer in their laps. Both assumptions are wrong.

Parents are not strong enough to hold their child in their arms, according to pamphlets compiled from the Texas Safety Association, the Traffic Safety Section of the Department of Highways and Public Transportation and other organizations. In a 30 mph car accident, a 20-pound child weighs 600 pounds.

"An unrestrained child becomes a missile, projected into the dashboard or windshield...In a 30 mph crash, that's equal to a fall from a three-story window," the literature states.

If the parent is unbelted, the child can be crushed into the dashboard or windshield by the parent's body, even in a "minor" accident as was the case in several incidents cited by the National Transportation Safety Board.

Many parents are amazed at the difference in their children's behavior in a car once they've become accustomed to car seats. Even on short trips around town, studies conducted by Dr. Edward R. Christopherson indicate behavior and safety increase. Also, many of the safety seats can be raised, allowing a child to see out the window instead of constantly standing up or climbing over the seats.

Prison inmate loses case against sheriff, doctor

By ED TODD

Midland County won the case of the ingrown toenail.

In a judgment rendered by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton, a 30-year-old convict, Edward Eugene Peterson, lost his bid for $25,000 from Sheriff Dallas Smith and Dr. Patrick Leung, the county's medical officer.

Peterson, who was in the Midland County Jail for about four months in late 1982 and early 1983, had complained he was denied use of the county's law library and jail exercise area and that Leung had not properly treated his ingrown toenail.

The judge had ruled following a trial in early January that Peterson "failed to prove his claims" and then taxed court costs against him. Peterson currently is serving a 99-year state prison sentence for aggravated robbery by use of a machine gun in Midland in 1980.

"It's always nice to win," said Mark H. Dettman, first assistant Midland County attorney who represented the county in the lawsuit in federal court.

"This lawsuit, like virtually all (constitutional-rights) lawsuits filed by prisoners against sheriff offices and jails, is basically frivolous in nature," he said Tuesday.

Dettman said it was "unfortunate that people abuse the system like that. But I guess when there's an opportunity to abuse the system, someone will do it." He noted that there's "no hope" the county will recover its costs incurred in the litigation. "I guess that's just the cost of doing business."

In the past two years, the county has successfully defended itself in about 12 similar cases filed by former jail inmates who claimed their constitutional rights were violated.

The sheriff was pleased with the court's judgment.

"I think it's unfortunate that our doctor was dragged around, so to speak, a little bit," said Smith, "when he has done an excellent job."

Some councilmen undecided about future

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The work of a city council is never done as the problems of a municipality ebb and flow with the passing years.

Some councilmen use that reasoning as a basis for eventually leaving public service; others cite it as a cause for staying.

The filing period for three spots on the Midland City Council starts Feb. 6 and ends March 7. Up for election are the mayor, G. Thane Akins; Place 4, Steve Davidson; and Place 5, Tom Sloan. All have served more than one term.

Sloan, who is completing his sixth year on the council, has said he won't run again. When he was first elected in 1978, Sloan said he would serve only four years. He took on a third term when the city "was in a heated explosive growth period and no one else would run."

Col. Wilson Banks, former aviation director for the city who retired in January 1983, has announced he will file as a candidate for Place 5.

The mayor has been involved in city government since the early 1970s, and said Tuesday he had not decided about re-election.

"I'm still considering it. I hope to come to a conclusion by the first council meeting in February (Feb. 14)," he said.

"You never get through. From that standpoint, I'd like to see some things concluded and deal with some economic issues. I wouldn't mind doing it again from a personal standpoint. But it takes a lot of time from a lot of things I have commitments to," he said.

Akins pointed out he will consult with his employer (O'Briant Engineering) and his wife before making a decision.

Initially, his involvement in city government began with a three-year term on the city's Planning and Zoning Commission. From there he was elected to the City Council, where he served four years.

In 1980, he squeaked out a win for mayor over opponent Martin Allday by eight votes, and in 1982 he was re-elected with no opposition.

Davidson is completing his second two-year term on the council. As for the next term, "I'm in a decision-making process. I'll make up my mind in the next two to three days."

Sloan said he feels the council "needs some new blood," and he pointed to the number of hours each week a councilman must devote to the $25 a month job.

"It's a charity job," Sloan said. The actual work of meetings and going through the agenda involves at least 10 hours per week. Then there's another 10 hours a week spent on the telephone listening to complaints from citizens.

The job needs to be taken on by someone from the community who wants to do it, he added.

Even with its problems, Sloan said, "I think we have a super good city government."

Oilman files deceptive trade practices suit against aircraft manufacturer

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A spokesman for Mitsubishi Aircraft International has denied allegations contained in a deceptive trade practices suit lodged against the company by Midland oilman Gene Sledge.

Filed Jan. 19 in Midland's 142nd state district court on behalf of G.S. Equipment Inc., the suit claims Mitsubishi "did not divulge to plaintiff Sledge that the airplane defendant was contracting to sell was undergoing or would shortly undergo a certification review" to determine its airworthiness, "as recommended by the National Transportation Safety Board."

The suit contends that from 1975 through last year the class of plane Sledge contracted to purchase — a twin-engine turboprop Marquise — was involved in "at least 31 fatal accidents related primarily to engine failure in various phases of flight."

The NTSB sought the certification review August 24, according to FAA spokesman John Ellis.

The request for the review "doesn't necessarily mean (the crashes) were the plane's fault," said Ellis. "That's what we're looking into."

Responding to the allegation that Mitsubishi withheld knowledge of the review when Sledge ordered the $1.6 million craft on April 15, the firm's general counsel, Ray Vinton, said in a phone interview from his Dallas office Tuesday:

"I don't believe we had knowledge of the review at that time."

Sledge put up a $62,500 deposit on the plane, according to the purchase agreement, and Mitsubishi refused to refund the money when Sledge notified the company in a June 10 letter that he would not accept delivery.

"Mitsubishi incurred considerable expense in preparing the plane according to Sledge's specifications," said Vinton. "When he declined to take possession of it, Mitsubishi declined the refund."

The suit, which was filed by the Sudderth, Woodley & Dudley law firm of Comanche, seeks recovery of the deposit — along with damages of up to five times that amount and $30,000 in attorney fees.

The suit's second major allegation is that Sledge ordered a 1982 Marquise and subsequently "discovered that the defendant was attempting to deliver" a 1981 model.

In disputing that contention, Vinton said: "I don't have knowledge of that part of the transaction. But Mitsubishi would not deliver an '81 model and contend it was an '82. We don't do business that way."

Huff seeks re-election to MC board

From Staff Reports

Jack Huff has announced his intention to seek re-election to Place 7, Midland Junior College District Board of Trustees.

An independent oil operator, Huff was appointed to the college board in 1970, just one year after it was founded. He has served as a trustee, vice president and president of the board during that period.

"We currently are preparing to construct a health sciences building on the campus and I would welcome the opportunity to see this project through to its completion," Huff said. "The college has made remarkable progress since it began and the continuity of the board has been one of the reasons.

"There still are a number of areas where Midland College still is growing and changing to serve the post-secondary needs of this community and I would welcome the chance to continue service to this community through the Midland College Board of Trustees."

Huff earned his A.B. degree from the University of Tulsa, then received his law degree from the University of Texas at Austin following military service. He practiced law in Midland four years before entering the petroleum business. He has been an independent oil operator sinee 1959.

Previous posts have included director of the Midland Jaycees, chairman of the board of deacons and member of the board of elders of First Presbyterian Church, chairman of the board of directors of High Sky Girls Ranch, director of Midland Community Theatre and president of a Little League district.

Huff is a member of the Texas Bar Association, Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners, Texas Independent Producers Legal Action Association, Permian Basin Petroleum Association and New Mexico Independent Producers Association.

He and his wife, Becky, have four children.

Banks won't be involved with airports if elected

From Staff Reports

The former aviation director for the city of Midland said he has no intention of getting involved in the two airports' day-to-day operations if elected to the city council.

Col. Wilson Banks, who retired in January 1983, said during a news conference Tuesday he is running for Place 5 on the council. That spot is held by Tom Sloan, who has indicated he won't run again.

"The council makes long-range plans and works on the budget," said Banks, who had been with the city 13½ years.

The city operates Midland Regional Airport and Air Park. Construction of parking areas and revamping the street system at the regional airport is under way, and Banks noted the plans were drawn when he was still aviation director. But seeing it to completion falls to his successor, he noted.

In running for the council seat, his "intent and desire is to work for the entire city." That includes wrestling with the problems of city employee salaries, zoning, streets and drainage.

"Streets and drainage, we all know they're problems. They're not a simple matter to resolve. It all costs money and now is not the time to talk about increasing taxes," he said.

City employees should be paid commensurate wages with the local industries, Banks said. As director of a department during the boom of 1980-81, he saw people hired one day who left two weeks later for a better-paying job in the oil industry.

"If we want to keep first class employees with the city, we should pay them enough."

Banks strongly opposes changing zoning "without real strong and compelling reasons." When a person buys a house in a single-family zoning, he should know it will stay that way, said the candidate.

After being in retirement a year, Banks said he was bored and decided he wanted to accomplish something for the city. "People were good to me as aviation director over the years."

Two Midlanders sentenced on drug charges

From Staff Reports

Two Midland men have been sentenced to a total of 26 years in prison on unrelated drug charges that went to trial in state district court last week.

Twenty-six-year-old Alex Stinnett Jr. of 706 S. Clay was sentenced to six years on charges of possession with intent to deliver a controlled substance, while 40-year-old Esteban Martinez of Route 3, Midland, was sentenced to 20 years for possession of heroin.

Judge Pat Baskin sentenced Stinnett following his jury conviction Jan. 25. He was arrested Sept. 28, 1983, after a search warrant was executed at his home by city detectives and narcotics agents.

One narcotics officer said 357 prelude tablets — a form of speed — worth $17 apiece were seized in the raid. Stinnett's 22-year-old wife, Sharon Jones Stinnett of the Clay Street address, was also charged in the case. She is awaiting trial.

Martinez was sentenced by a jury following his conviction in Baskin's court Jan. 26.

Martinez and three other suspects were arrested in an Oct. 21, 1983, raid on the Los Palomas Club at 3101 S. Rankin Highway.

The raid was conducted by city narcotics officers, agents from the Department of Public Safety Intelligence Division and U.S. Border Patrol officers stationed at Alpine.

Confiscated were 20 grams of heroin, 44 "papers" of heroin, seven grams of cocaine and 27 tablets of speed called White Crosses.

According to one of the officers involved in the raid, the drugs had a total street value of $12,745, and some of the heroin was 81 percent pure.

Martinez was indicted on charges of possession with intent to deliver,the maximum sentence for which is 5-to-99 years or life. But the jury found him guilty of simple possession and sentenced him to the 20-year maximum on that charge, a second-degree felony.

The other three defendants in the case are awaiting trial. Their names were not immediately available.

Small school superintendents against curriculum proposals

Mitchell concurred. "Our biggest concern is the possible loss of vocational programs."

Extracurricular programs in small schools will be particularly hard hit by proposals that limit electives and limit the number of days a student can miss for school activities.

Students will not be able to participate in as many programs, the superintendents said, while pointing out that multiple participation is necessary to maintain extracurricular programs in small schools.

One section states students will not get credit for a class if they missed three days per semester or five days per year for school activities. "In the geographic location we're in, we have to travel so far for games it's going to put us in a bind," Copeland said.

"We think it's discriminatory against West Texas because of the travel involved," Pennington agreed. Andrews students must travel as far as 168 miles to play some district games. "And we're lucky. We happen to be kind of in the center of our district. The three-day limitation would severly hamper our program."

After being introduced at the last meeting of the state board, the proposals were approved on first reading. They must pass three readings to be implemented.

Prison inmate loses case against sheriff, doctor

Smith said he thought the federal judge "rightfully" charged costs of the suit against Peterson.

"He's the one who brought this suit against us, and there was nothing to it. It's frivilous." Smith said the outcome of the suit should be a message to others to "beware" of filing such suits. "The court will not condone frivolous suits," he said. But the sheriff noted that Bunton gave Peterson "every opportunity" to prove his case against the county, the sheriff and the physician.

In rendering his judgment against Peterson, Bunton noted of Peterson's claims:

—Allegedly denied constitutional rights of access to courts by Smith's refusing Peterson use of law library: Peterson was represented by appointed counsel (Karen Carr). (Testimony in the trial indicated Peterson was provided with law books he requested but was not allowed in the law library.)

—Allegedly not provided with adequate recreation and sunlight while in jail: Bunton noted that Peterson was "taken out periodically for exercise," which usually consisted of his walking around inside the jail. During those walks, however, Peterson was restrained by shackles, since he was given to a "violent disposition," was a security risk, previously had escaped from the Lubbock County Jail and, in addition to the Midland robbery conviction, had been convicted for theft in Fort Worth. Furthermore, the jail's administrator, Benny Cureton, had deemed Peterson an "escape risk" and noted he was a former Green Beret who had "extensive knowledge of explosives, the martial arts and was considered a 'con man.'"

—Allegedly denied adequate medical treatment: Bunton noted that Leung had treated Peterson for the ingrown toenail, visited the jail twice a week and during emergencies and that a nurse daily conducted sick call. "Dr. Leung examined the toe and prescribed treatment" and looked after the toe until it was healed.

While in his single cell, Peterson told the physician, he had been doing "many karate exercises."

Parents-to-be are urged to have a safety seat ready before birth so they may safely take their baby home from the hospital. Those interested may contact the auxiliary by calling MMH, 685-1111, and asking for the information desk.

