Annual inflation rate at 9.1

Consumer prices continue rising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declining food prices at grocery stores last month helped ease the nation's inflation rate, but consumers still faced sharply rising gasoline and home heating costs, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said consumer prices on the whole rose 0.7 percent in January, after four straight monthly increases of at least 1 percent. January's jump translates into a 9.1 percent annual inflation rate.

In detail, the government reported that in January:

—Grocery food prices fell 0.4 percent, the first monthly drop since early last year. Meats, poultry, fish and eggs together declined 2.4 percent, ending a steady upward trend evident over the previous six months.

Prices for cereal, dairy products and baked goods, however, continued to climb and eating at restaurants cost consumers 0.9 percent more last month.

—Gasoline prices jumped 3.8 percent, the largest monthly increase since the first quarter of 1980.

—Prices of fuel oil accelerated by 7.5 percent and charges for natural gas and electricity were up 1 percent.

Last year, consumer prices advanced 12.4 percent, marking the first time since World War I that inflation topped 10 percent for two full years.

While January's improved performance provided some relief to Americans, most economists expect prices to accelerate faster in the coming months due to increased pressures on energy and food prices.

Even with last month's price slowdown, an average worker's weekly paycheck decreased 0.1 percent after adjusting for inflation and deducting for federal taxes and Social Security withholding. Over the last 12 months, real spendable earnings are down 4 percent.

The Labor Department also reported that last month housing costs advanced 0.8 percent, noticeably less than in recent months, due primarily to a decline in housing prices caused by slackened demand. Mortgage rates were up 1.9 percent and rents, 0.7 percent; but household maintenance and repair costs declined slightly.

All these prices are seasonally adjusted.

The Labor Department said its Consumer Price Index stood at 260.5 last month before seasonal adjustment. That means consumers paid $260.50 for the same hypothetical item purchased for $100 in 1967.

Most private economists predict this year's increase will be about the same as last year's 12.4 percent rise. A more optimistic Reagan administration foresees an 11.1 percent rise.

Reagan last week proposed $41.4 billion in spending cuts and a 30 percent tax rate reduction over three years as the cornerstone of his anti-inflation campaign. The administration says if Congress enacts the program, inflation will fall to 6.2 percent by 1983 and 4.2 percent by 1986.

Retail energy prices, after months of moderation, rose abruptly in December. If that month's pace continued for a whole year, prices would jump 19.6 percent.

Jean Harris found guilty of murdering Dr. Tarnower

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — The jurors who convicted Jean Harris of murdering Dr. Herman Tarnower reneared the shooting — with the foreman wearing Tarnower's blood-stained pajama top — and then decided they could not believe her account, a juror says.

The former headmistress, who was under a 24-hour suicide watch in prison today, faces at least 15 years in jail for the murder of her longtime lover, a millionaire cardiologist who developed the Scarsdale Diet.

"We acted it out so many times," said Marie Jackson, one of eight women among the 12 jurors who deliberated over eight days. "We went through the motions in the bedroom and it didn't turn out the way Mrs. Harris said it did."

The 57-year-old defendant was in the women's unit of the Westchester County jail today, segregated from other prisoners, a Corrections

Department spokesman said. She will be sentenced March 20.

Her only visible reaction when the verdict was read was that her right foot stopped wagging at the word "guilty." Two defense lawyers burst into tears.

"I can't sit in jail," she said softly to her lawyer, Joel Aurnou.

"I hope Mrs. Harris will have the strength to survive a successful appeal," Aurnou said later.

She faces a mandatory minimum of 15 years to life in prison and a maximum of 25 years to life, with no parole possible before the 15 or 25 years is served.

She also was convicted on two gun possession charges, but Judge Russell Leggett said he would merge those with the second-degree murder count for sentencing. District Attorney Carl Vergari said he would not object to the minimum sentence.

Two earthquakes, 195 tremors kill 12, injure dozens in southern Greece

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Two heavy earthquakes and 195 tremors rocked Greece, killing 12 people and injuring dozens, officials reported. Five people were missing and feared dead in the wreckage of a seaside hotel.

Thousands of Athenians spent Tuesday night in the streets or in their cars, warned by authorities that continuing aftershocks could cause more damage.

Police reported that residents of Athens were streaming out of the capital today for shelter in the suburbs, but public transport was running normally and most shops opened this morning at their usual times.

The Athens Seismological Institute said the largest quake, at 10:53 p.m. Tuesday, measured 6.6 on the Richter scale. A second large shock about six hours later registered 6.3 on the scale.

The large earthquakes came from an epicenter about 40 miles west of Athens in the Gulf of Corinth.

The worst damage was in and around Corinth, with hundreds of houses cracking and some reportedly collapsing.

In the small seaside town of Vrachati on the Gulf of Corinth an eight-story hotel collapsed and five people were believed buried in the rubble. Authorities said few, if any, guests were staying at the summer resort.

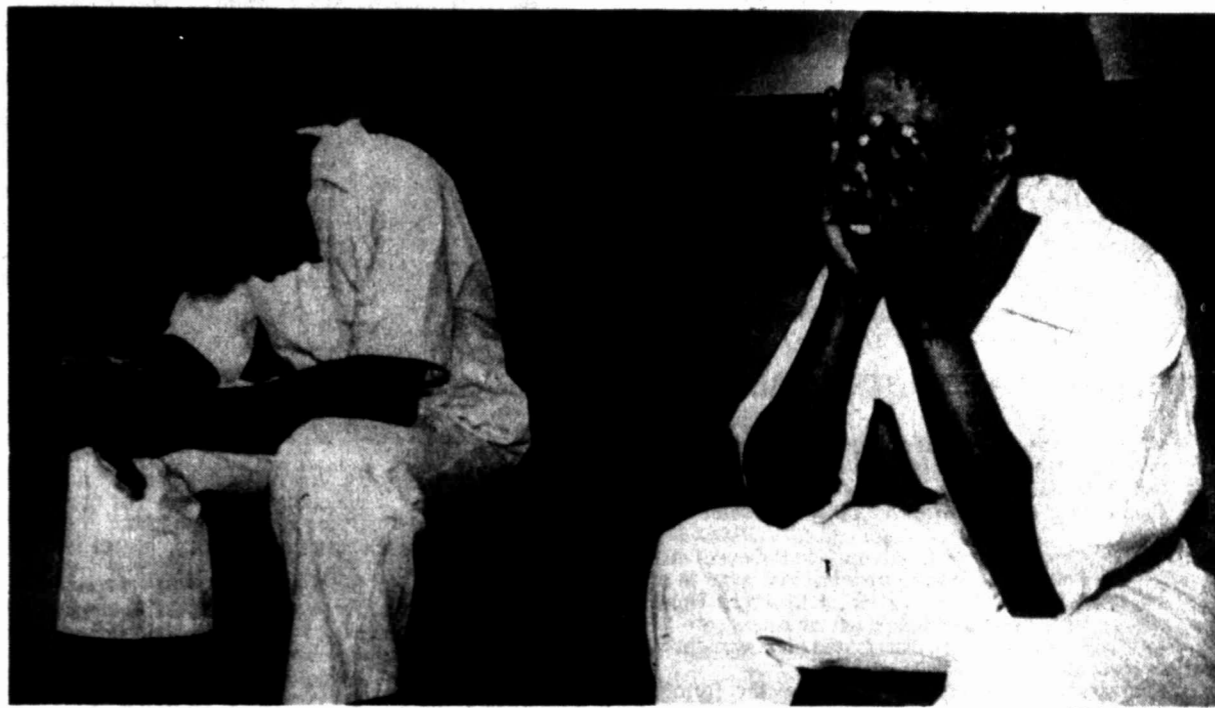

State services and military units were put on emergency alert and all schools in the quake zone were closed for the day.

The Seismological Institute warned that more aftershocks could follow, possibly as intense as the worst quake Tuesday night.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude, so a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake with a 6 reading on the Richter scale can cause severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

COUPLE CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTED CAPITAL MURDER — Clyde Ross (left) and his wife Jo Ann (right) await arraignment in a Lubbock courtroom. Both have been charged with Aggravated Robbery as well as Attempted Capital Murder in connection with the shooting of Lubbock Police Detective George Parramore. Parramore is in stable condition in a Lubbock Hospital. Bond recommendation is $250,000 for the shooting charge and $100,000 for a previous robbery charge.

Councilmen okay report without comment

Financial picture improves

By JAMES WERRELL
The city's financial condition has shown considerable improvement during the 1980 fiscal year, judged Tom Ferguson, city secretary.

Big Spring City Councilmen conducted a work session to study details of the city's annual financial report last week, and during their regular meeting, Tuesday night, approved it without comment.

No one present at the meeting commented pro or con on the audit. In fact, the only person present who was not a member of the council, city staff or media was Russ McEwen, candidate for Place 4 on the council, and the evening's business was conducted in a record-breaking 38 minutes.

This morning, however, Ferguson stated that there has been "considerable improvement in the city's financial condition over the last year."

Will the next fiscal year show the same improvement? "That all depends on what kind of year the enterprise fund has; how our water sales go," he said.

A comparison of the current balance and the accounts receivable in the Water-and-Sewer fund for the last two fiscal years shows considerable improvement in 1980, said Ferguson. On Sept. 30, 1979, the end of that fiscal year, the Water-and-Sewer fund showed a deficit of $245,273, with money owed by water customers totaling $401,823.

On the same date in 1980, the deficit had shrunk to $50,886, with accounts receivable totaling $394,543.

"In terms of cash flow, that's pretty good," said Ferguson.

Fund balances in 1980 were designed to show the amount of actual cash accounts receivable, minus the current liabilities. Water-and-Sewer and Airport-and-Industrial Park Funds were combined under the heading of Enterprise Fund. But a breakdown of that classification showed that the Water-and-Sewer Fund had a balance of $230,963, while the Airport-and-Industrial Fund had a balance of $92,926.

The General Fund showed a balance of $174,303.

In other business, the council passed on first reading an ordinance calling for a city election on April 4.

The city recently received approval from the Federal Attorney General's office to combine five polling precincts in two locations.

If passed on second reading, the ordinance will call for one precinct to be located at the Northside Fire Station, and the other four at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. Larry Miller, who has opposed the plan from the beginning, voted against it again Tuesday night.

"I just don't think that the coliseum is centrally enough located for the majority of voters," he said after the meeting.

The council also voted to provide $15,000 over the next fiscal year to the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce for commercial development. Under the agreement, the city will pay $7,500 of that on or before March 31, while the remainder will be paid in two equal installments during the last two quarters of the year.

An emergency reading of a resolution supporting a legislative change for the Colorado River Municipal Water District was also okayed by the council.

This act would do two things, said City Manager Don Davis: update the geographical boundaries of the district which haven't been amended since 1949; and allow CRMWD to act as a funding agency in mutually beneficial projects for member cities.

"It would enable the cities in the system if, for example, they wanted a regional sewage treatment plant, to use CRMWD as a funding agency," said Davis.

Former ambassador opposes heavy aid to El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador said today he opposes giving extensive U.S. military aid to El Salvador because it's not needed and could lead to a coup by right-wing military forces.

"I believe the right is constantly trying to overthrow the government, as is the left, and it's a beleaguered government in the middle," the diplomat, Robert White, said in testimony before the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations.

He said the Defense Department might be trying to exaggerate the guerrilla threat to justify sending U.S. military advisers and increasing American involvement. White said this move, under active study by the Reagan administration, would be a grave error.

Oilfield Industrial Lines Company of the Big Spring Industrial Park clears up a question with the Federal Aviation Administration, the city is willing to lease the company more land, decided the council, Tuesday.

O.I.L. currently wishes to use land on the base to expand its construction of oil rigs. But the FAA recently ruled that the derricks being built could interfere with air space over the Big Spring Airport.

If O.I.L. is able to straighten out this objection, the city will allow the company to lease the property.

In other business, councilmen:

—Approved bid specifications and gave permission to advertise for bids for 2,800 feet of hose for the Big Spring Fire Department. Estimated cost is about $5,900.

—Passed on second reading an ordinance changing the zoning of part of the property owned by Howard College from Single Family Residential to Planned Development.

—Passed on second reading a resolution calling for changes in an Internal Revenue Service Policy which would not allow banks to deduct interest payments to cities in the purchase of municipal bonds.

—Appointed retiring councilman Larry Miller as the City-County Civil Defense Director.

—Appointed George Walker, an employee of the Texas Electric Service Company, to the City Electrical Board to replace Charles Wilson, who resigned from the post.

—Appointed Janell Davis to the City Planning and Zoning Board to replace Pat Githens, who moved to Sonora.

ALL THAT REMAINS — Only the bell tower remains standing in the rubble of a church hit by an earthquake at Perahora in southern Greece. A quake measuring 6.6 on the Richter scale struck the area Tuesday night, followed by another shock Wednesday morning.

Hiring freeze upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge today upheld President Reagan's retroactive federal hiring freeze, ruling that thousands of people who were told between November and January that they had jobs waiting had not, in effect, been hired after all.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey said Reagan's action, taken on inauguration day Jan. 20 but backdated to Nov. 5, was "neither unconstitutional nor contrary to law and is supported by explicit statutory authority."

The National Treasury Employees Union, which sued to have the retroactive ban thrown out, has said that as many as 50,000 people may have been affected.

The union said letters received by applicants for federal jobs amounted to notifications they had been hired.

But Richey ruled otherwise. The letters, he said, were "mere offers of jobs which did not rise to the level of appointments." He said the recipients of such letters "merely got expectations of jobs" and added the letters "did not affect the legitimate or vested rights of the claimants."

A lawyer for the challengers, Robert M. Tobias, said he would appeal Richey's ruling.

