Reaganville residents 'evicted'

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six people who had spent Thanksgiving night camped in a park across from the White House to protest the plight of the homeless and President Reagan's budget cuts were arrested peacefully early today by U.S. Park Police.

The protestors, and about a dozen others who left when warned that arrests were imminent, had set up a tent city they called "Reaganville" in Lafayette Park.

"There are gaping holes in the president's safety net and they don't want that to become obvious," Mitch Snyder, a spokesman for the Community for Creative Non-Violence told police just before the dawn arrests.

The group sponsored the protest and encouraged the city's homeless to tqke part.

The six people, arrested as they sat in a circle and sang protest songs, were lifted up by officers and put in patrol wagons. Park Police had arrived about 6:30 a.m. EST and the arrests came about 30 minutes later.

Authorities said the six would be charged with two federal misdemeanor counts — camping without a permit on and demonstrating without a permit on national park property — and with violating the District of Columbia's disorderly conduct statute.

The six — four men and two women — could be punished by up to 1: year in jail and fined $500 if found guilty on all three counts.

Only one of those arrested is actually homeless, Mary Ellen Hombs of the protest group said.

After the arrests in Lafayette Park, police arrested three people who had been camped on the sidewalk in front of the White House.

The three, who had been there since July, were charged with camping without a permit on nationnal park property, Park Police said, adding that the arrests were not related to the earlier ones.

Park Police spokeswoman Sandra Alley said police decided to make the later arrests after U.S. District Court Judge Charles Richey ruled Wednesday that authorities could bar activities that "would play havoc with the necessity to maintain peace and quiet" in front of the Executive Mansion.

Ms. Hombs said the three people arrested on the sidewalk were all homeless. If found guilty, they would be jailed for up to six months and fined $500.

Park Police dismantled the tent city the group had established.

"Welcome to Reaganville — Reaganomics at Work," a sign at its entrance had read.

Not many people had chosen to make the encampment home for the night, the first of a campout that the group hopes to run through March 20, the official end of winter.

Reagan and his family are spending a long weekend at their California ranch.

New labor confrontation looms; Invasion threat continues

Meeting of Central Committee coincides with new threat

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A new labor-government confrontation over alleged police brutality appeared to be building up today in Poland's southern coal fields.

The new threat to the nation's chief earner of foreign exchange developed as West European nations said they were nearing the limit of their ability to send aid to shortage-wracked Poland.

It also coincided with today's opening of a meeting of the Polish Communist Party's 200-member Central Committee, convened to discuss ways of easing the nation's economic woes and implementing reforms proposed at the party congress last July. Some observers expected the meeting to be a forum for fresh attacks on the Solidarity labor movement.

Officials of the Solidarity labor federation in the Silesian town of Chorzow accused the local police of beating up and arresting about 20 union militants on Wednesday to stop them putting up union signs around the town. The officials claimed one of the men was hospitalized with a concussion.

Chorzow union leaders called a local factory strike alert and demanded punishment of those responsible for the police action. They said if the demand was not met, "we will gradually intensify the action up to a general strike in the region," which includes the coal mines that produce Poland's principal export.

The government television service reported all those arrested had been released. But there was no word of any action against the police.

The last Solidarity-government crisis over police brutality occurred eight months ago after police on March 19 beat up three union leaders who refused to leave a government-union meeting in the northwest town of Bydgoszc. After a nationwide four-hour warning strike eight days later, the government took disciplinary action against the police to avert a general strike.

Elsewhere in Poland, about 1,500 drillers were on strike in the southern oil fields, farmers were occupying public buildings in three towns, and 100,000 students were striking at 91 colleges and universities.

The leading hardliner on the Communist Party Politburo, Stefan Olszowski, accused the strikers of wanting to destroy Polish communism.

"Political reactionaries and counter-revolutionaries may start provocations aimed at bloodshed," he wrote in the party newspaper Trybuna Ludu. "... But let no one entertain the illusion that he is able to liquidate socialism in Poland."

Poland's Roman Catholic Church said after a two-day meeting of the ruling episcopate that "dark clouds threatening fratricidal struggle" loom above the nation but that Poles should work to solve their problems "regardless of differences (in) political convictions.

"The entire episcopate expresses the conviction that national accord will develop, both in the solution of concrete problems as well as in the creation of new and indispensable structures."

The drying up of West European aid to Poland was discussed at a summit meeting in London of the 10 Common Market nations.

'Invasion humor' helps ease tensions of Polish citizens

By DAN FISHER
The Los Angeles Times

WARSAW, Poland — "Did you hear that the Russians are going to send Poland 500,000 bottles of champagne for New Year's Eve?" A Polish friend asked the other day. "Each one will come with a separate waiter."

Then there was the woman who drove into her local service station only to learn there had been no gasoline delivery. "The Russians aren't sending any," the attendant said with a straight face. "You'll have to siphon it directly from their tanks."

You might call it invasion humor. But whatever you call it, it's probably the only form in which you will hear most Poles talk about the possibility that Moscow will send in the Red Army to stop the Polish renewal.

From a Western point of view, it's not unusual to envision Russian tanks close on the heels of almost every local conflict or provocative new demand by the independent Solidarity trade union. Even with the atmosphere in Poland as peaceful and hopeful as it has been in months, there's an occasional Scare — emanating not from Poland, but from North America or Western Europe.

The other night, the Warsaw correspondent for an American television network had his relaxing evening interrupted by a panicky call from New York asking if it were true that the tanks were in Victory Square here. A rumor to that effect had drifted south from Canada.

A young and apparently very nervous military attache was fooled when Polish soldiers exchanged their summer hats for fur headgear as the weather turned cold. Spotting the fur shapkas, so often identified with the Soviets, he immediately reported that the Russian troops had arrived.

Ask a native if he's worried, however, and he's likely to roll his eyes in disgust and mutter something like: "Oh, come on! It's you Westerners who are always thinking about invasions — not the Russians, and certainly not the Poles." The subject, he will make perfectly clear, is simply not worth discussing.

"Poles have lived in the shadow of the Russian bear for their genetic memory," commented a Western diplomat. "They are used to living with the Soviet threat. But that doesn't mean they feel it will be activated. They can't discount the threat completely, but neither can they worry about it all the time."

The people who talk most about the Soviet threat are Poland's Communist authorities — who raise the threat in order to back up calls for order — and that alone is enough to make many Poles skeptical.

The Kremlin, of course, uses its own propaganda machine to threaten indirectly — often quoting from the East German or Czechoslovak press, which are particularly hostile to the Polish reforms.

"It does not matter whether the counterrevolution is acting openly, as it did in Hungary in 1956, or under the slogan of 'socialism with a human face' as in Czechoslovakia in 1968, or is hiding behind the 'independent trade unions' and is trying to operate legally, so to say," the Soviets quoted a Czechoslovak paper as editorializing recently.

Arms negotiator arrives in Geneva

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Veteran U.S. arms negotiator Paul H. Nitze, vowing to be "reasonable and tough," arrived in Geneva today for talks with the Soviet Union on limiting nuclear arsenals in Europe.

"The present state of anxiety and the imperatives of establishing peace give the United States and the Soviet Union every reason to be sincere in their efforts to reach agreement on the reduction of nuclear weapons," Nitze said in a brief arrival statement.

"I feel that there are prospects for reaching a fair, equitable and verifiable agreement which could be the blueprint for a new era of East-West relations."

The two sides are to sit down Monday for the opening round of deliberations that are widely expected to last for months. Nitze, 74, who has the rank of ambassador, heads the U.S. delegation to the talks on theater nuclear forces, the weaponry trained on targets in Europe.

The negotiations will be the first on nuclear arms for the Reagan administration.

Nitze's Soviet counterpart, Yuli Kvitsinsky, a 45-year-old diplomat, is due here Saturday.

Nitze, who has earned a reputation as a hardliner in years as a arms-control negotiations, is expected lead off for the U.S. side with a formal presentation of the so-called "zero-option" proposal, outlined by President Reagan last week.

The proposal calls for the United States to scrap plans to deploy in Western Europe 108 Pershing II missiles and 464 cruise missiles. The Soviets, in turn, would dismantle their intermediate-range SS-series missiles, which include the formidable, triple-warhead SS-20.

"We think it's an ambitious project, and a correct project," Nitze said, "to get rid of all the intermediate-range weapons. If we could do that, that would be a great success."

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, during a visit this week to Bonn, West Germany, rejected the Reagan proposal. Instead, Brezhnev renewed proposals for a moratorium on deploying medium-range Soviet missile systems in Europe and said the Kremlin might then make a unilateral cut in its medium-range arsenal, "as a gesture of our good will."

Washington balked at the Brezhnev proposal.

Nitze said he will go to Hamburg, West Germany Saturday to confer with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on his talks with Brezhnev.

"We should set deadlines for progress," Nitze said about the talks.

Chili: 'Perfect recreational activity'

By AL MARTINEZ
The Los Angeles Times

LA CRESCENTA, Calif. — Ormly Gumfudgin is leaning over his pot of chili like a warlock over a witch's brew, stirring it with a wooden spoon.

"Chili," he is saying, "is the solution to everything. You cannot make war, for instance, and eat chili at the same time."

He stirs slowly. "You cannot fight with your wife when there is a pot of chili on the stove."

He leans closer, sniffs and closes his eyes. "Chili, in fact, is the world's most perfect recreational activity."

The eyes pop open. "Some, in fact, say chili is an aphrodisiac." A pause. "Better make that the world's second most perfect recreational activity."

Ormly Gumfudgin believes in chili. He cooks chili, eats chili, judges chili, studies chili, writes about chili and thinks chili.

"If everyone practiced cili," he says, holding his wooden spoon like a holy scepter, "it would be a better world." He opens a can of beer and adds emotionally, "Here's to chili."

Ormly Gumfudgin just may be the world's most dedicated chili junkie. He is to chili what Timothy Leary was to psychedelic drugs: the quintessential tout.

He is, he likes to think, the Babe Ruth of chili, each pot over the fence. There was that day in 1971, in fact, when he called his shot and won the California championship cookoff.

So dedicated is Ormly Gumfudgin to the proliferation of chili that he has established his own Ormly Gumfudgin "Memorial" Cookoff, so that when he is gone, his chili will live on.

Ormly Gumfudgin was raised on a Northwest Indian reservation. His real name is C. Stanley Locke. He took the name Ormly Gumfudgin for the same reason he adds cayenne peppers to his pot. Impact.

The world might forget C. Stanley Locke. But history will be kind to Ormly Gumfudgin, the Chili Man.

It is not so much that Gumfudgin, 59, is the world's best chili cook. It's just that he loves chili so much and pops up wherever serious chili is being cooked.

Last year, for instance, he judged 53 cookoffs. Since 1975, he has judged more than 200.

"Chili is a great leveler," he is saying, reaching into a paper marked "Secret Ingredients." "Bank presidents cook chili right next to ditch diggrs. Chili is without class distinction."

He ponders that for a moment, impressed with his own notion. "It's like you can't fight a war naked. Without uniforms, everybody is the same.

"A naked cookoff," he muses. "Something to think about...."

Gumfudgin is in the kitchen of his La Crescenta home in the foothill area north of Los Angeles, which he shares with his wife. From his paper bag, he takes a pinch of gold leaf and adds it to his chili.

"This is a special kind of gold leaf," he says in an adopted Texas drawl that seems to fit his lean, 6-foot-2 frame and perpetual squint. "It will melt in chili. Anything melts in chili. I put it in to honor the 49ers."

A pinch of ginseng root. "That's to honor the Chinese for helping settle the West."

Some vitamin E. "Fights the effects of smog."

He stirs it all into the bubbling chili. "Knew a cowboy in Texas who used to add ground rattlesnake rattlers and dehydrated frog testicles. There are a lot of ways to make chili."

He stops to light a corncob pipe. Once more image.

Chicago wants fair

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major world's fair commemorating the 500th anniversary of the landing of Columbus in the New World may be held in Chicago in 1992, the Commerce Department says.

The theme of the fair would be "Discovery," the department said in a prepared statement. U.S. officials are to ask the Bureau of International Expositions to reserve the date for Chicago at its meeting next month in Paris.

The 1893 world's fair in Chicago also was held to commemorate the landing, the Commerce statement noted.

'Depression' gene discovered

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The discovery of a gene that makes people susceptible to depression may allow doctors to predict the odds that couples will produce children who suffer from this form of mental illness, researchers say.

"We see it (depression) coming down both family pathways of people who are being married," said Dr. Harvey Stancer. "We are concerned, and we want to give people precise information."

Stancer said doctors may also learn to identify children who risk developing depression when they get older so that they can receive treatment.

Researchers have long suspected that depression is inherited, but the new research locates the exact spot in people's genetic material that passes on susceptibility to the disease.

Stancer, a psychologist at the University of Toronto, and Dr. Lowell Weitkamp, a geneticist at the University of Rochester Medical School, discovered the gene while examining blood samples from 20 families whose members were afflicted with depression.

Although everyone feels sad from time to time, severe depression is a mental illness that afflicts 1 or 2 percent of all Americans. Victims may feel bad for a long time or they may experience wide mood swings, a condition called manic-depressive psychosis.

"We conclude that genes at a locus on chromosome 6 make a major contribution to susceptibility to depressive illness," the doctors wrote in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

They say one or more genes may be involved in passing on the susceptibility for depression from parent to child. The genes are located near a section of the genetic material that controls the HLA system, which helps regulate the body's immune response.

The makeup of this system varies from person to person, and susceptibility to more than 40 diseases has been found to be related to specific HLA types.

The doctors say their findings add support to the theory that depression, like these other diseases, could be related to a defect in the body's immune system.

However, they cautioned that many factors may contribute to the development of depression.

"Earlier ideas of a single, simplistic substance causing this disorder, I think, are terribly naive," Stancer said. "This suggests that it is much more complex."

Basin area arts projects to receive state funding

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Commission on the Arts has approved two grants to fund dance, music, education, community arts and other projects in the Midland area.

The grants will fund projects during the 1982 and 1983 fiscal years.

The Midland area grants include:

—Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, Cabaret Pops Series, $5,000 in general support.

—Big Spring Chamber of Commerce, symphony series, $3,500 in general supoort.

The commission voted not to finance a ballet project entitled "A Texas Duet" by the Odessa Cultural Council. The council had asked for $3,305 to fund that project.

Taking on lifetime commitment

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — At 18, Stephanie Palmer welcomed the baby girl she had out of wedlock. But marriage? She wanted to wait until she was more mature.

"Yea, we have a kid, but marriage is a big responsibility," says Miss Palmer, now 20 and living in New York City with her 2-year-old daughter, Chastity.

"Everybody knows what it's like dealing with a child, but not everybody can deal with a husband," she said. "I think I'll be a better wife when I get older."

Many young, unmarried mothers like Miss Palmer are viewing marriage with more fear than child bearing or child rearing.

And one of the results has been a soaring rate of out-of-wedlock births — nearly one in three white teen-agers and more than four out of five black teen-agers giving birth in 1979 were not married, according to the Urban Institute's analysis of recent Census Bureau figures.

This is all happening despite the fact that birth control is more widely available and abortion is more accepted. Among the reasons, experts say, is that more women want to marry at a later age and there is less of a social stigma for an unmarried mother who decides to keep her child.

"The trend has been for unmarried teen-agers who have babies to keep them, where more of them used to give the babies up for adoption," says Barbara Parks, spokeswoman for the Alan Guttmacher Institute. The institute, in 1978 studies for the Planned Parenthood Federation of America Inc., found that 96 percent of all the unwed teen-agers who gave birth kept the baby.

"There seems to be less of a stigma for unwed teen-agers to be walking around pregnant," Ms. Parks said. "And those who do not want their baby — and would have given it up for adoption — now are having abortions."

But for poorer young mothers, birth control and abortion are not so easily available. And many of them come from families where single parenthood is the rule, rather than the exception.

They may have given little thought to becoming pregnant, but once pregnant they are thoughtful and reluctant to head down the aisle with the child's father — or anyone else.

Valerie Rodriguez of Brooklyn miscarried when she was 17 and gave birth to her first baby at 18 — all the while living with her boyfriend. In an earlier time, a girl in her position might have considered holding a quick wedding.

But while Miss Rodriguez willingly entered into the lifetime commitment of motherhood, she was afraid of that other lifetime commitment — marriage.

"Marriage was just too heavy a responsibility," says Miss Rodriguez.

Now her daughter is 15 months old, and her boyfriend has moved out.

Isn't being a single mother a heavy responsibility?

"I never thought about that," she says. "I feel good when I take care of Nina. Sometimes I just sit down and look at her and start crying I'm so happy."

An estimated 597,800 out-of-wedlock babies were born in America during 1979, the most recent year for which comprehensive national statistics have been compiled. That's 17 percent of all births, compared with 10.7 percent of all births in 1970.

Fifty-five percent of the black babies were born to unwed mothers, compared to 38 percent in 1970. But the percentage increase among white unwed mothers was even steeper, rising from 5.7 percent of all births in 1970 to 9.4 percent in 1979.

In some ways, the plight of the unwed teen-age mother today is not so different from earlier generations. They feel outside the mainstream of adolescent life — while their friends are double-dating, they are changing diapers. Their peers are pondering the future; theirs already has been set.

"After Chastity came along, I knew I had to begin making exceptions," said Miss Palmer of the Bronx. "From then on, I was thinking about her, planning for her. Once you get pregnant you know you have to stop doing the things you used to do.

"I had planned to do other things with my life, but you don't always get what you want."

There are other problems facing these young, unwed mothers. Family members, friends and even strangers voice doubts about their aptitude for motherhood. In many cases, they were women who had difficulty taking care of their own lives. Suddenly, they're responsible for another.

People sometimes stare at Irene Trujillo, 18, and her daughter, Kimberly, 2. "They ask me how someone so young can be a good mother," she says. "I know I'm young, but I can handle it. I had her with no regrets. I've always wanted to be a mother."

Fire ant fight set

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown says he is going to Washington to plan an "all-out war in the spring" against invading fire ants.

Brown said Wednesday the ants are "marching like Sherman's army across the South" and have hopped planes and trucks in spreading as far west as San Angelo.

Brown, president of a Southern agriculture commissioners group, said he would meet with administrator Anne Gorsuch of the Environmental Protection Agency and other commissioners on Monday and Tuesday.

He said nine states — North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas — are infested, and ants have spread to 107 Texas counties.

Official says Europeans suffering 'angst'

By ROBERT SCHEER
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — A high Pentagon official who plays a key role in the formulation of U.S. arms-control policy has derided the European anti-war movement as the product of "Protestant angst" and has charged European church leaders with exploiting fear of nuclear war in order to revive flagging church membership.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard N. Perle also charged there is "heavy-duty Soviet involvement" in the movement, which has mobilized hundreds of thousands of Europeans in demonstrations against the proposed deployment of U.S.-made Pershing 2 and ground-launched cruise missiles on the continent.

Perle, co-chairman of an interagency group preparing for next week's negotiations on deployment of intermediate-range nuclear forces in Europe, said that the demonstrations are a result of "Protestant preoccupation" with the loss of moral values in the face of material prosperity.

In a rambling three-hour interview with the Los Angeles Times last Friday Perle said, "It's a remarkable thing that the churches in countries where organized religion has suffered a decline in recent years should be revitalized over the issues of disarmament and neutralism. I had a Dutch friend tell me that the disarmament campaign has been good for the membership drive in the church.

"With the ability to bring people into the churches with seminars on GLCMs (ground-launched cruise missiles) and Pershing 2s, you can hardly blame the clergy for holding seminars on GLCMs and Pershing 2s."

He also charged that the church-led demonstrations have coincided with Communist efforts to manipulate European opinion against deployment of U.S. nuclear weapons.

"There is an element of Soviet involvement and indigenous Communist involvement," he said. "The movement is not nearly so well-intentioned. It's not simply a search for a more moral universe.

"There's a united front element in all of this and there's a heavy duty Soviet involvement ... Some of these demonstrations have been planned and organized in East Germany."

Perle's attack on the European movement takes on added significance because he currently is chairman of the so-called High Level Group of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, which includes representatives of defense ministries and is the logical forum for debates within the alliance about strategy and policy.

Perle, who is Jewish, drew a distinction between "Protestant Northern Europe," which has been the scene of massive demonstrations against the new NATO deployment, and the "Catholic South," where, he said, support for the new weapons is solid. The difference, he said, is the Protestants are suffering from angst — a gloomy, often neurotic feeling of anxiety or depression.

"I refer to it as Protestant angst because when you look to Catholic Europe, when you look at Portugal and Spain and Italy, when you look at Greece and Turkey — which are not Catholic but they're not Protestant either — you find a very different attitude, a much greater awareness of the danger of military imbalance, a greater willingness to make sacrifices for defense."

Perle's remarks came two days before Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou announced that his government intended to move for withdrawal of U.S. bases and NATO nuclear weapons from Greece.

"There really is a dividing line, and France is a remarkable place with a socialist government but on the whole is a good deal more concerned about the military imbalance than Germany or the Netherlands or Scandinavia."

"It's happening in Protestant Europe, and there's no question it's angst," Perle said. "It's a sense of fear and anxiety — troubled people, troubled governments, troubled coalitions. And it's happened before and it will happen again, and I think it's a phase that they will go through, and we will have to go through it, holding their hand."

He said, however, that "there are some signs now that the Catholic Church is beginning to get involved along lines of what we've seen in the Protestant churches" and that "it could become Catholic angst."

Perle discounted European concern about the spiraling arms race. "There are no troops dying on battlefields in Europe or, for that matter, anywhere else that Europe is involved," Perle said.

What is involved, he said, is "fear of the future ... fear of nuclear war, and yet there's no reason to believe that nuclear war is any closer today than it was five years ago when these attitudes weren't much in evidence.

"Look, if there were an arms race, the arms race itself should not be a cause of fear," Perle said. "The arms races that historically led to war were not arms races in which contending parties maintained a reasonable balance. They were arms races in which one party maintained an advantage sufficient to believe that it had something to gain by going to war."

Insights into Allen's dealings with Japan

By LEE LESCAZE
The Washington Post

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — White House officials Wednesday offered their first explanation of how the written questions and answers were exchanged between the Japanese magazine Shufu no Tomo and Nancy Reagan.

The written questions were given to Mrs. Reagan's chief of staff, Peter McCoy, by former Reagan speechwriter Peter D. Hannaford the day after the Jan. 21 interview of Mrs. Reagan by Japanese journalists, according to officials who did not want to be identified. Hannaford explained that the Japanese interviewers needed additional information to supplement their brief face-to-face meeting with Mrs. Reagan.

Sheila Tate, the First Lady's press secretary, was given the questions by McCoy and prepared the answers. When the answers were ready, McCoy notified Hannaford on Feb. 11 and they were telexed to the Japanese magazine by Hannaford's firm, Potomac International, according to CBS News.

Hannaford purchased Potomac International from White House national security adviser Richard V. Allen just before Reagan's inauguration on Jan. 20. Allen is being investigated by the Justice Department in connection with $1,000 in cash that he was handed by the Japanese interviewers.

Allen has said he intended to give the Treasury the money, offered as a thank-you gift for Mrs. Reagan, but forgot about it until the cash was discovered in a safe eight months later.

Allen denies participating in preparing written answers for the magazine, which sent three women — including Chizaku Takase, the wife of a long-time friend and business associate of Allen — to interview Mrs. Reagan.

Tate earlier had refused to answer questions about the written questions and answers. McCoy was asked last week if Hannaford had telephoned him a few days before the inauguration to confirm the Japanese interviewers' appointment with Mrs. Reagan. He said then that he had no recollection of such a telephone call, but that he would not dispute Hannaford's statement that such a call had taken place.

McCoy made no mention of receiving written questions from Hannaford or of notifiying Hannaford that the answers were ready.

On March 23, Takase escorted Shoichiro Toyoda, the No. 2 official in the Toyota corporation, to Allen's White House office for a meeting that included discussion of delicate auto-import talks then in progress. As Potomac president, Allen had been a paid consultant to a Toyota parts manufacturing affiliate, Aisin Seiki Co. Ltd.

After meeting with Allen in March, Takase returned to Japan and, on April 15, briefed a symposium of Japanese corporate leaders on Allen's views of the import talks.

Allen also has met occasionally with Yasuhiko Suzuki, Washington vice president of Nissan U.S.A., the marketing company for Datsun. Suzuki had paid Allen a reported $100,000 annual retainer from 1977 to October 1980.

