Commission gives approval to ordinances

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners gave final approval to a 4.3 percent rate hike increase to Energas for domestic and commercial customers during their regular meeting this morning.

Commissioners approved the ordinance granting the compromise rate structure on second reading today.

Energas had originally requested a 7 percent increase for the West Texas City Plant System, but a steering committee for the cities reached the compromise figure after evaluation of Energas' request.

Commissioner David McDaniel at the Oct. 9 meeting had voiced some concerns with lack of information on how the rate was determined. But he said today he had talked with members of the steering committee and was satisfied the committee members "had done their homework."

The commission approved on first reading an ordinance annexing a tract of land between Harvester and Browning Streets south of the Pampa Country Club.

The annexation includes a 1.4 acre lot owned by the club. Club representatives had voiced objections to the inclusion of the lot, but the commission decided to keep it in the annexation.

Approved also on second reading was an ordinance changing the name of Washita Drive to 25th Street.

Commissioners approved on first reading an ordinance regarding preliminary subdivision plats. Acting City Manager Allyn Moore said the revisions gives more specific requirements to developers on indicating streets, alleys, sidewalks, blocks, easements and other items in their preliminary plats for developments.

Moore said the major changes in requirements would be the specifying of utility routes and drainage facilities.

Moore said the city is trying to develop new drainage systems for the city to help alleviate any drainage problems that might arise. He said the plat changes would help to improve design standards for drainage. "We're trying to get ahead of the game for once here," he said.

Commissioners awarded two bids. Larry Beck Electric of Pampa was awarded a bid of $16,240 for stage lighting controls at the M. K. Brown Auditorium to replace elements in the stage lighting panel system.

Wheeler Municipal Supply of Amarillo was awarded the bid for new water meters at a unit price of $23.90. Frank Smith, acting assistant city manager, said the meters would be paid for out of previously received revenue sharing funds. Moore said the city could purchase 644 new meters out of available funds.

Commissioners granted a variance request to Sawatzsky Concrete Building Co. for a driveway in Lot 2, Block 12 in the North Crest Addition for a doctor's building currently under construction. The variance will permit an opening of 80 to 85 feet for parking needs, allowing cars to leave the lot without having to back into the street.

The commission deferred action on a request for installation of two scoreboards at Hobart Street Park softball fields. Commissioners decided they wanted further information on the proposal.

Commissioners approved on first reading an ordinance providing for cycle billing and security deposits in the city's Water Department. Moore said the change clarifies a new policy on billing of customers and requires a security deposit of $50 for new customers and for delinquent customers needing reconnection.

In other action, the commission approved the filing of the final plat for Block 1 of the National Bank of Commerce Plaza Addition. Commissioners set Nov. 13 as the date for a public hearing on a request for a zoning change from Office District to Specific Use Permit to allow a clinical pharmacy to be included in a medical building in the North Crest Addition.

Commissioners approved the partial abandonment of easement and right of way for sewer lines in the Chaumont Addition. The lines had been changed to go along a street instead of across lots.

In other business, the commission authorized a payment of $6,000 to Johnson and Riemer for professional services on renovations at M. K. Brown Auditorium and approved accounts payable.

Commissioners accepted a written monthly report from Police Chief J. J. Ryzman on activities and performance in the Pampa Police Department. Among other things, the report noted the new city jail is near completion and attributed much of the decline in burglaries to the Neighborhood Watch program.

Grades up in area schools

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

If grades and attendance are the only ways to gauge a student's education, school reform bills passed earlier this year by the Texas Legislature may have done some good.

Many area high school report cards are showing higher grades than for the same grading period last year. There also seem to be more students on some school honor rolls than in the past.

Still, many area principals wonder how long this trend will last.

"My feeling is that this year, the students' grades are up," observed Pampa High School principal Paul Payne. "But there may be a difference in the classes. The students seem to be working harder this year."

Pampa High School journalism teacher Linda Queen, whose class tabulated top students for the first six weeks, reported that 63 students made straight As and 61 made Bs or better. She estimates that to be about 10 percent of the PHS student body. Last year's figures are not available.

"I think the trend is to harder subjects," Payne added. "Enrollment in foreign languages is up."

He has no figures on enrollment in advanced math or science classes.

While the state's education legislation may be helping student grades, it's hurting attendance at PHS. The school had to weaken its stiff attendance policy to comply with the new state law.

There are fewer students on this year's Groom High School honor roll, which lists students making above 90 on a 100 point scale. Every class at Groom High School except the seniors dropped in honor roll percentage from the same grading period last year.

High School principal Kenneth Sweatt attributes part of this decrease to students taking harder, more advanced classes. The new education bills require that each class have a listing of state-approved essential elements, or certain things that students must learn and master.

"This pretty well takes the inflation out of a student's grade," Sweatt said. "You get a truer picture of what the student is doing."

The make-up of each class is another factor, Sweatt added, hoping that the drop is a temporary one.

"I hope that the added emphasis on academics in the long run should pick the grades back up," he said. "It has the students' attention right now."

Canadian High School lists 16 straight-A students and 51 students making Bs or better for the first six weeks.

"I can't see any drastic change in the honor rolls," compared principal Charles Russell. "The grades are running about the same."

He added that students' class schedules don't really reflect the changes from H.B. 72 or H.B. 248.

"We have been encouraging the students to take the more advanced classes for several years," he said.

McLean High School principal Ron Cummings said he notices some students avoiding harder classes there.

"Some are avoiding the classes because of the difficulty and some because they're afraid they're not going to pass," he said, referring to the new state rule that students cannot take extra-curricular activities if they make lower than a 70 in a class. "But there's not a whole lot of them, just one or two kids."

Cummings reported that roughly one-third of the McLean High School Students are listed on the 80-and-above honor roll. He does not see much of a difference in the rolls over last year.

"I do see an improvement in attitude in some places and a deterioration in other areas," he said, attributing part of the low spirits to a state mandated de-emphasis on extra-curricular activities.

White Deer High School principal Jack Clemmons agrees that extra-curricular activities are still important to students' education.

"The students are still participating in extra-curricular activities here," Clemmons said, noting that the legislators who passed the academic-oriented H.B. 72 should have "considered the whole education of the student."

He also criticized many of the financing regulations in the bill.

Still, Clemmons reported more students making straight A's this year. For the first six weeks this year, 42 students made all A's, compared with 24 students last year at this time. Attendance is also up considerably, he reported.

Miami Principal Phil Barefield reports "a few more" students on the high school honor roll.

"The students are starting to take a more serious approach to school," he said, adding that because of the small curriculum there, he does not see many changes in the difficulty of students' classes. Attendance at Miami is also up to 97.8 percent.

Mobeetie superintendent Bob Mickie also sees a new attitude toward education.

"I think students are taking education more seriously. Parents are more concerned," he said.

Lefors Superintendent Jimmy Collins reported reported that seven percent of the students in grades 9-12 received one or more failing grades. Attendance is up to 97.7 percent.

"I feel that is outstanding," he said. "We feel like it (the legislation) is working."

"But it is hard to attribute all the accomplishment to H.B. 72," he added. "I think the students are responding real well."

Conspiracy found

Aquino killing trial ordered

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The chairwoman of the board investigating the Benigno Aquino assassination today concluded he was killed in a military conspiracy, and President Ferdinand E. Marcos said the suspects would be promptly tried in a special civil court.

The 121-page report, presented to Marcos by Corazon Agrava in a televised ceremony, did not implicate Marcos or his chief of staff, Gen. Fabian C. Ver, in the alleged conspiracy to kill the opposition leader. The other four board members are to expected to allege a broader conspiracy when they issue their separate report Wednesday.

Mrs. Agrava's report concludes that one of Aquino's military escorts at the Manila airport shot him in the back of the head, and names Aviation Security Command Chief Brig. Gen. Luther Custodio as "a plotter."

The Aug. 21, 1983, assassination, at first blamed by Marcos and the military on alleged Communist agent Rolando Galman, has been a rallying point for Aquino's family and opposition groups, who during a 14-month protest campaign have blamed the government and the armed forces.

Marcos, in a nationally telecast statement from the presidential palace, appealed to Filipinos to "allow the law to take its course" and said "national stability and unity" were at stake as the nation reacted to the report.

Marcos called for an immediate trial after receiving the report from Mrs. Agrava, chairwoman of the board he appointed a year ago to investigate the killing. The other four panel members are expected to implicate Ver when they issue their report.

Candidates say no more name-calling

By The Associated Press

U.S. Senate candidate Lloyd Doggett has accepted opponent Phil Gramm's challenge to halt public and on-camera criticism between the two that has escalated the frenzy of their campaigns, providing the two debate by Friday.

Doggett on Monday agreed with Gramm, who had made his appeal at a Houston news conference. Doggett, campaigning across West Texas, issued a statement through his office that he has ordered off the air all ads referring to Gramm.

Yet, spokesmen for both campaigns said late Monday that reportedly critical television advertisements were still being aired against each candidate.

The Democrat, in the prepared statement, said a face-to-face discussion is needed "because I feel my integrity, character and honor have been called into question and, of course, I'm sure Phil feels the same way."

Gramm, who had predicted Doggett would not agree to a moratorium on criticism during campaign appearances and commercials, will consider the debate proposal early today, said spokesman Larry Neal.

"We plan to have a meeting in the morning to assess Doggett's response to our proposal," Neal told The Associated Press, claiming that Doggett's promise to remove his ads has not been kept.

"At 10 p.m. I saw Doggett's latest ad on Channel 7, the CBS affiliate (KTBC), in Austin," Neal said. "I would suggest that almost immediately, Mr. Doggett has violated his own proposal.

"If he hasn't pulled them in his own hometown, it is unlikely that he has pulled them anywhere," Neal said.

'Grenade lady' heists sixth bank in 60 days

WASHINGTON (AP) — They call her "the lady in gray," and, more pointedly, "the grenade lady," and she's done it again — single-handedly holding up her sixth bank in 60 days by threatening to blow up tellers with a hand grenade.

"We're starting to take it personally," police officer Connie Curran said Monday after the bank robber made a successful raid on the First American Bank in Springfield, Va., using the same method as in five previous holdups in the Washington suburbs since Aug. 23.

In every case, the slim, young woman strolled into the bank wearing sunglasses, a baggy gray sweater and a sylish gray beret. Over her right shoulder she carried a tote bag. In her left hand she held a brown sock with a toe that bulged with a lemon-shaped object.

She handed notes to tellers listing the denominations of the bills she wanted, singled out which drawer she wanted the cash taken from and demanded the note back. Police say she's used the same note in every robbery.

She spent between two and five minutes in the banks and left without hurrying, police said.

Fairfax County Police spokesman Warren Carmichael said, "It's unusual to have robberies committed by females; very unusual to have financial institutions robbed by females and it's even more unusual to have bank robberies by women carrying hand grenades."

The holdups have come in pairs, on Aug. 23 and Aug. 27 in the Fairfax County town of Annandale; Sept. 24 in Annandale and Sept. 26 in Wheaton, Md., another Washington suburb.

Before Monday's robbery in Springfield, there was an unsuccessful attempt last Thursday in Baileys Crossroads, Va. That job was foiled when a teller told the woman there was no money in the specified drawer.

The woman insisted, police said, but when the teller opened the drawer to show the woman it was empty, the robber left empty-handed. In none of the bank jobs were tellers able to pass money laced with exploding dye packs that can mark an escaping robber.

Carmichael wouldn't speculate on the possibility she knew that drawers contained exploding dye packs.

Carmichael said additional resources are being thrown into the effort to capture the woman, who also has been dubbed, "the lady in gray." He did not give details on the extra efforts.

Nor would he reveal how much money was taken in the robberies, except to say it was a "substantial amount."

He said officers were taking "very seriously" the possibility that there is a hand grenade in the sock, because "there's nothing to indicate that there isn't."

OPEC ministers tentatively agree to cut production

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Key OPEC oil ministers said today they have agreed to cut production to shore up their $29-per-barrel benchmark price in the face of price cuts by three countries.

The proposed reductions still require approval at next week's meeting in Geneva of all 13 OPEC members. Sources at today's meeting, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the cuts would require unanimous approval to take effect.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia, the 13-member cartel's biggest producer at 4 million to 5 million barrels a day, said the reductions would be "just enough to bring the oil price up to the official price." He refused to elaborate, saying only that all members of the Organization of Patroleum Exporting Countries would be involved.

"It will be substantial, it is an economical thing," he said when asked what the Saudi role would be.

Kuwaiti Oil Minister Sheik Ali Khalifa al-Sabah said as the two-day meeting of six OPEC oil ministers and Mexico and Egypt closed that the proposed production cuts would be presented at next week's emergency meeting of the cartel's 13 members.

Sheik Ali declined to identify the range of the proposed production cuts, but other ministers said Monday that Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Libya may need to cut output by 20 percent each to counter price cuts by non-OPEC countries Norway and Britain and OPEC member Nigeria last week.

An unidentified high-ranking official was quoted by the Emirates news agency in Bahrain as saying the ministers were considering a 3 million barrel "temporary" cut in daily OPEC output through the rest of October and November, with Saudi Arabia bearing the "lion's share."

The agency said the move would "absorb the quantities industralized states and international companies expected to dump on the market as part of their diehard attempts to bring about collapse of the petroleum prices."

The oil ministers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, United Arab Emirates, Algeria, Libya and Venezuela were thought to represent the nations most able to handle the production cutbacks, oil industry analysts said.

Of the remaining OPEC members, Nigeria is thought to want increased production to help pay its debts, while Indonesia and Qatar are reportedly already exceeding their quotas, Ecuador and Gabon are minor producers and Iran and Iraq need all their production to finance their war.

Yamani told reporters Monday "there will be no price change" from the $29 benchmark set 19 months ago, when OPEC cut prices for the first time in its 24-year history and fixed the current 17.5 million barrel output level.

OPEC had hiked prices from $2.75 to $34 a barrel during the 10 years preceding the March 1983 price cut, but has faced growing pressure from the non-OPEC producers such as Britain and Norway, as well as conservation efforts that have cut relative oil consumption.

Cholera decision reversed

HOUSTON (AP) — State and city health officials are squabbling over whether symptoms discovered in a man who ate raw oysters in a Houston restaurant last week should actually be called cholera.

In a statement issued Monday, the Texas Department of Health said state officials and the Center for Disease "have determined that the organism isolated from a Houston resident with diarrhea is not that which causes true cholera (group 01)."

Last Wednesday, city health officials "confirmed" that a 22-year-old man who ate oysters at a Houston restaurant had developed cholera, an infection of the intestinal tract whose symptoms include fever, vomiting, cramps and diahrrea. Officials also reported suspected cases of cholera. All three of the sick were said to have eaten oysters from Louisiana's American Bay.

Health officials say the oysters may have been contaminated during handling and not before they were harvested from the bay.

Pair of adult classes slated

Enrollment for adult education classes offered by the Pampa school district will be at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Lamar School, 1234 S. Nelson.

The class is designed for people who want to study for and receive a GED or learn to speak and read English.

The books and instruction in the classes will be provided at no cost to the participants.

One class will study information needed to pass the General Educational Development (GED or high school equivalency) test. People in the class will take the GED test at the end of the program.

The other class will study the English language. The class is designed to teach people to speak and read English. The English as a Second Language (ESL) Class is often a stepping stone to the other class working on a GED, said administrator John English.

The state - funded classes will meet from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday from now through the end of the school year.

Instructors for the adult education classes include Bill Bradsher, Cara Stone and Raquel Navarette.

Environmentalists urging pesticide rules enforcement

AUSTIN (AP) — Enforcement of the Texas Department of Agriculture pesticide rules is the key to their success, to environmental and farm worker groups say.

Three separate news conferences were held Monday to praise the department for the standards announced last Friday but numerous speakers said the rules won't work without strict enforcment.

"In our eyes, they (the new pesticide standards) represent a significant first step forward in the creation of a system to protect Texans from pesticide hazards," said Tani Adams, director of the Texas Center for Rural Studies, at a Capitol news conference.

At another news conference in Weslaco, Jesus Moya, speaking for the International Union of Agricultural and Industrial Workers, said the new regulations "are meaningless without enforcement" and called on the Legislature to fund additional TDA inspectors. He said there are only 17 TDA inspectors now to serve the state, with only two of them in the Rio Grande Valley where pesticides are widely used.

Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston, chairman-elect of House Mexican-American Caucus of 30 members, congratulated the TDA at a third news conference for having the "tenacity and courage to tackle a problem of this sensitive nature."

"The Mexican-American Caucus will oppose any attempt during the next legislative session to weaken the Department of Agriculture's authority to deal with a problem like this that affects all the people of Texas," Luna said.

Rep. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, nominee for the state Senate and current chairman of the caucus, supported Luna saying, "I came from the migrant workers trail and I remember well the junk they put out for us to work in."

Ken Kramer, representing the Sierra Club, praised the TDA for have the "guts" to develop the pesticide standards in the face of what he called "unwarranted and intense overaction from some chemical and farming interests."

The pesticide standards announced last Friday by Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower would require farmers to notify immediate neighbors before spraying fields from the air. The regulations also set up methods for warning workers and others that a field has been sprayed.

Ms. Tani said her organization would continue to urge the TDA that some kind of notice be placed in fields to informe workers and others of what type spray was used. She also urged TDA to expand its posting requirements to keep workers out of "hot" fields.

Doctor: baby near death while under nurse's care

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — It was no accident 4-week-old Rolando Santos was getting overdoses of a blood-thinner while he was a patient at Medical Center Hospital, a doctor in the child injury trial of former nurse Genene Jones has testified.

Dr. Kenneth Copeland, an associate professor of pediatrics at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio, testified Monday that he took steps to avoid overdoses of the patient.

The doctor, who was an attending physician for the baby in 1982, said he ordered the removal of an arterial line from the child Jan. 8.

Heparin, a blood-thinner, was routinely used to keep such arterial lines from scabbing over.

The next day, Copeland testified, the Santos child started bleeding profusely and nearly died. The doctor said he treated the baby with a heparin antidote, and the bleeding stopped.

Ms. Jones, 34, is accused of giving the baby, who was hospitalized for pneumonia, an overdose of heparin.

She already has been convicted of murdering a 15-month-old girl with an injection of a muscle relaxant and is serving a 99-year prison term.

Copeland said he became convinced before the alleged overdose Jan. 9 that the baby was getting too much heparin.

"I became convinced in my mind that he had received more than a small dose and not accidentally," he said.

Copeland said Ms. Jones summoned him to the Santos child's room the evening of Jan. 9.

"The baby was ashen. He was bleeding from multiple sites — out of puncture wounds, his scalp, neck, hands, from his nose, eyes, inside his mouth," the doctor said.

"I felt like he would have a cardiac arrest and die very shortly. His condition was extremely critical," Copeland said.

The doctor said he administered massive doses of protamine sulfate, an antidote to heparin.

After administering more than 200 milligrams of the drug, Copeland said "the baby suddenly, instantly stopped bleeding."

The child was "much better by the next morning," Copeland said, and he eventually recovered fully.

After the incident, the doctor said, "I wanted him out of pediatric ICU. We couldn't believe this was really going on."

Two days later, the baby was moved out of the unit to the general pediatric floor.

"I arranged for special nurses to watch Rolando," Copeland said, adding he ordered a list be made of everyone who went into the child's room.

Cleanup is underway from twisters in Houston area

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — Repairs were just finished on damage caused last year by Hurricane Alicia at the Benchmark Apartments when a wave of tornadoes tore through this community just southeast of Houston.

"We had about 10 families that we had to transfer," said Assistant Manager Debbie Gibson. "Other than that, some have the roof leaking or windows out."

Manger Wanda Petty said, "I feel sick. It hit the same buildings that Alicia hit."

But no injuries were reported as a result of Monday's tornadoes, which ripped of roofs at the 498-unit complex, shattered windows and buried cars in rubble.

One resident, Ron Barker, described the storm as "like the bottom of the cloud fell out."

About 15,000 customers of Houston Lighting & Power Co. lost their electrical power, but it was restored by early evening Monday, spokesman Graham Painter said.

"We think they're all on," Painter said of the customers whose power had been cut.

Police agencies in the area said as many as five tornadoes hit, but the Pasadena Civil Defense coordinator said her agency believed the storms were merely tornado-like winds.

"There were four reported sightings," said Elizabeth Gonzalez, deputy civil defense coordinator. "The damage reports indicate a tornado-like action but there's no swath of damage that would go along with that."

Besides the wind damage, Ms. Gonzalez said an accompanying hailstorm also broke windows in the community.

"But all in all, it's fairly minor damage," she said.

No one was housed in shelters and all people displaced by the storm had found housing elsewhere, she said.

"The cleanup, of course, is ongoing. The debris is primarly foliage," she said.

Other "severe damage" was reported at the Almeda Mall, a shopping center along Interstate 45 between Houston and Pasadena, authorities said.

Meanwhile, in Brazoria County, some 8 inches of rain were reported by early Monday, closing several roads and leaving some low-lying homes flooded.

The lingering storms earlier had dumped heavy rains on South Texas, forcing some 600 residents from their homes in Odem and Sinton over the weekend.

E.H. Green of Odom said he recorded 18.5 inches of rain in five hours at his home on Friday.

The flooding prompted the Texas National Guard to be called in to assist in the evacuations. Guardsmen, however, were sent back home on Sunday.

Prep stars of the future

Ah, it's high school sport season again and the prep stars of the gridiron, court, track and field are already making names for themselves.

But, with Governor White pushing academics over athletics, I wonder who the prep stars of the future will be.

Come with me to a high school reunion: the 1999 Homecoming at H. Ross Perot High School. Let's listen as the alums reflect on their high school glories.

There, under the statue of school mascot Bubba Bookworm is the legendary Joan Avark, who nabbed the highest scores in Medieval History only days after she lost her notes on the Bubonic Plague. Beside a gaily decorated telescope, pert Mary Lou Resnick is telling Sparky Sagan how she copped that perfect "100" on her thesis on the Big Bang Theory.

And there is a heated debate going on in the lab between Martina Mead and B.F. "Skinner" McEnroe, who has just signed a multi-million dollar contract to endorse Nike petri dishes.

"Aw come on, we guys are a zillion times better at dissecting worms than you girls," McEnroe claimed. "We're an entirely different class."

"Oh yeah," Mead snapped. "Well at least our attitude is better. The way you hurled the microscope slides during your little temper tantrums in microbiology is a disgrace to the craft."

The school's top female mathemetician, Elizabeth Cady Decker, has another story.

"It was the finals, the very finals, mind you, of the Algebra II pop quiz," she recalls. "The teacher asked us to prove that the square root of X equals 48 to the power of Q. And I raised my hand with this terrific answer. But some underclassman blurted it out before I could speak. It was ghastly, just ghastly. I still hold her responsible for me failing that class."

"Yes, but once you got your cosines and tangents back in shape, you rallied in Trig and Calculus and nobody's been able to touch you since," Avark said.

"Best figures in class," someone leered.

But most of the attention was focused on Perot High's Outstanding Alum, Boswell Staubach, who is now featured commentator on ABC's Monday Night Elocution. He's still talking about the time he tackled biographies of six English playwrights in succession and the way he recited the epic of Beowulf in it's original Old English form.

Just then, a muscular fellow came forward from the back of the library, where the Homecoming Dance was held.

"You're all so proud of yourselves arent you," he chastised the gloating graduates. "Well, I say that all this big-time academics is nothing but a bunch of hype. Everyone's out for the big books. And where does it get you?"

"What about America's superior showing at the International Science Fair in Athens back in '88," Decker challenged.

"Oh, sure we did good there," the man said. "But were loosing our competitive edge in the arenas where it counts."

"Remember when the philosphers and physicists went on strike for better lighting conditions last year," he asked. "What do you think that does to the hundreds of kids who idolize them and have their pictures on their walls. Drug abuse is rampant. There's just too much emphasis on the almighty grade. We need to get back to the values that made this country what it is."

And with that, the fellow hobbled alone out the door.

"Who was that," cooed Mary Lou.

Staubach looked at the lonely figure with pity.

"Him? Oh, he was just the team quarterback."

Suit claims unemployment laws discriminatory

SAN JUAN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Civil Liberties Union and the United Farm Workers, claiming Texas unemployment laws are unconstitutional, have filed a class-action suit against the Texas Employment Commission.

The suit, filed in Austin Monday, asks State District Judge Harley Clark to issue a declaratory judgment. Clark is to consider an injunction againt a disputed provision of the unemployment compensation act at a hearing Wednesday.

Jim Harrington, legal director of the civil liberties union, said a special section of the unemployment compensation law denies agricultural workers the same benefits that most other Texas employees receive.

But he said that the suit is not an attempt to get the small farmer.

"We are not attacking that part of the law that excludes employers who have only a few casual or seasonal employees or have a minimal payroll," Harrington told a news conference in San Juan. "These folks would not have to provide unemployment ... even if our suit is successful."

TEC spokesman William Grossenbacher in Austin said he had not seen a copy of the lawsuit and could not respond.

Sister Maureen Leach of the United Farmworkers Ministry said the suit is aimed at placing farm workers "on an equal footing with other Texas workers."

"Farm workers are traditionally at the bottom of the pay scale and are the last to receive benefits other workers enjoy," she said. "The suit claims (that) exclusion of farm workers from the state unemployment law discriminates against a group of workers which is 90 percent Hispanic and identifiable as such," she told the news conference.

She said that farm workers have been excluded from equal protection under the National Labor Relations Act, the state and federal minimum wage laws, the overtime law, the Social Security Act, child labor laws and occupational safety and health laws.

State Rep. Juan Hinojosa, one of the attorneys representing the farm workers, said the suit is "aimed at forcing large growers and cooperative farms" to pay unemployment benefits for their workers.

Hinojosa said he also will sponsor legislation next January to extend unemployment benefits to farm laborers. State Sen. Hector Uribe of Brownsville will sponsor the bill in the senate.

Four previous attempts to pass similar legislation have failed, Hinojosa said.

He said he hoped Clark would view the denial of unemployment benefits to farm workers as he viewed their exclusion from workmans compensation insurance earlier this year.

Last March, Clark ruled unconstitutional the Texas workman's compensation law that excluded farm workers.

"When Clark made the ruling, any grower could get sued for not having workman's comp," said Sister Leach. "So after years of trying to get farm workers included, legislation was finally passed during the special session which gives coverage to workers."

She said last winter's freeze which destroyed crops and caused massive unemployment in far South Texas focused attention on the need to get jobless benefits for workers.

In Austin, Rebecca Harrington of the United Farmworker's of America AFL-CIO, said the law as it exists is discriminatory.

Nuclear power plant named most troubled nuclear facility in nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Comanche Peak nuclear power plant has become the most troubled nuclear facility facing the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, eclipsing Diablo Canyon and Shoreham in Long Island, an agency official said.

"I'd single this plant out as the one I'm least certain about whether it's going to come out" in the licensing process, said Harold Denton, the NRC's director of nuclear reactor regulation, in an interview with the Dallas Morning News.

His remarks came in a meeting Monday of the five NRC commissioners to review the status of 15 nuclear power plants that were expected to receive licenses this year.

Construction of the first of Comanche Peak's two nuclear units, near Glen Rose, about 70 miles southwest of Fort Worth, is expected to be completed by the end of this month.

Texas Utilities Co. had tried to win NRC approval to load radioactive fuel into the plant this month, but on Oct. 8, it moved the target date to January, citing the amount of work still before the NRC.

"I don't think a licensing decision by January is likely at all," said Guy Cunningham, the NRC's executive legal director, warned the commissioners Monday.

NRC officials accepted blame Monday for some of the delays at Comanche Peak.

"We found we were unable to identify the problems at this plant upfront," said William Dircks, the NRC's executive director. "The regional office was overburdened. Each time we looked, there were more issues. We just didn't know what the problems were."

The NRC is trying to unravel some 528 allegations at Comanche Peak by former and current employees concerning construction mistakesm inadequate training and design.

The agency is checking into charges of wrongdoing by Texas Utilities and Brown & Root, Inc., the builder of the plant.

The Diablo Canyon in California became the nation's first nuclear station in the country to have its license revoked in 1981 by the NRC. After a'$euot to rectify design errors related to earthquake protection, the agency granted a full-power operating license on Aug. 10.

A legal challenge, however, has prevented the plant from opening.

The Shoreham project was stymied because local governments refused to cooperate in emergency evacuation planning.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

A blow against religion, press

A California state Court of Appeals decision that forces a publication called the Christian Yellow Pages to accept advertising from a Jewish businessman is an ominous blow against both freedom of religion and freedom of the press. It is also an example of the confusion into which people can fall when they don't understand that economic freedom and rights of private ownership are closely intertwined with the freedoms enshirned in the Bill of Rights—freedoms most courts still make a halfhearted effort to protect.

At issue is the right of the Christian Yellow Pages to remain that which it set out to be — an advertising medium for professing Christians directed at those who prefer to do business with professional Christians.

The fact that somebody professes any religion is of differeing importance to different people. Putting out a directory consisting of businesspeople of any particular faith is not necessarily a denigration of other faiths—just a way of getting information to potentital consumers, who can weigh that information according to their own values and needs.

A lower court, however, not only ruled that refusing an ad from a non-Christian businessman was discriminatory, but also barred the publication from printing its "Concept" column, a compendium of letters and opinion. The appeal court did uphold that exercise of freedom of the press, but ruled that the publication could be forced to accept an ad it didn't want to accept. That decision is one that strikes deep into the heart of freedom of the press and freedom of religion.

One may also look at the issue from the standpoint of economic liberty. Christian Yellow Pages is a private business that forces nobody to buy its publication or buy an ad. Private publications of all kinds reserve the right to reject advertising for essentially arbirtary reasons of taste of judgment. Indeed, many believe newspapers should exercise this right more vigorously with respect to ads for "dirty" movies. The fact that different people may differ as to how this judgment should be exercised does not obviate the fact that the decision properly rests with those who own the publication in question.

The court has chosen to dictate to Christian Yellow Pages on an economic question—whether to forgo revenue in favor of other values. In the process, it has also infringed on the owners' freedom of the press and freedom of religion. When you restrict one kind of freedom, you usually restrict some other kind for freedom is indivisible.

Reaganomics vintage JFK

On September 26, Geraldine Ferraro told a rain-soaked crowd of 6,000 in Boston's City Hall Plaza, "I resent it when Ronald Reagan lays claim to the memory of President Kennedy and pretends he has anything in common with that good man."

Well, anyone with an ounce of knowledge of history and facts knows there's a lot more in common between the policies of Ronald Reagan and John F. Kennedy than between JFK and the Mondale-Ferraro agenda. That's why so many Democrats are deserting that ticket for Reagan. The very day Ferraro made her slashing attack, the New York Times' usually liberal economic columnist Leonard Silk reported on "An American Renaissance" as seen by those attending the International Monetary Fund annual meeting in Washington.

"There is no question," he wrote, "that the finance ministers, central bankers, and private bankers assembled here this week have been deeply impressed by the American economic performance.

"The Reagan adminstration has given a strong tug to the efforts of other countries to achieve growth by following the Reagan model of curbing government spending and cutting taxes."

Yet, that "Reagan model" was lifted, lock, stock, and latch key from the 1962 - 63 "JFK model," which featured a nearly identical prescription for healing the stagnation of the Eisenhower years, across - the - board tax cuts to stimulate productivity and investment, relatively tight money to restrain inflation, and a powerful investment in the world's then pre - eminent defense capability.

In 1963 - 1965, the Kennedy - Johnson administration carried out a 23 - percent, across - the - board personal income tax cut, coupled with elaborate new investment tax credits for industry. In 1964 federal revenues took 18.1 percent of GNP

In 1982 - 84, the Reagan administration did the same with approximately the same levels of reduction for both individuals and business. In 1984, federal revenues took 18.8 percent of GNP; Carter - Mondale had driven them up to 21 percent in 1981.

In 1962 - 64, the Kennedy administration increased real defense spending 5 percent per year. In 1982 - 84, the Reagan administration increased defense by an average of 8 percent.

In 1964, real GNP grew 5.3 percent, in 1984 it went to 6.2 percent. In 1964 inflation was 1.2 percent. In 1984 it has been running about 4 percent - down from Mondale's 12.4 percent.