Newsweek 'boo-boo'

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsweek magazine, in what one distributor called a "pretty serious boo-boo," printed an article billing Jean Harris as guilty two days before a jury convicted her of murder in the death of the man known as the "Scarsdale Diet doctor."

The story, prepared in advance in the event of a verdict over the weekend, appeared on page 38 of 186,000 copies of the magazine, said Avery Hunt, Newsweek's director of public information.

Of those, 106,000 were distributed Sunday night in parts of the Southeast.

By Tuesday, when a jury found the former headmistress guilty of second-degree murder, Mrs. Hunt said 562 of the copies still were unaccounted for.

The error was blamed on a misunderstanding between a recently-hired production editor at a Newsweek printing plant in Nashville, Tenn., and an editor in New York, she said.

Missing boys not on list

ATLANTA (AP) — Two more black children were reported missing today, but police said the cases had not been added to those of 20 missing and dead children being investigated by a special task force.

Officers identified the missing children as Dempster D. Williams, 10, of southwest Atlanta and Terminal Heard, 14, of northwest Atlanta.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said neither case had been turned over to the task force. "Our missing persons unit will check them out first to make sure they're not just runaways," said police spokeswoman Marion Lee.

Donations for Deaf Olympics hopeful rise

Donations and pledges toward a fund which will help underwrite expenses for Jackie Swofford to the Deaf Olympics in Germany this summer, have mounted to $1,245.50. A minimum of $2,000 is being sought here while a campaign with a similar objective is being conducted in Swofford's hometown in Arkansas.

Swofford, a javelin thrower with world championship potential, is a student at Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf here.

The bulk of the money now in the fund was raised as the result of appeals made by radio station KBYG, according to David Partlow, public relations director for Howard College.

Radio station KBST will sponsor a Saturday night dance to benefit the fund.

The event is planned for the East Room of the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, lasting from 8 p.m. to midnight. Admission fee is $2 per person.

Swofford will be interviewed live on KOSA-TV Channel 7 from 11 to 11:30 p.m., Monday, March 2, and will tape an interview for KMID-TV Channel 2 Thursday, for showing at a later date.

Reagan wants Soviets to 'back good words with good deeds' before summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet leaders are going to have to back their good words with good deeds if they want to sit down with President Reagan at a summit meeting, administration officials say.

For starters, that means helping stop the smuggling of arms to guerrillas fighting the U.S.-backed government in El Salvador.

The tension in El Salvador and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's summit suggestion have given Reagan his first opportunity to re-establish linkage as a basic tenet of superpower relations. That policy, honed by former President Nixon, amounts to sort of a good-conduct test before negotiations are held with the Soviets on arms restraints or other outstanding problems.

The first test may be El Salvador, where the administration says leftist guerrillas are being supplied with arms by Soviet-bloc countries.

"I would think that this would be one of the things that should be straightened out — their participation in that kind of activity," Reagan told reporters Tuesday.

Farm bill hearings set

The Senate Agriculture Committee has announced that hearings on the 1981 farm bill will begin March 2 and run through March 25. A sub-committee chaired by Senator Thad Cochran (R-Miss.) will hold hearings March 5 on the cotton program. Members of the National Cotton Council are scheduled to testify.

All cotton organizations interested in testifying should contact Mrs. Denise Alexander, Hearing Clerk, Senate Agriculture Committee, 322 Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510 (Telephone: 202-224-0014).

Meanwhile, House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza (D-Texas) says he expects House hearings on the bill to begin as early as the first week in March.

Two high-ranking priorities cited by de la Garza include research and exports. He said research continues to lay the groundwork for solving agricultural problems. Growing world population creates a need for greater food supplies, compounded by increasing standards of living that accelerate food need abroad, de la Garza said.

Sweetwater manager quits

SWEETWATER — Joe Benton, named city manager here in 1979, has resigned.

The date the resignation takes effect was not announced but the city council indicated no interviews for the job will be granted until after the April 4 council elections.

Benton had served as assistant city manager and water superintendent before being elevated to the city manager's job in May 1979. He was city administrator at Henrietta before moving to Sweetwater.

He is a native of Archer City.

day. "So far, at least publicly, they have been denying that they are involved in that, but I think the evidence that we have and we have made public and that we have told our allies about makes it evident that they are involved."

Officials said privately that while the administration does not want to dismiss the Brezhnev proposal out of hand, the time isn't right.

"I don't see it in the cards in the near future," said one highly placed State Department official. "Soviet behavior is going to have a significant influence on our reaction to Soviet proposals on various issues in the U.S.-Soviet relationship."

Another State Department official, however, said privately that Brezhnev's proposal is clearly "a gesture," and a positive one that he urged be taken seriously referring to U.S.-Soviet relations, he said.

Police Beat

Local police cut short a trip in the country for six Midland teenagers, early this morning.

Patrolmen spotted a car that appeared to be full of kids traveling through the city, 6 a.m. today. The officers followed the car to South Highway 87 near Comanche Trail Park and stopped it.

Once the car was stopped, eight juveniles, ranging in age from 12 to 16 tumbled out, saying that they were headed to San Angelo. Judging that all the youths were in need of adult supervision, the officers carted them to the police department where parents were called and the youths sent home.

While a Jeep belonging to Timothy Hunnicutt, 610 Highland, was parked at Howard College, Tuesday morning, thieves lifted two Pioneer brand car speakers from the auto. Loss was estimated at $80.

The manager of the Thrifty Lodge, 1000 W. 4th, told police that a lodger in one room broke a window in another room, 12:30 a.m. today. Damage was estimated at $25.

Texas Supreme Court to hear case of five Iranians today

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether San Antonio officials violated the rights of Iranians protesting the presence of the former Shah of Iran at Lackland Air Force Base.

Former Shah Rezi Pahlavi flew to Lackland from New York on Dec. 2, 1979, approximately four weeks after Americans were seized as hostages in Tehran.

On Dec. 3, five Iranians in San Antonio filed for parade permits to demonstrate downtown and at Lackland. The next day, the Ku Klux Klan applied for a permit to demonstrate at the same time and place.

The San Antonio city manager denied the applications, stating no permits would be issued to persons who wanted to speak out on the Iranian issue.

On Dec. 10, the five Iranians began a hunger strike on the steps of city hall. As a crowd — described by court records as a "mob" — of some 300 gathered, the Iranians were arrested and taken to jail.

Stenholm heartily applauds Reagan

One of the congressmen who applauded when President Ronald Reagan came out four-square for cuts in the national budget was Democrat Charles Stenholm of Stamford, Tex., who happens to represent Howard County in the Congress.

Just as Omar Burlison was before him, Stenholm championed the cause of conservatism in stumping for a seat in the Congress and his insistence on fiscal responsibility got him elected by a solid majority. Stenholm, of course, comes from a part of the country where the people believe that the individual should use a little initiative and not expect their government to do everything for him. Mr. Burlison got elected to 16 terms in Congress on that kind of platform and Stenholm bids fair to build toward that kind of longevity before he calls it a career.

The most recent edition of Nation's Business Magazine spotlighted Stenholm as leader of a bloc of 40 conservative Democrats in the House.

The publication stated that business is likely to fare even better in the new Congress than was expected in the wake of the November elections because those 40 representatives have served notice on the Democratic leadership that whenever they decide to vote as a bloc with the GOPs, and there are few or no Republican defections, the pro-business side will win.

Such a coalition, the magazine reminds, is more formidable than at almost any time in the quarter of a century the Democrats have controlled the House and will, in fact, serve as one of President Reagan's secret weapons.

STENHOLM REACTED TO Reagan's budget talk by saying "the cuts are a strong move in the right direction and represent an approach that I have advocated since first coming to Congress.

"I certainly agree with the general direction the President's budget takes, even though I have some unanswered questions."

The West Texan singled out the projected huge deficit outlined in the proposal, stating "it seems to me that if deficit spending has caused inflation for the past four years, then it stands to reason that it will continue to cause inflation."

Stenholm then threw down the gauntlet to his peers, saying that Reagan had presented a challenge to Congress for an alternative plan "which offers a greater chance of balancing the budget. The 17th District Congressman said he would respond to that challenge by looking at other areas in the federal budget "that could stand further cuts and at some of the President's proposed cuts.

STENHOLM SAYS THAT the budget that finally passes "must be fair and equitable to all Americans as possible. No single segment of the federal expenditure can be considered untouchable and there are several areas that I am closely examining at the present time that I think might possibly be eliminated altogether."

Stenholm said there isn't a Congressman or a Senator on the hill who shouldn't know by now that the American people really meant what they said at the polls last November.

After Stenholm and some of his forum colleagues met with House Speaker Tip O'Neill recently, an O'Neill aide was heard to remark: "They have influence and they plan to exercise it. Forces around here tend to get accommodated."

Some programs are bound to be hurt but it is obvious that America couldn't continue down the road to financial ruin. Even now it may be too late to turn things around but people like Reagan and Stenholm don't think so.

Jimmy Carter was ushered into the wings because he misread the mood of the people. Reagan may fail, but he certainly can't be faulted for trying and people like Stenholm intend to lend him the help he needs to sell his program.

Silent invasion

Around the rim

Tina Miller

Has your home been invaded? Has it become an obstacle course? Can you no longer tell your children, "It's a jungle out there" without hearing, "But mommy, it's a jungle in here?" If so, you are probably one of the millions of Americans who is a victim of "plant mania."

No home today is safe from them or complete without them. They are everywhere: on tables in the den, on counter tops in the kitchen and over the shower in the bathroom. They are planted in everything from jelly glasses and clay pots to terrariums and elaborate ceramic containers.

GRANTED, PLANTS ARE very useful for decorating and hiding the stain on the coffee table. However, some people definitely get carried away, and when plants take over a household, several problems can develop. For instance, a husband may begin to complain when he bangs his head on the Boston fern every time he takes a shower. The plant cannot possibly be moved, explains the plant lover, because there is no other room in the house with enough humidity to keep the plant green and healthy. The only logical solution, of course, is for the husband to learn to duck.

The kids may begin to feel neglected when the plant lover talks to them. Plants are never yelled at, of course, since this could hurt their feelings and they would wilt before an apology could be mustered. The dog might even grumble if his favorite supper dish suddenly converted into a cactus garden.

Should all family members agree to tolerate the take-over of their home by plants, difficulties may still occur. Let's face it: when it comes to plants, some of us have it and some of us don't.

Many plant lovers are plagued by the "brown thumb syndrome". They continually over- or under-water the plants, give them too much of too little light, over-feed them, or starve them to death. There are just too many variables. Some of these poor souls, whose bank accounts have shriveled and died along with the plants, become desperate enough to turn to the only type of plant that they absolutely cannot kill: the dreaded artificial. The deception works as long as people don't get too close or ask why the silly thing hasn't grown an inch all year.

ON THE OTHER hand, there are those who are truly blessed with a "green thumb". They are capable of growing anything from an avocado seed to an African violet. Everything they touch blossoms, and even victims of the "brown thumb syndrome" turn green—with envy.

If your home has not yet been taken over by greenery, chances are it will be. But cheer up—it's not so bad. Unless you live with a cactus lover.

Silent whistle

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — "Spare the rod and spoil the child" is an old-fashioned maxim that has long since fallen out of favor — with the federal government.

When Uncle Sam's hardworking auditors find evidence of fraud and waste in the spending of federal funds, the government is supposed to crack down on the offenders and at least force them to give back the money they ripped off from the taxpayers. In many cases, interest and penalties should be levied as well.

INCREDIBLY, THOUGH, the middle-level bureaucrats who should be chasing down these wayward billions just can't be bothered. In some cases, they actually reward the ripoff artists with even more government goodies. Spared the rod of federal enforcement, it's no wonder the spoiled recipients of government funds thumb their noses at the regulations — and laugh all the way to the bank.

Here are some examples that show why government auditors are probably the most frustrated civil servants of all: —In May 1979, auditors at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported that the MacNeal-Schwendler Corp. was marketing a computer program that had been developed by Uncle Sam — but was not paying the required lease fees to the government. The auditors estimated that NASA could recover anywhere from $300,000 to $2 million. —The space bureaucrats evidently had their eyes on the stars instead of on mundane money matters. A recent unreleased review by the General Accounting Office reported that "although 15 months have elapsed since the audit report was issued, no substantive actions have occurred" to get the money owed.

—In January 1979, Agriculture Department auditors discovered that both Agriculture and the Health and Human Services Department had been reimbursing Philadelphia's Get-Set Day Care Program for food service labor. The program had received $478,000 it wasn't entitled to. But because the two departments' bureaucrats couldn't decide which agency should go after the overpayment, "the funds have not been recovered and the day care operator is still being funded by both programs," GAO reports.

Housing and Urban Development auditors recommended disallowing reimbursement of $50,500 in claims for personnel costs by the city of South Bend, Ind. But HUD poobahs allowed the improperly documented claim after the city resubmitted timesheets which had been "reconstructed" from memory.

—During a three-year period, the Fulton County (Ill.) Housing Authority received excess HUD payments of nearly $100,000, but failed to give the money back. Not only has no progress been made in collecting the overpayment, but the county has since been given an additional $250,000 in government subsidies.

Community Services Administration officials asked the Florida Department of Community Affairs to respond to questions raised in a 1978 federal audit regarding $298,416 in government grant money. The state agency ignored the request. Though CSA warned the Florida department it faced a cutoff of federal funds if it failed to respond, the state still made no reply. Yet it was awarded another $500,000 by CSA — and a subsequent audit raised questions about $70,924 of that grant.

THE GAO IN 1978 found that 24 federal agencies were owed a total of $4.3 billion according to government audits. A recent, broader survey done at the request of Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, chairman of the Government Operations Committee, showed 73 agencies with a total of $14.3 billion in "unresolved audit findings." Brooks plans to hold hearings on the GAO's survey.