Because of Allen's relationship with Datsun, White House officials have said that he did not participate in decisions earlier this year aimed at reducing levels of Japanese auto imports.

However, the White House later acknowledged that Allen sat in on meetings between President Reagan and then-Japanese foreign minister Masayoshi Ito and former prime minister Takeo Fukuda, both of whom discussed the import issue with the president.

Allen has maintained an especially close relationship with Hannaford that, according to Hannaford, has included regular contacts, dinners and some consultations about the proper "protocols" for Potomac clients. One source said that Allen and Hannaford had met with at least one foreign diplomat since Jan. 20 to introduce Hannaford as a "contact" man to the administration.

Sources in the international consulting community have said in interviews over the last several months that Takase has represented himself in Japan as someone with access to the Reagan administration by virtue of his close relationship with Allen.

Meanwhile, a White House aide stressed Wednesday that no decision has been made on whether Allen would stay on if Attorney General William French Smith decides that the case should be turned over to a special prosecutor under the Ethics in Government Act.

"I think it is fair to say there are many in the White House ... who feel that Dick himself might well step aside ... but I'm not aware of any decision being made," the aide said.

Restaurant owners thank Vietnam vets with dinners

HOUSTON (AP) — Three Vietnamese restautants owners thanked dozens of American veterans for fighting for their fallen homeland with free Thanksgiving dinners.

For Walter Hawver, a clerk-typist at the Veterans Administration Medical Center here, it was his first taste of Vietnamese food since he left that country in February 1972.

"I volunteered for service in Vietnam, and when somebody gives you thanks it feels good," said Hawver, who dined on barbecued pork chops and pressed rice.

The idea was the brainchild of Ly Van Nguyen, 31, a Vietnmese film editor who works for television station KHTV, Channel 39. He helped an American network film the Vietnam war for four years and immigrated to the United States in 1975.

Upset at the treatment of the returning veterans, Ly Van Nguyen said he wanted to "thank God and the people who suffered by the war ... to pay thanks to others in the Vietnam war who fought side by side with us."

Midlanders can expect more mild weather this weekend

Continued mild weather conditions are expected this weekend, according to the National Weather Service.

Fair skies should reign tonight, while partly cloudy conditions Saturday will result in an afternoon high in the upper 60s.

Thursday's high was 63, some 20 degrees below the all-time record for the date established in 1961. The low of 40 degrees, meanwhile, was pleasant in comparison with the record 16 set in 1938.

Winds are expected to be southeasterly at 5-10 mph tonight and and southerly at 10-15 mph Saturday.

Burn victim out of hospital following electrical accident

A 25-year-old Midland man was released from Midland Memorial Hospital's emergency room this morning after being treated for burns he received in an electrical accident east of the city.

Sgt. David Cobos of the Midland County Sheriff's Department said Wyn King was moving a cattle guard about 8:30 a.m. today when the accident occurred. Sgt. Cobos said King was not in the truck at the time of the accident, but was standing beside the truck when the vehicle's boom came into contact with a power wire.

According to the officer, King's father, Goodman King, pulled the man away from the area of the accident.

Hospital officials said King was treated for burns to his arms and legs and a cut on the back of his head. A hospital spokesperson added that King was "pretty lucky" to have not been more severely injured.

Three Midlanders booked today on cocaine possession

Two Midland women and a Midland man were booked into City Jail early today on suspicion of possessing cocaine, according to police reports, but Thanksgiving Day criminal activity was light.

Officers reported arresting the two women, ages 27 and 21, and the man, age 20, in a ladies' restroom in the Midland Hilton at 12:52 a.m. today. The officers said they had stopped by the Hilton's Discovery Lounge on a routine check when a woman exited the ladies' restroom and informed them a man was inside it.

Upon entering the restroom, the officers found the three people in one of the restroom's stalls and reportedly recovered a syringe and a packet of a substance which a field test showed to be cocaine.

In other police activity, Ravonda Edmond of Mesquite reported the theft of a brown tweed tote bag from her room in a local motel Thursday afternoon.

She told police the theft occurred between 12:30 p.m. and 2:45 p.m. at 4300 West Highway 80. The tote bag contained a brown leather purse, keys, a blow dryer, a set of electric hair curlers and other miscellaneous items.

Midland firefighters spent about an hour Thursday extinguishing a fire at the home of Joe Regan at 111 Thornridge Drive.

The fire caused heavy damage to a bedroom at the residence and moderate smoke damage to the remainder of the house. Eleven firefighters battled the blaze.

According to fire reports, probable cause was a short in an electric blanket.

Allen's dealings may result in conflicts

By PATRICK E. TYLER
LEE LESCAZE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Since becoming White House national security adviser, Richard V. Allen has received monthly payments from the sale of his interest in a Washington consulting firm, some of whose clients he has continued to meet with and advise on an ad hoc basis.

The payments, geared to retire a total debt to Allen of between $100,000 and $250,000, were revealed Wednesday when Allen amended for the second time in eight days a financial disclosure statement he filed last February with White House counsel Fred Fielding.

It had been reported that Allen sold the firm, Potomac International Corp., to Peter D. Hannaford, a former aide and speechwriter for Ronald Reagan before his election as president.

It had not been reported that, instead of paying a lump sum for Allen's interest or financing the sale through a bank, Hannaford entered a debtor relationship with Allen, agreeing to pay him on an installment plan, the terms of which White House officials would not disclose. This arrangement raises questions of whether a conflict of interest has arisen since Inauguration Day in Allen's regular contact with Hannaford, Hannaford's clients and a Japanese professor who had served Allen and now Hannaford as a conduit to some Japanese industrial leaders.

Allen and Hannaford were not available for comment earlier this week.

Fielding's deputy, Richard Hauser, said White House officials had looked at whether Allen was in a conflict-of-interest position with Hannaford. He said they decided that "it's an argument that can be made, but I don't think it's all that real. If you own stock in Exxon, you hope they do well so the value doesn't go down, I suppose. But I looked at that side, too, and I don't think it is a prohibitive relationship."

In another development Wednesday, a White House aide who asked not to be named said Allen "might well decide to step aside" if a special prosecutor is appointed to look into a $1,000 payment Allen received from a Japanese journalist. Also, Allen's personal secretary, Irene G. Derus, told a television reporter in front of her Chevy Chase, Md., home Wednesday morning that Allen always intended to turn over to proper authorities the $1,000 thank-you fee given him in the White House Jan. 21 by Japanese magazine reporters. Instead, the money was put in a safe where it was accidentally discovered in September.

At least a dozen other National Security Council officials, including two secretaries working in Allen's West Wing office, said in interviews that Allen never mentioned the cash-filled envelope to them and that they learned about its discovery in the press.

Allen amended his financial disclosure statement for the first time Nov. 17 after a Washington Post inquiry to Fielding's office sought to resolve conflicting statements by Allen and Hannaford on when the consulting firm changed hands.

Hannaford had said in an interview that the sale occurred last Jan. 18, two days before the Inauguration. Allen said in his disclosure statement that he sold the business in January 1978.

In a note to Fielding after The Post inquiry, Allen said, "I provided the wrong date for one of the entries. Actually, I remained president of Potomac International Corp. until January 1981, as opposed to the way it is stated: 'January 1978.' "

Allen's correction prompted a review of the transaction by Hauser, who discovered that Allen had failed to state the value of his interest in Potomac when he sold it. During this review, Hauser said, he found several other minor errors and omissions, all of which were corrected Wednesday.

During the review, Hauser and other White House officials discussed whether Allen's position as a creditor to Hannaford gave Allen a direct interest in the corporation's continued success. If that were the case, any assistance by Allen in providing advice or information useful to Hannaford's clients could pose ethical problems for Allen.

Several contacts between Allen and his former business associates in the last two weeks have been reported in detail. Allen also has acknowledged that he has met as many as four times this year in the White House with Tamotsu Takase, the Japanese professor and consultant with whom he worked jointly to advise Japanese automobile and industrial executives.

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., stands on Capital Hill during a news conference earlier this week, with both hands full of Social Security checks which were mailed to a woman who died nine years ago, the mother of one of his constituents. The checks were mailed despite repeated attempts to get the Social Security Commission to stop the payments. Livingston has charged that the commission has mailed $60 million in checks to dead people over a period of years.

'Secret' deductions tried for Congress

By WILLIAM J. EATON
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — A plan to assure many members of Congress special, unlimited tax deductions for the cost of owning or renting a home in the Washington area was slipped through Congress "in substantial secrecy" last week, a private research group charged Wednesday.

The proposal, a rider to a stop-gap appropriations bill, subsequently was killed when President Reagan vetoed the bill in a dispute with Congress over cuts in government spending.

BUT THE SPECIAL tax provisions, criticized as a "backdoor pay raise" for members of Congress, may be revived for passage separately in the House and Senate later this year, according to the research group, Tax Analysts of Arlington, Va.

Under current law, members of Congress may deduct from taxable income all expenses in connection with the operation of a second home or apartment in Washington on the theory that these outlays are required business expenses.

But another part of the tax code forbids such deductions if members of the taxpayer's family live there for more than two weeks each month.

The measure that almost was enacted into law would have removed that limitation, allowing members of Congress who have their families in Washington to deduct all the costs of depreciation, repairs and other living expenses.

"FOR YOU OR ME, those deductions for living in our own home would be considered non-deductible, personal expenses," said Tom Field, publisher of Tax Notes, a weekly report on tax developments issued by Tax Analysts.

"It's an absurd way to give a Congressional pay raise," Field told a reporter. "The size of the 'raise' would be linked to the size and value of a Congressman's home or apartment.... Some members of Congress will make out like bandits and others would get no benefit at all."

A copyrighted story in the Nov. 30 issue of Tax Notes charged that the plan to alter the provision and allow deductions for Washington homes of lawmakers who have their families here was conducted "in substantial secrecy" by the House Ways and Means committee and the Senate Finance Committee.

Repeated efforts to reach members of the committees during the Thanksgiving congressional recess were not successful.

TAX NOTES SAID the first public mention of the significance of the proposal came when Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, replied to questions on the Senate floor last Thursday during the uproar over the government funding bill.

In the House Ways and Means committee, the provision was "portrayed as nothing more than a technical adjustment" in the tax laws, the publication said.

It was then approved on a voice vote and given a high priority for action under rules that forbid amendments but require a two-thirds vote for passage. The procedure usually is reserved for non-controversial bills.

Defending the revision in the Senate debate, Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance committee said: "This Senator cannot conceive of anyone who would argue that any member should be denied a business deduction because his family was willing to come to Washington to join him."

THE LAW, HOWEVER, has been interpreted by the Internal Revenue Service as barring taxpayers from taking business deductions for a home or apartment that is also used as a personal residence, Tax Notes said.

Field estimated that the provision would assure a typical member of Congress a savings of $5,000 to $10,000 a year on federal income taxes.

"The larger and more expensive the home, the larger the deduction," he said. "I think it would have been fairer to simply vote an across-the-board pay increase for all members of Congress."

Field also criticized the procedures used by Congress to pass the measure.

"Until the final moment, there was a conscious effort by members of the tax committees of Congress and their staffs to conceal the possible benefit of these provisions to members of Congress," he said.

"THE REAL PURPOSE of this resolution was successfully concealed and — but for the president's veto of the continuing appropriations resolution — would have become law."

She says she's no Moonie . . .

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mary-Lee Hall says she is in New York of her own free will, not as a captive of the Unification Church, and doesn't intend to appear before a San Francisco judge who may hold church leaders in contempt for not producing her.

Superior Court Judge Ira Brown ordered last week that officials of the church founded by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon bring Miss Hall to his courtroom by Wednesday after her mother and sister alleged she was being held against her will.

Miss Hall, who is from New Zealand, did not appear and church lawyers said they had not been able to convince her to appear. Brown then ordered a contempt-of-court hearing to be held. No date was set.

After the ruling, Miss Hall said at a news conference in New York that she was there voluntarily and chose not to go to San Francisco "because I didn't have to and it goes against my right of privacy."

"I want to be here," she added. "This is where I'm finding happiness, a satisfying life."

In a later telephone interview, she denied being a member of the church, explaining that she was a member of the Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles. She described CARP as a "separate organization inspired by Rev. Moon."

Miss Hall, 22, said her mother and sister should let the matter drop and go back to New Zealand.

"I consider this a family matter, and I don't consider any more fuss should be made," she said.

But her sister, Anna-Lyn, 21, said she and her mother Lena Hall "won't go home until we see Mary-Lee."

Mary-Lee Hall has said she once arranged to meet her mother and sister in California, but only her sister showed up with a man who her friends believe was a "deprogrammer."

"I feel my sister has taken a very domineering position ... she's just gotten carried away," she said. "I feel she should return to lead a life of her own and allow me to do the same."

At the hearing, Frank McCabe and other church lawyers produced an affidavit from Miss Hall's attorney, William Leibovitz, saying his client was in New York and planned to stay there.

"He advises us she is there and she is healthy and happy and does not intend to come to San Francisco," McCabe said, adding, "We urged him to advise her to come."

The church lawyers protested they had no control over Miss Hall and could not force her to appear before Brown.

But her sister claimed the church had "hired a team of lawyers to keep us away from Mary-Lee. That just proves they're family-breakers.

"The last time I talked to Mary-Lee, she was crying over the phone. She wants to see us," she said.

Miss Hall left her family's New Zealand dairy farm almost three years ago and said she stayed temporarily in California before going to New York.

Matthew Morrison, the church's director for northern California, said CARP is not run by the church. But Brown said last week "the evidence has shown that CARP is an arm of the church."

Mid East peace meeting held

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir met today with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. to hear a last-minute U.S. plea for Israel not to veto European participation in a Sinai peacekeeping force.

Shamir, who arrived in Washington on a flight from Israel earlier today, was met at the State Department by Nicholas Veliotes, the assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs. He then went directly to the meeting with Haig.

Haig asked Shamir to come to Washington for the hastily arranged meeting in hopes of finding a way around an impasse with the Jewish state over European participation in a Sinai peacekeeping force. The impasse results from statements made by the European countries favoring Palestine Liberation Organization participation in Mideast peace negotiations.

Shamir declared before taking his all-night flight from Tel Aviv that Europe's "conditions are unacceptable."

An Israeli source said Shamir's opening position in the talks with Haig would be that "the Europeans are unacceptable with the statements, but are acceptable without the statements."

But the source, who requested anonymity, said there might be some way out of the impasse because both the United States and Israel "want European participation."

It was thought possible the Israelis might agree to postpone a decision, now set for Sunday, on whether to accept the Europeans as part of the Sinai force.

Shamir was scheduled to return to Israel almost immediately following the meeting with Haig, which was expected to last several hours.

The Israeli government also sent a military team here to resume discussions at the Pentagon on new strategic ties with the United States.

A U.S. plan, submitted to the Israelis 10 days ago, called for stockpiling American medical supplies in Israel and some token military cooperation. It fell short of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's hopes for closer ties between the two countries.

The disputes over European peacekeepers and Middle East strategy are straining U.S.-Israeli relations again.

U.S.-Israeli relations have had several jolts this year.

Houston power agency's bond rating lowered

HOUSTON (AP) — In response to Houston Lighting & Power's continued problems in building the South Texas Nuclear Project, one of the nation's two top bonding agencies has lowered the utility's rating.

HL&P is the controlling partner in the beleaguered nuclear plant, under construction near Bay City.

Standard & Poor's announced it had downgraded HL&P's first mortage bond rating from AA to A-plus, citing the "unprecedented dismissal" last September of Brown & Root as engineering, design and construction manager of the project.

But HL&P still has "one of the better ratings," said a Standard & Poor's analyst, noting that an A-plus rating ranks the company in the top half of the nation's utilities.

Standard & Poor's announced the decision in a written statement Tuesday, one month after it placed HL&P on its "credit watch" list and a year after the country's other major bond rating agency, Moody's, lowered HL&P's bond rating from AA to A.

HL&P officials had said the firing of Brown & Root was justified by repeated construction delays. Construction started in 1975, with the original price tag set at $789 million. Today, utility officials estimate the final cost at about $4.8 billion with the first reactor set to go on line in 1986.

Meanwhile, two of HL&P's three partners in the project have decided to bail out. San Antonio officials said recently they wanted to sell that city's 28-percent share and Austin citizens voted earlier this month to withdraw. Corpus Christi is the other partner.

"There's a lot of uncertainity surrounding the construction of that plant," said Charles Jakucionis, a rating analyst for Standard & Poor's.

The rating change means HL&P will have to pay higher interest rates for bonds issued to finance further construction.

A spokesman for Standard & Poor's said HL&P probably will have to pay about 16.5 percent to private investors who buy the bonds — a quarter of a percent increase. That means the company will pay about $250,000 more a year in interest on every $100 million in bonds it issues.

HL&P spokesman Graham Painter said the company plans to issue billions of dollars in bonds in the next decade to build plants to meet increased demands for electricity.

"Eventually, it's the consumer who will have to pay for that increase," Painter said.

Maybe he didn't try to strangle swan, but it sure looked that way

HIGHLAND PARK, Texas (AP) — Dale Cope's love of animals has gotten him into trouble again. This time, the man who professes to adore cats has been accused of trying to strangle the governor's swan.

Cope and his family have spent several nights in jail for having too many cats prowling the grounds of their home in this fashionable Dallas suburb.

Cope, 30, spent a night and morning in Highland Park Jail earlier this week as officers tried to establish whether he tried to strangle an Australian black swan belonging to Gov. Bill Clements, said Police Chief Henry Gardner.

"I'm not a swan strangler," Cope said, explaining that he was only trying to help the bird when a woman spotted him wielding a piece of coathanger on the flapping fowl.

"It was hung up in some fishing lines, and it had a hook in its mouth with a big blob of line tangled around him," Cope said.

He said he chased the bird, tackled it, and, using a piece of metal, extracted the hook from a corner of its beak.

After the episode, Gardner said, the neck of the stately state swan "looked a little out of joint. It didn't have that graceful curve the birds are noted for."

Cope said, "Thinking back, I guess I could see how it might look. The swan was flapping pretty hard."

Cope, who was released on his own recognizance, said it was Tuesday before police told him whose swan he had swooped.

Garner said Wednesday there will be no prosecution "at the request of the swan's owner."

Cope, his twin brother Dennis, and his mother, Dorothy, all have spent at least one night in the Highland Park jail because of their love of cats.

A local ordinance prohibits families from keeping more than three cats. The Highland Park Animal Control Department never came up with a total, but wardens collected one of the Copes' cats every night for 23 consecutive nights.

Mrs. Cope, who with her sons lives in a home gained through an inheritance, has spent six weekends in the town jail because she could not pay the fines on the 14 citations filed against her.

"Animals," Mrs. Cope said, "are our friends. Dale wouldn't hurt the governor's swans. He likes animals."

Puzzle working uncourtly action

By GENE BLAKE
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — A $9.2 million judgment against Ford Motor Co. in an automobile accident case was reversed Wednesday by the California Court of Appeal on the grounds that one juror was working crossword puzzles and another was reading a novel during the trial.

Such activity during the taking of evidence constitutes jury misconduct, said the opinion by Superior Court Judge Roberta Ralph, assigned temporarily to the appellate court in Los Angeles.

"A crossword puzzle-working juror attempting to ascertain the proper word has a closed mind, or at minimum, an interrupted attention span," Ralph wrote.

"Similarly a novel-reading juror cannot concentrate on both the flow of the plot and the flow of the testimony," she added. "Such inattention implies prejudgment of the case, which is misconduct."

The appellate opinion noted that the jurors, who were not identified, did not deny working the crossword puzzles or reading the novel. The novel was identified as "A Night n Byzantium."

The fact that the jurors submitted declarations denying that their activity resulted in bias should not have been considered, wrote Ralph, joined by Acting Presiding Justice Herbert L. Ashby and Justice James H. Hastings.

"Nothing admissible appears in the record herein to rebut the presumption of prejudice which arises from such juror misconduct," Ralph wrote. "The inescapable conclusion is that the parties did not have 12 unbiased, impartial jurors."

The judgment must be reversed for a new trial on all issues by an unbiased jury, the court said.

It was the second time a judgment in favor of the accident victim, James M. Hasson, was reversed on appeal.

The case grew out of an accident July 17, 1970, when a 1966 Lincoln Continental suffered a brake failure and crashed into a wall.

The car was destroyed and Hasson, 19 at the time, was severely disabled. Suit was brought against Ford Motor Co. through his father, Jack M. Hasson.

The first trial was conducted in 1973 and the second in 1978. Jurors in the second trial awarded the plaintiffs $7.5 million in actual damages and $4 million punitive damages.

El Paso man says he didn't threaten Reagan

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An El Paso, Texas, man has pleaded innocent in U.S. Magistrate Court here to a charge that he threatened to kill President Reagan.

Alfred Leroy Baker, 38, is accused of mailing a letter May 2 to the president saying, "Nothing personal, sir, but I'm going to kill you."

U.S. Magistrate Robert W. McCoy on Wednesday set a trial date of Jan. 11 for Baker, who is to be tried before U.S. District Judge Juan G. Burciaga.

During a hearing last Friday, Burciaga ruled that Baker was competent to stand trial.

Baker is being held in jail in lieu of $100,000 bond, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Rick Smith.

Pei has revolutionized modern architecture

EDITOR'S NOTE: "The human condition is more important to me and architecture reflects the human condition." The statement comes from one of the world's most prominent architects, I.M. Pei. His works have generated kudos — and some controversy — for nearly 40 years. His latest, but not his last, is the East Building of the National Gallery of Art.

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In a profession that fostered the flamboyance of a Stanford White, he is quiet and unassuming.

In a calling that celebrated the rugged individualism of a Frank Lloyd Wright, he is a diplomat, almost as conservative as his corporate clients.

But in his almost 40 years of practice, architect I.M. Pei (pronounced "pay"), has in his own gentle way revolutionized modern architecture by beautifying the glass and concrete structures of modern buildings without sacrificing humaneness, style or the public environment.

"A Chinese Metternich" is how author-architect Peter Blake describes Pei's talent in dealing with clients, contractors, communities and countries. The comparison is to the Austrian diplomat whose talents made him the architect of political power in post-Napoleonic Europe.

PEI, BLAKE SAYS, is "capable of persuading the most conservative client to become a latter-day Medici, and of opening visions of urban context to the most myopic developer." The Medicis were what architects would consider good clients. These Italian Renaissance merchant princes were willing to spend a little extra to make public and private buildings beautiful.

The 64-year-old architect himself sees his task more simply.

"The human condition is very important to me and architecture reflects the human condition," he says as the noise from Madison Avenue filters through his spacious midtown Manhattan office, which is dominated by a table top-desk cluttered with magazines and books.

"Therefore, architecture cannot be detached too much from life. As soon as you try to invent new things, you run the risk of getting too far away from life. In that case, it will only have temporary significance."

Ieoh Ming Pei (everyone, including his wife of 40 years, calls him I.M., but his first name is pronounced "Yoh") and his firm, I.M. Pei & Partners, have won numerous awards, including the American Institute of Architects' highest honor, the Gold Medal.

BUT JUST A few years ago the firm faced rejection all around when the windows of the 60-story John Hancock Tower began crashing to the streets around Boston's Copley Square and spotters with binoculars stood by to warn pedestrians when glass started to fall.

At the time, the beauty of the building's structure was overshadowed by the notoriety of the shattering glass and, by reflection, the shattering of the firm's reputation.

Pei — ever the diplomat — prefers not to discuss the problems of the Hancock Tower, saying only, "We suffered a lot," then adding, "We survived difficult days."

Since the lawsuits stemming from the glass problem were settled out of court, there has never been a public assessment of blame.

Pei says of the building itself, designed by associate Henry Cobb, "it will stand the test of time."

HIS FIRM, too, stood the test of time, surviving the publicity of the glass controversy to become one of the busiest, most sought-after firms in the field today with commissions ranging from a hotel outside Peking to office buildings in Houston and Singapore to the New York City Convention Center.

The list of post-Hancock Pei buildings now includes the John F. Kennedy Library complex outside Boston, the Nestle corporate headquarters in Purchase, N.Y., the Dallas City Hall, university buildings throughout the country and the recently opened West Wing of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

Pei worked his way back into the public eye — favorably this time — with the East Building of the National Gallery in Washington, a building that pays homage to the use of the triangle as a design force.