Most important, the whole rationale for the JFK economic program reads like a preview of Reaganomics. In December 1962 Kennedy told the New York Economic Club: "Our true choice is not between tax reduction...and the avoidance of large federal deficits...So long as our national security needs keep rising, an economy hampered by restrictive tax rates (emphasis ours) will never produce enough revenue to balance the budget - just as it will never produce enough jobs or profits."

Kennedy warned against "stimulating" the economy "by increasing federal expenditures more rapidly than necessary," because "such a course would soon demoralize both the government and the economy." Sounds like Reagan to me.

He said, "The best means to strengthen demand among consumers and business is to reduce the tax burden on private income, and the deterrents to private initiative which are imposed by our present tax system..."

"A rising tide lifts all boats," JFK once said, Reaganomically. In 1984, the supposedly "extremist" Republican party platform said: "Economic growth enables all citizens to share in the nation's great wealth...Our most important economic goal is to...move the nation to full employment without inflation. We therefore oppose any attempts to increase taxes, which would harm the recovery...We favor reducing deficits by continuing and expanding the strong economic recovery."

As President Reagan told the IMF conference, "Born in the safe harbor of freedom, economic growth has gathered force and rolled out in a rising tide that has reached distant shores."

Leonard Silk commented, "Reagan's rhetoric wowed the audience." It should have. Like Reaganomics, it was vintage JFK.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 23, the 297th day of 1984. There are 69 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

One year ago, on Oct. 23, 1983, 239 U.S. Marines and sailors stationed in Lebanon were killed when a suicide terrorist crashed a truck-bomb into the U.S. compound at Beirut International Airport. Almost simultaneously, a similar attack on French peacekeepers claimed the lives of 58 paratroopers.

On this date:

Five years ago: The Shah of Iran, said to be suffering from cancer, underwent tests in a New York City hospital. The shah had arrived the day before, after living in exile in Mexico since June.

Today's birthdays: "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson is 59. Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., is 46. Soccer great Pele is 44. Author-movie director Michael Crichton is 42.

Thought for today: "When you're young, the silliest notions seem like the greatest achievements." — Pearl Bailey, entertainer.

Is it Michael or Diana?

They held a Michael Jackson press conference the other day. I went. I thought Michael would be there, and I wanted to see him up close and personal.

The only people who showed up besides the press, however, were some fat - cat politicians who announced the Jackson tour will play Atlanta and Atlanta Stadium Oct. 26 and 27. Tickets will cost 30 bucks a pop.

I wanted to see Michael Jackson in the flesh because of a discussion in which I was involved recently concerning exactly who Michael Jackson looks like.

"Johnny Mathis in 1962," somebody suggested. "Lena Horne when she was 15," said somebody else.

Althouth there was no real Michael Jackson at the press conference, I did manage to get my hands on a large brochure that probably sells for ten bucks at concerts and it featured many colorful close - ups of the young entertainer.

Michael Jackson looks like Diana Ross, that's who he looks like. They may even wear the same brand of eye shadow.

At the press conference, I also learned more about the Jackson tour that has been sweeping the country than I really wanted to know.

Some amazing facts about the Jackson tour:

One show takes the combined efforts of 1,500 individuals, 20 or so to sing and dance and play and the rest to count the money.

The tour's stage is over seven stores tall. It is 140 feet wide and 90 feet deep. When the Jackson's don't need it, Boise, Idaho, uses it for an airport.

To provide power for the performance, the Jacksons travel with two large generators which together produce 18,000 amps, which is enough electricity to light up a small city, such as Boise, Idaho.

Boise, Idaho, is one place the Jackson tour will never play. Fond du Lac, Wisc., is another.

The show employs seven computers, one to run the show's lasers, another to run two robotic creatures that perform, two for the sound system and one for the lighting trusses. More than 375 tons of equipment are needed for one Jackson performance.

Several members of the equipment crew currently are wearing trusses themselves after suffering hernias from having to haul all that heavy hardware around the country.

One of the politicians at the press conference said negotiations with the Jacksons were based on making it possible for anybody in town who wants to see the show to be able to do so.

I did some figuring. Let's say you want to take your family to see and hear Michael Jackson. There's you and your wife and your two kids, both of whom are going around the house these days wearing one glove. You think they probably are going to grow up and join a religious cult, but what can you do?

You buy four tickets. That's $120. You pay to park, you buy something to eat at the stadium, the kids whine about wanting a souvenir or two, and you wind up shelling out nearly 200 big ones on the evening.

But don't despair. While you're enjoying the show, you can also sit there in your seat and wonder what the poor people are doing.

Public thinks country okay

In American presidential elections, the decisive factor is the state of the nation. If things are bad, the electorate insists on a change in national leadership. If things are going well, the incumbent usually is safe.

There's no reason to believe that this isn't the controlling factor this year. Then, the key question is "What is the state of the nation?"

Is the United Sates in terrible shape? It is hard to persuade the U.S. public that this is the case. The country is at peace. The nation's defenses are in better shape than they have been since the early days of the Vietnam war. The country has recovered from the recession. Unemployment is lower than it was four years ago. Inflation is under control.

To be sure, the nation's situation isn't perfect; it never is. U.S. relations with the Soviets are tense, but they have been that way since the end of World War II when the USSR turned ancient European countries into captive nations. Defense programs are expensive, but the price of liberty always comes high. The recovery is not uniform, but it is rare in American history when all regions enjoy uniform prosperity. Interest rates are high, but not nearly as high as five years ago. Many industries have suffered from unfair foreign trade offensives, but the country is beginning to move towards a more realistic trade policy.

All things considered, the United States is in good shape. Its situation is vastly superior to that of the industrial nations across the Atlantic, which have staggering economic problems, including massive unemployment.

Those who favor a change in national leadership have to take responsibility for their views in the past four years. They opposed stronger defenses, tax cuts, elimination of welfare state abuses, and a focus on productive citizens. If their advice had been followed, the taxpayers would have been compelled to pay for a huge expansion of welfare programs. Vital defense programs would have been eliminated, and the nation's security would be in peril. The tax burden on productive citizens would be much higher. Americans would continue to suffer from high inflation.

The voters may not know all the intricacies of economic policy, but they surely know that they are better off than they were four years ago. They also surely know that there is a new mood in the land, a mood of confidence and belief in the rightness of the United States - a belief systematically eroded over a period of four years by radicals who are hostile to the American system. It is interesting that the radical movement, while it hasn't gone away, is at low ebb in terms of influence. Students on college campuses want to learn and qualify themselves for productive work, not protest and riot.

The United States faces many problems in the future - problems which range from national security to sustained economic expansion. But the American people are much better equipped now to meet the challenges ahead. They have developed a degree of optimism that is essential if difficulties are to be overcome. They aren't likely to support a return to the failed liberalism of yesteryear.

Bits of history

In 1864, forces led by Union Gen. Samuel R. Curtis defeated Confederate Gen. Stirling Price's army in Missouri.

In 1910, Blanche S. Scott became the first woman to make a solo airplane flight in public, reaching an altitude of 12 feet as she sailed across a park in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Families recall sons lost in bombing

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — One father fights his grief with hope for peace while another expresses bitterness at talk of responsibility a year after a suicide bomber crashed into the Marine compound in Beirut, killing 241 U.S. servicemen.

Meanwhile, a Lebanese war bride widowed by the terror attack is fighting to stay in this country, fearing for her fate if she is forced to return to her homeland.

"We just kind of hope some good will come out of this, hope that it was not in vain, hope that somehow Lebanon will settle down and live in peace and harmony," said the Rev. David A. Stowe, whose son was killed in the Oct. 23, 1983, bombing.

A dogwood tree was planted Sunday at a senior citizens' housing complex that Stowe has been involved with to mark the anniversary of the death of Cpl. James D. Stowe.

Cpl. Stowe was 20 when he died. He never saw his daughter, who was 4 months old a year ago.

"He is constantly in our mind, especially this week," said Stowe, of Somerville.

"Sometimes the grief and sorrow can almost take control of your life," he said. "It's not a good way to live."

James Langon III of Lakehurst lost his son, Lance Cpl. James IV, in the bombing and planned to spend today remembering his child.

"Last year everything was so public and I understand the reasons for this," said Langon. "I want to just be with myself in a very private way."

But he said not enough public attention has been paid to the aftermath of the bombing.

"President Reagan took responsiblity ... but I don't know what it means," said Langon. Asked what he would like done, he said, "I'd like to see Walter Mondale elected."

The fates of many of the servicemen were not known for days after the bombing. Throughout the nation families waited, hoping they would not see the military captain and chaplain at their door, bringing tragic news.

They scanned news reports from Beirut, watched television and stood by for overseas telephone calls.

Cpl. Joseph Martucci Jr., 21, called his mother, Connie, several days after the bombing to say he had been rescued from the rubble.

He came home to the family's Forked River home in March, his brother Gerard said. Now, "he tries not to talk about it."

On the anniversary of her husband's death, Mishleen Earle waited, as she has for a year, for the act of Congress that would make her a U.S. citizen.

Twenty-one-year-old Bryan L. Earle, a Navy medical corpsman from Painesville, Ohio, died six days after his wedding. Mrs. Earle, now 18, accompanied the casket home and lives in Ohio on a visitor's visa.

"He wanted to get me out of Lebanon because he was worried for my safety," said Mrs. Earle, a Lebanese Christian. "It was his wish that I live here."

The legislation that would make her a citizen never reached the House floor last session. If it fails again next year, Mrs. Earle would have to return to Lebanon until it passes, said Donald H. Russell, director of the Cleveland office of Immigration and Naturalization.

Layoffs, losses mounting at General Motors

DETROIT (AP) — The strike against General Motors Corp. by the auto giant's Canadian workers could cost the company $285 million by early November and push the number of layoffs in the United States past the 17,470 mark, officials say.

The 36,000 workers at General Motors Canada Ltd. walked out Wednesday rather than accept labor contract terms similar to those ratified by their U.S. counterparts. Thirteen plants, including three assembly operations, closed.

The layoffs of 17,470 U.S. autoworkers were announced Monday, although more than 13,000 workers knew by the end of last week that they wouldn't be working.

In Ypsilanti, 1,900 workers at GM's Willow Run assembly plant got the word early. Another 2,300 showed up only to be sent home when supplies ran out.

"They just didn't have the parts and were sent home before the shift ended," said GM spokesman John Mueller. "Obviously, there will be more like this. It's hard to say one day to the next where the next ones will come."

GM will have lost $30 million to $35 million by tonight because of the Canadian strike, said Gary Glaser, auto industry analyst with Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. Inc. in New York. He said the walkout could cost the automaker $80 million to $90 million next week and $150 million to $160 million the week after, for a three-week total of up to $285 million.

At the giant Buick works in Flint, spokesman William Schiffel said GM was trying to squeeze out another few days of big-car production before closing the assembly lines.

"We're OK on the Regal through Friday," Schiffel said. "We've got the LeSabre through Thursday." Those operations also turn out the Chevrolet Caprice-Impala and the Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme.

The U.S. auto industry's adoption of kanban, the Japanese method of just-in-time delivery of parts to the factory floor, has quickened the impact of the strike at GM.

The General Motors contract in the United States, covering 350,000 workers, was weighted toward job security. The Canadian UAW leaders want more wages and a return to guaranteed annual raises, which the U.S. contract doesn't contain.

"We're really waiting for GM to make some kind of a move," Robert White, the head of the UAW in Canada, said in Toronto. "We're a little discouraged, but responsibility demands that we stay at it."

Paulette Charbonneau, spokeswoman for GM and chief negotiator Rod Andrew, said there was "no indication of progress. Progress is really slow."

Also on the economic scene:

A panel of financial executives predicts the U.S. economy will enjoy continued moderate expansion through 1986 without a new bout of high inflation, a goal that has eluded the nation since the early 1960s.

The Conference Board surveyed 41 executives, who said they expected inflation-adjusted economic growth of 3.5 percent in 1985 and a fourth year of expansion in 1986, with real growth of 2.7 percent.

The Conference Board, a business-sponsored research organization, said Monday that its panelists also estimated that prices would rise 4.8 percent in 1985 and 5.3 percent in 1986.

If the panelists are right, the economy "will achieve a soft landing with only a moderate rise in inflation — a goal that has eluded the United States since the early 1960s," said Vincent G. Massaro, the board's senior economist.

Meantime, the head of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. says changes are needed in the nation's bank deposit insurance system to stop encouraging "excessive risk-taking" by certain financial institutions.

The current system "is grossly unfair to smaller banks and well-run banks and poses a substantial threat to our free enterprise system of banking," FDIC Chairman William D. Isaac told the annual convention of the American Bankers Association in New York.

The FDIC, which is financed by premiums paid by banks, currently has a $16 billion fund backing up deposits in about 14,800 banks. The premiums are now assessed on a flat-rate basis, but Isaac said he supports recommendations that risky institutions pay higher premiums.

In other developments Monday:

—Yields on short-term Treasury securities fell for the seventh straight week, dropping rates to their lowest levels in seven months. The Treasury sold $13.2 billion in new securities — half in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 9.54 percent and half in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 9.57 percent.

—American home buyers borrowed an all-time record $205.2 billion in 1983, more than twice as much as the year before, according to the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

—A.H. Robins Co., which has already paid out $245 million in settlements in Dalkon Shield cases, has asked a federal court to dispose of the thousands of remaining cases involving the contraceptive device in a single trial. The company still faces about 3,768 lawsuits and claims in 34 states, the District of Columbia and Guam.

PROTECT THE KIDS—Education Secretary T. H. Bell and crime-fighting dog McGruff pose together Monday in Washington at a news conference aimed at a new program sponsored jointly by the Education Department and others to help prevent crimes against young school children. (AP Laserphoto)

CIA concedes all copies of Nicaragua rebels manual advised 'neutralization'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA has told Congress that all copies of its manual for Nicaraguan rebels contained advice about "neutralization" of government officials. The admission came one day after President Reagan asserted that pages dealing with assassination were excised.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who attended a three-hour CIA briefing of the Senate Intelligence Committee on Monday, said that while some deletions were made in the 90-page manual, the "term 'neutralization' was in all the documents."

Nunn said the word "neutralize" is subject to various interpretations, but added that when read in context, "it could lead one to the conclusion that the president's policy (barring assassinations) was being or could possibly be breached."

During the presidential debate Sunday night, Reagan said CIA officials had deleted a number of pages that dealt with assassination of Nicaraguan government officials, although adding that 12 copies of an original with such references "some way ... got out down there."

The president's debate statement and the CIA's admission that the section on "neutralization" remained in the book mean that approval of that part of the manual reached as high as CIA headquarters in Langley, Va. One intelligence source, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said the manual apparently was reviewed by middle-level CIA officials at Langley.

A week ago, The Associated Press reported the existence of the controversial manual, and four days later, Reagan ordered investigations by the CIA and the three-member President's Intelligence Oversight Board, which he appoints. Democrats demanded an independent probe.

Monday evening, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., intelligence committee vice chairman, complained that "the Central Intelligence Agency has still not told us who ordered this manual, who wrote it and who approved it."

Nunn and Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., the only two committee members who attended the CIA briefing, said the CIA's internal investigation into the production of the manual was continuing and that many questions remained.

Nunn's report following the briefing appeared to support an account from Edgar Chamorro, propaganda chief for the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, who said that deletions were made in the original manual to remove references to hiring professional criminals for "selective jobs" and creating a "martyr" by arranging the death of a rebel supporter.

But Chamorro said the revised manual still contained advice on the "selective use of violence" to "neutralize" Nicaraguan government officials and on coercing Nicaraguans into carrying out assignments against their will.

On Saturday, Chamorro said it was the "practice" of the CIA-backed rebels to execute Nicaraguan government officials who are deemed "criminals."

Matamoros disputed Chamorro's statement, saying: "We always reject and condemn political assassination and terrorism."

Sandinistas vow to hold new elections

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The coordinator of Nicaragua's Sandinista junta says the government will hold elections Nov. 4 even if all opposition parties boycott the voting.

"We will go to the elections with one, two, five or seven parties and in the end, if all abstain, the Sandinista Front will go alone to the elections, but they will be held Nov. 4," said Daniel Ortega, the Sandinistas' presidential candidate, in an interview Monday with the leftist government's Voice of Nicaragua radio station.

Elsewhere in Central America, leftist rebels attacked El Salvador's power lines for a second day Monday, shutting off electricity in the capital and most of the north, and the U.S. Embassy expressed "outrage" over the slaying of a peasant leader's 14-year-old son by a rightist death squad.