One big problem, veteran government auditors told my associate Tony Capaccio, is that there is little incentive for management officials that are graded on their performance in retrieving money owed. In fact, there is some incentive not to do anything, because the audits often involved programs the mid-level bureaucrats are managing themselves. Any enthusiastic pursuit of the misspent money would simply call the embarrassing mistake to their bosses' attention.

COVERUP WITH COBWEBS: William Callahan of North Adams, Mass., has a story of the government's effort to cover up an espionage episode aboard a troopship during World War I. He says the coverup is still continuing 63 years later.

Quarantine Cuba!

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — After getting word from a top adviser that "El Salvador was arranged in Moscow with the Cubans in a starring role," President Reagan made his first national security decision: Naval force will be used to prevent Cuban subversion from overthrowing the governments of its neighbors.

The Cuban quarantine, though not yet precisely spelled out, amounts to a decision that Fidel Castro can no longer supply and finance insurgency in El Salvador and elsewhere. It remains to be seen whether U.S. sea and air power would be called upon to stop boatloads of munitions. But Reagan is determined that El Salvador will not become a Marxist state as a result of intervention from Havana.

Encouraging Reagan to take this new hard line are confidential signals from Moscow that the Soviet Union will not help Castro if he gets himself in trouble with the U.S. in the Caribbean. What's more, there is evidence that Castro himself is beginning to squirm as a newly-aroused U.S. brandishes a new Caribbean doctrine warning Cuba through the press and trusted intermediaries that the easy days of American overtures to "please behave" are over.

THE EVIDENCE SUGGESTS internal security problems within Cuba. Castro is known to have summoned about 1,000 crack Cuban soldiers back home from Ethiopia without replacing them. That is unusual enough to have been brought up at a recent National Security Council (NSC) meeting.

The first operation of the new policy came into play when the U.S. sent word to Castro not to unleash another illegal torrent of immigrants, criminals or otherwise, to the shores of Florida. If he does, Castro was informed, it will be taken by the U.S. as an "act of war."

U.S. diplomats see the imprint of that warning on Castro's hard-nosed handling of would-be immigrants who seized the Educadorian Embassy in Havana. Castro's line to the occupiers, who are bargaining for export visas: Give up, or I will take you by force.

The State Department is also demanding a commitment from Castro to take back hundreds of criminals and other undesirable Cubans whom he encouraged to emigrate to the U.S. last year. Reagan intends to enforce that demand, insiders confide, adding that if Castro continues to refuse he will be punished.

At home on his sun-drenched island, Castro's economic problems are mounting. Almost all consumer commodities are rationed, with no improvements in the offing. But Reagan's decision to get tough with Castro has no connection with his domestic tribulations. It is aimed at insulating El Salvador and future Castro targets in Latin America from Cuban arms and agents.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig has been telling senators and foreign diplomats in confidential briefings that not only is Cuba the preferred springboard for tons of Soviet (mixed with caputed American) weapons; he adds that Cuba has also been giving special training to Salvadorian guerrillas on the Isle of Pines off Cuba's eastern coast.

Sudden leg swelling maybe phlebitis

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I awoke one morning with my left leg twice the normal size. My doctor told me I had suffered phlebitis. He said nature could clear it up or I would be stuck with it for life. Can't anything be done for this? In what form could it get me — a pulmonary embolism? I also have large varicose veins up the back of my leg. Do you have any information on this I can understand? — Mr. J.A.C.

Phlebitis is vein inflammation. We have only notions of how this happens, but the consequences are clearer.

Picture the inflamed vein with blood coursing through it slowly, for as you know blood flows much more sluggishly through veins than through arteries. Among the many constituents of the blood are platelets, which stop the bleeding when the vein is cut. The chief problem in phlebitis is that the platelets have a habit of clumping in inflamed veins. The result is a clot. Now, pressure in that vein builds and some of the blood's fluid leaks out through the walls. That is your leg swelling.

The threat now is that a piece of clot may break off and get swept along up to the lungs — your pulmonary embolus (embolus being a medical word for a traveling clot). The embolus may eventually act like a piece of iceberg that floats up into a harbor channel to disrupt navigation. With a pulmonary embolus, the lung blood passage is blocked.

You have to keep in mind a few important facts in this admittedly grim picture. Not everyone with phlebitis will get a pulmonary embolus. The higher up in the leg the problem is the greater the danger of that. Phlebitis in the thigh is of greater concern than in the calf. The varicose veins you see under the skin of your legs are not implicated as real dangers in the development of pulmonary embolus. It is the deeper veins, the ones you can't see.

Treatment depends on the location of the vein inflammation and its severity. Elevating the leg, warm soaks and sometimes blood thinners are frequently parts of treatment. The blood thinners stop the clot from growing.

I cannot paint a picture of phlebitis in rosy hues, but keep in mind that most people with phlebitis will NOT develop pulmonary embolus.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is there any way to remove surgical scars? I have two, one on my right foot and another on my right knee. I am very self-conscious about them. I have heard they have a new way to remove them with a laser beam. Is this true? — C.C.P.

A scar is nature's way of patching us up. If a scar is unsightly or if it is in a place that affects full function of a joint, like the knee, then some thought ought to be given to revising the scar. Not all of them can be removed surgically, but most can be improved.

Although the laser beam is being used for a widening variety of problems, I am not familiar with its use for scar removal. You can find out if anyone in your area is using this method by calling your county medical society. Another new method is being experimented with for revising scars that sink beneath the skin. The area under the scar is injected with animal scar-forming tissue to raise the outer scar.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Could you tell

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am a teenager, and want to know how I can be truly happy. It seems that I spend all my time trying to be what other people want me to be, but I still am unhappy. — T.H.

DEAR T.H.: There are probably several reasons why you have not found lasting happiness in your life. For one thing, as long as you spend your whole time trying to act the way others want you to act you will never really be happy. You will always be insecure, wondering if you are really doing what you should, and you also will never discover what you uniquely can be as a person. I want to point out also that when you are overly concerned about what other people think about you, you can easily end up doing things which are harmful and wrong. Many young people, for instance, get involved in alcohol or drugs only because they are trying to impress other people, and that is wrong.

But there is another reason you have not found happiness, and it is a spiritual reason. You are not on this earth by chance — God put you here. And God did not make a mistake when he put you here. He loves you, and he has a purpose for your life. You will never know lasting peace and joy until you discover God's will for your life, but if you will turn to him you will find that he gives you a whole new outlook on life. The Bible says, "Who so trusteth in the Lord, happy is he" (Proverbs 16:20).

That is why I hope you will invite Jesus Christ into your life. He wants to come into your heart and let you know that God loves you. He wants to forgive you of all your sins, and wants to be the center of your life. He wants to make you his child, and to help you to follow his will each day.

You can turn your life over to Christ by a simple act of faith. Christ offers you salvation as a free gift, and yet like any gift it must be accepted. Tell Christ that you want him to come into your life, and then each day — through prayer, through the Bible, through other Christians — learn to grow in your relationship to him.

Dear Editor:

Several days ago I read a letter in your paper from a man that said he represented a church located at 11th Place and FR700 there in Big Spring.

Hitler was not so savage after all. He advocates the murder-killing of all that have killed or have participated in abortions. Would that not reduce the number of our doctors to a very few? And the female population between the ages of 11 years to the oldest would be reduced by millions.

I wonder if the man has ever considered the souls that would be lost by his desire to kill them all. After he has murdered all of these poor people the prospect of a rebirth and the saving of all those lost souls, indeed if they are lost, would pass away with them.

Does not the Bible say that to save one of those souls would be of a greater value than to gain the whole world.

I searched the Bible after I had read his open letter and to me it read the contrary. The Bible said very plainly and simply where any and all could understand it, "THOU SHALT NOT KILL". Exodus 20:13. It does not say that there are exceptions to this command. It does not say that if you are a judge, a member of a jury, a policeman nor any person of authority, not even the preacher at 11th Place & FR700 that if you are one of these or anyone else that it will be alright to murder your neighbor. And do not ever believe that he said that it was not a sin to kill Vietnam people just because the Congress and the President of the United States said it was O.K. being that those that did it were soldiers.

It is my sincere belief that the following should be used as guidance instead of killing: In Romans Chapter 12 verse 19 it says, "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but give place to wrath; for it is written, vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." And the related verses are just beautiful if you care to read them.

Initiative, referendum bill producing some strange alliances

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — One statewide taxpayer group says initiative and referendum — a top item of Gov. Bill Clements' program — would cut taxes but another warns it could bring greater taxation of business.

The House Constitutional Amendments Committee saw strange alliances and divisions Tuesday as it took four hours of testimony on the subject, commonly called "I&R" by lawmakers and lobbyists.

Labor teamed with business and teachers joined school administrators in fighting I&R. Common Cause, the League of Women Voters and a lobbyist for the elderly joined conservative former Attorney General Waggoner Carr and the Texas Farm Bureau in endorsing it.

The committee sent Clements' proposal and three other I&R measures to a subcommittee for more study, and Chairman Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, said he expected a single proposal to emerge.

Carr, president of the tax-cutting Texas 13 organization, endorsed Clements' proposal.

"It will give people the opportunity to lower taxes and put reasonable restraints on the state budget," he said.

McFarland said he could not recall the last time voters in any home rule city used their right of local I&R to reduce their property taxes.

The Texas Association of Taxpayers, a business organization that opposes a state income tax, said I&R could lead to instability that might hurt the state's economic climate.

Robert Strauser, the association's executive vice president, said in an interview the organization believes AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard's threat to use I&R to impose a corporate income tax if I&R becomes part of the Texas Constitution.

Earlier, the Senate sponsor of Clements' proposal, Walter Mengden, R-Houston, dismissed the AFL-CIO threat.

Mengden said the governor's I&R measure requires signatures of 10 percent of the voters in 190 counties on any initiative petition, and labor's strength is not that widespread.

"He (Hubbard) just wants to drag that thing out to scare unknowledgeable people," he said at a news conference.

But Hubbard said the AFL-CIO is serious and is encouraged by polls showing Texans would favor a corporate income tax 4-to-1 if a new source of state revenue is needed.

"I think we have more capability of gathering signatures than any other organization in the state," he said.

Hubbard said he feared emotions would decide issues placed before the voters in a referendum.

"Rich and powerful individuals and corporations will control initiative and referendum, because the individual citizen will not be able to compete against such wealth. For example, in the recent general election in California, tobacco companies spent millions to defeat an anti-smoking referendum," he said.

Carr said he trusted the people to make correct decisions.

"They made the decision to send you here," he told committee members. "All the people voting together on the same issue are very rarely wrong."

Common Cause spokesman Bob Dahlquist of Austin said I&R was a "safety valve to remedy an inactive Legislature or an overactive one."

"It is a reclamation project—reclamation of government from the special interests," Dahlquist said.

He said, however, that Clements' requirement of signatures of 10 percent of the voters in each of 190 counties on initiative petitions was too restrictive. Sixty-four counties would do, Dahlquist said.

Petitions to initiate a constitutional amendment would need signatures of 15 percent of the voters in 190 counties.

Former Houston Mayor Louie Welch, president of the Houston Chamber of Commerce, contended I&R would "allow lawmaking by special interest groups" and foster single-issue politics.

"Initiative and referendum is a double-edged sword that can and will be used to increase taxes, levy new taxes and to shift taxes to business," Welch added.

Initiative can be a tool of unreasoned approaches to mass opinion. A representative government emphasizes reasoned lawmaking by representatives of all parts of the state." Clements has proposed limited I&R. After enough signatures are gathered on a petition to initiate a law or a constitutional amendment, the Legislature first would get a chance to act. Only if it failed to pass a law initiated by petition would the voters decide in a referendum.

Proposals to repeal a law would by-pass the Legislature, however, and go straight to the people after the required number of petition signatures were collected.

Asked what kinds of issues he thought might go through the I&R process, Mengden mentioned placing the state "right-to-work" law in the Constitution, limiting terms of elected officials and wiretapping in felony cases.

Rep. Carlyle Smith, D-Grand Prairie, House sponsor of Clements' proposal, said he expected it to win committee approval, based on voting records of its members on I&R in 1979.

I&R would require an amendment to the Texas Constitution, meaning Clements' proposal needs a two-thirds vote of the House and Senate and approval by the voters.

Anti-crime bill

Oral confessions idea sparking fiery debate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Oral confessions should be admitted as evidence only if they are the tape-recorded words of the defendants, not the recollections of an officer who listened to the statement, an Austin lawyer said while arguing the matter on the Senate floor.

But attorney Roy Minton's opinion was challenged, in heated debate Monday before the Senate Jurisprudence Committee, by the West Texas senator who sponsors a bill to permit oral confessions and several law enforcement agents arguing such confessions would be a welcome weapon in their war on crime.

Texas is the only state that bars oral confessions, and Gov. Bill Clements has made the legislation part of his recommended anti-crime program.

Committee Chairman Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, said he has asked for attorney general's opinions on the oral confession bill as well as a Clements measure that would allow judges to tell jurors about parole laws.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, sponsored the oral confessions bill, which would require law enforcement personnel to write a confession down and swear to it before a judge within 48 hours of hearing it.

Several police chiefs and sheriffs told the Senate Committee on Jurisprudence the bill is needed. Dallas County Sheriff Don Byrd said police would "treat it with tender care and won't violate it."

However, Minton, an Austin defense lawyer who also has been a prosecutor, said oral confessions should be admissible only if tape recorded.

Minton said tape recorders cost about $50 — "less than a .38 special" and "the badges many officers wear."

"I'll take a tape recorded statement over a (policeman's) written statement anytime," Minton said, during the loud argument on the Senate floor.

He won't sign his name to a statement do you think he is going to talk into a microphone? Glasgow responded.