Orientatations are scheduled from 4 to 5 p.m. Tuesdays and from 10 a.m. to noon Thursdays at 2200 W. Texas Avenue. About 220 of the 238 infant and 45 toddler seats are available for rent.

Instructions, fact sheets and literature will be given to those renting safety seats. Also, a film on using the seats safely is available. Anyone interested in being a volunteer with the program is urged to call Ms. Modisett at the hospital.

Coahoma man killed in accident

From Staff Reports

A Coahoma man was killed in a one-vehicle accident that seriously injured his mother late Tuesday night.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Midland County Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry was 26-year-old Dana Franklin Justice.

In serious condition this morning at Midland Memorial Hospital with a broken leg and cuts and bruises was his mother, 46-year-old Silvia Tackett Justice, also of Coahoma.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Dana Justice was behind the wheel of a 1976 pickup truck that entered an exit ramp of Interstate-20 the wrong way about 10:10 p.m.

The vehicle slid off the ramp, ran down an embankment and overturned 1¾ times. He was partially ejected and suffered crushing injuries in the crash, which occurred at the 144-mile marker about 5.5 miles east of town.

Mrs. Justice was thrown through the windshield. Her son's body was taken to the Thomas Funeral Home.

Akins urges support of Heart Month campaign

From Staff Reports

February has been designated as American Heart Month in Midland by Mayor Thane Akins, who is urging area resdients to support the 1984 nationwide campaign.

"These diseases accounted for nearly 1 million of the nation's deaths last year and more than 50,000 here in Texas," Akins said. "This is more than half of the deaths from all causes."

More than 100 Midland area volunteers will distribute information and collect contributions to support research, education and community service projects aimed at reducing early death and disability from heart disease and stroke.

The Texas Affiliate is emphasizing a healthy lifestyle formation in youth to achieve long-range changes in the mortality rate due to heart disease. Evidence indicates some heart disease can be traced to an early age in life and that the disease could be prevented if bad habits were not formed.

Cities receive emergency relief

Austin (AP) — Grants totaling $250,000 were announced Tuesday for Mercedes and Primera as additional emergency relief to the Rio Grande Valley area hit by the December hard freeze.

Gov. Mark White said each of the cities would get $125,000 from the Texas Department of Community Affairs to create special home repair programs that will provide temporary jobs for unepoyed farmworkers.

The homes of elderly and low income individuals will be given preference for repair work. Unemployed farmworkers who do not qualify for either federal or state unemployment benefits will be given preference for the temporary jobs.

Bunton doesn't act on groups' request

From Staff and Wire Reports

A federal judge here told animal rights groups Tuesday they might have come to the wrong court in an attempt to force ranchers to care for thousands of starving horses sold by a company that folded before it could buy them back.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton, saying he was uncertain if he had jurisdiction, took no action on a request for a temporary injunction against ranchers who bought horses from a business called Horses Unlimited. Filing the request were members of the New York-based Fund for Animals and the American Horse Protection Association in Washington.

However, Bunton suggested the two groups might have more valid legal remedies in a state court.

Bunton said he would hold a hearing Feb. 10 if the controversy over who should care for the animals is not resolved by then.

Animal rights groups say more than 1,200 diseased and starving horses have died in central Texas' Falls County because of the harsh winter and the Jan. 13 collapse of Horses Unlimited. The company folded before it could buy back from ranchers an estimated $2 million to $5 million worth of horses.

Horses Unlimited had brought about 14,000 horses into Falls County during the previous nine months. The company sold the horses to ranchers, promising to buy them back at the same price plus $1 a day for what the horses ate.

Ranchers said they were told Horses Unlimited would then sell the horses to a slaughter house, with the horsemeat to be sold ultimately in Europe.

Thousands of horses remain with ranchers while the Texas Animal Health Commission and animal protection groups try to help them and decide what to do with them.

The animal rights groups also were seeking an order to force the state to bar further shipment of horses out of Falls County until tests proved they were healthy, and to have a veterinarian appointed to check the horses' condition.

Amtrak route test scheduled

From Staff and Wire Reports

DALLAS — Amtrak will test this week a route that cuts the time and mileage between Houston and Dallas.

The test is scheduled for Thursday, beginning in Houston, stopping in Dallas and continuing to El Paso. The train will pass through Midland on its way to El Paso.

Amtrak spokesman Debbie Marciniak said the test is the initial step in a study of rail service in the Southwest.

Currently, passengers from Dallas to Houston must stay overnight in San Antonio as do travelers from Houston to El Paso.

The trek from Houston to Dallas would be a 5½ hour, 256-mile journey. The Houston-Dallas-El Paso route would pass cities such as Bryan, Corsicana, Abilene and Odessa in addition to Midland, all of which have no passenger rail service.

Dallas currently has only six Amtrak trains a week, three each to San Antonio and Chicago.

Miss Marciniak said the test train will be only inspecting the tracks, stations and equipment.

Two Lebanese soldiers killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two Lebanese soldiers were killed today in battles with Shiite Moslem militiamen, and opposition Druse leader Walid Jumblatt said a new round of full-scale civil warfare was "inescapable."

An army spokesman said an officer and a sergeant were killed during the machine gun and rocket-propelled grenade exchanges between army positions and Shiite strongholds in a southern Beirut suburb at midday.

The spokesman, who refused to be identified, said army gunners shot back after they came under fire.

Report cites bombing parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA and other intelligence reports cite a Lebanese financial emissary and 13 others as the principal parties responsible for the Oct. 23 bombing that killed 241 U.S. servicemen in Beirut, The Washington Post reports in today's editions.

Quoting reports compiled by the CIA, and the French, Lebanese and Israeli intelligence services, the Post said others involved in planning the bombing included a former security officer of the Palestine Liberation Organization, an Islamic fundamentalist cleryman from Beirut, and Syrian members of the Syrian-controlled Saiqa Palestinian terrorist group.

The newspaper reported that three days before the suicide truck bombing, a Lebanese financial emissary named Hassan Hamiz received a check or voucher for $50,000 that could only be cashed at the Iranian embassies in Beirut or Damascus.

Intelligence reports indicate the $50,000 was cashed in Damascus a few days after the bombing and was the main financial link that set the attack in motion.

Kohl to clear NATO general

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl will clear a top NATO general fired for allegedly frequenting homosexual bars but won't oust Defense Minister Manfred Woerner, the man who fired him, government sources said today.

Gen. Guenter Kiessling, dismissed by Woerner on Dec. 31, will be "rehabilitated" under the terms of an agreement worked out between Woerner and Kiessling, the sources told The Associated Press.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, also said without elaboration that Kohl would give Kiessling a "declaration of honor."

Botha's withdrawal praised

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Government critics and supporters today praised Prime Minister P.W. Botha's declaration that his forces are "disengaging" from combat in southern Angola, but there were doubts a permanent peace was at hand.

Botha said Tuesday that U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Chester Crocker had given South Africa assurances during his visit last week that enabled the him to announce the disengagement. Crocker, on a tour of Africa, met today in Tanzania with President Julius Nyere.

Neither Botha nor State Department spokesman Alan Romberg in Washington would specify what the assurances were. But Romberg called the announcment a positive step, and said, "The important thing is that (the peace process) is moving forward."

Conditions at camps outlined

LONDON (AP) — Prisoners at a special labor camp in the Soviet Union live in cramped, dirty cells and receive inadequate food, water and medical care, according to a document published today by Amnesty International.

The London-based human rights group published what it said was a first-hand description of living conditions at a camp for political prisoners "singled out by the Soviet authorities for particularly severe treatment."

The document is from an unidentified "prisoner of conscience" held at the special corrective labor colony VS 38936-1 near Perm in the Ural Mountains, about 750 miles east of Moscow, Amnesty International said.

No weapons plan revealed

PARIS (AP) — A top State Department official says the United States has no plans to offer specific "trade-offs" to the Soviet Union of medium-range missiles for long-range nuclear weapons.

However, Richard Burt, assistant secretary of state for European affairs, said Washington was "willing to accept limitations in our strengths if the Soviets are willing to accept limitations in theirs."

"In the past, we've been criticized for only pointing out Soviet strengths," Burt said Tuesday in a televised news conference involving reporters in eight West European capitals.

Chilean protesters scattered

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Police dispersed demonstrators demanding that Chile expel former Nazi SS Col. Walter Rauff, and arrested Nazi hunter Beate Klarsfeld and seven other protesters.

About 30 demonstrators chanted "Expel the Nazi Rauff!" before police moved in and broke up the crowd Tuesday in the plaza across from the Moneda presidential palace.

Witnesses said some of the police shouted anti-Semitic obscenities at the people they arrested, most of whom boarded police buses without resisting.

Mrs. Klarsfled, a West German citizen, and two Chilean women and five men, including New York free-lance writer Peter Hellman, were charged with disturbing public order.

Indian bus falls from bridge

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A crowded bus plunged from a bridge into the Ganges River in northeastern India today, killing at least 48 people, according to a news report from the area.

In another accident, seven people died in a fire on a train in central India.

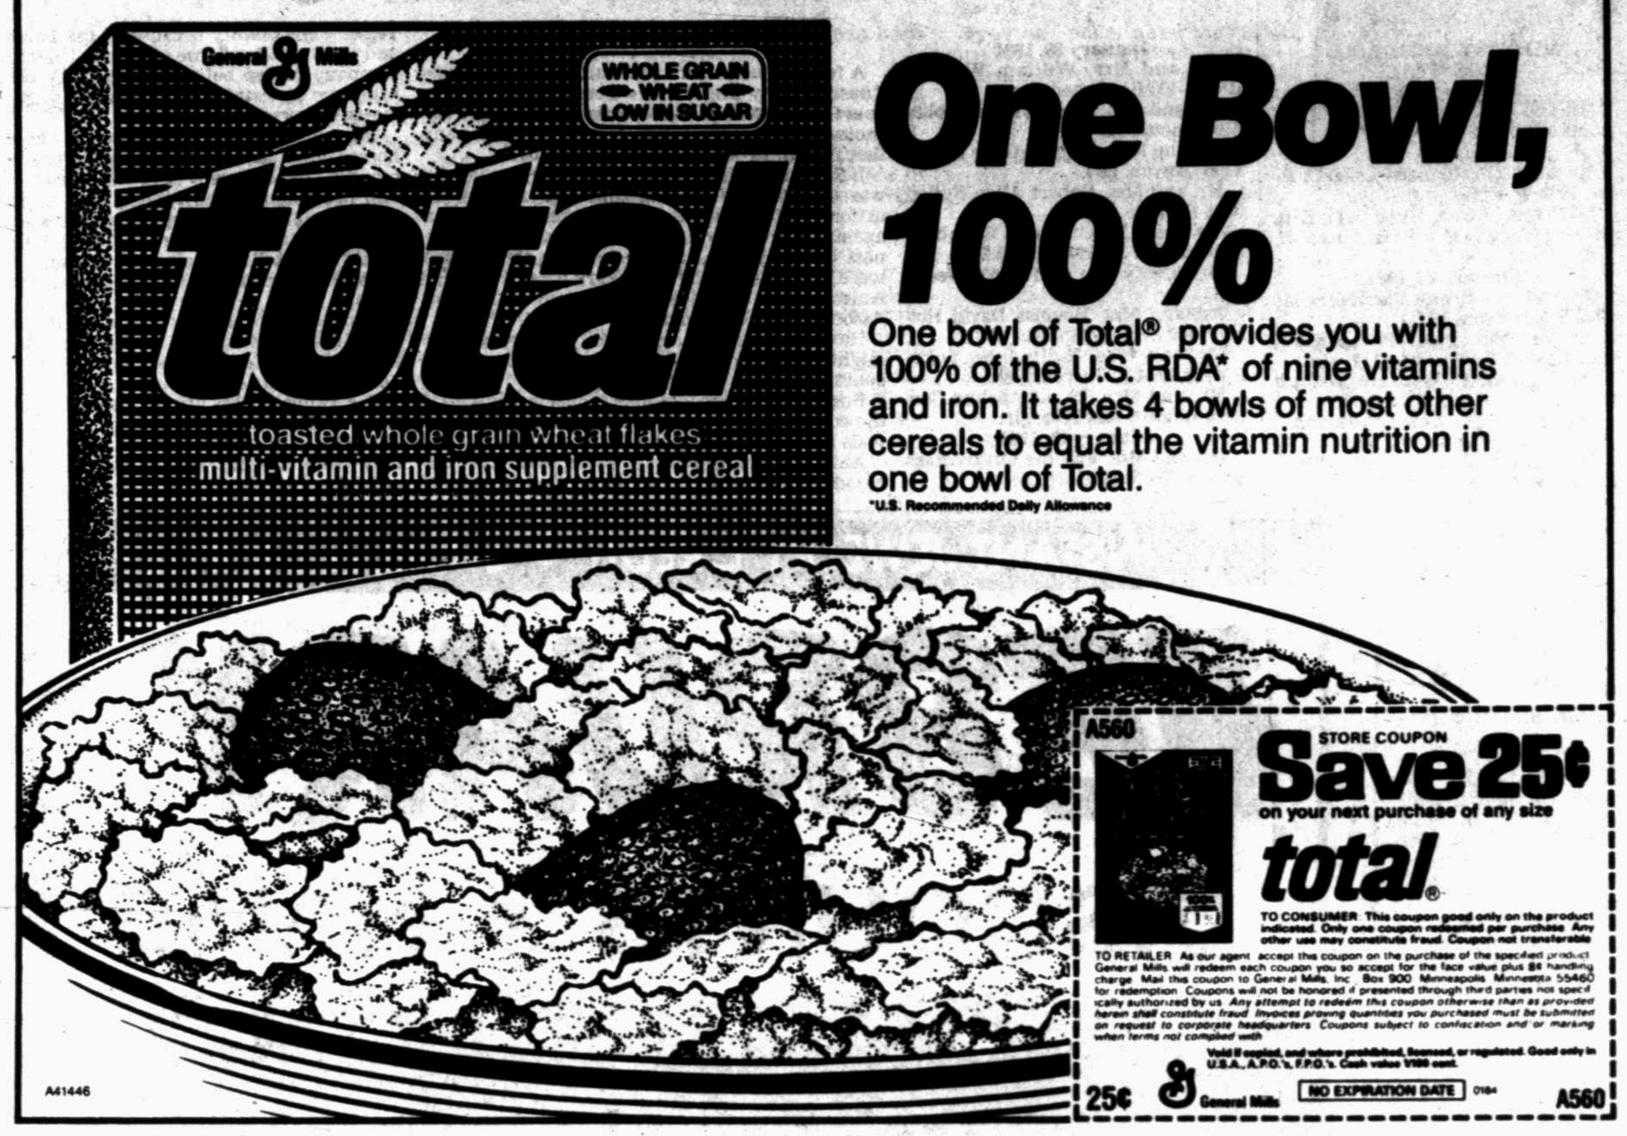

The private bus smashed through bridge railings and fell into the Ganges near Patna, about 288 miles northwest of Calcutta in Bihar state, the United News of India said.