Ortega was commenting on the Independent Liberal Party's announcement that it is joining the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate, the nation's largest opposition group, in boycotting the vote for president, vice president and a national assembly.

The decision of the Independent Liberals, a small but influential party, to withdraw from the election was announced Sunday after a 94-20 vote on the issue at a party convention. It leaves the Sandinista National Liberation Front and five small parties in the campaign.

In El Salvador, U.S. Embassy spokeman Don Hamilton said an unusually strong embassy statement on the murder of a peasant leader's son was released because of the "egregiously seedy and disgusting" nature of the killing.

Boris King Montes, son of Alirio Montes, spokesman for the Salvadoran Peasant Union, was kidnapped from his house in the San Salvador area last Friday night.

Industry changes for hospitals to use advertising

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Jack Campbell says three years ago he would not have even "thought about" a big-time advertising campaign for his hospital.

But now St. David's Community Hospital is into advertising in a major way. On the radio, a soothing female voice pushes the hospital's "Special Delivery" maternity package, complete with "one guaranteed price."

"I'm convinced it's necessary and I think there's a return on the dollar," Campbell, St. David's executive director, said of the $200,000 ad budget. "The return will benefit the patients. It's going to reduce pressure on price increases."

Advertising has become a fact of life for many major city hospitals. It's a decision forced on some hospitals by several factors, including major changes in Medicare and increased competition for the health care dollar.

Congress changed the face of the hospital industry in April 1983 by mandating a major overhaul of Medicare. Under the new system, which is being phased in, the key letters are DRG — "diagnosis related groups."

All diagnoses fall into one of 467 DRGs and regardless of the actual bill, Medicare pays a set amount for each DRG. Under the old system, hospitals recovered a percentage of actual costs.

Fearing a loss of Medicare revenue, hospital officials say they are aiming their advertising at non-Medicare patients — patients who are also coveted by the growing number of for-profit hospitals as well as health maintenance organizations, minor emergency centers and other facilities.

"DRGs and all the competition make it very, very difficult," said Bob Spurck, administrator of the city-owned Brackenridge Hospital.

Brackenridge, which must fight the "welfare hospital" image that many municipal hospitals face, uses ads to boast about it's new building, maternity care and highly regarded emergency room.

"Combining the comforts of home delivery with the security of Austin's newest medical facility," says a Brackenridge maternity department ad.

"When you're a public hospital, people might assume you have the oldest, rustiest machinery in town," said Sara Rider, Brackenridge administrator for community relations and marketing.

"A lot of people didn't even realize that this new, nine-story white tower was Brackenridge Hospital. A lot of people thought it was a state office building," she said.

At St. David's, a hospital celebrating its 60th anniversary, officials found similar recognition problems.

"Too few people had heard of us," said Claireen Fellers, assistant director for public relations.

So the hospitals turned to ads to raise their profile. Seton Medical Center, another major hospital here, has counted more on direct mail.

It's all a battle against what Campbell calls "lower utilization of hospitals." And that sparks the need for more aggressive patient-hunting.

"People say, 'Why advertise?' It's like any other business. If you have a service or a product people have to know about it if they are going to utilize it. It's that simple," said Campbell.

"It's like any other business. If you can increase volume and you can spread your overhead, you are running on a more economical basis. There's no other real force in the marketplace that keeps hospital prices down because we don't yet compete on price," he added.

As part of St. David's search for new sources of money, the hospital's kitchen now does outside catering.

Brackenridge and St. David's officials say the ads have been well-received locally, but the hospital-as-business concept is new, and, for some people, tough to swallow.

"A hospital has to have patients to stay open," said Larry Smith, St. David's director of public information. "And consumers are choosing these days, whereas before you went where you were told to go."

"Hospitals are businesses. That is an idea that is still foreign to a lot of consumers," said Ms. Rider of Brackenridge.

"They don't look on hospitals as businesses that compete. But with the advent of (private, for-profit hospitals), you see more and more competition and you see more and more of the techniques that you (normally) would associate with restaurants, department stores and car dealers," she said.

"That makes some people very uncomfortable," she added. "A lot of people believe very strongly that hospitals exist to serve people in need. They feel that there can be something almost unethical in attempts to increase patients."

Campbell said advertising in years gone by, even in recent years, would have drawn opposition from hospital's primary customers — doctors.

"I wouldn't have thought about this three years ago," said Campbell. "The physicians reacted negatively to it. Advertising, to them, is something that would have considered non-professional at the time. But physicians' attitudes have changed. They understand now."

LIFESTYLES

Dear Abby

High price of friendship takes usher by surprise

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please print this so parents will think twice before planning a "sky's the limit" wedding for their son or daughter.

Our son was recently "honored" when a college fraternity brother asked him to be an usher at his wedding.

Although this meant a long trip either by plane or automobile, as well as time off from work, our son agreed. What he did not realize (nor was there any mention of this until the day before the wedding), he was expected to pick up a tab of $70 for his tux rental! We were floored when we were informed at the tux rental shop that the wedding had become too expensive for the groom's family, so everybody had to pay for his own.

Since our son is not financially well-off, we are paying for his tux rental.

Weddings with the attendants all dressed alike make a pretty picture, but in my opinion, unless the bride and groom or their parents are prepared to foot the bill, the wedding should be kept on a more conservative scale.

DISILLUSIONED BY
FANCY WEDDINGS

DEAR DISILLUSIONED: When the bride and groom select their attendants, they should state whether they will pick up the tab for tux rental and attendants' gowns. Unless the bride and groom are extraordinarily well-to-do, the attendants are expected to provide for their own gowns and tuxes, but this should be clearly understood when the attendants are invited to serve.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: While shopping in a card shop recently, I remarked to an elderly lady standing near me that it was difficult to find just the right "get well" card.

She replied, "Yes, especially when you know that the person is not going to get well."

The lady was right. As I looked at card after card in the "get well" section, they all bore the same message: "Please, get well soon!"

Abby, the reality of life is that many sick people do not get well, so to send such a card to a terminally ill person who is aware of his condition is to deny reality.

I am not suggesting that we send a card saying, "I know you're dying and I hope it will be as easy as possible," but, Abby, surely there must be some way to say, "I hope you're comfortable."

Thanks for listening.

THE REV. DOROTHY
LAIRMORE, PRESCOTT, ARIZ.

DEAR MS. LAIRMORE: Your point is well-taken. Next time, look in the "friendship" section. You will find cards that say, "Thinking of you," or, "I value your friendship." And if you can't find an appropriate message, write one.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My problem isn't exactly earth-shattering, but I'm sure it's one that is shared by many.

My husband and I are friendly with a couple I'll call Joe and Schatzi. Schatzi is German-born, but she's been in this country for many years and speaks fluent English. Joe also speaks German. When the two of them are in a group they converse in German, and nobody else can understand what they are saying.

How about a few lines in your column stating what you think about people who speak German in the presence of those who can't understand it?

FED UP
IN FRANKFORT, KY.

DEAR FED UP: People who speak German (or Spanish, or Chinese or pig latin) in the presence of those who cannot understand it are rude, insensitive and offensive.

But a few well-chosen words of protest in a language that everybody can understand will do more than a few lines in my column.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: If you are not registered, you cannot vote.

If you do not vote, you are voting against the candidate of your choice. Your vote is important. Edmund Burke is reported to have said: "The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is for good men to do nothing."

New kitchens small, efficient

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The advent of gourmet cooking as a hobby and the smaller space available for kitchens are a few of today's lifestyle changes which have made yesterday's "dream kitchen" obsolete.

According to Ellen Cheever, a kitchen designer and consultant to kitchen cabinet and appliance manufacturers, today's more flexible lives have created a need for more flexible kitchens.

Since today's kitchen is often smaller than the kitchen of the 1950s or earlier, a priority is to make every inch of space work. In response to this need, noted the designer, who is based in Sacramento, Calif., kitchen planning has progressed so that engineering efficient small-space kitchens is less of a challenge than it used to be.

Among methods she advocates for increasing use of kitchen space are: running cabinets up to the ceiling; using corners more effectively; incorporating moveable work surfaces, such as a food preparation island on casters or pull-out shelves.

Selecting appliances that go up the wall instead of across the floor horizontally is also advisable, she said, pointing out that a one-piece stove that includes a built-in oven, four-burner cooking surface and overhead microwave is now available. This type of stove fits into 30 inches of space while a separate cooktop and wall ovens require 63 inches.

One flaw found in many kitchens built before the days of microwave ovens is that there is rarely a convenient space for it. She has found that microwaves are desirable because they offer time-savings.

"The need to reheat food when different family members eat at different times or the 'I forgot - to - defrost - something - for - dinner' syndrome make microwaves almost ma datory," she said.

Kitchens in which the ovens can be built in are likely to be more efficient. Some possible locations include wall cabinets, underneath the countertop or on a wall near a built-in oven. If installing the microwave oven in a wall cabinet, locate the unit low enough so the person using it can look into the oven and down on the food being cooked, she said. A spot underneath the countertop is particularly useful if children will be using the microwave.

Not every family lives in a home with a very small kitchen. For some, the kitchen is a large room that serves as the center of the house. Even in large rooms, however, today's different style of living calls for different priorities in kitchen design.

Three important considerations in creating a comfortable open kitchen where many activities take place include: odor removal, noise control and flexible lighting. Yet, despite their importance, these requirements are often overlooked.

Odor control can be handled by installing a good ventilation system. A new type of ventilation method which may offer some improvements over the traditional venting hood is a downdraft system which is located at the cooktop instead of above it. By trapping greasy particles and strong odors at their source, the stove-top system helps keep kitchen wall-coverings and fabrics cleaner.

Noise control is enhanced if well-insulated appliances are selected. She noted that there is a substantial difference in the amount of noise operating appliances produce. Consumers should ask about insulation when they purchase appliances such as dishwashers and food waste disposers and, if possible, should try to observe the model which they are considering in operation.

A versatile lighting system is particularly important when the kitchen is the locale for dining, entertaining and other sociable activities. She said that needs included both general and decorative or accent lighting, as well as task lighting at countertops.

She advocated at least two sets of switches — one for task lighting and another for decorative and overhead lighting. Ideally general lighting should be controlled with a rheostat or dimmer so the level of light can be varied to meet different circumstances.

(Ellen Cheever's 12-page booklet "Kitchens for Today's Living" is available for $1 from Maytag Co., Consumer Education Department, Newton, IA 50208.)

Craftsmen sought for state arts fair

KERRVILLE — The 1985 Texas State Arts and Crafts Fair officials are encouraging artists and craftsmen to apply for acceptance to the fair held in Kerrville on May 25-26 and June 1-2. Deadline for exhibitor application is Dec. 1.

The fair has been a tradition for Texas families for 13 years, and the 14th annual event promises to both present some new activities and hold on to old favorites. A new slate of entertainment is planned.

Exhibitors are carefully selected and applications are limited to residents of Texas. An official entry blank and full information is available by contacting TACF, Box 1527, Kerrville, 78029-1527, or calling (512) 896-5711.

Two Christmas demonstrations set

The Friends of the Library will be sponsoring two sessions of its annual "Christmas in October" demonstrations this week.

Lil Hall, owner of the Hobby Shop, will conduct the sessions on the making of Christmas decorations, ornaments and gifts at the Lovett Memorial Library.

The first session will be at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday; the second session will be at 9:30 a.m. Thursday. Cookies and coffee will be served at both sessions for people attending the event.

Hall will discuss the latest ideas in the use of crafts and materials for making Christmas decorations, ornaments and gifts, both from materials that can be purchased and materials that may be found around the house.

While the emphasis will be on Christmas, some of the items can be used throughout the year.

The event is sponsored as a public service by the Friends of the Library.

Previously only the morning session had been offered, but the evening session has been provided this year because of demand.

REDECORATING CAN MAKE your home a "house beautiful" like the one pictured here. Big windows and skylights make light a major ingredient of this head - to - toe remodeling of a 1950s ranch house. Pale maple was chosen for the walls because it recedes visually and reradiates a warm glow.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — We have a lot of faucets in our old house. All of them are the regular washer-type faucets that used to be so common and every so often I have to change one of the washers. Recently, I discovered the washers I had on hand did not fit the faucet I had to fix. I chose one a bit larger than needed and sanded it down around the outside so that it finally fit. But it took me nearly an hour to do so. Isn't there some easier way to get an oversized washer to fit?

A. — If you are very careful, you can reduce the size of the washer with a very sharp knife or a razor blade in a handle. This is rather hazardous if you have a washer which resists cutting. However, there is one way to sand off the excess with the use of a portable electric drill and a bit which is the correct size. Select a bit over which the washer will fit very snugly. Push on the washer until it is a few inches on to the bit.

Now place a piece of sandpaper someplace where it will stay firmly in place. It can be taped to the top of a workbench or work table or, if it is on a sanding block, held in the jaws of a vise. Turn on the drill. When you are sure the washer does not come off while the bit is rotating, gently lower it to the sandpaper. Work carefully and slowly and you will find the sandpaper is taking off some of the washer's edges. Turn the drill slightly as you move along and soon the washer will be reduced all around. Every so often you may have to remove the washer from the bit to see whether it fits the bottom of the faucet stem.

Q. — Our basement floods two or three times a year. We have had all sorts of inspections and all sorts of suggestions, but what it all boils down to is that we need a sump pump to get the water out of the basement when the occasional flooding takes place. Is this a do-it-yourself job?

A. — It depends on your physical condition, age, knowledge of pipes and local plumbing codes. In short, no answer can be given that will cover everybody. The fact that you ask the question makes it fairly certain that the job should be done by a plumber. Different kinds of sump pumps are available, some of which cost more but work better. Be sure to find out which is best in your case

———

Q. — We will soon have to get a part of our old plumbing system replaced. It is made up of iron pipes and fittings. Is it possible to have the new installation of copper?

A. — Iron and copper do not like each other. Because of what is called galvanic action, the iron will slowly deteriorate, although this may take many years. There are certain fittings that can be put between these two metals that will slow down or eliminate the galvanic action. Ask your plumber and take his advice.

(Leaky faucets, leaky pipes, toilet condensation, sink stoppages and many other subjects are discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Consumers urged to resist buying used child car seats

As Texas citizens prepare to comply with the new child safety seat law effective Oct. 31, they should resist the option of getting seats from garage sales because of potential safety problems, said George R. Gustafson, executive vice president of Texas Safety Association.

"Of course, recycling child safety seats in a systematic fashion such as in the hospital - based and other established loaner program is a good use of resources. Buying a seat at a garage sale, however, can involve too many unknown factors about the condition of the seat," he said.

Missing information and missing straps or other parts can be a significant safety concern.

"One of the safety concerns of buying used seats is not knowing whether the seat has been through a crash. In some cases it may be difficult for the layperson to determine whether a seat has sustained structural damage in an impact. The best practice is to retire with honor any child safety seat which has been through a crash. In fact, many loaner programs, including the one operated by Texas Safety Association, require participants to return a seat that has been in a crash so that it can be exchanged. This practice just ensures added protection for these young riders," said Gustafson.

Federally approved child safety seats are required to show the date of manufacture and required to include manufacturer's instructions. The current crash standard was implemented in January 1981, so the consumer should look for seats manufactured on or after that date.

"A person who is unfamiliar with child safety seat design and who does not have manufacturer's instructions available may not recognize when parts of a seat are missing," he said.

Mistaking a common household infant carrier or household booster seat for a safety seat device or booster device made for motor vehicles is another danger of buying an article at a garage sale.

People who plan to recycle child safety seats among friends and family members need to keep in mind the need to retain all stickers and manufacturer's instructions and to maintain a vigilance on the condition of the seat so the next parent or other adult can use the seat with assurance, said Gustafson.

The new law requires Texas residents to transport children up to age two years in a federally approved child safety seat and children two up to four years in a child safety seat or safety belt. Fines of $25 to $50 for noncompliance will be assessed beginning Jan. 1, though the law takes effect Oct. 31.

The law provides for dismissal of a fine if the person shows proof of acquisition by purchase, loan, or rental within 10 days after the offense. The law applies to passenger cars and light trucks. Exempted are persons transporting children for hire and persons transporting a child in a vehicle in which all seating positions equipped with child passenger safety seat systems or safety belts are occupied.