The bill also drew opposition from Gerald Goldstein of San Antonio, Texas Civil Liberties Union general counsel.

SCENE OF DEVASTATION — A guide describes to Pope John Paul II the atomic devastation of Hiroshima using a scale model of the Japanese city after the 1945 nuclear attack. The pontiff visited Hiroshima's Peace Museum and viewed displays pertaining to the A-Bomb after praying at the nearby Peace Memorial.

Pope visits A-bombed cities

NAGASAKI, Japan (AP) — Pope John Paul II today visited the Japanese cities where the first atomic bombs snuffed out 270,000 lives 35 years ago and called on government leaders everywhere to join him in "working untiringly for disarmament and the banishing of all nuclear weapons."

"War is the work of man," the 60-year-old pontiff told 12,000 people standing in the snow at Hiroshima's Peace Memorial Park. "War is destruction of human life. War is death.

"I appeal to the whole world on behalf of life, on behalf of humanity, on behalf of the future."

He appealed to chiefs of state and government leaders to take "a solemn decision, now, that war will never be tolerated or sought as a means of resolving differences."

"Let us promise our fellow human beings that we will work untiringly for disarmament and the banishing of all nuclear weapons," he said. "In the face of the manmade calamity that every war is, one must affirm and reaffirm, again and again, that the waging of war is not inevitable or unchangeable."

Vatican sources said the pope considered it the most important speech of his 12-day visit to the Far East.

John Paul spoke from a podium beside the simple stone structure built around the perpetual flame that honors the victims of the first U.S. atomic attack that on Aug. 6, 1945, hurled the world into the nuclear age.

Underscoring his desire to be heard throughout the world, the pontiff spoke in nine languages, reading sections in English, Russian, French, Chinese, German, Spanish, Portuguese, Japanese and his native Polish. Chinese was added at the last minute.

While the pope was speaking an American tourist, Tim Blake of Los Angeles, began shouting "Remember Pearl Harbor" from the edge of the crowd.

Blake, a 46-year-old insurance executive, said later that his father was killed in the Japanese attack on Hawaii that brought the United States into World War II.

"I support the pope," said Blake. "I want peace. But I thought I should give this thing a bit of historical perspective."

The pope and those in the front of the audience could not hear the shouts.

Hundreds of other Americans, most of them from the U.S. Marines' nearby Iwakuni base, also were in the crowd.

John Paul laid a wreath on the memorial and toured the Peace Memorial Museum in the park, which displays pictures of bomb victims, radiation victims and the destruction caused by bomb.

The museum director, Akihiro Takahashi, told the pope of his own experiences as a 14-year-old bomb victim and showed him his hands covered with radiation scars.

Britons speculate on Prince Charles' future

LONDON (AP) — Buckingham Palace today dismissed as "speculation" a report that Queen Elizabeth II will make her heir, Prince Charles, governor-general of Australia after he marries Lady Diana Spencer in July.

The liberal Guardian daily reported that Britain's Foreign Secretary, Lord Carrington, has made an informal arrangement with Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser of Australia that the 32-year-old prince should have the post.

But a palace spokesman noted: "Australia already has a governor-general who has been in office for only a relatively short period." He is 61-year-old Sir Zelman Cowen.

Palace officials also noted that the Australian government can only recommend someone for the post to the Queen, although Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher would likely be consulted.

Carrington has close links with Australia. He was British High Commissioner, or ambassador, in Canberra from November, 1956, until October, 1959.

The Guardian report follows months of speculation that Charles might be appointed governor-general, the monarch's representative in Australia.

The prince is scheduled to begin a month-long tour of Australia and New Zealand April 1.

His father, Prince Philip, flies to Melbourne March 25 to attend the first general meeting of the International Assembly of National Sports Confederations of which he is chairman.

Prince Charles currently is going through a program of briefings at British government departments in London on the operation of government. They include the Foreign Office, the Treasury and the Department of Trade.

Buckingham Palace announced Tuesday the engagement of the 32-year-old heir to the British throne and Lady Diana Spencer, 19-year-old daughter of the 8th Earl Spencer, a millionaire landowner.

Charles told the press that he popped the question to her over a dinner for two at his private apartment at Buckingham Palace before she went to Australia Feb. 6. He gave her a sapphire and diamond ring.

"So In Love" said the Daily Mail. "We're In love And It's No Secret Any More," said the Daily Express. "Pink Champagne Toast At Palace," said the Daily Telegraph.

But the Communist Morning Star warned, "Don't Do It, Lady Diana," and said she if she married she would "sacrifice her independence to a domineering layabout for the sake of a few lousy foreign holidays."

The paper added: "We will... be treated to endless column inches about her pure bred ancestry — which fits her perfectly for bearing royal sons... Perhaps we are carping, but surely even she deserves to be regarded with more dignity than a pedigree Friesian cow."

London stock market shares in pottery firms, breweries and hotels all jumped in value in anticipation of a flood of commemorative mugs, loyal toasts and tourists in Britain this summer.

The date of the wedding was not announced, but the press speculated it would be July in Westminster Abbey.

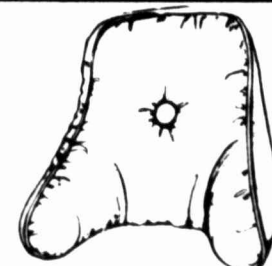

Charles and his bride-to-be both have Australian connections.

FAYE DUNAWAY

BETTY FORD

Dunaway takes Catholicism

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Faye Dunaway is taking instruction in Catholicism so she can convert before marrying photographer Terry O'Neill, the father of her child, the New York Daily News reports.

Miss Dunaway gave birth to a son last year and plans to marry O'Neill, a Catholic, in June, the newspaper said Tuesday.

O'Neill's long-delayed divorce has just become final, the newspaper said.

"Faye has always wanted a baby," said a spokesman for the actress, who is currently filming "Mommie Dearest" and starred this week in a TV movie as Eva Peron.

"They're very happy, and she's aglow," the spokesman said. The baby, named Liam, is "adorable."

Mrs. Ford blames pressure

DETROIT (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford, who underwent treatment for alcoholism nearly four years ago, says alcoholism is "not a lack of willpower or moral fiber," but a disease.

Mrs. Ford told the Economic Club of Detroit on Tuesday that many public figures become alcoholics because of public pressure.

"I know that some people are not very comfortable with my speaking out about alcoholism — they don't feel that it is a ladylike topic of discussion," she told the club.

"But I decided that if I was going to help anyone, it would be through trying to educate others about the disease. And speaking out is the only way I know to do that."

Later in the day, Mrs. Ford dedicated the new $3 million, 50-bed Maplegrove alcoholism-treatment facility in West Bloomfield.

Lewis' son stable

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 31-year-old son of comedian Jerry Lewis is in good condition at Northridge Hospital, where he is recuperating from a broken leg suffered in a traffic accident.

Ronald Stephen Lewis was riding a motorbike that collided head-on with a car on a street outside the hospital on Feb. 10, police said.

A police report said the collision occurred when Lewis drove out of an alley. No others were injured.

Bill may hamper efforts to treat child abusers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Requiring people to report suspicions of child abuse to police as well as social workers will hamper efforts to treat and cure abusers, witnesses against a proposed reporting law say.

The measure sponsored by Rep. Frank Madia, D-San Antonio, mandates that reports of child abuse or neglect be made to "any local or state law enforcement agency" and the Texas Department of Human Resources.

The bill also gives police the power to get search warrants in order to photograph victims.

The House Judiciary Committee sent the proposal to a subcommittee after a hearing Tuesday night.

"When you take a hostile approach and treat these people as criminals, you solidify resistance to treatment," said Gary Jovare, head of the Bexar County Legal Aid family law section. "The police aren't interested in rehabilitation. They're interested in removing the abusive parent."

Jovare said, however, that getting the abuser out of the house is no solution.

"These cases are very difficult to try, and chances are he's going to beat the rap," Jovare said. "If he doesn't he'll probably get out on a plea bargain. And when he does, he'll have had no psychological help, no treatment at all."

He also claimed the bill would interfere in the family unit.

"As far as I'm concerned, where you have child abuse you don't really have a family," Madia responded.

Other witnesses agreed the bill would discourage reports.

"Most reports of suspected child abuse come from concerned neighbors or family members who are very nervous about getting involved in the first place," said Mary Lee Johns, a worker at the Texas Child Abuse Hotline. "They don't want to punish, they want to help, and we have to work very hard to assure them our goal is not punishment."

"Please assist us in our job of protecting citizens, including these helpless infants," said Jerry Clancy, a San Antonio police officer who supported the measure.

Rebels of CAF preserve WW II airplanes to fly

By MICKIE DICKSON
During World War II the United States built 303,000 aircraft, part of the mightiest war machine in the history of the world. This magnificent air armada played an essential role in keeping the Nation free and preventing the enslavement of the world by the Axis powers.

During the 10 years following the Japanese surrender Sept. 2, 1945, many of these historic aircraft were being systematically destroyed with the U.S. Air Force and the U.S. Navy not preserving even one of each type for museum purposes.

A group of veteran ex-service pilots who had flown over the battlefields and strategic countries during WWII, rebelled in anger at this unwanted destruction of these thousands of great American aircraft—the great Corsair, TBM, T-6, B-26, B-29 and many other types. The older types, the B-17, B-24, Thunderbolt, Warhawk, Hellcat, Wildcat, Lightning and SBD, could not be found by those investigating the situation, having been long since disposed of or destroyed.

What began with a group of ex-service pilots in the Lower Rio Grande Valley in the mid-fifties buying a North American P-51 "Mustang" fighter, became the Confederate Air Force or Ghost Patrol. Each member is a "Colonel" in the rebel force, dedicating themselves:

1. To preserve in flying condition, a complete collection of combat aircraft which were flown by all military services of the U.S. in WWII.

2. To perpetuate the spirit in which these planes were flown for the defense of the Nation, in the memory and hearts of all Americans.

3. To provide museum buildings for the permanent protection and display of these aircraft and to build the "COMBAT PILOT HALL OF FAME" as a tribute to the thousands of men and women who built, serviced and flew them.

4. To promote good fellowship among the members of the organization, and the support of patriotic Americans everywhere, in flying and preserving these great aircraft as symbols of our American heritage.

The CAF flying museum in Harlingen has a complete collection of American WWII fighter aircraft in flying condition available to go all over Texas to show people what planes flew in WWII.

The West Texas Wing of CAF is one of 21 wings in the world. West Texas wing is divided into several squadrons.

Jim Hill, Doug Warren and Patsy Edwards are three Big Spring residents who are Colonels in the CAF and attended the spot landing contest at the Big Spring Industrial Park Sunday.

Col. Thomas Dollihite, Midland, won first in spot landing, flying a Chipmunk, RAF DHC-1. Col. Doug Warren was second in his Messerschmidt 108. Third place went to Col. Frank Geib, Michigan, in a Bonanza.

Future air shows scheduled by the West Texas CAF at Breckenridge, May 24; a show at San Angelo June 21 when CAF will reenact the Dec. 7, 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor in cleverly constructed replicas of the Zeros, Vals and Kates that actually took part in the original attack.

Another show will be held at Pyote June 28 at the former Rattlesnake Bomber Base. Goodfellow Air Force Base at San Angelo is the setting for the July 4 show. Schlemeyer Field at Odessa will be the site of a show Sept. 8-9.

Approximately 80 planes are registered as CAF aircraft and owned by the CAF organization. Two hundred planes are privately owned or are jointly owned by individuals and the CAF and fly WWII colors.

GS Mothers receive two invitations

She was assisted by Mrs. Rogers and Mr. and Mrs. A.W. Moody. More Swimsuit Covering Will Stop Her Cowering

DEAR ABBY: I love your column in the Jacksonville Journal, but I'd love you even more if you would find out why the bathing-suit manufacturers don't make a suit for women over 25 years old. Nobody but a teen-ager could wear the things they put out now. I'm a 43-year-old married woman with a fairly good figure, but I need more help than I can get in a bathing suit these days. How about one with a built-in bra like they used to make? Or, some with elastic for those of us who need something to hold our stomachs in?

FAYE IN JACKSONVILLE

DEAR FAYE: Some manufacturers do make the kind of bathing suit you're looking for. Go to your favorite store and ask the swimsuit buyer to snap into it!

DEAR ABBY: Today I received an invitation to attend a 25th wedding anniversary party given by three children for their parents. When I opened the reply card to respond, I found a small piece of paper which stated, "$12.50 per person includes meal and gift." Needless to say, I was in a state of shock, and still am.

I wrote the enclosed letter and sent it with the response card. Should I have written it? Please give me your opinion.

ALICE

"Dear Rosemarie: We received the invitation to your parents' 25th wedding anniversary party, and were stunned by the request of $25 to cover cost of food and gift! 'Never have we seen anything like this before, and I hope we never do again. If you and your brother and sister can't give your parents a party without asking your guests to pay for it, you should skip the party. Your grandmother would turn over in her grave if she knew about this. 'We will send your parents a gift of our own choosing, but we will not attend the party. Have a good time without us. Sincerely, Alice."

DEAR ALICE: It's all right to have written it, but you should not have sent it. Even though it was questionable taste to ask the guests to pay for their own "meal and gift," the children undoubtedly meant well.

DEAR ABBY: Besides being a working mother, I am also a room mother of a kindergarten. For the second time this year, a child's mother has come to school and handed out invitations for a birthday party — excluding a few children. The hurt felt by those who were excluded was overwhelming.

The teacher told me that she was very upset over this and asked me what to do about it.

I've considered having a special party on the same day for those who weren't invited. I've also considered having a party on another day and inviting all the children except the one whose mother singled out a few to exclude at her child's party. (You can see how angry I am.)