No other details were immediately available. The accident came two days after about 70 people were killed when an intercity government-operated bus ran off a bridge and plunged into a canal in northern Punjab state.

British party 'infiltrated'

LONDON (AP) — Allegations are surfacing that right-wing extremists and racists have infiltrated the governing Conservative Party, and the leader of one far-right group claims two Cabinet ministers are "very sympathetic" to his cause.

George Young, a former deputy director of Britain's Secret Intelligence Service and now chairman of Tory Action, did not name the two Cabinet ministers in a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview Tuesday.

'Good cheer menu' for the new year

Here is a chance to celebrate New Year's Day again without waiting a whole year to do it. This simple but elegant Chinese Style Shrimp in Patty Shells is a perfect way to help bring in the Chinese New Year.

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Chinese New Year's Eve means it is time for the kitchen spirit to return to heaven and report on the behavior he has observed during the past year.

In this menu, the celery, which is a cold dish, and the fried shrimp are presented as appetizers. Steamed or fried rice can be added, and tea or wine served as a beverage. A suitable wine would be Shao Hsing, a Chinese rice wine that is served warm like sake. To warm the wine, stand the bottle in a container of hot water until heated through.

CELERY AND WALNUTS

1/2 cup walnuts
1 pound celery
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1/2 teaspoon sesame or salad oil

Cover walnuts with boiling water. Let stand 10 minutes, then remove skins. Wash and clean celery and cut into 1-inch lengths. Mix with blanched walnuts. Combine vinegar, soy sauce and oil and pour over celery mixture. Serve cold.

FRIED SHRIMP IN THE SHELL

1 pound unshelled shrimp
2 eggs, well beaten
1 1-2 tablespoons flour
1-2 teaspoon salt
Oil for deep frying
Parsley sprig

Remove legs from shrimp but do not shell. Mix eggs, flour and salt into smooth paste. If too thick for dipping, add water until consistency is right. Dip shrimp into mixture and fry in hot oil until pink. Drain and serve garnished with parsley. Makes 6 to 8 appetizer servings.

MUSHROOM SOUP

1/2 cup Oriental dried black mushrooms
6 cups water or stock
1/2 pound pork, sliced
1 cup chopped celery
1 bamboo shoot, sliced
6 water chestnuts, sliced
4 slices ham, cut into thin strips
Salt

Soak mushrooms in cold water until soft. Cut mushrooms into thin strips, discarding hard stems. Place water or stock in large saucepan and bring to boil. Add pork and boil 5 minutes. Add celery, bamboo shoot and water chestnuts and simmer, covered, 30 minutes. Add ham and season to taste with salt. Simmer until heated through. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

FRIED CHICKEN HONG KONG STYLE

1 small chicken
3 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons oil
1 slice ginger, crushed
1 clove garlic, crushed
Salt, pepper
1/4 cup oil
2 cups stock or water
1 cup water
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 cup white mushrooms, chopped
1/2 cup pimientos, chopped
1 onion, chopped

Cut chicken in half from neck to tail. Wash and pat dry. Rub chicken all over with mixture of soy sauce, 2 tablespoons oil, ginger, garlic and salt and pepper to taste. Let stand 30 minutes. Heat 1-4 cup oil in skillet. Add chicken and cook 10 minutes on each side. Add stock, cover and simmer until chicken is done. Remove chicken, reserving stock.

To make gravy, blend water and flour. Add to skillet with mushrooms, pimientos and onion. Simmer 10 minutes. Serve over chicken. Makes 2 to 4 servings, depending on size of chicken.

STEAMED FISH

1 whole fish, about 2 pounds
1 teaspoon slivered mushroom
1 teaspoon slivered pork fat
1 teaspoon slivered ginger
1 teaspoon slivered onion
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1/2 teaspoon salt

Clean fish. Place on platter and top with mushroom, pork fat, ginger and onion. Season with soy sauce and salt. Place platter on rack over hot water in steamer. Cover and steam 15 minutes, or until fish flakes when tested with fork. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

STEAMED PORK

1 pound finely chopped pork
1 onion, chopped
12 water chestnuts, finely chopped
4 mushrooms, chopped
3 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons lard
1 teaspoon cornstarch

Combine pork, onion, water chestnuts and mushrooms. Blend in soy sauce, lard and cornstarch. Pack mixture into 9-inch pie plate. Place on rack over hot water in steamer. Cover and steam 20 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

SAUTEED ASPARAGUS

1 (15-ounce) can asparagus
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 teaspoons water
1-2 cup chicken stock
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon wine
1 tablespoon oil

Drain asparagus, reserving 1-4 cup liquid. Blend cornstarch and water. Add asparagus liquid, stock, soy sauce and wine. Heat oil in skillet. Add cornstarch mixture and cook and stir until thickened. Add asparagus. Simmer until asparagus is heated through. Makes 4 servings.

WALNUT TEA

2 cups Chinese red dates
1 cup ground blanched walnuts
1 cup sugar
1-4 cup cornstarch
2 quarts cold water
1 (13-ounce) can evaporated milk

Boil dates 30 minutes, until softened. Peel, remove pits and mash through sieve or in food processor. Mix walnuts, sugar, cornstarch and 1 cup water in double boiler top. Gradually stir in remaining water and milk and cook until heated through and slightly thickened. Stir in mashed dates and heat. Serve hot in soup bowls. Makes 12 servings.

Chinese celebrate first day of spring, new year

Fireworks, parades and feasts help the Chinese celebrate one of the most important holidays on their calendar — the New Year. The festivities mark both the first day of spring and the beginning of the year. Four days are spent celebrating the tradition of "bringing in the new."

Even without fireworks or four-day celebrations, bring in something new with this recipe for Chinese Style Shrimp in Patty Shells.

Even the novice cook could make this recipe; the basic sauce is a combination of chicken broth, cornstarch and soy sauce.

Even the non-Chinese can appreciate the festiveness and appeal of serving this cuisine during this special time of year.

CHINESE-STYLE SHRIMP IN PATTY SHELLS

1 can (13-3/4 oz.) chicken broth
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1-1/2 tablespoons soy sauce
3 tablespoons peanut oil
1 teaspoon garlic
1-1/2 cups Chinese snow peas, cut into one-inch pieces
1/4 cup sliced scallions or green onions
1 can (3 oz.) sliced water chestnuts, drained
2 packages (6 oz. each) frozen cooked shrimp, thawed and drained
1 package frozen patty shells, prepared according to package directions

Mix chicken broth with cornstarch and soy sauce. In large skillet heat oil over high heat. Add garlic, snow peas and green onions; stir-fry until almost tender-crisp. Add water chestnuts and shrimp and stir in chicken broth mixture; cook, stirring constantly until sauce thickens and just comes to boil. Serve over baked patty shells. Makes six servings.

Diet designed for health awareness

Copley News Service

Heart disease is the primary cause of death in America. It's been declining in recent years due to increased health-awareness, so it's a smart move to be informed about ways in which it can be prevented.

"A Diet for the Young at Heart," is a booklet containing health tips, menus and recipes geared toward lowering blood pressure. High blood pressure is one of the most easily controlled risk factors for heart disease. In other words, keep your blood pressure down, and the likelihood of heart disease goes down, too.

What can you do to keep your blood pressure at a healthy level? A Diet for the Young at Heart quotes the following guidelines, as issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and Department of Health and Human Services:

— Eat a variety of foods.
— Maintain ideal weight.
— Avoid too much fat, saturated fat and cholesterol.
— Eat foods with adequate starch and fiber.
— Avoid too much sugar.
— Avoid too much sodium.
— If you drink alcohol, do so in moderation.

The following recipes are in accordance with these dietary guidelines.

SLIM EGGPLANT PARMIGIANA

8 slices eggplant (¼-inch thick)
1 tbsp. corn oil
8 tsps. Corn Oil Herb Blend (recipe follows)
4 ozs. skim milk mozzarella cheese, thinly sliced
8 slices tomato
4 tsps. grated Parmesan cheese

Lightly brush one side of eggplant with corn oil. Place corn oil side down n cookie sheet. Spread top of each eggplant slice with 1 teaspoon herb mixture. Top with mozzarella, tomato and Parmesan. Bake in 375-F. oven 15 minutes or until eggplant is tender. Serves 4.

Each serving provides: 210 calories, 10 g protein, 10 g carbohydrate, 6 g polyunsaturated fat, 4 g saturated fat, 20 mg cholesterol, 150 mg sodium.

Corn Oil Herb Blend: In blender container place ¼ cup Mazola corn oil, 1 cup fresh parsley leaves, 1 teaspoon dried basil leaves, 1 teaspoon dried marjoram leaves and ⅛ teaspoon pepper; cover. Blend on medium speed 1 minute or until smooth. Makes one-third cup. Each teaspoon provides: 35 calories, 2 g polyunsaturated fat, 0 g saturated fat, 0 mg cholesterol, 5 mg sodium.

LENTIL SOUP

2 tbsps. corn oil
1 cup sliced onion
1 clove garlic, minced
4 cups water
1 (14½-oz) can tomatoes
1 cup lentils, rinsed, drained
2 tbsps. Worcestershire sauce
1 cup thinly sliced carrots
Peel of small lemon cut in very thin strips
1 tbsp. lemon juice
2 tbsps. chopped fresh parsley

In 4-quart saucepot heat corn oil over medium-high heat. Add onion and garlic. Cook, stirring, 2 minutes or until tender. Add next four ingredients. Bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer 1 to 1½ hours or until lentils are cooked. Add carrots and lemon juice during last 15 minutes. Garnish with parsley and lemon peel. Makes about six (1 cup) servings.

Each serving provides: 180 calories, 9 g protein, 27 g carbohydrate, 3 g polyunsaturated fat, 1 g saturated fat, 0 mg cholesterol, 180 mg sodium.

Cookbook plagiarism charged

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

A simmering debate in the cookbook industry over apparent plagiarism has several popular cookbook authors boiling mad.

The charges flying back and forth concern recipe pilfering: an original recipe of one author's appearing in almost idential form in another cookbook without credit.

The most recent target for the controversy has been Richard Nelson, a well-respected cooking teacher and author of one of the hottest selling new bookbooks, "Richard Nelson's American Cooking," (New American Library, $18.50). Nelson is being accused of including almost 40 recipes that are virtually identical to those published 10 years ago in Richard Olney's "Simple French Food," (Atheneum, $6.95).

Other disputes involve:

Paule Wolfert, author of the critically acclaimed "The Cooking of Southwest France (Doubleday $24.95), has claimed that seven of her recipes appeared in a Connecticut women's group cookbook called ("Connecticut a lar Carte," winner of the Tastemaker Award as one of the 10 best cookbooks of 1982. Walfert said she taught some of the recipes in classes attended by members of the book's recipe committee.

Barbara Troop, author of "The Modern Art of Chinese Cooking," (William Morrow, $24.95), told the Chicago Sun-Times last fall that she believed that Caterer Martha Stewart, author of the glossy "Entertaining," (Clarkson N. Potter, $35), had "plagiarized outright" several of her Chinese recipes. Tropp became suspicious after noticing that the names of Stewart(s recipes were the same ones she had used.

Dianh Shore's new cookbook has a recipe for pecan-breaded chicken breasts with mustard sauce that is virtually identical (except for the addition of 3-4 cup chicken broth) to one published five years ago in "Cooking the Nouvelle Cuisine in America," by Michele Urvater and David Liederman (Workman $9.95). Shore said she was given the recipe by a friend.

The problem of not crediting a recipe's source has been going on since the time of the first printed cookbook. But today there is much more money at stake, as cookbooks prove to be lucrative sellers, and people are becoming much more interested in getting proper credit for their recipes..

Olney, who told the Dallas Times Herald he is considering legal action against Nelson for copyright infringement, said, "At first I didn't take it too seriously because plagiarism of a sort occurs all the time. But when I read through the text, I realized this idiot simply copied me word for word, in my own personal writing style."

Food and wine editor Robert Shoffner of Washingtonian magazine, who initially discovered the similarities between Olney's and Nelson's books, said Nelson's book also contains 40 recipes reprinted virtually verbatim from Francesco Ghedini's "Northern Italian Cooking," (published in 1973 but now out of print).

Further examination also showed that the book contained similar recipes from three of James Beard's cookbooks, plus "The New York Times Cookbook," and Craig Claborne and Pierre Franey's "Veal Cookery."