"Clearly, this is a lifesaving law that can, along with continued education, secure for our youngest passengers safer rides," said Gustafson.

Easier-does-it housework tips

Instead of using masking tape to protect the glass when painting window frames, try dampening straight - edge strips of newspaper and sticking them to the glass along the frames. So suggests the current Family Circle magazine. When the paint job is finished, the strips of paper can easily be peeled off while still damp.

A permanent - press flat sheet makes an ideal tablecloth, says a tip from the magazine. It may not be Irish linen, but for those everyday occasions, it washes like a dream, needs no ironing, comes in a variety of colors and, best of all, it's easy on the budget!

Drive-in tradition isn't dead in West Texas

By LARRY ZELISKO
Abilene Reporter-News

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Picture a peaceful evening with dusk descending on the dry West Texas landscape. Locusts whinning in the distance being drowned out by music blaring from hundreds of speakers.

People, with popcorn and drinks nearby, adjusting their car seats or lounge chairs, preparing to enjoy a night at the drive-in.

Only fond memories of the past? Not necessarily so. A handful of drive-ins — yes, drive-ins, as in theaters and in movies — are alive still in the Big Country.

In Stamford and Sweetwater, in Ranger and in Rule, and in between Dublin and De Leon, drive-in theaters are open. Add to those Abilene's Park Drive-In, if you are including theaters that only show X rated flicks, and Stephenvilles's 'arlite, if you are counting those that sometimes show Spanish films, and you come up with a grand total of seven drive-in theaters left in the Big Country.

Only a couple of decades or so ago, practically every town had a drive-in and a walk-in theater, said A.J. Stone, owner of the S&S in Stamford, the dean of the Big Country drive-ins.

Most of those drive-in theaters are long gone, while the walk-ins have been boarded up.

Here and there stand solitary drive-in screens, a reminder of times of larger cars and cheaper gas, of times before color television, and of times before "crackerjack" theaters and video game arcades in shopping malls.

The screens not in use easily outnumber the ones still in use. In Sweetwater, the Midway is now a salvage yard. In Abilene, the town has encroached upon the decaying Town and County. Near Cross Plains, the Pioneer has seen its last frontier. In Snyder, the Tiger is now extinct, its playground equipment rusting just outside Towle Park. Ouside of Merkel, Breckenridge, Eastland, and numerous other towns, drive-in screens remain, projecting memories to theater-goers driving by them.

No signs remain of other theaters. The Elmwood Skyline, Abilene's first drive-in, fell victim as the city pressed southward. The Bank of Commerce is located on its former site. Another well-known theater, the Oak in Coleman, infamous for the movies which it advertised as XXX-rated, is no longer there.

But at the drive-ins that are still open, things are pretty much the same as always.

Picture a theater where parents can take youngsters without worrying about disturbing other patrons or the hassle of finding a babysitter. A place where people can watch a movie on the giant screen without having to dress up.

"We must be doing something right — we're still here," Stone said of the S&S. Actually, he credits the theater's success to three factors — determination, showmanship and location.

The theater is located on "the strip" on U.S. Highway 277 in Stamford, one of the few "wet" precincts north of Abilene.

Danny Poor, owner of the Rebel in Dublin, said his theater is still in business because of "dumb luck and stubbornness," despite storms and fires which have all but leveled the theater.

Also, being located "halfway between the college (Tarleton State in Stephenville) and the first liquor store (in Procter,)" has provided a steady supply of customers.

Allene Whorton, owner of the Tower, said Rule's drive-in has survived because it's "home-owned and operated. We can lose a little here and lose a little there and keep going." The Tower is a family business, she said, providing family entertainment.

Picture teen-agers sneaking in the exit of a theater. Cramming a friend in the trunk of a car while driving through the box office. Driving off with a theater speaker.

Theater owners disagree on whether this sort of thing still happens.

"High school kids don't go to the movies like they used to," Poor said. "Saturday is the sorriest night of the week."

Teen-agers don't try to sneak in anymore. "They go the daddy and get the money," he said.

Cars traveling in through the exit at the Rocket will get flats from metal spikes which allow traffic to pass only one way through the exit — out.

People trying to sneak in through the exit at the S&S have a tough chore since the Stones live in an apartment built into the front of the theater.

Occasionally, someone will sneak in via a car trunk or pick-up truck tool chest, but most of them are caught, Stone claimed.

At Rule, Mrs. Whorton said, there used to be a fence around the theater, but people would climb under or through it so it was let go to shambles.

Picture taking whatever you want to eat and drink to the theater. Climbing into the backseat and enjoying the show.

Only at the drive-in can people bring a bucket of chicken and drinks and enjoy the show, said James Hallmark, manager of the Rocket.

People may drink beer or other alcoholic beverages they bring as long as they do not disturb other theater-goers, he said.

The same rule applies at Stamford and their theaters. At Rule, Mrs. Whorton said people know that if anyone gets out of hand, her son, Jack, a local lawman, will be called to settle things down.

Unlike the modern mall theaters, without personalities, drive-ins each have their own traits.

The S&S is the only one that still has a playground for children next to the screen. It is also the only one where the owners live in the screen.

Stone and his wife, Mary, moved into the theater shortly after it was built in 1949. Slumber parties for his daughter, Andrea, were held in the concession stand.

The theater still uses its original carbon arc projectors. Metal lawn chairs are set up near the concession stand and near the playground for walk-in customers or those who don't want to sit in their cars.

The Rocket in Sweetwater, on the other hand, has the latest equipment. The projection equipment is the same type used in the Mall of Abilene United Artists Cinema Six.

United Artists, the company that owns the theaters in the mall, owns the Rocket, making it the only drive-in in the areas outside of Abilene owned by the chain.

The Rocket also is the only drive-in to have sound broadcast through cars' radio speakers. In the event a car doesn't have a radio, the first two rows still have speakers to hang on windows.

Sometimes an Elvis Presley tape is played before shows. One night not long ago, the assistant manager's young daughter had the honor of announcing, "The snack bar is closing in five minutes." She punctuated her announcement with a giggle.

Dublin's Rebel is the only drive-in in the area flying the Confederate flag, said Poor, a Civil War buff.

Built in 1953, it was bought by Poor's parents in 1962. Originally, the theater was called the "High View or something like that," he said.

His mother wanted to call it the Sky-Tel, and that name was used until about 12 years ago when it became the Rebel.

The theater has survived "two tornadoes — actually the last storm was probably just a high wind," Poor said. Also, the Rebel has risen up to overcome a fire that threatened to cut short its life.

The Ranger Drive-In probably will be converted to radio sound in about a year, owner Jackie Thornton said.

One of the big attractions of the drive-ins is that the concessions are so much cheaper than the mall theaters, he said.

The Ranger draws people from about a 40-mile radius.

The Tower in Rule is a "little, worn-out drive-in," Mrs. Whorton said, bnut it still attracts customers on weekends. Despite its ragged appearance, the projection and sound equipment are good, she said.

The Whortons built the theater some-odd years ago, Mrs. Whorton said. Until a recent ailment, Mrs. Whorton ran the concession stand, her 78-year-old husband ran the projector, and her mother ran the box office.

Business "is not real good, but it's good enough," she said. "We probably lose money year in and year out."

The screen faces the highway and people driving to Rule from Rochester naturally pull off the road to see what's going on.

Fearing for their lives, a family hides for nine years

By TOM UHLER
Gainesville Daily Register

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Bob Lemons opened a sheetmetal shop in Gainesville about nine years ago, not because he wanted to make a lot of money. He needed something to keep himself busy.

His stepdaughter, 18-year-old Debra Sue Williamson, was killed in August 1975 in a gruesome murder on the carport of her home in Lubbock, and Lemons and his family were trying to live with it.

Self-proclaimed mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas has since confessed to, and been indicted for, the crime, but the family believes someone else is guilty. They say Lucas' confession does not match details of the crime. And they believe someone was trying to kill them.

Lemons and his wife, Joyce, fled from Lubbock after a month of bad dreams and a growing fear for their other children's lives.

They say they were plagued by a series of mysterious signs — an apparent break-in at their Bluff Springs home east of town, a white van perched on the bluff overlooking their home, size 12 boot prints found at both their home and that of their murdered daughter.

Someone, they say, burglarized their home just before they moved out when no one was there and left a banana peel and a cracker in a wrapper on the kitchen counter. The butane tank outside had been opened all the way and was leaking gas into the house.

Missing were photographs of Debbie and her sister Pam, then 14, apparently stolen the day after the funeral. Also missing were keys that mysteriously turned up on the living room couch after an all-day search.

"It was pretty clear in my mind that somebody was trying to kill us," Lemons said.

"Someone knew every time we came and went," added Mrs. Lemons. The couple had pleaded for extra protection from the Lubbock police, but it proved too big a task. They bought firearms for the first time in their lives.

The Lemons family moved out of their house in the still of night early October 1975, and headed east from Lubbock on Highway 82.

"We didn't know where we were going. We didn't have the slightest idea," says Lemons. "We just had to get out of there."

They had driven five hours when they found themselves in Gainesville. They decided to stop. Lemons' brother lived here.

Once they found a suitable spot to build a home, the couple borrowed a truck so Lemons could return to Lubbock to pick up the family's valuables. He got there about midnight and left before sunrise.

They say it's been a living hell, marked largely by fear and confusion.

"I was very angry," Mrs. Lemons says of the days following her daughter's murder. "I was mad and angry at the world, I guess. And I really hated God for a while. That was an especially hard thing to deal with, since everybody said 'It's God's will. It's His way.'

"But all I could think to myself was where in the hell was He? That's not the God I knew. Debbie was a good Christian. I was brought up to believe He was always there when you needed Him. And I'd think, that's when she needed him most. Where was He?"

She says still has trouble understanding it — her first daughter, Mrs. Willimason, was a perfect child, she says, beautiful, never caused problems, never got into trouble, made good grades and had no enemies. Mrs. Lemons says she has succeeded mainly in just accepting that Debbie is dead.

"I know after nine years I do not feel one bit different. I'm not still sitting around crying, but the hurt is still there. The pain is still there."

"It doesn't go away," says Lemons.

"We have some beautiful grandchildren. You can't help but wonder what hers would have looked like, what she would have named them," says Mrs. Lemons. "I feel the loss every year."

It's the same for Lemons, who threw himself into his sheetmetal business and a garden at the couple's 13-acre farm to take his mind off the grief.

"I couldn't just sit around and think about it," he says. "I would have ended up in a booby hatch. I realized right off I had to have something to keep me busy and occupy my time."

For their two younger daughters, Pam and Elizabeth, then 8, it was much worse, the parents say. They idolized their older sister. She was everything they wanted to be. They didn't know why she had been killed nor what kind of person would have wanted to kill her. It was totally beyond comprehension.

"They were basket cases when we first moved here," Lemons says. "They lived through all this stuff, they lived through every minute. The thing almost drove us crazy. You can imagine what it did to the kids. They were scared to death. Still are."

All of their lives have changed, they say.

"We've always been very outgoing people. I could get up in front of a thousand people and give a speech and think nothing about it," says Lemons. "But when we came here it was a total turnaround."

With help from friends, family, Gainesville minister John Allen and others, the Lemons family made it through the first horrible months after Mrs. Williamson's death and learned a lot about themselves and the fiber of their family.

The couple survived each other's changes and their ordeal and say now the crisis has made them stronger and more unified than ever.

It has also made them more determined to see that the killer of their daughter is brought to justice.

The Lemonses say Lucas could not possibly have killed their daughter. Since they have been unable to convince Lubbock authorities, they've begun a campaign to have the Texas Legislature overturn the Lucas indictment and force police to find the person they say is really responsible for their daughter's death.

The Lemonses have pleaded with citizens in Lubbock and in Cooke County to contact their state representatives in their campaign.

Mrs. Williamson had been stabbed 18 times in the back, head, neck and chest. When her husband, Douglas, found her some three hours later, she was partially clothed and lying in a pool of blood. She apparently fought off her attacker and tried to get to her car for safety. The car door was locked.

"He (Lucas) didn't do it," Lemons says. "There's no way he did it. The murder was committed only two days after he left Jackson Prison in Michigan. He didn't have time to do it."

Mrs. Williamson was not raped, and she wasn't murdered the way Lucas said she was, according to the family and an autopsy report.

Lucas had said he entered the Williamson house through a sliding door in the kitchen late one night and chased a girl into the back bedroom where he killed her.

"I stabbed her," he said in a police statement this year. "There was quite a bit of blood around her."

Then he raped her, he said, and stole some expensive jewelry. Ottis Toole, his alleged accomplice, was right behind him, Lucas said.

But Lucas didn't know Toole in 1975, says San Antonio investigator Carolyn Huebner of Texas Child Search, who has spent a good deal of time with Lucas discussing missing or murdered children. He didn't meet Toole until 1977 or 1978, she says.

And the body wasn't found in the house. It was lying face up in the carport when her husband of only four months returned home from work. There was no trace of blood in the house and no jewelry missing.

"The only thing missing was a photo album and a purse," says Lemons. "She had a blue diamond ring worth several thousand dollars in her jewelry box, and she was wearing an opal necklace at the time. None of it was touched."

"It's totally out of his M.O. (mode of operation)," Ms. Huebner says of the Williamson case. "When he kills somebody like that, there'll be sex ... I would say 90 percent of his murders have been sex acts. The person who killed Debbie Williamson knew her, and she knew them, because there was no sign of a struggle and nothing disturbed in the house."

She says she was the person who first showed the photo of Mrs. Williamson to Lucas, who told her at the time the girl in the picture looked like a relative and not one of his victims.

"We're not going to bring anybody back from the dead," says Lemons, "But why not bring out the truth? What good does it do just to have Henry Lee Lucas confess, and then say, 'It's over?' It's not over."

Cave charcoal clue to early humans in area

By CARLE HODGE
The Arizona Republic

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — A clue from a desert cave contains a tantalizing hint that perhaps the Southwest was settled far longer ago than has been believed.

Scientists sifted from beneath the floor of the cavern a chip of charcoal, almost certainly burned by humans, that could be 20,000 years old or more.

Up to now, researchers have thought prehistoric people did not arrive in the region until about 11,500 years ago.

But a New Mexico state archaeologist recently declared that the fleck of charred wood from the remote U-Bar Cave might belie that notion. If the fragment is as ancient as he suspects, Curtis Schaafsma said, "it would be of supreme interest."

U-Bar Cave is hidden high in a limestone outcropping in extreme southwestern New Mexico. On the slopes of the Alamo Hueco Mountains, the site is 10 miles north of Mexico and about 60 miles east of Douglas, Ariz.

Schaafsma reported that the charcoal had been extricated inside the 300-foot-long cave from a huge heap of bat droppings, or guano.

His hope for its antiquity comes from two samples of the manure that have been radiocarbon-dated at the University of Arizona. A level of guano atop the charcoal proved to be 20,000 years old, and a layer beneath it 21,000 years old.

Scientists say one could infer that the charcoal, also awaiting dating at the University of Arizona, must be between those two ages.

A problem is that a simple specimen, even one indisputably two milleniums old, might be insufficient to convince all archaeologists that people lived in the U-Bar that far in the past.

Schaafsma is aware of that and acknowledged that more man-made material might be difficult to pinpoint.

Even if he cannot prove beyond doubt an occupancy so early, he said, the cave provides other enticements.

He said it was "rich in paleontological materials," such as the remnants of great ground sloths and other animals long extinct.

Archaeologists first dug into the stony shelter in 1960. Among other artifacts, they discovered crude baskets, human-hair nets, prayer feathers and, near the cave's mouth, a burned bone.

Part of Schaafsma's state job is to preserve artifacts, and when he learned the cave was being mined for guano for fertilizer, he drove to the site.

Oilman plans memorials to buffalo, Vietnam veterans

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Millionaire oilman Jack Grimm says some people seem to think of him as indulgent, flamboyant and eccentric. But he quickly adds that they have the wrong impression.

"I think when you get old, sometimes you have to rely on memories, I'm actually still in the dreaming stage. I'm still dreaming about things and then doing them," said the 59-year-old Grimm.

During the past two decades, Grimm has made headlines with three attempts to discover the sunken Titanic. He also has funded searches for Noah's Ark, Bigfoot and the Loch Ness Monster.