New York Times architecture critic Ada Louise Huxtable praised the building, calling it, "an uncompromised modern monument."

The East Building was almost the ideal building, Pei says, because the client was willing to spend the money — $94.4 million. "Public buildings are very exciting buildings to do. They're also very difficult buildings because they have a lot of critics" — and here Pei smiles — "but they are wonderful challenges."

THE CHALLENGE Pei enjoys talking about now is the hotel he has designed outside Peking, slated to open in the summer of 1982.

When Pei left his native China in the 1930s to study architecture in this country, he planned to return to China to practice.

World War II and the Communist revolution interfered and the hotel marks Pei's long-awaited return home.

Pei notes that China has yet to develop its own architectural tradition for this era. Western architecture, he says, does not suit Chinese social and economic traditions.

The new hotel is Pei's view of a meeting of East and West nestled in the hills outside Peking.

BECAUSE of the location, Pei made the hotel a series of flat-roofed three-or-four-storied wings set around a traditional Chinese garden and constructed of local materials, such as blue-gray brick and stucco.

There will be large traditional Chinese windows and the reception room will have a glass roof to take advantage of long hours of summer sunlight.

Within will be all the modern Western conveniences, including easy access to a heated swimming pool.

The hotel, he says, "represents my personal view of the direction that Chinese architecture should go. It's a bit presumptuous on my part to do so," Pei confesses. "But I still feel very strongly those Chinese roots. I left the country when I was 17 and that's still a part of me."

He received his degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1940 and worked for the U.S. government during the war.

WHEN HE couldn't find a job as an architect, he become a teacher at the Harvard Graduate School of Design, which was then dominated by Walter Gropius and the Bauhaus school of "form follows function."

In the late '40s, he joined developer William Zeckendorf and headed Zeckendorf's design firm, Webb & Knapp.

With Zeckendorf, Pei designed shopping centers and already was adding the "human" touch to corporate structures.

Pei also did some low-cost housing projects while with Webb & Knapp, and he says he found the work improving the "maximum lives of people very satisfying.

"It is a very important social need to have housing for people who can't afford it," Pei says. "We as architects have a social responsibility to solve that problem."

SOLVING the problem for Pei meant tossing away what had been up to that time conventional grid-iron brick towers that more resembled prisons than housing. Pei closed streets and opened courtyards and gardens, combining them with a mixture of high-rises and smaller townhouses to change the direction of low-cost housing.

His solutions can be seen in New York's Bedford Stuyvesant, in Philadelphia and Montreal.

But the problem of low-cost housing continues because funding for the projects, once plentiful from the federal and state governments, has been cut back.

White Sands creates havoc for armaments

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — What shakes, weighs tons, causes earth tremors and plays Christmas carols? It's a vibrating table and it's but one of many ways the United States tests its missile systems.

The nation's armaments undergo tests here by scientists using vibrators, shock wave equipment and chambers where they can make it rain indoors or create wind storms.

White Sands has been the center for such testing since shortly after World War II. All sorts of arms and equipment are evaluated at the base, but the scientists concentrate on missiles.

Despite their destructive power, missiles are delicate instruments that must undergo many tests before they can be certified as safe and effective, said John Goodwin, who designs test facilities at White Sands.

"In the past, the failures that occurred in the field weren't those that had been tested in the laboratories," Goodwin said. "Our attempt here is to look at the real world and at how it affects equipment."

One of the greatest concerns is how missiles hold up while getting bounced around on trains, ships and field vehicles. That's where the shaker tables come in.

There are two types of vibrating tables in the dynamics lab. One operates through hydraulics and the other is an electrodynamic system based on sound waves.

"These are just like big electrodynamic stereo speakers," Goodwin said. "We send an electric signal in that shakes it just like your speakers. If you put music into it, you get music out of it. We've even played Christmas carols on our shakers."

The round, orange electronic shakers are connected to huge aluminum tables. Each sound wave causes the table to vibrate. Some of the tables can shake 2,000 times per second, so fast that the movement is imperceptible to the eye, but can be felt by people standing nearby.

The hydraulic tables are moved by oil pumping through valves at high pressure. One of the hydraulic tables, which looks like a giant spatula, sits in a metal pit that weighs more than 1 million pounds. The pit is held off the ground by an airbag system that allows the scientist to control the mass of the table and prevents the vibrations from causing earth tremors.

"This country has a lot of hard clay," said supervisory engineer Fred Edgington. "If we started shaking and there was a building on this same layer, it would really shake things up there. They say you could hook one of these up to a building in New York and shake it until it fell down. You could tear it up and not even be there."

Richard Nichols, chief of the dynamics lab, said there were problems with earth tremors when the shaker table program was begun.

"When we first had the hydraulic system here, we put it on a concrete floor and acceptance tested it there," Nichols said. "Some of the desk started bouncing around the floor. We got a lot of telephone calls."

The tables, one of which weighs 18,000 pounds, hold equipment such as missiles and shakes to the command of a research engineer in a control room lined with computers, oscillographs and other electronic equipment. The entire life cycle of stress on the missile can be tested in a short time in the lab.

"You take a transport with the missiles and drive it over paved roads and cross country," Nichols said. "Then, by taking the whole system and putting it on the table, you can simulate the rest of the road test in the lab."

By combining the shaker tables with a shock machine, the scientists can simulate the stress of launching to see if the missile will be knocked off course or will be damaged during blastoff.

The shock machine resembles those carnival strongman tests where you make the bell ring by hitting a lever with a sledgehammer. Only the "hammer" is a network of chains from which the missile is suspended. Edgington said the force of the collision is so great that it causes a flash of flame.

The missiles often are placed in temperature control chambers to see how they will weather high or low temperatures combined with vibration. Temperature testing is the realm of the climatics lab at the base. The lab looks like a Hollywood technical set, filled with equipment to create storms and climatic effects that could satisfy any movie director.

One room-sized chamber can produce temperatures as cold as -100 degrees Farenheit. Another can produce hot temperatures up to 200 degrees.

An altitude chamber can simulate the pressures of heights between from 500 feet below sea level to 2,000 feet above sea level. Giant fans can generate wind storms. Banks of mercury vapor lamps can simulate the sun.

One chamber can produce humidity levels ranging from the desert to the tropics by combining heat and moisture.

Another of the chambers can produce a rainstorm that would keep Gene Kelly dancing for weeks.

"We have four rain systems in here," said lab director John P. McDougall, pointing at the intricate sprinkling systems. "If we run them all together, we can get 26 inches of rain."

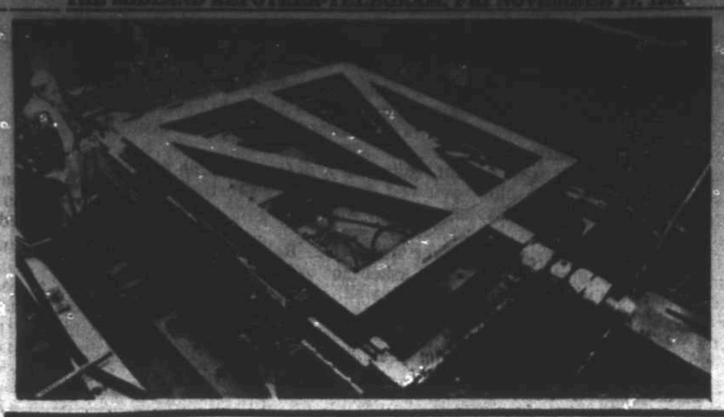

Other chambers are even more exotic. One uses a P-52 airplane propellor to send a fine silicon dust swirling throughout the chamber to see whether it will penetrate the missile's seams. Another can produce an intense salt water fog that can rapidly corrode metal.

Since the missiles must be effective in all climates, McDougall said it is important that they are tested under different weather conditions before they are deployed.

"They have to meet performance criteria before they can be fired," he said. "We do find problems sometimes. We've found some armaments will exude their explosives during high temperatures."

McDougall said potentially explosive items, such as armed missiles, are tested in the field with portable equipment — just in case.

Being able to simulate a variety of environments saves the military money, said designer Goodwin.

White Sands test facility designer John Goodwin watches as a giant vibrating table is put through its paces. The hydraulic table is used to shake missiles and other armaments to see how they will hold up under stress. It is but one way weapon's are tested at White Sands.

Pain of 1956 unites Hungarians in desire for peace

EDITOR'S NOTE: Hungarians rose in revolt against their communist government 25 years ago, only to see the uprising crushed by Soviet tanks. Communism remians today in Hungary, but with sharp differences. Here is a report by the East European correspondent of The Associated Press.

By STEPHEN H. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Mrs. Joseph Nemeth remembers hearing some of the first shots of the Hungarian revolution 25 years ago. She was on her way home from the circus when it happened that night, Oct. 23, 1956.

The eyes of the world at the time were focused elsewhere.

Britain, France and Israel had invaded Egypt in an attempt to wrest back the Suez Canal, nationalized by President Abdel Gamal Nasser.

In the United States, President Dwight D. Eisenhower was winding down his successful campaign for re-election against Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson.

But for Mrs. Nemeth that night and the days that followed in Budapest were "more terrible than war."

"No one in Hungary would like to see it happen again," she said recently at her Budapest lottery-ticket stand.

Today, as neighboring Poland reels in crisis, the red star of communism still glows over Budapest's Parliament building by the Danube River.

But it represents a different kind of communism that existed in 1956 — one with considerably more economic freedom and social liberty.

Armies of Western tourists and their gleaming buses have replaced the Soviet troops and tanks in the streets of Budapest, and the capital now is a showpiece of Hungary's special kind of communism.

But among its new buildings are facades still scarred by the bullets and shrapnel of 1956. And the memories remain among Hungarians.

"I remember the tanks," said another Budapest woman who was 3 years old in 1956. "They were outside in the street making an awful noise, turning their gun barrels. When my father came home, he told us about seeing people hanged in the trees."

The Hungarian revolt was finally crushed on Nov. 4 by Soviet armored forces. Communist Party leader Janos Kadar is officially recorded as the one who invited them into the battle to defend Hungarian communism.

Kadar in 1981 is still in power, credited by many Hungarians and Western diplomats alike with helping his country recover and work its way to a shaky level of relative prosperity and a large degree of social peace.

Budapest 25 years later remains one of Europe's most striking cities.

The immense palace on the Buda Heights, almost completely restored from destruction in World War II, rises on the west bank of the Danube. Sleek hydrofoil boats bound for Esztergom share the river with cruise boats, tugs and barges. On the east bank, Austrian builders are completing a phalanx of new hotels unmatched in Eastern Europe.

In a part of the world where Soviet-bloc money usually buys nothing but Soviet-bloc goods, Hungarians can use their forints to buy Japanese stereo equipment in a shop on Rakoczi Street.

They can buy Austrian beer in a tavern near the river and American color film in a shop near Vorosmarty Square.

Hungary, alone in the Soviet bloc, has become a booming food producer. Markets and roadside stands are decked with garlands of red peppers and filled with carefully arranged displays of produce.

A third of Hungary's produce comes from private plots. While even scythes are in short supply in neighboring Romania, a Hungarian farm worker proudly shows a visitor his new tractor.

Every country in the Soviet bloc talks about efforts to decentralize their economies but only Hungary seems to have carried out much of the process.

Hundreds of formerly state-run shops and restaurants were rented out this year to private operators, some of whom say they are already making good profits.

Encouraged by economic reforms launched in 1968, Hungarian enterprises have evolved into Communist conglomerates which can involve themselves in products as varied as flowers and ice cream.

The government has now scheduled the creation of mini-cooperatives of as few as 15 people to improve repair work and other services as well as small-scale industry — all problem areas in Eastern Europe.

Officially, the average Hungarian earns only about 4,000 forints ($133) a month, far below the 1,066 marks (about $475) of an East German and even below the 7,000 zlotys (about $220) of a worker in Poland.

In Hungary, however, a private economy has developed in which Western officials estimate a Hungarian can earn three to five times his official wage.

Hungary has not had a notable dissident trial for years, although Budapest has an active community of government critics. One group this year has operated a Tuesday evening boutique to sell unauthorized manuscripts, even advertising its offerings in mimeographed handbills.

"You have a party under Kadar that manages to stay ahead of the curve," one Western diplomat says of Hungarian communism's relative flexibility.

Many Hungarians and diplomats say the pain of 1956 helped unite Hungarians afterward in a desire for social peace.

Still, Hungarians in 1981 have to cope with a life that is far from free of problems. However they may compare with those of other Soviet-bloc countries, Hungarian living standards remain below those of their longtime enemies, friends and competitors, the Austrians.

Kadar's government, struggling to defeat a chronic trade deficit, cope with world inflation and avoid Western debt problems, has told Hungarians they will have to work harder just to keep the living standards they now have.

Despite years of building, housing remains chronically short and diplomats say it is not unusual for a family of three to share a one-room apartment in Budapest.

In a downtown showroom window, a sign advises would-be customers that it takes a 50 percent down payment and a one-year wait to get even a tiny Polish-made Fiat 126 car costing 70,000 forints (about $2,100).

For a Soviet-made Lada station wagon the price is 115,000 forints (about $3,300), the down payment is still half the price and the wait is five years.

Judge rules no wrong committed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department failed to prove that former Rep. Charles J. Carney accepted an oil credit card in return for political favors, according to a U.S. District judge who dismissed the illegal-gift charge.

Judge William B. Bryant, ruling on a defense motion for a directed verdict, said he had reviewed five days of testimony and could find "no substantial evidence from which the jury could find this man guilty."

Justice Department lawyer Andrew J. Reich refused to comment. However, a court source who asked not to be identified said he understood the ruling could not be appealed.

"I'm tired but happy," Carney, a 68-year-old Ohio Republican, beamed after Bryant dismissed the jury. Carney had insisted there was nothing improper about his accepting free gasoline from an oil company during his eight years in Congress.

Parents lose long battle of getting medical benefits

By LAURA A. KIERNAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Everyone agrees that Rachael Lynn Barnett's birth and her first nine months were uneventful. She learned to sit and stand and spoke her first words, passing all the tiny milestones that mark the development of a normal baby.

Then, in April 1974, Rachael was given a smallpox vaccination.

WITHIN A FEW days she developed a fever and a bumpy rash, but while the rash soon subsided, the fever dragged on ominously for two months. Finally, Rachael's temperature jumped to 105 degrees, and the child began screaming and banging her head repeatedly against her crib.

The attack lasted 72 hours. Rachael would never be well again. Eventually, as her condition worsened, her doctor would describe her as a "vegetable."

Today, 8-year-old Rachael lies in a crib at the Hospital for Sick Children in Northeast Washington, limp and frail, unable to speak and totally dependent on the people around her. She reacts to touch or sound — sometimes with a smile — but her doctors believe that she really does not comprehend what it is she feels or hears. Her thin arms and legs tremble constantly, and her crystal-blue eyes are expressionless.

Rachael's tragedy is the subject of a legal battle by her parents, Rebecca Barnett and her husband, Eric, a Navy lieutenant commander. In 1978 the couple, who now live in Germantown, Md., sued the Navy for $6 million, convinced that the smallpox vaccination administered to their daughter in a military clinic caused Rachael's illness.

But in the three years since they filed suit, they rejected an offer by the Navy to settle out of court for $1.4 million (because, they said, it would have given the Navy complete control over Rachael's care) only to lose their suit when it came to trial. Then they were informed by the Defense Department that the government would no longer pay for their daughter's medical care. All the while, Rebecca Barnett battled cancer.

IT IS A case that has evoked even the sympathy of the judges who have had to rule against the Barnetts. But that is little consolation to the couple, who have been left not only emotionally spent and disheartened ("It's possible I'm entirely wrong," an exhausted Eric Barnett said recently), but fearful as well.

For while Maryland Medicaid will pay their daughter's $53,000-a-year medical bill for the time being, soon, they fear, they may have to find some way to pay for the care they believe their daughter needs out of their own limited resources.

"I will not give up my daughter because of money," Rebecca Barnett, 29, said in a recent interview. "... At this point Rachael has gained nothing. She's been shoved off...She's out there...We have literally lost our daughter...because we no longer have any control of her at all...We don't have te money to keep her."

"The only interest we had in this entire thing was to see to it that Rachael was taken care of on our terms," said Eric Barnett, 33, who earns $27,000 a year as a Navy lawyer.

At issue in the suit is whether the smallpox vaccine administered to Rachael when the Barnetts were ordered transferred to the Philippines was responsible for the child's illness.

THE NAVY conceded it was negligent in administering the vaccine to Rachael, because under standard medical practice smallpox vaccinations were no longer administered to children under 12 months of age beause of the high risk of complications — including post-vaccinal encephalitis.

But even so, the Navy argued, it could not be held liable for Rachael's illness, because it bore no resemblance to those illnesses known to be triggered by smallpox vaccinations and therefore could not have been caused by the vaccination.

For four years after the illness set in, the Barnetts kept Rachael at home with her brother Aaron, now 6, while doctors tried to pinpoint the cause of her illness.

There were signs that Rachael's central nervous system was deteriorating. Sometimes she got worse, sometimes better — she was always on a "stormy neurological course," as one doctor put it.

"My God," Rebecca Barnett said, "I saw a million doctors, and every time you turned around they're saying, 'Put her away...get rid of her, she's a social outcast, she's defective'...I said, 'Hell, no. She's not responsible for what happened to her. She's my kid.' What am I going to say? 'You're not up to snuff?' "

THEN, IN December 1977, a test conducted at the National Institutes of Health showed antibodies in Rachael's blood serum and spinal fluid that may have been directed against the smallpox-vaccine virus. The Barnetts were told that the laboratory finding, when coupled with Rachael's physical condition, was "consistent" with a diagnosis that she suffered from post-vaccinal encephalitis — an inflammation of the brain following a vaccination.

So, in April 1978, after the Navy rejected their claim for damages at the administrative level, the Barnetts filed a lawsuit in A.S. District Court in Baltimore. Soon afterward Rachael was placed in the Hospital for Sick Children, where children with chronic diseases and severe physical handicaps are cared for, because her mother had to be treated for suspected cancer.

When the case began before Judge Frank A. Kaufman, the sole question for him to determine was what caused Rachael Barnett's illness.

Two experts testified for the Navy, both from Johns Hopkins University, that the results of the NIH test were inconclusive, and that the slow progression of Rachael's disease was inconsistent with the rapid onset usually associated with post-vaccinal encephalvtis.

Depot to see trains again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, which decided to turn Washington's Union Station into a National Visitors Center in 1968, may reverse that action and make the 74-year-old depot a railroad station once again.

A bill passed by the Senate Monday would provide $1 million for a study, $40 million for a parking garage and ramps and $29 million for restoration of the 765-foot-long Beaux Arts-style depot, which has been closed since February because of a leaky roof.

The measure was sent to the House following a voice vote.

The center was designed to serve as a tourist gateway to Washington, beginning with the national Bicentennial in 1976. A new railroad station was built behind the center.

The bill requires that rail passenger service be returned to the main Union Station building.

FTC decides cereal case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Federal Trade Commission have 10 days to decide whether to pursue a long-running antitrust case against the three largest makers of breakfast cereals.

The staff of the FTC told commissioners Monday it does not intend to appeal an administrative law judge's ruling that threw out the antitrust case.

It's Garage Sale Time!

A Garage Sale can be fun and help you make room in your home. There are many ways to hold a garage sale and here are some tips to help you and have more fun -

(1)Talk to friends and neighbors to see if they would like to join you. Each family can work from their own area. Doing a sale as a group will provide more items and will draw more people to your sale. It can also be much more enjoyable for you.

(2)Prepare a list of items in advance of the sale and what price you would like for each. This advance organization will help you make the sale more successful.

(3)Be sure to check your local laws and aquire a permit if needed.

(4)Place a Classified ad telling people about your sales. Be sure to list date, time, location and list some of the more desireable items you have for sale.

For other ideas and suggestions, call us. We hope you'll have a successful garage sale and remember - We'll help by supplying the crowd!

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

It costs more to buy less

Doyle

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Every time I buy U.S. Treasury bonds through my local bank, the bank charges me a $25 fee. That's understandable. But the prices I pay are always higher — sometimes three-quarters of a point higher — than the "asked" quotations the days I buy.

Sometimes I buy a $1,000 bond, sometimes a $5,000 or $10,000 bond. Am I being treated like an "odd-lot" buyer and, therefore, being charged higher prices?

A. Yes, you are. Although there's no official "round lot" for U.S. Treasury securities, most trading in them is done in very large amounts. The price quotations on Treasuries are usually for transactions of $100,000 and up.

The "asked" quote is the price at which government bond dealers will sell bonds and the "bid" quote is the price at which they will buy — in large numbers. If you deal in smaller amounts, you pay more than the quoted asked price when you buy and get less than the quoted bid price when you sell.

On a $1,000 bond, three-quarters of a point is $7.50. That seems like a lot. But you have to remember that bond prices can move up or down during the trading day. So, the price you paid on a bond purchase might have been more or, more likely, was less than three-quarters of a point above the asked quote at the time of day your order was filled.

The $25 fee at your bank comes through as a bargain. Many banks charge more than that for handling the purchase of sale of U.S. Treasury securities.

●

Q. Is it possible to buy U.S. Treasury bonds and notes directly from the government?

A. Surely. You can buy Treasury bond and notes, at the time they are auctioned off and issued, by submitting "tender" through your district Federal Reserve Bank or branch.

The Treasury sells new two-year notes once a month and new bonds and notes with various maturities at different times. There is usually a "quarterly refinancing," through which both bonds and notes are sold, every February, May, August and November.

In the November refinancing, the Treasury sold $4.5 billion of three-year notes, $2.25 billion of 10-year notes and $2 billion of 30-year bonds.

If you want to buy Treasury bonds or notes at the next refinancing, contact "the Fed." There are 12 Federal Reserve Banks and 26 branches around the county. You must deal with the one serving your district. Ask to be put on the mailing list to obtain information and tender forms.

●

Q. Many corporations have issued bonds with "call features" — meaning those companies have the right to call in the bonds and redeem them before the bonds' stated maturities. How about U.S. Treasury notes and bonds? Do they have call features?

A. Treasury notes don't. But some Treasury bonds do. If you're considering buying Treasury bonds and are concerned that they might be called for redemption, you should check out the terms of each bond issue.

Going down the long list of Treasury bonds, we find that the one with the earliest maturity and a call provision is the 3.25 percent bond due to mature in June, 1983. The Treasury has had the right to call in that bond and redeem it at face value since June, 1978.

But that's not about to happen. The 3.25 percent interest Uncle Sam pays on that bond is cheap borrowing. To get the money to pay off that bond before maturity the Treasury would have to borrow at the higher interest rates that are likely to prevail through 1983.

There is nothing as cozy as a roaring fire

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The picture released by the White House photographer the other day of the President and first lady dining on trays in the upstairs study recently redecorated under Mrs. Reagan's supervision presents a cozy family scene.

Nancy has kicked off her shoes and has her feet curled under her in a big comfy chintz chair. The leader of the Western world, casually attired in slacks, cardigan, open-necked shirt and what appears to be bedroom slippers, has settled down after a hard day in the Oval Office to the first tall highball of the evening.

From the angle the picture was taken, I can't tell what they are facing on the opposite side of the room, but I hope it is a roaring fire and not a TV screen.

Watching television while eating is not good for the digestion, especially if the evening news is on and the network correspondents are doing their standup shtiks under their favorite tree on the White House lawn. Watching talk show pundits and politicians can be even more unsettling for the stomach, while taking TV economic experts with less than a grain of salt can be positively ulcerous. Who can face salmon mousse after two minutes of Irving R. Levine?

No, a cheery fireside seems to me the best way for the first family to shut out the wintry blasts buffeting the White House these days. The licking flames and glowing embers take the chill off friendships gone wrong and adversaries new and old lurking in the shadows.

In "The Snow-Storm," Emerson described the scene as Currier and Ives might have engraved it:

"... all friends shut out, the housemates sit
Around the radient fireplace, enclosed
In a tumultuous privacy of storm."

Here at Hardscribble House, my wife and I often dine on trays in front of a crackling fire, isolating ourselves from the icy blasts of querulous editors, carping readers, begging press agents and dunning bill collectors. We go through a cord of wood every couple of months and log more time in front of the blazing logs than before the cackling boob tube.

"You are a king by your own fireside, as much as any monarch in his throne," wrote Miguel de Cervantes in his introduction to "Don Quixote."