The Times Herald compared several of the recipes Olney said appeared in Nelson's book. The recipes for onion pudding and brussel sprouts gratin, for example, have the same ingredients, the same amounts, in almost the exact order. The directions are very similar, with just a few changes in wording.

James Beard, the acknowledged deam of American cooking, wrote the introductions for both Olney's and Nelson's books. He also was Nelson's mentor and a "very, very close" friend, as he termed it.

COFFEE DESSERT

Many years ago this was a favorite of the wife of President Harry S. Truman. It's well worth reviving.

1 cup water
2 tablespoons instant coffee
8 ounces marshmallows
8 ounces (1 cup) heavy cream

In a medium saucepan bring water just to a boil; off heat stir in the coffee until dissolved. Shake off as much as possible of the marshmallow coating and add marshmallows to coffee.

Over low heat stir until marshmallows melt and mixture is smooth. Chill until slightly thickened.

In a medium bowl whip cream until stiff; gradually fold in marshmallow mixture until blended.

Using ½ cup for each, ladle into sherbet cups or dessert bowls. Chill to set. Makes 8 servings.

MEAT LOAF

Tomato spaghetti sauce gives it zest.

1 large egg
2 pounds ground chuck beef
2 cups soft bread crumbs
1 cup thick tomato spaghetti sauce
1 small onion, finely grated
¼ cup finely chopped green pepper
¼ cup finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon salt

Beat egg until foamy: add beef, crumbs, ½ cup of the tomato spaghetti sauce, onion, green pepper, parsley, Worcestershire and salt; mix well.

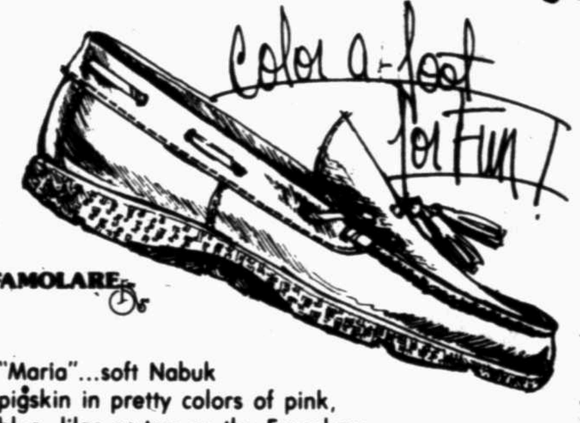

Pack into an 8½ by 4½ by 2½-inch loaf pan; turn out onto a foil-lined 11 by 7-inch baking pan. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven for 45 minutes; syphon off fat.

Spread top and sides of loaf with remaining tomato spaghetti sauce and return to the 350-degree oven until the sauce is hot — about 3 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

BETTER BUSINESS

'Free': Matter of interpretation

By LINDA TRUITT

You have just purchased a coupon book and in the "special bonus" section is a coupon offering free accomodations for three days and two nights in Las Vegas, Reno, Miami or some other resort. Or perhaps a telephone solicitor has just promised you a fabulous vacation as an inducement to buy his product over the telephone.

Don't be duped by the word "free," because you will receive what the Better Business Bureau calls a "vacation certificate." Vacation certificates usually entitle two people to free hotel/motel accomodations in Las Vegas, Reno or Miami for three days and two nights. What may not be stated is that you will be required to sit through a lengthy presentation for real estate, art or a vacation timesharing plan to be eligible for the free accomodations. And since reservations are made through the promoter, not the motel, the promoter reserves the right to reschedule if reservations are made on holidays, during conventions or in peak seasons.

Of course, meals and transportation are not included, as well as tips, taxes and telephone calls, etc.

Often a "fun book" or coupon book is available for an additional charge. It has been found that many of the coupons for free meals, drinks, discount gambling, etc. are limited to strange hours of the day such as 2 a.m. to 5 a.m. And while free drinks and food are often mentioned as a bonus, if you are "playing," drinks are offered free and many casinos offer free food such as hors d'oeurves.

With many of the coupons you have to spend your own money first, then the promoter will match it with an equal sum. It has been determined that with a typical vacation certificate coupon book you would have to spend as much as $50 of your own money to get a $13.50 value in coupons.

Some vacation certificate offers are legitimate and disclose any limitations they might have. By following these guidelines you will avoid fewer surprises:

— Request the name of the motel involved. Personally confirm your reservations with the motel before leaving home.

— If a deposit is required ask whether your deposit is refundable and what you have to do to get it back.

— If you are considering purchasing a fun book ask for details about the coupons being offered.

— Ask for names of references and then contact them for details of their experiences.

If you have been offered a free vacation get the name of the promoter and check the reputation of the company with the Better Business Bureau.

Quacks may be harmful to health

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Is nutrition dangerous to your health? Sure is, if it's the wrong kind. What is the wrong kind? How can you protect yourself and your family from becoming prey of the phony health and nutrition salesmen who are allowed to make billions while others are allowed to die from quackery? Yes, die.

These shocking tragedies are being investigated and the cases of irreversible health damage, mental retardation and deaths that are related directly to food faddism are adding up to astronomical figures. According to Dr. William Jarvis, founder of the California Council Against Health Fraud, 100 such cases were found in the first hour of investigation, 1,000 within three days, and was approaching 10,000 in a very short time.

If the media reported that thousands of people were dying or were in great danger from virtually any other cause, there would be panic and pressure brought to bear from every corner of the land, so why aren't these deaths reported? Why aren't we warned and protected against ingesting dangerous concoctions that are sold under false promises and unproven claims.

The American public is currently terrified of getting AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome), and rightly so, but the numbers of people dying from that are far less than those who have recently identified death causes as related to health fraud.

One problem is that most people will simply not believe that there are products on the market that can and do hurt them. Most of us tend to rely on Uncle Sam, in his ultimate wisdom of freedom of speech, will somehow still protect us against those who would abuse it to mislead, defraud and lie to us.

Most people do not realize that the government really does not protect us very effectively from health frauds. Why not? What other areas of the American lifestyle permit the destruction of health and life for profit?

Sadly, the most vulnerable among us are the sick and the overweight with their low self-esteem they are the desperate victims of flamboyant ads that promise quick and easy ways to health and slim bodies. Instead of fulfilling their promises these fly-by-night snake-oil hucksters take the money and run, only to open up again somewhere else a few weeks later.

Many ads for "miracle diets" and "super duper" unusual new "nutrients" often trap their victims with a money-back guarantee, a gambling on the premise that 99 percent of the people won't ask for it. Some of these companies operate out of a phone booth, and when the complaints come in, they are long gone.

Many deaths have been directly attributed to highly promoted dangerous diets, where the body becomes too depleted to continue life. Will the death certificate name the diet as the cause? Of course not, it will most likely say something like cardiac arrhythmia or will define a death-dealing drop in potassium to various causes, the last of which would be the diet, but would in fact be the actual cause.

As more and more attention is being focused upon the causes of thousands of possibly unnecessary deaths each year, the dangers of health, diet and nutrition fraud are becoming gruesomely apparent.

Military wife heroic too

By ERMA BOMBECK

Early last year I wrote a column on military wives saying they had never been honored for their contribution to understanding throughout the world and personal sacrifice to this country they represent.

Last September, Margaret Hudson of Columbus, Miss., made history. She became the first wife to be so honored. When her husband, Col. James D. Hudson, retired from the Department of the Air Force, Margaret was given a special certificate of appreciation.

The tribute was three lines long. It said she had earned "grateful appreciation for her own unselfish, faithful, and devoted service. Her unfailing support and understanding helped to make possible her husband's lasting contribution to the Nation."

There were a lot of memories between those three lines.

Support. A husband who flew 30 missions to Germany in WW II, participating in the Korean War and the Berlin Airlift.

Unselfishness. An if-not-single-then-unescorted parent who attended family birthdays, Christmases and graduations alone.

Understanding. Never knowing where her husband was assigned or when (and if) he'd be back. And the hard part: staying overseas when he returned to the States and not being allowed to go with him.

Contribution. In Bolivia on diplomatic duty where she was assaulted, becoming the first woman assigned overseas to be injured. A revolution where their home was invaded by 36 soldiers with machine guns.

Appreciation. Two tours of Vietnam.

Margaret Hudson would be the first to say she is not unique in the annals of wives whose job it is to follow and wait.

Military wives, as well as others whose husbands follow orders, have been doing it for years since some warrior picked up the first rock.

The point is, every 15 seconds in this country an award is given for something. (If you're counting country-Western performers, make that every two seconds.)

Awards make you feel good every time you dust them.

They don't cost a lot, but every time you look at them, you remember how great you felt when you received them.

Forgive me, Margaret, but I had to share this with 31 million readers. They're applauding. I hope you can hear it.

Cornish hens baked with 24 garlic cloves

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

A few months ago I decided to bake Cornish hens with garlic cloves — 4 hens, 24 cloves. It was so well received and easy to prepare you may want to try it — provided, as Richard Olney says, you "do not share the mental anti-garlic quirk."

CORNISH HENS WITH 24 GARLIC CLOVES

4 fresh Cornish hens (each 1¼ pounds)
Salt and pepper to taste
24 garlic cloves, unpeeled
½ cup olive oil
2 large ribs celery, thinly sliced
1½ teaspoons dried crushed tarragon
Parsley sprigs
Sliced French bread, toasted

Wash and dry hens, including the inner cavity of each. Sprinkle cavities with salt and pepper and insert 6 garlic cloves in each. Fold wings back.

Choose a casserole, ovenproof saucepot or saute pan that has a cover and is just large enough to hold the hens in a single layer. To the casserole add the oil and the celery; stir in the tarragon.

Arrange the hens, breast side up, in the casserole. Cover the top of the casserole with foil so it extends over the edge; add casserole cover — the foil will help make a tight seal.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until hens are tender and garlic cloves are very soft — 1 to 1¼ hours. Remove hens, one at a time, to a cutting board and with a kitchen scissors cut in half lengthwise; remove garlic and set aside. Arrange halved hens on heated platter; pile garlic cloves in the center; garnish with the parsley.

Pour the celery sauce in the casserole into a small sauce bowl and pass with the hens. Garlic cloves (they will have lost their pungency) are slipped out of their skins and spread on the toast. Makes 4 to 8 servings.

Note: The giblets from the Cornish hens (except the livers) are excellent to add to a stockpot. The livers may be combined with chicken livers for another dish.

Billions of cookies made

The 7 billion chocolate chip cookies that Americans bake in their homes each year, if laid edge to edge in a line, would stretch almost nine times around the Earth at the Equator.

Citrus prices expected to rise more

Hearst Feature Service

"Don't grumble about the recent price hikes in orange and grapefruit juice," says Bobby F. McKown, executive vice president of Florida Citrus Mutual. "Instead, go out and buy. You'll have plenty to grumble about in a couple of weeks, when the real price increases come through."

Other citrus industry officials agree: Although the frost that crippled much of Florida and Texas late last month isn't expected to result in any fruit shortages, it is going to cost the American consumer dearly in the form of much higher prices — 20 to 30 percent more for fresh and processed oranges and grapefruit by month's end. And that has some food brokers, buyers and retailers up in arms.

Food brokers complain that most citrus growers market their produce through co-ops — which one broker prefers to call "cartels" — and say the frost was a convenient excuse to create a panicky buying spree and to hike prices of both existing stocks and juice that hasn't yet been produced.

A produce manager of a supermarket chain adds: "It's unconscionable, because there is no shortage — and to make matters worse, even California is jacking up its citrus prices. Why California? They've had a bumper crop and no frost!"

Anne Warring, public relations manager at Sunkist Growers Inc. in Sherman Oaks, Calif., agrees that the California crop of navel oranges being harvested is of exceptionally good quality, "and although it's smaller than last year's record crop, it's much higher than average." She admits that prices of the California fruit have increased as a result of the freeze in Florida and Texas.

"The freeze there occurred over the long Christmas weekend," she recalls, "and when we return to work the Tuesday after Christmas, our sales department was reporting strengthening consumer demand for California navel oranges. Because of that, our prices are up between 50 cents and $1 a crate. That's only one or two cents a pound, with only a very moderate price impact."

Buyers, however, say that by the time the oranges from Sunkist — a co-op of about 6,000 citrus growers in California and Arizona — reach the supermarkets, the price increase is close to 20 percent, and that's for navel oranges, which are not for juice. Most store operators predict prices of fresh and frozen oranges and grapefruit juice will rise drastically — anywhere from 15 to 30 percent — within the next two weeks, and possibly more by spring.

"Retail prices are expected to level off at 20 percent above what they were at Christmas, and not come down for a while," says McKown of Florida Citrus Mutual.

Pastrami made Chinese-style

By MERLE ELLIS

John Won is one of the best cooks I know. He owns Tiburon Tommie's — Mai Tai Restaurant, which is just across the street from my office. It's advertised as a Polynesian restaurant in the guide books of the area, but about the only thing Polynesian about the place is their Mai Tais. Basically, the food at Tommie's is — as is Won — Chinese, but Won, as a few of us around town have discovered, can cook equally well in almost any language.

A group of us have lunch there almost every day. Won does a marvelous country-fried steak with Chinese noodles. His Chinese-style roast duck with sauerkraut and latkes is out of this world. But my favorite is his Chinese-style pastrami made of leftover Irish corned beef. Whenever he has corned beef and cabbage for the group, I know it's only a day away from grilled pastrami sandwiches on rye with sauerkraut and Swiss cheese, as good as any at a New York deli.

Pastrami is a cured, peppered and slow-cooked brisket of beef and when you buy it at a deli, it is more than a little bit on the expensive side. Won makes his own cut of corned beef and saves a small fortune. So can you — he gave me his recipe.