Grimm's current dream and ambition is different. He says if things go as planned, his "statement" will be made with a potentially controversial project.

He wants to build two giant bronze statues. One would be a celebration of the buffalo herds that roamed the Old West. This memorial might be placed on top of a mesa which Grimm owns near Buffalo Gap, south of Abilene, he said.

The other statue would be a tribute to the Vietnam veterans.

Grimm said artist C.R. Morrison wrote him and suggested a joint project.

Grimm said he gets proposals all the time. Once a man who claimed to represent a group that believed the earth was hollow wanted Grimm to fund an expedition to the center of the earth.

He declined to help.

But he invited Morrison to Abilene to talk about erecting two 30-foot-tall memorials where the sculptures of the buffalo and veterans would be displayed.

"What we had proposed to do was a tribute to the fighting forces in Vietnam. I have always been disappointed that America as a whole shamed our fighting forces when they came home from Vietnam," Grimm, a World War II veteran, told The Dallas Morning News.

"One writer from Austin once said that I was out to rob the Titanic," Grimm said. "People are entitled to their opinions. But usually if people take the time to see what I'm doing, they can tell how serious my projects are."

Rams crush Falcons

ATLANTA (AP) — Eric Dickerson was fuming.

"They really hacked me off. They have no class," the Los Angeles running back said of the Atlanta Falcons' defenders after helping the Rams to a 24-10 National Football League victory Monday night in a nationally televised contest.

Dickerson, who ran for 142 yards on 25 carries, including a 10-yard touchdown run, charged the Falcons with hitting late on numerous occasions and was particularly incensed at Atlanta defensive back Tom Pridemore, for an alleged tardy hit on only his second carry of the night.

"It was No. 27, I don't know his name. I think he wanted to do a head stand or a hand stand on my back after I had been down what seemed like five minutes," he said. "It was right there on the sideline and a referee was right there and said he didn't see it. I think somebody needs glasses."

He said that wasn't the only cheap shot, but "that's the way they play. I guess that's what the coaches down in Atlanta teach them.

"I'm not saying it's dirty, but I don't think it's real good football. If they want to play that way, they ought to go to Russia," said Dickerson.

The 6-foot-3, 220-pound speedster, however, didn't let it bother him in his performance, scoring the Rams' first touchdown on his 10-yard sweep after only 1:03 of the second quarter before letting Henry Ellard do the rest.

Ellard, the NFL's leading punt returner, who helped set up Dickerson's score with a 29-yard punt return, caught a 9-yard TD pass from quarterback Jeff Kemp only 1:08 later, then closed out the 21-point second period with an explosive 69-yard score on a punt return with 39 seconds left before intermission.

Mike Lansford closed out the Rams' scoring with an 18-yard field goal in the fourth period. The Falcons, who had beaten Los Angeles two weeks ago 30-28, could manage only a 39-yard field goal from Mick Luckhurst in the second quarter and scored in the closing minute on an 18-yard pass from Steve Bartkowski to Stacey Bailey.

Ellard, a second-year player from Fresno State, who suffered a bruised thigh and sat out the second half, said his punt return TD "wasn't the end of the game" for the Falcons "but, it probably was a big letdown."

The Falcons, whose offense has been missing the last two games, losing a 19-7 decision to the New York Giants a week ago, managed only 217 yards against the Rams, 73 in the second half, and dropped to 3-5.

"We've got to start thinking about stringing some wins together," said Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski, who hit on 20 of 31 passes for only 144 yards. "We're not going to have many friends until we do."

Most of the crowd of 52,861 left early in the final period. Many booed the home team.

Schramm believes White will quarterback Cowboys again

DALLAS (AP) — The envelope, please. And the starting quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys in the second half of their National Football League season is....

Once again Coach Tom Landry will wait until his weekly press conference today to announce whether young and troubled Gary Hogeboom or veteran Danny White is his No. 1 quarterback.

No less an authority than Tex Schramm, managing general partner of the team, believes Landry will name White to start against the Indianpolis Colts this Sunday.

"I have a hunch it will be White," Schramm said on his weekly radio show Monday night.

The Cowboys have an unsettled quarterback situation despite the biggest comeback in their history Sunday night, defeating New Orleans 30-27 in overtime to move into a tie with Washington and St. Louis for the National Conference Eastern Division leadership.

"I don't make decisions on what happened the night of the game," said Tom Landry. "I have to look at the films and the overall situation."

It was the third straight game that the veteran White had replaced Hogeboom, who was named Dallas' No. 1 quarterback at the start of the season.

White came in with Dallas down 27-6 and threw a 12-yard scoring pass to Mike Renfro to cap an 88-yard march. He also took the team on the game-winning drive in overtime capped by Rafael Septien's 41-yard field goal.

"Danny put the points on the board," said Landry. "He has been a real class act for this team this season and he really deserved what happened."

Never in Dallas' 24-year history had the Cowboys come from so far behind to win in the fourth quarter.

White refused to say anything bad about Hogeboom's performance, which included Saint linebacker Dennis Winston's 43-yard touchdown return of an interception.

"This was a big game for me and it meant a lot to my confidence," said White. "I still wouldn't say I deserved to start. I know what Gary is going through, and it's tough.

"Like I said a long time ago, I didn't deserve to lose the job and I don't think he deserves to lose it because of the way he has played."

Huskies hold onto No. 1 ranking

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Washington, Oklahoma and Texas had close calls over the weekend but held on to the top three spots in The Associated Press college football poll while South Carolina cracked the Top Ten for the first time in its history.

Boston College, Southern Methodist and Kentucky all suffered their first setbacks of the season and dropped in today's rankings. BC and SMU, Nos. 4 and 6 last week, slipped to 11th and 14th, respectively, while Kentucky's 36-10 loss to LSU cost the Wildcats a Top Twenty ranking.

Washington, which became the No. 1 team last week, was hard-pressed to beat Oregon 17-10. The Huskies, who managed only 109 yards in offense, received 45 of 60 first-place votes and 1,161 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Nebraska is the only team to be ranked No. 1 for more than two weeks this season. The Cornhuskers held the top spot for three weeks.

Oklahoma, which trailed Washington 1,135-1,072 a week ago, closed the gap, although the Sooners needed a field goal and touchdown in the final period to turn back Iowa State 12-10. They received 7½ first-place votes compared to 10½ last week but totaled 1,121½ points.

Texas blew most of a 21-point lead and held on to defeat Arkansas 24-18 when time ran out with the losers on the 3-yard line. The Longhorns received 3½ first-place ballots and 1,-096½ points.

Nebraska, a 24-7 winner over Colorado, moved up from fifth place to fourth with 980 points while Brigham Young jumped from seventh to fifth with three first-place votes and 926 points after downing Air Force 30-25. Ohio State rose from eighth to sixth with 842 points by defeating Michigan State 23-20.

The other first-place ballot went to LSU, which clobbered Kentucky and vaulted from 10th to seventh with 829 points. Miami climbed from ninth to eighth with 752 points by downing Pitt 27-7.

South Carolina made the Top Ten for the first time by rallying to beat Notre Dame 36-32. The Gamecocks, whose 6-0 start is their best ever and the first time they have ever won six consecutive games in one season, received 719 points. Oklahoma State, 12th last week, rounded out the Top Ten with 613 points after routing Kansas 47-10.

'Super Conference' proposed for UIL

AUSTIN (AP) — Some 250 Class 5A high schools will vote this winter on a proposal for a "super conference" state football playoff starting in 1986 that would include some of Texas' larger schools.

The University Interscholastic League's 20-member Legislative Council voted Monday to place the 32-team "super conference" proposal on the annual referendum ballot, which is subject to approval by the State Board of Education.

The new playoff concept would place most schools with enrollments of 2,000 or more into the "super conference" bracket if they finish first or second in their district football races.

If schools under 2,000 finish first or second, they would go into the regular Class 5A playoff. The third place team, meanwhile, would be the "super conference" playoff entrant, regardless of enrollment.

UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney told the council details of the plan still need to be worked out and is far from perfect. But he said that a special committee extensively studied inequities in the Class 5A enrollment bracket, saying 1,310 is the bottom figure, with no upper limit.

"This is the best the committee could do," Farney said.

Farney declined to speculate on how 5A schools may vote on the proposal. Results will be announced next February.

The council, composed of superintendents and principals from schools across the state, also approved for referendum vote a proposal to liberalize UIL restrictions on expense-paid college recruiting visits by high school athletes.

In the past, football and basketball recruits involved in other sports were allowed only three expense-paid visits before concluding their high school eligibility. Responding to a presentation by Southwest Conference Commissioner Fred Jacoby, the council approved a ballot item proposing to increase the total to five visits.

Also approved for a vote by Class A schools was a proposal that would, in effect, set up a separate state basketball playoff bracket for football-playing schools. In four decades since Class A began playing state basketball championship, only one school — Johnson City in 1947 — has followed its football season with a basketball championship. Snook, which has had no football program since the 1940s, has won six consecutive Class A basketball crowns.

A proposal for amendment of the UIL's 70-year-old policy against practice and competition on Sundays also may go on the ballot. The item would allow postponed games in regional and state tournaments to be made up on Sundays, if UIL officials and the schools involved agree.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS

Symptoms of Pinched Nerves

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the back (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve functions. until this function is restored, you will in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! should you experience any of these symptoms...call for indepth consultation in Layman's terms.

Texas' Akers concerned about SMU receivers

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas will match what Coach Fred Akers calls his "route runners" against Southern Methodist's "quick-striking" receivers on Saturday.

Texas, 4-0-1 this season and ranked No. 3, has won 16 straight Southwest Conference football games since SMU defeated the Longhorns 30-17 in 1982.

That game turned on a deflected pass that went for an SMU touchdown, and Akers recalls that two years earlier Texas had seven starters on the sidelines when SMU won 20-6.

"We just weren't a good football team that day, because we had several of our best football players sitting over there with us on the bench," Akers told his weekly news conference Monday.

In 1982, he said, "That day they had physically a better football team and they were fortunate because of the circumstances."

Texas has had more success passing than running the last two weeks in tying Oklahoma 15-15 and defeating Arkansas 24-18, and Akers compared Longhorn receivers with those of SMU.

SMU receivers, he said, "have speed and quick-striking ability. They're awfully dangerous. Ours are not speed players. Ours are route runners, good hands, good competitors. They find a way to get open. Every now and then we even get behind somebody."

The game between Texas and SMU, which was ranked No. 6 before losing to Houston 29-20 on Saturday, will be regionally televised. Kickoff is at 2:50 p.m., CDT, with a sellout crowd of 78,000 expected.

Texas under Akers since 1977 is 38-4 at Memorial Stadium, including the two losses to SMU.

"It's been a pretty tough matchup regardless of where we've played, and I expect it to be that way wherever we play," Akers said.

Asked if last Saturday's Houston upset of SMU would make the SMU-Texas game any less important, Akers replied, "No, not at all. It could work to intensify it (our effort), because I'm sure their efforts are going to be intensified."

Asked how this SMU team might be different than others, Akers said, "I think they are more dangerous throwing the football than they have been. They've got the same kind of power and explosiveness in their running game but they have a more potent passing attack."

"Their defense is very active," Akers said. "You talk about skill positions, their defensive ends you could list as skilled positions — they can fly.

"I don't think their defense in the last four or five years has gotten near the credit they deserve for the strength of their football program. They have played some really fine defense."

Reviewing Texas' narrow victory over Arkansas, Akers said, "We didn't play our best out there Saturday, and it got a little scary. "We're going to have to play better (against SMU)."

Asked if SMU might have been looking ahead to Texas when it was upset by Houston, Akers said, "I can't even tell when ours are looking ahead, much less theirs. The fact of the matter is Houston has enough talent on their team to beat anybody on a given day — just like several teams in this conference.

"You just can't go out there and not be at your best when the other team is at its best."

Browns release Rutigliano as head coach

CLEVELAND (AP) — This was one of the more polite firings in pro football history.

"I've asked my friend and associate, Sam Rutigliano, to step aside as head coach of the Cleveland Browns," Browns' owner Art Modell said Monday, promoting defensive coordinator Marty Schottenheimer to his first head coaching job in the National Football League.

Despite the Browns' 1-7 record following Sunday's 12-9 loss to the Cincinnati Bengals and Rutigliano's career record of 47-50, Modell said he agonized over the decision to fire Rutigliano at mid-season.

"Sam Rutigliano represents what I consider to be quality, integrity and character. There are very few like him in pro sports today," he said.

Rutigliano, 52, is also a vice president of the team and has a contract that runs through 1988. Modell said Rutigliano was welcome to remain with the Browns' front office, but Rutigliano said he will wait until January to decide about his future.

"I'm a football coach," Rutigliano said. "I've been a football coach all my life and that's what I'd like to do. But I really need some time to reflect.

"I think I was treated fairly," he said. "The only advice I have for Marty is, make sure you can kick field goals."

Schottenheimer, 41, in his fifth year with the Browns has transformed the Browns' once-weak defense into the top-rated unit in the American Football Conference and the second-rated overall in the NFL. Schottenheimer previously was a defensive coach with the Detroit Lions and New York Giants.

Modell said he considered no other candidates for the job. He gave Schottenheimer a contract running through 1986.

"I have confidence in this man because his record as a defensive coordinator is the best in the AFC and second-best in the NFL," Modell said.

The two-year-plus deal was offered to Schottenheimer because "a coach coming on in midterm requires a term in which he can put his imprint on the team," Modell said.

"As I perceive it, this is fresh start. We've got to get this organization back to winning ways," said Schottenheimer. "I wanted to become a head coach in the National Football League, but I'm sorry it had to happen this way."

Schottenheimer said he plans to make no changes in the Browns' highly rated defense, but he will discuss with the team's offensive coaches this week whether adjustments are needed in the offensive unit, which has averaged fewer than 13 points a game.

Rutigliano, the fifth coach in Browns' history, replaced Forrest Gregg after the 1977 season. Rutigliano was the first head coach ever hired from outside the organization, coming over from an assistant coaching position with the New Orleans Saints.

"I only have one regret — that I wasn't able to completely get the job done," Rutigliano said. "Today I've become the No. 1 fan of the Cleveland Browns."

Hasse dismissed as WT cage announcer

Warren Hasse of Pampa will not be retained as the announcer for West Texas State basketball this season, according to an announcement made Monday by Ralph Davis, secretary-treasurer of the Cager Club, a group which supports the school's basketball program.

Last March, Hasse was told by the Quarterback Club that he would be dismissed from broadcasting WT football games, something Hasse has done for the past 30 years.

West Texas State president Dr. Ed Roach said he felt it wasn't in the best interests of the school to have Hasse back as basketball announcer. Dr. Roach notified Davis of the decision, who then informed Hasse.

Davis said the Cager Club's executive committee had voted to retain Hasse as basketball announcer this season, but was overruled by Dr. Roach. The school has the right of refusal on the announcers.

Hasse is currently broascasting the Pampa Harvester football games.

Davis said all executive committee members wanted Hasse retained as basketball announcer, and he felt that a majority of the club members would want him back if a poll was taken.

Davis said the Cager Club has not yet hired a replacement.

Davis said Hasse would continue to be the master of ceremonies at the Cager Club luncheons, and he hoped Hasse would continue to serve in that capacity.

PHS tennis teams lose to Canyon

Canyon defeated Pampa, 15-3, last weekend in a high school district tennis match.

Trent Sellars was the only winner for Pampa in the boys' division. He defeated Shane Palmer.

Soli Mohan, Pampa's top-seed, lost to Mitch Parker, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2.

In the girls' division, Andrea Adcock was Pampa's only singles winner as she defeated Melissa Steward, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3. Miss Adcock teamed up with Missy Pontious to defeat Steward and Amy Claborn, 6-3, 6-4, in doubles.

"In the top-seeded match, Pampa's Stephanie Trollinger lost to Cindy Trekell, 6-3, 6-3.

Miami pounds Patton

PATTON SPRINGS — David Scott scored three touchdowns and passed for two more as Miami crushed Patton Springs, 61-19, in a District 2A 6-man football game last Friday night.

The Warriors are now 3-2-1 overall and 1-2-1 in district play.

Back scored on runs of 12 and three yards, and also recovered a blocked punt in the end zone for a touchdown. Beck passed to Brett Byrum and John Locke for 8 and 27 yard scoring passes respectively.