William Cowper said pretty much the same thing about the enjoyments of his English fireside: "I crown thee king of intimate delights."

I often at this time of the rolling year entertain the conjecture that old Ebenezer Scrooge might not have had that Christmas Eve visitation from his deceased partner, Jacob Marley, and the three ghosts, if he had put a few more coals in his crate.

If you recall the opening stave in the Charles Dickens classic, Scrooge came home on that freezing foggy night and took his lonely cup of gruel before the most parsimonious of fires.

"It was a very low fire indeed," Dickens tells us. "Nothing on such a bitter night. He was obliged to sit close to it and brood over it, before he could extract the least sensation of warmth from such a handful of fuel." The room was chilly and dark, but he cared not "a button for that: darkness is cheap, and Scrooge liked it."

The fireplace he huddled before "was an old one, built by some Dutch merchant long ago, and paved all around with quaint Dutch tiles, designed to illustrate the Scripture."

More than 150 people make their living scavenging for recyclable materials in a Juarez dump. Some of the shanties which serve as "home" are in the background.

All in a day's work

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Every morning, Nestor Garcia rises before dawn and sets off for his job — searching through garbage at the Juarez city dump.

Garcia is one of more than 150 people who comb the piles of rubbish at the landfill, looking for materials that can be recycled. The 19-year-old youth with the tumble of shoulder-length black hair has been working at the dump for 15 years.

"My parents worked here for a long time," he said through an interpreter. "Now, it is just me and my three brothers."

Garcia, like many of the other so-called ragpickers, lives on land near the dump. The landscape in the area is dotted with shanties made of tar paper, cardboard, adobe and tin. Some of the hovels are barely distinguishable from the garbage that is heaped nearby.

"The houses are a combination of everything," said Antonio Ibarra. "Some have adobe houses. Some have cardboard because they haven't had a chance to build better ones yet."

The houses are just one example of how the ragpickers make their life from items that others discard.

THEIR CLOTHES BEAR THE TATTERS and stains that testify to their wear. Discarded clothing is recycled by the the ragpickers themselves, rather than being sent to a recycling center with the cardboard, plastic and aluminum.

Dust and smoke hang in the air as rumbling yellow garbage trucks bounce along the dirt roads to deliver their loads. The ragpickers attack the mounds of trash with two-pronged metal rakes, pulling the compressed paper, plastic, metal and food apart in their hunt for the valuable.

Men who look much older than they are stoop under the burden of cardboard cans full of aluminum, peering from beneath grime-caked brows as they make their way through the rubble.

The odor is gut-wrenching, but the ragpickers scarcely notice as they weave between herds of goats and bulldozers belching diesel smoke. Stray dogs roam the garbage mounds, searching for food and yelping when giggling, black-faced boys pull their ears.

One of the boys munches on a large apple he found among the rubbish, chomping on the side that's not rotten. "It's good," he says and giggles again.

SOME OF THE FOOD makes its way home with the ragpickers, along with the "finds" of each day.

Maria Garcia watches her grimy hands pick at a stack of wet cardboard while she talks about her five years of working at the dump.

"We've been able to maintain ourselves here," she said. "Everything is valuable."

"The people here are humble," Ibarra said. "They are poor people. They go through starvation, the heat, the cold, the rain, storms and snow, but they're here."

Ibarra, 47, is the labor chief for the ragpickers, supervising the search for recyclable material and settling disputes.

Organization of the workers came six years ago with the formation of a cooperative called the Sociedad Cooperativa de Selecionares de Materiales, or SOCOSEMA.

Before, two syndicates held the city garbage concession and paid the workers about $5 a week for dawn-to-dusk labor, said Maria Elena Villegas, administrator of SOCOSEMA.

"Right now, the people here are earning 1,500 to 2,000 pesos (about $60 to $80) a week," Ibarra said.

SOCOSEMA WAS ORGANIZED with the help of Francisco Villarreal, a wealthy furniture dealer, who agreed help the budding cooperative begin payments on the city concession, which costs about $3,000 a month. With that help, the ragpickers secured a 50-year contract for the garbage.

The ragpickers' standard of living has improved, Mrs. Villegas said. They work only eight hours a day now and get inexpensive medical care and half-pay on the days they are sick.

"It hasn't been easy," Mrs. Villegas said. "One person could become a millionaire with that concession, but here there are a lot of people who are barely making do. But they are living."

There still are many problems, she said.

"It is in the contract that children will not pick this material during the school year," she said, adding with pride, "some of them are even in high school."

But the grimy urchins roaming the dump are evidence that education still is not available to all. Some of the children still must work to help support their families.

There are political problems that daily confront Mrs. Villegas and the ragpickers.

"We're behind three weeks on our wages because we have an embargo on the trains," Ibarra said. "There's no way to send the cardboard. We need that money."

MRS. VILLEGAS EXPLAINED the government was involved in a dispute with the company that was to receive the cardboard, but said she thought the problem was solved.

"The problems are political and social," she said. "We have had a problem with what nationality the garbage is.

"We've got about 2 million pesos ($83,000) in plastic sitting out there and we can't ship it because there are complaints it is American plastic," she said. "The businessmen are afraid it will lessen the profits for Mexican plastics. The fat fish won't let the small fish eat."

While battling the pressing problems, SOCOSEMA also is looking toward the future.

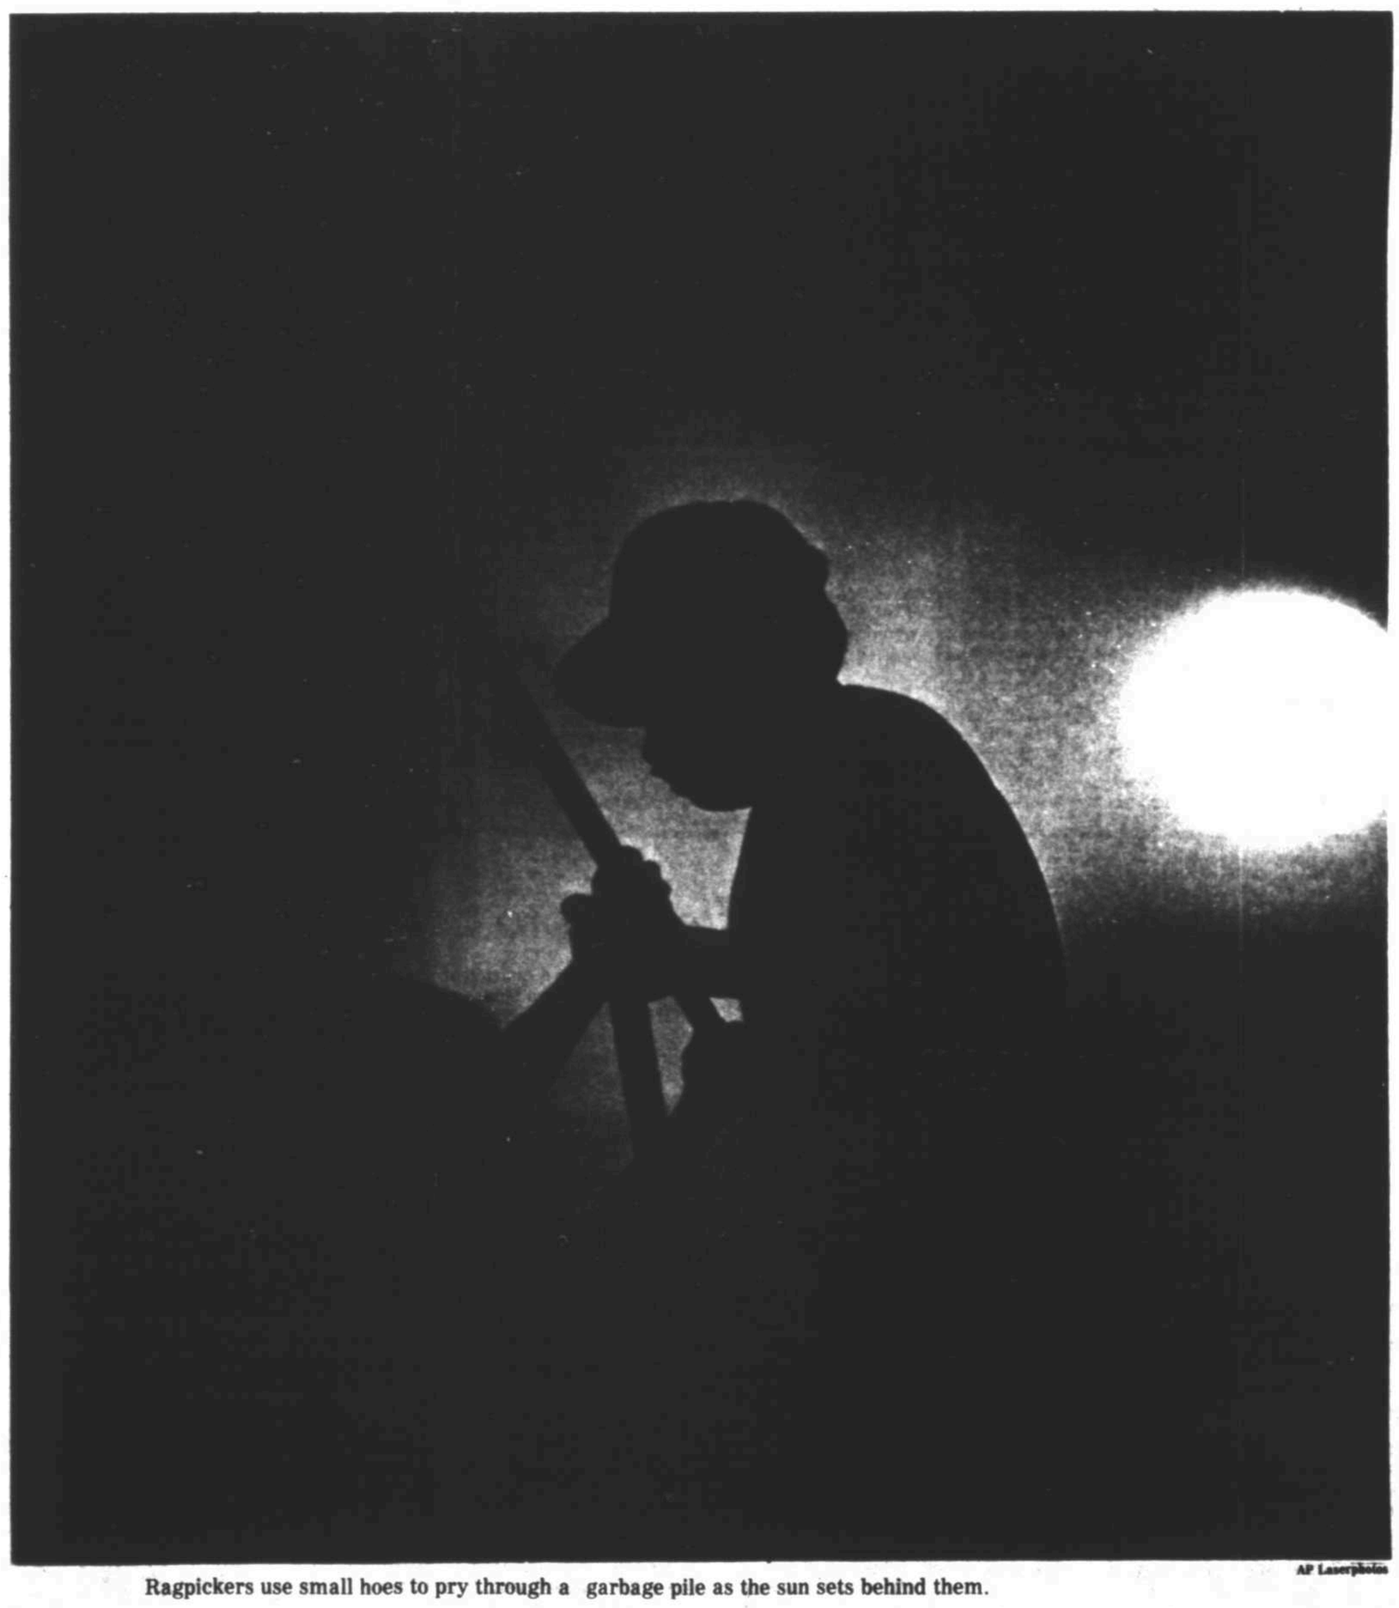

"We are trying to obtain permission to build a garbage processing plant," Mrs. Villegas said. "It would be the only one in Latin America in the hands of the workers."

She said the cooperative is attempting to get the land donated by the city and funds donated by the state. Asked what she needed most, she said, "Dinero, mucho dinero" — money, much money.

Meanwhile, life goes on at the dump much the same as it has for decades.

A St. Dominica nun smiles from beneath her wide-brimmed straw hat as she surveys her flock digging in the rubble.

"I've been working with them for five years," said Sister Amelia Aquirre Gutierrez. "You have to get close to simple people. They have a lot of unity. Even though they have a lot of problems, they never lose hope."

The Bear is back!

While most Texans probably were thinking in terms of another kind of Bear story Thanksgiving Day, the message was ringing loud and clear from the James S. Brady home in Virginia: The Bear was back, possibly to stay!

Brady's story has to be the success story of 1981, the miracle that couldn't happen but did. Everyone is familiar with the story: Brady was one of four people shot during an assassination attempt on President Ronald Reagan March 30.

Shot in the head, Brady suffered severe brain damage, but through the skill of neurosurgeon Dr. Arthur Kobrine his life was saved and he began the treacherous and trying road to full recovery. That isn't to imply that the presidential press secretary is out of the woods; he isn't. Doctors say there still could be complications although they don't anticipate any of a life-threatening nature.

Already Brady has undergone four major operations to repair incomplete healing and leakage of spinal fluid. And, physicians say, seizures, a brain abcess, infection or a leakage of brain fluid could necessitate additional surgery up to 18 months after a serious brain injury like the one Brady suffered.

Yet that possibility surely must seem trivial to Brady after what he has been through. Few Americans can identify with the trials and the triumphs Jim Brady has experienced through his ordeal. More are to come in the months and the years ahead.

Brady's left leg remains impaired; he walks with the aid of a cane and, usually, the helping hand of a friend or relative. His left arm remains in a sling.

These are minor inconveniences to a man who has personally endured the wrath of a political assassin and whose life came so close to an end. But those close to the press secretary say his political insights remain superior, his wit, judgement and sense of humor normal.

Jim Brady's return from the hospital earlier this week marked a triumph for a man, a triumph for the American political system and a triumph for the human spirit. He is a good example of the conquering spirit that remains such a vital part of the American way of life.

To Jim Brady, we wish the best and a continuation of his full life.

Life in the bowery

Scientists had thought it was extinct, but the golden-crested bowerbird is alive and well in the rain forests of New Guinea. Jared Diamond, a professor of physiology at the UCLA medical school recently discovered 30 of them doing just what they had been rumored to do — building elaborate love nests and conducting lengthy courtships, often to no avail.

No one is sure how or why the little five-ounce bird builds such a large and intricate bower — often several feet high and several feet in diameter, sometimes with verandahs, decorated with flowers, berries and shells in color-coordinated motifs, and sometimes even painted with crushed berry juices.

Diamond, however, did notice that the more plain-looking the bird, the more decorative his bower. An elaborately plumed bowerbird, he discovered, builds no bower at all. And the male birds apparently put considerable energy into destroying each other's bowers. As Diamond told the Los Angeles Times, "There certainly are parallels with human behavior."

The courtship display that Diamond witnessed was full of poses with blue berries in the beak, clearly designed to set off the golden plumage of the bowerbird's crest. But after 20 minutes of strutting and making strange noises and offering berries and other bowerbird delicacies, the male bowerbird in this case was rebuffed. The female — with a discrimination scientists cannot explain — flew off to check out another bower.

This, too, has its human parallels, and so does the fact that once the mating is completed, the female leaves the fancy bachelor pad and builds a more ordinary and functional next in which to hatch and raise her chicks.

The golden-crested bowerbird was last spotted in the 19th century, when humans were probably shocked by the romantic organization of bowerbird existence. Today, however, the bird's life of conspicuous consumption and pleasure-seeking seems uncannily familiar. There's probably a lesson in it.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

Okay, so Richard Allen kept $1,000 from Japan in a safe. Everyone is missing the point — considering our balance of payments, any money from that country is about as rare as a Zenith dealer in Yokohoma.

●

Nobody who knows Washington will discount the possibility that the money was slipped to Allen by Al Haig wearing a kimono.

●

One thousand dollars doesn't seem like a whole lot of money to make a big deal out of. We've had administrations which spilled more than that.

●

Allen's friends say he did nothing wrong. His enemies say the reason he put the money in the safe is because the new Toyota wouldn't fit.

CHARLEY REESE

Giving dues to the men of Vietnam

Nikos Kazantzakis, the author of "Zorba the Greek," tells in his autobiography of going to his grandfather's grave, laying his head on the grave and talking to his grandfather.

Charley Reese

Perhaps all of us should seek out the graves of the 53,000 Americans who died in the Vietnam War and whisper to the silent soil, "We understand now. We miss you, but we are proud of you. You bought something of value with your lives."

Indeed they did. For some, they bought the lesson that as a nation we should not meddle in the affairs of others. For some, they bought the lesson that we must never again allow politicians to commit Americans to a war they (the politicians) have no intention of winning. For some, they bought the lesson that however bad naive Americans may believe an allied government is, it is almost never as bad as a communist government.

Mrs. John Bristow sparked these thoughts. She is a Florida woman who was widowed 16 years ago by a Chinese-made mine in Vietnam. She has since remarried but, she told me, it has taken nearly 16 years to come to grips with her grief.

What she wants to tell others who lost loved ones in the Vietnam War is that it's okay to still feel the pain, that because of the political climate of the 1960s, survivors were denied the opportunity of "completing the circle of grief" by talking about their pain.

As incredible as it sounds today, Mrs. Bristow said that mention of a loved one's death in Vietnam often brought ridicule, such as, "well, he was stupid to go; he should have gone to Canada." I still cannot imagine how Americans could treat their fellow Americans that cruelly, but it happened. Many a Vietnam veteran was spit upon and pelted with tomatoes if they wore their uniform in public. Those times remain a stain upon the honor of the nation.

The military was the innocent victim of the Vietnam War. The very libertarians, some of them anyway, who so zealously support the principle of civilian dominance of the military and of a non-political military, blamed the orders of their civilian leaders.

There is no question that the war was bungled, but it was bungled by civilians in Washington, D.C., not by the American armed forces in Vietnam. Civilians made the decisions; they committed the forces; they put the restraints on those forces; and in the end, they cut and ran.

A nation that spurns its own armed forces is a doomed ship of fools. War, as the old German philosopher said so long ago, is always an extension of politics. War is a political decision designed to accomplish political goals. As a citizen of a free country, we may disagree with the politicians but we should always support those men and women in uniform who are in the field carrying out the directives of the politicians.

Under our system they have no choice but to remain faithful to the Constitution and to obey the orders of the civilian commander-in-chief. As human beings with any pretext of honor, we have no choice but to give all the aid and support we can to our brothers who are engaged in combat.

Part of the problem we had in the 1960s is that we are spoiled. We have never fought a war on this soil since the War Between the States. We got off cheap in World Wars I and II and in Korea and Vietnam. The entire burden of those wars was borne by the military and their families. The rest of us lived normal lives, even prospered.

Maybe that's the one virtue of a nuclear war. There won't be any exemption for Kibitzers. Until that cruel bit of justice occurs, we would do well to give the men of Vietnam the honor that they bought and paid for with their lives.

BENJAMIN SHORE

Tough immigration law under consideration

By BENJAMIN SHORE

WASHINGTON — An immigration reform law taking shape in the Republican-controlled Senate likely will be tougher and more restrictive than that advocated by the Reagan administration.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., chairman of the Senate Immigration Subcommittee where the measure is being drafted, said in an interview he does not expect White House opposition to the key elements of his bill.

Simpson also believes that bringing a restrictionist immigration bill onto the Senate floor by the spring of next year will be aided by 1982 being a tough re-election year for several senators who otherwise might ignore public sentiment and speak out against some of the more powerful elements in the bill.

Simpson said he will visit government officials in Mexico City in early January to explain the reform legislation he expects to have completed by then.

Although he does not expect the Mexican government to be persuaded to endorse his efforts, Simpson believes it is "very important" that Mexico City understand what the Senate is about to debate.

A reform measure under consideration in the House Immigration Subcommittee is expected to reach the House floor also in the spring, according to an aide to Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., chairman of the subcommittee.

Mazzoli, like Simpson, supports a tough law that would attempt to stem the flow of illegal aliens by increased border enforcement, call for punishment of employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens, require job applicants to show counterfeit-resistant work eligibility identification, and set a firm limit on the number of legal immigrants who can be admitted to the United States each year.

In addition, Simpson believes the White House was unrealistically tough in its proposal for granting amnesty — immunity from deportation — to illegal aliens who have become permanent U.S. residents.

The administration called for amnesty only for those who could prove continuous residence in the United States since before January 1980, but then be accorded a new legal status of temporary resident alien until they have lived in the country a total of 10 years.

Furthermore, their temporary resident alien status would have to be renewed every three years, an administrative burden that Simpson finds unacceptable.

Simpson favors a far more lenient amnesty standard in an effort to permit, on a one-time-only basis, as many illegal aliens as possible among those living permanently in the United States to live and work openly.

Forced to live as a sub-class without rights, Simpson said, they are susceptible to unscrupulous employers who take advantage of their fear of discovery and offer them sub-standard wages and working conditions that depress those sectors of the economy for American workers.

The White House said its proposal is intended basically to not appear to be rewarding persons who violated U.S. immigration laws.

While Simpson has not decided how many years of continuous residence should be required, he said two years, coupled with evidence of intent to remain, might be enough.

However, Simpson is opposed to instituting an amnesty program until other aspects of the immigration-control package are in place.

The Reagan administration called for civil penalties for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens, but Simpson favors adding criminal prosecution against those who simply accept the civil penalties as a business cost.

And instead of the casual identification requirements proposed by the White House, Simpson is leaning in favor of a counterfeit-resistant card, most likely an upgraded Social Security card.

The administration proposed that all job applicants simply show an employer any two of the following: a drivers license, birth certificate, Social Security card, draft registration card, or immigration papers valid for work purposes. Critics have pointed out the ease of counterfeiting these common documents.

The White House said that upgrading the Social Security card for all present and future card-holders could cost between $850 million and $2 billion, which was labeled an unacceptable amount.

But Simpson said a Social Security Administration official testified that issuing upgraded cards to all new applicants would cost only $13 million a year. Current cards could be converted later.

"The only way we'll control illegal immigration," he said, "is to make it necessary for a person to present an identification card to obtain a job.

"This is very critical. If we don't have one (a secure form of identification), we'll have nothing" for a total control package, he added.

Simpson said he has not decided how much the Border Patrol should be increased to stop those aliens who are not deterred by the increased difficulty of getting a job in the United States. But he, like many other senators and representatives involved in drafting reform legislation, believe that while employer sanctions and an identification system will not discourage all illegal aliens, enough will be deterred to permit the Border Patrol to apprehend those determined to test the system.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Nov. 27, the 331st day of 1981. There are 34 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 27, 1703, a coastal storm in England took an estimated 8,000 lives.

On this date:

In the year 602, Roman Emperor Maurice and his five sons were beheaded in Asia Minor.

In 1940, Germany annexed the French province of Lorraine during World War II.

In 1961, the Soviet Union proposed an immediate ban on nuclear testing without international controls.

And in 1979, Iranian militants warned that they had mined the U.S. Embassy complex in Tehran, where 50 Americans were being held hostage, apart from three other hostages held elsewhere in the city.

Ten years ago: Three people were killed as guerrilla fighters in Northern Ireland launched a new drive against the British.

Five years ago: Thousands of people marched through London's Trafalgar Square in a demonstration for peace in Northern Ireland.

One year ago: U.S. and Algerian mediators continued discussians aimed at freeing the 53 American hostages from their Iranian captors in Tehran.

Today's birthdays: Broadway producer David Merrick is 69; Caroline Kennedy is 24.

Thought For Today: "We may be willing to tell a story twice, but are never willing to hear it more than once." — William Hazlitt, English writer, 1778-1830.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

U.S. arms transfer talks offensive to Latin Americans

WASHINGTON — U.S. arms transfer policy talks seem intended to offend those relatively few Latin American nations that still have faith in the United States.