Most often, corned beef also is made from beef brisket. It, too, is cured, but unlike pastrami it often is cheap.

You will find corned beef in the market in one of two forms these days. Some meat men still "pump" their own the old-fashioned way. A curing brine consisting of water, salt, sugar and sodium nitrite is pumped into the brisket to saturate it. It is then soaked in a barrel of brine along with a variety of spices until the flavor and the cure have penetrated the meat completely.

Some markets still cure some very good old-fashioned corned beef, and if you live near one that does, you are lucky. But many markets don't sell enough; it sits in the brine longer than it should and can get a little on the salty side.

Most markets carry a modern corned beef that is cured in USDA inspected processing plants under much better conditions. The product that results is a milder corned beef than its salty, old-fashioned ancestor. I find the modern kind better for making pastrami.

Many brands are packed in a plastic package that can go right into the cooking pot, so be sure to read the label before you open the package. If it can be cooked in the package, it cooks in its own juices and has a marvelous flavor.

Whichever kind of corned beef you buy, be sure to buy lots. You'll want to have a couple of pounds left after your dinner of corned beef and cabbage to make a nice piece of John Won's Chinese pastrami.

CHINESE PASTRAMI

1- to 2-pounds leftover cooked corned beef
1 tablespoon each, black pepper, red pepper, paprika, celery seed
2 tablespoons cornstarch

Rinse cooked corned beef in cold water and shake off excess. Mix all dry ingredients together and rub into the meat well on all sides. The cornstarch in the mixture helps the spices adhere to the meat.

Put the meat on a wire rack in a roasting pan and bake in a very slow oven (150-degrees, or as low as it will go) until it is all dried out — 2- to 4-hours.

Once the meat is dried (it took about 3½ hours for a 2-pound piece in my oven), brush off the excess spice mixture, wrap in plastic wrap and keep in the refrigerator. To serve, slice as thinly as possible across the grain of the meat. Use any way that you would use pastrami.

Cake made with honey

OAT SPICE CAKE

Made with honey, it's one of the best of its kind.

1 cup boiling water
1 cup quick-cooking oats
1½ cups all-purpose flour, see Note
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground ginger
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
½ cup butter
¾ cup sugar
1 cup honey
2 large eggs

Grease and flour a square cake pan (9 by 9 by 1¾ inches). In a small bowl pour boiling water over oats; cover and let stand 20 minutes. On wax paper stir together flour, soda, salt, cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg and cloves. In the large bowl of an electric mixer beat together butter, sugar and honey until blended. Add eggs and beat to blend. Add oatmeal mixture and beat gently until there are no lumps. Add flour mixture and gently stir until blended. Turn into prepared pan. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 50 to 60 minutes. Loosen edges and turn out on a wire rack. Delicious served warm with lemon sauce.

Note: Thoroughly stir flour in its container, then lightly spoon into dry measures and level. —(AP)

Almonds versatile

Copley News Service

The almond is one of the most used nuts in the kitchen. You'll find it slivered over fish and steamed vegetables, blanched and added to Chinese dishes, ground and formed into candies, or chopped into cookie batters.

The 1983 harvest yielded close to 250 million pounds of shelled almonds — so there should be plenty to go around in 1984.

Thought to have originated in China or the Middle East, the almond found its way to California in the mid-18th century. Franciscan padres planted trees (they look much like peach trees), and by 1900 California's almond industry was flourishing. The climate there is ideal for growing the nut, which is actually a fruit.

Yes, you read it right — the almond, botanically speaking, is a fruit. It's the ancestor of such fruits as peaches, plums, and cherries which contain stones or pits. A great source of vitamin E, iron, and riboflavin, almonds are commercially available in a number of forms. Whether in the shell, chopped, roasted whole, blanched and slivered, or ground, you'll find that almonds add a special gourmet flair to many dishes.

By the way, if you've never tried almond butter (which I like to think of as peanut butter for adults), you've got a real treat in store. Its rich, nutty flavor is more subtle than that of peanut butter, and of course it's available in both smooth and chunky styles.

To roast whole almonds in the microwave, toss with oil to coat lightly. Spread evenly in a single layer on a plate, then microwave on high for 2 minutes. Toss and allow to stand for 1 minute. Microwave for 2 minutes longer, or until golden brown. Drain and let cool on paper towel. Salt lightly, if desired.

To toast almonds, omit oil and microwave at full power for 1½ minutes. Toss and let rest 1 minute, then microwave 1½ minutes longer.

Potatoes scalloped

POTATO SCALLOP

Small-size version of one of my favorite recipes.

1½ tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons unbleached all-purpose flour
1½ cups milk
½ teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste
3 medium (1¼ pounds) potatoes

Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, milk, salt and pepper. Pare potatoes and shred fairly coarsely — there should be 4 loosely packed cups; stir into sauce. Turn into a buttered 1½-quart round baking dish (8 by 2 inches). Dot with an extra ½ tablespoon butter. Bake in a preheated 300-degree oven, uncovered, until potatoes are tender and top is golden brown and crusty — 2 hours. Serve hot. Makes 4 servings.

Chef likes both old, new cuisines

By The Associated Press

In this day of endless debate over the merits and shortcomings of nouvelle cuisine as opposed to the old style of gourmet cooking, it is interesting to find a chef who likes both schools.

"Food is like music. It must be understood to be enjoyed," says Bernard Herrmann, chef de cuisine of La Reserve Restaurant in midtown Manhattan. "Many people who promote the merits of one school or the other don't really understand either."

Herrmann, who was born in Alsace, native land of many fine chefs, got his training in some of France's best restaurants. When he came to America, he brought his continental favorites along with him. He leans toward the fine sauces of Escoffier's day, but thinks highly of nouvelle cuisine.

"In general," he said, "I like the way nouvelle cuisine dishes are prepared. They are more colorful. I especially like the vegetable arrangements."

Like most of today's chefs, Herrmann was raised in the old school. The chefs he worked under looked on Escoffier as the master, but in recent years many lean toward the new methods.

"Take Paul Bocuse," he said. "He is probably the greatest chef today." Bocuse is an advocate of nouvelle cuisine, while at the same time practicing many of the old cooking methods.

Herrmann's own soups are popular and include such openers as Potage de Cresson, which features watercress. Here is his recipe.

POTAGE DE CRESSON

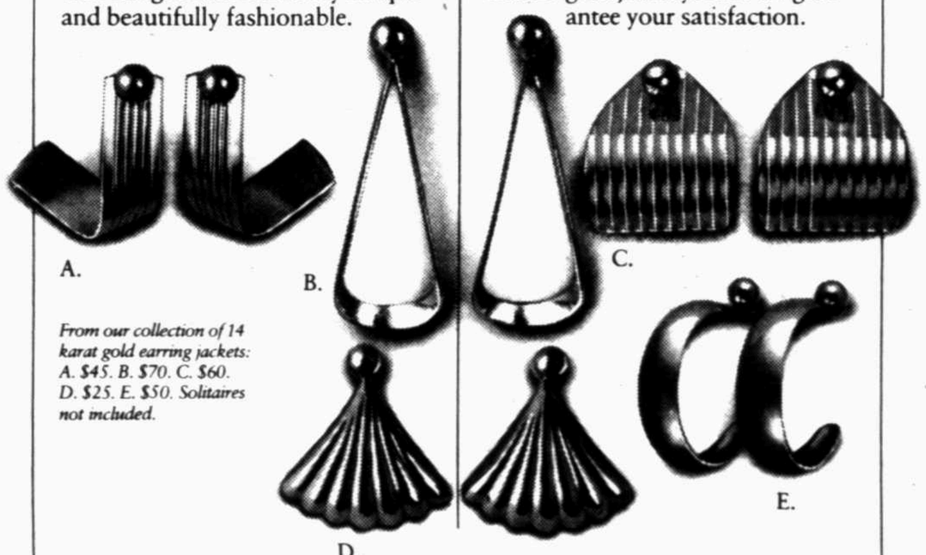

6 firm, bright green bunches of watercress
3 small potatoes
1 small onion, chopped fine
4 tablespoons sweet butter
6 cups chicken stock
Salt and pepper to taste
1 to 2 cups heavy cream, according to taste

Chop watercress, rinse in cold water and drain. Set aside a few leaves for garnish, blanch remainder 5 seconds and cool. Peel and dice potatoes. Saute the onion, in two tablespoons of butter until wilted. Add boiling chicken stock, salt, pepper, potatoes and watercress. Simmer 35 to 45 minutes. Pour soup through a food mill, then place it back on the fire and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and add remaining two tablespoons of butter and desired amount of cream. Correct seasoning. Garnish with watercress leaves and serve. Serves 4 to 6 persons.

Keep colorful traces out of wash

By SHARON A. HILLIS

The hidden crayon in a child's pocket can cause havoc in the laundry. If crayons go through the laundry, try these remedies:

— For a few spots on a washable garment, remove the surface crayon wax with a dull knife. Place stained area face-down between paper towels and press with a warm iron.

Place the garment with stain face-down on the paper towels and sponge back any remaining stain with a pre-wash spray or a dry cleaning solvent spot remover. Solvent spot removers can be purchased at drug, grocery or some clothing and department stores.

After sponging with solvent, let dry. Launder with detergent or soap. If traces of color remain wash again. Soak in an enzyme pre-soak product or oxygen bleach (one that is safe for colors) with hottest water safe for fabric. Launder item as usual. If the stain persists try washing with chlorine bleach if it is safe for the fabric.

— When crayon stains have spread throughout a load of clothes, try these steps. First wash the items with the hottest water safe for fabric (preferably hot) using a laundry soap and one cup baking soda.

If the color remains soak in an enzyme pre-soak product or an oxygen bleach using the hottest water safe for fabric, then launder. If the stain persists wash with chlorine bleach if safe for fabric.

— For valuable non-washable items, professional cleaning as soon as possible after the stain is discovered is advisable. Be sure to point out the stain to the dry cleaner.

— If crayon marks are on upholstery fabrics (other than leather, suede or vinyl) or other dry clean only items, use a dry cleaning solvent. Test the solvent on an inconspicuous area to determine its effect on the fabric before applying to the stained area. If the fabric doesn't seem to be adversely affected, sponge the solvent onto the stained area.

In the case of piled fabrics run in the direction of the pile. Sponge again if the stain remains.

Some vinyls are damaged by dry cleaning solvents. For stains on vinyl try wiping the stained area with a heavy-duty liquid laundry detergent or with a paste made from dry laundry detergent and warm water. If the stains remain sponge with rubbing or denatured alcohol. Again test solutions on an inconspicuous spot before applying alcohol to the stained area.

The safest idea for suede and leather garments is not to attempt any major stain removal at home. These items should be taken to professional cleaners.

Teen party prepared early

Hearst Feature Service

If the party is a one-stop blast and the stop is at your house, you'll want to have filling, good-tasting food that you can make ahead. After all, who wants to be stuck in the kitchen when everyone else is having a great time?

The solution is to make the food earlier in the day, or even the day before, and set it out right before the company arrives.

You can go the cold-cut route. Make a trip to your local deli. Pick up some pastrami, salami, baloney and roast beef. Don't forget the Swiss, the cheddar, the mozzarella or whatever cheese you like.

Arrange sliced meat and cheese on trays, set out a big basket of rolls (cut in half so they can be made into sandwiches), and containers of mustard, mayo and other condiments.

When San Francisco Examiner reporter Cynthia Robins has a crowd coming over, she prepares this Tex-Mex-inspired nibbles platter, which she calls a "Taco layer." It's a takeoff on the popular layered salad, and looks great when it's put together in a wide, shallow dish, surrounded by rows of tortilla chips for dipping.

TACO LAYER

1/2 head iceberg lettuce
2 cans (about 4 to 6 cups) refried beans
1 package taco seasoning mix
1/4 to 1/2 cup chopped green chilies (optional)
3 ripe avocados
1/2 onion
1 tomato
1/2 cup green chile salsa
picante sauce to taste
1 cup sour cream
1 cup pitted, ripe olives, chopped
1/2 pound Monterey Jack cheese, grated
1/2 pound medium Cheddar cheese, grated
Taco chips

Wash and drain the lettuce and chop it into fairly small pices. Pack them in a plastic bag, press out the air and seal. They'll keep several hours, refrigerated.

Combine the beans and taco seasoning mix in a saucepan. They're the one thing you'll do right at the last minute. Heat the beans until they're bubbly. If you want it hotter, add some green chilies and/or a dash or more of Tabasco or picante sauce.

Peel and mash the avacados. Finely mince the onion and add it. Peel the tomato, cut it in half and squeeze out the seeds. Chop it and add it to the avocado with 1/2 cup (or more or less as you like it) of medium hot salsa, and a shake or two of picante sauce. What you have is a quick and easy guacamole. The guacamole can be made ahead of time and refrigerated. To keep it from getting dark, press plastic wrap right onto the surface of the guacamole.

Layer One: Spread the lettuce over a round platter, about 12 inches in diameter.

Layer Two: Spoon the beans over the lettuce, spreading them evenly.

Layer Three: Spread the guacamole over the hot beans.

Layer Four: Stir the sour cream until it is smooth, then spread it over the guacamole.

Layer Five: Sprinkle the olives over the sour cream. (They can be chopped ahead of time and refrigerated, covered.)

Layer Six: Sprinkle the cheeses over the olives (it can be grated ahead of time and refrigerated in plastic bags).

Surround your six-layered construction with corn or taco chips.

Curry can add exotic spice to many dishes

By OLIVIA AND PAUL BENSON
Copley News Service

Most chefs keep on their spice shelf a small jar of curry powder and use it occasionally to liven up some egg, fish, vegetable, meat or chicken dish.