I suppose the children who were excluded must learn how to deal with rejection sooner or later, but I hate to see children hurt.

Have you a solution?

ROOM MOTHER

DEAR ROOM MOTHER: The principal could send a notice to all parents stating that unless all the children in the class are invited, party invitations may not be delivered at school — but must be mailed instead.

CONFIDENTIAL TO E.L. IN CHICAGO: Cheer up. If you want a place in the sun, you've got to put up with a few blisters.

'Pants Bandit' blamed for 50 holdups

ADDISON, Texas (AP) — Texas has had the "friendly rapist," the "jogging bandit," the "traveling rapist" and the "over the hill gang."

Now clothing stores across the Lone Star state are being robbed by a man dubbed the "pants bandit."

He got his nickname because he forces everyone in the store to go to the back of the establishment where he robs employees, customers and the cash registers and then forces the employees and customers to undress to their underwear. He then takes the clothing with him and drops it near the door.

Drought-stricken states to get advice, not cash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drought-stricken states probably will get technical assistance and advice instead of money from the federal government, a disaster agency official says.

Joseph Winkle, acting director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency's response coordinating office, said Tuesday that efforts to trim the budget make monetary aid unlikely.

The State of New Jersey has applied for emergency federal relief to help it move water to areas of the state where reservoir levels have dipped because of drought. A decision on the request is expected this week.

Former British singer with 'total allergy syndrome' arrives in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Former British pop singer Sheila Rossall, wasted away by a rare disease, checked into a special hospital in Dallas where doctors are hoping to use space-age technology to save her life.

Doctors at the Brookhaven Environmental Control Unit say Miss Rossall, who weighed 54 pounds at check-in, will undergo a three-day evaluation to help them learn more about her disease, total allergy syndrome, and how to isolate her from the thousands of substances to which she is allergic.

Friends of the 31-year-old former singer say her physicians in England expect her to die if the treatment at Brookhaven isn't successful. Three years ago, about the time she recorded a chart-topping pop tune in Europe, she was stricken with total allergy syndrome, a disease that wiped out her body's natural defenses against environmental contamination. Most man-made substances are toxic to Miss Rossall.

Dr. Robert Stroud, an allergist on the Brookhaven staff, says all the center can try to do is isolate Miss Rossall from foreign substances long enough to give her natural defenses a chance at revitalization.

Stroud says medical experts know little about total allergy syndrome. The ailment is triggered when some unknown factor breaks down the body's natural ability to cleanse itself of foreign substances and fight off infection.

Stroud, a graduate of Harvard Medical School who received his training in allergies at Johns Hopkins University, says even the Brookhaven unit won't be able to protect Miss Rossall from all the impurities in her food and surroundings.

"Nothing in life is pure," he says. "All we can do is to try and give her system a rest, a chance to recover."

Generally, Stroud said, patients at the unit undergo isolation therapy for a minimum of two weeks. During that time she will breathe filtered air and eat only organically-grown fruits and vegetables and wild game.

Friends of Miss Rossall say she may have to remain at Brookhaven for three months at a cost of nearly $37,000. They have started a "Save Sheila Fund" from which they will pay her medical bills and remodel her modest apartment in Bristol, England to accommodate her special needs.

Isolation units similar to the one at Brookhaven are located in Denver, Chicago and North Carolina, Stroud said. Each uses space-age isolation and filtration equipment to purify their environments and protect patients from the outside world and its contaminants.

Reagan begins filling in holes of Agriculture Department staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has officially added its second senior official to the Agriculture Department and more are waiting in the wings.

Richard E. Lyng, at one time thought to be the front-runner for secretary of agriculture, was sworn in Tuesday as the Agriculture Department's No. 2 official.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block was given his oath of office Jan. 23 and since then has borne most of the public load of running the department, including making speeches, testifying before Congress and signing hundreds of documents and letters.

Lyng, 62, was among half a dozen candidates for the job of secretary of agriculture after Ronald Reagan won the presidency last Nov. 4 and, at one time, was thought to be the odds-on favorite.

But Block, an Illinois farmer and state director of agriculture, won out over Lyng after the two of them met with Reagan in California last December. Block also had strong support from Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and others who wanted a Midwesterner.

A number of other nominations, including those for undersecretary and assistant secretary posts, have been announced or are in the works but still need Senate confirmation.

Lyng, a native of California, was nominated by Reagan to the post of deputy secretary of agriculture Jan. 24. The job pays $60,662 a year.

Vietnam veteran

Reagan presents Medal of Honor to Texan hero

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, presenting a Texan his long-delayed award for wartime heroics, told the nation to give Vietnam veterans the gratitude that was denied them for too many years.

"I think we just let it slip our minds for a while," he said Tuesday as he gave the Medal of Honor, the highest award for wartime valor, to a retired Army master sergeant from Texas. "It's time to show our pride in them and to thank them."

The Pentagon ceremony was held with full military pomp and pageantry to honor Roy P. Benavidez of El Campo, credited with saving the lives of eight wounded members of a Green Beret reconnaissance team in a 1968 incident near Loc Ninh.

Reagan used the occasion to offer a reminder of the soldiers who, he said, had fought "as bravely and as well" as those in any other American conflict.

"They came home without a victory not because they had been defeated but because they had been denied permission to win," the president said.

The audience that filled the Pentagon's inner courtyard shouted its approval.

Following a 21-gun salute and an Army drill team's display of bayonet tossing and twirling, Reagan draped the medal on its blue ribbon over Benavidez's shoulders. It was the 239th Medal of Honor awarded for Vietnam heroics.

The citation that the president read in full said Benavidez, now 45, saved the lives of eight wounded men when he helped to evacuate a 12-man reconnaissance team embroiled in a jungle battle with North Vietnamese troops.

He was repeatedly wounded as he dragged and carried his comrades to the safety of a rescue helicopter, the citation said.

Those wounds kept him hospitalized for almost a year.

He received the second highest award for valor, the Distinguished Service Cross, but was denied the Medal of Honor when the Joint Chiefs of Staff said it did not have sufficient evidence to determine action "above and beyond the call of duty."

An eyewitness was located last year, and a special act of Congress extended the 3-year time limit so Benavidez could receive the award.

Benavidez later told reporters he took the attention and the ceremony in stride.

"I've been prepared for a thing like this. As long as I've been in the service I've prepared myself, and my motto is to function freely without friction," he said.

The stocky Texan declined to describe himself as a hero and repeatedly brushed away questions about whether his award represented a new respect for the military or a vindication of the 12 years Americans spent in Vietnam.

"I'm a professional soldier. I was rewarded for the job that I did," he said. "I don't know how the American people feel."

Benavidez, his wife and three children visited Reagan at the White House before the ceremony, and when they posed for pictures the president showed his enthusiasm.

After the election last fall, Lyng was transition team leader for the Agriculture Department and during the presidential campaign was co-chairman of Reagan's farm forces.

Lyng served as an assistant secretary of agriculture from 1969 to 1973, during the Nixon administration. He was president of the American Meat Institute from 1973 to 1979 when he resigned to become a private consultant.

Before coming to Washington in 1969, Lyng served as California director of agriculture when Reagan was governor of that state.

Meanwhile, according to sources who asked not to be identified, several other appointments as heads of agencies are expected to be announced, including:

—Mildred Thymian, who helps operate a family dairy farm in Big Stone County, Minn., as administrator of the Agricultural Marketing Service, which oversees a number of functions, including regulatory programs affecting fruit and vegetables, livestock, poultry, grain, cotton and many other commodities.

—Martin Fitzpatrick, a staff employee of Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, as director of the department's Office of Transportation.

—Kenneth A. Gilles, vice president for agricultural affairs at North Dakota State University, as administrator of the Federal Grain Inspection Service.

Block sells dairy plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block is taking the Reagan administration's plan to clamp down dairy price supports into the heart of dairy country today.

Appearing in Minneapolis, Minn., Block said the administration "believes that inflation began with government policy" and that efforts to combat it also must begin with government policy.

The administration proposed legislation last week that would allow a scheduled automatic boost in milk price supports April 1 to be skipped.

Block's remarks were prepared for delivery at a meeting of Land O'Lakes, Minneapolis, one of the nation's largest farm cooperatives and a major manufacturer of dairy products.

Copies of Block's remarks were released here by his office.

Block said a suspension of the April 1 increase in milk price supports "will reduce government costs by $147 million" in the current fiscal year that runs through Sept. 30.

"This will help combat inflation," he said. "Further it is a beginning in our effort to get the price support program under control. If we don't, the whole dairy industry price support program may be threatened because of high costs."

5-A AAAA Roundup

San Angelo dumps Mojo

ODESSA — San Angelo's Bobcats, with four players scoring in double figures, trounced Odessa Permian in District 5-A AAAA basketball play here Tuesday night, 68-61.

Cody Cox paced the Bobcats with 16 points while Hercules added 12 and Gregg Diebitch and Jeff Latham each had ten for the winner.

The Angelo club is now 22-8 on the year and 5-1 in second half conference play. Permian slipped to 16-13 overall and 2-4 against conference foes in second half competition.

Midland clinches title

MIDLAND — Midland High crushed Abilene Cooper, 93-66, here Tuesday night to clinch the District 5-A AAAA basketball championship.

The Bulldogs are still undefeated in conference competition. They wind up regular season competition against cross-town rival Midland Lee Friday night.

The win was the 30th of the season for Midland, compared to three losses.

Horace Brown, Midland's 6-8 pivot man, scored 20 points. Mike Feldt counted 14 for the winners, 12 of them in the first half. Cooper was led by Barry McLeod, who settled for 17.

Abilene edges Lee, 50-48

ABILENE — Abilene High held on to edge Midland Lee, 50-48, here Tuesday night after building up a 24-1 in the first eight minutes of play.

The win was only the second in six second half conference starts for the Eagles. Loyal Proffitt's only bucket late in the game provided the Eagles with their winning margin.

Forsan girls take tough bi-district win, 45-42

McCAMEY — The Forsan Buffalo Queens girls basketball team overcame a very sub-par night from the field with some clutch free throw shooting in the final minutes to claim a hard fought 45-42 win over McCamey in a Class AA bi-district state playoff game here Tuesday night.

The Forsan win vaults Coach Ron Taylor's team into the Class AA regional. They will play in the first round of that affair in Lubbock on Friday at 4:30 p.m.

The contest started out like an easy rout for the experienced Forsan team, which won bi-district last year with many of the same performers. After one quarter, the Buffalo Queens led by 16-4.

But a very cold shooting night became evident in the second stanza, as McCamey scored half of their points for the game in that quarter in moving on top at halftime by 25-24.

McCamey moved that margin to 33-31 entering the final stanza, but the cold shooting Forsan girls connected on 10 of 14 free throws in the final eight minutes to nail down the tough win.

The four biggest free throw conversions came in the final 16 seconds, however, as the Buffalo Queens were perfect when it counted.

Holding a 41-40 lead with 44 seconds remaining, Coach Taylor ordered four-corner offense. Forsan stalled down to 16 seconds, at which time Christi Adams was fouled. Adams sank both ends of the free throw opportunity for a 43-40 lead.

Then, after a McCamey miss, Karla Cregar hit both ends of another one-and-one chance with six seconds left to add needed points to the win.

McCamey then scored at the final buzzer on a gimme.

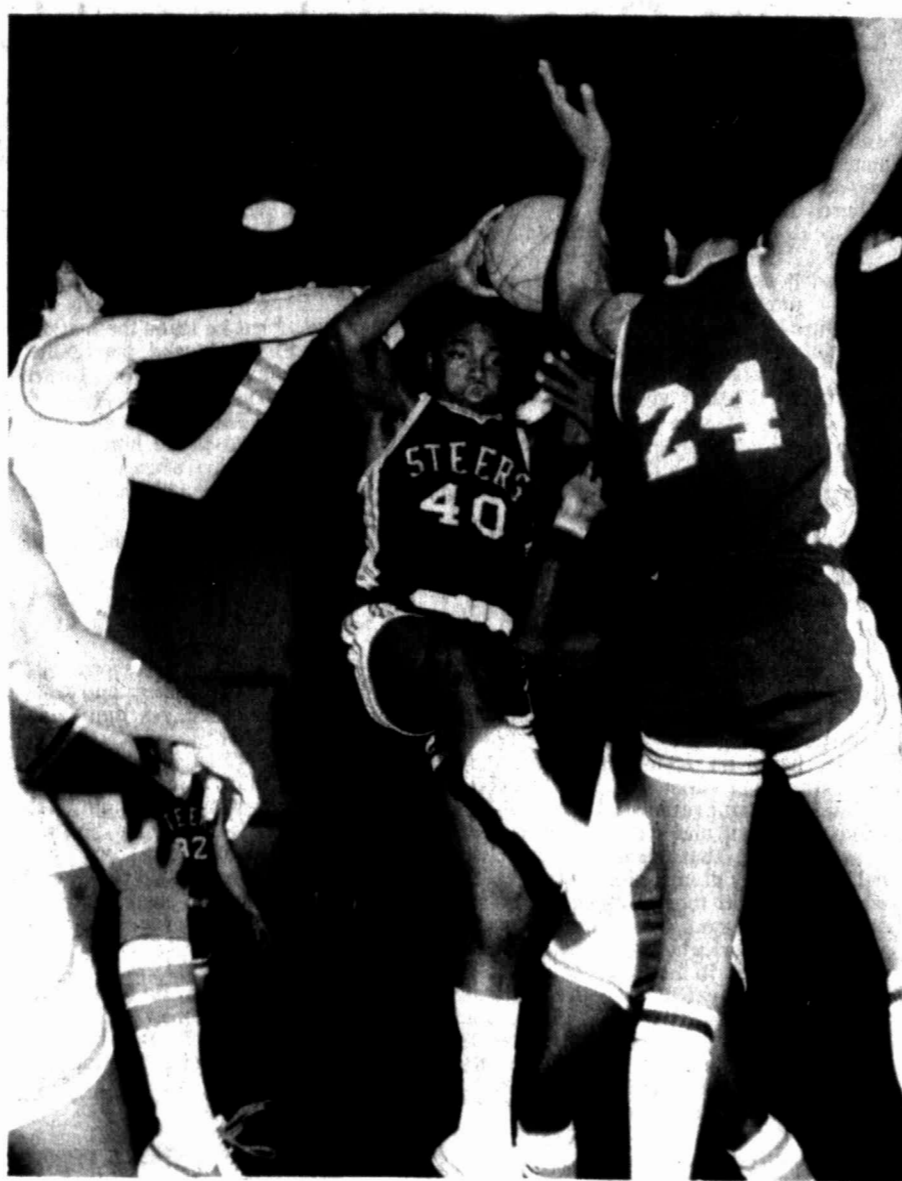

The McCamey team actually outscored Forsan from the field by 30-26, taking advantage of a 13 of 50 (26 percent) performance by the Buffalo Queens.