William Giandoni

Recent discussions in both the House and Senate were concerned in great part with the shortcomings of such countries as Guatemala and El Salvador, two Central American republics that are battling Marxist guerrillas, but other nations, such as Venezuela, which wants to buy U.S. supersonic jet fighters, also were criticized.

One of the few voices raised in defense of Latin America is that of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

On the other hand, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., is a consistent critic of the Latins in the upper House, and Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., does much of the talking in the lower chamber.

For the most part, it seems, those who oppose U.S. arms sales to Latin America do so on other than military grounds, citing rather human rights violations.

Sen. Kennedy, for example, recently declared that the government of Guatemala "since the military coup of 1954 has practiced widespread human rights violations against its own people." He specifically objected to the sale earlier this year of $3.2 million of military trucks and Jeeps to Guatemala.

Kennedy's charge that Guatemala had been violating human rights since 1954 overlooks the fact that, for a number of years, particularly during the administration of President John F. Kennedy, Guatemala was the United States' closest ally in the Central American area, and no such complaints were voiced. It was on bases in Guatemala that the Kennedy administration trained the Cuban exile invasion force that sought to topple Fidel Castro's Cuban Communist dictatorship in 1961.

Kennedy failed to mention, too, that the government of President Jacobo Arbenz, which was toppled by an invasion of Guatemalan exiles, not a military coup, was dominated by Marxists. When Arbenz fled Guatemala, he went behind the Iron Curtain, to Prague, where he lived until Castro came to power in Cuba in 1959.

Guatemala has been a preferred target of Soviet and Cuban propagandists for over a quarter of a century now and Castro has helped arm and train the leaders of several of the guerrilla movements that have been scourging the country.

A state of internal war exists in Guatemala and has for years. Government and guerrilla forces, alike, shoot to kill. That being the case, it may be said that both sides engage in human rights violations.

Nevertheless, Guatemala is not only the most populous and economically strongest of the Central American republics, but also the most staunchly anti-communist. Yet only rarely is there any mention in Washington of its possible strategic importance to the United States.

These days, most attention is concentrated on neighboring El Salvador, the smallest of the countries in the region, where Marxist guerrillas also are waging hit-and-run warfare against the government.

There the Reagan administration has drawn the line against the further spread of Marxism in Central America. But that has not dissuaded the human rights advocates from protesting U.S. arms transfer to President Jose Napoleon Duarte's government.

It seems not to have occurred to the critics of U.S. arms transfers that denial of U.S. military equipment to the Salvadoran regime eventually would mean defeat of the Christian Democrat-military junta and a probable Marxist takeover.

Rep. Barnes, for example, was asked recently if the prospects in El Salvador were not like those in Nicaragua, where arms sales to the Somoza regime were halted, a coalition government that included Marxists, was imposed by the United States, and the Marxists gained control. That does not have to be the end result in El Salvador, he replied, but "it could be."

Chico's 'man', Jack Albertson, dead at 74

By JACK JONES
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Jack Albertson, a one-time teen-aged pool hustler who learned to tap dance and eventually became an award-winning performer on Broadway, in films and on television, died of cancer Wednesday. He was 74.

A family spokesman, Tom Master, said that the veteran actor's cancer was diagnosed about three years ago, but had been in remission until the last several weeks when "it kind of took hold."

The venerable character actor's career lasted a half century, beginning during the depression when a New York agent saw him going through tap steps with other would-be dancers in front of the Palace Theater.

After two decades of burlesque, vaudeville and musical comedy, Albertson suddenly won fame — and a Tony Award — for his portrayal of an aging father in Broadway's "The Subject Was Roses."

In 1968 he played the same role in the screen version of the Frank Gilroy play and won an Oscar as best supporting actor.

With Melvyn Douglas and Paul Scofield, Albertson was one of a handful of select performers to win top awards in all three fields. He was given a television Emmy in 1975 for an appearance on a "Cher" variety show.

He won another Emmy in 1976 for his role as the salty garage owner in "Chico and the Man," the series in which he co-starred with the late Freddie Prinze and which popularized him with millions.

"You kid yourself if you think talent is enough," he said in a 1975 interview. "This business is filled with talent. I was just one of those people who went along for years, doing whatever it is that I do. You have skill, ability, acceptability. Then suddenly — zap! — you have charisma."

Albertson was born in Malden, Mass., where, as he once told a magazine writer, "We were really poor. My father took a powder and my mother had to work in a shoe factory to support my sister and me."

Albertson dropped out of high school after the first year and worked in factories for a time. He also was a rack boy in pool rooms around Lynn, Mass., where he became a hustler.

He learned some tap steps from other pool players — apparently to relieve the tedium of standing around the table — and by the time he was 18, he was appearing in local amateur shows.

In the early 1930s, he went to New York seeking work as a dancer, finally getting a job with a vaudeville act when he was seen doing routines in front of the Palace.

Soon Albertson was doing a soft-shoe routine and working as a straight man for another struggling young performer — Phil Silvers. They worked as an act in Minsky's Burlesque for $8 a day less agent's commission.

Albertson became a straight man for other famous comics: Bert Lahr, Milton Berle, Jack Benny, Jimmy Durante, Red Skelton and Eddie Cantor.

In 1937, he came to Hollywood, but could only find work as a chorus boy. He returned to New York, where he fought to develop himself as a comedian. He appeared in some early TV shows and finally won a role in a Broadway production of "The Red Mill" when Eddie Foy Jr. was forced by illness to cancel.

He got other good stage parts, including one with his old burlesque partner Silvers in "Top Banana."

And he appeared in several movies, including "You Can't Run Away From It," "The Unguarded Moment" and "Don't Go Near the Water." He also made "How to Murder Your Wife," which starred Jack Lemmon.

Minneapolis woman sinks teeth into pet protection

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jill Otten admits she bit the dogcatcher, and says she'd do it again under the same circumstances.

Mrs. Otten says she and her husband came home the afternoon of Sept. 5 and found their miniature poodle, Pepper, was missing from their fenced yard.

A neighbor told the Ottens she had seen a Metropolitan Animal Patrol Service Inc. truck near their property.

"I went immediately to MAPSI to see if they had taken my dog," Mrs. Otten told the Minneapolis Tribune in an interview published Wednesday. "The truck had not returned, so I waited."

When the truck arrived, she said, she confronted a warden wearing badge No. 36, who had Pepper.

"I took my dog in my arms and the man ran in front of me and grabbed my dog by the neck," Mrs. Otten said. "He told me to let go of the dog and said I could not have him.

"He told me to let go of my dog or he would choke him to death right in my arms. He would not let go and so, in desperation, and fear for the life of my dog, I bit him."

Mrs. Otten says her teeth sank into the dogcatcher's arm and he dropped Pepper. Mrs. Otten scooped up the dog and went home.

The incident wasn't over.

"I was about to go to the north side police precinct to file a report when the MAPSI truck returned. The same driver got out and started yelling obscenities and threats at me. He said he would get my dog one way or another."

Mrs. Otten went into the house and called police. Badge 36 told police the dog was outside the fence. Mrs. Otten told police the dog couldn't have gotten outside the fence unless someone opened the gate.

Mrs. Otten later received notice that she was accused of interfering with an animal warden, a misdemeanor. If she wanted to fight the charge, she was to appear in Hennepin County Municipal Court.

She was not charged with arm biting, "but I was prepared to fight that, too."

Mrs. Otten showed up to fight the case Oct. 14 with a notarized statement that read in part:

"My dog is like a child to me, and is this any different than kidnapping? Should I have to pay a ransom?"

No one from MAPSI showed up in court, and the case was dismissed.

The dogcatcher signed the ticket he issued only as Badge 36. He did not use his name.

MAPSI, when contacted, would not say who Badge 36 was, and would not comment on the case.

Libya is poverty among plenty

By CHARLES T. POWERS
Los Angeles Times

TRIPOLI, Libya — First, there is the impression of his face everywhere. Col. Moammar Khadafy, The Leader, the inspirer, of the Socialist People's Libyan Jamahiriye, gazes out from shop windows, over traffic circles and from billboards offering commanding views of empty lots strewn with the rubble of construction projects.

Khadafy is not quite head of state here because, in theory, there is no government here. There is only the Jamahiriya. The Jamahiriya is the people, and the people are the government.

NEWCOMERS to Libya, for example the Westerners who come to work in Tripoli for the American oil companies, frequently find themselves confused at first over whether there is a government.

But then certain things can happen. They come home after a day's absence to find that their belongings have been put into the street and the house occupied by people who are connected with "authority," or the army, or perhaps both. When this happens, there is nothing that can be done about it, and any remaining confusion on the question of government ends.

"The most tyrannical dictatorships the world has known have existed under the shadow of parliaments," says Khadafy in his "Green Book," which he describes as "the final solution to the problem...of governing." Legislatures, political parties and elections have no place in Libya, Khadafy says. "Any pretension by an individual or group that it is responsible for law is dictatorship."

BUT THEN "part one" of the "Green Book" ends with this statement:

"But realistically, the strong always rule, i.e., the stronger part in society is the one that rules."

The portraits of the 39-year-old leader show him with his chin lifted, his handsome jawline prominent. In most of them, he is smiling and his gaze is toward the skies, the visionary seeking the source of his inspiration. Sometimes he is in traditional Moslem dress and sometimes in uniform. There is one billboard portrait of him, wearing mirrored sunglasses, that could have been drawn by Roy Lichtenstein, the American artist famous for his Pop Art comic strip canvases. One quality is common to all the various portraits of him: strength.

A first-time visitor to Tripoli is likely to come with a certain image in mind — powerful, oil-rich Libya. The city's actual appearance is disappointing, for it looks neither powerful nor rich. It looks, for the most part, shabby.

AND YET the signs of the money are there — in a harbor that is jampacked with unloading freighters and seems to go on for miles. The waterfront is walled by cargo containers piled high bringing goods from every country in the world that has something to sell. Every day there are ships waiting for berths to unload.

And there is money, too, in the construction that is going on all over the city. Three new hotels are being built to accommodate the delegations that Khadafy hopes will attend the Organization of African Unity summit meeting here next summer.

Away from the city's center, along the beaches fronting the Mediterranean, new villas are going up, row on row, in the favored Arab rococo style. Perhaps even the ever-present rubble, the construction site debris, is a sign of Libya's wealth.

BUT PERSONAL wealth — the average per capita income figures out at $10,000 — is inconspicuous. There are some longtime residents here who wonder if wealth actually exists any more.

Iranian asks for anti-Israel stand

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's Parliament speaker today proposed a pan-Islamic army to "liberate Palestine" and called on Moslem oil-producing countries to halt exports to nations assisting Israel.

Speaker Ali-Akbar Rafsanjani made the proposal in his weekly sermon at Tehran University. The state-run Tehran Radio carried a recording of the speech.

"Every country should field one brigade, 50 countries, 50 brigades, that is 15 to 20 divisions complete with their armor ... to liberate Palestine," he said.

Rafsanjani urged Moslem nations to stop exporting oil to countries that support or aid Israel, and to break relations with them.

"Don't give oil to the United States, to England, Germany, Japan," said Rafsanjani, adding that the restriction of oil export to countries which supply Israel with arms should be proportionate to the amount of arms provided to the Jewish state.

European community facing trouble

LONDON (AP) — The European Common Market ran into serious roadblocks today during negotiations to settle a two-year-old financial squabble, officials at a 10-nation summit meeting said.

They said if no further progress was made today, the last day of the two-day session, the meeting could end in failure.

"I can't honestly say a lot of progress has been made," said Bernard Ingham, spokesman for the Common Market presidency, held by Britain. "There are problems across the board."

Th¾re was a generl willingness by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, West German Chancellor Helmut S/nt spokesman Michel Vxuzelle said the summit meeting could end without firm agreement on anything but a decision to keep working on the problems at lower official levels.

The key task facing the leaders was to equalize contributions each country pays to the $25 billion yearly Common Market budget. Britain and West Germany pay millions of dollars more into the budget than they receive in program funds.

Among the proposals up for discussion was one to give Britain a bigger slice of the budget over a number of years to equalize its payments and benefits.

The leaders also were toying with the idea of adding up to $3 billion to a special loan pool that countries like Ireland, Italy, Greece and Britain could tap to fund public works projects that ease unemployment.

The toughest problem, Ingham and other spokesmen said, was reaching agreement on reforms of the 23-year-old trade bloc's agriculture policies, which siphon off 62 percent of expenditures.

One of the causes of Britain and West Germany's deficits is the flow of budget money to big agricultural countries like Ireland, France, Denmark, Luxembourg, Belgium, the Netherlands and Italy.

Saudi Arabian peace plan still causing disagreement

By MAGDA EL-SANGA
Associated Press Writer

FEZ, Morocco (AP) — The Arab world remained hopelessly split over Saudi Arabia's plan for an Arab-Israeli peace agreement today after the shortest summit conference in 21 years.

The summit host and chairman, King Hassan II of Morocco, angrily called off the Arab League's 12th meeting of chiefs of state and prime ministers Wednesday only five hours after he opened it with a call for unity.

Conference sources said the king was enraged by the absence of President Hafez Assad of Syria, one of five hardline chiefs of state who stayed away to insulate themselves against pressure to moderate their opposition to the Saudi plan.

Hassan reportedly told a closed session of the 21 delegations that at future meetings chaired by him, he would permit no one but chiefs of state to sit with him at the conference table.

Syrian Foreign Minister Abdelhalim Khaddam interrupted: "But I represent my president."

"You are not empowered to make a war-or-peace decisions," Hassan snapped back.

The king announced the cancellation in a nationwide television address, saying: "The summit has been postponed to a future date to be set by the foreign ministers. The second stage of the conference will be held in Morocco whenever the foreign ministers so decide."

It was the shortest summit conference since the Big Four meeting in Paris in May 1960, two weeks after an American U-2 spy plane piloted by Francis Gary Powers was shot down in Soviet Siberia. Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev demanded at the first session that President Eisenhower apologize and punish those responsible for the flight but Eisenhower refused and the conference collapsed.

Moroccan Foreign Minister Mohammed Boucetta told reporters the "second stage" of the Arab summit might be held in mid-January if the foreign ministers could work out the framework of an agreement.

But spokesmen for some of the hardline governments opposing the Saudi plan said they would never accept it. They said they could see no basis for reconvening the summit unless the plan was withdrawn.

The other hardliners who boycotted the summit were Chali of Algeria, Saddam Hussein of Iraq and Mohamed Ould Haidalla of Mauritania.

Their refusal to attend was obviously not what caused Hassan to cancel the meeting since they announced their decision well in advance, and none of them are essential to peace negotiations with Israel.

But Assad's cooperation is necessary, and his joining the boycott was a shock and a surprise to the king. He had been reported planning to stop in Libya en route to Fez to try to persuade Khadafy to attend, but he changed his plans at the last minute.

Wyoming Oil 'Lottery'
Open To All In December!

CARSON CITY, NEV. (Special)— Oil and gas leases involving thousands of acres of public lands will be awarded in December-January drawings conducted by the State of Wyoming.

Only U.S. citizens may participate in the little-known program which is mathematically controlled to assure each entrant an exact equal chance to win — even against the biggest oil company.

Most entrants risk no more than $25 to $45, tax deductible, to file an application in the drawing.

Some winners realize substantial rewards by assigning their newly won leases to major oil companies. An unusually lucky winner recently sold to Exxon for $280,000. He will also hold lifetime royalties on any successful drilling.

Further information and entry details are available by writing The H. Kirk Sanders Co. (Oil Lease Division) Dept. "T-80" P.O. Box 660, Carson City, Nevada, 89702. Enclose $1 for postage and handling.

The Sanders Company will rush official entry cards and instructions to meet earliest drawing deadline.

She put exercise on the gold record charts

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

It's the only one of its kind ever to crack the national "Top 100" charts and achieve "gold" status.

And Volume 2 is being published this month.

You can look good, have fun and feel fit. These are the promising words that appear on the album covers of "Carol Hensel's Exercise and Dance Program" album series.

Carol Hensel is a clear-voiced, slender 5'7" dance and fitness instructor who has helped revolutionize the exercising habits of America.

Her albums are accompanied by illustrated instruction booklets that demonstrate the various routines, making the programs easy to follow.

But it's not the old "1-2-up-down." The exercises are choreographed to award-winning tunes like Peter Allen's "I Go to Rio" and Gloria Gaynor's "I Will Survive." The movements are simple to follow and the only interruption in the music is Ms. Hansel's encouraging voice, coming in precisely with the beat so as not to interfere with the exercising rhythm.

In fact, her soft-spoken unregimented voice over these popular tunes encourages one with an occasional, "Yeah, come on, you can do it," or "We're almost there...just one more."

And when her sales reached the 500,000, she copped the covered Gold Record from the recording industry—the first for any exercise record.

After the second volume is released, there is speculation from the music company of a possible television show, workshops and clinics.

Hensel explained that she has a theory that no exercise program is worth anything if students don't use it.

With the record, a person can go through the program in his/her own pace at home—even stopping and starting over, if necessary. There's no embarrassing incriminations for those who can't do the exercises; no teachers to toss out directions like a drill sergeant.

In fact, the only interruption in the music is Ms. Hensel's encouraging voice, coming in precisely with the beat so as not to interfere with the exercising rhythm.

Incorporating Carol's ideas, the albums were produced by Joey Porrello of Our Gang Entertainment in Cleveland, Ohio, and marketed by Mirus Music Inc. Ms. Hensel says that people of all ages are buying the albums. Most seem to be women in the 25 to 40 age range, but she says that there are also quite a few teens and senior citizens using her albums.

"I think we're seeing an exercise explosion and I don't know if it has really peaked yet," says Carol. She suggests that anyone exercising at home should wear whatever is comfortable, start out slowly and try to exercise at least three times a week.

Each album provides 30-40 minutes of popular music with corresponding exercise/dance routines that, when used regularly, will lead to good overall muscle toning and improved cardiovascular fitness. She included warm-up and cool-down exercises to help prevent muscle strain. She also simplified the routines so that a non-dancer could pick them up quickly, but she tried to keep the movements creative, so as not to be boring.

Hensel was a dance major at Stephens College in Columbus, Mo., and studied at the Metropolitan Academy of Ballet in Washington, D.C., Ohio State University of Dance, and Ohio Ballet Institute in Akron.

She started out teaching dancing, with one or two exercise classes for students who were out of shape. It was only natural for her to put the exercises to music and choreograph the movements.

Soon her exercise classes outnumbered the dance classes and people were taping lssons to practice between sessions.

A student introduced Hensel to the president of a local recording company and the record was born.

— Hensel explained that the first side is to improve a person's cardiovascular system. The second side, she says, is floor work.

Some say the album is the cutting edge of a trend, a trend almost predictable in its combination of exercise and boppy, Top 40; and unusual in its point of origin and reverse motion—originating in the Midwest and spreading South, East and West, in about that order.

It has been played extensively in the Midwest and Hensel says that it's the jocks doing morning drive, who are playing this once or twice, catering to the domestic woman at home.

In some places, it has been reported that the record has even outsold Streisand-Gibb and Kenny Rogers.

Distributors have astutely mailed copies to health spas and sales are occurring most wildly in department stores, bookstore, sporting good stores, discount stores such as K-Mart and even grocery stores.

Hensel herself was surprised at the way it took off.

"I thought it would do well if it was marketed right. But I'm not real familiar with the recording business and I didn't even think of making the charts."

Fan letters have come in from all over the country and, "knock on wood, there has been no negative feedback," she says. The most frequent question asked is when is she going to come out with another album. That, as mentioned before, is scheduled for this month.

Until this summer, when it was written about in The Wall Street Journal and People magazine, it has received no national publicity or promotion.

With the album comes an illustrated 20-page booklet to help with the exercies. It is geared more to women than men because it emphasizes shaping up the legs, hips and thighs.

Children's books make suitable gifts for Christmas giving

The Putnam Publishing Group has several new children's books that make good ideas for Christmas giving.

Some are sure to be eventual collector's items and will please nostalgia buffs.

THE LITTLE ACTORS' THEATRE

"The Little Actors' Theatre is a reproduction of a nineteenth century German volume, an antique book by Isabella Braun. It is translated by Paula Didriksen and adapted by Petter Seymour. Illustration is in full color.

The book is a collection of four lively one-act plays which accompany three-dimensional scenes and characters that really move. The four intricately rendered scenes unfold at the pull of a tab to form exquisite miniature theaters. Each scene is accompanied by a short play set in spring, summer, autumn, or winter that children and their playmates can act out with the help of the little characters pictured.

The plays are charming and the characters endearing. In this reviewer's opinion, however, the book is not only for children, but also for nostalgia lovers and people of all ages.

It is also likely that the pull-tab paper picture scenes would not stand up to any hard play by children.

It is a fiction book available at $10.95.

THE BIG BOOK OF BRAMBLY HEDGE

Written and illustrated in full color by Jill Barklem, "The Big Book of Brambly Hedge" is an oversized book featuring beautiful, detailed nature pictures in full color.

The large-format (12" x 16") book has 12 poster-sized pictures in full color and a wealth of information about the inhabitants of Brambly Hedge, the cozily bucolic setting of the popular books of the same name published in 1980.

The book is exquisitely illustrated with rich watercolors and a wealth of affectionately and accurately rendered detail.

The pictures should bring alive any child's imagination with their portrayals of a community of field mice.

And, no less important, the book provides a wealth of information about nature, and the tools, furniture and artifacts of old country living.

The text is so placed that the pictures can be removed, if desired, and individually framed.

THE FLOWER FAIRIES MINIATURE LIBRARY

If you want to instill at a young age of your child the appreciation of nature and flowers, then "The Flower Fairies Miniature Library" is a good way to start.

Cicely Mary Barker is both author and illustrator of these four enchanting little volumes of poems and paintings, in their own beautifully designed miniature slipcase.

I'm not entirely sure that very young children would adequately understand the prose that accompanies each flower picture, but the rhythm and beauty of the written language, plus the magical charm of the pictures is a good beginning to an appreciation of nature.

Mrs. Barker's "Flower Fairy" books have been beloved favorites ever since their original publication in England in 1923. Now that they are in miniature, it's a perfect little gift for a special loved one of any age

The poetry/art book is available at $6.95.

STAIRSTEP FARM: ANNA ROSE'S STORY

Written by Anne Pellowski and illustrated in black and white by Wendy Watson, this book follows "Willow Wind Farm: Betsy's Story" and is the second in the series tracing four generations of a Polish-American family.

Written for children ages 8 to 12, it may be a littie difficult for the average American youngster who may know nothing of living on a farm, and know even less about the customs, words and songs of the Old Country (or Poland).

However, the books best characteristics are that it is warm, humorous and true-to-life.

The fiction/biography book is available at $9.95.

Look before leaping into job, advises family expert

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Unpaid work done in the home by a family member may be more valuable than the net income that person could earn in the labor force, says a family resource management specialist at Oklahoma State University.

"This is often true if the family has two or more preschool children, if a family member's health requires more than routine physical care, if the family has more than five children under age 18, or if the worker's anticipated earnings are relatively low," says Dr. Bonnie Braun.

She explains that in a recent study it was found that women spend from four to 14 hours daily doing household work, depending on employment status, number of children and other factors.

"Often, this household work gets a low prestige rating," she says.

While employed women brag of job accomplishments, some full-time homemakers describe themselves as "just" homemakers, partly because they have no accurate price tag to hang on their labors.

Mrs. Braun notes that household labor definitely comes for a price if you buy it in the marketplace. She suggests that full-time homemakers can estimate a stay-home pay by identifying a local wage rate for cooks, kitchen helpers, yard workers, dressmakers, child care providers, housekeepers and homemaker aides.

"Since wages vary depending on expertise and length of employment, coming up with rates applicable to a particular homemaker may be hard. A conservative estimate is that housework can be bought for $3.65 an hour — the average minimum wage for a homemaker aide."

"If a full-time homemaker works eight hours a day, including weekends, that's 56 hours," she says. "Multiplying by $3.65 an hour gives a weekly worth of $204.40 or nearly $10,630 a year."

Mrs. Braun explains that this figure does not include tasks that make a difference in how family members develop, live and feel, since these tasks are almost impossible to describe in monetary terms.