Some of the packagers of curry powder skimp on the more expensive ingredients and add fillers such as rice flour to increase the bulk of their product, so many cooks who are especially fond of good curry dishes prefer to prepare their own curry powder.

The word curry comes from the Tamil language of southern India and Ceylon, in which "kari" means relish or spice.

British colonials in India became fond of the spicy, stewlike curries prepared there and brought the recipes back to England.

Hot curries are not to everyone's taste. There is no reason, though, that even an authentic curry has to leave you with plumes of smoke coming from your ears. A mildly seasoned, lightly spicy curry can be most enjoyable.

In India and neighboring countries, curry pastes are often prepared by mixing curry powder with such ingredients as fresh ginger, mangoes, apples, onions, garlic and many other fruits, vegetables and herbs.

The paste is spread over meat, poultry, fish or vegetables, and may also be used in conjunction with a variety of marinades. With imagination and experimentation, you can come up with an almost endless number of great, exotic taste combinations.

As with many highly seasoned dishes, you will find that the effect of curry on the palate builds for the first several bites. The answer is more curry.

Soon you will have reached a plateau of sensation at which the tastes and your enjoyment of them are most pleasurably enhanced.

Both beer and tea go very well with curries. We like to serve them with rice though some people feel this is a distraction.

Curried chicken simple

CURRY CHICKEN

It's baked a no-fuss way.

3¾-pound roasting chicken, cut up
1 large (1 pound) Spanish onion (peeled, quartered and thinly sliced)
1 large (½ pound) McIntosh apple (peeled, cored and thinly sliced)
16-ounce can stewed tomatoes
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons curry powder
Paprika

Wash and dry chicken. In an oblong 3-quart baking dish (13 by 8¾ by 1¾ inches) stir together onion, apple, tomatoes, salt and curry powder. Top with chicken, skin side up, in a single layer; sprinkle chicken with paprika. Bake, uncovered, in a 400-degree oven until chicken is tender and skin crisp — about 1 hour. Serve hot (the sauce will be thin) with rice. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Government orders more cheese, gets the works

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Let's uncork some chianti, order up a mushroom pizza and talk a bit about that mozzarella gambit over at the Department of Agriculture.

Perhaps motivated by the big dairy surplus, the department has the idea that frozen pizzas ought to have more real cheese, not the ersatz mozzarella that adorns much of the frozen pizza sold in retail stores.

So last summer the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service proposed requiring that every frozen pizza with meat have at least 12 percent cheese topping, with no less than half of that being real cheese. Now only 10 percent of the cheese topping has to be real cheese.

The department also wants pizza labels to tell consumers more clearly when they're buying imitation cheese. But the department can only get its regulatory hands on pizza with meat products; the Food and Drug Administration is responsible for meatless pizza and requires only that products with cheese substitutes be clearly labeled.

All of the hubbub surprised a lot of people. Food processors, for instance, thought that Reaganomics meant less regulation.

Consumer advocates were equally taken aback by the proposed regulation on cheese in meat pizza. "It was unprecedented, a complete shock to everyone," said Tom Smith of Public Voice for Food and Health Policy. "This administration has never gone to bat for consumers on labeling issues."

Whatever, the Agriculture Department asked for comment on its proposal and, paisano, did the comments come back. The department is learning that tampering with pizza is about as serious as mucking around with the flag and motherhood.

The department has been inundated with such reaction — more than 2,000 pro and con statements — that it has extended the comment period to April. Although the issue has kicked around the Agriculture Department for years, the frozen pizza industry said it needs more time to work up economic-impact data.

"This is an unusual response to one of our proposals," said Robert F. Hibbert, director of standards and labeling. "But there have been a lot of form letters, organized mail. These things are not elections, though; it's too easy to stuff the ballot box."

DEAR ABBY

Face-lift lifts spirits but raises doubts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband died when my son was 3, so I went to work as an aide in a hospital to support myself and my son. It wasn't easy, but it was worth the effort because he has just graduated from college.

My problem: About five months before my son was to graduate, I looked in the mirror and thought, "You look like an old lady. If you go to your son's graduation looking 20 years older than the other mothers, your son will be ashamed of you." So through the generosity of a plastic surgeon I met at the hospital, I had a face-lift. It cost me only $1,500, and it was worth it to make my son proud of me.

He was very pleased when he saw me, but the women I work with were cold and unfriendly. (One said, "Even $1,500 is a lot of money to a woman in your circumstances.") Abby, many of these women spend $20 and $30 at the beauty shop every week.

Please tell me I didn't do anything so terrible. Or do you feel the way they do? — UNHAPPY

DEAR UNHAPPY: You deserve to be happy. But unless you do things to please yourself, you never will be.

You had a face-lift for the wrong reason — to please your son. (He may have been just as proud of you the way you were.) And now you're "unhappy" because the women at work "think" you did something wrong.

You, my friend, are the most important person in the world. Be good to yourself, and don't worry about what others may think.

DEAR ABBY: A group of us girls were gathered at our weekly card club when a question was asked by one of the members:

"Is it possible for a husband to come home, undress and get into bed with his body reeking of someone else's perfume, then deny that he was with another woman?"

The majority said it is not possible, so we decided to ask you. — THE THURSDAY GROUP

DEAR GROUP: It's possible for a husband to deny it, but in view of such overwhelming circumstantial evidence, it would be impossible to believe him.

DEAR ABBY: When you advised the young girl who wanted to get married to go to college first because one day she might have to support herself and maybe a child, too, it really struck home with us.

My husband and I tried to convince our daughter of that very thing, but she refused to believe that one day she might have to support herself and a child. Well, after five years of marriage and a darling little son, that's exactly what happened. Her husband suddenly decided that the responsibilities of marriage were not for him.

The responsibility, of course, became our daughter's, so she and her son are now living with us, and she's gone back to college to become a registered nurse.

It's difficult for all of us, but we are glad we can give her the assistance she needs to become self-supporting. How much easier it would have been if she had finished her training and then married and had a family.

Abby, if all the young girls out there who should have taken that advice, but didn't, were laid end to end, they would reach from UCLA to the University of Maine. — HOT SPRINGS MOM

DEAR ABBY: First, "Stuck in New Jersey" got stuck for $664 when 16 guests failed to show for a catered wedding. Then another reader wrote to say that "Stuck" need not have been stuck. She could have instructed the caterers to pack up the dinners for her to take home and put in her freezer.

I can't speak for all caterers — only myself — but unless the party is held in the client's own home with refrigeration immediately at hand, packing food to go presents some awesome responsibilities, which I refuse to assume.

After food leaves our supervision, we cannot be responsible for it. Often the host or hostess will go elsewhere to "unwind" after the party, and lobster thermidor left for "a few hours" in a warm car can spoil rapidly.

We will fill a fridge, and our responsibility ends there. But fill up a car with leftovers — no way. We could lose our shirts, shorts, shoes and insurance. — PASADENA CATERER

Papaya Molds

PAPAYA MOLDS
No sugar is added.
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1¼ cups orange juice
6-ounce can (¾ cup) unsweetened pineapple juice
1 ripe papaya (about 5½ inches long)
Custard Sauce, if desired

In a medium bowl sprinkle gelatin over orange juice and let soften — 3 to 5 minutes.

In a small saucepan heat pineapple juice until it is boiling hot; pour over gelatin mixture and stir vigorously until gelatin is dissolved. Halve, peel and seed papaya; cut into ¼- to ½-inch cubes — makes about 1¾ cups. Add papaya to gelatin mixture.

Chill until slightly thickened; stir gently; ladle into four 6-ounce custard cups or molds. Chill to set. At serving time, unmold.

This jellied fruit is slightly tart so you may want to serve it with the Custard Sauce. Makes 4 servings.

Curfews a push for life

DENVER — Gloria Violette's is a plea from a broken heart.

Her son was just beginning high school when, on a night in 1980, he and a 17-year-old friend were killed in a post-midnight car accident following a football game and beer party.

Joey Violette, 16, was thrown from the car and killed instantly after his companion lost control of the car he was driving. He thus became one of the more than 4,000 people who die each year in accidents involving young drivers. Like Joey, most are killed during late night and early morning hours.

So two weeks ago, Gloria Violette wrote to Colorado State Sen. Barbara Holme urging Colorado to join the growing number of states adopting "Cinderella laws," nighttime driving curfews for teenagers. They are laws that studies show can markedly decrease the late-night carnage involving the nation's youngest motorists.

"It could have saved our 16-year-old son's life," Violette wrote.

"Our family has been devastated because of this accident," she added, arguing that a driving curfew "may prevent others from (experiencing) this tragedy."

HOLME IS sponsoring such a measure in hopes of saving the lives of teenage drivers, their passengers and others on the road. It is a proposal that has sparked intense debate here and in other states, including California, over parental responsibility and the role of government in family relations.

"If parents want some way to control their children, they can take the car keys away," counters Willard Crary, an emergency medical technician who testified against a Colorado Cinderella law.

But to others the issue is protecting other motorists as well, since more than half of the victims in fatal accidents involving teenage drivers are pedestrians, cyclists and occupants of other cars.

"It's definitely a parental responsibility," Holme said. "Unfortunately, many parents either can't or don't enforce restrictions, and the problem is their children may kill or injure me."

Such debate comes against a background of evidence that driving curfews for teenagers reduce their involvement in auto crashes by up to 69 percent for 16-year-olds alone. If widely adopted as advocated by some safety researchers, it could become another weapon, along with a higher legal driving age, in curbing the traffic toll among young drivers. It is seen as an alternative to the more politically unpopular step of raising driving ages.

"EARLY LICENSURE is permitted," the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety says of Cinderella laws, "but restrictions are put on operating a motor vehicle during hours in which driving by teenagers is done primarily for recreational purposes, and often involves drinking."

An institute study of 1978 crash data found that 4,198 deaths occurred in crashes involving 16- and 17-year-old drivers. Of the deaths, drivers accounted for 1,344, their passengers for 1,307 and the balance, 1,547, were others not in the driver's car.

In a study last year, the institute concluded that Cinderella laws "substantially reduce" fatal accidents by the youngest motorists. New York's 9 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew for all 16-year-olds and for 17-year-olds without driver's education resulted in five fewer accidents a year during curfew hours for every 1,000 16-year-olds, the institute found.

THE BETTER HALF

"The boss doesn't like the way I dress at the office. He thinks I'd look better in tar and feathers!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, February 2, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Irish novelist and poet James Joyce, writer William Benet and violinist Fritz Kreisler were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: poet James Dickey, Farrah Fawcett, comedian Tom Smothers and San Francisco Giants coach Don Buford. New career success makes 1984 very special. The raise that comes with a promotion reduces domestic tension. Consult a trusted adviser before sinking your savings into a business venture. An associate's optimism could prove unfounded. Romance makes you feel as if you are on a holiday. Be sure partner feels the same way before asking for a commitment. Family members will pose tough questions. Be candid.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A family member's enthusiasm is contagious. Go ahead with your plans. A financial roadblock will soon be removed. Tension remains high until a dispute is resolved. Call home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Use your past experiences to gain the advantage in a battle for sales. A check arrives. Romance looks very exciting. Do not let pleasure affect your business judgment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A small gift puts you in a good mood. Reserve comment on a business or financial deal until you have all the facts. A co-worker is bluffing. Refuse to be bullied.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Even if a co-worker or roommate's demands annoy you, try to be accommodating. The concessions you make now will put you in a powerful position later on. Romance is exceptionally happy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone drops the reins of leadership. Pick them up and your financial worries will be over! You can be very persuasive. Keep your priorities straight and curb your temper.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Try to reach a compromise before a matter goes to court. You will save money and get better results. Financial pressures cannot be ignored. Deal directly with those at the top.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money is power. Put profits back into a business. You have wonderful rapport with an influential person. An office romance is strictly taboo. Do not follow a financial tip.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The ability to speak a foreign language serves you well in business and romance. An out-of-towner could cause some inconvenience. Grin and bear it. His or her visit has financial benefits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): More and more, your home is the center of your attention. Romance has never been better! A sideline or cottage industry could become your main source of income.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Simmer down and exercise greater self-discipline at work. A platonic relationship begins to warm up. Do not try to mix business with pleasure. Romance and friendship could clash.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A period of meditation gives you new peace of mind. You enter cycle of great activity and excitement. Keep eye on your long-term goals. A business venture succeeds.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Curb a tendency to be extravagant. Tax time is right around the corner. A visitor brings good news. The special favor you do for a new neighbor will be deeply appreciated.

Filmmaker produces food store

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — High-rolling filmmaker Dino De Laurentiis has returned to Hollywood for the premiere of his latest production — an extravaganza starring the joys of Italian cookery.

No, the film producer hasn't given up movies — he has $100 million worth of product for release in 1984 and more in the works. But as he said in a recent interview in his Beverly Hills Hotel bungalow, he is merely returning to his second favorite pastime — food.

"My hobby has always been food," he said. "My father was a spaghetti manufacturer in Naples, and at the age of 14, before I got into the film industry, I traveled all over Italy as a salesman for his products."

De Laurentiis has lived in the United States for 10 years, first here, now in New York, and he finds American food too much attuned to quantity and not enough to quality. That's why he travels with his own cook. That's also why he has opened three DDL Foodshows in New York and is introducing the gourmet shop in Beverly Hills this month, with others to follow in nearby Westwood and Santa Monica.

The producer has planned the food emporiums with the same thoroughness he would apply to a $30 million movie. The Beverly Hills store has a 66-seat restaurant and a deli with take-out food at reasonable prices.