Miami's defense also accounted for two scores on two interceptions by Andy Fountain. Eric Smith and Chad Breeding each scored touchdowns for the Warriors.

Miami travels to Benjamin this Friday night.

Eason slated for knee injury

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler rookie safety Bo Eason faces likely surgery Wednesday after suffering a knee injury in Houston's loss Sunday to the San Francisco 49ers, a spokeswoman for the winless National Football League team said.

Eason, a second-round draft choice from the University of California at Davis, would undergo arthroscopic surgery to repair ligament damage, Oilers spokeswoman Jodie Anderson said Monday.

Doctors are "leaning toward surgery" and chances were "slim" that it would not be performed, she said.

If the operation takes place, Eason would be placed on the injured reserve list, leaving the 0-8 Oilers with 47 players on their active roster, one below the league maximum.

Eason played in all eight games so far and accounted for the only Oilers sack in their 34-21 defeat by San Francisco.

Sims out for season

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Lions running back Billy Sims is out for the season after having surgery to repair his injured right knee, Coach Monte Clark said early Tuesday.

Sims underwent surgery at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit. Dr. Robert A. Teitge, the team physician, said he repaired one torn cartilage and two torn ligaments in Sims' knee.

"The operation went very well," Clark said. "The doctor told me just after midnight that he was very optimistic abou a full return by Billy next spring."

Racquetball pro to conduct clinic

Greg Peck, currently the world's third-ranked player in racquetball, will be at the Pampa Youth Center for a clinic Nov. 15. Peck will also conduct a question and answer session.

Admission is $15. A limited number of tickets are available and will be sold on a first come, first served basis.

This coming year you will experience a positive change of attitude. You will now feel capable in areas where you lacked assurance. Your qualities of character will also be enhanced.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Financial and material aspects continue to favor you today. Keep your radar tuned for ways to add to your resources. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you to which signs you are best suited romantically. To get yours mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You function best today if you are able to act independently. Steer clear of sluggish types who could tie you down.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep in touch with events today, but don't try to get out front and lead the parade. Exert influence from the background.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Sometimes it's beneficial to spend time alone, but this won't be true for you today. Your restless spirit will urge you to seek out action spots.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not underestimate your competition today, but by the same token, don't view yourself as the underdog. The edge is in your favor.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to keep present events in their proper perspective. What occurs today is important, but also be cognizant of your tomorrows.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In joint ventures today, go beyond what's expected of you. When it's time to divvy up, you'll be amply rewarded.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your choice of companions will greatly influence how much fun you'll have today. Select partners as perky as yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Projects which have creative elements are likely to offer you the greatest returns at this time. Utilize your imagination.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Conditions contributing to your feelings of security and well-being will be starting to firm up as of today. Flow with the tide.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) People who meet you for the first time today will be left with a favorable impression. Let the real you shine through.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This is a good day to get in touch with friends you've been out of contact with lately. They're eager to hear from you.

DEALER AT WORK—H.A. Hathcoat shows off a set of truck horns he is proud of at his Greenville junk shop. Hathcoat, who loves to "dicker," also loves to meet the different people who stop in at his shop. (AP Laserphoto)

Castaways mean business for East Texas junk dealer

By PAT ROLLINS
Greenville Herald Banner

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — The junk dealer's school song could read something like this: Junk is reality; antique is the ideal, and barter is the method of exchange.

Whatever tune area junk dealers dance to, however, the value of their product and the length of their stay makes an interesting story in itself. What follows is only a sampling of what many entrepeneurs of the miscellaneous have to offer.

Twenty-two years ago, H.A. "Blackie" Hathcoat settled in at Highways 34 and 47 near Point and decided to stay. Blackie's has been a landmark at the corner ever since.

"I love to dicker," Hathcoat said, "and I love to meet the different people who stop off here. I'll never get tired of these things."

Hathcoat has a unique way of acquiring many of the items he has accumulated over the years. He said that he once knew every head nurse in every nursing home for many miles around.

When old folks would go to a home, Hathcoat said, the nurse would put in a good word for him and so he would often find valuable treasures at a good price. He paid the nurse for her trouble.

Hathcoat likes to tell of a couple of good deals he has walked into over the years. On one occasion, he bought a Pennsylvania Dutch armoire and a kitchen cabinet from a lady in Grand Saline for $15.

After he cleaned the old paint off the cabinet, someone told him he had a very valuable antique. He ended up selling the piece for $600.

On another occasion, Hathcoat bought an old, oak mantelpiece out of a wrecked home in Oak Cliff for $17.50. Later, a woman from Houston came by and saw the mantelpiece, and Hathcoat was $800 richer for the meeting.

Another dealer, Marie Bennett, operates the Peniel Trading Post on Highway 69 in north Greenville.

Mrs. Bennett acquires her items in a different way from Hathcoat.

"My husband and I have a little bit of everything here," Mrs. Bennett said. "We go to garage sales and acquire things. People also come in and sell things to us. We do not go to estate sales for their prices are usually too high."

In Mrs. Bennett's establishment, one can find a wide assortment of items running from a refrigerator for $85 down to glasses for two bits.

Mrs. Bennett said she once sold a bedroom suite for $150, but most of her goods are things people need at a good price.

One unique item in Mrs. Bennett's collection is a cat made from an old bottle, paint and miscellaneous items.

Mrs. Bennett has been in business since 1981 and says that she makes money from the work, but her husband also works at another job to pay the bills.

At 1703 Monroe Street in Commerce, Randy and Lisa Cannon have run the "Bargain House" for about two years.

The specialty of the house is old furniture and appliances. Prices start at a buck for a picture and run to $125 for a refrigerator.

Mrs. Cannon said she likes the work and that the couple makes their entire living from the business. They are buying the old house the store is located in. The couple live with their four children on the top floor above the business.

The Cannons say they get their junk from people who walk in off the street.

"We have many repeat customers," Mrs. Cannon says. "They just get tired of their old furniture sometimes and come in trade for some new, old furniture."

Mrs. Cannon believes bartering ability is important for proprieters in this business but says that she doesn't really like to haggle and that her husband is better at it.

The Cannons do not like to deal with antiques because it is easier, they say, to move newer items. They started in the business by accident, she says.

"We just started going in junk shops and to garage sales when we first got married and kind of just started in the business with no real foreplanning," Mrs. Cannon said.

Old signs insure nostalgia

By MACE THORNTON
The McPherson Sentinel

McPHERSON, Kan. (AP) — A buck deer looks majestically across a wrinkled and faded, framed parchment. His mountainous environment was designed for one purpose: to sell insurance.

The deer, which is a symbol of the Hartford Insurance Co., is one of many rustic insurance signs and pieces of memorabilia that greet insurance agent Warren Underwood each morning at his office.

With approximately 1,000 pieces in his insurance nostalgia collection, some of which date back into the 1870s and '80s, Underwood's is one of the most complete of its kind.

The collection, which started about 23 years ago as a practical way for Underwood and his wife to decorate their home, has turned into much more than that for the McPherson insurance agent.

"We just wanted to pick up some antiques for our home," he said. "Like country store advertising pieces. Then one day at a WaKeeney antique store I ran across seven insurance signs for $75."

Needless to say, Underwood bought the signs, but little did he know that those signs would eventually lead to his extensive collection.

"It's kind of an interesting hobby," Underwood said. "I like all the old stuff. It's fun to research it all."

And research is exactly what he does.

"I've bought books and studied and read," he said. "But I don't think I've ever bought a book about antiques that didn't pay for itself in three months."

Along the way his hobby has evolved into a sort of investment. Even though he doesn't really know how much money he has wrapped up in the investment, he does have his pieces insured.

"I've had chances to sell some to insurance company museums," he said. "To tell you the truth, I couldn't afford to start my collection today. I'm still able to pick up some signs, but they're much, much harder to find.

"I have people call me, from agents to antique collectors, to see if I want to trade or buy or sell or to see if I've picked up anything new. Most of the pieces are in museums or private collections now because there just weren't that many made."

He believes some of the signs to be one-of-a-kind. Many of his signs are reverse paintings on glass using gold and silver leaf. Artists actually painted the signs backwards on a pane of glass.

"Those are really pieces of art," Underwood said. "It's a lost art. Insurance companies aren't going to spend money to do that today. They could, but it would cost them a fortune."

Another of his signs is from the Continental Insurance Co. It features genuine mother-of-pearl inlay spelling the word "Continental."

He also has a signed artist's conception dated 1883 of the Statue of Liberty, which was not completed until 1886. The promotional poster was used by The Travelers Insurance Co. The design of the base around the statue is not the way it looks today.

Sculpture to be sunk beneath deep blue sea

EDITOR'S NOTE — An artist in upstate New York is looking for a sort of immortality by sinking his work in the depths of the deep blue sea.

By MARY ESCH
Associated Press Writer

HIGH FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Bob Schuler plans to etch the very essence of his psyche into granite cubes and sink them to the ooze deep in the ocean, where the only light is the bioluminescence of bizarre sea creatures.

Cosmic stuff? Well, Schuler is a cosmic kind of guy.

He is a man who has made "talking furniture" with tape players buried inside, and who has made epoxy bricks and asked roaming hippies to "drop them in a sewer, on a street, just leave them somewhere."

Schuler, 56, bearded, bespectacled, tanned and fit, lives in a den of sprayed polyurethane foam in his own 70-acre forest about 95 miles north of New York City.

There, he sandblasts his masterwork onto 16-inch close-grained granite cubes and colors the abstract designs with brilliant epoxy paint.

The project is called Tethys, after the primordial sea that covered Earth in its infancy. Schuler says the 500-pound granite blocks will be sunk at 100-mile intervals around the globe, and left alone.

"My whole purpose is to leave something on earth, in as permanent a form as I can. The ocean bottom is one of the most inert environments on Earth," he said.

Schuler plans to have 36 blocks finished for the first ocean drop next summer along a 3,600-mile route from Jacksonville, Fla., to Morocco.

"The idea has incredible appeal. The odds of some of them surviving are quite good — there should be about 600 of them when I'm done — and if they do surface again, it would be in quite a different time."

Each block has the Tethys logo on one face — a map of the world showing the route of the project and the latitude and longitude where the particular block is dropped.

The other faces are etched with what Schuler calls "a series of personal glyphs and anecdotal images about my life and times." Some are humorous, but others are disturbing and pessimistic.

One block bears the title, "Young Abusers Meet Robot Missiles, Round 2." The sides have a series of images depicting a head being shot by a rocket. Other cubes combine images of fetuses interspersed with missiles.

When asked if he felt bad about the fact that he will never see his painstakingly carved cubes again, once they sink into the abyss, Schuler smiled and shook his head.

"I like the idea that they're down there, so far down that only a machine can get to them — and so tiny relative to the area they're in, that they're like grains of sand."

Priest disappearance linked to anti-Solidarity terrorists

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Leading figures in the outlawed Solidarity labor movement say the kidnapping of a pro-Solidarity priest, the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, may be linked to an anti-union "terrorist group" operating in northern Poland.

Janusz Onyszkiewicz, former national spokesman for the union, said the underground press had documented similar abductions in the Torun area, about 125 miles northwest of Warsaw.

"They were always kidnapped, driven away, maltreated physically and mentally, and released after a relatively short time," said Onyszkiewicz, speaking to reporters after attending a Mass for the missing priest in Warsaw Monday evening. More than 2,000 people attended.

He said the Popieluszko kidnapping was a "completely new thing, deeply shocking, because priest Popieluszko is a symbol, a person very popular all over the country."

Popieluszko, 37, is one of the Polish clergy's most outspoken advocates of the now-outlawed Solidarity labor union and had been the target of frequent government criticism for his pro-Solidarity sermons.

"This kind of terrorist group could be a part of a political game which we don't know," said Bronislaw Geremek, a dissident historian, in an interview at his home.

Geremek, a close adviser to 1983 Nobel Peace Prize winner and Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, said it was not known whether the group was involved in the Popieluszko disappearance, but added: "One has to ask how it is possible, after the imposition of police control over the entire country, this kind of group can be active and possess some police tools."

Israel hardly mentioned in the arguments over Lebanon

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Reporter

WASHINGTON (AP) — In their ongoing debate over whether American leadership failed in Lebanon, Walter F. Mondale and President Reagan scarcely mention Israel's 1982 invasion that first dragged Americans into the Lebanese quagmire.

Relations between the United States and Israel have seldom been closer. Israel is asking for a record $3.6 billion in free American aid for next year, up from $2.6 billion this year, and probably will get it.

The Reagan administration has decided that despite the tragedy of

An AP News Analysis

Lebanon, close U.S.-Israeli ties are fundamental to American foreign policy. Mondale has made clear it would be no different if he were elected president.

Today marks the first anniversary of the Oct. 23, 1983 suicide bombing of a Marine barracks in Beirut that killed 241 servicemen, the most Americans to die in any hostile action since the Vietnam War.

Mondale, the Democratic hopeful, charged in the presidential debate Sunday night that Reagan ignored warnings that the Marines should be withdrawn from the barracks because "they were indefensible."

By failing to provide proper protection, and by not retaliating, "the United States left in humiliation, and our enemies are stronger," Mondale said.

Reagan said the assignment of the Marines to those particular barracks was decided by the commanders on the spot and was not something he would be involved with.

As to the reason the Marines were sent to Lebanon, he said "We went in in the interest of peace and to keep Israel and Syria from getting into the sixth war between them. And I have no apologies for our going on a peace mission."

Israel set in motion the events that eventually led to the American involvement by invading Lebanon on June 6, 1982 to drive guerrilla forces from the Palestine Liberation Orgnization away from its northern border.

The Reagan administration opposed the invasion initially, even voting in the United Nations Security Council for a resolution calling on Israel to "withdraw all military forces forthwith, and unconditionally, to internationally recognized boundaries of Lebanon."

But later the administration became convinced by Israel that Lebanon could be turned into a pro-Western state that would make peace with Israel and help restore peace to the Middle East.

A senior State Department official, who insisted on not being identified, agreed in an interview that had the U.S. effort succeeded, "Lebanon could have been an unexpected dividend of Camp David — as part of the unfolding peace process."

Experts see arms control agreements working, barely

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diploamtic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Apart from possible technical violations, the United States and the Soviet Union seem to be living up to their arms control agreements despite charges of cheating from both sides, two experts say.

But the two, former chief U.S. arms negotiators Gerard C. Smith and Paul C. Warnke, are worried, nonetheless, about the future of arms control.

Interviewed Monday after the latest round of U.S.-Soviet accusations, Warnke said "the record of both sides is very good so far as living up to the letter of the agreements."

But Warnke, the Carter administration's top negotiator, added that, "If you go beyond the letter you are into the field of necromancy" — magic or fortune-telling.

Smith, who worked out the SALT I treaty in the Nixon administration, was more cautious. He said "it's hard to say" if both sides are observing the agreements since they discuss questionable practices in secret.

"On the whole, I'd say there've been technical violations," Smith told a reporter.

The latest accusation came over the weekend from Moscow. Denying U.S. charges of Soviet cheating, Tass distributed a statement saying there had been at least eight U.S. violations.

The Reagan administration apparently is preparing to reply later in the week.

"I see nothing new in this latest Tass statement of any great significance," Smith said.

However, he said, since making similar accusations last January, the Soviets have added two items: U.S. research into the possible construction of new silo launchers and using an intercontinental ballistic missile to test American missile defenses.

Smith said the silo construction would violate the 1972 SALT treaty. But, he said, "I don't think we have any ideas of building new silos."

Using an ICBM in a test was "a technical violation," the former negotiator said. But, Smith added, "I don't think they (the Soviets) take it seriously."

At the Pentagon, meanwhile, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said a new Soviet missile, the SS-25, "is very close to being fully operational."

A report by a presidential advisory committee earlier this month said testing the missile represents a "probable violation" of the treaty, which limits both sides to one new type of intercontinental ballistic missile.

The Soviets already have given the SS-24 that designation.

Weinberger said "the Soviets have been testing an SS-25 for some time and they continue to test and get things ready."

He declined to confirm or deny whether the new missile had actually been deployed.

"But it's widely known that they've been testing and getting bases ready and things of that kind for quite a long time, and it is very close to being fully operational," he said.

Weinberger stopped short of saying that the SS-25 would violate the 1979 agreement. It was not ratified by the Senate, but Presidents Carter and Reagan pledged to observe it provided the Soviets also did.