She lists knee patcher, house tender, cook, purchasing manager, counselor and comforter, and transportation coordinator as just some of the homemaking activities traditionally considered women's work.

"Though families are making strides in redefining roles, tradition persists," Mrs. Braun says.

If a woman is considering employment outside the home, she must estimate expenses to determine if income received will offset expenses and if the employment is worth the costs, Mrs. Braun points out.

Costs to consider include: food eaten away from home, travel, child care, dues and assessments and clothing, items each of which will vary from individual to individual.

"Obviously," she says, "the kind of food eaten and the type of restaurant will affect food costs.

DEAR ABBY

Mother's little love goes a long way

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You frequently fill your column with a lot of sanctimonious garbage about how much we owe our mothers, and how we ought to write, telephone or visit them as often as possible.

In my case, my mother is 88, mentally alert and in reasonably good health, but she is more than I can take, except in very small doses. For the last six years she has lived in a nursing home 600 miles away. She hasn't traveled more than 10 miles from her home in the last 35 years. The last time I visited her (last summer) she talked steadily for 45 minutes about people I had never heard of. When she wasn't talking about people I didn't know, she was complaining about the other people in the home, the food, the care, her aches and pains, and the high cost of everything. (She lacks for nothing, and the home she's in is one of the most expensive.)

What really makes me want to run screaming from her room is the way she always dredges up some incident from my childhood that she thinks is "amusing." It's invariably something that was painful, degrading and humiliating to me. She loves to talk about it, but it's like a knife in my gut!

I write to her often so I won't feel guilty about visiting her so seldom. Thanks for letting me get this off my chest. No name, please. I don't want to start any family wars. — INFREQUENT VISITOR

DEAR VISITOR: The next time you feel like running from your mother's room, pause a moment and take a long, hard look at her. You may see your future self.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, 24, will be getting married within the next six months. She wants a formal church wedding.

Of course, we will send engraved invitations, but we have a question. Our daughter's given name as it appears on her birth certificate is "Agatha Suzanne," but she has never been called anything but "Happy" from the time she was a year old. Very few people even know her real name.

How should it appear on the wedding invitations? We want everything to be strictly according to Hoyle. (P.S. And by the way, who was "Hoyle" anyway?) — PLANNING A WEDDING

DEAR PLANNING: Use Happy's given name on the wedding invitation.

P.S. "Hoyle" was Edmond Hoyle. He was born in 1671 in London and was the first technical writer on card games. His rules on whist gave rise to the common phrase, "according to Hoyle" — meaning the ultimate authority.

DEAR ABBY: A lot of women enjoy talking on the telephone, but I don't happen to be one of them. I am busy with gardening, canning, sewing and other productive activities, and I consider talking on the telephone a waste of time. Besides, it makes me nervous.

I have changed my telephone number three times in the last two years. It costs $25 every time you change your telephone number here, but it was worth it to me because each time I got rid of one bad pest. I kept my number secret for 10 months from one particularly persistent, long-winded pest by telling her I had my phone disconnected, but she got my number from a mutual friend and now I'm trapped.

When she calls me, I say, "I hear someone at my door, so I have to hang up," but she says, "Go ahead and see who it is. I'll wait."

Abby, this boring, talkative woman is driving me crazy! How can I discourage her calls? There is no cutting her off once she gets me on the phone. — TRAPPED IN TAHUA, WASH.

DEAR TRAPPED: What's wrong with the truth? Simply tell her that you dislike talking on the telephone; it makes you nervous. Just recite your speech and hang up.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letters Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

Here's the answer: Shellac qualities

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We had quite a discussion the other day about the qualities of shellac. One group argued that it is still one of the best finishing materials around, while the other said it is an old-fashioned finish that has lost its appeal because of the many new finishing materials that have been developed. Can you tell us something about its good and bad points?

A. — Shellac is still one of the best-selling finishing materials. For one thing, it is very versatile and is able to be used as a sealer or a final coat. If there is any question about its durability, it is still used where this quality is important. Furniture finished with shellac hundreds of years ago has retained its gloss and smoothness. Because it is elastic, it does not crack, as evidenced by its long-time use as a coating on bowling lanes. Another virtue is its ability to dry very quickly, enabling several coats to be applied in a single day. On the disadvantageous side, shellac is not waterproof, heatproof or alcohol-proof. Also, it does not have a long "shelf" life, so it must be discarded after it has been stored for six months or a year.

Q. — How do you loosen a rusted bolt that cannot be taken off? I have tried the white powdery lubricant someone recommended to me, but it hasn't helped.

A. — The lubricant you mentioned keeps things sliding or in working order, but once a part has "frozen" into place, it loses its effectiveness. You need one of the penetrating oils or other materials made specifically for the purpose of freeing rusted metals.

Q. — Since the weather has turned colder and our heat has been on, we are troubled with moisture on the windows, especially in the living and dining rooms. The water flows down the panes of glass and has started to stain the sills. How can we eliminate this?

A. — Year after year, this is the most frequently repeated question to this department. To correct the condition, you must understand the principle that condensation forms when warm, moist air settles on a cold surface. Thus, you have to allow the moist air to escape or be trapped, either through open windows, vents or exhaust fans on the one hand or dehumidifiers on the other. You can prove this to yourself merely by opening a window in a room where the condensation is taking place and you soon will see the panes dry up. Windows condense in kitchens and bathrooms where moisture emanates and there is no provision for allowing the high humidity to reach the outside, but they also condense in other rooms where the humidity is high.

Aids for disabled exhibit has wide range of gadgets, prices

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Brian Johnston rolled his wheelchair into the glare of corporate promotion and demonstrated that handicapped persons can help themselves around the house with ordinary low-cost hardware.

Johnston, 24, crippled by a diving accident eight years ago, was an especially inspirational do-it-yourself exhibiter during a Dimension in Independence exposition here.

For blind people, IBM displayed a $9,000 typewriter which has a synthetic voice.

For people needing a wheelchair lift, an Indiana corporation demonstrated a $1,995 mechanism.

For handicapped motorists seeking push-button driving, there were vans costing as much as $150,000.

For a quadriplegic in a wheelchair needing a way to open doors around the house, Lanson Industries offered an electronic door-operator for $600.

Then there was Johnston, sitting next door to Lanson's booth with a $3 door-opener among several of his inexpensive creations.

"I wanted to show people that you do not have to spend a lot of money to adapt living quarters for the handicapped," the Pewaukee, Wis., quadriplegic said.

"You can go to the hardware store and come up with a lot of inexpensive items that will help adapt your residence to your particular handicap," he said.

Johnston, who works for an agency involved in housing for the disabled, said he had become "tired of seeing great amounts of money being spent to aid the disabled when you can do a lot more with a lot less."

"Most people just talk about helping the disabled by putting in ramps, but I look at it like this: 99 percent of the time when I go up a ramp in my wheelchair, I can't get the door open," he said.

The Johnston display included a bread board with holes into which dishware can nestle to discourage spills; hooks for pans and other cooking utensils which would be hard to find in a drawer; water faucets with levers instead of rotating knobs.

The doorknob is one of Johnston's cleverest conquests. A $3 attachable rubber handle eliminates the problem of having to twist the knob with rotating wrist action.

He even offers building contractors a system of electrical light switches and outlets at varying heights to accommodate the handicapped.

He said his handiwork had begun as therapy while he was recovering from the accident that injured his spine, and that he would now like to get into the business of marketing aids for handicapped people.

His research has been subsidized by the Milwaukee County Commission for the Handicapped.

Tree of life survives

By STEWART TAGGART
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Just over a year ago, Kanya Kekhumba watched the bulldozers raze his African spiritual bookstore in Harlem to make way for a $100 million hotel and convention center.

A year later, there is no sign of the convention center, but Kekhumba still receives mail from all over the United States, inquiring about his bookstore, the Tree of Life.

A one-time stockbroker named Norman L. McGhee, Kekhumba made a midcareer switch in 1970, changed his name and opened the bookstore with $75 and a closet full of books.

"In our heyday, we stocked over 3,000 titles on herbology, natural healing and psychic rebirth," he said. "And we could never keep up with the demand.

"That says a lot about a neighborhood where nobody is supposed to read."

Now the 50-year-old Kekhumba is in much the same situation he was 10 years ago, running the bookstore the best he can out of his apartment. Boxes filled with such titles as "Back to Eden," "Psychic Perception," and "In Search of Ancient Egypt," are stacked on the floor. Occasionally, someone comes by to browse.

"In the 10 years since we've been in business, we've changed the lives of countless aimless kids, junkies and ex-convicts with books on nutrition, natural healing and psychic rebirth," he said.

"He has been a real help," said O.D. Merrick, 50, a customer. "Once I needed a copy of a book but didn't have the money, so he let me read it in the back room."

Customers can still sit and read the books in his apartment, although there is less space.

"I like to see my business as spreading ideas," he said. "One of them is that people just need to know that they can alter their lives if they want to."

Kekhumba said he gets a lot of mail from prisoners.

"We had one guy who was so turned on by what we were sending him that he refused parole because he felt he hadn't read enough yet," he said. "It blew the parole board's mind."

The Tree of Life, once a three-story building covered in multicolored murals depicting ancient Egypt and spiritual themes on 125th Street and Lenox Avenue, was torn down in September 1980. A year and a tight-fisted president later, the construction plan is moving slowly.

Though Kekhumbha can understand that, he's short on money, too. He is behind in his rent and hasn't been able to retrieve many of his books put into storage by city marshals when they evicted him from the store in September 1980.

Cervical cap effectiveness subject of investigations

By MARIE DENUNZIO
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Karen Gardner was 25 when she became pregnant three years ago even though she was using a diaphragm at the time. After she had an abortion, she had no idea what type of birth control device to use.

Gardner, a Los Angeles attorney who asked that her real name not be used ("I don't want my mother to know"), had already taken birth control pills for seven years and did not think it was wise to continue. A medical condition prevented her from using an IUD, which was just as well because she'd read so many horror stories about the device she didn't want to use one anyway.

She visited a women's health center where she heard about cervical caps — a birth control device which has been used by women in Europe for years but is not well-known in the United States. She immediately went to a private nurse practitioner who fitted her with a cervical cap.

Gardner has had a cervical cap for more than a year now and insists it is the best form of birth control available.

Similar to a diaphragm, a cervical cap is usually made of plastic or rubber and fits in the upper vaginal canal. It acts as a barrier that holds contraceptive cream or jelly and prevents the sperm from entering the uterus. However, the cervical cap is smaller than a diaphragm and blocks only the cervix as opposed to the entire upper vaginal canal.

The biggest controversy concerning cervical caps is how long the devices can be worn and still be effective. Manufacturers of cervical caps sold in England recommend that they not be inserted more than 24 hours prior to intercourse. Some women's health organizations claim the caps can be inserted up to seven days in advance and need not be removed even if the woman has repeated intercourse. That gives it a big advantage over a diaphragm which can only be inserted up to a few hours before intercourse.

Proponents also claim it is just as effective as the diaphragm in preventing pregnancy and is less likely to become dislodged during intercourse. Many users, however, compiain it is more difficult to insert and remove than a diaphragm.

When studies released in the 1970's listed possible adverse side effects of both birth control pills and the IUD, several women's health organizations began pressuring the FDA to study the cervical caps.

On Jan. l, 1981, the FDA classified cervical caps as investigational devices. Currently, only medical personnel who are approved by the FDA to study the device may prescribe it. They are required to conduct extensive follow-ups on the women and report their results to the FDA. The women must sign consent forms acknowledging that the device is only experimental.

Bill Rados, a spokesman for the FDA, said the device probably won't be on the general market (provided through a physician or nurse practitioner) for three or four years at the earliest.

Rados said it was too early to tell, but preliminary reports from a few of the 240 researchers around the country currently studying the caps were "somewhat disappointing," although he admitted the reports were inconclusive.

Renee Potik, a nurse practitioner who works with a physician and is approved by the FDA to study cervical caps, has fitted about 1,000 women with the device since she first started working with them in 1979. She estimates that she successfully fits 85 percent of the women who come to her office requesting a cervical cap. She said of those women about 50 percent are "satisfied" with the caps.

In order to be considered satisfied the device must not only keep the woman from getting pregnant but also be easy for her to insert and remove, not harm her body tissues or produce any infection and her partner should not be able to detect whether she is wearing it.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Net a neat holiday bow

DEAR HELOISE:

I would like to tell you how I use your famous nylon net.

I buy several yards of green net (my front door is red) and tie my door as you would a large package, making a huge bow on both the inside and outside of the door.

On the outside of the door, I add other decorations I like. On the inside, I display my Christmas cards on the net.

I have a pretty door at Christmastime for only a few cents and no holes in the door to upset my husband. — Irene LaBasse

+ + +

Hubby surely appreciates your thoughtfulness when painting time rolls around! Bet your door looks super and very Christmasy as well. Thanks for "your" nylon net tip. — Hugs, Heloise

CARPET CARE

Dear Heloise: When I want to apply baking soda to my carpet to freshen it, I put it in my flour sifter.

It goes on much more evenly and is easy to apply. — M. Tullock

BAND UNIFORM PLUMES

Dear Heloise: The hint in today's paper about cleaning the plumes on parade hats brought back memories of the years when my children had to maintain their band's prize-winning status.

They cleaned their white plumes with cornmeal by shaking them in a plastic bag, then stored them in a plastic bag with baby powder. They shook the bag thoroughly before removing the plumes to distribute the powder.

The result was beautiful white plumes. They really looked sharp. — Cathy Miller

RECIPE CARDS

Dear Heloise: I like to look through greeting cards I have received but I don't have room to save the whole collection so this is what I do...

I trim the card that I want to save and, when I find a recipe that sounds good in my newspaper or a magazine, I grab my collection, pick a card and write the recipe on the back.

This way, I get to enjoy the card and remember the person who sent it each time I use the recipe. Somewhere on the card I make a note of the date received and from whom. — Vee Jay

Have a thoughtful idea you want to share? Send it to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, Texas 78216. She can't answer your letter personally but she's on the lookout for heartwarming ideas to feature in her column.

BETTER DISHCLOTHS

Dear Heloise: Dishcloths seem flimsy? Try buying facecloths on sale in a color that is different from your bathroom set.

They are much more substantial and do a better job. — Catherine Mindling

Artist starts new venture

By HARRY DEDERICHS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Living with a broken arm or leg in a cast can be depressing. It was for 24-year-old Michael T. Poole, who nearly tore off his cast in frustration after an auto accident in May.

Instead, he decided to paint it — a service which he now provides for others.

"I almost picked it apart," Poole said of the cast on his right arm, his writing hand. As an art student, he knew he could not destroy art. So taking up a brush in his shaky left hand, he used art to protect the cast.

"It was psychologically easier to deal with," Poole recalled.

When he got out of the hospital, the cast — decorated with a skydiver descending on a tropical island — drew so much attention that he saw a business opportunity.

Poole, originally from Chicago, charges $35 for painting a full arm cast, which takes about one hour. He asks $55 for a full leg and $100 for a full body cast.

"Have paint brush, will travel." That's Poole's motto. "I can't ask them to limp to my place," he says, so he works in hospitals or in sick rooms in homes.

He says doctors and nurses are delighted about his work because it often perks up the patient and speeds the healing process. But the patients get the most from it — less frustration during a sad time.

Poole paints almost everything his customers ask for. If they have no idea, he has a catalog with 50 examples. His favorites are reproductions of da Vinci, Monet and van Gogh.

On the house

By ANDY LANG

Are you satisfied with where you live?

If the place is really right for you, it improves your mental outlook, helps you to live longer and increases your income.

That conclusion is the result of a nationwide study by three professors, Dr. Thomas F. Bowman, Dr. George A. Giuliani and Dr. Ronald Minge. Their findings are contained in their book, "Finding the Best Place to Live in America."

The idea is to enable you to make a self-evaluation that will tell you whether you already are living in the right place or, if you contemplate a change, the most likely new location. The premise is thatthe area you call home should and can be selected on the basis of accurate information.

The 80 areas analyzed by the authors are designated by cities, but they include suburban sites and many rural country places as well.

Before you can decide which might be the best place to live for someone with your likes and dislikes, you have to know what your likes and dislikes are. The professors have what they call a "prospering" test. Your mission, if you care to accept it, is to choose from each matched pair of descriptive statements the one that is most important to you as you look for the best place to prosper.

If you think it makes little difference where you live because you know you can handle people as well as changed circumstances, consider these facts:

In some areas, personal income growth is five times greater than in some others. In some places, costs for electricity are 20 times higher than in some others. In some areas, house prices average more than twice as much as in others. And in some states, property taxes are as much as six times as high as in other states.

From now until 1990, 15 times as many houses per thousand people will be built in some areas as in others. It should not surprise you to learn most of these houses will be built in the Sunbelt.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, November 28, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The annual Army-Navy football game will be played in Philadelphia today. Celebrities sharing this birthday with you include actress Hope Lange and singer Randy Newman. In the year ahead, friends provide the best job leads for those seeking new employment or a career change. The financial picture shows improvement, thanks to both greater income and fewer family pressures. Be more conservative and gains will come more quickly. Spring will be a particularly happy time for love, marriage. Make harmony your watchword at home. A born optimist, you regularly look on the bright side. Encourage loved one to do the same.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not make any important decisions without first discussing them with loved ones. You obtain some information that can help ease financial pressures.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Journeys are likely to bring happy results. Be sure to reconfirm your return-trip arrangements. Spending time with children can be especially gratifying now.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friends will be of more assistance than family members in helping you sort out your thoughts and desires. A small party at home is fun and inexpensive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day for doing routine things in new ways. Others may not approve of your ideas. Compromise is your best option. Watch for an opportunity to show more initiative.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Home improvements increase property values. Considerable patience and self-control may be necessary today. A loan may now be repaid in full.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Family finances merit discussion. Welcome loved ones' ideas but depend on your own judgment. Give more attention to creative and artistic pursuits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A shared family experience will add to your enjoyment today. Romance takes an interesting turn. Rely on your own efforts but listen to suggestions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Loved ones may be supersensitive today! Be more discreet when voicing your opinions. Letter or phone message will bring welcome financial news.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Morning hours favor housework and small home repairs. Observe all safety rules. Social events give you a chance to meet someone who shares your interests.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Make this a wonderful weekend for your loved ones. If single, you could make a mistake if you put all of your eggs in one basket. Your honesty pays handsome dividends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day for Christmas shopping and mailing packages to family members overseas. Recreation can have both physical and mental benefits. Your imaginative thinking enhances romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your social life settles down to a pattern more in keeping with your finances. Keep your eyes open today. Try to get to know distant family members better.

For both declarer and the defenders, the time to study the hand and prepare your campaign is before you follow to the first trick. You never know how soon the moment of truth might arrive! On today's hand, East was alert and ready.

Despite the fact that he had a balanced hand and a weak suit, we approve of South's decision to respond one heart rather than one no trump. Experience shows that four of a major suit is usually a more desirable contract than three no trump, and to bypass the heart suit could result in a 4-4 fit in that suit going by the boards. Having said that, let us hasten to add that on this particular hand three no trump would have been a superior contract. But no blame attaches to North for his jump to game.

In an effort to build tricks, West elected to lead from his club honor rather than from nothing in spades. East took time to analyse the position. Since it was most unlikely that his partner was leading away from the ace against a suit contract, the hand became virtually an open book.

Dummy was an ominous sight. There were no tricks to be had in the minor suits, and at most one in spades. If the contract were going to be defeated, the tricks would have to come from the trump suit. Having worked that out, East was prepared.

Dummy's ten of clubs won the first trick, and declarer led a trump. East rushed in with the king of trumps!

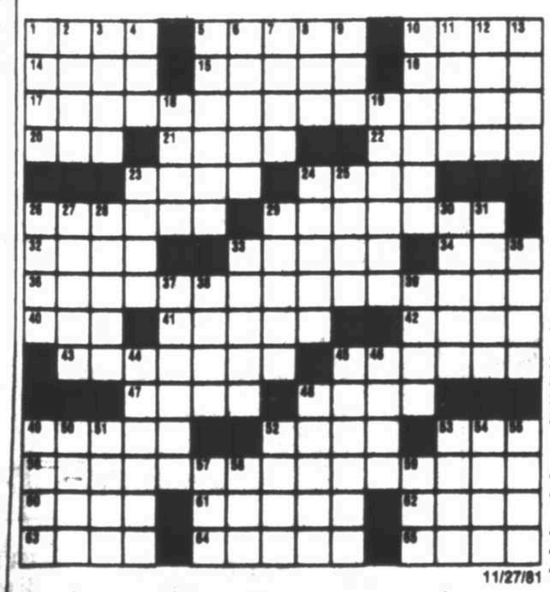

When that won, the rest of the defense was easy. East returned a diamond. Declarer won and continued trumps. West won the ace and gave his partner a diamond ruff for a one-trick set.

Didn't East take a wild risk by rising with the king of trumps? Not really. If South held the ace of hearts, or if West held the singleton ace, all the play could cost was an overtrick or two—a small price for a chance to defeat a game contract.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? The space shuttle Columbia comes in for a landing at Kennedy Space Center, Fla., aboard a modified 747 after a 54-hour journey into space, a perfect landing in California and a delayed and troubled maintenace schedule.

Shuttle shuttled home

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Showing a few battle scars from its second mission, the space shuttle Columbia returned home to Cape Canaveral where workers will prepare the orbiter for its third flight.

About 9,000 people gathered in and around Kennedy Space Center to welcome back the spacecraft after its 1.8 million-mile flight. The Columbia, flying piggyback on a jumbo jet, returned to the center 13 days after blasting off into space on its second mission.

As the Boeing 747 carrying the Columbia winged through the sky, orbital test flight manager and former astronaut Donald "Deke" Slayton flew victory rolls alongside.

The Columbia's return from Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., where it landed Nov. 14, was slightly behind schedule because of delays there Tuesday and during a refueling stop overnight Wednesday at Bergstrom Air Force Base, Texas.

Several thermal tiles on the shuttle's underside had been scorched brown by the tremendous heat of re-entry. About six tiles will be replaced, but the others, which protect the shuttle and its passengers during re-entry, suffered only slight damage and will be repaired on the shuttle, NASA officials said.

"It's in super shape," said James Harrington, chief orbiter operations engineer for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "The tiles came out with very little damage."

"She's in great shape," Slayton said after landing the chase plane he flew behind the jet.

The 747 taxied to an equipment area where workers will remove the Columbia from the jet. The shuttle is to be towed into the Orbiter Processing Facility today, where workers will prepare it for its flight in mid-March.

Columbia's second mission — the first time an orbiter was sent back into space — was cut short by a fuel cell failure. The defective cell will be removed from the shuttle and shipped to its manufacturer for testing, Harrington saiad.

Saturday bus service to begin

MidTran will institute Saturday bus service Dec. 5 on a trial basis in response to a citizen survey.

Buses will operate on a demand-response, reservation basis from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays, and the system's Brown and Green flex routes will be in operation.

A bus each hour will provide service to Midland Park Mall and K-mart with trips to Dellwood Mall on the half hour.

Reservations for Saturday door-to-door pickup should be made by 3 p.m. Fridays by telephoning MidTran, 684-7433. Subscription service won't be honored on Saturdays.

Regular Saturday rates will be $1.75 for door-to-door pickup and 75 cents for street pickup. Senior citizens with MidTran identification cards ride free.

A survey conducted through The Midland Reporter-Telegram and random telephone and rider polls revealed a wide interest in Saturday service — especially if it would provide rides to local marketplaces.

The trial Saturday service will run 120 days, and MidTran Director Jim Johnson said 60 percent ridership must be attained to make the service viable on a permanent basis.

MidTran Operations Superviser Doris Carter analyzed survey responses to arrive at a service she hopes will fill the need expressed by Midland residents.

"What we found to be most prevalent among the responses was a need for service that would carry our riders from the east and southeast to the shopping malls and stores in the west and northwest," Ms. Carter said.

After operating for 20 months, MidTran utilizes seven mini-buses, including two equipped with wheelchair lifts, and seven vans. With recent approval by the Midland City Council to purchase additional buses, MidTran will receive three more mini-buses in 30 days and another seven by the end of March.

Operating costs for the system are split 50-50 between the city and the Urban Mass Transportation Administration after fares are deducted.