De Laurentiis was equally enthusiastic about his movies, and he rattled off this year's releases: "The Bounty," with Anthony Hopkins and Mel Gibson, May 4; "The Firestarter," with George C. Scott and Drew Barrymore, May 11; "Conan II," starring Arnold Schwarzenegger, July 4; "The Saga of Werewolf," Thanksgiving; and "Dune," the $40-million spectacle, Christmas.

He said there are more projects in production this year, including the long-postponed "Tai-Pan," for which he has finally cleared the rights and plans to shoot in Thailand on a $35-million budget.

De Laurentiis obviously doesn't think small. Long a free-wheeling producer in Italy, he came to Hollywood in the 1970s and made "King Kong," "Buffalo Bill and the Indians," "Orca," "Drum" and "Hurricane." Though scorned by critics, his movies made money, he said.

"'King Kong' grossed $100 million, including $25 million from television, De Laurentiis said.

But he said that his biggest failures were so-called quality films: "Ragtime" and Ingmar Bergman's "The Serpent's Egg."

What does that prove?

"That we producers are showmen, and we should have respect for the audience and respect for the money we spend," he said.

No one knows how to bid freak hands—experts are as much at sea as neophytes. This hand is from the recent Far Eastern Championships in Hong Kong.

When the Australians held the North-South cards, they reached six diamonds in quick time. After East passed, South chose that as his opening bid. With the queen of trumps dropping, 13 tricks are easy.

The bidding shown occurred when Australia sat East-West and Taiwan held the North-South cards. The Australians were using a weird bidding system—the Strong Pass. Part of the system requires an opening bid on all hands that are below opening bid strength in normal methods. That accounts for East's rather strange initial action.

South made a takeout double and North's double of one heart was for penalties, in case his partner also held hearts. South, however, jumped in diamonds to show a strong suit. After North introduced his clubs, South tried Blackwood, and here confusion set in.

We do not know what prompted South to bid five no trump—even if his partner showed a king, it would not have clarified the situation. For most people who use Blackwood, a bid of five no trump does more than ask for kings—it implies that the asker's side has all the aces.

Certainly North seemed to interpret the bid that way. He felt he had considerably more than he had shown in the bidding to this point, so he confidently bid a grand slam. Unfortunately, he chose to bid it in no trump.

After checking to make sure that it was his lead, South doubled with confidence. He did not make the mistake of underleading his ace of hearts.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Tenth shuttle mission to include first untethered walks in space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown for America's 10th space shuttle mission began today with the crew predicting the journey would open "new frontiers" for servicing satellites and building the permanent orbiting station President Reagan has endorsed.

Among the "very spectacular novelties" planned for the five-day flight aboard the shuttle Challenger are the first space walks without lifelines. Two of the five astronauts are to move away from the shuttle with a backpack propelled by nitrogen gas jets.

Liftoff from Cape Canaveral is scheduled for 8 a.m. Friday. Test conductor Andy Browne began the countdown at 2 a.m. today with the the "call to stations," summoning more than 50 engineers and technicians to the control center three miles from the launch pad.

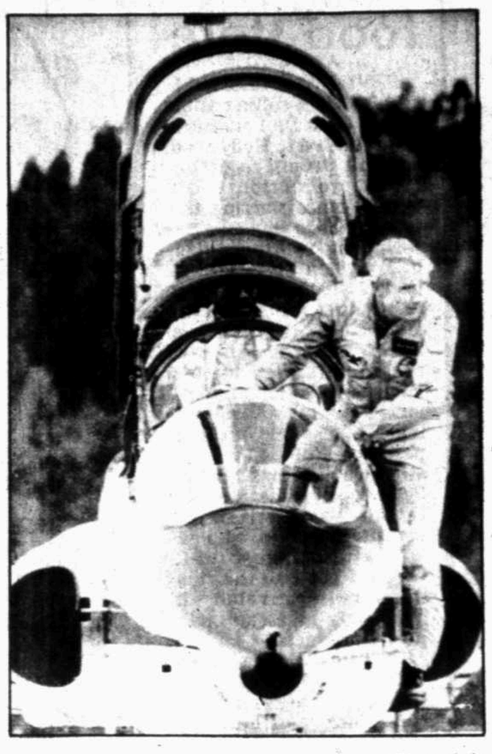

Commander Vance Brand, pilot Robert Gibson and mission specialists Bruce McCandless, Robert Stewart and Ronald McNair arrived here Tuesday from their Houston training base and told reporters they anticipated an exciting mission.

Essentially, they said, it will be a rehearsal for the next flight, in April, when another shuttle crew will attempt to capture and repair a defective satellite named Solar Max.

McCandless and Stewart will test the backpacks, moving without tethers as far as 300 feet from Challenger. In April's flight, an astronaut will use the backpack to secure Solar Max so it can be brought into the shuttle cargo bay for repairs.

McCandless and Stewart also will practice techniques for replacing an electronics box on the Solar Max, a $100 million dollar package that failed in orbit shortly after it was launched four years ago.

To practice the maneuvers needed to close in on Solar Max, Brand and McCandless will eject a 6½-foot-diameter inflatable balloon, let it drift away and then track it down.

Democratic contenders stage amiable foreign policy debate

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Gary Hart complimented George McGovern, Walter Mondale praised Gary Hart, and Jesse Jackson joshed John Glenn about being "Mr. Right Stuff."

It was a good-natured foreign policy campaign debate that Democratic presidential contenders staged Tuesday night, using some of their nicest words on one another and saving their harshest for President Reagan.

"We have a bellicose president. We have a bellicose leadership in the Soviet Union," Sen. Alan Cranston said. "We need a wholly new approach to the question of war and peace."

"We need less confrontation and stridency toward the Soviets," said Sen. Ernest Hollings.

"The Reagan administration has taken a candy store approach to defense," complained Mondale.

Six of the seven men said they favor reducing Reagan's arms buildup, several reaffirmed their belief that the American Marines should be withdrawn from Lebanon, and some of Reagan's potential rivals spoke out sharply against the president's policy of providing covert assistance to guerrillas fighting the leftist government in Nicaragua.

Seven of the contenders for the 1984 presidential nomination attended the foreign policy debate sponsored by Harvard's Kennedy School of Government and the Boston Globe — Mondale, Glenn, Cranston, Hart, Hollings, Jackson and McGovern. Only former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew passed up the 90-minute event, held at Harvard.

It was the third debate in recent weeks for the Democratic field, and several others are scheduled as the pace quickens in the nomination campaign. The first caucuses will be held in Iowa on Feb. 20, with the New Hampshire primary set for Feb. 28.

The debate differed markedly from an eight-way confrontation held last month at Hanover, N.H., when front-runner Mondale and Glenn, the runner-up in the polls, engaged in a heated exchange over their proposals for trimming deficit spending.

This time, Glenn and Mondale sparred briefly over the SALT II treaty, which was negotiated under the administration of former President Carter and Mondale, and opposed by Glenn. But unlike last time, no voices were raised, no fingers pointed.

Mondale threw a compliment Hart's way, declaring that "all of us admire your leadership" in efforts to redesign the American Navy.

Hart complimented McGovern, whom he served as campaign manager in the 1972 presidential campaign, for providing "powerful moral and political leadership" against the Vietnam War.

And Jackson, preparing to ask Glenn a question, said, "I've been waiting for this for a long time...Mr. Right Stuff."

"Ask the question sir," Glenn cut in, but Jackson's question, dealing with Third World countries, was not accusatory.

On the question of the defense budget, Cranston said "there should be a decrease, while Jackson added, "Indeed, we should spend less overall."

McGovern said he favors cuts "on the order of 25 percent," while Hart said he wants to trim Reagan's buildup by about $100 billion over the next two or three years.

Seven killed, 15 injured in blaze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven people were killed today in a three-alarm rowhouse fire that left 15 others injured, officials said.

The blaze, which was reported at 2:50 a.m. EST by a passing policeman, took more than an hour to extinguish, according to city fire officials.

At least one of those killed was a child. Seven of the injured were children. The victims were taken to three hospitals in undetermined condition.

Firefighters were still searching for bodies several hours after the fire was brought under control. A collapsed floor hampered rescue efforts, according to city police spokesman Jim Battle. The fire department was compiling a list of the occupants to determine whether any were unaccounted for.

The fire was reported by police officers on patrol in the area, Battle said. Several officers tried to enter the building but were driven out by flames, he said.

One policeman sustained minor injuries when an occupant of the rowhouse jumped from a third-floor window and landed on him, Battle said.

The cause of the fire, which destroyed the three-story rowhouse and damaged the building next door, was under investigation.

Miami detective testifies patrolman first said gun 'went off' in arcade

MIAMI (AP) — A Hispanic patrolman on trial in the death of a black man first told superiors his gun "went off" when he was pushed in a crowded video arcade, but later said it discharged when the victim "jerked back" during a search, a detective testified.

The shooting sparked three days of looting, arson and rioting in the city's Overtown section that claimed another life and caused millions of dollars in damage.

Detective John Buhrmaster, taking the stand in the manslaughter trial of Officer Luis Alvarez, testified Tuesday that he had heard Alvarez shouting over the police radio, "Somebody just pushed me. A shot went off. I've got a black male down."

But Buhrmaster said that when he arrived at the arcade minutes later, Alvarez told him his revolver had "discharged" when the victim, Nevell Johnson Jr., "jerked back."

Alvarez's attorney, Roy Black, has argued that the 24-year-old officer fired at Johnson in self-defense, because he feared the 20-year-old Dade County courier was about to pull a concealed gun.

Prosecutor Abe Laeser has contended in the trial before Circuit Judge David M. Gersten that Alvarez was criminally negligent for allowing himself to be "startled" into shooting Johnson.

Buhrmaster, whose testimony was to continue today, was one of the first investigators on the scene of the shooting Dec. 28, 1982.

He told jurors he was trapped in the arcade for 40 minutes because there was "miscellaneous gunfire" outside and his squad car was set on fire.

Buhrmaster said he went to the arcade, filled with 30 to 50 patrons, after Alvarez radioed for help in an "excited, screaming" voice.

But by the time he arrived, a crowd of 150 to 300 had gathered outside, some throwing rocks and bottles at police, the detective testified. He said he also heard gunshots and bullets ricochet off the building.

Nuclear weapons test registers on scale

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — An underground nuclear weapons test conducted at the Nevada Test Site registered 4.5 on the Richter scale, seismographic stations at the University of California-Berkeley reported.

The test, code-named Gorbea, was conducted on Tuesday at 1,273 feet beneath the surface of remote Yucca Flat, some 85 miles northwest of Las Vegas, said Department of Energy spokesman Jim Boyer. It had an explosive range of between 20,000 and 150,000 tons of TNT.

The test was the first announced at the desert site this year and the 617th announced shot since the nation's nuclear weapons testing was moved there in January 1951. Not all tests are announced.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as measured on seismographs. A quake that measures 4 can cause moderate damage in the local area.

Lawyer to appeal client's convictions

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A defense attorney said he will appeal the latest convictions of Joseph Kallinger, who was found guilty of murdering his teen-age son and another boy after confessing to the crimes in the book "The Shoemaker."

Common Pleas John Geisz, rejecting an insanity defense, announced the first-degree murder verdicts Tuesday for the deaths of Joseph Kallinger Jr., 14, and Jose Collazo, 10.

Kallinger is serving a 30-to-80 year sentence in a mental institution for terrorizing and robbing a group of women in 1974. He also was sentenced to life for killing a New Jersey nurse and got a 42-to-51 year sentence for the attempted rape and robbery of another woman.

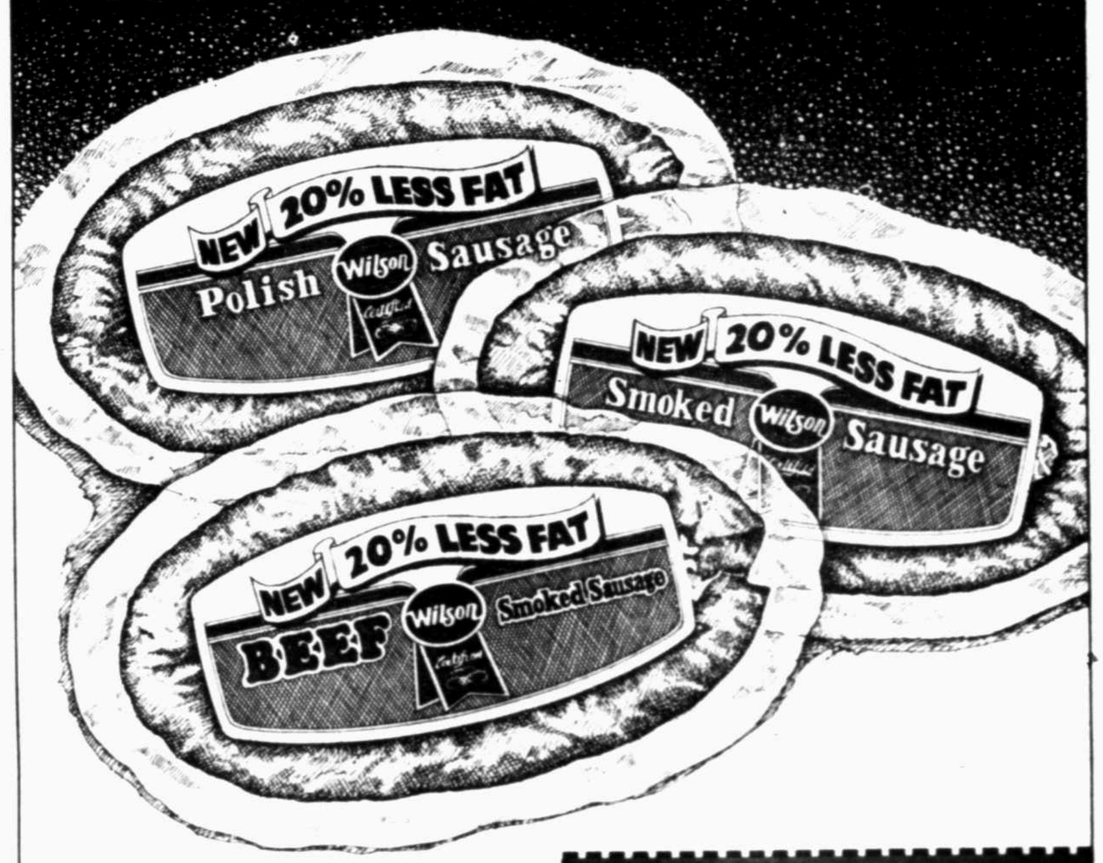

New York woman's killer denied parole

NEW YORK (AP) — A three-member parole board has denied a bid for freedom by Winston Moseley, who stalked and stabbed Kitty Genovese 20 years ago as 38 witnesses did nothing, because of the seriousness of his offense, a spokesman said.