But Forsan canned 19 of 30 free throws, compared to McCamey's 12 of 18.

While the Forsan team shot the worst from the field that they have this year, Taylor was still relieved with the win.

"We didn't play that well, especially offensively," he mentioned, "but when we had to have it, we did."

"We shot terribly from the field," he continued, "but McCamey had something to do with that. If there was any question of us getting a field goal, they made sure we didn't. Their game plan was HEAVY TRAFFIC — Big Spring's Bobby Earl Williams (40) finds the going tough inside after snaring a rebound during first half action in the Steers loss to Odessa High. Williams had nine points before fouling out only two minutes into the third quarter, at which time Odessa took complete control of the game. Another OHS player surrounds Williams, as does teammate Jerald Wrightsil (24).

OHS embarrasses Steers

By NATHAN POSS
Sports Editor

The Odessa High Broncos came into their Tuesday night encounter here without any District 5-A AAAA wins in 12 starts. It looked like a sure 13 in the early going, too, as the Big Spring Steers jumped out to a quick 11-0 lead.

But from there, it was nearly all the formerly hapless OHS team, as they rolled to a 79-54 triumph behind a hot shooting performance led by Rayford Wright.

The Steers early 11-point lead was shattered quickly, as the Broncos took advantage of what looked to be a sluggish BSHS group to knot the count at 13-13 after one quarter.

The second quarter began the opposite of the first, with OHS taking a lead that they would never relinquish. They scored the first nine points of the stanza for a 22-13 lead, with the Steers finally coming back in the final minutes of the half behind James Doss and Bobby Earl Williams to narrow the score to 32-28.

But Williams was whistled for a foul off a beautiful skywalking block with just 30 seconds to go in the half, his third.

Things didn't get better for his foul situation in the early part of the third stanza, and consequently, for the Steers. The BSHS junior, who is the Bovines leading scorer and rebounder, was called for his fourth and decisive fifth fouls quickly in the third period, with his final one coming with 5:53 left in the stanza.

At that time, the OHS team held a 34-28 lead. But throughout the remainder of the period, the 6'3" Wright was perfect from the field and the free throw line in leading the Broncos on a 22-4 charge that all but had the game salted away entering the fourth quarter with a 56-32 lead.

Wright had 14 of his game high 27 points during the six minute stretch in the third period that the OHS team looked like anything but the cellar dwellers, with his teammates near perfect, too.

The Steers, meanwhile, committed numerous turnovers during the stretch, as well as throughout the game, and were out rebounded badly by the taller Broncho team.

Besides Wright's 27 points, Terry Stahl was the only other Broncho in double figures, scoring 15. A total of 10 OHS players got into the scoring act, however.

Doss paced the Steer attack with 16. Williams and Jerald Wrightsil added nine each.

The loss drops the Steers second half record to 5-AAA-A. A record 10-11, and puts their season mark at 12-19. The win was the first in the second half of 5-A AAAA for the Broncos, and in fact, their initial triumph since late-December.

Big Spring closes out their season on the road on Friday against San Angelo, while OHS plays crosstown rival Permian.

Big 2nd quarter buries Shorthorns

A big second quarter by the Odessa JVs and a lousy one from the Big Spring JVs propelled the Ponies to a triumph here Tuesday evening by a 61-53 count.

The Odessa JVs outscored the Big Spring crew by 20-2 in the second stanza to overcome a Shorthorn lead and put themselves into excellent position.

"We just had a total mental lapse in the second quarter," said Big Spring Coach Mike Randle.

Jim Bailey paced the OHS JVs with 25 points, while Tom Cudd had 11 points for the Big Spring JVs.

Arkansas overcomes slow SMU to clinch SWC

By the Associated Press

It took more than a delay game to delay the Arkansas Razorbacks from taking the Southwest Conference basketball championship.

The Southern Methodist University Mustangs went into a delay game, but couldn't prevail as Arkansas took an easy 47-33 victory Tuesday night to clinch the title.

In other SWC roundball action, Texas A&M edged Texas Christian, 59-57; Texas beat Texas Tech, 65-54, and Houston defeated Rice, 63-55.

Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton said the SMU delay game surprised him, but Mustangs coach Dave Bliss said it was their only chance to win.

"SMU had not come out in a spread offense before, so I guess it did catch us a little off guard. But I think our team handled it well," Sutton said.

Bliss said he went to the delay game because, "We're too small and they're quicker than we are. That's a deadly combination."

Mike Young had 16 points, including eight of Arkansas' 17 second-half points as the Razorbacks took their third SWC title in the last four years. Scott Hastings and U.S. Reed scored 10 each for Arkansas.

Vernon Smith hit two free throws with just more than a minute remaining to boost Texas A&M to a 59-57 victory over TCU. Horned Frog Cune Luke's 15-foot jumper rolled off the rim as time expired.

Director Marvin Miller said at the time. "They have fired the gun."

Today, the players were slow to fire the opening salvo of their heavy artillery in defiance of management's reported $70 million war chest ready in the event of a strike.

Baseball strike set for today

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Another major league baseball crisis was in the offing as player representatives of 26 clubs met today to consider a strike date in their labor war with management.

Even as training camps continued to open in Florida and Arizona, the players association appeared to be as determined as club owners to hold their ground. A late morning meeting of the association's executive board was called to hear a report from the players' representatives on a study committee on the matter.

Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies and Sal Bando of the Milwaukee Brewers.

However, a report hardly was necessary, with a strike date before June 1 expected to be voted by the angry players.

The stage was set last week when owners implemented their controversial compensation proposal for re-entry free agents.

"They have chosen to start the war," players association Executive

Coahoma boys help throw 6-AAA race into bedlam

COAHOMA — The Coahoma Bulldogs raced to a 76-48 win over Crane here Tuesday night, and then awaited the good news that the final standings in the District 6-AAA race had been thrown into a three-way tie.

That means that the Bulldog boys are still alive, and will be involved in a three-team playoff with Denver City and Seminole sometime this week to determine the 6-AAA champion.

All three teams tied for the championship finished both the first and second halves of 6-AAA play with 4-2 records. Crane, meanwhile, never won in 12 league starts.

The Coahoma win Tuesday night was never in doubt, as the Bulldogs rolled to a 24-3 first quarter lead in pushing their season mark to 19-9.

Philip Ritchey led a Coahoma attack that saw nine players score, pouring in 24 points. Michael Meyer added 15 points.

Mike Fort had 10 points to pace Crane.

Following Coahoma's win, they learned that Denver City had topped Seminole by 48-44 to throw the race into the three-way tie.

Coahoma Coach Doug Harriman met with representatives from Denver City and Seminole this morning at ten o'clock to determine when and where the 6-AAA playoffs would be held.

The winner of the 6-AAA title will be in the state playoffs beginning next Tuesday.

In the JV game between the two schools, Coahoma emerged with a 47-46 win. The triumph allowed the Coahoma JVs to finish with a record of 15-7. Ricky Martin had 17 for the Coahoma JVs, with Jim Rinard adding 11.

SIGNS WITH PORTLAND — Veteran righthanded pitcher Luis Tiant sits with Portland Beavers General Manager Dave Hersch at a new conference Monday announcing that he had signed a one-year contract with the Class AAA Pacific Coast League team. Terms of the contract were not announced. Last season Tiant had an 8-9 record and a 4.89 ERA in 25 appearances with the New York Yankees.

Georgetown's Thompson a success in unique setup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Georgetown University coach John Thompson is a study in contrasts.

A black coach for a predominantly white school in the nation's capital, Thompson has built a highly successful program on honesty, education and basketball, and in that order.

An unlikely candidate to coach at a Jesuit university better known for its academic excellence than its fullcourt press, Thompson came to Georgetown in 1972 after a successful career as coach of a Washington, D.C. high school.

He had been a center at Providence College and later in the National Basketball Association for the Boston Celtics.

A giant of a man, carrying some 240 pounds on a 6-foot-10 frame, he is an awesome sight on the bench, his huge body hunched forward, his massive hands twisting an ever-present towel between his fingers.

He was the envy of just about every other college coach at news that Patrick

Ewing, a 7-foot center from Cambridge, Mass., considered to be the best high school player in the nation, will be coming to Georgetown next year.

Thompson's approach to Ewing was the same as he has given any athlete, if you come to Georgetown he is prepared to go to class and be prepared for an education.

Thompson puts his program where his mouth is. In his first eight years at the school, 35 of the 37 players he has recruited have graduated or are on schedule to graduate.

"The thing that impressed me most when I was a senior in high school was that Coach Thompson never tried to convince me to go to Georgetown," recalls former Georgetown player and current Atlanta Hawk Craig Shelton. "He just explained how much he could give of himself to getting an education. He knows playing pro basketball is a one-in-a-million shot, and he's more concerned with how much his players learn."

John Duren, another

Georgetown player in the NBA also remembers Thompson's philosophy: "He has the ability to make a 17-year-old realize the value of basketball and education."

Thompson's record as a coach is a tribute to his recruiting skills and ability to mold raw talent into a highly-tuned basketball machine.

In his first eight years at Georgetown, Thompson's teams won 156 and lost 72, a .684 percentage. His teams have gone to postseason tournaments each of the last six years and last year's 26-6 team came within one shot of reaching the NCAA Final Four.

What is even more amazing when looking at last year's 26-6 record is the level of competition. According to the NCAA, Georgetown's schedule was the toughest of any school considered for an at-large tournament bid.

"In my mind," said Frank McGuire, former South Carolina basketball coach, "John Thompson has done the best coaching job of anybody I know."

Spurs George Johnson blocks way to record

By the Associated Press
The San Antonio Spurs are well known for their backcourt duo of George Gervin and James Silas, but George Johnson is still the best on the block.

The 6-foot-11 center blocked 13 shots, the fourth-best performance in National Basketball Association history, Tuesday night to highlight San Antonio's 131-126 victory

Watson, Trevino insure success for Arnie's stop

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The PGA Tour's gypsy caravan shifts across the country to Florida this week with legendary Arnold Palmer as the tournament host and, strangely, most of the winners missing.

"We have an excellent field," insisted Palmer.

"And with the presence of (Tom) Watson and (Lee) Trevino, well, that should help the gallery greatly. I'm very pleased with the quality of the field," said the 51-year-old Palmer, who has a financial interest in the 7,102-yard, par 71 Bay Hill Club course and is serving his third year as host and driving force behind the $300,000 Bay Hill Classic which gets started Thursday.

Still, the 144-man lineup lacks Johnny Miller, Bruce Lietzke, John Cook and Hale Irwin, who have won six of the seven tournaments played thus far this year, and Jack Nicklaus. They are missing for a variety of reasons — some because of personal scheduling problems, some simply to take a break.

Watson, Trevino and Palmer virtually assure a successful event, however. Although he now spends a good portion of his playing time on the seniors tour, the dynamic Palmer still exerts a magnetic effect on the galleries. Watson and Trevino swept most of golf's honors last season.

Watson led the money-winning list and took the Player of the Year title for a fourth consecutive season, while Trevino won three American titles and produced the lowest scoring average in 20 years.

over the Golden State Warriors.

"If I'm established as the No. 1 shot blocker in the league, then other teams will say, 'You can't hit the layup on San Antonio, so we'll have to do something else,'" said Johnson. "Anything like that helps you in the playoffs."

Elmore Smith, then with the Los Angeles Lakers, had 17 blocks in one game against Portland Oct. 28, 1973 for the NBA record. Smith also had 14 in a game twice, both within a week of his 17-block performance.

Johnson's latest rejection performance was his sixth time with 10 or more blocks in a game. In contrast, the legendary Bill Russell and Wilt Chamberlain never had a 10-block game.

Johnson, an eight-season NBA veteran, is averaging only 4.7 points this season, but he leads the league with 3.15 blocks per game, an average he improved Tuesday.

The San Antonio crowd of 9,163 gave him a standing ovation when got his team-record 10th block and for each one after that, the fans chanted, "G.J., G.J."

In other NBA games, Los Angeles whipped Chicago 107-97. New York nipped Atlanta 120-117 in overtime, Seattle defeated Dallas 102-84. Denver outscored New Jersey 140-123 and San Diego stopped Portland 121-107.

While Johnson clogged the middle, Gervin and Silas, as usual, did the bulk of San Antonio's scoring against Golden State. Gervin had 26 points and Silas 23 to offset 42 by Warriors forward Bernard King.

Knicks 120, Hawks 117

Atlanta led by 13 points with seven minutes left in regulation, but Campy Russell's basket with 18 seconds left sent the game into overtime, and Mike Glenn's follow shot gave New York the victory.