UMTA provides for 80 percent of capital costs with 13 percent provided by the state and the remaining 7 percent picked up by the city.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Lithium is given to disturbed children

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father was a patient in a psychiatric hospital for a few weeks because of depression. He was given lithium and is now much better. The hospital also had a children's unit. What I'm wondering is whether disturbed children get the same kinds of drugs. — Lois, Los Angeles

Dear Lois: Lithium is used in the treatment of children with certain types of emotional disorders.

Dear Dr. Solomon: One of our children recently passed away, and of course my wife and I are very upset. My wife's mother says that the sooner we have another baby, the better we will feel. Both my wife and I are uncertain about whether this is the best way to go. Your opinion in this matter would be appreciated. — Mr. S.W., Kansas City

Dear Mr. W.: I would not advise any of my patients to have a child for therapeutic reasons — whether to take the place of a child who died, or to save a marriage, or for any similar reason. Bringing a child into the world is too serious a decision for it to be based on such factors.

I would suggest you discuss your feelings with your clergyman, your physician, or with the personnel at one of the social service organizations in your community. They may help you sort out your feelings about having another child because you really want one, or having another child as a misguided form of therapy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter has been found to have scoliosis, but the doctor says she does not have to wear a brace, at least for the time being. While I'm relieved at that, I don't want to neglect the condition. Wouldn't it be best for a child with scoliosis to wear a brace as soon as the condition is discovered? — Mrs. V.U., Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Mrs. U.: You don't mention the age of your child, or the degree of curvature; however, Dr. Wilton H. Bunch, chairman of the department of orthopedics and rehabilitation at Loyola University Medical Center in Maywood, Illinois, recently spoke on the subject of bracing for children with scoliosis, and his comments should be of interest.

Dr. Bunch notes that only 10 percent of children with scoliosis require bracing, and that this is related to the degree of spinal curve progression — the greater the severity of the spinal curve, the greater the risk of progression. Sex and race play a part in this condition, with progression more common in girls than in boys, and in whites than in blacks. The possibility of a spinal curve progessing declines as a child grows older.

If a youngster does require a brace, the timing depends more on his or her degree of development than on actual age. In girls, breast development is the key, indicating to the doctor when bracing will provide maximum benefit.

In short, bracing may or may not be necessary in a child with scoliosis; but even if it is, a period of watchful waiting does not mean ignoring the condition.

Soup kitchens feed Argentina's jobless

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Job layoffs are making it difficult for thousands to put food on the table in Argentina — a country that is one of the world's major exporters of beef and grain. A church in one town has opened a soup kitchen for children of jobless parents.

The rising unemployment rate also has given civilian opposition forces a standard to bear in rallying against the military government.

Argentina enjoys the highest per-capita income in Latin America next to oil-rich Venezuela. Compared to much of Central and South America, most of the country's 27 million people live a relatively good life. But comparisons with years past come more readily to Argentines, and more of them are out of work now than at any time since 1972.

The government claims 5.5 percent of the work force of nearly 11 million is idle, three times the percentage of three years ago. The Argentine Industrial Union claims it is 13 percent.

Argentina has no unemployment insurance, and those laid off with no savings are hard pressed to put food on the table.

Elia Chavez stood in the Southern Hemisphere's spring sun recently outside Our Lady of the Miracle Church in the town of Bosques, 20 miles southeast of Buenos Aires. She was waiting for her seven children who were eating lunch inside, partaking of the "olla popular" (common kettle) the Rev. Gino Cardenal started in September to help stave off hunger in his parish.

Mrs. Chavez' husband, a construction worker, was laid off in October.

"He is desperate," she said. "He can't stand it when the children ask him for bread and he can't give it to them. He did not want us to come to the 'olla.' He said others need it more. But what am I to do? If it weren't for this, the children would not eat."

The Argentine Episcopal Conference, the supreme council of the Roman Catholic Church here, issued a document recently recalling that the nation's bishops had expressed their concern over rising unemployment last May.

"Since then," said the recent declaration, "the situation has become graver, to the point that unemployment now is critical."

Cardenal started the lunch program in his church after children, many of whose fathers are laid-off auto workers, began turning up at the church every day asking for food. At first, he and some volunteers made the rounds of grocers and butchers asking for donations of one kilo (2.2 pounds) of produce a week. The program originally provided lunches of soups, noodles and stews for 30 children a day three times a week.

It is now feeding more than 150 every weekday. Reports in Buenos Aires newspapers brought contributions from the capital, where other soup kitchens were reportedly springing up in industrial neighborhoods.

The automobile, metallurgical, textile and construction industries have been particularly hard hit in Argentina's current deep recession. Industry Minister Guillermo Kuhl says industry is operating at 50 percent of capacity and blames 130 percent annual interest rates, heavy industrial indebtedness and imports for the bleak picture.

The Newspaper BIBLE

GOD HAS NO 'TEACHER'S PETS'

"Well," you may be saying, "what terrible people you have been talking about!" But wait a minute! You are just as bad. When you say they are wicked and should be punished, you are talking about yourselves, for you do these very same things. And we know that God, in justice, will punish anyone who does such things as these.

Do you think that God will judge and condemn others for doing them and overlook you when you do them, too? Don't you realize how patient He is being with you? Or don't you care? Can't you see that He has been waiting all this time without punishing you, to give you time to turn from your sin? His kindness is meant to lead you to repentance.

But no, you won't listen; and so you are saving up terrible punishment for yourselves because of your stubbornness in refusing to turn from your sin; for there is going to come a day of wrath when God will be the just Judge of all the world. He will give each one whatever his deeds deserve. He will give eternal life to those who patiently do the will of God, seeking for the unseen glory and honor and eternal life that He offers. But He will terribly punish those who fight against the truth of God and walk in evil ways--God's anger will be poured out upon them. There will be sorrow and suffering for Jews and Gentiles alike who keep on sinning. But there will be glory and honor and peace from God for all who obey Him, whether they are Jews or Gentiles. For God treats everyone the same.

He will punish sin wherever it is found. He will punish the heathen when they sin, even though they never had God's written laws, for down in their hearts they know right from wrong. God's laws are written within them; their own conscience accuses them, or sometimes excuses them. And God will punish the Jews for sinning because they have His written laws but don't obey them. They know what is right but don't do it. After all, salvation is not given to those who know what to do, unless they do it.

Carano leads Cowboys past Chicago, 10-9

Thanksgiving a good day for Dallas backup quarterbacks

AP Laserphoto

Dallas Cowboy quarterback Danny white holds his had after being hit in the second quarter Thursday afternoon in a game with the Chicago Bears. White scrambled for eight yards before being hit and fumbling the ball. Chicago recovered the fumble and White left the game only to return once to punt. Dallas went on to win, 10-9.

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — History shows the turkey of the Dallas Cowboys' football team — the backup quarterback — can always look forward to Thanksgiving Day.

It was Thanksgiving Day in 1974 that Clint Longley came off the bench for the injured Roger Staubach to beat Washington 24-23 on a last-second touchdown pass.

Glenn Carano got his chance Thursday when Danny White was knocked out of the game in the second quarter and produced a 10-9 victory over the luckless Chicago Bears on a late fourth period touchdown drive.

The victory put the Cowboys a half game ahead of Philadelphia in the National Conference Eastern Division with a 10-3 record while the Bears tumbled to 3-10.

"We'll be able to swallow our turkey tonight," said a thankful Dallas Coach Tom Landry.

WHITE SUFFERED bruised ribs when he was tackled while scrambling for a first down. Doctors said X-Rays proved negative and he may be available to play in 10 days against Baltimore.

"Glenn did just a great job," said Landry. "He was very tight in the first half but settled down in the second half.

"Danny is hurting and we still have to check on his arm more. He has some nerve damage or something ... he's hurting ... hopefully he will be back in 10 days."

After a 3-3 halftime deadlock, the Bears moved ahead 9-3 early in the fourth quarter on quarterback Vince Evans' two-yard touchdown run. However, Ed "Too Tall" Jones blocked John Roveto's extra point attempt to set the stage for a Carano-led comeback.

James Jones returned a punt 17 yards to the Chicago 37. Carano scrambled for 11 yards and passed 15 yards to Ron Springs. Two plays later Springs scored from five yards out and Rafael Septien kicked the extra point.

Roveto's 49-yard field goal try with 31 seconds to play was wide right.

The loss spoiled a brilliant day by Chicago's Walter Payton, who rushed 38 times for 179 yards.

"It doesn't mean anything when you lose," said Payton. "We lost."

"Payton is the best back in football," said Landry. "He has great strength and great running ability. We just couldn't stop him."

CARANO ADMITTED "I was nervous at the start. I started getting into the flow of things in the fourth quarter.

He added, "It was a difficult feeling to have to play under the circumstances. There was some confusion out there for awhile."

Carano had only thrown 12 passes all year. He completed 6 of 15 Thursday for 131 yards, including a 55-yard completion to Tony Hill.

White said of Carano: "He did a fantastic job in a trying situation ... the pressure was on him."

White said of the Cowboys' stretch drive "Every game now is a playoff game."

About his injury, White said "I don't think the hit was flagrant. I have 10 days until the next game to get the soreness out."

A crestfallen Chicago Coach Neill Armstrong said "Just when you've been in this game and think you've seen everything happen to you, something else happens to you — a blocked extra point keeps you from tying the game.

"I don't know what happened with that kick. The snap and hold looked good ... our players are sick and disgusted with this loss."

EVANS SAID "Dallas is a fine football team but we gave 'em a day's work ... there are no quitters on this team."

Chicago safety Doug Plank said he was amazed about how blase the Dallas fans were over the victory.

"If you were blind, you would have not known it was a football game going on out there," said Plank. "The fans in the Bermuda Triangle (Texas Stadium) are spoiled."

It was Dallas' 17th consecutive regular season victory in Texas Stadium.

Dallas is now 7-3 against Chicago.

Battered Longhorns defeat Aggies in game for pride

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The bruised and battered Texas Longhorns drove 80 yards without a limp for one touchdown and got scores on a 60-yard dash by John Walker and a 38-yard pass from Robert Brewer to Herkie Walls to whip Texas A&M 21-13 in a game "played for pride."

Texas Coach Fred Akers said after the Thanksgiving Day game that injuries had left his seventh-ranked Longhorns "one of the more weakened teams" in the Southwest Conference.

"We're pretty bruised and battered and I'm glad we've got some time to heal up before going to the Cotton Bowl" against No. 4 Alabama.

Texas, 9-1-1, had six starters on the sidelines with injuries against A&M which lost one of the nation's top quarterbacks when Gary Kubiak reinjured his right shoulder with 4:03 left int he first half.

However, A&M coach Tom Wilson said Kubiak should be "fine" when A&M, 6-5, plays Oklahoma State in the Independence Bowl at Shreveport, La., Dec. 12.

ASKED ABOUT the fierce Texas pass-rush that sacked Kubiak two times and roughed him on two late hits, Wilson said, "I can't comment on that until I see the films, but I would be very disappointed if it was anything intentional."

Wilson said he had always considered the rivalry "a clean one."

A&M, with a wind gusting to 20 mph at its back, drove to the Texas 18 and 10 yard lines against the nation's No. 2 defense in the first quarter but settled for field goals of 35 and 27 yards by David Hardy.

Brewer, a late-season sub for injured Rick McIvor, guided Texas 79 yards against the wind to the A&M one, then punched it over on second down after the teams switched ends of the field.

After an A&M field goal attempt of 46 yards was wide, Walker raced for a score behind blocks by guard Doug Dawson near the line of scrimmage and Walls downfield.

Walker, a third teamer until injuries cost Texas Rodney Tate and A.J. "Jam" Jones, ran 36 times for 178 yards — the most any back has gotten against A&M this year.

FOLLOWING A 32-yard punt to the A&M 38, Texas scored on its next offensive play, with Brewer pitching a strike to Walls, a 9.2-second sprinter, in the end zone.

That ended Texas' scoring with 6:09 left in the second quarter.

Kubiak's sub, John Elkins, threw a 50-yard pass to Mike Whitwell at the Texas five to set up the final score of the game.

It came on a 6-yard Elkins toss to Don Jones with 11:15 remaining in the third quarter.

Wilson, who recently learned that A&M regents would honor at least the last year of his contract next year, said "I'm not disappointed at all in the outcome of the game. I could not be more proud of a football team."

Texas middle linebacker Doug Shankle, who has played in losing efforts against A&M the past two years said, "I think this game meant more than any. It was a game played for pride."

Chaps end losing streak against Allen College

AMARILLO—Midland College snapped a three-game losing streak by defeating Allen College, 84-75, in a first-round Amarillo Tournament game here Thursday. The Chaparrals return to action against Panola College at 6 p.m. today.

The win leveled Midland's record at 3-3. MC had lost all three games in a tournament at Barton County, Kansas, last weekend.

Puntus Wilson scored 20 points to lead MC while Lance McCain added another 18 as Midland took a 43-34 halftime lead and then held Allen at arm's length throughout the second half, maintaining a 10-point spread most of the way.

The Chaps played better defense than they had displayed in their Kansas trip and Coach Jerry Stone was hopeful that it would pay off in Monday's Western Junior College Conference opener Monday against South Plains.

Lenny Thornton's 22 points and Darrell Tanner's 23 led the Allen aggregation.

Islanders drill St. Louis, 9-2

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Maybe it was the holiday spirit. Or the competition. Or the fact that it was their last home game for almost three weeks.

Whatever the cause, the New York Islanders were at their Stanley Cup championship best Thanksgiving night as they drilled the St. Louis Blues 9-2 behind the five-point efforts of Bryan Trottier and Anders Kallur and four points by Mike Bossy.

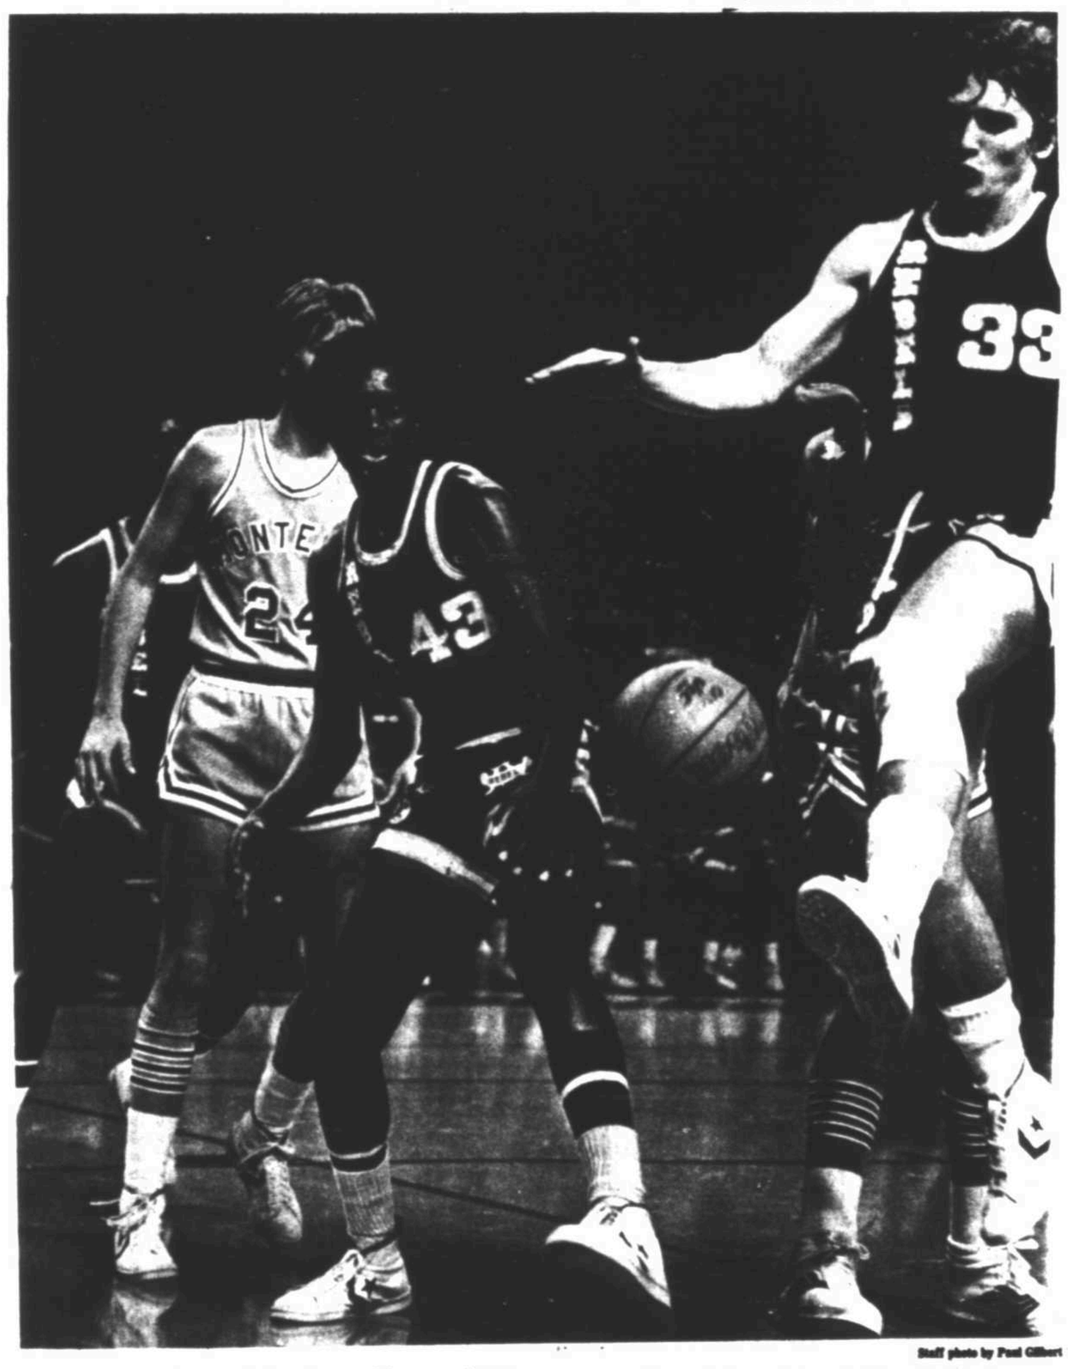

Elsewhere in the National Hockey League, it was Philadelphia 3, Boston 1, and Calgary 7, Los Angeles 1.

A five-goal second period by the defending NHL titlists broke open the game against the team which finished second in the overall standings last season. Now, the Islanders take to the road for seven games, comforted by the knowledge that they're playing up to par.

The Islanders ant Blues were tied 2-2 until Kallur scored his second goal of the game with merely 20 seconds left in the first period. Then, the rout was on, with Bossy — who is in his fifth NHL season — scoring the 100th power-play goal of his career. He has 260 goals overall. The Islanders were so powerful that they drove Blues goalie Mike Liut from the net after two periods. Flyers 3, Bruins 1

Philadelphia got goals from Tim Kerr in the first period and Brian Propp in the second. The Bruins, losers of three straight, with just one goal in each of the losses, got their offense from Brad McCrimmon on a long slapshot with 6:22 remaining. But, as the Bruins pressed for a tie, Bobby Clarke got an empty net goal in the final minute. Flames 7, Kings 1

Kevin Lavallee had a goal and two assists and Ken Houston scored twice to up the Flames' unbeaten streak to five games, 4-0-1. Los Angeles, which has been outscored 31-9 in four straight losses, saw right wing Dave Taylor's consecutive game scoring streak end at 21. It was the longest string in the NHL in three years.

The Midland Lee Rebels, along with cross-town rival Midland High and six other Texas teams, will take part in the annual Tall City Invitational tonight and Saturday at Chapparal Center. Rebels Steve Cherryholms (33) and Olen Smith (43) are shown here in action against Lubbock Monterey in their season opener last week.

Eight teams to compete in Tall City Invitational

The annual Tall City Invitational Basketball Tournament opens for the first of a two-day stand today at the Midland College Chaparral Center with eight teams fighting for the trophies for first, second, third and consolation.

The tournament features the possibility of Midland High and Midland Lee playing each other for the first time this season, but only if the two teams make it to the championship bracket.

Getting in the way of a MHS-Lee championship battle are the remaining six teams in the tournament, Amarillo's Palo Duro, El Paso's Burges, Bel Air and Parkland, Odessa Ector and Big Spring. With the exception of Ector which is a highly-ranked AAAA school this season, all participating teams are from class AAAAA.

All tournament games will be played at Chap Center with the first matchup scheduled for 4 p.m., pitting Burgess against Big Spring followed by Bel Air against Ector at 6 p.m., Midland against Parkland at 7:30 p.m. and Palo Duro against Midland Lee at 9 p.m.

The winners of the MHS-Parkland and Bel Air-Ector games and those from the Palo Duro-Lee and Burgess-Big Spring games will play each other in the semifinals. The losers of each game will advance to the consolation bracket with games getting underway at 10 and 11:30 a.m.

Along with trophies for the top teams, an All-Tournament team of 10 boys will be selected by a vote of the coaches. An MVP player will also be selected for the tournament.

Norm says it's a matter of survival

Ellenberger blames 'SOP'

By SCOTT OSTLER
(c) 1981, Los Angeles Times

"To be successful, one must cheat. Everyone is cheating and I refuse to cheat."
—ROBERT MAYNARD HUTCHINS, then president of the University of Chicago, upon abolishing the school's football program in 1939.

"Not everybody cheats. Everybody would if they had to, but they don't all have to."
—NORM ELLENBERGER, former basketball coach and cheater.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Robert Hutchins, who is dead, and Norm Ellenberger, who is alive and free and working on a world-class sun tan, got together, sort of.

Ellenberger, convicted less than two months ago on 21 felony counts of fraud in connection with college recruiting, came to Santa Barbara to take part in a panel discussion. It dealt with the professionalization of college sports, and was held at a place called The Robert Maynard Hutchins Center for the Study of Democratic Inst8tutions.

This might sound like a dull place for a guy l8ke Ellenberger, who was famous for his sideline flash and dash and disco outfits. B7t it's not nearly as dull as the place a lot of people think he should be right now: prison.

The judge, however, let the former New Mexico State coach off with unsupervised probation, saying he was merely doing what everybody else is doing—cheating to build a winner.

IF ANYONE on the discussion panel anticipated that Ellenberger would be contrite or penitent or even a little low-key, those notions were dispelled when he took the floor like a coach trying to whip his team into a halftime frenzy.

His message was essentially that the system is all screwed up. Major college football and basketball are businesses, designed to entertain and raise money, and should be treated as such. To continue to pretend sports are just another student activity is to force coaches to continue to break rules, like he did.

I think Ellenberger's comments during a lunch break are worth sharing, for a couple of reasons.

One, it was the first time he has talked to the press since hi conviction, and I'm not above a little cheap sensationalism. And, whether or not you agree with his reasoning or his ethics, h3 may provide some insight into the causes of the seemingly widespread cheating in big-time college sports.

"I don't even begin to say that everyone cheats," Ellenberger said. "Some people don't have to. There's very definitely an imb$lance in the power structure, but everyone has to be powerful.

"The (cheating) is existing because we will not be honest, or because we are afraid to come out and define why we have to have a football team. We have to have it because of the money it generates.

"As a result, we have a system built on fallacy, and we legislate it with unreasonable laws. They (the NCAA) have a book that thick of rules that even they don't understand or follow. So what do we do? Add more rules."

ELLENBERGER maintains that the only way a smaller, less-prestigious school like New Mexico State can compete with the bigger schools is by breaking the rules. And to compete is crucial.

"At new Mexico State, the basketball program supports everything," Ellenberger said. "We led the nation in attendance, we provided a unique situation for the state of New Mexico. All of a sudden we're someone. There was an internal pride because we could stand eye to eye with Dallas and Denver and other cities. 'We're somebody. Look at our basketball team.' "

Ellenberger's problem was that they looked too closely. They saw him cheating.

"I get national credit for inventing the system of unscrupulous behavior in athletic programs, but no thanks. It was there when I started, otherwise I wouldn't have been able to learn it."

WILL HIS successor also have to cheat to keep up with the Joneses?

"That's up to him," Ellenberger said. "I chose a path, a direction to go, and it was a very basic extension of me. If you place me back there, I'd do what I had to do to survve. You have to fill those 18,000 seats, or you'll be fired anyway. . . .

"When it all comes out eventually that this is the general system, and is acknowledged and is SOP (standard operating procedure), we'll see that what I say is true."