White joins Doggett on stump, attacks Gramm

By The Associated Press

Democratic Senate candidate Lloyd Doggett, with a little help from Gov. Mark White, stumped the campaign trail in West Texas and promised potential voters that he'd keep high-level nuclear waste out of the region.

"If I'm your senator, they will bury high-level nuclear waste in West Texas over my dead body," Doggett said in Abilene Monday.

The governor joined Doggett for a day-long campaign swing to San Angelo, Dallas, Waco, Abilene and El Paso, and he echoed Doggett's criticism of any high-level nuclear dumpsite.

White attacked what he said was Gramm's lack of help in dealing with the Reagan administration on the issue.

Doggett said any opposition to a high-level nuclear dump from Gramm is a last-minute conversion.

The federal government has been considering at least two sites in West Texas for use in burying such material. Those studies have angered many residents in the region.

There was some agreement of sorts Monday, however, between Gramm and Doggett.

Doggett said he wants a face-to-face discussion by Friday with his opponent before he unequivocally accepts the Republican's challenge to halt public and on-camera criticism.

A spokesman for Gramm said Doggett's response to the challenge will be examined today. Gramm was scheduled to hold a 9 a.m. press conference in San Antonio and a mid-afternoon conference in Austin, said spokesman Larry Neal.

"We plan to have a meeting in the morning to assess Doggett's response to our proposal," Neal told The Associated Press, claiming that Doggett's promise to remove his ads has not been kept.

Doggett on Monday accepted Gramm's challenge at a Houston news conference to cease critical television and campaign remarks. Doggett issued a statement through his office that he has ordered off the air all ads referring to Gramm.

But late Monday, spokesmen for both campaigns said reportedly critical television advertisements were still being aired against each candidate.

Doggett, in the prepared statement, said a face-to-face discussion is needed "because I feel my integrity, character and honor have been called into question and, of course, I'm sure Phil feels the same way."

James Carville, Doggett's campaign chairman, said the agreement for a moratorium lasts only until 10 p.m. Friday. He said that Gramm must have then agreed to a "a factual discussion on statements and campaign ads ired during the coqrse of the general election campaign."

Gramm, appearing with Florida Sen. Paula Hawkins, said he would not even refer to Doggett as "my opponent" in the future — provided Doggett did the same.

"If Mr. Doggett will not mention my name again in this campaign, I will not mention his name in this campaign," said Gramm.

"If he wants the last two weeks to be me telling Texans what I'm for and what I've done and him telling Texans what he's for and what he's done, he will accept my offer."

Gramm said he would "spend the rest of this campaign talking about what I would like to talk about: I wrote a program that put seven million people to work, that brought the inflation rate to a standstill."

Meanwhile, Governor White made some promises of his own, vowing to "fight every step of the way" against further tax increases. White said the education reform measure passed last summer will be "fine-tuned" during the 1985 Texas Legislature.

White, speaking at a breakfast in San Angelo Monday, said he hopes "to avoid any tax increase. And we may be able to do that."

The governor, on a projected shortfall in available funds for all state programs next year, said, "We are not going to be spending more than we have to."

"Of course, we must give a pay raise to state employees. We will try to get a significant pay raise for them. They got a little raise the last time," he said.

Workers, children of day care center are interviewed

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — As state workers interviewed children enrolled at a day-care center about alleged sexual abuse, a number of parents shrugged off the allegations and entrusted their children to the Arlington facility.

Workers with the Department of Human Resources interviewed some 20 children enrolled at the La Petite Academy in this Dallas suburb Monday and said they would talk to another 20 students today.

"I figured they would be watched today better than ever. I wouldn't bring them if I didn't trust the school," said Lisa Riehl of her two sons.

State investigators Monday also interviewed about 10 current and former employees of the facility, where four female employees have been placed on leave of absences following implications of alleged sexual incidents with children.

No charges have been filed and there are no plans to close down the center, where 130 pupils are enrolled, authorities say.

Attendance was down, however, Monday. Parents said at least 30 children attended school Monday but some said they would eventually move their children to another center as soon as they could find one.

"We feel there is something there. We wouldn't be pursuing this unless we felt there was something to it," said Wayne Harigrove, who supervises the Fort Worth office of the state's child protective services unit, which is conducting the investigation.

According to the department, the investigation centers on allegations that La Petite employees undressed or forced children to undress and that they fondled children and also forced the youngsters to fondle staff members.

About six investigators conducted interviews with children, most of which were videotaped and aided by anatomically detailed dolls, Hairgrove said.

Annual event is big business

By The Associated Press

Each October, the state fair is one of the city's biggest business attractions and officials say operating revenues of $9.69 million.

"We spend $4 million in October, and that only represents the state fair's cost of putting on the fair," said general manager Wayne Gallagher. "There's no way for me to know exactly what the exhibitors and vendors spend, but they certainly spend as much as we do. It probably costs $8 million to $10 million total, and that could be low."

State and local taxpayers don't have to pick up any of that tab because the State Fair Association, a private, non-profit corporation, runs the fair, pays the bills and takes in nearly $8 million in revenues in one month's time.

As a year-round operation, the association has not operated in the red since 1973, when it lost $11,478. During the past six years, the fair has made enough money to put $8.3 million into capital improvements at city-owned Fair Park, east of downtown.

SEALED OFF—Troops line a road as they seal off Sebopkeng township Tuesday in one of the largest house to house searches ever carried out in South Africa. Police launch massive sweep for riot leaders in black township

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — About 7,000 police and soldiers sealed off the black township of Sebokeng early today and began a house-to-house search for suspected leaders of two months of anti-government rioting, officials said.

Police spokesman Capt. Marius Dippenaar said that by 7:30 a.m. 251 people had been arrested on charges including illegal possession of guns and stolen goods and drugs, and violation of laws forbidding blacks to live in certain areas without passes.

But the semi-official South African Broadcasting Corp. said more than 340 people were arrested and were expected to appear in court soon.

Police said there was no resistance to the sweep, believed to be among the largest domestic security operations since the Soweto anti-apartheid riots of 1976. Sebokeng is 40 miles south of Johannesburg.

Col. Leon Mellet, spokesman for Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange, said that after two months of disorders, "the government has decided that the situation must now come to an end and law and order must be restored."

Riots and school boycotts involving tens of thousands of students broke out in late August in black comunities around Johannesburg and Pretoria following rent increases imposed in the townships, and prolonged complaints over inferior black education.

Sebokeng has been the scene of some of the worst rioting.

Underlying the violence was resentment in the black majority against apartheid, the system of legalized race separation that keeps the best jobs, schools and houses for the dominent white minority.

At least 80 blacks have been killed in the riots, mostly in clashes with police using birdshot, tear gas and rubber bullets. One white, an infant, was killed.

Names in news

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — It's not every prospective college freshman who tours campus with a Secret Service guard. But then, not everyone looking for a college is Amy Carter, daughter of former President Jimmy Carter.

"I really like it here," the 17-year-old Miss Carter said Monday after touring Brown University with Carter and his wife, Rosalynn.

Amy said her interests tend toward the sciences, including physics — her father's specialty — and astronomy, "but I also love English and ceramics."

If Amy and Brown choose each other — it's one of four schools she's considering for her freshman year next fall — she would be the fifth child of a prominent political family to come here in recent years.

William Mondale and Laura Zaccaro, children of the Democratic presidential and vice presidential candidates, also are students. Ms. Zaccaro's sister Donna graduated in 1983 with John F. Kennedy Jr., son of the late president.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Singer Carole King, known for writing such hit songs as "The Locomotion" and "You've got a Friend," has won a round in her legal battle against Custer County, Idaho, officials who declared an old road through her ranch to be public property.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Monday returned the case to U.S. District Judge Marion Callister in Pocatello, Idaho, to decide whether Ms. King, 42, should have been given notice and a hearing before the county acted.

Callister had ruled Ms. King's rights weren't violated in 1981 when county commissioners declared the road — which had been abandoned in 1939 — to be public property.

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Professional tennis star Ivan Lendl was ticketed for "unsafe movement on a highway" and faces up to a $40 fine after his 1983 Porsche skidded on wet leaves and struck a tree, police said.

The 24-year-old Czechoslovakian suffered minor cuts to his face in the crash Monday afternoon, said Sgt. Douglas Fischer.

Lendl was taken by private car to Greenwich Hospital where he was treated and released, according to emergency room nurse Dolores Nelson.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Dan Haggerty faces arraignment Nov. 6 on two cocaine selling charges, the first filed against an actor "of import" arrested by a year-old entertainment unit of the police department.

Haggerty, television's "Grizzly Adams," was ordered bound over Monday for Superior Court trial on charges he sold 18 grams of cocaine, worth $2,160, to undercover narcotics officers. He is free on $5,000 bond.

HOUSTON (AP) — Christopher C. Kraft, the former director of the National Aeronatics and Space Administration's Johnson Space Center, has been elected to the board of directors of Gulf Teleport Inc., which plans to build a satellite communications network for the Houston area.

Papers devote much attention to debate

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican newspapers devoted substantial space Monday to the final debate between President Reagan and Democratic challenger Walter Mondale, giving special attention to the sections on Central America and immigration.

Although most ran news agency reports from Kansas City, the major daily Excelsior had its own correspondent there. "Central America and Undocumented, Base of the Reagan-Mondale" debate was the headline that ran across Excelsior's front-page.

"President Reagan, upon assuring that the borders of the United States are out of control because of the flow of undocumented workers, anticipated tonight that his government will encourage a new form to the immigration law next year, defended his Central American policy of clandestine war against Nicaragua and said he 'would work closely' with the Contadora group to take peace to that region," the dispatch by Raymundo Riva Palacio started.

Mexico, Panama, Colombia and Venezuela form the Contadora group that has been working since January 1983 to find a peaceful solution to tensions in Central America.

The new newspaper La Jornada, which has taken a left-of-center position, also carried the debate as a front-page story. Its headline read, "Policy toward Central America and Arms Control, Themes of the Debate," with an overline that said observers found the outcome a tie.

Those viewers with cable television here were able to watch NBC News' broadcast of the debate live. Radio VIP, a local station, also broadcast the debate live.

Several newspapers, including El Sol de Mexico, the government newspaper El Nacional and Novedades, ran color photos of the candidates on their front pages.

El Sol de Mexico noted in its headline that Reagan called the United States "an escape valve" for Mexico in his comments on the immigration issue. It also said the theme of East-West relations dominated the debate.

A headline on an inside page of El Nacional read, "Mondale Recriminated Reagan for the Actions of His Government in Central America and Lebanon." In smaller type, it said, "During The Televised Debate ... Between Hems and Haws the President Assures He will Sanction the Guilty One for the Manual of Terrorism."

That referred to Reagan's comments about a manual produced by the CIA endorsing "selective use of violence" against some officials of Nicaragua's leftist government.

The English-language daily The News, in addition to a front-page story from Kansas City headlined "RR, Mondale Exchange Barbs on Leadership," carried a survey of local views that concluded, "Partisan opinion was the only clear-cut result of last night's debate between President Ronald Reagan and challenger Walter Mondale."

Four of the five morning newspapers in the northern city of Monterrey placed news of the debate on the front page. Only one mentioned the immigration issue.

The newspaper El Norte carried the banner headline "The Mexico-United States border is out of control," attributing the well-used phrase to Reagan in a staff-written story that noted, "Mondale showed more flexibility on this theme."

News in brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan did not mean to suggest in his debate with Walter Mondale that the only alternative to Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos is a communist regime in that country, the State Department says.

Spokesman John Hughes, departing Monday from department policy of not interpreting Reagan's remarks, said "I don't think the president was narrowing the situation that far. I think there is certainly recognition on everybody's part that there are other forces working for democratic change in the Philippines."

Reagan had said Sunday when asked what could be done to prevent the Philippines from becoming another Nicaragua, "I know there are things that do not look good to us from the standpoint of democratic rights, but what is the alternative? It is a large communist movement to take over the Philippines."

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Motors Corp. has presented a federal judge with a movie and statistics it hopes will show the rigors of company durability tests during which brake problems occurred in the automaker's 1980 X-cars.

Charles Brady, a GM vice president, testified in U.S. District Court Monday that the company's year-long, 66,000-mile durability tests on the X-cars were "much more severe" than what even the most demanding drivers require of their cars.

The automaker is defending itself against government charges that it sold the 1980 X-cars even though it allegedly knew their brakes were unsafe. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration claims that rear brake lock-up problems that GM detected on the durability tests should have been a warning that there was a potential safety problem for consumers.

LONDON (AP) — The wife of jailed Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky says she has asked Soviet officials for permission to visit her husband after he is shifted to a labor camp Saturday.

Avital Shcharansky said Monday she mailed her request to the Soviet Embassy in London and received confirmation that it arrived. She said it was the first time she has received any kind of acknowledgement of her appeals.

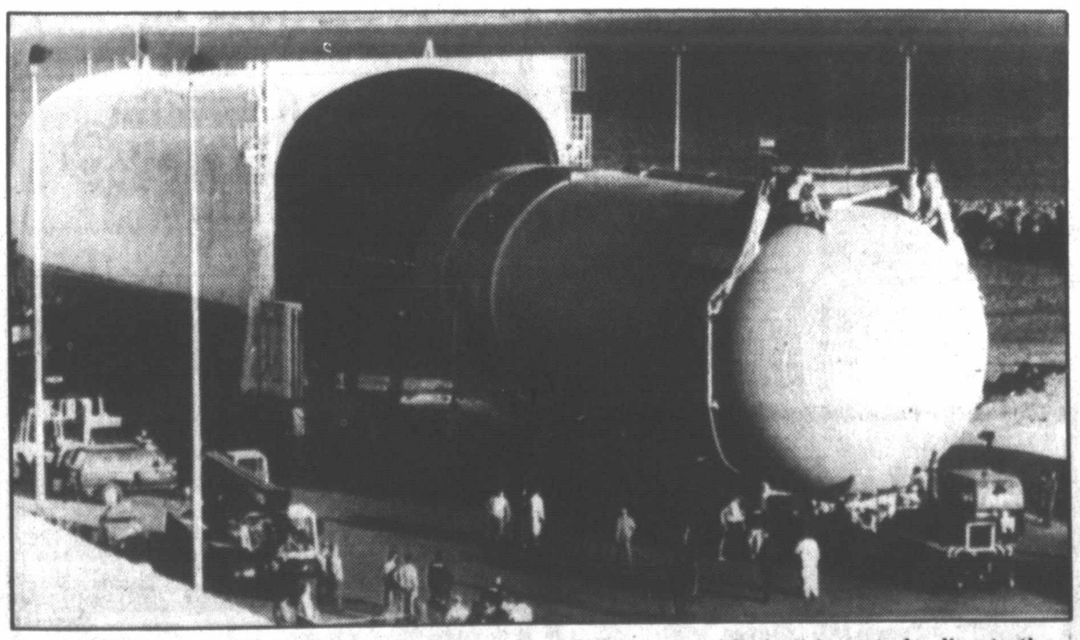
She told a news conference that after his transfer from Chistopol Prison 500 miles east of Moscow to a labor camp, Shcharansky would be allowed to spend three days with his family. She said she hoped to be at the reunion.

Shcharansky, 36, was sentenced in 1978 to 13 years in prison and labor camps on charges of spying for the United States. The Jewish computer programmer says his only crime has been to demand to leave for Israel.

Mrs. Shcharansky lives in Israel and is in Britain to pursue the campaign she has conducted for her husband's freedom since he was arrested.

HOUSTON (AP) — A 33-year-old Pakistani faces deportation after being sentenced to five years' probation on his conviction of trying to export tiny vacuum tubes which can be used as triggers for nuclear weapons.

Nazir Ahmed Vaid pleaded guilty Monday to exporting munitions without a State Department license under a plea-bargain agreement calling for dismissal of conspiracy to export munitions and lying to the government.



SHUTTLE TANK ARRIVES—The first piece of a space shuttle scheduled for launching from the West Coast was unloaded at Vandenberg Air Force Base Sunday. The $21 million external tank, the shuttle's disposable fuel tank, will be used as a "pathfinder" in tests leading to the first launch in October 1985. The tank, made by Martin Marietta, was carried by barge on a month-long ocean trip from Louisiana through the Panama Canal. (AP Laserphoto)