With less than a minute to go in overtime, Michael Ray Richardson stole the ball and drove downcourt for an uncontested layup, but he missed it. Glenn was there for the follow shot that gave the Knicks a 119-117 margin with 47 seconds to go.

But it won't interfere with football

Too Tall to try singing career

DALLAS (AP) — First it was Ed "Too Tall" Jones the football player, then it was Ed "Too Tall" Jones the boxer. Now it's Ed "Too Tall" Jones the singer.

Jones launched his latest career, one he says won't interfere with his football career with the Dallas Cowboys, Monday night before an enthusiastic crowd at The Yellow Rose of Texas, a country and western club.

The songs he sang were "Do The Dip" and "Funkin' On The Radio," two disco songs. The record was cut last October and recently released on the Fun City label.

"This is a lot more fun than having your first professional fight," Jones said following his singing debut here.

Jones said he had been planning his venture into singing for about eight years.

The music business is not exactly new to Jones, who owns TTC Booking Agency, operated at Memphis by his brother, Cliff Jones. The booking agency has been in business for about eight years.

"We book a lot of the name rhythm and blues groups which have made it big at one time but have cooled off for whatever reason," Jones said.

Now that the single is out, Jones plans to produce an album. He says disco is not what he's really interested in doing.

"Disco isn't my kind of music, really. The two songs in this single will be the only disco numbers in the album," Jones said. "It will be basically a rhythm and blues thing."

Jones says the album will be finished in plenty of time for him to report to Cowboy training camp this summer. That should make Cowboys officials happy since Jones missed a season during a brief and less-than-outstanding venture into boxing.

"I'll be ready when it's time to report to camp," Jones said.

Oldfield still gets no respect from track world for records

By the Associated Press
Brian Oldfield is a bushy bear of a man who has shoved the 16-pound iron ball farther than any man in the world, yet finds himself rejected by the sport and the country he loves.

"I am accepted all over the world," complains the bearded 6-foot-8, 280-pound shotputter. "I can travel to Italy and Japan like a Johnny Appleseed and crowds gather to watch me perform. But over here I am an outcast, in some places not even allowed to warm up."

Oldfield, a free-spirited onetime Chicago deadend kid who grew into a modern-day Samson, is caught up in the continuing dilemma over what constitutes an amateur in sports.

"I have been cleared for domestic events," he said, explaining why he is in New York to compete in the Mobil-sponsored U.S. Indoor Track and Field Championships Friday at Madison Square Garden, "but I still can't try out for the Olympics."

Oldfield came out of obscure Middle Tennessee State College in Murfreesboro, Tenn., to compete in the 1972 Games at Munich. Whirling around the shotput circle in a bikini-style swim suit that shocked the late IOC President Avery Brundage, tossing the ball between his legs in practice and puffing away on a cigarette between throws, he fell short of a medal.

Then, in 1973, he joined the professional International Track Association with dreams of fame and fortune.

In April, 1975, in San Francisco, he set the world indoor record with a toss of 72 feet, 6 1/2 inches. A month later, in El Paso, Texas, he had three puts that broke the outdoor world record, his last an astronomical throw of 75 feet.

Although they were the epitome in his specialty, Oldfield never had the satisfaction of seeing his feats in the record books. Pros don't count. George Woods set the amateur indoor mark of 72 feet, 2 3/4 inches. No amateur ever approached the astonishing 75 feet.

But Brian's dream never materialized. He turned pro.

But, plans for a pro track system failed. So, disenchanted and embittered, Oldfield did the natural thing — he applied to get back his amateur standing.

His application was rejected. He took his case to court. It went as high as the Appellate Division and died there — with no resources to pursue the issue to the Supreme Court.

"Besides," Oldfield added, "you can't take the Olympic Committee to court — they're sacrosanct." "Since '72 I feel I've been in exile. I'm tainted. But I'm fighting for recognition."

HE'S GOT PROBLEMS — Brian Oldfield has thrown the shotput farther than any man in the world but it's not recognized in the record books. After the 1972 Munich Olympics Oldfield joined the professional International Track Association and found himself caught up in the continuing dilemma over what constitutes an amateur in sports.

Pressure to play with injuries not reserved for pro athletes

EDITOR'S NOTE: Athletic injuries don't happen just because of the rough-and-tumble nature of the games athletes play. Part 3 of a five-part series on stress looks at how emotional and other factors relate to pain and injury.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

For years, athletes have been told to play with pain. Vince Lombardi once said: "You play with small hurts." The late Green Bay Packers coach might have disagreed, but doctors are saying now that some athletes have been performing below their capabilities because of physical as well as psychic pain.

On and off-the-field stresses can mar an athlete's concentration, rob him of peak strength and make him more vulnerable to injuries, doctors say.

more vulnerable to injuries, doctors say. And both the medical and psychological communities are paying more attention to the relationship of injury and stress.

The relationship apparently starts early. "The number of cases of Little League injuries is frightening," says Dr. Frank Jobe, a noted sports orthopedic surgeon who has found large numbers of arm and shoulder injuries in athletes not long out of kindergarten.

"Say the playoffs come and a team has only one pitcher who can get the ball over the plate. The coach might push him too far, but often the coach is cautious and it's the parent who risks the kid's health. The parent wants him to be a star," says Jobe.

That early pressure to succeed burdens young players in other sports, too, says Jobe. "Some of the most relieved kids I see are the ones I tell (that) they shouldn't be playing football," he said. "That gets them off the hook with dad."

Despite the pressures to perform at an early age, Little League and scholastic sports are basically fun and games. It's in college that sports begin to take on a more serious outlook. And in the pros, those same old pressures are a life influence. They affect an athlete's livelihood and his identity.

"You'd be surprised how many players play hurt in the NFL because they fear losing their jobs or not getting another contract," said John Matuszak of the Oakland Raiders. "It's there because there is no way you can duplicate the standard of pay and living."

Lynn Swann of the Pittsburgh Steelers says he's played with injuries that hurt, "but I knew I couldn't hurt myself worse by playing," he said. "You have to know what your body is telling you. Some people can take a lot of pain; some can't."

Bill Walton has drawn a lot of attention to the use of pain-killers and their potential dangers. The former All-Star center took pain-killing injections for an injured foot during the 1978 playoffs, while he was with the Portland Trail Blazers. While his foot was numb, he said, he broke a bone in it. He says he still has pain, and his pro basketball career may be over. He felt he was the victim of team policy on drugs.

Walton said he had taken pain-killing shots three times when he played for Portland — in 1976 when he broke his leg, during the 1977 playoffs, and in April of '78 when he suffered the broken foot. The Blazers contend Walton was treated according to normal medical procedures.

Walton said he was never specifically told to play when hurt, but he felt that by refusing to follow certain practices he would become an outcast. "That pressure is always there," he said.

Dr. James Nicholas, team

physician of the New York Jets, believes weather creates some of the most serious stresses athletes encounter. "The body is stressed enough during competition, but when he must play under extremely cold or hot conditions, it can really tax the body," he said.

Heat stroke can result. The body can become more vulnerable to injury. Stress seems to make athletes more susceptible to injuries.

"Stress produces stress," said Dr. Kenneth Greenspan, director for the center for stress-related disorders at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in New York. "If off-the-field problems are carried onto the field, the athlete can become less efficient and effective. At this level of competition, he can then really hurt himself."

Greenspan said when an "athlete is under distress, there's greater blood flow, diverting blood to many muscles not needed for running or throwing." As a result, "the heart rate goes up, the other muscles get tense, and it throws everything off. A player whose jump shot flows in practice looks awkward under stress conditions. He'll then try to compensate and feel even more stress. "As his muscles tense, he can be injured more easily. Tension limits the flexibility of muscles and tendons. The knee joint, for example, rather than being flexible and absorbing tends to be less resilient under stress," said Greenspan.

The fear of failure, in turn, can kill performances. Some team managements have pressured doctors to bend rules and adapt their diagnoses to the team advantage, but the doctors interviewed by The Associated Press said this is not as great a problem as it used to be.

"Coaches are a lot better on this today," said Jobe. "Now the coaches and owners are more sophisticated. The owners recognize they have a valuable commodity. If they shorten an athlete's career, it costs them money, too."

"We're trying our best to advise players about the career-disabling potential of their injuries," said Jobe. "If we feel athletes are doing something that may shorten their careers, we will advise them. The primary responsibility of the physician is to nobody but the athlete."

Free agency the strike issue

Time was given for continued negotiations, but efforts were fruitless, with neither side budging. The owners then implemented their proposal providing unprotected roster players as compensation for premium or "ranking" free agent players signing with a new team. "We think it's a modest, reasonable proposal," Ray Grebey, director of management's Player Relations Committee, told The Associated Press Tuesday in New York. "Modest proposal — it's a very radical proposal," Miller told the AP after arriving in Tampa for the players association meeting. "There's no question of how radical it is. The whole thrust is to inhibit free agency for many and end free agency for still more."

Voters follow Democrat line, elect Uribe in South Texas senate race

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — In the end, it was a battle of the political heavyweights in a South Texas state senate race and the Democrats walked off the winners.

"We needed to bring in our big guns," Democrat Hector Uribe, a Brownsville state representative, said Tuesday in assessing his victory over Republican Ricardo Hinojosa of McAllen. "As it turned out, their big guns were shooting blanks."

Both sides enlisted outside support with the Republicans sending out letters from President Reagan and the Democrats shuttling in Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and a host of state legislators to campaign.

On election night, it was never close.

Uribe, a 35-year-old lawyer and two-term House member, pulled ahead early and accepted Hinojosa's concession an hour after polls closed.

Unofficial complete returns showed Uribe with 35,542 votes to Hinojosa's 22,453.

Brooks, Cameron, Hidalgo and Jim Wells counties are in the district.

Uribe will fill the two years remaining in term left vacant when Raul Longoria resigned in January to become a state district judge. The seat has been unoccupied since the current legislative session began.

Despite the traditional Democratic control of the Lower Rio Grande Valley, Republicans claimed a good chance to win because special elections sometimes yield strange results. They pointed to John Tower's special election win to become the state's first Republican U.S. senator since Reconstruction.

"They turned out the Democratic vote," Hinojosa said in assessing his defeat. "We're at the point where the Democrats are taking us seriously in South Texas. We need to try to educate the voters about the importance of voting for a candidate and not the party."

The 31-year-old Harvard-trained lawyer said he will resume his private practice and continue as Hidalgo County GOP chairman.

"I'll be back trying to build the party in South Texas. Obviously we have a way to go," he said.

The Republicans had raised funds statewide for the contest. Hinojosa hired an Austin advertising firm and ran broadcast spots with Vice President George Bush's endorsement in a heavy media blitz.

Uribe said he saw in the results a resentment of Gov. Bill Clements' early attempts to help Hinojosa.

Hinojosa over another Republican in a Feb. 10 election. Hinojosa led the seven-man field with 9,073 votes to Uribe's 7,062. Uribe barely made the runoff by 20 votes over Mission businessman Joe Summers, the other Republican.

After a lengthy recount, Clements scheduled the runoff a week after the official canvass. The timing allowed only a day of absentee voting in one county. Clements said a Saturday election would have allowed more working people to participate.

Nation's research fleet exploring mysteries of the ocean

Mar. Geographic News Service
WASHINGTON — Flying the oceans from the frigid antarctic to the balmy Seychelles, some American ships have an unusual mission: to gather information about the watery world around them.

In the last few years, research carried out by scientists on this non-military research fleet has opened new fisheries, pinpointed offshore oil deposits, and confirmed that the Earth's crust consists of huge plates moving slowly upon the globe.

Serving both government and private scientists, the ships are outfitted with specialized equipment and in some cases elaborate laboratories where experiments can be conducted in mid-ocean.

Seagoing Laboratory
 Cruises range from half-day runs on a smaller ship accommodating five or six scientists to trips lasting months on a 303-foot-long vessel that has room for 30 scientists and a crew of 57. Budget cuts, however, threaten some of the extended missions planned for the bigger ships in the next few years.

In 1981 far-reaching cruises will check on the effects of man-made pollutants in the mid-Atlantic, examine tides and currents in the Bearing Sea, and try to find out how the Pacific's restless thermal energy affects the world's weather.

Closer to home, vessels will take a detailed look at the ecology of Chesapeake Bay, test gear that might snare shrimp more efficiently in the Gulf of Mexico, and examine a sizable ocean ridge system off the California-Oregon coast.

The underwater ridge will be mapped by a new sonar system called "Sea Beam." Previously used only by the military, the system can map wide swaths of the ocean floor, reproducing the details in almost photographic clarity.

Still to come are voyages that may shed new light on the influence of the oceans on climate, the mining of deep sea minerals, and the effects of worldwide pollution on the creatures in the sea.

The ships that carry out this wide variety of chores are operated by the U.S.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), which has 24 vessels, and the National Science Foundation (NSF), which has 25.

NOAA ships are used mainly for government-sponsored projects, while most NSF ships are used by academic and research institutions. NSF and other government branches such as the Navy, Geological Survey, and Department of Energy pay for operation and maintenance.

Among the NSF fleet is a tug that at one time ferried people to Alcatraz; an iron hull schooner, vintage 1923, with marble fireplaces; and a converted sports fishing vessel that once had an elevator and stairwells large enough to accommodate the cello played by the ship's original owner.

Soaring fuel and labor costs and aging vessels needing major overhauls promise rough sailing ahead for both the NOAA and NSF fleets.

At least one of NOAA's biggest oceangoing vessels may soon return to home port indefinitely, reinforcing the prevalent fear that oceanographers may increasingly have to turn to coastal projects instead of far-reaching deep-sea work.

The specter of a big ship layup haunts NSF, too. "The academic fleet will be leaving scientists and projects at the pier this year," predicted Capt. Robertson P. Dinsmore, chief of operations at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, which uses NSF vessels. His hope is that the big ships can continue sailing if schedules are cut back and periodic maintenance work is stepped up.