"I never had a great feeling about violating a rule," he said. "That is not me. But I also needed a job, a paycheck. The system demanded of me that I do that . . . I'll give you an example . . . UCLA can do the recruiting with a handful of dimes that I d8d with $34,000, because there are no basketball players within a thousand miles of my school.

"But we have to operate under the same procedures and laws. That's just one example. There's a whole book full of rules and they keep piling 'em on, and it absolutely, categorically will not work. Pressure to fill arenas will inspire refinement of the rule breaking."

Did he ever reach a point where he said to himself, "Enough. I can't do this anymore"?

"I had made the decision in the months previous (to his arrest)," Ellenberger said, "that this has gone too far, I can't handle it. I was not going to get out, but I was going to change my philosophy, I had just had it. It was too far, too fast, too much.

"IT (the cheating) isn't something initiated from within, it was done to survive. I was going to change my whole program, make some real adjustments in our philosophy. I guess it was too little, too late."

As Ellenberger pointed out repeatedly, some coaches are clean. Sort of.

"Some coaches don't cheat, they have boosters who cheat for them, organizations tht cheat for them. Unfortunately, I wasn't one of those. Many of the glamorous schools fall into that category."

Sitting at the same lunch table with Ellenberger was Denny Crum, the basketball coach at Louisville, and he didn't seem surprised by Ellenberger's words.

"I sympathize with his position," Crum said. ". . . I don't agree that everyone cheats. People are gonna do what they have to do. You work all your life to get a college job, and then you've got two ,ears to produce. The pressure's on you. I've got a 1.-year contract, but most coaches have only two or three years to produce, and you'll do whatever you have to do to produce."

Not everyone will rally 'round Ellenberger, however.

"Some will think it's just sour grapes," Ellenberger said, "that I'm trying to tear everyone down to salve my own wounds and make myself look better . . . I'm not being vindictive. Hopefully, I'm mounting a personal crusade to put these things in perspective so that guys who have jobs now won't have to go through what I did."

POSITIVE SUGGESTIONS? Ellenberger would have colleges admit athletes, who are academically unqualified for major courses of study, but provide those athletes with special programs that would insure them of getting, if not a degree, at least a rudimentary education.

Both New York teams still have a shot at going to the playoffs

By Associated Press

The fourth weekend in November is coming up — and guess what? Both of New York's teams are still in the running for the National Football League playoffs.

The Giants and Jets, perennial losers through the '70s, both are experiencing their best seasons in years and have the chance Sunday to move closer to a playoff position.

The Giants travel to San Francisco for a game with the 49ers while the Jets play host to the Baltimore Colts.

Giants linebacker Brad Van Pelt, for one, feels the attitude in New York. "This is the first time this late in the season that we haven't been out of the playoff picture," he says. "It has made it pretty exciting."

The Giants, 6-6 in the National Conference East, are shooting for a Wild Card berth. They'll face a tough 49er team that is riding high in the NFC West. If the 49ers win Sunday, they will be the first team to clinch a division title this season.

The Jets, having won four straight games, can take sole possession of first place in the American Conference East by sending the hapless Colts down to their 12th consecutive loss. Richard Todd, who played last Sunday against Miami with a fractured rib, has a sprained left ankle to go along with it. He suffered the ankle injury when one of his linemen stepped on it in the second quarter against the Dolphins.

SUNDAY'S OTHER games are Denver at San Diego, Cincinnati at Cleveland, Green Bay at Minnesota, Atlanta at Houston, Washington at Buffalo, Los Angeles at Pittsburgh, Oakland at Seattle, Tampa Bay at New Orleans and St. Louis at New England. On Monday night, Philadelphia visits Miami.

The Broncos are battling to win the AFC West and trying to stave off a charge by the suddenly revived Chargers. Craig Morton, the Denver quarterback ranked No.1 among NFL passers, sat out the Broncos' loss in Cincinnati with a sprained right shoulder and is a questionable starter against San Diego.

The Bengals can kill Cleveland's playoff hopes and retain their two-game AFC Central lead — or widen it. The Vikings are trying to retain their hold on the NFC's Central Division lead. The 5-7 Packers, who have won five games each of the past two seasons, are coming off their worst loss of the year, a 37-3 rout by Tampa Bay.

The Falcons, their faint playoff hopes still alive, begin a three-game road trip in Houston. Buffalo moved within one-half game of first place in the AFC East with a victory last week over New England. The Redskins hope to start a new winning streak after losing last Sunday for the first time in five games.

THE RAMS and Steelers are meeting for the first time since Pittsburgh's 31-19 victory in Super Bowl XIV. Both teams are having off seasons, though, and will probably spend the 1981 playoffs on the sidelines.

Similarly, the Raiders don't appear to have much of a chance to defend the Super Bowl title they won last Jan. 25, but they hope to beat the Seahawks for the fourth straight time.

New Orleans has beaten Tampa Bay two in a row. The Bucs will be trying to stop George Rogers, whose 142 yards in Houston last Sunday gave him 1,279 for the year.

The Patriots are the NFL's most luckless team this year. The last-play loss to Buffalo was the fifth of their 10 defeats that has been by a margin of four points or less.

Joe Paterno: 'This is the easiest game to coach'

By Associated Press

"This is the easiest game to coach, as far as I'm concerned," says Joe Paterno. "You don't have to worry about motivating the kids."

The Penn State coach is talking about the Pitt game, of course. That's coming up Saturday — and, as usual, has some importance attached to it.

"Every year this game has grown bigger and bigger," points out Pitt Coach Jackie Sherrill. "The intensity has really increased."

As so often has happened in the past, the Pitt-Penn State game has national implications. It marks the third time since 1976 that one or the other enters the contest with the No.1 ranking. This time, Pitt is top-ranked with a 10-0 record and shooting for another national championship, while Penn State is No.11 at 8-2.

Penn State leads one of college football's most bitter rivalries 39-38-3.

"The win over Notre Dame puts us in a more positive frame of mind," said Penn State guard Sean Farrell of last week's victory over the Irish. "We also have the added challenge of going against the No.1 team."

Pitt has been invited to play in the Sugar Bowl against third-ranked Georgia on New Year's Day, while Penn State will play in the Fiesta Bowl the same day against Southern Cal.

Alabama, the nation's fourth-ranked team, will play Auburn in another of the country's traditional rivalries Saturday. Alabama's Bear Bryant is shooting for his 315th career victory, which would put him all alone at the top of the college football list.

"I haven't mentioned the record to them," said Bryant of his team, "and I won't. I hope they'll try to win the game for themselves."

The Crimson Tide, which will play in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day against Texas, is heavily favored in this game over their intra-state opponent.

Other games Saturday include Lamar at No.17 Southern Mississippi; Arizona at No.18 Arizona State; Florida State vs. Florida; Boston College against Holy Cross; Oklahoma vs. Oklahoma State; Houston vs. Rice; Tennessee against Vanderbilt and LSU vs. Tulane.

In a game today, Notre Dame took on Miami of Florida.

In action Thursday, quarterback Robert Brewer guided seventh-ranked Texas on an 80-yard scoring drive to rally the Longhorns past Texas A&M 21-13. Brewer capped the drive himself with a one-yard sneak.

HOW TO EARN UP TO $2,000 INTEREST AT THE DROP OF A HAT.

★ Introducing a financial first. From First Savings & Loan Association of Midland. The All Saver's Certificate, a fully insured savings plan that earns up to $1,000 tax-free interest on individual returns or $2,000 tax-free interest if you file a joint return.

★ Now for the first time, Uncle Sam will not only fully insure your savings plan, he'll give you a tax break on it as well. Here's how it works: to equal an assumed tax-exempt yield of 12½%, a taxable investment would have to earn 17.86% if your family income is $25,000 and your tax bracket is 30%.

IF YOUR FAMILY INCOME IS	YOUR TAX BRACKET PROBABLY IS	THE INTEREST RATE YOU'D HAVE TO RECEIVE TO NET 12.5% AFTER FEDERAL INCOME TAX IS
$50,000	50%	25%
$35,000	40%	20.83%
$25,000	30%	17.86%
$20,000	25%	16.67%

Figures above are approximate and based on 1981 tax tables. Interest rate on 12.5% is an assumed average investment yield on the All Saver's Certificate. Actual rate is 70% of the average investment yield on one-year treasury bills at date of purchase.

★ You can see why the All Saver's Certificate is a savings break-through. But you may not see it for long. The program begins October 1, 1981 and ends December 31, 1982. So hurry to First Savings and Loan Association of Midland and purchase your All Saver's Certificates.

★ The All Saver's Certificate is a limited offer with valuable results.

'Dream House' built around stars

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Remember when Mr. Blandings built his dream house in the country? These are modern times, so Charley Cross builds his in the black ghetto.

Charley's building the house for Laura Griffith, and that makes her as happy as a case of hives. Laura, you see, is a bew-row-crat, and Charlie is never one to follow the rules.

"Dream House," which stars John Schneider of CBS' "Dukes of Hazzard" and Marilu Henner of ABC's "Taxi," will be broadcast Saturday night on CBS.

Schneider plays a Georgia contractor who stakes out a homestead in a black neighborhood of New York City. Miss Henner is an urban renewal director who has a fling with Schneider on vacation and is annoyed when he shows up in New York and wants to make it permanent.

"Dream House" was filmed in New York City, near Greenwich Village, where the crew took steps to avoid the resistance Charley Cross finds in building his house.

"A week before we started filming, some of the crew got acquainted with the neighborhood and put the toughest guys on the payroll as guardians," says Miss Henner. "We also used a lot of people from the neighborhood as extras. We really didn't have any problems, but we still had police escorts."

"Dream House" is a nifty little comedy about a young man's high spirits, enthusiasm and determination, and how he overcomes bureaucratic intransigence, neighborhood hostility and the resistance of a most reluctant maiden.

In other words, it's a fairy tale. But a most pleasant fairy tale. Schneider has an ingratiating charm and displays a talent that never shines through on "Dukes," and Miss Henner has an appeal that cuts across the abrasiveness of her character.

It was written by Mike Lloyd Ross, from a story by Philip Mandelker, and was directed by Joe Hardy.

"Phil Mandelker had discovered John Schneider and had the script written with him in mind," Miss Henner says. "My part wasn't written for me, but as it went through rewrites, it was shaped more for me.

"I think the character was too abrasive in the original script. She has just been liberated from an oppressive marriage and she puts on blinders.

"She goes too far the other way," the actress says. "She was afraid if she fell in love again she would be squashed again. Her first husband had wiped her out."

She said she had the role altered to give Laura more of a sense of humor.

IN AMERICA CAN A MAN BE GUILTY UNTIL PROVEN INNOCENT ?
Suppose you picked up this morning's newspaper and your life was a front page headline...
And everything they said was accurate...
But none of it was true.
The D.A., the Feds, and the Police set her up to write the story that explodes his world.
Now he's going to write the book on getting even.

PG PARENTAL GUIDANCE SUGGESTED

I looked up and there was Jim watching me through the store window.

Looking at tomorrow through the snow.

I always liked Jim Davis. Everyone did. He was a happy-go-lucky guy. His favorite saying was, "Live today, tomorrow never comes."

He lived next door and we worked in the same office. So I know I lived as well as he did for the most part. But Jim always managed to spend that "little extra" he should've been saving.

I remember the morning he roared into the driveway with a brand-new sports car.

"Hey, Jack, grab a look at this set of wheels," he shouted as soon as he could crawl out of the cockpit.

I was impressed. The car was a beautiful racing machine. But not very practical for driving through the city.

He was bubbling over with excitement. "Cost me an arm and a leg, but it's got everything. What do you think? This thing'll go 150."

I had to ask it, "Where are you going to drive at 150 around here, Jim?"

He looked as though the thought had never occurred to him.

The thing cost a fortune to keep tuned up, but that didn't change his thinking at all. I had tried many times to get him to join the Payroll Savings Plan at work and buy some U.S. Savings Bonds for the future. He agreed it might be a good idea, but he never quite got around to it.

A few days ago, I was buying some tropical clothes. I looked up and there was Jim watching me through the store window. He came in laughing. "Summer clothes? You're rushing the season, buddy; there's a big blizzard outside."

I picked up a plantation straw, tilted it over one eye and said, "Just getting some new duds for the land of sunshine. I finally decided to buy that condominium in Hawaii. Great deal. We use it for our winter vacations and rent it out the rest of the year."

"How did you ever save enough for the down payment? I couldn't come up with that. We make the same salary. Your house is like mine. Our lifestyle isn't that much different."

I gave the clerk the money as I said, "Right. I don't miss that 'little extra' I've been putting away for Savings Bonds, and you wouldn't either. But THAT is what makes the difference. That little extra. It adds up."

We left this morning for our Hawaiian vacation. We said our goodbyes to Jim and his wife. It was still snowing as we pulled out of the driveway. And Jim looked like a man that was doing a lot of thinking as he leaned on his snow shovel and waved goodbye. Like a man who might be seeing tomorrow and considering something like U.S. Savings Bonds at last.

I looked back over my shoulder. "Well, better late than never," I said.

The time to start saving for tomorrow is today. U.S. Savings Bonds make it easy. You'll be helping yourself and your country.

Take stock in America.

'Ragtime' offers astute look at life in America

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — From Michael Curtiz ("Yankee Doodle Dandy") to William Wyler ("The Best Years of Our Lives"), foreign-born filmmakers have proven astute observers of the American scene. The latest to take an outsider's look at the United States is Czech-born Milos Forman.

Already successful with "One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest" and "Hair," Forman delves into early 20th century America with "Ragtime," Paramount's big release for December. Forman came here for a brief visit recently, and he talked about the film over a cigar and beer at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel, suffering slightly from jet lag.

FORMAN IS a dynamic 49, with an actor's good looks and an almost accentless command of English after a dozen years in this country. After making a reputation in Czech movies, he was filming "Taking Off" in New York when Russian tanks invaded his homeland. Now an American citizen, Forman returned to Czechoslovakia, where his twin sons live with his former wife, only two years ago.

"After Dino DiLaurentiis sent me the book 'Ragtime,'" the director related, "there was no question in my mind but that it would make a marvelous movie. I had heard that Robert Altman had been preparing a film. I like and respect Altman as a director, and I asked my agent to call him and make sure he had no plans to continue. Altman said there was no way that he would stay with 'Ragtime.'

"Next, I read the script by Ed Doctorow (the novel's author). It was a thousand pages and would have been suitable for 10 one-hour television films. I met with Ed and we came to an agreement for me to do my own version. With his blessing, I worked on an outline, and Michael Weller, who had written 'Hair,' wrote the first version. Then for four months we worked together on the final script.

"'Ragtime' was not an easy novel to adapt, because there is practically nodialogue in the book. That's a nice literary style, but it doesn't help the filmmakers. Michael did a fine job of putting the story into dialogue, capturing the sound of the period."

THE BIG NEWS of "Ragtime" is the return of James Cagney after a 20-year absence from the screen. Forman related how it came about:

"It was a lucky coincidence. Jimmy has a farm in upstate New York, and I have a house across the border in Connecticut. We became friends and had dinner together. As I was beginning to prepare 'Ragtime,' he was recovering from a stroke and his doctors advised that the best thing for him would be to return to work.

"I gave him a copy of the script and told him to choose whatever part he wanted. If he had chosen Evelyn Nesbitt, that would have been OK with me. The role he chose was the police commissioner. He said, 'Why not play a good guy for a change?'"

Through Cagney, Forman met Pat O'Brien, who was also cast in the film, along with his wife, Eloise. The cast includes Mary Steenburgen, Brad Dourif, James Olson, Donald O'Connor, Moses Gunn, Howard E. Rollins and Norman Mailer as Harry K. Thaw.

FORMAN TALKED about working with Cagney:

"He is a very, very humble man, never complaining, never playing the star game. On the set, he looked like he was about to fall asleep. But as soon as I said, 'Action!' the eyes lit up, the voice was there, he was the real Cagney. When I said 'Cut!' he went back to sleep.

"His assistant mentioned that James was not feeling well because of sciatica, but you'd never know it. There was never a word of complaint. Everything he does has a slightish shade of irony, wisdom and fun, and his timing is impeccable . He's a lazy devil who has absolutely no energy for anything he's not interested in."

Actress Loni Anderson relaxes in her dressing room between take of the ABC television production "Sizzle." Miss Anderson stars as a corn-fed, bright-eyed Nebraska girl who loses her innocence among Chicago's Prohibition-era bootleggers. On the wall is a composite drawing showing Miss Anderson in the lead of "The Jayne Mansfield Story," which aired earlier this year.

Loni Anderson sparkles in simmering 'Sizzle'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Loni Anderson in "Sizzle" is a corn-fed, bright-eyed girl from Nebraska who quickly loses her innocence among Chicago's bootleggers and emerges as a speakeasy songstress in the style of Texas Guinan.

"Sizzle," which ABC will broadcast Sunday night, is a gangster movie right out of the 1930s: tough-talking hoods, blazing machine guns, flappers, jazz, speakeasies and Prohibition booze. And it was produced with a lot of style and pizzaz.

Miss Anderson stars as Julie Davis, who overcomes several setbacks to become a speakeasy entertainer in the style of Texas Guinan, the night-club star of the 1920s whose catchphrase was "Hello, sucker!"

"I really based Julie on my grandmother," Miss Anderson said during a rehearsal break from her starring role as Jennifer in CBS' "WKRP in Cincinnati."

In an upcoming episode of "WKRP," Pat O'Brien plays "The Colonel," one of her new boyfriends. "Jennifer dates only rich men," Miss Anderson said. "Pat and I had worked together on stage, and when the part came up I asked for him."

She turned her attention back to "Sizzle."

"During Prohibition, my grandmother was a school teacher by day and at night she ran an illegal dance hall in St. Paul, Minn. She was a widow and needed the money. They sold Prohibition booze and bought off the police.

"She's the kind of character I play," the actress said, "a sweet girl who had to deal with the times."

She said her grandmother, Hazel Kallin, is now 83, and still lives in St. Paul.

"If someone robbed the dance hall she'd jump in her car and take off after them," said Miss Anderson. "It's hard to imagine now, because she's my sweet grandmother. "She's a woman I've admired since I was a little girl. She has drive and stamina and guts."

"Sizzle" also stars John Forsythe as the mobster boss, Leslie Uggams as the chorus girl, Roy Thinnes as the G-man, Richard Lynch as the enforcer and Michael Goodwin as Julie's boyfriend.

Miss Anderson said producer Aaron Spelling had had the script for some time, but had never been able to get the right star for the story, at the right time.

"Aaron saw me in a 'Love Boat' in which I played a double role," she said. "Actually, I was the same person pretending to be two people. I was the movie star who was tough and hardened and I was her secretary who was gentle and sweet.

"Those were the qualities Aaron was looking for," the actress said, "someone who could go from being sweet to being hard."

She said she saw her character changing in three different stages. "First she's sweet and naive. Then she becomes angry, and she ends up calculating and in control. She becomes a kind of female equivalent to Al Capone.

"I took the role because the role because it's so different from Loni and Jennifer," Miss Anderson said. "I don't have my regular hairdo or my regular makeup. I don't want people to just think of me in one way. And I made my film singing debut. I've sung on stage, but never on film before."

Miss Anderson said she picked "More Than You Know" to express Julie's first phase of sweetness, "After You're Gone" when she becomse a flapper star, and a medley of "Love Me or Leave Me" and "Am I Blue" when she becomes the vamp.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE OF INTENTION OF THE CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS, TO INVITE BIDS FOR THE SALE OF A PORTION OF LOT 2, BLOCK 8, CITY OF MIDLAND INDUSTRIAL PARK REGIONAL AIR TERMINAL, UNIT 7, CONSISTING OF APPROXIMATELY 3.003 ACRES.
Pursuant to Article 5421c-12, V.A.T.S., sealed bids, addressed to the Mayor and the City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for the sale of a portion of Lot 2, Block 8, City of Midland Industrial Park Regional Air Terminal, Unit 7, consisting of approximately 3.003 acres, more fully described hereinafter, will be received by the City Secretary in his office, Room 204 in the City Hall, 300 North Loraine Street, or mailed to P.O. Box 1152, Midland, Texas, 79702, until 2:00 p.m., on the 14th day of December, 1981, and then publicly opened and read aloud in the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, at that time. Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Lot 2, Block 8, Industrial Park Regional Air Terminal, Unit 7".
Beginning at the northwest corner of Lot 2, Block 8, Industrial Park Regional Air Terminal, Unit 7, City of Midland, Texas, for the northwest corner of this tract;
Thence, N 48 degree 03'30" E a distance of 340.00' to a point for the northeast corner of this tract;
Thence, S 49 degree 56'30" E a distance of 432.25';
Thence, southwest around a curve to the left, along the north R—O—W of Sloan Field Blvd., said curve having a delta angle of 13 degree 30'25", a radius of 875.00', an arc length of 206.27', a chord length of 205.80', and a tangent length of 103.62'; Thence, S 40 degree 03'30" W a distance of 108.46 to a point;
Thence, northwest around a curve to the left, said curve having a delta angle of 9 degree 35'44", a radius of 2382.83', an arc length of 399.06', a chord length of 398.60 and a tangent length of 200.00'; Thence, N 39 degree 32'14" W a distance of 11.01' to the point of beginning.
A certified check or bank money order issued by a bank satisfactory to the City, in the amount of $25,000 payable without recourse to the City of Midland, must accompany the bidder's proposal as a guaranty that the bidder will accept a conveyance to said land from the City and pay the balance of the amount bid. If he is successful. Bids without the required check or money order will not be considered. All other checks will be promptly returned after the bid is awarded. No bid in an amount less than $327,027 (Three Hundred Twenty Seven Thousand, Twenty-Seven Dollars), will be considered.
Take notice that prior to issuance of a building permit, the successful bidder will be required to furnish the City's Inspection Division with a copy of an FAA Determination of No Hazard to Air Navigation (on FAA form 7460-1, or any subsequent replacement form, available in the City's Inspection Office), as described in a letter from the Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration, to Mr. Wilson H. Banks, Aviation Director, dated January 13, 1981, and on file for informational purposes in the office of the City Secretary in the City Hall.
The City of Midland will issue a Special Warranty Deed and the bidder must satisfy himself as to title and acquire all desired abstracts and other title information or insurance solely at his own expense, and all other costs of sale, if any, must be borne solely by the successful bidder.
The proposed sale and Special Warranty Deed will be subject to the following conditions and covenants which shall be made a part of the deed, to wit:
PROVIDED, HOWEVER, that all the oil, gas and other minerals in and under said land are hereby expressly excepted from this conveyance, and it is also subject to any existing easements of record and/or on the ground for pipelines, utilities or other purposes, including drilling rights.
Grantor further reserves for the public and itself, its successors and assigns, a right of flight for the passage of aircraft in the airspace above the surface of said land together with the right to cause in said airspace such noise as may be inherent in the operation of aircraft now known or hereafter used for navigation of or flight in the air using said airspace and landing at, taking off from, or operation on the Midland Airpark.
The Grantor herein reserves, and it is expressly agreed that is should have, for itself and its assigns, the first option of purchase on the above described tract on the occasion that the successful bidder shall opt to sell said property to any bona fide purchaser for value, and that this reservation shall be effective for twenty-one (21) years from date of this instrument.
The City reserves the right to accept or reject any or all bids, to waive technicalities, to negotiate with any of the bidders, and to make any investigation deemed necessary as to a bidder's financial status.
CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS
J.W. McCullough
City Secretary

Buy The Boss' House!
"Imposing" 2-Story
$86,450 — $8,000 Cash
The "Boss" bought the carbon copy because he wanted big rooms, a "captivating" exterior with loads of "street-appeal" and all on a budget-conscious price. This one has all that and one more bonus — an even more impressive exterior sitting proudly on a "High-Elevation" with a view of downtown Midland. There's only one. Haste is recommended. GAS. CLEAN ENERGY FOR TODAY AND TOMORROW
DRIVEN BY ENERGY HOME

*The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 12.5% for 90% loan to value. Interest will be charged at the most recent six month Treasury Bill rate plus 1.5% rounded to the highest 1/4% or 1%, but not to exceed the maximum rate allowed by law. Payments on GPAM mortgages are graduated so as to increase 7.50% each year for the remaining four years. At the end of the first five year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 3.5. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan.
ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 13.25% ON 90% LOANS.

*Variable Rate Mortage Interest rates may increase or decrease. Payments may change in 5 years.