Moseley, 48, was sentenced to die 20 years ago for Miss Genovese's murder, which became a national symbol of public apathy, but his life was spared when New York's death penalty was thrown out and his sentence was commuted to life. He became eligible for parole this year.

Spokesman Paul Young said Moseley will not be eligible for parole again for two years, he said.

The Cadillac Division of General Motors Corp. announced Tuesday that the first of two new presidential limousines had been delivered to the White House.

Reagan receives first of two new armor-plated limousines

DETROIT (AP) — President Reagan has received the first of two new armor-plated Cadillac limousines, the General Motors Corp. division announced.

The cars were made to Secret Service specifications and, because of the heavy armor plating, have extra-strong suspensions, the automaker said in a statement Tuesday.

One was delivered Monday and the other will be delivered in the spring, but the pricetags were not disclosed.

The cars — stretched to a wheelbase of 161.5 inches from the 144.5 inches of a standard Cadillac limousines — are black outside with a dark blue interior. They are powered by V-8 engines, the automaker said.

Cadillac said the roof lines were raised three inches, widened and trimmed with interior fluorescent lights to make the president more visible during parades.

Mounted on the fenders are miniature spotlights, which illuminate the American flag.

Weinberger: Defense spending can slow in 1987

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger promised Congress today that Pentagon budget increases "can begin to slow dramatically" in fiscal 1987 if it allows the Reagan administration to pursue its record military buildup.

Weinberger asked to spend $264.4 billion in fiscal 1985, which starts Oct. 1. This amounts to a 14.5 percent increase over this year's spending level without accounting for inflation and a 9.3 percent increase if inflation is taken into account. If approved, that would bring the cost of the administration's defense program to $883.3 billion in the four years since it began "rearming America."

In a 297-page report, Weinberger contended "we have made great progress" in restoring the military balance with the Soviet Union. He and Reagan have blamed "a decade of neglect" by previous administrations for allowing U.S. defenses to slide.

"Unfortunately, we cannot make up for a decade of neglect in only three years of higher defense budgets," Weinberger said.

"If we stop in mid-course, we will only endanger the progress we have made in recent years, and invite speculation by friends and adversaries alike that the United States can sustain neither its will nor its leadership," he added.

"By the same token, if we are allowed to continue on the path we have set, we can look forward to a time, only two fiscal years from now, when defense increases can begin to slow dramatically."

The defense secretary said the United States has not regained military parity with the Soviets.

He said the Soviet buildup of strategic nuclear missile and bomber forces "shows no sign of slowing." And he said the Soviets have widened their advantage in numbers of conventional weapons "by producing major weapons at rates exceeding those of the United States and its NATO allies combined."

However, Weinberger insisted that "we have a lot better position now than in 1981" when the Reagan administration came into power.

With much of the Reagan administration program already under way, the fiscal 1985 budget contained no surprises and few significant new elements.

It calls for spending nearly $1.8 billion on the much-touted Reagan plan to drive for a virtually impregnable anti-missile defensive shield, probably based in space, by the end of the century.

Only $250 million of this would be "new money," Weinberger said, explaining that the rest of the nearly $1.8 billion would be shifted from other less promising anti-missile programs.

The administration also is making a third attempt to win congressional approval to start producing a new generation of nerve-gas shells and bombs, something Congress has rejected twice previously. It requested $121 million to prepare for this production.

And Weinberger said the budget proposes about $200 million for a highly controversial Mideast crisis strike force that, under an administration concept, would be made up of Jordanian soldiers trained and equipped by the United States.

Real impact of Reagan budget to be felt by American families

WASHINGTON (AP) — With impacts ranging from dimes to thousands of dollars, President Reagan's budget will reach out and change the lives and finances of millions of Americans — students and the elderly, veterans and housewives, doctors and lawyers.

The fiscal 1985 budget talks of millions and billions of dollars, but the real impact is in the budgets of American families where the numbers are just plain old dollars, often hard-earned and carefully spent.

For the elderly person paying for supplemental health insurance, Reagan's budget would mean 40 more cents every month in premiums, going up from $17.30 to $17.70.

For poor people who need medical care, Reagan's budget would cost them an extra dollar in "co-payments" each time they go to the doctor or a hospital.

For families with students in college or about to get there, Reagan's budget would both give and take away.

For the neediest students in college in the 1985-86 academic year, Reagan would raise the maximum amount of Pell self-help grants from $1,900 to $3,000.

But middle- and lower-income families would be required to pay more of their income to cover college costs, and students would be expected to put up $500 before they could qualify at all. Those changes would cost about 300,000 students their grants.

In addition, all students would be required to show financial need to receive government-guaranteed loans. Currently, only those from families with incomes of more than $30,000 are required to demonstrate financial need.

Vietnam-era veterans would get a boost in their education and vocational training benefits — a substantial 15 percent rise.

Reagan proposed that non-working spouses be allowed to set aside up to $2,000 a year in an Individual Retirement Account, far more than the current $250 limit. And divorced women would be able to count alimony payments to qualify for IRAs as well.

Two professional groups — doctors and lawyers — would face some changes under Reagan's budget.

Doctors' fees under Medicare would be frozen at July 1984 levels, if Congress goes along with Reagan's plans.

And the Republican incumbent is continuing his efforts to kill the Legal Services Administration, which provides legal advice to the poor. That agency has been a thorn in Reagan's side since he was governor of California.

Even the average taxpayer and worker faces changes if the president's plans go into effect.

Budgets show different face in election year

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — When his Democratic opponents accuse President Reagan of gutting federal education programs, he will point to his election-year budget and argue that he proposed the largest education budget in history.

The figures sent to Congress today prove it. The budget for the Department of Education that Reagan once advocated abolishing is $15.5 billion, an increase of $100 million over the current level.

The increase reflects two political realities: this is a presidential campaign year and the quality of education is an issue Reagan and his opponents hope to use to their advantage.

That's the way it is with election-year budgets.

Four years ago, Jimmy Carter proposed the largest defense budget in history, but it didn't prevent candidate Ronald Reagan from accusing the Democratic incumbent of neglecting the nation's military preparedness.

The principal Democratic campaign theme this year is fairness. The party's White House contenders are arguing that the Reagan administration has been biased toward the rich at the expense of federal programs designed to help the less fortunate in society.

The new budget enables the president to tell the nation that in this era of high deficits, he is compassionate and is holding the line on domestic programs.

In particularly sensitive areas, there are increases.

As Reagan promised in his State of the Union speech last week, the proposal for the Environmental Protection Agency is being increased.

An Analysis

With unemployment still a potentially damaging issue, there is an increase in funding for retraining dislocated workers.

The Reagan budget attempts to answer the fairness issue with a Department of Health and Human Services request that totals $318.1 billion, a 7.4 percent increase over the current year. Secretary Margaret Heckler says the total is "significantly larger than the defense budget."

But the Democrats are likely to point out that Mrs. Heckler's budget is dominated by so-called entitlement programs, which automatically increase to keep pace with inflation. In effect, the administration has opted for basically keeping level the funding of programs it could control.

The president's defense request of $264.4 billion, a 14.5 percent increase over this year's spending level without accounting for inflation, offers no compromise, no yielding to political pressure and no chance of getting through Congress intact.

The Pentagon request is becoming an annual ritual, one of those Washington confrontations played out regularly with predictable results.

Each year of his presidency, Reagan has asked Congress for far more than even his Republican allies were willing to approve for defense, and this year is unlikely to be an exception.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, the Republican chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said the "defense (figure) is not going to surprise me. It is significantly lower than I would have assumed last year but still higher than I think is necessary."

Highlights of Reagan's 1985 budget listed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here, at a glance, are highlights of President Reagan's proposed budget for the 1985 fiscal year, which starts next Oct. 1:

Spending: $925.5 billion, an increase of $71.7 billion over fiscal 1984.

Revenues: $745.1 billion, an increase of $75 billion.

Deficits: The budget forsees a fiscal 1985 deficit of $180.4 billion, down from the 1984 deficit now estimated at $183.7 billion. Deficits are forecast to drop to $152 billion by 1988.

The national debt: Interest on the national debt is expected to total $164.7 billion in 1985, up from $149.5 billion this year.

Taxes: Reagan urges tightening loopholes he says now exist in the tax code. They would include placing restrictions on tax-exempt leasing, improving the system of taxing life insurance companies and limiting the growth in private purpose tax-exempt bonds. He also suggests that, starting next January, employees be required to pay social security and income taxes on part of the health insurance premiums, now paid by their employers.

Defense: The budget calls for $264.4 billion for the Defense Department, up 14.5 percent. There would be a 5.5 percent pay raise for the 2.1 million men and women in uniform.

Foreign Aid: The administration also wants more money for foreign aid, both economic and military, which would rise less than $500 million to $15.2 billion.

Space station: The budget proposes $150 million in start-up money for a permanent manned orbiting space station that is estimated to cost $8 billion or more by 1992.

Education: A record $15.5 billion budget is proposed for the Department of Education in 1985, an increase of $100 million. Reagan also proposed tuition tax credits for parents who send their children to private or parochial schools and to let middle- and lower-income families set up special savings accounts for their children's education.

Social Programs: Spending for most social programs stays about the same, although reductions are proposed again for Medicare, Medicaid and welfare. Spending on the food stamp program would drop to $10.8 billion, from $11.3 billion this year.

Housing: The budget for the Department of Housing and Urban Affairs would be pared sharply by $3.2 billion to $10.5 billion.

Justice: The budget recommends a 6.6 percent increase for the Justice Department to $3.74 billion. Part of the increase would go to hire 1,000 new employees for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, to help cut the flow of illegal aliens into the United States from Mexico.

Labor: The president is seeking $3.9 billion for a job training program next year, about the same as last year, to help prepare more than 3 million of the unemployed for permanent jobs.

Agriculture Department spending to rise 8 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's budget plan for the Agriculture Department assumes farmers will put millions of idled acres back to work this year, that there will be no crippling drought — and that federal price supports will cost more.

According to the fiscal 1985 budget sent to Congress today, total Agriculture Department spending will rise about 8 percent.

The proposed budget calls for more than $37.4 billion to be spent on department programs — ranging from agricultural research to food stamps — compared to about $34.8 billion in the current year.

Even so, the larger outlays anticipated by the budget would be far short of the record spending of $46.4 billion in the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30.

Deputy Secretary Richard E. Lyng said the new budget proposal was in keeping with Reagan's goal of holding down federal spending as much as possible during the period of economic recovery that lies ahead.

One of the largest items involves spending for commodity programs — the government price supports and direct payments that apply to key farm products. Those totaled about $12 billion in 1981-82 but, in the wake of record harvests, jumped to a record $18.9 billion in 1982-83.

Some of the programs for which additional money is recommended by the Reagan budget include:

—Food for Peace aid to needy countries, $1.6 billion against $1.5 billion this year. That does not include any supplemental funds that may be sought.

—The farm operating loan program in the Farmers Home Administration would be increased by $160 million to more than $2 billion.

—Research by the Agricultural Research Service would be boosted go $485 million from $477 million this year. The total for the Cooperative State Research Service, which administers federal funds allocated to state experiment stations and other eligible institiutions, would be increased to $267 million from $248 million this year.

Reagan wants $1.7 billion for continuing water projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan asked Congress today to spend almost $1.7 billion next year to continue work on water development projects such as navigation improvements, reservoirs and hydroelectric power dams.

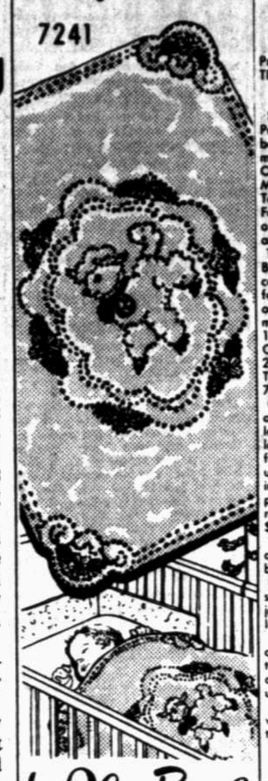

He proposed spending only $4.6 million to start work on four new projects.

The president, in his fiscal 1985 budget, called for outlays of $992 million for construction programs of the Army Corps of Engineers and $695 million for projects by the Interior Department's Bureau of Reclamation.

That would be a slight decrease from the current fiscal year because long-term projects are being completed while no new ones have been started for at least four years. The corps construction budget would drop from about $1.15 billion this year, while the reclamation budget remains about the same.