These forebodings were reinforced by a recent study on the future of oceanographic research done by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

"It seems inevitable that extended deep-ocean cruises requiring large crews will have to be curtailed," said project director Peter A. Johnson. "What worries us even more is the aging equipment and electronic gear on research ships that needs upgrading."

Stunt Men
 Despite the story fiscal seas raging around them, the people who serve the research fleet remain dedicated. Ronald L. Newsom, who commands one of NOAA's big ships, the Researcher, started his career with the old Coast and Geodetic Survey.

"At one time or another in the last 22 years, I've acted as a hydrographer, an oceanographer, a marine engineer, and an administrator," he said.

"Back in the good old days, we did a lot of macho stuff. One stunt I won't repeat was swimming through the surf and breakers to place survey markers at the base of a 3,000-foot-high bluff off the coast of Molokai."

Although desk-bound now, the commander of the NOAA fleet, Adm. Robert C. Munson, has had his own unnerving moments at sea. He has faced raging hurricanes—"everyone gets seasick"—malfunctioning equipment that wipes out experiments, and frustrating delays in port.

But nothing matches the time in the mysterious seaweed-laden Sargasso Sea when two port engines suddenly gave a violent shudder that threatened to tear them from their mountings.

Atlanta child murders taking heavy toll on small children

ATLANTA (AP) — Terror-stricken children sleep with Bibles in their beds, attempt to carry weapons to school and find it hard to trust adults. These are just some of the signs of fear spawned by the unsolved killings of 18 children in this Southern city, officials say.

"It's kind of frightening," said Shaun Kemp, a 14-year-old riding his bicycle in the industrial neighborhood where the latest victim, Patrick Baltazar, lived before he was reported missing Feb. 7. Baltazar's body was found six days later.

Patrick Baltazar's world was a neighborhood full of vacant, vine-covered lots, foundries, warehouses, cinder-block apartments and dark street tunnels running beneath railroad tracks.

Since July 1979, 18 black children between the ages of 7 and 15 have been found dead here — most of them strangled or suffocated. Not one of the cases has been solved; no one has been arrested.

Educators and psychologists say young Kemp speaks for thousands of youngsters in Atlanta who are deeply frightened.

"They are scared to death, and I might add, so are their parents," said Barbara Whitaker, assistant superintendent of Atlanta city schools. "They can't play in their yards, they can't ride their bicycles, they can't skate, they don't want to sleep by themselves."

"When somebody knocks on the door, they almost jump out of their skins," Mrs. Whitaker said. Officials have launched efforts to counteract the fear, which has manifested itself in a variety of symptoms.

At school, many children "are anxious, withdrawn, afraid to be in the halls alone," Mrs. Whitaker said. "There are children who are afraid if their parents are five minutes late to pick them up after school."

At home, "parents are saying their children are wetting the bed, afraid to sleep in their beds, afraid to go to the bathroom, and want a light on in their rooms," she said. Others are "going to bed with all kinds of toys they think will protect them. Some kids are sleeping with a Bible."

Parents interviewed at West End Mall in a predominantly black area said they keep very close reins on their young children.

"I am definitely keeping a watch on them ... I am right here with them," said Clyde Starkes, father of four. "I know what they are going to do and when they do it. When they go out, I bring them out. If I don't bring them out, they don't go out."

Leola Callahan said her 7-year-old son Dana is "very much" afraid and sleeps with stuffed animals despite her assurances that "nothing is going to happen."

Ironically, officials say it is the effort of schools and parents to promote safety — more than the actual threat of danger — that has brought many children to the brink of paranoia.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said children have been "bombarded" by warnings from their parents, the news media, teachers and public safety employees.

In mid-February, about 50 teachers, psychologists and counselors gathered for a workshop to learn how to conduct discussion groups of parents trying to cope with the problems.

A day later, about 200 mental health professionals, teachers, civic leaders and parents met to plan how families and professionals can deal with the problems on a citywide basis.

Mrs. Whitaker said the school system and parents now are trying to "undo" some of the fear caused by the incessant warnings.

"Had we had more experience, we might have mixed in some reassurances earlier. We said, 'You must not go out alone' and 'You must not get into cars with strangers.'"

"The tendency is to have them not trust anyone," she said. "But think how miserable that must be, not trusting."

Now teachers and counselors are emphasizing that children can trust some adults, such as policemen, firemen, teachers, school staff — "all official people," Mrs. Whitaker said.

The official acknowledged, however, that the "damnable part" is that the killer or killers in fact may be posing as authority figures.

More emphasis also is being placed on parental responsibility for the children's safety, she said.

Sociologists say that may be easier said than done. All of the dead children came from low-income homes where necessity forced them to be on the streets. Frequently, such youths feel they can fend for themselves. This independence is part of the very fabric of the black community.

Several of the child victims disappeared while running errands for adults or doing odd jobs to make money for themselves or their families — customs followed for generations.

Fred Crawford, director of Emory University's Center for Research and Social Change, said it is sometimes difficult for whites to understand that lack of supervision by black parents does not necessarily point to deliberate neglect or lack of concern.

"These kids are different from white people in that they frequently have to do more for their families. They are out more working, running errands," Crawford said. "Many of their parents don't have cars to run them around, and if they do have cars, they don't have the money to spend on gas to carry the kids around."

Most of the victims — all but two of them have been boys — were considered street-wise and able to handle themselves. Crawford said such confidence can be deadly.

Future-forecasters possess free hand

NEW YORK (AP) — You know things aren't well with the economy when so many people are thinking about the future, a future so ill-defined that you can peddle almost any conceivable type of forecast.

Blame it on the times. Many Americans have had their economic faith shaken, and even Ronald Reagan might have a time restoring it. They think something big is going to happen. They don't know what, but they want to be prepared for whatever it is, good or bad, whenever it comes.

In good times, it has been demonstrated over and over again, Americans are busy with the present, with making money, raising kids, running businesses, enjoying themselves, expressing themselves.

In the past few years though they haven't been making the money (pay raises have fallen behind inflation) or raising kids (small families, and sometimes no kids, are in), at least to the degrees they had.

Small businesses are hurting, as shown in surveys by the Federation of Independent Business and the National Small Business Association, which cite inflation, interest rates and paperwork as the big culprits.

While the matter of people enjoying and expressing themselves might be too subjective to measure, you may get a growling response if you ask resort operators or the local art galleries "how's business?"

Some will say that the marketplace is hardly a measure of life's quality, but it is an indicator of sorts. And what it says is that people are postponing purchases, delaying enjoyments until tomorrow, when presumably things will be clearer. Ask homebuyers or carbuyers.

Maybe times will be worse. You can have your pick of high-priced newsletters forecasting the advent of terrible times, of food shortages and rioting in the streets, of total economic collapse. They are full of advice on how to stop living: hoard food and gold, and hibernate.

As many "confidential" newsletters seem to exist as there are points of view, good and bad, and almost all of them deal with the future.

What can be said about those who make a living from such forecasts is that they're unlike their readers. They believe in the present; they enjoy themselves and express themselves and make money in the present.

They need not fear contradiction, because nobody else knows very much about the future, either, and it's a general fact of life that as old subscribers catch on and quit, unknowing new ones will be signing up.

Home building industry feels inflation pinch

NEW YORK (AP) — If Americans can't put a roof over their heads there may be little point in devising grand plans for improving productivity, reducing inflation or otherwise seeking to tame the savage economy.

But there are problems in roofing America. It takes lots of money to build and buy houses, and the so-called thrift industry pipeline that funneled money to the housing market is plugged up like an old sink.

The reason is inflation and high interest rates, and it works like this:

—With the cost of living outpacing wage increases, many people are unable to save as much as they once did.

—What money they do save often goes to large commercial banks that can offer high-interest certificates rather than small, local savings institutions, such as savings and loan associations or mutual banks.

—Commercial banks aren't as dedicated to making mortgages as are thrift institutions. Seeking a greater return for their dollar, they invest in more profitable and less regulated ventures than housing.

—Thrift institutions have been sinking deep into the hole, one reason being that they hold on their books old home mortgage loans on which they collect only 7 percent or even less. They lose money on them.

—Traditional home mortgage lenders are resolved not to be caught in such a bind again. They are wary of granting long-term fixed-term mortgages. Instead, they want flexibility, which generally means they seek to give mortgages whose terms vary with changing conditions.

—Such mortgages now exist, but after 50 years of expecting and getting the traditional mortgage, some young homebuyers are reluctant to test the new mortgages. Some critics say they are wise to resist.

—The argument of the critics is that flexible rates mean either of two things: That the monthly payments might rise beyond the earning power of the homeowner; that, as an alternative, the homebuyer would need more years than he or she has remaining to retire the mortgage.

—The critics of the critics concede the new mortgages aren't as desirable as the old ones. But, they argue, we must be realistic. If you want a house, this is the only way you or your family will get it.

There are other elements also. The typical single-family house now requires as much down as the median-income family earns before taxes in an entire year. That's hard to come up with when inflation exceeds wage increases, when taxes are rising, and when saved money erodes in value.

Moreover, housing really doesn't have top priority, as you might think it would. No matter that about 40 million people will reach age 30, or homebuying age, in this decade. The goal of those who would rebuild America is to channel funds into manufacturing plant and equipment, and in that way reduce inflation by lowering the cost of making goods.

Somehow, though, it would seem the housing situation has to be worked out before that can happen. The situation isn't being ignored, as the many innovations in housing design and financing attest.

It's income tax time, and that means that there is no time like the present to get those bookkeeping records in order. Well, Thomas Office Supply can supply everything all the equipment necessary to set up bookkeeping records, whether for business use or personal purposes.

Located at 101 Main Street, across from the railroad depot, Thomas Office Supply can supply all the items you need to put your records into proper order. They have adding machines to help you. The machines are simple to use because they do not have all the fancy gadgets that many of the newer models come with these days. It's just plain old adding, subtracting, multiplying and dividing.

Thomas Office Supply also has filing cabinets and storage cabinets. They are just right for keeping track of records you may need to save for next year's income tax purposes. They really come in handy.

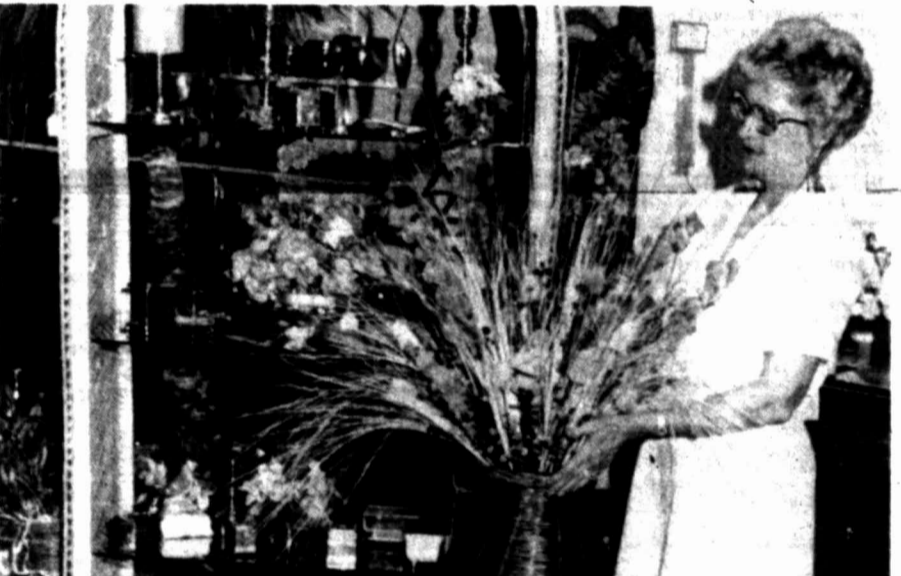

And if you need a used typewriter for your school aged children, Thomas Office Supply has used typewriters as well as new ones.

These make perfect gifts. Thomas Office Supply will also service what they sell.

They also carry desks, chairs, tables, bulletin boards and chalk boards.

Thomas Office Supply is owned by Lucille Thomas. She is assisted by Don and Jewell Anderson.

Stop by Thomas Office Supply today and ask Don or Jewell for any assistance you need. They have just about any office supply item you may want, even those hard to find items. Their telephone number is 267-6621 if you want to call for more information.

Budget cuts likely to take heavy toll on PBS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Let it not be said that David Stockman, Ronald Reagan's fiscal hit-man, goes about the task of severing federal projects from their money without humor. He is at least possessed of a sense of the absurd.

When Stockman, the president's fund-slashing budget chief, took his case before the television public last Friday, he chose as his forum "The MacNeil-Lehrer Report."

Yes, that "MacNeil-Lehrer Report" — the esteemed news show of the Public Broadcasting System. The news show that is partly funded by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. The same Corporation for Public Broadcasting whose budget would be cut, on Stockman's recommendation, by 25 percent, to the peril, some insist, of many public broadcasting programs.

The irony wasn't lost on public broadcasting officials and supporters, who interpreted Stockman's proposals as a statement that the government simply shouldn't fund broadcast programming, which "MacNeil-Lehrer," who gets money from private underwriters, could likely survive. Stockman's proposed cuts, many other programs more dependent on CPB funding couldn't.

"If Congress does what the Office of Management and Budget has asked and in the manner OMB prescribes," says Frank Mankiewicz, president of National Public Radio, "then it's very grim. There will be no National Public Radio."

"It's going to be a serious problem," says Lawrence Grossman, head of the Public Broadcasting System. Grossman says public broadcasting "is willing to do its part in the effort to trim spending, and he's confident that it will survive a funding cut. But there are two aspects of the Reagan administration plan that Grossman finds 'very disturbing'."
